Deadline approaching for 67th Legislature

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Like procrastinating students with a term paper deadline, the 67th Legislature worked frantically today to finish major tasks before the clock stops the regular session at midnight.

Important bills were stuck in House-Senate conference committees as the result of the two chambers' failure to agree on them during the first 139 days of the 140-day session.

A special session was widely predicted because of the possibility of deadlocks on such legislation as congressional redistricting and regulation of doctors.

One essential task appeared likely to be completed with little difficulty: passage of the $26.6 billion general appropriation bill to finance public schools, highways, state universities, welfare, parks, mental health programs, prisons, regulation of business and other state services for 1982-83.

When lawmakers gathered this morning for their last day of legislating, these high-priority bills remained in conference:

— Redrawing districts for electing Texas congressmen, including the three new ones received as a result of population gains shown by the 1980 census. Failure to pass a bill would certainly cause a special session.

— A guaranteed method for financing the construction, equipment and library needs of state colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems. Gov. Bill Clements says a special session might result from failure to act.

— Continuation of state regulation of doctors. Speaker Bill Clayton feels strongly enough about how it should be done that he broke legislative precedent Sunday and appointed himself as one of the five House conferees. He was responsible for a provision in the House bill ending the long-standing prohibition against the administration of drugs by optometrists.

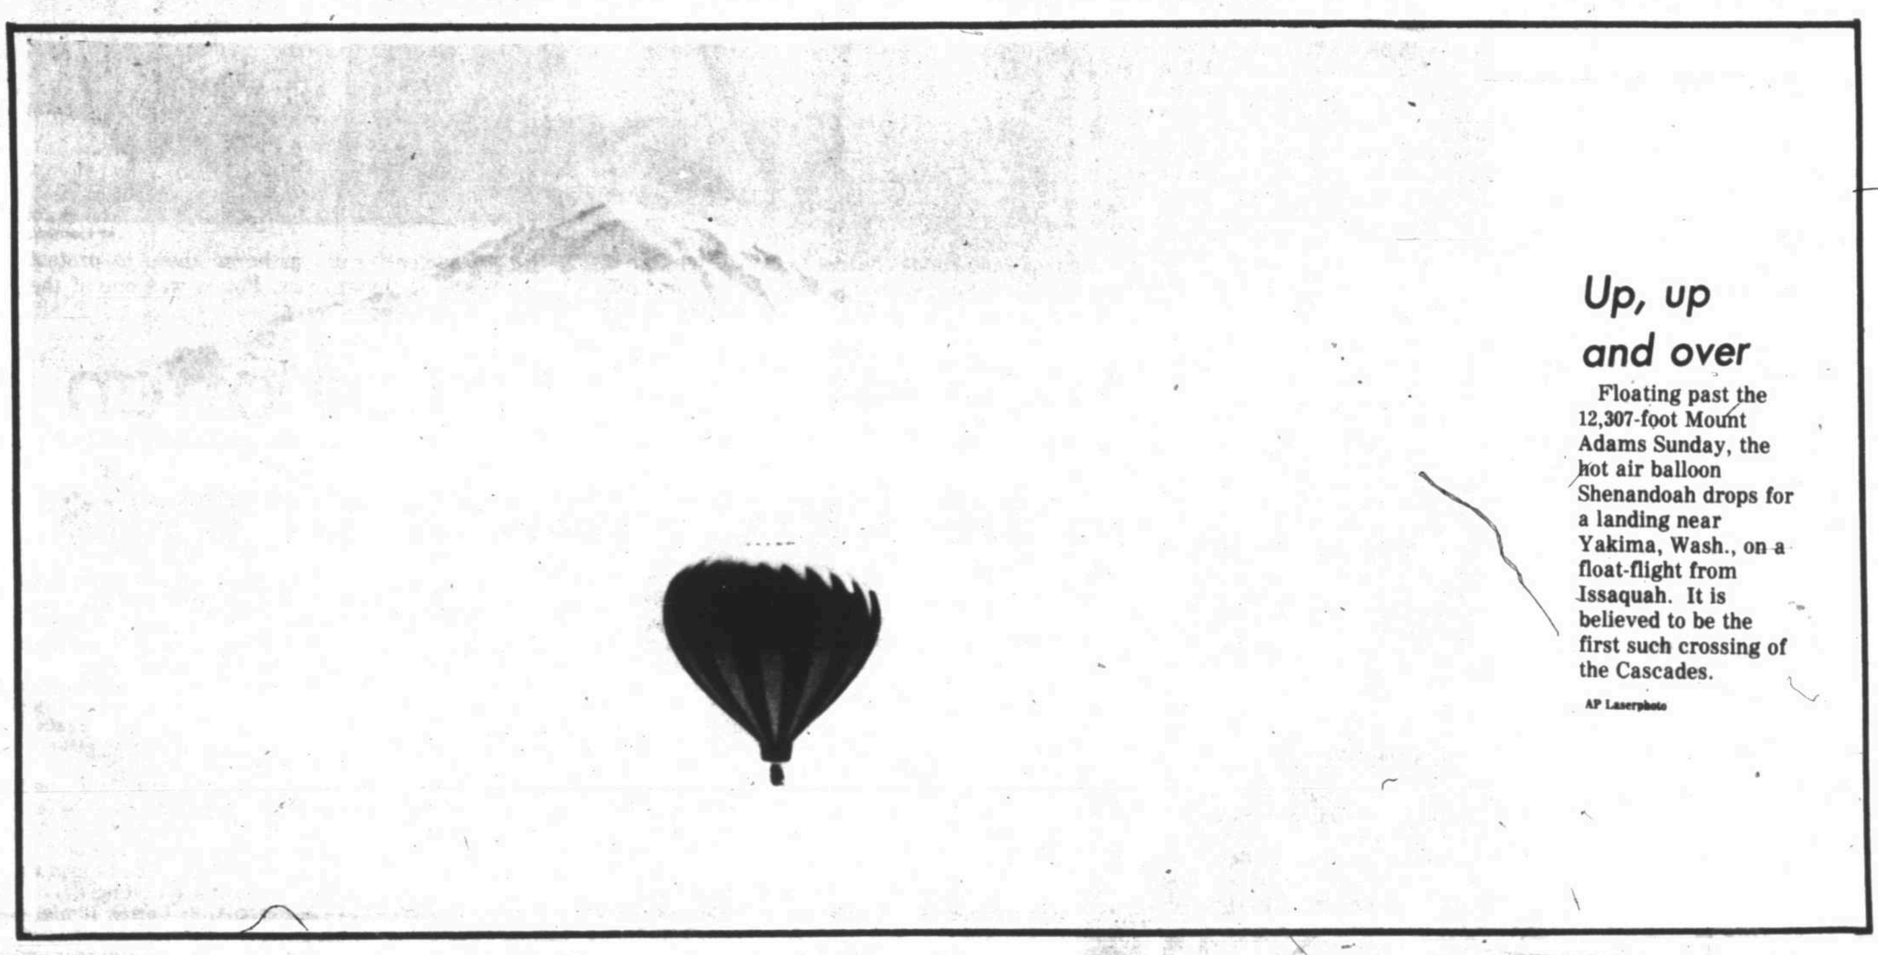

— Expanding bilingual education, which now stops at the third grade, to all elementary grades, with additional programs through high school for students who need help learning English.

— Eliminating various problems in the 1979 Property Tax Code, which takes full effect next year.

Both chambers of the Legislature worked Sunday, passing bills by the dozens.

Results of some of the session's work over the weekend will show up in the lives of ordinary Texans, if Clements signs all the bills that were passed.

Probably the most dramatic change for some will be the requirement that all motorists buy auto liability insurance that would pay up to $20,000 in hospital bills and $5,000 for repairs. About a fourth of all Texas drivers are uninsured.

Up, up and over

Floating past the 12,307-foot Mount Adams Sunday, the hot air balloon Shenandoah drops for a landing near Yakima, Wash., on a float-flight from Issaquah. It is believed to be the first such crossing of the Cascades.

Anti-scalping bill passes Legislature

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Ticket scalpers will be looking over their shoulders for the police if Gov. Bill Clements signs a bill passed by the Texas Legislature on Sunday.

Although some representatives said it was anti-free enterprise, House members sent the measure to Clements desk by accepting Senate changes.

The Senate revisions, in fact, were major ones, broadening the bill to cover not only tickets to high school and college athletic events but also professional sports and entertainment.

A person who sells high school or college sports tickets for more than the face value could get up to six months in jail and a $1,000 fine.

Scalping tickets to professional sports and entertainments events could draw the scalper a fine of $50 to $200 on first offense and up to six months in jail and $1,000 fine if convicted a second time.

Rep. Bill Blythe, D-Houston, said owners of the Houston Oilers, Rockets and Astros, the Astrodome, the Dallas Cowboys and the Texas Rangers all endorsed the bill.

When scalpers corner the market "only the rich can afford tickets," Blythe said.

Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, sponsor of the bill, called scalping a "very lowly profession."

He said scalpers bought blocks of tickets to a Dolly Parton performance at the Houston Rodeo and Fat Stock Show and sold them for $20 apiece, three times their face value.

"That's the kind of abuse we are trying to correct," Bryant said.

Rep. David London, D-Bonham, who has acknowledged selling Super Bowl tickets to a man who offered $175 apiece in a newspaper advertisement, said the bill was "against free enterprise."

"Nobody is forced to buy a ticket," London said.

He said performers at concerts often receive blocks of 100 tickets to sell at inflated prices in lieu of "up-front money."

"If you vote to accept this bill, you will be voting against Willie Nelson. How can you do that?" London said.

Congress told it must honor spending cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — While the administration sought to settle terms for a tax cut, President Reagan's budget chief said today that Congress will be guilty of "deliberate sabotage" if it doesn't stand by the federal spending cuts already approved in the House and Senate.

The tax and spending phases of Reagan's economic program both were at issue, at the White House and the Capitol.

A tax cut bill is likely this year even if Congress and the president cannot agree on a compromise. Congress would simply write one a step at a time and leave it to Reagan to accept or veto it.

The White House and the Democrats who have so far spurned an administration-endorsed compromise all say they want to reach a consensus before the tax-writing committees get down to business.

Another round of meetings between administration and congressional leaders is planned this week, starting with a White House session today involving Reagan and Democratic congressional leaders.

The committees that deal with federal spending ceilings were getting to work on detailed budget decisions. David A. Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, said they are obligated to stand by the cuts of more than $35 billion that already have been endorsed by Congress.

He said at a news conference that any deviation from those cuts "must be considered a deliberate sabotage of the expressed will of Congress and the people."

Stockman said budget policy already has been settled, and Congress should simply implement it, not try to change that policy.

The budget resolution instructed the committees that handle detailed legislation to meet specific quotas for spending cuts, and to do so by June 12. The product is to be a reconciliation resolution, tailoring specific programs to the guidelines set last month.

"Our approach will be one of flexibility on the details but insistence on honest scorekeeping and the bottom line," Stockman said.

But he said the administration will be wary of major changes in the allocation of funds, even within the guidelines, because there are few areas left where an increase in one program can be offset by cuts in others.

"There will be a great temptation to indulge in creative accounting and dishonest scorekeeping," Stockman said. "... This covers every sensitive program politically that you can possibly imagine."

He also said that in the Democrat-controlled House, the budget resolution that is supposed to be ready for action by mid-June should be handled under rules that would forbid amendments on the floor. That would bar attempts to add funds on the floor for politically popular programs.

Stockman said the budget should be handled as a package, not in a succession of House roll calls on separate spending items. "Our hope would be that the committees of both houses would adhere to the program instructions as closely as possible," he said.

On the issue of a tax cut compromise, Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan indicated Sunday that the president is not likely to be in much of a giving mood in his talks with House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr. and others in the Democratic leadership.

"What the president wants to finally do with the Democratic leaders is to say, 'Come on fellows, time's a wasting. Are you going to go with me or do I have to find some other route?'" Regan said on the ABC television program "Issues and Answers."

One White House official, who asked not to be identified by name, has said he views today's meeting as a "final check" with the opposition party before the administration goes ahead with a compromise already largely worked out with conservative Democrats in the House.

Bangladesh rebellion reported over

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — The government announced today it crushed the 48-hour rebellion by army officers who assassinated President Ziaur Rahman Saturday and took over the garrison city of Chittagong.

The chiefs of the army, navy and air force went on radio and television to announce the attempted coup was over at Chittagong, the nation's second-largest city, and thank troops who remained loyal to the government.

Radio Dacca said it had regained control of its station in Chittagong and reported life there was returning to normal.

Indian news agencies reported there had been hard fighting, with at least 50 people killed. Dacca Radio said warplanes backed the loyal government troops as they moved against the mutineers.

Reports from unofficial sources and two Indian news agencies that could not be verified said the leader of the coup, Chinese-trained Maj. Gen. Abul Manzur, had been captured near the Burmese border. But Radio Dacca continued to broadcast an offer for the equivalent of a $30,300 reward for Manzur's capture.

There were also unconfirmed reports the president had been struck down in a hail of bullets when the rebels launched the coup attempt and that his body and those of two military aides were found in a shallow grave 25 miles from the city. Other announcements said only his body had been found and was being flown here to lie in state at Parliament House.

Manzur, the commander of the Bangladesh army's 24th Division in Chittagong, had repeated radio appeals to other divisions to join the coup during the 48-hour uprising. But the rebellion appeared to be confined to the port city of 1 million people, 140 miles southeast of Dacca, the capital. Rear Adm. Mahmood Ali Khan, commander at the Bangladesh naval headquarters at Chittagong, had said his forces remained loyal and in control.

Vice President Abdus Sattar became acting president. He and the army chief of staff, Lt. Gen. H.M. Arshad, had given the rebels three surrender deadlines Sunday and Monday. They said the third one, at 6 a.m. (7 p.m. EDT), was the final one, and the United News of India reported two columns of troops loyal to the government advanced on Chittagong.

President Ziaur, or Zia as he was called in Bangladesh, was the army deputy chief of staff when President Mujibur Rahman, the founder of Bangladesh, was assassinated with his wife and three sons by a group of pro-Pakistani army officers on Aug. 15, 1975.

Sources with the ruling Bangladesh Nationalist Party said it was decided at an emergency meeting that elections would be held within six months and in the interim, the policies of Zia would be continued.

Texan, 'dillos go arm-in-arm

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Jim Franklin acts like an armadillo. He sleeps during the day, does some of his best work at night, abhors violence, does as he pleases when he can and generally gives little thought to the consequences of his actions.

It's not surprising, then, that Franklin's life appears hopelessly intertwined with that of the armor-coated fellow Texas native. Franklin's artwork — armadillo T-shirts, armadillo beer labels, armadillo paintings — have captured the public fancy in Texas.

Because of his efforts, the armadillo's status across the nation is that of a chic Texas symbol rivaling the longhorn and the bluebonnet.

Some of the 37-year-old hippie artist's more famous works have included posters of longneck beer bottles festooned with armadillos. He used to work for Lone Star Beer in San Antonio but has switched to Budweiser.

"Lone Star tortures armadillos with the armadillo races it sponsors," contends Franklin. He adds that the beer company's current advertising campaign, which features a giant, invisible armadillo that trashes beer trucks and sucks them dry, is designed "to make people hate armadillos."

The Lone Star Brewing Co. won't comment on Franklin's allegations.

Franklin was once a contender for selection by the rather conservative Texas Legislature as the state artist. That was no small feat, considering he is best known in some quarters for his drawing of a giant armadillo making amorous advances upon the state capitol dome.

After 15 years of living a nonmaterialistic life, Franklins says he's ready to cash in on the armadillo craze, and his hand in creating and illustrating it.

"I want to see if there's some money in this," he said. "I haven't scratched the surface on the armadillo as a design element." Franklin says he's retained a lawyer to handle his royalty contracts and a lobbyist to tout his talents.

"The armadillo is a very Texan thing," said Franklin as he worked to erect an exhibition of his art in the state capitol dome in Austin. "It's the only new image to come out of the state in the last 50 years. It's the antithesis of the big, braggard Texan."

In the marketplace, the armor-shelled, silly-looking armadillo, who has survived virtually intact the past two million or so years, is big business.

There are armadillo clothes, stuffed armadillo toys, armadillo games, armadillo figurines, armadillo hats, armadillo blankets and even dominoes adorned with small cameos depicting armadillos.

Franklin's lobbyist, Sheila Cheaney, has been pushing Franklin's candidacy for state artist. Because of her efforts, the Texas House adopted a resolution April 30 commending him for his "singularly acute perception of the world."

Balance of powers an issue in challenge of jurisdiction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Conservatives in Congress are pushing to strip federal judges of jurisdiction over such issues as abortion, school busing and school prayer in a classic confrontation that some warn could cause a serious erosion in the balance of power among the three branches of government.

"It is a radical assault on the independence of the federal courts and a back door attack on the Bill of Rights," said John Shattuck, head of the Washington office of the American Civil Liberties Union.

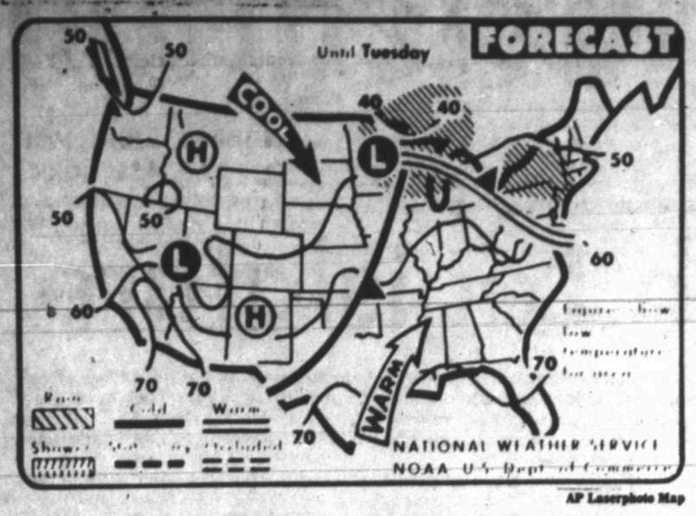

Groups as diverse as the ACLU, the Baptist Joint Committee on Public Affairs, Common Cause and the Leadership Conference on Civil Rights have been aroused to jointly oppose a dozen congressional proposals that would limit or eliminate the role of the federal courts on various issues.

Senate conservatives like Jesse Helms, R-N.C., and Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, argue that federal judges and the Supreme Court have gone far beyond the wishes of most Americans in their constitutional interpretations of social issues.

So, in addition to direct legislative attacks on questions like abortion, conservatives hope to remove federal judges from any role in handling cases on those subjects.

On some issues like abortion, a direct appeal from state courts to the U.S. Supreme Court would be permitted. In others, the federal judiciary would be eliminated completely.

Sugar prices take tumble

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Sugar prices dropped sharply again last month, cutting grocery bills by the biggest amount in more than six years, an Associated Press market-basket survey shows.

The AP survey covers 14 food and non-food items, selected at random. Prices were checked March 1, 1973 at one supermarket in each of 13 cities and have been rechecked on or about the start of succeeding months.

The latest survey showed the marketbasket bill declined at the checklist store in 10 cities during May, down an average 4.2 percent. The bill increased at the checklist store in three cities, up an average 2.2 percent. Overall, the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores was down 2.7 percent last month.

The drop was the largest since a 2.9 percent decrease in April 1975 and was the fourth monthly decline this year. When today's prices were compared with those at the start of 1981, the AP found the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores decreased an average 6.4 percent during the five months.

The good news was tempered somewhat, however, by the fact that more than half the decline was due to a drop in the price of sugar. When sugar was not counted in the totals, the average decrease in the marketbasket bill at the checklist stores last month was only 1.3 percent. The average decrease since the start of the year was only 2.4 percent.

Sugar prices soared last year because of expectations that worldwide demand would exceed production. The demand went down as sugar got more and more expensive, and prices started dropping early this year. In February, the price of sugar went down at the checklist store in nine of the cities surveyed by the AP; in March, it dropped in 11 cities; in April, it decreased in nine cities; and in May, it went down in 12 cities. By the beginning of this month, a five-pound sack of sugar cost less than $2 at the checklist store in all but four of the cities on the AP list.

Meat prices went down in some cities and up in others last month, with no clear pattern. The AP found, for example, that the price of a pound of chopped chuck increased at the checklist store in four cities last month, decreased in six cities and was unchanged in three. Center-cut pork chops went up in six cities, down in six cities and were unchanged in one city.

Red-meat production during the first quarter of this year was 3 percent larger than in the same period last year, but the picture is due to change.

Cattlemen, faced with declining beef consumption by the U.S. public, higher prices for feed and dry pastureland have been losing money, and have been forced to reduce the size of their herds. The extra animals coming to market have helped keep prices down for much of this year, but supplies are expected to decline — and prices to increase — in coming months.

Pork producers — many of whom have been operating at a loss since mid-1979 because of low pork prices — also are cutting back on the number of animals they raise. And total red-meat production for the second quarter of 1981 is expected to be 4 percent smaller than in the same period of 1980.

Shoppers looking for an alternative, inexpensive source of protein may want to check the price of eggs. The AP found the price dropped last month at the checklist store in 10 of the cities surveyed.

The cities checked were: Albuquerque, N.M., Atlanta, Boston, Chicago, Dallas, Detroit, Los Angeles, Miami, New York, Philadelphia, Providence, R.I., Salt Lake City and Seattle.

