Some of Chinese delegation visit MHS, Carver Center

By JULIE HILLRICH

Communism met capitalism Friday when Midland's Sister City Delegation toured the public schools.

It came as a bit of a surprise to the seven delegates during a visit to Midland High School when they stumbled across a poster offering students incentives for perfect attendance.

"What does it say?" one visitor asked his interpreter.

The poster read, "Perfect Attendance Can Win You Money."

"Aaaaah," he said, with a laugh.

"This is a classic example of capitalism at work in the public schools," Midland Independent School District Superintendent Dr. Joseph P. Baressi Jr. explained in a lighthearted manner.

Lighthearted and informal were fitting terms to describe the morning-long tour that included visits to MHS and Carver Cultural Center.

After nearly two days of visiting oil shows, university campuses and cultural exhibits, the delegation appeared to be truly smitten with the idea of observing Midland youngsters at work in the classroom.

They saw aspiring computer scientists, beauticians, physicists and data processors.

They saw preppers, punksters, jocks and cheerleaders.

Chinese to tour drilling rig

ODESSA — A field trip to see a working drilling rig about two miles south of Midland is one of the activities on today's schedule for members of the Dongying/Midland Sister City delegation.

The trip to the oil patch arranged by Buddy Hensley to begin shortly after lunch will follow a morning of meetings with local gas industry representatives at Greentree Country Club.

Discussions specifically involved gas gathering and collection systems, dehydrators and H2S removal.

The meetings and field trip wraps up the busy nearly five-day working schedule of the Dongying delegation.

Later, members of the group will have time to tour area malls and shops prior to a farewell banquet tonight at the Plaza Club in the Claydesta Bank building to which all members of the Dongying/Midland Sister

City Association board of directors, their wives and select guests have been invited.

The group is scheduled to leave the Midland area before noon Sunday following a brunch at the home of District Judge and Mrs. Vann Culp.

Today's tour of oil field-related facilities conducted by Hensley will include Safety International on U.S. Highway 80, Permian Tank & Manufacturing.

Professor predicts price of oil will jump to $24

HOUSTON (AP) — The price of oil could jump to $24 a barrel in six months if OPEC members strike a compromise, a Georgetown University professor said Friday.

G. Henry M. Schuler, guest panelist at a conference on United States and Arab relations, said compromise on both sides also is the key to a peaceful future for the U.S. and the oil-rich countries of the Middle East.

"My own judgment is that there will be an accommodation struck between the Iranian aspirations to $28 a barrel immediately and the Saudi aspirations for $18 a barrel," said Schuler, a resident fellow at Georgetown's Center for Strategic and International Studies.

"If you split the difference and add a little bit to the fact that the Iranians seem to have the momentum at the present, I can see $24 a barrel coming about as quickly as in six months," he said.

Prices are hovering between $14 to $16 a barrel, up from summertime lows of below $10.

OPEC President Rikwan Lukman, who is oil minister of Nigeria, said Thursday in Geneva that the organization would like the price of oil to reach at least $19 a barrel by the end of the year.

Many oil analysts believe that if OPEC left Geneva without an agreement on production restraint, oil prices would again slip below $10 a barrel.

Experts: Plan will give Mideast bigger share of U.S. market

By JIM WARREN
Reporter-Telegram

AUSTIN — A Louisiana official's plan to form a three-state cartel to raise oil prices will merely give Middle East producers a greater share of the U.S. market, Texas oil industry experts said Friday.

Jim Brown, Louisiana's secretary of state, has called for Texas and Oklahoma to join his state and reduce oil production levels to increase prices and create more jobs in the oil patch.

"Since the production for the states of Louisiana, Texas and Oklahoma is greater than the production of OPEC combined, with the exception of Saudi Arabia," Brown told The Associated Press Thursday, "we could have a major effect on the stabilization of world oil prices."

But Texas Railroad Commissioner Mack Wallace and others said if Texas and other states cut back on production, Saudi Arabia and other Arab countries would move in to fill the gap. Meanwhile, prices would not go up and domestic drillers would have a smaller share of the market.

"Whether or not three states could band together and set prices, I don't think the Congress would allow it," Wallace said. "If we cut production, the Middle East would pick up the slack because everybody else is running wide open."

Please see CARTEL, Page 2A

An iron-clad accord on production controls, on the other hand, could send prices rising toward $20, the economists say.

Schuler said he didn't know if

OPEC could reach an agreement at the current meeting.

"But I think (an agreement) is what will evolve," he said.

Oil show indicates computers becoming part of oil industry

By MELLA McEWEN
Business/Oil Writer

Back in the early days of the petroleum industry, oilmen depended on instinct, luck, and sometimes their noses to find oil. In the high-tech 1980s, oilmen depend on luck, satellites and computers.

That point becomes clearer while making the rounds of the booths at the 1986 Permian Basin Oil Show. There are an increasing number of computers and computerized equipment displayed right along with the well service rigs, tongs, logging tools and electric motors.

"Even though the initial cost of setting up a system seems high, when you talk about the number of man hours and the efficiency, you really can't afford not to go with computers — especially when you figure reserves, track prices, or joint interests," comments Tom Fullerton, marketing manager for Tulsa-based Concept International, Inc. "Engineers are coming out of school today with some computer knowledge."

Fullerton's company makes petroleum accounting and engineering software. According to Fullerton, the problem with petroleum software was finding the right software. He notes that even that industry hasn't escaped the price collapse unleashed.

"People were working on exploration applications and there were a lot of new applications, but now that's slowed down quite a bit because of the price collapse," he said. "There's hardly any new exploration software sold, but people still want to keep track of reserves. Shari Johnson, accounting support for the company, points out that "when the industry is down, you need even tighter control of the money you spend and the money that comes in. That's when a good computer system pays off."

According to Fullerton, service companies such as Halliburton and Welox were the first to begin using computer applications, followed by production and then drilling applications.

Both Fullerton and Johnson expressed surprise at the large attendance at the Oil Show. "We just came from the Society of Petroleum Engineers Show in New Orleans," Fullerton says. "Attendance was just horrible. I'm astonished at the turnout and exhibitors at this show. It shows some optimism."

Judge approves Texas Air Corp.'s offer to buy Frontier

DENVER (AP) — A bankruptcy judge on Friday approved Texas Air Corp.'s $164 million offer to buy Frontier Airlines after private investors made a surprise bid and then withdrew it, saying it wasn't competitive with Texas Air's proposal.

In approving the Texas Air offer, U.S. Bankruptcy Judge Charles Matheson said something had to be done for the creditors and employees of idled Frontier with no more delay.

Later, Matheson approved an agreement between Frontier's unions and Continental Airlines, the Texas Air subsidiary that will take over Frontier's operations.

The former Frontier employees agreed not to press job guarantee claims and lawsuits totaling $300 million that stem from Frontier's shutdown in August and, in exchange, Continental will give many of them jobs when Frontier is operating again.

Frontier, a subsidiary of People Express, shut down on Aug. 24 and filed for Chapter 11 reorganization four days later, idling 4,700 workers, most of them in Colorado.

Matheson's ruling leaves only approval by the U.S. Department of Transportation as the remaining hurdle to completion of the sale. The Transportation Department tentatively approved the merger on Tuesday, but allowed a seven-day public comment period before issuing a final ruling.

In anticipation of Transportation Department approval of the deal, Matheson gave Texas Air permission to begin working on 15 Frontier-leased airplanes this morning.

"We expect to commence service with seven of those planes on Nov. 1," said Texas Air vice president Robert R. Ferguson.

Later, Lewis H. Jordan, Continental's executive vice president, told the bankruptcy court that Continental expected to have 35 Frontier planes in the air and 1,412 former Frontier employees back on the job.

While the returning Frontier workers would amount to only about one-third of the 4,700 employees on the job when the airline shut down, Jordan said it would "more than absorb those Frontier employees who elected to return with Continental."

The agreement with Frontier employees approved Friday by Matheson also calls for Frontier's pensions to be terminated. But the Frontier pension fund will be used to buy annuities for retired Frontier workers, so they will continue to receive money to live on.

"It's a very important and happy day for Continental, the former employees of Frontier and the city and consumers of Denver," said Bruce Hicks, vice president for Continental Airlines.

Texas Air put together a last-minute package to buy Frontier on Thursday night. Valued at $164 million, the deal calls for payment of 30 percent cash and the rest in registered notes.

Texas Air also agreed to take over Frontier's "accrual costs." Those are rental and maintenance costs, estimated at $12 million per month.

The Frontier purchase is part of a two-pronged deal to buy Frontier and People Express. The People Express purchase is a stock-for-stock exchange estimated to be worth $125 million.

Congress agrees on $576 billion spending bill

WASHINGTON (AP) — The 99th Congress rapidly moved close to finishing its work Friday night after the House and Senate agreed on an unprecedented $576 billion catchall spending bill, breaking a stalemate that had forced a partial government shutdown.

The ill-tempered, bleary-eyed legislators, wrapping up two weeks past their original Oct. 3 adjournment date, also approved a sweeping rewrite of the nation's immigration laws and agreed to a popular, election-year package aimed at combating illegal drug use and trafficking.

Congress finished the bulk of its legislative business Friday night, but was not formally adjourning for the year until today.

On the way to adjournment, the House took time Friday night to surprise House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., with an emotional farewell — including three standing ovations. The shaggy, white-haired man is retiring at the end of this Congress after serving 34 years in the House, 10 as speaker.

Senior members of the House, from both sides of the aisle, paid tribute to the O'Neill, who has become a national symbol of the Democratic Party. A resolution of "thanks of the House" was unanimously passed.

For a time, however, disputes persisted over the omnibus spending bill needed to fund government operations and programs for the fiscal year that began Oct. 1.

James C. Miller III, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget, said the president would sign the measure and that government workers scheduled to work today should report as usual.

The impasse on the spending measure left the government technically without spending authority Friday, prompting the Reagan administration to order about 500,000 federal workers classified as "non-essential" to go home. No important government services were interrupted.

The inability of lawmakers to agree on the omnibus spending bill had been a principal obstacle to their exodus from Capitol Hill.

"A government shutdown might turn up the heat a little bit," said Senate Majority Leader Bob Dole, R-Kan., who was hoping that publicity over the "shutdown" might prompt legislators to resolve their differences over the remaining items on the legislative agenda.

Indeed, as the day wore on, various squabbles resolved themselves as lawmakers decided they were more interested in going home than carrying on the fight for pet projects.

But there was plenty of frustration on the way to adjournment.

"Everybody is just kind of resigned now to just sticking this thing out," said Rep. Robert T. Matsui, D-Calif., as the House literally began point House members were simply making speeches on various topics to pass the time.

The increasingly restive House heard Rep. Paul B. Henry, R-Mich., accuse the Senate of "parliamentary terrorism" in holding House members hostage.

"It is the first time, since the War of 1812 that we've had political hostages in the nation's capital," Henry said in a floor speech. "We must not allow these terrorists to continue their infamy, nor allow them to claim civil immunity for their un-governed conduct."

Clements pays local woman to use photo

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican Bill Clements' gubernatorial campaign has paid a Midland photographer for a picture the candidate used without permission in a television commercial.

It was the second time in a month that Clements' campaign has been challenged over possible copyright violations.

Officials said campaign manager George Bayoud agreed to pay $1,500 to photographer Barbara Laing for the right to use for another two days a picture she took last spring of an unemployment line in Midland.

Clements' spokesman Reggie Bashur said the campaign's advertising firm — Bailey, Deardourff & Sipple — produced the commercial which outlines Clements' six-point plan to bring jobs to Texas. Bashur said Bayoud conceded a mistake had been made and felt it was fair to compensate Ms. Laing for use of the photo. The photographer told reporters that the ad firm and the campaign initially agreed to stop using the commercial, then asked later if she would sell the rights to the photograph so they could keep it on the air until this weekend.

Late last month, Texas Monthly magazine threatened to sue the Clements' campaign for reproducing without permission an article critical of Democratic Gov. Mark White's administration. That lawsuit was averted by asking news reporters to return copies of the article they had received from the campaign.

Clements' campaign officials noted that the flap over the photograph came less than 24 hours after White's camp agreed to stop using a commercial featuring a youngster whose father said he didn't want to take sides in the governor's race.

Power surge knocks out Channel 36 transmitter

From Staff Reports

Public television station General Manager John McCarroll said Friday he does not know when KOCV-TV Channel 36 will return to the air after a power surge knocked out the station's transmitter.

An engineer has attempted to repair the transmitter at the Odessa public television station since it was knocked out by a power surge at 11 p.m. Wednesday, McCarroll said.

A design engineer from Bluebell, Pa., was brought in Friday, after a local engineer could not find out what was wrong with the 513 kilowatt transmitter, McCarroll said.

Regular programming will be picked up when the station goes back on the air, he said.

"If we're able to sign on we'll just pick up with regular programming as was," he said.

Many programs are repeated throughout the week and will be shown again, McCarroll said.

However, some programs, such as Great Performances, that are not shown more than once and aired while the transmitter was down, will not be repeated, he said.

The financial impact of the station being off the air will be minimal because the station is publicly supported and doesn't depend on commercial revenues, McCarroll said.

However, he said, "We're going to have to repair some damage as far as the public is concerned."

The station has been providing public television to the Permian Basin since it replaced the Dallas-based public television station KERA-Channel 13 in June.

In the meantime, Congress on Friday gave final approval to a bill outlawing most mandatory retirement as the House, by voice vote, approved and sent to the White House the legislation that had previously been approved by the Senate.

"Civil rights have been assured to the elderly," said Rep. Claude Pepper, D-Fla., chief sponsor of the bill and, at 86, the oldest member of Congress.

Legislative activity in the Senate had stalled for nearly 24 hours beginning Thursday afternoon when Sen. Alfonse M. D'Amato, R-N.Y., began a sometimes-heated filibuster in an effort to preserve a controversial training aircraft — manufactured at a plant in his home state — that the Air Force said it does not want.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, led the opposition to the T-46A trainer manufactured by Fairchild Republic Co. in Farmingdale, N.Y.

"What we're being asked to do is bail out a corporation that's gotten into trouble because of their own mistakes," said Goldwater.

Goldwater rejected studies from the General Accounting Office — the investigative arm of Congress — that supporters cited as support for their arguments in favor of the aircraft.

Fire damages kitchen in local home

From Staff Reports

A Friday afternoon fire caused minor damage to the kitchen of a southeast Midland home, the fire department reports.

Mary Lou Aguilar, 608 North Lee St., reported the fire at about 5:30 p.m. Friday.

Four fire department units responded to the fire at the one-story frame house.

The fire began in the kitchen, but its cause was not known.

In other law enforcement reports, a $2,000 homemade barbecue pit was taken about six months ago, the sheriff's department reports.

Hollis Shewmake of Levelland reported the theft from Frontier Petroleum on west County Road 128.

A $400 air conditioner and a $200 wooden platform porch were reported stolen from Tommy Service General Contractors, County Road 1290.

Marsha Hankins of Odessa told sheriff's officers the theft occurred between 5 p.m. Thursday and 2:30 p.m. Friday.

Johnny Holt, #4 Ranger Estates, reported $150 worth of damage to his '82 Chevrolet pickup after two brake lines, two spark plug wires and headlamp wires were cut.

Holt told officers the truck had been vandalized sometime between midnight Thursday and 7 a.m. Friday.

Candidate Aquilla Watson to hold open house

The public is invited to attend. For additional information, call 684-5060, 684-4805 or 684-4763.

Routine approval of the Texas Air offer had been expected at Friday's hearing. But an investors group represented by Denver attorney William D. Scheid made a surprise bid of $460 million, in the form of a promissory note paying 7 percent interest.

However, after the lunch recess, Scheid withdrew the offer, saying the investors couldn't compete with Texas Air's offer to take over the accrual costs. The group's offer also called for a March closing date.

Thomas R. Sauters, an accountant from Midland, Texas, organized the investors group. The other investors Song Hao, an official from China's Consulate in Houston, took a moment Friday at Carver Center to write the name of Erin Conaway in Chinese. The delegation from Dongying, China, that is touring Midland visited the city's schools. Conaway is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Mike Conaway.

At MHS, Bulldog mania was at an all-time high as students and faculty dressed in their best purple and gold attire.

Meanwhile, the halls of Carver were filled with gifted students waiting to catch a glimpse of the foreign guests.

Their arrival prompted applause and cheers from fourth, fifth and sixth graders, not to mention a choral rendition of "Dongying" in Chinese.

Lunch with gifted students offered the foreigners an opportunity to visit one-on-one with their hosts.

And Barry Beck, who helped organize the school tour, said the tour should foster future student exchanges between the sister cities.

"We're still moving forward on our plans to bring a Chinese student to Midland next year," Beck said.

"We don't know who the student from China will be yet, but it looks as though he or she will be an equivalent to a high school senior."

Beck said Midland is "fortunate" to be involved in student exchange such as this.

"There are a few thousand Chinese studying in the United States, but most of them are university or graduate students," he said.

Hensley said the group was particularly interested in H2S monitoring systems and other procedures for dealing with the deadly gas while at Safety International, as well as the concrete liner pipe they saw at Permian Enterprises.

At Melco Friday afternoon, delegation members had an opportunity to watch a worker construct an expandable rubber clutch used in a variety of oil field applications. Melco manufactures a wide variety of products from pressure and heat-formed rubber, including replaceable rubber parts in blowout preventers.

Making the manufacturing tour Friday were: Ju Qingchu, director of the economic council in Dongying; Ge Rong, chief geologist in the Shengli oil field; Chen Fusheng, chief engineer and deputy manager of Chuen-Liang Headquarters of Shengli; Madam Xiao Ling, interpreter and assistant director of the Houston office of the China National Offshore Oil Co.; and Mary Bray Neelley, president of Neelley China Express Co. of Houston, who helped initiate the Sister City relationship between Dongying and Midland. Also on Friday's tour acting as interpreter was George Chen, an engineer with Kodiak Equipment Co., an Odessa company that imports and sells Chinese-built pump jacks and sucker rods.

