Energy Plan Tops Hurdle

WASHINGTON (AP)—A vital part of President Carter's energy program, legislation to establish a powerful energy mobilization board, is over its first major hurdle in Congress, but one top Democrat warns of tough debate ahead.

The House Interior Committee reached tentative agreement Thursday to set up a five-member board along the basic lines Carter suggested.

The panel would have authority to cut through red tape and speed construction of up to 24 high-priority energy projects at a time. The board could designate only 12 projects high priority in a year.

The committee was to meet today to vote formal approval of the plan.

Carter asked Congress earlier this month to set up such a board, saying it is needed to give added momentum to non-nuclear energy projects designed to lessen the nation's dependence on imported oil.

Shortly after the committee acted Thursday, House Democratic Whip John B. Brademas, D-Ind., said he is seeing the "buildup of a fight" over the extent of the board's power.

Brademas said some House members believe the board should have the power to speed up only the decision-making process that precedes construction of major energy projects such as pipelines and gasification plants.

Others favor giving the board authority to cut through substantive laws to speed actual construction of the projects, he said.

Brademas, No. 3 Democrat in the House, also said conflict is emerging between congressmen who favor a major synthetic fuel program and those concerned with scarce water in the western states and environmental problems that might result from such a program. Large amounts of water are used in many techniques for processing synthetic fuel.

Democratic leaders had hoped to have a final vote on the proposed energy mobilization board in the House before Congress begins a month-long recess Aug. 3.

But Brademas indicated the measure now is unlikely to come up until after Labor Day.

Ask Us

Q--Is it true that use of the car air conditioner reduces the gasoline mileage?

A--It has been established that a car will require more gasoline if its air conditioner is in operation than it will if the air conditioner is turned off. However, there is some uncertainty as to whether it amounts to more gasoline requirements on a hot day if the car windows are down. Some claim that added wind resistance with windows down costs as much gasoline as an air conditioner with the windows up. Some of the newer models, we are told, operate their air conditioners off the battery, which, of course, is a drain on another source of energy.

Friday update

Floods Block Roads

AUSTIN (AP)—High waters continued to block Interstate 45 today, which was closed in Galveston County between FM 517 and the National Aeronautics and Space Administration complex, state highway officials reported.

Other roads closed were:

-Texas 6 and Texas 35 through Alvin in Brazoria County.

Spur 330 between Interstate 10 and Baytown in Harris County.

-Numerous farm-to-market roads in the Houston and Galveston areas.

Algeria Cuts Imports

NEW YORK(AP)—Algeria, which supplies about 8 percent of the oil imported by the United States, has cut back the amount of oil it exports by 20 percent, oil industry sources said today.

The cutback, which began earlier this month, is the second reported this week by a major oil-exporting nation. On Wednesday, sources said Nigeria was considering a cut of about 10 percent in its oil production. Both nations produce oil that is among the world's best, used mostly for making gasoline.

Pan Am Claims Win

NEW YORK (AP)-Pan American World Airways says it has won the bidding war for National Airlines' stock. If approved by the Civil Aeronautics Board, the merger would make Pan Am the nation's second-largest air carrier. However, Eastern Airlines said Thursday it is still in the running to acquire National. The nation's largest airline is United Airlines.

Uncertainty In India

NEW DELHI, India (AP)-India faces more months of political uncertainty following the designation by Charan Singh to be the fifth prime minister of the world's largest democracy. The 76-year-old farm leader takes office Saturday claiming the support of 280 of the 538 members of the lower house of Parliament, a majority of only 22. That majority was made up of foes and partisans of former Prime Minister Indira Gandhi.

SALE SET HERE--This 1923 painting by W. H.D. Koerner is typical of his work which will be on exhibit and offered for sale Aug. 12 at the Diamond M Museum. Koerner pre-dated Norman Rockwell as feature artist for the Saturday Evening Post. Most of his illustrations have never been made available before.

At Diamond M Museum...

Show, Sale Of Koerner Art Set Here Aug. 12

A special show and sale featuring the art works of W.H.D. Koerner will be held next month at the Diamond M Museum.

Terry Gilbreth, museum director, said the show begins Aug. 12 and runs through Aug. 17. Some 35 to 40 Koerner originals are expected to be involved.

The late Koerner is remembered chiefly for his western paintings, said Gilbreth, and his daughter will be bringing western as well as non-western works to the show here.

"She (daughter Ruth Koerner Oliver of California) is bringing some pictures not considered western such as island scenes and sailing scenes, whatever he was called on to illustrate," noted Gilbreth.

Most of Koerner's illustrations were shown in The Saturday Evening Post magazine, but other illustrations were shown in Harper's Monthly, Redbook, Ladies' Home Journal, and Good Housekeeping, said the museum director.

Koerner was born in Europe in 1878, but came to this country as an infant with his parents. He died in 1938.

His life is sandwiched between artists Frederick Remington and Norman Rockwell. Contemporaries of his include such artists as N.C. Wyeth, Harvey Dunn, and Phillip Goodwin.

"His daughter," said Gilbreth "took and stored the bulk of his paintings so they have not been on the market and they are not bringing what his contemporaries bring. But now she has brought them out and is offering them for sale."

Gilbreth said he is pleased that the Diamond M Museum, a small museum in a small town, was chosen for the special showing and sale.

"This is a great opportunity," he said, "to be selected as the museum to display this. She (Mrs. Koerner Oliver) could have chosen any landmark museum in the country."

Held in conjunction with the art show and sale will be an autograph party for the book, "The World, The Work, And the West of W.H.D. Koerner," a biography of the artist.