Lefever says choice often is between lesser of evils

WASHINGTON (AP) — The disagreement between Ernest W. Lefever and his critics is not over whether torture and less severe violations of human rights are wrong but over what to do about them.

"Torture everywhere is equally reprehensible," Lefever says. "What we do about it is determined by circumstances in part. In general I prefer, for pragmatic and result-oriented reasons, to come down hard and twist the arms of our offending allies in private because I think it will be more effective than doing it in public."

At confirmation hearings on his nomintion to be the State Department's human rights chief, Lefever said he would prefer such a private approach to dealing with South Korea's jailing of political opponents, Argentina's past tendency to have thousands of people simply disappear, Chile's holding of political prisoners and killings in El Salvador and Guatemala.

But most Democrats and several Republicans on the Senate Foreign Relations Committee expressed doubt to Lefever that his "quiet diplomacy" would be sufficient.

"It takes an advocate fighting, not just in quiet diplomacy but in a way that is likely to win the battle," said Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., the committee's chairman. "And these battles on human rights are not won by just having kid gloves on all the time."

Lefever's nomination faces more committee questioning Thursday. Democrats on the panel want to know more about $25,000 in Nestle Corp. contributions to Lefever's Ethics and Public Policy Center and whether they were connected to the center's distribution of an article favorable to Nestle.

A member of the committee, Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., said Sunday that support for Lefever's nomination is fading, even among Republicans. "I have spoken to no one in this admninistration who is strongly supporting this nominee," he said. "Clearly, there has been deterioration of his position."

Tsongas, appearing on NBC's "Meet the Press," said Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. "is not beating down the halls and the doors of members of the Senate to support Dr. Lefever."

He said he also objected to Lefever's policy of using quiet diplomacy in dealing with allies accused of human rights violations. "Torture is torture is torture andd that's the point we're trying to make," Tsongas said. "I think the Soviets would be delighted to have human rights denegrated as an American policy."

The conflict between Lefever's quiet diplomacy and former President Carter's public pressure against human rights violators was clearest on Argentina.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., told Lefever that public pressure by his predecessor, Pat Derian, forced Argentina to release former publisher Jacobo Timmerman from 20 months of imprisonment and torture.

Cranston said the Carter administration's public pressure also helped end Argentina's practice of causing thousands of people — estimates range from 6,000 to 10,000 — to disappear.

Lefever disagreed, saying no one factor caused the change in Argentina's practices.

"It is quite possible that quiet diplomacy would have been successful in getting greater change earlier," he said. "No one knows because you cannot unreel history."

Despite repeated questioning, Lefever refused to spell out how quiet diplomacy would work in such instances. It is not quiet if you describe it publicly, he said.

Lefever did give one example.

Although he refused to name the country, it was clear he referred to South Korea when he described how he helped draft a Reagan administration cable urging an ally to grant clemency. He said the ally granted the clemency before the cable was sent, and "this was quiet diplomacy."

Mandatory insurance bill OK'd

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Texans who drive without insurance could be fined at least $75 and their licenses suspended under a bill passed by the Legislature on Sunday.

A voice vote in the House sent the measure, by Rep. Gene Green, D-Houston, to Gov. Bill Clements for signature or veto.

Green has crusaded for several legislative sessions for a mandatory auto insurance law.

His bill says that after Jan. 1, automobiles and trucks — with a handful of exceptions — must be covered by liability insurance. Mandatory coverage would pay medical expenses of $10,000 per person, up to $20,000 for all victims of an accident, and auto repair costs up to $5,000.

A motorist could be required at any time to show a policeman or highway patrolman proof of insurance.

A driver convicted of not having insurance could be fined up to $200 on first offense, with a minimum fine of $75.

Credit life insurance passes in Senate

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The State Board of Insurance would have the power to set rates for credit insurance under a bill passed by the Legislature on Sunday.

Clements had asked the Legislature to act on an emergency basis to give the board the power to fix rates and commissions because an Austin district judge had ruled the board could not.

Credit insurance pays a debt if a borrower dies or is disabled. Consumer advocates had said sellers were reaping giant profits from commissions.

Rebecca Lightsey of the Texas Consumer Association told a news conference earlier in the session that "credit insurance schemes ... in one recent year transferred $222 million from the pockets of Texas borrowers to the purses of auto dealers and others."

Pilot escapes injury in crash

A man escaped injury shortly after 11 p.m. Sunday when the light plane he was piloting crashed on landing at Midland Regional Airport.

Kenneth Kuethe, no address listed, walked away from the Hanks Aviation Piper Cherokee after its landing gear malfunctioned and the craft skidded along the runway, according to firemen. The plane sustained minor damage to its belly and right wing. Six fire trucks stood by while the plane came in, but there was no fire.

Heavy damage to a mattress and box spring was reported in a house fire at 1908 E. California about 6 p.m. Saturday. In addition, the home, owned by Fannie Mae Berry, sustained smoke damage throughout its interior. Cause of the blaze was listed as an overloaded electrical circuit.

In light criminal activity reported over the weekend, David Eckley of 610 San Angelo St. told officer someone broke into his home and stole a 150-piece silverware set, a cassette player and a recorder. The player and recorder were valued at $800. No value was placed on the 60-year-old silverware.

Senate passes Craddick bills

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Senate Sunday gave final approval to bills by Midland Rep. Tom Craddick and Monahans Rep. Jerr Cockerham that would create the Glasscock County Underground Water Conservation District and allow the City of Wickett to annex streets, highways and alleys.

House Bill 2381, by Craddick and Midland Sen. W.E. "Pete" Snelson, creates the water district. HB 2353, by Cockerham and Snelson, extends the annexation powers of Wickett.

Both measures passed on the Senate local and uncontested calendar and now go to the governor for his signature.

RRC bill sent on to governor

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland Rep. Tom Craddick won House concurrence with Senate amendments Sunday to his bill giving the Railroad Commission jurisdiction over injections of hydrocarbons for storage.

Opponents of the bill argued that the injection wells would only increase the salt water contamination problems in West Texas. Craddick contended that the bill is necessary to bridge a gap in existing law.

House members agreed with Craddick by a 115 to 8 vote, sending the bill on to the governor.

Texas redistricting still unresolved

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Congressional redistricting remained an unresolved issue today as House-Senate negotiators struggled to reach a compromise decision before the Legislature's final adjournment at midnight.

There were signs Sunday of a willingness to compromise on some points, but a planned 10 p.m. meeting of the conference committee fizzled and was rescheduled for this morning.

Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, D-Goliad, chairman of House conferees explained the absence of most negotiators by saying, "They're still working" on maps behind the scenes.

Areas in dispute were Dallas, Nueces County (Corpus Christi) and a South Texas area between Corpus Christi and Brownsville.

The Senate plan divides minority neighborhoods in Dallas betweeh U.S. Reps. Jim Mattox and Martin Frost, both moderate-to-liberal Democrats, giving each a good shot at re-election. Under the House bill, Frost's district shifts east and becomes 63 percent black and brown. The Senate plan also keeps Mattox entirely within Dallas County, while the House would shift his district north into suburban areas of Collin and Denton counties.

Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, leader of the legislative Black Caucus, said he liked the Senate plan better.

"It's better for the blacks to impact two districts than to have a single black congressman," he argued.

Von Dohlen read a letter from black Rep. Lanell Cofer, D-Dallas, and endorsed by several other black legislators, supporting a heavily minority district that might elect a black to Congress.

"For the record, none of those (other than Ms. Cofer) are from Dallas County," said Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas.

"And none of them represent the leadership of the black caucus," Washington added.

Sen. Jack Ogg, D-Houston, chairman of Senate conferees, said all five of the Senate negotiators wanted to stick with the Senate plan that helps Mattox and Frost.

The House plan divides Nueces County, with a line separating largely Anglo areas from those inhabited mainly by Hispanics, between two congressional districts. The Senate plan keeps Nueces County intact and in a district represented by U.S. Rep. Bill Patman of Ganado, a former senator. The House plan splits up Patman's district and puts him in largely new territory.

Water district bill sent to governor

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The House of Representatives Sunday concurred Senate amendments to legislation by Midland Rep. Tom Craddick relating to the powers of the Texas Department of Water Resources.

The legislation would increase civil penalties for unlawful appropriation of water from $50 to $1,000 per day, set provisions for dam safety and give the department's executive director authority to abate the waste of water as a public nuisance, among other provisions.

Dissidents seek change as Teamsters open convention

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Teamsters dissidents, who lost a challenge to the way convention delegates are selected, are resorting to constitutional amendments and picket signs to fight the election of Roy Lee Williams to a five-year term as union president.

It no doubt was an uphill battle, even though the 66-year-old Williams was indicted last month by a federal grand jury on charges of conspiring to bribe a senator.

On the eve of today's opening of the union's convention in this gambling resort, a dissident leader said the Labor Department had refused to overrule the delegate-selection process.

Ken Paff, a national organizer of the Teamsters for a Democratic union, said the decision was relayed to the organization's Washington lawyer, Arthur Fox, by Solicitor of Labor Timothy Ryan Jr.

"I really think they basically have evaded the issue," Paff said, contending that only about 10 percent of the approximately 2,200 delegates taking part here were elected directly by the union's 2 million rank-and-file members.

Labor Department officials have declined comment on the challenge. The TDU petitioned the agency Jan. 18 to rule that the union's way of selecting delegates violated the Landrum-Griffin Act.

Williams was named interim president by the union executive board following the death of Frank Fitzsimmons last month. His only challenger for the permanent post is Pete Camarata of the TDU.

Williams subsequently was branded a tool of organized crime by a Senate investigative committee. On May 22, he was indicted in Chicago. He has called the bribery charges "a damn lie."

Paff and other dissidents claim the convention is stacked in Williams' favor. The vast majority of delegates were selected by the leaders of 746 Teamsters locals rather than by the rank and file.

"Would the people of the United States think it appropriate to have city councilmen in their cities elect their congressmen, senators and president?" Paff asked.

Paff said the dissidents will try to get their message across by picketing the convention site. He acknowledged the odds against upsetting Williams' election are high.

"The most that we can hope to obtain here is not inside the convention hall, although that's where our people will be," he said. "But we're really addressing the people back home, all across the country."

The dissident group released figures they said indicate that 38 top Teamsters officials now make $100,000 a year, compared with 18 at that level five years ago.

They also vowed to push amendments to the international's constitution seeking to end a practice in which a mere one-third vote the rank and file of any local is sufficient to ratify a contract.

A courtroom showdown over the picketing apparently was defused Sunday when the union's chief counsel, Robert Baptiste, sent word to the dissidents the activity would be permitted.

The TDU had filed suit in U.S. District Court on Friday seeking a temporary restraining order that would permit picketing. Paff said late Sunday he didn't think the suit would be pursued.

Later, however, Bob Masters, another spokesman for the group, said no decision had been made on the suit. He said it was possible the TDU would seek clarification from the court on the terms under which leaflets could be distributed and union members accosted on the way into the convention hall.

In a brochure distributed Sunday welcoming the delegates, Williams made no references to the allegations.

"It is readily apparent that, to serve as progressive Teamsters in the future, we must strip for action and become lean again," he said in the statement. "Anti-unionism has become fully organized. We must learn how to defeat this evil head-on."

Officials study Chicago's mass transit woes

CHICAGO (AP) — With three suburban bus systems closed and others running out of money, Mayor Jane Byrne emerged from weekend meetings with legislators saying no decisions had been made on how to resolve the mass transit crisis here.

"For anybody to presuppose that anything has been decided here ... would be very wrong," Mrs. Byrne said Sunday night at City Hall.

She huddled with legislative leaders of both parties behind closed doors Saturday and Sunday and they drew up a list of 10 issues they said the Legislature must consider if it is to resolve money problems facing the Regional Transportaton Authority, which subsidizes mass transit in six counties.

With rising costs and declining sales-tax revenue, the RTA ran out of money for subsidies last week. Most suburban lines cannot operate without the subsidies.

More than 70 bus companies around the city are running low on money without RTA subsidies, and most commuter train lines plan no more runs after this week.

Commuters in several suburbs had to make alternate plans to reach work this morning because the systems they usually take were idle.

Buses in Joliet, Aurora and West Towns were no longer operating. The shutdowns, which began May 23, affect about 35,000 commuters.

The South Suburban Safeway Lines had enough fuel to provide commuter services this morning for its 12,000 riders, but a spokesman said the company might not be able to take commuters home again.

A spokesman for the Aurora Police Department said most of the 5,000 riders of the bus lines there are schoolchildren. A police spokesman in Joliet said he wasn't aware of problems caused by the shutdown.

On Sunday, the RTA took control of the Rock Island Railroad, which serves 20,000 commuters.

The system had been operated by the Chicago & North Western Transportation Co., but, "We owe them too much money and they informed us that they could no longer afford to run the Rock Island," said RTA spokeswoman Peggy Kent.

She said the RTA had only enough fuel set aside to keep the system running another week.

Illinois House Minority Leader Michel Madigan sad the 10 options drawn up at the meeting would become an outline for the Legislature as it tries to unscramble RTA's financial mess.

Madigan said he hopes to take the list to his colleagues in the House "and ask if we can assemble a set of tradeoffs that could lead to an agreement."

Among the items on the list are: restructuring the RTA board; reviewing transit service levels; freezing salaries of bus and train drivers at current levels; attempting to link revenue to operating costs; increasing fares and reviewing labor contracts.

State Sen. James Pate said a source of revenue that will be discussed will be increasing the state sales tax up to one-half cent.

He said added revenue from the six counties could be earmarked for Chicago-area transit, and money obtained outside the metropolitan area could be used for transportation in the remainder of the state.

Prior to the meeting, Pate said a previous proposal for a tax on oil products was "still alive but it's down and wounded."

More nuclear energy

Two years after the accident at Three Mile Island the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is fulfilling two obligations it owes to an energy-starved nation.

— First, it is insisting on as many safety mechanisms and procedures as are humanly possible for all atomic power plants.

— Second, it has speeded up the licensing process so it does not take years to put new plants into operation.

This is the good news behind the commission's licensing recently of the fourth new plant since the tragedy in Pennsylvania. The vote was unanimous to clear the way for producing power at a facility in Salem, New Jersey.

The Three Mile Island incident jolted all who had been hoping power from atoms could quickly, and safely, make a contribution toward solving the nation's worst energy crisis. Some were jolted so much they talked openly of abandoning development of this form of energy entirely.

Talk of closing nuclear shops and not building new ones was, of course, an example of extreme negativism and lack of faith in America's scientists and engineers. It would be like abandoning space flights because of accidents in the early days, or grounding space shuttle Columbia because its two pilots reported discovery of 50 problems in its intricate machinery.

The Nuclear Regulatory Commission believes accidents can be prevented, problems solved, and with faith in the future and in American genius is expanding production of atomic power.

The jellybean hazard

Everyone probably now knows of President Ronald Reagan's fondness for jellybeans. He has made jellybeans well known much in the same manner that his predecessor, Jimmy Carter, brought the lowly peanut into the limelight.

But little did the president realize that by making the jellybean so prominent he would evoke the wrath of the nation's dentists. He has done exactly that, though, and now the dentists are fighting back, toothbrushes and drills in hand.

The American Society of Dentistry for Children recently passed a resolution expressing concern about the president's favorite candy and the potential hazards involved.

The resolution stated: "Whereas jellybeans and other candies have been shown to be among the causes of dental caries;

"And whereas such sweet foods are especially dangerous to dental health when consumed between meals frequently;

"And whereas jelly beans are sticky and adhere to the surface of the tooth;

"And whereas President Reagan's frequent consumption of jellybeans could cause the nation's children to copy his actions;

"Now be it resolved that the American Society of Dentistry for Children respectfully suggests that President Reagan restrict his consumption of jellybeans between meals and that he brush his teeth thoroughly after consumption."

The society even forwarded a gift of sugar-free candies to the president. President Reagan accepted the candies and said thank you. Whether he'll follow the dentists' advice remains to be seen.

Everybody in Reagan's Washington hates his job. For example, listening to the human rights officials talking about human rights reminds you of Alabama Sheriff Bull Connor in 1963 talking about civil rights.

CHARLIE REESE

Charley Reese

Around the nation there is a continuing controversy over sex education. Proponents would have you believe that opponents of sex education are ignorant, prudish people with a lot of "hang-ups." That is not so. Furthermore, the controversy is not over sex education.

If you haven't investigated this controversy, you are apt to think that when someone talks about sex education, they are talking about a factual explanation of the reproductive process. If that were the case, there would be very little controversy.

Unfortunately, some of the nation's sex experts have decided to teach a system of ethics under the guise of sex education. That is the cause of the controversy. The system of ethics being taught is situational ethics. It says there are no absolutes in matters of morality and that each person should decide entirely on his own if something is right or wrong.

The point is not whether you agree or disagree; the point is that if you propose to teach a system of morality with tax dollars in public schools, then those taxpayers who disagree with your system of morality have a legitimate right to protest and to attempt to stop you.

A lengthy study of sex education commissioned by the U.S. Center for Disease Control confirmed quite explicitly that the goal of sex education was not to fill gaps in knowledge but to alter attitudes and behavior. This is quite evident if you read any of the sex education material produced for most of these programs, particularly material written by Sol Gordon, one of the gurus of modern sex education.

In one of Mr. Gordon's books designed for children, he explains that most people are heterosexual, some are homosexual and some are celebate and that all three are okay. No one, he asserts, should condemn a person because of his sexual preference.

Again, whether you agree or not, that is an assertion of a moral premise. Traditional Judeo-Christian morality does condemn some people for their sexual preference. As a matter of fact, so does the secular state if someone's sexual preference is for children or for women taken by force. Mr. Gordon is moralizing in the classroom and if he can do it, then why not Rev. Jerry Falwell?

In the same book, Mr. Gordon says to the children, "no one has the right" to keep them from having an abortion and that that decision is entirely up to them. Here again, this is asserting a moral position, not teaching facts. A lot of Americans believe abortion is immoral. What right does Mr. Gordon have to tell children that neither their parents nor their priest can restrain them from committing what those authority figures view as a grievous sin?

I think what irks me most about the Sol Gordon school of sex education is the intellectual dishonesty. Usually when a parent protests, he is ridiculed. It is argued that the parent is trying to inject morality into the subject while the educators are neutral. They are not being neutral. They are pushing their own code of ethics and that is exactly what the argument is all about.

If I want to teach my children that sex should be reserved for marriage, that's my business and I don't want the public school system, at my expense, subverting my efforts by teaching the exact opposite. I especially don't like it when educators slide over the problems of venereal disease because, as one enlightened lady put it, "that's too negative."

It's no coincidence that this kind of sex education always produces an increase in the teenage pregnancy rate and an increase in the teenage venereal disease statistics. If your school system is teaching sex education, I suggest you take the trouble to examine the materials being used. You may be in for a surprise.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Government afraid of its own people

Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The technology of espionage has reached such a wondrous state that the United States and the Soviet Union regularly intercept each other's most secret communications. Yet of late, both governments have intensified their security routines.

Since they cannot keep secrets from each other, who are they trying to hide their operations from? The deep-down truth is that both governments are really afraid of their own people. They are driven, therefore, to draw a curtain of secrecy between their internal operations and the people they are supposed to serve.

The millions who compose our own permanent government, in their heart of hearts, are at odds with democracy. They prefer to exercise their permeating power from the obscurity of the cubicle, shuffling government forms and issuing edicts.

They abhor conflict, which disrupts the smooth implementation of their plans and procedures. They embrace secrecy because what is not known cannot be disrupted. They scorn party politics, with the emotions and harangues and oversimplifications, as irrational.

But in a democracy, the right to make the big decisions belongs to the people. Thus controversy becomes the seed bed of decision, and secrecy frustrates the decision-making process. The differences between parties, however irrational or elusive, are the bases of decision.

Nevertheless politicians, once they come to power, are inclined to adopt the secretive ways of the bureaucrats. For the politician in office doesn't want his acts and policies to reach the people through what he considers the distorting prism of the press. What he wants known, he would prefer to communicate directly through more tightly controlled mechanisms.

In 1976, for instance, Jimmy Carter promised to install a people's presidency in Washington. The good ole boy from Georgia said he would run "an open government to let our people know what our government leaders are doing, including the president." His Cabinet meetings, he vowed, would be thrown open for the people to watch.

Carter held one open Cabinet meeting; then like the presidents before him, he closed the doors. I tried to help him keep his campaign promise by publishing the most newsworthy excerpts from the secret Cabinet minutes.

One of Carter's Cabinet members, Joseph A. Califano Jr., has now revealed how much this upset the president. In his new book, "Governing America," Califano writes:

"Jack Anderson had begun occasionally to carry excerpts from cabinet meeting minutes in his column ... Carter told us to treat minutes of the cabinet meeting 'with the care that should be given highly classified documents.' The minutes would be distributed to cabinet members marked 'for your eyes only,' he said. 'We've got to stop Jack Anderson putting in his column what's going on at cabinet meetings.'

"He only whetted Anderson's appetite. I was among those from whom the aggressive columnist sought copies thereafter; I refused, but Anderson got them somewhere else."

For the past quarter century, I have published news from classified documents. I have been less willing than other correspondents to accept the government's right to classify whatever it wishes. The practice has been for government officials to classify incoming information and then selectively release only what they want the public to know. I try to intercept the intakes before they are censored.

