Local [illegible] dolls okay

Recent news reports concerning Cabbage Patch-type dolls in the Dallas area found to be flammable apparently caused brief concern here Friday.

Bernadine Seaton, one of the owners of Country Corners, told the Snyder Daily News Saturday morning that one local woman returned several "Patch Kids" dolls she had bought from the store after hearing a Dallas TV report "two nights in a row."

The Patch Kid line of dolls is similar to Cabbage Patch dolls in that they come with certificates and adoption papers, Seaton said, but they are not the same as the original Cabbage Patch dolls.

Seaton explained that she had not heard the news report, but she contacted the FBI office in Washington D. C. Friday afternoon to determine if the dolls she stocked are safe. Seaton read the information contained on the dolls' labels to the agent over the telephone and he assured her that the Patch Kid dolls she stocks are both "safe and legal."

The agent also said that the dolls in question were characterized by a strong kerosene odor which would "discourage children from playing with them anyway."

He also told Seaton that the FBI wasn't really involved in the investigation and wouldn't be unless the dolls proved to be counterfeit.

The Dallas report of bogus dolls came from one outlet in that city, and the report indicated that only dolls from that store should cause any concern.

One long-awaited project reflected on permit listing

A long awaited project in Snyder finally showed up on the official permit list for new construction during November — the 24-unit Golden Terrace Village housing project for the elderly.

It carried with it a new construction estimate of $565,000 — the largest single permit amount issued for the still young building year.

The combined new construction totals for the month of November equaled more than $831,000 — bringing the two-month total for the fiscal year to near $1.4 million.

Still not included in the year's total is a building permit for Snyder's new Furr's Super Market, however. While dirt work has begun at the site, city officials report that a final permit will be issued after detail work regarding the Furr's plat is completed.

The permit is not required until actual construction begins.

The cumulative total of some $1.4 million sees the Snyder building year lagging behind totals for 1983.

At the end of November last year, permits issued here equaled some $2.1 million. Exact figures for both are $1,397,749 and $2.111,783 respectively.

In addition to Golden Terrace

Tenneco IH takeover effect minimal locally

The owner of the local International Harvester dealership — Snyder Truck and Tractor — says he thinks the proposed buyout of IH by Tenneco Inc. will equal "nothing but better as far as I'm concerned."

This was the opinion offered by implement dealer Roy Kidd, who recently attended a meeting of International Harvester dealers in Dallas.

Tenneco Inc. announced Nov. 26 it would purchase the Harvester rights pending federal approval.

Tenneco also owns the Case Co., another major farm equipment manufacturer, and a merger of both Case and IH is speculated as a result of the purchase.

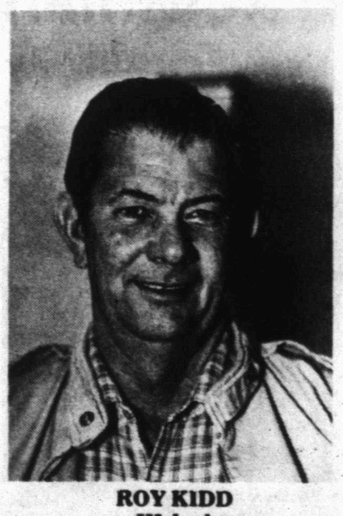

Kidd said he believes this will occur, but from the standpoint of the local operation, he said he expects it to be "business as usual."

"At the meeting I attended, we were told that the tractor we will wind up selling will be painted red and have International Harverster on it," he said, a style that will follow the current line of IH equipment.

He added that the dealers were assured that parts for both Case and Harvester would be offered and that all warranty guarantees will be honored.

The Tenneco-IH transaction is simplified in Snyder since only the Harvester line of tractors is sold here.

Kidd noted also he expects more mergers of farm implement companies in the future due to the current state of "overproduction."

State board acting on recommendations

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education was set to act Saturday on a long series of recommendations from its committees on how the new public school reform bill should be interpreted and administered.

The board's decisions will provide guidelines to the 1,100 school districts throughout the state.

Highlights of the proposals include:

— The Committee on Finance has recommended a formula for distributing the $1.2 billion provided by the summer special session in a way that will help taxlean small school districts. The cost of educational goods and services to each school will figure in the formula.

— The Committee on Students has recommended rules on student absences for extracurricular activities, social promotions and unexcused students absences. Students can have only five unexcused absences each semester and athletes and others in extracurricular activities can spend only eight hours a week for travel and practice outside the school duties.

— The Committee on Personnel has recommended rules on testing Texas school teachers as required by the new school law and a teacher "career ladder" that provides authomatic promotions.

On Friday, the Committee on Students, headed by Jack Strong, former state senator from Longview, agreed to submit its previous decisions on extracurricular activities to the state board with one addition — performances of elementary art students will be excused absences.

Efforts by committee members Mary Helen Belanga of Corpus Christi to get similar exclusions for drama students for school plays and Katherine Raines, Cleburne, for Latin club members were unsuccessful.

"We will never be able to draw up rules that will apply to every situation," said Strong.

"I am very sympathetic but we are not able to cover

Telephone directory distribution planned

The 1984-85 Snyder telephone directory will be distributed beginning Wednesday according to Jim West, community relations manager for Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

A total of 10,540 directories will be mailed to area residents. For additional copies, customers may call the business office during regular business hours, West said.

However, he requested that customers not call right away. "If your friend across town gets a directory before you receive yours, please be patient since all directories are not delivered the same day," he said.

This year, 54 white pages with 8,266 listings and 142 Yellow Pages make up the directory and emergency numbers have been placed on the inside front cover. The "Customer Guide" provides tips on how to save money on phone service and a new map of Texas' long-distance service areas.

The directory also contains listings for Hermleigh.

After an almost "blind search" Patton came up with his oldest old glasses which he put on and went back to work. After a couple of hours of trying to make do, Patton gave in and took an hour of sick leave.

Mavis Brumbelow, secretary out at WTC, was observed as unduly apprehensive one day last week. She had an appointment with an allergy doctor

Mavis finally admitted that she feared the doctor would tell her she was allergic to the family pet, Suzie, a fixture around the Brumbelow household for some 13 years.

Someone suggested it might not be the dog, she might be allergic to Ken, her husband of 40 years.

Mavis said if she had to choose between Suzie and Ken–Suzie is a lot less trouble.

FBI captures two people wanted for bail jumping

By The Associated Press

Robert and Sharon Merki, who were arrested by FBI agents Friday on an island in Puget Sound, were arrested in Burns 2½ years ago and charged with counterfeiting $100 bills.

Also arrested on the counterfeiting charges on March 22, 1982, were former Springfield school teacher Robert Donohue and his daughter, Karen Donohue.

The four were accused of passing an estimated $40,000 in the fake bills, mostly along Interstate 5 north and south of Eugene, and of printing at least another $77,000 in bogus $100 bills.

A federal grand jury in Portland returned an eight-count indictment against the four on April 21, 1982.

The four suspects were charged with conspiracy to print, possess and deliver counterfeit money. The Merkis were charged with passing counterfeit $100 bills and Robert Merki was accused of unlawfully carrying a firearm.

The Donohues were convicted in a July 1982, trial in U.S. District Court in Eugene. The Merkis skipped bail after entering innocent pleas to the charges in May 1982.

The four defendants were freed shortly after their arrests when they posted $1,000 security bond each.

A federal warrant accusing the Merkis of violating their bail agreement was issued when they failed to report to a federal probation officer in Spokane, Wash, in June 1982. During the Donohues' trial, the Merkis were said to have fled either to Canada or to South America.

The Merkis were characterized during the Donohues' trial as survivalists who believed a holocaust was about to take place. They allegedly printed and passed the counterfeit money to buy survivalist gear.

If convicted of the counterfeiting charges, Robert Merki faces a maximum sentence of 100 years in prison and a $40,000 fine.

Green River Task Force conducts massive search

ENUMCLAW, Wash. (AP) — The Green River Task Force was conducting a massive search today along a seven-mile stretch of Washington 410 east of here, in an effort to determine whether the wooded area contains any more victims of the Green River serial killer.

The bodies of three of the killer's 28 known victims have been found along a short stretch of the highway, said Task Force spokeswoman Fae Brooks.

The killer previously has dumped as many as five victims in the same general location.

Today's search, was set to begin at 9 a.m., and was to involve task force officers, King County reserve police, and 75-80 volunteers from such agencies as Explorer Search and Rescue, the Four by Four Mountain Rescue Council, and police explorer scout contingents from the King County, Seattle and Port of Seattle police departments, Ms. Brooks said.

The last Green River killer victim recovered along Washington 410 was Martina Authorlee, 18, of Seattle, whose skeleton was found Nov. 14 by elk hunters.

The remains of Mary Sue Bello, 25, of Seattle, were found Oct. 12 along the highway by mushroom hunters.

The remains of Debbie May Abernathy, 26, of Seattle, were found March 31 and identified in May.

The bodies were found between 60 and 150 feet off the highway, all on the same side of the road, between Milepost 33 and Milepost 37 or 38, Ms. Brooks said.

Areas between Milepost 32 and 39 were not previously searched.

The search was not conducted earlier because of the Thanksgiving holiday and problems in scheduling all the groups involved, she said.

Police fear another 14 missing women may have fallen victim to the killer, the worst current serial killer case in the country.

The case takes its name from the Green River in south King County, where the bodies of the first five victims were found in the summer of 1982.

Americans are spending 10 times more money on health care than they were 23 years ago, says the Health Insurance Association of America. The nation's 1983 health care expenditures are estimated at $362.3 billion, or $1,560 for each man, woman and child. By contrast, health expenditures in 1960 totaled $26.9 billion, or about $150 for each person.

The safety lamp was invented by Britain's Sir Humphrey Davy. It was first used in coal mines in 1816.

CRMWD deliveries are down slightly

Despite an unusually wet and cool October, water deliveries of the Colorado River Municipal Water District were off only 1.66 per cent from October a year ago.

The total was 1,044,799,040 gallons, or 11,262,220 gallons less. Of the total, 943,008,600 gallons were for municipal customers, up to 230,300 gallons from October 1983.

On the other hand, deliveries to oil companies dropped 11,492,520 gallons to 101,770,640 gallons. Two million of this was in a cut-off of surface water from Lake Thomas for conservation purposes, and a 16,000,000-gallon drop in brackish water deliveries to the SACROC secondary recovery unit.

In October, Big Spring received 197,195,000 gallons, down 6.29 per cent; Midland 294,275,000, up 5.38 per cent; Odessa 365,050,000 gallons, up .29 of one per cent; Snyder 58,488,000 gallons, down 13.76 per cent. Stanton, which had work underway on its distribution system, only took 60,000 gallons when last year it required 6,545,000 gallons. Robert Lee took 10,054,000 gallons in October 1983 and none this year. San Angelo, however, took 27,940,000 gallons instead of 4,701,000 gallons a year ago.

Fugitive was involved in Neo-Nazi politics

METALINE FALLS, Wash. (AP) — Fugitive Robert T. Mathews, a neo-Nazi activist and object of a massive manhunt on Whidbey Island, was not the sort to surrender without a fight, a family source said.

Mathews, 31, of Metaline Falls has been the object of an intense manhunt since Nov. 24, when he escaped from about 20 FBI agents surrounding the Capri Motel in Portland, Ore.

Agent Arthur Hensel was wounded in the knee and Mathews was believed to have been wounded in the hand as he fled the northeast Portland motel.

The source, who asked not to be identified, said he believed Mathews had been bankrolled by neo-Nazi sympathizers.

Mathews' brother, John Lee, said the shooting of the agent was out of character for Robert Mathews, "although he's done a lot of strange things since he got mixed up with those (neo-Nazi) people."

In a telephone interview Friday evening, Mathews' wife Debbie, at home with the couple's young son in a mobile home in a wooded area, said only, "He was an excellent family man, an excellent father."

She refused to say when she last saw her husband, and Mathews' mother refused to speak with a reporter at all.

Despite growing involvement in white supremicist activities, Mathews apparently has never been convicted of any crime and was given a concealed weapon permit about two months ago, said Pend Oreille County Sheriff Tony Bamonte.

John Mathews said he and his brother grew up in a non-racist middle class home, and added that his brother disliked firearms until he became active in Aryan-supremacy organizations.

"Bob was an anti-hunting that he told everyone he wanted to turn his property into a game sanctuary," he said.

But the unidentified family source said Robert Mathews' attitude changed.

"He's a radical as far as going ahead and achieving his objectives, and you need a gun to do that, so he's not a guy who just likes to collect guns," the source said.

Mathews was among those who clashed briefly with Seattle members of the International Committee Against Racism during a Spokane rally of the Aryan Nations Church in June 1983.

Mathews appeared to be disenchanted with Aryan Nations — "too much talk and not enough action" — and turned to another neo-Nazi group, National Alliance, the source said.

From chemical leak...

Mass deaths could not occur in U. S.

SPOKANE (AP) — Mass deaths such as those that occurred from a chemical leak in India couldn't happen from cyanide use by the U.S. mining industry, says a spokesman for the Du Pont Co., the U.S. manufacturer of cyanide for mining.

"I cannot conceive in any way that the incident in Bhopal could occur with cyanide use in the U.S. mining industry. I say that categorically," said Fred W. DeVries, senior technical service consultant for Du Pont Co.

Du Pont, based in Wilmington, Del., is the only North American producer of sodium cyanide for mining, DeVries said. Mining companies use the compound extensively to recover gold and other metals from ores and ore concentrates.

DeVries discussed safe cyanide use Friday in an address at the annual convention of the Northwest Mining Association.

In an interview he said initial news reports from India incorrectly identified the deathly gas released there as cyanide. Actually it was methyl isocyanate, an intermediate product used in making insecticide, he said.

Chemically, it isn't like cyanide and isn't even a cyanide compound, he added.

Methyl isocyanate is, several times more toxic than hydrogen cyanide, the gas associated with cyanide use, and it's heavier than air, which is why it remained close to the ground, poisoning people, DeVries said.

The mining industry buys sodium cyanide in a solid form, which is easier to handle than a gas, and for mineral recovery, mixes it in solution with water.

When in contact with air, the solid or solution can give off toxic gas, hydrogen cyanide, but that gas is lighter than air, so it rises into the atmosphere and dissipates rapidly, he said.

