Nolan Ryan

MONAHANS — Former major league pitcher Nolan Ryan and Midlander Ernest Angelo, a commissioner with Texas Parks and Wildlife, will be among the guests at the dedication of the renovated Monahans Sandhills State Park J. Conrad and Kathryn C. Dunagan Visitor Center. The ceremony, scheduled for 4 p.m. today, will also feature TPW Executive Director Andrew Sansom. Ryan also will attend a benefit dinner for the park, set for 7 p.m. at the Ward County Coliseum. Ryan will sign autographs beginning at 6 p.m.; only the first 200 people holding dinner tickets will be able to obtain his autograph. The 3,840-acre park is located six miles northeast of Monahans just off Interstate 20 in Ward and Winkler counties. For more information, call (915) 943-2092.

Mother's quest

For the first time in days, Tammy Jones was able to enjoy a night's sleep in her own bed, instead of an unfamiliar hotel room. She's no longer desperate to pick up the phone on the first ring and about not spending entire days inside a stuffy courthouse. Ms. Jones' quest to bring three of her children back to Midland has finally come to an end.

Oilmen say further cuts needed

■ Policy toward Iraq is still crippling domestic industry, men charge.

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The economic crisis in the domestic energy industry could be eased if the Clinton administration would act to restrict imports, according to three Permian Basin men who recently took this message to Washington.

"Even with recent price increases, we still have extremely low oil prices — the lowest since World War II — and we needed to get our plight before Washington," independent oilman Jim Henry said Friday.

Henry, president of Henry

Petroleum and president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, was one of three area participants in the recent "Crude Awakening."

The nationwide event was sponsored by the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

Crude prices closed above $16 on the New York Mercantile Exchange Friday, strengthened by gasoline futures that rose to 10-month highs following a fire Thursday at a Chevron refinery in California.

Henry and Bob Landreth, another Midland independent oil producer, said the primary cause of low oil prices is the administration's policy on Iraq's "Oil for Food" program.

Currently, proceeds from Iraq's

MFHS students rehearse future 'Career Choices'

From Staff Reports

One of the most important decisions teens will make is what to do with the rest of their lives. More often than not, teen-agers will change their minds many times as the clock counts down toward graduation.

In an attempt to help some students with their decisions, Rene Ralston of the Texas State Technical College in Sweetwater and Midland Freshman High School dean of students, Linda Harris, talked to students about "Career Choices" Thursday at Midland Freshman.

The purpose of the presentation was to inform parents and students about future career options, provide information on emerging occupations and "to stress to parents that college is not the only door to a successful career," Ms. Harris said.

The women's presentations included the option of technical schools.

"It used to be that students needed to go to a four-year university to get a good job," Ms. Harris said. "Now the pendulum has swung the other direction. We are needing more and more technical workers."

The program, a first for Midland Independent School District, was presented before students preregister for classes for the next school year so those interested in technological fields can take some basic courses at Midland High School and Midland College, Ms. Harris said.

One of the students at the event was Manuela Urias. Ms. Urias and her father, Enrique Urias, went to the presentation so she could think about her future.

"They talked to my dad and he said, 'let's go see about getting you a career for your life,'" Ms. Urias said. "All my brothers and sister have gone (to college or technical school) and they told me, 'you really can't get by without going to school.'"

Group offers skills to find employment

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

With Midland unemployment climbing to 6.5 percent, local churches have begun working to help unemployed Midlanders find new work.

One project is Next Steps, Midland's Job Network, which offers support to those affected by the energy industry's economic downturn.

"Next Steps grew out of a concern that the church be in a position to minister to those undergoing transition or suffering the stress of unemployment or job insecurity in this downturn," said David Cameron, minister of education at First United Methodist Church. The group meets weekly and hosts speakers on a variety of topics.

At the most recent meeting, executive search expert Fred Pierce of Pierce & Associates described ways to find job openings, submit eye-catching resumes and have successful interviews.

The meeting drew only a modest crowd, but one attendant, Hank Kirk, said he picked up some valuable pointers about resumes and interviewing techniques.

"Most opportunities are hidden," Pierce began. In his profession, "we know about 10 to 15 percent of the job openings. The majority are found by word of mouth and personal networking."

Because most people don't change jobs too often, "there's a lot of fear and trepidation about what to do and where to go. I learned a long time ago that employers look for people with native intelligence, honesty, who understand commitment and loyalty, are straightforward and are self-assured. 'Art Rocks!' chosen as theme of annual Celebration of the Arts

"Art Rocks!" has been selected as the theme of this year's Celebration of the Arts, scheduled for May 14-16 at Midland Center.

The COA T-shirt — which is sold to benefit the celebration's sponsor, Arts Assembly of Midland — is a visual pun on the celebration's theme, according to Linda Bond, assembly executive director. The shirt was designed by San Angelo artist Joan Mertz.

She said the celebration theme was selected by volunteers "to evoke the energy and excitement inherent in the creative process, extending to all forms of art," she said.

The Distinguished Artist for the 16th annual festival is former Midlander Art Cole. Cole, founder of Midland Community Theatre, spent 42 years designing and directing some 350 stage productions. A self-taught "Sunday painter," his watercolors, oils and portraits are now in private and corporate collections in Canada, Europe, the Bahamas, Mexico, and the United States, said Robin Sams, COA co-chair.

Cole retired in 1981 and now resides in Santa Fe. His watercolor "Apache Canyon Church" is featured on this year's COA limited edition poster.

San Angelo artist Joan Mertz designed the shirt for this year's Celebration of the Arts. The theme of the 16th annual festival is "Art Rocks!"

Celebration of the Arts is a three-day festival of the visual and performing arts featuring both local and visiting artists. It includes entertainment, arts and crafts and food booths.

The event begins 6:30 p.m. May 14 with a Preview Party and continues 10 a.m.-6 p.m. May 15 and noon-5 p.m. May 16.

Admission on May 15-16 is $3 for adults, $2 for senior citizens, and $1 for children 3 to 12. Children under 3 are free.

For more information call 687-1149.

OBITUARIES

Robert Hobbs

Robert A. Hobbs died on Thursday, March 25, 1999, at the age of 79. He was born on October 19, 1919, in Los Angeles, California. He attended grade school in Toronto, Canada, and high school in Grand Rapids, Michigan. He attended Michigan State University in Lansing, Michigan, and Olivet College, where he met his wife, Carole Cornell. They were married in August 1942. He joined the U.S. Navy Air Corp in July 1941 and was called to active duty September 1941, and was in the first war class at Corpus Christi. He served two tours of carrier duty in the Pacific as a fighter pilot, receiving five air medals and a Distinguished Flying Cross. He returned to Michigan State University January 1946, earning a master's degree in geology. He was employed by Texaco, Warren Petroleum and finally Gulf Oil Corp. for 27 years. He retired in November 1979 due to poor health. He enjoyed being a member of the Confederate Air Force.

Mr. Hobbs is survived by his wife, Carole Hobbs of Midland; his daughter and her husband, Leslie and Fred King of Houston; and his granddaughter, Amelia King of Houston.

A memorial service has been scheduled for Monday at 11 a.m. in First Presbyterian Church with Dr. Jerry Hilton officiating. Ellis Funeral Home is handling the arrangements.

The family requests, in lieu of flowers, memorials be directed to Community Children's Clinic, P. O. Box 3328, Midland, Texas 79702 or Midland Memorial Hospital Auxiliary, 2200 W. Illinois, Midland, Texas 79701.

First lady condemns Islamic radicals in Algeria, Afghanistan

By Sandra Sobleraj
Associated Press

TUNIS, Tunisia — Girls whose legs are burned with acid because ankles peek from beneath their skirts. Teen-agers raped and pressed into slavery. Trained professional women denied jobs and forced to beg for food. Hillary Rodham Clinton decried such snapshots from Algeria and Afghanistan on Friday, and condemned Islamic fundamentalists there who brutalize women in the name of religion.

"Those who perpetrate these hateful deeds pervert the great religion in whose name they claim to act," the first lady said at a women's rights conference in the Tunisian capital, less than a three-hour drive from the Algerian border.

The tens of thousands of Algerians killed by Islamic radicals over seven years of fighting "were victims of a war that is civil in name only," Mrs. Clinton said, noting that she spoke on behalf of her husband and the American people.

She exhorted her audience of about 1,000

'Those who perpetrate these hateful deeds pervert the great religion in whose name they claim to act.'

— Hillary Rodham Clinton

mostly professional Tunisian women, who enjoy a progressive variety of rights, also to speak out against Afghanistan, where women "are being brutalized by the Taliban once again in the name — the misused name — of religion."

In keeping with the non-confrontational style she's adopted toward her host governments on this 12-day North African tour, now at its midpoint, Mrs. Clinton made only a thickly veiled reference to Tunisia's tight clamp on political freedoms.

The government in this tiny country wedged between volatile Libya and Algeria maintains stability by imprisoning its critics and restricting the creation of political parties and nongovernmental organizations.

"We must speak out when women are stopped from starting NGOs, from freely expressing their views, or participating in the political process," Mrs. Clinton said.

From Tunis, the first lady and her entourage ventured 100 miles south to the old Muslim holy city of Kairouan. She toured one of the nation's 23 family-planning and abortion clinics.

Contraceptives and abortions are provided free to Tunisian women.

"Tunisia's far-sighted and successful family planning policies have played an important role in advancing the status of women," Mrs. Clinton said.

Inside the spotless clinic, she smiled and nodded when gynecologist Rached Nagra said he encourages men to consider vasectomies instead of looking to women to take care of contraception.

"I agree with that," Mrs. Clinton said. "You are the first health clinic I've visited anywhere in the world that has recognized that. I'm very impressed."

Permian Basin Girl Scout Council to honor 18 'Women of Distinction'

From Staff Reports

Texas first lady Laura Bush and Midland volunteer Joan Baskin are among the 18 women who will be honored at the eighth annual Women of Distinction Scholarship Banquet tonight at the Petroleum Club.

The women who were chosen were honored for active participation in their communities and helping to improve the quality of life, according to a Cindy Shelton, with the Permian Basin Girl Scout Council.

The other honorees are Donna Adams, volunteer from Fort Davis; Iris Correa, executive director of MANO in Odessa; Iris

CAREER: Ms. Urias wants to take cosmetology

(From 1A)

Ms. Urias said that she is not sure what classes she wants to take, but she has a good idea of what she wants to do.

"I want to take cosmetology," Ms. Urias said. "I have always wanted to take it, 'cause other jobs may go away, but I will always have work."

"My sister, Maria Flores, is a cosmetologist. She lives in Minnesota right now, but when she comes to town people call her all the time, 'we want a cut, we want a perm.' She told me, 'see, you can make lots of money doing this.'"

Ms. Urias said that although she already had career goals before she went to the presentation, she thinks that some of the things said were very important.

"If I hadn't made up my mind about going to school I think I would have after what they said," Ms. Urias said. "The part where they said that you really can't make it without school would have helped me make up my mind."

OIL: Group shows support for Domenici tax cut

sale of oil is allocated through the United Nations for food and medicine. In addition, the country receives $300 million every six months to increase production capacity, they said. At present, the U.N. allows Iraq to export $5.26 billion in oil every six months — 2.9 million barrels daily at $10 per barrel — though Iraq is only exporting 2.1 million barrels daily.

Landreth said that cutting Iraq's exports "just a little" — to 2 million barrels daily — would benefit the domestic industry.

"It would benefit the world and stabilize world production if Iraqi exports were cut to 2 million barrels," Henry agreed.

The third member of the Permian Basin delegation was Ruben Ramirez, an oil-field worker who has been laid off from his job in Kermit. He is also president of the Permian Basin council of the League of United Latin American Citizens (LULAC).

Noting that he was the first Hispanic and the first non-union worker to address the issue, Ramirez said that he attended the rally because "we're the workers who work 161 hour days, we are the backbone of the industry. We are people who should be respected. As a worker, and as a laid-off worker, I'll continue this fight until something is done. I'm fighting for the right cause — that everyone should be treated fairly. I'm the face of the oil-field worker. People need to see the real face of the industry, the people who are losing their homes, their cars."

Participants also showed their support for legislation, proposed by U.S. Sen. Pete Domenici (R-New Mexico), that would provide the industry with marginal tax credits, enhanced recovery incentives, alternative minimum tax relief and an increase in depletion allowance, among other benefits. The benefits would apply when imports exceed 50 percent, and they currently are at 57 or 58 percent, Henry said.

"We see (a restriction of imports) as the most meaningful solution for the short-term," Landreth said. "But representatives turn the topic to tax incentives. We tell them tax relief isn't helpful if you don't have any income to be taxed. The Domenici bill is excellent and when we get back on our feet, it will have a positive effect."

The difficulty is balancing the desire for free trade with the need to prevent the dismantling of the oil industry by having cheap imports dumped on the U.S. market, Landreth said.

Henry said that cheap imports are picking off American industries one by one and the administration is allowing that to happen in the spirit of free trade. He thinks that the low-cost producer should prevail.

"In West Texas, we've been free-traders, opposing government intervention. But when policy lets cheap imports kill an industry, something needs to be done. If they can produce a product at a lower cost, they should prevail. But if they're dumping a product at below their costs in order to eliminate U.S. capacity so they can dominate the market and then raise prices, something needs to be done."

Landreth said that even though prices are up sharply from their lows seen in December, and prices at the gasoline pump are reflecting higher crude prices, "unfortunately gasoline prices need to go higher. Even at the current level, we need another $3 or $4 before drilling rigs can go back to work and people like Ruben go back to work."

SKILL: Research is 'crucial' to finding a new job or drill a well but I can't teach them honesty and straightforwardness. I teach my recruits that if they can draw on those values they learned as a child, it will be helpful in their job search."

A first step is to identify job openings. While some applicants find jobs through help-wanted ads, Pierce said people should be aware that they will be one of many responding in a short period of time and could easily be overlooked.

He recommended following up a week or two later with a phone call or letter. He also pointed out that want ads can be a valuable source of information in terms of a company profile, specific job requirements and daily priorities.

Strong sources of job openings include professional organizations, peers who a person has worked with either at the same company or through business ventures, trade journals, trade shows, trade conferences, civic groups like churches, clubs, non-profit organizations, even family and friends, Pierce said.

"Build your network to as many people as possible," he suggested. "And let them know your skills and what you want to accomplish."

Research is also crucial, he said, particularly after a job seeker has targeted a company with which he would like to interview. He recommends finding out who the management is, who has the hiring authority and thoroughly researching the company's products, its competitors, market share and any other information that might be useful.

The next step is to send in a resume.

In the 20 years he has been in the executive search business, Pierce said he has learned that "managers spend about nine to 11 seconds deciding if they want to read an entire resume. So you have nine to 10 seconds to make an impression."

"I've found resumes need to be individually designed, as unique as the job you're applying for. If you do a generic resume, you may leave out something that's important to that company or cover up that information with non-essential facts."

While the resume should contain basic information — name, address, telephone number and e-mail address — the key to getting a manager's attention will be a paragraph of three to five descriptive sentences summarizing the applicant's strengths, experiences and accomplishments as they relate to a particular company.

Work history should be presented in reverse chronological order, salary requirements should be kept open and references available on request, he said.

If a job seeker is successful in getting an interview, Pierce said that there are four things the hiring manager wants addressed — either directly or indirectly.

The first is whether or not the applicant is technically capable. Secondly, he wants to know that if he hires the applicant, his company will get a return on its investment of time and training expense. He also wants to know if the applicant sincerely admires the company's product or service. And fourth, he's concerned about the "chemistry" between himself and the applicant — whether he and the applicant would work well together or if the applicant would fit into the company culture.

The first phase of the interview process, the introduction, is critical because first impressions are extremely important. Pierce said first impressions include the applicant's appearance, attitude, how the application is filled out, even initial eye contact and handshake.

"In those first few minutes, if you form a positive impression (and) give them a positive attitude toward you, they'll look for reasons to make you an offer," he said.

The second phase, where the manager determines the applicant's qualifications and where the applicant might fit into the company, also offers an opportunity for applicants to address any objections or concerns the manager may have but may not raise. These may include concerns about technical qualifications or the applicant's motives for leaving a previous job or looking to leave a current job.

