Bombing service

OKLAHOMA CITY — Hundreds of worshipers whose churches were damaged in the federal building bombing carried palm fronds to a makeshift chapel near the blast site for a Palm Sunday service. "We are determined that evil will not triumph over good," the Rev. Nick Harris said as worshipers huddled together in the 37-degree chill, waving palm fronds and shouting "Amen."/5A

Yeltsin halts all major military operations against Chechnya

MOSCOW (AP) — Desperate to show voters he will stop the war that is sinking his presidency, Boris Yeltsin on Sunday announced a halt to combat operations in Chechnya, limited troop withdrawals and a willingness to hold indirect talks with the rebels' leader.

But his long-promised peace plan stopped short of promising an end to the fighting and left scant hope for an imminent settlement.

Yeltsin refused to budge on the separatists' two main demands — full withdrawal of Russian troops and independence for Chechnya — and his tone was more tough than conciliatory.

"Without doubt, we will not put up with terrorist acts and we will respond to them adequately," Yeltsin said in taped remarks broadcast on television Sunday night.

The announcement came just 11 weeks before Russia's presidential election, with the unpop-

Critics ponder political use of Clinton video deposition

By James Rowley
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — A court order for President Clinton to give videotaped testimony in a Whitewater criminal trial has producers of Republican attack ads pondering potential uses of the footage in the fall campaign.

Whether Clinton's testimony ends up appearing in GOP ads depends on its public release by a federal judge in Arkansas, a likely scenario if it is played before jurors, legal experts say.

"I'd love to get my hands on the president on the stand," says Alex Castellanos, a Republican political ad man who most recently worked for the presidential campaign of Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

U.S. soldiers to aid probe of war crime

■ For first time, American troops will provide security for U.N. investigators in Bosnia.

Associated Press

TUZLA, Bosnia-Herzegovina — For the first time, U.S. troops this week will provide security and other limited support for U.N. war crimes investigators, the commander of the NATO-led peace force in Bosnia said Sunday.

Adm. Leighton Smith told reporters he did not expect any major confrontations when investigators from the U.N. War Crimes Tribunal search for mass graves and other evidence of atrocities near Srebrenica, in eastern Bosnia.

The U.N. search, which is expected to start Tuesday, will be in Serb territory at sites of alleged massacres of thousands of Bosnian Muslims last summer.

"There may be some demonstrations," Smith said. "This obviously is a very emotional issue. But I don't anticipate that there will be problems" for the U.S. troops.

Smith was escorting Defense Secretary William Perry on a visit with U.S. troops at Comanche Base, just west of here, where attack helicopters of the 4th Aviation Brigade are based.

Perry arrived here Sunday morning and later flew to Sarajevo where he met with NATO commanders and acting Bosnian President Ejup Ganic. He then flew to Albania.

Perry was supposed to take a helicopter tour over parts of the demilitarized buffer that is being patrolled by the Implementation Force, or IFOR, troops, but a blinding snow storm kept him grounded. Instead he visited Comanche Base for a briefing on U.S. operations and a chat with some American soldiers.

Asked about providing security at Srebrenica, Perry told reporters he fully supports Smith's plan, but he mentioned no details.

In his comments to reporters, Smith initially was reluctant to discuss

1 year later, Selena lives in fans' hearts

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — They came from across the state and country, even from Mexico. Some carried flowers, others camcorders. Many cried, while others smiled at memories of the fallen star they had come to remember.

Sunday, on the first anniversary of her death, Selena Quintanilla Perez was still very much alive in the hearts of fans who poured into her adopted hometown to grieve anew.

"We came to show our respects and show that she has not been forgotten — she never will," Melba Rivera of Harlingen said as she stood with her three children outside of Selena's home.

The house, in the neighborhood where Selena grew up, has become a tourist attraction for fans of the slain Tejano singer, who was gunned down March 31, 1995, by her former fan club president.

It was one stop on a pilgrimage for devotees visiting here this weekend. Many, such as the Riveras, spent the night at the Days Inn motel where Yolanda Saldivar shot and killed the 23-year-old rising star.

They then proceeded to the home of Selena and her husband, guitarist Chris Perez. Its chain-link fence was dotted with flowers and signs, including one from San Angelo that

Parker & Parsley gains financial muscle from foreign-assets sale

Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co. officials are upbeat about the company's new financial muscle gained from last week's sale of its assets in Australia and Indonesia.

The sale strengthens the company financially and allows it the financial flexibility to pursue other projects, according to company officials.

Parker & Parsley's wholly owned Australian subsidiaries were sold to Santos; a sale agreement was signed with a Phillips Petroleum unit for the Bridge Oil Timor Sea Inc. subsidiary for a total of $240.3 million.

The proceeds from the two deals — along with the sale of a small domestic package expected to close soon — will be used to pay down bank debt and leave the company approxi-

Drug-ring tie in homecoming queen's slaying shocks town

By Martha Bryson Hodel

WILLIAMSON, W.Va. — Michael Ann "Miki" Koontz was the darling of this small Appalachian coalfield town — homecoming queen, cheerleader, an above-average student whose bags were packed for college.

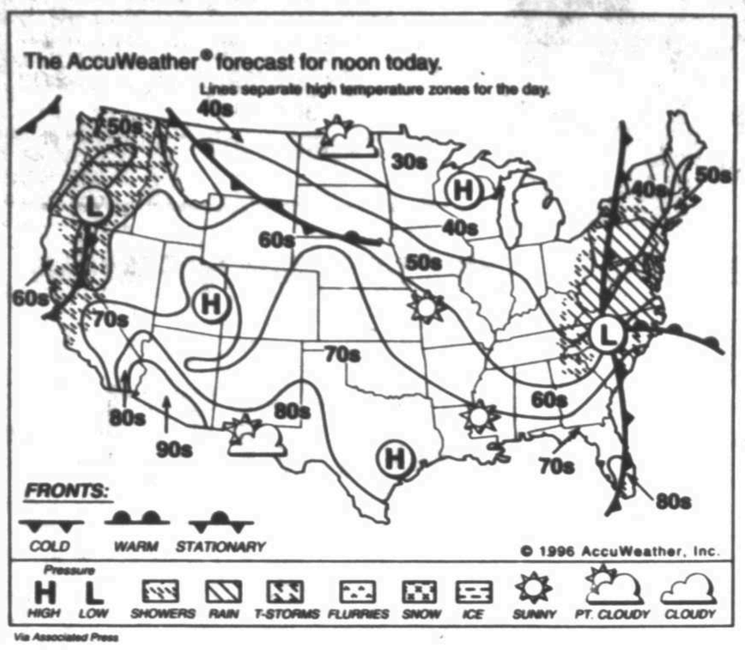

But her many friends seemed unaware the 17-year-old was also a drug user. The teen was caught up in a drug ring whose leader believed she knew too much and allegedly ordered her killed just as federal agents were preparing to haul in the traffickers.

A friend of Miki's — James C. "Chris" Pennington, 21, who said he carried out her execution to cancel a $2,000 drug debt — goes on trial for murder and kidnapping Tuesday in Mingo County Circuit Court.

WEATHER WATCH

Look for high in mid-70s, sun today

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for sunny skies, a high in the mid-70s, and southeast winds 5-15 mph, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the upper 40s.

Tuesday is expected to be partly cloudy with a high in the lower 80s.

After an overnight low of 39, Sunday's high was 64 compared to the record high for that date of 97 set in 1946. The record low for today's date was 16 set in 1931.

STATE

Brisk north winds pushed most of the clouds out of Texas and brought lower temperatures to the state Sunday.

Winds were north at 15 to 25 mph and gusty behind a cold front across the eastern half of the state and north at 5 to 15 mph under a high pressure ridge in the west. Winds were southerly at 10 to 15 miles an hour in the Panhandle.

High pressure building across the state led to clear or clearing skies nearly statewide. However, some cloud cover lingered in the east.

Despite the abundant sunshine, temperatures rose only into the 60s in the Panhandle to 80s in South Texas.

The North Texas forecast is for mostly sunny skies today with highs in the lower 70s. Mostly clear tonight with lows of 37 to 42.

The South Texas forecast is for highs in the 70s and 80s and lows in the 50s. Skies will be mostly sunny during the day and fair at night.

Forecasters said West Texas will be clear to partly cloudy through Tuesday. Highs will be in the 70s and 80s with readings near 90 in the Big Bend. Lows from the mid-30s in the north to 50s in the south.

NATION

Rain fell from the Ohio Valley into Florida on Sunday, with thunderstorms in the Southeast states. Light snow was scattered over parts of the Northwest.

Thunderstorms developed during the afternoon across Alabama, southern Georgia and northern Florida, with the area of heaviest rain moving from the Gulf of Mexico into northern Florida.

Hail the diameter of quarters was reported in parts of central Georgia and in the Florida Panhandle.

Wind gusts to as high as 65 mph were possible with the thunderstorms.

More rain was associated with an area of low pressure centered over the lower Ohio Valley.

Locally heavy rain fell from western Tennessee northward across Kentucky into southern Indiana.

Showers extended eastward from the low into the Carolinas and Virginia.

West and north of the low, rain showers were possible from Missouri into Michigan, with a chance of snow and rain mixed over northern Michigan.

A few light rain and snow showers were scattered over the Pacific Northwest as the jet stream pulled moist air through the region.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

GAINS: Foreign-assets sale pleases Parker & Parsley

(From 1A)

mately $300 million in long-term debt.

Parker & Parsley Vice President Jay McEntire said that the company's Australian assets — gained in 1994 when Parker & Parsley acquired Bridge Oil Ltd. — were not sold solely to reduce bank debt.

"This did pay down debt and that was a positive effect," he said. "But this was also because the assets were no longer a strategic fit and we were given credit in equity value."

The company has been praised for greatly increasing the value of the assets in the 18 months it controlled them.

Tim Dove, vice president and general manager, said that Parker & Parsley decided after 18 months of operating its Australian assets that "the types of opportunities and projects weren't what we wanted."

He described them as tending to be offshore gas, long-term developments that take at least five years before a return is seen.

He said Parker & Parsley wasn't getting any real value from those assets.

Dove said the assets had been valued at $100 million from equity "and we knew the value locked up in them was far more than that."

Net proceeds from the combined sale will be approximately $200 million, which is double the market value, Dove said.

Mark Withrow, senior vice president and general counsel, said that it was decided several months ago that it would be in the company's best interest to either sell the assets to another company or have a public offering.

Both choices were pursued by company officials, who sent information to a select group of companies believed interested in acquiring the assets. Inquiries were received from more than 60 companies; that number was narrowed to four and final negotiations began with them last week.

An agreement was reached with Santos and closed the same day. Withrow said it is rare to complete and close an agreement the same day.

The sale agreement with Phillips is expected to close in 45 days.

While the sale of its Australian assets has eliminated a large portion of Parker & Parsley's international activities, Withrow said the company is not leaving the international arena.

He said Parker & Parsley retained the U.S. assets — primarily in the Gulf of Mexico — that it gained from its Bridge Oil acquisition and former Bridge Oil interests in Argentina.

He and Dove said the company intends to carefully extend its presence in Argentina and is also looking at activity in Canada and elsewhere in South America, specifically Venezuela and Peru.

The company also remains active in the United States, with plans to spend $175 million to drill 475 wells this year, down slightly from 509 drilled last year.

TIE: Petite brunette's body was found 3 days later

(From 1A)

Agent Arthur Turner, provided this account of the crime:

Miki Koontz, who had spent part of her summer in a Huntington drug rehabilitation program, was back home with her parents in Williamson upon her release Aug. 22, 1995.

On the evening of Aug. 25, she and her mother planned to attend a football game in nearby Matewan. But first, she told her mother, she had to run some errands and would return shortly.

It was the last time her mother saw her.

That afternoon, she met with Pennington. At his request, Miki drove to an isolated area 5 miles outside town, near a sewage treatment plant for the little town of Chattaroy.

At the plant, the alleged leader of the drug ring, Robert J. Warren Sr., was waiting. Fearing he was about to be arrested, he had begun collecting on drug debts.

Warren, who has since pleaded guilty to crack cocaine distribution, allegedly ordered the girl killed because she had threatened to take information about the ring to police.

Armed with a handgun, he instructed Pennington to walk Miki into the woods.

"Pennington ... instructed her to get on her knees, placed the .22-caliber rifle against the back of her head and fired his first shot into the back of Koontz's head," FBI documents say.

At Warren's instruction, "he laid the muzzle of the rifle against Koontz's head and pulled the trigger a second time."

Warren then gave Pennington a rock of crack cocaine, and the two men left.

The body of the petite brunette with hazel eyes was found three days later, on what was to have been her first day at Marshall University. She had talked about becoming a lawyer, like her older half-brother, Tim Koontz, or maybe a journalist, her teachers said.

The murder stunned the 4,100 people of Williamson. "We're such a small community here that everybody's family, and we just lost a member of our family," said Rose McCoy, Miki's journalism teacher and yearbook adviser at 255-student Williamson High School.

Pennington was arrested two days after the body was found. He insisted he killed the girl only because Warren had held a gun to his head.

Warren's distribution ring, which was reportedly clearing $35,000 a month in this county of only 33,000 residents, had ensnared both Miki and her 20-year-old sister, Kelli.

Tim Koontz said he had urged his sisters to talk with the FBI.

"They were emotionally fragile girls going through adolescence and they were caught up in something," he said.

"This crack industry is a disease that preys upon the young and emotionally fragile. They were both struggling to shake it."

Koontz said Kelli is now drug-free.

Warren, 44, of Williamson is to be sentenced May 14; he faces life in prison for conspiracy to distribute. Although he has not been charged with murder, a judge could issue a stiffer sentence if he decides that Miki's death occurred as a result of Warren's drug activities.

The last person her friends thought would get in harm's way was Miki, who was outgoing and liked everyone, her teachers said. "She never met a stranger," McCoy said.

By contrast, Pennington, frail and slovenly and described by his mother, Kathy, as "borderline mentally retarded," had few friends.

According to Mrs. Pennington, Miki's Aug. 25 visit to the family's trailer up narrow Goodman Hollow, just outside of Williamson, was nothing unusual.

Miki often came by and picked up her son; in hindsight, she realizes, the visits were probably to go off and use drugs. But she is firm: Her son did not kidnap Miki Koontz.

"He thought the world of Miki," she said. "He loved both of those girls as friends."

SELENA: Fans mourn Tejano star 1 year after her death

(From 1A)

read: "Selena — You will never be forgotten. You're always in our hearts."

A gold-framed poem from a woman outside of Houston lay propped against the fence underneath a white plastic sign covered with messages from those who had visited.

"We saved our Spring Break for this," said Sandra DeLeon of Lubbock, who made the trek with her sister and their three kids. "This is what we wanted to do. Her songs — they came from the heart."

Her 10-year-old daughter, tears reddening her eyes, faltered when asked why she liked Selena. "Her songs were easy to sing," said Madison DeLeon, whose mother said she sings those songs daily.

At Selena Etc., the singer's clothing boutique, fans stopped in hope of buying a momento of their idol. But the doors were shut on this day. Some visitors peered through the windows, and others snapped photographs before continuing their journey, which for many ended at Selena's seaside grave.

Mounds of white roses from Selena's family covered her grave in stark contrast to her black granite tombstone. A green mesh fence kept visitors at a distance, but provided a backdrop for their own memorials: a panda bear, piles of roses and carnations, poster-board signs and poems.

There, in reverent tones, fans shared memories of the star. One man knelt in prayer, while a child placed a stuffed animal on the ground next to him.

Hundreds had visited by midday, prompting cemetery officials to prohibit fans from leaving their cars. A slow procession of automobiles, many with photographs of the singer hung in windows, wound its way through the burial ground.

Fans outside of Corpus Christi also remembered the singer. In Houston, church services and tributes were held to mark the first anniversary of her death.

"People feel she is still with us," said Abby Chavarrilla of Tejano radio station KQQK in Houston. "It's been a year, and the requests have not stopped for her songs."

