Campaign chairman Mike Cook addresses an audience of about 300 Midland United Way workers gathered for a celebration Thursday at the Green Tree Country Club. Campaigners raised 106 percent of this year's $2.26 million goal.

Local United Way surpasses its goal

Symbolized by its superhero theme, Midland United Way cleared its tall-building campaign goal with room to spare, fund-raisers announced Thursday.

This year's drive raised $2,384,700, stomping the $2.26 million goal by $124,700. About 300 United Way workers celebrated the achievement at a campaign finale held at Green Tree Country Club.

Don Evans, United Way president, commended the tenacity of the volunteers and the generosity of Midland's citizenry.

"We've been striving to achieve a very ambitious goal," Evans said. "The United Way effort is the epitome of the Midland spirit, a spirit that has captured the attention of other people around the country.

"Midland is the standard for the whole country to look at."

Campaign chairman Mike Cook reminded the audience that the campaign is not over and follow-ups still must be made. The amount raised could easily top the $2.4 million mark, he added.

Cook attributed this year's success to a better-organized, more aggressive campaign drive.

"I think we've done a lot better job of getting the word out that there's a need in this community," he said, adding that campaigners have had plenty of work to do in the past two weeks.

About $1.51 million, or about 67 percent, of the $2.26 million goal for the drive had been raised as campaigners entered the last two weeks of the six-week drive.

United Way fell about $240,000 short of last year's $2.5 million goals.

Cook said this year's campaigned netted about $100,000 from new donors. The money was matched by the Abell-Hanger Foundation.

Division reports were as follows: special gifts, $713,545; independent oil, $74,840; residential, $22,266; retail, $53,357; real estate and finance, $106,166; businesses and entertainment, $94,533; utilities, transportation and commerce, $126,798; major oil, $606,780; petroleum industry, $249,040; education, $83,240; government and services, $76,500; and professional, $77,635.

Berlin Wall tumbling down

Opening of border 'permanent'

BERLIN (AP) — East Germany began knocking huge holes in the Berlin Wall today after announcing that it was forever lifting all travel restrictions on its citizens, the West German foreign minister said.

Foreign Minister Hans-Dietrich Genscher announced in Berlin that 18 new border crossings would be made in the wall so that East Germans can enjoy their new freedom of travel.

The announcement was the spectacular climax to a stunning three weeks of change in one of the world's most rigid Communist regimes.

The action caps one of the most dramatic shifts in post-war Europe, giving the once penned-up East German people full freedom of travel for the first time since the Berlin Wall was built in 1961.

Tens of thousands of East Germans streamed into West Berlin and other parts of West Germany today after a heady night of celebrating the opening of the Berlin Wall on Thursday.

"Last night, the Germans were the happiest people in the world," West Berlin Mayor Walter Momper said. The party continued today, as revelers popped champagne corks, lit sparklers and embraced on both sides of the border.

West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl cut short his visit to Poland to meet with his Cabinet and arrived in West Berlin. He hoped to talk with East German leader Egon Krenz.

Communist authorities opened East German borders Thursday in a desperate attempt to stem the flow of people fleeing to the West and quell the growing demonstrations that have spread to several cities.

The abrupt opening of the once heavily fortified borders was the breaktaking climax of a remarkable series of reforms that began three weeks ago in this once strictly-controlled society.

Police, city find new area of conflict

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A plan to mend rickety relations between city management and police and fire departments reached the first round of another squabbling match Thursday.

City administrators announced Tuesday that they wanted to form a relations-improvement committee. The suggestion fell on the same day a referendum to increase police and fire salaries by 10 percent met voter defeat.

Deputy City Manager Mike McGregor said the group would consist of two councilmen, a city administrator, two Fraternal Order of Police members, two non-FOP members and three firefighters.

However, FOP President Leonard Hendon said Thursday that the plan would be "too heavily administrative."

"W don't like the membership of that committee," Hendon said. "We want some say in the formation of the committee.

"That's what led to the referendum in the first place — their setting things up."

Hendon said police officers and firefighters should each have their own communications committee with city government. That would allow the departments to express their own needs, he said.

"We don't want to be treated like kids," he said. "We need to have some say. They pick their people and don't let us have our say."

Clements reconsiders action on judicial elections

By JAMES CULLEN
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Attorney General Jim Mattox Thursday urged the governor and the Legislature to start planning a system to increase the number of minority judges in nine urban counties after a federal judge ruled the current at-large system is illegal.

Gov. Bill Clements was reconsidering whether to include judicial redistricting in the call for the second monthlong special session that will start Tuesday.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton III of Midland Wednesday ruled that the system of electing judges countywide in nine metropolitan counties violates the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

The judge, after hearing a week of testimony this past summer, found the rights of minority voters were violated in all nine counties, including Bexar, Dallas, Ector, Harris, Jefferson, Lubbock, Midland, Tarrant and Travis counties. Only 17 of 172 trial judge seats in the nine counties were held by minorities.

Clements Wednesday night affirmed that he would limit the special session to workers compensation reform and said he expected Mattox to appeal the decision to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans, but Thursday the governor's legal staff was reviewing Bunton's 94-page order and Clements was waiting to confer with Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and House Speaker Gib Lewis before he decides which course to take.

"I'm giving it due consideration," Clements said.

Mattox said he cannot appeal the case until Bunton issues a final order. He noted that Bunton urged the Legislature to come up with its own remedy by Jan. 3, or Bunton would consider an injunction that could halt further elections under the existing system.

Mattox also noted that while he personally favors single-member districts, the court ruling does not require that as a remedy.

Among the other possible choices are multiple-member districts and a merit appointment system.

"His opinion doesn't demand that single member districts be set up, but it does give a very strong indication that we need to take action before Jan. 3, 1990," Mattox said.

"I believe the court has acted reasonably in this approach, and he's given the state of Texas the opportunity to respond," he said.

Templin now pursuing his parole

EDITOR'S NOTE: Convicted and imprisoned twice for a crime he says he didn't commit, Bobby Templin waited for the opportunity to tell his story outside the restraints of a courtroom. In the final installment of "Prairie Justice," Templin professes his love for Rhonda, gives his version of her death and challenges the motive behind her parents' investigation of the case. As he seeks parole, they are no less relentless in their opposition to his freedom.

By MIKE COCHRAN

PRAIRIE JUSTICE
Part Six

ROTAN, Texas (AP) — Heavy black clouds, light rain and an armed guard greeted visitors one hot, muggy morning at the maximum security Michael Unit of the Texas Department of Corrections near Palestine.

Convicted a second time of killing his wife Rhonda in 1976, Bobby Templin had been assessed a 99-year prison sentence by a West Texas jury but was hopeful now that he might soon be released from prison on parole.

At the same time, he suspected that his wife's parents, Norbert and Jaye Nell Schlegel, would be mounting a protest from their home far away in the Texas Panhandle town of Shamrock.

The low-slung prison unit was neither imposing nor menacing but mostly a somber gray gash in the lush green woodlands of East Texas in the spring of 1989.

Speaking through a phone from behind a thick glass partition, Bobby said first and foremost he did not murder his pretty young wife 13 years ago in Rotan and he welcomed the opportunity to tell his story free from the constraints of the witness stand.

"I'd get on TV and talk for two hours if I thought it would soak in with anyone," he declared. He did in fact offer an explanation for almost everything.

He appeared that morning in starched jail whites and with his dark hair closely cropped. He was neatly groomed and had gained no weight, and despite a hint of prison pallor, he looked better in person than in any of his photographs.

There was no denying that Bobby, now 35, had aged well, despite the turmoil that surrounded his adult life.

After his second conviction, he and his third wife divorced. He then took wife No. 4, this time by "proxy." Prison put a severe crimp in his freewheeling lifestyle but it couldn't curb his notions of romance.

While he seemed intense, he was not uncomfortable. He smiled easily and laughed sporadically. His voice contained hardly a trace of self pity or bitterness. His performance was one of grim resignation.

And as his detractors predicted, he spoke forcefully and often persuasively.

Despite his philandering, he said, he was very much in love with Rhonda and it was genuine grief that accounted for his unusual behavior in April 1976.

"My wife had just died," he said. "This was my childhood sweetheart, OK? I'm still not over it. Despite what people believe, it's going to be a lifelong thing."

Bobby said he sensed Norbert Schlegel's distrust almost at once.

"He and his wife started asking questions. I froze because they were pretty strange questions. I really didn't know what to say to them. They had just lost a daughter."

But it was not until a November 1976 phone call that Bobby realized the extent of the Schlegels' suspicions.

"Norbert said I should go ahead and confess to the murder," Bobby recalled. "If I didn't, he was going to see that I was indicted and prosecuted ... and put in the electric chair.

"I was pretty stunned."

He admitted he lied to Rhonda's parents about the work-related problem that prevented the trip to Shamrock that weekend. But he claimed neither he nor Rhonda wanted to go and he merely contrived the story as an excuse.

Recalling the events of April 11, 1976, he said he returned from work that morning and he and Rhonda talked and listened to music on the stereo. After deciding to go to Abilene, he showered and left to get gas.

Rhonda stayed behind to get ready. There was no radio in the bathroom.

Old soldiers look back as Veterans Day approaches

By KELLY P. KISSEL

BARBOURSVILLE, W.Va. (AP) — Old soldiers die, but they never fade away at the old soldiers' home, where they celebrate Veterans Day with memories of glory past and make no apologies for the place they live.

"This is my home and I'm proud of it," says Lawson G. Taylor, 71, a two-year resident of the Barboursvile Veterans Home. "I won $3 in bingo last night."

Barboursville is one of many such homes in West Virginia where veterans, often rebuilding lives broken by injuries and rejection, try to put things back together and relive tales of old battles.

West Virginia sent more soldiers per capita to the Korean War than any other state and the state's casualty rate in Vietnam was the highest in the nation, 28.8 per 100,000 residents, according to federal statistics.

Some say the state's traditionally poor economy pushes more soldiers to war; others attribute the figures to a fighting spirit among people whose ancestors conquered rugged terrain and seceded from Virginia during the Civil War.

"West Virginia is a very patriotic state," Secretary of State Ken Hechler said. "We have a lot of hunters who are very good in the use of guns. A few of them join up because of the tough times at home."

West Virginia officials say the state hasn't received a fair return on its investment. While the state's residents paid $1.59 billion in federal taxes that went toward defense spending in 1987, only $322 million in defense-related work was funneled back to the state, according to a study by Employment Research Associates.

"West Virginia is first in war, first in peace and last in the hearts of the Pentagon," Hechler said.

But Barboursville residents say they aren't bitter, and draw from a healthy reservoir of patriotism even when it isn't Veterans Day, which will be observed on Saturday.

"If we ever have a war on our shores, the enemy will be in trouble," said David Hall, a 41-year-old Vietnam veteran and resident of the home. "If they got as far as West Virginia, they wouldn't get much farther."

"War was just something that had to be done. We had a man who told us what to do and we did it," said Taylor, a World War II veteran. "I've never talked to a West Virginian who came back and said he was sorry he went."

About 115 veterans live in the Barboursville home, a former state hospital that was renovated in 1975. The average stay is 16 months and residents double-, triple- or quadruple-up in cramped quarters formerly used by mental patients.

The library is stacked with American history books and newspapers and the place is festooned with enough red, white and blue to look like victory for an enterprising flagmaker. Thick clouds of cigarette smoke seem to hang everywhere.

There's little anger toward those who fled to Canada to avoid the Vietnam draft and those who protested the war.

"My choice was to enlist and go to war," Hall said. "Those who left for other countries, they have to live with themselves."

But mention the flag — and burning it — and it sets off a torrent of comment about "kids" who don't know enough to respect it and the ideals it stands for.

"When you are in the services, when you see the flag go up the pole you get a feeling in your body. Chills go up your spine. You still get that feeling," said Jack Messenger, 58, a Korean War veteran who said he got tired of living alone and moved into the home a month ago.

Stewart Breeding, 56, said most people learn about war through pictures, movies and news accounts — not by living through it.

"If he goes to a war zone and sees what we went through, he wouldn't go do that," Breeding said of the flag burners.

"I don't believe in burning the flag, but I don't believe in beating the stuff out of a man on the steps of the Capitol," Hall said. "I'd want to prevent a man from burning the flag and prevent a man from getting beat up for burning it."

WEATHER SUMMARY

Low in upper 30s likely tonight

From Staff and Wire Reports

Clear skies and cool temperatures are in the forecast for tonight, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport. The low will be in the upper 30s and winds will be light and variable.

Saturday is expected to be sunny and unseasonably warm with the high reaching into the lower 80s and winds from the southwest at 10-15 mph.

Thursday's high of 76 was 10 degrees cooler than the record high of 86 set for that date in 1942. The overnight low of 33 was 13 degrees warmer than the record low of 20 set for this date in 1950.

STATE

Patchy, dense fog reduced visibility to near zero in the Texas coastal bend and along the upper Texas coast early today.

Visibility was near zero in the Corpus Christi area and in the Beaumont-Port Arthur-Orange area.

Forecasts called for fair skies tonight and sunny skies throughout the state Saturday. A warming trend was expected to give the entire state pleasant weather for the weekend.

Lows tonight will be mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s in the Panhandle, extreme West Texas and in the mountain of Southwest Texas to the mid 60s along the lower coast and in the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

Except for the areas where fog formed during the night, skies were mostly clear around the state at dawn today. There were a few high level clouds over North Central Texas and Northeast Texas.

Early morning temperatures were mostly in the 40s and 50s, ranging from the 30s and 40s over West Texas and in western portions of North Texas to the 60s in South Texas and along the coast. Extremes ranged from 35 at Marfa in the Davis Mountains of Southwest Texas to 63 at Corpus Christi.

Other early morning temperatures around the state included 46 at Amarillo, 45 at Wichita Falls, 49 at Fort Worth, 50 at Waco, 54 at Austin, 48 at San Antonio, 46 at Houston, 60 at Brownsville, 41 at San Angelo, 38 at Lubbock, 36 at Midland and 38 at El Paso.

Bush cautiously welcomes opening of wall

WASHINGTON — President Bush, in a deliberately restrained reaction, welcomed Thursday the decision of East Germany to allow open emigration across its western border and predicted other Soviet-bloc nations will have to do likewise.

"I don't think anyone can resist it," Bush said after he was briefed by Secretary of State James A. Baker III and national security adviser Brent Scowcroft on the East German situation.

"I'm very pleased with this development," Bush told reporters who were summoned to the Oval Office. "It clearly is a good development in terms of human rights."

The rapid changes in Eastern Europe were already expected to be a top item of conversation when Bush meets with Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev off the coast of Malta on Dec. 2-3, and the flood of refugees fleeing East Germany "is a message that Mr. Gorbachev will understand," the president said.

Bush referred to the East German move as a "liberation" which could leave the Berlin Wall with "very little relevance."

Bush, as did President Reagan before, has called explicitly for destruction of the wall, which has encircled West Berlin for 28 years.

But the president was careful not to gloat.

"We are not trying to give anybody a hard time," the president said. "We're saluting those who can move forward with freedom. We are encouraging the concept of a Europe whole and free.

"Certainly we salute the people in East Germany."

A senior administration official said Bush's reaction was intentionally low-key.

"I don't think it advances our interests at all for the president to be bubbling over and euphoric and say, 'Hey, gee, look what's happening. Hey, we're winning. Isn't this great' ... We don't want to inflame the situation."

The White House initially issued a statement in the name of press secretary Marlin Fitzwater. When television network correspondents pleaded for a personal appearance by Bush — and one suggested the president was looking timid — the brief session with reporters in the Oval Office was set.

Bush brushed aside a question about his demeanor.

"I'm elated," he said. "I'm just not an emotional kind of guy."

Bush and top aides expressed surprise at the rapidly changing picture in East Germany.

"It's going a lot faster than we thought," said a senior Bush aide, who praised the move but also said it presented challenges for the United States.

Bush conceded there will be calls for "more flamboyant courses of action for this country," but he indicated he would resist them.

The president, however, he was certain the United States would give serious consideration to any request from West Germany for aid to deal with crush of emigres.

WALL

"The Berlin Wall will come down, and Berlin will live," said former West German Chancellor Willy Brandt, who was mayor of West Berlin when the 9-foot-high Berlin Wall went up in 1961.

Brandt later appeared on the Western side of the wall's Brandenburg Gate, where he was cheered by thousands of revelers, some of whom were dancing atop the wall.

"Come to the wall, Willy, come to the wall," the crowd shouted, but the 75-year-old Brandt didn't oblige.

East and West Berliners joined in dancing atop the Berlin Wall during the celebrations that began Thursday night and lasted into today. More than 50,000 East Berliners crossed into West Berlin during the night, said the West German radio station Sender Fries Berlin. Only about 1,000 of them planned to stay, the radio said.

Today, lines of East Berliners waited at control points to enter West Berlin, and Communist border guards were rapidly handing out visas. The visas were required as of this morning for those wanting only to visit.

Most were obviously just visiting rather emigrating, exulting in their sudden new freedom to travel to the other side of the monolithic wall.

Border guards allowed many East Germans over the border after merely stamping their identity papers. Some didn't even require that, and guards from both countries stood together at the border.

"The sun is shining, and the people are in a good mood," said a smiling, husky East German guard today at the Invalidenstrasse crossing of the Berlin Wall.

Many people cried as they embraced relatives they hadn't seen in decades. Others rushed to West Berlin department stores to buy cosmetics and other goods scarce in the East bloc.

About 9,000 East Germans crossed into the West German states of Lower Saxony, Hesse and Schleswig-Holstein during the night, border police said today. Most of them as well planned to return.

West German television showed East Germans crossing this morning into Lower Saxony at the Duderstadt border control point.

"It was so simple to come over," one young East German said. "The feeling is just indescribable."

East Germany's sudden decision to open the borders came at a Central Committee meeting Thursday and followed a dizzying series of reforms announced by Krenz.

Guenter Schabowski, a member of the ruling Politburo, announced the borders were being opened until a law is passed allowing East Germans greater freedom of travel. He did not say when the law would be passed.

In Bonn, jubilant West German lawmakers, many shaking with emotion, spontaneously stood to sing the national anthem during a hastily called session of the lower house of Parliament.

JUDGES

If the governor and the Legislature do not act upon a plan, Mattox said he would propose his own remedy. "I can assure you this: the plaintiffs will submit a remedy in the case, and there will not be a shortage of individuals ready to suggest remedies."

Mattox suggested that the Legislature enact a judicial selection system that would take effect after the 1991 redistricting.

"This judge doesn't want to be stampeded into a difficult redistricting process," Mattox said. "He would probably prefer that the Legislature do it, if we would just give a strong indication that we would do it."

Mattox also proposed a complete overhaul of the state's judicial system. He already is appealing a ruling by a federal judge in Brownsville requiring single member districts in the 13th Court of Appeal in Corpus Christi, and he expects a lawsuit challenging the statewide election of the Texas Supreme Court.

"Very few individuals have looked at the current method of selecting judges and have found it satisfactory," he said. "We could use this decision as a catalyst to design a better system than what we have."

Mattox said he would represent the state on appeal of the court rulings. Attorneys for Dallas and Harris County judges also may appeal the Bunton ruling, but he doubted it would do much good.

"We could postpone the inevitable, or we could accept the leadership responsibility of coming forward and changing the system that most knowledgeable people would agree should be changed," he said.

Rep. Pat Hill, R-Dallas, chairman of the House Judicial Affairs Committee, expects Clements will open the session to judicial redistricting. She plans to file a bill that would elect judges in the urban counties on a nonpartisan basis from the same districts as the four county commissioner precincts.

In the case of Midland County, which has only three district courts, including one that specializes in family law, she said a special plan would be needed.

Ms. Hill agreed with Mattox that the state cannot appeal Bunton's ruling at this point, so she recommended legislative action.

The lawsuit does not affect the county courts-at-law, which handle misdemeanor cases, but Ms. Hill said the Legislature should include them in the plan, or they will be targeted in a future lawsuit.

Rep. Al Price, D-Beaumont, who said he was "elated" by the ruling, said Jefferson County's eight district judges should be elected from eight single-member districts to eliminate the vestiges of a racist system.

"We want single-member districts. Let every judge be accountable to the people who live near that judge," said Price, the only black lamwaker from Southeast Texas.

He disagreed that smaller districts would hurt the quality of judges. "We have lousy judges now," he said. "If a lousy (SOB) is appointing them, we're going to get lousy judges appointed. To have that person answerable to a constituency would do wonders toward keeping that process fair."

But Ms. Hill said commissioner precincts are the right size. "They're small enough to work, but they aren't so small that they would subject a minority candidate to undue influence from one special group."

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, who supports merit selection of judges, said Wednesday it was "not realistic" to address judicial redistricting in the special session because there is no consensus and census data is 10 years old.

Hobby suggested that Bunton hold off until 1991, when the Legislature will have new census figures and a system in place to draw new legislative and congressional districts.

Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, chairman of the Senate Juridprudence Committee, said the panel will hear testimony from judges and other interested parties Tuesday.

With the addition of Freewill Foster Home to this year's list of United Way recipients, Cook said the campaign needed more help than ever. The number of recipients is now 18.

In addition to Freewill Foster Home, other agencies serviced by United Way are American Red Cross, Big Brothers/ Big Sisters, Boy Scouts of America, Buffalo Trail Council, Boys' and Girls' Club of Midland, Casa de Amigos, Community and Senior Services, Council on Alcoholism/Drug Abuse, Family Services of Midland, Midland Need to Read, Midland/Lee Yough Centers, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Palmer Drug Abuse Program, Permian Basin Girl Scout Council, Petro Plains Camp Fire, Salvation Army and selected programs of the YMCA.

Charles Spence, Midland Reporter-Telegram publisher, will be next year's campaign chairman.

Although the proposal must still go before the City Council for discussion, McGregor said he expects the formation of only one committee.

"I doubt we'll do it the way that Leonard wants it," McGregor said. "Our recommendation is one committee that all employees will be represented on.

"We're obligated to deal with the same information at the same time, and the only way to do that is with one group."

Six weeks of bitter campaigning leading to Tuesday's election further frayed bonds between the city and safety officials, who petitioned for the referendum after receiving only a 2 percent pay raise this year.

McGregor said relations with the departments were sour long before the pay issue arose, but he said he could not pinpoint the problem's cause.

Hendon said improving ties with the city has been "what we were trying to do all along."

Brian Loose, a Midland Firefighters Association member, said he had no immediate concerns with the committee's composition.

"I hope it works out," Loose said. "I hope something positive comes from it.

"If we're (firefighters) going to have people on the committee, I'd like to see how it works before I comment on it."

LETTER

He said he bought gas, probably "made the drag," smoked a cigarette and returned home about 30 minutes later.

He said the first thing he noticed was that the stereo music was turned off.

"I didn't think anything about it at the time. I went through the house calling for Rhonda. I got no response. The last place I checked was the bathroom."

The door was ajar, he said, and the first thing he saw was the extension cord lying across the vanity.

"It was dark. The vanity was a light color, so it caught my attention."

Bobby said he saw Rhonda and the radio in the bathtub and immediately unplugged the extension cord. Her rigid body fell limp. He said he carried her to the living room because there was no space in the bathroom or hallway.

Her body felt "clammy," he said, and he covered her with a blanket or a sheet before calling the hospital.

Bobby recalled being hysterical and claimed that much of what occurred that day was hazy and disjointed.

He did remember the phone call from the justice of the peace, but said Susie Martin misinterpreted his reaction. He was not worried that an examination would turn up evidence that he killed his wife.

Instead, he said, he honestly doubted Norbert Schlegel would "appreciate" an autopsy on Rhonda and neither did he: "I didn't want these things performed on her."

After the autopsy was performed, Bobby said he, "like everyone else," was curious about the results, and that's why he slipped away and placed the call that Sunday evening to Dr. Jarrett Williams in Abilene.

Bobby said he could understand how Rhonda, reaching behind her for a towel, could accidentally have pulled the radio into the bathtub. But he could not explain how she came in contact with the exposed wires of the extension cord as she did.

At any rate, he agreed with his attorney Charlie Scarborough that it was not the fractured scraps of circumstantial evidence that led to his downfall, but his sexual misadventures. Small-town jurors denounced his lifestyle by convicting him of murder, he insisted.