High officials, meanwhile, not only use their classification powers to censor the news but seek added restrictions on the public's right to know. Under the banner of national security, they are now assaulting the Freedom of Information Act and clamoring for stricter security laws.

But unfortunately, no laws passed by Congress can stymie the Russians' all-seeing spy satellites and all-hearing monitoring devices. The laws would merely impede the flow of information to the American people, not to the men in the Kremlin.

Long before Americans could vote directly for their presidents, before the vote was given to the poor, women, blacks and youths, before presidential nominating conventions or our present political parties existed, the role of the village editor and dissenting pamphleteer — as monitor, arbiter, critic and rival of the politician — was imbedded as a fundamental of the American system.

Under this system, the mission of the press is to give the people an alternative to the official version of things, a rival account of reality, a measure by which to judge the efficacy of rulers and whether the truth is in them.

The language of the Constitution — the people, justice, tranquility, welfare, liberty — was intended to protect the people from the government. The language of officialdom — security, secrecy, surveillance, executive privilege — would protect the government from the people.

INSIDE REPORT:

House Democrats to go down fighting tax cuts

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

EVANS

NOVAK

WASHINGTON — Reagan administration officials concluded they have to unveil their revised tax package, with or without the Democratic leadership's blessing, when they turned on their television sets the Sunday of Memorial Day weekend and did not see what they had expected.

They had expected a Democratic olive branch from House Majority Leader Jim Wright — an expectation excited by Wright himself two days earlier. Instead, they heard his familiar call for "more (tax) relief to middle-income Americans ... and to the working poor."

Returning to the White House Tuesday after the holiday weekend, presidential chief of staff James Baker called Republican leaders in Congress: Time is up; if Democratic leaders cannot go with us, we will again follow the budget route and make common cause with conservative Southern Democrats.

This reflects bitter crosscurrents among congressional Democrats in confronting President Reagan's tax cut program. There is no longer much doubt that it will pass; the remaining question is whether House Democratic leaders will acquiesce or go down fighting, with the latter course now more likely.

Less than a month ago, those leaders envisioned Democratic ranks reunited in opposition to Kemp-Roth style tax rate reduction — 10 percent a year for three years — handing Reagan his first real defeat. But there never was any chance Reagan would stubbornly insist on riding Kemp-Roth all the way to oblivion.

In fact, secret administration strategy sessions fixed on only three nonnegotiable demands: first, a multiyear bill; second, across-the-board rate cuts, evenly, for both rich and poor; third, some individual tax rate reduction going into effect this year.

That third condition was subject to considerable debate within the White House and the source of trouble with the "boll weevils," the conservative Southern Democrats so important in passage of the Reagan budget. The compromise worked out with the Southerners would cut individual rates 5 percent effective Oct. 1 and another 10 percent July 1, 1982 (with yet another 10 percent cut a year later).

Seeking to avoid a pitched battle on the House floor, Reagan's men wanted to extend the deal beyond the boll weevils to Rep. Dan Rostenkowksi, chairman of the House Ways and Means Committee, acting in behalf of regular Democrats. A possible sweetener for Democratic egalitarian sensibilities: lowering the lowest bracket tax rate from 14 percent to 10 percent.

Rostenkowski, not relishing a defeat on his maiden effort as Ways and Means chairman, eyed such a deal. But he was burdened by divided Democratic counsel. Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill supported insistence by younger, more liberal Democratic congressmen to avoid the taint of collaboration with Reaganomics.

On Thursday, May 21, Majority Leader Wright appeared moving toward compromise. He made at least three telephone calls: to Treasury Secretary Donald Regan, to White House lobbyist Max Friedersdorf and to Rep. Kent Hance of Texas, a boll weevil member of Ways and Means.

Wright's message, as perceived by his listeners, was that he wanted no battle royal over taxes. He made clear he was encountering opposition from Speaker O'Neill and Rep. Richard Bolling, the doughty liberal who heads the House Rules Committee. Based on those Thursday telephone calls, word spread around the administration's upper levels that Wright might embrace the compromise package over "Face the Nation" that coming Sunday.

Whether Wright changed his mind or whether he was misinterpreted on Thursday, his non-commital performance on Sunday led to Tuesday's decision that the White House could wait no longer. One call from Jim Baker went to Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole, who laid out the essence of the new White House package (without identifying it as such) over breakfast with newsmen Wednesday.

House Democratic leaders concede they have little chance to stop the revised bill, containing a sprinkling of tax goodies to suit assorted congressional tastes. Against what seems to be the better judgment of Rostenkowksi, Wright and other Democratic leaders, the party may have to fight another set piece battle on taxes from a starting point worse than its budget position with even poorer prospects for victory.

IRA responsible for killing guard, bomb expert

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A part-time policeman was shot and killed as he guarded a prisoner inside a Belfast hospital, and a British army bomb expert was killed when a booby-trapped car he was examining blew up.

The Irish Republican Army said the killings Sunday were its work. The known death toll in nearly 12 years of sectarian warfare in Northern Ireland rose to 2,118.

Eyewitnesses at the Royal Victoria Hospital, in the Catholic Fall's Road area, said two men and a woman approached the constable as he stood outside the intensive care ward, opened fire at point-blank range and fled through the emergency ward as patients screamed.

Neither the victim's name nor the identity of the prisoner he was guarding were disclosed. But security men said they did not think the terrorists were trying to rescue the prisoner.

The IRA sent a message to Belfast newspapers saying the shooting was a direct challenge to Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, who last week said the hunger strikes by imprisoned IRA men at the Maze Prison could be the guerrillas' last card.

"This is not the last card, Mrs. Thatcher," the message said.

Four hunger strikers have starved themselves to death, arousing widespread foreign sympathy, and four other prisoners are fasting, but Mrs. Thatcher is adamant in her refusal to accede to the IRA's demand that its members be treated as political prisoners.

Earlier Sunday, Sgt. Maj. Michael O'Neill, 34, was blown up as he examined a car abandoned on a country road outside Newry. It was about five miles from the site of an IRA landmine ambush May 19 that killed five British soldiers.

O'Neill was the 343rd British soldier killed in Northern Ireland since August 1969.

In Belfast early Sunday, young Catholics pelted security forces with gasoline bombs and bottles of acid and police fired plastic bullets. One man was wounded in the head by a plastic round, police said.

In Londonderry, three masked IRA gunmen fired volleys over the coffins of Charles Maguire, 21, and George McBrearty, 23, who were shot to death Thursday by a soldier in civilian clothes whose car they tried to hijack.

Meanwhile, reports circulated that Britain's opposition Labor Party is considering modifying its support of the Conservative government's policy in Northern Ireland.

Labor's Ireland Study Group was at work on a report that is expected to urge commitment to the principle of union between Northern Ireland and the Irish Republic. But one Laborite from the rank and file in the House of Commons said "the time draws nigh" when the 11,100 British soldiers in Northern Ireland "must come out."

"It is time to acknowledge the brutal fact that Ulster is our last colony and it is time we proceeded on a course of decolonization," Leo Abse told a convention of the Welsh Labor Party.

British troops were sent to Northern Ireland to prevent a civil war between the province's Protestant majority and the Roman Catholic minority.

The British Cabinet minister for Northern Ireland, Humphrey Atkins, warned Sunday the government is considering outlawing the Ulster Defense Association, the leading Protestant paramilitary organization, just as it bans the IRA, because the police seized seven submachine guns and hundreds of rounds of ammunition in a raid on the UDA's headquarters in Belfast last week.

"There is no doubt that since the find of weapons...the matter has to be reviewed, and I am doing just that," Atkins told a radio interviewer.

Poland mourns death of Cardinal Wyszynski

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — Eulogized by the Vatican as a "hero of the church of our times," Cardinal Stefan Wyszynski was buried in the crypt of St. John's Cathedral after a nationally televised outdoor funeral attended by more than 250,000 Poles, including leaders of the Communist government.

"All Poland is taking part in the funeral," the official news agency PAP said Sunday.

But one Pole could not. Pope John Paul II, who said Wyszynski was responsible for his elevation to the papacy in 1978, sent a message from his Rome hospital bed expressing his longing to be among the mourners. In an allusion to wounds he suffered in an assassination attempt May 18, he added, "God has decided differently."

Polish church sources in Rome said they believed Wyszynski and the Polish-born pope agreed before the cardinal's death of cancer Thursday on his successor as primate of the Polish Catholic Church.

The sources said they did not expect the name to be announced immediately. Cardinal Granciszek Macharski, the archbishop of Krakow and the acting primate, suggested on Saturday that a successor would be named soon.

The throng jamming Victory Square for the funeral Mass Sunday was the largest crowd for a religious service in Poland since the pope's triumphant homecoming two years ago.

John Paul was represented by the Vatican secretary of state, Cardinal Agostino Casaroli, who celebrated the Mass with the Polish bishops at an altar set up before a 43-foot red-draped cross facing the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier.

Reading in accented Polish, the cardinal hailed Wyszynski as "a man,...a bishop, whom his contemporaries, foreseeing the judgment of posterity, have already listed among the great names in the history of the church and of his country....

"The Lord allowed him to see a millenium of his people's faith in Christ crowned by the election of the first Polish and first Slavic pope. And He allowed him, before closing his eyes to the light of this earth, the joy of seeing him saved for the love and hopes of millions and millions of men after an attack that horrified and shook the world."

Cardinal John Krol, the archbishop of Philadelphia, Pa., read the final prayers in flawless Polish and sprinkled the coffin with holy water before it was lowered into the cathedral crypt.

Other Americans who came to Warsaw for the funeral were William Wilson, President Reagan's envoy to the Vatican; Reps. Clement Zablocki, D-Wis., and William Broomfield, R-Mich., and Aloyius Mazewski, president of the Polish-American Congress.

Wyszynski during the 33 years he led the Polish church as primate wielded enormous influence since an estimated 90 percent of the 36 million Poles are Catholics. Once held by the Communist government under virtual house arrest during the Stalinist 1950s, he came to be held in great respect by the present Communist leaders as well as by independent union leaders for counseling moderation during the past year of strikes and labor tension.

President Henryk Jablonski and a delegation from the independent Solidarity labor federation were among the thousands who followed the wooden coffin from the 17th century seminary church where the body had lain in state since Thursday.

Fighting pushes Lebanese death toll past 550

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Police report at least 18 more Lebanese killed and more than 100 wounded in fighting between Syrian soldiers and Christian militiamen in Beirut, raising the Lebanese toll to more than 550 dead since April 1.

The exchanges of artillery, rocket and gunfire between Moslem and Christian sectors of the Lebanese capital began late Saturday. They reached a crescendo at midafternoon Sunday and subsided to sporadic sniping at sundown.

Sniping and artillery duels also were reported in the Christian city of Zahle, 30 miles to the east in the Bekaa Valley, where a Christian attempt to open a military supply road ignited the Syrian-Christian fighting at the start of April and led to Syria's deployment of Soviet-made SAM-6 missiles at the end of the month.

Israel is threatening to attack the missiles unless they are withdrawn. Syria refuses to take them out, and the dispute threatens to touch off a new Arab-Israeli war.

Israeli jets flew over Beirut Sunday, breaking the sound barrier, but no antiaircraft fire against them was reported.

As U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib prepared to return to the Middle East to try again to resolve the Syrian-Israeli dispute over the missiles, Syria's foreign minister reiterated his government's refusal to remove them from Lebanon, and the leader of the Lebanese Christians fighting the Syrians said war is imminent.

The SAMs "are there to stay. They will not be withdrawn," declared Foreign Minister Abdul Halim Khaddam in an interview published Sunday in al-Khaleej, a newspaper in the United Arab Emirates.

"We are two fingers away from war, and I doubt it would be a small-scale war if it broke out," said Pierre Gemayel, leader of the Phalange Party.

PLO rep fatally shot in Belgium

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Naim Khader, Palestine Liberation Organization representative in Belgium, was killed today by a gunman firing from a car with West German license plates, police said.

The police said Khader was hit with five heavy-caliber bullets about 9 a.m. as he walked toward the PLO office in the fashionable Brussels University district.

The assailant escaped on foot, followed by a passerby and a postman, who broke off the chase to provide a description, police said.

A spokesman for the PLO office, which was established in Belgium in 1976, said Khader was shot in the head. He said it was the first attack against a PLO representative in Belgium although threats had been received.

Khader, 41, was a graduate of Belgium's Catholic University at Louvain. He was an active participant in diplomatic activities in Brussels, headquarters of the 10-nation European Economic Community.

The EEC countries, including Britain, France, West Germany and Italy strengthened ties with the PLO last June, when they declared at a summit meeting in Venice that the Palestinian group should be included in any settlement in the Middle East.

Khader and his assistants in Belgium have been lobbying for EEC countries to grant outright recognition to the PLO, which the Venice declaration avoided.

ROTC popular again following Vietnam slump

By KEN KLEIN
Associated Press Writer

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — When young Iranian revolutionaries seized the U.S. Embassy in Iran, Florida teen-ager Cindy Kirby worried that America's power and pride had slipped to a low ebb.

Months later, she decided to do something about it. Inspired by patriotism and her concern that U.S. military might was "going down the hole," Miss Kirby joined the Air Force Reserve Officer Training Corps — ROTC — at Florida State University.

Nearly a decade after the anti-war movement focused its rage on ROTC, causing enrollments to plummet, the military is staging a dramatic comeback on American campuses.

"They're not even spitting on us anymore," says one ROTC instructor, referring to the turbulent Vietnam era when students wearing military uniforms were targets for insults and ROTC buildings were attacked by demonstrators.

Nationwide ROTC enrollment reached 92,172 in 1980, up more than 6 percent from the previous year. In 1974, overall enrollment declined to 63,266 students, says Pentagon spokesman Bill Caldwell.

"The Vietnam War was devastating on ROTC," Caldwell says. "But we've been climbing back since 1974."

The growth has occurred in Army and Air Force officer training programs, which account for most of ROTC's enrollment. The Navy unit — the smallest in ROTC — has been steady in the past four years.

"Air Force ROTC has been increasing bout 10 percent a year since 1976," says a spokesman at Maxwell Air Force Base, near Montgomery, Ala.

Military brass and instructors cite two key reasons for ROTC's resurgence: increased student patriotism after the Vietnam conflict and skyrocketing costs of college amid a sluggish economy.

"The Iranian thing has given us a big booster shot of patriotism," says Maj. Ted Timberlake, who oversees a Junior ROTC program in five high schools in Lee County, south of Tampa in southwest Florida.

Timberlake says he's so encouraged by ROTC enrollment growth in high schools that he has launched a recruiting program in local middle schools.

Military instructors who witnessed the protest furor during the Vietnam conflict say today's students are more passive toward young people wearing uniforms and military-style haircuts.

"Our (ROTC) people are pretty well accepted by the general college population," says Air Force spokesman Richard Howland. "The University of California at Berkeley was a hot spot during the war, but we've got a fine ROTC detachment out there now."

Meanwhile, more students are seeking military scholarships. A four-year ROTC scholarship includes payments for tuition, books, lab fees and a $1,000 annual stipend.

Florida State freshman cadet Jeff Grantham, a high achiever who had his choice of college programs, says he was attracted to Air Force ROTC because he doesn't have to borrow money to attend college. A member of the National Honor Society in high school, he was awarded a full ROTC scholarship.

Grantham, who wants to be a nuclear scientist, believes the military will give him an opportunity to travel. A small-town boy from Perry, Grantham admits that he hasn't seen much of the world beyond his native North Florida.

Generally, the military training program has been more popular in the South compared with other regions, military leaders say, because of a traditional interest in the military and a stronger support for defense.

Writing best sellers becoming quite a habit for Clavell

NEW YORK (AP) — James Clavell says his goal, as an author, is to "try to be No. 1," to always be on the best-seller list.

So far, so good. His three previous novels, "King Rat," "Tai-pan" and "Shogun," were international best sellers. His latest novel, "Noble House," was an immediate success.

Clavell, in a recent interview, said his thinking was like that of the Japanese: "Do best, always do best." But despite his previous successes, Clavell said, "Each time going to bat, with every new novel, you don't know what's going to happen or whether it's going to work."

"You begin," he said, "and then you have a ruthless drive to finish."

The setting for Clavell's latest novel is the city of Hong Kong in 1963. The action centers around a Hong Kong trading company and its "tai-pan," or supreme leader, Ian Dunross.

"Noble House" describes what happens when two Americans arrive in Hong Kong to do business with Dunross. The books covers a time span of eight days. It is 1,206 pages long and weighs almost four pounds.

"'Noble House' is a doorstopper in thickness and weight," Clavell said, "but if you examine it page by page, you will find it's extremely lean."

This is the fourth in a series of seven books Clavell plans to write about Asia. The next book, he said, will be about modern-day Japan and is tentatively titled "Nippon."

Clavell said that as a youth he had had no plans to become a writer, because he was "destined to be a military man." He is a descendant of Walterus de Claville, armor-bearer to William the Conqueror. As the son of Captain Sir Richard and Eileen Lady Ross Clavell, he grew up in the naval ports of England.

At the age of 18, Clavell was already a captain in the Royal Artillery.

Then, he was captured by the Japanese in Java during World War II and spent the last years of the war in Japan's Changi camp in Singapore. Out of 150,000 prisoners, only about 10,000 survived. Clavell said it was an experience that changed his life.

"You learn that you can look at yourself and be satisfied with yourself. Your values get changed and you have no fear of normal things," he said.

Clavell returned to England at the end of the war. When his military service was ended by a motorcycle accident, he thought about becoming a barrister. Then, Clavell said, he found out that he had to know Latin and go back to school for five years. After his experiences in Changi, that just wasn't possible for him.

Clavell moved to the United States and began working as a screenwriter, director and producer in Hollywood. When the Hollywood screenwriters went on strike in 1960, he sat down and wrote his first novel, "King Rat," based on his experiences in Changi. It was 15 years later, he said, but everything came back to him. He finished the 800-page manuscript in 12 weeks.

In the years that followed, Clavell wrote more movies, including "The Great Escape," starring Steve McQueen, and "To Sir with Love," starring Sidney Poitier. He also wrote another book, "Tai-pan," which was published in 1966.

Then, in 1971, Clavell embarked on his "10-year plan" to produce two books and one film. The result was "Shogun," "Noble House," and the now-famous 12-hour television series, "Shogun," based on the novel.

Clavell describes writing as an "all-pervading, extraordinary life" that allows him control over the things he wants to do.

Although he's worked as a producer and director, "my wife prefers me as an author," he said.

Clavell, who lives in California and is now an American citizen, is pleased with published reviews that say his books are "impossible to put down." One reader reported that he had read "Noble House" in two and one-half days.

"Ask people not to read 'Noble House' in two and one-half days," Clavell said with a laugh. "It took me a long time to write. And cherish it, please. It's going to be a while before I publish another book, so you'll just have to ration yourselves."

'Beautiful bill' passes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Grocers could donate food to poor people without fear of a lawsuit if someone became ill under a "beautiful bill" the Texas Legislature passed Sunday.

The proposal was sent to the governor for approval or veto.

The measure by Rep. Irma Rangel, D-Kingsville, exempts grocery stores and wholesale grocers from civil or criminal liability if someone dies or gets sick after eating donated food, unless there was gross negligence, recklessness or intentional misconduct on the grocer's part.

"There's no doubt in my mind that this will be a great incentive" for stores to donate food, Ms. Rangel said. Grocers are reluctant to give food away now because they might have to pay damages even if they were not at fault.

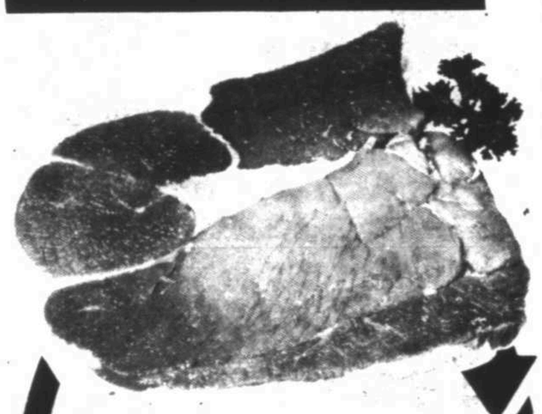

Ms. Rangel called the measure a "really beautiful bill" that would make large amounts of food — perhaps millions of tons — available to poor people.

Carl Vinson dies

Carl Vinson

MILLEDGEVILLE, Ga. (AP) — Former U.S. Rep. Carl Vinson, who held the longest continuous service in the House of Representatives at 50 years, died early today at the age of 97, a family spokeswoman said.

Molly Snead, Vinson's nurse for 34 years and a close family friend, said the veteran politician died at 5 a.m. EDT at Baldwin County Medical Center. He had suffered a heart attack a year ago and had entered the hospital almost two weeks ago with heart problems, she said.

Vinson, a Democrat, was one of the most powerful political figures in Washington from 1914 to 1965, receiving recognition for his length of service both in Congress and as chairman of the House Naval Affairs Committee.

Vinson concentrated on the U.S. Navy after he was elected to Congress and was considered responsible for pushing through appropriations to build up the Navy to its formidable proportions by World War II. In March 1980 he became the first living American to have a major warship named in his honor.

Mrs. Snead said Vinson had hoped for two things, to live to be 100 and to live to be able to see the USS Carl Vinson, a nuclear carrier, launched next February.

"He kept telling me, 'Molly, I want to live to see that ship go in the water,'" she said.

