THE GUY TO GET IN 1943

Right in der fuehrer's face we'll say that this probably the ugliest mugg we've ever set eyes on. Hitler's hair and mustache, Hirohito's eyes and gold braid, and Mussolini's famous chin make this gruesome composite that should inspire every soldier to fight harder, every civilian to buy more war bonds in 1943.

Soviet Winter Drive Brings Further Gains

Nazi Garrison Wiped Out At Velikie Luki

By RICHARD McMURRAY
Associated Press War Editor

Victorious Russian armies driving deeper into German and Fascist positions southwest and south of Stalingrad have captured the railway station of Remontnaya, 117 miles southwest of the ruined Volga city, and have taken the important district center of Elkhotovo in the deep Caucasus, the Russians announced early today.

The regular midnight communique told of continued successes on all fronts of the Red army's winter offensives.

Remontnaya is on the Stalingrad-Krasnodar railroad and is 27 miles beyond the fallen Nazis base city of Kotelnikovski.

The communique also said the district center of Dubovskoye, in the same region, was captured and that a large amount of war material and food and many head of cattle were taken.

Elkhotovo was captured by a Red army force which swept around the Germans and broke into the center of the ctiy. It fell to the Russians after a day-long battle, the communique announced.

The Russians also indicated that through the shell-pocked ancient fortress of Velikie Luki and thwarting every German effort to break out of entrapment at Rzhev.

The Germans insisted that Velikie Luki still was theirs despite Russians claims to have slaughtered the Nazi garrison to a man in puncturing the main enemy defense line stretching from the Baltic to the Black sea. Berlin acknowledged the fall of Elisia 170 miles south of Stalingrad saying it was destroyed before the Russians entered.

Further Russian successes were scored on all fronts. Dozens of trenches dropped before the Russian avalanche sweeping the desolate Kalmyck Steppes below Stalingrad. The Russians aimed at Salsk, an important north Caucasus rail junction 90 miles from the nearest Red vanguards.

THEY'LL SAY 'I DO' OVER TELEPHONE

When a transcontinental telephone rings in Fort Worth, in the near future, Evelyn Daniels, 19-year-old clerk at Consolidated Aircraft's Texas plant, will be standing beside it in full wedding regalia. At the other end of the line—4,000-miles away in Hawaii—will be George M. Shoffner (pictured at right), a Dayton, Ohio, aircraft engineer now stationed at Hickam Field. The couple will be married by proxy by Rev. Hoytt Boles, a Presbyterian minister, who will perform the ceremony through another phone in Fort Worth. A church wedding will follow at a later date in Honolulu.

First Baby Of 1943 Is June Rhody

Phyllis June Rhody was Gray county's first 1943 baby and she and her parents, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Rhody, 509 S. Banks, and Dr. R. Malcolm Brown, will be showered with gifts by several Pampa merchants.

Phyllis June was born at 2:45 a. m. Friday, January 1, at a local hospital. She weighed 5 pounds 13½ ounces.

The first 1943 baby will receive many articles of wearing apparel, toilet articles, and other gifts while there'll also be gifts for mother and father and the attending physician.

First 1942 baby was Bobby Leon Attaway, son of Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Attaway, Newtown camp.

Halsey Says Axis Doomed To Lose War

By J. NORMAN LODGE

WITH THE UNITED STATES FLEET IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Jan. 2 (AP)—Victory for the United Nations this year is the prediction of Admiral William Halsey, commander of the South Pacific force of the Pacific fleet.

The admiral made this statement in an interview during which I learned that you don't beat about the bush when talking to him. Direct approach brings direct answers.

I wanted him to gaze into the crystal ball to see what the year 1943 would bring forth so I put the direct question:

"Can you give us an idea what the New Year holds in store?"

This was his anwer:

"Victory for the United Nations. Complete, absolute defeat for the Axis powers. But let's not be stopped this time until we fix things up so they will never be able to rise again."

"This year?"

"Yes."

"Do you include Japan?"

"Yes, sir, and here's a few messages I wish you would send to Japan for me.

"TO HIROHITO:

"As emperor and leader of traitorous and brutal Japan during the years of her foul attacks on peaceful peoples, your time is short.

"TO TOJO:

"When you unleashed your cowardly attack on December 7 you started something you can't finish.

"We have good evidence of your atrocities and know where they were perpetrated. They'll be properly repaid.

"TO YAMAMOTO:

"You will be present at the peace if you are still alive. That peace will be in the White House but the White House will not be as you envisaged.

"TO THE AMERICAN PEOPLE:

"Under my command the United Nations in the South Pacific have the finest fighting men our country ever produced. They are imbued with a fighter instinct and it is conceded we will not stop until there is a complete victory.

"TO THE JAPANESE PEOPLE:

"That heavy rumbling you hear now will gradually grow into a shock of bursting bombs, the shrieking of shells and the clashing of swords on your own soil. You had better stop now before it is too late."

New Congress Hopes To Win War, Peace

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (A.P.).—The Seventy-eighth Congress, facing a critical year of this World War, will convene Wednesday with high hopes of seeing victory won and of sharing in the tremendous task of writing a last peace before its two-year life span ends.

Behind the political jockeying that appears inevitable because of the closest division in democratic and republican membership since 1933, there already has been quiet maneuvering among those of conflicting nationalist and internationalist views for positions of power, particularly on the Foreign Affairs committees.

Immediate attention centers on the battle of the numerically strongest Republican minority in 10 years to bring about a new independence of congress from the executive. This may have far-reaching effect on major issues.

Congress already has appropriated $220,000,000 for the war, a major portion of which is committed but unspent. If administration expenditure estimates of $90,000,000,000 yearly for military purposes are correct, it will have to provide much more for long-range commitments.

The economy bloc is resurgent, however, and more critical attention is sure to be given to how the money is being spent by government agencies swollen with wartime personnel.

Along with the new appropriations apparently must come additional taxes. Congress may write its own tax law and delve into new proposals for government financing, possibly through some form of compulsory savings.

Taxation always is a painful subject, but price control and rationing seems likely to provide an even bigger headache for the legislators.

With food production a critical problem, a determined farm bloc will renew its demands for higher prices, either through a revision of the complicated parity formulas or by other methods.

The manpower problem may pre-

Willkie Urges Strategy Board Of United Nations

NEW YORK, Jan. 2. (AP)—Wendell L. Willkie today called for the formation of a working common council of the United Nations to plan war and economic strategy now and cooperation after victory.

Addressing an opera victory rally at this afternoon's performance of the Metropolitan Opera company, the Republican candidate for president in 1940 asserted the United Nations must be made "a fact and not a mere euphonious phrase." The program was broadcast over the blue network.

"If history has taught us anything," Willkie said, it has taught us that people obtain in a peace only what they win while they fight.

"What I want to emphasize today is that planning will do no good unless we give our plans realty; that we will have no United Nations after the war unless we make the United Nations now a fact and not a mere euphonious phrase."

Willkie declared that today, a year after the signing of the United Nations pact, "we should face the fact that if hopeful billions of human beings are not to be disappointed x x x the United Nations must become a common council, not only for the winning of the war but for the future welfare of mankind."

Willkie asserted that the "dream of Woodrow Wilson" had failed be-

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 2 (AP)—This sign appeared on a boarded front window of a drive-in restaurant today:

No coffee.
No sugar.
No meat.
No gas.

Closed for the duration.

Russell J. D'Anna, one of the operators, said gasoline rationing added the finishing touch to the business, already having difficulty getting food supplies.

50,000 Homeless In Ohio River Valley

PORTSMOUTH, O., Jan. 2. (AP)—A mighty floodtide which already has driven 50,000 persons from their Ohio Valley homes and hampered war industry inched ceaselessly tonight toward the top of a wall that shuts this manufacturingg city from the Ohio river.

Behind the dykewall, 40,000 residents waited to see if it will turn back 62 feet of water; river experts said the flood crest, now only hours away, would be 61 feet — 11 feet above flood stage. The river stood at 60.7 feet at 2 p. m.

Forecaster John Hagan said at Cincinnati that a lessening flow from nearby tributaries was easing the burden on the Ohio, and consequently the stream would not exceed the predicted crest here.

The crest of the flood, which began in Pittsburgh early in the week and rolled destructively down the valley to flood city after city, moved past Huntington, W. Va., today and was expected to reach Cincinnati tomorrow.

Mouse 'Eats Up' His 'B' and 'C' Coupons

"I had 50 "C" stamps on Form R-542. A mouse eat up 11 leaving me 39 making a loss of 11 "C" stamps. Amount to 44 gallons of gasoline.

"Make a total loss of 51 stamps. Amount to 204 gallons of gasoline."

The OPA ordered the compaint investigated with "a view to issuing new coupons."

Grab Your Hats - - Here We Go Into New Year!

Hang onto your hats, here we go again!

Something new has been added and something new will be deducted.

Pampa gained possesion of another year Friday, in a day as sunshiny and bright as a freshly minted dollar.

Speaking of dollars, the deduction will be from the new Victory tax, higher income taxes, possibly more rationing.

There was plenty of merriment to welcome 1943's advent into the city with dances and watch parties, but yesterday found the routine affairs of business and government back in the groove.

Buildings and stores that had been closed Friday re-opened again. Pampa school children realized that the holiday season was closing and tomorrow would find them back in their class rooms.

At the court house, the county's official family was sworn in by District Judge W. R. Ewing on Friday morning.

Three new officials joined Gray county's official family. They were Sheriff G. H. Kyle, District Attorney W. E. Rogers, and Constable Earl Lewis.

Pampa Accepts New Responsibility As Partner To Uncle Sam In 1943

By TEX DE WEESE

Pampa enters 1943 with a sense of pride in its contribution to the nation's war effort — and accepts a new responsibility in its capacity as a full-fledged partner in Uncle Sam & Company's war firm.

At Pampa's new Army Air Forces Advanced Flying School, 1943 will witness hundreds, perhaps even thousands, of clear-eyed American youths winning their cherished silver pilot's wings and joining various tactical units that will spell defeat for the Axis.

It was appropriate on New Year's day that when Lt. Col. Daniel S. Campbell, Commanding Officer at Pampa's air base, issued his terse order that the day was to be marked by "work as usual," he added:

"We've been working hard in the past, but we must push even harder in 1943. Even though the outlook is much brighter than a year ago, we must not lag in our efforts. We have just one job to work toward

3 Die, 16 Safe In Air Crash

GRANITE CITY, Ill., Jan. 2. (AP)—Three men were killed today in the crash of a B-24 Army bomber, but 16 others parachuted to safety before the airplane smashed nosedown and burst into flames in a field six miles east of Granite City, Scott Field (Ill.) authorities announced tonight.

Two of the men were killed in a parachute fall to earth and the body of the third man was found in the flaming wreckage. They were not positively identified.

Four officers were injured slightly when they parachuted to earth. They were: Second Lieut. J. S. Preuss, Glastonbury, Con., co-pilot; First Lieut. J. B. Kendall; Second Lieut. F. J. Washburn and Second Lieut., V. C. Miller.

Lieut. C. K. Jaffe of the Scott Field Public Relations office, said the bomber left its home base, Alamogordo, N. M., early today on a routine training flight. It was headed for Topeka, Kas., but because of inclement weather turned toward Scott field.

Curtin Urges Drive On Japs

MELBOURNE, Australia, Jan. 2. (AP)—Prime Minister John Curtin is making representations "to the proper quarters" to try to get the Allies to increase their anti-Japanese forces in the Pacific, J. J. Derman, minister of war organization and industrial research, said today.

Two days ago Curtin warned that Japan was consolidating her gains and said "The policy of dealing with Hitler and the European phase of the war first is being overdone." He asked that the United States send more land, naval, and air power to the Pacific theater.

Meanwhile the government is expected to launch prosecutions against the ringleaders of a work stoppage in Sydney where 35,000 men yesterday knocked off for a New Year's holiday despite a government ruling that Monday would be the official holiday.

U. S. White Paper Outlines Fateful Diplomatic Decade

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP)—An American white book issued by the state department tonight disclosed that Ambassador Joseph C. Grew cabled from Tokyo Jan. 27, 1941 that the Japanese had plans for a "surprise mass attacks at Pearl Harbor in case of 'trouble' with the United States."

The Grew cable was one of a series of warnings dating back to 1932 and growing progressively urgent in the subsequent years until on Nov. 29, 1941, Secretary of State Cordell Hull told the British Ambassador "The diplomatic part of our relations with Japan was virtually over and the matter will now go to the officials of the Army and Navy."

Moreover, the white book reported, Hull said it would be a "serious mistake for our country and other countries interested in the Pacific situation to make plans of resistance without including the possibility that Japan may move suddenly and with every possible element of surprise and spread out over considerable areas and capture certain positions and posts before the peaceful countries interested in the Pacific could have time to confer and formulate plans."

LONDON, Jan. 2. The Berlin radio announcement of the changes said they were made "within the limits of a general retirement of German diplomatic representatives," and that Hitler had acted upon the suggestion of German Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop.

Gen. Eugen Ott, ambassador to Tokyo, Prince Viktor Zu Wied, minister to Stockholm, and Eberhard von Stohrer, ambassador in Madrid, were recalled and "will be giv-

No More War Drives Until Early April

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP)—Treasury Secretary Morgenthau announced today that there would be no more special drives for funds to finance the war until early April because the treasury had borrowed an historic total of $12,906,000,000 during December through its victory fund campaign.

The original December goal of $9,000,000,000 was overreached by 43.3 per cent.

The actual total of money brought into the treasury last month was $15,600,000,000, because of $2,700,000,000 received in taxes and other collections.

"There is comfort for all of us in this grand response by the people to the war needs of the treasury," Morgenthau said.

HOW TO GIVE A JAP THE SHAKES

Jap snipers on Guadalcanal are providing American troops with some of the best sport of the war. When a Yank sights a Jap perched in a coconut tree, a tank is sent for. The tank gives the tree enough of a bump to start it swaying violently without uprooting it. This launches the sniper as if he were a clay pigeon. And as he soars through the air with the greatest of unease, the boys shoot him on the wing. There are no prizes. But occasionally the launching bump pays off with a jack-pot of coconuts.

Help! Officers At Pampa Base Need Eatin' Knives

By BROWNWOOD EMERSON

Those officers out at Pampa's army air base are really busy these days teaching the aviation cadets all the things they should know that will make them polished pilots.

But the officers, too, are learning a few things. And there's one thing in particular — not in any of their multitudinous text books — that struck your Pampa news reporter when he was fortunate enough to be invited as a guest in the Officer's Mess.

For one reason or another, whether it's because of the metal shortage or just one of those many things attendant with the equipping of a big new army camp, your reporter just doesn't k[illegible]—but [illegible] knives have failed to arrive for the Officer's mess.

There's plenty of good food, and there are forks and spoons—but no knives.

But those officers are resourceful. You don't hear them bemoan their plight. No sir! They've just pitched in and learned a new method of skillfully slicing steaks or fowl or what-have-you with those spoons.

It would do your heart good to see Major So-and-So ambidextrously carve a sizzling steak with that spoon. Or butter his bread with his fo[illegible]'d almost believe they could[illegible] turkey with that spo[illegible] staff, interposed, saying:

"I think the admiral will agree it is safe to say at this instance that we are engaged in a highly hazardous effort to rescue some white women from an island where they are in imminent danger of personal violation and death."

There was no further elucidation or approximate location of the island.

"What do you think is the significance of Tojo's recent remarks?" I asked Admiral Halsey.

"He sees the handwriting on the wall," he replied.

"Do you foresee a United Nations offensive in all parts of the world in a short space of time?"

"I definitely hope so," the admiral said as his eyes twinkled. "And I hope Hitler, Mussolini and Hirohito will see the same thing."

"What is the importance of air power as demonstrated in the Solomons?" A correspondent asked.

"Air power, when properly used in conjunction with necessary ground and sea forces is a tremendous factor in warfare."

"Do we have enough material here to conduct the offensives previously mentioned?"

"No man in military history ever had enough men and material but he has always gone ahead and done it just the same."

"Have we passed from the defensive to the offensive?"

"Definitely. All the Axis is hearing the tolling of the bells. And we are doing the rope pulling." He smiled.

"Do you anticipate further Japanese action against the Solomons?"

"I foresee action wherever we can find one."

"Do you mean that the Japs are harder to find now?"

"Definitely."

"Do you foresee the bombing of the Japanese mainland?"

"I hope so."

"You have given us messages to the Japanese war lords, the emperor, and the American people, can you give us a message to the fighting forces as to whether there is a good liberty town in the offing?" I asked as a personal favor for my Navy friends.

Admiral Halsey swung around in his swivel chair, pursued his lips, again let a twinkle come into his eyes and with all seriousness replied:

"Liberty for the boys, yes. We will bypass all smaller towns and let them loose in Tokyo. That will be a liberty town they'll really enjoy."