KOSOVO: Sophisticated weapons draw attention to conflict

(From 1A)

Europe in two world wars and the Cold War, so it's obvious that the U.S. cares what happens to Europe," Lukaszewski said. "It's important to our economic, military and humanitarian security. That's the reason that we're there now."

American families with loved ones in the military fear the Kosovo conflict might reach the level of killings seen in Bosnian battles. This week's air raids also drew more attention to the conflict and proved to spectators that both countries are now armed with weapons more sophisticated than ever before.

"They have more weapons available that can kill more people. It's no longer just bows and arrows," he said.

Kosovo also has the potential to leave a multi-million-dollar dent in the Texas economy, economists say. The Russian ruble, which purchased huge amounts of industrial machinery, chemicals and processed foods from Texas last year, is at its worst.

"The comments out of Russia, throwing the NATO guys out of Moscow and breaking off contact,

'It's important to our economic, military and humanitarian security. That's the reason that we're there now.'

— Witold J. Lukaszewski, a Sam Houston University political science professor were certainly one of the catalysts this morning," said Bruce McClane, a spokesman for the state Economic Development Commission (EDC). "The Kosovo bombings further damaged the ruble."

On Friday, the ruble hit a record low of 30, which means that the Russian ruble is worth about $0.33 cents to the U.S. dollar, McClane said. It was at 24 earlier this week, he said.

"The ruble dropped to a new low Friday from market jitters ... as Russia retaliated by expelling representatives of NATO ... and Western military in the Balkans deepened," McClane said.

"The move by Moscow — a Serbian ally opposed to the bombing — surprised market players as NATO added daylight air raids on Yugoslavia to its three days of bombardment," he said.

While Texas exported more than $360 million in goods to Russia last year, its effect on the state's economy is trivial compared to its trade with other countries, McClane said. In comparison, Texas exported more than $40 billion in goods to NAFTA partners Mexico and Canada, according to the Massachusetts Institute for Social and Economic Research.

Texas' top 10 export markets, in descending order, are Mexico, Canada, the United Kingdom, Japan, Singapore, Taiwan, Brazil, Netherlands, Venezuela and Korea, according to the institute.

Texas, No. 2 on the top 10 exporting U.S. states (California is No. 1), exported more than $86.8 billion last year. West Texas, along with the rest of the country, won't grieve over the ruble devaluation, while it suffers from the Mexican peso drops, McClane said.

"The world markets, including the United States, took the Kosovo situation pretty well," he said. "Mexico and Canada are responsible for most of the state's export growth during the year and will help offset the export declines to Russia."

Blaze in Mont Blanc tunnel kills at least 35

CHAMONIX, France (AP) — Firefighters searched among the charred remains of cars and tractor-trailers Friday for victims of a catastrophic fire — a blaze that killed at least 35 people in a seven-mile tunnel under Western Europe's highest peak.

The blaze in the Mont Blanc tunnel, which broke out Wednesday on a Belgian truck carrying flour and margarine, was not extinguished until Friday afternoon.

The Alpine tunnel is a major route connecting France and Italy, used daily by up to 4,000 trucks.

On the French side, Philippe Pathous, fire chief for the Haute-Savoie region, said as many as 40 people may have died. On the Italian side, tunnel director Francesco Colombo put the toll at 35.

Among the survivors was the driver of the Belgian truck, Gilbert Degraeve. Driving from France to Italy, he said he was alerted to the fire when oncoming vehicles flashed their headlights about four miles into the tunnel.

Smoke billowed from his truck. He stopped, checked underneath and "it exploded," Degraeve, a truck driver for 25 years, told RTL radio. "It was a ball of fire for about 30 seconds."

Most of the victims were found in or around their vehicles. Only a few had been able to reach the 17 heat-resistant bunkers lining the tunnel.

It was the first fatal fire in the tunnel, which was the longest in the world when President Charles de Gaulle opened it in 1965.

The fire raised immediate questions about the emergency systems in the tunnel, which is equipped with ventilation equipment as well as the 17 bunkers, each of which can hold dozens of people. However, the bunkers are designed to resist heat and toxic fumes for only about two hours.

Among other safety measures, drivers in the two-lane tunnel can pull out every 1,000 feet in case of breakdowns or if they need to turn around. Tunnel officials also can send messages to drivers through an emergency broadcast system.

The tunnel operator, Mont Blanc Tunnel and Highway, said about 20 tractor-trailer trucks and 11 cars were destroyed in the blaze.

"It was truly a dramatic spectacle, and an apocalyptic situation," Pathous told a news conference at the French entrance.

"There will be a problem identifying the bodies," he said.

Temperatures in the tunnel reached at least 1,832 degrees at one point, officials said.

The bodies were still in the tunnel Friday evening, left in place so investigators could better conduct their inquiry into the causes of the fire. It wasn't known when they would be removed.

About 100 firefighters from France, Italy and Switzerland battled toxic fumes and searing temperatures for two days to tame the blaze. For the first time Friday, they managed to penetrate the length of the tunnel.

Using a spray mist, they cooled it down to 158 degrees, then to 122 degrees. Smoke rose from their protective gear as they emerged from forays into the tunnel. They declined to speak to reporters.

Winds blowing through the passage sent toxic fumes from Italy to France, forcing rescuers to focus on the Italian side. The stench of burning rubber and acrid fumes hung in the mountain air.

The burning flour in the Belgian truck thickened the smoke in the tunnel immediately, Colombo said.

An unidentified firefighter receives first aid at the entrance of the Mont Blanc tunnel, near Courmayeur, northern Italy, Friday, after he was overcome by smoke while operating inside the tunnel that connects Italy to France through Europe's highest peak. A blaze that broke out inside the tunnel Wednesday is feared to have killed at least 35 people.

on the Italian side.

Many felt the tunnel's safety measures were not enough.

"For a long time now," said the mayor of Chamonix, Michel Charlet, "it has been said that the Mont Blanc tunnel is no longer suited" to heavy truck traffic. He appealed for a ban on heavy trucks in the tunnel.

Speaking from his hospital bed, Chamonix fire chief Christian Comte said he spent five hours in the tunnel Wednesday, looking for his men.

"The smoke was very dense and the temperatures were soaring, but I knew that I had to go help them," he said from the Sallanches Hospital, where he was recovering from smoke inhalation.

Speaking to The Associated Press by telephone, Comte said he worked his way along the wall of the tunnel until he came to a group of six firefighters — all lying on the ground with their jackets over their heads, motionless.

"I thought they were all dead," he said. He helped them all leave, but one died later.

Among the victims was Pierluccio Tinazi, a 33-year-old Italian tunnel employee. He saved 10 people, Italian officials told a news conference, making repeated trips on his motorcycle before succumbing to the fire.

"I consider him a real hero," Colombo said. "He did his duty and we are very grateful to him."

Colombo said an Italian family of four from a nearby village was also killed.

Five other Italians died. Among the French victims were the firefighter and a couple from Lyon.

Two days of searing heat, smoke and flame took its toll on the tunnel's structure. Police said the ceiling had collapsed for a length of about 100 yards over the fire. French Transport Minister Jean-Claude Gayssot said the tunnel would remain closed for several weeks.

Good economic news in Brazil turns panic to euphoria

RIO DE JANEIRO, Brazil (AP) — In just two months, economic panic has given way to euphoria in Brazil as a flurry of good news has people believing the worst is over.

Stock markets are surging, the currency is stronger, inflation is lessening and investors are slowly returning. The crisis may not be over, but there's a growing sense that Latin America's largest economy is recovering.

"I believe we've seen the worst in Brazil," James A. Harmon, president and chairman of the U.S. Export-Import Bank, told a group of international bankers in Miami on Wednesday.

Merrill Lynch agrees. The U.S. investment bank picked Brazil as its favorite Latin American equity market for the second quarter.

It's a dramatic change from a month ago. Brazil's currency, the real, was in free fall, investors scurried to pull their money from banks, and President Fernando Henrique Cardoso went on national television to plead for calm.

It was the low point of a crisis that began with an abrupt devaluation of the real on Jan. 13. In three weeks, the currency plunged 46 percent, and the government seemed powerless to stop it.

Today, the government's challenge is to keep the new-found ebullience in check and convince Brazilians that the battle for economic stability isn't over yet.

On Friday, Finance Minister Pedro Malan warned against the premature optimism pervading markets and predicted the turbulence will persist for months.

Still, it's hard to resist so many positive signs. The real, worth only about 48 cents at the end of February, was up to 56 cents on Friday. That's still well below the 82 cents the real cost at the end of 1998, but a significant improvement nonetheless.

After losing $1.82 billion last year, Brazilian stock markets are enjoying a new bull run. The Bovespa index of the Sao Paulo Stock Exchange, Latin America's largest, surged 15 percent in the first week of March alone.

Inflation, which was about 2 percent last year but threatened to roar back with the devaluation, is way below initial predictions. Consumer prices in Sao Paulo rose just 0.8 percent in the past four weeks, down from 1.4 percent in January.

The optimism grew when Brazil signed a new agreement with the International Monetary Fund, which underpins a $41.5 billion rescue plan. The country hopes to receive $8.6 billion of that money by early April.

Third night of NATO attacks begins; opposition mounts

Associated Press

NATO warplanes shot down two Yugoslav MiG-29 jet fighters that tried to attack peacekeeping troops Friday in neighboring Bosnia — a dramatic example of how the conflict over Kosovo was spilling outside the borders of Yugoslavia.

The confrontation Friday over the skies of Bosnia was a dangerous broadening of the showdown between the Western alliance and Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic.

NATO foreshadowed a third straight night of airstrikes on Yugoslavia with its first daylight attack, firing a cruise missile from a U.S. ship based in the Mediterranean Sea, according to Pentagon sources.

Western officials say the NATO attacks aim to force Milosevic to sign a peace agreement with Kosovo's ethnic Albanians and to prevent the conflict from spreading elsewhere into the volatile Balkans, such as Bosnia, where a 1 1/2-year war ended in 1995.

The immediate goal of the NATO attacks — to prevent atrocities against Kosovo's ethnic Albanian majority by forces of Yugoslavia's Serbian republic — appeared in jeopardy.

The rebel Kosovo Liberation Army's press agency said fighting continued throughout the province Friday, with reports of more than 30 killed in "mass executions," including 20 slain in Orahovac and 10 in Podujevo. Thousands of ethnic Albanians were also being used as human shields, forced to march into a military factory in the central town of Srbica, it said.

The U.N. refugee agency, which withdrew to neighboring Macedonia, said Kosovo refugees claimed that 20 men were shot to death by Serb forces as they evacuated the Kosovo border village of Goden on Thursday. It was unable to verify the account.

NATO officials said the first two nights of attacks on Yugoslavia were successful in targeting Yugoslav air defenses and other military sites.

In the fighting over Bosnia, NATO jets flying defensive missions "encountered" the Yugoslav MiGs and shot them down about five miles inside Bosnia, Maj. David Scanlon said.

Peacekeeping troops were searching for the planes' two pilots, NATO spokesman Jamie Shea said, correcting initial NATO reports said the pilots had been captured. Yugoslavia denied the planes were shot down.

Local television in Bijeljina, a town in the Serb-controlled half of Bosnia, quoted witnesses as saying they saw a plane crash in the late afternoon.

Meanwhile, sirens blared in Belgrade, the Yugoslav capital, and other cities in the afternoon, then sounded again after dark, a few minutes after an Associated Press reporter outside Aviano base in Italy saw some 10 warplanes take off.

Protests against the attacks that began Wednesday night increased worldwide on Friday, and some NATO allies were questioning the wisdom of further air raids.

Italian Prime Minister Massimo D'Alema suggested a return to talks instead of continuing the attacks. Greece also has expressed reservations, but France, Britain, U.S. and other officials said NATO remained firmly united behind the attacks.

Yugoslav officials say the attacks constitute a war crime that violates the United Nations charter.

Gen. Wesley Clark, the NATO supreme allied commander said Serb forces continued to attack ethnic Albanians in Kosovo despite the NATO attacks. Serbian officials said the rebel KLA, taking advantage of the NATO strikes, had increased its attacks on Serb forces in the province.

International monitors and relief officials forced to leave Kosovo because of the bombing said they feared Serb forces were burning villages and killing ethnic Albanians or forcing them to flee.

William Walker, head of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe monitoring mission that left Kosovo earlier this week, described the situation as deteriorating. The OSCE decided Friday to reduce Walker's 1,400-member mission created late last year to monitor a failed Kosovo peace agreement down to 250 people.

Western officials said they expected a backlash against the decision to bomb, and that the campaign would continue as long as necessary to either force Milosevic to sign a treaty already accepted by ethnic Albanians or destroy Milosevic's ability to attack the Albanian Kosovars.

"There's not going to be one knockout blow, but day after day, if he does not stop his genocidal attacks on the Kosovo people, we will take larger and larger lumps out of his military force," said British Defense Secretary George Robertson.

There was no hint from Milosevic that he would back down. On Thursday, he cut off diplomatic relations with the United States, France, Germany and Britain, and Serbian authorities ordered journalists from NATO nations to leave the country.

NATO officials said Friday that allied aircraft had flown 400 sorties against Yugoslavia in the first two days of air operations and struck 50 targets, all air defense and related facilities.

Air Commodore David Wilby called the attacks "effective."

In Yugoslavia, workers at a Serb auto factory said Friday they would take their families to the complex as human shields. NATO bombing of the Zastava car factory, which also houses a military production plant, could kill thousands of people, said a letter faxed to news media in Belgrade.

Protests against the NATO strikes were expected to increase over the weekend. Heated demonstrations have occurred in Macedonia, Moscow and Toronto, with some form of protest occurring in many other countries.

NATO missiles fail to stop Serb attacks against Kosovo Albanians

Associated Press

By day, Yugoslav soldiers and Serb police still rampage through Kosovo villages, killing and forcing out ethnic Albanians. By night, NATO planes and missiles blast Yugoslav forces in Kosovo, trying to stop their attacks against the very people the NATO operation is designed to protect.

It's a 24-hour war, divided into two parts.

Serbs have looted and torched ethnic Albanian-owned businesses in the provincial capital of Pristina since the air campaign began Wednesday, according to ethnic Albanian sources who contacted The Associated Press by telephone Friday.

Locally prominent ethnic Albanians have either disappeared or gone into hiding, including newspaper publisher Vetton Surroi, a member of the ethnic Albanian delegation at last week's failed peace talks in Paris.

Ethnic Albanian sources, most of them sympathetic to the rebel Kosovo Liberation

Army, reported fighting throughout the separatist province. They also claimed Serb forces have executed scores of ethnic Albanian civilians in the towns of Oranovac, Suva Reka and Podujevo.

Those reports could not be independently confirmed. Serbian authorities expelled foreign journalists from Kosovo on Thursday. International peace monitors left the province six days ago, along with virtually all international and private relief agencies.

However, State Department spokesman James P. Rubin lent credence to the allegations, warning Friday of a reported "escalating pattern of Serbian attacks on Kosovar Albanian civilians," citing reported killings in Podujevo, 20 miles north of Pristina.

"The United States government wants to send a clear message to those responsible for the actions of the Yugoslav Army, and the Ministry of Internal Affairs, that the United States is using national technical means to watch unfolding events in Kosovo," Rubin said, indicating Washington had satellite and aerial intelligence information suggesting that some of the ethnic Albanian claims may be true.

The leader of the ethnic Albanian peace talks delegation, Hashim Thaci, called Friday for "swift and energetic action by the democratic world for the defense of the Albanian people in Kosovo."

In a telephone interview with the Austria Press Agency, Thaci, a senior KLA figure, said the only way to stop the Serb offensive was for NATO ground troops to enter the fight because "war is raging in all of Kosovo."

Ethnic Albanian human rights groups said the bodies of prominent lawyer Bajram Kelmendi and his two sons were found Friday along a road west of Pristina.

Kelmendi's wife reported Thursday that her husband and sons were arrested the night NATO attacks began. When she asked police the next day where her family was being held, she was told: "NATO will find them."

In its report Friday, the KLA press agency spoke of "mass executions" of ethnic Albanians, including 20 slain in Oranovac and 10 in Podujevo. Kosovo Press claimed Serb tanks herded a large number of ethnic Albanians into a military factory in Srbica — apparently to dissuade NATO attack.

NATO launched the air assault to force Milosevic to halt attacks on ethnic Albanians and accept a peace deal granting Kosovo sweeping autonomy. The peace plan called for dispatching 28,000 NATO troops, including 4,000 Americans, to police it. The ethnic Albanians accepted the plan, but Milosevic has refused.

