TV camera in death chamber? Court may decide

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — When a state executes a prisoner, can it bar television cameras on the ground that it would be in poor taste to let the condemned person's final moments be seen on the tube?

If a state lets reporters with pens and pads witness an execution, can it keep out TV cameras and recording equipment? Can it bar the press altogether?

Will a Supreme Court that bars electronic gear from its own chamber, for proceedings as bloodless as oral argument, permit the same gear in the death chamber?

These are among the questions raised in the court by a decision in which the Fifth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals held that the state of Texas was empowered to bar a TV broadcaster from a planned electrocution in the state prison at Huntsville. After the Supreme Court justices return from the current recess today, they will announce whether they will review the decision or let it stand.

The justices are considering the case against the background of two 1974 rulings that the press has no consitutional right of access to prisons beyond that afforded the general public.

For 88 years, the Supreme Court has recognized that a state has a right to restrict attendance at executions. Texas has barred the general public altogether since 1920. The state has had no executions since 1964. Six years ago, the Supreme Court struck down the Texas death penalty law as unconstitutional.

Texas then amended the law to satisfy procedural requirements laid down by the Supreme Court. The first to die was to be Jerry L. Jurek, who in 1974 was convicted of murder and the attempted rape of a 10-year-old girl.

These developments generated strong press and public interest in capital punishment. In November 1976, TV reporters-producer Tony Garrett of KERA, the Dallas affiliate of the Public Broadcasting System, asked the state Department of Corrections to let him film, for possible use on news telecasts, the execution of a convicted murderer.

The department responded by adopting a policy that would prohibit cameras and recorders, but would admit a "pool" reporter from each of the two major wire services into the death chamber and allow other reporters to watch on closed-circuit TV. Soon afterward, however, department director W. J. Estelle Jr. repudiated the policy in favor of excluding all reporters from the death chamber.

Even the repudiated policy would have excluded Garrett and his camera. And so, with the Dallas affiliate of the American Civil Liberties Union representing him, he filed suit.

Meanwhile, the Supreme Court issued a stay of the Texas executions. Currently, the state has 65 persons on death row.

In January 1977, Chief Judge William M. Taylor Jr. of the U.S. District Court ruled for Garrett. He held that the 1974 Supreme Court rulings on press access to prisoners didn't apply because they affected reporting of "day-to-day operation of the prisons."

In contrast, he said, the press here seeks "to report on one of the most important and controversial public issues of the day: capital punishment ... the ultimate act of state" and "an act of the collective wills of all the people."

Do the distinctions between the print and electronic press apply to coverage of an execution? Taylor recalled a Supreme Court ruling excluding cameras from trials on the ground that they were disruptive and can make a fair trial more difficult. He also noted the exclusion of cameras from "deliberative" proceedings, such as oral argument in all federal appeals courts, including the Supreme Court.

But an execution "is an entirely mechanical proceeding," Taylor

Offshore drilling wins in high court

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court cleared the way today for extensive oil and natural gas drilling in the Atlantic Ocean off New York, New Jersey and Delaware.

The justices refused to hear an appeal by Suffolk County, N.Y., officials and a group called Concerned Citizens of Montauk to delay the offshore exploration and production by six firms.

The controversy involves a massive portion of the Outer Continental Shelf known as the Baltimore Canyon for which the Interior Department sold oil and natural gas leases in 1976.

The government issued permits to six firms last November to drill exploratory wells within the 867,750-acre area. Some of the wells would be within 60 miles of New York City.

Suffolk County and the Montauk group, along with other local governments and environmental organizations, were in court as early as February 1975 opposing the proposed lease sales.

Before those sales, opponents won a short-lived victory when U.S. District Judge Jack Weinstein of New York ruled that a 2,000-page environmental impact statement prepared by the Interior Department was inadequate.

However, the 2nd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Weinstein's ruling, and the lease sales were held on August 17, 1976 after Supreme Court Justice Thurgood Marshall rejected a last-minute attempt to have them postponed.

The government awarded leases for 93 tracts to highest bidders, and was paid $1.1 billion. In addition, companies holding the leases must pay rentals until oil and gas is discovered and then must pay the government royalties of up to one-third the value of any oil or gas extracted.

After the sales, drilling opponents returned to Judge Weinstein with accusations that the government did not give adequate consideration to the environmental impact if offshore oil had to be transported by tanker rather than by pipelines.

Weinstein again ruled against the government, and was again reversed by the 2nd Circuit.

In their Supreme Court appeal, the drilling foes claimed that the appeals court's decision "clears the way for profound and irrevocable alteration of the Mid-Atlantic seacape and landscape despite the admittedly major risk of oil pollution to the Atlantic fishing grounds and the risk of oil fouling the ocean beaches and parks...in America's most densely populated coastal area."

The planned drilling will be the first in the Atlantic Ocean since the government initiated its push to find new energy sources.

2 Andrews men killed in crash

LUBBOCK — Two Andrews men were among four persons killed Monday night in a plane crash during a sight-seeing trip.

William Peter Davis, 21, and Kevin Lee Gerald, 21, both of Andrews, were passengers in a single-engine Cessna which crashed into a highway median, narrowly missing a busy strip of liquor stores. Both Davis and Gerald were students at Texas Tech University.

No one was injured on the ground.

Authorities said pilot Stephen Frank Douglass, 22, of Lubbock had told airport officials he and his passengers were going on a sight-seeing tour. The fourth man killed was Raymond Wesley Needham, 21, of Dallas.

Officials said Douglass was making a second attempt to land the plane on an ice- and snow-covered runway at a nearby private airport when it hit a power line and slammed into the grass-covered median separating the four-lane highway.

Eyewitness Raymond Rauls, 22, said the plane slid off the runway on Douglass' first attempt to land at the airport, but Douglass was able to guide it back into the air.

Rauls said the plane began shaking violently in mid-air while Douglass was circling to land, hit the power line and crashed.

"It was like the whole thing just started falling apart in mid-air," Rauls told the Associated Press. "After it slid off the runway, he took it back up and it looked like he was going to try it again. But the next thing I saw, it just slammed into the ground."

Observers said the plane was virtually ripped in half, but did not catch fire.

Authorities speculated the first landing attempt caused structural damage to the plane's wing.

By BROOKS KELLER

Photographs of Larry Lozano's body taken during an autopsy by El Paso Medical Examiner Dr. Frederick Bornstein were expected to be turned over to the FBI today.

San Antonio attorney Ruben Sandoval, who is representing the Lozano family, told the Reporter-Telegram that the photographs show extensive lacerations and bruises to most areas of Lozano's body.

Those photographs do not show numerous cuts on the soles of Lozano's feet, Sandoval said, disputing what he said was an assertion made by Ector County District Attorney John Green at a press conference Friday.

Sandoval said that he had already provided copies of the photos to Dan Maeso of Attorney General John Hill's staff for an investigation that office is making into the Lozano death. Lozano died Jan. 22 in The Ector County Jail.

Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught has maintained that Lozano committed suicide by banging his head against a plexiglass window in his padded cell.

Dr. Bornstein made the second autopsy in the case, at the request of the Lozano family. His report held that the "mode of death was homicide."

The first autopsy on the body was made by Dr. Kris Challipalli of Medical Center Hospital in Odessa. It has not been released to the public.

Copies of both autopsies along with tissue cultures and slides are being reviewed in Houston by Dr. Joseph Jachimczhk, Harris County Medical Examiner.

Sandoval said he will give copies of his photos to Dr. Jachimczyk this week.

He said the photos showed cuts and bruises on Lozano's ankles, on both thighs and knees, on back and on both of the shoulders.

He said the photos also show contusions on both breasts and on the abdomen and chest. He said the photos also show bleeding from both eyes and a right rear full of blood.

Green, who has received a preliminary report from Dr. Jachimczyk, has said that the report indicates the death "can not be termed homicide." Sandoval maintained today that Green is reading more into the preliminary report than the Houston pathologist intended.

An inquest on the Lozano death has been scheduled for some time after March 1, whenever Dr. Jachimczyk's full report is released.

Sandoval said today that "Lozano would have had to be a contortionist to have inflicted those injuries (shown in the photos) to himself."

Maeso could not be reached today in Austin for comment on the progress of the attorney gerneral's investigation.

Dr. Jachimczyk told the Associated Press Monday, "I have not reached any conclusions. I've been reviewing everything and I don't know when the report will be ready."

Garcia pleads innocent to filing false report

By KAY HORD

Ector County Constable Leonard Garcia, who reportedly told Midland police he was beaten Thursday night in an effort to silence him in the death of Larry Lozano, pleaded innocent Monday to a charge of filing a false report to a police officer.

Lozano died Jan. 22 while an inmate in the Ector County Jail.

County Judge Barbara Culver set bond at $2,500 property or $250 cash. Garcia was released on bond Monday afternoon.

"I don't know what the hell's going on," Garcia said shortly after his arrest Monday afternoon.

Garcia was arrested while attending the Permian Basin Law Enforcement Academy in Midland.

Garcia, 32, was admitted to Midland Memorial Hospital early Friday morning after Midland police found him lying face down in a puddle of water behind KMID-TV.

Garcia had been quoted Friday as telling police that he was attacked by an unknown number of white men wearing white women's hose or stockings as masks.

Sunday, Garcia told a newsman that the white masks were the first thing he remembered, but that they could have been surgical masks worn by medical personnel.

Garcia also has been quoted as telling officers that he might have been drugged at one of two Odessa bars he visited that night while on his rounds. Garcia is constable of Precinct No. 4.

Midland police said they found Garcia lying by his car, which had the lights on, the motor running and the front door open.

Initial reports said Garcia was admitted to the hospital with a broken rib and multiple contusions.

According to subsequent Associated Press reports, Garcia had suffered three broken ribs and bruises as a result of the beating.

Following his admittance to the hospital, Garcia told newsmen that he was beaten in an attempt to keep him quiet in the death of Lozano.

Lozano died in the hall outside a padded cell. Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught claimed Lozano committed suicide by beating his head against the glass window in his cell.

However, a medical examiner hired by the family to conduct an autopsy reported that the cause of death was homicide. Lozano's death still is under investigation by several authorities.

"They're trying to shut me up, definitely. They're afraid for me to get on the stand," Garcia reportedly told the Associated Press after he was found Thursday night.

However, a statement released Monday by County Attorney Les Acker contends Garcia was not beaten.

"Leonard Garcia has been charged with making a false report to a police officer, a Class B misdemeanor," Acker said in his prepared statement.

"This complaint is based upon investigation by the Midland Police Department, who has interviewed and taken statements from witnesses who were with Garcia and saw him during the night he claims to have been to various Odessa bars, assaulted and abandoned at Air Terminal," Acker's statement con-

Jokes brewing profit for 'Brother Billy'

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

Until now, there has been a dearth of jokes and anecdotes about presidents and brothers.

But now, since the heightened consciousness of the peanuts-and-beer Brother Billy, the brothers from Plains, Ga., have been the butt of many a joke.

And that's just par. After all, public figures who become household names become a mother lode of jokes and tales, both kind and unkind.

Of course, the Kennedy brothers were in force, but after the assassination of JKF in '63, the jokes — if any — were buried.

There may have been word play on the bullish Theodore Roosevelt and his wielding of the "Big Stick" and of Warren G. Harding's administration mix-up in the Teapot Dome Scandal. No brothers were there. But 50 years later, Watergate jokes were to play on Richard Nixon and his former comrades and advisers.

Certainly, William Howard Taft's generous and rotund build lent itself to jokes, some vulgar and some in good, American humor.

Who knows? Maybe George Washington and his dentures and Abe Lincoln and his lean stature were the framework for tales. Both weren't always revered.

Much ado was made over Calvin Coolidge and his inclination toward the reticent. And as much or more trifling words were said and written over the plainly-spoken and sometimes hellbent Harry S Truman.

No doubt, jokes of good intent do no harm and may even help a president in his image building. Foremost, of course, the president must be taken seriously; that's the nature of his job. Must admit, though, that it does no one any lasting harm — maybe even good — to laugh at one's self. Anyway, that's something you're always hearing.

Latest among the brother jokes deals with beer. And Billy Carter, who often touts Pabst, has endorsed a new brew.

In one degree or another, he's a connoisseur of the frothy drink made from barley, hops, malt and good drinking water.

The label on the "Billy Beer" says so.

