Ready to reserve its place on the Midland skyline is the Granada Royale Hometel, to be built in ClayDesta Plaza in north Midland. The luxury hotel will be arranged as suites around an atrium with walk-around balconies. Construction is expected to begin by mid-July.

'Hometel' construction to begin

Bob Smith, executive vice president of the ClayDesta Corporation, today announced that construction will begin by July 15 on an eight-story, 207-room Granada Royale Hometel in ClayDesta Plaza in north Midland.

The multi-million dollar luxury hotel will be located at the northwest corner of Airpark Road and Big Spring Street. Owner and builder of the hotel will be Granada Partnership, Ltd., made up of a group of Permian Basin residents, with the ClayDesta Corporation as the general partner.

"ClayDesta Plaza's Granada Royale will include the outstanding qualities found in other hotels in the Granada Royale chain," Smith said, "plus our own innovations that should prove to be very appealing to the general public."

Smith pointed out that very few hotels will match the convenient living areas of this Granada Royale. "Each living unit will be a suite, featuring a master bedroom and a living room area, with a microwave, refrigerator and bar. And seven of the suites will have their own conference room and executive bath as well as the bedroom and living areas found in the other suites.

"We are putting seven family-style suites in the hotel that should bring families from area cities to Midland for weekend shopping, relaxation and recreation," Smith said.

"In developing ClayDesta Plaza, we felt that an outstanding hotel should be included. We have excellent convention facilities downtown and at Midland College. A hotel such as the one we are building will go a long way toward alleviating the scarcity of hotel space here and should make it easier for the Chamber of Commerce to bring more conventions to Midland."

Free guest transportation will be available to the downtown area and to both Midland air terminals.

The ground floor will house several meeting rooms, a restaurant, cocktail lounge, enclosed swimming pool, sauna, steam room and game room.

Another feature of the hotel will be a large central atrium, complete with fountains, flowers and shrubbery. Walk-around balconies will overlook the atrium from each floor.

And, Smith added, the hotel will feature a self-service laundry area on every other floor and a soft drink and snack vending area on every floor.

In keeping with the Granada Royale theme, guests of the hotel will be offered complimentary breakfasts and evening cocktails.

HBF Construction Inc., of Midland, has been awarded the building contract, and Art Williams Jr. & Associates of Dallas is the architect. The hotel will be ready for occupancy Sept. 1, 1983.

Israeli noose tightening on Lebanon

By The Associated Press

Israeli jets shot down two Syrian MiGs over Galilee in northern Israel today and two more MiGs in dogfights over Damour, 10 miles south of Beirut. Israeli commandos battled north along the Mediterranean coastal highway toward Damour and Israeli warships shelled the Palestinian stronghold.

Palestinian broadcasts claimed 60,000 Israeli troops were now in Lebanon and that they controlled the 50 miles of highway running from the border north to Damour. U.N. officials said five Israeli brigades plus commando units were in Lebanon. An Israeli brigade numbers about 3,500 men.

The intrusion of the MiGs over Galilee, as well as indications that Syrian artillery batteries were shelling Israeli forces inside Lebanon, marked a major escalation of Syrian involvement in the hostilities.

Israel launched a massive invasion Sunday to drive Palestinian forces out of southern Lebanon and prevent PLO artillery from shelling northern Israeli settlements. The Israeli government calls the operation "Peace for Galilee."

The flight of the MiGs over Galilee was the first incursion into Israeli airspace by Arab forces since the 1973 war. The Tel Aviv command said the MiGs were downed by Israeli interceptors, and an Israel radio correspondent said the MiGs apparently were trying to attack an Israeli army convoy in southern Lebanon.

The Tel Aviv command also said its jets downed two Syrian MiGs in northern Lebanon. The Syrian command in Damascus confirmed two of its MiGs were downed in dogfights over Damour, and claimed an Israeli Skyhawk also was shot down. Israel denied any of its planes was hit.

Another Syrian communique said Israeli jets and artillery blasted the Syrian-controlled Lebanese town of Jezzin, killing 20 civilians in the predominantly Christian town. Jezzin is about 12 miles east of Sidon.

The communique said "battles there are still going on at this minute," suggesting that Syrian positions also were shelling the Israelis.

In another development, the Lebanese government announced electricity would be rationed because the power plant in the coastal town of Jiye, 14 miles south of Beirut, was bombed out of action by Israeli forces. The Jiye plant supplied 50 percent of Beirut's electricity, and under the rationing system, nine-hour blackouts were imposed on a rotating basis throughout Lebanon.

In London, President Reagan said in a speech to Parliament that "the fighting in Lebanon on the part of all parties must stop and Israel should bring its forces home. It was Reagan's first call for an Israeli withdrawal, although Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. had done so earlier.

The Palestine Liberation Organization and Lebanese radio stations said most of the coastal highway south of Beirut was in Israeli hands following a landing during the night by helicopter-borne paratroopers and amphibious commandos who overran the town of Saadiyat, 13 miles south of Beirut.

Twelve miles to the south and 37 miles north of the Israeli border, Israeli tanks and troops were besieging the port of Sidon, while 25 miles farther down much of the port city of Tyre was afire after its capture.

"Sidon is within an Israeli noose," Associated Press correspondent Edmond Shedid reported from the outskirts of the city. "All hills around the city have been taken by paratroopers, and the beach is crowded with tanks and commandos north and south of Sidon."

Panel debates need for funding advice

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Midland County Commissioners, who emphatically agree that the county is in dire need of a new annex and more space, fell out of harmony Monday when Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis balked at voting on bond counsel underwriter and financial advisers. They were heartily recommended by veteran Commissioner Durward Wright.

"I think it is imperative that we hire somebody with full capabilities, including underwriting," said Wright, who has been researching counsel-advisers to assist the commissioners in financing a courthouse annex in such a way that the taxpayers would not be burdened and would "give the county a virtually free ride."

Wright recommended that the court hire Foreman & Dyess, Houston law firm, as financial counsel and retain Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedrichs Inc. as underwriters.

WRIGHT, WHO SAID both firms are respected, apparently allayed Commissioner Charlie Welch's reservations when he assured Welch that the county would not needlessly expend money on fees. "If there's no bond issue, there's no money," he said.

The bond counsel's fee would be 1 percent of any revenue bond issue, while the underwriter would be getting 2 percent of the issue's first $500,000 in addition to other percentages.

"All I want is to have it on record," said Welch.

But Davis wanted far more even as a vote was called.

"I am not ready to vote...for two reasons," said Davis, and listed one: "I don't have all the pertinent information" on the candidates' jobs in advising the county. "We're going to have a long marriage," said Davis in suggesting a workable mating.

"I am more than pleased with what I have learned," Davis said, "but I have a ways to go yet. There's nothing personal," he said of his delay in voting. "In other words, my homework is incomplete."

"Don't rush into it," County Judge Bill Ahders advised.

Wright, who said that the underwriters-financial advisers have done "magnificent" work in the past, surmised: "I just don't think we could

Sewage project's bills already flowing

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

What started out almost two years ago as an $80,000 study on the sewage needs at Midland Regional Air Terminal has mushroomed into a $200,000 project, and the final bills aren't in yet.

Instead, the project has been expanded three times until it has reached its current status of developing the sewage disposal plan for J. "Timber" Floyd's land southeast of the city.

Although city officials aren't happy with the total cost, they feel the price is justified for the amount of work that has been done.

The project first was expanded in February 1981 to include studies on Midland Draw and then last summer to research the feasibility of pumping the effluent to Salt Lake south of the city. The last time it was expanded was to include the Floyd plan.

John Lowe, director of utilities, said that about two years ago, Texas Instruments was projecting an expansion at its plant near Air Terminal. "From the effluent flow and the numbers of people, it got to the point it was going to be more flow than the sewage treatment plant at Air Terminal could handle."

Lowe said the TI people were talking about completing their expansion in late 1982 or early 1983.

THE CITY COUNCIL in November 1981 employed the engineering firm of Black & Veatch and the local hydrology company of Ed Reed & Associates to "study what could be done at Air Terminal."

The questions involved whether the plant should be remodeled or if a new one should be built there, or if a major trunk line could be installed to pipe the sewage along Highway 80 and to the sewage treatment plant southeast of the city.

The Air Terminal facility was built in 1941 or 1942, and "its useful life is about at an end. As long as the flow remains low, it does a good job. But when it gets up to 200,000 to 300,000 gallons a day, the plant would need some major modifications," Lowe said.

"If the Air Terminal area continues to expand," he said, "we need some major modifications or a major trunk is needed."

Staff Artist: Jan Drake

Looking at the situation on a longterm basis, Lowe said the study recommended not to build a new plant but to put in a major trunk line to the sewage treatment plant.

With two plants, Lowe said, it would mean two staffs. With the trunk line, it would mean no additional people. And the trunk line could enable some developments along Holiday Hill Road to tie into it.

Besides, Lowe added, "It's easier to put in a major trunk line than it is to build another plant."

IN THE MEANTIME, Texas Instruments has backed off from its plant expansion. Nor will the PPG or Michelin plants be built in that Air Terminal area, according to Lowe.

But that didn't mean the city's problems were lessening. By February 1981, they were overflowing.

That winter, residents near the effluent holding ponds began complaining that the effluent in those ponds was flowing over the sides and down Midland Draw. They also contended the effluent was seeping down into the ground water system and ruining the water.

To find the answers, the City Council expanded the original study to determine what exactly was happening to effluent in the holding ponds and to see if it was dripping into the ground water system.

About the same time, Lowe said the city decided that if a trunk line was installed to add the Air Terminal sewage to the treatment plant then another disposal site needed to be found. "That's when we started to look at Salt Lake," he said.

By August 1981, some of the engineering studies had been completed and preliminary tests showed that Salt Lake, about eight miles south of the city, should be a closed hydrological system and was incapable of allowing the effluent to seep into the ground water system.

"BUT WE RAN into opposition at Salt Lake, and it didn't look like it would be a viable alternative," the utilities director said.

Meanwhile, flow to the sewage treatment plant had increased dramatically, going from 6 million gallons a day up to a point that ran anywhere from 7½ to 9 million gallons a day, according to Lowe.

To keep the increased amount of treated sewage from flowing out of the holding ponds and down Midland Draw, the city augmented the amount of acres it was irrigating with the effluent from 1,600 acres up to 3,000. And the state set a time limit for using that method until an alternative can be in place, said Lowe. That time limit, which started last February, was two years.

To find another place to shove the effluent resulted in yet more studies by the Reeds and Black & Veatch. This time, the group settled on a tract of land they believe should serve as a disposal site for the treated sewage for at least 20 years and without producing the problem of the effluent seeping into the ground and mixing in with good water. The site they all agreed upon was land southeast of the city, part of which is owned by J. "Timber" Floyd.

Getting to this point, the city has spent an estimated $208,753 on engineering and hydrology studies, Lowe said. "That's not the final bill. We're not through the permit hearing."

THAT FIRST HEARING will be held June 29 at

Mesa to continue takeover bid

AMARILLO, Texas (AP) — Mesa Petroleum Co. directors have vowed to press their efforts to takeover Cities Service, an oil company with 20 times Mesa's assets and three times its revenues.

The directors made the pledge Monday after they unanimously rejected a cash tender offer by Cities Service to acquire Mesa.

Cities Service, the nation's 20th largest oil company, had offered $17 per share for up to 37 million Mesa shares, and backed its offer with a $1.7 billion line of credit.

The offer by the giant Tulsa-based oil company was an effort to defend itself against Mesa's "friendly acquisition proposal" a week ago.

Mesa chairman T. Boone Pickens said Monday he was hopeful Mesa's latest bid — upt to $544.5 million in a cash tender offer for 15 percent of Cities Service Co. stock — would be successful.

The smaller Amarillo-based oil company first offered to acquire a majority of Cities Service stock at $50 a share in what analysts said was a proposal worth more than $1.6 billion.

"Our proposal is still open," said Pickens, adding that he hopes "that the board of directors of Cities Service will accept it."

The latest tender offer could give Mesa an additional 15 percent interest in the 77.9 million outstanding shares. Mesa officials said Sunday they would try to buy up to 12.1 million shares of Cities Service stock at $45 net per share and would seek additional financing for the offer.

The company already owns 4.1 million Cities Service shares, or about 5 percent of the outstanding stock.

"There can be assurance that such additional financing for the offer will be obtained," a company spokesmen said.

Mesa also said it would file "definitive offering documents" Monday with the Securities and Exchange Commission.

Mesa also filed a $1.6 billion federal lawsuit last week against Cities Service, accusing the oil company of malice and deception in attempts to prevent the merger.

Cities Service is 20 times the size of Mesa in terms of revenues — $8.55 billion in 1981 — and has three times the assets of Mesa — $6.1 billion last year.

The Dallas Times Herald reported that for more than a year, Pickens has been trying to form a partnership to get Cities Service.

Mesa said it also plans to file suit in federal court to challenge the constitutionality of takeover statutes in six states and to seek injunctions against their enforcement against the offer.

Kirkpatrick says no criticism intended

NEW YORK (AP) — Jeane Kirkpatrick, ambassador to the United Nations, said today she was not criticizing the Reagan administration's foreign policy when she said the United States has been impotent in the U.N. and has been "stumbling...almost on a Mad Hatter basis."

In a speech to the Heritage Foundation on Monday, Mrs. Kirkpatrick said the United States has shown an ineptitude in the United Nations that has "persisted for decades."

Interviewed on ABC's "Nightline," Mrs. Kirkpatrick said she was not referring to the embarrassing diplomatic gaffe Friday, when she cast a veto against a Security Council resolution that called for a ceasefire between Great Britain and Argentina in the Falkland Islands.

On instructions from Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr., she later tried to retract the vote, announcing the orders to abstain had come too late, an event she termed a "pure communications snafu."

In her speech, she said one reason for a poor performance at the U.N. is that the United States has been unable to express a cohesive national purpose; instead the country has been "stumbling from issue to issue almost on a Mad Hatter basis."

She said another problem is that U.S. delegates leave the job before getting to know the ropes, and noted that the Soviet Union keeps personnel on the job for decades. On the ABC show she suggested appointing career officers as ambassadors might help solve the problem, although she added even career officers turn over quickly in a form of "bureaucratic turbulence."

In her speech, she indicated she wasn't planning an extended stay in the job. "I couldn't stand it, I don't believe," the former Georgetown University professor said.

Mrs. Kirkpatrick, who has been at odds with Haig and the administration's policy of support for Britain in the Falklands crisis, said on "Nightline" that the British performance at the Security Council was one the United States should seek to emulate.

"It is very strange that we Americans, who are very good at...politics, should be so inept at international politics in arenas such as the United Nations," she told the Heritage Foundation.

The ineptitude, she added, "has persisted through several decades, several administrations" with Americans conducting foreign policy "like a bunch of amateurs."

Commissioners debate need for advice

do any better."

AHDERS PROPOSED that the county "ought to get a Texas corporation" for underwriters. Howard, Weil, Labouisse, Friedrichs is based in New Orleans, La.

To that, Wright said that the firm maintains an office in Midland.

And he tried to impress Davis with the urgency of voting; Davis said he would abstain were a vote called.

"Well, we're going down to a deadline," Wright said in referring to Thursday, when the commissioners are to begin meeting with developers. They will propose how the county would benefit if they built an office building, hotel or condominiums on the county's two half blocks between Texas and Illinois avenues and along Baird Street east of the downtown courthouse.

Davis wouldn't be pressed.

"Let me tell you something, Mr. Wright," Davis tersely told the commissioner. He promptly told Wright "don't suggest" that he (Davis) "should vote for that reason alone," he said of Wright's recommendations and "past experience" in working with the financial advisers and counsel.

"We need to get into those hearings," Wright said of the meeting with developers on Thursday.

"Durward," Davis said, "I'm not being arbitrary about this. I want to do my own research, and I have done that. (But) it's inadequate for me, and I hope that you will admit that it's inadequate for you, too."

Wright again noted the immediacy of acting on the issue — to be post-haste in getting along with means to finance and build an annex to house governmental functions apart from the judiciary.

"I'm ready to go, too, Mr. Wright," Davis said.

ACTING SOMEWHAT like an arbitrator, Adhers proposed that the vote be held up until all commissioners were present; Precinct 4 Commissioner Win Brown was absent. "I think it's such a serious thing, I want everybody satisfied," the judge said.

Davis suggested that he would be appalled were the court "to hire them (financial advisers) today and fire them tomorrow" due to an ill-advised choice.

"That won't set right with the voters," Davis said, "and it won't set right with me."

"I am assured," Wright said of the competency of his nominees for bond counsel and financial adviser, "because I have worked with these people before. They are top in their fields, and they are magnificent performers."

Wright again tried to impress Davis with the urgency of selecting the counsel and advisers in preparing for Thursday's session. "They realize the tightness of the situation," Davis said.

"It's a serious decision we're making," the judge again said in calling for soundness and harmony before a vote, "and it could affect the county years to come."

DAVIS SAID his hold-up simply was in "seeking more (information) than I have at the moment." But he told Wright and other members of the court to go ahead and call for a vote if they so wished.

"If you people want to go ahead, that's your perogative," Davis said in virtual resignation. But, he cautioned, "It's a bunch of malarkey" to say when he'd be ready to vote on naming the counsel and advisers.

Wright seemed ruffled by Davis' reluctance to vote.

"It's getting kind of tiresome working my tail off for this court and getting dumped on," said Wright.

Thereupon, the court went on to other business and recessed until 1:30 p.m. today, when the court again will discuss retaining underwriters and financial advisers and, possibly, to vote.

Over 2,000 join rally calling for disarmament

NEW YORK (AP) — More than 2,000 people marked the opening of a United Nations session on disarmament at an expensive fund-raiser, while hundreds of others attended a free rally to welcome a group of Buddist monks who led a cross-country march for peace.

Guests paid $50 apiece to attend "An Evening of Testimony For Nuclear Disarmament" Monday night, hosted by actress Meryl Streep.

The program was a fund-raiser for the giant nuclear disarmament rally scheduled for Saturday in New York City, coinciding with the five-week U.N. special session which began Monday. President Reagan and leaders of 17 other governments will attend during the course of the session.

Itzhak Perlman played the violin, and actress Ellen Burstyn read a message from Coretta Scott King, widow of slain civil rights leader Rev. Martin Luther King Jr. Singers Carly Simon and Judy Collins sang an anti-nuclear song, and actor James Earl Jones read selections from Carl Sandburg.

Dr. Helen Caldicott, a Boston pediatrician who has been a fervent crusader against nuclear arms, spoke to the audience after it saw a documentary film about her titled "Eight Minutes to Midnight."

She called on Reagan to "give the American people a weapons freeze now."

Earlier in the day, several hundred people wound up a cross-country "World Peace March" at Dag Hammarskjold Plaza near the U.N. building, where they received an Olympic torch from Greece.

At a ceremony that attracted more than 500 supporters, the adult marchers passed the torch to a group of about 1,000 schoolchildren, who set off on a 120-hour "Children's Walk for Life," scheduled to end Saturday after joining a mass march from the United Nations to Central Park.

Commission favorable toward stockade idea

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Sheriff Dallas Smith's innovative proposal for a military-like stockade to hold inmates who can't fit comfortably in a "no vacancy" jail or who can't get behind steel bars has been favorably received by the Texas Commission on Jail Standards.

The only barrier now, the sheriff told the Midland County Commissioners' Court on Monday, is to "work out" details of the concept.

The proposal, approved May 24 by the court, calls for a fenced-in compound, replete with sentry guards and towers, to be constructed on a 7½-acre county-owned tract southeast of Midland. Initially, 10-prisoner tents would be set up to shelter the inmates until barracks can be built to hold the miniumum-security prisoners. Inmates bound for the penitentiaries operated by the Texas Department of Corrections, those charged with violent felonies and those who are escape-prone and troublesome, would be detained in the county's steel-and-concrete-encased jail on the fifth floor of the Midland County Courthouse.

The jail, which has allotted space for 102 prisoners, lately has been holding about 113 to 114.

Phase I, the tent concept of the military-like stockade, is to be built within 30 to 60 days, noted Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis. And the barracks are to be built in about 18 months. Meanwhile, the Commission on Jail Standards has deemed Smith's basic concept acceptable. The sheriff, who is a member of that commission, again is to meet with fellow commissioners June 23 in Austin to discuss the concept further.

Meanwhile, Midland County, like many others in Texas, apparently will be keeping more prisoners than it normally would due to the overcrowded condition of the state prison system.

"The TDC thing is a long way from being resolved," Smith said. "It's a bigger problem than I think we've envisioned."

Like Midland, other counties in Texas are facing overcrowded jails.

"A number of them have a lot of problems worse than ours," said the sheriff, who cited Dallas County's cost of constructing a steel-and-concrete jail: $55,000 per man per cell. But Smith's proposals for the tent-dotted compound and, later, for approximately eight barracks to room and board about 22 prisoners each, will precede construction of a proposed but not yet planned new jail here apart from the courthouse.

