Baker Urges Special Hostage Strike Force

CONCORD, N.H. (AP) — Senate Minority Leader Howard Baker said Wednesday a get-tough policy is needed to protect American embassies and suggested the creation of a special 50,000-member military unit to accomplish that.

"As dangerous as the situation is in Iran, the real danger to this country is the growing impression throughout the world that you can push on Uncle Sam and nothing ever happens in return," the Tennessee Republican said during a campaign stop here.

The GOP presidential aspirant proposed the creation of "America's First Brigade." He said it would be composed of 50,000 highly skilled American military personnel, specially trained in anti-terrorist, anti-hijack and anti-kidnap techniques. It would serve as an extension of the Marine guard at American installations around the world.

"Such a unit would serve notice on the world, not that the United States had aggressive intentions or was reverting to gunboat diplomacy, but rather that we are determined to protect our own," Baker said. "It's a long time since a Russian embassy was invaded or hostages were taken."

He said the troops "would be stationed around the world in locations where their high mobility would take them to places where they needed to be in a hurry," the senator said.

Baker said the key would be a president who would trigger their deployment. "You must have a president who is willing to do that," he said. "You can't do it weeks later; you have to do it immediately."

Baker said if the unit existed, he doubted that the U.S. embassy in Pakistan would have been attacked last month.

"You would have diminished the likelihood of the assault on our embassy in Pakistan had there been such a force and had it been known that it was highly mobile and deployed in a position so it was a practical reinforcement to the Marine guard," Baker said.

U.N. Holds 'Intensive' Iran Talks

Senate Passes Chrysler Loan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed a $1.5 billion federal loan guarantee for the Chrysler Corp. Wednesday night raising hopes that aid for the beleaguered automaker can clear Congress as early as today.

Final Senate passage of the measure, on a 53-44 vote, came after a day of debate in which supporters were forced to accept higher employee wage concessions to avoid a filibuster.

The Senate bill calls upon United Auto Workers members employed by Chrysler to make $525 million worth of wage concessions as part of a total aid package of $3.6 billion from public and private sources.

The version passed by the House Tuesday totals $3.43 billion and calls for $400 million in concessions by the UAW members. Both bills provide $1.5 billion in federal loan guarantees.

The size of the wage sacrifice is expected to be the toughest problem among several differences that a House-Senate conference committee will have to resolve. Chrysler, its workers and the Carter administration have been working to have a bill through Congress by Friday when lawmakers begin a month-long recess.

Chrysler, which lost $721.5 million in the first nine months of 1979, says it faces bankruptcy if the federal aid package is not passed by the end of the year.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd of West Virginia said he had called Treasury Secretary G. William Miller shortly before the vote and told him the chances "were good, were excellent" that Congress would complete work on the bill and send it to President Carter today.

But UAW president Douglas Fraser rejected the $525 million in wage concessions contained in the Senate bill, saying the figure was "too high; we couldn't handle it."

The wage concessions were approved by senators on a 69-28 vote after the Senate at first on Wednesday had voted 54-43 for an aid package totaling $1.25 billion in guarantees and wage concessions totalling $400 million.

Weicker Objects

Senators agreed to undo this action after Sen. Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., said he "saw no possibility under the circumstances of any vote" on the issue until Saturday at the earliest.

"We got the message very quickly that we were facing a filibuster that would go on for a very long time," said Sen. Donald W. Riegle Jr., D-Mich., a chief supporter of Chrysler aid.

The compromise that the Senate adopted was worked out in a series of meetings of senators who have played prominent roles in the Chrysler dispute.

Sen. Richard Lugar, R-Ind., who had planned to push for a $800 million union contribution, played a key role in working out the compromise.

Split Difference

Lugar said it was "clearly the thought" of those at the meeting to propose splitting the difference between the House and Senate wage concession figures in the conference committee.

Riegle, however, said there had been "no agreement as to what might happen in conference." He said he thought the figure should be closer to the $400 million House figure, especially since the Senate had gone along with that figure in its original vote.

Fraser said splitting the difference, which would mean $465.5 million, would not be acceptable to the UAW. He has said he would recommend ratification of a $400 million figure, although he can not guarantee union members would accept it.

Require Renegotiation

The wage concessions would have to be ratified by the UAW membership because they require renegotiation of the recent three-year contract in which the union agreed to give up $200 million worth of wage increases. Both the House and Senate versions of increased wage concessions include the $200 million the union has already agreed to give up.

The Senate version also calls for $150 million in pay increases to be foregone by salaried employes of Chrysler, compared with $100 million in the House bill.

Chrysler employees would get $175 million worth of newly issued Chrysler stock, rather than $150 million as in the House version.

SCHOOLS CLOSING SEEN

CHICAGO (AP) — Chicago public schools may have to close unless they get "substantial help," a businessman advising Mayor Jane Byrne on the school's financial crisis said Wednesday. Jerome Van Gorkom told the school board it would need $190 million to pay its bills in the next six weeks.

GUESS WHAT — Six-year-old twin sisters, Michele, left, and Richele Werline of Marshall have the same dental problem and guess what song they are singing these days. You've got it! "All I Want For Christmas Is My two Front Teeth." A few years from now the gaps would probably cause concern but for now as far as Michele and Richele are concerned the happy season far overshodows their losses and who could be luckier: the tooth fairy and Santa all in the same month. U.S. Delay Made On Sanctions

WASHINGTON (AP) — A White House official said President Carter agreed Wednesday to delay briefly further efforts to prompt United Nations action against Iran while Secretary General Kurt Waldheim holds "intensive discussions" with Iranian representatives.

But the administration for the first time outlined the type of sanctions it was considering asking the United Nations to impose on Iran. Deputy Secretary of State Warren Christopher said the possibilities included cutting off military shipments, halting telecommunications and stopping air and rail traffic.

Only To U.N. Action

The White House official, who asked that he not be named, said Carter's agreement "applies only to action relating to the United Nations and the Security Council."

He would not comment "one way or the other" on the possibility that the United States will take unilateral action sooner in an effort to force Iran to free 50 Americans held hostage since Nov. 4.

And the official declined to respond when asked if some such unilateral action against Iran may already have been set in motion.

The official told reporters that Carter met Wednesday morning with Donald F. McHenry, U.S. ambassador to the United Nations, who brought a request from Waldheim for a delay in any U.S. attempt to get U.N. support for international sanctions against Iran.

Sanctions "Logical"

Last week, senior U.S. officials had called a U.S. request to the United Nations for sanctions against Iran a "logical" next move in the administration's efforts to force the Iranians to free the American hostages.

On Wednesday, Christopher for the first time spelled out what options the administration has under consideration.

"A whole range of sanctions are possible under the U.N. charter," Christopher told reporters. "It begins with the possibility of cutting off military shipments, the possibility of cutting off export credits, the possibility of curtailing or cutting off completely air and rail links."

Christopher said these options are "possibilities that will be under consider-

Goodfellows Project Begins New Phase

THE COUPONS are in, the screening completed and the final list made for Operation Goodfellow '79.

Now comes the massive job of matching names, ages and addresses with toys for about 10,000 Lubbock children who will have a happy Christmas with Goodfellow help.

It is time for volunteers to swing into action in the 45th year of filling Christmas sacks for needy children.

The hours are as many as a volunteer can give.

The pay is tremendous—happiness for thousands of youngsters.

OPEC Snags On Uniform Price Level

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Saudi Arabia's Sheik Ahmed Zaki Yamani met for six hours Wednesday with the other 12 OPEC oil ministers, and expressed doubt afterward that they could agree on a uniform base price for the cartel's oil.

Yamani told reporters "I don't know" if there would be a settlement. "It's been very, very difficult. We'll meet again."

Saudi Arabia produces one-third of OPEC's oil and opposes any base price higher than the $24 a barrel it is now asking for its oil. Some price "hawks" want a much higher figure and the issue has divided the oil ministers since their the year-end conference began Monday.

Wednesday was to have been the last day of the meeting, but scheduling was thrown into doubt after Yamani summoned the other ministers to his suite in an effort to resolve the dispute.

Hope Of Family Visits To Hostages Raised

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iranian mourners turned the funeral of an assassinated religious leader Wednesday into a new outpouring of anti-American emotion, but a reported official comment raised hopes that family members will be allowed to visit the 50 American hostages at the U.S. Embassy for Christmas.

Pistol-waving mullahs, or Moslem priests, joined the funeral procession for revelutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's close associate, Tehran University theology dean Mohammad Mofateh, and his two bodyguards, who were shot to death Tuesday.

The funeral rites combined religious fervor, militancy and fresh protests against Washington — accused by Khomeini and other top officials of masterminding the slaying.

Tens of thousands of mourners followed the cortege from Tehran University to the embassy, where the procession halted for two hours of wailing, eulogies and denunciations of the United States.

A senior Iranian official was quoted in a newspaper interview as saying the ruling Revolutionary Council wants families to visit their captive relatives over Christmas, but this produced only a vague response from the students, who apparently have the last word on the decision.

In an interview with the Tehran newspaper Bamdad, Interior Minister Hashemi Rafsanjani was quoted as having said, "... There is a possiblity their (the hostages') families will be allowed to visit them (over Christmas) and we would like such a thing to happen."

Rafsanjani, himself a senior Moslem clergyman, conceded the decision lay with the students — who have overrruled or contradicted previous conciliatory statements by Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh.

The militants said a top official of the former revolutionary government was under arrest because of contacts with the CIA.

The embassy militants said Abbas Emir-Entezam, deputy foreign minister in the former Mehdi Bazargan government was under arrest for betraying Iran by establishing contacts with the American CIA. The government later confirmed the arrest.

They said he was recalled last week from Stockholm, where he has been serving as Iranian Ambassador to Scandinavia. The ambassadors to West Germany and France also were recalled, they said, but gave no reasons.

The students disclosed five documents implicating Amir-Entezam, who also was the spokesman for the provisional government. One document was a letter allegedly from U.S. Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen praising Amir-Entezam.

"Amir-Entezam is indeed interested in and tries to establish good mutual relations between Iran and the United States," the Farsi translation said. In the document, Laingen reportedly said he was trying to develop contacts with Amir-Entezam.

Another excerpt, presumably from a letter by Laingen, said Amir-Entezam expressed the view that it would be easier

Spot Check Shows World Problems Reflect In Christmas Requests

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

A little girl in Ann Arbor, Mich., asked Santa to make sure that "all the poor people ... have all the presents they want and all the hungry people have all the food they need."

A youngster in Tucson, Ariz., said "the only thing she wanted was for her mother to be happy."

Some children in Boston appealed: "Get the hostages released for Christmas."

In among the requests for dolls and trains, for baseball bats and computer games, are the pleas that reflect the problems of the world: war, poverty, unhappiness.

An Associated Press spot check of Santa Clauses across the country showed that traditional presents are still in demand. But some Santas say youngsters seem to realize that money is tight this year. Their reports reflect an earlier AP-NBC News poll which found that 61 percent of adults questioned said they were cutting back on holiday gifts and entertainment this year because of inflation.

"I don't think they're asking for as many things," said the Santa at Tucson's largest department store. "Maybe Mommy is talking to them at home. Maybe Mommy doesn't have as much money this year."

William R. Sanford, a Santa at the Iverson Mall in the Washington, D.C., area and a 10-year veteran of the job, agreed. "Something is different about this Christmas. The kids are asking for less ... What I overhear is that things are not settled and people are not buying more than they have to." The youngsters' requests, he said, reflect the uncertainty. "One asked me only for a Bible."

Thomas Palmer, 27, one of three Santas at the Briarwood Mall in Ann Arbor said his "sweetest request" was from the girl who wanted presents for the poor and food for the hungry. He also remembers "a couple of kids" who said "they want their Mommy and Daddy to get back together again and stop fighting." And a 14-year-old girl, suffering from cerebral palsy, lifted from her wheelchair. "She ... wanted Erik Estrada and she wanted Santa," said Palmer.

In Montrose, Colo., Dave Austin recalled: "One kid came up, bright and shiny-faced, and I thought he'd ask for a lot of gifts. But do you know what he asked for? He said he would like his grandma to get better."

Mike Castonguay, 25, found two Boston youngsters — one 3, the other about 4 — worried about the Americans held at the U.S. Embassy in Tehran. "I told them I couldn't promise anything, but I'll try my best as Santa Claus. I also told them that as Santa Claus, I will tell the hostages hello when I see them for Christmas."

Sears, Roebuck and Co., the nation's largest retailer, conducted a poll of Santas on the West Coast and found that the most popular gift for girls is a doll — preferably one that is just like a real baby. Boys want electronic toys, the Santas said. But there were also less selfish requests: "Enough food for the rest of the world. Gifts for everybody in the family. Help Mommy stop smoking."

At Santa Claus House at the North Pole, outside Fairbanks, Alaska, Santa is getting more mail than ever. The letters are similar to previous years, he said, but the requests he gets from youngsters who visit in person are slightly different. "Several have told me that their mommas and daddys have told them that they can have only two things this Christmas and some have even said just one thing."

Jerry Walker, 34, a Santa at a Little Rock, Ark., shopping center said he hadn't noticed children asking for more — or less — this year. "Kids are pretty common-sense people. They're just like the rest of us. They don't reach for the moon... The boys still want to make war and the girls still want to be domesticated. I won't make a comment on whether I think that's good or bad."

Female Jury Finds Housewife Guilty Of Manslaughter

MOUNT HOLLY, N.J. (AP) — An all-female jury has found a Pemberton Township housewife guilty of the reduced charge of manslaughter for killing her drunken husband after he beat and verbally abused her.

Ann P. Yanik, 49, claimed she acted in self defense when she grabbed a large kitchen knife last May 4 and stabbed Albert Yanik, her husband of 24 years.

A manslaughter verdict was the lightest possible decision the jury could have made Tuesday without finding Mrs. Yanik completely innocent. It could have found her guilty of first-or second-degree murder.

Mrs. Yanik will face a maximum prison term of 10 years when she is sentenced in six weeks before Superior Court Judge Paul R. Kramer. Until then, she is free on $5,000 bail.

Assistant Burlington County Prosecutor Robert Joseph told the jury in his closing arguments that he had sympathy for Mrs. Yanik, but that she could have escaped by "running out the back door."

"There are alternatives to ending a marriage with an abusive husband short of murder," he said.

Defense counsel John Call Jr. placed empty beer cans found in the Yanik home on a railing in front of the jury box. He knocked the cans off the rail one by one, saying each represented Yanik swearing at, kicking and slapping his wife.

Marie Antoinette was sent to the guillotine in 1793.

Fair Weather Expected Until Weekend

Mostly fair skies and mid-60s afternoon temperatures are in store for the Lubbock area today, but the extended forecast by the National Weather Service calls for cloudiness and a chance of widely scattered showers this weekend.

Clouds are expected to move into the South Plains tonight as Pacific moisture aloft flows into the area from New Mexico. The entrance of a cold front Friday from the Northwest is expected to trigger showers across Eastern New Mexico and West Texas.

Overnights lows tonight through Sunday are expected in the middle 30s, with afternoon high temperatures remaining in the 50s and 60s throughout the weekend.

Santa and the Elf Boy

(SYNOPSIS: Esteban is seeking help to top the professor from releasing poison gas on Christmas Day which will kill all the fairies. With the help of the Snuke, he has reached Santa Land. He runs toward Santa's house shouting, "Santa! Santa!")

CHAPTER THIRTEEN
SEARCH FOR THE HAG

SANTA stared at the boy who came running toward him across the snow.

"It's Esteban!" he exclaimed. "The elf who lost his wings! What has happened? You look frightened half to death!"

"Oh, I am," gasped Esteban. "I have terrible news. There is hardly any time left and there is a man who is going to destroy all fairies on Christmas Day!"

Then Esteban told Santa the whole story of the Hangdog Hag's spell and the professor's plan to destroy them all.

"How awful!" cried Santa.

"Oh, dear! Oh, dear!" he murmured, puffing distractedly on his pipe. Suddenly he turned away. "Come, there is no time to lose!"

"Where are we going?"

"To the home of the Hangdog Hag," said Santa. "We must persuae her to break the spell over the professor's wife."

He strode away with Esteban at his heels. "Hitch up the sleight!" he ordered when they arrived at the stables.

"What are you thinking of?" cried Patrick Tweedleknees, who was the oldest dwarf in Snata Land and who this vear was in charge of the reindeer. "The deer musn't go out now. They must go out now. They must rest to be ready for Christmas!"

"If I don't take them out now ther won't be any Christmas," replied Santa. And he himself began harnessing the deer while Tweedleknees wrung his hands.

A few minutes later Santa and Esteban were flying through the sky headed for the home of the Hangdog Hag. They arrived, at last, on the very tip-top of a faraway mountain where a one-room shack stood silent and alone.

But alas! When they opened the door they found the shack empty.

"She's been long gone," groaned Santa. "And it looks as though she doesn't plan to return."

It was true. Every piece of furniture had been smashed. The windows were broken and even the brooms were lying in shreds.

Heavy-hearted, Santa and Esteban returned to the sleigh and made the sad trip back to Santa Land. There, Tweedlekness glared at them furiously as he unharnessed the deer.

But Santa ignored his bad humor. "Send a message to the Queen Fairy," he ordered. "Tell her to come at once. Send the same message to all the fairy folk you can reach."

Tweedleknees' mouth fell open. He understood, at last, that there was trouble—big trouble—for only once in a hundred years did Santa send such a message to fairy folk. Tweedleknees rushed away to send out the alarm in Fairyland's own secret language.

Within a few ours there arrived at Santa's door any army of goblins and imps and witches and elves. Santa told them the story of their great peril and the little folk listened and trembled.

"What shall we do?" they whispered.

"We must find the Hangdog Hag," said Santa. "That is why I have called you here. Who has seen the Hag or heard of her or knows where she can be?"

"I saw her lately crossing the moors to the land where witches live," said a weeping will-o-the-wisp.

Santa told the people of Fairyland about the great peril.

"I carried her across the witches' river," exclaimed a tiny elf boatman.

"She's with you then!" exclaimed Santa turning to the witches.

But the witches sadly shook their heads and the oldest, crookedest witch stepped forward and croaked, "She's gone."

"Gone where?" cried Santa.

"To the moon," whispered the witch in a cracking voice.

'Star Wars' Spoof Set At Ballenger School Tonight

All 137 students at Ballenger School will perform in a spoof on "Star Wars" that also includes elements of the annual Special Olympics today at 7:30 p.m. in the school recreational area.

The Christmas play, entitled "Olympic Odyssey," combines the space-age theme with a story on a type of Special Olympics, the national athletic contest held each year for retarded youngsters.

For good measure, Santa and Mrs. Claus and some Christmas elves will be included in the unique yuletide story.

The play, written by a Ballenger speech therapist will feature dancing and singing, with props and costumes created by both faculty and students.

Ballenger is the school district's campus for the trainable mentally retarded.

Candidate Slates White House Date

Gerald McCathern of Hereford, candidate for State Senate District 31, has accepted an invitation from President Carter to attend the announcement of the Small Community and Rural Development Policy at the White House today.

The announcement will be the first comprehensive small community and rural development statement ever made and will deal with all of the federal programs available to help rural America develop a sound economy.

Congratulations

LCLU Files Brief Reasserting Damage Rights From Schools

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock Civil Liberties Union filed a brief in federal court Wednesday reasserting its right to approximately $115,000 in damages from Lubbock public school officials as part of a suit seeking a ban on school religious activities.

The brief was filed in answer to a motion made last month by school attorneys asking that U.S. District Court Judge Halbert O. Woodward deny the civil right group compensatory and exemplary damages.

The lawsuit alleges that religious exercises in the schools violate the establishment clause of the First Amendment and asks for a stop to religious activities in the public schools. It also asks for $35,000 in damages from the superintendent and board of trustees as a body and $10,001 from each defendant.

In the brief filed Wednesday, LCLU attorneys oppose school lawyers' contentions that the plaintiffs lack the standing in court to recover money damages.

The schools maintain that the LCLU should not be allowed to recover the money damages because the only named plaintiff is the LCLU. The schools say no individual is named and "no specific damages are alleged relative to any member of the plaintiff."

School attorneys contend the suit "alleges no monetary injury to Lubbock Civil Liberties Union, nor does it allege any assignment of the damage claims of any of its members."

In response, LCLU attorneys argue that, "Each of Plaintiff's members who is a resident within the Defendant School District, who is a taxpayer to the Defendant School District, or who is the parent of a child enrolled in the public schools operated by the Defendants suffers equal and undifferentiated injury by the violations of the Establishment Clause alleged in the complaint."

The LCLU "does not claim money damages for any lost profits nor for any lost commercial opportunities suffered by its members...only that the Defendants have violated the Establishment Clause, and that it has standing to claim money damages as the representative of its members for this constitutional violation, an alleged violation that is common to the Plaintiff's entire membership and is shared by each of Plaintiff's members in equal degree," the brief says.

School attorneys had claimed that school board members did not "intentionally or maliciously deprived any student of the rights, privileges and immunities guaranteed by the Constitution."

They said that because defendants have always "acted in good faith in exercising their duties" as school officials, the LCLU should not be entitled to money damages.

The LCLU filed its lawsuit in September following a decision by school trustees at the beginning of the year to adopt a policy allowing student-directed religious activities.

TEXAS SLAYINGS EYED

PURCELL, Okla. (AP) — Roger Dale Stafford — already sentenced to die for the murders of six steakhouse workers — was ordered Wednesday to stand trial on charges of murdering three members of a Texas family. "The court finds that there has been a crime committed and there is probable cause the defendant committed the same," Special Judge Sam Goodwin said in binding Stafford over for trial in the June 1978 shooting deaths of Melvin Lorenz, 38, his wife Linda, 31, and son Richard, 13, of San Antonio, Texas. The three were killed in a robbery alongside Interstate 35.

Slaton Youth Makes All-American Band

Slaton Junior High School ninth grader Tracy Diaz has been named to the All-American Hall of Fame Band.

Diaz received a certificate of merit from the organization which is sponsored by the music department of Purdue University.

Diaz plays string bass under the instruction of Slaton teacher Marjorie Bartz.

The annual band awards are made by the non-profit All-American Hall of Fame Foundation in order to identify and recognize outstanding high school musicians throughout the country.

Britain Says Maybe, And...

BRITISH PRIME Minister Margaret Thatcher has ended her brief visit to the U.S. on a note of what some might call Anglo-American solidarity.

Frankly, we are somewhat less than impressed, both with Mrs. Thatcher's policies and pronouncements.

While granting that "the Iron Lady" had an almost impossible job in taking over a Socialist-oriented British economy, if not society, it is more in the area of foreign affairs that we find her wanting.

IN HER TRIP to Washington this week, Mrs. Thatcher engaged in one of her exercises in what to us has become a trademark, political doubletalk.

While saying that Britain of course would support the U.S. if sanctions were sought against Iran in an effort to gain freedom for the American hostages, the British leader quickly added that her nation "couldn't possibly" undertake an economic blockade of Iran without the approval of the UN.

She described the crisis in Tehran as "a classic (revolution) of the kind we thought we didn't get in this time and century."

THAT WAS NOT the end of Mrs. Thatcher's naivete.

As most are aware, Britain has just engineered a new deal in Rhodesia, not only assuming the rule of a colonial power but in the process tossing out already conducted elections and making plans for new ones.

In the process and in an effort to bring the Marxist oriented Popular Front into the process, Britain took steps which some saw as giving in to the two guerrilla leaders, Joshua Nkomo and Robert Mugabe.

Commenting on the cease-fire in Rhodesia, Mrs. Thatcher said she hoped that whites would remain in the African country because "they are vital to the economy...I think there will be a multiracial society..."

WE HOPE Mrs. Thatcher is correct on the latter point.

We think it significant that even she concedes that the white population is vital to Rhodesia's economy. However, if the whites do flee or have their land taken away from them—and paid for by Britain and the U.S.—then Mrs. Thatcher will have no one to blame but Britain, although it should not be overlooked that the U.S. has supported her in the Rhodesian endeavor.

Perhaps we are naive ourselves. But, we suppose that despite a somewhat poor record of backing our own friends of late, we still expect more than left-handed support from those allies whom we have often aided in the past, primarily Britain and France. Instead, we often feel that both have gone out of their way to play into the hands of the Third Worlders in the questionable name of peace and equality.

Mrs. Thatcher is a gracious woman, a strong leader and a breath of fresh air for Britain. But, she may have some sad lessons to learn on the international front. Much to our chagrin, we are already learning ours.

AN EDITORIAL:

Mexico Tweeks Wrong Nose

TWEEKING THE nose of Uncle Sam being such great sport, Mexico isn't likely to pay serious attention to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen's "friendly warning."

"Friendship between Mexico and the United States must be a two-way street," Bentsen said this week. "It involves obligations as well as privileges...Too often we've been a patsy."

What set the senator off was Mexico's reneging on its promise to re-admit the deposed shah of Iran and the continuining sniping by Mexican President Jose Lopez Portillo.

IN THE INITIAL stages after the Iranian government aided militants in taking Americans hostage, Mexico appeared to stand beside its North American neighbor.

As The Avalanche-Journal noted at the time, this was a positive step toward bringing the U.S. and Mexico closer together in friendship, which the Mexicans publicly profess to want.

But, then, Lopez Portillo apparently decided he would rather be friends with Third World and Moslem countries than with the nation that shares a common border with his.

No, his government said at the last minute, the shah could not return to Mexico after completing his medical treatment in New York. This came at a time when the shah's continued presence in this country could have been a direct threat to the lives of the 50 Americans bound hand and foot in Tehran.

The Mexican president, as if to further undermine the American position, labeled our mild action of freezing Iranian assets in America as "aggressive" and "precipitous."

MEANWHILE, Mexico was hosting an international conference on the independence of an American protectorate, Puerto Rico, from Nov. 30 to Dec. 2.

As Sen. Bentsen noted, the conclusion of that conference and its anti-U.S. propaganda was followed within one day by the ambushing of a bus carrying U.S. Navy personnel in Puerto Rico. Two sailors died.

"It has become apparent that self-interest, narrowly defined, is the driving force in Mexican attitudes toward the Iranian crisis," Bentsen said.

He is right, of course. Chafing under what it perceives to have been slights and exploitation by the U.S. in the past, Mexico now believes that because it has oil and gas we need it can kick Uncle Sam in the shins and we'll take it lying down.

How much easier and better it would be, on both sides of the border, if we tried to be friends in both word and deed.

ART BUCHWALD:

Good Football Doctor Capitalizes On Injury

WASHINGTON—The votes are all in, and the medical sports writers have just selected the Most Valuable Pro-Football Doctor of the Year.

The winner is Dr. Bubba Klaus who averaged 180 yards a game running on and off the field tending to injured players.

Klaus, a first-round draft choice from Johns Hopkins Medical School, was selected for the award not only for his scrambling and third down stitching procedures but also for his emergency knee operations during time outs, which made it possible for a running back to return to the game for the next play.

His coach, Torga Strindberg, told reporters at the awards ceremonies: "Our medical scouts had been watching Bubba ever since he was an intern.

"HE ONLY weighed 150 pounds, which is pretty light for a football doctor, but he had the hands of a 270-pound plastic surgeon.

"He was overlooked by every other team in the league, and we picked him up for the price of two over-the-hill paramedics."

Asked what made Bubba such a great running doctor, Coach Strindberg replied, "He has no fear. As soon as he sees a player stretched out on the field, he'll leap off the bench and crash through the entire defensive line to get to him.

"And in an entire season, he's only fumbled his black bag three times. He also likes to block, which is rare for a doctor.

"I've seen him knock over three referees just to get to a wide receiver who had a cramp in his thigh.

"BUT IT'S not just his speed and strength which makes him a great football doctor—Bubba also has brains.

"When he sees that our defensive unit is pooped, he'll hold up a game for five minutes pretending one of our players has a cracked rib.

"Most doctors want to get their people off the field as fast as possible, but Bubba always sizes up the situation and he'll instruct our injured man to stay on his back until everyone gets his second wind."

A reporter said, "Howard Cosell on a Monday night game indicated Bubba is overrated as a football doctor and wouldn't be able to hold a candle to some of the great orthopedic men with the old Chicago Bears and Washington Redskins. What do you have to say to that?"

"HOWARD DOESN'T know the difference between an orthopedist and a pediatrician. He's had it in for Bubba ever since Howard came to him, once complaining about hoarseness, and Bubba put his throat in a cast."

When receiving the trophy from NFL Commissioner Pete Rozelle, Dr. Klaus said, "I am honored to be named Pro-Football Doctor of the Year, but this award should be shared with many people, mostly the players of the teams who opposed us this season.

"Had it not been for their dirty tackling and vicious blocking, not to mention their roughing of our quarterbacks and kickers, I might never have gotten on the field at all.

"To those players on the opposition teams whose personal fouls against our boys made it possible for me to get into all the games—I say 'thank you' from the bottom of my heart."

Ray Bradbury, famous science-fiction author: "Cars have destroyed every city in the country with their parking lots and smog. Last year 50,000 people were killed by cars and two million injured, yet we talk about the dangers of nuclear energy."

ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK:

Going Soft On Ted

NOVAK

WASHINGTON—The sudden transformation of President Carter from sure loser to possible winner against Sen. Edward M. Kennedy for the Democratic presidential nomination transformed a Dec. 5 meeting of Carter's top media advisers, turning them from anti-Teddy hawks to pro-Jimmy doves.

The media prescription according to the gospel of the hawks called for disembodied voices to come purring over the television tube on purchased time giving lurid details of Teddy Kennedy's failures as a politician: loss of his post as Senate Democratic whip after a mere two years to Sen. Robert Byrd; his unimpressive won-lost record on bills that have come out of his Senate Judiciary Committee; and many others.

But Carter's political ascent—partly based on national unity behind his policy in the Iranian crisis and partly on Kennedy's campaign mistakes—changed all that.

With media whizz Gerald Rafshoon in the lead, Carter's advisers who huddled Dec. 5 decided the situation was ripe for Carter to take the high road. For now, at least, that's the way it is.

No direct attacks against Kennedy, anonymous or otherwise. Carter instead will show himself in the role of grand statesman with steady hand on the helm.

ALTHOUGH THE Carter administration is deliberately downplaying it to protect the hostages, the fact is that high officials are furious over increasing indications that the captive Americans are being badly treated.

At least one hostage is known to have been told by his captors that no one in the U.S. was interested any longer in his fate and that efforts back home to free him had dwindled to near zero.

Another was told that his family would never know what had happened to him, because no word was allowed to filter out of the U.S. Embassy compound to the U.S.

What bothers officials who know something of what is happening behind the student-curtain is that the hostages may eventually emerge brainwashed, praising their captors and demanding that the shah be sent back to Tehran for a political trial.

The so-called "students" who took the embassy were not, as originally thought, placid allies of the Ayatollah Khomeini but radical well-trained partisans of Sadegh Ghotbzadeh.

THE MOST intimate tie ever between an American President and the vatican is now being formed, leading to speculation that full-scale diplomatic relations may actually be established between Washington and the Roman Catholic Church—a potential asset in President Carter's wooing of the Catholic vote.

One of the reasons for this is a double coincidence of neighbors: Vice President Walter F. Mondale's official residence is just across the street from the residence of Archbishop Jean Jadot, the apostolic delegate in the U.S.; and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance lives next door to Cardinal William Baum of the archdiocese of Washington, in fashionable Spring Valley.

The apostolic delegate has been invited to the White House on several occasions, most recently for the reception President Carter gave Pope John Paul II.

The pope's unprecedented world travel and diplomacy and his high popularity, particularly in the U.S., has helped make full diplomatic relations with the U.S. more possible than ever before.

★

WHILE AGREEING to control their anger over policies they think contributed mightily to the hostage crisis in Iran, Republican governors plan an all-out "inquest" of events leading up to the embassy take-over once the crisis ends.

That was the upshot of two days of meandering political talk by the governors at Austin.

Their No. 1 question for the post-crisis inquest: How could President Carter have left the embassy unprotected at a time of obvious danger when it was well known that Iranian zealots had taken over the embassy only nine months before?

★

WHEN MOBIL Oil Corp. Vice President Herbert Schmertz took a leave of absence to run Sen. Edward M. Kennedy's media campaign, Kennedy's liberal backers winced and President Carter's supporters chortled.

Media consultant Robert Squier, who has produced a half-hour campaign documentary for Carter, decided to rub it in against an old friend: ultra-liberal Kennedy speech writer Robert Shrum.

Squier sent Shrum a can of Mobil oil with a notation referring to "your new boss."

A footnote: Schmertz's arrival may have wiped out the last chance for New York-based media wizard David Garth to join the Kennedy campaign.

Garth was among those briefing Kennedy before his appearance on NBC's "Meet the Press," but no contract for the campaign has been signed.

ANDREW TULLY:

No 'Day' For King

WASHINGTON—Let us put the campaign to make Martin Luther King's birthday a legal holidy in perspective—if that is possible.

Only one President is so honored. The name is George Washington, accurately hailed as the "Father of Our Country." Even Abraham Lincoln, whose credentials are somewhat more impressive than Dr. King's, hasn't made it.

Yet making Dr. King's birthday a federal holiday—and giving federal workers still another day off with pay—was barely beaten in the House —207 for and 191 against.

(Must I say I always admired Dr. King? Sadly, in the national atmosphere, I must.)

ANYWAY, COMMON sense dictates that I applaud defeat of the King bill and deplore the political self-interest displayed by the 191 House members who favored it.

Except for the black members, whose sincerity cannot be challenged, most of the rest of those 191 voted yes because they had counted the black vote.

The King bill just doesn't make sense. Surely, if another American is to join Washington on the honor roll, Lincoln must be No. 1 on the list of candidates.

How about Thomas Jefferson, our first authentic "man of the people?" How about Franklin Roosevelt, who gave us Social Security? How about Dwight Eisenhower, who directed the victory in World War II? How about Lyndon Johnson, who did more for blacks than any President in history—including Lincoln?

IN FACT, however, we don't need another legal holiday in anybody's honor. George Washington and Christopher Columbus should stand unique on the nation's Roll of Honor.

Adding another holiday in any individual's name, however lustrous, would only demean the honor paid to the country's father and the man who discovered America.

Besides, legal holidays are expensive. Adding another would cost the American economy $200 million in federal pay, and up to $3 billion if state and local governments and the private sector, as is their wont, followed the lead.

Indeed, if Dr. King's birthday fell on a certain date you can be sure our ruling lords would add another 24 hours of loafing time to make the bureaucrats happy.

OPPONENTS OF the King bill had sought legislation that would mandate celebration of his birthday on a Sunday, thus avoiding the necessity of giving federal workers an extra day off with pay.

Not ruddy likely, said Rep. Robert Garcia, D-N.Y., the bill's sponsor. "We're not going to go with a commemorative day."

Why not? The idea is to mark Dr. King's birthday, not to pamper government workers. Since Dr. King was a Baptist minister, Sunday would seem the ideal day on which to remember him.

Moreover, a Sunday celebration would put Dr. King right there with another Man. After all, it's not called Easter Tuesday or Easter Thursday.

JAY HARRIS:

Letter To Virginia

IT IS NO accident that one of the most widely-read pieces of writing in the nation's history should be in keeping with the Christmas spirit.

We refer, of course, to Virginia O'Hanlon's letter to the editor of The New York Sun, asking the question asked by many: "Is There A Santa Claus?"

So, today, in keeping with a tradition of more than 40 years on these pages, we turn our attention to the story of a child's faith.

Virginia O'Hanlon was an 8-year-old at the time she wrote the letter three months before Christmas, 1897.

She had been told by her New York City schoolmates that "There isn't any Santa Claus."

VIRGINIA TOOK the problem to her father. Mr. O'Hanlon had no ready answer.

But, then in a stroke of genius, he told his daughter "to write a letter to the editor of The New York Sun. Ask him if there's a Santa Claus, and whatever he says will be true."

Instead of reaching Charles A. Dana, The Sun's editor, the letter was directed to Francis P. Church, a member of the editorial staff. Church seriously considered the child's query, then composed his immortal message, as true today as 82 years ago.

We repeat it, just as Church wrote it Sept. 21, 1897:

"WE TAKE pleasure in answering at once, and thus prominently, the communication below, expressing at the same time our great gratification that its faithful author is numbered among the friends of The Sun:

"Dear Editor:

"I am 8 years old. Some of my little friends say there is no Santa Claus.

"Papa says, 'If you see it in The Sun, it's so.'

"Please tell me the truth, is there a Santa Claus?

"Virginia O'Hanlon, 115 W. 95th St."

"VIRGINIA," CHURCH wrote, "Your little friends are wrong. They have been affected by the skepticism of a skeptical age. They do not believe except they see. They think nothing can be which is not comprehensible by their little minds.

"All minds, Virginia, whether they be men's or children's, are little. In this great universe of ours, man is a mere insect, an ant, in his intellect, as compared with the boundless world about him, as measured by the intelligence capable of grasping the whole of truth and knowledge.

"Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. He exists as certainly as love and generosity and devotion exist, and you know that they abound and give to your life its highest beauty and joy.

"Alas! How dreary would be the world if there were no Santa Claus. It would be as dreary as if there were no Virginias. There would be no childlike faith then, no poetry, no romance to make tolerable this existence. We should have no enjoyment, except in sense and sight. The eternal light with which childhood fills the world would be extinguished.

"NOT BELIEVE in Santa Claus! You might as well not believe in fairies! You might get your papa to hire men to watch the chimney on Christmas Eve to catch Santa Claus, but even if they did not see Santa Claus coming down, what would that prove? Nobody sees Santa Claus, but that is no sign that there is no Santa Claus.

"The most real things in the world are those that neither children nor men can see. Did you ever see the fairies dancing on the lawn? Of course not, but that's no proof that they are not there. Nobody can conceive or imagine all the wonders there are unseen and unseeable in the world.

"You tear apart a baby's rattle and see what makes the noise inside, but there is a veil covering the unseen world which not the strongest men that ever lived could tear apart. Only faith, fancy, poetry, love, romance can push aside that curtain and view and picture the supernal beauty and glory beyond. Is it all real? Ah, Virginia, in all this world there is nothing else real or abiding.

"No Santa Claus? Thank God, he lives, and he lives forever. A thousand years from now, he will continue to make glad the heart of childhood."

THE LETTER speaks for itself. And for those who may ask, "Was there really a Virginia?" the answer most definitely is yes.

"Virginia continued her studies, at first kidded at times by her schoolmates, but also something of a celebrity. She graduated from college, taught school in New York. After earning her Ph.D. in education, she served as a junior high principal.

Virginia married and became Virginia O'Hanlon Douglas. She was a mother, a grandmother and a great-grandmother. In her later years, Mrs. Douglas, who looked much like a fairy godmother, often reflected on the letter. She always gave Church the credit for the world renown it brought both them. Mrs. Douglas died in May 1971 at the age of 82.

IN THE PAST, her descendants have gathered each Christmas at North Chatham, N.Y., where Mrs. Douglas is buried in the rolling Taconic hills. Her daughter, Mrs. Robert Temple, at last reports maintained a home nearby.

Today, Mrs. Douglas, Francis P. Church and The New York Sun are gone. But, the immortal words, "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus. Thank God, he lives, and he lives forever." are a legacy not just for children, but for mankind of all ages.

The Faith in a child's eyes, the Hope in his heart, the Charity in his love—these are the ingredients, not just of Christmas, but of life and eternity itself.

Negotiator Defends Palestinians

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's special Mideast negotiator defended the Palestinian Arabs on Wednesday for refusing to join autonomy talks between Egypt and Israel.

"The challenge is to us to fashion a credible, viable system which would be attractive to the Palestinians, will make them want to join and become participants," presidential envoy Sol M. Linowitz told reporters.

The Palestinians have boycotted the negotiations from the start. At a news conference, Linowitz said he understood why.

"If I were a Palestinian on the West Bank and Gaza today, I don't think I would be very interested in joining these negotiations at the moment," Linowitz said.

"I would ask, 'What's in it for me,' and I wouldn't be sure.

"I would know that there has been talk of some words like 'full autonomy' and 'self-governing authority,' but I wouldn't know what there was in it, and I wouldn't therefore have the incentive, I think.

"It wouldn't be attractive enough for me to feel I would want to be a party to it."

However, Linowitz said, the Palestinian Arabs might join if U.S., Egyptian and Israeli negotiators can decide on what powers they would have on the West Bank and in Gaza.