Bobby figured he made few friends in Rotan or Roby by divorcing Melanie in 1980 and none at all by running off thereafter with another man's wife.

In effect, Bobby now maintained that rural Texans in and around Rotan could overlook his affair with Melanie in 1976 but could not accept the fact that he would leave her and their daughter to skip town with another man's wife.

"All of a sudden, I was a terrible scoundrel, which I'm sure I was. But I went from being accepted by the community to being bad in the eyes of the community."

Simply stated, he traced the origin of his problems to the divorce from Melanie, his second wife.

It troubled Melanie, he said, that much of their income was used to pay bills incurred during his marriage to Rhonda. There was never money left over.

"That got to Melanie pretty badly. There was a lot of pressure and tension ... and things finally crumbled."

Bobby said the marriage was a mistake to begin with, but that Melanie had insisted. They had resumed their liaisons the summer after Rhonda's death but Bobby considered the relationship more sensual than serious.

"I had no intention of marriage, no intention of anything...," he said. "But Melanie's a persistent little girl, very melodramatic, and I finally gave in. It was the lesser of two evils."

With a sad smile, Bobby conceded: "I have a severe woman problem, I know. Dramatic, as a matter of fact."

Whether or not Bobby's troubles began with his divorce from Melanie, he readily amended that theory to include Rusty Carroll's election as district attorney.

"Rusty Carroll hates my guts," Bobby said. "He knew he could get an indictment at that time because of the community, the mood in that county. If I'd stayed married to Melanie, I'd still be in Rotan and there never would have been an indictment."

But what of Wanda Kiker's devastating testimony about his purchase of the radio?

"I still don't understand that, but I do have an opinion," Bobby said.

"This sounds like an excuse, but you need to understand that this is a very small community and that was a very big event. Everyone wanted a part of it. It was the gossip of the time. What happened? Who did it?"

He labeled Mrs. Kiker's testimony "very incriminating" but added:

"Think about this...If you were going to plan a murder, would you travel 10 miles away, to Roby, to buy your murder weapon? Or into Abilene where nobody knew you?

"And if I'm supposed to be so intelligent and so calculating and clever, does it make any sense to walk in that store and carry on a conversation with that lady and describe myself and my wife?

"If I'm buying a murder weapon?"

And if guilty, why submit to multiple polygraph tests?

Bobby volunteered that the $10,000 insurance money could be considered a motive, but he said Norbert Schlegel insisted that he apply for it and then later cited it as evidence to be used against him.

Bobby could not explain the testimony about "plugging up dogs" but said as a youngster he might have told his cousins anything "when they were 5 or 6 years old."

Still, he added, it sounded strange that the cousins had identical recollections of a purported conversation 15 years earlier.

Stranger still was Bobby's insistence that the Schlegels' vendetta against him was most likely a cover-up for parental guilt.

"I have to say I really don't think Mr. Schlegel believes I killed Rhonda," Bobby maintained, no doubt aware that Norbert and Jaye Nell would dismiss such a theory as perversely hilarious.

Demonstrating his theory of how his wife, Rhonda, was electrocuted in 1976 is Bobby Templin. He was speaking to a reporter by intercom telephone from the glassed-in visitors' area of the maximum security Michael Unit of the Texas Department of Correction, near Palestine.

Bobby pointed out that the Schlegels insisted early on they had raised their children to know better than to take a radio into the bathroom with them. But maybe not.

"Through the years, I've thought about it quite a lot. In the death of a child, if a parent believes anything they did was directly or indirectly related to the death, they're not going to accept it.

"And I don't blame them. Somebody needed to take the responsibility off that parent. I don't have any animosity toward the Schlegels. I understand what they are doing," he said.

"But they're wrong, plain and simple."

Bobby said it took Norbert Schlegel five years to get him indicted, but his father-in-law's retaliation would have been swift and "more severe" if he truly thought he had killed his daughter.

"Five years is a little long to sit back and hope something happens," Bobby said. "He got what he wanted. His pursuit was effective. But what's going to happen when I'm legally out?

"He's worrying about that. I have to worry about that, too."

Bobby said his greatest regret was his extramarital affair with Melanie.

"If you single one thing out, that's it. I would never have the affair again. No way."

And back then?

"She was a very accessible, attractive, young girl," he said. "Very warm. It was springtime, and one thing led to another and we became involved. Totally ....

"This woman could make me feel something no other woman could. But I didn't kill for her. I didn't have to."

He said he knows people think he killed Rhonda only to resume his affair with Melanie: "That's the way it looks and that's the way it's been painted up. But that's not the way it was."

Bobby said his biggest mistake was the extension cord.

"When I look back on it, if the extension cord had been spliced properly, or not even spliced, just thrown away, then Rhonda would still be here."

The way Bobby tells it, the extension cord was accidentally mangled during a party at his home one night. He said he rolled a beer keg across the floor and severed the cord, leaving the wires partially exposed.

"I picked it up and cut it in a couple of places, put it back together, rolled it up and put it up on an appliance that was by the back door."

And then forgot about it.

"There's so much you don't have control over," he said almost wistfully. "You can't change things. Everyone wants to go back in time. One of my basic regrets was not really knowing which direction to take. Not being wise enough.

"Not that I'm a real wizard now, because I'm still making mistakes. But I do hope I have better judgment...I've got my vices, but I'm not quite as bad as they make me out to be.

"I'm no angel, but I didn't kill Rhonda."

In April 1989, a member of the State Board of Pardons and Paroles interviewed Bobby, checked his prison record and issued what is known as "tentative parole approval."

As customary, the board alerted trial officials and lawyers of its pending action.

On May 5, a three-member panel withdrew that approval.

"Something came in to change their minds," explained a spokeswoman for the board. "I can tell you we did receive protests. I can't tell you who they came from."

At least one such scarlet letter came from Norbert and Jaye Nell Schlegel, who opposed parole in no uncertain terms.

They provided board members a history of the case and a record of Bobby's marital and romantic strife and urged them not to be swayed by his "Ted Bundy" charm.

The Schlegels said they worked within the system for 11 years to obtain justice and that not one but two juries convicted Bobby and twice assessed 99-year prison terms.

They pointed out that Rhonda has "no reprieve from the death sentence" imposed by Bobby and declared:

"Any early release would be a betrayal of this justice, not only to Rhonda and those that loved her, but also to the 24 impartial jurors, who, after hearing all the evidence, including Bobby's defense and personal testimony, sentenced him to the maximum time in prison..."

In withdrawing its approval of parole, the board ruled that Bobby must remain in prison at least until August 1990, when his case next comes up for review.

Thirteen years after their daughter's death, the Schlegels had played their scarlet trump card.

Case against Templin chronicled

ROTAN, Texas (AP) — Here is a chronology of events in the Bobby Templin murder case:

May 23, 1973 — High school sweethearts Bobby Templin and Rhonda Schlegel are wed in their hometown of Shamrock in the Texas Panhandle.

October 1974 — Bobby and Rhonda move to the small West Texas town of Rotan after Bobby accepts a job as a lab technician with the Fisher County Hospital District.

April 11, 1976 — Rhonda Templin is fatally shocked at her home in Rotan, apparently by a radio that toppled into the bathtub while she was bathing. A justice of the peace rules accidental death.

Sept. 2, 1976 — Bobby secretly weds a hospital co-worker named Melanie and the couple moves to Alpine near the Big Bend country of far West Texas.

October 1976 — Suspecting that their daughter was murdered, Norbert and Jaye Nell Schlegel meet with authorities of the 32nd Judicial District to request an investigation. District Attorney Frank Ginzel is sympathetic but unresponsive.

December 1976 — A witness surfaces who claims Bobby bought a radio from a hardware store in nearby Roby three days before Rhonda's death.

December 1976 — District Attorney's investigator Ken Crow views autopsy photographs for the first time and is surprised to find a "mirror image" burn on the inside of Rhonda's right arm. The injury indicates that Rhonda's death was not caused by the radio but by a bare-wire extension cord attached to the radio.

January 1977 — DA Ginzel authorizes investigator Ken Crow to officially investigate Rhonda's death, which Ginzel personally believes was an accident.

February 1977 — Ken Crow interviews Bobby Templin, who denies the Roby radio purchase and rumors that he and Melanie were having an affair in the weeks before Rhonda's death.

April 1977 — A Fisher County Grand Jury considers evidence in the Templin case and requests that Bobby and Melanie be summoned to appear at a future session. Grand jurors subsequently take no action, neither indicting nor "no billing" Bobby.

April 1978 — Frustrated by law enforcement disinterest, the Schlegels file a wrongful death suit against their son-in-law as an investigative tool in their own ongoing inquiry.

August 1978 — Questioned under oath by the Schlegels' attorney, Bobby admits his affair with Melanie prior to Rhonda's death.

January 1981 — Rusty Carroll succeeds Frank Ginzel as district attorney and carries out his vow to pursue the Templin case.

April 21, 1981 — The Fisher County Grand Jury indicts Bobby for murder in the death of his wife.

Nov. 2, 1981 — Five and a half years after Rhonda's death, Bobby goes on trial in Roby, the county seat. The jury convicts him of murder and assesses punishment at 99 years in the state prison.

April 23, 1986 — The Texas Court of Criminal Appeals overturns the verdict, claiming that a portion of Rusty Carroll's closing argument was "inflammatory and prejudicial." A new trial is ordered.

March 16, 1987 — With a special prosecutor presenting the state's case, Bobby's second trial begins on a change of venue in nearby Sweetwater. Four days later Bobby is convicted and again sent to prison for 99 years.

April 1989 — Bobby becomes eligible for parole.

Pack mule wins honorary degree

PORT ANGELES, Wash. (AP) — Elwood Blues has been presented an honorary doctorate from Yale University, but he is having trouble keeping his mortar board straight — kind of what you'd expect from a mule.

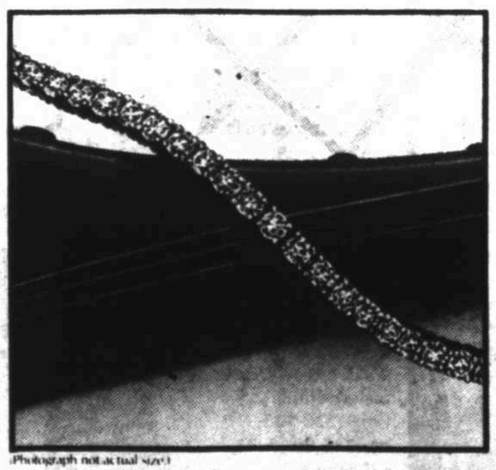

Elwood, a back country pack mule owned by the National Park Service, received the honorary degree at a commencement ceremony Friday in Olympic National Park.

He was honored with a "Doctor of Portage Equus" degree by Yale for his contributions to science, including assistance to a Yale geology team when he carried 80 pounds of rock specimens.

Park crews had found the Yale team struggling under the burden of rocks about 23 miles from their destination, and offered to pack some of the team's specimens and equipment on the mule.

Bush working on programs to end housing crisis

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Bush is pressing for a new initiative that administration officials say will address the plight of the nation's homeless and other problems families face in finding decent housing.

Bush was traveling to Dallas today to speak about the housing crisis before the National Association of Realtors, the powerful lobby of real estate agents.

He also was attending a dinner to help Texas Gov. Bill Clements retire $2 million in debt from his 1986 campaign and helping dedicate a Texas memorial to Vietnam veterans before flying home Saturday.

Top officials of the Department of Housing and Urban Development met today with White House domestic policy adviser Roger Porter and other top administration officials to put the final touches on Bush's housing initiative, sources said.

A White House official, who asked not to be identified, said Bush will use the Dallas appearance to unveil "a comprehensive plan to make basic shelter and affordable housing within reach of every American."

Another source familiar with the initiative said it will have specific proposals dealing with:

- Aid for first-time home buyers;
- The plight of the homeless, including the mentally ill left to drift on the streets;
- A moratorium soon to expire on multifamily low-income housing mortgages.

HUD Secretary Jack Kemp has backed the idea of helping low- and moderate-income tenants of buildings with subsidized mortgages buy their own units.

Once the moratorium expires, landlords can buy their way out of the program by prepaying their HUD mortgages. That leaves them free to charge market rates for the previously low-rent apartments.

Bush will also propose to aid the homeless by easing regulations that currently inhibit public housing authorities from housing the homeless in vacant units intended for families, the elderly or handicapped, the source said.

HUD will allow public housing authorities to grant waivers to let the homeless into such vacant units, he added.

Bush, in a speech last March 14, said, "When you look out the window of the White House and see the ragged, pathetic figures huddled over the steam grates of the Ellipse, I see an affront to the American dream, a national shame."

He ordered Kemp then to come up with new ideas to get the homeless off the streets of urban America.

Earlier in the year, Bush proposed spending $644 million in fiscal 1990 to carry out the McKinney Act, a program created to find housing for the homeless.

President Ronald Reagan, was often criticized by homeless activists for not seeking more funds for the homeless. Bush, during last year's campaign, promised "full funding" of the McKinney Act.

District of Columbia officials believe there are 8,000 to 10,000 people living on the streets of the nation's capital. Nationally, some researchers estimate 300,000 to 600,000 Americans are homeless on any given night.

Judge courts civic duty as juror

HOUSTON (AP) — It was a day of role switching for Harris County Court-at-Law Judge Jimmie Duncan, who reported for jury duty only to be assigned to his own court.

But Duncan was not among the five men and one woman selected Wednesday to serve as jurors at a misdemeanor assault trial.

His mere appearance startled his own staff, and visiting County Court-at-Law Judge Frank Hale was so impressed with the unlikely situation that he ordered a defense attorney to photograph the juror prospects "for history."

Board defends choice of 12 prison finalists

AUSTIN (AP) — Amid criticism from some losing cities, members of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice defended the process for choosing sites for six new state prisons.

Thursday, board Chairman Charles Terrell said the selection has been "absolutely" fair. "I'm also satisfied that we've got 12 good finalists."

The board Monday is scheduled to choose six sites from a list of 12 finalists for three 2,250-bed maximum security prisons and three 1,000-bed medium security units. The 12 finalists were announced Wednesday.

"I think, probably the process is being handled as well as it could be," said board member F.L. Stephens of San Angelo.

People involved with two communities' proposals passed over by the board said they weren't convinced the selection has been conducted fairly.

"It is my belief that it was all in place, said and done, before yesterday's (Wednesday's) meeting," said Ernestine Beicker, who helped organize the proposal from Karnes County.

Harry Stafford of Woodville, which already has been awarded one prison, was told in its contract for that unit that "we'd be given due consideration for an additional prison."

But Stafford said, "I don't think we were given due consideration. We were told about a week before that the fact that we had one (prison) was not in our favor."

Both Stafford and Ms. Beicker said their communities worked hard to prepare their site proposals.

"Then we started getting rumors that we weren't going to get one because we already had one. It was pretty apparent there the other day (Wednesday) that was a big problem," Stafford said.

"We've been through a long, hard struggle to get this, and then to not even be considered is quite a blow to the county," Ms. Beicker said.

Stafford and Ms. Beicker said they had heard rumors before the selection of finalists that an unofficial "short list" of sites might exist.

Stephens and board member Allan Polunsky of San Antonio said they knew nothing of a short list.

Another board member, Robert Mead of Waco, said, "You can hear anything you want to hear. ... As far as I'm concerned they (all 12 sites) certainly do" have a chance.

Terrell said he thinks each board member probably has been narrowing down personal preferences. "I'm sure there is (a short list) in every member's mind. As you visit these towns, you get an opinion of where you think these prisons are needed," he said.

Asked if any of the 12 sites enjoys front-runner status, Terrell replied, "I'm not going to comment on any front-runners at this point. That would be presumptuous."

Forty-four communities expressed interest at the outset, and some spent thousands of dollars preparing their proposals.

Board members inspected all 26 semifinalist sites, and Stephens said 20 were "very firm, very solid, very worthwhile proposals.

"To cut it to 12 really cut into the quick," he said.

"I'm sure at this stage there are 34 unhappy towns. And Monday, there will be six more. But our charge is to do the best we can for the state," Terrell said.

Grand jury visits caliche pit where 21 students died

EDINBURG (AP) — A grand jury visited the flooded caliche pit where 21 students lost their lives in the worst school bus accident in Texas history.

"They just went over to familiarize themselves with the area which they will be seeing in pictures and hearing about from witnesses," said District Attorney Rene Guerra.

The Hidalgo County panel will reconvene next week to continue deliberations, Guerra said. The panel is reviewing affidavits from experts and witnesses, including the 60 survivors of the Sept. 21 accident, to decide whether criminal charges should be filed.

The crash occurred when a soft drink truck collided with the bus at a rural intersection near Alton. Survivors said the bus became airborne and careened into a flooded, 40-foot-deep caliche pit, which was not fenced.

One person missing after plane crashes into apartments

AP Laserphoto

Firemen fight an apartment fire Thursday evening in Smyrna, Ga., after a military jet crashed in the area, setting the complex afire.

SMYRNA, Ga. (AP) — Searchers picked through the rubble of a suburban Atlanta apartment complex today, looking for a man missing and feared dead after a Navy jet fighter exploded and slammed into the buildings, setting off huge fires.

Four people were injured, including the pilot of the A-7E Corsair II who ejected just before the crash Thursday evening, and a pregnant woman and her 5-year-old child who were critically burned.

"All the people are accounted for, except one occupant," Cobb County Medical Examiner Joseph Burton said today. "Unfortunately, we're pretty sure he's in there." Four other people who had originally been listed as missing were accounted for today.

Earlier, Burton had said, "If there are no fatalities, I'd call it somewhat of a miracle."

The unarmed A-7E Corsair II crashed 2½ miles short of the runway at NavalAir Station Atlanta, 15 miles north of Atlanta adjacent to Dobbins Air Force Base, said Navy spokesman Kerry Honore. The pilot was attempting to land at the air station when the crash occurred at about 6:30 p.m.

About 30 people at the Pine Hill Village Apartment complex were left homeless. Burton said the missing man was believed to be the sole occupant of an apartment, but he said he could not rule out the possibility that a visitor also could have been with him.

"My first officer on the scene said he heard screams, but the building was engulfed in flames and he couldn't get in," Police Lt. J.L. Martin said.

An initial sweep today looking for victims yielded nothing, and search teams of local and Navy officers were slowly retracing their steps, Burton said at midmorning.

The crash site remained sealed off with police tape and Marine Reserve guards. Police officer Frank Durrance, who had been inside the complex, said the Navy jet struck the edge of a building before crashing into a car and coming to rest by a chain link fence about 30 yards away.

"It's completely burned. It's just a big piece of metal. ... The car was completely burned. You could tell it was a car, but you can't tell that it was a plane," Durrance said.

The Navy today identified the pilot as reservist Lt. Cmdr. Robert M. Conlyn Jr. of Marietta, a veteran pilot both for the Naval Reserve and Delta Air Lines.

He was in critical condition after undergoing surgery late Thursday night at Kennestone Hospital, said hospital official Bill Ballew.

A witness, Terry Scott, said he saw the pilot's parachute deploy about 100 feet above the ground. The pilot plunged into a street, where he was given cardiopulmonary resuscitation.

Senate adopts smoking ban on U.S. flights

WASHINGTON (AP) — Opponents of smoking aboard airliners are on the verge of winning their fight to forbid passengers from lighting up on practically all U.S. flights.

The Senate by voice vote Thursday passed a prohibition against cigarette smoking on all but a handful of domestic flights. Tobacco-state lawmakers, long convinced they were badly outnumbered, made no comments on the prohibition.

The House approved the ban, included in a $12 billion transportation bill for the new fiscal year, on Oct. 31. The Senate will continue debate on the spending measure Tuesday and will send it to President Bush for his signature if no changes in the legislation are made.

"Approval of this law is a milestone in the efforts to protect those who don't want to put themselves at risk by inhaling other people's smoke," said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., the measure's sponsor.

The new restrictions permanently forbid smoking on all routes within the continental United States, and on all flights to and from Alaska and Hawaii scheduled for six hours or less.

The current ban — which expires next April — applies only to routes lasting two hours or less, covering 80 percent of all flights.

Smoking would remain legal on only about 28 of the 17,500 daily scheduled U.S. flights, according to the House sponsor of the measure, Rep. Richard Durbin, D-Ill. Uncovered would be 24 flights each day to Alaska and Hawaii and four to Guam.

Lautenberg and his allies, citing studies by the surgeon general's office and other sources, have argued that it is unhealthy to breathe cigarette fumes from smokers.

Tobacco industry supporters insist cigarette smoke is only one chemical in airline cabin air, which is recirculated. They have argued Congress should not act until the Department of Transportation completes a study next year on the components of cabin air.

"The Congress has essentially acted in an informational vacuum," said spokesman Walker Merryman of the Tobacco Institute, the cigarette industry's trade group.

Cigar and pipe smoking aboard airliners has been illegal since 1983.

The bill also provides $3.2 billion for anti-drug programs; $40 million to begin building a new airport in Denver, the nation's first new airport in 15 years; and $14 million to develop new bomb-detection machines.

New child care battle looms with president

WASHINGTON (AP) — House and Senate Democrats, with the help of a maverick Republican senator, are setting the stage for a new showdown with President Bush over child care subsidies.

Negotiators from the two congressional bodies reached agreement Thursday night on legislation that would increase direct federal child care subsidies to low- and moderate-income families by $1.2 billion in 1990 and by up to $8.5 billion over the next five years.

The accord was struck after Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, dropped his demand that states be allowed to issue vouchers for a new $300 million program to pay for keeping schools open longer hours to provide day care and establish a new education-driven program for pre-school tots.

"At least we have a running shot now with a bill that the president might not veto," said Hatch, who angered the administration, Senate Republican Leader Bob Dole and conservative groups by joining with liberal Democrats last spring in putting together the basic package.

In exchange, House Democrats agreed to allow more of the money to go to rural areas at governors' discretion and let states issue vouchers that parents could use to pay for day care services provided by churches.

A separate group of House and Senate negotiators still must reach accord on another provision included in the child care package that would increase tax credits for poor families with children by $500 to $750 a year.

But House and Senate Democratic leaders instructed the chairmen of their tax-writing committees Thursday to try to settle differences over that portion by Monday night in a drive to get a House vote by the end of next week.

It's Iran's move in war of wills

Iran's radicals "celebrated" the 10th anniversary of their seizure of the U.S. Embassy with their usual gaiety last weekend by marching out for public view and scorn seven alleged CIA spies, burning an effigy of Uncle Sam, dragging through the dirt and then burning some 160 U.S. flags, and screaming "Death to America" and "Death to Israel."

These Iranians take their hatred seriously.

There's little doubt, however, that the joyous mood of the festivities was lost on Iran's president, Hashemi Rafsanjani. Having taken Iran's reins in the wake of the late Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's death, when the fervor of that ruler's bloody Islamic revolution was still at a fever pitch in the mind of his followers, Rafsanjani clearly has attempted to steer a new course away from direct conflict with the United States and toward the calm sailing of normalized relations. That won't be an easy task with the passions of radical sects fired by the memory of the Islamic revolution of a decade ago.

The banners vowing to "fight the U.S. until the last drop of our blood" that hung from trees last weekend won't do much to benefit Rafsanjani's cause either. It's difficult for Americans to let bygones be bygones when one segment of the Iranian population still calling for their blood.

Both nations have inched toward normalization in recent years, with one major step coming this week in the announcement that the Bush administration will release $810 million in frozen Iranian assets. That step potentially should lead President Rafsanjani to follow up on his Oct. 24th pledge to work for the release of eight Americans now held hostage in Lebanon.

Even if the hostages are released, Islamic fervor is keeping the goal of normalized relations at a distance. Certainly normalization would be of benefit to both nations economically, but as long as there is as much hatred evident on both sides due to the events of 10 years ago, normalization isn't likely to come unless Rafsanjani can cool Islamic passions.

As it stands, Iran is the nation that will continue to suffer from the rift. The United States has switched to other, more stable nations, for supplying its imported petroleum needs. But there are other matters to be considered. Such as the political consideration of adopting a "forgive and forget" attitude about a country that has pledged the very destruction of this one, openly defies it, defiles its flag and curses its leaders. And few Americans can forget the hostages from the U.S. Embassy, held for 444 days. To many Americans those actions simply can't be pushed aside.