An afternoon tribute was set for St. Patrick's Catholic Church, where Selena fans were attending a picnic. The El Dorado Ranch, a Tejano club where Selena performed a month before her death, remembered the singer by presenting her videos and music.

In cities across the state, radio stations played Selena's music and testimonials from fans and other Tejano artists. Candlelight vigils were planned in San Antonio and Corpus Christi.

"We love her, we miss her," said Mencha Amador of Phoenix, Ariz. "We do have her music, and that is great. She left something for all of us. That is our joy."

YELTSIN: Russian president halts military action

(From 1A)

ular Yeltsin trailing Communist Gennady Zyuganov and voters demanding an end to the bloodshed in Chechnya.

It also capped a month of withering air and ground attacks on Chechen strongholds, apparently intended to push the rebels into the southern mountains before the plan was announced.

Thousands of troops were reportedly continuing large-scale operations Sunday in eight sealed-off mountain villages of southeastern Chechnya, and Yeltsin's open-ended statement left it unclear what would become of troops in such hot spots.

The announcement was met with skepticism by politicians, analysts and even Russia's military commander in Chechnya, who cast doubt on the feasibility of the unilateral cease-fire, which Yeltsin said would begin within hours.

"It's unlikely that combat operations will be stopped right after the president's statement," Gen. Vyacheslav Tikhomirov told NTV Independent Television from Chechnya. "You understand, it's impossible."

A series of broken promises and defied orders throughout the 16-month-old war have raised serious questions both about Yeltsin's intentions and about his control of the army.

His Security Council declared the military operation in Chechnya to be effectively completed as of Jan. 25, 1995. But fighting has raged on for another 14 months and the death toll is now estimated at over 30,000. Most of those killed were civilians.

Reading a statement at his desk, a Russian flag at his side, Yeltsin declared a unilateral cease-fire in Chechnya starting at midnight Sunday, along with unspecified, phased withdrawals "from the tranquil areas of Chechnya to its administrative borders."

He said democratic elections for a new Chechen parliament would be held, and he was prepared to hold talks with those loyal to rebel leader Dzhokhar Dudayev "through go-betweens."

Talks last year with rebel officials failed, and the Kremlin has refused to negotiate with Dudayev. Yeltsin appeared to signal some flexibility in linking the rebel leader's name to talks, and he acknowledged in follow-up questions by three Russian TV anchors that Dudayev enjoys "certain, though not quite unsullied, influence" among Chechens.

PROBE: U.S. troops to guard U.N. investigators specifics of the Srebrenica plan. Pressed for details, he said U.S. officers would provide a liaison team that could, if an emergency arose, immediately call on U.S. firepower in the area. Some emergency medical support also will be provided, as well as possible lodging for the U.N. investigators, the admiral said.

(From 1A)

Another officer, who spoke on condition of anonymity, said the liaison team of U.S. soldiers would be within hand-held radio range of the grave sites.

Smith was adamant that this did not reflect a change in policy. He mentioned that the NATO-led force in Bosnia had provided similar support for war crimes investigators in the sector of Bosnia being monitored by British forces. This is the first time, however, that U.S. forces have done so, Smith said.

"We will not guard grave sites, we will not exhume bodies, we will not provide individual security," he said. The idea is to secure the roadways in the vicinity of Srebrenica and to be available in case the investigators get in trouble.

Army Col. John Batiste, commander of the U.S. Army 2nd Brigade, whose forces will be involved in this week's operation at Srebrenica, said in an interview later that it probably would last about two weeks, and that the U.S. troops would deploy in Bradley fighting vehicles and other armored vehicles.

Smith would not say how many U.S. soldiers would be involved, but a senior defense official, speaking on condition of anonymity, said it would be between 100 and 200.

The U.S. assistance to war crimes investigators is the latest example of the NATO-led force in Bosnia providing more support for civilian-led efforts to stabilize Bosnia.

At a joint news conference after their talks in Sarajevo, Perry and Ganic were asked whether they thought there could be peace if two indicted war criminals, Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic and his military chief Ratko Mladic, remained in power — and whether the NATO force would remove them.

VIDEO: Clinton's deposition has critics pondering TV ads

(From 1A)

ton's videotaped deposition that become public.

The White House dodged a potentially embarrassing spectacle by convincing the judge in the Little Rock trial to allow Clinton to testify by videotape instead of in person.

But the videotape arrangement has one disadvantage: It will leave behind a permanent videotaped record of Clinton being grilled under oath about Whitewater.

At issue in the trial is whether Arkansas Gov. Jim Guy Tucker and Clinton's former Whitewater real estate partners, James McDougal and McDougal's ex-wife Susan, arranged nearly $3 million in improper loans. The McDougals have subpoenaed Clinton to counter allegations that Tucker and then-Gov. Clinton pressured an Arkansas businessman into making improper loans.

Former President Reagan came across as forgetful and uninformed when he testified by videotape at the Iran-Contra trial of his former national security adviser, John M. Poindexter, whose conviction was later set aside on appeal.

For Clinton, the timing of his testimony could not be worse — just as he is launching his re-election campaign.

GOP operatives have already scoured the video record of Clinton's public pronouncements for contradictions that can be exploited in political ads. "I have collected hours of videotape and I know the Republican National Committee has," says Brown.

It's not clear whether attack ads would be part of the GOP strategy.

Mary Crawford, spokeswoman for the Republican National Committee, says GOP strategists have not given any thought to airing them. "It is our hope that we can have a campaign about the issues," she said. And Sen. Bob Dole, the presumptive Republican nominee, has said he does not intend to raise Whitewater as an issue.

But negative ad makers could use an independent political committee as an outlet for their work, as Brown did when he produced the Willie Horton ad that helped George Bush beat Dukakis in 1988.

Democratic media consultant John Franzen says such attack ads won't help Republicans because "I don't think the country is focused on this thing. ... It's a crashing bore."

Still, the witness stand presents dangers for a president that don't exist on the political stump or in the White House briefing room.

Clinton "is taking a hell of a risk unless he thinks he can sit down very smoothly and answer both the prosecution and defense questions without any problem," says Washington attorney Richard Beckler, who subpoenaed Reagan to testify at Poindexter's trial.

Under the arrangement ordered by U.S. District Judge George Howard Jr., Clinton will be questioned in the White House via video conference. The judge will preside over the questioning, probably sometime late this month, and the tape will be kept under seal until any portions are played to jurors.

If defense lawyers decide not to play the tape in court, it would remain secret. But if it's played in court, there is a strong likelihood it will be released to the public, experts say.

A White House lawyer speaking on condition of anonymity said the Clintons would not oppose the release of the tape to news organizations, which cannot tape the courtroom proceedings.

Hong Kong residents rush to acquire British passports

HONG KONG (AP) — Raymond and Grace Chan argued up to the last minute about whether to apply for British passports. He said it was like an insurance policy. She said it made her feel disloyal to her Chinese heritage.

In the end they filed their applications — along with more than 160,000 people who mobbed the Hong Kong passport office this month to beat a midnight deadline on Sunday.

"I have my roots here. I'm used to Hong Kong. Why should I get a British passport?" asked Grace Chan, 43.

"It's like insurance," replied her husband, 45. "It ensures we can visit our kids in Sydney like we do every year."

Britain's 155-year government of Hong Kong expires June 30, 1997. While the approach of Chinese rule has had many worried about the future of Hong Kong's democratic freedom, the issue of the day on Sunday was getting a passport.

Just 400 people attended a prodemocracy rally here Sunday, while down the road, some 30,000 people lined up outside the immigration office.

It's not that Hong Kong residents were suddenly overcome by yearning for the colonial motherland. If anything, many are still resentful that Britain refused to give them full British citizenship.

About half of Hong Kong's 6 million people already have British citizenship. Another 2 million residents who were not born in Hong Kong — mainly Chinese immigrants — are eligible for the British colonial passports.

The colonial passports will not enable holders to live in Britain. They will, however, allow visa-free entry to Britain and 80 other countries.

After the 1997 takeover, China plans to issue a special passport to Hong Kong residents. But so far, only Britain and a few other countries have said it will entitle holders to visa-free entry.

"At first, I did not have any intention to apply. But after hearing about all the uncertainties of the Chinese one, I decided to come," said Maurus Lau, 52.

In recent days, the line for passports defied even the worst-case scenarios, snaking around skyscrapers, across pedestrian walkways and into a sports field 600 yards away.

The government was forced to keep its offices open overnight from Saturday to Sunday to clear the backlog of applicants. Braving a persistent drizzle, people armed themselves with portable radios and magazines. Some carried babies. Police with loudspeakers kept order. Occasional shoving broke out, as well as a couple of fistfights.

Martin Lee, head of the Democrats, Hong Kong's biggest elected party, saw a political message in the line for passports.

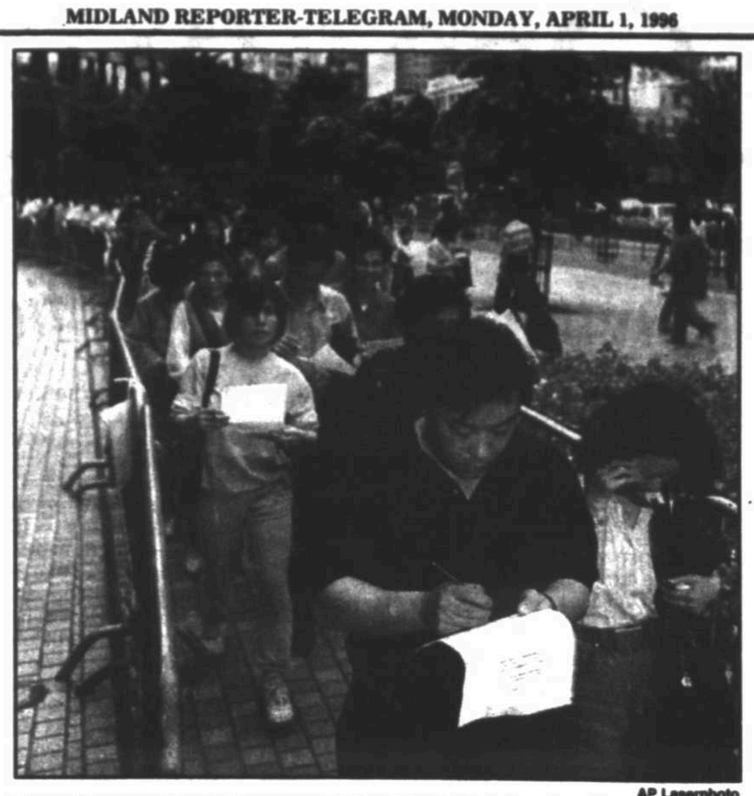

"I think people are so desperate. They are so afraid of the incoming administration. They will do anything to get whatever passport," said Lee, a fierce critic of China and a participant in Sunday's prodemocracy rally outside China's representative office in Hong Kong.

But Grace Chan didn't seem worried. She said she would have been perfectly happy with the Chinese-issued passport, but her husband talked her into getting the British one.

Hong Kong Chinese were not the only ones in the line.

Fifteen-year-old Patrick Bowen, a Hong Kong-born American, flew here during his high school spring break to beat the deadline. He said Hong Kong offered good job prospects and he wanted to make sure he could stay after 1997.

"I don't want to come back to Hong Kong with a visa," he said. "It's hard to get a job being a foreigner here."

Hong Kong residents line up outside of the British immigration office Sunday to apply for British passports before the deadline at the end of the day. Although the passports do not grant citizenship some see them as a reasonable assurance of security in light of the Chinese takeover.

Pope pleads for abducted monks

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, speaking after Palm Sunday ceremonies, appealed for the release of seven French monks kidnapped in Algeria.

"Let them return, safe and sound, to their monastery and again find their place among our Algerian friends," John Paul told tens of thousands of worshipers gathered under bright sunshine in St. Peter's Square.

The monks, members of the Trappist order, were kidnapped from their mountain monastery Wednesday by a group of armed men believed to be Muslim militants. The four-year civil war has killed more than 40,000 people, at least 109 of them foreigners.

"I appeal to the sense of human brotherhood, asking the immediate release of those religious figures who chose to remain ... in the middle of a Muslim population with which they had established, for years, ties of friendship and mutual respect," the pontiff said.

Starting a busy week of ceremonies, the 75-year-old pope walked slowly through St. Peter's Square for an outdoor 2 1/2-hour Mass, supporting himself with a silver staff.

He seemed in good form after illness caused him to cancel an appearance March 13. The Vatican at the time said the pope was ailing from fever and digestive problems. He resumed his travels Saturday with a visit to Siena.

The pope dedicated Palm Sunday to young people.

"Dearest young people, know to read in the cross the measure of God's love: a measure without measure," John Paul said.

Many of the tens of thousands of people in the square held sprigs of olive leaves and palm fronds.

Palm Sunday marks Jesus's triumphant entrance into Jerusalem, when his followers laid palm branches in his path, before his crucifixion. It begins the Catholic Church's most solemn period, the week that ends with Easter next Sunday.

Europe tries to contain panic over mad cows

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Acting on a European Union pledge to help rescue Britain's beef industry, Europe's farm ministers are searching for ways to prevent beef markets from crashing further out of fear of mad cow disease.

EU leaders promised during a summit Friday to help British Prime Minister John Major, after banning British beef exports two days earlier over fears that cattle stricken with mad cow disease could pass a deadly form of the brain illness to people.

At an emergency meeting of EU agriculture ministers on Monday in Luxembourg, Britain is expected to press the organization to ease export restrictions quickly, arguing there was no rational basis for the blanket ban.

"Obviously it is a major objective of ours to get the ban lifted, but we've got a lot of work to do," British Agriculture Minister Douglas Hogg said.

Hogg has banned the sale of meat from older cattle in Britain and imposed stricter monitoring of animals. But more drastic British measures probably will be necessary to get the ban lifted.

Concern over mad cow disease has spread across Europe since Britain announced March 20 that the sickness appeared to have caused at least eight human deaths from the related Creutzfeldt-Jakob disease.

French Farm Minister Philippe Vasseur said over the weekend that he would support the destruction of the entire British beef herd if necessary to wipe out the disease and restore consumer confidence.

Britain has destroyed nearly 160,000 dairy cattle that showed symptoms of the disease, including staggering and drooling. About 150 cases have been recorded in the 14 other European Union countries.

Switzerland, the country most affected by the disease after Britain, has recorded a total of 207 cases of the illness in cattle since 1990, officials in Bern said Friday, reporting three new cases for March.

Ridding Britain of mad cow disease will be costly. Preliminary estimates start at $4 billion and shoot up, depending on the number of cattle that would be destroyed.

Famous bandit to run for office

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — A lower-caste woman both revered and reviled as India's "Bandit Queen" said Sunday she will run for a seat in the federal parliament.

Phoolan Devi allegedly murdered 20 upper-caste men to avenge her rape and the death of her boyfriend. She spent 11 years in jail awaiting trial before being paroled in 1994.

Her life story was the basis for a 1994 film, "Bandit Queen," which won international acclaim and was a box-office hit in India.

Mrs. Devi said she would run as a Socialist Party candidate representing the city of Mirzapur in Uttar Pradesh, the nation's most populous state. She said she will file her nomination on Tuesday.

"Time has come to do some serious work for the people and I think the best way to do it will be from the seat of power — the Parliament," Mrs. Devi said, speaking in the state capital, Lucknow.

Mirzapur is dominated by lower caste voters and Mrs. Devi expects she has enough support there to win, The Asian Age reported.

"In fact, it is the people of Mirzapur who asked me to contest," she said.

India's voters go to the polls in April and May to elect representatives to the 545-seat lower house.

Mrs. Devi caused a sensation in 1981 for her alleged role in the attack in the Uttar Pradesh village of Behmai.

As the story goes, two outlaws killed her lover than abducted her to the village, where she was raped repeatedly. Set free, she returned to the village with her own gang, intent on vengeance.

Newspapers at that time reported that she lined up all 26 upper-caste men of the village at a river bank and emptied out her carbine. Twenty men died on the spot; the others survived with serious injuries.