Thursday night, members of the Dongying delegation were guests of honor at a wine and cheese reception and dinner sponsored by the University of Texas of the Permian Basin and hosted by President Dr. Duane Leach. The guest list included members of the Midland-Odessa chambers of commerce, prominent members of the business community and officials from both city governments.

OIL

Shuler said the world's demand for Arab oil will continue and probably increase. Oil also will continue to affect overall relations between the U.S. and Arab nations.

"I can see two equally plausible futures," he said. "One by confrontation and one by constructive compromise."

"It's certainly clear that the importance of the Middle East is going to grow," he said.

What is not so clear, he said, is how the Middle East will use its power.

The U.S. should also take the initiative in gaining a compromise in the Arab-Israel dispute.

"For too long we've sat on the sidelines," he said.

White seeks to establish fund for research projects

By JIM WARREN

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — With less than three weeks remaining before the election, Gov. Mark White Friday said he will seek private donations to establish an endowed fund for state-sponsored research projects.

The governor said he will appoint a steering committee to raise at least $100 million that will be the base of the fund. Interest generated from the endowment will go to Texas universities for academic research. Eventually, White said, he wants the base to total $500 million.

The Texas Research Endowment for the Economy will provide grants to research projects "that have a strong potential for commercial application," White said. "But research if it is to produce new inventions and create new jobs cannot be turned on and off like a spigot."

The research will create jobs, help diversify the economy and bring new industry into the state, the governor said.

White denied that he was using the newly proposed research endowment to bolster his re-election bid. The idea has been floating around for months, he said.

Jess Hay, chairman of the University of Texas System board of regents and one of the governor's top supporters, came to White's defense.

"I think it would be grossly unfair to suggest that Governor White and Governor Hobby are Johnny-come-latelys to commitment to higher education and research," he said. "I think this (endowment) is a very exciting moment for Texas and for those who care about higher education."

But Reggie Bashur, spokesman for Republican gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements, said the timing of White's announcement "places it in a political light."

"Mark White says a lot of things but he doesn't come through," Bashur said. "He talks about research, but he cuts higher education, which is an excellent vehicle for research."

Clements said "the people of Texas are not gullible enough to fall for such empty gestures. It's too little, too late."

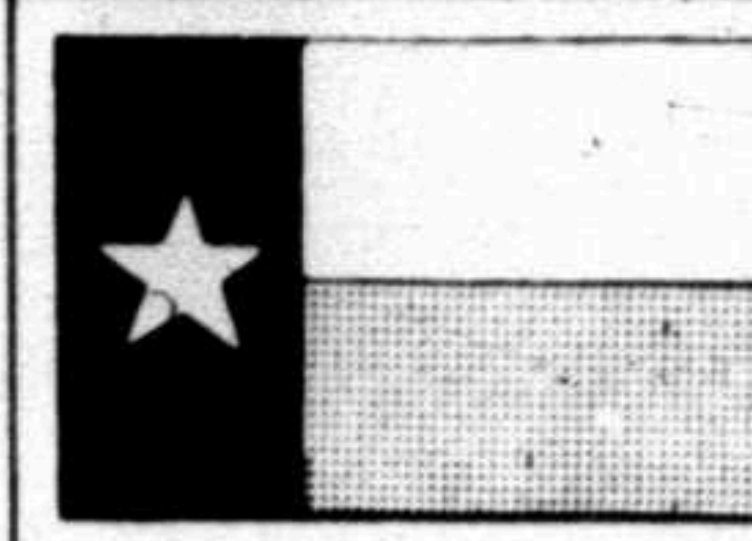

The research endowment, White said, will be the first of its kind in the nation. Universities will compete for research dollars, with the bulk of the money going to Texas' top four research centers — University of Texas, Texas A&M University, University of Houston and Texas Tech University.

Flanked by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and several academic leaders, White also said the fund would not divert money from existing college research programs.

Hobby, who after the recent special legislative session decried the cuts in higher education, said those budget reductions scared off prospective professors and researchers. "Yes, Texas did shoot itself in the foot," he said.

Citing a recent study, Hobby said Texas already has lost 217 college faculty members and more will leave as long as professors and researchers remain uncertain about university budgets.

Sunset Commission recommends new lease, changes for TDMHMR

By DAVID PLESA

Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Sunset Advisory Commission Friday recommended granting a new 12-year operational lease to the Texas Department of Mental Health Mental Retardation, but also proposed more than 80 operational, and structural changes.

The commission will make its recommendations to lawmakers as part of the Texas Sunset Act, which requires the Legislature to periodically review state agencies and either abolish them or recreate them by statute.

The commission spent all day Friday voting on the proposed changes aimed at improving the efficiency and effectiveness of the operations of TDMHMR.

The changes range from a recommendation that TDMHMR develop regional planning councils to a proposal that the department conduct annual reviews of community-based services.

"The sunset review of the department's programs and responsibilities indicated that there is a continuing need for the state to be involved in overseeing the care of mentally ill and mentally retarded people," the commission's staff said in its summary report.

Under the category of policy-making structure, the commission recommends that the Citizens' Planning Advisory Committee, which advises the department on its long-range strategic plan, be reduced from 21 members to nine.

"Limiting the size would improve its ability to make decisions in a timely fashion," the staff report says.

Under overall administration, the commission proposes that the department develop an operational plan, based on its long-range plan, containing specific short-term goals, objectives and timetables.

"Development of an operational plan would show the steps necessary to achieve the agency's long-range plan," the staff report says.

The commission proposes that the department establish regional planning councils to coordinate planning, budgeting and delivery of services. This would "reduce duplication and encourage cooperative efforts to solve regional problems."

Another recommendation proposes that TDMHMR review annually the quality and performance of all community-based services. The department currently conducts reviews about every three years.

"An annual review of all community-based services increases their accountability," the staff report says.

TDMHMR is one of Texas' largest state agencies, employing more than 26,000 people and operating with a budget of more than $623 million in 1986.

The department operates eight state psychiatric hospitals, 13 state schools for the mentally retarded, five state centers, a center for emotionally disturbed youth and a recreational rehabilitation center, with a total inpatient count of 30,000 people in 1986.

The department also served 151,000 people in community MHMR centers and another 20,500 in department-run community-based programs in 1986.

Three federal lawsuits, all of which were settled by 1985, have affected the policies and operations of TDMHMR.

'No pass, no play' success in schools in Panhandle

PANHANDLE (AP) — No pass, no play has been a big success in the Panhandle schools, where students not only survived, but excelled, an educator said Friday.

After the first six weeks of the new school year teachers are counting up a rising number of academic triumphs and a falling number of failures, according to Jim Stewart, the Panhandle High School principal.

"We have 18 percent of the student body on the honor roll," said Stewart. "We feel pretty darn good about that figure."

Making the honor roll is not easy in this North Texas town of 2,000, said the principal. There is no "no pass, no play" rule. There is no "no pass, no play" rule. There is no "no pass, no play" rule.

Panhandle has 212 students in the high school. Twenty-eight students are on the honor roll after the first six weeks' report. Of that number, five are football players, 17 are band members, two are cheerleaders and four are golfers. Stewart said the statistics represent some duplication, since there are band members who also play football, or who are on the golf team.

Grades also improved in the junior high.

Of 151 students in the middle grades, 24 were on the honor roll, including four football players.

While the number of honors went up, said Stewart, the number of failures went down.

He said a total of 18 students failed at least one course. Two of these were football team members and three were in the band. Under the no-pass, no-play rule, those who failed a course will not be able to participate in the extracurricular activities for at least six weeks.

During the first six weeks of last year, Stewart said about 10 percent of the student body experienced a failure in at least one course. This year, the failure rate declined by 15 percent, for a failure rate of only 8.5 percent.

Sierra Club: Panel's report 'biased'

By DAVID PLESA
Reporter-Telegram

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Sierra Club Friday blasted recommendations by the Clean Air Study Committee on various air pollution controls, charging that its report has a "strong pro-industry bias."

The 10-member committee was appointed to make recommendations to the 70th Legislature in three areas of air quality control. The committee, composed of two senators, two House members and six private citizens, met nine times in the past year.

The committee recommends that the program to review industries' compliance with state air quality regulations and renew operating permits every 15 years be continued only if the Legislature provides adequate funding.

The committee also recommends that "grandfathered" facilities — those built before the Texas Air Control Board began its permitting program — should not be required to have operational permits, but rather should be inspected periodically.

The committee's third recommendation came in the form of a resolution to Congress, urging the U.S. Coast Guard to determine the necessary regulation of air emissions from ships and barges.

In a harsh, four-page statement to the committee, Ken Kramer, lobbyist for the Lone Star chapter of the Sierra Club, said the report was a "seriously flawed document" that emphasizes short-term economic benefits to industry at the expense of maintaining a "high quality of life in Texas."

"This report can best be characterized as a 'no action' document which ignores significant air quality problems in many parts of the state and which also ignores legitimate and appropriate ways of dealing with the sources of those air quality problems," Kramer said.

Several committee members apparently took the statement personally, heatedly protesting Kramer's remarks that the report was pro-industry.

"Do you think the Sierra Club wants to abolish human life so that we do not need industry," said Rep. Arves Jones, R-E Paso. Committee chairman Hubert Oxford, a Beaumont lawyer, called Kramer's statement "a travesty."

"I find (your) report extremely cynical," Oxford said.

Although the report indicates no air quality changes would result from the repeal of the 15-year permit renewal program, it also says, "Should funding be appropriated...emissions from some facilities would be reduced and corresponding air quality improvements could be expected."

Kramer called the recommendation a "not very well disguised attempt to bring about repeal of this...valuable air pollution control tool."

The report says 6,641 registered grandfathered facilities account for about 1.6 million tons of air contaminant emissions a year, while 17,446 newer facilities under permit review by the air board generate 3 million tons per year.

"The committee recommendation that a program for permitting (grandfathered) facilities not be established would result in no reduction in...emissions and consequently no air quality change should be anticipated," the report says.

Barrera says funds needed for TV ads

ROUND ROCK (AP) — GOP attorney general candidate Roy Barrera Jr. told supporters Friday his campaign does not have enough money to buy the television ad time he must have to unseat Democrat Jim Mattox.

"We need money. We need to get on television. We need to express our position, our desire, our intent to serve this great state," Barrera said at a breakfast in Austin before heading to Round Rock.

The morning event featured U.S. Treasury Secretary James Baker, the Republican's unsuccessful 1978 candidate for Texas attorney general. Baker said the Texas GOP is "extremely fortunate that someone with Roy's experience would offer himself for public service."

"He's going to sneak up on this guy that's attorney general," Baker predicted.

Barrera continued his pleas for money at a Round Rock luncheon attended by Ed Walsh, who lost to Barrera in the Republican runoff election.

Barrera told the luncheon crowd, "Whether it's $10, $100 or more, please help me. Whatever you can afford is going directly to television to help us."

Barrera's Friday schedule also included a Corpus Christi appearance with GOP gubernatorial candidate Bill Clements.

At the Austin breakfast, Barrera said it will be difficult for him to beat Mattox unless he can come up with the money for television ads. "I recognize...that first you must convince the state of Texas why the incumbent does not deserve to be re-elected, because tradition and history clearly point that Texans are not that quick to fire incumbents," he said.

Mattox has brought four years of disgrace to the attorney general's office, said Barrera, a San Antonio state district judge.

"I'm asking you to help me tell the people of this great state that for the last 11 years I have served this state with honor," he said.

Barrera said Mattox likes to refer to him as "little Roy" and belittle the challenger's experience. The GOP contender said he is willing to match his record against Mattox's, "but I can't do that before 7.8 million registered voters unless I have the necessary financial help to get on television, to tell them that Jim Mattox is not the lawyer that he purports to be."

"This race is not over. Mattox thinks it is. Mattox thinks all he has to do is just buy a few spots on television," Barrera said.

Logs show pilot's missions into Columbia, Angola

WASHINGTON (AP) — An American pilot killed when his plane was shot down while resupplying Nicaraguan Contra rebels flew missions over the past 16 months to U.S. military bases, to Colombia and inside Angola, according to log books found in the crash.

According to his personal flight crew logs, Wallace B. Sawyer also was piloting a Southern Air Transport L-382 cargo plane in Central America this year even though Southern Air insists he had left the company by 1985.

Southern Air, a onetime CIA-owned company, has denied any connection to the C123 cargo plane that was shot down over southern Nicaragua on Oct. 5. Reagan administration officials have also said they were not involved with the flight, although they have yet to identify who was.

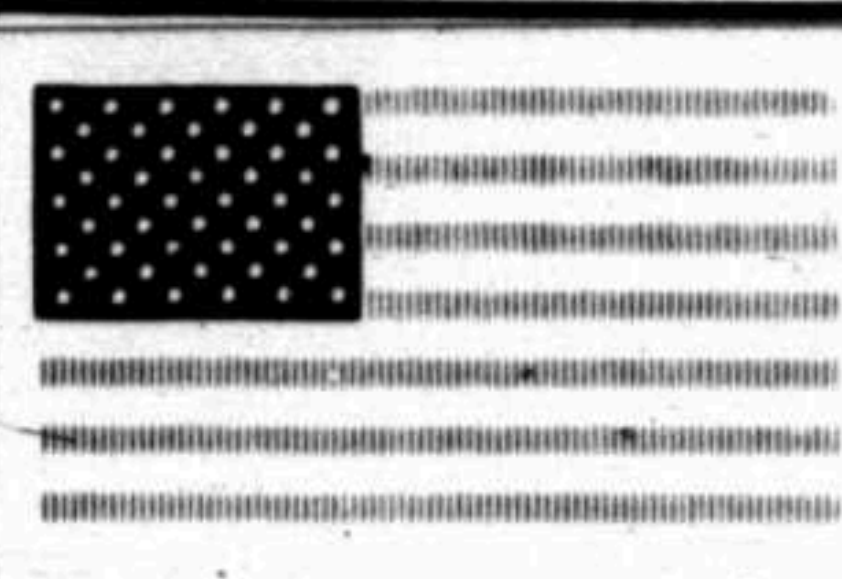

Sawyer, who lived in Magnolia, Ark., kept detailed records of his flights in two log books covering the period from June 2, 1985 until shortly before the crash. The books list the planes used, the crew's last names and shorthand designations for airports.

While some of the notations are unclear and others appear to be personal abbreviations for clandestine airstrips, the roughly 400 entries portray Sawyer as a pilot involved with diverse worldwide operations. Nicaraguan officials allowed The Associated Press to review the books for several hours.

More than 100 entries appear to mark flights in Central America, including many to "MSSS," the international code for El Salvador's Ilopango military airport, where a surviving American crewman on the downed flight, Eugene Hasenfus, said the Contra resupply operation was based.

Hasenfus told a news conference in Nicaragua that two Cuban-Americans, known as Max Gomez and Ramon Medina, "worked for the CIA (and) did most of the coordination of these flights." CIA officials denied that Gomez, whose real name is Felix Rodriguez, works for them, although intelligence sources said he was an agent in the past.

From 1984 to the present, Congress has barred U.S. government military aid to the Contras, a ban that is expected to be lifted when final approval is given this month to President Reagan's $100 million Contra aid package.

Although Sawyer spent much of his time at Ilopango, 77 of his log entries mention flights to or from "AGU," an apparent reference to Aguacate, the Contras' U.S.-built airstrip in eastern Honduras. Other notations mark flights to "MOC," presumably Morocco, a U.S.-built airstrip used by Indian rebels allied with the Contras. Other flights are to commercial airports in Costa Rica, Honduras, El Salvador and Belize.

The bulk of Sawyer's Central American flights were made between last February and September, with a flurry of apparent Aguacate-based flights between March 24-28 listed as "ops," common military shorthand for military operations. During that period, Nicaraguan government forces had crossed into Honduras to attack Contra base camps along the border.

Southern Air spokesman William Kress said he could not explain why Sawyer would be flying a Southern Air plane in Central America this year after his reported departure from the company.

Two L-382 cargo planes that Sawyer flew in Central America and the United States were leased by Southern Air from Safair Freighters (USA), Inc., which is affiliated with Safair Freighters of South Africa, according to Hugh Flynn, president of the U.S. company.

Before this year's stint in Central America, Sawyer's log books show him flying 106 flights in Angola from Oct. 21 to Dec. 19, 1985, on a Southern Air-registered L-382. According to the airport designations, most of the flights were either to or from Luanda, the capital of the Marxist-ruled country that has been fighting a civil war.

Sawyer's flights, as listed on the logs, appear to be mostly to towns under control of the Soviet-backed government and particularly to Menongue, a town in south-central Angola that has been a staging area for attacks against the pro-U.S. rebels of Jonas Savimbi.

Many of flights to Menongue occurred during a period of heavy fighting last fall. Sawyer's father, Wallace B. Sawyer Sr., said Friday his son had talked about "flying mostly diesel fuel" in Angola to air strips where he would see Russians.

In the summer of 1985, Congress lifted a decade-old ban on CIA involvement in Angola and early this year, the CIA began funneling covert support to Savimbi.

Southern Air spokesman Kress said Southern Air does fly general cargo in Angola under contract to diamond mine operators, whom he refused to identify. Most of Angola's diamond mines are in the northeast, however, while Sawyer's flights were to the south and coastal regions.

Jeremiah Chitunda, Savimbi's representative in Washington, said Southern Air had been flying supplies to government forces until last year because "the money was good."