Other counties which are experiencing overcrowded conditions or which anticipate it have been studying Smith's proposals. Apparently, some equate Midland County's temporary solution as theirs.

"Ector (County) wants to lease (stockade) space," said Smith, who noted that "We always have the right to take care of our own first."

Davis agreed.

"It looks like...charity begins at home," said Davis, who speculated that it would take "30 to 60 days to get things empirically working" just to take care of Midland's own prisoners.

"I agree," the sheriff said. "No. 1, we should be totally resolving our problems."

Midland College. And if the city doesn't get its permit, Lowe said, "We'll spend money in that vein until the issue is resolved. If we have to do something else, here we go with a bunch more money."

In hopes that the city is granted a permit to proceed with the Floyd proposal, the engineers are drawing up the plans and specifications. These should be ready to advertise for bids as soon as the permit is granted. Normally, Lowe explained, the permit is awarded before the council instructs the plans and specifications to be drawn.

"We're spending $77,000 a month on plans and specs," he added.

According to Lowe, eliminating a waiting period on drawing the plans and specs is necessary to get the project installed and operating in two years.

The jump from the original $80,000 to over $200,000 "is shocking," he said. "I didn't want to get in and spend that much money with a bunch of engineers. But to come up with an acceptable plan, this is what it took."

Mayor G. Thane Akins said he realized the projects "have snowballed. It sounds like a lot of money, but it's work and expertise that the city staff doesn't have. So we have to pay someone else to do it."

THE MAYOR SAID the council feels the costs are in line with what other engineering firms would charge. "We depend on the staff to bird-dog these things for us and to make sure we aren't paying exorbitant prices."

Akins also pointed out that the "question of building a sewer plant at Termnal has grown to a much larger question of a whole sewage disposal plan."

He compared the city's situation to that of a citizen taking his car to a garage for a minor repair and then adding to his bill a set of tires and a transmission job. "I wish it wasn't so high, but I don't know any way around it if we're going to do it."

Money for these additional studies wasn't included in the 1981-82 fiscal budget. Grant Walton, finance director, said the bills have been paid out of a water and sewer revenue surplus fund. "We try to set the water and sewer rates so we break even," he said.

However, the city has accumulated some earnings over the years and the bills are coming out of this area, he said. "This is one of the reasons you want to have retained earnings."

Lowe attributed some of the additional costs to the extra studies that have been done because of opposition to plans as they were proposed, such as the Salt Lake disposal project.

"I had no idea we were going to have so much opposition. The council is trying to satisfy the public. They should be commended for that; they're very patient."

Midlander possible nominee for state GOP treasurer spot

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — State Republican party officials say they will replace Millard Neptune today with another GOP candidate for treasurer. Former gubernatorial aide Allen B. Clark Jr., a Midland man, is among contenders for the position.

In a news release issued Monday, party officials said Neptune and state GOP Chairman Chester Upham would announce the new nominee at a joint Capitol news conference.

Gov. Bill Clements mentioned Clark as a possible replacement last Friday. Clements said he had talked to Clark, who works for a Midland oil exploration company, about taking over the race but no decision had been made.

Last Thursday, state Republicans withdrew Waller farmer Don Hebert from contention for agriculture commissioner. They replaced Hebert with Texas A&M poultry scientist Fred Thornberry.

Republican party officials had said all along they intended to replace the two candidates, who were unopposed for nomination on the May 1 Republican primary ballot. But Neptune briefly threw a monkey wrench into GOP plans when he said he did not intend to step aside.

The 71-year-old Austin geologist faced former Travis County Commissioner Ann Richards in the general election. Ms. Richards became the Democratic nominee when indicted incumbent state Treasurer Warren G. Harding withdrew from a runoff.

Harding has since pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor official misconduct charge.

Thornberry, 45, faces Jim Hightower, who defeated incumbent Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown in the Democratic primary.

High temperatures linger on in Basin

Partly cloudy skies and the chance of thunderstorms in the Permian Basin will linger through Wednesday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Today's 20 percent chance of thunderstorms is expected to increase to 40 percent tonight and decrease to 30 percent Wednesday.

Tonight's low will fall near 70, with the high on Wednesday expected, once again, to climb into the middle 90s.

Winds will be southerly at 10-15 mph tonight.

Monday's high of 96 was 10 degrees cooler than the record high of 106, set for that date in 1964. The overnight low of 68 was 11 degrees warmer than the record low of 57, set in 1949.

He had been stabbed in the abdomen and under the left arm and was found lying on the porch of a residence at 3214-A West Kansas. A 25-year-old suspect is being sought.

Silverware, rare coins reported taken

In theft complaints to city police Monday, Maria Benavidez, 3407 Douglas Ave., told officers silverware and rare coins valued at $1,300 were taken from her residence.

And Robert P. Parke, 2502 Auburn Place, reported the theft of scuba gear and a .45-caliber revolver worth a total of $580. The items were taken from his garage sometime during the past week.

House Republican leaders agree on budget blueprint

By CLIFF HAAS

WASHINGTON (AP) — House Republican leaders, scrambling to avoid a potentially embarrassing vote on President Reagan's budget, have reached tentative agreement on a 1983 spending blueprint with a deficit below $100 billion.

But it remains uncertain whether the outnumbered Republicans can attract enough votes for victory.

"Nobody's satisfied with anything," House Republican Leader Robert H. Michel of Illinois said Monday after a day-long meeting of GOP leaders and some conservative Democrats.

At the same time, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., was making it clear he is determined to have Democrats press for a "back-to-work budget" that protects domestic spending.

Following private meetings Monday, O'Neill and Michel called more separate strategy sessions for today as the House heads for another budget showdown later this week.

Republican leaders are trying to modify the spending plan they unsuccessfully brought to the House floor last month — trimming the deficit to satisfy conservatives of both parties while preserving domestic spending and reducing Reagan's planned military buildup to keep moderate Republicans in the fold.

The negotiations are "kind of a cross between a minuet and a square dance and a foxtrot," Michel said.

Michel also has indicated GOP leaders will accept amendments agreed to by the full House in the last budget debate, including additional money for Medicare, increased federal pay, retention of cost-of-living adjustments for Social Security, federal and military retirees.

Rep. Delbert L. Latta, R-Ohio, the ranking Republican on the House Budget Committee, said the new GOP plan would hold 1983 tax increases to the $20 billion contained in the original Republican package.

Republicans have indicated they may offset spending increases called for in their new package by accepting Treasury Department revenue estimates showing tax collections higher than originally forecast.

Meanwhile, Democratic leaders are using the unsuccessful package drafted by majority Democrats on the House Budget Committee as the basis for their new attempt.

But this time, O'Neill will have more say in what goes into the document.

"I am determined that the Democrats present a back-to-work budget," O'Neill said after a budget meeting. "By this, I mean a budget that offers real hope to the country's more than 10 million unemployed."

He added that the plan also should "offer fair and equitable treatment to those Americans who have felt the brunt of the Reagan recession."

The speaker said the spending plan should include:

—"An emergency program" for housing, youth employment and other areas.

—Efforts aimed at spurring technological development to revive the economy and create jobs.

—Protection for Social Security, Medicare and extended unemployment benefits.

Michel also said the GOP plan would have room for emergency 1982 housing and unemployment assistance.

Some Democrats have indicated privately they hope Republicans win so they and the president will be saddled with full responsibility for the state of the economy as the fall elections approach.

The budget fight this week will feature a single budget plan from each party, compared to eight different budget plans voted on and rejected during the last attempt at passing a budget.

O'Neill has said that if neither the Democratic nor the Republican plans prevail, the House would move directly to a vote on Reagan's unpopular high-deficit budget submitted to Congress in February, a potentially embarrassing situation for the Reagan and his GOP allies because there has been virtually no support for the president's original budget.

The Congressional Budget Office has re-estimated the 1983 deficit in Reagan's February budget as $122.2 billion, higher than any of the plans the House previously rejected.

Martin Luther King's widow to be in Midland for Juneteenth

Coretta Scott King, widow of Martin Luther King, will be in Midland June 19 to provide information on the Martin Luther King Center for Non-violent Social Change and participate in Juneteenth activities.

She will be the guest at a Chamber of Commerce reception at Ranchland Hills Country Club at 6 p.m. and is scheduled to make a public address at 7:30 p.m. at a site that was to be determined this afternoon.

At 9 p.m. Mrs. King will be involved in Juneteenth activities at Midland County Exhibit Building on East Highway 80. Tall City Lions Club president Woodrow Bailey indicated that the Atlantan would crown the 19th of June queen and make a brief address during festivities.

Mrs. King's visit is being jointly sponsored by Tall City Lions Club, Midland Association of Churches and East Midland Task Force of Objectives for Midland.

"The idea is hopefully to get as many segments of the community (together) as possible...and let her emphasize as only she can how we can work for peace and harmony in our community and go about making this a better place to live," said the Rev. Dr. Joseph H. Schley Jr., rector of St. Nicholas Episcopal Church.

The Martin Luther King Center in Atlanta, Ga., sponsors several smaller facilities of a similiar nature around the nation, according to Midland Chamber of Commerce board member Michael Williams.

United Way approves admission

Board members of the United Way of Midland, Inc., unanimously approved the admission of the West Texas Epilepsy Association (WTEA) to agency status during a meeting May 27. WTEA now will be included in United Way's fund-raising campaign for 1983, to be conducted this fall.

National surveys, as well as a market study conducted last year by United Way of Midland, indicate the public prefers to support health-oriented organizations.

"We are trying to broaden the range of services we support to include more health agencies," explained Jack Steele, United Way president, "and West Texas Epilepsy Association is an excellent beginning."

The admissions study of WTEA, conducted by United Way volunteers, indicated the agency was formed in the spring of 1980 after more than 100 Midlanders attended a Texas Planning Commission hearing on the needs of epileptics and their families.

Since that time an executive director has been hired to work within the 17-county Permian Basin area. His work involves providing information and referrals to epileptics and their families and educating the public.

Funding of WTEA has been through individual donations, special events and a grant through the Developmental Disabilities Program from the Texas Department of Mental Health-Mental Retardation. The grant, which was for three years, is due to expire May 31, 1983.

The admissions study noted two primary problems of epileptics concern diagnosis and treatment, particularly among children, and unemployment among adults. Mark Leaverton, chairman of the United Way admissions committee which reviewed WTEA, pointed out a U.S. Department of Labor study which showed less than 9 percent of employers surveyed were willing to employ a person with epilepsy.

By means of counseling and providing written materials, the agency aids persons with epilepsy and their families to obtain appropriate medical diagnosis and treatment. In addition, WTEA assists its clients in identifying and utilizing services available through state and local agencies which provide support services.

Tentative allocation recommendations for WTEA as well as for other United Way agencies will be made at the board meeting June 24.

Leaverton said the WTEA also has submitted requests for funding to the United Ways of Odessa and Big Spring. Replies have not yet been received from either organization.

Calm after storm begins with cleanup

By The Associated Press

As floodwaters receded in New England and washed-out residents began the "long, tedious job" of mopping up after the rain that left 22 people dead or missing, powerful Midwestern storms knocked out power to thousands and swept two children down the Arkansas River.

A four-day, 11-inch downpour in Connecticut forced rivers over their banks, washed away seven dams and 13 bridges, and forced thousands from their homes before it ended Monday night. State police patrolled today in the lower Connecticut Valley town of Essex, one of the hardest hit communities, to guard against looting.

A preliminary estimate put damage in 16 southern Connecticut communities at more than $100 million. Smaller damage totals from the weekend flooding were reported in Rhode Island and Massachusetts, where rain was tapering off today.

Connecticut Gov. William A. O'Neill warned residents of his state they had a "long, hard, tedious job" of cleaning up after the storm. He asked for federal disaster aid but didn't have a precise estimate of the damage.

"It's very hard to describe. You have to see it to believe it," said O'Neill, who flew over the state in a helicopter Monday. "The damage is just astronomical."

Meanwhile, thousands of Kansans were without electricity today after winds gusting to 90 mph swept rain and softball-sized hail through the Kansas River Valley on Monday.

Near Broken Arrow, Okla., strong currents in the Arkansas River swept away Amy Harper, 13, of Tulsa and James Hardie, 11, of Broken Arrow. Two firefighters borrowed a 16-foot boat and were nearly ready to give up the search when they found the children nearly 2½ miles down river clinging to a sandbar, said Assistant Fire Chief Ron Dennison.

Christa Lawrence, 13, survived a similar experience Sunday in Westport, Conn., when she was washed into a 150-foot tunnel that carries Dead Man's Creek under part of the town.

Steven Treadway, 14, who saw her swept away, went to the downstream end of the tunnel, grabbed a tree branch, leaned into the flood and grabbed Miss Lawrence when she was swept out of the tunnel.

"I thought I was going to die any second," she said. "The current was pulling me under...I couldn't breathe."

In Missouri, the control tower at Kansas City International Airport was evacuated for 20 minutes because of the winds and several planes were damaged. About 100 streets were flooded in the city.

In central Missouri, a tornado touched down near Slater, damaging about a dozen farms, but causing no injuries.

Transportation was hampered by the washout of 70 sections of state highway and tracks for Amtrak and Conrail.

Insurance lack increases wet woes

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — As if the initial shock from Connecticut's worst spring rainstorm in a century weren't enough, many residents are discovering their insurance policies won't cover flood damage.

"There are going to be a lot of people left high and wet," said Manchester insurance agent Tony Gorman.

Only about 13,000 Connecticut residents who have federal flood insurance are covered for home and property damage resulting from the the weekend flooding, according to the Insurance Association of Connecticut. Also, people with automobile comprehensive physical damage insurance are covered for flood damage to their cars and trucks, the association said.

But many residents whose homes and property were damaged or destroyed in the four-day downpour and resulting floods are finding that their homeowners' policies don't include flood coverage.

Damage from the flooding in southern Connecticut is running into the hundreds of millions of dollars. Thousands of people had homes or businesses damaged or destroyed in the storm that poured up to 11 inches of rain on the state.

Insurance agents say they have been getting lots of calls from people asking about their coverage and they say many of the callers have been surprised that their insurance won't cover flood damages.

The federal government has been offering flood insurance to those living in high risk areas since the late 1960s, said James Rose of the Federal Insurance Administration in Washington.

For those without flood insurance, "The only thing they can hope for is whatever Governor (William) O'Neill can get from the federal government," said Joseph Martin of the Connecticut Insurance Consumer Information Center in Hartford.

Poll says some think economy, child abuse linked

CHICAGO (AP) — Six out of 10 Americans believe the nation's economic slump is the cause of an increase in child abuse, according to a new Harris poll.

The poll, conducted last month by Louis Harris and Associates, Inc., also said nearly nine out of 10 Americans believe abused children are more likely to become involved in crime later in life.

The poll was taken following reports from national and state agencies that child abuse has become more common in the last 18 months, the pollsters said.

"Today, Americans are concerned that the state of economy, with high unemployment, business failures and worry about inflation, is causing the already serious problem of child abuse to grow in magnitude," said Anne Cohn, of the Chicago-based National Committee for Prevention of Child Abuse.

"Not only are Americans concerned that child abuse is increasing, but they are convinced that child abuse causes serious and long-term problems for society," she said.

"Income was directly related to the rate of linking child abuse to increased risk of criminal behavior and inversely related to believing that abuse could decrease the risk of juvenile or adult crime," the report said.

However, Ms. Cohn noted that the poll of 1,251 people also said that "few know what they can do to prevent child abuse."

A Harris poll last fall said that a fourth of all Americans know someone who has been the victim of child abuse. Last month's poll indicated that most Americans believe the government ought to take a greater role in dealing with child abuse.

Kellogg, Battle Creek parting still up in air

SPRINGFIELD, Mich. (AP) — For generations breakfast cereal eaters and television commercial watchers have known that Kellogg Co. is based in Battle Creek, but life and the politics of political subdivisions aren't that simple anymore.

A state commission must weigh Springfield's reversal of a decision to annex Battle Creek Township. Kellogg Co.'s proposal that the township merge with the city of Battle Creek hangs in the balance.

The Springfield City Council, which voted Monday morning to file petitions to annex the township, reversed its decision at another meeting Monday night.

Kellogg announced two weeks ago it would build its new $30 million corporate headquarters elsewhere unless the city of Battle Creek and the township consolidate.

Kellogg has had trouble recruiting new employees — and in retaining present employees — because they do not want to live in the Battle Creek area, said Chris McNaughton, Kellogg senior vice president of corporate services.

The company suggested the merger because it believes some of the area's problems have been caused by squabbling among cities and townships.

The multinational food firm known best for its breakfast cereals has been based in Battle Creek since the company was founded in 1906. About 700 of its 4,000 Battle Creek-area employees work at corporate headquarters.

Initial steps toward that merger were taken last week by both the township and the city of Battle Creek.

But Monday morning the Springfield City Council voted unanimously to file petitions with the Michigan Boundary Commission seeking to annex Battle Creek Township. The petitions were filed with the commission in Lansing Monday afternoon, a boundary commission spokeswoman said.

Then Monday night, the council voted 5-2 to rescind the previous request, officials said. Officials from Kellogg and from Battle Creek city and township had urged the Springfield council to reconsider its earlier action.

Today, Springfield officials were to ask the boundary commission to drop the matter.

Redeveloping cities meeting topic

CLEVELAND (AP) — Large cities that have lost population have a few success stories and their representatives are meeting to share them and learn how urban redevelopment projects can be made to work.

Paul Porter, who helped rebuild Europe's cities after World War II, has delegations from 40 cities signed up for this week's Congress on Roads to Recovery.

The idea behind the three-day meeting, which begins Wednesday and is sponsored by the city, Cleveland State University and The Plain Dealer, is to share information on successful redevelopments.

One such project occurred in Salt Lake City, where a coalition battled a planned high-rise for a residential neighborhood and caused the project to be relocated in a largely abandoned warehouse area.

"All of these redevelopment projects have worked and very few are known outside their own communities," says Porter, a CSU adjunct professor of urban studies. "I have had nobody else tell me about what's happening in Brooklyn. And what's happening in Salt Lake City might as well be happening on the moon."

Representatives from Brooklyn will discuss how a utility company helped revive old brownstone apartment buildings, which also attracted new business to a section of the city. From St. Louis, a delegation will tell about the revival of commercial and residential development around a new university medical center.

Cleveland Mayor George Voinovich will speak about the task force of borrowed business executives that helped reorganize the city's finances and about redevelopment projects such as Playhouse Square, the city's renovated downtown theater area.

Porter, who was an assistant administrator of the Marshall Plan that rebuilt much of Europe after World War II, said congress organizers approached 54 cities with more than 150,000 people that lost population between 1970 and 1980. Forty are sending representatives.

California Senate race tops primary list

By The Associated Press

Ten states are holding primary contests today to select Republican and Democratic candidates to run in the Nov. 2 general election when President Reagan's economic policies will certainly be an issue.

In California, Gov. Edmund Brown Jr., the strong favorite to capture the Democratic Senate nomination, has already attacked Reagan's economic policy, saying the president is guilty of "mindless abdication of responsibility and leadership."

Brown, who succeeded Reagan as governor of the nation's most populous state, is running against a field that includes novelist Gore Vidal.

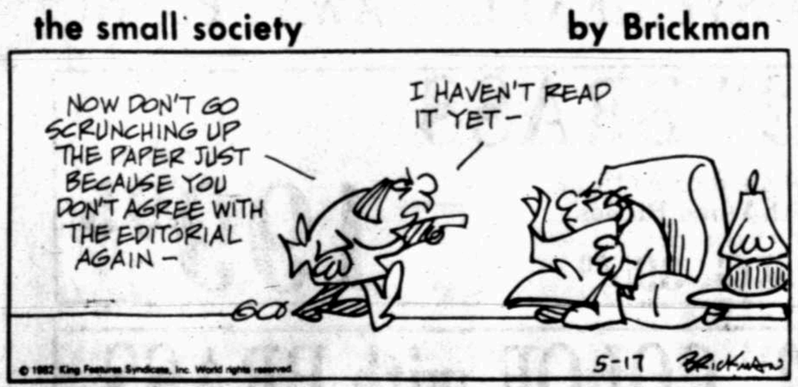

On the Republican side, 13 candidates, including Reagan's daughter, Maureen, are seeking their party's nod. The president has remained neutral, but his brother, Neil, has endorsed San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson.

Also running in the GOP contest are two California congressmen — Barry Goldwater Jr., son of the conservative Arizona senator, and Pete McCloskey, considered the most liberal candidate in the race.

Final pre-election polls showed Wilson leading Goldwater and McCloskey.

The winner in November will succeed Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, a Republican who is not seeking re-election to a second term.

Come-and-Go Plant Clinic planned at mall

By CHARLES W. GREEN
Midland County Extension Agent — Agriculture

Having plant problems? Does the lawn refuse to grow or a tree or shrub seem determined to die? You can get some help by visiting with Texas Agricultural Extension Service specialists — horticulturists, agronomists, entomologists, pathologists — at a Come-and-Go Plant Clinic to be held Thursday at Midland Park Mall.