Concrete steps by Rafsanjani's government to gain the freedom of Americans still held hostage overseas realistically could lead to talks that eventually would bring more normal relations. But that duty doesn't fall to Uncle Sam. It's Iran's move.

Reverse stings newest drug war weapon

WASHINGTON — Along the U.S.-Mexico border, shrewd government agents run what they call "reverse stings." Instead of posing as drug buyers, they advertise themselves as sellers. They coax major drug dealers into a trap by offering cocaine by the kilo, then confiscate suitcases of cash and toss the duped kingpins into jail.

Jack Anderson

Reverse stings are part of the newest, and perhaps wisest, form of combat in the drug war — going after the money instead of the drugs.

We talked to two federal agents who regularly impersonate drug lords. They claim the reverse sting is far more effective than undercover drug buys. "It's the only sure fire way to bust anyone near the top." Drug networks aren't likely to trust a low-level courier with $500,000 in cash.

The Bush administration is blindly devoted to stopping the flow of drugs, but some strategists in the drug war are starting to realize that taking drug money out of circulation has a more devastating effect on the market. Restricting the drug supply simply drives up the price and makes the business even more appealing.

Finance officials from 15 nations met last month in Paris to try to tighten international controls on drug money laundering. Banking laws in Switzerland, Luxembourg and some Caribbean nations have made those countries popular pit stops for drug money. Other nations are considering requiring banks to report deposits of $10,000 or more, as is already done in the United States.

One veteran undercover narcotics detective for the Washington, D.C., police department told our associate Jim Lynch that U.S. banks get off too easily, even with the $10,000 reporting requirement. He thinks banks should be forced to report other suspicious deposits — such as multiple deposits in one account of $9,999 each. The detective goes so far as to suggest that banks that don't report obvious drug transactions should be publicly named so their honest customers can take their business elsewhere. "People are concerned enough about drugs that I don't think they'd bank somewhere that did business with drug money," the detective said.

He also thinks car dealers should have to report when a customer pays cash for an expensive car. That would crimp the drug dealers' style. "If they can't buy anything with all that cash, it becomes just stacks of paper," the detective said. He wants car dealers to face fines if they take $20,000 from a jobless kid and ignore the source of the cash.

The detective and other narcotics officers also advocate more flexibility in the law when they seize the possessions of convicted drug dealers. Now they have to prove an item was bought with drug money before they can confiscate it.

Civil libertarians will pale at some of the suggestions. They come from cops on the front lines who are frustrated at seeing the drug trade flourish when bankers, car dealers and other legitimate business people have the information needed to pinpoint major dealers.

John Yoder, the first director of the Asset Forfeiture Office of the Justice Department, has been pounding on doors at the Justice Department and White House with another proposal to change market factors in the drug business. But he gets little response.

Yoder advocates making it more profitable to rat on drug dealers than it is to deal drugs. He recommends that anyone who helps police bust a dealer should get as much as half of the seized assets. Yoder also wants amnesty for drug traffickers who cooperate with police.

"The risk of getting caught is so slim and the economic rewards so lucrative," Yoder says, that the current laws about confiscating the possessions of drug dealers aren't enough to slow them down.

LOSING SLEEP — Frank Young, the commissioner of the Food and Drug Administration, is a desperate man. He is calling advisers late at night to ask them if they have heard whether his job is on the line.

The FDA is in the middle of a generic drug scandal that has turned up drug companies that bribed FDA employees for favorable review of their products.

Young called a source of ours who has been in government for years and asked what he should do. Our source told Young to start throwing punches before the fight is over, and recommended that Young take every drug off the market that is manufactured by any company that has defrauded the government.

Young still trusts his underlings at the FDA too much. That kind of trust led to the bribery scandal in the first place. Young is also paralyzed by his fears.

In the post-Reagan years, when many federal agencies have a mess to clean up, Young should take the lead from Jack Kemp, secretary of Housing and Urban Development. He should be a strong enforcer, not a weak apologist for the sins of the past.

Computers still can't fix flats, bake cakes

The human race is now in the debt of the Soviet chessmaster Gary Kasparov.

In case you might have missed the news, it was Gary Kasparov, the world chess champion, who went up against a chess-playing computer named "Deep Thought" and flogged the machine with relative ease.

Lewis Grizzard

It took the human 2½ hours to win the first match. It took him only two hours to win the second.

And "Deep Thought," mind you, was no ordinary computer. It was, in fact, the World Computer Chess Champion.

What if the match had come out the other way? What if a computer had taken on a human in the complicated game of chess and had beaten him?

Wouldn't this have been a horrible blow to our self-esteem? If we couldn't beat a computer at chess, at what else might this thing with wires be superior?

Look at what computers have already proved they can do better than human beings.

They must be better at flying airplanes, because computers do most of the heavy work flying most new commercial jets.

Computers add, subtract, and divide faster and more accurately than do humans. Computers do most of the production work at newspapers today. Humans used to do that.

But Gary Kasparov's victory over "Deep Thought" proves we can still dominate computers in some areas, and that should offer some peace of mind to all of us.

I don't want to awake one morning and find out I'm working for a computer, instead of the other way around.

An editorial writer for the Daily News in New York obviously has this same thought and was appreciative of the Kasparov victory. The writer listed a number of things a computer still can't do.

My favorite was "purr." Cats can purr and I've known women who could do something very similar, and who wants to pet a computer or hold one in his arms in front of a fireplace?

I was moved to make my own list of abilities computers don't have. The effort brought me much satisfaction.

A computer can't:

- Fry a chicken like my mother did, crispy brown on the outside, tender on the inside.
- Teach a small boy how to throw a curve ball.
- Make a friend.
- Fix a flat tire.
- Deliver my newspaper to my front yard at the crack of dawn, 365 days a year without a single miss.
- Pat me on the back and say, "Great putt, partner," when I make an occasional birdie to win a $2 Nassau.
- Call a square dance.
- Get up and get me a beer when Southern Cal is threatening to score late in the game against Notre Dame.
- Sing "Angels Flying Too Close to the Ground," like Willie Nelson.
- Drive a truckload of goods from Spokane, Wash., to Nashville, Tenn.
- Win a tobacco-spitting contest.
- Write a funny novel, like Dan Jenkins.
- Cry.
- Paint a masterpiece.
- Bake a cake.
- Have a baby.
- Save an earthquake victim.

Hooray for our side!

Lewis Grizzard is a columnist for Cowles Syndicate.

CHARLEY REESE

U.S. at end of era in which globalism viable

You can look at the relief for Hurricane Hugo and the California earthquake in one of two ways.

These people chose to live on barrier islands in the path of hurricanes and on top of faults in the earth, so why should you be taxed to pay for the logical consequences of their choice as to where to live?

Charley Reese

Or you can say, these people are my fellow Americans and they are hurting and as an American, I have an obligation to help them, just as they would feel an obligation to help me if I were in trouble.

The latter is my position, but what I want to point out is that this is the nationalist position. Fourty-four years of prattle about internationalism, interdependence, and globalism notwithstanding, nationalism remains a valid concept.

Nationalism was the position of our forefathers. It is the rational assumption that people occupying the same country can feel a sense of brotherhood and community. It is within our reach and our capability. We can feel a genuine sense of community with people on the West Coast and on the East Coast, for even though we may never have visited those places, they are familiar to us and in a psychological sense, belong to us. They are part of our homeland. The people there are our fellow citizens.

On the other hand, no matter how compassionate we are, it really is beyond our reach to feel the same way about a disaster in, say, Bangladesh. It's not that we have any bad feelings about those people or that place, it's just that not only do we not know them or their country, we also have virtually nothing in common. We do not share customs, language, place, government, history or culture.

We know there is such a place called Bangledesh because we have read about it or seen pictures of it on TV, but in a profound sense, it does not exist for us except as a mental concept. That is one of the fallacies of globalism. It sets a Utopian standard for selfless compassion we can't reach.

We are at the end of an era. The postwar era in which we bought the globalism baloney and supposed that we could police the world, run everyone else's country, finance their economies, defeat their enemies, and put their interest ahead of ours is finished.

We can't do those things. The last five years prove the fallacy of the previous 39. Our country is in debt. Our country has a whopping trade deficit. Our country can't balance its budget or buy the weapons it really needs for a first-class defensive force. Our country can't keep the Soviets out of its own backyard. Nor, despite hundreds of billions of dollars in foreign aid, can our country count on much solid support from other nations in a showdown crisis.

We Americans need to recapture Washington for the country. We fight that battle at the polls. We insist that Americans shall no longer be taxed to finance foreign development. We close down the large Washington industry of lobbyists working for foreign governments. We slam the cash register shut. We insist that only American pockets shall be recipients of American tax dollars. We tell the Foreign Service Officers they had better learn diplomacy because the business of checkbook diplomacy is finished. We don't pay tribute to enemies. We don't bribe allies.

It is incredibly absurd to niggle over aid to American cities while four times that amount earmarked for foreign countries sails through Congress with practically no debate. Clear evidence that people in Washington tend to forget which country they represent.

The people in Washington haven't realized it yet, but that should not surprise us. If there is one city in the United States out of touch with the United States, it is Washington.

Charley Reese is a columnist for King Features Syndicate.

MARIANNE MEANS

Nixon applauded for doing the wrong thing

WASHINGTON — If political mileage counted as frequent flyer points, former President Nixon could take several free trips around the world on the basis of his recent visit to China.

Marianne Means

He got more applause and attention for once doing the right thing for a self-serving reason than former President Carter gets for doing the right thing for selfless reasons all the time.

Carter, a man of unimpeachable personal integrity, spends his days promoting human rights abroad, pounding nails for free to build homes for poor people, nudging along diplomatic solutions to problems in Africa and South America and generally behaving like a statesman and model citizen. Hardly anybody notices.

Nixon, an unindicted Watergate conspirator, sulks in Saddle River, N.J., concentrating upon rehabilitating his tarnished image, rewriting history and filing legal challenges to protect what secrets are left. When he emerged from seclusion to try to relive his foreign policy triumph in China, he won the unofficial imprimitur of the incumbent president and plaudits all around.

Well, nobody said life was fair, even for former presidents.

Nixon's trip was originally scheduled before the Beijing massacre and military crackdown as part of his single-minded campaign to leave a legacy as a global strategist instead of merely that of a crook. The idea was to remind everyone that he is still a big deal in China, which never understood Watergate but honors him for his 1972 visit opening up that country to the western world.

Nixon went ahead, after a decent interval, with the blessings of President Bush. It was put about that because his visit was unofficial it wasn't an endorsement of the Chinese leadership, although you could have gotten that impression.

But then Nixon ran into the agenda of the aging, recalcitrant Chinese leaders, which was not compatible with his own agenda at all. Where he had meant to use them, they meant to use him.

The Chinese ancients dangled Nixon as evidence they still had a good relationship with the United States, selectively publicizing Nixon's appearances while lecturing him for an "unjust" U.S. reaction to their repression. Their troops harassed visitors to the U.S. embassy while he was there. And in private conversations, they proved to be not the friendly, pliable old buddies that Nixon had expected but tough-minded, inflexible demagogues determined to cow him.

Nixon, trapped in full view of the television cameras, did what he had to do. He stood up to them, told them off and marched home in high dudgeon.

Having made the mistake of going in the first place, Nixon did what would come naturally to any democracy-loving American. For this, he is being cheered as a great leader. Go figure that one.

ITEM: Jimmy Carter came to mind in another context this week as well.

The Justice Department's campaign to get its employees to fit President Bush's notions of ideal family behavior sets insidious new records for invasion of privacy. But it was President Carter who first trod the dangerous path of trying to impose moral purity upon his employees.

Bush Justice Department officials might have thought their jobs entailed the catching of criminals, accomplished during regular working hours. In a recent memo, however, Attorney General Dick Thornburgh added the new round-the-clock home front responsibility of providing "leadership in adoptions" by asking department employees to adopt.

This missive was justified as helping to carry out Bush's directive supporting adoption as an alternative to abortion for pregnant teen-agers. Notably, there was no mention of any pay raise to cover the added expenses of another child in the family.

President Carter similarly felt free to meddle in his employees' private lives. In his first month as president, he addressed hundreds of workers at the Department of Housing and Urban Development and told them:

"Those of you who are living in sin, I hope you'll get married. Those of you who have left your spouses, go back home. And those of you who can't remember your children's names, get re-acquainted."

This pious instruction was promptly followed by several marriages, including that of then-Federal Trade Commission Chairman Michael Pertshuck. But there were no known marital reconciliations, and Carter administration officials proceeded to have the usual number of divorces.

The Carter precedent indicates that Bush is not likely to have very much success in persuading his employees to rearrange their private lives to suit him. Some matters are deeply personal and beyond a president's ability to command. And properly so.

President praises Aquino at meeting

WASHINGTON (AP) — Philippine President Corazon Aquino is not dropping any clues about the fate of U.S. military bases in her country but President Bush says he's confident an agreement will be reached for a "long-term security partnership."

Bush was effusive in his praise for Mrs. Aquino during meetings at the White House on Thursday despite her reluctance to discuss continued U.S. access to Clark Air Base and Subic Bay Naval Base.

"From Main Street to Wall Street, America loves the Philippines. And America loves Cory Aquino," Bush said in welcoming remarks.

"You deserve our help and you will get it. I pledge our continuing assistance to your government, and that means security assistance as well as aid to economic development," Bush said. "And it means cooperating in your important debt-reduction programs."

The future of the two massive bases is the most important — and most controversial — issue on the U.S.-Philippine agenda.

Leases for the facilities expire in September 1991, and the United States regards them as a vital for projecting American military power throughout Southeast Asian sea lanes and for stability in the Pacific. They serve as a counterpoint to Soviet naval forces based in Vietnam.

House OKs defense bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lawmakers are complaining that the House-approved $305 billion defense bill is a weak response to major political changes worldwide and amounts to nothing more than a jobs program.

"The Warsaw Pact is crumbling before our eyes and we're building weapons of destruction," said Rep. Ronald Dellums, D-Calif., a member of the House Armed Services Committee and a longtime opponent of military buildup.

Although both proponents and opponents criticized the defense bill — a compromise package worked out by House and Senate conferees after nearly two months of contentious negotiations — the House on Thursday adopted the legislation, 236-172.

The bill, which goes to the Senate, slashes $1.1 billion from President Bush's request for the Strategic Defense Initiative but provides much of the money for two land-based nuclear missiles and the B-2 stealth bomber.

Son of shooting victim dies

BOSTON (AP) — A boy born two months premature after his mother was fatally shot by a robber has died at the age of 2 weeks, officials said.

"It's a tragedy for a mother and a baby and it's a tragedy for all the families of innocent victims who have suffered violence in our society," Mayor Raymond Flynn said after Christopher Stuart's death Thursday afternoon at Brigham and Women's Hospital.

Dr. Steven Ringer, head of the hospital's neonatal intensive care unit, said the infant died of respiratory failure from his premature and traumatic birth.

The baby had been in intensive care since his delivery by emergency Caesarean section shortly after his mother, Carol Stuart, was shot Oct. 23.

Gas vapors unhealthy, group says

WASHINGTON (AP) — A consumer group is calling for tighter controls on toxic gasoline vapors, saying that motorists who pump their own gas are being exposed to unhealthy levels of cancer-causing benzene and other pollutants.

Citizen Action, a Washington-based organization that focuses on consumer and environmental issues, accused the oil companies Thursday of ignoring health concerns by increasing levels of benzene and other aromatic hydrocarbons in unleaded gasoline to boost its octane rating.

The American Petroleum Institute issued a statement that disputed the claims and accused Citizen Action of raising "unwarranted fears about motorists' exposure to gasoline."

The Environmental Protection Agency acknowledged that toxic vapors from gasoline at the pump are a health concern, but an agency spokesman suggested the claims raised by Citizen Action on health impact may be exaggerated.

Nevertheless, said EPA spokesman David Ryan, the Bush administration proposal for tightening federal air quality laws calls for better vapor-capturing devices such as sleeves or hoods on gasoline pumps. It also would require oil companies to produce gasoline that releases less vapor pollutants.

Several localities already require vapor-control hoods on gasoline pumps, but the devices have been controversial because they have been found to be cumbersome and unpopular in many cases.

Benzene, which has been shown to cause leukemia, appears in petroleum products such as gasoline and its vapors. It also is generated during combustion and releases through motor vehicle tailpipes.

The report by Citizen Action claimed that motorists are exposed to benzene levels of more than 1 part per million when refueling their cars — a level expected to result, according to several studies, in at least two additional cancer cases over a lifetime per 1 million people exposed. It said a California study suggested even higher exposures.

"Despite the scientific evidence demonstrating that human exposure to benzene increases the risk of contracting cancer, oil companies have neither adequately warned consumers, nor acted to responsibly reduce benzene levels," said the citizen group.

Alzheimer's disease more widespread than thought, study says

CHICAGO (AP) — Four million Americans may have Alzheimer's disease — 1.5 million more than had been thought — according to findings that suggest the disease and its treatment will "weigh heavily on our future."

A study of 3,623 elderly people in Boston indicates one in 10 of them probably had Alzheimer's disease, which robs people of their memories and their ability to function, researchers said.

The rates of Alzheimer's grew rapidly higher with advancing age, as nearly half of those older than 85 suffer from it, said the researchers, led by Dr. Denis A. Evans of Harvard Medical School.

Based on the study's results, the National Institute on Aging revised its estimate of how many people in the United States suffer from Alzheimer's from 2.5 million to 4 million.

The institute issued a statement saying the study is unique because it involved large numbers of people, including those living in their own homes or with their families, and it included people with few or no memory problems.

"As a result, these estimates might lay the groundwork for developing the most accurate picture of Alzheimer's disease in the U.S. population to date," said Dr. Zaven Khachaturian, NIA associate director for neuroscience and neuropsychology of aging.

Results of the study, partly financed by NIA, were published in today's Journal of the American Medical Association.

"People that I see do not realize that this is an extremely prevalent condition, that it is an epidemic that is going to weigh heavily on our future," said Dr. Bruce Naughton, geriatrics chief at Northwestern University Medical School in Chicago.

The U.S. Census Bureau has estimated that from 1980 to the year 2000, the number of people 90 years old and up will increase 236 percent, to 1.9 million, Naughton said.

The Harvard study consisted of giving brief memory tests to 81 percent of the 65-and-older population of east Boston beginning in 1982, and conducting more extensive psychiatric and laboratory testing on 467 of the individuals.

Of people 65 to 74 years old, 3 percent had "probable" Alzheimer's disease, compared with 18.7 percent of those 75 to 84 years old and 47.2 percent of those over 85, said the study.

"Everyone in our study, whether they had Alzheimer's disease or not, was living in the community, not in institutions," Evans noted in a telephone interview. "They may have had impaired function, far from perfect function, but they were able to live in the community."

House member offers judicial election plan

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

The chairman of the House Judiciary Committee Thursday unveiled a plan she said would answer a federal judge's ruling against at-large elections of state judges, but Midland's county attorney disagrees.

State Rep. Pat Hill, a Dallas Republican who is running for attorney general, called for the election of district judges and county-court-at-law judges from commissioners court districts.

Ms. Hill said her proposal is intended to be an interim plan to keep U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton from blocking the 1990 judicial elections.

"A stay would be the worst of all possible solutions," she said. "It's not fair to the officeholders who may want to get out, and it's not fair to the people. It's subverting the democratic process."

Bunton Wednesday declared the at-large system in nine metropolitan counties — including Midland and Ector — unconstitutional.

In the 94-page opinion signed here in U.S. District Court, Bunton said at-large judicial elections dilute the votes of minorities, which is a violation of the Voting Rights Act of 1965.

Even though Ms. Hill disagrees with the federal court ruling, she said the Legislature would have ample time to address the issue in the special session, which begins Tuesday.

"If the Legislature fails to enact a plan ... then I'm afraid we're going to have yet another example of a federal judge making our decisions," Ms. Hill said.

Under her proposal, judicial districts would be drawn from four commissioners precincts on a non-partisan basis in each of the counties, except Midland. The other counties are Harris, Dallas, Tarrant, Bexar, Travis, Jefferson, Lubbock and Ector.

Midland County, which has three district judges including one that specializes in family law, would need a special plan. "It's awfully hard to draw single-member districts when we only have three judges to work with," she said.

Midland County Attorney Mark Dettman, whose attempt to intervene in the lawsuit this past summer was unsuccessful, criticized Ms. Hill's proposal. Dettman said he interprets the judge's opinion differently.

"I think she's jumping the gun," he said. "I don't see the urgency in making the decision today."

Dettman said he thinks the ruling should be appealed. Nevertheless, he said, the Legislature need not act quickly to work out a plan to redistrict before Bunton imposes his own.

In Wednesday's ruling, Bunton said he would consider blocking judicial elections in the nine counties involved in the lawsuit if the Legislature does not work to address the problem by Jan. 3.

Bunton also said he would consider allowing an expedited appeal to the 5th Circuit Court of Appeals if the Legislature does not devise an alternative plan by the end of a 30-day special session.

Dettman said he agreed with Bunton, who recommended that legislators "seriously consider non-partisan elections for district judges."

Pat Baskin, judge of Midland's 142nd District Court, said he had not read Bunton's ruling, and considered it inappropriate to comment.

According to court records, there are 7,119 blacks and 12,323 Hispanics residing in Midland County. Census figures from 1980 show a total population of 82,636.

Similarly, the county has a combined voting age population of 56,789, with 4,484 eligible black voters and 6,893 eligible Hispanic voters concentrated largely in the northeastern, east central and southeastern sections of the county.

During testimony this past summer, evidence was introduced showing it is possible to create one minority single-member district of greater than 50 percent of the combined voting age population in Midland County.

No minority candidate has ever run for district court judge in Midland County.

INS official urges aliens not to delay taking citizenship classes

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

Attendance at classes set up in the Permian Basin to help legalized aliens meet U.S. educational requirements has dwindled drastically in the past year, an immigration official said Thursday.

Alfred Giugni, director of the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service's office in El Paso, held a press conference at Midland College to discuss immigration programs.

Aliens who gained temporary residency through the 1986 U.S. Immigration and Reform Act have hesitated to enroll in free classes which teach English and civics, Giugni said.

Passing an English and American civics proficiency exam are part of the qualifications for applying for permanent residency and U.S. citizenship.

Immigration officials in July extended the test deadline from a year after aliens receive temporary residency to 30 months after they apply.

The extra time has caused the temporary residents to become lax in their educational pursuits, Giugni said. In addition, federal funding for the classes will not be cut off until December 1991.

But Giugni said immigration officials are urging the temporary residents to prepare themselves and take the test so they can bring their relatives to this country.

Midland and Odessa college officials said the aliens' enrollment would also keep classes in the Permian Basin open.

Giugni said that while it could take from nine to 12 years for a permanent resident to bring his family to the United States, U.S. citizens can do it in less than a year.

Temporary residents are not required to take the classes before taking the English and civics proficiency test to become a permanent resident. Permanent residents can apply for citizenship after five years.

The classes are being offered through Midland and Odessa colleges at sites around each city.

But Midland College trustee Gloria Hinojosa said that, of the 17 locations where 1,200 temporary residents took the classes last year, six were closed down when only 100 enrolled this year.

"I'm still fighting to keep the others open," Ms. Hinojosa said. "If this (low enrollment) continues, we would have to shut down. We can't pay the teachers' salaries."

She said some of the excitement of gaining amnesty has worn off for the temporary residents, who have procrastinated in going for permanent residency. About 900 of last year's 1,200 passed the permanent residency test.

John Tucker, director of adult basic education at Odessa College, said dropping enrollment has not been as big a problem for his campus.

Odessa College, which offers the classes locally and throughout the Permian Basin, has seen enrollment drop from 3,560 last year to 1,100 this semester, Tucker said. However, the decline caused the closing of 12 of 30 classroom sites, he said.

Some 1,400 out of the 3,560 have obtained permanent residency certification, Tucker said.

Giugni said temporary residents who do not pass the proficiency test by their deadline risk being deported. He said immigration officials will send out reminder notices in the next 30 days to all temporary residents.