According to the logs, Sawyer also flew out of U.S. military bases in the United States and Europe.

Americans opposed to metric system

CHICAGO (AP) — The campaign to convert Americans to the metric system has fizzled, putting U.S. companies at a disadvantage when they try to compete overseas, government and business leaders said Friday at a U.S. Metric Association conference.

"Our economy is suffering because countries don't want to buy our inch-pound products when they can buy metric products from West Germany, Japan, Taiwan and other countries," said Valerie Antoine, executive director of the association and an engineer with Litton Industries in Los Angeles.

The United States is one of three countries that haven't converted to the metric system, said Gerald T. Underwood, director of metric programs for the U.S. Commerce Department.

The others are Burma and Brunei, part of the island of Borneo in Indonesia.

"Frankly, the people abroad just shake their heads in disbelief," Underwood said as the two-day conference opened.

"The thing I've observed from my travels abroad is our competitors are pleased with our slowness to convert because it gives them a competitive edge."

Underwood was among 60 government officials, business executives and educators at the conference seeking to revive interest in the metric system, which uses the gram, meter and liter as the basic units of weight, length and capacity. The system is based on the number 10.

The "inch-pound" system has no numerical base; there are 16 ounces in a pound, 12 inches in a foot and four quarts in a gallon. Different conversion formulas must be used to shift to metric measures, depending on whether weight, length or capacity is being determined.

"I'd say almost any product you want to produce — if it isn't in metric, you'd have trouble selling it abroad," said Tom Ferrell, president of Los Angeles-based Ferrell's Fasteners, which produces metal clips sized in metric units.

"Many countries have restrictions against importing goods that aren't in metric."

The first challenge of the U.S. inch-pound system came in 1886, when the federal government made it legal to manufacture products using metric measures, Ms. Antoine said. The association was formed in 1916.

In December 1975, Congress passed the Metric Conversion Act promoting a voluntary switch to metric measurements.

But the campaign has fizzled, due mainly to resistance from consumers, she said.

"People don't even realize they're using metric now. They're buying soda and wine in liters. Yet they're afraid they're going to get cheated if we switch to the metric system because they won't understand it," she said.

Some larger, multinational companies converted quietly to stay competitive abroad, Ms. Antoine said.

But consumer opposition has kept many small- and medium-sized companies from switching, said Underwood.

And he said he believes public resistance has contributed to the decline in U.S. exports.

"I don't want to leave the impression that metric is the key or lynchpin to this," Underwood said.

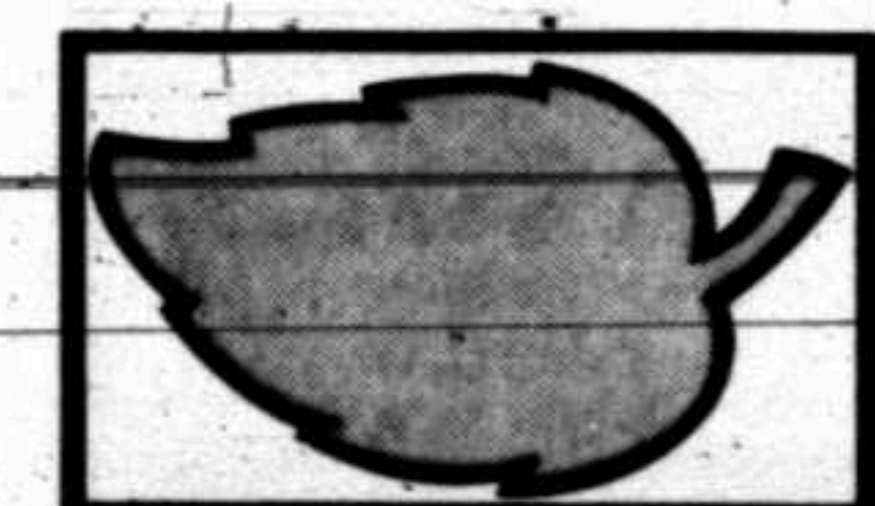

Whirlpool says decision to close plants is final

ST. JOSEPH, Mich. (AP) — Whirlpool Corp. said Friday its decision to close four plants here is final, meaning 1,050 jobs will be lost.

Officials predict the layoffs will create a ripple effect in the sister cities of St. Joseph and Benton Harbor and result in an additional 1,000 lost jobs.

Whirlpool in August announced tentative plans to close the last four manufacturing plants in St. Joseph, where the company was founded 75 years ago. The plants supplied parts and components for other Whirlpool divisions.

Dennis Krueger, vice president of the appliance maker's St. Joseph Division, said the closings will be completed by mid-1988. The work will be moved to Ohio, South Carolina and Canada.

Shultz says U.S. doesn't want all weapons eliminated

WASHINGTON (AP) — Secretary of State George Shultz, seeking to resolve congressional questions about nuclear arms reductions discussed in Iceland, said Friday the United States suggested only the elimination of ballistic missiles — not all long-range weapons.

Shultz also said that America would need to increase spending on non-nuclear forces to keep peace in the world without nuclear weapons. Both sides would still keep atomic bomb-equipped aircraft and cruise missiles with nuclear warheads, under the proposal, Shultz said during an appearance at the National Press Club.

The secretary was trying to answer a question raised by Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga., and other defense experts, about what actually was on the table at the summit last weekend in Reykjavik.

President Reagan and others, in explaining the prospective deals made with Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev, have said the two leaders would have agreed to eliminate all long-range nuclear weapons by 1990 had they not failed to reach agreement on the future of Reagan's Strategic Defense Initiative, also known as "Star Wars."

It's more than a question of "what might have been," since the United States plans to return to long-running negotiations in Geneva and use the potential agreement in Iceland as the basis for resuming talks.

Nunn argued that eliminating all offensive weapons would have been a disaster for the United States and its allies, because of the Soviets' overwhelming superiority in conventional military forces.

The foundation of nuclear policy over the past 40 years has been the U.S. threat to use its offensive nuclear forces to deter Soviet attack against Europe.

Shultz, however, gave a detailed account of how the proposals were submitted to the Soviets during the last day of the Iceland summit.

Under the plan, he said, all offensive weapons would be cut by about 50 percent over a five-year period ending in 1991. But the next step, over the ensuing five years, would be elimination of "remaining" ballistic missiles, he said.

Ballistic missiles are the long-range rockets that operate similarly to those used in space shots. Most bombs carried by aircraft and cruise missiles use engines similar to jets.

The United States generally is considered to have an advantage in bombers and cruise weapons.

While attempting to clarify the proposal, Shultz defended the principle that the world would be safer without nuclear weapons. What would be needed, he said, would be increased spending to make Western conventional forces a viable deterrent.

"Many people say, yes, that's true but democracies have no guts; they don't have the ability to be sensible and take the trouble to defend themselves, look what happened in the 1930s," Shultz said, referring to Western Europe's failure to build up its forces to counter Nazi Germany.

"From our standpoint there's no question about the fact that deterrence based on conventional forces is sharply more expensive than deterrence based on nuclear forces," he said. "But it's a safer form of deterrence. We would have to make up our minds to spend more money. But you can't tell me that an economy that's already at $4.5 trillion, and is moving toward $5 trillion, that we can't afford far more than $390 billion for our defense and national security."

"So when people say if it comes down to a non-nuclear world and its just conventional forces, we're outclassed, I just don't believe it," Shultz said. It would be better to make the sacrifice than "live in constant terror of what a nuclear weapon may do to us," he said.

White House spokesman Larry Speakes said Reagan may have told legislators after the summit that he and Gorbachev agreed to scrap all long-range nuclear missiles. But even if the president did say that, such a proposal was never actually on the bargaining table in Reykjavik.

"It certainly was not fleshed out," Speakes said in response to questions raised on the Senate floor by Nunn, widely respected by fellow senators as an expert on military affairs.

In a Senate floor speech, Nunn said there is "a genuine question" about terms of the agreement which was nearly reached last Sunday by Reagan and Gorbachev.

He said he had talked with Reagan, Shultz, and other top administration officials, and said he was confused about the details of the potential arms reduction agreement. Nunn also said that if Reagan's offer involved elimination by both superpowers of nuclear weapons, the proposal should be withdrawn. The senator said making any such agreement would leave the Soviets with a major edge in non-nuclear weapons such as tanks and jet fighters.

"It is obvious that this proposal has not been thought through adequately," he said.

Specifically at issue is whether the two sides agreed within the next decade to eliminate all long-range nuclear weapons, or to only eliminate ballistic missiles and not to eliminate bombers and cruise weapons.

Speakes, talking to reporters aboard Air Force One as Reagan headed to North Dakota for a political appearance, said the Soviets proposed eliminating all strategic, or long-range weapons, over a 10-year period, and that the United States proposed the elimination of ballistic missiles. Speakes said the issue was never resolved because the talks bogged down over the issue of "Star Wars."

But Reagan gave a different account Monday night in his nationally televised speech.

Reagan said, "We proposed a 10-year period in which we began with the reduction of all strategic nuclear arms, bombers, air-launched cruise missiles, intercontinental ballistic missiles, submarine-launched ballistic missiles and the missiles they carry."

Reagan went on to say, "they would be reduced 50 percent in the first five years. During the next five years, we would continue by eliminating all remaining offensive ballistic missiles, of all ranges." But the president did not say if bombers and cruise missiles would also be reduced in the second five years.

Nunn said, "To say the least, this suggests that there is considerable confusion within the administration on this crucial detail."

He called for a "fundamental review" of the administration's thinking on arms control, saying it seems fraught with confusion.

Researchers say ozone layer being depleted over northern hemisphere

WASHINGTON (AP) — The protective ozone layer high in the atmosphere is shrinking over the heavily populated northern hemisphere temperate zone, mostly in the winter, a noted researcher in the field said Friday.

Sherwood Rowland, professor of chemistry at the University of California at Irvine, said the finding from Swiss observations, coupled with the hole in the ozone layer over Antarctica known to occur at this time of year, lends support to the argument that emissions of man-made chlorofluorocarbon chemicals are destroying the ozone.

"It is the agreement between the two which makes us believe that the cause of the ozone depletion over Halley Bay (Antarctica) is the chlorine in the atmosphere," he said by telephone from Irvine to a news conference sponsored by the World Resources Institute, an environmental research organization.

Rowland was one of the pioneers who first proposed in 1974 that chlorofluorocarbons could attack ozone. His work led to a ban on use of the chemicals as aerosol propellants.

The amount of ozone over Halley Bay in October has been less each year since 1978, it was discovered last year. The shortfall is now about 40 percent.

Various other explanations for ozone depletion have been offered, such as the 11-year cycle in the output of the sun and the influence of volcanic eruptions.

The Swiss measurements, made at Arosa in the Alps by researchers from the Swiss Technical University, were begun in 1931, making them by far the oldest available. Most such data begin in the late 1950s.

Though total ozone over Arosa varied from year to year, the yearly average from 1931 through 1970 did not change, Rowland said. But since 1970, the concentration has been below that average every year but one, and the trend is about 3 percent below.

The annual average conceals wider swings throughout the year. The decline appears to be 1 percent in August, increasing steadily as temperatures drop and nights lengthen to about 6 percent in December and January, then easing as days get warmer and longer.

Arosa is at 45 degrees north latitude. Since at high altitudes in mid-latitudes the atmosphere is well mixed, similar findings would be expected at cities on the same latitude such as Ottawa, Portland, Ore., or Vladivostok, Siberia.

Ozone, a smog pollutant on the ground, is formed 15 to 25 miles in the atmosphere by the sun's ultraviolet rays. It makes life on earth possible by keeping those rays from reaching the ground.

Chlorofluorocarbons, valued for refrigeration and other uses because they are inert, non-toxic and non-flammable, can take 25 years to reach the ozone layer. But they break down there to liberate chlorrine, which destroys ozone.

More ultra-violet will increase skin cancers and eye disorders in animals such as cattle, reduce crop yields and some shallow-water marine life, and shorten the useful life of some plastics, scientists say.

Shamir to be sworn in as Israel's ninth prime minister

JERUSALEM (AP) — Yitzhak Shamir became Israel's ninth prime minister Friday, trading jobs with Shimon Peres under terms of the "national unity" coalition agreement between their rival conservative and leftist parties.

Shamir, 71, vowed to "repel every terror attack" against his country, which he has served as guerrilla fighter, spy and politician since before independence in 1948.

The leader of the conservative Likud bloc was formally named prime minister by President Chaim Herzog and will be sworn in Monday by Parliament. Peres, who heads the Labor Party and led the coalition government through its first two years, assumes Shamir's former post as foreign minister.

"There must be no letup" in Israel's fight against terrorism, Shamir told reporters.

Terrorists threw two grenades at a crowd of Israeli soldiers and their relatives Wednesday near the Walling Wall in Jerusalem, killing one person and wounding 69.

On Thursday, a dozen Israeli warplanes raided Palestinian guerrilla bases in a refugee camp near Sidon in south Lebanon. One Israeli plane was shot down.

"We must remain alert and repel every terror attack, both inside Israel and beyond its borders," Shamir said outside the president's residence. "There must be no wavering, no neglect."

"The latest events in the country and near its borders prove we haven't reached a time of rest. The danger hasn't passed."

Shamir's appointment was delayed for three days by squabbling between the Likud and Labor over political appointments, but a compromise reached Thursday allowed the transfer of power to be made.

Former Justice Minister Yitzhak Mordechai of the Likud will be a minister without portfolio in exchange for Shamir's promise that a candidate chosen by Peres will become ambassador to the United States.

Peres hopes appointing the ambassador will give him greater leverage in Washington on U.S.-mediated Middle East peace efforts.

Shamir said he expects the fragile partnership with Labor to last until elections in November 1988. It nearly collapsed several times during the first half of the term.

"I think that in such a government you cannot speak of lasting scars," Shamir said. "There are difficulties. You work them out. When crises occur, we find the necessary strength to overcome them. We have a certain experience with crises, you know."

The coalition government was formed because neither party won enough votes in the 1984 elections to govern alone.

Government abolishes black town

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The government abolished a black township nestled against a white town on Friday and said the 10,000 residents must move. Black leaders vowed to fight the decision and predicted violence.

Chris Heunis, minister of constitutional development and planning, announced the "deproclamation" of Oukasia, a 55-year-old township west of Pretoria that the government has been urging residents to abandon.

He said cleaning up the "poor hygienic conditions" there would cost too much and residents would be moved to a new township free of charge.

Township leaders said the action broke a pledge to stop forced removals of blacks. They said the real reasons for it were that the whites in the white industrial town of Brits felt Oukasia was too close and wanted to build their own houses on the land.

The black township is 250 yards from a white neighborhood and just over a mile from the center of Brits, 30 miles west of Pretoria.

Heunis maintained the decision was made in consultation with the black community council and the move was voluntary.

In February 1985, he pledged to end forced removals of blacks. Opposition groups say 3.5 million people, most of them black, have been moved since 1950 as part of the white government's apartheid policy of separating the races.

Residents of Oukasia are to be moved to Lethlabile, which is more than 12 miles from Brits on the border of a black tribal homeland.

Black leaders of the Brits Location Action Committee and their white supporters said the community councilors Heunis consulted moved to Lethlabile long ago and have no support among people still living at Oukasia.

They said the government was trying to disguise a forced removal by citing the support of discredited officials.

Levy Mamabolo, a committee member, said residents hired engineers to plan a renovation of the township that would cost 3.03 million rand ($1.4 million) and be far cheaper than building a new one.

"Those who leave the location, how are they going to afford to build new houses there?" he asked, adding that people would now walk to jobs in Brits would f. e long bus rides from Lethlabile.

"We expect there is going to be a lot of violence, which all along we have tried to stifle," Mamabolo told a news conference in Johannesburg. Sello Ramakobye, committee secretary, said: "We are not going to take it lying down. We are going to challenge it all the way. Even if it means violence then we will have to resort to it, because the government has forced it on us."

Geoff Budender, a lawyer for the committee, said officials had shut off water, stopped garbage collection and otherwise pressed residents in the past year to move to Lethlabile. He said court action stopped the harassment.

He said Heunis had been asked to delay enforcement of his proclamation for a few days so the engineers could submit their renovation proposal.

"The government's response will be the test of whether its real reason is cost, or rather what the residents suspect: that white people in Brits don't want black people living too close to them," Budender said.

Support for white political groups of the extreme right is growing in the area, he said, and "there's a strong suspicion that the black people of Brits are being made to pay the price for the (ruling) National Party keeping its seat in Brits."

Heunis did not give a deadline for residents to leave Oukasia, whose name is an Afrikaans abbreviation of Old Location, or say whether those who refused would be arrested.

Figures conflict on how many people have left Oukasia and remain. Heunis said 1,400 families were still there and 1,505 had gone to Lethlabile.

Alan Morris of the Transvaal Rural Action Committee, which opposes the move, gave the numbers as 10,000 people remaining and 5,000 moving. Abandoned houses have been demolished to prevent other people from coming to the township, he said.

Heunis said sites with water taps and toilets were available at Lethlabile and the community had schools and churches. He said the government would tar the road from Brits to Lethlabile and provide subsidized transportation.

Those who move will be offered loans of 5,000 rand ($2,400) to build new houses and may take building materials from their Oukasia houses with them, he said.

Parisians trying to put memory behind them of recent bombings

By JEFFREY ULBRICH

PARIS (AP) — A month after the last explosion in a bloody series that killed 10 people and injured 162, Parisians still hurry past railway station baggage lockers — a prime depository for bombs.

But most residents of the French capital are working on putting the memory of the bombings behind them, and many are succeeding.

"We are trying to forget," said Philippine Morana from behind the counter in her women's clothing boutique. "It has been a month now. I'm still afraid, but we see it has calmed down and try not to think about it."

