Signs of spring

Anyone hoping that Midland has seen its last signs of winter might take heart by wrapping their eyes around this mulberry tree, which sprang into bloom yesterday, heralding the onset of more seasonable spring weather.

Bank deposits down during first quarter

By LESLIE HAINES
Business-Energy Writer

First quarter 1983 deposits in Midland's nine banks fell by $131 million from the previous quarter that ended Dec. 31, 1982, and declined by $24.8 million from totals recorded in the first quarter in 1982.

Net loan totals in the same period rose, however, by $207 million from the same quarter a year earlier. They were up $31.9 million from the preceding quarter.

Total amount of deposits for the nine Midland banks was $1,957,476,944 for the January through March period, down from $1,982,342,629 in the same quarter in 1982, and a drop from $2,088,587,925 recorded as of Dec. 31, 1982.

Banks are required by law to report total deposit and loan activity after the end of each quarter.

Loans net of discounts for the first quarter, which ended Mar. 31, totaled $1,836,700,643. The figure is up from $1,804,719,374 recorded in the last quarter of 1982, and an increase from the total noted in the same quarter a year ago, when loans net of discounts stood at $1,629,677,346.

Deposits increased at seven of the city's nine banks compared to the preceeding quarter, and declined at First National Bank and Texas American Bank. Net loans increased at seven banks and declined at Texas American Bank and Republic Bank (formerly Texas National Bank).

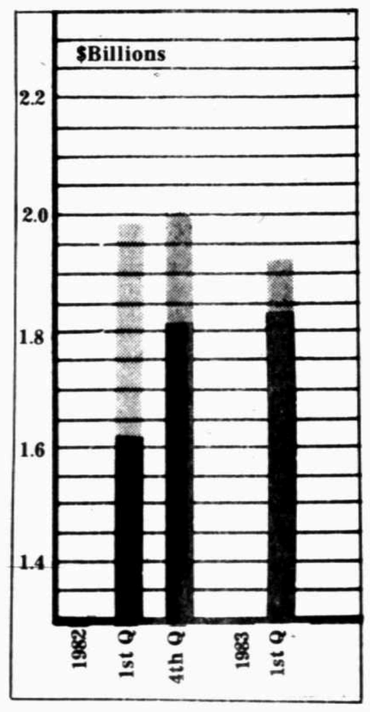
The First National Bank of Midland reported deposits of $1,249,096,000, which is about $140 million below its 1982 figure of $1,389,432,000 for the same quarter. The bank's deposits rose $164,000,000, however, from the preceding quarter that ended Dec. 31 when deposits were $1,413,283,000.

Loans net of discounts at FNB increased in the last three months to $1,370,104,000, up from $1.19 billion a year ago and up from $1.35 billion in the preceding three month period.

First City National Bank of Midland reported total deposits for the quarter of $396,435,922, versus $349,108,868 for the same quarter a year ago, and compared to $394,400,000 in the period that ended Dec. 31.

Total loans net of discounts were $282,432,878, up from $282,116,581 the preceding quarter, and down slightly from $282,600,000 in the same quarter a year ago.

Texas American Bank — Midland had total deposits of $145,302,324 and total loans net of discounts of $88,780,336. These figures are down from $146.5 million in deposits a year ago and from $145.7 million in the preceding quarter.



Reporter-Telegram Graphic

Net loans were down from $92,375,797 in the preceding quarter, and up slightly from $88,570,000 recorded in the same quarter a year ago in 1982.

Western State Bank recorded total deposits of $47,099,119 and total net loans of $35,707,614 for the period ended March 31. These figures compare with $44,404,088 and $31,060,790 for the same quarter in 1981, and to $46,770,000 million and $32,700,000 million for the preceding quarter.

At Metro Bank, officials said total deposits reached $33,052,192 in the first quarter of 1983, and total loans were $26,985,747. Last year during the same quarter, the bank reported total deposits of $23,996,450, and total loans and discounts of $18,549,203.

Both deposits and net loans were up slightly compared to the $27.6 million and 24.4 million reported three months ago.

Chicago elects black mayor

Related stories, Pages 15A and 14B

CHICAGO (AP) — Harold Washington, narrowly elected the first black mayor of the nation's second-largest city after a divisive campaign charged with racial tension, today offered his hand "in friendship and fellowship to every living soul in this city."

The two-term congressman, who defeated Republican Bernard Epton in Tuesday's election, will become mayor on a date to be set by the City Council today. He promised a "new Democratic coalition" in his four years in office, and said his first step would be to meet with Epton at a prayer breakfast — as both candidates had promised, win or lose.

"We must work as one people for our common good and our common goals," Washington said after defeating Epton in an election marred by angry mob scenes, watermelon lapel buttons and "Vote Right, Vote White" T-shirts.

Washington overcame a 1972 misdemeanor tax conviction, suspension of his law license and an array of unpaid bills to dash Epton's hope of becoming Chicago's first GOP mayor in 52 years.

He won on a record 1.3 million turnout with a powerful outpouring of black votes, strong support among Hispanics and unexpectedly strong backing from reform-minded "lakefront liberals" at odds with City Hall for years. Michael Lavelle, chairman of the Board of Election Commissioners, said 82 percent of those registered to vote cast ballots.

With 2,885 of 2,914 precincts reporting early today, Washington had 656,727 votes, or 51.4 percent, to Epton's 617,159, or 48.3 percent. Socialist Ed Warren got 3,725 votes.

Ninety-seven percent of blacks cast their ballots for Washington, compared to 18 percent of whites, according to an exit poll. That was an improvement over the Democratic primary, when Washington got just 6 percent of the white vote in a three-way race.

"History was made tonight, oh yeah," the beaming victor said as an estimated 15,000 supporters chanted "We Want Harold" and broke up his acceptance speech with frequent whistles and applause.

"The whole nation is watching, and Chicago has sent a powerful message," he told those who greeted him at Donnelly Hall with nearly three minutes of chants of "Harold, Harold, Harold."

"Out of the crucible of this city's most trying election ... blacks and whites, Hispanics, Jews, Gentiles, Protestants and Catholics of all stripes have joined to form a new Democratic coalition," he declared.

Washington will succeed Mayor Jane M. Byrne, who was defeated in the Feb. 22 Democratic primary, promised a write-in effort, then changed her mind. He promised city reforms, but stressed the need for healing.

"I charge you ... to rededicate your efforts to heal the divisions that have plagued us. Each of us much reach out and open our arms," he said.

Hoarse and weary, Epton left the Palmer House late Tuesday after telling supporters he expected to win in a "neck-and-neck" finish. His supporters weren't told he was giving up for the night, and there was no concession.

Washington's election came nearly 200 years after a black fur trader, Jean Baptiste Point DuSable, established a trading post at the mouth of the Chicago River as the first non-Indian settler here.

At campaign stops, black Washington supporters would sometimes chant: "We discovered it, we should govern it."

Washington had stressed the importance of black support, encouraging a big voter registration drive and telling blacks "It's our turn" to rule Chicago.

Nuclear freeze resolution expected to pass House

WASHINGTON (AP) — A nuclear freeze resolution was expected by supporters to pass the House today despite President Reagan's 11th hour lobbying against it.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes acknowledged on Tuesday that it would be "very tough" for the administration to defeat the resolution coming up for House floor action today.

"The way it is presented, it is very difficult for a member of Congress to cast a vote against," said Speakes. "It kind of comes on in an apple-pie fashion."

The measure calls for negotiations between the United States and the Soviet Union to seek a "mutual and verifiable freeze and reductions in nuclear weapons."

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., an author of the freeze resolution, said "the mood among freeze supporters is one of confidence that we will prevail on this crucial vote in the House."

The House debated the resolution for 12 hours on March 16 but failed to reach a final vote after freeze opponents offered a series of amendments and used other delaying tactics.

Last summer, a similar freeze measure lost in the House by a slim 204-202 margin.

Reagan, Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger and other national security officials met Tuesday with a group of undecided Democrats, trying to persuade them to support a toned-down GOP substitute for the freeze resolution.

Hours earlier, Weinberger had announced proposals for bolstering "hot line" communications with the Soviet Union as a means for averting nuclear war through accident or miscalculation.

"These are very simple things. They would benefit everybody," Weinberger told a Pentagon news conference.

The proposals include upgrading the existing teleprinter "hot line" between U.S. and Soviet leaders to a high-speed system that could relay photos and charts, creation of separate lines between military commands and also between embassies, and provisions for consultation over possible nuclear terrorist incidents.

Weinberger denied the announcement had been timed to precede House action on the nuclear freeze or a Senate vote Thursday on Reagan's embattled nomination of Kenneth L. Adelman to head the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency.

Some of the congressmen undecided about the freeze resolution left the White House questioning the administration's arguments.

Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., told reporters: "One of the most alarming aspects of it was there seemed to be the feeling among some — the secretary of defense and others — that this was a unilateral freeze."

"I certainly would never support a unilateral freeze," English said, adding that such an interpretation "would spell the death of it."

Supporters of the freeze resolution, sponsored by Chairman Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, have stressed that it would involve a mutual U.S.-Soviet halt on weapons rather than unilateral U.S. action.

"The bill is entirely conditioned upon rough equivalence (of U.S.-Soviet forces)," said Rep. William J. Hughes, D-N.J. "The suggestion that we could not modernize our weapons, I think, is ill founded."

English said he asked Reagan what part of the measure he objected to most.

"The president really didn't come up with anything specifically," English said. Instead, he said Reagan argued the resolution would send the wrong message to the Soviet Union, as well as to American allies.

English said he left the meeting still undecided about the resolution. "I would like to see some good, strong clarifying language so that we all understand what we're going to be voting on," he said.

Previously, Reagan has attacked the freeze as a threat to any hope for achieving an arms control agreement, claiming that it would "pull the rug out from under our negotiators in Geneva."

It was expected that House Republicans would again strive for adoption of an amendment by Rep. Mark D. Siljander, R-Mich., giving the administration leeway to pursue either a freeze or its current policy of initially achieving substantial reductions in U.S. and Soviet nuclear arsenals.

A similar amendment by offered Siljander on March 16 lost by a close 215-209 vote.

Siljander said the amendment would "give equal priority to both a negotiated freeze and a negotiated immediate reduction of nuclear weapons from their current frightening levels."

However, Markey said freeze supporters "are optimistic that we can continue to push aside efforts to weaken or gut this important measure."

Shultz calls stand on PLO 'mistake'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arab countries "made a mistake" in naming the Palestine Liberation Organization as the sole legitimate representative of the Palestinian people and should now consider withdrawing that mandate, Secretary of State George Shultz says.

At a news conference Tuesday, Shultz blamed the PLO almost exclusively for the latest setbacks to President Reagan's faltering Middle East peace plan. But he implicitly criticized Arab countries for accepting what he regards as PLO excesses.

Shultz appeared to rule out any bold American bid to revive the Reagan plan, indicating instead the next move is up to the Arabs.

"They'll have to compose themselves and see how they want to proceed. It's up to them to decide how they wish to do that," he said.

As for the United States, Shultz said he has no plans to travel to the Middle East, adding that, "it may be that the best thing we can do right now is to keep quiet for a while."

Shultz planned to exchange views today on recent Middle East developments with Egypt's Minister of State for Foreign Affairs Boutros Ghali.

Shultz made clear he does not share the view of some that the policy of Israel or of Arab moderates was responsible for Jordan's failure to reach agreement with the PLO on terms for Jordanian participation in the U.S.-sponsored peace proposal.

He accused the PLO of pursuing a "bankrupt" policy of violence and of thwarting the wishes of the Palestinian people by refusing to embrace the president's plan.

"The PLO clearly has been the party that has, at least temporarily, frustrated what is a most promising opportunity for peace with justice and security in the Middle East," he said.

PLO policies, he said, do not provide "any answer for the aspirations of the human beings called Palestinians who are trying to make their way in the world."

Then, alluding to the 1974 Arab League decision giving the PLO a mandate to represent the Palestinian people, Shultz said, "I wonder if it isn't going to become apparent to people that when you seem to give such power to a radical group, you've made a mistake."

At another point, he suggested the Arab League insist that the PLO exercise constructively the authority it has been mandated. "There's a saying around here, 'Use it or lose it,'" Shultz said.

On the situation in Nicaragua, Shultz denied suggestions in Congress that the administration is illegally engaged in a covert operation aimed at toppling the Sandinista government in that country.

He said there has been no violation of legislation prohibiting such activity. And he questioned the motives of senators and House members who are proposing language to rule out altogether U.S. funds for Nicaraguan rebels.

Such proposals, he said, "seem to be designed to prevent us from continuing to support our friends in El Salvador and elsewhere in Central America in their effort to provide a military security shield," he said.

Although he did not elaborate, Shultz appeared to suggest that the U.S. effort in Nicaragua is aimed at stopping the flow of weapons from that country to leftist insurgents in El Salvador.

Noting that the Salvadoran rebels have engaged in widespread sabotage of the economy, Shultz suggested they have little popular appeal as a result.

"I suppose it's no wonder that they are reluctant to come into the democratic process," he said.

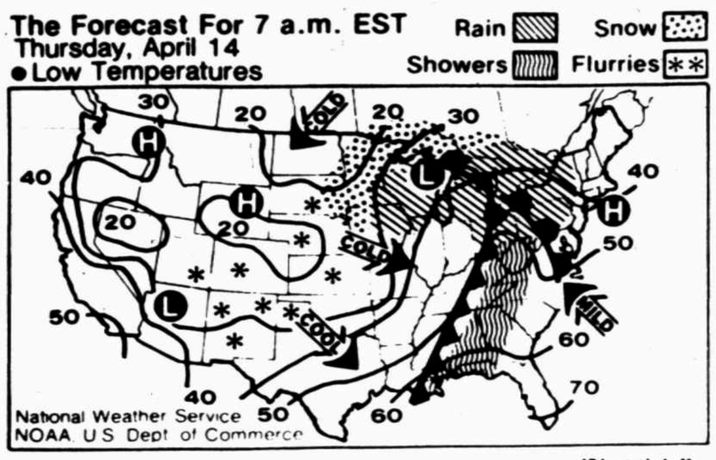
WEATHER SUMMARY



AP Laserphoto Map

Rain is forecast through Thursday from the Midwest to New York and Pennsylvania. The National Weather Service also predicts snow for the eastern Dakotas and Minnesota, with flurries expected throughout the Plains.

Cool weather expected to return

Just when winter clothes are packed away and the suntan lotion is setting out, nippy temperatures are expected to sneak through the back door.

According to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport, it should be partly cloudy and colder through Thursday.

While the mercury is expected to plunge to the mid-30s tonight, fickle winds are expected to breeze northwesterly at 15-20 mph, shifting to the northeast at 10-20 mph after midnight.

Temperatures are expected to creep up to the mid-50s Thursday with northerly winds blowing 10-20 mph.

But, according to the NWS, the cool weather should slowly be pushed back by the weekend.

Tuesday's springlike high of 79 couldn't match the record summerlike high of 99 set in 1972. The overnight low of 46 was considerably warmer than the overnight low of 28 set in 1957.

A cloak of snow covers a Cheyenne, Wyo., statue of Esther Hobart Morris, who helped lead the fight to give Wyoming women the right the vote. Wyoming, the first state to grant women voting rights, may this year be the last state to see spring. Five major snowstorms have hit the state in the past six weeks.

Snow falls, but so do river levels

By DEAN FOSDICK
Associated Press Writer

A foot of snow crippled parts of Wyoming and heavy snow was falling today in the northern Plains states as a new storm system took aim on the Great Lakes, while rain-swollen rivers fell slowly from record crests in Dixie.

The blowing flakes glazed roads Tuesday in Arizona and closed schools and businesses in Wyoming. Thunderstorms blew through Iowa, knocking down tree limbs, dropping marble-sized hail and smashing store windows.

The storm was part of a low-pressure system extending from the southern Rockies to the northern Plains, said Steve Corfidi at the National Weather Service's severe storms warning center in Kansas City, Mo.

"We're expecting up to 12 inches of snow in the Dakotas and southern Minnesota before it moves on later today," Corfidi said. "It's wet, heavy snow and shouldn't last long but it's still a significant fall for this time of year."

The storm probably will be centered in the upper Great Lakes tonight, he said.

Blowing snow was accumulating quickly Tuesday near Flagstaff, Ariz., and it turned into glare ice on Interstate highways, he said.

Douglas, Wyo., received more than a foot of snow Tuesday. More snow and winds up to 40 mph were forecast today.

"I told people that if they wanted to travel, they'd better go today, because tomorrow they probably won't be going anywhere," forecaster Ray Kowrach at Cheyenne, Wyo., said Tuesday.

Cheyenne got 9 inches of snow by mid-afternoon Tuesday and schools, most government offices and some businesses closed for the day.

Bob Budd of the Wyoming Stockgrowers Association said the storm could be dangerous to livestock. "It's pretty tough this time of year, because so many people are calving and lambing," he said.

In Ottumwa, Iowa, thunderstorms with winds up to 70 mph blew windows out of two department stores, layered the ground with hail a half-inch in diameter and scattered tree limbs, officials said. No injuries or power outages were reported.

Meanwhile, the Mississippi River was falling slowly near St. Louis, but flooding continued to create problems in several areas.

At Grafton, Ill., where the Mississippi and Illinois rivers meet, officials ferried voters to polls Tuesday by boat and high-axle trucks as much of the town remained under water.

"We're urging people to grab a boat and go vote," said Mayor Gerald Nairn. "We've got 35 families evacuated from their homes and a foot of water in the streets, but we're gonna have an election."

At West Alton, on the Missouri side of the Mississippi, more than half the town's 500 residents remained out of their homes. The town was flooded Friday when a levee gave way.

In Louisiana, floodwater from the Pearl River was receding Tuesday in neighborhoods of the New Orleans suburb of Slidell where damage was estimated at $100 million.

The weather service said Tuesday that the Pearl was continuing to fall from its record crest of 21.5 feet Sunday at the town of Pearl River, about 15 miles upstream from Slidell. Flood stage is 12 feet.

Officials said at least 40,000 people were chased from their homes in Louisiana after more than a foot of rain fell in 24 hours last Wednesday and Thursday.

Another 11,500 people were displaced in neighboring southern Mississippi.

Gov. Dave Treen has asked President Reagan to declare 16 Louisiana parishes a disaster area, enabling residents to apply for low-interest loans and other relief.

Tahitian typhoon kills one, injures 26, destroys homes

PAPEETE, Tahiti (AP) — The worst typhoon to hit this tropical island in modern times left Tahiti today with at least one person dead, 26 injured and as many as 15,000 homeless, relief officials said.

All of Tahiti was hit for 12 hours Tuesday by winds of 95 mph to 110 mph, the Weather Bureau said.

A 28-year-old woman was electrocuted by a power line brought down by a falling tree when the storm hit Tuesday, and 26 others were harmed by falling objects, emergency service officials reported.

"Tahiti is truly a scene of desolation," one said. "The damage is very, very heavy."

This morning the typhoon cut a wide corridor between the extreme southeasterly atolls in the Tuamotos and the extreme eastern part of the Austral islands. It had doubled its forward speed to 18 mph, losing a lot of the destructive wind speed, according the Weather Bureau.

But Veena was expected to cause more damage today to the Austral island of Raivavae with a population of more than 1,000, and the small Tuamoto atoll of Hereheretue, with about 30 inhabitants.

Tetiaroa, the atoll owned by film star Marlon Brando north of Tahiti, was evacuated Monday. Brando's hotel there was severely damaged last month by cyclone Reva and relief officials said they doubted much of the hotel would still be standing by the time Veena left.

In Papeete's neighboring commune of Faaa, 1,200 people were reported homeless Tuesday night, although the capital itself escaped with lesser damage, mostly to roofs and trees.

Officials said 50 percent of Tahiti's nearby sister island of Moorea suffered damage. Moorea, with a population of some 6,000, is the second most tourist-developed island after Tahiti.

ORSEC officials said there was damage in 90 percent of Tahiti-iti, a rural, mountainous farmland area with an estimated population of 10,000.

China's song: 'We have no secrets'

EDITOR'S NOTE: The nosy neighbor is a fact of life in China and is even enshrined in the law. Here is a report on the neighborhood committees that enforce the Chinese Communist Party's system of supervision of the people by the people.

By VICTORIA GRAHAM
Associated Press Writer

PEKING — There are no secrets in the quaint, crowded courtyards along West Old Curtain Lane — or anywhere else in China — where every little detail of life is supervised with pervasive precision.

What seems to Westerners a stark invasion of privacy is an accepted fact of life here. In China someone is always watching and frequently informing.

The nosy neighbor, tattletale and busybody are integral parts of an all-encompassing surveillance system that can care tenderly for the elderly or self-righteously investigate whether a woman is adulterous. This is known as supervision by the masses.

The neighborhood committee, a fixture of Chinese life, issues birth certificates, arranges funerals for the jobless, counsels wayward youth and finds them jobs, mediates disputes, cleans the streets, propagates the Communist Party line, checks on the visits of strangers and turns in women who are pregnant without authorization.

In a recent triumph, a vigilant Peking resident wrote to police about a neighbor whose visiting "nephew" never called his host "uncle" and strangely never stayed for dinner. The nosy neighbor figured something was afoot and went straight to the cops, thus snaring what authorities described as Taiwan's alleged top spy in Peking.

In the days before China encouraged affluence, spiteful and jealous tattletales told police if a neighbor had a new wristwatch, suspecting it was stolen. Today they are just as alert for other irregularities.

The powers of the neighborhood security committee are enshrined in law and it has the obligation to watch, investigate, report and arrest criminals and outright counterrevolutionaries.

The West Old Curtain Lane neighborhood represents 2,090 people in 732 households. They are divided into 15 residence groups, each consisting of several gray-gabled Qing dynasty courtyards. Each has a watchdog head.

Director Yuan Shu Zhen of the neighborhood committee proudly describes the diligent work in reporting and investigating their neighbors' private lives.

Li Zhao Ming, 30, a railway worker, thought his 28-year-old wife Yung Hong was having a love affair because she came home late from work at a leather factory.

When she was late he beat her, turning up the radio so that neighbors wouldn't hear her scream. He beat her so viciously once that she ran home to her parents and then demanded a divorce.

Enter the neighborhood mediating committee: with approval from the police, they went to her work unit to ask about her morals and were told she was upright and honorable. With an introductory letter from the public security bureau, or police, the committee can investigate at any resident's work unit, said Madame Yuan in an interview.

The committee informed the husband that his wife was faithful, urged him not to beat her, mediated between them and patched up the marriage.

This neighborhood network is a combination of Chinese communist organization and the ancient, complementary patterns of a tightly woven community.

During the 1966-76 Maoist Cultural Revolution, Chinese feared to speak freely before their neighbors, knowing they could be reported, "struggled" against, even tortured, just on someone's say-so. A slip of the tongue, a foreign book, an indulgently pretty scarf all could be cited by neighbors as evidence of political sins.

Today one elderly Chinese intellectual asks a foreign friend to wrap Western classic novels in plain brown paper "so my neighbors won't see and talk."

Overseas Chinese still are urged by their mainland friends to dress like proletarians so as not to arouse the suspicions of neighbors when they come to visit.

Peking, with 5.2 million residents, has nine government districts, about 80 subdistricts, an estimated 2,400 neighborhood committees and an undetermined number of street committees and residence groups.

First quarter bank deposits down from previous quarter, 1982

Officials at RepublicBank (Texas National Bank) reported total deposits for the first quarter 1983 were $44,087,737, up from $41,600,000 million the preceding quarter. Net loans fell slightly, from $11,000,000 in the preceding quarter to $10,668,936. Deposits were up from the total deposits of $31,964,113 recorded in the same quarter last year.

Total loans net of discounts last year at this time were $7,884,642.

At Midland American Bank, total deposits were $3,770,728, and total net loans were $2,451,787. Both were up from $3,168,537 and $2,215,388, respectively, in the preceding quarter.

Security National Bank reported total deposits of $7,666,911. Total loans net of discounts were $5,165,679. Both figures are increases from the $3,727,469 and $3,503,484 reported respectively in the preceding quarter.

At ClayDesta National Bank, deposits for the first quarter in 1983 reached $30,966,011. Loans were $14,403,666. These figures compare with $12,168,530 and $4,309,048 in the preceding quarter which ended Dec. 31, 1982.

Death camp survivors honor dead at national cemetery

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hundreds of survivors of the Nazi death camps stood amid the graves of America's war dead at Arlington National Cemetery today to honor their liberators from the Holocaust.

They placed a wreath at the foot of the white stone marking the grave of Pfc. James J. King, a paratrooper with the 42nd Airborne Division who died in the Normandy invasion — the beginning of the end for those awaiting rescue from the concentration camps.

King was selected randomly as a symbol of the American troops which knocked down the walls around the camps in April 1945. The ribbon on the wreath read: "In memory of the American soldiers who gave their lives in the struggle against Nazi tyranny, who liberated the survivors from Nazi death camps."

The ceremony came on the final day of the meeting of the American Gathering of Jewish Holocaust Survivors, which attracted 10,000 participants.

Miles Lerman of Vineland, N.J., a Polish-born Jew who was among those rescued, spoke at the wreath-laying ceremony. He addressed his remarks to the dead soldier.

"You and your comrades of arms were among the first to encounter the horrors and brutalities of the Nazi concentration camps," he said.

"You have seen the abyss. You have seen mankind at its ugliest, at its lowest ebb. You sacrificed your young life to put an end to evil and to keep the world free."

A trumpeter standing in the brilliant morning sunlight sounded Taps and the ceremony was over.

In the midst of the survivors' celebration Tuesday, participants paused to honor the memory of those they call "the righteous among the nations" — Christians who risked life and liberty to give shelter and succor to Jews.

But, five scholars agreed that one thing that characterized "the righteous" was their relative rarity.

Henry Cargas, author of "A Christian History of the Holocaust," called it "a pitiful number — though glorious they are — of 3,500."

Historians of the holocaust have found instances where 3,500 Christians, among Europe's wartime population of 300 million, helped Jews avoid Hitler's death sentence. The Holocaust killed two-thirds of Europe's 9 million Jews.

Rabbi Israel Mowshowitz of New York City said he went to Europe to ask why the people of most countries looked the other way while in Nazi-occupied Denmark the story was different: Danes rallied to help most Danish Jews escape to sanctuary in neutral Sweden in the face of certain brutal Nazi retaliation.

In most places, Mowshowitz said, he was asked, "But what could we do?" In Denmark, he said, the question was, "But what else could we do?"

At the discussion of "the righteous," civil rights leader Bayard Rustin, director of the A. Philip Randolph Institute, said Americans could not take great satisfaction from the role of liberator because of this country's own record of indifference after the plight of the Jews became known.

UT shot putter tries to bite through cuffs

Compiled from Wire Reports

University of Texas shot putter Oskar Jakobsson was arrested early Sunday and charged with public intoxication and resisting arrest after a scuffle with police officers outside a night club near the campus. Once the police had Jakobsson in a squad car, reported officer Stephen Forman, the 6-foot-5, 260-pound shot putter began biting the chains of the handcuffs. Jakobsson, a 28-year-old native of Reykjavik, Iceland, was taken to city jail and released on his recognizance.

Jim Bush, the UCLA track coach for 19 years, is retiring at the end of the 1984 season. Bush, 56, has guided the Bruins to four NCAA championships and seven Pacific-8 or Pacific-10 titles in the past 18 years. UCLA had its string of 34 consecutive dual meet victories snapped last weekend by the Oregon Ducks, only the 19th dual meet loss for Bush in 19 season. Bush said of his Monday: "I've always said that I wanted to retire before I was 60 to do other things. When I started coaching, I set certain goals and I've reached every goal."

Basketball

Texas Tech's assistant basketball coach, Brad Adkins, has resigned to enter private business, school officials have announced. Athletic Director John Conley said the search for a replacement would begin immediately.

Jo Jo White and Bob Hill will be retained as assistant basketball coaches at the University of Kansas, new Coach Larry Brown said Tuesday. White, a former Kansas and NBA star, and Hill were assistants under former Coach Ted Owens, who was fired last month after 19 seasons at the Jayhawks helm. "I certainly appreciate all of the work and efforts that Ted Owens put into making the Kansas basketball program what it is," said Brown. "And in order to keep the progress at its high level of achievement, I felt it necessary to keep continuity among the staff and players."

New North Texas State basketball Coach Tommy Newman says that he can recruit some "quality" players, even though signing day is Wednesday. "Wednesday will be the first (signing) day, but we will try to use the entire month of May and I think we will be able to get some quality people," Newman said.

Football

The Texas-Texas A&M football game this fall, originally scheduled for Thanksgiving Day and then moved to Friday for national television, has been pushed back another day to Saturday, Nov. 26. ABC will televise the game from College Station with an 11:20 a.m. kickoff.

Baseball

Former Midland Cubs pitcher Mike Krukow, obtained by the San Francisco Giants this year in a trade for Joe Morgan, will be on the disabled list for 21 days with an inflamed right elbow. The team announced that it would likely bring up right-handed Mark Calvert, who was cut by the team in spring training, for a three-game series opening Tuesday night in San Diego.

Rickey Henderson finished the first week of the baseball season with one stolen base, a turtle-like pace for the man who set a major league record with 130 last year. That first steal of 1983 came in the Oakland A's opening game, and he hasn't attempted one since. But there have been few situations where a stolen base attempt was practical or needed. "I think that's kind of cool," the A's star said after ripping a double and a single, walking once and scoring two runs in Sunday's 11-4 victory over the California Angels.

A fire that broke out Tuesday morning at Crockett Park, home of the Charlotte O's minor league baseball team, was described by firemen as "very, very bad." Dozens of firefighters were battled the blaze through mid-morning. Firemen said the two-alarm fire apparently started in the concession area.

Utah loses Jerry Pimm

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Jerry Pimm, who led Utah into the NCAA tournament in five of his nine seasons as head basketball coach, resigned Tuesday to become coach at the University of California-Santa Barbara.

Pimm made the announcement at a morning news conference where Utah Athletic Director Arnie Ferrin named Pimm's assistant, Lynn Archibald, as the Utes' new coach.

"This is the toughest decision I've ever made," Pimm said. "We have so many great friends here, but this is a great opportunity professionally and a great opportunity for me and my wife to start a new life."

PIMM, 44, has been at Utah since 1961 as an assistant or head coach. He compiled a 173-86 overall record and his 88-42 Western Athletic Conference record was tops among active league coaches. Utah was 18-14 in 1982-83.

Archibald, 38, joined Pimm's staff a year ago after resigning as head coach at Idaho State, where he fashioned a 66-66 record from 1977 to 1982.

Pimm, whose Utes finished in a three-way tie for the WAC title this year and upset Illinois and UCLA in the NCAA tournament, served as an assistant to Jack Gardner and Bill Foster before becoming head coach at Utah in 1974.

As a player, Pimm was a three-year starter at the University of Southern California and for two years was named to the All-Coast team before graduation in 1960.

Indy may have father-son drivers

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — For the first time in history, a father and son could be racing against each other when the Indy 500 race begins on May 29.

Both Al Unser Jr., who only was 7-years-old when his father won the race for the first time back in 1970, and his dad are pleased with the possibility.

"Little Al didn't have to be a race driver," said Al Sr., who will be driving for the highly successful Roger Penske racing team this year as he seeks to join A.J. Foyt as a four-time winner here.

"BUT, IT is something I've always wanted. I always thought that someday it would be nice, if this could happen and luckily it has. So, it's neat," said Al Sr., who will celebrate his 44th birthday on the day of this year's race.

There's been an Unser driving in the Indy 500 since Bobby Unser, Al's older brother, made his debut in 1963. Bobby announced his retirement from Indy driving last year after also winning the race three times.

"I guess when you're an Unser, you're born to race," said Al Jr., 20. "I'm an Unser and I'm glad of it."

The son, who shares a snowmobile dealership in Albuquerque, N.M., with his father, started driving go-carts when he was 9. He later drove sprint cars and won the national supervee championship in 1981. Last year, he moved into the Can-Am series and another national tile.

Like other Speedway rookies, Al Jr. is participating in an orientation at the 2½-mile oval track conducted by the U.S. Auto Club this week. The session is provided to assist drivers who have had limited experience in champ cars.

THE YOUNGER Unser comes to the Speedway with only one champ car start — a fifth at Riverside, Calif., last year.

"We feel we're ready for this. We're most definitely going to try to make the show. That's the reason to come back here next month," he said.

The entry list for the race climbed to 93 Tuesday with six new entries announced by Speedway officials. The list included Amber Furst, who became the second woman entered for this year's race.

Furst, a resident of Brightwood, Ore., joins Desire Wilson in the bid to become the second woman to compete here. Janet Guthrie became the first female to qualify for the race in 1977. Guthrie qualified three consecutive years and her best finish was ninth in 1978.

Speedway officials said little information was available on the driving record of Furst, who has driven mainly in sports car events at the Portland International Raceway. She was entered by Rose Pedal Racing Inc. of Portland, Ore. and is scheduled to drive a Drake-Offy — an entry that has not been able to compete with the more powerful Cosworth-engine powered cars in recent years.

WILSON, WHO was entered last week, made her debut at the Speedway last year. However, the South African native who recently moved from England to New York, failed to qualify for the race.

Entries had to be postmarked prior to last Friday and Speedway officials said a few more entries might still be in the mail.

Spurs, Lakers to play doubleheader

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — The San Antonio Spurs and the Los Angeles Lakers will play two NBA games here tonight — but one of the games is scheduled to last just three seconds.

The Lakers and Spurs will replay the final three seconds from a protested November 30th game, which Los Angeles won 137-132 in double overtime.

The next game, the regular season finale between the two clubs, will begin two minutes later.

The disputed game picks up with Los Angeles' Norm Nixon at the free throw line with one toss, and the Spurs up by two points at 116-114.

Nixon had made one free throw to cut San Antonio's lead to the two points with three seconds remaining in the first overtime.

Nixon faked several times while preparing to take the second shot, pulling members of both teams into the lane.

Instead of simply putting the players back in place and shooting the final shot, referees Jack Madden and Ed Middleton called a double lane violation and a jump ball ensued.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar tipped the ball to Nixon, who hit a desperation 15-foot shot to tie the score at 116-116. The Lakers then won it in the second overtime.

San Antonio coach Stan Albeck and the Spurs bench angrily protested when the referees called the double lane violation, but the club's official protest came the next day.

Spurs General Manager Bob Bass prepared a case and sent film of the game and a letter to National Basketball Association Commissioner Larry O'Brien, along with the required $1,500 protest fee.

O'Brien ordered the final three seconds replayed.

Los Angeles has no timeouts remaining in the disputed game, and the Spurs have one timeout and one 20-second timeout.

San Antonio leads the Spurs-Lakers series 2-1, with all three decisions coming in Los Angeles.

Both teams already have qualified for the NBA playoffs, with the Spurs clinching the Midwest Division and the Lakers taking the Pacific Division.

Double-digit plauge spreading

WASHINGTON (AP) — Double-digit unemployment plagued 30 states in February — nine more than suffered such high joblessness at the same time a year earlier, according to new government figures.

Only six states had unemployment rates in February that were lower than the rates of February 1982, the Bureau of Labor Statistics said Tuesday. Joblessness among the various U.S. metropolitan areas ranged as high as 25.9 percent in Johnstown, Pa., which has been hard hit by depressed conditions in the steel industry.

States with declining unemployment rates over the year were Delaware, Arkansas, Maryland, Massachusetts, New Jersey and Hawaii, along with the District of Columbia. But in 44 other states, joblessness worsened.

The worst deterioration in the job market happened in West Virginia, a state crippled by layoffs in coal mining. That state's seasonally unadjusted unemployment rate spurted from 13.1 percent in February 1982 to 21 percent this past February. It was the highest jobless rate recorded by any state since the government began compiling state-by-state figures in 1967.

Twenty-two states had unemployment rates that reached or exceeded the national seasonally unadjusted rate of 11.3 percent in February. Jobless rates were at or above the national average in 100 of 233 metropolitan areas surveyed by the government.

The report released showed that four states — Pennsylvania, Illinois, California and Texas — logged job losses of 100,000 or more from February 1982 to this past February. Declines in manufacturing accounted for 72 percent of these job losses, the bureau said.

In another report, it said the size of the student labor force continued to decline over the year ended Oct. 31, 1902 "as the tail-end of the post-World War II baby boom was completing high school."

It said the number of job-seekers between the ages of 16 and 24 shrank by a half million, with 60 percent of the decline taking place among high school-age youths.

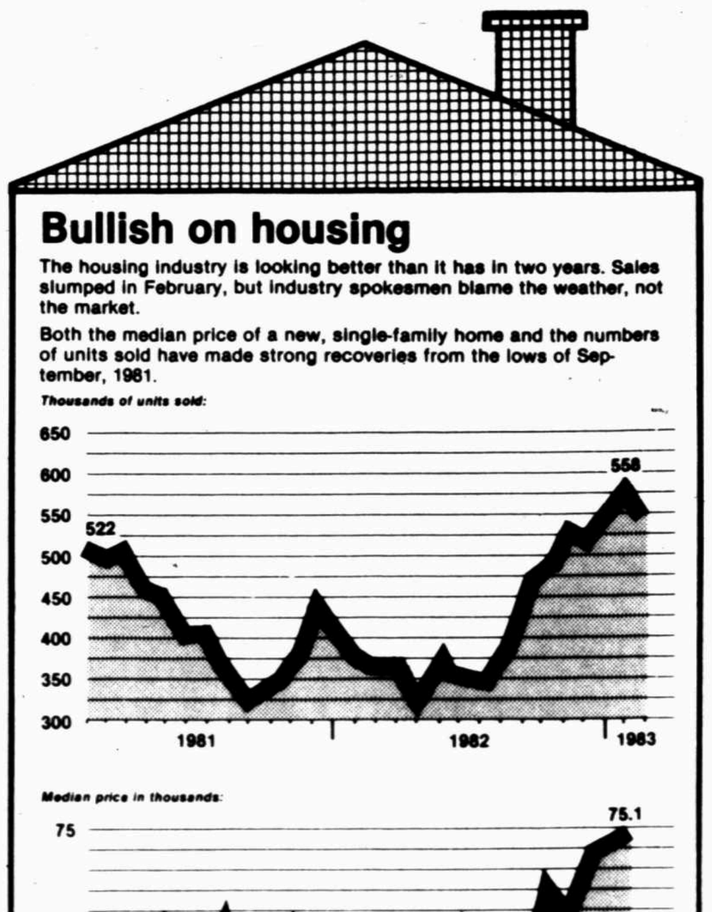
The state and local employment report said that seven metropolitan areas, paced by Johnstown, had joblessness at or above 20 percent of their respective labor forces.