Vinson, who was known as the "Swamp Fox" in Congress because of his masterful grasp of parliamentary procedure and unerring strategy in getting important programs passed, was born on Nov. 18, 1883.

He attended the Georgia Military College in Millegeville and was graduated from Mercer University in Macon with a bachelor of law degree in 1902. He was admitted to the Georgia Bar in that same year.

Vinson's first public position was that of court solicitor, a position he held for two terms — from 1906 to 1910. He was elected to the Georgia House of Representatives and remained there until 1912, serving one term as speaker.

Michigan begins moving prisoners following riots

LANSING, Mich. (AP) — To improve security in Michigan's riot-torn prisons, state officials plan to transfer about 1,100 inmates in a reshuffling that could last several months.

The move began Friday when 50 inmates from Southern Michigan Prison at Jackson were transferred to medium-security facilities at Ionia, Muskegon and Saugatuck.

Rioting first broke out at Jackson May 22, then spread to Ionia later that night. Violence broke out again at Jackson May 26 and flared up at another prison in Marquette later that night.

The rioting left at least 137 prisoners, 68 guards and 10 firefighters injured. Several buildings at the three prisons were destroyed by fires and looting, resulting in between $4 million and $5 million in damages, state Corrections Department officials have said.

The 50 inmates moved from Jackson Friday were cleared of any blame in the recent uprisings and were among a group of 300 inmates whose housing was burned down. The group was expected to be transferred to medium-security corrections' facilities.

Superintendent Bob Redman of the Michigan Dunes Correctional Facility at Saugatuck said 16 prisoners from Jackson arrived at the institution Friday.

About 800 "troublemakers" eventually will be moved from the Marquette and Jackson prisons, according to Robert Brown, deputy director of the state Department of Corrections.

Inmates responsible for the May 22 riot at the Michigan Reformatory at Ionia will be kept locked in their cells, Brown said.

Moving the prisoners in small groups will allow prison officials to observe them closely and spot troublemakers, Brown said.

Residents begin to return to the burned-out ruins of their homes last November in the area of North Park, San Bernadino, Calif., following a fire set by an arsonist last Thanksgiving. The fire destroyed 80,000 acres, caused $65 million in property damage and permanently altered the lifestyles of some of those whose homes it destroyed.

Some families move, some rebuild after fire

SAN BERNARDINO, Calif. (AP) — Whipped by howling Santa Ana winds, an arsonist's fire raged through this foothills community last Thankgiving, killing four people and devastating 284 homes before its five-day rampage ended.

The Panorama fire began in a canyon north of the city, then shot like a flamethrower over 23,000 acres, filling the air with choking, black smoke and forcing hundreds of people to drop their garden hoses and flee. The firestorm leveled row upon row of houses in some neighborhoods, leaving only foundation slabs and blackened chunks of metal where cars had been, but zigzagged through other areas, consuming only one in five homes.

Named for nearby Panorama Point, the blaze was the worst in a siege of 11 fires that destroyed 80,000 acres and left $65 million in property damage. The person who set it never was caught.

Six months later, the people who fled and returned to ruins still have nightmares. Some have moved; others have chosen to rebuild.

Eetty Johnston had a broken ankle and was home alone when the fire swept down from the foothills Nov. 24. Hobbling on crutches, the 50-year-old woman tried to save her home with a garden hose by wetting down the roof.

It was no use.

"I didn't want to rebuild," she recalled recently. "I had no intention of ever going back. The last thing I remember of the house — the fire — I'm trying to block out what I've seen.

"It's going to take an awful long time to get over the shock, and the experience," Mrs. Johnston said.

But she and her husband Charles, also 50, had lived there for more than a decade, so eventually they decided to rebuild and received a Small Business Administration loan of $6,900 at 1 percent interest.

The house they moved back to has sprinklers on the asphalt roof. Three water jets, with a range of 70 feet, can be activated to wet down their roof if there is the threat of fire.

Unlike the Johnstons, Ginnie and Bob Berry, whose three-bedroom house was reduced to a concrete slab and a blackened chimney, decided not to rebuild their home of 18 years.

"I'm a firm believer: If you get wiped out one time, don't stick your neck back into the same place," Berry said.

In their old neighborhood, of 36 houses, six escaped the flames, 14 are being rebuilt and 16 lots are empty save for chimneys and foundations.

The Berrys collected tools, salt and pepper shakers and photographic slides, but after the fire, their possessions fit in a shoebox.

"It was your possessions. You kept the box under your arm, in your car, everywhere you went," Mrs. Berry recalled.

"We'd meet other people with their shoeboxes. We wouldn't even leave it on the seat of the car, it was so important in our lives. It was like if you lost that, you might as well be dead."

The Berrys now rent a one-bedroom apartment they have furnished with a television set, kitchen appliances and a few personal items.

"We're not collecting anything anymore," Berry said. "We're not going to have this stuff just for somebody to look at. Anything we get from now on is going to be used."

n their omeowning days, the Berrys would spend weekends doing repairs, painting and other chores. Now, they often take short trips.

"We'll miss what we had," Mrs. Berry said. "But now we'll enjoy more fun things. We really don't want the kind of house we had. Our tastes have changed. We don't need it."

Volcano evacuees remain in limbo

HONOLULU (AP) — The 54 residents of the remote volcano-ravaged island of Pagan in the Northern Marianas aren't sure when they'll be allowed to go back home. So they've sent a ship after their cattle, goats, chickens and other belongings.

The residents have been stayng in Saipan following their rescue from the island after the May 15 eruption. Fifty-three of the residents were rescued by a Japanese freighter; the island's mayor was in Saipan when the volcano exploded.

A decision on when the residents can return was not expected until scientists from Hawaii's Volcano Observatory brief Northern Marianas Gov. Carlos Camacho.

Forecasters' hurricane warnings go unheeded

CORAL GABLES, Fla. (AP) — Forecaster Neil Frank is something of a latter-day Paul Revere, delivering more than 100 speeches a year warning people about hurricanes and pleading with localities to prepare before a big storm strikes.

But most of the time, the director of the National Hurricane Center says, people in vulnerable areas refuse to listen.

As the six-month Atlantic hurricane season gets under way today, Frank again is reminding coastal dwellers about the fury of the storms and the need for evacuation plans.

"When you have a rare event like a hurricane, it's the natural tendency of human beings to deny the danger," Frank said. "They say: 'It's just not going to hit me.'"

People don't believe that a hurricane, with winds up to 200 mph, would strike their homes or push ashore huge waves that could destroy foundations of beachfront condominiums, he said.

Tropical Storm Arlene, born in the Caribbean, jumped the gun on the hurricane season last month and spread torrential rains over Jamaica, Cuba and the Bahamas.

On the average, six Atlantic hurricanes develop each year. During 1980, there were 11 named storms, nine of which became hurricanes.

"We just don't have the knowledge to predict what this season will bring," Frank said. "But if you're going to bet, you can bet against a hurricane hitting the southeast Florida coast. The odds are one in seven in any one year."

Despite the odds, Frank and civil defense officials along the Atlantic and Gulf coasts still are worried. They say residents in the most vulnerable areas never have felt the fury of a major storm.

When Hurricane David came within a few miles of the heavily populated Florida Gold Coast in 1979, thousands of elderly residents in Miami Beach fled their apartments in a chaotic evacuation that revealed glaring deficiencies in Dade County's disaster plan.

"I know of only four plans on total evacuation in the entire United States," Frank said. "They have plans for the Tampa Bay area; Lee County, Fla.; the lower Florida Keys, and Galveston Bay in Texas.

"So I ask, what's going to happen if a hurricane hits Norfolk (Va.) or New Orleans or the Jersey coast? The whole Jersey coast is a series of barrier islands. On weekends there are hundreds of thousands of people on those islands."

Isolated leprosariums a thing of the past

KALAUPAPA, Hawaii (AP) — Leprosy, the scourge that can rupture skin, make hands into claws and bring hideous disfigurement and disability to untreated victims, reportedly is on the increase in the United States. But that won't mean a need for more isolated leprosariums.

"It's finished. Dead as a dodo," said Dr. Oliver Hasselblad, who heads Kalaupapa Settlement, the worldwide prototype for segregated leprosariums. "Internationally, segregation is not legally required anywhere."

New settlements, once called "leper colonies," just aren't needed anymore: Although there are many mysteries about leprosy, scientists do know that most people are immune, that it is only transmitted during lengthy, close contact and that drugs can cure it and eliminate contagion.

But, said Hasselblad, "we can't close the (existing) settlements. The people are rooted here. They are here because of an accident of history, because of fear of the disease." The settlement stopped admitting patients in 1969 and has 124 residents.

The World Health Organization estimates there are 11 million leprosy cases worldwide. The disease has never been prevalent in the United States, but the recent influx of immigrants from Southeast Asia and Spanish-speaking nations has increased its incidence, health officials say.

Doctors at the U.S. Public Health Service Hospital in New York City reported the facility sees about 20 to 30 cases of leprosy a year and that the numbers tripled in the 1970s. Leprosy often goes undiagnosed for long periods, "mainly because many physicians are unaware of its existence in the continental United States," the doctors wrote. There were 188 new cases reported in the United States in 1979.

Early identification — crucial to limiting leprosy's debilitating effects because it can be cured with prompt treatment — can be insured only if health workers are trained to recognize its symptoms, said the 71-year-old Hasselblad, who spent 16 years as president of the American Leprosy Missions and now is medical director at Kalaupapa.

A disease of the sensory and motor nerves known to doctors and patients as Hansen's Disease, leprosy first attacks nerve endings in the skin. It creates patches and lesions, diminishing the skin's sensitivity to pain and temperature changes. It is only much, much later that disfigurement occurs if the leprosy is untreated.

Sulfone drugs can "arrest the progression of the symptoms" of leprosy, Hasselblad said. And in time, they also eliminate a patient's ability to transmit the infection.

But patients at settlements like Kalaupapa don't want to leave because of the stigma of leprosy — a stigma the settlements actually reinforce, Hasselblad said, maintaining lepers should be treated as outpatients with sufferers staying in their communities.

"All the public education in God's earth isn't going to solve the stigma," he said. "It is the management of the disease that creates the stigma."

Despite medical advances, only 25 percent of all leprosy victims worldwide receive regular treatment, leprologists estimate. And the very word "leper" — a term now generally avoided — conjures images of shrunken hands and feet, runny sores, knicked earlobes, punches in noses and puckered mouths.

Hasselblad said that for leprosy victims, the "inability to discern pain is the primary deformity," because cuts, bruises, burns and blisters are not felt, and infection often follows.

An infection, untreated, can spreads to the bone, which then recedes — leading to the shrinkage that people once thought was caused by a victim's fingers and toes falling off. Eventually, leprosy affects the peripheral nervous system, particularly sensory motor nerves in the arms and legs. The balanced pull of muscles across the joints is destroyed, resulting in clawed hands and humped toes.

Hasselblad said surgery and physical therapy can do much for victims.

Joe Reed, a physical therapist with the U.S. Public Health Service and a consultant to Hawaii's leprosy program, has developed special sandals to protect insensitive feet.

South Padre Island building goes on SOUTH PADRE ISLAND, Texas (AP) — Neither inflation nor erosion nor hurricanes have kept the giant cranes and bulldozers from their appointed rounds in this resort's building boom of expensive Gulf of Mexico condominiums.

Local officials expect to issue permits this year for $100 million in construction projects compared with $42 million last year.

"Every time I turn around there's something else going up I never heard of," said City Manager Kirby Lilljedahl.

Investors from Mexico and Canada have joined Texans and others in buying condominiums as second homes or for lucrative rental income.

With nautical names such as the Suntide, Surfside and Sea Vista, the highrises command prices up to $190,000 for a three-bedroom unit. That's up from $20,000 to $100,000 just three years ago.

When beachfront space dwindled, developers turned to the side of this barrier island fronting the Laguna Madre. One bayside development calls for two, 28-story towers and two, 19-story ones.

Also, the beaches of the island were blackened last year after a Mexican oil well blew, and wind and currents pushed the slick toward the Texas coast. But the Coast Guard has cleaned up all traces of the oil.

When the town of South Padre Island incorporated in 1973, six years after Hurricane Beulah ravaged the Rio Grande Valley, building along the five-mile town beach started its dramatic increase.

Last August, Hurricane Allen threatened to pound the beach with its full force — 190 mph winds — but the giant storm foundered offshore and lost power. Still the resort area suffered $40 million in property damage from the 130 mph winds.

Hurricane Allen was not a true test of the island construction, said Bob Morton of the University of Texas Bureau of Economic Geology in Austin. "The area very definitely is still hazardous," he said. Low elevation and erosion are the reasons, he added.

'Safe Summer '81' may be trimmed

Officials say they have run out of money

ATLANTA (AP) — An ambitious summer recreation program drawn up in the wake of a rash of slayings of young blacks may be trimmed because school ends this week, and Atlanta area officials say they don't have enough money.

The program, labeled "Safe Summer '81,' has been targeted for $460,000 in federal funds, but officials say another $445,800 is needed from Atlanta, $149,600 from Fulton County and $189,600 from DeKalb County.

Atlanta City Council members expressed doubts Sunday the city will be able to find its full share of funds for the program, which will include day camps with longer-than-normal hours operating under tight security.

"I think we can find some money, but I don't think we can come up with half a million dollars," said Richard Guthman, a member of the council's finance committee.

"I don't think there are city funds anywhere near the balance between what the feds have offered and the cost," Guthman said. "It will be a matter of listing priorities."

When officials began planning the recreation program earlier this year, 23 unsolved murders of black children and one disappearance of a 10-year-old black boy — all since July 1979 — were being investigated by a special police task force.

Since then, the murders of five young black adults also have been added to the task force investigation.

The task force list of 28 slayings and one disappearance has come under fire from some investigators who say the list gives the false impression that one person is responsible for all the killings.

One source close to the investigation told The Associated Press during the weekend that the list was "one of the biggest mistakes the police bureau ever made."

"Number one, it gives every ignorant person in the world the impression that all of the homicides are connected," the source said. "Two, it ensures the police will lose face when they don't make arrests in most of the cases. Three, it gives those mothers (of the victims) a special status and an excuse to collect money."

Some of the mothers of the victims have formed the Committee To Stop Children's Murders, a group that has sent representatives around the country during the past year publicizing the slayings and collecting donations for the victims' families.

The group's status as a charity, however, has been called into question in recent days, both by the Internal Revenue Service and the Georgia Governor's Office of Consumer Affairs.

IRS regional spokesman Giles Hollingsworth said Saturday the group has not been granted tax-exempt status by the IRS as a charitable organization. Without such status, the group could be required to pay federal corporate income taxes on the donations it receives, and the donors would not be able to claim their contributions as deductions on their federal income tax returns.

Georgia consumer affairs chief Tim Ryles said Sunday his office has asked consumer agencies across the country to notify donors that the Committee to Stop Children's Murders is violating Georgia law by not registering as a charitable organization.

"We're not telling people not to give them money," Ryles said. "The public can make an independent judgment once they know the facts."

Ryles recommended last week that the group be prosecuted for failing to register. After his recommendation was made public, committee representatives obtained registration forms and promised to make a public accounting of their finances this week.

Meanwhile, the latest and oldest victim on the task force list, 27-year-old Nathaniel Cater, was buried Saturday.

Cater's body was pulled from the Chattahoochee River northwest of Atlanta May 24. Medical examiners ruled that he had been asphyxiated.

Feds want big campaign; City opposed

ATLANTA (AP) — Federal health officials who claim to be on the verge of eradicating measles want to declare Philadelphia an epidemic area and move in to vanquish the nation's largest outbreak of the disease.

But city health officials say the program would disrupt the schools and they would rather wait until next school year to make a big push.

The Atlanta-based federal Centers for Disease Control wants Philadelphia to declare a citywide epidemic and immediately vaccinate "hundreds of thousands of people," said Dr. Alan Bloch, a CDC spokesman. The CDC hopes to have measles eradicated in the United States by October 1982.

City officials feel that kind of effort would be disruptive and expensive, said Dr. Robert Sharrar, director of tne division of disease control in the city Department of Public Health.

Instead, Sharrar said, the city is concentrating on small areas where the outbreak is most intense and hope to launch a wider campaign next school year.

"It might not be the control program the CDC would like to see, but it's the best we can do," Sharrar said. "We're doing the best we can with what we've got, considering all the other problems in Philadelphia."

The conflict over the Philadelphia outbreak centers on how to control measles among school-age children. About 75 percent of the city's 310 cases occurred in the schools, mostly among high school students, Sharrar said.

Bloch said the CDC wants all students who are not immunized kept out of school until they are vaccinated.

But two school strikes and large debts have disrupted the school year, and a widespread immunization would aggravate a bad situation, Sharrar said.

"The school district is funded by the number of children who attend school. They're already in debt, and it didn't seem like the right time in the public schools to allow measles to disrupt everything else," he said.

Bloch said the outbreak has spread to counties surrounding Philadelphia and into the pre-school population, where it is more difficult to control, he said.

Philadelphia had more than 10 percent of all measles cases reported in the United States this year and had more cases than the remainder of Pennsylvania and Virginia, West Virginia, Maryland, Delaware and the District of Columbia combined, Bloch said.

Despite the outbreak, which shows no sign of abating, the city will be able to meet the CDC's October 1982 deadline if the state adopts a law requiring students to have proof of immunization from kindergarten through Grade 12, Sharrar said.

Pennsylvania is one of 15 states requiring immunization against several diseases only upon entry into the school system.

"If we move into school now, we'll disrupt it for just one antigen, measles," Sharrar said. Antibodies are produced when antigens are introduced into the body.

"Next year or the year after when we'd move under the force of the law, we will disrupt it for all antigens, and that would be worth it."

Former homicide chief sues mayor, cable network for slander

ATLANTA (AP) — Mayor Maynard Jackson says the former head of the Atlanta police homicide squad, who is suing the mayor and Cable News Network for $3 million, has "no case whatsoever."

The slander suit, filed on behalf of W.K. Perry, charges that Jackson defamed him during an interview televised April 23 on a CNN program about the slayings of 28 Atlanta blacks.

"In my opinion," Jackson said after Perry's suit was filed Friday, "the man has absolutely no case whatsoever and will collect nothing from me or others."

Perry, who now is a private investigator probing the slayings, said he filed the suit because he was "humiliated" by Jackson's statements.

CNN spokeswoman Judy Borza said Sunday that officials for the 24-hour all-news network would have no comment on the suit until they had consulted with their attorneys.

The suit quotes Jackson as having said that Perry "is the former head of homicide for the city of Atlanta who was convicted of bribery, who appealed that conviction, it was overturned on technicality, not the substance of the matter, who resigned three days after the first two bodies were found, ran for sheriff of Rockdale County and lost, his own people rejected him, who is hustling for the, uh, reward which is OK, has been a staunch critic of this administration because he would prefer the racist policies of John Inman, who we fired. Now that's Brother Perry."

The suit claims that Perry never has been convicted of a crime, that his retirement letter was submitted at least four days before the discovery of the first two bodies, and that he does not "prefer the racist policies" of former police official Inman or anyone else. He also said he has promised that if reward money should come to him, he would set up a fund to be used when police officers are killed or injured in the line of duty.

Perry, who asked for $3 million damages as well as attorney's fees and court costs, said, "It shocked me that a man of his (Jackson's) caliber would make a statement like that. I felt compelled to file the suit because of the humiliation. I spent 28 years with the Atlanta police building a good reputation. That's all I've got left."

The suit said a "partial retraction" by Jackson was broadcast by CNN on May 17 in which Jackson admitted the falsity of the statement that Perry had been convicted of a crime. But Jackson failed to retract the rest of his statement, the suit said.

"I have issued a full retraction that ran on Sunday correcting the statement I made and giving the true facts which did relate to a charge of being involved in a conspiracy involving a lottery," the mayor said.

"Let me make it very clear that I think what he's unhappy about is that in the course of my retraction, my correction, I did state what the true facts were," Jackson said.

Anthropologist seeks to protect sunken ships from buccaneers

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — Treasure hunters are plundering sunken ships that vividly illustrate the United States' past, said a University of Hawaii anthropologist.

Today's treasure hunters are "well-financed buccaneers" who will use "any dodge, subterfuge or lie" to uncover booty, said Richard Gould.

Priceless shipwrecks, especially off the Florida and Texas coasts, have been "literally raped and pillaged from end to end by treasure hunters," he said.

Gould, who recently spoke in Santa Fe at a School of American Research seminar on shipwrecks, said he hoped the seminar would have "a ripple effect," leading scholars to pay greater attention to shipwrecks.

Many of the more spectacular sunken ships, the underwater "Mesa Verdes and Chaco Canyons," have been explored by professionals, he said.

But less stunning ships, ranging from ancient dugouts to the bombed United States warships in Pearl Harbor, have gone largely unnoticed, he said.

"We need to push out in all directions," Gould said. "We need to start thinking of them (sunken ships) not in terms of treasure, but in terms of history and human behavior."

Some sunken ships can be found with "china still on the table" and "food still in the cold box," he said.

A ship in such an unspoiled condition can provide information about its era, revealing details on trade, manufacturing, war-making, smuggling and other pursuits, Gould said.

But sunken ships that are intact are increasingly becoming disturbed and sometimes irreparably damaged by treasure hunters seeking gold coins, jewelry and other heirlooms, he said.

The searchers often are "unethical and illegal," but are difficult to stop because treasure hunting is so widespread and seemingly accepted by the public, Gould said.