"I had this beer brewed up just for me," says the label, which carries the endorsement of brother Billy, "one of America's all-time great beer drinkers."

"I think it's the best ever I tasted. And I've tasted a lot. I think you'll like it, too."

If you can find it.

You might even turn it into a joke. BC won't mind. It'll be good for business and image.

Andrews man jailed in shooting

ANDREWS — An Andrews man was in the county jail this morning in lieu of $20,000 bond after being charged with two counts of criminal attempt to commit murder.

Bobby Wayne Allen is charged with wounding two Odessa men about 10:45 p.m. Monday at Allen's residence in the southeast part of Andrews County.

Calvin Baker of Odessa was in satisfactory condition in Permian General Hospital in Andrews this morning with two bullet wounds. James Robert Wilson, also of Odessa, was in satisfacory condition this morning in Medical Center Hospital in Odessa. Wilson had been wounded in three places, including his right hand, according to Wayne Farmer, chief deputy in the Andrews County sheriff's department.

Contractor files for school post

Building contractor Bobby J. Coffee has filed as a candidate for Place 4 on the Greenwood school board.

Coffee said he was a write-in candidate in last year's Greenwood election. "I feel like if the people of Greenwood district want me to serve, I will be doing an injustice to my community by not running," he said.

The candidate has been a resident of Midland County 25 years and lived in the Greenwood community two years.

Place 4 now is held by Charlie Dunn, who is not seeking re-election. Leroy Ledford also has filed as a candidate for the post.

Coal stance supported

By DAVID ESPO

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter won bipartisan support from congressional leaders today to do "whatever he needs to do" to end the marathon coal strike, according to the leaders who met with Carter.

Senate Republican Leader Howard Baker of Tennessee, after meeting with Carter, told reporters: "I think the president must do whatever he needs to do."

Carter is holding off on strong action to end the lengthy coal strike while administration officials assess mine owner response to a tentative contract agreement reached by the United Mine Workers and a major independent producer, the P&M Coal Co.

Several of the lawmakers who met with Carter said the P&M accord gave "reasonable hope" that an industrywide accord still can be negotiated. They said a negotiated settlement is preferable to any other option, a view the Carter administration has often expressed.

Baker said failure to resolve the bargaining stalemate could result in "millions, possibly tens of millions out of work."

Baker and the other participants at the meeting did not give blanket advance approval for specific steps the president might take. But the congressional leaders indicated broadbased support for presidential leadership in what they said could become a national crisis by April.

Senate Democratic Whip Alan Cranston of California spoke of "very strong bipartisan support" for presidential leadership in resolving the stalemate.

Rep. Thomas S. Foley, DWash., said the meeting produced a consensus that Carter be given "as much latitude as possible." Foley expressed the view that whatever steps the president might take would receive strong congressional support.

White House press secretary Jody Powell said administration officials had met before the congressional breakfast to discusss the P&M agreement and would meet again later in the day.

Garcia pleads innocent to filing false report

tinued.

"Such witnesses, many of whom are Mexican-American citizens, establish that Garcia, accompanied by a lady, was actually in Midland that night and frequented the Lusty Lady Lounge, The Place, the Regency House and the Discovery Room at the Midland Hilton.

"Finally, the attending physician has advised that Garcia suffered no assault," Acker said.

According to a source in the Midland Police Police Department, one of the witnesses interviewed was an off-duty police officer, who claims that Garcia approached him that night, showed his credentials and talked to the officer for a few minutes.

Police Chief Wayne Gideon said Monday in a formal statement, "A joint investigation with the Midland Police Department and Odessa Police Department has resulted in charges of filing a false statement to a police officer being filed against Leonard Garcia."

Gideon said the investigation culminated Saturday afternoon following a conference between Odessa and Midland detectives.

The source at the Police Department said that once Odessa and Midland detectives had finished their investigations and interviews, they could trace Garcia's movements from about 8 p.m. Thursday to 2 a.m. Friday.

The source also said it was a Midland woman reportedly accompanying Garcia the night he allegedly was beaten.

"Someone's going to get sued for this. Someone is going to get hurt, and it's not going to be me," Garcia said after his arrest.

"They came and got me at the police academy and told me they had a warrant for my arrest, but I have talked to the same witnesses in Odessa that the Odessa police did. Mrs. Salinas was scared . . . She came to me and told me that she had told police that I was not in the bar in Odessa that night because she didn't want any trouble.

"The Odessa police do not like me," Garcia said.

Reactions to arrest 'cautious'

Reaction among Mexican-Americans in the Permian Basin to the Monday afternoon arrest of Constable Leonard Garcia of Odessa on charges of "making a false report to a police officer" seemed extremely guarded and cautious.

Sam Abriego, a Brown Beret activist in Big Spring, today refused comment other than, "people won't stop at any kind of cover-up in this thing."

Ruben Sandoval, attorney in San Antonio who represents the Larry Lozano family, said Garcia's problem was "unfortunate" but that he questioned if it had any relationship to the Lozano case.

Garcia earlier had blamed his alleged beating on a radio interview in Midland in late January in which he said that Lozano's death in Ector County Jail Jan. 22 could not have been suicide.

Gilbert Del Bosque, candidate for county commissioner in Odessa, who was on the platform with Garcia at a Sunday testimonial for Lozano in Odessa, said of Garcia, "I've no comment except to say there's two sides to everything."

Father Miguel Fernandez, of St. Joseph's Catholic Church in Odessa, who also spoke at the Lozano benefit Sunday, said he was not familiar with the legalities of the Garcia case.

Mrs. Leonard Garcia, wife of the arrested constable, said today she was "shocked" by the arrest of her husband and by the statement issued by Midland County Attorney Les Acker.

"I can't believe it," she said.

"I was standing in the room when that doctor told him he had bad injuries to his ribs," Mrs. Garcia said.

She said someone was going to great length to hurt her husband.

Closed session on Torrijos begun

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate, after clearing its visitors galleries and locking its doors, held a secret session today to discuss charges that Panamanian leader Omar Torrijos has been involved in drug smuggling.

Guards required everyone in the public and press galleries overlooking the chamber to leave after Vice President Walter F. Mondale observed that the closed session was about to begin. A security officer dismantled two telephones in the press section even though no one was allowed in there.

Earlier, security guards had checked to make certain that equipment being used to provide live broadcast of the public debate was disconnected.

About a dozen senators were on the floor when the doors were closed, including Bob Dole, R-Kan., who had requested the closed session, and Sen. Birch Bayh, D-Ind., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, which has custody of classified files dealing with the narcotics trafficking allegations.

Majority Leader Richard C. Byrd, D-W.Va., set in motion a quorum call to summon absent members.

Byrd declared that it would "a live quorum," meaning that it would continue until a majority of senators were present.

The last secret session was July 1, when the Senate debated the neutron bomb.

The closed session came as the Senate continued debating the two treaties that would relinquish control of the Panama Canal to Panama by the year 2000.

Dole said Monday he would move to make public the charges involving Gen. Torrijos and members of his family.

Dole's statement came after he examined a classified report on the information to be put before the closed-door session by the Senate Intelligence Committee.

Byrd cautioned during Monday's debate that Senate rules strictly prohibit senators and their employees from disclosing classified intelligence material, unless the Senate approves such disclosures.

"The need for such strictures is obvious," said Byrd, "We are dealing in the realm of national security."

In asking for the secret session, Dole said he still has questions about the allegations despite a statement from the head of the Drug Enforcement Administration that Torrijos "has never been a target of investigation."

"Well, that is fine," Dole responded. "But should he have been the target of investigation?"

Commenting on the range of allegations the committee looked into, Sen Birch Bayh, D-Ind., the chairman, responded that "we read some of this stuff in the newspapers. Some of it is true and some of it is false. We tried to ferret out the facts."

wrote. "It is not seriously contended that a single television reporter, carrying a compact, quiet, portable film camera requiring no special lighting, can in any way disrupt or interfere with this state proceeding."

The state argued that telecasts of executions would be "an offense to human dignity," "distasteful" or "shocking."

But for officials to make the decisions is "dangerous," because they could go on to bar cameras from "other public facilities where public officials are involved in illegal, immoral, or other improper activities that might be 'offensive' ..." Taylor said.

What Taylor found "inconceivable" the Fifth Circuit, eight months later, found just and necessary. In an opinion reversing Taylor, Judge Robert A. Ainsworth Jr. wrote that the First amendment protection of news gathering "does not extend to matters not accessible to the public generally, such as filming of executions."

He agreed with taylor that the death penalty "is a matter of wide public interest," but said that First Amendment protections do not hinge "upon the notoriety of an issue."

'Keep Our Canal' Day

Gov. Meldrim Thomson Jr., governor of the State of New Hampshire, has proclaimed Wednesday as "Keep Our Canal" Day in that state.

A number of other states across the nation likely will have similar observances, since Gov. Thomson had requested all the governors to issue like proclamations.

This certainly could be a meaningful, effective observance, since the matter of ratification of the Panama Canal treaties now is being debated in the United States Senate. Thousands upon thousands of "Keep Our Canal" messages likely will be directed to members of the Senate Wednesday.

The New Hampshire governor is due commendation for his initiative in this regard.

His "Keep Our Canal" Day declaration reads, as follows:

"WHEREAS, the Congress of the United States is currently engaged in a debate over the future status of the American Canal Zone at the Isthmus of Panama; and

"WHEREAS, thousands of American jobs would be lost if cargo transits through the Canal were blocked or made too expensive; and

"WHEREAS, millions of American consumers depend on the raw materials, and finished products and the Alaskan oil which reach the United States through the Canal; and

"WHEREAS, the future security of the United States requires that we prevent the Soviet Union from filling the economic, political and military vacuum which would be created if America turned over control of the Canal Zone to a Marxist dictatorship,

NOW THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED, that Wednesday, February 22, is declared to be 'Keep Our Canal' Day, a day on which citizens of our state from all walks of life should make known their determination to keep our Canal by turning on the headlights of their cars."

Texans by the thousands already have expressed opposition to the Panama Canal "giveaway," but there certainly is nothing wrong with them observing this special "Keep Our Canal" day, as declared by the New Hampshire governor.

From, for the 'Heart'

Midlanders always have been most generous with their time and money in responding to the call for support during the annual observance of Heart Month, and this year certainly is no exception.

It appears now that the response this year may exceed by far all previous appeals.

The fact that more than 2,400 volunteers will be involved as block workers in the final phase of Heart Month, beginning Wednesday, is proof enough that residents of the Tall City are going all-out in the 1978 observance.

Scores of Girl Scouts also have been involved on a voluntary basis in preparing kits for the block workers.

The community-wide program will culminate with the observance of Heart Sunday, Feb. 26.

Mrs. James Ramsoure, Heart Sunday chairman, is elated at the tremendous response she has received in this phase of the observance. It is a typical "from the heart" response by Midlanders to a worthy cause.

It is indicative of the increased interest in and awareness of the subject and its critical nature by the general public.

Interest undoubtedly has been stimulated by the far-reaching educational program sponsored and conducted by the Midland chapter of the American Heart Association. Special programs have been presented this month at numerous club and group meetings of all kinds.

The public interest aroused through promotion of the life-saving Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) program also is bound to have had a beneficial effect on the observance.

It all adds up to a successful Heart Month in Midland.

ART BUCHWALD

Good and bad lawyers get attention of columnist

Art Buchwald

WASHINGTON — Chief Justice Warren Burger has enraged lawyers by saying that 50 percent of them are not competent to practice in a courtroom. The American Bar Assn., reacting angrily, said only 20 percent of the lawyers now involved in courtroom litigation are unqualified for such service.

The Chief Justice, who has been complaining about court loads in the past several years, is trying to figure out ways of resolving the traffic jam. While I am in sympathy with him on the issue, I'm not sure what he wants to do about it. If his figure is correct, and most of us are willing to take it on face value, the next question is, "Should we prevent from taking trial cases those lawyers who are incompetent and leave the courtrooms open to those who know what they're doing?" I would assume that is what Mr. Burger is driving at.

If it is, then I'm afraid he's wrong. It isn't the bad lawyers who are screwing up the justice system in this country — it's the good lawyers. The competent trial lawyers know how to postpone a case and string it out twice as long as necessary. They know how to file every conceivable motion, and eventually make every known or unknown appeal. A competent first-class lawyer can tie a case up in knots, not only for the jury but for the judge as well. If you have two competent lawyers on opposite sides, a trial that should take three days could easily last six months, and there isn't a thing anyone can do about it.