And if the dreamy look on his countenance meant what I took it to mean, Halsey will not be loath to take liberty in Tokio himself.

He was asked his opinion of young recruits and naval reserves in the Pacific.

"There is only one word to describe them," Halsey said quickly. "Superb. The officers and men of the USNR are doing things we didn't dream them capable of, and didn't think possible. As for the regulars—God bless them—there is nothing our country can do for them that is too good."

And as abruptly as the interview began it stopped. Halsey is like that.

Three Dallas Ration Board Members Agree To Stay On Longer

FORT WORTH, Jan. 2 (AP)—Three members of the executive panel of the Dallas county war price and rationing board who have submitted their resignations have agreed to serve until their successors can become oriented in the work, Texas OPA Director Mark McGee announced today after conferring with the three men.

C. R. McHenry, chairman, and O. Sam Cummings and W. L. Smith, co-members of the executive panel, came to Fort Worth this afternoon at McGee's invitation to discuss their action.

As the conference ended McGee told them: "I know as well as any one the fe[illegible]l service you have performed for a year as members of the Dallas county board, but I just want you to understand that your resignations have not yet been accepted and I hope when the time comes to appoint your successors that you can be persuaded to stay on the board and forget about these resignations. I know your work also."

He said he had talked with Mayor Woodall Rodgers, chairman of the civilian defense council in Dallas county and Mayor Rodgers agreed to call together the 17 mayors of municipalities in the county so they can be recommend a group of men from which McGee can choose appointees on the Dallas county board.

in 1943. That job is to win the war.

"Our particular task at this field is to train pilots — the best pilots in the world — and the men who can contribute in great measure to a more complete victory. It's our job and we'll do it!"

And Col. Campbell's words also present a challenge to the people of Pampa. For Pampans also have a job to do — a job that will help him in his efforts.

Never before have Pampa's skies been so busy, with scores of fast twin-engined military planes zooming in every direction. Never before, since the original oil rush, have Pampa's streets been so filled with visitors most of them now in uniform.

And never before have the people of Pampa responded so completely and enthusiastically to the task that confronts them.

That task is to take into their hearts these soldier boys at Pampa's air base, to help make them feel at home, to extend to them the same kind of western Texas hospitality that Pampa fathers and mothers would wish for their own boys in the service, wherever they may be.

Pampa has responded nobly in this direction. But Pampans must resolve about their job, at this beginning of 1943, as Col. Campbell has about his:

"We must not lag in our efforts."

It's our job and we must — we WILL do it!

Pampa accepts its new responsibility.

Small War Plants To Get Billion In Contracts For 1943

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP)—Donald M. Nelson has set the placing of at least $1,000,000,000 in contracts as the goal of the smaller war plants corporation in 1943, it was learned today, and the directorate may be reshuffled for greater efficiency.

Other war production board officials are convinced that the agency, if it uses determinedly the board powers given it by congress, can place up to $4,000,000,000 worth of contracts in the hinterlands of American industry—a sum which equals a prosperous year's output of the entire automotive industry in peacetime.

Informed WPB sources who could not be publicly identified reported that two or more of the five corporation directorships probably will change hands.

Nelson has given the corporation the green light to use its $150,000,000 revolving fund to take prime contracts in its own name direct from the armed services. It then would parcel out to subcontractors the jobs of fabricating and assembling parts.

weakest spot—a great and growing lack of shipping with which to exploit the treasured lands conquered to the south. The victories brought to 112 the total of Japanese ships sent down by undersea raiders and included two large, a medium and small cargo ships; a medium sized tanker; a medium sized transport and passenger-cargo vessel.

The British First army still was bogged down in the mud of Tunisia but the Eighth army started moving again toward Tripoli, chasing the Germans from a dry water gulley 195 miles short of the Tripolitanian port. The Berlin radio predicted imminent large scale attacks in both Libya and Tunisia.

It was give and take in the Tunisian air. Allied planes set large fires at Tunis but lost six planes. The Germans lost four in three thrusts at Bone. The east coast ports of Sfax and Sousse were declared heavily damaged and the enemy apparently was making no repairs.

Gen. Charles De Gaulle, leader of the Fighting French, proposed a conference with Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, Admiral Darlan's successor as high commissioner in North Africa, to find a basis for French unity. The DeGaullists had switched their enmity from the murdered admiral to the Imperial Council of colonial governors which Darlan appointed and which unanimously selected Giraud as Darlan's successor.

Further evidence of German frustration was found in a shakeup by Hitler of his deplomatic corps. He recalled his representatives to Japan, Spain and Sweden replacing them with sterner men. Because of "further murders" of Nazi soldiers in conquored Belgium, all places of amusement were closed until further notice.

Perhaps to hide the disasters on Russia, the Germans made the extravagent claim of torpedoing four merchantmen, damaging several British cruisers and destroyers and sinking a destroyer in the frigid Arctic waters north of Norway on the Murmansk convoy route.

The Germans admitted the loss of a destroyer, and 13 months after the fact, told of the destruction of the auxiliary cruiser Atlantis in the middle of the south Atlantic by the British cruiser Devonshire. The British intercepted a 10,000-ton blockade runner in the Atlantic and the Germans promptly scuttled her and were taken prisoners.

Allied pressure on the Japanese at far flung outposts in the Pacific and in Burma increased appreciably even as Australian Prime Minister John Curtin called for a greater effort against the men of Nippon. He declared the policy of dealing first with Hitler and finishing Japan off as a climax had been overdone and that the Nipponese were consolidating their wealthy conquests.

The bloody, methodical extermination of the Japanese in New Guinea continued apace and U. S. bombers struck heavily at Japanese headquarters on Guadalcanal, at a new air base at Munda to the north and at Kiska in the cold, fog-shrouded Aleutians off Alaska.

U. S. Bombers tore up an enemy air base at Shwebo in the center of Burma and attacked a railway south of Mandalay. The RAF swept the Myittha valley and attacked shipping off the Arakan coast. Marshal Wavell's Indian army was within 25 miles of the Bengal port of Akyab. In China, the Japanese were forced from Tsienshin and Taihu in Southwestern Anhwei province.

The Russians not only were liquidating hundreds of thousands of Hitler's troops and war machines, but they also were capturing vital defense points. Moreover they were disrupting long, tenuous German communication lines leaving the shivering German troops isolated in many instances.

en new posts in the German foreign office," the announcement said.

Henrich Georg Stahmer, German ambassador to Japan's puppet Chinese regime at Nanking, is going to Tokyo; Hans Adolf von Moltke will take the Madrid post, and Dr. Hans Thomsen, former charge d'affaires at Washington, will take over the Nazi ministry at Stockholm.

Informed sources said the mixed characters of the newly appointed representatives gave no clue as to Hitler's motives, but it is no secret that many Germans are disappointed about the failure of Japan to hit Russia in Siberia at a time when Germany is taking heavy punishment from the Soviets in the west.

Strange Fate Brings U. S. And Jap Pilots Together On Lonely Island

PALESTINE, Jan. 2 (AP).—From far away jungles comes a war story woven around a strange fate that brought aerial enemies together afoot on the lonely eastern coast of New Guinea.

Sergeant John Riley Henson, 22, bomber gunner home on a furlough, said, "We were flying over Lae on a bombing mission. Japanese anti-aircraft fire fouled our hydraulic system and a Jap Zero fighter shot out our left engine. The strain on the other engine soon burned it out so we released our bombs and prepared to set her down on the water, 10 miles from shore."

In the fight with a Jap Zero two members of the American crew were killed. The remaining five scrambled into rubber boat rafts as the big ship hit the sea.

Eighteen hours later the Americans reached shore and wandered into a native trading post. After dispatching a native with a note by boat on a long and circuitous trip toward Port Moresby, the Americans settled down for three weeks with the natives, and it was during this time that a Japanese aviator, armed, wandered into the camp.

"The Jap bailed out of his own plane during a fight," said Henson. "We were startled when he walked into our camp but when he started speaking good English we learned he was a graduate of U. C. L. A. He offered us his gun and assured us he didn't want to fight Americans."

When the Americans finally boarded a trading boat and started back for Port Moresby they took the Japanese prisoner with them. The captain of the boat, said Henson, did not want to give the Americans a place to sleep nor did he want to give them much to eat.

"The Jap liked us so well that he held the gun on the captain and made him give us everything we wanted. Also he stood guard over us while we slept to make sure we were not bothered."

At Port Moresby the Jap was inturned. Later he was sent to Australia.

Henson does not tell the account out of affection for the Japanese because he had battled them in the skies in 16 raids against Rabaul and Lae. He said he had shot three of them out of the skies and declared, "They're too yellow to come out and fight without plenty of advantage."

The Jap was bitter against his government which, he told Henson, had called him home under the promise that he was to be given a high diplomatic position. Instead he was hustled into training as a combat pilot.

goes on it may make all of us change our table manners. And Heaven forbid! It's hard enough for most of us to keep up with Emily Post as we already know it! Why have to start on something new?

And so, fearing that precedent may be set out here at the Army Air Forces Advanced Flying School, and fearful that it might mean learning a new version of Emily Post, this reporter has set out on a one-man campaign to remove this dangerous possibility.

Let's get those poor officers some knives. Almost every family in Pampa or vicinity has at least ONE slightly used, but durable table knife that they can spare. Let's gather 'em all together here at the Pampa News office and send 'em out to those officers.

So EVERYBODY! Let's act now! Bring a table knife to the Pampa News Office TOMORROW! We'll see that they go to the right place.

Remember, we're Texans. From one of the greatest cattle states in the Union. And Texans, who love their beefsteaks, just can't countenance the idea of eating 'em with a spoon.

CONGRESS

sent the most controversial issue of the session if current administration efforts fail to work out the difficulties of supplying the armed forces, the factories and the farms with the men and women they need.

Two major delegations of authority to the executive expire this year and congress is likely to become embroiled in controversy over their renewal.

Republican house members already have announced they would fight extension of executive authority to make trade agreements with other nations affecting adjustments in tariff barriers.

The other authority is that represented in lend-lease aid to other nations, for which congress has made available a total of $59,526,000,000 and which most members believe can not be halted at least for the duration of the war.

A half dozen minor issues will claim the attention of the new congress. Legislation to authorize censorship of communications to and from territories and possessions is certain to present some problems.

The question of permanent increases in pay for federal employes also will be up.

An investigation of conditions in Puerto Rico is impending and there may be a Republican explosion against the regime there of Governor Rexford Guy Tugwell.

A bill to abolish state poll taxes, laid aside in the last session, is to be reintroduced.

Proposals to ban the sale of alcoholic drinks near military posts may be revived.

Mr. Roosevelt will send some important nominations to the senate which could prove controversial. There is a supreme court vacancy, and the appointment of Prentiss M. Brown, retiring Michigan senator, to succeed Leon Henderson as price administrator is expected shortly.

Congress is not likely to have a quiet year in 1943.

gram and Hull's conversation were contained in the 144-page book entitled "peace and war — United States foreign policy 1931-1941. A foreward to the document said:

"The fateful decade, 1931-1941, began and ended with acts of violence by Japan. It was marked by the ruthless development of a determined policy of world domination on the part of Japan, Germany and Italy."

Accordingly, the book devotes much space to the rise of Italian and German aggression and the counter-measure adopted by this country; but Japan dominates the report. The citation said he managed to reach her after she had gone down twice after her motorboat capsized, and brought her to shore and revived her.

Ridout was one of seven officers to whom President Roosevelt awarded a decoration, according to an Associated Press dispatch from Washington.

Mothers Warned To Get Plenty Of Needed Vitamin A

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE
(Associated Press Science Editor)

COLLEGE STATION, Tex., Jan 2. — At the height of the Dust Bowl years two litters of pigs on two widely separated Texas farms were born blind.

The cause, scientifically proven at the Texas A. and M. college here, holds a warning for all the people going short of food in the present war.

The warning is that if prospective mothers do not get adequate vitamin A, their babies are likely to have weak eyes. There probably will be nowhere any epidemic of blind babies, for a reason the Texas experiments showed clearly. The defect will be more insidious, eyes imperfectly formed, resulting in poor vision in later life.

On the Texas farms the mother of both blind litters never got any green forage during their pregnancy periods. Lack of green food meant deprivation of vitamin A.

The proof of this was found in a herd of A. and M. swine in which there never had been a blind pig. Several females were given a diet totally devoid of vitamin A. This experiment was conducted by Fred Hale, chief division of swine husbandry, Texas Agricultural experiment station.

Every pig in the litters whose mothers had absolutely no vitamin A was born blind. Not only that, but all these pigs were totally devoid of eyes. Every time the experiment was repeated, eyeless pigs resulted.

Pigs take about 114 days to produce young. The development of eyes is known to take place during a fixed period of about 30 days of embryonic pig life. Total deprivation of vitamin A for the mothers during this period and for six or seven mothers before they were bred always resulted in eyeless pigs.

The step was to prove the blindness was not due to some freak of heredity. This was done by raising eyeless pigs on diets containing vitamin A and mating them.

In all cases the eyeless pigs had litters of young with normal eyes. Even when two eyeless pigs were mated, the young had perfectly good eyes.

Mr. Hale points out that it is probably impossible for human mothers to be completely without vitamin A. No matter how poor a diet is, it will contain a little of this vitamin.

But all the pig tests indicate that lack of enough vitamin A during pregnancy is a definite risk of indirect bad effects on eyes, and probably also on the nervous system, because eyes are a direct product of the embryonic nervous system.

OPA Officials Expect Higher Flour Prices

DALLAS, Jan. 2 (AP)—Regional OPA officials said today they anticipated a slight increase in the price of flour Monday when specific dollars-and agents price ceilings go into effect for sales by millers and blenders of flour from wheat, semolina, and farina.

Effective January 4, maximum price regulation 296 sets ceiling prices at uniform levels averaging 10 per cent higher than the present temporary ceilings, which were based on each individual seller's highest charge between September 28 and October 2.

OPA officials said that this increase—which they described as designed to eliminate price inequities and allow for higher wheat prices without recourse to subsidy—should not necessitate an increase in the present retail bread prices.

Higher flour costs, they estimated, would be offset by savings afforded under food distribution order No. 1, effective January 18, which discontinues the consignment selling of bread, stops slicing of bread for home consumption, and makes possible other economics.

Normal difficulties under individual price ceilings have been aggravated by rising wheat markets, and many mills were unable to sell flour because their maximums did not reflect the increased cost of wheat, they explained.

Rep. Johnson Hits Rationing Methods

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP). — Rep. Luther A. Johnson (D-Tex) today condemned the administration of rationing methods he described as "unreasonable, cumbersome, complicated and unnecessary."

The congressman made public a letter to President Roosevelt in which the Texan declared the situation is seriously affecting the people's morale and if uncorrected will impair the Roosevelt leadership.

He explained he was not condemning rationing, but rather the methods by which it was being done.

"If we are to ration," he said, "let us do it rationally."

His communication to Mr. Roosevelt referred to "arbitrary use of power exercised, and the unreasonable, cumbersome, complicated and unnecessary regulations imposed by many of the bureaucrats in the various agencies of the government under the war powers act x x x."

Henderson Claims He Saves 31 Billions By His Control Of Prices

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP). — Leon Henderson, retiring price administrator, claimed today a saving to the public and government of $31,000,000,000 as a result of price controls.

Henderson, who has resigned but not actually left his job yet, said in a statement which appeared to be a reply to critics:

"The question is not whether we like rationing or price control or rent control and all the related disciplines we must impose upon ourselves. The question is, will we continue to make the work?

"I believe we will. I have been confident that the majority of citizens understands these problems much better than many who do a lot more talking than the majority."

Recalling how prices rose in America in the first World War, Henderson estimated that his regulations so far had saved family budgets more than $6,000,000,000 and the government more than $25,000,000,000 on construction and munitions contracts.

Hitler, If It IS Hitler, Is Looking Bit Down In The Mouth These Days

LONDON, Jan. 2 (AP) — Adolf Hitler's jowls, and whether they and their owner have grown fat and flabby, stirred considerable discussion in London today after morning newspapers published a series of pictures purportedly showing the fuehrer addressing Nazis at the Munich beer hall Nov. 8.

These pictures showed Hitler with tousled hair, rather sagging jowls, pouchy eyes, a double chin and an enlarged midriff, compared with previous pictures. They were released to the London press by the Ministry of Information Picture section.

The Daily Mail said a man who knew Hitler at first believed the series was not authentic, but on closer examination was convinced it was, and commented:

"The physical degeneration revealed here is so marked that the man is hardly recognizable.

"The fatness he has developed looks like the fatness of ill health, not the fatness of over-eating."

Other newspapers in their captions also suggested the idea that fatty ill health was depicted.