The alkalinity of solutions is usually controlled to reduce gas production, he said.

Solid sodium cyanide and its solution also are toxic, and are dangerous if eaten or absorbed through the skin, DeVries said.

Cyanide use in mining usually is in remote areas, he said. Solutions generally are impounded to prevent their reaching water supplies, and in any form, sodium cyanide usually will decompose in nature within a matter of weeks or months, he added.

Several plants produce cyanide naturally, he noted.

Cyanide use in mining began in 1892, and the U.S. mining industry now uses probably at least 50 million pounds annually, he said.

There's never been "a proven accidental fatality from cyanide in the mining industry, and you don't get a record like that unless you have had people attentive to safety in handling," Devries said.

Survivors will share money

VANCOUVER, British Columbia (AP) — A British Columbia Supreme Court judge, saying a criminal cannot profit from his crimes, has ruled that $100,000 the government paid to killer Clifford Olson's family in the notorious "cash-for-bodies" deal must be turned over to the court.

Mr. Justice William Trainor made the decision in a suit that the families of seven of Olson's 11 young victims had filed against Olson, his wife Joan and infant son and two lawyers — Robert Shantz and E. J. McNeney.

Trainor said the parents in the suit have a right to claim the money, and that the families of Olson's four other victims also may have a legitimate claim against the fund.

"It is a well established principle of our law that it is contrary to public policy that a man should be allowed to claim a benefit resulting from his own crime whether under a contract or a gift or otherwise," Trainor said in a 42-page decision released Friday following a two-week civil trial in October.

David Gibbons, a lawyer for the families, said the money will be divided among all the families of Olson's victims, not just the seven who went to court.

Gary Rosenfeldt, stepfather of victim Daryn Johnsrude and an unofficial spokesman for the families, said, "We were elated today to hear we had won the case and that as of today, Clifford Olson has not profitted from his crime."

He said most of the money would probably go for legal fees and court costs.

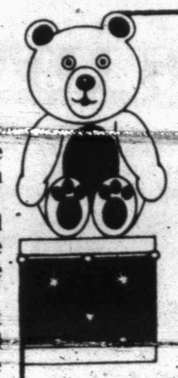

The families, who previously obtained a default judgment for damages from Olson under the provincial Family Compensation Act, sought access to the money which the Royal Canadian Mounted Police paid Aug. 26, 1981, into a trust fund for Joan Olson and her son. The money was paid after Olson agreed to lead police to the bodies of some of his victims in southwestern B.C.

On Jan. 14, 1982, Olson pleaded guilty to 11 counts of first-degree murder. He was sentenced to life in prison.

The court was told that about $60,000 of the $100,000 remained and was in a bank in the Bahamas.

Trainor said "the defendants are accountable for the entire sum of $100,000 paid to McNeney by the RCMP and are liable for it."

In summarizing the case, the judge agreed with arguments presented by Gibbons that Olson had benefitted from the trust fund, and that McNeney and Shantz had engaged in a "nasty bit of business" — a special type of trust fund — to prevent police or others from recovering the blood money payment.

Few 'head shop' operators prosecuted

SEATTLE (AP) — Despite a state law banning the sale or possession of drug paraphernalia, few "head shop" operators have been prosecuted, says an attorney for a group that opposed the law before it was passed three years ago.

Since it was passed, courts have ruled that the law is constitutional. Yet, "it's basically proven to be unworkable in practice," Ford said.

"The law doesn't seem to have done anything but create work for lawyers," he said. "So far there's not been any individual case brought successfully under the state statute."

The state law has spawned duplicate ordinances in some cities. It makes it illegal to sell, use, advertise or possess items intended for processing, ingesting or packaging any controlled drugs.

Maximum penalty for sale or possession of paraphernalia, a misdemeanor, is 90 days in jail and a $1,000 fine. Selling paraphernalia to anyone under 18, a gross misdemeanor, is punishable by one year in jail and a $5,000 fine.

Kennie Endelman, a member of a drug task force in Seattle's Shoreline area that helped push passage of the law, said she asked King County police to investigate a store in her area selling drug paraphernalia. Police were cooperative, she said, but the case is tied up in the county prosecutor's office, and no charges have been filed.

Ms. Endelman said she is "very frustrated, to say the least. ... We have worked for years to get drug awareness programs in the schools, and this (store) is selling it openly. It's just like throwing mud in our face."

Pat Sainsbury of the King County prosecutor's office said his agency is "definitely not" avoiding enforcement of the state law.

Lt. Harry Berghmans of the Seattle police narcotics division said his unit hasn't been concerned with paraphernalia shops because the city has not passed an ordinance banning them.

"It would be beyond the scope of the law to raid the stores," he said. "And to tell you the truth, I've got enough problems without that."

In Everett, the November raids on two stores were made under the city's paraphernalia law. Police say they seized $7,000 worth of drug gear.

An attorney for the stores, Budget Tapes and Records and International Imports, said the search may have been conducted illegally.

In statements used to seek search warrants, police made no effort to prove that the items were for use with controlled drugs, said attorney Richard Troberman.

"The officer merely said, 'I know it when I see it and this is drug paraphernalia,'" Troberman said.

Meanwhile, stores in Edmonds, Oak Harbor, Bremerton and Port Angeles have agreed to get out of the paraphernalia business.

The Origin of Cards

It is uncertain as to the date the first Christmas card was actually sent, but some say it was in December, 1844, when Mr. W.C.T. Dobson sent to a friend a sketch symbolizing the spirit of Christmas. The following year he designed another card of which he sent copies to numerous friends and acquaintances. Cards featuring a simple sprig of holly or mistletoe along with a conventional Christmas greeting became common in the 1860's.

Runaways common problem in many states

OLYMPIA (AP) — While runaways hanging out on downtown streets have become a familiar sight in Seattle, their counterparts can be found in many other parts of the state, says an offical of the Save Our Children Crusade.

"There are street kids in Pasco. There are street kids, God help us, in Okanogan," said Ruth Quish of Auburn, vice president of the group working to prevent youngsters from running away and drifting into drugs, prostitution and petty crime.

At a state Senate Institutions Committee hearing Thursday night, Ms. Quish said her group believes the main problem is that laws allow police to pick up children in danger but not return them home or to a social agency.

"There's no way to keep them picked up" unless the youth is committed to a holding facility by a judge, she said.

"There's nothing in the world to prevent that child from walking out five minutes later" from a Department of Social and Health Services youth center, she said.

Sen. Barbara Granlund, D-Port Orchard, said one of the key deficiencies in the law for holding runaways is that counties interpret it unevenly. Committee staff members said that in many jurisdictions it appears that police are reluctant to arrest juvenile runaways for fear of being charged for making false arrests.

When the legislative session begins in January, lawmakers are expected to propose a variety of bills and amendments to the current law on runaways.

"I get more complaints about this (runaway issue) than about anything else," said state Sen. Jack Metcalf, R-Langley.

Metcalf asked what percentage of runaways "have a real legitimate personal safety reason for fleeing their homes?" How many of them were "spoiled brats," and "what percentage didn't like the fact they were told to go clean up their room?"

Elayne Arnold, a caseworker with the Pierce County Alliance, said many runaways have been abused in their homes.

Jon LeVeque, director of Alliance for Children, Youth and Families, called for long-term solutions to the problem that would include rehabilitating runaways so that overloaded juvenile centers don't become "dumping grounds."

Children are 30 percent of the state's population but receive less than 10 percent of the state's mental health money, LeVeque said.

Natives seeking changes

YELLOWKNIFE, Northwest Terriotries (AP) — Indians in the Northwest Territories want all landmarks, roads, public buildings and places known by English names to be renamed in native languages.

Chiefs of the Dene Nation, representing 12,000 Indians in the Mackenzie Valley, have called upon the territorial government to set up a public commission to begin the process of conversion to Dene names already used by natives.

"In this whole area, every lake, creek, landmark has a Dene name with a history, story or legend behind it," Stephen Kakfwi, president of the Dene Nation said Friday in an interview. "If the Dene are to survive as a distinct people, we have to take all measures to ensure that our language survives."

English names for places in Denendeh, which means "land of the people" and refers to the western half of the Northwest Territories, have violated Dene culture and tradition, the chiefs said in passing their resolution during a week-long meeting in Yellowknife.

Colville Lake, for example, is known in North Slavey, one of the five Dene languages, as K'ahbamitue — the lake where we net ptarmigans. Old fish nets are stretched upon the willows on the lake shore and the birds fly into the nets.

Naming such places in English was a "mistake by colonial governments" and must be corrected immediately, Kakfwi said.

The first shots were fired in the Civil War Jan. 9, 1861, when a steamship was attacked by Confederate batteries at Charleston.

Old post cards offering glimpse of history

By CHESTER A. MOORE
Reading Eagle

SUNBURY, Pa. (AP) — Post cards are not only associated with vacation periods and the usual messages of "having a good time; wish you here." They can also provide historical data and a look at another era.

J. Lester Marshall Jr., a resident of this Northumberland County seat, can attest to that. He is a deltiologist, the technical name for a post-card collector.

Marshall has thousands of post cards that portray the history of central Pennsylvania, depicting current events sometimes in a rare and amusing manner.

Starting his collection in 1976, Marshall began with cards from only the Sunbury area. Then he widened his collection to show towns in Snyder, Montour and Union counties.

Some of his older cards show the dirt streets in towns of the Susquehanna Valley. Horses and buggies in use at the turn of the century are pictured on cards in his collection.

"Most of the older cards were printed in Germany before World War I," Marshall said. "After the First World War, post cards sort of disappeared. A short time later, the U.S. Postal Department offered cards for messages only, a pattern which began around 1880. There were no pictures on the cards."

Marshall said the first cards did not have the vertical line dividing the card into two equal parts. One side was used for a message and the other side for the address, he said. There were no pictures of particular spots or events. The concept behind today's picture post cards began in 1893 with lithographed post cards sold as souvenirs of the Columbian Exposition in Chicago.

Marshall has a set of the first picture cards. A set of 10 cards sold for 25 cents at the exposition.

The format of the early picture post card differed from that of the modern post cards used by vacationers and travelers. Originally, both the picture and the message appeared on the front of the card, and only the name and address were written on the back.

The standard post card in use today made its debut around 1907 or 1908, Marshall said.

In the early 1900s, Americans were using the cards to advertise their products and businesses. As the popularity of photography increased, the use of the picture post card increased correspondingly.

Marshall has some cards in his collection which he considers extremely rare.

One set of his cards shows President Reagan and Vice President George Bush taking the oaths of office on Inauguration Day. The one card shows Reagan apparently raising his left hand while he was taking the oath.

The same thing is shown on the card with Bush raising his left hand while taking the oath. Marshall believes the person who processed the film reversed the negative, and the maker of the post card did not detect the mistake until he had many of the cards made.

Cards in Marshall's collection not only provide a valuable resource for persons interested in the history of an area, but provide a quick look at current events.

Marshall is a member and founder of the 25-member Susquehanna Valley Post Card Club.

Theft cleared, another reported

Snyder police reported clearing one recent theft and began an investigation of another Friday.

According to investigators the Dec. 1 theft of $200 from Agapito Estrada of 2712 Ave. E was cleared Friday evening with the identification of a suspect in the case.

The money was taken from Estrada by two men who had promised to sell him a television set and then disappeared without giving him the TV.

No arrests were made in the case Friday, however investigators have turned the case over to the County Attorney's office for prosecution as a misdemeanor theft.

Members of the Big Spring High School basketball team filed a misdemeanor theft report at the Scurry County Coliseum around 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Four team members told police that their wallets had been stolen from the coliseum dressing rooms while they were involved in a game.

City police were unsuccessful in attempts to locate a man who had been seen carrying a pistol in City Hall shortly after 4:30 p.m. Friday.

Water department employees called police and told officers that a black man in his 30's who had been in their office to pay a water bill had been carrying a pistol when he was in the building.

Police, working from a description of the suspect's car, searched for the man for over an hour.

In other routine action, city officers jailed two suspects for driving while intoxicated and one on outstanding traffic warrants Friday evening.

Both of the DWI suspects were also charged with driving with suspended licences.

Friday mishap termed minor

Two Abilene men reportedly sustained minor injuries in a two-vehicle traffic mishap in the 1900 Block of College Ave. Friday morning.

According to police reports, Milton Paul Bishop of Abilene and a passenger in his 1979 Mercury sustained minor injuries when their vehicle was in collision with a 1973 Ford driven by Kenneth Roy Irwin of 508 N Ave. T at 8:03 a.m.

everything," said Charles Duncan, Houston.

Strong said it was obvious the proposed limit of five unexcused absences for extracurricular activities also applied to elementary grade students.

"I don't think we need to worry about it because as a practical matter these absences will involve Little League, Peewee football or church related activities where we have no control anyway," Strong said.

Strong's committee took no direct action on a petition that doctor and dental appointment be reasons for automatic excused absenses, but instructed the staff to prepare an amendment to that effect for the January meeting of the state board.

"Those are reasonable excuses and should be in the law," said Ms. Raines.

The committee also stepped around adoption of new rules that carry out the school reform bill's directive that local school districts must provide tutorial services for any student not making 70 in any subject or those in jeopary of failing.

Strong said the TEA staff would write up proposed rules and then the committee would hold public hearings before the board's January meetings.

The committee agreed to recommend to the board Saturday that 12th graders in 1985-86 not be denied diplomas because they did not take and pass an exit level test, as required by the new school reform bill. Eleventh graders will be required to take the tests in 1985-86 and again the next year.

Permit issued in Snyder

Village, the November permits included one new commercial structure now being built at 3905 College.

The structure will be a 1,200 sq. ft. addition to the existing Lois Graves Realty, the company listed as its owner.

Plans are to lease the new building to Donny and Linda Cole, who plan a children's clothing store at the site.

The month's permits did not include any new residential construction — the first month in more than a year that has been without a new home permit in Snyder. Two were issued during the first month of October.

There were eight mobile home permits issued, however. These totaled almost $155,000 of the total permit amount.

Permits to establish mobile homes were issued to Michael Beasley, 705 19th St.; James Cody, 1009 24th St.; Jack Dupree, 2003 Ave. N; Joe Lara Jr., 2107 KSNY Drive; Jessie Carrieales, 912 Ave. Q; Jimmy Roemisch, 216 24th St.; Charles Beasley, 2211 Gilmore; and Roberta and Jonathan Hobbs, 2208 Gilmore.