Other cities with the highest jobless rates were Modesto, Calif., 23.8 percent; Duluth-Superior, Minn., 22.2; Sharon, Pa., 21.9; Kankakee, Ill., 21.4; Stockton, Calif., 20.4 and Youngstown-Warren, Ohio, 20.1. Only the Raleigh-Durham, N.C., area, with an unemployment rate of 4.8 percent, came under the 5 percent level.

Following West Virginia on the roster of states with the highest jobless rates in February wert Michigan, 16.5 percent; Alabama, 16.1; Ohio, 14.5; Pennsylvania, 14.1; Illinois, 13.8; Tennessee, 13.6; Indiana, 13.2; Oregon, 13.1; Idaho, 13.0; Washington state, 12.8 and Wisconsin, 12.7.

Hawaii, with 5.6 percent unemployment, was at the bottom of the list. Kansas, South Dakota and Nebraska had relatively low jobless rates of 7.4 percent, 7.6 and 7.9 respectively.

The seasonally adjusted national civilian unemployment rate held steady at 10.4 percent of the labor force in February, while that unadjusted rate was at 11.3 percent. The adjusted civilian rate dipped slightly to 10.3 percent in March, while the unadjusted rate fell from 11.3 percent to 10.8 percent.



MGF Oil granted Thai concession

The Government of Thailand recently concluded the award of a Petroleum Concession Agreement to MGF Oil Corporation, Midland.

The agreement will authorize MGF to explore for and produce petroleum from an area of approximately 1.3 million acres in the north central region of the country. The MGF tract is located above 200 miles north of Bangkok. Preliminary geologic studies have indicated the likelihood of several promising structures within the concession area.

In addition, the first significant commercial production of crude oil in Thailand has commenced from five wells located about 3 miles distance from the eastern border of the MGF concession boundary. Initial geological indications suggest that this field, which is already producing 5,000 barrels of oil per day and is expected to incrase to 17,000 barrels per day by 1985, may extend well into the MGF concession area.

The Concession Agreement was completed at a signing ceremony which was presided over by Thailand's Minister of Industry, Major General Chatichai Choonhaven. Also in attendance was the United States Ambassador to Thailand, John Gunther Dean.

R.O. Major, President of MGF who represented the company at the signing ceremony, expects exploration activity in the concession area to commence in the near future.

"I am most excited about this prospect," Major said, "especially because of the numerous cntacts from various oil and gas producing companies expressing an interest in participating with us in the development of the concession."

Major indicated that no firm plans have been made regarding participation in the concession by others, however he emphasized that MGF's ultimate goal is to limit its capital exposure while still retaining a significant interest in the concession.

MGF is a domestic petroleum company that engages in exploration, production and contract drilling activity throughout the western region of the United States. "Our interest in the Thailand concession," Major said," is to diversify our area of operations while taking advantage of what appears to be an excellent geological economic opportunity."

The terms of the three year concession agreement with renewal provisions will minimize front end costs of investment by MGF. The company will be obligated to spend 14.3 million dollars during the first three years in seismic, drilling and completion costs of at least two wells. Approximately 25 percent of the revenues from production of up to 10,000 barrels per day will go to the Thai Government. This share of revenues increases to about 57 percent for production in excess of 30,000 barrels per day.

Reagan fighting withholding repeal

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan, determined to prevent the repeal of tax withholding on interest and dividends, is pressing his case with a second group of financial and labor leaders.

Reagan wasn't very successful Tuesday in his attempt to enlist the support of the American Bankers Association and other financial groups. But he may have more luck today since the organizations he will meet with were considered more sympathetic to his position.

"The president expressed the hope that we would back away from our position," William H. Kennedy, president of the bankers' group, told reporters Tuesday. "We told him that just simply wasn't possible."

"We think the law will either be repealed now or at a later date," he added.

Reagan contends the law is needed to catch tax cheaters who do not report interest on their income taxes. He plans to lobby still another group of financial leaders on Thursday, according to deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes.

"You are seeing most of the opposition today," the press spokesman said Tuesday.

The Senate is widely expected to repeal the law later this week, but Reagan has threatened to veto any repeal. He has argued repeatedly that banks should concentrate more on lowering interest rates and less on trying to get the withholding law repealed.

Kennedy predicted that if the withholding provision — 10 percent on interest and dividends as of July 1 — is allowed to take effect, it will be "an expensive proposition" for financial institutions. Partly, he said that was because banks would lose investment money.

Referring to Reagan's earlier remark that he was fed up to his "keister" with financial institutions' opposition to the law, Kennedy said: "What we did tell him in a nicer way was that he was wrong and we would like to have this changed." He said Reagan did not respond.

But Kennedy said he and his colleagues were not abandoning their support of Reagan over the issue.

"We made numerous remarks in there to the effect that this was our president ... I want to continue to support him. Simply because we're on opposite sides of this issue, doesn't mean that the banking industry is not going to continue to like the Reagan administration."

Meanwhile, Rep. Norm D'Amours, D-N.H., who is leading the House effort to repeal withholding, released a letter to Reagan reminding the president that the 1980 Republican platform opposed withholding.

"I hope that you will agree to meet with a bipartisan delegation of the more than 320 House members who have sponsored legislation to repeal withholding," D'Amours wrote. "The president of the United States should be meeting with the representatives of the people on this issue, not the representatives of the banks."

Kennedy told reporters that banks and savings and loan institutions will obey the law if it is not repealed. "We are fighting it, but we are also getting ready for it," he said.

Asked whether he feared people would take their money out of banks and put it into other interest-bearing instruments, Kennedy replied: "Some of that's already happened."

"The people of this country have made up their minds that it is a bad law and they want to have it repealed ... The mail is pouring in here from people over the country," he said.

Shell, ARCO lead sale

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Oil companies offered $427.3 million for federal oil and gas leases on 97 tracts in the Bering Sea.

Consortiums led by Shell Oil Co. and Arco Alaska Inc. dominated the sale Tuesday, which attracted 150 bids from 19 companies.

Al Powers, head of the Minerals Management Service, which supervises Outer Continental Shelf leasing in Alaska, said the sale was a positive indication that the oil industry is willing to invest in exploration in the Bering Sea.

The U.S. Geological Survey estimates the sale area contains 1.1 billion barrels of recoverable oil and 3.7 trillion cubic feet of natural gas. It estimates there is a 28 percent chance of discovering commercial quantities of oil.

The area lies between the Pribilof Islands and Unimak Island in the Aleutians, just outside Bristol Bay where the world's largest run of sockeye salmon returns each year.

The sale had been challenged by fishermen's organizations, native villages and environmentalists. U.S. District Judge James Fitzgerald refused to halt the sale, but ordered that the leases not be awarded until May 12 to give him time to rule on the merits of the case.

Petroleum research head named

Lloyd E. Elkins, Tulsa, one of the nation's leading petroleum research experts, has been named president of the National Institute for Petroleum Research (NIPR) by board of directors of that newly formed institute.

Elkins, with nearly four decades of experience in petroleum research and engineering, retired from Amoco Production Company in 1977 after over 30 years of service.

He is a former President of the Society of Petroleum Engineers, a member of the National Academy of Engineering and a distinguished lecturer on petroleum research and development.

Elkins' career has taken him from West Texas roustabout to the National Petroleum Council as chairman of the subcommittee on New Production Technology.

NIPR directors also elected Mike McGowan, National Bank of McAlester, McAlester, Oklahoma as their chairman; William W. Hambleton, Kansas Geological Survey, Lawrence, Kansas, as vice-chairman and W. Timothy Dowd, Executive Director of the Interstate Oil Compact Commission (IOCC) was selected secretary of the NIPR board.

Elkins resides with his wife in Tulsa, Oklahoma. He is the author of over two dozen publications and papers on all phases of petroleum research.

He will head NIPR, a nonprofit corporation, in its cooperative effort with the IOCC to acquire and operate the Bartlesville, Oklahoma, Energy Technology Center (BETC) which the federal goveernment proposes to divest itself of this year.

"BETC" must continue its efforts to enhance energy research in America", said Elkins. "We will also produce research for private corporate projects as we continue the search for improved, modern methods of recovering this nation's valuable oil and gas assets."

NIPR believes both federal and state governments have an obliagation to encourage and support long-term petroleum research. Its bid to operate the BETC was submitted to the Department of Energy March 18, 1983.

A decision is expected in early May followed by negotiations between the DOE and the successful bidder.

"You are still eligible for one of the biggest tax breaks in history."

Robert D. Southerland
President

You can save hundreds of tax dollars on your 1982 return with an Individual Retirement Account from Texas American Bank.
The deadline for opening your 1982 IRA is your tax filing date, April 15th for most people.
Tax benefits now — and a sound, secure retirement plan later. And we charge no maintenance fees, as some insurance companies and brokerage firms do.
Shelter as much as $2,000 individually, or $4,000 for a married couple.
We have both a fixed rate and variable rate option, and you can authorize us to make automatic monthly transfers from your Texas American checking account directly into your tax-deferred IRA.

Let's talk business.

Fantasy advertising makes instant tradition

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

In the brewing industry, the technique is used to help sell "instant traditionals" — new products that spring on the market with a full-blown and usually romantic history. In a few instances there may even be a trace of truth in these advertising campaigns, but in most there's not even much effort used to disguise the pretense.

The approach works like this: Pabst launches a new beer called Jacob Best. Its ad agency then creates a stirring Western history for Jacob Best. The fiction, it's believed, creates an ambiance of permanence and legitimacy around the product. In this case, there just happens to have been a real Jacob Best, and he was a beer baron. But he was hardly the devil-may-care Bret Maverick character portrayed in the company's commercials for the beer.

It could be that the liquor industry is the largest user of this type of fantasy advertising. The first that commanded much attention came from Heublein with its "Tales of the Brass Monkey" campaign several years ago for a product that was "a secret combination of liquors." Each ad had a minimum of art and a great deal of copy. Each told another whopper about a secret U.S. agent named H.E. Rasske, who took the code name Brass Monkey from a small figurine in a Macao bar. The exploits of this dynamo in 1941-43 read exactly like what they were, an ad man's fabrications.

"I put in as many disclaimers as I could," says Alan Kaufman, who as creative director of a small, now-defunct ad agency created the Brass Monkey campaign. "But even when I told them it was all hogwash, people would write in and ask for more details about Rasske."

After that campaign lost emphasis, Heublein tried the same gimmick with a drink called the Sergeant Major, which Kaufman also created. He was a British sergeant in the Punjab who always accused the natives of abusing his gin. But it soon fizzled. Then came a bourbon liqueur from the same company called Jeremiah Weed, accompanied by an advertising campaign about one "helluva railroad man" as "gutsy and lusty as you'd expect." Gutsy as he was, not too much has been heard from Jeremiah Weed lately.

Heublein was not alone with the gambit. A few years ago, Hiram Walker introduced Two Fingers tequila. The ads told of a macho character who in the 1930s drove an old truck loaded down with an unusually good tequila into the United States from Mexico. Why the truck and the character both had to be past their prime was never satisfactorily explained. That campaign faded, too.

In fact, there isn't much of this type of advertising around anymore. The genre has never really carried over to television. The nearest thing is some of those "vignettes" from the coffee and soup companies. But those often are more irritating than intriguing, and they make no attempt at fun.

Still, the technique hasn't died out altogether. In one briefly seen commercial for Calandre, a Paco Rabanne fragrance for women, a man is supposed to be running a projector. The grainy film shows a beautiful woman emerging from a chateau. A number of limousines with chauffeurs are waiting.

When someone says breathlessly, "She is coming now," there is a rush forward, a lot of camera flashbulbs go off and there is much commotion as several people try to ask her questions. The woman gets into a limo and the window closes, electrically shutting out the scene. It is obvious from the projector someone is keeping track of her, but little is known about her "except that she always wears Calandre."

Unfortunately, the ad budget for Calandre is small, so the commercial is seldom aired. But the print version is running fairly widely.

It shows a grainy picture of the same woman followed by a man holding an umbrella. The picture is pulled halfway out of a manila envelope. Attached to it is a note: "Robert — I caught up with them at Verfour. The man is definitely Max, her bodyguard. The woman may be Danielle ... or it may be her damn double again. One of the few things anyone knows about her is that she always wears Calandre."

It doesn't really matter that whoever is keeping the dossier doesn't know that there's no French town by the name of Verfour, that it was created by Ogilvy & Mather. It is intriguing. Who are these people? What are they looking for?

Could it be the Brass Monkey?

In what it says is the first time in history, British Airways is launching a worldwide television advertising campaign in which the same commercials will simultaneously run in more than than 40 countries. Only the announcer's voice will be changed to translate the ads from one language and culture to another.

Council 'kicks tires' on car-towing deal

Wheels set in motion to sell bonds

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

While Midland City Council only "kicked the tires" on a controversial proposed car-towing arrangement during its Tuesday meeting, the council set the wheels in motion for selling $7 million in bonds to finance airport improvements.

The council also acted on several parks and recreation items and voted to swap grazing rights for water rights at its T-Bar Ranch on the New Mexico-Texas border.

Before recessing until 8 a.m. Tuesday, as the final order of business in a meeting which stretched until 10 p.m., the council voted to proceed with preliminary paperwork required for the eventual sale of $7 million in certificates of obligation to fund improvements at Midland Regional Airport.

Fred Poe, assistant city manager, reminded the council that unless bonds are issued by July 1, the city stands to pay tax penalties as provided under the Tax Equity and Fiscal Responsiblity Act of 1982.

Aviation Director Victor White also suggested the council consider changing the timetable for construction of the improvements, which include expansion and improvement of parking lots, roads and drainage at the airport.

WHITE SAID the cost of making the improvements, estimated at $15 million, could be spread over a longer period of time by delaying some portions of the project.

He said the Federal Aviation Administration could fund as much as $6.5 million of the project, $3.7 million is expected to come from a government airport improvement fund and bond sales will finance the remaining cost.

By delaying construction on about 25 percent of the proposed roadwork, White said the project's short-term cost could be whittled to about $11 million, enabling the city to better meet the heavy initial expenses of beginning construction.

Poe said reducing the initial expenses would allow the city to sell about $7 million in bonds now, and return for additional sales later as the project demands.

The council voted to commence with paperwork for selling the $7 million in bonds and instructed White to consult with the project engineer about the possibility of delaying portions of the road work.

After debating a proposed car-towing arrangement and listening to comments from several wrecker operators, the council voted to delay action until its April 26 meeting.

Police Chief Wayne Gideon and Lt. Herman Wicker approached the council with bids on a proposed 24-hour towing contract with a single wrecker company. Wicker explained the police department hopes to contract with one wrecker company, rather than the eight wrecker firms which now participate in the city's rotation system for towing wrecked and abandoned cars.

WICKER SAID the plan, patterned after a system developed by the city of Richardson, would regulate towing fees while relieving the police of time-consuming paperwork and trips to the city impoundment lot.

He said the one-company plan would also eliminate the "subterfuge" present in the current system, where no prices are set and wrecker owners "double-dip" by operating more than one wrecker service.

"I've been in this end of the business for 15 years, and the biggest headache I've had is wreckers," said Wicker, who heads the police traffic division.

Allen Frasier, owner of ARC Truck and Auto Body, said the one-company system would drive several wrecker operations out of business and create a monopoly in Midland.

"To me, they (the city) are going into direct competition with us," Frasier said.

Mayor G. Thane Akins said the council would like to avoid creating a monopoly if possible. Councilmen Tom Sloan, who seemed to capture much of the council's confusion over the proper approach, said: "Contrary to my usual opinion, I'm really at kind of a loss."

Gideon said he expects to return before the council with bids for a one-company wrecker system on April 26.

The council voted to accept a bid from Tom Linebery, who offered to trade water rights on four sections of his land adjoining the city-owned T-Bar Ranch in exchange for a 30-year lease for grazing rights on the ranch and four adjoining sections.

Poe said the trade allows the city to add to its water reserves under the T-Bar Ranch, a supply that has been estimated as sufficient to meet Midland's water needs for the next 100 years.

THE CITY REJECTED two other bids, one seeking grazing rights only and the other offering 80 acres of water rights for a 30-year grazing lease.

The council accepted a bid of $18,900 from West Texas Consultants for preliminary design work on repairs and improvements at Doug Russell Pool. Councilmen rejected two more expensive bids and the option of working directly through a pool contractor.

The council also gave its approval to a grant application by the United Girl's Softball Association of Midland. The UGSA is seeking matching funds from the Land and Water Conservation Fund Program for a six-field softball complex at Ulmer Park.

The Midland Adult Soccer League's request to use an undeveloped portion of Hogan Park to build a three-field complex was also approved by the council.

In other action, the council:

—HEARD A REPORT from Utilities Director John Lowe on the progress of an effluent pond project to be located about 15 miles southeast of the city. Lowe said he'll spend the next several days talking with about eight owners of pipelines, oil wells and utility easements inside the pond site. He said he'll advise the owners of the city's plans and possible arrangements for new easements.

—Authorized MidTran to enter into contract with National Coach Builders for purchase of seven diesel buses. An earlier contract for the buses was negated when the company under contract went bankrupt.

Council corks permit request

By VINCE GIORGI

City Hall Council Chambers ranneth over with emotion Tuesday as opponents of a proposed lounge north of Loop 250 on Midkiff Road attempted to put a cork in a nightclub owner's request for a specific use permit.

The City Council, which eventually voted 5-0 to deny the permit, was considering a request by Dale Forse, the owner of a nightclub called the Classiest which he expects to open at the end of this month.

Forse, who was already granted a permit to operate a restaurant with on-premises consumption of alcohol, sought a lounge permit in order to keep his nightclub open even while the kitchen was closed.

A permit for on-premises consumption demands that liquor only be served while the kitchen is in operation and mandates a 60/40 ratio on sales of food and alcohol.

Dick Moise, spokesman for the nightclub owner, said Forse was hoping to keep the nightclub open from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday, close from 2 p.m. to 5 p.m., and reopen until 2 a.m. Moise said a lounge permit would allow Forse to close the kitchen at about 10 p.m., and still serve liquor until the 2 a.m. closing.

Moise, addressing the council prior to the opposition, attempted to dampen their arguments by noting that the nightclub is located in one of Midland's prime retail development areas and is largely removed from residential development. He also offered a 512-signature petition from people not opposed to the lounge.

Opponents argued that a lounge would create traffic accidents — most notably of the liquor-induced variety — in the heavily-traveled area near Loop 250 and would, as Ken Nolen put it, "set a bad precedent for the neighborhood."

Nolen, co-chairman of the Saddle Ridge Country Estates Homeowners Association, said his survey of residents within 1½ miles of the nightclub — north of Loop 250 — indicated overwhelming opposition to the lounge request.

"It looks like a pretty thin veil has been put up over the bar. It's still a bar," Nolen said. "We think the accident possibilities will be increased in that area."

"I believe that this is one of the worst locations in Midland that you could have a lounge," said George Ochsner, of 11 Tattenham Corner.

Kem Merren, of 3100 Bluebird Lane, said: "My main objection to this is it's directly on the way to almost anywhere we go from our house. If the kitchen closes at 10 but it stays open to 2, then obviously the main activity between 10 and 2 is going to be drinking."

"I'm not Carry Nation," said Carl Schmickrath, of 3403 Cardinal Lane, told the council. But "I do not wish to have to dodge drunken drivers."

Councilman Tom Sloan reminded the opponents that the sale of alcohol is legal. "We tried prohibition, you know," Sloan said.

Mayor G. Thane Akins, an automatic "no" vote on alcohol permits, quickly countered Sloan, suggesting that alcohol is sold in Midland only so long as the City Council chooses to approve permits.

Sloan said bar and restaurant owners would likely have some legal recourse if the council refused to grant liquor permits.

Their recourse, Akins told Sloan, would be "the ballot box."

Councilman Gordon Marcum II made a motion, seconded by Councilman Carroll Thomas, that the council reject the request. With Councilman Jesse Hatfield absent, the council voted for rejection.

Trustees take time out on athletes' eligibility decision

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

A proposal to provide academic motivation for junior high school athletes was punted Tuesday when Midland Independent School District trustees realized students earning three D's and three F's would be eligible to participate in athletics.

In other action, trustees accepted bids on a street paving and campus improvement project, requests for the use of school recreation facilities and a gift from the Midland High School booster club. The 1983 valedictorians and salutatorians were recognized, and two re-elected board members were sworn in.

The proposed eligibility requirements for junior high athletes were recommended by administrators who designed them after high school guidelines, according to Athletic Director Gil Bartosh.

Under the proposal, seventh and eighth grade students must have passed at least three courses the previous semester, provided two were in the academic area.

"This means a student could have three F's and three D's (as long as one D was in a non-academic course)," said Trustee Joyce Sherrod.

"IF THEY CAN'T make any better grades than that, they don't need to be participating in athletics, Gil," added Trustee Ron Britton.

According to Dr. Wayne H. Moore, assistant superintendent of instructional services, the proposal was made to set standards similar to the University Interscholastic League regulations on the high school level. At the same time, the standards would provide counseling for students if they were having difficulties with academics.

No retrictions were placed on seventh grade athletes during the fall semester.

The proposal also said the athletic chairman would be responsible for checking grades at the end of each semester for eligibility and monitoring participants' grades each six weeks after report cards are issued.

"Our intent, of course, is to have good grades, but also to allow them to participate in other extra-curricular events," Moore said.

Trustee Ann Page pointed out junior high cheerleaders must maintain C averages. The same standard applies to student council members, according to Baressi. Board President Parker Humes said band and choir students do not have eligibility requirements.

The junior high school principals recommended the requirement, according to Bartosh, who added that athletics help keep students who have academic troubles in school.

"THE PRINCIPALS felt we'd be (more closely) monitoring the kids. They would be in the halls just hanging around (if they weren't in athletics)," Bartosh said.

"At least you could catch them and make them study," Britton said.

"It's the fact that we'll be checking every six weeks," Baressi explained. "I don't think we should make the standard so high they'll be unreasonable for some kids."

Because ninth grade athletes fall under UIL regulations, Bartosh said junior high requirements will help lead up to it.

Under UIL rules, "three D's and you're out," Bartosh said.

School districts, however, may raise local standards, Moore said.

"I don't think it's fair to single athletics out," Trustee Joe Golding said. "If you're going to put something stricter on them, we need to look at (the entire extra-curricular program."

Trustees voted to table the matter until administrators could study academic requirements in all extra-curricular activities.

THE ATHLETIC department came in for more scrutiny when board members accepted a gift of carpeting for the MHS Field House and a public address system for the baseball stadium. Total value of the gifts from the MHS booster club was $3,675.

According to trustees, calls have come from parents of Lee High students who noticed the gifts were in use before trustees knew about them.

"We're approving stuff that's already been installed," Golding said. "I'm not singling out athletics, but we catch the heat on it."

Apparently the sound system has been in use on the baseball field. Trustees did not comment about the carpet, already installed in the field house.

In other action, the 1983 valedictorians and salutatorians were recognized. Valedictorian at Lee High is Stacey Bradshaw; salutatorian is Dana Tompkins. At Midland High School, valedictorian is Steve Baskin; salutatorian is Amy Candiotti.

A contract was awarded to South Texas Construction Co. of Midland for pavement of Whitman Drive between Bluebird and Mockingbird lanes near Santa Rita Elementary School. Total project cost is $121,647.25. Completion time is 70 days.

Lackey's former girlfriend testifies he admitted killing secretary

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

In testimony Tuesday, an ex-girlfriend of convicted murderer Clarence Allen Lackey told jurors he admitted killing 23-year-old Toni Dianne Kumpf, a Texas Tech secretary whose nude body was found in a field south of Lubbock July 31, 1977.

The former girlfriend, 30-year-old Cheryl Jean Johnson, told of coming home from work about 7:40 that Sunday morning and finding "a big red puddle of wet blood on the bedroom floor" of the apartment in Lubbock she and Lackey shared at the time.

Lackey initially told her some friends had gotten into a fight while she was at work the night before and that one of them had been cut with a knife.

Later, however, Ms. Johnson said he told her: "Baby, I've got something to tell you. I'm the one they're looking for. I didn't mean to hurt her."

The 28-year-old defendant has been convicted and sentenced to die by a San Angelo jury for raping Ms. Kumpf and slashing her throat after breaking into her apartment and abducting her about dawn that day.

But an appeals court threw out the 1978 conviction and death sentence on a technicality in the jury selection process.

Ms. Johnson testified that she "was scared" and at first lied to police when they questioned her about the case. But she broke down and told them of Lackey's admission after being asked to take a lie detector test.

Police first linked Lackey to the murder by neighbors of the slain woman. Neighbors said they heard a fight going on in her apartment and saw a man drive off in a white pickup truck shortly after 6 a.m.

Lubbock police officer Daniel Villegas testified that he arrived at the apartment about 6:30 a.m. and found the door had been kicked in. Inside, "flower pots and a lamp had been overturned."

The slaying apparently took place in Lackey's apartment and the victim's body dumped in a cotton field along U.S. Highway 87, where it was found about 9:30 a.m. by a farmer who testified that her "throat had been severely mutilated."

The farmer, 51-year-old John Allen, said he was "shaking so bad" he couldn't use his CB radio to notify authorities. He instead drove to his house and police were called.

In other testimony Tuesday, it was established that Lackey had spent the night drinking with friends and was last observed leaving the scene of a house party in his white pickup about 5:15 a.m.

One of the people Lackey had been drinking with, 43-year-old Betty Edge, testified that she called police after seeing televised news accounts of the murder and learning police were looking for a suspect who matched his description and that of the pickup he was driving.

Testimony was scheduled to resume at 8:45 a.m. today. Judge Robert Wright, who presided at Lackey's first trial, is hearing the case on a change of venue in Midland's 238th District Court.

Agency promotes 'de-Texification'

AUSTIN (AP) — Of course Texans know that not every resident of the Lone Star State eats chili. Or acts like J.R. Or wears boots. Or even remembers the Alamo.

But New Yorkers and Californians are less savvy. So the state is setting them straight through a high-priced adverising campaign to lure them and their dollars away from their subways and hot tubs. Full-page ads debunking Texas traits and promoting Texas tourism have been placed in the New York Times and the Los Angeles Times.

"Our studies show that Americans still think of Texas as a John Wayne movie set — cactus, cattle and cowboys," said Frank Hildebrand, director of the Texas Tourist Development Agency. "We're not saying we're not Western — we're very proud of that. At the same time, we're trying to convey that Texas is far more than the stereotype."

Such "de-Texification" may smack of heresy, but Hildebrand said the approach seems to work.

In 1963, when the Legislature created the tourist agency, the state ranked 23rd in the nation in the visitor trade. Today it ranks third, just behind California and Florida. Agency studies estimate that visitors spend $12.5 billion in Texas each year, about $400 million of which goes into state and local tax coffers. That's $2.5 billion more than the revenue generated by Texas agriculture.

"No state has come on so strong (in tourism) so rapidly as Texas," said Hildebrand, who had headed the agency since its inception. "I think the state is realizing that old standbys (of income) are weakening and it has to incorporate new sources of wealth."

Hildebrand thinks the state can do even better. His agency is paying almost $1.3 million this fiscal year to tout Texas in such diverse publications as Reader's Digest, Bon Appetit and the London Sunday Times.

The ads were developed by Neal Spelce Communications of Austin. Many of the ads usea point-counterpoint approach, displaying two color photographs side by side.

One ad carries the heading "Haute Cuisine" over a picture of four unsmiling fellows presiding over an array of gourmet delights in Dallas' opulent Adolphus Hotel. The other picture was shot in the rustic Kreuz Market in Lockhart. Four beaming pit masters display ribs, beef, pork and sausages under the heading "Hot Cuisine."

Another ad contrasts an "Old West" photograph of cowboys in Palo Duro Canyon with the ultramodern "New South" skyline of Houston. And an "Old Missons" picture of the Mission EspirituSanto in Goliad is juxtaposed with a "New Missions" photograph of the Johnson Space Center near Houston.

The bureaucrats of Austin's Congress Avenue and the pitchmen of New York's Madison Avenue are relatively new acquaintances. As recently as 1958, no state funds could be used to promote the tourist trade. A "carpetbagger clause" in the 1876 state constitution barred the use of state money to attract immigrants to Texas, and subsequent court rulings defined tourists as immigrants. It took a constitutional amendment in 1958 to put Texas into the business of selling itself.

The 35 million people who visited Texas last year are as difficult to stereotype as the natives. About 8.3 million of the came on business trips.

The buses are expected to cost about $260,000. Midland will pay about $18,150 and the remainder will be financed with state and federal funds.

—Adopted several amendments to the city health code. Don Goodrum, city-county health department chief sanitarian, said the code changes eliminate outdated regulations and bring Midland's code in line with that maintained by the Texas Department of Health.

—Approved a request for a specific use permit for a bar in a bowling center planned by Abbott Development Co. The proposed bowling center is to be located northeast of the intersection of Holiday Hill Road and Loop 250.

—Voted to seek an appraisal on a parcel of land, located on the west side of Big Spring Street south of its intersection with Marienfeld Street, which the city may later sell.

—Agreed to establish 45 feet of one-way alley off Scharbauer Drive between Marienfeld and Pecos streets, in an attempt to prevent accidents at the alley's intersection with Scharbauer Drive.

—Approved on second reading several liquor permit requests, speed limits on Loop 250 and an ordinance making it illegal to use restrooms designated for persons of the opposite sex.

—Agreed to purchase 1,375 gallons of yellow paint and 1,100 gallons of white paint for marking streets. Fred Baker, public works director, said the city is expecting a new street painting machine in about two months.

STANTON — Mary Adeline Steward, 82, of Stanton died Monday morning at a Big Spring hospital after a lengthy illness.

Services were to be at 2 p.m. today in the First Baptist Church here with the Rev. Rick Jones of Granbury officiating and the Rev. Ed Carson assisting. Burial will be in Evergreen Cemetery, directed by Gilbreath Funeral Home.

She was born July 2, 1900, in Mount Vernon and moved to Stanton 28 years ago from Chillicothe. She was married to Dee Steward April 11, 1919, in Mount Vernon. He died Oct. 6, 1959.

Survivors include two sons, J.M. Steward of Stanton and J.C. Steward of Whitney; five daughters, Ruthie Pearl Tillman of Odessa, Ethel Lee Jennings and Ruby Shiflet, both of Houston, Mildred Phillips of Stanton and Betty Jo Saunders of Monahans; four sisters, Bea Tinsley, Ruth Cace and Anna Lou Young, all of Mount Vernon, and Effie Young of Brawley, Calif.; five brothers, Dee Gosset, Ennis Young, Joe Young and Bill Gosset, all of Mount Vernon, and Jim Young of Diana; 13 grandchildren and 16 great-grandchildren.

S.S. Gonzales

ODESSA — Services for Serafine S. Gonzales, 72, of Odessa, mother of Carmen Riggs of Midland, were to be at 2 p.m. today at St. Mary's Catholic Church here with the Rev. Rolando Diokno officiating. Burial was to follow at Rose Hill Cemetery, directed by Easterling-Wilson Funeral Home.

She died Sunday in an Odessa hospital.

Mrs. Gonzales was born Oct. 10, 1910, in Big Spring. She moved to Odessa a year ago from Big Spring. She was a member of the Sacred Heart Catholic Church in Big Spring and Our Lady of Guadalupe Organization.

Other survivors include three daughters, two sons, a brother, 17 grandchildren and 14 great-grandchildren.

Trustees take time out on decision

South Texas Construction Co. also received the contract for campus improvement at the new Quanah Parker Elementary School. According to Leon Hartter, MISD purchasing agent, soil on the campus is not sufficient to grow grass. And drainage flows to the residential area located northeast of Quanah Parker School. Dirt and drainage improvement contracts were awarded at $22,860. Cost will be met through bond money issued for campus improvements.

TRUSTEES APPROVED the addition of a new library and 12 classrooms, including science and art classrooms, at Midland Freshman High School following a tour of the completed project.

Authorization to advertise for bids for renovating the MHS office area was granted. Bids are expected to be awarded in May. Estimated cost is $127,000, which includes $66,000 for construction, the architect's fee, furniture, equipment and a $25,000 air conditioning system.

Trustees also approved requests made by the Midland Junior Baseball Association and the Midland Metropolitan YMCA for use of school facilities for recreational programs. Trustees also marked ballots for two positions on the board of directors of Region 18 Education Service Center.

Ron Britton and Bill Jackson were sworn in for another term on the board. Both won their re-election bids April 2.

A request from the Midland County Commissioners Court to use 15 schools as voting places in the April 23 bond election was approved. The county will pick up the estimated cost of $2,400 for custodial overtime.

The board's next regular meeting will be April 28, a Thursday, because trustees will be attending a national meeting on the usual Tuesday meeting date.

Officials: Don't need Klan to protect Alamo

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — City officials say they can protect the Alamo from "Communists" without the help of the Ku Klux Klan, but will grant robed Klansmen a permit to march through downtown streets in another section of town.

The Klan had requested the permit Thursday, saying anywhere from 50 to 250 of its members wanted to protect the Texas shrine from "Communists."

"We can protect the Alamo just fine," City Manager Lou Fox said Tuesday. "We don't need their help."

The city suggested an alternate route for a prescribed 45-minute afternoon march, which ends at city hall and the police station.

The group has five days to respond to the city's decision, Fox said.

"This decision was made without my personal feelings involved," he said. "They have a right to free speech."

But a Klan leader vowed after the city's announcement Tuesday that Klan members will guard the Alamo on May Day without city permits because they have a right to visit the structure "as American citizens."

Klan leaders rejected the city's alternate plan and angrily denounced city officials for refusing the Alamo parade permit.

Charles Lee, Texas Grand Dragon of the White Camellia Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, told the San Antonio Express, "If we don't get a permit to march, we'll just be tourists that day.

"What we basically want to do is make sure nobody messes with the Alamo," Lee said. "We'll just be going as individual American citizens." He added that some Klan members would be in robes while others would be in fatigues or street clothes.

Eleven people were injured and six arrested during a Feb. 19 Klan rally in Austin. Six people were arrested and none injured during a heavily policed April 2 Klan march in Houston.

"I'm not worried about violence," Fox said. "We feel the city of San Antonio will act positively and ignore them.

"While the Klan has provoked violence," he said, "in the past few years, they've taken a new strategy."

He said the city would provide "adequate police protection."

An art group already has booked the Alamo for the entire day of May 1, Fox said, leaving no room for the Klan without "congestion and confusion."

Another group calling itself the Texas Committee to Defend the Alamo plans a candlelight vigil at the Texas shrine on the night of April 30, and Klansmen say they have been invited.

The City Council passed a resolution Thursday condemning the Klan's request to march, and Fox said he spent all day Tuesday meeting with individuals representing about 14 groups opposed to the granting of the permit.

Included in those groups, he said, were ministerial organizations and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People.

In 1980 and 1981, people identifying themselves as Communists hoisted red flags above the Alamo, which is located on the fringes of town.

Senate panel has own ideas about budget

WASHINGTON (AP) — A rebellious Senate Budget Committee has redrafted much of President Reagan's domestic budget blueprint and is likely to further defy the president by providing for tax increases in 1984.

In a marathon session lasting almost 11 hours, the Republican-led committee voted Wednesday to leave intact tens of billions of dollars for welfare, food stamp, housing and other social programs that Reagan wanted to cut.

In a series of tentative budget decisions, the committee set spending limits for fiscal 1984 at $11.3 billion above Reagan's non-defense proposals for next year.

Last week, the committee voted to cut Reagan's proposed defense buildup in half despite last minute efforts by the White House to delay the vote.

Congressional sources, speaking on condition they not be named, said Wednesday the administration has now given up hope of changing the committee's decision on military spending. Instead, they said it plans to wage a new battle when the budget resolution reaches the Senate floor later this month.

Today, Democrats on the committee were expected to call for $30 billion in new taxes next year, enough to repeal the third of this year's federal income tax cut, and to also urge elimination of indexing of tax rates in 1985.

"If we don't do something (to raise taxes) in 1984, we are jeopardizing the economic recovery," said Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., the senior Democrat on the budget panel.

Realistically, the committee is unlikely to provide for a full repeal of the tax cut, but capping it to exclude higher-income taxpayers was a possibility.

There are 10 Democrats and 12 Republicans on the committee. And at least two Republicans, Slade Gorton of Washington and Mark Andrews of North Dakota, indicated they might be willing to support higher taxes to diminish the federal deficit.

Conservative Republicans in and out of the committee are sure to wage an intense battle, with Reagan's support, against any new taxes next year.

"Raising taxes is not the way to balance the budget," said Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, a member of the budget panel.

Withholding rates reflecting the third year of tax cut, enacted in 1981 on Reagan's urging, take effect July 1.

Indexing, setting tax rates so workers are not penalized by inflation when they get cost of living increases, takes effect in 1985, and is expected to be a target of Democrats.

Sen. Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the committee chairman, said the spending levels set this week are too high, and he was expected to push for reductions today.

In its decisions on Wednesday, the committee:

—With Democratic support, dramatically slowed Reagan's proposed cutbacks in Medicare, Medicaid and other huge federal health programs. The president wanted $31 billion in savings over five years; the committee set the figure at $14 billion with few direct reductions for elderly or poor beneficiaries.

The decision, if approved by Congress, would likely scuttle Reagan's plan to substitute a new catastrophic illness plan for higher hospital costs for many Medicare patients.

—Approved a six-month freeze on cost-of-living increases for military and civilian workers. Reagan wants a year-long freeze.

—Rejected most of Reagan's suggestions for a third year of cuts in welfare, food stamps and subsidized housing for the elderly and low-income families.

—Cast aside the president's proposal for reworking the Civil Service retirement system.

—Provided $300 million more next year than the president wanted for child nutrition programs.

—Ignored Reagan's call for eliminating more than $600 million in help for poor persons to pay their utility bills.

—Agreed to keep $1.7 billion over Reagan's budget for education programs, including $150 million for college student loans.

The panel also included $100 million for education grants poor young persons, $60 million for vocational education and $230 million for improved mathematics and science instruction.

Adelman confirmation likely

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Republican leaders, buoyed by high-pressure lobbying from President Reagan, said today they're confident that controversial nuclear arms control nominee Kenneth L. Adelman will win his three-month battle for confirmation.