Comment first was stirred by comparison with another picture, received by the Associated Press of Great Britain through Sweden, which was captioned as a picture of Hitler taken on the same occasion although not in the same place in the beer hall or in the same pose.

This latter picture showed no marked difference from photographs of Hitler taken some time ago, but differed sharply from today's published photos.

In addition to the lack of fat in the Associated Press of Great Britain copy, there also were differences in uniforms, neckties and medals.

Asked about the apparent discrepancies, the ministry of information picture section said the pictures which it released were of "German origin" and received through neutral sources.

If the man pictured in the photographs the newspapers used is one of Hitler's "stooges," a spokesman for the ministry added, "that does not hurt our case any."

Pilots Prove P-38 Can Get Job Done

AN ADVANCED AMERICAN FIGHTER BASE SOMEWHERE IN NORTH AFRICA, Jan. 1 (Delayed) (AP)—Flying from a mountainside and living on a diet of canned hash, young American pilots fresh from colleges, factories and country towns have proven what a great fighter plane the P-38 is by shooting down forty German planes with it for a loss of only nine.

The pilots, who less than six weeks ago were upset by the allegation on both sides of the Atlantic that American fighter planes were inferior to the models of other nations, declared the P-38 was master of the Luftwaffe's highly-rated Focke-Fulf 190's and Messerschmitt 109-G's.

The first six P-38's started operations here without ground crews, and even without tents for the flyers to live in.

Originally designed only as an interceptor type to protect cities from bombing raids, the P-38 has proven itself capable of every rough job assigned it.

Degaullists Baffled By Giraud's Silence

By The Associated Press

LONDON, Jan. — In a blunt statement, Gen. Charles DeGaulle, Fighting French leader, today disclosed that he had suggested to Gen. Henri Honore Giraud, high commissioner in French Africa, on Christmas day that they meet "immediately" to unify the French war effort and by implication made it clear he was disappointed that this invitation had not been answered more than a week later.

Fighting French spokesmen declined to amplify the general's statement in which he made public the invitation to Gen. Giraud, holding that it was plain enough.

However, informed observers said it seemed certain that the De Gaullists were baffled by the Giraud silence, particularly in view of the latter's repeated assertions of his desire for unity.

PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE—"I pledge allegiance to the Flag of the United States of America and to the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."

The Parity Formula

One can hardly consider the renewed battle over the farm parity formula without conflicting sentiments. Professional farmer spokesmen on the one side and provincial city-dwellers on the other may be able to see one argument as indisputably correct and the other as utterly wrong. But the matter is much less simple than that.

For many years the farmers have been in the economic dumps. For the first time since World War I they now have a market for all they can raise, at excellent prices. But they are unable to get help to plant, cultivate and harvest, nor can they buy machinery.

Certainly the wages paid for labor constitute just as valid an element in the farmer's production cost as in that of the manufacturer or the merchant, and this should be true of the wage-allowance which the farmer makes for his own long day and that of members of his family.

So it would seem wrong for anybody to dogmatically condemn farmers for asking to have wage costs made an element in the formula on which the ceiling prices of their products are to be based.

On the other hand, economists warn that if the parity formula is revised upward we must expect the entire price-control, anti-inflation program to collapse.

Stabilization Director Byrnes has moved the farm wage ceiling up to $2,400 a year, which is little enough to compete with factory wages but which does open the door to a big lift in farm production costs. This increase, on top of wage boosts already effective, will push up the ceiling on farm prices if the parity formula is amended to include wages as an element.

Inevitably the price of foodstuffs to wholesalers and retailers will go up, and the distributors either must raise their prices or be ruined.

But foods are important elements in the cost of living. Any substantial boost in food prices will be ground for wage raises, which will increase the costs of what the farmer buys and the wage of the labor he hires. Thus, say the economists, a vicious spiral will produce inflation.

The only method suggested by which we can avoid the alternative of doing injustice to the farmer or of producing inflation is a system of subsidies which would have to be paid out of taxes levied on farmers, factory workers, and the generally unorganized white-collar classes which, alone among Americans, already are taking a hard economic beating.

Economic stabilization is no simple matter.

Battle For Tunisia

The struggle to push the Axis out of North Africa has been going on long enough to justify the warnings that Germany has not yet cracked.

More than that, this seesaw battle re-emphasizes what might have happened if, before our invasion, we had not paved the way by arrangements with French officials who owed allegiance to Vichy. The much-criticized deal with Admiral Darlan seems to be the principal reason why we are even this close to cleaning up North Africa.

No Right To Strike

Two presidents, as far apart politically and philosophically as Calvin Coolidge and Franklin Roosevelt, have denied the right of government employes to strike. Mayor LaGuardia of New York, co-author of the federal ban on injunctions against strikes, challenges the right of the War Labor Board to assume jurisdiction over the wages, hours and working conditions of 3,772,000 state, county and city employes.

It would seem difficult, then, to believe that opposition to the WLB's intervention in such matters stems from reactionary sources.

The board is to be commended on its recognition of the realities, and its decision that it does not possess jurisdiction over the labor relations of municipalities.

Idle Tires

Uncle Sam has received about eight million tires that otherwise would have been hoarded under the rationing-purchase plan. About half are in usable condition and can be resold to persons whose motoring contributes to the winning of the war. The others will supply reclaimed rubber. An interesting if not important sidelight is the wide range in productivity among different sections of the country. Around Denver and Omaha, almost every car owner had a spare tire. In Atlanta, Detroit, Jacksonville, about one in five had a sixth casing. In New York, where storage space is at a premium, only one in 14 had an extra tucked away.

WILL THE SUPREME COURT GRANT THE PETITIONS TO REHEAR THE CELEBRATED LITERATURE LICENSE FEE CASES?

(Liberty—A Magazine of Religious Freedom)

We had hoped to be able to tell our readers that the Supreme Court had decided to grant a rehearing on the cases involving the right of municipalities to tax, under the form of a license fee, those engaged in the sale of literature.

A brief, petitioning for a rehearing, was filed by the representatives of the Jehovah's Witnesses. The American Newspaper Publishing Association, the American Civil Liberties Union and the Seventh-day Adventists each filed a brief as a friend of the court (amicus curiae). Up to the time we were compelled to go to press, the Court had not reached a decision, or at least had not made it public.

We have no desire to question or intention to impugn the motives of any member of the Court. It is not thinkable that a single one of our Justices would be swayed by prejudice or bigotry or even pride of opinion. We must conclude that being finite, they have made a mistake. But it is difficult to understand how men who are worthy of nomination at the hands of the President for the high posts they hold, and confirmed in office by action of the United States Senate, could so far depart from the great principles of freedom as some of them did on June 8th last. The longer we meditate upon it, and the more often we reread the opinion itself, the harder it is for us to understand how such a conclusion could have been reached as was voiced in the majority opinion.

If a rehearing is not granted, and this seems unthinkable, this decision must be reversed by some other means. To let it stand would violate and vitiate one of the finest protective provisions of our Constitution. If the Court does grant a rehearing, then every fact bearing upon the real issue at stake must be gathered and presented for its consideration.

No price can be thought too great to pay for the preservation of the freedom of the press. If the decision of June 8 is allowed to stand, it is conceivable that every agency for the dissemination of news and truth could have its usefulness cut off in parts of the country where the vicious ordinances of some towns exist. We are confident that few who read the newspaper accounts of the trial itself and the opinion that was rendered, have heard that in at least one place, a license fee is fifty dollars a day. This shows how malevolent bigotry can be under the guise of law.

The ordinances apply alike to the sale of secular and religious literature. Thus the Supreme Court's opinion strikes directly at religious liberty, as well as at freedom of the press.

The fight against the taking away of any of our freedoms must be carried on by our people generally. If any basic right is taken from one class, no other group is safe.

EVIDENCE THAT UNIONS CONTROL GOVERNMENT

Here is an item sent out by the Newspaper Enterprise Association Service, a subsidiary of the United Press. The item relates that the milk distributors in and around New York have been given a deadline, the middle of December, after which they must show a specified saving in gasoline and rubber consumption; that when the distributors tried last summer to achieve this saving, among other ways by establishing every-other-day delivery, they were stopped in this attempt by request of Washington after the unions had threatened a strike on the ground that drivers' jobs were threatened.

Every American citizen should bow his head in shame that we have a government so cowardly and so subservient to Labor Union's Princes of Privilege, that it would stop management from being efficient in saving rubber and waste of labor to appease union labor.

Labor unions are not interested in their customers. They are only interested in getting a fictitious wage for "made-work." If they were not getting more than the relative value of their services were worth, they would not care if they were obliged to work at some other job because new labor saving machinery made their jobs unnecessary as modern house refrigerators do in the case of daily delivery of milk. And this kind of making work lowers the real wages of every other worker in the country. It lowers them because the woker is obliged to pay more for what he gets than he would if management were permitted to efficiently run business and hire the man who would give the most possible service to the customer for the money.

NEW LABOR LAWS NOT NECESSARY

We hear a lot of talk nowadays about compelling labor unions to make an accounting and to prevent people from being arbitrarily expelled from unions. We need no such new laws. All we need to do is to repeal the Federal laws that shoo or force people into the unions against their will. The honesty and common sense of the American man will take care of labor unions if they are not forced into the unions.

The laws that prevent workers and employers from protecting themselves against the philosophy of scarcity as is the root of all labor unions, is the Clayton Amendment to the Sherman Anti-Trust Law, the Norris-LaGuardia Act and the Wagner Law. Repeal these laws and the honesty of the American workmen will take care of the unions.

It is absurd to think that anyone can enact laws that will make a group of people honest whose main purpose now seems to be to get more for a product than other honest and able men are able to get for the same service.

It is impossible to pass laws to make these kinds of men honest. The only thing we need to do is, as stated above, to repeal the laws that give these combinations, who rob their fellow-workers, special privileges to force unwilling workers into the union.

ROOSEVELT'S FRIEND SPEAKS
(Los Angeles Times—By Hedda Hopper)

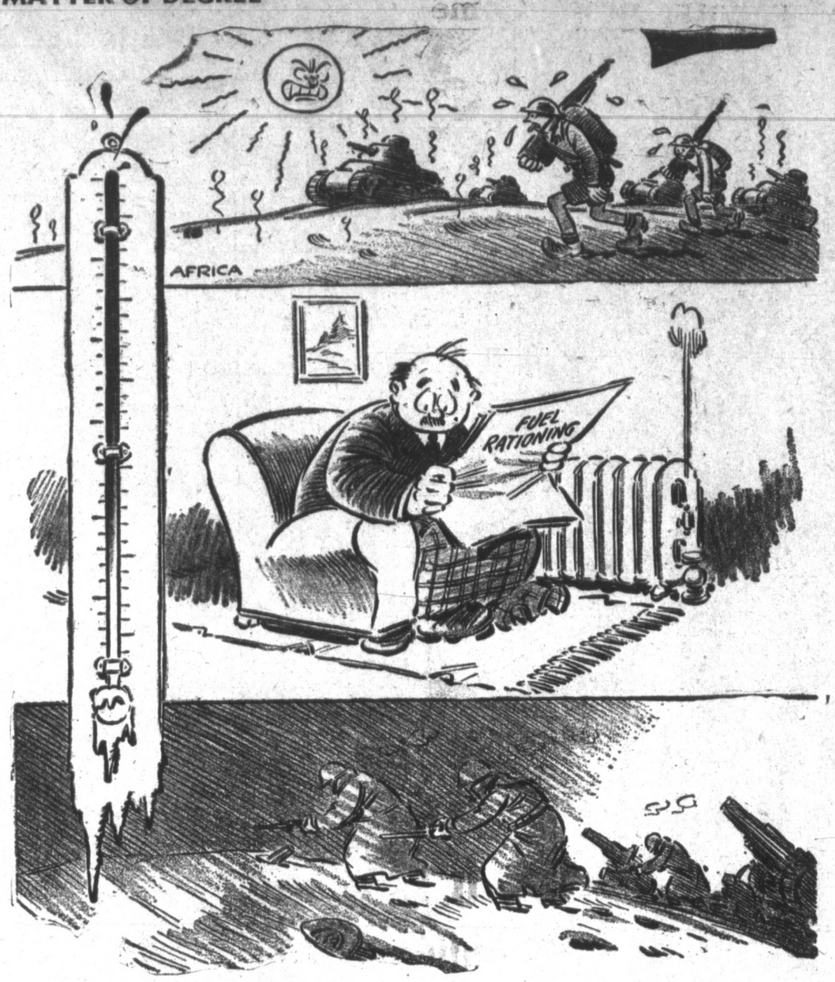

Now that our stars are holding private meetings about the new salary limitations, I think they should read what John Ewing, publisher of the Shreveport (La.) Times says. He's a southern Democrat and a stanch friend of President Roosevelt. He writes:

"The Federal limitation of $25,000 is probably the greatest piece of political hokum which any political group has ever tried to coax a free people to swallow. In peacetime, democracy itself was used as a disguise for Communism, and in wartime the very war to save democracy is used as a means to replace it wherever possible with Socialism or Communism. Few indeed can be so gullible as to believe that the blowers of the $25,000 bubble want it to be temporary. Analyzed to its full depth, it's plain Communism. But Communism of a type which Joseph Stalin has discarded in Russia. Stalin was smart enough to know that destroying incentive of the citizen destroys the citizen himself and can result only in national disintegration.

"It's hokum because it tries to tell the man of low income that lowering the income of someone else will raise his own. It's hokum because it pretends to appeal to and be backed by union labor, where actually the oldest and most soundly American labor union understands its dangers to them and opposes it. The A.F.L. has never followed the Communist paths so often taken by the C.I.O., which threw its full strength behind the moves to get Earl Browder, Communist party secretary, released from Federal prison by President Roosevelt—and succeeded. The salary ceiling does not provide government revenue or help the man of low income.

"It does not help win the war. It's simply a step toward establishment of the principle of Communism and destruction of the foundation of Americanism which the American people have built during their 166 years of freedom and liberty and for which they are again fighting."

News Behind The News

By ALBERT N. LEMAN

TIES: Many Americans may be too quickly inclined to jump at conclusions regarding Spain. Because she is a totalitarian state, we suspect that she will gang up with Hitler. New York businessmen who have traded for years with the Iberians — and still have contacts overseas — bet their pesetas that Franco will stay on the fence. He is a politician and as is the case with our mayors and Congressmen, his chief aim is to remain in office. He appreciates, that should he become embroiled in this conflict, he might end up in a dungeon or as an exile in the Caranies. His countrymen are pastmasters in the art of revolution and the leader of the empire himself climbed to power as a rampageous rebel.

The Hispanic strong man rules a house divided against itself. Even his own family is split. He demoted his own brother and, although he restored his brother-in-law, Serrano Suner, to the Falange National Council, he still keeps that pro-Axis malcontent from the inner circles of government.

Cortes partisans, ambitious Monarchists, army cliques, and wealthy industrialists are pulling and hauling. Defeated Republicans, Liberals and Communists plot revenge. Rigid censorship hides from Americans the news that even now guerrillas of the Loyalist cause are skirmishing in the almost inaccessible mountains.

Priests, whose altars were desecrated and treasures destroyed in the civil war, do not wish to see hostilities resumed. Some of the South American left-wing cabinets might be pleased if Madrid should fight again — and thereby crash. But peace is urged by the aristocratic families, which exert great influence in the commercial life below the Rio Grande and retain their economic and cultural ties with the motherland.

NEUTRAL: Spokesmen of the Spanish colony in Manhattan contend that the United Kingdom is far more of a key to the situation than Americans realize. Senors still remember the Maine and hold no love for us. We caused them the greatest national humiliation in their modern history. But the House of Windsor and the Bourbons have blood ties and restoration talk by the Generalissimo himself strengthens these cords.

London capital opened Rio Tinto mines and financed many industries. In prewar days there was scarcely a merchant from the Pyrenees to Gibraltar who was not acquainted with John Bull's commercial travelers. They knew how to be polite, tip their hats and greet a little shopkeeper as "Don Pedro" or "Don Jose"—the "Don" being a flattering title of respect. These touches of old-world courtesy, so dear to the hears of a Spaniard, sold English goods.

The British understand the Latin temperament—witness the century-long alliance between London and Lisbon. New York Iberians assert that Whitehall had a finger in the pie which last week resulted in the pact between Franco and Dr. Salazar. They say further that King George's diplomats in Madrid will help El Caudillo to remain on the side lines.

BARRIERS: The Riviera, playground of the idle rich, has been invaded by Mars and before next Summer Monte Carlo may witness its greatest game of chance. An overseas correspondent of a New York bank writes that Berlin has ordered the removal of all civilians from the French Mediterranean seaboard except roadbuilders and construction gangs. Two labor experts, who erected the Westwall and English Channel fortifications, were brought to Marseille to duplicate their previous performances.