Religious leaders urge Congress to halt first strike funding

SEATTLE (AP) — State religious leaders from nine Protestant denominations and the Roman Catholic Church issued an Advent letter Friday urging a budget-conscious Congress to halt funding for first-strike nuclear weapons.

"We church leaders must keep before the general public the reality of the arms race and all its awesome implications," the Most Rev. Raymond Hunthausen, Catholic archbishop of Seattle, said at a press conference held at the offices of the state association of churches.

The Rev. Loren Arnett, executive director of the church association, said bishops and denominational heads in six states were issuing a joint statement urging an end to first-strike nuclear weapons.

The six states — Colorado, Connecticut, Nebraska, Texas, Washington and Wyoming — are those where MX or Trident nuclear warheads are tested, produced or deployed. Triden submarines are based at Bangor, on the Hood Canal.

Arnett said church leaders were speaking out during Advent, the season in which Christians prepare to celebrate Christ's birth, in hopes God's message of peace would find new listeners.

The Rev. W. James Halfaker, head of the Congregational Church in Washington and northern Idaho, suggested that some of the best listeners might be members of Congress faced with trimming the nation's unbalanced budget.

"Here is an opportunity to adjust the federal budget downward," Halfaker said.

Arnett agreed. Noting Sen. Barry Goldwater's opposition to the MX missile, he said even military hawks are recognizing that the Pentagon's large share of federal spending can be cut.

Hunthausen, a longtime critic of nuclear arms, argued that the public has not lost interest in the nuclear weapons issue.

"There is a sense of profound urgency out there," he said. "The dilemma is what to do about it."

The archbishop said he was hopeful the Advent statement would increase the number of "personal conversions" that will be necessary to change U.S. nuclear policy.

"There's no issue that's more important," he said.

Dr. Lamb

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Two types of arthritis

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have arthritis in my arms and hands. The doctor called it osteoarthritis. I've been given Indocin and also tried taking 12 or more aspirin a day with meals, but they made my stomach sore.

Some people have taken gold shots for their arthritis and say they have been very helpful. Do these shots just relieve pain or do they help eliminate the inflammation? Do they have harmful effects; can a person become addicted to them?

DEAR READER — Notice that your doctor said you had osteoarthritis, which is quite different from rheumatoid arthritris. Osteoarthritis is also called wear-and-tear arthritis. It occurs in joints that are used a great deal or that must bear weight. Some consider osteoarthritis to be degeneration due to use. However, there are factors that seem to make some people more susceptible to it.

Rheumatoid arthritis is an inflammatory disease. It may affect the whole body, and the joint inflammation is just one sign of the disease. Rheumatoid arthritis is sometimes treated with gold shots; osteoarthritis is not. Gold shots are helpful in arresting some cases of rheumatoid arthritis. However, gold shots can cause complications, so patients getting them usually are monitored carefully by their physician.

Aspirin is very good in controlling the pain and discomfort caused by osteoarthritis. In large amounts, it certainly can cause irritation of the stomach. However, almost all of the medicines that are used to relieve arthritic pain can cause digestive disturbances. You may find that heat and stretching offer some useful aid.

To give you more information on osteoarthritis, I am sending you The Health Letter 20-2, Osteoarthritis: Degenerative Joint Disease. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have read that aspirin or acetominophen can cause kidney problems. Then I heard on TV that kidney problems occur only when a combination of aspirin and acetominophen is used. Can plain Tylenol or plain aspirin cause these problems? Exactly kidney problems can occur? since I have headaches and sinus trouble, I have always taken Tylenol when needed, and now I'm afraid to.

DEAR READER — The first well-publicized warning was that if you took aspirin chronically, as many arthritics do, you would damage your kidneys to the point of needing kidney dialysis or a kidney transplant. After the initial furor subsided, the problem was studied in more detail and a less frightening opinion has emerged. The National Institutes of Health sponsored a panel to review the data, and its published opinion is that you don't need to worry about plain medicines, such as either aspirin or acetominophen (Tylenol). However, if either of these is combined with other medicines, such as caffeine, codeine or a host of medicines, continued use of such combinations could damage your kidneys. The panel recommended that such combination medicines be removed from the market. Questions have also been raised about whether Advil and Nuprin, recently made available to the public, might be damaging to the kidneys.

My advice is use aspirin or acetominophen occasionally if you need it. If you need anything more, you'd better ask your doctor.

DEAR DR. LAMB — How much exercise should a normal, healthy person do each day? I realize that a person should start with a little and gradually add more, but when should there be a leveling off?

Walking is a favorite with me. I am a 45-year-old female and each day I try to welk four to five miles, which takes approximately an hour to an hour and 10 minutes. When I first started, I walked a short distance on flat areas, then added distance and some rather steep hills. How much more distance should I add? Are the hills good or bad? Would it be better if I jogged instead of walked? I really do not wish to build up my leg muscles. I only want to keep them firm.

My upper arms are not so firm. What exercise do you recommend for flabby upper arms?

DEAR READER — Congratulations for developing a good walking program. If everyone walked four miles a day, we would have far fewer medical problems. There is no definite answer as to how far you should walk. For most people, four miles a day should be adequate. However, if a person is able to walk farther and wants to lose excess body fat, then the longer the distance, the greater the benefits. How much you should do depends a lot on your goals.

Walking will not build up the trunk muscles or the arm and shoulder muscles. While you get a lot of benefits, including eliminating excess body fat, you cannot strengthen, firm or enlarge muscles you don't use.

Add exercises that use the rest of your body, using small weights or any device that enables you to work your muscles against resistance. Stretching exercises, to maintain your flexibility, should also be a part of your program.

Walking's potential health benefits are often overlooked. I'm sending you The Health Letter 18-4, Walking to Health, to give you a review of all the good things it can do for you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Your leg muscles will not get any larger if you walk still farther. Muscle size depends on contracting against resistance. Repeating the same exercise over and over, as in walking, just increases the muscle's endurance capacity, not its size or strength.

The hills are fine, since you gradually trained to be able to walk up them. That does make one work harder than does walking on the level. That effort will increase the size and strength of the muscles over the front of your thigh, but once you have walked these hills for awhile, there will be no further increase.

You can work your heart a little harder by jogging, but unless that is your goal, it has few advantages over walking. Most people can walk so much longer than they can jog that a long walk is usually more effective in using calories. Jogging a mile will usually use about one-and-one-half times as many calories as walking the same mile. Therefore, walking four miles is more effective in using calories than jogging two-and-a-half miles, and a lot more people can walk four miles than can jog two-and-a-half miles.

Matadors reach 'Reef finals; Snyder to vie for 3rd place

Reggie Gibbs popped 20-footers like they were layups here Saturday morning to move Lubbock Estacado past the host Snyder Tigers in semifinal action of the Canyon Reef Tournament.

Estacado will advance to the 8 o'clock championship game of the 30th annual tournament while Snyder plays for third place at 6:30. Their opponents were to be determined in a game between Odessa Permian and Lubbock High, set for 11 in the morning.

In other Saturday action, Lubbock Monterey and Andrews were to clash at 5 o'clock in the consolation game.

Gibbs, a 6-1 all-state prospect, burned the nets for 29 points in leading the Matadors to the 58-51 victory. Snyder had played the Mats close and moved within seven points in the fourth quarter, but a cold shooting spurt kept the Tigers from getting back in the game.

Kevin Jackson, 6-4, put up 14 points.

For Snyder, Charles Bollinger led with 14. Jackie Anderson had 10 and Wade Forga 7.

Snyder had reached the semis by cracking Amarillo Caprock, 63-52. The crucial quarter was the third, when Snyder outscored the Longhorns 22-13.

Wade Forga put up 14 points to lead the Tiger attack. Trey Tippens notched 12 while Bollinger had 9 and Willie Greathouse and Don Osborn noted 6 apiece.

Tippens had 6 of Snyder's 24 rebounds. Forga pulled down 5 and Mike McWilliams grabbed 4.

Caprock got 20 points from Andrew Blair. Jeff Gray added 10.

Estacado made its first appearance of the three day tournament by tagging El Paso Parkland, 67-47. The Matadors were ahead at halftime, 38-22.

Gibbs put up 27 points for the Mats while Jackson added 17 and 5-8 Dewayne Sheffield added 16.

Parkland managed 12 from Gerald Williams and 10 from Eric Wilson.

The most surprising score of the day came as Odessa Permian completely dominated Midland High, 79-45. The Panthers used a good offensive and defensive flow and took advantage of cold shooting by the Bulldogs to lead 20-8 after the first period.

Terry Williams was one of five Panther players in double figures. His 16 was followed by 15 from Jimmy Davis, 12 from Curly Alford and 10 apiece from Johnny Gomez and Kenny Williams.

Midland was led by Elvin Mackey's 14 points.

In the other winner's bracket game, Lubbock High put on a tough press to befuddle Amarillo Tascosa, 60-36. The game was tied 10-10 after the first quarter, but the Westerners ran off 21 points in the second to lead 31-20 at halftime.

Mayo Gonzales punched in 15 points to lead all scorers. Alvin Hargers had 14 and Toby Christian added 11.

Tascosa got 14 points from Dewayne Smith.

Andrews reached the consolation finals by whipping Wichita Falls Rider, 57-48. Doodle Woods hit the net for 18 points and Dwayne Lawrence had 14 to lead Andrews while Rider got 8 each from Wayne Mozeke, Scot Colley and 6-8 Chad Kimble.

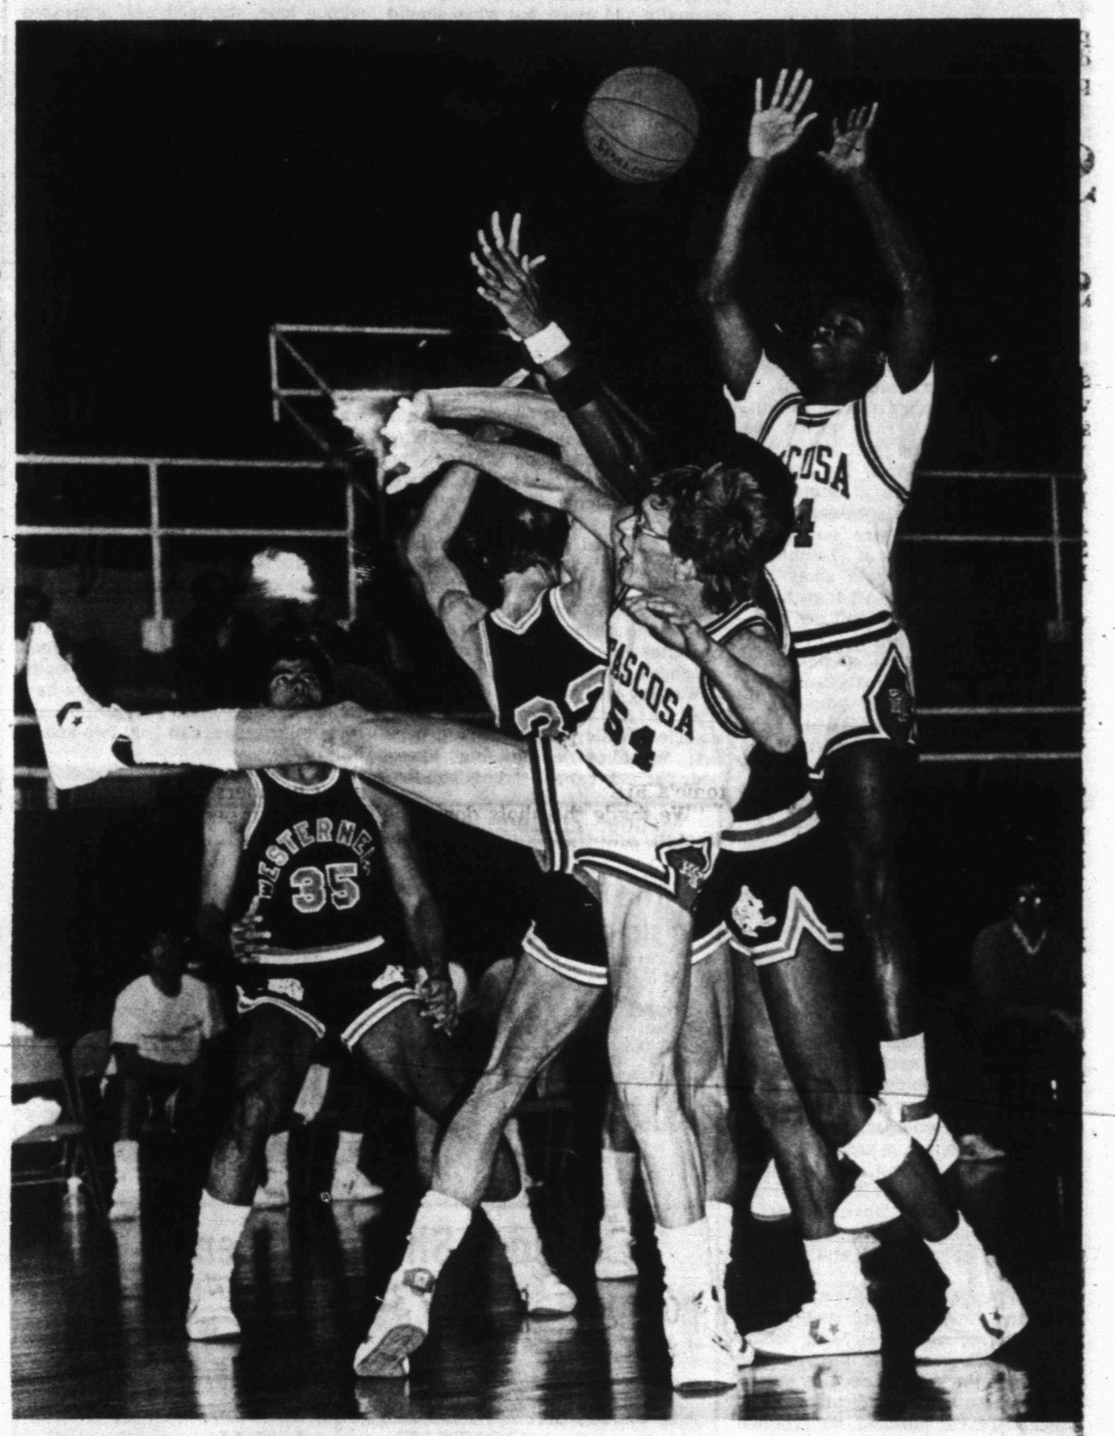

Monterey got the opposing berth by crushing Big Spring 92-51.