More than 1 million Palestinian Arabs live in the Israeli-held territories. Egypt and Israel have set an informal deadline of next May to decide on an autonomy plan, including elections for a self-governing authority.

Linowitz returned last Thursday from talks with Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin. He said he was encouraged that "there is a reasonable possibility" of meeting the May deadline.

But Linowitz acknowledged that control over water supplies and security measures remained unresolved.

Sadat and Begin plan to meet early next month. Afterward, Linowitz said he would return to the Middle East. One of his aims, he said, was to try to persuade King Hussein of Jordan to participate in the negotiations.

Linowitz said he intended also to hold talks with Palestinian Arabs. But he said he would shun the Palestine Liberation Organization until it accepts Israel's right to live in security, without fear of terrorism.

New Trade Pact Could Bring In Mushrooms

WASHINGTON (AP) — If the United States approves a most-favored-nation trade status for China, it could open up a massive new foreign source of mushrooms for American diners, the Agriculture Department said Tuesday.

China "has never exported significant amounts of mushrooms to the United States" because of high tariffs that boost their costs, a report said.

But if most-favored-nation status — recommended by President Carter and now being considered in Congress — is approved, U.S. import duties on Chinese mushrooms would be reduced sharply, it said.

"While there is little information available on this industry (in China), exports of canned mushrooms are expected to rise substantially in the long term," the report said.

The United States is the world's leading canned mushroom market and is second only to West Germany as an importer.

In the 1978-79 mushroom marketing year that ended last June 30, U.S. domestic production was shown at 205,100 metric tons, as measured on the basis of fresh weight.

A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds.

Imports of canned mushrooms, the report said, totaled 58,400 metric tons, and dried mushrooms 6,500. That made "apparent consumption" of mushrooms last year about 270,000 metric tons.

Thus, it said, imports accounted for about 24 percent of the U.S. mushroom consumption in 1978-79.

Taiwan supplied 50 percent of the imported canned mushrooms last year, South Korea 32 percent and Hong Kong 15 percent, the report said.

In 1615, the sun was first used to power toys, and the first sun-heated steam engine was built in 1864.

African Elephants Trade Ban Approved

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House voted Wednesday to impose a six-month ban on U.S. trade in African elephants, ivory or other elephant products — with some exemptions.

The bill also would provide $17 million for four years of grants to African nations to develop elephant conservation plans.

The bill exempts from the ban 10,000 pounds of unfinished ivory, tourist purchases during the first three months, imports and exports for scientific purposes or exhibitions, most major existing importers, keyboard ivory for musical instruments and trophies taken by sports hunters in compliance with local African laws.

After the first six months of the new policy, importers would need licenses from the Interior Department, which would have to certify that the homeland of the elephant has an adequate plan for protecting the animals.

The State Department told Congress "the bill is so loophole-ridden with exemptions that imports will not be greatly reduced," the Environmental Study Conference said.

Damages For Anguish Allowed, Says Court

AUSTIN (AP) — Juries may award parents money damages for their anguish over non-fatal injuries suffered by their children in auto accidents, the Texas Supreme Court ruled Wednesday.

The court agreed with a decision by the Waco Court of Civil Appeals in a case from Galveston without writing its own opinion.

James and Pamela Covington raised the issue after they and their 3-year-old daughter, Mary Jane, were injured in a head-on collision March 19, 1975, on Interstate 45 near League City.

Mary Jane spent days in a coma. Her injuries included brain damage and disfigurement.

The Covingtons sued the estate of the driver of the other car, Patrick Russell Foster, 19, as well as Foster's father, James T. Foster of Galveston. Young Foster, who was killed in the collision, did not have a driver's license and was driving on the wrong side of the divided highway.

They alleged Foster's father was negligent in allowing his son to drive his car.

When the case went to trial, the judge ruled that jurors could not hear any testimony about the mental anguish Mr. and Mrs. Covington suffered because of Mary Jane's injuries.

Foster's family settled out of court on Mary Jane's injuries and the case was tried only on injuries to Mr. and Mrs. Covington, plus their medical expenses on their daughter's behalf.

The jury awarded $15,768 to cover medical expenses and other losses — but not the mental distress of the parents.

The appeals court noted Covington had difficulty sleeping and concentrating and had developed ulcers. Mrs. Covington, the court said, suffered from nervous tension and a nervous stomach. The couple's minister said they were calm and stable before the accident but needed counseling afterward because of severe emotional problems.

In other decisions, the court:

•Upheld the current plan of operation of the state's hurricane catastrophe insurance pool, commonly called the "Cat Pool." Two small insurance companies, Beacon National and First Preferred, claimed big firms were able to sell enough policies on the Gulf Coast to good risks to reduce their pool participation almost to zero.

•Agreed with the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals in Austin that Yvonne Schieffer, a former University of Texas employee, was not entitled to workers compensation benefits as a result of on-the-job emotional stress.

•Refused to order Houston to hold a special election on a city charter amendment that would put a limit on local property taxes.

•Upheld a bank s decision to let the Internal Revenue Service examine the account of a customer who had given specific instructions that his transactions be kept confidential. Citizens State Bank of Collin County had been sued for $2 million by the customer, Chris Jacobson.

•Agreed with lower courts that Harrison County's attempt to add over 900 acres to its school lands in Runnels County should be overruled without a jury trial. Harrison County wanted a trial on the question of whether a 1903 survey was inaccurate.

Ex-Representative Loses Appeal On Theft

AUSTIN (AP) — Former state Rep. Oscar Carrillo Sr. of Benavides lost his felony theft appeal Wednesday in the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals.

In a 35-page opinion, the court affirmed Carrillo's seven-year probated sentence.

Carrillo's brother, former Duval County District Judge O.P. Carrillo, was sentenced to four years in prison in 1976 on charges of stealing taxpayers' money through phony equipment rentals. The state Senate, sitting as high court of impeachment, convicted Carrillo and barred him from holding public office.

Prosecutors contended Oscar Carrillo, then a candidate for the state Senate, arranged to have campaign materials mailed at the expense of the Benavides Independent School District in 1972.

The state alleged Carrillo had envelopes run through the school district's postage meter.

An estimated 5,000 to 10,000 envelopes were processed through the district's tax office at a cost of $400 to $800, the appeals court said.

Several tax office employees testified they had stuffed and addressed Carrillo's campaign envelopes on school district time, the court said.

Carrillo did not reimburse tax assessor-collector Rodolfo Couling for the postage, the court said.

Carrillo testified he never instructed Couling or anyone else to use the postage meter to mail his campaign material, and that he never took or sent campaign material to the tax office. In fact, he testified, he did not learn that tax office employees had worked for his campaign until four years later — 1976.

Carrillo contended on appeal that "agents of the state" stole from his office in early 1976 evidence that would have helped his case. He said his personal campaign records — including receipts, cancelled checks and records of his itinerary — had been stolen, and without those records he could not adequately present his defense.

The appeals court said it "cannot be denied" that the circumstances surrounding the discovery of some 300 campaign envelopes in a ditch outside San Diego by Texas Rangers, acting on an anonymous tip, "are suspicious."

It said, however, "we will not reverse a judgment of conviction on the basis of an unsubstantiated claim by the appellant (Carrillo) that evidence of benefit to his defense was stolen by state agents."

The appeals court rejected Carrillo's plea that the trial court erred in permitting Texas Ranger Ramiro Martinez to testify at the punishment stage that Carrillo's reputation was bad.

It also overruled Carrillo's argument that jury commissioners intentionally and systematically excluded persons from the grand jury who shared Carrillo's political affiliation, "thereby producing an invidious discrimination based on political affiliation and denying appellant due process and equal protection of the law."

An identical ground of error was overruled in the O.P. Carrillo case, the appeals court said.

In other action, the appeals court:

•Affirmed the life sentence assessed David Gene Morris in the December 1977 shotgun slaying of Michael David Canoy, assistant manager of a McDonald's restaurant in Dallas.

•Upheld a life sentence for Mike Savage, who was convicted in the August 1974 beating and strangling death of Mrs. William Nacol in the robbery of more than $500,000 in jewelry from the Nacol home. Mrs. Nacol's husband was a wholesale jewelry merchant who had his shop at home.

Court Refuses To Order Changes In Hurricane Insurance Pool

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court refused Wednesday to order changes in the state's hurricane insurance pool that would reduce advantages big insurers allegedly have over small ones.

Without writing a new opinion, the court upheld a decision by the 3rd Court of Civil Appeals here.

Beacon National Insurance Co. and First Preferred Insurance Co. went to court after the State Insurance Board refused to order changes in the Texas Catastrophe Property Insurance Association — commonly called the "Cat Pool."

The pool spreads the financial risk of a hurricane among all property insurers in the state. Property owners that insurance companies won't insure voluntarily can get coverage through the pool.

A company's obligation to take risks involuntarily through the pool is reduced by the volume of coverage it writes along the Texas Gulf Coast voluntarily.

Beacon and First Preferred said big companies have an advantage in getting the better risks along the coast. This enables them to reduce their pool participation almost to zero, they said.

Meanwhile, the two sall compaies said, the big companies are fully represented on the Cat Pool board of directors even though they write very little business through the pool.

They contended the pool's directors should ask the insurance board to reduce the area covered by the pool — thus cutting the credits the big companies receive for voluntary coverage.

Lawsuit Attempting To Stop Advertising

NEW YORK (AP) — In a $1 million lawsuit filed in U.S. District Court in Manhattan, Nikon Inc. is trying to stop Canon U.S.A. Inc. from advertising itself as the "official 35mm camera of the Olympic Winter Games."

Nikon contends Canon merely has the right to display the official Olympic emblem by virtue of a financial contribution it made to the Lake Placid Olympic Committee.

Nikon charged that the ads falsely give the impression that "Canon was chosen as the official camera of the committee because its quality is superior to other 35mm cameras."

Nation's Output Of Goods, Services Falls Short, Report Says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The nation's total output of goods and services grew at an annual rate of 3.1 percent from July through September, slightly less than earlier estimates, the government reported Wednesday.

William Cox, a Commerce Department economist, attributed most of the revision to "a cutback in estimated inventory investments," which the most recent data valued at an annual $6.1 billion, rather than the earlier estimate of $6.9 billion.

The Commerce Department also made minor revisions in corporate profit figures for the third quarter. Before-tax profits and inflation-adjusted profits were revised downward a bit, while after-tax profits went up slightly.

The revised figures show that:

•Profits before taxes grew 6.3 percent from the second quarter to the third quarter to an annual $242.3 billion.

•Profits after taxes were up 6.5 percent to an annual $148.3 billion.

•And profits adjusted for inflationary effects on inventory and capital rose 2.4 percent to an annual $180.8 billion. Inflation-adjusted profits in the third quarter this year were 3.2 percent ahead of the same quarter last year, the report showed.

Commerce Department officials said real gross national product — the value of the nation's goods and services, adjusted for inflation — totaled an annual $1.433 trillion in the third quarter, compared with $1.422 trillion in the second quarter. Before adjustment for inflation, the third quarter figure was $2.397 trillion.

The 3.1 percent annual growth figure for the third quarter was down a bit from the previously estimated 3.5 percent annual growth.

The latest figure means that if the nation's economy continued to grow for four quarters at the same rate as in the third quarter, total output would increase 3.1 percent. The economy last year grew 4.4 percent.

The third-quarter performance was the strongest quarter since the 5.6 percent rate in the final quarter of 1978 and it more than made up for the 2.3 percent decline in the second quarter this year. The economy had grown at an annual rate of 1.1 percent in the first quarter.

Most economists expect the nation's output to show a decline or no growth in the fourth quarter because of sluggish auto sales and a sharp drop in home construction.

Economists are still divided on whether the nation's economy began falling into a recession in the second quarter or whether the downturn is ahead.

The Commerce Department also increased its estimate of price increases for the third quarter from an annual rate of 8 percent to 8.5 percent. This compared with a 9.3 percent inflation figure for the second quarter.

Employees Charged With Conspiracy

EL PASO (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted two employees of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department on charges of conspiracy to possess and distribute heroin and cocaine.

The indictments, filed Tuesday by the El Paso panel, named Durwood Avery and C.A. Haynes, both of Marathon, Texas, in Brewster County. Both men are biologist assistants for the parks and wildlife department.

U.S. Magistrate Ronald Ederer in El Paso set bond at $25,000 each and referred the case to a federal court in Pecos.

The two men, both in custody, were indicted also on two counts each of using a telephone to further a felony.

The indictment said the men met with undercover narcotics agents from the Drug Enforcement Administration in September and October to negotiate a drug deal.

Reports On Fate Of Hostages Conflict

By The Associated Press

There were more conflicting statements Wednesday by Iranian government officials and student militants on the fate of the 50 hostages being held in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, as Christmas cards for the hostages, held since Nov. 4, began flooding Tehran mailrooms. Here are the highlights:

IN IRAN

The Tehran newspaper Bambad quoted Interior Minister Hashemi Rafsanjani, a leading Moslem cleryman, as saying families of the hostages may be allowed to visit the captives over Christmas. But a spokesman for the students holding the hostages said there has been "no decision" about such visits, "and such decisions are up to us."

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said in an interview published Wednesday in The Washington Post that an official U.S. investigation into the alleged crimes of the deposed shah would be a "very positive step" that could lead to freedom for the hostages. But the students said such an investigation would not be enough. "The only thing that could free the hostages would be the return of the deposed shah," a student spokesman told The Associated Press.

The students said Abbas Amir-Entezam, Iranian ambassador to Scandinavia and deputy prime minister in the post-revolutionary government of Mehdi Bazargan, has betrayed Iran by establishing contacts with the CIA. A student spokesman said in a television interview that Amir-Entezam, recalled from Stockholm last week by the foreign ministry, has been placed under arrest.

At least 50,000 Iranians mourning the assassinated Hojatoleslam Mohammad Mofateh, a close associate of the Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, marched on the U.S. embassy, placed the coffin in front of the gates and chanted "Death to America!"

IN WASHINGTON

Using the hostages as witnesses in an investigation of U.S. activities under the deposed shah would be viewed as "public exploitation," White House spokesman Jody Powell said.

He said Iran would bear "full responsibility for any ensuing consequences" if the hostages are forced to participate in a trial.

Elsewhere in the United States, at least 12 Iranian students have been suspended at Jackson (Miss.) State University for participating in campus demonstrations last month and about 20 others have been placed on probation, according to Melvin Miller, public relations director for the predominantly black university. He said the penalties had been decided by a committee of students and faculty.

IN PANAMA

Police firing tear gas and shotguns dispersed 100 high school students protesting the shah's presence on Contadora Island, where he moved from Lackland Air Force Base in Texas. About a dozen students were taken away in ambulances, but it was not known how seriously they were hurt. One car was burned and windows were smashed in other cars. Earlier, Panama City's mayor had warned residents that only peaceful demonstrations would be allowed.

The official Pars news agency in Tehran said Tuesday that Sadegh Khalkhali, former chief Islamic prosecutor, had ordered his fedayeen gunmen to Latin America to assassinate the shah and his wife.

CHRISTMAS IN NAZARETH — Holy Family Catholic Church in Nazareth will present its eighth annual Christmas pageant Friday and Sunday at 8 p.m. at the church. The pageant consists of 13 scenes depicting the story of the Christ child. Admission is free.

SHIPMENTS NOT ACCEPTED

BARNWELL, S.C. (AP) — Shipments of radioactive wastes by Boston Edison Co. will not be accepted at the nuclear disposal site at Barnwell until improvements are made in packaging, a South Carolina official said Wednesday. Dr. Samuel L. Finklea III of the state Department of Health and Enviornmental Control's bureau of radiological health said some shipments from the Massachusetts electric company had been rejected

Charges Against Americans Misleading

By United Press International

A document issued by the Iranian Embassy in Washington, D.C., accuses Americans of committing murders, brutalities and harassment against Iranians in the United States.

A check shows most are false, exaggerated or twisted from incidents unrelated to the present crisis.

Many of the incidents of harassment listed were well publicized at the time and were mostly shouting and shoving matches between Iranian protesters and passersby or counter-demonstrators.

The four-page, single-spaced list received by the UPI Washington bureau Tuesday included alleged incidents in Texas, California, Maryland, Oklahoma, Massachusetts and Ohio.

A headline over the list said, "Campaign of Intimidation and Victimization of Iranians in the U.S."

No dates or names were given for the alleged incidents, and many did not even list the cities in which they were supposed to have taken place.

Leading off its list of charges, Iranian officials focused on one slaying that had no apparent motive other than robbery.

"While the case of the hostages in Tehran has been dramatically portrayed by most elements of the media, knowing full well that none of the hostages has been harmed, the body of a 22-year-old Iranian was found outside of Houston late last week with 38 stab wounds, 2 bullet wounds and his neck slit," the document reported.

Houston police said the body of Mahmood Dehle Hosseinzadeh, 22, of Iran, was found stabbed and shot in a ditch, with his pockets turned inside out.

Also include in the list of charges were alleged bombings of mosques in Norman, Okla., and Cleveland.

Authorities in Norman said the only incident there took place at the University of Oklahoma where a homemade firebomb was thrown against the door of the headquarters of the Iranian Student Alliance, causing minor damage to the door.

The Islamic Center of Cleveland, the only mosque in the city, has had some of its windows broken.

"It's nothing significant," said mosque President Amir Khalili, an Iranian native. "We think it's not so much a result of hatred, more of kids doing things after school."

The list reported an alleged attack on a pregnant Iranian woman at a Safeway store in Maryland, the stabbing of an Iranian in Boston, and an Iranian student clubbed in Oklahoma City.

Maryland State Police said they knew of no report of an Iranian women being beaten. Local police in Montgomery and Prince George's counties in Maryland, where most of the state's Safeway stores are located, knew nothing of such an incident.

In Boston, a fight between four Brookline High School students and two Iranian students last May resulted in the stabbing death of an Iranian youth.

The fight had been described as a "turf war" between student factions. Police said the Americans did not know they were fighting Iranians, and that one thought they were Hispanic. Three of the Brookline students have been indicted for murder.

A check with Oklahoma City police revealed that an Iranian student at Oklahoma City University was struck with a club during a confrontation between Iranians and other students.

The charges also listed several attacks on the Iranian consulate in Houston, and claimed that Beverly Hills, Calif., police beat Iranian students during an anti-shah demonstration. Later, it was alleged, the students were "bitten by police dogs after they had been jailed."

The Iranian Consulate in Houston was closed for at least three days last month because of daily lunchtime demonstrations. The only damage reported was defacing of the consulate door.

Demonstrating Iranians in Beverly Hills were attacked by American counter-demonstrators Nov. 9. Police broke up the fighting and arrested about 130 Iranians, mainly for their own protection.

The Iranian embassy also contended that two Iranian students in San Francisco were arrested by police and "beaten so savagely that one suffered a broken jaw and loss of a tooth."

A check showed that three Iranian students were arrested in the Oakland east bay area shortly after President Carter announced a crackdown on Iranian students violating immigration laws. Last week they sued Alameda County for $165,000 on grounds they were called derogatory names by deputies.

Christmas Mail Pours Into Tehran

TEHRAN, Iran (UPI) — Cards, cookies and other Christmas mail for the 50 American hostages poured into Tehran Wednesday in an avalanche of good cheer from the United States.

"I am very worried about this crisis, and I hope you all come back soon," an 8-year-old American child wrote to the embassy captives.

The card was one of an estimated 250,000 received in this capital to brighten the holidays for the hostages, held captive in the occupied embassy for 46 days.

Loads of mail, Bibles, cookies, taped Christmas carols and Christmas trees, mostly addressed to "fellow Americans," began arriving in Tehran's Intercontinental Hotel late last week.

Newsman Alex Paen of Los Angeles' KMPC radio, who had originally come to the Iranian capital to cover the embassy crisis, found himself caught between piles and stacks of Christmas cards from Americans all over the United States.

The mail came from all kinds of people. Children, elderly people, nuns, priests or teachers. They all seemed to include hopes for the quick release of the captives.

Others wrote that they were praying for the hostages.

One card by Fairmount School in West Orange, N.J., Had the American flag drawn on the cover and under it, "Merry Christmas from America."

One card from New York City said, "Dear fellow Americans, I hope to find out that you guys get back soon. Don't be sick, because it is almost Christmas."

Some appealed to their "fellow Americans" to contact them "when you get back," and wrote all the details of their addresses and telephone numbers inside the cards.

There was no confirmation whether the mail was actually being delivered to the hostages after militant captors inside the embassy took it from the gates and disappeared in the embassy compound.

But the first batch of mail was handed to the captors after they had pledged to accept delivery of cards, letters and even homemade cookies.

Iran's Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh has said the captives would also be allowed to receive presents, but the students inside the embassy disagreed for "security reasons."

According to Paen, a giant Christmas card measuring 10-by-64 feet signed by 22,000 people has been sent from Panama City, Fla., but has not cleared the customs at Tehran's airport.

Two days ago, one American sent the hostages a paperweight filled with "American soil from a fellow American."

Posters read. "It won't be Christmas without you around," or "Christmas without you is like a Christmas tree without presents."

Nun's Attacker Being Sought In Tulsa

TULSA, Okla. (AP) — Authorities were searching Wednesday for a man who asked to use a telephone, then beat and raped a nun at a Tulsa church before throwing her into a pile of burning clothes.

The 51-year-old nun was in satisfactory condition at a Tulsa hospital with first- and second-degree burns over 15 percent of her body.

Police said the nun was assaulted, tied and thrown into clothing that had been set afire at her residence behind St. Jude Catholic Church Tuesday. She was rescued from the burning three-bedroom house by two policemen who noticed smoke pouring from the structure.

The victim gave authorities a description of her assailant but no arrests had been made.

"It's such a tragic, horrible thing — what can I say? What can we do?" said the Most Rev. Eusebius J. Beltran, bishop of Roman Catholic Church in Tulsa.

The nun is a member of the Franciscan Sisters of Perpetual Adoration of La-Crosse, Wis., and has been active in social work in low-income areas of north Tulsa, the bishop said.

Two Spaniards Washed Overboard By Waves

PASAJES, Spain (AP) — Twenty-four-foot waves washed two Spaniards from the deck of a tug in this northern harbor Wednesday as the tug struggled to free a Danish vessel driven onto the rocks, authorities said.

The men were presumed drowned.

Authorities said the seven-man crew of the 300-ton Gulstav Trader wasrescued from a small cave on the rocks. They wer unable to get to shore, only 30 feet away, because of the crashing waves, and rescue teams extricated them just before high tide would have flooded the grotto.

Man Arrested For Suspicion Of Possession

A 35-year-old Lubbock County man was arrested Friday morning for suspicion of possession of a controlled substance.

Reports indicate Lubbock police were alerted to be on the lookout for a blue Ford driven by a black male wearing a cowboy hat, who reportedly was selling pills in the city.

Officers saw the vehicle at the intersection of North Ash Avenue and East Municipal Drive and followed it to the 200 block of East Erskine.

A man matching the description of the suspect got out of the car, approached the officers and gave them his driver's license.

Reports indicate that when the officers asked the man if they could search his vehicle he said, "Yes, I have nothing to hide." The man then reportedly told police that all they would find would be his personal medication.

Five bottles containing a variety of pills were found by officers when they searched the glove compartment of the vehicle.

Police said the bottles contained an assortment of amphetamines, barbituates and pills containing morphine.

The man was booked into the Lubbock County jail.

In other activity, a 23-year-old waiter told police more than $1,100 worth of stereo equipment was stolen from his Volkswagen van.

Charles Patrick Moore of 2503 Ave. W told investigating officers the property, which included a pair of speakers, power booster, several cassette tapes, an AM-FM radio and cassette player stereo system, was taken from his 1973 van between 7:30 p.m. Tuesday and 9:30 a.m. Wednesday.

Reports indicate entry to the vehicle was gained through a vent window. Police said the burglars apparently had tampered with the vehicle's starter and ignition wire.

A 55-year-old railway engineer was grazed by a bullet about 8 p.m. Tuesday while he was pulling box cars near 26th Street and Avenue A.

Alvie James Scott of 2619 44th St. told police he was looking out the window of his locomotive when he felt something hit his back.

The Santa Fe Railway employee said he went home and discovered he had been struck by a bullet. Scott was taken to St. Mary's Hospital where he was treated and released.

Reports indicate the victim did not see who fired the shot.

In other activity, a 19-year-old Lubbock man was treated and released at Methodist Hospital after being assaulted in front of his home about 9:45 p.m. Tuesday.

Kenneth Lee Farley of 4409 52nd St. said his three assailants began following him as he drove away from the South Plains Mall at 6002 Slide Road. He said the men jumped him in front of his house, pulled his hair and stepped on his hand.

The suspects were described as tall, young white men. Farley said he had never seen the men before and that they appeared intoxicated.

Two Lubbock men, ages 17 and 21, were arrested about 5:30 a.m. Wednesday after they were caught allegedly burglarizing a car in the 1700-block of Avenue R.

Police Cpl. Tom Martin said the suspects had "wide-eyed, surprised" looks on their faces when he flashed his patrol car lights on them.

The men were taken into custody after it was discovered the car had been burglarized and car speakers ripped out.

Lubbock police cornered an 18-year-old burglary suspect inside Sewell's Big Country Store at 405 Idalou Highway shortly before midnight Tuesday.

Dispatched to answer an alarm, police arrested the man inside the business and took him to the county jail on suspicion of burglary. Store owner George Chester Sewell Jr. said nothing was taken from the business, but about $200 damage was done to a door which had been kicked open.

The suspect told police he had an accomplice in the break-in, according to reports.

A Crime Line informant led to the arrest Tuesday of Roy Lee Newton, a 28-year-old man charged with burglary.

After a $300 reward for information about the suspect was published Monday, police received a tip that Newton was hiding at his mother's East 15th Street residence.

Officers searched the house about 1:45 p.m. Tuesday and found the suspect hiding in a closet under some clothes.

Bob M. Wood of 5419 78th St. said his pickup truck was entered and a $600 set of diamond earrings and vehicle parts were stolen while the truck was parked in front of a 50th Street bowling alley between 9 a.m. Tuesday and 1:30 a.m. Wednesday.

William Rodney Trainor of 4124 17th St. said his house was burglarized between Saturday and 8 p.m. Tuesday and $600 in property stolen, including a television set, calculator, file cabinets, vacuum cleaner and clock radio.

About $1,000 in property, including a television set, radio and Christmas present, was the apparent loot taken in a break-in at Tim Alan Botkin's 2618 46th St. residence between 1 p.m. and 6 p.m. Tuesday.

Currently, Japan ranks second only to Canada as a major buyer of U.S. pork, according to Sperry New Holland.

Police Still Searching For Armed Intruder

By JACK DOUGLAS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock police Wednesday night still were searching for a black male who broke into the house of a former police captain's widow and fired two shots at her before fleeing. The woman was not injured.

Inez Forrester, widow of Capt. Leonard W. (Skeet) Forrester, who was head of the detective division until his death in 1968, told police a man entered her southeast Lubbock residence about 10:45 p.m., fired two shots at her and then fled.

Both of the .22-caliber bullets missed her by about a foot, according to investigating officers.

The intruder, described as a young, black man, apparently left behind a chunk of his skin. Police said a piece of skin, about 1½ inches long and ¼inch wide, was found hanging from broken glass on the front storm door.

"Blood and flesh (were also) found on the storm door glass and porch and driveway," reports stated.

Police said the skin and blood apparently came from the hand or arm of the suspect, who remained at large at noon today. There was no blood in Mrs. Forrester's living room — where shots were fired — indicating the man was injured as he left the house.

Mrs. Forrester said she awoke when her doorbell rang, but that she refused to answer it because of the time of night. She said she called a neighbor and asked him to check outside her house after the ringing stopped and then started up again.

When the 58-year-old woman began hearing tapping on her front door, she got up and started walking toward the living room. When she entered the room, the overhead light came on and she found herself confronted by the pistol-wielding man.

The intruder "took aim and started shooting" at Mrs. Forrester. Cpl. Jim Taylor stated in his report. One of the bullets ricocheted off a lamp and struck a wall furnace. The slug was found near the furnace, police said.

The other bullet penetrated the south wall of the living room.

After being shot at, Mrs. Forrester began screaming and running towards her bedroom, according to police.

Mrs. Forrester's 56-year-old neighbor said he heard the gunfire and started walking towards the woman's house when he saw the suspect run out her front door.

He said the man turned and fired his weapon once at him. The intruder missed his target and began running west, reports indicate.

The woman and neighbor told police they never saw the gunman get into a vehicle.

The neighbor said that rather than chasing the suspect, he went into Mrs. Forrester's house and found her uninjured.

An investigation revealed the burglar apparently gained entrance into the house by breaking the glass storm door and jimmying open the inner door, possibly with a screwdriver.

Capt. Wayne Love, who took over as head of the detective division after Forrester died of cancer in January 1968, said he felt the suspect was just surprised by the late captain's wife, and that she was not the target for a criminal seeking revenge against the dead policeman.

"He was just a surprised burglar in my opinion," Love said. "He was too young to have even been around when Forrester was captain."

The suspect was described as a black man in his late teens or early 20s, wearing a brown pullover short-sleeved shirt. Mrs. Forrester said the man was about 5 feet, 7 inches tall, and sported a small mustache and a short afro haircut.

Police did not have a suspect in custody by noon today, Love said.

Forrester, who was 51 when he died, joined the Lubbock Police Department in 1942. After serving in the Marine Corps from 1943 to 1946, he rejoined the department and soon became a desk sergeant and detective sergeant.

Forrester became a captain and inspector of police in 1951 and deputy chief of detectives in 1953. He was appointed head of the detective division in 1955.

Watchdog Not Discriminating

The Mark Stephenson family of near Idalou has a watchdog who really believes in doing his job. The problem is, he's not too discriminating about who he does it on.

The Stephensons heard the dog, an Australian Shepherd, barking about 3 a.m. Wednesday, they said, and Stephenson went outside to investigate about 7 a.m. when he heard a car horn honking.

A slightly chewed up man later identified as a Mexican illegally in the United States had gotten into the car to escape the dog and was honking the horn.

Idalou Police Chief T.L. Waggoner was called to the farm a mile north of Idalou. He also got a none-too-friendly reception from the overzealous dog, but escaped with apparently minor bites and torn pants.

Neither Waggoner nor the man, who was turned over to the Border Patrol in Lubbock Wednesday, was reported seriously injured.

Hale County Resident Crushed By Car

ABERNATHY (Special) — A Hale County resident was killed Tuesday night when he was crushed by a car he was working on.

Juan Garcia, an employee of a farm located near Cotton Center, was pronounced dead at the scene about 8:20 p.m. by Abernathy Justice of the Peace Jean Marr.

Reports indicate Garcia was repairing his car when the vehicle apparently slipped off of the blocks it was sitting on, crushing Garcia beneath it.

Government Begins Revision Of Label Laws

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government is beginning the first comprehensive revision of its food label laws in 40 years, proposing that processors put simpler language on their packages and provide shoppers with more explicit information on contents and nutrients.

"I don't think it should be necessary for the American consumer to go to the supermarket with a magnifying glass, a scientific background or a ouija board when buying food," said Carol Tucker Foreman, an assistant agriculture secretary.

She said that until now, the federal approach to labeling requirements has been "a tangle of duplication and inconsistency" because of the agencies' divided jurisdictions and their failure to coordinate.

The overhaul, which will require some new legislative authority, is being undertaken by the Food and Drug Administration and the Agriculture Department's food and consumer service, the two agencies which share responsibility for labeling laws. The Federal Trade Commission, which regulates food advertising, collaborated with the other agencies.

FDA Commissioner Jere Goyan said some segments of the food industry already have begun to supply the kinds of information which the agency proposals require. But voluntary action isn't enough and might even contribute to greater consumer confusion, he declared.

"If it's in the best interests of the American public, then it should be done for all," he told reporters.

The agencies already have the authority with which to order some changes. These include mandatory ingredient listings on standardized foods, percentage labelings for ingredients in meat and poultry products, open dating for perishable and semi-perishable meat and poultry products, and declarations of specific fats and oils for foods containing more than 10 percent fat before processing.

The agencies also want a label statement alerting consumers that ingredients are listed on a package in descending order according to the amount in a product. They are considering declarations of ingredients like sugars, salt and potassium, standardizing serving sizes and mandatory nutrition labeling for foods which contain added nutrients or on which nutrition claims are made.

Another proposal is to define terms like "low cholesterol" or "cholesterol free" to make the claims meaningful.

No cost estimates were available.

"We are troubled by what the three agencies appear to be proposing on food labeling," said Roger Coleman, a spokesman for the National Food Processors Association, after the agency announcement. "We cannot go into detail at this time because we have not seen their complete proposal."

But he asserted that "some of the proposals would add to costs of food without bringing corresponding benefits to consumers." He said voluntary programs are the best way of determining which label changes consumers want and need.

C. Manly Molpus, president of the American Meat Institute, agreed.

"We continue to believe that voluntary nutritional labeling should be maintained as opposed to a mandatory program. A voluntary program insures uniformity but also allows the marketplace to work."

The Community Nutrition Institute, by contrast, called for speedy implementation of the proposals.

"At a time of double-digit food inflation and major public concern about the relationship of food and health, the report has major economic, public health and food safety implications," said Ellen Haas of the institute.

The agency proposals are tentative and public and industry comments are being sought before regulations are proposed in final form.

The three federal regulatory agencies assembled these proposals after a series of public hearings across the country where organizations and consumers made their thoughts known. More than 9,000 written comments also were received.

Another set of changes would require congressional approval. Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., already has introduced legislation to implement these proposals. They include listing flavors if they pose a health risk to some people and listing the amount of all ingredients present in foods.

The agencies also are seeking more public input in three areas where no regulations are being proposed because of the complexity of the issues involved: imitation and substitute foods, the information to be required in nutrition labeling and the best ways of displaying nutrition information.

The Agriculture Department has jurisdiction over meat, poultry and egg products.

SHAH'S SECURITY BEEFED — Panamanian National Guardsmen arrive on Contadora Island off Panama to increase the protection for the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and his wife. Guards carrying automatic weapons stayed close to the shah Wednesday and a helicopter gunship hovered over the temporary residence, once owned by Gabriel Lewis Galindo, a former Panamanian ambassador to the United States. U.S. Awaits U.N. Talks ation if the United States decides at the United Nations to move to sanctions."

Concerning Carter's agreement to wait before seeking U.N. assistance, the White House official said "this is obviously not an indefinite delay." He later spoke of it continuing for "a matter of just a few days."

He said Carter is aware of the nature of Waldheim's discussions with Iranian officials but added that so many past attempts to mediate the crisis with Iran have come to naught that he would not want to characterize Waldheim's chances for success.

The official would not disclose the identity of the Iranian representatives with whom Waldheim is talking.

He declined to comment on whether Waldheim wrote to Carter because U.S. action in the United Nations was imminent.

Should the United States decide to attempt to initiate a punitive move against Iran in the U.N. Security Council, the official said, "the U.S. decision would not be controlled by the attitude of any other country" — a reference to a possible veto by the Soviet Union.

"The United States has been informed the secretary general is and has been engaged in intensive discussions with representatives of Iran and we have been asked to allow those discussions to be completed before we take any formal action," the official said.

"We have made it clear to the secretary general we are willing to allow some additional time for those discussions to proceed," he said.

Earlier, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said a congressional inquiry into American relations with Iran is "inevitable," but not before the hostages are freed.

Carter made the remark in response to a statement in which Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said a U.S. investigation of the alleged crimes of the deposed Shah of Iran would be a "very positive step" toward ending the crisis.

Carter said that whenever an event of the magnitude of the Iranian crisis occurs, congressional inquiries and investigations are inevitable.

No Preconditions

However, Carter stressed that there is no change in the basic U.S. insistence that there can be no preconditions to the release of the Americans held captive since a mob overran the embassy in Tehran on Nov. 4.

The militants holding the embassy immediately disavowed Ghotbzadeh's suggestion that an internal U.S. investigation of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi and American relations with Iran during the shah's regime could help break the stalemate.

The militants have demanded that the United States force the shah to return to Iran for trial. The shah currently is in Panama.

In an interview with the Washington Post, Ghotbzadeh was quoted as mentioning the possibility of a congressional inquiry along the lines of those held to assess the U.S. role in the Vietnam War.

Iranian "Vague"

The Post report said, however, that the Iranian foreign minister was "vague" about the type of investigation he was suggesting and was also not clear as to whether it should be started before the release of the hostages.

Department spokesman Carter said the administration was wary of "jumping" every time Ghotbzadeh made such comments in an interview, noting he has frequently been overruled by Iran's revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini or contradicted by the militants holding the hostages.

Indeed, shortly after Ghotbzadeh's interview with the Post was published, the militants at the embassy in Tehran disavowed the foreign minister's remarks.

A spokesman for the militants said a U.S. investigation would not be enough to win the freedom of the Americans. "The only thing that could free the hostages would be the return of the deposed shah," the spokesman for the militants said.

Military Option Higher

Meanwhile, there were signs that military action was moving higher on the administration's list of options in dealing with the crisis and that the option of seeking economic sanctions from the United Nations is moving lower.

Spokesman Carter inserted the word "violent" into the usual statement of policy about the American consideration of the use of military force, saying, "We have no intention to use violent military force in any way that would endanger the hostages."

That seemed to leave open the possibility of a naval blockade, which could be used as an economic lever. But the State Department spokesman refused to elaborate.

But officials cautioned against drawing the conclusion that military action was probable. "It would be very misleading to focus speculation on any specific option," spokesman Carter said.

Officials, speaking privately, acknowledged that they still do not know what the Soviet Union would do if the United States does decide to request sanctions against at the U.N. Security Council. The Soviets could veto sanctions if they chose.

Last week, officials said they expected to learn early this week from Soviet Ambassador Anatoly Dobrynin what the Soviet position would be.

But Dobrynin, they now understand, does not intend to return from Moscow for at least another week. There are other ways for the superpowers to negotiate on the issue, but thus far none have been used, the officials said.

The other avenue toward economic sanctions is for the United States to ask its allies voluntarily to restrict trde with Iran. But allies like Great Britain prefer the U.N. option because it would be universal and would not require them to enact special laws.

Anti-American Rage Heats Iran Funeral for him to have contacts with American officials in Stockholm than in Iran.

Khomeini said in a broadcast interview with an Egyptian author that President Carter is a "scared lion."

"This hullabaloo, these cries and military threats are old and desperate efforts and that is why he says something and changes it the next moment," Khomeini said in the interview.

The Iranian leader was apparently hitting back at Carter for pointing up contradictions between the recent more conciliatory line of Ghotbzadeh and the students' continued insistence that nothing but the return of deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi for trial will save the hostages from an espionage trial.

They contradicted him again Wednesday, denying a U.S. investigation of the shah's alleged crimes could end the crisis and mean freedom for the hostages. The students denied that claim, which Ghotbzadeh was quoted as making in an interview with the Washington Post published Wednesday.

The militants said such an investigation would not be enough. "The only thing that could free the hostages would be the return of the deposed shah," a student spokesman told The Associated Press.

The shah and his wife went from the United States to Panama's Contadora Island over the weekend. Khomeini and the students insist he be returned and called Panama a U.S. "puppet."

Killing Condemned

—Ayatollah Mohammed Kazem Shariat-Madari expressed his grief at the death of Mofateh, condemning the assassination and said such crimes should not deflect the nation from its "struggle against imperialism." Shariat-Madari, spiritual leader of the country's dissident Azerbaijani Turks, has opposed the new Islamic constitution that made Khomeini ruler for life.

—In Washington, State Department spokesman Hodding Carter said a congressional inquiry into American relations with Iran is "inevitable after the hostages are released."

—Iran's national Guidance Minister Nasser Minachi said Western news reports have led Iranians living abroad to think their homeland is in a state of chaos, according to the official news agency Pars. He was quoted as saying the "imperialist and Zionist" media have "distorted the news about Iran and choked off the voice of the revolution."

Christmas Cards Flood

—Some Christmas spirit has come to the embassy in the form of a flood of Christmas cards from Americans. Some 8,000 cards already have been delivered to the embassy — some on regular postal deliveries and most by a Los Angeles radio reporter, Alex Paen, who invited the greetings in broadcasts.

A naval blockade of Iran is one U.S. option in dealing with the crisis. While such an action would not necessarily cause bloodshed, it would be more punitive than economic actions taken so far.