The museum is open from 9 a.m. until 4 p.m. on weekdays, from 1 p.m. until 4 p.m. on Saturday, and from 1 p.m. until 6 p.m. on Sunday.

Keeping tab on our neighbors:

Walt Finley of the Big Spring Herald passes along this exercise for figure filberts:

Write down your house number, double it, add five, multiply by 50, add your age, add the number of days in a year, subtract 615. The last two numbers in your answer is your true age, not what you (or I) tell everyone. The other digits will be your house number.

So far, we haven't bothered to try this, but it looks nonsensical enough to work.

Lynn Brisendine of the Brownfield News says that even apes have better international relations than man has so far devised for himself. The eminent psychologist, Dr. E.L. Thorndike, has pointed out that howler monkeys manage their relations and conflicts with neighboring groups much more peaceably and with far less destruction of life and property.

"For the most part, each nation (of monkeys) stays in its own territory, minding its own business," says Dr. Thorndike.

"If one nation encroaches upon another's territory, the invaded nation meets them with a vigorous attack of howls.

"The invaders howl back.

"The contest continues until, by a beneficent provision in the brain of the howler monkey, the side that is outhowled is moved to retire. Not a drop of blood is spilled; not an atom of food or shelter is destroyed. No blot stains the national honor since each citizen howls its loudest until an inner nature says, 'howled enough.'"

Whatever the justice of the procedure may be, "the outcomes are surely far better," Dr. Thorndike points out, "than in man where the large wins over the small, the bellicose over the peaceful and force over reason.

Pediatrician Added To Hospital Staff

For the first time in more than 15 years, Cogdell Memorial Hospital has a pediatrician on its staff.

The board of managers of the county hospital last night approved the application of Dr. Maria Teresa Granados for staff privileges. She is expected to begin practice here next month.

Also approved was the application of Dr. Paul Thompson, the first doctor to return here in the medical scholarship program.

Dr. Granados, who will come here from Riverdale, N.Y., is not only certified by the American Board of Pediatrics, but also is a Fellow in Pediatric Endocrinology, a specialty which is not available in this region at present, according to Cy Miller, administrator of Cogdell Hospital.

Dr. Granados received the doctor of medicine degree at Cayetano Heredia Peruvian University in Lima, Peru. She served residencies at the Bronx Lebanon Hospital, New York University and Bellvue Hospital in New York City.

She will have offices here in a recently completed addition at the south end of Medical Arts Clinic.

The board unanimously approved the appointments of Dr. Granados and Dr. Thompson to the hospital staff. Approval had been recommended by the medical staff.

Dr. Thompson is scheduled to begin practice next week, Miller reported.

The administrator also reported that Margaret Martin, R.N., has been named director of nursing

Little People Meet...

It Was A Tall Occasion For Short Deputy Clerk

By JOHN LONG

When Frances Billingsley of Snyder attended a convention recently in Pennsylvania, she walked onto the convention floor with the definite feeling of being head and shoulders above some of the people there. For Miss Billingsley, that's unusual because she's a dwarf and only 47½ inches tall. She encounters a lot of tall people in her job as deputy county clerk.

The convention was the annual meeting of Little People of America, Inc. There, her 47½ inches carried her in a stately mien. In the little people's association, there are rules against being more than 4-feet-10.

"You're not going to believe this," she confided, "but I'm one of the taller ones." Being a relative giant for a change was a new experience for her, she said, adding, "It's a little bit nerve-racking because I'm used to being around people your size."

The little people's convention was held July 15-20 in Lancaster, Pa. It was the 21st annual convention of the association and Miss Billingsley's 10th time to attend.

The convention was attended by 576 little people from the United States and Canada. When not in business seasons, the little people toured the Amish country of Pennsylvania, went swimming, and canoeing, played miniature golf, rode a miniature train, and attended talent and fashion shows. Miss Billingsley also made a stop at Three-Mile Island, the site of a recent nuclear accident.

She is a second generation dwarf. Her father, Jimmie Billinglsey, also a dwarf, came from a family of six-footers. Her brother, a dwarf, married a little person and they have a normal-size daughter plus an adopted beneficial plague

A plague, as it turns out, need not always be a disaster.

Under the right circumstances, it can actually prove a boon.

The circumstances in this case involve the re-emergence of the 17-year locust on the East Coast, a natural phenomenon which received quite a bit of attention when first reported earlier in the warm season.

Now comes further word on the locusts from New York's Hudson River valley, where presence is having an effect but nothing along the lines of the biblical plagues.

The valley is one of the nation's major cherry-growing regions. Thanks to the locusts, this year's ripening fruit is being ignored by the birds which ordinarily take a considerable bite out of the marketable crop. Instead of feasting in the orchards, the birds are gorging on locusts and a cherry harvest far larger than in recent years is anticipated.

It is a reminder of how intermeshed earth's ecology is and how its natural functioning may better serve man's interests at times than his efforts to reshape it to his supposed needs. The instinctive reaction to the locust is that it is a destructive pest to be warred against.

A reaction currently not shared by Hudson valley cherry growers, however, if warned in the future of a plague of this type on their houses, they would likely rush to open the doors in welcome.

premature alarm

As the nation continues a critical evaluation of its health care services, many suggestions are being heard. One of the more unusual is to the effect that what the nation needs is not more doctors but a better health delivery system.

Some critics of present trends go so far as to argue that medical schools ought to halt expansion.

"The time has come when we should put a stop to expansion at least long enough until we can re-evaluate the problem and reassess the need," one critic said recently.