Monterey put four in double-digits and 10 players on the board, led by 24 points from Curry Blackwell and 13 from Brian Christiansen. Mike Lueschner scored 13 and Billy Cole 12 for the Big Spring Steers.

Sports brief

LARGO, Fla. (AP) - Bill Kratzert and Cathy Morse combined for an 8-under-par 64 to grab a three-stroke lead after two rounds of the J.C. Penney Mixed Team Golf Classic.

Kratzert did the work with his consistent irons Friday, and Morse took the glory by dropping the putts. Kratzert dropped approach shots to within a foot on the sixth hole and six inches on the 16th, and Morse tapped in both times for easy birdies.

Snyder rips underclassmen; makes semis of tournament

ABILENE -- Snyder girls pounced on Abilene High junior varsity 67-38 to advance in the Key City Girl's Invitational Tournament here Friday.

Coach Ken Housden's Lady Tigers are now faced with fighting overconfidence as they take on Abilene High varsity in the semifinals today. The Tigers, 7-1, have defeated the Eagles twice already this season.

"That really could be a problem," admitted Coach Housden. "But we really shouldn't take them lightly. We know they are capable of playing real good ball. The last time we played them we played real well and they started off slowly," he said of Snyder's 70-33 win over the AHS girls just last Tuesday. "But the first time we played them, the game went into overtime (56-52)."

That game was to take place at 1 o'clock Saturday. The championship game is set for 8:30 in Cooper High School Gym.

Junior Karlene Thompson put up 21 points while Carie Housden ripped the net for 13 points and had 7 rebounds Friday. Stephanie McKnight notched 9 points and Wendy Lunsford added 8.

Donna Anderson and Janetta Pylant led on the boards with 9 and 8 respectively.

Abilene junior varsity was led by Antoinette Brister's 10 points.

Tomball, Portland winners in Friday 4A playoff action

by The Associated Press

Tomball quarterback Lance Pavlas threw for two touchdowns to help the Cougars to a 24-6 victory over Port Arthur Lincoln in a quarterfinals playoff match in Texas schoolboy football action Friday.

The Cougars will now face Gregory-Portland, a 21-17 winner over New Braunfels, in its first Class 4A semifinals contest next week at a time and site to be determined later.

Class 5A quarterfinals contests were scheduled Saturday in all regions. Converse Judson, defending 5A champ, fights San Antonio Madison for Region IV at 2:30 p.m. in Alamo Stadium at San Antonio.

Midland Lee, which lost the 5A championship in 1983 to Judson, faces off against Odessa Permian at 2 p.m. in Lubbock's Jones Stadium for Region I.

Highland Park meets Conroe at 7:30 p.m. in Texas Stadium at Irving, while Beaumont French plays Galveston Ball at 2:30 p.m. in the Houston Astrodome for Region III.

In 4A action Saturday, Sweetwater pairs off against Monahans at 2 p.m. in San Angelo. Denison plays Corsicana at 2 p.m. in Texas Stadium.

Pavlas teamed up with junior running back Bubba Greeley, who ran for a touchdown, in the Tomball attack at Memorial Stadium in Pasadena.

The junior quarterback threw touchdown passes of 34 and 12 yards to Clay Smith and Cliff Vick, respectively.

In 3A Friday, Medina Valley whipped Columbus 28-13, Sweeny squeezed by Hempstead 35-34 and Daingerfield defeated Gladewater 27-27 on penetrations.

Vernon plays Littlefield at 2:30 p.m. Saturday in Shotwell Stadium at Abilene.

Sweeny quarterback Brett Simpson passed for two touchdowns in a 13-second span during a fourth-quarter rally against the Bobcats.

The Bulldogs, trailing 34-21 with 1:56 left to play, rebounded with a two-play, 65-yard drive in which Simpson connected with David McQuinn on a 25-yard bomb. Vince Kern's kick was good for the extra point with 1:40 to play.

Sweeny recovered after an onside kick attempt. Simpson tossed 4 yards to McQuinn and then 34 yards to Greg Mitchell, who was wide open in the end zone. Kern's kick put the Bulldogs over the top.

Class 2A action saw Panhandle win on penetrations in a 7-7 showdown with Hamlin, Groveton rip Alto 14-6 and East Bernard edge San Antonio Randolph 20-14. Olney plays Mart at 8 p.m. Saturday in Garland Memorial Stadium.

In Class 1A, Flatonia stalled Runge 23-0. Playoffs were scheduled Saturday between Munday and Gruver at 2 p.m. in Childress, Wink and Robert Lee at 7:30 p.m. in Big Spring and Union Hill and Apple Springs at 2 p.m. in the Tomato Bowl at Jacksonville.

Spurs rebound from seven straight road loses, 117-114

SEATTLE (AP) - After seven straight defeats on the road, veteran center Artis Gilmore savored the victory.

"There's a sense of relief," Gilmore said after his 30 points Friday night helped lead the San Antonio Spurs past the Seattle SuperSonics, 117-114, in National Basketball Association action.

"We knew all the time we could win on the road," Gilmore said.

"A couple of games we played really, really tough. We've scored enough points, but we haven't played enough defense and rebounded well."

Against the Sonics, the Spurs came from eight points down with 7:12 to play. They took the lead for good, 113-112, on two Mike Mitchell free throws with 1:12 to play.

After Seattle's Jack Sikma missed, Mitchell hit an 18-footer. The teams matched free throws after that.

Mitchell, who came into the game averaging 19.7 points, encountered early foul trouble. He scored just two first-half points and six over the first three quarters before finishing with 12.

In his place, Gene Banks came off the bench to spark the Spurs. Banks, giving way in the starting lineup to taller Ozell Jones for defensive purposes, tossed in a season-high 24 points, including 15 in the first half, though San Antonio trailed at halftime, 60-56.

"Gene Banks, I felt, played very well," Spur Coach Cotton Fitzsimmons said. "He's a little too small to play the big forwards, but he gives us a lot of versatility.

"We've had a tendency to struggle on the road. It has been especially obvious with our defense, and you could tell that with the number of points Seattle had."

The Sonics shot .525 from the field compared with San Antonio's .511.

"We made the shots down the stretch, and that is going to help you win the games on the road," Fitzsimmons said.

Seattle Coach Lenny Wilkens saw the game the same way.

"We had some good shots at the end, but they didn't drop," Wilkens said. "They made some good plays. They gave good defensive help down the stretch.

"If we could have made a couple of the shots at the end, we would have won.

"We were not able to stop them at the end. For a while, we matched them shot for shot. They put pressure on our defense, and then we missed. But I'm encouraged that the entire team is improving."

The defeat ended a three-game winning streak for Seattle.

In the second half, the Sonics concentrated more on getting the ball to Tom Chambers, who scored 18 of his 27 points after intermission. Sikma, who tallied 17, in the first half, had just six in the final two quarters.

"Jack just missed some easy shots," Gilmore said. "I don't think I really shut him down. He's a sharp player.

"They brought him to the top of the key and then dropped the ball into Chambers, who went one-on-one with our people."

Australian leading PGA Seniors event

PALM BEACH GARDENS, Fla. (AP) - While scores for most of the players ballooned into the upper 70s in the second round of the $225,000 PGA Seniors Championship, steady Peter Thomson kept his game under control.

Thomson's streak of eight straight sub-par rounds ended Friday, but the 55-year-old Australian used a 1-over-par 73 to build a three-shot lead at the tourney's halfway point. He was at 4-under-par 140.

Thomson wasn't the only player to have difficulty on the rain-soaked 6,502-yard PGA Golf Club course. No player bettered par, scores averaged a shade under 80 and Orville Moody was the only player who managed to match regulation 72.

Bob Toski, who had a second-round 73, was alone in second at 143, while Moody's solid round moved him into a third-place tie with Art Wall at 146. Wall turned in a 76 Friday.

Two-time former PGA Seniors champion Don January was among four players at 147 after shooting a 77 Friday. Tied with January were Billy Casper, Bob Goalby and George Bayer.

The tournament runs through Sunday.

Big Discount For Early Payment!

Thanks to you, We're happily extending our Big Cottonseed Discount!

Due to the late harvest and demand, we have extended our popular "Big Cottonseed Discount" program until December 31st. While the supply lasts, you can buy the number one certified cottonseed for as little as $15.25 a bag (F.O.B. Lubbock).

Read what your neighbors say about GSA Certified Cottonseed.

"GSA 75 was about the only cotton in the area with premium micronaire."

"I had some GSA 75 that was pre-watered and some dryland. GSA 75 stayed in burr well and had good storm proofness."

Staple was 32-33, micronaire 3.4, strength 26+.

"GSA 75 is very consistant in yield and micronaire."

"I've grown GSA 75 for four years. It's the only one we have this year with a premium micronaire."

Yield was one bale to the acre, staple 32-33, micronaire 3.6, strength 27.

GSA 71 is number one again! It's now being called the banker's cotton, as well as the grower's choice, because its big yields and quality fiber are paying the bills.

Don't get caught short. See your GroAgri Dealer today.

Shop Snyder

Sure, you can go out of town to do your holiday shopping–but why do it? Snyder retailers have a great variety of merchandise at prices as low (many times, lower) as the big town stores.

And, here's a few things the big town stores can't (or won't) do: Call you by name; Ask about your family; Give you service after the sale; Go that "Extra Mile" to ensure that what you get is really what you want.

Many Snyder Merchants will be open late on Mondays and Thursdays through Christmas.

26 WTC sophomores picked for Who's Who

Twenty-six sophomores at Western Texas College have been named to Who's Who Among Students in American Junior Colleges for 1984-85.

Who's Who students are nominated by a committee made up of faculty and students, with consideration given to academic achievement, leadership in extracurricular activities, service to the community and potential for continued success.

More than 1,500 institutions are represented in the Who's Who directory this year. Outstanding students have been honored in the annual directory since it was first published in 1934.

Snyder students on the Who's Who list are Rosario Peralez and Alvin "Bubba" Selmon, Jr. Also included is Mark Slaton of Ira. Others are Brent Simpson of Abilene; Aaron Knight, Jr. of Big Lake; Lyndy French of Big Spring; Heidi Matteson of Brownfield; Canita Cass of Clint; Thiagarjah Surendran of Colombo, Sri Lanka; Tim Blanchard of Gatesville; Gena Whitaker of Kaskell; Margaret Alvarez of Loraine; Renvy Evans of Midland; Roxane Greer of Monohans; Rhonda Hoelting of Nazareth; Cyndi Trujillo of Ozona; Ronnie Jay Thomas of Post; Mark Mauldin of Roby; Russell Smith of Rotan; Doug Browne of Sealy; Lorena Mendoza of Seminole; Judy Wiseman of Sudan; Cathy Caddell of Sundown; Lanna Reeves and Cynthia Young of Sweetwater and Susan Schwartz of Wall.

WTC announces 26 students on Who's Who

E. Smith.

Browne is a golf course operations and landscape technology major and a member of the Greens Industry Organization. He plans to seek employment in the Houston area. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. William Browne.

Mendoza is vice president of Phi Theta Kappa and treasurer of the Student Senate. She is acting president of the WTC chapter of Psi Beta, a national organization for students interested in psychology. Her major is law enforcement and she plans to pursue a bachelor's degree in criminal justice, planning for a career in the field of probation. She served as a representative to the Phi Theta Kappa 1984 Leadership Conference and to the national conference in Washington in 1984 and was a voting delegate to the 1984 state convention. She was also in the PTK delegation to the National Honors Institute last spring and participated in the Jumpathon sponsored by the Scurry County unit of the American Heart Association and PTK. She represented WTC at the American Colleges and Universities Institute conference. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joe Mendoza.

Peralez is co-historian of Phi Theta Kappa and attended that organization's 1984 state convention, the summer Honors Institute and 1984 Leadership Conference. She participated in the 1984 Jumpathon and is a member of the PTK SCOOP committee. She plans to transfer to Texas Tech University following graduation and pursue a career in the field of medicine. Her major at WTC is pre-medicine. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Alfredo Peralez.

Selmon is a health-physical education major and serves as statistician for the WTC Westerners. He is licensed to officiate in basketball, football and baseball and coaches boys' Little Dribbler basketball. He plans to transfer to North Texas State University to continue his studies. He is the son of Pearline Selmon and Alvin Selmon, Sr.

Wiseman is a member of the dusters basketball team and of Phi Theta Kappa. She is majoring in computer science. Mr. and Mrs. Calvin Wiseman, Jr., are her parents.

Caddell is president of the Student Senate and state secretary for Phi Theta Kappa. She was chosen Miss WTC last spring and was also Golf Sweetheart and a nominee for the Miss Trailhand title. She serves as a tutor on campus. A pre-law major, she plans to transfer to a four-year institution but has not yet decided which it will be. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Joe Max Caddell.

Reeves, a special education major, will transfer from WTC to Hardin-Simmons University and plans to become a guidance counselor. She is a Phi Theta Kappa member.

Young, an education major, is a member of Phi Theta Kappa and Psi Beta. She was named Outstanding Sociology Student at the 1984 Awards Day program. She plans to transfer to Angelo State University. Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. Frank Young.

Schwartz, a legal secretarial studies major, was named Outstanding Office Occupations Student last spring. She plans to continue her studies at Abilene Business School to prepare for work as a court reporter. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Schwartz.

State legislators want to cancel latest pay hike

OLYMPIA (AP) — State legislators are taking steps to cancel the $17,000 pay raise the Washington State University Board of Regents secretly gave President Glenn Terrell.

Sen. Sam Guess, R-Spokane, has asked Terrell not to take the money.

Rep. Helen Sommers, D-Seattle, Friday ordered the drafting of a bill restricting pay raises for university presidents during their last two years on the job.

Sen. Marcus Gaspard, D-Sumner, chairman of the Senate Education Committee, said he will introduce a bill to limit pay raises for university administrators.

