El Paso's 'tunnel to nowhere' now long, long closet

By STEVE BREWER
Associated Press Writer

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — An $87,000 tunnel constructed between the new county jail and the courthouse has become a "long, long, long closet" because of a county commission decision.

And officials can see no light at the end of the 80-foot-long underground corridor for now.

"Now, we're thinking an underground tunnel is not the answer to all our prayers," said County Commissioner Charles Hooten.

The commissioners voted Monday to halt further construction, leaving them with a tunnel to nowhere.

Plans called for the tunnel to push through the courthouse wall and connect with a freight elevator with doors on two sides. But commissioners balked at the $200,000 cost for the renovation.

"It can be used as a number of things," Commissioner Pat O'Rourke said. "It would be a beautiful storage area. It's like a long, long, long closet."

The saga of the tunnel stretches back to January 1979 when the commissioners decided to burrow under busy Campbell Street in preparation for construction of the jail. At the time, O'Rourke said, the bond issue for the $31 million jail had not been approved.

Since then, the gray concrete jail has risen 11 stories above the ground and is scheduled for occupancy next July. But below the ground, the tunnel has remained unchanged.

"It looks like one of those big culverts under the interstate," O'Rourke said. "It's about 10 feet wide and, oh, 10 or 11 feet high. It goes right up to the wall of the booking section (in the basement) of the police department."

"They're trying to balance their budget," Sheriff Ray Montes said of the commissioners. "It's strictly their decision."

But the decision leaves Montes with a problem: how to get inmates from the jail to hearings in the courthouse without exposing them to the public and prospective jurors.

"I'm pretty sure that what we would have to do is revert back to the old operation of using a transfer vehicle to get them back and forth," he said.

Israel still trying to oust guerrillas

By The Associated Press

Israel gave the PLO a new ultimatum today to flee west Beirut, and Israeli divebombers, gunboats, tanks and artillery relentlessly blasted guerrilla targets in the Lebanese capital.

In Jerusalem, Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin said U.S. presidential envoy Philip C. Habib promised to seek "an unequivocal commitment" by the Palestine Liberation Organization to leave Beirut, and would give Israel the answer by Friday.

Begin, standing firm on his insistence that the estimated 8,000 trapped PLO guerrillas agree to leave Lebanon entirely, said that only such a commitment would avert an Israeli assault on the city.

He said Syria, Jordan and Egypt each have apparently agreed to take in some of the guerrillas, but that "it is still not clear if the terrorists have even really decided to leave Beirut."

Habib, scheduled to return to Beirut today, met Begin Tuesday night after seeing the leaders of Syria, Saudi Arabia, Egypt and Jordan.

Israeli newspapers said the American diplomat hoped Syria would grant asylum to leaders of the PLO, Jordan would accept members with Jordanian citizenship, and Egypt would take the rest of the guerrillas under siege in west Beirut.

In Cairo, Rep. Paul McCloskey, R-Calif., said that Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak expressed willingness to host Palestinians evacuated from west Beirut if there was some assurance from the United States they would some day have a homeland. McCloskey is a member of a five-member congressional delegation that has also talked with leaders in Lebanon, Syria and Israel.

Habib told Begin he had made progress and there was "a chance he will succeed in fulfilling his mission," an Israeli official reported.

While the besieged Lebanese capital trembled under the thunderous air and sea barrages, Israeli ground forces and guerrillas dueled with heavy artillery and rockets on Beirut's southern and eastern outskirts, correspondents reported.

Lebanese police said 203 people were killed and 297 wounded in the previous air, sea and land bombardment that began at midnight Monday and continued for 30 hours. However, a PLO communique said put the toll at 247 dead and 395 wounded in Palestinian camps, where police have no access, and in residential neighborhoods.

Witnesses said Tuesday's raid was the heaviest Israeli bombardment of the beleaguered Lebanese capital since Israel invaded Lebanon June 6 and drove to the gates of Beirut to ensnare the PLO fighters.

Divebombing Israeli jets and gunboats offshore pounded a west Beirut beachfront residential district where PLO guerrillas had thrown up barricades and mined one street.

In one block, two apartment buildings, one eight stories tall, were destroyed, and seven others were badly damaged during the afternoon air raids. Costa Rican Consul Abdel Baki, who lived in the neighborhood, said about 200 Palestinian refugees lived in the eight-story building, which took a direct hit.

Police said the Soviet Embassy on west Beirut's Corniche Mazraa thoroughfare was struck by Israeli shells for the third time since the invasion began.

Gandhi visit may help 'set new tone'

WASHINGTON (AP) — Indian Prime Minister Indira Gandhi's first visit to the United States in more than a decade should give the two countries a chance to "set a new tone" in relations long frayed by India's ties to Moscow, U.S. officials say.

Mrs. Gandhi arrives here today for a week-long tour of the United States that opens on Thursday with a formal White House state dinner and private talks with President Reagan and Secretary of State George P. Shultz.

Senior Reagan administration officials are welcoming the visit of the 64 year-old Indian leader as an opportunity to move toward warmer relations after a long period of strain.

"There is only so much you can do in two days," said one official. "You can, however, set a new tone."

The visit coincides with speculation by informed private analysts that the interest of Mrs. Gandhi's government in closer ties to Moscow may be "cooling."

Although Mrs. Gandhi maintains that her visit to Washington is not a "shopping trip," the officials, who asked not to be identified by name, said they have an open mind on possible requests by India for military and economic assistance and will consider them "on a case-by-case basis."

They note they have permitted the Northrop Aviation Co. to begin exploratory talks on the possibility of Indian co-production of the F-5G fighter.

Some analysts of U.S.-Indian relations view Mrs. Gandhi's trip as essentially a "damage-limitation operation" on both sides.

U.S. officials say that they do not expect Mrs. Gandhi to dwell on the past but rather to "accentuate the positive."

In recent years there has been little positive to accentuate. Among the divisive issues, which could arise in talks this week, are:

—U.S. irritation over the failure of India to condemn the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan and India's contention that such a step would have been non-productive.

—India's anger over the $3.5 billion sale of U.S. arms, including 40 advanced F-16 fighter-bombers, to Pakistan in the aftermath of the Soviet march into Afghanistan.

—U.S. uneasiness over the traditionally close military relationship between India and the Soviet Union, and Mrs. Gandhi's contention that close ties with Moscow do not preclude equally close ties with Washington and the West.

—A long-festering feud over India's refusal to sign the nuclear non-proliferation treaty and its refusal to place all of its nuclear facilities under international safeguards. The United States has refused to resupply the Tarapur nuclear power plant near Bombay unless India takes those steps.

—Lingering unhappiness in Washington over India's economic policies, despite recent improvements in opportunities for Western investment.

—Unhappiness in New Delhi over U.S. efforts to derail a $5.5 billion concessional loan for India by the International Monetary Fund.

—Indian opposition to the establishment of a U.S. base on the island of Diego Garcia in the Indian Ocean.

Some voice protests at site of proposed city annexation

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Councilman Gordon Marcum II kept trying to remove the three country clubs from inclusion in a proposed annexation move by the city Tuesday, but his motions died for lack of a second from the rest of the council during a meeting that was held in a field at the intersection of Fairgrounds Road and FM 868.

According to state law, one of the public hearings on annexation must be held on site of the land in question. During Tuesday morning's hearing, about 20 persons appeared — most of them the council or city staff. Several residents voiced their opposition to the move over the sound of heavy trucks carrying building materials or oilfield equipment rumbling by or automobiles whizzing past the sandy tract covered with weeds and stickers.

Stan Beard, who lives north of the turnoff to Midland Country Club, said he is the largest landowner in that area and wants to keep his tract for agricultural uses. "It's not a mutual need. I don't need anything from the city," he said.

Later, he noted that while several persons living near the country club want to be annexed, he asked not to be "sucked into it" simply so the others can have city water.

Jim Crowder, president of MCC, reiterated his earlier stand that the country club's stockholders already pay city taxes.

While the strongest objections centered upon annexing the country club areas, next in line were persons who owned land on the east side of County Road 1150. The annexation plan proposes taking in a 660-foot-wide strip on the east side.

Mayor G. Thane Akins explained that by jumping the road and taking in the east side, that part will gain city protection. Without the city's zoning laws in effect on that side of the road, he said residential could go in on one side and heavy industrial on the other side. The latter, then, would ruin the residential area.

The hearing recessed for lunch and later in the Council Chambers at City Hall the council took up the annexation matter again, but didn't settle on what to do. Instead, council members decided to look at the entire proposed area, which runs northeast and east of the city limits, before moving ahead with the annexation ordinance.

"One major issue we've talked to death has to do with the country clubs," said the mayor.

"It's plain and simple," responded Marcum. "The rules of annexation don't cover it. And I'm having a difficult time seeing anything east of County Road 1150."

"The practical matter is the time frame to annex," said Akins. "Someone could have a development started before the city could annex it."

"A year ago, it was a growth situation here," continued Marcum. "But, folks, this is coming to a screeching halt. We can't provide services to the areas we've got."

Under annexation law, the city must provide emergency services to an area immediately upon annexation. Road maintenance follows within 60 days. And capital improvements, such as water and sewer lines, must be started within 2½ years.

Tennessee men arrested in coal fraud

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

A coal fraud involving two Tennessee promoters has bilked at least seven Midland residents out of $160,000, according to a lawyer for the Texas Securities Board, who said an investigation launched in Tennessee has resulted in the arrest of both men.

Janet Mortinson, an enforcement attorney for the state securities board, said Tuesday the promoters, identified as Lou McCellan and David Lucius, both of Memphis, are facing a total of 377 indictments in Shelby County, Tennessee, and an initial court hearing is expected to take place in Memphis the first week in August. The men are currently free on bond.

According to Ms. Mortinson, the scheme revolved around phone calls placed to Midland residents who were told they could purchase deferred-delivery coal contracts for a deposit of $7,000, giving each buyer control of 1,000 tons of coal said to be worth $43,600.

Buyers were promised the coal would be reserved in their names and they could either take delivery or the company, Southern Energy Investments of Memphis, would help them sell the coal for the total liability of their $7,000 deposit.

In addition to phone calls, the men held a three-day seminar at a Midland motel last December.

When $7,000 was mailed to the company, according to Ms. Mortinson, buyers received contracts that did not quite match what they were led to believe at the seminar and over the phone.

The contracts instead said buyers were required to take delivery, that they were in fact liable for the entire $43,600 and that the firm would not help them sell the coal.

Contracts also were worded in such a way that virtual dirt would comply with the specifications outlined in them, a coal expert told Tennessee authorities. And, according to Ms. Mortinson, the market value of the coal was nowhere near what buyers were told.

The alleged scam apparently operated in several states throughout the South during the past two years. A complaint lodged with the Shelby County District Attorney's Office eventually led to the arrest and indictment of the men.

Robert Settles, an investigator for Midland County District Attorny Vern Martin, said his office has been unable to take the case to the grand jury because the seven local victims transacted their business over the phone and would not be able to identify suspects.

"We're looking for people who might have attended the seminar — whether or not they actually bought anything," said Settles.

Anyone with information on the case is asked to call Settles at 682-9481, extension 397. Mortinson can be reached in Houston at (713) 528-6128.

Good, bad tax news foretold

WASHINGTON (AP) — The good news from the Congressional Budget Office is that nearly $130 billion in tax increases and spending cuts being debated in Congress would "arrest the increase" in federal budget deficits now expected to top $100 billion.

The bad news is they won't do much to lower the deficit from year to year. Another round of tax hikes and spending cuts in 1983 may be needed for that.

CBO director Alice Rivlin told the Senate Budget Committee on Tuesday that "It will take another look at the whole budget" to force deficits down and help create a climate for a robust economic recovery.

She made her comments after predicting red ink of $140 billion to $160 billion annually for the next three years.

Efforts to reduce the deficit should be across-the-board, she said, "not excluding defense spending, not excluding the entitlement programs — including Social Security — not excluding" tax increases.

At the White House, deputy press secretary Larry Speakes said Mrs. Rivlin was "unduly pessimistic" about the recovery and also "unduly pessimistic about the impact of a successful budget resolution on the recovery."

But Speakes said that "whatever view is held," it underscores the need to make the spending cuts that were mandated in the budget approved last month.

The Senate has approved a plan to raise taxes by $99 billion over three years and cut spending by about $17.5 billion. A second bill to cut spending by an additional $12.2 billion is pending in the Senate, and both those measures are awaiting action in the House.

She said enactment of that legislation will "arrest the increase" in deficits, which would be "not rising, but not declining."

Mrs. Rivlin appeared before the committee as House Republican Whip Trent Lott accused the Democratic leadership of seeking "nickels and dimes" in savings instead of the $6.5 billion called for for 1983 in the budget Congress approved last week.

"I think it's nigh time we bell this Democratic tom cat and its wild, midnight spending sprees on the town," he said.

Lott spoke as:

—The full House voted 400-0 to save $530 million from veterans' programs over three years, largely by imposing a 0.5 percent mortgage fee on most VA-backed loans. The bill sailed through because it also contains a 7.4 percent cost of living increase for veterans' compensation and pension programs.

—Democrats on the House Banking Committee balked at a Republican plan to save $2 billion over three years, and voted to claim credit for $3 billion in savings from bills the panel cleared several months ago to aid thrift institutions. They also called for $5 million in savings through cuts in Treasury and Housing and Urban Development administrative costs.

State comptroller candidate tells about opponent's wrongs

By VINCE GIORGI
Staff Writer

Republican candidate for state comptroller Mike Richards painted an argument with red, white and blue charts and graphs Monday, charging Democratic incumbent Bob Bullock with rampant mismanagement and waste.

Richards compared growth in the state comptroller's budget to the state's budget and population increases between 1974 and 1981, years Bullock served as the state's chief financial officer and tax collector.

While the state budget grew by 129 percent and population climbed 20 percent, the comptroller's budget ballooned from $16.1 million to $61.8 million, a 282 percent increase, said Richards, who presented his criticisms during an afternoon press conference at Midland Regional Airport.

Mike Richards

Richards also said that with dollar figures adjusted for inflation, Bullock's staff collects fewer tax dollars per employee than their predecessors. Bullock's staff is rife with "patronage" and "political must-hires," he said, while pledging if elected to eliminate through attrition 10 percent of the department's 2505 employees.

"The acid test of the waste of the comptroller's department," according to Richards, is the ratio of tax dollars collected to administrative expenses incurred.

Richards presented a graph showing that in 1981 Bullock's office collected $125 for each dollar spent. Projections for 1983 call for $97 in collections per $1 spent. If projected to 1990, expenses would equal collections, said Richards, who labeled the projections "the Bullock trend that Texas can no longer afford."

But a Bullock campaign aide, Glen Castlebury, labeled Richards "a counterfeit conservative." Castlebury said Richards, as a freshman state senator from Sugarland in 1981, exhibited an unwillingness to vote for spending cuts when he voted against an amendment to cut 5 percent from the state budget.

Castlebury defended Bullock's record, saying the comptroller's growing budget and staff is a result of Bullock's efforts to ensure equitable tax collection and provide prompt service as the state's chief bill-payer.

According to Castlebury, comptroller expenses since 1975 amount to less than one percent of tax collections during that same period.

"I'll guarantee you, any businessman in town would like that record," he said.

However, Richard, who labeled his presentation "The Bullock Cover-up: the record that Bob Bullock does not want to discuss," also criticized the incumbent for "questionable use of state aircraft," improper use of state printing facilities, and what he said is past Bullock support for a corporate income tax and compulsory unionization of state employees.

"Mr. Bullock has been playing this game of charades for eight years, but he can't play it any longer," Richards said. "Electing Bob Bullock is a mistake we cannot afford to make again."

If elected, Richards said he would curb comptroller expenses by decreasing the staff size and decreasing other administrative costs. Richards estimated that trimming 250 people from the comptroller's staff would save $5 million. He also pledged to actively pursue tax collections statewide, saying "there are no sacred cows in Texas."

Richards, who holds a business degree and has served as board chairman of two banks, compared the state's chief financial office to managing finances for the world's 13th largest nation. He stressed the importance of a businesslike approach to the task, declaring himself an independent and a conservative first, a Republican last.

According to a campaign aide, Richards' Midland appearance comes near the middle of a six-week campaign swing through Texas, during which he will visit as many as 30 cities per week.

Hot weather spell may be broken

It looks like Midland's spell of upper 90-degree temperatures and dry climate may be broken sometime tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Today's 30 percent chance of thunderstorms will increase to 50 percent tonight, decreasing back to 30 percent on Thursday.

With no precipitation recorded overnight, the amount of rainfall for the month remains at 3.21 inches and for the year at 9.49 inches.

Somewhat cooler temperatures are expected tonight and Thursday with the low tonight in the upper 60s and the high on Thursday climbing only into the lower 90s.

Winds will be southeasterly tonight at 10-15 mph, shifting to easterly at 5-10 mph Thursday.

Tuesday's high of 98 was eight degrees cooler than the record high of 106, set for that date in 1954. The overnight low of 69 also was eight degrees off the record low of 61, set in 1933.

City Council approves sale of two types of bonds

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

Midland City Council approved resolutions for selling $7 million in general obligation bonds and $3 million in water and sewer revenue bonds during its regular meeting Tuesday in City Hall Council Chambers.

The G.O. bonds were approved by the voters in April and will go for expanding City Hall, remodeling the Public Safety Building and building two fire substations in north Midland.

The revenue bonds will be designated for improvements and additions to the city's water and sewer system.

Meanwhile, Joe Smith with First Southwest Corporation told the council that Midland had received a high rating on the $23 million in revenue bonds to be sold today by the Colorado River Municipal Water District. Of that amount, $20 million will go to construct a sewage disposal system about 15 miles southeast of the city.

Midland received an "Aa" rating from Moody's Investors Services, Inc., and a "AA" rating from Standard & Poor's Corporation, he said.

"This is the highest rating that I'm aware of on bonds like this," he said. "They're practically on a par with general obligation bonds."

G.O. bonds are backed by ad valorem taxes while the water bonds are backed by revenues from the water and sewer department.

For $130,000 the council will be getting a comprehensive study of downtown Midland and future ways to deal with traffic. The money was approved to go to J.T. Dunkin and Associates, Planning Consultants, and Jack Hatchell with the traffic consulting firm of PAWA.

Councilman Steve Davidson said the studies will look at "how we can head off problems." In the past, he said, the council has responded to an immediate problem rather than preparing for it ahead of time.

The council made no decision on a contract with J. "Timber" Floyd, who is negotiating with the city to take the 9 million gallons per day of primary treated effluent and use it for irrigating land.

On a proposal by Westlake Properties, Joint Venture, to dump 2 million gallons of effluent a day into an area that eventually runs into Midland Draw, the council decided to write the Texas Water Commission and request a public hearing. TWC had not scheduled a public hearing on the permit application.

J. Robert Creech asked the council to consider not allowing right turns on red lights in the downtown area, saying that too many pedestrians — including his wife — have been hit.

"The majority of people who cross streets in downtown Midland don't cross at intersections or when the light is green. Midland has become a city. We can't cross the street and kick cans like we used to," remarked Councilman Tom Sloan.

Mayor G. Thane Akins, noting that "pedestrians already have the right of way," said the problem will be taken up in the traffic study approved earlier that day.

In preparation for turning Illinois and Texas streets into one-way thoroughfares this weekend, the council approved putting a row of parking back on those streets in the downtown area. It had been removed a few years ago to handle the increasing amount of traffic.

With a request for a freight loading zone permit coming from Adventure Travel, the council decided to look into the possibility of setting up delivery zones apart from the freight loading areas.

Appointed to the Airport Zoning Commission were Sid Curle, Mary Jane Young and Al McGuire. This group will decide the air space zoning around Midland Regional Airport and Midland Air Park.

Repairs amounting to $8,400 on a First National Bank shuttle bus will be paid by the city. Jim Johnson, MidTran director, explained the bank furnishes the bus for its employees but that MidTran drivers operate it.

One day, other MidTran buses were broken down and the department needed a vehicle to pick up children at a private school and get them home. On that trip, the bus was involved in an accident, he said.

"We had a verbal agreement with the First National Bank to use it for our purposes if it was necessary," said Johnson. But after the accident, the man with the bank who had given the verbal agreement denied it, according to Johnson.

Also approved by the council were settlement of payment to South Texas Construction Co. for various street projects, 11 units to the assessment paving program, a street rebuilding program, advertising for bids for playground equipment at Washington Park and closing of streets for the Eastside Lions Club in connection with the 16th of September celebration.

Suit alleges negligence in fueling private plane

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

The May 2 crash of a light plane on an eastside residential street has resulted in a $473,000 lawsuit against the firm that allegedly pumped the wrong fuel into the prop-driven craft.

Milton Tankersley Jr. Inc. filed suit in state district court earlier this month, alleging Basin Aviation Inc. employees "introduced jet aviation fuel into the fuel system" of Tankersley's piston-powered Piper Navajo — "a vehicle not designed to operate on jet fuel."

The twin-engine craft, piloted by veteran aviator Fred Michna of Midland, was destroyed after making an emergency landing in the 100 block of East Cedar Street — seconds after taking off at 11:37 a.m. from Midland Air Park on a flight to Dallas-Fort Worth.

The plane skidded 800 feet down the street before coming to rest against the curb in front of 404 E. Cedar. Both wings were clipped as the plane grazed a tree and two parked vehicles, narrowly missing several other parked cars. The plane had a wingspan of almost 41 feet and landed on a 30-foot wide street.

No one was injured — including Michna — who was credited by other pilots with a superior piece of flying. "I had about two or three choices," he said at the time. "This looked the best to me."

An investigation by the National Transportation Safety Board later confirmed suspicions that the wrong fuel had caused the engines to quit that Sunday morning, the second such Texas plane crash in a two-week period.

On April 18, an Odessa banker and two other persons were killed when their light plane crashed on take-off in San Antonio. The cause of that crash was listed as a fuel mixup.

Tankersley's suit alleges Basin Aviation was "negligent in not supervising fuel dispensation and servicing Plaintiff's aircraft, and in not employing qualified personnel to dispense fuel into aircraft. Defendant's acts demonstrated a wanton disregard for the rights of others."

The suit seeks $443,000 for loss of the plane, $30,000 for "loss of use" and unspecified exemplary damages. Tankersley is being represented by former City Attorney Brian Martin. Basin officials could not be reached for comment.

Conservative faction disillusioned, feels Reagan ignoring its desires

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Almost two years after they helped install a conservative president and elect conservatives all over the country, leaders of the Moral Majority and other New Right organizations are meeting to plan new crusades with many grumbling that President Reagan has not done enough.

The purpose of Family Forum II, sponsored by the Moral Majority and the Free Congress Foundation, is to teach the 500 participants from 37 states how to influence politics. But a common topic at the first day of the conference Tuesday at the Washington Sheraton Hotel was that Reagan has neglected social issues dear to many conservatives.

"THERE IS a disenchantment with Reagan," said Connaught (Connie) Marshner, chairman of the National Pro-Family Coalition and an organizer of the conference.

"Frankly, there's so much that he has promised that he hasn't done. He said he was strongly for tuition tax credits. He said he was strongly pro-life. He said he was strongly for school prayer.

"And then he got in and said the economy is the problem, and these issues are going to have to be on the back burner."

Marshner, who was chairman of the family policy advisory board of the Reagan-Bush campaign, added, "Reagan's heart is right (but) he's got a palace guard around him — Deaver, Meese, Baker — who don't believe these issues are important."

"That kind of advice," she said, "is going to hurt him (and the congressional candidates he supports) in the November elections."

Other participants were more cautious, stressing that change takes time and that there are limits on what the president can do. Rep. Vin Weber, R-Minn., said he is satisfied with the administration's performance, adding that any fault lies with the Senate leadership, particularly Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr., R-Tenn., in not pressing conservative proposals.

The focus at the conference is on "family issues," and the disenchantment is not so much in fiscal policy as with social issues.

PARTICIPANTS TEND to be economic conservatives, supporting substantial budget cuts and supply-side economics.

But the Moral Majority and similar groups have treated issues of social policy as paramount. They favor prayer in schools and tuition tax credits so parents can better afford to send children to private schools and they oppose abortion and guarantees of civil rights for homosexuals.

These positions frequently are based on fundamentalist religious convictions, and participants in the conference are most upset at lack of leadership in these areas from Reagan.

Gary L. Bauer, a White House liaison with the New Right, defended Reagan at a panel discussion, saying he has pushed for a constitutional amendment to permit school prayer, for tuition tax credits and for restrictions on availability of abortions.

Paul M. Weyrich, president of the Free Congress Foundation, said officials in the administration have been willing to listen to conservative spokesmen.

"We have access running out of our ears," he said. "The problem is that access doesn't always get results."

At one panel discussion, several congressmen discussed the moral issues confronting Congress and included federal deficits among them. Rep. William E. Dannemeyer, R-Calif., explained that deficits posed a moral issue because they cause inflation that weakens the country and its people.

At the panel, Rep. David Michael Staton, R-W.Va., said, "I believe God picks certain people...I believe He's raised Ronald Reagan for this time."

County needs mosquito sprayers

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

While mosquitoes, potholes, ruts and litter are posing problems, Albert Stewart is trying to head off the troubles by increasing his No. 1 resource: people.

"I need some experienced people," said Stewart, head of Midland County's road-and-bridge department.

In particular, Stewart told the Midland County commissioners on Monday he needs trained help to do the ground-level spraying of mosquitoes, which, he said, are "all over" — in and along the draws, in vegetation, lake areas, Greenwood and in a housing development north of OIME and U.S. Highway 80 between Midland and Odessa.

Stewart has been operating the county's mobile Buffalo sprayer for killing of adult mosquitoes since Marion Floyd ceased being the county's vector-control officer earlier this year. The county hires H&W Spraying Inc. for aerial larvicide spraying to control mosquito larvae.

"Right now, I don't feel I have anyone I can turn loose on it," Stewart said of ground-level spraying. "It's just one of those situations where you're locked in."

Bill Harral, the county's consulting engineer, noted that additional help would free Stewart to do more supervising and "to do this, that and the other."

"He needs a right-hand assistant, foreman, whatever you want to call it," said Commissioner C. DeWayne Davis. "He tries to do it all. No man can do it (all) to the satisfaction of the constituency."

Davis recommended that the county hire "someone to do the mosquito bit." And the commissioners considered seeking an entomologist to head up the vector-control work and to fill in on other county maintenance work when not assaulting the pests.

Outside of mosquito control, Stewart said his department has been zeroing in on road maintenance, ditch cleaning, laying metal culverts, "considerable patching" of road and picking up "tons of trash." The department is responsible for maintaining the approximately 650 miles of county roads in the four commissioners' precincts.

Currently, the road-and-bridge department, which works 24 regular employees and has hired six summer helpers, is four workers short of its quota, Stewart said.

Bush's brother pulls out

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

HARTFORD, Conn. — Prescott S. Bush, in a dramatic turnabout Tuesday, dropped out of the U.S. Senate race after admitting he probably would have lost the Connecticut seat to Democrat Toby Moffett in November even if he had beaten Sen. Lowell P. Weicker in a Republican primary.

"We might win the primary, but winning the primary and then losing a Republican Senate seat would be sort of a hollow situation," Bush said, in effect agreeing with what many political polls have said of his chances of wining. Money was also a factor in his decision. Press secretary David Blee said Bush, who has already spent almost $1 million, didn't think he could raise the $500,000 needed to wage a primary and still have enough money to finance a general election campaign.