I know many competent lawyers and, while all of them hope justice will prevail, their idea of justice is to win the case no matter how much it costs the client or the state. It is they who are jamming up the courts and making it difficult to hold a fair and speedy trial.

On the other hand, an incompetent lawyer is a friend of the court. In many cases he will present his case so badly that it is no problem for the judge to throw it out on the first day.

A trial lawyer who doesn't know what he's doing has no idea how to stall. He knows none of the fine points of the law that would force a judge to recess for 48 hours to study them. He is incapable of questioning a witness for any length of time and, because he does not know how to cross-examine a witness, he usually says, "I have no questions, your honor," thus speeding up the wheels of justice.

A bad lawyer is actually a boon to society. His fees are usually lower because he doesn't know how to sustain a trial to keep the clock running. A judge has no compunction to shut him off when he presents irrelevant evidence. A good lawyer can usually prove irrelevant evidence is relevant, and in doing so make a fool out of the judge.

Judges love incompetent lawyers because they have no fear of being overruled by a higher court since the case probably won't be appealed.

But when a competent lawyer is litigating, the judge is doubly careful on every ruling he makes so he won't look like a dummy when the good lawyer goes over his head to appeal.

So, while Mr. Burger's heart is in the right place, he is making a big mistake by advocating that incompetent trial lawyers be kept out of the courts.

It is the able lawyers who should not be permitted in the courtroom since they are the ones who are doing all the damage.

It was William Shakespeare who wrote in "Henry VI": "The first thing we do, let's kill all the lawyers." In the interest of speeding up justice I think this should be amended to apply only to competent trial lawyers. I believe the bad ones should be allowed to live and multiply.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Many mental patients abandoned

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — Over the last few years, many state governments have been quietly emptying their mental institutions. In a slow but steady exodus, thousands of former mental patients have been turned out in the cold and now live in garages, condemned buildings, flop houses and even chicken coops.

This wholesale purge of mental hospitals has created "psychiatric ghettos" in many major cities. Some 15,000 mental patients from Illinois hospitals, for example, live in an area called "Uptown" in Chicago.

Unfortunately, many patients are being released for economic rather than humanitarian reasons. Each patient in a state mental institution now costs the taxpayers an average of $15,000 a year. The price-per-patient at the federally supported St. Elizabeth's Mental Hospital outside Washington, D.C., has soared to an astounding $38,000 a year.

Hard-pressed state officials have found that they can shave their expenses by booting patients into the street. The federal welfare system then assumes the burden of supporting these unfortunates. State mental hospitals have therefore cut their rolls by 60 percent in recent years, from about 428,000 in 1969 to 194,000 in 1975.

Many of these patients have been indiscrimately discharged with virtually no screening by officials. In fact, hospitals have required social workers to meet quotas by releasing a certain number of patients each month, regardless of their condition.

As a result, a growing number of patients who are unable to care for themselves have been thrust into the nation's cities. Many have been institutionalized all their adult lives. Some are picked up by police and returned to the hospital, only to be released again. There are patients who have been through this psychiatric revolving door at least 20 times in the past five years.

Between 1963 and 1974, as part of former Gov. Ronald Reagan's economy program, California reduced its mental hospital population from 34,955 to 6,476. The policy continued unquestioned until investigators determined that 72 murders or suicides had been committed in two years by former patients and those turned away by screening centers.

One ex-patient killed his wife, three children and himself. Another, a man who had been in and out of state asylums since he was 5 years old, committed two murders, two rapes and several kidnappings before being arrested.

Most of the patients released are simply given bus fare and wind up in boarding homes, which are little more than storage sheds, converted tenements or old hotels.

Each patient receives $157 a month in welfare money to buy room and board in these facilities. Although the government is picking up the tab, most of the boarding homes are neither licensed nor required to meet any federal standards. Some owners therefore try to fatten their profits by cutting corners.

One boarding home operator in Illinois, for instance, got $400,000 in federal funds for housing 180 former mental patients. He managed to keep 46 percent of it as profit. He accomplished this feat by spending only 54 cents a day to feed each patient. Another group pocketed 30 percent of the more than $1 million it received from the government to care for ex-mental patients.

"Many of the states have made a concerted effort to reduce mental health populations," a spokesman for the National Institute of Mental Health told our reporter Bill Halamandaris. "They have been overanxious in releasing when alternative care facilities did not exist."

Footnote: Rep. William Hughes, D-N.J., is investigating allegations of rampant abuse in New Jersey's boarding homes.

FEDERAL POLLUTERS: President Carter is discovering that executive branch bureaucrats are just as balky as congressmen. He has been trying, with few results, to force the federal government to stop polluting the nation's air and water.

At a recent Cabinet meeting, the President noted grimly that most of the federal facilities cited for violating the pollution laws have done nothing about it. Such government lawbreaking, of course, makes it more difficult to force private industries to clean up their act. Carter icily demanded that corrective action be taken as soon as possible.

The Environmental Protection Agency, bolstered by Carter's support, now hopes to get some results. Last November, EPA Deputy Administrator Barbara Blum fired off letters to 11 federal agencies that are spewing pollutants into the air and water. The polluters include the Army, Navy and Air Force, the Veterans Administration, National Aeronautics and Space Administration, and the Departments of Energy, Interior, Agriculture and Justice. Among the violators are a veterans hospital, a women's prison, dozens of military bases, an agricultural research center and a fish and wildlife office.

Although Blum threatened to take the agencies to court, only 25 of 351 government facilities have complied with the law. The bureaucrats complained that they don't have enough money for pollution control. But Blum huddled privately with Carter's budget director, James McIntyre, who agreed to set aside $515 million to help agencies meet federal standards.

The White House has quietly drawn up an executive order directing the federal polluters to comply with EPA regulations. An EPA spokesman said he hopes that about half the violations will be corrected this year.

NICK THIMMESCH

U.N. Ambassador Andy Young impulsive on Rhodesia

WASHINGTON — The Carter Administration is shifting away from U.N. Ambassador Andrew Young's view of Africa.

Young felt that "outside" so-called black liberation leaders would determine Rhodesia's future. But last week's surprise announcement by Prime Minister Ian Smith of an accord leading to black majority rule has caused the President and Secretary of State Cyrus Vance to take a wait-and-see attitude. Moderation may prevail in Rhodesia after all.

The Kissinger initiative of 1976, continued pressure by the United States and Great Britain and several weeks of intense negotiating by Smith and the three "in country" Rhodesian black leaders culminated in the settlement announced last week.

The black leaders and Smith jointly declared that the agreement on principle for black majority rule was sufficiently ready that a transitional government was likely to be formed "within days."

Now after all the years of wrangling, trouble and guerrilla warfare in and around Rhodesia, this news was too good to be true. On second thought, skeptical thoughts were voiced.

Young was quick to downgrade the announcement. He said that any Rhodesian settlement which didn't include the black nationalist guerrillas — the "outside" leaders — of the so-called "Patriotic Front" would only intensify the present level of fighting, and even bring on a "black on black civil war" Young dourly proclaimed. "It does not address the issues that have some 40,000 people fighting."

In a sense, Young was curiously voicing the same sentiment as one of the "outside" guerrilla leaders did in denouncing the settlement. Joshua Nkomo, president of the Zimbabwe National People's Union (CAPU), which uses Soviet-armed and Cuban-trained guerrillas to raid Rhodesia, said the settlement would not succeed because "we will not allow it."

Nick Thimmesch

Now, that's the kind of self-fulfilling prophecy that Andy Young likes to hear. He seems incapable of believing that life changes, or is different from what he knew in his civil rights days in the American South.

The American civil rights struggle deeply impressed Young, and somehow he has carried its notions into his appraisal of Africa. He identifies the most advanced leaders with the justice which must prevail. He is also overimpressed with the number of graduate degrees the henchmen of the "Patriotic Front" earned, or were nursed to, in British universities.

Anyway, Africa is not the American South, and just because a man has a degree doesn't mean he is right or even smart. The "outside" nationalist leaders, for whom Young seems to have an affinity, are terrorists and troublemakers and have small followings, indeed, in Rhodesia. The three black leaders who negotiated the settlement with Smith are widely respected and represent the vast majority of blacks in Rhodesia.

We in the media naturally focus on action and excitement, and terrorism is action and, unfortunately, very exciting. Supported by the Soviet Union and Red China, the terrorist forces which raid Rhodesia seem to concentrate on black Rhodesians. Of the 1,500 people they have killed in recent years, all but a handful were blacks. The terrorists not only kill, they often mutilate their victims as a warning to other blacks to give their loyalty to the "Patriotic Front." The Rhodesian government has reported instances of where a victim had his ears cut off and was forced to eat them, and where a woman was forced to cook and eat part of her dead husband's body.

The point is that black Rhodesians, blacks anywhere, don't like terror any more than, say, the good souls of Paducah, Ky. They want black rule and an end to anachronistic, vestigial colonialism. But like the majority of people everywhere, they are moderates. And the Rhodesian settlement is moderate.

It establishes a 100-member National Assembly, elected by black and white citizens eligible to vote, and reserves 28 seats for whites for a period of 10 years or the life of two parliaments (whichever is longer). It guarantees, a Bill of Rights and politically independent public services. A two-tiered executive branch comprised of a council (Smith and the three black leaders) and a cabinet (including black ministers) will run the government.

The thorniest issue in the negotiations was whether to grant amnesty to Rhodesians who became anti-government guerrilla troops. It is reported — but not verified — that Smith agreed to this concession and would allow these troops to come back and rejoin the Rhodesian forces or take vocational training at government expense.

As these details became revealed the British and American governments, which had been pressuring Smith to accept their plan (with the British supervising the transition government), came around to a wait-and-see view. Actually, this is a form of endorsement, for they had opposed Smith's efforts most of the way.

Smith had accepted Kissinger's proposals for establishment of majority black rule within two years (1978). It seems Smith meant it, and Andy Young didn't believe him, just as he didn't believe white sheriffs in the South years ago. Only the South is not Africa, and Smith is more of a patriot and statesman than his liberal detractors would ever give him credit for.

AMC to 'combine assets' with foreign automaker

By HARRY ANDERSON
The Los Angeles Times

SAN FRANCISCO — American Motors Corp. will sign a far-reaching agreement to combine its assets with a foreign automaker sometime this year — probably within several months, it was learned here over the weekend.

In an interview with the Los Angeles Times, AMC's President Gerald Meyers indicated that the pact will likely include the manufacture, at some point, of the still unidentified foreign-car-maker's vehicles at AMC plants in the United States and sale of those cars through AMC dealers nationwide.

AMC's existing management is expected to remain in charge of the new expanded U.S. operation, Meyers said, but the agreement will stop short of being a total merger of the two firms.

He said flatly, "We will make this happen" during 1978, and he added that the arrangement will permit troubled AMC to remain in the passenger car market indefinitely.

The No. 4 U.S. auto maker is in the midst of a worsening slump in sales of its cars, which has provoked increasing speculation that it would drop out of the car market altogether.

Previously, company officials indicated they were considering a possible affiliation with a foreign auto maker as one means of solving the problem. Meyers' comments were the first definitive statements about the timing and shape of the agreement.

He was interviewed while attending the National Automobile Dealers Association annual convention here.

Meyers refused to identify any of the companies with which AMC is negotiating. He said several firms are still in the running and he has promised not to identify any "until something happens."

In recent weeks, rumors in automotive circles have centered on Peugeot, the French auto maker, as the most likely candidate. Peugeot is a major manufacturer in Europe that has been unable to establish a strong sales base in the United States.

Adding to the Peugeot rumors was the recent announcement that the French auto maker had arranged a $200 million line of credit through several major international lending institutions. It declined to say why it wanted such a huge sum.

In addition, the threat of leftist victories in French national elections next month has fueled speculation that Peugeot would attempt to avoid any nationalization by a new government through an affiliation with another automaker.

Another big auto company which has been rumored to be interested in a combination with AMC is Italy's Fiat, which is in much the same position as Peugot.

Jail infirmary, barracks damaged as inmates riot

CASTAIC, Calif. (AP) — A jail infirmary was burned to the ground and at least six barracks were ransacked by up to 300 prison farm inmates when a fistfight mushroomed into a full-scale riot.