Picked writers of the neutral press have been escorted to view the new iron ring along the whole European coast. They report that the battlements extend fifty miles from shore and that "porcupine points"—small self-contained bastions were used last year to check the Russian drive—have been established in the Low countries. Big cannons were shipped from the Maginot line. The Liege forts have been modernized and the guns of the Dutch defensive system now face in the opposite direction.

Dr. Goebbels, of course, used the foreign reporters as his megaphone. He showed only the things he wanted them to tell the world. But United States concerns are not convinced that Hitler can swiftly string unassailable barriers from Southern France, through Italy and the Balkans and, finally, across the Russian steppes. They do not believe he has sufficient steel, guns and cement for this job.

DOUBTFUL: It may be the holiday eggnog which makes politicos see things that aren't there. But within the last few weeks they think they have discovered the identity of the man President Roosevelt is grooming as his successor, provided he does not seek a fourth term.

He is James F. Byrnes, former senator and supreme court justice, and now the nation's economic czar. Although "Sunny Jim" hails from South Carolina — one of the most strongly Democratic states—nominating a figure from that section may not be a liability in a period when the Southern wing of the party may rise in revolt against the New Deal.

Jim has the good will of both congressional and ward bosses. His innate conservatism commends him to the so-called "solid interests." If he makes a tolerable record in keeping our affairs fairly well stabilized through these critical years, he may emulate Herbert Hoover, whose war and post-amristice performances finally landed him in the White House.

Except for his age, a prospect frequently mentioned is Cordell Hull, Secretary of State. He has deliberately kept aloof from the more radical policies and personalities of the Administration. His friends say that forthcoming documents will reveal him to be one of the more farsighted members of the official family, ranking with our great foreign ministers. But he will be almost seventy-five in 1945. It is doubtful whether he could stand the strain which running the U. S. A. and the world will impose. Also, he has no ambitions along that line. So, watch Jimmie!

Today's War Analysis

By DeWitt MacKENZIE

NEW DELHI, India, Jan. 2 — Whether to introduce first the man and then his achievement or to reverse the process is a quandary, for both are big, but those who know him well tell me I shall be favoring one of his characteristics if the accomplishment comes first.

Perhaps we might begin by saying that India not only is among the major Allied arsenals but may well become the most important base for operations against the Japs.

Don't forget that once Herr Hitler has been hung, drawn and quartered the United Nations will cut loose with all their power against Nippon.

When that happens it is quite likely, as I see it, that a tornado of airpower will sweep from India through Burma across China and rip the Mikado's little island up by the roots. That rather fixes the status of India in the Allied scheme of things.

As late as last spring this great sub-continent, which hangs down into the stormy Indian Ocean from the Himalayan "roof of the world" like a giant heart, lay virtually unprotected against an attack by the Japs in their triumphant westward drive.

Had the Mikado's barbarians desired to extend their conquest to India at that moment, they probably could have raped and massacred their usual way through the defenseless country until its very vastness halted them through over-extended communications.

Certainly the long vulnerable eastern coastline lacked protection by land, sea and air.

India, like a lot of others, had been caught unprepared. But Nippon didn't strike, probably because she already had overrun all the territory she could consolidate. Now an attempt at invasion would be a terrible risk for this country has been soundly armed.

India's chief weapon of both defense and offense at this juncture is the Royal Air Force and its young colleague, the Indian Air Force, which mushroomed up here from nothing to a tower of strength. It would be almost impossible to overemphasize the importance of this fighting arm. And here I must repeat what I said before—that our tenth American Air Force is doing a magnificent job in cooperation with our British colleagues.

This coordinated air fleet has a striking power which can prevent the Japs from sending a sea-borne expedition across the Bay of Bengal. But it can do far more than that for it has achieved superiority and has deserted the defensive for the offensive. The Nipponese defenses in Burma already are being softened up by bombing in preparation for the big Allied drive which will come in due course.

With that background it would seem to be time for the delayed entrance of the man. Meet Air Chief Marshal Sir Richard Peirse, air officer commander-in-chief of the air forces in India.

That is a big battle to carry around but the commander in chief has the stature. He is a big chap, both physically and mentally, and is among that top flight of British air chiefs.

The Air Chief Marshal is a tall, well set up, rangy individual who wears the tan of many suns. As I shook hands with him it passed through my mind that if he wern't an adventurous airman he likely would be among the cossacks riding a wild horse like the devil.

Of course that is a fanciful idea but long experience has taught me that these odd flashes generally register the truth. This one meant I had encountered an individual whose temperament demanded intense activity.

Later I was informed this was true and it was cited that he still flies his own ship just as he did 30 years ago.

The World War brought him decorations for daring and skill. He rose rapidly until, in this war, he has held several top positions in the air force.

He was knighted in 1940 and in the same year became chief of Britain's great bomber force. A year ago he came to India to tackle the organization of one of the world's key air forces.

The development of the Royal Air Force here has been a task calling for supreme organizing skill and great driving force.

This supply problem was complicated by the severance of the Mediterranean route which forced both Britain and the United States to send their ships over the long haul around South Africa. It will be a godsend to India when the Axis finally is driven into the sea from North Africa and the shipping lanes are reopened.

The Anglo-American Air Force is big enough to do the vastly important defensive job to which it has been assigned. It is also big enough to take on the additional offensive work of softening up the Japs for that big push which some day will be launched by the United Nations. And it will get bigger all the time.

Current Talk In And Around The Nation's Capital

A steel man and an east coast shipbuilding executive were talking. "What are you going to do about beating Henry J. Kaiser's record of 10 days from keel-laying to launching?" asked the steel man.

"That's easy," said the shipbuilder. "We're going to reduce the time from keel-laying to launching to 27 minutes."

When the steel man looked doubtful, the shipbuilder explained:

"We're going to build the entire hull and superstructure without the keel. Then we'll lay the keel and fasten it to the hull with zippers. It wil take just 27 minutes."

HILLMEN'S HIGHER EDUCATION

Farm Security Administration's first experiment in taking Kentucky mountaineers and sending them to Ohio State University's school of agriculture for three weeks' farmhand training has been so successful it will be repeated and extended to other states.

Idea of the short course was to train men for dairy farms to relieve the manpower shortage and keep the milk flowing. In all, 58 Kentucky hillmen were sent to college, to learn scientific feeding, dairy barn sanitation and how to run a milking machine.

There weren't any lectures and there wasn't any classroom work and there weren't any notes taken. Some of the students couldn't read or write, but they graduated nonetheless.

Best test of the school's success was that Ohio dairy farmers came in from miles around to sign up the men for jobs. Some of the dairymen didn't even wait for the students to graduate — just persuaded them to quit school on the spot and drove them home immediately so they wouldn't get away.

What surprised the dairymen most was the simple and direct honesty of the Kentuckians. When one employer was explaining to his man that he'd be expected to drive a truck, the Kentuckian didn't want to take the job. Said he hadn't driven a truck much and couldn't do any of this fancy stuff. Besides, he couldn't read these northern road signs. The dairyman hired him anyway.

New Parity Basis Is Suggested For Values On Farm

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP). — Senator Thomas (D-Okla) has suggested a new basic formula for figuring the parity or "fair exchange" value of farm products, to replace the present system which he declared is based on horse-and-buggy days.

The theory behind both formulas is identical: maintenance of the same proportional relationship between the things a farmer buys and the things he sells that existed in a previous period when the farmer's buying power was roughly equivalent to other people's.

Thomas proposed making the base period 1919-1929, in place of the current base 1909-1914. The earlier period, he asserted, "is considered too remote and conditions and prices have changed materially since that time."

Then, instead of adjusting the parity levels of basic farm crops as the month-to-month average price of 267 manufactured products rises or falls in relation to the latter's 1909-14 position, Thomas proposed that the parity prices be changed in proportion to the movement, up or down, of the commodity price index of 900 articles, which is issued weekly by the Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

"Under this plan," he said in an interview, "all a person would have to do to figure the current parity price of any farm product would be to call and find what its average base price was during 1919-29, and multiply that by the latest commodity price index number."

He conceded that the parity prices of most farm crops—with the important exceptions of wool and livestock—would rise under his plan.

AFL Chief Warns Congress Against Compulsory Labor

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP)—The American Federation of Labor announced today its legislative goals for 1943 with a confident expression that the new Congress would reject demands for "compulsory or punitive" labor enactments.

"Frankly," said President William Green in a statement, "I anticipate that legislation of this kind will be introduced during this session of Congress. I need not warn the members of Congress that such proposals are dangerous and harmful and unnecessary. Their good judgment will repudiate the unwisdom of forcing men and women to do that which they are willing to do of their own free will."

Green classified as undesirable bills which would prematurely permit national job-freezing or would repeal the wage and hour law and said anti-strike legislation would be "foolhardy."

The federation, Green said, would support further rationing and price controls, taxes levied in accordance with ability to pay, broadening of the social security program, continuance of the War Labor board as the controlling agency in wage stabilization, repeal of the poll tax, wartime pay adjustments for all civil employes, and a post-war reconstruction program.

The program did not include any preference to the National Labor Relations act, the administration of which some AFL leaders have severely criticized.

Green said the program was the expression of 6,000,000 American workers and their families and had one basic purpose—"that everything possible must be done to promote the nation's war effort.

"In 1943 labor will undertake the job of doubling the record-breaking production totals of 1942."

War Secretary Says U. S. Army Enters 1943 With Confidence

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP). — Secretary of War Stimson, in a New Year's message, said the army is moving into the new 12 months "confident and sure of its mission."

The war secretary, at a press conference, said he was not "boasting in regard to future events" but did find "a great deal of encouragement" in looking back over what had been accomplished.

Noting that it was the birthday of General George C. Marshall, the chief of staff, who is 63 today, he said he was proud of the magnificent work which had been accomplished by Marshall and his associates.

During the progress which has been made, Stimson recalled that as short a time ago as July, 1940, the regular army consisted of only 250,000 men and said that none of these forces were trained in modern war. Furthermore, he said, there was practically no equipment except stores left over from the World War.

There was not in the entire country, he declared, enough powder "to last anything like a way's warfare" for the men now overseas.

Today, he said, the army was over 5,000,000, including an air force of 1,000,000 men and tens of thousands of pilots.

This army, he said, was raised by "the most fair and scientific selective service system" in history and its officers had been chosen by the most democratic system and given the most thorough training in American history.

"This army of ours is rapidly being equipped with the best airplanes in the world today, the best tanks on the ground, the best self-propelled artillery and the best rifles," he added.

Only 10 per cent of the men in the army drink hard liquors, he said, adding that 50 per cent drink only soft drinks, and about 40 per cent will take beer.

On the fighting fronts, men just out of training have proved themselves to be the equals, he added, of the Japanese and the Germans.

A War Department announcement in connection with the secretary's review said the United States was now turning out enough rifles and machine gun ammunition each month to fire 83 rounds at every individual soldier in the Axis army.

"In the first year of war," it said, "production of small arms ammunition has increased more than 550 per cent and is still rising rapidly."

YOUR 3 CENTS WORTH

Coinage of a new U. S. 3-cent piece is being seriously considered by the Mint as a metal-saving device. Yes, metal saving. They figure it this way:

As most 15-cent cigarets now sell for 16 cents, unless you have the exact change you hand over 20 cents and get back 4 cents in change in the form of four pennies. With a 3-cent piece in circulation, you could get two coins in change, a 3-cent piece and a 1-cent piece, involving only half as much metal as before.

Or, if you bought a 3-cent newspaper, you could make the transaction with one coin instead of three, thereby conserving 66⅔ per cent of the metal involved.

New Equipment May Save Lives In Air Crashes Of Future

By WILLIAM F. FRYE

WRIGHT FIELD, Ohio, Jan. 2 (AP)—A new type of fire fighting equipment, to save lives instead of property, was demonstrated today by the Army Air Forces materiel center here.

The problem was how to get passengers out of crashed and burning planes. The solution presented by the experimental engineering division of the center was to smother the flames long enough to permit the rescue.

At the edge of the landing field, some scraps of material—wing and fuselage sections—were assembled to simulate a crashed plane. The wreckage was soaked in gasoline, and then touched off.

From its position nearby, the rescue squad rushed in with a tank truck spraying carbon dioxide gas from wide nozzles fixed on the front of the truck and on a long overhead boom, driving the equipment to within five or six feet of the flames. Water was used in smaller amounts to cool the surfaces of the "plane." The fire disappeared wherever the force of the carbon dioxide gas was directed.

With this equipment, said Brig. Gen. F. O. Carroll, chief of the division, rescuers, without asbestos suits or other protective equipment, had approximately three minutes to enter the plane and remove any passengers. As soon as the smothering gas is cut off, the flames burst out again, and the job of extinguishing the fire is left to conventional fire-fighting equipment.

Post-War Peace Plans Declared Necessity By FDR

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—President Roosevelt declared yesterday that it was a "supreme necessity" to plan for the post-war peace and to carry forward after the war the unity now being displayed by the United Nations, to prevent another world cataclysm.

The president issued a statement at a press conference opening the new year, asserting the United Nations "are passing from the defensive to the offensive," and adding:

"The unity achieved on the battle line is being earnestly sought in the not less complex problems on a different front.

"In this as in no previous war men are conscious of the supreme necessity of planning what is to come after — and of carrying forward into peace and common effort which will have brought them victory in the war.

"They have come to see that the maintenance and safeguarding of peace is the most vital single necessity in the lives of each and all of us."

The statement was issued on the first anniversary of the signing here last January 1 and 2 of the "Declaration by United Nations."

The president amplified his formal statement by saying that "All the planning for the future is dependent obviously on peace."

He added informally that this was an important anniversary not only because of its relationship to running and winning the war, but because of its reference to peace and the post war period.

He emphasized that the original 26 United Nations, augmented later by three other signers, wanted to remain united at the end of the war as well as during the war.

If Axis Wants To Use Gas, U. S. Is Ready To Go, Too

EDGEWOOD ARSENAL, Md., Jan. 2 (AP)—If gas becomes a weapon of general use in this war, the chemical warfare service of the Army is ready to give it—and equally ready to take it.

Maj. Gen. William N. Porter, CWS chief, said today the Germans were known to have large stores of war gas, and could be expected to use it whenever advantageous.

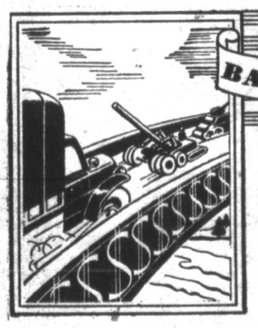

"So far, in my opinion, the only reason the Germans have not used gas is that they have not needed it," he said.

"In Russia there was no point in spraying their own path with mustard gas for that 1,000-mile walk. It would have been to Russia's advantage to use gas against the Germans, but they were a signatory to the treaty prohibiting the use of gas, and apparently intend to abide by it."

The United States, Porter noted, has never signed such a treaty, but nevertheless is committed to a policy of retaliation if gas is used against Allied troops.

"We would all be very remiss, however, if we went into this without sufficient quantities of gas," he added. "We feel now that we are ahead of Germany in the production of gas."

Baseball Looks To Landis To End Confusion About 1943 Plans

Special Meet In Chicago On Next Tuesday

By JUDSON BAILEY

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP).—Baseball is getting ready for a sort of New Year's day of its own next Tuesday, when the Major leagues will hold a special joint meeting with Commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis at Chicago to size up the outlook for 1943.

Until then there is not much use for any baseball executive to turn a leaf on the calendar, because no one knows right now when or where the clubs can train in the spring, or when the season will open, or how many games will be scheduled, or when the season will end.

The answers to all of these questions must come out of the emergency session next week after Landis has reported to the club owners on the result of his mission to Washington.

No inkling of the decisions reached by Landis and Defense Transportation Director Joseph B. Eastman in their conference at the capital has leaked out other than Eastman's assertion that the commissioner made certain proposals and they were approved.

It was Landis' suggestion that clubs train closer home which brought announcements in resent ways of the Boston Red Sox' intention to train indoors at Tufts college, Medford, Mass., and the switch of the two Chicago clubs' training bases from California to French Lick Springs, Ind.

Some of the other clubs have relinquished their Florida sites but for the most part the various clubs have been waiting for clarification of the rules under which they will operate. Two or three have said they saw no necessity for shifting until they received an order.

This may come Tuesday and will meet with no objections from any club owners, but another issue — the question of shortening, or delaying the opening, of the season —has produced sharply divergent views which can only be setted by a vote.

Check On 'C' Card Cars At Grid Game

DALLAS, Jan. 2 (AP).—Inspectors from the State Office of Price Administration at Fort Worth checked license number of automobiles bearing C card stickers at the Cotton Bowl game yesterday, Max McCullough, regional OPA director, disclosed.

He said the investigation had been directed by Mark McGee, state OPA director and added, "naturally, it will be determined who owned the cars." McCullough said he could not say what action would be taken.

