Now, sandwiches

WASHINGTON — The consumer group that attacked movie popcorn and many Chinese, Italian and Mexican restaurant dishes is now targeting tuna salad and chicken salad sandwiches. Just when you thought they were a dieter's salvation. But the consumer group, Center for Science in the Public Interest, says most tuna salad sandwiches bought at restaurants contain as much fat as three Quarter-Pounder hamburgers from McDonald's. And most chicken salad sandwiches are nearly as bad, the group added. Page 7A

Basin routes I-27 extension plans to state

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Members of the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTRAN) on Tuesday presented to the Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) reasons why the proposed Interstate 27 extension should pass through the area.

The meeting was one of five in the first phase of a study to investigate and evaluate the best route for the I-27 extension. Meetings also will be conducted in Abilene, Lubbock, Amarillo and San Angelo.

Peggy Thurin, project manager for TxDOT, said the state and HDR Engineering Inc., the Dallas company doing the study, are conducting the round of meetings to get input from communities that might be affected by the extension.

Will Hagood, study director for HDR Engineering, said the company's goal was to finish the project within the next 20 months. The first phase of the study included identifying roadway corridors — three south of Lubbock and two north of Amarillo — assessing freeway feasibility and selecting preferred corridors. The second phase includes developing routes within the corridors and prioritizing construction projects.

If freeway-construction feasibility is not found, the study will look at upgrading current freeways and highways, Hagood said.

About 120 MOTRAN representatives, city and county officials and area residents were present to hear arguments for bringing the extension from Amarillo through

Gunman kills 4 in robbery of post office

■ All victims are thought to be employees; no suspect are in police custody.

Associated Press

MONTCLAIR, N.J. — An after-hours hold-up at a post office in a New York City suburb on Tuesday left four people dead and another person critically wounded.

No suspects were in custody.

Police said at least four men were killed at the post office in the Watchung Plaza shopping district near a New Jersey Transit train station.

All the victims were thought to be postal employees because the holdup occurred just before 5 p.m., nearly an hour after closing, Essex County Prosecutor Clifford Minor said.

Police were called by a postal worker who entered the Upper Montclair post office and saw a body on the floor. He left and called police. They arrived to find the attacker or attackers gone.

Howard Finney told WCBS Radio that he got off a commuter train and saw police with weapons drawn around the nearby post office.

He said he watched as police knocked down the front door of the post office around 5:15 p.m. A few minutes later, he said, about 10 people left the post office or an adjacent doorway and were rushed down the street by authorities.

He said one of the wounded was brought out on a stretcher about a half-hour later, carried to a nearby playground and then evacuated by helicopter.

A spokeswoman for University Hospital in Newark said a 44-year-old man was in critical condition with two gunshot wounds to the head.

School schedule mix draws concerns

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

An MISD committee meeting Tuesday on accelerated block scheduling drew the attention of about 20 parents who have concerns about the concept.

A group of parents brought a document, listing their concerns, to the District Education Improvement Committee (DEIC). The committee consists of parents and teachers from each campus in Midland Independent School District. At each school, there are Campus Education Improvement Committees that meet to improve academics and programs.

The DEIC met, in part, to discuss a proposal to restructure the high school class day by using the accelerated block for grades nine through 12. After the State Board of Education (SBOE) recommended students graduate with 24 credits, campus principals began looking at ways to work in more credit hours. A January 1992 SBOE-appointed task force recommended that "the high school daily schedule be wholly instructional in design and flexible enough to accommodate the diverse instructional and personal needs of students."

Local high school campus-level committees found that "the traditional six- or seven-period day involves frequent class

Jurors to begin deliberations in Zachery case assault trial

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Jurors are scheduled to begin deliberating today in the aggravated assault trial of Donald Jackson, who is accused of helping beat former professional football player James Zachery during the assault that led to his death.

Jackson was indicted on charges of aggravated assault in connection with the Jan. 25, 1994, death of Zachery.

Duann Dewayne Stewart was convicted in August with voluntary manslaughter in the death. Jackson and Stewart's mother, Mabel Stewart, were both charged with helping Stewart assault Zachery.

Zachery was assaulted in the early morning hours in the 1300 block of East Industrial Road. Autopsy results indicated he died as a result of blunt trauma to the head.

Testimony Tuesday centered around a convicted drug dealer and the police investigator who worked on the case.

Police swoop down on sect in hunt for subway terrorists

TOKYO (AP) — In a dramatic dawn strike two days after a deadly nerve-gas attack on Tokyo's subway system, thousands of police nationwide swooped down today on facilities of a secretive religious group accused of making poison gas in the past.

Some officers carried canaries, apparently hoping that any toxic fumes would kill the birds first and warn police.

More than 2,500 police wearing riot gear and special protective clothing raided at least 25 of the Aum Shinri Kyo's facilities in Tokyo and other parts of Japan. Police encountered little serious resistance.

Authorities surrounded the group's five-story Tokyo headquarters at about 6:15 a.m. in a quiet, partly commercial neighborhood of Tokyo. There were scuffles as officers pulled some sect members from the building, some shoeless.

Police overran the group's national headquarters at a rural commune, also with only token resistance.

Poisoning revives horrors for earlier victims

By Andrew Pollack
N.Y. Times News Service

MATSUMOTO, Japan — Dr. Hiroshi Morita, an assistant professor of medicine at Shinshu University here, saw the television reports about people collapsing in the Tokyo subways Monday morning and immediately suspected what was wrong.

Even before police had reached their conclusion, Morita was on the phone to Tokyo hospitals suggesting treatments for exposure to a deadly nerve gas — sarin.

Morita knew because he is one of the few doctors in Japan with experience in treating people affected by the gas, which was first developed in Nazi Germany.

Shortly before midnight last June 27, sarin from an unknown source wafted through a residential neighborhood in this picturesque mountain town, killing 7 people, leaving 44 in hospitals and injuring dozens of others.

For many here, the poison gas attack in Tokyo has revived the horrors of an experience they had been trying to put behind them. And the eerie similarities between the two cases have raised speculation that the same party might be responsible for the attacks.

"I'd hate to think there would be more than one group that would dare to commit such a dangerous and foolish crime," said Hiroshi Kato, a chemistry professor at Shinshu University who helped investigate the Matsumoto case.

The use of sarin, which was thought to be unavailable in Japan and which Kato said would probably take an organic chemist with a graduate degree to synthesize, is not the only similarity. In both cases the motive was unclear and the murders were indiscriminate.

In both cases the police have been unable to identify the perpetrators.

The popular hypothesis here now, unsupported by any evidence, is that the incident here last June was perhaps a dry run in the production of sarin for some subsequent use, such as the attack in Tokyo.

AP Laserphoto

A resident in Matsumoto, Japan, is loaded into an ambulance after allegedly being poisoned by nerve gas in this June 28, 1994 photo. Seven people in the city were killed by the deadly gas.

Police officials in Matsumoto responsible for the investigation could not be reached for comment today, because Japan is celebrating a national holiday marking the beginning of spring. Investigators here and in Tokyo have not said anything about a link.

But the authorities, though surely not telling all they know, have previously said they were not making much progress, though at one time they had more than 300 investigators on the case.

Not every resident thinks the two cases are the work of the same people. Another mystery is why sarin, which is so toxic that even a minuscule drop can be lethal, caused only eight deaths in Tokyo, where it was placed in crowded and enclosed subway cars.

That was only one more death than here in Matsumoto, where the gas wafted through the open air over a distance of tens or hundreds of feet.

Kato said the sarin used in the Tokyo subways seemed to be much more diluted, perhaps so the culprits could carry it without risking instant death if a drop leaked out.

In Matsumoto, he surmised, the culprit was able to mix two different chemicals together to form sarin just before its release, something that would have been impossible to do in a train without attracting attention.

In terms of setting, there is little in common between giant Tokyo and idyllic Matsumoto, about three hours away by train. This mountain resort of 200,000 people is known mostly for its 400-year-old castle and for a three-year old music festival organized by the conductor Seiji Ozawa that has given the town the pretensions of being the Tanglewood of Japan. The surrounding snow-capped mountains will be the site of the 1998 Winter Olympics.

By tracking dead vegetation, investigators determined that the fumes came from a pond behind the home of Yoshiyuki Konou, whose spacious traditional wooden house and garden stand incongruously in the midst of concrete apartment buildings.

Kouno was the first person to call for help last June and spent a month in the hospital recovering from the effects of th gas.

He immediately became a prime suspect. Police officers searched his home and found what they called a veritable treasure trove of chemicals, including a form of cyanide. It was also discovered that Kouno had once worked in the manufacturing and sales of chemicals.

But after leaving the hospital and being questioned by police officers, Kouno, 45, held a news conference to proclaim his innocence. He subsequently sued the local newspaper for defaming him. Police officers have never charged him.

The World in brief

■ Bosnia continues slide toward all-out war

ZAGREB, Croatia — Serbian forces Tuesday shelled the northern Bosnian town of Tuzla and stole weapons from United Nations peacekeepers near Sarajevo as Bosnia continued its slide toward a renewal of all- out war.

Chris Gunness, a spokesman for the United Nations forces here, said six shells landed on Tuzla Tuesday and 50 on the nearby airfield. There were no immediate reports of casualties, but a Norwegian doctor in Tuzla informed the United Nations that 26 Bosnian soldiers were killed on Monday by a Serbian shell that slammed into the main Bosnian army barracks in the town.

The Serbian shelling came in response to a Bosnian offensive on Mount Majevica northeast of Tuzla, the location of a strategically important Serbian communications tower. The offensive continued Tuesday morning, with just over 500 detonations reported, but eased off during the afternoon, United Nations officials said.

■ Philippine president calls for 'sanity, sobriety'

MANILA — President Fidel V. Ramos appealed to the nation Tuesday for "sanity and sobriety" as outraged Filipinos stepped up protests across the country over the execution last week of a Filipino maid in Singapore.

The protests have alarmed the Singapore government, which Tuesday issued a formal protest over the burning of its flags here. Singapore has urged its citizens to avoid travel to the Philippines.

The execution of Flor Contemplacion, who was convicted in Singapore of the murder of another Filipino maid and a 4-year-old Singaporean child, has stirred up the most emotional public debate in the Philippines in years, with Mrs. Contemplacion portrayed as a martyr to the cause of migrant workers' rights. Nearly 75,000 Filipinos work in Singapore, most as household maids or in other menial jobs.

Mrs. Contemplacion was hangeddespite appeals from Ramos, who asked for a delay in the execution in light of new testimony.

■ Chechens claim to execute Russian pilot

GROZNY, Russia — Chechen forces claimed to have executed a Russian air force pilot Tuesday for carrying out bombing raids on the breakaway republic.

The Interfax news agency quoted the chief of Chechnya's information service, Movladi Udugov, as saying Nikolai Bairov was sentenced to death for bombing the town of Shali.

The report did not say when or how the pilot had been captured.

The Russian military could not immediately be reached for comment.

Udugov said the commanders of two Russian air force units also were sentenced to death in absentia for ordering airstrikes on residential areas, according to Interfax.

Shali, located 16 miles southeast of the Chechen capital of Grozny, is one of the remaining strongholds of fighters loyal to Chechen President Dzhokhar Dudayev.

Russian planes and artillery struck Shali on Monday night and Tuesday, as well as Argun, Gudermes and several other villages.

Women call for empowerment at U.N. conference

■ With governments strapped for cash, some predict difficult fight for commitments, funding for draft agenda.

Associated Press

UNITED NATIONS — In Manila's shantytowns, Dr. Guy Estrada helps vaccinate women who earn a living picking through trash. In Nigerian towns, Dr. Adepeju Olukoya teaches women to run pharmacies and diagnose diseases.

But Estrada and Olukoya say their efforts are not enough.

They and 2,500 others, at a meeting to prepare for the September World Conference on Women, want commitments and funding for the U.N. draft agenda that calls for gender equality in health, education and politics.

With governments strapped for cash, the doctors predict a difficult fight.

"When you have words and no commitment behind it, it remains words," said Olukoya, a representative of the Women's Health Coalition of Nigeria.

In a speech to delegates, U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali said: "We must prove the critics wrong when they claim that the international community has neither the means nor the will to advance the situation of women worldwide."

The preparatory meeting opened in controversy last week, with the Vatican trying to bar four groups that favor abortion rights and China attempting to block several Tibetan and Taiwanese groups from the conference.

A U.N. commission agreed late Monday to accredit the abortion rights groups, Catholics for a Free Choice, USA, and its three sister organizations in Latin America, but is still reviewing the status of the Tibetan and Taiwanese organizations.

The conference in Beijing will be the fourth world meeting on women since 1975 and the second major U.N. conference this year. The Beijing meeting is expected to draw 1,300 advocacy groups and 25,000 representatives from 100 countries.

With women's issues at the top of political agendas across the world, some observers say it may be easier to find funding and commitments than it was at the recent poverty summit, which closed with a non-binding plan.

"While there will be some criticism that this is just a U.N. circus ... it will be much harder to sweep issues of women's equality under the rug in the United States," said Jeffrey Laurenti, an analyst with the United Nations Association of the United States.

The Beijing meeting follows last year's population conference in Cairo, where countries agreed to a plan urging rich nations to contribute $5.7 billion by 2000 toward family planning, reproductive health and AIDS prevention.

The draft agenda for the Beijing conference calls for increasing the role of women in government, eliminating wage inequalities and boosting their educational opportunities. It calls for more funding but does not set targets for nations.

Estrada, the Filipino doctor, says the conference should at least demand that governments impose legislation protecting women's rights.

Gunman in Mexican assassination gets maximum 50-year sentence

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The man who fired the gun that killed a top official in Mexico's ruling party has been sentenced to the maximum 50 years in prison.

Daniel Aguilar Trevino was sentenced Monday in the Sept. 28, 1994, assassination of Jose Francisco Ruiz Massieu, secretary-general of the Institutional Revolutionary Party, or PRI.

Six others convicted in connection with the murder outside a Mexico City hotel were sentenced to prison terms ranging from 37 to 50 years.

The killing was one of three high-profile assassinations that have rocked Mexico. Investigations into the other two — the March 1994 slaying of presidential candidate Luis Donaldo Colosio and the May 1993 killing of Cardinal Juan Jesus Posadas Ocampo — remain open.

Ruiz Massiue's killing was highlighted again last month when the Attorney General's Office arrested the brother of former President Carlos Salinas de Gortari and charged him with being the mastermind.

Raul Salinas, 48, is being held in a prison outside Mexico City and has not yet been tried. The ex-president has not been implicated.

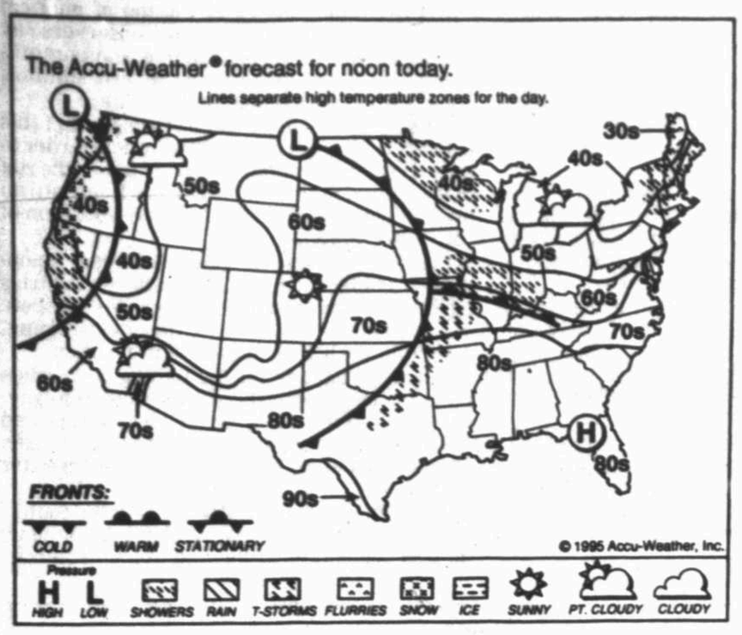
WEATHER WATCH



We're talking record highs

Staff Report

The Permian Basin's unusually high temperatures increased enough to break the record high on Tuesday.

Tuesday's daytime high reached 92, 5 degrees higher than the previous record set in 1934, according to the National Weather Service.

A NWS spokesman said the warm weather is due to strong southwest winds and an upper-level high that has settled above the area.

A cold front is forecasted to move through the area later in the week, returning tempertures to about normal for this time of year, the spokesman said. The normal high for March is 73; the normal low is 42.

Today's high should reach into the upper 80s under partly cloudy skies, with west to southwest winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be fair with a low in the mid-50s.

Thursday should be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-80s.

Tuesday's overnight low was 49, compared to the record of 25 set in 1989.

STATE

The first full day of spring felt more like summer. Most of Texas enjoyed sunshine Tuesday as temperatures in some locations warmed into the 90s, breaking records in West Texas.

The temperature at the Midland International Airport reached 92 degrees, breaking the 1934 record of 87 degrees. Lubbock's 90 tied the previous record set in 1916. At 3 p.m., readings ranged from 74 degrees in Greenville to 95 in Childress, Sanderson and Laredo.

A high pressure ridge slowly leaving brought Gulf moisture up throughout the eastern two-thirds of Texas.

Winds were from the south to southeast at 10 to 20 miles an hour with gusts reported as high as 27 miles an hour at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport.

NATION

Stiff wind blew across much of the West on Tuesday as a large storm scattered snow and rain over the region, and a line of showers passed across the East Coast states.

The unsettled weather in the West was generated by a low off the coast and a cold front from southern California through the Great Basin into southeastern Montana.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

SECT: Police appear to be exercising restraint

(From 1A)

the group with kid gloves. They refused to link the raids directly to the nerve-gas attack, instead citing the unsolved kidnapping of a public official.

Police appeared to be exercising restraint in order not to upset the group, which has complained bitterly in the past about rough treatment. Police even entered the building through the basement at the group's request.

The group has denied involvement in the attack Monday, in which a poison gas identified police as sarin was released simultaneously in several downtown Tokyo subway stations and cars.

Eight people were killed and nearly 5,000 people injured. About 700 people remained hospitalized, 75 of them in critical condition.

In the raid Wednesday on the group's facilities in rural Kamikuishiki, about 68 miles from Tokyo, about 1,200 police in full riot gear raided the group's compound.

The police assembled in waves and marched in with protective shields held high. One officer carried a canary, whose higher metabolism would make it more susceptible than humans to toxic gases.

Officers scuffled with some group members, but two hours after the start of the operation were clearly in control of the site. An unknown number of the group's members were being held inside.

Other facilities searched included sites in Tokyo and Fujinomiya in Shizuoka prefecture 75 miles west of the capital. Police wore gas masks in the search at Kotoku and Yamanashi.

At the Tokyo headquarters, some sect members gathered outside during the raid. "It's unfair!" they shouted. Group members took photos every time police touched a group member as they led them from the building.

Across town at another main Aum building, some onlookers seemed to be glad police were moving in.

"These cult people are scary. When you come to a neighborhood, you're expected to contribute something. They certainly haven't done that, unless you count making us all afraid a contribution," said Tsutomu Takahashi, a retired neighborhood resident who was watching the activities.

There was still no known motive, no claim of responsibility and no arrests in the attack Monday, one of the worst terrorist episodes in Japan. But authorities were said to have a suspect: a man eyewitneses said planted one of the deadly parcels before being overcome by its fumes.

The unidentified man was hospitalized and investigators were waiting until he recovered sufficiently to be questioned, Japanese newspaper and television reports said. Police would not comment.

The three central Tokyo subway lines contaminated in the attack resumed full operation Tuesday after military chemical-warfare experts in masks and protective clothing sprayed chemicals in cars and platforms to neutralize the gas. Police said the substance was deadly sarin gas.

Riders were resigned to having to use the train Wednesday, even if they were still frightened.

"The subway is scary, but we have no other means of transportation," 42-year-old passenger Hideyuki Tanaka said Tuesday.

In Tokyo, few people can get around without trains. Private cars are uncommon, and most workers are reimbursed for train commuting expenses.

In the subways, white signs about one foot wide and two feet long bore bold red or black lettering urging riders to be on the lookout for suspicious packages.

"We hereby express our condolences to the victims and our sympathy to those who were injured," read other signs at the hard-hit Tsukiji subway station.

All trash cans were removed from 148 stations because of fears of another attack. The stepped-up security extended to Tokyo airport, where announcements every half hour appealed to passengers to inform police of any suspicious objects or people.

Bookstores reported strong sales of a 1991 British novel, translated into Japanese, whose plot was eerily similar to Monday's attack. In the book, "Deadly Perfume," terrorists discuss spreading anthrax, a deadly bacteria, in the London and Paris subway systems.

And real-life developments did not lack for intrigue. Newspapers reported trading in the stock of a company that has a monopoly on gas mask manufacturing in Japan was 100 times above average on Thursday and Friday, the two trading days before the nerve-gas attack.