"We would have won the battle in September, but we wouldn't have won the war in November," Blee said.

Bush, 59, a Greenwich businessman, dismissed claims that the White House and his brother, Vice President George Bush, had urged him to withdraw.

"There was no pressure from anybody in Washington," he said. "My brother stayed out of this thing and said, 'Whatever you decide, I will support you.'"

Bush's withdrawal sets up what is expected to be an intense struggle between Weicker and Moffett, a four-term congressman, for the Connecticut Senate seat.

Bush had kept party leaders and reporters guessing about his plans since Saturday's GOP convention, when he earned 35 percent of the votes, enough to enter a primary.

The drama was heightened Sunday night, when NBC News reported that Bush would withdraw from the race.

Some readers were 'menaced' by comment attributed to Dennis

DENVER (AP) — Readers don't mind if Dennis the Menace plays in the dirt and balks at the bathtub, but some of them want the ragamuffin character to keep his language clean.

A line spoken by Dennis in a comic strip published by newspapers on July 14 drew complaints.

Dennis, with hands in the pockets of his tiny bib overalls, said to some friends as they walked from a movie theater, "That was a dirty trick...killin' off the bad guy while I was in takin' a leak."

Field Newspaper Syndicate of Irvine, Calif., which distributes Dennis the Menace, had sent along a milder alternate caption. While many editors used the second version, some apparently overlooked the milder choice, which read, "That was a dirty trick...killin' off the bad guy while I was in the bathroom."

The Laramie, Wyo., Daily Boomerang carried the first version. A few days later, the Boomerang carried an apology to readers saying, "...but apparently Dennis couldn't resist the temptation to put one over on the editor. We'll keep an eye on him in the future."

Leighton McLaughlin, Field syndicate editor, said Tuesday in a telephone interview that the originator of Dennis the Menace, Hank Ketcham, wrote the caption in the form that drew some objections.

"We talked to Hank. He contended times are changing. We felt perhaps Dennis was an exception to that progression," McLaughlin said.

It was finally decided to offer the alternate caption in the same mail, at the same time as the original, McLaughlin said.

Dan Goodwin

CHICAGO (AP) — Human fly Dan Goodwin will travel to Caracas, Venezuela, to scale two skyscrapers in his "first legal officially sanctioned climb," according to promoters.

Mike Powers of Jam Productions, which handles publicity for the man known as "Spider Dan," said Goodwin will be paid an undisclosed amount to climb one building Saturday and another on Aug. 6.

Both structures are about 50 stories tall, Powers said.

Goodwin, 26, won fame last year with his two climbs of Chicago skyscrapers. He scaled the 110-story, 1,454-foot-tall Sears Tower, the world's tallest building, as well as the 100-story John Hancock Center.

Richard Burton

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Richard Burton, who entered St. John's Hospital last week for re-examination of a chronic lower back problem, has been released, a hospital spokeswoman said.

The 55-year-old Welsh actor underwent surgery in April to correct the problem, which forced him to drop out of a revival of the musical, "Camelot."

Burton has starred in numerous films, including "My Cousin Rachel," "Alexander the Great," "Cleopatra," "Who's Afraid of Virginia Woolf," "The Taming of the Shrew" and "Equus."

He entered the hospital on July 21 and was released Tuesday morning, said the spokeswoman.

Miss Evdokimova, an American citizen, is prima ballerina with both the London Festival Ballet and Berlin Ballet.

"We'll have residences in New York, London and Berlin," Gregori said, noting that he lives in New York.

The wedding will be at the estate of friends on Long Island.

They met in 1980 during a season by the Berlin Ballet at the Metropolitan Opera House. Gregori was playing double bass in the orchestra.

DEARBORN, Mich. (AP) — The Henry Ford Museum has added a Volkswagen beetle to its collection of historic automobiles.

Volkswagen of America president James McLernon presented the 1949 black car to museum president Harold Skramstad at a brief ceremony Tuesday.

The beetle, one of the first to be imported into the United States from Germany after World War II, needs some minor interior restoration, museum officials said. It will be the first VW on display at the suburban Detroit museum.

Congress invited to 'trashy' luncheon

WASHINGTON (AP) — Members of Congress were invited to lunch today on crab quiche, fresh fruit, vegetable salad with yogurt dressing, cold cuts, cheese and raspberry shortcake — all fresh from the garbage bins of neighborhood markets.

Sponsors of the congressional luncheon say they feed the poor with thrown-out food every day, and want to dramatize a House resolution urging federal agencies to make surplus food available to the hungry.

"We've raised scavenging to an art form," Mitch Snyder of the Community for Creative Nonviolence said Tuesday as he stood among boxes of produce being screened for the congressional luncheon.

Snyder said the group scours the city's supermarket and produce market Dumpsters and trash cans to find the food it prepares for daily meals for the poor.

For today's luncheon, fresh cherries were the topping on the fruit salad.

"Look at them — perfect!" said Carole Fennelly, another member of the group, pulling a huge bowl of gleaming dark cherries from a refrigerator at the 12-room inner-city apartment used by the group.

"We found three cases of them sitting on top of a supermarket Dumpster this morning," she said.

Some of the cherries were spoiled, but the volunteers culled and washed more than enough good ones for the expected luncheon crowd of 150.

She picked up a half-peck basket and pulled back a green tissue covering to display plump, white mushrooms packed inside. "They're not perfect; they can't sell them; they throw them out."

On the floor were other boxes of produce — tomatoes, huge peppers, cauliflower, broccoli, lettuce. A dozen 50-pound sacks of onions sat on the floor beside several baskets of yams.

"We picked up 1,000 pounds of onions this week and 1,000 pounds last week at a produce market," said Ms. Fennelly.

Sixteen cartons full of potato chips were piled against the wall. There was nothing wrong with them; the cartons found in the trash had been returned to the plant from retail stores and couldn't be sold.

Four days a week the group of 20 volunteers uses a church kitchen. On other days, they cook on the apartment stove. "We feed 750 to 1,000 people a day, seven days a week," Snyder said.

Even the volunteers' cars are discards, "from people who are buying new cars," Snyder says, adding that the volunteers scrounge clothing and anything else they need.

"We even found a place that throws out cases of beer from time to time," Snyder said. "Naturally, we aren't telling anybody where we find the beer."

A few weeks ago, members of the group went to Rep. Mary Rose Oakar, D-Ohio, to talk about getting a resolution before Congress to encourage people to do something about getting waste and surplus food products to the needy.

'Instant captions' due for news show

WASHINGTON (AP) — Deaf television viewers around the country will soon be able to watch instant captions on live broadcasts of ABC's "World News Tonight," the National Captioning Institute says.

The project, which will begin late this year, will allow the deaf who have purchased a special decoder to read the news on their TV screen at the same time other viewers are listening to the broadcast.

Institute officials say the significance of the new project is its ability to produce captions as the live program is in progress.

Jane Edmondson, a spokesman for the institute that was founded in 1979 to advance the use of closed-captioning technology, said the Department of Education is funding the project through a $1.3 million contract.

Closed captioning is considered "closed" because the captions or subtitles are embedded inside a TV signal in such a way that they're invisible on a normal TV set. That is why the deaf who want to view ABC's evening news program must purchase a special decoder.

The closed process was developed several years ago in part to avoid the problem of distracting the regular audience with open captioning, a procedure that flashes captions on a TV screen for all viewers to see.

'Last November, the institute and ABC took the first major step toward instant captioning by reducing the lag time to 30 minutes.

It has about 4,300 undergraduate and 1,300 graduate students.

Library has 'ticket' for overdue books

BALTIMORE (AP) — The city library is trying a new pitch to get borrowers to return overdue books — offering discounts on tickets to a Baltimore Orioles baseball game.

The Enoch Pratt Free Library, which ends each year with about 60,000 overdue books, says it will issue coupons good for $1 off the cost of a ticket to a ballgame in exchange for the return of any book, overdue or not.

The program starts today and runs through Aug. 4. The discount applies to the Orioles' Aug. 23 game with the Toronto Blue Jays.

The library began a publicity campaign in April to bring in overdue books.

Hijackers will be punished

PEKING (AP) — Five men who tried to hijack a Chinese airliner have been taken into custody and will be punished according to law, the official Xinhua news agency reported today.

The Xinhua report did not say what charges would be brought against them, but presumably they could be tried under laws that provide a maximum penalty of death for counter-revolutionary crimes.

Some of the passengers who spoke with reporters about the incident had said at least two of the hijackers appeared dead after being bludgeoned by crew members and passengers wielding mops, bottles and umbrellas. Xinhua's initial report said they were captured alive after the hijacking Sunday.

Xinhua did not report the state of the hijackers' injuries from the struggle, which passengers said broke out just after two engines of the four-propeller, Soviet-made Ilyushin-18 ran out of fuel. Passengers said the hijackers later were dragged out feet first.

They added that the sky pirates demanded to fly to Taiwan, seat of the rival Nationalist Chinese government.

Xinhua said the civil aviation administration of China has decided to commend the crew and passengers who fought the hijackers for being "firm, brave, resourceful and steadfast."

Death toll reaches 307

TOKYO (AP) — Rescuers pulled 32 more corpses from mountains of mud today, raising to 307 the death toll from floods and landslides triggered by torrential rains which lashed southwestern Japan last week, police said.

More than 5,000 soldiers, police and firefighters continued digging through rubble and muddy debris for 43 people still missing.

The city of Nagasaki, which suffered the most damage, received a condolence message from Pope John Paul II, who visited Buddhist Japan's most Christian city during an Asian tour early last year.

"My heart is filled with sorrow at the news of disaster in Nagasaki," read the pontiff's message to Cardinal Asajiro Satowaki of the Nagasaki Catholic church. "I express my sympathy to all sufferers and pray God will comfort the dear citizens in Nagasaki."

The city of 447,000 in the hills 560 miles southwest of Tokyo listed 272 dead and 41 missing as of late today.

Twenty-three inches of rain fell on Nagasaki from Friday night to early Saturday, ending a two-month drought with flash flooding and mud slides throughout the area.

Trains and streetcars in Nagasaki began running Tuesday after a six-day halt, but 30,000 households still were without fuel and 19,000 homes had no water despite all-night repair operations.

Nagasaki officials said the city mobilized 53 dump trucks today to remove an "inestimable volume" of rotting garbage piled on residental streets.

Latest official figures showed 533 Nagasaki houses were destroyed by the deluges and 42,000 homes were flooded.

Mayor Hitoshi Motoshima told city officials Nagasaki must struggle to return to normal as it did after the atomic bombing 37 years ago. Nagasaki was the second city, following Hiroshima, to suffer a U.S. atomic bomb attack in the closing days of World War II.

Damage to commercial property in Nagasaki was estimated at $389 million and in nearby Kumamoto state at $124 million. Officials said there was still no monetary figure for damage to residential property.

Mitsubishi Heavy Industries Ltd., a major heavy machinery company with a shipyard in Nagasaki, today donated $196,078 to Nagasaki state and the same amount to the city to help flood victims.

Now, it is lobster's turn

ROCKLAND, Maine (AP) — One state celebrates the return of the buzzards, others hold frog races. So why not have an international lobster race?

On Aug. 7, a field of competitive crustaceans will vie for the title of world's fastest lobster in a specially designed tank at the Maine Seafoods Festival in Rockland.

That, incidentally, is also the location of the world's largest lobster-boiling pot.

The Downeast Chapter of the Cystic Fibrosis Foundation is sponsoring the event to raise money for research.

Handgun ban effective today in San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A city handgun ban took effect today, and while critics said it would only encourage San Franciscans to swap pistols for rifles, sponsors said it's smart to keep handguns out of reach of both criminals and law-abiding citizens.

Citizens have 90 days to turn in their guns or face a 90-day jail term. Residents may still own rifles and shotguns, and the ban allows shopkeepers, private detectives, police officers and others who show a need for their pistols to keep them.

Three lawsuits challenging the ban are pending. Plaintiffs include the National Rifle Association, four city supervisors and a 77-year-old woman who says she's afraid to leave her home.

Mayor George Moscone and Supervisor Harvey Milk were shot to death by in 1978 Dan White, a former policeman and ex-supervisor who used a handgun. He is serving a seven-year, eight-month manslaughter sentence.

The city-county Board of Supervisors voted 6-5 on June 30 to enact the ban. Supervisor Carol Ruth Silver, one of the dissenters, said she'll put her handgun in storage outside the city but will buy a shotgun.

"My home will not be defenseless. I want every criminal in town to know that," she said Tuesday. "I will tell you that all of the bums and all of the teenage crooks and muggers who hang out in my neighborhood will not give up their guns."

City Attorney Don Kates said "there are a lot of elderly residents in the city that are not going to turn in their handguns." The 77-year-old lawsuit plaintiff, for example, needs the gun to defend herself, he said. She is identified as Jane Doe and involved in the lawsuit filed by the four supervisors and about 30 citizens.

Other plaintiffs represent a "broad spectrum" of San Francisco residents, including a black minister, homosexuals, Hispanic activists and blue-collar workers, he said.

National Rifle Association members conoend state law pre-empts the city in firearm regulation, spokesman John Atkins said in Washington.

"We find it very doubtful that very many San Franciscans are going to turn in their handguns," he said.

District Attorney Arlo Smith has said he won't prosecute anyone until the state appeals court decides whether the ordinance in constitutional.

Mayor Dianne Feinstein, who was given a gun when she succeeded Moscone in office, plans to hand her .38-caliber Smith & Wesson over to Police Chief Cornelius Murphy on Friday — well within the 90-day grace period provided by the ordinance. No compensation is given to gun owners who turn in their weapons.

Ms. Feinstein proposed the ban this spring after a similar measure took effect in Morton Grove, Ill.

Delegate won't reply

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The chief U.S. delegate to the UNESCO world culture conference says she won't reply now to a French attack, but her delegation will defend American values against any further criticism during the meeting.

Jean Gerard, the American ambassador to the U.N. Educational, Scientific and Cultural Organization, said in a policy speech to the two-week conference Tuesday that she hopes other nations will try to avoid confrontation "in the interest of the serious considerations of an important agenda before us."

"I have no intention of responding to criticism at this time," she said. "In the course of the conference, however, my delegation will not listen to attacks on our values, whether formulated in ideological terms or in terms of shopworn, mindless cliches, without defending the principles in which we so profoundly believe."

Ms. Gerard added these comments to the speech she had prepared after French Culture Minister Jack Lang denounced the mass communications industry, with clear references to the United States. He charged the industry "bombards" the world with Western culture to promote one style of music, one way of dressing and one form of entertainment.

"We struggle against this form of intellectual and financial imperialism," he said, and declared it is time to "decolonize radio and television networks."

Lang also praised European nations that stood up to a "powerful nation" — meaning the United States — in the dispute over the Siberian natural gas pipeline. France, Britain, West Germany and Italy have defied President Reagan's ban on shipments to the Soviet Union of equipment manufactured outside the United States under American license and with U.S. technology.

Allen Weinstein, vice chairman of the U.S. delegation, said in an interview that the Americans hope the 119-nation conference would do nothing to promote the new "world information order" sought by Third World governments in Africa, Asia and Latin America and by UNESCO Director-General Amadou Mahtar M'Bow of Senegal.

"We will be defending the rights of free mass media as an imperative," Weinstein said. "We will not find ourselves in a position of accepting restraints on the cultural system of any free society."

Developing nations complain that they are dependent on Western news agencies which they charge ignore their social needs and concentrate on unfavorable news. They want to replace Western news agencies with national and regional agencies.

"It is the industrialized capitalistic states who, with a tyrannical rod, rule the information agencies, the publicity enterprises, cinema and television," Mozambique Culture Minister Luis Bernardo Howanna charged in his policy speech.

Bustin says that at first she wanted to kill the IRA guerilla who triggered the explosion, but later realized, "I would be lowering myself down to his level if I did."

Nicaragua extends state of emergency

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist Sandinista government said Tuesday it has extended for six months a state of emergency suspending individual and press rights because of increased fighting with insurgents along the border with Honduras.

Sergio Ramirez Mercado, a member of the ruling government junta, said 84 Nicaraguans and 23 insurgents have died in recent fighting near the northeastern border region with Honduras. He did not specify when the clashes occurred.

Ramirez said the Sandinista government had extended the state of emergency, declared March 15, to facilitate dealing with what he called the "systematic aggression of the counterrevolutionaries."

The Nicaraguan regime has charged the United States with organizing an impending invasion of the country, a charge U.S. officials have denied.

It also claims that the United States and Honduras are supporting anti-government rebels who fled the country after the Sandinista guerrillas ousted the late President Anastasio Somoza in July 1979.

Ramirez repeated Nicaraguan condemnation of Honduran military exercises near the Nicaraguan border, in which 30 U.S. Air Force personnel are flying equipment runs in a two-week operation.

Panama's National Guard command also criticized the operations Tuesday, saying they were staged with support from U.S. bases in Panama, thereby violating provisions of the 1978 Panama Canal treaties.

"Independently of Honduras' right to solve its own internal problems, the United States of America has no right to use its forces stationed in the Republic of Panama for any other objective than those agreed upon in the treaties; namely the protection and defense of the canal," said Col. Roberto Diaz Herrera, co-chairman of the U.S.-Panama joint military command.

The Pentagon has said the joint operation, code-named Combined Movement, was designed "to practice and evaluate movement control and communications procedures in deployment activities."

Male prostitute tried to bribe Trestrail

LONDON (AP) — A male prostitute tried three years ago to extort $3,500 from Commander Michael Trestrail, Queen Elizabeth II's personal bodyguard who resigned this month after admitting he had a homosexual relationship, Trestrail's lawyer said today.

Sir David Napley said the man who was having an occasional affair with Trestrail threatened to expose their relationship in the press unless the police officer paid the money.

Confirming a report in The Sun newspaper, Sir David said: "It is correct that the male prostitute with whom Mr. Trestrail occasionally had a relationship did endeavor to blackmail him three years ago, when he discovered the nature of his employment."

"I think the blackmailer might have been suggesting that he had some pictures," said Sir David. "But as far as I know he didn't have any. Certainly no one has ever seen any."

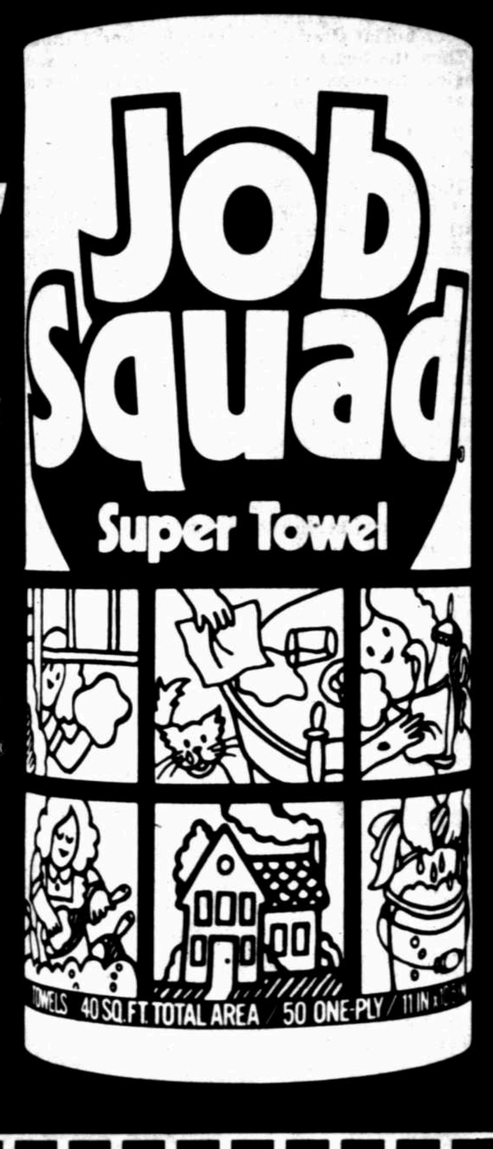

Trestrail, 51, refused to pay the money, and the blackmailer did not carry out his threat at that time, the lawyer said.

The lawyer would not identify the alleged extortionist.

Professional pot-hunters plunder Southwest Indian ruins

EDITOR'S NOTE — Planes fly over the Indian lands of the Southwest, scouting for burial sites where artifacts worth thousands of dollars are buried. Then the bulldozers come in, desecrating sacred ground, turning archeological treasures to ruins. It's a big business and law enforcement officials are striving desperately to cope with it.

By MATT MYGATT

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Professional looters are plundering Indian ruins in the Southwest, digging for artifacts that can bring thousands of black market dollars, leaving behind desecration and desolation.

Most know just what to look for — ancient pots adorned with geometric designs and stylized animal and human forms. Using radios, airplanes, special probes and bulldozers, they turn the sites into war zones, pocked with holes and littered with bones from burial sites considered sacred by Indians.

"It's hard to make sense out of what the sites looked like," says Dr. Dee Green, Southwest regional archeologist for the U.S. Forest Service. "What you find is human bones scattered around from desecration of graves. It is a rather irreverent activity."

Irreverent, but profitable. Marian Rodee, curator of collections with the University of New Mexico's Maxwell Museum of Anthropology, estimates that the pots sell from $5,000 to $10,000 each. Some have been traced as far as Germany and Japan.

Indian leaders chastise the federal government for not doing enough. With an estimated 1.5 million burial sites in the region, tribal officials are desperately trying to guard those on land they control.

DELFIN LOVATO, chairman of the All Indian Pueblo Council, says the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management are routinely allowing diggers posing as hikers onto Indian land. "I don't think enough is being done by state and federal government," he says. "They need more personnel and we need stronger prosecution of these people."

Many of the big sites in southwestern New Mexico are on private property — artifacts can be removed from them with the owner's permission. But more are on public land, and protecting them from cunning, well-equipped artifact hunters isn't easy.

George Gruler, director of law enforcement for the Forest Service's Southwest region, says looters often monitor law enforcement radio frequencies and scout for ruins with airplanes. Some diggers have special probes to feel in the ruins. Some dig under tents with false bottoms. Others simply attack the sites with backhoes and bulldozers, destroying its archeological value.

"The buildings and bones are torn up — everything is just destroyed and spit out the back of a bulldozer," Mrs. Rodee says.

In the rare instances the purloiners are caught, it's hard to prove the pots were taken illegally. The best way is to catch them in the act. But, notes U.S. Attorney Bill Lutz of Albuquerque, it's impossible to watch all the sites 24 hours a day.

MOST ARTIFACTS — bone awls, arrowheads, seed cups, baskets, ceremonial masks, turquoise — are of some value. But looters particularly treasure decorated Mimbres pots going back 700-800 years. Found mainly in southwestern New Mexico, they are sold all over the world.

The vessels may have been used in religious ceremonies, food storage, trading or decoration. They often were placed in graves. "We have found some of the more elaborate ones buried with children," Mrs. Rodee says.

The pots usually go from the sites to dealers in Santa Fe, Scottsdale, Ariz., New York and Los Angeles. The dealers sell them to art collectors.

Mrs. Rodee worries about the archeological information lost in the process. She notes that ancient Indian cultures had no written records and the material on the pots is their history.

"They probably don't care about the culture. They just think the pots are pretty and will go up in value," she says. "The beauty of an article is only part of it. We want information on how people lived."

The Archaeological Resource Protection Act of 1979 prohibits removal of artifacts from public land or Indian land without first obtaining a permit from the federal land manager or tribe. The law also increased the penalties — a first offense can bring up to two years imprisonment and a fine of $20,000 going up to five years and $100,000 for subsequent violations.

CIVIL PENALTIES can also be assessed up to twice the value of the artifacts and double the cost of restoration and repair of the site.

Mrs. Rodee says the law has made the looters more careful. But Green says that while there are fewer weekend pot hunters, including those who innocently dig up interesting-looking objects, the serious looters are still at it because of the money involved.

"We've had information that three fellows over one weekend made $80,000," Gruler says. "We can't substantiate this stuff. But we don't doubt it."

Gruler says many diggers, some of whom have criminal records, carry weapons. "A lot of them have said we'd have to shoot it out with them," he says.

Gruler says one answer is more men and more money.

The Forest Service in the Southwest region has nine special agents who are criminal investigators, but their duties cover a wide area including fire investigation and timber theft. The Bureau of Land Management has a separate staff of investigators.

"NONE OF US has enough people so we try to help each other as much as we can," Gruler says.

Pete Laudeman, Las Cruces, N.M., district archeologist for the BLM, suggests that the marketplace may be the ultimate control.

Library group to accept donated books

The Friends of the Midland County Public Library, which annually puts on a used-book sale to benefit the library, will be accepting donated books and periodicals for its 14th annual sale from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Wednesdays in the Lancaster Garden Center, 1705 W. Indiana Ave., just behind the Museum of the Southwest.

"We'll be glad to accept all donations," said Mary Mann, a Friends board member. In particular, she cited the need for paperbacks and fiction books.

The annual sale is set Oct. 8-10 in the Midland County Exhibit Building.

Mrs. Mann and Mary Hughes will be working — accepting, sorting, and storing — the books at the old Lancaster House.

In recent years, books have been stored in the old American Legion Hall just behind the downtown Midland County Public Library. However, the hall soon is to be razed in a downtown building program, and books there are to be put in storage elsewhere.

President despairs of budget

By JAMES GERSTENZANG

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan has thrown up his hands in despair when it comes to balancing the federal budget.

His support for a constitutional amendment requiring a balanced federal budget — just as Congress is wrestling with a deficit-plagued budget — indicates that both are unable to voluntarily produce such a document.

Candidate Reagan was sharply critical in the 1980 presidential campaign of Jimmy Carter's failure to balance the budget.

An Analysis

Carter said in 1976 that he intended to bring spending and income into balance if elected.

When candidate Reagan unveiled his economic program during the 1980 presidential campaign, in a speech in Chicago, he set 1982 as the target year for balancing the federal budget.

That slipped back to 1984. Today, no one at the White House shows any expectation of meeting that date.

Still, the president who is now the architect of a budget that foresees a record $100 billion deficit, talks earnestly about a balanced budget.

Achieving one, he says, "is like protecting your virtue. You just have to learn to say no."

Evidently, without the Constitution telling him he must say no, he is saying, well, yes. But he is saying it less than his predecessors.

"We have only begun to wean ourselves from the long misery of overtaxing, overspending, and the great myth that our national nanny knows best," the president said recently at a rally on the steps of the Capitol.

"We should go further in reducing tax rates and making the whole system fair and simple for everyone, but before we can do that we must correct and control a budget system that has run amok."

"It seems to me that Americans are saying 'no more ifs, ands, buts or maybes. We want an amendment to the United States Constitution making balanced budgets the law of this land and we want it now,'" the president said to the thousands of guests at the rally that was called to add steam to the drive for the amendment proposal.

The president's audience was enthusiastic. But they lost some of their spirit as Reagan talked on, despite the oppressiveness of midday heat. Reagan trimmed his remarks as he spoke, but he still talked for 18 minutes in weather that forced dozens of members of Congress sharing the dais with him to shed their suit coats.

Among the thousands of people who sweated out the rally on the steps of the Capitol were 22 high school students from Spain, who were touring Washington.

Democrat wants race to focus on economics

Hearst Feature Service

FALL RIVER, Mass. — Democratic Rep. Barney Frank is working mightily to make the contest against GOP Rep. Margaret Heckler a national referendum on Reaganomics and the punitive economic policies he says it has fostered.