Said Jean Roques, who runs a small bookstore: "We forget very quickly."

Between Sept. 8 and Sept. 17, five bombs exploded in or near Paris, hitting a City Hall post office, a cafeteria in suburban La Defense, the Pub Renault on the Champs-Elysees Avenue, police headquarters and a discount store.

Responsibility for the attacks was claimed by a group calling itself the Committee of Solidarity for Arab and Middle East Political Prisoners, which seeks the release of imprisoned Lebanese Georges Ibrahim Abdallah and two other men.

The group has vowed to continue its campaign of terror. But for a month, there has been a welcome pause.

After the bombings, police put out a nationwide alert for nine Lebanese wanted for questioning. All but one has surfaced in Lebanon to deny any involvement in the bombings.

No arrests have been made in the bombings. And although there have been suggestions in the press that a Middle Eastern government — Syria is most often cited — is behind the attacks, French officials have steadfastly maintained they have no proof.

Thousands of police reinforcements were brought to Paris after the attacks. Even now, they are very much in evidence. Often, they wear flak jackets and carry submachine guns.

In railway stations and airports, police make spot identity checks. They swoop down on any suspicious package or suitcase, blowing up many of them. Airport signs warn travelers not to leave any unattended baggage or it will be immediately taken away and destroyed.

On a recent rail trip from Lyon to Paris, police roamed the aisles of the train, asking people to identify their baggage. Private guards at big stores check shopping bags and sacks.

"A month ago, everybody was afraid," said one young woman at a newsstand in the Gare St. Lazare, Paris' busiest railway station. "We are still afraid, but a little less so," said the woman, who did not want to give her name.

Pointing to the many gendarmes patrolling the station's main hall, she said: "People have a tendency to forget, but we who work in the station are faced with it all the time."

Noting that people still hurry past the baggage lockers in the station, a prime site for a bomb to be left, she said: "With police all over like this, we feel a little safer."

Despite the relative calm, there is a mixture of relief and a gnawing fear that it isn't really all over.

"I've already forgotten all that," said the head of security at a swank fur shop, who declined to give his name. "I know it can happen again. It's a matter of luck."

A saleswoman in the same store said that when the bombs were exploding, everybody was afraid. "But now nobody is talking about it anymore. If it happens again, it will be because everybody has forgotten."

It is too early to measure the impact on French business and tourism, which already was down because of hijackings and the falling value of the U.S. dollar. Many hotels and restaurants have noted a drop in business, but say it can't be attributed to any one cause in a generally bad year.

Mild weather in forecast

From Staff and Wire Reports

Mild temperatures and cloudy weather will predominate this weekend, reports the National Weather Service at the Midland Regional Airport.

Today will be partly cloudy with a high in the mid-70s. Winds will be southeast at 10 to 15 mph. Cloudiness will increase tonight with a low in the lower 50s.

Sunday will be mostly cloudy with a 20 percent chance of showers. The high will be in the mid-70s.

Friday's high of 74 degrees was 21 degrees cooler than the record high set in 1964. The overnight low of 50 degrees was 13 degrees warmer than the record low set in 1968.

STATE

A high-pressure cell east of Texas continued to dominate the state's weather Friday, keeping skies mostly fair and temperatures near seasonal normals.

Afternoon heating caused some of the clouds to evaporate, and most of the remaining clouds were scattered over Northeast and north Central Texas, the National Weather Service reported.

The forecast for North Texas calls for fair and mild skies through Sunday with widely scattered showers late in the period. Highs should be in the 70s and 80s, with lows in the 40s and 50s.

South Texas should be partly cloudy and mild with increasing cloudiness by Sunday. Highs should be in the 70s and 80s, with lows mostly in the 50s and 60s.

West Texas should be partly cloudy to cloudy through Sunday with widely scattered showers. Lows should be in the 40s and 50s, with highs in the 60s and 70s.

NATION

Rain fell Friday along the coasts of Oregon and northern California and in New York and Pennsylvania, while sunny skies prevailed over most of the rest of the nation.

Temperatures were generally slightly cooler than normal for mid-October, and frost or freeze warnings were posted over lower Michigan, through central Ohio, much of Indiana and the mountains of North Carolina.

Travelers' advisories were posted for winds gusting to 35 mph over the Antelope Valley, the Mojave Desert and desert areas of Kern County in Southern California.

Showers dampened the New England coast, and skies were cloudy from the Great Lakes across the Ohio Valley, and from New England across northern Virginia.

Snyder ends Andrews hopes for playoffs

From Staff Reports

ANDREWS — Snyder scored a touchdown in every quarter to notch its first District 24A victory of the season and end the playoff hopes of the Andrews Mustangs, 28-13, at the Mustang Bowl Friday night.

The Stangs jumped out to an early lead as David Criswell returned the opening kickoff 85 yards for a touchdown. But that was the end of the Andrews celebrating.

Snyder scored the next four touchdowns to take a commanding lead in the final period.

The Mustangs, 23, 25, have an open date next week to mull over the loss, while Snyder, 1-3, 1-5, returns home to meet Lake View.

Iraan too much for Marfa, 52-0

From Staff Reports

IRAAN — In Iraan Friday night the crowds witnessed a long-awaited home-team rout when the Iraan Braves decimated the Marfa Short-horns 52-0.

True to their name, the Short-horns fell short in this game, being out-scored, out-ran, and out-played. The Braves stacked up a truly impressive 475 yards rushing compared to Marfa's meager 37 yards.

The tools of this utter domination came in the form of Jody Acosta, Billy Castaneda, and Chevy Ulate. Acosta scored twice and accumulated 171 yards rushing in only ten carries.

MHS

MHS got to the AHS 21-yard line late in the second period, but couldn't convert a fourth down try.

That scoring opportunity was set up when Triplett hit Davis in the backfield, forcing a fumble and Toby Box recovered at the AHS 30.

Three key turnovers in the first half probably cost the Bulldogs a halftime lead of at least 8-7, but at least the nine quarter scoring drought by the offense had been broken on the fine 81-yard drive.

But MHS started dropping passes early in the third quarter and an eight-yard punt by Scott McCullough to the MHS 27 gave the Eagles a cheap touchdown shot that was converted in three plays when Junior Bell, who led all rushers with 95 yards, scored from 18 yards out on a rip up the Bulldog middle.

Rankin also suffered a pair of crippling injuries as first-string quarterback Bruce Hooker and two-way starter Michael Rojas are lost for the season because of shoulder separations. The Red Devils return to action with Eldorado at home next week.

The Buffs will play district favorites Forsan and Stanton in the next two weeks.

Rangers take it on chin, 21-8

From Staff Reports

FABENS — For Greenwood coach Maurice Hodges, returning to his old stomping grounds gave him some hard knocks as Fabens throttled the Rangers 21-8 here Friday night.

The Rangers never led as Fabens scored three times before Greenwood got on the board in the fourth quarter. Harvey Morales gained 166 yards on 21 carries and scored the second Fabens touchdown.

The Rangers were held to 105 yards rushing on the night as Fabens improved its mark to 1-1, 4-2.

Greenwood, 1-1, 2-5, tries to rebound next week at Crane.

The Midland Christian Mustangs won Friday night against a weaker Midland Baptist Temple Eagles, 52-7.

The Mustangs had the game won in the first quarter when they were declared winners by the six-man football 45-point rule.

The game's longest run came when Emmert put his sole points on the board with a 79-yard run.

Reagan County, Forsan fight to 13-13 deadlock

From Staff Reports

BIG LAKE — In a battle of unbeaten here Friday night, there was no winner. The Forsan Buffaloes rallied in the fourth quarter for two touchdowns for a 13-13 tie against Reagan County's Owls in District 6-2A play.

Junior Romero scored both Reagan County touchdowns in the second quarter for three and 10 yards. Roland Saldibar kicked the first extra point but the second was blocked for a 13-0 Owl lead.

In the fourth quarter, a Reagan County fumble on their own 39 yard line set up the first Forsan touchdown, a four-play-drive capped by Wayne Wright's one-yard run.

Wright's ensuing PAT kick was also blocked.

With 2:29 remaining in the quarter, Wright got his second TD of the game on a four-yard run and followed with the tying extra point kick. The second touchdown for the Buffaloes capped an 8-yard drive.

With the tie, Reagan County is now 5-0-1 overall while Forsan is 6-0-1. Both teams are 1-0-1 in league play.

Austin connection comes through

Red Sox benefit from Lone Star State's capital city

AUSTIN (AP) — The college coach of Roger Clemens, Calvin Schiraldi, and Spike Owen of the Boston Red Sox has some opinions on his three former stars.

Cliff Gustafson, the coach at the University of Texas, is amazed at the speed of Clemens' fastball, thinks Schiraldi, a relief pitcher, should become a starter, and would like to see Owen cut down on his swing.

All three players came through the Austin-Boston baseball pipeline that also supplied the Red Sox with designated-hitter Don Baylor, who did not attend the University of Texas but graduated from Stephen F. Austin High School.