Mexicans duped in immigration scam set up across from Presidio

By BRIAN PEARSON
Staff Writer

A scam set up across the border from Presidio has duped hundreds of Mexican nationals into paying bogus filing fees for a U.S. immigration program, U.S immigration officials said Thursday.

At least 300 people in the town of Ojinaga, Chihuaha, each paid $500 last week to register for the Replenishment Agricultural Worker (RAW) program, officials said.

The U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service charges only $10 to apply for RAW, which gives illegal aliens the chance to become legal U.S. residents. To qualify, they must have worked at least 20 days a year on U.S. farms between May 1, 1985, and Nov. 30, 1988.

The fraud was set up by a man posing as an immigration assistance official, said Alfred Giugni, director of the district immigration office in El Paso.

"He was either a legal permanent resident or a U.S. citizen," Giugni said. "He went into Mexico and ripped these people off. Then he came back over to the U.S. before we could do anything about it."

More than 200 people were waiting in line near where the man had been operating when investigators arrived last week, he said.

"We're going to investigate the matter ourselves," Giugni said. "I'll have some of my people check with the U.S. Attorney's Office to see if we can do anything about it."

The case resembles others which have occurred recently in the Mexican state of Baja California, which borders California.

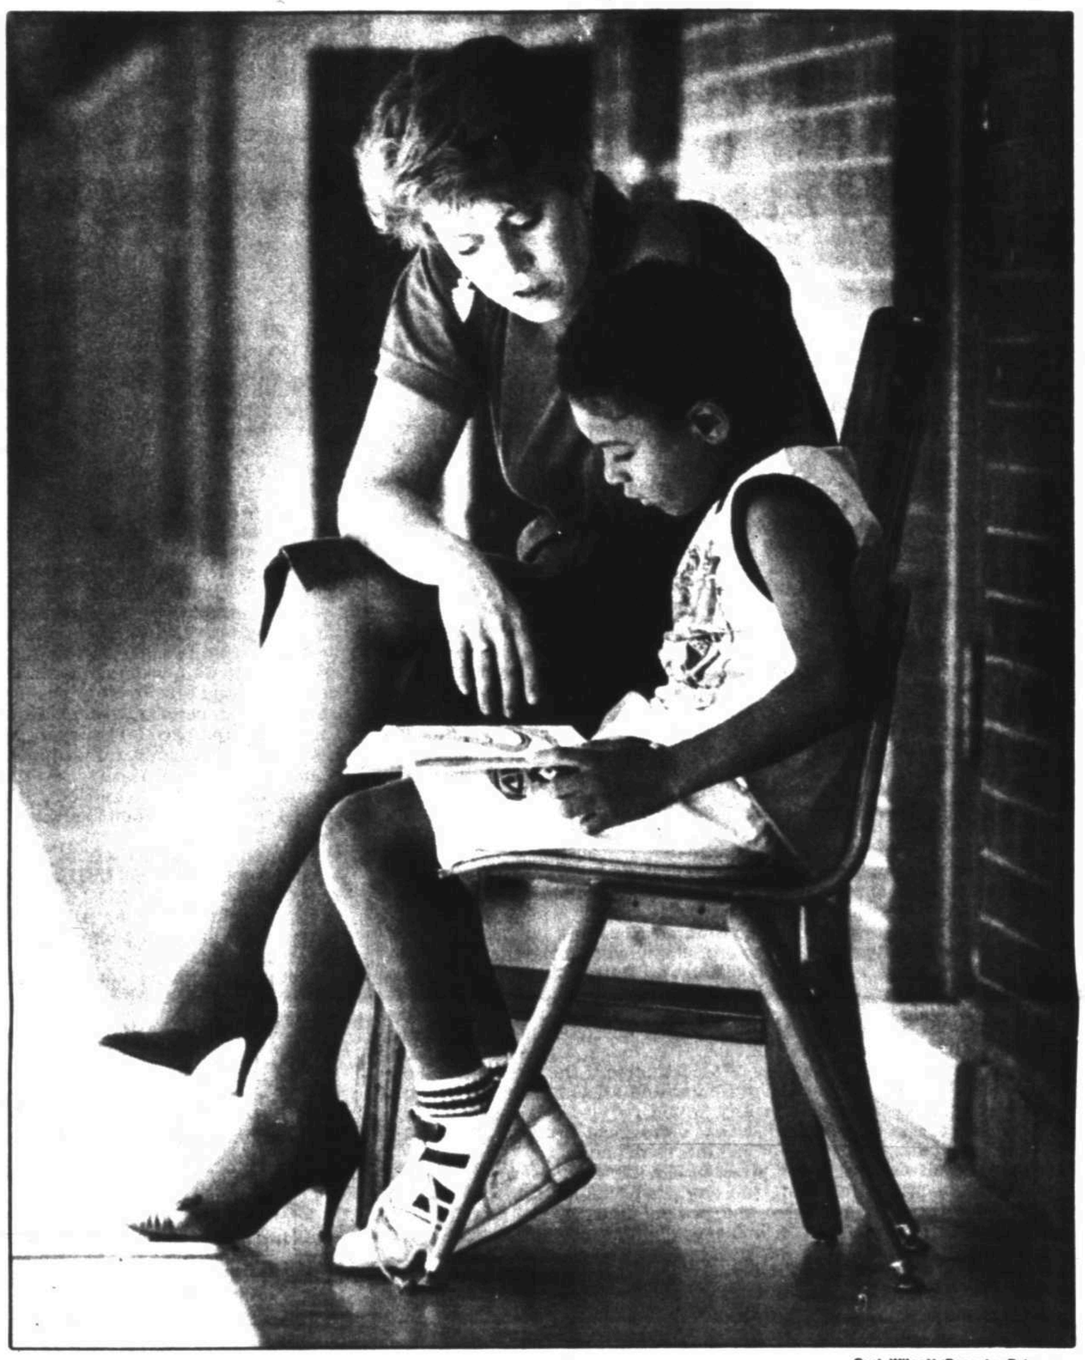

Rudy Murillo, spokesman for the immigration office in San Diego, said the culprits are difficult to track down and no arrests have been made.

"They come in one day, do their damage and then they're gone the next," Murillo said.

He said he could not estimate the number of people fooled by the swindles. One operation guaranteed U.S. citizenship for an $80 fee, he said.

However, the problem has been decreasing because radio and television stations have advertised RAW extensively on both sides of the border.

Giugni was in Midland Thursday to explain RAW and other immigration programs that allow aliens to work and live in the United States. The creation of RAW was part of the 1986 U.S. Immigration and Reform Act. The program's filing deadline is Nov. 30.

LULAC head says Justice 'uncaring' in rights probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Hispanic rights advocates say the Justice Department appears "insensitive and uncaring" in its investigation of the death of a Hispanic man who was killed during a scuffle with a West Texas police officer.

"There was a violation of the civil rights of this individual. He was allegedly executed by this policeman and the feeling is a very uncaring attitude," says Jose Garcia De Lara, national president of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

De Lara said Thursday the Justice Department is treating the May 1988 death of Sammy Gomez, a rape suspect in Colorado City, as "a little case" and seems to want to drop the investigation.

Justice Department spokeswoman Deborah Burstion-Wade said the agency's investigation is ongoing and that the agency generally does not file its own case until all local and state actions are exhausted. She would not comment on specific allegations made by LULAC officials.

Colorado City Police Chief Bobby Sparks, however, said he believes state and federal officials have conducted thorough investigations.

"I don't see any problem at all with the case. I have all the confidence in the world in the case," Sparks said.

Gomez, who had a history of arrests and of tangling with police in the community of 5,500, was shot three times by Officer Billy Ray Williamson after lunging at the officer with a knife, Sparks said.

Williamson was attempting to arrest Gomez on a warrant in the sexual assault of a woman who was taken from her apartment at knifepoint and raped repeatedly the night before, Sparks said.

The first shot grazed Gomez' chest, the second was to the left shoulder blade, and the third was to the back of the head, severing the spinal cord, said Ruben Sandoval, an attorney working for LULAC and the Gomez family.

Two autopsies conflict in their view of whether Gomez was lunging at the officer.

A grand jury convened a week after the shooting took no action in the case. Persistent urging by LULAC led to a second grand jury, which is considering the case this week.

Sparks said the first two shots knocked Gomez to the floor and the third was fired because Gomez was still trying to slash the officer with a knife.

Sparks said Gomez had "constant conflicts with law enforcement and other citizens in the community," including Williamson, who is now the city fire marshal.

LULAC officials say Williamson had a grudge against Gomez.

The LULAC officials said they believe the knife may have been planted at the scene as part of a police coverup, and that Gomez's fingerprints were not found on the weapon.

Sandoval said Justice appears unwilling to get involved.

"I am not going to lay still and just let people in Washington wash their hands of this," said Sandoval, who has met with Justice officials several times during the past few months.

Vet Centers mark 10th anniversary

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Vietnam War warriors who "have fallen in the line of duty" can best be honored not by others' dwelling on the past but by doing what those soldiers "would want us to do: look toward the future, work for the future," Midland Mayor Carroll Thomas said Thursday on the 10th anniversary of the network of Vet Centers which offer counseling to Vietnam era veterans.

Those men and women who made "the supreme sacrifice" would want others to "do your best, advance freedom, and make this country what they who have fallen would have us make it, would want us to make it," Thomas said.

"Freedom is not free," Thomas said. "Never has been. Never will be. Freedom has to be maintained, and it's not easy. And it's the men who served in our armed services who had to make the supreme sacrifices through the years on behalf of the rest of the country and those of us who all enjoy the benefits of this freedom."

The families of those who "gave their lives" in that war, Thomas said, "must realize that, as Christ said, 'There is no greater sacrifice, no greater love, than to lay down your life for another man.'"

Those warriors died "not for themselves but for their families, their fellow countrymen and their country," Thomas said. And in death, Thomas surmised, the war dead "would have us work hard to keep this country free, to keep this country the best place in the world to live, to make it a bastion against communism and other dominating governments which inhibit freedom."

Thomas was but one of several speakers, including officials of the Big Spring Veterans Administration Medical Center (BSVAMC), who spoke on the recovery of troubled veterans and the counseling and medical services offered them.

Waving in the wind in the outdoor ceremony just outside the Vet Center in Midland were an American flag and a black-and-gray POW-MIA (prisoners-of-war/missing-in-action) flags.

For U.S. Marine Corps veteran William Steven Stegall, 38, the sight and sounds of the ceremony was poignant.

"I became a man when I was still a boy," said Stegall, who was 19 when he went to Vietnam.

As the POW-MIA flag was flapping in the wind, Stegall said he often thinks about MIAs, particularly when he sees military jets and helicopters flying overhead.

"It takes me back," Stegall said.

And Stegall suggested that he still finds it disturbing to recall the Vietnam era draft dodgers who fled this country to avoid the draft, used their influence or that of others to stay in college and sidestep military service, and burned their draft cards.

"We made a vow when we were overseas not to patronize any Jane Fonda movies," he said of the American actress who demonstrated her antiwar views in the United States and in Vietnam.

"We considered her as collaborating with the enemy," Stegall said.

'Satanic' library books targeted in Odessa

By DAVID MORRIS
Staff Writer

ODESSA — Some Odessa mothers are up in arms over the presence of allegedly satanic books on Ector County school library shelves, but Midland officials said this week that Midland schools do not carry the books in question.

Two Odessa mothers promised last week to appeal their case to the Ector County school board if the superintendent does not order the offending books removed from library shelves.

Odessan Lisa Patterson, a Cavazos Elementary School parent, said she is concerned that books like "Witch's Sister" by Phyllis Reynolds Naylor may lure children like her nine-year-old son into Satanism or the occult.

"A lot of people don't believe that Satanism or the occult is real," she said. "Well it is real and it's here in Midland and Odessa."

Ms. Patterson said she requested "Witch's Sister" be removed from the Cavazos library in September.

"My son brought it home," she said. "He checked it out on library day. He doesn't read anything until he brings it home."

She said a review committee at Cavazos decided in October to keep the book in the library, and she said she will appeal her case to Superintendent Gene Buinger.

Cavazos Principal Don Norwood, who served on the review committee, said he had read the book and didn't see anything wrong with it.

"The book was basically about a child with an overactive imagination," he said. "It was about a little girl who was convinced that her sister was becoming a witch."

Vicki Peacock of Odessa, a Burnet Elementary School parent, said she requested removal of three books from that school's library: "Witch Water" and "Witch Herself," both by Phyllis Reynolds Naylor, and "Black Magic, White Magic" by Gary Jennings.

Burnet Principal Horton Kidd said committees there decided to keep the books on library shelves.

"We have determined that the books are not detrimental," he said. "We followed the procedure and it goes to the next level if she chooses."

Ms. Peacock said Wednesday she had not yet made a written appeal to the superintendent about the Burnet decision and was not sure when she would be ready to take her case to the school board.

Ector County Independent School District spokesman Chuck Hornung said neither Ms. Peacock nor Ms. Patterson are on the agenda for the Nov. 14 school board meeting.

Midland Independent School District reading coordinator Peggy Holland said Midland school libraries do not have any of the four books being protested in Odessa.

MISD spokesman Ted Miller said he was not aware of any parental protest about books in Midland school libraries.

Virginia Zondler

MESQUITE — Funeral services for Virginia "Chris" Zondler, 77, of Mesquite were to be at 3 p.m. today at Anderson-Clayton Brothers Funeral Home chapel, with Larry Napper, pastor of the Christian Science Church, officiating. Burial will be at 1 p.m. Monday in Forest Lawn Memorial Park in Los Angeles.

Ms. Zondler, formerly of Midland, died Thursday at a Dallas hospital.

She was born June 6, 1912, and was a secretary for an oil company.

Survivors include a sister, Mary Ruth Busby of Mesquite; a stepson, Robert W. Zondler of LaCanada, Calif.; a stepdaughter, Mary T. Barnes of Oxnard, Calif.; and four grandchildren.

In lieu of flowers, the family requests that memorials be directed to the Masonic Homes Endowment Fund, c/o Henry Knox Westlake Lodge No. 392, 4357 Wilshire Blvd., Los Angeles, Calif., 90010; or to a favorite charity.

Reba Louise Hughes

BONHAM — Reba Louise "Dude" Hughes, 57, of Ector and formerly of Midland, died Wednesday in a Sherman hospital following an illness.

Services were to be at 1 p.m. Friday in the Ector Baptist Church. Burial was to in the Carson Cemetery in Ector under direction of Wise Funeral Home of Bonham.

Mrs. Hughes was born in 1932 in Avery and was married to Ernest Hughes in 1948 in Ector.

Survivors includes her husband; two sons, Michael Hughes and Patrick Hughes, both of Dallas; her mother, Edith Lands of Ector; brothers and sisters, and two grandchildren.

Austin group picking up steam

AUSTIN (AP) — After 33 years of idleness, Steam Locomotive No. 786, may be getting back on the tracks if a group of Austin train lovers is successful in putting the Southern Pacific locomotive in operation again.

The Austin Steam Train Association, a non-profit corporation formed last summer, hopes to bring the romance of a steam engine excursion train back to Central Texas using the old engine.

"The steam locomotive is one of the few machines that, even though it is machinery, comes to life when it's hot," says Joe Dale Morris, originator of the project and chairman of the steam train association.

"It's a fascinating piece of Americana that kids nowadays don't have the opportunity to experience. That's one of the reasons we want to do it, so that kids can experience firsthand the machine that built this country," says Morris, chief of the defense movements branch of the Texas Army National Guard.

No. 786, built by American Locomotive Co. in 1916, was given to the city in 1956 by Southern Pacific Lines. Shortly before, Southern Pacific completely overhauled the engine, a stroke of luck for project organizers who say No. 786 is "practically a brand-new locomotive."

But even with the engine's general good health, much must be done to make the steam locomotive rail safe.

The boiler must be inspected and adjusted to meet state and federal safety standards. Missing parts, such as the whistle, a marker light, and brake shoes, must be replaced. Weather damage to the cab and boiler jacket must be tended, and project supporters say most of the engine's cab controls and instruments must be refitted.

To cover renovation costs, improvements to the right-of-way on the proposed rail line and operational costs, the Austin Steam Train Association hopes to raise about $500,000 in private donations.

"We're going to take money anywhere we can. We need a good fairy to come by and help us out," says Douglass Nichols, treasurer of the train association and vice president of NCNB Texas.

Before fund-raising efforts get underway, the train organization must first clear a path through City Hall. "We're going to the City Council ... to ask the city to grant us permission for restoration, rehabilitation and operation of the locomotive," says Morris. "We're asking to lease it for $1-a-year for 25 years."

The proposed route, which may utilize parts of a former Southern Pacific track owned by the city of Austin, would carry travelers through Burnet, Marble Falls and on to Llano through the valleys of the Colorado and Llano rivers. East of Austin, the route would travel through Manor and Elgin to Giddings.

Houston leaders pitch city as site for Democrats

WASHINGTON (AP) — Houston leaders pitching their city for the 1992 Democratic National Convention say there's no place better than George Bush's adopted hometown for launching the party's next election battle against the Republican president.

"What better place than where George Bush votes absentee to take the battle to Bush, and to convince the American people that the Bush-Quayle politics and policies are out of step with America," Jack Carter told the committee considering bids from five cities for the 1992 convention.

Carter, chairman of the Harris County Democratic Party, said the nation's fourth-largest city was disappointed when Atlanta won the convention in 1988 over Houston.

But "we don't sit and pout in Harris County, Houston, Texas" and the city started early in its bid to capture the 1992 convention, he said.

"There's a thought that coming to Houston might not make much sense. It's a big state, not a Democratic stronghold, it's George Bush's adopted home," Carter said. "Are these reasons to come to Houston? In my opinion, clearly ye ."

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, the Democrat's vice presidential nominee in 1988, led a delegation of Texans touting Houston as the next convention site before the selection committee Thursday.

"In 1992, Texas will be the same kind of key battleground that it was in 1968," said Bentsen, D-Texas, recalling a rally 20 years ago at the Astrodome for Democratic presidential nominee Hubert Humphrey. "And for that reason, I can't think of a smarter way to begin the 1992 general election than to nominate our candidates in Houston."

The site selection committee was expected to decide this afternoon which of the five cities making bids for the convention would be visited before a final decision is made in April.

New Orleans and New York, considered Houston's toughest competition by Mayor Kathy Whitmire, were scheduled to make their presentations this morning. Houston, Cleveland and Detroit made their pitches Thursday.

Party officials had decided to limit the number of site visits to five when 17 cities were in the running, and it was possible all remaining contenders could still be in the race after today, a party staffer said.

Houston is offering incentives of $15.2 million if the Democrats chose the George R. Brown Convention Center and $13.8 million if the Astrodome is used, because that facility would require less construction.

The Democrats have specified that cities must promise at least $15 million, including the value of in-kind contributions.

Ms. Whitmire said she was pleased with the response from the site selection committee following the city's one-hour presentation, which included a three-minute video and presentations by Police Chief Lee Brown, Alan Kiepper, general manager of Houston's public transit system, and state Democratic Party Chairman Bob Slagle.

"I think it was a very positive reaction. I thought the committee was very serious about bringing the convention to Houston," Ms. Whitmire said.

Houston last hosted the Democratic National Convention in 1928.

Woman triumphs over choppy seas

Rather than sinking, she swims to success

By JANE FAULKNER

FREEPORT (AP) — The cool wind whips briskly past the dock where Betty Richards Lewis moors "La Mariah," a 42-foot sailboat she and husband Lonnie call home.

The marina, with its salt air and seagulls, is a long way from the rural countryside near Fort Worth, where Betty Lewis grew up. It is also indicative of her drive and dogged determination to better herself.

Mrs. Lewis, 50, was the first woman in Texas or Louisiana to earn a license to operate a 100-ton commercial boat in Gulf waters. That was nearly 15 years ago. Today she is the only female boilermaker at Dow Chemical Company. The road to both careers was long and arduous.

Married in her teens, Mrs. Lewis is the mother of five children. She moved to this area when she was 22 years old.

"I raised kids until I was 31," she says. "I went and got my GED during that time but that's all. But I did a lot of reading and studying at the library and made up my mind that it was time to make a move.

"The only thing I could do or thought I could do was be a waitress."

She landed a waitress job at Bridge Harbor Yacht Club. It also proved to be the beginning of her love affair with boats and the Gulf. Mrs. Lewis' interest in seafaring soon came to the attention of several of her customers, captains who eventually allowed her to deck on their boats. They also taught her to fish.

Before long, decking and cleaning boats became a full-time job for Mrs. Lewis. She enrolled at Brazosport College in an effort to earn a commercial license.

"I took courses at night over a period of three years and I thought I had taken enough to pass the test," she recalls, adding, "Wrong.

> "They'd hire me as a mate," she says. "I mean the license hanging on the wall said I was a captain, but I still took orders from the captain.
>
> "So I said, 'Forget it. I don't need this.' "
>
> — Betty Richards Lewis, commercially licensed captain and boilermaker

"They warned me 75 percent of the people do not pass it the first time. So I said, 'Well Betty, you're going to have to do something else.' "

Undaunted, she headed to a school in Louisiana that offers intensive courses to those seeking licensing.

"I stayed for two weeks there," she says. "All you do is study. You wake up studying and you go to bed studying. And you don't do anything else.

"It was probably the worst thing I ever had to go through in my life."

But it worked. Mrs. Lewis earned a license which would enable her to pilot crew boats, oil boats and supply boats from Apalachicola, Fla., to Brownsville and out 300 miles in the Gulf.

What she didn't know was that was just the beginning of her struggle.

"No one would hire me because I was the first woman," she says. "If there had been about 20 before me, it would have been a lot easier."

Mrs. Lewis pounded the pavement in search of a captain's job in both Louisiana and Texas. Just getting in an office to apply for a job was difficult.

She laughs when she remembers one job application she sent through the mail. She didn't answer the question which asked if she was male or female.

"They called me and told me I had the job," she says. "But when they found out I was a female, they scratched it."

Mrs. Lewis did go to work on the boats.

After a stint piloting private yachts, she hired on as a laborer with an area contractor. Soon she became a welder's helper and returned to school at night to learn more about the trade. She began working at Dow Chemical Company 11 years ago.

Of 11 potential female boilermakers at that time, three passed the journeyman's test. Mrs. Lewis is the only one who remains in the trade.

"That was probably harder than being a boat captain," she says.

Mrs. Lewis laughs when she recalls all the teasing she endured as a female pioneer in the trade.

"I was going to do it," she says. "I was determined to stay. And I did."

When Mrs. Lewis retires, she plans to move to Florida where she will captain her own boat for pleasure trips to the islands.

For now, though, her career at Dow has sparked another interest the Excel Program. This program is aimed at students, many of them disadvantaged, who are in need of encouragement to remain in school, Mrs. Lewis says.

"It shows them they don't have to quit school," she says. "And that they shouldn't quit school just because they can't go to college.

"When the kids come to our shop, I give them a little speech and show them what we literally do and then we go back to the cafeteria and they ask questions.

"If somebody had done that for me in fifth grade, it would have been a big help."

Veterans' groups plan activities

From Staff Reports

On the 11th hour of the 11th day of the 11th month of 1918, hostilities in World War I ceased and the "war to end all wars" came to a close. More than 10 million soldiers had died in the conflict.

One year later, President Woodrow Wilson declared Nov. 11 Armistice Day in remembrance of the war and those who had fought in it. In 1938, Armistice Day was made a federal holiday.

In 1954 it was renamed Veterans Day to honor those who had served in World War II and Korea as well as World War I.

Saturday is Veterans Day, and local veterans' organizations have planned activities in observance of the holiday.

American Legion Post 19, 501 Air-Park Road, is planning a breakfast from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. to raise money for the proposed Vietnam memorial.

Service officer Tom Godfrey said the breakfast is open to the public and will cost $3.

At 11 a.m., the Legion will host a prayer service in memory of fallen U.S. soldiers.

VET

In these post-war times, Stegall said that he "most definitely" viewed the Vet Center's services as vital.

Stegall told of a veteran "who was on his way to commit suicide" when he happened to drive by the Midland Vet Center. Out of desperation and hope, he stopped at the center and sought counseling.