Historic veto power may curb spending

The line-item veto — a measure called historic because it would give to the president the ability to strike out specific parts of spending bills without vetoing the entire legislation — passed the Senate last week and could pass the House within days.

President Clinton has called for passage of the measure, as have numerous other presidents in the past. If he truly supports the line-item veto, Clinton should sign the measure when it reaches his desk. Approval of the line-item veto was even part of the "Contract With America" which the Republicans had vowed to pass.

The line-item veto will shift the power of the purse back to the president from a Congress that has proven itself incapable of controlling deficit spending. With this line-item veto power, the president can control congressional spending and it will take a two-thirds vote of each house to override the chief executive's veto of specific spending items.

This measure also will return to the American people the indirect power to control overspending by the Congress. A president who permits overspending by the Congress obviously will face the wrath of voters and, in theory at least, will respond to that pressure by wielding the line-item veto.

If the measure is passed and signed by President Clinton, some observers say it will be challenged in the Supreme Court. Perhaps so, but it is certainly worth that gamble in the interest of reining in runaway deficit spending by the Congress.

ANOTHER VIEW

Reality of line-item veto may be just around corner

After a 13-month stalemate, House and Senate Republicans appear ready to make good on their promise to pass a presidential line-item veto. This tool of fiscal discipline has been sought by every president from Richard Nixon to Bill Clinton.

And it is overwhelmingly supported by the American people, who believe the president should have the power to extract wasteful spending items from bills presented to him by Congress.

Under the legislation crafted by House and Senate negotiators, the president could eliminate or reduce the size of any item appearing in a spending bill. If Congress disagrees, it can override the president's veto with a two-thirds vote by both chambers.

The president would not have the authority to eliminate policy provisions. But if he objected to a certain policy, he could zero out the funds to pay for it. Again, Congress would have the option of overriding the veto.

Of course, there remains much opposition to the line-item veto among free-spending Democrats in Congress. They argue that the veto would give the president too much power over the federal purse. Some even question the constitutionality of the line-item veto, claiming it violates the separation-of-powers doctrine.

But the real violation of the separation of powers occurred 22 years ago when Congress passed the Budget and Impoundment Act with little protest from the politically weakened Nixon. This stripped the president of his power to impound or cancel unnecessary federal spending.

That's not to say that the line-item veto would have checked all deficit spending by Congress over the past 22 years.

But it certainly would have allowed the president to slow the growth in the yearly deficit.

Environmental politics drive Babbitt away

WASHINGTON — As chairman of the House Resources Committee, Rep. Don Young, R-Alaska, sometimes sounds like the Joseph McCarthy of the anti-environmental movement.

He has alleged that the federal government has been "infiltrated by the preservationists." He has intoned darkly of a "socialist movement" backing them, and he has protested mining reform by reading from the "Communist Manifesto" to colleagues.

Anderson

There are many echoes of the Red Menace in Young's rhetoric, down to the witch-hunt of a government official. Interior Secretary Bruce Babbitt and his staff are currently reeling from dubious and voluminous requests for documents. Under the guise of congressional oversight, Young is trying to muzzle the Clinton administration's chief environmental advocate by strangling his staff with paperwork.

Young's tactics may have been gleaned from a guidance memo that circulated among Republicans last year. It reads like a "how-to" manual for throwing a wrench into the gears of government:

"Demand documents, draft tough letters, and recall (Democrats) ... who forced Republican administrations to spend a lot of time on their requests," the memo reads. "Philosophy — the more time employees of the administration have (to take) to respond to legitimate congressional requests, the less time they have to carry out their agenda."

A Young spokesman said that his office has never seen the memo. "It's not harassment at all," he said. "It's oversight."

Young's agenda is to neutralize Babbitt, whose outspoken opposition to opening up federal lands for mining, logging, drilling and development has been a constant irritant for the Alaskan. Whether it is the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge — which Young wants to rename the "Arctic Oil Reserve" — or Alaska's Tongass National Forest, Young and Babbitt are at sword's point.

A bearded former riverboat captain, Young can be as earthy as Babbitt is erudite. He has earned a reputation for rabble-rousing, and even raunchy, behavior. When one of Babbitt's deputies defended the Marine Mammal Protection Act at a 1994 hearing, Young erupted in anger and brandished a walrus oosik (penis bone) during her testimony. Back in 1988, then-New York Democratic Rep. Robert Mrazek sponsored a bill to protect the Tongass, only to watch in horror as Young pulled out his Buck knife on the House floor and threatened political retribution.

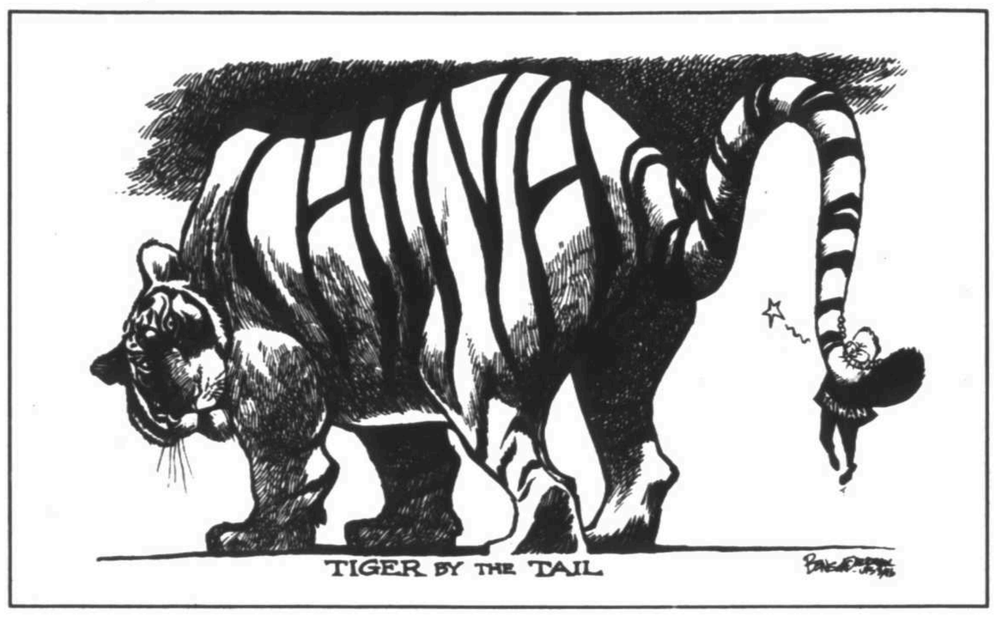

Babbitt is adept at playing to the sometimes primitive nature of his nemesis. After Young summoned him before the committee following the Republican sweep in the 1994 elections, Babbitt bowed:

"Mr. Chairman, I have no doubt about who the alpha-wolf is in this room."

It didn't take Babbitt long to shed his submissive pose. By the spring of 1995, when it became alarmingly apparent that the new GOP majority intended to gut laws protecting rivers, lakes and parks, Babbitt was pawing the ground for a fight. He accused Republicans of dismantling the National Park Service "through starvation" and watering down fish and wildlife protection laws.

With Interior all but idled, Babbitt fled Republican-occupied Washington, whipping up a grass roots guerrilla movement outside the Beltway. This month marks the one-year anniversary of what has become known as the National Heritage Van Tour, which hit 24 states and 67 cities last year.

CHARLEY REESE

Traditional labels fall short of intended ideals

The Republican revolution seems to have fizzled out. Even the proverbial dime's worth of difference between Republicans and Democrats is hard to detect. Maybe it's only a penny's worth today.

GATT? No difference. NAFTA? No difference. Mexican bailout? No difference. Troops to Bosnia? No difference. Trade policies? No difference. Corporate welfare? No difference. Foreign aid? No difference. Welfare reform? No difference. Monetary policy? No difference.

Reese

Time and again, the Republican leadership led its would-be rebels into surrendering to the Democratic position. The Senate just voted to fund Goals 2000, a federalization of education. Republicans caved in and agreed to keep AmeriCorps, Clinton's big boondoggle.

Did they get rid of the Legal Services Corp., a virtual nest of left-wing filers of class action suits who use the poor merely as cannon fodder in their ideological wars? No. Rep. Bill McCollum, a conservative Republican in Florida, is credited with saving the left-wing outfit. House Speaker Newt Gingrich saved the environmentalists and the liberal artsy-craftsy crowd.

Once again, people voted for change, and once again they got shortchanged. In this country it seems that voters get the rhetoric and money gets the results. It's no surprise so many people don't bother to vote.

Unless voting can produce actual changes in more than faces and labels, there is really no point in the exercise. Unless a way can be found to take big money out of the political process, I really don't see much hope for the future of self-government -- or for the incredible, shrinking American middle class.

I don't think a Republican Party that could not bring itself to kill off the Legal Services Corp. and the National Endowment for the Arts, or put a dent in foreign aid, is going to balance the federal budget no matter who is in the White House. Heck, those should have been easy cuts and would have been if, in fact, Republicans really were Conservatives.

Maybe it would help if we all took off our labels, jumped into the same mill pond and sorted ourselves out according to actual beliefs and philosophy rather than by merely customary labels.

If it's important for catsup makers to be truthful about the ingredients in the bottle, then it ought to be equally important for politicians to be truthful about their actual beliefs or lack thereof.

I think it would definitely help if we concentrated our energies on local, state and regional affairs and sought out good men and women with firm convictions and a desire to do something more in public office than stay there or act like an adjunct of the chamber of commerce.

We will need such people because, at some point, the issue of usurpation of power will have to be faced head-on.

Right now, people are ruled by the federal government. Only recently, a federal judge struck down an amendment to the state constitution of Arizona that the people had just adopted. The Californians' decision not to fund illegal immigrants' claims on welfare was knocked aside by a federal judge.

In Missouri, one federal judge got so drunk with power he ordered local elected officials to raise local taxes and build schools according to his desires. And the Supreme Court upheld him, proving, if anyone still doubted it, that the Constitution has been rendered meaningless.

The notion that the federal government can nullify any state law and any part of a state constitution, and can override the decision of any state court or body of elected officials, truly is a radical departure from the American tradition.

But I don't think faith in either the Republicans or the Democrats will yield anything but higher taxes and disappointment. Between Republicans betraying conservative principles and Democrats betraying liberal principles, what we have is a centrist shacking up of opportunists eager to fleece the middle class of both their security and their liberty.

MIKE ROYKO

It only takes a few people to mess things up

In the days of the Vietnam War, we believed in something called "the domino theory."

It held that if Vietnam fell to communism, so would the rest of that part of the world.

Fortunately, it didn't turn out that way. But I have discovered a new Chicago Domino Principle that has been scientifically tested and proven.

Royko

Simply put, the Chicago Domino Principle goes this way: "A mere handful of moderately stupid people can really screw things for hundreds of thousands of others."

The tests were conducted over two days this week and it was my privilege to be part of the experimental group. It worked this way:

At some unrecorded moment, motorists were cruising on the Kennedy Expressway, heading toward downtown.

As they got near North Avenue, they suddenly felt compelled to hit their brakes and slow down, even though there was no genuine need to do so. No gory accident, no flashing lights of a proud state trooper who had pounced on some unfortunate soul driving a beater. Not even a big pothole.

They slowed in order to gawk at the partially finished portrait of Dennis Rodman that was being painted on the side of a building that overlooks the expressway.

This caused the motorists behind them to hit their brakes, even if they weren't at all interested in gawking at Rodman's face.

And so it began, with a monster-size traffic jam stretching back miles to where the Kennedy and the Edens Expressways come together and beyond.

On the second day of the Rodman gawking, I found myself creeping along well after the morning rush should have subsided.

A friend in the car said: "It's the fault of some disc jockeys."

Why do you blame disc jockeys?

"Because they've been babbling about the Rodman thing. Then some morons hear it on the car radio, and they have to slow down to take a look. And we wind up with this kind of mess."

No, I disagree. You can't blame disc jockeys. It is their nature to babble, just as it is the way of pigeons to make doo-doo on our heads. You can't blame them -- pigeons or disc jockeys -- because it is their way. They can't help themselves.

"Then whose fault is it?"

It's the fault of those who first hit the brakes when they didn't have to. We'll never know who they are, which is a pity. If we did, we could organize a group of civic-minded citizens to toss a few ropes over a tree limb, hoist them up, and let their worthless carcasses twist in the wind until the vultures have had their fill.

"I don't think we have vultures around here."

Well, crows or woodpeckers will do.

"That's a little harsh, isn't it?"

Not really, when you think of the enormity of their offense. Who knows how many tens of thousands of non-gawkers were late to their jobs, to important business meetings, sales opportunities, medical appointments, court appearances or illicit romantic trysts, all because a few inconsiderate boobs had to gawk at Dennis Rodman's picture?

"So what we're talking about is lack of accepting individual responsibility and consideration for others."

Exactly. We must ponder whether any of the first gawkers considered the potential enormity of their actions, if they asked themselves: "If I suddenly hit the brakes to gawk at Dennis Rodman, how will it impact upon the lives, the aspirations and the schedules of those behind me? Am I engaging in a selfish act?"

"Do you think any of them engaged in such self-analysis?"

No. More likely they thought: "Me, gawk! Others, blah!"

"But what about the responsibility of the men's clothing company that put Rodman's face up there to advertise their products? What is their name, Bugsy and Kritters? Shouldn't these two merchants share some of the blame?"

Actually, there is no real Bugsy or Kritters. Although I don't recall their names, I once met the two owners of the company at a dinner and they urged me to come to their store to buy clothes.

"And did you?"

Absolutely not. Both were dressed like used-car salesmen or, even worse, TV sports anchors. When it comes to clothing, I'm not a dandy, but I have some standards. And the fact that they now use Rodman in their advertising indicates they are seeking the Halloween clientele.

"But aren't they at fault?"

No, they are simply trying to make a buck, which is the patriotic thing to do.

"Well, we're approaching the Rodman portrait and everybody is hitting the brakes. And there it is. He still looks like a big goof."

Yes. It kind of makes me proud to be a Chicagoan.

Authorities urge avoidance of Freeman compound

JORDAN, Mont. (AP) — The Freemen holed up on an isolated farm where they claim to have their own legal system should surrender and face an established court, a leader of another militant group said Sunday.

Others urged that outsiders stay away and not get involved in the stand-off between federal authorities and the Freemen, barricaded on a wheat farm on the snow-covered prairie of east-central Montana.

More than 100 FBI agents have been keeping watch on the Freemen's compound, 30 miles outside Jordan, since two leaders of the group were arrested on March 25.

A third member of the group surrendered Saturday. Authorities won't say how many people are still at the farm, but 14 of them are believed to be wanted on various state and federal charges.

Neighbors said the Freemen have built bunkers and openly stockpiled food, fuel and weapons — possibly including military armaments.

'If anyone from another state wishes to come visit Montana, they'd better do it without their guns,.'

— John Trochmann, Milita of Montana founder

FBI agents have twice stopped a pair of sympathizers trying to reach the farm.

"Stay home, and let the negotiators and the people on the site handle this problem, so we don't have a Waco or a Ruby Ridge," John Parsons of the Tri-State Militia of South Dakota said Sunday.

"The key thing here is that we need a peaceful solution to this problem. They need to come out and face their forum in a court of law and state their problems in a court of law under a system that is just," Parsons said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

The Freemen deny the legitimacy of the government. Members call their compound, a cluster of houses and other buildings on a 960-acre wheat farm, "Justus Township" and insist they have their own laws and their own courts.

The Washington Post reported Sunday that the FBI was considering an offer from white separatist Randy Weaver, whose wife and son were killed by federal agents in 1992 in a shootout at Ruby Ridge, Idaho, to mediate an end to the standoff.

Weaver and outside militia groups should stay home and let officials here try to resolve the situation peacefully, said Sen. Max Baucus, D-Mont.

People like Weaver tend to create division and "probably are going to create more problems than they are going to solve," Baucus said on CBS's "Face the Nation."