Islanders recovering after two months adrift cruiser

A helicopter spotting fish for a San Diego-based tuna boat sighted the drifting cabin cruiser Friday, about 700 miles southeast of Guam, according to a Coast Guard spokesman on Guam.

The Abaiang Island residents were transferred to a U.S. Trust Territory vessel and taken to Moen, in Micronesia, where they were being treated for malnutrition, dehydration and exposure, according to a hospital nurse.

Some of the 21 who boarded the boat March 26 for a brief, 23-mile trip to the neighboring island of Tarawa were going on vacation, and others were taking food to market, according to Cinrata Teaanene, a police constable on Tarawa.

The boat's single engine quit, and the vessel began to drift to the west.

The nine who did not survive the ordeal apparently were buried at sea, authorities said.

After two weeks, the Kiribati Marine Guard gave up its search for the missing boat, and funeral services were held for many of the missing, Teaanene said.

"I think all the people thought they were dead but hoped they were alive," he said.

The fresh water on the overcrowded boat lasted about four days, and the food, including that which was being taken to market, was gone in about two weeks, said Coast Guard spokesman Keith Spangler in Honolulu.

From then until Friday's rescue, the islanders survived on passing rain showers and fish they could catch with their bare hands, said Spangler. When there was no rain, they drank sea water. Their last food came two weeks ago when they caught a small shark, he said.

The 12 survivors, including a 3-year-old boy, are "all on regular diets," and there have been no problems, according to the nurse at the hospital.

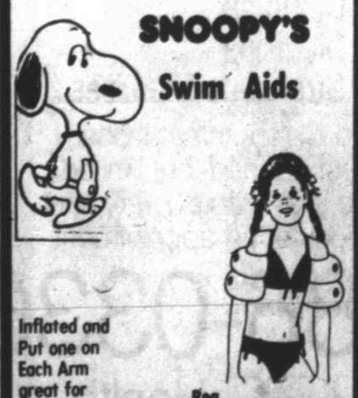

They are expected to be flown home within a week, the nurse said.

Wheelchair athletes roll into hometown

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Wheelchair-bound athletes Roger Nelson and Jerry Martin finally have rolled into their hometown after completing a 29-day, 1,-000-mile trip they're calling "the longest mile."

Nelson, 27, and Martin, 31, left May 3 on their around-the-state trip to raise money for athletic programs for the disabled. With some pledges still to be paid, Nelson said, they expect to come close to meeting their goal of $100,000.

The duo averaged about 40 miles a day, rolling along back-country roads and highways 10 to 12 hours a day.

They were accompanied by friends in cars. In some towns and cities, they stayed at the homes of supporters, but most nights were spent sleeping in a van.

"We felt like a band of roving gypsies," Nelson said.

He and Martin wheeled themselves over all types of terrain and through rain, snow, hail and heat.

"This is the hardest wheelchair run ever attempted, and we were completely successful," Nelson said.

Their trip began along the Idaho-Washington border about 17 miles northeast of Spokane and took them through Walla Walla, Yakima, Vancouver, Everett, Seattle and Olympia, where they were greeted by Gov. John Spellman.

Both appeared to be tired but in excellent health.

Their wheelchairs, however, took a beating. They had about two flats a day and the tires needed replacing four times.

The most difficult ordeal was the two-hour, 10-minute climb for 10 steep miles through heavy Memorial Day weekend traffic to 4,061-foot Stevens Pass, Nelson said.

"We were sitting on the pass 11 o'clock sharp. We partied hard, just like we're doing now," Nelson said.

Martin, a student at Spokane Falls Community College, is paralyzed from the waist down because of a construction accident 19 months ago.

Some of the money they raised will be used to purchase heavy-duty competition wheelchairs, which cost about $1,100 a piece.

"Competitiveness to a wheelchair person means a lot," Nelson said. "It gives them a spark again.

Their next goal is to be the frontrunners in the wheelchair division of the Boston Marathon.

Customs considers tighter rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — Faced with a rising tide of drugs and weapons smuggling, the Customs Service is contemplating adopting tighter rules for private planes entering the southeastern United States.

"It's a free-for-all in the Southeast," said Customs' Bob Asack of the situation along the Gulf Coast and Florida where planes arrive from the Caribbean and South America.

In the Southwest, on the other hand, private planes approaching the border are required by Customs to make radio contact with ground control and are required to land and check in at specified airports. "So when we see him on the (radar) scope approaching the border we know if he doesn't talk he's probably illegal and it's time to go after him," said Asack.

Since those rules don't apply in the Southeast, Asack said, "What we're got is about 150 targets every day coming in, in the radar environment, and they're not talking on radio, they're not displaying a transponder code and they're not on flight plan. And they're not being challenged by anybody."

The North American Air Defense Command does not bother with them because they are flying less than 200 miles per hour and the Federal Aviation Administration doesn't challenge them because they're not on a flight plan, he said.

"The only people around to challenge them are us and we can only pick six to eight a day to chase, and if a guy is going to Chicago to clear Customs it's one heck of a chase to find out whether he's legal or not," Asack said.

J. Robert Grimes of Customs' Patrol Division said there is some opposition from legitimate private pilots to extending the rule now in effect in the Southwest to the Southeast because of disruptions it would cause in their flights. Moreover, it would require the service, already short of personnel, to station agents at designated airports to monitor compliance and check arriving planes, he said.

It Customs decides to go ahead with the rule, it would have to propose it formally and then allow a period for public comment before putting it into effect.

The volume of smuggling of both drugs and weapons has risen sharply in recent months, Grimes said. For example, in the first six months of this year, agents seized 131 weapons on vessels they were inspecting, compared to 59 weapons in all of 1980, he said.

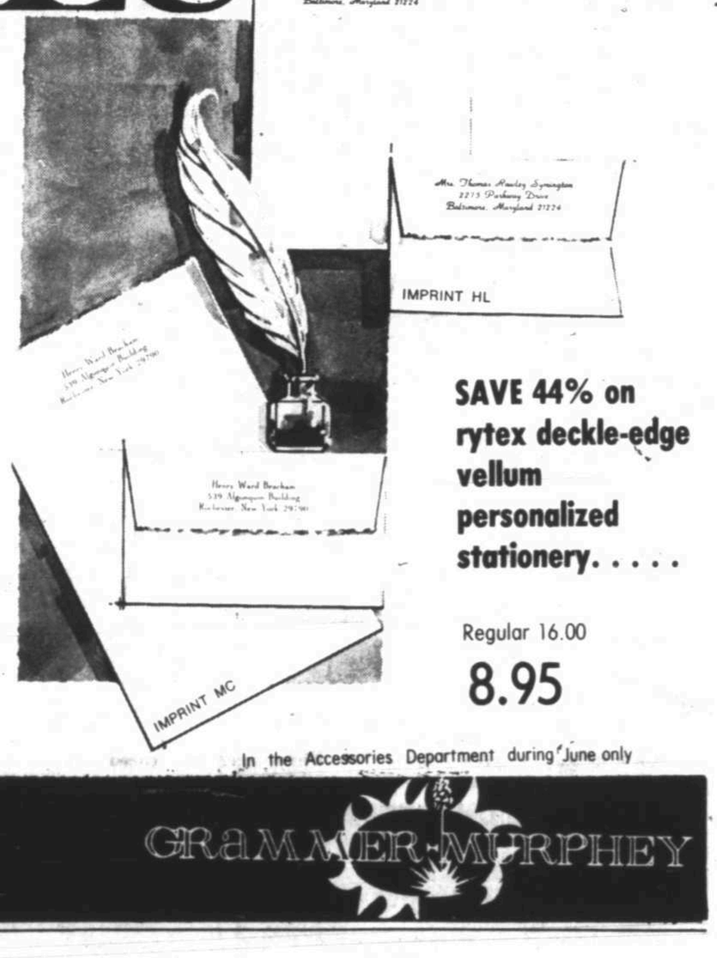

The amount of cocaine seized grew only slightly from 1980 to 1981, officials said, but there was a 93 percent boost in marijuana and hashish seizures were up 386 percent.

Customs is one of the few government agencies that could be termed profit-making.

Because of the duties it collects — along with the value of seized goods, vessels, cash, aircraft and so forth — it returned to the treasury about $18 for every $1 appropriated to run the agency in fiscal 1980.

Bess Truman remains in fair condition

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Continuing to improve from surgery on a broken hip, former First Lady Bess Truman remained in fair condition today at Research Medical Center.

Mrs. Truman experienced slight cardiac fluctuations Saturday night, but her doctor said medication apparently resolved the problem and her vital signs were stable.

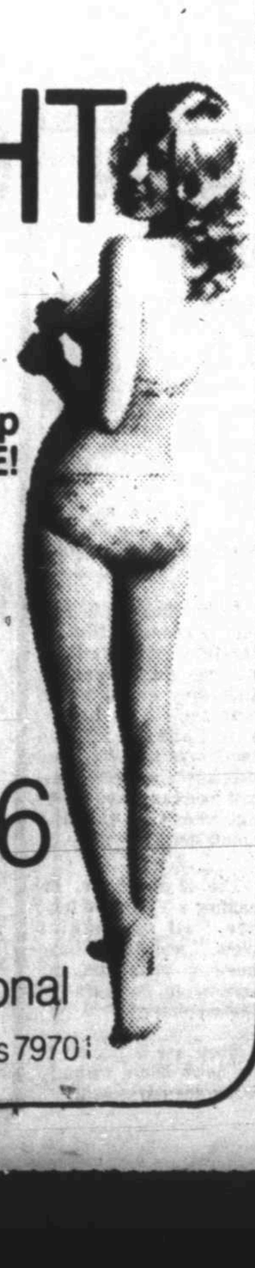

"When I came into her room this morning, she was sitting in a wheelchair," Dr. Wallace Graham said Sunday. "She said a few words and waved at me."

Variety important in planning foods for party

By WANDA MOUTON
Lifestyle Editor

"Use variety in planning your foods for a party," said Lola Igou, instructor of a one-day course at the Permian Basin Graduate Center on "The Pleasure of Your Company." The class was a seminar on how to plan a party.

Ms. Igou is a native South African who has lived in Europe and traveled widely. Being exposed to many different cuisines has also helped her to become a successful party giver and gourmet cook.

Here are some of her favorite recipes and suggestions for how to serve which she shared with the seminar participants:

OYSTERS IN CASSEROLE

1 quart shucked oysters
1/2 cup melted butter
2 shallots or 3 green onions, finely chopped
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon brandy or Scotch whiskey
2 eggs, beaten
1 cu fine cracker crumbs
2 tablespoons minced parsley
pinch of cayenne

Drain the oysters. Cut each one into two or three pices and set the pieces on a sieve as they are cut. Heat 1/4 cup of the butter. Add the shallots or green onions and sate until lightly browned. Add the cup up oysters and season with the salt, cayenne and brandy. Stir fast over high heat for one minute. Remove from the heat. Add the beaten eggs, cracker crumbs, remaining 1/4 cup melted butter and the parsley.

Bake in a 350 degree F. oven until firm like a custard and light brown on top. Serve with a bowl of hollandaise sauce. Makes 6 servings.

SPINACH SALAD

6 to 12 oz. bunches spinach, washed and dried
6 hardboiled eggs, sliced
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon brown pepper
12 strips bacon, fried crisp and chopped
3/4 cup of bacon drippings
1/2 cup of malt vinegar
1/4 cup lemon juice
4 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
1 1/2 oz. brandy or cognac

Tear spinach in bite-size pieces and put in bowl. Reserve eggs and bacon. Mix remaining ingredients except the brandy. Put in saucepan and heat until very hot. Heat brandy slightly, pour in hot sauce and ignite. Pour sauce over salad. Mix some of bacon and eggs in with salad and place some on top. Serve immediately.

HOT ARTICHOKE DIP
(Serve with tostados)

2 large cans artichoke hearts
2 cups Parmesan cheese
2 cups Hellmann's mayonnaise
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon lemon juice

Mix in two-quart casserole and bake at 325 degree F. for about 10 minutes. Don't overbake. This can also heated in microwave oven just until warm.

SWEET AND SOUR MEATBALLS

2 cups soft bread crumbs
1/2 cup milk
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1/2 teaspoon onion salt
1/2 teaspoon garlic salt
1 pound hamburger meat, lean
6 oz. can water chestnuts, drained and finely chopped
1 pound can jellied cranberry sauce
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 bottle chili sauce

Combine bread crumbs, milk, soy sauce and two salt ingredients.

Add meat and chestnuts, forming into one-inch balls.

Bake in 320 degree F. oven on cookie pan that has one inch sides (to hold grease). Bake 18-20 minutes.

Mix cranberry, chili sauce and lemon juice in saucepan until heated.

Here are some of her buffet tips:

I like to serve a vegetable, meat, fish and cheese on a cocktail buffet, she said. "I use them in combinations of pass-out hors d'oeurve and on the table.

She likes to serve bread with my pates. Any of the pates go a long way."

"It is my opinion that a cocktail held near the 7 o'clock hour is encroaching upon the dinner hour and you should serve something substantial, like a plate of cold cuts and rolls," she said.

"You may also provide small plates at a cocktail buffet, but it is not necessary if everything you serve is a pick-up food. It is a good idea to provide napkins on both the table and serving trays."

HAPPY HOUR MUSHROOMS

6 tablespoons butter, softened
1 clove garlic, minced
3 tablespoons Monterrey Jack cheese
2 tablespoons dry white wine
1 teaspoon soy sauce
1/3 cup fine cracker crumbs
10 MEDIUM size mushrooms
a little melted butter

Mix ingredients together; take a little of the melted butter and brush cavities of mushrooms (or dip in butter), and put on cookie sheet. Fill mushrooms with the ingredients to a slight mound. Put on broiler until the mushrooms brown on top.

"Mushrooms are great for buffets," said Ms. Igou. "You can also make several other stuffings, including crab, escargot and shrimp."

The following recipe is a good dish to prepare for a picnic.

HAM LOAF

1 1/2 pounds lean uncooked ham
1 1/2 pounds fresh shoulder of pork
2 eggs
1 cup milk
1 cup fine dry bread crumbs
1/4 cup minced parsley
1/2 cup light brown sugar
2 teaspoons prepared mustard

Ask your butcher to grind the meats together. If you cannot have him do this, put the meats through your meat grinder twice. Preheat oven to 325 degree F.

Add the eggs, milk, bread crumbs and parsley to the meat. Mix together, preferably with your hands, until thoroughly blended. Place in a large meat loaf pan. Spread half of the brown sugar on top of the meat. Then spread the mustard on the brown sugar and cover with the remaining sugar. Bake for 1 3/4 hours, basting 3 or 4 times with the pan juices. Makes about 8 servings.

CHICKEN-SALAD PUFFS

3 cups poached chicken
1 cup finely diced celery
1/4 cup capers
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon crumbled dried basil
40 tiny cream-puff shells
3 green onions, minced
1/4 cup minced fresh parsley
4 hard-cooked eggs, finely chopped
3 tablespoons salad oil
juice of one lemon

Use the recipe for Poached Chicken for Salad (listed below). It will provide you with plenty for this recipe. Cut the chicken into small pieces. Add celery, capers, eggs, salt, basil, green onions and parsley. Mix in mayonnaise, salad oil and lemon juice. Blend together thoroughly.

POACHED CHICKEN FOR SALAD

1 large fryer or 2 small fryers
2 leeks, washed and split
2 celery ribs with leabes
1 tablespoon salt
3 tablespoons parsley stems
1 bay leaf

Truss the fowl; it will be much easier to handle later. Cover it wih cold water, bring to a boil and cook for about 2 minutes. Discard the water and wash the pot if a lot of scum has been deposited around the sides. If you are using fryers or cut-up chicken, omit this first blanching step. Cover the bird again with water and add all the flavoring ingredients. Bring to a boil, then reduce to a simmer and poach until tender. Let the bird cool in the broth.

Remove all the meat from the bones and refrigerate it. if you wish to make stock, return the bones to the cooking pot and cook the broth for another hour. Discard the flavoring vegetables and strain the stock.

Poach fryers for 30 minutes and cutp-up chicken for about 20 minutes, or less if it is to be cooked further in some other preparation.

"Popular servings for these outdoor events are lamb, pork, shriimp and chicken," she said.

Other ideas? Teriyaki, chicken wings, and French bread served with cheese dip.

AYAM GORENG
(Fried Chicken with Plum and Spicy Mustard Sauces)

Serves 4 to 6 as main course, 12 as an hors d'oeuvre.

1 three-pouond chicken or two large whole chicken breasts.
1 cup fresh fennel, shredded to include greens
2 teaspoons Chinese 5 Fragrant Spice Powder (see recipe below)
1/2 teaspoon pepper, freshly ground
1 1/2 teaspoons salt
6 cups chicken stock

Batter:
1 cup flour
1 1/4 cups dry sherry
1/4 cup wine vinegar
Peanut oil for deep frying plum sauce (drain and puree one 15ounch can greengage plums, adding syrup if necessary to obtain consistency of a thicken sauce. If these plums are not available, use melted plum jam.
Chinese mustard (mix dry mustard wih sufficient water and a few drops of oil to obtain consistency of prepared mustard)

Place chicken, fennel, spice powder, pepper, salt and chicken stock in a 6-quart Dutch oven. Bring to just under a boil, cover, and simmer until chicken is tender, about 40-45 minutes for a whole chicken, 20 minutes for chicken breasts. Drain. Remove skin and bones, cut into 1 1/2 inch pieces.

In a 2-quart bowl, combine flour, sherry and vinegar. Mix thoroughly to make a light batter. Dip chicken into batter and deep fry in 350 degree F. oil. Drain on absorbent paper. Keep warm in low oven.

Serve with plum sauce or Chinese mustard.

CHINESE FIVE-SPICE POWDER

2 tablespoons cracked black peppercorns
12 three-inch sticks whole cinnamon
12 whole star anise
30 whole cloves
2 tablespoons fennel seeds

Pulverize all ingredients to a powder in a blender, electric grinder or mortar. Stores for over a year. Use sparingly with meat and poultry; never more than 1/2 teaspoon per pound of meat.

"On special occasion parties, bring the cake out wih a flourish," said Ms. Igou.

"If you are hosting a bridal party, it is a nice idea to provide a cutting knife for the bride to use on her cake on the wedding day."

For baby showers, use simple decorations in white or pastel colors. Toast the expectant mother with sherry, and serve simple foods.

When she serves sandwiches for special occasions, she doesn't simply put filling between two slices of bread and serve.

"I like rolled sandwiches," she said. "Cut off the bread crust, roll bread flat with a rolling pin, fill and roll up."

She advises putting a thin layer of butter on all sandwiches.

Some fillings can include cream cheese with a touch of Tabasco sauce seasoning; cream cheese, chopped chieves and well-drained asparagus; cream cheese and dill weed; or the familiar pimento cheese, egg filling and tuna fillings.

A quickie hors d'oeuvre can be made by buying refrigerated butterflake rolls, flattening, and putting in miniature buttered muffin pans. Fill with any quiche filling.

Ribbons welcome ship crew

PEARL HARBOR, Hawaii (AP) — Yellow ribbons have become symbols saying, "We missed you, welcome back," to Americans returning home.

So when the wives or girlfriends of Navy men aboard ships of Destroyer Squadrons (DesRon) 25 and 33 were looking for a means to really welcome home their men from a seven-month Indian Ocean deployment, yellow ribbons proved to be the answer.

All five thousand of them.

That's the number of yellow ribbons that greeted 1,880 crewmen aboard the seven DesRon ships as they steamed into port here.

The ribbons were everywhere along the harbor entrance: on trees, bushes, boulders, pipes, fences. You couldn't walk three feet most places without touching one.

Phyllis Mann, whosé husband is aboard the guided missile frigate USS Ouellet, one of the returning ships, said she got the yellow ribbon idea after seeing the reception the American hostages received when they returned from Iran.

"Our husbands were on station in the Arabian Sea when the hostages came back," she said. "We thought it would be nice to show them how glad we were to have them home.

"We tied yellow ribbons to everything: tree branches, rocks, fences, and fishermen who didn't move fast enough. Our husbands knew they were welcomed home."

Mrs. Mann and other wives from the Ouellet scoured the island of Oahu for bed sheets to make ribbons.

Dresser to the stars leads show business life

By JACQUELINE TRESCOTT
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Maurice Chevalier once sang for her. She has fought with David Merrick. She has been kissed by Herbert Marshall. On nights when they just didn't feel like facing the lights, she has pushed Lauren Bacall and Maureen Stapleton onto the stage. She has met the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, Bobby Kennedy, Truman Capote — as she says it, "the best."

By definition, Eloise White is a dresser to the stars, the nimble finger who strips and zips the actress between scenes, the arranger who makes sure that the fox stole is on the right stage chair for the right exit, the dressing-room gendarme who serves the tea and honey and admits the chosen and shoos away the unwanted. White recalls Sarah Marshall, one of her mentors, first describing the job: "When the half-hour call comes you must be quiet, you must not tell the star anything that is not very pleasant, and try not to talk."

White, who is here working with Stapleton on "The Little Foxes," is anything but quiet. Her presence visually and vocally fills a room. She tells her story in the laughing crackle and sighing darling-filled shorthand of the theater.

Age? She leaves you guessing her late 50s. Years in the business? At least 25, if her memory is right about the year of her first job, "The Reluctant Debutante."