The clinic will be conducted between the hours of 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. Bring your specimens of plants — leaves, twigs, roots — and insects and come by anytime during the scheduled hours.

The clinic is sponsored by the Extension Landscape Horticulture and Turf Committee and the Agricultural Extension Service.

INTEGRATED PEST MANAGEMENT PROGRAM

Midland County cotton producers are winding up planting operations this week. It has been a problem planting season with the siege of turbulent weather in late May which caused some replanting.

David Foster, county extension entomologist, reports that insect scouts have been employed for Midland, Martin and Howard counties and this week will be scouting survey fields for insect activity.

Pheromone traps have been operating since early March. A total of nine traps are located in the three-county area, two in Howard County, two in Martin County and five in Midland County. Traps in Midland County are being checked by Marc Traweek and Wilbur Casbeer Jr.

Computer predictions for bollworm and tobacco budworm peak period egg lay should be available about mid-June.

One possible note for concern in the trapping program: Tobacco budworm trap catches are up from the last couple of years.

HINTS ON POTATO STORAGE

For the first time in several years the spring has been cool enough to allow tuberization on Irish potatoes grown in home gardens in the Midland area.

Gardeners who have done a good job of culture are harvesting potatoes now and may have excess tubers which can be stored if done properly.

If potatoes are not handled and stored properly they may decay before they can be used. This is often a problem with home grown potatoes because they may have a low rate of scab infection or other diseases present in the soil which cause decay. The best way to prevent problems is to avoid washing the potatoes after harvest. In washing, if a disease is present, the organisms will be spread. A number of abrasions may occur which will result in areas where disease organisms can enter. When the lenticels (pores) are enlarged due to rainfall and excess irrigation, diseases will be greater due to the lenticels acting as infection sites.

Never store potatoes that are diseased. These will only continue to decay, causing additional losses. Potatoes which were bruised in harvesting should be consumed first. It is best to dig potatoes and store them in a warm area (55-60 degrees) for 15 days and then reduce the temperature to 40 degrees. Prior to using, the potatoes should be warmed to improve quality.

Potatoes can be stored for five to six months if handled properly.

STORE UNNEEDED SEED

It isn't necessary to throw away those extra flower and vegetable seeds left over from spring planting. If properly cared for, many seeds can be held over for next season's use with very little loss of germination and plant vigor. Seeds to be held over should be air dry and placed in glass jars with air tight lids. Keep sealed jars where the temperature will range from 35 to 55 degrees F. A refrigerator or cool basement is the most satisfactory place to meet these requirements.

AGRICULTURE

This magnified study shows the imported fire ant that has infested up to 230 million acres in nine southern states. Extensive crop and other land is affected in Alabama, Arkansas, Florida, Georgia, Louisiana, Mississippi, North Carolina, South Carolina and Texas.

Various treatments found to put fire ant 'in hot water'

ATLANTA (AP) — A kettle of boiling water may be the homeowner's most lethal weapon against a big-jawed, stinging invader from South America — the fire ant.

But scientists and government officials meeting here this week to pool their knowledge in the war against the pest say the farmer's problem is much more difficult.

The ants, with large jaws on one end and a stinger on the other, were brought into this country accidentally from South America shortly after World War I. Today, their anthills, some two feet high and nearly as hard as concrete, are found on 230 million acres in nine states in the Southeast.

The mounds damage farm equipment, and the ants' bites, while not life-threatening, are painful for children and animals.

There probably will never be one sure method for controlling the tenacious ants throughout the Southeast, said John A. Todhunter, assistant administrator of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency.

For homeowners, however, dumping a bucketful of scalding-hot water on the anthills has been proven effective.

"The kills ranged from complete to very, very substantial," said Walter R. Tschinkel, a researcher with Florida State University who has been studying fire ants for 11 years.

He said another way to destroy the colonies is to shovel the top few inches of dirt off the mound on a sunny morning following a cool night, then put the dirt into a plastic bag and burn it.

Most of the ants will have congregated in the warmer top of the mound, Tschinkel said. His experiment on 100 fire ant mounds showed only 25 were able to produce a new, fertile queen, the only member of the colony that can lay eggs. The other colonies dwindled as the survivers died off without being replaced.

Farmers may have to rely on pesticides to control the ants, Todhunter said. Several chemical companies are seeking to certify new pesticides for use by farmers to kill the ants, he said.

Fire ants are predators, killing and eating other insects and possibly earthworms, and eating carrion.

Judge orders Cryts, four others to pay for crop

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. (AP) — Saying Wayne Cryts is a thief who imagines himself a folk hero, a federal judge has ordered the Missouri farmer and four others to pay more than $287,000 for taking soybeans from a bankrupt grain elevator.

Farmers around the nation have rallied around Cryts, who ignored a court order last July and took 33,000 bushels of soybeans he said were his from a grain elevator owned by the James Brothers Co. of Corning, Ark.

Charlie Cooper, a spokesman for the American Agriculture Movement which supports Cryts, said by telephone Monday night that Cryts probably would appeal the ruling. Cooper said the decision didn't surprise Cryts, who was unavailable for comment.

In a 19-page judgment filed Monday in U.S. Bankruptcy Court, Judge Charles Baker said if the five don't pay by today, they would be fined $1,500 more a day. Baker said any defendant could pay the money.

The judge also recommended to U.S. District Court and the U.S. attorney's office that the five be prosecuted for criminal contempt of court.

Also named in the judgment were Cryts' wife, Sandra; his father, William Cryts Sr. of Dexter, Mo.; Evans Ipock of Buffalo, Mo.; and Bill Jewell of Long Lane, Mo. Pictures introduced into Baker's court recently showed them helping remove the grain.

Cryts, of Puxico, Mo., was jailed from April 28 to May 24 for contempt of court for refusing to tell Baker who helped him remove the soybeans.

Baker ordered Cryts freed from the Pope County Jail in Russellville May 24 because the bankruptcy case was settled.

The judgment is to cover losses suffered by farmers who had grain stored in the elevator.

Baker said Cryts had stolen from the court and his neighbors. "He ought to be punished for his criminal acts," the judge said.

"It is obvious to the court," Baker said, "that Mr. Cryts envisions himself to be some sort of folk hero who has been called on from on high to right the wrongs inflicted upon farmers when grain elevators fail."

But Cryts is determined he's right, Baker said. "And it doesn't seem to make any difference how many times he is told otherwise," the judge said. "He is bound and determined to do as he jolly well pleases."

Looking for peace

There is no greater work in the service of mankind than to strive to bring about a lasting peace. President Ronald Reagan, now in Europe on what he terms a "pilgrimage for peace," undoubtedly takes mankind's fondest hopes with him while realizing the odds are stacked against him.

For the president wasn't even midway through his European tour when Israel, that perennial Middle Eastern hotspot, invaded Lebanon in retaliation for the critical wounding Thursday night of the Israeli ambassador to Britain. Meanwhile, at the other end of the world, British troops and Argentines at war in the Falkland Islands only seemed to fight harder.

Surely President Reagan is hoping to spread an aura of peace and good will throughout Europe on this tour. Even prior to the invasion of the Falklands, though, Europe was tensed for an American president willing to mince no words to aggressors in his efforts to correct what he views as mistakes of posture by past administrations. Anti-nuclear groups in Europe have been active in recent months, sparked by what they consider "war-monger" talk from the president.

It's obvious that the president's remarks in Europe in recent days have been tempered to quiet some of the fears his harsher stance in respect to the Soviets initially triggered. The tour could not have come at a more opportune time for President Reagan. Currently he is in charge of the situation, having put the Soviets on the defensive with his latest call for arms reductions.

Capitalizing on his golden opportunity to show the Europeans that beneath the image they initially formed of him is a man whose foremost dream is peace for all the world, President Reagan hit the nail on the head at Vatican City when he told the crowd: "We seek the same goals of peace, freedom and humanity that the church pursues."

Words, as we all know, are only of value if corresponding deeds follow. If the Europeans will only take the time to listen to what President Reagan says and then to watch what he does, and compare the two to the words and deeds of the Soviets, they'll discover here is a man who — within the limits all of us must operate under — truly is seeking a lasting peace for the nations of the world.

If President Reagan can put that message across to the Europeans on this tour a great step will have been taken in the quest for peace.

The capitalist barometer

Jerry Rubin, Yippie leader of the '60s who advised kids to drop out and turn on, has made a profession of following the movement ... any movement. The '60s he devoted to rebellion; the '70s to Me-ness. Now, in the '80s, he is busy pledging his allegiance to money.

His latest endeavor in the cause of capitalism is to host Business Networking Salons at Studio 54 in New York. If you are attractive, interesting and on his mailing list, you and a guest will be invited to a session where, as Jerry says, "Exciting adventures are launched, relationships started, business opportunities expanded, deals seeded, lives changed, business cards exchanged and romances tempted as busy people meet one another." All that and cocktails, too.

Essentially, Jerry Rubin's Salons are pay-as-you-go cocktail parties. All you need is $6 for admission, a business card and Jerry's invitation which reads, "I am inviting the most interesting people in New York to bring interesting people to meet other interesting people ... to have a great time. Please bring the most interesting person you know."

If Jerry Rubin were only slightly ahead of the trends, we could use him as a barometer.

Another View:

Reagan visits Europe

This is Ronald Reagan's first trip to Europe as president, and although he has been elsewhere, Europe is still collectively the Paramount of foreign stages — the big one — and he can be forgiven for wanting to make a hit.

Many Europeans have had a caricature — the nuclear cowboy, the unserious Californian — in mind when they contemplated the president. Reagan has changed much of it by his recent remarks on arms control. But he remains a good way from filling the alliance leadership role he plainly aspires to. At the economic summit that opened Friday at Versailles and the NATO summit of Wednesday, as well as on his assorted country stops, the president will have his chance.

At Versailles, Reagan will find even more discontent with his economic policies than he did at Ottawa last summer. With U.S. inflation down and interest rates still sky high, the American dollar is stronger. Fear of devaluing their currencies has kept the Europeans from pursuing expansionary policies to alleviate the worldwide economic slump. This puts Europeans on the other side of their complaint of a few years ago that America was pursuing high employment at the cost of exporting inflation to its trading partners; now the United States is said to be exporting unemployment.

Once again the United States and its allies are out of economic phase with each other, with the important difference being that unemployment is now much higher at home and abroad. The proposal for "convergence of economic policies" that Reagan is taking to Versailles is sound, but it will not be enough.

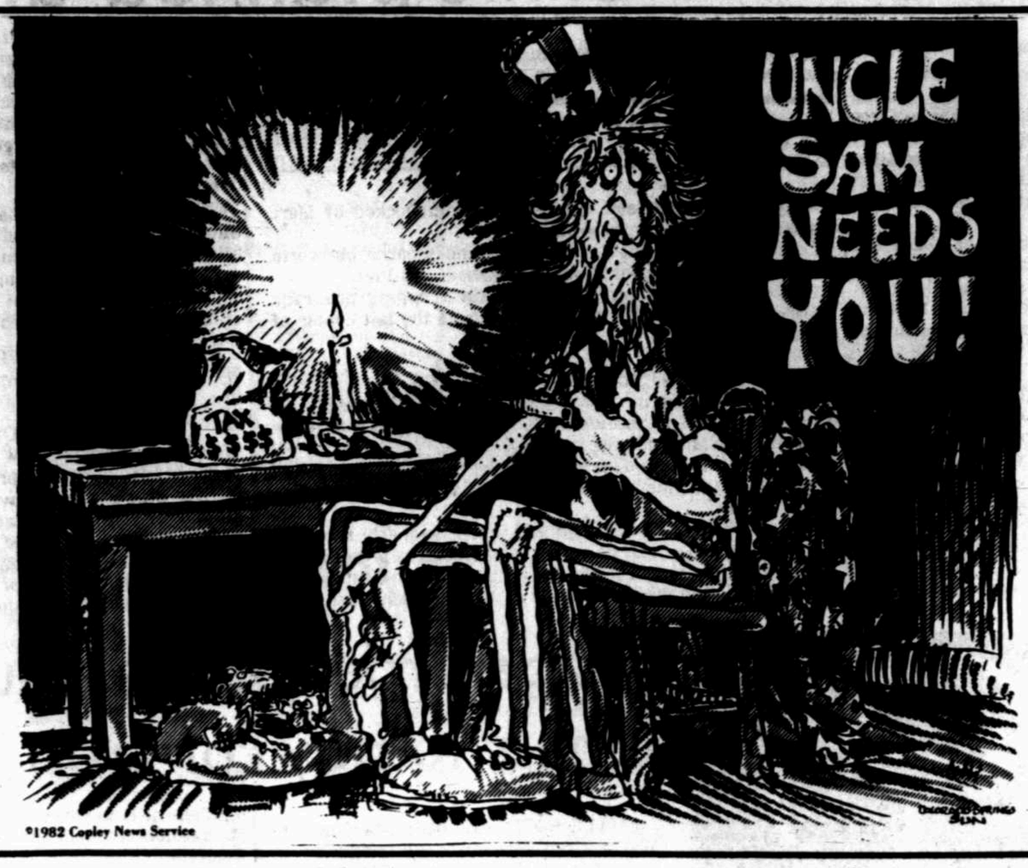

Other nations will have their own special proposals. The French, for instance, have strong feelings that a commission should be established to encourage research and development so that new technology can be shared among all nations, including the less developed ones, and not monopolized by the industrially favored few.

On the political side, Reagan carries to Europe a vision of the Soviet peril less apocalyptic than the one he brought to the White House but still more alarmed than the one dominant on the continent. Europe's anxieties and economies are tied much more closely to the state of East-West relations than are those of the United States. This creates a requirement not for unanimity of outlook, which is out of the question, but for regard for differing circumstances.

Reagan has already greatly relieved the allied governments, though not the whole "peace movement," by his evolving ideas on arms control. It puts him in a position, we think, to expect some further appreciation of his views on East-West investment and trade.

Within the administration, a certain confidence bordering on airiness was evident as Reagan headed for Europe: a personal success was anticipated and the alliance was said to be blooming under his leadership. The president no doubt will represent the country ably. But there can be no concealing that the alliance is under severe if not permanent strain, no less real for being less in the forefront than it was six months ago at the time of the suppression of Solidarity in Poland. No single presidential trip finally solves anything. The proper yardstick is the degree of seriousness and honesty the alliance brings to addressing its continuing difficulties.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Smith cracking down on drug trafficking

WASHINGTON — In the Washington superstructure, social acceptance is as fragile as a crystal champagne glass. Overnight, Attorney General William French Smith's social status has been shattered on tawdry headlines.

Jack Anderson

Smith could have been typecast for Washington society — always charming, always gracious, always self-assured. His silver hair, sophisticated smile and tailored suits made him the very model of a Republican attorney general.

But the stories about his use of dubious — but not illegal — tax shelters have tarnished his silver image. He remains popular, nevertheless, with his Justice Department subordinates, who praise his quiet professionalism. He has guided them with such a deft hand that his detractors in the White House accuse him of giving no guidance at all, but letting the entrenched liberals run the Justice Department.

One evidence that the softspoken Smith is still calling the shots is his determination to crack down on drug abuse. He has made it a top priority of federal law enforcement.

The seriousness of the drug problem is spelled out in a confidential Justice Department memo prepared for Smith's signature. My associates Jack Mitchell and Bill Gruver have seen a copy of this internal report. It's title is "Drug Abuse: Two Parts to the Problem."

What the two parts boil down to, essentially, are (1) the vast amounts of untaxed money accumulated by the drug overlords and (2) the additional amounts that are stolen by addicts to support their habit.

The staggering total of transactions in this illicit underground enterprise was estimated at $79 billion in 1980, according to the memo. This doesn't, of course, include the hundreds of millions spent on police action against drug pushers — to say nothing of the money spent on treatment and-or imprisonment of those caught up in the deadly traffic.

"I have directed every U.S. attorney across the nation to form ... Law Enforcement Coordinating Committees," Smith's memo says. "We need to focus on the social environment which has helped to create the vast market for illegal drugs." So much for critics who claim that Smith is a mindless law-and-order type whose solution is merely to lock up everyone.

The president's Hollywood background notwithstanding, Smith in his memo points a stern finger at the glitterati of Lotusland: "Abuse of drugs by some celebrities in the entertainment and sports fields creates the impression among young people — who often look to these celebrities as role models — that drug abuse is not only acceptable but highly fashionable."

In fact, with help from congressional experts, some of Reagan's Hollywood friends have formed a group to discourage the glorification of drug use in movies and on television.

To correct the misapprehension of those who think drug abuse hurts only those who indulge in it, the attorney general's memo cites some harrowing statistics.

"In Baltimore, 243 (heroin) addicts committed over 473,738 crimes during an 11-year period," the memo points out. It adds that the same individuals, when cured of their drug habits, committed only about one-seventh as many crimes.

A similar study in Miami, Smith's memo notes, showed that "365 heroin users were responsible for 118,134 crimes during a single year," and adds that "205 murders were related to drug sales and trafficking during 1981" in the Miami area.

ANGEL FACE: The British have been routinely shipping home Argentine prisoners of war captured in the Falkland Islands. But they have refused to repatriate one POW: a blond naval officer nicknamed "Angel Face."

He is Lt. Commander Alfredo Astiz, who was the Argentine Navy commander on South Georgia Island when the British recaptured it. What sets him apart from the other prisoners is that he is wanted as a war criminal. He is reported to be one of the most dangerous and vicious participants in the Argentine junta's bloody "dirty war" against the people of Argentina.

Over a period of years, 15,000 to 20,000 individuals suspected of opposition to the right-wing military regime were arrested — never to return from the junta's torture chambers. The reputation of Angel Face Astiz is burned into the memory of those few who were lucky enough to survive their incarceration.

It's not only the families of the Argentine victims who would like to see Astiz brought to justice. France and Sweden have asked the British to turn him over to them for interrogation. The French hold him responsible for the death of two French nuns; the Swedes say he shot and tortured a young Swedish woman who is now presumed dead.

So far, the British have been scrupulously protective of their notorious prisoner's rights under the Geneva Convention, and have refused even to let French or Swedish investigators interview Astiz.

What exactly is Astiz accused of? Sources with access to the records — including affidavits from political prisoners who survived the Argentine junta's dungeons — provide Angel Face's lurid background:

At the height of the "dirty wars" in the 1970s, Astiz was a frigate lieutenant based at the infamous "Escuela Mecanica" — the Navy's engineering school that was used as a detention and interrogation center. Situated in one of Buenos Aires' most fashionable districts, the Escuela acquired a reputation as the scene of particularly brutal treatment.

Even in this nest of sadistic cutthroats, Astiz stood out for his ruthlessness and for the enthusiasm he brought to his gruesome work. Astiz "participated actively in kidnappings, tortures and interrogations, and in infiltration work," a former political prisoner wrote.

INSIDE REPORT:

Reagan lets his anger rip about 'Tip'

WASHINGTON — In a meeting with House Republican leaders that lasted over one hour, President Reagan dropped his good-guy posture and vented his intense personal dissatisfaction with Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

The congressmen were surprised to hear Reagan personally blame O'Neill for the embarrassment he faced on the eve of his European grand tour. The president attacked the speaker as responsible for no budget resolution passing. Reagan took that failure personally because of its coincidence with his departure for Europe.

A footnote: Supply-siders at the meeting — led by Reps. Ed Bethune of Arkansas and Jack Kemp of New York — came away with mixed results. They got Reagan to declare he was committed only to one year of deficit-feducing tax increases. But they could not convince the president to junk the deficit-expanding economic assumptions of David Stockman's Office of Management and Budget.

NO MIDEAST SUMMIT

Despite Reagan administration efforts, a proposed Mideast summit conference in Washington between President Reagan, Egyptian president Hosni Mubarak and Israeli prime minister Menachem Begin never got out of the planning stage.

High administration officials, including Secretary of State Alexander Haig, were looking for some way to break the Egyptian-Israeli deadlock on West Bank autonomy talks. Bringing Mubarak here to join a previously-planned meeting between Reagan and Begin looked promising. It seemed a way out of Israel's refusal to hold the next autonomy session anywhere other than Jerusalem and Mubarak's refusal to hold it anywhere except Jerusalem.

Begin told the U.S. he would be glad to meet Mubarak here, but then added, gratuitously in the view of State Department officials, this caveat: No meeting in Washington can weaken Israel's insistence on holding the next autonomy session in Jerusalem. For his part, Mubarak feared getting mousetrapped by the Israelis and the Americans during the Washington summit in a way that might veto his refusal to go to Jerusalem.

NO FOR MIAMI

The Democrats may hold their 1984 national convention in Miami, site of the 1968 and 1972 Republican conventions, thanks to an intervention by militant feminist Eleanor Smeal.

Democratic leaders veto holding their convention in any state that has not ratified the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA). That rules out Chicago. But Smeal has given a dispensation to Miami because of unanimous Miami City Council support for ERA, even though Florida has not ratified the amendment. In the opinion of Democratic insiders, that puts Miami in first place for '84.