"It gave him one more shot" on that that journey to recovery, Stegall said.

The Vet Center program, which was established by the U.S. Congress in 1979, was conceived to aid troubled veterans in recovering from Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder (PTSD). PTSD, noted Vet Center Team Leader Dr. Fernando Garza, may be evidenced in anger, rage, hostility, denial, depression, remorse and a host of emotional problems.

And a "road to recovery" is to recognize those problems through "acceptance" and to deal with them.

"Acceptance is a hard endeavor to achieve," he said. And if those negative barriers to recovery are not overcome, Garza said, "It will take you to your deathbed," or the suffering veterans will "stagnant and be gone with the wind."

Dr. Robert Jones, the BSVAMC chief of staff, said the Vet Center has worked with thousands of veterans, many of whom are confused.

Vet Center counselors, he said, "take these people in, counsel with them, show them a way to a better life, show them a way to get off of sometimes addicting drugs or alcohol or just plain mental confusion. Some of them are sick. They have illnesses, disabilities acquired in the service."

Alexander Conrad, BSVAMC director, said the Vet Center is "probably one of the most innovative and effective outreach programs."

Vet Centers, which work in concert with Veterans Administration medical facilities, nevertheless were set up to operate "independently without having to deal with bureaucratic red tape," Conrad said.

Counseling at the Vet Center, said Midland counselor Al Cordova, has been a "work of compassion, friendship, healing and recovery."

Cordova, a chaplain in the U.S. Naval Reserves, encouraged Americans "to embrace our brothers and sisters who are survivors of war and veterans of military service."

In recalling the "troubled" 1960s and 1970s, Cordova asked if each generation must "discover anew the cost and pain of war and conflict, or can each generation teach another the lessons of life, such as compassion, friendship, love and peaceable ways?"

SMU law dean addresses alumni at Petroleum Club

From Staff Reports

C. Paul Rogers III, dean of the Southern Methodist University School of Law, addressed Midland-area alumni Thursday at the Petroleum Club on the topic of "current trends in legal education."

Rogers was named SMU law dean last May after serving as acting dean for nine months. He joined the SMU faculty in 1980 and previously was on the faculty of Loyola University in Chicago. Rogers has his B.A. and J.D. degrees from the University of Texas at Austin and his LL.M. degree from Columbia University.

Rogers' talk was sponsored by the law offices of Herbert V. Wales and by William B. Browder, Jr., of Stubbeman, McRae, Sealy, Laughlin and Browder in conjunction with the SMU School of Law.

1989 harvest near complete; Winter planting 'mostly good'

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government report says the harvest of most 1989 major field crops is completed or soon will be winding down.

In the case of winter wheat, the 1990 crop has nearly all been planted and is in "mostly good to fair" condition, although more soil moisture is needed in some areas, the Joint Agricultural Weather Facility reported Tuesday.

"Planting was 93 percent complete, four points ahead of normal" as of the Oct. 30-Nov. 5 survey week, the report said. "Planting was complete or nearly complete in 13 of the 19 major producing states."

However, winter wheat planting continued to lag behind normal in Georgia and North Carolina.

"Rain was needed in the Great Plains, where the crop was mostly good to fair," the report said. "In Texas, the crop was mostly fair. Russian wheat aphids were a continuing problem in portions of the Pacific Northwest."

The facility is operated by the department's of Agriculture and Commerce. Its reports cover weather and crop conditions only, not estimates of yields or total production.

This year's corn harvest was 88 percent completed by early November, 10 percentage points ahead of normal, the report said. Harvest was almost done in Georgia, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Minnesota, South Dakota and Texas, and advanced sharply in Colorado, Indiana and Michigan.

But the report said corn harvesting lagged behind in Ohio and Pennsylvania, while it was "near or ahead of normal" in the other major producing states.

The soybean harvest was reported 87 percent complete, 11 percentage points ahead of normal pace for this time. Farmers had completed harvesting in Minnesota and South Dakota, and were almost done in Illinois, Iowa, Michigan and Nebraska.

Soybean harvesting made rapid progress during the week in the Delta and eastern Corn Belt, with advances of 20 percentage points or more in Arkansas, Kentucky, Mississippi, Ohio and Tennessee.

The cotton harvest advanced 12 percentage points during the week of Oct. 30-Nov. 5, including major progress in Arkansas, California and Mississippi, the report said.

Other observations included:

■ Sorghum harvesting advanced 13 percentage points during the week and was 85 percent completed, about six points ahead of normal. The Texas harvest was 86 percent completed, the Kansas crop 80 percent, and Nebraska almost done.

■ Rice harvesting was nearly finished in California, and "producers were burning rice stubble as air quality regulations permitted."

■ Peanut harvesting was finished in Georgia and Virginia, and continued in the Carolinas. In Texas, rain slowed the peanut harvest in the hill country, while the Oklahoma harvest was about 20 percentage points ahead of normal.

■ Florida's harvest of fall vegetables increased seasonally. The sweet potato harvest was at "a near-normal pace" in Louisiana, Mississippi and North Carolina, and vegetable harvesting increased seasonally in Texas' Rio Grande Valley.

■ Livestock pastures were said to be in fair-to-good condition in the Delta and the East, and mostly fair-to-poor in the Great Plains and the West.

Report says more rural transportation needed

WASHINGTON (AP) — Shortline railroads, bus service, feeder airlines and maybe a ferry or two could be possible under long-range strategy mapped out in an Agriculture Department report on rural transportation.

But massive new federal aid to help finance such ventures? None was mentioned in the report. Cooperation at all public and private levels was urged as the key to transportation development.

Martin F. "Buzz" Fitzpatrick Jr., head of the department's Office of Transportation, which issued the report Wednesday, said the findings and recommendations were based on regional meetings going back two years and a national conference in Omaha, Neb., in Aug. 1988.

"From the very beginning, this initiative has been a cooperative activity involving a wide range of public and private agencies seeking solutions to the transportation problems of rural residents," he said.

Fitzpatrick added the report will give rural transportation organizations a practical guide to help in planning and policy development at national, state and local levels.

Although no specific mode was recommended over another, the report referred to "passenger transportation" generically, meaning it could include rail, bus or air travel, depending on the circumstances.

The report said cooperation between public and private sectors "is essential if rural passenger transportation is to meet the mobility needs of rural residents" and that new approaches must be found.

In mobilizing support for rural passenger transportation, the report said a national plan for rural communities to maintain and expand passenger transportation should be a top priority for action.

Court tears down old ruling that good fences make good neighbors

MONTPELIER, Vt. (AP) — The Vermont Supreme Court, following a poetic premise by Robert Frost, says good neighbors needn't help keep up good fences.

The five justices on Tuesday found unconstitutional a 1790 law making a livestock owner and neighbor equally responsible for maintaining the fence between their properties.

The ruling came 75 years after Frost, Vermont's and the nation's late poet laureate, published "Mending Wall."

In the poem, Frost questions the springtime ritual of helping his neighbor fix the stone wall between their properties, only to have the old farmer respond, "Good fences make good neighbors."

Frost wrote in part:

" ... Before I built a wall I'd ask to know

"What I was walling in or walling out

"And to whom I was like to give offense ... "

In Tuesday's case, offense was taken by Ernest and Louise Choquette of Newport when adjoining landowners, Robert and Rose Perrault, refused to help pay for a fence built to keep the Choquettes' cows off the Perraults' land.

The Choquettes sued the Perraults for the amount the town fence viewer ruled the Perraults owed under state law: $316.

Two lower courts ruled in the Choquettes' favor, but the Supreme Court said the Perraults don't have to pay.

The high court's ruling turned on the question of whether the public good outweighed the state Constitution's ban on giving special breaks to special groups — in this case, landowners with livestock.

The court found it made sense in the 18th, 19th and early 20th centuries to say the public good outweighed the no-special-interests clause.

"The land was predominantly open and farmed, and rural landowners were also livestock owners," Justice Ernest Gibson III wrote.

Without the fence law, livestock owners would be solely responsible for keeping their animals from damaging their neighbors' property, and solely responsible for the fence, the court said.

But, Gibson wrote, "As a result of changing land-use patterns, the law more and more often applies to landowners without livestock. In such situations, the fence law is burdensome, arbitrary and confiscatory, and therefore cannot pass constitutional muster."

Many have misread Frost's view of shared fence-mending responsibility as being positive, said Margaret Edwards, an English professor at the University of Vermont.

She pointed to a line in which Frost says,

"In each hand, like an old-stone savage armed

"He moves in darkness it seems to me ... "

"The old farmer is really being put down," Edwards said, "though it's done so gracefully it almost doesn't seem that way at first glance."

She added, "Robert Frost in my opinion would be very pleased to see the court's decision to strike down the fence law."

Lawyer Robert Bent, whose argument prevailed at the high court, said a lower court judge had cited the "Good fences make good neighbors" line in his decision that the high court overturned.

The Superior Court judge, Alden Bryan, "sort of missed the point that Frost was making, that his neighbor was holding onto hidebound tradition," Bent said. He added that the legal argument paralleled the poetic: that the Vermont fence law was a narrow-minded tradition best discarded.

Insects looking for winter home

Insects are beginning to look for a place to spend the winter.

Kiker

Most of the insects are just looking for a place to overwinter and are not establishing permanent residences.

These insects will be a nuisance and most of them do not present a great danger to the homeowner. If it not uncommon for insects to enter attics or garages through cracks in the foundation, open windows or spaces around doors.

Mechanical control is possible by caulking all cracks to prevent insect entry. Caulking also makes the structure more air-tight and should help lower heating costs.

Store firewood away from the house to help eliminate hiding places for the pests.

Homeowners should store firewood as far from the house as possible and take only the amount needed for immediate use into the house.

Firewood stacked beside the house may be handy but as the wood worms, spiders, scorpions and other pests may leave the wood and escape to other areas of the house.

Cooler fall temperatures mark the season to begin stocking catfish fingerlings in farm ponds.

The fingerlings are in good supply this year. The early cool weather is ideal for stocking catfish fingerlings. Catfish do well in small stock watering tanks.

They may be stocked at the rate of 100 to 1,000 per acre, depending on the management level planned.

The pH of pond water should be checked, and if necessary corrected, with lime to give a pH above 6.

If possible, have the fingerlings delivered by the dealer. Small quantities may be transported in plastic bags filled with water and oxygen. Avoid rapid changes in water temperature to prevent temperature shock to the fish.

Four-to-six-inch long fingerlings are the most economical to stock. However, eight-to-10-inch fingerlings reach eating size quickly and are a must if bass are present in the pond.

FAMILY MATTERS

Parents concerned about child's 'stressed out' feelings

By JIM MAY, Ph.D.

May

DEAR FAMILY: My 15-year-old daughter has always been a good student with lots of activities and lots of friends. We have always thought that we were good parents and gave her the love and guidance that she needed to be happy. Recently she has begun to cry at the drop of a hat. I know some of that is normal, but her father and I have become concerned that there might be something else wrong.

I have tried to have mother-daughter talks with her but she will only say that she is "stressed out." I don't know what that means. I try to explain to her that everyone is under lots of stress these days and that she should just relax and have fun. She just says that I don't understand. Do you have some ideas that I might try to get her to talk? WORRIED

DEAR WORRIED: With such anxiety-producers as grades, peers, sex, drugs and alcohol in their lives, teenagers are often under more stress than adults are. Teenagers must be taught how to identify and manage their stress.

You may want to arrange another mother-daughter talk to share with your daughter your concerns over her stress. Discuss the possible sources of stress. Listen to her. Be sympathetic. Nothing stops a sharing of problems faster than a "fast" solution that minimizes the problem.

After you both have identified at least one source of stress, help her develop ways to manage the stress. For example, perhaps she is helping everyone else and no one is available to listen to her problems. A possible way to manage that situation is for her to become "less available" to listen to everyone else's problems. She may consider finding just one friend who she thinks might listen to her.

Help her develop the life-long skills that she will need to deal with stress. How we do it is much more important than the details of what we do.

DEAR FAMILY: I am in my first relationship after my divorce. It has been fun except that my boyfriend acts very hurt if I don't seem to want to have sex as much as he does. I like sex with him, but I also have two small children to raise and hold down a full-time job. I try to tell him that just because I don't feel like having sex with him every night doesn't mean that I don't love him.

Sometimes I give in just so he won't be so unhappy. Sometimes that works and sometimes it doesn't. He says he knows when I really want to make love to him and when I don't. This is all new to me, what do I do? CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: First, you owe it to yourself to stop having sex when you don't want to. Then, discuss the situation directly with your boyfriend. The discussion should occur at a pre-arranged time, not just before or after sex.

Explain how you feel about sex as you have done in your letter. Encourage him to reflect upon why he is equating sex and love. They are different. He may have the mistaken idea that his body is all he has to offer. Try to address his feelings associated with what is happening.

After identifying his feelings, try to agree upon some actions that will address both of your feelings. For example, agree that on the times that you don't feel like having sex, you will sit and talk together. Identify some positive actions that can be taken and take them.

DEAR READERS: Divorce touches many lives. The divorce recovery process is often long and difficult. A divorce adjustment seminar will be presented 9 a.m.-3 p.m. Nov. 18 at Golf Course Church of Christ. The seminar may help those touched by divorce to develop the necessary recovery tools.

Train buffs seek $500,000 to get steam locomotive back on track

N.Y. Times News Service

AUSTIN, Texas — For 33 years it's been out there, waiting patiently, even majestically, for the people to come and set it free.

Big and black and grand, it has rested quietly just south of the downtown fire station, an item of dazzling curiosity for the school children who come to climb its stairs and hang out the windows and sometimes scrawl their names on its side.

But those days of idleness, those hours of endless stillness for Steam Locomotive No. 786, may be coming to an end if a group of Austin train lovers is successful in putting the darling of the Southern Pacific back on the train track.

The Austin Steam Train Association, a non-profit corporation formed last summer, hopes to bring the romance of a steam engine excursion train back to Central Texas using the old engine that now rests in the 400 block of Trinity Street.

"The steam locomotive is one of the few machines that, even though it is machinery, comes to life when it's hot," says Joe Dale Morris, originator of the project and chairman of the steam train association.

"It's a fascinating piece of Americana that kids nowadays don't have the opportunity to experience. That's one of the reasons we want to do it, so that kids can experience firsthand the machine that built this country," says Morris, chief of the defense movements branch of the Texas Army National Guard.

Number 786, built by American Locomotive Co. in 1916, was given to the city in 1956 by Southern Pacific Lines. Shortly before the gift was made, Southern Pacific completely overhauled the engine, a stroke of luck for project organizers who say the 786 is "practically a brand-new locomotive."

But even with the engine's general good health, much must be done to make the steam locomotive rail safe. The boiler must be inspected and adjusted to meet state and federal safety standards. Missing parts, such as the whistle, a marker light, and brake shoes, must be replaced. Weather damage to the cab and boiler jacket must be tended, and project supporters say most of the engine's cab controls and instruments must be refitted.

To cover renovation costs, improvements to the right-of-way on the proposed rail line and operational costs, the Austin Steam Train Association hopes to raise about $500,000 in private donations. "We're going to take money anywhere we can. We need a good fairy to come by and help us out," said Douglass Nichols, treasurer of the train association and vice president of NCNB Texas.

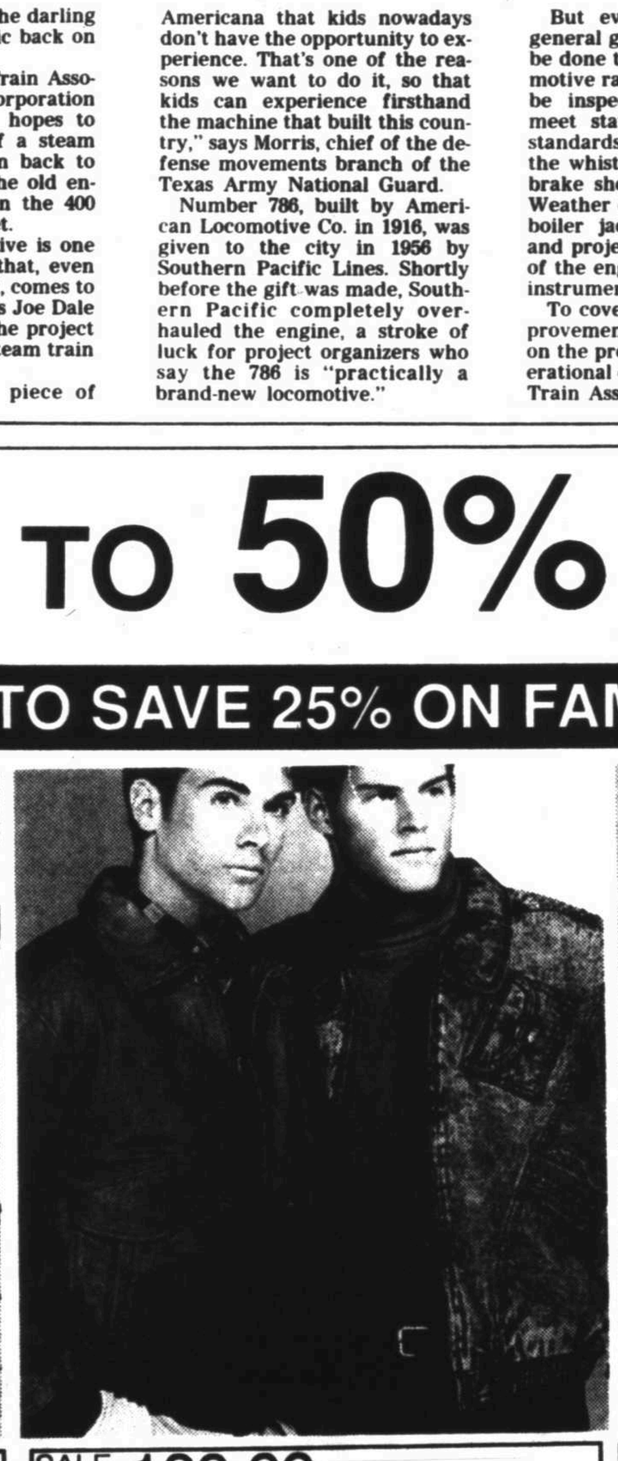

"The carriage on the typewriter doesn't go back and forth any more. Airplanes don't have propellers any more. There's no romance at all any more," Nichols said. "But that steam engine with its moving drivers and connecting rods, with the steam and the whistle — you can even feel it in your feet — is just a great thrill."

DEAR ABBY

Grandma aghast at student's life

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am a female graduate student at a large university. I share an apartment with a male law student. We are not sexually involved with each other; he has a girlfriend and I date a special fellow. Our apartment has two bedrooms, two baths and a spacious living room, dining room and kitchen. It's ideally located, and neither one of us could afford to pay the rent alone.

The problem is my grandmother. She thinks it's terrible that I am "living with" a man and she refuses to believe that we aren't sleeping together. I have told her there is nothing romantic going on between us, but she doesn't believe me. She's from the old country, and there's no changing her mind. Fortunately, my parents do not share her point of view.

Now, here's where you come in. "Granny" reads your column every day and thinks you have the wisdom of Solomon. She also credits you with helping her to read English. She says when she came to this country from Finland 21 years ago, she went to night school to learn English, and her teacher used your column as a teaching tool because it was easy to read and it also reflected the behavior of the American people.

So, Abby, maybe if Granny sees this letter in your column, she'll be more accepting of my lifestyle. Thank you. — ANONYMOUS

DEAR ANONYMOUS: Here's your letter. I hope it helps.

DEAR ABBY: Last Friday night, my ex-wife informed our two daughters — ages 16 and 18 — that she needed to have her house to herself to do some entertaining, so they had to be out by 7:30 p.m.

The 18-year-old had to wait in a Burger King for an hour and a half before she could join a friend still at work to go on to a party.

The 16-year-old had two engagements that called for different types of clothing; finding the door locked at 9:30 p.m., she had to attend the second engagement inappropriately dressed and feeling very out of place. When she arrived home at midnight, she found doors still locked and had to climb in through a window!

I live 1,500 miles away, so I wasn't able to come to the rescue. I am hoping your comments on my ex-wife's behavior might persuade her to think twice before she pulls such a stunt again. — FRANK(LY) TICKED OFF IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR FRANK(LY): Don't depend on a few lines in my column to change your ex-wife's behavior. A mother who would lock her children out of the house because she wanted to do some "entertaining" may not be an unfit mother, but she certainly behaved like one in this instance.

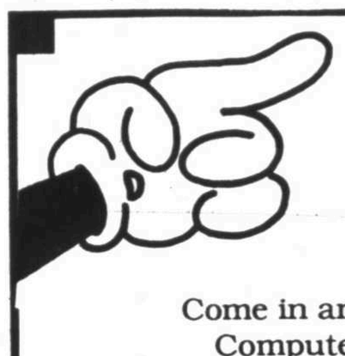

Perhaps a few words from your attorney reminding your "ex" of her custodial responsibilities might be more effective than anything I could say. It's worth a try.

(Problems? Write to Abby. For a personal, unpublished reply, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to Abby, P.O. Box 69440, Los Angeles, Calif. 90069.)

Susanne Barstad, left, displays a letter she wrote on a computer with the help of Barb Svenningsen, a volunteer at the Sheyenne Care Center in Valley City, N.D. Barstad is one of 19 nursing home residents who use a computer to make connections around the country with SeniorNet.

Computers help seniors correspond with pen pals

VALLEY CITY, N.D. (AP) — Susanne Barstad didn't know a modem from a disk drive, but she and other residents of Sheyenne Care Center have learned that computers can be as easy to use as a horse and buggy.

"I figured you're never too old to learn if you want to try," the cheery 90-year-old said. "I've always had a curiosity about trying new things."

Barstad is among 19 residents of the nursing home who use a computer to write to pen pals around the country through a network called SeniorNet.

The nonprofit organization has trained more than 3,500 people on personal computers at 30 sites in 13 states and Canada since 1986. Sites include doctors offices, senior centers and colleges, but Sheyenne Care Center is the only nursing home, said Cindy Schwehr, the center's SeniorNet coordinator.

Schwehr believes the program keeps the residents' minds alert and helps ward off institutional depression. "I think it boosts their self-esteem, their confidence. And it's an easy way for them to establish friendships with people in other parts of the country."

While some of the residents balked at using the computer, Barstad jumped at the chance. "I knew computers are going to be the wave of the future. ... I was happy when they asked me to come down and try it."

Barstad, a retired nurse, corresponds with three other seniors, including an author in Florida and a former journalist in Virginia.

Barb Svenningsen, a volunteer who helps the residents operate the computer, said some still hesitate to use it. "Their first question is, 'How much is it going to cost?' But those that get on it and realize they can do it — they really seem to like it."

SeniorNet evolved from a computer class and user manual, "Computers for Kids over 60," by Mary Furlong, an associate professor of education at the University of San Francisco and now executive director of SeniorNet.

Furlong started it because she felt senior citizens had been left out of the computer revolution of the '80s.

Apple Computer Corp. donated $200,000 worth of computers to equip 11 training sites including Sheyenne Care Center, which received a keyboard, disk drive, monitor and printer.

Users are billed only for the time something is sent over transmission lines, Furlong said. That averages about three or four hours a month at $12.60 an hour for most users.

Sheyenne Care Center's bills are paid for by the Markle Foundation of New York, which has donated $700,000 to SeniorNet. The center joined after former administrator Jim Tourville heard about it at a national conference.

"We had absolutely nothing to lose by doing this — because everything was donated — and hundreds of things to gain," Schwehr said.

"This has given them a link with some of their younger family members because the children are learning about computers in school," she said. "It gives them something to talk about, and that can mean so much to an elderly person."

IT'S YOUR LIFE

Desired retirement lifestyles differ

By STEVE EDWARDS

Edwards

After retirement, creative people will find creative ways to fill their time. Adult children should support their parents in these plans and respect their decisions.

Millions of over 65-aged people continue working, either full- or part-time. Others do volunteer work or delve into hobbies. Some retirees want structured schedules; others like to keep their days unplanned.

Adult children's greatest contribution could be in helping their parents plan how they wish to use their retirement years. When making retirement plans, take into consideration the older parent's pre-retirement lifestyle, personality and expectations.