With the final vote only hours away, aides to one previously uncommitted senator, Sen. James McClure, R-Idaho, said he would vote for Adelman, a decision that apparently would give the 36-year old deputy U.N. ambassador enough votes to be confirmed.

An Associated Press survey showed 50 senators, counting McClure, in favor of Adelman's confirmation or leaning toward voting for him, 38 against and 12 undecided. One of the 12, Sen. Robert Packwood, R-Ore., said he would not be present for the vote because he is attending a Republican conference in his home state.

The Senate's deputy Republican leader, Sen. Ted Stevens of Alaska, replied "yes," when asked this morning if he was sure Adelman would be confirmed.

"I am confident he will be confirmed and we have the votes to prevent recommittal," Stevens said. "I think it is now a secure vote."

Stevens predicted Adelman would receive the support of at least 51 senators. But he said that, as a precaution, he asked Vice President George Bush to preside during the final stages of debate and cast a tie-breaking vote if needed.

Both supporters and opponents said late Wednesday it appeared all but certain the Adelman nomination would squeeze through its final Senate test today after three months in which many senators questioned the nominee's qualifications, his commitment to arms control and his candor under fire.

Sen. Paul Tsongas, D-Mass., the leader of the Adelman opposition, told reporters only a groundswell of opposition by the public would change the outcome. He said he could predict no such development.

President Reagan, Vice President George Bush and Cabinet members phoned senators to drum up support for the nomination and Adelman himself continued to make the rounds of Senate offices.

"If senators are getting no calls from home, and they are getting calls from the president, we are lost, ... we'll lose this thing," Tsongas told reporters.

"The administration has the edge at this point," Tsongas said. "Republicans who might otherwise support us want to be loyal to the president."

Republican Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee said he believed Adelman would be confirmed but added, "It's going to be close."

Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., who put aside his own doubts about Adelman to lead the drive to confirm him, told reporters: "I just have the feeling Ambassador Adelman will win, but by a very narrow margin."

Percy said he made the decision to support the 36-year-old Adelman, now deputy U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, after getting administration agreement to a set of conditions he says will help move the arms control process forward.

If confirmed as the new director of the Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, Adelman will succeed Eugene V. Rostow, who was fired by Reagan on Jan. 12.

House averts changes in nuclear freeze resolution

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House has rebuffed efforts to dilute a nuclear weapons freeze resolution adamantly opposed by President Reagan.

After more than six hours of floor debate Wednesday, key Republicans conceded that the House's Democratic leadership would be able to win passage of the freeze whenever the resolution comes to a final vote.

Further action on the measure — which calls for immediate negotiations with Moscow toward a "mutual and verifiable freeze" on nuclear arms — was put over to next week, with nearly 40 amendments still pending.

"They've got the votes to pass it any time they want to pass it," said Rep. James G. Martin, R-N.C.

However, Martin said he and other critics were encouraged by a statement of the resolution's chief sponsor, Rep. Clement J. Zablocki, D-Wis., spelling out what specific weapons systems would be covered by a U.S.-Soviet freeze.

Zablocki, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, said that even under a freeze, missile-firing submarines could be modernized or replaced because the vessels were considered "launch platforms" rather than actual "delivery vehicles."

The Wisconsin Democrat sought to assure the House that passage of the freeze measure would not necessitate any unilateral action by the United States. "If the Soviet Union does not agree to a mutual and verifiable freeze, there is no freeze," Zablocki said.

By a 229-190 vote, the House rejected a major modification proposed by Rep. Elliot H. Levitas, D-Ga., calling for a "guaranteed strategic build-down" rather than a flat freeze.

Under the Levitas plan, the United States and Soviet Union would be able to continue modernizing their strategic weapons — but would have to dismantle two older nuclear warheads for every new warhead added.

Later, the House turned back, 219-195, a bid by Rep. Hank Brown, R-Colo., that would have endorsed the administration's priority on reductions in U.S. and Soviet arsenals in advance of any freeze.

In its place, the House agreed to wording suggested by freeze proponent Rep. Jim Leach, R-Iowa, that any reductions in nuclear arms could only be negotiated after a freeze was in place.

Many of the remaining amendments were filed by Republicans and conservative Democrats who claim the proposal, although nonbinding, could undermine the president's ability to negotiate with the Soviet Union.

Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., said today that the nuclear freeze proposal raises "serious questions" about the adequacy of U.S. capabilities to verify Soviet compliance with such an accord.

"The Soviets will cheat under two related conditions — when they deem it of overriding value and when they think they can get away with it. Foolproof verification procedures are the only deterrent to this behavior," Proxmire said in remarks prepared for a Senate floor speech.

He noted that 'the case of Soviet violations is clear" concerning use of poison gas and toxin weapons in violation of the 1925 Geneva protocol and a 1975 convention against biological warfare.

"There is more ambiguous data with regard to the complex technical treaties verified by national means such as SALT I and SALT II. The issue there is in doubt," Proxmire said.

Rep. Edward J. Markey, D-Mass., a leading freeze advocate, called the Levitas proposal "just a public relations cover for the arms build-up the Reagan administration wants."

The vote on Levitas' amendment was viewed by both sides as key, and perhaps the best chance freeze opponents would have to modify the proposal to make it more to the administration's liking.

The "build-down" concept may have a better chance in the Republican-controlled Senate, where it has been endorsed by Chairman Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., of the Foreign Relations Committee and more than 40 other senators.

Reagan, in a letter read during Wednesday's House debate, contended that the freeze proposal "would undercut our efforts to negotiate with the Soviet Union for real reductions" in weaponry.

Workers put up sidewalk barricades Wednesday around the site of Independence Plaza at Big Spring and Illinois. The 16-story parking and office building was permitted last month and is being constructed by Judwin Companies of Houston.

Downtown site readied for construction of 16-story office, parking complex

Site preparation, including construction of protective walkways, is under way now for Independence Plaza, an office and parking structure that will rise 16 stories at 301 N. Big Spring St.

The $10 million project is expected to be announced before the end of April.

Construction is to begin before official announcement of the building because, said a Midland Chamber of Commerce official: "The Houston developers feel there have been too many projects announced in Midland that haven't been built. They wanted signs of the building activity to be there when they announced it."

The official said he had information on the construction plans but, "We've been asked not to release it."

Developers would not release information until financial arrangements for construction were completed. Those arrangements made, the Houston developers/builders — the Judwin Companies — have said a press release is forthcoming.

The building was to be named Estoril Plaza, after a local independent oil firm. An Estoril manager said the site was sold to the Judwin Companies, and he thought an office building would go there. He declined to reveal Estoril's future office-space plans or give information on the land sale.

New name for the building is Independence Plaza. Developers recently made a second filing of plans at the city Building Permits and Inspections Department with revisions including the name change. The building was permitted in March.

Estoril remains Judwin's major tenant in Independence Plaza, a Judwin representative said in a telephone interview Tuesday.

"We're waiting for a city permit for street use so we can put up our barricades on Illinois and Big Spring streets," the Judwin employee said. This is the only project Judwin has planned in Midland, the spokesman said. A former insurance office facing Illinois will be torn down and removed soon, Judwin's representative told the Reporter-Telegram.

The builders, Judwin Construction, are part of the Houston developer Judwin Companies. They are also part of a growing trend for large developers to do their own construction work on office and retail buildings. This trend has been noted in cities like Dallas and Houston, as well as with Midland's HBF Corp., building its structures through subsidiary HBF Construction.

Judwin Construction has offices in Midland Executive Center, and is taking applications for local construction personnel. The firm will start hiring in 1½ to 2 weeks.

The building is a project of "I.P.D. Limited," said building plans. The owner is listed as Judwin Companies.

Independence Plaza will have prismatic, V-shaped three-story atriums set into its roof. One atrium will face east and one will face west, according to elevation drawings.

Sides of the building will be light-colored concrete, poured sidewalls on steel beams, with glass panels inset on the face.

Above the first floor lobby and offices there will be five levels of parking for tenants and visitors.

The remaining 10 floors will be office space, with a top-floor penthouse.

Plans were drawn by Houston firm Morris-Aubry Architects.

AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecast rain and showers through Friday for Atlantic coast and Great Lakes regions, with snow flurries due in the upper Great Lakes. Clears skies are expected in most of the nation.

Temperature reaches record low

A 50-year record was broken last night when temperatures dropped to 29 degrees, stopping the previous record low of 31 degrees, set in 1933, cold in its tracks.

Those frosty temperatures should begin thawing by Friday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport. While tonight's low should drop into the lower 30s, Friday's high is expected to reach into the middle 60s.

Skies should remain clear and winds mild with tonight's breezes gently blowing at 5-10 mph from the northeast and shifting to southerly at 10-15 mph Friday.

Wednesday's high of 66 was 31 degrees cooler than the record low of 97, set in 1972.

Congress hears tranplant plea

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress, considering help for those in need of organ transplants, is hearing the story of a Massachusetts family whose public pleas for a liver donor led to a successful transplant for their daughter.

Charles and Marilyn Fiske, accompanied by their 15-month-old daughter, Jamie, were scheduled to testify today before a House Science and Technology subcommittee.

The Bridgewater, Mass., family gained national attention last fall as the parents went public in their search for a suitable liver donor. A 10-month-old Utah boy, who died in an automobile accident, was the donor.

The subcommittee began its examination of organ transplant problems on Wednesday when Billie Hall of Walnut, Miss., described the difficulties she had obtaining money to pay for a liver transplant for her 13-month-old son, Brandon.

Mrs. Hall, Brandon and his surgeon left the hearing early to return to Memphis, Tenn., for surgery after learning that a donor had been found.

A spokesman for the University of Tennessee Center for Health Sciences, Clayton Braddock, said today that the new liver appeared to be functioning normally. The tot's physician, Dr. Peter Whitington, said, "We think he's got a good chance."

Mrs. Hall tearfully urged the subcommittee to alter federal medical programs so that they would pay for transplant surgery like that needed by her son's.

"There are so many people with children like Brandon who need the surgery as badly as my son does," she said. "There needs to be something done about Medicaid helping these children."

Brandon is covered by the federal Supplemental Security Income program, but his family has no private insurance. In order to raise the $30,000 needed to get him admitted to a hospital for a liver transplant, Mrs. Hall turned to a small religious radio station in her home town. About $81,000 was raised in five months through public appeals.

Mrs. Hall said that finding a suitable organ often is difficult because too few people donate their organs or those of relatives for transplantation.

"Thank God, this morning we did get one," she said.

Army Capt. John H. Broderick and his 28-month-old daughter Adriane face a different set of problems. Adriane, like Brandon, suffers from the liver ailment called biliary atresia.

But she can't have a transplant because the Pentagon's Civilian Health and Medical Program of the Uniformed Services won't cover the cost.

Broderick, stationed at the Louisiana Army Ammunition Plant, said he was told that the program doesn't pay for such procedures because of the cost and because they still are considered "investigational." And, he said it would take $65,000 to get his daughter admitted to a hospital for a transplant.

"I personally find this argument repugnant because it places a dollar value on my daughter's life," he said.

Dr. James Williams, associate professor of surgery at the University of Tennessee College of Medicine, predicted that demand for organ transplants will grow because a relatively new drug, Cyclosporin, now reduces the chance that a new organ will be rejected by the body.

He called for hospitals to promote organ donations among patients and their relatives.

Speaking with Billie Hall, Walnut, Miss., and her 13-month-old son Brandon prior to the beginning of testimony is Rep. Albert Gore, D-Tenn. Mrs. Hall addressed a House Science and Technology subcommittee on the need for aid in organ transplant surgery.

Boy's surgery begins just hours after hearing

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Surgeons were giving a critically ill boy a new liver early today, hours after his mother took him before a congressional subcommittee to plead for federal aid to cover the huge cost of transplants.

The child, 13-month-old Brandon Hall of Walnut, Miss., was with his mother in Washington, D.C., on Wednesday when doctors found a liver for him from a 9-month-old girl killed in a traffic accident in Richmond, Va.

Clayton Braddock, a spokesman for the University of Tennessee Center for the Health Sciences, said the boy was taken to surgery at 4:45 p.m. Wednesday. The operation was expected to take seven to 12 hours.

Brandon's mother, Billie Hall, 38, testified before the House Science and Technology subcommittee about an hour after she was told that a donor liver had been found for her son.

"I was real surprised and happy and scared," she said late Wednesday as doctors operated on her son. "They say he's just doing real good. And I'm doing fine."

Mrs. Hall, who is unemployed and separated from her husband, told the House panel that federal medical programs must help cover the cost of organ transplants.

"There needs to be something done about Medicaid helping these children," she said in a tearful appeal. "It's so terrible to see a child die because he can't get the money."

Brandon, lying in her lap, could be heard gurgling fretfully during her testimony.

Residents of Mrs. Hall's home town, 75 miles from Memphis, helped raise $81,000 to pay for the surgery. She said she would launch a public speaking drive to help other children needing organ transplants.

"We've got our liver," she said. "We're in good shape. But what we want to do now is to work on these other kids who don't have a liver.

"Brandon is going to make it, but I want all these other kids to make it too."

As Brandon returning from Washington with his mother and his surgeon, Dr. James Williams, another member of the University of Tennessee's transplant team, was on his way to Virginia to get the donor organ. It was flown to Memphis by commercial jet.

Brandon was born without bile ducts to filter his blood, a condition called biliary atresia, and doctors said his liver was deteriorating. Without a transplant he would be dead within weeks, they said.

The difficulties of finding a suitable donor were compounded because of Brandon's small size and rare blood type.

Warnings issued on Medicare

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration is warning Congress that Medicare will go broke by 1991 even if the president's proposed cuts are enacted.

Carolyne K. Davis, head of the Health Care Financing Administration which runs the massive health program, told the Senate Aging Committee on Wednesday that setting hospital rates in advance under a system Congress passed last month will delay insolvency until 1990.

But even with the Medicare changes in the president's budget, which would mean larger out-of-pocket costs for beneficiaries, the trust fund which pays for the hospital insurance portion of the program will be exhausted by 1991, she said.

New projections presented by Mrs. Davis include use of a payment system calling for Medicare hospital rates to be set in advance. They also consider changes in Social Security that will affect Medicare. Using intermediate economic projections, they show that at the beginning of calendar year 1990, the Medicare trust fund will be short $8.4 billion.

If the president's Medicare changes are enacted, the projected shortfall would be $555 million at the beginning of calendar year 1991.

Projections from the Congressional Budget Office, which were made before the prospective payment plan was adopted, said Medicare would run out of money in 1987 or 1988.

"The passage of prospective payment, when coupled with the enactment of the National Commission on Social Security's recommendations, dramatically improves the short term financial situation of the health insurance trust fund," Mrs. Davis said.

"Nevertheless, it does not solve the basic solvency issue as, even with the passage of these revisions, the fund will still be exhausted by the end of this decade."

Alice Rivlin, director of the CBO, said any set of options for Medicare financing "poses difficult tradeoffs."

"Raising taxes could leave Medicare intact but only at considerable cost to taxpayers. Obtaining savings exclusively through increased Medicare cost-sharing or reduced reimbursements could lead to a second-class system of care for the aged and disabled," she warned.

"Systemwide attempts to contain medical care costs could ultimately result in slower expansion in services to most users of health care, although the impact on health care is unpredictable."

She projected that Medicare outlays will increase at an annual average rate of more than 13 percent between 1985 and 1995. But payroll tax income, which finances part of the program, will go up less than 7 percent.

Medicare serves 29 million elderly and disabled Americans. It is divided into a hospital trust fund and one which covers other services, such as doctors' bills. The hospital fund is paid for with a portion of the Social Security payroll tax. The supplemental program is covered by premiums and general Treasury revenues.

The Medicare changes which the administration wants would provide beneficiaries with coverage against catastrophic illnesses while forcing them to pay a larger share of routine hospital bills; offer vouchers, where beneficiaries could use a predetermined sum of federal money to buy private health coverage, as an alternative to Medicare; freeze Medicare physician payment rates for one year, and increase the premiums Medicare beneficiaries pay for insurance against some doctors' bills.

In the House on Tuesday, 21 congressmen led by Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., proposed that a commission similar to the National Commission on Social Security Reform be created to plan a solution to Medicare's troubles.

The recommendations of the bipartisan Social Security commission were used as a basis for legislation to keep the retirement system from going broke.

IRS expects 15 million tax returns

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service is gearing up to receive about 15 million tax returns the rest of this week — and one of them will be from the boss.

Commissioner Roscoe L. Egger Jr. said his return is ready to drop into the mail, but he's waiting to receive some paperwork about an investment. He plans to mail it well before the Friday midnight deadline.

If you're one of the 25 million couples or individuals who waited until the last week to file, Egger doesn't hold that against you. "Why pay it until you have to?" he said in an interview Wednesday. "This may sound like heresy but, nevertheless, it's good money management."

Egger's advice does not apply, of course, to the nearly 80 percent of taxpayers who get a refund. The sooner you file, IRS always says, the sooner you get your money.

IRS expects between 96 million and 97 million couples and individuals to file returns this year, up about 1 million from 1982. Nearly 62.1 million had filed through last week. About 2.7 million are expected to ask for a four-month extension for filing, but they'll have to submit the request on Form 4868 by midnight Friday and accompany it with a check for estimated taxes.

Another 1.2 million or so will miss the deadline and have to pay a late filing penalty. Others, including Americans abroad, have different filing deadlines.

With the growth in population, IRS had expected that returns filed so far this year to have been about 1 million above last year's mark. In fact, the number is down about 800,000 and nobody has a sure-fire explanation.

However, Egger said, the drop-off in filings does not indicate more Americans are joining the ranks of tax cheats. He said public accountants tell him they have never seen a year in which people were so slow to have returns prepared.

"I suspect a lot of it is just people with a balance due who are just dragging their feet," Egger said.

Although the average refund paid so far this year is $723, up about 2.5 percent from 1982, the total amount of refunds is down about 6 percent. Egger attributes that mainly to the recession, speculating that many people reduced amounts withheld from their paychecks last year so they would have a higher take-home pay. That means the government has to refund less.

On another subject, Egger said there is no practical way, without withholding, for the IRS to stop cheating on interest and dividends.

Mail pickup times extended to accomodate midnight filers

Midland's Postal Service plans to burn the midnight oil to accommodate taxpayers who find themselves in a pinch Friday — the filing deadline for Internal Revenue Service income tax returns.

Postmaster Bill Williams announced Wednesday that forms deposited at the letter drop inside the Main Post Office, at 100 E. Wall Ave., will be picked up and postmarked "April 15" until midnight Friday.

Williams said the Main Post office will be the only Midland location providing the last-minute mail service.

Midland men injured in mishap

ANDREWS — Two Midland men were expected to be treated and released from an Andrews hospital this morning after suffering cuts and abrasions in an accident at the intersection of Midland Farm Road and FM 1788 in Andrews County.

Department of Public Safety reports were sketchy this morning, except to say that two persons were injured in the accident, which occurred about 7:35 a.m.

An emergency room spokeswoman at Permian General Hospital said Gary Adams, 3600 N. Loop 250, and Fred Fuentes, 3301 Alford St., would be treated for cuts and bruises and released this morning. She said Adams, 27, suffered scalp and facial lacerations and Fuentes, 33, suffered a bruised right shoulder.

The spokeswoman said Adams and Fuentes were riding in the same vehicle when the accident occurred. She said the driver of another vehicle involved in the accident was not injured.

Correction

In Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram a story about Midland bank deposits and loans for the first quarter 1983 reported deposits at First National Bank rose $164 million. The story should have said deposits were down $164 million from the previous quarter's total of $1,413,283,000.

The Reporter-Telegram regrets the error.

At least three killed in plane crash

MEXICO CITY (AP) — A plane crash in the mountains of Puebla state has claimed at least three lives, and the victims were tentatively identified Wednesday as two school administrators from South Carolina and their pilot.

The single-engine plane, which carried a U.S. registration number, had been missing since Saturday on a flight from the Gulf Coast port of Veracruz to Mexico City. The wreckage was found Monday 77 miles west of Veracruz, said Miguel Gil Gaona of the Civil Aeronautics Department.

Although dental records are being checked for positive identification, the three victims are believed to be J. Edwin Belser, headmaster of Woodland Hall Academy in Mount Pleasant, S.C.; Maude Q. Crouch, the school's principal, and Richard G. Button, their pilot.

Richard G. Button Jr., the pilot's son, said in Charleston, S.C., Wednesday the registration number found on the wreckage indicated it was Belser's plane.

Button said his father and the two school officials were to have met friends in Mexico City Saturday, but when the plane did not arrive on schedule authorities were notified and a search was begun.

Tom Johnson, spokesman for the U.S. embassy in Mexico City, confirmed the tentative identifications. He said the single-engine plane crashed in a storm Saturday in a mountainous region northwest of Veracruz. He described the area as "very rugged, a steep climb for an airplane to make."

He said the the victims and all identification papers aboard the plane had burned and it will take at least until Friday before the dental records can be checked.

Airport authorities in Veracruz said a fourth person also boarded the plane, but his fate was not known, Gil Gaona said. "We do not know if (the fourth person) escaped and is injured or if he did not board the plane in Veracruz," Gil Gaona said.

Chinese merchants grab business from government

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

CHONGQING, China — China's newly emancipated private merchants are rapidly grabbing business away from the government's inefficient monopoly stores.

The loss of state profits is so great, apparently, that some localities are trying to harass their new competition out of business. People's Daily, the national Communist Party organ, recently reported "ill treatment and even persecution" and blamed it on "leftist" thinking.

Nothing could be less leftist than the countermeasure launched last month by the municipal retail bureau of Chongqing, formerly Chungking, the capital of nationalist China during World War II and now the mainland's fourth-largest city. Buyers at stores and restaurants of the city monopoly, and that used to include every establishment in this inland metropolis of 6 million, received lottery tickets with every 5-yuan (approximately $2.50) purchase. Prizes range from refrigerators to stockings.

It's the nearest thing to gambling tolerated by China's puritan communists since Mao Tse-tung drove the Generalissimo Chiang Kai-shek from his capital here into Taiwanese exile 31 years ago.

The result is a feverish retail competition that makes the once-drab river town look like Hong Kong. That's a remarkable turnaround for a municipality that suffered grievously from Red Guard persecution and civil strife during the 1966-67 Cultural Revolution.

In the downtown free-market quarter around Ba Yi Street, smiling waiters politely beckon passers-by to spotless tables in tiny sidewalk cafes. In the big state restaurant, people often must line up for seats, wait a half-hour or more for service and dine surrounded by previous customers' litter.

In general, the private businesses charge more than state enterprises but emphasize quality and service. Zhang Meilin, 44, a mother of four, operates an all-night noodle stand with three relatives. She pays the city 10 yuan a month for her roofed but sideless stall, plus a 3 per cent tax on net income. The income of the four totals more than twice a state worker's pay — but they put in three times the hours.

The rapid recovery of Chongqing and surrounding Sichuan Province was engineered by a youngish technocrat, former governor Zhao Ziyang. Zhao is now premier of China, and his experimental policies in the province are being emulated throughout the country. There is still serious opposition from the old guard of Mao loyalists, as Peoples Daily made clear in its report on harassment of private merchants in the province surrounding Peking. In Chengde County, the newspaper reported, individual merchants must get licenses from five different government departments, and only seven have succeeded. It said that in Pingquan County, merchants must pay four different taxes, and in Cangzou City a 40 per cent profit tax is collected. "All the above examples are taken from Hebei Province," Peoples Daily said.

UAE plays it smart

DUBAI, United Arab Emirates (AP) — The United Arab Emirates, among the smallest and most vulnerable of the Arab oil states, is playing both sides in the war between its Persian Gulf neighbors, Iran and Iraq.

Abu Dhabi, the biggest and richest of the seven sheikdoms that make up the federation, has contibuted to the billions in Arab aid to Iraq during the 2½-year-old conflict, while Dubai, the second-biggest and richest member, has maintained a flourishing trade with Iran.

Western diplomats say the United Arab Emirates, with a native population of 200,000 to 250,000 and a fledging army of only about 40,000, has little choice but to sit on the fence and hope the war will not spread.

THE old trading families of this city-state have both commercial and blood ties with their Iranian neighbors. Many are descended from the merchants who fled at the turn of the century from high customs duties in Persia, before it became known as Iran.

President Saddam Hussein of Iraq has complained of the Emirates' less than whole-hearted support for his country, but to no avail.

Early in the conflict, the Emirates lent no support to his demands that the Iranians withdraw from three Arab-populated islands seized by the Shah of Iran two days before the British withdrew from the Persian Gulf sheikdoms in 1971.

The islands, Greater and Lesser Tunb and Abu Moussa, are strategically located in the gulf at the mouth of the Strait of Hormuz, through which much of the world's oil passes.

SHARJAH, one of the less-wealthy members of the federation, still shares with Iran half the revenue from an oilfield on Abu Moussa under an accommodation worked out before Iran took over the island.

Dubai's trade with Iran has helped the Islamic republic weather the U.S. embargo imposed during the 444-day hostage crisis and the long war with Iraq.

Most cargo to Iran is shipped on the diesel-powered versions of the old wooden ships called dhows that have been used in the Persian Gulf for centuries.

Until the nationalizations in Iran and the outbreak of the war with Iraq in September 1980, Iran was the biggest market for Dubai's billion-dollar-a-year re-export trade in which consumer goods are imported to Dubai with a 1 percent tax and then re-exported.

IRAN'S share of the market fell from 29.3 percent to 14 percent in 1981, and to 6 percent in the first nine months of 1982.

But Bill Duff, a British financial adviser to the Dubai Customs and Excise Office, said Iran has eased restrictions on imports and most of the goods from Dubai are again sailing to Iran.

Omar Arafat Dessi, an official in the Dubai Chamber of Commerce, said Iran also was increasingly tolerant of smuggling from Dubai.

"It takes two months to import through the government of Iran," he said. "With a dhow merchant, you give him a call in Dubai and the goods are in your warehouse in Bandar Abbas two days later."

Death row inmate now wants to live, marry

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — Death row inmate Charles Rumbaugh tried to kill himself three times, but now says he has changed his mind and wants to live — and a federal appeals court has given him his wish.

Rumbaugh, who was shot as he lunged at a deputy U.S. Marshal during a hearing, says God intervened and saved him from dying from the gunshot wounds. And the inmate says he now wants to live, believes he will never be executed, and hopes to be free someday so he can take care of his fiancee of three months.

"She's the most wonderful person I've ever met in my life," Rumbaugh said of the woman, who he met four or five months ago through letters.

Rumbaugh was scheduled to be executed by lethal injection May 2 for murdering a jewelry store operator during a 1975 robbery in Amarillo. But on Wednesday the U.S. 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans granted a stay of execution.

The state of Texas did not oppose the stay because it is waiting for the U.S. Supreme Court to rule in the Thomas Andy Barefoot case, said Dave Richards, executive assistant to the state attorney general.

The high court granted Barefoot a stay in January and said it would use his case to decide how to handle death penalty appeals. The action effectively has blocked further executions until the court rules. The justices will hear the case April 26 but probably will not rule for several months.

The stay issued by the 5th Circuit on Wednesday was not requested by Rumbaugh, who says he does not have a lawyer and still is not actively appealing his sentence. The stay was won by Rumbaugh's parents, Harvey and Rebecca Rumbaugh of San Angelo, who he said Wednesday he has not seen in several months.

His parents have said in court papers that since age 13 their son has had a "history of self-mutilation and overt suicidal tendencies."

Interviewed in prison Wednesday just before the stay was announced, Rumbaugh said that since 13, he has spent all but nine months in reform schools, mental hospitals, jails and prisons.

He said he has tried to kill himself three times. The first time he cut himself while in the state mental hospital in Big Spring, he said, and the next time he took an overdose of narcotics in August on Death Row.

"I feel like the Lord has a purpose for me. Otherwise I would have died," Rumbaugh said Wednesday.

Senators OK college funding bill

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Senate passage of a college funding proposal probably will shift a $50 million difference of opinion to a 10-member conference committee.

Senators approved a proposed constitutional amendment Wednesday that would dedicate $125 million a year to state-financed colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M systems.

On Feb. 22, the House voted for a $75 million college fund.

Another major difference is that the House eliminated an "escalator clause" from its proposal, while the Senate measure pegs possible additional appropriations for colleges to the Consumer Price Index.

Also, the House proposal would be submitted to the voters on April 30, the Senate version in November 1984.

"This thing is going to conference committee, I promise you," said Sen. Carl Parker, the Senate sponsor.

If Parker is right and the House rejects Senate amendments, a Senate-House committee would try to work out a compromise settlement.

Parker's proposal would extend interest earned on the Permanent University University, which benefits only UT and A&M, to all institutions within those systems and would allow PUF money to be used on repairs and books, as well as new construction.

Another provision would allocate $6 million a year for 10 years from UT's share of the PUF interest to Prairie View A&M, a mostly black school.

Parker said the Prairie View provision could be a "critical factor" in negotiations with the federal government over whether Texas has achieved total integration in its state colleges.

The $125 million fund, effective in September 1985, would be allocated under a yet-undetermined legislative formula, to 17 schools, or 25 institutions when branch campuses are counted.

Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, rises to vote Wednesday to table one of several amendments to his proposal for a constitutional amendment setting aside $125 million per year for state-financed colleges outside the University of Texas and Texas A&M system.

Parker said by earmarking money for colleges, officials could issue bonds against it and also make long-range plans which would be more economical.

"We'll save millions of dollars of the taxpayers money and ensure quality education," he said.

At the same time, he said the proposal would not threaten "flagship" schools such as UT and A&M.

The Legislative Budget Board estimated that the draw on general revenue, or the state's main checking account, would be nearly $132.7 million in the second year and $140.6 million in the third year.

Sen. Ray Farabee sought to reduce the fund to $75 million, stating, "There's only so much of the pie to go around."

Farabee, D-Wichita Falls, said the fund would mean less money for faculty salaries, and he added, "If you don't spend money for faculty salaries and money for research, not all the constitutions in the world will make a university of the first class."

"We'd be better off having nothing than having this kind of amendment," said Parker. He said students would have to pay higher tuition to help make up the $50 million difference.

Farabee's amendment failed 28-2.

Another Farabee amendment to abolish the "escalator clause" was rejected 25-5.

Parker said the Senate proposal did not provide for automatic increases based on the CPI but would allow the Legislature to appropriate up to that amount.

A third Farabee amendment — to give the Legislature the option of having the Texas College Coordinating Board approve college construction projects — failed 21-9.

Senators, with Parker's approval, accepted Sen. Lloyd Doggett's amendment to prohibit spending money from the fund on houses for school chancellors, presidents or faculty.

Farabee said he opposed another dedicated fund, because the money "is going to be spent whether it's needed or not" and would take away revenue from "more dramatic" human needs.

Doggett, D-Austin, said he did not think the proposal was "fiscally responsible."

Chicago Mayor-elect Harold Washington, flanked by, from left: Saul Epton, brother of Republican candidate Bernard Epton; Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne, and Cook County State's Atty. Richard Daley, right, attends an "ecumenical prayer luncheon" Wednesday at a Chicago hotel. Washington and Epton had promised, win or lose, to get together for a prayer breakfast following the election. The breakfast was postponed until afternoon, and Epton did not show.

Democrats offer Washington support

CHICAGO (AP) — Renegade ward bosses who fought Harold Washington on his way to City Hall offered the mayor-elect their cautious support, but insisted their Democratic machine will survive "like a cat with nine lives."

Hours after defeating Republican Bernard Epton, Washington repeated his pledge Wednesday to end the clout of Chicago's regular Democratic organization — the machine — and replace it with a fairer system of hiring city workers, many of whom owe their jobs to political patronage.

The City Council, meanwhile, set Washington's inauguration for April 29, when he will become the city's first black mayor.

Washington told a news conference Wednesday that "the machine is not dead — it is mortally wounded, and like most wounded animals, it will drift off into the woods and die."

Washington won 98 percent of the black vote Tuesday, 58 percent among Hispanics and 18 percent among whites. Political analysts, based on national trends, had predicted that he would get no more than 11 percent from whites. But "lakefront liberals," whose seven wards have spawned many of the old, ineffectual good-government groups, gave him 42 percent of their vote.

Experts, Reagan differ

WASHINGTON (AP) — Much of $1 billion President Reagan wants to cut from the food stamp program will come from reduction in benefits to the poor not through elimination of errors as claimed by the administration, congressional budget analysts say.

Agriculture Secretary John Block rejects those conclusions, standing behind the administration's claim that the plan will ensure continued aid to those who deserve it and need it most.

But the Congressional Budget Office analysis, released Wednesday, said, "Sixty-two percent of all food stamp households would lose benefits as a result of the administration's proposals."

That means more than 4.9 million of the 7.9 million food stamp households will see their nutrition coupons cut an average $177.60 a year, for a total reduction of $874 million in 1984, according to the analysis, which is the starkest evaluation of the proposal to date.

It said that nearly $190 million of that amount will come from 2 million households called "the poorest of the poor" by Rep. Leon Panetta, D-Calif., chairman of the House nutrition subcommittee. Those families, who would see benefits slashed nearly 5 percent, have incomes less than half the amount the federal government considers poverty level.

A million households with elderly or disabled members would suffer the largest average benefit reduction, $250 a year or 26.3 percent, the CBO analysis said.

Nearly a million more households with wage-earning members would see benefits cut $194 a year or almost 12 percent. That group comprises the working poor. The CBO study acknowledges that the changes proposed by the administration would actually increase benefits for about a third of the food stamp households, offsetting the net impact of the cuts. But Panetta argued that those improvements cannot make up for the large reductions to be imposed on millions of others.

The food stamp program, expected to cost about $12 billion this year, has been a budget-cutting target for the president.

Navy intercepted slave ships

For the first 30 years of Queen Victoria's 1837-1901 reign the British Royal Navy's chief task was the interception of slave ships, sometimes on the basis of international agreements, sometimes without them.

Each interception was a diplomatic gamble that could provoke charges of interference in the affairs of other states or even be considered an act of piracy or war.

Book gives inside look at royalty

By GRAHAM HEATHCOTE
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — What did Queen Elizabeth II say on first seeing Niagara Falls?

"It looks very damp."

And what did King Edward VII say after visiting Rome?

"You look at two moldering stones and are told it's the temple of something."

These and hundreds of other anecdotes about Britain's royalty, past and present, are being disclosed to Americans today with the U.S. publication of the "Book of Royal Lists," a compilation of offbeat and humorous facts about Britain's thousand-year-old monarchy.

The book, by American Lesley Cunliffe and Englishman Craig Brown, contains 323 lists ranging from "21 Physical Peculiarities of Royalty" to "Ten Royal Comments on Art."

Some samples: Anne Boleyn had three breasts and an extra finger; James I had a tongue that was too large for his mouth; and Edward the Confessor was an albino.

When George V saw a painting by Cezanne at an exhibition, he called to Queen Mary: "Come over here, May, there's something that will make you laugh."

Prince Philip, seeing Victor Pasmore's sculpture "Relief Construction" at the San Francisco Art Museum, remarked: "That looks to me like something to hang a towel on."

"We hope it will make the royal family more vivid and real," said Mrs. Cunliffe, who was born in Massachusetts, grew up in Bronxville, N.Y., and has lived in England for 13 years "because I am hooked on the place."

Brown said: "We were walking across a field in Suffolk, trying to think of a new way to say everything about royalty. We are both devotees of the American Book of Lists and that gave us the idea."

More samples:

Sixteen of the 34 kings since William I had illegitimate children; Henry VII's most treasured possession was St. George's left leg; and Queen Caroline complained that her husband George IV compelled her to smoke a pipe on their wedding night.

Among "Five Unsuitable Friends of Royalty," Edward VII's companion at Oxford University, Harry Hastings, breakfasted each day on mackerel fried in gin, caviar on toast and a bottle of claret.

Queen Mary took eight years to make a carpet of one million stitches, saying everyone should do something to earn dollars when the country was hard up after World War II.

The famous novelist E.M. Forster, when old and short-sighted, was invited to a wedding at St. James's Palace. Asked by a friend if he would like to meet the queen mother, Forster said: "Oh, I thought that was the wedding cake."

Mrs. Cunliffe, in her 30s, and Brown, 26, both have met members of the royal family. Both had useful contacts from work in journalism and researching family trees, and Brown attended Eton, the famous preparatory school founded by Henry VI in 1440.

"Going to Eton gave me a lot of friends in that set, so there are a lot of exclusive stories in our book," he said.

"We jumbled those with things culled from about 350 books and a mountain of clippings, so they were well disguised and didn't catch the headlines when the book came out in Britain last October. If they had, I wouldn't be going to dinner parties any more."

Despite the disclosures, the book apparently hasn't raised eyebrows in Britain or produced blushes on royal cheeks. British publishers traditionally refuse to disclose book sales.

Mrs. Cunliffe said she had no particular feeling about royalty when she started working on the book, "but now I feel quite affectionate about them."

Brown added that "we came out feeling very strongly for and against certain members, while being for the institution."

"There is a mystical need for monarchy," Brown said. "The American presidency serves the same need, but they are out after four years.

"It was terribly clever of England to have divided the offices of politics and national spirt."

The book is published by Summit Books, a division of Simon & Schuster, and costs $7.95.

How they live Down Under

By JACK SWANSON
Hearst Feature Service

What do Australians eat? There doesn't appear to be a national cuisine as such, but they like beef and lamb dishes. For breakfast, many Australians have cereal or steak and eggs; always, it seems, with grilled tomatoes.

There's a wide variety and abundance of local fruits and vegetables, from tropical varieties like pineapple to more temperate things like apples and potatoes.

Indeed, said one American official, Australia has the climate to produce anything grown anywhere in the world. One restaurant menu features stir-fried squid with chilies, which turn out to be a plateful of white strips of squid with red bell pepper. The squid has the chewy consistency of boiled rubber bands and an unpleasant aftertaste. Other restaurants deep-fry the squid to much better effect.

Strolling down the busy streets of Sydney, population 3.2 million, one has a feeling of being in a time warp. It could be San Francisco on a bright summer day in the 1960s, before long hair, before kids discovered what a spray can of paint will do to a shimmering white wall of marble.

The women wear miniskirts and see-through fishnet blouses with nothing underneath. Many of the men wear shorts. The temperature of a typical fall day in March is between 95 and 100. There seem to be more blondes and red-heads here than in most U.S. cities. The women return your gaze with frank self-confidence.

Australians love cars as much as Americans do. Most are Australian-made Fords or General Motors products, with a good number of Japanese cars. American-built cars are rare. They're too expensive, and American cars don't have right-hand drive.