Kosovo is a province of Serbia, the main Yugoslav republic.

For NATO's part, the war has been mostly air attacks at night, many of them directed against Yugoslav air defense sites, military barracks and military-industrial sites, both outside and inside Kosovo.

Although those raids may eventually cripple Milosevic's military machine, they have apparently had less effect on the small units of police and soldiers carrying out attacks on civilians.

In Albania, the country's information minister, Musa Ulqini, told The Associated Press that up to 15,000 Kosovo Albanian civilians were believed on the move southward from the central Drenica area. The refugees were traveling any way they could: by foot, on horses or tractors, or in cars.

Ulqini said the Albanian government believed the Serbs were concentrating their attacks on the mineral-rich northern half of the province, driving out ethnic Albanians in hopes of holding on to that area if a final settlement partitions the province.

NATO airstrikes cement Milosevic's hard-line rule

By Dusan Stojanovic

Associated Press

With every NATO missile that hits Yugoslav targets, Slobodan Milosevic stands to gain more power at home.

The opposition can't support the West in its airstrikes, the independent media have been silenced and foreign journalists expelled. The effect is to plunge Yugoslavia further into isolation, and make Milosevic's voice the only one people hear.

Despite the NATO threat of force, Yugoslavia telegraphed from the start of Kosovo peace talks that Milosevic would never accept a U.S.-sponsored plan to give ethnic Albanians wide autonomy and send in about 28,000 NATO troops to police the agreement.

His primary objection was the NATO troops: Officials close to Milosevic say he suspected the West would one day use those troops to topple him.

Additionally, the ragtag Yugoslav army — the main target of the NATO strikes — has always been sidelined under Milosevic, with far fewer resources than his real power base: the Serbian police.

Serbia is the main republic in Yugoslavia, and Kosovo is a province in Serbia.

"Milosevic figured it this way: 'NATO comes to Kosovo, I face a serious threat to my power. NATO bombs, I lose some vintage military installations, but I get all the power at home,'" said Belgrade political analyst Bratislav Grubacic.

More concretely, if Kosovo gained some democracy under a NATO-enforced peace plan, Milosevic would lose at least 20 seats in Serbia's 250-seat parliament, gained during a years-long boycott of elections by ethnic Albanians.

Loss of those seats would cost Milosevic's ruling Socialists their majority in parliament, along with the power and financial resources that go with it. While Milosevic is perceived as having absolute power, his policies hinge on approval by parliament, where his strong control would fade with the loss of his coalition's majority.

The NATO bombardment has silenced Milosevic's critics and the fledgling Serbian opposition. It has also jeopardized the pro-Western coalition in Montenegro, which along with Serbia makes up the Yugoslav state. Montenegro has been at odds with Milosevic and challenging his rule.

"I hate Milosevic, but how can I support NATO and the United States for bombing my country?" said Democratic Party activist Milos Damjanovic.

"How can I say anything pub-

lically against Milosevic, and in support of the Americans, with their bombs rocking Belgrade every night, with panicked people spending nights in air raid shelters hugging their children?" he asked.

Even before the first NATO missile hit Yugoslav targets on Wednesday, Milosevic banned the main Belgrade independent radio station, B 92. When he did the same thing about three years ago, it provoked a massive public revolt and demonstrations in the Yugoslav capital. This time there was silence.

There was also no public outcry over the expulsion of foreign journalists, accused by Serb authorities of "launching lies about Serbia" to trigger NATO airstrikes.

Milosevic's next move could be the banning of all "unpatriotic" and pro-Western opposition parties, or even liquidation of its members by gangs organized by his allies, the ultranationalist Radicals, Grubacic said.

"And what is the West going to do about it?" he asked. "After the bombing, and for years to come, the West will have nothing to say to the Serbs about their 'democracy.'"

"And, in Serbia it will be open season on anyone who thinks differently from Milosevic," he added.

To make things worse for Milosevic's opponents, who rallied around pro-Western Montenegrin President Milo Djukanovic, the small Yugoslav republic was the first target of the NATO bombing campaign.

Nothing could have been better for the pro-Milosevic bloc in Montenegro.

Clinton appeals to Serbs for support of NATO

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton appealed directly to the Serb people Friday for support in NATO's struggle against Yugoslav President Slobodan Milosevic. "He has jeopardized Kosovo's future and brought you more war," Clinton said in a satellite-beamed message he labeled "the plain truth."

A few hours later, NATO warplanes took their assault on Serb targets into a third day. "The allied force is very large," Pentagon spokesman Kenneth Bacon said. Other U.S. defense officials said the third wave of attacks was led by three Air Force B-52 bombers launching about 20 cruise missiles.

Clinton, meanwhile, invoked the War Powers Act, notifying Congress officially that American forces were engaged in military action abroad.

"The mission of the airstrikes is to demonstrate the seriousness of NATO's purpose so that the Serbian leaders understand the imperative of reversing course," Clinton said.

At the Pentagon, spokesman Kenneth Bacon said Friday night's NATO attacks were carried out by a large air armada that included B-52 bombers and Air Force F-117A stealth fighter-bombers. He would not elaborate. In the first daylight attack of the NATO campaign, a Navy ship fired one cruise missile.

With Yugoslav authorities tightly controlling the media in Belgrade, administration officials said the purpose of Clinton's broadcast, and a similar one by Secretary of State Madeleine Albright in the local Serbo-Croatian language, was to explain to the Serb people why NATO bombers had attacked their country.

"There is no such thing as a free press and opposing views in Serbia now," White House spokesman Joe Lockhart said. But by sounding the theme that Milosevic was to blame for the bloodshed, Clinton and Albright appeared to be trying to unsettle Milosevic's rule and turn his people against him.

"He could have kept Kosovo and Serbia and given you peace," Clinton said. "Right now, he's forcing your sons to keep fighting a senseless conflict that you did not ask for and that he could have prevented."

Appealing to the Serbs' national pride, Clinton told those able to receive his videotaped broadcast that "President Milosevic has spoken often of Serbia's standing in the world, but by his every action he has diminished your country's standing, exposed you to violence and instability, and isolated you from the rest of Europe."

It was unclear how many people heard Clinton's message, which was carried by Radio Free Europe, Voice of America and World Net, the television enterprise run by the U.S. Information Agency, as well as over the Internet.

Lockhart conceded that Milosevic was unlikely to allow state television to broadcast Clinton's message. "But we do believe through a variety of sources, including the Internet, that the message will get through," he said.

State Department spokesman James P. Rubin, meanwhile, said the administration was "extremely alarmed" about reports of atrocities against ethnic Albanian civilians in Kosovo and was "putting a great deal of resources and efforts into checking these out as quickly as we can and as thoroughly as we can."

Any evidence will be turned over to an international war crimes tribunal, he said.

Lockhart suggested Milosevic and his Serb military leaders may be held accountable.

"We have in the past unfortunately seen that this is the kind of barbaric activity that President Milosevic and those who fight for him have engaged in," Lockhart said. "We will follow these reports, and those who commit them, those who were responsible for ordering them and those who were responsible at the political level, will be held accountable in the international war crimes tribunal."

Albright, who learned Serbo-Croatian as a child when her father served as a Czech diplomat in Belgrade, told the Serbs: "Americans do not hate Serbs. Like me, they remember when we were allies against fascism. Like you, Americans want to live in peace with their neighbors and the wider world."

She said the United States and its allies "could not sit idly by while security forces were used to commit atrocities against ethnic Albanians in Kosovo."

With NATO warplanes raking Serb targets with bombs and cruise missiles, ethnic Serb demonstrators charged the U.S. Embassy in neighboring Macedonia on Thursday.

Ambassador Christopher Hill and other Americans were not injured. But on Friday, the State Department authorized the departure from Skopje of nonessential personnel and dependents.

The State Department has warned Milosevic not to expand the conflict in Kosovo to Macedonia, a former Yugoslav republic.

U.S. officials confirmed that the Serbs' sweep through the villages of Kosovo was continuing.

"We know that there is intensified fighting. It remains localized

'He could have kept Kosovo and Serbia and given you peace. Right now, he's forcing your sons to keep fighting a senseless conflict that you did not ask for and that he could have prevented.'

— President Clinton, in videotaped broadcast to Serbs

... but there is fighting," Lockhart said. "This is not surprising to us. This is something that started before the allied operation began."

Gen. Wesley Clark, NATO's supreme military commander, said a third day of airstrikes would be focused on further reducing Yugoslavia's formidable air defenses.

Two U.S. F-15 fighters on Friday shot down two Yugoslav MiG-29 jets over Bosnia. Rubin said the Yugoslavs were "moving against" troops maintaining peace accords in the country where Serbs, Croats and Muslims had fought a war for more than three years. Bacon, the Pentagon spokesman, told reporters later the intent of the MiG pilots was unclear; he said the whereabouts of the downed pilots was unknown.

Albright said on NBC that the 19-nation NATO alliance was united in supporting the assault. This conflicted with reports that Italy wanted to reopen negotiations and that Greece was skeptical of the operation.

Scientists call for limited approval of diabetes drug

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — Unable to determine exactly how risky a controversial diabetes drug is, scientists advised the government Friday to restrict how doctors prescribe Rezulin, in hopes that only diabetics who need it most will risk deadly liver damage.

"This is not to be used ever as a first-line drug for diabetes," said Dr. Jules Hirsch of Rockefeller University. He stressed that patients should try Rezulin only after finding that other, less-risky therapies don't work.

Hirsch's comments came as he and fellow advisers to the Food and Drug Administration struggled in a daylong hearing to figure out how many Americans with Type II diabetes will risk liver failure if they try Rezulin.

Rezulin, known chemically as troglitazone, was widely cheered when it hit the market in 1997, because it is the only drug sold that sensitizes the body to insulin, the underlying problem of Type II or adult-onset diabetes.

Many doctors contend it is invaluable for certain patients, and 750,000 Americans now use it. But in a highly unusual public re-evaluation of Rezulin's safety, the FDA said Friday that 43 Rezulin patients have suffered acute liver failure, 38 cases of which probably were attributable to the drug. Twenty-eight died, seven survived only with liver transplants and five recovered without a transplant. The FDA has not determined what happened to the other three.

Worse, FDA epidemiologist Dr. David Graham contended that the 43 cases may represent only 10 percent of all Rezulin patients with liver failure, because the government seldom learns of all drug side effects. Thus, Graham argued that Rezulin may have caused up to 400 cases of liver failure instead of just the 38 he can prove.

And the risk of liver problems increases the longer diabetics use the drug, Graham contended. He created a model that estimates up to 1 in 1,800 people who use Rezulin for six months could develop liver failure.

Manufacturer Parke-Davis, a division of Warner-Lambert Inc., vehemently denied that Rezulin's risk is so high. Instead, about 1 in 45,000 Rezulin users will develop liver failure, said company Vice President Robert Zerbe.

Thousands of people have used Rezulin for six months to a year, the company said. So, it said, if the risk were as high as the FDA contends, an epidemic of liver failure would have resulted.

Yet FDA's Graham conceded he knows of no patient who died after taking Rezulin for a year. Plus, of the 4,364 liver transplants last year, only four were recorded among Rezulin users.

"Where is the epidemic?" asked Dr. Gerald Faich, a Parke-Davis consultant. Ten diabetes specialists begged the FDA's advisers not to ban Rezulin's sale.

"No drug is 100 percent safe," said Dr. Steven Edelman of the Veterans Affairs Medical Center in San Diego, noting that uncontrolled diabetes causes blindness, kidney damage, heart disease and stroke. "But diabetes is a serious disease" that kills 400 Americans a day.

The FDA advisers could not determine whether the government's dire risk estimate is accurate. So in a series of votes, the independent scientists recommended restrictions on the drug until doctors get a better grasp of the risk.

Rezulin should never be used as a lone therapy, as it now is sold, but only in combination with older treatments in patients not now adequately treated, the panel said.

Since learning of the liver risk in fall of 1997, the FDA has repeatedly warned doctors to test rigorously all patients' livers every month for signs of early damage. That way, patients could stop Rezulin and see if livers heal.

But Graham said the FDA knows of nine patients who took all those safety precautions and still developed sudden, intense liver damage just weeks after passing a liver test.

A study of insurance company data suggests just 45 percent of patients get proper liver testing, he said. So Graham couldn't say if there were more suddenly ill patients and questioned whether testing patients really protects them.

FDA advisers called that low rate of testing "abysmal." They demanded that Parke-Davis explicitly warn patients about the liver risks so they'll know to demand tests for their own safety.

The FDA isn't bound by its advisers' decisions, but usually follows them. It wasn't clear when the agency would decide.

Rezulin's risks may prove moot, the panel noted. Next month, it is scheduled to evaluate two new diabetes drugs, called Avandia and Actos, that promise to offer the benefits of Rezulin without the liver risk. If the FDA agrees, those drugs could begin selling by summer.

First radioactive waste arrives at 1st nuclear dump

CARLSBAD, N.M. (AP) — After 25 years of lawsuits, studies and protests, the nation's first nuclear dump — a network of chambers carved out of the salt beds deep beneath the New Mexico desert — received its first truckload of radioactive waste Friday.

A crowd of about 100 people who live in Carlsbad, 25 miles from the Waste Isolation Pilot Plant, cheered the truck and held up cardboard signs reading, "Welcome finally," and "It's about time!" as the rig rolled through before daybreak.

Earlier in the 270-mile, 7 1/2-hour trip, the truck faced a scattering of protesters yelling "Poison! Poison!" along with two young women who sat down in the road and a man who tried to block the highway with his car.

The first load of waste came from Los Alamos National Laboratory in the New Mexico city that was the birthplace of the atomic bomb.

Ultimately, up to 6.2 million cubic feet of waste generated since the dawn of the atomic age will be entombed over the next 30 years in the salt beds nearly a half-mile below ground. The waste consists of such items as clothing, tools and rags contaminated with plutonium.

Up to now, the United States has had no permanent resting place for weapons-related plutonium waste.

As a result, the waste has been piling up at 23 weapons installations around the country such as Rocky Flats near Denver and the Idaho National Engineering Laboratory, where it is kept mostly in 55-gallon drums on above-ground concrete pads, underneath bubble structures or in earthen mounds.

These corroding drums must be periodically repackaged, and some fear the waste is vulnerable to hazards such as tornadoes or earthquakes.

The arrival of the first shipment of waste at WIPP marked more than two decades of effort to open the $1.8 billion repository, first proposed in 1974. The first truckload will be placed underground by Monday.

"I'm ecstatic — this is just the culmination of everything I've worked for for 25 years," said Wendell Weart, a Sandia National Laboratories scientist who was instrumental in creating the repository.

WIPP is not designed for the thousands of tons of high-level waste stored at nuclear power plants across the country. Yucca Mountain in Nevada is being studied as a long-term burial place for that waste.

Gov. Bush asks federal appeals court to reconsider prayer ruling

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. George W. Bush on Friday asked a federal appeals court to reconsider its ruling that student-led prayers or other "solemnizing" ceremonies before Texas public high school football games are unconstitutional.

The Republican governor, who earlier this month formed a presidential exploratory committee, "supports the right of students to participate in the free exercise of religion, a right which is guaranteed under the Constitution," said Bush spokesman Scott McClellan.

"And he believes government should not dictate or censor the content of student-led prayer."

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals recently upheld a lower court's decision allowing limited prayer at graduation ceremonies, but ruled out the prayers or other solemnizing ceremonies before football games.

Bush and Republican Attorney General John Cornyn together filed a brief in support of the Santa Fe school district, about 30 miles southeast of Houston, whose policies are at issue.

Two unidentified Houston-area parents sued the school district in 1995, claiming that football game prayers violated the constitutional separation of church and state.

The school district's policy allows graduating students to choose by secret ballot whether to have an invocation and benediction as part of their graduation ceremony, Cornyn said. A similar policy was used for football games.

In its 2-1 decision, the court noted a previous ruling that prayer is appropriate at such solemn events as graduation but that football games are "hardly the sober type of annual event that can be appropriately solemnized with prayer."

Cornyn said limiting graduation ceremony invocations or benediction prayers to "nonsectarian" or "nonproselytizing" prayers will force school officials to censor them.