"If anyone from another state wishes to come visit Montana, they'd better do it without their guns," John Trochmann, founder of the Militia of Montana, said on ABC. "We don't need help from other states. We would like to see a peaceful settlement to this."

A more militant militia leader, Norman Olson of the Michigan Militia, said on "Face the Nation" that he plans to come to Montana to assess the situation. He said his group also intends to organize a convoy to bring food and other basic necessities to the Freemen compound.

And the Idaho-based Freemen Patriots of the Northwest announced plans to stage a demonstration at Lewistown, Mont., 120 miles west of Jordan, to protest the federal government's actions in Garfield County.

"If we have enough numbers, we could prevent another Waco from happening through peaceful resistance," said Edward LeStage, spokesman for the group based in Kamiah, Idaho.

Death row inmate wins lonely hearts

MIAMI (AP) — Manuel Pardo Jr., is profiting from the long, empty hours he's spending on death row.

Pardo, 39, a former Sweetwater police officer awaiting execution for nine 1986 slayings, places lonely-hearts ads in tabloids and carries on torrid correspondences with lonely, vulnerable women. Then, he scams them out of hundreds, sometimes thousands, of dollars, prison officials say.

Twenty-six women have sent Pardo money since January 1995, according to prison records.

At one point, Pardo had $3,530.08 in his prison canteen account. Prison officials say they are powerless to stop him since nothing in the Constitution prohibits Pardo from requesting or receiving small sums of money.

"I know it sounds cruel, but basically our hands are tied," said Debbie Buchanan, spokeswoman for the state Department of Corrections. "He has broken no rules."

But he has broken many hearts.

Barbara Ford, 46, an Ohio resident who earned $7,500 last year cleaning houses, sent Pardo $430 from May to November after reading an ad he placed in a newspaper.

"FLA. 116-156 CORRECTIONAL INSTITUTE INMATE," the ad began. "Ex-cop Vietnam vet. Took law into own hands and ended up on Death Row. He needs letters from sensitive-understanding female, for real-honest relationship."

About three weeks after Ford responded, a letter arrived from Pardo, along with some favorable clippings from his career as a police officer.

"I want one special lady in my life," he wrote. "I don't play emotional games cause I hate emotional games. I also hate liars and users."

Ten months earlier, he had written pretty much the same thing to Betty Ihem, 54, of Oklahoma.

By the time Ford answered Pardo's ad, Pardo and Ihem were calling each other husband and wife, though they never met face to face or heard each other's voice.

Bomb-damaged churches unite for Palm Sunday service

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — Hundreds of worshipers whose churches were damaged in the federal building bombing carried palm fronds to a makeshift chapel near the blast site for a Palm Sunday service.

"We are determined that evil will not triumph over good," the Rev. Nick Harris said as worshipers huddled together in the 37-degree chill, waving palm fronds and shouting "Amen!"

The April 19 bombing damaged several churches in the blocks surrounding the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building. The First Methodist Church and St. Joseph's Cathedral, which stand immediately east and west of the bomb site, were the worst hit.

The Roman Catholic cathedral was restored, but Harris said he plans to build a new, larger church that will incorporate the parking lot now occupied by the Heartland Chapel.

"That is our commitment to this corner, to this place," Harris said, pointing to the razed bombing site.

The multi-denominational chapel, which has been a magnet for sightseers, is simply a small roof held up by posts. Benches surround a plain altar that held teddy bears, flowers and small American flags at Sunday's service.

Patrol cars and mounted Oklahoma County Sheriff's deputies led the parade in a nine-block procession from St. Luke's Methodist Church to the chapel.

As the group passed the bombing site, cheerful conversations were muted out of respect for the 169 people killed in the blast.

"I'm just here for the greater glory of my Lord," said Shirley Clark, raising palm fronds toward the sky. Clark attends City Church, which was also damaged by the blast. Like most of the many churches near the bombing site, Ms. Clark's reopened a few days after the bombing.

Palm Sunday marks the beginning of the Christian Holy Week and commemorates the story of Jesus Christ's entrance into Jerusalem, when his followers laid palm branches in his path. The week culminates in Easter Sunday, celebrating Christ's resurrection.

"This is a great experience for the kids on Palm Sunday," said Renee Gehrig, who was surrounded by children from Faith Family Center in suburban Edmond.

"We had friends and family that were affected by the bombing," Ms. Gehrig said as the children wove palm fronds into the chain-link fence that surrounds the bombing site.

Timothy McVeigh and Terry Nichols are scheduled to go on trial later this year on federal murder and conspiracy charges in the bombing. The two men could face the death penalty if convicted.

Safety official's warnings shoud have been followed

By Fred Bayles
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — When a Maryland MARC commuter train smashed into Amtrak's Capital Limited at Silver Springs, Md., unleashing a fireball and leaving 11 people dead in the wreckage, the government sprang into action.

Four days after the Feb. 16 crash, the Federal Railroad Administration issued this emergency order: From now on, engineers on trains without automatic alarms must drive slower and call to other crew members when warning lights flash past from track side.

Fast action? It seemed that way.

But in fact, the emergency order was 20 years too late — a harsh echo of earlier warnings ignored.

Federal safety officials had urged the FRA to require such "signal calling," as early as 1976. They repeatedly lobbied for a system that would have stopped the trains before they hit. And they pleaded for changes that would have saved passengers trapped in the resulting smoke and fire.

Time and again, they were rejected. And the toll has been bloody.

Records show dozens of accidents — including five this year alone — might have been prevented if safety warnings were heeded. Instead they were derailed by industry opposition, bureaucratic delays and a reluctance by federal regulators to push for change.

"These accidents were waiting to happen because of the inaction by industry and regulators," says James Hall, chairman of the National Transportation Safety Board. "In the 1980s there was almost a stone wall thrown up by the FRA to our recommendations."

It has been a bad year for the nation's railroads already. Nineteen wrecks have left 22 dead, at least 230 injured, forced the evacuation of thousands of people and cost well over $70 million.

Industry and federal officials downplay the last three months as an anomaly after years of improving safety statistics.

But there is a connection among some of the worst crashes: Preliminary investigations found the same problems NTSB officials have warned of for years, sometimes decades.

"We have an industry that does not like to be regulated and, historically, an agency reluctant to regulate," said Barry Sweedler, director of the NTSB's office of safety recommendations.

Over the past 25 years, the FRA has rejected one out of four NTSB safety recommendations. This rejection rate — even worse in the 1980s — is among highest of federal transportation agencies.

At times NTSB suggestions even drew sharp rebukes from the FRA.

Following a 1993 head-on crash in Kelso, Wash., that killed five people, the NTSB repeated earlier pleas for industry and government to explore costs and benefits of an automated system to keep trains apart.

The American Association of Railroads said the billions the system was estimated to cost "cannot be economically justified at this time."

When NTSB suggested the cost be balanced by savings the system would bring in improved efficiency, FRA reaction was even blunter.

It is not the government's role, the agency wrote, to "substitute our judgment for the judgment of senior railroad managers regarding matters within their special expertise and responsibilities as corporate officers."

Jolene Molitoris, who inherited many of these problems when she was appointed as FRA administrator in 1993, distances her agency from its past decisions.

An enthusiastic booster for high-speed rail networks, she wears a gemstone locomotive on her lapel. Molitoris talks of 39 different rule changes now going through the regulatory process. She talks of trying to reach consensus among the often contentious railroad managers and unions.

But she admits to the failings of the past.

"February was probably the greatest confluence of tragedy on the rails that has ever been," she says.

Mysterious truck driver a real animal

Associated Press

UHRICHSVILLE, Ohio (AP) — Patrolman James Myers said he thought he had a drunk driver on his hands when he spotted a pickup pulling out of a shopping center parking lot without any lights.

The truck turned onto a city street, ran over a median and went onto a private lawn, where it narrowly missed a house and a parked truck. It went through a ditch and into a muddy cornfield, police said.

Myers said he thought the driver might be evading him, so he drove his cruiser out into the field — and promptly got stuck.

When the truck turned back toward the cruiser, Myers realized the driver was a medium-sized black-and-white collie mix that did not appear to be drunk or intentionally evading the police.

The pickup kept going into a second field, where it stopped after hitting a utility pole. The dog was unhurt.

At about the same time Monday night, Brett Donohoe, 32, called police to report his pickup truck had been stolen from the parking lot.

Donohoe explained he had found the stray dog and put it in his truck because he felt it needed some attention. The dog apparently knocked the vehicle into gear while Donohoe was away.

Donohoe was cited for leaving his car unattended with the engine running.

Plaza Club members take part in program to help children at High Sky Ranch.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A local dining club's current membership drive is helping children and supporting the arts.

Since the beginning of the year, the Plaza Club — a membership-driven private dining facility — has waived its $500 initiation deposit for individuals in lieu of a $50 donation to one of three charities.

"It's been really helpful for us. We've got quite a bit of money from the drive," said Laurie Boldrick, development director for High Sky Children's Ranch. "It goes to the programs that we provide for abused, neglected and troubled children."

High Sky Children's Ranch — expected to help about 500 children this year in residential and non-residential programs — has received almost $1,500 in donations through the Plaza Club membership drive.

Prospective members of the Plaza Club can also fulfill membership requirements by making a donation to either Midland Community Theatre or the Midland-Odessa Symphony.

Sonia Duffin, membership director for the Plaza Club, said not everyone wants to make a $50 donation — some want to give more. "I've had $300 donations. I've had some people write a check for $100 to each of the charities," she said.

Since the membership drive kicked off, the Plaza Club has had about 80 new members with charitable donations totaling more than $3,000, according to Ms. Duffin.

The program was initiated by the Plaza Club's board of governors as a way to give back to the community, Ms. Duffin said.

But "the membership at large chose the three charities. We asked the members who they would like to donate to and that's who they came up with," Ms. Duffin said.

The Plaza Club has served Midlanders for about 12 years and currently has about 550 members. In addition to the initial membership charge, members pay a $50 monthly fee and are entitled to visit about 250 other clubs, Ms. Duffin said.

A deadline for the membership drive hasn't been set, Ms. Duffin said, but is expected to continue through April.

Thank You Note ...

On Saturday, March 23, the 28th Annual MISD Band and Orchestra Chili Supper and Concert was held at Lee High School. We would like to express our heartfelt thanks to the parents of the Midland and Lee High Band and Orchestra Booster Clubs for their support and hard work in making this event such a wonderful success for our students. One time each year we come together from our individual organizations to join as a group to benefit all the instrumental music students in Midland and it was such a pleasure to be a part of this year's fundraiser. Our special thanks go to Charlie Stephens at Albertsons, and Vince Garcia from Taco Bell for their very generous contributions to the chili supper. And to Sue Hendry and her staff at the LHS cafeteria and Joe Porras and the custodians who gave enthusiastically of their time: We couldn't have done it without you. Last but certainly not least, thank you, Midland, for encouraging and supporting our young people. They really do notice when their efforts are being recognized by your attendance at their concerts and benefits. Thanks to all who participated and we're looking forward to next year.

Jetiquette: Middle guy should own armrests

Ahhhh, I thought. I can finally relax. After racing around for several days making all the necessary preparations to get out of town on business, I found myself finally able to push the button on the left arm rest and recline. Relative peace and quiet at last.

Patterson

It was on an airplane at a gate at D-FW airport where I finally felt relaxed, and, as I was pleasantly surprised to find out, apparently free of a lifelong fear of flying.

I love my life and my family, don't get me wrong. But the trip allowed me, well, a little freedom. No screaming kids. No deadlines to meet. No alarms to beepbeepbeep in my ear. Just me, blue sky, a good book, an aisle seat, a week-long respite ... and ... and ...

"I wanna sit by my mommy! "

... and a screaming kid.

Just as I had nudged back in my chair, I looked up and saw the last three people boarding the plane.

There were, as it so happened, just three seats left on the plane. There was one next to me, one a couple of rows back, and one further back.

"I wanna sit by my mommy! " the six-year-old kid's voice pierced the silence, a silence that had previously been broken only by the sound of what seemed to be disgruntled pasta workers throwing trunk-loads of linguini that would later be lunch into the forward cabin area.

"I wanna sit by my mommy! " He screamed again. He was a bit annoying, but then I pictured myself in the same boat. Or plane, as it were. I'd probably want to sit by my mommy, too, and I'm in my 30s. But more importantly, I wouldn't want any of my kids separated from me or their mother, sitting among strangers on a three-hour flight. It can be quite intimidating for a child to be forced to endure such an ordeal.

I was overcome by a flash of generosity.

"Here, I'll move, no problem. He can sit here."

I figured maybe if I act now, the kid will grow up to be president and one day appoint me as his press secretary. (Of course I'd be 103 by then). I shuddered at the thought of one day being a successor to Marlin Fitzwater and made the sacrifice anyway.

So I gave up my aisle seat, my leg room and my momentary peace of mind so the boy and his mom could sit together. I moved two rows back and found myself in the middle. The dreaded E chair.

To the left sat a woman who actually read along with the flight attendant as she detailed the emergency flotation procedures.

Good grief! A rookie. What if she has motion sickness and hurls?! What will I do? I'm wedged forever in the E chair! I'll be unable to escape!

To the right sat a college student probably on her way home from spring break. I hoped and prayed she would keep all of her vacation misadventures to herself. I couldn't bear the thought of listening to what it's like to be young again for three unending hours. So I opened my book and started reading.

We rolled to the end of the runway and the college kid in Seat F pulled the shade down. Right there in front of 157 passengers, she self-annointed herself

DAVE BARRY

In 1960, the national pastime was THE great game

As I ponder the start of yet another baseball season, what is left of my mind drifts back to the fall of 1960, when I was a student at Harold C. Crittenden Junior High ("Where the Leaders of Tomorrow Are Developing the Acne of Today").

Barry

The big baseball story that year was the World Series between the New York Yankees and the Pittsburgh Pirates. Today, for sound TV viewership reasons, all World Series game are played after most people, including many of the players, have gone to bed. But in 1960 the games had to be played in the daytime, because the electric light had not been invented yet. Also, back then the players and owners had not yet discovered the marketing benefits of sporadically cancelling entire seasons.

The result was that in those days young people were actually interested in baseball, unlike today's young people, who are much more interested in basketball, football, soccer and downloading dirty pictures from the Internet. But in my youth, baseball ruled. Almost all of us boys played in Little League, a character-building experience that helped me develop a personal relationship with God.

"God," I would say, when I was standing in deep right field — the coach put me in right field only because it was against the rules to put me in Sweden, where I would have done less damage to the team — "please please PLEASE don't let the ball come to me."

But of course God enjoys a good prank as much as the next infallible deity, which is why, when He heard me pleading with Him, He always took time out from His busy schedule to make sure the next batter hit a towering blast that would, upon re-entering the Earth's atmosphere, come down directly where I would have been standing, if I had stood still, which I never did. I lunged around cluelessly in frantic, random circles, so that the ball always landed a minimum of 40 feet from where I wound up standing, desperately thrusting out my glove, which was a Herb Score model that, on my coach's recommendation, I had treated with neat's-foot oil so it would be supple. Looking back, I feel bad that innocent neats had to sacrifice their feet for the sake of my glove. I would have been just as effective, as a fielder, if I had been wearing a bowling shoe on my hand, or a small aquarium.

But even though I stunk at it, I was into baseball. My friends and I collected baseball cards, the kind that came in a little pack with a dusty, pale-pink rectangle of linoleum-textured World War II surplus bubble gum that was far less edible than the cards themselves. Like every other male my age who collected baseball cards as a boy, I now firmly believe that at one time I had the original rookie cards of Mickey Mantle, Jackie Robinson, Ty Cobb, Babe Ruth, Jim Thorpe, Daniel Boone, Goliath, etc., and that I'd be able to sell my collection for $163 million today except my mom threw it out.

My point is that we cared deeply about baseball back then, which meant that we were passionate about the 1960 Pirates-Yankees World Series matchup. My class was evenly divided between those who were Pirate fans and those who were complete morons. (I never have cared for the Yankees, and for a very sound reason: The Yankees are evil.)

