Registration plans please HC officials

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

New procedures for regular registration at Howard College appear to be functioning as well as college officials planned.

No crowds or long lines were in sight as students trickled into the coliseum at their assigned registration times. Fewer students were registering than had originally been predicted, according to Registrar Mike Evans.

Evans said approximately 450 students normally register during regular spring registration, and that by the end of Thursday's session, between 125 and 200 students would probably be registered.

"That's going to leave quite a few for Friday," he said. "We'll be busy." He predicted Friday's open registration hours would be much more crowded than originally thought, perhaps because many students who work during the day may not have been able to register at their assigned times.

Evans also attributed Thursday's low turnout to the large preregistration turnout—571 students. "This was the highest preregistration we've ever had," he said. "We knew it would make things easier."

The new registration procedure has also encouraged camaraderie among the staff assisting with registration, Evans said.

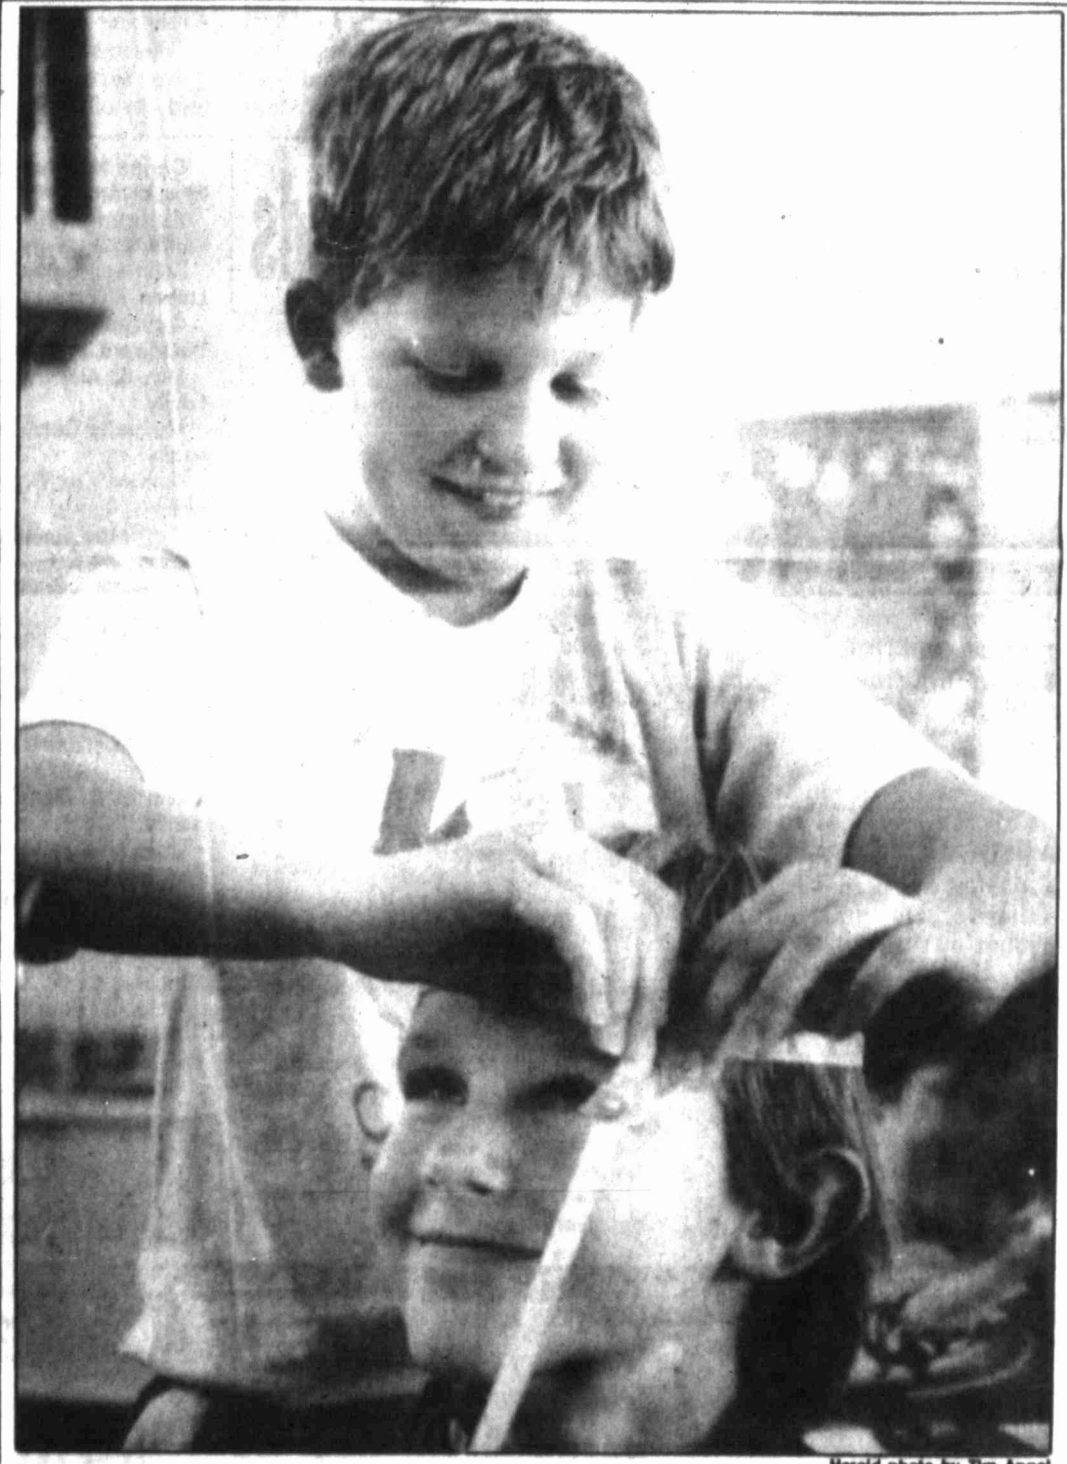

Several tables are lined up in a hallway of the coliseum with staff members seated the length of the tables.

Three more candidates seeking Precinct 4 post

Brooks says business experiences will help

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Rodney Brooks has announced his candidacy in the Democratic primary for county commissioner in Precinct 4.

BROOKS

Brooks is a lifelong resident of Howard County, and graduated from high school in 1959. He attended Howard College and worked at the Fina refinery on a student-work program prior to accepting employment at Fina full-time for two years.

Brooks began farming in 1963 and farms in the Coahoma and Vincent areas. His wife, the former Carolyn Sewell of Big Spring, works for TU Electric. They are members of the Salem Baptist Church.

They have two children, Reagan and Ron Brooks. Reagan and his wife, April, own and operate a live-

Wilkerson also banking on working experience

Homer L. Wilkerson has filed for the Precinct 4 Howard County commissioner's race in the Democratic primary.

WILKERSON

A native of Howard County, Wilkerson graduated from Big Spring High School in 1957 and attended Howard College, and later graduated from the University of Houston with a bachelor of business administration degree.

He worked for Cosden in administration, accounting and as a consultant until 1983 when he began operating Herman's Restaurant, an established family business. He resides at 1718 Yale. He and his wife, Stina, have one son, Hardy Wilkerson.

Wilkerson says he filed for commissioner because he's "concerned about efficiency in county govern-

Brown says business, service work pluses

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Freddy Brown has announced his candidacy for Precinct 4 county commissioner in the March Democratic primary.

BROWN

Brown, 52, is a native of Howard County. While attending Big Spring High School, he ran track and played football.

Brown served in the U.S. Navy from 1960 to 1964 as a third-class petty officer. He served on an underwater demolitions team and as a first-aid and water safety instructor. While serving in the Navy, he attended Imperial Valley Junior College, majoring in management and accounting before going overseas.

Brown has worked for the Goodyear Rubber Co. for 24 years, from 1970 until present. He became manager in October of 1992. Brown says that serving his customers and their needs gives him the experience dealing with people and making business decisions that will be beneficial if he should be elected commissioner.

Brown was involved with the Jaycees from 1969 to 1975 and assisted with raffles, roundups, carnivals and many other Jaycee programs.

He married the former Judy Harding in 1964. Brian, their only son, is 19 and a freshman at Howard College. Judy worked for Pina for 25 years in the accounting and pipeline departments.

Brown supports tax abatements for industry. "They can be a big attraction for new businesses in locating here and will also benefit the industries that are here," he said. "Tax abatements are the primary inducement for present businesses to spend money."

"My main focus is to help with ideas on bringing more business and industry to Big Spring and Howard County." Brown says he's carefully studying the Howard County Overall Economic Development Program report prepared in 1990.

Citing that report, Brown said he believes "we need to do everything in our power to increase our tax base. I understand the gravity of the declining tax base, it's impacting my company's business."

In addition, Brown said he doesn't believe commissioners' salaries should be increased.

Brooks

stock genetics business in San Marcos. Ron farms in Howard County and his wife, Tessa, is employed by Howard College.

Brooks has been an active supporter of 4-H and other youth organizations. He has served on the Coahoma Independent School District Board of Trustees, Howard County Junior Livestock Association, Agricultural Soil Conservation Service Community Committee, and received the Howard Soil and Water Conservation District Conservation Farmer award in 1990.