Heckler, who is on the must-save priority list of the White House, insists the race has little to do with Reaganomics but instead with her own record as an independent, constituent-oriented member of Congress for 16 years.

Frank contends he has succeeded in his first goal: to tie Heckler to President Reagan's budget cuts and the pain they have inflicted on such poor areas as Fall River, where unemployment has soared to 13.6 percent compared to 8.7 percent a year ago.

Now he must get better known himself in the southern working class areas, court the voters in the middle third of the district around Attleboro and hold his own base around Newton and Brookline.

Heckler must change the subject from Reaganomics and she knows it.

She is talking about the "family issues" at stake, to alert conservative Democratic ethnics here and in the Irish and Italian areas in Newton to Frank's bachelor status, to remind them that as a Catholic her stand on abortion is different from his. She will fight to hold onto the considerable Jewish support she has had before.

And, after the mid-September primaries, Heckler will begin a $500,000 media campaign to attack Frank's legislative record as a tax-and-spend maniac.

She isn't expected to endorse Reaganomics, now or then. Instead, she will try to paint Frank as the kind of Democrat who got the country into its current economic mess.

The Heckler-Frank race is one of five in which incumbents face each other. It apparently will be the most tightly contested, the heaviest funded — and probably the hardest hitting.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON

Lots of licorice may increase blood pressure

Dear Dr. Solomon: I used to eat licorice by the ton when I was a kid, and I still have it as an occasional treat. Recently I heard someone say on the radio that it may be harmful. Say it ain't so! — Doug, Chicago, Ill.

Dear Doug: Licorice consumed in very large amounts may deplete the body of potassium and lead to high blood pressure. Therefore, eating it by the ton is not a good idea. Like so many other things that we enjoy in life, moderation is the key.

Dear Solomon: I have been told that my daughter is allergic to milk, but I don't know exactly what that means. For example, is it still possible for me to give her ice cream? — Mrs. T.A., San Francisco.

Dear Mrs. A.: As you suggest in your letter, milk may be found as an ingredient in a number of foods, and parents of milk-allergic children should get into the habit of checking the labels of the products they buy to see what they contain. For example, baked goods, chocolate, creamed soups, puddings, and salad dressings may all contain milk.

Some allergic children may be able to tolerate the small amounts of milk present in such foods, but this would have to be determined by a physician who is familiar with the child and the extent of his or her allergy.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father is pretty much housebound these days because he has arthritis and can't walk very well. He lives in a building for senior citizens, and all the tenants were given leaflets that gave them advice on diets. One thing it said was to make certain to get enough vitamin D because many older people do not get enough sunlight. The only thing I've ever heard about vitamin D is that it is in milk. Can't you get it from other foods? — Clara, Atlanta, Ga.

Dear Clara: A number of foods contain vitamin D, but vitamin D-fortified milk is an excellent source. Other foods include salmon, sardines, and herring, as well as egg yolks and organ meats. Before your father drastically changes his diet, however, he should check with his doctor to determine if he has any medical condition that would preclude the use of any of these foods.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A lot of noise is made abut taking vitamins and eating correctly so that you will receive the proper vitamins. Isn't this drummed into us by advertising so that we will purchase vitamins and make a lot of people rich? No other period of history placed such importance on vitamins and nutrition. — L.C., N.Y.

Dear L.C.: Proper vitamin intake is very important to insure proper growth, development, and maintenance of our bodies. It is not necessary, unless prescribed by a physician to take additional vitamins, but it is necessary to eat properly so that we receive the proper vitamins.

For Ms. O.S. (Chicago, Ill.): The majority of patients whom I have treated for stopping smoking did not gain weight. This was accomplished beause of the special diet that not only took away the craving for cigarettes, by slowly releasing nicotine from the blood, but also gave you less calories than your body burned. The result was that you could actually loose a few pounds at the same time you stopped smoking if you so desired.

AM stations begin broadcasting in stereo after government OK

WASHINGTON (AP) — A handful of AM stations across the country are broadcasting in stereo, just days after the government cleared the way for them to start competing head-on with FM stations for the music-listening audience.

"I think it's here to stay," said Phil Lerza, the chief engineer for San Francisco's KFRC-AM, which turned on its stereo system Saturday morning.

"We've spent all weekend going crazy (promoting) it," added Kim Curry, the program director at KTSA-AM in San Antonio, Texas. "It's a godsend for us, because now we're finally going back into competition with FM stations."

Labor unions may choose early runner

Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — AFL-CIO President Lane Kirkland Tuesday stoutly defended the precedent-breaking concept of his 15-million member labor amalgamation endorsing a presidential candidate prior to the 1984 Democratic primaries.

The most effective way for organized labor to participate in the electoral process, said Kirkland, is for the AFL-CIO to muster its massive strength behind a single candidate prior to the national convention.

The concept is one that was opposed over many years by Kirkland's predecessor, the late George Meany.

Kirkland said the decision will be made, possibly in December, 1983, at a meeting of the AFL-CIO's General Board, where all 101 affilate unions will be represented. Using a system of per capita weighted voting, the members of the board will be asked whether they wish to endorse a candidate.

A two-thirds vote of the unions' membership will be required before the AFL-CIO can endorse a presidential candidate.

"If we don't get a consensus," said Kirkland, "our unions will be free to do what they want."

But the AFL-CIO president added that "our effectiveness depends" on unifying labor's forces behind a single candidate.

"I expect there will be several candidates — all of whom would be friendly to our point of view and who would take steps to get the country moving again," said Kirland. "There is a strong feeling that labor should get involved in the primaries in an active and united way. We have made the decision to set up a procedure to endorse a candidate prior to the primaries."

He conceded, however, that it might be difficult to choose one candidate from the ranks of the Democratic hopefuls. At this point, the field includes Senators Edward Kennedy of Massachusetts, John Glenn of Ohio, Alan Cranston of California, Gary Hart of Colorado and Ernest Hollings of South Carolina, former Vice President Walter Mondale of Minnesota and former Governor Reuben Askew of Florida.

In 1980, labor was bitterly split between Kennedy and President Carter during their battle for the presidential nomination. The early favorites for labor's backing next time are Kennedy and Mondale; among the least likely to win an AFL-CIO endorsement are Glenn and Hart, neither of whom has the all-out labor support record of Kennedy and Mondale.

Kirkland denied, however, that labor's effectiveness would be impaired if it threw its weight behind a candidate who then lost the nomination.

Kirkland recalled that some unions opposed President Johnson's 1964 presidential bid without impairing their influence with Johnson.

Providing the guns

A Heritage Foundation analyst says in a new study that even the United States military buildup advocated by President Ronald Reagan will not close the gap in military preparedness between this nation and the Soviet Union.

Furthermore, says defense expert Robert Foelber, cutting the current defense budget "will assure U.S. military inferiority through the 1980s and place the security of the U.S. in the hands of Moscow."

Criticizing defense budget cutters in the Congress, Dr. Foelber said, "So far the FY 1983 defense budget debate has focused almost exclusively on the economics of defense. It is time now to consider the budget in terms of military requirements, stable deterrence and the realities of the Soviet threat. As they stand, the administration defense budgets cannot reverse the West's military decline."

Yet the Congress is cutting the defense budget almost indiscriminately, Dr. Foelber argues. Of the $8.7 billion in cuts approved so far in the Senate Authorization Bill for fiscal year 1983, over $5 billion is the result of reductions in weapons procurement, research and development funding, and operations and maintenance.

Since 1960, Soviet spending on weapons procurement, research and development, and related military construction has grown annually at a 4 percentage rate. Military investment by the United States, meanwhile, declined every year but two from 1962 to 1976, excluding outlays necessitated by Vietnam.

From 1976 to 1980, investment outlays grew in the U.S. — but only at 1.7 percent a year. Soviet weapons spending surpassed that of the U.S. in 1967 and in the decade of 1971-1981 exceeded that of the United States by $440 billion. In 1981, Soviet spending on weapons development and procurement was twice that of the U.S.

"In pursuit of the military superiority consistent with their overall political objectives, Soviet leaders have put their nation's economy on a semi-mobilized war footing, devoting close to 15 percent of Soviet GNP (gross national product) to defense ... at the same time the U.S. balks at raising defense spending to 6.3 percent of GNP."

In a recent newsletter U.S. Sen. John Tower noted that "the defense portion of the fiscal year 1983 budget is undeniably large, with spending projected to be $215.9 billion. But its merit should not be judged merely on its size. The validity of the budget proposal must be determined by the contribution it makes to our nation's ability to meet its defense needs, and the extent to which it uses the taxpayers' money efficiently."

Even in a period of economic uncertainty such as the one the U.S. is currently experiencing, defense needs have to be addressed, as socially distasteful as they are. As Dr. Foelber notes, "Soviet military power, if not immediately countered, could well destroy the basis for any 'free' economy at all."

Danger for travelers

The U.S. Embassy in Mexico City is most concerned about United States' citizens traveling Mexico's Highway 15, the main West Coast artery through the states of Sonora, Sinaloa and Nayarit.

Sinaloa especially is a hot spot for drug traffickers and other brigands dealing in marijuana and heroin. In recent weeks two U.S. citizens met suspicious deaths in the area and a third has disappeared and is presumed dead. Many others have been mugged or harassed.

The latest case is that of Prof. Nicholas Schrock of Colorado, who vanished en route from Nogales to Guadalajara, where he was to teach.

The two deaths were those of Randall Scott Evert, of Santa Monica, Calif., who died of a gunshot wound in the head, and John Mills, of Phoenix, Ariz., who drowned near San Blas. Mexican officials listed Evert's death as a suicide and that of Mills an accident. There are no definite clues of foul play, but U.S. officials say there was little investigation in either case.

Mexican officials say the police chief of San Ignacio, a Sinaloa community inland from Mazatlan, and six of his officers confessed to killing Schrock and stealing his truck and luggage. They led investigators to a grave site but the body exhumed was not that of Schrock.

In any event, each year more than 30,000 people from the United States travel Highway 15, which runs 1,400 miles from Nogales, on the Arizona border, to Guadalajara, Mexico's second largest city.

The embassy is considering a request to the U.S. State Department asking that it renew an advisory first issued in 1976, when there was a rash of deaths and confrontations in the same area with dope smugglers. The request should be made and the advisory circulated immediately. Travelers should be forewarned of the dangers.

Another View:

A voice for truth

The Voice of America long has been regarded by listeners overseas as a reliable, objective source of news, frequently the only such source available to them. By reporting the good with the bad, the flattering with the unflattering, the Voice of America has earned a distinguished record of reliability among its listeners.

Recently, a seven-member bipartisan commission created by the Congress to monitor the Voice of America warned the Reagan Administration against transforming the radio broadcasting arm of the International Communications Agency into a mouthpiece of "stridency and propaganda."

That appears to be precisely the direction the administration is going, however. Under the leadership of ICA director Charles Z. Wick, the Voice of America is shedding its cloak of objectivity and donning one of political ideology as part of the administration's stepped-up anti-Soviet rhetoric.

"The VOA's credibility is its most precious asset," noted the commission in its annual report to the president, a report laced with criticisms of the recent programming and policy changes.

"Actions and policies which are easily misinterpreted and cast doubt on the organization's commitment to truth can seriously damage it," the report cautioned.

As the report was being released, President Reagan was addressing a gathering in the Rose Garden at which he proclaimed Captive Nations Week. He used the occasion to criticize the Soviet government and pledged to step up the propaganda campaign over the Voice of America to the Soviet Union and Eastern European nations.

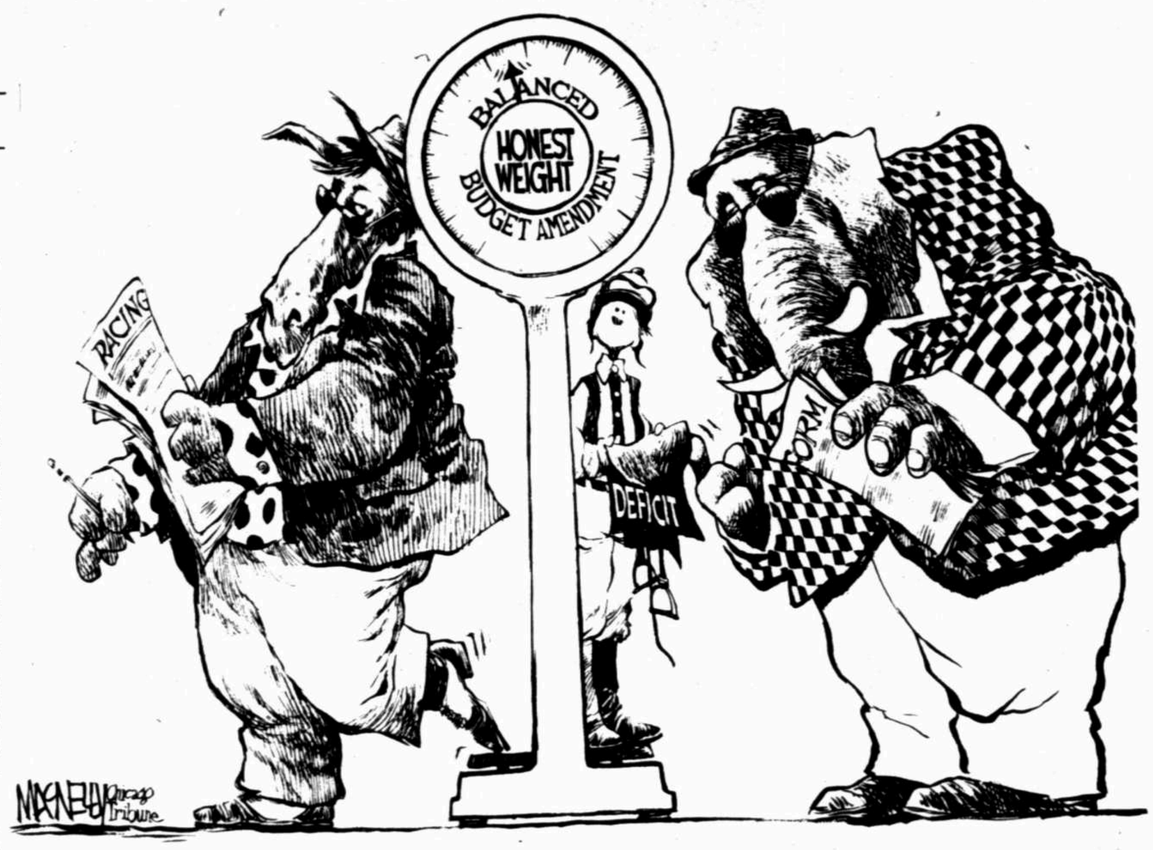

That precisely is what ultimately will destroy the value of the Voice of America, and in due course, much of the good will the radio network has won for the United States.

In the end, the best propaganda is truth.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

VA chief Robert Nimmo 'worst appointee'

WASHINGTON — Though there are many competitors for the title, I nominate Veterans Administrator Robert P. Nimmo as President Reagan's worst appointee.

Jack Anderson

Nimmo has set himself up as the Great White Hunter leading a safari through the bureaucratic jungle. He has slashed through the underbrush with total abandon, indiscriminately firing subordinates he regards as disloyal. He should be dismissed immediately.

Nimmo is himself a veteran (of World War II), yet he seems perfectly insensitive to the problems of the men and women the Veterans Administration is supposed to be looking out for. Indeed, his critics claim he is more interested in his golf game and the perquisites of his office than he is in the problems of the nation's veterans.

Here are some of the complaints that responsible observers have registered against Nimmo:

— He has given subordinates the unmistakable impression that he is uncomfortable dealing with the handicapped, though they are the veterans most in need of help from the federal government.

— A source close to Nimmo told my associates Jack Mitchell and Dale Van Atta that the VA boss has privately referred to veterans who seek aid from the VA as "malingering welfare bums."

— The same top-level source confided that Nimmo has shown more concern over his standing on the official protocol list than over the proposed cuts in the VA's $20 billion budget. As one example of his indifference to the budget battle, Nimmo's chief congressional liaison, Fielding Cochran, was on a trip to Rome last month during a crucial period in the negotiations over the agency's appropriations.

— Nimmo seems unable to tolerate any underlings who are not willing to be totally subservient yes-men. The first No. 2 nominee, Allen Clark, a decorated, double-amputee Vietnam combat veteran and staunch Republican, became discouraged and quit after just a few weeks. Nimmo refused to give him enough authority to do his job properly. One reason might have been, as Nimmo confided to an aide, that he didn't want any "no-legged" persons around him because it would be too "depressing."

Clark's successor, Charles Hagel, was dumped unceremoniously when he declined to be a mere go-fer for his patrician boss.

Granted, it's no crime for a presidential appointee to have a bad attitude toward the subordinates who must help him run his agency. The top man can produce sparks merely by cleaning up the agency's operation and carrying out the new president's orders to cut out unnecessary expenditures.

If Nimmo had shown himself to be the type who kept his nose to the grindstone and eschewed personal privileges, his apparent determination to cut services to veterans might be overlooked.

But the VA boss is currently under investigation by the General Accounting Office for reportedly using federal funds on a private elevator for the use of himself and his favored subordinates.

He was caught using a chauffeured limousine at the taxpayers' expense, and had to repay $6,441. In direct violation of a presidential directive, he lavished $54,183 on redecoration of his private office.

Organized veterans' groups, which ordinarily try to get along with the VA boss, have called for Nimmo's ouster and have threatened the White House with reprisal at the polls in November if he isn't dumped.

Even Clark, the loyal Republican who was Nimmo's original No. 2 man, felt impelled to send a telegram to the president, saying the VA boss is "woefully underqualified to provide heavyweight management strength."

Clark added: "He is a poor judge of people. He does not do his homework ... I urge you to replace this man." To avoid any suggestion of self-serving motives, Clark added: "I am not a candidate to be his replacement."

EYES IN THE SKY: The Falkland Islands and Middle East conflicts spurred the Russians to dramatic increases in the number of spy satellites they launched. CIA sources say the Soviets flung up as many as 12 top-of-the-line satellites to keep an eye on the Falklands war alone. The Kremlin wanted to know how the British performed in battle.

A top-secret CIA report explained that this is standard operating procedure for the Soviets in times of international crisis. "Since 1967, the Soviets have reacted to foreign crises either by increasing the launch rate or shortening the mission of their photo-reconnaissance satellites," the report states. It cited such examples as the 1967 Arab-Israeli war, the Soviets' own invasion of Czechoslovakia the following year, the India-Pakistan war of 1971 and the Arab-Israeli war of 1973.

In the 1973 Middle East war, the Soviet satellites provided intelligence information to the Egyptians, and sources say the current wave of satellites gave information to both the Argentines and Syrians — for all the good it did them.

HEMISPHERE REPORT

'Guilt' over Latin America undeserved

WASHINGTON — The United States seems to have an undeserved guilt complex over Latin America.

William Giandoni

Americans blame themselves, or their government, for whatever goes wrong in the other American republics, without stopping to realize that the United States is not really in a position to solve all the hemisphere's problems, and never has been.

That is a point suggested often in a study on new policies for Latin America released recently by Senate Democratic Leader Robert C. Byrd.

Nevertheless, Byrd wrote in the foreword to the 239-page document that "recent events ranging from the possible strengthening of the extreme right in El Salvador and its retreat from badly needed reform, to the wholly unexpected war between Argentina and Britain, raise new questions about the current course of U.S. policy in the region and new challenges for U.S. diplomacy."

What the West Virginia Democrat said about the course of U.S. policy toward Latin America may well be as true today as it has been over the years.

But the United States should take neither blame nor credit for the rise of the conservatives in El Salvador, or for the bloody battle in the South Atlantic over the Malvinas-Falkland Islands.

The outcome of the vote of March 28 in El Salvador was an expression of the will of the electorate of that strife-torn Central American country. Observers, including Democrats and Republicans, Socialists and Christian Democrats, from the United States, Latin America and Europe, attested to the enthusiasm of the voters who braved Marxist guerrillas to cast their ballots. That the right-wing coalition outpolled the Christian Democrats who were favored by the American public only goes to show that U.S. preferences played little part in the results of the election.

In the conflict over the South Atlantic islands, neither Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher nor then-President Gen. Leopoldo Galtieri paid Washington any great heed. Galtieri ignored President Reagan's suggestion that he call off the Argentine invasion, and Thatcher brushed off Mr. Reagan's recommendation that the British avoid a bloody air, sea and land battle to force the Argentines to surrender.

The study, prepared by mostly young scholars for the Democratic Policy Committee of which Byrd is chairman, makes it clear that rarely has there existed a consensus among Latin Americanists on what Washington should do. The liberals say one thing, the conservatives, another.

Take El Salvador, for example. The study notes that Reagan policy is intended to "contain Soviet influence and expansionism in the hemisphere ... stop the spread of insurrection-insurgency ... prevent another Cuba or Nicaragua from arising in the hemisphere," and "support, however reluctantly, authoritarianism in El Salvador as the only viable alternative to a pro-Soviet, anti-American totalitarianism." While the authors, Morris Blachman, University of South Carolina, and Kenneth Sharpe, Swarthmore College, wrote "this one-eyed perspective lacks depth ..." conservatives would term it a fair estimate of the situation.

Another author, Peter H. Smith, Massachusetts Institute of Technology, writing on another country, Mexico, appears to endorse the authoritarianism that his fellows condemn in the cases of Guatemala, Brazil, Argentina, Chile and El Salvador.

"Mexico has emerged from centuries of violence with an outstanding achievement: the creation of a stable and responsive political system," Smith wrote.

"It is a wondrously complex, intricate system that has maintained itself in power for the last half century by controlling the terms of political debate, responding to potential challenges with modest reforms, and repressing uncooperative opposition movements."

"But the overriding issue" between the United States and Mexico, "is Mexican migration to the United States," Smith wrote. "There are no easy solutions. Migration to this country is going to continue. There is little point in hapless attempts to bring it to a halt. What is to be done?"

The choices he listed — ignore the problem, a large-scale guest-worker program, declaring the border to be open — have all been considered and rejected, rejected mostly for political reasons, in the past.

Perhaps with organized labor's opposition to Mexican migration in mind, Byrd wrote in his foreword that the policy recommendations in the 15 papers that make up the study "do not carry the official endorsement of the Senate Democratic Policy Committee. ..."

'Pet peeves' given lawmakers

To The Editor:

The following is a list of my pet peeves that I have forwarded to our good legislators.

55 MPH SPEED LIMIT: This speed limit is unenforceable and it is not accepted by the general public. Poor laws and enforcement thereof only increase the public's disrespect for law and order and the poor patrolmen and JP's involved:

FEDERAL INCOME TAX FORM: This form and the arithmetic is beyond reason. It is monkey read, monkey do. Every entry by the taxpayer should be an automatic $10 tax deduction.

FEDERAL INCOME TAX — The complexity of the law, the various loop holes plus the graduated tax has made the honest taxpayer an endangered species. Business has learned that it is more economical to employ tax advisors, lawyers and accountants to dodge, test, twist and interpret the tax laws than it is to comply. One could suspect a conspiracy of the law makers with the taxmen lawyers and accountants.

INFLATION: This insidious disguised tax has probably caused more damage to our basic economy and capital base than any other factor. The most cancerous part of inflation is the large economic advantage that is gained by the borrower, debt is encouraged. Industry, government and the public tend to borrow excessively, prematurely and often beyond their means. When excessive debt is present, even a mild recession can become serious resulting in high unemployment.

A tax change is needed to minimize this economic advantage by the borrower. This might be accomplished by indexing the interest deduction in some manner. By removing the economic incentive at least industry and the public would be more prudent about their debt.

SAVINGS BONDS — The token amount of interest that the government pays the little saver borders on larceny. The trust that has been given the government by the long term small saver should be rewarded, not penalized.

Stockade needed

To The Editor:

Hurray for Ms. Finley!! You deserve congratulations on your letter to the editor on July 23, 1982, concerning the plans for the new stockade. I too am disgusted with the negative response from Midland citizens on this issue. Everyone complains about this problem of the over-crowding of Midland jails but no one wants to do anything about it. How do we plan on getting this problem solved without public support? Not only do I think that the new stockade is needed, but it also gives the prisoners a chance to work while they serve time.

Why not?

Regardless of some self-centered belief, Midland is growing. Therefore we must build this stockade in order to face the consequences that come along with the growth of a city. Along with Ms. Finley I say, "Get Real People," and once again:

Why not Midland???

Parade time?

To The Editor:

With the Christmas season only a few months away (stores in town are already selling Christmas items), I was wondering if any organization in Midland would delight the hearts of thousands of children this year by organizing a Christmas parade.

It seems this town has a lot of money and lots of talent, so how about it Midlanders? If no organization has plans, perhaps a group of citizens would be willing to band together to organize this parade.

If this is the case, we need to know as soon as possible and what would be our first step should we citizens have to plan this parade?

Halt Israeli aid

To The Editor:

Is it right? Israel torturing and killing many unarmed civilians in its invasion of Lebanon. Israel is also guilty of bombings of hospitals and schools. We will all agree, upon learning of these facts, with Rep. Paul Findley (R-Ill.) that "under the law we have a responsibility to halt aid to Israel."

Some retirees may find insurance lacking

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — Thousands of federal retirees who thought that this month they would move into health insurance plans offering better coverage or lower premiums may be forced to stay with their current insurance plan for the remainder of this year.

Premiums in the federal employee health benefits (FEHB) program jumped an average of 30 percent in January. Many plans raised deductibles and cut benefits.

Because of the dramatic changes in the FEHB program, several hundred thousand workers and retirees took advantage of the May "open season" enrollment period, switching to better and/or cheaper plans. Coverage for retirees who switched was to begin July 1. Coverage for most workers started in mid-July.

The FEHB covers 9.2 million federal workers, family members and retirees, including about half the population of metropolitan Washington.

Changes made by current federal and postal workers have gone smoothly. But many retirees will soon be getting "rejection" letters from the health plans they thought they joined, saying they must remain in their present plan and keep paying its premiums and getting its benefits.

The problem stems from the fact that some of the union-backed plans — which this year offered some of the most attractive insurance deals — do not take annuitants unless they were members of the sponsoring union when they retired.

Most federal and postal union plans take active-duty workers if they pay an "associate member" fee similar to union dues.

Prior to the May open season, most of the 1.7 million retirees were covered by either Blue Cross-Blue Shield or Aetna. But many of them — final numbers aren't available yet — decided to switch to union-backed plans during the open season, unaware that they had to be union members to join.

One plan, offered by the Mail Handlers Union, said it would take nonmember retirees who have signed up — even though its brochures this year noted otherwise — if the Office of Personnel Management will allow it. Otherwise, health plan director James LaPenta says, it will have to reject hundreds of nonmember annuitants who want the union's coverage.

Most health plans would prefer not to insure annuitants, who are "heavy users" of health care. That's why union-backed health plans typically limit coverage for retirees to former members.

An OPM spokesman said that retirees who switched insurance plans but are ineligible for those plans will continue to be covered by their current plan, even though they technically dropped it effective June 30. They will continue to pay premiums to their current (pre-open season) health carrier.

There will be another open season at the end of this year, when workers and retirees will have a chance to pick health insurance coverage for the 1983 year. It is possible that the rules will be changed to require unions that now bar nonmember annuitants to take retirees in 1983, but that is yet to be decided.