An oversupply of physicians, he added, could "lead to overdoctoring, unnecessary calls and examinations, overutilization of X-ray procedures and laboratory tests, the lowering of professional ethics and fierce competition leading to solicitation, fee-splitting and inducement."

Doctors in oversupply? What of crowded waiting rooms, communities which are unable to attract even a single physician, doctors' offices which refuse to take new patients except in emergencies, and hospitals which have difficulty finding staffs?

Admittedly some of the conditions feared by alarmists would occur if the nation were fortunate enough to have a surplus of doctors. But that time is not yet.

Okay, Hollywood. Just try to scare me half to death.

And give it your best shot. For the last couple of years you've made nothing but promises. "You'll never go to the beach again." "A nurse will be in attendance to revive you." "In outer space, no one can hear you scream."

Heaven knows you've tried. You've paraded across the screen giant spiders, frogs, snakes, and flies. Killer bees, rats, ants and sharks.

You've popped up monsters out of the deep, big footprints in the snow and sweet little English children with weird eyes.

When that didn't work, you tried to terrorize me with towering infernos of fire, airplane disasters and Shelley Winters in a wet suit.

Now you're onto space objects falling to the earth, cloning, nuclear waste turning humans into mutations, giant rabbits and vampires with a sense of humor.

I don't scare easily. What kind of a movie would it take to really throw me into shock? Maybe one of the following teasers:

Jaws III: A teenage boy comes home ravenous and terrorizes his mother who has a refrigerator full of food for her first dinner party in seven years.

Mother Moth: A spine-chilling tale of a woman who discovers a pregnant moth in her garment bag storing the only fur she will ever own.

Rosemary's Crazies: The story of a town that has a sadistic school board that decides to start school two weeks later in the fall than originally planned.

The Leftover That Refused to Die: A bizarre story of a leftover piece of liver that refuses to die after being bludgeoned, threatened and all life systems have been pulled.

Omen III: A child called Damian vacations with his parents and kicks the back of the seat for 262 miles while smiling.

The one that really would strike terror into the hearts of women everywhere is The Bleach Syndrome, where a hairdresser would be done in, taking the formula for all her "standings" color with her.

Doesn't that make your flesh crawl?

The times are hard. Everytime you go to the gas station it seems the price of gas has gone up another two cents a gallon. But after watching TV and reading the paper you feel lucky to even get gas without waiting in line and when you please.

At the lowly laundramat even, the machines that for so long were satisfied with a quarter and a dime suddenly demand two quarters. A trip to the garage for a routine repair will make your blood overheat and a trip to the doctor or dentist can put you into shock. That is the reason for the two hours in the office. It would be all over for you in ten minutes if you walked right in and saw the doctor right at the time of your appointment, and who can afford to die? Have you priced a funeral lately? Even the economy plan is out of this world.

I also understand that being born is quite painful for whomever has to bear the cost.

And the President wants us to do it all in 78 degrees or hotter.

A sign of the times is the shedding of coats and ties by the executive set. It may get to where you can't tell those who sit around inside all day from the common man. Imagine that, not being able to determine by appearance whether a man tills soil, drills for oil or just mostly eats and rides. Good Lord! What is this country coming too?

Time Magazine says discarding suit jackets is the equivalent of reducing the temperature by three degrees and by shedding the tie another degree. But it also notes that women in offices are turning to thinner fabrics and halter tops. That would send my temperature right back up there.

Despite promises by all the experts that things will get worse before they get better, I think I detect a twinge of optimism in the air. It could be due to the upcoming presidential election but I don't think many people really blame all our problems on Carter. I think that we have been down for so long that its beginning to look like up. We are resigning ourselves to making the necessary changes in lifestyles and are anxious to get on with the task.

Sometimes it helps to look back to when times were really hard. Talk to any oldtimer.

C.E. Airhart of Hermleigh remembers nothing great about the Great Depression.

"I was in the field ready to go to work when the sun came up and when it got so dark I couldn't see it was time to go home and do my chores. I did this for a dollar a day.

"The talk was you could hear banks in Big Spring drawing interest plum across the street and silver dollars were said to be as big as wagon wheels."

Boyce Jones, also of Hermleigh, said he was very fortunate during the Depression. He left home and went to South Texas and got a job for a dollar a day plus a bunk and laundry services.

Neither man mentioned air conditioning.

WASHINGTON (NEA)— With motorists fulminating about long lines at service stations and the country facing the prospect of even more serious energy shortages, the president of the United States delivers a major nationally televised speech.

"We must develop new sources of energy which will give us the capacity to meet our needs without relying on any foreign oil," the president says, warning that resolution of the problem "will require some sacrifice by all Americans."

The energy crisis has been "the subject of intensive discussions among members of my administration, leaders of Congress, governors, mayors and other groups," the president adds, pledging to "work closely with Congress in developing an emergency energy act."

The date of that speech was Nov. 7, 1973 - more than 5½ years ago. The president was Richard M. Nixon.

The rhetoric undoubtedly sounds familiar because it readily could have been substituted for many of the important lines in President Carter's trio of highly publicized mid-July speeches in Washington, Kansas City, Mo., and Detroit.

In fact, virtually all of what was touted to the American people as a major new initiative from Carter was promised to the country before - but the White House, under various presidents, delivered little of it.

Indeed, the failure of leadership at the highest level of government has been a major contributor to the "crisis of confidence" Carter noted in his televised address to the nation and the "national malaise" the president cited repeatedly to those who visited him at Camp David.

To place the current "energy crisis" in its proper context, take another look at Nixon's speeches during the Arab oil embargo of late 1973 and early 1974:

In a Jan. 19, 1974 radio speech, he said "I shall urge the Congress .... to act immediately on a windfall profits tax" on petroleum industry revenues and announced that he had directed federal energy officials "to conduct a thorough audit of the records of all major domestic oil companies."