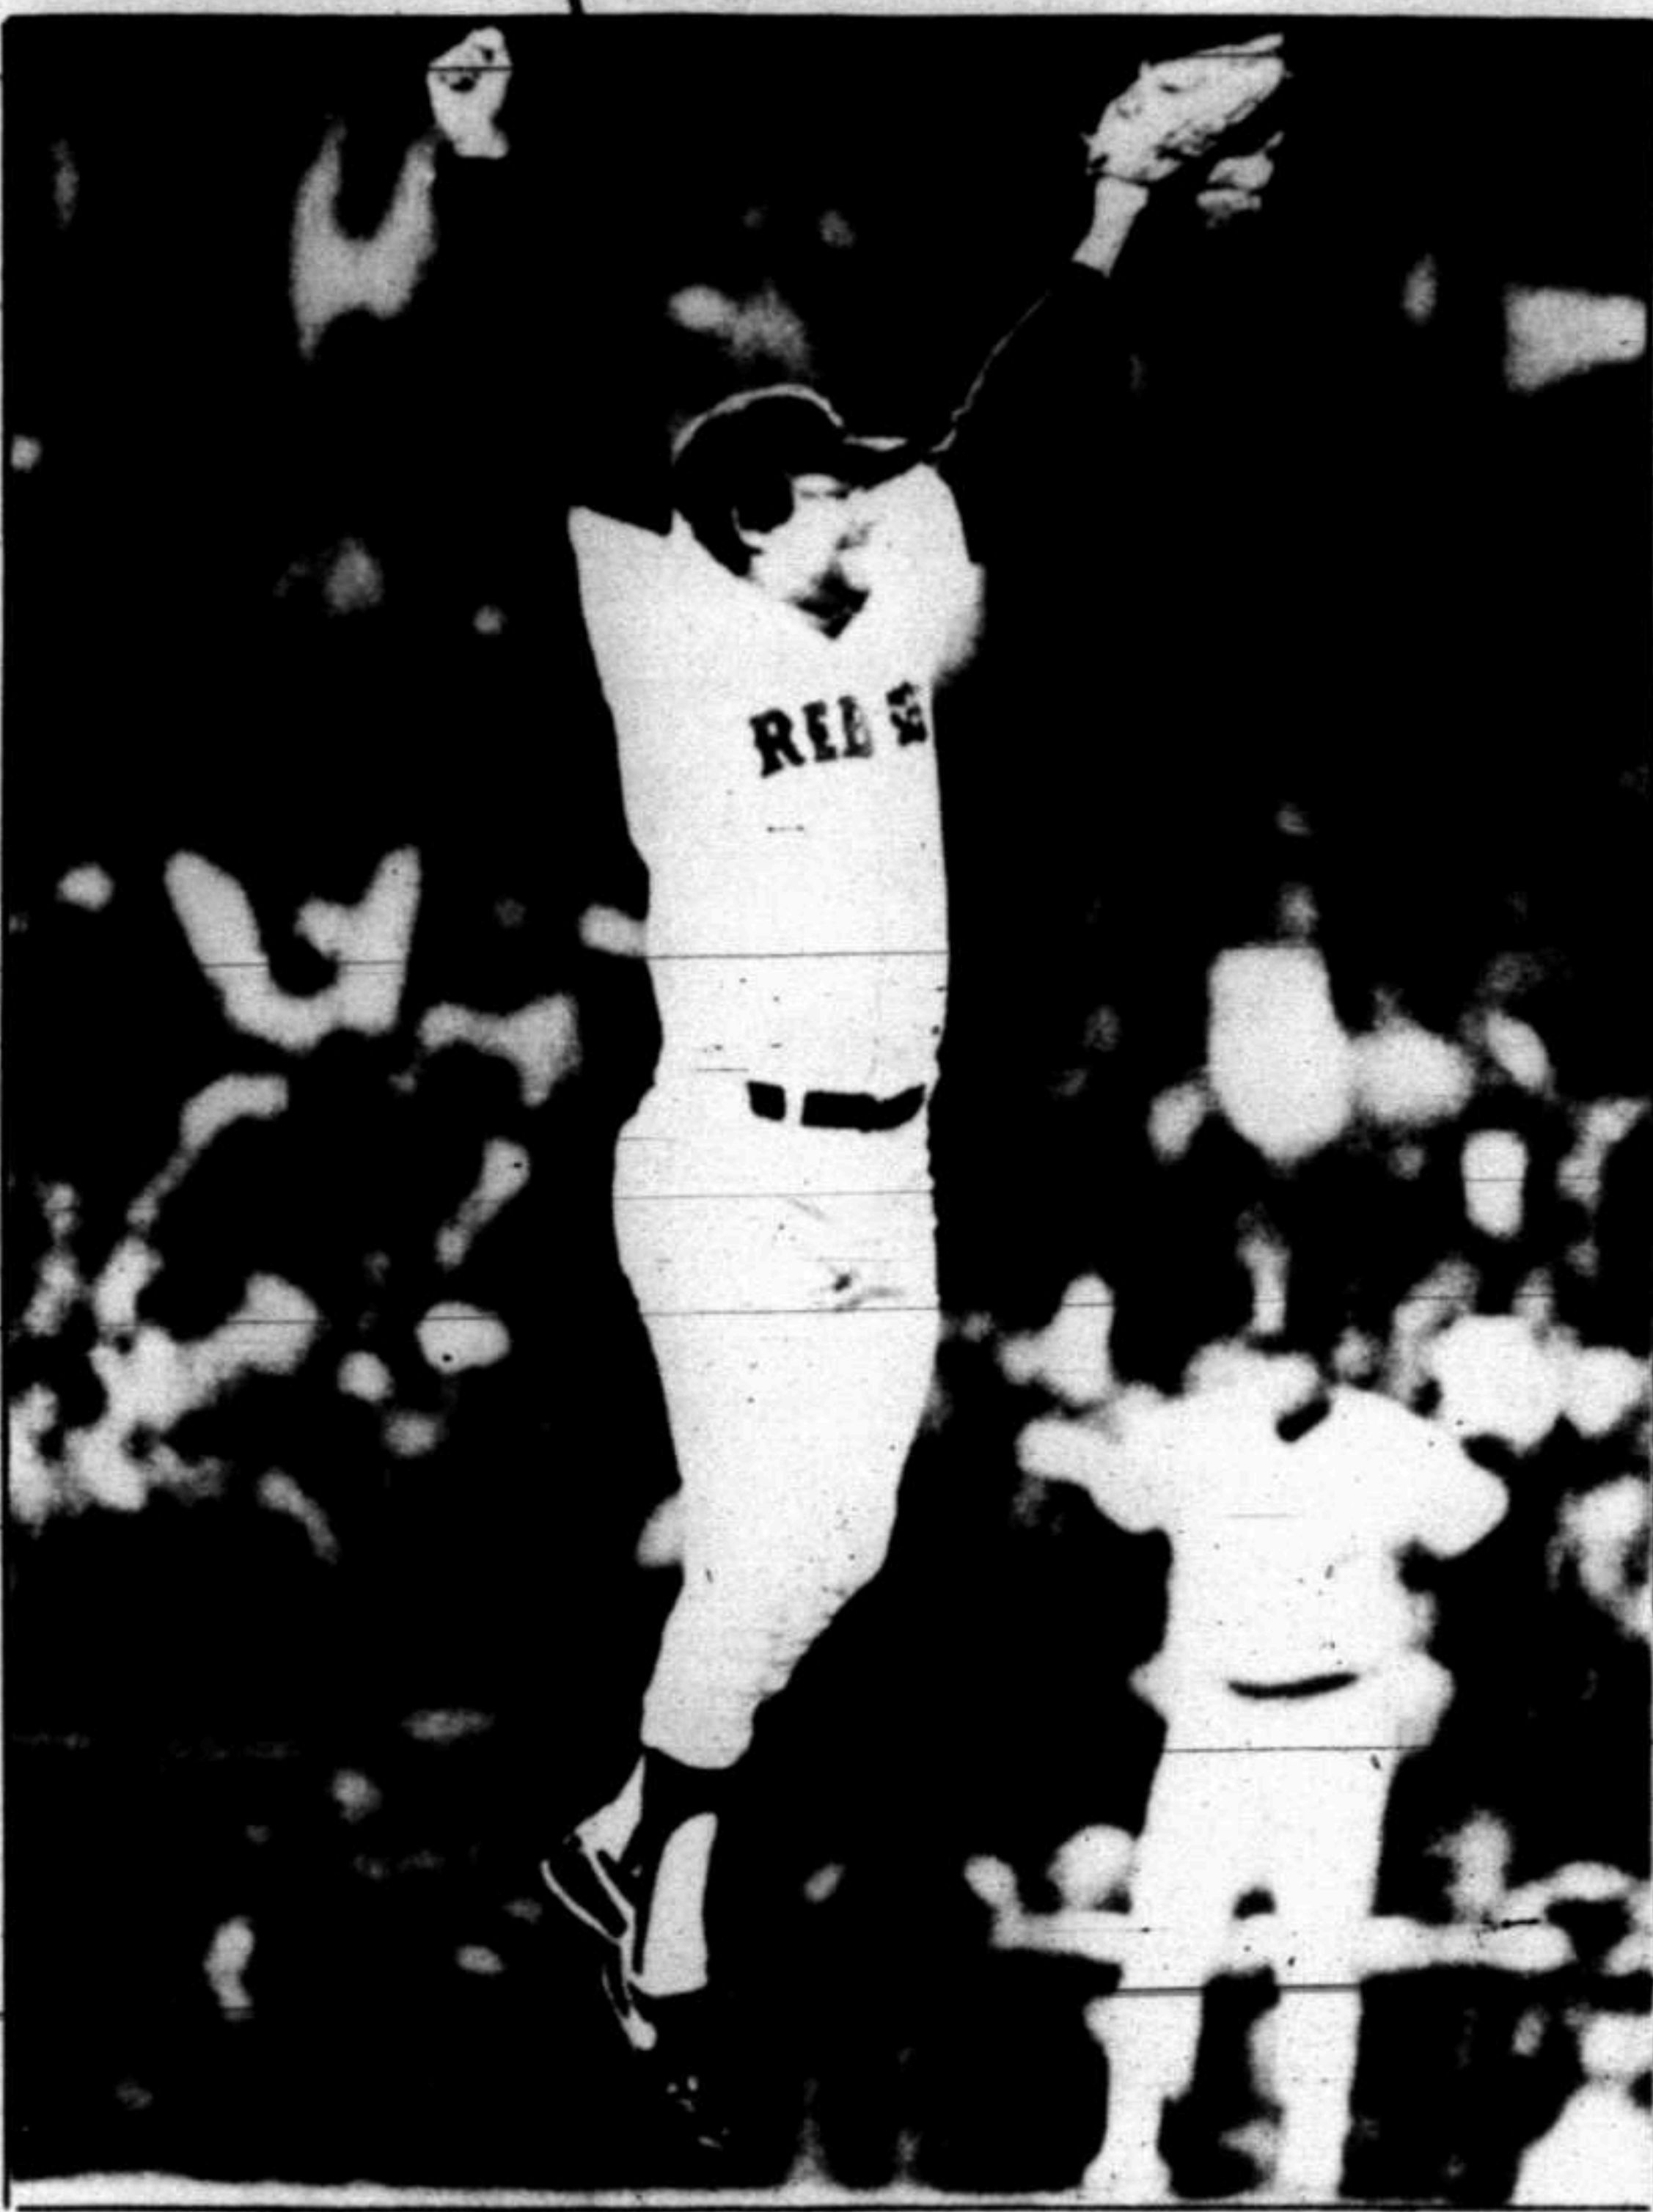

The roles of the four have been so pivotal in the Red Sox' pennant-winning season that Texas fans refer to Boston as the "Austin Red Sox" as it prepares for the World Series against the New York Mets.

Clemens and Schiraldi were stars on Texas' 1983 national championship team. Owen, a shortstop, was a two-time All-American who signed a professional contract after the 1982 season.

Baylor, who hit .500 as a senior in high school and signed with the Baltimore Orioles in 1967, still has roots in Austin as his parents still live here.

"We've had a number of college pitchers that were better pitchers during that time of their lives than Clemens was," said Gustafson, college baseball's winningest coach. "I thought at the time Clemens was here, and I said this back then, that (Burt) Hooton was the best college pitcher that I had had or seen, but I thought Clemens was the best major-league prospect we had had." Hooton recently completed a long major-league career, mostly with the Los Angeles Dodgers, and now works with his pitching staff.

GUSTAFSON RECALLED Schiraldi was a first-team All-American

Boston pitcher Calvin Schiraldi celebrates a World Series berth.

but Clemens never even made all-Southwest Conference. In 1983, Schiraldi was the most valuable player of the College World Series but Clemens was the winning pitcher in the championship game.

"He (Clemens) wasn't even recruited out of high school, because he threw 83-84 miles an hour. ... At UT he threw 90 on occasion but not consistently, and a lot of games he was 85-86. The fact that he is now able to throw 95 pretty consistently — that's just amazing, because usually you don't increase that much in velocity."

Gustafson said Schiraldi "never showed tremendous velocity (in college) until we got to Omaha (for the College World Series), and then he got pumped up and threw in 90s, up to 95."

He said Schiraldi's five strikeouts in two innings against California on Wednesday night reminded him of the pitcher's performance in Omaha. "I thought when they moved him to the bullpen ... that it might be the best thing for his career, because he seemed to have the ability to get pumped up and throw really hard for a couple of innings in clutch situations," Gustafson said.

NEVERTHELESS, GUSTAFSON said, "I'd like to see him (Schiraldi) have a shot to go back and be a starter, because I think he'd make it."

"I think relief pitchers get burned out, because every time they come in, the game's on the line, and he's got to throw 100 percent all the time — he can't pace himself. I think his career's got a better chance of lasting longer as a starter than a reliever."

Owen, says Gustafson, is the best shortstop he has had at Texas.

"I thought he could play in the big leagues right then," but he thinks Owen needs to go back to the hitting style he had at Texas.

"I think he got with that team of hitters and kind of forgot what got him there," Gustafson said. "I think he can be a lot more consistent hitter than he's showing. When he played here, a lot of his base hits were to left field. I haven't seen him hit anything to left. He's trying to hit the ball too hard."

SERIES

"Why should I? I'm not pitching until Tuesday," he said.

BUCKNER, MEANWHILE, is so hobbled by knee and ankle injuries that he was barely able to field his position during the playoffs, and he had to be helped off the field in Game 7 against the California Angels.

"I have to talk to him later," McNamara said the last minute.

Buckner, who hit only .214 in the playoffs, was wearing specially made high-top shoes in Friday's workout to help take pressure off his ankles. He said he was ready to play, but that the final decision was up to McNamara.

"I feel like I'm walking in slippers," Buckner said of the new shoes. "They feel real good."

"It's been 12 years since I've been in a World Series (in 1974 with Los Angeles). To not be able to play now would be awfully disappointing. All the pressure is in the playoffs. The World Series is the reward for all that hard work."

If Buckner can't play, McNamara probably would use Don Baylor, the club's designated hitter, at first. Dave Stapleton also has played first.

Under a rule adopted this season, the DH will be used only in the American League park. Previously, the DH was used in both ballparks but only in alternating years.

"I guess I have to be a cheerleader for a while," said Baylor, who expected Buckner to be playing first base. "It's tough to take because I've never sat, especially in a game like this."

If Buckner's ankles are bad enough to prevent him from playing the field, he could be used as a DH in Boston.

Johnson, on the other hand, said he wouldn't know who to use as a DH until the Red Sox revealed their pitching rotation for Fenway Park.

"Danny Heep is a prime candidate against right-handers, and I also have Kevin Mitchell," Johnson said. "I've got a lot of candidates."

Johnson said that from his scouts, he had drawn a picture of the Red Sox as a club similar to the Cubs. "They've got a lot of guys who can hit the ball a long way," he said. "They're not going to steal a lot of bases, and they play for the big inning. And their first two hitters are guys that are capable of getting on base."

McNAMARA SAID that "from what I've been told about the Mets, you've got to keep Dykstra and Backman off base. That's the key."

New York's Len Dykstra a big key to Mets' playoff success.

World Series host cities could earn $20 million from tourism

NEW YORK (AP) — For anyone inclined to forget that the 1986 World Series has been dubbed the Shuttle Series, Eastern and Pan Am airlines are ready to supply a reminder.

For them, as for hotels, restaurants and other tourism-related businesses in Boston and New York, the baseball classic presents an opportunity to attract some unexpected revenues and low-cost good will. Tourism officials expect the series to bring more than $20 million into each city's economy.

Both Eastern and Pan Am announced Friday that they would offer special $39 fares to anyone traveling on their Boston-New York shuttles with a World Series ticket during certain hours before the games.

Once the fans arrive in Boston or New York, they'll get a free bus ride to the stadium, courtesy of whichever airline they flew. And after the games, both airlines are putting on special late-night shuttle flights to get the fans home.

For Eastern and Pan Am, the series presents an opportunity to step up the already heated competition for Eastern seaboard commuters. Amtrak has joined the fray as well, with extra cars planned on this weekend's trains from Boston to New York.

But as spokesmen for the rail and airline companies admitted, no one really knows how many people will be traveling between the two cities, close as they are. The question is: Who's got the tickets?

Both the Red Sox and the Mets sold all their World Series tickets almost immediately after putting them on sale. The Mets sold a total of only 6,000 tickets to the general public — the rest went to the 35,000 season ticket holders, to the news media and to the baseball community.

Most of those traveling from Boston to New York for the series will be clients of corporate ticketholders or friends and relatives of the Red Sox. The Mets would not say how many tickets the Red Sox received.

Charles Gillett, president of the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau, said he expects the World Series to bring about 10,000 visitors — and $25 million — into New York.

Kibler gets fourth call to umpire Series

NEW YORK (AP) — John Kibler of the National League, making his fourth World Series appearance, was named Thursday along with five other umpires to work in the series starting Saturday night between the New York Mets and Boston Red Sox.

Kibler, who worked previous series in 1971, 1978 and 1982, will be joined by Ed Montague and Harry Wendelstedt of the National League and Joe Brinkman, Jim Evans and Dale Ford of the American.

This will be the third World Series for Evans and Wendelstedt and the second for Brinkman. Ford and Montague are working their first World Series.

In Game 1 at Shea Stadium, Kibler will work behind home plate, Evans at first base, Wendelstedt at second and Brinkman at third. Montague will be in left field and Ford in right.

'Bama, Michigan face tough tests

By HERSCHEL NISSENSEN
AP Football Writer

College Football

Second-ranked Alabama and No. 4 Michigan put the nation's two longest unbeaten streaks on the line Saturday — against the last teams to beat them.

Alabama, 11-0-1 since a 16-14 loss to Tennessee midway during the 1985 college football season, visits Knoxville to take on the Volunteers, who are struggling at 2-3 after winning the Southeastern Conference title last year. The Crimson Tide will be trying not only to keep their national championship hopes alive but to snap a four-game losing streak against Tennessee.

"Every year I have been here, they have beaten us," nose guard Curt Jarvis, a fifth-year senior, said. "I want to get one under my belt before I leave here. I get sick of hearing 'Rocky Top' and want to keep that song under control Saturday."

Iowa and Michigan are not ranked 1-2 as they were a year ago when the Hawkeyes won 12-10 at Iowa City on Rob Houghtlin's 29-yard field goal at the final gun. But they are ranked No. 8 and No. 4, respectively, 5-0 overall and Michigan is 10-0-1 since that bitter setback.

Iowa has won the last two games against Michigan and Hayden Fry is bidding to become the first coach to win three in a row from Bo Schembechler in 18 years at Michigan. They have exchanged verbal jabs in the past.

"He's out there in Iowa City and I'm here in Ann Arbor," Schembechler said. "I don't have anything against Hayden Fry, but I remember the next week (after Schembechler criticized the noisy Iowa crowd last year) he was complaining about the noise at Ohio State."

Besides Iowa-Michigan, there are two other pairings of Associated Press Top Twenty teams — No. 10 Arizona State at No. 15 Southern California, and Baylor, tied for 20th, at No. 11 Texas A&M.

Top-ranked Miami, Fla. visits Cincinnati for a night game, No. 3 Nebraska entertains Missouri, fifth-ranked Oklahoma is home against Oklahoma State, Syracuse visits No. 6 Penn State, Georgia Tech is at No. 7 Auburn, and Bowling Green at No. 9 Washington.

In the Second Ten, No. 12 LSU is at Kentucky, No. 13 Mississippi State at Tulane, No. 14 Arkansas at Texas and Oregon State at No. 16 Arizona for night contests, while day games find Duke at No. 17 Clemson, North Carolina State at No. 18 North Carolina, No. 19 UCLA at California and Houston at Southern Methodist, which is tied for 20th.

Vanderbilt, traditionally Tennessee's final regular-season opponent, probably wasn't thrilled earlier in the week when Alabama Coach Ray

Perkins called this "the game of the year" for Tennessee "because they don't have a big in-state rival."

"And for that reason," he added, "they will be more ready than they are for any other game of the year. It's a big game because it gets us back into SEC play and because they have been our nemesis for the last four years (1982 when Bear Bryant was Alabama's coach, the last three years under Perkins). They are one of the teams that are on the schedule every year where you look at the game as being just a little bigger than the others."

"I think Tennessee is better than a 2-3 record. They're going to give our defense the best test they've had all year."

Alabama leads the series 34-27 and is making a bid to succeed the Vols as SEC champions. Tennessee Coach Johnny Majors calls the Crimson Tide "a team that's veteran, that's weathered, an ideal football team. They've got a winning quarterback (Mike Shuler) with experience and confidence. They've got an array of running backs with a lot of quickness."

"It's been a top-caliber rivalry. Michigan has a 27-7-3 lead in its series with Iowa, but the Hawkeyes have won the last two meetings and three of five under Fry."

Earlier in the week, Fry reported that 15 first- and second-team players were injured, calling the situation "the worst it's ever been since I've been at Iowa. Most of them just need time to heal."

Accordingly, Fry canceled practice last Monday for the first time in 24 years as a head coach.

The Wolverines are the ninth of Schembechler's 18 Michigan teams to start 5-0, and last week's 27-7 trouncing of Michigan State was the school's 670th, good for second place on the all-time victory list behind Yale's 734.

What concerns Schembechler most is Iowa's size.

"Offensively, Iowa lost some highly publicized skill players — (quarterback Chuck) Long, (running back Ronnie) Harmon, two receivers, three guys in the secondary, but every big guy on the team came back both offensively and defensively," he said.

"The one thing that bothers me more than anything else is their tremendous size and strength. They'll be the strongest team physically that we've faced — probably a little less skill than they have had before, but tremendous size and a powerful football team. It's going to be a real physical battle."

Miami could have as many as eight starters on the sidelines against Cincinnati, including leading rusher Melvin Bratton, defensive tackles Jerome Brown and Derwin Jones, and defensive backs Selwyn Brown, Don Ellis and Kevin McCutcheon.

Nebraska is a lopsided favorite over Missouri, but receivers coach Gene Huey says the Tigers have always been tough.

Three SWC games on Saturday TV schedule

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

Three Southwest Conference football games will be televised on Saturday but most of the attention will be on the Texas A&M-Baylor showdown in College Station before ABC's regional cameras.

Texas A&M and Baylor collide at 2:30 p.m. while the Texas-Arkansas and Rice-Texas Tech games are also scheduled for viewing.

The Texas-Arkansas game in Austin will be televised nationally (6:45 p.m.) by ESPN while the Raycom regional network will air the Rice-Tech clash at noon from Rice Stadium.

The defending champion Aggies have lost to Baylor the last two years. A 20-15 loss was the only SWC stain on A&M's record last year.

A&M has an 11-game victory streak in Kyle Field dating back to 1984 when the Aggies lost to the Bears.

Despite Baylor's success against Coach Jackie Sherrill, the Aggies were rated six-point favorites. A&M has announced a sellout: the first non-Texas sellout in Kyle Field history.

Arkansas was an eight-point favorite over the Longhorns, who are coming off Coach Fred Akers' worst regular season defeat, a 47-12 whipping by Oklahoma.

The Razorbacks were shocked with a 17-7 loss to Texas Tech, their first setback in a decade to the Red Raiders.

Tech was a touchdown choice over Rice which ambushed Texas Christian 37-31 in Fort Worth.

In other SWC games on Saturday, SMU was a 15-point pick over Houston in Texas Stadium and TCU was a touchdown choice over North Texas State in a non-conference encounter at Amon Carter Stadium.

Baylor is facing a must situation against the Aggies after being upset 27-21 by SMU last week.

"We can get back in the race with a victory," said Baylor Coach Grant Teaff. "Our fate is still in our hands."

It's the first time since 1982 that ABC has televised a home A&M game. The Aggies lost 24-15 to Texas Tech the last time.

The game features two of the best programs in the SWC. A&M has won 16 of its last 19 games while Baylor has won 15 of its last 19.

Glanville doesn't want NFL to call to say officials goofed

HOUSTON (AP) — It's of little so-lace to the Houston Oilers, but Coach Jerry Glanville must be wondering what might have been after the National Football League called him to acknowledge that officials made mistakes against his team during Houston's loss Sunday to the Chicago Bears.

It's the third consecutive week the NFL has called Glanville to admit errors by officials.

"I told them never to call me again," Glanville said Thursday after getting the message. "I don't need their report every Thursday. I see it live."

The coach wouldn't say which decisions officials blew in the Oilers' 20-7 loss to the Bears.

During the game, the replay official, Armen Terzian, overruled the field officials twice.

A key play in the game was a roughing-the-passer penalty called against Houston safety Keith Bostic. The third-and-10 pass from quarterback Jim McMahon, which fell incomplete, gave the Bears a 15-yard gain and an automatic first down. Replays showed Bostic barely touched McMahon, who was seen laughing after the call. But according to replay rules, that type of play is not subject to review by the replay official.

The acknowledgement of mistakes came after NFL officials reviewed videotapes of the Sunday game.

Stewart's 13-under tops Disney Classic

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. — Payne Stewart shot a 6-under-par 66 Friday to take a three-shot lead at 13-under par after two rounds of the $556,000 Walt Disney World Oldsmobile Classic.

Defending U.S. Open champion Ray Floyd was at 10-under 134 along with Mike Sullivan. Floyd shot a 6-under 66 at Lake Buena Vista, while Sullivan played the tight Palm Course at 3-under 69.