Reporters in Washington learned of the possibility of a naval blockade under circumstances that barred any reference to sources. When White House officials heard later about some of the ensuing reports, press secretary Jody Powell sought out reporters to suggest that some accounts emphasized the option too strongly.

OPEC Snags On Uniform Price Level

said after the meeting he thought an agreement could be reached, but the base price is still a major issue and "something we are going to discuss."

Mana Said al Otaiba, oil minister of the United Arab Emirates, told reporters, "There is no agreement yet on prices. We agreed not to agree. We are still very far apart. It may take another session or two to work this out."

Otaiba said the ministers might continue talking in Caracas through tonight in an effort to reach agreement but it was possible they would have to break up their conference without a firm price schedule.

Sources said there were two major points to the dispute: how high the cartel's prices should go, and by how much members could raise their prices over the current $23.50 base.

The economic commission of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries has suggested a base price of $24 to $25 and technical experts from the producing countries conferred through the morning and afternoon with the ministers, sources said.

If no agreement is reached, the 13 members of OPEC could charge for their oil whatever they wanted, or thought they could get.

Saudi Arabia has huge investments in the United States and does not want the value of the dollar to weaken because of a shocking increase in oil prices to its major customers — the United States and other Western nations.

Last week, Saudi Arabia raised its price, the cartel's traditional "benchmark," from $18 to $24 a barrel and said it would maintain that price through the first quarter of 1980.

If the base is accepted, top quality oils from Libya, Algeria and Nigeria, which usually fetch at least $5 more than the standard, could be selling for more than $30.

Libya already has raised its price from $26.27 to $30 for a 42-gallon barrel.

A barrel of oil can be made into about 20 gallons of gasoline.

FIVE WOUNDED

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — Troops fired into a crowd of about 500 demonstrators Wednesday evening, and witnesses said at least five persons were wounded. They said the demonstrators set fire to several buses in Cenenario, located in the southeastern part of the capital.

'World Citizen' Ordered Out Of U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American-born Army veteran who renounced his citizenship 31 years ago cannot remain in the United States as a self-styled "citizen of the world," a federal judge said Wednesday.

Garry Davis, a World War II bomber pilot and son of the late band leader Meyer Davis, had asked U.S. District Judge Thomas A. Flannery to recognize a passport issued by Davis' organization, the World Service Athority.

The group, based in Basel, Switzerland, says its goal is to promote world citizenship and universal human rights.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service ruled in 1978 that Davis' passport could not be recognized in this country. He had no other legal papers that would allow him to stay in the United States, Flannery said.

Davis, 58, took a formal oath of renunciation of his U.S. citizenship at the U.S. Embassy in Paris in 1948. He issued a statement at the time saying that peace could only come through a world government and therefore he considered himself a citizen of the world.

Davis said he has been jailed 27 times in 20 countries because he lacked valid papers.

Protests Widen Against Shah In Panama City

PANAMA CITY, Panama (AP) — Police and soldiers swinging lengths of rubber hose broke up a campus rally Wednesday night that was the fourth protest in two days of the deposed shah of Iran's presence on Contadora Island.

Witnesses said several people were beaten up but that their injuries did not appear serious. Several persons were arrested, among them Dr. Miguel Antonio Vernal, a political science professor identified by police as the main leader of the rally on the University of Panama campus.

Other protesters retreated to the university and erected barricades along the main avenue beside it. Troops surrounded the campus and teargas was fired, but by mid-evening there was no sign of the troops. The barricades remained.

Carries White Flag

Large posters protesting the shah's presence in Panama could be seen on the campus. One read, "Merry Christmas. Fight the shah."

During the morning, protesters pelted police wih rocks, set ne car on fire and smashed windows on a half dozen others.

Police fired tear gas and a dozen shotgun rounds to disperse the estimated 300 students at the National Institute, the city's largest high school three miles from the U.S. Embassy where leftists protested Tuesday.

Ambulances carried a dozen students away from the scene, but the extent of their injuries was not known.

"Out With Shah"

The students were shouting "Down with the shah! Out with the shah! Down with the government!" Some threw rocks, and two Molotov cocktails thrown at police exploded harmlessly on the ground.

Police motorcyclists drove straight into the crowd, firing tear gas. Other police fired shotguns into the crowd at a range of 200 feet, dispersed the students and then herded them back into the school. The police commander ordered his forces not to retaliate when students resumed the rock barrage from windows in the school building. The students were allowed to leave the school and return home at midday.

That protest caused Mayor Roberto Valequez to ban further demonstrations, including two scheduled later in the day.

Any demonstration carried out without meeting the regulations will be declared illegal and the national guard will be asked to break it up," he said in a telephone interview.

Protesters Beaten

But in late afternoon, about 200 adult protesters carrying a wire and papier mache effigy of the shah tried to hold a rally in front of a church three miles from the U.S. Embassy. They were dispersed by several dozen police who beat several of the men to the ground with heavy rubber truncheons, then took the men away. Demonstrators threw rocks at the police.

Two buses arrived carrying more demonstrators and police detained several of those aboard.

A half dozen national guardsmen on Wednesday protected the U.S. Embassy where the day before 300 leftist students demonstrated, lowering the American flag, dragging it along the ground and shredding it. The national guard dispersed that demonstration quickly and without injury, an embassy spokesman said.

The students were protesting President Aristides Royo's decision to grant sanctuary to ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, who last Saturday moved from Lackland Air Force Base in Texas to the island resort 35 miles southeast of here in the Pacific Ocean.

The former monarch is trying to regain his strength after more than a month of cancer and gall bladder treatment at a New York hospital. Doctors said the shah's condition had "deteriorated" and that he started chemotherapy for cancer of the lymph system while in Texas.

The shah, on leaving the United States, said he hoped his departure would improve chances that militants holding the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, Iran, will free their 50 American hostages. The militants reiterated their intention to try the hostages as spies.

Iran's former Islamic prosecutor Ayatollah Sadegh Khalkhali, a close associate of revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, has ordered teams of gunmen to South America to assassinate the shah and his wife Farah, Iran's official Pars news agency reported. Khakhali has claimed his agents gunned down the shah's nephew, Shahriar Moustapha Chafik, on a Paris street two weeks ago.

Death Given Seven In Park Killing

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — An army court martial sentenced former intelligence agency chief Kim Jae-kyu and six other persons to death Thursday in the Oct. 26 assassination of President Park Chung-hee.

Another defendant accused of destroying evidence by burying guns used in the killing of Park and five of his bodyguards was sentenced to three years in prison.

Kim Jae-kyu, the former KCIA chief, shot Park across a dinner table while his agents gunned down the presidential guards who were eating nearby in the KCIA dining room.

In his final statement to the court on Tuesday, Kim asked the death penalty for himself, but urged the five-member court to spare the "innocent sheep" who followed him.

"I am happy to have found good cause for death, and I do not want to beg for my life," he said.

Kim said it was "heartbreaking" for him to kill Park but he had to do it to lay the foundation for a peaceful transfer of power in South Korea, and to end the cycle of violent overthrow of governments.

Park took power in a coup 18 years ago and wrote a new constitution to buttress his one-man rule. He also issued several decrees banning political dissent and jailed many of his opponents.

Kim testified he killed Park "to restore democracy" to South Korea but the chief prosecutor called him "a liar" and said he planned the murder to take over the presidency himself.

The prosecution asked the death penalty for Kim and six KCIA agents accused of murder with intent for sedition and attempted sedition. It asked for the maximum five-year sentence for the other KCIA agent accused of destroying evidence.

The five-member court martial panel found that the seven sentenced to death were guilty on both charges.

All but one of he death sentences will be appealed automatically to the army court of appeals. The decision then can be appealed to the supreme court and a final death warrant must be signed by President Choi Kyu-hah, who was premier under Park and was recently named president by the electoral college. Choi has promised elections.

Shah's Sister Buys Home In California

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Princess Shams, eldest sister of the deposed shah of Iran, has purchased a hilltop home in an exclusive area of Santa Barbara for $1.5 million, the Los Angeles Herald Examiner reported Wednesday.

While described as unimposing on the outside, the 18-room home is considered sumptuous inside with an enormous basement and separate servants quarters, the newspaper said.

The sprawling, one-story white house, with yellow trim, is on the crest of a hill and is reached by private palm-lined roads.

It has its own water reservoir. It also has its own gasoline pumps and storage tanks.

For the several years that the house has been on the market, real estate brokers have boasted of its view of Mount Carmel.

Present plans include a full year of renovation and redecorating in preparation for the new owner, the Herald Examiner said.

Princess Shams is believed to be living in an apartment in the Watergate housing-office complex in Washington D.C.

Escrow on the property was closed under the name of Byron Hayes, an attorney with offices in Los Angeles. Hayes could not be reached for comment.

Princess Shams previously owned a mansion in Beverly Hills that was besieged by anti-Shah Iranian rioters last Jan. 2. She and the shah's 90-year-old mother, Tadj Ul Moluk, were inside as the Iranians hurled rocks and set fires

UNIMPRESSED — Rosalynn Carter calls for a chorus of "Happy Birthday" for Sarah Carter, who appears ready to doze off in the First Lady's arm. Leaders Drop Plans To Finish Profits Tax Bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congressional leaders dropped plans Wednesday for getting a finished "windfall-profits" tax to President Carter by Christmas.

As a 26-member Senate-House conference committee started negotiations on the bill, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill told reporter he sees no chance that the complex measure can be enacted this month. In fact, he added, "I'm looking at probably in February."

The committee's first session indicated O'Neill may be correct. The lawmakers met for less than two hours to listen as staff members spelled out some of the differences between the two versions.

The panel agreed on only one point: An income-tax credit in the Senate bill to help families earning up to $22,000 a year pay their energy costs will not be available when 1979 tax returns are filed starting next month.

However, that leaves the door open for taking the 1979 credit when 1980 returns are filed — if the conferees in fact agree to allow the credit of up to $200 at all.

Aides working closely with the conference committee said privately that the bill could be finished early in January. But there are growing doubts that Congress will return from a holiday recess before Jan. 22.

Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd said last week that if the tax bill cannot be sent to Carter this week, Congress should return to work Dec. 27 and finish it. Sen. Russell B. Long, D-La,, chairman of the Senate delegation to the conference, also had been optimistic of completing the bill this week.

Such a delay probably would have no effect on the tax, although it would require Congress to make the levy retroactive to Jan. 1.

There are several major differences between the tax bill passed by the House in June and the version accepted by the Senate on Monday. The most obvious is that the House bill would cost the oil industry an estimated $277 billion in the 1980s while the Senate bill would cost $178 billion.

House leaders have said they fear a hurried conference during the holiday season would result in a bill far closer to the weakened Senate version.

The money gap between the two bills reflects the philosophical difference between the two chambers on energy policy, although either measure could attain Carter's goal of reducing dependence on imported oil.

The House bill indicates a desire to raise as much revenue as possible in order to pay for developing alternate sources of energy and to help lower-income Americans cope with fuel costs. The Senate version is weighted far more heavily toward allowing the oil industry to keep more money to be reinvested in the search for more oil and gas.

Those fundamental differences are obvious in how the House and Senate treated oil yet to be found and the independent producers who drill most of the nation's exploratory wells.

The House tax would allow no special treatment for the 12,000 independents which, by definition, include any oil company not affiliated with one of the major firms. The Senate voted, at an 11-year cost of about $26 billion, to allow tax-free treatment of the first 1,000 barrels oil oil produced each day by an independent.

"Newly discovered" oil, which by the end of the decade will be about 43 percent of U.S. production, would face a 60-percent tax in the House bill. The Senate was stalemated for days before agreeing to a 10-percent tax on such production.

Carter urged enactment of a "windfall profits" tax to reduce the money the oil industry would be allowed to keep as a result of his decision to phase out price controls on U.S. crude oil.

Youth Survives Jump From Bridge

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A 17-year-old youth who jumped from the Golden Gate Bridge on Wednesday has survived the 210-foot plunge into San Fransisco Bay.

He is one of 12 people in the span's 42-year history to survive the plunge, authorities said.

Todd Sherrett of San Anselmo was listed in good condition at Letterman Army Medical Center.

Sherrett was spotted in the water by a bridge worker who had seen him jump, said Robert E. Lee IV, a ranger for the Golden Gate National Recreational Area on the bay's east shore.

Lee tossed Sherrett a life ring, and the youth swam to shore with it. Authorities took Sherrett, dressed in jeans, a sweater and hiking boots, to nearby Fort Point, where he was wrapped in blankets and placed in front of a heater.

"The only thing he said was, 'Boy I'm all messed up. Everything is all messed up,'" said Lee.

The bridge has claimed the lives of 696 persons who have jumped from it, officials said.

Study: Surgery Risks Low with Experience

BOSTON (AP) — A review of more than 800,000 operations confirms the long-held suspicion that complicated surgery is far riskier when done at hospitals where doctors seldom perform it.

The study found that the chance of dying from some operations was 25 percent to 41 percent higher than necessary when they were undertaken at hospitals that do them only once in a while.

The report, prepared at Stanford University and at the University of California, concludes that especially tricky operations, such as open-heart surgery and hip replacements, should be limited to a few regional hospitals that specialize in them.

The analysis, conducted at Stanford and at the University of California at San Francisco's Health Policy Program, was based on the outcome of 842,622 operations conducted in 1974 and 1975 at 1,498 hospitals. It was published in Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine.

Medical experts have long assumed that complicated operations are safer at hospitals were the staffs are familiar with them, but this is the first time that anyone has set out to discover whether the belief is true.

The researchers checked the death rates from 12 different kinds of operations. They found that for some, the chance of death fell increasingly as the number of these operations grew. Among these were open-heart surgery, coronary bypass operations and surgery on blood vessels and the prostate.

For other kinds of surgery, the death rate reached the lowest level if hospitals performed relatively few such operations annually — 10 or more a year. Among these were hip surgery.

"If all total hip replacements were performed with the results found in hospitals doing 50 or more procedures a year," the researchers wrote, "32 percent of all in-hospital deaths of patients with that procedure could be averted."

For a few simpler operations, the statistics showed that it made no noticeable difference whether the hospitals did them frequently or almost never.

The doctors looked at the number of deaths resulting from coronary bypass operations in hospitals where fewer than 200 of them are performed each year. They concluded that 41 percent of the deaths there from these operations could have been averted if they had been done at more experienced hospitals.

Harold S. Luft, a health economist who directed the study, said in an interview that the botched operations may be the fault of the operating room staffs, not the doctors.

"It may be that the doctor knows how to do the procedure, but the nursing staff or the anesthesiologist sees so few of them in a year that they're not ready for certain emergencies," Luft said.

He said that sending patients to regional centers for complicated surgery does not mean that this work should be done only in big-city medical centers. Several medium-size hospitals in small cities in a region could specialize in different operations.

Witness Protection Spurred By Deaths

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Shocked by the recent slayings of three rape victims who had agreed to testify against their alleged attackers, authorities in the Kansas City area are trying to put teeth in a witness protection program.

The body of the latest victim, Sandra Caswell, was recovered from a shallow grave in Lafayette County last Friday, five weeks after the 40-year-old physically handicapped woman told police that she was raped and sodomized by two men.

John Knaus of the Missouri Council on Criminal Justice said federal funds are being sought for a witness protection program.

"The victim has been the long-neglected person in the criminal justice system," Knaus said. "In the past, the defendant has been getting all the attention. No one has come to the aid of the victim. He's more or less on his own."

The victim's family said she had expressed fear for her life prior to her disappearance Nov. 24, but police said they knew of no such threats.

"It hurts like hell to have to deal with a person who has been victimized and traumatized, then have to go out and dig their body up," Kansas City police Det. Clarence Gibson said Tuesday.

"What can I say? No one regrets this more than the people who work the system."

Since this summer, when police began responding to any witness or victim reporting a threat or harassment, charges of witness intimidation, harassment and tampering have been filed six times. County officials want federal help in expanding the work of the prosecutor's office to include witness protection.

Gibson said nine Kansas City detectives now handle 350 to 400 rape cases a year and murders such as the Caswell case make them "paranoid."

"But as long as the system is what it is and people are allowed to make bond, you can't do anything about it," Gibson added.

James K. Betts, 28, and Everett Joseph Stanfield, 45, were arraigned on sexual offense charges in connection with the rape of Miss Caswell. They were released — Betts on $10,000 bond and Stanfield on $15,000.

On Monday, Betts and Elias Frank Brooks Jr. were charged with capital murder in the death of Ms. Caswell and were ordered held without bond.

The slaying of Ms. Caswell marked the third time in 15 months that a rape victim who had agreed to testify had been found dead in the Kansas City area.

Art student Katherine Jo Allen was shot to death last August after agreeing to testify against her accused attacker, Larry Jackson Walter Blair Jr., a former cellmate of Jackson's in the Jackson County jail, has been charged with capital murder in Miss Allen's death.

In early December, Dale A. Patterson was convicted of capital murder in the slaying of Addie Wheeler. He had been charged with raping the woman, but she disappeared before she could testify and was found shot to death in September 1978. He was sentenced to life in prison.

Sidney Willens, a Kansas City attorney who is pushing for a witness protection program, expressed dismay at the latest killing, calling the volunteer witness the key to successful criminal prosecution.

"Without these volunteers, the paid professionals who try to make the system work might as well go home," he said.

Some 240 criminal cases have been dropped in Jackson County during the past year because witnesses refused to testify.

Secret Court To Hear New Motions In Case

LAKE CITY, Fla. (AP) — New motions by Theodore Robert Bundy's attorneys will be heard in a secret court session Thursday, Circuit Judge Wallace Jopling has decided.

Jopling said one of the new defense motions regards evidence in the murder of Kimberly Diane Leach. Bundy's trial on murder-kidnap charges in Miss Leach's death is scheduled to begin Jan. 7 in Orlando.

Bundy was sentenced to death this summer for the January 1978 murders of two sorority sisters at Florida State University in Tallahassee.

Reformed Thief Sends Cash, Apology To Florida Bank

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — The Capital City First National Bank got an apology in the mail this week from an unidentified reformed thief, and $750 in cash.

Bank officials were baffled but delighted by the windfall.

"In 42 years of banking, I've never seen anything like it," said Godfrey Smith, bank president. "You read about so many bad things going on, it's wonderful to know someone can do this."

Smith said the letter arrived in Tuesday's mail, with no signature, but an Ohio postmark. After a bank employee opened it, he turned it over to Smith.

It read:

"Dear Sir: As a teenager I stole several hundred dollars from your bank. I am an adult now and have just recently been 'born again' in Jesus Christ.

"I would like to return more than I took and beg for your forgiveness.

"God bless you."

Enclosed was $750 in cash.

Smith's first reaction was to check if the seven $100 bills and the one $50 bill were genuine. They were.

He said he had no idea how much money was originally taken from the bank, or even when the theft occurred. Bank records do not show an unsolved case involving that much money, Smith said.

"It could have been anyone from a teller who took some money while working here, to someone who reached across the counter and took some," Smith said.

"We just don't know."

Lubbock Youth Alive—Thanks To Efforts Of Area Residents

LICKING LEUKEMIA — Next week's Christmas celebration will be sweet for the Roger Engles family, especially because 9-year-old Brent is making tremendous progress toward conquering a four year-old case of leukemia. His chances of survival were less than 20 percent three years ago, but since the family moved from Lubbock to Houston, where he could receive treatment, his chances of survival are now an optimistic 85 percent. (Staff Photo by Dennis Copeland).

Brent Engels is alive today, and the parents of the bright-eyed, freckled 9-year-old believe the people of Lubbock and the South Plains are part of the reason.

Three and a half years ago, Brent, then a first grader at Hardwick Elementary School, went to the doctor. His mother says "he was barely sick." His doctor said differently — Brent had leukemia.

The March 12, 1976, diagnosis threw the Engels family into a crisis. "It's a shock, you hear the death knell when the doctor says leukemia," remembers the boy's father, Roger.

"We were pretty low," Engels, who then was director of Texas Boys' Ranch, continued. "But the people of this community — of the whole South Plains — stepped in and really made a difference."

Friends held a blood drive in their home, someone started an emergency medical fund which reached $2,000, and neighbors volunteered to care for the Engels' other sons — Noel and Shane — while Brent and his mother traveled to Houston for the boy's treatment.

"Money came from people we don't even know. Churches of many denominations were praying for our son 24 hours a day," recalls Mary Engels, her eyes glistening.

"We're grateful to those people for their outpouring of love," she continued. "They really practiced their faith."

Almost immediately after Brent's illness was diagnosed as acute lymphatic leukemia, he began taking chemotherapy at Texas Children's Hospital in Houston. His mother remembers the frequent flights the two made, and their stays in Houston while Brent was under observation at the hospital.

Finally, the family moved to Houston, where Engels now is assistant chief of the juvenile probation department.

Brent began his chemotherapy with a 20 percent chance to live, says his mother. Three years later, doctors say his cancer is in remission, and the odds are better than reversed — 85 percent — that the disease will not claim him.

His parents credit the treatment with saving Brent. "It was rough, we knew it would be rough," said Mary Engels. "But with support groups it is possible, and it saved our son's life."

There is nothing about Brent Engel to betray the strain of the prolonged chemical treatments today. He and his brothers, now aged 12 and 8, played noisily on the snowy front lawn of Lubbock friends the family recently visited.

"He doesn't remember the worst of it," says his mother.

His parents remember, however. They remember the pain of their child's early brush with death, the strain of constantly making allowances for the disease — "It pulls some families apart," says Engels, "ours it brought closer together" — and the help they received to finally triumph over it all.

"You hear about the people of the South Plains, but you never know how good they can be until you're down and out," said Engels.

"We waited three and a half years, but our message now is thank you to everyone, and Merry Christmas."

Slowdown In Lubbock Construction Reflects National Trend, Official Says

By MARY ALICE ROBBINS
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Anyone trying to buy a new home in Lubbock today probably has discovered two facts: the houses cost more and there are fewer of them to choose from.

"The construction of new homes is slower than it was last year," noted M.B. Smith, executive officer for the West Texas Home Builders Association.

According to Smith's figures, new housing starts in the city are down 27 percent from 1978. During the first 11 months of last year, building permits were issued for 1,259 houses. In the same period this year, there were only 918 house permits, Smith said.

The situation in Lubbock merely reflects what is going on across the nation. Housing starts have tumbled by more than 22 percent in the past two months and are running at a near-recession annual rate of 1.5 million units, government figures show.

Figures released by the Commerce Department Tuesday show housing starts are down 28 percent from November 1978.

Smith said the reason for all of this is the tight money policy adopted Oct. 6 by the Federal Reserve. "There are many people who want to buy houses, but the availability and cost of money is a real problem," he noted.

To illustrate his point, Smith described the current situation if a consumer attempts to purchase a $65,000 home. With a required 10 percent down, the homebuyer would be looking at a mortgage loan totaling $58,500 over a 30-year period. Under more normal conditions with a 9½ percent interest rate, the purchaser's monthly payment would run $492, Smith said. However, with the present interest rate of between 11.5 and 12 percent, the monthly payment would climb to $602.

Not only does money cost more, it also has become less available for mortgage loans, Smith said. Even if people can afford to pay the higher monthly payments, they are finding it more difficult to obtain loans.

The tight money situation has caused contractors to cut back in their home building, Smith said. He estimated that right now, there are less than 250 new houses available for sale in Lubbock. At times in the past, there have been as many as 700 new homes on the market.

Smith expressed hope that the tight money situation will improve by March or April of 1980. He noted that the prime lending rate has dropped in the past three weeks from 16 percent to 15 percent. If the prime lending rate drops down to between 12 and 13 percent, Smith said the interest rate charged to homebuyers should be around 10 percent.

However, the chief economist for the National Association of Home Builders is not too optimistic. Michael Sumichrast sees the drop in housing starts as an indication that the nation is in a recession.

"I don't think we are going to see much improvement until a year from now or the first half of 1981," Sumichrast said.

Mortgage Bond Program Talks Slated Today

By SYLVIA TEAGUE
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The City Council will hold a special meeting at 12:45 p.m. today to discuss establishing a tax-exempt mortgage bond program and to set up hearings on a proposed South Plains Electric Co-op rate increase.

The council had been slowly moving towards the establishment of a program under which tax-exempt bonds would be sold to make money available to lenders for home loans.

However, rumored Congressional action on regulating the sale of the bonds has prompted the council to initiate the program by forming a non-profit corporation to oversee the program.

A bill now under consideration by the U.S. House would prohibit any such bond program in Lubbock by requiring cities to have taken steps to begin such a program before April 24, 1979.

However, City Manager Larry Cunningham said he has learned that bill may be amended on the House floor to allow bond programs in cities which took affirmative steps before Dec. 31, 1979.

To ensure the city would quality under such an amendment, the council will consider applying for a non-profit corporation charter from the Secretary of State for the corporation which would govern the bond program.

The council would appoint the board of directors of the corporation as required by state law.

The opposition of local lenders to the bond program was a primary reason for the council's foot-dragging on the bonds. But council members now say those lenders have radically changed their stance and now support the program.

Lubbock homebuilders and real estate dealers also are pushing the bond program to provide some mortgage money in Lubbock.

Also at the meeting, council members will consider a proposed rate increase sought by South Plains Electric Cooperative.

Under the state Public Utility Regulatory Act, the council has the authority to suspend the rates for 120 days to permit an examination of the proposed changes.

The co-op had proposed an effective date of Jan. 1, so council action to suspend the rates would delay implementation of the new rate structure until April 30.

Cunningham said he expects the council to set a time for hearings on the proposed rates to determine if they are justified.

Many of the customers served by the co-op in Lubbock reside in areas recently annexed by the city. Which utility should serve those areas is a matter of litigation in the courts and before the Public Utility Commission.

Public Hearing Scheduled For Charter's Application

The hearing will be held at the Savings and Loan Department offices at 1004 Lavaca, Austin.

SOVIETS BUY MORE CORN

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Soviet Union has bought an additional 700,000 metric tons of U.S. corn for delivery through next Sept. 30. The latest sales, reported Tuesday by the Agriculture Department, boosted to about 14.9 million metric tons of grain the Soviet Union has bought from the United States for shipment in 1979-80. It includes more than 10.4 million of corn and almost 4.5 million of wheat. A metric ton is about 2,205 pounds and is equal to 39.4 bushels of corn or 36.7 bushels of wheat.

Woman Constructs From Gingerbread, Icing

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

There's a peanut brittle walk lined with life-savers that leads to a wonderful little gingerbread house. And on the lawn, elves and animals (the only things not edible), cavort around a realistic green Christmas tree fashioned from an ice-cream cone and icing (who would ever guess?)

The miniature house itself just sparkles, with decorations of gum-drops, small candy canes, round peppermints, and more. There's even a fat Santa on the rooftop — hope he doesn't get stuck in the gingerbread chimney.

Mrs. Roy (Mickey) Markle made this exciting gingerbread house, but it's only one of many she's made this year (and for the past ten years, too). Some of her "masterpieces" she donated to the Reese Officers Wives' Christmas bazaar (all sold in 'jig' time); others she has accepted orders on and sold; and more have been given to family and friends.

Mrs. Markle saw her first gingerbread house about ten years ago, while the family was in Germany with the Air Force. "The ones in Germany were decorated more simply than those I make now," she said, "but I was intrigued and wanted to try to make one, too. After my first attempt, I began to make others and have continued to do so every Christmas."

The gifted homemaker emphasizes anyone can make a gingerbread house, though an initial one might not be as professional-looking, after gaining some experience. "Do try," she said, "because everyone likes a fanciful gingerbread house at Christmas."

Mrs. Markle's pattern designs and recipes follow.

GINGERBREAD HOUSE

1 cup shortening
6 cups flour
4 tsp. soda
1 cup hot water
1- 1/2 tsps. salt
1 cup dark molasses
1 tsp. cloves
2 cups brown sugar
2 tsps. ginger

Cream shortening and brown sugar, adding molasses. Sift dry ingredients, adding alternately with the hot water. Add more flour if necessary, to make dough very stiff. Chill well. Roll dough on greased sheet 1/4-inch thick and cut the pattern in the dough, removing extra dough from around pattern. You will need two pieces from each pattern.

Bake each pattern piece until done (15-20 minutes) at 350 degrees. Remove immediately and very carefully from cookie sheet and cool. Do not crack or break pieces. When cold, prepare paste and build your house, using the paste just as you would cement. Hold each section together until paste has hardened. Use your imagination to decorate!

PASTE

Use powdered sugar and lemon juice to put house together. Mixture should be thick, like paste.

BASIC ICING

1 cup good-quality shortening
2 pounds confectioner's sugar
1 2 cup cold water (minus one tbsp.)
1 tsp. vanilla
1/8 tsp. salt

Blend together until smooth.

ROYAL ICING
(To be used only for icicles)

1 egg white
1 4 tsp. cream of tartar
1-1 2 cups sugar

Beat five minutes.

For printing purposes, actual sizes of pattern pieces could not be shown. However, appropriate measurements of each are given.

GINBERBREAD HOUSE — Mickey Markle displays the ginberbread houses that she enjoys making for family and friends during the holiday season.

USDA Evaluates School Lunches

WASHINGTON (Special) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has awarded a $3,515,835 contract to System Development Corp., a Santa Monica, Calif. firm, for a major study of school food programs.

The contractor will evaluate school lunch and breakfast programs over a 2 1/2 year period, according to Assistant Secretary of Agriculture Carol Tucker Foreman.

"This study represents the first efforts to assess on a national basis how effective these programs are in promoting children's health and well-being," she said. "It will provide information we need to target our food programs to the nutritional needs of school children."

The contractor will focus primarily on the impact of school lunch and breakfast on children's nutritional status, and how well the programs serve needy children. It will also explore the overall impact on children, their families and schools.

The department's Food and Nutrition Service provides states with funds and donated foods for schools and institutions that operate the school lunch and breakfast programs. Participating schools and institutions must serve meals based on department nutrition standards and must provide eligible children with free or reduced price meals. Currently, school lunches reach more than 26 million children and more than 3 million participate in the school breakfast program.

The study will be conducted in four phases. The first phase will review and summarize existing data on current operations of the programs. Phase two will create designs for the research to be carried out in phases three and four. A report to be submitted in March 1981 will provide information required by Senate Resolution 90, which requests the secretary to make a study of programs administered under the National School Lunch Act and the Child Nutrition Act of 1966.

A final study report is due in January 1982.

With all the Christmas cooking you're probably doing, what about some everyday recipes? But we'll have some fancy ones, too, this week.

Libby Swinney, Lubbock, promises the following recipe is an exact duplicate of "Cauliflower Salad" served at Furr's.

CAULIFLOWER SALAD

1 head cauliflower, broken into small flowerets
Processed-type cheese, cut in 1/2-inch cubes, to make 1 cup
1/2 cup chopped bell pepper
1/2 cup chopped celery
1/2 cup salad olives, drained

Dress with 1/3 to 1/2 cup real mayonnaise. Tomato wedges may also be added, but the salad keeps longer without the tomatoes.

Ready for some requests?

Mrs. R.K. (Carol) O'Loughlin, Lubbock, would like a recipe for fettucchini.

Lorene Dinwiddie, Shallowater, would appreciate having a recipe for an old-fashioned vinegar cobbler. She wrote, "My mother used to make these - they were delicious."

This may not help Lorene, but here is a recipe for "Vinegar Pie," as supplied by Teresa McNabb of Amherst. Teresa found the recipe in "Progressive Farmer Southern Country Cookbook".

VINEGAR PIE

2 tbsps. butter or oleomargarine
1/2 cup sugar
3 tbsps. all-purpose flour
2 tsp. ground cinnamon
1/2 tsp. ground cloves
1/2 tsp. ground allspice
1 egg
2 tbsps. vinegar
1 cup water
1 baked 8-inch pie shell

Cream the butter and sugar. Measure and sift flour, cinnamon, cloves and allspice; add to creamed mixture. Then, add egg, vinegar and water. Cook in top of double boiler until thick. Pour into pastry shell that has been baked two or three minutes. Bake at 350 degrees until done.

Yvonne Cash, Lubbock, wrote, "The enclosed recipe for 'Vinegar Roll Pie' is my mother's (Mary Porter Nichols of Dickens County). The recipe was passed down from her mother (Mrs. S.L. 'Pearl' Porter). My mother recalls that we ate a lot of vinegar pie, and my kids call it 'Vinegarone Pie'."

VINEGAR ROLL PIE

2 cups water
1 cup sugar
1 stick oleomargarine
1/4 cup vinegar
Pinch salt
Cook slowly for 15 minutes.
For Dough:
2 cups flour
1/4 cup shortening
Enough water to moisten

Roll dough out thin. Put sugar, nutmeg or cinnamon and butter on dough, roll up like a cinnamon roll and cut in 1-inch pieces crosswise. Place side by side in baking dish or pan. With the combined ingredients of water, sugar, oleomargarine, vinegar and salt, pour mixture on dough and bake at 350 degrees.

Mrs. Stephen (La Rita) Hoyt, Lubbock, wrote, mentioning that in the course of private practice as a speech-language pathologgst there are occasions to swap recipes with clients. The following is one from someone who lives in Muleshoe.

RICE SALAD

4 1/2 cups hot rice (1 1/2 cups raw rice cooked in 3 cups chicken broth; toss and cool)
1 cup chopped ripe olives
2 chopped hardboiled eggs
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1 1/2 cup chopped celery
1/4 cup chopped dill pickle
1 small, chopped onion
1/4 cup cooking oil
1 1/2 tsp. salt
2 tbsps. vinegar
1 1/2 tsp. salt
Dash of pepper
Toss and chill. Serves eight.

Lois Williams, Lubbock submitted the following recipe:

PUMPKIN BREAD

2 2/3 cups sugar
2/3 cup cooking oil
4 eggs
2 cups pumpkin
3 1/2 cups flour
1/2 tsp. baking powder
2 tsp. baking soda
1 1/2 tsp. salt
1 tsp. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. cloves
2/3 cup chopped nuts
2/3 cup water
2/3 cup raisins

Sift flour, add dry ingredients, sift again. Add raisins and nuts. Mix so nuts will not sink to bottom. Add oil to sugar and mix. Add eggs one at a time. Add pumpkin, then add water. Beat until creamy.

Divide into two loaf pans that have been greased and floured. Bake for 1 1/2 hours at 350 degrees.

Sandra Cameron, Lubbock, enclosed this unusual recipe. About the recipe, she said, "This is a thin bread, spread with filling, then rolled up and sliced. The loaf makes a very attractive bread."

PUMPKIN BREAD

3 eggs
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup pumpkin
1 tsp. lemon juice
3/4 cup flour
1 tsp. baking powder
1/2 tsp. nutmeg
1 tsp. ginger
2 tsps. cinnamon
1/2 tsp. salt

Beat eggs at high speed for five minutes. Gradually beat in sugar, pumpkin and lemon juice. In separate bowl, mix remaining ingredients. Then mix the two parts together. Spread ingredients in greased and floured cookie sheet or 15 x 10 x 1-inch pan. Top with nuts if desired. Bake at 350 degrees for 15 minutes. Turn onto a towel and roll cake up in it as for a jelly roll. Chill. Unroll and spread with filling, re-roll and chill. Slice and serve.

Filling: 1 cup powdered sugar
4 tbsps. butter
1/2 tsp. vanilla
1 8-oz. package cream cheese
Beat all together and spread on bread.

Cynthia Popejoy, Sundown, sent several truly "beautiful" recipes. We will use just one this time.

CHOCOLATE CHIP CAKE

1 box yellow cake mix
3 eggs
3/4 cup water
3/4 cup cooking oil
1 package instant chocolate pudding mix
1 cup sour cream
6 ounces milk chocolate chips
3/4 cup nuts

Mix and pour into floured and lightly greased pan. Bake one hour and 15 minutes at 300 degrees. Let cool before removing from pan.

To end this week's column, please be reminded to take shut-ins your gifts of holiday baked goods! Mary Stanley, Lubbock, called with several excellent tips. She suggested that each item be individually wrapped — for several good reasons. For nursing home residents particularly, all items have to be in covered containers. To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband acquired intestinal flukes while in Vietnam. Eight years ago he was hospitalized and treated for them. I'm concerned because he occasionally still passes them from his system. He has not sought medical advice since his initial treatment. Could these stragglers be harmful? — Mrs. R.F.

I can hear the question: "What in the world is a fluke?"

Well, a fluke is a nasty little parasitic worm whose life cycle is so complicated that its survival in nature is miraculous.

Fluke eggs hatch in water. The newborns must then infect a snail for further development. After living for awhile in a snail they emerge and attach to certain water plants. Such plants are a popular part of the diet in the Orient.

When these foods are eaten by a human, the fluke appears as a fully mature adult in the intestines. It can cause diarrhea and produce small ulcers in the intestinal wall.

Maybe it's called a fluke because of this complex lifestyle, but I doubt that. It is a fluke that it survives.

Your husband, if he thinks he is still infected, should report to a Veterans Administration hospital. The stool will be examined for eggs. The adult fluke is almost never passed in the stool. Effective treatment is available.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Will you please give me more information about septic arthritis? — Mrs. J.B.S.

Probably a better name for this is acute bacterial arthritis — longer but more descriptive. It is one form of arthritis that can be treated and cured.

In this form of arthritis, bacteria set up housekeeping in the joints, most often the large ones like the knee or the hip. The germs get into the joint by various routes, the commonest one being the bloodstream. It may travel a great distance from the site of a boil, for example. Staph and strep germs are among the more common culprits.

No matter how they get there, the joint has to be drained of accumulated fluid, which will also identify the specific germ. Antibiotics are then given as with any such infection.

There was a popular medical book written that certainly must have covered septic arthritis. It was titled "Joints I Have Been In." It was not a best seller. It may have been a mild disappointment to the traveler who hurriedly snatched it from a drugstore shelf en route to an airport boarding area. For a rundown of the various kinds of arthritis and treatments, see "How to Control Arthritis." For a copy, send 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What causes scabies and what is the proper treatment for it. I have heard the cleanest person can catch it. Is this true? — M.K.

Scabies is no snob. It infests all levels of society. This truly ugly little mite burrows under the outermost layers of skin. In these tunnels, the female lays her eggs. The eggs hatch and the population grows.

After a month has passed the body develops an allergy to the mites. That's when the intense itching develops. The mites can be transferred from person to person and can also be spread by clothing and bedding.

Don't despair if you have scabies. Sulfur ointments, emulsions of benzyl benzoate, and lindane cream are very effective in getting rid of them. I have started to itch while writing this. I hope that phenomenon isn't catching.

Dear Dr. Donohue: Please let me know what Isordil does for me. I am 82 years old. — Mrs. M.K.

Isordil is a commercial name for isosorbide dinitrate, which is a phrase you wouldn't want to say five times real fast. As all nitrates do, this drug increases blood flow to the heart muscle, widening the arteries that feed the heart muscle. It can help decrease the number of angina pectoris attacks.

You can lose weight if you really want to! The booklet, "Lost Secrets of Reducing," tells you how — naturally and without gimmicks — to the level best suited to your individual needs. For a copy write to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611, enclosing a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope and 50 cents.

Dr. Donohue welcomes reader mail but regrets that, due to the tremendous volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Readers' questions are incorporated in his column whenever possible.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE

We operate a cut-your-own Christmas tree farm, and I have a suggestion for tree buyers, because judging a tree for height and width out in an open area is quite different from measuring it against a fixed object.

Before attempting to cut your own tree, measure the height from floor to ceiling of the room where your tree will stand. Next measure the height of your tree stand and the height of your tree-top ornament, adding these two figures together. Subtract the total from the height of your room and you've got the maximum height your tree can be!

Bring a yardstick with you as trees will seem much smaller in the field but will "grow" tremendously tall in your living room. — F. Green

Good advice! The same information should be kept in mind when selecting a store-bought tree.

I also suggest you keep in mind how much of the tree trunk you may have to cut off to shape the tree.

You're a luv for taking the time to write during this happy hustle-bustle season of the year. — Hugs, Heloise

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

DEAR HELOISE

It's bad when the soup boils over. It's worse when it runs into the liner under the stove's coils and out into the tray below. It's adding insult to injury when that tray is not removable.

I innocently thought the foil I lined the liners with would prevent this final run-over.

Why do they make a hole in those liners anyway? So the stuff can run down into that bottom tray?