On Jan. 23, 1974, in a special energy message to Congress, Nixon proposed creation of two new federal agencies, one to "carry out major new activities in energy resource development" and the other "to provide unified leadership and direction for energy technology programs."

In that same message, Nixon called for "the development of a domestic synthetic fuels industry - the production of oil from shale and the production of gas or oil from coal."

Nixon delivered on none of those commitments. Only nine months after the first of those speeches, he resigned from office rather than face the threat of impeachment.

In the first half of his recent speech, Carter alluded to Nixon, the Watergate scandal, the divisive war in Vietnam, the political assassinations of the 1960s - the events that have led this nation into a crisis potentially far more ruinous than any real or imagined energy shortfall.

What Carter didn't mention is that he ran for president as the man who would not only heal the wounds but also halt what he accurately described in his televised address as "the loss of unity and purpose for our nation."

After 2½ years in office, the president has failed in that undertaking. At best ineffectual, at worst incompetent, his major contribution to national governance has been the substitution of sanctimonious speeches for bold vision and substantive accomplishment.

If there was any sign of hope in Carter's speech, it came not from a recycled Nixon energy program but rather from his candid recollection of a blunt but honest critique from an unnamed Southern governor: "Mr. President, you are not leading this nation - you are just managing the government."

In Detroit the following day, Carter again cited that remark, then added: "I listened to that and I learned my lesson." If he didn't, both the country and its current president will continue to suffer.

Kelp May Help...

Seaweed May Alleviate Nation's Energy Crisis

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP)—The tangly, smelly seaweed that wraps itself around swimmers may some day help them get home from the beach and warm up when they get there. So don't curse the stuff - it could be part of the answer to the nation's energy crisis.

Scientists are now seriously considering the development of seaweed farms for conversion of the plant into methane - a possible substitute for natural gas. If the idea proves realistic, there could be a giant seaweed gasification industry along U.S. coasts before the year 2000.

With current technology, the millions of years of natural biological processes needed to produce gas from organic matter can be reduced to just days. And scientists feel seaweed, because of its fast growth and hydrocarbon content, is ideal for this accelerated process.

But growing the large amounts of weed necessary to feed the gasification plants is a problem, and an ambitious project sponsored by General Electric off the Southern California coast is seeking the solution.

The $7 million a-year effort has become especially significant in light of President Carter's call for energy independence.

The program involves a "test farm" about five miles off this coastal resort where GE researchers are learning to manage the growth of kelp near the ocean surface. Although this seawater spread is only a quarter-acre now, scientists think it could become part of a giant industry.

"There's no chance we can replace all of it, but kelp conversion may end up supplying a significant part of U.S. natural gas needs, perhaps 15 to 20 percent or higher," says project manager Armond J. Bryce.

"The basic process of kelp conversion is trapping solar energy and storing it in the form of plant tissue, then fashioning a gaseous product and delivering it through the existing distribution system," says Bryce.

Some of the new money promised by Carter for alternative fuels could speed development of kelp conversion by a few years, Bryce says, moving it into the mid-1990s. Current GE research schedules call for a 500-1,000-acre demonstration farm in 1985 and a commercial-size demonstration project in 1992.

To supply all the nation's current natural gas needs, research indicates that kelp farms 25 to 100 miles off the nation's East, West and Gulf costs would have to total 400,000 square miles - about two thirds the size of Pennsylvania.

But such farms just below the waves would create none of the environmental unsightliness of strip-mining for coal.

For cost effectiveness, production facilities would have to be nearby, but they could be huge, floating factories that extract methane and some other useful byproducts.

Head Lice Go To Camp

Poison ivy, colds, sprains and insect bites are the kind of problems a camp nurse deals with routinely but one camp nurse reports that she was faced with the unexpected.

"The last thing I expected was an epidemic of head lice," Lynne Brodie Welch, RN, writes in an article in The American Journal of Nursing." During the last week of summer camp she noticed a six-year-old camper scratching her head. Nurse Welch then looked for and found lice and nits (eggs). Further inspection of campers and counselors confirmed that the infestation had spread.

Lice became the focus for jokes, songs and poems. Models of lice were made in the art cabin, and a large sign appeared over the dining room that read "take a louse to lunch."

Although camp morale did not appear to present a problem, halting the epidemic did. "Lice spread rapidly in group situations such as camps or schools," Ms. Welch writes. "We used Kwell Shampoo (200 heads) and R&C Spray for anything that could not be laundered or dry cleaned." Combs, barrettes, afro picks and bobby pins were soaked in solutions of Kwell. After being shampooed, hair was combed with fine-tooth combs to remove nits.

A note to parents explained what had been done. Campers and their parents were told to have sleeping bags dry cleaned and to check for nits. Anyone who left camp earlier and camp visitors were notified. "Head lice have become a more frequently encountered health problem in camps and schools in recent years, but prompt action can halt their spread," concludes Ms. Welch who is an assistant professor of nursing at Western Connecticut State College in Danbury during the school year.

South's one-notrump response was made because he was the dominant male half of a mixed-pair partnership. He was unhappy with his choice when he saw the dummy, but wound up getting away with murder.

He rose with dummy's ace of hearts and dropped his six. Then, in hope of forestalling a club lead, he led one to his 10. Lo and behold the 10 held the trick.

He was off and running. The spade queen finesse lost to East's king and back came the nine of hearts covered by his jack and West's queen. Now West led the 10 of hearts and East chucked a low club.