A footnote: Democratic national chairman Charles T. Manatt would prefer holding the convention in his home state of California. But Los Angeles will be busy with the 1984 Olympics, and San Francisco has no suitable convention hall.

DOLE'S ROLE

A Sunday evening telephone call from President Reagan laid it squarely on the line to Sen. Bob Dole: Mr. Chairman, while I'm away in Europe, please protect and defend the third-year tax cut with your very life!

Finance Committee chairman Dole needed no such advice. He told Reagan sentiment was hardening on Capitol Hill in favor of the 10 percent, third-year cut in marginal rates for individual income taxpayers. Moreover, White House aides agree with Dole that the political impact of the second-year, 10 percent cut, starting July 1, would further reinforce congressional reluctance to repeal or delay the third year.

Dole's committee is expected to attach $95 billion in new taxes to the pending increase in the debt ceiling. But the third-year tax cut most definitely will not be savaged in order to reach $95 billion.

CHARLEY REESE

Civil Defense not viewed accurately

Everyone has had their laughs at the expense of the Reagan administration's proposed civil defense program, based primarily on evacuation.

Charley Reese

Journalists have had a lot of fun by pointing out that (a) the evacuees don't know where they're supposed to go; and (b) the places where they are supposed to go don't know they're coming or what to do with them.

This should not be too surprising in view of the fact that the plan is yet unimplemented, the money unappropriated, and the public uneducated, but aside from jokes and smirks, there is a need for a civil defense program and one which would be effective certainly is possible. Those who argue that no civil defense would work are either ignorant of the facts or ideologically opposed to civil defense.

What has prevented nuclear war to date is primarily the balance of terror, but it is an unstable balance which could be upset by (1) serious armanment effort by one side; (2) a technological breakthrough; or (3) an irrational act. We can argue probability but there is no argument about the possibility, given the existence of nuclear weapons in the hands of nations with deep and serious conflicts.

The U.S. approach has been deterrence by building a system of weapons able to withstand a first attack and then deliver unacceptable damage to the attacker. Civil defense, by enhancing the ability of the nation to survive, should add credibility to deterrence.

Unfortunately, neither the government nor the press has done a good job of educating the American public about the real effects of nuclear explosions, as opposed to fictional or imaginary effects. Without factual knowledge, a serious evaluation of civil defense proposals is impossible.

A one megaton explosion creates overpressures of three atmospheres at a distance of only nine-tenths of a mile. At 1.6 miles, the overpressure drops to one atmosphere. It is entirely possible to construct shelters which will withstand three atmospheres of overpressure. In other words, in such a shelter, it would be possible to survive a one-megaton explosion even though you were only nine-tenths of a mile from ground zero.

The point is that when you begin to look at the facts, the problem does not seem so insurmountable. Switzerland, Sweden, Israel and the Soviet Union all have extensive civil defense programs. I don't know anybody who thinks the Swiss, the Swedes, the Israelis or the Russians are fools who would waste a lot of time and money on projects of no use whatsoever.

For example, a one-megaton blast over a city would be survivable by a large portion of the population if they had adequate shelters. Anything less than one megaton would be even more survivable and the probability is that if the Russians went after cities at all, they wouldn't waste big warheads on them.

Shelters would provide protection against fallout, too. In fact, much less expensive shelters outside the blast area will provide protection against fallout. Fallout is almost negligible in the case of airburst and is a danger in groundbursts only in the immediate vicinity of the blast and downwind from the blast.

The fact is we could devise a workable, affordable civil defense program if we could end the emotional tantrums and settle down to business. Complaints that a civil defense program would be provocative to the Soviets or make nuclear war more likely are childish. What would be provocative to the Soviets would be an American first strike capability which we don't have and aren't planning. The other argument is not even worthy of comment.

So long as nuclear weapons exist, the possibility of war exists. We would be better off banking on a civil defense program than on the hope that governments will suddenly decide to ashcan the weapons in which they've invested so much money. My judgment is that the nuclear weapon is too effective to ever be banned and will instead proliferate in the coming years.

She won female artist of the year and musician of the year and shared awards with her two sisters, Louise and Irlene, for television show of the year and top comedy act. Miss Mandrell is star of the NBC TV program "Barbara Mandrell and the Mandrell Sisters," which goes off the air this fall after two seasons.

Last October, Miss Mandrell won an unprecedented second straight entertainer of the year title from the Country Music Association. She also has been voted top female vocalist by the association twice in the past three years.

Miss Mandrell said after the show that she plans to launch her acting career in a movie, now in the planning stages, about a fashion buyer.

"I'm hoping it ends as good as it sounds," Miss Mandrell said as fans at the foot of the Opry House stage shouted for her autograph.

She described the movie as "intrigue and comedy," and said filming should begin next spring. The male lead hasn't been picked, she said.

Her move to the big screen follows that of singer Dolly Parton, whose second film, "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas," will be released next month. Miss Parton's first movie was "9 to 5."

The Statler Brothers and Shelly West were the only other double winners in the awards presentations, which launched a week of special country music activities at the Opry known as "Fan Fair."

The Statler Brothers, hosts of the show along with Louise Mandrell and Ed Bruce, were chosen No. 1 vocal group and earned top album honors for "Years Ago."

Charlie Daniels Band to perform free concert at Attica state prison

ALBANY, N.Y. (AP) — The Charlie Daniels Band, whose hit song "Still in Saigon" describes the plight of Vietnam veterans, will stage a free concert for inmates at the Attica state prison.

The band was chosen by the state Correctional Services Department for Friday's performance at the maximum security facility, prison officials said Monday.

"There are many veterans in Attica, many are Vietnam-era veterans," spokesman Louis Ganim said in explaining the choice.

The band has given benefits for Vietnam veterans in the past.

The federal government opened the first prison veterans affairs office at Attica in 1981, Ganim said.

Reynolds

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Actor Burt Reynolds has enlisted in a nature group's fund-raising drive to help save Florida's dwindling manatee population.

Reynolds, who owns a home in Jupiter, Fla., has joined the Nature Conservancy's effort to raise $425,000 to acquire 14 islands in King's Bay, Crystal River, as a sanctuary for manatees, which mariners of old often mistook for mermaids.

Reynolds will tape public-service announcements to raise funds for what would be the largest nature sanctuary in the state for the endangered marine mammals, a spokesman for the Florida chapter of the national land conservation group said Monday.

"Florida has a rich, natural heritage with a number of plants and animals found nowhere else in the country," Reynolds said in a statement. "The manatee is one of the best examples of this special character of our state."

The area targeted for the sanctuary, located on Florida's west coast north of Tampa, supports about 120 manatees during the winter months.

Magnuson

SEATTLE (AP) — For the first time in 40 years, former U.S. Sen. Warren G. Magnuson won't be at the Washington state Democratic Party convention this weekend.

The 77-year-old former Democratic senator had two toes on his right foot amputated Monday after University of Washington Hospital doctors were unable to clear up an infection.

A hospital spokeswoman said Magnuson's condition was good and there were no complications. She said Magnuson had a history of diabetes complications, to which the foot infection was related.

He is expected to be released from the hospital in seven to 10 days.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Although Minh Thai says he was eight seconds off his best time, 22.95 seconds was quick enough to win the first International Rubik's Cube World Championship.

The 17-year-old high school senior, whose family fled Saigon in a boat four years ago, returned home to Los Angeles Monday after his feat Saturday in Budapest, Hungary.

Minh, who says he once solved the multi-colored plastic puzzle in 15 seconds, won the title and a gold Rubik's Cube, presented by Hungarian inventor Erno Rubik, who designed the puzzle in 1975 as a visual aid for a university class.

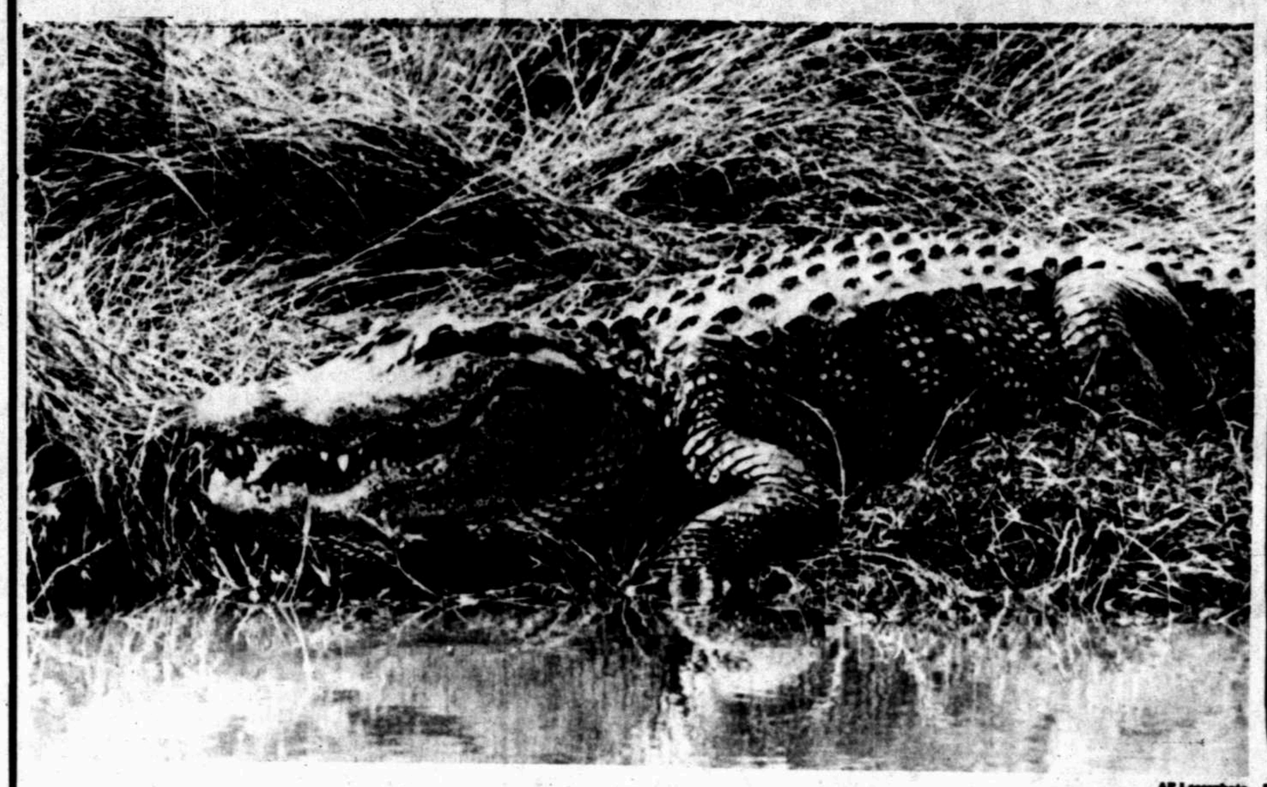

Last November, Minh won the National Rubik's Cube championship, an accomplishment that led to an appearance on the television show "That's Incredible" in December.

Minh was greeted at the airport Monday by reporters, members of the Vietnamese community and his family, who left Saigon in 1978, traveling by boat to Malaysia and eventually to Southern California.

One of the estimated 90,000 alligators in Chambers, Orange and Jefferson counties suns itself in the Anahuac National Wildlife Refuge at High Island.

Once-rare alligators becoming pests along Texas' Gulf Coast

HOUSTON (AP) — Alligators, once nearly extinct in Texas, have increased along the Gulf Coast, invading residential areas of Houston and occasionally dining on pets and livestock.

"We're up to our ears in alligators," said state Sen. Carl Parker of Port Arthur. "They're all over the place around here."

Parker helped get a state ban on hunting alligators lifted by the state Legislature this year and state wildlife officials are considering an alligator hunting season in 1983 in some coastal counties. They need approval, however, from the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service.

As many as 90,000 alligators may now exist in Chambers, Jefferson and Orange counties along the coast, wildlife officials say. The reptiles also have increased in Houston and surrounding Harris County.

"We've just got 'gators all over the place, anywhere they have access to water," said Kitten Bohle, a Missouri City animal control officer.

Ms. Bohle said she found a 15-foot alligator wandering down a street in a subdivision of $200,000 homes.

"When this happens, it creates quite a sensation," she said. "But the problem is that developers are building subdivisions around waterways which have been the alligators' natural habitat."

Bob Le Blanc, 50, executive director of a resort area in Jefferson County near Port Arthur, has had little patience with alligators since his hunting dog was attacked by one of the reptiles. The dog had its stomach ripped open but survived.

"A dog to an alligator is like ice cream or steak to humans," Le Blanc said. "That reptile may have been protected but I killed it anyway. Today, if I see a large alligator that might hurt any of my other dogs, I kill it. I can't stand by and watch it happen."

Chambers County ranchers have complained that alligators are eating young calves.

"I know personally of 15 baby calves that have been eaten and three of those belonged to me," said Joe Lagow, 72.

Lagow said alligators catch a young calf at water's edge, slap it with their tails and grab it with their jaws. He said alligators also are "death to pigs and dogs."

Ms. Bohle says she tells residents not to panic if they see an alligator.

"People have seen too many Tarzan movies," she said. "Alligators are like big lizards but people are used to seeing them only in zoos or jungles."

AISD board to meet on budget

ANDREWS — The regular meeting of the Andrews Independent School District Board of Trustees will be at 7:30 p.m. today in the school administration building.

Trustees are expected to review the cash balance report, the budget status and amendments and the tax collection report.

A progress report on the building program and the basic skills (TABS) will be heard.

Evelyn D. Greenwood will address board members on teacher substitute pay.

The media service contract for the 1982-83 school year is expected to be approved as is the annual evaluation report of a five-year accreditation plan and the special education budget for Foundation funds.

Board members will consider the addition of seating at the football stadium and the resurfacing of tennis courts at the high school, the cancellation of the regular July board meeting, and the proposed addition to board policy for student discipline.

Trustees will discuss the tax rate to meet the 1982-83 budget and consider a board resolution concerning P. L. 26.011, "Limitation on Application of Reappraised Values." An executive session to discuss personnel matters also will be held.

'Star Trek II' sets ticket sales record

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — The latest cinema adventure featuring Captain Kirk and Mr. Spock is setting records faster than a speeding bullet.

"Star Trek II: The Wrath of Khan," a sequel by Paramount Pictures, has earned $14.3 million in the nation's theaters to claim a new a three-day record in the movie box office sweepstakes.

The previous three-day champion was last summer's "Superman II," another sequel, which collected $14,100,523 from 1,395 screens.

The average take per screen for the latest "Star Trek" movie was $8,851, Paramount spokeswoman Susan Pile said Monday, but the 68 theaters playing it in 70mm demonstrated the draw of watching space action on the big screen: $33,318 per house, for a total of $2,265,664.

MGM-United Artists had good news from its summer contender, "Rocky III": $10,028,555 for the second weekend, an average of $10,681 for the 939 screens. The 10-day total was $30,860,483.

"Poltergeist," MGM-UA's new entry from Steven Spielberg, drew a respectable $6,896,612 in 890 theaters for a three-day average of $7,749. Spielberg's other summer entry, "E.T., The Extra-Terrestrial," is due from Universal next week.

Columbia Pictures was pleased with the limited engagement of "Annie," but less so with the release of the Gene Wilder-Gilda Radner comedy, "Hanky Panky." The musical was holding firm at $414,685 for last weekend in 14 theaters, for a 17-day total of $2,158,219. It goes into wide release on June 18.

"Hanky Panky" collected a disappointing $3,597,244 in 1,238 theaters.

Engineers say reactor wall cracks safe

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Large cracks in the shield wall of a reactor at the Comanche Peak nuclear power plant are harmless, according to the testimony of construction engineers.

Testimony from the engineers came Monday during the opening day of a hearing being held by the U.S. Atomic Safety and Licensing Board on a request for a license for the nuclear power plant located southwest of the Dallas-Fort Worth metroplex.

Kenneth L. Scheppele, senior vice president of Gibbs & Hill Inc., testified that two seven-foot-deep cracks developed in 1977 in a shield wall designed to keep radiation from escaping from the reactor.

Testifying for Texas Utilities Generating Co., Scheppele said the cracks split the doughnut-shaped shield in half, but he said the shield was still held tightly together by steel support rods and had not lost its strength.

Scheppele said no radiation would be able to escape because the cracks are jagged and do not run in a straight line.

Two other construction engineers agreed with Scheppele that the cracks pose no safety hazard.

William S. Jordan, a lawyer representing Citizens Association for Sound Energy (CASE), said he planned to present testimony today from a former quality control inspector at the plant who claims he was fired for doing his job too well.

Jordan said Charles Atchison will testify in support of the organization's claims that construction work was so shoddy that "it is impossible to render this plant safe."

Atchison, 40, of Azle, said he was fired April 12 by Brown & Root Construction Co. for reporting building defects that were not specifically within his jurisdiction.

He said he appealed his firing to the U.S. Department of Labor. He said the federal agency ordered the company to rehire. The construction company is now appealing the federal order, Atchison said.

The nuclear power plant, located near Glen Rose, was originally to be completed in 1980 at a cost of $779 million. The owners now estimate the plant will be completed in 1984 at a cost of $3.44 billion.

Venue change filed for Wood defendent

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Pervasive pretrial publicity would prevent the man accused of killing U.S. District Judge John H. Wood Jr. from receiving a fair trial in Texas or three surrounding states, a defense attorney contends.

Defense attorney Thomas G. Sharpe filed a change of venue motion Monday asking the court to move the trial of Charles V. Harrelson to Denver.

"The nearest prejudice-free state is Colorado and the defendant believes a fair trail can be obtained in Denver," the Brownsville attorney said in the motion.

Harrelson and imprisoned drug trafficker Jamiel "Jimmy" Chagra were indicted for the murder of Wood and for conspiracy to kill a federal judge. Conviction on either charge could result in a life sentence.

DEAR ABBY

Judge frees himself from chain-smoking habit

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 70-year-old retired municipal judge from the Philippines. Ten years ago I suffered a serious heart attack. I had been a chain smoker for nearly 40 years, averaging four packs of cigarettes a day. My physician ordered me to stop smoking. I objected vehemently, promising to cut down but not quit entirely.

In 1979, when I was strong enough to travel, my wife and I came to the U.S.A. On Nov. 18, 1981, I read in your column in the Long Beach (Calif.) Press-Telegram:

"Tomorrow will mark the Fifth Annual Great American Smokeout, a good-humored, upbeat, one-day campaign to encourage smokers to give up cigarettes for 24 hours — just to prove to themselves that they can. It's the brainchild of the American Cancer Society, which insists that anyone who can live without a cigarette for 24 hours can quit forever. So if you are hooked on cigarettes and have been meaning to quit, why not start tomorrow — for just 24 hours? It won't be easy, but I promise you it will be the best present you can give yourself and those who love you."

I decided to give it a try. I quit for one day, then another, and another, and I have not touched a cigarette since! The cough and chest pains I used to have have stopped, and I no longer crave a cigarette.

I wish I could personally thank you for this, for if I could, I would not only shake your hands firmly, but would kiss them as well as a sincere manifestation of my appreciation and gratitude. You may use my name. — JUDGE JOSE L. COLLADO

DEAR JUDGE: Your letter is more than sufficient thanks for me. And if there are other readers who quit smoking on the Great American Smokeout Day, I want to hear from you!

DEAR ABBY: I deeply resent the pressure put on bosses to "honor" their secretaries by sending them flowers or candy and treating them to a lunch or dinner. As I see it, it's just another commercial gimmick to sell more flowers and candy.

After all, secretaries are paid for their services. And if the secretary does an outstanding job, let the boss show his or her appreciation as he or she sees fit.

Having a National Secretaries Week to "honor" all secretaries pressures all bosses to go along with the gimmick or look cheap.

I happen to be a wife as well as a secretary, and I do not need my boss to take me to lunch. I spend eight hours a day with him, and that's enough!

I know this letter won't change anything, but it sure felt good to get this off my chest. — NO HONORS, PLEASE

DEAR NO: You're right. It won't change anything, but I'm glad you got it off your chest. That's what I'm here for. Read on for a letter from a secretary with another point of view:

DEAR ABBY: Once again National Secretaries Week has passed unnoticed by my boss. I wonder how many other secretaries can identify with this:

On holidays and special occasions, nobody in the boss's family would be remembered if his secretary didn't remind him to send flowers or buy a gift. (And guess who orders the flowers and buys the gift? And when the boss receives a gift, guess who writes the thank-you notes?)

Believe me, the movie "Nine to Five" was no exaggeration. I would sign my name, but my boss is a very famous celebrity. Thanks for listening. — GIRL FRIDAY

Psychologist gives course on finding right man

By HARVEY HAGMAN
Hearst Feature Service

BALTIMORE — Silver-tongued behaviorial psychologist Elliott Jaffa moonlights as a pickup guru to help women find the elusive Mr. Right in a course called "How to Pick Up Men — for Women Only."