As in England and Japan, Australians drive on the left. This is not as difficult to master as getting into the blasted car after 30 years of swinging the right leg under the steering wheel. You also tend to look the wrong way while crossing the street. You only make that mistake once.

The woman leans against the lamp post in a pose you thought died with black-and-white Alan Ladd films. It is midday in a busy shopping mall, a few blocks from downtown. The street is crowded with shoppers. She is blonde and pretty, about 25, wearing tight-fitting blouse and slacks. "Gud toime, Maite?" she mumbles quickly around the cigarette she is in the act of lighting.

Prostitution is not illegal, but the Sydney city fathers would like hookers to be less obvious. Tourist guides in the major cities are thick with ads for escort services and call girls. A woman at the executive escort service says her girls range in age from 20 to 30 and charge $120 for the first hour and $60 for each subsequent hour. Credit cards are accepted.

Australia has caught up with the sexual revolution. The Australian version of the television program, "60 Minutes," devotes a 20-minute segment to the rapid spread of herpes. A newspaper story warns that athletes can get the disease by hugging after a soccer game.

While prostitution is not illegal, homosexuality is. The police have staged several raids at Sydney gay bars and bath houses, and gays protested by chaining themselves to the state government building.

You can buy a Big Mac for $1.45 in any major city, except on Sunday. Then it costs you 20 percent more. Such is the union situation in Australia. Everything is unionized.

Restaurant employees who work Sundays not only get overtime, but special compensation called "penalty loading." Customers pay extra to be served on those days. To avoid the extra costs, many shops, stores and restaurants close at noon on Saturday.

One newspaper reported that a small union representing maintenance workers at an oil refinery threatened to shut down the whole oil industry because the company refused to pay every member of the unit overtime when one or two members were brought in to work extra hours.

The vastness of the country hits home when you drive between cities. Ranches are enormous, comprising thousands of acres. Even on the main highway between Sydney and Melbourne, cars are few. The only radio station on the car radio plays American classics from the 1930s: Al Jolson, Margaret Whiting, Vaughn Monroe, the Mills Brothers. The next morning in a wayside coffee shop, the juke box plays everything Perry Como ever recorded.

The barramundi, Australia's most desirable fish, has a sex problem. The succulent fish, which spawns in fresh water and migrates to the sea like salmon, grows to enormous size and is highly prized for its tender, tasty white meat. But they are dying out because of their peculiar habit of changing sex.

From age 2 to 7, the fish are male and produce sperm; then the fish change sex and lay eggs. Small ones are male, and large ones are female.

Because fishermen tend to throw back the little ones and keep the big ones, the females are killed off before they can lay eggs, government biologists complain. Australian biologists say it will be a major task to re-educate anglers to throw the big females back and keep the smaller males in order to save the species.

A good way to get acquainted with Australian slang is to watch commercials on television.

"Win a motza on the footy, footy tab," goes one jingle, set to music. It shows men kicking a football.

British environmentalists plan 'Green' political force

By MAUREEN JOHNSON
Associated Press Writer

LONDON — After years as lonely pressure groups, Britain's environmentalists are teaming up with its burgeoning anti-nuclear movement, confident they can form a "Green" political force like that in West Germany.

Buoyed by the West German Green Party's capture of 27 of the 498 seats in the Bundestag in the March elections, British environmentalists and their more prominent soulmates in the peace movement are getting set to stage Britain's first "Green" rallies April 27-29.

There's no talk of forming a British Green Party yet. But the rallies scheduled for London, Leeds and Bristol are expected to accelerate a campaign aimed at making peace and anti-pollution major issues in Britain's next general election, widely expected to be called later this year.

Scheduled speakers at the rallies will include West German Green Party leader and legislator Petra Kelly and U.S. consumer advocate Ralph Nader.

"Until you can get our election system changed to proportional representation, a British Green Party would be banging its head on a brick wall," said Des Wilson, head of the 20,000-member Friends of the Earth, which has organized the rallies.

"What we aim to do is to unite the Green movement to ensure that Green issues are prominent in the manifestos of the major parties."

Those issues span everything from using solar energy instead of nuclear energy and taking lead out of gasoline to banning insecticides and blood sports.

The nuclear issue promises to be bigger in the next election than in any previous one as the planned December deployment of U.S. cruise missiles in Britain draws nearer.

Both major parties are making strong pitches — the main opposition Labor Party with a unilateral nuclear disarmament pledge, and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher's Conservatives with a vigorous campaign that seeks to undermine the peace movement as naive and dangerous.

Protesters hang up their phones

HARRISBURG, Pa. (AP) — It's the battle of little Big Run, where a fight over high telephone bills has led some citizens to slam down their receivers for good.

Residents of Big Run, a tiny community of 826 people in the foothills of the Allegheny Mountains are charged the highest telephone rates in the state — $21.25 per month for basic service, according to the Pennsylvania Public Utility Commission.

Some residents say they can't pay. Other simply refuse to deposit one more dime in the coffers of Big Run Telephone, a subsidiary of Citizen Utilities Co. of Stamford, Conn. And now the dispute has reached all the way to the state capital.

"There's a lot of hatred built up in the town," said Paul Kellar, a 41-year-old biology teacher and borough council president. "The company sort of has the attitude that it can take your phone and shove it down your throat."

In a protest that has now moved to the offices of state lawmakers and utility regulators here, Kellar and scores of other customers decided in 1981 that they could do without a phone.

AP Laserphoto Drawing

Residents of Big Run, a tiny community in the Allegheny Mountains are battling with the phone company over high rates. In protest, many people are doing without a phone.

"IT WAS at one of our meetings that someone proposed we hand in our phones," recalled Samuel McNeil, who heads the Citizens Action Group, an organization set up to battle the rates.

"About 183 people took their phones out and others dropped to party lines. If the company didn't get the phones, the people put them in trees, they did all kinds of things to them," said McNeil.

The company currently has 790 customers in the Big Run area, down from 923 when the protest began, said Citizens Utilities spokesman Ed Kelly. According to McNeil, some residents restored service "because we have people that absolutely need the phone."

But others have learned to live without it.

"It's made the house so quiet," said Kellar's wife, Thelma. "At first you think you can't live without one but you just plan more ahead of time.

"I just refuse to give that company any more money," she said.

THE KELLARS clip a note pad to their front door for messages. Other residents use citizens' band radios, and one ties a red towel to her mailbox when she needs a message taken to her mother across town.

Dalton Buffington, 72, said that she and her husband, who is retired, could no longer afford to pay $14 a month for a party line.

"We had it disconnected but it's still sitting in the house," she said. "We go down to my son's garage to use the phone but sometimes it's dark.

"I tell you, it's been awfully hard," she said.

Another resident, Kathy Cessna, 33, said, "I never was one for gabbing on the phone but there are times you really need it." A substitute teacher, she said she has missed out on numerous working days because the school could not reach her on short notice.

Kelly said he could not discuss the local company's rates because of the negotiations with Bell, although in the past the parent firm has said the small size of the community and lack of industry in the area has helped keep costs high.

THE TOWN took its complaints to the Public Utility Commission. After a lengthy investigation, the PUC ordered last October that the local company be sold and that Bell of Pennsylvania be invited to submit a bid.

Most residents said they would prefer Bell to Big Run Telephone. The PUC said the sale was the only way to bring rates to "reasonable levels."

Bell says its current basic home rate ranges from $6.10 per month in Coudersport, a small town in north-central Pennsylvania near the New York border, to $9.60 in Philadelphia.

It submitted a $1.1 million bid in February, which Citizens Utilities is still considering. Should the deal fell through, the state consumer's advocate has prepared a petition asking the PUC to force the company to justify its continued service in Big Run.

Meanwhile, the townspeople are impatient. They have mounted a lobbying effort with legislators in the state capital.

"These are a quiet, conservative people," said Democratic state Sen. Patrick Stapleton, whose western Pennsylvania district includes Big Run. "The people are beginning to wonder what's going on and I don't blame them."

The protest "is an understandable act, isn't it?" said PUC member Michael Johnson. "These people were all moved by same feeling of outrage."

Emergency broadcast system in dire straits

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — In the mountains of western North Carolina, a radio station designated as an important local link in the nation's emergency broadcast system signed off the air at midnight.

In Maine, the only emergency-broadcast training given employees of a small, rural station within shouting distance of a nuclear power plant was a printed, and all but forgotten, sheet of basic instructions taped to a studio wall.

In Hawaii, during a tropical hurricane that downed power lines last year, a 40-year-old backup electrical generator supplied by the federal government failed at a key station, leaving 90 minutes of dead air instead of important warning and information broadcasts.

Such stories are not uncommon. Both broadcasters and government officials agree that the problems point to this disquieting fact: In an unexpected national crisis, the emergency broadcast system would be practically useless.

"If we were to test this system at 4 o'clock tomorrow morning, right now, with everybody relaxed, we would not reach the entire country, I know," James L. Holton, director of public affairs for the Federal Emergency Management Agency, said in a recent interview. His agency and the Federal Communications Commission jointly administer the emergency broadcast system.

Throughout the United States and its territories, the system, implemented in 1964 as a significant component of America's early-warning and emergency-information network, has lain neglected.

The system, which operates on low budgets with few supervisory personnel, is frequently critized by broadcasters, many of whom view their voluntary participation as an unnecessary and expensive burden.

Although the network is now being redesigned and streamlined, officials say it has a long way to go before it will be able to respond quickly and effectively to a national emergency.

"It stinks," Clyde Penny, coordinator of the system in North Carolina, said in a telephone interview. "There are all kinds of holes in the system. The problem is (that federal officials) don't know what the problem is."

But officials at the Federal Emergency Management Agency and the FCC dispute that assessment. They point to increased budgets and to publicity efforts to focus public attention on the national system as evidence that they not only understand the problems but are taking concrete steps to solve them.

And they express confidence in the civil-defense theory that any international emergency would be preceded by a gradual buildup of political or military tensions.

Such a buildup, said Holton and William A. Beattie, federal emergency broadcast system coordinator, would be expected to allow vital time to put manpower and equipment in place. Time also would be needed to alert the public to the growing danger.

"Our whole civil-defense posture is built on a premise that there would be no sudden, Pearl Harbor-type attack," Holton said. "The plausible scenario is (instead) that we could be forced over the edge into a nuclear exchange of some kind as a result of a series of other events, probably some kind of war."

In an effort to heighten public awareness, a nationwide dress rehearsal of the system is planned, seeking for the first time ever to air a nationwide message that would test the civil defense network's ability to warn of a nuclear attack.

The test would be the latest in a series of civil-defense measures undertaken or proposed by the Reagan administration — including a controversial plan, announced last year, for evacuation of American cities in the event of a major confrontation.

The broadcast drill, to be held six months from now at the earliest, would attempt to simulate a national emergency. It would test, for the first time since the Cold War years of the 1950s and early '60s, the U.S. ability to broadcast critical information throughout the country, said Raymond Seddon, chief of the FCC's Emergency Communications Division.

Congressman wants jury trial

WASHINGTON (AP) — Declaring that traffic charges against him are "blatantly untrue," Rep. Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, says he will ask for a jury trial in suburban Montgomery County, Md.

Stokes, 58, chairman of the House Ethics Committee, lashed out angrily at the news media in a statement Wednesday after voluntarily driving to Silver Spring, Md., to pick up the police citations.

Stokes, who is black, has accused the media of racism and distorting the story.

County police said Tuesday they were charging the Cleveland congressman with driving while intoxicated, failure to keep to the right and failure to observe a traffic signal.

Police Sgt. Harry Geehreng said the country district court will assign a trial date in the next 60 to 90 days.

"I have never had a drinking problem and was not drinking on the night in question," Stokes said. "Furthermore, no accident or traffic violations occurred."

"The incident for which I was charged yesterday took place on March 25, almost three weeks ago.

"When before today has anyone heard of a police department needing three weeks to decide whether to charge someone with traffic violations which occurred in their presence?"

Police have said Stokes was not charged immediately after his vehicle was stopped because they were informed by Capitol Police that the representative was immune from arrest because he was en route home from a late session of Congress. County attorneys have since determined that Stokes was not protected by constitutional immunity.

The suburban police said Stokes was seen driving down the wrong side of a six-lane highway in Wheaton.

Stokes made an illegal U-turn, ran a red light and began to make another illegal turn before he was stopped, police said.

Stokes failed three roadside tests for sobriety but was not given a Breathalyzer test because it was decided that no charges would be filed, police said.

Police to stake out bar stools

DETROIT (AP) — State police will be staking out bar stools, infiltrating clubs and even crashing private parties that charge admission in a pilot program to identify drunks before they drive.

Trained plainclothes officers will begin sitting in taverns in West Branch-Gladwin, South Haven-Saugatuck, Cadillac and Owosso starting in May, said the program's supervisor, Sgt. Joseph Van Oosterhout.

Uniformed officers will "pull old-style liquor inspections, looking for drunks and checking IDs (of young drinkers)," Van Oosterhout said this week.

The program is financed by a $140,000 federal grant which will mostly pay overtime for the officers, Van Oosterhout said. If the program succeeds, state police will ask for more grant money to extend it statewide.

"The actual thrust of the program is to prevent (bartenders) from allowing anyone in the establishment to get drunk," he said. Would-be drunken drivers will be escorted to detoxification centers before they start their cars, or will be taken home.

"This program really results from us realizing that arresting drunk drivers really doesn't solve the problem," Oosterhout added. "We've increased the number of arrests 500 percent since the early '60s, but that hasn't had any effect on the percentage of alcohol-related fatal accidents."

Student finds pins in doughnut

BAYTOWN, Texas (AP) — An elementary school student discovered a straight pin after biting into a doughnut and police later found pins in two other packages stocked at a grocery store, authorities said.

The three packages of six Hostess bite-size doughnuts were among a shipment delivered to a Safeway store early Tuesday, according to Lt. M.T. Reeves.

The girl's family bought one of the packages Tuesday and the child, who was not injured, felt a pin in her mouth after she bit into the doughnut at lunch Wednesday, police said.

An examination of the stock turned up two other packages of doughnuts containing pins, Reeves said. Each package had one pin in one doughnut, he said.

Reagan has second grandchild

LOS ANGELES (AP) — President Reagan has become a grandfather for the second time, thanks to a baby daughter for his oldest son.

Michael Reagan, 38, said Wednesday that his wife, Colleen, 32, gave birth Tuesday to a 6-pound, 14-ounce girl at West Hills Hospital in Canoga Park.

"The baby's doing fine, and the mother's just wonderful," he said.

The baby was named Ashley Marie Reagan.

"Marie was for Colleen's mother. Ashley was just out of the sky. Reagan was the easy part," he said.

It was the couple's second child. Their son Cameron was born in May 1978.

"I called dad and told him right away, then he called back later and talked to Colleen for 20 minutes," the younger Reagan said.

Sale of satellites needs OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's weather satellites won't be sold unless a good business deal can be worked out, a government official says.

Anthony J. Calio, deputy director of the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration, stressed that approval from Congress will be needed before any sale can take place and hearings have already been scheduled.

The sale proposed by President Reagan has generated controversy and confusion among meteorologists, members of Congress and the public.

Calio's comments came Wednesday at a meeting of the National Advisory Committee on Oceans and Atmosphere, which is expected to make a report and recommendation to Congress on the proposed sale.

Fitzgerald Bemiss of the advisory group said that in Washington, projects sometimes seem to take on a life of their own, being pushed to completion simply because they have been started. He asked, if it turns out the sale doesn't make sense, whether NOAA can go back to Reagan and urge that the idea be dropped.

'The world knew, but it did nothing'

WASHINGTON (AP) — The world knew of Adolf Hitler's systematic slaughter of the Jews of Europe while it was occurring, and the world did nothing, New York City Mayor Edward Koch told 16,000 survivors of the Holocaust.

In a closing meeting of a three-day assemblage of the survivors, at an amphitheater near the Washington Monument, the participants held lit candles in glasses.

They are usually lit on the anniversary of a death of a parent. Wednesday night, they burned in mourning for the Nazis' 6 million Jewish victims.

The survivors also heard the piercing sound of the shofar — a ram's horn blown in synagogues on two holy days, Rosh Hashana and Yom Kippur.

Koch's message was just as solemn — and, to this audience, just as familiar.

He said President Franklin D. Roosevelt received detailed reports from the U.S. Embassy in Berlin about the German atrocities but refused to increase U.S. immigration quotas.

Germans knew, too, Koch said. They lined up to apply for homes from which Jews had been removed "knowing the previous occupants would not be returning."

Koch said a December 1939 article in the Times of London pinpointed the locations of the German concentration camps and identified them as places where prisoners were being massacred, "but the world did nothing."

Then the mayor told a story known to virtually everyone before him — the 1939 voyage of the luxury liner St. Louis, carrying 930 German Jews, sailing first to Cuba and, when denied admission there, to Miami, where American authorities refused to allow it to land.

"Still thinking there might be a change of heart in Washington, the captain of the St. Louis drifted off the coast of Florida, close enough for the passengers to see the lights of Miami," Koch said.

"The Americans' only response was to dispatch a Coast Guard cutter to shadow the St. Louis to make certain that none of the persons who were trying to enter the country might swim."

Roosevelt made some attempts to deal with the Nazi brutality, but they were half-hearted, Koch said.

The president organized an international committee to handle refugee problems.

EPA urges head to seclude himself

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's nominee to head the Environmental Protection Agency should excuse himself from any actions affecting a firm that auditors claim overcharged for cleaning up hazardous waste, a congressman says.

William D. Ruckelshaus, who is awaiting Senate confirmation to the EPA post, has been a director of Peabody International Corp. for nine years. And EPA auditors say that on three "superfund" contracts, one of Peabody's subsidiaries overcharged EPA $335,022 and claimed $2 million in other charges that were inadequately documented.

Rep. Mike Synar, D-Okla., chairman of a House Government Operations environment subcommittee, said Ruckelshaus "should totally recluse himself from any activities involving Peabody and its subsidiaries."

Synar also said he was asking the congressional General Accounting Office to conduct an independent audit of EPA's three contracts with Peabody Clean Industry, Inc.

In the EPA documents obtained by The Associated Press, there was no indication that Ruckelshaus played any role in the three disputed contracts and Peabody officials say he was not involved in the firm's day-to-day operations.

The EPA's continuing review of Peabody Clean Industry's performance raises new questions about potential conflicts of interest that might face Ruckelshaus after he begins work at EPA.

Already, Ruckelshaus has said he will "insulate" himself from EPA decisions that affect the Weyerhaeuser Co., of Seattle, where he is a senior vice president. The giant lumber and paper products company has a wide range of interests that are affected by EPA decisions.

According to Peabody International's 1983 proxy statement, Ruckelshaus was paid an annual fee of $12,500 and owned or held options on 23,964 shares of the firm's stock, currently valued at about $245,000.

For the three "superfund" projects, Peabody Clean Industry charged the EPA $2.8 million. In interim audits, EPA auditors challenged $335,022 of the charges and found insufficient documentation for $2 million more.

Arafat seeks talks with Hussein

By The Associated Press

PLO chief Yasser Arafat says he wants to resume talks with King Hussein despite Jordan's brusque reaction to the PLO refusal to be represented by the king in peace negotiations with Israel.

Hussein has not responded to Arafat's comments, made at a news conference Wednesday in Stockholm. Last Sunday, Hussein broke off his negotiations with Arafat and blamed the Palestine Liberation Organization for breaking a tentative agreement to cooperate in negotiations based on a modified version of President Reagan's Middle East peace plan.

Officials in Rabat said Moroccan King Hassan postponed the Arab summit conference he was planning to convene this weekend until early May because of the Hussein-Arafat impasse.

A Jordanian official in Amman told The Associated Press on Wednesday, "We never said we are not talking with the PLO any more. All we said was that we leave it to the PLO to choose what is best for the achievement of the aspirations of the Palestinian people." The official spoke on condition he not be named.

Arafat told reporters in Stockholm that "We are ready and we will do our best to continue these joint talks with the Jordanians. Some adjustments we offered are now being discussed with the Jordanians, not directly but indirectly."

The PLO leader stressed, however, that he rejects Reagan's plan because it calls for a Palestinian federation with Jordan rather than an independent state.

The Reagan administration countered that the president's peace plan is still alive and said it would continue to work to bring Jordan into the negotiating process.

Arafat left Sweden for Tunisia today to organize what he called "a meeting of the PLO executive to discuss all these things — the recent Jordanian Cabinet statement, as well as those of President Reagan and (U.S. Secretary of State George P.) Shultz."

Shultz on Tuesday suggested that Arab nations reconsider their unanimous recognition of the PLO as sole representative of the Palestinian people. And on Wednesday, a top State Department official said Arafat's willingness to continue talks with Jordan showed that a U.S. strategy of "squeezing" the PLO was succeeding.

Shultz's remarks about the PLO drew outraged reaction today in newspapers in Bahrain, which urged Arab governments to "reconsider your relations with the United States," and the United Arab Emirates, which advised Shultz to "shut up, or direct your instructions to Israel instead of the Arab countries."

Lebanese Foreign Minister Elie Salem told reporters Wednesday after meeting with Hussein in Amman that "The Jordan-PLO talks did not collapse but have reached a crucial, difficult milestone in Middle East history.

"I believe we are now witnessing a stage of reassessing positions," he said. "It's a breathing spell. I hope Jordan and the PLO will soon emerge from their impasse. There are ways out that both parties can benefit from."

Arafat's chief military aide Abu Jihad told reporters in Amman the talks between Hussein and Arafat broke down because "the United States is unable to exert pressure on Israel and its insistence on ignoring the Palestinian rights and the legitimate sole representative of the Palestinian people."

Clovis Maksoud, the Arab League's ambassador to the United Nations, Wednesday urged the Reagan administration to "tone down" its criticism of the PLO.

'We don't think this is very conducive for a continued Arab-American dialogue," Maksoud said.

During a luncheon Wednesday at Stockholm's Grand Hotel, PLO leader Yasser Arafat receives a wooden Dalecarlia horse, a typical souvenir of Sweden. Making the presentation is a young woman identified only as Hala, an employee of PLO offices in Stockholm.

Lebanon, Israel still negotiating

KHALDE, Lebanon (AP) — Lebanon and Israel held a new round of U.S.-sponsored talks today to discuss a draft agreement proposed by Lebanon to evacuate 70,000 Israeli Syrian and Palestinian troops from this Mediterranean nation.

"It is possible to say today that the negotiators have begun discussing the annexes and other documents attached to the draft agreement," Lebanon's spokesman, Daoud Sayegh, told reporters as the talks concluded for the day. They are to resume Tuesday at Netanya, Israel.

Sayegh declined to give details beyond saying the proposed draft and attached documents "involve numerous legal and security issues. There are many important annexes to the draft."

Sayegh spoke after U.S., Lebanese and Israeli negotiators met for about two hours at a hotel in this seaside resort south of Beirut.

U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib, who headed the American negotiating team, "intervened in several issues and his interference was always effective," Sayegh said. He did not elaborate.

Habib joked in Arabic with reporters as he went into the conference room but made no statement on the progress of the talks.

Lebanon's chief negotiator, Antoine Fattal, and Israel's delegation leader, David Kimche, also refused to comment as they arrived separately for the 30th session of the talks which began Dec. 28.

China, Albania prepare to renew economic relations

By The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

PEKING — After five years of bitter quarreling, China and Albania are quietly renewing their economic relations, a breakthrough that Peking apparently hopes will help restore some of its once-substantial influence in the small, isolated Balkan country.

A Chinese economic delegation made an unannounced visit recently to Tirana, the Albanian capital, to negotiate the resumption of trade, according to Chinese and diplomatic sources here. The sale of much-needed spare parts for Chinese-supplied machinery and military equipment was the first item of discussion, those sources said.

The Chinese representatives, specialists from the Ministry of Foreign Economic Relations and Trade, also were expected to discuss the completion of 23 large industrial development projects left half-finished in July 1978, when China canceled all assistance to Albania and suspended trade.

Peking had been angered by Albanian charges that it was "taking the capitalist road" with its pragmatic reforms and had "turned revisionist and imperialist" since the death of Chairman Mao Tse-tung in September 1976. Accusing Tirana of making it impossible for its engineers, technicians and military advisers to complete the projects, Peking withdrew them all on two-weeks notice.

THE DISPUTE HAS continued, but a normally reserved Albanian diplomat here said that his country was willing to resume trade. "Political differences are not obstacles to the revival of economic contacts, though Albania is socialist and China is capitalist," he told European colleagues here.

China, however, has more in mind than trade, informed diplomats and analysts here believe, and appears to be positioning itself carefully for the struggle for influence in Albania when Enver Hoxha, 74, the communist leader there for nearly 40 years, is gone.

Albania, with a population of only 2.8 million, an economy that is among the most backward in Europe, and a recent history of political infighting, Stalinist purges and severe xenophobia, seems like a curious prize, particularly for China with its population of 1 billion, domestic preoccupations and thousands of miles between them.

But Albania is on the Balkan Peninsula, locked in a triangle between Yugoslavia, Greece and the Adriatic Sea, and the Balkans historically have been the tinderbox of Europe, a region whose own natural intrigues have always attracted the great powers and where small disputes have touched off major wars.

China already has two major competitors for influence in Albania — the Soviet Union and the United States.

IN AN OVERTURE to Albania in late November, the Kremlin offered to re-establish normal diplomatic relations, broken off in 1960. But Tirana rejected the proposal.

The United States, which has no relations with Albania, but which offered in 1973 and 1980 to discuss outstanding differences (mostly $36 million in Albanian gold it is holding with Britain and France), considered another approach early this year, according to diplomatic sources, but reportedly pulled back for fear of a rebuff.

All three countries are expecting a major political conflict when the Hoxha era ends, most probably between those who want to open the country, at least partially to the outside world, and those who adhere to Hoxha's xenophobic self-reliance and his belief that only Albania is a truly Marxist-Leninist country.

A new Albanian leadership, depending on the attitude it takes toward the major powers and to its neighbors, could affect the balance of power on the Balkan Peninsula and perhaps in Eastern Europe and the eastern Mediterranean, diplomats here speculate, drawing on the region's historical volatility to support their arguments.

Resumption of Sino-Albanian trade is likely to be sufficient to generate new rumors of a Chinese-inspired Balkan alliance of Albania, Romania and Yugoslavia — a frequent proposal by Peking in the 1970s, although it seemed to ignore Albanian-Yugoslav hostility.

THE CHINESE TRADE mission to Tirana was preceded by a number of signals from Peking that China was interested in improving relations with Albania. Among them:

—Unusually cordial greetings from Chinese leaders to the Albanian premier and president on their election last November and again on National Day.

—A marked change in Chinese press coverage of Albania. Whereas a year ago it reported all the purges and intrigues in the wake of the mysterious death of a former premier, who officially is described as a suicide but who was probably killed on Hoxha's orders, the Chinese news media now blandly report the activities of the Albanian national assembly, the results of its economic plan and the occasional visits of foreign dignitaries, all without comment. An article in the February issue of the journal World Knowledge provided an unusually positive account of Albania's development, avoiding the two countries' sharp dispute.

—An article in the Chinese Communist Party journal Red Flag, which stressed Peking's desire to establish or restore party-to-party relations with other Communist, Socialist and Worker parties, was pointed out by Chinese officials to Albania's ambassador here when he left Peking at the end of his tour. "He was told that we are very sincere in this, and that Albania is among the first of those countries with which we want to improve relations in view of our past friendship," a well-informed Chinese source said. The new Albanian ambassador is expected next month.

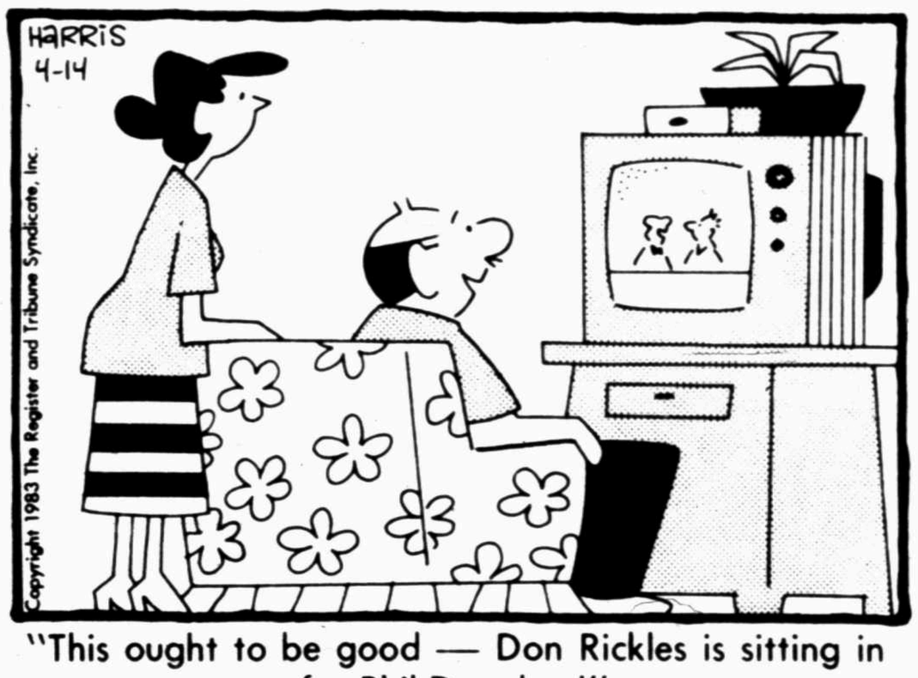
THE BETTER HALF



"This ought to be good — Don Rickles is sitting in for Phil Donahue!"

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, April 14, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Actress Julie Christie, the distinguished Sir John Gielgud, football great Harry Gilmer, country star Loretta Lynn, actors Rod Steiger and Anthony Perkins and Philadelphia Phillies first baseman Pete Rose celebrate birthdays today. Also born on this date: the famous historian Arnold Toynbee. The months ahead bring good news. Your doubts about a new love prove unfounded. Go ahead and try a different lifestyle. Although business is sometimes frustrating, profits rise. Contact old friends and former work associates. A family member finally returns to the fold. Allow yourself more time to complete important projects.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Constant travel may be tiring, but it is the key to success right now. Always stay one step ahead of the competition. Level with creditors. Ask help in developing a repayment plan.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You receive a tempting job offer, but could find there are too many strings attached. Check it out. Higher-ups are impressed by the way you accept new responsibilities.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Those who travel in their work find good luck on the road today. Arrange to take a short leave of absence if faced with a pressing personal crisis. The boss proves understanding.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Protect your credibility by obeying your conscience. An investment turns out to be a better deal than you anticipated. A chance meeting leads you to some property you hoped to find.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): End an unrewarding romance. It is having a negative effect on everything you do. A new job becomes available. Follow up immediately. Do not keep mate in the dark about a money problem.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seize a chance to travel. It will be a wonderful learning experience and could lead to romance. Go slow in making decisions. Circumstances can change quickly. Stabilize a family relationship.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Seek out someone you can trust and confide what is troubling you. A former romantic partner is single again and wants to return. Think about what is best for you. Show generosity towards an unemployed relative.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can overcome a major financial obstacle if you forget all pretenses. Put your shoulder to the wheel. Conflict could enhance your creativity. A romantic adventure gives you new hope.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Proceed cautiously when it comes to revealing your plans. A competitor could have spies on the premises. A homemaker needs to get out of the house. Invite her to lunch.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): An invitation you were unsure of accepting turns into a wonderful time. Successful matchmaking leaves you wishing you could help more of your lonely friends. Do not get carried away!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Balance your business and social obligations by using one to help the other. An overlooked mistake could come back to haunt you. New friendships help you reach a career goal.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Lasting bonds are formed when you and a former competitor join forces. A lost item is suddenly recovered. A colleague falls for your charms. Be tactful if you do not return the feeling.

'We The Accused' on PBS

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — "We, The Accused" is a long, classy thriller in which strong characters dominate a rather standard story of murder and pursuit.

Indeed, Ernest Raymond's crime novel, and Jonathan Powell's superior TV adaptation, ends dramatically and forcefully, which is precisely what the writer intended.

"The novel itself is not the world's greatest book," Powell says, "but Raymond was a very good storyteller, and he hit on a subject — capital punishment — that was then, and I think still is, a very cogent issue."

Paul Presset, a poor schoolmaster who falls in love with a colleague and, early on, murders his tyrannical wife, ends up facing the hangman's noose. There is, on reflection, no other reasonable way to end the story. But, curiously, through five hours, there is always hope — that he will elude the law, that he will avoid prosecution and execution.

"Raymond, for his time, was unusual," says Powell, who produced the show for the British Broadcasting Corp. "He was prepared to write about a murderer as a sympathetic hero.

"You want them to live a happy life together," Powell says of Presset and his paramour, "though in reality, you know he doesn't deserve it."

Ian Holm plays Presset, Elizabeth Spriggs his wife, Elinor, and Angela Down his shy lover, Myra Bawne, in "We, the Accused," that begins a five-week run on public TV's "Mystery!" series tonight at 8CST.

Holm played the trainer in the Oscar-winning "Chariots of Fire," and has been seen on American television in "Jesus of Nazareth," "The Rise and Fall of the Third Reich" and "Les Miserables."

Ms. Spriggs appeared recently in the "Mystery!" presentation of "The Last Trumpet," one of the "Sergeant Cribb" stories.

"We, The Accused," the best-known of Raymond's many novels, was published in 1935, and Powell says, "I thought it had a kind of resonance, was a very good, period-genre thriller. We really fancied doing it in a classy way."

Raymond, the author, was notably attentive to detail. He cultivated the friendship of a young Scotland Yard officer, Joe Simpson, in preparation for writing the novel. And before describing Presset's ultimate imprisonment, he spoke at length with an ex-convict released from prison on a technicality just a few days before his scheduled execution.

Powell, the producer, was no less careful in maintaining the integrity of what one contemporary critic called a "technically flawless" book.

There are many things a good bridge player does automatically, like giving count in crucial situations. But you shouldn't make any play without giving the situation the proper amount of attention. This hand from London's famed St. James Club is a typical example.

After North dredged up a one diamond overcall, South showed his strength with a cue-bid of the enemy suit. West tried to make life difficult for his opponents with a barrage bid of four clubs, but there was no denying South — his suit was good enough to introduce at the four-level.

West led his ace of diamonds and then shifted to the king of clubs. The normal way for East to show that he holds a doubleton in the suit would be to start an echo by playing the higher of the two cards he holds. Had he yielded to the reflex action, declarer would have wrapped up his four spade contract, for West would surely have continued with the ace of clubs and another, and declarer would have had his ten tricks.

But East realized that he could not overruff dummy. Since he was a very good player, he followed suit with the two of clubs. Now it was West's turn to don his thinking cap.

Since East could not possibly have a trick, it was pretty obvious that the defenders would have to collect their four tricks in the minor suits. But how was West going to reach the East hand for a diamond lead?

Clubs was the only possibility. West had to hope that East's two of clubs was either a singleton or from a holding that included the nine, so at trick three he led his low club. East was rather surprised to find that his nine of clubs held the trick, but he was not so startled that he forgot to switch back to a diamond. West's ruff was the setting trick.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Honor thy father

Federal authorization for the states to require adult children to help pay for the nursing home care of indigent parents is more than a way to control Medicaid costs. It is a highly ethical policy that could help restore mutual parent-child responsibilities in this age of the splintered nuclear family.

In effect, the federal government will be providing a financial incentive for children to invite parents to spend their golden years with their families, instead of warehousing them in nursing homes. If only to save money, children may prefer to keep their parents at home.

In an effort to cope with new limits on Medicaid spending, some states already have laws requiring children to pay a portion of their parents' nursing home expenses. But these laws were not enforceable under previous interpretations of the federal Medicaid regulations.

The new policy, then, is a logical extension of the regulations that have permitted the states to hold an adult responsible for support of a spouse and a parent responsible for support of children under the age of 21.

It once was customary for the elderly to live out their years with their children in accordance with the ancient Judaic-Christian tenet of honoring one's parents.

In recent years, however, the advent of social security, general affluence, and job mobility all contributed to the trend of separation of aging parents from their children. Even though the basic consideration is economic, the new administration policy could renew family ties sanctified by civilization.

Certainly, the new policy is fiscally sound and morally correct. Equally important, it will discourage the needless use of nursing homes as dumping grounds for the elderly.

Return of the King

The mighty King Kong couldn't even hold his head up. In fact, his spongy nose was pushed flat against the Empire State Building, a structure he once handled like a jungle gym in a play yard.

His weakened condition was blamed on a 6-inch gash in his shoulder. This King Kong was obviously a phony. The real McCoy wouldn't bother with such a scratch. Why, he could fan away machine gun bullets like they were so many buzzing gnats.

The latest ape attempting the heights of the Empire State Building was a 3,000-pound, 84-foot-high, ape-shaped balloon built by Robert Keith & Co. The balloon was carried up an elevator and rigged near the top of the 102-story building so it could be inflated by blowers.

The idea was to inflate the balloon in time to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the debut of the movie King Kong, a sort of piece de resistance for a celebration party on the 86th-floor observation deck below. Instead of becoming a model of the mighty movie ape, the balloon puffed up awkwardly and looked much more like the Blob.

At the party, a letter from Fay Wray was read to guests. She was the blond actress who 50 years ago screamed and writhed in terror in the palm of King Kong's hand. She needn't have worried. The big ape was eating out of hers all the time.

Meanwhile, outside the Empire State Building, New Yorkers lined the sidewalks, gawking skyward like so many tourists from Omaha. They were disappointed, but they should not abandon hope.

Weeks from now, on the late, late show, when the moon is hidden and the wind is rattling the shutters, the King will rise again, beating thunder from his mighty chest with one hand and giving Fay Wray a little love squeeze with the other.

Another View:

Still a job to do

Congress should reauthorize the Civil Rights Commission. There is still a job to be done, although it is a rather different one from that which confronted the newly created commission 25 years ago.

Some charge that the commission is adrift in social policy, a mere advocacy organization. But the commission's publications reveal that close to 90 percent of its output is right where it should be — on problems of discrimination: monitoring all levels of government for their compliance with and enforcement of civil rights laws; studying patterns of employment and working conditions to monitor discrimination; documenting violence against racial and religious minorities; contributing to the continuing debates over affirmative action, school desegregation methods, and so forth.