"The decision asks the state to decide what type of prayer should be allowed. To ask the state to supervise religious speech is clearly unconstitutional," Cornyn said.

American Civil Liberties Union attorney Anthony Griffin said he wasn't surprised state officials are joining the legal battle over prayer.

"Maybe football is sacred in Texas," Griffin said. "It's frightening to me that we now use religious stuff hypocritically and we ignore that this is a diverse society... we shouldn't do that in our public schools."

Lisa A. Brown, an attorney for the school district, said the pre-game ceremony policy was not designed to necessarily mean prayer.

"The state is not requiring students to pray, promote or encourage it. It is simply a neutral policy to allow students to choose to design the pre-game ceremony," Ms. Brown said.

"It allows all type of speech. Prayer is just one kind of message the students can give," she said.

Amusement park drowning raises safety questions

Associated Press

You're on one of those amusement park rides that simulates white water rafting or a fast ride down a log chute. Then the improbable happens — the boat tips or someone stands and topples out.

When people wind up in the water, it's highly unlikely that anyone running the ride will have medical training, access to a life-guard or even a simple flotation device ready to toss.

Instead, employees will probably shut down the ride, keep visitors (and themselves) out of the water and wait for park paramedics.

That was the response at Six Flags Over Texas on Sunday when a raft carrying a dozen people flipped, leaving one woman dead and 10 others hospitalized. Several bystanders described jumping into the 4-foot-deep water as park employees stayed on the side and ordered them to keep out.

"There was confusion and chaos. People running the ride didn't appear to have a procedure or a plan," said Wendy Crown, a dive instructor who tried to resuscitate the 28-year-old Arkansas woman who later died. "Waiting for a paramedic? That's not a plan. You don't have the luxury of time in a drowning incident."

Paramedics stationed at the Arlington, Texas, park came within minutes, officials said. They are the only ones Six Flags requires to be trained in cardiopulmonary resuscitation — something not even the state mandates.

Six Flags is still investigating the incident, including what caused the boat to tip, the park's response and whether having a lifeguard on hand would have helped.

In the meantime, inspectors, safety consultants and industry groups say Six Flags' response was appropriate, standard and legal. They also say that serious problems on the rides are unheard of.

The accident was the first time someone wound up in the water since the ride opened in 1983, and several industry veterans said they couldn't remember a similar incident anywhere else.

An official at O.D. Hopkins Inc., one of the biggest makers of the approximately 100 river rapid rides in parks worldwide, said he knew of less than 10 incidents in company history when someone had fallen into the water. No one was seriously injured, he said.

"Would a lifeguard had helped? I can't speculate. That's like saying if airplane passengers had parachutes, would it help," said Jim Glover, a salesman at the Penacook, N.H.-based company.

John Dodson, an Ohio ride inspector and vice president of the National Association of Amusement Ride Safety Officials, said he doesn't think it's essential to have someone with water safety training operate rides just because there's water involved.

"I've been doing this for 14 years and we've really had no trouble like this, but I guess there are always unforeseen things that can happen," he said.

Unlike wave pools, slides or "slow river" rides where people float along a lazy channel of water, park-goers aren't expected during raft or flume rides to be in the water or even get very wet.

Park-based paramedics can get to the scene relatively quickly during such rare events, Dodson said, and it's not safe for bystanders or employees to jump in.

"The employees didn't know what caused the thing to flip. And maybe there was electricity in the water. Then you have a bunch of electrocuted people," he said.

Amusement park rides are certified by the state, and certification requirements vary. Most states do not require a lifeguard for such "secondary water contact" rides or that someone in the park have water safety training, consultants said. Texas does not require safety training of any kind, but parks must have $1 million worth of insurance on each ride.

Paramount Parks, which has water rides at all five of its facilities, trains employees in water safety, including CPR, and keeps life jackets on site to throw in case of emergency.

"We look to go above and beyond the standards to make sure we provide the safest possible experience for our guests," said Paramount spokeswoman Susan Lomax, who declined to comment on the Six Flags incident.

Raptors stun Spurs

SAN ANTONIO — Rookie Vince Carter made two baskets in the final 64 seconds and Dee Brown scored 23 points as the Toronto Raptors beat the San Antonio Spurs 93-91 Friday night.
Carter's 20-footer gave the Raptors a 91-89 lead with 17.2 seconds remaining. The Spurs took time out to set up a baseline jumper by Mario Elie, who missed. Kevin Willis rebounded for Toronto, was fouled and hit a free throw with 8.8 seconds remaining.
When the Spurs got the ball back, Toronto fouled guard Avery Johnson with 5.7 seconds left. Johnson made both free throws, bringing the Spurs within 92-91.
Toronto inbounded and San Antonio fouled Doug Christie, who made one free throw with 4.4 seconds left. The Spurs rushed down court and couldn't get off a shot before the buzzer sounded.
The Spurs, who had won of 12 of their last 13 games, lost a chance to move into a second-place tie with Houston in the Midwest Division.

Mavs beat Denver

DALLAS — Michael Finley scored 27 points, 10 in the third quarter, as the Dallas Mavericks eased to a 98-79 victory over the Denver Nuggets on Friday night.
Erick Strickland came off the bench to add a season-high 17 points for Dallas, which had dropped five of its previous six. Hubert Davis and Gary Trent added 12 points each and Shawn Bradley had 10 for Dallas.
Antonio McDyess's 16 points and 14 rebounds paced the Nuggets, losers of five of their last six. Eric Williams had 14 points, Chauncey Billups had 13 and Danny Fortson 11 for Denver.
The Mavericks led by as many as 16 in the second quarter before the Nuggets cut the deficit to 57-51 early in the third quarter.
But Dallas hit 3-pointers on three consecutive possessions — one by Steve Nash and two straight by Davis — to expand its advantage to 66-51.
Strickland came off the bench to score seven consecutive points late in the third quarter and Finley had 10 points in the quarter.

Lewisville stops Lee girls in overtime

By Stewart Doreen

BEDFORD — The Midland Lee girls weren't playing for a shootout in the second overtime period, but if their Region I tournament semifinals versus Lewisville had advanced to the extra period, they would have had an advantage. They knew it and so did Lewisville.

However with six minutes to play in the second overtime at Pennington Field, Lewisville's Veronica George scored the game-winning goal to end any shootout thoughts, and as it turned out, to end the Lady Rebels' season.

"We were not looking forward to going into one (a shootout)," said Lewisville coach David Hilliard, whose team is 0-1 in shootouts this season. "We are not strong George used her speed to get past the Lee defense, and without breaking her stride, she slipped a shot past Lee keeper Brandice Zachry.

"They had real good speed up front," Lee coach Mike Simpson said. "(No.) 10 (the team's leading scorer Ashley Gaviglio) was tremendous and No. 5 (George) is not a bad athlete. They have good kids with good speed."

"They have more speed on their front line than we had on our back line."

game's remaining minutes after George's goal, Lee came within inches of tying the game twice.

In the 95th minute, a header from freshman Barbara Woodruff hit the post.

"I thought the cross from Linsey (Johnson) was going out of bounds but then it came back in," Woodruff said. "The sun was in my eyes so I couldn't see it, but was hoping anyways, and it hit the side of the post. I was surprised how close it was."

In the 96th minute, sophomore Renee Bonin hit a direct kick that hit the crossbar and bounced out to Johnson, who was four yards out. Johnson passed the ball right in front of the center of the goal to Raffi Belizaire, who hit a pass to her left side where Allison Herr put the ball in the back of the net. There was one problem.

FINAL FOUR

They Meet Again

Spartans, Duke meet in rematch

By Jim O'Connell
AP Basketball Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The first time was early December in Chicago, two of the top teams in the country meeting in the Great Eight.

The second time will be late March in St. Petersburg, two of the top teams in the country meeting in the Final Four.

The game Saturday night between top-ranked Duke and Michigan State is far more important, of course. And this time the winner gets to play for the national championship on Monday night.

That first game, won by Duke 73-67, won't have much bearing on the rematch, the players and coaches said. But they did spend a lot of time talking about it Friday.

"I think Michigan State's a lot different and I think we are, too," said Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski, who has the Blue Devils (36-1) in the Final Four for the eighth time since 1986. "They know each other even better. They seem to be very healthy and have a deep rotation with eight or nine guys. So I think they use their people better now than they did earlier, and so do we."

That game was the first of Duke's school-record 31 straight wins. Michigan State (33-4) lost its next game to then-No. 1 Connecticut and has won 29 of 30 since, including the last 22.

"We were a totally different team back them. Spartans junior forward A.J. Granger said. "We've matured along the way and so have they. I would say the maturity is going to play a big part in the game, and we've come a long way in that department."

In the first game in United Center, Duke took a 17-2 lead as Trajan Langdon hit two 3-pointers and a free throw in the opening four minutes. Langdon finished with 23 points on 7-for-12 shooting, 4-of-7 beyond the arc.

"I think my teammates did a great job setting screens and Will Avery did a great job getting me the ball in my rhythm," said Langdon, a second-

Ohio State-Connecticut matchup features great point guard battle with Penn, El-Amin

By Ken Berger
AP Sports Writer

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — The matchup that's providing all the laughs at the Final Four involves the two Jims, Calhoun and O'Brien.

The matchup between the two point guards is a lot more important in Saturday's semifinal game between Connecticut and Ohio State.

O'Connell's Khalid El-Amin and Ohio State's Scoonie Penn don't know each other from way back, the way their coaches do. They do know how to run a team, motivate everyone who crosses their path and turn 5-foot-10 bodies into catalysts that seem perfectly built for the last weekend in March.

"He could play basketball at 5-6 or 6-4," Calhoun said of his star point guard. "He's a kid with some great ability as far as quickness, shooting strength. But the greatest asset for him is his character and mind-set. He wants to win every single drill, every single scrimmage and every single game he plays in."

Sure enough, there was El-Amin during the shootaround on Friday, urging his teammates on in a mock 3-point shooting contest. "C'mon, y'all! Two more!" he shouted, raising his arms in triumph when his group won.

"Anybody looks forward to a matchup with another great guard or another great competitive person," El-Amin said.

Penn, the transfer who followed O'Brien from Boston College, shot only 37 percent in the Buckeyes' eight losses this season. He is nearly single-handedly responsible for Ohio State's emergence from the wreckage of an 8-22 record last season.

While at BC, Penn played UConn twice and had mediocre games. He was 4-for-10 with 12 points in a loss in 1997 and 3-for-9 for 10 points in 1995.

Lady Chaparrals earn first conference win in softball

By H.A. Tuck
MRT Correspondent

Midland College overcame a big hurdle Friday, getting its first women's softball conference victory in a 4-1 win over El Paso Community College. Actually the Lady Chaps won two from El Paso, but the second was a 6-1 non-conference decision.

At 1 p.m. today on the Bill Williams Softball Complex, the Lady Chaps will play two more games against the El Paso Tejanas, both of them counting toward the Western Junior College Athletic Conference standings. MC pushed its overall record to 34-11 and is 1-3 in WJAC action after dropping all three against Howard College last week. Since MC, Howard, and El Paso are the only teams competing in loop softball, with two teams advancing to regionals, today's games are critical.

J. R. Chavira shut down the El Paso bats in the first game, allowing just one run on two hits while striking out eight. El Paso scored its only run in the fourth inning on a single and an RBI-producing double by Sarah Dokie.

Midland countered with two in the bottom of the fourth. Melissa Martinez singled, stole second and came in on Lauren Wallace's single. Wallace was forced out at second base on Jessica Cobos' grounder. Cobos got to second on an error and came in when Andrea Rodriguez grounded out. MC got its last two runs in the fifth with two outs. Martinez got on by fielder's choice just before Wallace pounded a homer that just stayed inside the line down the left field line.

Chavira faced only 10 batters in the final three innings, with one getting on by error, to close out the game.

Outlaws end Jacks' year in OT

Staff Report

SAN ANGELO — It seemed only fitting that in a WPHL playoff series with two of the league's biggest rivals going head to head, that the third game of a three-game series would go to overtime.

With the game tied at 1-1 for 20 minutes and 43 seconds, San Angelo's Marty Diamond finally broke through with a goal that sent the San Angelo crowd into jubilation and the Odessa Jackalopes out of the playoffs after a 2-1 sudden death overtime win by the Outlaws.

The Jacks end the season at 36-31-5 after a 2-1 series win by the Outlaws. The Jacks were making their first series playoff appearance in the franchise's second year.

San Angelo improves to 41-26-5 and will face the Waco Wizards in the next round of the WPHL playoffs. Last year, the Outlaws were bounced from the playoffs after a 3-0 series loss to the New Mexico Scorpions.

With 6:53 left in the overtime, after the Outlaws placed tremendous pressure on the Jacks goal, Diamond took one shot but Odessa's goalie Billy Pye came up with a great save. On the rebound off Pye, Diamond, from the far side turned and this time nailed the game winner.

The Outlaws took a 1-0 lead in the sec-

Midland High, Lee start 2nd half of 4-5A

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Turning the corner in the District 4-5A softball race has a certain amount of peril for both Midland High and Midland Lee.

These two teams turn the corner at 4:30 p.m. at MUGS Field in Ulmer Park today as both begin the second half of the 12-game district run.

Currently, they are two teams heading in opposite directions, but they both meet at this dangerous corner at the same time, needing different results.

MHS finished the first half of the 4-5A race with a 2-4 record and are a full three games behind Lee. Abilene High and Odessa Permian, all of which own gaudy 5-1 records and a near lock on the league's three state playoff berths.

MHS will probably need seven or eight victories to get into the playoffs for a second year in a row, meaning that the Lady Bulldogs must win out the rest of the way. That would probably do the trick. And they were in every game they played in the first half.

Duke, Purdue move into women's final

Associated Press

SAN JOSE, Calif. — OK, Duke men, now it's your turn.

Nicole Erickson had 22 points and Michele VanGorp had 20 and the women Blue Devils held Georgia's Miller twins to 31 combined points to reach the national title game with a 81-69 victory over the Lady Bulldogs on Friday night.

Duke's men will try to match the success of their female counterparts Saturday when they face Michigan State in the national semifinals at St. Petersburg, Fla.

The female Blue Devils, making their first trip to the Final Four, will face Purdue in the championship game Sunday night. Ukari Figgins had 24 points and Stephanie White-McCarthy added 17 as the Boilermakers defeated Louisiana Tech 77-63 in Friday's other semifinal.

The title game will reunite Erickson and VanGorp with former teammates Figgins and Stephanie White-McCarthy. Erickson and VanGorp transferred away from Purdue in 1996 after their sophomore season.

Georgia Schweitzer added 13 points for Duke (29-6), which was 9-of-16 on 3-pointers. The nine 3-pointers were a record for the national semifinals.

NCAA Women

"They beat us the way they beat most teams, and that's by spreading us out and hitting the 3s, or throwing it in to VanGorp," Georgia coach Andy Landers said. "We didn't have a clue offensively throughout this game. We didn't give up, we hung in there, but they just shot the ball too well."

Following up on its shocking defeat of three-time defending champion Tennessee in the East Regional final, Duke built a 15-point lead early in the second half and used a late 16-3 run to rebuild its advantage after Georgia pulled within six.

"I thought we played with tremendous poise," Duke coach Gail Goestenkors said. "We played with confidence and I also thought we were relaxed. We had a championship mentality," which we showed all year long."

Coco Miller scored 18 points and identical twin Kelly Miller added 13 for Georgia (27-7). The Millers averaged a combined 37 points per game this season. Freshman center Tawana McDonald had 14 points for the Lady Bulldogs.

The Blue Devils undermined Georgia's transition game by shooting 51 percent and committing only 11 turnovers, and focused on slowing the Miller sisters.

Purdue 77, Louisiana Tech 63
SAN JOSE, Calif. — Stephanie White-McCarthy, Ukari Figgins and Carolyn Peck will team up one last time. And they'll do it in the most important game of all.

Figgins scored 18 of her 24 points in the first half. White-McCarthy added 17 and they provided their usual strong dose of leadership as No. 1 Purdue beat Louisiana Tech 77-63 Friday night to reach the championship game of the women's NCAA tournament.

The Boilermakers (33-1) won for the 31st straight time and will try to win their first title Sunday night against Duke, a game that will look a bit like Purdue circa 1995-96 because it will send Figgins and White-McCarthy against former teammates Nicole Erickson and Michele VanGorp. Erickson and VanGorp, who combined for 42 points in an 81-69 victory over Georgia, left Purdue following the firing of coach Lin Dunn in 1996.