A spokesman for the company, Shigematsu Works, called the trading "visibly unnatural" and was at a loss to explain it.

More mystery surrounded Aum Shinri Kyo, which denied again Tuesday it was involved in the attack. The group has been linked in news reports to several unexplained releases of irritating gases near its facilities and to several unsolved kidnappings.

The Buddhist sect, which claims 10,000 members in Japan, accused the government of carrying out the subway attack as part of a plot to blame the group and then suppress it.

News reports Tuesday said investigators found a chemical in an affected station that was a byproduct made when sarin gas is formed.

The same byproduct was also found in the town of Matsumoto, where seven people died in a mysterious poisoning in 1994, and in Kamikuishiki, a village in Yamanashi prefecture where the sect has a commune, Yomiuri newspaper reported.

Police would not comment on the reports, saying they have not completed their analysis of the materials from the different locations.

MIX: Accelerated block scheduling stirs concern changes and time lost, multiple preparations for teachers, and little opportunity for interdisciplinary work (where teachers work together to teach ideas across different subjects). Such a structure tends to discourage using a variety of learning activities," according to the report.

The proposed accelerated block schedule that the DEIC is examining calls for a school day consisting of four 90-minute blocks beginning at 8:40 a.m. and ending at 3:40 p.m. With the schedule, students earn what has traditionally been a year's credit in 18 weeks and what has been a semester's credit in nine weeks. This means students could earn up to 32 credits upon high school graduation rather than the 22 credits the current schedule easily accommodates.

Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. said the state requires students to amass 21 credits. MISD policy however, requires students to earn 22 credits. "We require an extra 1/2 credit of government, and 1/2 credit of an elective be earned," Baressi said.

The superintendent said in the Class of 1994, 157 students earned 22 credits, 148 students earned 23 credits, 202 earned 24, 210 earned 25, and 145 earned 26 credits. Some students earned up to 34 credits in that graduating class.

Larry Lusby, executive director of computer services, said that all 1/2 credits were rounded up in the 1994 report on credits earned.

Although the majority of parents and teachers serving on the Campus Improvement Committees at the freshman and senior high schools have approved of the accelerated block schedule, some parents have said all the issues aren't being dealt with.

Parents involved in producing the document "A Discussion of the Issues of the Accelerated Block" include Mike and Cathie Seibold, Frank Hanel, Renne Baer, Larry Goodwin, Michelle and Roger Edelbrock, Jan Robinson, and Brit and Pat Meadows.

Siebold, who is also a DEIC member, encouraged fellow committee members to look over the report and consider the pros and cons of accelerated block scheduling.

The parents raised concerns that fine arts and athletic programs will suffer and transfer students will be put in a bind under the proposed schedule.

LHS Principal George Cooper said classes can meet daily under the double blocking plan.

The parents' document said Lubbock Coronado High School puts all band and choir students into double blocks. "This reduces the electives available to those students," according to the document. It further stated that Pampa High School athletic students meet every day, splitting their class time up by 45 minutes of class instruction and 45 minutes of study hall (mandatory for all in the Pampa athletics program).

"This results in wasted class time," Seibold said. Other parents pointed out that University Interscholastic League rules limit the amount of time athletes and musicians can practice.

Lee Freshman High School Principal Dan Green said that although students can practice music only60 minutes daily under UIL rules, they could spend the remaining 30 minutes in a block schedule "doing other activities, like studying music theory."

Baressi said it would be the responsibility of campus principals to see that there is "no wasted class time."

One of the drawbacks of the principals' "Joint Proposal for High School Restructure with the Accelerated Block," is that it comes with a $1 million price tag, primarily to pay more teachers to teach the additional subjects to be offered. Baressi asked principals to figure out a way to offer the accelerated block without asking for more money, since junior high schools changed their daily schedule with no more money, and trustees are looking at a tight budget this year.

The DEIC members will examine both the joint CEICs' proposal and the parents' report before their next meeting. The DEIC can make a recommendation to the MISD board of trustees, which will make any decisions concerning changes in the school day. Baressi said there would be at least two community meetings before any decisions are made.

"Our goal is to do the very best we can, in our educational setting, for all of our students in Midland," Cooper said. "Some things are going well (at the high schools) that don't need to be improved ... We are hoping to give students more opportunities for academic diversity ... We are not interested in doing anything negative or in taking a step backwards."

ROUTES: Officials lay logic of route through basin

(From 1A)

Lubbock, through the Midland/Odessa area and McCamey to intersect with Interstate 20.

MOTRAN Chairman Charles Perry presented TxDOT and the HDR representatives with a binder containing 249 letters and petitions supporting the extension through the Midland/Odessa area.

"We believe that this is the shortest and most economic route," he said. "We have strong public support and we feel it would play a significant role in Texas/Mexico trade."

Ray Perryman, president of the Perryman Group, called the proposed extension the "spine of a critical corridor for trade with Mexico."

"The link of western Mexico with West Texas through the Odessa-Midland area to Interstate 35 becomes an essential stop in opening Pacific trade to Texas in a unique and highly effective manner," Perryman said. "The implications reach far beyond Mexico and, in fact, extend to the rapidly emerging markets of East Asia and the Pacific Rim."

Connecting three of the largest Metropolitan Statistical Areas (MSAs) in West Texas was one of the reasons cited for bringing the extension through Midland and Odessa, said Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman.

"This is the shortest route to Lubbock and connects Odessa/Midland, Lubbock and Amarillo, the largest MSAs in West Texas," she said. "And, it connects three of the major airports."

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns said bringing the extension through the area has united the two cities.

"We decided to work as a team to bring this extension through," he said. "Working separately, as the two cities have in the past, would not have worked."

Also voicing support for an extension through Midland and Odessa that would possibly lead to Chihuahua, Mexico, was Salvador H. Avila, director for Industrial Planning and Regional Development for the state of Chihuahua.

"Chihuahua has become a highly industrialized state in the past several years," he said. "One hundred of the Fortune 500 companies have opened offices in the state."

He said West Texas and Mexico should look at themselves as one region in order to compete on a global scale.

"It is a natural partnership," he said. "With research on one side and the production on the other, this region can compete globally."

TRIAL: Zachery case assault trial goes to jurors

(From 1A)

Terry Stewart, who recently was released from federal prison after serving time for violating his supervised release on a drug trafficking offense, testified he saw Donald Jackson kick Zachery while he was down.

However, that testimony was late in coming from Stewart.

Stewart testified, at first, that he was a passenger in a passing car and only saw Jackson going through Zachery's pockets. He said he couldn't remember if he saw Jackson kick Zachery.

Evidence in the case indicates that Zachery was involved in a drug transaction that soured between Duann Stewart and himself. Testimony showed Zachery took some drugs from the man without paying and Duann Stewart pursued him after asking his mother and Jackson to help.

Stewart later returned to the stand and testified he had not told the truth because he was scared he may be harmed because of his testimony.

He claimed a woman, a friend of Mrs. Stewart, told him three days ago that "something bad" would happen if he testified against Jackson.

"I don't want to be going to work one day and look up seeing somebody shoot me," he said.

Defense attorney John Cook, calling Stewart on his false testimony, said Stewart was "a thief, a dope dealer and a liar."

Stewart didn't deny the characterization and admitted he had been convicted for stealing and drug trafficking. He said he couldn't remember what happened the night of Zachery's death , even though he did.

Also testifying was Harold Thomas, who found Zachery following the assault. He said he saw three people running from the scene and then found Zachery. He said Zachery's face was bruised, covered in blood, he had knots on him and was pleading for help.

Defense attorneys Cook and Ian Cantacuzene tried to implicate Stewart and another individual with the assault because of witness' statements to police and from the victim himself, who named a man who police cleared of the crime.

Midland County District Attorney Al Schorre said the defense was "chasing rabbit trails" with their implications that others were involved in the crime.

Midland Police Detective John Ingram said there was not enough evidence to indict Stewart, although he was arrested in connection with the crime. He said the other man that the defense claims participated in the assault was also cleared.

Ingram said officers called him about the assault, but was told there appeared to be no urgency in interviewing Zachery. Not much later he was called and told that Zachery had died.

The detective also said that when Duann Stewart was interviewed about the case he said Jackson did not participate in the assault.

Cantacuzene asked the detective if it were possible that Stewart, Mrs. Stewart and Jackson left Zachery, but he was later killed by someone else. Ingram said it was possible.

The jury was dismissed early while the attorneys and judge met in a charge conference to determine what the jury would deliberate with. The jury will return this morning to render a verdict.

Jackson remains in the custody of the Midland County Detention Center.

ROBBERY: 4 die in post office holdup

(From 1A)

Bill Murphy, 25, an employee at Watchung Booksellers a few stores down from the post office, said he heard what may have been three shots.

"I didn't know what they were. I thought it was a car backfiring. Then someone came in and told us what happened," he said.

A crowd quickly gathered on the street, he said.

"People were crying afterward," he said.

Children and parents in a doctor's office next to the post office were kept inside by police for safety in the aftermath of the shooting. When they were allowed to leave, some ran screaming from the office, giving rise to rumors that they had been hostages.

Postal inspector Peggy Hagar confirmed the deaths but would not comment on the circumstances of the shooting.

The post office where shootings occurred is a satellite to the main post office, which this month put in bullet-proof glass to protect its workers.

Montclair, about 15 miles west of New York City, is a mixed-income community of about 38,000 residents. Many people use the post office as a bank to cash checks and utility bills, so money is often on hand.

In 1991, a fired postal worker killed a former supervisor and her boyfriend in New Jersey at their home in Wayne — 15 miles north of Montclair — then went to the Ridgewood post office where he killed two mail handlers as they arrived for work. Joseph M. Harris surrendered after a 4 1/2-hour standoff with police.

Interest needed in political races

If you've ever complained about the elected officials for the city of Midland, Midland Independent School District (MISD) or Greenwood Independent School District (GISD), now is your opportunity to "do something" about it. Filing deadline for the May 6 elections in all those governmental entities is 5 p.m. today and so far, interest in the several positions that will be up for grabs is minimal at best.

Two incumbents on the Midland City Council — Pat Schneider in District 1 and Juluis Brooks in District 2 — were unopposed for re-election earlier this week while incumbent Councilman Jose Cuevas is seeking re-election to one of two at-large positions on the council, along with Dale Brown and Tom Dollahite. Councilman Bill Morrow is not seeking re-election to his at-large council position.

Two positions also will be open on the MISD board — Place 1 held by James Fuller and Place 7 held by Michael Dobey. Yet, as of early this week, only the incumbents had filed for election.

And at Greenwood, only Place 2 incumbent Johnny Womack had indicated he would seek re-election. The Place 1 seat on the GISD board now held by Tim Outlaw also will be up for election.

The elections that are fast approaching are arguably the most important to Midland and Greenwood residents because the officials who will be elected in May help to guide the course of the city and the local school districts. As such, the officials who are selected by voters are truly expected to carry out the wishes of the local electorate and are most directly answerable to voters.

However, all Americans like a choice whether they are buying a new automobile, something to eat or electing a local officeholder. When there is only one candidate for each local political office, voters are deprived of that choice and our political system suffers from lack of interest.

We hope more individuals choose to offer themselves for these important elective offices. It will make local government better — and that, after all, is the end result we are all seeking.

ANOTHER VIEW

This was a fine spring in Ireland 150 years ago. By summer, farmers were forecasting an abundant potato crop of "the most luxuriant character." But in September came the first reports of a disease that could blacken crops overnight and putrefy an entire field within days. Ireland's 8 million people were overwhelmingly reliant on potatoes.

So began the Great Famine, a catastrophe that devastated Ireland, shamed England, and profoundly affected the United States. Not until 1849 did the disease abate. By then as many as 1 million Irish had died of hunger or disease, and an equal number had fled, mostly to the United States and Canada.

Yet like some famines in our time, Ireland's was not simply an act of God. Its horrors were deepened by meanness and ideology, and its bitter legacy can still be discerned.

Irish migrants packed vessels like those used by slavers on the middle passage, often arriving half-starved and infected with fever. By 1850, the U.S. Census reported that one out of four New Yorkers had been born in Ireland, or 133,000 out of 513,000, and similar upsurges were recorded in Boston, Philadelphia, and Baltimore. The newcomers' muscle sent railway tracks westward, tunneled mines and dug sewers.

For which they often got no thanks from Protestant natives who saw the Roman Catholics as unassimilable, even menacing. The Irish migration inspired a flourishing Know-Nothing political party, seeking anti-immigrant measures with the same zeal found in current campaigns to deny schools and health care to immigrant children.

The dominant official view in London was that importing cheap food would subvert the free market and prolong the suffering. Little was done as tens of thousands perished each month.

A legacy of the Great Hunger was a new revolutionary group, the Fenians, ancestor of the Irish Republican Army. The popular memory of the famine still contributes to the passions that divide England and Ireland, Protestants and Catholics — the last embers of a human rights catastrophe left unattended 150 years ago.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Wednesday, March 22, the 81st day of 1995. There are 284 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

One hundred years ago, on March 22, 1895, Auguste and Louis Lumiere showed their first movie to an invited audience in Paris; this is generally regarded as the first public display of a movie projected onto a screen. (The film showed workers exiting the Lumiere factory.)

On this date:

In 1765, Britain enacted the Stamp Act to raise money from the American colonies. (The act was repealed the following year.)

In 1794, Congress passed a law prohibiting American vessels from supplying slaves to other countries.

In 1820, U.S. naval hero Stephen Decatur was killed in a duel with Commodore James Barron near Washington, D.C.

In 1882, Congress outlawed polygamy.

In 1894, hockey's first Stanley Cup championship game was played; the home team Montreal Amateur Athletic Association defeated the Ottawa Capitals 3-1.

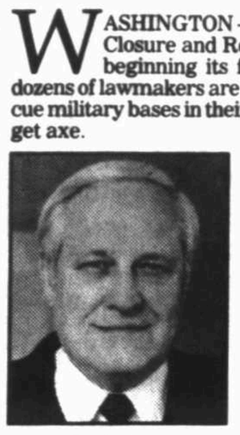
Senators take aim at base in own state

WASHINGTON — With the Defense Base Closure and Realignment Commission beginning its final round of cutbacks, dozens of lawmakers are lobbying furiously to rescue military bases in their backyard from the budget axe.



Anderson

But Democratic Sens. Russ Feingold and Herb Kohl have turned the tables on this pork-barrel bickering by practically begging the Pentagon to kill a military program in their home state of Wisconsin. The only problem is that the Pentagon has rebuffed the senators' plea to stop funding the $20 million per year program.

"It's a variation on the Henny Youngman line, 'Take my program... please!'" Feingold told us.

The story of Project ELF — the Navy's "Extremely Low Frequency" communications system in Clam Lake, Wis. — is a revealing postscript to the recent debate on the balanced budget amendment. ELF is a Cold War relic that helped American submarines avoid detection by sending electromagnetic waves to subs in deep water so they could surface to receive important messages.

In a January letter to Navy Secretary John Dalton, Feingold urged that the Pentagon include ELF in its list of recommendations to the base closure commission. "With the disintegration of the Soviet naval nuclear threat, the major justification for the ELF program has apparently disappeared," Feingold wrote.

The Navy isn't even sure if the electromagnetic waves are safe for local residents. In 1984, a U.S. District Court ordered that ELF be closed because the Navy paid inadequate attention to the system's possible health effects and violated an environmental law. It was later overturned due to national security reasons, but a final decision is due in September.

When the Pentagon left ELF off its list of recommendations to the commission, Feingold quickly appealed to Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., chair of the Senate Appropriations Committee. It was the day before the Senate voted on the balanced budget amendment, and Hatfield was besieged by his GOP colleagues to support the measure. But Feingold wasn't calling about the vote.

"Mr. Chairman, I want you to eliminate something in my state," Feingold said.

A bewildered Hatfield pulled Kohl aside before an Appropriations Committee hearing the following day to ask if he agreed with Feingold, which he did. ELF's funding was "zeroed out" as part of a larger package of cuts that passed through the Senate. But the House version of the bill didn't include the ELF cut, so it will be decided in conference committee.

A Hatfield spokeswoman noted that the ELF action proves the point: that Hatfield was trying to make when he cast the deciding vote against the balanced budged amendment. "If you're serious about deficit reduction you don't have to amend the constitution," she told our associate Ed Henry. "You should just get started now."

Kohl, who as owner of pro basketball's Milwaukee Bucks doled out a $68 million contract to rookie Glenn Robinson last year, is the first to admit that the ELF cut is pocket change. But he notes that the budget will never be balanced if "you're only willing to cut spending in somebody else's state."

INDIAN GIVERS — Sen. Daniel Inouye, D-Hawaii, vice chairman of the Senate Indian Affairs Committee, recently invited tribal chiefs to a reception honoring outgoing committee staffers. He strongly hinted that these American Indian leaders should not come empty-handed.

"Because these staff members will no longer be subject to any restrictions on the acceptance of tokens of esteem or appreciation, please feel free to send gifts if the members of your community should desire to express their appreciation in that manner," Inouye wrote in the Feb. 6 letter.

While acknowledging that the tribal chiefs have business before the Congress— especially regulation of the multi-billion dollar Indian gaming industry - the Inouye aide told us: "I'd be very surprised if anyone felt that they were being shaken down."

Israelis, Palestinians pay price of indecision

JERUSALEM — It feels a long way from the handshake on the White House lawn. The hopes raised by Yitzhak Rabin and Yasser Arafat that day in September 1993 have been worn away by the grinding details of peacemaking, by political hesitation and by terrorism.

Three terrorist acts did particular injury to mutual confidence between Palestinians and Israelis: a Jewish settler's murder of 29 Muslims at prayer in Hebron a year ago, a Palestinian suicide bomber's attack on a bus in Tel Aviv last October in which 22 people died and another attack by suicide bombers that killed 19 Israeli soldiers at a bus stop this January.

The Oslo agreement and the Declaration of Principles signed at the White House were always going to be targets of terrorism by opponents. But even though people knew that, the sight of mangled bodies on television was devastating. The peace process is now in a real sense hostage to terrorism.

Rabin's political standing has suffered. Polls show him well behind the leader of the Likud opposition, Benjamin Netanyahu, who was against the Oslo accord and now says: "Oslo raised expectations and then dashed them."

Some think Rabin is in part responsible for his troubles. They say that, having taken the bold step of starting on the road to peace with the Palestinians, he has fallen into hesitation in carrying out the Olso plan.

Deputy Foreign Minister Yossi Beilin, a key supporter of the peace accord, was not critical of his prime minister in an interview. But he made this general point about the Labor Party's unpopularity:

"We are paying the price of uncertainty, not of the peace with the Palestinians. People hate what we have today: no peace, no war, terrorism, provocations by the settlers. People want leadership. It is when that is in doubt that the public hesitates."

One point on which Rabin is especially criticized is his reaction to the killings in Hebron a year ago. Critics say he should have acted at once to remove the Jewish extremists who had settled, provocatively, in the center of that Arab city.

The terrorist who did the killing, Baruch Goldstein, has been glorified in death by the extreme right. A new book called "Baruch, the Man" memorializes him. A leading figure among the Hebron settlers, Miriam Levinger, writes in the book that she is "full of admiration" for him. "He was righteous."

The settlements planted around the West Bank are a main obstacle to carrying out the next phase of Oslo, Palestinian elections. Israeli troops are supposed to be redeployed out of Palestinian population centers first, and settlers worry about being attacked as they drive through the towns.

The Peace Now movement has urged the government to dismantle 27 small Jewish settlements that have a total population of only 7,000. Alternatively, as a gesture to the Palestinians, the government could close the tenuous settlements in the Gaza Strip. One, Netzarim, has six or eight families guarded by 200 soldiers.

Rabin has taken the position that he will not discuss removing settlements until negotiations on the final status of the West Bank, which under Oslo are to start in May 1996. But Israel is due for elections in October 1996, and serious peace negotiations are unlikely after the end of this year.

An alternative way to jump-start the peace process is being pressed by Beilin. That is to forget about the interim phase under Oslo and go right to the final-status talks.

Beilin envisages negotiating for borders that would put some of the popular settlements inside Israel and others under Palestinian jurisdiction.

However one approaches the problem, agreement on expanding Palestinian control from Gaza and Jericho to the rest of the West Bank — as Oslo envisaged — will be difficult. Palestinians fear they will get only small pieces of the territory, cut up by settlements and their roads. A weak Israeli government seems unable to make confidence-building gestures.

But against all the difficulties in the way of peace, there is a different reality in Israel today. Most Israelis recognize the existence and yearnings of Palestinians in a way they once did not. However stumblingly, however hesitantly, they are talking. Maybe the glass is half full.