Some of the commission's work is less conventional, although justifiable. Its study of black farmers continues nearly two decades of commission interest in whether federal programs have been especially damaging to black farmers and have thereby contributed to black rural flight. A controversial study of discrimination against "Euroethnics" was ordered by Congress. The commission examined the "new federalism" primarily to ask what would become of the civil rights compliance strings attached to categorical grant programs.

So, many complaints about the commission are overstated. But it does do some things foolishly and badly. By addressing areas on the fringe of discrimination, the commission risks becoming a fringe organization. Its bolder forays into controversial areas have at times lacked the rigor and balance of its data-gathering efforts. The commission has been known more than once to sound like an adjunct of private civil rights and advocacy organizations, and some people fear that over the years its political independence has been severely eroded.

The commission has enough money and manpower — $12 million and more than 230 civil servants — but its effectiveness depends on the quality of its work. Presidents and senators should not treat appointments to this commission as familiar matters of patronage, reward and ideology. The wrenching issues are too tough for amateurs. Commission members, unlike some at present and in the past, should bring stature to the job — not come in search of it. And they should come without allegiance to either private organizations or political officials, all of whom the commission must be prepared to criticize.

ART BUCHWALD

Watt won't bear blame for fizzle!

The Department of Interior is now hard at work planning the July Fourth celebration on the Washington Mall. Secretary of the Interior Watt is involved in every detail of the celebration.

Art Buchwald

"Mr. Secretary, here are the latest rules we're issuing to assure the Mall party will be a patriotic family affair."

"Read them to me."

"No one with long hair or beards will be permitted to sit on the grass."

"What about the dress code?"

"All males will be expected to wear jackets and ties, and all females must wear skirts and blouses, or dresses with proper necklines. The Park Police will turn the hoses on anyone who is not properly attired."

"That should keep out the rowdy element. Did you check out the hosing with our legal department?"

"Yes, and they have informed me it's your Mall, and your Fourth of July."

"How are you doing on the food rules?"

"We're banning brown bags. People are only permitted to bring picnic hampers, but they will be examined to make sure they don't smuggle in any wine. Any unlicensed food purveyors will be horsewhipped. This also goes for souvenir people selling Nuclear Freeze Buttons."

"Good. What else have you come up with?"

"We've divided the Mall into smoking and non-smoking sections."

"Is that necessary outdoors?"

"We're limited in the number of narc agents at our disposal, and in this way we can keep a better eye on anyone who tries to light up a joint."

"How are we doing on the entertainment?"

"I spoke to the United States Army bandmaster and he gave me a list of patriotic songs they plan to play."

"Let me see it ... They're not serious. Are they really including 'This Land Was Made For You and Me'?"

"What's wrong with it?"

"Haven't you ever heard the lyrics? They're against everything this Interior Department stands for. We're trying to sell off the land and open it up to mining and lumbering, and lease the oil rights. If people believe it's their land, they'll take us to court. Throw it out."

"Yes, sir. Anything else you don't like?"

"How did John Philip Sousa's 'Washington Post March' get on this list?"

"I have no idea. Someone in EPA must have goofed. We'll dump it."

"They can't be thinking of playing 'Sergeant Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band.' That's a Beatles song!"

"We thought kids might like it."

"But the Beatles are hard rock, and I told you I didn't want hard rock on my Fourth of July."

"Then it won't be performed, sir. We'll replace it with 'When I Grow Too Old to Dream.'"

"That's more like it. My wife loves that song."

"Do you want to go over Wayne Newton's numbers?"

"Of course not. Anyone who works in Las Vegas knows what the American people want to hear. What about the fireworks display?"

"Strictly family stuff, sir. There isn't an R-rated rocket in the package."

"One more thing. I don't want any anti-administration demonstrations on the Fourth."

"You have nothing to fear on that score. If anybody holds up a sign, our mounted police will trample them into the ground."

"Well done, Meddler. If the country doesn't have a safe and sane Fourth of July this year, they can't blame it on old Jim Watt."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Refugee victimizations continuing

WASHINGTON — Nearly two years ago, I reported the pitiful story of Vietnamese refugees who are being brutally raped, robbed and murdered as they try to flee their communist homeland in rickety boats across the Gulf of Thailand.

Jack Anderson

Their cruel tormentors are Thai pirates, scourge of the southern seas, who carry on their pillage under the nose of an indifferent Royal Thai Navy.

The story caught the eye of President Reagan. Touched by the plight of the boat people, he instructed a top White House aide to direct the Navy to protect the helpless refugees.

Despite this compassionate order from the commander-in-chief, however, the world's mightiest navy has done nothing to stop the depradations of the Thai cutthroats.

So the carnage goes on.

Outraged State Department sources describe the assaults as "an abomination" ... "crimes against humanity" ... "something that supposedly went out with Attila the Hun."

A typical attack includes the wanton slaughter of ablebodied men, gang rapes of the women and theft of anything of value — even the clothes off the refugees' backs.

In some cases, babies are tossed overboard to drown, apparently for the pirates' amusement. Many refugee boats are attacked several times before the half-dead survivors finally reach safety in Malaysia or Indonesia.

Confidential State Department cables examined by my associate Lucette Lagnado indicate that U.S. officials, including Ambassador John Gunther Dean, have complained forcefully to the Thai government about its failure to crack down on the piracy.

Last December, Dean and the ambassadors of other concerned governments — Switzerland, Italy, Norway, Britain and Australia — discussed the situation with Thai officials in Bangkok. "The suffering of the refugees at the hands of the pirates must be alleviated," Dean told the Thais.

According to one cable, "the ambassador stressed to the (Thai) naval authorities that concrete results were needed," and added that if the pirate attacks were not reduced, "the image of Thailand as a country which followed humane policies would be hurt." The Thais' failure, Dean warned diplomatically, "could have a detrimental impact on a wide range of issues."

Dean characterized the Thais' efforts to date as "disappointing." When the Thai officials asked for more money to fight the pirates, Dean pointed out that the current $3.6 million program being financed by foreign governments was already "a substantial commitment."

No one minimizes the difficulties involved. There are as many as 50,000 vessels plying the Gulf of Thailand. Many of them are legally registered fishing boats that make up an important part of the Thai economy. The sheer number of vessels and the size of the gulf make policing the area a staggering job.

The anti-piracy program depends on airplanes to spot apparent pirate attacks and pinpoint the location for Thai gunboats. But in the entire month of November 1982, according to the State Department, only five such sightings were made, and in most cases the patrol boats either arrived too late or went to the wrong place because of faulty directions.

The U.S. Navy has accomplished even less — though it has the planes and helicopters needed to patrol the gulf.

Footnote: The "refugee season" is about to resume. Rep. Stephen Solarz, D-N.Y., has pushed for a $5 million appropriation to help the Thai government in its currently ineffective war on the pirates.

LOOKING IT UP: As the armed services' weapons have grown more complicated, the maintenance manuals have more than kept pace. Many are unintelligible to the mechanics who must use them. For example:

— The repair manual for the Navy's Cougar plane in 1950 ran to 1,800 pages. By 1975, the F-14 required a 250,000-page manual.

— To fix one particular radar malfunction on a C-141 transport, the technician must flip through 165 pages in eight separate documents, and look in 41 different places.

— The time it takes personnel to search through technical manuals costs the Air Force $630 million a year. And one study noted: "Once the information is found, there is no guarantee that the technician will find it usable."

— For all services, there are 131,000 aviation maintenance manuals, running to nearly 13 million pages.

— The Army alone could save $1.7 billion a year if manuals were improved to make them more usable.

• • •

WHITE HOUSE PIPELINE: Despite a severe recession, officials of the United Way reported a 6 percent increase in funds raised last year. They attributed it in part to President Reagan's personal appeal last September. Reagan told them he was "amazed" that disaster areas like Detroit and Cleveland contributed more than their goals.

— Good Friday was quiet time at the White House. Budget Director David Stockman and congressional liaison chief Kenneth Duberstein had lunch together in the White House mess — and for the first time they could recall, neither one was summoned from lunch to take a phone call.

— Everyone's a critic. When 6-year-old Christopher Rush, the Muscular Dystrophy poster child, exchanged jars of jellybeans with President Reagan at the White House, the president regaled Christopher and his parents with a few stories. My reporter later asked Christopher what the Reagan stories were all about. "They were all about the same," he answered brightly.

GEORGE F. WILL

Florian: Case of noble homicide

WASHINGTON — It is said that hard cases make bad law. But bad law can be made by pretending that hard cases are not cases.

George F. Will

Consider the case of Hans Florian, who on March 18 shot to death the woman to whom he had been married for 33 years. His act was loving, brave, even noble. Nevertheless, it was not an act about which society should be indifferent or permissive, or about which the law should be agnostic. Yet a Florida grand jury refused to indict him.

Alzheimer's disease began destroying his wife's mind in the late 1970s. There is no known cause or cure for the disease. It causes the brain to shrivel and fill with bubbles and granules. Soon his wife could not drive or write, and would panic when he stepped away from her. He and his son by an earlier marriage cared for her, forcing her mouth open for food, and bathing her and changing her clothes five or six times a day as she soiled them.

For most of the past two years, whenever she was not heavily drugged she howled constantly, and screamed two words, "fire" and "pain," in her native German. Finally, she had to be put in a nursing home for her own safety. Hans Florian is 17 years older than she was and he did not want do die leaving her alone.

This case did not involve any of the multiplying dilemmas occasioned by the sophistication of modern medicine, the mechanical and pharmacological technologies that can prolong a painful process of dying, without altering the prognosis. This was not the sort of case for which hospice care is most suited. Such care is designed for the predictable final period of a terminal disease, during which the patient can lead a tolerable life enhanced by pain management. Alzheimer's disease can run on and on.

This was not a case where a person had sunk into a condition where, by some arguable definition, death could be said to have occurred. Mrs. Florian's mind was destroyed, but brain death had not happened.

Because Alzheimer's disease is terrifying, irreversible and protracted, Florian's case underscores this fact: There is no way entirely to exclude "quality of life" considerations from all controversies in biomedical ethics.

Many persons feel proper anxiety about casual, incoherent injections of "meaningful life" rhetoric in the 1973 Supreme Court abortion ruling, and in rationalizations for infanticide even against newborns with easily remediable physical defects. Therefore, many persons have tried to assert "sanctity of life" criteria that would enable all decision-making to proceed with consideration of the quality of life a subject can lead.

Quality of life assessments are fraught with difficulties and dangers. Current practices offer abundant examples of mistakes and abuses. However, when "heroic" medical measures are employed, or when there is a decision to intervene in a person's life to alter the course nature would take in "taking its course," this is true: You can not judge the morality of what is done without reference to the quality of life that has been extended by heroic medicine or ended by extreme action.

However, the law can not quite countenance such extreme measures as Florian's, even when, as in this case, the situation is extreme. Obviously Florian was in an unsettled frame of mind when carrying out his considered decision to shoot the woman he loved. But he did not try to diminish his responsibility for his action. And there was no ambiguity concerning competent consent: Florian obviously substituted his judgment for that of a person incapable of choosing.

It is, therefore, hard to see how the grand jury can have properly refused to indict. Surely there was probable cause for finding that a crime — homicide — had been committed. Grand juries require less to indict (a finding of probable cause to believe that a crime has been committed) than a trial jury requires to convict (proof of guilt beyond reasonable doubt).

The proper place for society to express compassionate understanding in cases such as Florian's is at the sentencing stage. There should be ample discretion there to enable society to avoid the practice of not indicting when a homicide undoubtedly has occurred. Such a practice would express the dangerous doctrine that certain homicides are matters of indifference to society.

Some cases are hard because this is true: A homicide can be noble without properly being, in the eyes of the law, completely permissible.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Ten years ago: South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu returned to Saigon from a two-week world trip and predicted a new constructive era in his country.

Five years ago: Limited progress was reported in talks held in Tanzania by U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance and British Foreign Minister David Owen with Rhodesian guerrilla leaders.

One year ago: Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger became the first U.S. government official ever to state that Soviet intercontinental nuclear missiles had become more accurate than those of the United States.

Today's birthdays: Actor John Gielgud is 79 years old, actor Rod Steiger is 58 and baseball star Pete Rose is 42.

Oil slick conference canceled

KUWAIT (AP) — Iran and Iraq remained at odds diplomatically as well as on the battlefield today, forcing postponement of a regional ministerial conference seeking ways to clean up the giant Persian Gulf oil slick.

Cabinet ministers from eight gulf nations including the warring countries failed at their first meeting last week to agree on joint action against the oil spill. Kuwaiti Health Minister Abdul Rahman al-Awadi said at the time their major accomplishment was "getting Iran and Iraq together under one roof."

Even that was not acheived today, as al-Awadi shuttled for hours between the hotel suites of the Iraqi and Iranian delegations in an abortive attempt to get them to the negotiating table.

Sources close to the Iranian delegation said Kuwait has proposed assuming responsibility for capping two leaking wells in the northern part of the gulf and recruiting international experts to disperse and eliminate the slick.

Sino-Soviet relations better

PEKING (AP) — While Sino-U.S. relations have sunk to their lowest point in four years, China is mending fences with its former advesaries in Moscow and briskly renewing ties with the rest of the Soviet bloc.

With obvious approval from the Soviet Union, Eastern European nations are eagerly restoring athletic and academic exchanges with China. They are rebuilding trade, technical and economic cooperation after a 20-year hiatus.

China broke political relations and terminated virtually all exchanges with the Soviet Union and its allies after the Sino-Soviet split of the 1960s. At that time Peking and Moscow feuded over ideology and competed for leadership of the international communist movement.

Constitutional balloting near

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Panamanians vote in 10 days on a new constitution which may end the legacy of military control left by the late dictator Gen. Omar Torrijos and return the nation to full-fledged civilian rule.

If approved, the new constitution would provide for direct election of a president, two vice presidents and a single-house legislature no later than Oct. 11, 1984, when President Ricardo de la Espriella's term of office ends.

More important, the constitutional draft forbids national guard members from entering politics.

Political analysts in Panama say the new constitution is intended to end the cronyism that has influenced Panamanian government affairs since Torrijos and the National Guard took power in a 1968 coup. Since then the legislature has elected the presidents and the guard has maintained overwhelming control.

Poles seek asylum in Italy

LEGHORN, Italy (AP) — Four Poles on a Mediterranean cruise asked for political asylum in Italy when their liner docked here this week, the Italian news agency ANSA said today.

It said the four, three men and a woman, were taken to a camp south of Rome pending a decision on their case by Italian authorities.

The four were passengers on the Polish-flag ship Batory, which is scheduled to depart this northwest coastal town Monday.

Walesa again interrogated

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa, chief of the outlawed Solidarity labor federation, was seized and interrogated by police for nearly five hours Wednesday about a clandestine meeting with underground union leaders.

"As a free man, I have a right to meet with anyone, even criminal elements, so long as the meeting has no criminal intent," Walesa told reporters after he returned to his apartment in the early evening.

On Thursday morning, a spokeswoman at the Walesa household said Danuta Walesa — the labor leader's wife — had been told to report to Gdansk police headquarters later in the day "as a witness." Mrs. Walesa was not immediately available for comment.

Thai skeptical on withdrawal

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — Thai Foreign Ministry officials are skeptical about Vietnam's announcement of a partial troop withdrawal from Cambodia following a two-week campaign to knock out resistance forces, published reports today said.

The Nation Review, an English-language newspaper, quoted Foreign Minister Siddhi Savetsila as saying "somebody should tell (Vietnamese Foreign Minister) Nguyen Co Thach to be serious about the withdrawal pledge."

But he added that if the partial withdrawal took place, it "would be good news since it would reduce tension on the border."

Radio Hanoi said Wednesday that the withdrawal, agreed upon by Vietnam, Cambodia and Laos, would occur next month. The joint communique did not specify how many of Vietnam's estimated 180,000 soldiers in Cambodia would be removed.

The foreign ministers of the three Communist countries also renewed an earlier proposal for a security zone along the Thai-Cambodian border, a neutral strip to be supervised by international officials.

Angolan leader visits U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Angolan minister of interior held wide-ranging talks with State Department officers that included the issue of Cuban troops in the African country but there were "no breakthroughs," a U.S. official says.

The minister, Alexandre Rodrigues, is considered one of the most influential in the Angolan government, with which the United States has no diplomatic relations.

Rodrigues discussed not only Cuban troops, but also "security arrangements in southern Africa, Namibia and possible future relations (with the United States)," said the official who disclosed Wednesday's talks.

Mitterand visiting Zurich

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Francois Mitterrand today began the first state visit to Switzerland by a French president since 1910, planning to discuss what the Swiss regard as "strains" between the two neighbors.

Mitterrand's wife, Danielle, said she was staying home to show solidarity with French citizens restricted or prevented from traveling abroad this year because of his government's new currency controls.

Swiss President Pierre Aubert greeted Mitterrand, and ministers Claude Cheysson for foreign affairs, Jacques Delores for finance, Charles Hernu for defense and Edith Cresson for trade and tourism at Kloten Airport here.

He has described the 73-year span since the last French state visit here as a "historical omission."

In a romantic gesture, Mitterrand is expected during his visit to settle a $22,000 bill owed by Napoleon. The French emperor reneged on his promise to the village of Bourg St. Pierre that he would cover any damage caused by French troops crossing the Alps in 1800 on their way to Italy.

Mitterrand's itinerary also includes visits to the Swiss capital of Berne and the cities of Neuchatel, Solothurn and Basel before his departure Saturday. French relations with the Swiss, never warm, have cooled further since the election of Mitterrand's Socialist government two years ago.

PROTECT YOURSELF FROM THE IRS WITH AN IRA FROM FIRST CITY.

Why pay more now when you can pay less later?

With a First City Individual Retirement Account (IRA), you can set aside tax-deductible funds now to use for your retirement years later, when your taxes should be much lower.

As an individual wage earner, you can make a tax-deductible IRA contribution of up to $2,000 a year, $2,250 if your non-working spouse is included, or $4,000 when both spouses work and file a joint return. Deposits made during 1982 are deductible on your 1982 return. And the tax will be deferred on the interest earned as long as it's reinvested in your IRA.

What's more, unlike arrangements with brokerage firms or regular money market funds, your First City IRA is insured up to $100,000 by the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation. This is in addition to the insurance you may have on other deposits.

So what it all boils down to is this: You can continue to pay the IRS more in taxes right now. Or you can save now, earn a higher interest rate, and pay a lot less later on. All you need is an Individual Retirement Account from First City.

Call Venita Gaston at 685-5292 or come visit with Venita in our personal banking lobby in First City Center.

Deadline for '82 deposits is April 15, 1983

Llamas are great lawnmowers

MANTUA, Ohio (AP) — Tax breaks and high-quality wool are two reasons why some Americans are plunking down $5,000 or more for a pair of llamas. But the South American animals make terrific lawnmowers, too.

"We really don't have an average customer," says Andy Tillman, president of the International Llama Association, and a llama breeder in Athena, Ore. "They appeal to a very wide range because they are a general farm animal and they're an attractive sort of lawnmower."

In northeastern Ohio and in the Pacific Northwest, where 63 percent of North America's 3,200 llamas are located, a rush of sorts is on.

"I live 250 miles from the nearest big city, so usually people don't bother me during the winter. The phone rang constantly. I could've sold 50 more llamas than I did," Tillman said.

In Mantua, between Cleveland and Youngstown in northeastern Ohio, demand for llamas has been so brisk that Anthony Stachowski, a veterinarian who owns a dozen of the long-necked, camel-faced animals, has turned many askers away.

Waiting lists for llamas, which usually are sold in pairs, range from 12 weeks to 18 months, says Kay Patterson, who runs a llama business with her husband near Sisters, Ore.

"I don't know what it is, but many people have told me they want to smile just from looking at a llama," Mrs. Patterson said. "I just think they make people happy."

The Pattersons, who have about 600 llamas on their 350-acre farm in central Oregon, are believed to be the largest llama brokers in the country. Tillman said the Pattersons own about 10 percent of the continent's females, which can give birth to a single animal once every 11 months.

"We've always had a waiting list," she said. "I don't think there will ever be a glut of llamas on the market."

One reason is that the U.S. Department of Agriculture has banned the import of llamas since the 1930s because the animals are susceptible to such livestock illnesses as hoof-and-mouth disease.

Llamas pay for themselves in about three years, Mrs. Patterson said.

"Doctors usually invest in land, and they want something to go along with it," she said. "Llamas are perfect for that because they don't require a lot of land."

A person who owns a mimimum of three females and one male llama can depreciate their cost and care on federal income taxes over a five-to-10-year period, she said.

"Of all the exotic animals, they're the most friendly of all," Stachowski said. "We've sold males that have become very close to people, almost like dogs."

Llamas generally are social. They have front teeth on the lower jaw only, so they rarely bite. They defend themselves by spitting, because their spittle carries a foul odor that generally lingers on an unlucky target.

"They've gotten a bad rap in the press because they do that," Mrs. Patterson said.

"They will almost always threaten to spit before they will spit," Tillman said. "They are almost pacifists."

Aside from that one bad habit, triggered by anger or fright, the llama has little or no odor. They live 15 to 20 years, can grow to 46 inches in height and weigh 350 to 550 pounds. Llamas may be brown, white, black or beige.

One suburban Cleveland restaurant has been known occasionally to serve llama as an entree; its taste has been compared with lamb.

Wind, sand, cold, loss: Cubs suffer from all

Gators spoil home opener, 12-2

Without words, Beaumont pitcher Jim Coffman describes the kind of night it was for Midland's Texas League home opener as he huddles against the icey blasts in the Gator bullpen. Coffman later was forced to abandon the comfort of his jacket and towels to finish the game.

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

It was a night fit for neither man nor beast. Now reptiles, that was something else again.

Beaumont's garishly green clad Gators spoiled the Midland Cubs' home opener, 12-2, at windy Cubs Stadium Wednesday night. At least, they spoiled what the weatherman hadn't already spoiled.

At game time, it was windy, sandy and cold, getting colder as the evening wore on and many of the 910 fans who braved the elements peeked out from under blankets to watch the game.

HOWEVER, AFTER what the Gators went through to get to Midland, a little cold weather wasn't about to bother the San Diego Padres' farmhands.

Not only did the bus break down in San Antonio, but so did the rescue bus.

"We were in Kerrville from 9:30 a.m. until 12:30 p.m., in a motel room waiting for help to arrive," explained Beaumont Manager Jack Malouf.

"We got to Midland and just had time to dump our bags at the motel and get to the ball park in time for the game." Well, not quite, the Gators didn't even get in any infield or batting practice and the start of play was delayed 10 minutes so the team could "freshen up" after arriving at Cubs Stadium.

You'd never have guessed it from the game. The Gators roughed up four Midland pitchers for 14 hits while Walt Vanderbush and Jim Coffman combined to limit Midland to eight hits while fanning 11.

VANDERBUSH, who teamed with Marty Kain to shut out San Antonio in the season's opener, held Midland to one hit through five innings and had a three-hitter going when he gave way to Coffman.

Midland's Bill Hatcher singled up the middle to open the home first, stole second and then scored on a couple of grounders to second.

The lead didn't last long. Cub starter Ron Richardson couldn't find the plate in the second, walking the first two batters and then surrendering a two-run double to Pat Casey. After Ron hit Tommy Incaviglia with a pitch and walked Ozzie Guillen, Steve Garcia singled in two more runs.

Before Ken Pryce could get the side out, it was 5-1.

In the fourth, the Gators "iced" it with three more runs, capped by Mark Gillaspie's two-run homer.

Casey led the Gators with three rbi, the other coming on a sacrifice fly in the eighth while Dan Purpura collected three singles.

Midland's other run came when Rick Baker doubled to open the ninth and A.J. Hill followed with a single.

Tonight it will be Darrell Banks (1-0) going for Midland against George Stablein at 7 p.m. Stablein was 4-12 for Hawaii in the AAA Pacific Coast League last year while Banks was 13-6 with Quad City in the A Midwest League.

BRUIN BREWIN'S—The Cubs, now 2-3, picked a bad night to have a bad night with Chicago Farm Director Gordon Goldsberry in the stands...In comparison to Midland, Beaumont has an experienced staff, averaging a shade under 25 years in age, and with Stablein, Coffman, Kain, Vanderbush and Jim Oberbrunner all having at least AA experience...Vanderbush was a 13-game winner with Jacksonville, Southern League last year, and was part of the trade that sent Mike Armstrong from Kansas City to San Diego...Doug Welenc, a 13-game winner with Midland last year, was being groomed for relief work with Iowa in spring training at Mesa when he became a victim of the numbers game and was sent to Midland to "get some innings in". "I hadn't thrown 30 pitches at a time during spring, which is why I went only 4 2/3 innings in El Paso the other night. And this was Tahiti compared to the cold in El Paso."...

Ayala found guilty, facing 50

PATERSON, N.J. (AP) — World-ranked boxer Tony Ayala Jr. was convicted Wednesday of sexually assaulting a woman who lived in his apartment complex and faces a maximum penalty of 50 years in prison.

Ayala, 20, who showed little emotion when the Superior Court jury announced its verdict, was returned to Passaic County jail until sentencing June 21. Judge Amos C. Saunders revoked Ayala's $75,000 bail.

Ayala is the top-ranked junior middleweight contender in the World Boxing Association and is ranked No.2 among the 154 pounders by World Boxing Council. He was arrested Jan. 1 after police said a 30-year-old insurance saleswoman identified him as the man who assaulted her in her West Paterson, N.J., apartment.

Ayala made the sign of the cross as the jury entered the courtroom following 3½ hours of deliberations. His wife, Lisa, and mother wept and embraced when the jury announced "guilty" to six separate counts.

The victim also wept when the verdict was announced and said she was "relieved." The woman and her roommate had provided key testimony against Ayala in the 11-day trial.

Ayala will undergo evaluation at the Adult Diagnostic and Treatment Center in Avenel, N.J., prior to sentencing. Ayala's attorney said he would not discuss any possible appeal until he met with the defendant today.

Ayala was indicted by a Passaic County grand jury Jan. 10 on charges of burglary, aggravated assault, aggravated sexual assault, making a threat to kill, making a terroristic threat and two counts of possession of a weapon (knife) for unlawful purposes. The aggravated assault charge was dropped Monday.

THE DEFENSE claimed Ayala, who lived across the street from the victim's apartment, was invited to the woman's apartment and that she consented to their involvement.

Ayala's lawyer, William J. DeMarco, claimed in closing arguments Tuesday that charges against Ayala were the result of a "nosey woman who called police" when she was unable to determine "what was going on with her roommate behind closed doors ... which is nobody's business."

In his summation, Ronald G. Marmo, assistant Passaic County prosecutor, called Ayala an "arrogant liar" with an "indifference to the truth."

Saunders denied two motions for a mistrial by defense attorneys Wednesday morning before charging the jury of six men and six women. The defense claimed improper comments were made by the prosecution during summations and that the prosecution introduced information that should have been presented to them before the trial began.

Ayala is on 10 years probation for assaulting an 18-year-old woman in a San Antonio, Texas, drive-in theater restroom on Dec. 23, 1978 — when he was 15. He pleaded guilty to that charge and was sentenced to 10 years in prison, but a judge granted probation after the Ayala family reached a reported $40,000 restitution agreement with the woman's family.

LAST AUGUST, Ayala was charged with burglary when he was found in a house in San Antonio, holding a tag bearing the name of a woman who lived there. The woman told police Ayala had tried to strike up a conversation with her outside her house a week earlier.

The burglary count and an accompanying motion to revoke probation were later dropped.

DeMarco said the reference to the August incident damaged his case. But Marmo said he felt there was "overwhelming evidence" against Ayala after the victim and her roommate, a school teacher, testified early in the trial.

"The two girls were so credible. If there was no other evidence but the two girls, no one could fairly sit in the court and believe they made it up," said Marmo.

Ten junior high records fall in City Track Meet

The pace was fast and furious as 10 city records were broken during the two-day Junior High Track and Field Meet which concluded Wednesday at Memorial Stadium.

Seventh grader Kynny Sissoukraj of San Jacinto broke two of the existing marks in the 100 and 200 meters. He led S.J. to the city title 185-158 over Alamo. Goddard was a distant third with 65.

In the eighth grade, Goddard used powerfull relay teams to edge out San Jacinto 159-140 with Alamo finishing third at 116.

Lee Freshman garnered nine of 13 first place trophies and easily took the ninth grade title over Midland Freshman 101-78.

Except for the hurdles, the top four finshers at each grade level qualified for the Midland-Odessa dual meet to be held at Memorial Stadium, April 18-19. The hurdles will be limited to the top three finishers.

SISSOUKRAJ RACKED up some impressive numbers for a seventh grader covering the 100 in 12.26 and turning a 24.84 in the 200.

Alamo swept the shot put by taking the top three spots including a record 45-foot-4½-inch performance by Joe Woodward. The Alamo 1200 meter relay team also set a new mark with a 2:54.39.

Mike Ball of Alamo and Jeff Garza were also double winners.

Ball took the long jump (17-4½) and the high jump (5-0) while Garza captured the 65 hurdles (10.88) and 220 hurdles (34.35).

Goddard was shutout of the 13 first place finishes while San Jacinto took eight.

THE EIGHTH grade title race was the closest with all three teams finishing with more than 100 points.

Goddard squeezed by San Jacinto with victories in the 400 and 1200 relays, events in which point values are doubled.

The two records came in the hurdle events.

Doug Bond of Goddard ran the 65 meter hurdles in 10.51 while Alamo's Mark Gomez covered the 220 in 31.52. The two runners finished second to each other in the winners' event.

FOUR RECORDS were set in the freshman division.

Hampton Quintas of Lee set the record in the 220 hurdles with a 29.70. Quintas also took the 65 hurdles in 10.02.

Rebel Anthony Dickens jumped 20-feet-10½ inches to set a new mark in the long jump while teammate Carl Long covered the 1200 meter run in 3:38.43. Long's victory led Lee to a 1-2-3 sweep in the 1200.

Zachry's homers impresses A&M

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Midland's Jimmy Zachry left an indelible impression on the Texas Aggies over the weekend. Before it was over, they couldn't wait to get out of Lubbock.

The former Midland High athlete hit two homers in the first game and drove in the winning run in the nightcap as Tech wiped out a 7-0 deficit to sweep Sunday's games.

Then, Monday, just when it seemed as though A&M might salvage the final game, Zachry, who already had hit a double and single, hit a three-run homer to tie it at 10. Tech went on to win, 11-10, a win notched by Pat Moore, a former Lee High athlete, in relief.

The homer traveled 450 feet and hit the Textile Engineering Building beyond left field.

The binge gave Jimmy six homers in six games and the two-time all-SWC third baseman has nine for the season. And Tech, by levelling its SWC record at 6-6, was in position to make a grab for one of four post-season tournament berths....

Meanwhile, not far away, another Midlander, Randy Velarde, was hitting .376 with 10 homers for NAIA baseball power Lubbock Christian College. The Chaparrals are ranked No. 3 nationally and, again, will play host to the NAIA College World Series, an event that will bring the scouts flocking to the Hub City on the South Plains...

WITH WHOM will Spud Webb, Midland College's 5-6 Junior College All-America guard, cast his lot?

"I haven't decided yet. I visited Bradley last week and will got to Southern Illinois this week," he says. Later he will visit Oklahoma City University, where Abe Lemons has just been named head coach.

What impressed Spud most about Bradely, "It's cold up there."...

Archie Myers, former All-America at Howard College and assistant at Midland College, resigned as Big Spring High coach as expected, but it wasn't to take over as Howard College coach. Archie is new head coach at Odessa College...

DENNIS BROGNA, a native of Boston who attended the University of Arizona, is the Midland Cubs new trainer. He spent three years in the Cleveland organization at Batavia, Waterloo and worked last winter in the Dominican Republic Winter League. After that he waited for baseball season to arrive by working with the New Jersey (USFL) Generals.

His dad is a sports writer with the Boston Herald-American...

With things not going all that great for Chicago, lefthander Craig Lefferts, who pitched for Midland two years ago, may get a starting opportunity as a result of his relief work in "games lost" situations. Craig has been pitching shutout ball in relief, but the time he has arrived on the scene, the game has been lost beyond recall.

Ironically, Lefferts had been sent to Iowa as Chicago broke camp in Mesa, Ariz., but received a reprieve in the form of an injury to another pitcher.

1915 — Only a scratch single by Harry Hooper of the Boston Red Sox with two out in the ninth inning prevented left-hander Herb Pennock from achieving a no-hitter as the Philadelphia A's opened the season at Philadelphia with a 5-0 victory.

1969 — Montreal hosted the first regular season major league game played outside the United States, and the Expos defeated the St. Louis Cardinals 8-7 at Jarry Park.

Braves pick up seventh straight

Baseball Roundup

By The Associated Press

Chris Chambliss homered twice to drive in three runs as the Atlanta Braves ran their winning streak to seven games by downing the Cincinnati Reds 6-1 Wednesday.

Atlanta, which started last season with a modern-record 13 consecutive victories, has not lost this season since dropping its opener to Cincinnati.

Rick Camp, 1-0, allowed 10 hits but only one run in 7 2-3 innings before Gene Garber came in to finish up.

In another National League, Joaquin Andujar hurled a seven-hitter to post his 12th consecutive victory over a two-season span, and George Hendrick went 5-for-5, including two home runs, as the St. Louis Cardinals clobbered the Pittsburgh Pirates 9-1.

In the American League, a two-run homer by Jesse Barfield and Garth Iorg's two-run, bases-loaded double powered the Toronto Blue Jays to a 7-2 victory over the Milwaukee Brewers Wednesday.

Jim Clancy, 1-0, making his first start of the season, gave up a first-inning run, then retired 14 consecutive Milwaukee batters before walking Robin Yount in the sixth inning. He gave up four hits, walked two and struck out four in the eight innings he worked.

The Blue Jays broke open the game with three runs in the fifth on a single by Barry Bonnell, Cliff Johnson's first triple since 1980 and Barfield's homer.

The Cleveland Indians rallied for a 4-3 victory over the Texas Rangers when Mike Hargrove doubled home Chris Bando with the tying run in the seventh inning, then scored the winner on a single by Bake McBride.

Bob Kearney's bases-loaded, two-out double drove in two runs in the eighth inning lifted the Oakland A's over the Minnesota Twins 5-4.

In AL night games, Johnny Grubb doubled in two runs and Larry Herndon added an RBI single as Detroit roughed off reliever Goose Goosage in the Tigers' 7-5 victory over the New York Yankees. The game was interrupted by a fight in the fifth inning when Dave Winfield charged to the mound and punched Detroit reliever Dave Rozema after a pitch sailed over his head. Winfield was ejected.

Glenn Hoffman went 5-for-6 and Jim Rice homered and tripled to highlight a 21-attack as the Boston Red Sox took advantage of five Kansas City errors in pounding the Royals 18-4. The game start of the game was delayed 48 minutes by a cold rain and the wind-chill factor dipped to 10 degrees late in the game.

Geoff Zahn tossed a four-hitter, striking out seven and walking none, in pitching the California Angels past the Seattle Mariners 6-1. Doug DeCinces had a two-run homer and Reggie Jackson drove in two runs with a double and single.

In NL night games, Bo Diaz greeted reliever Neil Allen with a grand slam with two outs in the ninth inning to power the Philadelphia Phillies to a 10-9 victory over the New York Mets. The Phillies overcame a 9-5 lead in the ninth with four walks and the slam by Diaz.

Terry Kennedy singled in the go-ahead run in the fourth inning and Eric Show and Gary Lucas combined on an eight-hitter as the San Diego Padres broke a five-game losing streak by topping the San Francisco Giants 2-1.

Steve Yeager's two-run homer with two outs in the bottom of the 14th inning lifted the Los Angeles to a 5-3 victory over Houston as the Astros matched the National League record with their ninth straight loss to open the season.

Horse vaulting clinic starts Friday

The Midland 4-H Vaulting Team will host a spring horse vaulting clinic Friday through Sunday under the direction of Virginia's Sharon Davis.

Vaulters from Texas, New Mexico and Oklahoma will help with the classes, that will be limited to five to eight per class.

The clinic costs $20 and includes Friday afternoon classes, Saturday classes and a pizza pool party, pot-luck dinner and classes Sunday along with a mini-competition.

For more information contact Karen Eggleston at 683-5735.

Miller moves into FLO first

BALTIMORE (AP) — Jim Miller of Mesa, Ariz., averaged 222 for six games to move up from second place to the top spot after two rounds of the $120,000 Fair Lanes Open on the Pro Bowlers Tour.

Miller rolled games of 210, 230, 214, 216, 246 and 219 for a second-round score of 1335.

Buford signs letter to play for SIU

Midland College's deadeye shooting guard, Nate Buford, has signed a letter of intent to attend school at Southern Illinois University in Carbondale, Ill.

Under third-year coach Allen VanWinkle the Salukis were 11-17 this past season.

According to Dan Devine, a sports writer with the Daily Egyptian, SIU graduated a lot players this year and, he said, "If Buford is any good he could be a starter." Devine also said that the signing of Buford follows VanWinkle's history of recruiting junior college players.

Buford hit 53 per cent of his shots from the field while averagaing 19.1 points per game for the Chaps. He also connected on 76 per cent of his free throws.

SIU's most famous player was another guard, Walt Frazer, who went on to be a perennial all-pro with the New York Knicks.

Buford may be joined by Anthony 'Spud' Webb at SIU as the 5-foot-6 All-American will travel to Carbondale later this week for a visit.

Spurs help playoff cause by taking two from Lakers

AP Laserphoto

San Antonio Spur Mike Dunleavy (10) looks for an open teammate as he flies past Los Angeles Lakers Michael Cooper (21) and Dwight Jones (13) Wednesday night.

By Associated Press

The six teams battling for the final four National Basketball Association playoff berths would love to do what the San Antonio Spurs did — win two games in one night.

New York, Washington, Kansas City and Denver all won Wednesday night to help their postseason hopes, while Atlanta's loss to the Kings hurt its chances. The Spurs, who have already clinched the Midwest Division title, needed just three seconds to add one game to the win column against Los Angeles and then won the regularly scheduled contest 114-109 over the Lakers.

The first game had been suspended since Nov. 30 after the NBA ruled that officials improperly made a jump-ball call that helped the Lakers win in double overtime. On Wednesday, the game was restarted with the Spurs ahead 116-114 with three seconds left in overtime.

Los Angeles guard Norm Nixon tried to miss his free throw on purpose so a teammate could get the ball, but San Antonio got possession when Nixon missed the rim. San Antonio's Johnny Moore was fouled and he hit one of two free throws to seal the long-awaited victory, 117-114.