Stewart, whose last PGA Tour victory came here in 1983, rolled in seven birdies at the par-72, 7,190-yard Magnolia Course and suffered his only bogey in two rounds after hitting his drive on the 11th hole behind a tree.

"I did all the things I wanted to do," Stewart said. "I've been trying to win so hard all year long. I'm just trying to have fun now and not worry about being in the lead."

"I was putting 8 and 10-footers all day," said Stewart, winner of $406,722 this season. "That sure is better than 15 and 20-footers. I gave myself a few birdie chances and I made them."

Sullivan had four birdies but he missed the green at No. 12, a 199-yard par 3, for his lone bogey. He chipped in once and had two bunker saves in his unusual round.

"I felt like I should have, or would have liked to anyway, made three or four under on the front nine," said Sullivan, the co-leader with Stewart after the first round. "With only half the tournament over, it's too early to be thinking about winning."

Floyd finished with six birdies, playing the four par 5 holes at 3-under. By reaching three of the par 5s in two shots, Floyd had easy two-putt birdies.

"I've played two very nice rounds from tee-to-green," Floyd said. "I'm pleased to be in this position. The greens are very grainy and it's hard to keep the ball on line."

The first three rounds of the 72-hole tournament are being played at three different courses at the Disney Golf Resort. Sunday's final round will be played on the Magnolia Course.

Lon Hinkle (69) and Bobby Wadkins (66) are tied for fifth, five shots back at 136. Bruce Lietzke (70) and Russ Cochran (70) are next at 137.

Of the 152 professionals playing, 74 have shot par or better at the midway point. A final cut to the top 70 players and ties will be made after Saturday's third round.

Dokes indicted for cocaine trafficking

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Michael Dokes has been indicted by a grand jury on charges of cocaine trafficking and marijuana possession.

Dokes could face up to 20 years in prison if convicted of the charges in the indictment, unsealed Friday in state court. An Oct. 22 arraignment has been set on the charges before District Judge Earle White Jr.

Dokes, a former World Boxing Association champion, was arrested

Sept. 30 after Metro Police officers, armed with a search warrant, found about eight ounces of cocaine at his Las Vegas home.

Under state law, there is no possibility for probation if convicted of the charges unless the defendant cooperates with police and discloses his source of the drug.

Police said Dokes resisted when they tried to arrest him and it took five officers to subdue him.

MHS grad honored as Player of Game

UCLA center Joe Goebel, a 1981 graduate of Midland High, was selected to receive the Toyota Leadership Award at last Saturday's Arizona State football game.

The award is presented weekly to a player from each team participating in the CBS broadcast college football game of the week, the ASU recipient was place-kicker Kent Bostrom.

The players are selected by coaches and faculty advisors based on their contributions to team, school and community. Both academics and athletic leadership play a part in the selection process.

Albertville gets nod for '92 Winter Games

ALBERTVILLE, France (AP) — French Olympic officials were hoping that a backlash from a possible rejection of Paris for the 1992 Summer Olympic Games would swing the selection for the Winter Games to Albertville.

Their hopes were realized Friday, when the International Olympic Committee voted at Lausanne, Switzerland, to award the Winter Games to Albertville. The Summer Games were awarded to Barcelona, Spain.

The IOC is not inclined to give both Summer and Winter Games to the same country in the same year. It has happened only three times — in 1924, with Paris and Chamonix; 1932, with Los Angeles and Lake Placid; and 1936, with Berlin and Garmisch-Partenkirchen.

Albertville will not harm the Paris candidacy, Nelson Pailhou, the president of the French Olympic Committee, said prior to the IOC's selections. "But Paris may well favor Albertville. Some of the members may have a bad conscience if they vote against Paris, and may vote for Albertville in compensation."

Although the city is the commercial capital of a prestigious winter resort region in the Savoy Alps, it is located at only 1,130 feet altitude and is not a well-known sports center.

Only figure skating and speed skating will be staged there, while Alpine skiing will be held in the mountains around the resorts of Val d'Isere, Tignes, Courchevel and Meribel, all normally within a 90-minute drive.

Ice hockey is planned for Courchevel or Meribel, the bobsled at La Plagne and the ski jumping on a platform to be built at Le Praz near Courchevel.

A press center will be built at Moutiers, 17 miles away, an Olympic Village with 3,300 beds is planned in nearby Brides-les-Bains.

The distances between venues bring up the main disadvantage of the region for the Winter Olympics — a bottleneck highway system. All the roads lead to Albertville.

The French government and the Savoy Regional Council have promised to expand and improve the local highway system, widening and straightening many of the mountain roads.

But they are limited by the terrain and lack of time and money to do the job thoroughly. Last February, holiday travelers in Val d'Isere were blocked in their cars for up to four hours on the 50 miles of winding mountain road to Albertville.

To supplement the clogged road system, the French National Railroads plan to run their TGV high-speed train from Paris all the way to Bourg St. Maurice, within 25 miles of Val d'Isere.

Stars & Stripes sails to America's Cup win

FREMANTLE, Australia (AP) — Dennis Conner and Stars & Stripes threw the first round of the America's Cup challenger elimination series into a three-way tie for first place Friday, defeating previously unbeaten New Zealand.

Conner, considered the best match race sailor in the world, lost the start to 24-year-old Chris Dickson, but picked up a wind shift early on the first beat to take the lead, which he never relinquished.

The victory moved Stars & Stripes into a tie with New Zealand and America II. Each has a 9-1 record, with two races remaining.

Conner and Dickson said big wind shifts and confused seas off this Indian Ocean port city played a major role in the race.

Conner said a puff on the right side of the course put him ahead, but another shift on the third windward beat allowed New Zealand to pick up 45 seconds, narrowing the margin between the boats to 18 seconds.

Stars & Stripes gained on the final two beats of the race, held in winds of 20 to 25 knots, and won by 49 seconds. At one time during the race, Stars & Stripes led by 1 minute, 17 seconds.

America II had an easier time in recording its ninth victory, beating Azzurra of Italy by 6 minutes, 34 seconds.

Both Stars & Stripes and New Zealand face tough opponents Saturday. New Zealand meets Canada II, which has shown excellent speed, but has lacked consistency, while French Kiss will oppose Stars & Stripes.

America II has an easier task, meeting Eagle, which has not raced well recently.

In Saturday's other races, Courageous IV meets Challenge France, Italia faces White Crusader of England and USA faces Azzurra.

Courageous broke a boom and was forced to retire while racing Italia Friday.

Off the course Friday night, Conner suffered a major setback when a challenger's committee refused to change the conditions in regard to the construction of fiberglass 12-meter boats.

Stars & Stripes has been seeking to have New Zealand's fiberglass yacht remeasured. The syndicate has claimed the present method of surveying fiberglass boats makes it possible for the boats to be lighter in the bow and stern.

This, they claim, would make them less likely to hobbyhorse in heavy seas.

The Yacht Club Costa Smeralda, which is in charge of the series, met with the 13 challengers to see if they wanted to change the conditions.

Bearcats hold on to win Coody title

ABILENE (AP) — Sam Houston State held on to its first-day lead to win the annual Charles Coody West Texas intercollegiate golf tournament here Friday.

The Bearcats, led by medalist Brad Floyd, shot 298 Friday after Thursday's 294 to win by five strokes, 592-597, over tournament co-host Abilene Christian.

Floyd followed Thursday's 3-under 69 with a two-over 74 Friday for a 36-hole total of 143 to win medalist by one stroke over Abilene Christian's Chris Goodspeed (73-71-144).

Texas Tech finished third in team standings at 300-301-601, Cameron was fourth at 299-304-603, and Texas-San Antonio (299-308) and Texas Wesleyan (304-303) tied for fifth at 607.

TALL CITY BOWLING

Kelley-Scroggins team for scratch doubles title

By TOMMY GAMMAGE

Amarillo touring pro Eddie Kelley and doubles partner Mike Scroggins had little trouble defending their scratch doubles title at Tall City Lanes. From the start the duo were never threatened, winning every match and never looking back.

They were an ideal doubles team. If one was having trouble, the other responded above and beyond and when they were both bowling well there was no touching them. They won there matches by as little as 39 pins and by as much as 219 and averaged 216.8 for the tournament — including a 300 for Scroggins — to net the pair the top prize money of $1,500 plus bonus money of $668 for a total of $2,168.

Dallas' Billy Cathey and Paul Toal finished second for $500 plus $419 bonus; third went to Amarillo's Nathan Terry and Mark Scroggins for $260 and $150 and fourth to Dallas' Del Ballard, Jr. and George Misner for $160 and $193.

First round high games money went to Midland's Bill Theobald with a 299 while Midland's John Denton took second and third with a 247 and 246 for $420 each.

In the second round, Alvin Davis rolled a 279, Ballard rolled 258 and Mike Scroggins 300. Each claimed $83. In the third round, Cathey's 268, Brad Hunter's 253 and Toal's 290 cashed $47.

Overall, there were 264 games bowled with 163 breaking 200. The field averaged 207.7.

From Midland there was a dismal five teams entered out of a possible 25 combinations. They could have shown up to spectate, if nothing else. The bowling was excellent and also informative.

This week's bowling honors go to Ron McDurmon with a high series of 721 and Tommy Clifton, Jr. with a high game of 295. For the ladies, Von Woolsey and Donna Leigh rolled 218s while Norma Hill had a 590 series. Honorable mention also to Kathy Taylor (104 average), who bowled 106 pins over her average.

BOWLING TIP

"Chicken Wing" is a phrase for when a bowler's elbow flies away from his body upon release of the ball, causing the bowler to over turn or pull the ball. Once the elbow flies out, all leverage on the ball is lost. The flying elbow often occurs because a bowler starts turning the ball early and muscles it.

To correct the situation, wait for the ball to reach the bottom of the swing and let the natural momentum of the swing bring the ball to release position. Concentrate on a firm, controlled hand position and not turning the ball. At the release point, concentrate on the thumb coming straight up toward the ceiling and the fingers driving through the back of the ball.

Chaplain encounters special challenge with medical ministry

Wendell A. Russell, the Waco Veterans Administration Medical Center's new chief chaplain, poses outside the Church of the Nazarene in Waco. Chaplain Russell ministers to the spiritual needs of a diverse group of people who are veterans and most are psychiatric patients.

WACO (AP) — Ministering to the spiritual needs of a diverse group of people is a special challenge to the new chief chaplain at the Waco Veterans Administration Medical Center.

Chaplain Wendell A. Russell, an eight-year veteran of the center, is no stranger to patients or staff members.

His ministerial charges, mostly from Texas, Oklahoma and New Mexico, come from a variety of religious backgrounds.

"That's the beauty of America," Russell said. "It used to be regarded as a melting pot. But everybody continues with his own tradition, his own ethnicity. We still get along and work together. I've never known anywhere else where you can worship together with people of all backgrounds."

The VA chapel's service is set up, he says, so that patients are reminded "that God did not leave them when they come through the front gate here."

The VA chapel is symbolically located at the center of the medical center grounds. It has Protestant, Catholic and Jewish services and is adaptable to the different faiths, with crosses, crucifixes, and Star of David symbols that can be displayed during the appropriate service.

Russell said that during Protestant services, patients from different denominations may worship, study and have Communion together.

A chaplain's mission, Russell said, is to help people use their own faith, even if it differs from the chaplain's.

"We don't try to change anybody's religion," he said. "We try to help them use their own faith through the crisis they're facing."

"We're so fortunate here in the VA, in our staff," he said. "We've got people who do appreciate the pluralism of America, and they appreciate the patient's right to his own faith."

Russell himself is a minister in the Church of the Nazarene, and is certified in clinical pastoral education.

"It's a tremendous place to do your ministry if you don't have a particular denomination," Russell said.

"You do get honesty from the patients. They're not nearly as protective of the feelings of the staff and the chaplains as other people. If they disagree with a sermon, they'll let you know."

Although there is plenty of opportunity for preaching and teaching, a chaplain's job does not end there.

Chaplains are also an important part of the team concept of treating patients, he said. "Our forte is the personal encounter."

But he said there are differences in being a chaplain at the Waco VA center and setting other institutions.

"All of our patients are veterans and almost all of them are psychiatric patients," he said. "Because of that, there are special needs you find only on certain wards in ordinary or general hospitals. You can expect abnormal behavior here that you seldom see elsewhere."

Mentally ill patients may suddenly become violent or angry, particularly in the locked wards, he said. "You have to be watching very closely."

During his days as a church pastor, Russell said he sometimes escorted parishioners to the state mental hospital. "The feeling was to take them down there and leave them until they get well," he said. "I've seen that attitude change drastically."

Local pastors, in particular, do visit patients, and Russell believes the clergy is better trained to help mentally ill parishioners than in the past.

Unitarian membership is small even though 'world is full of Unitarians'

HOUSTON (AP) — Unitarian Universalists toss out an anecdote about why their membership is small.

"The world is full of Unitarians," they say. "They just don't know they're Unitarians."

It seems one can believe — or not believe — almost anything as a Unitarian Universalist. The membership includes agnostics, Christians, atheists, humanists, Jews and some who won't be classified.

"You are required to believe according to the dictates of your conscience," said the Rev. Dr. Frank Schulman, minister of Emerson Unitarian Church in Houston. "There is really no such thing as heresy in Unitarian Universalism. I consider the word 'heretic' as an honorable label, as I do the word 'agnostic'."

The Unitarian Universalist Association has only 178,000 members nationally. It offers an alternative for some seeking a worship family and experience that are more liberal than mainstream Christianity. Some members call themselves Christians, many adamantly stress they are not Christian.

"Unitarianism was clearly a Christian religion until the last half of the 19th century," Schulman explained. "Then it broadened to include the validity of all world religions. We don't fuss much about labels. We cherish the mixture."

Schulman, whose church is the most traditional-oriented of Houston's Unitarian Universalist congregations, is a Christian Unitarian.

"Christian Unitarians are not Christian in the sense of the orthodox Christians," Schulman said. "I think Jesus conceived himself as human entirely. Divinity was claimed for him by others." The Unitarian Christian is completely faithful to the teachings of Jesus. But the Trinity (The doctrine that God exists in three forms — the Father, the Son and the Holy Spirit) is not in the Bible.

Contrasting with Schulman are the Rev. Robert Schaibly, minister at First Unitarian Church, and the Rev. Dr. Doug Reisner, minister of Unitarian Fellowship of Houston. Reisner is also minister at the Unitarian Fellowship of College Station. They do not consider themselves Christians but rather as religious humanists, believing in Judeo-Christian concepts, particularly in the Golden Rule of doing unto others as you would have others do unto you.

"Unitarians don't share theological views," Reisner said. "What we do share are many values, such as religious freedom and the importance of working out your own ideas. About 90 percent of our members are from Christian backgrounds. Their argument was with the dogmatism of their religion. They like the freedom as Unitarians."

The Unitarian Universalist Association formed in 1961 when the American Unitarian Association and the Universalist Church of America merged. The American Unitarians developed out of Unitarianism (the refuting of the doctrine of the Trinity) begun in 16th-century Europe. The Universalists grew from an 18th-century movement professing universal salvation.

"The Universalists believed that God is too good to damn people to eternal hell," Schaibly said. Schulman completed the familiar phrase: "The other side is that Unitarians believed man was too good to be damned."

Some Unitarians believe in salvation and immortality, others do not.

"It is something I have chosen to believe out of a real yearning to be reunited with people I have loved," Schaibly said. "Immortality or not, it's this world that deserves our concentration, not living in hope of somehow being admitted to heaven."

Even Christian Unitarians do not believe Jesus is the path to salvation.

"The entrance requirement to heaven would have to be based on deeds, not faith," Schulman said.

"The 25th chapter of (the Gospel According to) Matthew is explicit on that. Jesus also said, 'Not everyone who says Lord, Lord will enter the kingdom of heaven, but he who does the will of my Father in heaven.' Unitarians have expressed the importance of doing the will of God as more important than any creed."