Clinton's pandering to veterans lobby backfires

WASHINGTON — With veterans' hospitals emptying and the vet population declining;

With VA nursing homes costing the taxpayer twice as much as comparable community facilities;

With VA disability payments going to drug addicts to help them continue to buy illicit drugs;

With a VA surgeon providing a penile implant, at a taxpayer cost of $5,800, to a convicted child molester;

Safire

With all this, a few courageous Republicans out to save taxpayers $17 billion this year dared to hold back $200 million for veterans-only clinics.

What happened? Bill Clinton, famous avoider of military service, went all out enlisting in the legion of panderers to the veterans lobby.

"The White House doors have been open to veterans as never before," he assured the Veterans of Foreign Wars, though 96 percent of the males on his White House staff have never worn a uniform.

That hypocrisy bothers John Wheeler, who was for a decade chairman of the Vietnam Veterans Memorial Fund: "Clinton wants the vets to be victims, not partners, and is trying to make money equal acceptance and respect."

To buy the lobby's support, Clinton told the VFW: "Our administration is pushing for 1.3 billion more for the Department of Veterans Affairs over the next five years."

"We have consistently looked to veterans," Clinton said, "to help shape our policy for veterans." His confessed sellout to a pressure group, made as a boast, was true: his Vet secretary is a former vet lobbyist.

Secretary Jesse Brown told the same audience: "Just last month, William Safire called for the elimination of VA hospitals. He calls veterans' programs a 'sacred cow.' Excuse me, Mr. Safire, but you have got a cow mixed up with a lot of bull." Big laugh.

"Mr. Safire refers to me as a 'lobby fox in the hen house.' ... I say to you, the head of VA should always be an advocate! He should be a lobby fox. I am your lobby fox. And I am proud of it!"

Then this combat hero blazed away with suppressing fire: "Who are these people attacking veterans programs? Have they served in the military?" Clinton and 96 percent of his profoundly civilian male staff might have winced at that, but Secretary Brown charged ahead at critics: "I do not think they have the right to pass judgment ... they should do the right thing and simply step aside."

Under this new credential requirement, only welfare mothers can criticize welfare. Only educrats can suggest ending free lunches to children of the rich. And only veterans can call for replacement of a third-rate federal hospital bureaucracy with a voucher system to enable deserving vets to buy private care.

Applying Clinton's criterion, I have standing: a draftee in 1952, two years in the U.S. Army. Rose to corporal; never heard a shot fired in anger.

Most of us veterans never claimed that every ailment we suffered since was "service-connected"; nor did we rip off our fellow taxpayers for "disability" checks while able to work full time; nor did we take advantage of the federal largess and job preference that the pressure groupies won. We're citizens first and veterans second, not professional lobbyists whipping up victimhood.

Brandishing this unheroic credential now deemed essential, let me return to Clinton's pandering:

House Republicans, spooked by the president's vote-purchasing speech, refused to be out-veteraned. They coughed up all the money demanded by the vet-lobby's highwaymen.

But then, to get even, GOP budget-cutters took the same $200 million out of Americorps, the subsidized voluntarism that is the Clintonites' favorite boondoggle. Clinton countered by threatening to veto the whole rescission bill.

The upshot: of the $17 billion that the Republicans want to save this year, Clinton will block the rescission of all but $6 billion.

Why will he permit that $6 billion to be saved? Because that is how much additional spending is needed for earthquake relief in California. Combined saving: zero. With Gov. Pete Wilson's competition looming, Clinton will cut almost anything to come up with money for California.

But not welfare for veterans. That most sacred cow causes politicians to tremble and dulls the impetus to prick the balloon of spending.

102 House Republicans seek limit in tax cuts

■ Lawmakers want to limit $500-per-child tax credit in effort to put more money into deficit reduction.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Breaking ranks on a key item in the "Contract With America," nearly half the Republicans in the House called Tuesday for scaling back tax breaks intended for wealthier families. "I don't think that's out of the question," conceded Speaker Newt Gingrich.

The White House and congressional Democrats instantly renewed their attacks on Republicans as benefactors of the rich. "I can certainly understand their unease with ... regressive, trickle-down tax policy," taunted House Democratic leader Dick Gephardt of Missouri, who noted that Republicans also favor cuts in school lunch and other nutrition programs.

With the GOP tax-cut measure expected on the House floor next week, 102 Republican lawmakers cast their request to limit a $500-per-child tax credit as an effort to plow more money into deficit reduction. Even so, their proposal reflected a broader debate among majority Republicans in Congress — and White House hopefuls — of the prominence that tax cuts should receive in the coming months.

As approved last week in the House Ways and Means Committee, the GOP tax bill would permit families earning up to $200,000 a year the full, $500-per-child tax credit promised in the "Contract With America." A letter from 102 of the 230 House Republicans calls for a vote on lowering the cap to $95,000.

"Passage of this amendment would still cover 85 percent of the families in America," the group wrote. However, they wrote that it would also mean "an additional $12 billion to $14 billion in savings for deficit reduction."

The Republicans intend to bring the tax-cut measure to the floor at the same time as spending cuts to pay for it.

Republican leaders have made numerous compromises in the past 75 days as they maneuvered their ambitious agenda toward passage. House approval of the balanced-budget amendment came only after the leadership bowed to GOP moderates and dropped a provision requiring a two-thirds vote to raise taxes.

Even so, the letter stands out as the most striking example of lawmakers using public pressure to force a key change in the "Contract With America."

The letter was sent to Rep. Gerald Solomon, R-N.Y., chairman of the Rules Committee that will set the rules for debate on the measure. Its leading sponsors were Rep. Greg Ganske, a first-termer from Iowa, and Rep. Pat Roberts, R-Kansas, chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, neither of whom was available to comment.

Both men met Monday night with Gingrich and Majority Leader Dick Armey of Texas, and subsequently scrapped plans for a morning news conference. Instead, they issued a written statement.

A list of signers, made available from other sources, reflects a mix of philosophies and generations, with 10 committee chairmen and 35 of the party's 73 freshmen.

"Our very first priority is the deficit," Solomon said of his decision to seek a change in the tax bill.

Several sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Gingrich had privately waved off earlier requests to scale back the tax break. House aides and lawmakers said support for retaining the $200,000 level was particularly strong within the Christian Coalition. One aide said the inclusion of the $200,000 cap in the original bill was itself a compromise worked out with those who favored no limitation.

Beware restaurant sandwiches, group says

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — The consumer group that attacked movie popcorn and many Chinese, Italian and Mexican restaurant dishes is now targeting tuna salad and chicken salad sandwiches.

Just when you thought they were a dieter's salvation.

But the consumer group, Center for Science in the Public Interest, said Tuesday that most tuna salad sandwiches bought at restaurants contain as much fat as three Quarter-Pounder hamburgers from McDonald's. And most chicken salad sandwiches are nearly as bad, the group added.

"Tuna is almost fat free, but it's drowning in a third of a cup of mayonnaise," said Jayne G. Hurley, senior nutritionist for the group, at a news conference.

As for chicken salad, Hurley said a sandwich "with a smear of mayonnaise on the bread has as much fat as two large orders of McDonald's french fries. It's the gobs of mayonnaise, not the chicken, that's to blame."

The center ranked 12 kinds of sandwiches from most to least fat-laden, praising turkey with mustard as best and exposing tuna salad as the worst.

Surprisingly, roast beef with mustard ranked second best despite red meat's reputation as often fatty. Corned beef with mustard was next. Ham with mustard ranked fourth, but the center noted that it has twice as much fat as roast beef with mustard.

Even vegetarian sandwiches with avocado and cheese, offered by many chains, have twice the fat of a McDonald's Quarter Pounder, Hurley said. Such sandwiches took eighth place on the center's fat list, a low ranking in terms of healthfulness.

Hurley pointed to high-fat mayonnaise, meat and cheese as the chief culprits in what the center called less-than-healthy sandwiches it had sampled.

"When you build a sandwich at home, you're the architect," she said. "When you buy a sandwich at a deli, you're hiring someone to make it for you. The problem is they're building with a lot of fatty foods."

Kaelin takes stand in Simpson trial, brings laughs to courtroom

■ Court day ends before aspiring actor can describe thumps in night that led police to bloody glove.

■ More national news/1D

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mop-headed Brian "Kato" Kaelin, America's most famous house guest, took the stand at O.J. Simpson's murder trial Tuesday and quickly brought down the house.

The aspiring actor, wearing black jeans, an open-necked shirt and sport jacket, drew his biggest laugh when he said he never thought of Simpson as someone who could help his career.

"I didn't think we were going for the same parts," he said, drawing raucous laughter from just about everyone in the courtroom, including Simpson and jurors.

But Kaelin, who became an instant celebrity last summer after testifying at Simpson's preliminary hearing, also began relating a story central to Simpson's fate.

He told how he came to live with the former football star, spoke of Simpson's broken marriage and new romance, and recalled Simpson's plans for June 12, 1994, the day Nicole Brown Simpson and Ronald Goldman were slashed to death.

The court day ended before Kaelin could describe the thumps in the night that led police to a bloody glove, a key piece of evidence in the murder case against Simpson.

The witness, his unkempt blond hair now below his shoulders, made his entrance after Detective Philip Vannatter ended three days on the witness stand by acknowledging misstatements and questionable handling of evidence.

Court transcripts also confirm for the first time that the "mystery envelope," which surfaced last summer, contains a knife that was not the murder weapon. Despite a request by the defense, the judge barred jurors from seeing the knife, for now.

Kaelin, a much-anticipated witness, appeared nervous. He virtually ran into the courtroom, then had to leave when lawyers weren't ready for him. Many of the jurors appeared tickled to see Kaelin up close. One female juror appeared on the verge of laughter throughout his testimony.

When Kaelin was asked to point out Simpson in the courtroom, the defendant smiled and gave a little wave to his former tenant.

Kaelin, often squinting, shifting in his chair and licking his lips, told jurors he met Nicole Brown Simpson in December 1992 in Aspen, Colo. He said they became friends and he moved into her guest house a month later, sometimes caring for her two children to defray the monthly rent of about $500.

He moved into Simpson's guest quarters, rent-free, in January 1994, when Ms. Simpson moved to another condominium that had no separate guest house.

After identifying photographs of his room at Simpson's house and explaining the living arrangement, Kaelin was asked what he knew of Simpson's feelings for his ex-wife.

"Their relationship was over," he said.

Kaelin's lively testimony contrasted sharply with the confrontation between a defense attorney and a veteran detective who acknowledged he misstated information while trying to get a search warrant for Simpson's home and carried a vial of Simpson's blood almost 20 miles across town without booking it as evidence.

Focusing on defense theories that police mishandled evidence and prematurely deemed Simpson a killer, attorney Robert Shapiro suggested the blood could have been contaminated or may even have dripped from the vial in the two hours it took Detective Philip Vannatter to deliver it.

Womanizing accusations surface at United Way chief's trial

ALEXANDRIA, Va. (AP) — Sharon Clatterbaugh recalled a meeting with a Roman Catholic priest during which her boss at the United Way of America, William Aramony, pulled her aside and whispered to her not to bother turning down her own bed that night.

Aramony, then president of the nation's largest charity, made it clear during that 1985 business trip that he wanted to sleep with her, Ms. Clatterbaugh said.

"He told me I would never have to worry about money again," Ms. Clatterbaugh testified.

Similar tales have been told over and over at Aramony's fraud trial in federal court, where prosecutors claim the former executive, now 67, repeatedly propositioned younger women and romanced them with United Way money, billing the charity for getaways to London, Paris, Egypt, Las Vegas and other spots.

Two other men, Stephen J. Paulachak and Thomas J. Merlo, are accused of helping Aramony siphon off United Way money.

Paulachak, 49, was a United Way executive from 1971 to 1988 and president of a spinoff company that Aramony allegedly used as his personal piggy bank. Merlo, 64, was a consultant and then chief financial officer from 1990 to 1992.

Under federal sentencing guidelines, all three face about six years in prison if convicted.

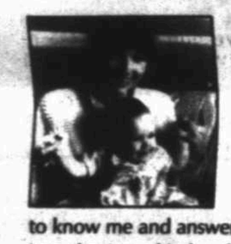
Aramony's lawyers contend that any abuses resulted from bumbling by Aramony's staff and lax oversight by United Way directors. "Brain atrophy" also impaired Aramony's judgment, defense attorney William Moffitt told the jury at the start of the trial.

But prosecutors and many who watched Aramony in his 22 years as head of the charity say his womanizing and misuse of bank accounts were no secret. And according to testimony, Aramony tried to bamboozle, buy off or intimidate those who could have blown the whistle.

"This case is about a simple, terrible truth — a gross abuse of public trust," Assistant U.S. Attorney Randy Bellows said.

Aramony, who resigned in disgrace in 1992, was confronted about his alleged philandering and profligate spending two years earlier by Sears, Roebuck and Co. chief Edward A. Brennan, who at the time was chairman of the United Way.

"I went because they were affordable. I stayed because they're wonderful."



I first went to Planned Parenthood because I really couldn't afford a gynecologist. I was young. And nervous. And didn't know what to expect. But now I can afford to go anywhere. And you know what? I still go to Planned Parenthood.

From my very first visit, I felt they sincerely cared about me. They took the time to know me and answered all my questions in plain talk. Every time I go, they're as kind and understanding as ever.

I also feel their medical staff is professional, knowledgeable and very up to date. They're extremely sensitive to a woman's special medical concerns, and everything is kept confidential. I'm glad they offer such a wide range of services. As far as I'm concerned, Planned Parenthood is like family and will always be an important part of my health care.

Memorial committee seeks funds

■ Organizers of the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial plan to construct circular drive, landscaping to protect site.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

Dave Roever — a Vietnam veteran and nationally known motivational speaker — stopped by the Permian Basin Vietnam Veterans Memorial on Tuesday.

"This is beautiful," he said to memorial committee president, John Philbeck.

Roever, who was disfigured from a war injury while serving with a special forces unit of the U.S. Navy in Vietnam, is in Midland to tell his story and how he overcame his tragic war experience.

While visiting the memorial, Roever spoke of the healing that such memorials provide to veterans and families of veterans killed or missing in action. "It takes the pain away because somebody remembered," he said.

The memorial — located in the 9900 block of Wright Drive at Midland International Airport — honors 225 individuals from 30 Permian Basin counties who were killed or listed as missing in action in the Vietnam conflict from 1959 to 1975. The memorial was officially dedicated on November 12.

"This is a means in which the community can reach out and say 'Hey, it's OK' ... and to say we're sorry we were not there for you when you really needed us," Philbeck said.

On Tuesday, gusty winds powdered the granite memorial site with dirt. Memorial organizers have plans to eliminate that problem with construction of a circular driveway and landscaping.

The memorial committee needs to raise about $80,000 for those improvements and about $15,000 for a five-year lease with the city, Philbeck said. After the lease expires, donated funds go into a perpetual maintenance fund.

Primary fund-raising efforts are the sale of inscribed bricks for a "Walk of Honor" leading up to the memorial. Three sizes of bricks are available; bricks already in place honor veterans of World War I, World War II, Korea, Vietnam and Desert Storm.

Bricks available are:

— 8 by 4 inch for $100. Inscriptions can be up to three lines with 16 characters a line.

— 8 by 8 inch for $200. Inscriptions can be up to six lines with 16 characters a line.

West Texas winner

Texas' newest millionaire has been identified as 80-year-old Porter Richardson from Colorado City, who was the state's only winner in Saturday's Lotto Texas drawing. Richardson won $4,321,514, which will be paid out in annual installments over the next 20 years. He received the first installment of $217,000 Tuesday in Austin, according to Steve Levin, spokesman for the Texas Lottery. Richardson, a retired electronics engineer, called his son in Abilene at 1:30 a.m. Sunday and said, "Do you remember what I told you it would take to get all the sticker grass out of my yard?" Remembering the earlier conversation, Robert Richardson immediately realized his father had won the lottery. The elder Richardson played the numbers: 3, 9, 17, 23, 36 and 46. He told Texas Lottery officials he intends to by a new Chevrolet Camero and to hire someone "to pick the sticker grass" out of his yard.

Vietnam vet shares story with students

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Despite being disfigured by a war injury, Dave Roever keeps his face in front of millions of teen-agers every year. Roever (pronounced Reever) miraculously survived a grenade explosion during the Vietnam War. For more than 17 years he has told his story to millions of secondary school students.

"I know how I look," Roever said to Lee Freshman High School students on Tuesday. "But one girl came up to me and said: 'Mister, all of your scars are on the outside. All of mine are on the inside. If you can make it, I can make it too.' That's why I do it."

Although his religious beliefs are part of his story of tenacity against the odds, Roever did not talk about them at LFHS. "I try to keep religion out of the school talks," he said. However, his presentation at 7 p.m. today at Midland Center will include "elements of my faith," he said. Roever's talk is open to the public free of charge. An offering will be taken.

Roever, alternately eliciting students to laughter or tears, spoke of his harrowing experience of having a bullet hit a hand grenade he was preparing to lob following an ambush.

Serving in Vietnam in 1969 with the U.S. Navy Brownwater Black Berets, a small special forces unit, Roever said he was five days away from going home to his wife when the firefight ensued that altered the course of his life.

Suspect in former Midlander's killing stands trial in Tyler for unrelated death

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Although the 1994 slaying of former Midlander Darlene Anderson is still unsolved, a murder conviction of the 41-year-old defendant in another Williamson County homicide would send to prison the sole suspect in Ms. Anderson's death.

Ms. Anderson, 38, had disappeared from her Round Rock home on the night of June 27, 1994.

"They (investigators) just flat were not able to put together the kind of evidence (needed) to get an indictment," Williamson County District Attorney Ken Anderson of Georgetown said Tuesday.

Meanwhile, in Tyler, Roger Eugene Fain Jr. of Round Rock is being tried on first-degree murder charges in the shooting-beating death of his girl-friend, 39-year-old Austin blackjack dealer Sandra Dumont, who had been missing from an Austin nightclub since July 25.

The case was transferred to Tyler in East Texas on a change of venue.

"It's a really difficult trial," Ken Anderson said. "We don't have a confession. We don't have an eyewitness. We don't have a murder weapon. There's a lot of details and inferences that need to be proved."

The decomposed body of Ms. Anderson and the skeletal remains of Ms. Dumont were found by police on Aug. 12 in a field near a ravine about one mile from Ms. Anderson's home.

Ms. Anderson, an electrical engineer, was Austin Semiconductor's national marketing director and had worked for Texas Instruments in Midland before moving to Austin in 1993.

The high-profile case, which was heightened due to Ms. Anderson's seven-week-long missing status, had drawn on resources ranging from the Round Rock Police Department to the FBI.

The San Antonio-based Heidi Search Center, the Civil Air Patrol, Ms. Anderson's co-workers and other groups and individuals joined in air and ground searches.

While evidence is insufficient to indict Fain in Ms. Anderson's death, Ken Anderson said that "from a practical standpoint" the circumstantial evidence and "everything that we have" on Fain would indicate that he is Ms. Anderson-'s killer.

Midland couple gives time, money to teach English to Polish students

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

A desire to return some of their life's blessings by giving of their time and money recently took a Midland couple to Poland where they taught the English language to eager students.

Clifford and Joyce Sherrod recently spent about three weeks teaching English for five or six hours a day in the rural Polish town of Dobczyce (dub-CHIT-suh), which is near Krakow.

During the last part of 1994, the Sherrods were part of a team of 12 North American volunteers who taught conversational English through the non-profit organization Global Volunteers. Through this organization, Americans volunteer to perform instructive tasks, such as teaching English or business administration in burgeoning democracies around the world.

Group members provide their own air travel and lodging expenses and recipient communities provide teaching facilities and transportation to the site, Mrs. Sherrod explained.

Although the Polish people have a strong sense of community and family, the scope of this kind of volunteerism took many Poles by surprise, Sherrod said. "They could not believe that someone would come clear over there, spending their own money, just to help them," he said.

TEACH: Couple shares with Polish students

(From 1B)

The Sherrods strongly agree with the Global Volunteers premise that it is the direct interactions between people, not through governments, that meaningful change can be affected.

"If we are ever going to achieve anything like world peace — it must be done on a personal basis," Sherrod said.

"We have been blessed with an awful lot in this country," Mrs. Sherrod said. "You need to share what you can ... with the time you're given in this world," she said.

The "fierce enthusiasm" of the Polish students for the English language and American culture magnified the personal rewards experienced by the Midland couple, Sherrod explained.

"They are trying so hard to join the Western World, and they see English as a means to do that," Mrs. Sherrod said. "They're very independent and determined. They're kind of like Americans in that respect," she said.

Over the past several years, the teaching of Russian has been excised from Polish schools and has been replaced where possible with English. "Now there is a real shortage of English teachers," Mrs. Sherrod said.

The English-teaching partnership in Poland began in 1990 with the invitation to Global Volunteers by the Polish organization, Rural Solidarity, to assist that country's efforts at democratization and free enterprise, according to Michele Gran, a spokeswoman in the Global Volunteers main office in Minnesota.