In games crucial to the playoffs, New York beat New Jersey 108-100 to pull into fifth place in the East, one-half game ahead of Washington and Atlanta. The Bullets stayed close with a 95-76 rout of Philadelphia, while the Hawks fell 114-103 to Kansas City.

In the West, the Kings' victory put them into fifth place, one-half game ahead of idle Portland and one game ahead of Denver, which beat Houston 131-112. In both conferences, two of the three contending teams will make the playoffs.

Kings 114, Hawks 103

Kansas City won the pairing of playoff contenders as Ray Williams scored 32 points and Eddie Johnson 27 against Atlanta.

The Kings, who have won five games in a row, faces Houston on Friday and Denver on Sunday. Atlanta, which got 31 points from Johnny Davis, needs a victory over Milwaukee Saturday to keeps its hopes alive.

NBA Roundup

Bullets 95, 76ers 76

Washington manhandled Eastern Conference champion Philadelphia as Ricky Sobers and Jeff Ruland scored 17 points apiece.

The Bullets, who will clinch a playoff spot if they can win their last three games, led by as many as 21 points and held all-stars Andrew Toney and Julius Erving to eight and seven points, respectively, while Moses Malone didn't play because of a knee injury.

Knicks 108, Nets 100

Louis Orr and seven other New York players scored in double figures as the Knicks beat their cross-river rivals.

Orr scored 11 of his 13 points during a 25-12 fourth-quarter run that turned an 80-80 tie, the 17th deadlock of the game, into a 105-92 lead with 5:07 left.

Nuggets 131, Rockets 112

Denver stayed alive in the Western Conference playoff race as Kiki Vandeweghe scored 28 points, Dan Issel 27 and Alex English 26 against Houston.

Pistons 113, Celtics 101

Kelly Tripucka and Isiah Thomas led a fourth-quarter surge for Detroit as playoff-bound Boston's starters rested.

Pacers 113, Bucks 90

Indiana snapped a seven-game losing streak as Billy Knight scored 21 points, including 11 in a row in the second quarter.

Bulls 107, Cavaliers 98

Chicago scored the first 13 points in the fourth quarter to overcome Cleveland and end a seven-game loss skein.

Suns 109, Sonics 96

Phoenix won its 10th game in 11 outings as Kyle Macy scored 24 points and rookie Rory White had nine points in the pivotal fourth quarter.

The game was tied 77-77 after three quarters, but White scored the first five points of the fourth period, when the Suns outscored Seattle 32-19.

Mavericks 106, Jazz 99

Reserve guard Elston Turner scored nine of his 13 points in the fourth period to help Dallas defeat Utah.

Darrell Griffith led the Jazz with 28 points.

Warriors 113, Clippers 92

Golden State handed San Diego its sixth straight loss behind Purvis Short's 29 points and Eric Floyd's 25.

ONE OF THE FEW LUXURIES STILL AVAILABLE IN TEXAS FOR UNDER $35.

From its classic styling to its richly appointed interior, the Lincoln Town Car is truly a luxury automobile.

But at these prices, it could almost be considered an economy car.

Especially when you consider that Hertz never charges you a penny for mileage at all corporate locations in Texas.

This low weekend rate is available from Thursday noon to Sunday noon.

But reserve your Lincoln as early as possible. Like many luxuries, its availability is limited.

For information and complete details, call your travel agent. Or call Hertz at 1-800-654-3131.

You'll find that renting from Hertz is as much a pleasure as driving a Lincoln.

Hertz®

#1 For Everyone.™
Hertz rents Lincolns and other fine cars.

Minimum day weekend rental requirements apply. Weekend rate is non-discountable. For this rate to apply, cars must be returned to renting city. Gas, C.D.W., P.A.I. and state and local taxes not included. Rate subject to change without notice.

Baseball is no simple game

By HAL BOCK
AP Sports Writer

Baseball is no simple game. Ask Jim Eisenreich, the promising Minnesota outfielder who is on the disabled list with a nervous disorder after playing just 34 games last year because of the same condition. Ask relief pitcher Kevin Saucier, who quit because he feared a nervous breakdown.

This is a demanding avocation that sometimes consumes its participants. Mike Ivie has looked into the jaws of the beast and survived. Barely.

"My problems are my own business, nobody else's," he said. "I won't talk about them."

What he will talk about is a new lease on life as the everyday first baseman of the Detroit Tigers, installed there by Manager Sparky Anderson. Ivie had been rescued from baseball's scrap heap by Anderson last May and spent the rest of the 1982 season as a designated hitter, ripping 14 home runs.

"I made up my mind over the winter that I was going to play in the field this year," he said. "DHing last year helped me get my feet back on the ground. But I like the idea of playing the field."

Was it difficult to pick up a glove after a year away from it?

"Hey," he smiled, "a fish doesn't forget how to swim."

Smiling has sometimes been difficult for this blond-haired slugger who was the nation's No. 1 amateur free agent selection in June, 1970. He was a catcher then but developed problems with pressure behind the plate and switched to first base. It was no easier there, and Ivie never quite lived up to his awesome potential with the Padres. He was traded, first to San Francisco and then to Houston, carrying the problem tag along with him.

"You know, I could always swing the bat," he said. "I led San Diego in runs batted in one year when (Dave) Winfield was there. I've had good years."

But they were always interrupted, it seemed, by stretches on the disabled list. In 1980, the stress reached crisis proportions and he announced his retirement from the game, at the age of 27.

"If I could have been left alone, and the fans had gotten off me, it might have been different," he said at the time.

Ivie's retirement lasted three weeks. He returned after a pep-talk phone call from slugger Willie McCovey, who was retiring at the time himself. The next spring, Ivie was traded to Houston and after a 7-for-18 streak in early May, he went on the disabled list because of mental fatigue. He did not play again until September. It was a washout season of just 26 games.

Seven games into the 1982 season, the Astros released him. It looked like Ivie's troubled career had reached an end.

But a philosopher once noted that you start out gripping the baseball and before you know it, the baseball is gripping you. Ivie got on the phone.

"When Houston cut me, I called Sparky," Ivie said. "I had heard the Tigers and Red Sox were talking to the Astros about me. He said, 'Get here as fast as you can,' and I did."

Anderson approached Ivie as he would any other player. He understands the private demons that can consume ordinary people, even baseball players.

"I don't know what his problems may have been," the manager said. "I look at him as no different from any of us. All of us have our problems, our insecurities. I do. I wish I could tell you that I didn't. All he has is the same thing a lot of us have. He wants to do good."

Right now, he's doing fine, thank you. And the problems are a dim memory from another time, buried forever.

San Antonio bids for team in USFL

San Antonio is waiting for a verdict on its bid for a USFL expansion franchise and promoter Roger Gill says, "This week is crucial. I would be surprised if we didn't know where we are going within 10 days. They want San Antonio and they want Clinton Manges (a Texas millionaire) in particular.

Paul Hornung, once suspended by the NFL for betting on games, is offering to help Art Schlichter. Hornung says he will ask Commissioner Pete Rozelle to talk to Schlichter, and advise him to "Make a clean breast of it. I know what he's feeling now — he's feeling that his whole career is on the line. And well he should." Hornung said he never bet more than $1,000 on pro games and finds it difficult to believe that Schlichter could run up a $389,000 betting tab.

Baseball

The theme for the Charlotte O's this year is "Great Balls of Fire," but Tuesday's fire at the ballpark was not part of the promotion. Frances Crockett, president of the Southern League team, says, "I've been saying all along we're red hot, but this is ridiculous. I've had to keep telling people, 'This is no promotional gimmick, this was a real fire.' " The fire started in the concession area where cooks were preparing shrimp for a charity fund raising event. The blaze caused about $75,000 worth of damage but won't delay the home opener Saturday night.

Reggie Smith homered to pace the Yomiuri Giants to a 4-3 win over the Yakult Swallows while the Seibu Lions beat the Nippon Ham Fighters 5-3 on Tony Solaita homered in other Japan Central League action.

Basketball

Six-seven Mike Winters of Albuquerque Eldorado and 6-0 Kelvin Scarborough of Washington, D.C., who averaged 24.0 points a game, signed with the University of New Mexico.

Keith Lee, Memphis State's All-America forward was forced to lie on the floor at gunpoint by three men who robbed a Midtown Memphis pawn shop Tuesday. Lee was not injured during the incident.

Baylor, Texas brighten futures

By The Associated Press

Baylor and Texas — two of the doormats of the Southwest Conference basketball race this past season — got the future off to a promising start by landing some prize schoolboy basketball recruits.

Arkansas, which overcame everyone but Houston in the race for the SWC crown, also nabbed some top high school players Wednesday on national signing day.

Baylor signed bluechip Dallas Kimball guard Dwayne Brown, rated as the top player in the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The 6-foot, 5-inch Brown, picked on the Dallas Tims Herald coaches list of top Texas players, averaged almost 18 points per game and was recruited by many colleges.

Haller also signed 6-6 forward James Malone, who averaged 22.5 points per game for Jacksonville (Texas) Baptist Junior College; Jody Reeves, a 6-7 forward from Allen, who averaged 26 points and 16 rebounds per game; and 6-3 guard Dave Reichert of Highland Park, who averaged 19 points and eight assists per game.

Texas Coach Bob Weltlich also had reason to be proud. He signed guards Marcus Bolden of Killeen and Mike Hess of Newport Beach, Calif.; 6-8 forward Jerry Holmes of Longview; and 6-9 forward Raynard Davis of San Antonio Sam Houston.

Davis, another Dallas Times Herald blue chip, averaged 13.6 points and 11.2 rebounds for Sam Houston.

Holmes scored 15 points and averaged 10 rebounds per game.

Bolden averaged 23 points per game and six assists while Hess was a 12 points-per-game scorer.

ARKANSAS SIGNED 6-8 Jay Crane of Haltom High School as Coach Eddie Sutton made his presence felt in Texas, Kansas and Oklahoma. Crane averaged 14 points and 9 rebounds per game.

Sutton also got Hunter McDonald, a 6-4 guard from Blue Valley Springs High School in Stanley, Kansas. McDonald averaged 22 points per game.

The Razorbacks also signed 6-6 guard Kevin Rehl, the player of the year in Oklahoma. Rehl averaged 34.8 points per game and was the third leading scorer in the state's history.

Southern Methodist Coach Dave Bliss signed Idaho schoolboy player of the year, 6-4 guard Scott Johnson of Meridian, who averaged 21 points per game and shot 51 percent from the field and 78 percent from the foul line.

Earlier, Bliss had signed Terry Williams, a 6-9 forward from Free Academy, Newburg, N.Y. Williams, a former teammate of SMU guard Butch Moore, averaged 24 points and 15 rebounds per game.

The Southwest Conference champion Houston Cougars, who lost by two points in the national title game, signed Nederland guard Jamie Weaver.

The Cougars also received a non-binding pledge from Austin Travis center Sylvester Kincheon, but did not immediately sign him. Houston Yates' Ricky Winslow and Carven Holcombe were thought to be joining the Cougars, but said they probably would not sign until next week.

Weaver, a 6-4 guard, averaged 24 points per game at Nederland. He visited the Houston campus last weekend.

Winslow has visits scheduled to UCLA and Louisville. Holcombe was considering, Texas, Texas Christian, Villanova and Missouri.

Rice signed Gary McGuire, a 6-6 forward from Houston Cypress Creek. McGuire, named one of greater Houston's top 10 players, averaged 16.1 rebounds a game last season.

Texas Christian signed 6-7 forward Pete Williams of Mt. San Antonio Junior College in California.

Texas A&M netted 6-1 Clint Thomas of Snook.

Texas Tech came up empty-handed Wednesday, but Coach Gerald Myers said he had hopes of getting Johnny Fuller of Wilmer-Hutchins.

Davis shatters 11-year-old record

Darrell Davis held up the pride of Midland Freshman school with a record setting 60-foot-6-inch toss in the shot put. Davis shattered an 11-year-old record of 57-feet-¾inches set by Milton Jones of Lee.

Midland had a sweep of its own, taking the top three spots in the 300 meters.

Rebel Lonnie Dixon was a dual winner, capturing the sprints. Dixon covered the 100 in 11.21 and came back to claim the 200 in 23.84.

New bowling lanes under construction

For those Midland keglers who feel the Tall City doesn't have enough bowling lanes, relief is on the way.

Randy Isenberg, manager of Dellwood Bowling Center, annouced that World Class Bowling Centers in a joint venture with Abbott Construction would be building the 32-lane Fairmont Park Lanes in northwest Midland during ground breaking ceremonies Wednesday.

"We are building a full service center to create a complete bowling enviroment," Isenberg said. "We will have state of the art AMF equipment including automatic scoring, micro-processing pinsetting and computerized league record keeping."

Completion date for the $3½ million project located at the triangle intersection of Loop 250, Treemont Rd. and County Rd. 1230 has been set for Nov. 15, 83.

The 40,000 square-foot facility will include a food and beverage area, meeting and banquet facilitites, a playroom, pro shop and game room.

"Not a lot of people are taking risk in the present economic situation," Isenberg said. "By building this center, we feel we're making a positive statement about Midland and its future and I think its important for people to know that it is completely locally owned."

For those bowlers familiar with the Dellwood facilities, the equipment at Fairmont will be the same but there will be additional two lanes and 10,000 more square feet of building area.

Mall home show features many unusual products, optimistic sellers

By JIM PRESNELL
Business-Energy Writer

Midland Park Mall's second annual "Ideal Home" show got into full swing Wednesday in preparation for the weekend. The show ends Saturday night. More than 40 local and national exhibitors are on hand, displaying everything from electric-generating windmills to life insurance.

Many of the merchandisers present are longtime Midland business people. Paul Anderson, of Anderson Tile Sales, noted that his business began eight years ago in Midland and has had a store in Odessa for four.

"We sell the tile, and help the buyer choose which color to use. We can find a contractor to install the tile, or we can list what to do to install it yourself."

Jan Kindel, a principal in Kindel & Co. Realtors, is showing slides and telling about the houses she has listed. "We're here to answer questions on financing, interest rates, or buying a home in general," she said. The company is also offering a free market analysis of one's present home.

John Burns, with Nimbus Drinking Water Systems, said "The home show is doing real well for us." Burns said the reverse-osmosis system his company markets gives unlimited clean water and costs no more than buying bottled water.

Nimbus leases the systems, and can install one in less than an hour, Burns said. "Anything that uses tap water, we can tap into."

Midland Stained Glass Center displays a few large windows and some smaller, ornamental pieces of stained glass.

Of his residential heating and air conditioning systems, laid out on a green carpet, Bill Drummond of Midland Sanitary Plumbing said his company sells only Coleman brand A/C but services all brands, as well as doing plumbing work.

"Most of the jobs we do are converting from evaporative cooling to refrigerated air," which provides more comfort, Drummond said.

Joe Bruzas, who's a pool designer and landscaper for Blue Haven Pools' local dealer, said he is competing with other pool builders in town for work. "I try to come up with extras (in planning the pool) that other companies don't offer."

Bruzas was disappointed in the slow people-flow at the mall, but said he expected the weekend crowds to "snowball."

Blue Haven was one of many dealers offering a sale or special at the home show, involving a lower-priced big item. Many of the exhibits offered a free drawing, giving away small water-treatment machines, lawn chairs, or a power drill.

An unusual exhibit was Windmill Electric of West Texas. Salesman Mike Kennedy said the strictly-supplemental electricity machines work "80 percent of the time" with the wind speeds present in West Texas.

Kennedy said the company just sold its first windmill, locally, and that it should be installed at a Midland home within a month.

The windmills, made by Fight Back, a Vermont firm, qualify for a 40 percent tax rebate for energy savings, as did many of the items for sale at the show — solar pool equipment, efficient air conditioning, and insulated windows.

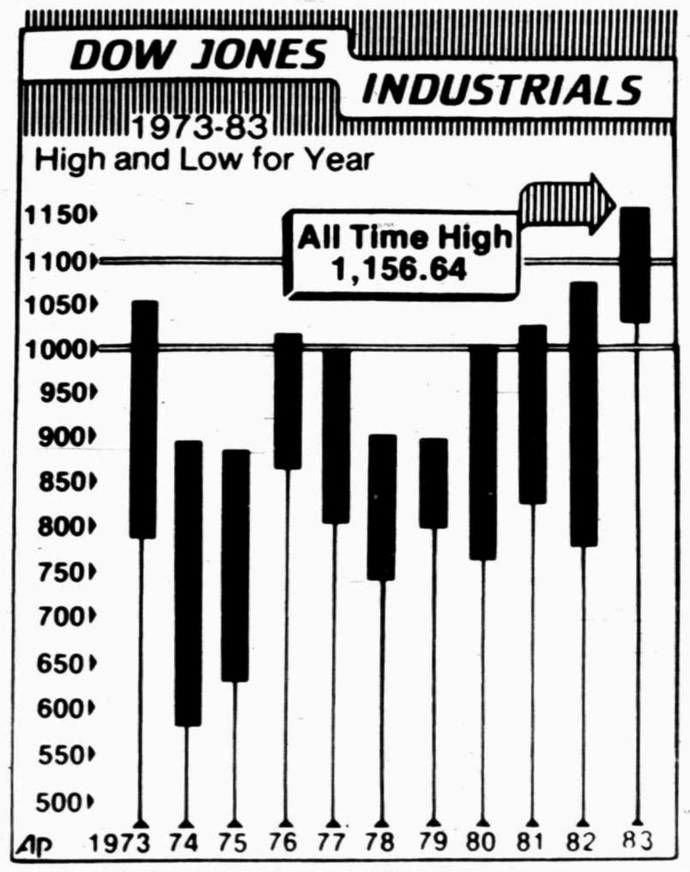
Robert Stuart, a life underwriting insurance man, said "People look for guarantees when a slowdown occurs. Life insurance usually doesn't suffer." Stuart was displaying diagnostic software on IBM and Radio Shack computers, saying "We're trying to attract the curious — those who like computers. We have one computer dedicated to a single new product — Universal Life.

"This is life insurance with a tax-deferred investment fund." Stuart said Universal Life is his company's most popular life-insuring program.

Phil Daw, of Tall City TV Cable Co., said "We're here in an informational role. We have new featured services, offered in our Dimension 4 package, that give everyone south of Andrews Highway an expanded range of programming." Daw demonstrated the Showtime service, playing "Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan" for interested bystanders.

Larry Newsom offered other water-system equipment for an Odessa company, Water Purification Systems, showing a full line of purification, treatment, and distillation machinery.

Newsom showed samples of the soil and other particulates distilled from Odessa water. An unusual product WPS has is the Kreepy Krauly, a pool sweeper that makes its own way around the pool and up the sides, powered by the pool's drain system.



Fortune's list shaken up by glut, recession

NEW YORK (AP) — Exxon Corp. held on to its top ranking in the Fortune 500 directory of the largest U.S. manufacturing companies, but the rest of the list was shaken up, reflecting the impact of a world oil glut and recession.

Just three companies — Exxon, No. 4 Texaco Inc. and No. 9 Gulf Oil Corp. — were unchanged among the top 10 companies in the rankings based on revenues last year. Other leading oil companies lost ground in the list released Wednesday.

Mobil Corp. dropped to third, Standard Oil Co. of California fell from fifth to seventh, Standard Oil Co. (Indiana) dropped to 10th from seventh and Atlantic Richfield Co. toppled from 10th to 12th.

Some automakers gained at the expense of Big Oil.

General Motors Corp. moved up a notch to second place, regaining the spot it had lost in 1980 to Mobil, and Ford Motor Co. climbed to fifth from sixth.

But two companies that recently acquired oil businesses rose.

Du Pont Co. advanced from 12th to eighth place, returning to the ranks of the top 10 for the first time since 1955. Last year was its first full year of ownership of Conoco, the 14th largest industrial concern when it was purchased in September 1981.

U.S. Steel Corp., which acquired Marathon Oil Co. in March 1982, moved to 14th place from 19th.

International Business Machines Corp., whose 1982 profit of $4.4 billion was the most among the Fortune 500 companies, climbed to sixth place from eighth. Exxon was second in earnings, at $4.2 billion.

And although Exxon remained No. 1, its sales of $97.2 billion were down 10 percent from 1981, dropping below $100 billion for the first time since 1979.

Many leading companies, such as American Telephone & Telegraph Co., are not included in list of industrial companies. One notable departure was RCA Corp., ranked 44th a year ago. Fortune said revenue from service businesses, such as NBC, satellite communications, and Hertz automobile rentals exceeded manufacturing receipts from RCA's electronics business last year.

Oil bears big burden

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock says a survey shows that about 40 percent of the state tax burden is borne directly or indirectly by the Texas oil and gas industry or their employees.

"When you understand the size of this burden, it's easy to see how dropping oil prices have had the major effects they have on our state tax revenues," Bullock said in a statement.

He said oil and gas pays 30 percent of the state sales tax alone.

The study quoted by Bullock said the sales tax impact of the oil industry and its employees was centered in Houston and Dallas.

"Together, these two urban areas accouont for more than 70 percent of the industry's total sales tax payments," he said. "Houston alone accounts for 52.5 percent of this total."

Congress considering insurance regultions

By VIC OSTROWIDZKI
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — Congress is taking a close look at proposed legislation that would prohibit discrimination in pension and insurance programs on the basis of sex.

The pending legislation, Senate bill 372 and House bill 100, would prohibit discrimination in insurance and annuities based on race, color, religion, sex and national origin with respect to access, availability of coverage, terms, conditions, rates, and benefits.

Currently, men often must pay higher premiums then women for the same amount of life insurance because statistics show that women live longer. Conversely, under some plans, women receive smaller monthly annuities than men who have made identical payments because their life expectancy as a group is longer.

Unequal treatment of applicants would be prohibited, including use of differential statistical tables as they relate to gender, life expectancy or disability.

The legislation would provide that insurers would have to modify premium and contribution rates for existing contracts to comply with the antidiscrimination requirement.

The most controversial provision would require retroactive application of the so-called "gender neutral tables" and call for "topping up" benefits, that is, where differences in benefits exist due to the use of sex-distinct tables, the higher of the two benefit schedules would have to be used.

In 1964, Congress enacted the Equal Employment Opportunity Act, which prohibited discrimination against individuals with respect to compensation, terms, or privileges of employment on the basis of sex and other characteristics.

In reality, however, the insurance companies have not abided by the spirit of the law, using separate statistical tables for men and women to set insurance and pension rates and benefits.

Last month, the Supreme Court heard oral arguments in a case which questions the legality of using sex-distinct annuity tables. In this case, Arizona offered a voluntary deferred compensation plan through a private company. Males and females who chose to participate in the plan made equal contributions to a retirement account. At retirement, employees had the option of receiving a lump sum, electing a fixed-period annuity, or converting to a life annuity under which women received less per month than men because separate mortality tables were used.

A lower court found that the use of sex-based tables was inequitable and ordered that annuity payments already received by female retirees be made equal to those of similarly situated males.

If that ruling is upheld, the American Council of LIfe Insurance has said that "pension plans covering 26.1 million Americans and backed by $165.8 billion in reserves would have to be changed substantially."

EMPLOYMENT AND TRAINING

The Northeast-Midwest Congressional and Senate Coalitions and the Northeast-Midwest Institute plan to hold seven hearings and a national conference on employment and training issues in cities around the region over the next few months.

Spokesmen for the two groups hope that the process will provide an opportunity for Congress to learn first-hand about the problems arising from the major changes now taking place in the economy.

The first session on "The Work Place in the 1980s and 1990s: Where the Jobs Will Be" will be held April 22 in Boston. A hearing on "Displaced Workers: Meeting Their Special Needs" will be May 23 in Lansing, Mich. A session on "Education's Role in the Changing Work Place: A Look at Secondary and PostSecondary Institutions" will be May 31 in Providence, R.I.

On June 10, the groups plan a hearing in Cleveland on "The Manufacturing Heavy Industry Sector in the 1980s and 1990s." A June 24 hearing on "Youth: Improving Their Employment Opportunities" will be held in New York City. A Chicago session on July 8 will delve into "The Changing Composition of the Labor Force." On July 22, the panels will meet in Philadelphia to discuss "Innovative Programs: Strategies That States, Localities and the Private Sector Are Employing to Better Utilize Scarce Dollars."

MINIMUM WAGE

The Fair Labor Standards Act of 1938 first established a minimum wage for many American workers to ensure them of at least a minimal standard of living. In six major amendments, Congress steadily increased the minimum wage and the number of jobs subject to the act's provisions. Today, the federal minimum wage is $3.35 an hour, and over 80 percent of nonsupervisory employees in the private, nonagricultural sector are covered by the legislation.

The General Accounting Office (GAO), an investigative arm of Congress, examined the effects of the minimum wage and found that while economic analysts generally agree that it reduces total employment, they do not agree by how much. Although the minimum wage is generally thought to help the poor, the GAO was unable to determine how the wage affects income distribution.

CENSUS ON THE WAY

The Commerce Department has conducted a national census every ten years since Thomas Jefferson supervised the first such tally in 1790 to determine how Americans lived. The last one was held in 1980.

But not many people are aware that a limited census of agriculture and economics is now underway. The two surveys cover the fields of farming, manufacturing, mining, construction, retailing, wholesaling and service industries to determine where most Americans work, earn their living, and produce and sell their goods. Once completed, the census of three million enterprises will be used to determine the nation's Gross National Product and supply important data for such guidelines as the Producer Price Index, Index of Industrial Production, and Index of Leading Economic Indicators.

LEMON LAWS

California has a new "lemon" law, which went into effect in January. Connecticut is the only other state with such a law, but similar legislation is being considered in 15 other states. "Lemon" is a description applied to a car that has been back to the dealer four times for the same major problem or has been in the repair shop for 30 days during the warranty period. Sellers are required to repair such cars free or replace them with other cars.

AROUND AND ABOUT

The Census Bureau reports that nearly half of the U.S. population changed residence between 1975 and 1980. Of the 210 million people five years old or over, nearly 94 million — about 44.5 percent — had moved ... Despite a marginal drop in the overall unemployment rate in March, youth unemployment jumped sharply to 23.5 percent ... The GAO has been asked to investigate the validity of cost estimates used in the Navy's five-year shipbuilding program ... The federal government employs an estimated 150,000 people to run its 16,000 computers at a cost of about $6 billion a year ... Women continued to outnumber men among all college students in 1981 and the average student no longer was of traditional age, according to the Census Bureau. The study found 108 women for every 100 men, as compared with 74 women for 100 men in 1972. The 1981 survey also showed that most college students were over 21 years of age.

LEGISLATION

A bill to clear the way for construction of thousands of miles of coal slurry pipeline has been reported out for House action by one of its committees. The pipelines would carry crushed coal mixed with water, moving the material froim the coal fields to utility plants. Seven such pipelines are planned.

Among other bills before Congress is a proposal to curb trademark counterfeiting in the U.S. Its sponsor, Sen. Charles McC Mathias Jr., R-Md., says commercial counterfeiting is a widespread and often dangerous business, which extends beyond high-fashion items such as designer jeans and watches.

Other bills on Capitol Hill would:

Curb "hurry-up spending," in which government agencies hastily deplete their budgets in the waning hours of each fiscal year so they will not have to give money back to the Treasury.

Provide compensation for victims of toxic substances. This incorporates many of the recommendations in the recent report to Congress prepared by the federal Superfund Study Group.

Computers shown to be friendly

By FRED ROTHENBERG

ENTERTAINMENT

NEW YORK (AP) — Public television's "The Computer Programme" isn't a British farce, although its opening sequence and two hosts could have come from Monty Python.

The 10-part computer series, which begins Saturday, is produced by the British Broadcasting Corp., and, at times, it displays the wacky irreverence of Monty Python's troupe. It begins with a Milquetoast-type walking tentatively into a computer store and asking a high-pressure salesman about buying a you know what.

But, for the most part, "The Computer Programme" is an earnest, sometimes entertaining enterprise intent on treating "Computer Phobia" — a sociological disease for modern times.

ONE purpose of the series "is to demystify computers," says host Chris Serles, a computer illiterate who learns along with the viewer. The thrust is to make the computer a comfortable tool at home, which is practical for both the viewer and the program's underwriter, Acorn Computers Corp. of Woburn, Mass. Acorn is one of 100 firms selling computers in Great Britain, many of them for personal use.

Serles, a BBC journalist, is joined by Ian McNaught Davis, who tries to separate some of the mumbo from the jumbo. Davis is a computer expert who talks fast, loves those mechanical devils and reminds you of Benny Hill.

BASED on the first four segments — they're all half-hours, for the viewers' limited attention span — the series is of dubious value as an educator. The broadcasts jump around too much, the graphics are not easily discernible, and Davis' explanations become convoluted in the third and fourth episodes.

Particularly irritating is the way Serles and Davis have sideways, casual conversations as one means of making teaching points. If these messages are to be retained, they should be presented in a straightforward manner and emphasized and re-emphasized.

However, what is valuable, at least for this computer novice, is that the first two installments manage to cut the computer down to size and reduce anxieties about this electronic creature, which Time magazine named "Machine of the Year" for 1982.

IT appears that someone who is all thumbs around mathematical-mechanical things could actually learn to talk to computers. "They're quite stupid in many ways," says Davis, "but also very clever."

If Serles can learn to "LOAD," "LIST" and "RUN," and then get the video-game "Breakout" on the screen, so can we. Of course, Serles proves to be the kind of student who never asks a dumb question and never gets lost. Ah, the magic of television.

A feature on a grandmotherly lady who runs a grocery store makes the point that anybody can befriend a computer.

Thurber house to host writers

EDITOR'S NOTE — From this place sprung much of the carnival of James Thurber's wit and imagination. The ghosts upstairs. The broken walnut bed. The overpowering wife and the befuddled husband. And, of course, the Dog. Now, Thurber fans are trying to restore the old house and provide quarters for a new young writer they hope will have some of the Thurber spirit.

By JOE B. McKNIGHT

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) — The ghost of Walter Mitty may yet find a home.

It has an attic where papa can sleep in a walnut bed that won't fall. It is far enough from the river so no one will have to run from the flood. And it holds fond remembrances for the ghost of Muggs, the Airedale who bit people — but only once.

The metaphors are pure James Thurber, one-time newspaper reporter turned author, humorist, cartoonist, playwright and actor, who wove those characters and scenes and more into 30 years of drawing cartoons, writing books, essays and plays.

The humorist was born and got his professional start in Columbus, where only a tombstone commemorates him.

But if Donn F. Vickers and a group of civic and literary leaders can prevail, that will change this year.

An old red brick house where the Thurber family lived from 1913 to 1917, and which later was the setting for many of his essays, has been acquired by the Metropolitan Learning Community, a private agency which hopes to develop a campus of non-profit organizations in the arts and human services in the neighborhood.

THE HOUSE where Thurber was born in 1894 was razed years ago to make room for a freeway, but the family hadn't lived there very long. They lived all over what is now Columbus' near-east side and briefly in Falls Church, Va., while his father, Charles, served on the staff of a congressman.

The 110-year-old house the Learning Community bought is on a short boulevard of once-stately homes built for 19th century families of wealth. It is now in a rundown inner city neighborhood struggling with rehabilitation. The house, vacant and deteriorating for years, has 5,400 square feet on three floors, attic and basement, and boarded up windows. It was the scene for such Thurber essays as "The Night The Ghost Got In," "The Night The Bed Fell," "The Dog That Bit People," and "The Day The Dam Broke," the latter a parody on floods which ravished much of Ohio in 1913.

Vickers, executive director of the Learning Community, already has moved a ballet company, music academy and center for displaced homemakers into other houses on Jefferson Avenue, where the Thurbers rented No. 77 in what was then East Park Place Addition.

Thurber fans recognize the house number used in some of his essays, although he renamed the street Lexington Avenue. It was there, Thurber fans will recall, where the author told of being in the bathtub upstairs when he was frightened by a ghost racing around the dining room table downstairs.

VICKERS HASN'T heard or seen any ghosts in the house — yet. Nor has he found a broken walnut bed but he says it's been a long time since anyone ventured into the attic where Thurber's papa and grandfather sometimes slept.

Vickers is the force behind a drive to raise $200,000 to finance the restoration. Toward that end, The New Yorker magazine, where Thurber worked several years and which he helped shape in its formative stages, pledged to promote the project in an advertisement.

In addition, the restored old house is to be home and workplace for a writer-in-residence, some talented up-and-coming author to be chosen each year by an advisory panel of a dozen people from the theater, publishing and other arts.

Vickers envisions a $25,000 stipend for the writer-in-residence who would live rent free in the Thurber house. While there, the author would write for the Columbus Dispatch, where Thurber got his start, teach a writing class at Ohio State University, and, Vickers hopes, "produce literary pieces inspired from contact with the James Thurber spirit."

"I'm constantly surprised by the number of writers and critics who claim he was a genius," says Vickers. He says author John Updike, when asked if he thought himself a good writer, replied: "I think I'm good, not as good as Thurber, but then, few people are."

VICKERS SAYS Thurber was admired because his writing seemed effortless. But he and Robert A. Tibbetts, curator of special collections at the Ohio State University Library, agree that Thurber worked hard at his light-hearted humor.

His typical character was a befuddled urban male who seemed lost in a world he did not create, perhaps hounded by a strong, frowning woman. Such a woman frequented his cartoons.

Part Five: Fighting with Bing

MY LIFE WITH BING by Kathryn Crosby

"And just what, pray, do you consider to be your profession?"

The night of the ballet

On the evening of July 5, 1963, after watching Nureyev and Fonteyn perform in Swan Lake under the stars at the Hollywood Bowl, John Scott Trotter and I stopped in at a party that Maggie Louis was giving for them. Whereupon Nureyev kissed my hand in the gallant continental fashion, and swept me off to the dance floor.

Frankly I don't remember what happened for the next few hours, so overwhelmed was I by the mere fact of dancing with Nureyev, who couldn't lead worth a lick but had an inexhaustible repertoire of steps. Some time in the wee hours of the morning John tapped me on the shoulder, pointed out that we were all that was left of the party, and suggested that I might consider driving home.

Not wishing to disturb my husband, at whatever ungodly hour it was, I silently slipped into my nightgown in the dressing room, and then cautiously opened the bedroom door. All the lights were on and Bing, his hair awry, was sitting on the edge of the bed. At first I thought he must have had a nightmare, but he shrugged off my anxious queries and asked in a low tone, "Where have you been?"

"To the ballet," I answered weakly.

Slowly and deliberately Bing slid back under the covers, and turned his face to the wall. I decided to put out the lights, got into my bed and lay there with mouth dry and eyes staring into the blackness, wondering what sort of explanation I should attempt. Just as I was coming up with a good one I must have dozed off, because suddenly it was daylight and Bing seemed to have disappeared. I finally found him in his study.

Discussing divorce

"What do you want?" Bing asked in steely tones.

"To talk, I guess. What do you want?"

This seemed a normal-enough question to me, but it proved to be a grave tactical blunder. Bing's voice rose to a pitch of hysteria. "I want a divorce."

"Well, you can't have one. In the first place, you're a Catholic. In the second place, you made me one. In the third place, I wouldn't give you one anyway."

"Why, oh, why did I ever marry you?"

Idiot that I am, I couldn't resist this opening. "You were pregnant," I shrilled. "You had to marry somebody."

The flower and the tank

Bing was not amused. "You deceived me," he howled. "You acted like a fragile little southern flower, and actually you're a goddam tank on the loose without a driver. You're supposed to be a wife and a mother, but all you think about is dancing, and acting, and nursing, and modeling, day and night, without ever stopping to ask why. You're crazy as a loon, and stubborn as a mule, and I've tried, and I've tried, and there's nothing I can do about it. Well, I'm exhausted, and I quit!"

"All I did was go to the ballet."

"Which lasted until 5 a.m."

"No, John took me to a party at La Scala afterwards. I guess I should have told you that we were going, but I didn't want you to worry."

"It wouldn't have made any difference. I can't do anything with you anyway. You're out of control."

"Are you accusing me of something immoral?"

"No, no, damn it all. Nobody was ever immoral with John Scott Trotter. It's worse than that. If you just had a hankering to run off with a guitar player, I could handle it. I've dealt with guitar players in my time. But that would be too normal for you. You want to spend your time playing Florence Nightingale, or Loretta Young, or Pavlova, or just shilling for a lady's tailor. What in hell do I tell the children when they ask why they don't have a mother? For that matter, what do I tell my friends when they ask if I'm married? I'd hate to have to prove the matter in court."

The tank wasn't doing too well, so perhaps we would have to resurrect that fragile southern flower. Resolutely I began to think sad, sad thoughts of an unworthy wife and mother, expelled from her hearth to wander the cruel world with no place to lay her weary head.

The end of the fight

The blessed tears came in waves which engulfed first me, then Bing, and finally the whole office. As usual I was carried away by my own performance, and soon found myself wailing and gasping out magnificently incoherent pleas for forgiveness and promises of reformation.

For all his brave talk Bing was a mere male, who succumbed to helpless femininity almost immediately. With a helpless sigh, he picked me up and carried me off to bed. I could just see him telling himself guiltily that the fierce battle was finally over, and that we would never quarrel again. How could he have treated a poor weak female so cruelly?

Meanwhile I was reflecting that I really had pushed him a bit far this time, and had best tread warily in the immediate future.

A Bing Crosby Special with Dean Martin, Frank Sinatra, and Rosemary Clooney

Christmas shows

In the fall of 1964 I availed myself of every opportunity to wangle bits on Bing's television show and Bob Hope's Christmas special.

Back on two such sets again, I was in my element, reveling in the constant interplay between cast and technicians, and playing a social role disproportionate to the brevity of my scripted one.

Bob loved to work far into the night. After doing a takeoff on a current television commercial, I returned very late on Saturday night, or rather early Sunday morning, to The Townhouse where Bing was waiting for me. Bubbling over with gossip, I announced proudly that there would be work for me on Monday too.

"You are going home tomorrow," Bing stated flatly.

"I can't do that. I haven't finished my work on your show or Bob's."

"And you're not going to."

"What's the matter?" I inquired with brilliant originality. "Have I done something wrong?"

"You will return in the morning to your home and children, and this time you will stay there."

I stared at Bing solemnly, and waited for his better nature to assert itself. No luck. It was the night of the ballet all over again.

I had been told to start packing, so I stalked into the next room and did just that. Somehow I found time between slamming suitcases to call the airport and reserve a seat on the 7 a.m. flight north. Then I bearded the lion in his den.