Retirement lifestyles differ: some people chose to remain active, others to be inactive. Happiness in retirement is not based on level of activity, but on the person's preference. Decisions about occupation and recreation after retirement are changeable.

Parents, not their adult children, should make their own decisions about their own retirement.

A distinguished filmmaker planned to deliver newspapers door-to-door after retirement, the way he did as a boy. "It will be so great watching the sun come up from my bicycle. There won't be much traffic, I don't sleep late anymore, anyway. I'll toss the papers at the doorway and see how good my aim is.

"If I miss, I'll be sure to walk the paper to the door. By the time I get back for breakfast, I'll be all set to sit down, read my own paper and get ready for the next part of my day. I'll prepare my materials to help the kids in the high school who are making a movie. I'm not sure about the afternoon route, because I won't want to tie myself down for both ends of the day, but I will absolutely do the mornings. I can't wait."

This man has made his own decision — but many adult children would not want to accept a similar decision made by their own parents.

Older parents and their adult children can discuss general knowledge about retirement. People adjust better to retirement if:

■ They have been skillful in handling major problems.

■ They have looked forward to retirement as a time when they will be able to follow their own interests.

■ They have made plans for retirement.

■ They are involved in many regular activities, including some which emphasize helping others.

Center needs helpful volunteers

From Staff Reports

The Volunteer Center of Midland is looking for volunteers who can help with any of their current projects.

For those who can spare only a small amount of time volunteering, several local non-profit organizations need help in publishing their monthly newsletters. Duties will include operating a copy machine, maintaining mailing lists and preparing material for mailing. Several agencies are in need of this one day service, therefore volunteers should be able to pick an angency that will fit their schedule.

Also, volunteer drivers for hot-meal deliveries are needed. Forty new clients have been added to the delivery route, which is made between 10:30 a.m.-11:30 a.m. Volunteers can commit to one of four times a month. Team volunteering is welcome.

For those who prefer to work at home, the Volunteer Center is in need of helpers in the national campaign against drinking while driving. Duties will include cutting red ribbons to use as reminders on car antennas during the campaign. For those who cannot travel, the agency will deliver and pick up ribbons.

For more information about these projects or other opportunities for volunteering, call the Volunteer Center at 697-8781.

'Diet' foods' claims are deceptive

Copley News Service

Despite their reputation as "diet" food, 1 ounce of sunflower seeds contains a hefty 160 calories — more than the same amount of potato chips — while 1 ounce of hulled pumpkin seeds weighs in at 155 calories.

Registered dietitian Karen Owens says three-quarters of those calories come from fat, most of it polyunsaturated.

Dried fruit is another double-edged sword for dieters. While healthy and delicious, dried fruit contains as much as 70 percent sugar by weight — more than you will find in cookies and some candies.

A mere one-third cup of raisins, for instance, contains 160 calories; three small figs have 145 calories.

Audiocassettes for visually impaired available

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than two dozen publications on consumer issues are available on audiocassette from regional libraries for the blind.

The cassettes are being made available without charge by the American Association for Retired Persons and American Foundation for the Blind.

More than half the foundation's 170 regional and sub-regional libraries are circulating tapes of AARP's most requested publications, covering subjects such as medical care, consumer issues, financial matters, health and long-term care.

Prevention of flu important for elderly

EDITOR'S NOTE: T. Franklin Williams, a geriatrics physician, is director of the National Institute on Aging, one of the 13 institutes that comprise the National Institutes of Health of the Department of Health and Human Services.

By DR. T. FRANKLIN WILLIAMS
Associated Press

BETHESDA, Md. — The old adage, "an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure," holds true for the flu.

Each winter millions of Americans suffer the fever, aches and pains of influenza. Most recover from the effects in a week or so, but for many older people the flu and its complications are extremely serious.

While the body's immune system is busy fighting the flu, a person is less capable of resisting another life-threatening infection like pneumonia. Older people and those with chronic diseases such as heart disese, emphysema, asthma and diabetes have the greatest risk of developing pneumonia along with the flu.

And older people are more likely to require hospitalization. Flu and pneumonia combined are the sixth leading cause of death in the United States, and 80 to 90 percent of the deaths are in people 65 and older.

But flu and its complications need not be deadly, and can be prevented by vaccinating high-risk individuals six to eight weeks before the season begins.

Influenza is caused by a virus that infects the nose, throat and lungs. Flu travels quickly, especially during winter in crowded indoor places like malls, grocery stores, theaters and hospitals.

When someone with the flu coughs or sneezes, droplets containing particles of the virus spread to other people.

AFTER INFECTION, symptoms usually appear in two to four days; the disease continues to be contagious for another three to four days.

Once the virus enters the body, it multiplies and causes a variety of well-known complaints, including chills and fever, headache, runny nose, sore throat and a dry cough.

Extreme weakness and muscle aches and pains often last for several days. If the virus invades the lungs, viral pneumonia can develop.

To prevent the flu, people 65 and older and residents of nursing homes and other chronic-care facilities should be vaccinated. Also, health professionals, nursing home workers and family members who live with someone over 65 should get a flu shot to avoid spreading the disease to those at risk.

Unlike other viruses, the flu virus changes from time to time. Because different strains of the virus tend to spread flu each season, a new vaccine is prepared every year. It contains strains of the flu virus recently circulating worldwide and believed likely to hit during the coming winter. Nicknames such as the "Spanish flu" and "Hong Kong flu" refer to places where large outbreaks of new flu strains have first appeared.

The vaccine is made from highly purified, killed viruses. Because the flu shot does not contain infectious viruses, it does not cause the flu.

THE MOST common side effect is a sore arm, which occurs in less than one-third of those vaccinated and usually lasts only a day or so. A few people also may develop a brief, low-grade fever and some minor aches and pains, which begin six to 12 hours after vaccination and can persist for one or two days.

If a person has no special reason not to take aspirin, low doses (such as one tablet every three to four hours) usually will relieve these symptoms.

Immediate allergic reactions, such as hives, rarely occur after influenza vaccination. Anyone allergic to eggs, which are used to grow the virus for the vaccine, should NOT receive the vaccine since some egg protein may be present.

Since the flu vaccine takes several weeks to work, the best time to be vaccinated is in November. A vaccine also is available against the most common types of bacteria which cause pneumonia. The flu shot can be given at the same time as the pneumonia vaccine without increasing the side effects. The flu shot must be given every year, but the pneumonia vaccine should be given only once.

In addition to the flu shot, an antiviral drug — amantadine — can prevent infection by certain strains.

When taken soon after the early signs are felt, amantadine reduces the duration of fever and other symptoms. It also can prevent infection if taken during the entire four- to six-week course of a flu epidemic.

After people stop taking the drug, they become susceptible to the virus again. It occasionally causes difficulty sleeping, impaired concentration and dizziness, and has been associated with falls in older people. As with all medication, patients should take it only with a doctor's recommendation.

Teacher believes it's better for elderly to make noise than live in silence

By NOAM COHEN
N.Y. Times News Service

Near 91st Street and Lexington Avenue in Manhattan, a motorist really needed to get someone's attention. The driver honked the horn — first a steady blare, then staccato beeping, then a fretful combination of the two.

Nearby, inside the 92d Street YMHA, Lucille Schein was also making sounds — playing a spontaneous piano duet with her teacher, John Balamos, in front of a sizable audience of elderly listeners.

When the sound of the horn outside became too intrusive the music stopped, and someone in the audience rolled her eyes and smiled, saying "another improviser."

This afternoon recital was very much on the casual side: no sheet music, no metronome, pianists out of rhythm, a violin out of tune. But Balamos and his students don't mind. Better to make noise, he believes, than to suffer in silence.

For the last three years Balamos has been teaching that lesson to a group of about 10 retired men and women, most of them in their 70s, in a weekly class titled "Creative Music." Most have had music training, but the class doesn't presume to improve upon their skills.

Instead, Balamos, who also teaches music to victims of Alzheimer's disease and has taught young musicians at the Manhattan School of Music, aspires to impart creativity and help overcome the fear of public performance.

Mrs. Schein, who is 76 and lives in Manhattan, explained: "You're learning to create, learning to improvise, learning to listen and overcome fear."

In a typical exercise, teacher and student agree on a musical key and dive in. The next few seconds are an anxious process of the two trying to play in rhythm and at the same volume. It is hoped that during the three or four minutes of music-making they will approximate a similar musical style.

Balamos calls these "classical jam sessions." The class even has a classical scat singer, 74-year-old Sydell S. Gorelick, whose music is a succession of trills.

Balamos's guiding philosophy is simple: Society, he says, reins in creativity by making people embarrassed about public performance and personal style.

Mrs. Schein said that she quit the class two years ago, soon after she started, because she found improvising so uncomfortable. Now she is an admitted "ham," saying that if she isn't called up to perform more than once, she tells a friend "to ask for an encore."

Bulldogs close it out against AHS

By BILL PRICE
Sports Writer

Tonight's high school football matchup at Memorial Stadium features a pair of teams trying to save a little face.

Midland High and Abilene High both own losing records and are hoping to close the season on a winning note when the ball is kicked off at 8 p.m. But that is not all these teams have in common.

The Bulldogs, 2-7 overall and 1-4 in District 4-5A, and AHS (1-8 and 0-5) have suffered a plethora of injuries over the course of the season and will both field vastly different starting lineups from the ones that began the year in September. And turnovers have played instrumental roles in nearly all of these two teams' losses.

"In games like this, in a situation where the two teams are very similar as far as ability and the type of season they've had, turnovers are the kind of thing that can make a difference in who wins and loses," said Larry Pullin, Eagle head coach.

"That's what happened to us last week against San Angelo. We played a very close ball game in the first half but came out and committed two critical turnovers that cost us the game in the second half."

"Turnovers are definitely a key," said Davis Corley, MHS coach. "I'm sure he's telling his kids the same thing, but it's on of those thing you don't want to harp on because it takes away from the effort. If a kid is worrying about turning the ball over his more than likely isn't going to execute well.

"But another thing with both teams is that a lot of those interceptions came when we were behind. When you're behind in so many games you throw the ball a lot," Corley said.

Freeman named MVP

From Staff Reports

Midland High's Effie Freeman, a senior setter, was named the District 4-5A Most Valuable Player as the district volleyball coaches announced their all-district teams Thursday.

Other 4-5A spikers to nab individual honors were Odessa High's Amy Moore as outstanding hitter, Abilene Cooper's Holly McMillon as outstanding setter, and Cissy Rodriguez of Abilene High as outstanding defensive player. AHS coach Fran Green, who tutored her squad to a second-place tie in the district with MHS, was named coach of the year.

District champion Odessa Permian was represented by one player on the first team, Stephanie James.

Other local players receiving all-district recognition were MHS' Sally Gibson, first team; Marcia del Llano of Midland Lee, first team; Lady Bulldog Anita Montez, second team; MHS' Meredith Harris and Cindy Robertson, honorable mention; and Gina Natividad and Julie Bryan of Lee, honorable mention.

Nearby teams still have playoff shot

Area Football

Almost all of the high school football teams in the Midland Reporter-Telegram coverage area have a chance to make the playoffs going into the last week of the season for most area schools.

Perhaps the key matchup tonight will be when Iraan hosts McCamey in a repeat of last season's grudge match. This time, Iraan coach Mickey Finley hopes for a different result — for obvious reasons.

McCamey scalped the Braves 49-2 to make the playoffs, but Finley said his Iraan team is vastly improved.

"Our kids have matured a lot," Finley said. "They're bigger, stronger and faster."

In other area games tonight, Big Spring has a chance to clinch a tie for the District 4-4A championship with a win at Snyder; Andrews hosts Fort Stockton; Greenwood travels to Clint; Lamesa visits Seminole; Stanton treks to Marfa; Rankin visits Robert Lee and Garden City is entertained by Sterling City.

Iraan almost dethroned Stanton as District 5-2A champions in a 16-10 loss last week. The Braves took an intentional safety in an attempt to get the ball back late, and the strategy seemed to work when an Iraan receiver broke loose from his coverage on the last play of the game, only to stand waiting when his quarterback was sacked.

"We were very disappointed," Finley said. "But we realized that we could play them again (in the state quarterfinals)."

Beating McCamey would be the first step toward that goal.

An Iraan win would solve a lot of problems in determining the playoff representative. A McCamey win would more than likely create a three-way tie between Iraan, McCamey and Van Horn and a coin flip would ensue.

Here is a look at other playoff possibilities in the Reporter-Telegram circulation area:

DISTRICT 4-4A: Big Spring, as previously mentioned, can clinch a tie for the district title tonight. Providing that the Steers don't slip up in the next two weeks, they will play either Hereford or Borger in bi-district play.

DISTRICT 4-3A: Greenwood's task is simple: Beat Clint, hope that Kermit loses to Crane, and the Rangers make the playoffs. Unfortunately, the Rangers would probably meet Denver City in the bi-district round. Denver City has clipped the Rangers three times in the last two seasons.

DISTRICT 3-3A: The Tors are all alone in third place, but a combination of a Lamesa win over Seminole and a loss by either Denver City or Post would whirl the Golden Tornado into post-season action for the first time in eons.

DISTRICT 8-A: Rankin should skate past each of its past two opponents, while Garden City faces Sterling City tonight in the battle for second place. The Bearkats should win tonight and the next week. Both 8-A playoff representatives should run wild in bi-district action against a notoriously weak District 5-A group, before meeting significantly tougher competition from the north.

Anthony leads 5-A with a 3-0 mark going into tonight's action, while Grandfalls-Royalty and Wink are tied at 2-1.

Times are a'changing as pros sign NBC pact

NEW YORK (AP) — Baseball will be on CBS. The NBA will be on NBC. The networks will split the Olympics. Things sure are changing in sports television.

NBC took the NBA away from CBS Thursday with a $600 million, four-year contract that continued the escalation of rights fees. The deal could push average pro basketball salaries into the $1 million range next season.

NBC has been the harshest critic of the increase in prices, accusing CBS of overbidding for the $1.06 billion four-year baseball deal and the $243 million 1992 Winter Olympics contract. Is NBC the guilty party this time?

"Perhaps," NBC president Robert C. Wright said. "It's hard to draw the same explanation for every company at every time." He continued to criticize the CBS baseball deal, saying, "I would not be standing here today if we had that baseball contract hanging over our heads."

CBS, in the final season of a four-year, $176 million deal with the NBA, turned down the $600 million deal.

"The increase in the total cost of the package sought by the league ... was substantially more than we were prepared to pay," Neal H. Pilson, the president of CBS Sports, said in a statement.

"It's a big increase, but one I think is justified," NBA commissioner David Stern said.

The next contract up is the NCAA basketball tournament, which concludes a three-year, $166.2 million arrangement with CBS this season. NBC officials said the network is interested in reacquiring the NCAA, but wouldn't go beyond that. Bidding on a new contract is scheduled for later this month.

SuperSonics, Bucks need five overtimes

NBA

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Given the peculiar circumstances, Ben Coleman can be forgiven for stretching the bounds of mathematics to describe the latest Milwaukee Bucks victory.

"There is not one star on this team tonight. Everybody contributed 140 percent," Coleman said in trying to explain why, after five overtimes, the Bucks managed to beat the Seattle SuperSonics 155-154 Thursday night.

After ties of 103-103 at the end of regulation and 110-110, 120-120, 127-127 and 138-138 in the overtimes, Milwaukee built a safe lead at 155-146 with 34 seconds left in OT No. 5.

Safe? Not on this night.

Dana Barros hit a 3-pointer, Nate McMillan added a free throw and Sedale Threatt scored on a rebound, and Seattle trailed only 155-152.

When the Sonics got the ball one last time, everybody in the building must have figured the ball would find its way into the basket one more time. Xavier McDaniel took the 3-point shot and, despite being fouled by Jay Humphries, almost put it in. But the shot bounced off the rim, and McDaniel's two free throws with time elapsed served only to cut the final margin to one point.

It took 257 minutes for Milwaukee and Seattle to play the 73-minute game, the longest since the NBA began using the 24-second shot clock in 1954.

The only longer game in NBA history was Jan. 6, 1951, when the India-

Scrambling around District 4-5A

It looks as if Midland Lee's Farris Strambler is going to lose the state Class 5A rushing title by virtue of a nine-game Rebel schedule.

Williamson

The state rushing title counts only in regular season games and El Paso Jefferson's Andre Session, with 1,849 rushing yards, leads Strambler by 159 yards going into the season finales tonight. Session has a full 10 games to work with.

However, Strambler should easily take second place since he has a full 148-yard lead over Lyons of Arlington Lamar. Strambler is already Lee's regular season all-time great with 1,690 yards, but still needs 304 yards to erase Isaac Garnett's single season mark of 1,994, which was set through 16 games in 1983 when Lee went to the state finals.

And you thought you would never forget Odessa Permian's Greg Anderson as a receiver. Then comes along three-year starter Lloyd Hill, who is tearing up District 4-5A in his senior season. Hill has caught 40 passes this year for 921 yards, leaving him only 79 yards short of busting the 1,000-yard mark. He will easily get that total since Permian is insured for at least two more games, and one of them is tonight against San Angelo, the worst ranked defense in the league.

Permian quarterback Stoney Case has already thrown for over 1,000 yards (1,191), but it looks like Chris Comer is going to miss the 1,000-yard barrier after missing a couple of games to injury. Comer had over 1,000 regular season yards last year as a junior on his way to over 2,000 yards in the journey to the state semifinals. Comer has missed two games to injury and has 697 yards this year.

However, Permian fullback Arvey Villa has a mild shot at reaching the 1,000-yard plateau. He has 814 yards, needing 186 tonight against the Bobcats. That's reachable if Permian plays him long enough and gives him the ball.

Odessa High's season is over, and the Bronchos produced a 1,000-yard rusher in Patrick Brown, who had 1,028 yards in just nine games. It was a nice season for Brown, who was somewhat overshadowed by the exploits of Strambler during the season.

Three teams, Midland High, Permian and San Angelo, have all passed for more than 1,000 yards this year. And this in what is known across the state as a "blood and guts" league designed by Gen. Patton.

Midland High is the only team in the league that has given up 1,000 yards passing to opponents this year.

You don't hear much about the MHS running game, but the Bulldogs have a string of three consecutive games with 100-yard rushers (Albert Ray twice and James Lee).

Just when Lee thought it had found a fullback to take some of the pressure off Strambler, Dirk Kubicek comes up with a hamstring problem. Kubicek became the first Rebel back other than Strambler to gain 100 yards in a game against Abilene and then misses the Permian game. Strambler then went on for a carrer high 41 carries against Mojo.

Wrapping up the District 4-5A picks this year, it looks like this tonight.

Midland High 35, Abilene High 10: We all know about all the close games that got away from the Bulldogs this year, but the Purple Pack leaves with a smile. It'll be fun to have a laugher for a change. MHS deserves at least one.

Midland Lee 28, Abilene Cooper 14: If you're expecting a Rebel runaway, take a deep breath. Lee has its thoughts on the playoffs and one big loss to Permian. This could be a tougher chore than you want to think about. Still, Lee wins.

Bowl picture comes into focus; Irish, Buffs may neet

By RICK WARNER
Associated Press

Bowl bids won't be announced until Nov. 25, but the postseason picture is already coming into focus.

Pending the results of several games, here are the most likely matchups in the Jan. 1 bowls:

ORANGE — Colorado vs. Notre Dame.

SUGAR — Southeastern Conference champion vs. Miami.

COTTON — Southwest Conference champion vs. Nebraska, Michigan-Illinois loser or SEC runner-up.

ROSE — Pacific 10 champion vs. Big Ten champion.

FIESTA — Florida State vs. Nebraska, SEC runner-up, Penn State or Michigan.

CITRUS — Tennessee, Alabama or Virginia vs. Nebraska, Illinois or Penn State.

HALL OF FAME — Florida, Auburn, or Virginia vs. Penn State, West Virginia, Ohio State or Pittsburgh.

College Football

Top-ranked Notre Dame and No. 2 Colorado are almost certain to play in the Orange Bowl, with the national championship probably at stake. All Colorado has to do to lock up the Big Eight bid is beat Oklahoma State and Kansas State. Notre Dame has difficult games remaining against Penn State and Miami, but the Irish will probably go to the Orange even if they lose both.

Why? Because a loss to Penn State would still give Notre Dame an impressive 10-1 record heading into the Miami game. And that game won't be over until after the bids are announced.

Orange Bowl president Tom Wood admits that Notre Dame has the inside track.

"It's hard to go wrong with Notre Dame," he said. "They're the top draw in college football."

The Sugar Bowl is the only other bowl with a shot at a national title game. Here's the scenario: Miami beats Notre Dame, finishes 10-1 and plays undefeated Alabama in New Orleans. Notre Dame then beats undefeated Colorado in the Orange Bowl. In that case, the Sugar Bowl winner could be the national champion.

"That's certainly something we've talked about," said Mickey Holmes, executive director of the Sugar Bowl. "It's a roll of the dice, but it's definitely a possibility."

Holmes also thinks there's still a chance for a Notre Dame-Alabama matchup in the Sugar. But that seems highly unlikely unless Colorado loses one of its final two games and drops out of the national title chase. To keep its title hopes alive, Alabama must beat Louisiana State, Southern Mississippi and Auburn.

"Colorado is two short straight putts away from a championship game," Holmes said. "Alabama not only has much longer putts, but two of them are sidehill with a couple of breaks."

The Fiesta, which has hosted national championship games two of the last three years, could have a rematch of its 1988 Florida State-Nebraska game. Also on the short list are Miami, Penn State, Alabama and Tennessee.

Another possibility is Michigan. Don Meyers, chairman of the Fiesta's selection committee, said the bowl may challenge a policy that prohibits Big Ten and Pac-10 teams from playing in the game. The conferences made the agreement because NBC's Fiesta telecast competes with ABC's Rose Bowl, which features the Big Ten and Pac-10 champions.

"It's a clear violation of antitrust laws," Meyers said. "I don't think it's in the best interest of college football to lock 20 teams out of a bowl game for an arbitrary reason."

HUTCHINSON, Kan - If the Hutchinson Blue Dragons are the number one ranked team in junior college basketball this season, they must think Midland College is ranked 1-A. The Blue Dragons needed overtime here last night to overcome the Chaparrals 69-62 in the first night of the annual Quarterback Classic.

Preseason polls had the Blue Dragons first or second, while Midland was somewhere between 14th and 29th depending upon which poll you saw.

The Chaparrals are thinking about missed opportunities as they fell to a 2-2 mark against the season-opening Blue Dragons. Midland squandered leads of as much as 11 points in a slow-paced game and led 28-22 at halftime. Hutchinson got its first lead with 2:34 left in the game, 58-57, but Midland's Tim Owens pushed the game to overtime at 60-60 with a 14-foot jumper at the buzzer. That was Midland's final gasp.

In five minutes of overtime, the Chaparrals were able to put in only one field goal. Hutchinson owned the crowd and the momentum in coasting to the victory.

The Chaparrals are matched against Dixie College of St. George, Utah, in the 6:30 p.m. game today while Hutchinson is playing Western Nebraska. The Dixie Rebels defeated Western Nebraska in the early game Thursday.

The Chaparrals were led Thursday by sophomores Fred Campbell and Darryl King. Campbell topped the scoring for MC with 17 points and 10 rebounds, while King got 12 points.

napolis Olympians beat the Rochester Royals 75-73 in six overtimes. The Syracuse Nationals defeated the Anderson Packers 125-123 in five overtimes on Nov. 24, 1949.

"I hope our fans will soon take this team into heart," Milwaukee coach Del Harris said. "The people who stayed get an assist in the win. The people who left? Boo!"

Ricky Pierce scored a career-high 36 points before fouling out in the first extra period. Alvin Robertson added 28 points in 59 minutes.

"Anytime you invest that kind of time in a game, it feels good to win," Robertson said.

So imagine how Seattle's Dale Ellis felt. He played 69 minutes and scored a career-high 53 points.

"We had to overcome too much adversity," Ellis said. "It was really intense.

Nuggets 128, Rockets 127

Alex English hit an 8-foot jumper with four seconds left in overtime to give Denver the victory. Lafayette Lever had only one point, seven assists and four rebounds at halftime but finished with 19 points, 10 assists and 14 rebounds.