As a former teacher, Mrs. Sherrod was experienced at teaching English as a second language. Her husband, a self-employed petroleum geologist, had some trepidations before reaching Poland.

Sherrod said he was surprised at his own abilities to teach his students — first a repertoire of nouns and then watch the language blossom as verbs were added to the mix, he said.

This was the first time teachers had traveled to this part of Poland so all volunteers in Dobczyce were "starting from scratch," he said. He and his wife penned extensive teaching plans so that the next wave of Global Volunteers could move immediately ahead with the students' instruction, he said.

This was the Sherrods' second trip to Poland to teach. The first trip in early 1994 was at an established Global Volunteers site where students simply needed to improve their English.

The Sherrods have been Midland residents since 1956 and have three grown children. In their semi-retirement, they have been enjoying study tours and other educational traveling, but say the Global Volunteers tours are the most rewarding.

"You get over there and get involved, you come back with a lot more than you started with," Sherrod said.

region and the general history of Arizona and the region."

A reception is planned at the Haley Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., at 7 p.m. Saturday for the public to view the facility's newest addition.

The library acquired Thrapp's materials at the time of his death on April 29, 1994. He was 80.

"What we received here were 4,400 books from his library, 1,600 periodicals, approximately 60 feet of vertical files, many artifacts and photographs," Bradshaw said.

In his work this past year organizing the materials, Bradshaw has found a "couple of phrases that characterize Thrapp's writing — he had "diligent research" and an "insistence on accuracy." Thrapp was "well respected for both," Bradshaw said.

"In his 24 years as religion editor, for which he was quite well known, he received many honors from every faith for his very fair, unbiased reporting of all the religious news. In his work as an historian, he wrote 14 books and numerous articles, countless reviews.

"It's hard to say what his chief work was, but probably the most ambitious was entitled "The Encyclopedia of Frontier Biography," four volumes and, according to my record here, 5,530 entries. That was a sizable work."

Thrapp also wrote "Victorio and the Mimbres Apaches," "Al Sieber Chief of Scouts" and "The Conquest of Apacheria."

"All of his works dealt with the Apache wars," Bradshaw said.

In the time he has spent assembling the materials, Bradshaw has become "more and more impressed.

"If you were to describe the man, you would say he was very good in photography and took pictures all over the world where he traveled. He was a world traveler and adventurer. He worked for the UPI for 10 years in Africa, London, Greece, Italy and Argentina.

"The Associated Press sent him as correspondent to the Second Vatican Council, and he also was selected to attend the General Assembly of the World Council of Churches in 1968."

Thrapp attended the University of Illinois and graduated from the University of Missouri in 1938 with a bachelor of journalism degree. He received an honorary doctorate degree in human letters from Chapman College in Orange, Calif.

Thrapp's adventures began when he was 16 and hiked across South Dakota and down to the Grand Canyon," Bradshaw said. "At 22, he, with two pack horses, worked his away across Utah. When Pearl Harbor came, he resigned his post with United Press and crossed the Andes by mule to Bolivia."

When Thrapp returned to the United States, he enlisted in the Army, graduated from OCS, became a mule-pack specialist and served in the China, Burma Indian Theater, emerging as a captain of infantry. He was decorated by the Chinese government.

"All the time, he was taking wonderful photographs of his travels," Bradshaw said.

The next 17 years found Thrapp working as the editor of the publication put out by C.A.M.P. — Council for Abandoned Military Posts.

"Through that position he gained an intimate knowledge of much of our military past," Bradshaw said.

The arrangements for Thrapp's books and papers to be brought to the Haley Library were made in 1990.

"I think it's through his friendship with Robert N. Mullin that he chose the Haley Library," Bradshaw said. "Robert N. Mullin had already made arrangements to give his to the library. Thrapp had interviewed Mullin as part of his work. Somewhere in that contact, he was influenced to make arrangements for his books and papers to come here."

erally burst into flames. I splashed into water, but phosphorus burns in water. My skin was floating off all around me. I was beside myself," Roever said, often cutting his grim descriptions with humor.

"My face was gone. Much of my chest was gone and you could see my heart. My skin was literally gone, yet I was still burning and caught the stretcher on fire. It was just one of those days," he said, smiling to the crowd.

After multiple surgeries, including having a thumb fashioned from flesh from his hip, Roever said his outer scars didn't stop him from achieving. He recently learned to play the piano and is the featured motivational speaker in broadcasts televised to thousands of school campuses across the nation.

Using his experiences for fodder, Roever spoke on the injustices of racism and abusive families. "I saw a man in a San Antonio hospital who was terribly burned. He had lost 100 percent of his skin. What color does that make him?" said Roever, who lives in Fort Worth. "Does it matter?"

"If you've got people of one color in a boat, yelling at people of a different color at the other end of the boat, what you've got is a bunch of people who better quit yelling and start bailing together," he said.

Roever also described African American Reggie Dabbs as his brother, and as "family." Dabbs, who was born to a mother who got pregnant in high school, grew up in poverty, and once lived in a tumble-down shack that had housed chickens. "It was an old boarded-up shack," Dabbs said.

'Rise to the occasion. Find joy in achievement. Take responsibility and care for somebody. It's the only way to live. Everybody gets hurt, but not everybody quits. Everybody gets scars, but not everybody kills themselves. You don't have to repeat crimes of the past. You can change. You are young.'

— Roever, Vietnam veteran

Enthusiastically bounding in front of students, Dabbs immediately sought applause with his announcement, "My name is Reggie, and I'm here to get you out of class."

The second speaker soon had students screaming with laughter at his antics and various voices. "I never smoked, did drugs or drank. I didn't do drugs because I was afraid of drugs, it was because I was afraid of my dad," Dabbs said. Employing a booming voice, he imitated his father, saying, "If drugs don't kill you, I will."

Both men encouraged students to refuse to accept bad situations and to overcome adversity, and never to suffer nor perpetuate physical abuse.

Roever stunned his audience to silence when he told about a young woman who gave her wedding ring back to her husband, who was hospitalized with severe burns. "My wife, however, kissed my face— the worst part of my body — when she saw me for the first time after the accident. She looked me in my good eye and said: 'Davie, you never were good looking.'

On a concluding note, Roever said, "Rise to the occasion. Find joy in achievement. Take responsibility and care for somebody. It's the only way to live. Everybody gets hurt, but not everybody quits. Everybody gets scars, but not everybody kills themselves. You don't have to repeat crimes of the past. You can change. You are young."

Roever has a son, 23, and a daughter, 24. He has spoken to an estimated 5 million students in schools and on broadcasts over the past 17 years.

Roever and Dabbs will be speaking at various secondary schools in Midland, Greenwood and Stanton today. He will speak tonight at Midland Center with his team of "overcomers."

Burlington Resources/Meridian Oil Foundation has invested $3,500 in Junior Achievement for programs in Midland and Odessa.

Helen Stephens — of Burlington Resources/Meridian Oil Foundation — presented the check to Bob Kukla — chairman of the board for Junior Achievement — at the organization's board of directors meeting Tuesday.

The Burlington Resources/Meridian Oil Foundation has worked with Junior Achievement for five years.

"This business community recognizes the unique ability of Junior Achievement to prepare the next generation of workers, managers and leaders." Kukla said.

Joy Matejek, president of Junior Achievement of Midland Inc., said the money will be used for curriculum guides for volunteer business leaders, manuals and materials for students in Midland and Ector counties.

"Through this grant, more middle-grade students can become involved in Project Business and the Economics of Staying in School," Ms. Matejek said. "Project Business gives students an excellent perspective on the economic decisions that shape their lives. And it plays an important role in developing the skills and attitudes that will keep America competitive in the 1990s and beyond."

Texas juvenile crime rate soars over past decade, study shows

HUNTSVILLE (AP) — At a time when overall crime trends appear to be declining, juvenile crime in Texas has skyrocketed over the past decade, a new study of criminal activity in Texas show.

Arrests of those between the ages of 10 and 16 for violent crimes were up 282 percent, according to the study.

The crime data, assembled from a variety of sources over the past 18 months by researchers at Sam Houston State University, shows tremendous growth of crime among juveniles — paced by a 798 percent increase in sexual assault arrests.

Other statistics, compiled in a 178-page book called "Crime and Justice in Texas," show murder involving juveniles up 291 percent in the 10 years ending in 1993, the latest year full statistics are available. Assaults are up 242 percent; robberies 224 percent.

Meanwhile, the overall juvenile population in Texas has risen just 30 percent.

"I think some of the most noteworthy things are when you compare juvenile offenses from '84 to '93, especially the proportion of juveniles accounting for murders in Texas went from 5 percent to 12 percent," Raymond Teske, the Criminal Justice Center professor at Sam Houston who edited the report, said Monday.

In 1984, 92 juveniles were arrested for murder. A decade later, that number was 361, including 77 in Harris County. Dallas County was next with 43; Bexar had 41.

"That's a lot," Teske says. "Those are things that just jump out at you."

Compared with all adult arrests, which rose 1.3 percent over the decade, juvenile arrests were up 47.4 percent.

'Some of the most noteworthy things are when you compare juvenile offenses from '84 to '93, especially the proportion of juveniles accounting for murders in Texas, which went from 5 percent to 12 percent.

— Raymond Teske
professor

In 1984, 14 percent of all people arrested in Texas were juveniles. That had nearly doubled — to 26 percent — by 1993.

Researchers found the typical serious juvenile offender is male — only 10 percent were female. He is likely to be black or Hispanic and economically disadvantaged. He also has interpersonal difficulties and behavior problems in school or on the job, and often comes from a single-parent family where there is a high degree of conflict, instability, violence and inadequate supervision.

Violence is fueled by involvement with illegal drugs and gang-related activities, researchers said.

The first of 3,000 copies of the report went to state lawmakers and other top state officials earlier this month. Additional copies were going to district attorneys around Texas this week.

Data from state and federal crime reporting agencies showed that over the 10 years the rate for all violent crimes was up 33 percent in Texas through 1988, but has fallen since then. Still, in 1993, just under 190,000 violent crimes were reported in the state.

Homicides, however, were down by 9.2 percent, the only category of violent crime to fall.

Grand jury considers evidence from multiple slayings at KFC

HENDERSON (AP) — A former legislator appeared Tuesday before a grand jury hearing evidence in one of the most infamous multiple slayings in East Texas history.

At least two people were called for morning testimony before the panel in its second week of fact-finding in the 1983 Kentucky Fried Chicken murders of five people, the Rusk County district attorney's office said.

"They're chugging along," said William Brown, an investigator. "We're just waiting."

James Earl Mankins Sr. of Kilgore, a two-time Democratic member of the Texas House, and his wife Virginia joined grand jurors' session Tuesday along with prosecutors who carried several boxes of evidence into the courtroom.

The panel, which had recessed March 9 after hearing testimony from Mankins' son, resumed its session about 9 a.m., said Anita Cavaliere, a spokeswoman for District Attorney Kyle Freeman.

Meanwhile, a genetic testing laboratory was analyzing blood samples relating to the murder investigation.

"A whole host of samples associated with this case have been coming in," said Keith Brown, president of GeneScreen Inc. "Testing is under way in the lab."

But Brown would not say Tuesday how many individuals' samples were being tested at the Dallas-based DNA testing facility. It also performs genetic forensic and paternity tests — the type of analysis not available during the first investigation about 11 1/2 years ago.

James Earl Mankins Jr., the son of the former Texas lawmaker, was one of those providing blood samples for GeneScreen, according to published and broadcast reports.

A spokesman for the Texas Attorney General Dan Morales in Austin said Tuesday he expects the panel to issue at least one indictment.

"They may be able to wrap up by tomorrow, but that remains to be seen," said the spokesman, Ward Tisdale. "But we expect to finish presenting our case by tomorrow and then it would be up to the grand jury."

The 42-year-old Mankins, one of 20 people who received a grand jury subpoena, briefly appeared before the panel on March 9.

Two vials of Mankins' blood were drawn after a judge issued a search warrant to prosecutors who hope to link a fingernail found on one of the victims' clothing to the assailant.

"It's my client's position, or he tells me, that it is not his fingernail," said Mankins' attorney, J. Paul Nelson of Henderson, "and that the only way his fingernail could be there is if it is planted. Now that's what he tells me."

The elder Mankins said earlier that his son, who was questioned shortly after the slayings by the Texas Rangers, is innocent.

The state attorney general's office took over the case in November 1993 at the request of Freeman and family members. Morales met with the victims' relatives in the first week of grand jury deliberations.

The victims were abducted from the U.S. Highway 259 South restaurant on Sept. 23, 1983, during a $2,000 robbery near closing time.

Southwestern Bell, newspapers strike deal

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Co. and Texas' biggest newspapers have reached a tentative agreement over what the state's new phone company laws will say, officials said Tuesday.

At the center of one of the Legislature's biggest fights is a bill aimed at opening up local telephone business to competition in Texas for the first time.

Companies like Southwestern Bell Co. and GTE would be forced to forfeit their historical monopolies on local phone service in return for new regulatory freedom.

Newspapers and Southwestern Bell, which both want to use phone lines to offer news services over computers, have reached tentative agreement on several issues, according to Burl Osborne, publisher and editor of The Dallas Morning News.

Osborne said Tuesday that the agreement wouldn't be final until it's written into the bill, sponsored by state Rep. Curtis Seidlits, D-Sherman.

"Our goal was to create the opportunity for as many competitors to get into the marketplace as quickly as possible," Osborne said.

He said the tentative agreement with Southwestern Bell would allow new competitors the option of building their own telephone networks to provide local phone service or renting the facilities of Bell or other companies for the reselling of local service.

Osborne said they were still working on legal language spelling out the agreement.

"The publishers and the phone companies focused on the issues most important to consumers and the general public and arrived at solutions to most, if not all, of the remaining issues between them," said Glenn Smith, a spokesman for Bell. "I think everybody is waiting to see that the language is on paper the way they discussed it," he said.

But many other big companies, including giants like AT&T, a long-distance company, and TCI Communications Inc., a huge cable television company, aren't happy with the bill. They say it imposes unnecessary barriers to new competitors in the local phone business. Both of those companies want to get into that business in Texas.

Osborne said the ultimate goal is to let the local phone companies into the long-distance business, and let long-distance and other companies into the phone business.

"We favor letting AT&T into local exchange, and we favor letting Bell into long-distance," he said.

AT&T officials said they want Bell and other phone companies to stay out of long-distance until their monopoly hold on local phone business is broken.

Merrill Lynch & Co. said in a two-page report that a number of the bill's provisions would limit the impact of new competition on Southwestern Bell — so much so that Bell's earnings would not suffer as new competitors enter the company's business.

MURDER: Suspect stands trial for unrelated murder

(From 1B)

"I don't think anybody is concerned that there is a murderer on the loose," said Anderson, who is not related to Ms. Anderson.

Ms. Anderson and her ex-husband, Midland insurance executive Dan Anderson, have two children, Daniel, 15, and Marlena, 13. Both children are "doing remarkably well," Dan Anderson said Tuesday.

"We are very open (about their mother's death)," he said. "We've talked about it. We press on."

Marlena attends Alamo Junior High School; Daniel attends Lee Freshman High School.

Ken Anderson said there are some things about the Darlene Anderson case that "we can tell the jury but some of which we can't. But from a cold, hard standpoint, there's a difference between knowing something and proving something" he said.

"We've been up to the FBI lab in Washington. We pretty much consulted with anybody whom we thought could help around the country. So, we're working on it. But, hopefully, we can get the conviction in Smith County and at least have him (Fain) off the streets."

Anderson said there is "no crime-scene" evidence and there is "no eyewitness" to Ms. Anderson's death.

Following his September 1994 indictment, Fain was jailed on a $5 million bond, which subsequently was reduced to $950,000. He remains jailed.

Forensic pathologists determined that Ms. Anderson's death was caused by blunt trauma to the skull and Ms. Dumont died either from a gunshot wound to the head or from a broken jaw.

Investigations revealed that Ms. Anderson, who has been described as discreet, cautious and responsible, was casually acquainted with Fain, a carpenter who owned horses. She met him at a hardware store and he had befriended her children.

Criminal records indicated that Fain's first conviction was for rape and stabbing when he was a teen-ager in 1970. From then until 1991, he had been convicted in Texas and Florida of sexual assaults, aggravated kidnapping, weapons offenses and armed robbery.

Should Fain be convicted in Ms. Dumont's death, he could be sentenced from 25 years to life in prison, Ken Anderson said.

However, "no matter what the outcome" of Fain's murder trial, he said his office and the Round Rock Police Department would continue their investigation into Ms. Anderson's death.

LIFE WATCH

Milk danger

Breast-feed your baby, at least for the first three or four months of life. And don't give cow's milk during that time. These simple measures can help slash your infant's chances of developing insulin-dependent diabetes (childhood-onset) later in life. So says Hans-Michael Dosch, professor of pediatrics at the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto.

Evidence that cow's milk is a cause of child-onset diabetes is now "very solid," he says. Reportedly, a protein in cow's milk triggers an "allergic" reaction that gradually destroys beta cells in a child's pancreas, shutting down the production of insulin. Without sufficient insulin, diabetes becomes apparent a decade or more later.

Typical of about 20 other studies is a recent Australian study showing that infants exclusively breast-fed during their first three months had a 34 percent lower risk of diabetes than non-breast-fed infants. Infants given cow's-milk formula in their first three months were 52 percent more apt to develop diabetes.

If breast-feeding is not possible, Dr. Dosch has found in animal research that Mead Johnson's Nutramigen, a non-allergenic infant formula, also protects against future diabetes.

How much vitamin E?

You need at least 400 international units (IU) of vitamin E daily to help ward off artery-clogging and heart disease, according to new tests by Dr.Ishwarlal Jialal at the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas.

Dr. Jialal gave subjects various doses of synthetic vitamin E and then measured the vitamin's antioxidant effects on bad-type LDL blood cholesterol.

This is critically important because LDL cholesterol must be oxidized, or changed into a toxic type, before it can infiltrate artery walls and start the process that leads to clogged arteries. Antioxidants can inhibit that oxidation, it is believed, making LDL cholesterol much less harmful.

Unquestionably, vitamin E inhibits LDL oxidation, but how much is needed is unclear. Dr. Jialal now finds that 400 IU daily is the minimum dose that can significantly block LDL oxidation.

He further found that 1,200 IU of vitamin E was about 30 percent better than 400 IU at inhibiting oxidation. However, he opposes taking any more than 1,000 IU of vitamin E daily until more studies rule out possible long-term adverse effects. Dr. Jialal takes 400 IU of vitamin E daily.

Skin cancer antidote?

Getting too much sun can give you skin cancer, which is what one out of six Americans develop. But several studies suggest that the antioxidant trace mineral selenium might help prevent such non-melanoma skin cancers. People with low levels of blood selenium are more apt to develop skin cancer. Also, animals first given selenium and then dosed with ultraviolet radiation do not get as much skin cancer as expected, according to recent studies at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center in Lubbock. Most important, skin cancer was blocked in the animals by modest doses you could get in your diet and that are known to be safe.

Some evidence suggests 200 micrograms of selenium daily might prevent the appearance or skin cancer recurrence. Selenium is thought to work by boosting antioxidant activity that counters damage from ultraviolet light.

Good dietary sources of selenium are garlic, grains, sunflower seeds, meat, seafood and especially Brazil nuts. One nut typically contains 25 micrograms when bought shelled and 100 micrograms when bought in the shell.

Selenium is very toxic, so don't consume more than 100 to 200 micrograms daily, warn experts.

Gray area

A recent study found individuals who had 50 percent of their hair turn gray by age 40 were four times more likely to develop osteoporosis — weakening of the bones. The March issue of "Reader's Digest" magazine says more studies are needed to confirm the findings, but doctors involved in the study say the results give people with premature graying or a family history of it the opportunity to seek medical advice on how to prevent osteoporosis.

Video meets exercise machine

By Ira Dreyfuss

WASHINGTON (AP) — Exercise may turn into fun after all.

A marriage of computer-driven multimedia and aerobic machines can make a workout into a video game, a bike tour in the country, or a trek through the Grand Canyon.

A new generation of gear adds CD-ROM computer software, TV-style screens and stereo speakers to the traditional exercise bikes and other workout apparatus.

The result: an exerciser has story lines as well as exercise options and can choose how the workout will go, like a computer game player chooses how the game will turn out.

By turning a health club into a sort of whole-body video arcade, the equipment could remove boredom from exercise.

"We're taking what's been seen as a tedious task and elevating it to a unique experience," said Michael Alvarez-Cohen, head of Transcape Systems Inc. of San Francisco.

Major manufacturers such as Nautilus and Universal used Transcape's CD-ROM software in equipment prototypes at the IHRSA health club association's trade show this month in San Francisco, Alvarez-Cohen said. Among the options is a guided trek through the Grand Canyon.

One Nautilus machine mimics in-line skating through places like New York's Central Park or Miami Beach's art deco South Beach section, said Nautilus spokeswoman Karla Wattman.