How else would we ever discover that nice, big place that holds so much soup? — Ruth Hobbs

DEAR HELOISE

When making a two-egg meringue for lemon pie, try using an extra white and an extra two tablespoons of sugar.

Beat until stiff, then mix one-third of this mixture into the lemon filling.

This is not enough to make a regular chiffon-type filling but it does improve texture. — N.N.

DEAR HELOISE

If you don't have a slip to wear with a long dress, use a pair of pajama bottoms in an appropriate or matching color.

Great in colder weather, as it keeps you warmer too. — Joyce Koller

DEAR HELOISE

I'm so proud of my new discovery. During holiday shopping, I bought a package of pretty paper Christmas-motif place mats. I hated the thought of having to throw them away after one use so, before using them, I covered both sides of each place mat with clear adhesive-backed plastic, leaving about one-eighth inch extending around the edges.

They're sturdy and beautiful and I can use them during the Christmas holidays for many years. — Mrs. M.L. Doleoki

HINTS FROM HIM

DEAR HELOISE

Concerning the problem of the residue from labels which is left on glass bottles and jars, there is a simple solution.

The basic adhesive for pressure-sensitive labels is rubber cement. It can be dissolved quickly with rubber cement thinner available at office supply stores.

All you have to do is dampen a small area on a soft cloth and wipe away the residue.

CAUTION: Test first if using on plastic. It may dull the finish. — Al

FLAKED ALASKA — This Dramatic "Flaked Alaska" has a luscious center of whole cranberry sauce, orange juice, pecans, liqueur and whipped cream, made with unflavored gelatine, resting on a white cake layer. It is frosted with whipped cream and sprinkled with toasted coconut. Serve with hot tea.

Dessert Variation Makes Delicious Holiday Extra

ENGLEWOOD CLIFFS, N.Y. (Special) — Memorable feasts add to the memory of warm, good times, and if there's one time of the year when you don't mind extra cooking, it's the holidays. There aren't many variations on our traditional dinners — except for dessert. And that can and should be something special indeed.

Baked Alaska is a spectacular dessert, but it does require some expertise and absolutely last-minute preparation. Here's a variation, "Flaked Alaska," every bit as luscious and dramatic, but with no fuss or worry — and it's ready when you are.

Instead of a center of ice cream, "Flaked Alaska" has a center perhaps even more enticing: a nicely textured and colored creamy mixture of whole berry cranberry sauce, orange juice, chopped pecans, liqueur, whipped cream and easy-to-use unflavored gelatine. There's no trick to using gelatine — just make sure all the granules are dissolved in the hot juice. Then chill until firm and you're ready to assemble your dessert.

The assembling is easy; just turn the pretty mold onto an 8-inch white cake layer, which can be either store-bought or made from a mix. Frost your confection with additional whipped cream and sprinkle with toasted coconut.

The Flaked Alaska will arrive on the table like a dream, sweet yet also tart, demure yet dramatic. It's a fitting conclusion for a memorable dinner.

FLAKED ALASKA

1 (8-inch) white cake layer
2 envelopes unflavored gelatine
1/2 cup sugar
1-1/4 cups orange juice, heated to boiling
1 can (16 oz.) whole cranberry sauce
1/4 cup coarsely chopped pecans
1/4 cup orange or cranberry liqueur
3 cups (1-1/2 pt.) whipping or heavy cream
1-1/2 cups toasted coconut

In medium bowl, mix unflavored gelatin with 1/4 cup sugar; add hot juice and stir until gelatine is completely dissolved. Stir in cranberry sauce, pecans and liqueur; blend thoroughly. Chill, stirring occasionally, until mixture mounds slightly when dropped from spoon.

In medium bowl, whip 1 cup cream; fold into gelatine mixture. Turn into 1-1/2 or 2-quart bowl (about 8-inch diameter); chill until firm.

In medium bowl, whip remaining cream and sugar. Unmold gelatine and place on cake; frost with whipped cream and sprinkle with coconut. Makes about 10 servings.

Publication States Women Earn Less

DALLAS (Special) —Women have to work nearly 9 days to gross the same amount of earnings that men gross in 5 days, according to the revised publication "The Earnings Gap Between Women and Men," issued by the Women's Bureau of the U.S. Department of Labor.

The latest earnings data, which are for 1977, show that among full-time workers employed throughout the year, men earned $14,626 while women earned only $8,618. This indicates that women earned only 59 cents for every dollar men earned.

The data also show that the differential has remained at about its present level since 1961, in spite of the employment gains women made in recent years. The gap is wider, however, than it was in 1955, when women earned about 64 cents for every dollar men earned.

The publication discusses the factors related to the earnings gap, such as the concentration of women in low-paying traditional jobs and the large number of new entrants to the labor force who are in or near the entry level of jobs. Differences in the occupations and industries in which women and men are employed, their educational attainment, and work experience are highlighted.

Single freee copies of the publication are available from the Women's Bureau, U.S. Department of Labor, 555 Griffin Squre Building, Room 863, Dallas, Tx., 75202.

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

When today's hand was played some years ago in a local duplicate, only one pair reached the cinch three-notrump contract. Everyone else played at some number of clubs. They all played exactly 10 tricks so those who stopped at a part score were plus 130, those who got to five were minus 50 and the one pair that bid a slam was minus 100.

The one pair that reached three notrump got there rather peculiarly. It seems that South elected to bid one spade over the heart overcall. For some unaccountable reason, West failed to raise his partner's heart overcall. Then North looked at his hand and decided to bid two diamonds, whereupon South jumped to three notrump and naturally made an easy nine tricks.

When we were given the hand we decided to start proceedings with a heart cue bid by South. Then West went to three hearts, North and East passed and we simply bid three notrump with the South hand.

Of course, South has no diamond stopper. But he does hold the ace of hearts and can really expect a heart lead. That gets him right on lead and North's minimum opening includes just the right cards to let South collect a quick nine tricks.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I am infuriated. Not with you, but with that oaf from Santa Rosa who had the gall to say all that is required of a female is that she "be there" to have sex. Doesn't the ignoramus know if she isn't there in mind as well as body, he may as well be somewhere else, unless, of course, all he wants is physical release (This is love?)

Wise up, buddy: A woman who accommodates a man who wakes her up at four o'clock in the morning may be considered "a good sport," but my guess is that she is marking time and putting up with his selfishness until someone more sensitive to her needs comes along. — The Horse's Mouth

Dear H.M.: I received a staggering number of letters from women who were outraged by the "oaf from Santa Rosa," but most of them would have required a lot of cleaning up before they could be printed. Thanks for expressing yourself in language I can use.

Dear Ann Landers: I read about the woman who tried vomiting after every meal in order to lose weight. Now she has serious internal problems.

When I was in high school, I did the same thing — although I was only a few pounds overweight. I had several fat cousins and was scared to death that one day I would look like them. So I tried that awful method.

I'm 25 years old and have been married for two years. I am suffering with an ulcer and chronic "indigestion" that probably will be with me for the rest of my life.

Before I started vomiting to stay slim, I was in perfect health. I never took any medication — not even aspirin. Now I take pills constantly. I need painkillers and tranquilizers because my stomach is torn up all the time. My sex life has been seriously affected. When a woman is feeling lousy (which I am most of the time), she's not likely to be in the mood to make love. If my husband did a little cheating I wouldn't blame him.

Please keep telling readers not to be so stupid as to try this crazy stunt.

How I wish I could turn the clock back a few years. I'd be happy to weigh 20 pounds more if I could have my good health back. — Kicking Myself In Newport

Dear Newport: We know a great deal more about self-starvation than we used to. People who gorge themselves with food, then force themselves to vomit, have a condition called bulimia. (They often take laxatives, as well).

The result can be malnutrition, cessation of menstrual periods and a thoroughly loused-up metabolic system. Anyone who wants to know more about this severe psychological problem can write to Vivian Meehan, President, Anorexia Nervosa and Associated Disorders, Suite 2020, 550 Frontage Rd., Northfield, Ill. 60693.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: After being a sweet, dumb girl for 26 years, I got sick of never having a date. I had my hair dyed red, lost 25 pounds and took a job where the action was.

In the past four months, I have met seven married men who want someone on the side, three homosexuals who would like a cover, a big shot who has a Cadillac but no money for gas, and a guitar player who smokes crazy cigarets.

Where are the decent men, anyway? — Beulah

Dear B.: You don't say what kind of job you took, but I suggest you quit. Find a position where decent people work. Get involved in volunteer activities, night school classes, political organizations, etc. The list is endless.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: Will you please settle an argument between me and my Mom?

Mom says pot-smoking leads to using harder drugs. I say this is crazy. What's the real story? — Battling It Out In Beaumont

Dear Battling: I do not believe pot-smoking leads to harder drugs. Many people who smoke grass are not interested in experimenting with acid, angel-dust, cocaine, heroin, or anything else. But, in every study that I have read, the overwhelming majority of hard-drug users said they started with pot.

• • •

Dear Ann Landers: Please take it back. You said the wife of a man who throws his clothes all over, doesn't know what a drawer is for and leaves wet towels on the bathroom floor can blame his mother. NOT TRUE!

My sons have been taught, shown, told, threatened, begged, pleaded with, Punished — nothing worked. They are as bad as their father, if not worse.

I used to blame my mother-in-law for my husband's sloppy habits, but now I know better. I also know women whose mothers were slobs, yet they turned out to be excellent housekeepers. What do you say to this? — Calcutta, Ohio

Dear Cal: I say there are plenty of exceptions to every rule, and it is foolish to generalize. I deserve 10 lashes with a wet bath towel.

Schools To Switch To Semester System

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Students probably will notice little difference and teachers no doubt will welcome the decrease in paperwork when Lubbock public schools make the switch next fall back to the semester system, says a school official already at work on the changeover.

Assistant superintendent for instruction Jay Gordon said the switch from the quarter system is "more of an organization change than anything else."

Texas schools operated on the semester system until 1975 when the legislature decided to abandon that procedure for the quarter system.

State lawmakers this year mandated a switch back to the semester operation. The changeover was optional for the 1979-80 school year, but is required for the 1980-81 term.

The change primarily will affect the secondary grades as the elementary schools operate without any kind of semester or quarter break.

Gordon said the revision of the course offerings bulletin constitutes the bulk of changeover work. Because some courses — mostly electives — now are described as quarter credit courses, Gordon will have to change the descriptions to read as one-half or full unit credits.

He said that since students are required to attend only three quarters under the current system, the Texas Education Agency recommmends giving students one-half credit under the new operation for each quarter credit they currently have, and a full unit for two quarters completed in a course.

Giving students less credit "would be taking something away from them," Gordon said.

The superintendent said that content of courses "won't change a significant amount." Teachers will simply have more time for instruction of some courses.

The only expense, amounting to "several thousand dollars" will be in the printing of certain forms, said Gordon. But even that will not be a problem, he added, because most forms have to be printed every year anyway. "We don't stockpile a large number of forms."

Gordon said he does not know why the legislature decided to require schools to revert back to the semester system. "It came as a little bit of a surprise."

He explained that lawmakers throughout the country who advocated the quarter system several years ago, reasoned that such a move would better utilize school buildings.

They reasoned that the school year would be divided into four quarters so that all schools would be used in the summer as well. Students would be assigned to take their vacation during a particular quarter. Since all students would not be in the building at the same time, the need for new school buildings would be reduced.

"But it didn't work," said Gordon. Most of the schools did not have air conditioning for the summer, which presented a problem, and also the Texas legislature only funded three out of the four quarters. Students who want to attend a fourth quarter would have to provide the funding.

Gordon said he believes teachers and students will accept the new system. He said teachers "showed no dissatisfaction" with the semester system before and that they will even have "a little bit less work in grading" for two terms instead of three.

Convicted Murderer Given Seven Years

Ruben Ramos, convicted of murder by a Lubbock County jury in October for the shooting death of Curtis Pegues, was sentenced Wednesday to seven years in the Texas Department of Corrections.

State District Judge Robert C. Wright, whom Ramos elected to assess punishment, pronounced the sentence on the 17-year-old.

After two hours of deliberations in October, the jury hearing evidence in Wright's 137th District Court courtroom returned with the conviction.

During the trial, Ramos took the witness stand and said his older brother, Joe, killed Pegues the night of April 14. Ramos said he had been talking to Pegues at the 308 Idalou Road pool hall where Pegues was killed, but had no part in the shooting.

Ramos also denied the testimony of two prosecution witnesses who said they saw the defendant pump two bullets into Pegues' back as he lay motionless in the pool hall's parking lot.

TEXAS ARCHITIECT DIES

AUSTIN (AP) — H.E. Jessen, an architect who designed the mosaics in the State Capitol rotunda as well as more than 20 buildings on the University of Texas campus, died this week. Services for Jessen, 71, were held Tuesday. Jessen was a charter member of the Texas Society of Architects and a founder of the architectural firm, Jessen Associates Inc.

Murder Conviction Returned By Jury

By KAY BELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Despite Nathaniel McDade's testimony that he shot and killed Arthur Lee Jones in self-defense, a Lubbock County jury Wednesday afternoon convicted McDade of first-degree murder.

Later in the afternoon, the 140th District Court panel returned with a 60-year prison sentence for the 25-year-old defendant.

During the guilt-or-innocence stage of the two-day trial, defense counsel Floyd Holder argued for McDade's acquittal, saying McDade shot Jones because he feared that Jones had a gun.

Holder emphasized McDade's testimony that he had seen Jones, 47, and another man he believed was carrying a gun exit the 17th Street apartment outside which Jones was killed the early morning of Sept. 8. McDade said he thought the other man might have given Jones his gun. When Jones reached for his pocket during an argument, McDade also pulled his pistol and fired at Jones, the bullet striking him in the forehead.

"At that moment I intended to kill him (Jones) because I was scared," McDade told the five-woman, seven-man jury.

The panel also had the option to convict McDade of the lesser, second-degree felony offense of voluntary manslaughter.

Holder told the jurors that if they decided McDade did not shoot Jones in self-defense, to consider the circumstances of the shooting and whether the requirements of a voluntary manslaughter conviction applied. If the jury found that McDade had reacted on impulse to "sudden passion," such as fear prompted by Jones actions, they could have returned with the lesser conviction.

McDade testified that he had argued with Jones about six hours before the fatal shooting in an East Lubbock pool hall. McDade said the argument was about some clothing Jones was wearing which belonged to McDade.

The defendant also related two more conversations he had with Jones concerning the ownership of the clothing before the shooting.

Ware told the panel that Jones had six hours "for cool reflection" following the first disagreement. The prosecutor argued that evidence indicated McDade went to the 17th Street apartment armed because he knew Jones was a frequent visitor there.

Ware also asked the jurors to consider "who wouldn't leave well enough alone" and who approached Jones three times concerning the clothing.

During cross-examination Wednesday morning, Ware asked McDade if he realized he could have dropped the subject of the clothing, bought some more or called police rather than place himself in the position of needing to use the gun.

"Yeah," McDade quietly answered.

The panel took about 70 minutes before returning with the murder conviction. Jurors deliberated about the same amount of time before deciding upon the 60-year prison term.

During punishment arguments, co-prosecutor Mark McBride emphasized that McDade was serving a six-year probated sentence for a forgery conviction at the time of the shooting. He termed the shooting "cold-blooded and deliberate" and emphasized the testimony of one witness who said McDade approached Jones from behind and shot Jones as he was turning to see who was behind him.

The prosecution had asked the panel to return a 99-year prison sentence and Holder sought a 10-year term.

DECADE MORE THAN JUST WAR, WATERGATE

Forgotten Headlines Tell Exciting Story Of '70s

By The Associated Press

We remember the things like Watergate and the Vietnam War. The things whose magnitude and impact stamped them, in capital letters: THE '70S.

But we tend to forget the other things — some equally important, others merely passing headlines — that made the decade what it was. We know they happened, but they have become part of history, their dates blurred with time.

Was it really less than 10 years ago that we prayed with the Apollo 13 astronauts in their crippled spacecraft?

Ping-Pong diplomacy? The late '60s or the early '70s?

The mass murder of 25 migrant workers in California? The Penn Central going bankrupt? The first flight of the Concorde? The kidnapping of Patricia Hearst?

Was it really less than 10 years ago...

As the '70s opened, America was preoccupied with the war in Vietnam that shadowed much of the '60s.

For at least a brief period, in April 1970, however, our eyes turned from the continuing tragedy on Earth to a potential tragedy in space.

An explosion struck the Apollo 13 spacecraft, headed for the moon with astronauts James A. Lovell Jr., Fred W. Haise Jr. and John L. Swigert Jr. For four days, the world waited as the trio maneuvered, finally making a safe splashdown in the Pacific Ocean.

The nation barely had time to rejoice. Less than a month later, U.S. troops invaded Cambodia. Protests spread across college campuses. On May 4, National Guard troops confronted students at Kent State University in Ohio. Sixty-one shots were fired. Four students died. We remember the young girl, photographed as she crouched beside a body, arms reaching.

Eleven days later, Jackson State College in Mississippi. More demonstrations. Two students dead and 13 wounded.

The year 1970 also brought the bankruptcy of the Penn Central Railroad, the emergence of farm workers' leader Cesar Chavez into the headlines, the midi-skirt and the mid-air hijack of three jets by Palestiian commados. ABC-TV gave us Monday night footall — and Howard Cosell.

Was it really less than 10 years ago...

The visit to China by U.S. ping-pong players came in 1971. Henry Kissinger made a secret trip to Peking to pave the way for a future visit by President Richard Nixon.

First Lt. William Calley was convicted of mass murder in the 1968 My Lai massacre. Daniel Ellsberg leaked the Pentagon Papers and the courts upheld the right of the press to publish them. More than 30,000 war protesters gathered in Washington; more than 13,000 were arrested.

Tricia Nixon was married. Her father froze wages and prices.

The Supreme Court upheld the constitutionality of busing and the National Railroad Passenger Corp., known as Amtrak, went into business with promises of faster, better service.

Again, we looked to the skies for our triumph. Air Force Maj. Alfred M. Worden left his Apollo 15 craft and, on Aug. 5, became the first human to walk in space.

Again, there was tragedy on Earth. Sheriff's deputies in Yuba City, Calif., found the bodies of 25 migrant workers who had been murdered and were buried in shallow graves in nearby orchards.

At New York's Attica Penitentiary, 39 inmates and nine hostages died as 1,000 state troopers moved in to quash a five-day rebellion. In Los Angeles, 62 persons were killed in the area's biggest earthquake in 38 years.

Overseas, Idi Amin ousted Milton Obote as president of Uganda. Most people in the African nation hailed the coup as a step toward political moderation.

Was it really less than 10 years ago...

Spiro T. Agnew — The man who admitted that his name wasn't a household word when he was nominated as Nixon's running mate in the '60s drew more attention than he wanted in the '70s. Finally, Agnew resigned and pleaded no contest to tax evasion. He was replaced by Gerald Ford.

For the most part, 1973 was a year in which events blended into one another. Each stood out sharply. But only for a little while.

A sniper firing from the top of a motel in New Orleans killed six people and wounded 12 before he was, himself, killed by police.

Lyndon Johnson in Vietnam. The prisoners of war started coming home in February. The U.S. Army Court of Military Review upheld Calley's conviction.

Militant Indians took over the hamlet of Wounded Knee, S.D., and held 11 persons hostage, beginning a siege that lasted 68 days. They boycotted meat to protest high prices. The prices of gold topped $100 an ounce.

Skyable, the nation's first space station, went into orbit, but a failure in its solar-power wings forced a delay in manned operation aboard the research craft. A team of astronauts was sent to fix it.

The heaviest fighting in the Middle East since 1967 began on Oct. 6 in what came to be known as the Yom Kippur War. A crease-fire was agreed on late in the month.

The A ab?oil states announced a program of successive production cuts. Congress passed the Alaska pipeline bill, a measure Nixon said was the first step toward making the United States self-sufficient in energy by 1980.

Secretariat became the first horse in 25 years to win the Triple Crown.

Was it really less than 10 years ago...

Relentlessly, bit by bit, the evidence mounted. On Aug. 9, 1974 Richard Nixon became the first president in American history to resign. Ford moved into the White House and named Nelson A. Rockefeller his vice president.

The year was dominated by the national agony of Watergate. But there was room for other events in America's consciousness.

Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst was kidnapped and a group called the Symbiones Liberation Army moved into the spotlight. Later, still in captivity, she said she had become a revolutionary, taking the name Tania. As with Kent State, the image lingered: A young girl, machine gun in hand, before a snake-like symbol.

Hare Krishna followers in saffron robes chanted. Streakers streaked. Alexander Solzhenitsyn had his Soviet citizenship taken away and was exiled to West Germany. The Miami Dolphins won the Super Bowl. Henry Aaron tied and later broke Babe Ruth's home-run record.

Gasoline prices rose. Egypt and the United States reumed diplomatic relations after a break of seven years. The oil embargo ended. Turkey invaded Cyprus. Emperor Haile Selassie was deposed after ruling Ethiopia for 58 years.

In Mami, Police stormed a Symbionese Liberation Army hideout in Los Angeles. Five persons died. Patricia Hearst was still missing.

There were the deaths, the individuals and the masses.

Mrs. Martin Luther King Sr. was killed when a young man went on a shooting spree in an Atlanta church. President Juan D. Peron of Argentin died. So did former Chief Justice Earl Warren.

Health officials said 20,000 people died of smallpox in the Indian state of Bihar in the first five months of the year. A fire in a bar in Port Chester, N.Y., killed 24 persons. A Turkish airlines DC-10 crashed outside Paris; all 346 persons aboard were killed.

President Ford granted Nixon an unconditional pardon for crimes he might have committed during his years in office. Less than a month later, he offered conditional amnesty to draft evaders and deserters.

U.S. District Judge J. Robert Elliott overturned Calley's murder conviction.

Was it really less than five years ago...

The middle of the decade. Vietnam and Cambodia fell to the Communists and the last Americans pulled out, with a mad scramble aboard helicopters. South Vietnamese President Nguyen Van Thieu accused the United States of abandoning his people.

H.R. Haldeman, John Ehrlichman and John Mitchell were sentenced for their roles in the Watergate cover-up. Jimmy Hoffa, the former president of the Teamsters Union, disappeared. Patricia Hearst was captured. New York City almost went broke.

Cambodia's new regime seized the American container ship Mayaguez in the Gulf of Siam. President Ford ordered a Marine assault. The ship was freed, but the attack cost the United States 38 dead and 50 wounded.

The Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation came under attack. The CIA was accused of illegal wiretaps, burglaries and plots to assassinate foreign leaders; the FBI was charged with harassing Martin Luther King Jr.

Two women — Lynette "Squeaky" Fromme and Sara Jane Moore — tried to assassinate the president. Both attempts, unsuccessful, came in the same month: September.

Economic problems kept plaguing the country. Unemployment hit its highest rate since 1941. Industrial production was down sharply. Prices continued to rise.

At the movies, "Jaws."

Was it really less than five years ago...

Events tumbled together. There was the Bicentennial, a time for millions of people to reflect on what was right with America. The presidential election, a time for dozens of politicans to tell us what was wrong with America.

There were the Olympics — winter, with Dorothy Hamill whirling about the ice, and summer, with Nadia Comaneci whirling through the air.

1976 was the year of "Jimmy Who?" — a former Georgia governor who won the White House by fighting against Washington.

The presidential campaign seemed to get under way earlier and last longer than ever before. The experts were predicting a pitched battle for the Democratic nomination and an easy win for Ford on the Republican side.

It didn't work that way. Carter won the early primaries and secured the nomination long before his party's convention in New York. Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey turned down pleas from friends that he make a fourth run for the presidency. Ford, meanwhile, had a strong challenge from former California Gov. Ronald Reagan; the outcome remained in doubt until the convention in Kansas City.

Five Roman Catholics were killed in Northern Ireland on Jan. 4. A day later, 10 Protestant workmen were shot and killed. Civil strife plagued Lebanon, South Africa, Rhodesia.

Death took its toll on communism and capitalism. Chou En-lai and Mao Tse-tung died in China. Howard Hughes died en route from Mexico to a hospital in Texas.

Princess Margaret of Great Britain and her husband, the Earl of Snowden, agreed to separate after 16 years of marriage. Rep. Wayne Hays, D-Ohio, admitted a "personal relationship" with Elizabeth Ray, paid to be his secretary, and later resigned. Earl Butz resigned as secretary of Agriculture after telling a racist joke.

An Israeli commando unit rescued 103 hostages held at Entebbe Airport in Uganda. Twenty-six children and their bus driver vanished after a summer school session in Chowchilla, Calif. They escaped 36 hours later, and three men were accused of the kidnapping.

The swine flu vaccination program was started. And stopped after several deaths among elderly people who had received shots.

On the bookshelves: "Roots."

Was it really less than five years ago...

Gary Mark Gilmore, a convicted murderer, was executed by a firing squad in Utah on Jan. 17, 1977, the first person to be executed in the United States since 1967.

Two Boeing 747 jetliners — one from Pan American, the other from KLM — collided on a runway at Tenerife in the Canary Islands, killing 577 people in the worst aviation disaster in history.

Elvis Presley died. Bert Lance resigned amid investigations into his banking practices; Souh Korean rice merchant Tongsun Park was indicted on charges of conspiring to buy influnce in Congress; "Son of Sam" David Berkowitz was captured after the largest manhunt in New York City history.

In the Netherlands, South Mollucan guerrillas, seeking independence for their homeland, now part of Indonesia, held hostages aboard a train and in a school for 20 days. In Washington, D.C., Hanafi Muslims involved in a feud with another Moslem sect, took over three buildings and held 134 hostages.

Amid the scandal, the death and the disaster, however, there was hope. President Anwar Sadat of Egypt went to Israel — the first Arab leader ever to visit the Jewish state.

Another sign of the changing world came with the U.S. signing of a treaty to relinquish control of the Panama Canal by 1999, an action that touched off lengthy debate.

Nature struck its blow with bitter cold that left a large part of the United States under ice and snow early in 1977 and sparked a shortage of natural gas. There was snow in Florida. A blizzard in Buffalo, N.Y., buried the city under more than 3 feet of snow.

Nature had a hand, too, in a summer blackout that touched off looting and rioting in New York City. The electrical failure was triggered by a lightning strike.

We were fascinated by the past — the exhibition of Tutankhamen's treasures — and the future — "Star Wars" and "Close Encounters of the Third Kind."

Was it really less than five years ago...

The Camp David accords and the Peoples Temple suicides seemed to symbolize the best and the worst of 1978.

Carter, Sadat and Israel's Menachem Begin huddled in the hills of Maryland to produce an agreement that took the Middle East one step closer to peace. Begin and Sadat were awarded the Nobel Peace Prize for their efforts.

In Georgetown, Guyana, cult leader Jim Jones ordered the assassination of a U.S. congressman who had gone to the Caribbean to investigate tales of coercion and strange behavior among sect members. Later, Jones led more than 900 of his followers in committing suicide.

While San Francisco — where many of the Peoples Temple members were from — was still reeling in shock, another blow was struck. Mayor George Moscone and supervisor Harvey Milk were shot to death in City Hall by a former city official, Dan White.

It was a year of violence. Violence in Iran where opposition to the shah mounted. Violence in Nicaragua, torn apart by civil war. Violence in Italy, where Red Brigade terrorists kidnapped and killed former Prime Minister Aldo Moro.

It was a year of hope and new beginnings. Three Americans, in a craft named the Double Eagle II, made the first balloon crossing of the Atlantic Ocean, landing in France to a welcome that recalled an earlier aviation pioneer, Charles Lindbergh.

In England, Louise Brown, the first child ever conceived outside its mother's body was born. Pope Paul VI died. Albino Luciani of Venice was chosen to succeed him and took the nam' John Paul. Little more than a month later, he too was dead. This time, the College of Cardinals selected Karol Wojtyla of Poland, Pope John Paul II, the first non-Italian pontiff.

The Senate ratified the Panama Canal treaties. The president announced formal U.S. recognition of China — with full diplomatic elations. The "boat people" fled the Communist regimes of Southeast Asia.

Americans, battered by inflation, angry over rising taxes, fed up with government bureaucracy, rebelled. Proposition 13 was the rallying cry; property taxes the target.

Was it less than a year ago...

The shah of Iran was deposed and fleu the country, leaving Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeni in control. At first, the only real impact for most Americans was the loss of Iranian oil, as production was disupted. Fuel prices soared; there were lines at the gasoline station. Once again, there were arguments over whether the energy crisis was real or manufactured.

As the year drew to a close, however, the impact of the events in Iran was brought home in another way. The shah, who had been living in Mexico, came to the United States for medical treatment. Iranian students seized the U.S. Embassy in Iran, holding Americans hostage and demanding the return of the shahm.

Idi Amin, meanwhile, was ousted from Uganda. Anastasio Somoza was forced out of Nicaragua.

Thirty years of war in the middle East ended with odds between Egypt and Israel. President Carter and Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev concluded the Salt II treaty in meetings in Vienna.

Americans See Past Improvements, Doubt Future

By EVANS WITT
Associated Press Writer

As the 1970s end in the year of Jimmy Carter's "naional malaise," Americans say their lives have improved in this turbulent decade, but they believe the outlook is not so bright for the decade to come.

Looking beyond themselves to the nation at large, the public says the United States hasn't improved much as a place to live since 1970, but they think it will be getting better in the 1980s. And Americans retain their overwhelming confidence in the long-term future of the United States.

These are the findings of an Associated Press-NBC News poll taken in November that measured the attitudes of Americans about their lives in the last 10 years and what they foresee as the quality of life for the 1980s.

Americans have a strangely mixed view of their past and their future, this and other AP-NBC News poll say. It is not simply that they lack confidence in the future, as Carter postulated in his "malaise" speech to the nation in July, although there is some of that sentiment.

They continue to have strong confidence in the country's long-term prospects, but inflation and the decline of this nation's ability to control events critical to its well-being leave question marks about the years just ahead.

The '70s have been good to many Americans.

Forty-three percent said their lives are better now than they were 10 years ago, while 25 percent said their lives had worsened. Thirty percent said there had been little change, and 2 percent were not sure.

Perhaps a self-designated "most-improved award" should go to those now making more than $35,000 a year. Sixty-one percent of this group said their lives are better now — the highest of any roup — while 14 percent said they were worse and 24 percent said there had been no change. One percent was undecided.

But the public sees less improvement in the 1980s.

Only 35 percent say their lives will improve in the 1980s, against an only slightly lower 30 percent who expect their lives to deteriorate. One-quarter expect little change, and 10 percent were not sure.

Particularly for those over 50 years old and those without some kind of college training, the future is seen as quite bleak and uncertain.

Only 22 percent of those 50 and over see their lives improving in the 1980s, while 43 percent of those under 50 see changes for the better.

Thirty-three percent of the older group is pessimistic about the 1980s. 27 pecent see little change in their lives, and 18 percent are uncertain.

For those under 50, 28 percent are pessimistic, 24 percent see no change, and only 5 percent are not sure.

One major reason for this bleak outlook is inflation and its impact on retirees and others on fixed incomes. Among retirees alone, 29 percent see the future as worse than the present, 25 percent see little change, and 22 percent see improvement. Twenty-four percent were not sure.

Those who have never attended college also have a darker view of the 80s than those who have.

Those without any college training split: 32 percent say the '80s will see their lives worsen, while 31 percent say their lives will improve. Twenty-six percent see no change, and 11 percent were not sure.

This contrasts to the 41 percent of those who have at least attended some college who see their lives improving the next decade. Only 28 percent of this group forsee changes for the worse, and 24 percent see no hange. Seven percent were not sure.

On the United States and the 1970s and 1980s, the view is somewhat different.

Americans do not thin this country has become a better place to live in the past decade, but they expect it will improve in the decade to come.

Forty-four percent said they have seen no change in America as a place to live in the 1970s. Twenty-eight percent said the country has improved but 25 percent say its gotten worse. Three percent were not sure.

Onthe quality of life in the 80s, the picture shifts. Thirty-six percent said the country will improve in the decade to come, with only 20 percent expecting a deterioraion. Another 36 percent see little change, and 8 percent were not sure.

This forecast for the country is somewhat more optimistic than Americans give for their own lives in the 1980s. This discrepancy can be traced in part to the continuing confidence in the country's long-term prospects.

As recently as July 1979, the AP-NBC poll found 58 percent of the public saying they have a lot of confidence in the future of the United States, with 32 percent saying they have some confidence. Only 9 percent said they have very little or no confidence in the future of the country. One percent were not sure.

As with every sample survey, the results of the AP-NBC News poll can vary from the opinions of all those with telephones across the country because of chance variations in the sample.

For polls with 1,381 interviews, the results should vary no more than 3 percent chance out of 20 that the results would vary from the findings of this poll by more than 3 percentage points.

AP-NBC Poll Questions Listed

Here are some of the questions asked of the AP-NC News poll:

1. Thinking back over the last 10 years, do you think your own life is better now that it was, about the same or worse than it was 10 years ago?
2. Thinking about what your own life will be like 20 years from now, do you think it will be better than it is now, about the same or worse than it is now?
3. Thinking back over the last 10 years, do you think the United States is a better place to live now than it was 10 yars ago, a worse place to live or is it about the same?
4. Ten years from now, do you think the United States will be a better place to live than it is now, a worse plae to live or will it be about the same?

Publication Announces Women To Watch In Next Ten Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Gloria Steinem predicts the 1980s will be "a very active and explosive decade" in the women's rights movement but that the major issues will be remnants of the 70s' reproductive freedom, health care and job survival.

The 1970s represented an enormous change in the consciousness around this country," the editor of "Ms." said at a news conference to announce the magazine's choice of "Women to Watch in the 80s."

But, she said, the hopes that were raised for reform in the status of women still have not resulted in institutional change.

"For instance, we may have discovered in the '70s that children have two parents and that fathers can have equal responsibility for children," she said. "But we have not yet made the changes in the work patterns that makes that possible for most people."

"The tension between raised expectations and hopes of the '70s and only occasionally raised reality — that is around us is so great that I cannot imagine anything except a very active and explosive decade."

Few of the magazine's choices of women to watch are well known nationally. Such feminist leders as Betty Friedan, Bella Abzug and Gloria Steinem herself are not on the list.

"We did not list women who already had attained national identification," Ms. Steinem said. "Women who had already been brought to attention in the 1970s were not considered."

The magazine says it consulted hundreds of women to find those "who can take over existing feminist tasks and organizations so that leadership can replenish itself."

The list includes women in a variety of occupations.

Polly Baca-Barragan, a Colorado state senator; Marianne Bruesehoff, a Minnesota poultry farmer; Jan Zimmerman, a consultant in telecommunications and the aerospace industry in California; Maxin Waters, a California state assemblywoman; Dudley Dudley, a member of the New Hampshire state executive council.

Nancy Stevenson, lieutenant governor of South Carolina; Mary E. Hunt, lesbian feminist theorist and theologian in California; Carolyn Forrest, administrative assistant to the president of United Auto Workers in Detroit; and Fran P. Hosken, a journalist and urban planner in Massachusetts.

Miss Steinem said the magazine is attempting to celebrate women of courage and talent who may be important "to all of us" in the 1980s.

Decade Ends Unspectacularly For Space Agency

By The Associated Press

The 1960s ended spectacularly with man on the moon, and the United States had hoped to close out this decade by embarking on a new space adventure with the revolutioary, reflyble shuttle.

Instead, 1979 found the space agency wresting with technical, financial and management problems which have postponed the first manned launch of the shuttle until at least mid-1980.

An while the United States has been readying this next phase of exploration, the Soviet Union has been using space aggressively as a sign of national power.

The United States took charge of the space race in 1969 when Apollo 11 astronauts Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin touched own on the moon. That was followed later in the year by a second landing, by Apollo 12.

The Apollo program suffered a severe setback early in 1970 when an oxygen tank exploded aboard the Apollo 13 spacecraft as it neared th moon. The three astroauts fought for their lives during a harrowing three-day trip back to Earth.

The spacecraft was redesigned, and four more moon landings were accomplished before Apollo 17 closed out the program in 1972.

The United States followed quickly in 1973 and 1974 with the Skylab space station, which prove that humans can live and work in space for long periods witout ill effect. Three different three-man teams occupied the space house for periods of 28, 56 and 84 days.

Skylab made a dramatic reentry into the world's attention span in July 1979, when the 77.5-ton station fell out of orbit and scattered debris over a wide, remote area of Western Australia.

In a spirit of international cooperation, U.S. astronauts and Soviet cosmonauts linked up in orbit in 1975. That was the last time the United States sent men into space. Since then, U.S. astronauts have watched from the sidelines as a total of 26 cosmonauts have vaulted into orbit and wrested away all the space endurance records that had been set in Skylab. The most recent cosonaut crew returned to Earth last August after 175 days aboard the Salyut 6 station.

PIONEER VIEW OF SATURN — This image of Saturn was sent back to earch by Pioneer II last Aug. 29. The brightness of the rings is due to an instrument setting during the scanning of the planet's surface, and the uneven shape of the sphere is due to uneven spacing of the scan lines by the spacecraft's instruments. (AP Laserphoto)

In that time the United States has been content to probe the solar system with unmanned space vehicles that provided some scientifically spectacular information about five of the planets — Mars, Mercury, Venus, Jupiter and Saturn.

U.S. defense officials believe the Soviets are establishing a strong military presence in space, with both manned and unmanned craft. Some Pentagon experts feel they are well on the way toward developing a manned command and control spacecraft similar to this nation's national emergency airplane command post.

To blunt this Rusian effort, the Pentagon is counting heavily n the space shuttle for its own strong military space program. The problems which have delayed the program more than a year prompted President Carter to summon military and civilian space officials to the White House in November for a personal briefing on progress.

Following the meeting, the president expressed confidence in the project and said he would support a request for several hundred million extra dollars to put it back on track.

The major reason for Carter's support is the role the shuttle will play in national defense. He is especially interested in its use to carry a new breed of reconnaissance satellite into orbit to verify Russian compliance with arms limitation agreements.

The National Aeronautics and Space Administration and the Air Force plan a fleet of four or five shuttles, each capable of making more than 100 roundtrips into space. Of approximately 500 launches planned between 1980 and 1991, about one-fourth will have military assignments.

The shuttle also will play an important role in developing the ntion's commercial use of space. It is expected to eventually ferry into orbit the material to build permanent space stations where u to 100 men and women can live and work.

That should be a reality when the history of the '80s is written.

'Baby Bust' Among 1970s Highlights

By RANDOLPH E. SCHMID
Associated Press Writer

The average American got older in the 1970s. He or she married later, had fewer children, moved further from the big cities.

"Four great trends took almost everyone by surprise and carried far-reaching implications for business and government," writes Bryant Robey, editor of American Demographics magazine.

Robey lists these trends as:

—A decline in fertility known as the "baby bust," a sharp reversal from the post-war baby boom that occurred in the 1950s and 1960s.

—Lengthening lifespans, meaning more and more elderly Americans.

—Large migrations of Americans out of the center cities to suburban areas and from the older industrialstates to the west and south.

—Delay by young people in marrying and starting families, leading to more, smaller households, and more working women.

Meyer Zitter, chief of the Census Bureau's population division, says that the 9 percent population growth during the decade "represents one of the smallest percentage decade increases in our history, second only to the low rate of the depression decade, and well below the 13 percent increase of the 1960s."

The resulting decline in elementary school enrollment has raised a politial furor across the naton as officials determne which schools ought to be closed. And Zitter says these problems will soon be shifting to high schools and, in later years, to colleges.

American women currently are averaging 1.8 children apiece, not enough to maintain the population at its current size, but Zitter said surveys indicate women expect to increase that average to two.

He cautioned, however, that the possibility of a slight increase in the birth rate should be considered only "a reasonable likelihood and nothing more."

During the past decade, two years were added to the average life expectancy which was 67.1 in 1970.

Larger numbers of older people, coupled with shrinking birthrates, means that the population overall is aging. The median age in America has topped 30.

The Social Security Administraton already is concerned about the strain that will be imposed as more and more elderly draw benefits while there are fewer young people growing up to contribute to the system.

Pressure from the elderly will have other effects as politicians seek programs aimed at these people, who vote more havily than other segments of the population.

And business and industry will be seeking to cater more to this growing segment of society.

Migration has affected America in two ways, with city populations declining as people move to the suburbs — and even to rural areas — and with more Americans relocating to southern and western Sunbelt states.