Reserve forward Bill Hanzlik scored eight of his 16 points in the fourth quarter as the Nuggets outscored the Rockets 30-24 to force the overtime. Otis Thorpe and Akeem Olajuwon each scored 33 points for the Rockets, who led by 18 in the first half.

Knicks 107, Nets 105

Charles Oakley had 17 of his 22 points and 11 of his 18 rebounds in the second half for New York. Patrick Ewing's dunk with 1:22 left gave the Knicks their first lead of the game.

The Knicks, who trailed 62-42 in the final minute of the first half, came back from a 10-point deficit in the last nine minutes. They finally pulled ahead 106-105 on Ewing's dunk off an inbounds pass, giving him 20 points in the game. New Jersey got 21 points from Chris Morris and 20 from Dennis Hopson.

Lakers 106, Warriors 95

A.C. Green scored 24 points and grabbed 16 rebounds and Michael Cooper and Magic Johnson led a fourth-quarter Los Angeles runaway.

The Lakers took advantage of the absence of Warriors center Alton Lister, out for the season with a ruptured Achilles tendon, to outrebound their shorter opponents 69-34.

Johnson had 19 points, 10 rebounds and 10 assists.

MHS

And throughout the season, just when the 'Dogs and Eagles seem to be hitting something of a stride, injuries to key personnel have slowed the teams' pace. MHS starters who will miss action tonight include David Worley, Will Sowders, James Lee, Dusty Taylor and Marcus Heredia. AHS' varsity roster is down to 27 players.

"Most of our injuries have been in the offensive line, so we really lack that offensive punch," Pullin said. "We really don't have the same team we did a few eeeks ago, but that's part of the game."

Even at that, Corley is concerned with the Eagle defensive unit.

"Defensively, they're not bad. They have probably the third best defense in the district and the passing defense is probably the second best. It's just that offensively they haven't been able to put any points on the board," he said.

"Maybe our offense can be a little more effective so the defense doesn't have to stay on the field so much," Pullin said. "In our last game we ran 45 offensive plays and were on defense for 65 plays.

"That's the thing we really need to work at; try to get some offense sustained. We need to turn that around so the defense isn't on the field all the time."

"It will be a good game. I'm sure they will come up here and play us hard game. Whgat we're going to do is put our best people on the field and go out and try to win the game," Corley said.

Meanwhile, NBC was happy with its pro basketball coup, which gives the network the NBA for the first time since 1962. Dick Ebersol, the president of NBC Sports, said he expected CBS to renew and "was unbelievably surprised that this deal came to the street." He called the NBA "an unbelievable national success."

Charles Grantham, executive director of the NBA Players Association, also was excited. Under the collective-bargaining agreement between the league and the union, 53 percent of gross revenue goes to player salaries.

"It looks like we hit a home run," Grantham said. "This makes the owners and players very happy. We were close to the $1 million per player projected when the collective-bargaining agreement was signed" in 1988.

Stern said that for purposes of the salary cap, the contract was evaluated at $126 million for 1989-91.

Cowboys waive end, suspect drug abuse

IRVING (AP) — Dallas Cowboys rookie defensive end Alex Stewart, acquired from the Minnesota Vikings in last month's blockbuster trade for Herschel Walker, was released Thursday.

Stewart was cut from the Cowboys six-man development squad in part because the team suspected he was using steroids, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported in Friday's editions.

The newspaper said a "highly place team source" said the Cowboys suspected Stewart of violating the National Football League's substance abuse policy.

The Star-Telegram also reported that "three other league sources," none of which were named, confirmed that Stewart tested positive for steroids on a drug test administered recently at the NFL Scouting Combine in Indianapolis.

Stewart was part of a complicated, players-and-picks deal that sent Walker to the Vikings last month. Now that Stewart has been released, Dallas will receive a No. 2 draft pick in 1990 from the Vikings, the newspaper said.

SATURDAY, NOVEMBER 11, 1989

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Use your organizational skills to reduce overhead. Attend seminars to keep abreast of the latest developments in your field. A raise or promotion is possible in February. Reconciliations are most likely in May. Use any time spent alone on trips to meditate on perplexing personal problems. House-hunting in September could result in a move to the suburbs. Spend more weekend hours with offspring. An autumn wedding can be a great place to meet a new romantic partner.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: WWII Gen. George Patton, comedian Jonathan Winters, novelist Kurt Vonnegut Jr., golfer "Fuzzy" Zoeller.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You are more optimistic than ever about the future. Others may come to you seeking a handout. Help these people by showing them ways to help themselves. A weekend job provides extra cash.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Make important decisions carefully. Seek the support of family. Expanding your social circle will lead to new business contacts. Spruce up your appearance before making a public appeal.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Learn to delegate responsibility on the home front. Teamwork will give you more time for relaxation. Make a list before grocery shopping and use food coupons. Buy in quantity whenever practicable.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Trips, contracts and business discussions occupy your thoughts now. Those who love you are behind you all the way. Enlist their aid when faced with extra responsibilities in the busy days ahead.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): An emotionally charged situation could change for the better if you exercise self-control. You have already stated your feelings. Seek the middle ground. Mutual respect is needed.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Your willpower and positive attitude are big assets. Negotiate an important agreement regarding your professional or personal wishes. Restore family tranquillity. Forget old grievances.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): New public or professional prestige is part of the picture. Today's rewards are due to previous planning and effort. Do not abandon logic if a family discussion becomes heated.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Stay on top of your obligations. Before proceeding with a tempting idea, make sure you have taken care of previous commitments. Romance could be in the spotlight. Show discretion.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Financial matters are emphasized today and tomorrow. Unusual events or bargains are available to you now. Express your originality through an artistic project. Communicate your ideas clearly.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Do not allow temporary worries and aggravations to mislead you. Things are not as bad as they seem! A project you have all but forgotten could suddenly have great appeal. Be open-minded.

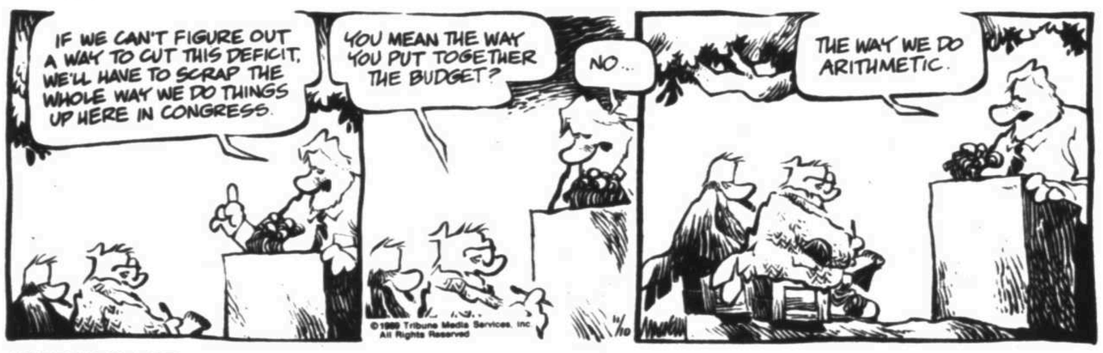

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): The emphasis today is on improving what you already have. Domestic friction is likely if you feel cramped. Get better organized and clear away clutter. Romance blossoms anew.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Quiet pursuits hold the greatest appeal today. Get outdoors and take a long walk with your favorite canine. Browsing in secondhand stores or boutiques could yield good bargains. Buy only what you need.

Declarer did well to recover from a bad trump break on this hand from a rubber bridge game in Florida. But all that work would have been unnecessary had declarer taken a basic precaution in the first place.

This was a typical rubber-bridge power auction. It had the virtues of simplicity, speed and accuracy. North's jump raise was forcing, but had his hand included the queen of trumps rather than the queen of clubs, a grand slam would have been an excellent contract.

Declarer won the diamond opening in hand and led a trump to the ace. When East showed out, declarer faced an uphill battle to avoid two trump losers. Fortunately, he guessed the distribution.

The remaining high diamond was cashed, followed by a diamond ruff with the deuce. Three rounds of clubs were taken, declarer discarding a heart from hand, followed by two rounds of hearts ending in dummy as West followed helplessly. Now declarer divined to ruff a club, then exit with a low trump. West had to win and lead away from his remaining trump honor into declarer's tenace, enabling South to score the last two tricks.

The easy way to make the contract came at the second trick. Since declarer was solid in the side suits, the only possible problem was to avoid losing two trump tricks. So at trick two declarer should have led a low trump and simply covered any card West produces. If East can win the trick, it means that trumps are no worse than 3-1 Thereafter, the ace-king will draw the outstanding fangs and the contract is home for the loss of only a trump trick.

Dukakis denies he will resign to spend more time with wife

BOSTON (AP) — Gov. Michael Dukakis quashed rumors that he might resign to spend more time with his wife, Kitty, as she prepared to leave the hospital where she has been recovering after drinking rubbing alcohol.

Mrs. Dukakis' family said she may leave the Brigham and Women's Hospital today, four days after she drank the poisonous fluid.

Dukakis

Dukakis issued his first public statement about his wife Thursday after spending two days at her bedside. He vowed to stand by her and to serve out the remaining 14 months of his term.

"We have a tremendous amount of work to do here," Dukakis said.

He said he had faith in his wife's ability to rebound: "I love Kitty. I'm going to stand by her, just as she's always stood by me. We're in this thing together."

Dukakis also alluded to the strain of the past year, beginning with his defeat to George Bush in the presidential race last Nov. 8.

"This has been a very difficult week for Kitty and for me and for our family. And it's been a difficult year," he said. "Many families have troubles like this ... You do your very best to deal with it — and then you go on."

Mrs. Dukakis was treated for alcoholism in February and previously has admitted to a long period of abusing diet pills.

SOUTHFIELD, Mich. (AP) — Talk-show host Oprah Winfrey will launch the Michigan Office of Children and Youth Services' fall campaign to recruit foster and adoptive parents for black children.

Winfrey will appear in the 30-second public service announcements that will air next month, urging black families to adopt or become foster parents of abandoned or orphaned youngsters, the office announced Thursday.

One Church One Child of Michigan Inc., which focuses on the need for more adoptive and foster parents for black children, also is sponsoring the ads. They will air statewide.

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Actor Robert Redford owns a ski resort in the mountains east of Salt Lake City, but he's opposed to widening the road that leads to it, and has mixed feelings about bringing the Winter Olympics to Utah.

Utah voters on Tuesday approved a referendum calling for spending $56 million to build ski jumps, a speed skating oval and bobsled-luge runs required by the International Olympics Committee, which will pick a 1998 site in June 1991.

Redford

Redford said he personally was not opposed to the Games — none of which would be held at his Sundance resort — but felt the state should make sure the Olympics did not lead to further damage of the Utah environment.

"What is Utah going to do to protect its future rather than squander it for a 16-day event?" he said.

Redford criticized proposals to expand to four lanes the two-lane Provo Canyon highway, which leads to his resort.

"Are we going to cut the canyon to suit the road or cut the road to suit the canyon? Personally, I prefer the latter," he said.

VENICE, Italy (AP) — About 80 women on a tiny island in the Venetian lagoon are busy stitching lace for a shawl to be given to Soviet first lady Raisa Gorbachev.

Italian Premier Giulio Andreotti personally selected the model and decorative pattern for the shawl by the Burano lace makers that he will present during Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev's Nov. 29 visit to Italy. It has not yet been disclosed whether Mrs. Gorbachev will accompany her husband.

Gorbachev will meet with Andreotti in Rome and meet Dec. 1 with Pope John Paul II, the first meeting between the leaders of the Kremlin and Vatican.

The fishing village of Burano is the center of traditional Venetian lace making, an art that has suffered from industrial competition. It takes three days for a pocket handkerchief to be braided in 'Burano' stitch.

Britain's Queen Elizabeth II is among the former customers of the island's artisans. She ordered a set of sheets and tablecloths during the 1960s.

DALLAS (AP) — Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry will head a group of sports and business leaders working to attract sporting events to the Dallas area, city officials said.

Landry

The Dallas International Sports Commission's first objective is to secure the 1994 World Cup Soccer Competition, said Mike Jordan, chairman of the Dallas International Initiative.

The panel's board of directors includes former Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, golf legend Byron Nelson and Dallas Mavericks general manager Norm Sonju.

At a city hall news conference Thursday, Mayor Annette Strauss said, "Mr. Landry's commitment to the commission means that Dallas will quickly become a major player on the field of amateur and professional sporting events."

Landry said the appointment "presents a tremendous opportunity to give back to Dallas some of what the city has given to me."

NEW YORK (AP) — A set of the first four successive editions of Shakespeare's collected plays was sold Thursday for $2 million, a record for what are known as the "Four Folios," Sotheby's said.

Apart from an unfinished attempt in 1619 to publish a collected issue of Shakespeare's plays, the Folios were the only collected editions printed in the 17th Century, according to the auction catalog.

"I've never paid $2 million for anything before," said James Cummins, a Manhattan dealer who bought the Folios for a customer he would identify only as a private American collector. "I'm a little nervous but excited."

Cummins said he and his customer had been looking for at least the first Folio for about five years.

"The first Folio is the first collected works of Shakespeare," he explained. "The four together are exceedingly desirable, but the first Folio is the one that you're really paying a premium to get because it's almost impossible to find a fine copy and this is a very, very nice copy indeed."

House passes oil spill legislation

By CHRISTOPHER HANSON
Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The House Thursday overwhelmingly passed the strongest oil spill protection bill it has ever enacted and the one most likely to become law. It would impose damages on oil spillers and establish a $1 billion industry-financed cleanup fund.

A Senate-House deadlock had stymied enactment of comprehensive oil spill legislation for 14 years. But fallout from the Exxon Valdez spill, which dumped 11 million gallons of crude oil into Alaska's Prince William Sound last spring, has broken the impasse. It now appears likely both chambers will agree on a tough law after a conference early next year.

By a vote of 375 to 5, House members approved a measure that Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., who help push a series of toughening amendments, described as "by far the strongest ever to pass the House."

"We have every reason to expect the bill to be signed (by President Bush)," he told reporters after the vote.

The bill would:

■ Impose unlimited liability on oil spillers guilty of gross negligence.

■ Cap federal liability limits for less culpable spillers at $1,200 per gross ton (which would have meant a limit of $114 million for a tanker the size of Exxon Valdez.)

■ Preserve the rights of states to extract their own damages from oil polluters. Seventeen states now have laws to impose unlimited liability.

■ Create a trust fund of about $1 billion that would be used to finance state and federal cleanup costs, financed by the oil industry, which will be taxed for that purpose.

The House bill, unlike a Senate version passed last summer, would also require double hulls for added safety on all tankers and tank barges that ship oil into U.S. ports. New vessels will have to be built with the safety hulls and all vessels will have to have them within 15 years.

In addition, all tankers must have double bottoms, to reduce risks of spills, within seven years.

Opponents of the double hull provision said they were dangerous, increasing the risk that oil-filled tankers could sink, capsize, explode or go aground.

But Rep. Jim McDermott, a strong proponent of the double hull measure, said during the floor debate: "It has never happened. There are 42 double bottom tankers carrying Alaskan oil today, some of them with full double hulls."

"Many are carrying ... hazardous chemicals as required by current law ... After what we have seen in Prince William Sound ... and Puget Sound, does anyone want to claim that oil is not a hazardous chemical?"

The Senate rejected a double hull amendment proposed by Sen. Brock Adams, D-Wash., and Studds predicted the hull issue might prove tough to resolve in the House-Senate conference.

On Wednesday the House had voted narrowly to impose unlimited liability on any oil polluter found to be negligent, approving an amendment proposed by Rep. George Miller, D-Calif..

But on Thursday, the chamber reversed itself, agreeing to extract unlimited damages only from those guilty of gross negligence — a standard more lenient to polluters.

"The oil industry put on a full court press," complained Michael Matz of the environmentalist Sierra Club. "It was as if hurricane Hugo went through here."

One reason backers of the weaker language prevailed was that many who had supported Miller's amendment were absent, presumably on the way back to their districts. Fifty-two members failed to vote.

Opponents of the Miller amendment, such as Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, had said it invited a veto from President Bush. Transportation Secretary Samuel Skinner had attacked the provision as too harsh on industry and likely to force up oil prices and said he would urged a veto.

"With the defeat of the last Miller amendment, the president will sign the bill," Young told reporters.

PBPA MEETING

Mosbacher sounds positive note

By JULIE JEROME
Business/Oil Writer

The annual meeting of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association (PBPA) started this morning on a positive note, with oilman Robert Mosbacher Jr., claiming he "senses a new optimism" throughout the state and oil industry.

Mosbacher, Republican candidate for lieutenant governor of Texas, echoed the theme of this year's meeting "Recovery '90" at the kick-off breakfast. Approximately 175 people attended.

Mosbacher said the optimism is inspired by stable oil prices, and an attempt by the Bush administration to draw up a national energy policy early in the term. The administration is conducting hearings throughout the country to obtain information from industry representatives needed to design the nation's energy policy.

Hibernia buys failed Plano bank

Associated Press

Federal regulators on Thursday closed United National Bank of Plano, selling its $34.4 million in deposits to Hibernia National Bank in Texas for $1.56 million.

The bank was the 123rd shut down in the state this year; nationally, 181 banks have failed this year.

The federal Office of the Comptroller of the Currency declared the 8-year-old Plano bank insolvent, saying liberal lending practices and inadequate oversight by former management had resulted in an excessive amount of problem loans.

Hibernia National Bank in Texas, a subsidiary of Louisiana's Hibernia Corp. bank holding company, also will purchase $22.9 million of the failed banks assets.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. will advance Hibernia National $10 million and retain assets of the Plano bank with a book value of $12 million.

Japanese firm designs 500-story skyscraper

TOKYO (AP) — A construction company said Thursday it has designed a 500-story skyscraper for Tokyo, although there are no immediate plans to build it.

The designers would need 25 years and $326.2 billion to build the 6,669-foot-tall "Aeropolis 2001," said Yasuyuki Kimura, a spokesman for Ohbayashi Corp.

This includes the money necessary to reclaim a 56-square-mile island in Tokyo Bay, he added.

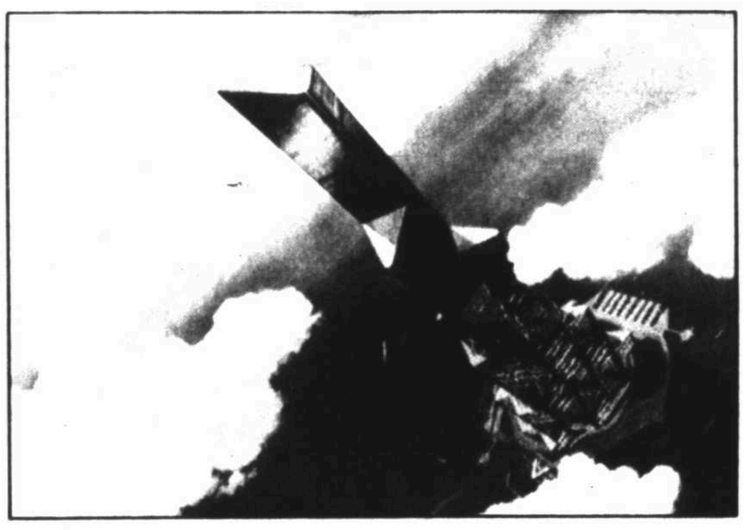

The project was made possible by Japan's advanced techniques to protect buildings in earthquakes, he said.

The tallest building in earthquake-prone Japan is the 60-story Sunshine City Building in Tokyo. The 110-story Sears Tower in Chicago is the world's tallest building.

Yukihisa Tokunaga, a city planning official of the Construction Ministry, said the 500-story building is one of a number of private plans by major construction firms to meet Tokyo's growing need for office and apartment space.

"I understand that none of the plans, including what they call 'Waterfronts,' 'Geofronts,' 'Undergroundpolis' and 'Aeropolis,' has been submitted for any government approval," Tokunaga said.

Economists say layoffs aren't recession sign

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — A recent round of layoffs has been unsettling, especially for the communities and individuals involved, but it doesn't appear to signal a return to high unemployment, economists say.

Wang Laboratories Inc., Shearson Lehman Hutton Inc., Chrysler Corp., Unisys Corp. and Campbell Soup Co. are among companies that have announced major layoffs in recent days.

But most economists don't predict a surge in layoffs, at least for the next year.

Of 50 economists surveyed by Blue Chip Economic Indicators of Sedona, Ariz., only a third see a recession starting by the end of 1990. Another third see one in 1991 and the rest don't predict a recession until 1992 or beyond.

William D. Anderson, an economist at Pennsylvania State University's College of Business Administration, says job trends "indicate to me that the economy is in the midst of a slowdown. (But) I'm yet to be convinced that that slowdown is going to lead to a recession."

Historically, manufacturing is among the first sectors of the economy hit during a downturn, but the past few years have left the economy on a high plateau that can withstand some blows, Anderson says.

Aquino's visit highlights J.C. Penney's success

By JOHN A. BOLT

ADDISON, Texas (AP) — Whimsical shoppers once joked they had bought their wardrobe from Jacque C. Pennay, and while the nation's fourth largest retailer perhaps hasn't become the home of haute couture, these days J.C. Penney Co. Inc. has more in common with Macy's than Wal-Mart.

"J.C. Penney is truly positioned as the middle income department store of the country," said Thomas Tashjian, retail analyst at Seidler Amdec Securities Inc. in Los Angeles.

Penney "is only starting to see the edge of success," Tashjian said. "I believe that over the next several years, as they become more known as a department store, they will continue to see above-industry average sales increases."

And Chairman William G. Howell suggests it's not fair to compare Penney sales of women's apparel "with how much dog food Wal-Mart sold."

Wal-Mart Stores Inc. ranks just ahead of Penney with $20.65 billion in sales last year to Penney's $14.83 billion. Sears Roebuck & Co. is largest with $50.25 billion, followed by K mart Corp. with $27.3 billion.

Attention is being focused on Penney anew this weekend as the retailer has persuaded Philippines President Corazon Aquino to include Dallas on her current U.S. tour.

Her schedule includes a visit Friday to an exhibit hall turned into a replica of Manila where Penney is showing off examples of the $110 million in Filipino merchandise it plans to sell during a chain-wide promotion next May.

Penney has invited some 2,000 people to the reception, hosted by Howell, multimillionaire developer Trammell Crow and Texas Gov. Bill Clements.

On Saturday, Mrs. Aquino will tour a Penney's store located in an upscale North Dallas mall it anchors along with such stores as Neiman-Marcus and Lord & Taylor.

The "Festival of the Philippines" promotion next May is the latest in an what is becoming an annual international focus. Previous events have centered on Great Britain, India and Italy.

The promotion also reflects the new emphasis at Penney: apparel and soft home furnishings.

In 1983, Penney began eliminating automotive, electronics and hard goods from its stores, a decision that cost $1.5 billion in revenue, Howell said, but put the company "more in sync with what American consumers expect at J.C. Penney's."

Apparel now accounts for 82 percent of Penney sales, with women's apparel at 42 percent of total sales. In 1981, apparel was 63 percent, with women's at 30 percent. Home and leisure goods have fallen from 37 percent in 1981 to 18 percent last year.

Howell has predicted by 1993, overall apparel sales will make up 72 percent of total sales.

Despite an industry-wide slump in apparel sales, sales have rebounded to $10.13 billion through Oct. 28, an 8.2 percent increase from the same time last year.

With the busy holiday season still to come, which Howell predicts will be "a good Christmas for J.C. Penney," the company already has reached 68 percent of last year's retail sales, and 66 percent of the record 1987 sales.

MARKETS

Crude futures prices rebound

From Staff and Wire Reports

The Veteran's Day holiday kept markets closed today, but petroleum futures prices rebounded Thursday in relatively light trading despite little news to drive the market up.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the December contract for West Texas Intermediate, the benchmark grade of crude oil, rose 5 cents to $19.92 a 42-gallon barrel. Contracts for delivery in the first half of next year showed better gains — of between 10 cents and 20 cents a barrel.