The Sommers bill would limit retiring officials to the same percentage raise as their faculty receives during those last two years.

Ms. Sommers is one of the most vocal critics of Terrell's raise, which puts his annual salary at $106,000 and makes him the highest paid public official in the state. She has called it proof that the state's higher education institutions are out of control and work against the best interests of the state.

Terrell's last unannounced pay raise in 1982 prompted a similar bill from Sen. Margaret Hurley, R-Spokane. That bill was given a Senate hearing, but it never came up for a committee vote. Terrell is scheduled to retire in July.

Guess said he made the rescission request to regent Edwin McWilliams, a Spokane banker, because of the "harassment and horrendous impact their (the regents') action caused over here (Olympia).

"It'll knock their budget out," said Guess, a WSU alumnus. "I don't think they realized what they were doing to themselves."

McWilliams said he's not pleased about the legislative response, and said "I still think we did the right thring."

McWilliams said he will poll the board members at Guess' request. He said the board will never discuss the matter in public.

"It's not the king of thing we want to talk about in public," McWilliams said.

Gaspard's legislation also would link the pay of administrators and faculty.

"What I want is a law to give direction to the boards of regents and trustees that they may not set the salaries of administrators above the average salary increase of faculty members, without approval," of a statewide higher-education board.

The WSU regents' action in a closed meeting "is being interpreted as a business-as-usual, good-old-boys network where they go off somewhere removed from the campus and make a decision in secret, hoping nobody will pay attention," Gaspard said.

"Well, they have found out differently. They can't expect to operate in a vacuum and without concern for what the public thinks when it is the public that is paying the bill," he said.

Marcos shown on TV bares chest

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — President Ferdinand E. Marcos, seeking to squelch rumors he underwent major surgery, bared his chest at a Cabinet meeting today and said any official who doubted his good health should resign, according to official reports.

"If there is any member of the Cabinet who does not believe we can maintain our dominance over the situation, I think the earlier they get out the better," the official Philippine News Agency quoted Marcos as telling the gathering in his study at Malacanang Palace.

The 67-year-old Marcos, who has been in power since 1965, laughed as he unbuttoned his shirt and collar. His demonstration appeared to draw sympathetic laughs from his top civilian and military aides. A three-minute clip of the scene was shown on state television.

It was the first Cabinet meeting Marcos has called since he dropped out of public view Nov. 14, triggering rumors he was seriously ill, had undergone any of major surgery, or was dying.

Riding good therapy for handicapped kids

MERCED, Calif. (AP) — It's hard to keep kids away from ponies, and the children in the ASTRIDE class are no different when they reach the equestrian ring at a Merced area ranch.

But these youngsters are different from most.

They are disabled. One suffered brain damage in a car accident, another has spina bifida, and another has Down's syndrome.

ASTRIDE stands for Academy for Special Therapeutic Ride. The free program offers horseback riding lessons to physically and mentally disabled children.

"Riding provides the feeling of freedom, confidence, excitement and accomplishment for the handicapped person," said ASTRIDE director Lois Knoll, who coordinates the program at a ring next to her ranch house.

"The motion of the horse moves the rider back and forward and side to side, causing the rider to learn to compensate for this motion and adjust his balance," she explained.

The class is the high point of the week for Christen Cameron, a brown-haired 6-year-old girl with spina bifida.

"We wouldn't miss Tuesday evenings because we are reminded of it all week long," said her mother, Sandra, who adopted Christen when she was 4 months old after the spinal cord defect was apparent.

"She may forget therapy and swimming lessons, but she won't forget riding lessons," Mrs. Cameron said. "As soon as we get in the car, she is bubbling like a magpie."

Thomas Sullivan was leaning on the arena gate as his 8 year-old daughter, Katie. rode. She suffered a damaging blow to the left side of her head in a traffic collision that claimed the driver of the other car's life four years ago.

"These kids have limited occasion to smile," he said, as Katie worked to perfect her balance.

"Riding is therapeutic," noted Mrs. Knoll. "It will strengthen muscles and develop muscle control, balance and coordination. It also helps develop self-confidence and attention span for both the physically and mentally handicapped."

Tony Huish, 10, has Down's syndrome. He advanced in his sixth class to riding with breakaway stirrups.

"It doesn't look like much for Tony to handle the reins and squeeze his knees against the horse," admitted Mrs. Knoll, a kindergarten instructor who used to teach special education. "But it took six weeks to bring him to this point."

Scurry County Folks...

By Vicki Brown — SDN Society Editor

Fluvanna is suddenly the base for a thriving apparel business with nationwide connections.

And it marks a new fashion career for Becki Parks, who moved from a buyer for a department store to marketer of Calvin Klein Jeans to owner of her own showroom in Dallas.

But after meeting and marrying a West Texas cowboy, Becki gave up big city life for ranching and a home life back in Scurry County.

"I started staying home and doing nothing, and after about three months of that, I was going crazy."

The vivacious blond, daughter of Larry and Jeanette Hall of Snyder, now calls Fluvanna home. And thanks to Bethe Jones, her fashion future looks brighter than ever.

This past April, Bethe — an accomplished seamstress — designed a jacket sporting an American Indian motif on the back. Wearing the jacket for the first time, she headed for Abilene to attend a graduation ceremony. By the time she left, she had 10 orders for duplicates.

A stop at a church fellowship in Snyder that evening netted an additional 14 orders.

After people who hadn't seen the jacket began calling — and stores in the area began wanting them too — Bethe decided she needed help. Organizing a group of friends, she operated her cottage industry at home and through the summer cut and sewed to keep up with orders.

Becki's knowledge of marketing and her desire to get to work again were just what Bethe needed. In June the two became partners — Bethe handling production and Becki dealing in sales — and Two Friends Company was born.

When Bethe decided to leave the business in October, Becki, along with Louise Parks, Debi Parks and Donna Isaacs, jumped at the chance to buy it. Using four of Bethe's original designs, the women have expanded sales from the approximately $4,000 in special orders Bethe realized to their first shipment in November to 20 stores in 10 states.

In addition to the jacket, the women have added a skirt, pants, blouses and belts to their line of "wearable art."

Having their styles included in the Kim Dawson Fashion Show at the Dallas Market in August has given the company a boost in the right direction. "We went to market thinking we wouldn't get orders for delivery until February, but buyers decided they wanted to try the clothes during the Christmas buying season," Becki explained.

"So we were in a rush to get all the orders filled for the November shipment," Debi Parks added.

Becki noted, "Later a store in Boca Raton, Fla. contacted us to say they had sold five jackets in just two days."

The women also expressed delight that Tamara Hext, the current Miss Texas, chose to wear an outfit with the Two Friends label to a Miss America interview.

"When we decided to start marketing on a larger scale, we thought we were going to have to use contractors in Dallas (to do the sewing)," Becki noted. "But we were flooded with calls from

Ready-to-assemble furniture...

Struggling for foothold in the marketplace

By BARBARA MAYER
AP Newsfeatures

Are consumers willing to do some of the work in transporting their new furniture home and putting it together themselves to save time and money?

That's the question furniture manufacturers and retailers have been debating for a number of years, as ready-to-assemble furniture has struggled to gain a foothold in the marketplace.

A recent event suggests enough consumers have said yes to self-delivery and self-assembly to make ready-to-assemble furniture an up-and-coming classification in the United States. More than 130 domestic and foreign companies, for example, participated in the first ready-to-assemble furniture trade show at the Coliseum in New York recently.

Exhibitors pointed out that because the furniture is packed flat in a compact package, a consumer can self-deliver even a large piece — such as a complete wall system — hauling it home in the family car, instead of paying for delivery and having to wait at home for the furniture to arrive.

Since self-delivery and self-installation constitute a savings for the retailer, costs should be lower than comparable quality store-delivered furniture — another plus.

In fact, these advantages have made ready-to-assemble or KD furniture popular in Europe where it accounts for at least 20 percent of all furniture sold. So far, however, this type of furniture has accounted for only about 2.5 percent of furniture sales in the United States.

However, the growth of two career families in which neither adult is available to stay at home to wait for delivery, the greater incidence of single adult households and the increase in the number of upwardly mobile well-educated young persons as furniture consumers have encouraged the industry to see major increases on the horizon for KD furniture.

One reason why KD hasn't caught on here, according to Robert Schumacher, vice president of the National Home Furnishings Association is because "American manufacturers are so competitive and marketing oriented."

As a result, he says, they have been marketing already assembled furniture for the same price as KD might cost elsewhere.

"In 1966 you could buy a very nice sofa for $399," Schumacher recalls. "Today you can still buy a nice sofa for $399."

However, American companies have not as a rule made available the more sophisticated designs at moderate prices, he acknowledges.

HOLIDAY IDEAS
Involving Children

With the hustle and bustle of the holidays, it is easy to forget to take time to involve the children. The old saying "Christmas is for children" is passed around a lot, but they do not have a chance to get involved in the holiday until Christmas Day.

Here are some suggestions for including the children.

1. Let the children help clean and decorate their room. Maybe a small Christmas tree in your child's room will prevent him or her from wanting to redecorate the family tree.

2. Set aside time to take the children Christmas shopping for special friends. Guide them in gift selection.

3. Let children help seal Christmas card envelopes and stick on stamps. This can save you time and energy.

4. Children can help make some of your decorations or use those they have made in school or Sunday School.

Grandparents Taped Stories

Grandparents can present their grandchildren with a personalized storybook by recording a storybook on a blank cassette tape. Each time a page is turned, pause long enough to rap a glass tumbler with a spoon or ring a bell. The ding will tell the child to turn the page. The recorded cassette book will provide hours of pleasure and memories of a loving grandparent.

Holiday Planning Calendar

Make time for all your holiday plans during this busy season. Begin now making a list of activities that involve all family members. Remember to write in shopping trips with smaller children, parties, Christmas musicals, the day for tree selection and trimming, wrapping and cookie baking sessions. Seeing the holiday season at a glance will help coordinate family plans.

Holiday recipes

REFRIGERATOR ROLLS

2 pkgs. yeast (compressed or active dry)
½ cup hot water
1½ cups milk
2 teaspoons salt
½ cup sugar
¼ cup shortening, melted
5½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 egg, slightly beaten
Oil or fat for pan

Heat water to 120-130 degrees or use hot tap water. Add yeast to soften. Scald milk and pour into mixing bowl with sugar, salt and shortening. Mix well.

When milk mixture has cooled to lukewarm, add 2 cups flour and beat well. Add the softened yeast and beaten egg and mix carefully. Add remaining flour and mix until a soft dough forms. Turn out on lightly floured board and knead until dough does not stick to the hands or the board and becomes satiny in appearance.

If dough is to be refrigerated, grease a bowl, place dough in bowl and cover with waxed paper and a towel. Before using, allow to come to room temperature.

Shape into rolls, place in muffin pans and cover lightly with waxed paper. Allow to double in volume. Preheat oven to 425 degrees and bake rolls for 15 to 25 minutes or until golden brown.

For a soft, tender crust, brush with soft butter as the rolls come from the oven. Remove rolls from pan immediately to avoid sogginess. Serve hot.

MILLIONAIRE DATE LOAF

(For those who have trouble with regular date loaf.)

Mix 4½ cups sugar and 1 can (13 ozs.) evaporated milk in a heavy saucepan. Boil 5 minutes then add 1 small package dates, chopped. Cook 4 more minutes, stirring constantly. (Mixture may stick slightly but will not affect the results.) Remove from heat and add 1 pint marshmallow creme, 2 cups pecans and 1 teaspoon vanilla. Beat until cool. Pour into a buttered dish. Cool and cut into squares.

VELVEETA CHEESE FUDGE

In microwave heat 1 lb. Velveeta Cheese, 1 lb. margarine and 1 tablespoon vanilla until melted. Meanwhile combine 4 lbs. confectioner's sugar, 1 cup cocoa and 6 cups pecans. Combine the two mixtures using hands. When completely mixed, spread in two 13x9x2 inch buttered dishes. Chill 1 hour and slice. Freezes well.

"SUGAR FREE" SPICED TEA MIX

Mix together 1 cup instant tea, 1 package (24 ozs.) unsweetened lemonade mix, ¾ teaspoon cinnamon, ¼ teaspoon cloves and 13 cup sugar substitute. Store in an air-tight container in adry place. To serve, place 2 teaspoonfuls in each cup. Fill with boiling water.

Fluvanna is proud of Two Friends Company

women in the community who wanted to work. Why not give our own economy some stimulation?"

"It's worked out better for us anyway," she added. "We were having difficulty locating contractors to do the quality of work we wanted."

The women believe too that by having the apparel made in Fluvanna, they have more control over actual production. "We can see immediately that things are being done the way we want them."

The only step in the process done elsewhere is the sizing. "We use a woman in Dallas for sizing patterns," Debi said. "It is a little difficult not being close to a large city. We must plan several days in Dallas to order material and other supplies."

Jane Stanton of the Southwest Apparel Manufacturer's Association has helped a great deal in obtaining supplies by putting the ladies in contact with fabric and thread wholesalers.

A RAVE DESIGN — Becki Parks' jacket sports "The Loom," one of four Indian motif designs currently marketed by Two Friends Company of Fluvanna. (SDN Staff Photo)

"At first we had a little problem with deliveries," the ladies laughed. "Trying to explain to suppliers that our delivery address is 'one block north and three blocks east of the old school' is sometimes difficult. We have to patiently explain that the UPS (United Parcel Service) knows where to find us."

Currently, Two Friends employs 10 additional Fluvanna residents and two sales representatives — one in Dallas and one based in Denver to cover New Mexico, Colorado and Arizona.

Each local woman has her own particular specialty. Denise Parks, Connie Voss and Beverly Herring add the applique work while Mary Ellen Keith sews the individual pieces of the jacket together. Freida Campbell and Louise Thompson make the tops, pants and skirts and Rayolene Thompson does all the handsewing and extra touches required on the finished garments.

Most of the cutting, gluing and shipping chores are handled by Nannette Belew and Kandi Herring. The majority of this work is done at the trailer where the other women pickup pieces and deliver finished items. Most of the sewing is done by each woman in her own home.

Barbara Miller is an employee whom Becki describes as "an excellent seamstress who can look at an item and make a pattern. She does a little bit of everything for us."