"Being in business and owning property in Howard County, I am very interested in seeing Big Spring and Howard County thrive," he explained. "I am in favor of progress.

We need to increase the tax base and do everything we can to attract new business and create jobs for our residents."

"As a result of my business experience, I feel I am qualified to make practical and fair decisions," he added. "I will have an open ear to everyone and will deal with each problem and concern honestly and fairly."

ment. "With our shrinking tax base and rising costs, it's important that the budget and expenditures be monitored closely," Wilkerson said.

Abatements are another concern for Wilkerson.

"I feel abatements should be used to attract and maintain jobs in Howard County," he said. "I feel that our current abatement policy needs to be reviewed and revised, if necessary, to reflect a positive image to industry so that Howard County looks attractive to companies searching for locations to expand."

Another concern Wilkerson credits for prompting his candidacy is the jail problem facing the county.

"Bringing our jail into compliance or building a new jail is going to be expensive. I'm concerned about the size of a new jail, where it will be located and how it will be funded. All of these decisions have an impact on our taxes," he said.

Roads and bridges are also a concern.

"I feel our county roads and bridges must be maintained and updated so that traffic moves safely and easily throughout the county," he added.

Wilkerson believes commissioners should be working hard to get the proposed Interstate Highway 27 project routed through Howard County.

"The construction of I-27 would mean jobs during construction and jobs later from traffic generated," he explained. "Howard County, with a major rail line and two interstate highways, would be in an ideal location for distribution centers."

As a candidate for commissioner, Wilkerson believes his background in accounting, management and private business will be useful in any decisions facing the county.

Kilgore sets sights on Precinct 4 commissioner seat in GOP primary

By JANET AUSBURY
Staff Writer

Jerry Kilgore has announced his candidacy for Precinct 2 county commissioner in the March 8 Republican primary.

KILGORE

Kilgore, 50, and his wife, Darla, have lived in Howard County for more than 40 years. They have three children. He has owned and operated Highland Barber Shop and Highland Beauty Shop for more than 30 years.

The commissioner's race is not new to Kilgore, who was a candidate in the 1990 race. He said the last four years have only given him more reason to run again.

"One of the issues I would like to focus on is to see the county and city governments communicate and work together to be more efficient and eliminate the duplication of services," he said.

However, the declining tax base in the county is Kilgore's most pressing concern. "I would actively pursue economic and industrial development in Howard County," he said. "I know the big problem is that our tax base is decreasing due to the oil industry downturn."

Kilgore believes commissioners need to work with the Moore Board for Development to attract new business and industries to Howard County, increase the tax base and ease the tax burden on residents.

"Any one person won't recruit business on their own, but you set the climate with your vote on things such as tax abatement," he explained.

Kilgore is in favor of a new county jail, but believes the county needs to do more research to avoid the problems of overbuilding or lack of space in the near future.

The county road system is another concern. He believes improvements in efficiency and service to the roads are greatly needed and that many people are unhappy with the current system.

Kilgore said his business background will enable him to make sound business decisions for the county. "I haven't really been involved in politics but I talk to people in business," he said. "I know what some of the problems are, and hopefully, the solutions."

He also placed importance on listening to county residents, saying he will be available and responsive to all citizens in the community at any and all times.

Shaw seeking Democratic primary's nod in Precinct 2 commissioner race

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Roosevelt Shaw has filed as a candidate in the Democratic primary race for county commissioner in Precinct 2.

SHAW

Shaw, 57, was raised in the Knott Community, graduated from Knott High School and now has farming interests there. He married the former Patsy Bristow in 1959, and has two grown children that graduated from Coahoma High School. Jay Shaw works for Bell Telephone and Shari Morris is a teacher in San Angelo. He has two granddaughters, ages two and 10.

Roosevelt is the "youngest" of three triplets; Franklin, Delano and Roosevelt.

He was first employed at Gandy's Dairy for two years, then worked for 31 years on the Cosden pipeline from 1961 to 1992. His wife, Patsy, has been employed at the Coahoma Post Office for 18 years.

The Shaw family moved from Knott to Sand Springs in 1960, and have lived in Precinct 2 for 33 years. He is a member of Midway Baptist Church. "We need to support Interstate 27 going through Big Spring. County and city officials need to work harder to get I-27, since Midland and Odessa both want it," Shaw said.

"Our county roads and bridges need more maintenance and repairs," he added.

While working for Cosden, Shaw worked in the maintenance and electrical departments, as a pump mechanic, gauger and meter prover operator.

Shaw's job then required a lot of driving and left him with an appreciation for the importance of good roads.

"I want to be your full-time commissioner and I will welcome the public's suggestions," Shaw said in announcing his candidacy. "I accepted Fina early retirement in 1992, so I can devote all of my time to Precinct 2."

year after an absence of about two years. Evans said the college had discontinued fall preregistration because many preregistered students later requested schedule changes.

Preregistering fall students will also help the fall semester registration crunch, especially if the procedure runs as well as it has for this semester.

"We're happy with this system," said Evans. "It's something we will use again."

Black families back in Vidor project

The Associated Press

VIDOR — A police checkpoint and a new laundry facility inside this town's all-white public housing complex are the only visible additions since the last black resident fled from racial slurs here four months ago.

Other than that, Vidor and its 74-unit complex is the same place left behind by four black families who said they were taunted by residents who drove by and made lynching motions with hands.

On Thursday, the U.S. Housing and Urban Development moved in another four black families and vowed that what happened last year, would not occur again. But their vows came without guarantees.

What, in essence, will keep residents from driving away yet another four black families — the only blacks living in this town of 6,000 residents?

"There's no way to control people," said Assistant Housing Secretary Roberta Achtenberg, who after listing physical and social improvements to be made at the complex: vocational programs, a van service for residents, new roofs.

"We have a significant law enforcement presence where the few people who might be inclined to try, will resist this," she explained.

But after extensive meetings between HUD and local officials, she believes that many in Vidor want last year's news, to become history.

"The town has done significant work. The religious leaders have exerted leadership. Many townsfolk have indicated their support of this. The business community has been supportive ... We believe the tide has changed."

HUD funds totalling $2.1 million have been earmarked to transform the house where Bill Simpson, the last black to leave last year, into a more inviting environment for the four new families.

But as for Vidor's racists, the answer appears to be time.

Simpson, fed up with racial harassment left the complex Sept. 1. The same day he was shot to death in what police called a random street robbery in Beaumont, about 10 miles to the west.

Two weeks after Simpson's death, Housing Secretary Henry Cisneros came to Vidor, and announced HUD had seized control of the complex from the Orange County Housing Authority.

On Thursday four new families — two single families with children, one single female and one single male — took the place of the four who left last year.

HUD officials refused to identify the new residents and said it was their wish to deny interviews to the media. Questions shouted at them through a chain-length fence as they moved furniture into their new homes were not answered.

HUD also announced Thursday that reporters would no longer be allowed into the federally-funded complex unless invited by a resident.

Ector County officials drop murder charges against elderly woman

The Associated Press

ODESSA — Almost three years after 91-year-old William Bradley died, authorities have dropped a murder charge against his widow, Fay Irene Bradley, who is now also 91.

Mrs. Bradley had admitted to police that she fought with her husband during the week before his death. Some of the fights occurred because her husband of 67 years wanted to have sex with her against her will, she said.

Mrs. Bradley was indicted June 17, 1991, and charged with killing her husband "by striking him with a walking cane" on March 15, 1991.

The charges were dropped Wednesday.

Ector County District Attorney John Smith said Thursday that he decided to dismiss the charge for several reasons. It is possible that some of the injuries were accidental, Smith said.

Mrs. Bradley, whose husband is believed to have suffered from Alzheimer's disease, could have caused some of the injuries while trying to take care of her husband, he said.

In a statement to police on March 22, 1991, Mrs. Bradley said: "I want to say that there were times that he would make me have sex with him and he would stay on me for about 30 minutes and then I would kick him off and he then would be so upset with me that he would hit and kick me."

Her husband often physically resisted her when she tried to help him, she said. Sometimes she used violence to get him to do what she wanted him to do, she added.

"When he sometimes ate breakfast I would have to slap him across the face to get him to eat and sometimes I would have to hit him pretty hard," she said.

"I also want to add that when Bill and I had our disputes or fights I never had any intention of hurting Bill. I was just trying to get him off of me."

Smith said that in deciding to dismiss the charge he considered the cost of a trial, autopsy results, potential "juror sympathy" for Mrs. Bradley, the results of a psychiatric evaluation and Mrs. Bradley's ability to stand trial.

Smith said the woman's age also was a factor in dismissing the charge.

"In a word, 'Yes,' but it was not the determining factor. But it certainly had a role," he said.

"My impression of her was that she wasn't really capable of withstanding a trial and the grueling nature that a murder trial would take," Smith said.

Investigators present display of Davidians' guns, grenades

The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — An investigator who explored the burned out "bunker" of religious leader David Koresh described to jurors his eerie efforts of recovering artillery amidst 43 charred bodies.

"All I smelled was rotten bodies," Texas Ranger Ray Coffman testified Thursday. "It was a horrible smell."

Coffman is one of seven Texas Rangers investigators who have testified in the federal murder trial of 11 Branch Davidians about pulling hundreds of weapons from the ashy remains of Koresh's city-block-sized compound.