White is sitting by her hotel-apartment window, training an eagle eye on the comings and goings of the understudies. She is an ample woman with an eclectic dress style that might be a bag lady's by circumstance but is hers by choice. She knows she is a grand original and takes dramatic amusement with her insider's knowledge.

Names are wickedly introduced. "The first play, well, I think it was, well, I worked for Tennessee in two of his plays," she says. Most of her associations are embellished by one qualifier — rich or not rich. As in, "Yes, yes, Herbert Marshall was married to Edna Best, but not at the time. She was married to another very rich man then."

Hers is not the story of someone who desperately wanted a break, someone like playwright Lorraine Hansberry, who once said she would do anything to get into the theater, "even be a dresser." White — who used to ask her teen-age boyfriends back in Newport News, Va., "Why don't you kiss like Herbert Marshall?" — says she was very happily working as a housewife in New York, wishing for a big family, occasionally helping her husband with his property management task, when ...

"I think I was sitting on a stoop one day, just got married, my husband didn't want me to work. A well-dressed white lady came up, we didn't see many white people in our area. I got up, let the lady in, she thought I was so nice, the woman she came to see was sick. She was her cook and (the visitor) needed someone to answer the phone," recalls White.

From that brief job, White met actress Edna Best and started taking care of her daughter, Sarah Marshall. Best then recommended White as a nanny for Stapleton's daughter. "Best told her I was very talented and was going far, and this is as far as I have gotten," she laughs.

That association led to an enviable life in show business. She has worked with Elaine Stritch, who gave her one of White's trademark poodles; then did three plays with Bacall (which earned her a passage in Bacall's autobiography), did "The Gin Game," "Plaza Suite" and "The Gingerbread Lady" with Stapleton, three more plays with Kaye Ballard, and scores of others. Occasionally she has dressed several principals in a single show.

The hardest jobs for a dresser, she says, are the musicals like "Applause." "We had three girls dressing Bacall. You change stockings this way," she says, bending to demonstrate her full face absolutely serious. "You open up the tights, the feet this way." She opens her arms into a "V," and continues, "and have the hole there. One girl has to stand here with the dress, holding it. I have to strip her (Bacall) down and the other girl reaches down and pulls up the stockings. She steps in the dress. I have to have sheets all around, then I throw this $2,000 dress there. She gets up and goes back on stage."

Dramatic plays, such as "Foxes," have fewer changes. "I only dress Maureen between acts here. Then I do the pre-setting. The coat she wears I hang on the rack when I first get there," says White. When the pace is slower, she crochets, "reads dirty books" and writes letters. She is also studying Christian Science. "But I like a little champagne and Jack Daniels and they don't believe in that," she adds with a slightly wicked glimmer in her eye.

The backstage crises and conflicts that make legendary gossip are sealed inside White's code of confidence. Her anecdotes are as enticing as taffy and need just as much pulling to get at. She has quit shows. "Oh, I don't want to name them because they were colored, they didn't tip, so I just walked away," says White, whose union requires a minimum of $350 a week. "Plus I usually get a $50-a-week tip."

On Stapleton: "She was very downhearted when she was getting her divorce. I almost had to put her on stage. You have to do that with all of them."

On Bacall: "I wouldn't tell you about our little to-do once," she says and then recalls the same scene Bacall wrote about in her book. "I was fussing for more money and David Merrick wouldn't give it to me. I was working for her, I was going to leave. But she fought for me. I told her Mr. Merrick might have been born rich, but I wasn't. Some people wouldn't work for Bacall, they say she is difficult. One thing about her, I like perfection backstage — she is."

But what happens when her regular employers, such as Bacall and Stapleton, are both involved in major plays? Did she have a conflict between "Foxes" and "Woman of the Year," which has just opened on Broadway? "This one I wouldn't take, 'Woman of the Year.' I knew this ('Little Foxes') was coming up," says White, who reads the trades and listens to the grapevine. She learned "Foxes" would open in Florida, a place she had never been. She had her bags packed before Stapleton called. She loved Florida. She brings out a scrapbook. "That was on the boat that Elizabeth (Taylor) hired, 'The Monkey Business' ... this is the partying-est show!" she says.

DEAR ABBY

Readers throw curves to bowlegged boy

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Your answer to BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE was both unkind and unhelpful. You advised this 18-year-old boy to see a psychiatrist or psychologist. Now the poor kid will not only worry about his bowlegs, but he'll think he's mentally disturbed, too!

Your only other advice was to recite a prayer to an imaginary deity. What cop-out advice! Why didn't you name some famous people who are bowlegged yet attractive? Or you could have suggested wearing loose trousers.

Your blanket advice that people seek psychiatric help for minor problems is lazy, uncaring and potentially harmful to the spirit and the pocketbook. Next time someone like this boy writes, give him what he asks for — common-sense advice. — INDIGNANT IN MADISON

DEAR INDIGNANT: BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE got my best advice. A good-looking 18-year-old who perceives himself to be "deformed and inferior" (his words) and is afraid to ask a girl for a date because he's moderately bowlegged needs more than a list of "bowlegged yet attractive" people. He needs a more realistic perception of himself.

Furthermore, one need not be mentally disturbed to seek psychotherapy. A temporary emotional upset is sufficient reason. And as for psychotherapy being "harmful" to the spirit and pocketbook — poppycock! The spirit will be nourished, and there are mental health clinics everywhere that charge only what the patient can afford.

DEAR ABBY: This is not a request for advice, it's a message to BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE:

I grew up with one side of my face paralyzed, and although it set me apart from everyone else and caused people to remember my name, I yearned to be like everyone else. At times I begged God to make me look "normal." But having to accept my flaw has helped me become emotionally stronger than I would have been had I been able to "correct" my condition — which, of course, was impossible. Now I have my own separate identity.

I saw a psychiatrist, as Abby suggested you do. A trained professional will let you lay your cards out, then the two of you will go over them together. In the end, however, it is you who will decide how your cards will be played. Try to be less preoccupied with your appearance, think positively, and keep a sharp eye out for that villain of all villains — self-pity.

Because I can accept myself as I am, I have made it. By the way, I am 26 and pulling for you. — HAPPY IN HOUSTON

DEAR ABBY: This is for that 18-year-old boy who is BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE: I am a 30-year-old single male, considered attractive by women, and I am about as bowlegged as they come.

When I was 18, I also felt self-conscious, but that never stopped me from asking a girl for a date. I just made up my mind that nobody's perfect and there are worse imperfections than having bowed legs. At least mine were strong and healthy and got me where I was going. (They even took me to the beach where my legs were in full view of the public.)

Keep this in mind: Any girl who would refuse to go out with a guy because he is bowlegged isn't worth spending your time and money on.

So, from one bowlegged guy to another, ask girls for dates and forget about your legs. Life is too short to do otherwise. — BOWLEGGED AND NOT MISERABLE

DEAR ABBY: TELL BOWLEGGED AND MISERABLE not to waste any more time feeling sorry for himself. There are plenty of girls who would be glad to go out with him. I, for one, think bowlegged guys are sexy. — TRUDY IN WILMINGTON, N.C.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Phooey on ice cube trays

DEAR HELOISE:

Am I the only one who feels defeated by ice cube trays?

My metal ones, with the lift-up handles, broke a long time ago, and I find the plastic ones are cracking and the ice cubes sticking.

I can't afford to continually replace these ice cube trays, and I surely can't afford a new ice-maker refrigerator, though I dream about it a lot.

Any suggestions? — Cracked Up

+ + +

If you can't afford a new ice maker, the next best thing would be someone to fill up the trays for you! It's the pits, right?

I think the main cause of cracking trays is filling them too full with water, and we're all guilty of this.

Resist the urge for a full tray so the ice will go further. Give that tray a little tip when you fill it and pour off about a quarter inch of water.

You'll find the ice will pop right out, and your trays will last longer than you ever imagined.

Now YOU tell ME how you get the tray from the sink to the fridge without spilling it. — Hugs, Heloise

FOR THE BIRDS

Dear Heloise: If your trash can becomes rusty and dented beyond use but its lid miraculously survives, recycle it.

Prop it upside down between a couple of bricks or on top of an old bucket. Place it near a tree or some bushes, fill with water, and watch the birds frolic and splash. — E.A.

COOL DRINK

Dear Heloise: With cold drinks in greater demand and the price of sugar getting no cheaper, I've come up with a pretty good solution.

Whenever I mix up a powdered drink mix, I substitute canned fruit juices from pears, peaches, pineapple, fruit cocktail, etc. for some of the water.

Since the juice is sweet, I cut down on the amount of sugar added.

Not only is it a little more nutritious, but the added flavor adds a little zip. — C.G.

+ + +

BAGGIN' IT

Dear Heloise: Whenever I take my portable radio to the swimming pool or the beach, I always secure it inside a plastic bag.

I use a bag large enough so I can easily change the stations without having to remove the bag.

No water or sand gets to the radio to damage it, and the plastic doesn't interfere with the sound. — Barbara

+ + +

Heaven forbid that anything sh/uld reduce the sound. — Heloise

BABY STROLLER

Dear Heloise: Whenever I take my baby for a walk in his stroller I secure a sheet of nylon net over the stroller with a piece of elastic.

The net doesn't touch him or keep the air from reaching him, but it sure keeps the little bugs and gnats from buzzing around his head. — Mrs. C.

CUTTING EDGE

Dear Heloise: Save one of those metal cutting edges from a box of foil or plastic wrap.

It's perfect for tearing clippings out of magazines or newspapers. — J.N.

+ + +

Most of you could handle this, but if you're prone to be a klutz like me — watch out! That cutting edge is sharp! — Heloise

+ + +

Have a good idea for recycling something useful? Send it to Heloise care of this newspaper. She can't answer your letter personally but, sure as money saved is money earned, she'll use the thriftiest ideas in her column.

JAPANESE SCREEN

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Japanese screen by Yosa Buson, a master of the Nanga (Southern) School of painting in Japan, has been acquired by the Los Angeles County Museum of Art.

According to George Kuwayama, senior curator of Far Eastern art, Buson, an 18th-century master, is one of Japan's three best Haiku poets and a towering figure in the history of Japanese painting.

The screen was acquired through a donation from the Frederick Wiseman Co.

Shawn Mash, a clinical hypnotist, explains the damage smoking can do at a quit-smoking session at Health Clinics International at 2503 W. Ohio Ave. Mash hypnotizes as well as teaches self-hypnosis to individuals and groups wishing to stop smoking, lose weight or deal with stress. New sessions begin each week. To learn more, call Health Clinics International at 686-0336.

Health Clinics' hypnotist wants to help all failures

Health Clinics International has recently opened an office in Midland at 2503 W. Ohio Ave.

Renown in Dallas as a foremost clinic to reduce weight and stop smoking, Health Clinics International offers a three-prong approach centered around hypnosis.

Shawn Mash, a clinical hypnotist for both the Dallas center and the Midland center, says Health Clinic's work is different from other "quit" groups. "We want all the failures," he said, "because we'll get them and help them."

Beginning with a free orientation session, the Clinic explains how participants will learn to help themselves in curbing appetites, cigarette addiction or anxiety attacks. The orientation helps the individual understand why he or she is addicted, why he or she started this habit and how he or she can control it.

Mash uses his "bull-rope of addiction" speech to show participants they must first break down the problem before they can begin to control it.

In the second session, participants are hypnotized as a group. Unlike theatrical hypnotism, Health Clinic's hypnotism processes do not force anyone to "act like a chicken." At Health Clinic, only certified professional hypnotists with at least 200 hours of instruction and practice will help you to get to your subconscious.

What's more, Health Clinics International offers a third step — behavior modification — for your continued progress. Providing a special diet, doing a personality study and teaching a mind-writing technique are but a few modifications done at Health Clinics.

"Mind-writing is used to ventilate the situation and it gives them the something to do," Mash explained. "Their thoughts tend to work themselves out of the body. It's the same system I developed for myself."

Himself a reformed smoker, Mash suffers from arterial phlebitis, which causes clotting in the circulatory system. He quit smoking through the techniques he teaches.

To learn more about Health Clinics International and what hypnosis and self-hypnosis can do for your or your company's personnel, give them a call at 686-0336, or come by 2503 W. Ohio Ave.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Tuesday, June 2, 1981

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Johnny Weissmuller—the most famous "Tarzan" of them all—shares this birthday with you, as does actress Sally Kellerman. In the coming year, you can expect to both make and spend more money. Career goals come into clearer focus. Employment matters can be a bit tricky at times, but eventually you will emerge on top! A born peacemaker, you are often called upon to mediate arguments. Be careful not to let the petty quarrels of others drain your energies. Although romance is mostly happy, marital relations can become somewhat strained now and then. Give loved ones the same devotion you show your work.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A phone call could bring very good news. Depend on yourself rather than relying on others. You should be prepared to make a romantic decision tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Some very positive influences affect your life now. Use your time to good advantage. Stand up for your rights when it comes to domestic matters. Keep a tight rein on your purse strings.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): You will have to be persuasive if you are to improve your business position. Diplomacy is very important now. Clear the air with mate before making a major decision.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Vacation plans come into view. Take advantage of an opportunity to work overtime. Secret love affair may end but not unhappily. Look to the future with confidence!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Dress your best today. Events of which you are unaware may trigger new opportunities. Fulfill your work obligations promptly and cheerfully. Leo singles could be in love.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Be careful not to fall behind at work. Self-discipline is the key to greater success. Come to grips with paper work even if you find it boring. Double-check all figures to avoid costly mistakes.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Interesting events are taking place overseas now. Strengthen business and financial ties. Mate is willing to lend a helping hand. Show your appreciation in tangible ways.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Before signing your name on the dotted line, investigate a unique opportunity. Romance may cause some heartaches. Use extra tact when dealing with loved ones.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Be sure your conduct is above reproach at all times. Unsettled conditions may put your nerves on edge. Tend to routine tasks. Tackle work assignments with enthusiasm and a smile.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Avoid wasting time on flights of fancy. Take care of routine chores and exercise self-discipline. Give a wide berth to the get-rich-quick schemes of well-meaning friends.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Conclude business agreements only after reading the fine print. Ask a lawyer or accountant to become involved. Creative projects that you handle on your own are most rewarding.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Inventive thinking plus hard work will bring you good luck where career, finances are concerned. You achieve better rapport with loved one. A secret that you share brings joy.

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠987 ♡A1063 ◇AK63 ♣Q8
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	Pass	1 ♡	Pass
2 ♠	Pass	2 ◇	Pass
3 ♠	Pass	?

What do you bid now?
A.—Don't take a stab at three no trump—partner had a chance to show a spade stopper, but passed it by. It is simply a question of bidding four clubs or five clubs. Even if partner's opening is feather light, he must have at least six or seven clubs headed by the ace-king and an outside king, so there will be reasonable play for eleven tricks. Bid five clubs.

Q.2—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K6 ♡QJ8 ◇AQ105 ♣AQ98
Your right-hand opponent opens the bidding with one diamond. What action do you take?
A.—If your black-suit holdings were reversed, you might consider a takeout double. As it is, you are unprepared to handle a response in either major, so we suggest that you make the bid which describes your balanced 16-18 point hand with stoppers in the enemy suit. Bid one no trump.

Q.3—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠95 ♡Q87 ◇632 ♣K10742
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass	Pass
2 ♡	3 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—You started out with a poor hand, and nothing has happened in the auction to improve it one whit. Pass.

Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠10962 ♡K4 ◇632 ♣Q984
The bidding has proceeded:

North	East	South	West
1 ♠	2 ◇	Pass	Pass
2 ♡	3 ◇	?

What action do you take?
A.—No, this is not a repetition of the previous problem, even though the point count of the two responding hands is the same. This time you have four-card support for partner's first suit and the king doubleton in his second—two key features. Not to bid three spades would be a dereliction of duty, and we wouldn't blame you if you took the aggressive course of leaping to four spades!

Q.5—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J7 ♡QJ93 ◇Q1087 ♣KQ6
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♠	Pass

What do you bid now?
A.—Since you are a passed hand, you can afford to jump to two no trump. Had you not passed originally, that bid would show 13-15 points. Now, however, it shows a hand that is just a bit short of an opening bid, i.e., 11-12 points and balanced. Partner should not proceed to game unless his opening bid is better than dead minimum.

Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠7 ♡KQ85 ◇KJ107 ♣8632
The bidding has proceeded:

South	West	North	East
Pass	Pass	1 ♡	Pass

Schub wins Van Cliburn piano competition

By SYLVIA LEE
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Andre-Michel Schub Sunday won one of the music world's most lucrative prizes — the $12,000 gold medal of the Sixth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition — then topped it off with a concerto performance he termed "almost an impossible task."

Schub played Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat, Opus 19, the piece he had prepared for the competition finals.

"I'm in a stupor. I'm extremely happy. It is the first step in what I've been dreaming about," he said.

Though the competition route is rugged and sometimes criticized in music circles, "there has to be a way for people to be recognized and get concert opportunities," said the 28-year-old French-born New Yorker. "The advantage is that you are heard."

Schub, a preliminary favorite with an established reputation as a soloist, was one of the few contestants permitted to enter without a videotaped audition. He has appeared in the Great Performers Series at Alice Tully Hall in New York, and in a "Live From Lincoln Center" broadcast with the Lincoln Center Chamber Music Society.

Born in Paris, Schub came to the United States as an infant and began studying piano with his mother at the age of four.

He studied music at the Curtis Intitute of Music in Philadelphia and also attended Princeton University.

Second place honors were shared by Panayis Lyras, also of New York, and Santiago Rodriguez of Adelphi, Md.

They will split a total of $1,400 — the combined prizes for second and third places.

Schub was cited by an international jury of 11 judges as having delivered the "most consistently superior performances" during the annual two-week competition, which began May 17. He was one of six finalists.

Lyras, 27, trained at Athens Conservatory and the Juilliard School of Music, winning the silver medal in the Arthur Rubenstein International Piano Competition in Tel Aviv last year.

Rodriguez, 29, trained at the University of Texas in Austin and at Juilliard and is now an instructor at the University of Maryland. He was a finalist in the Leventritt International Competition in 1977.

The fourth place winner was Jeffrey Kahane, 24, of Piedmont, Calif. Kahane was a quarterfinalist in the Chopin International Compitition in Warsaw last year. He trained at the San Francisco Conservatory of the Juilliard School of Music.

Christopher O'Riley, 25, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., took fifth place honors in the Van Cliburn. He won second prize in the Montreal International Piano Competition in 1980. He trained at the New England Conservatory in Boston.

Zhu Da Ming, 29, of the People's Republic of China, played his way to a sixth place finish. He trained at the Central Conservatory of Music at Peking and won the International Music Competition of Japan in 1980. Ming was one of two performers from the People's Republic entered in the Van Cliburn for the first time.

For the first time, no contestants were entered from the Soviet Union, which is still in a cultural exchange freeze with the U.S. following American protests over the Soviets' 1979 invasion of Afghanistan.

FCC chairman pledges less regulation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "unregulation" of telecommunications will take control of the industry away from the government and give it to consumers and entrepeneurs, the new head of the Federal Communications Commission says.

The FCC, more than any other other regulatory agency, "will make the decisions that will affect the type of society this country will have in years to come," Chairman Mark S. Fowler said Sunday as the 30th annual convention of the National Cable Television Association wound up a three-day meeting here.

"There is an unbearable arrogance, I think, when any agency acts as if it knows all about how individual technologies ought to operate," Fowler said.

"Cable is where it is today because of the imagination and enterprise of its people," said Fowler, a former communications lawyer sworn in May 18.

Noting the FCC has not always had a cohesive regulatory policy, Fowler said he and the five other commissioners had adopted five objectives:

—Update and streamline procedures to provide efficient and expeditious service.

—Promote and coordinate international communications to "assure the vital interests of America in commerce, defense and foreign policy," and

Fowler said the common thread that runs through all of the objectives "like a bright, scarlet ribbon, is what I call — perhaps ungrammatically — unregulation. Insofar as a regulatory philosophy of government, we shall not be moving toward 1984, but away from it."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Lauren Bacall says "The Fan," her new film, "is much more violent than when I read the script." But she says she's even more upset at suggestions the movie is a dramatization of John Lennon's murder.

"The movie I wanted to make had more to do with what happens to the life of the woman — and less blood and gore," Miss Bacall said in an interview with People magazine.

The film, about a psychotic admirer who stalks an aging actress, was finished four years ago, but some parts of the movie are similar to the December murder of the ex-Beatle. To make matters worse, Miss Bacall, 56, lives in the same Manhattan apartment house — the Dakota — where Lennon lived. He was shot to death outside the building.

Discovery finaled in Ward County

WARD COUNTY

Gulf Oil Corp. of Midland has completed the No. 1009 Hutchings Stock Association as a Pennsylvanian discovery in Ward County, four miles south of Wickett.

Potentialed to flow 132 barrels of 37.2 gravity oil per day plus 23 barrels of water through an 11/64-inch choke, production was gained through Pennsylvanian perforations at 8,631 to 8,636 feet which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons.

Total depth of the well is 9,000 feet with 5 1/2 inch casing set on bottom and plugged back to 8,774 feet. The elevation was 2,604 feet.

CRANE COUNTY

Henderson & Erickson f Midland will drill the No. 1 Cowden, a 6,500-foot wildcat to test the Devonian in Crane County, seven miles west of Crane.