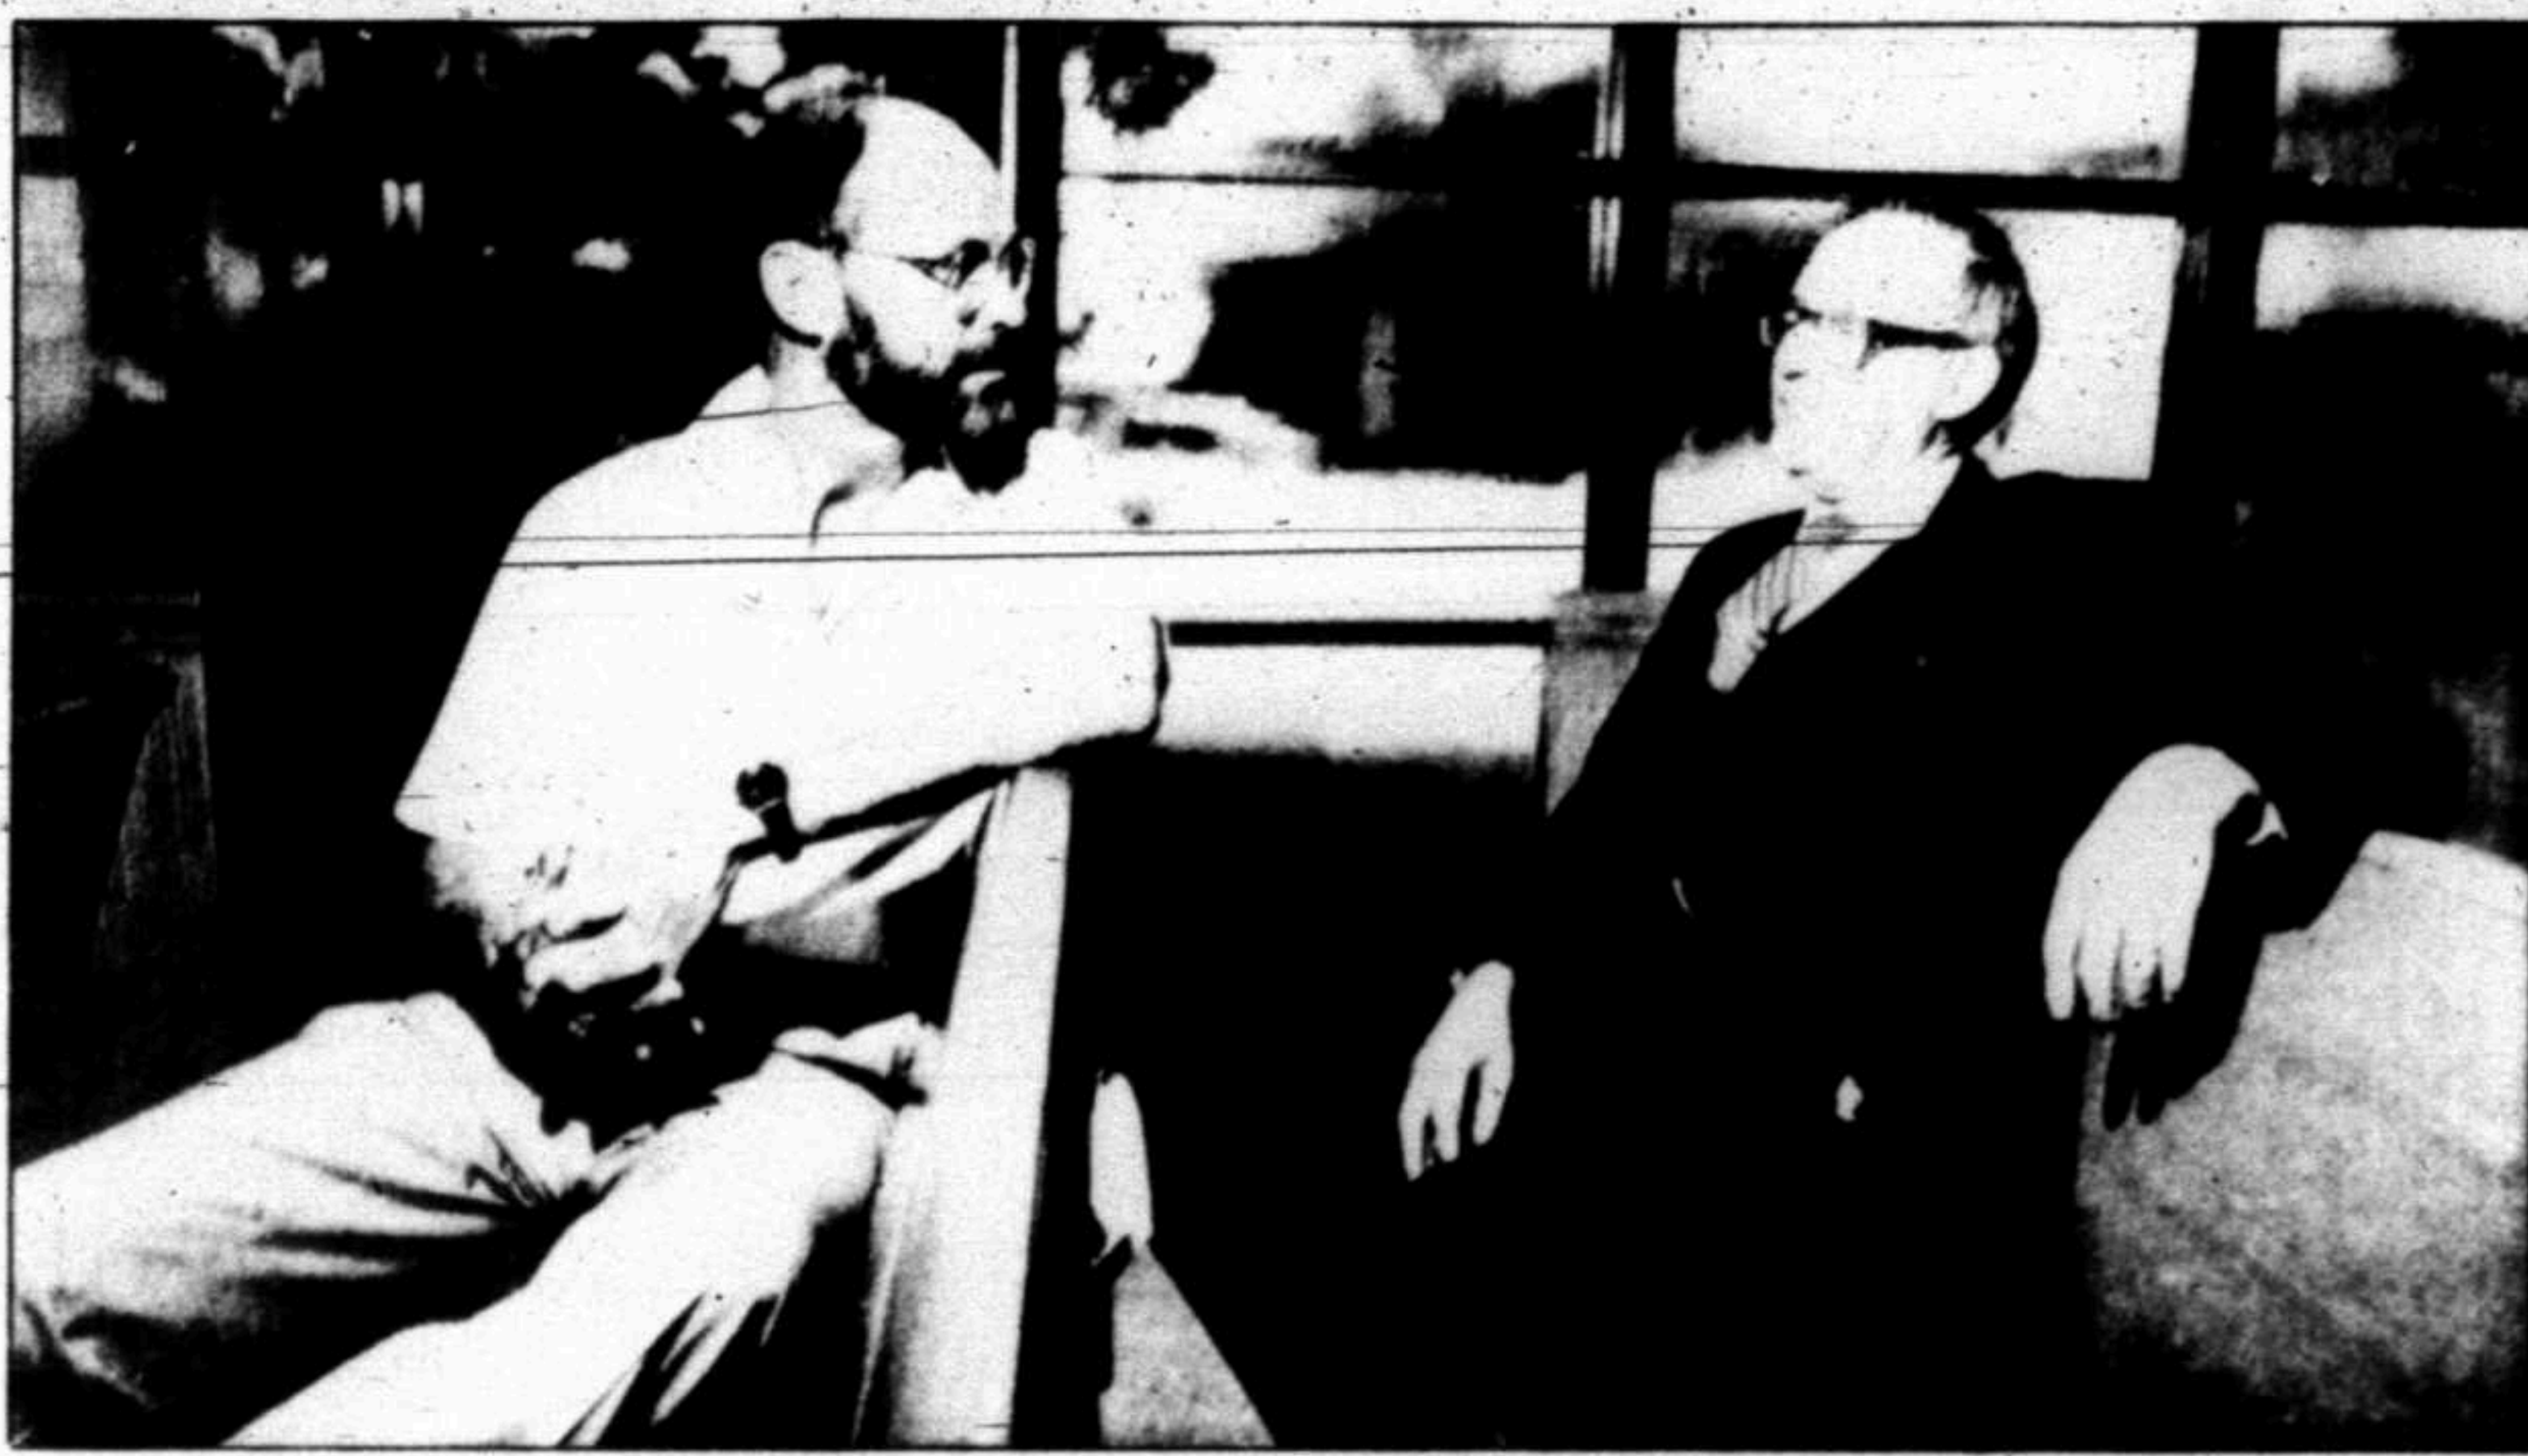

As Reisner pointed out: "If there is any one thing distinctive about us, it's that we are a creedless religion."

In contrast to most religions, Unitarians are proud that their faith constantly changes.

"The early Unitarians would have said 'Truth is found in the Bible,'" Schulman said. "Now we say truth is found in the arts, sciences, other religions, the humanities, within the mind." The early Unitarians thought Jesus was divine but inferior to God. Now we consider Jesus a great exemplar, a great teacher, but not God.

"Agnosticism," Schulman said, "is a profession of ignorance, and this is my position. I do not know whether there is a God, in the sense I know Austin is the capital of Texas. It is an item of faith. But I recognize that new insight may change my mind."

Schaibly said God's existence is not the main issue. "We've abandoned the question of asking if there is a God. It seems exhausted. The real question is: How are you going to live your life, and what's going to be the character of your relationships?"

Seated in the sanctuary of the First Unitarian Church of Houston, the Rev. Robert Schaibly, left, a Christian, discuss their ministries at Houston Unitarian Universalist churches.

Princess Stephanie, Rob Lowe hugged, kissed at Dallas benefit

DALLAS (AP) — Monaco's Princess Stephanie and movie star Rob Lowe hugged and kissed during a party to open a four-day benefit for the Princess Grace Foundation.

Princess Stephanie, Lowe, actress Brooke Shields and about 35 others attended the party Thursday night at Dallas' Mistral nightclub.

Earlier, Lowe and the princess sat close together and kissed between appetizer courses of barbecued shrimp, blackened snapper and tenderloin at Dakota's restaurant in Dallas.

The princess and other members of the Monaco royalty arrived in Dallas on Thursday for the Princess Grace Foundation Gala, an annual benefit for young performers. Plans for the benefit include a dance, fashion show, $1,500-a-plate dinner and a barbecue. About 1,000 supporters, many flying in from Europe, were expected.

The other members of the royal family in Dallas for the festival are Prince Rainier III, the reigning monarch; Prince Albert; Princess Caroline and her husband, Stefano Casiraghi, and two children. Among the stars expected are Frank Sinatra, who will sing at a Saturday benefit; model Cheryl Tiegs and actors Cary Grant and Roger Moore.

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Rock star Prince is disbanding The Revolution, his band of the last four years, and is exploring a new direction, his publicist said Friday.

Drummer Bobby Z, guitarist Wendy Melvoin and keyboardist Lisa Coleman are leaving, according to Robyn Riggs of the Howard Bloom Organization in New York.

Bobby Z will concentrate on producing and songwriting, while Melvoin and Coleman are planning to record an album together and score a film that is to be released next year, Ms. Riggs said.

"He's coming up with something different," Ms. Riggs said of the reclusive Prince. "Nothing's definite at this point."

Prince, star of the movies "Purple Rain" and "Under the Cherry Moon," last appeared with The Revolution in September.

Ms. Riggs said the decision to revamp the band was made earlier this month. "It was mutual as far as I understand it," she said.

CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — Concert promoter Frank J. Russo said his legal fight with pop superstar Michael Jackson and his brothers over promotion of their 1984 Victory Tour has ended.

Russo said Wednesday the agreement was reached in Los Angeles last week before a trial scheduled there next month. A district court clerk who confirmed that the suit had been settled said documents available to him gave no further information.

Russo said that under the settlement he can't disclose the amount. He added, though, that he is "very, very satisfied" and has received payment.

Peter Paterno, a lawyer for the Jacksons, had no comment. Neither side admitted blame in the settlement.

At issue was whether Russo was entitled to payment for pre-tour planning his Concerts East did for the 1984 cross-country extravaganza under the assumption that he has been chosen as the tour promoter.

The tour ended up losing money for Chuck Sullivan of Foxboro, Mass., who actually promoted it, while the Jacksons made money.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — After 54 years, famed disc jockey Kemal Amen Kasem wants to be legally known by his radio name, Casey Kasem.

In court papers filed Thursday, the host of "American Top 40," said the change would be convenient because he is universally known as "Casey." A judge is to rule on the matter Dec. 5.

EVANSVILLE, Ind. (AP) — Author Kurt Vonnegut Jr. says censorship isn't on the increase, it just seems that way sometimes.

"I think it's a disease that's been around a long time, like Legionnaires' disease, maybe, or Alzheimer's, for which it's only been recently recognized as such and treated," he said Thursday.

Vonnegut, an Indianapolis native, spoke during the dedication of the University of Evansville's new $5-million Bower-Suhrheinrich Library.

Vonnegut's "Slaughterhouse-Five" was banned and burned in Drake, N.D., in the early 1970s.

"Word of this went all around the world and I received letters of sympathy from the Soviet Union," Vonnegut said. "The writers wanted to assure me, whereas my books are no longer in print in the United States, they can still be found over there."

SAN MARCOS, Texas (AP) — A Hays County grand jury has declined to indict Gregory Allen, who authorities say was the driver of a car in which country singer George Strait's 13-year-old daughter was killed.

Jennifer Strait was a passenger in an auto that rolled over June 25 at an intersection near the Strait home in San Marcos.

After agreeing to dismiss an earlier felony indictment for involuntary manslaughter because Allen's lawyer objected to its wording, prosecutors had sought a new felony charge against the 48-year-old Allen.

But a new grand jury on Thursday issued no indictment and recommended that Allen be charged with criminally negligent homicide, a Class A misdemeanor.

Hays County District Attorney Bill Rugeley said he planned to file the misdemeanor charge by next week. Conviction on that count could bring a maximum sentence of one year in jail and a $2,000 fine, authorities said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Internal Revenue Service wants Woody Allen, the comedian and film director, to pay $310,729 in back taxes for claiming losses on what the tax-collectors say were financial "shams."

The IRS wants to disallow $500,000 in writeoffs the New York comic writer took on losses from two investment partnerships in 1977 and 1978.

Allen's tax lawyer has denied the government's charges and asked the U.S. Tax Court to throw out the back-tax order. The dispute is still pending, with the records open to public view at the Tax Court.

Allen, who rose to fame in the 1960s as a neurotic comedian, has starred in and directed such movies as "Sleeper," "Annie Hall" and "Manhattan." He reported making $414,803 in 1977 and $830,827 in 1978.

The IRS sent the New York actor a notice of deficiency last June 26. His lawyer, Dennis Ardi of Los Angeles, filed a petition Sept. 5 asking the Tax Court to hear the case.

Allen claimed deductions of $500,000 — $80,000 in 1977 and $440,000 in 1978 — on losses stemming from two investment partnerships known as Square Associates and Square Two Associates.

Neither Allen nor his lawyer, was available for comment. Ardi did not return two calls to his office.

Shelter expects more refugees after quake

By DAVID SEDENO

SAN BENITO, Texas (AP) — A devastating earthquake in El Salvador will trigger an influx of Salvadorans to a new Catholic Church-sponsored shelter that is bustling at the seams even before it reopens, church officials said.

Casa Oscar Romero, a shelter for Central Americans first opened in December 1982, was forced to relocate from a residential area following complaints from neighbors.

Thousands of Central Americans, most of them from El Salvador, have made the shelter their temporary home on their way into the United States.

Last month, Catholic Church officials separated the men, women and children as they prepared for a move to a new facility, whose location will be announced soon, said church spokesman Hernan Gonzalez.

The women and children stayed in the white wood-frame shelter and the men were moved to a barn used for a livestock show.

"I do think the earthquake might be a further impetus for them to come here," Gonzalez said. "But we've certainly known that regardless of what kind of facility we can put up, that it wouldn't be enough to meet the needs."

The earthquake that struck El Salvador last Friday demolished buildings in the capital city of San Salvador, claiming nearly 1,000 lives and leaving tens of thousands homeless, the latest figures indicate.

Jose Mario Celaya Cruz, 30, said he arrived in this South Texas community on the day the earthquake struck in San Salvador and he has not been able to get any word about his family.

He said, however, that many of his countrymen will journey to the United States.

"There are a lot of Salvadorans who have family and friends here and that's why I think they will be coming soon," he said.