The 19 women who enrolled in Jaffa's course range in age from 20 to their late 40s. They are attractive, well groomed and neatly dressed. They paid $20 to be here. One-half have been married. Two have answered personal ads. All have tried the bar scene.

It's a scene played over and over before single women everywhere and will never change, Jaffa says, unless aggressive action is taken. He recommends everything — short of tripping — to catch the attention and interest of men who seem likely candidates for a relationship.

Nevertheless, Jaffa's suggestion to approach strange men in the street seems questionable to some. "Isn't it dangerous?" a pert second-grade teacher asks. Jaffa replies, "We're talking about broad daylight in busy areas."

What about rejection? "We have all been rejected throughout our lives," Jaffa says. "A baseball player who bats .300 only gets a hit 30 percent of the time, and how much does he make? You do not have to score 100 percent of the time. You are only competing against yourself."

More Jaffa tips: Observe men. What are they wearing? Are they carrying a magazine or a key bob? What's the name on it? Say something. Look your best. When you meet a man, look him in the eye. Smile!

"Say, 'Hi, nice to see you.' People will gravitate to you. Dogs are great for pickups. If you don't have one, borrow one."

Jaffa suggests the following opening lines:

— At the airport lounge: "Would you watch my stuff?"

— At the meat counter: Hand the man a roast and say, "How long are you supposed to boil this?"

— At the produce counter: Grab a canteloupe and hand it to him: "How does this look to you?"

— In the checkout line: "Last one through buys coffee." Or wait until he gets in line and get in behind him. Ask him to carry something. Offer help. "Can I give you a hand with that?"

— Anywhere, anytime: "Never shave that beard." "Never cut that hair." "What a beautiful ring." Be sincere. Remember, flattery will get you everywhere. "You look like you're on your way to an important meeting. Let me fix your tie." "Excuse me, but I think you look wonderful." "Want to share my umbrella?" "What do people do in the evening in this town?" "I saw you and decided I'll like to talk to you." "Is there a ( ) around here?" "Some friends of mine are having a party. Write down your name and address and I'll send you an invitation." "Can you recommend an inexpensive place for lunch? Have you had lunch? Care to join me for coffee?"

— With camera: "Could you take my picture next to that statue?"

And now the no-nos.

Jaffa says, "Never ask a man if he's married." A hand goes up. "How do you know if he's married?"

"Ask for his home telephone number." Snickers.

"Never ask if he is working steady. Never babble. Never approach a man nervously and back off. Never complain about anything. Never interrupt. Never put yourself down. Leave him plenty of clues about how he can contact you."

Carole, a secretary, asks, "How do you keep from coming on like a streetwalker?"

Jaffa says, "You have to do these things naturally. We're talking about noontime. You are asking for help in broad daylight, giving a man a chance to show an interest in you."

The dance program included Middle Eastern and oriental dancing at the Showcase Theatre. Some 30 area dancers, including students and teachers, performed before a capacity crowd to raise money for SPCA, which will use the money for the animal control departments. The Midland department plans to use the money for an operating and emergency room for animals.

Sometimes I think women are their own worst enemies. Take pregnancy. Please.

To be "with child" used to get you a seat on the bus, a pillow for your back, 30 days in bed watching soap operas following the birth, and 10 years of intense guilt for your husband.

For more than half a century, we had a good thing going for us. Then, one by one, our benefits began to tumble. Pregnancy isn't the fun time it used to be. As the list of no-nos keeps getting longer, so does the list of yes-yesses.

You can't smoke because it's harmful to the baby and to you, but you can do aerobics.

You can't drink alcohol because of the potential danger to the fetus, but you can work up to the last day.

You can't indulge yourself by eating because the delivery can be difficult, but it's all right to jog. You can't shop for clothes because nothing fits, but you can get into a swimsuit and do three miles every morning. Even coffee drinking is a no-no, but you can play tennis.

I don't know when someone figured out that exercise and fresh air were compatible with pregnancy, but women's lives haven't been the same since.

Personally, there's nothing I loved any more in my 11th month than a good volleyball game, but some women have gone overboard.

Mary Bacon, a jockey, gave birth to a daughter soon after riding her third horse of the day.

Wendy Boglioli, the Olympic swim champion, was in her fifth month of pregnancy when she competed in the 100-yard freestyle at the American Amateur Athletic Union meet.

Andrea Mead Lawrence won two gold medals in Alpine racing at the Winter Olympics while in her first trimester.

Mary Jones ran half a marathon (13.1 miles) in two hours and five minutes near the end of her eighth month of pregnancy.

Okay, so times have changed. Let women pump iron, run 10 K's, play four sets of tennis, deliver twins at lunch, and hike a mountain before the sun sets.

But let us not forget the Maternity Martyrs of a decade ago who also have medals . . . fur coats, dinner rings, live-ins who never left, and cruises all over the world.

Oral historian helps preserve memories of family histories

By EILEEN PUTMAN
AP Writer

LARCHMONT, N.Y. (AP) — Margaret Loeb Kempner remembers the luxury of her childhood — maids in frilly caps and starchy aprons, a butler hovering over the dinner table, summers on Long Island Sound.

Helen deSanto's memories are of the hard times she spent as a bride trying to hold the family together after her immigrant father and her new husband lost everything in the 1929 stock market crash.

Rudolph J. Schaefer remembers the purple colored footprints employees left at his Brooklyn brewery during Prohibition. The family produced dye there to survive during the dry years.

Three separate memories of three different lives. But all share a common desire: They don't want those memories to die.

So, Mrs. Kempner, Mrs. deSanto and Schaefer are doing something to preserve their heritages. They are telling their stories to an oral historian who will turn their words into written history.

Oral histories for centuries were used by storytellers in some African civilizations to pass history and legend to succeeding generations. Today, they are being used by American families to record their lives.

"There is no question that the effect of Alex Haley and 'Roots' caused many families to want to trace their own stories and want to know more about their past and talk to their families," said Elizabeth Mason, acting director of the Oral History Research Office at Columbia University.

Oral histories can be used as therapy, she said, or as a tool by sociologists, archivists and others.

"The people I interview are the last link with their grandparents. They are the only link between their parents and the other generations," said Mary C. O'Connell, a former college admissions officer who runs an oral history enterprise from her Larchmont home.

Her histories, which cost from $250 to thousands of dollars, include leather bound albums with accompanying audio tapes of the storyteller.

"People are always terribly glad to get it all down," she says. "It's almost like therapy. They have a chance to look at their lives and sum it all up."

Mrs. Kempner, 82, of Purchase, N.Y., wanted to talk about her pre-World War I childhood as the daughter of financial wizard Carl M. Loeb.

"Mother was very class-conscious — no fraternizing with the lower class," she recalled. "Someone was always on duty to answer the bells. Father had one famous French chef who had cooked on the Vanderbilt yacht."

Mrs. deSanto, who now lives with her children in New Rochelle, N.Y., wanted to pass on memories of her father, who came to the United States from Sicily, and worked as a plasterer and union organizer.

He made money through stocks and property, but lost it all — $70,000 — in the 1929 crash. He was then injured in an automobile accident and moved in with Mrs. deSanto, who was living with her new husband at his mother's house.

"With all of us paying something, we managed," she said. "But then it got so bad nobody had any work. That time was very, very hard."

For Schaefer of Mamaroneck, N.Y., the F & M Schaefer Corp., which he sold in 1968, was like a family:

Two years ago, as he neared his 80th birthday, he commissioned a history to record how the business started as a little brewery on 19th Street in Manhattan, weathered Prohibition and grew into a multi-million dollar corporation.

The plant moved to Brooklyn and made dyes to stay afloat when making alcohol was illegal.

Mrs. O'Connell, who has done her own parents' histories, said that stories such as Schaefer's must be passed on to succeeding generations.

"Time is so short," she said. "It's like a photo album. People keep thinking they'll get around to doing it, but they don't."

Schaefer puts it another way: "I am as proud of my roots as I am of its blossoms."

British general has reputation for liking action

By ED BLANCHE

LONDON (AP) — Marine Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore, commander of British forces ringing the Argentine bastion of Port Stanley in the Falkland Islands, carries a Bible and Shakespeare's sonnets when he goes to war and once headed the marines' school of music.

But Moore, 53, is the most decorated officer in the 9,000-man Royal Marines and has a reputation for liking action.

"He's a strong supporter of moving fast and hitting hard — a dapper man with a dapper mind," Sir John Richards, another marine general, noted.

The battle for Stanley may be Moore's last since he is due to retire later this year. In the winter mud and mist, he is approaching the fight with caution.

He told British correspondents at the front: "I don't want us dashing in there causing unnecessary loss of life of my soldiers. We'll do it in a proper, sensible, well-balanced, military way."

He is building up his forces and supplies before advancing towards the heavily defended Argentine stronghold.

"The Argentines are squeezed into a tight corner," he said as he toured the front line with a pistol on his hip. "It'll be a little more squeezed before we're finished."

Moore has many things in common with his opponent, Brig. Gen. Mario Menendez. Both are fighting their first big pitched battles with artillery, air strikes and thousands of men. Both come from military families. Both made their names fighting guerrillas — Moore in Malaya, Borneo, Aden and Northern Ireland; Menendez in Argentina's northwest Tucuman province.

After joining the marines in 1947 and being commissioned a second lieutenant, Moore saw combat fighting Communist guerrillas in the Malayan jungles from 1950 to 1952 and won the Military Cross.

He won another in 1962 fighting Indonesian-backed rebels who seized oilfields in Brunei, a British protectorate in Borneo, in a battle that has become a Royal Marine legend.

About 350 rebels seized British civilians as hostages at a town on the Brunei River. Moore commandeered two leaky boats, sailed them upriver at night with a handful of marines and made a dawn assault.

They took the town after a day of street fighting, rescued the hostages unharmed and killed or captured more than 100 rebels. Five marines were lost.

In Northern Ireland, Moore led another marine commando unit fighting Irish Republican Army guerrillas and was a key figure in Operation Motorman in July 1972, when 22,000 troops eliminated IRA strongholds.

Moore is leading the British land forces in the Falklands because he was commander of amphibious forces at naval headquarters when the crisis erupted.

An anti-aircraft gunner sits close to his weapon, as stores are unloaded from a landing craft at a jetty in San Carlos Bay on East Falkland recently. This photo was one of several released by the Ministry of Defense in London on Sunday.

Continued existence of U.N. force doubtful

By O.C. DOELLING

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Israel's invasion of southern Lebanon casts doubt on the continued existence of the beleaguered U.N. peacekeeping force in southern Lebanon.

U.N. officials speculate that the Security Council will not renew the mandate of the U.N. Interim Force in Lebanon (UNIFIL) when it expires June 18 unless Israel agrees by then to withdraw its invasion troops.

But Israeli troops will remain in Lebanon until political arrangements guarantee that Palestinian artillery and rockets cannot be stationed within range of the Israeli border, Israeli officials in Jerusalem said Monday.

"The tide has washed over UNIFIL," said a ranking diplomat from a country contributing troops to the force. "UNIFIL can't go on as before."

He said the Soviet Union would veto any resolution redeploying the force to police the 25-mile-deep buffer zone Israel is attempting to clear in southern Lebanon.

ZEHDI LABIB TERZI, the Palestine Liberation Organization's observer at the United Nations, maintains that "UNIFIL's zone of operation must not be changed" if and when Israel withdraws.

UNIFIL's zone is in two parts, between the Litani River and the border buffer zone held by Lebanese Maj. Saad Haddad's Christian militia, and north of the Israeli-occupied part of the Syrian Golan Heights. Its northern sides are about 14 miles north of the Israeli border, 11 short of the limits Israel wants.

Prior to the Israeli thrust across the Litani, Palestinian guerrillas held positions in the so-called "Tyre pocket" on the coastal side of the U.N. zone and north of the Litani up to the area of Sidon.

The 11-nation peacekeeping force, which was in the process of expanding from 6,000 to 7,000 men at the time of the invasion, was created by the Security Council after Israel's last invasion of Lebanon, in March 1978. Its mission was to oversee Israeli withdrawal and to maintain peace in the area.

When Israel completed its withdrawal, it left Haddad's militia in control of a six-mile zone along the 59-mile Israeli-Lebanese border. The Israeli-backed militia never allowed UNIFIL to move into the border strip.

Diplomats here say the Palestinians and their Russian supporters would not agree to UNIFIL taking over the forwardmost positions of the Israeli invaders while "Haddad-land" was expanded northward toward the Litani.

THROUGHOUT ITS four-year existence, UNIFIL has been vilified and harassed by both sides. More than 70 members of the force have died, nearly half of them killed by gunfire or exploding mines.

On Sunday, the lightly armed peacekeepers tried to block the advancing Israeli armored columns. But "the overwhelming strength and weight of the Israeli forces precluded the possibility of stopping them, and UNIFIL positions in the line of the invasion have thus been overrun or bypassed," U.N. Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar reported to the Security Council.

One Norwegian member of the force was killed in the crossfire.

Hasan Abdel Rahman, the PLO's deputy U.N. observer, charged at a news conference Monday that by failing to stop the Israelis, UNIFIL "by implication" collaborated with them. And the Israelis have frequently accused UNIFIL of a permissive attitude toward Palestinian guerrillas infiltrating the U.N. area.

U.S. ambassador calls Salvadoran leader 'patriot'

By GEORGE GEDDA

WASHINGTON (AP) — Salvadoran rightist leader Roberto d'Aubuisson, once deported from the United States because of alleged ties to terrorist groups in his homeland, is now "basically a patriot" who supports democracy, the U.S. ambassador to El Salvador says.

"I'm not saying he doesn't have a highly questionable past," Ambassador Dean Hinton said Monday night, adding he could offer no assurances that d'Aubuisson will continue attempting to work within the system.

But, he said, d'Aubuisson has behaved in a responsible manner since his selection as president of the newly installed Constituent Assembly two months ago.

Hinton addressed a gathering sponsored by the World Affairs Council. During his remarks, demonstrators protested U.S. support for El Salvador outside the downtown hotel where Hinton spoke.

D'Aubuisson ran afoul of the Carter administration after he was accused twice of plotting against the U.S.-backed civilian-military junta which held power until the Constituent Assembly elections in March.

In July 1980, he was deported from the United States after entering the country illegally on a visa that had been revoked by the State Department because of his alleged ties to rightist terrorism.

He also was accused by Hinton's predecessor, Robert White, of having had a hand in the assassination of Archbishop Oscar Arnulfo Romero in March 1980.

But Hinton said d'Aubuisson, head of the National Republican Alliance, the largest of Salvador's rightist parties, has been cooperating effectively for the past six weeks with Salvadoran President Alvaro Magana.

On a related subject, Hinton said withdrawal of U.S. support for El Salvador inevitably would lead to the establishment of a Marxist regime there because the guerrilla movement is captained by the "hardest of hard line" communists.

Among the countries and groups Hinton said were "mucking around" in El Salvador are the Soviet Union, Cuba, Nicaragua, Libya, the Palestine Liberation Organization, Vietnam, Ethiopia, North Korea and Bulgaria.

Continued American support for El Salvador is essential if that country is to avoid becoming "the third communist country in the Western Hemisphere."

Later, he amended that slightly by saying there are "1.8" communist countries now — an apparent reference to Cuba, which is avowedly communist, and to Grenada, which is pro-Cuban but has not established a Marxist system.

There is "so much senseless violence" in El Salvador that "sometimes you wish you weren't there," said Hinton, who has spent the past year as ambassador. But the United States does not have an interest in permitting the establishment of a communist government in that country, he said.

Hinton is here to lobby for congressional support for continued American military assistance to El Salvador, which has come under fire in Congress because of signs the rightist-dominated Constituent Assembly is curtailing the land reform program.

Reagan goes riding with Queen Elizabeth

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
AP Special Correspondent

WINDSOR, England (AP) — With more cameras grinding than when he rode off into the Hollywood sunset with Custer's cavalry, President Ronald Reagan went for a canter with Queen Elizabeth II Tuesday morning in the private Home Park of Windsor Castle.

The royal Master of the Horse put the president aboard an 8-year-old stallion named Centennial, a gift to the queen from the Royal Canadian Mounted Police.

The queen rode 20-year-old Burmese, her favorite stallion, the horse that did not flinch when blank shots were fired at the monarch during the Trooping the Color ceremony in London last year.

The queen set a leisurely pace for the hour-long morning canter, unlike Elizabeth I, who used to wear out horses and outriders galloping in this ancient hunting ground of Saxon and Norman kings.

After saddling up in the royal mews, the party set off into a mid-morning mist for the eight-mile trot.

AT THE START, right behind came Nancy Reagan being driven in a coach-and-four by the queen's husband, Prince Philip. Behind them were two of the queen's equerries on horses and two secret servicemen saddled up with radios sticking out of their back pockets.

Philip reigned the carriage south towards Ascot race course while the queen and president, followed by their security escort, trotted off into the 740-acre Home Park, private grounds which Prince Albert set aside so that he, like Charles II, could go swimming in the adjacent River Thames.

As the president and the queen rode along the banks of a canal set by the Thames, off in the distance loomed the twin towers of Eton College chapel and the steeple of Stoke-Poges, where Thomas Gray set his "Elegy in a Country Churchyard," warning that the path of glory leads but to the grave.

"How do you like your horse?" a reporter called out to the president. "Beautiful," he replied. Asked if it rode well, he said yes and humorously made a feint as if to jump the barrier separating the royal posse from the 150 cameramen and reporters.

The president, in an open-collar, light tweed jacket and jodhpurs and boots, used an English riding saddle, also his choice of saddle back home on his Santa Barbara ranch. The queen in a checked woolen jacket and jodhpurs and boots had a scarf around her hair.

Several hundred tourists peaked through the park gate at the most unusual riding party to come out of the West since Buffalo Bill brought his troop to Windsor to perform for Queen Victoria.

THE REAGANS awoke their first morning in Windsor Castle to the sounds of rooks screaming around the battlements of the famous Round Tower and the fragrance of giant yellow tea roses growing in the long ago filled-in castle moat.

The birdsong was soon drowned out by the thunder of jumbo jets taking off from nearby Heathrow Airport which opens its runways at 7.30 a.m. after a nightly curfew. Windsor Castle definitely has a noise pollution problem.

The first U.S. first family ever to be overnight guests of the sovereign at Windsor, the Reagans will spend a second night todayin the Lancaster Tower, the queen's private apartments. Their sumptuous seven-room suite is done up with cream carpets and matching curtains embroidered in Victorian silk, and contains a number of art objects including pastel portraits by Holbein of the queen's ancestors. A Canaletto hangs in the corridor outside.

The Reagan top-floor suite consists of two bedrooms, each with dressing room and bathroom, and a main sitting room.

At 9 a.m. the queen's bagpiper, as usual, paraded on the terrace beneath the castle's living quarters.

The hour-long ride was modest by the royal standards of this establishment, where mad King George III used to keep his weight down by doing 80 miles a day and even rotund Queen Anne, who had to be hoisted on pulleys into the saddle, was good for 50 miles.

AT 12:15 this afternoon, Reagan was due to address members of both Houses of Parliament in the Royal Gallery of the House of Lords.

Brazilian jet crashes into mountaintop

FORTALEZA, Brazil (AP) — A Brazilian jet with 137 people aboard crashed into a mountaintop in heavy rain outside this northeast coastal city early today, the airline reported. "It's very probable there were fatalities," a spokesman said.

The number of victims was not immediately known because rescue teams had not yet reached the wreckage of the VASP airline Boeing 727, airline director Jose Rodrigues da Silva said.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Wednesday, June 9, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: Nancy Sinatra and Nelson Rockefeller's widow, Happy, share this birthday with you. Those born on this date are quick learners with considerable communication skills. Make the most of any unusual business opportunities. A love for cooking could lead to a full-time catering business. Although your love for gossip sometimes lands you in hot water, people know that there is not a malicious bone in your body. Learn to be more discreet before you lose the respect of those you most admire. Invest more time in a love relationship. You and mate draw closer together when you understand each other better.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A settlement will be costly, but the peace of mind it produces makes it worth the price. An opponent's position is weakened. Move quickly and you score a victory.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Higher-ups appreciate your talents but may not be able to match someone else's money offer. You have to make a difficult decision regarding older person.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A new business appears to have unlimited potential. Make the most of your opportunities, but do not try to move too swiftly.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Let go of the past and work to advance a new cause. A show of affection helps you avoid a run-in with mate. Romance is unusually happy this evening.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Old friends prove to be the best allies now; seek their advice. An unusual achievement will be handsomely rewarded. Resist the urge to splurge.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Come to grips with a problem left over from last week. Help arrives from an unexpected quarter. Do not change your plans just to suit someone else's whims.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A financial burden is lifted but you still have domestic matters to deal with. Tact and a sense of humor are your best allies.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A sudden emergency could demand more money than you possess. A friend or neighbor comes to your rescue. Show loved ones more appreciation.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Remain true to those who rely on you and avoid airing your grievances around an office gossip. You win goodwill by doing favors for those in real need.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Romance is on a smooth course but jealousy could bog you down. Look on the bright side of things. Reading a good book will lift your spirits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Someone may turn to you in an emergency, disrupting your work schedule. Postpone meetings, conferences. Right now, delays actually work in your favor!