For now, if you are a retiree who switched to one of the union plans limited to annuitant members only, you will remain in your present health plan until the end of 1982.

Exploratory Cranston committee finances released

By The Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — The presidential exploratory committee of Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., has raised $56,414 this year, including $2,000 from Cranston himself and $10,000 transferred from his California Senate campaign, according to records filed at the Federal Election Commission.

While that is far short of the anticipated committee budget of $150,000 for the year, money has not been needed and is in ready supply from $250,000 left over from Cranston's 1980 Senate campaign, according to Murray Flander, Cranston's press secretary.

The committee has been unable legally to stage fund-raisers because Cranston is not a declared candidate, Flander said.

The committee, which is expected to make its recommendation to Cranston this year on whether to seek the Democratic presidential nomination in 1984, has hired Sergio Bendixen, former campaign consultant to Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., as executive director, Flander said.

Cranston spent $10,000 on a promotional film and $35,000 to $40,000 more on a trailer, telephones and other expenses at the Democratic Party midterm convention in June, Flander said.

Cranston is traveling in key primary states "about every weekend and every (Senate) recess," Flander said. He said Cranston is traveling only on non-Senate time and has a 95.98 percent voting attendance record this year.

Cranston's $1,000 contributors include Allyn O. Kreps, the Los Angeles attorney who heads his exploratory committee, and such other committee members as Marjorie Craig Benton, U.S. representative to UNICEF, Lew Wasserman, chairman of MCA, Inc., and Los Angeles attorney Paul Ziffren.

MC pre-registration for fall semester begins Monday

Beginning its 14th year, Midland College opens pre-registration for its fall semester Monday in preparation for what is anticipated as another record-breaking enrollment. About 3,000 students are expected this fall, compared with 2,784 in the 1981 fall semester.

Prospective students may complete their pre-registration details, obtain early counseling and get a permit allocating them a time for registration during the next three and a half weeks.

Persons wishing to sign up for the fall semester may do so in the Office of Student Services, located in the administration building. Hours for the next two weeks are 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday. From Aug. 16 to Aug. 24, the hours for pre-registration are 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday.

The official registration dates are Aug. 25-26, with classes starting on Aug. 30.

"Pre-registration is most important, particularly for first-time students, those transferring from other colleges, or entering from other states," said Dee Windsor, associate dean of students and registrar. "This allows the students time to visit with couselors about their long-range educational plans, to obtain transcripts, or to clarify residence requirements."

Windsor said that new residents, who have not resided in the college district for six months and the state for 12 months, should bring proof of property ownership to pre-registration in order to have out-of-district or out-of-state fees waived.

Midland College will begin its first class in Associate Degree Nursing this fall, and include a managment internship, more sections for architecture and new programs in music.

MC offers complete academic and vocational-technical training programs, both daytime and evening, during the fall semester. Some courses have limited enrollment, due to laboratory facilities.

Bulletins listing all the credit courses and community service courses being offered by Midland College this fall are available without charge at the Midland County Library, all Midland banks and at the administration building on the campus.

Information about specific courses also may be obtained by calling Midland College at 684-7851, extension 166.

Last ERA protestors released from jail

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. (AP) — The last of 12 women jailed in connection with their Equal Rights Amendment protests at the state Capitol during the past legislative session were released from custody Tuesday.

Alice Weber, 47, of Chicago, and Joyce Meyer, 24, of Champaign, were released from the Sangamon County Jail after serving 26 days of a 30-day contempt of court sentence.

The women were credited with four "good days" and released early.

Ten other women who also took part in the ERA protests served three days in jail earlier this month.

Nine members of the "Grass Roots Group of Second Class Citizens," including Ms. Weber and Ms. Meyer, face felony charges in connection with vandalism at the Capitol.

A preliminary hearing on those charges has been set for next month.

During their protests, members of the group chained themselves outside the Senate doors, staged a sit-in on the House floor and splattered animal blood on Statehouse floors and windows.

Circuit Court Judge Simon L. Friedman ordered the women jailed after they defied his order against taking chains into the building and blocking office entrances.

Friedman said the women had shown "willful and open defiance of the law."

"We committed civil disobedience as everyone knows and if we have to do it over again, we will do that," Ms. Weber told reporters after her release.

Argument ended in Morris' death, testimony indicates

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

What apparently began as a "little argument" over money in a dice game and a flare-up over use of the word "boy" climaxed in the shooting death last Nov. 14 of Midland businessman Robert James "R.J." Morris Sr., 50, in an southeast liquor store, testimony indicated Tuesday.

On trial in Midland's 238th State District Court is Booker T. "Billy" Green Jr., 42, who is charged with voluntary manslaughter in Morris' death. The offense, which is a degree below murder, carries a punishment range from two years to 20 years in prison.

"There was a misunderstanding between Billy Green and R.J. Morris," said Yancy Batie, the prosecution's first witness. "They had a little argument, a little discussion, concerning a bet. They were playing dice" in the Amusement Parlor of King's Sandwich Shop at Illinois Avenue and Lee Street in southeast Midland, Batie said.

Batie, 58, said he was observing the crap game.

"R.J. won a bet," Batie said. "He started talking about betting; gamblers do that. 'Put your money down,'" he said Morris told Green.

"'Let's bet,'" he quoted Morris. 'I'm here to gamble. You boys put your money down. I've got plenty of money, so let's gamble.'"

Batie indicated that Green took offense to the term "boys."

"Billy told him he wasn't a boy," the witness testified before the five-man, seven-woman jury in Judge Vann Culp's court. "'Go find a boy and — his —,'" Batie quoted Green.

Morris continued to seek another bet, Batie said.

"'I've got plenty of money to gamble with,'" he quoted Morris. "'I don't have to work for my money.'"

Batie said Green, who then was a U.S. Postal Service supervisor, appeared "aggravated" and slugged Morris. A fight ensued, was subsequently broken up by Batie and Morris' son, Bubba. Moments later, Green and Morris left the gaming parlor by different exits. Minutes later, Morris lay mortally wounded in his nearby M&M Liquor Store, which was operated by his son.

Green's defense attorney is H. Thomas Hirsch of Odessa.

Morris' daughter-in-law, Helen Morris, 32, testified that she; her 5-year-old son; R.J. Morris; her husband; his sister, the store's clerk, Marzella Weber; and a customer were in the store that Saturday night when five rifle shots were fired from the sidewalk through the store's plate glass window. One bullet struck Morris in the heart.

Seconds earlier, Mrs. Morris, who said she was watching television while her father-in-law was playing and talking with his grandson, "saw a green suit go by" the store. "He was a black man, a light-complected black man," she said of the man wearing the green suit.

The man returned.

"That's when I heard the shots," she testified, "and I felt myself being pushed by my father-in-law. That's when my son and I fell to the floor," she said in tears.

"Mr. R.J. didn't get up," she said. "I called his name, but he didn't say anything. He was breathing hard and fast."

Newsmen fired for Molotov cocktail stunt

FORT MYERS, Fla. (AP) — Two television newsmen have been fired for using "poor judgment" in trying to sneak two dummy Molotov cocktails through an airport security checkpoint.

Jeff Humphrey, a 20-year-old intern at WINK-TV, and camaraman Luis Saumell, 29, were acting on their own when they were caught by Lee County Airport guards Sunday with two bogus bombs, said News Director Jim Bennett.

The dismissals were announced by Vice President and General Manager Robert Doty during the Tuesday evening news.

"Their actions don't mesh with our news policy," he said.

Bennett said WINK officials were "totally in the dark" about the two employees' plan to test airport security following the hijacking last week of an Air Florida commuter flight from Miami to Key West.

In that incident, two men ordered the plane to Cuba and threatened passengers and crew with gasoline and a lighter.

Humphrey, a San Diego State University journalism major who has been interning at WINK since June, said it was his idea to test airport security.

"I have to take full responsibility," he said. "It's very unfortunate that Luis should be held responsible... I pulled rank."

Saumell, who joined the CBS affiliate less than a month ago, said he regrets following Humphrey's lead.

"I'm just a photographer," he said. "It was just another assignment."

Scramble for low-cholesterol egg may be too late

By JOANN RODGERS
Hearst Feature Service

The news has been full of stories on "starch blockers," warned against by the Food and Drug Administration, which promise dieting matrons unlimited time at the pasta trough without damage to their dress size. Products that add calorie-free bulk and sweetening to pastries and pies are also on the horizon.

But perhaps no advance in this field is more intriguing than the scramble for the low-cholesterol egg.

Ever since cholesterol became a villain of coronary disease, health-conscious Americans either dropped eggs from their daily menus or sought egg substitutes. That "incredible edible" made by the chicken contains 240 milligrams of the fatty substance in the yolk, more per serving than any food except liver, kidney, brain, sweetbreads and other so-called variety meats.

Serious attempts to reduce cholesterol at its source took off in the mid-1970's at the U.S. Department of Agriculture's South Central Poultry Research Station at Mississippi State University.

There, Dr. James McNaughton, an animal nutritionist, was testing new high-fiber protein feeds for laying hens and found that adding fiber from sunflowers, alfalfa, soybeans, rice and even wood shavings reduced cholesterol in the chicken's blood — and in the egg it laid — by about 15 percent.

One possible explanation, McNaughton said in an interview, was that the fiber caused a scraping action in the hen's intestines, removing cells in those regions where cholesterol is synthesized by the body.

"The new eggs look and taste like any other egg," McNaughton said. "But to be economically feasible and marketable, we needed an egg with at least a 30 to 40 percent reduction in cholesterol."

Enter Dr. Warren Burger, a food chemist with the USDA's Barley and Malt laboratory at the University of Wisconsin in Madison.

He discovered nutrients in the fibrous outer layers of the barley kernel which dropped cholesterol levels in chickens, rats and swine. Further tests showed these nutrients lowered cholesterol in chicken eggs up to 30 percent.

Burger and his co-workers believe that two of the chemicals in the barley kernel are the keys to the low-cholesterol egg. They seem to inhibit or bind an enzyme called HMG co-A reductase, which is vital to the animal's production of the fatty material.

The USDA scientists say it will take at least a year to isolate and purify the factors and five or more years before any commercial use of barley-enriched feed is likely.

Ironically, the low-chol egg may already be an item whose time has come and gone. Several studies suggest that eating whole eggs, even lots of them, has little effect on the amount of cholesterol in the blood of most individuals.

A few years ago, Dr. Simeon Margolis of Johns Hopkins University and a team at the National Heart, Lung and Blood Institute fed 11 subjects three to six eggs a day for up to 18 weeks and measured blood cholesterols regularly. They concluded that simply eating large numbers of eggs does not "significantly" raise the levels. Among the test group, the serum cholesterols rose 7 percent in women and 10 percent in men.

Perhaps more to the point, there may be no relationship to the amount of cholesterol measured in the blood and the amount that gets deposited in a person's cells or artery walls. Studies by Dr. Joseph Goldstein and Michael Brown at the University of Texas suggest that in some genetically disposed individuals, reducing the amount of cholesterol in the diet will simply prompt the body to make more of its own.

Cholesterol is a vital nutrient made by all animals. The amount probably depends on how many cholesterol-producing cells we are born with. And that is determined by genes.

Dallas will host national cook-off

AUSTIN — For the second time in seven years Texas will play host to the National Chicken Cooking Contest.

It will be Aug. 17-19 at Loew's Anatole Hotel in Dallas where 51 contestants from every state and the District of Columbia will compete for a $10,000 grand prize.

The public is invited to observe the cook-off, which begins at 10 a.m. Aug. 18 in the hotel's exhibition hall. Between 10:30 a.m. and noon guests may mingle and talk with contestants as they prepare their dishes. Ruby Cubley, a Clear Lake City homemaker, will represent Texas. She was chosen in May at a contest sponsored by the Texas Broiler Council and the Texas Department of Agriculture.

To get a preview of the types of recipes that win $10,000, here is a former grand champion — Chicken Pizza.

CHICKEN PIZZA

2 whole broiler-fryer chicken breasts, halved, boned, skinned and cut in 1-inch pieces
1 package (8 rolls) refrigerated crescent rolls
¼ cup cooking oil
1 large onion, sliced into thin rings
1 large bell pepper, seeded and cut into thin rings
½ pound sliced fresh mushrooms
1 (10½ ounce) can pizza sauce with cheese
1 teaspoon garlic salt
1 teaspoon oregano
¼ cup parmesan cheese
2 cups shredded mozzarella cheese

Unroll crescent dough into eight triangles. Into lightly oiled 12-inch pizza pan press dough, especially at perforations, to seal. In frypan place oil and heat to medium temperature. Add chicken, onion, bell pepper, mushrooms and olives and cook, stirring about 5 minutes or until fork can be inserted in chicken with ease. Spread pizza sauce over crust; spoon chicken mixture evenly over sauce. Sprinkle garlic salt, oregano and parmesan cheese on all. Top with mozzarella cheese. Bake, uncovered, in 425-degree oven 20 minutes or until crust is done. Cut into wedges to serve. Makes 4 servings.

Versatile cheese good protein source

By DIANE SAVAGE
Copley News Service

"Little Miss Muffet sat on a tuffet, eating her curds and whey ..." I wonder how many times I heard this nursery rhyme before I found out what curds and whey were.

For those of you who are still wondering, the whey is the liquid part of milk which is separated from the solid curd. The curd is generally pressed, molded and cured, and voila: cheese. It takes around 11 pounds of milk to make one pound of cheese, so that's a lot of whey!

Cheese plays an important role in the vegetarian diet because of its high protein content and the almost limitless number of ways in which it can be used. It is a complete protein; that is, it is high in all eight "essential amino acids." Cheese is also high in calcium and phosphorus and contains milk fat and vitamins.

It's easy to supplement many dishes with a little additional protein simply by adding cheese — grated over a salad or mixed into a casserole. Or if you're concerned that a meal is lacking protein, just serve wedges of cheese on the side, allowing one to two ounces per person.

A great way to use cheddar and Monterey jack is in quesadillas. These are the Mexican snacks made of a flour torilla folded in half and filled with cheese, then heated in a moderate oven until the cheese has melted. Or, you can fry a flat tortilla until crisp, drain, sprinkle with grated cheese and place under a broiler for a few minutes.

Similarly, pita bread may be sliced in half, filled with sliced or grated cheese and baked at 300 degrees for around five minutes.

Cottage cheese can be blended to make a substitute for sour cream which is higher in protein and lower in calories. Just puree 1 cup of cottage cheese and around 2½ tablespoons of milk in a blender until smooth. You might need to add a little more milk to get the consistency you prefer — this is lovely on baked potatoes. (This shouldn't, however, be used in dishes where the sour cream would be cooked in any way.)

Today's recipes include two cheese puddings, one baked and one steamed, which may easily serve as a dessert complement to a meal deficient in protein. Ukrainian cheese pancakes are great for Sunday morning brunch, while fried cheese and vegetables or fruit make a delicious and nourishing lunch.

STEAMED STEAMED CHEESE PUDDING

1 cups flour
1 cup sour cream or milk
4 eggs, separated
1 cup grated cheese
Salt to taste

Mix flour with cream and egg yolks. Add cheese and salt. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites. Pour into a metal mold and cover with foil. (Mold should be well buttered and sprinkled with fine bread crumbs or flour, and filled only two-thirds full.) Place the mold in a pan taller than itself, and filled with boiling water one-third up the form. Cover the pan and simmer for 30 minutes. Add more boiling water as necessary to maintain water level.

BAKED CHEESE PUDDING

1 cup cornmeal
1 cup cold milk
2 cups milk, heated to boiling
1 tsp. salt
½ tsp. dry mustard
1 cup (¼ pound) shredded cheddar cheese
3 eggs, separated

Mix cornmeal and cold milk in saucepan. Gradually add hot milk, stirring constantly. Cook over low heat, continuing to stir, three to five minutes until thickened. Remove from heat. Add salt, mustard and cheese. Stir until cheese is melted; if necessary return to low heat. Beat egg yolks. Gradually stir cornmeal mixture into egg yolks. (Stir in small amount at first to avoid sookyng the yolks.) Cool slightly. While cooling, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Do not overbeat. Fold into cooled mixture gently and thoroughly. Pour into greased 2-quart casserole and bake at 350 degrees 40 minutes, until puffed and lightly browned. Turn off heat and leave pudding in oven for 10 minutes.

UKRAINIAN CHEESE PANCAKES

2 cups cottage cheese, well drained
2 eggs
¼ tsp. salt
2 tbsps. honey
½ cup whole wheat flour
1 to 2 tbsps. butter
4 tbsps. jam

Puree cheese in blender or force through sieve with a wooden spoon. Beat in eggs, salt, honey and flour. Melt one tablespoon of the butter in a large skillet. Drop the batter by rounded tablespoons into the hot butter and fry, four at a time, until browned, about five minutes. Turn and brown the other side, about three minutes over fairly low heat. Add additional butter to the pan as needed. Serve with jam.

DEAR ABBY

Mom needs help

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am the mother of three. The eldest is 8 and the baby is 3. I have a good husband and a nice home. In this time of inflation, I am forced to work part time to make ends meet. I work the night shift and my husband works days, so we seldom need a baby sitter, which brings me to why I'm writing this letter.

Both my husband's parents and my parents are in good health. Our fathers are employed, but our mothers are not. I am very happy for them. They've raised their children and can now enjoy their leisure. But since our mothers have so much time on their hands, I would appreciate it if once in a while they'd offer to take the kids for the day so I could get a little rest. Sometimes I get only two hours sleep on the days I work. (Thank God it's only part time.)

My mother frequently calls and asks how I am, and if I say, "I'm tired," all she says is, "You're going to get sick if you don't take care of yourself." (No offers of help.)

I would like to tell our parents that it wouldn't hurt them to take our kids once in a while, but if they have to be told, it's just too bad.

Please print this. Maybe they'll see it and take the hint. I welcome your comments. — TIRED WORKING GIRL

DEAR TIRED: I agree, it would be lovely and generous and helpful if your mother and mother-in-law would take the kids once in a while, but don't ask them. Grandmothers who really want to take their grandchildren for the day don't have to be asked — they offer. (Some even beg). In any case, don't put them on the spot.

DEAR ABBY: Please help me! I'm a 21-year-old girl, and I haven't had a decent date in two years. I am a nurse's aide, and most of the people I work with are either married or gay. What a choice!

I don't like the bar scene or going out alone, and all the guys I meet want to jump into the sack right after they say hello.

This is a one-horse town, and there aren't any clubs or singles organizations.

What should I do? — DECENT, FED UP AND LONELY

DEAR DECENT: Since yours is a "one-horse" town, find the horse, get on it, and head for the nearest city.

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who telephones me four or five times a week. It's always the same one-way conversation. She tells me where she's been, who she's seen, how they looked and what they said. She also gives me a rundown on the health of her friends and relatives.

All this time I just listen to her talk. She never stops long enough for me to get a word in. And she never asks me how I am, or where I've been or what I've been doing.

It is so boring to listen to her. I have been wanting to tell this to her for a very long time, but I never get a chance.

I know she reads your articles, so please run this letter and maybe she will recognize herself and take the hint. — WOONSOCKET CALL

DEAR CALL: Here's your letter. But take no chances. Mail this to her, and if you're lucky she will figure out who sent it.

Get calcium from supplement

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Registered Dietitian
Copley News Service

Dear Shirley: Can you please tell me how much calcium I need every day? I am a 59-year-old woman, and I cannot drink milk. I don't like most cheeses, either. Should I take a calcium support? How much should I take? — Mrs. G.L.

Dear Mrs. G.L.: You need 800 mg daily. Eat green, leafy vegetables and seafood with bones in it. A calcium supplement probably would be helpful to you. There are many different kinds so I would look on the label to see how much it is supplying. Ask your druggist or physician to recommend one for you if you can't find it easily in your drugstore or market. Avoid bone meal because some kinds contain lead.

Dear Shirley: I haven't eaten bacon for several years because I am afraid that the nitrites can cause cancer. Is there anything new on nitrites? I love bacon and I miss it. What is your opinion? — V.S.

Dear V.S.: Most experts now agree that the risks are minimal because of improved processing techniques for both beer and bacon. I think you can safely eat bacon occasionally, if you want, but keep in mind that fresh foods are ususally better than processed.

Dear Shirley: My wife takes 5,000 to 6,000 mg per day of vitamin C. My concern is that this dosage may be harmful in some way. Please write as soon as you can or put it in the paper. I am very worried about her, but she is convinced that she is helping herself. — M.B.

Dear M.B.:You should be worried! Your wife is taking extreme overdose levels. Even though the body excretes excesses of vitamin C normally, diarrhea may develop as a further effort by the body to quickly rid itself of such toxic amounts.

However, she should decrease the vitamin C intake slowly because she can develop scurvy if she suddenly decreases her intake. Excessive amounts of vitamin C strains the kidneys and kidney stones can occur. It also interferes with the anticoagulants in the blood and the proper metabolism of vitamin B-12. Pernicious anemia can develop.

Dear Shirley: My family loves picnics and during the summer we have a lot of them, but last year some of us got sick. What causes food poisoning? Do you have any suggestions to help us avoid getting sick. — F.W.

Dear F.W.: To slow down the growth of bacteria, like salmonella and staphylococcus, you should refrigerate all cooked foods immediately. Chill all salads and transport all foods in chilled containers or containers that are insulated.

When you prepare food for a picnic, be sure that you are extremely clean — scrub hands, work surfaces and utensils with soap and water before you begin preparation of picnic foods. To avoid additional contamination, scrub your hands, work surfaces and utensils again after you handle any raw meat. Lemon juice, vinegar and salt tend to slow down the growth of bacteria.

Keeping all foods meticulously clean and chilled in insulated containers will help you avoid sickness.

Make chicken, ribs like Grandma did

By MERLE ELLIS

Chicken and ribs have been a summertime favorite with the Ellis clan for as long as I can remember. They were always the focal point of the summer meal at picnics and family reunions when all of the Ellis cousins got together to spit watermelon seeds at one another.

Back in those days I was convinced that my grandmother made the absolute "bestest" chicken and ribs in the whole wide world. The chicken was fried in a black iron skillet and came out crisp on the outside and juicy and tender in the middle. Indescribably delicious hot or cold. The ribs were baked in the woodstove oven at the farm and brought to the affair in a big blue enameled roasting pan.

That's really all I know about how Grandma made her chicken and ribs. Recipes were of little interest to me in those days so I never got hers. Many is the time I have mentally kicked myself for not spending more time in my grandmother's kitchen — watching and learning.

This little bit of nostalgia serves to introduce the following recipes — one for fried chicken, the other for spareribs. Though they are not my grandmother's, they come as close as I have ever tasted.

BAR-B-Q RIBS

8 pounds pork spareribs (2 slabs)
Salt, pepper
1/2 cup commercial smoke flavoring
6 cups water
1/2 pound margarine
1 rib celery, chopped
1 onion, chopped
4 sprigs parsley, chopped
1 cup flour
1 can tomato paste
2 teaspoons brown sugar

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Sprinkle the ribs with salt, pepper and some of the smoke flavoring. Put the ribs in a baking dish along with 2 cups of the water. Bake for 1 1/2 to 2 hours, turning occasionally to brown on all sides. Remove from oven and set aside.

Melt the margarine in a large pot and add the chopped vegetables. Saute lightly and cook until tender. Add flour, tomato paste, the remaining smoke flavoring and brown sugar and saute for 20 minutes. Add remaining water to half-fill the pot and cook for 1 hour. If the sauce is too thick, thin with a little water or drippings from the pan in which the ribs were cooked. Drain drippings from the roasting pan and pour the sauce over the ribs. Return the ribs to the oven for 30 minutes to glaze. Serves 6.

FRIED CHICKEN

1 1/4 cup peanut oil
1 3- to 3-1/2 pound fryer, cut up
Salt, pepper
1 egg lightly beaten
1 cup half-and-half
1 cup water
1/2 cup flour

Preheat the oil to about 350 degrees in a frying pan. Wash chicken pieces under cold running water and pat dry. Sprinkle with salt and pepper. Make an egg batter by combining the egg, cream, water, salt and pepper. Dip pieces of chicken first in egg batter to coat, then in flour. Add chicken pieces to the skillet, the meatiest parts first. Do not crowd. Turn to brown on all sides. If oil pops, reduce the heat. Cook until meat is tender and skin crisp, about 10 to 12 minutes.

STUFFED PEPPERS

3 large green peppers
1/2 pound (2 sticks) margarine
1 medium onion, finely chopped
1 rib celery, finely chopped
4 sprigs parsley (stems and leaves), finely chopped
Pinch thyme
1/2 pound ground beef
1/2 pound small, fresh shrimp peeled, deveined
1/2 loaf stale French bread, crusts removed, crumbled
1/2 cup water
3 eggs
Salt, pepper
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 cup bread crumbs

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Split peppers in half horizontally, and remove seeds and membranes; wash and set aside. Melt the margarine in a large skillet, add onion, celery, parsley and thyme and saute for 10 to 15 minutes. Add ground beef and shrimp. Place the crumbled bread and water in a large bowl and let soak for 15 minutes; squeeze out dry and add eggs. Mix well and stir in sauteed ingredients. Add salt, pepper and garlic powder. Spoon the stuffing into a baking pan or pyrex dish and bake for 1 1/2 hours. Remove from oven and cool, then refrigerate until chilled; skim off fat. Fill pepper halves with stuffing mixture; top each with bread crumbs and place on baking sheet. Broil for 15 to 20 minutes or until warmed through. Serves 6.

DILLY DEVILED EGGS

New dessert: Nectarine bars

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
AP Food Editor

If you enjoy offering a new dessert to guests, I suggest you try these delightful Nectarine Bars. They're put together easily and may be made a day ahead of serving.

Because these bars are quite sweet, we like to serve them with a plentiful garnish of fresh nectarine slices.

NECTARINE BARS

2 cups fork-stirred all-purpose flour
⅓ cup confectioners' sugar
Two ¼-pound sticks butter
4 medium-size fresh nectarines (about 1 pound)
1 tablespoon cornstarch
3 tablespoons lemon juice
4 large eggs
2 cups granulated sugar
Mint sprigs, if desired

In a large bowl stir together flour and confectioners' sugar. With a pastry blender cut in butter until it is in fine particles. Pat mixture into an unbuttered 13 by 9 by 2-inch baking pan. Bake in a preheated 350-degree oven until lightly browned — 25 to 30 minutes. Leave oven control at 350 degrees.

Meanwhile slice one of the nectarines into an electric blender; turning on and off and scraping sides as necessary, whirl until almost smooth — there should be about 1-3rd cup. Add the cornstarch and lemon juice and whirl until smooth; reserve.

In a large bowl with an electric mixer beat eggs at high speed until thickened and lemon color; gradually beat in granulated sugar until thick and ivory color. Add nectarine mixture; at low speed beat until smooth. Pour over hot crust. Return to the 350-degree oven and bake until browned and almost set — 30 to 35 minutes. Place on a rack and cool completely. Cut into squares.

Slice remaining three nectarines and arrange on bars. If used, garnish with mint sprigs.

Makes 12 servings.

Fish, game protected

Under sweeping new legislation, all species of game and fish in Norway and, in addition, eggs, nests, lairs, etc., are protected from now on unless specifically exempted. Previous laws permitted the hunting of more than 300 wildlife species; now only 61 may be taken.