We followed every pitch of every game. It wasn't easy, because the weekday games started when we were still in school, which for some idiot reason was not called off for the World Series. This meant that certain students — I am not naming names, because even now, it could go on our Permanent Records — had to carry concealed transistor radios to class. A major reason why the Russians got so far ahead of us, academically, during the Cold War is that while Russian students were listening to their teachers explain the cosine, we were listening, via concealed earphones, to announcers explain how a bad hop nailed Tony Kubek in the throat.

That Series went seven games, and I vividly remember how it ended. School was out for the day, and I was heading home, pushing my bike up a steep hill, listening to my cheapo little radio, my eyes staring vacantly ahead, my mind locked on the game. A delivery truck came by, and the driver stopped and asked if he could listen. Actually, he more or less TOLD me he was going to listen; I said OK.

The truck driver turned out to be a rabid Yankee fan. The game was very close and we stood on opposite sides of my bike for the final two innings, rooting for opposite teams, him chain-smoking Lucky Strike cigarettes, both of us hanging on every word coming out of my tinny little speaker.

And, of course, if you were around back then and did not live in Russia, you know what happened: God, in a sincere effort to make up for all those fly balls he directed toward me in Little League, had bill Mazeroski — Bill Mazeroski! — hit a home run to win it for the Pirates.

I was insane with joy. The truck driver was devastated. But I will never forget what he said to me. He looked me square in the eye, one baseball fan to another, after a tough but fair fight — and he said a seriously bad word. Several, in fact. Then he got in his truck and drove away.

That was the best game I ever saw.

PATTERSON: This view of history hard to swallow

(From 1B)

Queen of Aisle 18. She made the sweeping decision that she would not be bothered by the scenery for the next three hours, nor would anyone else on our row, including me. She just blocked everyone's view without bothering to politely ask anyone else's opinion.

I was bothered by her blanket assumption. Just like a college kid, I thought.

So, I fought back. I made the decision that since she was going to elect herself queen that the armrest should belong to me. So I took it. I glanced over to the rookie in Seat D and noticed she was now following along with the change-in-cabin-pressure instructions and decided, what the hey, I'll go ahead and snatch her armrest, too. So I did.

I felt good about claiming what was rightfully mine.

I figured if I was good enough to give up my seat for some crying kid, both armrests should be awarded to me. It's the law of the sky. Jetiquette, I believe they should probably call it, if they don't already.

A couple of hours passed and we made our final approach. The pilot was, in fact, advising the attendants to please prepare for arrival.

Right then, 2 hours and 50 minutes into our flight, the college kid in F decides she'll lift the flap. Finally, I was able to see something more than a white shade.

Unfortunately, the college kid had what seemed to be a little problem with sudden air-pressure buildup in her ears. She was constantly having to drop her jaw to clear her ear canal of the pressure.

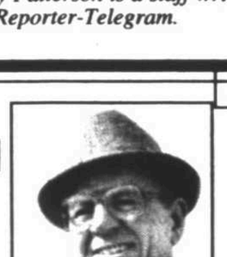

I could finally see out the window. The picturesque Washington monument in the background stood proudly. Unfortunately, I was forced to look at all the historic landmarks through the mouth of a college kid with an ear-canal problem.

No wonder I hate to fly.

Chemist says he is no serial killer

HOUSTON (AP) — A former chemist from Midland says he's not the serial killer responsible for the deaths of young women in the Mexican border city of Cuidad Juarez.

Sharif Sharif, 49, says he expects to be released from jail within a couple of weeks.

The recent discovery of more murder victims vindicates him and proves that the true killer of at least 15 young women is still at large, Sharif said.

Police six months ago said they were certain that Sharif, jailed on a rape charge, was the serial killer who had murdered at least four of the nine young women who were found stabbed or strangled last year. Now, within a three-week span, at a time when Sharif has been in jail, six more bodies have surfaced.

"I'm 100 percent innocent," Sharif told the Houston Chronicle in an interview at the CeReSo jail in Juarez, a city of 1.2 million across the Rio Grande from El Paso. "I didn't even know those murdered girls, and they don't have a trace of evidence."

Sharif, an Egyptian who emigrated to the United States 21 years ago, moved to Juarez from Midland in May 1994 to help set up a Mexican border plant for the U.S. company that employs him.

"The police and prosecutor are so afraid of losing their jobs that they continue to stick with the story that I did it," Sharif said. "They are either covering up for someone and may even know who it is or they simply don't have a clue and have botched the investigation."

Sharif insists Mexican authorities trumped up a sexual assault and battery charge against him last October.

When Mexican state prosecutors attempted last week — more than five months after Sharif's arrest — to file a charge against him for murder, a Chihuahua state district judge said there was not enough evidence.

Most citizens of Juarez are somewhat jaded to routine newspaper accounts of killings by rival drug lords or dueling gang members. Last year, Juarez had 295 murders, making it second in Mexico to Mexico City in murders per capita.

But residents generally felt immune to such violence until the serial killings.

Before Sharif's arrest, many parents wouldn't let their children go out alone or after dark. Teen-age girls cut their hair and dressed in baggy clothes to be less attractive to the mysterious killer. Juarez's busy nightclubs and restaurants reported a drop in business.

The latest victims were discovered in a hilly neighborhood on the opposite side of town from where the other victims were found last fall but there are many similarities in the slayings.

The six most recent cases involve girls, ages 15 to 17, who closely match the physical description of the nine earlier victims. All were slim and petite, almost always with long, dark hair. Most of the bodies were seminude. At least several had been raped, though some bodies were so decomposed it was impossible to tell.

DEAR ABBY

A little effort from every adult may curb abuse

DEAR ABBY: During the past year, we all have been made aware of tragic cases of severe child abuse and neglect. Sadly, three children die each day in our country as a result of maltreatment. Those who died, most of them under the age of 5, were harmed by the same people who were responsible for their care.

Van Buren

During April, National Child Abuse Prevention Month, thousands of people in small towns and large cities throughout the nation work tirelessly to encourage public awareness of child abuse and its prevention. The National Committee to Prevent Child Abuse (NCPCA) supports these efforts and encourages everyone to become involved in preventing child abuse before it occurs. If every adult did just a little, fewer children would suffer pain, injury or death due to abuse.

SEVEN STEPS TO STAMP OUT CHILD ABUSE

1. REPORT suspected abuse or neglect. Inform authorities if you suspect that children are being harmed. Your concern may mean that children are protected from an abusive environment.

2. ADVOCATE for services to help families. Communities need comprehensive services that address issues which affect families. Parenting programs, health care and housing needs are vital to maintaining healthy children and families.

3. VOLUNTEER at a local child abuse program. Parent support groups, crisis centers and hotlines are typical programs that often welcome volunteers. Check your telephone directory for the names of agencies in your area.

4. HELP A FRIEND, NEIGHBOR OR RELATIVE. Someone you know may be struggling with parenting responsibilities. Offer a sympathetic ear or a helping hand. Assisting occasionally with child care or offering to locate sources of community help can be a tremendous boost to someone under stress.

5. HELP YOURSELF. Recognize the signs that indicate outside help is needed. If you feel overwhelmed, constantly sad, angry and out of control, get help. Remember, asking for help is a sign of strength, not weakness.

6. SUPPORT AND SUGGEST programs on child abuse prevention for local organizations. Kiwanis Clubs, Exchange Clubs, PTA, church groups and women's and men's clubs all offer excellent opportunities for raising public awareness in the community.

7. PROMOTE programs in schools. Teaching prevention strategies can help to keep children safe from those who would abuse them.

Abby, your readers are the most caring people in the world, and I know that once alerted, many of them will take this national problem to heart. That's what it takes, individuals as well as organizations. — JOY BYERS, NATIONAL COMMITTEE TO PREVENT CHILD ABUSE

DEAR JOY: I was shocked to learn that more than 3 million children are reported as victims of child abuse and neglect each year. I urge readers to contact the NCPCA for more information on preventing child abuse. Call 1-800-55-NCPCA to request material, or write P.O. Box 2866, Chicago, Ill. 60690.

HEALTH BRIEFING

Cancer risk

The treatments that so often cure Hodgkin's disease in children create a sharply higher risk of developing a second cancer later in life, according to a new study. The effects of radiation and chemotherapy on growing cells are probably responsible for the 18-fold risk of leukemia and solid tumors, especially breast cancer, among Hodgkin's survivors, said the authors of the study in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Fifteen medical centers comprising the Late Effects Study Group followed 1,380 young Hodgkin's survivors for an average of about 11½ years. Statistically, 4.4 cancers would have been expected to occur in a group that size; in fact, there were 88 second cancers, including leukemia, lymphoma and several types of solid tumors. Most dramatically, women developed breast cancer at a rate 75 times greater than expected — a 35 percent chance of getting breast cancer by age 40.

The researchers caution that the risk of second cancers may be somewhat less today, because newer forms of treatment are less carcinogenic. And, wrote Drs. Sarah S. Donaldson and Steven L. Hancock of Stanford University in an accompanying editorial, far fewer patients died of the second cancers than would have died if they had not been treated aggressively for Hodgkin's.

Questions asked

Patients with severe arthritis who receive artificial hips often have dramatic relief of pain and immobility, but it is expensive: The US health care system spends $2.5 to $3 billion a year on the operations. A new study has found the implants are generally cost-effective and improve people's quality of life, but may not be cost-effective in very old patients.

Researchers from Northwestern University Medical School found that the operations, which cost $20,000 to $25,000 each, are cheaper in the long run than allowing the arthritis to worsen and forcing the individual into costly long-term care.

The researchers, led by Dr. Rowland W. Chang, said in a report in the current Journal of the American Medical Association that it's not clear whether the United States is spending an appropriate amount on hip implants. For example, they found that Massachusetts surgeons tended to perform implants in patients who were less disabled by their hip arthritis than did surgeons in Canada. The scientists called for further study on this issue.

Prenatal visits

It is well known that women who receive prenatal care are less likely to have childbirth complications, but how much care is necessary? In an effort to answer this question, researchers compared the birth outcomes of two groups of pregnant women (all were considered low-risk) who had differing numbers of prenatal visits to health providers.

The researchers, from the Kaiser Permanente managed health care system, found that although one group made an average of 10 prenatal visits and the other group about 13 visits, there were no significant differences in the outcomes, and the two groups were equally satisfied. The authors of the report in the Journal of the American Medical Association, led by Dr. Robert S. McDuffie Jr., said it appears that the lower number of visits could be safe and at the same time save a large amount of money — as long as the women were at low risk of having complications.

Vitamin C help

A preliminary study of Vitamin C given to patients with heart disease suggest that the substance may help stiffened blood vessels open more widely, say investigators at Boston University School of Medicine.

Besides becoming clogged with cholesterol, the arteries of people with coronary heart disease often dilate less well when when the heart is under stress and needs more blood. Researchers led by Dr. Joseph Vita tested the dilator response in 26 heart disease patients who received a high dose of Vitamin C and 20 patients who got an inactive placebo.

An ultrasound test showed markedly greater dilation in the vessels of those who got the Vitamin C. The authors said the results merit wider tests of the vitamin in heart disease.

High school teaches medical skills

By Melanie Bruney

CAMDEN, N.J. (AP) — Khalil Murrell knows he wants to become a doctor. At 15, he's already pursuing his goal. He's a sophomore at a high school in Camden where students learn about health care professions.

The Medical Arts High School, located at Our Lady of Lourdes Medical Center, is believed to be the only one of its kind in the area and one of only a handful in the country.

Hundreds of students from around the city applied for the first class, but only 60 were chosen based on an essay, attendance, grades and teacher recommendations. Classes began in September 1994.

"I want to do my best," says Murrell. "I definitely want to be a doctor."

The school is a rare success story in Camden, a district with about 20,000 students that has struggled to improve test scores and avoid a state takeover. About 500 youngsters are on the waiting list for the medical arts school.

"I think it's a good opportunity for me," said sophomore Johnelle Johnson, 16. "I really like it."

AP Laserphoto

Kelyana Scott, left, and Khalil Murrell, students at the Camden, N.J., Medical Arts High School, react as they see a preserved skeleton on Jan. 4 at the Mutter Museum of Medicine in Philadelphia. The students' high school, located a Our Lady of Lourdes Medical Center, emphasizes teaching about health care professions.

Last year, all students at the medical arts school passed the state proficiency exam, said Principal Stephanie A. Reynolds. Truancy is not a problem and there have been no fights since the school opened, she said.

"They're here because they want to be here," Reynolds said. "The commitment on all levels is extremely high."

Reynolds, 40, a former business teacher, strolls purposefully down the narrow hallway as students change classes. She greets students by name or calls out, "Hi, baby, how are you today?"

"We push them, prod them, encourage them and hug them," Reynolds, the mother of two sons, said during a recent interview at the school.

Attendance averages about 96 percent daily, according to Reynolds. Only two students have dropped out — one moved from the area and the other took exception to the dress code.

Discipline is strict at the medical arts high school. Students wear uniforms every day except Friday, which is casual day. They wear lab coats when going on field trips. The girls are barred from wearing dark nail polish or large earrings or dyeing their hair outrageous colors. Hats, dark glasses and sneakers are also not allowed.

Most students agree with the stringent rules. Messages are posted around the school, reminding them that "respect and good manners are a must."

"The other schools are kind of bad," said Maria Sanchez, 15, who rides two buses to school. "This one gave me a chance. It's fun, interesting and educational."

Students at the high school interact with medical professionals. Camden has a booming health care industry, with thousands of people working at several hospitals and research facilities.

"We go deep into the medical field," says freshman Lamar Oates, 14, who decided he wanted to become a doctor after undergoing a kidney transplant two years ago.

Classes are structured around the required state curriculum, but the health care profession is integrated in the lessons. The school day is divided between the classroom and field trips to health care facilities.

"The work we do every day is challenging," says sophomore LaRhonda Pritchett, 15, the student government president. She has wanted to become a nurse, she says, since she was 2 years old.

In the computer lab, students work on producing medical pamphlets, learning communication and computer skills at the same time. One student researched diseases influenced by the environment.

Across the hallway in the chemistry class, eight students huddled around the blackboard using calculators to solve complex problems. They cooperate willingly when teacher James Gibbs says, "Let's take it off and do it again."

"They give us hard work and make us think," says Johnson.

The school day begins at 8 a.m. and ends at 2:48 p.m. There is no study hall; students go to a nearby YMCA for gym. Lunch is brought in from a nearby school because there is no cafeteria.

Currently, the school has about 100 freshmen and sophomores who attend classes in eight rooms. The school is housed on the fourth floor of a nursing school adjoining the hospital.

Students are not only expected to do well, but also are required to tutor their peers, Reynolds said. Some also volunteer at Our Lady of Lourdes Medical Center before class, and the school has adopted a nursing home in Camden.

"There is hope for this generation," says Reynolds. "These kids genuinely care."

Voters in Camden recently approved a $3.1 million bond referendum to renovate an old building about a block away as a permanent home for the medical arts school. It is scheduled to open in September.

Reynolds said enrollment will nearly double and the school will have as many as 450 students in two years.

The first class will graduate in 1998.

'Extenders' provide doctors with extra sets of hands

By Leah J. Allen

ARDMORE, Okla. (AP) — With the flu season in full swing, when 3-year-old Dilon Sawyers began complaining of a sore throat along with his earache and runny nose, his mother Karen knew it was time to see the doctor.

After getting her older son off to school and getting dressed for her own job, Ms. Sawyers headed for Family Practice Associates with Dilon in tow. Like any mother taking a child to the doctor, Ms. Sawyers knew she could be in for a long wait, considering the season. Instead, she and Dilon were taken to an examining room fairly quickly, where they were met by the smiling face of Laurel Foster. A pediatric nurse practitioner, Ms. Foster considers herself an extra set of hands for Drs. Thomas McCulloh and Michael Carnahan.

These days, more and more patients are being met by health care professionals who operate under such titles as nurse practitioner or physician assistant. While the roles may seem new and sometimes confusing to the general public, those in the respective fields say their presence in doctors' offices is fairly simple.