Computerization also lets the equipment act as coach, Alvarez-Cohen said. Sensors can measure such things as heart rate and blood pressure, compare readings to the exerciser's goals and workout history, collate this with the difficulty level of the workout and tell the exerciser whether to work harder.

Tectrix Fitness Equipment of Irvine, Calif., which has developed a separate system, markets a recumbent bike that takes a rider through what looks like a cartoon version of a small New England town. Cyclists can pedal through an orchard or a field of flowers, in a couple of races, up a mountain or even through a church.

A variable speed fan in the front creates a cooling breeze in sync with the rider's speed, while speakers in the back play music and sound effects — including the cheers of the crowd at the race finish line.

The VRBike gives at least as good a workout as standard noninteractive health club equipment, said Steve Russell, Tectrix's vice president for sales and marketing. The difference is that the standard stuff "can bore you to tears." On the VRBike, 20 minutes seems like 10 because "people get so locked in."

"I hate, I hate, I hate" regular exercise bikes, said Angela Fowler, 24, a nursing association publicist who rides a VRBike at the First Lady health club in Washington.

The interactive bike is "more entertaining," Fowler said. "You can always do new things. You can ride through buildings. You can hit cows."

The electronics in the interactive equipment are about as complex as what is found in retail computer stores. And developers predict that, in the next few years, high-tech stuff will become common at health clubs. But critics say it will have to leap some hurdles first.

Fun-and-games aerobic equipment may help beginners get over the boredom, but the feeling that comes from a good workout is all a regular exerciser needs, said Dennis Keiser, president of Keiser Corp., a Fresno-based maker of strength training equipment. And weight

Research shows evidence of breakdown in brain signal

By Bill Hendrick
N.Y. Times News Service

Scientists have discovered tantalizing evidence of how brain cells receive, organize and transmit messages that — when blocked — can cause everything from kidney failure in children to learning problems to memory loss, the journal Nature reported Thursday.

The research is aimed at producing drugs to cure or reduce the severity of such ailments, said Dr. John Merlie of Washington University in St. Louis, who co-wrote the Nature study with Dr. Joshua Sanes.

In the first study of its kind involving living animals, they discovered that a specific molecule — s-laminin — is involved in "communication" between brain cells.

In an interview, Merlie said that understanding how such communication takes place should lead to better knowledge of how such connections change during learning and fail during neurological and psychiatric illnesses.

They said they inadvertently may have discovered that s-laminin may be present in kidneys as well as in muscles, and thus may be a cause of kidney failure. It also may be involved in muscle weakness and problems such as recall of long-term memory.

In midlife, millions of people experience memory loss and have trouble recalling the names of people they have met only days before, he said. This may be due to a deterioration in communication among brain cells as people age.

Merlie said such research "may help us try to develop treatments or therapies" for such ailments.

Tim Barberich, president of Sepracor Inc. of Marlborough, Mass., poses Feb. 23, in one of his company's laboratories where Sepracor working to extract chemically the harmful side effects of some of the world's most popular prescription drugs. Barberich hopes that his work will allow his company to introduce improved versions of drugs for headaches, hay fever, asthma and other ailments.

Drug company hopes to fix problem-prone medications

By Steve Sakson

MARLBOROUGH, Mass. (AP) — You might call Tim Barberich the Mr. Fixit of the drug industry.

Barberich is the founder of Sepracor Inc., a small high-tech research firm with a unique goal: to fix what's wrong with some of medicine's best-known drugs by chemically extracting their harmful side effects.

"We use pharmacology to find out what's causing the side effects and how to eliminate them," said Barberich, a 47-year-old chemist.

Glamorous work it's not. Most researchers would probably rather be searching for the cure for cancer or AIDS.

But, if Barberich's hopes pan out, in a few years Sepracor will have a stable of blockbuster medications to rival those from the world's pharmaceutical leaders. He will transform his obscure company into the undisputed leader of a new niche industry.

And patients will have a little more peace of mind knowing the pills they're taking won't do them more harm than good.

Consider these possibilities:

■ A powerful over-the-counter version of a prescription painkiller called Orudis that doesn't upset your stomach like aspirin or Advil, and doesn't cause liver damage that some doctors blame on Tylenol.

■ A new version of the popular allergy drug Seldane that dries your sinuses without putting you to sleep and doesn't interact with other drugs to cause potentially fatal heart arrhythmia.

■ An asthma inhaler with the generic drug albuterol that stops attacks, but is free of molecules believed to cause "hyperreactivity" a condition that makes asthma attacks more frequent, intense and potentially deadly.

For now, Sepracor's hopes for these drugs and others remain in its laboratories.

In the company's 10-year existence, it hasn't earned a profit. Its first medicine is at least two years away from your corner pharmacy.

As a result, Wall Street has largely

Study questions giving own blood

By Daniel Q. Haney

BOSTON (AP) — Giving patients their own blood during operations is much more expensive and less efficient than relying on ordinary donated blood, a study says.

Although the practice offers some patients peace of mind, it may not be worth the cost to the health care system because of the extra record-keeping required and because so much of what is stored is ultimately thrown away.

"From a societal perspective, it does not represent a very efficient use of scarce medical resources," said Dr. Jeff Etchason.

He and his colleagues analyzed the cost of the practice, known as autologous donations, at UCLA Medical Center in 1992. Their report was published in Thursday's issue of the New England Journal of Medicine.

Patients began storing up their own blood before operations in response to the AIDS epidemic in the early 1980s to avoid HIV and other viruses.

Since then, the blood supply has grown much safer, and the risk of getting AIDS or any other virus during a transfusion is minuscule. Nonetheless, doctors still frequently ask patients to give blood before surgery in case it's needed.

While autologous blood does occasionally save lives by preventing infections, one pint costs a hospital $198, or $48 more than an ordinary donation, the researchers calculated.

The costs add up because people frequently store more blood than is actually used, just to be safe.

Patients are typically not charged extra to have their blood stored, but such practices eventually contribute to higher medical costs for everyone.

An editorial in the journal defended the practice.

"The peace of mind that comes from having control over the risk of AIDS and other potentially harmful effects of transfusion is immeasurable, but it is nonetheless important to the patient undergoing surgery," wrote Drs. Cynthia J. Rutherford and Harold S. Kaplan of the University of Texas Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas.

Curb feeding frenzies

Staff Reports

Those cravings people get for a particular food can be as intense as a drug addict's, but they have nothing to do with hunger or with the body's need for a particular nutrients. According to the March 1995 issue of Reader's Digest magazine, recent research shows cravings are caused by stress; by biochemical factors which prevent the brain from communicating a feeling of fullness; or even by pleasant memories associated with certain foods. They keys to controlling feeding frenzies include recognizing the real triggers behind them and waiting for the craving to subside. If it doesn't, try substituting low-fat alternatives such as hard candies in place chocolate.

DRUG: Key is chemical concept called chirality ignored the company, bundling it with hundreds of fledgling biotechnology firms whose drug prospects are iffy at best.

However, stock analysts who've looked closer are telling their clients to buy Sepracor. Sepracor's drugs have have already been proven effective and safe for most people, they argue. All it's doing is making them safer.

The key to Barberich's plan is a chemical concept called chirality, a characteristic shared by the vast majority of today's drugs.

Chiral chemicals consist of two molecules known as isomers which share the same chemical structure, but in a mirror image — just like left and right hands. The name chiral is derived from the Greek word kheir, for hands.

Often only one isomer is responsible for a drug's desired results. The other may be inert, or it can interact elsewhere in the body with disastrous effects.

The best known example is Thalidomide, a drug given to pregnant women in the 1950s. One isomer cured morning sickness. The other caused severe birth defects.

Serious side effects often fail to turn up until after a drug is already on the market, being taken by millions. But, Barberich says no drugmaker wants to pull its drugs back into the lab to fix them for fear of inadvertently discovering still newer side effects.

Barberich founded Sepracor as a business that separates chemical components and purifies chemicals for use by other drug companies. He soon figured out he could use these technologies to extract the bad isomers, or other molecules, and repair these drugs for a fraction of the cost and time it takes to develop new ones.

That's a timely theory, with cost-conscious managed health care programs like health maintenance organizations growing rapidly across the country. HMOs demand that drugs be cost-effective as well as good for you and have extracted deep price discounts from drug companies.

In the late 1980s, Barberich gambled $10 million on preliminary research and by 1990 had patents pending on 40 of the best drug repair candidates. Ten of those patents have since been granted and six drugs are in human testing.

Barberich has secured critical financial help by signing partnership deals with two major drug companies. These partners will promote and sell some of the drugs — jobs Sepracor is too small to do — and pay Sepracor royalties of about 4 percent to 12 percent of sales.

Sepracor's version of the painkiller Orudis is licensed to Sterling Winthrop Corp., which is looking for a solution to waning sales of its Bayer aspirin line.

The new Seldane has been licensed back to its original inventor, Marion Merrell Dow Inc., which is helping to pay for Sepracor's research on the drug.

Sepracor's research has also uncovered some potential new uses for old drugs. The isomer in Orudis that would upset your stomach if you took it in a pill can be added to a toothpaste to treat periodontitis, a degeneration of the teeth caused by bacteria and inflammation, said research director Gunnar Aberg.

THE POPULAR anti-depressant Prozac may be useful in preventing migraine headaches, Aberg said.

Sepracor's success is far from guaranteed. The company acknowledges it must prove decisively that its drugs have significantly lower side effects — and work just as well.

"Marginal benefits won't be accepted in the marketplace today," said company pharmaceutical manager David Barlow.

In order to focus Sepracor squarely on this business, Barberich engineered the partial spinoff of two subsidiaries to shareholders last year. BioSepra Inc. is a drug and chemical purification company. HemaSure Inc. is developing ways to purify blood destined for use in transfusions.

If all goes well, analyst Stephen Handley of Smith Barney in New York estimates Sepracor's first batch of drugs could bring in nearly $3 billion in annual sales within three years.

Sepracor's royalties from those sales would cause its revenues to zoom from $15 million last year to $300 million, Handley predicts.

More importantly, they would transform Sepracor's roughly $20 million loss in 1994 to a $70 million profit by the year 2000, he estimates.

Handley's assessment? "I feel it has the earmarks, in terms of its stock, of being a home run."

Sepracor's drug candidates listed

NEW YORK (AP) — Sepracor Inc. is researching how to remove the molecules that cause side effects in some of medicine's best-known drugs. Some of the company's most promising prospects, including the drug's brand name, generic name, purpose, side effects being removed and its stage of development.

DEAR ABBY

Shy student breaks silence with modest plea for help

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: As a substitute teacher, I get a fresh perspective on students that regular teachers may miss.

Van Buren

On my first day in a class, I ask students to write three or four paragraphs describing themselves. The following is one student's essay. It was signed, "The Shy One."

"Dear Teacher: I am one of your students, but you may not have noticed me. I am the quiet one who always does what she is told and never gives you any trouble. I eat alone at lunchtime and sit alone at recess. I try to look like I'm OK because I have my pride, but inside I'm hurting.

"Giving an oral report is agony for me. When you let the team captains choose their teams for P.E., I'm always the last one to be picked, and it hurts so much. If you're sensitive and pick up on my feelings, I won't respond to your kindness, because it embarrasses me as much to be noticed as it hurts to be ignored.

"But please don't give up on me. Stick with me and help me become part of the group. You can make a big difference in my life as that special teacher who helped turn my life around."

Abby, please publish this. I am sure there are many who will relate to it. — RETIRED TEACHER

DEAR RETIRED TEACHER: Thanks for sharing a very special essay. Some actors have said that, as children, they were very shy and turned to acting because they were too insecure to be themselves.

DEAR ABBY: My husband is only 32. He has alarmingly high blood pressure, as did both of his parents. (Both developed heart conditions, had heart attacks and adult diabetes.)

"Gary" was scolded by his doctor once, but he continues to drink coffee, eat aspirin like candy, work long hours at his stressful business, and "relax" with half a dozen beers and Jim Beam. He is 25 pounds overweight, eats hash browns, bacon, blue cheese dressing, and ice cream at bedtime — all the while holding his stress inside.

When I try to discuss his health, he becomes very angry and defensive.

On the upside, he's a non-smoker, gave up hamburgers, pizzas and the saltshaker, and makes love aerobically.

What can I do to help him, Abby? I feel like I'm ... MARRIED TO A TIME BOMB IN ST. PAUL

DEAR MARRIED TO A TIME BOMB: You have good reason to be concerned. Your husband has an alarming family history and a potentially disastrous lifestyle. Discuss your fears with his doctor and ask him or her to lay down the law when your husband has his next physical. Then schedule one as soon as possible.

DEAR ABBY: I didn't see the column that referred to "Veni, Vidi, Visa" translated to "We came, we saw, we shopped," and to which a reader objected, so maybe I missed something.

I, too, am a long-ago Latin scholar (1936-1940), but looked on it as a rather clever play on words.

Maybe your reader objected to the use of plural rather than singular in the translation, but I think that's splitting hairs.

In a similar vein: Several months ago, a young man held a seminar here in the Twin Cities for several hundred post office employees from all over the United States. The purpose was to instruct them in how to use videotape for training employees.

When it was over, as mementos, he provided T-shirts with the legend "Veni, Vidi, Video" — "I came, I saw, I got it on tape."

I thought that was a clever play on words, too. — R.F. GOTTSACKER, EDINA, MINN.

DEAR R.F. GOTTSACKER: My "cute" play on "Veni, Vidi, Vici" somehow got mangled — as did the correction, which should have read: "You were not the first to spot my error; the first was William B. Gleeson of Minneapolis."

DEAR ABBY: Your version ("Veni, Vidi, Visa") of Julius Caesar's famous but brief report to the Roman Senate, "Veni, Vidi, Vici," was a cute play on words, but hardly accurate or original.

I have it on good authority that cavemen were the first to utter this historical phrase that described their ancient courting ritual.

"Veni, Vidi, Vici," literally translated actually meant, "I came, I saw, I conked her!" — DICK KOOP, FRESNO, CALIF.

Sunny Delights new flavors get mixed results from taste-testers

By Linda Anderson

My kids talked me into this one. But, after all, that's not unusual.

You've seen the commercials about "Sunny Delight" — you know, where the kids (very large kids) come in all hot and sweaty after playing basketball or something like that, and want something to drink. They always cruise through the refrigerator and the dialogue goes something like this: "We got soda, purple stuff...hey, here's some Sunny Delight!" And of course that's exactly what they want. Mom even comes through with another bottle of "Sunny D" after they drain the first one.

Anderson

My kids are big Sunny D fans too, only this time they wanted me to buy the new flavored ones. That's right, sports fans, Sunny D now comes in flavors, and while the product isn't quite "the purple stuff" yet, I imagine that's next.

We found Sunny Delight in the flavors of pink (strawberry), green (kiwi) and blue (raspberry), in addition to its usual yellow-orange citrus color.

All three flavors of this "artificially flavored enriched citrus beverage" are available in the 16-ounce size and cost 53 cents each.

Information on the label claims that the beverage "contains 5 percent juice," and a look at the ingredients label confirms that it can't be much more than that. In order, the first few ingredients are water, high fructose corn syrup (that's a form of sugar) and 2 percent or less of either concentrated kiwi juice, concentrated raspberry juice or concentrated strawberry juice, followed by concentrated lime, tangerine and white grape juices. That means you're getting mostly water and sugar, I guess.

Nutrition label lists 110 calories per 8-fluid ounce serving (remember, there's 16 ounces in these bottles, so you're getting two servings) and 20 percent of the vitamin A, 50 percent of the vitamin C and 20 percent of the thiamin suggested in the U.S. Recommended Daily Allowance.

Also, the label lists a telephone number for consumers to call with any questions or comments: 1-800-395-5849.

The taste test was conducted totally by my children and a friend. They all pretty much agreed — they liked the kiwi flavor, thought the raspberry was OK and weren't all that crazy about the strawberry. I did catch one of them adding a little bit of sugar to the kiwi flavored Sunny Delight at one point, although I think she was doing that because she forgot to shake it up before she drank it and all the sweet stuff was at the bottom of the bottle.

I imagine they'll talk me into buying the flavored Sunny Delights again. Besides, who knows what flavors will be out next. When they are, I'm sure we'll have to try them too.

Price listed is from a local supermarket. Prices at other locations may vary.

VIDEO: Expense of interactive video exercise equipment remains key factor trainers, who constantly move from one machine to another, are unlikely to benefit from an interactive product's story line.

Cost is a factor. The VRBike, for instance, lists at $7,995.

"I can buy 10 or 12 stair climbers for the cost of the bike," said First Lady owner R. Stuart Snyder. Even at that, it's a good deal because people show up just to ride the VRBike, he said.

Some manufacturers think this high-end market is limited.

"We've explored it, and it doubles the price of our machine," said Ken Germano, vice president of sales at Cross Conditioning Systems in Boulder, Colo. This pushes the price to "the screaming point of commercial operators," he said.

However, his company offers a computer port for video hookups just in case something changes, Germano said.

Alvarez-Cohen believes something will. Transcape's system is designed to be widely usable, and equipment that uses it could be price-competitive with noninteractive products, he said. Also, if aerobics gear follows the computer model, prices will fall while capability rises, he said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

WEDNESDAY, MARCH 22, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Profits will rise if you study your needs, then invest in new equipment. A new co-worker becomes a close ally. Summer will find you busier and happier than ever! A special friendship could slowly turn romantic. Next fall, travel for pleasure. Spending more time with children will let them know how much you care. Your financial fortunes receive a welcome boost early in 1996. Family ties grow stronger.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: "Star Trek" leader William Shatner, actress Stephanie Mills, sports announcer Bob Costas, French landscape painter Rosa Bonheur.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Striking an emotional chord with your co-workers will create a "can-do" mood. Spend money on improvements that will increase the value of your property.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Someone's warnings over the past few days could be justified by events that take place today. Protect your most precious possessions. Review a recent financial strategy if trying to clear up a monetary riddle.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your high energy and initiative put you in the driver's seat today. Expect to win a competition hands down! Romance continues to heat up. Show generosity.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): No matter how old you are, build for the future! Young people need your guidance. Be diligent. Finishing a job assignment as soon as possible will help you plan for a getaway weekend.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be straightforward about what you expect from an employer. It will not hurt to put your ambitions on the line and see what develops. A willingness to devote long hours should be rewarded.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You have energy to burn now! Why not take care of all those little details you have been shoving aside? Widen your social circle to include people involved in politics or the fine arts.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are no pushover when it comes to career matters. In fact, you are zealous about defending your turf. Pleasant social conditions make the workday fly by in a hurry. Phone faraway contacts.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): An element of good luck affects a business deal. Do not dismiss a hunch; it could be right on the money. Try to fit in some mild exercise this afternoon or evening. You will feel rejuvenated

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You may not be entirely out of the woods where an investment is concerned. Keep the faith, however. Better times lie ahead. A take-charge attitude can work wonders when dealing with someone indecisive.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Sticking to practical tasks now is your best bet. Try not to sound like a know-it-all when talking with co-workers. Seek their input on policy issues. Romance is chancy tonight. Go slow.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Think before you act. A financial investment deserves closer scrutiny. Heads up! A close liaison is under considerable pressure this week. Conforming to the norm may be out of line with your current thinking.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Others look to you as an authority figure. The respect you and a loved one have for each other gives you a lift. Your strategies may differ, but your ultimate goal is the same.

The bidding:

EAST	SOUTH	WEST	NORTH
1◇	4♠	Pass	Pass
Pass

Opening lead: Nine of ◇

There are two cardinal rules that declarers should apply before playing to the first trick. First, count your tricks. Then, plan your campaign.

South had a problem when East opened the bidding with one diamond, South's second suit. The jump to four spades was a practical solution.

West led the nine of diamonds and the lure of a quick discard on the ace of clubs proved irresistible. When East followed with a low diamond, declarer won the queen, crossed to the ten of spades and pitched a heart on the ace of clubs. A diamond from dummy was covered by the ten and ace and ruffed by West. A heart to the king allowed East to return a trump, and declarer still had to surrender three diamond tricks for a two-trick set.

Let's suppose that South had taken stock before hurrying to dispose of a loser. With the diamond lead, declarer has six trump tricks, two diamonds and the ace of clubs for a total of nine. As long as none of those got away, one diamond ruff on the board would be sufficient to land the game.

There was an obvious risk that West held a singleton diamond, but South had available an elegant counter. After winning the queen of diamonds at trick one declarer should immediately lead a low diamond from hand! Suppose East wins, cashes the ace and king of hearts and then returns a trump (best). Declarer wins in hand, ruffs a diamond with the ten of trumps, cashes the ace of clubs for a diamond discard and returns to hand with a club ruff. After drawing the remaining trumps, declarer's 10 tricks are intact.

Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia adds wild wetsuits to his line of clothing

SAN FRANCISCO — Those psychedelic colors weaving through the coral reefs aren't all tropical fish. Some are the handiwork of Jerry Garcia.