"None of our ladies had ever worked (outside the home) much. Our company provides us a way to work but still offers the opportunity to be close to home and the opportunity to go home when needed," Becki said.

Echoing her remarks, Louise Parks added, "Working here gives me a sense of being able to do something different. It really helps me."

Because the company is fast outgrowing its trailer headquarters, its owners are looking toward expansion, but intend to remain in Fluvanna.

They may need the extra room soon since this spring they intend to introduce sweaters designed and made by Mary Ellen Keith. Currently they are working on a new dress design which will incorporate handpainting and a dress featuring cutwork applique. "We intend to keep the Santa Fe look in our clothes," remarked Donna Isaacs. "Ours are relatively simple designs which incorporate something special."

The Two Friends label has crossed Texas' borders and now the ladies have set their sights on the Los Angeles, Miami and New York markets.

"We want to learn what we're doing first and expand with our capabilities," Becki emphasized.

Determination will take Two Friends and its owners to New York in the near future.

BEAUTY BRIEFS

Leg shaving

Leg skin is especially dry in winter and needs tender treatment. Shave at night.

This avoids the irritation of wearing hosiery immediately afterward. Wet skin well with warm water and lather, using a shaving brush, as men do, to soften up skin and hairs.

Use a fresh razor blade to get a clean shave. Wield the razor with light, short strokes, not drawing it along the skin. After rinsing well, massage legs with body lotion.

Luxury bath

As you soak in a tub, keep warm water trickling in to avoid the water cooling down.

Use bath oil or bubble powder for fragrance and skin softening and have an inflatable tub pillow on which to rest your head.

Use quality bath products, all in the same fine fragrance, both for their excellence and the psychological lift. Finish by using big, fluffy towels.

Shirlee Fonda sues company

NEW YORK (AP) — Shirlee Fonda, widow of actor Henry Fonda, is suing a construction company, charging that its work has caused her townhouse "to sink, split into two parts, and lean."

Mrs. Fonda filed suit Thursday seeking to block further construction of the high-rise on Manhattan's East Side until the builder moves "to protect the structural stability of the adjacent buildings."

Mrs. Fonda rents her four-story townhouse to the Brazilian ambassador to the United Nations, according to her lawyer, Charles Stewart.

Irwin Toporoff, a structural engineer, said in court papers unless the house is underpinned soon, it will continue to sink and may collapse.

Plans to show art objects

LONDON (AP) — Roger de Grey, a 66-year-old painter named 21st president of the Royal Auarts, says he already has plans to show more 20th century art at the organization's headquarters.

De Grey, whose work has been bought by Queen Elizabeth, succeeds architect Sir Hugh Casson, 74, who retired after eight years in the post.

DRYDEN'S SHOES
East Side of Square

Centennial Corner

By Charles Anderson

The courthouse square has been the focal point for parades for many years in Scurry County. This picture, made by Nancy Rosser--mother of Elaine Rosser Lambert--shows the parade as it passed on the west side of the courthouse. It was made from the office of Dr. H. E. Rosser. His office was located just west of the square about where Merle Norman is today.

The caption on the side of the truck shows the Capture of Santa Anna as dramatized by a group of Scurry County citizens. The year of the parade was probably 1936 as this was the year that Texas celebrated its centennial and parades were held throughout Texas.

The bandstand in the distance was a meeting place for band concerts and singing groups during the early days of Snyder. It was located about where the white buffalo state is at the present time.

Plans are now underway by the Sequiscentennial Committee, the Commissioners Court, and Western Texas College to build another bandstand for the 1986 celebration of Texas's 150th birthday. Another group is working to form a community band for the celebration and other events.

The street was once called Clermont street, but it is now College Avenue. It has been the scene through the years of many parades as you see in this picture.

Singer's song is message

LOUISA, Ky. (AP) — A new recording by country music singer Ricky Skaggs is in the mail to 7,500 radio stations nationwide, but his message is not in the music.

Skaggs, 30, sings some of his hit song "Heartbroke" before shifting into a message encouraging 18-year-olds to do their duty and register with the Selective Service System within 30 days of their birthday.

BIRTHDAY ALMANAC

Compiled by the editors of The World Almanac Book of Who

Dec. 16 — Liv Ullmann (1939-), the Norwegian actress who has starred in the theater and in films. Her films include "Scenes from a Marriage," "The Emigrants" and "Lost Horizon."

Dec. 17 — Erskine Caldwell (1903-), the author who is best known for his 1932 novel "Tobacco Road," with its searing portrayal of depravity among poor Southern whites. The stage version of the book had one of the longest runs in Broadway history.

Dec. 18 — Ty Cobb (1886-1961), the baseball player who batted .300 or better for 23 consecutive major league seasons, and topped .400 three times. His .367 career batting average is the highest in major league history.

Dec. 19 — Henry C. Frick (1849-1919), the industrialist and philanthrophist who helped organize U.S. Steel. He bequested his New York City mansion with its priceless art collection to the public.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

Two biggie "he man" type movie stars are now starring together in a holiday movie release, and the durnest thing happened at a recent preview screening.

When Clint Eastwood's named flashed on the credits, there was applause. When Burt Reynold's name showed up, the audience is reported to have booed.

The movie is something called "City Heat," and we, in true dopey movie critic fashion, haven't seen it.

In fact, the account of the applause and the boos is second-hand, derived from a magazine account. But we suspect the story is true — since it was a respectable publication and because no one wants to get sued by Burt Reynolds.

So anyway, it got us to speculating about fame, fans and how people obtain — and apparently lose — both.

Folks our age — if they care to do so — remember the starting of both these guys.

Clint, of course, was the slow-talking Rowdy Yates on the "Rawhide" TV series.

Remembering Rowdy, we suspected his jaw line was longer than his acting ability. He didn't say much, you see. But he definitely had that cosmic gift which singles out and follows some actors. You remembered him.

His follow up movie roles — beginning with all those Spaghetti westerns — set a pattern for qualities he is associated with.

To wit, emotions as low key as a Whale's doormat tempered by a bad, bad disposition when riled.

We would have to say Clint Eastwood is a menacing presense, despite all of those "more sweet" movies he has directed himself in lately.

Turning to Mr. Reynolds, we also remember his beginnings — which included a ton of television appearances and probably more bad movies than one man should be allowed to make before he finally gained that old elusive fame.

It seems to us he really took off after an endless series of chit chat appearances on The Tonight Show plus his foldout unveiling in Cosmopolitan. Only a forearm saved him from real fame with that one.

Once he got going, though, he's probably made more and probably overall better movies than his fellow actor Eastwood. This is only a personal opinion, so it can be disregarded along with the rest of the stuff carried to the dumpster Sunday evening.

Regarding his overall image, however, we'd have to say in a single word, people think he's "cute." A little suspect, maybe, but still cute.

So why did they come to their respective applause and boos at this point in time?

People may be worried about Burt's rumors — that he both puts lifts in his shoes and additional hair on his forehead. And all those romances on the cover of supermarket magazines — whoof!

But we suspect in the end it comes down to something we've already mentioned — the image.

So the moral of the story is, you can be as charming, as handsome and as "cute" as all get out. But scaring the peewaddly out of somebody seems to hold their attention longer.

John Dunnam

Back in the days when England ruled the seas, superstitions were rife. A preacher aboard a ship was bad luck. A woman aboard a ship was bad luck. And so on. To expose the absurdity of such nonsense, the British admiralty decided to flaunt one of the most cherished superstitions — that Friday was an unlucky day.

They built a ship called "Friday," launched the sucker on Friday and even found a captain by the name of Friday to command. A week later, on Friday, the ship, crew and captain disappeared without a trace.

The British brass claim that this story is not true, that there was never such a ship. That is unimportant to the generations of Limey seamen who repeat the story as gospel. Superstition cannot be overcome by mere facts, and there is no room at all for logic. That goes aganist the nature of superstition.

Some superstitions can be traced to a reason, some cannot. Perhaps there is no reason.

A preacher on a ship might offend the pre-Christian sea gods, my Reader's Digest reference tells me. Having done a stint on a simple tugboat, I can add that a preacher would make a crew nervous to the extent of being unfunctional. The laws of the land don't seem to work on the watery two-thirds of the planet and a new order evolved, which has never been sanctioned by the clergy.

One of the duties of the low man on the pole is to keep the bilge pumped. Otherwise the vessle may sink. All towboats leak at the place where the shaft extends through the hull to the propeller. If the man does his duty, no matter what his character, you can sleep in peace. If he is lax, it doesn't matter how high his moral ideas, he must go — now.

A woman on board a ship in the midst of a dozen or more able-bodied seamen needs no explanation.

Women are demanding their places in the ranks these liberated days. The consensus seems to be, "if she can prove her worth, she's worth the trouble." Countries we consider unenlightened (Russia for instance) are way ahead of us in this area.

Superstition is by no means confined to the high seas. Consider the kitchen. Spilling salt spells bad luck. My reference says this is because salt was once the only means of preserving meat in winter. I'll buy that.

Some cooks once believed that stirring a meal aganist the sun's course (widenshins) would cause it to spoil. Egg shells were not tossed in the fire so as not to offend the hens and cause them to quit laying.

Thirteen people should not be seated at the same table. This bit of folklore is usually associated with the Last Supper, where Judas betrayed Christ. Many of the "13" superstitions have this base.

No room in the house is without pitfalls to the ignorant among us. Did you know you should never carry a shovel through the house. It portends that a grave will soon be dug. Don't show a baby it's image in the mirror. It will cause teething problems.

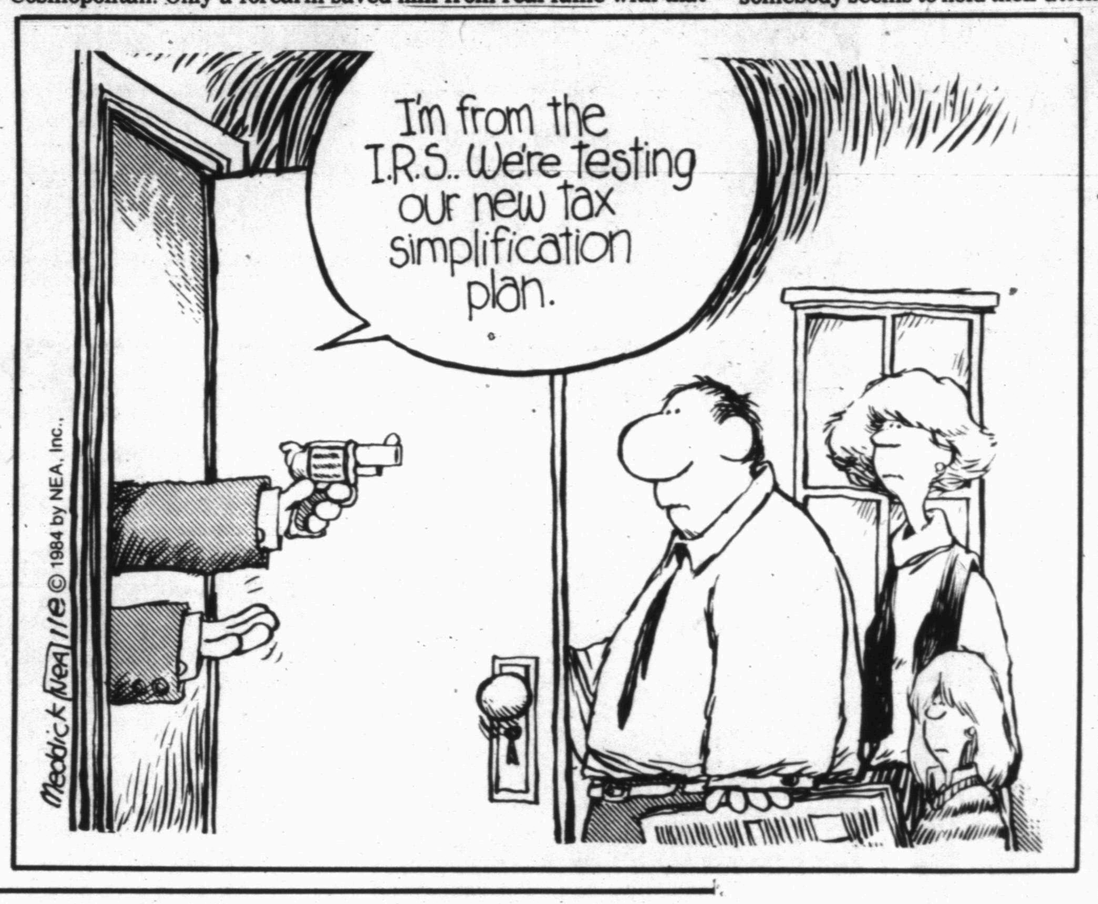

Here is an old one I like. Sweeping out a house expels all good fortune, especially if done on the Chinese New Year. Johnson and Johnson, with the help of Madison Avenue, have all but laid this myth to rest. Dang them.

Some superstitions are traced to specific countries. The notion that people with red hair bring bad luck began in Holland, shortly after being invaded by the Danes.

In Nigeria, if a man is hit with a broom and doesn't retaliate seven times, he becomes impotent. That is probably hogwash fellas, but why take chances?

Here in America, where the literacy rate is high, we are totally superstition-free. With impunity we break mirrors and allow black cats to wander across our paths. We even walk under ladders. Well, maybe not ladders.

William Laud, the Archbishop of Canterbury, was executed in the Tower of London in 1645.

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
December 2

Snyder firemen were called around 10:20 p.m. Sunday to extinguish a fire in an apparently vacant building at the Ira Gin.

The structure sustained extensive damage and Monday morning the cause of the blaze remained under investigation. The owner of the building was listed as the Ira Gin Co.

MONDAY
Decemeber 3

Major renovation work to the swimming pool facility in Towle Park was given an initial go-ahead Monday as county commissioners authorized accepting bids for the repair.

These are scheduled to be opened Jan. 7.

Approximately a one-hour discussion preceded it, but Snyder city council members Monday unanimously agreed to a new two-year contract for Aid Ambulance-Snyder which includes both an increased subsidy amount and approval of an $85 per run billing.

The subsidy increase sought and granted Monday will equal a monthly raise of $723 per month, from $4,826 to $5,550. This would equal a yearly subsidy of some $66,600.