Aliens get cards

Of the approximately 12 million Social Security cards issued each year, about 200 go to illegal aliens who haven't been granted permission to work in the United States but who need a Social Security number for various reasons, such as depositing money in banks, paying taxes, enrolling in school and obtaining a driver's license.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

Use bleach on mildewed deck

DEAR HELOISE:

I have a cedar deck on the back of my home that needs help. It is in a heavily shaded area and lately I have noticed a fungus-type growth on various parts of the deck.

What would you suggest I use to get this off? — R.S.A.

One of my secretaries has a cedar deck and she had the same problem — a mildew-like substance causing dark areas.

Be sure to test a small area before you attempt her suggestion (which follows) to make sure you get the results you're seeking.

Her deck was NOT painted and had turned a silver gray, which is what she wanted. The dark areas were distracting and annoying, so she took household bleach and added a little to a bucket of laundry detergent and water.

She then briskly scrubbed down the deck with the solution using a stiff-bristled broom, then rinsed. Beautiful, she said.

PASSING TIME

Dear Heloise: Like most small children, my granddaughter hates keeping a thermometer in her mouth.

To help her pass the time without asking every few seconds, "How much longer," I place a 3-minute timer beside her and tell her that when the sand has run through it will be time.

She likes watching the timer and also keeps her mouth shut for the required time. — Mrs. A.J. Marx

STORING COOKIES

Dear Heloise: I save the heavy plastic sheets that come in some bacon packages, wash them thoroughly, and cut them to fit various containers I use to store cookies in the freezer.

I place the plastic between each layer of cookies and they don't stick together, plus it's much easier to get a few cookies out without breaking them. — Bea Cole

Great idea if you can get them (the cookies) to last long enough to freeze. — Heloise

HINTS FROM HIM

Dear Heloise: How many times have you put a coffee filter into one of those automatic drip coffee makers only to have the filter fall over on one edge, allowing the ground coffee to flow over the filter and into the carafe?

Place the filter into the holder and spread it out evenly. Then run water into the filter until it is completely saturated. Shake out the extra water and add the ground coffee.

The water "glues" the filter to the sides of the basket and prevents it from falling over. — Paul Hirschmann

SAFE SWING

Dear Heloise: When the white tubing wore out on my child's swing, I replaced it with black tubing like waterhoses are made from.

It was very inexpensive and just slipped over the chain on the swing high enough to protect little hands and fingers from being pinched by the chain. — Jane Manhus

ROSY ROSES

Dear Heloise: The mixture of ammonia and water to spray on rose bushes really keeps the bugs away.

I've found it works well on other flowers too, but alas, I've lost the directions on how much to mix. — Ann Warner

Add three tablespoons of ammonia to one quart of water. Put into a spray container and spray the solution under the leaves and on the bushes to rid them of damaging pests. — Heloise

POTATO SLAW

You may not have hit on this combination.

1 pound (3 medium) potatoes
8-pound cored wedge green cabbage
¼ to ½ cup salad oil
2 to 4 tablespoons red wine vinegar
4-ounce can diced green chiles, undrained
Salt, pepper and sugar to taste

Boil potatoes in their skins; drain and cool; remove skins and cut in half lengthwise; slice crosswise; cut into ¼-inch-wide strips. Shred cabbage — there should be four cups not packed down. Whisk together oil and vinegar; add potatoes, cabbage and chiles and toss with salt, pepper and sugar. Serve at once while cabbage is crisp; or chill if you want cabbage to wilt somewhat. Makes six servings.

Cost of living in Texas

By SHARON A. HILLIS
Midland County Extension Agent
Home Economics

It still costs less to live in Texas than in other states, according to the newest family budget figures (from last autumn) released last April by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS).

The greatest budgetary outlay is for housing, and this holds true in Midland.

'INTERMEDIATE' LEVEL OF LIVING

To maintain an "Intermediate"level of living, the average U.S. family had to spend $25,407 per year based on last falls figures.

Dallas families could buy that same level of living for $22,678 while Houston families paid $23,601.

These budget figures are what it would have cost an urban family of four (a 38-year-old husband employed full-time, a non-employed wife, a boy of 13 and a girl of 8) to buy a certain market basket of specific goods and services, including housing, for a whole year, at Fall, 1981 prices.

Dallas and Houston are the only two areas in Texas for which specific data are collected.

Texas costs are less at both the lower and higher levels of living, too.

'LOWER' BUDGET LEVELS

At lower budget level, Dallas families would have to spend $14,392, and Houston families $14,810, while U. S. families spend $15,323.

'UPPER' BUDGET LEVELS

At the upper end of the economic scale, it would take U. S. families $38,060 to buy the same goods and services that cost $33,769 in Dallas and $34,728 in Houston.

WHY CHEAPER IN TEXAS?

Why is it cheaper in Texas? A major reason is the absence of a state income tax.

OTHER FAMILY STYLES

But what if you are not part of a four-member urban family? BLS makes other estimates, too. For example, it would cost a single person under the age of 35 in Dallas $7,937 to maintain an intermediate level of living. In Houston, the cost would be $8,260.

A one-parent family with two children would need $8,203 for the lower level of living in Dallas and $8,442 in Houston.

These figures don't tell us how Texans really spend their money, but they do tell us what a standard market basket of goods and services (from housing and food to toothpaste and taxes) costs in various regions of the United States and in Texas.

Figures such as these give consumers a way to compare budget costs across the United States.

ALTERNATIVE TO HIGH HOUSING COST

Mobile homes — they're an answer to the rising cost of housing for Americans who can't afford to own conventional homes.

The image of mobile homes has changed in recent years. In fact, since 1976, all mobile homes built must meet stringent federal construction and safety codes comparable to building codes.

In addition, recent innovations in design and construction materials make mobile homes comparable to site-built homes.

FEATURES

Most mobile manufactured homes come in 12, 14, 24 and 28-foot widths, and in lengths up to 80 feet.

Average construction cost is about $19 per square foot of living area.

Mobile homes usually come with appliances, carpeting, draperies and some furnishings, and may even be custom built.

VALUE

Depending on the location and the up-keep, mobile homes appreciate in value at about the same rate as site-built homes.

Lenders, law makers and tax assessors are beginning to view the mobile home as real property when the home is placed on a permanent foundation on private property.

Manufactured homes are less expensive than site-built homes because they are constructed in highly efficient manufacturing plants.

Today, the average cost of a new site-built home is approximately $68,000. A new manufactured home can be purchased for under $30,000.

More female Australians

Fors the first time since whites settled in Australia, females outnumber males, according to the latest census, which put the country's population as of June 30, 1981, at 14,926,800 — 7,477,200 females and 7,449,600 males, a difference of 27,600.

SELL ME IN CLASSIFIED

Okay, I'll come clean. I'll lay it on the line. This is my story. I came into the Big House in the spring. And as the door shut with a ring of finality, I knew I'd never leave the same way.

I'd been all over . . . factories, warehouses, display floors, and finally a classified ad landed me in the Big House. I'd heard about it. Oh, I'd heard plenty.

I couldn't settle down. I started walking around my tiny little solitary confinement cell. But the warden found a repairman through classified and had me fixed.

Last night, I broke out for good. Some farsighted individual placed an ad for a washing machine motor to power an electric potter's wheel. Since I always was the artistic sort, always changing the colors of clothes, I was sold. I'm going to miss that little dryer, though.

Soon afterward, I was released from solitary confinement. A cute little dryer came to live with me. She was located through classified, too. We settled into a wash-day routine.

You know, classified's done a lot for me. I bet it could do some nice things for you, too.

Plymouth naval town

PLYMOUTH, England (AP) — Plymouth was Sir Francis Drake's port. It's the port the Pilgrim Fathers sailed from. But the average American tourist who visits Plymouth won't arrive or leave by sea.

It can be done: on the ferries that make the runs between Plymouth and Roscoff, in Brittany, and Santander, in Spain.

But Plymouth is in Devon, and most American travelers will be stopping off in Plymouth on itineraries that include little coastal villages like Babbacombe; the fashionable seaside resort of Torquay, with its semitropical vegetation; Exeter, with its famous cathedral, and Dartmoor, the wild setting of Conan Doyle's "Hound of the Baskervilles."

So they'll arrive in Plymouth, the bustling naval city, by car, train or tour bus.

If you look around, you'll find a number of Plymouths.

There's the Elizabethan and Pilgrim Plymouth, down by the waterfront, in the district known as the Barbican. You can wander through the Elizabethan House and the Merchant's House, and take a harbor launch to Drake's Island, an old fortress with tunnels and guns.

You can stand at the Mayflower Steps, where the Pilgrims embarked. The Pilgrims, it will be recalled, originally set out from Southampton, in the Mayflower and the Speedwell. But they had to turn back, first to Dartmouth and then to Plymouth, because of fears the Speedwell was unseaworthy. Finally, the Mayflower set out alone.

Opposite the fish market in Plymouth is the place where the Pilgrims spent the night before they sailed. Their names are listed on an outside wall.

Not so widely known, perhaps, is that some of the American prisoners captured in the War of 1812 were held in the Plymouth area. Two officers killed in a naval engagement in that war are buried in St. Andrew's churchyard in Plymouth. There's a memorial service each year for these Americans of the War of 1812.

Uphill from where the Pilgrims set out are the Citadel and the Hoe, or hill. Sir Francis Drake is said to have completed his game of bowls on the Hoe before he set out to take care of the Spanish Armada in 1588. People still bowl on the green of the Hoe. Often, they're dressed in traditional white.

While you're on the Hoe, you'll also want to climb Smeaton's Tower, formerly the Eddystone Light which stood on treacherous Eddystone Rock south-southwest of Plymouth. Eddystone Rock still has a light, but what you might call THE light was moved to the Hoe in the late 19th century.

Walking away from the water after crossing the Hoe, you come to other Plymouths: posh hotels, and then the big, modern City Center with its countless shops that tug at your pocketbook.

Letter writer suggests changes

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — A Bexar County letter writer has suggested two ways to make Texas' public schools better: raise the drinking age to 25 and raise the age for compulsory school attendance to 25, for "surely by then they can learn math and science."

State Education Commissioner Raymon Bynum said a Michigan resident suggested removing "communistic computers" from schools and getting rid of all textbooks published after the 1940s. The writer said teaching should be done from two books of the Bible, with guest lectures from certain ministers.

U.S.S.R. testing missile

Copley News Service

WASHINGTON — The Soviet Union has been test-firing a huge new submarine ballistic missile that could put America's land-based Minuteman ICBMs in even greater danger from a surprise nuclear attack than they are today, according to U.S. Intelligence sources.

Designated the SSNX-20 by the Pentagon, the rocket reportedly can carry up to 12 individually targetable warheads a distance of more than 8,000 nautical miles with high accuracy.

The weapon is being developed for deployment aboard the world's largest submarine, the 30,000-ton Typhoon class ships, the first of which was launched by the Soviets 22 months ago. The Typhoon is nearly twice as large as the U.S. Navy's biggest nuclear submarine, the 18,750-ton Trident.

The U.S. Navy has declined officially to discuss the SSNX-20. Spokesmen referred this reporter to the Defense Intelligence Agency, an organization not noted for sharing its information with the media.

The greatest threat today to the Minuteman Intercontinental Ballistic Missile force, which is based in the Dakotas, Montana, Missouri and Wyoming, is the giant Soviet SS-18 with its eight warheads. The Soviets have more than 300 SS-18s.

The United States could have up to 30 minutes warning of an SS-18 attack, but enemy submarine-launched missiles could arrive on target within 5 to 10 minutes, depending how close their launch points were to the Atlantic or Pacific coasts.

That short a warning time could make even a decision by the president to launch on warning difficult if not virtually impossible to execute before the incoming enemy rockets landed.

If President Reagan gets his way with Congress and money is appropriated for basing the first copies of the powerful new MX missile in Minuteman silos, they would face the same threat from the SSNX-20, which is estimated to become combat ready in late 1983 or early 1984.

Earlier this week the UPI noted that Adm. Sergei Gorshkov, chief of Soviet navy for the last 26 years, wrote a Navy Day article for Pravda in which he said the Soviet Union had developed a strategic submarine missile system that guaranteed the USSR's ability to retaliate if it were attacked.

"In response to the development by the United States of a strategic submarine missile system directed above all at the Soviet Union, a similar system has been developed by us," Gorshkov wrote. "This confronts any aggressor with the inevitablitiy of retaliation."

Brazilian fasts to give pope burro

VATICAN CITY (AP) — An unshaven Brazilian ex-soldier, trying to give Pope John Paul II a donkey, refused today to end his three-day hunger strike despite a personal plea from his nation's ambassador to the Vatican.

Vatican sources said the man, Damiao Galdino da Silva, 42, had a brief meeting with Ambassador Antonio Correa do Lago at the Brazilian Embassy. After that, da Silva returned to St. Peter's Square and sat under an obelisk where he has been fasting since arriving Sunday.

The diplomat offered da Silva pocket money and asked him to return home. But da Silva refused, saying he didn't come to Rome for money and will continue the strike until the pope takes the 4-year-old donkey named Jericar, the sources said.

Space technology used to study, preserve art works

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Technology adapted from the Voyager space probes appears to be a promising aid in efforts to study and preserve old art works, say two museum officials.

Working with space scientists at a Pasadena laboratory, conservators William R. Leisher and James Druzick of the Los Angeles County Museum of Art have been studying computer techniques developed by NASA for processing photographs.

They recently completed a pilot project, funded by a $35,000 grant from the California Institute of Technology, that focused on a small 17th Century oil painting called "The Deposition (Descent from the Cross)." The central figure in the painting is Christ descending from the cross.

Standard X-ray examination of the work by an unknown Flemish artist revealed a hidden painting underneath. But the X-ray resulted in a photograph showing the two paintings as a blurry double image, making it difficult to see the work originally affixed to the wooden panel underneath.

Leisher and Druzick, working with Jet Propulsion Laboratory astronomer Dave Glackin and others, adapted methods used on Voyager space probes in an attempt to separate the two images.

Through complex methods, they used a computer to identify and code certain information about the painting, particularly wood grains of the original panel and brush strokes painted by the Flemish artist in "The Deposition."

The technique yielded a surprisingly detailed image of large portions of the hidden painting. Using a computer and the standard X-ray of the work, the technique made visible a woman seated with one arm resting in her lap and the other propped on a table.

To the woman's right, a man stands in a lace collar with one hand raised and a finger pointing upward. Behind the two is a heavy curtain pulled back, revealing an open window.

Few of these features were readily visible in the original X-ray.

"It's not a process that can be used in every case," Leisher said. "For one thing, it's very expensive (to buy computer time).

The pilot project took nearly two years because the museum team had to share computer time at the laboratory with scientific study of Voyoger pictures of Jupiter.

Druzick says the use of computer technology for the study and preservation of artwork is promising. The art museum's pilot project on "The Deposition" could be adapted to track possible changes in the physical condition of a Leonardo drawing, for example.

And the museum conservators say that any "hidden work" discovered through the technique could turn out to be a lost or unknown painting by a master.

They stress that the technique is simply a tool and, like any tool, is subject to human decisions.

Should the conservator undertake the delicate task of attempting to remove the painting on top — with the risk of irreparable damage — in order to unearth a concealed masterwork?

That question, the museum officials say, enters into the non-technological realm of ethical judments.

Polar bears howl at sight of ice

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Coat a polar bear lair with snow in July and the bears might frolic in delight — but not in Southern California.

Two polar bears, Polaris and Agena, apparently have gone native in the 15 years since a hunter brought the brother and sister, then 3 months old, from Alaska to the balmier climate of the Los Angeles Zoo.

The pair howled in disapproval earlier this week on finding their outdoor stomping ground slathered with 32 tons of shaved ice.

"They were somewhat startled. Roaring isn't their customary behavior," said Ann Harrell, the bears' keeper for three years.

Zoo officials said they paid ice company owner Paul Nicoletti $3,000 to spray the bears' den with 300-pound blocks of ice slivered into snow. It was a "Christmas in July" present unveiled before a crowd of zoo visitors and specially invited journalists.

The bears, however, reacted ungratefully.

Agena stepped gingerly onto the ice carpet, then bounded to high dry ground in growling disbelief. Polaris pawed the snow briefly before joining her. Both ignored the gift in favor of a mackerel snack.

Ms. Harrell said her charges "haven't really got the idea" about polar bears and snow. She gave them a treat of marshmallows "to make it up to them."

OperationRaleigh to be largest ever expedition

By GENE SCHROEDER

NEW YORK (AP) — Searching for a lost, great white city in the Honduran jungle...exploring tropical waterArests of Sulawesi for the world's largest snakes.

These and similar adventures await the 4,000 young men and women to be selected for what is planned as the largrests of Sulawesi for the world's largest snakes.

These and similar adventures await the 4,000 young men and women to be selected for what is planned as the largest scientific-exploration expedition ever undertaken.

Dubbed "Operation Raleigh," the four-year expedition will embark from the coast of North Carolina in 1984, just 400 years after Sir Walter Raleigh established the first English-speaking settlements in North America. Planned stops include the Caribbean, Central America, Antarctica, Australia, New Zealand, Papua New Guinea, Indonesia, India and Africa.

The new project calls for 1,500 youths each from the United States and England, and another 1,000 from the rest of the world.

Both President Reagan and Prince Charles have expressed support for the joint British-American undertaking, which is expected to cost more than $10 million in cash, plus aid of incalculable value from governments, individuals and private corporations.

"The 1,500 Americans due to be part of this expedition will contribute to scientific and historical knowledge, help promote international cooperation and understanding, and remind us of the stirring accomplishments of those who first came to our shores," Reagan said in a letter to Col. John Blashford-Snell, the world-famous British explorer who will head the expedition.

Blashford-Snell was also the leader of a similar, highly successful, two-year, round-the-world expedition called "Operation Drake" completed in 1980, in which some 400 young explorers from 27 nations took part. It cost about $2 million cash but also received assistance in the form of manpower, ships, blimps and other equipment at no charge.

"For example, at one time the entire Panamian navy was involved," Blashford-Snell recalled. "And in the Mediterranean, Goodyear let us use an airship as an almost perfect, stable, scientific-instrument platform."

The young explorers selected for "Operation Drake" came from among 57,586 applicants aged 17 to 24 after a series of physical and mental screenings. For "Operation Raleigh," there may be 10 times that many applications.

In addition to the young adventurers taking part, about 100 scientists and researchers — including marine biologists, botanists, zoologists, entomologists and ornithologists — are expected to participate.

"We plan to start calling for recruits in late 1983," Blashford-Snell disclosed during a visit to New York.

One of the early stops for "Operation Raleigh" is the Honduran island of Roatan, a one-time pirates' headquarters where a large number of shipwrecks occurred over the years. Divers will attempt to locate some of them.

"And somewhere in the very dense jungle south of the Black River, according to legend, is the lost Great White City," Blashford-Snell said. "The Honduran government is taking it seriously — all tourist maps are marked with 'site of the lost white city'," but nobody has ever found it.

"It would be one of the greatest of archeological discoveries if we can locate it. I think we should at least try, because during 'Operation Drake' we found a similar city named Acla in Panama (where the explorer Balboa was executed in the 16th century).

"Operation Raleigh" will consist of several three- to four-month phases, each involving different groups of young adventurers. For an applicant to be selected, he or she must be willing to return to his or her country to share experiences with others, Blashford-Snell explained.

In "Operation Drake," the entire round-the-world journey was made aboard a sailing ship, the 150-ton brigantine "Eve of the Wind."

"This time we plan to have a motorized, logistic support vessel going all the way around carrying stores, laboratories, decompression chambers, and a helicopter deck, plus a number of sailing ships helping out in individual area projects."

Nuclear design problems corrected or soon will be

By GEORGE ALEXANDER
Los Angeles Times-Washington Post News Service

The Pacific Gas & Electric Co. said Tuesday that several design discrepancies recently found in an independent report on its Diablo Canyon nuclear power plant have either been corrected or are in the process of being corrected, and that the report had raised no major obstacles to its efforts to re-verify the seismic safety of the plant's design.

The report had been prepared by the Brookhaven National Laboratory, at the request of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission, after PG&E had lost the license last autumn that would have permitted it to load nuclear fuel into the first of the twin reactors at Diablo and begin low-power tests. A series of errors in the design of reactor No. 1 had led to the loss of the license.

An opponent of the Diablo facility, located near San Louis Obispo in central California, quickly labeled PG&E's explanation as "dissembling." He said that the Brookhaven report raises serious questions about the seismic safety analyses that the San Francisco-based utility had used to win the preliminary, but now suspended, license for the power plant.

In its report, an eight-member Brookhaven team indentified seven major items that it found at variance with analyses made in 1979 by PG&E and its consulting firm of URS-John Blume Associates.

These questions included whether or not PG&E and its consultant had included in seismic shaking models the mass of the steelgirders in a four-story scaffold-like structure surrounding the concrete shell of the nuclear reactor, whether or not the mathematical models used to predict the response of different structural elements in and around that space were correct, and whether the utility had used in its calculations the blueprint dimensions of certain pipes, or the actual measurements of the installed pipes.

Of those seven items, according to John Hoch, a PG&E manager who participated in a meeting Tuesday in Upton, N.Y., between representatives of the utility, Brookhaven, the nuclear Regulatory Commissio'sl
;n five of the discrepancies have either beencorrected or are now being corrected. The utility disputed one criticism — involving a statistical technique used to "smooth" or average the anticipated frequencies from an earthquake — and said another might be due more to slightly different approaches to the same problem than to any true disagreement between PG&E and the Brookhaven scientists.

Hoch, in a telephone interview, said that his company began taking a second look at some of its own 1979 analyses in late 1981 and early 1982 — even as the Brookhaven team was conducting its own independent, NRC-commissioned evaluation of the No. 1 Diablo Canyon reactor — and recognized that errors had been made.

But because the Nuclear Regulatory Commission did not allow any direct communications between the utility and the Brookhaven team, so as to insure the independence of the latter's work, it had been impossible to keep the team informed of current events, Hode said.

"Had we been able to do so," Hoch said, "I think their report would have come out differently."

But David S. Fleischaker, an attorney representing the Mothers For Peace, a group opposed to the operation of the Diablo Canyon plant, took issue with Hoch's explanation.

"When were these corrections made?" he asked and then answered his own question: "In late 1981, after PG&E had already received a license to begin low-power tests.

"What the Brookhaven report clearly shows is that this plant was licensed on faulty qualifications, based as those qualifications were on a flawed 1979 model drawn up by PG&E and its consultant, URSBlume."

Fleischaker said the Brookhaven report had raised two "nagging questions" about the Diablo installation: One, are there other parts of the plant, that were erroneously analyzed by the utility and its consultant in 1979 or earlier; and, two, is the modelling approach used by the Brookhaven team more likely to turn up design flaws than the simpler model used by PG&E?

"I applaud the way the NRC has handled this situation so far," Fleischaker said, "and our plan now is to get the commission to turn the Brookhaven team loose on other critical parts of the Diablo plant and see if there are mistakes there just waiting to be uncovered."

National Guard, state police outnumber picketing packers

DAKOTA CITY, Neb. (AP) — About 80 National Guardsmen and 50 state troopers were stationed at the gates of a meat processing plant again today, but there were no incidents as workers crossed picket lines for the morning shift.

About 20 pickets from the striking United Food and Commercial Workers union caused no disturbances at the plant operated by Iowa Beef Processors, Inc.

Gov. Charles Thone called out National Guard units Tuesday to quell violence that broke out last week when the plant reopened with workers hired to replace the strikers.

The last time the National Guard was ordered to the scene of a Nebraska strike was in the Depression, during a labor dispute involving Omaha streetcar operators.

Members of Local 222 of the United Food and Commercial Workers walked off the job June 7 in a dispute over whether they should accept a four-year wage freeze rather than a two-year freeze.

Two armored personnel carriers and four trucks rumbled up to the plant gates at 3 p.m. Tuesday, just before the day shift ended. The guardsmen scrambled from the vehicles and took up positions with the troopers.

Only about 20 pickets were on hand and employees left the plant without incident.

"We are here to support the patrol and enforce the laws of Nebraska," state Adj. Gen. Edward Binder said. "We will remain as long as we are needed." Eighty other guardsmen are nearby and can be called on if necessary, he added.

State Patrol Maj. Gene Morrissey displayed railroad spikes and ball-bearings he said were thrown at his troopers on Monday when tear gas was used to disperse 300 pro-union marchers.

Binder said four helicopters are in the area if needed to quell violence at the plant and slaughterhouse, owned by the nation's largest beef-processing company.

Six people were arrested Tuesday for violating picketing laws, bringing to 55 the number of arrests since July 20, when a rock-and brick-throwing spree injured 29 people.

Gov. Charles Thone ordered in the guardsmen, who were not to be issued guns, after Monday's disturbance. Bill Schmitz, business agent for the local, accused Thone of "providing a private police force for Iowa Beef."

While the guardsmen were moving in, Iowa Beef was obtaining a temporary restraining order against the local in Dakota County Court.

The order prohibits the union from harassing or physically harming workers, suppliers, management, staff and the general public at the plant. It also bars the union from causing bodily injury or property damage and using "vile and obscene language" while picketing.

A company spokesman said a hearing for a permanent injunction will be held Aug. 4 in Dakota County District Court. The company, purchased last June by Occidental Petroleum Corp. for $800 million in Occidental stock, is based in Dakota City.

Iowa Beef owns 12 slaughter and processing plants in Nebraska, Iowa, Texas, Kansas, Idaho, Minnesota and Washington state. It employs over 12,000 people and slaughters between 120,000 to 130,000 cattle weekly. It owns pork processing operations in Iowa and Nebraska.

The union has walked off the job here four times since 1968.

In the current strike, a federal mediator was called in when talks broke off last month, but no negotiating sessions have been held.

Base pay at the plant is $8.97 an hour for processors and $9.27 an hour for workers in the slaughterhouse, company officials say.

Computer wipes out news

Anyone knowing anything of computers will tell you computers can only do what humans tell them to do. However, that, apparently, is a lie. Evidence suggests The Reporter-Telegram's computer system has a mind of its own. For, without any human prompting, it frequently does the most perplexing of things. Today it destroyed all the energy, business and financial news we would have liked to have published in this section. (Suggesting, perhaps, that our electronic brains have somewhat a left-leaning, anti-business bias.) We were only able to salvage some stale and trivial items about nuclear power and a meat packers strike.

We will attmept to re-educate the circuits, and instill in them a desire to serve you, our readers. There is no telling how long this effort may take. Similar problems have been solved with a squirt of oil and a few gentle raps with a hammer. But in other instances we have had to call in a neurosurgeon from New York. Somehow, this problem too will be solved. Bear with us. We care, even if the computer doesn't.

GM to close old Chevy plant

SAGINAW, Mich. (AP) — General Motors Corp. will close a Chevrolet parts plant due to the continuing slump in new car sales and the age of the facility, the automaker announced.

A fixture in Saginaw for 75 years, the plant will be phased out over the next 13 months, Chevrolet spokesman Jim Williams said Monday.

Some of the 500 plant workers will have the option of relocating at other parts plants, but Williams said an undetermined number would be placed on indefinite layoff.

Market opens for Hawaiian brokers at 3 a.m.

By LINDY WASHBURN
Associated Press Writer

HONOLULU (AP) — A gray car glides through the silent streets of downtown Honolulu, unimpeded by traffic in the pre-dawn darkness as stockbroker Jay Itagaki heads for work.