Grateful Dead's Jerry Garcia adds wetsuits to his line.

The Grateful Dead lead guitarist, whose artistry already decorates silk ties and shirts, has added wetsuits to his line.

J. Garcia WaterWear, made by Henderson Aquatics Inc. of Milville, N.J., features wetsuits with shoulder pieces and arm insets in wild patterns painted by Garcia and inspired by his love of scuba diving and the sea.

The suits started appearing in dive stores in Hawaii earlier this year and are working their way into shops worldwide. The suits sell for $230.

Beyond their fashion appeal, Garcia's wetsuits are made of a new fabric that the company claims weighs less and is softer on the inside and warmer than traditional wetsuits.

LOS ANGELES — Elton John's fans were still standing well into the wee hours, waiting for autographs from the singer.

More than 1,000 fans lined up Monday night outside a Tower Records store where, just after midnight, John began signing old and new recordings, including his latest, "Made in England."

The store stayed open after midnight to sell the album on its release date.

John, 47, has had dozens of hits since the early '70s, including "Rocket Man," and "I'm Still Standing." Two songs he wrote for "The Lion King" are nominated for an Oscar this year.

BERLIN — Karl Lagerfeld has made Robert Altman do a little tailoring on his film spoof of the fashion industry.

The fashion designer sued last week to stop the German distribution of "Ready to Wear" because of a scene in which he's described as a thief.

The offending word has been removed from the German-dubbed film, and the subbed version will open Thursday in Hamburg and Berlin, according to distributors Senator Film.

"Only one word has been changed. For legal reasons we can't say what the change was, because that would be the same as telling you, 'This is where the original said 'thief,'" said Barbara Schmidt, a spokeswoman for the distributor.

Lagerfeld is also trying to get the text changed in the French version of the movie.

UTRECHT, Netherlands — Prince Bernhard is working on his golf game again after cancer surgery, pneumonia and a long hospital stay.

Prince Bernhard is working on his golf game again.

The father of Queen Beatrix left Academic Hospital on Tuesday, nearly four months after having a tumor removed from his large intestine.

The Royal House said the 83-year-old prince walked 975 yards unaided and was "hitting a golf ball with great precision into an improvised hole."

After the operation Nov. 26, the prince developed pneumonia and was on life support.

LONDON — For Goldfingers only: Ian Fleming's fancy typewriter is going on sale in London.

The gold-plated typewriter has been owned by Fleming's family since his death in 1964 and will be auctioned May 5 by Christie's, which predicted it will sell for $8,000 to $12,800.

Fleming ordered the typewriter in New York in 1952 while working on "Casino Royale," the first of his James Bond novels. He returned to England before the typewriter was ready, so he asked his friend Ivar Bryce to deliver it.

"Here is one vital request," Fleming wrote to Bryce. "I am having constructed for me by the Royal Typewriter Company a gold typewriter which is to cost $174. I will not tell you why I am acquiring this machine."

NEW YORK — Frank Sinatra Jr. came to town Tuesday to talk about a tribute to his father planned for July 24-26 at Carnegie Hall. He said in a telephone interview that he would appear on the final evening in a musical recollection of his father.

"Most of the music he made, from the early '50s to the early '70s, I was there watching," Sinatra said.

Bulldogs pull out 2nd-half win

By Mike Butts

■ Class 5A Soccer Playoffs

ABILENE — Wichita Falls High got some of what it wanted in its 2-0 loss to Midland High in Tuesday's Class 5A area round soccer playoff. The Coyotes kept the shot total low and the offenses staggering. And they had the game tied at 0-0 at halftime.

But Midland High's Bulldogs advanced to the sectional round for the second year in a row by staying patient against a packed-in Coyote defense and getting two second-half scores at Hardin Simmons' Shelton Stadium. The Bulldogs (14-3) play Wichita Falls Rider (19-1-1), 7-1 area round winners Tuesday over San Angelo, Friday or Saturday in the sectional round.

"The coaches told us before the game that they were going to contain us and try to keep us from scoring," Bulldog forward Tyler Krueger said. "It was hard just taking a shot at first. (But) we had to take a shot before we could score."

Coyote coach Brad Butler sacrificed much of his offense by playing leading goal scorer and forward Kevin Dasher on defense. The ploy worked to hold Midland High to only two shots in the first half and six for the game. But the Wichita Falls offense couldn't make Watters to Philly?

PHILADELPHIA — The San Francisco 49ers are not ready to admit they've lost Ricky Watters to the Philadelphia Eagles. However, that hasn't stopped them from considering ways to replace him. Watters, the 49ers' leading rusher the past three seasons, signed a three-year, $6.9 million offer sheet from the Eagles last Saturday.

San Francisco could retain Watters, a transitional free agent, by matching the bid but the Eagles' structured the offer to make that as difficult as possible for the salary-cap strapped 49ers. Watters, a Harrisburg, Pa., native who made $875,000 in base salary last year, would receive $3.5 million in salary and a reporting bonus in 1995 from Philadelphia.

"You hate to lose a great player, but if you do pay that much, it's going to hurt you somewhere else at another position," said Dwight Clark, the 49ers' vice president of football operations. San Francisco is $450,000 under its salary cap and would have to come up with nearly $850,000 to match Philadelphia's offer, according to The Philadelphia Inquirer. "We're still looking into it," Clark said. "We're looking at some other moves that would have to be made to match their offer and if it's worth it."

Rebs survive late rally by Bobcats, 4-3

■ San Angelo good enough on paper to win but Lee's Britt Harper pitches complete-game win in District 4-5A baseball.

By Bill Petitt
Sports Writer

San Angelo Central coach Rod Moore looked dumbfounded as he leaned against the first baseline fence following a heartbreaking 4-3 loss to Midland Lee on Tuesday.

The man had to get a loaner bus from the Sterling City Independent School District after his team bus broke down en route to Midland. The team literally ran off the bus at 4:05 p.m. and were ready to play baseball by 4:27 p.m. Superman would have been impressed with the quick change and fast game of toss.

Then Moore had to watch a second-straight district game slip through his fingers during Lee's 4-3 win at Ernie Johnson Field.

"If you would have told me that we would have held Lee to four hits and that we would have out-hit them eight to four, I would have thought we won."

And on paper the Bobcats did play well enough to win, but Central left eight runners on base and three costly errors opened the door for Lee junior pitcher Britt Harper.

Harper, stepping into the rotation after Mark Holly was shelved for 120 days with tendinitis in his pitching shoulder, battled Central for seven innings and the win.

"Britt's a competitor," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "When you go to the mound and ask him how he feels and he tells you 'I'm finishing this game' that's what you want, especially on the mound. We had a couple of guys ready to go, but you want a competitor and since he was in the game I stayed with him."

"I thought I would go five innings today," said Harper of his 99 pitch, complete-game performance. "I didn't have that much control, but Elder got a big hit for us."

Murphey, Thompson start meet off with bang in 1,000 freestyle event

■ Chris Thompson and Corrie Murphey on Tuesday win the men's and women's opening events of the five-day meet.

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

If there were any doubts about the quality of the field at the 1995 Speedo Junior Olympic Championships held at the Mabee Memorial Aquatic Center, they were quickly put to rest.

The performances by Chris Thompson and Corrie Murphy in men's and women's 1000-yard Freestyle have started the Championships off with a bang.

in the men's race, Thompson, the lone attending member of the Roseburg Swim Team (Roseburg, Oregon), went out strong in the final heat, battling Jason Miles of First Colony (Missouri City, TX) for supremacy of the heat that included the race's fastest qualifiers.

Thompson put together sub-57 second, 50-yard intervals to eventually put distance between himself and Miles, and by the 900-yard mark, Thompson had a lead of more than three seconds. That lead would extend to 4.5 seconds with Thompson's 53.9 last lap. The culmination of Thompson's effort was a time of 9:15.88 and the Junior National West title.

"The goal was to win and to get the Senior National (qualifying) time," Thompson said. "It is going to help me a lot and might be intimidating for some of the other people (in Friday's 500-yard Freestyle). As long as you have something to work for, you can still go faster."

Thompson, who placed 13th in the 500-yards at this year's Senior Nationals, won today in a time that was not only good enough for a return visit to the Senior Nationals (at Pasadena in August), but also allowed him to qualify for the U.S. Olympic Trials to held in March of 1996 at Indianapolis.

Nerves don't stop Lee in win over MHS

■ The Lady Rebels admit to being nervous before facing cross town rival Midland High in 6-5A softball but the jitters didn't catch up with them as Lee won 13-0 in five innings.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

The Midland Lee Lady Rebels' softball team had a bad case of the nerves against Midland High Tuesday at the Bill Williams Softball Complex, but it sure didn't show in the score.

Lee pounded cross town rival MHS with a five inning, run rule 13-0 decision to stay unbeaten on the season at 18-0, but more importantly, climbed to 6-0 in District 4-5A play, needing only three more victories with six to play to earn at least a district playoff.

Outside of great pitching from Emily Hayes and scoring their first five runs in clutch style with two outs, the Rebels didn't need much more.

Hayes tossed the one-hit shutout, giving up just one bloop single to Joye Lewis to lead off the second inning. After that, Hayes KO'ed six consecutive Lady Bulldogs on strikes and ended the game with 11 strikeouts in only five innings of work.

"I was very nervous about this game going in," Hayes said. "I've been thinking about this game since Saturday afternoon. It was a big one for us since it was against Midland High."

Lee catcher Amee Pullin, who led the Rebel offensive attack with three RBIs, also admitted to being nervous before the game.

"I've been in a slump recently, so it was nice to drive in a couple of runs," Pullin said. "I think we were all sick to our stomachs before the game because this is the home town rivalry and this is probably the last time for the seniors to play against Midland High. We had never lost to them and we knew they wanted to beat us."

Lee will now face a key weekend with a make-up game Friday night against Abilene Cooper and a Saturday afternoon game against Abilene High, both in Abilene. A sweep there and Lee would probably be home free for a district title.

And if the win was huge for Lee, the loss was just as devastating for Midland High. MHS falls to 12-4 on the season, but also 4-3 in 4-5A play. With only two teams marching to the playoffs, the Lady Bulldogs can't afford another slip this season. They must hope

UCLA's O'Bannon could bring glory days back to Westwood

OAKLAND, Calif. — Ed O'Bannon has played here before, but always as the guy on the wrong team.

Either as the star among stars on the Artesia High School team that beat Fremont for the California state title in 1990, or the next big thing at UCLA playing Cal, O'Bannon was always someone to be admired only grudgingly.

Thursday, though, he plays at the Coliseum for either the last or next-to-last time, depending on whether the Bruins beat Mississippi State in the NCAA West Regional semifinal game. And he comes here with a pretty good chance of being the most popular player on the floor.

There are enough superb players in play this weekend — Erick Dampier and Darryl Wilson of Mississippi State, Joe Smith and Keith Booth of Maryland, Donny Marshall and Ray Allen of Connecticut, and O'Bannon's teammates Charles O'Bannon and Tyus Edney.

But the elder O'Bannon is probably best positioned to convert Bay Area fans to that most unlikely of groups — those who like UCLA without ever having attended it.

There is so little to dislike about him — that is, unless you have to guard him to save your

Allison at fault in fatal helicopter crash, board says

WASHINGTON (AP) — The helicopter crash that killed stock car driver Davey Allison probably was caused by Allison's mistakes and inexperience in piloting the aircraft, the National Transportation Safety Board concluded Tuesday. In its final ruling on the July 12, 1993, crash at the Talladega race track in Alabama, the safety board blamed Allison's "poor in-flight decision to land downwind in a confined area that was surrounded by high obstructions." The board also listed Allison's "failure to properly compensate for the tailwind condition" as a probable cause of the fatal crash. It said another factor related to the accident was Allison's lack of experience in the type of helicopter he was flying.

"In almost every accident that occurs, the individual that's operating the vehicle doesn't intend for an accident to occur," said board Chairman Jim Hall. "But in this particular situation, the facts speak for themselves."

A licensed airplane pilot, Allison had received his helicopter rating about a year before the crash. But he had had just 2.8 hours of flight instruction in his Hughes 369HS helicopter and had not practiced downwind landings like the one he was attempting at Talladega, in a fenced-in parking lot crossed by power lines. Allison, 32, died a day after the crash from head injuries. The only passenger on the helicopter, veteran driver Red Farmer, was seriously injured but recovered. Allison's estate and Farmer have filed a $25 million lawsuit against the helicopter's maker, McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Systems. The lawsuit contends that the crash was caused by a failed part in one of the helicopter's operating systems, called a collective socket. But Roff Sasser, an NTSB investigator, said Tuesday that investigators examined the collective socket both at the crash site and later at a lab.

"There was no indication of failure of that socket prior to the accident," Sasser said. "There was no evidence of any fatigue failure."

Sasser said there was no requirement that Allison receive special training to fly the 2,500-pound Hughes helicopter, since pilots do not have to be rated on specific helicopters if they weigh less than 12,500 pounds. But he said federal officials, "as a matter of practice," expect pilots to obtain training when flying a new type of helicopter because of differences among the aircraft.

it worth while, getting only three shots in the entire game and not forcing Bulldog goalkeeper Hobie Richardson to make a save.

"We tried to squeeze them in the middle and play really loose on the wings and not get beat behind us," Butler said. "I thought it was one of the best games we've played all year. It was good stuff."

The Bulldogs played against the wind in the first half and Wichita Falls looked like they were going to make a game of it. MHS entered the playoff with only three goals in the last three games. And with tougher playoff opponents looming they needed to find some offense fast.

"We were trying to keep a high-pace game and we did have that rhythm going," Bulldog forward Sean Parnell said. "We just weren't getting goals in the first half."

But 10 minutes into the seocnd half, Parnell broke the Coyote defense by scoring on a high ball with a kind of half bicycle kick on an assist from Krueger.

"It was real funny because the week we had off I went out with some friends and we worked on that same play and we pulled it off in the game," Parnell said.

With four minutes left and Wichita Falls having pulled their sweeper out, Patrick Sample came up with a loose ball and drove it in from close range to secure the win.

"We let Wichita Falls beat us to the ball in the first half but we came back in the second half and played more physical," Bulldogs coach Tom Esikhati said.

Parnell also had Midland High's best chances in the first half. He missed a header 14 minutes in and then passed wide to Tyson Yarborough.

"Right now we're playing with some injuries and it's hard to keep up a high-powered offense," Parnell said.

Bulldog stopper Kiley Miller still limped a little from a sprained knee and J.D. Garcia appeared to slightly aggrevate his sore knee.

The Coyotes' (12-10) only good chance to score was in the second half off a free kick. But James Debois couldn't control the ball fast enough in the box before Richardson grabbed it.

The Bulldogs should get a tough test from Rider. Midland High played San Angelo in its last game of the regular season March 7 and won by only one goal, 1-0.

"We're going to have to step our game up (against Rider)," Krueger said. "We can't make the same mistakes on offense or defense. We're going to have to clean up our act."

SWIM: Murphey in seven other events this week

(From 1C)

"It feels pretty gratifying after working with him this season," Roseburg coach Brian Fitch said. "He's certainly talented enough to qualify. It was just a matter of bringing it out in him. It is a big accomplishment for him."

Miles also qualified for the Senior national with a time of 9:20.38, showing the speed that comes in the last heat of a time trial like this. Even though that can cause some pressure at this level, knowing his family, who had driven all the way down from Oregon, was enough for the 16-year-old Thompson.

In the women's race, there was the same type of pressure in the last two heats, and that was expected with the four of the top five from last year's race back to challenge defending champion Erica Fisher of Carson Aquatics.

There was one problem. Corrie Murphy from the Husky Swim Club (Seattle) had bettered her qualifying mark (10:13.11) by 12 seconds. Her time of 10:01.11 in the fifth of seven heats would last to give the 15-year-old her a first junior national title.

"I didn't think I would go anywhere near 10:01," Murphy said. "I had no idea of winning this one. I wanted to win the heat and score good points for the team."

Murphy, who qualified for eight individual events this week, will only get to swim three more individual races and three relays. She will be among the favorites when she swims in the Wednesday's 200-yard Backstroke, Saturday's 1,650-yard Freestyle and 200-yard individual Medley.

Today's time was only .02 second short of the needed time to qualify her for the Senior Nationals where she will be swimming the 400-IM. She also qualified for the 100-backstroke, 200- and 500-freestyle for this meet, but will elcted to swim the other events..

"We work as hard or harder than anybody else," Husky Swim Club coach Jay De Hart, who also had Corrie's sister, Casey finish seventh said. "She (Corrie) is a racer and loves to race. She's a well-rounded swimmer."

De Hart also credits the facilties at the Mabee center with producing the fast times of the day. "The pool is nice and big not with big wide lanes, not that many waves so the kids will be able to swim fast," De Hart said. "The kids are excited to come down here. It is like a real special trip."

Today, the action at the Mabee center will begin at 9:30 a.m. with the preliminaries of the 100-yard Freestyle, 200-yard Breaststroke, 200-yard Backstroke and 200-yard Butterfly. The finals for the events start at 6 p.m.

for a Lee sweep over Cooper down the stretch and a win Saturday over Cooper to stay in the race.

"We played like crap. We stunk up the field," said MHS coach Sherri Culwell. "We made Emily Hayes look like an all-American, and when we didn't hit, we let it carry over to our defense and that was all she wrote. They scored a lot of runs early with two outs and that's just a lack of mental toughness.

"We've got Cooper Saturday and we have to have that win. We can't count on other people to do the job for us."

Lee got only nine hits to go with the 13 runs. Pullen drove in three runs with a two-run single and a sacrifice fly. Chrystal Smith and Suzanna Reed each drove in two runs. Christian Lance and Adrian Nobles both doubled in the game. Hayes actually won her own game in the bottom of the first with a two-out single to score Smith. That was all Lee really needed.

"We think Hayes is a better than average pitcher," said Lee coach J.C. Gotcher. "We feel like if we can score two or three runs, we have a chance to win. But we've been scrambling for runs lately, but they worked hard to get runs today. Now we face Cooper and that's the big one."

Only three Bulldogs reached base safely. Julie Williams reached on an error in the first. Lewis singled in the second and also reached on a passed ball after a strikeout in the fourth. None of the three made it as far as second base.

REBELS: Elder gets second homer of season for Maroon

(From 1C)

ond home run of the year over the left center field fence to give Lee an early 2-0 lead. The run came after Lance Watters reached base following an error by Jared Whitson. Elder's home run was the only extra base hit of the game for Lee which hit the ball sharply but to San Angelo defenders.

"I have been working hard this past year and it's starting to pay off," said Elder who played for the Midland High junior varsity a year ago.

But Harper weathered two Central threats to preserve the win.

In the sixth with one out, one run in and leading 4-2 with runners on first and second, Harper forced Central's Jared Whitson back to the mound which Harper tossed to third for a force out. Then right fielder Trey Lansford walked to load the bases.

Will Griffis, who had hit two singles in his first two at-bats, hit a bouncer back to first baseman Lance Watters who threw to home to end the inning.

In the seventh, leadoff hitter Jesse Martinez doubled but San Angelo's Jeromy Speciale struck out swinging and Hoelle hit a pop fly to right field, moving Martinez to third. Cleanup hitter August Pfluger hit a single to short center field to score Martinez, but designated hitter John Callahan struck out on a curve ball to end the game.

Lee will now move into the meat of its district schedule as the Rebels host Odessa Permian at Ernie Johnson Field at 2 p.m. Saturday. Lee lost to Permian 10-9 after allowing eight runs in the bottom of the seventh inning in the Tournament of Championship in March.

Chaps third in Galveston

GALVESTON — The Midland College golf team finished in a tie for third place at the Gulf Coast Intercollegiate Invitational on March 20-21.

The Chaps shot back-to-back 300's for a two-day score of 600 that left Midland seven shots behind the Coyotes of Weatherford College. Paris Junior College finished second five shots back and Navarro College tied Midland for third.

Midland College's Evan Little, who shot 146 for the two days, was named to the all-tournament team for his third-place effort. Little's 146 was three shots behind Paris' Darren Tibsharemy and one behind Odessa College's Jason Bryant.

On a bright note for the Chaps, who have now won nine tournaments while finishing second in one and third in two, is the conference win they picked up in the tourney.

The team total of 600 was two better than New Mexico J.C. Odessa College finished five shots back, Western Texas finished 17 shots behind and New Mexico Military pulled up the rear 27 shots behind.

The Chaps will play three more conference tournaments. Green Tree Country Club (in Midland) is one of three courses that will be the sites of the remaining 54-hole battles.

SuperSonics slip past Rockets, 104-102

The Associated Press

■ NBA

HOUSTON — Sarunas Marciulionis scored 20 points off the bench and Gary Payton hit two free throw with 16.5 seconds left, helping Seattle hold off the Houston Rockets 104-102 Tuesday night.