"We have the troublemakers isolated, and they will be reassigned to maximum security around the county," sheriff's spokesman Chet Ballew said after the 1½-hour melee Monday night at the Wayside Honor Rancho, about 40 miles north of downtown Los Angeles.

Deputy Carl Riegert said many inmates would have to be transferred to the county's central jail in Los Angeles because of damage to their barracks.

More than 85 deputies joined the six guards at the minimumsecurity, county-run facility, which is surrounded by a low chain-link fence and has no guard towers. Most of its 700 prisoners are serving terms of less than one year on minor offenses.

"It's a real mess," said a reporter leaving the compound Monday night.

Six of the 25 barracks-style buildings were ravaged by rioters.

Firefighters entered the besieged jail compound under a sheriff's escort to battle the fire at the infirmary, but the building was a total loss, a sheriff's deputy said.

Riegert said the trouble began earlier in the day when about 50 inmates brawled on the baseball field.

That melee was broken up by guards, and prisoners were confined to their barracks, Riegert said. "But about 7 p.m., 50 men again gathered on the baseball field and began fighting with rocks and any other weapons they could find," he said.

First manager chosen for MC Chaparral Center

Larry Campbell

Larry Campbell recently was appointed as the first manager of the Chaparral Center still under construction at Midland College and will assume this position March 15, Dr. Al G. Langford, president, announced today.

Campbell currently is serving as assistant manager of the Tarrant County Convention Center in Fort Worth. A graduate of Tulsa Central High School, he attended Northeastern State College in Tahlequah, Okla. He is a member of the International Association of Auditorium Managers and the Professional Auditorium Managers Symposium at the University of Illinois.

Langford said Campbell's "knowledge of the entertainment field will enable him to bring top-flight events to the Chaparral Center. He is knowledgeable in all aspects of the field, from setting rates and hiring staff to lighting and booking arrangements."

Campbell has experience as director of the Farmington, N.M., Civic Center, manager of the Mabee Center at Oral Roberts University in Tulsa, Okla., and stage manager and event coordinator of the Tulsa, Okla., Assembly Center. He also has been a self-employed theatrical technician.

Scheduled for completion in mid-summer, the center is a 72,000-square-, multi-purposer facility located on the southeastern portion of the college campus. The college Board of Trustees authorized the appointment of a manager for the center during its November meeting in order that the manager could begin coordinating events and booking attractions.

Block workers approach Heart Sunday activities

More than 2,400 block workers in Midland enter the final phase of National Heart Month Wednesday, with the culmination of their efforts to take place this Sunday, National Heart Sunday.

Mrs. James Ramsoure, Heart Sunday chairman, Monday praised the block workers for their efforts to lessen the ravages of diseases of the heart and the circulatory system.

She singled out the Girl Scouts for special praise. Girl Scouts did all the work of packing the block workers' kids.

Mrs. Ramsoure said the goal of the campaign is to collect $10,000, which will be turned over to the American Heart Association.

A large percentage of this money is spent locally on such activities as public and professional education, community service and administrative costs. Twenty-five percent of the money goes into heart research.

Midlanders have been enthusiastic participants in Heart Month, according to Mrs. Ramsoure. In the area of cardiopulmonary resuscitation, for example, 598 persons have had the basic training course in CPR techniques, and 30 persons have had the advanced training that qualifies them as instructors.

There have been 1,543 screenings for high blood pressure, she said.

According to the American Heart Association, cardiovascular diseases claim the lives of over one million Americans each year, and claimmore lives than do all other causes of death combined.

Nearly 29,000,000 Americans have some major form of cardiovascular disease.

Anyone interested in contributing time or money to the year-round work of the American Heart Association can do so by visiting the local chapter at 204 Andrews Highway. The telephone number is 683-3113.

Death sentence decided by Lackey's state jury

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — A state court jury has sentenced Clarence Allen Lackey to death for the July 1977 slaying of a 23-year-old Texas Tech University medical school secretary.

The nine-man, three-woman jury, which returned a guilty verdict against Lackey on Saturday night, deliberated about an hour and a half Monday night before deciding on the death sentence.

The alternative under the Texas capital murder law would have been life in prison.

The body of Toni Diane Kumpf was found near Lubbock. Her throat had been slashed.

Lackey's mother and sister were in tears Monday night when the death sentence was returned, but Lackey showed no emotion.

Under state law, appeal in death sentences is automatic.

Rogers here is using a better system for turning overdue accounts into bank accounts. Right, Rogers?

"Right, Mr. Anderson. I'm using a planned program of Long Distance to contact out-of-town customers whose payments are late. Long Distance lets me learn why we haven't received payment, and work out a mutually agreeable payment plan. My customers like it because it lets them deal with a human being instead of a computer. And I like it because it brings faster results."

Thanks, Rogers. Of course, any successful program like this takes careful planning and training. Rogers learned the system from Southwestern Bell. He called their toll-free number, 1-800-821-2121, and told Southwestern Bell he was having problems collecting overdue accounts. They asked him a few questions, and then sent him a Phone Power training brochure which fit the bill.

Once again, their system was our solution, and our cash flow has never been better.

Kyprianou tries to calm Egypt

By OTTO DOELLING
Associated Press Writer

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — President Spyros Kyprianou offered today to meet President Anwar Sadat to try to heal the rift caused by the shootout between Egyptian and Cypriot forces at Larnaca airport Sunday night.

The Egyptian government suspended diplomatic relations with Cyprus after Egypt's abortive commando raid to capture two Arab terrorists at the airport.

Egyptian Information Minister Abdel Moneim Sawy said in Cairo that Egypt was bringing home its entire diplomatic mission from Nicosia and had asked the Greek Cypriot government to take all its diplomats out of Egypt. But he said this was "neither a freeze nor a break in relations."

Sawy accused the Cyprus government of an "unfriendly stand" and said his government would review all aspects of Egyptian-Cypriot relations.

Kyprianou said Cyprus would try to restore friendly relations with Cairo and he appealed to Arab leaders not to turn Cyprus into an arena for settling Mideast conflicts.

"I would like to appeal to President Sadat to do his best to calm down the atmosphere in his country ... and to try, both of us, to restore the old relations and the old friendship," Kyprianou told a news conference.

"I would be prepared to meet President Sadat if the latter would be prepared to respond," he said.

The Egyptian action followed a demand by the Cyprus government for the recall of the Egyptian military attache in Nicosia and its refusal to hand over the two Palestinians involved in the murder of Cairo newspaper editor Youssef elSebaei in a Nicosia hotel on Saturday. After the murder the Palestinians held 11 Arab officials hostage aboard a commandeered Cypriot airliner for 24 hours.

Kyprianou said he had not received official word from Egypt on its decision to have the envoys of both countries withdrawn. He said he had had no direct communication with Egypt since Sunday.

The Palestinians surrendered during the gun battle Sunday night in which Cypriot troops overcame a planeload of Egyptian commandos who were trying to capture the terrorists. The terrorists were charged with premeditated murder before a Nicosia magistrate Monday and could get the death penalty if convicted.

Fifteen of the commandos were killed in the airport battle, 16 were wounded along with six Cypriot soldiers and a West German TV cameraman, and the other 41 Egyptians were captured or surrendered.

Kyprianou demanded the recall of the Egyptian attache, Col. Suleiman Hadad, after a pilot aboard the commandeered plane said an Egyptian attache gave the signal for the commando raid. War Minister Mohamed Abdel Ghany Gamassy denied Hadad was involved.

Kyprianou accused Egypt of "distortion of the facts" in its version of the Larnaca clash.

"One of the unfounded allegations is that the commando plane arrived as the result of a prior agreement," he said. "This is completely unfounded."

He denied his government had made a deal with the two terrorists to grant them safe conduct out of the country in return for their hostages. He said although Cyprus had permitted the terrorists to depart the airport with the captives Saturday, the plan Sunday when the plane returned from Djibouti was "to capture and arrest them after saving the hostages and then to put these gunmen on trial."

About 700 soldiers, officials and cabinet ministers welcomed the surviving commandos at the Cairo airport Monday night. Their leader, Brig. Nabil Shukry, grouped them around Gamassy and they chanted their motto, "Sacrifice! Redemption! Victory!"

"All of the people of Egypt thank you and respect you for what you did," the war minister told them. He added that Sadat wanted to greet them personally but wasn't feeling well.

The bodies of the 15 men killed in the attack were not taken off the plane until it was wheeled away to a military section of the airport.

Meanwhile, several witnesses said today only one of the terrorists shot Sebaei, instead of both as earlier reported.

The witnesses, including Richard Cowell, a British resident of Cyprus who was in the hotel at the time of the shooting, told The Associated Press that only one gunman, whose passport identifies him as a 29year-old Kuwaiti, committed the assassination.

Cowell also said he checked the body about 20 minutes after the shooting and found a weak pulse.

Brown Berets receive Odessa parade permit

ODESSA — During a special Monday session of the Odessa City Council, a parade permit was issued to a Brown Beret leader for a motorcade through Odessa Saturday.

In a 3-2 vote, the council approved the request for a parade permit to Gilbert Herrera, the Texas Prime Minister for the Mexican-American organization.

Herrera was not present at the council meeting and the permit request was presented by George Cerny, an official with the Community Relations Department of the U.S. Justice Department.

Cerny told the council the motorcade would form about 11 a.m. Saturday at St. Joseph's Catholic Church following a 9:30 a.m. civil rights workshop.

The parade would travel south from the church on Dixie Avenue to Interstate Highway 20 and then proceed on to Big Spring.

The council approved the permit after Odessa Police Chief Jack Tomlin recommended that it be granted. Tomlin said that the motorcade would be given a police escort through the city. Councilmen Curtis Webster and Fred George voted against the measure.

Rookies learn quickly

"I guess I'm not as good an arsonist as I thought," Midland Fire Department Training Chief Glen Harris said today.

Several of Harris' firemen had extinguished a "practice" blaze before the house burned completely burned.

The city of Midland, working with the Midland Fire Department, has arranged for the Fire Department to burn several houses scheduled to be torn down.

"Everybody benefits. Nobody gets hurt because nobody's losing their structure. The city and everyone else loses an eyescore, and we get some practice," said Harris.

The first of nine house scheduled to be burned was started the first time this morning with the help of a little diesel fuel.

"They (the firemen) did too good. We're going to have to reset it again in a few moments," Harris said.

"This is one of the best things that could happen to the Fire Department & getting something like this to practice on," said a spokesman for the department.

But one of the firemen disagreed, saying the practice house and fire were'nt really "life-like."

Harris agreed to some extent.

"In a house someone's living in, everything's closed up. This house doesn't have any windows. In an occupied house, the windows would be closed. When we opened up to go inside, it would be just like a fog with the smoke and the heat would be much more intense," he said.

"But this gives the rookie firemen a chance to get used to the smoke conditions and teaches them how to handle their hose lines," he said.

Firefighter Jerry Flippin turns into a temporary "arsonist" as he pours gasoline in preparation for a house-burning staged today by the Midland Fire Department. (Staff Photo)

Epidemic predicted

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy says Americans may face "massive cancer epidemics" because of the many industrial chemicals being released into the environment.

The Massachusetts Democrat, chairman of the Senate subcommittee on health and scientific research, was one of the speakers at the Food and Drug Administration's Science Symposium on Risk-Benefit Decisions and the Public Health.

Six million American workers regularly are exposed to chemicals known to have produced cancer in animals, Kennedy said.

And what is known already about the substances' effects may be "only the tip of the iceberg," Kennedy said. "The real or potential danagers of these myriad substances may not be known until we have mu genere information — whose collection may take years or even generations."

Sports-minded females should be taken seriously

By JANET LOWE
Copley News Service

From Ohio came an edict from a federal court judge that girls must be allowed to participate in contact sports, or any other sports they choose. The burly boys on the football field weren't ready for that one.

"It's amusing," says Mike Brown, assistant general manager of the Cincinnati Bengals. "If the law says that, then the law is a little bit silly."

Frank Howe, an Ohio high school coach, agrees. "Tackle football is no place for girls."

A friend asked how I would feel if my daughters decided to try out for the football team.

"I'd worry about their safety. But I'd also worry about a son."

I added that I'd feel no less happy about my daughters trying out for cheerleaders with the Dallas Cowboys.

But those are personal reactions, based on specific people and circumstances, rather than general attitudes that apply to all persons.