It's 3 a.m. For the past decade, Itagaki has been on the job in time for the opening of New York financial markets, 5,000 miles and six time zones away.

"There isn't much traffic, let me tell you," he said. "I see a few drunks going home from the bars, and there are some strange women who wave at me from the corner of Hotel Street" in Honolulu's red light district.

Itagaki is one of a small number of Honolulu financial executives — bank presidents, currency traders, commodities dealers, and stockbrokers — who set their schedules by market hours a world away.

He pulls into the parking garage at E.F. Hutton's corporate suite on Bishop Street. In his office, a teletype operator is ready to open the wires.

On Wall Street, it's 9 a.m., the start of another business day. Itagaki scans the Reuters and Dow Jones financial wires in his office and checks the interest rates.

He begins calling Chicago and New York for currency, stock and commodity transactions he'll discuss with his Honolulu clients over lunch nine hours later.

A 40-cup coffee pot is "perking away in the back room," he said. "I live on that in the morning. I'm numb until my sixth cup."

To compute Hawaii time, subtract six hours from Eastern Daylight Time and five hours from Eastern Standard Time.

"You can work in one quadrant of the world in the morning and another quadrant in the afternoon," said Philip Norris, manager of E.F. Hutton here.

"At 4:15 (a.m.) I can catch my Swiss and Italian clients. There's a 12-hour differential to the central part of Europe. And late in the afternoon, I'm getting in touch with clients in Singapore and Hong Kong. Of course, it's already the next day there.

"You adjust to everything after 20 years," he added.

But after just three weeks on the early-morning shift, international banker Gigi Davidson isn't sure she'll ever adjust.

"Oh God," she said of her hours. "I usually come in at four — and I get up at 3:30, the last possible moment. I know I have to do it for a while, but I sure don't want to spend my life at it."

Miss Davidson, an assistant vice president at First Hawaiian Bank, is single. "It would be much harder if I had a family," she said.

"You cut down on your social life," she admitted. "You've got to, or you fall asleep."

Itagaki, who gets five hours of sleep a night, said: "By the end of the week, I crash. Just go home and flake out."

Honolulu's Merrill Lynch office has enough brokers to spread the misery, said manager Eugene Banks.

"We rotate it around," he said. "Let's say they get up at three. With a large staff, each broker does it for a week or so every six to eight months."

Even bank presidents get up early. Hugh Pingree, First Hawaiian's president, arrives at the office by 6:30 each day to get briefed for an important investment meeting at 7 a.m.

"It makes a long day, I'll tell you," he said. "I try to get home by 6 p.m."

There are some benefits. Although none of the executives interviewed mentioned spending the afternoon at the beach, Norris goes out to a long lunch from 11:30 to 2.

Sam Cooke, a vice president at Dean Witter Reynolds, plays a set of tennis at lunchtime and leaves work at 4 p.m. He arrives at 5:30 a.m.

Lovelady announces gas discovery at Diaz well in Hidalgo County

MIDLAND — Ike Lovelady Inc. recently announced a new gas field discovery located in Share 10, Porcion 41, Hidalgo County, Texas.

The Diaz No. 1 well tested at a calculated absolute open flow of 2,750,000 cubic feet per day. The well produced 901,000 cubic feet of gas per day with 6.95 barrels of condensate through a 12/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 1285 pounds. Bottom hole pressure was recorded at 1560 pounds per square inch. This well is a natural completion from perforations from 3,946 feet to 3,949 feet in a lower Frio sand.

The Diaz No. 1 well is a south offset to Lovelady's own oil discovery in the Frio 3,700 feet sand in the East Sullivan City multipay field. Ike Lovelady Inc. owns 43.75 percent of the working interest in this well and the approximately 200 acres surrounding the well.

NPC studies Third World's petroleum

Washington, D.C. — National Petroleum Council (NPC) Chairman John F. Bookout announced recently the appointment of the NPC committee on Third World Petroleum Development. The Committee, formed in response to a request from Secretary of Energy James B. Edwards, will prepare a draft report for consideration by the membership of the NPC.

In requesting the study, Secretary Edwards emphasized that, to the extent possible, the United States should encourage the development of indigenous energy resources in oil importing, developing countries. The NPC was asked to focus on the factors which affect the decisions of the private sector to explore for and develop oil and gas in Third World nations.

John E. Swearingen, Chairman of theBoard, Standard Oil Company (Indiana), Chicago, Illinois, will chair the Committee. Meetings of the Committee are announced in the Federal Register and are open to the public.

Zimmer reportedly fired

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — Texas Rangers Manager Don Zimmer has been fired, but agreed to remain with the team through tonight's concluding game of a series with the Milwaukee Brewers, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported today.

"I'm not confirming or denying anything," Rangers majority owner Eddie Chiles said Tuesday night when asked about the firing.

Zimmer was fired in a meeting Monday morning with Chiles in Fort Worth, the newspaper reported. The Rangers beat the Brewers Monday night, 3-1, but lost, 8-2, Tuesday to fall to 38-57 for the season.

Chiles hedged earlier Tuesday when he was asked about Zimmer.

"As far as I know Zimmer's in the dugout and he'll be there tomorrow night," said Chiles.

When asked what Zimmer's status after Wednesday, Chiles said:

"I don't even know about after that. I don't even know if I'll be here after that."

Zimmer was asked to resign during a Monday morning meeting with Chiles, but refused to quit, the newspaper reported.

Chiles fired Pat Corrales, the man Zimmer suceeded, on the final day of the 1980 season.

Darrell Johnson may get the job, the newspaper said. Zimmer replaced when Johnson when he became manager of the Boston Red Sox in 1976. Zimmer earlier had managed the San Diego Padres.

Johnson, who also has managed the Seattle Mariners, is a coach with the Rangers. He is said to be a favorite of Paul Richards, who has been acting general manager since Eddie Robinson was fired earlier this season.

Zimmer had informed most of his coaches and a few selected players that he was gone before Tuesday's game, the newspaper said.

Chiles, who rarely leaves a game before it is over, departed in the fifth inning Tuesday night, surrounded by a police escort.

"You'll have to ask Eddie Chiles about that," said Zimmer, who stayed calm and even laughed. "If he says I'm going to be here tomorrow night, then I'll be here."

But Zimmer said he wouldn't be surprised if he didn't last the week.

"I wouldn't have been surprised if I had been fired seven weeks ago."

"I will not resign," Zimmer said. "And if anyone said I'd resign they're out of line."

The newspaper reported there had been hints that Zimmer knew more than he was telling. He refused to discuss pitching plans for the team beyond Wednesday night.

He also suggested that a sports reporter switch his days off so he could be at Arlington Stadium Wedenesday. He wouldn't say why.

In Hi-Junior Tournament

Midland faces Odessa in final

The Hi-Junior Baseball Tournament at Cubs Stadium, originally scheduled for Tuesday, turned into a marathon with the final game finishing at 12:18 a.m. this morning.

The final results saw McCamey's Badgers and San Angelo packing their bags for home while the Midland Mustangs went extra innings to gain a berth in the today's finals against undefeated Odessa.

MIDLAND advanced into the finals 11-7 victory over San Angelo in the second game of the losers bracket.

Starter Mike Timlin pitched a shutout through three innings and contributed a two-run homer in the second. Timlin's blast traveled well over the Marlboro Man in left field near the 368 marker and gave the Mustangs a 2-0 lead. Midland tallied one more run in the inning when Dennis Cano singled and scored on two consecutive errors.

BUT THE fourth inning was a disaster for Timlin who gave up three walks a double and a grandslam home run. With the bases loaded, Arthur Lopez poked a hanging curve ball over the left field fence to give San Angelo a 6-3 lead in the fourth.

With a little help, Midland fought back in the next inning as they scored four runs on three singles. San Angelo's contribution included two wild pitches and four errors.

San Angelo's Fred Blackman sent the contest into extra innings when he doubled down the left field line, scoring Larry Guerro, who had singled, from first.

But the Midland club, which had to play back-to-back games, literally ran away with the contest in the eighth. They added four stolen bases to their two hits in scoring four runs in the extra stanza.

Bryan Willis, who was Midland's third pitcher in the contest, finished strong as he struck out two in the eighth.

THE MUSTANGS were in the losers bracket by virtue of a 10-2 loss at the hands of their I-20 rivals, Odessa.

Craig Steen struck out nine and walked three for Odessa.

Three of Midland's six hits came in the third when they scored their two runs.

Ronnie Lovera was 2-for-3 and drove in five runs for Odessa while Kirk Strahan homered ver the left field fence.

Midland's only extra base hit came in the third when Bryan Willis tripled to Cary Brown, who singled.

Keith McDonald then singled Willis home.

IN THE first game in the loser's bracket, San Angelo broke out of their scoring slump and turned the basepathsinto a track as they drubbed McCamey 23-8.

San Angelo used six doubles and one round-tripper in their 15-hit attack. The Badgers helped the San Angelo offense as they comitted 14 errors.

Badger starter, Timmy Welling, was tagged for four runs in the first two innings and gave up seven in the third before being pulled.

San Angelo wasn't any nicer to Wellings replacement, Heath Stephens, adding five more runs before the inning ended.

San Angelo went through its batting order twice in the 12 run third stanza.

Fred Blackman took the easy victory and Larry Guerro had an inside the park home run.

Midland will face Odessa at 6:00 p.m. today at Cubs Stadium in the championship game. If Midland should win the first contest, the second and final game will be played at 8:30. If Odessa wins the first game they will be the tournament champions.

Cubs lose to Shreveport, 7-2

Midland moves on to Jackson

SHREVEPORT — The Midland Cubs continue to have their problems on the road after dropping four of five games to the Shreveport Captains here this week. The last setback came Tuesday in a 7-2 loss to the Caps.

Frank Williams, who was released by Jacksonville last May before being picked up by Shreveport, got his first Texas League victory by giving up only six hits and two runs to the Cubs in eight innings of work. Ted McKenna came on to pitch the final inning and gave up one hit, but no further damage was done.

Williams tossed shutout ball for five innings before the Cubs got one run in the sixth on a grounder by Bruce Chaney. The Cubs got the other run off, which was charged to Williams, on a single by Fritz Connally, who had three hits on the night. Connally's hit came off McKenna.

Shreveport jumped on Cub starter Randy Clark for four runs in the fifth inning, including Jeff Ransom's third homer of the year, a solo shot. Shreveport's Bob Cummings connected for his ninth homer of the season in the eighth for the Caps' final two runs. It was Cummings' second homer in as many nights against the Cubs.

The Cubs now travel to Jackson for a five game series with the Mets, beginning tonight. The Cubs are now 16-19 in the second half play in the Texas League, but are still only two games behind San Antonio in the TL West. However, the Cubs can't afford to lose four of five games to the Mets.

Tribe's Harrah unhappy

CLEVELAND (AP) — Veteran Cleveland Indians third baseman Toby Harrah says he is fed up with his team's constant flirting with mediocrity.

"I've been playing baseball 12 years and I'm on a rebuilding team again," Harrah said Tuesday night after the Indians suffered their second straight 8-1 loss to the Kansas City Royals.

"I guess we've got a little Minnesota in us," Harrah said. "Look at our 25-man roster — or is it a 22-man roster? Check the roster out and tell me if we should win the pennant or not. I've been here four years, and this is another instant replay.

"There's not too many things you can say after the last two nights."

The Indians have suffered a number of injuries recently, particularly to their pitching staff. The problems forced Manager Dave Garcia to keep pitcher Tom Brennan on the mound for seven innings in Monday night's loss, although Brennan surrendered 14 hits and eight runs.

"It's tough," Harrah said. "You take a guy like (Cleveland relief ace) Dan Spillner. You should use him like (the New York Yankees' Rich) Gossage. Instead, you're using him as a mop-up pitcher."

Harrah also complained that the Indians' front office has brought too many inexperienced players onto the club too quickly.

Golfer enjoys envy instead of usual pity

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

It's nice to be envied for a change. After following our adventures on some of Texas' more notorious golf resorts, golfers, who once regarded us with pity, now regard us with a certain amount of awe...until they see, despite our intensive training at the famed Hills Golf Academy of Lakeway, the swing has changed but the results are essentially the same.

Even a baseball man such as Harold Williams was impressed. The other night he wondered, "That must have been a nice trip. How many months were you gone?"

Actually, he wasn't too far off base. What should have been a month was crowded into hectic days. It was like one of those 10 countries in seven days trips, providing you crammed Paris in in one night.

IT WAS one of those trips where you are always rushing to be at your next destination on time. Only in this case, it was rush-rush-rush to make a tee time. Or rush-rush-rush to catch the van to make the afternoon tee time. Or hurry up and finish the round so you won't be late for dinner. And the dinners were something you wouldn't want to be late for or miss.

They told us to bring our bathing trunks and tennis racquets for use when we weren't on the course or in the suana or weight room rounding into shape. Of course, most of the tourists pretty well-rounded already. Still, we did manage to take a couple of plunges, but tennis courts were just something we passed on the way to the golf course.

It was the kind of pace where we were up early and in bed just after dusk.

ONE OF the senior members, a travel writer from Kansas City, complained as we arrived at Walden that he hadn't been up past 9:30 p.m. yet. So, after supper he visited the lounge and they poured him into bed about 11 p.m. He still doesn't know what time he got in.

After rounds at Lakeway and Horseshoe Bay's Ram Rock, a true test of patience as well as skill, the same writer had reached that stage of utter frustration where club throwing, in the closest lake, was the next and only logical step.

He was a real bear to play with Then, he challenged every member of the foursome he was playing with..."a quarter a hole." He was still terrible and if he were playing a slot machine, he couldn't have lost quarters any faster. Still, it was the therapy he needed. He had a ball the rest of the trip.

IT TURNED out we had a lot of acquaintances in common with Golf Digest writer Ross Goodner, a native of Oklahoma who worked on the Daily Oklahoman with Jay Simon, now editor of GD, and a lot of other people we knew. The only thing wrong with Ross was that he didn't know whether he'd "get over to the British Open this year or not."

Last time we had a meal like the one at Woodlands was when John Cox of the Chicago Cubs took us to Steven's in Scottsdale, Ariz., a couple of springs ago. Steven's is Steve Stone's new restaurant, Steve's primary source of income now that the former Cy Young winner has retired from baseball.

It was one of those feeds that began at 7 and finally ended around 11:30. We've been doing extra laps ever since and that was back in May.

MOST FOLKS want to know which course we liked best. "I think I can tell by your stories," said Midland High grid coach Pat Culpepper.

Actually, picking out a best course isn't that easy. If it's score, give us Woodcreek or April Sound. Both were needed ego boosts. But, strangely, it isn't so much the courses that come back as the individual holes. And, it's the tough ones you remember the most.

The seventh at Lakeway's Hills, the Jack Nicklaus creation, is the one everybody comes away talking about, just for the beauty of the setting. It's beautiful par-three and so engrossed is the golfer in its picture-post card attributes, he really doesn't give it much thought.

It was on the van to Houston that we realized what made it so tough. It's not the waterfall or the pond between the falls and green, but it's the way Nicklaus booby-trapped the damned thing.

THE GREEN, 145 yards or so away, angles away from the tee box, but the water parallels it all the way. That means the proper club must be selected for the pin-setting, which may vary anywhere from 60 to 70 yards, and any deviation left or right is big trouble, either water, sand or rough.

The Bermuda Triangle at Walden was a memorable experience, the over water holes of 10-11-12 and some of those double doglegged par fives. One go wasn't enough.

It seemed as though Horsehoe Bay had more horse's tail holes than perhaps any of the others. After you've played 'em once, the urge remains to see what might happen, knowing the hazards. Most likely more of the same.

One thing about all of them...they didn't forgive mistakes.

Eastern whips Odessa, 12-2

Midland teams make it all-Tall City Soph final

ODESSA — Midland Eastern's Rotary set up an all-Midland shootout for today by whipping Odessa Northwest Wrecker 12-2 here Tuesday night in the Sophomore League region playoff tournament.

Eastern and Midland Western's Trott & Company are now the only undefeated teams left in the tournament, but that will change when the two meet today at 5 p.m. The loser will have to play again at 9 p.m. in a loser's bracket game with hopes of staying alive in the double elimination tournament.

The winner of the Eastern-Western battle will advance to the championship round of the tournament and would have to lose two games Thursday to lose the title.

Five of Eastern's runs against the Odessa team Tuesday came on homerun power. Robbie Sims connected on a three-run shot and Matt Sears blasted a two-run homer to pace the Eastern attack.

Kenny DeLaGarza allowed only two runs in seven innings of work for Eastern to pick up the victory.

Elcor advances to state Seniors

SAN ANGELO — Midland Elcor made short work of their best-of-three regional Senior Teenage League playoff series with San Angelo Big I here Tuesday with a 16-5 win.

Elcor defeated San Angelo Monday and put the series away Tuesday with a 22-hit attack, including two homers and four doubles. Elcor now moves to Waco for the state Senior League tournament where they will face the winner of the Snyder-Sweetwater series at 5 p.m. Monday at the Senior Kiwanis Field.

Randy Pepper and Robbie Goetz, a pickup player from Odessa, both homered against San Angelo Tuesday. Barry Blackwell added two doubles to the awesome Elcor attack while Teddy Bartley and Jose Carrasco each doubled also.

Goetz picked up the victory with six innings of work before he was relieved by John Denton in the seventh. San Angelo got nine hits off the two Midland hurlers, including a homer by Benny Castro, a triple by Joe Perez and a double by Zeke Barron.

Everyone got at least one hit for the Elcor team and six players had three hits.

Oilers trade Angelo to Pack

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Angelo Fields, veteran tackle for the Houston Oilers, has been traded to the Green Bay Packers for a third-round pick in the 1983 draft.

"We wish Angelo the best of luck and hope he develops into a fine player," Head Coach Ed Biles said. "One of the factors involved was that Ralph Williams has come along very well and Nick Eyre has developed from a standpoint where we think both are ready to see some playing time."

Let's set speed limit, outlaw the .240, .280 zone pitches

The Los Angeles Times
Washington Post News Service

Earl Weaver gets thrown out of his 86th game. Pete Rose gets thrown out of his first game since the Reds played in Crosley Field, which was torn down 12 years ago. Carl Yastrzemski gets thrown out of his first game since 1975. All of them are arguing on strike calls.

So, we bring you today an expert on that most enduring of elemental enmities, the ballplayercoachmanagerowner vs. the umpire. We will swear in Myopia Mulligan himself to share his knowledge before he himself goes to that Great Arbiter In The Sky after 40 years of calling 'em as he sees 'em. Not as they are, as he sees 'em.

Q - Myopia, first of all can we define a "strike" for the people, let's say a "perfect" stike?

A - Yes, a "perfect" strike to a ballplayer is easy. It's any ball you hit off the centerfield fence. A "strike" is any ball you hit safely.

Q — I see. Well, then, what is a "ball"?

A - A "ball" is any pitch you take. I mean, why would you take it if it isn't a ball?

Q - Well, then, what is a "checked" swing? Yaz was called out by the third-base umpire who ruled he swung at a ball while Yaz felt he held up.

A - A "checked" swing is any pitch you swing at but wish you hadn't halfway through. A "checked" swing is a pitch you didn't hit.

Q - Can you elaborate, Myopia?

A - Well, if a ballplayer realizes he is fooled, and he starts to check his swing, and the bat hits the ball anyway, by accident, and goes for a double down the left-field line, does the batter come back and say, "Say, Ump, I'm sorry. I held up on that swing. I didn't break my wrists. Therefore, that hit shouldn't count because, technically, I didn't swing at it, and, if I hadn't hit it, I would have argued I didn't swing at it?" Did you ever know of a batter in the whole history of baseball to do that?

Q — Moving right along, Myopia, what is an "illegal" pitch?

A - Any pitch that fools you. Batters want the ball thrown out, the pitcher searched, and the league president consulted. Some of them would go to the Supreme Court.

Q - But it doesn't have to have an illegal substance? Vaseline, hair tonic, spit, tobacco, razor cuts?

A - Not at all. It can be a straight fastball. If it fools you, you know it can't be legal, don't you? You're a Major League hitter. So, you can hit an honest pitch, right? You're gonna lose you self-esteem if you can't persuade yourself the pitcher's cheating. First, then, you have to persuade the umpire. If he runs his hands through the pitcher's hair, you feel better. You also convince the crowd you would have hit a home run except the guy on the mound is dealing from the bottom of the deck. You got to remember the curveball was illegal when Candy Cummings first invented it.

Q — So, what does the batter want, basically?

A - Basically, he wants a strike zone the size of a keyhole. I also think he would like limits set on the velocity of pitches.

Q - What do you mean?

A - Well, look at it this way: Big-leaguers like fastballs. As Pete Rose says, "By looking for the fastball, you can adjust to the other. But, if you're looking for the slow curve, the fastball is by you before you can adjust." So, I think major leaguers would like a lower limit set on speed. Nobody should be able to throw the ball any slower than 85 miles-per-hour.

Q - And that would satisfy them?

A - Oh, no. I think they would want a limit set on the maximum speed, too. Nothing over, say, 92 miles-an-hour. Certainly, nothing over 100 miles-an-hour. Nolan Ryan would have to pitch lefthanded.

Q — Are there any other changes they would like to see?

A - Well, you recall Ted Williams' diagram of the strike zone? How he put up a square and superimposed it over the plate and said "If you hit a ball here — indicating low and outside — you will bat .280. If you hit a ball here — indicating high and inside — you will bat .243. If you wait for a ball out over the plate, you will bat .390." You remember that? Well, the batters would like to eliminate all pitches in the .240 to .280 zones. Anything that merely catches the corners has to be a ball.

Q - What do the pitchers think about all this?

A - They think this is what the umpires do already.

Q - What do they think a "base on balls" is?

A - A disease, mainly, commonly found in umpires. They're born with it, pitchers think.

Q - What do they think a "strike" is?

A - Any ball that gets by the batter. Even on the bounce.

Q — What do they think when a batter hits it off the wall?

A - It depends. If the batter hits a pitch they intended as a ball, they think it should be called back. They think it's bush league to hit a pitch designed as a waste pitch. Safely, that is. If you pop it up, they say, "See how I set him up?"

Q - What if the batter hits a strike off the wall – or over it?

A - They say, "It was a mistake. He hit a mistake."

Q - It looks like unresolvable warfare to me. Why don't they get computers?

A - You think computers would take the abuse we do?! Thev'd blow a fuse.

Angels' Fred Lynn regains old magic

By KEN PETERS

ANAHEIM, Calif. (AP) — Fred Lynn was slowly slipping from MVP to mediocrity, but almost magically he's rediscovered that old touch.

The California Angels outfielder had a dismal 1981 season and a so-so start this year. A month ago, he was was hitting .278, with only three home runs and 16 runs batted in. Currently the hottest hitter in the major leagues, he's raised his average more than 20 points and has 13 homers and 49 RBI.

It took Lynn, the 1975 American League MVP and Rookie of the Year and 1979 batting champion at Boston, some time to figure out what was causing his plate production to dip. When he discovered the causes, however, the cure worked overnight.

"I had thought about it a lot, and decided I was being defensive at the plate, not smooth and free-swinging like I used to be," Lynn said.

"And about five weeks ago, I was watching some old films of my swing and realized that I used to hold my hands lower and take a much wider stance.

"I went out the next night and hit a homer off Scott McGregor and was on my way.

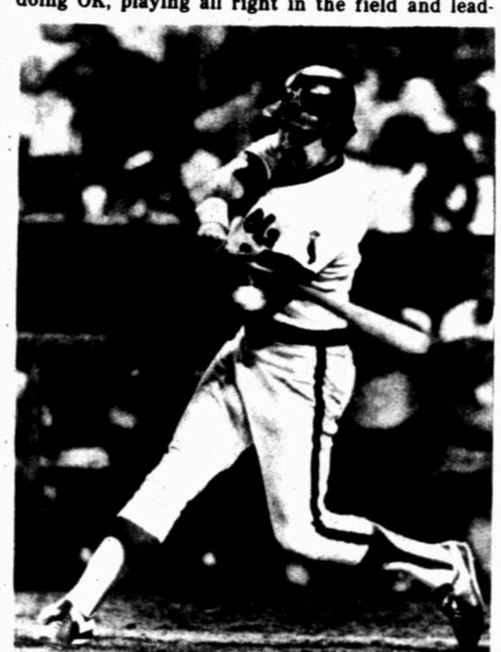

"It was the change at the plate and the change up here," Lynn said, pointing at his head. "I'm an aggressive hitter again."

Afterg Tuesday night's game against the Oakland A's, he was riding a 17-game hitting streak during which he was batting over .400, with seven homers and 27 RBI.

Thinking, which helped Lynn end his problems at the plate, also helped cause them. He was switched from the middle of the batting order to the second hitting spot this spring, and tried to adjust.

"I thought I had to do everything like a No.2 hitter," Lynn recalled. "I was just trying to nick the ball, get on base.

"I was hitting an awful lot of doubles down the left-field line," said the left-handed hitting Lynn. "I was doing OK, playing all right in the field and leading the league in doubles and hitting around .250 ... but it wasn't me."

Angels' Fred Lynn
...those Red Sox days are back

He's now hitting in the middle of the order again, and slashing the ball.

"I'm taking a long stride, pulling the ball more than I ever did ... and it's great."

His current hitting tear ends a long period of frustration in Anaheim for the 31-year-old Lynn, who came to California from Boston in a trade during the winter of 1981.

Cage rules undergo revamping

SPRINGFIELD, Mass. (AP) — More than a dozen college basketball conferences are experimenting with some form of a shot clock or three-point basket next season, and one conference will allow players six personal fouls.

None of the experimental rules will be used in the NCAA's championship tournament and all baskets will count two points in the determination of a national scoring champion, according to Edward Steitz, athletic director of Springfield College and head of the NCAA's basketball rules committee.

The visiting team will have the choice of rules in non-conference games, Steitz said.

The annual Basketball Hall of Fame benefit game here Nov.20 between national champion North Carolina and St. John's, which opens the college season, also will be played without a shot clock or three-point basket, he said.

The changes stack up this way in the 12 experimenting Division I conferences, with all three-point baskets measured from the front of the rim:

—Atlantic Coast Conference, a 30-second shot clock that will be turned off for the last four minutes of the game and a 19-foot three-point line.

—Big East Conference, a 45-second clock, off for the last five minutes of the game.

—Big Sky, three-point basket from 21 feet, three inches.

—Big Ten, three-point basket from 20 feet, three inches.

—Metro, players will be allowed up to six personal fouls a game.

—Missouri Valley, three-point basket from 19 feet.

—Ohio Valley, 30-second clock off for the last four minutes of the game, and a 19-foot three-pointer.

—Pacific Coast, 30-second clock begining when the ball crosses the half-court line, off for the last four minutes of the game, and a 19-foot three-pointer.

—Southeastern, 45-second clock for the entire game.

—Southwest, 45-second clock off for the last five minutes of the game.

—Sun Belt, 45-second clock off for the last four minutes of the game, and a 19-foot three-pointer.

Hurtin' Hubbard homers to give Braves sweep

By KEN RAPPOPORT
AP Sports Writer

Atlanta second baseman Glenn Hubbard was hurting, but not enough to stay out of the second game of a crucial doubleheader with the San Diego Padres.

"I had to talk to him a little," said Hubbard of Atlanta Manager Joe Torre, who had not listed his second baseman in the lineup after a slight muscle pull in Tuesday night's 9-2 opening-game victory over the Padres.