The rural migration trend was discovered in mid-decade, catching population experts by surprse. It reversed a trend of nearly two centuries during which Americans moved from their farms to the cities in an increasingly industrial and urban society.

For the declinigg areas, loss of people erodes the tax base; for the growing ones, it means new pressures for expanded services.

The population shifts will bring significant changes in Congress, with the 1980 census expected to delier additional seats to states such as California, Tennessee and Texas, at the expense of such areas as New York and Pennsylvania.

Large numbers of people postponing marriage and living alone have had a major effect on the automobile and housing market and likely will continue to do so, officials say.

"The average size of households has declined and more and more households are 'non-family' households.

"As long as people continue to show a preference for small families, and as long as housing or economic conditions do not foce substantial numbers of unmarried persons and families to 'double up, average household size is likely to continue to decline," says Zitter.

He noted that the trend toward smaller housholds has occurred as women increased their economic activity outside the home.

During the 1970s the proportion of women in the labor force increased from 40 percent to 50 percent, and it is expected to reach 60 percent by the end of the 1980s, Zitter said.

By comparison the percentage of men in the laborforce dropped from 80 to 78 percent during the 1970s,primarily because of earlier retirement.

"The flow of women into the workforce has doomed both 'a man's world' and 'a woman' place," Robey wrote.

Oil Slick Spreads Over Boston Harbor

BOSTON (AP) — An oil slick the size of two football fields spread over Boston Harbor on Wednesday when more than 250,000 gallons of No. 6 fuel oil spilled from the Japanese tanker Donau Maru, off-loading at Castle Island.

Coast Guard Seaman Arlee Nodden said the commercial firm Jetline was on the scene with 5,000 feet of boom to contain the oil. She said the tanker reported the spill was due to a "misaligned valve during off-loading operations."

Paul Keough, a spokesman for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, said a quick response helped keep the oil from spreading into the rest of the harbor and no major environmental harm was expected.

Richard Nixon Left Greatest Imprint On 1970s

By HARRY F. ROSENTHAL
Associated Press Writer

One American, more than any other, left his imprint on the '70s.

Nixon's the One.

Just as that slogan recalls his presidential campaigns, so can a word, a phrase or a sentence trigger memories of Richard M. Nixon.

Vietnam. Agnew. Detente. China. SALT I. Strict constructionists on the Supreme Court.

Watergate.

Wiretaps. Kissinger. The Plumbers. Maximum John Sirica. The 18 1/2-minute gap.

Mitchell. Haldeman. Ehrlichman. John Dean. Charles Colson. Rose Mary Woods. Key Biscayne and San Clemente.

"I am not a crook." The pardon.

Stonewalling. Tapes. The Saturday Night Massacre.

Expletives deleted. Expletives left in. Making things perfectly clear. The million dollars that can be raised 'but it would be wrong.'

Like him or hate him, Richard Nixon was the most talked about American of the 1970s.

His mark on history is indelible. In the 1972 presidential election, he received 46,740,323 votes, more than any merican office-seeker before or since. He as the first president to resign the office and the only one ever named by a grand jury as a criminal co-conspirator. He was the first to be offered a pardon and accept it, thereby tacitly admitting guilt.

As the decade began, the Gallup poll showed Nixon to be the most admired man in the nation. When he resigned as president on Aug. 9, 1974, only one American in four approved of the way he was doing his job. And as the decade played out, Nixon — after five years as a private citizen — found he still could not make a speech, take a trip, or buy a home without stoking glowing coals of resentment.

What was it about Nixon? The Vietnam war, certanly. Watergate and the many lies, deceits and evasive tactics that followed. Of course. But what millions of Americans disliked about Nixon was Nixon himself — and that didn't strt in the '70s.

Some people couldn't cotton to Nixon from the moment he stepped into public life in the late 1940s by beating Rep. Helen Gahagan Douglas. To them he never ceased to be "Tricky Dick."

The fact that he received a pardon for all crimes committed while he was president didn't sit well with Nixon-haters or with the underlings who had no such shield and had to go to prison.

Nixon didn't lack for admirers. That 24 percent approval rate at the end, projected nationwide, translates to millions of people.

NIXON IN CHINA — President Richard Nixon and China's Premier Chou En-lai review a line of troops after Nixon's arrival at Peking Airport in February 1972. An interpreter follows them. (AP Laserphoto)

Even his detractors conceded that he had that indefinable attribute called leadership. But people differed sharply on where it led the nation.

Nixon's major successes were in foreign policy. It was said that only Nixon, the strident and implacable foe of communism in the '50s, could have brought about an opening with Red Chna in the '70s.

It was Nixon who got together with the Soviets to begin the delicate process of scaling down the arms race. It was Nixon who finally got the last American out of Vietnam, although his opponents said he could have done the same thing four years and thousands of lives earlier.

The policies shaped by Nixon, along with Henry Kissinger, affect the nation even as it goes into the 80s. The turmoil in Iran is a current example. The deposed Shah of Iran, target of the militants in that volatile nation, was as much the creature of Nixon as he was of other U.S. presidents.

Nixon surrounded himself with younger men, but men who could, as he liked to say, play hardball. They took their cues from the president. He saw the country in terms of "us" versus "them."

So did they.

Watergate and its coverup — the climactic events of the '70s — Were the most prominent landmarks on a road that began with an obsession to stop information leaks from the White House when the Nixon administration was less than four months old.

The leaks brought the plumbers, who broke into the office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist. An us-versus-them interest in intelligence brought the plumbers to Nixon's re-election committee in 1972. They broke into Watergate and got caught.

In the language of the conspirators, the wagons were then drawn around the White House and the coverup began. Nixon's comlicity in the coverup was his downfall.

Richard Nixon wen back to California to nurse his wounds, deprived of his dream of being president in the 200th year of the nation's independence.

Even with Nixon offstage, Watergate played on. There were trials and pleadings that sent 25 Nixon men to prison. There were books by those most intimately involved: defendants, prosecutors, lawyers for congressional committees, the judge, journalist and eventually Nixon himslf. The former president submitted, for an estmated million dollars, to a series of television interviews to explain what went wrong.

Politically, Nixon left behind a legacy that shaped government in the rest of the decade. Gerald Ford pardoned Nixon and blamed that act for his own failure to win election in 1976.

Jimmy Carter, playing on another Nixon legacy, the distrust of government, made much of the fact that he was an outsider. He had the White House lease in the last four years of the '70s.

And Nixon began to travel again, to renew acquaintances with world leaders. He said he had no intention to sit on the sidelines, that he would speak out on issues and give his counsel when asked.

At the end of the '70s, he sounded a lot like the Nixon who began the '70s.

New Type Of 'Fat Cats' Introduced During '70s

By The Associated Press

The 1970s brought a profound change in American politics with broad shifts in the way the nation elects its leaders.

The political parties were opened up as never before.

The imperial presidency ascended and fell amid the Vietnam war and the scandal of Watergate.

The old "big money" was eliminated from politics, but a new breed of "fat cat" took its place — special interest groups with hih-powered lobbyists and bulging campaign funds.

The move to "open up" the parties began after the bitter Democratic presidential noination fight of 1968, when Hubert Humphrey shunnedthe primaries but won the nomination.

Cries of foul by challenger Eugene McCarthy and bitter credentials fights could not stop Humphrey, but the convention set in motion the reform movemet which was to dominate the politics of he '70s.

The unit rule which allowed a state's political boss to cast all its convention votes, was banned and a special commission was named to reform other Democratic party rules.

By 1972, big changes in party law had been effected: no more secret meetings, proxy voting, back room wheeling and dealing. Meetings had to be scheduled and anounced in advance and open to all party members.

One controversial rule had the effect of establishing quotas for minorities and women in state delegations. The quotas were later abandoned, to be replaced by "affirmative action" requirements that state parties take steps to bring prevously underrepresented groups into party affairs.

Unpledged delegates and favrite son andidacies are still possible, but this is a risky business. Most delegats run pleded to a articular presidential candidate.

And once elected, national convention delegates may vote ther own convictions. Their votes canot be traded away against their will by bosses and fixers.

Spurred by public opinion and the example of the Democrats' road to reform, Republians followed with their own changes.

Rather than revamp their machinery to conform with the new openness, many state parties gave up their caucuses and conventions nd turned delegate selection over to presidential primaries.

In 1968 there were 17 presidential primaries. Next year there will be at least 35, which will elect or instruct more than 70 percent of th delegats for both parties.

The effect is to take the nomination of presidential candidates, and a lot of other part business as well, out of the hands of a select few and give the general voting public a voice.

These changes helped "Jimmy Who" win election to the White House in 1976 over the indifference if not outright opposition of the party regulars.

Jimmy Carter's nomination, as well as the 1972 nomination of George McGovern would have been impossibl without the rule changes which allowed them to muster masses of supporters who packed caucuses and turned out for the primaries.

Other changes in the decade added to the deterioration of parties.

The new Federal Election Campaign Act and its amendments have a large impact over presidential campaigns. General elections for president are now funded totally by the federal treasury, and nomination expenses are partially paid by the government.

This capped a trend which began with the Eisenhower campaigns in the 1950s, presidential candidates capable of building their own organizations and financing them without party help.

A growing number of voters now register as independents and the rapid decline in party affiliation is strong testimony to the declining influence of the political parties during the 1970s.

Other laws have circumscribed the inancing of federal elections from House districts to the presidency. Bankrolling of candidates by wealthy patrons is now illegal. No one may give any candidate more than $1,000 for any one election. Political committees are limited to $5,000 gifts.

Thus, candidates must seek funds from small donors, whose aid is solicited largely by direct mailing campaigns.

Thus, parties and large bankrollers have lost influence. Rushing into the vacuum are special interest groups, which raise millions in voluntary donations from members or supporters. Political funds maintained by these groups poured more than $35 million into the 1978 elections, almost four times the amount supplied by the parties.

Several studies have shown these donations, in $5,000 bundles, are carefully targeted to candidates who can do the donor some good in office. The best example is the concentration of gifts among members of committees handling legislation important to the giver.

Another characteristic of these new power brokers is their devotion to single issues, ranging from abortion to conservation. In addition to their campaign contributions, they usually have highly motivated and organized memberships which have been successfully in defeating several members of Congress in recent elections.

Consequently, congressional leaders on both sides of the aisle are complaining that party discipline is a shambles. Compromise and coalition politics is increasingly difficult with lawmakers heeding one-shot interest groups instead of broader-based party programs.

And if congressional leaders cannot hold their own ranks in line, presidential leadership is even more difficult. In part this follows from the same shift in dependence of the lawmaker. But it also stems from the new independence of Congress asserted over Vietnam and the decline of White House prestige over Watergate.

By the critical indicator, however, a decade of seeking to encourage participation in the nation's political process would appear to have failed. In the last big elections in 1978, only 39 percent of the Americans old enough to vote bothered to visit the polls.

MARCHING FOR THE ERA — Police estimate that some 10,000 persons marched toward the Capitol in Springfield, Ill., on May 16, 1976, to demonstrate their support of the Equal Rights Amendment. Efforts to ratify the ERA in the Illinois legislature remained unsuccessful. (AP Laserphoto)

Cities Witnessing Revival As Decade Closes

By LEE MITGANG
Associated Press Writer

It looked as though the Uited States was fed up with its cities during the first half of the 1970s.

They had grown fat, arrogant and demanding, seemingly spending money faster than Washington could print it, wit little visible effect on the growing shadow of crime, arson and decay.

The middle class fled the crime, the eroding public services, and high taxes of the cities, hoping to fnd a safe haven in the suburbs, newer and healthier Sunbelt cities, and rural areas.

Finally,in the winter of 1975, the growing squeeze on cities caused by the flight of jobs and people, severe recession and double-digit inflation reached a climax.

Ameica's premier city, New York, came face-to-face with bankruptcy and asked the nation for loans of nearly $3 billion. At first, the headlines shouted back, "Drop Dead!", demanding an explanation for millions of dollars of waste, or overgenerosity.

Fortunately for the Big Apple and other cities, Washington finally agreed to the loans. But New York's plight marked a turning point for urban America. The days when all a city had to do was whistle if it wanted a new federal program were drawing to a close in th '70s.

Other cities beside New York faltered. Wayne County, which contains the city of Detroit, enters the '80s broke. Cleveland defaulted on sveral nots in 1979, but got little more than sympathy from Washington.

Deficits marred the budgets of Boston and Cincinnati, among others, in the mid-70s.

By 1972, Washington had already been trying to unravel some of the red tape choking many city governments. Under the leadership of President Richard Nixon, general revenue sharing sent billions of dollars to local government with no strings attached. Congress will consider renewing it in 1980.

The new era of urban austerity had its own new watchwords: Recycling old buildings and preserving neighborhoods, ever-tightening budgets, and keeping a lid on new taxes. It became clear that cities would need new ideas to replace the once tried-and-true "let Washington do it." The solution that many of them were turning to as the decade closed involved finding new strengths and rediscovering forgotten virues.

Some capitalized on their architectural charm. Waterfront districts in Boston and Savannah, Ga., were turned from eyesores to thriving tourist attractions in the '70s. Aging hotels in Seattle and San Francisco were returned to their former elegance.

Cities like Pittsburgh channeled the wealth of its richest families to help produce a glittering downtown. Chicago and Philadelphia created high-powered public relations mechanisms to lure jobs and industry back to their citie.

Declining neighborhoods which in earlier years would have been forced to make way for glass and steel high-rises now were being saved and renovated in many cities.

And the neighborhood became a political force to be reckoned with.

As "neighborhood power" asserted itself, cities like New York that once claimed to be the guardians of the urban poor were appealing to the midle class not to flee to the suburbs.

In the Capitol Hill district of Washington, the West Side of New York, Beacon Hill in Boston, and all over Seattle, cities lured single professionals and young married couples. Waiting for them were golden housing opportunities: renovated brownstones and lofts that in the '70s quickly doubled and tripled in value.

The nation's energy problems ironically helped many cities rebound from the depths they'd reached by the mid-70s. In-city living suddenly made economic sense. Kiss your car goodbye. Take the subway to work. Insulate a brownstone and save on heating.

But the new era of revived neighborhoods and thriving downtowns has created a new problem: the future spectre of cities where a small urban elite lves side-by-side with an underclass of urban poor whose plight has gradually worsened.

As the decade closed, spokesmen for the urban por were expressing alarm that he much-touted "back tothe cities" revival is making life even more crowded and expensive for those who can least aford it.

And some urban specialists say the current revival of cities may be temporary. As the young professionals who have moved back to the cities recently get older and have school-aged children, they might just do what their parents before them did: move to the better schools in the suburbs.

U.S. Faced 'Frustrating' Foreign Policy

By BARRY SCHWEID
Associated Press Writer

The United States entered the 1970s hip deep — some critics would say over its head — in the Vietnam war, and now eases into the '80s with a fading sense of supremacy and confidence that grew out of victory in World War II.

Under the shadow of spreading nuclear technology is a growing realization that no country, even this rich and powerful one, can command its way in world affairs.

The trustration over the seizing of U.S. diplomats as hostages in Iran and anti-American outbreaks in a number of countries symbolize the changing times.

Vietnam is at least partly responsible fo this new immobility, though it echoes also of the isolationism of the 1920s and '30s.

The United States was unable to stem the spread of communism in Indochina despite a dozen years of intervention and the loss of 57,000 American lives.

Toward the end, the Vietnam war was extremely unpopular with the American public and Congres. Future presidents, should they be impelled to rally the nation to some overseas cause, will have to reverse a domestic instinct for caution.

The industrialized nations faced growing realization that oil and other resources are limited. The energy-producing nations found themselves with economic leverage and they used it.

The oil cartel, both friends and foes of the United States acting together, raised prices and raised them again. Inflation threatened the West. Big powers were suddenly at the mercy of the energ-rich.

Some basics of U.S. foreign policy did not change much during the 1970s.

Competition with the Sovet Union and communism persisted, but the concept of "detente" — of accommodating differences though not philosophies — had taken hold in the form of two U.S.-Soviet strategic arms limitation treaties and a number of other cooperative ventures.

SALT I has limited some weapons systems since 1972. The second treaty is fighting for clearance from a skeptical Senate. If ratified, it would set ceilings on U.S. and Soviet strategic bombers and nuclear-tipped intercontinental missiles through 1985.

The two treaties, and a third round of negotiations to start with enactment of SALT II, are based on an assumption that no nation can really triumph in the nuclear arms race and that, somehow, it must be harnessed.

Arms spending kept going up, though. New and more deadly weapons, inflation and White House determination to win passage of SALT II were causing the surge. Ironically, to promote an arms-control measure, the White House is setting new Pentagon budget records to prove that overall U.S. defenses will not be lowered.

Through NATO, meanwhile, the United States maintained a first line of defense in Western Europe against Soviet expansion. East-West negotiations to reduce troops and tanks on both sides were bogged down. However, tensions were eased a bit by the 1975 Helsinki agreement, which called for advance notification of major troop movements or war games.

Trying to check-mate the Soviet Union throughout the world remained the name of the game, but it seemed to get trickier.

The Russians used Cuban surrogates to promote their aims in Africa. The United States established relations with China, a potential countereight to its unfriendly Communist rival.

In the Middle East, as the Russians lost favor in Egypt, the Americans latched on, providing aid and encouragement to President Anwar Sadat as he recovered all the land lost to Israel in the 1967 Six-Day war.

Scientists Investigate Health Hazards During Past Decade

By KEVIN McKEAN
AP Science Writer

Scientists in the 1970s spent their time guessing the risks of everything from radioactive fallout to diet soda.

It was a decade when many of life's pleasures — and some of its necessities — were found to hold hidden hazards. Cancer-causing chemicals turned up in bacon and beer, mercury was detected in tuna fish, and ozone-depleting chemicals in aerosol spray cans.

Many people found it frustrating that scientists themelves were not sure — and often did not agree — how dangerous these were.

For example, the Three Mile Island nuclear accident prompted two Princeton experts to calculate what might have happened in the worst possible nuclear calamity. They said between 200 and 23,000 people would have died, depending on which way the wind ws blowing.

But the estimate itself showed the imprecision of such guesses. Two hundred deaths is a major tragedy, to be sure. But 23,000 deaths is in a different league, the quivalent of a small war.

Thus, many Americans were angered when the U.S. Food and Drug Administration tried to ban the popular sweetener saccharin in 1977 after tests showed it caused cancer in mice and rats.

"Tests that form the basis of these reports are often conducted with dosages that exceed any to which man could be exposed, are administered for periods that equal the natural life span of the test animals, and are given by inappropiate routes," complained Dr. William Barclay, editor of the Jounal of the American Medical Association.

Another scientist calculated that drinking saccharin diet drinks would subtract two days from a person's life. The ban was postponed.

Similar controversy prevailed over the hazard of nitrosamines in beer, scotch and prepared meats, Red Dye No. 2, X-rays and microwaves, carbon dioxide from fossil fuels, and recombinant DNA Reearch.

The '70s opened with the plunge to Earth of Explorer I, the first U.S. satellite, in April 1970. It closed with the July 1979 crash of Skylab, the heaviest thing ever shot into space.

The biggest fizzle of the decade was Kohoutek, hailed as the "comet of the century" when first sighted far out in space but barely visible when it passed the Sun in January 1974.

Gerard O'Neill proposd building permanent space stations to relieve overcrowding on Earth. Carl Sagan and Frank Drake put a greeting plaque on Pioneer 10 for civilizations beyond the solar system.

Closer to Earth, the mass production of the microchip, an invention of the 1960s, made pocket calculators a household toy. And three new elements were discovered, numbers 104, 105 and 106.

Americans swept the Nobel science prizes in 1976 and earned a disproportionate share of the awards throughout the decade.

But the '70s also saw the unmasking of some startling scientific fakes. The late Sir Cyril Burt, the only psychologist ever to be knighted, was shown to have invented some of the data he used to prove that intelligence is inherited, not acquired.

An American scandal broke in 1974 when a Sloan-Kettering Institute scientist was accused of faking data in transplant research.

The decade also marked the end of mystery about the Piltdown skull, one of the greatest scientific hoaxes of all time. The skull was accepted as an authentic relic of man's ancestors for 40 years after its discovery in 1912. But a former colleague in a posthumous statement in 1979 fingered the late William J. Sollas of Oxford as the one who fabricated Piltdown from a monkey jaw and human cranium.

Some people sought solace in more speculative investigations. Human clones, the Bermuda triangle, ancient extraterrestrial visitors and the spoon-bending powers of Uri Geller all found believers.

But scientists were learning that truth was stranger than fiction. The "black hole," once no more than a theoretical construct, gained credence in 1971 when the X-ray satellite Uhuru spotted a likely candidate called Cygnus X-1. By 1979, scientists had identified several other black holes and a popular movie was made with that title.

Finally, the June 12, 1979, flight of the Gossamer Albatross proved that the human element had not disappeared from science.

Paul MacCready's translucent airplane, which crossed the English Channel in just under three hours, weighed only 70 pounds but had a wing span larger than a DC-9's.

Its power? The legs and determination of 26-year-ld cyclist, Bryan Allen.

MIRACLE BABY — One-year-old Louise Brown, the test-tube baby born in England, squeals with delight as her father picks her up to introduce his daughter to a television studio audience in Chicago last September. Louise's mother Lesley, at left, says she would like to have another child with the test-tube method. (AP Laserphoto)

LEAVING IRAN — A soldier bends low to kiss the feet of Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi last January 16 at Tehran's Mehrabad airport, as the Iranian monarch prepares to leave Iran. Behind him is Empress Farah, who left on the same flight. (AP Laserphoto)

Ethics, Law Dominate Past Year's Medical News

By KEVIN McKEAN
AP Science Writer

Ethics and the law dominated medical news in the 1970s as doctors became so skilled in prolonging and saving lives that the traditional distinctions between life and death began to blur

Intensive care wards, life-saving machines, "test-tube" babies and organ transplants all helped raise ethical questions that had never been considered before.

At the same time, health costs rose dramatically. This fueled an attack on the tradiional authority of doctors and organized medicine.

Physicians scored success against some forms of cancer and heart disease, and an aggressive immunization program wiped out one of humanity's age-old enemies — smallpox.

But a U.S. national flu immunization program backfired, and doctors were caught momentarily off guard by the outbreak of a frightening illness that appeared at first to be a new scourge — Legionnaires' disease.

One of the most heated medical debates of the decade came not in a medical school or hospital but in a Boston courtroom, where Dr. Kenneth Edelin was convicted of manslaugter for a legal abortion.

Advances in neonatal care had made it possible to keep alive some very premature infants, and prosecutors said Edelin knowingly allowed the 24-week-old fetus to die.

But the Massachusetts Supreme Court overturned the verict the following year, saying that life doesn't begin until the baby is alive outside the womb.

In another 1975 ethics case, the parents of Karen Ann Quinlan waged a six-month court battle to disconnect a respirator that had kept their comatous daughter alive after a drug overdose. But when the respirator was turned off in May 1976, Miss Quinlin continued to breath on her own. She remains alive — but unconscious — today.

The 1978 birth of Britain's Louise Brown, the first "test-tube" baby, set off a debate on whether fertilization outside the womb would lead some women to hire others to bear their children.

Another British import, the hospice, sparked some U.S. criticism for its liberal use of narcotics. Hospices were conceived as places where the terminally ill could die free of pain. The first U.S. hospice opened in 1971, but by decade's end there were several dozen.

Meanwhile, doctors, hospitals, the government and insurance companies came under attack for the rising cost of healh care.

The average American was paying $920 a year per capita for health care in 1979, triple the $330 a year he paid nine years earlier.

Critics said one problem was a fancy for expensive medical equipment, such as the CAT scanner. This $700,000 machine makes X-ray pictures of the inside of the body. The CAT scanner was only invented in 1971. But by 1979, there were more than 1,300 of the in U.S. hospitals and their inventors were awarded a Nobel prize.Doctors formed unions and went on strike to protest rising malpractice insurance costs, the result of a string of unprecedented awards.

Paramedics and midwives began to play a larger role; do-it-yoursel kits flourished, like the home pregnancy test ad the airport blood pressure machine; and many Americans gave up smoking, took up jogging and began to assume more responsibility for their own well being.

The 1976 mass immunization program against swine flu ended in disarray after a rash of cases of an obscure paralysis known as Guillain-Barre syndrome.

The last natural case of smallpox came in Somalia in October 1977, although a worker at a British lab where the virus was stored came down the following year.

Many people thought a new plague had appeared when 29 persons died of a mysterious pneumonia-like sickness after a 1976 American Legion convention in Philadelphia. But it turned out later that Legionnaires' disease may also have caused 16 deaths at a Washington hospital in 1965, and many other previously unexplained deaths as well.

Advances in radiation and drug therapy dramatically improved survival rates for Hodgkin's disease and some other cancers. And the coronary bypass operation, conceived in 1967 as a treatment for some forms of heart disease, had become the most common major operation by 1979, with 80,000 procedures a year. But heart disease and cancer remained the No.1 and No. 2 killers respectively.

However, surgeons recorded an important advance on another front in the 1970s. Refinements in microsurgery made it increasingly possible to reattach fingers, arms and legs that had been accidentally severed.

These operations became so common by 1979 that one suspected Puerto Rican terrorist whose hands were mangled by a bomb blast sued New York police for $1.2 million, charging they confiscated his fingers as evidence rather than allow doctors to sew them back on.

But William Guillermo Morales didn't stick around to collect. He fled jail in May by climbing down a makeshift rope.

'Charge It!' Becomes Slogan Of Past Decade

By The Associated Press

Charge it!

The phrase became the slogan of the 1970s for millions of people who found that a simple piece of plastic could open up the way to a better life — temporarily at least.

It was a time when celebrities whose names were better known than their faces advertised the fact with a credit card. A time when ordinary people carried "clout" in the form of credit. At the end of 1969, Americans owed just over $3.7 billion in revolving credit debt. The kind of debt that comes with bank cards and department store accounts. It worked out to just under $20 per capita.

Ten years later, the amount of outstanding revolving debt was $50.4 billion — more than $200 for evey man, woman and child in the country.

From 1969 to 1979, the outstanding installment debt of all kinds — auto loans, etc. — tripled. In the same period, outstanding revolving debt grew by more than 16 times.

Today, there are fears that credit is too easy to get. Counselors report more and more people have charged and charged, only to find that they can't handle the bills.

"Somehow or other people will say that a plastic credit card doesn't seem to represent money," said Mayneen Dykstra, head of the Central Illinois Consumer Credit Counseling Service in Peoria, Ill.

"When it's used as convenience, that's one thing. But when it's used to increase the income level, which most people are using it for today, that's another," Mrs. Dykstra added.

Harry Strain, head of the Portland, Ore., counseling bureau, agreed. "So many people ... use this card as phony money nd it isn't money at all. And they have that day of reckoning ..."

Credit is not an invention of the 1970s. Many department stores have issued charge cards for years. Travel and entertainment cards like American Express and Diner's Club also have been in existence for more than 20 yeas. The ancestor of today's MasterCharge was a card issued by a Long Island, NY., bank in 1951.

During the past 10 years, however, the use of the cards mushroomed.

There has been an "absolute proliferation of cards," said Thomas Chapman, senior vice president of the First National Bank of Atlanta. "You can have a pocketful (with) huge purchasing power. ... Writing a check is getting more and more impossible."

The old cards were designed primarily for convenience; you paid your bill, in full, at the end of every month.

The new cards, like Master Charge and Visa, are different. Millions of people — up to two-thirds of all cardholders in some places — use them to roll over their debts from month to month. They pay a minimum amount, along with a finance charge on the outstanding balance.

The credit is automatic. You can borrow and re-borrow, up to a fixed, pre-set limit, without re-applying. Accounts are reviewed periodicially and, if you have kept up payment in the past, the chances are that your credit limit will be increased.

Until the late 1960s, the bank cards were local or regional. Gradually, however, the banks got together so they could exchange computerized information and Facilitate transactions.

The Master Charge card, for example, which was developed by a California group in 1967, went national in early 1969 through the Interbank Card Association, a nonprofit group. By the beginning of 1974, there were 32 million holders of Master Charge cards which were accepted by just over 1 million merchants. People charged just $2.09 bilion in the first quarter of 1974.

Five years later, there were nearly 57 million holders of Master Charge cards who rang up $6.61 bilion in sales during the first quarter of 1979. The cards are accepted at more than 2 million outlets.

Together, there are more than 115 million Master Charge and Visa cards in circulaton. Some people have more than one.

"It became a competitive question for anks to offer both cards," said Cynthia Chaddick of Visa. This type of competition led to mass mailings by banks seeking new customers.

Recent economic problems — including high interest rates and worries about a recession — have led many credit granters to take a second look at their policies. Bob Golitz of BankSystems Inc.of Rocky River, Ohio, which processes charge card transations for 260 member banks said that two or three years ago, large Eastern banks "were making credit cards easily available to Ohio-based consumers from a competitive standpoint. Now, that doesn't seem to be going on. ..."

In the long run, however, the growth in credit cards is expected to continue. According to the Nilson Report, a Los Angeles-based credit newsletter, the average cardholder will have 8.4 credit cards by 1985; he or she will have 2.1 bank cards.

A of the end of 1977, there were some 712 million credit and check cashing cards throughout the world, according to the Nilson Report. By 1985, the report said, there will be one billion.

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

If you are interested in stepping into the business world and declaring your own independence, contact our carrier manager right now. He'll give you all of the important facts about carrier work. Then, if you are still interested, he'll provide the pen and show you where to sign.

Sign Up For Independence

When young people sign up for newspaper route work, they are really signing up for independence. The kind of independence that goes with earning your own money, running your own business and dealing with people on a one-to-one basis.

Our carriers are young business men and women. They provide a vital service, handle their own finances and reap a handsome profit from their efforts. What better training to prepare them for the future?

WANTED

Young Adult Businessmen and Women for...Delivery of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal

A young adult on a Avalanche-Journal route is a part-time business person. He/She is in business for themsel and will learn fundamentals of good business practice through actual experience.

The Avalanche-Journal carrier buys for wholesale and sells for retail, realizing a gross profit. He learns to operate his business as efficiently as possible to assure maximum profit. The A-J carrier builds his business by giving good prompt delivery service and through the use of good salesmanship.

It is important that he learns how to keep accurate records. The Avalanche-Journal carrier has the responsibility of keeping his accounts receivable in order so he can take care of his obligations promptly.

This early training will be useful to a child through his adult career. Many parents encourage their children to accept the challange offered an Avalanche-Journal newspaper route.

World's Agriculture Production Drops In Developed Regions

WASHINGTON (AP) — World agricultural production dropped in 1979 for the first time in seven years, with virtually all of the decline occurring in developed countries, the Agriculture Department said.

"Production in the developed countries, including the USSR and Eastern Europe, fell almost 3 percent in 1979, while output in the developing countries held 'nearly steady,' the department's outlook board said.

Agricultural output dropped "in all major industrialized countries, except in the United States," including a 12 percent decline in the Soviet Union's overall output, largely because of a sharply reduced grain harvest, the report said.

In the United States, where farmers harvested bumper crops this year, including corn, wheat, soybeans, cotton and rice, agricultural output climbed 5 percent above the 1978 level, it said.

"Among the developing countries, output increases in East Asia, Latin America and Pakistan offset declines in India and West Asia," it said.

Measured on a per capita basis, food production in 1979 declined 3.3 percent from last year, indicating that population increases continue to put pressure on global supplies.

"The 1979 declines in food output, on a per capita basis, were approximately equal in both the developed and developing countries," the report said. "Population continues to grow about 2 percent annually in the developing countries while remaining constant or increasing inimally n the developed countries."

Looking to 1980, the report said economic activity worldwide "is expected to slacken" and that growth in the major developed countries may be held to a growth rate of about 2 percent.

"This slowdown in the developed countries may influence the developing countries," it said. "Rising oil prices and general inflation will be major factors impacting global economic activity."

With large U.S. production and limited supplies and transportation problems in some other competing countries, the United States is expected to provide "much of the increased grain trade for 1979-80," the report said.

Repeating earlier forecasts, the report said U.S. farm exports may rise to another record of about $38 billion in the year that will end next Sept. 30, up from $32 billion in 1978-79.

The report also noted that "U.S. agricultural exports to Iran have virtually ceased" and that the International Longshoremen's union has refused to load ships bound for Iran.

Also, as others have said previously, the report said Iran began turning away from the United States last summer in an attempt "to diversify its supplies" from abroad.

"Iran's wheat and rice supplies may be sufficient for the short term, but any slowing or stoppage of imported vegetable oils, feedgrains and soymeal would have an immediate effect," the report said. "The loss of imported feedgrains and meals would adversely impact Iran's poultry industry."

Further on world food outlook, the report said "beef and veal production in major producing countries has declined in recent years and will probably continue to decrease in 1980" although more pork and poultry will offset the reduction in beef.

In a related report, the department said U.S. farmers are expected to pay 16 percent to 20 percent more for fertilizer next spring than they did last spring.

"These increases stem from strong domestic and export demand and rapidly rising production, transportation and retailing costs," the report said.

On a global basis, fertilizer production facilities are expected to be adequate to meet demands the next several years, but higher prices will be felt as demand for fertilizer — and its costs of production and transport — continues to grow.

Demand for fertilizer is increasing in the United States and in many other countries as farmers attempt to expand global crop output, the report said.

Harnessing Wind Power May Cut Energy Use

By ROBERT L. HANEY
Texas Agricultural Experiment Station

An experimental wind-powered machine has cut by 40 percent the electrical energy usage of a conventional irrigation pump.

Irrigation, so vital to food production, used an estimated 87 billion kilowatt-hours-equivalent of energy last year; that's enough energy for 4 million homes.

So you can see the potential for such a development is great, even though not all places that irrigate have sufficient wind for such a saving.

Though different kinds of windmills have been used for centuries to grind grain or pump water, they're relatively inefficient when compared to expermental turbines now being developed.

Many of those still in use for pumping water for household or livestock can pump only about 10 gallons per minute or generate about one kilowatt of power.

The new wind machines now being developed that can be used to power large irrigation pumps can produce 10 to 200 kilowatts.

At Bushland, an experimental wind-powered irrigation system has been under test for two years by the USDA Science and Education Administration in cooperaton with the U.S. Department of Energy.

Previous attempts to use wind power to irrigate encountered two big problems: extreme variability of the wind and difficulty of generating sufficient power.

Both have been overcome in the existing system according to its developers, agricultural engineers R.N. Clark and A.D. Schneider.

A key point, Clark points out, is that the entire pumping system was assembled from commercially available equipment and was installed in an existing irrigation well.

Called a "wind-assisted systen," the unit uses the conventional electric power source when wind is at low speeds.

But when the wind blows at 13 miles per hour or more, the wind turbine (looks something like a giant two-bladed egg beater) supplies mechanical power to the pump, thereby reducing the electricity cost. It cuts off when the wind speed exceeds 45 miles per hour.

In the Texas High Plains, where the experimental turbine is located, 90 percent of the available wind power is within this windspeed range.

Clark says the poower harvested by the wind turbine increases proportionally to the cube of the windspeed. This means that a 30-mile an hour wind produces 27 times more power than that from a 10 mile per hour wind.

Thus, as windspeed increases, the wind power produced increases rapidly and the electric power consumed decreases, until the electric motor is almost completely unloaded.

"A normal irrigation season usually requires about 2,000 hours of pumping during the spring and summer months," Clark says. "In the southern Great Plains, between March 1 and Oct. 1, windspeed exceeds 13 miles per hour at least 3,000 hours.

"During this period, the experimental turbine could supply 40,000 kilowatt hours of power or about 40 percent of that required by the irrigation pump.

"Presently, we cannot expect to supply all the water needed for irrigation with wind energy, simply because the wind does not blow all the time during peak crop water-use periods.

"However, temporary storage of water in surface reservoirs can increase the percentage of irriagation water supplied by wind power.

"The wind-assist pumping system has potential for providing an alternate energy source for irrigated agriculture in areas with average windspeeds exceeding 12 miles per hour.

"New wind turbines which are being developed should be economically priced and should provide farmers with a good, practical power unit for their pumps," Clark concluded.

Diesel Becoming Harder To Locate, Solon Says

A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — State Rep. Dan Kubiak of Rockdale says farmers across the state are experiencing difficulty obtaining diesel fuel to harvest their crops.

Kubiak, speaking at a meeting of the House Subcommittee on Energy and Agriculture, said diesel fuel shortages have preceded harvest periods in several areas of Texas this year.

"We've had a large amount of diesel shortage in the state and what we're (the subcommittee) looking for are answers to why we have the shortages," said Kubiak, chairman of the subcommittee.

Kubiak also said the committee is looking into "black market" sales of diesel fuel at considerably higher prices and at problems with the fuel allocation system for farmers.

"There's a great deal of black market diesel that is available at considerably higher prices and we wanted to know how these people are getting the fuel and the people who actually need it are not getting it," Kubiak said.

"There are shortages occurring throughout the state," Kubiak said. "They have been occurring for the last six months and they are shortages we think can be avoided," he said.

Better methods need to be worked out to improve the system of allocating fuel throughout the state, Kubiak said.

Buckholts farmer John Zajicek told the subcommittee that his diesel distributor is going out of business and that he has been unable to find another distributor willing to supply him with fuel.

Zajicek said he has contacted several oil company distributors in Dallas and other areas and has been told they will not take any new customers unless forced to do so.

Frank Tomasick, a Buckholts distributor for the Atlantic Richard Co., said high prices his statewide distributor is charging him has resulted in the loss of 62 percent of his business and is forcing him out of business.

A consumer can go to service stations and buy fuel from the pump at retail prices cheaper than Tomasick can deliver at bulk rates, Tomasick said.

"We (farmers) are in trouble and without diesel we are destined to go out of business," Zajicek said.

Agriculture Officials Say Milk Production Surge To Continue

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Department analysts are holding to an earlier prediction that the surge in milk production in the second half of this year will carry over through mid-1980, at least.

Milk output this year is expected to be about 123.4 billion pounds, an increase of more than 1 percent from 1978. A further gain of about 1 percent is in the works next year, the department's outlook board said.

A similar projection was made last month, and there was nothing in the latest report that signalled any significant change from it.

Milk prices at the farm, which may average about 14 percent higher this year than in 1978, may increase an additional 9 percent to 11 percent in 1980, the report said.

Thus, with production continuing to rise and prices likely to increase further, dairy farmers' gross receipts also are expected to rise. But higher expenses may hold producers net incomes to smaller gains next year, it said.

Dairy sales receipts are expected to total another record of about $14.5 billion this year, up from the previous high of $12.7 billion in 1978.

Retail prices of milk and other dairy products are forecast to gain 8 percent to 10 percent next year, about in line with other food items, officials said. This year, however, dairy prices at retail are headed up about 11.5 percent, slightly more than the average increase predicted for all foods.

CATTLE DISEASE

Because cattle brucellosis has a variable incubation period, a single test may not detect the disease. Retesting is necessary. The disease causes abortion and reduced milk yield in cattle.

Indonesian Quake Leaves 25 Dead, 219 Injured

JAKARTA, Indonesia (AP) — The earthquake that rocked the tourist island of Bali on Tuesday left 219 hurt, 91 of them seriously, in addition to 25 killed, the government said Wednesday.

Seventeen public buildings, eight schools, one village governmental office, one clinic, 20 religious shrines and one hospital were reported damaged, officials said.

The government has distributed 20 tons of rice to the homeless and plans to build massive barracks to provide temporary housing, authorities said.

HIGH PLAINS COTTON
U. S. Department of Agriculture

Trading on the Lubbock spot cotton market was moderate on Wednesday. Supplies of cotton for sale were moderate to heavy and demand was moderate to good.

The Lubbock Cotton Exchange's spot quotations declined 25 points.

The base price of grade 41, staple 34, mike 3.5-4.9 was 64.60, up 125 points from one week ago. Grade 42, staple 31, mikes 2.7-2.9 was 48.80.

Growers sold mikes 3.0-3.2 for 1,050 to 1,250 points over 1979 loan rates. Mikes 2.7-2.9 sold for 600-800 over.

Gins paid growers $100 to $125 per ton for cotton seed.

LUBBOCK SPOT COTTON

Futures Close Mostly Higher

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 35 points higher to 12 lower on 25,900 cars Wednesday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. April was up the most with December off the most.