"We're here to make the doc's job easier so he can see more patients and do more business," Physician Assistant Robert Lynch said. A simple way of putting into perspective the training and education involved in his field, but an accurate account, nonetheless. Both PAs and NPs are certified in their programs through national and state boards. Nurse practitioners build upon nursing skills, while physician assistants start with basic science.

The scope of their duties and responsibilities varies, but each serves to help extend the parameters of the supervising doctor. For Ms. Foster, her job is to do a cursory examination of patients, diagnose the illness and suggest a treatment. The doctor then comes in to concur and, if necessary, write a prescription.

"I'm really a physician extender to help the doctor be in 12 places at one time," she said. "I can diagnose minor, acute and chronic illnesses and help educate the patient on prevention and how to stay healthy. If a person came in and was really sick and needed to be in the hospital, I'm not qualified to do that. Otherwise, my role is the same as the physician." Except nurse practitioners in Oklahoma don't have the authority to write prescriptions, something NPs hope will be changed soon.

Ms. Foster, like fellow NP Margaret Polly Claborn, director of Memorial Hospitals' Education and Employee Health department, were registered nurses for several years before deciding to upgrade their education. RNs, Ms. Foster said, are limited to direct patient care, having no authority to diagnose or treat patients.

"I had worked in pediatrics for 12 years and had really done as much as I could as an RN," Ms. Foster said. "I wanted more education, but I didn't want to go to medical school. This was enough to allow me to be able to do some of those extra functions and still have a family life."

Nurse practitioners specialize in specific areas, such as family, pediatrics, geriatrics or maternity. Pediatrics was the route Ms. Claborn took after already having worked in the area several years. Ms. Claborn said she enjoys the contact she has with patients, but also is partial to education and teaching, both of which have been possible through her profession.

She described the nurse practitioner role as a complement to the overall health care program of a patient. "It's built upon nursing with some of the skills a physician has," she said. "Physicians have more in-depth training to handle more complicated types of health care issues. There is a predetermined protocol between the nurse practitioner and the physician, but it's also a very independent functioning role, as well. You have to know what you're doing and when to contact the physician and when you need his expertise."

The physician's role is also important for a physician assistant, as explained by Lynch, who works for Dr. Allen J. Duplantis Jr. at Heart Specialists of Oklahoma.

"Basically, your parameters are set by your supervising physician," Lynch said. "We can transmit written prescriptions within the scope of the supervising physician's field. PAs can run a rural health care clinic and several run a lot of E.R.s in the area. In the hospital, we basically can order anything a doctor can order — histories, physicals, discharge summaries — but the attending physician must cosign everything you do. PAs do a lot of follow-up work with patients, but rarely do we have initial encounters."

Lynch, who is from Wilson, said he received his training through the University of Oklahoma's College of Medicine, which offers the only physician assistant program in Oklahoma.

AP Laserphoto

Pediatric nurse practitioner Lauarl Foster listens to the heart of Dilon Sawyers as his mom, Karen, holds onto him Jan. 4 in Ardmore, Okla. Foster helps doctors perform initial assessments of patients.

His program centers on basic sciences and medical sciences rather than building from a nursing training. It also includes 12 months of clinical rotation, where students work for several months at a time with doctors in different areas. That's where Jeff Hamblin is at this stage in his physician assistant program, working in the office with Lynch.

Hamblin, whose father is a physician, liked medicine, but didn't want to go through the lengthy education his father endured. "My father went to school for 13 years and I remember every bit of it," he said. "I knew I didn't want to do that."

Instead, he spent 25 months in PA school. Being accepted was the first challenge, as there are only 50 slots with more than 700 applicants.

Then, students take the same classes as regular medical students, only at an accelerated pace. The first semester comes to 40 credit hours. "They try to take the first two years of medical school and squeeze it into a year," he said.

But the benefits are worth it. One of the biggest attractions to the field, besides the demand for physicians assistants, is the versatility. "I think one of the great things about a PA is that it's real versatile," he said. "Robert can go from this job in cardiology directly into a job in another area of medicine. That's something a physician can't do."

To ensure a physician assistant stays current with medicine in all fields, continuing education is required annually, as it is for nurse practitioners.

Although both fields are still new, those involved say the public is becoming more aware and accepting of their abilities and qualifications.

"It's becoming more and more accepted," Lynch said. "A lot of docs call me for information and it shows they feel really good about what we can do."

Sometimes colds have similar symptoms to spring allergies

By Dr. Stephen G. Rothstein
Associated Press

When springtime brings a stuffy, dripping nose with sneezes and popping ears, it's time to ask the question. Is it a cold or an allergy?

A cold and an allergic reaction can cause almost identical symptoms. One will usually go away untreated, the other requires treatment. There are ways to tell the difference.

One chief test is duration. A cold will last for a few days, but an allergy may go on for a long time. So a "cold" that lasts for an unusually long period of time could well be an allergic reaction.

Another test is whether the symptoms are related to a specific activity — for example, if they occur only in a pollen-laden garden, or when a certain food is ingested. Those are signs of an allergy.

If there's a strong suspicion that the cause is an allergy, the next question is whether to try self-treatment, with one of the many antihistamine products that are sold without prescription.

For many younger, healthy people, self-treatment with antihistamines may work. But there are precautions that most people must observe.

All over-the-counter antihistamine products can cause drowsiness, which can be dangerous when driving a car or working with machinery.

And in men 60 years and over, antihistamines can cause swelling of the prostate gland, sometimes severe enough to interfere with urination.

Over-the-counter antihistamines can also have adverse interactions with many prescription drugs, including a variety of heart medications, drugs for high blood pressure and some antidepressant drugs.

There are prescription antihistamines that don't cause side effects such as drowsiness.

Some people with allergies won't be helped even by those drugs. For them, nasal sprays or allergy injections may be the only way to get relief.

One general rule for allergy relief is to stay well hydrated, by drinking a lot of water. Good hydration can ease many symptoms.

Finally, it's wise to remember that an allergy can be a year-round, indoor problem, caused by exposure to house dust, spores and molds of the kind that can grow in air conditioners.

A cold that never goes away should motivate a visit to the doctor at any time of the year.

Agassi wins

KEY BISCAYNE, Fla. — Goran Ivanisevic lost a match in his sleep Sunday, giving Andre Agassi a tainted title.

On the morning of their final at the Lipton Championships, Ivanisevic woke up with a stiff neck. He underwent three hours of treatment and tried to play but quit in the fourth game.

"To beat Andre you have to be 105 percent, and I was maybe 2," Ivanisevic said.

The tournament doctor said Ivanisevic probably slept wrong, and the ailment is unlikely to bother him for more than a few days.

Agassi, also the Lipton champion in 1990 and 1995, became the first player to win three men's titles at Key Biscayne. He received $338,000 following the 10-minute match, and Ivanisevic settled for $178,000 — not bad for a pain in the neck.

"It's really a shame," Agassi said after winning his first title since August. "Goran is obviously playing the best tennis right now on the tour. Today was a big day for me — I really wanted to come out here and get it on. And it didn't happen.

"It's a disappointing way to win the title and for the tournament to end."

Coincidentally, Agassi was involved in a similar situation two years ago.

The start of that match was delayed an hour because finalist Pete Sampras was nauseated. Agassi agreed to the delay even though the rules permitted him to win in a walkover when Sampras was unable to take the court at the scheduled time.

More on Bam

HOUSTON — A Lubbock bank provided running back Byron "Bam" Morris with an unsecured $1,000 loan after Morris' freshman year at Texas Tech, the Houston Chronicle reported.

In its Sunday editions, the Chronicle also reported that Morris failed to repay the loan promptly, causing a collection suit against him in late 1992. The Chronicle cited court records of the lawsuit.

The report comes as the NCAA conducts a preliminary inquiry into Tech men's basketball and football programs dating to 1991.

Morris, then 21, obtained the loan from Lubbock National Bank, a major backer of Tech's athletic programs, in June 1992. That was six months after he finished his freshman season as the team's leading rusher, records showed.

He helped the Steelers reach the Super Bowl last season, but his future has been clouded by his indictment last week in Rockwall County on felony drug possession charges.

The loan document, a copy of which was filed with the lawsuit, showed Morris borrowed $1,000 for "personal expenses" that was due in one month at a 17.5 percent interest rate.

Pitino, 'Cats on NCAA hot seat

■ Syracuse stands in the way of Kentucky coach Rick Pitino of achieving "demanded" national title for the Wildcats.

■ NCAA Championship, 8 p.m., KOSA TV, Channel 7.

By PAUL NEWBERRY
Associated Press

NEW YORK — Rick Pitino squirms in his seat, his face revealing a slight grin. He's heard the jabs about being a genius without a portfolio, the slick taskmaster who's engulfed himself in an Armani-clad cult of personality without leading even one team to a championship.

"Two books, no championships," he said, chuckling at a favorite line of his detractors.

For Pitino, the only titles are "Born to Coach" and "Full Court Pressure." A title on the court is expected — no, make that demanded — of him when Kentucky meets Syracuse in the NCAA championship game Monday night.

"Would I love to win this thing?" Pitino asked Sunday, not even pausing for the answer. "Yes, if just to stop the dumb questions about when am I going to win it all. If I knew the answer to that, I would say something like, 'In 1998, we're definitely going to win it all.' I wish I had an answer for that."

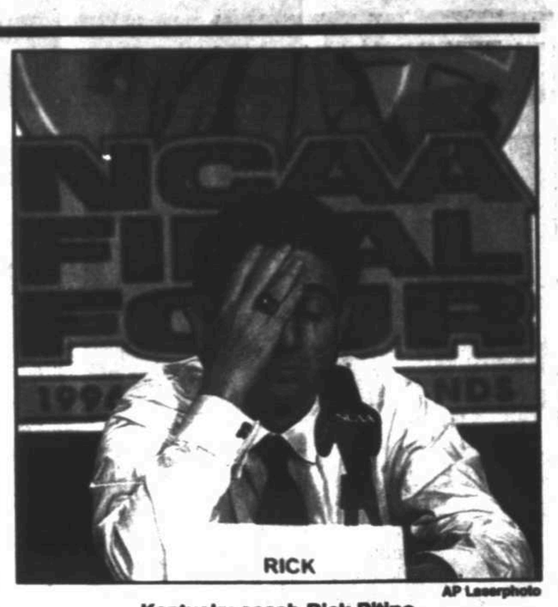

Of course, in the state of Kentucky, the answer to that question is quite clear. Even Pitino seems to realize the moment for reality to catch up with reputation is upon him.

"You'd like to strike when the opportunity is there," he said. "And I don't think I'm ever going to have as deep a team as this again."

Like Pitino, Syracuse coach Jim Boeheim has never won an NCAA championship. But he's not carrying around the unwieldy burden of win-or-else — perhaps explaining why his whiny, ornery tendencies had given way to downright lightheartedness.

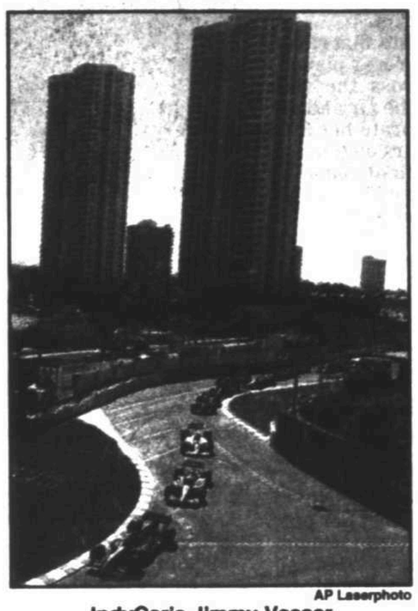

"Actually, Jim Boeheim is extremely funny," Pitino said. "If you go to a party with him, it's going to sound

IndyCar's Jimmy Vasser ...off and away in Australia

Vasser claims 2nd race title

Associated Press

SURFERS PARADISE, Australia — The rigors of the 65-lap Australian IndyCar Grand Prix on Sunday were lost on American Jimmy Vasser, but winning the race might have had something to do with it.

"This is the best race car I've ever had," Vasser said moments after climbing out of his Target Reynard Honda in front of 84,000 spectators on the 2.794-mile Surfers Paradise street circuit. "I wanted to keep going in it it was so nice to drive."

Vasser won his second race of the PPG Championship season by 7.75 seconds over countryman Scott Pruett in 2 hours, 46.856 seconds.

Vasser, who won the pole on Saturday, and Pruett battled for three days on the circuit, with Vasser taking the top spot from Pruett with only 30 seconds left in the final qualifying session.

That closeness extended to the race, with Pruett the only one to take the lead from Vasser — and then for only five laps — when Vasser, who had concerns over the amount of fuel in his car during a

NCAA WOMEN'S BASKETBALL FINAL

Lady Vols finally reign

By Chuck Schoffner
Associated Press

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Tennessee was bigger and stronger, Georgia was quicker. In this case, bigger was better.

Tennessee dominated inside and got some inspired defense from Latina Davis in beating Southeastern Conference rival Georgia 83-65 Sunday night to win its fourth NCAA championship.

Tennessee now has twice as many national titles as any other school in 15 years of NCAA play. The Lady Vols won their previous championships in 1987, 1989 and 1991 — all under current coach Pat Summitt.

Tennessee's players donned the traditional championship caps and pranced around the court in celebration. Summitt, wearing a burnt orange pantsuit, watched calmly from the sidelines and chatted with a television reporter.

Tennessee's Michelle Marciniak, who had 10 points, five assists and two steals, was named the outstanding player in the Final Four. She scored 21 in a semifinal victory over defending champion Connecticut on Friday night.

Abby Conklin helped with some timely 3-point shooting for the Lady Vols, who had lost at Georgia 77-71 during the season. Tennessee outrebounded Georgia 63-30 in that game and enjoyed another big edge on the boards Sunday night, this time 54-39.

That total included 21 offensive rebounds, which led to 17 second-chance points.

Davis, Tennessee's leading scorer in the tournament, stood out with her defense by shutting down Georgia's All-America guard, Saudia Roundtree. Roundtree had promised coach Andy Landers a national championship when she signed with Georgia out of junior college two years ago, but she couldn't make it happen.

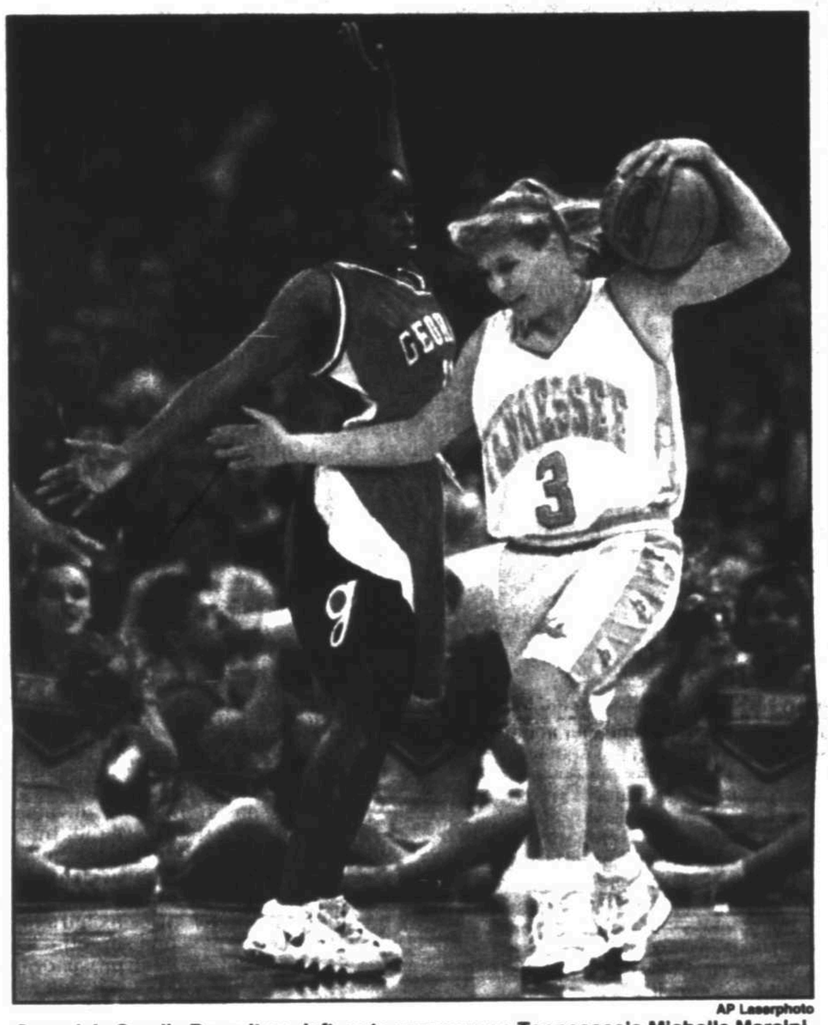

The 5-foot-7 senior, who had 63 points in her two previous tournament games, rarely was able to get Georgia into its deadly transition game and scored only eight points on 3-for-14 shooting. She went scoreless in the second half.