West led his last spade and South wound up with three spades, two hearts, a diamond and a club and a plus score of 90 that turned out to be a complete top. The normal North-South contract of two spades fell one or two tricks short and the East-West pairs that got into the bidding all made two clubs.

Your partner opens with a standard one notrump. A Maryland reader says that he was severly criticized for raising to three notrump instead of bidding a Stayman two clubs.

The criticism is unjust. All experts (including Stayman himself) simply raise to three notrump with this hand. If partner does hold four hearts, the chances still are that notrump will be the best game contract.

Fame Game Kicks Off Grid Season

CANTON, Ohio (AP)—Four of the big names of the past will be enshrined in the Pro Football Hall of Fame Saturday, serving as an emotional prelude to a preseason-opening clash between the Dallas Cowboys and Oakland Raiders.

Quarterback Johnny Unitas, middle linebacker Dick Butkus, offensive tackle Ron Mix and defensive back Yale Lary will join 98 other greats in pro football's shrine.

Following the induction on the steps of the Hall of Fame, the National Conference champion Cowboys and Raiders will open the 1979 National Football League preseason schedule at Fawcett Stadium.

The Cowboys and Raiders are the winningest teams in pro football over the past 16 years.

Coach Tom Landry's Cowboys, led by 37-year-old quarterback Roger Staubach, are looking to regain the NFL championship they lost to the Pittsburgh Steelers in the Super Bowl.

However, this will be the first try as head coach for Oakland's Tom Flores, who filled the slot left by John Madden's resignation for reasons of health after last season. The 1978 Raiders failed to make the playoffs for the first time since 1971.

With unhappy star quarterback Ken Stabler a late arrival in training camp and still demanding to be traded, David Humm and Jum Plunkett are expected to share quarterbacking duties Saturday.

Also missing from the Oakland lineup will be All-Pro tight end Dave Casper, who is attempting to renegotiate his contract.

The Cowboys' defensive line will sport a different look, too, with longtime star left tackle Jethroe Pugh retired by age and left end Ed "Too Tall" Jones apparently retired by a dream of becoming a heavy-weight boxer.

Staubach will start, with Danny White and Glenn Carano also playing.

Both teams are expected to play their veterans early, then look at the youngsters, including running back Ron Springs of Ohio State and tight end Doug Cosbie of Santa Clara for Dallas, and defensive end Willie Jones of Florida State for Oakland.

A sellout crowd of 19,000 is expected.

WTC Sets 3rd Annual Partnership

The third annual Western Texas College Golf Partnership will be held here Aug. 4 and 5, Bob O'Day, WTC coach and pro shop manager, has announced.

Teams will be flighted after Saturday's round, according to low ball scores. Contestants will be assigned 9 a.m. or 2 p.m. tee times.

The tournament will be limited to first 64 teams. Entry fee is $50 per team, with Aug. 1 set as entry deadline.

Players may register for the tournament by calling the pro shop at 915-573-9291.

Club Holds Tournament

The Snyder Optimist Club will sponsor a fast-pitch softball tournament at Winston Park, Aug. 3-5.

Ten teams, including representatives from Big Spring, Tahoka, Lubbock, Lamesa, Snyder and Sterling City, will fill the bracket, which begins with a 7 p.m. game on Aug. 3.

Toronto's Jays Drub Ailing Rangers, 8-4

TORONTO (AP)—Tom Underwood figured he was due to give up more than a couple of runs and still win a game.

As a starting pitcher with 13 losses, Underwood's respectable 3.61 earned run average underlined the lack of offensive support he had received from Toronto Blue Jays' bats. Observers called him the team's hard-luck pitcher.

But luck was on Underwood's side Thursday night as he gained his fourth win thanks to a pair of home runs by Otto Velez as Toronto defeated Texas Rangers 8-4.

"I was pretty much due to give up four runs and win a game for a change," Underwood said.

"I was just sitting down doing some things today. I'm not a real statistic person, but since May 1 my ERA has been 3.00 and since my third start in May it's been 2.50."

However, Underwood didn't think too highly of his performance Thursday. He struck out five and walked just one, but also gave up nine hits including three home runs - a two-run shot by Dave Roberts in the fifth inning and solo homers by Buddy Bell and Richie Zisk in the eighth.

Dave Freisleben relieved Underwood in the eighth after the consecutive homers and finished the game for Toronto.

Texas Manager Pat Corrales said the Rangers must snap out of their post All-Star-break slump soon if the club is to keep pace with West Division-leading California Angels.

Coaches' Stars Play Tonight

FORT WORTH (AP)—The North-South All-Star basketball game tonight lacks big name stars except for Crockett's Claude Riley.

Riley was a last minute addition when Greg Kite of Houston Madison, who is bound for Brigham Young, decided not to play.

South Coach Dave Middleton of Brazoswood has announced his other four starters. They include point guard John Grammer, who averaged 23 points for Rice Altair; outside winger George Turner, a 27-point per game man for Hitchcock; and postmen Curtis Wallace, who averaged 14 points for Huntsville, and Kenneth Perkins of Beaumont-Charlton Pollard, who averaged 18 points.

North Coach James Boynton of Abilene said his starters would be guards Darrell Browder of Fort Worth Dunbar, who averaged 14.6, and Kevin Carlile of Whitehouse, an 18 point per game producer, postman Brad Olson of Cypress-Fairbanks, also an 18-point per outing producer, and forwards Travis Salem of El Paso Coronado, 15 PPG, and David Reynolds of Perryton, 21 PPG.

On the football front, the South was installed a touchdown favorite because of its star-spangled backfield.