"C cards were issued only to persons who declared the unlimited mileage was necessary and they are supposed to be used only for purposes declared in the applications," McCullough asserted. "Certainly driving to a football game is not necessary."

Trippi Heralded As Best Ball Carrier In Rose Bowl Game

PASADENA, Calif., Jan. 2. (AP) — Trippi is tops!

Coaches, players and 93,000 fans who saw Georgia beat UCLA in the Rose Bowl were in agreement today that the sophomore sensation, Charlie Trippi of Pittston, Pa., was the best ball carrier on the field! the best, in fact to play in Southern California all season.

The Bruins, linemen and backs alike, said Charlie's terrific drive, high knee action, pivoting and change of pace was the best they'd ever seen.

In defense to Frankie Sinkwich the Bruins admitted he must be the goods, as his three-year record shows, but with bad ankles his effectives was minimized to straight ahead plunges and passing. Trippi, on the other hand, passed accurately, kicked well, and gained 115 of Georgia's 212 yards on the ground.

Red Boyd, sub Georgia tackle, who blocked Bob Waterford's kick for an automatic safety, said that was the high point in his career.

Lt. Orian Landreth of Friends (Kas.) college, who did a good job as referee of the Rose Bowl game, admitted he made a mistake in motioning, with his hands that Lee Costa's placement for Georgia's ninth point was no good.

"I should have put my hands up," said Landreth, who is serving in the Navy. "The kick was good."

The Georgia delegation will leave early next week. Sinkwich flew to San Diego today to look over the Marine barracks there. He is a Marine reserve now and is to be called soon.

Attendance At Bowl Games This Year Greater Than Crowds In '42

NEW YORK, Jan 2 (AP)—U.C.L.A. and two bad ankles didn't stop Frankie Sinkwich and the war didn't stop the customers yesterday as the advent of 1943 brought the expected number of New Year's Day football games to an unexpected number of fans.

In spite of gasoline rationing and travel restrictions, the six major holiday classics were played before a combined attendance of approximately 305,000, about 50,000 more than watched the same games a year ago.

In Pasadena's Rose Bowl game a capacity crowd of 93,000 watched the Georgia Bulldogs shut out the Bruins of U.C.L.A., 9-0.

In the Sugar Bowl at New Orleans, Tennessee's Volunteers nipped the all-victorious Tulsa Hurricane, 14-7, before a throng of 70,000.

A crowd of 36,000 which saw Texas turn back Georgia Tech, 14-7, in the Cotton Bowl at Dallas, was 2,000 shy of last year's mark but at least 10,000 more than the promoters expected to show up.

Thirty thousand got their money's worth in Miami's Orange Bowl clash when Alabama stormed through Boston College, 37-21. This compared favorably with the previous year's attendance of 35,505.

An overflow crowd of 18,000 squeezed into the 15,000-capacity stands at El Paso, Tex., for the Sun Bowl game, in which the Second Air Force Bombers tripped Hardin-Simmons, 13-7. And at San Francisco, the Eastern All-Stars nosed out the Westerners, 13-12, before a crowd of 58,000, around 23,000 more than saw the shrine encounter last year when it was shifted to New Orleans.

East Gets New Cut In Fuel Oil Ration

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP).—An aggravated petroleum shortage in the east tonight caused a 10 per cent cut in its fuel oil heating rations, new warnings to commercial buildings which heat with oil, and cancellation of extra gasoline rations for traveling salesmen.

These three actions by Price Administrator Leon Henderson affected the 17 eastern states and the District of Columbia.

The eastern petroleum situation has been acute especially since the North African expedition which requires vast supplies of petroleum products, part of which must be sent from the east coast.

Applying as well to 13 other states where fuel oil is rationed, Henderson instructed local ration boards not to give oil to be burned in anything but a private dwelling after the end of this month without written proof that the commercial building's heating equipment is impossible of conversion.

Sinkwich Will Make Picture In Hollywood

HOLLYWOOD, Jan. 2. (AP) — This entertainment business must be contagious, where the Sinkwiches are concerned.

Adeline, that's Mrs. Sinkwich, blossomed forth the other day with an offer to dance in a movie musical. She turned it down, she said, because she wants to stay with Frankie until he goes into the Marines in March.

But today came an offer for Frankie — an offer that President Harry Cohn of Columbia studio said already had been accepted by the ambling All-America with the ailing ankles, who scored the only touchdown yesterday in Georgia's 9-0 Rose Bowl triumph over UCLA.

Sometime between now and the date Frankie dons a uniform, he's scheduled to make the film, Cohn said. Although all the arrangements haven't been made, it probably will be patterned after the kind of grid story that Tommy Harmon of Michigan made for the same studio last year.

Frankie himself wasn't available for comment. He flew to San Diego today to visit Camp Pendleton, the big Marine base.

Mrs. Sinkwich, an attractive brunette, has danced professionally and made a test earlier this week at Universal studio with her blonde sister, Dot, also a dancer.

Air Force Winds Up Celebration Of Sun Bowl Victory

EL PASO, Jan. 2. (AP)—Bearing the big Sun Bowl trophy which is theirs for a year, the Second Air Force bombers wound up the feting and celebrations tonight and made ready to return home to Fort George Wright, Wash.

More than 16,000 persons paid admission yesterday to see them come from behind in the final quarter to take the measure 13-7 of Hardin-Simmons university, border conference champions, in the eighth annual Sun Bowl game.

No one was more pleased with the spectacular victory than the Bomber coach, Captain W. B. (Red) Reese, who guided his aggregation of former college and professional stars through an undefeated season.

"My boys played their best game of the year," he observed.

"That boy, Rudy Mobley, is dangerous, and Camp Wilson, the Cowboys' fullback, is undoubtedly the best first-year man I've seen all season.

Clark Jarnigan, the Cowboy coach, had no alibis, but his boys wanted another crack at the air men.

"Over anxiousness hurt us several times, but otherwise the team played great football," Jarnigan said. "Wilson played the best defensive game of his career."

Horned Frogs In Good Cage Form

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF
(Associated Press Sports Editor)

It has been nine years since Texas Christian's Horned Frogs held a place alongside the best of Southwest conference basketball.

There were several seasons when the Frogs were elated to win one conference game and two or three on the side.

But that's all over. There was a definite reawakening last year and for a time T. C. U. made quite a race of it. They couldn't stand the stretch drive, however, and Arkansas and Rice finished in a tie for the title.

Now we find the Frogs top favorites to win the championship. They deserve such a ranking. They won the Oklahoma City All-College tournament, beating Arkansas, the other conference favorite, in the finals.

In all Texas Christian has taken eleven decisions out of thirteen games, scoring 523 points or an average of 40 points per game.

Arkansas still looks like the team to beat, however, the Porkers were pretty tired from a strenuous road trip when they played at Oklahoma City. They had been wandering all over the southwest and midwest.

Rice, Southern Methodist and Texas also are quite potent and it looks like a grand scramble right down to the wire.

The conference championship race opens Wednesday night with Baylor meeting Texas Christian at Ft. Worth and Rice tackling Texas at Austin.

Friday night Southern Methodist and Arkansas open an important series at Dallas. These games will have a strong bearing on the championship.

Saturday night Texas Christian meets Texas A. and M. at College Station while Baylor plays Texas at Waco.

CHAPTER XIII

THEN the presents were all gone except two for Fay and Ross. But those two were still missing and everyone split up to open the parcels. They scattered paper anew over the room, squeals of excitement filled the place and there was a flurry of action as they all crowded round to see what everyone else had got and spread over the floor to put their gifts into operation.

Myra and Ferdy's aunt retired to the kitchen to prepare the tea for the boys and Ferdy joined them for a complete explanation of the mystery.

Benny took the two detectives aside and he watched them count the diamonds. Their hard exterior melted and he found them more conversational. He offered to drive them down to their car but pressed them to stay a little longer, or to stay the night, as he knew there were two rooms available now which would suit them beautifully.

He said he knew there was something wrong when Beano was so anxious to come to Canada. He had felt it but Beano was a man of few words and he had taken it for granted that Beano just wanted to come up for a holiday so he had fixed an engagement for him up in Montreal, just for old times sake.

Then he was off to the kitchen.

He cornered Myra who pushed him this way and that while she helped with the mass of food to feed the boys.

"That was a slick job you pulled off," he said. "I always knew you had brains. Mind if I take one of them cookies? Thanks, I'll take a couple to save coming back. Give me a girl with brains and you can keep them fancy lookers, keep 'em and sell 'em two for five for all I care. Give me someone I can look at without thinking I'm looking at a movie magazine. Them faces make me sick."

"You'll be sick if you eat any more of those things," said Myra.

"I can take it," said Benny nonstop. "I can take anything, except a ride by them guys out there. Say, Myra, what about coming back with me? I could use a girl like you. You got to be smart in my business or the other guys get you every time. You and me, there's dough in it if you know the tricks and I know 'em all. I do the talking, you do the work and we'd make a pile."

"Say," said Myra, forcing a pause in his flow of words. "I've got a job, a good job, a nice comfortable job."

"So what? You leave it and you're a boss like me, working for yourself, like me. We'll have the ceremony at the Cathedral with everybody in show business there. We'll make the tabloids and the rotogravure, and you'll be famous in a night, just like any of 'em. They'll all give a plug to Benny. How about it sister?"

Myra paused with a plate in mid-air.

"Say, what's this about a ceremony?"

"Church, choirboys, and everything, till life do us part . . ."

"Let me get this straight," said Myra. "Is this a proposal?"

"What do you think it is?" said Benny, offended.

* * *

MYRA swayed, put down the plate of cookies in Benny's hands and passed her hands across her brow. "To think it happened to me. Wait till Danny, my old man, hears about this. He'll laugh his head off."

"What do you mean, he'll laugh his head off?"

Benny was deeply hurt. Myra went on. "That'll cost him five bucks. He bet me I wouldn't get a proposal till next Leap Year."

"Cut it, cut it," said Benny. "I give you a straight, genuine eighteen carat offer, do I get a straight answer?"

Myra grabbed the plate from him and became busy. "It's too sudden. I've got to think. You've done it now, all those kids waiting for their tea, and me so fuzzed I don't know whether I'm coming or going. Get out of my way." She brushed past him to the other room.

Benny rubbed his hand through his hair. Women were funny, smart as paint in some ways, and dumb in others. She didn't realize that he, Benny, had made a real genuine offer to marry her.

Outside the snow was still drifting down gently, slowly obliterating the tracks of Beano's escape.

WHEN Fay and Ross had run from the house with the others, Ross with the sudden decision of a good soldier had pulled Fay's hand.

"Let's cut through the wood. We'll cut 'em off at the turn of the drive."

They dashed down through the snow and came out on the drive just as the sleigh, with Beano frantically whipping the horses to greater speed, flashed by. Leona, tumbled in the back, was still trying to save herself from being hurled off the sleigh with all the rugs on top of her.

"He's gone mad and he'll kill her," gasped Fay.

"Come on," cried Ross. Without questioning him she ran after him down the road toward the farm. He dashed into the barn and when Fay caught up with him he was doing something quickly under the hood of a farm tractor.

"Fixing her for speed," he yelled. "Grab a horse blanket if you can find one."

She dashed into the barn, scrambled round and found an old blanket that smelled horse and ran back with it.

By this time Ross had the tractor out, the engine revving to a tank-like roar.

"All aboard for the armored corps," he cried. "Wrap the blanket around you and jump up behind and hang on like glue because we're going places."

The tractor grew hotter, the engine smoked, snow melted and fizzled in steam from the hood, its roar cut through the snowy stillness. Ross took a short cut across a ski trail he knew and the tractor climbed and bumped and dipped and swayed but Ross clung to the wheel and Fay clung to Ross.

Like a tank pursuing a retreating enemy, the tractor charged forward, under the expert guidance of Ross Benson. It bounced and careened and jumped and tossed about. In no time Fay was breathless, too frightened and too ill to let a single scream escape her lips.

Never had the Laurentians been the scene of so wild a chase. The air rang out with the tumultuous din of the charging tractor. Beano's steed was in full flight, forgetting every lesson Ross had learned about maneuvering mechanized vehicles.

Here Are Answers To Your Questions About Rationing

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2. (AP)—How will the rationing of canned fruits and vegetables work?

The office of Price Administration today asked itself and answered for the public the following questions:

Q. When will actual rationing begin?

A. As early in February as possible.

Q. How will the housewife know when point values are changed?

A. The newspapers and radio will carry the announcements, and every food store will have an OPA poster showing the current point values of each particular produce. A new poster will be issued when point values change.

Q. Will the point values be the same in all stores, or will they vary between high-price and low-price stores?

A. The point values are the same in every store in the country, regardless of the price charged.

Q. What is going to be done about people who have an excess supply of these commodities on hand?

A. Everyone applying for war ration book two will be required to fill out and sign a "consumer declaration" form stating exactly the stocks of processed foods on hand. Book 2 will have stamps removed for excess stocks and thus, in effect, will compel the applicant to use up these stocks before buying any more. Heavy federal penalties can be applied to those making a false declaration.

Q. Does this "declaration" mean that I will have to declare the fruits and vegetables I canned at home last fall?

A. No.

Q. There seem to be some question about dried and dehydrated vegetables and things like dehydrated dog food. Are these covered by rationing?

A. No. Only dried and dehydrated fruits—apples, peaches, and the like. Dry vegetables like navy beans, split peas, and lentils are not included.

Q. What about chicken soup, canned beef broth, turtle soup, and other soups made of meat or poultry stock containing few, if any vegetables?

A. All canned soups are rationed, no matter what their content. But not dehydrated soups.

Poultry May Help Offset Shortage In Meat Products

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP) — The nation's poultry farmers have made a good start, the agriculture department reported today, toward expanding the production of chickens to help offset shortages of meat resulting from heavy war demands.

In November about 25,000,000 baby chicks were hatched by commercial hatcheries, the department said. This was about 2,300,000 more than these hatcheries produced in the same month last year and nearly double their output of November, 1940.

Farmers have been asked by Secretary Wickard to produce at least 4,000,000,000 pounds of chickens, or 28 per cent more than the 1942 output, and 560,000,000 pounds of turkeys, or an increase of about 15 per cent. The department says that if this goal is reached, civilians would have a per capita supply of poultry of at least 50 per cent more than the average for the 1935-39 period.

Vital Information

Amendment of conservation order M-104 by WPB's director general for operations specifies the amount and kind of health supplies, chemicals, household and industrial products and beverages that may be packed for civilians during 1943 in glass containers having closures made of critical materials such as tinplate, terneplate, blackplate and rubber. Small brewers and bottlers of carbonated beverages are permitted to use the same amount of crowns they used in 1941. The quota for large brewers and bottlers remains at about 70 percent of the amount used in 1941. In the future crown manufacturers may purchase only scrap or reject metal for use in crowns for beer and carbonated beverages.

A January quota of truck tire recapping services totalling 368,200 was announced by OPA. The December quota was 149,520.

A quota of 10,319 new adult bicycles for rationing in January in the Southwest OPA region has been announced. Quotas and reserves for Texas 4,067 and 1,220.

The quota of new passenger automobiles for rationing in January in the Dallas OPA region has been set at 5,046. The quotas and reserves for Texas 2,177 and 296.

Aviation gasoline of 87 octane and higher was exempted from price control by OPA, effective January 4, 1943. This gasoline is now allocated by government authority.

In an amendment to general order No. 11, ODT ruled that intercity buses must henceforth be loaded to capacity where passengers are available, to eliminate waste of tires, fuel and equipment. The new regulation is designed to fill empty seats with passengers who otherwise would require a second bus.

Two suspension orders against Oklahoma construction firms have been issued by the War Production board compliance division for unauthorized use and sale of war housing. One suspension order was issued against W. F. Otten of Tulsa, who, it was charged, obtained priority assistance to build a rental house for war workers and then occupied the house himself. C. Athol Sayre of Muskogee was charged with selling a house to a non-war worker and with renting others to non-war workers in violation of his agreement to build dwelling units for sale or rent to war workers.

The White House has announced approval by President Roosevelt of amendments to the missing persons act under which dependents of service personnel and federal civilian employes missing in this war but believed alive will continue to receive their allotted pay. Adequate information concerning those lost at Bataan and Corregidor is lacking as the Japanese have not adhered to the terms of the Geneva convention providing for prompt reports of prisoners and deaths. Where no information is available to indicate death, persons missing in this area will be carried in the missing status and their dependents will continue to receive authorized benefits.

Beginning January 1, ODT announced that fleet operators of commercial motor vehicles transporting passengers will not be required to maintain tire records on each vehicle's certificate of war necessity. However, such fleet operators must continue to keep tire records for each vehicle, to be available for ODT inspection at all times.