What they found, everything from guns to grenades, was littered across a 50-foot area of the courtroom Thursday as prosecutors tried to press into jurors' minds the magnitude of an arsenal collected by the doomsday sect.

The eight-woman, four-man jury was introduced to dozens of pistols, shotguns and two Barrett .50-caliber rifles, powerful enough to pierce armor. And the panel stared intently as Coffman held up one of the rifle's 5-inch-long bullets.

After two days of dizzying testimony about gun after gun, one defense attorney acknowledged the weapons exhibition may be making an impression on jurors.

"It's an impressive display," said Dan Cogdell, who represents Branch Davidian Clive Doyle. "The (Barrett) .50 caliber is an impressive looking weapon."

But Cogdell was quick to contend Koresh was the one most responsible for the weapons and controlled access to a concrete-walled bunker in the center of the compound, where Coffman said 133 weapons and about 400,000 rounds of ammunition were found.

"I think the key is not how many weapons were there but who had access," Cogdell said. "(Most) were in a room off-limits to all but Koresh's inner circle."

The 43 bodies found in the bunker represent half of the people who died amidst a blaze that erupted as the FBI launched a tank and tear gas assault on April 19 in hopes of getting Koresh to surrender from a 51-day standoff with authorities.

Defense attorneys have said defendant Paul Fatta and Koresh invested in high-powered artillery in anticipation that much of it would be outlawed, then "triple or quadruple" in price.

Money from sales would then go for the group's living expenses, Fatta's attorney Mike DeGeurin said during opening statements Wednesday.

Asked if he knew of any other religious groups that relied on weapons sales to keep the ministry alive, Cogdell said:

"I don't know too many religions that do a lot of things like the Branch Davidians. They are strange people. We are not saying they are Second Baptist church folks."

Into the padded cell

The best of people, even state senators, sometimes find themselves going a little too far around the bend. It only natural to get carried away sometimes.

But in the case of Sen. Jeff Wentworth, R-San Antonio, it may be time to call the nice young men from the state hospital dressed in white garb.

Huh?

Let us explain, if we can, with a little help from The Associated Press. Seems that Wentworth — seething in patriotic zeal, righteous indignation and perhaps a little grandstanding — chastized the Texas National Guard Tuesday, contending a battle re-enactment that "celebrated" Nazi Germany was conducted in November at Camp Mabry, the Guard's headquarters.

Wentworth said the exhibition was inappropriate and insulting, and called on Gov. Ann Richards to investigate. He also noted that Gen. Sam Turk, commander of the Guard, should be fired if he knew about the re-enactment.

But Guard officials say the re-enactment celebrates the U.S. victory in World War II and in no way glorifies Nazis.

"The allies always win," said Col. Ed Komandovsky, a spokesman for the Guard. He said the re-enactment is a traditional part of Muster Day, an annual event to honor U.S. veterans that is free of charge and open to the public.

David W. Davis, president of the Texas Military Historical Society, which re-enacts the battle, called Wentworth's accusation "scurrilous lies."

"Always been one of my favorite words ... 'scurrilous.' Remember Bruce Dern's part in the movie 'The Cowboys'? He was the one that shot John Wayne. I'd always referred to Dern's character as being 'snivley,' pronounced with a hard 'a.' He was probably scurrilous, too."

"The Nazis were absolute evil," said Davis, an Army veteran who won the Bronze Star for valor in the Persian Gulf war. "The American veterans who are honored at Camp Mabry are being honored for defeating absolute evil."

That means Nazi were scurrilous, too, doesn't it?

Davis said it would be impossible to stage a World War II battle without having some members of the group portraying Nazis.

Well, not impossible, but then the battle would have to involve Japanese, and Wentworth would probably complain about "glorifying" the perpetrators of the Bataan Death March.

John A. Moseley

Besides, Davis notes the "Germans always lose and are crushed. You've got to have bad guys if you have good guys."

Wentworth distributed photos of men in Nazi uniforms that he said were taken at the re-enactment. "There is no legitimate use of state funds, state property or certainly American military facilities to celebrate Nazi or neo-Nazi demonstrations of any type," he wrote Richards.

Richards spokeswoman Leticia Vasquez said she checked into Wentworth's complaint and says the senator did not have all the facts.

Vasquez, we are left to believe, is an expert in the fine art of understatement.

"You do have people dressing up in the military uniforms of the Axis powers and the Allied countries," Vasquez admitted. "But nothing bad is happening, and the good guys always win."

Davis said the background of each member of his 149-person group is checked to make sure that no one involved in a neo-Nazi group has joined.

He said the group's aim is to educate the public about World War II. There was nothing more evil or more sinister than what occurred in Germany between the years 1933 and 1945," he said.

But Wentworth said he found the portrayal of Nazis in the re-enactment was offensive.

"When you still have people alive who fought in those wars and you still have the threat of Nazism alive in the world today it is inappropriate, objectionable and offensive to me to have people playing like they are Nazis," he said.

We are left to wonder if the good senator's next target will be the Confederate Air Force's museum and show in Midland.

Mike Royko is on vacation. In his absence, his favorite columns are being reprinted. This column was originally published on April 1978.

By now, every major publication in America has taken an in-depth look at the national craze of running.

It is claimed in most of these stories that running has passed almost all other participation sports in popularity. Those who love running rave about how it improves their health, makes them feel younger, improves their work and sex lives, sharpens their minds, and even gives them euphoric highs.

I won't argue with their claims, but many people happen to think that the most healthful, rewarding physical activity is not long-distance running, but long-term sitting.

Unlike runners, who can drive you crazy with all their snug talk about how great they feel, sitters are modest. At least the truly dedicated sitters are. They seldom talk about how great sitting is. They just sit. The don't try to talk everyone they know into taking up sitting. The most they say is: "Have a chair."

But recently I talked to Joe Spinecurve, head of the Chicago Area Long-Term Sitters Club, about the benefits of sitting, and he answered some questions.

Can anyone sit?

"Yes. That's one of the best things about sitting. You can do it regardless of how young you are or how old. You can do it alone, or with a friend, or even a large group of people. You can sit in all kinds of weather, any time of the day or night. And you don't have to take special training or read a book about it or see your doctor for approval. It is a very natural activity."

"It also conserves energy."

"Do you realize how much energy all those crazy runners burn up? No wonder the Arabs have us over a barrel. If those loonies would stop burning up all that energy and sit down, this nation could be self-sufficient in energy."

Is sitting good for your health?

"Let me answer that with a question. When you go to see your doctor, what is he usually doing? He's sitting, right? Well, it must be good for you, or why would doctors do it so much? Those guys are no fools. With the kind of money they make, they want to stay around long enough to enjoy it."

But is it as good for you as running?

"Better. Scientific studies show that long-distance sitters suffer 92 percent fewer sprained arches, bro-

Mike Royko

Does a person need any special equipment to sit?

"Absolutely not. That is one of the best things about it. You don't have to buy special pants or any such wasteful junk. You don't even need pants, although I prefer them, especially when sitting in mixed company or on a cold surface. All you really need in the way of equipment is a chair. Actually, if you can't afford a chair, you can get by with any flat spot and a wall or a tree trunk to lean back against."

Do you recommend any particular kind of chair?

"It depends on personal preference. I prefer a big, soft, womblike, motherly chair. I position my chair so that I am near my books, magazines, TV set, salami, Swiss cheese, potato chips, liquor supply, an other life supports. Hard-bottomed and straight-backed chairs are adequate for short-term sitting, such as when you have dinner. But if you intend to do some very serious sitting — a full day or maybe a whole weekend or an entire week's vacation — then you need something you can really wallow in."

Is sitting good for your health?

"Let me answer that with a question. When you go to see your doctor, what is he usually doing? He's sitting, right? Well, it must be good for you, or why would doctors do it so much? Those guys are no fools. With the kind of money they make, they want to stay around long enough to enjoy it."

But is it as good for you as running?

"Better. Scientific studies show that long-distance sitters suffer 92 percent fewer sprained arches, broken toes, twisted ankles, torn ligaments, pulled hamstring muscles and sore knees than runners do. Sitters are hit by 82 percent fewer cars, bitten by 71 percent fewer dogs, and trip over 89 percent fewer fireplugs and short people than runners. And sitters are cleaner than runners because they step in 78 percent less doggy do-do and are hit on the head by 83 percent less pigeon do-do, so you are far safer in letting a sitter walk on your rug or borrow your comb. Also, sitters are nicer to be around because they don't smell as bad as runners, who sweat all over the place."

Runners say that running sharpens their thinking. Some say they get a "high" from it. Does this happen from sitting?

"I will answer it this way: The immortal Beethoven composed his nine magnificent symphonies while sitting. Shakespeare wrote every one of his plays while sitting. Believe me, that man could sit. Einstein figured out his theory of relativity while sitting. Lincoln wrote his Gettysburg address while sitting. Winston Churchill devised his greatest military strategies while sitting. Mark Twain wrote his greatest books while sitting. Gandhi had his greatest thoughts while sitting."

"The greatest minds in the history of civilization have had their finest moments while sitting. You name me one great piece of music written while running, one great book, one great anything. While running, you don't have time to think because you are breathing so hard and worrying about some mugger tripping you and wondering if that pain in your chest is something serious or just gas."