South head Coach Bob McQueen of Temple announced his starting backfield for Saturday night's meeting in Amon Carter Stadium on the Texas Christian University campus.

They included quarterback Mark James of Gregory-Portland, running backs Eric Dickerson of Sealy and Craig James of Houston Stratford, and wingback Ernest Jackson of Lamar Consolidated.

North Coach Frank Bevers of Highland Park said his starting backfield would be quarterback Rick McIvor of Fort Stockton, fullback Lott McIlhenny of Highland Park, halfback Charles Wagoner of Dallas Carter and flanker Leslie Butler of Fort Worth Arlington Heights.

Registration for the school passed the 7,000 mark Thursday.

The North trimmed the South 109-108 last year in basketball and 7-6 in football.

In basketball, the North leads the series 18-16, and has a big bulge in football 25-15-4.

Dolphs Consider Los Angeles Move

MIAMI (AP)—Miami Dolphins owner Joe Robbie says he has no firm plans to get together again with Los Angeles officials who are wooing his National Football League club, but adds, "We will be meeting in the future."

Robbie said Thursday it was coincidence that his meeting this week with Kenneth Hahn, who heads the Los Angeles Coliseum Stadium Commission, came on the heels of a Miami City Commission decision to seek bids on the team's Orange Bowl concession. A Dolphins attorney has said that action gives the club a legal means of breaking its lease.

"I'm not mixing the two things," Robbie said by telephone from Los Angeles, where his wife Elizabeth's Fort Lauderdale Strikers soccer team was playing. "Quite naturally, I would have enjoyed the fanfare if I were trying to mix the two.

"It was a purely information meeting," Robbie said of his session with Hahn.

B-City Tops Class AAA

FORT WORTH (AP)—Houston Stratford was selected to repeat as the Class 4A Texas schoolboy football champion this fall by coaches and members of the Texas Sports Writers Association.

Bay City won the nod to win the title in Class 3A, Pittsburgh was the 2A selection, China Spring was favored to repeat in Class A and Union Hill was the pick to repeat for the championship in Class B.

The selections came at the 47th annual Texas High School Coaches Association school.

Dead Animals Discovered In Vacant House

AMARILLO (AP)— Charges of cruelty to animals have been filed against a former Amarillo woman after several dead and dying animals were found amid piles of trash and excrement - some up to seven feet high - in a house she owns.

Mary Elizabeth Beth Miesse, a former Amarillo College professor who now lives in the Panhandle community of Channing, was named Thursday in the charges.

Potter County deputies said Thursday night they didn't know if a warrant had been issued for her arrest. If a warrant was issued, they said, it may have been mailed directly to the Hartley County Sheriff in Channing for enforcement there.

Authorities were alerted to the grisly scene last week when neighbors complained of a horrible odor at the one-story, white brick house.

Investigators entered the South Amarillo home Saturday when a search warrant was issued. They found 15 to 20 animals - five of them alive. Parts of the house collapsed and windows were papered over, officials said.

Police officers without masks were overcome by the stench and could not stay in the house for any length of time, they said.

A dead cat was found in a refrigerator and animal flesh was reported in another refrigerator.

Pat Chase, a veterinarian for the humane society, said she could not tell if one animal was a cat or a dog. Heads were reported cut off several animals and dry blood was found through the house.

The animals that were alive were described as "wild" from hunger and fear. Some were diseased. Three puppies who were about eight months old resembled animals only eight weeks old, Dr. Chase said.

Dr. Chase said the animals that were alive were difficult to catch because they were afraid of people and would tunnel beneath the piles of refuge.

She said one animal's eyes were matted shut, and a puppy's tongue was blue-black from drinking ink. "That was all he could find," she said.

Dr. Chase said it may be impossible to determine the cause of death for some of the animals because they apparently had been cannibalized.

Police said there was no food or water in the house for the animals.

Utilities in the house had been off since February 1974, City Attorney Merril Nunn said. Officials said they didn't know if anyone lived in the house, but the telephone still was connected.

The animals were rounded up Tuesday and taken to the Amarillo Panhandle Humane Society shelter.

Gene B. Morrison of the Society said the society plans to prosecute to the fullest after an investigation.

Dear Abby

Their Romance Is Dead Issue

By Abigail Van Buren

1979 by Chicago Tribune-N.Y. News Synd. Inc

DEAR ABBY: How is this for a proposal of marriage? "Darling, how would you like to be buried in my family plot?"

This actually happened to me, Abby. He's a widower, 69, and I'm a widow, 66.

IN STITCHES IN RICHMOND

DEAR IN: He obviously digs you. But don't make light of such a grave matter.

DEAR ABBY: I am a middle-aged businessman who works 10 to 12 hours a day in graphic arts. I made an appointment with a physician two months ago for 3 p.m. last Monday. It was difficult for me to take time off, but I considered it necessary.

I arrived at the doctor's office at 2:45 p.m. and was told that it would be another "20 minutes." At 4 p.m. I was told it would be another 20 minutes. At 5 p.m. I was told the same thing—that the doctor had been overbooked and would see me as soon as possible. I left.

My question: My time is worth, conservatively, $50 an hour. By giving me an appointment for 3 p.m. I had an implied contract with the doctor. Therefore, don't you think it would be appropriate to bill the doctor for the $100 I lost by cooling my heels in his outer office?

What are your views on this very common occurrence?

STEAMED IN STOCKTON

DEAR STEAMED: You may think it "appropriate" to bill the doctor for your time, but I think it's impractical. A doctor can't block out X number of minutes for each patient, like a music teacher who gives one-hour lessons. Some patients require more time than others. And don't forget the unpredictable telephone interruptions and emergencies a doctor gets daily. I doubt if any doctor intentionally keeps a patient waiting.