Sales of canned pears to the United states or any agency thereof are exempt from price control, OPA announces.

ODT and OPA sounded a double-warning today concerning the tire inspection deadline. ODT reminded owners of commercial motor vehicles that they must get their tires inspected by January 15, and OPA reminded passenger car owner that they must have their tires inspected by January 31.

Jury members who need additional mileage while they are on court duty will be eligible for special gasoline rations, OPA announces. Special rations will be issued on the basis of a statement from the presiding judge or other responsible court official that the applicant has been called to jury duty, and the specified mileage is necessary to provide the required transportation.

Manpower Control Plan To Be Ready In Three Months

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP).—The War Manpower Commission reported today that "within three months, some plan of manpower control will be in effect in every major industrial community in the United States."

The commission lists 270 such areas, and its reports show 102 of the already have labor shortages, 77 are expected to have shortages soon, and the 91 others have enough labor for current production schedules.

In the eight and a half months since it was set up by the president with Paul V. McNutt as its chairman, the commission has developed two types of manpower control plans.

One applies to jobs in various industries, but is confined to a relatively small area, while the other applies to a single industry and may be used on a nationwide scale if that industry's labor shortage is nationwide in scope.

FDR Sees Plenty Of Reasons For Unity Among United Nations

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP)—President Roosevelt says there are "a great many things the United Nations ought to, and I think will, remain united for" after the war's end.

After issuing his New Year's Day statement commemorating the first anniversary of the signing on the United Nations agreement, the President told reporters:

"There are a great many objectives when peace comes, so that we won't go back to the old menace of the pre-war period—a great many things the United Nations ought to, and I think will, remain united for.

"However, there is one thing which at the present time stands out as the most important war objective, and that is to maintain peace, so that all of us, in going through the war, including the men on the fighting fronts and on the seas, will not have to go through a world cataclysm again—that they will have some reasonable assurance that their children won't have to go through it again. x x x

"All the planning for the future is dependent, obviously, on peace."

Taft 'Cools Off' On Compulsory Savings

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP)—Success of the treasury's war bond selling campaign led Senator Taft (R-Ohio) to declare today that proposals for compulsory savings ought to be abandoned in favor of an intensive drive to boost voluntary purchases of government securities.

Taft, a member of the Senate Finance committee who previously had advocated enforced loans to reduce inflationary spending, told reporters he had become "cool" to the idea after canvassing the results of the recently-concluded financing campaign.

"From the best figures I can obtain," the Ohio senator said, "it looks as though about $6,500,000,000 in war bonds was sold to individuals and companies outside of commercial banks in a campaign which was hastily organized.

"In one month then, about as much money was obtained for the treasury as could be raised in a year from most of the compulsory savings plans that have been suggested to Congress.

"I think we ought to go on with this sort of thing, organizing it on a house-to-house canvass basis to the point where 90 per cent of the bonds will be purchased by individuals. That is the surest kind of protection against inflation."

Agent Explains Details Of Farm Mobilization Day Set For Jan. 12

Explanation of farm mobilization day, January 12, was the theme of a radio speech by Glenn T. Hackney, Gray county farm agent, over Pampa Station KPDN at noon yesterday.

"We have only one motive this year," Mr. Hackney said, "production of food we need for winning the war. Our 1943 program is geared to this one-time war aim. We know that enormous amounts of food are needed for the United Nations during 1943.

"For every acre we shift from less essential to vital crops, we will be just that further along in our planned production program.

"We have 24 million bales of cotton, which is an ample supply, but we do not have ample supplies of meat, fats, and oils. We must not produce crops of which we have ample supplies at the expense of other crops, livestock and livestock products which are needed.

"One of the factors that will influence this production, other than the farmers patriotic urge to do their part in total war, is prices, especially prices at which farmers expect to sell. Agricultural prices currently are at a relatively high level. To assure increased expansion the department of agriculture will, as far as possible, work out and maintain a price policy during the year ahead which will give maximum price assistance to the production program.

"January 12 has been set aside in Texas for farm mobilization day," Hackney said. "County and community agricultural committeemen and volunteer workers will be trained to assist farmers in filling out their 1943 farm plan work sheets for maximum war production. The 1943 agricultural program will be commonly known as the war production program.

"Each farmer will be asked to execute two separate forms which will show the amount of crops that he will produce for the war effort in 1943. The forms the farmers will be asked to execute will give an inventory of farm manpower for 1943 and will show whether or not the farmer is eligible or ineligible for draft in the selective service.

"If a farmer has livestock and necessity crops in the amount equal to 16 war necessity units per man, he will be exempt from the draft. In determining farm man power for 1943, each member of the household whole of boys and girls over ten years of age will be counted as one-half man equivalent.

"If a farmer has two sons of 10 years of age at home and one of these sons are of draft age, in order to exempt this eligible boy from the draft that farm would have to have 32 war necessity units.

"Farmers and ranchers are urged to cooperate with the agricultural leaders of the county when they are notified to attend meetings the latter part of January to execute their 1943 farm plan work sheets for the war production program.

Pampa Man Promoted To Flight Officer

Jack P. Morgan, son of William G. Morgan of Pampa, has shed the stripes of a staff sergeant bombardment pilot to don the blue and gold bar of a flight officer, Col. George M. Palmer, commanding officer of the San Angelo army air field bombardier school, announced today.

By virtue of his advancement the Pampa flier will receive the pay, allowances and priviledges accorded warrant officers, junior grade. He rates the salute and all courtesies shown a commissioned officer.

With a rating which might be considered that of a "third lieutenant," the former non-commissioned officer will continue his job of flying bombardier cadets and their instructors to and from the 18 target ranges surrounding the newest of Uncle Sam's war colleges.

Morgan, a salesman in civilian life, is a member of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity and the order of DeMolay. He received training at Muskogee and Enid, Okla., and Ellington Field, Texas, before being stationed at the bombardier school here.

Supply Of News Print Cut In '43

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP).—The War Production Board has ordered every newspaper's use of print paper in 1943 cut back to the tonnage used in 1941 to produce its net paid circulation, a formula which reduces nationwide newsprint consumption by an estimated 10 per cent.

W. G. Chandler, head of WPB's printing and publishing division, added that publishers must expect the order to be followed by a second and perhaps a third reduction this year.

Chandler said he could only hope that the newly ordered controls, effective January 1, would last for the first quarter of 1943.

Simultaneously, WPB ordered magazines limited to 90 per cent of the tonnage used by each publisher in 1942, declaring this would have the same curtailment effect as the newspaper order.

"We have been very careful not to tell any publisher how he shall use the paper allowed him," said Donald J. Sterling, WPB consultant of newspapers and publishing, at a joint press conference with Chandler, "because that would lead us down a path the illogical and ruinous end of which is a controlled press, which none of us wants."

Uncle Sam Is Only One Who Can Hoard

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP). — There's such a thing as patriotic hoarding—but only Uncle Sam can do it.

While asking citizens to limit food purchases to day-to-day needs, Mr. Whiskers, himself, finds that he must engage in hoarding practices to assure ample supplies of food for military and lend-lease requirements.

Food authorities explained today that government purchases of foods may from time to time be greatly in excess of current requirements. To handle the extra supplies, the army, navy and the Agriculture Department have rented extensive warehousing and refrigerating facilities.

The practice of acquiring supplies in excess of current needs, referred to in official quarters as largely by the nature of food production.

In very few items is the rate of production constant. For most products there are seasons of high production and seasons of low production.

Thus, to be sure of supplies, the government must buy heavily in the seasons of peak production, or else it might be short in the seasons of low production.

THIS IS THE MOMENT!

1943 IS HERE . . .

Now is the time . . .

THIS IS THE MOMENT—for all of us to make a solemn pledge that nothing shall be left undone to win the war—and to win it quickly.

The Penney Company regards its more than 1600 stores, its more than 40,000 men and women associates, as a group of tremendous vitality and force in the war effort. In addition, helping shoulder to shoulder, we include the thousands of people who supply us with what we sell; who in mills and factories all over the land produce with only one thought in mind: the speeding up of the war effort. But most important of all, are the millions who are our customers. They know that no sacrifice is too great for our common cause—and they make it—willingly and gladly.

The Penney Company's job has always been to supply typical American families (people who live simply but well) with clothing and home furnishings at substantial savings.

Those American Families are now the Home Front!

It is their job to send an ever-increasing avalanche of supplies to those who are fighting our battles on the far-flung war fronts of the world.

Those American families, that Home Front, can count on us to continue our efforts to supply the good American merchandise they must have to keep fit for their great task. We will continue, unremittingly, our efforts to secure their needs at savings: Today it is more than good sense and good management to save—Thrift and Savings are now an imperative duty.

Golden Anniversay Observed By Meads

Special to The NEWS.

MIAMI, Jan. 2. — Judge and Mrs. J. A. Mead quietly celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, Monday, Dec. 28, in their home here with only a few close relatives present. The severe blizzard and the death of Mr. A. M. Winsett, of Higgins, a very dear friend, prevented others from being present for the celebration.

Judge and Mrs. Mead were married December 28, 1892, at the ranch home of the bride near Parnell, on the Canadian river in Roberts county.

The bride was Miss Celia White, daughter of I. N. White. County Judge D. E. Fay officiated at the home wedding.

Mr. Mead was then Sheriff of Roberts county, and later lived on his ranch just north of the Canadian river and after several years there sold his ranch and purchased one near Miami, and has lived in Miami ever since.

Mr. Mead was county clerk of Roberts county eight years, county commissioner for six years, and is at present county judge which office he has held for the past eight years.

The couple have three sons, Earl, deputy game warden, locatd at Pecos; Clyde Mead of Miami, and Kenneth Mead of Hollywood, Calif., and is employed by the Lockheed Aircraft corporation. They have two grandchildren, John and Marylyn, children of Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Mead.

A covered dish luncheon was enjoyed and the honorees were presented gifts, including a chest of silver. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Ed Corson, Pampa; Miss Blair of Pampa; Mrs. Dave Pope of Pampa, Clyde Mead and family.

Judge Mead was born in Michigan and moved with his parents to Kansas and then to the Texas Panhandle in 1884. His work on ranches gave him excellent opportunity to develop his hobby of collecting Indian relics and other historical and geological findings, of which he has quite a large collection, which has grown into a museum attracting the attention of prominent scientists from California to New York.

This museum is housed at the court house in Miami and is viewed each year by tourists from every state in the union. Mr. Mead's recreation consists in roaming over the hills and canyons and always finds something interesting for his fine and rare collection.

IS THIS THE HERALD OF REVIVED EMPIRE STYLES? Valentina designs the 1943 spring evening dress, at left, with no waistline, with deep neckline filled in with lace. The lace also is used for a hood and scarf, which can be changed to make this exotic design become like that all-work prewar basic dress. Above, the artist has sketched Valentina's ideas of how the revealing silhouette of the Empire gown could be used in ultra-modern daytime costumes. The afternoon dress, left, has a flat lace edging to emphasize the striking corsage; and a four-gore "skirt" cut bosom-high and close. At right: white linen shirt and Empire-high skirt with string tie to indicate normal waistline. Keys on a chain are slipped into a slit pocket.

By MARGUERITE YOUNG

NEW YORK, Jan. 2—War conditions may spin fashion's wheel to bring the form-revealing, high-bosomed, waistless Empire silhouette back into the pay-off spot.

Clews spotted by style-trend detectives are: (1) the number of suits and dresses with short waists or none at all that are cropping up; (2) the fact that designer Sophie had one Empire evening gown in her 1941 fall collection and is reported to be working on a no-waist daytime dress for her new collection; (3) Mainbocher, whose quite short suit jackets made dramatic news last fall, can be expected to follow through on the short-bodice line for spring; (4) famed designer Valentina is very definite in calling it a trend of the future.

Madame Valentina demonstrated the evening fashion the other day in her salon and allowed an artist to sketch it. She described how the new silhouette could be used in daytime clothes.

The designer wore a black dinner dress with fitted bosom, bare, low neck filled with net, short sleeves, and with skirt draped softly in front.

For evening, now, she is making this dress in even more emphatically Empire style. The long, slimly molded black gown has no waistline at all. It gets a lot of grace and variability from a bright-colored, separate scarf which can be changed and is worn as a long drape, crossed over the arms, or flung over the shoulder.

The drape is omitted in the daytime dress. Valentina makes one with the classic Empire corsage, short and fitted as a bra. The skirt is made of four gores shaped to provide moving-room within a molded silhouette.

"Or we can have the line in a shirt and skirt costume," she said, and proceeded to model it. This time she wore a white linen shirt quite like a man's, and a perfectly plain black skirt which reached right up to the bosom. For herself, she tied a cord at the waist.

These clothes point into a future —maybe in a few years, maybe by 1950, she believes—when most women will wear little lingerie, perhaps no undergarments save a pair of shorts.

Of course Napoleon's lady, Josephine, had the famous Empire line, and the Greeks had molded, draped, form-revealing clothes such as Valentina foresees for the future. She said, "There's nothing new except, thank the Lord, the individual. And it's about time for to show that our century can build clothes architecturally for her."

How fast and how far such styles will go, no designer could say. The Empire corsage and the short-waisted clothes that always accompany it, however, seem to be set for high-style importance this spring. They're "naturals" for cloth-conserving, short-skirted eras.

Original Fashions For Factories Combine Smart Styles With Real Utility So Clothes Look Well, Work Right

By MARGUERITE YOUNG

NEW YORK. — Cotton work styles including the first clothes to be designed-to-order for a large group of women in war production and actually worn by them at their lathes and benches and assembly lines, are causing quite a flutter in fashion's dovecote.

Big news in these originals: there both look well and work right.

Outstanding number: a coverall made all in one for speed, comfort and safety, but shaped and trimmed like Hollywood slacks and shirt. These are about to be donned by 18,000 fashion-wise girl workers of the Sperry Gyrospoce Company of Long Island.

Designer Vera Maxwell, who made the models to specifications of the girls themselves and the company's safety engineers, calls the job "a marvelous experiment — one of the toughest and one of the most interesting I ever tackled."

Outstanding specifications from the girls: legs "long enough to cover and still show our ankles;" material that wouldn't soil too quickly but would have more bloom than Navy blue;" no hip pockets because those make you look broader; a snug belt for slimness; and a collar narrowed in back to be out of the way of coat and hair covering.

In half dozen meetings with spokesmen for the girls, the designer got their ideas about how the coverall should look. Then she took a turn herself at the chief machines to see how the models should function. Next she consulted the company's safety engineers on fine points of working hazards the suit had to help overcome. Samples now are being given a workout.

To Miss Maxwell's knowledge, his is the first time a designer has worked directly with the prospective wearer in designing a working costume. It's the way the legendary Paris style originator works with his made-to-order customer.

WAR FASHIONS ON PARADE

This number and others showing what "they're" wearing in well-dressed war plants were paraded recently in Madison Square Garden just as pre-war garments that they were wearing at the races and resorts used to be exhibited for fashion scouts.

At least one important fashion authority predicts a long-time effect of the new work styles. Miss Virginia Jewell, stylist for the cotton industry, believes the combined functionalism or purposefulness, and appearance - appeal of the clothes clothes will be reflected in new working clothes, for housewives as well as industrial women.

"Before the housewife discards the work clothes which she has on hand," says Miss Jewell, "she'll discover this new kind. And watch her go for them. Not trousers, probably, but clothes, perhaps culottes, perhaps dresses, with new and special dresses, with new and special advantages."

War production management safety councils, and Uncle Sam have co-operated to produce other other new work styles for farflung factories. Many new costumes are adaptations of patterns developed by the U. S. Departments of Agriculture and Labor.

At the Todd Shipyards in Brooklyn, a stylish work suit is now being worked out. Welders and other heavy-work girls are wearing a heavy workman's denim overall—too narrow of bib, they say, and too broad of hip. Mrs. Elinore Herrick, personal director, has taken on the task of having a real "job" made for them.

HEADGEAR IS FLATTERING

Headgear is a vital new item of most plants' preferred costume because a complete coverup is required wherever there's moving machinery. International Harvester girls wear a cap with a conical top of black, shiny buckram which shields the pate prettily yet ventilates for hair health. This has a blue cloth visor and headband, with velvet ventilators above the temples. Similar in shape: a white buckram number. Most of the headpieces are of heavy cotton materials for washability, are flat for easy ironing.

Women in several munitions plants wear a coverall designed to combat the halth hazard of powder-laden air. This suit must be laundered daily, therefore it's made of unbleached muslin. But this is a pretty becoming cream color, and the suit is decorated with flashing red stitching and four red plastic buttons in front.

Allis-Chalmers girls at bench jobs, like electrical assembly, in Milwaukee, wear a tan jumper-cuotte over a brightly striped cotton jersey. The jumper has shoulders-freeing straps buttoning to bib at the shoulder, and has a divided skirt that actually looks like a skirt.