Win or lose, it will be Peck's last game as Purdue's coach. She's leaving to become coach and general manager of the WNBA's new Orlando franchise, a job change she announced last July.

Her lame-duck status had no effect on her team and now she has a chance to capture the biggest prize in women's college basketball in just her second year as a coach.

Louisiana Tech (30-3), which had won 22 straight since a 71-65 loss to Purdue on Dec. 19, failed in its bid to reach the championship game for the seventh time. The Lady Techsters, in the Final Four for the 10th time, lost to Tennessee in last year's title game.

Amanda Wilson led Tech with 18 points and Monica Maxwell scored 17.

team All-America who had 47 points in the last two NCAA tournament games on 9-for-12 from 3-point range. "It just felt good in Chicago that night. I had a variety of different people on me. It wasn't that they did a bad job, just my teammates did a great job of getting me the ball."

Mateen Cleaves, Michigan State's first-team All-America, had a bad night in the first meeting, going 3-for-17 from the field with nine points and six assists.

"I don't even think about that last game. I try to get that game out of my head," said Cleaves, who has averaged 11.3 points and 7.0 assists while keeping up his tough defense in the NCAA tournament. "I'm really not going out there to play for payback or that I have to prove to somebody that I can shoot better against Duke."

"My thing is I have to concentrate on doing a better job for my team," he said. "I didn't do a good job with my team then, my shooting. ... This time I have to do a better job of running my team."

Both teams are better than they were in December and history becomes a fading factor in an event like the Final Four. Still, reality is reality.

Coach Tom Izzo, who has the Spartans in the Final Four for the first time since 1979, was asked if he has found a flaw in Duke.

"I guess if you have to really search and search and search, there's no backup point guard for Avery if he gets in foul trouble and that could be a problem," he said.

ond period when Daniel Chaput took a wrist shot and bounced the puck in between Pye's legs for the power play goal.

Odessa came back and tied the game in the third period. With less than 14 minutes remaining in the contest, Martin Ohrstedt took advantage of some Jacks' pressure to fly a puck past San Angelo goalie Chad Erickson.

Both goalies were spectacular in this series-clinching game. Pye saved 41 out of 43 shots while Erickson denied 37 of 38 shots.

There was some controversy, however, in the first period that went against the Jacks. Television replay showed that the Jacks had actually pushed the puck across the San Angelo goal line but the referees didn't allow it at the time.

GUARDS: Coaches familiar

(From 1B)

"I like the matchup between Khalid and myself," Penn said. "I don't see it as an advantage because I've been hot lately."

Calhoun has a major decision to make when it comes to guarding Penn and Michael Redd, the Buckeyes' leading scorer. Which one should defensive stopper Ricky Moore defend?

Calhoun would be crazy to tip his hand, but one scenario has Moore, who is 6-2, guarding Redd, who is 6-6. His other option is to put the 6-foot-6 Richard Hamilton on Redd. But Hamilton is the Huskies' leading scorer, and asking him to shut down the Buckeyes' top scoring threat might be too much.

Moore held Michigan State point guard Mateen Cleaves to six points on 2-for-15 shooting in an 82-68 UConn victory in the Great Eight in December.

"In 27 years, I've never had anybody — and I've had some great defenders — that could literally tear the head off a dragon," Calhoun said. "He's played kids from 5-6 to 6-8, and he's done an incredible job."

El-Amin is coming off an 0-for-12 catastrophe in the Huskies' victory over Gonzaga in the West Regional final. Like any big-game shooter, El-Amin didn't need long to wipe the game from his memory.

"When he walked off the floor, he hugged me for 10 seconds," Calhoun said. "Never, ever has there been even a hint of him ever caring about himself and not the team."

There's a lot more to the matchup between Connecticut (32-2) and Ohio State (27-8) than the history between Calhoun and O'Brien.

Maybe that's why O'Brien made it a point to bring up his 18-game losing streak to Calhoun during his news conference on Friday. It was a deft preemptive strike for O'Brien, who lost 20 of 23 to Calhoun while at Boston College. Both are coaching in their first Final Four.

"I know somebody is going to ask about the 18 straight losses to Jim Calhoun, so we might as well talk about it right this minute," said O'Brien, revealing how Calhoun greeted him, Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski and Michigan State coach Tom Izzo the night before.

"When he sees all of us, he sees Tom and he says, 'Tom, it's nice to see you. Mike, it's nice to see you. Jim, it's REALLY nice to see you.'"

Calhoun said the relevancy of his streak is "nonexistent."

"The people who have the ball in their hands the most control the game," he said. "You are not going to get here without having that kind of player, a guy who controls the ball."

GAME: Lady Rebels stand tied atop 4-5A

(From 1B)

On the other hand, Lee is fighting for the district championship and is in that three-way logjam. The Lady Rebels need to win to keep those hopes on track.

So, it becomes a critical game for both teams. The very fact that MHS is in dire straits concerns Lee coach Wes Overton.

"This is a very dangerous game for us," Overton said. "Midland High practically has to win out to get in the playoffs, so you know they will come at us hard in this one. They have nothing to lose at this point. Every time we have played them so far, it's been a tough game."

Lee has beaten MHS three times this season, the last a 4-5A win by a 4-2 count at Lee. This time the Lady Rebels trek to Ulmer Park and foreign soil.

MHS coach Shawnda Vines has noted previously that she hopes her team brings the bats. "When you play Lee, you have to hit the ball,"

Vines said. "We haven't done a good job of that in a couple of games we played against them."

And hitting the ball has been a tough thing to do for all the 4-5A teams that have played Lee. The Lady Rebels have recorded three consecutive shutouts, two by Brandie Row and one by Mandy Hacker, who will probably get the call today for Lee.

MHS will probably counter with senior Megan Clineham, who has been the mound mainstay for the Lady Bulldogs this season.

Lee is coming off a 1-0 win over San Angelo Central where Row got the shutout. Lee put together three of its five hits in the game in one inning. Jennifer Bryant doubled, moved to third on a single by Sarah Dzubinski and scored on a game winning single by catcher Shandi Neatherlin.

MHS has lost two district games in a row (Abilene High and Odessa Permian) but did come away with a 7-3 win over Midland Christian on Tuesday in a non-conference game.

In that contest, Collin Lange went the distance to get the win while Tiffany Robinson and Amberleigh Berry each collected three hits.

Lee and Abilene High have the toughest assignment today among the three league leaders. Permian plays Odessa High, a team that failed to win a game in the first half, and Abilene High meets Abilene Cooper. Cooper finished the first half at 3-3 and still entertains playoff aspirations, but the Lady Cougars need to spill cross-town rival AHS to keep those hopes burning.

AHS will be open next Tuesday while Lee will entertain Odessa Permian in what will be the first crucial meeting between championship contenders.

If MHS could pull off a win over Lee today, the Lady Bulldogs would have OHS on Tuesday and another chance to gain some steam before heading into the teeth of the second half schedule.

CHAPS: Midland College needs wins today

(From 1B)

The second game was almost a mirror of the first. Midland pitcher Tonya Thompson held off El Paso for three innings before it got a run in the fourth on a single, a ground-out, and an error.

Midland countered with four runs in the fourth. Chavira, playing first base, blasted a liner down right field for a lead-off double.

Crystal Shelton and Jackie Ortega both reached base by error. Francesca Salcido had a sacrifice fly before Laura Martinez slammed a two-run single. Wallace singled before Jessica Cobos singled in Laura Martinez.

Two more runs came across in the fifth. Shelton and Salcido both singled before Laura Martinez added her third and fourth RBI's with a stand-up double.

Despite a strong wind blowing out to center, only Martinez's blow got to the fence. Thompson gave up just one run, five hits, struck out four and walked one.

In their third year of action, the Tejanas had played an independent schedule the past two years. Coach Kathy Rodolph is in her second year with El Paso, guiding them to a 30-21 record last season. They are 22-15 this season.

MC, which ran its record to 34-11, recovered from four straight losses at Howard College last weekend. Under the WJCAC schedule for the three-team league, the second game of a four-game set against other conference teams is not counted in the conference standings.

"We had a lot of hard work at the beginning of this week," MC head coach Tommy Ramos said. "We had relaxed last week, but our hard work got us the wins today. Our players hit the ball well, attacking when they needed to."

The Chaps are hosting an eight-team tournament at next Friday and Saturday, including one team from New York. They'll return to conference action April 6-7, hosting Howard College.

Lee baseball rolls to win

In Friday's nondistrict baseball game, Midland Lee's offense showed up for only one inning. But it was more than enough.

The Rebels scored all 10 of their runs in the second inning against San Angelo Lake View and they stood up for a 10-7 victory which improved Lee's record to 14-3.

The big inning was highlighted by a grand slam from Matt Winston which broke the game open. Lee came back from a 1-0 deficit in the big inning, and withstood a five-run Lake View rally in the top of the seventh.

Right-hander Eric Clodfelter started for the Rebels and went three innings before left-hander Nate Brignon came on in the fourth and pitched the rest of the way. It was an opportunity for both to get a chance to throw during a lull in the District 4-5A schedule since Brignon hadn't pitched in any of the Rebels' three district games and Clodfelter had thrown only one inning in relief.

"I wanted to throw some of the guys who hadn't been throwing lately," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "Clodfelter had been having trouble throwing strikes but he looked good today. It was an open date but I wanted the kids to all get out and play."

Lee continued a positive district trend by getting the most out of its hits, scoring 10 runs on only seven hits. Aside from Winston's grand slam, the only other extra base hit was a double by Greg Moore.

The Rebels get back to their district schedule Tuesday when they travel east to face Abilene Cooper at 4 p.m.

Lange, Tatum picked again

Two Midland High basketball players have been chosen again to play in high school all-star games.

Charles Tatum, who previously was picked to play in the Texas Association of Basketball Coaches All-Star game, has now been selected to play in the Texas High School Coaches Association North-South game in Fort Worth this summer.

Heidi Lange, who previously was picked to play in the THSCA All-Star game, has now been selected to play in the TABC All-Star game in San Antonio on May 8.

Tatum and Jay Christian will both play in the TABC All-Star game on May 7 as announced earlier.

Rangers beat Presidio, 10-7

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood baseball team successfully opened its District 3-4A schedule Friday by defeating Presidio 10-7.

The Rangers (5-8-1 overall, 1-0 in district) scored five runs in the bottom of the second to take the lead for good. Monty Magee was the winning pitcher, taking the victory in relief.

Magee also doubled and drove in three runs for Greenwood while Zack Belew hit a two-run home run in the fourth inning to help put the game away. John Lewis also drove in two runs for the Rangers, who play at Kermit in a district game Tuesday at 5 p.m.

MC, Eunice win golf titles

The Midland Christian girls and the Eunice, N.M., boys won titles Friday in the Midland Christian Invitational golf tournament at Hogan Park.

Dalyn Peters' 92 took top medalist honors among the girls to lead the Lady Mustangs to the championship with a 395, 26 strokes over Eunice. Kathleen Landreth had a 94 for third medalist. Lubbock Christian's Amy Rider tied Peters with a 92, but Peters won the card playoff.

Eunice's 342 won the boys division while Midland Trinity was second just three strokes back. Lubbock Trinity's Matt Robertson, Eunice's Bradley Ruth and Lubbock Trinity's Scott Meador all had 82. Robertson won on a card playoff.

Midland Christian travels to Fort Worth for its district tournament on Monday at Eagle Mountain.

Midland Christian Girls (395): Dena Wright 99, Kathleen Landreth 94, Dawn Wright 110, Dalyn Peters 92, Monica West 114.
 Midland Trinity Girls (527): Kristen Stoltz 99, Janae Brown 142, Leslie Feagan 133, Stephanie Kidwell 152.
 Midland Trinity Boys (345): Stephen Stoltz 84, Hunter Kennedy 84, Nathan Pirtle 87, Corey Mays 90, Jami Drell 98.
 Midland Christian Boys (399): Matt Mitchell 96, Justin Charlie 95, Ben Fietz 107, Trevor Toucher 104, Nick Gualtney 106.

Greenwood beats Kermit

The Greenwood softball team won 3-0 over Kermit behind the 15-strikeout pitching performance of Erin Smith (6-6), who allowed just one hit.

The Lady Rangers had nine hits in the game. Gil Danley was 2-for-3 with an RBI. Holly Kiene was 2-2; Betsy Langdon went 1-3 with an RBI; and Laura Maldin had an RBI.

Greenwood improved to 8-8 overall and 2-0 in district. Kermit fell 0-2 in district. The Lady Rangers next play Tuesday at Monahans at 5 p.m.

Lee sophs beat Lake View

The Midland Lee sophomore baseball team defeated San Angelo Lake View 13-2 on Friday.

Kyle Shatzer pitched a complete-game five-hitter. Offensively, Rowan Moreno had two hits, including a three-run home run; David Dakil had two hits including a three-run homer and five RBIs; Matt Norris had a triple and an RBI; Andy Torres had a double and an RBI; Robert Rogers had two RBIs; Garrett Luft had a double; Joey Schwalbach had two hits, and Danny Cadena had a hit and a RBI. Lee (11-3) next plays Wednesday at 4 p.m. at Odessa High.

Central sophs blank MHS sophs

SAN ANGELO — The San Angelo Central sophomores got a one-hit pitching performance from John Black in a 10-0, six-inning win Friday over Midland High's sophomores.

Bryan House took the loss for MHS. The only hit for the Bulldogs (10-9 overall, 1-2 in district) was by Colby Overstreet. The next game for the MHS sophomores is against Midland Christian at 4 p.m. Monday at Timlin Field.

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, March 27, 1999: Love-hate relationships and high passion dominate this dramatic year. You feel deeply for everything and everyone, for better or worse. Whether to focus on building material security or delving into spirituality could be quite the dilemma. You could feel divided or that you're not getting ahead as quickly as you'd like. Try not to take life so seriously. You can have it all! If you are single, your intensity could be beguiling to some and downright scary to others. You might have two relationships going on simultaneously. If attached, work with your mate to bring added structure into your life. Through respect and consideration, you both benefit. LEO blows your mind!

ARIES (March 21-April 19) ★★★★★ Since you were never one to flee from a fight, you'll love the extreme tone of the day. You might catch someone red-handed, toying with your finances. Your ingenuity and lightning-quick insights are magical. A love interest might cause you to become obsessed. Is this wise? Tonight: You'll soon find out!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) ★★★★★ You might see someone across a crowded room and fall madly in love. However, getting to him could be a challenge. Obstacles lie between you and satisfaction, but that's temporary. You will eventually get the chance you're hoping for. Patience, patience! Tonight: Turn in early.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) ★★★★★ Evaluate a recent job prospect. An element of unrest exists between you and a business associate. If you want things done to your specifications, you're the only one who understands how. Don't trust anyone with any intimate secrets today. Tonight: Browse jewelry stores for a new trinket.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) ★★★★★ You could feel unlucky or thwarted and might try to take steps to correct that by risking more or throwing good money after bad. This is counterproductive, to say the least! Understand that there's a time and a place for everything. Let a romantic interest distract you. Tonight: Places to go, people to meet!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) ★★★★★ This would be a great day if you didn't have to deal with family problems. To top it off, a boss might try to call you in to cover him at work. If you want to save the day, go ahead. If you want peace, screen your calls and escape as far as possible from home and phones! Tonight: Blues club, open-mike night.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) ★★★★★ Say as little as possible, unless you want to open up a king-sized can of worms. Others may play the "telephone game" and distort your words. Socialize, but stay close to home and to those who understand you, or scrap the whole idea and take a day to just pamper yourself. Tonight: To bed.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22) ★★★★★ Spending could go to wild extremes if you don't keep yourself in check. Don't feel you have to impress others; popularity should have little to do with finances. Defer a decision or investment until a more favorable time. Tonight: Dance and play in an inexpensive way.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21) ★★★★★ You could learn a great deal about yourself today if you'll step outside of your ego. A partner won't have any of your willfulness, so don't try. You might think you can manipulate this person, but this is a classic case of irresistible force meeting an immovable object! Tonight: Take responsibility and make new friends.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) ★★★★★ Work and future prospects dominate, despite that it is Saturday. You might feel ready to climb the walls at your current job, and just one day away might make you feel you can't bear to go back. Recognize that this is probably a phase, but if changes need to be made, start now. Tonight: Escape!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) ★★★★★ It becomes clear that an old friend disapproves of: I've interest or new friend you've recently made. This person will do anything, from giving unsolicited advice to spreading rumors, to keep you in his clutches. Who needs friends like that? Watch what you say, and to whom you say it. Tonight: Solitude—how pleasant!