The Sonics snapped Houston's five-game winning streak and won for the sixth time in seven games.

Payton's free throws gave Seattle a 103-99 lead but the Rockets got within one again on Kenny Smith's 3-point basket with 6.8 seconds.

Heat 97, Pacers 95

MIAMI — In just his second game since coming off the injured list, Kahlid Reeves got the job done, totaling 17 points and seven assists as Miami edged Indiana.

Glen Rice led Miami with 28 points and hit a layup with 1.8 seconds to play to provide the margin of victory. Rice scored 10 of his team's 17 fourth-quarter points, including seven in the final 2: 14.

Bucks 115, Warriors 109

MILWAUKEE — Todd Day scored 33 points and Milwaukee beat Golden State, spoiling the return of Bob Lanier, the Warriors interim coach and former Bucks star. Lanier, 7-13 for the Warriors since Don Nelson resigned under pressure, played five seasons in Milwaukee, retiring in 1984.

The Warriors, down by 21 points early in the third quarter, pulled to 108-107 with 33.3 seconds remaining when Latrell Sprewell grabbed Donyell Marshall's air ball and dunked it.

Magic 126, Suns 102

ORLANDO, Fla. — Shaquille O'Neal and Anfernee Hardaway each scored 26 points as Orlando beat Phoenix in a showdown between the teams with the best records in the NBA. The triumph stopped a three-game losing streak — Orlando's longest this season — and improved the Magic's Eastern Conference-leading record to 49-17, one-half game better than the Suns' 48-18.

Pistons 102, Nets 95

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Allan Houston scored 28 points and Grant Hill added 25, leading Detroit over New Jersey and ending their six-game losing streak.

The Pistons played the second half without Joe Dumars, who sustained a double groin pull early in the game. New Jersey lost for the fourth time in five games.

Hornets 78, Knicks 69

NEW YORK — Charlotte Hornets overcame a 35-point effort from New York's Patrick Ewing to hold off the Knicks.

The Hornets beat the Knicks for the third time this season, holding New York to a season low and breaking its three-game winning streak.

Former teammate of Reggie Lewis says Lewis, Bias used cocaine

BOSTON (AP) — A 23-year-old man said he sold cocaine to Reggie Lewis twice in 1988 in a New Bedford housing project, and a former teammate said he, Lewis and then-Maryland star Len Bias used cocaine in 1985.

The new allegations were reported in Boston newspapers today. Lewis was captain of the Boston Celtics when he collapsed and died while shooting baskets in July 1993.

Bias died of cocaine intoxication in 1986, shortly after he was drafted in the first round by the Celtics in 1986. Lewis died of a heart ailment, and two doctors have said scars on his heart were consistent with cocaine use. The Celtics will retire his number tonight. It was the latest in a see-saw of disclosures about Lewis' alleged drug use.

Robert Fonseca, 23, told the Boston Herald he sold four small packages of cocaine to Lewis for $100 in June or July 1988 in a New Bedford housing project and several weeks later sold him cocaine for $70.

"I'm only telling you (Lewis) was there, and he bought drugs from me. I'm not telling you it was his money; I'm not telling you he did (the cocaine). I'm telling you he handed me the money," Fonseca told the Herald.

Fonseca, a high school dropout, has a record of drug and property crimes and spent 19 months in prison for drug trafficking.

He said Lewis was in the driver's seat of a red Jeep Cherokee when he paid for the cocaine the first time. An unidentified passenger denied being involved in any drug activity, the Herald said.

The Associated Press was unable to reach Fonseca early today.

The allegation linking Lewis and Bias in cocaine use was made to The Boston Globe Wednesday night by Derrick Lewis, who played with Reggie Lewis, not a relative, on the Northeastern University basketball team.

Derrick Lewis said he, Reggie Lewis, Bias and another player used cocaine in the summer of 1985 in a McDonald's restaurant in Marshfield, less than one mile from a Celtics rookie camp. Reggie Lewis was a sophomore at Northeastern at the time.

"We went into the McDonald's. It was real late so nobody was there," Derrick Lewis told the Globe.

"Len went into the bathroom, took a toot, then me, then Reggie, then the next guy. We'd make sure nobody was coming. Then we went and had a couple of beers at anmother place and got real toasted.

"Then we went home. After that we never talked about it," Derrick Lewis said.

But another Northeastern teammate and close friend of Reggie Lewis, Andre LaFleur, told the Globe that Lewis told him he did not use cocaine that night and was shocked that Bias did.

"Reggie didn't think anything like that could happen," LaFleur told the Globe in a telephone interview from Australia where he plays professional basketball. It was probably his first brush with cocaine," LaFleur said. "Reggie wasn't into that. He did not take drugs."

Reggie Lewis' widow, Donna Harris-Lewis, has said her late husband did not use cocaine and she questioned the credibility of Derrick Lewis.

"After what happened to Len Bias, do you think Reggie would do anything to jeopardize playing in the NBA? No way," she said in an interview Monday night with WCVB-TV.

Kukoc lost in first game with Jordan

DEERFIELD, Ill. (AP) — When Michael Jordan retired in 1993, Toni Kukoc cried. Europe's Earl of Roundball so very much wanted to play with the NBA's Prince of Mid-Air.

Now that Jordan has un-retired, Kukoc has his chance. Or so it appears.

But Kukoc seemed lost Sunday during Jordan's return engagement, and Chicago Bulls coach Phil Jackson already is talking about lineup changes.

"Toni's the only member of the starting group who has never played with Michael, so he's got the most adjusting to do. It's going to be a while," Jackson said. "We're going to stick with Toni a little bit and see how he does. We always know that we can find a way for him to come off the bench and contribute."

When the Bulls rallied in the second half of Sunday's 103-96 overtime loss at Indiana, Kukoc was on the bench. Jackson used unheralded Corie Blount, a better rebounder and defender, at power forward. Either Blount or Larry Krystkowiak, who on Tuesday was activated from the injured list, could eventually start.

Kukoc, who has avoided the media the last few days, hates coming off the bench. When he finally cracked the starting lineup in late December, he considered it a milestone in his two-year NBA career. Jordan said he'll do whatever he can to help Kukoc, who takes averages of 16.3 points, 5.4 rebounds and 4.6 assists into tonight's game at Boston Garden.

"I'll just try to get to know him personally," Jordan said. "He's a very emotional type of guy. He's in another country and still has some sense of uncomfortability here."

Jordan did so often Sunday, even patting Kukoc on the back after he was criticized by Jackson. Despite Jordan's support, Kukoc had only 7 points, three rebounds and one assist in 27 minutes.

Oklahoma State, Wake Forest to do battle in East

WINSTON-SALEM, N.C. (AP) — Randolph Childress took this year's preseason hype to a new level.

The two-time all-Atlantic Coast Conference guard was practicing at such a high level back in October that Wake Forest coach Dave Odom had to tell him to "back off."

"I had never seen a guy practice that hard, that early, who was that good and that important to a team," said Odom, whose top-seeded club is preparing to take on No. 4 seed Oklahoma State in the East Regional semifinals Friday night at the Meadowlands.

Odom was hoping his senior would help freshmen guards Jerry Braswell and Tony Rutland, along with frontcourt newcomer Ricky Peral, blend into the offense. In other words, Wake Forest was a young team looking for an identity.

But Childress unknowingly was hindering the process in practice with his amazing skills. Odom also believed there was no way Childress could keep up such a crazed basketball pace without tiring midway through the ACC regular season.

"I felt he was doing so much that nobody else would have a chance to have a hands-on apprenticeship," said Odom, recalling the day he met with Childress almost five months ago. "He was rushing to play the point, then he was rushing to play the second guard. He was doing both at the same time. He was trying to rebound and draw charges. There was nothing left for the others to learn to do."

That's when Odom, ACC coach of the year three of the last five seasons, decided it was time for him and Childress to talk.

"I just asked him to back off and he did," said Odom. "I think early in December it hurt him a little bit. He wasn't ready to play in the games as he shifted gears again to going all-out. He was playing at a speed he hadn't played at in three or four weeks and it was different for him."

Childress' scoring average in December dipped to 17.1 points per game along with his shooting percentage, while his assist-to-turnover ratio reached the highest of his career.

"There were questions of what's wrong with Randolph? Well, the truth of the matter was I probably messed him up early," Odom said. "But I wouldn't change what we did because ...it's worked out OK."

Childress recalled that meeting and then another one he had with Odom before the team's stretch drive and the school's first ACC title in 33 seasons.

"Coach said he would let me know when it was time for me to start playing," Childress said of the October meeting.

Childress said Odom turned him loose in the January meeting.

"He said, 'Right now we have put ourselves in a situation to make a run at (the ACC title), now it starts with you,'" said Childress, who is averaging 20.1 points per game and shooting 83 percent from the foul line for the Demon Deacons (26-5). "'It's time for you to play how everyone else expected you to play at the beginning of the season and how I know you can play and do it now.'"

Childress responded, scoring a record 107 points in three ACC tournament wins and leading the team on a 12-game winning streak. But more importantly, the once immature team has blended as a unit under his leadership.

Members of the Old Dominion band, from left, Kate Petze, Tina Reynolds and Shawn East support the Monarchs has they head into the third overtime in their 89-81 3 OT win over third-seeded Villanova. The No. 14-seeded Monarchs were defeated in the second round.

Cowboys don't expect high-scoring game with Deacons

STILLWATER, Okla. (AP) — Oklahoma State coach Eddie Sutton doesn't expect a high-scoring game Friday when his fourth-seeded Cowboys play Wake Forest in the NCAA East Regional semifinals.

"I would think this game is one that will be played in the high 50s to the mid-60s unless something unforeseen happens," Sutton said Tuesday. "I believe you're looking at two ballclubs who fully realize the importance of the game and I don't think they'll leave anything on the court when the game is over."

Sutton said he sees a number of similarities between his team and the No. 1 seed.

"I think our philosophies are very similar," he said. "Both Wake and ourselves try to guard people; try to define what's a good shot and make sure our players understand shot selection."

He said both teams have fine centers with Oklahoma State's Bryant Reeves and Wake Forest's Tim Duncan and outstanding perimeter players with the Cowboys' Randy Rutherford and Wake Forest's Randolph Childress.

"I don't think you're going to shut down Duncan or you're going to shut down Childress and I don't think they will be able to shut down our two top players," Sutton said. "And, in a game like this, many times it's those other players who elevate their game to allow their team a chance to win."

Oklahoma State is back to the Final 16 for the third time since Sutton was named coach.

Tar Heels ignore tradition in game plan for Hoyas

■ Southeast

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. (AP) — North Carolina players have followed a time-honored tradition of pointing to the passer after they score a basket as a way of saying "thanks."

But that tradition may be ignored in North Carolina's Southeast Regional semifinal game against Georgetown. The reason: Not enough time, says senior Pat Sullivan.

"They play a little different style than the Georgetown teams of the past," the forward said Tuesday. "It's almost like a frenzied style. We can't get caught up in playing that type of basketball.

"We won't even have time to celebrate (after a basket) or thank the guys. I hope Coach Smith understands you have to sprint back on defense. ... I'll thank somebody after the game."

Thursday's game at Birmingham, Ala., will be a rematch of the 1982 national title game won by the Tar Heels on Michael Jordan's jumper in the closing seconds. It features coaches — Dean Smith and John Thompson — with 1,352 combined wins. Georgetown won the two teams' only matchup since then, 93-81 in the old ACC/Big East Challenge in 1989. Thompson had to change his coaching style this season with the addition of freshman Allen Iverson, who averages 20.3 points and may be the quickest guard in the country.

"I haven't seen anyone who can stay in front of the guy," Sullivan said of Iverson. "It seems like he doesn't have a conscious either. That can be dangerous. He's going to keep shooting."

While North Carolina (26-5) was ranked No. 1 for more weeks than any team in the nation, the second-seeded Tar Heels now don't appear to be one of the tournament favorites. That's just fine with Sullivan, who made a key free throw against Michigan in North Carolina's 1993 championship victory.

"It's nice to know we're not the favorite," he said. "I look at this team sort of like in '93 — we were more of a surprise team and we just kept winning ball games.

"We had all that pressure on us last year and every time we stepped on the court people expected us to win. That's always the case when you put that Carolina jersey on, but it's a nice feeling that you are not the only one people are shooting for. Arkansas is feeling what we felt last year."

The Tar Heels are making their 14th trip in the last 15 years to the round of 16 — tops in the nation. Indiana and Kansas rank second during that span with nine each.

Jayhawks have advantage of home away from home

■ Midwest

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Put away your sweets, Forrest Gump. Having to play Kansas in Kemper Arena has convinced Jeff Jones that life is more like the NCAA tournament than a box of chocolates. Sometimes it's unfair, and that's OK.

"I do think it is a definite advantage for Kansas," said Jones, whose Virginia Cavaliers (24-8) will meet the top-seeded Jayhawks in the Midwest Regional semifinals in Kemper Friday night. "But it's the best possible way to do it. Yeah, it's unfair. But there are a lot of things in life that are unfair."

Sitting only about 40 miles from the Kansas campus, Kemper Arena was dubbed "Allen Fieldhouse East" by former Oklahoma coach Billy Tubbs, who insisted the familiar surroundings and partisan crowd provides the Jayhawks almost as big an advantage as they enjoy in their own famous gym.

The NCAA selection committee was bombarded by criticism for making the Jayhawks the No. 1 seed, seemingly giving them an easy road to the Final Four.

It's criticism Jones won't buy. "There's no way Kansas, who deserved the No. 1 seed, should be penalized simply because the regional was being held at a site close to their campus...We've played in loud arenas before. We're just going to have to deal with it and let our play on the court speak for us."

UCLA: Ed O'Bannon has typical college story

(From 1C)

■ West

scholarship, or your hatred of the Bruins transcends all sense.

Despite his protestations in favor of his brother Charles, or Edney, or Toby Bailey or George Zidek or J.R. Henderson, he is the heart, spine and most of the digestive system of a UCLA team that has been accused of lacking the innards for greatness.

His is the typical college story — high school star commits to Vegas, then transfers to UCLA when Vegas goes on triple secret probation; blows out his knee before his freshman year and needs 15 months, two surgeries and the Achilles' tendon of a cadaver to make himself whole.

The part about the cadaver he discusses grudgingly; borrowing parts from dead guys is a little too Ricki Lake for dinner table discussion. The agony of rehabilitation, he has no problem with.

"The second surgery was the hard part," he said. "I'd gone through all the rehab, and I was feeling like I'd turned the corner. But when they said they had to do the second surgery, that's when I got down."

But repairing the body was easy. The real test came last year, when he discovered he was going to be a father. He admits he lost a fair amount of focus as he considered the more dramatic change in his life, and on a team requiring a firm player's hand, he could not give it, even though he was the team's best player.

O'Bannon could have turned pro at that point, what with a child on the way and all, but chose instead to stay, "because I hadn't done what I had come to UCLA to do."

Aaron O'Bannon was born in April, and Ed O'Bannon learned perspective. That basketball wasn't the be-all and end-all, but it was important enough to do right. That meant not only playing better than he ever had, but making sure everyone else did, too.

"I've been here longer than anyone else," he said. "And I felt more and more comfortable with the idea that this was my team."

It also meant that if Aaron was going to get to watch Dad on the tube, Dad had better do things correctly.

"I care about him more than I do myself," O'Bannon said, "so I end up thinking about my teammates more than I do myself. I feel freer now because of him, more, I guess businesslike is the right way to put it. I don't dunk as much as I used to. I just lay it up sometimes, because two points is two points. And I'm getting old now. I have to preserve my legs."

Yeah, right.

But the part about UCLA being his team is absolutely spot-on. That means not that the ball would always be his in crunch time, but that nobody else would be allowed to spare effort. O'Bannon works every possession now, even if he doesn't touch the ball. The messages coach Jim Harrick cannot deliver, O'Bannon does, through word and deed. You didn't get to see the best of Ed O'Bannon last weekend. The 92-56 win over Florida International was not quite worth the trouble, and the 76-75 win over Missouri was Edney's game.

But you didn't need to. O'Bannon long ago elbowed his way onto the country's short list, with Smith, Rasheed Wallace and Jerry Stackhouse of North Carolina, Damon Stoudamire of Arizona, Randolph Childress of Wake Forest and Shawn Respert of Michigan State. He has had big number games in every significant UCLA game this year. Without the injury, O'Bannon might have left early for the NBA. As it is, he is one of a dwindling number of great seniors in the college game, and his increased maturity has helped take UCLA to a level it hadn't reached since 1980.

Moreover, Ed staying at UCLA made it easier for his brother Charles to come as well. It improved UCLA's national recruiting profile to the point where it is again competitive with the top schools in the rest of the nation.

Now O'Bannon is here one last time, or two, before he moves on to the NBA, and the wise basketball fan will set aside parochial considerations and see him for what he has become — a great basketball player, made all the greater by the adversity of injury and the rush of maturity.

Prices retreat

NEW YORK — Oil prices drifted lower Tuesday as Kuwait's oil minister spoke out to dispel fears that an oil workers' strike would hurt production.

Trading was uneven as the April futures contract expired and the market waited for a trade group's weekly report on fuel supplies.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $18.43 per barrel, down 13 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange. The May contract finished down 6 cents at $18.41 per barrel.

Local crude purchasers lowered their posted price 25 cents to $16.75 a barrel.

After trading was over, the American Petroleum Institute reported the nation's crude and gasoline inventories dropped last week.

Crude oil stocks amounted to 325.583 million barrels, down from 325.990 a week earlier. The inventory of motor gasoline slipped further, to 218.291 million barrels from 221.818 million barrels a week earlier.

Kuwaiti Oil Minister Abdul Mohsen al-Madaj said Tuesday the nation's oil output has not been affected by the four-day strike by workers. The country produces two million barrels of oil a day.

Union leaders said the walkout has started to affect production.

Natural gas prices were down with contracts for delivery in April settling at $1.513 per 1,000 cubic feet, down 1 cent from Monday.

Dollar rebounds

NEW YORK — Rumors that Japan would tolerate a lower dollar sent the U.S. currency spilling to a record low in Asian dealings Tuesday but it recovered later when the Japanese central bank denied the rumors as silly.

The dollar also surged against the mark as dealers took profits on the German currency, which began to retreat against its European counterparts.

In late New York trading, the dollar was quoted at 89.21 yen, down from 89.31 late Monday. The dollar traded as low as 88.38 yen before recovering, breaching the previous nadir of 88.65 yen in Tokyo on Monday.

The dollar also was changing hands late in New York at 1.4122 marks, up from 1.4030.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Monday: 1.1722 Swiss francs, up from 1.1665; 4.9940 French francs, up from 4.9835; 1,705 Italian lire, down from 1,734; and 1.4019 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4071.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5853, up from $1.5745.

Stocks sag

NEW YORK — Stocks pulled back from their peaks Tuesday after a sudden afternoon sell-off in the bond market prompted investors to collect profits.

The Dow Jones industrial average finished at 4,072.61, or 11.07 points below where it started the day.

Market measures comprising a wider range of stocks also lost ground. The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 0.47 to 267.58, Standard & Poor's 500 stock index dropped 1.08 to 495.07 and the Nasdaq Stock Market composite shed 0.71 to 809.78. All three had hit record highs on Monday.

Declining issues outnumbered advancers by about 11 to 9 on the Big Board.

Most affordable housing in Midwest

■ El Paso and Austin are ranked among cities having the least affordable housing.

By John D. McClain
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Despite higher mortgage rates that drove up housing costs in much of the nation last year, Midwestern cities remained the most affordable markets in the final months of 1994.

The National Association of Home Builders said Tuesday that Lima, Ohio, topped its Housing Opportunity Index during the October-December period for the second straight quarter.

San Francisco remained at the bottom of the list, a spot it has occupied since the association began the surveys in the first quarter of 1991.

In Texas, El Paso ranked as the fifth least affordable market nationwide; while Austin ranked 22nd.

And, the Home Builders said, the most affordable areas of the nation primarily were in the Midwest, including 15 of the 25 most affordable markets in the survey of 183 metropolitan areas. About 500,000 sales of new and existing homes were analyzed.

The index measures the proportion of homes sold in a market that a family earning the median income in that market could afford to buy. The index takes into consideration differences in property tax and insurance rates in each community.

The national opportunity index fell to 62.3 during the fourth quarter, from 66.8 a year earlier. That meant a family earning the national median income of $39,900 could have purchased 62.3 percent of the homes sold during the quarter. The national median price of a home was $114,000.

The median is the midpoint, meaning that half of the incomes totaled more and half totaled less, or that half of the homes cost more and half cost less.

"Housing affordability has been somewhat diminished over the past year by rising mortgage rates," explained Jim Irvine, a Portland, Ore., home builder and the association president.

"Fortunately, rates are still in the single digits and are favorable for home buying," he added. "Plus, many buyers are turning to adjustable-rate mortgages with lower initial rates to save on their monthly payments."