Runners say their sport improves their sex lives. What about sitting?

"That's crazy. How can you have sex while running? But sitting in a chair, there are all kinds of possibilities. Check any manual."

Does your sport have a motto?

"Take the load off your feet."

Lewis Grizzard

Orbison's legacy

Lewis Grizzard is being held hostage by an IV pole at Emory Hospital in Atlanta. Until he escapes, this blast from the past, December 1988:

So there was this girl. I was 14 and in love with her. I sat behind her in one of my classes. She used to wear those pretty sundresses, and I'd just stare at her back.

I had known her since the sixth grade. She was gangly and awkward back then. She seemed to list a bit to starboard when she walked, and I used to think her mother dressed her funny.

But she changed. It was an incredible metamorphosis, I remember thinking. Well, maybe I didn't know the term "metamorphosis" back then, but one day she seemed put together without much thought, and the next, every part of her went nicely with the others.

Somebody had gotten to her before I made my own move, though. He was bigger than me. He was a better athlete.

He was already shaving every day, and I was still a twice-a-week man. He had a friend who had a driver's license, and he could take the girl on double-dates to the drive-in.

I had no access to wheels that my mother didn't drive. There is no shame like having your mother drive you and your date to the theater and then pick you up afterward.

I had all but abandoned hope, but then I heard Roy Orbison sing that song, "Oh, Pretty Woman."

It was about a guy who saw a lady and fell for her.

But he had no chance. "Pretty woman, walk on by ..."

I know how you feel, friend.

"But what's this I see ..." he sang on. "Is she walkin' back to me?" I might have given up if Roy Orbison hadn't sung that song.

Roy Orbison certainly was no day at the beach to look at — and I wasn't either — but in the song, the pretty woman chose him.

I hung in there.

There was a church function one Saturday night, and the girl was there without her boyfriend.

I'm still not certain how it all came to pass, but we wound up on a hay wagon together. (There used to be things called "hayrides" back in another century. It was pretty exciting stuff in those days.)

I'm not sure if I kissed her first or if she kissed me. But I won't forget that kiss, ever.

Ten years later we said goodbye, but it had been a fine 10 years, full of more good times than bad, and if we hadn't rushed things, it might have lasted.

When the radio station I listen to began playing Roy Orbison songs after he died the other day, I heard "Pretty Woman" again and again, and each time, some old feelings came around. I even went back over some old regrets.

To leave something like music that stirs an emotion or makes a memory certainly isn't immortality, but it's about as close as we can come.

Roy Orbison was 52. That's not nearly as old as it used to be.

Friend speaks up for the children

"I've decided I really can't remain silent any longer," Stephanie Quantz said. "I know that doing this may cost me a friend. But someone has got to do what's right for those three children."

Quantz, 21, has been described in a McHenry County, Ill., courtroom as a friend and supporter of the woman whose children we have been writing about — the birth mother who, with her boyfriend, is seeking custody of the three children who were taken from her because of severe neglect. A caseworker for the Illinois Department of Children and Family Services (DCFS) told Judge Frank J. Rhode Jr. that Quantz, as a friend of the birth mother and boyfriend, would be baby-sitting for the children when no one else was home.

We have already reported that the DCFS worker's testimony was false — that the woman she named had no intention of taking care of the children. Now Quantz says that as a matter of conscience she must speak up for the children.

"(The birth mother) is my friend," Quantz said. "I know there are some people you can teach to be a parent. But after three years? Not only do I think (the birth mother and boyfriend) will never know how to be parents, but I am starting to believe they will never understand the difference between right and wrong."

"I know for a fact that the children should not be given to them right now. But I am starting to believe that the children should never be given back to them, under any circumstances, ever."

Quantz is expressing the exact sentiments of virtually all other persons we have spoken to (with the exception of DCFS officials) who are familiar with the case. The significance of her words, of course, comes from the fact that she is the one person who has been named in court as a friend and advocate of the birth mother and boyfriend.

"I was over at their house the other day," she said. "The children were there on a visit. It was around 1 p.m., and the children hadn't eaten since breakfast. I asked (the birth mother) if she wasn't going to give the children lunch. She said no — she said that if she gave them lunch, it would spoil their dinner."

"I had a pack of animal crackers in my bag, so I took it out and gave it to the children. They just about inhaled the food, they were so eager to have it. (The birth mother) saw this, so she went into the kitchen and gave the children a box of Teddy Grahams. I don't know how much training you have to have to realize that you give your children breakfast, lunch and dinner."

Quantz's account would seem to fit in with reports that the children return from visits hungry and dirty; and that the oldest child has been hoarding food at her day care center so she can give it to her brother and sister. The children are a 4-year-old girl, a 3-year-old boy and a 21-month-old girl; they have lived for more than a year in a foster home in Crystal Lake, Ill. DCFS wants to give them back to the birth mother and boyfriend immediately.

To reach this "service plan goal," DCFS sends a taxpayer-provided

"homemaker" into the home of the birth mother and boyfriend to assist in cleaning their house and teach them how to do it for themselves. On the day of Quantz's visit, she said, the boyfriend was supposed to go to a job interview, but decided not to. "I asked him why," Quantz said. "He said, 'Because I've been drinking.' So he just sat there drinking beer and blew the job interview off."

At a pre-Christmas hearing about the children in front of Judge Rhode, the foster parents and three witnesses showed up in court to tell the judge about their concerns (he declined to let them speak). The birth mother and boyfriend did not come to court. Quantz said that she went to Chicago that day to have some tattoos removed, and that the birth mother went with her.

"She told me she'd rather go with me," Quantz said. "I asked her if she didn't want to be in court to find out what was happening with her children. She said, 'I can just call my lawyer tomorrow, and he'll tell me what went on.' Both the birth mother and boyfriend are represented by taxpayer-provided public defenders."

Quantz said that the birth mother has told her she is making money by writing bad checks at grocery stores in various towns in McHenry County. "She said that she makes the checks for $50 over the amount of the purchase. She doesn't even have a valid checking account anymore. She knows what she's doing is illegal, but it doesn't seem to bother her."

"I said to her, 'If you keep this stuff up, you're never going to get those kids back.'"

"And she said, 'Yeah, I will.'"

Letters to the Editor

Thanks for the effort

Editor:
I want to thank a bunch of people. Not funny to be in hospital any where, however the VA Medical Center was where I was when the different groups gave out Christmas. There were carol singers, Girl Scouts, the American Legion, the Booker T. Washington Post 808, Dept. of Veteran Affairs Volunteers and not to forget the pretty young lady who gave me a teddy bear. I want to thank all and wish them a Happy and prosperous new year. I got out of hospital Christmas eve.

S&L probe focused on Hillary firm

The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Hillary Rodham Clinton's former law firm and several of its partners are coming under greater scrutiny than the president himself as the picture of the first family's relationship with an Arkansas real estate company and a failed S&L begins to emerge.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. is investigating whether the Rose Law Firm of Little Rock, Ark., misled regulators about its past role advising Madison Guaranty Savings, owned by James McDougal.

McDougal is the family friend who, with the Clintons, co-owned White-water Development Co. at the same time he owned Madison.

The Justice Department has been investigating Madison's failure and its relationship to Whitewater and to the administration of then-Gov. Clinton. And now the White House has asked for a special counsel to investigate these matters.

The FDIC investigation centers on whether Webb Hubbell, the No. 3 Justice Department official, told the FDIC that Rose once had represented Madison when the Rose firm was seeking an FDIC contract to sue Madison's accountants. Hubbell was a Rose partner at that time.

Hubbell has said that he told regulators of that conflict, plus another one involving his own father-in-law, who had loans with the S&L. The FDIC says it has no records or recollection of this information.

In addition, the late Vince Foster wrote the FDIC in 1989 that Rose was not then representing any savings institutions. His letter did not mention that Rose had represented Madison four years earlier. Foster was a Rose partner at the time.

In 1985, Mrs. Clinton helped Madison win approval from state regulators for a crucial recapitalization plan. She wrote a letter that said the S&L's plan was permissible under Arkansas law, but she did not discuss Madison's financial health.

Madison paid a $2,000 monthly retainer to the Rose firm.

The associate working with Mrs. Clinton, Richard N. Massey, told state regulators that Madison's financial health was improving — a view in direct contrast with the assessment of federal banking regulators examining the S&L during that period.

Four years later, Hubbell obtained for Rose a $400,000 contract from the FDIC under which the firm sued the Frost accounting firm for $60 million, holding the accountants primarily responsible for the thrift's failure.

Hubbell settled the claim with Frost for $1 million, an amount less than the damage ceiling established by the firm's insurer.

Federal conflict-of-interest regulations generally prohibit contractors from representing the government in S&L failure cases if they have represented the S&L. Those same regulations prohibit an attorney or firm from working on a case in which relatives or friends play a role.

The FDIC investigation centers on the Rose firm's relationship with Madison. It does not extend to President Clinton or to the Clinton's investment in Whitewater.

That is the focus of a Justice Department investigation into whether funds from Madison were diverted to Whitewater or used to help retire Clinton's 1984 gubernatorial campaign debt.

Those questions presumably also will be part of a special counsel's investigation, though the scope of that probe is not yet clear. Attorney General Janet Reno says that the White House has asked for an outside investigation of "all matters concerning the Madison bank investigation in Arkansas."