Woman's place

"Just for the record, I'd like to know what the hell is going on."

"If you don't know by now, there's no point in repeating it for the thousandth time."

"Is it just because I got in late? You know how Bob works, and surely you know what goes on in a TV studio."

"I certainly do."

Evidently I had struck the wrong chord there. I would try another tack. "I never once complained when you arrived home from work in the wee hours, or when you stayed in Los Angeles all week for that matter."

"I'm a professional," Bing stated curtly.

"And so am I!"

"And just what, pray, do you consider to be your profession?"

"What is that supposed to mean? What are you accusing me of anyway?"

Bing shrugged his shoulders in defeat. "I don't know really. Of not wanting to be my wife, I guess."

"I've never wanted to be anything but your wife. Does that mean that I have to stop breathing?"

"It means that your place is at home with your children."

"How about you? Is your place at home with your children? Why can't I be right here with you, doing the same work?"

"Because I'm a man, and I won't have my wife off flirting with every gaffer on the set."

"That's nonsense and you know it. But speaking of flirting, you've never been regarded as an icicle among your costars. Why should I behave any other way?"

"Because you're supposed to be a woman and a wife."

"And a man and a husband can conduct himself differently, is that it?"

"Yes."

That did seem to settle the matter, at least so long as Bing's word was accepted as the final criterion. I stamped out, sat on the bed by my suitcase to brood, and was awakened by my morning call at 6 a.m. Grimly I marched off the elevator, a suitcase in either hand.

A happy ending

An apparition rose from a chair in the lobby and blocked my path. Bing had already been down for breakfast, but he looked and must have felt like the wrath of God. It was evident that he hadn't had his usual two hours of sleep.

"Where the hell do you think you're going?" was his opening ploy.

"Home, in due obedience to the orders of my lord and master."

"Get back in there."

Since I just stood paralyzed, Bing grabbed the bags from my hands, and simply marched me before him into the elevator. I must admit that I didn't put up much of a fight.

A half hour later we entered the elevator arm-in-arm, descended into workaday reality, and wended our respective ways off to the sets. For the time being the tempest was over, but the basic issue remained unresolved.

Roberta Peters to perform recital

On Nov. 17, 1950, a totally unknown and untried young soprano walked onto the stage of the Metropolitan Opera and made a spectacular debut as Zerlina in Mozart's "Don Giovanni."

Roberta Peters has remained centerstage ever since, spanning more than a generation of operatic greatness from Pinza to Pavarotti, be it at the Metropolitan Opera, the Vienna State Opera, the Bolshoi in Moscow, the Festspielhaus in Salzburg, the studios of Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer during the halcyon days of Hollywood, innumerable variety shows on major network television, or the recital stages around the world.

April 26 at 8 p.m. Miss Peters will perform a special recital at Theatre Midland, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. Her Midland performance, which marks the fourth concert in Renwood's Select Series, is for the benefit of the Midland Jaycees. Herb Poole is in charge of the 300-plus Jaycees involved in selling tickets.

Tickets, priced at $65, may be purchased by calling the Jaycees at 694-4621 or Renwood Inc., at 687-5812. Price includes complimentary hors d'oeuvres, champagne, coffee and dessert. Doors open at 7 p.m. A cash bar will be provided by Midland Community Theatre.

Is Scottie Templeton (Michael McLaren) successful in charming his favorite doctor (Nancy Calhoun)? The answer lies in Midland Community Theatre's current production of Bernard Slade's "Tribute," on stage in Theatre I tonight through Sunday's 2:30 p.m. matinee and April 21-23. For reservations call Theatre Midland at 682-4111.

Brass quintet to play in two free concerts

The Lone Star Brass will perform two free concerts this weekend.

Saturday's 8 p.m. concert will be held at First Christian Church, 1301 W. Louisiana Ave. Sunday's 3:30 p.m. concert will be held in Odessa at First United Methodist Church.

Featured works include the Victor Ewald Quintet No. 2, Four Outings for Brass by Andre Previn, a Bach transcription of Contrapunctus IX from "The Art of Fugue," plus lighter quintet arrangements of popular tunes.

The Lone Star Brass is an ensemble extension of the Midland-Odessa Symphony, featuring principal players from the brass section. Quintet members are Thomas Fairlie, trumpet; Dale Sterling, trumpet; Robert Simmons, tuba; Brad Cornell, trombone; and Greg Phillips, horn.

In addition to symphony and quintet performances, quintet members work as freelance instrumentalists in the Permian Basin. Fairlie, Phillips, Cornell and Simmons also are employed by local school systems as private instructors. Sterling is employed by Square D Company.

The Lone Star Brass was created three years ago under the auspices of the Midland-Odessa Symphony. The group is sponsored by grants from the Atlantic-Richfiled Corporation, the Texas Commission for the Arts and the Odessa Symphony Association.

Saturday and Sunday's concerts mark the close of this season's formal recital. However, informal musical presentations are planned in May.

The Midland Arts Assembly will present the group in a pair of free concerts. The first will be held May 3 at noon at the First National Bank Plaza. The second will be held during the afternoon of May 7 at Midland Park Mall.

The Lone Star Brass will also perform during Odessa's "Boom Town Days," slated for May 14-16.

Baryshnikov totally at home in modern dance style

By MARY CAMPBELL

NEW YORK (AP) — Ballet superstar Mikhail Baryshnikov looked totally at home in the modern dance style Tuesday night as he starred in a benefit performance by the Paul Taylor Dance Company.

Baryshnikov, the defecting Russian ballet dancer who now runs American Ballet Theater and is its biggest star performer, was the guest attraction at the event, for which some patrons paid $150 a ticket to benefit the company.

He appeared in the eight-part "Images," which Taylor choreographed in 1977. The work uses nine dancers. When Baryshnikov danced in a group, he fit right in with Elie Chaib, Christopher Gillis and Thomas Evert. He didn't look remarkably better than them, as he usually does compared with the other men in the same classical ballet. He looked in total command of Paul Taylor's dance language, as they do.

When he had a solo, it was authoritative. He didn't look as though he had learned just this one dance but as though he could do any Paul Taylor work.

Although there are some flat hand poses and leg angles while moving with bent knees that look like Nijinsky's "Afternoon of a Faun," Baryshnikov certainly did not look balletic when he used them in this piece.

One thing at which he excells, when it is called for, is humor. So, when he gestured as four women danced offstage in a line he looked as though he were conducting the rhythm of their leaving, which was amusing. In a solo, where he kicked backwards a few times as he ran, he looked like a happy-go-lucky Greek god, another amusing combination.

The Tuesday program began with Taylor's "Esplanade" from 1975 and ended with his "Arden Court" from 1981. All three required enormous exertion. The dancers breezed through them all, in top form.

The combination of surf and sand proved irresistible to this unidentified Huntington Beach, California, surfer earlier this week. Although he found the going a bit rough after winding up under the Huntington Beach pier at the end of a long ride, he wasn't deterrred from returning for yet another ride through the waves.

Crime resistance program focuses on prevention

Hearst Feature Service

The Baltimore Crime Resistance Program helps individuals, businesses and community groups survey their security needs. It conducts both individual home security evaluations and community association seminars to teach individuals to survey their needs.

The unit's Lt. Robert Wilson advises people to think in terms of prevention.

"Burglars are opportunists, not professionals. A burglar needs three things; desire — which you can't affect, short of a lobotomy — opportunity and ability. So, gauge your actions to opportunity reduction. You may need an alarm, or maybe just outdoor lighting or a revision of your habits."

He offers these suggestions:

— Make your house appear "lived in," even when you aren't home. Leave a radio or stereo on or attach a timer to your television.

— Don't leave your newspaper on the front lawn or porch all day.

— Make sure your trash is put out on trash pickup day.

— Check the hardware on your doors. Are the locks flimsy? A single-cylinder deadbolt with at least a one-inch hardened bolt should be used on solid doors. For doors with glass that may allow a burglar to reach in and unlock the door, use a double-cylinder deadbolt that requires both inside and outside keys.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Cause of dyslexia unknown

Dear Dr. Solomon: A couple I know have a son who has dyslexia. The father has a Ph.D. in economics and the mother teaches English literature in high school. How do you account for the fact that parents with above-average intelligence, such as this couple, should have a child who has so much trouble in school? — Hillary, Boston, Mass.

Dear Hillary: There is some question about whether dyslexia is a genetic condition or whether it is the result of environmental factors. But a condition can be hereditary without being manifest in the parents.

One person who believes that dyslexia may be inherited is Dr. Harold B. Levy, a pediatrician in private practice in Shreveport, La. He reported to a conference on child neurology that he based his conclusion on the fact that the condition occurs more often in boys than in girls, and that other family members are frequently involved.

In one study of 400 school children who were referred because of school problems, more than 90 percent were found to have family members with similar problems, and 87 percent of the children referred were boys.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is a person who has mental problems more likely to get ulcerative colitis than someone who is better adjusted? I used to think that this was the case until a friend of mine became ill. If he's got psychological problems, then there's no such thing as a normal person. — Francine, New York City, N.Y.

Dear Francine: Although an association between ulcerative colitis and psychiatric illness has been suspected by many investigators, the results of some research fail to bear this out. One of the more recent studies was by Dr. John E. Helzer and his associates at the Washington University School of Medicine.

A comparison of 50 patients with ulcerative colitis and a matched control group showed no difference in the frequency of diagnosable psychiatric disorders. Moreover, patients with ulcerative colitis who were found to have a psychiatric illness were not more seriously ill than were other patients who did not have a history of a psychiatric disorder.

Despite these findings, it has been suggested that patients with ulcerative colitis might still benefit from psychiatric treatment even when there is no apparent link between the disease and a psychiatric illness.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is 66 years old. He has been very depressed since my mother died about eight months ago. He finally agreed to go see a psychiatrist and he has continued to see him weekly. He says that all they do is talk and that he has not been given any medicine. Wouldn't it make sense to speed up the whole business by having my father take a pill or something? — Mrs. H.C., Stamford, Conn.

Dear Mrs. C.: I can understand your impatience because psychotherapy can be a long, drawn-out process. However, it is not always possible to take a shortcut. Moreover, medication may not only not be effective in your father's case, it may produce adverse side effects.

There is some evidence that many depressed, older patients may respond just as readily to psychotherapy alone as to psychotherapy in combination with drug therapy. Dr. Brigitte A. Prusoff of the Yale University School of Medicine in New Haven, Conn., has reported on a study of 22 older patients who underwent psychotherapy plus either medication or a placebo. In general, she found that the outcome was equally successful, whether a patient received an active drug or the placebo.

Dear Dr. Solomon: You may have written about this before, but I wasn't pregnant before. Now that I am, I would like to know if I can continue jogging. I've become somewhat compulsive about it and I would hate to give it up. However, the baby comes first. — Stacey, Washington, D.C.

Dear Stacey: Keep your running shoes handy. According to Dr. John C. Jarrett III, of the University of Illinois College of Medicine in Chicago, healthy women who have been conditioned to jogging can continue to do so during their pregnancy.

The results of a study of a group of 67 women who continued to run while they were pregnant showed that their complication rate was equal to or lower than that in the general population.

Williams astonished with his own success

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

Mulligan's Stew

NEW YORK (AP) — The passing of Tennessee Williams is deeply and personally regretted here, not only because he was a great American playwright — perhaps our greatest — but because he was the first celebrity I ever met.

And the kindest.

I wasn't even a cub reporter then. I was a college senior and an ex-GI, sailing out of New York on the old SS America to get married in Ireland during the winter vacation. Since I was majoring in English literature, I thrilled to see the name Tennessee Williams on the passenger list the room steward had slipped under the door of the steerage class cabin I shared with three older men deep in the bowels of the ship.

Williams occupied a suite up on the sundeck. "A Streetcar Named Desire" had just opened on Broadway to great critical acclaim, and the playwright was on his way to Stockholm to open yet another company of "The Glass Menagerie."

Audaciously, idolatrously I summoned a bellhop, slipped him a buck and dispatched a note to the suite asking for an interview for the Marlboro College (Vt.) Citizen, an eight-page mimeographed collegiate publication that came out whenever its editors felt the urge to give birth.

Down came a message from first class, graciously granting an audience for 2 p.m. the following day. When the appointed hour neared, an assistant purser dangling an enormous set of keys passed me through the locked gates leading from tourist to cabin class and then onward and upward to first class, where a tiny elevator made the final ascent to the sun deck.

Although it was very late in December and snow could be seen streaming past the porthole, the playwright was wearing a white Palm Beach suit and the sort of bright paisley cravat worn by leading men in English drawing-room comedies. Before we commenced to chat, a waiter arrived with champagne and caviar.

"I hope you don't find this too pretentious," Williams apologized in a soft musical drawl, as he peeled off a 20-dollar tip and signed the room service chit.

"I just can't help living it up. Five years ago tonight I was washing dishes in the Roosevelt Hotel. Now I'm driving them crazy in the kitchen. Why the chef never even heard of pralines! Success is wonderful. I wish you buckets of it. You are going to be a writer, aren't you, and not a professor?"

The pleading tone of the question indicated he had great compassion for budding authors but didn't put much store in future English professors, who might degenerate into critics.

Williams spoke sadly, almost resentfully of the long time it took him to get through college — nine years, as I recall — but relished with boyish enthusiasm every detail of his two brilliant Broadway hits. I never since have met anyone so astonished and delighted at his own success, a beguiling blend of humility and pride, and he seemed so anxious to share his good fortune with the world.

His dresser mirror was plastered with telegrams from fans and friends in the theater, and the suite had so many baskets of flowers, most already wilting, it gave off the slightly sickening aroma of a funeral parlor.

"That toy streetcar is from Marlon, and Jessica sent the Southern belle doll," he chirped excitedly, pointing to the bon voyage gifts from his stars, Marlon Brando and Jessica Tandy. "We had a marvelous opening night party for Streetcar. Everyone laughed and cried and drank too much. I just love parties, don't you?"

I thought my affirmative answer was just a matter of form, but he took me at my word. The next day an envelope appeared under my door, an invitation to his New Year's Eve party. I was the only tourist class guest, as the same purser with the bandolier of keys informed me.

For several weeks my celebrity encounter was a private triumph that couldn't be shared. No one in the small town in Ireland where I was married had ever heard of Tennessee Williams.

Now, of course, he is a timeless international name, evoking all sorts of emotional responses and fond memories from people touched by his life and his works. For anyone in my theater-going generation, to have seen Laurette Taylor as Amanda Wingfield, Jessica Tandy as Blanche DuBois or Burl Ives as Big Daddy is our age's equal and perhaps then some of having witnessed John Barrymore's Hamlet or Maude Adams as Peter Pan.

And then to have met this shy, sensitive genius, who always seemed as helplessly lost and vulnerable as any of his fragile heroines, seems to me as great a bit of luck as sharing a box with George Bernard Shaw for the opening night of "Pygmalion," with the added fortune of being exposed to gracious Southern courtesy instead of acerbic Irish wit.

As his fame grew and his successes became fewer, Williams apparently never lost the gentle, almost innocent and wondering way he had of looking at himself and the world around him. His friend Gore Vidal told me that when Tennessee Williams embraced Catholicism in 1968, the Jesuits in Rome gave him a rare cocktail party at the Vatican. Boyishly excited as always at any sudden new direction in his passage through this life, the playwright described with great vivacity the feeling that seized his heart and his mind and his whole being when, like Saul become Paul on the road to Damascus, he first saw the light.

"Was it a warm glow or an icy cold shock?" a young Jesuit theologian asked him to elaborate on the feeling.

"No temperature," the new convert answered in words that would have made a fine second act curtain.

Thomas Lanier Williams was neither born nor raised in Tennessee. He was born in Columbus, Miss., raised in St. Louis, Mo. and at college, first at Missouri, then at the University of Iowa, was called Tennessee, which is where his father, the prototype of "Big Daddy," came from.

Inmates opt for Whoppers

CRAIG, Colo. (AP) — Maybe home cooking isn't what it used to be. Inmates at the Moffat County Jail say they'll take fast-food instead.

Sheriff S.L. Valdez, who arranged for hot home-cooked meals for his charges, said he was astonished to get two letters from inmates who said they wanted their burgers back.

The jail's regular cook doesn't work on weekends, so the practice had been to order fast-food for the inmates for their Saturday and Sunday dinners.

In December, Valdez contracted with Shirley Rogers, a deputy's wife, to prepare hot meals for weekend dinners.

But the inmates complained. A few days ago, the sheriff got a note saying, "We would like to know why we have been denied Whoppers for the past three weeks."

Both that note and an earlier one complaining about home-cooked meals were signed, "inmates of the county jail."

Three-year-old gets loan for bike

SHAWNEE, Kan. (AP) — Amy Vega isn't in 4 yet, but that didn't stop her from wheeling and dealing to come up with the $6 down payment she needed to get her bike loan.

"Oh boy!," Amy said when told her application for a $54 loan had been accepted at her branch of the Kansas Credit Union. She used the money to buy a Strawberry Shortcake bicycle.

"I'll keep my room clean so I can pay for it," the 3-year-old said.

Amy plans to make the monthly payments of $5.21 by doing small chores around the house, said Jane Vega, the girl's mother and branch manager of the Credit Union.

While enlistment is limited by Congress, spokesmen for all four branches of the service say high civilian unemployment has resulted in a better class of recruits, lured by good-paying jobs and educational benefits. This was a scene recently at Detroit's induction center.

High unemployment causes boom in military recruitment

DETROIT (AP) — When Jeff Richmond graduates from high school in June, he's heading for the Marine Corps.

Andrea Smith worked at part-time jobs after she graduated, but the 22-year-old from Wyandotte, Mich., is putting on Army greens. So is Mark Goebel, 22 and recently laid off from the GMC Truck & Coach Division of General Motors Corp.

Thousands of high school graduates nationwide are donning military uniforms. The reason is simple.

"Jobs," said Richmond, a 17-year-old from Toledo, Ohio. "They're scarce everywhere else."

"There's no jobs out here," agreed Ms. Smith.

"As soon as I got my high school diploma, I said, 'Well, there's Reaganomics, so I'll go in (the Army)," said Maynard Lewis, 18, of Milan, Mich. "I can't fight Reaganomics."

The four were among 216 people waiting in Detroit's Military Entrance Processing Station on what officials termed a "light day" recently.

Spokesmen for all four branches of the service say high civilian unemployment has brought them better recruits, young people with high school diplomas who are lured by good-paying jobs and educational benefits.

"We're getting a lot more applicants than we've had in the past," said U.S. Navy Lt. Fred Kinkin, enlisted programs officer in Detroit. "Obviously, the unemployment situation comes into it — not so much ... that the kids can't get a job, but they see their big brother, or in most cases, their dad can't get work, and they're looking for a way to get started differently."

The Navy's annual goal is to have at least 73 percent of its recruits be high school graduates. Kinkin said Michigan — whose 15.5 percent unemployement in 1982 led the nation — achieved 76 percent last year and is running 90 percent so far in fiscal 1983.

Nationally, the Navy's take of graduates has risen from 73.1 percent in 1980 to 77 percent through the end of last year, said Lt. Rebecca Minton at U.S. Navy Recruiting Command in Arlington, Va.

The Army's percentage of new recruits with high school diplomas rose from 50.1 percent in 1974 to 86 percent last year — "the highest in the 10 years of the volunteer force," according to Jack Muhlenbeck, U.S. Army Recruiting Command information officer at Fort Sheridan, Ill.

In recent years, the Southeast has given way to the North and Midwest as the best areas for Army recruiting, Muhlenbeck said.

"We've gotten more selective," said Charles Bielak, U.S. Army public affairs officer in Detroit. "We've been like in the top five in the country for the last three years or so, and even before that we were doing quite well."

The Marine Corps is "pretty much in the same boat with everyone else," said Capt. Jay Farrar, at Corps headquarters in Arlington. "It's not that the economy has been the greatest single factor in our going up, but it's been one factor. It's also a renewed interest in military service — the applications to the service academies are just blooming."

Before the all-volunteer military, the Marines were "suffering from the Vietnam era — we took in a lot of people that were less than desirable for our units," Farrar said. "However, we had such a large manpower requirement, we took in pretty much everybody we could get."

The Marines set a 75 percent minimum for graduates, but last year took more than 85 percent, Farrar noted, adding that this year's class of 1,400 at the U.S. Naval Academy was filled from a pool of some 14,000 applicants.

The Michigan enlistment total has averaged about 91 percent high school graduates, and "we're running 98 percent or better in the last six months," said Maj. Pat Townsend at 9th Marine Corps District headquarters in Shawnee Mission, Kan.

Laser weapons may revolutionize warfare

By KINGSBURY SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — President Reagan's historic proposal to save the world from nuclear destruction by intensifying research on development of a ballistic missile defense system in space has been assailed at home and abroad as a "Star Wars" fantasy that would start a new nuclear arms race and militarize the sky.

What the critics have overlooked from apparent lack of knowledge is that the Soviet Union has been striving for several years with considerable success to develop a space offensive and defensive system that would render the U.S. incapable of retaliating against a Soviet nuclear first strike to knock out American missiles.

Defense Departments officials testified in a secret session of Congress a Year ago that the Soviets could have operational capability with a space-based laser weapon by the end of this year and a large space weapons system in orbit by the early 1990's.

Four years ago then Defense Secretary Harold Brown warned President Carter in a secret memorandum that Soviet anti-ballistic missile (ABM) research and development (R&D) activities were causing concern over the danger of a quick break-through capability.

A comprehensive Senate report on Soviet space programs, issued last December, disclosed that in late 1975 "There was some evidence that (Soviet) ground based lasers were probing U.S. military satellites in high orbit."

Sen. Malcolm Wallop, R-Wyom., a leading congressional advocate of a laser defense system, told the Hearst newspapers the Soviets are almost certain to have laser weapons in space before the U.S. does, because they are 3 to 5 years ahead in space laser research.

"There is every reason to believe the Soviets will beat us into space with a laser weapon," he added. "They are racing as hard as they can to get there, but if we work hard and pay the price, we can get there soon thereafter with possibly superior laser systems.

"A race for defensive arms is better for mankind than a race for offensive ones. Furthermore, laser weapons are not nuclear and they would not kill people. They would kill missiles that cause nuclear destruction. This is the first time since war has become so terrifying that we are in a position to develop weapons that do not kill people, but destroy the nuclear weapons that would kill people. With the worst will in the world, one could not use laser weapons for mass destruction. It means that instead of mutual assured destruction (MAD), we can have 'assured survival.'

"Several dozen laser weapons systems deployed in space would revolutionize the strategic equation – above all by decisively tipping the balance of modern warfare in favor of the defense and radically mitigating the potential destructive effects of war."

The Senator noted that a General Accounting Office report to Congress last year strongly recommended development of a program for establishment of laser "battle stations" in space to protect the U.S. against ballistic nuclear missiles

It is estimated the cost of developing and deploying a dozen laser battle stations in space by the early 1990's would cost about $5 billion. Congress authorized $375 million in the '83 fiscal year budget for space laser research.

Sen. Wallop envisages each laser battle station orbiting the earth at an altitude of roughly 800 miles. Laser beams, with a projected range of 3,000 miles, would destroy a Soviet, or any ballistic, missile within a few minutes after launching by means of intense electromagnetic radiation which would disrupt its mechanism and cause it to fall to earth where its nuclear warheads would probably explode, presumably on Soviet territory. This probability, coupled with the uncertainty of breaking through the laser defense shield, would, in Sen. Wallop's opinion, render nuclear weapons "obsolete."

He is not the only one who thinks so. The GAO report concluded that laser technology, in its potential for defense against nuclear missiles, could prove to be as important as the invention of the wheel, computers, and nuclear weapons.

MMH lab offers 'discreet' care

Lab divided into five distinct areas

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

There's more behind the hospital laboratory's swinging doors than medical personnel garbed in white coats and and vials filled with blood.

The medical lab "is a discreet part of medical care," says Art Hauser, Midland Memorial laboratory director.

While many people usually only come into contact with the hospital lab for a blood test, there are five distinct areas in the MMH lab — hemotology, chemistry, microbiology, blood banking and tissue pathology.

"In the lab we perform tests on specimens from the body," Hauser said. "When your physician is making a diagnosis, he takes a history and physical exam. But there's a lot of things science only allows us to do through testing. And this is where we come in."

MMH's laboratory employs about 50 people during its 24-hour work period year-round. This week has been designated as National Medical Laboratory Week.

To bring an understanding of what takes place in the MMH lab, Hauser outlined the five areas.

"Hemotology is the study of blood," he said. "We analyze the blood for anemia, cancer (leukemia), coagulation or clotting abilities."

"We go through a tremendous amount of effort not to mix tests...(the lab) is probably safer to walk through than walking down the street and shaking somebody's hand you don't know."

Art Hauser

Hauser said for a patient who is having his tonsils removed, it is important for the physician to know ahead of time what to expect.

"The throat has many little blood vessels in it," he said, explaining that one advantage of testing the patient's blood is that it lets the doctor know if the patient has a tendency to bleed.

In chemistry, components dissolved in the blood are tested. After a heart attack, a component called cardiac enzymes usually are released.

"By testing the chemistry of the blood, we can sometimes measure if there is an abnormal number of cardiac enzymes in the blood and tell if the patient might have had a heart attack," Hauser said.

"We're not testing the blood itself, but testing what is in the blood."

The study of infectious disease, or microbiology, is Hauser's pet. As a microbiologist, Hauser explained that in this area of the lab, bacteria is grown and isolated, identified and tested against antibiotics.

Blood banking is probably the most familiar part of the lab.

"Most people who are going to be married come to the lab for a blood test," Hauser said. "The bank has less to do with testing in the overall scope of the lab. To simplify, in blood banking we mix a drop of patient's blood with a drop of a donor's blood to test for compatibility.

An area that may require a strong stomach is tissue pathology. Hauser said "usually when something is taken out at surgery, it goes to pathology."

Here, water is removed from the tissue, tumor or organ and is replaced with a type of wax.

"Then we do a gross section, or examine the material by cutting out small pieces for analysis," Hauser said.

According to Hauser, "the wax" makes the tissue stiff, so it's easy to cut. Then, because tissue is colorless, it is stained and examined by the pathologist who evaluates the tissue's health or disease.

Hauser said another procedure, which is faster, is a frozen section.

"The material is brought up from surgery and we 'quick freeze' it and then call back the results to surgery while the person is still on the table," he said.

Hauser, who administratively directs the lab, said precautions are stringently followed for accuracy.

"We go through a tremendous amount of effort not to mix tests," he said, adding that because of the personnel involved in the precautions taken and the elaborate instruments used, lab prices tend to be high.

He added that the hospital lab "is probably safer to walk through than walking down the street and shaking somebody's hand you don't know."

PBRPC board favors PBS station for Odessa College

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission board of directors Wednesday gave favorable comment on a grant application to fund equipment for a television station at Odessa College.

The board also accepted the findings of a 15-month audit and gave favorable comment to a $1.5 million loan application by a Dawson County cotton gin. The action came during the board's monthly meeting in the PBRPC conference room at Midland Regional Air Terminal.

Odessa College is seeking $409,275 from the National Telecommunications and Information Administration to purchase equipment — including an antenna and transmitter — for a non-commercial, educational television broadcast station on its campus. The college proposes to match an NTIA grant with $136,425, bringing the total project cost to $545,700.

David Paterno, an Odessa College spokesman, told the directors that transmission of educational and PBS programming from Dallas to West Texas is in danger of shutting down. Paterno said the land-based microwave transmissions are subject to interference and have become too costly for many local cable companies.

THE COLLEGE'S station — KOCV-TV, Channel 36 — will be housed in an existing building beside the school's FM radio station. He said the station will offer PBS programming to the general public and local schools, along with locally produced programming, such as city council and commissioners' court meetings and continuing education classes.

He said the station's signal will cover much of the 17-county PBRPC area, including Midland and Ector counties, with an over-the-air signal that can be picked up in individual homes or by cable systems.

Paterno said long range plans may call for translator stations that could carry KOCV-TV's signal across an even larger area.

The college also has an application before the Federal Communications Commission for approval to complete the station. Paterno said the college is applying for permission to receive PBS programming via satellite.

Paterno said PBRPC was a necessary first step in the application approval process, and added that he sees "absolutely no hurdle" in the way of completing the station. He said the station could go on the air as soon as March 1984.

In other action, David Austin, PBRPC financial officer, told the board the planning commission is "fiscally strong" after making several adjustments to lend more efficiency to its auditing procedures.

Austin said prior to the most recent audit — which covered the 15 months between July 1, 1981, and Sept. 31, 1982 — auditing of PBRPC operations and about 12 or 13 different individual grant programs administered by the commission was disjointed and often repetitive.

SEVERAL STEPS were taken to improve the audit procedures, he said, including extending the most recent audit period by three months to bring the PBRPC's fiscal year in line with the federal government's fiscal year, Oct. 1 to Sept. 31; converting from a manual to an automated accounting system in January 1982; and adopting a single-audit system as dictacted by the Office of Management and Budget in Washington, D.C.

"Basically, what I'm saying is that based on this audit, the planning commission is in a lot better financial situation than it has been in the past," Austin said. "It's stronger in the fact that it's more effective and more efficient."

The board approved the audit findings, which disclosed $4,176,993 in expenses and $4,175,161 in revenue — a $1,832 loss for the 15 months. Austin said the loss is not significant — considering all the auditing changes and the constant threat of Reagan administration program cuts — and will be covered by a general operating fund maintained by the PBRPC.

An application by Cotton King Gin Inc., of Dawson County, to the Farmer's Home Administration for a $1.5 million loan received favorable comment from the board.

Last year, Cotton King Gin undertook an expansion project that included adding 9,800 square feet of plant space, a 9,000-square-foot truck building and service area, the purchase of double lint cleaning equipment and addition of a fifth gin stand which boosts the gin's capacity by 20 percent.

Lamesa National Bank provided financing through short term notes, but cost overruns and an average 1982 ginning season forced the gin to seek the $1.5 million — for 10 years — to sustain day-to-day operations.

THE 10-YEAR LOAN will be provided through Lamesa National Bank beginning at 14 percent variable interest rate and adjusted quarterly. The gin — valued at more than $3.1 million — will serve as collateral for the loan.

Cotton King Gin, with $200,000 in annual payroll, employs 10 people year-round and 15 to 20 workers on a seasonal basis.

The PBRPC board gave favorable comment to an application by the City of Big Spring for funds to continue its Retired Senior Volunteer Program (RSVP). Big Spring is seeking $23,100 from ACTION and $9,400 from the state. Local matching money of $4,480 brings the total cost to $36,980.

RSVP offers senior citizens an opportunity to remain active through volunteer work in senior citizen centers, nursing homes, the Veteran's Administration hospital, day care centers and other community service facilities.

In 1982, 280 volunteers contributed 48,000 man hours through RSVP. For 1983, expansion could have as many as 325 person donating 49,500 hours of assistance.

The board also passed a resolution expressing its desire to remain a separate service delivery area for the federal Job Training Partnership Act.

Under a proposal to reorganize administration of the JTPA — a jobs and training program which replaces the Comprehensive Employment and Training Act — the PBRPC's program could be combined with the Concho Valley's program.

PRELIMINARY ESTIMATES indicate the PBRPC could receive $2.1 million and Concho Valley $700,000 under JTPA next year.

Willie Taylor, director of employment and training programs for the PBRPC, said administrators of the Concho Valley program may fight the proposal. He said the board will know, perhaps by May, whether they'll need to begin coordinating efforts with Concho Valley administrators.

Finally, Jerry Tschauner, PBRPC director of planning, told the board that plans are underway to develop a new Permian Basin Data Book. He said the book contains a variety of census and other data gathered from the 17 counties within the PBRPC.

He said the book, which now has 1970 census data, will be updated with 1980 census information and then continually updated with information concerning health, oil production and other pertinent statistics as they become available.

MC president opposes four-year status for UTPB

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

AUSTIN — A bill providing four-year status at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin could hurt Midland College in two ways, according to the MC president.

Dr. Jess H. Parrish, following approval of the bill by the Senate Education Committee here Wednesday morning, said he fears potential MC students may be pulled toward the four-year university and many courses offered may be duplicated in the Permian Basin.

"I'm not talking about the total number of students," Parrish said. "I'm talking about academic transfers."

Senate Bill 1014, sponsored by Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, and who represents Odessa, calls for adding freshman and sophomore level classes at UTPB as well as emphasizing energy-related sciences and engineering courses.

The bill will be sent to the full Senate for consideration possibly as early as this week. A similar bill, sponsored by Rep. Jay Gibson, D-Odessa, is pending in the House.

WHILE OPPONENTS of the bill from Midland said they were disappointed but not surprised at the committee's ruling, Friends of UTPB, a group of about 2,000 Odessans and 1,000 Midlanders advocating four-year status, indicated they were pleased with the 6-2 vote.

Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, who represents Midland, and Sen. Oscar Mauzy, D-Dallas, cast the dissenting votes.

"We remain optimistic," said Aubrey Barlow, chairman of the Friends of UTPB. "We're hopeful the full Senate sees it as the subcommittee does."

According to Parrish, if UTPB offers an engineering degree program, they also will have to provide basic courses required for engineering degrees that currently are offered at Midland Collegeo.

Duplication of basic, lower-level courses would be detrimental to the Permian Basin, he said, citing concern about MC's foreign language, business, math and English classes.

"We're worried about the erosion of the kinds of programs we offer," he said.

If UTPB did provide the same lower level courses, Parrish said MC's academic offerings could gradually decline. He reasoned that if class loads diminish, so would the need for some personnel and the number of courses offered in the academic areas would drop.

"I'M GREATLY concerned about this college becoming something other than what it was designed to be."

About $19 million from the state has gone into the growth of MC while some $40 million of local money has been invested. Parrish said the community wants a college that offers a wide scope of academic, vocational and adult education classes. If, however, UTPB provides competition in the academic areas, MC could become primarily a vocational school.

Paul Harvel, executive director of the Midland Chamber of Commerce, also testified before the subcommittee.

"We in Midland are very proud of UTPB and use it as a means of recruiting," he said. "It's a fine school, a fine institution and we're glad they are there. But I think four-year status would cripple and hurt our academic courses at Midland College."

The financial strain on a weakening state budget was cited by several opponents of the four-year status. According to Robert Clinton, director of the Community College Association, which represents 47 community colleges, he did not believe it was financially "the proper time to expand the upper level university."

Besides the replication and duplication of the facilities, Clinton pointed out additional expenses to the state budget. Also, approval of the bill may entice other upper-level universities to expand.

A FISCAL STATEMENT indicated about $7.5 million would be needed to construct a library and classroom building to accommodate freshman and sophomore students at UTPB. Also, about $1 million would be required each year to maintain the lower-level programs.

"I fear the chances are during the next session we'll have four or five more (upper-level institutions) wanting to expand," Clinton said.

"I understand the Friends of UTPB wanting to have a free-standing four-year university," said Dr. Roger Griffin, immediate past president of the Texas Junior College Teachers Association. "But if the Legislature passes this bill, can it refuse to treat others in a like manner?"

If passed by both the Senate and the House, four-year status still could be denied by the Coordinating Board of the Texas College and University System or the UT System Board of Regents. In a statement issued in October, Chairman of the Board of Regents Jimmy Powell said regents were opposed to four-year status. However, a need for a four-year university is feasible by the 1990's if the population of the Permian Basin reaches 400,000, as expected, according to the statement.

Neighbors recount hearing screams from apartment

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

In methodical, step-by-step fashion, Lubbock District Attorney Jim Bob Darnell is weaving a heavy rope of circumstantial evidence around the neck of Clarence Allen Lackey, on trial for the second time in the 1977 abduction, rape and murder of 23-year-old Texas Tech secretary Toni Diane Kumpf.

Neighbors of the slain woman, whose throat had been cut from ear-to-ear and whose scantily clad body was found dumped in a field south of Lubbock July 31, 1977, testified Wednesday of hearing pre-dawn screams coming from her apartment and of seeing a distinctive white pickup truck speed from the scene with a man at the wheel and a woman sitting beside him.

Mary Bookout, who lived in a three-bedroom apartment adjacent to Ms. Kumpf's, told jurors she was awakened "by a lot of commotion. The walls were shaking and she was screaming, 'Help me. Help me.' "

Ms. Bookout said she woke the brother of a female roommate and the two of them went outside in time to see the pickup truck drive away.

A PICKUP MATCHING the one that left the scene was later identified as belonging to Lackey, who is being retried after an appeals court threw out his 1978 conviction and death sentence on a technicality in the jury selection process.

The roommate's brother, Ricky Tomes, testified that he saw a tall man "with dirty blond hair" get into the pickup and drive off with a woman seated next to him. She appeared to be wearing a nightgown, said Tomes.

It was later found that Ms. Kumpf's apartment door had been kicked in and police said they discovered evidence of a struggle inside.

Tomes said the pickup "had lights and horns on top of the cab," was missing a rear hubcap and had a "big black bumper on the back."

Another trial witness, 28-year-old Dolly Moreno Caudillo, said she worked with Ms. Kumpf at Tech and the slain woman had mentioned being "watched" and possibly followed by a man in the weeks prior to her death.

"SHE WAS VERY nice," said Ms. Caudillo as tears started to form in her eyes. "She was very considerate and made friends quickly. Everyone really liked her."

A funeral home mortician testified that Ms. Kumpf's head was nearly severed by two long slashes across her throat and that her left hand had been "cut to the bone" between the thumb and index finger. She was clad only in panties and a pullover type jersey.

Lackey, a 28-year-old former construction worker, is alleged to have raped and murdered Ms. Kumpf after taking her to an apartment he shared with a 30-year-old woman at the time.

The woman, 30-year-old Carol Jean Johnson, testified Tuesday that she came home from work about 7:40 a.m. the day of Ms. Kumpf's murder and found "a big red puddle of wet blood on the bedroom floor."

Ms. Johnson said Lackey initially lied to her about how the blood got there, but later told her: "Baby, I've got something to tell you. I'm the one they're looking for. I didn't mean to hurt her."

Police were led to Lackey by another woman who tipped them that he matched the description of a man being sought for questioning in the case.

Officers testified they obtained a warrant for Lackey's arrest after finding blood stains in his apartment and after getting a statement from Ms. Johnson, who admitted on the witness stand that she at first lied to police and tried to help him hide evidence because she "was scared" of what would happen to her children by a previous marriage.

Former Lubbock County Chief Deputy Sheriff Albert Smith testified that he conducted an investigation in the field where Ms. Kumpf's body was discovered by a farmer on the day of her death.