I've seen women who might fare well on a football team. I've met young women adventuresome enough to try. And if they want to, why not?

Obviously, if they lack strength, speed and daring to compete, they won't make the team. If they have those characteristics, the team may be improved by their participation.

The squabble over women in contact sports reminds me of a conversation I recently had on a train. It was a new, high-speed train, and in the news there had been reports of several accidents.

"Too bad they didn't put seat belts in these things. That might reduce injuries," I said.

My neighbor became livid.

"Nobody should be forced to wear seat belts, crash helmets or anything else. That's a personal decision, and if I want to risk my life by not wearing a seat belt, that's my right.'

I hadn't suggested forcing passengers to wear seat belts. "But if they were here," I replied, "you wouldn't have to wear them, but I could, if I wanted to."

He was so emotional about the subject he couldn't understand that by not having the seat belts, I was deprived of the right to wear one.

By barring girls from contact sports, the situation is similar. I may not want to be forced to play ice hockey with the boys, or tackle football, but that doesn't mean that other women should be excluded.

Not all feminists are interested in women competing in men's sports. A college physical education teacher pointed out that "sports develop, teach and reinforce a male value system that promotes winning as everything. Maybe we don't want to buy that philosophy wholesale. Winning is good, and has its place. But sports can be enjoyed for other reasons. What about teamwork, sportsmanship, physical fitness?

I see her point. I'm old enough to remember when high school coaches emphasized good sportsmanship, fair play, teamwork, camaraderie, as essential parts of the game. Breaking the leg of an opponent or mashing his head with a hockey puck was not acceptable.

Most feminists do feel that women should participate more freely and equally in sports. A browse through the sports pages of practically any city newspaper, a glance at the television sports report, will show that women receive less attention. Sports is still a male-dominated world. This has a negative effect on women and girls.

I'm also old enough to remember when girls who played basketball or ran on the track team were called tomboys, or "jocks." Ladylike girls didn't do those things. They took sewing and home economics and learned new ways to comb their hair.

DEAR ABBY

Widow proud to bear husband's name

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: Two months ago I lost the sweet and gentle man to whom I had been happily married for 31 years. With our three children grown and into happy marriages of their own, we were looking forward to traveling to all those wonderful faraway places we couldn't see until our "retirement years." And of course we had planned to grow old together.

Suddenly all these hopes have disappeared. I am not bitter. I realize that many couples weren't blessed with as many happy years as we have had.

Not only is my complaint so "petty" I'm almost ashamed to mention it, but it is directed to many of my well-meaning friends who have written to express their condolences.

Each day I want to shout from the rooftop, "Please good people, stop addressing my mail, Mary E. Jones. Legally, yes; socially, I'm still 'Mrs. James R. Jones!'"

I was always so proud to be his wife; I am just as proud to bear his name as his widow.

Please tell them for me, Abby. Everyone I know reads your column faithfully. Thank you. NEW WIDOW

DEAR WIDOW: Although I've mentioned it in my column many times, I will publish your letter as a reminder to those who have forgotten (or never learned) that a widow is always addressed (socially) as "Mrs. (her husband's name) Jones."

DEAR ABBY: There's a guy in our office who is nosy to the point of looking over my shoulder while I'm writing a check. He also will pick up and read anything that happens to be on my desk.

While one of our co-workers was on vacation, his personal mail was stacked up on his desk. Mr. Nosy went through all the mail and commented to the rest of us, "Gee, Mr. Bigshot sure has a lot of bills!"

How does one handle such rudeness?—PERTURBED

DEAR PERTURBED: Good manners, taste, tact and respect for the privacy of others are almost impossible to teach those who have developed tasteless, tactless and nosy habits. So if it's privacy you want, keep everything of a personal nature out of sight.

DEAR ABBY: My mother has been divorced for 15 years. She's 63 and a nice looking woman. Last month the man with whom she has been going for two years moved in with her. (He's also divorced.)

She says they love each other but if they get married they'll lose their welfare and medicare benefits.

I am married and have a wonderful family. I disapprove of my mother living in sin with this man and have refused to visit her. She lives only a few miles from me.

She said if I loved her, I would "understand" and visit her. I've told her that she is welcome to come to my home, but I'm not going to hers.

Do you think I'm right?—CONN. DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: You have a right to disapprove of your mother's lifestyle, but it's not your place to "judge" and punish "sins." That's the Lord's job. ("Hate the sin but love the sinner.")

DEAR ABBY: Why do so many people object to children? I am the mother of three, ages 2, 4 and 6, and I take them with me everywhere. If I'm invited somewhere, I always ask if my children are welcome, and if they're not, I don't go.

Children need to be with their parents as much as possible. It assures them that they are loved. Leaving children at home all the time is hard on them. It makes them feel unwanted and insecure.

I am not insulted if I am told my children aren't welcome. I realize that sometimes children are hard to take. Even mine. It requires a lot of love and patience to take your children with you all the time, but they grow up so fast, it's worth it.

I will stick to my beliefs and encourage others to do the same. Am I wrong?—LOVES CHILDREN

DEAR LOVES: You ask why so many people object to children. Because, unless they are disciplined and well behaved, they tend to impose on the rights of others.

DEAR ABBY: A few years ago I fell in love with a married man. We both work in the same office, so of course we see each other every day.

I know his wife will never give him a divorce, and as long as I am around this man I'll never get over him, so I have decided to quit my job and find another one.

My problem is, what reason should I give my boss for quitting?—STUMPED

DEAR STUMPED: Tell him you want a change of scenery. (It's true.)

Son's car loan gets complicated

By ERMA BOMBECK

A year ago last December, our college son borrowed $600 from us to buy a second-hand car. We wired the money to him and it cost $3.00.

In January of the next year he wrote us a check for $100 as payment on account. The check bounced.

He called us (reversing the $1.80 phone charges) and said we'd better cover it or he'd look bad at the bank. We wired him $100 to cover the check which cost us another $3.00.

He wrote us back and said, "I had to pay a service charge because they processed the check in the first place so you owe me $5.00."

He came home for the Easter break and said he was crediting his account with $105 because that's what he saved us by not flying. He also subtracted $1.35 as a gas allowance because he drove his sister to the dentist.

In September, he made another payment of $35. However, he called again ($1.80 collect) to report that the $35 depleted his checking account balance to 87 cents and the bank insisted he have a $5.00 minimum and due to the payment we received we owed him $4.13.

In November, he sought our advice on what to do about "our" investment. We could either write the car off as a loss as it no longer ran or put it in running order to keep our investment alive and productive. To be "alive and productive" would cost us $311.00. (Phone consultation $5.40.)

In December he called ($2.30) to tell us a tree had thrown itself in front of his right fender and caused him $56 worth of damages. However, he could live with the dent and was sending the $56 check to us from the insurance company as payment of his debt.

The insurance company, however, raised our rates and we were obliged to pay an extra $3.00 per month on the premium.

Last week, he appeared with a ledger and said, "Counting the $400 I saved you in air fare, the $56 from the insurance company, the $15 I spent getting estimates, the $75 worth of aggravation of maintaining my own transportation, the $30 errands I've run for you and the $24 worth of car washes, we'll just consider the debt paid in full. And don't think about the break on the income tax I give you because I'm dependent. After all, you ARE my parents."

Somehow, I always imagined we'd feel better when he paid the car off.

Hotel owner has horsy guest problem

SODA SPRINGS, Calif. (AP) — Maggie Littenstein, who owns the Soda Springs Hotel, has a guest problem — her 8-year-old horse Coco is stuck in the hotel's basement and won't come out.

Coco's predicament began when the Littenstein children put the horse in the basement to give him shelter from the snowy weather.

But when they tried to bring him up the basement stairs and out through the hotel, Coco wouldn't budge. The family tried to starve him up the stairs, by cutting off his food supply and leaving a trail of carrots on the steps but that didn't work.

A veterinarian suggested that a rope be tied around the pony's body, and that he be pulled up the stairs.

"It didn't work," Mrs. Littenstein said. "He just sat down like a stubborn mule and wouldn't budge."

The local fire chief agreed to set up a hoist system but reneged at the last moment claiming possible liability problems.

Sighed Mrs. Littenstien, "I don't think my problem is any different from someone who has a cat up a tree, or the snake fireman took out of the sewer in San Francisco."

Prestigious law jobs elude new graduates

New law school graduates will be less likely to land positions with prestigious law firms than they have in the past and will have a tougher time starting a financially successful law practice of their own, according to a recent bulletin issued by the Aptitude Inventory Measurement Service (AIMS).

A Dallas-based research and testing institute, AIMS is noted for its methods of evaluating young people to determine their aptitudes and suitabilities for lifetime careers. Its surveys and research cover a wide field of professional activity. Midland College is the Permian Basin testing site for AIMS.

The AIMS bulletin cautioned those who are considering entering law school to think carefully about the job market. Its research indicated that the number of law school graduates has increased rapidly in recent years, and this trend is expected to continue.

Brenda Holder, senior administrator for AIMS, brought out a point that might be overlooked by the aspiring law student. "One should be very selective about the particular phase of law he elects to practice.

"Even if a student does manage to compete successfully at the outset of his career, he may discover that the work is neither interesting nor satisfying," she said.

"Many students overlook the fact that they have more than one talent, more than one aptitude. They get enthused about the legal profession, decide on it as a career, and then, because they've overlooked other areas of interest to them, they can't understand why the work isn't totally fulfilling," she said.

AIMS research has discovered that lawyers who appear to find the greatest satisfaction and achieve the highest degree of success are those who zeroed in on more than one area of interest to themselves when they entered college. They combined their interests and channeled them into a specific area of law.

Mrs. Holder said, "For instance, if the student has strong three-dimensional thinking abllity, he might combine an engineering degree with a law degree and practice patent law."

"This combining process utilizes the entire spectrum of talent, and results in a feeling of accomplishment and deep satisfaction with one's work," she said.

AIMS suggests that anyone who is unsure about becoming a lawyer formulate a decision-making plan. It said persons should decide on the kind of career and lifestyle envisioned at the age of 35 and then backtrack and set clearly defined, career objectives which will facilitate the achievement of that goal.

Persons interested in taking the battery of aptitude tests given by AIMS may do so from March 10 to 12 at Midland College. Dr. Elizabeth Robinett, counselor, said the testing program consists of three half-day appointments and eleven hours of testing and evaluation. The cost is $300. For more information, persons may call the counseling office at 684-7851, extension 123.

"The results of the tests give an almost fool-proof indication of the areas in which a student will excell vocationally or professionally," she said. The testing results may serve as a "directional guideline," she said.

Lee Youth Center Chatter

By ANITA RAGAN, MISSY SERIGHT & DIANA SCOTT

Say Gang:

How'd ya like the way our mighty Rebel basketball players bounced the Bulldogs off the court last week. Our guys and girls came through with mighty victories over our crosstown rivals. Our boys' great win ended their basketball season on a successful note. Our girls, however, are still going strong. They will be playing in the regional meet at Abilene March 3 and THEN ON TO STATE!! We're really proud of you girls! Ya'll make plans to follow our girls to Abilene and support them "to the Max." The turnout at both games last week was super and our rousing Rebel Spirit was greater and longer-lasting, as usual . . . that's because "We are the Champions."

We were real proud of our Coronation which was very successful. The Origin and Lee Stage Band put on a terrific show and the decorations were beautiful. The following people were chosen in these catagories to represent our school on the 1977-78 Rebelee Court: Mr. and Miss L.H.S. - Susan Dakil and John Marks; Mr. and Miss Academic - Becky Mouser and Tracey Rodgers; Mr. and Miss Congenial - Wendy Heckman and Stan Carter; Mr. and Miss Courteous - Kay Jackson and Craig VanHorn; Mr. and Miss Integrity - Julianne Dixon and John Mabee; Mr. and Miss Talented - Suzy Graham and Todd Clements; Mr. and Miss Valuable - Dawn Smith and Marvin Iglehart. CONGRATULATIONS to all of you!!!

After the ceremony we all boogied over to the Y.C. for a dance. If you missed the band "Spyce" — you missed out of one of the best bands we've ever had or ever will have. It was great and so were the people who came Sunday and helped clean up after the dance. THANKS!

Rebelettes: Keep up the good work by wrapping the lockers you have. Start signing up for track lockers now. Bitsy's and Diana's squads will not be meeting this week.