Freshman Chamique Holdsclaw led Tennessee (32-4) with 16 points and 14 rebounds. Tiffani Johnson also scored 16 for the Lady Vols and Conklin added 14, including four 3-pointers. Pashen Thompson had 12 points and 11 rebounds.

La'Keshia Frett led Georgia (28-5) with 25 points but had only seven in the second half. Tracy Henderson scored 16.

A 7-0 run that included a 3-pointer by Kedra Holland drew Georgia to 57-48, and the Lady Bulldogs trailed 61-52 after Henderson's basket with 11:52 to play.

But that's as close as they would get.

Astros must draw fans as well as win

By MICHAEL A. LUTZ
Associated Press

HOUSTON — For the Houston Astros, attendance is as important as wins.

Houston owner Drayton McLane wanted to sell 17,200 season tickets, but only 11,100 had been sold going into Monday's opener against the Los Angeles Dodgers.

"So many of the conversations about the franchise are out of our control," Craig Biggio said. "Our control is between the white lines. We'd like to get off to a good start (to help attendance) but if we don't, it's a long season."

For the Dodgers, the new season is a chance for redemption after a quick and humbling exit from the playoffs last fall when they were swept by the Cincinnati Reds in three games.

"I want to remember how we were embarrassed," Los Angeles center fielder Brett Butler said. "I think getting pummeled last year will help us, it will drive us."

"Let's face it, if we only win the division this year and don't go any further, it will be an unsuccessful season,"

Texas Ranger catcher David Valle ...getting eye ready for home opener

Rangers still have 18,000 tickets left

By Denne H. Freeman
Associated Press

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers will give day baseball another try today when the Boston Red Sox and Roger Clemens come calling for the season opener.

It's only the second day opener in the Rangers history.

"We feel like the season opener should be played in the day. That's tradition. And we hoped the fans will respond," club president Tom Schieffer said.

However, some 18,000 tickets remained for the 3 p.m. game as fans have been slow to respond.

"We hope we have a big walkup sale," Schieffer said. "We're still trying to win fans back from the labor problems of last year. We see a renwed interest in the game."

The Rangers are approaching 14,000 in season ticket sales and Schieffer said "we're optimistic that we will have a big season both at the gate and on the field."

The Rangers have never been in the playoffs. And the bad luck injury bug has already hit them this spring.

Chap golf team brings heavy guns to Green Tree CC

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

After losing four starters off the 1995 National Championship golf team, Midland College didn't exactly want to rebuild.

No, the nation's No. 1 ranked golf team is focused on another golf title, and its run down the stretch drive starts today at the Green Tree Invitational held at Green Tree Country Club. The first of today's two rounds starts at 8 a.m. The second begins 30 minutes after all players end the first.

"Everyone on the team is ready," said Monahans native Scotty Wade. "We have 10 guys playing for five spots. They all have the same focus, a national title."

The Green Tree Invitational is the Chaps' home tournament for the spring season and one MC has won five straight times. A win here would all but guarantee the Chaps' seventh consecutive Western Junior College Athletic Conference title. Not a bad roll, and right now with eight wins out of 10 tournaments entered, the Chaps are playing their best golf.

"In Galveston (two weeks ago at the Gulf Coast Invitational), we played solid. It was the best we have played all year," said Andrews' Derrick Pursley, who was a first team NJCAA All-American in 1995. "None of the other teams could touch that. I feel confident this week."

This team will host a nine-team field that includes the nation's fourth (Paris Junior College), fifth (New Mexico Junior College), 19th (Western Texas College) and the two teams (San Jacinto and Odessa College) ranked 20th in the nation. It is the same type of field that the Chaps butchered last season when they brought the par-72, Green Tree Course to its knees with a three-round total of 45 under-par.

That included a first-day, two-round score of 35 under-par. The record-breaking performance will be a tough one to follow.

"We're going at it," said Wade. "It will be tough to catch."

When looking at this tournament as a preparation for the national tournament, finding out which players will step up for the fourth and fifth spots on the first team will be an important factor.

"This is the time we need to see who is playing well. That will be determined by the Texas State Junior College Tournament (in two weeks)," said MC coach Delnor Poss, who says his team is helped by its depth. "The strength of a team is determined by competition within a team."

"The key will be the four and five man," said Pursley, who along with Wade and freshman Steven Young are MC's top three. "They have to be consistent."

This year's MC golf team has a distinct Tall City and West Texas flavor and that makes this tournament special, especially to those players making their last Midland appearance in the Green and Gold. Former Midland High standout Jeremiah Luttrell joins Pursley and

Kentucky doesn't plan to overlook Orangemen

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Pitino compared the Kentucky-Massachusetts semifinal game in the NCAA tournament to an Ali-Frazier heavyweight title bout. The important thing is regarding the championship game against Syracuse the same way.

"It was two teams coming at each other with everything they had, physically and mentally," the Kentucky coach said Sunday.

There was a huge buildup for Saturday night's game between No. 1 Massachusetts and No. 2 Kentucky. The Wildcats prevailed 81-74 at the Meadowlands in New Jersey.

Now that it's over, will the victor have anything left for the unsung challenger, Syracuse, in the title game Monday night?

"We're not out of gas," Kentucky forward Derek Anderson said. "We had a lot of emotion drained, then we got it back afterward.

"You realize it's not over. You go back out there. We don't have that ring. Once we realize we have it, that's when all the celebrating will begin."

Kentucky believes its ability to focus on each opponent has been a big reason for its success.

"We've done a tremendous job this season of staying focused and not letting that affect our team in any way," senior forward Walter McCarty said.

Playing each opponent as it comes is something Pitino has stressed the entire seas whether the Wildcats were playing Mas chusetts or Morehead State.

"Our players have the necessary respect (Syracuse) in order to win," he said.

McCarty said some people are trying to ma Kentucky out as fat Cats by predicting an ea victory over Syracuse.

"The media and coaches who are picking are just trying to fatten us up, trying to get fat so we can come out and not perform well," he said with a smile. "We don't really pay a attention to that."

Couples pulls off rally to pass two in Players

Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — The talk all week at The Players Championship was of first-time winners and how it can't happen here.

Three in a row at Honda, Bay Hill and New Orleans was one thing, some of the wiser heads whispered. But not on the TPC Stadium Course at Sawgrass. Not against a field this talented, this deep and this experienced.

Fred Couples showed why Sunday with a masterful 8-under-par 64 — including an eagle on the dangerous 16th and a birdie on the treacherous 17th — for an 18-under-par 270, four strokes better than Tommy Tolles and Colin Montgomerie.

Tolles, the 29-year-old trying for his first PGA Tour victory, closed with a 72, bogeying two of the last four holes. And Montgomerie finished with a 68, losing his chance when he dumped his second shot on No. 16 into the water.

"It was the best round of golf I've played in a long, long time," Couples said. "I missed about a 2-foot birdie putt on No. 11 and I just said, "I'm tired of this."

That's the kind of aggressiveness the kids will have to learn to show on the back nine in big tournaments to win.

It was the 12th victory for Couples, who has been hampered by back problems the last two years, and his first since the 1994 Buick Open.

Couples, 36, knows all about winning young. He got his first victory when he was 23 and was only 24 when he won the 1984 Players.

Golf Roundup

LPGA Dinah Shore

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Patty Sheehan scrambled on the final hole before rolling in a dramatic seven-foot putt Sunday to save par and win the first Nabisco Dinah Shore title of her LPGA Hall of Fame career.

After sinking the putt that saved her from facing a four-way playoff, Sheehan raced across the 18th green, jumped into the air and did a cartwheel to celebrate her 35th victory in her 17 years on tour.

She finished the final round at Mission Hills Country Club with a 1-under-par 71 that put her 7-under for the tournament, the LPGA's first major of the year.

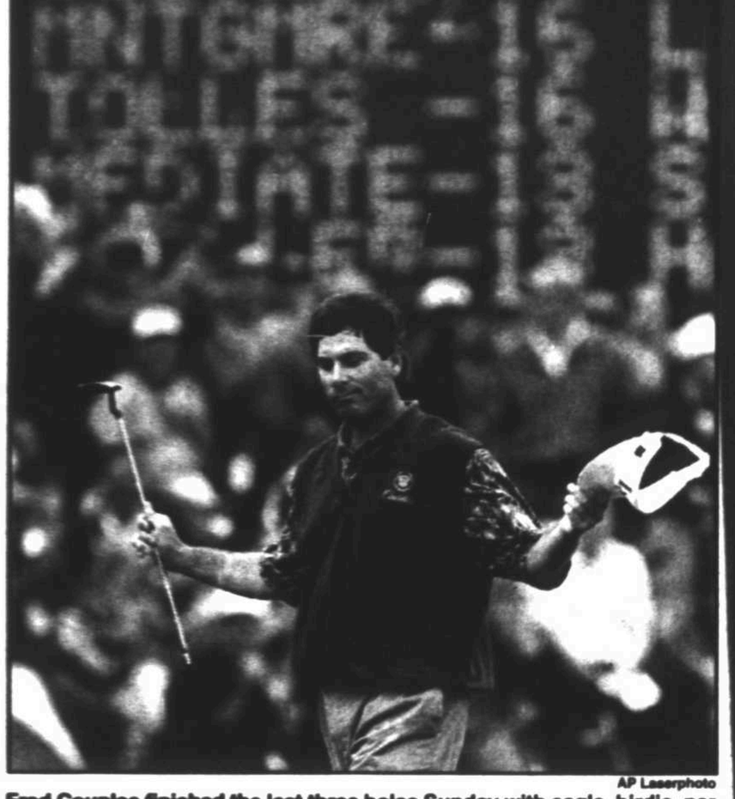

Annika Sorenstam of Sweden, the LPGA's leading money winner and player of the year in 1995, finished second along with Meg Mallon and Kelly Robbins.

Robbins shot her way into contention with a 68, but a double bogey on No. 15 cost her dearly. At the time, she was 8-under and held a two-shot lead.

Sorenstam, who bogeyed No. 18 when she left her six-foot par putt below the hole, shot 70. Mallon, who won the tournament in Hawaii last month, missed short birdie putts on the last three holes of the Dinah Shore, including a six-footer on No. 18.

Sheehan also had her problems down the stretch before she finally came up with the winning putt on the last green.

The win, worth $135,000, was the sixth major title for the 39-year-old Sheehan.

Fred Couples finished the last three holes Sunday with eagle, birdie, par to win the Players' Championship.

Dominion Seniors

SAN ANTONIO — Tom Weiskopf, who shared the lead with three others going into the final round, captured the $650,000 SBC Dominion Seniors golf tournament Sunday by shooting a 3-under-par 69.

Weiskopf, who claimed his third Senior Tour title, which includes the 1995 U.S. Senior Open, collected the $97,500 first-place check at the 6,814-yard, par-72 Dominion Country Club course. He finished the three-day event with a 9-under-par 207.

"I was patient today," said Weiskopf, a resident of Paradise Valley, Ariz., who increased his official 1996 earnings to $149,738 and moved into the top 25 money list from No. 36. "I felt I was swinging with confidence. Nothing was happening until I birdied the ninth hole. It just seems like that was the turning point. I hit the ball solid on the back nine."

Wade as those sophomores playing their last tournament in the land they grew up in. Sweden's Michael Lofdahl and Canada's Blair Buttar will also make their farewell performance in Midland. That, however, should only add to the what the teams plan to do.

"I'm ready," said Luttrell, who transferred to MC from Odessa College. "I won't approach it any different. I will just try to have one of my best tournaments.

"When you come to play for a team like this, the success of the past is a big draw."

That holds true for freshman Josh Jacobs, another MHS product, who came to Chaparral team this season. He says the move to this level of golf is one he is happy with.

"It has been a good move and one that has been more difficult than I thought it would be," said Jacobs, who also said that his mental maturity has helped the cause.

"I love home tournaments to get people to watch us. Our whole team is looking forward to it."

Midland College is looking to make its eighth straight appearance in the national tourney and that starts with strong recruiting classes. The 1995-96 crop of freshmen class fits that mold. Leading the way are Young and Jacobs. Young has stepped up as one of the Chaps' first team starters. He also says that this group of players that includes Plainview's Shawn Reeves, James Clive, and former Lee Rebel K. J. Sanchez will be one to watch out for next season.

"We will be good next year," said Young, the team's leader in stroke average. "With a few good recruits, we will be as good as this year. MC is all I expected and more. I could get used to it out here."

Midland College leads the WJCAC standings with a 30-stroke lead over OC. That lead was helped with the 27-stroke win at Galveston. New Mexico JC trails by 59 strokes.

In the medalist standings, Pursley leads the WJCAC with a 72.0 stroke average. OC's Javier Quevedo is one stroke back while Western Texas' Morten Vildhoj, Wade and Young round out the top five.

added first baseman Eric Karros. "The way I look at it, if you're going to be playing in October, you might as well play to the end of October."

The Dodgers are confident they'll not only win the division title this season, but match up with the Atlanta Braves and reach the World Series for the first time since 1988.

"You've got to feel good about this team," Dodgers general manager Fred Claire said. "I know the team feels good about itself. The team on the field is good, maybe very good, and the foundation underneath (in the minors) is as strong as we've ever had. We're in a position that if we have needs, we can fill those needs within the organization."

"We have a very good shot at going to the World Series," Karros said. "But until you do it, there's nothing worse than saying how good you are and not doing it. Believe me, we don't want to be embarrassed again. We've already gone through that. That's enough."

The Astros, who hope to average 30,000 per game, have been noted more for their pitching in the past but their current lineup expects to score runs and help a staff trying to rebound from a spotty 1995.

Houston's top of the order includes Brian Hunter, Craig Biggio, Jeff Bagwell and Derek Bell. The Astros also have added power with third baseman Sean Berry and catcher Rick Wilkins.

Bell finished fourth in the NL with a .334 average last season, but sat out the final month after surgery to repair a muscle tear in his left thigh.

"This has all been very positive," Bell said, scanning the batting order. "You've got Derrick May (platooning in left field) and Sean Berry. That's a lot more pop right there. It's going to be fun.

"If they hang a breaking pitch, I'll try to smack it out. If they pitch around me, someone else will take advantage of it."

Last season, Bagwell went on the disabled list for the third straight year with a broken bone in his left hand from behind hit by a pitch. He has a new pad to protect his hand.

"I think we've got a great club, and once the season starts, we'll score a lot of runs and the rotation should be fine," Bagwell said. "We just need to come together."

Shane Reynolds will be the Astros' starter in place of Doug Drabek, who has a pulled hamstring.

RANGERS: Texas hopes to avoid injury bug this year

(From 1C)

Shortstop Benji Gil is out six to eight weeks following back surgery.

However, Juan Gonzalez had an excellent spring after missing a large portion of last season because of injury.

"We left camp with more positives than negatives. We've basically got our everyday lineup intact except for Benji," general manager Doug Melvin said.