Celaya Cruz and hundreds of other Central Americans are restricted to a nine-county area in South Texas that church officials have called a giant detention center. The travel restriction has caused overcrowding at the church facility.

The Central Americans have been documented by U.S. Immigration and Naturalization officials, but they are not able to leave the area without posting a $1,000 cash bond that most do not have.

They are not allowed to work while they are out on their own recognizance.

Church officials, attorneys for Central Americans and immigration officials will meet on Friday to try to work out a solution to the bond problem, said Silvestre Reyes, chief of the Border Patrol sector in McAllen.

The McAllen sector annually records the highest number of arrests of Central Americans trying to enter the United States. Most of those arrested during the last fiscal year that ended Sept. 30, were from El Salvador, Reyes said.

He said the earthquake in El Salvador would trigger an eventual influx of illegal aliens, much like the earthquake in Mexico City last year caused thousands of Mexicans to go north.

"Barring some other occurrence, for instance, additional turmoil within the country, politically, I don't think we're going to see an immediate impact from the earthquake itself," Reyes said.

"I think it will probably be several months down the road. Six months is a good estimate," he said.

Casa Oscar Romero, named after the slain archbishop of San Salvador, gained notoriety over the last two years because of trials involving its workers.

Former director Jack Elder served five months in a San Antonio halfway house in 1985 on a conviction for transporting Salvadorans. Also in 1985, Elder's replacement, Lorry Thomas, was sentenced to two years in prison after pleading guilty to transporting a Nicaraguan in the trunk of her car.

Shelter volunteer Stacey Lynn Merkt is appealing a 1985 conviction of conspiring to transport Salvadorans.

Scouts explore possible career paths

By BOB WIELAND

IRVING (AP) — The Boy Scouts Explorer program is like the old-fashioned apprenticeship method of learning a trade.

"About 100 years ago, if you wanted to find out what you were going to do, all you had to do was look out the door," said Brian D. Archimbaum, director of the Explorer's law enforcement specialty. "If your dad was the blacksmith, you were likely to be the blacksmith."

But times changed, more jobs became available and young people still had to choose what to do when they grew up.

The need for young people to learn about those choices led to the Explorers, a career education program for boys and girls of high school age.

"About 80 percent who come into the program have never been Scouts or have been and rejoined to become part of the Explorer program because it meets a particular need to get more information about a career," Archimbaum said.

Unlike Scout troops chartered by churches or schools, the Explorer posts are chartered by organizations or companies.

There are more than one million Explorers in more than 100 areas. The health care group is the largest 70,000 members. Others range from auto mechanics, ballooning, cartooning and dentistry through zoo management.

The idea is to match Explorers with adult role models and give them on-the-job experience.

"They get to see what it's like, the problems and the benefits and they see the lifestyle that they are going to adopt," Archimbaum said.

If an Explorer doesn't like the profession, they can transfer to another post in another field. And there's no risk, Archimbaum said.

"They are not committing four years of school to it," he said. And they are in an environment where "it's safe and OK to fail."

Explorers run their programs, do the planning and coordinating. Advisers do just that — they advise.

Tourists find mine 'diamond in the rough'

ASHLAND, Pa. (AP) — Pioneer Tunnel, an abandoned anthracite mine carved 1,800 feet into the Mahanoy Mountain in Ashland, has emerged as a leading tourist attraction in Pennsylvania and could enjoy the best season in its 25-year history this year, says manager George Staudenmeier.

Last year 40,000 people from 50 states and 60 countries toured the former Philadelphia and Reading Coal and Iron Company mine that was blasted shut in 1931, then reopened in 1962 as a tourist mine by some Schuylkill County businessmen.

"Attendance records were broken in 1985, but all indications so far point to an even better year in 1986," Staudenmeier said.

He explained that 250 group tours had already been booked, then added, "Recently we had visitors from New Zealand, China, England, Japan, Panama and the Philippines."

Staudenmeier said a celebration to mark Pioneer Tunnel's silver anniversary was "more or less a thank you to the people of Ashland, who contributed almost $25,000 to get this project off the ground back when it all started."

In recent months, $20,000 was pumped into a major improvement inside the mine. Three thousand feet of railroad track laid in the main gangway in 1911 have been replaced.

"That makes the ride a lot smoother and more enjoyable for the tourists," Staudenmeier said. "The old track was just about worn out."

Visitors ride into the mine in open cars, pulled by a reconditioned electric mine "motor" (locomotive) from bygone days. Veteran mine foreman and guide Bill Whyne leads the way and tells the anthracite story.

With 45 years in the coal pits, Whyne says he was born into mining. "I was a miner, when I was just a minor," he laughed.

Then there's Eddie Krosnodomski who began his 50-year career in the mines at the age of 13, digging coal in "bootleg holes" with his two brothers, Simon and Vincent.

Krosnodomski puts a smile on the face of every Pioneer Tunnel visitor, as he spins humorous tales about the hard-coal mines of yesteryear and life in the patch towns that sprang up around them.

The community-owned, non-profit complex boasts a "lokie" ride to an old strip mine, a state anthracite museum, snack bar, gift shop and a large, shaded park a stone's throw from the mine entrance.

Staudenmeier pointed out that Pioneer Tunnel has been selected as one of the state's "Top 10" tourist attractions, not only because of the entertainment factor, but also because the tour is educational.

"We have catered to school groups from kindergarten to college students down through the years," he said.

But Staudenmeier says the mine's success didn't come easily. "We experienced hard times on the way up and we came close to throwing the towel in," he said. "But we were able to hang in there and we finally made it. There is a lot of pride attached to the mine."

Some fathers falsely accused of abuse, therapists say

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Fathers seeking custody of their offspring during divorce battles are increasingly subject to false accusations that they sexually molested their children, psychiatrists said Friday.

The therapists blamed greater public awareness of sexual abuse, laws requiring teachers and doctors to report even unsubstantiated accusations, careless counselors who interview alleged victims, and joint custody laws that spur mothers to fight harder for sole custody of their children.

The custody laws and changing moral values mean mothers "have got to get a little more vicious and come up with something better than adultery" accusations against their estranged husbands during custody battles, said Dr. Diane Schetky, a Rockport, Maine, child psychiatrist.

Experts lack reliable statistics documenting the increase in unfounded molestation allegations, said Schetky and other therapists who delivered papers about the trend Friday during the annual meeting of the American Academy of Child and Adolescent Psychiatry.

Court-appointed therapists who investigate such claims "uniformly report a marked increase in false allegations of sexual abuse arising in contested custody cases," said Melvin Guyer, a University of Michigan psychologist-lawyer who evaluates custody cases for Michigan judges.

"False sexual abuse allegations are rare to begin with, but the area where they're (increasingly) common is in contested custody disputes," and fathers are almost always the targets, said Dr. Spencer Eth, a psychiatrist at the University of Southern California and the University of California at Los Angeles.

Eth warned that false claims of molestation in divorce cases "should not discredit allegations of sexual abuse of children who are not in contested custody cases. Most of those allegations are truthful."

Most false accusations of molestation are made sincerely, not intentionally, Guyer said.

"A mother would say that little Sally came back from a visit with her dad, she was quiet, she looked tired, she was weepy, she wasn't herself, her tummy hurt," he explained. "Then the child has a diaper rash, and the mother puts all the pieces together and says, 'I think something happened.'"

"There are some parents who believe their own lies," said Schetky, who has testified on behalf of fathers accused of sexual abuse. "If mommy says enough times it really happened, she (the child) tends to believe mommy."

She said some mothers who were molested as children become "hyper-vigilant" for signs of abuse in their own offspring.

Guyer said many false accusations don't involve outright molestation, but such statements as the father "walks around the house in his underwear in front of his child or he bathes with little Billy."

"In an adversarial divorce, what was innocent during the marriage becomes suspect," Guyer added.

Schetky, Eth and Guyer said molestation accusations have increased in recent years because news stories raised public awareness.

More states have laws that penalize teachers, doctors and other professionals for failure to report suspected abuse, Guyer said. If a mother says she suspects her child was molested, the professional is inclined "to cover myself and report and let somebody else sort it out," he added.

Many social workers and family counselors who interview alleged molestation victims are inadequately trained for the task, Eth, Guyer and Schetky said.

Reagan defends Star Wars as 'purely peaceful technology'

GRAND FORKS, N.D. (AP) — President Reagan, in North Dakota to help out GOP Sen. Mark Andrews, on Friday defended his "Star Wars" proposal as a "purely peaceful technology" and compared it to World War II radar used to beat back the Nazis.

At a political rally for Andrews, Reagan said that trading his Strategic Defense Initiative for arms reductions at the Iceland summit would have been tantamount to Britain's Neville Chamberlain appeasing Hitler at Munich before World War II.

"The Soviets are hard bargainers," Reagan said. "America must be even more patient and determined and united."

Reagan also defended his free-market agriculture policies in the Upper Midwest, where farmers have suffered hard times. Andrews has been hurt by the ailing farm economy and faces a strong challenge Nov. 4 from the state tax commissioner, Kent Conrad.

The president's decision at last weekend's summit in Reykjavik to hold out against Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's insistence that SDI research be confined to the laboratory resulted in the collapse of an unprecedented agreement to slash or even eliminate offensive nuclear weapons on both sides.

In the days since, the White House has mounted an intensive public campaign to explain Reagan's commitment to Star Wars and to portray the summit as having brought what the president termed "an historic turnaround for the Soviets" and a new willingness to negotiate nuclear arms reductions.

Among the political banners draped around the sports arena where Reagan spoke Friday was one boasting: "Reagan Scores in Iceland." Grand Forks is home to a Strategic Air Command base scheduled to get B-1 bombers next year.

Recalling British research to develop radar before World War II, Reagan said that without that new technology "it's possible that the Royal Air Force wouldn't have been able to beat back the Nazi air assault on England."

"I couldn't help but think," Reagan continued, "that giving up SDI would have been like Chamberlain giving up radar, as well as Czechoslovakia, at Munich — a tragic blunder that might have spelled the end to freedom in Europe."

The decision to permit Hitler to dismember and occupy Czechoslovakia in hopes it would appease his expansionist appetite is often cited as a catastrophic miscalculation that emboldened the Nazi dictator and led to the invasion of Poland and the start of World War II.

"SDI is a purely defensive, purely peaceful technology," Reagan said, describing the still hypothetical system that would employ high-energy laser beams and space-based technology to shoot down offensive missiles before they could reach their targets.

"If the Soviets honestly want progress toward a world free of nuclear weapons, they have nothing to fear from SDI," Reagan said.

Gorbachev, however, has insisted the U.S. program is a ploy to carry the arms race into space and give the United States the capability to wipe out the Soviet Union before it can strike back.

Reagan met briefly with representatives of state agricultural interests and promised them, "Government will stand by you during these hard times."

But he added, "The last thing farmers need is to return to the party that gave them grain embargoes, outrageous inflation and 21.5 percent interest rates."

Defending the compromise farm bill he signed last year paring subsidies for many agricultural products, Reagan acknowledged, "There are things in the farm bill that Mark (Andrews) doesn't like. And there are things in it I don't like."

"But we both agree government programs ought to be better targeted to the family farmers who need it (sic) most. Right now, some subsidies operate to make rich farmers richer, and we're opposed to that."

Defending Andrews with a slap at the incumbent's Democratic opponent, Reagan said Andrews "knows what it's like to meet a payroll, he is not a lifetime bureaucrat who doesn't know the difference between a cow and a combine."

Recent polls have shown the race to be a tossup, although the latest University of North Dakota survey, conducted this week, gave Andrews a slight edge, 50.5 percent to Conrad's 41.7 percent.

The president's brief visit to the University of North Dakota campus was his second campaign foray in three days as he continues his fight to retain Republican control of the Senate. With 2½ weeks remaining until Election Day, Reagan is expected to touch down in as many as ten more states where races are expected to be close.

"So long, farewell"

New York couple begin free weekend trip to Omaha

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Two New Yorkers who paid 14 cents and won a trip to Omaha arrived here Friday for a weekend of sightseeing, steaks and sweatshirts in a promotion to lure tourists from the Big Apple to the nation's heartland.

"We made it," said Sal Stracquadaini, kneeling and kissing the carpet after he and his wife, Joan, stepped off a jetliner at Eppley Airfield, where banners proclaimed "Welcome to Omaha, Sal and Joan."

The Stracquadainis, who live in West Islip on Long Island, received a key to the city from Omaha Mayor Mike Boyle. They gave Boyle bottles of Long Island wine, a bottle of New York water, a basket of apples, a New York Mets cap and plaque and a Yankee hat for his wife.

"I didn't expect all this hoopla," Mrs. Stracquadaini said, looking at the television cameras and reporters surrounding her. "It's amazing. It's too much."

Boyle had drawn the Stracquadainis names from a barrel of post cards sent by New Yorkers for a chance to win 48 hours in Nebraska's largest city, population 350,000.

Stracquadaini, 40, an engineer for the Grumman Corp., said he had never been west of Dayton, Ohio, before. His wife, 41, state transportation department word processing worker, said she had only traveled on the East Coast.

Stracquadaini, who carried a banner saying "New York Loves Omaha," said he was looking forward to his visit and finding out if the city really wasn't flat.

"I want to get a cowboy hat," he said. "That's what I really want."

Becky Vohoska of the Greater

Omaha Convention & Visitors Bureau, said the Stracquadainis would be given a tour of downtown, including the Central Park Mall, before heading to a Victorian dinner at the historic Gen. Crook House. The restored home is at old Fort Omaha, once an Army outpost that has been turned into a technical college.

Today, the Stracquadainis will likely see Boys Town, the Joslyn Art Museum, the Omaha History Museum and other sights, "as much as we can do in a short time," she said. They'll see a play at the Firehouse from Newark, N.J., this summer. But People Express recently dropped its Omaha flights, and the Stracquadainis got tickets on Eastern Airlines from LaGuardia Airport.

The contest was publicized in the New York Daily News and on New York radio station WABC, and 1,300 people responded.

Ms. Vohoska, the tourism manager at the visitors bureau, said Omaha was looking for "real New Yorkers" to enter — "somebody who's never been to the Midwest and still thinks there are cowboys and Indians running around here."

Reagan signs Superfund bill because people 'demanded it'

By PEGGY ROBERSON
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON — President Reagan Friday signed the Superfund hazardous waste cleanup bill because the American people demanded it, according to congressional leaders who drafted and pushed the bill to passage.

Sen. Robert T. Stafford, chairman of the Environment and Public Works Committee, told reporters the 99th Congress, now racing toward adjournment, "is the most environmentally oriented Congress in memory."

Next year, Stafford vowed to take up legislation to curb acid rain and to strengthen clean air laws.

In addition to the $9 billion, four-year Superfund re-authorization, the departing Congress has approved a Clean Water Act — also facing a threatened presidential veto. Both houses approved an oil spill liability bill but conferees failed to reach agreement on differences in the two versions.

Sen. Frank R. Lautenberg, D-N.J., a member of Stafford's committee, and Rep. James J. Florio, a leader in the House effort to pass Superfund, joined Stafford at the impromptu press conference and praised the senator for his work.

Lautenberg said public opinion polls show that the American people place environmental issues at the top of their concerns, "right up there with war-and-peace issues."

Stafford said he had been worried since the House Oct. 9 approved the House-Senate conference report on Superfund. The president, meanwhile, huddled with advisors and congressional leaders to seek advice on whether to sign or veto the legislation.

White House and Treasury officials recommended a veto because the bill includes a broad-based corporate income tax and a substantial increase in oil taxes that would raise more than $5.3 billion over five years.

The Environmental Protection Agency urged the president to sign in order to rejuvenate the money-starved cleanup program and head off layoffs of contractors and EPA employees.

More than 80 senators wrote to the president asking him to sign the bill.

The House passed the conference report by a lopsided 386-27 vote and the Senate approved it by 88-8. Both votes far exceeded the majority necessary to override a veto.

Lautenberg said the number reflected the attitude of constituents who are demanding safe homes, towns and workplaces.

If Congress adjourned, however, before Oct. 21, the last possible day to sign or veto, the president could have done nothing and thereby "pocket veto" the legislation.

To head off the possibility of a pocket veto, 57 senators signed a letter circulated by Lautenberg urging Senate Majority Robert Dole to keep the body in "pro forma" session through Oct. 21 to avoid a pocket veto.

Florio said he would love to stay in session to avoid a pocket veto of the Clean Water Act as well.

Air Force One has to change course

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan's plane had to change its course over western Pennsylvania on Friday after a military jet came closer than five miles and did not turn away as instructed, an official said.

At no time was Air Force One endangered in the incident, which occurred about 10 a.m. as the plane was flying to North Dakota for a political appearance, said Stephen Hayes, a Federal Aviation Administration spokesman.

According to Hayes, Air Force One was flying at about 31,000 feet, headed west. An Air Force F-4 jet was north of the president's plane and flying at about the same altitude, headed south.

FAA regulations require aircraft at high altitudes to maintain a distance of five miles or more from each other. Hayes said an air traffic controller based in Cleveland, Ohio, observed that the path of both planes would take them closer than regulations allow.

Hayes said the controller directed the pilot of the F-4 to turn to his left, or in a easterly direction, but the pilot "did not acknowledge that transmission and did not make the turn."

"The air traffic controller again made that direction and the plane again did not turn," Hayes said. "At that point, the controller contacted the pilot of Air Force One and directed him to turn left, which in his case would have been south or southwest and to descend to another altitude. Air Force One did that."

Hayes said the closest the two aircraft came to each other was 4.4 miles.

"In no instance was there any danger here," he said. "We did lose the separation that we try to maintain, which is five miles, but it was certainly not a close call. It was not dangerous."

Hayes said the FAA was investigating why the F-4 pilot failed to follow the controller's direction.