Drillsite is 3,500 feet northeast of the 6,448-foot Southland Royalties No. 1 W. Wright et al "M" abandoned Nov. 22, 1953 and approximately one mile southeastof a Devonian discovery.

REEVES COUNTY

Kirby Exploration Co. of Houston has filed location for a 7,500-foot wildcat in Reeves County six miles south of Pecos.

Coastal Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Jean Spencer Trust, a 12,800-foot wildcat in Reeves County, ten miles north of Toyah.

Location is 1,320 from the north and west lines of section 33, block 55, T-5 of the T&P survey.

Church optimistic striking coal miners will endorse contract to end strike

By The Associated Press

United Mine Workers President Sam Church, on a lobbying swing through Eastern coal country, says he is optimistic that striking miners will endorse a proposed contract and end a two-month walkout that has seen one tentative agreement rejected by the rank and file.

"I think we got a good contract," Church said Sunday after explaining the document to 100 miners in Birmingham, Ala. "I can't see any reason why they (the miners) would go against it."

Some of the miners who crowded into the UMW District 20 headquarters to hear Church said they would withhold judgment about the contract until they get a chance to look at it. Miners should have copies by Tuesday or Wednesday.

Church was scheduled to continue his week-long contract explanation tour this morning at a UMW rally in Welch, W.Va. and address a second rally later in the day in Beckely, W.Va.

The 160,000 UMW members went on strike March 27 and rejected by a 2-1 margin the first proposed contract arrived at by union negotiators and the industry. Southern West Virginia was a center of opposition to the first tentative accord. In some coalfield appearances then, miners jeered Church, calling him "Sellout Sam."

Miners objected to a provision that would have ended royalties to the union if companies covered by the contract processed non-union coal. The royalties are included in the new proposed pact.

The second proposal, tentatively agreed to last week, may be voted on by the rank and file as early as Saturday.

"People's got a little different attitude this time," said David Vidovich, president of Local Union 5869 in West Virginia's District 17. "They're not squabbling to get a copy of the contract like they were last time — but then they haven't heard the bad things about this one that they had about the last one."

Church was expected to go to Virginia and Kentucky Tuesday, followed Wednesday by trips to Ohio, northern West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Church was scheduled to spend Friday in District 17 in southern West Virginia — the union's largest, most militant, district.

A ratification vote has been slated for Saturday, but the union's constitution requires miners be given 48 hours to consider the contract after it is explained to them in local meetings. If the vote is Saturday, the miners could return to work as early as next Monday.

Under the new contract, the price companies pay the union for processing a ton of non-union coal was raised from $1.90 to $2.33, with the money going into the union's health and welfare funds.

"It sounds pretty good to me," said Warren Frye, a Jefferson County, Ala. miner. "I'll have to see it and read it before I make up my mind. We've been out for two months, and it would defeat our purpose to give in. I think everybody is ready to go back if it's a good contract."

The negotiated pay raise would increase miners' hourly wage by $1.30 the first year, with four 50-cent raises over the next three years.

"When you look at the overall package, you'll see we made a lot of gains," Church said. "I'm not saying to vote for it or not to vote for it. Read it, listen to the explanations and make up your own minds."

Floating electricity plant gets backing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A consortium of state agencies and utilities wants $300 million in federal money to build a floating plant off the Florida Keys that would exploit differences in ocean temperatures to power an electric generator.

The Florida Ocean Thermal Energy Consortium planned to send its experts to Washington this week to explain details of the project to a technical review team of the Department of Energy.

Dr. Ross McCluney, the project's technical adviser, said electricity would be generated on the huge floating platform by using temperature differences between surface water and water 2,000 feet down.

Warm surface water would vaporize ammonia that would turn a turbine. The vapor would be piped down to the depths where the cooler water would condense it into a liquid.

"We'll be down to basically a waiting game until they decide whether to fund the first phase of the project in the coming fiscal year," says Louis Rotundo, deputy program manager.

The Florida association's proposal for a 40-megawatt plant floating off Key West by 1986 is the only project that would be situated in the continental 48 states.

Eight proposals have been submitted to Congress and the Department of Energy by Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Guam.

The Florida project is the only plant that would be aboard a floating platform. The others would be based on land adjacent to the sea or anchored on the continental shelf.

The DOE's budget for research and development of this kind was scrapped earlier this year, but Senate and House committees tenatively have restored about $30 million or more for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

Out of that, about $6 million is expected to be used to pay for the first year's work for four to six ocean-water projects. The proposals selected will be announced late this summer.

Dr. Paul Yuen of the University of Hawaii, who conducted a study of the principle for the department, said at an Orlando conference earlier this year that a commercial-size system must be built quickly to meet a national goal of 10,000 megawatts of thermal power by 1999.

Under the Florida plan, supported by Gov. Bob Graham and most of the state's congressional delegation, the Key West project would receive about $250 million in federal money over five years. Florida would contribute at least $50 million.

The plan is for Key West's City Electric Co. to buy the plant once it is operating and use the electricity for its own 17,000 consumers. The plant eventually would be expanded and additional production distributed into the southern Florida mainland.

Eddy, Chaves counties file wildcat locations

CHAVES COUNTY

Wayne Moore of Imperial has surveyed location for an 8,500-foot new field wildcat test in Eddy County, New Mexico, nine miles southwest of Malaga.

The wildcat is the No. 1 Moore State, located 1,980 feet from the north and east lines of section 23, township 25 south, range 27 east.

Drillsite is 3 1/2 miles east of Strawn gas production in the Cottonwood Draw field and about nine miles southeast of Bone Spring production in the Black River field.

CHAVES COUNTY

Coronado Exploration Corp. of Houston will drill the No. 1 Miller as a 2,300-foot wildcat in Chaves County, New Mexico, 16 miles northeast of Dexter.

Drillsite is 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 29, township 11 south, range 28 east and is two miles southeast of San Andres oil production in the Chisum, East field.

Exxon chairman sees stable gas, oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices of gas and heating oil should be "relatively stable" for at least six months following the decision by oil producing nations not to raise their prices, Exxon chairman Clifton Garvin Jr. said Sunday.

In addition, he said he believes there will be a sufficent supply of energy products for consumers over he same tme period and "hopefully longer" because of the action by the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries.

"It seems to me the OPEC people didn't agree on some things," Garvin said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" program. "They agreed to go away and come back again. As far as I know, that meeting is not scheduled until the end of the year."

Garvin also said Exxon continues to "have more oil than we see a market for."

As a result of that oil glut, he said the company has begun to tell its suppliers it needs smaller quantities and that it will not pay OPEC's prices.

Because of recession and lower fuel use, Garvin said such an oil glut could possibly last "quite a few months, maybe a year or more," even with the OPEC decision to cut production by 10 percent.

He said that although he expects more crude oil will be discovered, there is not enough to meet all the world's future energy needs.

"We can't rely on oil for decades and decades to come and for all the energy we need," he said.

Fisher County wildcat planned

Weitzel & Sons Inc. of Abilene has announced plans to drill a 3,750-foot new field wildcat in Fisher County, two miles northwest of Sylvester.

The venture is the No. 1 F.E. Bayouth, located 6,150 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the west line of the T.H. Cosby No. 321 survey.

The site is three miles southwest of a 3,410-foot Palo Pinton production in Alkali Creek, Southwest field.

Report says Kuwait has $7 billion in American securities

CHICAGO (AP) — Oil-rich Kuwait has amassed close to $7 billion worth of American securities, and that amount could swell to roughly $8 billion by the end of the year, according to a published report.

In a copyright story in Sunday's editions, the Chicago Tribune said it had obtained confidential bank documents detailing for the first time with an OPEC nation's holdings in the United States.

Those documents, the newspaper said, "dispute the repeated statements of the Treasury Department and officals of other government agencies that OPEC's billions in petroleum revenues invested in the United States are going primarily into short-term money-market securities, such as Treasury bills.

"They also raise serious questions as to the extent of the equity holdings by other OPEC producers, including Saudi Arabia, the biggest oil exporter of all," the newspaper said.

Kuwait, OPEC's second-largest oil producer with petroleum revenues last year of $18.6 billion, has acquired from 1 to more than 2 percent of the common shares of a large number of America's biggest companies, according to the report.

Those firms include Dow Chemical, J.C. Penney, McDonald's, Honeywell, Burroughs, General Mills, K mart, Caterpillar Tractor, General Electric, Burlington Industries, Ralston Purina, Associated Dry Goods Corp. and Kerr-McGee, according to the report.

Other companies in which Kuwait has an interest of 1 percent or more include Firestone Tire and Rubber, J.P. Stevens, Cheesebrough-Ponds, International Flavors and Fragrances, Procter & Gamble, Standard Brands, Baxter Travenol Laboratories, American Home Products and Data General.

"The documents, which also detail private meetings between Citibank (Kuwait's adviser on U.S. securities) and Kuwaiti officials, reveal that the OPEC producer is unhappy with that bank's management of its funds and has threatened to shift its assets to another bank," said the newspaper.

Citing an example, the Tribune said, "One Kuwaiti investment official suggested that because the shares of Arco (Atlantic Richfield) usually move up and down 2 to 3 points in a week, 'We should trade 10,000 shares ... selling at the high and then buying back 2 or 3 points lower.'"

"Considering the Kuwaiti billions in the marketplace, such an investment strategy — if followed by Citibank — clearly could be a destructive force. It would add considerable more volatility to an already volatile stock market," the newspaper said.

"We don't talk about our clients' affairs, including Kuwait, and there's no more sensitive account than that one," the report quoted Vermilye as saying.

Crude tanker explodes, catches fire

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — An explosion and fire that rocked a 600-foot crude oil tanker berthed near Sabine Lake Sunday apparently sent only a small amount of waste oil into the waters of the Sabine River, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

A spectacular fire was touched off by a 1:45 p.m. blast that sent nine crewmen aboard the "Monticello Victory" scurrying for safety in the channel waters south of Sabine Lake. The fire was brought under control about 3:30 p.m. after a Coast Guard cutter and four fireboats arrived.

No one was injured in the mishap, the Coast Guard said. But the deck of the tanker was laid open when two of its 33 empty cargo tanks exploded.

The ship is owned by the New York-based Monticello Tanker Company. The cause of the blast is under investigation by Coast Guard officials and local fire investigators.

"As far as we can tell, there was very little oil spilled," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Paul Mankovich. Several booms were dispatched to control the spill, he said. He said there was no danger of the ship sinking.

Mississippian discovery announced in Garza

Ike Lovelady Inc. has reported the discovery of commercial oil from the Mississippian formation in Garza County.

I.W. Lovelady, president, said the Storie No. 1 had an initial potential test of 121 barrels of oil per day. The completion was natural from perforations at 8,778 to 8,782 feet. Two zones up the hole in the Pennsylvanian formation were drill stem tested with commercial production indicated.

Lovelady said one offset well is being drilled and another has been staked and is waiting on a drilling rig.

The company and participants in Lovelady Oil & Gas Program 1980, Ltd., own 37.5 percent of the working interest in this well and in the surrounding 846 acres of oil and gas leases. The company's separate interest outside of its interest in the limited partnership is 17.67 percent. Other working interest owners are Estoril Producing Corporation, Menexco Inc., Cornell Oil Company Inc. and an individual.

Stenholm says presidential support needed on windfall profit tax relief

By MAX SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, says independent oil operators will need strong help from President Reagan if they are to receive relief from oil windfall profits taxes.

Bills in both the House and Senate propose a 1,00-barrel-er-day exemption from the tax for independent operators and royalty owners.

Stenholm is coordinator for the 47-member Conservative Democratic Forum that played a major role in House approval of Reagan's budget cut program. He told the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association convention Sunday that success of their tax exemption "will depend on how hard Reagan backs the plan."

He was asked if his conservative Democrats would support an exemption.

"If President Reagan would deliver 190 or so Republican votes, I'll guarantee we could deliver 26 Democratic votes," Stenholm said. He added it will be a hard fight, however, and "probably the last 17 votes will be the toughest."

The independents contend about 200 House members have openly expressed support for the exemption.

While saying passage of the exemption will be tough, Stenholm said he is optimistic that the windfall profits tax can be phased out, possibly within five years, because of an eventual deterioriating effect on drilling programs.

"If we don't fumble too many balls, I think we will have a good chance to phase it out," he said.

He cautioned the oilmen, however, against any thought of pressing for a quick end to federal controls on natural gas prices. Such a course, he said, could backfire by bolstering the chances of Congress broadening the windfall profits tax on oil to include natural gas.

Schub wins Van Cliburn piano competition

By SYLVIA LEE
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Andre-Michel Schub Sunday won one of the music world's most lucrative prizes — the $12,000 gold medal of the Sixth Van Cliburn International Piano Competition — then topped it off with a concerto performance he termed "almost an impossible task."

Schub played Beethoven's Piano Concerto No. 2 in B flat, Opus 19, the piece he had prepared for the competition finals.

"The anxiety and uncertainty of waiting for results doesn't go together with making music," he said.

"I'm in a stupor. I'm extremely happy. It is the first step in what I've been dreaming about," he said.

With the cash prize goes two years of international concert engagements that assures the young pianist of the chance for a performing career.

Though the competition route is rugged and sometimes criticized in music circles, "there has to be a way for people to be recognized and get concert opportunities," said the 28-year-old French-born New Yorker. "The advantage is that you are heard."

Schub, a preliminary favorite with an established reputation as a soloist, was one of the few contestants permitted to enter without a videotaped audition. He has appeared in the Great Performers Series at Alice Tully Hall in New York, and in a "Live From Lincoln Center" broadcast with the Lincoln Center Chamber Music Society.

Born in Paris, Schub came to the United States as an infant and began studying piano with his mother at the age of four.

He studied music at the Curtis Intitute of Music in Philadelphia and also attended Princeton University.

Second place honors were shared by Panayis Lyras, also of New York, and Santiago Rodriguez of Adelphi, Md.

They will split a total of $1,400 — the combined prizes for second and third places.

Schub was cited by an international jury of 11 judges as having delivered the "most consistently superior performances" during the annual two-week competition, which began May 17. He was one of six finalists.

The finalists were picked from a field of 123 Van Cliburn hopefuls who were screened in videotaped auditions.

Lyras, 27, trained at Athens Conservatory and the Juilliard School of Music, winning the silver medal in the Arthur Rubenstein International Piano Competition in Tel Aviv last year.

Rodriguez, 29, trained at the University of Texas in Austin and at Juilliard and is now an instructor at the University of Maryland. He was a finalist in the Leventritt International Competition in 1977.

The fourth place winner was Jeffrey Kahane, 24, of Piedmont, Calif. Kahane was a quarterfinalist in the Chopin International Compitition in Warsaw last year. He trained at the San Francisco Conservatory of the Juilliard School of Music.

Christopher O'Riley, 25, of Jamaica Plain, Mass., took fifth place honors in the Van Cliburn. He won second prize in the Montreal International Piano Competition in 1980. He trained at the New England Conservatory in Boston.

Zhu Da Ming, 29, of the People's Republic of China, played his way to a sixth place finish. He trained at the Central Conservatory of Music at Peking and won the International Music Competition of Japan in 1980. Ming was one of two performers from the People's Republic entered in the Van Cliburn for the first time.

For the first time, no contestants were entered from the Soviet Union, which is still in a cultural exchange freeze with the U.S. following American protests over the Soviets' 1979 invasion of Afghanistan.

FCC chairman pledges less regulation

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The "unregulation" of telecommunications will take control of the industry away from the government and give it to consumers and entrepeneurs, the new head of the Federal Communications Commission says.

The FCC, more than any other other regulatory agency, "will make the decisions that will affect the type of society this country will have in years to come," Chairman Mark S. Fowler said Sunday as the 30th annual convention of the National Cable Television Association wound up a three-day meeting here.

"There is an unbearable arrogance, I think, when any agency acts as if it knows all about how individual technologies ought to operate," Fowler said.

"Cable is where it is today because of the imagination and enterprise of its people," said Fowler, a former communications lawyer sworn in May 18.

"I think this experience shows that the commission's job is not to invent the wheel, @ut to let it spin."

Noting the FCC has not always had a cohesive regulatory policy, Fowler said he and the five other commissioners had adopted five objectives:

—Create, to the maximum extent possible, an unregulated, competitive marketplace.

—Eliminate all regulations and policies that do not "hold up against the hard, cold light of present-day realities."

—Update and streamline procedures to provide efficient and expeditious service.

—Promote and coordinate international communications to "assure the vital interests of America in commerce, defense and foreign policy," and

—Eliminate government action that infringes the freedoms of speech and press.

Fowler said the common thread that runs through all of the objectives "like a bright, scarlet ribbon, is what I call — perhaps ungrammatically — unregulation. Insofar as a regulatory philosophy of government, we shall not be moving toward 1984, but away from it."

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Lauren Bacall says "The Fan," her new film, "is much more violent than when I read the script." But she says she's even more upset at suggestions the movie is a dramatization of John Lennon's murder.

"The movie I wanted to make had more to do with what happens to the life of the woman — and less blood and gore," Miss Bacall said in an interview with People magazine.

The film, about a psychotic admirer who stalks an aging actress, was finished four years ago, but some parts of the movie are similar to the December murder of the ex-Beatle. To make matters worse, Miss Bacall, 56, lives in the same Manhattan apartment house — the Dakota — where Lennon lived. He was shot to death outside the building.

Discovery finaled in Ward County

One Pennsylvanian discovery and three wildcats have been filed in the District 8 counties of Ward, Crane and Reeves of the Texas Railroad Commission.

WARD COUNTY

Gulf Oil Corp. of Midland has completed the No. 1009 Hutchings Stock Association as a Pennsylvanian discovery in Ward County, four miles south of Wickett.

Potentialed to flow 132 barrels of 37.2 gravity oil per day plus 23 barrels of water through an 11/64-inch choke, production was gained through Pennsylvanian perforations at 8,631 to 8,636 feet which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons.

Total depth of the well is 9,000 feet with 5 1/2 inch casing set on bottom and plugged back to 8,774 feet. The elevation was 2,604 feet.

CRANE COUNTY

Henderson & Erickson f Midland will drill the No. 1 Cowden, a 6,500-foot wildcat to test the Devonian in Crane County, seven miles west of Crane.

Drillsite is 3,500 feet northeast of the 6,448-foot Southland Royalties No. 1 W. Wright et al "M" abandoned Nov. 22, 1953 and approximately one mile southeastof a Devonian discovery.

REEVES COUNTY

Kirby Exploration Co. of Houston has filed location for a 7,500-foot wildcat in Reeves County six miles south of Pecos.

****

Coastal Oil & Gas Corp. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Jean Spencer Trust, a 12,800-foot wildcat in Reeves County, ten miles north of Toyah.

Location is 1,320 from the north and west lines of section 33, block 55, T-5 of the T&P survey.

The site is 3,000 feet south of a depleted wildcat discovery abandoned August 7, 1965 and is four miles north northwest of the 12,972-foot No. 1 H.E. Fuller abandoned July 23, 1956.

Church optimistic striking coal miners will endorse contract to end strike

By The Associated Press

United Mine Workers President Sam Church, on a lobbying swing through Eastern coal country, says he is optimistic that striking miners will endorse a proposed contract and end a two-month walkout that has seen one tentative agreement rejected by the rank and file.

"I think we got a good contract," Church said Sunday after explaining the document to 100 miners in Birmingham, Ala. "I can't see any reason why they (the miners) would go against it."

Some of the miners who crowded into the UMW District 20 headquarters to hear Church said they would withhold judgment about the contract until they get a chance to look at it. Miners should have copies by Tuesday or Wednesday.

Church was scheduled to continue his week-long contract explanation tour this morning at a UMW rally in Welch, W.Va. and address a second rally later in the day in Beckely, W.Va.

The 160,000 UMW members went on strike March 27 and rejected by a 2-1 margin the first proposed contract arrived at by union negotiators and the industry. Southern West Virginia was a center of opposition to the first tentative accord. In some coalfield appearances then, miners jeered Church, calling him "Sellout Sam."

Miners objected to a provision that would have ended royalties to the union if companies covered by the contract processed non-union coal. The royalties are included in the new proposed pact.

The second proposal, tentatively agreed to last week, may be voted on by the rank and file as early as Saturday.

"People's got a little different attitude this time," said David Vidovich, president of Local Union 5869 in West Virginia's District 17. "They're not squabbling to get a copy of the contract like they were last time — but then they haven't heard the bad things about this one that they had about the last one."

Church was expected to go to Virginia and Kentucky Tuesday, followed Wednesday by trips to Ohio, northern West Virginia and Pennsylvania. Church was scheduled to spend Friday in District 17 in southern West Virginia — the union's largest, most militant, district.

A ratification vote has been slated for Saturday, but the union's constitution requires miners be given 48 hours to consider the contract after it is explained to them in local meetings. If the vote is Saturday, the miners could return to work as early as next Monday.

Under the new contract, the price companies pay the union for processing a ton of non-union coal was raised from $1.90 to $2.33, with the money going into the union's health and welfare funds.

"It sounds pretty good to me," said Warren Frye, a Jefferson County, Ala. miner. "I'll have to see it and read it before I make up my mind. We've been out for two months, and it would defeat our purpose to give in. I think everybody is ready to go back if it's a good contract."

The negotiated pay raise would increase miners' hourly wage by $1.30 the first year, with four 50-cent raises over the next three years.