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) ★★★★★ At home, you're sought-after and welcome, but feel somewhat stuck; if out, your sensitivity picks up all sorts of unpleasant elements, or you end up where a fight takes place. Grab a partner and head for wide-open spaces. There, you can both relax! Tonight: Forget the way home and stay out late.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20) ★★★★★ You might have extra work brought from the office to finish or a project at home. That's good, since events both at a distance and locally team with uncertainties or hostile personalities. You don't need the aggravation, so keep your own counsel and stay clear of any altercations. Tonight: Exercise.

BORN TODAY: Football player Randall Cunningham (1963), former auto racer Cale Yarborough (1940), actor Michael York (1942).

Author walks away from sequel deal

COLUMBIA, S.C. — Frankly, my dear, you can find someone else.

Pat Conroy, author of "The Prince of Tides," has walked away from a deal to write a second sequel to Margaret Mitchell's 1936 "Gone With the Wind" after getting into a dispute with the executors of her estate.

"I went through more negotiations with this 'Gone With the Wind' than the Germans did in World War I with all the clauses at Versailles," Conroy told The New York Times on Thursday.

Previous reports said Conroy would be paid about $10 million for the book. St. Martin's Press, the publisher, is reported to have paid $4.5 million to Mitchell's estate for the rights to the second sequel.

MONROE, N.C. — Randy Travis has made quite a name for himself in Nashville. Now, he has succeeded in clearing the name he made for himself in Marshville.

Randy Travis is being pardoned for past transgressions.

At the country singer's request, Gov. Jim Hunt issued a pardon Thursday clearing Travis' criminal record as a youth. Hunt said Travis, 39, has since earned a name for "responsible civic behavior and community service."

Not so in the 1970s, when Randy Bruce Traywick stacked up arrests for weapons offenses, burglary and larceny.

After winning a talent contest in 1977 and pairing with manager Lib Hatcher, now his wife, Travis managed to break into big-time country music.

"Randy quite regularly talks about how he was a bad kid and how lucky he was to find the person" — Ms. Hatcher — "who could get him straightened out," said his spokeswoman Maureen O'Connor.

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Johnny Carson is doing well a week after quadruple bypass surgery, a hospital spokeswoman said Friday.

"He's doing fine," said Linda Funston of Saint John's Health Center. "He probably will not go home until after the weekend."

Doctors expect the 73-year-old former "Tonight Show" host to recover fully. He underwent surgery March 19.

Asked about published reports that Carson had a heart attack, the spokeswoman said she didn't know. Carson Productions spokesman Jeff Sotzing wouldn't discuss Carson's health.

Carson retired in 1992.

SEATTLE — Seeking to make his life a little simpler, "Gallop Gourmet" Graham Kerr is selling his personal cookware this weekend along with his favorite easy chair, his dining room set and his stereo.

The TV chef and his wife, Treena, are holding a garage sale in preparation for their move from a spacious waterfront home on Camano Island, about 40 miles north of Seattle, to a tiny house in Mount Vernon not far from there.

In his new home, the testing and development kitchen that took up the basement of the Camano Island home will be traded for a 6-by-10-foot galley.

Professionally, though, he will retain testing kitchens and a TV studio.

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — Catholic leader John Hume, co-winner of last year's Nobel Peace Prize, said Friday he will donate his $463,000 share of the award to Northern Ireland's poor and victims of violence.

Nobel Peace Prize winner John Hume is donating the cash prize to Ireland's poor.

"I want to see an Ireland of partnership where we wage war on want and poverty, where we reach out to the marginalized and dispossessed and where we build together a future that can be as great as our dreams allow," he said.

The leader of the Social Democratic and Labor Party said $405,000 will be placed in a trust, with the annual income shared by two charities — the Salvation Army and the Society of St. Vincent de Paul.

The $58,000 balance will be divided equally between a victims' memorial trust and a fund set up in the aftermath of an Aug. 15 car bomb in the town of Omagh that killed 29 people and injured hundreds more.

NEWARK, N.J. — Sarah Vaughan has her own way.

Mayor Sharpe James renamed a street outside the New Jersey Performing Arts Center "Sarah Vaughan Way" to memorialize the jazz great in the city of her birth.

"I hope all our young people will look up and see Sarah Vaughan Way and be inspired," he said Thursday. "Some of us forget Newark, but she never forgot."

Vaughan's 96-year-old mother Ada cried with joy during the dedication. Vaughan died of lung cancer in 1990. Her classics include "I Was Telling Him About You" and "Send in the Clowns."

Ozaki grabs 1-shot lead at TPC

Associated Press

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, Fla. — One reason Joe Ozaki keeps coming to America is to prove he can compete against the best. He'll get his wish this weekend in The Players Championship.

The one member of his family who doesn't mind playing outside Japan, Ozaki had a 4-under 68 on Friday and is in the same position he was last year — at 137, in the lead after two trips around the Stadium Course on the TPC at Sawgrass.

The difference is the guy chasing him. David Duval, the hometown hero and the hottest player in golf, missed a 4-foot birdie putt on the 18th but still managed to piece together a 3-under 69 for 138 and will be paired with Ozaki in the final group on Saturday.

"I'm very pleased with my score," Duval said. "I'm looking forward to the weekend."

He's not the only one. If Ozaki cares to peek over his shoulder, he'll find a star-studded group of players behind him.

Bruce Lietzke had a 68 and was two strokes behind, followed by Davis Love III (70) and a pair of two-time U.S. Open champions — Ernie Els (67) and Curtis Strange (69).

Nick Price tied Els for the best round of the day and was at 141, along with Tiger Woods. Phil Mickelson and Colin Montgomerie were another stroke back.

The Players is the third-strongest field in golf this decade, with 49 out of the top 50 from the world rankings. The only one missing is Ozaki's big brother, Jumbo, who has won over 100 tournaments around the world but only once outside Japan, the 1972 New Zealand PGA.

Joe Ozaki has played the PGA Tour and the Japanese tour since 1993, although he has never won in America.

"I have almost quit a couple of times here on this tour," Ozaki said through an interpreter. "But I was born to be a pro golfer. In order to test your game, you need to play against the best competition. You need to play on the best golf courses. That is a test."

That's what he's got. The Stadium Course played one stroke easier than Thursday, mainly because of cloud cover in the morning.

Mallon hangs onto Shore lead RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Meg Mallon, who received about as much notice for a hole she conceded as she has for a string of LPGA victories, shot a 3-par 69 Friday to hang onto the Nabisco

Golf Roundup

Dinah Shore lead.

Mallon was at 9-under 135, one shot ahead of Solheim Cup teammate Dottie Pepper, at the midway point of the women's first major of the year.

Pepper had a 66, matching Mallon's first-round score.

Janice Moodie, a native of Scotland who played golf at San Jose State and is in her second LPGA season, went to 7-under with a 68 over the 6,460-yard Mission Hills Country Club course.

Duval misses record by one shot MILTON, Fla. — Bob Duval shot a career-best, 9-under-par 61, one stroke off the Senior PGA Tour record, in taking a four-stroke lead after the opening round of the Emerald Coast Classic on Friday.

Duval missed a 7-foot birdie putt on the 18th hole that would have tied Asao Aoki's record, set in the 1997 Emerald Coast.

While Duval was burning up the par-70, 6,784-yard course at The Moors Golf Club in the Florida Panhandle, his son, David, was shooting a 3-under-69 at The Players Championship.

The younger Duval is also the author of one of only three rounds of 59 in PGA Tour history.

"I wanted to get to 60 so I could tell David he only beat me by one," the elder Duval joked.

Y2K from the Pulpit

From Second Baptist Church pastor H.W. "Junior" Erwin:

"Every new year starts with lots of predictions about what is going to happen in the coming days. Of course, this year, we've got a lot of extra predictions going on because we are just a few months from a brand new millennium and the computer glitch called Y2K that makes computers read the wrong number and cause hundreds of problems. "How does God want us to relate to the new millennium? Does he want us to be afraid? Does he want us to worry about it? We really don't know all the answers to the problems we are going to experience by 2000, but there will be millennial madness. If you know anything about history, this happened in 999, the year before 1000 rolled around. There were all kinds of wild and bizarre predictions about cataclysmic world events. As we look to the year 2000, don't believe everything you hear about the new millennium. We need to avoid foolish mistakes and bad information about the coming year."

Editor's Note: H.W. Erwin will share four practical steps every person should consider as the 21st Century approaches on Sunday morning, April 11, at Second Baptist Church.

John 12:15, regarding Christ's triumphal entry into Jerusalem, Palm Sunday

In a scene from "My Son, My Savior," Mary (Merle White, center) shares memories of her son, Jesus, shortly after his death on the cross. The Passion play continues today at 7:30 p.m., and Sunday, 3 p.m. and 6:30 p.m., at First Baptist Church. The men seated on the floor are playing the roles of Jesus' brothers.

Christianity's holiest week

Palm Sunday ushers in Easter week observances

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

It is the holiest week of the church year for those that follow the liturgical calendar.

Holy Week begins at many churches tomorrow with the commemoration of Palm Sunday, the day of Christ's triumphal entry into the Holy City of Jerusalem.

Many churches now combine observances of the triumph of Christ's entry with the tragedy of Christ's betrayal, arrest and Crucifixion that follows shortly thereafter.

Many churches celebrate Holy Thursday this week, the day set aside for Christians throughout the world to observe when Jesus instituted the Lord's Supper. Some faiths refer to the day as Maundy Thursday. Maundy is derived from the Latin mandatum, meaning commandment. The commandment given by Christ on Holy Thursday comes from John 13:34, which says, "Love one another as I have loved you. By doing this, all will know that you are my disciples, if you love one another."

It is also the day Catholics commemorate as the institution of both the priesthood and the Lord's Supper, when Jesus commanded his disciples to repeat

Methodist minister to speak on 'The Other 12'

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

Learning who Jesus' 12 disciples were is a common lesson taught in Sunday School in a wide variety of denominations.

It's a Bible story most of us keep with us as we grow into adults and come to learn more about the story of Christ on his way to the cross.

Mary, Martha, Mary the Mother of Jesus, Salome, Susanna, the Samaritan Woman, the woman with the Alabaster Flask. Just seven of Jesus' 12 disciples.

Well, maybe not the 12 we're most familiar with.

First United Methodist Church associate pastor Molly Krueger, though, intends to heighten awareness that in addition to Christ's 12 well-known disciples, there were 12 others — 12 women — who were just as faithful to him during his brief life on earth. Krueger will deliver a sermon on "The Other 12" during Maundy Thursday services at First United Methodist this Thursday at 7 p.m. in the sanctuary.

"All during Jesus' public ministry and during his final days there were women with him at one time or another," said Molly Krueger, associate pastor at First United Methodist. "These women represented quite a cross-section of society and

C.S. Lewis on Good Friday

God, who needs nothing, loves into existence wholly superfluous creatures in order that He may love and perfect them. He creates the universe, already foreseeing — or should we say "seeing"? — there are no tenses in God — the buzzing cloud of flies about the cross, the flayed back pressed against the uneven stake, the nails driven through the mesial nerves, the repeated incipient suffocation as the body droops, the repeated torture of back and arms as it is time after time, for breath's sake, hitched up. If I may dare the biological image, God is a 'host' who deliberately creates His own parasites; causes us to be that we may exploit and 'take advantage of' Him. Herein is love. This is the diagram of Love Himself, the inventor of all loves.

Philosophers join debate over first Easter

By Richard N. Ostling
AP Religion Writer

NEW YORK — From its earliest days, Christianity has proclaimed that Jesus rose from the grave, bodily, and that those who believe in him will live eternally, also bodily.

Skeptics have always said that's impossible. And while ordinary churchgoers may not know it, many liberal Christian theologians believe Jesus lived on after death as a spiritual, but not physical, presence.

In the anthology "The Resurrection" (Oxford University Press), several philosophers at secular universities apply tools of modern logical analysis to support belief in Christ's bodily resurrection. Those who want to rethink Easter in depth will find they write refreshingly clear prose, as philosophers go.

The anthology stems from a 1996 "Resurrection Summit" at the New York Catholic archdiocesan seminary. The most striking of the 18 papers come from three philosophy professors: William P. Alston of Syracuse University, Stephen T. Davis of Claremont McKenna College and Richard Swinburne of Oxford University.

Alston confronts liberal theologizing as typified by the Rev. Reginald Fuller, professor emeritus at Virginia Theological Seminary. Fuller, an Episcopalian, has written that Jesus' Easter restoration was not as a visible, bodily being. He thinks Material possessions: Blessing or curse?

My mother used to tell me a story that illustrates the value of a spouse.

A woman was married to man who, whenever he was drunk, told her to take her belongings and go back to her parents. When he was sober, she confronted him. He apologized, but when he was drunk, he repeated the behavior.

One night, he was so drunk his friends dragged him into the house. This time, his wife had a plan. She asked her son to help put him and most of their clothes in the car. She drove to her parent's home, a distance of two hours, and arrived at 2:00 a.m. She told her parents that she and her husband were coming from a trip and thought they could spend the night there. She told them that there was a matter she wanted to discuss in their presence in the morning.

At the breakfast table, she excused herself and brought their clothes from the car. Her husband and parents wondered what she was doing. She told them how her husband had been telling her to take her belongings and leave him alone. She had concluded that he was the most precious belonging she had and, as such, she had brought him so that they could spend life together. He quit drinking and never told her to leave again.

Think of the things you own: real estate, personal property, autos and retirement savings. How much time do you spend thinking of these things and why? How much can you take to heaven? Who actually owns them? The answers are self-evident. We can't take anything from this world, and God owns everything. We own only our behavior.

We are stewards of our earthly possessions. Good stewardship is wise use of our blessings and resources to accomplish a God-given vision. Husbands

The Good Book: Obadiah (Part 31 of 66)

Overview:

Obadiah is the shortest book of the Old Testament. Nothing is known about the prophet Obadiah. His oracles may have been spoken soon after Jerusalem fell to the Babylonians in 587 B.C. The text is dominated by the theme of justice and judgment. Obadiah indicts the Edomites for calloused and outrageous actions against the Israelites who were in peril. He announces that there will be punishment for this activity and promises the eventual return of Israel's exiles to the promised land.

Theme Passages:

Verse 12: "But you should not have gloated over your brother on the day of his misfortune; you should not have rejoiced over the people of Judah on the day of their ruin; you should not have boasted on the day of distress."

Verse 15 "For the day of the Lord is near against all nations. As you have done, it shall be done to you; your deeds shall return upon your own head."

— Source: Oxford Annotated Bible; Rev. Bill Clark, Grace Presbyterian Church.

EASTER: Typical argument from Fuller: Paul included no Resurrection account the "materializing" of the risen Christ was something Christians developed later.

In his rebuttal, Alston, who is no fundamentalist, grants some New Testament material could have been made up later. And he acknowledges there are contradictions in the accounts of the empty tomb and the appearances of the risen Christ, particularly regarding time and place.

But he concludes it's reasonable to believe there were bodily appearances of Jesus of the general sort the four Gospels report. To him, arguments like Fuller's are speculative and produce conclusions that are "arbitrary in the extreme."

A typical Fuller argument: Paul's writings mention no Easter appearances. Alston objects, saying we don't have everything Paul wrote. Why assume that the surviving epistles covered everything important?

Liberal critics typically apply a "dissimilarity" principle, saying a Gospel report is most trustworthy when it differs from the viewpoint of ancient Judaism and the early church. Alston thinks that's like future historians rejecting the authenticity of any statements of Martin Luther King that agreed with the civil rights movement, before and after he died.

Davis' essay asks: Did the original witnesses to the risen Christ see his body as a material object through normal eyesight, or did they have a subjective vision with no body present?

Rejecting the subjective approach, Davis notes that Jesus was not seen just by people who believed he had risen. "Doubting Thomas" is a famous example (John 20: 27-9), but Jesus' brother James was probably a skeptic, too.