City council members Monday backed away from a plan to assess four property owners on the eastern half of an unpaved strip of Ave. Z running south from Towle Park.

The assessment would have financed completing the stretch of street paving — connecting Ave. Z to the development of the Bassridge sub-division located west of Ave. Z between 46th and 48th Sts.

Reports of problems related to unsupervised children — from infant age up to 9-years-old — were again told to the Snyder city council Monday, but two possible remedies offered by meeting visitors were characterized as likely unworkable, at least from the city's standpoint.

It was the second council visit by Sharyon Bond, a home owner in the Central Elementary school district.

The Scurry County grand jury, meeting for its regular December session Monday, returned five felony indictments against five individuals.

TUESDAY
December 4

Eleven Snyder High School students were suspended for a three-day period Tuesday and three others now face criminal charges related to the suspected use and possession of marijuana.

The three arrested Tuesday were suspended from school also. Two of them face misdemeanor counts of possession while a third — a 15-year-old male — faces a felony charge of delivery of the illegal drug.

WEDNESDAY
December 5

Candidates interested in applying for either the post of municipal judge for the City of Snyder or city attorney are now directed to place all questions regarding the positions to Mayor Rod Waller.

The guidelines for the two positions were reported Wednesday. It is expected that final decisions regarding both posts will be made during December.

Scurry County United Way directors closed out 1984 Wednesday by honoring three drive officials from this past campaign effort and naming a new president for 1985.

This year's "120 percent" effort was honored with the presentation of plaques to outgoing United Way President Rex Robinson, Drive Chairman Roy McQueen and Drive Coordinator Carol Egelston. Chosen as the new United Way president was Donny Brown.

THURSDAY
December 6

A legal brief challenging the recent Texas Supreme Court decision voiding the Stacy reservoir permit to the Colorado River Municipal Water District has been filed with CRMWD attorneys alleging the ruling leaves two sections of the Texas Water Code "devoid of rational meaning."

The motion for rehearing was filed by Frank Booth, an Austin-based attorney representing the CRMWD, it was reported Thursday.

Along with more traditional advice regarding cotton and wheat production, Scurry County farmers were updated on a radical new farming technique here Thursday — the concept of "no-till" farming.

The information was part of the first "Options and Opportunities in Farming" seminar sponsored through the newly formed Snyder Chamber of Commerce Agri-Business Committee.

FRIDAY
December 7

Officials with Montgomery Ward announced Friday they will convert the present company-owned Snyder catalog store to a catalog sales agency as soon as a suitable agent can be located.

FIVE YEARS AGO

Fifteen Snyder Tiger football players were mentioned in the 1979 All-District list released today — Dec. 2. Eight local players including Tommy Peek, Trussell Thane, Dale Jenkins, Tony Degrate, Robert Rodriquez, Thomas Selmon and Sammy Willis were first team selections.

Members of the Scurry County Historical Commission made their first move Thursday night — Dec. 6 — in an effort to preserve the old Scurry County Jail and the Dodson House on College Ave. which dates from 1883. The group voted to form a non-profit corporation. Committee members appointed Thursday to investigate the legal details of the move by the commission were Ernest Sears, Harry Krenek, Hugh Boren and Bill Warner.

10 YEARS AGO

Dr. Robert Clinton, president of Western Texas College, today — Dec. 3 — announced the appointment of Dr. Gene R. McClurg to the position of Dean of Occupational Technical Education. McClurg has been associated with WTC as instructor of electro mechanical technology since August 1974.

Members of the Cogdell Hospital Auxiliary today — Dec. 5 — presented Administrator Cy Miller with a check for $2,000 toward the purchase of a portable cardiac monitor and defibillator for the local hospital.

15 YEARS AGO

Snyder players named to the 3-AAA All-District first team released today — Dec. 4 — include Willis Harrison, Randy Levens, Joe Hale and Rocky Land.

Directors of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce elected for new terms beginning in 1970 are H.F. Clark, Herbert Reed, Doug McGlaun, E.W. Schrader, Mel Gilbert and Gene Best.

Letters to the Editor

To the editor,

The Scurry County Museum would like to thank everyone who has helped us create a Friendship Christmas Tree to be enjoyed by the community in this holiday season.

Many individuals and groups have brought us handmade ornaments that make our tree really unique. We have enjoyed receiving these gifts and the names of the donors will be on a list available to museum visitors so everyone can see how many people gave their time and skills to this project.

We would like to invite everyone to come by the museum to see this Friendship Tree and to view our special exhibit of handwork by Texas women including several local residents. The museum will be open on the regular schedule (Sunday through Friday) until Dec. 20 when it will close for the Christmas-New Year holiday. The museum will reopen on Jan. 2.

From everyone at the museum, a Happy Holiday.

Yours truly,

Dear Abby

Charming Suitor Sees Widow On the Days It Suits Him

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Six months ago I met a charming gentleman through mutual friends. He's 49 and recently divorced for the second time. He's semiretired and quite well-off. I'm a 47-year-old widow in comfortable circumstances. He calls me every day, and I see him in the evening to watch TV, play cards, have coffee and talk, but he has never taken me out. I stopped inviting him to dinner because he never reciprocated. We see each other only during the week—never on the weekend. He says he doesn't like to "make plans"—meaning for dinner or a movie; he prefers to do things on the spur of the moment.

He loves to garden and is very handy at fixing things. He sprayed my front and backyard for weeds and worked on my Kimball organ.

I do not chase after him. I never call him and never ask him what he does when he's not with me. He acts like he's very fond of me, and I think I'm falling in love with him. I love being with him, but I want to go somewhere!

He told me his second wife wants him back, so he's probably seeing her on the weekends. (I never ask.)

Abby, do you see any future in our relationship? Why do you think he's never taken me anywhere? And how can I find out where I stand with him?

PUZZLED IN NEW JERSEY

DEAR PUZZLED: If there's a future in your relationship, it's not in the immediate future. He doesn't take you anywhere because he's either too cheap to spend the money, or he has a commitment with someone else, which is probably why you never see him on the weekends.

Don't be available for coffee, conversation and cards every evening. Be "busy," and if he keeps calling, pin him down for a dinner date or a movie, and see what happens.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: A charitable organization I have worked for is honoring me at a dinner in recognition of my many years of service. I have only one son. He is over 50, married and has a nice family. I invited him to come to the dinner, but he refused, saying, "No. Those affairs bore me."

He lives very near to where the dinner is being held, so I told him he could skip the dinner and just come for the presentation. He refused.

The chairman of the dinner committee called my son and asked if he would please come and say a few words in my behalf. He was also turned down with, "No. Those affairs bore me." The man was shocked, as he knows how generous I have been to my son and his family over the years.

All my friends and relatives are coming. What should I say when they ask me why my son didn't come to see me honored?

HURT IN LOS ANGELES

DEAR HURT: Look them straight in the eye and say, "He was invited, but he said, 'No. Those affairs bore me.'"

Don't feel that you should cover up for your son's inexcusable behavior. You're not the only parent who ended up with a selfish, thankless child.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: Recently you had an inspirational piece in your column pointing out the fact that many men who became multimillionaires started out with nothing. (J. Paul Getty and Conrad Hilton, to name two.)

I am reminded of the story about the grandfather who said to his 14-year-old grandson, "Why, when I was your age, I went to work in a store for $10 a week, and in less than six years I owned the place!"

"That can't be done today," the boy replied. "They have cash registers now."

Telescope helping research

By CARLE HODGE
The Arizona Republic

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — How big is the universe, really? About how old? An odd telescope that will stare almost straight up from an Arizona mountaintop may be a key. Immovable and unblinking, the new eye will hunt for hints.

Among other tasks, the telescope is considered almost certain to spy more of the exploding giant stars called supernovas than have been observed before. Conceivably, it could detect more in a few months than the 1,500 or so that have been discovered in decades of searching.

Supernovas are the cataclysmic death dances of stars more massive than the sun. They burn a billion times brighter.

That light, the theory goes, could provide a yardstick for universal measurement — "the standard candle" — scientists have sought for generations.

"In the course of observing," says University of Arizona astronomer John McGraw, "we will see 10,000 to 30,000 galaxies each night. In a galaxy of, say, a billion to 10 billion stars, there's a probability of one supernova going off every 100 years.

"Just statistically, since we will see so many galaxies, we could see one new supernova every week or even every other night."

Allowing the UA astronomers to do this will be a telescope of dramatically different design — the first, for one thing, without moving parts.

When the computer that operates the system commands the roof to slide back, the instrument will peer almost directly overhead.

Usually, telescopes are designed with a gearing that allows them to turn slowly, keeping focused on a given space phenomenon.

But this telescope will hold still, scanning vast swaths of the rotating sky.

Adam's parents have second son

FAIRFAX, Va. (AP) — Reve and John Walsh, whose 6-year-old son was slain in a case depicted in the television movie "Adam," celebrated the birth of a second boy more than three years after the tragedy.

Mrs. Walsh, 33, gave birth to 6-pound, 12-ounce Callahan on Thursday at Fairfax Hospital. Walsh told a hospital spokesman he was "ecstatic."

Adam disappeared July 27, 1981, from a shopping mall in Hollywood, Fla., where the family was living. His severed head was found two weeks later. The rest of the body was never found, and no one has been charged in the case.

The Walshes sponsored a national campaign that helped prompt Congress to pass the Missing Children's Act, which enlists the aid of the FBI computer network in the search for missing youngsters.

The couple, who now live in Oakton, also have a 2-year-old daughter, Meghan. Walsh works as a special consultant for the Washington-based National Center for Missing and Exploited Children.

VisionQuest: alternative to detention centers

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The roar of planes taking off from the nearby Philadelphia International Airport almost drowns out the voices around a row of four large teepees at the old Revolutionary War fort.

"Frank, have you combed your hair today?" Schree Hicks asks a youth who has just finished chopping wood and tending the campfire.

"Yes Mom," he answers.

Though it might seem like a typical family exchange, it isn't. They are juvenile delinquents. They range in age from 16-21. A couple of years ago they were runaways, armed robbers, or rapists classified as hardcore juvenile delinquents.

Now they call Ms. Hicks "Mom"; she considers them her children.

They are participants in VisionQuest, a private Arizona-based program founded by former corrections officials that tries to rehabilitate young people through physical challenges like riding in a wagon train, camping in the wilderness, sailing or restoring Old Fort Mifflin. The program, which has camps in Arizona, California and New Mexico as well as Pennsylvania, seeks to help the youths develop a sense of responsibility, family and trust.

Old Fort Mifflin is one of their last stops. The 25 youths here are getting ready to return to a more normal lifestyle.

Frank, 18, of Erie, is preparing to study computer programming next month. He and others were allowed to talk to reporters provided that their last names were not made public.

"This wilderness thing, wagon trains, the teepees, first I thought it was all a joke," Frank says. "But after a couple of weeks, I saw nobody was out to get me. I ...felt they were there to help me."

A staff of about 20, led by director Steve Bloom, live and work at the camp. Running away is forbidden, as are sex, drugs and alcohol.

"We basically take kids that nobody else wants. We deal a lot with the work ethic. People have to earn what they get or it's not important to them, Bloom says.

The day begins at sunrise. The youths run five miles and spend most of the morning studying with a special education teacher. In the afternoon they do housekeeping chores and work around the fort's buildings.

Erie County Judge Fred Anthony, former chairman of the Pennsylvania juvenile court judges' association and one of the first in the state to promote VisionQuest, has referred about 150 juveniles to the program.

He finds the success rate is running about 50 percent for hardcore offenders — that is, about half those out of the program between one and eight years later have straightened out their lives.

"That's phenomenal compared to what we get out of the security institutions," he says. VisionQuest's own figures show a success rate of 50 to 70 percent.

The cost of VisionQuest, which contracts with court systems, is roughly $88 per day per person, about half the cost of an institution. Members of the VisionQuest staff interview the youngsters, rejecting those they consider too emotionally disturbed or physically handicapped.

The youngsters are told they can choose VisionQuest or another facility. If they choose VisionQuest they are obligated for a year's commitment.

Schree Hicks came to VisionQuest four years ago. She had become fed up with traditional social work. After answering an ad for VisionQuest, she wound up at one of its group homes for boys.

Ms. Hicks, who grew up in the ghettos of Philadelphia, soon became known as "Mom." She supervised eight girls on a wagon train before joining the staff at Fort Mifflin.

VisionQuest was founded in 1973 by Bob Burton and Steve Rogers. The VisionQuest philosophy has its roots in that of the Plains Indians of Montana and Nevada, with whom Burton worked as a VISTA volunteer.

"They believed in a circular philosophy of living, with things in balance," he says. "The vision quest was a trial from childhood to adulthood that tribes promoted. It was the beginning of facing one's self.

"Here, we become parents and they become children, and that's where the major issues are, anyway. Most kids in our program have no identity. Delinquency takes over and they try to steal an identity."

The juveniles first go to a wilderness camp for three months. Senior staff members confront them directly if they cause trouble, but, says Ms. Hicks, "We never beat a kid up and we never push a kid away from us."

From the wilderness camps, they go to the wagon train or to other quest programs to learn discipline and responsibility, then to community group homes or learning centers such as Fort Mifflin, where they prepare to live on their own.

In 10 years, there have been 10 deaths among VisionQuest youths, all ruled accidental, Burton says. Seven died in a boating accident during a storm off the California coast, causing a temporary suspension of the Ocean-Quest program.

A 1983 study by the Rand Corp., prepared for the California Legislature, gave high marks to VisionQuest, calling it "practical and pragmatic, developed by experienced, sensible, caring practitioners." Most of the critics, it said, were officials associated with more traditional programs.

The Rand study prompted the city of Philadelphia to contract with VisionQuest for about 20 youths last July. It's too early to determine the results, but officials are optimistic.