A class in flags will be offered during 6th period next quarter. All sophomore and junior girls interested in participating in this unique activity and performing with the band next fall need to see Mr. Ragsdale in the Band Hall as soon as possible. If you are unable to take the class next quarter, but are interested in being a member of the flag corps next year, please see Mr. Ragsdale.

Everyone be sure and watch the Grammy's this Thursday at 8 p.m. because the singer who is up for nomination for "the Best Male Vocalist" in the country, Larry Gatlin, soon will be appearing in the Midland High Auditorium on March 15 at 8:30 p.m. He now is performing in Las Vegas and his show is supposed to be really super. We're lucky to be able to get this special person, so be sure to mark your calender for this fun event. Tickets are now on sale in both Youth Centers for $6.

All senior Junior Council members be sure to come early Friday morning for about 15 or 20 minutes, and clean up after the Cotillion dance to help raise money for our senior trip.

Later On,
M.A.D.

P.S. Senior Women: Last chance to turn in all orders for senior Girls Party. Turn them in to Diana, Kathy, or Tamera before Wednesday!

P.P.S. Don't forget to remember, not to come to school Monday! It's a Holiday!!

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — No matter when the coal starts moving in the Midwest gain, there are going to be critical energy shortages for weeks to come in the 12-state region, and the federal government has quietly moved into the area to make sure that no individual states get too greedy in time of need.

Dr. Charles Falcone, director of the Division of Power Supply and Reliability of the Economic Regulatory Administration of the Department of Energy, last week moved a staff of one (two more coming next week) into a two-room suite at the Canton, Ohio, federal building and began to keep a watchful eye on the power industry.

Although technically it is the responsibility of each individual state and utility to allocate the diminishing energy in their own way, the federal government can, under the Federal Power Act, intervene in what it considers to be a time of emergency and order energy to be distributed prudently throughout the entire region.

"We are just monitoring the states here to see if the maximum practical power available is being brought into the vulnerable regions and also to make sure that the power is shared within the region to equalize the shortage," Falcone said in a telephone interview.

"It is our view," he added, "that state lines should be ignored in favor of sharing under these conditions. So we try to steer the states away from a parochial viewpoint."

Some states, Falcone said, are willing to import power — even at great expense — but are unwilling to export to other states in the region that are in even worse shape. And some regions of the country, like the West, could probably send more power to the Midwest than they are sending, he adds.

Most states are cooperating with Falcone and the federal government, "but there are a few states that are reluctant to release energy — like Michigan, for example," he said.

New look at undertakers advised

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The state agency that licenses and regulates undertakers is too close to the undertaking lobby, the Sunset Advisory Commission's staff says.

It also reported to the commission Monday that the State Board of Morticians does a poor job of protecting the public and has had two or more conflict of interests situations.

"The staff has determined that functions currently performed by the board are not meeting objectives of protecting the public from health hazards and improper business practices," the report said.

Board duties could be absorbed by the State Health Department, which regulates the preparation and transportation of deceased persons, the staff said.

Commission members will recommend life or death for some two dozen state agencies, including the undertakers board, when the Legislature convenes next year.

The staff report said consumer complaints to the board deal mainly with price and quality of service.

"However, the board has taken the position that these types of problems do not lie within its jurisdiction. Yet, despite the pattern of the public's complaints, the board has not sought modification of its law," the report said.

One yardstick used by the staff was whether an agency had recommended new laws to benefit the public rather than the occupation it regulates.

But the morticians' board picture is clouded by the fact that the board's lawyer is the registered lobbyist for the Texas Funeral Directors Association, the report said.

The staff observed that the board took no action on 14 out of 16 consumer complaints filed last year but did refer nine of them to other agencies. Two complaints the agency said it referred to the attorney general never were received, the report observed.

"Only once, in 1977, was a sanction imposed as a result of a complaint presented by a consumer," the report said.

One problem, it said, was the fact that the board's attorney — lobbyist for the undertakers association — fills a key role in the handling of complaints.

"It would appear somewhat difficult to maintain an objective perspective while he fills the role of legal advisor in resolution of disputes brought before the board and acts as a lobbyist for the trade association," the report said.

The staff also said the board, consisting entirely of undertakers, appeared to make it unduly hard for others to enter the field.

For instance, apprentice embalmers must submit separate notarized reports on each of the 100 bodies they are required to prepare as a condition for licensing.

The staff said with a limited market for funerals — only so many people die each year — undertakers don't want price competition. And one way to avoid price competition is limiting entry into the occupation, the report said.

"Technological advances have made the need for embalming questionable. Even if the need is accepted, because of other technological advances the number of funeral homes currently operating is far in excess of the number required for efficient operation," the report said.

"Yet the industry remains profitable."

The report, in fact, questioned the need for the current state law requiring bodies to be embalmed or refrigerated within 24 hours of death.

It quoted health department officials as saying, "Within the United States, embalming has no public health significance."

The report also said the board had conflict of interest problems.

In the past three years, at least five complaints have been received on establishments owned by board members, but the board lacks a policy prohibiting it to act in such matters, the report said.

At the January meeting, board member Jack Carswell "actively discussed and supported a motion" to drop a complaint against his firm, the staff said.

It also said that board member M. Watson Frazar headed the Texas Funeral Directors' and Embalmers' Foundation, Inc., which developed plans for a building that houses both the board and the Texas Funeral Directors Association.

Warrior children common

FIYAMBIRO, Ethiopia (AP) — Children in oversize, cast-off uniforms clutching wooden rifles are a common sight in the brushfire wars that periodically erupt across Africa.

But in the rebellion to end Ethiopian control of the Ogaden Desert and join it to Somalia, the children are not playing soldier. They are actively engaged in combat, to avenge the deaths of loved ones and to help turn the dream of Western Somalia, the rebels' name for the Ogaden, into a reality.

Three such youngsters seen here in the mountains and valleys on the rebel side of the Fiyambiro battlefront appeared to be at that awkward age between childhood and adolescence.

Wearing brown uniforms, they crouched in the bush facing Ethiopian positions on an opposite ridge. Across each boy's back was an automatic rifle about half his size, a weapon the Russians supplied to the rebels' backers in Somalia before the Kremlin switched its support to Ethiopia.

"As is our tradition, they want revenge for the deaths of their parents," said Mohammed Hassan, a field commander for the Western Somali Liberation Front. "They have all received military training."

Hassan explained that the Ethiopians killed the boys' parents when they recaptured hilltop Fiyambiro temporarily last month and executed persons suspected of working for the Liberation Front.

Hassan did not say how many armed children were under his command, but he indicated there were more in the area, one of two main battlefronts in eastern Ethiopia where guerrillas are battling an Ethiopian army counter-offensive to reclaim the Ogaden.

The people of Fiyambiro, like most of the people in the Ogaden, are ethnic Somalis, Moslem nomads like the people of neighboring Somalia, with no cultural ties to the Christian Ethiopians to whom the Ogaden was ceded by the colonial powers in the 19th century.

Liberation Front officials here said thousands of the Ogaden's nomads are receiving military training at 40 camps in the "liberated" zone conquered by the rebels since the war erupted in mid-July. They said thousands of others have been armed with weapons supplied by Somalia or captured from the Ethiopians.

At Jijiga, a former Ethiopian tank and radar base in the northern Ogaden, visiting reporters toured an Ethiopian army camp converted into a refugee center.

About 800 refugees from Ethiopian bombings of Somali villages around Harar, 45 miles to the west, were housed in the camp amid the debris of the battle fought in Jijiga last September.

Chaps edge South Plains

BY TED BATTLES

Midland College couldn't wait to get into the Physical Education building three years ago and now they can't wait to get out of it.

The Chaparrals bid a Fond Farewell, James Kilpatrick style, Monday with a 77-73 overtime victory over South Plains College.

Next season the Chaps will be playing in the coliseum, scheduled for a May-June completion, across the street, but Monday's Western Junior College Conference tilt at the "old" gym proved a fitting enough finale in the tradition established during its relatively brief and hectic career.

THE WAY the Chaps won had Coach Jerry Stone searching for new strands of gray hair Tuesday morning. Midland jumped in front early and led right to the finish...er, well, almost.

It was 36-29 at half, down from 26-14 at one point, and the South Plains bunch didn't get as close as two points until 2:40 was left in the game, 65-63, on a basket by 6-4 Ricky Phillips. And they didn't tie until 34 seconds remained, this on a jumper by John Phinzy to lock it at 67 and force the overtime.

After Phillips drove the lane to give SPC a 69-67 lead, Midland took command, sinking eight-for-eight from the line in the five-minute extra period.

Six-five Ricky Hudgins, playing under the 6-9 shadow of Rusty Frontz most of the night, tied it with a couple of free throws, then Alvin Mayes, the night's hero for the Chaps, swished from the corner, MC's only overtime basket.

WITH IT tied at 71, Hudgins again converted twice from the line with 2:32 left. It was a lead that stood until nine seconds remained and Mayes converted two free throws. But first Mayes had come down with the game's biggest rebound after Cullen Mayfield drove the lane from the four-corners for a layup that refused to fall.

Mayes grabbed South Plains' missed shot at the other end and MC ran the clock from 1:15 to 0:09. Mayes' charity conversions at the point left South Plains with only a tie hope after Tyrone Dixon scored an uncontested basket with two seconds left, But the in-bounds gamble failed when Mayfield was fouled and made both shots with two seconds left.

The win left MC (16-14) with a 7-11 WJCC record and South Plains (14-14) at 6-10.

HUDGINS, AFTER a sluggish first half, finally got going in the second half to score 22 points, high for both sides. Mayes had 19 while Mayfield chipped in with 16 and Ron Jones contributed 12. Phillips with 16 and 15 each by Dixon and the 6-9 Frontz paced the Levelland team.

The first half settled into a long-range shooting contest as zones effectively fenced off the inside and it was a dreadful 20 minutes for the Chaps who were 46 (16-46) percent to 35 (13-28) per cent for SPC. But MC led by seven at half, the result of better rebounding and turnovers.

Hudgins was two-of-seven the first half, but then went five-of-seven the second half. Mayes hit 7-of-10 from the field and five-of-six from the line and came up with a couple of steals as well.

The Chaps conclude their 1977-78 regular season Thursday night at Hobbs, N.M., against New Mexico Junior College.

Warriors No. 1, Hogs drop to 4

By The Associated Press

The major college basketball teams are engaging in their own version of king of the hill these days. In the latest Associated Press voting, reflecting games through Sunday, there is a different No.1 team for the third week in a row.

Two weeks ago Kentucky stood at the top of the heap, a position they held consistently for the first half of the year, before relinquishing it to Arkansas last week after a loss to Lousiana State. But Arkansas lost to Houston Saturday, which paved the way for Marquette to take over as No.1.

(See scoreboard for top 20)

The Warriors received 40 of 55 first-place votes in the nationwide balloting of sports writers and broadcasters, and a total of 1,034 points. The defending NCAA champions defeated Wisconsin and Cincinnati in last week's action, improving their record to 21-2.

Kentucky moved a step back towards the top, after spending last week in the No.3 position. The Wildcats, 20-2, received 11 first-place votes and 936 points. Kentucky was a winner three times last week.

UCLA, ranked third, also moved up a notch. The Bruins narrowly escaped with a 60-59 victory over Washington State Friday night, but then destroyed Washington Saturday night. UCLA, 20-2, received a pair of first-place votes and a total of 857 points.

Arkansas dropped from first to fourth after its 84-75 upset loss to Houston. The Razorbacks, 25-2, were the first Southwest Conference team ever to be ranked No. 1 in basketball. Arkansas received 695 points.

New Mexico, 21-2, held at No.5, winning twice and collecting 614 points, while Kansas stayed put in sixth place. The Jayhawks, 22-3, received 571 points.

DePaul moved up one spot to seventh and collected the remaining two first-place votes. The Blue Demons, 22-2, accumulated 547 points. After spending a week in the Second Ten, North Carolina jumped back to No.8 with easy wins over Kent State and Virginia. The Tar Heels, 22-5, collected 361 points.

Notre Dame dropped two spaces to ninth after a 65-60 loss to South Carolina. The Irish are now 17-5. Michigan State, 19-4, rounds out the Top Ten. The Spartans held at No.10 despite a 99-80 trouncing by Purdue and a tough 79-74 victory over Ohio State.