Scattered buying was uncovered after prices slipped to the lowest in more than one week on spillover selling from Tuesday and fresh weakness in pork futures Wednesday. Beef rose to a three-week high and offset mostly lower cash cattle.

Deliveries total 1,204 thus far. Wholesale beef was up one-fourth at 106½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were off $1.25 to up 25 cents, with the best top $69 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct. Slaughter was 120,000 head. About 10,400 head are expected today at the major markets.

Feeder cattle futures closed 60 higher to 55 lower on 2,442 lots. January posted the only gain with April pacing other months lower.

Selling carried over from Tuesday and followed weaker pork futures and increased cattle arrivals.

Late support was attracted on higher beef and firmness in cash feeder cattle after futures slipped to the lowest in more than a week.

Cash feeders were steady to up $2 with the best top $113 per hundredweight at Oklahoma City. Receipts at the major terminals today are expected to total 6,100 head.

Hog futures closed 15 to 95 lower led by February on 8,827 contracts. The market slumped 142 to 5½ week lows before briefly gaining 25.

Selling continued from Tuesday's limit declines and stemmed from heavy hog runs and the lowest prices in two weeks. The lower trend to most pork trade was also of influence along with evening up ahead of the cold storage report and fears of heavy numbers in Friday's pig crop report.

Wholesale hams were unchanged to off one-half at 63 to 70 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Deliveries total 36 thus far. Cash hogs were weak to off $2 with the best top $40.50 per hundredweight at Indianapolis. Kill was 326,000 head. The major markets are expecting about 31,500 head today.

Chicago Mercantile Exchange floor traders comments on the U. S. Department of Agriculture cold storage report for frozen pork bellies were mostly negative.

Stocks at 42,375,000 pounds on Dec. 1 versus a revised 17,745,000 pounds on Nov. 1 indicate storings of 24,630,000 pounds durng the month. This was near the low end of the range of 24 to 27 million pounds guesstimated but was a record high input for the month and compared with 20.9 million pounds a year ago.

The stocks were also the heaviest since the 68 million pounds on hand Dec. 1, 1971.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed at limit loss of 200 with sellers over across the board the second day in a row. Sales held to 3,143 lots as prices were down limit most of the day to the lowest in more than one week.

Pressure continued on out of town storings of 6.3 million pounds along with heavy hog runs and lower prices. Liquidation ahead of the cold storage report and Friday's pig crop report pressed on futures as did weakness in cash bellies at noon.

Wholesale bacon was off one half to 3½ at 30 to 41½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Coast Guard Has New Safety Rules

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Coast Guard is instituting new safety rules for recreational boats.

The rules take effect in a year, on Jan. 1, 1981 and require boats of 16 feet or more to carry visual distress signals.

In addition, the signals will have to be carried on any boats that carry six or more passengers for hire and, at night, on boats of less than 16 feet.

The rules were developed "to assure that boaters who may get into trouble have the means to attract assistance," commented Rear Admiral Bernie Thompson.

"Signaling devices, particularly at night, can significantly improve the probability of finding a distressed craft, thus preventing a minor boating problem from becoming a major or even fatal one," he said.

Photograph Brings Record Auction Price

NEW YORK (AP) — The highest price ever paid at auction for a single photograph — $22,000 — was recorded Wednesday when an anonymous Pennsylvania collector bought a large print of Ansel Adams' "Moonrise, Hernandez, New Mexico."

The sale at the Sotheby Parke Bernet galleries netted a total of $292,475 for 106 lots, with 23 lots of Adams photographs accounting for $188,350.

The same collector set another record by buying an Ansel Adams portfolio of 12 prints, known as Portfolio Seven, for $45,000, the top price for any lot in the sale.

"Moonrise" was photographed in 1942, and the 21½-by-26½ print sold Wednesday is believed to one of three of that size in existence.

Hospital For Polio Victims To Close

ATLANTA (AP) — Georgia health officials voted Wednesday to close the hospital at Warm Springs, Ga., where polio victims — including President Franklin D. Roosevelt — sought comfort in warm mineral water before the Salk vaccine cut the incidence of the disease.

The decision by the state Board of Human Resources came despite a federal lawsuit filed by the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation seeking to block the shutdown.

The 52-year-old hospital, built to accommodate 78 patients but housing only 49 now, was deeded to the state by the foundation in 1974 on condition that the state continue to operate it for 10 years.

A task force appointed by Gov. George Busbee concluded earlier this month that the hospital would require costly renovations to remain in efficient operating condition, and recommended that it be closed.

Under Wednesday's decision, the hospital will accept no new patients after Jan. 1 and will shut its doors for the last time June 30.

The Department of Human Resources will help the 49 patients move to other hospitals which specialize in treating the spinal cord injuries and other disability cases which the Warm Springs hospital has handled in recent years.

Edwards said the state also will seek to find new employment for hospital employees faced with job losses, said Joe Edwards, director of the department's division of vocational rehabilitation.

The state will continue to operate a vocational rehabilitation center near the hospital.

The Warm Springs Foundation sought to block the board's action by asking a federal judge Tuesday to issue a temporary restraining order.

U.S. District Judge Ernest Tidwell, hearing the request in Newnan, Ga., refused to grant the restraining order.

But the foundation's suit remains in court.

Why The Precision Haircut Might Be Right For You.

If you hate the way your haircut disappears the day after, come to Command Performance where we specialize in the precision haircut.

Precision haircutting is our technique for cutting the hair in harmony with the way it grows. So, as it grows, it doesn't lose its shape. And because the hair is cut to fall naturally, you don't have to keep fussing with it. Usually a shake of the head does it.

The precision haircut with shampoo and blow-dry costs just fourteen dollars for guys and gals. We also offer permanent waves, coloring, frosting and conditioning. No appointment is needed, just come in. And you'll see that precision is right for you.

Hollywood Sees Large Productions, Big Bucks During '70s

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)— They could have called it the Soaring Seventies — and not merely because the decade provided such space adventures as "Star Wars," "Close Encounters of the Third Kind," "Alien," "The Black Hole" and "Star Trek — The Motion Picture."

The 1970s also saw box office figures and film company profits climb to new heights after the uncertainties of the '60s. The past decade brought a new optimism, even euphoria, to a Hollywod that had sometimes doubted its powers of survival.

"Star Wars" was the phenomenon of the 1970s, amassing almost $200 million in rentals for 20th Century-Fox. That was more than double the receipts for the pre-1970 leaders, "The Sound of Music" (1965) and "Gone With the Wind" (1939).

Most of the all-time top moneymaking films appeared in the 1970s: "Star Wars," "Jaws," "Close Encounters," "The Godfather," "The Sting," "The Exorcist," "The Towering Inferno," "Love Story," "American Grafitti," "National Lampoon's Animal House," "Grease," "Saturday Night Fever," "One Flew Over The Cuckoo's Nest," "Rocky."

In 1979, "Rocky II" scored a record by becoming the first sequel to a superhit to make more money than the original.

Jack Valenti, president of the Motion Picture Association of America, has cited figures on the industry's growth.

Theater admissions in America rose from 920.6 million to 1,128.2 million from 1970 to 1978, up 23 per cent.

Box office gross for the same period climbed 85 per cent — to $2,643 million.

Number of films grossing over $10 million soared from seven in 1970 to 30 in 1978.

America's renewed romance with the movies brought prosperity to film companies, some of which were flirting with insolvency in the 1960s. The most dramatic turnabout was 20th Century-Fox, which had defaulted on loans in 1970 because of the failure of "Hello, Dolly" "Dr. Doolittle" and other expensive films. "Star Wars" and other hits provided so much income that Fox diversified into reorts, soft drinks and other enterprises.

Perhaps the most encouragng development of the 1970s was the emergence of bright young filmmakers: George Lucas, Franci Coppola, Steven Spielberg, John Badham, John Avildse, John Landis, Martin Scorsese and Michael Cimino.

The decade brought some disturbing trends. Like everything else, film production suffered from inflation. The average cost of a movie in the early 1970s was slightly under $2 million. By 1979 the figure had reached $6 million. "Apocalypse Now" climbed to a fantastic $31 million, making its chances for profit problematical.

Fees for top stars helped escalate production costs. Marlon Brando was paid $3 million plus a percentage of the profits of "Superman" for three weeks' work. A dozen other stars can get a minimum of $1 million per film.

Marketing costs rose sharply in the 1970s. Film companies now figure it takes $6 million in TV, radio and newspaper ads, plus other exploitation, to launch a major movie.

Despite higher costs, the film world looks to the 1980s with continued optimism. Not only is the theater market constantly improving, television networks are paying $5 million and up for moderately successful films. And the new decade is expected to bring enormous profits from cable television, pay TV, videocassettes and other new areas of exhibition.

Silverman Became TV's 'Man Of The Decade'

By TOM JORY
Associated Press Writer

He was 32 when he took over as head of programming at CBS in 1970, and 10 year later Fred Silverman was NBC's hope for the future. In between, he made ABC, that perennial doormat, television's No. 1 network.

It was, in a sense, Silverman's decade.

But prime-time, Silverman's battleground, was becoming relatively less important as television entered the 1980s. The video recorder, cable TV and the satellte transmission system, all introduced in the mid-70s, appeared certain to revolutionize the medium in the coming decade.

The "adult western" had just about run its course when Silverman took charge of programming at CBS, and long-running shows like "Gunsmoke" and "Bonanza" soon were replaced by programs aimed at younger viewers.

"Cannon," "Kojak," "Maude," "Rhoda," "Happy Days," "Laverne and Shirley," "Charlie's Angels," "Starksy and Hutch" — all were brought to primetime by Silverman in the '70s, and the composed a fair chart of America's taste in television.

With the decade about to end, Silverman faced what many considered his most difficult task, that of rebuildig NBC's primetime lineup. In addition, there was Johnny Carson, at a reported $2 million a year TV's highest-paid entertainer, asking out after 17 years as host of NBC's "Tonight Show."

For commercial television, ratings, and primarily those from the A.B.C. Nielse Co., were the be-all and end-all, and Silverman had an uncanny knack for picking winners. Success, or failure, was measured in weeks, and spinoffs from hit series became common.

"The Mary Tyler Moore Show," which premiered in 1970, was enormously successful through much of the decade, thanks in large part to its superb cast. Edward Asner, Ted Knight, Gavin MacLeod, Georgia Enel, Valerie Harper, Cloris Leachman, as well as Miss Moore, all had series of their own after leaving "MTM."

"All in the Family," based on the contoversial British series, "Till Death Us Do Part," made its debut on CBS in January 1971, and quickly changed the definition of situation comedy. Written by Norman Lear, and starring Carroll O'Connor and Jean Stapleton, the series featured a working class bigot who clashed frequently with his liberal son-in-law. It was still on CBS' prime-time schedule in the fall of 1979, as "Archie Bunker's Place."

"Family viewing time," two hours of proramming each night suitable for all viewers, became network policy in 1975. And by 1977, the American Medical Association could report a drop in television violence from the peak year of 1976.

But sex both in dialogue and in action, quickly filled the vacuum. And though nudity still was taboo, it seemed as if shows like "Three's Company" and "Soap" would stetch the definition of good taste a bit further each week. The miniseries, brought by public TV to this country from Great Britain in the early part of the decade, became increasingly important to the networks in the mid-'70s.

"Upstairs, Downstairs," a British import, was the first major miniseries broadcast by public TV in the early 1970s, and its success spurred CBS to attempt an American version, "Beacon Hill," in 1975.

"Beacon Hill" was a flop, but ABC scored with Irwin Shaw's "Rich Man, Poor Man," in 1976. Alex Haley's "Roots," aired by ABC over eight consecutive nights in February 1977, drew the largest audience for an entertainment program in television history. And NBC, the next year, stirred world opinion with "Holocaust," a miniseries on the plight of Jews in Nazi Germany.

The Public Broadcasting Service brought the arts — opera, dance, theater — into American homes for the first time since the early days of the medium, and "Sesame Street," introduced in 1969, broadened the definition of educational television. Another children's show, "Captain Kangaroo," which premiered Oct. 3, 1955 on CBS, was going strong as the decade came to an end.

In news, Walter Cronkite took over as anchorman for CBS' "Evening News" in 1962, and John Chancellor became "NBC Nightly News" anchorman in 1971. Both held te same influential positions in 1979. ABC, under Roone Arledge, the network's president for news and sports, abandoned the traditional New York anchor in 1978 for a "World News Tonight" format with anchormen in Washington, Chicago and London. And by the end of the decade, ABC had risen from last place in the evening news ratings to challenge the leaders.

Television news began the decade under a shadow cast by then Vice President Spiro Agnew. In a speech in Des Moines Nov. 13, 1969, Agnew suggested the networks were controlled by the liberal Eastern establishment.

TV news attracted attention in the early part of the '70s for its coverage of the war in Vietnam. For the first time in history, combat scenes were beamed into American homes each evening. Barbara Walters created controversy in 1976 when she left NBC's "Today" program to become network TV's first female anchor at ABC, at a reported $1 million a year.

CBS' "60 Minutes" newsmagazine reached a plateau of sorts after a decade on the air as the highest-rated prime-time program in the week ending Nov. 26, 1978. ABC introduced its own newsmagazine, "20-20," that year, while NBC struck out with its version, "Weekend." "Weekend" returned in mid-'79 as "Prime Time Sunday," but had trouble building an audience.

As ABC's "World News Tonight" challenged the traditional leaders, so did the network's "Good Morning America." Born in November 1975, the early morning show put the squeeze on NBC's long-running "Today" program. CBS, meantime, was first in the field in 1979 with a Sunday morning nework news program, called, appropriately, "Sunday Morning."

The television signal was relayed for the first time by satellite in 1972, but PBS was the first to use the orbiting device for regular program transmission, and by early 1979 the non-commercial network was capable of feeding four programs simulataneously to member stations.

Development of the satellite transmission facility was perhaps most important, however, to the cable industry. Ted Turner, the flamboyant Atlanta sportsman, created the first "superstation," capable of providing programs to all parts of the country. And Warner Cable Cor. made news with its QUBE system — the first two-way cable TV system.

'Family' Top-Rated Show During '70s

NEW YORK (AP) —Introduced to American viewers in January 1971, it would rewrite the traditional definition of situation comedy. It was "All in the Family," and by the end of the next season, it was No.1 in the prime-time television ratings.

"All in the Family" would remain the country's favorite TV Program through much of the decade, and as the '80s approached, the show — renamed "Archie Bunker's Place" — and its star, Carroll O'Connor, were still around, still prominent in the ratings.

Here is a lis of the top-rated prime-time programs of the '70s, based on figures from the A.C. Nielsen Co.:

1969-70 — "Rowan & Martin's Laugh-In," NBC.
1970-71 — "Marcus Welby, M.D.," ABC.
1971-72 — "All in the Family," CBS.
1972-73 — "All in the Family."
1973-74 — "All in the Family."
1974-75 — "All in the Family."
1975-76 — "All in the Family."
1976-77 — "Happy Days," ABC.
1977-78 — "Laverne and Shirley," ABC.
1978-79 — "Laverne and Shirley."

CARTER PICKS KINGS

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter said Wednesday he is nominating two men named King to key roles as U.S. representatives to the World Bank. Carter chose Colbert I. King, a deputy assistant secretary of the treasury, to be U.S. executive director of the bank, and David S. King, a Washington attorney and former House member from Utah, to be alternate executive director.

Out In The Cold

THE HEADLINE READ: "Lewis Steps Down As Wyoming Boss". Big deal.

Head coaches getting pink slips are like tidalwaves that wipe out entire South Pacific islands. Page three news. Right there behind the Y's Indian dance contest results and how AMF just donated 2,000 Evenrude motors to the Boat People. A week doesn't go by that a Pepper Rogers isn't handed his walking papers and 10,000 naked natives swallow a couple of gallons of salt water. Sad, but true. (Now if Rex Dockery suddenly found himself in line at the Texas Employment Commission and New Deal was swallowed up by the Caprock, that's different.)

DAVID KNAUS

Except maybe the real sports fans that read WAC game stories, probably no one else in Lubbock has heard of Bill Lewis. Most locals think Bill Lewis is Jerry's younger brother or maybe the front half of the team of Lewis and Clark, the trailblazers that got lost and discovered Aspen.

Lewis' case, though, is different. When he tossed in the towel to "become and alumni relations specialist" (Your guess is as good as mine), that hit a little closer to home. It seems one of Lewis' assistants, David Knaus, is a former all-Southwest Conference noseguard at Texas Tech and an all-America nice guy.

Now Knaus is out on the street without a job. But he knows it comes with living in the coaching jungle. Never buy a house and keep plenty of forwarding notices in the desk drawer are the standing rules. Knaus knows where that statement is coming from.

"They told me when I got in the business," commented Knaus, "that there are two kinds of coaches — one that just got fired and the other that's waiting to be fired."

Knaus knew full well when he signed on that the "get moving" order would come sooner or later. He just expected it to be later than sooner. Three years just wasn't enough time to build a solid football program, he said. Afterall, Notre Dame wasn't built in a day.

But the adminstration lost faith in Lewis. He'd just led the Cowboys to a 3-8 mark in '79 and a seventh-place finish in the WAC. For three years, the won-loss record wasn't that much better, 13-21-1. With those numbers staring alumni in the face, the adminstration felt tt was time for a change. Exit Bill Lewis.

"I thought we'd taken a lot of positive steps the last three years," said Knaus. "I'm disappointed we won't be around another three years to see them payoff. I thought we were just starting to get things established here. And personally I think they made a big mistake.

"But they felt it was already time for a change. And when people start talking about a change, the first person that goes is the head coach. It's always been like that and I guess it always will."

And after the head man goes the first assistant, then the defensive line coach, then...

It's house cleaning and the domino theory rolled into one.

BUT THE FIRING hasn't put a ace-bandage taste in Knaus' mouth. He still wants to stay in the college coaching business more-than-ever. High schools are nice, he says, but polishing the collegians and watching them perform in front of tens of thousands on Saturday afternoon is where it's at.

"Coaching is like anything else, it has its ups and downs," says Knaus. "Right now is a down time, but I'll be back.

"You know this is coming," he continued. "You always know it. It's in the back of your mind when you take the job. But you can't let it bother you. You just have to go out and do the best job you can."

And hope your all-conference linebacker doesn't trip over any hemlines.

KNAUS ISN'T REALLY sure of his next stop. He hopes it's in the Southwest Conference and preferably at his alma-mama. Once a Red Raider, always a Red Raider.

"I'll be truthful," says Knaus, "I'd love to get back there. That's been home to me for a long time.

"Plus," added Knaus, "Tech's had a lot of success over the years...nothing but success. It would be nice to work somewhere like that...real nice."

Coaching with new Wyoming boss Pat Dye is a possibility, says Knaus. But Dye has yet to make any decisions on who he plans on keeping around. "I guess I'll just wait and see," says Knaus.

Then he quipped, "I guess you could say I'm just out in the cold."

Get it? Nine-degree weather? Wyoming? Out in the cold? Just fired? Forget it.

McHaney Confirms Dismissal

By NORVAL POLLARD
Executive Sports Editor

Wednesday, six days after the action took place, Texas Tech women's athletic director Jeannine McHaney confirmed that Gay Benson, Tech's women's basketball coach, would not be back next year to coach the Red Raiders.

"I can confirm that Gay Benson will not back in 1980-81," Miss McHaney acknowleged over the telephone. "I can confirm that her contract will not be renewed."

Miss McHaney and her immediate superior, Dr. Robert Ewalt, vice president for student affairs at Tech, refused to comment Tuesday on Mrs. Benson's Dec. 14 firing.

When asked why she choose this particular time of year to fire Mrs. Benson, Miss McHaney responded:

"We have certain deadlines. We have to notify people by a certain time concerning contracts."

In an exclusive interview with the The Avalanche-Journal Tuesday, Mrs. Benson expressed concern over the lack of any reasons given for her firing.

"I don't want it to sound like sour grapes," Mrs. Benson stated. "What's done is done. I just think the public needs to be aware. Texas Tech is a great institution, but not all things going on are great.

"I want to know the reasons and I want the public to know the reasons. I know I am not perfect, but I don't know what I have done to be fired."

Several of Mrs. Benson's current players, including freshman starter Pam Stone and sophomore reserve Lynn Webb, said Tuesday that if Mrs. Benson was not back with the team next season they would also leave Tech.

When Miss McHaney was asked her position concerning that matter she said:

"Right now, that is only speculation. I really can't comment on it at this time."

Iran Ousted From Games

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Iran no longer is recognized by the International Olympic Committee, organizers of the Winter Games said Wednesday.

The action by the IOC took place before militant students seized the U.S. embassy in Tehran, where they still are holding 50 American hostages. The students have held the building since Nov.4 and are demanding the return of the deposed Shah.

The Lake Placid Olympic Organizing Committee said Wednesday it had received official word that the International Olympic Committee no longer recognizes any National Olympic Committee for Iran. The action would bar Iran from both the Winter Games in February and the Summer Olympics in Moscow.

Press aides said word of the IOC's June decision was contained in a recent letter to Rev. J. Bernard Fell, the LPOOC president.

Thirty-nine other countries, including both mainland China and Taiwan are expected to attend the Games.

Iran's national Olympic committee, last headed by a relative of the deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, sent five Alpine skiers to the 1976 Games in Innsbruck, Austria and four each to Sapporo, Japan in 1972 and Grenoble, France, in 1968.

The letter to the LPOOC from the IOC gave no reason for the withdrawal of recognition, but it is considered likely that the revolutionary government of Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini did not try to form an Olympic committee.

But the LPOOC did not know until recently that Iran would not be at the Winter Games and had hoped prior to the embassy seizure that there would be a delegation from that country at Lake Placid. The invitation to Iran went out 10 months ago, about a month after the Shah fled the country.

LPOOC officials said they hoped soon to finalize the full list of participating countries and the sports in which each would participate.

Under a recent IOC ruling, Peking's NOC will represent China, while Formosa's NOC must call itself by a different name. Taiwan has taken that ruling to court is Switzerland, but is expected to participate in the Winter Games whatever the outcome.

Campbell, Anderson Head All-Pro List

By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Earl Campbell of Houston, the National Football League rushing champion, and rookie running back Ottis Anderson of St. Louis joined San Diego quarterback Dan Fouts in the backfield of The Associated Press 1979 All-Pro team announced Thursday.

Campbell, the runaway winner of the Rookie of the Year Award in 1978 when he won the league rushing title with 1,450 yards, won the crown this year with 1,697 yards on an NFL-record 368 carries.

On the regular-season's final Sunday he gained 134 yards to pass Anderson, who suffered a twisted knee in his finale. It was Campbell's 11th 100-yard game of the season, tying O.J. Simpson's NFL record. And his touchdown in the game was his 19th rushing, matching Jim Taylor's league mark.

Anderson's knee injury limited him to 39 yards in his last game of the year and gave him 1,605 yards for the year, five yards behind Chicago's Walter Payton. Payton and Wilbert Montgomery of Philadelphia were the second-team running backs as determined in the balloting by 84 sports writers and sports broadcasters, three from each NFL city.

Just as the American Football Conference dominated the National Football Conference in the season series, winning 36 of 52 games, the AFC dominated the All-Pro squad with 17 players to the NFC's eight on the first team and a 15-10 AFC edge on the second team.

Fouts shattered Joe Namath's 12-year-old 4,007-yard season passing record, amassing 4,082 yards this year in guiding the Chargers to the AFC West championship. Fouts also tied a Namath mark this year with six 300-yard games.

John Stallworth of Pittsburgh, long in the shadow of teammate Lynn Swann, was named an All-Pro wide receiver along with John Jefferson of San Diego. Dave Casper of Oakland was selected the top tight end.

On the offensive line were tackles Marvin Powell of the New York Jets and Leon Gray of Houston, guards John Hannah of New England and Bob Young of St. Louis, and center Mike Webster of the Steelers.

The defense had two Selmons and two Youngbloods. Tampa Bay's Lee Roy Selmon was a first-team end along with Jack Youngblood of Los Angeles. Dewey Selmon of the Bucs, Lee Roy's brother, was a second-team outside linebacker and Jim Youngblood of the Rams, no relation to Jack, was the other outside linebacker.

The first-team defensive tackles were Dallas Randy White and Larry Brooks of the Rams, and the outside linebackers were Houston's Robert Brazile and Jack Ham of Pittsburgh, with the Steelers' Jack Lambert in the middle.

In the defensive secondary, Lemar Parrish of Washington and Louis Wright of Denver were the cornerbacks, Houston's Mike Reinfeldt was the free safety and Donnie Shell of Pittsburgh was the strong safety.

Punter Dave Jennings of the New York Giants, place-kicker Toni Fritsch of the Oilers and rookie kick-returner Tony Nathan of Miami were the first-team specialists.

Raiders Face Vanderbilt

NASVILLE, Tenn. (Special) — The Texas Tech basketball team will venture into a sold-out Memorial Gym (capacity, 15,626) here tonight to battle the Commodores of Vanderbilt.

The Raiders are 5-1 on the year, Vanderbilt is 4-2. Tipoff is set for 7:30 p.m. and KFYO radio will broadcast the action.

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers is acutely aware of the job the Red Raiders have ahead of them.

"Boy, it is really tough to win in this place," said Myers. "Vanderbilt has won something like 85 percent of its home games in this place."

But winning on the road has been a little tougher for the Commodores this year though. Against Alabama they were humiliated 90-68 and earlier in the year they lost in overtime 90-68 to Ole Miss. At home though, they are undefeated having crushed Rice, Memphis State and Texas Wesleyan.

Vanderbilt is in a rebuilding year as first year coach Richard Schmidt has been shuffling his starting five since the season started. Last year Vanderbilt was 18-9 and finished third in the Southeastern Conference.

The Commodores will start 6-10 sophomore Jim Lampley at the post and go with 6-6 James Williams and 6-8 Ted Young at the forwards. The guards are 5-11 Tommy Springer and 6-1 Mike Rhodes — a junior.

Rhodes will be making his first start tonight. But he's been effective coming off the bench thus far. He leads the team in scoring with a 15.1 average and has already scored 1,000 points in his first two-plus seasons at Vanderbilt. He played on the U.S. team that won a gold medal in the Pan Am games this summer. He scored 31 points in Vanderbilt's overtime loss to Ole Miss.

Mark Elliott, a senior guard, is also tabbed to see plenty of playing time tonight. Jimmy Gray, a highly sought after freshman, will also see action for the Commodores who usually play 11 men a game.

The Raiders, on the other hand, have been relying on six-seven men a game.

Tonight they'll stay with their starting lineup of 6-8 junior Ralph Brewster at the post and 6-6 Ben Hill and 6-6 David Little on the wings. Kent Williams and Jeff Taylor will handle the guard duties. The first Raider off the bench is most likely to be senior Thad Sanders.

Little leads the team in scoring with an average of 18.3 a game. Taylor is next at 17.3 while Brewster and Hill are also averaging in double figures. Williams leads the team in assists with 25.

The Raiders are off to their fastest shooting start ever — connecting on 56.4 percent of their field goal attempts in their first six games. In their last outing, against Lamar, the Raiders hit 62 percent of their efforts and won 83-68.

But that was a week ago, and the Raiders have had little time to practice since then as the players have been busy with final exams.

Morrison Readies UNM For Recruiting

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Newly-hired University of New Mexico football Coach Joe Morrison says he plans move as quickly as possible to assemble a coaching staff and begin recruiting.

"We hope to have the staff aligned by Jan. 7. We hope to have a staff meeting that morning and be on the road (recruiting) that afternoon," said the former professional football star and 1979 Southern Conference coach of the year.

UNM Athletic Director John Bridgers announced the appointment of Morrison at a news conference Wednesday and said the new coach was signed to a five-year contract at a salary of $45,000 a year.

Bridgers, who has been on the job at UNM less than a month, lured Morrison from the head coaching position at Tennessee-Chattanooga.

Morrison, 42, said he decided to take the New Mexico post because of the opportunity to work with Bridgers and because he feels the university has the potential to have a good football program.

Morrison, who retired from pro football in 1972 after 14 years with the New York Giants, had been the coach at Tennessee-Chattanooga since 1973.

Morrison succeeds Bill Mondt, who compiled a record of 32-36-1 in his six years as head coach at UNM, prior to a decision by university officials to forfeit the school's six wins this year.

Pardee Honored As NFL's Best Coach

By TOM SEPPY
AP Sports Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — It was typical Jack Pardee.

When he was notified that he had been named National Football League Coach of the Year by The Associated Press, his first thought was: "I would rather have had a couple of more points last Sunday."

That's when Pardee's Washington Redskins lost to Dallas 35-34 and abruptly ended their 1979 season.

Had they defeated the Cowboys, the Redskins would have won the National Conference East title and would have had a home-field advantage in the playoffs. Now they will have to watch the playoffs on television.

"What an abrupt ending," he said. "It is disappointing. Most times you figure to have a shot at the playoffs with our record."

Pardee, who received 30 of the 84 votes cast, believes the 1979 team has just laid the groundwork for "a sound foundation to compete favorably every year.

"With the draft choices we have, we should be able to keep pace with everyone we have to play. We will try to upgrade our ability at all positions."

Other coaches receiving more than one vote by a nation-wide panel of sports writers ad sports broadcasters, — three in each NFL city — were Dick Vermeil of Philadelphia, 23; Don Coryell of San Diego, 10; John McKay of Tampa Bay, 7; Sam Rutigliano of Cleveland, 6, and Bum Phillips of Houston, 4.

The Redskins finished the season with a 10-6 record, a plateau far better than most observers believed they could reach following their 8-8 season in 1978.

But not Pardee, ever the optimist.

"A lot of people are writing us off," said Pardee before the season started. "But I'm not. I think we've got a playoff-type team. With the two-team format and the matchups around the league, I think we've got as good a chance as almost anybody to make the playoffs."

After a two-year housecleaning in which many of veterans were dropped, Pardee put together a team comprised of a few name players and a lot of free agents, aging veterans and low-round draft choices.

As more than one person noted, the Redskins in 1979 were better than the sum of all their parts.

And there are not many who don't attribute that to Pardee.

"There are a lot of guys who can coach X's and O's," said General Manager Bobby Beathard recently, "but if you can't get the group to play together as a team, the best coaches in the world can't win.

"What Jack has done is get the older guys to accept te roles they have to as leaders, and they've gone on and accepted the younger players, and the younger players probably have made better players out of the older ones.

"I don't know how to word that. But he's done it. He did it down at Orlando (with the Florida Blazers) in the World Football League. He kept guys together who weren't getting any money. Can you imagine anybody trying to do that?"

Offensive coordinator Joe Walton said, "When you ask what's brought this team together, I'll put it in two words — he has."

Tennessee Looking For Coach

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — With Joe Morrison departing for New Mexico, the University of Tennessee at Chattanooga began its search Wednesday for a new football coach.

UT-Chattanooga spokesman Jim Bell said Athletic Director Harold Wilkes was being flooded with telephone calls inquiring about the job Morrison vacated.

"Harold is on the phone with people constantly calling about it and applying or recommending someone," Bell said.

He said Wilkes will head up the process of choosing a successor and will recommend him to university Chancellor James E. Drinnon Jr.

The University of New Mexico announced Wednesday in Albuquerque, N.M., that i hired Morison, a former New York Giant running back, to a five-year contract at $45,000 a yer to replce Bill Mondt. New Mexico decided against renewing Mondt's contract, who began as head Lobo coach in 1973 after starting in 1968 as an assistant to Rudy Feldman.

Bell said Morrison had invited his six assistants at Tennessee-Chattanooga to join his New Mexico staff, but Bell said the men had not decided. "They are indecisive about it — going to talk to him about it and wait and see what's going to happen here," Bell said.

He said defensive coordinator Joe Lee Dunn and offensive coordinator Frank Sadler are among the candidates to succeed Morrison. The other assistants are Roy Gregory, Jim Norrell, George Pugh and Joe Pate.

Morrison, 42, had coached Tennessee-Chattanooga for seven seasons. The university in October extended his contract for three years through February 1985 at his $35,000 annual salary, but Bell said the university released Morrison from the contract.

He was selected as the Southern Conference's coach of the year this season after directing the Moccasins to the conference championship with a 5-1 record and 9-2 overall.

Lions' McIntire Heads Class A All-Stars

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

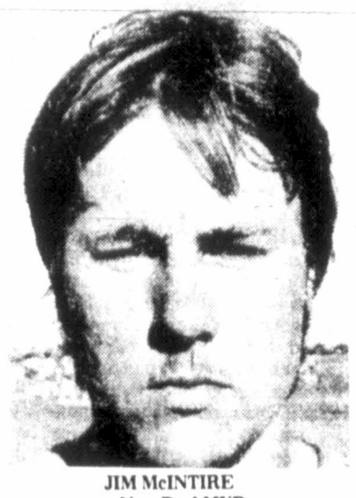
In a year dominated by linemen, it seems only fitting that the Class A all-South Plains Player of the Year should be one of those guys who spends half his life on all fours.

But to say that Jim McIntire, New Deal's 6-1, 230-pound star is a lineman is like saying Seagraves plays football. The Lion was named for the second year to both the offensive and defensive first units on the all-South Plains team.

Add that to a sophomore appearance on the defensive team, and that makes five all-South Plains honors the big boy has earned in three years.

This year McIntire typified the New Deal team which advanced to the quarterfinals of the state playoffs before being beaten by Seagraves on penetration.

Of the six all-South Plains positions occupied by Lions, five are either linemen or linebackers.



JIM McINTIRE
New Deal MVP

In fact, between Seagraves and New Deal, all but one line position was filled.

Named coach of the year, for the second year in a row, was Eagle boss Jim Eddins. Sure, he had the talent this year that he lacked last season, but it is doubtful even Seagraves could have gone as far as it did without the steady coach at the helm.

In eight seasons as Eagle head coach, Eddins has won 85 games while losing only 13. In the last three years Seagraves has lost only three games while winning 37.

He has seven players on the team, the most of any area high school. Leading the way are swift running back Ronnie Griffin, big lineman Mike McCormick and quick lineman Ted Ward.

Griffin gained 1,526 yards rushing on the season on only 202 carries. That compares with a regular season in which he picked up 1,230 yards on 129 carries, an average of 9.5 yards every time he touched the ball.

He is joined in the backfield by Petersburg's Mike Phillips, a 6-0, 185, Sr. who gained 1,490 yards on 233 carries in his 10-game season.

At the other back position is Kress' Eddy "Magic" Johnson. He gained 1,401 yards on 202 carries before his Kangaroos were annhilated by New Deal.

Quarterbacking the squad is Stanton's Craig Eiland. Eiland completed 61 of his 134 attempted passes for 1,055 yards. That's an average of 105 yards a game, pretty good for a junior.

Two of the three linebackers on the squad are returner returners. Both Tony Acosta of O'Donnell and Stanton's Keith Hull were named all-South Plains last year.

Other returners included Petersburg's Quentin Berry at end, Seagraves' McCormick on the defensive line and Hale Center's Robert Smith, a running back last year but a defensive lineman this year.

Horton Named To Illni Post

CHAMPAIGN, Ill. (AP) — Gary Horton, the national recruiting coordinator for Arizona State University, has been named to a similar post at the University of Illinois by football coach Mike White.

"Horton will immediately put our recruiting program on a nationwide basis," said White, who took over Illinois' sagging football program last week.

White also hired two other assistants to help with recruiting.

Oilers Healthy For Broncs

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Oilers may have their smallest injury list of the season going into Sunday's American Football Conference wild card playoff game against the Denver Broncos with only three players mentioned on Wednesday's report.

Reserve running back Rob Carpenter is listed as questionable with a sprained ankle and heel bruise. Cornerback Charles Jefferson is probable with an ankle sprain and safety Bill Currier is probable with a low back strain.

Last season when the Oilers played a first-round game against Miami, quarterback Dan Pastorini was suffering from rib, elbow and knee injuries, starting running backs Earl Campbell and Tim Wilson has rib injuries and wide receiver Rich Caster was hobbled by a groin pull.

Carpenter is the Oilers' No. 2 rusher behind Campbell with 355 yards on 92 carries and a 3.9 per carry average. Carpenter played the second half in place of Campbell last week in the Oilers' 26-20 loss to Philadelphia.

Sunday's game against the Broncos will mark the first Oiler playoff game in Houston in exactly 17 years and a partisan sellout crowd will be hoping for a better outcome for the Oilers.

On Dec. 23, 1962 the Dallas Texans defeated the Oilers 20-17 in what was the longest game in pro football history at that time.

Dallas won the game on a field goal by Tommy Brooker in the sixth quarter despite a decision by Dallas Captain Abner Haynes to "kick to the clock" after he won the coin toss to start the overtime.

Dallas wanted to have the wind advantage for the fifth quarter but Haynes' choice of words gave Houston both possession and the wind advantage.

CAMPO RESIGNS

Hadnot Tops Perkins' Shopping List

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — The elite 10 are preparing for the National Football League playoffs while the New York Giants are preparing for 1980.

Coach Ray Perkins and General Manager George Young began what will be a whirlwind tour of the country scouting the nation's top college players. They left Wednesday for Montgomery, Alabama, for the Blue-Gray game on Christmas Day, the first stop in their search for the "eight or 10 players" Perkins says are needed to make the 6-10 Giants a good club.

After the Blue-Gray game, Perkins and Young plan to take in the East-West game and then the Senior Bowl, where Perkins and his staff will coach the South team.

"I'm anxious to take a look at James Hadnot," said Perkins, referring to the 6-foot-3, 235-pound fullback from Texas Tech, who will be on the South team.

Hadnot rewrote all the rushing records at Tech and put together the best back-to-back rushing seasons ever recorded in the Southwest Conference.

Fullback, along with tight end, offensive line and the defensve seconary are high on the Giants shopping list. It's unlikely more than two of these areas can be adequately filled through the draft, where the Giants have just one of the first 63 picks.

Trades are a possibly with offensive tackle Gordon King, the 1978 top pick, safety Odis McKinney, the 1978 second round pick, the two most talked about players. The Giants are anxious to upgrade their draft position and one reported trade has King, McKinney and the Giants No. 1 pick, the eighth overall, going to San Francisco for the second pick in the draft.

If the Giants are going to trade from strength then a linebacker is the most vulnerable to go. With two All Pros in Brad Van Pelt and Harry Carson plus Brian Kelley and Dan Lloyd, the Giants are solid.

But it would be a gamble, however, to trade a linebacker because Lloyd underwent knee surgery three weeks ago and will be on crutches for another five weeks.

"Lloyd's still one-legged," Young said. "Suppose you make a trade of one of your other linebackers and Lloyd's not well?"

But there will be quite a few new faces when the Giants gather for training camp next July. When you finish 6-10 changes are usually in order.

"There won't be a revolution or a purge," Young said. "We might have some players who would respond better elsewhere. We'll do what we can to get some of them jobs. I'm aware of a player's career but on the other hand I'm not looking for the Albert Schweitzer Award."

The Giants don't have a second-round pick, that went to Pittsburgh for Gordon Gravelle, who was cut during the season. They have an extra seventh round pick, which came from Seattle for fullback Dan Doornink.

Young and Perkins won't have an easy job trying to rebuild the Giants.

"This is the exciting part of this business, the guts of this business — the personnel decisions," Perkins said. "We're going to upgrade our team without trading the future away."

Scandal Rocks Tiny Ottawa Campus

By BOB WELLINGTON
The Ottawa Herald

OTTAWA, Kan. — How could a small Baptist college in eastern Kansas become involved in a sports scandal that is rocking campuses from Albuquerque, N.M., to Eugene, Ore?

Ottawa University officials are trying to find the answer both here and at their College Without a Campus in Phoenix. As Robert Shaw, president of Ottawa University, said recently, "We are deeply disturbed and shocked by the recent episode related to a course offering in California. In our 115-year history, we have not experienced anything of this nature."

Shaw is quick to admit that university officials are worried about the public image of the school as a result of the events at the University of New Mexico.

Nine athletes there received college credits from Ottawa University for a course they apparently didn't take. Six have been suspended from the basketball team and two coaches have been fired. Three athletes were on the football team, which has now forfeited its games for the season.

Shaw said Wednesday the school was continuing its investigation of the incident, and the situation also is being investigated by the NCAA and the FBI.