On the Whitewater matter, it appears that Mrs. Clinton and Foster, acting as the first family's personal attorney, may have had more direct involvement in the family investment in its final years.

The Clintons have consistently denied any wrongdoing in the Whitewater investment and said that McDougal maintained total control over the company.

But in late 1988, Mrs. Clinton sought power of attorney over Whitewater's dealings, telling McDougal in a letter that she wanted to "get out from under the obligations" involving Whitewater. McDougal said last week that he can't remember if he gave it to her. White House senior adviser Bruce Lindsey has said Mrs. Clinton did not get power of attorney. He said the letter shows that the Clintons were anxious to divest themselves of the venture, and does not contradict the family's assertion that they were "passive" shareholders.

U.S. President Bill Clinton (left) preceded by Russian soldiers carrying a wreath, approaches the flame of the unknown soldier in Moscow early Friday. On the second day of his three-day summit, the American president and his Russian and Ukrainian counterparts went on to sign an agreement to shed the leftover relics of the cold war by removing long-range nuclear missiles.

Disarmament breakthrough: Clinton, Yeltsin sign accord

The Associated Press

MOSCOW — In post-Cold War breakthroughs, Presidents Clinton and Boris Yeltsin signed Kremlin accords today to stop aiming missiles at any nation and to dismantle the nuclear arsenal of Ukraine, third largest in the world.

"We are giving a great boost to the goal of a nuclear disarmament," Yeltsin said.

"For the first time in nearly half a century — virtually since the dawn of the nuclear age — the United States and Russia will not operate nuclear forces, day-to-day, in a manner that presumes they are adversaries," Clinton and Yeltsin said in their Moscow declaration.

Russia and the United States will take their missiles off target by May 30, sweeping aside one of the most frightening relics of the Cold War.

In a nation gripped by chronic inflation and sagging production, Clinton praised Yeltsin for giving "strong assurances" that he will not retreat from tough economic reforms despite unrest over the hardships they've caused.

Clinton said the lives of Russians should improve this year as "the benefits will begin to flow" from expanded trade.

"I come here as a friend and a partner," said Clinton, who has lent unflinching support to Yeltsin through political turmoil in the former Soviet Union.

Trying to spread the gospel of economic and democratic reforms, Clinton also spoke to Russians in a nationally televised and fielded questions from a studio audience and call-in viewers.

"The old system failed before. That is why you are in the present period of transition," Clinton said, speaking from the bullet-scarred Ostankino television center, site of an Oct. 3 showdown when anti-reformist forces sought to take over the central broadcasting facility. "If you attempt to reimpose it, it would fail you again."

"This is a crossroad and a difficult one, but the younger generation of Russians will look back on this time with either gratitude or regret," Clinton told the town hall-style meeting. He urged Russians to train their eyes on future-oriented solutions rather than looking to the past.

"The old system failed before," Clinton said in the town hall-style meeting. "That is why you are in the present period of transition. If you attempt to reimpose it, it would fail you again."

Clinton and Yeltsin appeared at a joint news conference broadcast across Russia as well as in the United States.

States. Yeltsin was asked point blank if he would slow the pace of economic "shock therapy." "Nyet," Yeltsin snapped.

The answer was welcome news for Clinton in a nation where ultranationalists and communists are leading a campaign to roll back Yeltsin's reforms. "History is on the side of the reformers," Clinton said.

The arms accords and agreements on trade, human rights and curbs on weapons proliferation completed the main business portion of Clinton's three-day stay in snow-blanketed Moscow.

Administration officials hailed the human rights statement as Moscow's most explicit condemnation ever of anti-semitism.

Accepting the ultimate in Russian hospitality, the president and his family were to sleep overnight within the ancient fortress walls of the Kremlin. Clinton is the first American leader to stay there since Richard Nixon.

Mexican military halts action against rebels

The Associated Press

SAN CRISTOBAL DE LAS CASAS, Mexico — Soldiers in the southern Mexican state of Chiapas were called back to their barracks as the government apparently met the last of Indian rebels' conditions for peace talks.

The government's chief negotiator in the crisis, Manuel Camacho Solis, said Thursday he received messages that might be an opening to negotiations, but it was not clear if he had heard from rebel leaders or from their sympathizers.

Estimated to number from 1,000 to 2,000, the rebels have not publicly responded to the government overtures. They had demanded an end to military offensives, a withdrawal of soldiers and recognition as a military and political force.

The Indians launched the rebellion on Jan. 1 in an attempt to improve the living conditions of their people. A majority of the 3.2 million people of Chiapas are of indigenous descent, and widely lack housing, education and jobs.

All 14,000 soldiers in the region were pulled back to the city of San Cristobal de las Casas and several other towns, the Defense Department announced late Thursday, apparently meeting the demand for a withdrawal.

The department said the soldiers would not go on the offensive. They were not completely restrained, however: Some soldiers were making local patrols against possible attacks, and others were doing humanitarian work in communities that suffered during the rebellion.

Mostly the soldiers were distributing water purification tablets, sugar and corn and other staples and blankets in the towns of Rancho Nuevo, Ocosingo, Altamirano, Las Margaritas, Chenal and San Juan Chamula where fighting occurred, and around Comitán.

The rebels seized these towns Jan. 1, but gradually pulled back to hideouts in the jungle-covered hills when the army advanced and military aircraft bombed and strafed suspected positions in several communities.

Gift with long-lasting effects

By TIM JONES
Staff Writer

Carolyn Tindol recently received a certificate of appreciation from the United States Department of Health and Human Services signed by the Acting Surgeon General, Robert A. Whitney Jr. on Jan. 4.

"This certificate is presented in memory of Jonathan Tindol who gave the gift of life to others," it reads.

"It happened on Tuesday, Feb. 18, 1992," Tindol said, "a mother's worst nightmare: My son's been shot."

Tindol said the 22-year-old was airlifted to Lubbock's Methodist hospital and placed in surgical intensive care with a 50-50 chance of survival. There was a great possibility of paralysis.

"He was a very sick boy," Tindol said.

That day, he was responsive to his family and the medical staff. The next day, he was not.

"I cannot say enough about the compassion of the critical care nurses there. They allowed me unlimited access to him," Tindol recalled.

"They didn't have to tell me, I knew. He has already 'gone,' even though he felt warm and looked asleep."

"Across the hall was another 22-year-old boy, a victim of a bad automobile accident. That same day the staff told his mother that he was brain-dead," Tindol recalled. "She then told me the family had decided to make an organ donation to LifeGift of West Texas."

"When she told me that, something just clicked. I'd never thought about organ donation before. Suddenly, instead of feeling they would be taking something away from Jon and me, they were giving something that could never be taken away."

When she decided to donate her son's organs, Tindol recalled, "a most comfortable feeling came over me, it defies description." She shared the decision with family members, who agreed.

Death was no stranger to the Tindol family. Just two days after the best Christmas they'd ever had, in 1989, Tindol watched her husband Kenneth leave for his job in the oil field.

She would never see him again. He was killed that night, Dec. 27, 1989, in an explosive oilfield accident.

It was not recommended that his wife view his badly burned body.

"There was no reality to his parting," Tindol said.

"Jon worshiped his dad, and I often think had (his dad) lived, Jon would be alive today."

Today, Tindol, the personnel manager at Wal-Mart, lives in Big Spring with her two daughters, Karri, 21, and Tiffany, 14.

Tindol's son is survived by Tina, who was his fiancée, and a 2-year-old son, Jonathan.

"I see Jon in that son," Tindol said,

"and hope that someday he'll be proud of his father's gift of life."

On Feb. 20, 1992, Jonathan Tindol was legally declared brain-dead. The organ donation surgery would begin.

Tindol said Sylvia Zella, regional coordinator of LifeGift of West Texas, was of great help during the process.

Eighteen hours after the surgery, Jon's body was back in Big Spring, and the procedure did not interfere with his funeral. Jon was buried at Trinity Memorial Park next to his father.

Within a month, his mother learned what happened to his donated organs.

His heart went to a 66-year-old retired carpenter with heart disease. His liver went to a 38-year-old woman food service worker with impending liver failure. One of his kidneys went to a 59-year-old disabled woman with diabetes, and the other kidney went to a 41-year-old disabled nurse with a long history of high blood pressure, whose kidneys were damaged beyond repair.

Today, all the beneficiaries of Tindol's gift lead lives as close to "normal" as possible.

"It's extremely comforting to know that a part of him is living on," Tindol said. "I have a favorite bumper sticker that reads: 'Don't take your organs with you to heaven. Heaven knows we need them here.'"

For information about LifeGift, call 1-800-633-6562.

Carolyn Tindol is shown with a plaque honoring her son Jon's organ donation and a photograph of her son. After his untimely death, his organs were used to extend the lives of four others through LifeGift.

FBC gives kids foundation for Christianity at its two-day Mother's Day Out program

By DEBBIE LINCECUM
Features Editor

First Baptist Church's Mother's Day Out program only has its children two days a week.

But in that short time, it aims to give them a foundation in learning and Christian faith. Using songs, stories and Bible verses, along with crafts, games and toys, the program tries to reach children from six weeks to kindergarten age.

"Many of our children are from the families of members," explained Tammy Lockhart, program director. "But we have some who come from a home that has no church affiliation. For those children, we may be their only link to Christianity."