"I told him I could make the plays in the field and that it only hurt when I swung," added Hubbard.

It obviously didn't hurt him enough, though, to keep him from hitting a two-run homer in the 10th inning to provide the Braves with an 8-6 victory and a sweep of the doubleheader. The two victories boosted Atlanta's lead over the Padres in the National League West to seven games, their biggest of the season.

Hubbard said he didn't think the drive over the left-field fence at Atlanta Stadium would be a homer, "but it was nice when it went over."

Dale Murphy, who had a homer for the Braves in each game to boost his major league leadership to 26, helped set the stage for Hubbard's winning hit in the second game when he reached above the center-field fence to rob Ruppert Jones of a two-run homer in the top of the 10th.

"A seven-game lead puts us in a good position, but you can't sit on it," said Atlanta first baseman Chris Chambliss. "But I think it'll help everybody relax."

Murphy belted a two-run homer and Bob Walk hurled a five-hitter to help the Braves win the opener. Murphy's homer off Tim Lollar, 10-5, came in the third inning following a walk to Hubbard.

Walk, 9-7, also had two hits, including an RBI double in the fifth when Atlanta also scored three runs. He walked five and struck out two.

Astros 3, Reds 2

Nolan Ryan won his 200th career game, pitching a five-hitter and striking out 13, as Houston beat Cincinnati on Terry Puhl's run-scoring single in the eighth inning.

The 13 strikeouts were a season-high for Ryan, 11-9, and extended his own major league record of career games with 10 or more strikeouts to 143. It was the eighth time this year the Houston right-hander has reached double figures in strikeouts. Ryan walked only two batters.

Puhl's tie-breaking single in the eighth came off Charlie Leibrandt, 3-6.

Expos 4, Cubs 3

Gary Carter's three-run homer in the first inning powered Montreal over Chicago. Carter's 21st homer came off Randy Martz, 4-7, after Andre Dawson and Al Oliver had singled. The Expos scored their eventual winning run in the second on Tim Raines' RBI single.

Steve Rogers, the major leagues' earned run leader with a 2.13 mark going into the game, had a shaky start but posted his 13th victory against only four losses. Rogers gave up six hits and two runs in the first three innings and then retired 15 in a row before Bump Wills doubled in the eighth. Wills eventually scored on Leon Durham's double.

"I knew he was going to come in with a fastball and all I did was wait for it," said Carter of his homer. "When the count went to 3-and-1 with two men on, I knew it would be a fastball because he didn't want to walk me and fill the bases that early in the game."

Cardinals 9, Mets 4

Darrell Porter homered, doubled and singled to lead St. Louis over New York. Porter's two-run homer, his sixth of the season and first since June 11, keyed a 13-hit attack as the Cardinals extended their winning streak to five games.

Clinging to a 4-3 lead, the Cardinals erupted for five runs in the sixth to put the game away. Porter's homer off Terry Leach, the third of five New York pitchers, capped the rally.

"We changed quite a few things — mainly mechanics," said St. Louis Manager Whitey Herzog regarding Porter's hitting.

Porter, who had been booed regularly by Busch Stadium crowds while in the throes of an extended slump, was accorded a standing ovation following his homer.

Pirates 4, Phillies 0

Larry McWilliams and Rod Scurry combined on a three-hitter and Jason Thompson knocked in two runs to lead Pittsburgh over Philadelphia.

McWilliams, 7-4 this season and 5-1 since coming to the Pirates from Atlanta in a trade on June 29, retired the first 11 Phillies and didn't allow a hit until Gary Matthews's one-out single in the seventh inning. McWilliams struck out a career-high 10 batters and walked two in seven innings.

Philadelphia second baseman Manny Trillo set a major league record for consecutive chances without an error. Trillo handled his 459th straight errorless chance in the seventh inning to break the mark set by Baltimore's Jerry Adair in 1964-1965. Trillo also played in his 86th consecutive game without an error to break the NL record set by Ken Boswell of the New York Mets in the 1970 season.

Dodgers 7, Giants 3

Right-hander Joe Beckwith, recalled from the minors last week, didn't allow a hit in 52-3 innings of relief and Ron Cey belted a two-run homer as Los Angeles beat San Francisco.

Beckwith, 1-0, took over for starter Vicente Romo in the second inning after Romo left the game with a knee injury. Beckwith faced 18 batters, retiring 17 before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

Steve Garvey drilled three hits and knocked in two runs for the Dodgers.

Shaw faces surgery for worsening knee

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Robert Shaw says he plans to postpone knee surgery and will try to return as the Dallas Cowboys starting center this season, but team doctors say that may not be possible.

"The knee has gotten worse since the last time I saw him in March," Dr. Marvin Knight said Monday after Shaw's physical examination. "I don't know if he can play or not."

Knight said Shaw will need additional surgery to repair a torn ligament. Shaw, who had an operation after last year's sixth game, reinjured his left knee while lifting weights six weeks ago.

During a light workout Monday, he was walking with a limp and his leg was heavily bandaged. He said he has not exercised his knee since reinjuring it.

"I can't do much running," Shaw said. "The knee has been pretty painful."

Rizzuto denies retiring report

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Yankee broadcaster Phil Rizzuto is denying a published report that he plans to retire at the end of this season after 26 years behind the microphone.

The 64-year-old former shortstop, who won Most Valuable Player honors for the Yankees in 1950, told a television audience that he was not retiring. The New York Post earlier quoted Rizzuto as saying he would quit after this season.

Arguello debuts as welterweight

NEW YORK (AP) — As Alexis Arguello keeps increasing his weight, his chances of winning the most championships at different weight classes also increases.

The 30-year-old native of Nicaragua already has won world titles in three weight classes. He will be making his first appearance as a junior welterweight Sunday when he meets Kevin Rooney in a 10-rounder that will serve as a tuneup for Arguello's October showdown against Aaron Pryor, the World Boxing Association's junior welterweight champion.

If Arguello defeats Pryor, he would become the first man to win world titles in four weight divisions. The junior welterweight limit is 140 pounds, five pounds above the lightweight limit.

Arguello, who has won 19 consecutive championship bouts dating back to 1974, has held the WBA featherweight and World Boxing Council super featherweight titles and he is the WBC lightweight champion. His record is 75-4 with 61 knockouts.

Rooney, meanwhile, is dropping down in weight. He has fought as a welterweight, and feels he has an outside chance at upsetting Arguello. But he also feels that a loss wouldn't damage his career significantly, because of the caliber of his opponent.

"A good showing and a lot of doors will open to me," the 26-year-old fighter said. "It's a no-lose fight for me. I'm looking to show the nation what I've got."

An upset loss by Arguello in the bout at Bally's Park Place Casino-Hotel, to be televised by CBS, probably wouldn't keep Arguello from fighting Pryor, unless it was a quick loss ... and Rooney is more of a boxer than a puncher — six knockouts in 19 victories against a single loss.

Rooney didn't turn pro until 1979 under the tutledge of Cus D'Amato, who guided Floyd Patterson to the heavyweight championship.

J.R. expresses doubts

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — J.R. Richard, the one-time fireballing right-hander making a comeback from a stroke which felled him during the peak of his professional baseball career, said today that he has no doubts that he will someday return to the major leagues.

Richard told the NBC-TV "Today" show during a live interview that he feels he is improving each day and that he's not concerned that his success against 19- and 20-year-old Class A minor league hitters may be boosting his confidence prematurely.

NFLPA still owes Albuquerque debt

Tony Dorsett

FOOTBALL—More than $60,000 still is owed to Albuquerque, N.M., businessmen by the National Football League Players' Association, which met here in March to discuss salary increases. A spokesman for the NFLPA, John Buck, said checks to cover all the association's debts have been mailed.

But three city hotel officials said they still are owed for rooms and meeting facilities, as is the Albuquerque Convention Center, it was reported by the Albuquerque Tribune. The Tribune said the money owed includes $24,000 to the Hilton Inn, $10,000 to Sheraton Old Town Inn, between $5,000 and $10,000 to The Regent of Albuquerque and $5,000 to the convention center...

The Southland Conference plans to spend $100,000 during the next two years to improve the exposure of the seven-member league in football and basketball with Sports Production Inc. has a two-year contract to develop promotional materials for the SLC. League president Sam Gennuso of Arkansas State said "Cable TV is here and for real. What the Southland w doing is merely acquiring the expertise of some professionals to put their talent, creativity and experience to work for us. Gennuso said exposure is the lifeblood of sports." Dallas Cowboy back Tony Dorsett has been sued for divorce by his wife of nearly two years, who cited a personality conflict. Dorsett agreed in district court here last week to pay his wife, Julie Ann Simons Dorsett, a $2,500 monthly support through Oct. 1, pending a full hearing...

BASKETBALL—Henry Johnson, a former starter on the UT-Austin basketball team, faces a possible six-month sentence for playing basketball in a campus gym. Johnson, who lost his academic eligibility midway through the 1980-81 season, was arrested in Gregory Gym last week and was booked into the Travis County Jail on a misdemeanor criminal trespass charge. Justice of the Peace Guy Herman, who called the case "a waste of the court's time," set a personal recognizance bond and released Johnson on Thursday. "I don't think the Legislature meant for that (criminal trespass) statute to be used to give people six months in jail and a $1,000 fine for shooting hoops at Gregory Gym."...

Yankees fined $10,000 for Winfield arrangement

NEW YORK (AP) — The New York Yankees have been fined a reported $10,000 for their failure to include the details of a side agreement in Dave Winfield's multimillion-dollar contract when they submitted it to the American League.

The amount of the fine was not released by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn's office, but it was reported in Wednesday's New York Times.

In assessing the fine, Kuhn cited the violation of major league rule 3 (a), which prohibits clubs and players from making side agreements not embodied in the contract.

The agreement, stipulating annual contributions of $300,000 by the Yankees to the Winfield Foundation, came to light May 25 when the foundation sued Yankees principal owner George Steinbrenner for failing to make annual donations.

In the suit, the foundation, which aids underprivileged children, asked for $2,845,000 — $145,000 of which Steinbrenner did not donate in 1981 and $2.7 million covering the remaining nine years of Winfield's contract.

The day before he signed Winfield to a 10-year contract, Steinbrenner signed the agreement, which stipulated that he would be responsible for $3 million in donations to the Winfield Foundation.

Baltimore's Roger Carr suspended

TOWSON, Md. (AP) — Baltimore Colts wide receiver Roger Carr, who denounced new Coach Frank Kush after demanding to be traded, has been suspended without pay for three weeks and fined for insubordination.

Carr was suspended Tuesday by Colts officials angered by the 30-year-old veteran's comments about the team and Kush, who took over from Mike McCormack after Baltimore finished with a 2-14 record last season.

The nine-year veteran who was the Colts' first-round draft choice in 1974, was fined and suspended without pay for "actions, attitude and insubordination ... detrimental to the club," according to a team statement.

"It was an accumulation of things," said team spokesman Marty Goldman. "He had made some statements in the off-season about Kush and continued to follow up in training camp."

After meeting last week with Kush, Carr told reporters: "I think his program is just asinine. It's like a college program — only worse. It's a mess."

Team officials declined to specify the amount of the fine that was imposed on Carr.

The 30-year-old Carr also has refused to participate in team drills since reporting to training camp last Friday. He has also been widely quoted as saying he wanted to be traded so he could join former teammate Bert Jones on the Los Angeles Rams.

Jones, a veteran quarterback, was traded last spring to the Rams in return for a first-round draft pick.

"Kush felt he had to do something to prove he had the upper hand," said Carr, who planned to travel today to his home in Cotton Valley, La.

"This three-week suspension will only spur me to work harder," Carr said. "If nothing happens, if I'm not traded in three weeks, then I'll come back and be a thorn in their side again.

Pokes' Carano suffers injury

THOUSAND OAKS, Calif. (AP) — Dallas Cowboys backup quarterback Glenn Carano and defensive lineman Don Smerek were injured during practices Tuesday at the Cowboys' training camp here.

Carano suffered a strained calf muscle during an afternoon practice drill and will miss practices Wednesday, a team spokesman said.

Smerek, who was shot in the chest outside a Dallas bar during the off-season, reinjured an ankle that has been bothering him during most of the camp.

Rhubarb marks Yanks' win over Tigers

By HERSCHEL NISSENSON
AP Sports Writer

For it's one ball, two balls, no strikes ... and you're out of the old ball game.

Unfortunately, that variation of the traditional baseball ditty will never make the Detroit Tigers' hit parade.

New York was clinging to a 5-4 lead over the Tigers Tuesday night when Jerry Mumphrey, who singled ahead of Oscar Gamble's home run in the first inning and hit a three-run homer in the fourth, opened the Yankees' seventh with a double. Gamble walked, Dave Winfield sacrificed and an intentional walk to Graig Nettles loaded the bases.

The first pitch from Jack Morris to Rick Cerone was a ball and, according to umpire Mark Johnson, so was the next one. Catcher Lance Parrish had a different opinion and was asked to mind his own business — off the premises. One out.

"He was was trying to show me up," Johnson said. "He ripped his mask off and got in my face over balls and strikes. If he had stayed down, we could have had a good talk about it."

Morris charged off the mound and eventually was ejected for kicking dirt at second base umpire Dave Phillips, who had joined the discussion group. Two out.

"I ejected him for his actions away from the mound," Phillips said. "I tried to get him back to the mound and he lost his cool and used bad language and kicked the dirt and refused to go back to the mound. You like to keep a pitcher in, but we couldn't keep him in."

That brought Manager Sparky Anderson rushing from the dugout and ... three out, again courtesy of Johnson.

New York, however, still had only one out. When play resumed, Cerone hit a sacrifice fly off Dave Tobik to produce what turned out to be the winning run as the Yankees held on to win 6-5.

Orioles 5, White Sox 3

Cal Ripken Jr. beat a curfew by slamming a tie-breaking, two-run homer with one out in the bottom of the ninth inning. Ripken connected off Kevin Hickey, the third Chicago pitcher, for his 14th home run of the season. It came at 12:56 a.m., four minutes before the AL curfew.

Brewers 8, Rangers 2

Gorman Thomas drove in five runs with a pair of homers while Moose Haas and two relievers scattered nine hits as Milwaukee climbed back into first place in the AL East, one-half game ahead of Boston. Milwaukee took a 3-1 lead in the fourth inning when Robin Yount walked, Cecil Cooper singled and Thomas homered. Thomas made it 5-1 in the sixth with another homer after a single by Ted Simmons, who ripped a two-run double in the seventh.

Blue Jays 3, Red Sox 1

Toronto's Luis Leal posted his third consecutive victory with a four-hitter and Buck Martinez drove in one run and scored another. Leal was in command except for a home run by Jim Rice leading off the seventh inning. Toronto scored in the second inning on Martinez's single, Lloyd Moseby's double and Alfredo Griffin's grounder. Doubles by Griffin and Damaso Garcia made it 2-0 in the seventh and Martinez singled home an insurance run in the eighth.

Angels 8, A's 7

Don Baylor's RBI single with two out in the bottom of the 13th inning drove in Bob Boone with the winning run for California, which tied the game 6-6 on Boone's leadoff home run in the ninth.

Mariners 9, Twins 7

Dave Edler cracked his first two home runs of the season, including a grand-slam in the sixth inning off Jeff Little that wiped out a 5-4 Minnesota lead. Edler also hit a solo homer in the first inning, while Richie Zisk connected in the third and Bill Caudill registered his 18th save. Homers by Jesus Vega and Gary Gaetti accounted for five of Minnesota's runs.

Royals 8, Indians 1

Lee May and George Brett hit two-run homers as Kansas City beat Cleveland for the seventh time in eight meetings this season.

Dan Fouts says he can't support NFL Players strike

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Quarterback Dan Fouts, the San Diego Chargers' record-breaking passer, says he can't support the National Football League Players' Association because "they are trying to take away our ability to negotiate for ourselves."

Fouts said he will not honor the players' threatened strike "if the union continues its current posture."

Fouts, a critic of NFLPA Executive Director Ed Garvey since the 1974 collective bargaining agreement stifled the free-agent movement, said he doesn't support the union's demand for 55 percent of the NFL owners' gross revenues because its "ridiculous."

"I won't support Ed Garvey and his 55-percent demand," Fouts said. "I think it is ridiculous. I'd like to see them go after a more liberal free-agent policy. But if we have free-agenting, then we don't need a strong union."

He says he firmly opposes the attempt by Garvey and the union for a standardized wage scale for professional football players.

"What I don't agree with is that they are trying to take away our ability to negotiate for ourselves," he said. "You work your whole career trying to achieve something so you can go in and have some leverage with management. Now Ed Garvey wants to negotiate everyone's contract.

SPORTS IN BRIEF

Rose ties Cobb record

By The Associated Press

FOOTBALL

NEW YORK — Training camps took precedence over a new contract as negotiations between the National Football League Players Association and the NFL Management Council were postponed this week.

The union backed out of scheduled talks because of training camps opening around the league.

BASEBALL

PITTSBURGH — Philadelphia Phillies first baseman Pete Rose played in his 3,033rd major league game, tying Ty Cobb for third place on the all-time list.

Hank Aaron is the all-time leader with 3,298 games and Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox is second with 3,136 games.

YACHTING

MACKINAC ISLAND, Mich. — Eugene Mondry's yacht Leading Edge was declared the winner in the 75th sailing of the Chicago-to-Mackinac Island race, officials said.

TENNIS

SOUTH ORANGE, N.J. — Unseeded John James of Australia and Derek Tarr of South Africa both scored victories in first-round play of $125,000 Mutual Benefit Life Open at the Orange Lawn Tennis Club.

James registered a 3-6, 6-4, 7-5 victory over Ricardo Ycaza of Ecuador and Tarr scored a 6-4, 6-3 triumph over Rodney Harmon.

Dulaney captures six Festival golds

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Sandy Dulaney came to the National Sports Festival hoping to learn something about her rivals in the upcoming national roller skating championships. She's leaving with a record-tying six gold medals.

The 17-year-old high school senior from Buena Park, Calif., was on the winning four-women relay team Tuesday to match the mark set in the 1979 Festival by Cynthia Woodhead, a swimmer from Riverside, Calif.

Earlier, Dulaney had been on the winning mixed-four relay and also taken golds in each of her individual races — at 500, 1,000, 1,500 and 3,000 meters.

While Dulaney was tying the Festival medal records at Melody Skateland, across town more meet records were falling in swimming.

Ten swimmers broke Festival marks in the fast water of the new Indiana University Natatorium, bringing to 19 the number set in 23 races there this week.

Roger Van Jouanne of Renton, Wash., smashed the men's 400-meter individual medley mark in 4 minutes, 29.15 seconds. Susan Rapp of Alexandria, Va., did the same to the women's 200-meter breststroke record at 2:38.63.

Other record-breaking swimmers were Greg Rhodenbaugh, Cincinnati, 2:21.97 in the men's 200 breaststroke; Theresa Andrews, Annapolis, Md., 1:03.88 in the women's 100 backstroke; the East women's 400 medley relay; 4:15.90; the East men's 400 medley relay, 3:48.15; Matt Cetlinski, Lake Worth, Fla., 3:56.36 in the men's 400 freestyle, and Sherri Hanna, Miami, Fla., 4:15.47 in the women's 400 freestyle.

Swimming continues tonight with nine events, but boxing is finished for this Festival, ending with controversy over one split-decision.

Floyd Favors, the world's amateur bantamweight champ, won the gold medal in the 119-pound class with a 3-2 decision over Herb Bivalacqua that drew boos from the crowd and criticism from the loser.

"His coach told me I had it won so you know something's wrong. I thought I had it all the way. In fact, I don't even think it was close," said Bivalacqua, 18, the U.S. Amateur flyweight king from Marrero, La.

Favors, 18, from Capitol Heights, Md., said he ignored the boos from the 7,500 fans at the Indiana Convention Center. "In boxing, when you're the world champ, you have to block that out."

Jesse Benavides of Corpus Christi, Texas, became the only repeat winner in boxing with a unanimous decision over Steve McCrory of Detroit at 112 pounds. Benavides won last year's 106-pound title.

The other boxing champions were Bryan Jones of Philadelphia, 106 pounds; Bernard Gray of Boynton Beach, Fla., 125; Pernell Whitaker of Norfolk, Va., 132; Jerry Page of Columbus, Ohio, 139; Roman George of Lafayette, La., 147; Dennis Milton of New York, 156; Nathan Houser of Detroit, 165, and Bennie Head of Augusta, Ga., 178.

Gold medals also were awarded in figure skating, and there were no surprises. Vikki deVries, of Colorado Springs, Colo., took the women's gold medal, while Brian Boitano, of Sunnyvale, Calif., won the men's gold.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Thursday, July 29, 1982

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The elegant late actor William Powell, who starred with Myrna Loy in "The Thin Man," was born on this date. And it was on this day in 1957 that Jack Paar took over "The Tonight Show." Your job prospects are excellent in the coming year, and so are your chances for a promotion and raise. Real estate transactions enjoy especially favorable influences. Find out more about a special land deal. Romance is lively and should be particularly happy around Christmas. Your personal magnetism is considerable! Do not be surprised to find yourself in great social and professional demand. Creative efforts produce good results.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): A super day for furthering your career ambitions. Loved ones make what you consider unfair demands, but if you decide to honor them, you will like the results.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): This is not the time to relax and take it easy. Your future depends on your ability to think clearly and move quickly. Family members will be cooperative.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Come to grips with routine tasks and you will be ready to get more important projects under way. Emotional outbursts will work against you at place of employment. Remain calm.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Mate is in a cooperative mood today. Break away from your usual routine. Try new approaches to break up a logjam at place of employment. Original ideas impress higher-ups.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You recover quickly from a setback. Do not let the opposition get ahead of you. A business sideline gives you new hope for the future. The financial picture looks much brighter.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): It is important to look and feel like a winner if you want to get ahead. An old friend's warm encouragement gives you new incentive. Romance leads you to change your views.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You have reason to be extra proud of your mate or children today. Plan a special surprise to show how much you care. Make business decisions without delay.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You need some time alone to think about where you are going and what you need to get there. Entertain your business colleagues and you win new support at work.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): An old friendship is tested and emerges stronger than ever. Accept praise for a job well done. You deserve it! Spend money on new technological knowledge and modern equipment.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Hardship should now be behind you. Paying off your debts gives you a feeling of satisfaction. A commitment that makes you nervous will bring nothing but good.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Life gets easier as you become more established in business. Balance any criticism of your co-workers with praise for their good works. New alliances could result in greater profits.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Revive a flagging business relationship. New rapport could solve a financial crisis. Boredom in romance means that you had better re-evaluate your relationship.

Opening lead: Seven of ◇.

Some hands are so simple that even an expert can be fooled. This hand was reported in "Bridge," the official organ of the Netherlands Bridge Federation.

Four spades was a normal contract. Observe that, despite the great disparity in the quality of his suits, South opened in the higher-ranking of his two five-card major suits. The rest of the auction was unremarkable.

West led his fourth-best diamond and declarer finessed successfully. The most popular line was for declarer to lead a low trump. Where East played low, West won and continued with a diamond. Declarer won in dummy and cashed the ace of spades. Had both defenders followed, declarer would have been home. But West showed out. Declarer shifted his attention to hearts. East ruffed the second heart, drew dummy's last trump, and declarer was still left with a heart loser — down one.

The winning line is quite simple. With no fast losers in the side suits, declarer should realize that his contract is safe as long as he can hold his trump losers to three. Therefore, at trick two declarer should ignore trumps and start on hearts immediately. If both defenders follow to two high hearts, there are no problems. Declarer now leads ace of trumps and another, and he will lose either two or three trump tricks, depending on the break in that suit.

As the cards lie, East can ruff the second heart, but he can do no damage. Declarer wins a plain suit return, cashes the ace of spades and then reverts to hearts. Whether or not East ruffs the heart lead, declarer will be able to ruff his fourth heart on the table, and so end up losing no more than three trump tricks.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge" will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. ALL IN A DAY'S WORK

Bill now, fly later

Special from Reader's Digest

A man brought in a homing pigeon to a friend of mine who is a veterinarian at an animal hospital. The bird was suffering from an eye infection, and my friend assured the man that treatment would be completed by the next day and the pigeon could be taken home then.

"I'm afraid I'll be out of town tomorrow," the owner replied. "Why not bill me now and let him fly out the window when he's okay?"

In April, during his first week as a bus driver in a large midwestern city, my brother-in-law took a wrong turn on his express route from the suburbs to the downtown bus terminal. Appalled to find himself weaving his way through the city park with its budding trees and beds of blooming spring bulbs, he decided to act as if nothing were amiss. When he finally pulled into the terminal, he was relieved to find that he was only a few minutes behind schedule.

The first passenger off the bus was an elderly woman, who stopped and remarked, "Young man, that was lovely. I want you to know I've been riding this bus for years, and I've never been treated to a free tour of the park in spring before."

My husband, a junior-high-school teacher, was discussing with his colleagues the teen-age fad of pre-engagement rings. Asked if he would allow his daughter to accept such a ring from her boyfriend, one of the teachers exclaimed, "Absolutely not! Some kids mistake a pre-engagement ring for a learner's permit."

The supermarket where I shop receives fresh mushrooms each week. Even in the cool humidity of the produce case, they soon start to lose their whiteness and blacken around the edges. Then the grocer normally marks them down to half price.

One morning I noticed that the mushrooms' original price remained unchanged, even though they were beginning their fourth day in the produce section. Above the word "mushrooms" on the price tag, the canny grocer had written "aged" and underlined the word. When I visited the store later that day, the mushrooms had all been sold.

When my niece informed me she had that day completed her trial period as a typist, I asked her if she thought her new status would have any effect upon her work. "Definitely," she said, smiling. "I expect to be far more efficient. After all, I will no longer be typing with my fingers crossed."

The small suburban police department for which I work collared a burglar breaking into a warehouse one night, and we searched the area for the van in which he told us his accomplice was waiting. We found the van but no partner. Leaving a rookie officer to drive the vehicle off to be impounded, we returned to the station house.

Fifteen minutes later, in came the beaming rookie — with the burglar's partner in handcuffs and this story: "As I stopped the van at an intersection, the suspect jumped out from some bushes, yanked open the door on the passenger's side and leaped in beside me. He didn't even notice who I was as he shouted, 'Let's get out of here!' Finally, when the van didn't move, he looked at me and moaned, 'Oh, no. A cop!' I grabbed him as he tried to jump out."

A friend of ours, a distinguished scientist, had been depressed because, although his request for a grant had been approved, there were no funds available at that time. "As if that wasn't enough to shake my self-confidence," he lamented, "look what came in the morning mail!"

He handed us a poorly typed letter, on thin, blue airmail paper bearing a foreign stamp. The letter began: "Dear Extinguished Professor..."

For many years, a client of our accounting firm had been bringing in his receipts, invoices and tax papers rolled up tightly and stuffed inside a gallon pickle jar. For just as many years, my employer had been hinting to him that perhaps using a filing system of some kind would make sorting the numerous documents a little easier for everyone concerned.

April came again, and he made his usual appearance, carrying a brand-new metal file box. Our elation was short-lived. When he opened the file, there was the familiar pickle jar, stuffed to the brim with papers.