SMITH TOLD the six-man, six-woman jury that due to the small amount of blood found around the body he concluded that she had been murdered "at another location" and that "a strong odor of decay" was coming from Lackey's apartment when officers went there to re-question Ms. Johnson on Aug. 2.

Smith said an investigation disclosed that the odor emanated from a box spring and mattress in the rear of Lackey's apartment, which was located about two miles from where Ms. Kumpf's body was found.

Another former Lubbock County deputy, J.B. Douglas, testified that heelprints on the door of Ms. Kumpf's small, efficiency apartment matched those of boots taken from Lackey at the time of his arrest. "They appeared to be identical," said Douglas.

The door, which was brought into court as evidence, bore heelprints just below the lock and Lackey's boots also were stained with blood, according to testimony.

Other evidence that is expected to link Lackey with the slaying include a pack of Marlboro cigarettes found on Ms. Kumpf's bed, and samples of hair, blood and saliva obtained during a comprehensive investigation of her death.

Testimony was to resume at 8:45 this morning in 238th State District Court. Lackey is being retried here on a change of venue. He originally was convicted and sentenced to die by a San Angelo jury in 1978.

Midland College President Dr. Jess H. Parrish testifies in Austin Wednesday before the Senate Education Committee, which voted 6-2 in favor of making University of Texas of the Permian Basin a four-year institution.

Friends of UTPB indicate they understood the statement as saying regents favor four-year status, while the bill's opponents say Powell's statement favors a cooperative effort between area community colleges and UTPB to provide a four-year education. Montford's bill asks for four-year status to be phased in beginning in 1986.

According to Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, he will follow the recommendation of the Coordinating Board and the Regents when Gibson's bill reaches the House.

"To my knowledge, since the Coordinating Board has been put into effect, we've never had a program that the Coordinating Board opposed reversed by the Legislature."

The Coordinating Board was developed to provide input and recommendations, Craddick said. "If we have a Coordinating Board in existence to do that, to advise us what is best, and we ignore that, why even have them?"

San Antonio official won't let Klan 'dictate' to city

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Members of the Ku Klux Klan have vowed to protect the Alamo from "Communist trash" despite the city's refusal to allow the white supremacist group to gather at the Texas shrine on May 1.

But City Manager Lou Fox said Wednesday that he would not allow the Klan to "dictate" to the city.

The Klan, he said, will be allowed to march only along a route prescribed by the city, which would snake through a small section of downtown and end up near City Hall and the police station.

"It's my responsibility to make sure we protect the peace," Fox said, "and I'm going to do that."

Charles Lee of Pasadena, Texas Grand Dragon of the White Camellia Knights of the Ku Klux Klan, blasted the city's stance and said Klan members would flock to the Alamo as "tourists" and "individual American citizens."

"What we basically want to do is make sure nobody messes with the Alamo," he said.

Individuals identifying themselves as Communists raised red flags above the Texas shrine in 1980 and 1981.

Robed Klan members peacefully appeared at Alamo Plaza last May 1.

An art group already has reserved the Alamo for the entire day of May 1, and allowing 50 to 250 Klan members to gather there would create "congestion and confusion," Fox and Police Chief Robert Heuck told Lee in a Tuesday letter.

The Klan immediately submitted a request for a permit for an alternate route near the Alamo, which was pending Wednesday. The city has five days to respond.

Eleven people were injured and six arrested during a Feb. 19 Klan rally in Austin. Six people were arrested and none injured during a heavily policed April 2 Klan march in Houston.

Senate subcommittee studies 'water package'

AUSTIN (AP) — A Senate subcommittee is studying a "water package" of eight measures that sponsors hope will ease Texas' current water woes and prepare the state for the future.

"It's not going to do any good to postpone any of this until the next Legislature," Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, told the Senate Natural Resources Committee Wednesday in presenting the three proposed constitutional amendments and five law changes affecting Texas water.

Sen. Tati Santiesteban, D-El Paso, committee chairman, said all eight measures would remain in a subcommittee for at least a week.

Montford said the "water package" was drafted under the direction of Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby with the participation of seven different senators and their staffs.

"These proposals provide us with a systematic approach to developing the water resources we will need to meet Texas' future requirements, but, even more importantly, they put the stress on conserving the water resources we already have," said Santiesteban.

The measures would:

— Add $300 million to the Texas Water Development fund in order to finance water supply programs and water quality improvements.

— Authorize two new programs which would allow the state to guarantee bonds issued by local governments to finance water supply projects, and sell the bonds at lower interest rates, thereby reducing the cost of the projects.

— Create a program of low-interest loans to farmers who want to install newer, more efficient irrigation systems.

— Allow the Texas Water Commission to set aside enough water from the flow of a river to supply fresh water to bays and estuaries.

— Require local governments that ask for state loans to show they have developed water conservaton plans.

— Protect fresh water supplies from pollution.

Land Commissioner Garry Mauro spoke in favor of the bill guaranteeing fresh water to bays and estuaries.

"Acre for acre, our coastal area is more productive than any agricultural land," he told the committee. "It is just common sense to realize our bays and estuaries are priceless possessions."

Agricultural Commissioner Jim Hightower said he supported the entire package, particularly the proposition to help farmers finance irrigation projects that would be more efficient and economic.

"Seventy-two percent of the water consumed in Texas is used for agricultural purposes," Hightower said "If we don't deal with this huge level of water use, we will not really have a Texas water plan worthy of the name."

Alan Henry, mayor pro tem of Lubbock, appeared for the Texas Municipal League.

"Many cities have serious water problems," he said. "We cannot do the job by ourselves. We need these measures."

Fred Pfeiffer, general manager of the San Antonio River Authority, said the bills were "right in line with the recommendations we have made."

"Overall the approach is very good," said Stuart Henry, representing the Lone Star Chapter of the Sierra Club.

Man gets 99-year prison term for family's aggravated robbery

One of two men, who posed as church laymen in their prelude to robbing a Midland family at their home while wielding automatic weapons, was given a 99-year prison term Wednesday by a jury in 142nd State District Court.

Convicted of aggravated robbery of the Kenneth and Sue Latta family on Midland's westside around supper time on Sunday, Nov. 9, 1980, was Edward Eugene Peterson, 29.

Peterson, who previously was convicted of a similar "I'm from a church" ploy, forced his way into the house after introducing himself as a church representative, put on a ski mask and threatened the Lattas with a pistol.

His co-defendant, Ernest Dean Mashburn, who allegedly joined him in the holdup, was wearing a mask, wielding a machine-gun, and, like Peterson, was wearing a pin-striped suit. The robbers tied up Mr. and Mrs. Latta, their teenage daughter and a friend, and absconded with family jewelry.

Mashburn, who is jailed while awaiting trial, was convicted of a Dallas robbery in which Peterson allegedly was involved, said Assistant District Attorney Jim Rex, who prosecuted Peterson.

DEATHS

J.C. Shamburger

STAMFORD — John Cecil Shamburger, 75, of Stamford and father of Doug Shamburger of Midland, died Tuesday morning at Anson North Lake of a sudden illness.

Services were to be at 10:30 a.m. today at First Baptist Church in Stamford, directed by Stanford Funeral Home. The Rev. Bruce Lambert, pastor, will officiate. Burial will be in Highland Memorial Cemetery.

He was born April 26, 1907, in Winsboro and was manager of C.D. Shamburger Lumber Company 30 years. He later owned a paint shop in Stamford for several years. He was married to Estelle Nicholson May 11, 1932, in Texarkana, Ark. He was a member of First Baptist Church of Stamford and former member of Stamford Exchange Club. One brother preceded him in death.

Other survivors include his wife, three brothers, two sisters and two grandchildren.

Honorary pallbearers were to be Mark Schweinfurth, John Seay, Gene Abbott, E.J. Raskie, John Kimberly, Joe Salman, James W. Richards and Brock Appel.

Another skunk found to be rabid as vaccination statistics climb

The bad news is that tests on another rabid skunk — the 21st discovered in Midland this year — came back positive from Austin Wednesday, a Midland Animal Control official said Wednesday.

The good news, according to Rice Freeman Zachery, is that vaccination statistics are climbing along with the rabid skunk toll.

Ms. Zachery said the skunk was discovered and destroyed Saturday after it was found chasing a doberman pinscher about five miles east of Midland.

No people were involved in the incident and the dog — which did not have a current rabies vaccination — is being examined for possible cuts, scrapes and other signs of exposure.

Of the 16 skunks sent to Austin for testing this year, 15 — or 94 percent — have tested positive for rabies, Ms. Zachery said.

But repeated warnings about the importance of rabies vaccinations have apparently roused Midland pet owners to action.

Ms. Zachery said that between October 1981 and April 1982, the Animal Control office recorded 5,074 pet vaccinations. Between October 1982 and April 1983, she said, vaccinations jumped to 7,943 — a 57 percent increase.

Vaccinations climbed from 867 in February 1982 to 1,422 in the same month of 1983. Likewise, 1,064 vaccinations were recorded in March of 1982 compared with 2,434 in March 1983.

"The word has gotten out. They're realizing that there is a problem," Ms. Zachery said.

Brandy Rininger, Animal Control license clerk, estimated that about 960 of the animals that got their shots in March were being vaccinated for the first time.

Ms. Rininger said the first-time vaccinations are an encouraging sign, and she stressed that Midlanders should continue to vaccinate their pets against rabies.

Whataburger offers 'amnesty' to persons with overdue books

Whataburger, the hamburger specialty chain, will be getting into the book depository business via an "amnesty" program beginnning Sunday and ending April 30.

The program is to encourage Midlanders to return their overdue books to the Midland County Public Library through Whataburger resturants.

Each person who drops off overdue library books at any of the three Whataburger locations in Midland will be offered a free medium-size soft drink.

"We appreciate Whataburger's efforts in our behalf," said John Deats, library director, "and are excited because this combination of a free soft drink from Whataburger and no overdue charges being assessed by the library should encourage many people to return those books which we normally would never see again."

The library charges a 20-cent fine per day for overdue books.

Whataburger locations in Midland are at 1905 N. Big Spring St., 3206 Midkiff Road and 800 Andrews Highway.

Londoners Barbara and Hensleigh Wedgwood examine some samples of the family china while touring the Museum of the Southwest. The two will speak today at 7:30 p.m. at the Marian Blakemore Planetarium, Haley Park, on their book, "The Wedgewood Circle," which deals with the lives of four generations of Wedgwoods, beginning with Josiah Wedgwood, the potter who began the Wedgwood line of china. The free talk and slide presentation is sponsored by the museum.

House rejects trucking deregulation

AUSTIN (AP) — Speaker Gib Lewis passed the first serious test of his ability to manage his colleagues as the House decisively rejected deregulation of intrastate trucking, lawmakers say.

As members of the Teamsters union watched from the gallery Wednesday, House members voted overwhelmingly for a Lewis-backed amendment to a bill extending the life of the Railroad Commission.

The bill that came to the floor eliminated requirements that those seeking trucking permits prove current service is inadequate. The bill's backers said it would ease granting of permits to new businesses, now reluctant to go through the hearing process.

At the conclusion of almost five hours of frequently emotional debate, Rep. Foster Whaley, D-Pampa, accused his colleagues of selling their votes to the trucking lobby that sought to block deregulation.

"I happen to know that people on both sides of the fence have accepted money," Whaley said. He asked his colleagues to vote against the bill "and return us to the free enterprise system."

REP. BILL MESSER, D-Belton, sponsor of the Lewis-backed amendment that would maintain regulation, said he felt "compelled" to respond to Whaley.

"I personally know that many people received contributions on both sides," Messer said. "I take those contributions and you take those contributions because we believe those people want you to come and serve in the public interest, not because there is some quid pro quo.

"You've done good work today, and you can be proud," Messer said.

Both the bill, and Lewis' amendment were tentatively approved by division votes. A division vote is electronically displayed, but it is not recorded and the totals are not announced.

The bill needs another House vote before being sent to the Senate.

An amendment by Rep. Tom DeLay, R-Stafford, that would have negated the Lewis backed amendment was tabled 113-26.

Lewis had spent most of the past two days lobbying members on the floor rather than wielding the gavel.

"WHATEVER PROBLEMS with publicity he's had, he's strong with the members," Rep. Bruce Gibson, D-Cleburne, told reporters. "I didn't know he was this strong."

Under current law, those seeking trucking permits must show that present service in an area is inadequate.

Messer said his amendment, co-sponsored by Rep. Clint Hackney, D-Houston, and backed by Lewis, was a "compromise" to shift the "burden of proof" from permit seekers to the company or companies currently holding permits to serve the area in question.

But DeLay called the Lewis-backed amendment "terribly misleading."

DeLay argued that the burden of proof would not really change under the amendment, but "just change who goes first." He said permit holders would have to show their service was adequate, but permit seekers still would have to argue the service was not adequate.

He said a shippers would be unlikely to testify on behalf of new truckers.

"HE HAS GOT TO stand up in public and point a finger at the existing service and say, 'He isn't any good,' without knowing if the new service is going to get a permit," DeLay complained.

"Let's don't kid ourselves. This is confusing you," he said. "This doesn't do a thing."

Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, said the Lewis-backed amendment was "absolutely against the free enterprise system."

"The truth is, these people (permit holders) have a mammary gland with a fence around it and they don't want to get a hole in it," Price said.

The House also turned down amendments seeking exemptions for transportation of specific products such as agricultural commodities and Texas-produced steel.

The members did agree to accept Orange Rep. Wayne Peveto's language allowing the Railroad Commission to "consider" the effect on Texas products of competition from industries unregulated in interstate commerce.

An amendment that Hurst Rep. Charles Evans tried to slide through without explanation would have allowed the Railroad Commission to block takeovers of utility companies by other companies. Rep. Fred Agnich, R-Dallas, said the amendment was meant to benefit a Houston gas company which feared a takeover, and the amendment was tabled.

The House also rejected an amendment by Rep. Ed Emmett, R-Kingwood, to change the Railroad Commission's named to the Energy and Commerce Commission.

Titanic search to resume

ABILENE (AP) — Oilman Jack Grimm is planning a third expedition to the North Atlantic this summer in an effort to pinpoint where the luxury liner Titanic sank 71 years ago.

A 30-member crew will depart Halifax, Nova Scotia on July 15 for a two-week search of the area where the ship is believed to have met its watery grave, Grimm announced Wednesday.

The Titanic, one of the largest liners of its time and considered "unsinkable," struck an iceberg off Newfoundland during its maiden trip from Great Britain to New York City on April 14, 1912 and sank early the next day.

The number of dead passengers and crewmen ranged from 1,490 to 1,517, according to various inquiries.

Grimm hopes to salvage diamonds and other jewels, valued between $17 million and $300 million, that were believed to have been on board. But Grimm said exploration of the inside of the ship will have to wait because a diving craft is not scheduled for use this summer.

"We can't dive on it," Grimm said, "but we'll have a drag line and drag bucket" to scour the ocean bottom alongside the wreck if it is found.

The crew will return to the area where an object believed to be a Titanic propeller was discovered during the last few hours of a search in 1981.

MC offers Polynesian lecture

Defensive Driving and a lecture on Polynesian cultures will be offered next week by the Midland College Department of Community Services.

Anne B. Hyde will present "Ancient and Contemporary Polynesian Cultures," from 9:30 to 11:30 a.m. April 23 at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin. The lecture is open to all interested individuals and serves as one requirement for the credit course entitled "Peoples and Cultures of Polynesia," to be offered concurrently by Midland College and UTPB during the first summer session. Further information on this free lecture may be obtained by contacting the Department of Community Services or the Division of Cultural Studies at MC.

Defensive Driving will be offered from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Monday and Tuesday. Fee for the course is $18.

Information on all Community Services courses may be obtained by calling MC at 684-7851.

Midlander to get alumni award

A Midlander will be among nine persons honored for their service to North Texas State University during an alumni awards dinner April 21.

Winfree L. Brown of Midland, class of 1951 and chairman of the NTSU Board of Regents, will be honored with the Green Glory Award.

The award is an acknowledgment of individuals, not necessarily alumni, whose assistance to the university has enabled NTSU to provide a margin of excellence in its endeavors.

House OKs garnishment of wages

AUSTIN (AP) — Those who default on court-ordered child support payments could have their wages taken under a proposed constitutional amendment approved by the Texas House.

Rep. Rene Oliveira, D-Brownsville, sponsor of the measure, told his colleagues to "cast a courageous vote for the children of Texas" and change the Texas Constitution.

Group asks FDA to require Vitamin A warning labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Food and Drug Administration is being asked to require labels on vitamin A supplements to warn consumers that large doses can be toxic.

The Center for Science in the Public Interest, which submitted the petition Monday, wants a warning that says taking more than 25,000 international units of vitamin A a day for several weeks or more can harm adults or teenagers and that more than 10,000 international units can be harmful to children and infants.

The proposed warning also would advise pregnant women to consult a physician before taking more than 10,000 international units of vitamin A daily.

Packages of vitamin supplements in pill form containing 25,000 international units would carry the warnings. Most vitamin combination preparations contain either 5,000 international units or 10,000 international units.

Possible side effects from large doses include headaches, nausea, double vision, loss of appetite, dry skin, irritability, joint pain and increased fluid pressure inside the skull. The group said that too much vitamin A during pregnancy may cause birth defects.

FDA spokesman James Greene said he had not seen the petition, but he added that the agency has already issued advice about the intake of vitamins.

"In general, we've said the overwhelming majority of people can get the proper amount of vitamins by eating a wide variety of foods. Mega-doses aren't really necessary for most people," he said.

The U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance for vitamin A is 5,000 international units for adults and older children, 2,500 international units for children aged 1 to 4 and 1,500 units for infants.

Writer believes computers need 'demystifying'

Copley News Service

The following is a test. Select the answer you think is most appropriate.

Computers are:
A) A necessary evil.
B) The best thing since sliced bread.
C) Great for avoiding conversation with your spouse.
D) None of the above.

If you picked D, you're correct — at least in the eyes of Peter McWilliams.

The witty writer and poet has helped erase much of the fear and pomp surrounding computers through his popular books, "The Personal Computer Book" and "The Word Processing Book."

And when the word "erase" is used, that's literal. Upon meeting a reporter for an interview, McWilliams presented the reporter with the "McWilliams II Word Processor" — a standard yellow pencil with an eraser.

"Portable, gives off no appreciable degree of radiation, no moving parts, silent operation" are among the McWilliams II Word Processor's assets listed in its marketing brochure.

It's all in good fun, which McWilliams believes is needed when it comes to demystifying computers.

He is neither impressed nor intimidated by the lights, beeps and buttons of man's latest technical wizardry. Nor should the consumer be, he says.

After all, most of us don't understand how our television sets, radios and calculators work, McWilliams reasons. Why should it be any different for computers?

"You just need to know how to push the buttons," he said.

Anyway, he adds, too many Americans are jumping on the home computer bandwagon without being sure of why or what they really need them for. Three million personal computers were sold last year, and another 6 million will be sold this year, he said.

"For a lot of homes, computers are the new Cuisinarts. People get one, and then six months later, it will be sitting over in the corner and not be used," McWilliams said.

"I can't imagine what the average home needs a computer for, except for three things," he said. "One is to play games. The second is to teach the children about computers because computers are going to be a part of their future. The third is simple curiosity. A lot of people are wondering what on earth these television typewriters are."

For the latter group, Williams suggests an inexpensive computer (under $300), such as the VIC-20, which you can "hook up to your TV and learn some stuff about computers.

"If all you want to do is play games on your computer, you can go out and buy a Colecovision and get an Atari adapter, and for $250 you can buy a lot of games, hook it up to your TV set, and you've got real good games. If that's what you want to do, there's no need to spend thousands of dollars on a computer," he said.

Conversely, if you want a computer for writing or small business purposes, it's worth the time and money to hunt for a more elaborate computer and a printer.

Study: Poor women losing ground

WASHINGTON (AP) — Poverty in female-headed households is growing rapidly as divorce, separation, and adolescent pregnancies increase and bias in education and employment linger, the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights says.

In "A Growing Crisis: Disadvantaged Women and their Children," the commission said it was "alarmed about the increasing income disparities for women, particularly minority women, heading households."

"For many black, white and Hispanic women, poverty means inadequate and infrequent use of medical services, reduced employment opportunities and increased household responsibilities," the report said.

"Children, when their mothers live in poverty, run an increased risk of birth defects and malnutrition and subsist in an environment that could interfere with education and future employability."

The commission found that the problems are greater for nonwhite women who are heads of households than for white, female heads of families.

"The underlying implication of this trend is that, all other things being equal, black and Hispanic female-headed households will dominate the poverty population by the year 2000," the report said.

Reviewing data gathered primarily by the U.S. Census Bureau, the commission found that between 1960 and 1981, the number of persons in poor families headed by women rose 54 percent while the number in families headed by white men dropped by 50 percent.

Some 27 percent of all black and Hispanic children — more than one in four — were poor in 1981.

A family's economic status appears to be linked with whether a male wage earner is present. In 1960, the median income for families with two incomes was $10,516 compared to $5,093 for female-headed families, according to Census Bureau data cited by the commission.

The differences still were wide in 1981 — $25,065 for husband-wife families and $10,960 for female-headed families. The median income for families with a female head declined from 41.4 percent to 37.4 percent of that for two-earner families between 1970 and 1981.

The commission said a family's economic status is likely to be worse if the family is nonwhite. The overall poverty rate for female-headed households in 1981 was 34.6 percent. For white, female-headed families, the rate was 27.4 percent. But for black female-headed families, it was 52.9 percent and for Hispanic female-headed families it was 53.2 percent.

The panel declined to make specific recommendations as a body, although its members agreed that both public and private sector action is needed to make a difference.

"The idea of the report was just to present the facts as they are, not to present solutions," said commission chairman Clarence Pendleton.

DEAR ABBY

Boyfriend gets cool reception

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: "Judy," our 19-year-old daughter, has been going with "Vern" for two years. She's always shown excellent judgment and is an honor student. Vern, 23, comes from a good family and has always been a perfect gentleman in our presence. Last Christmas Vern came bearing gifts for the whole family, and appeared to be serious about Judy.

About a month ago Judy stopped seeing Vern for two weeks, and she told her mother that she was hurt and angry because Vern had slapped her on several occasions!

Now Vern is back, but I no longer feel friendly toward him. In fact I told Judy that if she wanted to see him it will have to be elsewhere, because he was no longer welcome in this house.

Was I correct in doing this? — WORRIED FATHER

DEAR FATHER: No. Barring Vern from your home will probably alienate Judy and drive her closer to him. Tell Judy that a man who would "slap a woman on several occasions" has serious problems controlling his temper, so if she's considering a long-term relationship with him she should be aware that a "few slaps" almost always escalate to more violent behavior until the slapping becomes a "beating." And if Judy's judgment is as good as you say it is, she will get the message.

DEAR ABBY: Are we ever on the spot! I will be married soon, and my fiance and I are putting on the wedding. We are on a very tight budget so we had to keep the guest list down. In order to do so, we decided that we couldn't include any children.

We addressed our invitations to "Mr. and Mrs." Several relatives, and some close friends, have called and asked why their children were not invited, and we told them quite frankly that we had to keep the cost down.

Well, my fiance's cousin asked if she could bring her two teen-aged daughters and her 9-year-old son if she picks up the tab for them! (They live in town.)

Now what should we do? We really don't want ANY children. — ON THE SPOT

DEAR ON: Tell your fiance's cousin that since no other children will be there, it would be better if she did not bring hers.

DEAR ABBY: I'm having a problem in my marriage I can't seem to handle. I slept around a lot while I was in college. Most of the girls I knew did. It was no big deal. My husband knew it before we were married, and at the time he said it didn't make any difference as long as I was exclusively his after we got married.

I have been 100 percent faithful to my husband, but now every time we have a disagreement, he calls me a "slut" and accuses me of sleeping with every man in town. I know I'm not the only girl my husband ever slept with, but as long as he's true to me now, that's all that matters.

We really love each other, and our marriage would be nearly perfect if it weren't for his bringing up my past.

Abby, why are men less forgiving than women when it comes to the past? What should I do? — MISSISSIPPI MRS.

DEAR MRS.: All men aren't less forgiving than all women. Your husband's inability to let go of the past is his problem. Don't make it yours by reacting with hurt and anger. If he really loves you and values your marriage, he will get some counseling and learn how to permanently bury all the garbage he has stored in his memory.

(Getting married? Whether you want a formal church wedding or a simple "do-your-own-thing" ceremony, get Abby's new booklet. Send $1 plus a long, self-addressed, stamped (37 cents) envelope to: Abby's Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

AT WORK

Program career change

By DR. ADELE M. SCHEELE

Q. I am 23 and have worked for four years at my first job, in an insurance office. I am punctual, accurate and reliable. My duties include simple computer work, typing, telephone scheduling and handling mail. I want to work in another kind of office, a doctor's office perhaps, but I am worried about my present employer knowing that I am looking for another job. Also, what should I put on my resume?

A. Don't worry about what your employer thinks. What is the worst he can do? Fire you when you want to quit in the first place? And the best may be he'll offer you more challenge and more money.

Don't worry about your resume, either, since this is your first job. There are always jobs for office workers in large companies. But if you want to work in a doctor's office, find doctors to talk to. Start with your own and ask for his or her associates.

Place a small ad in your local newspaper, something like this: "Energetic office assistant. Great at phones, scheduling. Skilled at computers, typing, and form processing. Pleasant, personable and not afraid of hard work."

Then pick the best five offers and go interview them! Risk-taking is a skill you want to develop.

Q. I want to start a business offering services of all kinds — organizing anything from closets to files to parties. I would arrange for clients' movers, gardeners, even supervise painters. I'd shop for gifts or groceries, shepherd children to schools or doctors and take care of pets. How do I best promote this kind of service?

A. What you need is promotion and advertising. Get some clients now, even if you offer discounts, if they will help you promote your business by telling their friends about you.

Then go to your local paper and magazines and offer a story of an unusual entrepreneur — you. Tell them about your services and what kinds of people use them. That's how the incredible "Renta Yenta" started in Los Angeles and now has imitators nationally.

Get on the speaker's circuit and create a funny 20-minute pitch of what you do and how it benefits busy people. Or, go to the local university's graduate class in marketing and present your business as a case study. Have a group, as a class project, help you develop a clever name, logo, brochure and marketing plan.

Q. I am 44 and living with my father on social security. I do odd jobs three days a week. My education is limited, but in spite of this, I am very personable, bright and neat. How can I get employment as a day-care worker? Also, I would like to go to art class two or three days a week. Do you think it's too late to start?

A. It's never too late. So, first find some day-care centers and sell yourself based on your character — honest, personable, reliable, caring. Ask what the salary range is and pick a middle figure if you can to start until you can build up some experience. If you can't find anything, volunteer until a job opens. Then find out if your city or state requires a license and if it does, get it.

Judging from your letter (which I edited) I would suggest that you go to school at night to brush up on your English or reading or grammar, plus child care courses. Build up your education to insure a career for yourself. Then as a reward to yourself, take an art course offered at a local Y or community college. Shop around, and sit in on some classes until you find one you really like.

AT WIT'S END

Family dinners rare

By ERMA BOMBECK

Tonight in America, five million families will sit down to dinner at 4:30 p.m. And 5:10 p.m. And 6:15. And 7:30. And 10:50.

The same family . . . at all those times.

It's a phenomenon in this country known as Dinner-a-la-Sports, where every member of the family is involved in some kind of organized play and eats dinner whenever the schedule permits.

As an example, let's consider the Sweatzers. Len plays handball after work on Wednesdays and Fridays and doesn't get home until 7:30, except on Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays when he jogs, at which time he eats at 6:50 unless it's winter and he runs early and gets home at 5:10.

His son, Peter, plays football in the fall and baseball in the spring so his hours to eat fall somewhere between 4:30 in the afternoon and 11 o'clock at night. It varies.

His other son, Steven, is on the swim team and must eat three hours before the meet or wait until it is over. He usually eats at 3 in the afternoon.

Daughter Karla is a gymnast and must watch her diet. She eats after practice, which could run from 5 to 6:30 depending on whether there's a home game in the gym or she has to go across town.

The menus at the Sweatzers' are interesting.

Steven has never eaten spaghetti any other way but al dente with medium rare meatballs. He is 15 years old and considers gelatin a beverage.

Peter has never seen a casserole without a hole in it and honestly believes limp lettuce is a "hot meal."

Len has eaten so many frozen dinners he will be dead for three years before his stomach thaws out.

Connie Sweatzer does the best she can under the circumstances. She leaves for tennis on Tuesdays at 2:30 and for golf on Thursdays at 3 and leaves the refrigerator door full of instructions on what goes where and at what temperature.

One night a couple of weeks ago, something strange occurred in the Sweatzer household. It was 6 p.m. Friday. They were all there. Len pulled a muscle and canceled his handball game. Peter had a cold and the coach sent him home. Steven's swim team lost in the semi-finals and Karla came home because they couldn't get a gym to practice in.

They all sat around a dinner table awkwardly looking at one another until Karla said, "This is weird! I thought I was an only child!"

Prenatal diary follows personal path of pregnancy

Copley News Service

And so you're going to have a baby. Now what?

"See me in a month," says the doctor to the mother-to-be at the end of the first visit (which usually just confirms the suspicion of pregnancy). But, in the meantime. . .

It's probably been more than 20 days since conception and already your child's backbone, nervous system and spinal cord are being formed. There are lots of things going on in your body; you're overdue to begin your prenatal homework. But where to start?

"I had a lot of questions when I decided to get pregnant," said Jenny Cullinan-James. "I'm a very organized person and I need a lot of information before I make a decision. I went to the library and to bookstores to read everything I could get my hands on. I wanted to know what to expect and what was expected of me before I got pregnant."

She waded through pounds of books and spent a fair amount of money in local bookstores in order to gather the latest information on timetables during pregnancy. She scribbled down a little information from this book and a little from another, she talked to health-care specialists and came up with her own timetable for pregancy. Then she decided that others could benefit from her mounds of research.

"So I decided to put together a personal diary for pregnancy," she said. "The purpose was to let women know when it was time to think about this or that and also to write down their thoughts and feelings about what was happening to their bodies.

"I wanted a special book that a mother could pass on to her child years later, something that would tell the child about those early days when the parents went through the adventure of having a child."

A year later, "Great Expectations" (Peggotty Products, Inc., $29.50), a datebook, resource guide and written companion for the contemporary pregnancy, is on the market. Cullinan-James put the book together with the help of attorney Gretta Botka and Susan Leary, a college roommate and health-care specialist at a San Francisco-area hospital.

Cullinan-James, 33, is a marketing executive for a San Diego communications firm. She and her husband, Cal, were undecided for many years about having a family. But once they decided to go ahead, Jenny started long-term planning.

"I smoked cigarettes for many years," she said. "Once the decision was made to try to start a family, I gave up smoking. Drinking alcoholic beverages was another area I was concerned about. I decided to have only a beer or glass of wine once in awhile. That decision pleased me when I found out that I was pregnant. I felt that my child would have a healthier head start because of my decisions."

The hazards of cigarettes and alcohol were two areas she was already aware of, Jenny said, but there was so much more to know and to plan.

"There's so much that each of us needs to know individually, but those questions never seem to surface at the doctor's office. We need to write those questions down when we have a concern, and then take that notebook to the doctor's office as a resource during a regular checkup."

In the book, the authors offer weekly tips, like taking a monthly photograph during pregnancy to see how you're changing.

Banana oat bread tasty

By The Associated Press

Banana cakes came into wide favor in the United States and Canada in the 1920s. Banana quick breads followed along and won popularity.

BANANA OAT PECAN BREAD

1¼ cups all-purpose flour
4 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon cinnamon
4 small (each 4 ounces) ripe bananas
2 large eggs
1-3rd cup sugar
½ cup corn oil
1 cup quick-cooking oats
½ cup chopped (medium-fine) pecans

Oil the bottom of an 8 by 4 by 2½-inch loaf pan.

On wax paper or in a small bowl, thoroughly stir together the flour, baking powder, salt and cinnamon.

Into a medium bowl, slice the bananas; with an electric beater beat until pureed — there should be 1 cup; add eggs, sugar and oil; beat until blended. Add the flour mixture; stir just until it is moistened. Stir in the oats and pecans. Turn into the prepared pan.

Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until a cake tester inserted in the center comes out clean — 55 minutes.

With a small metal spatula, loosen edges. Turn out on a wire rack; turn right side up; cool completely.

Amy Grant wins Dove awards

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Singer Amy Grant, who won a Grammy award for her hit album "Age to Age," has won two Dove awards from the Gospel Music Association and been named Gospel Artist of the Year.

Miss Grant, 22, was presented Contemporary Gospel Album of the Year and Album Cover of the Year awards for "Age to Age" at the association's 14th annual Dove Awards show on Wednesday.

Larnelle Harris won Doves for Male Vocalist of the Year and Black Inspirational Gospel Album for "Touch Me Lord."

Sandi Patti, who was last year's Female Vocalist of the Year, repeated in that category and also won an award for Inspirational Gospel Album for her "Lift Up the Lord."

Al Green's "Precious Lord," which won a Grammy in February, won for Black Traditional Gospel Album.

The Imperials won for the Group of the Year, while Michael Card and Jon Thompson won Song of the Year for "El Shaddai."

Country singer Barbara Mandrell's album "He Set My Life To Music" won in the category Gospel Album of the Year By a Secular Artist.

Barry Manilow

NEW YORK (AP) — Singer Barry Manilow is used to making albums, but his latest two records will appear in a book instead of on sales charts.

Manilow's engagement earlier this year in the Uris Theater set a one-day Broadway box office gross record of $782,160, said Guinness Book of World Records editor Norris McWhirter. The engagement from Feb. 21 to March 5 also set a record as the fastest ticket sellout in Broadway history.

At Sardi's Restaurant on Wednesday, Manilow was given a plaque for his accomplishment. He thanked "those people who stood in line that one terrible snowy, cold night."

Currently on a world tour, Manilow flew in from Japan to accept the award.

"They taught me in Japan the tradition of never accepting a gift without giving one in return," he said. "So I'm going to donate a brand new piano to the High School of the Performing Arts. Maybe that will help some composer, actress or actor break a couple more records."

LONDON (AP) — Christmas Humphreys, a retired criminal judge and practicing Zen Buddhist, author and Shakespearean scholar, died of a heart attack at his London home Wednesday night, friends announced today. He was 82.

"He had just come back from a holiday in Suffolk. He had slight heart trouble but was remarkably fit and his death has come so suddenly," a friend, Irmgard Schloegl, said at his home.

Humphreys, whose first name had been in the family since the 16th Century, retired from the bench at London's famed Old Bailey Central Criminal Court in 1976.

Known as Britain's "gentle judge," Humphreys said he never could have passed a death sentence. Yet, ironically, when he was a barrister, he prosecuted the last woman to be hanged for murder in England — Ruth Ellis, 28. She was executed in July 1955 for the murder of David Blakely, 25, in Hampstead, north London.

Her hanging sparked a debate which led the British Parliament to abolish capital punishment in 1969.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Country singer Steve Gatlin has received a welcome, if belated, birthday present — a third daughter for him and his wife, Cynthia.

Aubrie Lane, weighing in at 5 pounds, 4 ounces, arrived Wednesday morning at a Nashville hospital, just a little late for Gatlin's 32nd birthday on April 4.

The mother and daughter are in "wonderful condition," a hospital spokeswoman said.

Gatlin is one of three members of the Gatlin Brothers. Their songs include "All the Gold in California, "Broken Lady" and "Nighttime Magic."

MONTGOMERY, Ala. (AP) — Author Truman Capote says his recent illness is "a strange sort of thing," but he was able to joke about it while leaving Baptist Medical Center after treatment for dizziness and disorientation.

The 58-year-old author of "In Cold Blood" and "Breakfast at Tiffany's" wore black pants, a white T-shirt, purple wool scarf and dark glasses as he chatted with reporters Wednesday after three days of hospitalization.

"What happens is you go to sleep and the next thing you know you wake up in the hospital and you never know what happened, what you did or what you said," he said. "I don't remember a thing."

Doctors said the author had a bad reaction to some medicines.

Count Basie

NEW YORK (AP) — Big-band leader Count Basie, whose wife died Monday, hopes to be back touring again next week.

The 78-year-old Basie and the band were playing a two-week engagement in Toronto when Catherine Basie had a heart attack in the Bahamas. Buddy De Franco has taken over as band leader until Basie gets back after his wife's funeral Friday on Long Island.

On Wednesday, Basie will appear at a fund-raising concert in his home town, Red Bank, N.J., said spokesman Don Friedman, and other concerts are scheduled later in the week.

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Perennial presidential candidate Harold Stassen is now campaigning for a different goal — world peace.

The former Minnesota governor on Wednesday outlined what he called a "creative center philosophy" to the Minnesota House of Representatives.

Stassen, the last living member of the seven-member team which drafted the United Nations Charter in 1945, chose his 76th birthday to make his proposals.

They include a requirement that U.S. and Soviet leaders hold annual summit meetings to reduce world tensions and a recommendation that a global fund be set up to buy land in Lebanon which would be turned into a Palestinian homeland.

Stassen, called Minnesota's boy wonder when he was first elected governor in 1938 at age 31, has run for the nation's top office several times.

LONDON (AP) — British writer Desmond Bagley, whose mystery novels sold nearly 10 million copies worldwide, is dead at 59.

The London Times said Bagley died Tuesday in a hospital in Southampton, southern England. It did not give the cause of death.

Bagley was 40 before he published his first novel, "Golden Keel."

He also wrote "Running Blind," made into a television serial filmed in Iceland. His 1971 novel "The Freedom Trap" was turned into the movie "The Macintosh Man" starring Paul Newman.

USED CARS WITH PLENTY OF USE LEFT.

Today's late model used cars are a better buy than ever before. They are built better, they get better mileage, and even the exteriors and interiors stand up far longer. Most important, of course...is the price. There's much more value for the money in today's late model used car. BUT...because cars are being driven for a longer time by the original owner...it's more important than ever WHERE you buy a used car. Our reputation for offering good value for the money is your best assurance...buying your used car.

OUR NEW VOLVO'S AIR RESISTANCE IS SO LOW, YOU'D EXPECT IT TO LOOK LIKE THIS.

IT DOESN'T.

Actually, it looks like our new Volvo 760 GLE.

THE VOLVO 760 GLE
WE NEVER SOLD A VOLVO THAT WAS WORTH SO MUCH.