Some modern theologians suppose "first century folk were almost pantingly eager to believe in resurrection and other miracles," Davis comments. But "they were as convinced as we are that dead people stay dead." The disciples certainly did not expect to see Jesus alive again.

However, Davis admits, Jesus made no "grandiose appearances to the general public." So the testimony came only from Christian insiders. He thinks the strongest argument for normal sight is the physical detail in the appearance accounts. The Gospels say Jesus showed his hands, feet and side; spoke; walked; distributed food; ate; and was touched. From early days, New Testament readers accepted the plain sense of these accounts.

Davis concludes that anybody would have seen the resurrected Jesus. "A camera could have taken a picture."

Swinburne looks more generally at the philosophical issue of evidence. Most of our beliefs about the world are based on what others claim they perceived, he says. We assume people normally tell the truth, and we can't possibly check out every report for ourselves.

Easter depends on indirect testimony. The Gospel writers recorded traditions from the original witnesses about the empty tomb and Jesus' appearances. Discrepancies cast some doubt on those records, says Swinburne, but skeptics cannot explain why the witnesses would have given false testimony. Nor can they cite any contradictory testimony, such as claims that anyone saw Jesus' corpse.

Then there's the issue of "background evidence," our assumptions about what normally happens — for instance, that under the laws of nature the dead don't rise again.

Swinburne looks to other background evidence. If God exists, especially an all-powerful God who occasionally intervenes in history, the laws of nature depend on him and can be suspended.

Swinburne has long argued that in fact there's good reason to believe in God, and he laid this out in "Is There a God?" (Oxford). His evidence: a highly complex universe, natural laws that are almost invariable, the providential ordering of the universe and widespread religious experience.

If one includes God in the background evidence, "the historical evidence is quite strong enough" and it's probable, Swinburne says, that Jesus actually rose from the grave.

Swinburne proposes a separate piece of historical evidence, the universal custom of Sunday worship, starting with very early Jewish Christians. The only way to explain their switch from Saturday is some big event occurring on Sunday, such as finding the empty tomb or seeing the risen Christ.

So if you're a Christian and attend worship Easter Sunday, Swinburne thinks you'll be adding your own tiny bit of evidence to this perennial argument.

Restoration set for U.S. Catholics' 'mother church'

BALTIMORE (AP) — The nation's first Roman Catholic cathedral is to be restored and promoted as a national treasure. "It should be the symbol of religious freedom in our land and our world, just as the U.S. Capitol is a symbol of political freedom in our land and our world," said Cardinal William H. Keeler, who is leading the restoration effort for the Basilica of the Assumption.

The Basilica of the Assumption Historic Trust plans to promote the cathedral as a national treasure — the "mother church" of Catholicism in the United States. It was designed by Benjamin Henry Latrobe, architect of the U.S. Capitol.

Beyer Blinder Belle of New York, which restored Grand Central Terminal and part of Ellis Island, and John G. Waite Associates of Albany, N.Y., which restored Mount Vernon and Monticello, are the architects. Target date for completion is 2006, in time for the cathedral's bicentennial.

Judge rules county violated Constitution

CHARLESTON, S.C. (AP) — Charleston County Council violated the Constitution when it posted the Ten Commandments outside its chambers, a judge has ruled.

R. Markley Dennis Jr. said the Constitution "bans governments from appearing to take a position on questions of religious belief."

Attorney Sam Howell said the county would not appeal.

"It's an important ruling that sends a clear message that government cannot endorse religion by endorsing the Ten Commandments," said Ayesha Khan, an attorney for the Americans United for the Separation of Church and State.

The group, along with the American Civil Liberties Union, represented a group of local residents who sued the county after the plaque went up in May 1997.

Dennis ruled "religion may be acknowledged and accommodated by government, but may not be promoted."

Church votes to sanction same-sex marriages

DENVER (AP) — After two years of debate, First Plymouth Congregational Church has agreed to sanction same-sex marriages and to form a support group for homosexuals. It also undertakes not to discriminate against gays in church employment.

With 1,400 members, First Plymouth is one of the largest in the United Church of Christ to take such action.

"We've taken a big step down the road of compassion and justice," said the Rev. Scott Landis, the church's senior minister.

The United Church of Christ allows its regional units to determine whether their churches can ordain gays and whether ministers can officiate at same sex unions. Nationally, 273 of its 6,100 congregations have voted affirmatively.

New seminary for Denver

DENVER (AP) — St. John Vianney Theological Seminary will open in the fall to accommodate a growing number of men studying for priesthood.

The new seminary will be one of only 25 worldwide affiliated with the 200-year-old Pontifical Lateran University in Rome. Its scheduled opening comes four years after finances and plunging enrollment forced St. Thomas Seminary to close.

The Rev. Sam Aquila, secretary for Catholic education, will become rector. There will be 25 full- and part-time faculty members, including priests, members of religious orders and lay persons, Aquila said.

St. John will offer a six-year program to prepare students for priesthood. Initially about 50 seminarians will be housed on campus.

Archbishop Charles J. Chaput said 68 men from the Denver archdiocese are studying for the priesthood outside Colorado because no local training is available. In 1995, there were 29 students from the archdiocese, which covers northern Colorado.

WEEK: Faiths differ in practices, celebrations, observances during Holy Week the custom of breaking bread and drinking wine whenever they met, in remembrance of him.

Some churches also hold services commemorating the washing of feet. This custom also stems from the gospel of John when Christ washed the feet of his disciples just prior to the Last Supper.

According to the Christian Book of Why, "the washing of feet was a common practice in biblical times. Weary travelers who walked dusty roads while wearing sandals were greeted in the homes of their friends by a servant who would wash the dust from their feet. Jesus, through this gesture, demonstrated that he was about to become the servant of all humankind through his death on the cross the next night."

Some churches on Holy Thursday have services called Tenebrae, where the church is plunged into darkness through the extinguishing of candles that signify the light of Christ. The extinguishing of the candles signify the death of Christ as well as the light of eternal life that he provides.

Also on Holy Thursday, some churches strip the altar or the sanctuary, leaving it bare to signify that Christ was taken from us.

Good Friday is so called because Christian teachings are centered upon life, more specifically, the resurrection from the dead to eternal life for Jesus and his followers. The sacrificial death on the cross nearly 2,000 years ago atones for sin. The term "Good Friday," therefore, evolves from the emphasis upon the good that came out of evil.

Many churches consider the Easter Vigil Mass or service to be the holiest of all services of the year. Other churches mention Easter only minimally, feeling that there would be no Christianity without the Resurrection, and that it's something that should be celebrated every Sunday and lived every day.

Sunrise services likely originated when Mary and other women came to Christ's tomb at sunrise on the morning of his Resurrection and found the empty tomb.

Three Midland churches have already signed on for this year's Donor Sabbath. Which Sunday is designated as Donor Sabbath is up to the individual church.

Nelson said the foundation only has funding to appeal to the larger churches. Smaller churches, though, are welcome to participate and should call the National Kidney Foundation of West Texas at 570-4880.

DONOR: Messages delivered through ministers may be received more openly observing Donor Sabbath services, a time when churches are encouraged by local organ foundations to put in their bulletins educational flyers and Uniform Donor Cards.

"One of the main reasons we're doing it is because there are 60,000 people waiting for some kind of organ transplant in the United States," Nelson said. "Thousands more are in need of life-saving or life-enhancing surgical procedures that require donor tissues. About 2,000 of the 60,000 in need are in Texas."

In addition, eight people die every day waiting for transplants nationally.

Nelson said when a person promises to donate his organs, as many as 50 people can benefit.

Last year, seven local churches participated in Donor Sabbath and 2,500 inserts were distributed in church bulletins locally.

"We feel like, in going through the churches that ministers have an opportunity to explain to their congregation before help is needed," Nelson said. "And it's a good thing when it comes from ministers because pastors minister to people's spirits."

The Uniform Donor Card that comes with the insert in church bulletins is not a binding legal document. In fact, even though a person expresses a desire to donate organs after his death, if that person's closest relative declines organ harvesting for their loved ones, the organs cannot be removed. The card that potential organ donors possess really serves only as an opportunity to make family aware that your wishes are to donate organs upon death.

"The most important thing a person can do is to tell their family that they wish to donate," Nelson said. "Survivors have the ultimate say, even if you have a living will. But the donor card does increase awareness and acceptance by the victim's family. And the donor card serves as a personal commitment."

KITUKU: In your marriage, what is more important than your spouse?

(From 1C)

and wives are co-stewards. "Two are better than one: because they have a good reward for their labour. For if they fall, the one will lift up his fellow: but woe to him that is alone when he falleth; for he hath not another to help him up" (Ecclesiastes 4: 9-10).

To minimize marriage conflicts caused by finances, faithfulness is critical. This doesn't take away the freedom of a spouse to make an autonomous decision to buy an item that is useful for the family. It may help to have a joint account for family projects, rent, groceries, tuition and medical issues. Then decide whether to have pocket money for each spouse or another account that can be drawn from without cumbersome explanations.

Balance needs and resources. Dr. Joseph Peck said, "It costs a lot less if you learn early that all is vanity, and that most folks spend money they haven't got on things they don't need to impress people they don't like." "Moreover, it is required in stewards, that a man be found faithful" (I Corinthians 4: 2). When each spouse's earnings are known, it's possible to balance income with family needs. Yes, there are needs, wants and desires. If needs are catered to, we can most likely live within our means. Larry Burkett, financial counselor, states that,

"A budget is nothing more than a plan for spending money. It doesn't limit expenditures, it defines them. It makes a simple statement: We have a given amount of income, and this is what we're going to do with it." Ask yourself, "What things could keep me from following God's direction in the use of the blessings He has bestowed on me?" Come up with strategies that will help you stay away from those things.

In marriages, financial matters require harmony. People can discuss anything, including physical intimacy issues freely, but money is often a taboo. Studies show that money issues contribute to marriage problems more than any other factor.

This indicates that we need God's help, not only with how to use the resources He has blessed us with, but also to establish marriage harmony.

In your marriage, consider this; what is more precious than your spouse?

12: Women will tell stories of 1st-century counterparts served and ministered with Jesus and his disciples in a variety of ways. From the first century, these women will come into our sanctuary dressed as modern day women and tell their story of their ministry with Jesus.

(From 1C)

"These 1st Century women will come into our sanctuary dressed as modern-day women and tell their stories of ministry received from, offered to and entered into with Jesus Christ."

The women's stories, Krueger said, remind people of their common hunger, their common hope and their common faith.

"When our Jewish friends eat their Passover meal they celebrate their freedom from the bondage of Egypt and the new opportunity for life they have been given," Krueger said. "As Christians, we think of the freedom that Christ gives us from the bondage to sin, guilt and death. We are a people of hope because of what Christ has done for us."

"The story also reminds us that we all belong to Christ, different people from different backgrounds, male and female, young and old, rich and poor."

Maundy Thursday services at First United Methodist also include confession and pardon, proclamation of the Word, and the Lord's Supper.

Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity to host Ecumenical Service on Good Friday

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff writer

For the second year in a row, the Midland Association of church and the Midland Ministerial Alliance will co-sponsor The Seven Last Words of Jesus, an ecumenical Good Friday service, from noon-3 p.m., April 2, at The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois.

Seven pastors representing various churches from around Midland will each speak on Jesus' final words before dying on the cross.

"There's no one gospel that has all seven of Jesus' final statements, but traditionally they have been pieced together from all four gospels," according to Stockton Williams, Rector at Holy Trinity and a featured pastor at the Friday service.

The seven last words of Jesus that will be spoken on at Holy Trinity are:

Father forgive them for they know not what they do,
Today you will be with me in paradise,
Woman behold you son, son behold you mother,
My God, my God why have you forsake me,
I thirst,
It is finished, and
Father into your hands I commend my spirit.

Ministers who will provide messages include Williams,

Rev. Lane Boyd, First United Methodist Church; Jose Chavez, Templo Piedra Angular; Robert Lathan, Mt. Calvary Missionary Baptist Church; Rev. Arturo Pestin, Our Lady of Guadalupe Catholic Church; Pastor Robert Walter, Our Saviour's Lutheran Church; Pete Campbell, Cotton Flat Baptist Church, and Williams.

Williams said Holy Trinity traditionally hosts a lengthy Good Friday service beginning during the noon hour and stressed that those who plan to attend now that the service is informal. People can come and go at any time during the service. Following each minister, a short prayer time and a hymn will be offered.

"It's hard to attend the entire thing," Williams said. "A lot of people attend only on the lunch hour. In the old times, businesses used to close on Good Friday, but by and large today, only schools close on Good Friday."

Other activities to be hosted during Holy Week at Holy Trinity include:
Palm Sunday, today -- Holy Eucharist, 8 a.m., 8:50 a.m., 11:05 a.m. and 5:15 p.m. Christian education, 10:05 a.m.
Monday, March 29 -- Holy Eucharist and Healing, 5:15 p.m.
Maundy Thursday (April 1) -- Holy Eucharist and Healing, 11 a.m.; Holy Eucharist, Foot Washing, Stripping of the Altar, 7 p.m.

Good Friday (April 2) -- Ecumenical Service, Noon-3 p.m.
Easter Vigil (April 4) -- Paschal Candle Lighting, Vigil Lessons, Holy Baptism and the First Eucharist of Easter, 7:30 p.m.

Easter Day (April 4) -- Holy Eucharist, 7:30 a.m., 9 a.m., 11:05 a.m., 5:15 p.m.; Easter Egg Hunt on front lawn and Waster Party, in the parish hall, 10:15 a.m.

St. Mark's UMC hosts Seven Last Words service: In addition to the Seven last Words Service at Holy Trinity, a similar United Methodist service will be conducted from noon-1 p.m., Friday, at St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main. Featured pastors include Revs. Luis Oronzco (Asbury), Richard Edwards (St. Luke's), Steve Cox (Bethel), Skip Hodges (Stanton UMC), Ted Wilson (Greenwood UMC), John Rech (First UMC) and Jo Gay (St. Mark's).

Conference focuses on attracting and instructing new Christians

By Cary McMullen
N.Y. Times News Service

LAKE LAND, Fla. — Religious conferences in Orlando are fairly routine. But a two-day conference last week could signal a modest counteroffensive in the 30-year battle of mainline Protestants against declining membership.

The conference concerns Alpha, a program that is rapidly expanding in Protestant and Catholic churches as a way of attracting and educating new Christians. It is one of eight regional conferences in the United States this year, and it will train participants in how to conduct the 10-week course for the "unchurched" in their own churches.

Although Alpha had its start in an Anglican church and the conference is being sponsored by the Episcopal Diocese of Central Florida, its leaders stress it will attract representatives of Presbyterian, Methodist, Lutheran and Vineyard churches.

The keynote speaker was the Rev. Nicky Gumbel, the former atheist lawyer who is largely responsible for Alpha's expansion beyond a posh London parish. Gumbel is on the staff of Holy Trinity Anglican Church of Brompton in London. Alpha got its start there in the 1970s as a Bible study center for new Christians.

After Gumbel took over the program in 1991, he revised it, persuaded other churches to use it and, according to figures supplied by Alpha North America, about 600 people took the course that year. The organization estimates that figure was 500,000 in 1997. It has been endorsed by religious leaders including evangelical pastor Jack Hayford, Archbishop of Canterbury George Carey and TV minister Robert Schuller.

Some Catholics have said the program's emphasis on the Bible and downplaying of sacraments favors Protestant beliefs, but it has been used in Catholic churches and won the endorsement of the archbishop of Baltimore, Cardinal William Keeler.

What accounts for such growth? The course's method is simplicity itself. Students gather once a week for a meal, listen to a talk or video, then discuss the topic in small groups. Each participant is provided a manual. In those 10 weeks, the students are exposed to the basic teachings of Christianity and the Bible. Churches that have offered Alpha usually open it to members of the congregation also, as a review of beliefs.

"It's Christianity 101. It poses questions like 'Who is Jesus?' What was he here to do? How do we respond to him?" said Jack Eckbert, an investment banker from Winter Park who took the Alpha course at Holy Trinity while studying at the London School of Economics in 1988. At that time a new Christian, Eckbert says he found the course made the Bible relevant to modern people.

"It recovers the basic message, but makes the packaging up to date. It ended up working very well for me. It was the most rapid spiritual growth I've ever been through," said Eckbert, who is now a member of All Saints Episcopal Church in Winter Park.