Minnesota is the lone newcomer to the Top 20. The Gophers replaced Virginia.

Blalock stays cool in the rain

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. (AP) — Jane Blalock of Highland Beach, Fla., says her calm state of mind helped her to claim the Orange Blossom Classic of the Ladies Professional Golf Association.

"I wasn't sure 70 would be good enough to win," Blalock said Monday after she battled heavy rain and cold temperatures to fire a two-under-par 70 for a winning 212 total on the 6,340-yard Pasadena Golf Club course.

"I would love to have the same state of mind I had today every day. I was so calm and not afraid of anyone. It was like I was in a coma."

THE 32-year-old native of Portsmouth, N.H. outlasted veteran Gloria Ehret of Dallas to win by two. Ehret, a former LPGA champion, turned in her best finish since 1975, and her final round 68 was the best of the tournament.

Richmond U. fires Slone after 4 years as coach

RICHMOND, Va. (AP) — Carl Slone, his inexperienced team having won just four of 24 games, has been fired — a week earlier than expected — after four years as basketball coach at the University of Richmond.

The announcement was made Monday by Athletic Director Chuck Boone in a brief press release.

It said the university's Athletic Council recommended that Slone's original four-year contract, which expires at the end of this season, not be renewed.

The Spiders are 43-61 under Slone in his four years at his alma mater, but Boone said, "The decision was not based solely on his record."

Boone said he preferred not to elaborate except to emphasize that "the final decision was mine, and mine alone. I made it. It was based on what's best for the university."

Cougars lead Lamar tourney

BEAUMONT, Texas (AP) — Defending champion Houston owned a one-shot lead Monday after 27 holes of the Lamar University Invitational Golf Tournament.

UT seeks to keep its SWC bye

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

The Southwest Conference's basketball season comes to a chaotic conclusion tonight and it may take a Philadelphia lawyer and a math professor from Massachusetts Institute of Technology to figure out the final pairings for the league's postseason tournament.

And, after 16 games, it could come down to a coin flip for several clubs.

Texas and Arkansas are scrapping for the coveted "bye" into the stamina-sapping tournament which starts Saturday.

SHOULD ARKANSAS defeat Texas Tech in Fayetteville and Texas lose to Southern Methodist in Austin, Arkansas would receive a bye to the championship game March 4. Texas automatically goes if the roles are reversed.

However, should both teams win Texas gets the bye even though both teams would finish with 14-2 regular season marks.

SWC By-article IX reads: "If teams tie for first place in the regular conference season a conference winner shall be determined by: 1, The records against each other...2, Records against the next highest team(s) to them shall be the second criteria."

TEXAS AND Arkansas split in their two meetings. However, Texas lost to Baylor (which will finish in at least a tie for fifth place) and Arkansas lost to Houston. Texas beat Houston twice.

Houston has finished the conference campaign with an 11-5 record.Tech is 10-5, Baylor 7-8, SMU 6-9, A&M 4-11, and both TCU and Rice 2-13.

In other league games Tuesday night, Baylor is at TCU and Texas A&M is at Rice. A&M has clinched seventh place.

The first round of the tournament Saturday will pit No. 2 against No. 9, No. 3 against No. 8, No. 4, against No. 7, and No. 5 against No. 6.

The four surviving teams will start round-robin play at The Summit in Houston March 2. The two winners will play Friday night and the winner of that game will play either Arkansas or Texas.

ANY TIES after Tuesday night will be decided by a coin flip in the SWC office. The Saturday afternoon wild card television game will not be determined until Wednesday morning.

Tim Somerville, the young Texas Christian coach who has suffered through a long, long season, said,"The team that wins it will be the one that gets the bye. It would be hard for Arkansas to go through three tough games because they don't have a deep bench. Texas would have a better chance because of a better bench."

Somerville added,"Houston is the only team that has the bench strength to go through the tournament and win it."

Warriors better than '77, Hank

By The Associated Press

The Marquette Warriors are back in college basketball's No. 1 position and Coach Hank Raymonds isn't about to turn it down.

"Coaches are hypocrites when they say they don't want the No. 1 rating," Raymonds said following the Warriors' 75- 53 rout of Xavier of Ohio Monday night. "That's why you play the game. If you can't be No. 1, then you want to be No. 2."

Marquette was No. 2 until top-ranked Arkansas bowed to Houston over the weekend. And Kentucky, which moved up from third to second, avenged an earlier loss at Alabama by trimming the Crimson Tide 97- 84 at home Monday night.

ONLY TWO other members of this week's Associated Press Top Twenty were in action. Illinois State, ranked 15th, drubbed McNeese State 87-68 while No. 17 Syracuse clobbered Fordham 109-62.

Butch Lee became Marquette's No. 3 all-time scorer as the Warriors raced to their 22nd triumph in 24 outings and defeated Xavier for the 19th time in a row. Lee scored 12 points for a career total of 1,648, passing Dean Meminger. He is 15 behind Bo Ellis, who led Marquette to the national championship last season.

However, Jerome Whitehead took game scoring honors with 20 points. With a shot at becoming the best-shooting team in Marquette history, the Warriors bettered their season mark of 51.1 percent by hitting 27 of 42 shots for 64 percent.

"There is no question this is a better team than last year," Raymonds said. "We have more poise, more experience and certainly a better bench."

THE WARRIORS have three regular-season games remaining — against ninth-ranked Notre Dame, No. 16 Detroit and Butler.

"Our last five or six games we've played about the best basketball we can," Raymonds said. "We'll see how good we are when we go into the lion's den (Sunday at Notre Dame)."

Said Xavier's Tay Baker, "Marquette is the type that looks like they are not doing anything, then — bang! bang! bang! and they got you."

Kentucky upped its record to 21-2 by trouncing Alabama as Jack Givens scored 22 points and Rick Robey added 18. Alabama got 24 from Reggie King and 20 from Robert Scott but Kentucky blew open a 29-28 game with an 18-3 burst over the last 5½ minutes of the first half. Givens, who scored 20 points in the first half, had 10 in that stretch.

"I felt we were gonna play," said Coach Joe B. Hall. "I could see it in their eyes. We were sharp from the first play of the game. Our defense was sharp. We had a super effort out of everybody."

HALL MIGHT have been worried more about the flu bug than about Alabama.

"We came in tonight with three players sick and now we've got six," he said. "We're gonna give them two days off, put them on medication and keep them off their feet."

Illinois State designated its game against McNeese as Billy Lewis Night and the senior forward responded with 23 points, leaving him four shy of second place on the school's all-time list. Only Doug Collins of the Philadelphia 76ers with 2,240 points and Fred Marberry 1,881 have scored more points than Lewis' 1,877.

Ron Jones contributed 22 points as the Redbirds ran their record to 22-2 and posted their 20th consecutive homecourt triumph.

Syracuse notched its 27th straight victory at home, thrashing Fordham as Louis Orr scored 10 of the Orangemen's first 12 points. Orr finished with 18 points and freshman Danny Schayes — Dolph's son — came off the bench to score 15 in just 14 minutes of action.

Ali could be 0-for-last-four

TED BATTLES
BATTLE SCENE

Muhammad Ali shouted "I am the greatest" so loud and so long that he not only believed it, but he convinced a lot of other folks.

He may be. That's for the ages to debate and it will be done long, occasionally loudly, sometimes bitterly and always inconclusively.

Right now, there may even be some question as to Ali's greatness among his contemporaries.

Did anyone stop to think that for the charity of myopic judges, the aging Ali would be oh-for-his-last four decisions, a washed-up, over-the-hill pugilist, if not headed for oblivion, at least the musty pages of ring history.

Instead, on the fragile judgments of a ringside jury reluctant to unfrock a champion without first viewing the soles of his shoes, toes up, Ali reigned on in magnificent majesty, robed in a cloak of invincibility.

IT WASN'T the way Joe Louis earned his reputation. The Bomber never left any doubt. But Ali was the best around and the fact that most of his opponents walked out of the ring after it was over didn't seem to matter.

The myth grew as Ali survived against foes, heav

Win would have made difference

By PAUL LeBAR

ST. LOUIS (AP) — "Had we won that game, I don't think any of this would have happened. He might have said some things, but not in the same way."

So lamented Joe Gibbs, the now-departed St. Louis offensive backfield coach. His topics: Don Coryell, who as head coach, and a 26-20 Cardinals' loss in December to the Washington Redskins.

Coryell, bitterly frustrated by the setback, let his emotions erupt like a volcano after hearing an hour later of verbal abuse suffered in the stands by his wife and teenage daughter. The air in the Cardinals' offices thickened with tension and expectation as Bidwill waited three fruitless weeks for a softening by Coryell, who had lashed out at club policies involving the National Football League draft.

BUT, ALTHOUGH sufficient time passed to heal the wounds, the fiery Coryell seemingly carried out his own "death wish" when he was fired recently by owner Bill Bidwill.

There had been some hope when Coryell accepted the job as coach of the North in the Jan. 7 Senior Bowl at Mobile, Ala., indicating he would perhaps remain in St. Louis. When he returned from the game, he and the owner finally met.

"We talked for a minute and Bill said, 'Well, Don, what do you think we ought to do?'" Coryell later related.

"I said, 'I think we ought to split.' He said, 'Good. I do, too.' And then he brought out this paper — I have it in my pocket — telling me what the conditions of my release would be.

"Before I had gone to the Senior Bowl he told me he had talked to the Rams and given them permission to talk to me about their coaching job. But, heck, he wanted compensation. I didn't know what it was. It turned out to be a first-round draft. Heck, they aren't going to pay that!"

CORYELL WAS right in sizing up the Rams, who talked to him a day later but afterward hired George Allen. But where he erred was in believing Bidwill "doesn't want me."

Bidwill did want him and was prepared to accommodate his coach's wishes had Coryell brought the matter up at the outset of their Jan. 9 meeting.

In the ensuing weeks, despite Coryell's flying to Los Angeles in defiance of his orders, Bidwill changed the lock to team offices but still clung to fading hope that his coach would recant.

"I think the final decision was made on Tuesday," Bidwill said last Friday while firing Coryell, whom he also praised for bringing two National Conference East titles to St. Louis.

"I just came to the realization that there was no way he could continue. We could have had it worked out before he went to Los Angeles."

COREYLL, AN intense man who is consumed by a burning desire to win, has lost for the moment his most fervent desire, that of coaching an NFL team in Southern California.

But he does have consolations. The Cardinals will continue to pay him $75,000 annually and pick up some benefits under his contract that runs through 1980.

Bidwill, meanwhile, is busily screening applicants to succeed Coryell, looking for "the best man available." Of the Coryell staff, only offensive line coach Jim Hanifan and quarterback coach Harry Gilmer remain.

The legacy left by Coryell, who rescued the Cardinals from a laughing stock image, is a team that sorely needs to build a defense to accompany the potent offense he assembled over the past five years.

Gibbs, while departing last week, was not pessimistic despite last year's 7-7 record. "If some positive steps are taken, and if they have a red-hot draft, everything could be turned around."

Gibbs, 36, had accompanied Coryell to St. Louis after serving under the 53-year-old coach first as a player and later as an aide at San Diego State.

"I'm proud of what we did here," he said. "It's just a matter of their regrouping and getting the right type person to coach."

Bi-district tilt slated at Lee gym

Denver City clashes with Colorado City at 7:30 p.m. today in the Midland Lee High gym in a Class AA bi-district basketball game.

Coach Kenny Smith's Denver City team beat Tahoka Friday to clinch the 5-AA title with a 20-8 record for the season.

Coach Mike Hart's Wolves won the 6-AA cage title.

Ashe wins 1st match at Denver

DENVER (AP) — Arthur Ashe, attempting a comeback following heel surgery last year, whipped Walter Redondo 6-3, 6-3 in opening-round action of a $125,000 men's tennis tournament.

Another star of the recent past, fifth-seeded Stan Smith, outdueled Billy Martin 7-6, 6-4 in another first-round match Monday. But the No. 6 seed, Tim Gullikson, dropped a 6-4, 64 decision to unranked Nick Saviano.

In other matches, seventh-seed Mark Cox scored a 6-1, 57, 6-4 victory over Brian Teacher; Sweden's Doug Palm posted a 6-4, 7-6 verdict over Alvaro Fillol of Chile; Swiss newcomer Heinz Gunthardt battled through a pair of tiebreakers to edge Butch Walts Phoenix, 6-7, 6-2, 7-6; 18-year-old Van Winitsky edged veteran Marcelo Lara of Mexico 7-6, 6-7, 64, and Geoff Masters outlasted Kim Warwick 6-4, 6-7, 7-5 in an all-Aussie clash.