The rate the association used to calculate the index is a national, weighted average of both adjustable- and fixed-rate loans. That rate rose to 7.82 percent in the fourth quarter, from 7.72 percent in the third and 6.80 percent a year earlier.

Lima registered an 88.4 on the index, up from 87.4 during the third quarter but down from 91.8 in the October-December period of 1993.

That meant that a family earning the median income of $38,600 could have purchased 88.4 percent of the homes sold in Lima during the quarter. The median price of a home in Lima was $57,000.

San Francisco, on the other hand, registered 18, up slightly from 17.8 in the third quarter but down from 18.5 a year earlier. Thus, a family earning the median income of $57,600 could afford to purchase just 18 percent of the homes sold there.

In addition to the Midwest cities, the 25 most affordable markets included six in the Northeast and four in the South.

The West placed 19 areas among the 25 least affordable markets, including 15 in California and one each in Hawaii, Nevada, New Mexico and Oregon. Completing the lists were three areas in the Northeast and South.

Besides Lima in the Midwest, the most affordable markets in other regions were Dutchess County in the Hudson Valley north of New York City, in the Northeast; Melbourne, Fla., in the South, and Boulder, Colo., in the West.

In addition to San Francisco in the West, the least affordable markets in each region were Chicago in the Midwest; and New York in the Northeast.

Kmart chief Antonini tends resignation

By Brian S. Akre
AP Writer

DETROIT — Kmart Corp. president and chief executive Joseph E. Antonini resigned under pressure from shareholders Tuesday after two years in which the company's stock lost more than half its value.

Antonini

Under the 53-year-old Antonini, Kmart proved unable to compete with such chains as Wal-Mart, Sears and Target.

In January, the board forced Antonini to relinquish the chairmanship to Donald Perkins, a former chief executive of Jewel Cos.

The board wanted to give Antonini more time to focus on Kmart's core discount stores; the company also owns Borders-Waldenbooks and Builders Square stores.

But institutional shareholders grew increasingly impatient with the pace of Antonini's efforts, Perkins said. Kmart recently closed 110 poorly performing stores and is cutting 6,000 jobs.

"Shareholders were saying, 'We don't care what you're trying to do. We don't want to give you the time to do that,'" Perkins said.

The board agreed unanimously in a conference call Monday night to accept Antonini's resignation, Perkins said.

Antonini, who spent 31 years at Kmart, issued a brief statement confirming his departure and declined to be interviewed.

Wall Street appeared pleased with the news. Kmart's stock closed up $1 to $13 a share in heavy trading on the New York Stock Exchange.

Analysts have criticized Kmart for poor inventory control and merchandising.

In the past year Antonini brought in new managers to try to improve merchandising. He also helped create popular merchandise collections from celebrities such as Jaclyn Smith and Martha Stewart.

Anthony N. Palizzi, executive vice president, will serve as interim president.

Rollercoaster Market

A trader watches a monitor on the floor of the New York Stock Exchange Tuesday. After soaring almost 30 points, to above 4,100, stocks sank 11.07 points to 4,072.61. Stocks sank after an abrupt afternoon selloff in the bond market blunted buying interest in equities. The retreat snapped a three-session string of record-setting advances in the Dow Jones Industrial Average.

3-Com Corp, Dell Computers announce alliance to market networking products

By N.Y. Times News Service

In the latest example of marketing alliances in computing, Santa Clara-based 3Com Corp. said yesterday it will market its networking products with Dell Computers, one of the biggest personal computer makers.

On the news, 3Com stock jumped 13/8 to 563/8, while Dell rose 1/8 to 441/2.

Dell will market 3Com products through its sales force. The alliance also calls for shared marketing and industry information.

"Dell's alliance with 3Com will increase the scope of its networking solutions, providing corporate customers with a single point of accountability for all their systems' requirements," the companies said in a statement.

In a related pact, San Jose-based Cisco Systems announced an expanded agreement with Madge, a computer networking firm in the Netherlands, to promote each other's products.

Cisco, for example, will market a networking switch developed by Madge.

Both companies have worked together since 1990.

After the announcement, Madge shares jumped 41/2 to close at 211/8 — an all-time high.

In other computer networking news, shares in StrataCom of San Jose rose 27/8 to close at 421/2 after announcing an R&D agreement with Net Edge, which makes phone equipment for regional telephone companies.

The agreement could allow StrataCom to get into business relationships with the Baby Bells.

Handling of airlines case prompts Treasury probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it came to the government's enforcement of the Vietnam trade embargo, major airlines found the skies far friendlier than a small Texas charter service did, government documents show.

In 1990, the Treasury Department prosecuted to the maximum BaseOps International of Houston for paying $400 to Vietnam and $200 to Cuba when planes it chartered flew through the two countries' airspace.

The company president was sent to prison for six months, and the company was fined.

Less than two years later, at least four major companies — Delta, United, Federal Express and Northwest — disclosed they had paid Vietnam hundreds of thousands of dollars for the same thing.

This time, Washington gave the airlines written reprimands and licenses to make future payments legal.

The vastly different treatment, by the same Treasury Department office, had the government's own enforcers complaining about "selective prosecution" and "preferential treatment," documents obtained by The Associated Press show.

An investigation was recently opened by the Treasury inspector general, the department's internal watchdog.

At least two Office of Foreign Assets Control section chiefs objected in writing to a decision by R. Richard Newcomb, the office's director, to reject criminal prosecution of the big airlines and give them licenses.

When questioned recently by the inspector general, the agent who handled the first prosecution described the internal uproar caused by Newcomb's decision to overrule the staff recommendation to prosecute the airlines.

"These decisions by Newcomb caused expressions of outrage and heated debate within the office," agent Steve Plitman wrote in an affidavit.

Plitman, who has a separate personnel action pending against his boss, wrote that Newcomb's decision came "despite potential accusations of 'selective prosecution' .... and the appearance of granting preferential treatment to the large airlines."

Newcomb did not return phone calls to his office seeking comment.

The conduct of the Office of Foreign Assets Control is being reviewed by both a federal grand jury in Washington and the inspector general after earlier AP stories raised questions about other embargo enforcement cases.

It is common for airlines to pay foreign governments a small fee, known as an overflight payment, when their planes fly through a country's airspace.

If that country is under a U.S. embargo, however, such payments are prohibited without special permission from the Office of Foreign Assets Control.

BaseOps was indicted by the U.S. attorney and pleaded guilty in August 1990 to violating the Trading With the Enemy Act.

Club offers marijuana to cancer, AIDS patients

By Michelle Locke
Associated Press

SAN FRANCISCO — Behind the nondescript door is no ordinary smoky dive. If your nose doesn't detect the sweet smell of marijuana, the sign behind the bar says it all: "Thank you for pot smoking."

At the San Francisco Cannabis Buyer's Club, AIDS, cancer and glaucoma patients come to buy and smoke the illegal weed they say is one of the few things that give them relief.

"This is about love," said Dennis Peron, who founded the club after his partner died of AIDS in 1990. "People in the autumn, in the sunset of their lives, have a right to any medicine that helps them feel better."

Although Peron knows he is risking arrest, the 3,200-member club has yet to be busted.

In 1992, the city Board of Supervisors, in a unanimous resolution signed by Mayor Frank Jordan, ordered police and the district attorney to make enforcing laws against marijuana as medicine their lowest priority.

"The mayor supports medicinal use of marijuana as long as it's under the supervision of a doctor," said Jordan spokeswoman Meredith Halpern.

To join the club, you have to produce a photo ID and a doctor's letter certifying a condition that could be alleviated by pot. Members are issued a prosaic-looking membership card (and if you lose it twice, you're out.)

The club, on the second story of a drab building near the Castro, San Francisco's mostly gay district, buys in bulk and sells at a small markup.

Since the drug is purchased underground, it's more expensive than growing your own, and members are charged $5 to $25 a gram.

'People in the autumn, in the sunset of their lives, have a right to any medicine that helps them feel better.'
— Dennis Peron, founder Cannabis Buyer's Club

But Peron said that's about 50 percent cheaper than street prices.

Similar clubs have been formed in major U.S. cities in recent years, said Bob Randall of the Washington-based Alliance for Cannabis Therapeutics. But he wouldn't say where or how many, because the clubs are illegal.

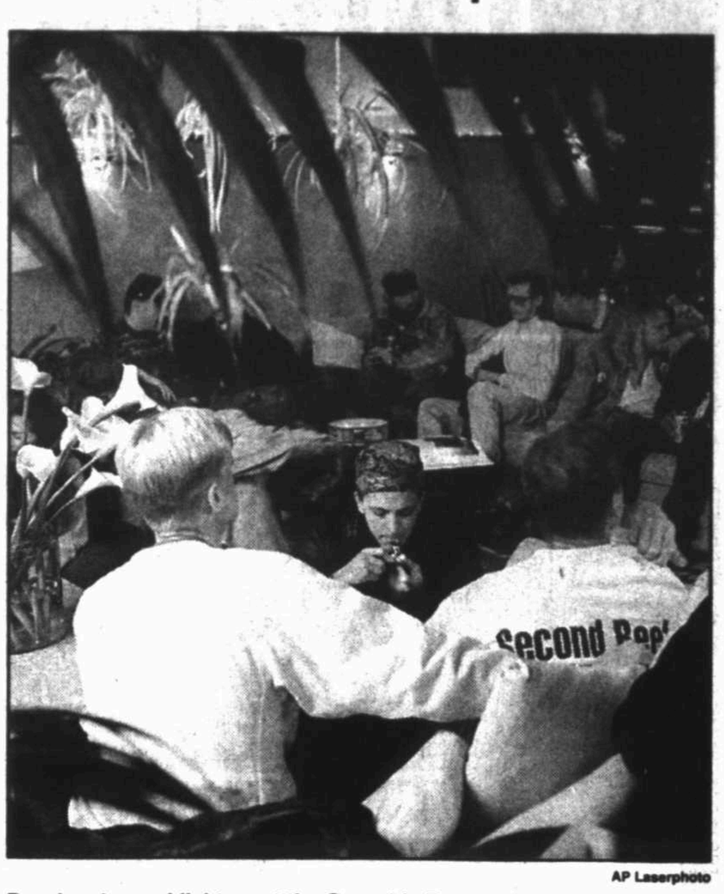
On a recent morning, the clientele at the nonprofit San Francisco Cannabis Buyer's Club reflected the democratizing power of disease.

Old, young, black, brown, white, well-dressed and grungy were all represented in the 50 to 100 people sitting at small tables or lounging on couches as candles glowed dimly through the haze and a stereo pounded out '70s hits.

Hazel, a 75-year-old retired office manager, said she takes a couple of tokes a day, just enough to relieve the pressure in her eyes from glaucoma but not so much that she gets that "very uncomfortable" feeling of being high.

Michael, who has Hodgkin's disease, stops by every two weeks for the only cure he's found for the waves of nausea that follow his chemotherapy.

Bob, a 36-year-old AIDS patient whose face is covered with the dark lesions of Kaposi's sarcoma, said he comes to the club for the marijuana that keeps his appetite up and the support that boosts his spirit.



AP Laserphoto

People relax and light up at the Cannabis Buyer's Club in San Francisco, which was established to give people with medical problems access to marijuana to help combat nausea and lack of appetite.

At one counter, volunteers sold food made with pot for those who can't smoke, including brownies, cookies, spice cake and Merry Pills, high-grade marijuana soaked in olive oil and encapsulated.

Security is tight. Two doormen guard the stairs leading to the club.

Advocates say marijuana eases nausea and loss of appetite caused by cancer and AIDS treatments, relieves muscle spasms in people with spinal cord injuries or multiple sclerosis and alleviates the pressure that blinds glaucoma sufferers.

Opponents say those assertions are unverified.

Drugs or balloons: New approach challenges use of clot-busters for heart attack treatment

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — Drugs or balloons? A rancorous debate over how to treat heart attacks, already a plot twist in the hospital drama "ER," is sharply dividing one of the world's largest gatherings of cardiologists.

On "ER," the dialogue went this way:

Young resident: "Acute infarct. I just started TPA."

Senior doctor: "Without consulting me? He should go to the cath lab for angioplasty."

Judging from talk in the formal sessions and hallways at this week's meeting of the American College of Cardiology, similar exchanges are common in hospitals across the United States, or soon will be.

At issue is the better way to quickly get rid of blood clots that cause heart attacks. Disintegrate them with clot-dissolving drugs like TPA? Or push them aside with tiny balloons?

At stake are lives and money.

During the past decade, clot-busting drugs have emerged as the front-line treatment for heart attacks, used on 180,000 Americans at a cost of $350 million annually. If given soon enough, they can break up blockages in the heart's arteries, preventing permanent damage or death.

But now an approach called primary angioplasty is challenging the dominance of these drugs.

Angioplasty is already a mainstay of heart therapy. It is used on about 420,000 Americans each year to relieve chest pain in patients, nearly all of whom were not having heart attacks. Doctors thread a catheter into clogged heart arteries and briefly inflate a tiny balloon that squeezes open the blockage to restore blood flow.

In its new application, some doctors are performing angioplasty as an emergency procedure within an hour or two after the heart attack patient arrives at the ER.

The latest findings presented at the cardiology meeting, attended by about 25,000 people, suggest that primary angioplasty is better, safer and cheaper than clot-busters.

"The data are overwhelming that it is a superior strategy," said Dr. William P. O'Neill of William Beaumont Hospital in Royal Oak, Mich. Sometimes, angioplasty is used as a backup if the clot-busters fail, but not the other way around, because angioplasty succeeds more than 90 percent of the time.

O'Neill's latest findings, based on 1,099 patients at 32 hospitals in five countries, found that half of run-of-the-mill heart attack patients fall into a low-risk category that does amazingly well with angioplasty.

Their death rate is an astoundingly low four-tenths of 1 percent. And they can safely be sent home from the hospital just three days after their attacks, rather than staying the standard week or more while receiving clot-busters. This could mean substantial savings, even with the cost of angioplasty, which runs between $15,000 and $20,000.

Patients are considered at high risk when they are over 70 or have several diseased arteries or weakly beating hearts. They, too, do impressively well with angioplasty, with a death rate was just under 4 percent.

By contrast, about 6 percent of patients die after getting clot-dissolving drugs.

In re General Mills Oats Cereal Consumer Litigation

No. 94 CH 06208
Consolidated With
No 94 CH 06244

Judge Lester D. Foreman

NOTICE OF PENDENCY OF CLASS ACTION, PROPOSED SETTLEMENT AND SETTLEMENT HEARING

TO: ALL PERSONS IN THE UNITED STATES WHO PURCHASED ANY OAT-BASED CEREAL PRODUCTS MANUFACTURED BY GENERAL MILLS, INC. FROM MAY 1, 1993 TO JULY 29, 1994.

This Notice Contains Important Information
That May Affect Your Rights. Please Read It Carefully.

Description of the Class Action and Court Proceedings. This lawsuit, filed by the plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all other purchaser class members defined below, claims that General Mills, Inc. ("General Mills") and Fumicon, Inc. ("Fumicom") violated state laws in connection with the distribution and market of oat-based breakfast cereals containing undisclosed trace levels of chloropyrifos-ethyl ("CPE"). Plaintiffs allege that the use of CPE on stored oats and in the manufacture of oat-based cereal products constituted a consumer fraud, deceptive practice, negligence, a warranty breach and contract breach. This is a summary of the claims and the settlement and is not intended to be all-inclusive. The claims against Fumicon have been dismissed without prejudice. The claims and factual allegations are fully set forth in the Consolidated and Amended Class Action Complaint filed on August 8, 1994, which, along with other papers filed in this action, may be reviewed during business hours at the offices of the Clerk of Court, Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, County Department, Chancery Division, Richard J. Daley Center, 50 W. Washington Street, Chicago, IL 60602.

Denial of Liability. General Mills vigorously denies plaintiffs' allegations and has repeatedly asserted and continues to assert that it has followed all applicable laws, rules and regulations, and expressly denies any wrongdoing or liability arising out of the conduct alleged in this action.

Class Definition. The Class consists of: All persons in the United States who purchased any oat-based cereal products ("Cereal Products") manufactured by General Mills, Inc. from CPE-treated oats during the period from May 1, 1993 to July 29, 1994, including Cheerios, Honey Nut Cheerios, Apple Cinnamon Cheerios, Multi-Grain Cheerios, Lucky Charms, Kix, Berry Berry Kix, Oatmeal Crisp with Raisins, Oatmeal Crisp with Apples, Oatmeal Crisp with Almonds, Trix, Kaboom, Booberry, Frankenberry, Body Buddies, and Reese's Peanut Butter Puffs. Excluded from the class are any claims for physiological harm.

The Proposed Settlement. General Mills will cause to be distributed in newspapers throughout the United States certificates which may be exchanged for free Cereal Products. Each certificate shall entitle the bearer to receive from General Mills (i) one coupon for one free box of Cereal product upon submission to General Mills of one certificate and one UPC symbol from a box of Cereal Product; (ii) one coupon(s) for a total of two free boxes of Cereal Products upon submission to General Mills of one certificate and UPC symbols from three boxes of Cereal Products; and (iii) one coupon(s) for a total of three free boxes of Cereal Products upon submission to General Mills of one certificate and UPC symbols from five boxes of Cereal Products. The coupons shall not be usable with other discounts or coupons. General Mills shall ensure that the retail value of the free Cereal Products distributed shall equal at least $10 million. General Mills also shall send a full cash refund or an adjustment of equal value to members of the class who submit to General Mills, prior to the 180th day following the day on which final judgment of dismissal has been entered and remains final with no further appeal or review possible, cereal box tops from the previously designated brands only which have a "Better If Used By" date of 18 FEB 95 or earlier (e.g. 18 FEB 95 is the code for February 18, 1995) showing that the cereal may have been made from CPE-treated oats. Members of the class should indicate the purchase price of each cereal box top(s) submitted and their complete mailing address on a 8 1/2" x 11" piece of paper. If no purchase price is indicated, an adjustment of equal value will be issued for each qualifying box top. Additional qualifying terms are: one refund opportunity per family or address; allow 8 weeks for shipment of the refund check or adjustment of equal value; refund requests must be submitted no later than November 17, 1995. Fraudulent requests could result in prosecution under federal mail fraud statues. All refund requests must be mailed to General Mills, Inc., P.O. Box 5134, Minneapolis, MN 55460-5134. Class members may call 1-800-245-5789 to verify whether their purchase is entitled to a refund. General Mills shall pay for all costs and expense of giving notice of the settlement to the Class and all costs and expense of administration of the settlement and processing of claims including the printing, distribution and collection of the coupons and, subject to Court approval attorneys' fees and reimbursement of costs and expenses to plaintiffs' counsel, not to exceed $1.75 million, plus interest.

If the settlement is finally approved by the Court, all Class members who do not "opt out" of the settlement (by following the steps detailed below) will be bound by all order and judgments of the Court affecting the Class, whether favorable or not.

The proposed settlement is a compromise of disputed claims and is not to be taken as an indication of liability or that damages have been or would be found against General Mills. This Notice should not be construed as an admission of liability of any kind by General Mills. Nor should this Notice be understood as an expression of any opinion by the Court as to the merits of any claims or defenses. The preceding is a summary only of the proposed settlement and is not intended to be all-inclusive.

Settlement Hearing. The hearing on whether the proposed settlement should be finally approved, and on plaintiffs' counsel's application for attorneys' fees, costs and expenses, will be held on May 22, 1995 at 2:00 pm in the courtroom of the Honorable Lester D. Foreman, located at the Richard J. Daley Center, 50 W. Washington Street, Chicago, IL 60602.

Procedure to be Excluded from the Class. Any Class member will be bound by the settlement as finally approved unless he or she timely requests exclusion from the Class. Any Class member who requests exclusion will not be bound by the settlement and will retain whatever rights, if any, he or she may have against General Mills, including the right to proceed individually against General Mills at his or her own expense.

If you want to request exclusion from the Class, you must do so by timely mailing a written request for exclusion to: Plaintiff Counsel (see Comments regarding The Proposed Settlement for Plaintiff counsels' addresses). To be effective, such request must be received on or before May 1, 1995.

Comments Regarding the Proposed Settlement. On or before May 1, 1995, any comments or objections regarding the settlement or application for attorneys' fees, costs and expenses must be in writing and received together with notice of such person's intention to appear by the Clerk of the Court, Circuit Court of Cook County, Illinois, County Department, Chancery Division, Richard J. Daley Center, 50 W. Washington Street, Chicago, IL 60602, and mailed to plaintiffs' counsel: (i) David J. Bershad, MILBERG WEISS BERSHAD HYNES & LERACH, One Pennsylvania Plaza, New York, NY 10119; (ii) Clinton A. Krislov, DRISLOV & ASSOCIATES, LTS., 222 N. Do not contact the Clerk's office or the Court for further information. Any questions may be addressed to any of the plaintiffs' counsel at the above-listed addresses.