Shaw said the university started its extension program in 1974 with an office in Kansas City, then set up the center in Phoenx in 197. The Phoenix center is directed by Harold Germer, assisted by Fred Zook. Both are former members of the faclty at Ottawa, and Zook is a former Ottawa mayor.

The Phoenix center, which is licensed by the California Department of Education, began offering certain courses in California, aimed mostly at teachers who are required to take periodic courses to keep their teaching certificates current, Shaw said.

Last spring, the center offered a course titled "Current Problems and Principles of Coaching," to be taught by Earle Durley, a member of the faculty of the Los Angeles Valley College in Van Nuys, Calif.

Durley was recommended to the Phoenix center to teach the course by a dean at the Van Nuys school. Durley's qualifications included a master's degree in guidance and counseling from California Lutheran College and a master's degree in health, physical education and recreation from the University of Tulsa.

The class, which started June 2, originally was scheduled to be taught on the Van Nuys campus. Unknown to Ottawa University officials, Shaw said, there was a foulup in space at Van Nuys and Durley, along with the dean who recommended him, moved the class to a family room in the dean's home near the campus. Later, the class was moved to a conference room on the campus.

Durley's records show that 49 persons enrolled in the class received three hours' credit, for a fee of $25 per credit hour. Shaw said 34 of those enrolled were teachers and coaches with bachelor's or master's degrees. Thirteen were undergraduate athletes from the universities of New Mexico, Oregon and Utah.

The class met on 13 days in June for a total of about 45 class hours. On completion of the course, Durley certified to the Ottawa center at Phoenix the attendance records of class members, their grades and the credit hours to be received. The original certification document was sent to the university in Ottawa.

Later, the school received letters from nine New Mexico students asking that transcripts be sent to the registrar's office at New Mexico. An Ottawa University official in Kansas said, "Four of the requesting letters looked as if they were done by the same person, on the same typewriter, but the signatures are different."

On Nov. 30, the FBI filed an affidavit in U.S. District Court in Albuquerque alleging transcript-fixing involving junior college transfers on the basketball team. The course cited was the one approved by Ottawa and taught by Durley at Van Nuys. Five members of the basketball team said they were credited for a course they never took. A sixth said he took the course, but couldn't remember where. All have been suspended.

When the story broke, Germer and Zook went from Phoenix to Van Nuys to see Durley. Durley claimed that he had 49 persons in the class, that they all showed up, that his records were correct and that he knew nothing about falsifying any records, the Ottawa officials said.

Germer and Zook learned that the athletes from New Mexico had been enrolled by telephone. When Durley was shown pictures of the suspended basketball players, he didn't recognize any of them, Germer and Zook said.

"It's hard to forget when you have a 6-foot-10 basketball player in your class," Zook later commented.

Later it was revealed that three football players also were enrolled. One admitted he didn't attend class. Since he needed the credits to be eligible to play, the falisification resulted in the New Mexico's forfeiture of its 12-game season.

When they returned to Phoenix, Germer and Zook learned that Durley had been associated with the athletic department at New Mexico from August 1972 to January 1974.

When a story then came out of the University of Utah that a basketball player had enrolled in Durley's course and had taken it by correspondence, Germer and Zook tried to check the story with Durley. They said Durley could not be located.

It also has been learned that three athletes from the University of Oregon were enrolled in the course. Two claim to have taken it and received credit. A third said he sent in his $75, but never heard further. Ottawa records show he received credit.

The course taught by Durley was one of 10 Ottawa University offered last summer in California to more than 400 persons. But the school is stopping all physical education courses in the state because of the problems, Shaw said.

"If the offering of such courses in any way tempts coaches or players to seek shortcuts to sound academic experiences or to pressure instructor-coaches to accommodate them, we do not wish to be vulnerable to these demeaning tactics and violations," he said.

Analysis

Kush's Hearing Finally Slated

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — A three-timed postponed hearing for suspended Arizona State University football coach Frank Kush is now scheduled for Thursday morning.

The hearing had been scheduled for Tuesday but was postponed at the request of Harry Cavanagh, Kush's attorney, who indicated he was tied up in court on another matter.

Neil Cumsky, attorney for ASU athletic director Fred Miller, said Tuesday he understood the hearing was reset for Jan. 7, but he added he later received a letter informing him of the Thursday date.

The letter to Cumsky was from William Jones, attorney for ASU President John Schwada.

It was not known if Kush would attend the hearing. Earlier he said he wouldn't but later indicated he might attend.

The hearing, Cumsky said, would concern two matters:

• Did Kush slug former ASU punter Kevin Rutledge during a game at Washington in October 1978?

• Did Kush attempt to cover up slugging Rutledge by coercing players and coaches to lie for him, if necessary?

Miller suspended Kush Oct. 13 after obtaining information which convinced him Kush had slugged Rutledge and attempted a coverup.

Rutledge, now attending the University of Nevada-Las Vegas, has filed a $1.1 million lawsuit against Kush over the alleged slugging incident.

ROUNDFIELD HONORED

NEW YORK (AP) — The Atlanta Hawks' power forward, Dan Roundfield, has been named the National Basketball Association's Player of the Week for the period ending Dec. 16. Roundfield had 53 points and 37 rebounds to help the Hawks to a 3-0 record last week as Atlanta downed New York last Wednesday and Philadelphia Friday and Saturday.

NBA ROUNDUP

Bird Operates On Doctor

By the Associated Press

Larry Bird scored 24 points in a head-to-head duel with Julius Erving and the Boston Celtics rode a 38-point second period to a 112-89 National Basketball Association victory over the Philadelphia 76ers for their sixth consecutive triumph Wednesday night.

The Celtics, beaten 95-94 by the 76ers in their only meeting in Philadelphia this season, boosted their record to 26-7, best in the NBA, with their 15th victory in 16 home games.

The Celtics opened a 22-18 lead in the first quarter and widened the advantage to 60-44 at halftime. Philadelphia got no closer than 10 points after that, as Boston increased its lead over the 76ers to three games in the Atlantic Division.

Bird, the rookie sensation from Indiana State, scored 11 points in the decisive second-period. Boston scored nine straight points at the opening of the quarter and went on to a 15-2 spree for a 37-20 lead.

Bird played the entire first half, hitting for 16 points. He finally got a rest in the third quarter with Boston in front 77-64, coming back in the fourth period as the Celtics ran away.

Erving, the famous Dr. J., finished with 20 points, but was far off form while harassed by Bird. Steve Mix also had 20 for the 76ers who have a 23-10 record.

ATLANTA 119, LAKERS 112

Eddie Johnson scored a career-high 31 points Wednesday night to power the Atlanta Hawks to a 119-112 National Basketball Association victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The Hawks, who have won five of their last six games, took a 16-6 lead after an 8-0 burst midway in the opening period and never trailed.

Atlanta took a 61-53 lead at intermission as Johnson poured in 15 points in the opening half.

The Lakers reeled off 10 straight points to get within 115-112 with 56 seconds remaining before the Hawks sewed up the victory with baskets by John Drew 13 seconds later and another by Dan Roundfield nine seconds from the end.

Drew added 23 points for the Hawks while Kareem Abdul-Jabar led Los Angeles with 29 points. Norm Nixon added 26 points and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 22 for the Lakers.

KINS 107, BULLETS 97

Otis Birdsong tossed in 29 points Wednesday night to pace the streaking Kansas City Kings to a 107-97 victory over Washington.

Birdsong connected on 14 of 22 shots as the Kings raced to an early lead and coasted to their eighth straight victory and 16th in their last 19 games.

The Kings made 59 percent of their shots as they took a 56-47 halftime advantage and then held off the slumping Bullets for their fourth road victory in their last six starts.

Elvin Hayes had 16 of his 22 points in the second half but couldn't prevent the Bullets from dropping their sixth loss at home in their last eight games.

SPURS 127, PACERS 123

George Gervin scored 38 points as the San Antonio Spurs outlasted the Indiana Pacers 127-123 Wednesday night in a National Basketball Association game.

Six Spurs hit in double figures as San Antonio maintained its hold of second place in the Central Division.

San Antonio squandered a 19-point lead in the first quarter before rallying away for its victory.

Mickey Johnson scored 25 points and Billy Knight came off the bench to score 22 for the Pacers.

A big opening period proved the difference for the Spurs. With Larry Kenon hitting 10 of his 18 points and Billy Paultz scoring 11 of his 17, San Antonio raced to a 43-25 lead after one quarter.

Despite San Antonio's best first quarter of the season, the Pacers slowly battered back to catch the Spurs in the final period. Johnny Davis hit two free throws with 3:23 to play to give Indiana a 119-118 lead. Paul Griffin's lay-up put the Spurs back into the lead to stay.

Mark Olberding and Mike Gale each added 15 points and Kevin Restani 12 for the Spurs.

LCHS Girls Host Basketball Tourney

The Lubbock Christian Hight Women's Invitational Basketball Tournament will open today at the LCC Fieldhouse.

Junior varsity teams will compete in the morning starting at 9 a.m., followed by varsity games later today. Monahans is the defending champion in the Second Annual Cage Classic.

Eight teams will compete in each bracket with the champion to be decided Saturday night at 8 p.m.

Tulane Coach Envies Nittany

MEMPHIS (AP) — Larry Smith looks at Penn State and sees the kind of football program he'd like to have at Tulane.

And come Saturday, Smith will have to look at Penn State from across the field when he sends his 15th-ranked Tulane Green Wave against the Nittany Lions in the 21st annual Liberty Bowl.

"Look at Penn State," Smith was saying following Wednesday's spirited practice session. "They've got a great tradition and a great program. They can go recruiting around the country and get nothing but the best."

The five Tulane head coaches preceeding Smith all had losing records and it looked like more of the same when Smith went 2-9, 3-8, and 4-7 in his first three seasons. The progress was steady but oh, so slow.

Suddenly, this year it took off to the tune of a 9-2 regular-season record and Smith's log jumped from 9-24 to 18-26.

"You always set up a timetable," Smith said, "and I was hoping to win five or six games by my second or third year."

That didn't happen, but the Green Wave made up for the disappointment by exceeding Smith's expectations this season.

"I felt a six-win season was very possible and seven would be really fine," he said. "I felt it would be a super good year if we won seven games, although I didn't say it publicly. But nine wins is a lot better than anyone expected and I think we're right where we should be after four years.

"Our goal is to have a consistent winning program and have a consistent shot at going to a bowl game.

SMU StunsTWC

DALLAS (AP) — Dave Piehler poured in 20 points to pace five teammates in double figures as Southern Methodist rolled to a 112-85 victory over Texas Wesleyan in a nonconference college basketball game Wednesday night.

Brad Branson hit on eight of 17 shots from the field and on one of two from the free throw line to chalk up 17 points for the Mustangs in their seventh consecutive win against no losses this season.

The Mustangs hit 56 percent from the floor in the first 20 minutes to build a 56-41 halftime lead. Southern Methodist widened the lead to as much as 29 points late in the game and were never seriously challenged.

Billy Allen scored 14 points and was credited with 17 assists. Other Mustang players in double figures included Ollie Hoops with 12 points, Mark Hollmann with 11 and Phil Hale with 10.

Frogs Crush Georgia 99-82

FORT WORTH (AP) — Non-starter Jon Mansbury, a 6-6 sophomore from Indianapolis, scored 19 points and pulled down 19 rebounds Wednesday night to spark Texas Christian to a 99-82 victory over winless Georgia State.

Deckery Johnson led TCU with 20 points, with Eric Summers adding 18 and Darrell Browder 16. Don Ross scored 22 and Mark Gulmire 20 for Georgia State.

The Horned Frogs led 46-40 at the half, but pulled away to leads of as much as 18 points in the second half with a 64 percent shooting performance from the field.

The victory lifted TCU to a 3–2 record, while Georgia State fell to 0-6. Both teams play Friday night in a tournament hosted by Fresno State.

Ohio State Falls To Louisville 75-65

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Darrell Griffith scored 19 points, including eight in the final three minutes, to lead No. 11 Louisville to a 75-65 victory over second-ranked Ohio State in college basketball Wednesday night.

Ohio State, 5-1, trimmed a 12-point Louisville lead to two at 59-57 with 3:21 to play, but Louisville ran off 12 straight points to seal its sixth victory in as many games. Griffith hit two free throws and a pair of layups during that streak, and one of his nine assists set up a layup by Roger Burkman.

USC Drops Lobos

ALBUQUERQUE (AP) — Forward Purvis Miller poured in 28 points and pulled down 12 rebounds Wednesday night to lead Southern California to an 82-79 non-conference basketball victory over New Mexico.

The 6-foot-8, 230-pound junior tossed in 14 points in each half to pace the Trojans to their fifth victory in seven outings.

New Mexico, which has lost seven players to eligibility and transcript problems, gave the Trojans a battle.

Oregon Coach Admits Cheating

EUGENE, Ore. (AP) — University of Oregon President William Boyd said Wednesday he has received a letter of resignation from assistant football coach John Becker.

Becker sent the letter to Boyd following reports that he had arranged for an Oregon football player to take correspondence courses through Los Angeles Valley College.

The player, freshman Paul Perez, received 13 hours of credit for the courses even though he did no work to earn them.

Becker, the Ducks' offensive coordinator, is a former head football coach at Los Angeles Valley College in Van Nuys, Calif. He also is a former assistant coach at the University of New Mexico, New Mexico State and UCLA.

Oregon athletic department officials issued conflicting reports Tuesday on whether Becker had resigned.

However, Boyd told a news conference Wednesday that he found Becker's letter of resignation on his desk when he returned to his office late Tuesday.

Boyd said Becker's brief letter was not signed. He said he did not know whether the lack of a signature was deliberate oran oversght.

Becker has declined to comment on the Oregon situation.

Head football coach Rich Brooks offered his resignation to Boyd last Saturday night, saying he was offering to quit to show his support for Becker. However, Boyd refused to accept Brooks' resignation and the coach later withdrew the offer.

Boyd said he asked Becker to send him a letter giving the details of the Perez incident. But the university president said the assistant coach chose to resign rather than explain the situation.

Perez, a defensive lineman, needed 12 hours of junior college credit to earn admission to the University of Oregon. Boyd confirmed that a check of Perez' trranscript showed he had received 13 hours of credit for correspondence courses taken through Los Angeles Valley College, even though he did no work in any course at the school.

Boyd has said he doesn't think the fact Perez had a fraudulent transcript will result in the forfeiture of any games because the player did not appear in any contests for the Ducks due to illness and injury.

Two other Oregon players took courses at Los Angeles Valley College, including a controversial extension course sponsored by Ottawa University of Kansas, but they have been cleared by Boyd of any wrongdoing.

The Ottawa course came to light when five New Mexico basketball players and one football player admitted receiving credit for it, although they did no work.

One of the Oregon players who took the Ottawa course, Rock Richmond, told The Oregonian that the only course requirement was a take-home final exam.

He said he found out about the course because he had previously attended Los Angeles Valley College.

The FBI has said it is investigating allegations of mail frad and brbery involving the athletic programs at the University of Oregon and Oregon State University.

Oregon athletic officials said they were not prepared to comment on the FBI probe, and Oregon State Athletic Director Dee Andros said he had not been contacted by the federal agency.

The FBI, meanwhile, said it cannot comment on pending investigations.

Surprise, Surprise — Campbell, White Garner More Honors

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — University of Southern California running back Charles White became the 43rd recipient of the Maxwell award and Earl Campbell of the Houston Oilers won the Bert Bell award Wednesday as the nation's outstanding collegiate and professional football players, respectively.

White and Campbell were named at the Maxwell Memorial Football Club luncheon. The two will be honored by the club at its annual awards banquet Jan. 30 here.

White, this year's Heisman Trophy winner and a unanimous All-American, finished the regular season as the second leading rusher in college football history. The 5-foot-11, 183-pound White was the nation's leading rusher this season with 1,803 yards and 18 touchdowns on 293 carries, a 6.2-yard per carry average.

"Charlie's the best football player in America and the most durable player I've ever coached," said USC coach John Robinson, whose 10-0-1 Trojans play undefeated Ohio State in the Rose Bowl on New Year's Day.

As the 21st winner of the Bert Bell Award, Campbell was only the third player in National Football League history to twice win the league rushing title in his first two years. He has gained more yardage, 3,147 yards, in his first two seasons than any NFL player.

Campbell, a 5-11, 224-pounder, gained 1,697 yards on a record 368 carries, averaging 4.6 yards a crack this year.

Campbell's 19 touchdowns for 114 points tied him for the NFL scoring title with kickers John Smith of New England and Mark Moseley of Washington.

Rodgers Offers Final Advice

ATLANTA (AP) — Ousted football Coach Pepper Rodgers had these words of advice on Wednesday for his successor at Georgia Tech — "Win a lot of games."

But Tech officials said they were only at the beginning of the search for a coach to replace Rodgers, who was fired Tuesday after posting a 34-31-2 record in six years, including a 4-6-1 mark this season.

Rodgers, who played quarterback and kicked field goals on Georgia Tech teams in the early 1950s that traveled twice to the Orange Bowl and once to the Rose Bowl, was hired to restore a winning tradition at his alma mater, home of the famed "Ramblin' Wreck."

"Winning and losing has nothing to do with coaching ability," Rodgers said at a news conference. "Winning has to do with talent and scheduling."

Tech has trouble recruiting because of its rigid engineering curriculum and its aging facilities, he said, but still must schedule powerful opponents like Notre Dame and Alabama in order to compete with Atlanta's professional teams for spectators.

"It's hard to win at Georgia Tech," he said. "This is not an easy job and I never thought it would be."

Plans for improved facilities may have played a role in Rodgers' departure. The deposed coach said he had heard that some alumni were reluctant to contribute to the athletic department so long as he remained coach.

"If that's true, the new building will get built a lot quicker if I'm not here," Rodgers said.

Texas' Oil Output Falls Short During 1970s

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The 70s. A decade of change, confusion, good and bad. The go-go years. Big got bigger. Fast got faster. Perhaps like no other state the 70s left its imprint on the face of Texas, the megastate. Here, in the fifth of six articles by AP writers, Max Skelton reviews the status of the state's energy industry and its future.

By MAX B. SKELTON
Associated Press Writer

HOUSTON (AP) — Back in 1931, martial law was declared in the East Texas oil field when near chaos developed as a then-gigantic surplus of oil dropped prices to 10 cents a barrel.

Today, most Texas fields have been producing for months at maximum or near maximum rates and some posted prices have skyrocketed above $32 a barrel.

But the Texas output is far short of demand as the nation continues to wrestle with a long-anticipated energy crunch that became a reality with the Arab oil embargo of 1973-34.

And Texas is still the No. 1 oil and energy state despite a bit of image-jolting in the decade of the 1970s.

Alaska replaced Texas as the top-ranked state in proved crude oil reserves in 1975, and Louisiana, primarily because of federal offshore areas, took over as the leading natural gas producer in 1972.

Downward trends may dominate current Texas oil and gas statistics but all is not gloom.

State tax rates on production are keyed to wellhead value and soaring prices have more than offset production declines. Current revenues from oil and as production dwarf those of a decade ago.

DR. RICHARD THOMAS
Concern Valid

Here is a thumbnail of the shifting trends that developed within the decade:

•Texas proved crude oil reserves declined 46.9 percent from a record 14.4 billion barrels in 1967 to 7.6 billion at the end of 1978.

•Crude production peaked at 1.2 billion barrels in 1973 and then declined steadily to 1.044 billion in 1978. An estimated 1979 output of 980.4 million barrels would drop the state below the billion-barrel mark the first time since 1966.

•Proved natural gas reserves at the end of 1978 totaled 54.6 trillion cubic feet but were 56.4 percent below the all-time high of 125.4 trillion at the end of 1967.

•Natural gas production dropped 21 percent between a record 8.2 trillion cubic feet in 1972 and 6.5 trillion last year.

State officials and researchers acknowledge a combination of continued inflation, continued increases in the costs of state government, and continued lagging reserves and production could pose tax structure problems down the road.

But no long-range studies are under way as yet.

An October report from the state comptroller said the full effects of President Cater's oil price decontrol program and new prices set by the Natural Gas Policy Act are not yet reflected in available data.

"Information that will become available in the next few months should aid our understanding of the significance of these events for state government and the Texas economy," the report said.

Jack Reynolds, the comptroller's director of planning and research, said the current congressional debate on windfall profits also creates uncertainty.

"Once the feds come to a good stopping point, the chances are pretty good we'll do a study," Reynolds said.

"But everything is almost in a blur right now. We will be looking at the situation and are sure the legislature will, but we can't do anything until the blur in Washington clears up."

Dr. Lorna Monti at the Center of Energy at The University of Texas said many organizations are contending that there is a need to research various aspects of the situation, including the tax structure.

"We have identified this as one of the important adjustments that might take place in the state as oil and gas production declines," she said.

"We have identified what should be looked into and we are looking for funding and will try to coordinate with anyone else."

Dr. Richard Thomas, director of the new Center of Strategic Technology at Texas A&M, said there is no question that concern over depletion of the state's oil and gas reserves is valid although there are a variety of opinions about the amount of natural resources yet to be found in the state.

Thomas said a recent study indicates 52 percent of the gross state product in Texas was petrochemically based.

"Of course, the bulk of that deals with Texas generated crude oil or natural gas," he said. "It points up Texas' vital dependence on the petrochemical industry."

Thomas said some people believe much oil and gas still remains to be discovered in the state.

"But if the projection of an 18-to-20-year runout is correct it certainly causes concern and is an indication changes would have to be made," he said.

Thomas said research efforts are under way to generate artificial crude oil from coal or lignite. He said an A&M project aimed at making artificial gas from lignite also is showing some progress.

"If these research efforts are successful, then, of course, we are in pretty good shape," he said.

"There are things on the horizon which, if successful, could lead to a supply of other kinds of feedstocks which would allow that element of our economic base to continue to flourish."

Thomas said he believes such research could be completed within the indicated time span.

"It probably would require some acceleration," he said.

"But if the research programs are not successful, if we don't have an ability to switch over to some other type of feedstock source for our petrochemical industry, certainly the economic base of this state is going to have to change. Certainly, it is difficult to imagine how it would not affect the tax structure in the future."

Thomas said there obviously are other facets, including what is termed the "mobility fuel problem."

"You could use nuclear power plants and solar power satellites to generate electricity but a B-52 obviously doesn't fly on electricityand we se a very serious situation emerging wih regardto that general issue of mobility fuels."

"I think the item of major concern there is it would be of a much shorter critical period. It seems to us a viable synthetic fuel program has to be pretty much on line by 1985."

Product Commission Urges Americans To Remember Safety

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thanks to the energy crunch, many long-ignored fireplaces are back in use and the Consumer Product Safety Commission urges Americans to brush up on their fireplace safety habits.

Most basically, the commission says, the fire should always be kept under control and there should always be someone in the house when the fireplace is in use.

That makes an effective screen a top priority, according to commission experts, who note that the screen can keep sparks and cinders from igniting nearby carpets, furniture and wood floors.

Even with a screen, however, it is best to keep things that could ignite away from the fireplace.

Another major hazard is the buildup of creosote in chimneys, which can ignite, causing fires. This can be removed by a cleaning once or twice a year. While you can do it yourself, the commission says most people will prefer to hire a professional.

Besides removing these creosote deposits, the professional crew can also deal with loose bricks that need to be repaired, faulty draft gear and other problems that may turn up.

The commission urges use of only dry, seasoned wood. It has these other fireplace safety hints:

—Don't use combustible liquids such as gasoline or charcoal lighter for starting a fire.

Volunteer Agency Celebrating 'Rebirth'

WASHINGTON (AP) — On its 15th anniversary, VISTA is still mistaken by some Americans for a credit card, but the domestic volunteer agency has quietly undergone a rebirth and transformation in the past three years.

The changes and the anniversary were celebrated Wednesday at the White House where President Carter met with two dozen of the 3,400 volunteers who serve in 2,000 American communities.

They were selected to represent the changes in VISTA, since President Lyndon B. Johnson launched this domestic version of the Peace Corps as part of his War on Poverty in 1964.

For years, the volunteers, who serve from one to five years at subsistence wages now averaging $317 a month, were overwhelmingly white, middle-class college graduates.

Now, more than 30 percent are themselves poor and by the end of 1980 some 60 percent will be recruited from the communities in which they work. One-third are senior citizens; one-fifth are non-white.

Increasingly, the agency is moving into energy conservation, health care and economic development.

An example of the changes was Richard Copeland, 47, who sat beside Carter. A thin, black man who left school before he finished the sixth grade, Copeland works with 29 struggling farmers around Hamilton, Ga., 70 miles northwest of Carter's hometown of Plains.

Copeland has spent most of his life there as a poultry plant worker and part-time farmer and now teaches others efficient pig breeding, better marketing and maximum use of crop acreage.

Carter noted that he was the first president to meet VISTAs in the White House since Johnson greeted the first 20 volunteers in 1964.

The president pledged to continue the program's regeneration. "Next year we hope to have as many as 5,000 volunteers, which will be the highest level of all time," Carter said.

Run by ACTION, the federal volunteer agency, VISTA sunk to low levels during the administrations of Presidents Richard Nixon and Gerald Ford, who proposed ending it. A poll taken for VISTA last year found only one in 10 Americans knew it was a volunteer organization. Some thought it was VISA, the bank credit card.

Earlier this month, Congress renewed VISTA for two more years and Carter is seeking to boost its funds to $38 million in 1980.

"Until this administration came in, VISTA had been a forgotten program, as poverty at home became America's dirty little secret," ACTION Director Sam Brown said.

VISTA still encounters criticism in Congress and some communities. Rep. Robert Michel, R-Ill., charged this year that some organizations with VISTA volunteers were using them for political activity.

Since then, the agency has restructured its relations with one nationwide community organizing group called ACORN, but Brown rejected most of the charges.

"Giving poor people the tools to change their lives sometimes creates opposition," Brown said. "But we reject Rep. Michel's view of fighting poverty as no more than distributing Christmas baskets and handouts to the poor."

These days, VISTA volunteers work on patient rights programs in nursing homes, help tenants' groups rehabilitate abandoned tenements in New York City, organize senior citizens into discount buying clubs in Minnesota. They mobilized the entire town of Fitchberg, Mass., to weatherproof its homes.

Since 1974, Copeland had spent much of his time workig with th West Georgia Farmers Cooperative. Two years ago, he joined VISTA and has extended his efforts over two counties.

Newly purchased cattle should be isolated from others for 45 to 120 days, then tested to prevent the spread of brucelosis and other costly disease.

Arctic Front Brings Cold, Snow To Northeast

By The Associated Press

Christmas shoppers in the big cities of the Northeast sloshed through unexpected heavy snow Wednesday and cars careened on treacherous highways while an arctic front put much of New England in a deep freeze.

The snow spread from Michigan to New England, causing numerous highway accidents, at least one involving seven cars. Police in Clarkstown, N.Y., a suburb of New York City, told motorists at one point to write out their own accident reports because there weren't enough police cars to handle all the collisions.

"People are playing bumper cars," said a police spokesman in Westchester County just north of New York.

No fatalities were reported.

The snow came with little warning at dawn and fell steadily throughout the day to give New York City its first snow blanket of the season. Accumulations up to 8 inches were expected before it stopped.

Overnight forecasts had noted only a "chance of light snow or snow flurries." Another unexpected storm, which dumped 9 inches in surrounding counties on Oct. 10, only dusted New York City.

In Pennsylvania, the snow was expected to build to 8 inches in the Poconos and 5 inches in Philadelphia, where trolley, subway and commuter train service was disrupted and some expressway ramps were temporarily closed.

"Commuters ought to leave twice as much time to reach their destination and that may not be enough," said Dave Murdock, spokesman for the Southeastern Pennsylvania Transportation Authority.

Many schools in suburban Philadelphia closed down and the Philadelphia Archdiocese sent its pupils home at noon.

"Tell the people to stay the hell away," said New Jersey State Police Sgt. George Hurden, stationed along the Atlantic City Expressway. "It's like a sheet of ice. We've had lots of fender benders."

The Pennsylvania Turnpike was covered with snow and slippery east of Reading and on the Northeast Extension, according to state police.

"Traffic's snarled all over the region," said Trooper Charles Buhay at Plymouth Meeting barracks. "We've had quite a few fender benders."

An accident involving seven cars forced the closing of the westbound lanes of the Long Island Expressway and traffic was diverted off the New England Thruway northbound at New Rochelle, N.Y., because of a jacknifed trailer-truck.

Sand trucks were out in full force along the New Jersey Turnpike and the Garden State Parkway and police reported dozens of minor accidents.

"Traffic was normal for a Wednesday morning, except it got all scrunched together," said Robert Halsey, a dispatcher for the Garden State Parkway in New Jersey.

The National Weather Service attributed the snowstorm to a low pressure system moving rapidly southeastward from the Great Lakes area.

"What we have is a ripple along the front, like shaking a clothesline — that's what's causing the snow, this low pressure area, as it moves quickly along the front," said Gordon Tait of the Philadelphia weather bureau.

Meanwhile, weathermen in mountain towns of upstate New York and New England awoke to find their communities in a deep freeze. It was 20 below zero at Twin Mountain in New Hampshire and 18 below at Old Forge, N.Y., in the Adirondacks.

The arctic blast also dipped into northern Florida, sending temperatures into the 20s. By contrast, it was 84 degrees Wednesday morning in Gila Bend, Ariz.

About 4 inches of snow fell in Buffalo and other parts of western New York during the night. There was 3 inches of snow on the ground in parts of Michigan while a freezing drizzle punished other areas of that state.

Refugees Allowed To Stay In Miami For Six Months

MIAMI (AP) — The estimated 10,000 Nicaraguan refugees who fled during the revolution that overthrew President Anastasio Somoza can count on living in Miami for at least another six months without fear of deportation, State Department officials say.

The Immigration and Naturalization Service announced in June it was temporarily suspending deportation proceedings against the Nicaraguans.

Flood Evacuees Return Home; Dikes Watched

SEATTLE (AP) — Swollen rivers in western Washington began to recede slowly Wednesday as officials kept a wary eye on soggy dikes. Hundreds of persons evacuated earlier started returning to their homes.

All of the major rivers had crested, but some were still well over flood stage.

At least three people were killed in accidents related to the series of storms that dropped more than two feet of water on some sections of Washington state.

Gov. Dixy Lee Ray has declared a state of emergency and county commissioners declared disasters in Clallam, Snohomish, Whatcom, Jefferson and Grays Harbor counties. Preliminary estimates of the damage reached into the millions of dollars.

The National Weather Service said that while another storm front, about 1,200 miles off the coast, could bring more rain Thursday, additional flooding was not expected. "We're hoping the worst is over," said Bill Palmer of the Weather Service.

Jan Leonardo of the Whatcom County Department of Emergency Services said about 2,500 persons on the Lummi Indian Reservation near Bellingham were still isolated by high water. Food and medical aid were brought in by ferry and helicopter.

An old lumber schooner, which broke loose from its moorings on the Chehalis River was lodged against a railroad bridge near Aberdeen. The bridge was opened after it was hit by 100-foot vessel and Union Pacific railroad officials are reluctant to close it.

Several dikes broke along the Snohomish River Tuesday night, flooding even more farmland. The Snohomish was still five feet above flood stage at midmorning Wednesday, but the Skykomish, Stillaguamish and Snoqualmie rivers were starting to drop.

About 250 residents of the community of Hamilton, headed home Wednesday after being forced to evacuate when the town was inunated by the Skagit River early Tuesday.

Jack Rafter, assistant public works director for Skagit County said the high water had softened dikes in the area, but they were holding. "We're looking for gopher and muskrat holes which could cause problems," he said.

A 1,000-foot long, three-foot high wall of sandbags in Mount Vernon was holding up against flood waters licking at the city.

On the Olympic Peninsula, officials were worried about several log jams on the Bogachiel River. One was described as more than 500 yards long and 50 feet wide.

Ali Offered Boxing Club

PEKING (AP) — Deputy Premier Deng Xiaoping told retired world heavyweight boxing champion Muhammad Ali on Wednesday that he can return to China to train young boxers for the 1984 olympics.

"He made me the official representative of the Chinese Boxing Federation," Ali told reporters later as he was mobbed by autograph seekers and young would-be boxers in the local Friendship Store where the foreign community shops.

Ali met with the diminutive senior deputy premier for 20 minutes in the Great Hall of the People.

Ali extended greetings from President Carter and Deng sent his regards to the American president.

"He said I can bring boxing to China, get boxing equpment and bring in boxers to put on an exhibition and just educate and train the boys for the 1984 Olympics," Ali said.

Deng told Ali that China is "worthy to be a friend" and said it is easy for the people of the United States and China to be friends.

'Chainsaw Maggie' To Pay

BOULDER, Colo. (AP) — "Chainsaw Maggie" has agreed to pay a hotel for the billboards she cut down, in exchange for a one-year suspended sentence.

Margaret Walter, 56, may have to pay pay the Stanley Hotel of Estes Park up to $1,500 for the damage.

Mrs. Walter was charged with criminal mischief for sawing down large blue-and-white billboards last summer in Allenspark, a tiny town in the Rocky Mountains where she lives.

The signs were designed to steer motorists to a branch condominium sales office in town.

Phil Miller, Boulder deputy district attorney, said the amount of the settlement still is in dispute, but a hotel spokesman said the company wants $1,500.

College President Retained

BOSTON (AP) — John R. Silber will keep his job as president of Boston University, the nation's fourth largest private university. Trustees have rejected a 2-1 faculty assembly vote to oust him.

JOHN R. SILBER

"The issue is not the president, whose distinguished leadership is a matter of public record, but the refusal of a handful of faculty members to live under their own contract," said Arthur G.B. Metcalf, trustee board chairman, in a release issued Tuesday by the university.

A faculty assembly was called at the request of faculty members who have charged Silber with a variety of failings dating back to 1971, but focusing on his alleged attempts to get rid of some professers in favor of others.

The three-hour faculty meeting resulted in a 456-215½ vote in favor of a resolution to remove Silber.

Robber's Christmas Brighter

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — She doesn't know it yet, but this Christmas is going to be a lot happier than the last one for Donna Mae Hollis, bank robber.

The 40-year-old Minneapolis mother of three had $6 in her pocket last Christmas and no presents for her children. So she robbed a Minneapolis bank of $1,400, which she used to buy presents.

But she was caught and sentenced, on Aug. 17, to four years in the federal prison in Lexington, Ky., by U.S. District Judge Miles Lord.

By the end of this week, however, she should be on her way back to Minneapolis and her family.

Lord signed an order on Tuesday reducing her sentence to the time she has served. The order was mailed to the prison, and when it's received, she will be freed and given a bus ticket home.

Her attorney, Scott Tilsen, had requested her sentence be reduced.

"I think the order was appropriate," said Tilsen. "It was a non-violent robbery. She was in trying circumstances when she did it, and she cooperated with the FBI. She was a first-time offender."

Submersion Record Sought

AURORA, Colo. (AP) Jim Stevens, president of Odyssey Diving Center in Aurora, is attempting to break the world's underwater submersion record.

Stevens hopes to remain in his under water for eight days in a large steel tank with a glass window set up in his diving center. The existing submersion record is 126 hours, set in 1961 in Canada.

The diver watched Monday night's Denver Bronco-San Diego Charger football game through the glass window. He installed an underwater telephone to help him pass time. Of course, he eats nothing but liquefied food.

Stevens is performing the stunt as a fund-raising benefit for Children's Hospital.

A champagne party is planned for 7:45 p.m. Thursday when Stevens is scheduled time to emerge from his tank.

Santa Claus Warned

NORTH POLE, Colo. (AP) — One of the letters received by Santa Claus at the post office here, about 25 miles west of Colorado Springs, carried a warning.

"And don't come down the chimney this year," it said. "We got a wood burning stove."

Slow Order Turns Valuable

GARRETSON, S.D. (AP) — Sixty-three years ago, Mathilda Hermanson ordered two frilly Easter dresses for her daughter and two dresses for herself from the Sears-Roebuck catalog.

The dresses arrived last month.

The four dresses, still wrapped in the original packaging with sales tickets and spring sale catalog intact, were found in the railroad depot at Sherman as it was torn down last fall.

The package was sent to an antique shop, where a friend of the Hermanson's spotted it. Three weeks ago, it finally found its way to the hands of Virginia Hermanson, daughter-in-law of the woman who ordered the dresses.

"We don't know for sure when the dresses were ordered," Virginia said. "But since the sale catalog says credit is good through 1917, they must have been ordered about Easter 1916."

One of the little girl's dresses is pink with short sleeves, a low waisted pleated skirt and white embroidery. The other is a lacy, white voile with pink ribbons. According to the sale catalog included in the package, the dresses probably cost between $1-2.

The dresses for the mother include a fancy, black organdy dress with a black petticoat and a gold and white sailor-style dress with 25 buttons wrapped from the neck to the waist. The dresses cost close to $4, the catalog said.

"I suppose the dresses are quite valuable now but we wouldn't sell them," the daughter-in-law said. "Their sentimental value is so much more."

More Oil Companies Announce Hikes In Price Of Gasoline

By MARK POTTS
Associated Press Writer

Gulf Oil Corp., Conoco Inc. and Atlantic Richfield Co. raised gasoline prices Wednesday as price hikes announced recently by other companies began showing up at the nation's gas pumps.

The latest increases, like those previously announced, affected wholesale prices. But retail prices will likely rise by similar amounts as dealers pass higher costs through to customers in the next few days.

The increases come as the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meets in Caracas, Venezuela, to discuss a price increase that is expected to add several cents more to gasoline and heating oil prices in coming weeks.

Gulf said it was increasing the wholesale price of gasoline 5 cents a gallon. The firm also said it was raising heating oil price 3 cents a gallon.

Conoco increased the wholesale price of its gasoline by 1.5 cents to 2 cents a gallon, effective Thursday. It was the second price increase in less than a week for the Stamford, Conn.-based company. It raised gasoline prices 2 cents a gallon last Friday. Conoco raised its heating oil price 1.5 cents a gallon last Thursday.

Arco said it was raising its gasoline prices 2 cents a gallon, effective immediately but said it was not changing heating oil prices.

The companies blamed higher crude oil costs for the price increases.

"It's a pass-through, under Department of Energy regulations, of crude oil costs that have already been incurred by the company," said Susan Breon, a spokeswoman for Gulf in Pittsburgh.

"On gasoline, the major factor is increasing crude costs," said John Lord, a spokesman for Conoco. He said the firm has also been forced to supplement its supplies by buying gasoline and heating oil on the expensive spot market.

Most of the nation's major oil companies have announced price increases in the past few days. The two largest increases were posted by Standard Oil of California and Exxon, which boosted prices of gasoline 6 cents a gallon each on Saturday and Monday, respectively. Chevron also boosted heating oil 6 cents, while Exxon's heating oil went up 3 cents.

Those two firms said they had increased prices because of Saudi Arabia's decision last Thursday to boost crude oil prices from $18 a barrel to $24 a barrel, retroactive to Nov. 1. Exxon and Chevron are major customers of Saudi Arabia.

The backdating of the Saudi price increase allowed the companies to get around a Department of Energy regulation requiring that oil firms cannot raise prices until a month after costs increase.

The other firms raising their prices did so for other reasons, including inflation, the oil price increases announced by some oil-producing countries last month, and the higher price of crude oil on the spot market that some oil companies must purchase to make up for fuel they lost because of the Iranian embargo.

Among the gasoline price increases announced in the past few days, Mobil Corp. and Texaco Inc. each went up 3 cents a gallon, Standard Oil Co. of Indiana raised prices 2 to 3 cents, Sun Co. went up 2 cents and Citgo boosted prices a penny.

Those increases are now making their way to service stations as dealers receive shipments of the higher priced fuel. Several of the firms also raised heating oil prices by a couple of cents, and those increases are now also being passed along by dealers.

Seven Companies Cited In Oil Price Violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department's charges of oil pricing violations by major refiners approached the $10 billion mark Wednesday with new allegations against seven companies totalling more than $1 billion.

With audits of the top 15 refiners covering 1973 through 1976 nearly complete, most of the $10 billion of alleged violations have been challenged by the companies and have yet to be resolved either through departmental reviews or in the courts.

In the latest series of actions, the department alleged pricing violations of $370.6 million by Shell Oil Co.; $168.3 million by Continental Oil Co.; $208.4 million by Atlantic Richfield Co.; $68.4 million by Marathon Oil Co.; $20.5 million by Chevron USA; $31.3 million by Texaco Oil Co.; and $154.1 million by Standard Oil Co. (Ohio).