Ashe, from Richmond, Va., was scheduled to meet Hans Gildemeister of Chile in the opening round. But Gildemeister failed to show up for the match and Redondo, a nonqualifier, was substituted for him.

Spinks' win heralds new ring generation

HONOLULU (AP) — Leon Spinks' victory over Muhammad Ali for the world heavyweight crown last week marks the advent of a new generation of young fighters and the exit of the well-known but aging gladiators, says boxing promoter Bob Arum.

"Ali is a middle-aged man. He's 36 and as far as being an athlete is concerned, he's ancient. So is (Ken) Norton. So is (Ernie) Shavers and so is, to a lesser extent, Jimmy Young," said Arum, whose Top Rank Inc., promoted the Ali-Spink's fight in Las Vegas.

Arum is in Honolulu on a brief vaction and met with newsmen Monday to discuss the future for Spinks, who has a six-fight contract with Top Rank.

"As a young, vigorous fighter, I think Leon will try to take on one after another of these athletes ending their careers," said Arum.

"I think he'll be anxious to fight Norton, he'll be anxious to fight an Ernie Shavers, he'll be anxious to fight a Jimmy Young," he said.

The real test for the 24-year-old ex-Marine, Arum said, will come in a year or two when he'll have to start facing his contemporaries.

"Fighters of Leon's generation will be getting ready for title shots by then," said Arum, who said he sees among them John Tate, Michael Dokes, Domingo Delia of Argentina and Kallie Knoetze and Gerrie Coetzee of South Africa.

Arum said Ali would be given a rematch with Spinks in May or June, "If he wants it," but said he personally feels Ali should retire.

If Spinks is to fight Norton, the No. 1 contender, it probably wouldn't be before sometime in the fall, Arum said, adding that Spinks would face a lesser-ranked contender in May or June if Ali doesn't want a return bout at that time.

Arum flatly denied a charge by Spinks' manager, Millard "Mitt" Barnes, that Top Rank had offered to buy the managerial contract.

Barney said in St. Lous Monday that he had turned down a $1.5 million offer to surrender his contract to Spinks.

"The only way they'll get Leon is the Supreme Court," said Barnes, a business agent for Teamsters Local 600.

Arum said Barnes and Spinks are having difficulties in their relationship.

"I believe he's taking advantage of Leon, but that's between Leon and Barnes," said Arum. "I mean we're not interested in buying any contract, we're not interested in putting in any other manager."

Golf is the only game that plays its ancestors

By JIM MURRAY
Los Angeles Times Syndicate

In baseball, Joe DiMaggio can't pick up a glove in the first inning of the World Series and run out to center field and announce he's going to play for the Yankees.

In football, Red Grange can't show up in the Chicago Bears' locker room and announce he's going to start as halfback for a playoff game.

The horse racing, Swaps can't get in the post parade for this year's Kentucky Derby.

In tennis, Donald Budge can't show up in center court in Wimbledon and announce he's serving.

But, in golf, Gene Sarazen can show up on the first tee at the professional golfers' championship and shout "Fore!"

Gene Sarazen is 76 years old. But he won this tournament back in 1922 and that makes him eligible.

IN NO other sport is this quirky rule in effect. I mean, the winner of the 1922 Kentucky Derby doesn't draw a post position this year. Dempsey won't get on Ali's schedule.

Golf is the only game where you compete against your ancestors. Old golfers never die. Neither do they fade away. They may slice. Or putt sideways. But they're in the threesome all the same.

The joker is wild in golf. Its rules, prior to 1970, stated that if you ever won the U.S. Open or the PGA championship, you had a lifetime exemption. You could tee it up in any PGA tournament you wanted for the rest of your life.

Early on, this meant you bumped a young player from the standard field of 144. Which was highly aggravating, to say nothing of costly, to the young lad. They changed this rule to provide that, if a lifetime-exempt teed it up, they simply added a place.

This was clumsy, and it cluttered up the field anyway, particularly if 1922 winners were showing up in plus-fours and looking for spots.

In 1970, the PGA changed this exempt period from lifetime to 10 years. This created resentment. If you won the PGA in 1968, you could tee it up anywhere for life. This meant that, in 1981, a guy who won the PGA in 1922 could play in any tournament he could find. But a guy who won the same tournament in 1970 could not.

WHEN DEAN Beman became commissioner of golf, he became nettled by the game's image as a rocking-chair sport, peopled by oldsters with ear trumpets and battery-operated hearts.

Not content with shaving the exemptions from a lifetime to a decade, he tried to rule the golfing fossils out altogether by providing that even the lifetime exemptees had to show that they either (1) had played in 15 championships the preceding year or (2) had earned at least $10,000 the previous year.

Not surprisingly, 13 former PGA champions, Gene Sarazen among them, went to court. This was changing the rules in the middle of the game, they argued.

The youngsters, of course, applaud the change. Winning the PGA in the days of wooden sticks and stockbroker flights, they contend, isn't the same as winning it against a modern steel-shafted field of 160 of the finest players ever honed, professionals who do nothing 365 days a year but play golf and sleep.

THE OLDEST man ever to win a golf tournament was Sam Snead. He was almost 53 when he won the 1965 Greater Greensboro Open. But, of course, Snead is Snead. An archaelogical marvel like the Roman Colosseum or Tut's tomb. The oldest man ever to win the PGA was Julius Boros. He was 48 when he won in 1968. This year, a 46-year-old, Miller Barber has won one of the three tournaments, Phoenix.

A golfer will give up his exemption about as willingly as a lion would give up a zebra carcass after a long chase. No matter how rich and famous he becomes, a golfer never forgets the trauma and indignity of qualifying with the dawn patrols in the early years, or watching in horror as a shot hits a sprinkler head and careens out of bounds to mean you miss the cut, lose your exemption and go back to the ghost squad.

Besides, so long as 52-year-olds win tournaments, and 45-year-olds win PGAs, and 46-year-olds win $40,000 tournaments, you give up your exemption right after you give up your citizenship and the key to your strongbox. If Dean Beman wants to change the game, have him make the old-timers play with equipment indigenous to their era. Rock balls and hickory shafts. It still might not work. You still might get a contemporary of Man O'War in the field.

Williams recalls win over Leon in amateurs

CINCINNATI (AP) — Frankie Williams, an undefeated light heavyweight whose amateur victims included Leon Spinks — the newly-crowned heavyweight champion — wants to pick a fight with the Spinks brothers. And he isn't particular.

"We'll fight Michael or Leon — and give him all that weight he's got. We want one of them," said 64-year-old trainer Jimmy Brown, who worked with Ezzard Charles for 23 years.

Williams, 24, may be Cincinnati's best home-grown boxer since Charles reigned the heavyweight divison 30 years, dethroning Jersey Joe Walcott and Joe Louis.

AND BROWN sees a lot of striking resemblances between Charles and Williams, whose father was a sparring partner of the former champion.

"I look at him some days and almost cry. He reminds me that much of Ezz," said Brown, who has produced about 20 national amateur champions.

"People say I picked up Ezzard's style because dad fought him so often," said Williams, who won the 178-pound national Golden Gloves title in 1975. Spinks was the AAU champ that year.

Williams is 5-0-1 since turning pro last March.

"He could beat Mate Parlov today," said Rolly Schwartz, manager of the 1976 U.S. Olympic boxing team that won five gold medals at Montreal. Parlov, a Yugoslavian, recently won the world light heavyweight title.

Schwartz witnessed the Williams-Spinks battle three years ago and remembers it as "a three-round war. Frankie's never taken a back step to anyone and neither has Leon."

WILLIAMS, NOW 6-foot and 180 pounds, had been out of fighting about a year when he launched a comeback against Spinks, who last week stunned the sports world by defeating Muhammad Ali.

"He was all over me in the first round. I didn't score a blow. He never let me catch my balance. In the second round, I just bit into my mouth piece and went toe-to-toe with him until he pulled away.

Frankie Williams

"When I knew he could be moved, that's when I took over," said Williams, who decisively won the last two rounds.

"He's the toughest fighter I've faced. He's wild but he hits like a mule kick," said Williams, a knockout artist who won 111 of 120 amateur fights, 85 by KO.

Spinks won the second match between the two at Camp LeJeune, N.C., but Williams feels, "I won that even more decisively than the first one. The judges were all from the Marines. When he came to Cincinnati for the Olympic trials and I told him I wasn't in it, he jumped for joy. He said 'Now I can win it easy.'

"I had tears in my eyes when Leon walked through the Olympics. I would have been in his shoes if it wasn't for an arm injury," he said. He suffered an elbow fracture while losing a split decision to a top Soviet fighter.

Despite new division, it's same old game

By BOB OATES
The Los Angeles Times

LOS ANGELES — Big-time college football's separation into two divisions this year raises a couple of questions:

Does the game now have a Super Conference?

Will college football fans see any significant change in the product?

The answer to the first question is a qualified yes. The answer to the other is no.

In the new deal, Division I has been split into Divisions I-A and I-AA. And there is now a Super Conference (I-A) in the sense that the nation's leading football-playing institutions (the top 100, more or less) will eventually be writing their own rules — as organized baseball and pro football do — without the static they've had in recent years from smaller colleges.

BUT THE gain is principally administrative. It won't much affect football fans. Few if any schedule changes will result. And the spectator will see the same game he's grown used to.

What's happened is that those who administer college football have made a fundamental organizational change. They've expanded for the second time in five years. The National Collegiate Athletic Association, which not long ago had two divisions, now has four (I-A, I-AA, II and III). The background:

During the television age, spurred by the prospect of television receipts and big league status, ever-larger numbers of colleges and universities have annually sought Division I membership.

In 1960 there were two divisions with only 116 schools in the top (university) division. By 1973, when the NCAA split into three divisions there were 126. As of last year Division I membership had risen to an unwieldy 144. The answer this winter was a four-division association.

Qualifications for membership in each are progressively more strict. For example, schools seeking Division I-A status must play 60 percent of their games against I-A teams. Those in I-AA need play only 50 percent against either I-A or I-AA teams.

"IT'S a step in the right direction," Michigan athletic director Don Canham says of the NCAA action taken last month at an Atlanta convention. "Just how big a step depends on how many schools join I-A. They have until March 14 to decide. I think our new TV contract will make I-AA very appealing to some who might otherwise prefer I-A."

Under provisions of the NCAA's new contract, I-A schools are no longer guaranteed TV appearances — but I-AA schools are.

"There will be more television money now for I-AA colleges than there used to be for the bottom teams in Division I," says the NCAA's Dave Cawood. "In addition, I-AA teams will have a playoff for a national football championship — with another television pot of $750,000. From now on the only division without a national football playoff will I-A."

Thus the NCAA has provided a financial inducement for some of its smaller colleges to elect I-AA status.

Indeed the two relevant considerations are old and familiar in human relationships: money and pride. For all but a handful of colleges there will be more money in I-AA. But there is more prestige in I-A.

WEIGHING THESE two values, many college presidents and athletic directors are spending a hard winter making up their minds.

Dallas invites NBA

By DENNE H. FREEMAN

DALLAS (AP) — Dallas Mayor Robert Folsom said Monday that the city would be open to a National Basketball Association team that might wish to move here before an 18,000-seat downtown arena is completed in early 1980.

Folsom said, "If a team wanted to move here before the building was completed we would be receptive."

Moody Coliseum on the Southern Methodist campus and the Dallas Convention Center would be two possible sites.

Official ground-breaking for the still-to-be-named $23 million arena is set for March 15. Folsom said construction was expected to be completed by February 1980.

He also cited the Southwest Conference postseason tournament as an event the city would like to host again.

As far as a National Basketball Association franchise moving to Dallas, Folsom said, "I do believe we will have a ballclub...I don't believe a (NBA) team in the future will ever be moved to a city without an arena. The salaries (for players) are too high."

Folsom told the Dallas-Fort Worth Sports Media Association that he felt a National Hockey League franchise would be "more difficult to come by."

Folsom said the arena could be operated without basketball or hockey because of convention business.

"It won't live or die because it won't have basketball," said Folsom, who then joked, "But I might live or die if we don't get it."