Among refined products traded on the exchange, wholesale unleaded gasoline for December delivery rose 0.35 cent to 52.22 cents a gallon. Later month contracts showed stronger gains.

No. 2 heating oil for December delivery added 0.20 cent to end at 58.92 cents a gallon. The January contract gained 0.26 cent to 58.95 cents and the February contract advanced 0.32 cent to 58.30 cents a gallon.

Analysts said there was no fundamental news to explain the price rise.

"The market couldn't penetrate yesterday's lows so it set us up for a late afternoon uptick," said Bill Hamlen, trader with Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc.

But market players also have OPEC in the backs of their minds, analysts said. The 13 ministers from the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are scheduled to meet on Nov. 25 to discuss strategy for 1990. One issue to be discussed involves the reallocation of quotas.

Dollar firms while gold declines

LONDON (AP) — The dollar steadied in European trading today while traders debated the impact of East Germany's decision to permit free travel for its citizens.

Gold was slightly lower in quiet trading.

The immediate impact of German developments, said Peter Kane, chief corporate dealer at Credit Suisse in London, was to create uncertainty about the consequences for the West German economy and thus undermine the Deutsche mark.

"Where there is uncertainty, there tends to be weakness," Kane said.

Analysts said a flood of East Germans into West Germany would have a mixed impact, raising unemployment but perhaps easing pressure on inflation as new arrivals accept lower wages.

"It may take months or years for problems to show through," said Chris Furness of Hill, Samuel & Co. Ltd. in London. "What still is unclear is if any other of the major countries is going to do any better."

In Tokyo, the dollar closed Friday at 142.75 yen, barely changed from Thursday's close of 142.70. Later in London, the dollar traded at 142.78 yen.

In London, the pound sterling traded at $1.5850, down from $1.5863 late Thursday.

London's five major bullion dealers fixed a recommend price of $386.45 bid per troy ounce this morning, up from $386.25 a troy ounce late Thursday.

In Zurich, gold traded at $386.40 per troy ounce at noon today, down from $387.30 bid late Thursday.

Gold in Hong Kong closed at $386.24 today, down 48 cents from late Thursday.

Silver bullion traded at $5.27 bid per ounce, retreating from a four-month high of $5.33 bid late Thursday.

Rally falters with earnings worries

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market pulled back Thursday after the rally of the two preceding sessions faltered amid worries about corporate earnings.

Traders showed little enthusiasm over government statistics on inflation that most analysts described as favorable.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, which had risen more than 41 points Tuesday and Wednesday, dropped 19.67 to 2,603.69.

Declining issues outnumbered advances by about 6 to 5 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed stocks, with 660 up, 815 down and 487 unchanged.

Volume on the floor of the Big Board came to 143.39 million shares, down from 170.15 million in the previous session. Nationwide, consolidated volume in NYSE-listed issues, including trades in those stocks on regional exchanges and in the over-the-counter market, totaled 172.02 million shares.

The Labor Department reported that the producer price index of finished goods rose 0.4 percent in October, a bit more than had been expected.

Excluding food and energy prices that are subject to large fluctuations from month to month, however, the increase was 0.1 percent.

Analysts said those figures provided fresh support for hopes that inflationary pressures would remain subdued enough to keep interest rates from rising significantly and allow for continued economic growth.

The Federal Reserve seemed to signal in advance its favorable view of the inflation outlook with a move this week to relax its credit policy slightly.

BUSINESS IN BRIEF

Food costs drive up wholesale prices

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices rose 0.4 percent in October as the biggest spurt in food costs in 22 months offset the positive effects from moderating energy prices, the government reported.

The 0.4 percent October rise in the Labor Department's Producer Price Index on Thursday was down from a 0.9 percent September increase. Some economists predicted the news will continue to improve in coming months as a slowing economy takes more pressure off prices.

For the first 10 months of the year, prices at the wholesale level have been rising at an annual rate of 5.2 percent, compared to an increase of 4 percent in 1988.

Fed called on to reduce inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal Reserve Board Governor Wayne D. Angell said the central bank needs to reduce inflation to about 3 percent in 1990 and he expects to meet that goal in the first half of the year.

Inflation has been falling since the Fed began tightening credit in 1988 to slow the economy. The Fed began easing credit in May and nudged short-term interest rates lower earlier this week. Angell made his comments Thursday.

Corn harvest estimated at three-year high

WASHINGTON (AP) — Farmers are completing a corn harvest estimated at a three-year high of 7.59 billion bushels, up 54 percent from last year's drought-reduced crop and up 2 percent from the forecast a month ago, the Agriculture Department said.

Drought reduced the 1988 corn crop to 4.92 billion bushels, the department said Thursday. In October, the department estimated this year's production at 7.45 billion bushels, a 51 percent increase from last year.

NYSE investigates computerized strategies

NEW YORK (AP) — New York Stock Exchange President John J. Phelan Jr. said the Big Board had begun "major investigations" into potential violations involving computerized stock trading strategies.

Phelan said Thursday the probe involves trading in both the New York securities and Chicago futures exchanges and is focusing on an illegal financial market strategy known as "front-running."

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

Tom Green yields gas discovery

From Staff Reports

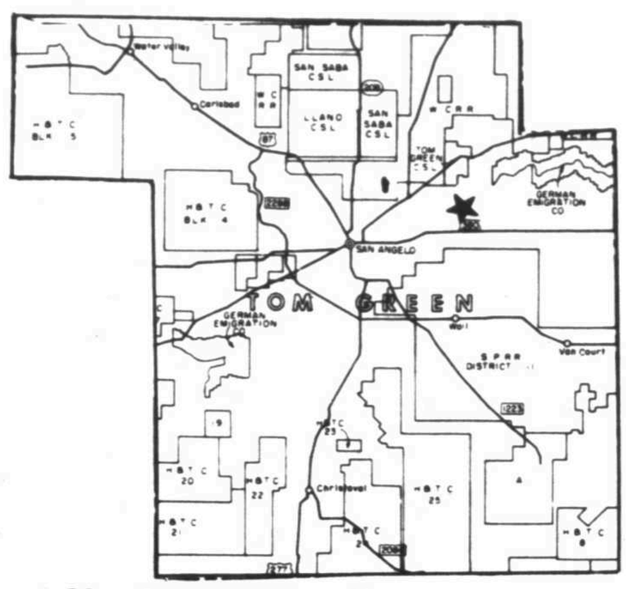

FORTUNE PRODUCTION CO., San Angelo, has completed a Harkey gas discovery in Tom Green County, northeast of the Harriett South field.

The No. 2 Balch was tested for a calculated absolute open flow of 506 Mcfd from perforations 4,528 to 4,527 ft. The interval was acidized with 250 gallons of acid. Condensate gravity was 67 degrees API and gas-liquid ratio was 43,384:1.

Permitted as a 5,300 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,030 ft. and plugged back to 4,865 ft. with 4 1/2 inch casing set at 4,806 ft.

The well topped the Strawn Lime at 4,772 ft., Harkey at 4,523, and Palo Pinto at 4,359 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 1,815 ft.

Location is 1,414 ft. from north and 178 ft. from west lines of J. Peters survey 336, Abst. 1772, four miles east of San Angelo.

Pecos County discovery flows 640 Mcfd

A discovery has been completed in Pecos County, most likely extending the Pinon (Overthrust) field south.

J. CLEO THOMPSON finaled the No. 2201 West for a calculated abslolute open flow of 640 Mcfd. The well flowed from perforations 4,126 to 4,412 ft., which had been acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe acid.

Permitted as a 7,500 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 5,770 ft. and plugged back to 4,890 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 4,908 ft.

The well topped the Caballos at 5,760 ft. on ground elevation of 4,169 ft. Pay was topped at 4,126 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from north and 1,320 ft. from east lines of Section 2, Block 2, TCRR survey, 37 miles southeast of Fort Stockton.

Crockett field gains third Wolfcamp producer

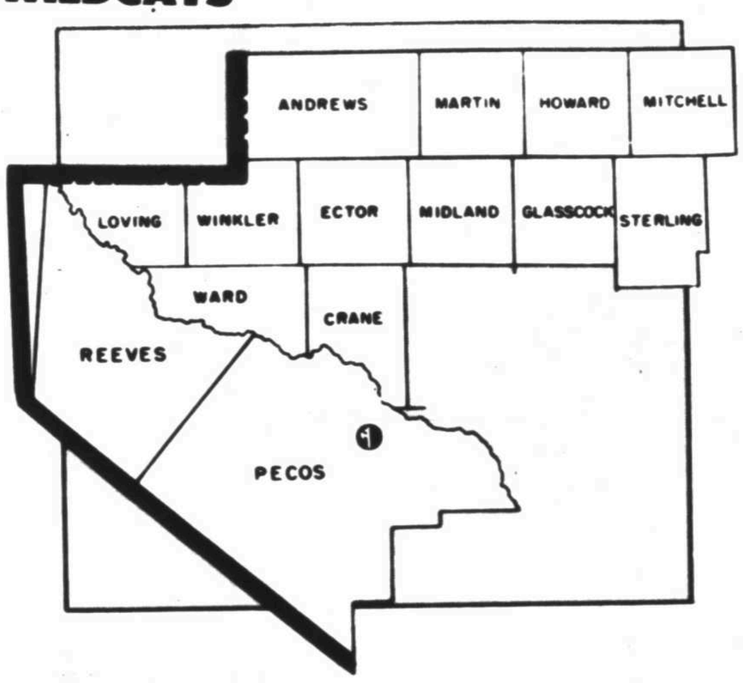

The Southwest Mesa (Wolfcamp) field of Crockett County has gained its third producer, extending the pay east and slightly north.

BASS ENTERPRISES PRODUCTION CO., Midland, potentialed the No. 1 Metropolitan Royalty Corp. to pump 195 barrels of 35.4 gravity crude and 20 barrels of water from perforations 6,332 to 6,342 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,000 gallons of acid. Gas-oil ratio is 441:1.

Drilled to 6,750 ft., where 5 1/2 inch casing was set, the well was plugged back to 6,654 ft.

Location is 467 ft. from south and west lines of Section 11, Block P, TRCC survey, Abst. 5584, 11 miles southeast of McCamey.

Royal Dutch Shell, BP have drop in quarterly profits

LONDON (AP) — Royal Dutch-Shell Group of Companies and British Petroleum Co. PLC, two of the world's largest oil companies, posted sharply lower third-quarter profits Thursday, hurt by sagging results in two main businesses.

Royal Dutch-Shell, the world's second largest oil company behind Exxon Corp., said its net income for the three months ended Sept. 30, fell 16 percent to 652 million pounds, or $1.04 billion, compared with 778 million pounds, or $1.2 billion, in the same period a year ago.

London-based British Petroleum, which owns Cleveland-based Standard Oil Co., said its net profit for the three months fell 34 percent to 211 million pounds compared with 318 million pounds a year ago.

Revenue for the fourth-largest oil concern totaled 7.6 billion pounds, up 14 percent from 6.65 billion pounds in the same 1988 period.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

How to declare loss on mutual fund investment

By BILL DOYLE

Q. If only my husband and I had read your articles about mutual funds before we made our BIG MISTAKE. We invested in mutual funds a couple of years ago. The share values of those funds kept dropping. We finally redeemed our shares and took a $7,000 loss.

How do we report that loss on our federal income tax return — and save on taxes?

Doyle

A. You report the loss as a capital loss on Schedule D, which you then include with your filing of Form 1040.

If you have any capital gains — from the sale of securities or any other "capital assets" at a profit — this year, you can use that capital loss to offset the capital gains, thereby reducing or eliminating the tax on your capital gains.

If your capital loss exceeded your capital gains or you have no capital gains this year, you can use your capital loss to offset ordinary income of up to $3,000. Then, you carry forward the rest of your capital loss. In future years, you can use it to offset, first, capital gains and then up to $3,000 per year ordinary income.

Whether your $7,000 capital loss is applied against capital gains or ordinary income, it will still reduce your tax bill.

You have had a hard and costly experience with mutual funds. This column cautions readers about the risks in most mutual funds, but also points out the profit potential of many funds. I certainly don't steer readers away from all funds. The majority have done very well over the long term.

Q. I invested $32,767.22 in a "government plus" mutual fund in 1986. This was on the advice of a broker who said the fund is quite safe and she would recommend this type of investment to her mother. I have known the broker and her family for many years and have a high regard for her expertise.

The monthly dividend has been reduced twice since March. I can understand that. But in my wildest dreams, I never thought I would lose part of my principal, which is down to $28,225.60.

This fund has a rear-end load if redeemed within five years. To get out now would cost more than $500. I am a single woman, 73, and have worked hard for what I have. Should I cut my losses by redeeming my shares?

A. Normally, I would caution against redeeming while the five-year rear-end load, euphemistically called a "contingent deferred sales charge," is in effect. Typically, that bite starts at 5 percent, declines one percentage point a year and disappears after five years.

But your fund has been a horrible financial clunker, as have other government plus mutual funds. That type of fund holds as investments U.S. Treasury and federal agency bonds, but it also sells options on those bonds.

As has been detailed in this space and elsewhere, mutual funds with the words "plus" or "high yield" in their names have performed very badly — because they have been dabbling in options.

If that broker did sell her mother shares of the same fund she sold to you, I certainly hope her mother has redeemed those fund shares by this time. That's what I advise you to do.

Q. My husband died last year and I had some mutual fund shares. I redeemed those shares this past April, because I was scared of the market going up and down. I put that money in a 10 percent certificate of deposit. I have about $300,000 in CDs and draw out just some of the interest for living expenses.

Are CDs OK to invest in?

A. Of course. Just make sure you stay within the federal deposit insurance limits of $100,000 per depositor per institution and CDs are as OK as OK can be. Since you are able to live on less than the total amount of interest your CDs earn, there's no reason for you to change your investment habits.

Along with many other people, it's clear you are temperamentally unsuited to own mutual funds shares and individual stocks.

KICKOFF

Mosbacher is president of Mosbacher Energy Co., in Houston. He said from the point of view of his company, the future looks bright.

"We are excited about our prospects with the steady price of oil," he said.

Mosbacher mentioned tension between the oil industry and environmentalists, but believes problems between the two groups could be solved if representatives from each group "would just sit down and talk to one another.

"I believe we can make peace with the environmentalists," he said. "As an industry we have plenty to be proud of what we've done in terms of protecting the envirnment. The saddest thing about Valdez (oil spill in Alaska) was that Congress found a renewed enthusiasm for oil spill legislation."

Mosbacher urged Congress to march forward with federal leasing of the Artic National Wildlife Refuge.

Mosbacher opened his Veteran's Day message by discussing yesterday's opening of East German borders by communist authorities, and noted that both the PBPA and the Berlin Wall are 28 years old.

However, the PBPA is thriving, while the Berlin Wall has been dissolved.

"This is an historic victory for freedom," he said, calling the opening of the Berlin Wall and western borders the "bankruptcy of our opposing ideology in this world."

The Soviet Union is "cutting their economic exposure," he said.

"They're saying to Soviet Bloc countries, 'You're on your own. We're about to redeploy our resources back to this country (Russia).'"

Ted Collins Jr., president elect of the PBPA, noted that members would view "Recovery '90" with the "Three R's" as guidelines: restore, regain and reclaim.

"We all look to 1990 as a year of adequate and stable prices and hope to see the return of tax incentives that we lost with recent tax reform," he said.

The Ohbayashi building would be able to accommodate 300,000 people. Aside from office space and residential units, it also would have space for hotels, hospitals, parks and convention centers.

The design envisions elevators that would reach the top floor in 15 minutes.

The building is shaped like a triangle, becoming smaller at the top to help it absorb shock waves. It would have a number of tunnels to let typhoon winds pass through rather than hitting the building with full force.

The Japanese archipelago, in the world's most active seismic zone, is hit each year by some 1,000 tremors strong enough to be felt.

PENNEY'S

And when third quarter earnings are released Tuesday, "I don't think we're going to disappoint anybody," Howell said in an interview this week at the company's temporary headquarters in Addison, a corporate suburb on Dallas's northern border. Analysts are looking for earnings between $1.40 and $1.50 per share compared with last year's $1.16.

"They're doing very well," said Jeffrey Edelman, retail analyst at Drexel Burnham Lambert Inc. in New York. "Last year there were cleaning out the store of merchandise they didn't want and this year they're filling it up with merchandise they want."

"My only concern has to do with the overall economy," Edelman said. "I think Penney's on a good track."

Events cause Kohl to cut Polish visit short

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl today interrupted his visit to Poland and flew to Berlin after East Germany's historic decision to open its borders to the West.

Kohl has said he would like to meet with new East German leader chief Egon Krenz, but there was no official word on whether such a session would take place.

The state PAP news agency reported in a brief dispatch that Kohl left Warsaw in the early afternoon.

A statement issued by Kohl's Christian Democratic Party said the chancellor was heading to Berlin via Hamburg. He was expected in West Berlin late this afternoon.

Hans Klein, Kohl's spokesman, told reporters the chancellor would return to Poland Saturday to conclude his visit.

East Berlin announced suddenly Thursday it was opening its borders and allowing its citizens to leave. Thousands of East Germans immediately swarmed into West Germany through the open Berlin Wall and at other crossings.

Earlier Thursday, Kohl said West Germany "could be ready to offer significant economic aid if the will to reform manifested itself in East Germany."

In addition to opening his country's borders, Krenz said the country would hold democratic elections, but it was not clear if the elections would include parties competing with the ruling Communists.

Kohl also said he had discussed with U.S. officials the possibility of housing mounting numbers of East German refugees in U.S. facilities in West Germany.

His six-day visit here was intended to move the World War II enemies closer to reconciliation. The developments in East Germany, however, drew attention away from the economic issues expected to be the focus of the summit.

The developments have fueled Polish fears about German reunification and have forced long-simmering border issues to the forefront of Kohl's visit.

"Creation of a superpower in the heart of Europe is not a neutral concern for the future of a whole Europe," said Polish deputy goverment spokesman Henryk Wozniakowski.

"Certainly Poland is now looking more seriously on the possibility" of German reunification, he said.

Wozniakowski said Poland recognizes the sovereign rights of both German states, "but the question of reunification is not just a German question. It is also a European question," he said.

Events in history of Berlin Wall listed

BERLIN (AP) — A chronology of the Berlin Wall, erected 28 years ago at the height of Cold War tensions:

Aug. 13, 1961 — East German troops move to seal all access to West Berlin after a mass exodus of hundreds of thousands of East Germans threatens to ruin the economy.

In the following days, barbed wire is replaced by concrete barriers. Houses along the border are sealed. Border guards are issued shoot-to-kill orders for all those trying to flee. West Berlin is encircled and isolated from the West.

June 26, 1963 — President Kennedy visits West Berlin. In a show of solidarity with the divided city, he declares to a cheering crowd of 400,000 at the wall: "I am a Berliner."

June 12, 1987 — President Reagan visits West Berlin and calls on Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev to tear the wall down.

March 8, 1989 — The last fatality related to an escape attempt over the Berlin Wall is recorded. An East Berlin man falls to his death after his homemade hot-air balloon deflates prematurely. A total of 80 East Germans have been reported killed trying to flee over the wall since 1961.

Oct. 18, 1989 — Hard-line leader Erich Honecker, who supervised the building of the Wall, is replaced after an unprecendented wave of unrest and the exodus of thousands of citizens.

Nov. 3, 1989 — In the first direct challenge to the wall's purpose, East Berlin announces that East Germans who want to flee West can do so over the Czechoslovak border. Tens of thousands do so.

Nov. 9, 1989 — The Communist leadership declares that citizens can travel directly to West Germany through East German checkpoints with proper documentation. Thousands of East Berliners make their way to the Berlin Wall. Officials waive the requirement for visas and thousands stream over to West Berlin for a night of celebration.

Berliners from both East and West crowd in front of the Brandenburg Tor (Brandenburg Gate), part of the Berlin Wall which divides the city between East and West Germany, Thursday night. The revelers were celebrating the opening of the East German border announced by that nation's Communist government just hours before.

East Berliner gets first taste of West Germany

BERLIN (AP) — Torsten Ryl had been a Berliner all 24 years of his life. But until early today, he had never seen the other half of the divided city.

Suddenly, all it took was a flash of his identity card.

"At the stroke of midnight, they told us, 'The procedure has been shortened, and all you need is a stamp,' " said Ryl, a waiter, still awestruck at his sudden crossing into the West through Checkpoint Charlie.

"It's not my intention to stay here, but we have to have the possibility to come over here and go back again," Ryl said. "I have my apartment and my car over there."

A middle-aged West German reached over, gave him 20 marks ($11) and said with a grin: "Why don't you go get yourself a beer first?"

In what seemed like a fantasy, thousands of Berliners today strolled through the other half of the city where Communist East Germany had denied them free passage for 28 years.

Helmut and Katarina Erdmann said they briefly left their three sleeping children at home in East Berlin.

"We just wanted to go for a stroll," Helmut Erdmann said. "It's crazy."

West Berliners also crossed eastward. Germans from both sides held impromptu dances atop the wall, hoisting people up from both sides to join them.

Thomas Moll said he was allowed to cross into West Berlin in less than five minutes.

"I just can't believe it," he said. "A lot of people thought it was just another trick."

Moll, 21, said he also intended to return home after having a look around West Berlin.

He reluctantly gave his name to reporters. "You're not from Stasi, are you?" he asked, referring to the East German state security service.

It seemed as if each East Berliner who crossed the demarcation line was greeted with cheers — many by hugs and kisses — by the crowd at Checkpoint Charlie.

Traffic jams built up on the western side of the checkpoint, and people with sparklers and champagne bottles streamed out of the Kochstrasse subway stop on the West Berlin side to join the party.

Thousands celebrated on the Kurfuerstendamm, a boulevard in West Berlin's upscale shopping district.

East German Trabant cars were welcomed by cheers and honking horns as they slowly wended their way down the boulevard, which for one night was the scene of the wildest celebrations since the Berlin Wall was born in the Cold War.

"This is a historic day!" one man yelled. "We're going to be able to tell our children about this!"

WORLD IN BRIEF

Contras reject Sandinista offer

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — A Nicaraguan rebel leader today spurned a government proposal for his forces to disband and instead vowed at the first peace talks in 16 months to "put an end' to the regime in Managua.

Chief Contra negotiator Enrique Bermudez, just before heading into the second day of talks today, said he had reason to "doubt the sincerity" of the Sandinista offer of a truce and amnesty.

Bermudez said the Sandinistas did not offer a true amnesty but merely offered to release political prisoners from jail, stopping short of restoring their civil and political rights.

Talks between the U.S.-backed Contra rebels and the Sandinista government opened Thursday. Nicaragua's foreign minister said before the talks that if the rebels agreed to demobilize, his government would meet their demands for a truce and amnesty.

The Contras countered with a plan to restore the cease-fire with the government, which was called off last week, and discuss other conditions — such as demobilization — later.

Bulgarian leader resigns

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Communist Party leader Todor Zhivkov today stepped down after 34 years in power, longer than any Eastern European leader, in the latest upheaval to rock the East bloc.

Zhivkov also resigned from the ruling Poliburo, and the party's policy-setting Central Committee proposed he be relieved of his post as state president, the official BTA news agency said.

BTA said Zhivkov, who molded Bulgaria into one of the Kremlin's most loyal modern allies, was replaced by Foreign Minister Petar Mladenov.

Mladenov, 53, has been foreign minister since 1971 and is considered more open to reform than Zhivkov.

Game show host off ballot

BRASILIA, Brazil (AP) — A popular TV game show host who appeared tied for the lead in Brazil's presidential race lost his chance when an electoral court ruled he violated election guidelines and could not be on the ballot.

The decision Thursday by the Supreme Electoral Tribunal ended the nine-day candidacy of Silvio Santos, whose late entry into the race rocked Brazil's first free presidential vote since 1960.

It came the same day a Gallup poll was published showing Santos virtually tied for the lead with center-rightist candidate Fernando Collor de Mello. The poll showed Santos had 21.6 percent of the vote.

News reports speculated that President Jose Sarney engineered Santos' entry into the race to undermine Collor de Mello, who has tried to distance himself from the highly unpopular government and create an image as a fighter of corruption.

Sarney, who is not a candidate in the Wednesday's election, denied it.