Children attend the program on Tuesdays and Thursdays at First Baptist. Formerly once a week, Mother's Day Out was increased to two days last year.

At the same time, Lockhart tried to emphasize learning, not just child care.

"This works more with the older children," she explained. "But we're amazed at what they can learn."

For instance, she said, kids in one of the older classes memorized two songs for a Christmas program. Those children also take monthly field trips and attend chapel services in the sanctuary.

Once a month, the kids - from babies to the oldest enrolled - gather in a carpeted area under a set of stairs to sing.

Each month, they focus on a different Bible verse. At the same time, they learn a color, number, letter and shape.

January's shape is the snowflake.

The color is white and the letter is E. The number is five, and the Bible verse is "Love one another."

Earlier this week, Lockhart illustrated this month's theme by reading the children the story of the prodigal son, whose father welcomed him home despite the son's earlier desertion of the family farm.

"You know, your parents will always love you," Lockhart told the older kids assembled for chapel services. "They may have to get on to you about something you did, but they will always love you."

Classrooms for the older children are divided into stations - books, a play kitchen, art supplies and tables. The children play at each area for a specific amount of time, learning a pattern Lockhart says many of them will continue in kindergarten.

Field trips during this school year included a local dentist's office, a plant nursery and the Heritage Museum. Special visitors included police officers and firefighters.

At one session, kids learned about making gingerbread houses. They attended the Howard County Fair for a branding demonstration.

Discipline is never severe, Lockhart said.

"We never paddle the children," she explained. "We use 'time out.' If a teacher is having a particular problem with a child, and 'time out' isn't working, she brings the child to me and I have a talk with them. They think of me like the principal."

Many of the kids count on the love and concern of their teachers at Mother's Day Out, Lockhart said.

"If a child comes from a home where there's a lot of fighting, or something like that, they know as soon as they get here, the teachers will give them a hug," she said.

But above all, the program aims for a strong foundation of faith.

"We want to teach them about God," Lockhart said. "They may not get that at home."

Is your house built on a solid foundation?

By DAVID ROBERTS
Garden City First Baptist

Have you heard the words, Have you read the words, Are you doing what they say? Jesus said that practicing them Is much like the way

That a wise man builds his house When he surveys the scene;

When he checks out the soil To see if his house will lean.

What's that you say, About doing what they say? Whose words are we obeying

And who is this wise man That's off surveying? Why is he so worried About the ground

Where he will build the house That he hopes will stand so sound?

Well, the house will be sound, Cause the foundation is sound, For he built it upon a rock. And the winds upon his Front door did knock

And the floods came rushing And how the waters rose. But his house did not move And so the story goes.

But whose words have we heard, And whose story have we heard? For why do we need to know About the man whose house Just wouldn't let go

Of the house that he built on

The rock that was firm, Why's this story so important? What is there to learn?

Have you heard the words, Have you read the words, Do you practice what they preach? Jesus said that ignoring them Is like the house built on the beach.

Built by a foolish man Who could care less about the dirt. "If the foundation's not solid"

He thought, "what will it ever hurt?"

Oh, so this is tale, It's the biblical tale, Of the man who settled for sand. And of course in the storm His house did not stand.

When the storm blew in And the thunder clouds rumbled The stream overflowed

And that man's house crumbled.

That's it my friend, You've got it my friend, And now you know the parable Of a foundation that was solid And one that was terrible.

But the truth of the story Is not how to build a home, But whether you obey the Word Or you just leave it alone.

To hear the words And obey the words Is being like the wise man Who built his house upon the rock And not upon the sand.

But ignoring what Jesus taught Is being like the one Who thought a good foundation would spoil all of his fun.

Elbow FCE

The Elbow Home Demonstration Club has changed its name twice since it was organized 65 years ago. A few years ago the National and States organizations changed the name to Extension Homemakers, causing the local clubs to change to that name. At the annual State Meeting in September 1993 the name was changed again, this time to "Family and Community Education (FCE) Clubs. Their reason was, the new name better defines what the clubs do and stand for.

The Elbow FCE Club met Jan. 6 in the home of Mrs. A.A. (Lola) Kelley. Myrl Soles presided. Mrs. Kelley gave the Devotional: Proverbs 3:6.

Eleven members answered roll call with, "Something I enjoy daily." Mrs. Steve (Lou) Vincent read the thought, "May all your troubles last as long as your New Year's resolutions." New committees were appointed and programs were planned for the year.

The Standing Rules were revised and nominees for delegates to the district meeting, to be held in Odessa, April 21 were elected, they are: Myrl Soles, Erma Steward and Mrs. Dwight (Dot) Blackwell. The club will have a family night, three times during the year and will donate cakes to the state hospital each month.

The next meeting will be January 20, in the home of Zula Rhodes.

Woman's Club

The Big Spring Woman's Club met on Monday, December 13, at the home of Susan McLellan. Rhapsody provided a wonderful Christmas program.

The club's final two projects of the year were great successes. The club would like to thank everyone in the community that donated to our coat drive. Over 400 coats were collected and distributed to the needy in our area. The club also provided a Christmas food basket to a needy family. Toys and clothes were also included. All items and money for this project were donated by club members.

The club's next meeting will be Jan. 17. This is its annual membership meeting where anyone that interested can attend. For information, call any club member or membership chairman Jackie Swinney at 263-1137. The club is open to any female over 21 years of age.

Despite biblical support, tithing continues to drop

By The Associated Press

Tithing, the practice of giving 10 percent of one's income for religious purposes, is alive and well — among the clergy.

"Every clergyman I know is one of the top three givers in their church," says Maryann Doyle, a fund-raising consultant to churches.

One of the first things the Rev. James Kidd says he has tried to do at Asylum Hill Congregational Church in Hartford, Conn., "is to put my own money where my mouth is."

He tithes 10 percent of his income to the church and gives an additional 5 percent to outside charities.

"Don't give until it hurts. Give until it feels good," he preaches to his congregation. "I tell them it feels really good."

But even at churches such as Asylum Hill that have strong stewardship programs, many no longer feel compelled to follow the ancient Jewish and Christian tradition of tithing.

Instead, in a trend that has cost churches billions of dollars a year, religious giving as a percentage of income has been on an almost uninterrupted downward spiral for more than two decades, from 3.1 percent in 1968 to 2.5 percent in 1991, according to empty tomb inc., a research organization based in Champaign, Ill.

The biblical warrants cited for the practice of tithing go back to the 14th chapter of Genesis when Abraham gives a tithe of the spoils of his recent battle to the high priest Melchizedek, according to the Anchor Bible Dictionary.

A foolish man,
We could all be one of the two.
The words are not for us just to hear
They are there for us to do.

So actions are just as important
As hearing and meditation.
And obedience to the Word of God

Becomes our solid foundation.

So when the storms come
Like they always come
Our lives will stand or fall away
Not because we just read the words
But 'cause we practice what they say.

The center will be open from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on that day, so that people can explore the selection of inspirational books and other materials.

Tent crusade

Plans are being made for a city-wide children's tent crusade. Several churches were represented at the first steering committee meeting Jan. 7.

According to Sharon Rich, director, the purpose is to reach Big Spring children with the gospel of Jesus Christ. "We are not promoting one particular church or denomination. All participating churches desire to work together, ministering to families, to see God's power released in our community."

The crusade, for ages 3-12, will be held May 30 through June 4 at Evangel Temple Assembly of God Church, 2205 Goliad. A regular VBS will be held inside for ages 3-5 and a crusade, for ages 6-12, will be held in a large tent behind the church. Retired missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. Ellis Stone, Farmington, New Mexico, own the tent and travel throughout New Mexico, Texas, and Oklahoma, providing the tent for crusades and revivals.

Local people from the participating churches will be ministering to the children. For more information call Sharon Rich, 267-5417, or Pastor Eugene Smith, 263-1136.

Bullets shoot down Rockets; Spurs slam Suns

By The Associated Press

The Washington Bullets have 11 victories this season, and it's pretty easy to categorize them. The first 10 were nothing special; the last one was memorable.

The Bullets shocked the Houston Rockets 120-102 at Landover, Md., Thursday night for only their third victory this season against a team with a winning record.

Houston (28-6) is in first place in the Midwest Division and Washington (11-22) is last in the Atlantic. Still, this game wasn't close.

The Bullets led by 13 after one quarter, 14 after three and 24 early in the fourth. Don MacLean had 30 points and Rex Chapman added 27 as the Bullets won their second straight for the first time since mid-November.

The Midwest Division-leading Rockets are only 6-5 since starting the season 22-1.

Hakeem Olajuwon scored 45 points for Houston and Otis Thorpe added 16.

"Hakeem does so much for our ballclub, but we need to feed off him," Rockets rookie Sam Cassell said. "We didn't do that tonight. It's not good enough for him to score 45 points if no one else helps out."

Michael Adams had 17 points for Washington, and Tom Gugliotta and Mitchell Butler added 16 apiece.

Spurs 107, Suns 88

At San Antonio, it was a close game until the final five minutes.

Danny Ainge tied the game at 84 on a driving bank shot with 4:49 left, but the Spurs outscored Phoenix 23-4 the rest of the way. David Robinson had 27 points and 16 rebounds. Dennis Rodman added 14 rebounds and nine points.