How much style gets into the clothes for a particular plant depends largely upon whether a style-conscious executive takes an interest in them. Safety and utility requirements, however, persuade many of the major plant managements to go after a garment designed especially for their women workers.

Couple Has Gala Entertainment At School Hall

As a courtesy to enlisted men stationed at the Army Air Corps Advanced Flying school, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. McKernan were host and hostess at a holiday dance Wednesday night at the parochial school hall.

In keeping with the holiday motif, Yuletide decorations and flags predominated in the hall where soft drinks were served throughout the evening.

Music for the dance was played by Pinky Powell's orchestra. Callers for the Paul Jones dances were Mel Davis, Dan Kennedy, and Clinton Henry. A highlight of the entertainment was a schottische danced by the chaperones and their husbands.

Mrs. Dan Kennedy presided at the guest book in which 74 young women registered and Lynn Boyd had charge of the registry for the service men. One hundred and twenty-five enlisted men attended.

Chaperones and their husbands present were Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Tracey, Mr. and Mrs. Andrew McNamara, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Garman, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn Boyd, Mr. and Mrs. Dan Kennedy, Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Gribbon, Mr. and Mrs. William Herr, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Jones, Mr. and Mrs. Wyndell Cox, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Leahy, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Henry, Mr. and Mrs. Mel Davis, and Mrs. L. W. Furrow.

Among the others attending were Mrs. Julia Pagan, United Service Organizations hostess; Lieut. W. D. Cowan, special service and billeting officer at the air base; and Lieut. Eugene E. Soulir, assistant special service officer.

New Year Theme Of Sermons Today At First Baptist

"A Christmas Challenge Amidst Chaos and Change" will be the unusual and timely sermon subject of the Rev. E. Douglas Carver when he speaks at the 10:55 a. m. service of the First Baptist church Sunday.

It was announced that First Baptist leaders were anxious to have every member present at the services Sunday to mark the beginning of a new year. The New Year theme will be given prominence when the pastor will speak at 8 p. m. on "Our Supreme Need in 1943."

Special music for the services will include the Ellis quartet singing "Wonderful, Wonderful Jesus" and a baritone solo by Mr. Don Egerton, it was announced.

A full day of activities will begin with the Sunday school meeting at 9:45 a. m. with J. Aaron Meek as superintendent. The morning worship service which will be broadcast over KPDN will follow at 10:55 a. m.

The evening activities begin with the training union which meets at 7 p. m. with groups for each age, and the evening evangelistic service is scheduled to begin at 8 p. m. The popular "Fellowship Hour" sponsored by the young people of the church for the men in service will begin immediately after the close of the evening preaching hour. Large numbers of men stationed at the Pampa Army Air Forces Advanced Flying school have been attending these fellowship gatherings.

Fannie Johnston Becomes Bride Of Melvin Asberry

Special to The NEWS.

SHAMROCK, Jan. 2. — Mr. and Mrs. B. Johnston announce the marriage of their daughter, Miss Fannie Johnston, to Melvin Asberry of Groom, December 27.

The double ring ceremony was read at the home of the bride's parents.

The bride wore navy blue with matching accessories.

Mrs. Asberry is a graduate of the Shamrock High school with the class of 1938, and received her degree from W. T. S. C. at Canyon, and is now teaching in the public schools at Groom.

Mr. Asberry is a graduate of the Jacksboro High school and had two years work in Texas A. and M. college at College Station. He is associated with the Groom Hardware company.

Following the wedding a reception was held.

For travel, the bride wore a suit of black wool with white accessories. After a short wedding trip the couple will be at home in Groom.

Guests for the wedding included Miss Ava Asberry of Ft. Worth, sister of the groom; Perry and Lula Margaret Johnston of Groom, Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Johnston and daughters, Shirley and Fannie Faye of Ft. Worth, and Abbie Johnston, sister of the bride, of Shamrock.

It is as hard for a rich man to enter heaven as it is for a poor man to live on earth.

By ROSETTE HARGROVE

LONDON, Jan. 2—A lot of hidden talent is expected to be brought to light by England's new "Make-do and Mend" campaign. Instead of treating restrictions on clothing and other essentials as mere vexations with which she has to cope, the British housewife should find satisfaction in thrift for her own sake and for the national war effort.

In the easy-going pre-war days, England was a land of shopgoers as well as shopkeepers. Household economy and thrift were practiced in every other European country, but here cheap mass production had killed nearly all incentive to home dressmaking or even bothering to patch and mend.

But present conditions have placed entirely different emphasis on thrift. In fact, for most Englishwomen, smartness now can be achieved only through the exercise of this virtue plus a lot of ingenuity.

A recent "Make-do and Mend" exhibition in London showed how something could be evolved out of even the oldest and apparently unusable garment. Examples ranged from grandfather's 40-year-old evening suit or topcoat to father's shrunken, once-white flannel trousers.

Grandfather's "tails" which, by the way, were made of the most supple black broadcloth, fashioned a smart two-piece dress. The black satin lining produced a long-sleeved blouse and so did the black and white striped silk interlining, for this is how men's evening clothes were built 40 years ago.

The demonstration also showed practical examples of the possibilities for making children's clothes from the grown-ups' castoffs. However old or moth-eaten, knitted wool suits, cardigans, dresses and sweaters can be raveled and remade into all sorts of things, from a cosy, long-sleeved new top for a 10-year-old's out-grown wool nightgown to "crawlers" for babies and sweater sets for every age. This is one answer to the prob-

RED CROSS VOLUNTEERS

(By MRS. FRED ROBERTS)

THE Pampa Red Cross board and its executive secretary, Mrs. J. B. White, wish everyone a very happy New Year and, as the old year goes out, thank all who have in any way helped in the work of the organization this past year.

Today the Red Cross task is twofold—service to aid the morale of the armed forces and services to safeguard the lift and health of the civilian population. Recognition of services performed during the last war has placed greater importance on those same services today.

We who have served in Pampa are a vital part of the American Red Cross. Of such as we, is the Red Cross made. Let us resolve that in 1943 our Pampa chapter will continue its very excellent contribution to the war effort through us who are its members.

No one has to thank the American people, through their Red Cross, for the job they are doing for the men in uniform. But it's nice when the latter take the trouble to do so.

Dolly, Red Cross National Headquarters is on the receiving end of letters of thanks — simply written, sincerely appreciative. They come from service men at home and abroad who have been helped by Red Cross, or from the friends of men who have asked the Red Cross for aid and received it in larger doses than they had imagined possible. And it is a fine commentary on the men themselves that so many of them drop their guns long enough to pick up pencils and say, "Thanks a lot. You've been swell."

"Thank you for the sweaters and say a prayer for us all — we need that so much these times," wrote a young private somewhere in the Solomon Islands. "I don't know whom to thank for the nice warm sweaters from the Prince Georges county, Maryland, chapter," he wrote. "One sweater was given to me and one to my pal. We wore them and are very grateful. They were nice and kept us warm, and are good looking too. We wore them all through the jungles in the Solomon Islands.

"Bob, my pal, took fever and we had a hard time getting him back to the hospital. He died yesterday, and before he passed away he, too, wanted to thank you for the nice warm sweater that he liked so much. He had no relatives in America. He was brought up an orphan in a school in Denver. He was a good kid and brave, too; he was very grateful for your kindness in giving him the sweater."

A sergeant in the Air Service wrote to the Brooklyn, N. Y., Chapter:

"Just a line to let you know that I was the lucky one to get the Red Cross Comfort kit that had your card in.

"The kits were given to us boys when we were about 20 days out at sea and feeling kind of low, and we were surely very glad to get them. Everything in the kits was just exactly what we needed. I had always wanted a sewing kit, but never remembered to get one when in the States, so you can see how very glad I was to get the swell one that was in the bag. In fact, when I opened the bag, it reminded me of Christmas and was one of the most pleasant surprises that I have had so far in the service.

"Many, many thanks for your kindness and please keep up the excellent work for those who are to follow."

An R. A. F. pilot in a prison camp somewhere in Germany found time to postcard a hasty "Thank You" to the Staten Island, N. Y., Chapter:

"I am afraid that I do not know to whom I should address this note, but perhaps it is more fitting that it remain open. You may well ask why I need write at all but I think I have reason enough. Today I received a pair of pyjamas from the Red Cross; the little tag inside bears the name of your chapter. Hence my excuse for this card to say: 'Thank you all very much.'"

James Howard McRoberts of of Springfield, Ill., who was wounded in the Pearl Harbor attack, gives this definition of the Red Cross in a letter to his parents:

"I regain consciousness and was just lying there perusing the ceiling sort of wishing for someone to talk to. Then in the door walked a young man wearing a uniform with the traditional Red Cross, carrying a basket of miscellaneous masculine necessities hanging on one arm. She came over to the bed and smiled at me. That's all it took to bring my spirits up to normal. She left me cigarettes, razor blades, a razor, writing paper, stamps, just everything I wanted. She was back again the next day with flowers and I had fresh flowers every day. Things like that make a fellow feel that he really isn't so far from home. That's the Red Cross."

From the soldier son of a Bronxville, N. Y., banker came the following. Wrote Sperry Andrews, from somewhere abroad:

"The Red Cross is doing a splendid, a superhuman job here. I had in the past, before the war, thought of the Red Cross as a routine philanthropic organization, of slow-moving but kind-hearted Americans.

"Well, let me tell you—and I speak after seeing Red Cross at work — they're not just routine, they are utterly amazing. They have done the most stupendous job all around here and have succeeded in making the enlisted men feel perfectly at home.

"In the hospitals, the Red Cross is ever on the alert to do everything possible for the men — doing every conceivable favor from writing letters to mending socks. They visit the camps with their traveling units.

"I wish you might see the mixtures and crowds the local Red Cross center handles daily! There is so much more I could say for the indefatigueable efforts of this splendid and courageous organization. Their problems here are a thousand fold and I take off my hat to them. And that, the weather being what it is, is indeed a tribute!"

If you want to feel that these thank-you notes are directed just as personally to you as to anyone else, the Volunteer Special Services committee of the local chapter offers you many opportunities to serve. The production room is open every day from 9 to 11 and 2:30 to 4:30. It is located in the basement of the post office. There is cutting, sewing, and knitting on hand for you. The surgical dressings room hours are from 9 to 11 and 2 to 5 every day except Saturday and Sunday on the third floor of the Court house. Call the Red Cross offices if you are interested in First Aid, Home Nursing, Nutrition, Staff Assistance, etc. The Red Cross needs you whatever your capabilities are.

REMODELING

lem of clothes rationing for rapidly growing children.

Everybody now realizes that prewar all-wool clothes are more precious than a good many of our other, more prized, peacetime possessions. This applies also to silk and cottons. Men's discarded shirts make charming blouses for mother or tub frocks for daughter, according to her age. Even a much-worn silk dress can be utilized as an inner lining for extra warmth. Many women now are exercising their wits to find the best ways of using worn-out silk stockings which litter bureau drawers.

Here is a suggestion from the "Make-do and Mend" exhibition in London. The young woman is holding two serviceable blouses which she made from the lining and interlining of an otherwise useless evening coat.

How to make use of those old-fashioned shoulder-high kid gloves which salvage drives have unearthed from attic trunks was found by a home front creator a little while ago. They make fascinating, cuddly animals for young children with comparatively little labor. Fingers and thumbs stuffed with cotton become legs and tails and even elephant trunks, while the wide part of the glove is good for all types of bodies.

Thus clothes and accessories which moths, age and dirt have caused to be discarded can, with ingenuity, soap and homework, be converted into useful numbers of wartime wardrobes.

When women can remember that it takes as much wool to equip and maintain one soldier as it would to clothe 10 civilians, that a parachute calls for more than 60 yards of silk, that valuable shipping space must be diverted to the transporting of raw materials from various parts of the world, risking men's lives in submarine-infested seas, they will know that "making-do" is something to be proud of.

Designers Ponder Means To Make Ends Meet Without Metal

By ANN FRANCE WILSON

WASHINGTON, Dec. 31. — This year has been a year to tax clothes designers' ingenuity. First there was the matter of conforming styles to WPB's cloth-saving regulations. And now the designers are trying to figure out new ways to keep your wartime clothes fastened.

Metal fasteners of all sorts are up for further production curtailment. So, you can look for new styles using more tricky tie fastenings and pearl buttons, and fewer hooks and eyes, snap fasteners and snap tapes.

Seaside Outlook

While we're on the subject of clothes — you won't be seeing any new slinky black swim suits and smart, dark-colored beach clothes next summer. Though it's not true, as has been rumored, that dye stuffs are of inferior quality, there isn't enough of them.

Cotton's also getting short. That means there will be fewer summer evening dresses and long beach coats. So, if you're planning your vacation wardrobe early, figure on wearing pastels, whites, and light colors. Or, probably better still, plan on wearing last year's wardrobe.

Soup Situation

It's not likely that WPB will stop there, either. If the war lasts long and both tin and manpower become harder to get—as is expected —canned soup will have to give way to more concentrated and nutritious food. As you know, soup already has gone through one concentration process. And it's in line for still more.

TWO GOOD EXAMPLES OF SMARTLY SLIM styling for larger figures are pictured above. At left is a frock of fine rayon mossy crepe, bronze beading at shoulders and on skirt front accent the mink-brown tone of the fabric. WPB's Fabric-Reduction Turns Out To Be A Boon For Larger-Sized Women

NEW YORK. — Surprise of pleasant surprises is the effect of Uncle Sam's cloth-saving rules upon women's size dresses this winter.

Women who couldn't get into misses' frocks were worried by WPB regulations. They feared the order would bring in skimpy, unbecoming clothes, which literally would put the squeeze on the substantial figure. And if there's one thing that will make a large body look larger, it is pinching it in tight clothes, as most women know.

Actually, new women's dresses are made with about 20 percent less yardage than was used in peacetime.

However, the chief casualties prove to be the once-ubiquitous bolero which was eliminated automatically by the WPB rule forbidding the sale of a packet with a dress at one unit price; and the equally ubiquitous voluminous draping, especially bodice draping, in women's size frocks.

Strictly good riddance!

For as many women are now learning, there is another error which maximizes instead of minimizes a full figure just as surely as does pinching it. The second error is to try to hide it self-consciously with loose folds. Such obvious devices simply tagged the wearer as painfully apologetic about her figure.

DRESSES REALLY FIT

These cloth-consuming features eliminated, designers find they have plenty of fabric to make a women's-size WPB dress that fits subtly but frankly—which is the first necessity for a pleasing effect.

Furthermore, the designers are accenting fabric and line in women's dresses as in misses'—again the no-apology technique that really works. Thus, for the first time, there are a great many two-piece dresses for larger women.

This "suit-frock," as it is called, has a slim skirt—no pads of gathering or pleats but no skimping either—and a jacket top which comes down to the hip, lengthening the torso lines. These are done, usually, in firm-bodied rayon crepes and lightweight spun rayon twilled fabrics in deep colors.

FABRIC IS IMPORTANT

Weight, texture, and drape of the fabric have, of course, a great deal to do with the impression given by the dress. Thick, plushy materials make for bulky look.

The firm-bodied, soft rayon crepes and winter sheers therefore are used instead. Also interesting flat weaves from fine basketweave, self-patterned mossy or pebbled textures, some matelasse types, and luxurious but practical crush-resistant rayon velvets in both dull-surfaced and gleaming transparent versions. Satin, lace, and marquisette are employed for contrast details, in dressy frocks, and here the texture is emphasized by raised or embroidered decoration including shimmering beadwork, and sequins.

One-piece frocks have slim lines but skirts at times are gently flared, sometimes straight all around except for slight front fullness which takes away from apparent width of the thighs. V necklines, turned-back collars, and stitching shoulder accents are good slenderizing details.

MODERN MENUS

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Here are two more "food resolutions" for good eating at low cost. Paste them in your 1943 War Recipe book.

BEAN LOAF
(Serves 6-8)

One cup uncooked navy beans or 3 cups boiled navy beans, 1 cup bread crumbs, 1 small onion, diced, 3 tbs. cooking fat, 1 egg, 1½ tsp. salt, 1 cup evaporated milk.

Mash cooked beans. Add other ingredients in the order listed and stir until well blended. Turn into a well-greased 2-quart baking dish. Shape into a loaf. Bake in a moderate oven (375 deg. F.) about 45 minutes.

BEEF STEW WITH DUMPLINGS
(Serves 6-8)

One pound chuck beef, 4 tbs. flour, 1 tsp. salt, ⅛ tsp. pepper, 6 small onions, sliced thin, 3 carrots, sliced, 3 turnips, quartered, 4 potatoes, quartered.