"When you look at the overall package, you'll see we made a lot of gains," Church said. "I'm not saying to vote for it or not to vote for it. Read it, listen to the explanations and make up your own minds."

Floating electricity plant gets backing

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — A consortium of state agencies and utilities wants $300 million in federal money to build a floating plant off the Florida Keys that would exploit differences in ocean temperatures to power an electric generator.

The Florida Ocean Thermal Energy Consortium planned to send its experts to Washington this week to explain details of the project to a technical review team of the Department of Energy.

Dr. Ross McCluney, the project's technical adviser, said electricity would be generated on the huge floating platform by using temperature differences between surface water and water 2,000 feet down.

Warm surface water would vaporize ammonia that would turn a turbine. The vapor would be piped down to the depths where the cooler water would condense it into a liquid.

"We'll be down to basically a waiting game until they decide whether to fund the first phase of the project in the coming fiscal year," says Louis Rotundo, deputy program manager.

The state created the consortium in response to congressional legislation last year setting up a program leading to the construction and licensing of generating plants through ocean thermal energy conversion.

The Florida association's proposal for a 40-megawatt plant floating off Key West by 1986 is the only project that would be situated in the continental 48 states.

Eight proposals have been submitted to Congress and the Department of Energy by Hawaii, Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands and Guam.

The Florida project is the only plant that would be aboard a floating platform. The others would be based on land adjacent to the sea or anchored on the continental shelf.

Efforts to get the concept under way were nearly scuttled by the Reagan administration's budget slashers.

The DOE's budget for research and development of this kind was scrapped earlier this year, but Senate and House committees tenatively have restored about $30 million or more for the 1981-82 fiscal year.

Out of that, about $6 million is expected to be used to pay for the first year's work for four to six ocean-water projects. The proposals selected will be announced late this summer.

The Florida group has been busy selling its concept to Congress and Energy administrators.

Dr. Paul Yuen of the University of Hawaii, who conducted a study of the principle for the department, said at an Orlando conference earlier this year that a commercial-size system must be built quickly to meet a national goal of 10,000 megawatts of thermal power by 1999.

Under the Florida plan, supported by Gov. Bob Graham and most of the state's congressional delegation, the Key West project would receive about $250 million in federal money over five years. Florida would contribute at least $50 million.

The plan is for Key West's City Electric Co. to buy the plant once it is operating and use the electricity for its own 17,000 consumers. The plant eventually would be expanded and additional production distributed into the southern Florida mainland.

Eddy, Chaves counties file wildcat locations

CHAVES COUNTY

Wayne Moore of Imperial has surveyed location for an 8,500-foot new field wildcat test in Eddy County, New Mexico, nine miles southwest of Malaga.

The wildcat is the No. 1 Moore State, located 1,980 feet from the north and east lines of section 23, township 25 south, range 27 east.

Drillsite is 3 1/2 miles east of Strawn gas production in the Cottonwood Draw field and about nine miles southeast of Bone Spring production in the Black River field.

CHAVES COUNTY

Coronado Exploration Corp. of Houston will drill the No. 1 Miller as a 2,300-foot wildcat in Chaves County, New Mexico, 16 miles northeast of Dexter.

Drillsite is 660 feet from the south and east lines of section 29, township 11 south, range 28 east and is two miles southeast of San Andres oil production in the Chisum, East field.

Exxon chairman sees stable gas, oil prices

NEW YORK (AP) — Prices of gas and heating oil should be "relatively stable" for at least six months following the decision by oil producing nations not to raise their prices, Exxon chairman Clifton Garvin Jr. said Sunday.

In addition, he said he believes there will be a sufficent supply of energy products for consumers over he same tme period and "hopefully longer" because of the action by the Organization of Oil Exporting Countries.

"It seems to me the OPEC people didn't agree on some things," Garvin said on CBS-TV's "Face the Nation" program. "They agreed to go away and come back again. As far as I know, that meeting is not scheduled until the end of the year."

Garvin also said Exxon continues to "have more oil than we see a market for."

As a result of that oil glut, he said the company has begun to tell its suppliers it needs smaller quantities and that it will not pay OPEC's prices.

Because of recession and lower fuel use, Garvin said such an oil glut could possibly last "quite a few months, maybe a year or more," even with the OPEC decision to cut production by 10 percent.

He said that although he expects more crude oil will be discovered, there is not enough to meet all the world's future energy needs.

"We can't rely on oil for decades and decades to come and for all the energy we need," he said.

Fisher County wildcat planned

Weitzel & Sons Inc. of Abilene has announced plans to drill a 3,750-foot new field wildcat in Fisher County, two miles northwest of Sylvester.

The venture is the No. 1 F.E. Bayouth, located 6,150 feet from the south line and 330 feet from the west line of the T.H. Cosby No. 321 survey.

The site is three miles southwest of a 3,410-foot Palo Pinton production in Alkali Creek, Southwest field.

Report says Kuwait has $7 billion in American securities

CHICAGO (AP) — Oil-rich Kuwait has amassed close to $7 billion worth of American securities, and that amount could swell to roughly $8 billion by the end of the year, according to a published report.

In a copyright story in Sunday's editions, the Chicago Tribune said it had obtained confidential bank documents detailing for the first time with an OPEC nation's holdings in the United States.

Those documents, the newspaper said, "dispute the repeated statements of the Treasury Department and officals of other government agencies that OPEC's billions in petroleum revenues invested in the United States are going primarily into short-term money-market securities, such as Treasury bills.

"They also raise serious questions as to the extent of the equity holdings by other OPEC producers, including Saudi Arabia, the biggest oil exporter of all," the newspaper said.

Kuwait, OPEC's second-largest oil producer with petroleum revenues last year of $18.6 billion, has acquired from 1 to more than 2 percent of the common shares of a large number of America's biggest companies, according to the report.

Those firms include Dow Chemical, J.C. Penney, McDonald's, Honeywell, Burroughs, General Mills, K mart, Caterpillar Tractor, General Electric, Burlington Industries, Ralston Purina, Associated Dry Goods Corp. and Kerr-McGee, according to the report.

Other companies in which Kuwait has an interest of 1 percent or more include Firestone Tire and Rubber, J.P. Stevens, Cheesebrough-Ponds, International Flavors and Fragrances, Procter & Gamble, Standard Brands, Baxter Travenol Laboratories, American Home Products and Data General.

"The documents, which also detail private meetings between Citibank (Kuwait's adviser on U.S. securities) and Kuwaiti officials, reveal that the OPEC producer is unhappy with that bank's management of its funds and has threatened to shift its assets to another bank," said the newspaper.

"Essentially, it wants Citibank to trade the equity market more aggressively to generate more capital gains."

Citing an example, the Tribune said, "One Kuwaiti investment official suggested that because the shares of Arco (Atlantic Richfield) usually move up and down 2 to 3 points in a week, 'We should trade 10,000 shares ... selling at the high and then buying back 2 or 3 points lower.'"

"Considering the Kuwaiti billions in the marketplace, such an investment strategy — if followed by Citibank — clearly could be a destructive force. It would add considerable more volatility to an already volatile stock market," the newspaper said.

Peter Vermilye, Citibank's chief investment officer, declined to discuss the Kuwaiti investments, the newspaper said.

"We don't talk about our clients' affairs, including Kuwait, and there's no more sensitive account than that one," the report quoted Vermilye as saying.

Crude tanker explodes, catches fire

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — An explosion and fire that rocked a 600-foot crude oil tanker berthed near Sabine Lake Sunday apparently sent only a small amount of waste oil into the waters of the Sabine River, a Coast Guard spokesman said.

A spectacular fire was touched off by a 1:45 p.m. blast that sent nine crewmen aboard the "Monticello Victory" scurrying for safety in the channel waters south of Sabine Lake. The fire was brought under control about 3:30 p.m. after a Coast Guard cutter and four fireboats arrived.

No one was injured in the mishap, the Coast Guard said. But the deck of the tanker was laid open when two of its 33 empty cargo tanks exploded.

The ship is owned by the New York-based Monticello Tanker Company. The cause of the blast is under investigation by Coast Guard officials and local fire investigators.

"As far as we can tell, there was very little oil spilled," said Coast Guard Lt. Cmdr. Paul Mankovich. Several booms were dispatched to control the spill, he said. He said there was no danger of the ship sinking.

By MAX SKELTON
AP Oil Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Texas, says independent oil operators will need strong help from President Reagan if they are to receive relief from oil windfall profits taxes.

Bills in both the House and Senate propose a 1,00-barrel-er-day exemption from the tax for independent operators and royalty owners.

Stenholm is coordinator for the 47-member Conservative Democratic Forum that played a major role in House approval of Reagan's budget cut program. He told the Texas Independent Producers and Royalty Owners Association convention Sunday that success of their tax exemption "will depend on how hard Reagan backs the plan."

He was asked if his conservative Democrats would support an exemption.

"If President Reagan would deliver 190 or so Republican votes, I'll guarantee we could deliver 26 Democratic votes," Stenholm said. He added it will be a hard fight, however, and "probably the last 17 votes will be the toughest."

The independents contend about 200 House members have openly expressed support for the exemption.

While saying passage of the exemption will be tough, Stenholm said he is optimistic that the windfall profits tax can be phased out, possibly within five years, because of an eventual deterioriating effect on drilling programs.

"If we don't fumble too many balls, I think we will have a good chance to phase it out," he said.

He cautioned the oilmen, however, against any thought of pressing for a quick end to federal controls on natural gas prices. Such a course, he said, could backfire by bolstering the chances of Congress broadening the windfall profits tax on oil to include natural gas.

Mississippian discovery announced in Garza

Ike Lovelady Inc. has reported the discovery of commercial oil from the Mississippian formation in Garza County.

I.W. Lovelady, president, said the Storie No. 1 had an initial potential test of 121 barrels of oil per day. The completion was natural from perforations at 8,778 to 8,782 feet. Two zones up the hole in the Pennsylvanian formation were drill stem tested with commercial production indicated.

Lovelady said one offset well is being drilled and another has been staked and is waiting on a drilling rig.

The company and participants in Lovelady Oil & Gas Program 1980, Ltd., own 37.5 percent of the working interest in this well and in the surrounding 846 acres of oil and gas leases. The company's separate interest outside of its interest in the limited partnership is 17.67 percent. Other working interest owners are Estoril Producing Corporation, Menexco Inc., Cornell Oil Company Inc. and an individual.

By The Associated Press

Unbeaten Steve Carlton posted his eighth victory with a five-hitter and batterymate Bob Boone contributed a key two-run single as the Philadelphia Phillies beat the St. Louis Cardinals 6-1 and took over first place in the National League East Sunday.

Carlton struck out six and walked three as ran his winning streak to nine, including his last decision of 1980.

Boone hit his two-run single in the fourth, when the Phillies scored three times.

THE PHILLIES made it 5-1 in the fifth after Pete Rose opened the inning with a single, his first of two hits, reducing to 15 the number he needs to break Stan Musial's career National League hit record of 3,630. Manny Trillo doubled home Rose, and Trillo later scored on the first of two sacrifice flies by Gary Matthews.

In other National League games, Gary Carter went 3-for-4 and drove in two runs to back the six-hit pitching of Steve Rogers as Montreal downed the Pittsburgh Pirates 5-1.

Dave Kingman slugged a solo homer and a run-scoring double to give Randy Jones his first victory of the season as the New York Mets defeated the Chicago Cubs 3-2.

In the American League, Wayne Gross hit a two-run homer and drove in the winning run with a sacrifice fly in the ninth inning as the Oakland A's rallied for two runs in the final inning to defeat the Toronto Blue Jays 6-5 and snap a four-game losing streak.

A two-run double by Lynn Jones in the seventh inning, Detroit's sixth extra base hit of the game, lifted the Tigers to a 5-4 victory over the Baltimore Orioles.

Len Barker fired a six-hitter and Alan Bannister singled, doubled and homered to give the Cleveland Indians a 7-2 decision over the New York Yankees.

JIM GANTNER hit the game's second pitch for his first homer and Marshall Edwards drove in two runs with a double and a triple to lead the Milwaukee Brewers to a 5-2 victory over the Boston Red Sox. Pete Vuckovich allowed nine Red Sox hits, including Rich Gedman's second homer in the third inning, in winning his sixth consecutive game after two losses.

Danny Goodwin's two-out single in the eighth inning scored Gary Ward from third base to give the Minnesota Twins a 5-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Juan Beniquez drilled a double and two singles and drove in four runs and rookie Mike Witt pitched a four-hitter for seven innings to lead the California Angels to a 7-4 victory over the Chicago White Sox in the first game of a doubleheader. It was new Angels Manager Gene Mauch's first victory in two games since being named to replace Jim Fregosi Thursday.

In the second game, Carlton Fisk's run-scoring double in the bottom of the 10th inning lifted the White Sox to a 2-1 victory over the California Angels and a doubleheader split.

IN NATIONAL League games on the West Coast, Derrel Thomas led an 18-hit Los Angeles attack with three hits and three RBI as the Dodgers erupted for seven runs in the third inning and six more in the seventh to riddle the Cincinnati Reds 16-4.

Luis Salazar stroked four hits and knocked in a run and Broderick Perkins singled home Ozzie Smith twice to lead the San Diego Padres to a 5-1 victory over the Atlanta Braves.

Mike Sadek's fourth-inning double drove in two runs and propelled the San Francisco Giants to a 6-1 victory over the Houston Astros. Loser Nolan Ryan, 4-3, allowed six walks and threw three wild pitches in seven innings to bring his career walks total 1,774, one short of Early Wynn's major league record.

In a night game, Dan Meyer rapped four hits and Joe Simpson knocked in three runs with three hits, including his first home run of the season, pacing the Seattle Mariners' 15-hit attack and their 5-3 victory over the Texas Rangers.

Enright replaces Roy Hartsfield as Cubs pilot

Midland's Cubs return home from a 10-game road trip today, but when they launch a six-game series against San Antonio's Dodgers at Cubs Stadium Wednesday night, you'll probably need a program to tell what's going on.

The Chicago Cubs announced a series of changes, starting with managers. Roy Hartsfield has moved up to Iowa of the American Association, succeeding Randy Hundley, who will become manager of the Rookie League club at Sarasota.

George Enright, manager at Sarasota, moves into Midland, but is no stranger to the Tall City. Last season, the Lake Worth, Fla., native was a reserve catcher for Midland and served as Designated Manager for the Cubs' organization, filling in at Midland and Wichita for Hundley and Jack Hiatt, respectively.

Going with Hartsfield to AAA Iowa will be outfielder Tom Grant and pitcher Joe McClain. Outfielder Bill Morgan, meanwhile, was given his outright release.

Mike Thompson, a lefthanded pitcher, is being sent to the Midland Cubs from Hagerstown of the A Carolina League. Relief pitcher Mike Wright has been sent to Hagerstown in exchange for Thompson.

Second baseman Craig Kornfeld and pitcher Carlos Gil both were reactivated.

Thompson, 22, from Teaneck, N.J., was 5-1 with Geneva in 1979 and 8-4 at Quad Cities last year.

Fritz Connally, former all-SWC third baseman from Baylor, joined the Cubs while on the road. Connally was with Midland during spring training at Mesa, Ariz., as a first baseman.

In departing, Grant took the Texas League's second best batting average with him and 10 homers, as many as he hit all last season. McClain has been one of the mound mainstays with a 3-3 record and four complete games.

O State, Miami win

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — "The first game of this tournament is always toughest for everyone," said Miami Hurricane Coach Ron Frasier of the College World Series.

Frazier is a veteran of the 35th annual college baseball championship. He is making his fourth straight trip to Omaha this year and his second-ranked team from Florida was among the first-round winners during the first weekend of play.

Saturday's opening games saw Mississippi State blank Michigan 4-0 and Arizona State blast previously unbeaten Texas All-American Tony Arnold 11-2. On Sunday, Oklahoma State went 10 innings to best South Carolina 8-5 and Miami broke Maine 6-1.

Cubs lose pair, open homestand Wednesday

SHREVEPORT—Midland's Cubs open a six-game homestand Wednesday after enjoying off days today and Tuesday. And after the road trip into the East division of the Texas League, the Cubs could use a couple of days off.

Shreveport's Captains posted 5-4 and 3-1 wins over Midland Sunday to take the series, 4-1, giving Midland a 2-8 record for the 10 games in Tulsa and Shreveport. Overall, the Cubs are 4-20 on the road this season.

Randy Kutcher's run-scoring single in the seventh climaxed a three run rally in the opener and gave the Captains a 5-4 win.

THINGS looked good for the Cubs in the opener when a walk to Mel Hall, a late throw on Dave Owen's bunt, Jack Upton's two-run double and a run-scoring single by Carmello Martinez gave Midland a 3-0 lead.

Ron Gladden homered for the Captains in the first and Paul Szymarek tripled and scored on an infield out in the second to make it 3-2. Midland tallied in the fifth when Hall walked and Tom Grant tripled.

IN THE nightcap, Upton's second inning homer, his fourth of the season, was the only run off Gerralits.

The Captains tied it in the second and then Syzmarek homered in the fourth and Jim Rothford homered in the fifth for the win. Lefty Tom Spino, 0-5, gave up all the runs before Bob Blyth came on to pitch shutout ball in the final 1 1/3 innings.

The Cubs face the San Antonio Dodgers at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in a homestand that will feature a 6 p.m. doubleheader Thursday and the appearance of the San Diego Chicken for Sunday's 6 p.m. game.

Tickets for the Chicken are on sale at the Midland Cubs ticket office at Big Spring and Texas. A limited number will be sold so that all fans will have seats.

Ruth's House Horror Chamber

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

The "House that Ruth Built" has become the "House of Horrors" for baseball managers.

Yankee Stadium is now the place where not elephants but field tacticians come to die. Not physically, of course. They manage to carry on resolutely elsewhere, most of them — as note Billy Martin, Bill Virdon and Ralph Houk.

But the big Bronx ball yard remains a cavern of indignity and shattered spirit for any manager who dares chance it — and there have been seven, counting the feisty Martin twice — in the eight years that George M. Steinbrenner has been boss.

THE LATEST to be thrust onto the sizzling griddle is Gene "Stick" Michael, a bright young man carefully hand-fashioned for the job by the big man himself.

Michael discovered last week that no one is immune from the spasmodic whims of the man in the suite upstairs. He came within a whisker of being dumped, less than two months into the season, simply because the Yankees lost important series to Cleveland and Baltimore.

It is hard to believe that this is what Steinbrenner intended when he decided Jan. 3, 1973 to head a group buying the Yankees from CBS. The once proud team of Babe Ruth, Joe DiMaggio and Mickey Mantle had fallen into the doldrums.

Steinbrenner, a wealthy shipbuilder with a college coaching background, had an obsession for the Yankee pinstripes which he linked in Americana with "Kate Smith and apple pie."

He loosened the purse strings and purchased quality players, some, such as Reggie Jackson and Catfish Hunter, costing millions. He turned a temporary sow's ear into a silk purse. Within three years he had a championship team, winner of three straight American League pennants and two World Series.

THERE WAS a new pulse beat in the Big Apple. Yankee spirit was alive again.

Then the scenario became ludicrous. High drama turned to comedy and boredom.

The Yankees, instead of filling their dignified royal role, became a source of ridicule. It started with the Steinbrenner-Billy Martin off-again, on-again shenanigans. Then Reggie Jackson became the target, with the same general reaction. A disgruntled castoff, Sparky Lyle, labelled the Yankee clubhouse "The Bronx Zoo."

The ridiculous hit a high note last week after the three-game wipeout in Baltimore. Steinbrenner openly criticized most of the members of the team and brought Michael into his line of fire, saying the rookie skipper was making some bad moves and hinting of "important changes."

A member of the Yankee brass put out a feeler for Gene Mauch, the California Angels' player personnel director and a managerial genius Steinbrenner long has admired. The Angels swiftly named Mauch their manager to succeed Jim Fregosi.

Baseball critics openly said this quick move saved Michael's job. It was a shattering blow to Michael's morale. It had to unsettle the Yankees, who rallied to Michael's defense.

There was a quick effort to try to close the wounds — denials by both the Yankees and Angels, which were patently hollow — but it was too late. The damage was done.

There is an incongruity here. Steinbrenner admits that his hero is the late General Patton. Can anyone imagine Patton sending troops into battle while telling them their company commander is incompetent and he'd rather have another?

HOUK WAS a natural for the Yankee job — a tough, tobacco-chewing war hero who played for the Yankees and then managed them to three straight pennants and two world championship in his first tour as manager. He failed to come near that record in his second tour, and was succeeded by Virdon, a bespectacled, scholarly type with a good baseball head. Virdon was too subdued for George, who brought in Martin, whose five years were marked by constant bickering, one resignation and one firing.

Then came fatherly Bob Lemon, who won it all in 1978, followed by Martin's return in 1979. Then there was the short-lived Dick Howser reign — one which saw the Yankees win the AL East only to be swept by Kansas City in league championships. And last fall, Steinbrenner tapped Michael, who had been known as the "boss' boy."

Navratilova, Jaeger win

PARIS (AP) — Martina Navratilova and Andrea Jaeger both won easily today and completed the U.S. lineup for the battle against Europeans for the French Open tennis women's title.

That meant four Americans were in tha quarterfinals, and each of them had to play against a European. The lineup (with seeding positions):

Rinaldi, a 14-year-old sensation, has upset two seeds — Dianne Fromholtz of Australia and Anne Smith of the United States — on her way to the last eight.