Your Birthday

Dec. 9, 1984

Major changes are in store for you this coming year but they will be of a positive nature. Each alteration will improve your life in some manner.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Be prepared to stand up for your rights if you feel you are not being treated fairly today. Wrongs can be easily rectified. Looking for romance? The Matchmaker set can help you in your search. Send for the Astro-Graph Matchmaker by mailing $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Someone who has your best interests at heart may suggest a course of action for you today. If your stubbornness prevails, you might be inclined to do the opposite.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) People you associate with today may have more respect and appreciation for your talents than you have for yourself. They're right, you're wrong.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Give people you meet for the first time today the benefit of the doubt. You might end up liking someone you thought you wouldn't.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Even though you may feel you're the injured party, be the peacemaker today if any disagreements arise between you and your mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Think important matters over carefully today but do not use excessive deliberations. Vacillating too much will impair your judgment.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) In a sharing situation today, be sure the division is equal. Unless all is fair, hurt feelings will result.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) You're apt to be more susceptible to flattery today than usual. Someone who is aware of this may try to wrap you around his finger.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Be selective today about disclosing confidential information. Talk frankly to people you trust, but be tight-lipped with others.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Your resolve and self-discipline may not stand up to the test today if your path is strewn with temptations. Steer clear of the forbidden.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Put honor above personal gain today if you find yourself in a situation where you could derive a profit but must lower your standards to do so.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Be a producer today, not a procrastinator. Instead of searching for excuses why something won't work, take measures to show that it will.

Dec. 10, 1984

You may resurrect an old enterprise this coming year that was never developed to its fullest potential. This time you'll have the know-how to make it click.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Continue to be watchful in a venture where you share an interest with another. Be sure all financial burdens are distributed equally. Major changes are in store for Sagittarius in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) Think carefully before dispensing unsought advice to others today. Although your suggestions might be well-intentioned, they may do more harm than good.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Major achievements are possible today, provided you go about things in a methodical fashion. Think each move through in advance.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) You'll be more effective in dealing with others today if you get to the point quickly and specify your intentions. Minimize unrelated small talk.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Gauge situations realistically today so that objectives you set for yourself can be realized. Conditions may not be as easy as they first appear.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) If you need help careerwise today, go to your old standby, rather than to people you've recently met. New pals may promise much and deliver little.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Financial transactions must be handled wisely today. Don't lend money without getting collateral, even if it's to someone you know quite well.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Let your past experiences guide you today, rather than following the advice of someone who has never had a similar problem. The solutions are in your memory bank.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you hope to be productive today, it's imperative that you get an early start. Don't waste valuable time chit-chatting over a second or third cup of coffee.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In group involvements today, be one of the crowd instead of trying to run the show. You'll evoke a negative response if you try to force your will on others.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Unless you put your full weight behind your more ambitious projects today, you will only achieve a portion of your potential. Don't use half measures.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Do not treat frivolously today a situation that a friend takes seriously. Cute remarks could cause your pal to lose respect for your sincerity.

Barker likes daring players

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) — Bob Barker estimates he's given away $60 million in cash and prizes in nearly 28 years as a game-show host, but says the real thrill comes in seeing the real-life risks contestants take.

"These are not actors and actresses," said the star of "The Price Is Right" and the old "Truth or Consequences."

"These are people in real situations where they really have a chance to profit and they really have a chance to fail. It's sort of a slice of life right there for you on television," said Barker, 60.

Barker brings his traveling audience-participation program to Chattanooga tonight. The "Bob Barker Fun and Games Show" includes stunts, games and gags.

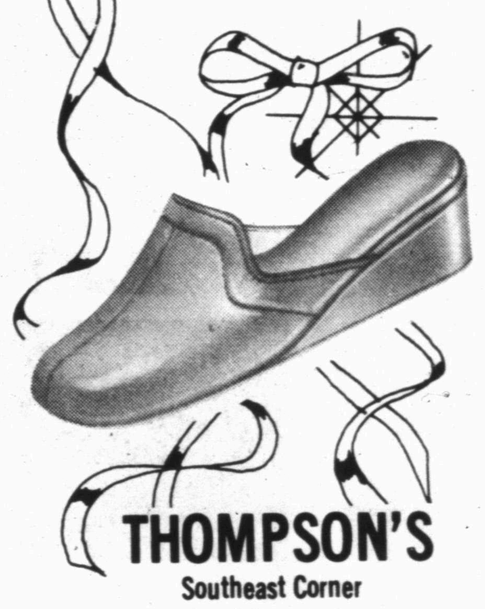

Bronze statue is unveiled

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — In a demonstration of friendship, Venezuelan President Jaime Lusinchi and Mayor Dianne Feinstein unveiled a bronze equestrian statue of "the Liberator," Simon Bolivar, who ended Spain's military power in South America.

Lusinchi, here Thursday after a meeting with President Reagan earlier this week, called the statue an "extraordinary demonstration of friendship" between Venezuela and San Francisco.

Radio station following small, but dedicated

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Heading to the Allentown hospital at 4 a.m., Dr. Tamar Earnest was roused gently out of her sleepiness by the classical piano music pouring from her car radio.

The music, she said, gave her a sense of calm alertness as she went to help a young accident vic-

"Doing surgery to Vivaldi is my idea of happiness," said Ms. Earnest, part of the loyal following of WFLN, Philadelphia's only full-time classical music station.

"It's just the kind of mood you want. If the other doctors have on a rock station, I make them change it."

While other stations have segued to rock 'n' roll, to contemporary, to country music, WFLN, in its 35th year on the air, hasn't changed its tune.

"We've been faithful to our audience and they've been faithful to us," said Harry Haas, station manager and vice president.

Surveys by Arbitron, the national ratings service, show the WFLN audience averages around 290,000 listeners a week compared to 900,000 for rock stations in Philadelphia. But though the WFLN fans are smaller in numbers, they are among the most dedicated, and the most affluent.

The station's listener profiles show an audience ranging in age from 30 to 60, in what Haas calls an "upscale" category.

"They are well educated, and because of that, they are well-jobbed," Haas said. "They include a lot of professionals, a lot of medical types, market types, independent business people."

That's by design. When WFLN went on the air in March 1949, founder Raymond Green, a violinist who had worked in intelligence in the Army — where he roomed with Clark Gable, among others — knew the kind of audience he wanted.

"We decided to use classical music as a format for attracting people of better-than-average intelligence, and we infiltrated it with news as much as possible," he said.

"We're the kind of a station you have to listen to. We're not a background music station. That, I think, is one of the reasons our commercials are so effective. The commercials come on, and people are still listening."

Green said, "Sometimes we have as many as 300 advertisers in the course of a month. They're supporting the arts. That to me is a great accomplishment.

"We have never had a dollar in support from a taxing entity. We've always shown commercial support for the arts."

WFLN publishes a program guide so listeners know when specific works will be played, and its programming is the result of extensive research.

"Generally, at drive time, from 6 to 10 a.m. and 4 to 7 p.m., things tend to be shorter and lighter," said program director Dave Conant. "The more serious standard fare, like symphonies, is scheduled from 10 to noon, 1 to 4 and 8 to 10. Overnight it's a mix."

Haas adds, "We can't take baroque and play it at 2 p.m., or we'd get shot. But we can put it somewhere and let people know where to find it."

After he was discharged from the Army in 1946, Green served as radio director of the NBC Symphony under conductor Arturo Toscanini, and went looking for a city with no classical music station. He settled on Philadelphia, where he got financial support from five others to start WFLN.

"When I grew up, my father was adamant that music was not a way to make a living," Green explained. "I had to work in a bank. With the experience of the bank behind me, it gave me the ability to put administrative things together — and the Army didn't hurt, either."

When the station began, Green said, only 14 percent of the homes in Philadelphia had FM receivers. Working with several companies, he was able to get FM receivers for cars, and, at one point, had a radio made for only one channel, WFLN.

"We sold about 7,500 of them in 30 days," Green recalled. "Every doctor and every dentist in Philadelphia bought one. But the Federal Communications Commission ruled it illegal."

WFLN was the first station in the area to use compact disc recordings, which produce sound through laser beams, although most of its music is still played on standard turntables.

Green said about 17 percent of Philadelphians are interested in classical music at least two hours a week — up from 14 percent in the 1940s and 1950s.

Germans had role during Revolutionary War

STILLWATER, N.Y. (AP) — A German surgeon born more than 200 years ago has been Helga Doblin's guest in her backroad cape house near this eastern New York town for better than two years now, but she has not grown tired of having him around.

Mrs. Doblin has been enraptured by Dr. J.F. Wasmus and other Germans hired out to the British in the American Revolutionary War ever since she began translating newly found journals, letters, diaries and military documents written by them.

"I live with Wasmus, I expect him to appear to me. Freally conjure him up," jokes the lively, 73-year-old Mrs. Doblin, emeritus professor of languages at Skidmore College in nearby Saratoga Springs with degrees from the University of Berlin and Harvard.

Mrs. Doblin, who was born in Freiburg, Germany, and emigrated in 1939, herself comes from a military family.

The papers were tracked down by National Park Service employee Stephen Strach, a voracious reader of early American history since his childhood in Buffalo. He followed a trail of obscure printed clues that led to the Library of Congress, where he found long-forgotten microfilm and photostat copies of the German documents.

Mrs. Doblin's translations of the papers give a colorful and human dimension to the often-maligned German mercenaries; they also alter and correct some long-standing perceptions.

Some 200 German troops died in the Aug. 16, 1777, Battle of Bennington which was fought on and around an open-topped hill in Walloomsac, N.Y., 35 miles east of Stillwater and five miles from the southwestern Vermont border. The remaining 400 or so were taken prisoner, including Wasmus.

Wasmus and his comrades have been telling their versions of the war to Mrs. Doblin in her and her husband's home in Stillwater, the town where thousands more soldiers hired out by the independent German states of Brunswick and Hesse died or were taken prisoner in the Battle of Saratoga.

They communicate to her through a microfilm reader. Since 1982 she has spent long hours at this machine, creating English sentences out of 18th century German ones. Their handwriting is often difficult to read because of personalized flourishes, and sometimes the letters are so small Mrs. Doblin has to resort to a magnifiying glass.

Translating obscure currencies, weights and measures is not easily accomplished. But Mrs. Doblin's knowledge of languages helps her translate French, Italian and Latin words mixed in with the German.

The copies of the papers have been stored at the Library of Congress since the 1920s, when the originals were photographed at archives in Germany. There's no telling how many documents are in that still uncataloged chaos of German writings in Washington, D.C., says Strach.

Mrs. Doblin calculates that if she lives to be 126 she'll have finished translating the 52 microfilm reels purchased by the National Park Service's office at the Saratoga Battlefield.

Mrs. Doblin has been receiving an annual $4,000 federal grant for her labors, but her primary compensation is the thrill of mentally accompanying these often overlooked warriors on their adventures in North America.

"I started just with translating. I was not interested in the subject matter, just in translating. And then I really got fascinated by it," she says.

The history of mercenaries from Hesse and Brunswick — two of several German states — fighting for the British two centuries ago is not something even Germans have looked very closely at, says Mrs. Doblin.

When Mrs. Doblin began traveling to Germany for further research she found the archives where the original papers are kept "in disarray. But interest is mounting."

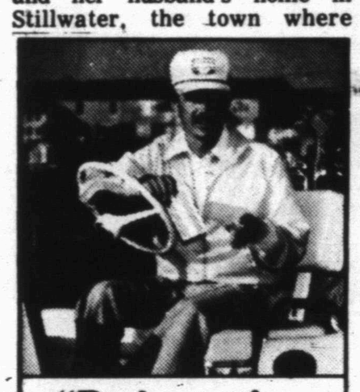

The translations by Mrs. Doblin detail the mercenaries' lives from their march to troop ships on the Elbe River in Germany and their arduous voyage to Canada to their return in 1783.

The seven-year journal of Wasmus is especially Homeric, telling of long, deadly winters in Canada, desertions, executions, scalpings, his new life as a country doctor in New England following his dramatic capture and his apparently hesitant return to Wolfenbuettel, Brunswick.

Wasmus was with the mostly German force sent to Bennington to capture rebel supplies needed to enable the British to continue their siege at Stillwater. But the Germans were met by a surprisingly large force of Americans in Walloomsac, five miles short of their destination.

Some of Mrs. Doblin's translations will appear in Brown University's "Military Collector and Historian" journal next year, and she and Strach are researching other routes to get more of the papers published.

Strach, who was the director of the translation program while employed at the Saratoga Battlefield, now works for the National Park Service at Jamestown, Va.

Liberals and dogooders would in time take over the government. We set out to help 19 war ravaged countries at the end of World War II; we are now helping 107. We have spent 146 billion. Some of that money bought a two million yacht for Haile Selassie. We bought 1000 TV sets with 23 inch screens for a country that has no electricity. Some of that money was spent for guns and ammunition to carry on Civil War. We have spent since 1955 billions on the farm programs and today the farmers are on the brink of bankruptcy.

We have spent billions to promote peace and today there are wars and terrorists engage in warfare. We have taxed and spent until we will have to pass laws to enforce the collection of taxes. The Supreme Court has ruled the government has the right to imprison farmers who violate their planting quotas.

Liberals and dogooders wake up. No nation or empire has survived the tax burden of 50 (cents) of the tax dollar. It is 43 (cents) now. So if you don't want Big Brother to go like the Babylonian, Persian, Roman and Grecian Empires, you better take a back seat.

BIRTHDAY ALMANAC

Compiled by the editors of The World Almanac Book of Who

Dec. 2 — Alexander Haig (1914-), the former U.S. Army general who served as presidential assistant during the Nixon and Ford administrations and as secretary of state during the early years of the Reagan administration.

Dec. 3 — Andy Williams (1930-), the singer who starred in his own television show from 1958 to 1971. His hit recordings include "Moon River," "Born Free" and "Days of Wine and Roses."

Dec. 4 — Maria Callas (1923-1977), the soprano who was one of the most popular opera stars of her time. Her talents made possible the revival of many early 19th-century bel canto works that had been dropped from standard repertoires.

Dec. 5 — Strom Thurmond (1902-), the U.S. senator from South Carolina who has long been a leading spokesman for Southern conservatism. He was the States' Rights presidential candidate in 1948.

Dec. 6 — Joyce Kilmer (1886-1918), the poet who is mainly remembered for "Trees," the poem that first appeared in Poetry magazine in 1913.

Dec. 7 — Ted Knight (1923-), the actor who gained fame as Ted Baxter on "The Mary Tyler Moore Show" in the 1970s. He is currently starring on the "Too Close for Comfort" TV sitcom.

Dec. 8 — John Sibelius (1865-1957), the Finnish composer who is renowned for his seven symphonies, as well as orchestral suites, tone poems, and music for the violin.