The Rev. Andrew Doan, rector of Holy Cross Episcopal Church in Winter Haven, says his church offered the course for the first time a year ago, with about 23 church members as students.

"It's a real nonthreatening way of presenting the gospel. It uses nearly all the tools that Jesus did," he said. "It has meals, teaching, it doesn't water down the truth and it uses humor — we can poke fun at ourselves."

Holy Cross started a third class in February with 27 students, which about half either new members or people outside the parish, Doan said. He has made the class a requirement for a couple from outside the parish who want him to perform their wedding, or a non-parish couple wanting to have their baby baptized.

Critics of Alpha say that it doesn't dig deeply enough into Christian doctrines, presenting them in a superficial way. Doan replies that the course is intended for people who may never have set foot in a church before, as a way of getting them started.

The Episcopal Diocese of Central Florida had a kick-off banquet for the conference last October that was one of the largest pre-conference events officials had seen, said Harry Griffith of Winter Park, chairman of the committee. "The diocese decided a year ago to make evangelism a priority. As the leadership discussed it, Alpha seemed the best answer," Griffith says.

If Holy Trinity in London is an indicator, diocese leaders may be right. Eckbert said Holy Trinity experienced such growth that they began reopening closed churches and placing new members in them. They also began social ministries in poor neighborhoods adjoining the ritzy

Catholic converts prepare for Easter Vigil Mass

PITTSBURGH — Tony Keith, a software consultant, says that while growing up he had no contact with church. "Zero." Even vague religious influences disappeared when his Baptist grandfather died.

Genevieve Peters, associate director of a local arts festival, recalls that her parents "just didn't get involved" in religion. She picked up some knowledge on her own while attending a Catholic high school.

Meredith Richard, a technical writer, says her father's career in the Navy meant the family moved a lot and never went to church, though she sometimes visited Protestant Sunday schools with friends.

Shannon London-Smith, an advertising manager, thinks her father had been some sort of Protestant but she was raised by her mother to identify as a secular Jew. They never attended synagogue.

Since September, these four have been taking intensive Roman Catholic instruction together at Sacred Heart Church. And at a Saturday night Mass early in Lent they received the formal blessing of their parish as candidates to receive baptism at Easter Eve Mass.

On that same night, April 3, they will be joined by tens of thousands of fellow "catechumens" who will be baptized in Catholic parishes across the nation. In addition, parishes will be administering confirmation and first communion to previously baptized adults who are converting from other Christian churches.

Nationwide, in 1997 the Catholic Church reported 73,426 adult baptisms and 88,161 transfers from other denominations. The same year there were 1,040,837 infant baptisms, the main reason total U.S. membership is growing slowly but steadily each year.

Like their counterparts in other cities, the Pittsburgh-area converts joined in a splashy Sunday afternoon service at St. Paul Cathedral. Joining them in the soaring nave were sponsors, priests, relatives and friends.

As each name was read, the candidates for baptism proceeded to the altar and signed one of four large books to signify their intent.

Most were in their 20s and 30s, but there was a sprinkling of elementary and junior high school youths who had never been baptized. A beaming Bishop Donald Wuerl shook the hand of each.

At the climax, surrounded by the converts, the bishop held the books aloft and declared: "My brothers and sisters, these are the names of the elect." The congregation broke into applause.

After this Rite of Election, the bishop welcomed the "candidates for full communion" coming from the other denominations in a separate, briefer ritual.

Pittsburgh's total of enlistees this year is 1,159, a fourth of whom will be newly baptized. That's a 5 percent increase over Easter of 1998. The number has risen each year since the cathedral rites began in 1984. Five years ago, the diocese began holding two identical cathedral services to accommodate the numbers.

Bishop Wuerl says, "There is a growing sense of a need for the spiritual among younger Americans, a returning to their roots." Within that broader cultural trend, there's a steady flow seeking out the Catholic Church in particular.

The Rev. M. Eric Diskin, director of evangelization for the Pittsburgh diocese, says many figure that "if I want to be a Christian, why not join a church that's been around so long? They are also drawn by our life of worship ..."

One of the better-known U.S. converts is Florida's new governor, Jeb Bush, who became a Catholic on Easter Eve of 1995. Like the large majority of those who are joining, Bush has a Catholic spouse, Columba. Their three children were being raised Catholic but it took 20 years of marriage before Bush decided to make the switch.

At Pittsburgh's Sacred Heart parish, the class Betty Hanigan is training fits the pattern.

Tony Keith and Meredith Richard are married to committed Catholics, and Shannon London-Smith is engaged to one. However, Genevieve Peters was prodded by her daughter, Cheyenne. Peters hesitated to make the first phone contact because she is an unwed mother, but she says nobody has made an issue of that.

Hanigan herself is a onetime Methodist and Duke University divinity school graduate who married a Catholic. "They may get into it for that reason, like me. But they stay for the treasure they find."

Architect Cherie Moshier, a former United Methodist and

'There is a growing sense of a need for the spiritual among younger Americans, a returning to their roots.'

— Bishop Donald Wuerl

mother of three married to a Catholic, is the only adult candidate at Sacred Heart this year who's already been baptized. She attended Mass for more than a decade before signing up for classes, a bit apprehensively, fearing there would be a stress on dogma and obedience.

It was a relief to discover that, as she put it, "You don't check your brain at the door."

Over the years, Hanigan's charges have run the gamut: a surgical resident and former atheist; a Protestant religion professor with a Ph.D.; a Jewish businesswoman; a woman who was an atheist in youth and later helped convert a Hindu husband; a young woman struggling with alcoholism; a grandmother-mother-daughter trio; and a labor activist attracted by the church's social teaching.

Each story is different and yet somehow the same.

In the past generation, U.S. Catholicism has transformed the way it handles potential converts. In the old days, individuals would meet privately with a priest for maybe a dozen weekly instruction sessions, then quietly join the church one by one.

But the Second Vatican Council of 1962-65 emphasized that the sacraments are community events, says Sister Sheila O'Dea of the North American Forum on the Catechumenate, which has trained about 60,000 clergy and lay Catholics who work with those seeking to convert.

The communal emphasis has meant collective training sessions with candidates, group baptisms and confirmations on Easter Eve, and the distinctive annual cathedral rituals, which began as experiments in the late 1970s and have been mandatory nationwide since 1988.

The church has also changed its approach to marriages with non-Catholics, Diskin notes. At one time, the non-Catholic spouse was required to sign a pledge that children would be raised Catholic, and was pressured to convert.

Now the Catholic spouse promises to try to raise the children as Catholics, but no pledge is required of the non-Catholic partner. And there's little pressure to convert, so non-Catholic spouses often sign up for instruction years after the wedding.

Another change: In the old days non-Catholics were routinely given "conditional" rebaptism, even if they had been baptized in another church. Thanks to the ecumenical movement, that is no longer the case unless there's doubt a valid baptism occurred.

Diskin says today's training puts less emphasis on memorizing doctrines, and more on cultivating personal faith. Meredith Richard observes that the training at Sacred Heart "is very focused on your relationship with Christ, not learning all the rules. And that's what I saw develop in myself."

The group sessions sometimes produce lively discussions. The Sacred Heart candidates, who have met weekly since September, say the only disagreement cropped up in classes on Catholic moral tenets.

Shannon London-Smith objected to the church teaching against in vitro fertilization, and Tony Keith indicated he cannot accept the ban on artificial birth control. Both felt free to express their disagreements.

Says Keith, "Nobody, at least the Catholics I know, is 100 percent" in agreement with all church teachings, but "the fundamentals are there."

Diskin says the public events for candidates in parish Masses and at the cathedral are awe-inspiring and provide a strategic

"witness to those in the pews who are married to Catholics or church shoppers. The word gets out."

Those who attend the cathedral events or hear about them "have never seen so many Catholic wannabes before."

Bishop Wuerl remarks, "When hundreds come up to the altar, the visual impact is more powerful than anything I can say." He always concludes the cathedral ritual by telling the gathered candidates something like what he told the group last month:

"If you're ever tempted to think you are making your way alone, remember this day and this sanctuary," he counseled. "All of us are with you in that journey."

After the ceremony, ex-Methodist Cherie Moshier said she particularly appreciated those words.

Shannon London-Smith, who has faced hard feelings from some older Jewish family members, said, "It was very exciting, emotional for me. I was just overcome. I had a few tears in my eyes. This is the real thing. No turning back."

Episcopal church stands firm on same-sex issue

NEW YORK (AP) — The head of the Episcopal Church has rebuffed a protest from other national branches in the Anglican Communion over the Americans' liberal policy on homosexuality.

Last August the world's Anglican bishops voted 526-70 for a declaration that homosexual acts are "incompatible with Scripture." But the Episcopal Church, the U.S. branch of Anglicanism, has allowed each bishop to decide, and several endorse gay and lesbian clergy and same-sex couples.

In a letter dated Feb. 26, the leaders of Anglican branches in Kenya, Rwanda, Tanzania, Australia, the Middle East, South America and Southeast Asia wrote Presiding Bishop Frank T. Griswold, asking all U.S. bishops to comply with the declaration. Griswold replied that divergent opinions exist in the United States and other Anglican branches. "We therefore find ourselves in a process of discernment and 'testing the spirits,'" he said. He invited the complainants to visit and talk personally with homosexuals and bishops who support them.

Ford hits the Information Superhighway

HOUSTON - Whether it's the interstate highway or the information super highway, Ford officials want their vehicles to lead the way.

During a recent press conference in Houston, David Sanabria, Ford's Internet and new media marketing manager outlined the automaker's new presence on the world wide web.

"We're looking at the Internet as a virtual extension for Ford as a company," Sanabria said.

As more drivers turn to the Internet for information, Ford sees it as a great opportunity to develop long-term relationships with its current customer base, as well as reach out to potential customers.

"In 1998, Internet retail sales came online for the first time. Since then, trading online has increased by 191 percent with an average purchase price of $629. The trend is here to stay," Sanabria said.

He added Ford's online web site, www.ford.com, is seen by the company as the gateway to a global consumer base.

"It's designed to be welcoming and friendly. It is easy to navigate and it is customer driven," he added.

The Ford website has links to all six Ford brands (Volvo will soon be added), and is currently receiving one million hits per month.

The "buyer connection" portion of the site enables customers to actually build their vehicles online.

"They can add whatever available options they want and even pick out the colors online before they make a decision," Sanabria said.

In addition to providing product information, the Ford site also links users to the company's dealers, enabling them to connect with a point of purchase for the vehicles they want.

Sanabria added it is also a great tool for maintaining a connection with current owners of Ford products, by providing them with updates on not only their vehicles, but with information about new models.

"Our connection is our way of doing that, where we can provide them with the information they need to make a decision about their vehicle."

1999 Jeep Cherokee

The Jeep Cherokee is like a cat with nine lives -- you just can't seem to kill them! Launched in 1984, the Cherokee became the icon for the current boom in compact sport utility vehicles.

With the debut of the larger Grand Cherokee in 1993, prices were reduced on the Cherokee models to clear out remaining stock. Then a strange thing happened: not only did sales of the Grand Cherokee take off as expected, but the price decrease ignited a sales boom for the old Cherokee models as well.

As a result, DaimlerChrysler has kept building both lines. In 1997, the automaker introduced the first complete redesign of the compact Jeep since its initial introduction. Manufactured at DaimlerChrysler's Toledo, Ohio plant, the Cherokee is available in SE, Sport, Classic and Limited trim levels. Consumers can also choose between three or four-door body styles and two or four-wheel drive. Discriminating consumers can even choose between two four-wheel drive systems: Command-Trac, a part-time system, or Selec-Trac, a full-time system.

Underway, it is hard to beat the Jeep Cherokee when it comes to the combination of off-road prowess and on-road manners and drivability. Ample ground clearance, generous approach, departure and breakover angles, coupled with axle ratios low enough for off-road mastery, are Jeep trademarks.

Both the Power Tech 2.5L four-cylinder and 4.0L in-line six-cylinder engines deliver loads of low-end torque for gobs of power at very low speeds. On-road manners have not been neglected as the Cherokee is one of the few compact sport utility vehicles that can balance both on road and off road needs and deliver a sparkling performance.

Inside the cabin, the view of the road is excellent. Displays and controls are well placed. The folks at Jeep took a no-nonsense approach to maximizing cargo space: the rear seat can be released so that the seat bottom folds forward, up and away from the seat back, which then folds practically flat for additional cargo space.

Properly equipped, a Jeep Cherokee has a maximum payload of 1,150 pounds and can tow a trailer with a maximum weight of 5,000 pounds.

The Jeep Cherokee represents a great value for budget conscious consumers who desire the visibility, ruggedness and durability of a compact sport utility.

By the numbers

Standard safety equipment includes: dual front airbags and side impact door beams. Four wheel anti-lock brakes are $600 additional; rear traction control is $285 additional. Fog lamps are $110 additional (not available on SE).

Engine performance numbers are as follows: 2.5L four-cylinder - 125 hp at 5,400 rpm and 150 lb/ft of torque at 3,250; 4.0L six-cylinder - 190 hp at 4,600 rpm and 225 lb/ft of torque at 3,000 rpm. EPA fuel economy ranges from 21 city/25 highway for the 2.5L four-cylinder engine/five-speed manual/two-wheel drive equipped models to 17 city/20 highway for the 4.0L six-cylinder engine/four-speed automatic/four-wheel drive models.

Retail prices start at $16,050 for the two-door, two-wheel drive SE to $22,670 for the four-door, four-wheel drive Limited model. Destination charge adds $525 additional. Local inventories are good and there are no rebates.

PERMIAN BASIN REGIONAL PLANNING COMMISSION PUBLIC NOTICE

The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, serving as the Metropolitan Planning Organization for the Midland-Odessa Regional Transportation Study (MORTS), will conduct a public meeting to discuss the 2000-2002 Transportation Improvement Program (TIP) and to discuss the development of the 2000-2002 Metropolitan Transportation Plan (MTP).

The 2000-2002 Transportation Improvement Program is a three-year plan that has been developed in cooperation with the Texas Department of Transportation, the Cities of Midland and Odessa, and Midland County. The TIP includes the following:

1. A priority list of projects and project segments that will be carried out within the 3-year period in the Midland-Odessa Urbanized Area, and
2. A financial plan that demonstrates how the TIP can be implemented, indicates resources from public and private (if any) sources that are reasonably expected to be made available to carry out the plan and recommends any innovative financing techniques to finance needed projects and programs.

The purpose of the 2000-2002 Metropolitan Transportation Plan is to provide for the development and operation of an integrated intermodal transportation system that will facilitate the efficient, economic movement of people and goods in the Midland-Odessa Urbanized Area. The process of long range transportation planning foresees transportation needs, identifies possible remedies and recommends feasible solutions. The MTP should provide the following:

1. A plan that will identify the transportation needs of the Midland-Odessa Urbanized Area and will serve as a guideline to address those needs.
2. A financial plan that reflects how future projects and programs can be funded.
3. A source of projects and project segments for the development of the 3-year Transportation Improvement Program.

The public meeting will be held on Thursday, April 1, 1999, at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission offices located at 2910 LaForce Boulevard, Midland International Airport. The meeting will begin at 6:30 P.M.

A minimum ten day comment period will permit interested persons to submit written comments regarding the 2000-2002 Transportation Improvement Program to Mr. Ernie Crawford, Executive Director, Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, P.O. Box 6060, Midland, Texas 79711-0660 (Fax 915/563-1728). All comments must be received in the PBRPC offices no later than 5:00 P.M., Tuesday, April 13, 1999.

A list of proposed projects can be reviewed during business hours beginning April 1 through April 13, 1999, at the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission, 2910 LaForce Boulevard, Midland International Airport, the District Office of the Texas Department of Transportation, 3901 East US Highway 80 (B-20-E), Odessa, the Ector County Library, 321 West 5th Street, Odessa, and the Midland County Public Library, 301 W. Missouri, Midland.

Individuals interested in discussing/submitting projects for consideration for inclusion in the 2000-2002 Metropolitan Transportation Plan should contact Mr. Gary Law, Director of Transportation Planning and Development, Texas Department of Transportation, 3901 East US Highway 80 (B-20-E), Odessa, Texas 79761 (Tel: 915/498-4712; Fax: 498-4760) no later than 5:00 P.M., Friday, April 30, 1999.