My husband, a minister, was standing in front of the congregation one morning, about to give the benediction. Dressed in his white robe and with his arms outstretched, he looked just like an angel ready to ascend. I had to squelch laughter when our teen-age son leaned over and whispered in my ear, "He'll never get off the ground."

Boy, parents reunited

NEW YORK (AP) — A 2-year-old Hungarian boy whose mother and father defected to the United States was reunited with his parents after a 15-month diplomatic battle that involved a Pennsylvania congressman and the Hungarian government.

"It was a real explosion of joy," Rep. Donald L. Ritter, R-Pa., said of the Monday reunion of Mark Skorka with his parents, George and Aniko Skorka, at Kennedy International Airport here.

Ritter, who learned of the separation through his membership on the Helsinki Commission, had promised to go to Budapest if necessary to bring Mark to the United States.

But as Ritter was preparing for a flight Saturday, he received word that the boy would be able to come to the United States after all because the Hungarian government had granted permission for his grandmother to accompany him. The boy is too young to travel alone under Hungarian law.

The saga began in March 1981, when the Skorka couple visited the United States.

"They came, liked what they saw, and decided to stay," said Ritter aide Alan Janesch from Washington, D.C.

The Skorkas asked that Mark, then 8 months old, be allowed to join them and that Ilona Sarodi, the boy's paternal grandmother, be allowed to accompany the infant to New York.

The Hungarian government at first refused, Janesch said.

After the Helsinki Commission, an international human rights watchdog, sent a letter on Mark's behalf to the Hungarian Embassy in Washington, the Hungarian government agreed to give the boy a visa.

However, the visa request for Mrs. Sarodi was rejected.

Ritter described the Skorkas as young, attractive, very successful people who "were near the top of the heap" in Hungary and now live in a one-room apartment in New York.

Skorka, manager of one of Budapest's most elite restaurants, and Mrs. Skorka, a prominent radio and television journalist, owned two condominiums in Hungary, the congressman said.

"They gave it all up for freedom," Ritter said.

To put its fighting men into the proper spirit, the U.S. Army has revived an ancient formula — the war dance. Private Donny Davis, foreground, and other members of Charlie Company at Fort Lewis, Wash., show off the latest thing in Army training.

Soldiers dance their way to readiness

FORT LEWIS, Wash. (AP) — Grunting and groaning, stomping and slashing, a platoon from C Company tests the power of an ancient formula for kindling a fighting spirit in listless soldiers: the war dance.

"The war dance has been used for thousands of years to develop tranquility and courage and tenacity in warriors," says Johnny Kai, a retired Army officer and former Green Beret.

Kai, 49, who teaches the 21-step dance to the soldiers under a contract with the Army, says it is designed to develop "combat chemistry."

"It keeps it interesting," said Pvt. Donny Davis, 18, of Danville, Ill., one of the 30 or so soldiers in the platoon from C Company of the 39th Infantry's 2nd Battalion dancing along the Nisqually River, where they had been building rope bridges.

Training can get monotonous and mundane, said Capt. Robert Simmons, commander of C Company. "This livens it up. The troops get psyched up."

Kai explains, "For three to five seconds, whether it's football or combat, in the crucial moments a person must be energized and be alive. When the ball is snapped, you have three to five seconds of intense activity. It's the same in combat.

"It's the chemical effect," he said. "We want to develop combat chemistry."

Kai has taught similar techniques to Green Berets and football players.

As C Company pounds out its dance, which combines boxing, martial arts, football and wrestling moves, another company of soldiers working nearby hoots and jeers.

Lt. Bill Rice, 23, a C Company platoon leader, said the razzing is a normal, jealous response of those who aren't part of the experimental program.

"Our war dance is better than sitting around telling dirty jokes and discussing the latest issue of Playboy," he said.

The war dance is just one of the programs C Company is testing for the Army. Unlike most soldiers, who part company after basic training, the soldiers in C Company will spend their Army careers together.

The "regimental" plan, as it's called, tests the theory that soldiers who remain together will be happier and will fight better.

The experiment is nicknamed COHORT, for Cohesion Operational Readiness and Training.

"You can train the men the way you want to," said Staff Sgt. Dennis Pagan in Rice's platoon. "They are not here one week and gone the next."

C Company, which transferred to Fort Lewis last month after basic training at Fort Benning, Ga., is scheduled to go to South Korea in March 1984. The company will stay one year, returning stateside a few days before three-year enlistments expire.

Memories of son haunt parents

HOLLYWOOD, Fla. (AP) — A year after the grisly death of 6-year-old Adam Walsh, his sneakers and toys are gone from his bedroom, which has been turned into a nursery. But their new baby will never replace memories of Adam, his parents say.

John and Reve Walsh, who said they would never have another child after blond, blue-eyed Adam was killed, became parents again last week.

Meghan Jane Walsh was a month premature, but she's healthy and "beautiful," and her parents said they would like to have a third child.

But the couple say they will always be torn by memories of Adam, who disappeared a year ago Tuesday.

His head was found several weeks later. The rest of his body was never found and there have been no arrests in the case.

"There is no substitute for Adam," said Mrs. Walsh. The new baby "will make me miss Adam more. He always wanted a sister. He would have been so happy."

When the Walshes finally turned Adam's room into a nursery for the new baby, "there was Adam everywhere...his Topsiders, sneakers, the book I read him every night," she said.

There apparently were no witnesses to his abduction from a department store where his mother said she left him "for 10 to 15 minutes" playing a video game while she shopped a few aisles away.

"It's the worst nightmare that could ever happen" — and it became reality," she said.

Thousands helped police search for the boy. Posters showing Adam wearing a baseball cap, carrying a bat and displaying a gap-toothed grin were plastered on shop windows and supermarket bulletin boards.

Fifteen days later, the search ended when two fishermen found Adam's head in a canal 90 miles away.

"We planned and waited all our lives for Adam to come along. He was a bonus to life," says Walsh, 36, a marketing executive for the Bahamas' Paradise Grand Hotel. "Just like that, he was gone — our fairy tale seemed destroyed."

Walsh rejected theories that his son was killed by mobsters unhappy with his role in the Bahamian hotel's casino operations. He also doubts a theory that his son was killed as a sacrifice by voodoo cultists among Cuban or Haitian refugees.

Walsh believes a stranger — "a loner, a roamer" — brutally ended Adam's life.

"I don't want to think of his last minutes. It haunts me. He must have been so terrified." says Walsh, almost sobbing.

Walsh and his wife have become advocates for the Missing Children Act to require the FBI to establish a separate file for missing children in its national computer system.

Sen. Paula Hawkins, R-Fla., sponsored the bill on Walsh's behalf, but it is mired in the Senate Judiciary Committee. A companion bill has been offered in the House by Paul Simon, D-Ill.

Walsh has lobbied intensively in Washington.

"What we're asking for is a pure bill, for about $320,000 a year, to link up agencies nationally so parents can know what happened to their kids," he said.

"If the people in Washington can spend four days debating whether ketchup is a vegetable, surely we can find a way to trace our country's most valuable resource — our children."

Grannies to take care of kids

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — There's no one like grandma to take care of the kids. At least that's the hope of a new day care center, which plans to open next month with a staff of grannies, ranging in age from 55 to 74.

Carolyn Sterns, director of "Grandma's" said both children and grandmothers should benefit from the arrangement.

"Most older people are isolated," she said. "They are home alone. They are losing their friends one by one. If you're working, there's no way to withdraw."

Said Elizabeth Dean, 74, one of the grandmothers: "I don't want to kid you. I think a woman who has really mothered and matured always needs the love of children to be fully gratified."

The program, scheduled to open Ag. 16 in a former elementary school, will handle 150 youngsters, including 60 infants. Costs will range from $30 to $55 a week, subsidized by the United Way.

MOST UNFORGETTABLE CHARACTER

Well-loved reporter able to write anywhere

By SAUL PETT
Special from Reader's Digest

He was one of the most prolific, wide-ranging reporters there ever was — and widely loved in a trade not distinguished by love. From the Kremlin to the Kentucky Derby, from wars to murder trials, from Popes to Presidents, Bob Considine moved from place to place and story to story without losing a single stride in his poise, wit or consumption of Old Rarity.

We reporters who knew Robert Bernard Considine remember his awesome ability to write anywhere.

John Chancellor remembers holding his typewriter on a Rome elevator while Bob finished a column during the ride down.

Don Whitehead remembers the long poker game on Dwight Eisenhower's flight to Korea in 1952, during which Considine kept a typewriter at his side and used it every time he folded a hand.

Picture, if you can, that face, all-Irish, with a tentative little smile under a nose half-Roman, half W.C. Fields — that tall moose of a man, involved in two typical situations:

— Bob's favorite schoolteacher was Sister Bernard, who guided him through the sixth grade at St. Aloysius in Washington, D.C. They kept in touch, and 50 years later he took Sister Bernard and a nun companion, at his expense, to see Ireland and then to meet Pope John in the Vatican. When she died, Sister Bernard left Bob her rosary, her dearest possession. When Bob died, Millie Considine placed the rosary in her husband's hands.

— In 1970, when Bob was 63 and making yet another war correspondent's trip to Vietnam, he heard about an orphaned baby girl an American GI wanted to adopt. Because of red tape, the soldier had to go home without the infant. Considine went to the top of the South Vietnamese bureaucracy, unsnarled the snarl, and brought the baby home himself, feeding and diapering her all the way to San Francisco and into the arms of her new parents.

One of five children, Considine was born in 1906 in the Swamp-poodle section of Washington, D.C., near the railroad tracks, in a house abounding in cats to discourage the rats. It was a family short on cash but long on love. His father, a tinsmith, died early, and Bob dropped out of Gonzaga High after two years to help make family ends meet.

He and Mildred Anderson met at the State Department, where both worked as file clerks. Both were aspiring writers, and often at night they read their latest efforts to each other by flashlight in a rented rowboat on the Potomac. Since he was more prolific, she did most of the rowing.

Their marriage endured romantically for 44 years. "Whenever possible, when we were in the same town together," Millie recalls, "Bob sent me a single rose every day." They had four children: Michael, Barry, Dennis and Deborah. Two were adopted. "I forget which two," he used to say.

Bob landed his first full-time reporting job on the Washington Post, covering sports. In 1936, when he was working for the Washington Herald, the elder William Randolph Hearst summoned him to New York to write sports, and soon everything else. His first big assignment was a fight in which Bob Pastor, the underdog, managed to bloody Joe Louis's nose. Infuriated and embarrassed, Joe went on to win, punishing his opponent severely in the later rounds. Considine's first paragraph that night was: "Brushing away the crimson cloud that steamed from his battered nose, Joe Louis made Bob Pastor pay dearly for his indiscretions last night at Madison Square Garden."

Considine worked for Hearst organizations the rest of his life, nearly 40 years. This included stints with the New York Mirror, the New York Journal-American, International News Service, King Features and Hearst Headline Service.

Bob had many years when he earned at least $100,000 from all sources, and almost no years when he wasn't broke. He lived well, tipped like a maharajah, became one of the fastest draws in the East (for a check), and could never resist a newspaperman down on his luck and short of a drink. He was, not surprisingly, forever playing catch-up with the Internal Revenue Service.

In June 1975, still pursuing copy, Bob Considine was severly injured in a hot-air-balloon accident in Nevada. Yet he managed to get four of his "On the Line" columns out of the experience.

In September, he wrote this in a column: "I'll croak in the newspaper business. Is there any better way to go? In what other trade can a man hope to build a bridge between himself and others every day of every week and every year? On what other field of endeavor is a competitor called upon to come up each day with words and thoughts he did not use the day before? Every time a reporter picks up a phone to call in a story, swings aboard an airplane on an assignment, or spins a fresh sheet of copy paper into his typewriter, he shoots his roll — like a craps player going for broke."

It was his last column. Several days later, on September 25, after a massive stroke, Considine died at 68, in the trade he loved and enriched.

Woman is ageless

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Beverly Cuzzetto think her age is her own business, but her stubborn secrecy has caused a few problems.

The state of Washington won't let her register to vote, and a Social Security official says she could be refused benefits when the time comes — whenever that is — if she won't 'fess up.

MISD receives $33,000 for GEM

By HALLYE JORDAN
Staff Writer

After submitting proposals for state funding in direct competition with other school districts around the state, Midland Independent School District received $33,750 for its GEM Program (Gifted Education Midland) from the Texas Education Agency in Austin July 1.

A "co-op" proposal submitted by Sue Ashwood of the Region 18 Education Service Center for Greenwood, Pecos and Grandfalls was granted $20,700 by the TEA while Big Spring, Kermit and Odessa also received state funding for their gifted programs, said Pat Alexander, GEM coordinator.

"I'm excited to see so many programs in the region funded," Ms. Alexander said. "A lot of times in the past the funds have gone to more urbanized areas."

Although a proposal was submitted last year to the TEA for GEM's initial year of operation, Ms. Alexander said the 1982-83 funding will be the first actually granted to the district.

Last year, the beginning program operated on a local budget totaling $304,100 with 189 students in grades four through six participating. This year the program will expand to include specialized math and language classes for seventh graders, allowing some 257 elementary and 116 seventh grade students to participate.

The state funding, due to money set aside by the TEA for exemplary and gifted and talented programs, is based on 5 percent of the refined average daily attendance (ADA) of the entire student population enrolled in the grades participating in the gifted program, Ms. Alexander said.

Districts granted funding receive $150 for each student, based on the formula, not to exceed $100,000, she explained.

"We have an adequate budget," Ms. Alexander said. "The important thing you need for an effective gifted and talented program is good personnel — and we have that. We've got good personnel and a supportive administration."

According to Mrs. Ashwood, the co-op funding received by Big Spring, Greenwood and Pecos will allow gifted teachers to share training and ideas.

"They already had their (individual) programs up and going in terms of teacher training and purchase of materials," she said, "but now it will provide the opportunity for them to take part in additional activities."

It is more difficult for smaller school districts to fund outside resources, such as speakers at workshops, for their gifted teachers, Ms. Alexander pointed out. Through a co-op grant, several districts can pool their funds and be able to afford special programs that can be shared by all.

"It's very expensive to get someone out to West Texas," she said, "and that is an advantage of having co-op funding."

"TEA gives very, very explicit guidelines to use on your submitted proposals," said Mrs. Ashwood, who was one of many school and education service center employees recruited to read and grade the submitted proposals.

The extra funding from the TEA, often used by districts to send their teachers to state organized workshops and learning seminars, isn't handed out easily, according to Ms. Alexander. Copies of comprehensive evaluations, goals, accomplishment of objectives, budgets and commitments to and proof of quality planning also accompany the submitted proposals which are graded on a very competitive level.

"We not only had a good first year, but we documented that first year to their (TEA) standards," Ms. Alexander said, with a laugh of relief.

"It (receiving the funding) has a certain amount of prestige and recognition. With it, they are saying, 'You've done a good job of planning and implementing,'" she added.

"I think it is a good learning process," Mrs. Ashwood said. "It is a way for the schools to actually grow. The guidelines are put together so that when you read them, you see things that you need to make stronger or that you need to add to your program."

O'Connor sets precedent, grants interview

By HAROLD JACKSON
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

WASHINGTON — It doesn't take long for the steeliness to emerge from Supreme Court Justice Sandra Day O'Connor's apparently gentle manner. As the conversation strays onto a subject she dislikes, she firmly chops if off. "I don't think that would be appropriate" she says, and a taut smile ensures that suddenly you don't think it would be either.

O'Connor is already setting a precedent by granting an interview, not encouraged among Supreme Court justices. But she is almost bound to be a trendsetter — the 102nd person appointed to the highest judicial branch of U.S. government and its first female.

What caught her most by surprise was the volume of mail that greeted her. "I was inundated with it in the early months here," she says, "far more than I had anticipated." It ran the gamut, from people with a grievance or a legal problem to those who wanted to let the new judge know how delighted they were.

Not only Americans responded to her appointment.

"There was a fantastic outpouring of enthusiasm from people all over this country, from all walks of life and, surprisingly enough, even from people from other countries. It was very touching to see that excitement about what this might mean in terms of opportunities for women generally. It has made me even more conscious, if that is possible, of the position I have and the sense of responsibility I feel to try to discharge my duites reasonably well, so that the people who have been so enthusiastic are not disappointed."

O'Connor has a soft western voice that does not always penetrate even the gentle hum from her outer office. But it is deceptive: Neither her manner nor her career in Arizona state politics suggests the least doubt or hesitation about what she wants. If anyone thought she would creep into the neo-classical stone palace just behind the capitol with a nervous reticence about her new job, they were swiftly put to rights. In no time at all she was embroiled in what became known as the war of the footnotes.

Her opponent was the venerable Justice William Brennan, who has been on the court for 26 years. It was a complicated habeas corpus case from Ohio, the second this term. The two had cooperated on the initial case, the first important judgment assigned to O'Connor. The alliance did not survive her second opinion, which referred in one footnote to "the claim touted by Justice Brennen" and commented coolly in another that "it is immediately apparent that (his) charges of judicial activism and revisionism carry more rhetorical force than substance ... Justice Brennan clearly errs."

Salesmen sue auto dealership

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Four former salesmen say the Sun Datsun dealership here removed federally mandated window stickers from new cars and charged 192 customers thousands of dollars more than list prices.

The salesmen filed a $1.2 million lawsuit against the dealership in state district court Monday, alleging they were cheated out of commissions on the extra profits earned on the vehicles.

The plaintiffs say they documented cases where the window sticker was removed and customers were cited a higher price from a confidential list kept by the dealership.

Lawyers face off in Senate's Abscam case

By LAWRENCE C. LEVY
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post
News Service

WASHINGTON — Two private lawyers, well known for their determined prosecutions of the most celebrated public corruption cases in the past 10 years, faced off for five hours Tuesday before the select U.S. Senate committee examining FBI undercover operations. Only one of them played the familiar role.

Time and again, James Neal, the Nashville attorney who prosecuted many of the Watergate defendants and now leads the committee's inquiry, coolly suggested that Thomas Puccio, as the attorney in charge of day-to-day operation, let the Abscam investigation slip from his control and into the hands of "dishonest" informants, such as con man Mel Weinberg. Puccio, who recently joined a New York law firm, also was chief prosecutor of five of the seven congressmen who were convicted in the Abscam scandal.

Neal, who also headed investigations into former Teamsters leader Jimmy Hoffa, cited what he believed were several well-publicized instances of "corrupt middlemen determining the direction ...and targets" of the Abscam probe.

For example, Neal said that Weinberg's remarks to the FBI and to unwitting middlemen steered Abscam from an undercover operation seeking to recover stolen art and securities to an unprecedented probe into official corruption.

To this — and to most of Neal's assertions — Puccio at first tossed back calm denials. "That charge has been made before...and it strikes me as ridiculous," said Puccio, who, like FBI agent John Good of Hauppauge, N.Y., sitting beside him, has appeared in court many times since Abscam ended 18 months ago. 'He (Weinberg) was a rogue," Puccio continued. "He was a crook.... We had to use him...we had to keep an eye on him."

But the senators were not so much concerned with legalities as with more elusive moral issues. "What we are really trying to do is see if there are any better controls," said Sen. Warren Rudman, R-N.H. If a middleman, perhaps trying to impress FBI agents or fellow crooks, made an unfounded assertion about an honest official, Rudman added, "I could see a situation where people's reputations and lives could be ruined."

Four long-term campers, from left, Katherine Garth, Doris Hillaker, William Garth and Lee Hillaker, have many of the comforts of home at the Dallas KOA campground — including a yard in which to relax with friends and have a drink. About 3/4 of the campground's 95 sites are occupied by long-term campers, almost all of them non-Texans on the trail of jobs or rumors of jobs.

People opt for camping over high-rent housing

CORINTH, Texas (AP) — When the Yunk family left Minnesota to look for work in Texas, they opted to live temporarily in a 23-foot-long camping trailer at a KOA campground near this town about 30 miles north of Dallas.

Two years later, Mrs. Yunk, 21, has had a third child, her husband has found steady construction work, and like an increasing number of other newcomers, they are still living in the campground.

"My husband likes living like this," she said. "He really has no desire to go out and spend $600 a month to rent a house."

About three-fourths of the campground's 95 sites are occupied by long-term campers. Most are non-Texans who came to find work.

The Washington-based National Campground Owners Association and the U.S. Forest Service say in the last few years there has been a sharp increase in the percentage of private campground space used by monthly renters except in the Northeast, which continues to hold the lead.

The biggest increase in long-term campers was in the South, where the percentage grew from 9 percent of private campsites in 1979 to 17 percent this year.

"It's an emerging problem. I expect it will probably be around until we do something about the severe housing shortage in this country," said Don Ryan, president of the camping division of Kampgrounds of America Inc., based in Billings, Mont.

Campgrounds reporting the greatest increase in long-term campers who are workers rather than retired people are in Texas, Louisiana, Montana, Wyoming and Nevada, Ryan said.

Katherine and William Garth, who for 24 years have followed short-term electrical construction jobs, bought a trailer and began living in campgrounds a few years ago because of the expense of staying in motel rooms and apartments.

"There's just not the places to rent anymore," Mrs. Garth said.

For the Yunks, camping to avoid high rent costs means sleeping on beds that double as tables or sofas in the one-room trailer they rent from the campground for $310 a month.

Mrs. Yunk said her family is looking for an apartment in Lewisville but that her husband is pleased with his life as a permanent camper.

The trend is bringing some changes at campgrounds, many of which already have water, sewer and electric hookups as well as hot showers, a pool and recreation areas.

The Safari Pines Campground near Houston is putting in phone lines for as many as 100 long-term campers. A campground in Elk City, Okla., built a fence to separate the long-term campers from vacationers.

Steve Hames, co-owner of the Safari Campground near Six Flags Over Texas, an amusement park in Arlington, said long-term campers present a problem for campground owners who want to attract short-term renters at higher rates.

"The two don't mix very well together," Hames said. "If you put them (vacationers) in with a bunch of people who are looking for jobs and have a lot of hard-luck stories, it kind of puts a damper on the vacation."

But others don't see long-term campers as a solution instead of a problem.

Catherine Hill,, who manages her son's Dallas Hi-Ho Campground in Glenn Heights, 15 miles south of Dallas, said the long-termers paying $1000 a month are making up for short-term business lost because of high gasoline prices and the depressed economy.

"The salvation of the campgrounds now are the long-termers," said Mrs. Hill.

University Park residents irate about Mercedes-Benz

By DEBBIE K. SOLOMON
The Los Angeles Times-
Washington Post News Service

DALLAS — After receiving complaints from irate residents, the mayor of University Park, a community inside the city of Dallas, has told the police department it cannot keep the $19,000 Mercedes-Benz it has been using on patrol.

But city staff members have made no plans to return the car that was borrowed from Stephenson Motor Co. and put into service Friday.

Mayor Joel T. Williams said Tuesday that he cannot force the police department to return the car but he can prevent the city from spending $19,000 to purchase it.

"I don't know if we still have that car and I don't want to know," Williams said. "I haven't seen it yet, and I don't want to see it."

Meanwhile, patrolmen continue to drive the gleaming white sedan through the small and prosperous suburb.

University Park City Manager Leland Nelson said Tuesday that the car would be used by patrolmen until the dealer comes to town hall to take it back.

"We don't have to give it back until the dealer asks for it," Nelson said.

A spokesman for Stephenson Motor Co. said the car will be loaned to the police department for at least another two weeks, when owner Jim Stephenson returns from Europe.

Williams, who said he is embarrassed by the situation, has called city residents and assured them that the Board of Commission would never consider purchasing the car.

The 1979 Mercedes, which came equipped with an automatic transmission, an AM-FM radio and a navy blue leather interior, also includes flashing red lights and the police department logo emblazoned in green on its sides and trunk.

"I have a policy here that we do not purchase any foreign equipment," Williams said. "I am an American citizen and I support the American economy."

His statements contradicted those made last week by Police Chief Dave Beidelman and Commissioner Edward J. Drake, who said that the city planned to purchase the German-made car if the test drive proved that the vehicle was more economical than the six 1980 Chevrolets the city now uses to patrol the 4.1 square miles of University Park. Beidelman is on vacation and could not be reached for comment Tuesday.

The mayor, however, insisted Tuesday that the city never considered buying the car and borrowed it only as a temporary replacement for a patrol car that was wrecked recently in an accident.

"When we purchase our next patrol car," Williams said, "it won't be anything even resembling a foreign car."

Although expensive foreign cars are commonplace in the Park Cities, the new addition to the police fleet has not been overlooked by residents.

"I wish the police chief would stick with the most economical U.S. patrol car he can find," wrote Stephen Lerer, an attorney and resident, in a letter to the city. "I can't believe we need high-price imports."

Senior Geophysicist

Your solid background in the Permian Basin can make you one of our most valued "resources."

ARCO Oil and Gas Company is one of the nation's foremost leaders in domestic oil and gas exploration and production. One reason is the consistent high quality of our seismic data interpretation. Another is our ability to recognize, develop and promote our most important natural resource--talented, creative professionals.

Our rapid growth, however, has now created more openings for senior-level explorationists than we can fill internally. This is why our district exploration management in Midland, Texas is seeking a geophysicist with 10 or more years experience. Your credentials must demonstrate familiarity with S-O-A geophysical data interpretation, and ability to apply data acquisition knowledge to help establish acquisition parameters. You also must be capable of delivering incisive oral and written presentations to management, and have clear field operations leadership potentials.

We, in turn, offer very competitive salary, outstanding benefits including incentive compensation plan, and growth prospects that few companies can match. For prompt, fully confidential consideration, please send your resume and salary history to:

$1450 Limited Closing Costs in Northgate only

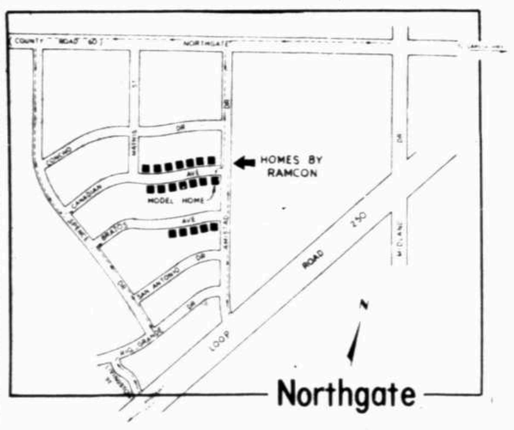

NORTHGATE $75,200

4909 Canadian

$673.30 Per Month

You can't afford NOT to buy any longer!

Total move in costs of $5250 is based on 5% down or $3800 plus $1450 limited closing costs based on 15 days prepaid interest. The first year's payment of $673.30 (principal and interest only) is based on a loan amount of $71,400. The first year's payment and buyer qualification will be calculated equivalent to a rate of 10 7/8% for 95% loan-to-value. Interest will be charged at a rate of 15 7/8% for the first 6 months of the loan. After the first 6 months interest will be changed at the most recent 6 months Treasury Bill plus 4.25%. Payments on these mortgages are graduated so as to increase the principal and interest payments 7.50% each year for the next 4 years. At the end of the first 5 year period, the graduation in payments will cease. A new payment schedule will be computed using a variable rate mortgage to amortize the remaining balance over the remaining 25 years of the mortgage based upon the then current Treasury Bill rate plus 4.25%. The 7 1/2% maximum increase can be more if the original loan principal exceeds 125%. At each 5 year anniversary date, the payment may be adjusted to allow the remaining payments to fully amortize the loan. Annual percentage rate approximately 16.575%