The game drew a crowd of 34,027 to the Alamodome, the second-largest crowd in the NBA this season.

Knicks 94, Pistons 80

At Auburn Hills, Mich., Olden Polynice got hurt in the first quarter and four other big men — Sean Elliott, Greg Anderson, David Wood and Terry Mills — got into foul trouble.

That left the job of guarding Patrick Ewing to bench-warmers Danny O'Sullivan and Marcus Liberty, and the Knicks center dominated.

Ewing had 42 points and 16 rebounds in his fourth straight game with at least 30 points. Detroit has lost 11 straight, three short of the club record.

Cavallers 104, Nets 93

At Richfield, Ohio, the Nets started well, hitting 71 percent of their field goal attempts in the first quarter, but finished poorly, scoring only 55 points on 35 percent shooting over the final three periods.

Chris Morris had 20 points for New Jersey, which has lost four of five.

Jazz 101, Bucks 83

At Milwaukee, the Bucks were hurt by 33 percent field goal shooting and 55 percent free throw shooting as they fell to 0-4 on their five-game homestand.

Jay Humphries and Karl Malone had 14 points apiece for Utah.

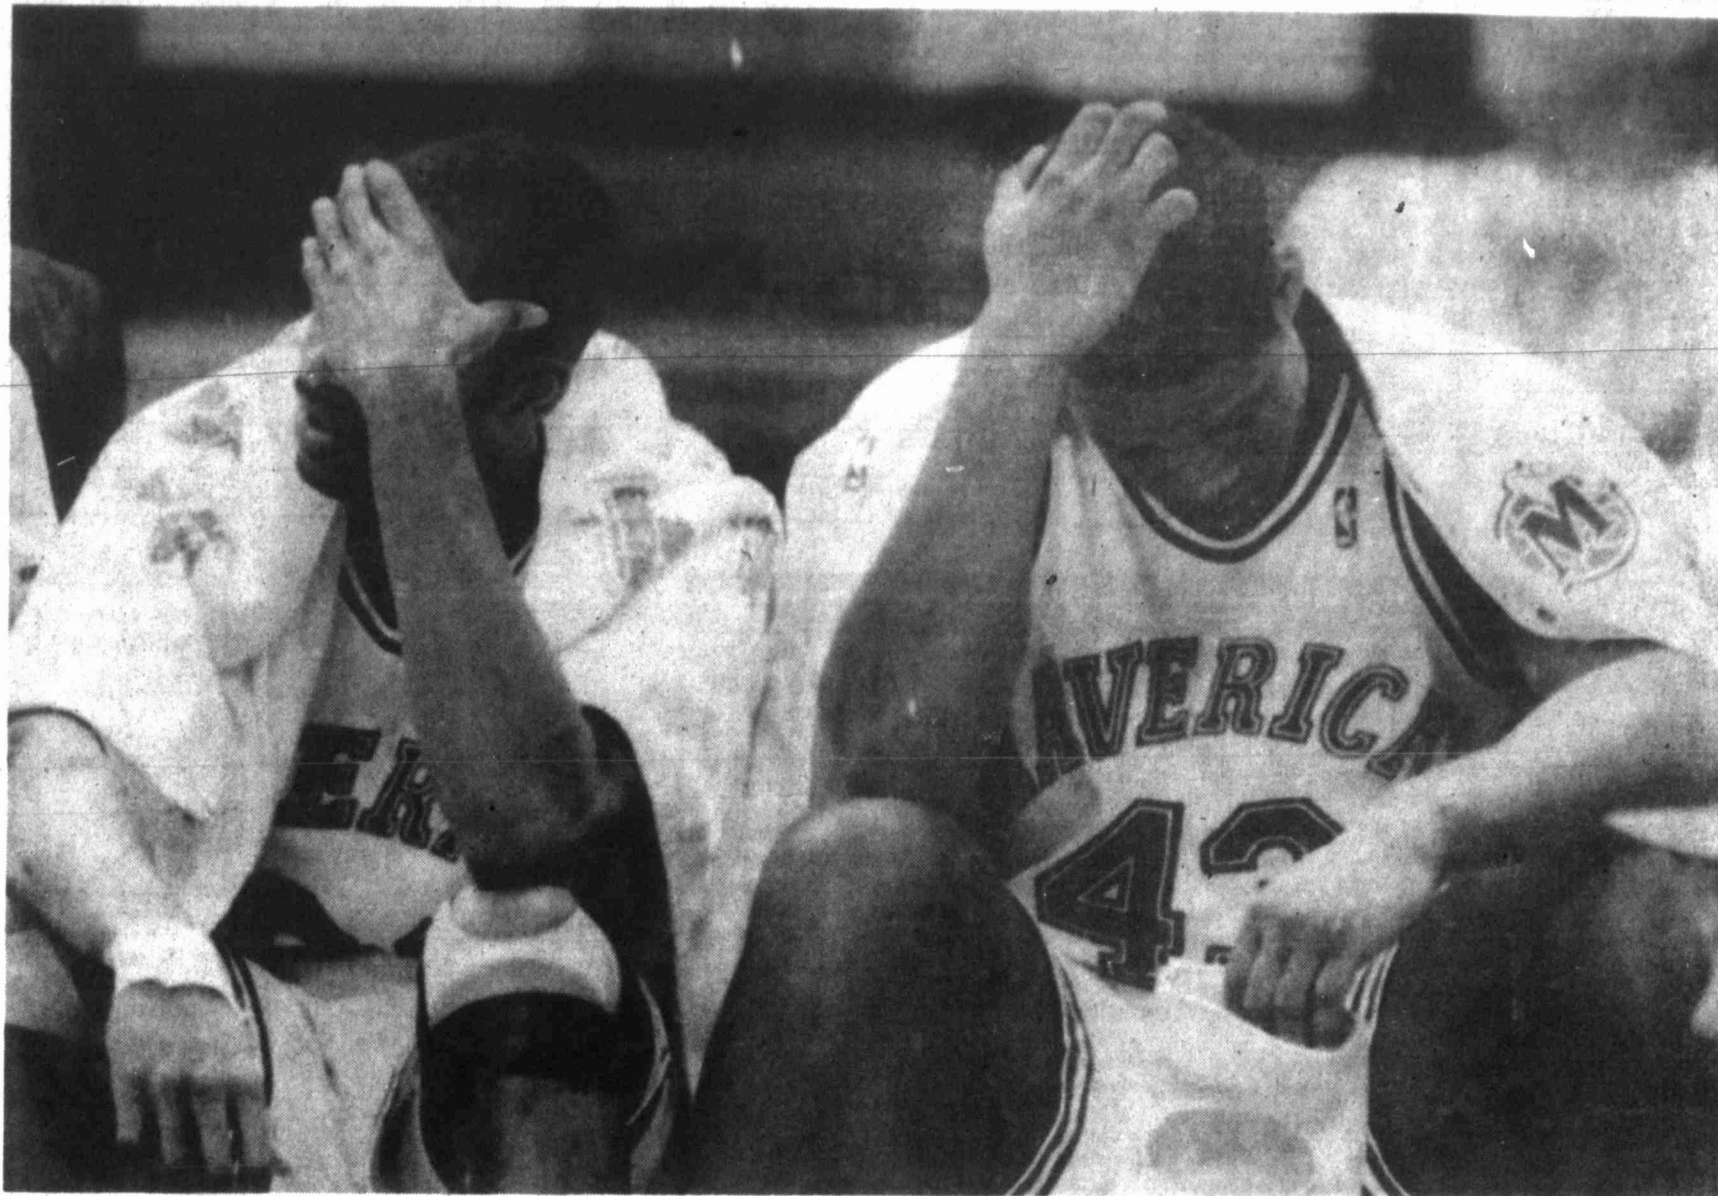

"We're at a point where we got to win. I don't care what it looked like. It's not going to be pretty, but you've got to win," Malone said. Utah snapped a season-high, three-game losing streak.

Kings 115, Hornets 104

At Sacramento, Calif., Alonzo Mourning returned from a six-game absence due to a sprained ankle, but it didn't help Charlotte.

Mourning had team-high totals of 18 points and 14 rebounds, but the Hornets were hurt by 4-of-20 field goal shooting in the fourth quarter.

Wayman Tisdale had 22 points and Mitch Richmond and Lionel Simmons each added 17 for the Kings, who have won five straight at Arco Arena and six of nine overall.

Dallas Mavericks Fat Lever, left, and Terry Davis hang their heads during a game earlier this month. With their loss Wednesday, the Mavs tied the NBA record for most consecutive home losses - 16.

Mavericks sink to new levels of futility

Dallas seems destined to turn in worst season of all-time

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Fans are wearing paper bags and calling for the ouster of coach Quinn Buckner as the Dallas Mavericks appear headed for the NBA's worst all-time record.

The miserable Mavericks (2-30), who lost 103-85 Wednesday to the Minnesota Timberwolves — the only team they have beaten this season — have lost 16 straight home games.

Saturday, they will get an opportunity to break the NBA record for consecutive home losses when they entertain the San Antonio Spurs. The Mavericks currently share the record with the Orlando Magic.

In the fourth quarter of the Mavericks' loss to the Timberwolves Wednesday, two Dallas fans pulled brown paper bags over their heads. Behind the Mavs' bench, another group yelled, "Quinn must go! Quinn must go!"