Gonzalez missed several games last week because of a groin injury. He played in 90 games last season, 83 as the designated hitter because of a back injury.

Dean Palmer tore a bicep last season and played in only 36 games. He is bothered by a hamstring pull, but is expected to play on Monday.

Darryl Hamilton replaces Otis Nixon in center field for Texas.

The Rangers signed Ken Hill in the offseason after Kenny Rogers signed with the New York Yankees. Hill will start on Monday against the Red Sox.

Clemens has a 10-8 lifetime record against Texas. His earned run average of 3.99 against Texas is his third highest against any team.

Kevin Elster is Gil's replacement at shortstop, joining Palmer at third, Mark McLemore at second and Will Clark at first. Gold Glove catcher Ivan Rodriguez also returns.

Gonzalez is moving from left to right field, and Rusty Greer takes over in left.

Boston begins its second season under former Rangers manager Kevin Kennedy.

"It's fun to come back to Arlington," Kennedy said. "I do get a funny feeling when I come back here."

After the Rangers fired Tom Grieve as general manager two years ago and replaced him with Doug Melvin, one of Melvin's first moves was to fire Kennedy. He was named Red Sox manager shortly thereafter and took Boston into the playoffs.

"I imagine I'll hear a boo or two," Kennedy said.

Rain aids Gordon in Food City 500 NASCAR victory

BRISTOL, Tenn. (AP) — Rain gave Jeff Gordon his second straight victory and third of the season Sunday, cutting short the Food City 500 at Bristol International Raceway.

Gordon, the defending Winston Cup champion, took the lead from Rusty Wallace on lap 295 and was still out front when NASCAR officials finally gave up their attempts to finish the 500-lap race after 342 laps on the .533-mile banked oval.

When it was ended, Terry Labonte was second, followed by Mark Martin, Dale Earnhardt, Wallace and series point leader Dale Jarrett, the only other competitors on the lead lap.

The start was delayed 42 minutes because of a noon shower. Once the race began, in typical Bristol fashion it was slowed by three caution fags in the first 58 laps. But, after the green flag waved for the start of lap 64, the race stayed caution-free until the rain came on lap 318.

AP Laserphoto

Jeff Gordon (24) passes Michael Waltrip on way to Food City 500 win.

Because of that long green flag run, the field quickly stretched on the fast oval and only five of the 37 starters remained on lead lap when the fourth caution came out.

Gordon was closing on Labonte and appeared ready to put him a lap down before the yellow flag waved. The 1984 series champion, who can match Richard Petty's record of 513 consecutive starts in two weeks at North Wilkesboro, also took advantage of the caution to duck into the pits for tires and gas just before the first of three red flags.

That strategic move took Labonte all the way to third.

Gordon, who had finishes of 42nd and 40th in the first two races, has since built a string of first, third, first and first, winning also at Richmond and Darlington.

mixup on his first pit, made his first stop of the 181.675-mile race.

Vasser also had to contend with a marker cone stuck on to his roll-over bar after running over the marker during his first few laps.

"I didn't see it get stuck, I didn't know I had a partner," joked Vasser. "I might put it on the car as a new aerodynamic device."

It was the third win in three races for Honda-powered cars — Vasser won at Miami and Andre Ribeiro at Rio de Janeiro.

Gil de Ferran, driving for the Midland-based Hall Racing Team, placed 11th and out of the top 10 for the first time this year by running out of fuel.

Third place went to 20-year-old rookie Canadian Greg Moore in his Player's Reynard-Mercedes, while Mauricio Gugelmin of Brazil was fourth and countryman Christian Fittipaldi fifth.

Stefan Johansson of Sweden was sixth, followed by former four-time 500 cc world motorcycle champion Eddie Lawson of the United States, his best finish in his first full Indy-Car season.

There was a near-disaster in the pits when a raised tank of methanol tipped over during a Bryan Herta pit stop. Pit workers from Herta's team and others on either side threw large buckets of water on the spilled methanol and two pit crew members — one from Herta's team and the other from Bobby Rahal's crew who came to assist, were treated for minor injuries at the track medical center.

The incident happened when Herta edged away from the pits with the hose still in the car. That brought the tank crashing down over the wall, spilling methanol on the ground and on to Herta, who was also doused with water. He pulled out of the race.

"We were lucky, very lucky," said Rahal team member Tom Blattler. "It could have been much worse."

Defending champion Paul Tracy of Canada was put out of the race on the 16th lap when Michael Andretti braked hard on a turn and hit Tracy, forcing the Canadian into the wall and out of the race. When an enraged Tracy emerged from the cockpit, he shook his fist at Andretti when the American drove past on his next lap.

"We were just pacing ourselves and trying to save the car," said Tracy. "Then, all of a sudden Michael pulled a typical move — it was textbook Michael Andretti, 101 — he locks up his brakes, goes into a corner out of control, hits me from behind and then keeps on going.

"It's unfortunate, but he's been doing this his whole career."

Andretti, who went out of the race later with electrical problems, said: "I feel bad for him because when I got there my brakes locked up and I had to go for it. I was hoping he wouldn't hit me but he did. It definitely wasn't on purpose."

Tech extends home winning streak

Associated Press

LUBBOCK — Texas Tech's Jeff Peck tossed a complete-game four-hitter as the Red Raiders routed Texas A&M 12-1 on Sunday.

The win extended Tech's home winning streak to 25 games dating back to last season. The Raiders (35-4 overall, 10-2 SWC) have won six in a row. The Aggies (24-12, 5-7) were swept in a four-game series.

Texas 12, Rice 0

AUSTIN — Scott Leon pitched a compete game two-hit shutout of Rice on Sunday as the Longhorns won 12-0. It was Texas' seventh straight win.

Leon (4-2) walked only two.

NCAA: Boeheim under less pressure in finals

(From 1C)

strange to you, but he's the life of the party. He has a great personality, great wit, great charm."

Boeheim displayed the dry wit usually shown only to his friends, people like Pitino, who got his coaching break when Boeheim hired him as an assistant on Pitino's wedding day in 1976.

On Sunday, both men enjoyed retelling the story of how their relationship got started shortly after Pitino and his wife, Joanne, checked in at the old Americana Hotel, eight blocks away.

"I had literally carried my bride across the threshold," Pitino remembered, "and the phone rang. I heard this whining voice at the other end, didn't recognize it. And he said, 'This is Jim Boeheim.'

"I'd like to talk to you," Boeheim said that day.

"Jim, I just entered the room," Pitino protested. "Could we get together tomorrow morning?"

"No, I have to go to Chicago tomorrow," Boeheim countered.

Finally, Pitino agreed to the meeting. After 2 1/2 hours, he accepted a $17,500-a-year post and immediately hit the recruiting trail, leaving his bride to room with three of Boeheim's buddies until he returned.

"She's made Rick pay many, many times for putting her in that house with those three guys," Boeheim said.

After Pitino moved on to bigger things, Boeheim took Syracuse to the brink of a championship in 1987, when the Derrick Coleman-led Orangemen fell to Indiana on a last-second shot by Keith Smart. Now, a less-talented team is back again — as a 14-point underdog with nothing to lose, except a game no one expected them to be in anyway.

"That's the great, great thing about this whole trip and the fact that it was so unexpected," Boeheim said. "I think when something is expected and you walk downstairs Christmas morning and you know you're going to get something that's there under the tree, you're not that happy. But if it's something totally unexpected, it just makes you feel better."

Plus, Boeheim doesn't have to contend with thousands of purveyors of unsolicited advice. Pitino tells the story of a doctor from the University of Kentucky Medical School who sent him an urgent letter detailing six things the Wildcats needed to do to win the national championship. Pitino sent a reply listing six things the doctor should improve before his next trip to the operating room.

"Rick might be the only modern coach who can handle that job for this length of time (seven years)," Boeheim said. "I'm not sure that anybody else can handle that job."

Pitino, though, points out that he's not exactly losing the battle with time. He's only 43 years old. He's been a head coach at the college level for only 14 years, sandwiched around a couple of stints in the NBA.

"I sometimes wonder why everybody seems to be in a rush," he said. "I've only coached in six NCAA tournaments. And everybody says you have to win, you have to win.

"We'd love to win. We want to win badly. But do we have to win? No. We're still building."

MONDAY, APRIL 1, 1996

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: A new commitment to business or career goals will produce fabulous results. Money gains will come through independent sources. Bold moves are favored next September. Agreeing to share profits with a valuable ally will bolster your position. Behind-the-scenes efforts enhance romance. A wedding is likely before next Valentine's Day! Building a nest egg or new home becomes a priority. Count on an addition to the family to bring great joy.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: actress Debbie Reynolds, basketball player Kevin Duckworth, actress Ali MacGraw, actor Gordon Jump.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Candid communication aids both business and romance. Be more creative and less controlling. Changes are inevitable. Do not let stubborn pride interfere with the completion of a valuable work assignment.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your mystique gives you an edge over a competitor. You know how to keep others guessing! An open-minded attitude will impress higher-ups. Keep your options open.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Promote a commercial venture with an eye to making the largest profits possible. Emphasize cutting nonessential expenditures. The sacrifices you make now will be richly rewarded.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Be wary of strange ideologies or propositions. The surest way to avoid office politics is to work quietly on your own. Spend time looking over important documents.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Accepting a special, confidential assignment will help you gain recognition from people in high places. Close cooperation with your associates is the best way to ensure your financial well-being.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): The outlook for reconciling your differences with someone is very promising. All it takes is true understanding and a willingness to make intelligent concessions.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Business and professional duties take up the lion's share of your time. Continue to yield to older, more experienced associates; they hold all the cards. A friendly reunion means a great deal to both parties.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): A wonderful opportunity rests in your hands; you cannot miss it! Banish self-doubt and your social life will flourish. A change of pace sounds great this evening. Invite a favorite companion to join you.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Business negotiations introduce you to a potential romantic partner. Keep this new relationship very quiet. Console a saddened family member; happy memories prevail. Your dazzling personality helps you win important points in a confrontation.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Influential people offer financial backing. Go slow; they could have ulterior motives. Implementing new procedures at work will show others who is charge. Travel enjoys beneficial influences.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Work at devising a new budget. You cannot afford to race into the future without first reviewing decisions made in the past. Take stock of who you are and what you hope to accomplish.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): You are entering a highly productive cycle. Authority figures are interested in your ideas but need more time to respond. Persistence will help you solve a financial problem. Let others know how they can help.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q. 1 - East-West vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A 10 6 3 ♡Q 10 ◇9 5 4 ♣A 9 8 2

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
Pass	3♠	Dbl	Pass

What action do you take?

A - Don't even think of converting to penalties — there is no reason to think you can defeat three clubs. You have a known spade fit and, since partner is expecting only some 6-8 points from you, you must show your hand is better than that by jumping to four spades.

Q. 2 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠K 4 ♡9 ◇A K 4 ♣Q 9 6 5 4 3 2

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♣	Pass	1♠	Pass
2♣	Pass	3♣	Pass

What action do you take?

A - If you still think you have a minimum, think again. The fact that partner did not bid no trump suggests that North does not have values in hearts but has a fair hand. In that case, five clubs must have good play, so why not bid it?

Q. 3 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A K 7 4 ♡A 9 4 ◇6 4 ♣A K J 8

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♡	Pass	?

What do you respond?

A - It is tempting to jump shift to two spades, but you can't be sure where the hand should be played and might need room to explore. Because of that, we slightly prefer one spade.

Q. 4 - As South, vulnerable, you hold:

♠A 10 4 ♡A 10 8 3 ◇A Q 10 2 ♣9 2

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1♠	4♠	?

What do you bid now?

A - The preempt has achieved its purpose! You have a pretty good hand but with the death holding, a doubleton, in preemptor's suit, there is no safe way to explore. Bid four spades — admittedly an underbid.

Q. 5 - Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠Q 7 6 3 2 ♡A 9 8 6 4 3 ◇Void ♣K Q

The bidding has proceeded:

NORTH	EAST	SOUTH	WEST
1◇	Pass	1♡	Pass
2♣	Pass	?

What do you bid now?

A - This looks like a misfit, so we would proceed carefully. Since a bid of two spades would create a game force, we would opt for an underbid of two hearts to see how partner reacts.

Q. 6 - Both vulnerable, as South you hold:

♠A K 7 4 3 ♡4 ◇J 8 3 ♣A Q 9 5

The bidding has proceeded:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
1♠	Pass	2◇	Pass

What do you bid now?

A - Since three clubs would be a high reverse and the hand is a whit weak for that action, the choice lies between a diamond raise or a rebid of two spades. Since we don't like raising a minor with a weak three-card holding, we would opt for two spades.

Actor Dorn says he can't understand Army Air Corps racism during WWII

OKLAHOMA CITY — Michael Dorn, whose TV character was an officer aboard the starship Enterprise, can't understand the discrimination that kept black fighter pilots on the ground for half of World War II.

"I've been through a bit of racism, but nothing like this, where you put yourself in a position to take all of that abuse," the black actor said Saturday at the Oklahoma City chapter meeting of the Tuskegee Airmen.

Forced to admit blacks in 1941, the Army Air Corps formed the all-black fighter-pilot squads but never intended to let them fly. When the pilots finally got a chance in 1943, they turned out to be among the best the Army produced.

Dorn, whose character Lt. Cmdr. Worf started on "Star Trek: The Next Generation" and has moved to "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine," praised the legacy of the airmen, who got their name because they trained near Tuskegee Institute in Alabama.

"This group gives people a sense of what the human spirit can do," he said.

NEW YORK — What 17-year-old pop sensation has a 12:30 a.m. curfew, a dress code and has never been on a "real date"?

Brandy says she hasn't allowed fame to go to her head.

Brandy Norwood, known to millions of her fans as Brandy.

The young singer-actress says she hasn't allowed fame to go to her head.

"I'm nice to everybody. I'm like, 'Hi, my name is Brandy!' I will give people a hug. I'll go up to people and say things like, 'I like your hair.' Stuff like that," she says in the April 6 issue of TV Guide.

In addition to selling more than 3 million albums and being twice nominated for a Grammy, Brandy plays the title character in "Moesha," a comedy airing Tuesday nights on UPN.

"I don't think I'm an actress," she admits. "On a scale of 1 to 10, I give myself a 1."

NEW YORK — A promise from Roseanne about the ninth and final season of her ABC show: Something dramatic will happen to each major character in her on-screen family.

In the April 6 issue of TV Guide, Roseanne reveals that Darlene Conner (Sara Gilbert) will get married and she will stay married to Dan (John Goodman).

LOS ANGELES — Tommy and Pamela Anderson Lee are suing Penthouse publisher Bob Guccione over a stolen videotape that shows the couple having sex.

A lawsuit filed Friday in Superior Court asks a judge to stop Guccione from selling the tape and seeks $10 million in damages. They also want the original tape.

The Motley Crue drummer and "Baywatch" star claim the tape, which they made themselves, was stolen by a construction worker who remodeled their home in Malibu last year.

The lawsuit says Penthouse has acknowledged having the tape. There was no comment from Guccione; a guard at his office said no one would be available until today.

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W.Va. — Marcia Clark didn't want to talk about the O.J. Simpson trial, except to say this:

Marcia Clark didn't want to talk about O.J. trial — much.

"The Simpson case is not the first domestic violence case I handled by far. They're so prevalent and they're so difficult to prosecute."

Clark, who has made only rare public appearances since Simpson was acquitted in October, spoke Saturday at The Greenbrier resort at a benefit for West Virginia University's Mary Babb Randolph Cancer Center.

The prosecutor wouldn't answer questions from reporters, and questions from the audience focused on domestic abuse.

Clark disagreed with one Simpson juror's assessment that the trial was about murder, not domestic abuse, saying: "The link between spousal abuse and spousal homicide is a clear, strong one."

Clark also referred to a 1985 incident when Simpson smashed the windshield of a car while Nicole Brown Simpson was inside and Ms. Simpson refused to file charges.

"Nowadays it wouldn't happen. We could prosecute even if she didn't want to," Clark said.