DEAR ABBY: Although I'm not quite 16, I am very mature for my age. I am in love with a 25-year-old guy, but I have to see him behind my parents' back because they hate him without even knowing him.

You see, he was married to a no-good tramp and had two children with her. His divorce isn't final yet, and my folks don't want me going with a guy with that kind of background. Abby, you've got to believe me. He is really a wonderful guy. That messed-up marriage was HER fault, not his.

How can I get my parents to just meet him and judge him for what he is?

IN LOVE

DEAR IN LOVE: Assuming the man is blameless, I wonder what kind of "wonderful" 25-year-old guy, not yet divorced, would knowingly see a "not quite 16-year-old girl" behind her parents' back. I would have to say that he must be something less than wonderful. Listen to your parents.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "I'LL WAIT FOREVER IN DULUTH": You may have to. I'll give you the same advice I give to every woman who's in love with a married man and is waiting in the wings for his wife to drop dead. Lose him! It could be the longest wait in the world.

Who said the teen years are the happiest? For Abby's new booklet "What Teenagers Want to Know," write Abby: 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212. Enclose $1 and a long, stamped (28 cents), self-addressed envelope, please.

Lt. Thomas E. Selfridge, a U.S. Army officer, became the world's first airplane fatality on Sept. 17, 1908, when a plane piloted by Orville Wright went out of control.

Meat Middlemen Slow To Pass On Reductions

By DON KENDALL
AP Farm Writer

WASHINGTON (AP)- Middlemen have been passing along to consumers some of the recent declines in the farm prices of meat animals - but not as fast as they should, says a senior Agriculture Department official.

Howard Hjort, the department's chief economist, said Thursday retail prices of beef and pork still are too high, considering the lower prices farmers get for cattle and hogs.

"At least some of the decreases in farm prices for meat and pork...are finally being passed through to consumers," Hjort told a news conference.

The price reductions at meat counters helped soften the increase in overall food prices in June, he said.

However, he said, the price spreads between the wholesale carcass value of beef and pork and what consumers pay "are still wider than can be justified by cost increases at the retail level."

Hjort said that according to his figures, retail beef prices were about 15 cents a pound higher in May than could be justified and pork 10 cents higher.

The preliminary figures for June and early July show those margins were trimmed but still averaged about 10 cents a pound higher for beef and five cents higher for pork than need be.

A report showing the latest developments in middleman price margins is being sent to the Council on Wage and Price Stability for review. The council has been contacting supermarket chains and others about the meat price margins in what Hjort described as "very friendly conversations" aimed at relieving some of the pressure on food costs.

The National Cattlemen's Association, meanwhile, said "there have been further decreases in cattle and wholesale beef prices" since June and predicted that those may result in further declines in retail beef prices in the near future.

Hjort said that for all of 1979 he expects retail food prices to average "close to 11 percent" above what they were last year.

The department had been projecting food prices at "around 10 percent" higher than last year but officials for some weeks have cautioned that those could be moderately above 10 percent, depending on the middleman margins for meat and other factors.

Hjort said middleman price margins still are among the uncertainties that will determine what happens to food prices the rest of this year, along with what happens to the farm production of broilers, hogs and cattle.

Rising coffee prices and the demand by the Soviet Union and other countries for U.S. grain also will have an effect on consumer food bills in coming months, he said.

Hjort said retail food price increases in the second quarter "moderated significantly" and averaged an annual rate of 7.5 percent, compared to the first quarter's annual rate of 17.7 percent as shown by the Consumer Price Index.

Further, he said, the increase in April-June was "fundamentally different" from the sharp boost in the first three months, with marketing costs being the main cause rather than rising farm commodity prices.

But Doubts Feasibility...

Gasohol Plant Scheme Supported By Clements

AUSTIN (AP)-Gov. Bill Clements told some Central Texas farmers Thursday he supported their plans to build a gasohol plant but asked about its economic feasibility.

The farmers want to build a $30 million plant to produce 200 proof ethyl alcohol from processed milo. The alcohol, when blended with gasoline, yields a type of gasohol that any combustion engine can burn without modification.

"You'll stabilize the grain market, you'll have to," Clements told the farmers of their venture.

"We believe in gasohol," the governor said. "This is not to say at all that I believe gasohol is the way to solve our energy problem."

Clayton Litchfield, a North Dakota farmer helping the Texans build their plant, said it will cost 78 cents to produce a gallon of alcohol.

"But what about methanol that costs only 51 cents or 52 cents?" Clements asked. "It's being produced now. Can you compete with that?"

Litchfield, chairman of the Grain Producers International Inc. GPI, said the 200 proof ethanol was a premium additive that would replace more expensive gasoline ingredients.

GPI is a cooperative that helps farmers market their products. The Central Texas GPI Cooperative Inc. has commissioned a feasibility study of their proposed plant.

Ken Johnson, chairman of the Central Texas group, thanked the govenor for signing legislation allowing production of grain alcohol in Texas.

Litchfield said Clements had done as much as he could to help them, but asked the governor to help farmers keep up with research into gasohol technology.

"We can finance the plant ourselves but as far as research is concerned, we need to stay on top of it," he said.

Flooding Continues...

Renewed Evacuations Underway In Houston

HOUSTON (AP)—Radio appeals for boats were broadcast again today for use in additional evacuations as more rain fell over an upper Texas coastal plains area where flooding from remnants of tropical storm Claudette already had left thousands homeless.