In the fourth quarter of the Mavericks' loss to the Timberwolves Wednesday, two Dallas fans pulled brown paper bags over their heads. Behind the Mavs' bench, another group yelled, "Quinn must go! Quinn must go!"

Buckner said Wednesday that some players, including rookie forward Jamal Mashburn, had a bad game.

"We had some guys get on the floor and play hard, and those were the guys that got to play for us," Buckner said.

"This is not a sometime league. This is a league for people who play hard consistently, and when you do that, you give yourself a chance for success. Without that, you give yourself a chance to get beat."

Mashburn, the Mavericks' $32 million man, left the locker room through the back door after the game, in which he went 2-for-12 from the field and finished with four points after playing only eight second-half minutes.

Other players expressed their frustrations.

"I am tired of it, and I know the fans are tired of it," guard Jim Jackson, who scored a team-high 24 points, said of the constant losing. "This is our job, and we have to come out and play hard every game."

"I think everyone (on the team) wants to win. It's a matter of preparing yourself. There's a difference in wanting and preparing."

Jackson said it was difficult to understand how the Mavericks' added talent could result in a worse team than the one that won only 11 games last season. The all-time NBA worst is 9-73, by the 1973 Philadelphia 76ers.

Buckner maintains that the Mavericks are not doing well because the league has improved as a whole.

One bright spot for Dallas was Fat Lever, who scored his 10,000th career point in the second quarter.

Dallas had beaten the Timberwolves twice previously on the road, including a 93-89 victory Dec. 23. Since then, the Mavericks have lost seven games.

Three Cowboys among Hall of Fame finalists

By The Associated Press

CANTON, Ohio — The Dallas Cowboys and Minnesota Vikings, who played in every Super Bowl during the 1970s but one, each placed three players among the 15 finalists announced Thursday for induction into the Pro Football Hall of Fame.

Running back Tony Dorsett, defensive lineman Randy White and cornerback Mel Renfro represented the Cowboys, who won the 1972 and 1978 Super Bowls and lost Super Bowls in 1971, 1976 and 1979.

The Vikings, who lost Super Bowls in 1970, 1974, 1975 and 1977, had coach Bud Grant, defensive lineman Carl Eller and defensive back Paul Krause among the finalists.

Joining those six were Pittsburgh Steelers wide receivers John Stallworth and Lynn Swann; San Francisco 49ers defensive back Jimmy Johnson; offensive linemen Dan Dierdorf of the St. Louis Cardinals and Tom Mack of the Los Angeles Rams; wide receiver Charlie Joiner of the Houston Oilers, Cincinnati Bengals and San Diego Chargers; Chargers tight end Kellen Winslow; tight end Jackie Smith, who played with St. Louis and Dallas; and seniors nominee Leroy Kelly, a running back with the Cleveland Browns.

The finalists were chosen by the hall's 34-member board of selectors. The board will meet Jan. 29 at Atlanta to elect the class of 1994.

Ten of the 15 finalists spent their entire careers with one team and three others played all but one season for the same team. In addition to the Vikings, Krause also played for the Washington Redskins.

Dorsett spent the bulk of his career with the Cowboys, but closed it out with one season with the Denver Broncos. Eller played 15 years with the Vikings and one with the Seattle Seahawks, and Smith spent his first 15 seasons with the Cardinals before bowing out with a year in Dallas.

If elected, Dorsett, Renfro or White would join only four long-time Dallas Cowboys who have been enshrined in Canton: Bob Lilly, Roger Staubach, Tom Landry and Tex Schramm.

Only two long-time Vikings — Fran Tarkenton and Alan Page — are enshrined in the hall.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You are happy just staying at home today. Take some time out to do something nice for yourself. Consider reorganizing a room or shopping for a few nice things for your home. Tonight: Invite others over for a fun dinner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Focus today on communications, friendship and getting what you want. You receive many offers, and some could be quite intense. Don't be shy: Go for what is important to you. Love and romance are part of the scenario. Tonight: Work on friendship.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You feel like buying something to enhance your career or image, and today turns out to be the right time to be concerned about how others view you. Putting more time into your appearance and work will pay off. Tonight: Visit with a parent or older relative.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): News from a distance has you clicking your heels. Be sensitive to your alternatives. Touch base with another and be loving in how you deal with a problem. Tonight: Wish upon a star.

IF JAN. 15 IS YOUR BIRTHDAY: This will be an extraordinary year if you keep communications flowing and are willing to reach out to others. The purchase of a new car or other equipment that will help your daily life is likely. You will be able to focus more clearly on your goals this year, with friends playing a significant role in your rise in the community. If married, expect a happier home life. If single, opportunities to meet people come naturally, and heavy romance is likely. SAGITTARIUS and PISCES play major roles as friends.

Dear Abby - Letters...

Her disappearing act gets bad review

DEAR ABBY: In a recent column, a woman complained that her husband always charges ahead of her in crowds without bothering to determine whether she is following him.

I have a somewhat different problem. My wife and I will be walking down an aisle in a department store when — poof — she disappears in thin air! My children tell me they used to be terrified when they were little and she did that to them.

On a recent trip to Europe, she disappeared in a mob scene at a New York airport. I nearly went crazy trying to find her. She finally showed up and casually explained that she had stopped to talk with someone for a minute or two!

Abby, your suggestion that a man and his wife walk arm in arm through crowds misses the mark. It's much easier to burrow through a crowd single file than two abreast, but if I insist that she walk ahead of me so I can keep an eye on her, she gets insulted. Any solution? — MILWAUKEE

DEAR MILWAUKEE: Insist that she walk ahead anyway. She'll survive the insult with far less trauma than losing each other in a crowded airport or department store.

DEAR ABBY: When are people going to wake up to the fact that if a person asks people about their background or heritage, he is not necessarily racist, prejudiced or insensitive?

Recently I was buying pork chops from a Chinese butcher who asked me in broken English, "Where you from?"

I replied, "I'm from Pasadena, Calif., but I am of Polish descent — third generation. Why did you ask?"

He said, "You sure talk funny."

I suppose to be politically correct, I should have been insulted. Sorry, I thought it was great. I've developed friendships and had some interesting conversations with people I would have never known anything about if I hadn't asked, "Where are you from?"

That's how I got to know my Chinese hairdresser was raised in Japan, and my garage mechanic came from Armenia and was interned in a concentration camp in Siberia. I've learned a lot about Jewish religious customs, polished my Spanish with a lady from El Salvador, found out about the Buddhist religion from a man on a bus, and got some great recipes from Mormons in Utah and Scandinavians in North Dakota.

How are we going to learn about people whose cultures are different from our own if we're afraid to talk to each other? — MARILYN HUDSON IN PASADENA

DEAR MARILYN: You make an excellent point. However, not all people are open and willing to answer questions asked by strangers; they feel it's an invasion of their privacy.

DEAR ABBY: Concerning books that one loans out and are never returned: I personally never loan a book to anyone unless I don't care whether I get it back or not.

I own a bookstore that handles out-of-print hardback books. In looking through a secondhand book, I found the following statement on the flyleaf:

"— AND PLEASE RETURN IT."

"This may seem a strange request, but I find that while most of my friends are poor mathematicians, they are all damn good bookkeepers. — RALPH J. STUBBS"

Black coaches seek Congress' help on scholarship issue

By The Associated Press

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — The Black Coaches Association, frustrated in dealing with the NCAA and poised with a boycott planned for this week-end's college basketball games, has turned to Congress.

Drake coach Rudy Washington, an executive of the BCA, said he was to meet today with the Black Congressional Caucus in hopes of getting an arbitrator to produce satisfactory action regarding athletic scholarships.

"If we don't come to some kind of agreement or get ourselves an arbitrator, then a boycott will happen on Saturday," Washington said Thursday night in Tulsa, Okla., declining to discuss what a boycott would entail.

He fueled the speculation of those who fear major disruptions of this weekend's games and possibly more.

"It is a very unfortunate situation. It's right on the verge of being nuclear," Washington said. "If we can't come to some kind of terms, I'm really afraid of the season itself. It has to be dealt with. We're reasonable men, and I think the NCAA is reasonable. But again, we were made promises that weren't kept."

At this week's NCAA convention, the membership voted down returning a 14th scholarship to men's Division I programs. Washington said the National Association of Basketball Coaches and the BCA "thought we had a deal" with the NCAA regarding that scholarship, one they feel will affect hundreds of minority students.

"We were ready to make concessions about that, and it never happened," he said, adding the scholarship not being restored "broke the camel's back."

A boycott would have "tremendous ramifications," he said.

"If the games don't go on, the ACC loses a million dollars this weekend. Is one scholarship worth that?"

John Thompson of Georgetown, John Chaney of Temple, Nolan Richardson of Arkansas, Clem Haskins of Minnesota and George Raveling of Southern California are among the black head coaches whose teams play Saturday.

Raveling wouldn't tip the organization's hand Thursday night from Seattle.

"I know what we're going to do," he said. When asked if he would provide any details, he said: "None."

The BCA initially listed a variety of options, including asking players to participate. It broke off talks with NCAA officials on Wednesday, and on Thursday it appeared the BCA's position softened.

"There's some evidence we're going to be able to reopen dialogue," NCAA executive director Cedric Dempsey said Thursday.