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You accomplish the most by sticking to your priorities. Someone who works behind the scenes holds à trump card. Come to grips with a domestic problem.

The danger hand had all the entries! But skillful play kept him off lead just long enough for declarer to make his contract.

The main point in the auction is North's bid of three clubs. There are those that consider it a signoff, but don't include us in that group. We don't pretend to be clever enough to know that a hand will make exactly nine tricks in a suit but not eight or nine tricks at no trump. With double stoppers in the unbid suits, South chose the nine-trick game.

West led his fourth-best spade, and declarer captured East's jack with the king. A thoughtless declarer might lead a heart to the king. East would win the ace and return a spade, and before declarer could get nine tricks the defenders would have three spade tricks and two aces for a one-trick defeat. It is no better to lead the king of clubs from hand. East can win and revert to spades with the same result.

Obviously, East is the anger hand and should be ept off lead as long as possible. With that in mind, the winning line becomes a bit easier to spot. Declarer does not mind losing a trick to West, since West cannot continue the attack on spades without giving declarer a third trick in the suit. See what happens if, at trick two, declarer crosses to dummy with the queen of diamonds and leads a club.

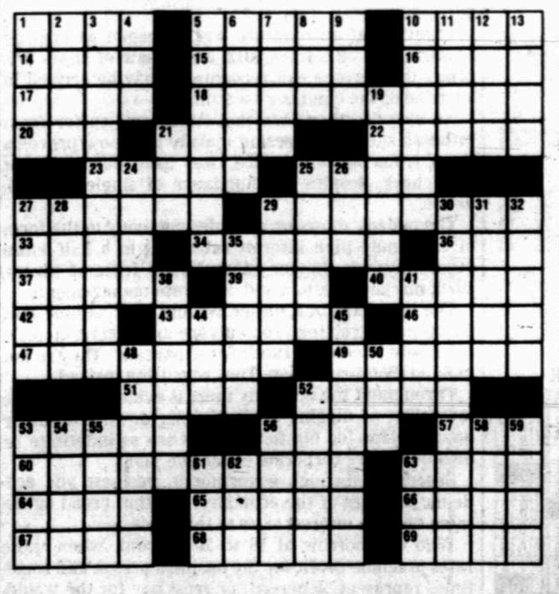

If East rises with ace, declarer will make four tricks in clubs together with two spades and three diamonds, so East must duck. Declarer wins the queen of clubs and now leads a heart. Again, East cannot afford to win, for that would give declarer nine tricks via two spades, three hearts, three diamonds and one club. And East must duck again when declarer leads another heart from dummy. But East's fine defense is to no avail because declarer now reverts to clubs. Whether East rises with the ace or not, declarer is sure of his game — with overtricks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. Midland company schedules 'alternative energy' project

By SCOTT BARRETT
Hearst Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A possibly unique "alternative energy" project is scheduled to go into operation in California this month, under which an independent power plant will augment elctricity produced by a public utility.

The project may be the first of its kind in the nation since enactment into law of the 1978 National Energy Plan.

The project, a 670-kilowatt hydroelectric power plant located near San Francisco in the Sierra Nevada Mountains in Shasta county, is designed to supply electricity to approximately one thousand families.

The project will be dedicated on June 13. It will augment power supplied by the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, the nation's largest utility company.

The National Energy Plan and the Energy Security Act were enacted into law during the Carter Administration. Various measures contained within the Carter Administration's energy program were designed to encourage alternative energy production by opening up the energy marketplace to non-utility competitors.

THE NEW HYDROELECTRIC facility is owned and operated by Consolidated Hydroelectric, Inc. (CHI). CHI is a subsidiary of Consolidated Petroleum Industries Inc. of Midland, Texas. (CPII).

Located on a stream in a wooded area called Bailey Creek, CHI's hydroelectric plant is a "small high head run of river" site, according to a summary of the project written by CHI.

Unlike larger projects like the Grand Coulee Dam, in the state of Washington, the production of "high head" hydroelectric power does not involve building a dam and creating a reservoir. High head sites are found on steeper terrain.

Water from the stream is diverted by a concrete structure into pipes that channel a flow of water toward a drop in the terrain, where the water falls within the pipe structure into a turbine.

The impact of the falling water turns the turbine's wheel and electricity is consequently produced. Alternatively, in "low head hydro," it is the water's mass that produces power.

THE BAILEY CREEK project operates at 80 percent efficiency.

When the Carter Administration energy regulations went into effect the United States initially experienced a rush of would-be entrepeneurs who were seeking to take financial advantage of the opportunities the Carter regulations provided.

In the hydro business the rush was referred to as "hydromania".

One leading measure that created this growth of interest was the Public Utility Regulatory Policies Act (PURPA).

PURPA states that public utilities must buy energy from cogenerators (organizations which produce energy alongside utilities) at "avoided cost" or marginal cost. In this manner the utility is required to pay cogenerators cost incurred by the utility to produce its most recent unit of energy.

THE FEDERAL ENERGY Regulatory Commission (FERC) is responsible for overseeing regulations covering utilities.

Terence O'Rourke, executive vice president of CHI, indicated that in the past, energy regulations might have provided incentives for cogenerators to enter the market. He noted, however, that the cost of establishing a hydroelectric remains high.

O'Rourke pointed out that installation costs at the Bailey creek site were about $2 million. The plant took about a year to construct.

While installations costs for small hydroelectric projects are high, O'Rourke said maintenance can be kept low. CHI monitors the site by computer to avoid the expense of on-site inspection.

"We are approaching this like an oil company," said O'Rourke, explaining that CHI will bring more than big money backing to the small hydro business.

BEFORE BUILDING on Bailey Creek, CHI undertook an extensive investigation of the site. A fish expert, a plant biologist and an archeological team that searched for possible Indian artifacts were employed.

O'Rourke conceded that the active environmentalist movement in California provided a force to be reckoned with in planning the plant, but also cited the practicality of thorough research and economy.

In a promotional film that CHI has produced for its Bailey Creek project, one environmental scientist endorses O'Rourke's zeal for careful planning, saying: "We don't like to clean up messes."

CHI will sell the electricity it produces at Bailey Creek to Pacific Gas and Electric under a 30-year contract. The price should vary between six and eight cents per kilowatt hour.

CHI expects a 20 percent return on its investment in the first year of operations and already has 24 other such small hydro projects planned.

On June 1 the Supreme Court gave cogenerators a boost. In a 5-4 decision the court overturned the ruling of a Mississippi judge and found PURPA to be constitutional.

The decision represented a victory of the interests of interstate commerce over the parochial interests of individual states, according to sources close to the issue.

Refinery to layoff 1,000 workers

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — Reduced demand for petroleum is forcing Texaco to make staff reductions at its refinery here, the company said.

Texaco notified its union representatives that it wants to lay off a quarter of the 4,000 hourly workers who have been on strike since January at the refinery.

"The adjustments are necessary as a result of the industry-wide situation of reduced petroleum product demand," a Texaco spokesman said.

"The reduced level of operations and the need to improve efficiency are expected to reduce normal work force requirements at the Port Arthur refinery by approximately 1,000 hourly rated employees," the spokesman said.

Texaco hopes to accomplish the reductions through normal attrition, the spokesman said, and possibly by moving surplus employees to other work assignments.

Any lay offs would be made when the strike ends. "Of course, any items subject to collective bargaining would be included in continuing negotiations between the parties," the spokesman added.

The strike began at midnight Jan. 8 when labor contracts with the oil company expired. Members of Oil Chemical and Atomic Workers Local 4-23, International Brotherhood of Electrical Workers Local 390, the Office and Professional Employees International Union and several other unions represent the more than 4,000 workers idled by the strike.

DEVELOPMENT WELL — A well drilled adjacent to producing wells to increase recovery of oil or gas from a reservoir.

PERMEABILITY — The ability of rocks to transmit fluid through interconnected pore spaces. The ease or difficulty for petroleum to flow through reservoir beds to the well bore.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Russian eye treatment unproven

Dear Dr. Solomon: Every once in a while I read about some scientific discovery that Russian doctors have come up with. The latest is a treatment for an eye condition that causes blindness. Do you know what the treatment is, and can you explain why Russian doctors are so much smarter than American doctors? — Anthony, Fort Lauderdale, Fla.

Dear Anthony: I'm afraid you are confusing a claim that a treatment for some medical condition has been found to be effective, with the fact that it is effective. I assume you are referring to a report from the Soviet Union that its doctors have developed a cure for retinitis pigmentosa, a degenerative eye condition. Unfortunately, their claim has not been substantiated by American physicians.

Dr. Eliot Berson, a Harvard University specialist in retinitis pigmentosa, has examined seven people who made the trip from the United States to the Soviet Union for treatment. He reports that none showed any improvement, and three patients actually continued to get worse.

American doctors would welcome a breakthrough in the treatment of retinitis pigmentosa regardless of who received credit for it, and they would be among the first to applaud their Soviet colleagues. But a claim of a cure without proof of its effectiveness isn't worth very much.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father has smoked on and off for about 40 years, but he started smoking more heavily when he retired about a year ago at the age of 65. My sister and I are having a friendly debate about whether we should try to get him to quit once and for all, or whether we should just consider it a lost cause. At my father's age, I think it's a waste of time to try to get him to give up cigarettes, but I'd appreciate your advice. — Grace, Seattle

Dear Grace: I will answer your question in two parts. First of all, I don't believe it is ever a waste of time to try to get someone to stop smoking. That goes for children as well as for retirees.

Secondly, there are indications that your father's age may even favor his being able to quit. A study conducted by the Health Planning and Development Council for Broward City, Florida, suggests thsat people over 65 years of age are more likely to stop smoking than any other group.

A survey of more than 7,500 people showed that 60 percent of those over 65 had quit. I suggest you owe it to your father to at least try to get him to stop. If he is successful, it should make his retirement years a lot more enjoyable. You may want to read more about this topic in my new book, "Stop Smoking, Lose Weight."

Dear Dr. Solomon: I had a herpes infection when I delivered my child. The doctors kept him in the hospital for 2 weeks before I could bring him home. Why? I had the herpes, not him. — Susan, Modesto

Dear Susan: Your baby was kept at the hospital as protection to him. He was observed closely and tested to determine whether he became infected with herpes during delivery.

For P.C. (Seattle): Ninety percent of the patients I inject with my stop smoking shots do not need boosters. The treatment takes one day. You must be motivated to stop smoking, or don't come to Baltimore to get the treatment.

(If you have a medical question, write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1726 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column).

This Kemp's Ridley turtle was released into the Gulf of Mexico last week, along with 1600 of its brothers and sisters. These turtles are an endangered species and were raised in captivity at the National Marine Fisheries in Galveston. They were released into the Gulf some ten miles south of South Padre Island.

Ranchers losing in coyote war

BRONTE, Texas (AP) — Ranchers in this West Texas town have been fighting a losing battle against coyotes who ravage local sheep flocks.

Now they have a new enemy — environmentalists who are trying to prevent the ranchers from using chemicals to kill the predators.

"We're not bloodthirsty killers," said rancher Don Glenn, "But the way things are now, it's plumb disgusting. If we don't get some relief, I don't see how the sheep business can survive."

The Environmental Protection Agency has conducted hearings in nearby San Angelo during the past two weeks to reconsider its ban on the use of chemical Compound 1080 in large traps.

The ranchers, who have grown to loathe the coyote's romanticized lonesome howl, say they need Compound 1080 to combat rapid increases in the coyote population and rapid decreases in the size of their flocks.

Environmental groups such as Defenders of Wildlife oppose the use of Compound 1080 because of the hazards it poses to humans and wildlife.

"Thirty years ago when we were in high school, there weren't any coyotes here," said Glenn's partner, J. Lee Ensor. "That is what's frightening."

"The predators have flat shut us down," he said, "Every time you lose a lamb, that's basically a $50 bill."

Bill Sneed, president of the First Coleman National Bank in Coleman, testified at the hearings that the sheep population in Coleman County has shrunk from 200,000 in 1959 to 50,000 last year.

To combat the coyote, Glenn and Ensor have been moving their sheep from pasture to pasture and spent $1,000 to hunt the creature out of a helicopter.

As a last resort, they are fastening rubber-lined collars containing the Compound 1080 around the necks of their sheep as part of a state-sanctioned program.

Despite the maneuvers, the pair said they have lost 40 head of sheep in the last two years.

Members of Defenders of Wildlife say the collars are not safe because the poison can be transmitted to other animals through the coyotes, and the collars can be punctured by barbed wire or other sharp objects.

But the ranchers — and the bankers supporting them — say the only way they can stay in business is to begin using the chemical more extensively.

"We've got to get an answer to this problem, but I'm afraid it won't happen until we all get hungry because that product's not in the stores," Sneed said. "The sheepmen can't control things like interest rates and inflation, but predators is one of the problems they should be able to control and that might make the difference between surviving or not."

Bronte's arid climate and sparse vegetation are not conducive to large herds, and Glenn and Ensor say that only makes their position more precarious.

"This isn't sheep country in the normal sense," Glenn said. "There aren't any large herds around these parts, so it's not like you can afford to have shepherds and sheep dogs to watch the flocks."

The coyotes are formidable foes. "You've heard the saying, 'Smart as a fox,'" Glenn said. "Well, compared to the coyote, the fox is dumb."

The sheep are easy targets, the ranchers say, with no instinct for fighting and no talent for running. When the coyotes kill them, Glenn and Enson are led to the slaughtered sheep by a circle of buzzards.

"Those ol' coyotes don't leave a very nice calling card, do they?" Glenn said, glancing skyward.

MIT safety rules probed

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — The federal government is investigating safety standards at a Massachusetts Institute of Technology lab after the firing of a machinist who said he worked on radioactive material for 112 hours without knowing it, a published report says.

Vincent Raulinaitis said he did not find out material he was working on was radioactive until another worker passed a geiger counter over his work bench, the Boston Sunday Globe said.

Raulinaitis, 58, was dismissed after 21 years at the MIT Laboratory of Nuclear Sciences for refusing to wear a clip-on badge designed to record radioactivity, the newspaper said.

Midlanders help ACU athletics to new heights

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

Abilene Christian University athletic officials feel the Wildcats are riding the crest of a new era in sports and they have started taking this gospel across the state to their alumni.

The touring ACU coaches stopped in Midland Monday for a golf tournament and barbecue at Midland Center to meet with the Permian Basin alumni.

It's easy to hold these kind of meetings after a year of great accomplishments and the ACU staff isn't taking the opportunity lightly.

In the space of two weeks, ACU track coach guided his Wildcats to the NAIA national track championship and the NCAA Division II title. And he had the help of a couple of Midlanders in that quest.

Sophomore David Simmons, the former Midland High shot put and state champion discus ace, placed third in the shot put and fourth in the discus in the NAIA meet and sixth in the discus and seventh in the shot put in the NCAA meet, and freshman Arthur Williams, the former Midland Lee sprint ace, won berths on both of ACU's relay teams and was a standout in the 200 meters.

"In the NCAA meet, David almost won the shot put with a throw of better than 60-feet, but lost his balance and stepped out of the ring," said Hood. "I expect him to be consistently at 200-feet in the discus and 60-feet in the shot put next year with a little more weight. I think he will be throwing with the best. An ankle injury hurt him some this year."

Williams tied Bobby Morrow's old ACU 200 meter record with a 20.6, two-tenths of a second better than the showing he had last year in the state meet as a senior at Lee.

"I just have the feeling that Arthur never ran as good as he is capable of," Hood noted. "If I could get him to run as enthusiastically in the mile relay as he does in the sprint relay, he would be turning in a sub 46 second leg, and I think he'll do it because he knows he needs work there. But there is no question that he is an outstanding athlete."

Hood will also gain Arthur's younger brother Darren this year. Darren set the District 5-5A 100 meter record with a 10.56 and later turned in a 10.4 in the Region I meet. "We are going to give Darren a shot at the leadoff position on the sprint relay team to replace Steve Parker, the only person we lost who scored points in our national championships," Hood stated.

Ted Sitton, the ACU headmaster in football, is coming off an 8-2 season, both losses by one touchdown to Texas A&I and Southwest Texas State, the national champion.

"The Lone Star Conference will be going the NCAA route this fall instead of the NAIA and we are looking forward to it," Sitton said. "The bunch we have didn't want to quit last fall when the season was over and they didn't want to go home when we finished the spring. We have 18 freshmen coming in on scholarship and will have talked 20 or more into coming out on their own this fall. The future looks very bright for us at ACU."

ACU basketball coach Mike Martin, who is coming off a 9-18 season, said, "You're keeping tall company when you talk about the football and track teams, but we want our basketball program to be the best in the nation too."

Among Martin's recruits are junior college standouts 6-3 Greg Johnson, 6-4 John Robinson and 6-4 Tony Turner. He has also landed 6-1 Darren Shoemeyer, who Martin claims is the No. 7 guard in Texas.

Martin did let one get away in Odessa Permian's 6-8 Mike Woolley, who has decided to go to Midland College after signing with ACU.

"I think Mike will probably go to Midland College now. We thought for a time like he would honor his committment with us, but I don't think so now," Martin said. "It's all part of the game and I wish Mike a lot of luck. But I admit it hurts when you spend a year signing a kid and then he changes his mind after the fact."

Lakers happy to be home

By JOHN NADEL
AP Sports Writer

LOS ANGELES (AP) — It was only a few days ago that the Los Angeles Lakers were being touted by many observers as one of the greatest teams in National Basketball Association history. Now, there are those who believe the Lakers have their backs against the wall.

The Lakers, with a 3-2 lead over Philadelphia in the best-of-seven NBA Championship Series, entertain the 76ers tonight in Game Six. The contest begins at 9 p.m., EDT.

The series moved back to Los Angeles because the 76ers rolled to a 135-102 triumph on their home court last Sunday. If the 76ers win tonight, a seventh game will be played at the Spectrum in Philadelphia Thursday night.

On the whole, the Lakers would rather not be in Philadelphia, at least not right now.

"It's going to be a heck of a basketball game because the Lakers are going to treat it like it's the seventh game," said Philadelphia Coach Billy Cunningham, speaking of tonight's contest. "They don't want to come back to Philly to play us."

Of course, the 76ers aren't too fond of playing the Lakers at the Forum, either. Los Angeles has won 40 of its 58 home games against Philadelphia over the years.

Philadelphia is trying to become the first team in the 36-year history of the NBA to win a Championship Series after trailing 3-1. As Lakers' guard Norm Nixon pointed out, the 76ers still have a lot to accomplish.

"Who's down 3-2?" asked Nixon after Game Five. "They have to win two games, we have to win one. They have to play two great games."

One 76er who played a great game Sunday was 6-foot-11 center Darryl Dawkins. However, about the only consistent thing about Dawkins seems to be his inconsistency.

Dawkins came off the bench to score 20 points, grab seven rebounds and play a key role as the 76ers held Los Angeles center Kareem Abdul-Jabbar to only six points. In Game Two of the Series, Dawkins played only eight minutes. He scored nine points, but picked up five fouls.