Renewed evacuations were underway south of Houston in Alvin, where an overnight 3-inch rain was added to the 25.75 inches recorded by mid-afternoon Thursday.

Civil defense in Galveston also called for additional flat-bottom boats for more evacuations in the Dickinson-League City area where overflowing bayous and creeks continued to rise.

Blocked major traffic arteries complicated the operations. Clear Creek's overflow continued to block Interstate 45 at League City between Houston and Galveston. Sections of Texas 6 also were reported flooded in the Alvin area.

John Caswell, assistant director of Harris County civil defense, said "a 3-inch rain creates problems with everything already saturated." Alvin is in Brazoria County, adjacent to Harris.

Caswell said water seemed to be receding a bit in the stricken southeast Houston and Harris County subdivisions along Interstate 45.

"While we expect more rain today we hope it will not be anything heavy enough that will create real problems," Caswell said.

Little People

daughter who is a dwarf.

Although small, Miss Billingsley said her father never let his size hamper him. He served as a district clerk, county clerk, county auditor, and justice of the peace in Scurry County.

The belief that a little person can do anything a big person can do was instilled in Miss Billingsley and her brother at an early age.

"We were raised as if we were six feet tall and were taught we could do anything the other children could. We were never to say we couldn't do anything," she said of her childhood training.

Being around little people at a little people's convention may be fun for a while, but Miss Billingsley avers she "feels at home" in the world of six-footers and is glad to be back in Snyder. That is the way her father brought her up and it is in the environment of tall people that she feels most comfortable.

services to fill the vacancy which will be created next week by the retirement of Claudia Williams, R.N. Mrs. Martin received the bachelors degree in nursing at Indiana University and the R.N. at Gaston Memorial Hospital in Gastonia, N.C. She is coming here from North Carolina where she has been serving as assistant director of nursing for a 165-bed hospital.

Miller said new air conditioning equipment for the hospital is due to arrive today and that it will be installed as soon as possible. Purchase of the new equipment was approved several days ago after the 27-year-old original cooling equipment failed.

John Jarrell, chairman, presided over the board session. Attending were board members Sam Cross, Roy Kidd, Leon Autry, Rex Robinson, A.Z. Glover and County Judge Preston Wilson.

HEALTH

Lawrence E. Lamb, M.D.

Muscles matter

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Can you explain if there is something wrong with my metabolism? Whether I eat a great deal or not, my weight stays about the same — 140 pounds for 5 feet 11 inches. I can account for no periodic changes in my living pattern which should be a factor. My wife who eats sparingly of nonfattening foods has difficulty controlling her weight. My health appears to be normal for my age of 74. My weight stayed the same during my adult years.

DEAR READER — No, it sounds to me like your metabolism must be pretty good and a lot of other people would like to do as well, including your wife.

You may be more active than you think. Constant little movements by people who are action-oriented use quite a few calories during the day. This includes such little things as jiggling the feet or constant small movements that a person may not think much of.

In addition to that, the amount of muscles on your body has a lot to do with how many calories your body uses even if you're sitting still. Put plainly, fat tissue doesn't use hardly any calories while you're sitting but muscles do. It could be that you are muscular and your wife is not. I think this is a significant factor in causing obesity for many people.

Our modern life style may keep us busy but it often doesn't involve doing the kind of physical activity that grows and maintains the size of our muscles. There are very few people who chop wood or carry wood or do the kind of chores that a more rural America once did.

You may be interested in The Health Letter number 5-4, Weight Training For Energy and Weight Control. It will give you some basic information on why your muscle size affects how many calories your body uses. I'm sending it to you and other readers who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it. Send your request to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Even if a person walks a lot, they may not develop or maintain large muscles. The leg muscles will be just large enough and strong enough to support the body. The kinds of exercise you need to do to maintain the size of your muscles involve strength exercises.

You may be surprised to know that different parts of your body have different rates of metabolism. Your liver which usually constitutes only about two per cent of your body weight uses a large portion of the calories that your body burns at rest.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Several months ago I developed a hernia. I think I read in one of your columns that a hernia could be repaired with a needle without surgery. I am 83. Please let me know.

DEAR READER — You certainly didn't read that in my column. A hernia represents a tear or stretching of normal tissue. Those that occur in the groin are called inguinal hernias. The only way that the tear or stretched structures can be repaired is through surgery.

A hernia through the diaphragm that's caused by overstretching of the normal hole in the diaphragm may be helped by eliminating body fat. The accumulated fat inside the abdominal cavity tends to push the stomach up through the enlarged hole, but it doesn't change the size of the hole that's already developed.

Palm Oil Imports May Drop

WASHINGTON (AP)-Imports of palm oil, which compete with domestic soybean oil in the U.S. market, may be the smallest in eight years, according to the Agriculture Department.

Officials said Thursday palm oil imports for the year ending Sept. 30 may drop to about 300 million pounds from 361 million in the 1977-78 market year.

According to USDA records, that would be the lowest level of imports since 207 million pounds entered the U.S. market in 1970-71.

Palm oil imports, mainly from Malaysia, have been a sore point with American soybean producers for some years. Imports increased sharply seven years ago and rose to a record peak of 933 million pounds in 1975-76.

But officials cautioned in a new report on the fats and oils situation that "palm oil output is increasing in Malaysia and world demand is strong.

"However, palm oil prices at 31 cents a pound on the West Coast have not been competitive with soybean oil," the report added. "U.S. palm oil increases mainly for shortenings when prices are below or nearly equal to the price of soybean oil."

The report said soybean oil prices at Decatur, Ill., rose from about 25 cents a pound last fall to about 28 cents in June. This summer, it may average around 27 cents a pound, the report said.