Cut meat into cubes about 1 inch thick. Mix the flour, salt and pepper. Roll meat in the flour mixture. Fry one of the fat from the meat in a frying pan. Brown meat in the hot fat, stirring constantly to prevent burning. Transfer to a stew kettle and cover with boiling water. Simmer for 1½ hours. Add vegetables and continue cooking for 1 hour or until done. Put in the dumplings 12 minutes before serving.

"Make It Last" Drive Might Help Salvage Present Marriages

By RUTH MILLETT

A Chicago couple told a judge they were ready to scrap their marriage.

He thought it could be salvaged and persuaded them to try for one month living by a set of "ten commandments" designed to overcome their complaints against the other.

When the month was up, the couple found the judge was right — that their marriage was too good to scrap.

If drawing up and abiding by a set of commandments served to give a "re-tread" to one marriage, perhaps the same plan, if adopted early enough, would be good to keep one from wearing thin.

Americans are abiding by rules these days to prolong the life of all their material possessions — so they should be able to take equally careful precautions to preserve the happiness of their marriages.

RULES FIT PROBLEMS

The rules the Chicago couple drew up and followed wouldn't work for any other couple, since they applied only to the couple's particular problems. For instance, one rule was that the wife, who likes to place an occasional bet on a race, could bet up to a $2 limit. And, that the husband, who likes a drink now and, then could drink, but not too much, and only on Saturday nights.

Another couple might not care about either of those things enough to fight over them.

But any couple that isn't getting along very well could draw up their own set of commandments, using the principle the judge laid down for the Chicago couple.

The principle is simply for each partner to let the other indulge, moderately, his own tastes, whether or not they appeal to the other.

Market Briefs

WALL STREET

NEW YORK, Jan. 2 (AP).—The stock market today stepped into 1943 with a fair amount of confidence but with an appreciable slackening of buying demand.

The ticker tape loafed throughout and transfers for the brief proceedings were around 200,000 shares, one of the smallest in more than three months.

Ahead most of the time were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, Santa Fe, N. Y. Central, Southern Pacific, American Telephone, Standard Oil (NJ), Goodyear, Philip Morris, Douglas Aircraft, United Aircraft, General Electric, Reynolds Tobacco "B", Westinghouse, Texas Co., Du Pont, Radio Corp., International Nickel and International Telephone.

Backward at intervals were Loew's, Great Northern, Anaconda, General Motors, Sears Roebuck, and U. S. Rubber.

Women Needed As Junior Engineers

Jobs are open for women as civilian junior engineers through the civil service commission. Women with college degrees in any field may now qualify for junior engineer positions in the civil service by taking a short tuition-free course.

The job pays $2,000 a year. This course was developed by the civil service commission and the office of education as a part of the engineering, science, and management war training program, to prepare women for engineering activities in order to supplement the rapidly diminishing supply of male engineers, many of whom are in the armed forces.

Complete information can be obtained from Vaughn Darnell, civil service secretary, at the Pampa postoffice.

Waters Funeral Held At Canadian

Special to The NEWS.

CANADIAN, Jan. 2—Thomas Waters, 80, died at his home here Sunday night after a long illness. Funeral services were held at the First Christian church Friday afternoon. Rev. Jas. R. Hill was in charge of the services.

Mr. Waters was born in Freestone county December 15, 1862. He was engaged in the cattle business first in Tarrant county, later for four years in New Mexico. He was a prominent ranchman of Lipscomb county for many years, moving to Canadian a year or so ago.

Thomas Waters married Miss Fannie Hamilton of Benbrook, Texas, June 4, 1892. She and nine of their 11 children are living. One son, deceased, served in World War I.

Funeral services were delayed until Friday so that all the children might be present. They are Mrs. Mary Smith, Elmira, New York; Mrs. Winnie Jameson, Perryton; Mrs. Zuma Anderson, Miami; Miss Lorene Waters, New York City; William Waters, Marysville, Calif.; Jonathon, Samuel, Erwin, and Oliver all of Canadian. There are seven grandchildren.

SAN ANTONIO AVIATION CADET CENTER, Jan. 2—Aviation Cadet Stanley T. Blackburn, 904 Western Ave., Amarillo, in training at the San Antonio aviation cadet center, will go after the Jap with a vengeance.

Blackburn is the brother of Lieutenant J. E. Blackburn III, a member of the Flying Tigers who was killed in China in April, 1942.

No Relief For Oil, Gasoline Pinch Seen Until After The War Is Over

WASHINGTON, Jan. 2 (AP)—Explaining that the war effort "is only well started in its demand upon our oil supplies," a congressional committee warned the nation today not to expect any relief from the current pinch until after the war.

The warning was based on two years of investigations by the House Interstate and Foreign Commerce subcommittee, and on the assumption that the war would continue for two more years.

Heavy drains for war needs, coupled with failure to encourage the discovery and development of new oil fields, the committee said, have resulted in crude oil demands exceeding production and a decline, during the last eight months, of 60,000,000 barrels in stored supplies of crude and petroleum products. Projected demands for 1943, the committee added, are "greatly in excess of estimated production."

The committee recommended that the government encouraged increased production, that higher ceiling prices be allowed for petroleum and its products, that greater incentives be given to discovery and exploration of new sources of supply, that existing supplies be conserved through rationing, and that the public cooperate by cutting down on the use of petroleum and its products.

Cost factors and lack of facilities, the committee said, have led to abandonment of substantial underground reserves. It suggested legislation to permit producers to require "equitable compliance with a cooperative plan" for the conservation and production of oil from underground reserves.

In the field of rationing, the committee commented, "all possible recognition" should be given to the essential needs of individuals and localities.

In a brief reference to the rubber shortage, the committee said any undue delay in providing rubber to meet civilian and war needs "might in time be rated as a national calamity.

"The nation looks hopefully to synthetic rubber production," it said, but the program "is in part held up by the lack of approval of priorities of materials rated as critical for war purposes."

American Fliers Hang Up Remarkable Record On Plains Of Africa

By WES GALLAGHER

AN ADVANCED AMERICAN BOMBER BASE IN NORTH AFRICA, Jan. 2 (AP)—Men of the American light bomber squadron, living in tin huts and pup tents of a field attacked almost daily by the Luftwaffe, have hung up the remarkable record of carrying out 41 raids on the Germans in Tunisia with the loss of just one plane crew—and that one is safe.

Led by Major Charles C. Kegelman, of El Reno, Okla., who struck the first American air blow against the Nazis in a raid over Holland on July 4, the first small group of light bombers put their wheels down on the African plain surrounded by mountains.

The field was empty—no runways, no gasoline, no bombs, no ground crews, no hangars.

"All we had was our toothbrushes," Major Kegelman said.

Today tents dot the plain and mechanics and ground crews swarm over speedy American bombers.

The day after the original landing a few trucks loaded with bombs and gasoline arrived, and the bombers took off on their first mission. Forty-one raids, says Major Kegelman, make this "the most experienced light bomber squadron in the American air force."

"Our record of not locing planes can be attributed to the wonderful support given by American P-38's, and to our speed and the experience that the boys are getting all of a sudden," said the major, who looks more mature than he did six months ago.

Major Kegelman has three of the four members who made the original flight with him over Holland. The fourth, Sergeant Golay, is back in the United States studying for a commission.

With Major Kegelman are Major Martin P. Crabtree of Decatur, Tex.; and Captain Howard G. Cook of San Antonio, Tex.

The lientenants in addition to Dorton included Glenn Jackson, Austin, Tex.

The sergeants include Earl McGinnis, Foss, Okla.

Hemphill Joins In Farm Mobilization

Special to The NEWS.

CANADIAN, Jan. 2—John Stovall, Hemphill county agent, Erban Crowell representing AAA, and Miss Argen Hix, Hemphill county home demonstration agent, attended the war production meeting held in Childress Monday in response to a call by Secretary of Agriculture Wickard.

Representatives of Triple A, FSA, REA, and all other branches of the war production organization were present at the Childress meeting from the following eight counties: Hemphill, Wheeler, Cottle, Hardeman, Childress, Donley, Hall, and Collingsworth.

The meeting and similar ones in all other section of the country were called to discuss plans and goals for 1943 production of food, conservation of farm machinery and labor.

Miss Doris Leggitt, district home demonstration agent, College Station, discussed "Home food production" on the program. The FSA discussed financing, the conservation department explained plans and goals for 1943.

Complying with plans outlined, the Hemphill County War board composed of Ed Little, chairman, John Stovall, county agent; Jack Wheelis, FSA; Erban Crowell, AAA; and C. W. Allen, credit production arranged for a series of meeting for January.

From January 1 to 11, county and community educational meetings will be held informing farmers of needs and requests and their pledges asked to support the department of agriculture war production plans.

From January 12 to 31, the war board will secure information relative to amount of farm machinery each farmer has, labor needed for cultivation of land and labor available. From this information secured, the regular plan sheets will be filled out and will be placed in hands of the local selective draft board.

The Hemphill County War board will give county-wide recognition to families who have made 1942 records in food production; also where younger brothers and sisters have filled places on farm left vacant when older brothers were called to U. S. Service. This information will also be filed with the local selective draft board who will be guided by this and the plan sheets in deferring man power for farm work.

BEANO IS BEANED

CHAPTER XIV

ROSS forgot that Fay had no experience in jumping ditches and crashing split-log fences in a tank. He pushed the tractor at unheard-of speed for the machine and Fay clung behind him, arms round his neck, scared out of her wits, but confident. He crashed into the road and followed the tracks of the sleigh, his blood up for the strangest pursuit in the world, farm tractor chasing Santa Claus in a sleigh with the Fairy Queen through a Laurentian range road.

Then suddenly in the middle of a wood the engine stopped and there was only the sound of sizzling snow in the deep silence of the woods.

"That's the end. She's seized," announced Ross.

Then he became aware of Fay's arms clinging around him. "Hey, let go! This is where we get off."

Breathlessly she cried: "I can't. My legs won't stand."

The quivering and rattling motion of the tractor had shaken her legs into weakness as she clung and stood on the small foothold behind Ross.

He gripped her hands firmly and stepped down into the snow. Then he grasped her legs around him so that she rode piggyback. She felt as light as a feather.

"Have I got to carry you back like this?"

"Only till I get some strength back in my legs. You can leave me behind if you like."

"Throw that blanket over that log behind you."

She did so and he let her down onto it. He lit a cigaret and gave it to her. "Hold that while I fix you up."

He wrapped her in a blanket and lifted her easily in his arms. "You don't weigh anything at all. I'll bet you don't eat enough."

Fay nestled comfortably in the blanket and felt his strong arms around her. It was the most comfortable feeling she had ever experienced. She smiled up at him.

"I'd rather starve and be carried like this than eat like Leona and be carried off by a madman."

"I'll bet when some man asks you to marry him you'll say no just because you're so damn proud you wouldn't admit you liked him."

"Yes," she said. "Especially some man."

Moodily he carried her through the quiet woods.

"It's worse for me," she said quietly hiding her face from him as he carried her.

"I know it is. I wish I'd never come up here."

"So do I."

"I knew it last night. I woke up in the night and it hit me between the eyes. When did you know it."

A small voice emerged from the blanket.

"When we were skiing . . . when I kissed you in the snow."

He swung her face close to his and kissed her lips. They were cool and soft and he let his lips stay on hers as he carried her. He put his foot in a hole and they went headfirst in the snow, proving that the path of true love never did run smooth.

BEANO too had learned that simple truth. When the sleigh swung into the road, there was nothing in his heart except a fierce exultation. This was the very essence of romance, to be eloping dressed as Santa Claus with his beautiful Leona dressed as the Queen of the Fairies and carrying her dowry of diamonds in her hand.

The sleigh careened down the road and the horses steamed. A bevy of children from a farmhouse stopped dead in their tracks as they saw the strange sight flash past them and nothing ever afterwards dimmed their faith in the reality of Santa Claus.

The sleigh startled someone else too. It startled the owner, who was digging a path through the drift for the detective's car. He waved his arms furiously to stop the sleigh and only when Beano saw it was impossible to get through did he draw rein.

Leona had been shaken into disarray, her stars and tinsel adrift. As soon as the sleigh stopped she let the farmer and Beano shout angrily at one another while she wrapped a rug around her for warmth and plunged through the snow to the car.

Beano, impulsive as ever, disposed of the farmer in the snow and came to join her.

Leona sat up. "What detectives?"

"Just detectives."

"You mean there's detectives after these?" She held up the package.

"Sure honey. There's 50 grand there and we're fixed for life."

"Prison for life," she said. "My father, he'll break my neck."

She said it quietly, breaking open the package. Then she looked at it again. Instead of the diamonds a necklace fell out, a lovely pearl necklace, just like the ones she had sold at the five and ten for 25 cents. It was unmistakable.

It is the last straw that breaks the camel's back. It was the necklace at 25 cents that broke Leona's dull placidity for the first time.

Her eyes lifted to meet Beano's. There was a bleak unhappiness in his as he stared at the necklace.

"You double-crossing hunk of chilled beef," she began. "A man of your education too."

"Listen honey," said Beano bewildered.

"Listen, my eye. Listen to this." Her hands went into action like a tiger's claws.

She grabbed him by his coracobrachialis. "Take that," she said, "and that." Her hand slapped his zygomaticus and came back with a resounding slap across his platysma.

"Let me get my hands on you," she said. "I'll tear the lineae transversae off your ribs and that goes for your intereostal internus too. Drive me back to the house or I'll scream the woods down."

It was Benny who saw the car coming up the drive. He was standing by the window with Myra. The car had picked up Fay and Ross on the road.

"Here they come. Two pairs of lovers. Look at them. Don't that make you want to say yes to me?"

Myra looked closer and could only see Beano and Leona.

"No," she said, "it doesn't."

Granary Surplus Shifts From Corn To Wheat In 1943

CHICAGO, Jan. 2, (AP)—Like a teeter-totter, the nation's ever-normal granary, which may some day soon help to feed a war stricken world, is shifting from an overabundance of corn to an overabundance of wheat.

Grain trade statistics today showed the ever-normal granary, now ten years old, holds supplies of sufficient size at least to make a good start on the task of feeding Europe.

However, the war has brought striking changes in its content.

In the spring of 1941, when the United States began to take up the burden of supplying food first to Britain and later to others of the United Nations, stocks of corn in the granary were at a peak, totaling in excess of 500,000,000 bushels. Wheat stocks were about one-half that total.

Lend lease demands, however, have called for greatly increased livestock consumption of corn, as well as industrial products made from corn such as starch, sugar, oil and alcohol, the granary's supply of that central has been reduced to less than 200,000,000 bushels, and a large portion was in position for immediate farm consumption.

Meanwhile, the granary supply of wheat has expanded more than three-fold. By the time farmers complete the sealing of 1942 wheat under government loans, the total in the granary may exceed 700,000,000 bushels. Already it is estimated above 600,000,000 bushels.

Coal Still Hasn't Faded From Picture

Despite an abundance of natural gas, coal has not entirely faded from the picture in Pampa.

There is some coal sold here each year, but the war has made it difficult to obtain.

A local dealer today called on those desiring coal to place their orders now, putting up a deposit check, and listing the amount of lcoal desired to be taken from the car on its arrival.

Smith is a native of Packwood, Iowa, and all his honors are in the field of agriculture.

He lists his awards as follows: Grand sweepstakes in poultry at Iowa State fair four times; grand sweepstakes in eggs twice and a multitude of ribbons in livestock, poultry, grain, eggs and demonstrative work.

District Court Reporters To 'Swap' Places As New Term Opens Monday

Court reporters of the 31st and 47th district courts will alternate places tomorrow, with W. R. Frazee, formerly 31st district court reporter here, being in Canyon for the opening of a three-weeks term there, and Norman Minter, formerly 47th district reporter, being in Pampa for the opening of the 10-week January term of 31st district court here.

Mr. Frazee has been reporter for the 31st district since 1931 and a Pampa resident since 1933. He was formerly a resident of Canadian where he was reporter for the old 31st district court. At that time the district included nine counties, instead of the four counties now in the area.

He also had been a lawyer at Amarillo before being court reporter and has been a practising attorney since 1926.

Mr. Frazee is a member of the Gray County Bar association, Texas Bar association, secretary of the Pampa Masonic lodge, secretary of the Gray County Parole board, secretary of the Gray County Democratic Executive committee and a member of the board of stewards of the First Methodist church. He was president of the Missouri club during the 1941 Top O'Texas Fiesta. As court reporter under the presiding judge, W. R. Ewing, he was secretary of the ninth administrative judicial district.

Mr. Minter, who is exchanging places with Mr. Frazee, has been court reporter of the 47th district for the past 15 years. The change became effective January 1.

Mr. Frazee will make Amarillo, center of the 47th district, his headquarters, while Mrs. Frazee and their daughter Waldine remain here for two or three months before moving to Amarillo.

Besides the daughter, the Frazees also have a son, Charles, in the army air forces, and stationed at Ft. Worth.