The allegations covered the complete scope of petroleum products, but the department noted that none of the civil actions contend that the oil companies willfully violated the regulations.

The companies have 30 days to file formal responses to the complaints.

In announcing the notices, the department also announced agreement by Sohio to give up its claims to $16.6 million in future price increases. The agreement settles a dispute between the company and the department over price rules governing natural gas liquids.

These "notices of probable violation" completed the 1973-1976 audits of these seven companies, the department said. Starting in 1980, the department plans to extend its audits to additional companies and to post-1976 transactions.

Commenting on the new allegations, Bruce F. McCall, Conoco vice president for U.S. marketing, said the Energy Department mistook a few legitimate transactions for violations of its rules, and then "multiplied it by 10" to charge violations over a 10-month period.

Sohio said the department's new allegations were invalid and pledged to challenge them in court.

Sohio also said its agreement to forego future price increases on natural gas liquids reflected department claims that Sohio inadvertently erred in calculating increased costs. The company said the error had not resuted in an price increases so far, and no refunds would be due.

Marathon Oil issued a statement saying it would challenge the latest violation notices against it, which it said involve questions of the correct interpretation of "ambiguous and complex regulations."

Texaco said it had just received the violation notices and was reviewing them, but noted it was not accused of deliberate violations.

Atlantic Richfield denied the allegations, accusing the Energy Department of "a politically motivated program of claiming headlines with big numbers but little substance."

Shell and Chevron had no immediate comment.

CITY NEEDS WATER

NATCHEZ, Miss. (AP) — City officials urged residents to conserve water and counted on warming temperatures Wednesday to help overcome a critical water shortage in this old Mississippi River town. Natchez's chronic water problems, caused by poor production from its nine wells, took a new turn Monday night when too many residents left their faucets dripping to keep pipes from freezing as temperatures dipped into the high teens. The demand drained the city's storage tanks, including a reserve of more than a million gallons. About half of the town's 7,400 water customers awoke to find they were without water. The other customers had little beyond a trickle.

Homeless, Luckless Wichita Falls Family Hopes For Better Prospects

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — Eugene and Martha Whatley anxiously await the advent of the new year. They hope 1980 will bring a change in their luck.

After facing two upheavals in their lives this year, hope and friends are all the Whatleys have left.

The killer tornado that devastated the Wichita Falls area April 10 heavily damaged the couple's home in the Dean community, two miles to the northeast. Damage estimates rose to about $7,500, and two cars also were destroyed.

"All that time we thought we had insurance, but we turned around and found out we had nothing," said Whatley.

A computer error had left the family without insurance for either their home or their cars.

A lawyer told Whatley it would cost about $2,000 to go to court. Whatley decided he didn't have "money to gamble," so instead he borrowed money from the Small Business Administration.

The couple made a down payment on a car and began work on their house. The purchased a metal storage building. However, strong winds later tossed the building on top of the Whatley's new car.

"We had an old blue pickup and a little Pinto next to the other car. It's strange it had to land on that car," Whatley said.

And then, about 9 a.m. on Dec. 10, fire destroyed their remodeled home. Their son's car, parked next to the house, was also lost in the blaze.

Mrs. Whatley was the only one at home.

"I didn't smell smoke because we had the fireplace going. I walked past the kitchen window and saw the cables burning," she said.

As she telephoned the Wichita Falls Fire Department, neighbor kids came running in to check on her and to try to save some of the Christmas presents.

When Mrs. Whatley told the fire dispatcher where she lived, she was told the Wichita Falls Fire Department couldn't help because the fire was in Clay County and out of city jurisdiction.

"The lady did offer to call the Henrietta Fire Department, though," said Mrs. Whatley, who then called the Clay County volunteer fire department, which arrived about 20 minutes later.

Whatley, his wife and two sons are now living with another son and daughter in two mobile homes, which sit next to each other down the road from their parents' burned house.

Mrs. Whatley said they alternate between the two "so the children can have some privacy."

She added that although she likes being near her family, she misses being in her own home.

The insurance money from the fire will put the Whatleys in a mobile home, but he said it won't cover furnishings cost.

Friends are helping the family meet those expenses, and a fund was started for the family at a Wichita Falls bank "because somebody has to help them," a friend said.

Congress Votes On Parental Consent, Violence

WASHINGTON — Here's how area Members of Congress were recorded on major roll call votes Dec. 6 through Dec. 12.

HOUSE

PARENTAL CONSENT — The House refused, 163 for and 225 against, to require the consent of the parent or guardian before a minor can receive birth-control devices and family-planning information under the federal-state Medicaid program. The vote came during consideration of a bill (HR 4962) providing upgraded Medicaid services for poor children and pregnant women.

Rep. William Dannemeyer, R-Calif., a supporter, said this question is at stake: "Do parents control the education their children will receive in the area of sex education and family planning, or is that activity, like so many others in our culture, to be taken over" by government?

Rep. Tim Lee Carter, R-Ky., an opponent, said: "Actually, of the youngsters of our country who are 15-year-old and younger, about one-fifth of them are sexually active. To prevent them from getting needed contraceptives staggers the imagination. Defeat of this amendment would save these children from unwanted pregnancies. It would save the country from unnecessary abortions which might occur as well."

Members voting "yea" wanted Medicaid birth-control material distributed to minors only on the consent of parents or guardians.

Reps. Samuel Hall, D-1, Charles Wilson, D-2, James Collins, R-3, Phil Gramm, D-6, Bill Archer, R-7, J. Marvin Leath, D-11, Jack Hightower, D-13, Joe Wyatt, D-14, Kika de la Garza, D-15, Richard White, D-16, Tom Loeffler, R-21, Ron Paul, R-22, Abraham Kazen, D-23, Manuel Lujan, R-1, and Harold Runnels, D-2, voted "yea."

Reps. Bob Eckhardt, D-8, Jack Brooks, D-9, Jake P. Ickle, D-10, Mickey Leland, D-18, Henry Gonzalez, D-20, and Martin Frost, D-24, voted "nay."

Reps. Ray Roberts, D-4, Jim Mattox, D-5, James Wright, D-12, Charles Stenholm, D-17, and Kent Hance, D-19, did not vote.

SETTLING DISPUTES — The House passed, 207 for and 195 against, a bill to create agencies on the local level for resolving comparatively minor disputes, such as those between buyers and sellers and landlords and tenants. The settlement centers, under either governmental or private control, would be alternatives to the court system. The bill (S 423) was sent to conference with the Senate. It provides seed money to encourage localities to establish settlement centers, and it opens a unit in the Department of Justice to oversee the venture.

Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wis., a supporter, said: "The traditional courts, with their formal procedures, high costs and overloaded dockets, are not necessarily the best forum for resolving disputes."

Rep. Thomas Kindness, R-Ohio, an opponent, said the bill injects the federal government into "matters traditionally left to the states," and added that it has "the potential of developing a kangaroo court in every neighborhood" in the country.

Members voting "yea" favored the bill.

Wilson, Eckhardt, Wright, de la Garza, Leland, Gonzalez and Frost voted "yea."

Hall, Collins, Gramm, Archer, Leath, Hightower, Wyatt, White, Stenholm, Hance, Loeffler, Paul, Kazen, Lujan and Runnels voted "nay."

Roberts, Mattox, Brooks and Pickle did not vote.

DOMESTIC VIOLENCE — By a vote of 292 for and 106 against, the House passed a bill (HR 2977) to fund a variety of state and local programs to help victims of domestic violence. Costing $65 million over three years, the legislation, in part, would fund shelters for battered spouses and children and counseling programs to curb violence in the home. It was stated in debate that annuallly in the U.S. 1.8 million women and 250,000 men are beaten by their spouses.

Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., a suporter, said that "as a former child-abuse worker, I have witnesses examples of terrible cruelty with in the American family. Violence in the American home is a quiet epidemic and it is getting worse as our economy worsens."

Rep. Ken Kramer, R-Colo., an opponent, said that all but two states already have domestic violence programs. "The question really before us today," he added, "is not whether or not there is a problem but whether or not the federal government ought to be involved in the solution to that problem, at least on the scale" of this bill.

Members voting "yea" favored the bill.

Wilson, Eckhardt, Brooks, Wright, Wyatt, White, Leland, Hance, Gonzalez, Kazen, Frost, Lujan and Runnels voted "yea."

Hall, Collins, Gramm, Archer, Leath, Hightower, de la Garza, Stenholm, Loeffler and Paul voted "nay."

Roberts, Mattox and Pickel did not vote.

SENATE

WINDFALL TAX — The Senate voted, 44 for and 53 against, to preserve an amendment broadening the proposed tax on oil company profits resulting from price decontrol. The amendment would put a 20 per cent tax on newly discovered oil and on two other categories of oil the Senate Finance Committee had proposed to exempt from the so-called "windfall tax." The vote came during debate on a still-pending bill (HR 3919).

Sen. Robert Dole, R-Kans., who favored killing the amendment, said it "would cause billions of barrels of U.S. oil to be left in the ground and result in greater dependence on uncertain foreign sources."

Sen. Robert Byrd, D-W. Va., who wanted to preserve the amendment, said a stiffer tax "would leave the oil companies more than enough income for investment in new exploration and development and a great deal more."

Senators voting "nay" favored a tougher windfall tax.

Sens. Lloyd Bentsen, D, John Tower, R, Pete Domenici, R, and Harrison Schmitt, R, voted "yea."

FILIBUSTER — By a vote of 53 for and 46 against, the Senate failed to muster the three-fifths majority needed to cut off debate on the winfall-profits tax bill (see preceding vote). The vote, which launched a filibuster, was a victory for those favoring a more lenient tax. It prevented a final vote on an amendment extending the levy to additional categories of oil.

Most senators voting "yea" favored a stiffer windfall-profits tax on oil company revenues.

Bentsen, Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "nay."

GAS TAX — By a vote of 39 for and 40 against, the Senate rejected an amendment to restore a federal income tax deduction which motorists formerly were permitted to take for their payments of state and local gasoline taxes. The deduction was repealed by Congress last year to encourage energy conservation.

The amendment was offered to the windfall oil profits tax bill (see previous votes).

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., sponsor of the amendment, said deletion of the deduction "creates an unfair tax burden" for taxpayers who must drive to work.

Sen. Russell Long, D-La., an opponent, said: "There is no reason to have a special tax advantage to encourage people to use more energy."

Senators voting "yea" favored the deducation.

Tower, Domenici and Schmitt voted "yea."

Bentsen did not vote.

Message To Washington

MESSAGE — My wife and I are both Texans in the U.S. Air Force. Since September 1978 I have been working to get us stationed together. After going through many hassles and mountains of paperwork, I finally learned that she was being sent to Germany and we would be together. But, when she arrived in Germany she was assigned to a base clear across the country from mine! I've talked to every official from the Base Commander to the Chaplain to no avail. I'm afraid I'm going to forget what my wife looks like if this isn't resolved. Could you please check? M.S. — Aubsburg, Germany

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — Air Force officials advise me that your request for a joint domicile assignment with your wife in Karlsruhe, Germany will be promptly approved, since you have agreed to extend your tour of duty in Germany by two months so your assignment will equal your wife's. Best wishes for a happy reunion.

MESSAGE — I am extremely concerned about plans to build a new main post office in our town. Everyone agrees on the urgent need for expanded postal service, but we believe that moving the main post office and reducing the present facility to a finance unit will have a serious effect on our community. The post office is a vital part of our town's life and the present facility has served as a hub of activity since it was tributed to central area decay by removing such a traditional meeting place and service facility from its current location. We request that the Postal Service give thought to preserving the good that we have and build upon it by expanding the existing building rather than moving. B.G. — Del Rio

SENATOR BENTSEN RESPONDS — The Postal Service must have the agreement of local government before any new postal facility can be planned for a community. In the case of your town, both the city government and the Chamber of Commerce have concurred in the selection of the proposed site. A 20-year plan shows that the needs of your town cannot be met by enlarging the present post office building. I want to assure you, however, that there is no plan to discontinue postal services at the existing facility downtown. As long as a need exists, the same window and lock box services will be available at the old site.

Do you have a problem with government? MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON cuts through the red tape to get answers to your questions about Social Security, veterans benefits, immigration matters and other problems you may have run into in your dealings with the Federal Government in Washington. Write MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON, c/o Senator Lloyd Bentsen, U.S. Senate, Washington, D.C. 20510. Inquiries to MESSAGE TO WASHINGTON are sometimes edited before publication, but the intent and substance of the inquiries are maintained.

Step 2 — Month of birth. Find the corresponding numbers for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

House Approves Limits On Disaster Relief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House on Wednesday approved a measure limiting the Small Business Administration and Farmers Home Administration to making natural disaster loans of $500,000 per business per disaster.

There is no limit now on the disaster loans. The interest payments are partly subsidized by the government.

Under the bill, which was sent to the Senate, businesses and farmers would continue to pay 5 percent interest if they cannot get private credit following a natural disaster.

In the past, hundreds of businesses — including large farms in California and Texas — have borrowed as much as $17 million under the programs.

The bill is a compromise version of separate measures passed in May by the House and Senate.

The original House bill had limited the emergency loans, made available in counties declared disaster areas, to $500,000 per business, even in the event of a series of disasters.

Under the compromise bill, firms and farmers who are able to get private emergency loans may also obtain aid under the government programs. But the government loans would be obtainable only at higher interest rates than the normal 5 percent. In today's market, the rate would be about 12.5 percent.

Such loans would be reviewed periodically with the agency involved working to shift them to private lenders.

The bill specifically blocks agricultural enterprises from seeking SBA aid until they are turned down by the Agriculture Department agency.

The bill allows a total of about $3.5 billion for other SBA programs through September 1982.

Another section of the bill allows loans to firms whose products are declared unfit because of "nonphysical disasters," such as a federal ban on a product that is found to be a possible cause of cancer.

Under the compromise bill, those who lose personal property in a disaster could obtain loans at 3 percent interest on the first $55,000 and at the government's borrowing rate — now 8.25 percent — on another $55,000.

The provisions on interest rates and loan limits were made retroactive to Oct. 1 to cover aid extended to victims of hurricane damage in Gulf Coast states this fall.

Oliver Cromwell captured Drogheda, Ireland, and executed the entire garrison of about 3,000 men in 1649.

Rockefeller Stepping Down At Chase Manhattan

NEW YORK (AP) — David Rockefeller, the last of the five Rockefeller brothers to hold a major position of power in America, announced Wednesday he will step aside as the chief executive of Chase Manhattan Bank on Jan. 1.

Rockefeller, the youngest of the five brotehrs, said he will stay on as chairman of the board of the nation's third-largest bank for 16 more months after leaving as chief officer Jan. 1.

But he made it clear that Willard C. Butcher, now the bank's president, will be running the bank. Butcher will become chief executive in January and move up to chairman in April 1981.

Rockefeller, 64, has been chairman of the bank since 1969 and a key official since the bank was formed in a merger in 1955. He played a major role in expanding Chase's international activities and became known as a confidant of many world leaders.

But during his tenure, the bank fell farther behind No. 2 Citibank, it's largest New York rival, in both size and profits. And Rockefeller's management style was severely criticized.

Profits have recovered in the last few years and were up 69 percent in the first nine months of this year, compared to the same period of 1978.

The five brothers, sons of John D. Rockefeller Jr. and grandsons of the founder of Standard Oil Co., John D. Rockefeller Sr., formed perhaps the most powerful family ever seen in America.

Nelson was governor of New York from 1959 through 1973, and then served as vice president from 1973 through 1977 under Gerald Ford. For some of the same years, Winthrop served as governor of Arkansas.

John D. III devoted most of his efforts to philanthropy and largely stayed out of the limelight, as did Laurance, an active conservationist and venture capitalist who is now chairman of Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center in New York.

David became president of Chase Manhattan in 1960 and has run the bank since as either chairman or president. Laurance and David are the only surviving brothers.

The most prominent of the next generation of Rockefellers is John D. IV, the governor of West Virginia. There are no other Rockefellers in the senior management of Chase Manhattan Bank.

"We are both gratified by the significantly improved performance of Chase over the past several years," David Rockefeller said Wednesday, referring to himself and Butcher. "I believe that today's decision, shifting the major responsibility of running the bank to him, will ensure that the bank's momemtum continues through the challenging decade of the 1980s."

The 53-year-old Butcher, who has been president of the bank since 1972, will become chairman of the bank and its holding company in April 1981. He named four executive vice presidents who will "assist me directly in the overall management of Chase," appearing to put them into competition to become president then.

Rockefeller said he will devote less time to the bank after giving up the chief executive officer post on Jan. 1, but that his responsibilities will include "marketing efforts overseas as well as in this country." He had been expected to step down from all his bank posts next June, when he turns 65.

Rockefeller is by far the best known banker in America, in part due to his name but also because of his world travels. He reportedly helped his friend, the deposed shah of Iran, get admitted to this country for medical treatment.

Rockefeller refused to talk about the shah or the Iranian crisis. But he defended his bank's role in declaring a loan to Iran to be in default after President Carter's freeze of Iranian assets kept the country from making an interest payment on time.

As if to emphasize Rockefeller's role, the news conference announcing his retirement was held in a room adjacent to the bank's Middle Eastern banking department.

Butcher was lavish in his praise of Rockefeller, saying he will "loom increasingly large" in "the perspective of history." But Butcher wasted no time in announcing the end of the management committee that Rockefeller used to run the bank.

Instead, Butcher said, individual managers will have more responsibilty. He said a new policy committee, including the management committee members and some others, will be established, but made it clear that group will have much less power.

Butcher said he will step aside as president in 1981 and said he expected to be replaced by a current executive of the bank. He said there is "more than one" candidate but gave no details.

The four executive vice president mentioned by Butcher were:

—John A. Hooper, 57, the chairman of the credit policy committee and the man in charge of Chase's real estate activities, which are recovering from major problems.

—Thomas G. Labrecque, 41, the head of Chase's retail and institutional banking operations and coordinator of the bank's effort to improve its management process.

—William S. Ogden, 51, the bank's chief financial officer and chairman of the asset-liability management committee.

—Barry F. Sullivan, 49, who is in charge of the bank's corporate and international banking operations.

Notably absent from the list were three other members of the management committee, Alan F. Lafley, 57; Robert R. Douglass, 48, and George A. Roeder Jr., 59. Roeder is vice chairman and the others are executive vice presidents. Butcher said all will continue to hold their jobs and serve on the policy committee.

Butcher joined Chase National Bank, a predecessor of Chase Manhattan, in 1947 after graduating from Brown University and serving in the Navy. He headed the bank's international department before becoming president.

He is a director of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. and of Asarco Inc. and is a trustee of Brown University.

ROCKEFELLER AND REPLACEMENT — David Rockefeller, left, chairman of the board of the Chase Manhattan Corp., listens as his replacement, Willard C. Butcher, talks to the press in New York Wednesday. Butcher is expected to take over as the bank and corporation chief executive officer effective Jan. 1. (AP Laserphoto)

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I knew nothing about investments when I received my $200,000 divorce settlement in 1974. I talked to the trust departments of a number of banks, before choosing one to handle my affairs. I gave the bank complete control of my money but I did retain the right to cancel the arrangement.

The bank began putting my money into stock options. Within six months, I lost $71,000. I took what was left and went to an investment brokerage firm recommended by a friend.

That firm rearranged my investment portfolio completely. Except for two growth stocks, my investments are now all bonds. My income from interest and dividends has averaged 10 percent a year.

I took a night course in investing, which helped a lot. I didn't even know the difference between a stock and a bond — much less options — before I took that course. Don't you think you should advise people to learn about investing before doing so?

A. I do! "Investigate before investing" has been a constant theme of this column. It has also been stressed here that night study courses in investing - available through many community colleges and school boards — are invaluable. And I often urge readers to visit their public libraries to take out books on investing.

Your horror story is not unusual. Similar tales about some banks and some brokerage firms come in all too frequently. In fairness, however, it must be pointed out that most banks handle investment accounts much more conservatively than the one to which you entrusted your bundle. So do most brokerage houses.

Your biggest mistake was giving that particular bank complete control over your money. That's known as "discretionary power," which can sometimes be abused.

Stock options, of course, are seldom anything except straight gales and certainly no place for a divorced woman's nestegg. If you knew then what you know now, you undoubtedly would have blown the whistle and moved your account at the first indication your money was being put into that game.

Q. I plan to obtain a loan from my bank and leave a $5,000 municipal bond with the bank as collateral. Will I be entitled to use the interest from the bond to pay the interest on the loan? Will I also be able to take a deduction for the bank loan interest on my income tax return?

A. Answering your questions in order: Yes. No.

You can use the interest from the bond to pay the interest on the bank loan. Even though the bank will have possession of the bond, that bond will still belong to you. The interest paid on the bond will be yours.

But you won't be able to report the interest you pay on the bank loan as an income tax deduction. The Internal Revenue Code specifically prohibits the deduction of interest on a loan "incurred or continued" to buy or hold tax-exempt seourities.

Because the bank loan would be directly tied to your ownership of a municipal bond paying tax-free interest, you would be in big trouble if the revengers take a look at your income tax return.

Q. A friend of mine has some preferred stock which is "callable" next June. She relies on the dividend from this stock for income. Neither she nor I know what callable really means. What should I tell her?

A. To relax. The stock you named is now trading well below its "call price" — the price at which the company will have the right to pay it off beginning next June. So, it's more than unlikely the company will call it in.

If, by some chance, the company does call that stock, that should make her happy — because she'll get a muoh higher price than she can now by selling the stock in the open market.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will able to provide answers only through the column.

Oil Finds Total 32 In Early December

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Railroad Commission said Wednesday operators reported 32 oil discoveries and 58 natural gas discoveries in the first half of December.

Through 11½ months of 1979, the commission said, operators have reported 514 oil discoveries, an increase of 65 from the same period in 1978.

A total of 1,177 gas discoveries have been reported, 146 more than in the first 11½ months of last year.

The commission said the new oil discoveries included seven in the San Angelo area; six in West Central Texas; four in South Texas; three each in East Texas and the Refugio and San Antonio areas; and two each in North Texas and the Midland and Lubbock areas.

Gas discoveries included 15 in the Refugio area; 14 in Southwest Texas; nine in South Texas; seven in West Central Texas; four in the Panhandle; two each in North Texas and the Midland area; and one each in East Texas, East Central Texas, and the San Antonio, San Angelo and Lubbock areas.

The commission said operators reported 154 dry exploratory dry holes in the Dec. 1-15 period.

Supplies Of Distillate Show Decline

NEW YORK (AP) — Overall refinery output and inventories of gasoline increased last week, but supplies of distillate reflected colder weather by beginning seasonal declines, the American Petroleum Institute said Wednesday.

The API, an industry organization, said that for the week ending Dec. 14, inventories of gasoline rose to 223.8 million barrels from 221.3 million barrels a week earlier but remained below year-ago inventories of 230.8 million barrels. Gasoline production rose to 6.8 million barrels daily from 6.6 million barrel daily the previous week and was lower than the 7.5 million barrels daily produced at this time last year.

Supplies of distillate, used primarily for home-heating and diesel fuel, declined to 231.9 million barrels from 238.6 million barrels a week earlier, a normal decline for this time for year. Distillate inventories remained above the government's projected normal level, and were ahead of the 220.1 million barrels at this time last year.

Distillate production dipped to 3.1 million barrels daily from 3.2 million barrels daily a week ago and 3.4 million barrels daily last year.

Refinery utilization in the latest week increased to 86.9 percent of capacity from 85.1 percent a week earlier, but was below last year's level of 90.1 percent.

Crude oil inventories, which are being watched closely because of the situation in Iran, increased to 350.7 million barrels from 349.2 million barrels in the preceeding week and were higher than the 319.4 million barrels available at this time a year ago.

Crude oil imports fell to 6.4 million barrels daily in the latest week from 6.7 million barrels a week earlier. Last year's imports at this time were 6.2 million barrels a day.

Physician Says China Lags Despite Advances

HONG KONG (AP) — A U.S.-born, but naturalized Chinese physician said Wednesday China has made tremendous progress in medical science but it is still at least 15 years behind Western industrialized countries.

Dr. George Hatem, who was born in Buffalo, N.Y. in 1910 and went to China in 1933, said, however, his country is the world leader in primary care medicine because it focuses on prevention.

Hatem, who is called Ma Haide in China, stopped here en route back to China after a trip to Canada and spoke to reporters at a news conference.

Winter Solstice To Begin Saturday As Sun Hits Mark

WASHINGTON (AP) — Winter arrives on Saturday.

You may already be facing chill weather and snow in some areas, but it won't be official until 5:10 a.m. CST Saturday.

That marks the winter solstice when the sun reaches its southernmost point in the sky and begins the trek back north.

At that moment, the sun will be over a point in the South Atlantic ocean about 250 miles west of Walvis Bay in Southwest Africa.

Tight Money, Skyrocketing Oil Prices To Continue Recession

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — America's economy will continue in a moderate recession in 1980 because of "a restrictive monetary policy and rapid increases in world oil prices," University of Pennsylvania economists predicted Wednesday.

Professor Lawrence R. Klein, who heads the prestigious Wharton Econometric Forecasting Associates, said "the economy seems to be entering the second phase of the recession" which began earlier this year.

"The first phase, roughly March through September, was characterized by a stagnant economy with sharp fluctuations from month to month as a result of strikes and temporary gasoline shortages," Klein reported in the Wharton Magazine.

"We expect the second stage to be a sustained downtown lasting three calendar quarters through the middle of 1980 ... concentrated in the durable consumption, housing and nonresidential investment sectors of the economy (which) are particularly sensitive to high interest rates and high oil prices."

The forecast reported there was both good news and bad news in the monetary policy.

"The good news is that the extreme turbulence in financial markets seems to be easing as uncertainty of the Federal Reserve's policy moves lessens," the economists said. "The bad news is that rates should decline very slowly over the next year or so despite the recession. One reason for the slow decline will be continued monetary restraint in response to the competitive interest rate increases abroad."

Noting political pressures for a tax cut will grow as the recession deepens, the forecast anticipates "personal taxes will be lowered by $11 billion by rising the personal exemption $250, while corporate taxes will be cut $1 Billion in the first year by shortening tax lives on new plants and equipment by 20 percent."

The Penn economists said unemployment will rise rapidly in the next six months which "is not unusual in a recession," but they predicted the current double-digit inflation should flatten out in the next two years.

Citing current layoffs in the auto industry and expected layoffs in the steel sector because of proposed plant closures, the report predicted the unemployment rate would reach 8 percent by the fourth quarter of 1980 and 8.14 percent in the second quarter of 1981. It was 5.8 percent in the 1979 third quarter.

Inflation should average 9.8 percent in 1980 and 8.5 percent in 1981, the report added.

"The high inflation rate persists because its basic components, energy and shelter costs, are expected to maintain their upward movement," the report said. "At the same time lagging productivity and higher wages are increasing the cost per unit of output to industry."

The bad news seemed pegged to climbing oil prices and high interest rates.

"We anticipate average prices of oil imported to the United States will rise by 50 percent in 1980 and 20 percent in 1981. We do not foresee any physical shortages over the forecast period because the coming recession, both in the United States and abroad, will depress the demand.

"However, with increasing political unrest in the Middle East such shortages cannot be entirely ruled out nor can even higher oil prices increases."

Report Says Arson Out Of Control

WASHINGTON (AP) — Arson is "virtually out of control" and is killing 1,000 Americans annually and costing insurance companies $1.6 billion, a Senate subcommittee said Wednesday.

Failure of federal, state and local agencies to work together to limit arson for profit "has helped to nurture an arson epidemic," the panel said.

After a year's investigation, the Senate investigations subcommittee issued a report which says, "the crime of arson represents a very real threat to the physical and financial stability of our nation's cities."

From 1970 until 1977, according to estimates by the American Insurance Association, the number of arson fires doubled to 240,000.

The subcommitee report said most of those were in rundown areas of big cities and some of the fires were ordered set by organized crime figures.

"Long thought by the public to be a sporadic act of greed," the report said, "arson has evolved over the past decade into a way of life in many metropolitan areas."

The subcommittee identified New York, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and Detroit as cities where the "arson plague has already ravaged hundreds of thousands of commercial and residential acres."

In Los Angeles, the report said, losses due to deliberately set fires totalled $10.5 million between July and December 1978, a doubling of the previous year.

The report said landlords and other building owners who see property values dropping in the inner city frequently overinsure their properties, then pay to have them torched to obtain a quick insurance settlement to avert further loss.

For those who live in the neighborhood where arsonists do their work, the report said, there is "terror, dislocation and financial ruin for thousands of families."

An estimated 10,000 persons are injured each year in arson fires, the investigators said.

The report urged the insurance industry to do more to discourage arson fraud. Otherwise, it said, "arson for profit will continue to be a lucrative criminal enterprise."

The subcommittee headed by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., also recommended that Congress make arson a federal crime.

Because many local fire companies lack the technical expertise and sufficient investigators to deal with the increasing incidence of arson, "the involvement of federal law enforcement agencies is a logical national strategy to deal with arson and the impact of this crime on the nation as a whole," the report said.

President Giving Update On Plan To Coal States

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter is giving coal-state members of Congress a status report on his long-delayed plan to force electric utilities to burn less imported oil and convert to coal and other fuels.

Sources said Carter's tentative proposal calls for the eventual conversion of up to 171 power plants that now burn petroleum and natural gas, while targeting a dozen plants for immediate conversion.

However, efforts to come up with specific legislation have bogged down within the administration, largely over finding a mechanism for forcing such conversions and whether to include plants that burn natural gas.

Sixty five members of the so-called Congressional Coal Group have been invited to a 4 p.m. meeting today with the president to discuss what happened to the legislation.

In his July 15 speech outlining his 1979 package of energy initiatives, Carter told the nation:

"I am asking Congress to mandate — to require as a matter of law — that our nation's utilities cut their massive use of oil by 50 percent witin the next decade and switch to other fuels — especially coal, our most abundant energy source."

However, the bill to carry the program forth never materialized.

Stock Mart Ends Mixed

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market got off to a rocky start but recovered to finish mixed Wednesday in a session dominated by yearend tax maneuvering.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, off about 5 points in early trading, showed a .26 gain at 838.91 by the close.

New York Stock Exchange volume totaled 41.78 million shares, against 43.31 million the day before.

Analysts said the market's behavior seemed closely attuned to fluctuations in the price of gold, which is a trusted indicator of concern over the outlook for inflation, the dollar and oil prices.

Stock prices were weak at the outset as the gold price jumped above $490 an ounce to a record high, then recovered later as gold dropped back into the $480s.

Brokers also noted that cross-currents of yearend tax selling and reinvestment by investors made it difficult to read much into the current market picture.

New York (AP) — Wed's national prices for New York Stock Exchange issues as of NYSE close. Prices and volume consolidated for securities also traded on other markets.

Decision Due On Blame In Worst Air Tragedy

WASHINGTON (AP) — American Airlines flight 191 was headed skyward from Chicago last May when its left engine ripped away and the plane plunged to the ground in the worst air tragedy in U.S. history.

Along with killing 273 persons, the crash of the DC-10 set off six months of wrangling over who was to blame. But today this may end — at least formally — with a ruling by the National Transportation Safety Board.

The months of bureaucratic finger-pointing are not surprising since the decision on blame could mean hundreds of millions of dollars in losses to American Airlines and McDonnell Douglas, the plane's manufacturer.

So far, American Airlines blames McDonnell Douglas. McDonnell Douglas blames American. The Federal Aviation Administration criticizes both, and pilots question the FAA's role.

Flight 191's wide-body DC-10 was lifting off from O'Hare International Airport last May 25 en route to Los Angeles when the left engine suddenly flipped over the wing. The plane rolled sharply to the left, shuddered in a stall and plunged into an abandoned airfield less than a mile from the airport.

All 271 persons on the plane and two on the ground were killed.

The FAA subsequently grounded all of U.S. airlines' 138 DC-10s for 37 days, permitting them to fly again on condition the pylons which attach the engines to the wings be inspected rigorously and often.

The accident, plus two subsequent DC-10 crashes that claimed 331 more lives, have cast suspicion on the airplane and its builder. Any minor mishap involving the jet becomes front page news. Many travelers try to avoid the DC-10 altogether.

The safety board report likely will leave no one completely satisfied.

Observers expect the board to find some fault with McDonnell Douglas' design, with American's maintenance practices and with FAA's inspection procedures. Corrections will be recommended to each.

The bard will xamine reports and recommendations of its staff to determine whether the major blame should be placed on American or McDonnell Douglas, or whether they should share the burden.

At stake in the decision are corporate image, perhaps hundreds of millions of dollars in damage settlements and the cost of modifications to existing DC-10s — which could be $500,000 a plane.

The board's investigation found that the crash was triggered by a 10-inch crack in the pylon's rear bulkhead, one of the points where the pylon attaches to the wing. When this gave way, the engine went and hydraulic fluid lines and electrical cables were shredded.

With the hydraulic fluid drained from the left wing controls, the slats on that wing retracted. The right wing's slats — metal plates that are extended from the wing front to give extra lift on takeoff — remained extended, creating an imbalance which caused the plane to stall, roll and dive.

The loss of electrical power turned off cockpit instruments that could have given Capt. Walter Lux warning about the slat situation. FAA tests showed that had he known about the slats, Lux probably could have controlled the plane by lowering the nose and applying full power to the two remaining engines.

The loss of so many systems raised questions on why McDonnell Douglas did not have more redundency, that is back-up equipment that is part of other U.S.-made jetliners.

The FAA will now require that in future DC-10s, both the pilot and co-pilot have "stick-shakers" — sensors that literally shake the control column — to warn of slat problems.

An independent FAA study determined the crack in the pylon was caused during maintenance by American Airlines whose mechanics used a forklift device to remove and re-install the engine-pylon assembly as one unit. McDonnell Douglas' recommendation was to remove and re-install each section separately.

The agency called the procedure faulty and fined American $500,000 in November. Continental Airlines, which used a similar procedure, was fined $100,000. Both carriers paid the fines but said they did so only to avoid the expense and burden of litigation, not because they admitted violation of FAA rules.

American has contended that McDonnel Douglas' design left the pylon-wing attachments "needlessly vulnerable to ... damage during maintenance." It said the rear bulkhead that tore off the plane had been "improperly manufactured and assembled."

McDonnell Douglas defended the pylon design and said the "fundamental cause" of the engine loss was American's maintenance.

Meanwhile, the Air Line Pilots Association raised questions about FAA procedures that led to the DC-10s certification in 1971.

The board will consider all the allegations in its meeting. The session could last two days, but observers feel the board is so familiar with its staff's work that it could make a finding Thursday.

The board is an investigative agency with no regulatory authority, but its findings carry considerable weight and most of its recommendations are carried out.

Meanwhile, authorities continue to investigate the other two DC-10 crashes, but preliminary reports indicated the cause of these crashes was not related to the aircraft's structure.

The first crash killed 74 when a Western Airlines plane attempting to land on a closed runway at Mexico City hit a truck. In the second, 257 died when an Air New Zealand jet crashed into a mountain in Antarctica, possibly because of a navigation error and weather conditions that obscured the ground.

Tracks Bear No Likeness, Expert Says

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The Lubbock County Sheriff's Department has called off the search for what was thought to be a bear, after a Texas Tech professor said the tracks found at Horseshoe Bend Canyon were definitely not made by a bruin.

Dr. C. David Simpson, associate professor of range and wildlife management, said Wednesday he is "absolutely certain" the tracks found on the north rim of the canyon were not made by a bear.

After viewing photographs of the tracks, Simpson said the shape and the spacing of the claws differed from tracks normally made by a bear.

Simpson also said the tracks found near the canyon were made by an animal with a "single-line gait," meaning tracks of all four feet fell in one straight line.

A bear, he said, walks in a double-line gait, leaving two separate lines of tracks.

Simpson said he believed the tracks were made by a "large dog, not necessarily a man-eating monster-size dog." He added that a average dog is capable of leaving large tracks, especially in the snow.

Assistant Chief Deputy Alton Hobbs said the sheriff's office would end its investigation until the animal is sighted again or more tracks are found.

Sheriff's deputies and officers of the Department of Public Safety boarded the DPS helicopter Wednesday morning for an air search of the canyon. The search proved fruitless.

Some Slaton area residents had speculated the bear might have been one sold in an auction conducted by the Noah's Ark Zoo in 1977, but all the bears owned by the zoo are accounted for, according to former owner Bob Montgomery.

He said the roadside zoo had been the home for six bears at one time or another. Montgomery said two of the animals were sold to a zoo in Michigan, one to a zoo in Ohio, one to Lion Country Safari at Grand Prairie and two to the owners of a wildlife refuge located between Abilene and Fort Worth.

Montgomery added that all the bears he owned were large Asian bears, which would have made much larger tracks than those found near the canyon.

A Slaton couple reported Oct. 16 that they had been awakened in the early morning hours by a bear rummaging through their garbage cans. Mr. and Mrs. Abran Valverde told deputies they watched the bear for a short time until a pickup truck arriving at their home scared the animal away.

The couple said their dogs repeatedly charged the bear, and that each time the animal rose up on its hind legs and drove the dogs away.

Deputies were at first skeptical about the possibility of a bear roaming the canyon, which is located about three miles north of Slaton. However, fresh tracks were found on both the north and south rims of the canyon after last week's heavy snowfall.

Nancy Hickman, president of People for Animal Welfare, said a man giving a Slaton address and phone number had reported his pet black bear missing shortly before the sighting by the Valverdes.

Mrs. Hickman said she telephoned the man after the Oct. 16 sighting, and he expressed concern over the legal consequences if his bear hurt someone or damaged property.

However, when contacted by The Avalanche-Journal, the man whose name and address were given to the Lubbock Animal Shelter denied ever having owned a bear. A member of the man's family said the call to the shelter was a hoax.

TWO DIE IN COLLISION

HOUSTON (AP) — A young couple was killed Wednesay when their car burst into flames after being struck from behind by another vehicle. Officer J.E. Willis said the impact of the collision apparently drove a tool box in the truck into the gasoline tank with sufficient force to cause a fiery explosion. The dead were identified as Freddy Anez, 23, and Carmen Delrocio Guardia, 21. The driver of the second vehicle received minor injuries.

THE SUPERMARKET SHOPPER

By MARTIN SLOANE

DEAR SUPERMARKET SHOPPER — I would like to know about those women who save so much that it makes the rest of us look foolish. You know the ones I mean.

We see them on television checking out of supermarkets with $109 worth of groceries for which they paid $1.46. Not once have they or the TV reporters explained how they do it.

Do you know how? — Mary M., Glen Mills, Pa.

DEAR MARY — Many manufacturers offer free packages of their products instead of cash refunds. You can find lots of these offers in my CLIP 'N' FILE refund lists.

If you send in the required proofs of purchase, the manufacturer will send you a coupon that you can redeem at the supermarket for a free product. If you save up enough of these coupons, you can go on a shopping extravaganza.

This is how most of the "coupon queens" do it.

How long will it take you to save up enough free-product coupons to buy $109 worth of groceries for $1.46? It may take some time.

If you were an experienced refunder who saved $60 a month with refunding, at most half of that amount, or $30, would be received in the form of coupons for free products. At this rate, it would take about three months to accumulate enough free-product coupons to stage your shopping extravaganza.

The coupon queens have brought some good publicity to couponing and refunding. But unfortunately the television coverage given to their shopping spectacles leaves many people with the false impression that this sort of thing can easily be done every week.

They are led to believe that there is some secret about refunding that will allow them to buy $100 worth of groceries each week for just a few dollars. When they find out that isn't possible, they often become disillusioned and go back to the old shopping grind.

It has always surprised me that television reporters who go along on thes shopping trips either don't realize or ignore the deceptive quality in the shows put on by many coupon queens.

I suggest that you forget about these made-for-television shopping sprees and concentrate on the basics. If you will be content eventually to save $20 to $30 a week on your total bill for food and household products, then follow this advice:

Organize your coupons. Get into refunding. Concentrate on taking advantage of supermarket specials.

As you build up your inventory of coupons and proofs of purchase, your savings will grow. Soon you will find at least one discount opportunity for almost every item on your shopping list.

You will also be enjoying supermarket shopping in a way that you never did before. You won't get big-time TV coverage by saving this way, but you will feel as good as if you had.