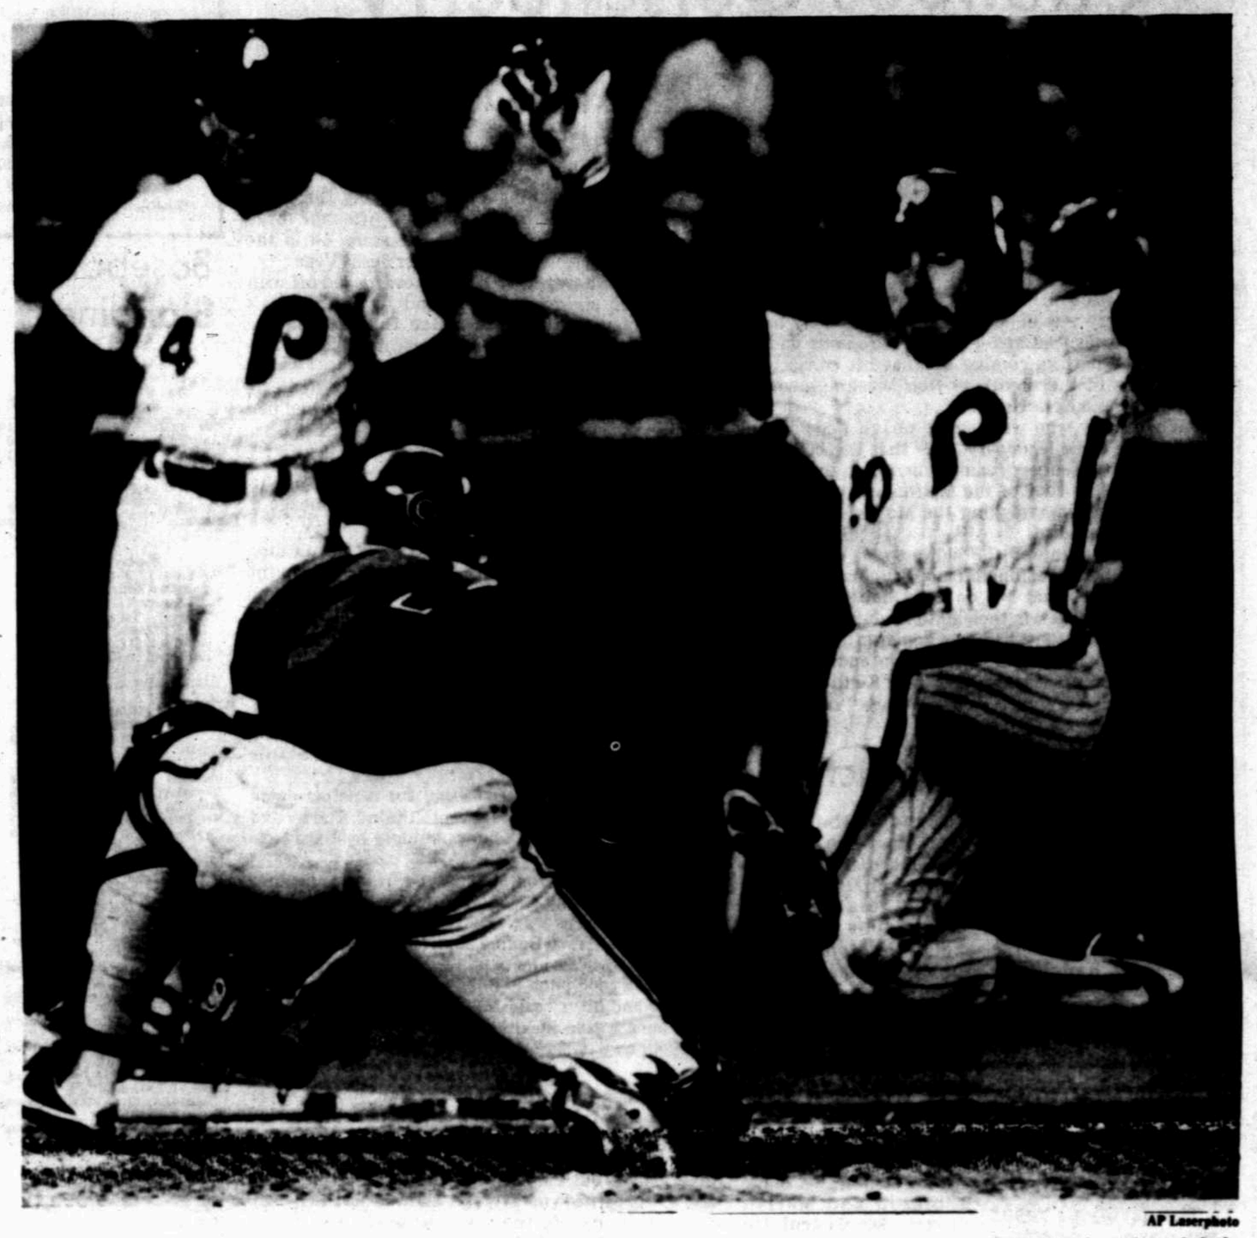

Abdul-Jabbar hadn't scored fewer than 11 points in his previous 109 playoff games. The last time the 35-year-old, six-time NBA most valuable player failed to score in double figures in any game was opening day of the 1977-78 season. He scored two points then before getting into a fight with Kent Benson and being ejected.

Asked about the 76ers' strategy against him Sunday, Abdul-Jabbar said, "They just pushed and shoved."

"Philadelphia just wasn't going to allow him the kind of position he had in the two games in L.A.," added Los Angeles Coach Pat Riley when asked about what happened Sunday. "They were doubling and tripling on him.

"He's been battling this for 13 years. He'll make the necessary adjustments for Tuesday."

If the Lakers win tonight, they'll equal the finest playoff record in league history. Los Angeles has an 11-2 mark; the best post-season record is 12-2 by the Milwaukee Bucks in 1971.

Owners say not to hang 'for sale' sign on Rockets

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Houston Rockets President Gavin Maloof says the Albuquerque family that owns the NBA team has received a number of purchase offers, but a sale of the team is not imminent.

"Nothing has come up we would like to take on," said Maloof, whose late father, George Maloof, purchased the Houston franchise three years ago.

Maloof added the team "definitely is not on the selling block."

Maloof's comments Monday were in reaction to statements attributed in Houston to Rockets General Manager Ray Patterson, who said there were four or five sources interested in purchasing the team.

Coleen Maloof, the wife of the late owner and a principal officer in the operations of the family's enterprises, said it would take an overly attractive offer for the Maloofs to consider selling the Rockets.

"George had an offer a week after he bought the team," she said Monday in Albuquerque. "An offer really has to be attractive."

In contrast to the statements by Gavin Maloof and his mother, Bud Reynolds, chief financial officer for the Maloof Companies, said the company is listening to offers.

"Because of the fact that we had a good gate this year, there have been a lot of inquiries," Reynolds said. "In any business, it's the management's prerogative to explore all options."

Reynolds said it was difficult to operate the Rockets from Albuquerque — home base for the Maloof businesses.

The Rockets currently are involved in high-stakes negotiations with center Moses Malone, who would become a free agent when the current NBA playoffs end. The Rockets reportedly have offered Malone a contract that would pay him up to $1.9 million annually.

"The increased activity (to purchase the team) probably is due to our success in winning the division title last year and our increased attendance this year," Patterson said.

"I assume there will be more discussions next week. If one of the parties concerned shows that it is really serious, then yes, there is a possibility that the club will be sold."

Patterson declined to name potential buyers "until there is something firm on the table."

Patterson said a potential buyer would benefit from an early decision before plans for next season are formulated.

"If I'm a buyer, I want to have a say in establishing season ticket prices and so forth," Patterson said.

Patterson repeated that the Rockets would sign Malone, also being sought by several other NBA teams.

"Other owners should not miscalculate the strength of the Maloofs," Patterson said. "Malone is going to be in Houston one way or the other. The Maloofs understand how much he means to the franchise and they are going to do what it takes to keep him here. They are always going to protect their assets."

George Maloof purchased the Rockets in 1979 for an estimated $9 million to $10 million.

Miami long ball beats Wichita

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Miami has counted on the home run ball all season and it paid off against Wichita State.

"We've counted on the long ball all season," said Miami Coach Ron Fraser after his team used three homers to beat No. 2-ranked Wichita State 4-3 in College World Series Monday night.

"I just wish we would have had somebody on when we hit them," Fraser added.

Third baseman Phil Lane, catcher Nelson Santovenia and designated hitter Sam Sorce belted solo homers to lift Miami into the winners' bracket final set for 7:10 p.m. CDT Thursday against the winner of Tuesday's Texas-Stanford game.

Wichita State, now 71-13, drops into the losers' bracket against Oklahoma State at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday night. That game precedes an elimination contest with Maine facing the loser of the Texas-Stanford game.

"Don (Heinkel) just threw a couple of bad pitches and as a result they hit the home runs," said Shocker Coach Gene Stephenson.

Lane said he caught a fast ball for his 24th homer of the season. Santovenia said his tenth homer of the season came off a hanging slider and Sorce said his 16th homer and the game-winner came off a changeup.

Lane's homer was his second of the tournament. He also lined a double off the left-field fence in the ninth.

"I'm relaxed," he said of his hitting success. "My concentration is good and the ball carries well here."

Fifth-ranked Miami also took advantage of three pickoff plays, including a trick play to catch all-American Phil Stephenson off first in the sixth.

Cubs pick high school shortstop with .790 batting average

NEW YORK (AP) — Shawon Dunston, a slugging shortstop from Thomas Jefferson High School in Brooklyn, N.Y., was the top choice Monday in the regular phase of baseball's summer free agent draft, selected and signed by the Chicago Cubs.

"I'm very, very happy, that's all I can really say," said Dunston.

Asked what he thought when the Cubs picked him No. 1, he said, "Why did they pick me No. 1 ahead of everybody else?"

Gordon Goldsberry, director of minor leagues and scouting for Chicago, offered an answer.

"We feel Shawon has above average tools," he said. "He can run, hit and throw and he's an outstanding young man in his community. We feel that in 3-4 years, Shawon will be challenging for a big-league position."

Dunston and most of his family was in the Manhattan office of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn to hear the Cubs officially draft him. Less than an hour later, the team held a press conference to unveil the 19-year-old youngster, who hit .790 this season.

"I've got to thank my family for all this," said Dunston. "They led me in the right direction. Everything they said must have been right, because here I am right now."

Dunston played third base for three years before shifting to shortstop this season. He has been clocked in 3.7 seconds from home plate to first base and was 37-for-37 in attempted steals in his senior season.

Dunston homered in his first at-bat in high school and hit 25 in four years. He batted .380 in his freshman season, .420 as a sophomore, and .450 as a junior.

After graduating from high school June 24, Dunston will report to Sarasota of the Gulf Coast League.

Toronto, drafting No. 2, also went for a shortstop, selecting August Schmidt of the University of New Orleans.

Four other shortstops went in the first round. Seattle picked Spike Owen of the University of Texas, Pittsburgh took Sammy Khalifa from Sahuaro High School in Tucson, Ariz., the Cubs chose Tony Woods of Whittier College and Milwaukee took Dale Sveum of Pinole Valley High School in Pinole Valley, Calif.

Twelve pitchers were picked in the first round, nine of them right-handers. Included in the group were Bryan Oelkers of Wichita State, whose 16-2 record was the best mark in the country. Oelkers was picked by Minnesota.

Jeff Ledbetter, the Florida State outfielder-first baseman who set NCAA records for home runs with 42 and runs batted in with 124, was the final choice of the first round, selected by Boston. The Red Sox were using a pick acquired from Oakland as compensation for the re-entry draft signing of Joe Rudi.

Cubs return to face Dodgers

Midland's Cubs launch a six-day homestand against the San Antonio Dodgers at 7:30 p.m. tonight in Cubs Stadium after splitting a six-game set with the Amarillo Gold Sox.

The Sox won the final game of the series, 6-2, Monday night at Amarillo as Midland muffed a golden opportunity to climb back into the Texas League West first half pennant race.

San Antonio cleaned house on league-leading El Paso to climb within a 1½ games of the leaders, but Midland, while managing to continue to flirt with the .500 mark, slipped out of first half contention.

Louis Quinones and Mike Davis hit solo homers off Midland starter Dave Welenc, 6-5, in the first inning and then Mike Martin won it, as it turned out, in the third with a bases loaded two-run single. Martin also had an rbi single in the seventh.

Midland's only runs came on a rbi double by Carmelo Martinez in the sixth and a tainted run in the seventh when Mike Diaz fly ball was lost in the lights and fell for a triple and the Midland catcher scored on Javier Fierro's grounder to short.

NFL money talks begin

WASHINGTON (AP) — The National Football League and the union representing its players will focus on a proposal to have all players paid through a fund deriving its monies from a fixed percentage of each team's gross revenues when contract negotiations resume today.

Under the plan outlined on Monday, the National Football League Players Association is seeking 55 percent of owners' gross revenues.

Jack Donlan, chief negotiator for the owners, reserved the right to comment on the specifics of the plan until the NFL Management Council had an opportunity to review the document.

But he did labeled the demands "disappointing, if not surprising."

"They know how we feel about a percentage of the gross, but sometimes there is a germ of an idea in any proposal that you can build on," he said.

Despite Donlan's cool reaction and the owners' previously stated distaste for sharing revenues with the players, union negotiators appeared pleased with Monday's developments.

"We got our point across during a give-and-take discussion without yelling across the table. It was the first real, positive step we have taken," said Detroit Lions' player representative Stan White.

The compensation fund would be drawn each spring from the anticipated revenues of each of the league's 28 teams.

Distribution of the fund would include 70 percent for base wages; 15.2 percent for incentive bonuses, including top performers, pro bowl selection, team performance and downs played; and 4.5 percent consisting of a playoff pool.

The remaining 10.3 percent would be placed in a residual pool to cover salary adjustments for previously negotiated contracts over proposed scale, administrative costs and severance pay.

Angry Cromartie helps Expos gain on Cardinals

By DENNIS D'AGOSTINO
Associated Press Writer

It took an angry young man to nudge the Montreal Expos just a little closer to the front-running St.Louis Cardinals in the National League East.

Warren Cromartie — the not-so-proud possessor of a .211 average — led off the ninth inning of a 2-2 game Monday night facing St.Louis bullpen ace Bruce Sutter. As .211 hitters are wont to do, he was not happy with his recent performence.

"It wasn't frustration or a lack of hustle," said Cromartie. "It was just anger at myself."

It didn't take much to make Cromartie happy, though. He belted Sutter's first pitch over the right-center field wall for the game-winning homer as the Expos beat the Cards, 3-2, to move to within 3½-games of first-place St.Louis.

In other National League games, Atlanta beat Los Angeles 4-3; San Diego nipped Cincinnati 6-5; Philadelphia topped Chicago 7-5 and Pittsburgh beat New York 4-3 in 12 innings.

"I've been getting inspiration from my teammates, family and friends," said Cromartie, who hit .304 last season. "It's just a matter of me putting it all together."

The Cards stranded 11 baserunners, leaving Manager Whitey Herzog none too pleased.

"We never were ahead," said Herzog. "We had our chances early and we couldn't do anything with them. But it was a good game. We battled to the wire."

Ray Burris, 1-7, got the victory in relief for Montreal.

Braves 4, Dodgers 3

Dale Murphy belted his league-leading 17th homer — a three-run, seventh-inning shot of reliever Tom Niedenfuer — to pace the Braves' victory, which enabled first-place Atlanta to maintain a 1½-game lead over San Diego in the NL West.

The Dodger defeat did not diminish the feat of first baseman Steve Garvey, who played in his 1,000th consecutive game.

"It's a source of pride to be able to produce every day of my contract, almost every inning,"" said the 33-year old Garvey, owner of the fifth-longest consecutive-game playing streak in major league history.

Veteran knuckleball artist Phil Niekro, 4-2, got the victory for Atlanta. Steve Bedrosian picked up his third save.

Padres 6, Reds 5

Garry Templeton's two-run single ignited a five-run Padre third inning outburst, lifting Chris Welsh to his fourth victory against one defeat.

The Padres once held a 6-2 lead, but the Reds scored three late runs before Luis DeLeon came on in the ninth for his third save.

"I lost my concentration," said Welsh. "I figured we were cruising and there was no way they were going to score four runs in two innings.

"I've got to keep on myself and tell myself when we get in the eighth or ninth inning that we're playing twelve innings to fool myself."

The Padres sent 11 men to the plate during their five-run inning as nine consecutive hitters reached base off Reds' starter Greg Harris, 2-1, and reliever Charlie Leibrandt.

Phillies 7, Cubs 5

Manny Trillo's infield single scored pinch-runner Luis Aguayo from second base with the winning run in the eighth inning as the Phillies beat the Cubs, who absorbed their eighth straight defeat.

Bo Diaz and Garry Maddox singled off Cub reliever Lee Smith, 1-1, to start the winning rally, with Aguayo running for Diaz after Maddox' hit. On a double steal attempt, Trillo hit a hot smash deep to the hole between first and second, and Aguayo scored from second base, beating Bump Wills' relay throw. The Phils added an insurance run later in the inning on Cub shortstop Larry Bowa's error.

Phillies' slugger Mike Schmidt, hobbled by injuries so far this year, belted his fourth home run of the season and also scored three times.

Pirates 4, Mets 3

Bill Madlock's RBI single in the 12th inning off Mets' reliever Neil Allen scored Lee Lacy with the winning run as the Pirates won their fifth game out of their last six.

"We are now five games below the .500 mark, and we're going to reach that spot (.500) very soon," said Pirate Manager Chuck Tanner.

Cautious Quisenberry cools off hot Twin bats

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

How does Kansas City's ace reliever Dan Quisenberry pitch to the heart of the Minnesota Twins' lineup?

"Very, very carefully," he says — particularly when he's pitching in the Hubert H. Humphrey Metrodome in Minneapolis.

Quisenberry was in such a situation Monday night, with the Royals leading 5-4 in the 11th inning and the same three batters coming up that hit consecutive home runs in the eighth — Ron Washington, Tom Brunansky and Kent Hrbek.

"When I saw who was coming up, all I could think about were those legendary 'fans' that I've been hearing about," Quisenberry said, referring to the blowers which keep the roof of the Metrodome up and have been charged with making the Metrodome a home run hitter's paradise.

Quisenberry ignored the blowers and instead blew the ball by both Washington and Brunansky, then got Hrbek for the final out on a fly ball to left field, helping the Royals win their sixth straight game.

Hrbek, incidentally, had hit a homer off Quisenberry in that explosive eighth. Washington and Brunansky hit their blasts off Kansas City starter Keith Creel.

"Hrbek has very good plate coverage," said Quisenberry. "Most players hit a zone — but not him. He's interesting."

The Twins were losing 4-0 before tying the game with four runs in the last two innings. After the three homers in the eighth, they tied the game 4-4 in the ninth on an RBI single by pinch-hitter Jesus Vega.

Then in the Kansas City 11th, Amos Otis led off with a single. He was forced at second by Hal McRae's fielder's-choice grounder. McRae then scored the Royals' winning run when Jerry Martin singled to center and Brunansky misplayed the ball.

Quisenberry evened his record at 2-2. Pete Redfern, 2-7, making his first appearance out of the bullpen after nine starts, was the loser.

White Sox 6, A's 5

Bill Almon's bases-loaded single in the 11th inning scored Harold Baines from third to give Chicago a comeback victory over Oakland.

Baines led off the 11th with a single and Carlton Fisk, who earlier hit two successive homer to help the White Sox wipe out a 5-0 deficit, doubled to send Baines to third. Marv Foley was walked intentionally before Almon lined his game-winning single.

Kevin Hickey, 2-1, was the winner and Dave Beard, 4-3, the loser.

Mariners 6, Rangers 0

Gene Nelson pitched a brilliant two-hitter, allowing only those two Texas runners to reach base, as Seattle beat the Rangers.

Buddy Bell spoiled Nelson's bid for a pefect game with a two-out single in the seventh inning. The second hit off Nelson, 3-7, was a one-out single by Dave Hostetler in the eighth.

Texas left-hander Jon Matlack, 1-4, retired the first 12 Seattle hitters, but Richie Zisk opened the fifth with a single, Al Cowens walked and Todd Cruz singled to load the bases. Terry Bulling's single drove in Zisk and Cowens for a 2-0 Mariner lead.

"I threw a good pitch to Buddy Bell and he just went out there and hit it," said Nelson, who struck out five. "Then once I gave up the hit I just decided, well, go pitch your own game."

Orioles 7, Brewers 2

Jim Palmer hurled a five-hitter and Benny Ayala capped a four-run fifth inning with a two-run homer, leading Baltimore over Milwaukee.

The Brewers had scored 28 runs in their previous three games, but Palmer, 3-3, who entered the game with a 6.02 earned run average, allowed just Ben Oglivie's 11th homer in the seventh inning and Robin Yount's sixth in the ninth.

Leading 2-0, the Orioles put the game away in the fifth. Rick Dempsey led off with a double and took third on a single by Lenn Sakata. Both runners scored on a double by Rich Dauer. Two outs later, Ayala hit his fourth homer of the season to chase Mike Caldwell, 3-5.

Blue Jays 7, Indians 3

Willie Upshaw belted his sixth and seventh homers of the season, including an inside-the-park shot in the third inning, to lift Toronto over Cleveland.

Toronto right-hander Luis Leal, 5-3, scattered six hits, walked three and struck out four. Cleveland's John Denny, 3-6, surrendered all seven Toronto runs in five innings.

Casey leads golf action

Abilene golfer Judy Casey won medalist honors in the qualifying round of the 47th annual Women's West Texas Golf Association tournament with an 18-hole score of 71 Monday at Ranchland Hills Country Club.

Juanita Jones of Amarillo shot a 75 to win the senior medalist title (50 and over) and the mother/daughter duo of Sharon and Penny Hughes of Farwell won the Founders Team Trophy.

The qualifying round was played to determine the flights for the 144 golfers entered in the tournament with the championship flight cut-off at 81. There was a seven way tie for the final six of 16 championship slots, so one golfer was dropped down to first flight.

Match play for the tournament title will begin today and will conclude on Friday.

Of the 29 Midlanders entered in the tournament, four have qualified for the championship flight. Those four are: Nancy Coalter with a 79 and Kelle Mobley, Liz Norton and Ann Combes all with 80's.

Margaret Vann, Clara Christy and Jo Dickson topped the first flight Midlanders with each golfer shooting 82. Here are the results of the remaining Tall City golfers and there scores:

Nina Coalter, 84; Mary Robinson and Marian Spears, 86; Charolette Marburger, 88; Jane Thomas, 90; Dede Plank, Martha Pritchett and Sandy Wilkenson, 91; Sylvia Roberts, 92; Retha Peterson and Ova Smith, 93; Alice Bullard, 94; Helen Brant, 96; Dot Haden and Ella Heath, 97; Betty Cobb and Donna Winborn, 98; Betty Howell and Judy Hunnicutt, 99; Sylvia Alvarado and Glenda Howard, 101; Shirley Mays, 104.

Dodgers pull off late rally, gain on Diablos

By The Associated Press

Lemmie Miller and Todd Gauntlet drove in two runs in the bottom of the ninth inning to give the San Antonio Dodgers a 3-2 come-from-behind Texas League baseball victory over the El Paso Diablos.

In other games Monday night, Arkansas whipped Shreveport, 11-1, and Jackson swept a doubleheader from Tulsa, 6-3 and 7-6.

Tom Klawitter, 4-3, was the winning hurler for the Dodgers. David Grier was the loser.

Jose Gonzalez, Jim Adduci and Greg Guin each had two-run doubles as the Arkansas Travelers took an easy 11-1 victory over the Shreveport Captains.

The big inning for Arkansas was in the fifth when the Travelers sent 12 men to the plate and scored six runs.

Ricky Horton, 4-6, was the winning pitcher. The loser was Chuck Lusted, 1-4.

The Jackson Mets scored three runs in the top of the 11th inning to take a 6-3 victory over the Tulsa Drillers in the first game of their doubleheader.

The Mets had the bases loaded and one out when Ronn Reynolds hit an easy one-bouncer to pitcher Tom Henke, who threw out the runner attempting to score from third.

TV makes USFL, breaks AFA

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — The newly organized United States Football League may not pose a threat to the National Football League, but Billy Kilmer says it could signal the death of the league he once headed.

Kilmer said the USFL threatened the American Football Association when it signed a two-year $20 million contract with ABC-TV.

"The USFL will kill off that league," said Kilmer. "When ABC jumped in, it gave the USFL instant recognition."

The lack of recognition was the albatross Kilmer carried during one futile season as AFA commissioner. When the 1981 season concluded last August, Kilmer resigned. The league played a May-August schedule, similar to the USFL's March-July plan to avoid a confrontation with the NFL.

Kilmer said he quit because he was not getting paid and the league didn't supply funds to run a commissioner's office. Kilmer, 17 years an NFL quarterback, has snipped his ties to football and plans to move to Dallas in a few weeks to work for a bank.

The AFA operated on a shoestring budget, with players paid one percent of the gate, said Kilmer.

"Sometimes attendance was so small players were paid nothing," he said. "Others got a check for $20."

Cable and local stations weren't interested in televising games. Another problem was that most of the teams were in the south and southwest. And the big-name players were little-known Jerry Golsteyn and littler-known Rod Gerald.

The league expanded from 12 to 18 teams this season with new franchises in Buffalo, N.Y., and Canton, Ohio, but little has changed.

Kilmer said he thinks the USFL will flourish — and destroy the AFA — because it has the television contract, which he claimed will probably attract gamblers.

"If somebody bets $5 on a game, he's going to watch it on television," said Kilmer. "That's what's going to make it (succeed)."

He said a betting line on USFL games would be insurance the league could survive at least the life of its contract with ABC.

"That's what really made the NFL — because television helped make it credible and people bet on it," Kilmer said.

The league has already attracted former New England Patriots Coach Chuck Fairbanks to be head coach, part-owner and president of the New York franchise. The league doesn't have any players yet, but Kilmer doesn't think that will be a problem.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

China to host international meet

(Compiled from R-T Wires)

Conquistador Cielo, a 14½-length winner of Satruday's Belmont Stakes, is the first 3-year-old stakes horse to receive an invitation to the $500,000 Super Derby III scheduled for Sept. 25 at Louisiana Downs.

France beat the Philippines 70-42 for its first victory Monday in third-day games of the William Jones Cup Women's Basketball Tournament. In other matches, Sweden trounced Thailand 100-31 and Taiwan's Kuanghua team overpowered Hong Kong 95-41 for its second triumph, while Hong Kong suffered its second defeat...

China has invited its old rival, the Soviet Union, and eight other counties to compete in a track and field meet June 18-20 in Peking, the official Xinhua news agency reported Monday.

Britain's leading bookmakers agreed Monday in naming Brazil as favorite to win soccer's World Cup. Brazil was quoted at 2-1, meaning that for every pound bet on that country the bettor will receive two pounds if it wins.

Next came West Germany, quoted at 4-1, and Spain, 6-1. Some bookmakers bracketed Argentina and England together at 10-1; others gave Argentina a slight edge. Then came Russia, 11-1; Italy, 18-1; and France, 25-1.

At the bottom of the list were Algeria, Cameroon and Hondouras. If one of those countries should win the World Cup, you'd win 2,000 pounds for every pound staked.

The St. Louis Cardinals placed outfielder Steve Braun on the 15-day disabled list Monday because of a sore shoulder.

To replace Braun on the roster, the Cerdinals called up right-handed relief pitcher Jeff Keener from the Arkansas Travelers, their Texas League affiliate. Keener had a 4-3 record with the Travelers with six saves and a 2.68 ERA in 24 games. He was a sixth-round selection in the regular phase of the June 1981 free-agent draft. As a senior at the University of Kentucky, Keener set an all-time NCAA ERA record of 0.57...

Britain again appeals to Argentina to surrender

By The Associated Press

Britain made another appeal for surrender to the Argentine garrison at Port Stanley as its troops captured high ground north of the Falklands capital and closed the ring on some 7,000 Argentine troops.

"In another jump forward, marine commandos have outflanked the Argentines north of Stanley," reported Michael Nicholson of Britain's Independent Television News. "Strong British positions have now been established on the mountains.... British sea and land forces control and move freely along the northern waters of East Falkland and large quantities of stores, guns, ammunition and men have been moved up there."

In London the Defense Ministry said the British troops, believed to number 7,500, were "consolidating" their position and "patrolling forward territory."

Argentina said its patrols routed British units laying siege to Stanley and seized abandoned equipment for the second straight day. An Argentine communique also claimed anti-aircraft fire drove off three British Harrier jets attacking Stanley, and "one of the planes was observed trailing heavy smoke."

The Argentines also said the two forces exchanged artillery fire Monday, but the communique did not mention damage or casualties.

With the British assault on Stanley expected at any time, Maj. Gen. Jeremy Moore, the marine commander of the British ground forces, called on the Argentine governor of the islands, Brig. Gen. Mario Menendez, to surrender and "end the killing."

Moore radioed Menendez on a VHF transmitter, using a Spanish-speaking British captain as interpreter, Press Association, Britain's domestic news agency reported.

There was no indication of a reply from Menendez. But he had already said his troops "will fight to the last man and the last bullet." Twice last week British planes dropped leaflets over Stanley urging the Argentines troops to give up.

British Defense Ministry spokesman Ian McDonald said British soldiers and Gurkha mercenaries from Nepal were clearing out "Argentine pockets of resistance" inland from Stanley.

The British news agency said government sources reported as many as 60 Argentine soldiers were killed over the past five days in clashes with the British patrols, but this was not confirmed officially.

The Defense Ministry said Argentine warplanes bombed British ground forces around Stanley on Monday, but there were no casualties. The ministry announced that a British Gazelle scout helicopter crashed Saturday, killing four men and bringing to 142 the number of British lives lost in the battle for the Falklands.

In Buenos Aires, foreign diplomats and military attaches told The Associated Press that Argentina is getting replacements for the military equipment it is losing in the war from Israel, Peru, Venezuela and the black market, mainly in Libya.

An Argentine with high military and political connections confirmed this, saying, "We are buying everything we need."

The sources said since it invaded the Falklands April 2, Argentina has bought at least 24 surplus American-made A4 Skyhawk jet fighters from Israel plus an unspecified number of Daggers, the Israeli version of the French Mirage jet fighter.

Argentina also has partially replenished its supply of French-made Exocet missiles in Libya, one attache said, but has had to pay up to $1 million per missile, a 500 percent markup. This source said Saudi Arabia has coordinated clandestine deliveries of other types of missiles to Argentina.

Sources said Peru also is supplying Skyhawks and Mirages while Venezuela is supplying spare parts and fuel for the planes.

Administration to defer sanctions against Israel

By BARRY SCHWEID

WASHINGTON (AP) — Top Reagan administration officials have decided to defer any U.S. sanctions against Israel while special mediator Philip Habib tries to restore the shattered cease-fire in Lebanon and persuade Prime Minister Menachem Begin to withdraw his troops.

Meeting for an hour Monday at the White House, the crisis group headed by Vice President George Bush reviewed intelligence reports and concluded that the best approach for the United States is to back Habib's on-the-scene diplomacy, sources said.

"There will be no cutting of military or economic assistance to Israel in retaliation," a source quoted Bush as informing a Republican senator.

The vice president was joined in the meeting by Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger, U.N. ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick, Director William Casey of the Central Intelligence Agency, Gen. David Jones, chairman of the joint chiefs of staff, and other top officials.

Their recommendations — to stress diplomacy rather than harsh action against Israel — were relayed to President Reagan in London where he was meeting with Queen Elizabeth and Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher.

"We are depending on Ambassador Habib as our man on the spot," Peter Teeley, the vice president's spokesman, said. "We are for a cease-fire and a withdrawal."

Earlier, other sources said there was considerable sympathy for Israel as the target of Palestinian attacks, but that several officials were angered by the invasion and wanted to consider U.S. sanctions to force a withdrawal.

On Capitol Hill, Rep. Toby Roth, R-Wis., declared "a complete suspension of aid to Israel would certainly be justified on our part."

Rep. Paul Findley, R-Ill., condemned the invasion and said it "is going to make it all the more difficult for compromise to occur."

Sen. Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md., agreed. "The many deaths on both sides of the Lebanese border will embitter the blood feud and the hatred that stand in the way of peace," he said.

According to one account, Israel risked a suspension in delivery of U.S. weapons or foreign aid if it did not withdraw within 48 hours of Habib's first meeting Monday with Begin.

Another source, who asked not to be identified, said Israel's drive against the Palestine Liberation Organization did not take the administration by surprise.

Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon told Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. here late last month that "if one more Jew is killed the Israelis will move in," the source said.

Israel invaded after Shlomo Argov, the Israeli ambassador to London, was shot. He survived, but is in critical condition. The PLO denied any responsibility for the attack.

Meanwhile, defense officials said a five-ship Navy amphibious group with about 1,800 Marines aboard has been ordered to the eastern Mediterranean where it could be used to evacuate Americans from Lebanon.

Other U.S. military officials said they seriously doubted that the invasion would lead to a major Mideast war.

Although U.S. intelligence sources reported that the Syrians had increased their anti-aircraft defenses in Lebanon and moved troops southward from the strategic Bekaa Valley, U.S. military specialists said they believe the Syrians will not risk a full-scale battlefield confrontation with the powerful Israeli army.

Israeli ambassador Moshe Arens told reporters Israel was "well on the way" of achieving its single objective of pushing Palestinian forces far enough back in Lebanon so they could no longer shell villagers.

Bush's special situation group held its first, unannounced meeting on Saturday in the White House situation room. Participants included Weinberger, Casey, Mrs. Kirkpatrick and presidential counselor Edwin Meese III. Meese has since joined Reagan in Europe.

The vice president also received a telephone call Saturday from Terence Cardinal Cooke, the Roman Catholic archbishop of New York. Spokesman Teeley said the churchman "expressed his concern over possible loss of life" but suggested no specific U.S. course.

Bush spoke with Reagan last weekend, and the president sent letters to Begin and other Middle East leaders to urge restraint.

Presumably, the United States is indirectly in touch with the PLO, as it was in arranging the now-shattered cease-fire last July. Alan Romberg, the State Department spokesman, said only that "we have been in touch with all governments and quarters."

He called for both an Israeli withdrawal and a cessation of the PLO's use of Lebanon as a launch-pad for attacks on Israel.

Douglas Bloomfield, legislative director of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee, said there were more than 100 instances of PLO violations of the cease-fire and more than 1,000 shells were hurled at Israeli villages on Saturday, the Jewish Sabbath, before the invasion.

Twice last year the administration took punitive steps against Israel.

Delivery of jet fighters was suspended during the summer after Iraq's nuclear reactor was bombed. Then, in December, a strategic cooperation agreement was shelved after Israel annexed the Golan Heights.

The planes were eventually delivered, and the Pentagon recently announced it intends to sell Israel an additional 11 F-15 fighters and, later, 75 additional F-16s.

British Parliament cheers Reagan

By MICHAEL PUTZEL

LONDON (AP) — President Reagan won cheers from members of Parliament today for a ringing defense of Britain's fight for the Falkland Islands and a challenge to Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev to address Americans on television, on condition that "he will allow me the same opportunity with the Soviet people."

Reagan also publicly urged Irsael to "bring its forces home" from Lebanon. But he offered Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin some succor in the war against Palestinian guerrillas by saying, "We must all work to stamp out the scourge of terrorism that in the Middle East makes war an ever-present threat."

Proposing a worldwide promotional campaign for liberty and democracy, Reagan offered Brezhnev television exposure in the United States and suggested a periodic exchange of television news commentary, to invite Soviet participation in a peaceful "competition for ideas and values."

Such an exchange of television speeches by U.S. and Soviet leaders would renew a practice established by Brezhnev and former President Nixon, who made an unprecedented address broadcast from the Kremlin after a summit meeting in Moscow in May 1972.

Brezhnev was accorded the same privilege when he spoke from Nixon's California home at San Clemente during his visit to the United States in June 1973. Nixon spoke again on Soviet radio and television after his final Moscow summit in July 1974.

Reagan addressed parliamentarians in the 120-year-old Royal Gallery of the Houses of Parliament, speaking from a blue-carpeted dais underneath portraits of British monarchs. Many Laborites, opposed to Reagan's nuclear policy and support for right-wing governments, were absent. The president's audience totaled only about one-third of the 1,813 members of the House of Commons and House of Lords.

REAGAN TOLD reporters later he had received "a very heartwarming welcome. I was most gratified."

As Reagan left the chamber for lunch with British Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher at 10 Downing St., a group of women peace demonstrators with blackened faces shouted "Reagan Out." It was not known whether the president noticed them in the crowd of 400 people.

Another group of about 40 demonstrators shouted and waved their fists as the Reagans arrived at the prime minister's residence to dine on lobster, beef and strawberries. When Reagan's motorcade drove up, it was on the righthand side of Downing Street — the wrong side in Britain.

The parliamentarians, who could be expected to maintain a dignified reserve during a world leader's speech, interrupted Reagan with applause twice — once when he proposed dual television appearances with Brezhnev and again, more vigorously, when he defended Britain's battle in the Falklands.

Reagan said British forces were fighting for more than "lumps of rock and earth so far away."

"Those young men aren't fighting for mere real estate. They fight for a cause, for the belief that armed aggression must not be allowed to succeed, and that people must participate in the decisions of government under the rule of law," Reagan declared.

"If there had been firmer support for that principle some 45 years ago," Reagan added, "perhaps our generation wouldn't have suffered the bloodletting of World War II."

IN HIS SPEECH, which was devoted primarily to hailing the attributes of democracy and denouncing totalitarianism, Reagan said the world's democratic nations have been too shy in promoting their own strengths.

"Let us be shy no longer," Reagan said. "Let us go to our strength. Let us offer hope. Let us tell the world that a new age is not only possible but probable.

"What I am describing now," he said, "is a plan and a hope for the long term — the march of freedom and democracy which will leave Marxism-Leninism on the ash heap of history as it has left other tyrannies which stifle the freedom and muzzle the self-expression of the people."

Reagan's speech followed a wave of criticism in Britain — particularly in the press — over a U.S. voting flip-flop in the United Nations on Friday. The United States at first joined the British in vetoing a Security Council resolution calling for a cease-fire in the Falklands, but then announced it had intended to abstain instead. It was too late to change the vote, but the move angered Britain.

The president also chided the news media for what he called its sparse coverage of the Salvadoran war since "the real freedom fighters of El Salvador turned out to be the people of that country, the young, the old and the in-between" who went to the polls in droves to elect the right-wing adversaries of the Central American country's guerrilla movement.

"Perhaps they'll say it's because there are newer struggles now," Reagan said of the news media. "On distant shores in the South Atlantic, young men are fighting for freedom."

REAGAB'S ADDRESS followed a leisurely horseback ride with Queen Elizabeth II outside Windsor Castle, about 40 miles away.

Reagan also planned more discussions with Mrs. Thatcher over the crisis in the South Atlantic and other world trouble spots.

The talks with Thatcher were occurring with British troops poised for a final assault to regain the Falkland Islands, taken by Argentina on April 2. The British commander on the islands Monday urged the surrender of the surrounded Argentine stronghold at Port Stanley, according to the British domestic news agency Press Association.

At the White House, meanwhile, Vice President George Bush met with top administration officials and decided to put aside any threat of imposing U.S. sanctions against Israel for its invasion of Palestinian strongholds in southern Lebanon, prompted in part by the shooting of the Israeli ambassador to London last week, while pursuing a diplomatic solution.

The group's recommendation to back special envoy Philip Habib's efforts to arrange a cease-fire and Israeli withdrawal from Lebanon was being relayed to Reagan, who was beginning the seventh day of his fast-paced European journey, which concludes Friday.

AS IF INTERNATIONAL tension spots and his hectic travel schedule weren't enough, Reagan also was confronted with an outburst against America's participation in the United Nations delivered in New York on Monday by his U.N. ambassador, Jeane Kirkpatrick.

Describing the United States' "unhappy fall from influence to impotence," Mrs. Kirkpatrick contended, "We simply have behaved like a bunch of amateurs."

When asked about Mrs. Kirkpatrick's speech to the Heritage Foundation, deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes, traveling with the president, said, "No comment."

In an exchange of gifts, the Reagans gave Prince Charles and Princess Diana, who is expecting their first child at the end of June, a baby quilt made in Kentucky and a pair of bamboo salmon rods. They gave the queen and Philip a bronze statue of an American racehorse and a special edition of a book on champion racehorses.

Hinckley had no delusions about relationship with Foster, doctor says

By LARRY MARGASAK

WASHINGTON (AP) — John W. Hinckley Jr., the man who shot President Reagan, had no delusions about his one-sided relationship with actress Jodie Foster and suspected that she considered him a "poor little twerp," a psychiatrist says.

Dr. Park Elliott Dietz, a psychiatrist called by the prosecution, said Monday that Hinckley "recognized throughout the relationship (with Miss Foster) was one-sided."

Dietz, a Harvard Medical School professor, testifies again today, his third day on the witness stand.

On Monday, the psychiatrist described Hinckley as a man who "controlled his conduct, decided what to do and carried out his goals. ...This is not a man who is wild, but a man who chooses the precise moment when the time is right."

That assessment contrasted with the view offered earlier by defense psychiatrists who described Hinckley as an insane man, driven to shoot Reagan by his fantasy of achieving eternal love with Miss Foster.

Hinckley has acknowledged shooting Reagan and three other men outside the Washington Hilton Hotel on March 30, 1981, but he contends he is innocent because he was insane at the time.

Dietz, who has testified in hundreds of trials where the defendant raised the insanity defense, spoke steadily and without emotion during the friendly questioning by chief prosecutor Roger M. Adelman.

Hinckley's mood shifted during the day. He displayed a wide grin in the morning session, but by afternoon he appeared edgy during the unfavorable testimony.

He covered his eyes, shifted in his seat and tapped his knuckles on the defense table, gestures that in the past have preceeded his asking to leave the courtroom. But Monday, he stayed.

He heard Dietz debunk testimony of psychiatrists who testified in his behalf. The defense experts said Hinckley believed Miss Foster would be willing to enter a "magical union" with him after he impressed her by shooting Reagan.

Dietz agreed that Hinckley was trying to impress the actress, but said the defendant never had a delusion — a fixed, false idea — that she would ever love him.

"He knew all along it was not going to work out," Dietz said, and cited a poem of Hinckley's written after Miss Foster brushed off his letters and phone calls.

Hinckley wrote, "Even a phone conversation seems to be too much. I really can't blame you for ignoring a poor little twerp like me."

At most, Dietz told Adelman, Hinckley "had unrealistic hopes" of getting to know a movie star, a "not uncommon" feeling.

Q. What's that called?

A. That's called being a dreamer.

Dietz said Hinckley wanted to gain "fame and notoriety" by shooting the president.

He quoted Hinckley as bragging in one psychiatric interview, "Actually, I should feel good that I accomplished everything on a grand scale."

"His goal of becoming famous is not related to a mental disorder," Dietz said. "It does relate to a narcissistic personality disorder," characterized by a grandiose sense of self-importance.

Discussing Miss Foster, Dietz said Hinckley told him "she's getting a lot of publicity out of this. She's an actress and they are not exactly publicity-shy. I'm the best thing that happened to her career."

Friday, Dietz said Hinckley suffers from narcissism and other personality disorders, none of which are considered severe mental illness.
