Summit a possibility

■ U.S., U.S.S.R. reach arms treaty agreement, clearing the way for superpower summit.

Associated Press

LISBON, Portugal — The United States and Soviet Union moved closer to a summit Saturday, settling their last differences over a treaty that will slash nonnuclear forces in Europe.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III and Soviet Foreign Minister Alexander A. Bessmertnykh worked out the agreement during more than three hours of talks here, where they met for the signing of the pact to end 16 years of civil war in Angola.

President Bush hailed the settlement for "clearing the way for an important step toward a superpower summit."

"This is important for world peace," Bush said in a commencement speech at the U.S. Military Academy in West Pont, N.Y.

But it wasn't clear the two sides could meet their announced goal of bringing Bush and Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev together in Moscow by the end of June.

Baker, with Bessmertnykh at his side, said negotiators would resume work immediately on a "much more intensive basis than before" to settle the remaining technical issues holding up agreement on a Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty that would slash long-range nuclear weapons by about one-third.

"We would like to see a summit in Moscow that would result in the signing of a strategic arms treaty," Baker said.

Bessmertnykh, emphasizing the Soviets' interest in the same goal, said he and Baker discussed "the possi-

Escapee caught

A convicted drug dealer who escaped from a bailiff at the Midland County Courthouse on Friday was back in custody Saturday afternoon, Midland County Sheriff Gary Painter said. Painter said he arrested the woman, 28-year-old Tonya Delaine Hayes, around 2:30 p.m. Saturday near the intersection of Jefferson Street and California Avenue in southeast Midland. The arrest followed a tip from a cab driver who gave the woman a ride, Painter said. Deputies transported Ms. Hayes to the Midland County Central Detention Facility after the arrest. She had escaped around 2 p.m. following her sentencing to 12 years in prison on cocaine distribution charges in 238th District Court before Judge John Hyde. Painter said the woman escaped when a bailiff who allowed her to use a phone became distracted. If convicted of escape, Ms. Hayes could face up to 10 years in prison and a $5,000 fine.

Texas twisters

At least one tornado raked parts of West Texas and the Panhandle Saturday, uprooting trees and damaging roofs, while thunderstorms produced large hail. One twister skirted the Childress-Cottle County line shortly before 5 p.m., but no injuries were reported, said authorities. Marble-size hail pelted downtown Childress, where a sheriff's dispatcher said streets were flooded. The dispatcher, who would not be identified, said trees and power lines were downed by winds.

Rain 'postponed'

KOSZALIN, Poland — Pope John Paul II, who started his fourth pilgrimage to Poland Saturday under a drizzle and in a stiff wind off the Baltic, said he went to a nearby mountain known for miracles and prayed for better weather.

John Paul

"One should admit that He kept his word," he said at the end of an outdoor Mass. The skies had threatened but withheld a downpour. "I said I was thankful that it rains, but asked for a certain postponement," the pope recalled.

Williams publishes monthly magazine

■ Local oilman says he will use 'Eye on Texas' newsletter to keep in contact with his supporters.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Defeated GOP gubernatorial nominee Clayton Williams is keeping his focus on the state's political scene with a new monthly newsletter that has been mailed to 150,000 supporters, a campaign aide said.

The Midland oilman said he plans to use the newsletter, "Eye on Texas," to follow through on a campaign promise to maintain contact with his supporters.

On the cover of the 12-page publication, which touts a conservative political philosophy, Williams calls the journal "a battle plan for better government."

"When I ran for governor, I promised, win or lose, I would stay in touch with you and would keep speaking out on key issues," Williams said.

" 'Eye on Texas' is my way of doing that. The articles are interesting and the practical common-sense tips will be helpful in making your voice heard," he said.

Instead of just talking about what is wrong with state government, he said, the newsletter will include a special section called "Take Action" that tells readers what to do to make

LHS junior bored with high school is ready for college

■ Korea native Kathy Kang has qualified for early admission to NTSU's Academy of Math and Science.

By Myra Lee Salcedo

High school seniors attending North Texas State University in Denton next fall, may not notice a junior in their midst.

They may not notice Lee High School junior Kathy Kang because she would fit right in among the brightest academically.

The super-achieving student has already been accepted for early admission to NTSU's Academy of Math and Science, designed for high school juniors who can qualify for the program.

The two-year program will allow Kathy to complete high school while garnering college credits.

Once completing the two-year program, Kathy plans to transfer to the University of Texas in Austin and major in pre-med. After leaving NTSU she will be looking at hitting the books for eight more years before becoming a pediatrician.

Getting a license to practice medicine will be the crowning achievement for Kathy, who started third grade in Midland without speaking a word of English.

"She didn't even know her A,B,C's," said Sue Kang, Kathy's mother. Ms. Kang explained

Many students fail TAAS, TEA says

■ Education group says more than 60 percent of nearly 63,000 students who took the state-mandated exam failed.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — More than 60 percent of the students who took the state's redesigned high school graduation test in April failed, preliminary results show.

The results on the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills graduation exam indicate that only two of every five juniors who were tested achieved a passing score, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

The Texas Education Agency released the results Friday. Almost 63,000 students were tested statewide.

April was the second time the test was administered. The first time was in October, when nearly 175,000 juniors took the math, reading and writing exam. More than two-thirds passed.

Students are given four chances to pass the exam, two in their junior year and two in their senior year. Those who cannot pass by the fourth try are ineligible to receive a diploma.

That means about 38,000 students statewide — one of every five in next year's senior class — are at risk of not graduating

Task force seizes cocaine

Staff Report

ODESSA — A drug bust in Ector County on Friday night netted 30 pounds of cocaine with an estimated street value of $14 million, Permian Basin Drug Task Force Commander Tom Finley reported.

Finley said task force officers found the cocaine while executing a search warrant at a south Bonanza Street house about 7:30 p.m. Friday. Two people, Alejo Carrasco Gonzalez Sr., 56, and his wife, Eduwijes Mendoza Gonzalez, 54, were arrested in the raid.

The couple was booked on charges of aggravated possession of cocaine and failure to obtain narcotic tax stamps, Finley said. They were being held at the Ector County jail on $100,000 bond each for the possession charges and $7,500 bond each for the tax charges.

In addition to the cocaine, officers seized $61,000 in cash at the house along with numerous handguns and rifles, Finley said.

Finley said the arrests, assisted by the Ector County sheriff's office, district attorney's office and constable's office, followed a week-long investigation.

De Vaughn touches lives of many residents on Midland's eastside

By Brian Pearson
Staff Writer

He has organized a youth drug abuse program, helped launch a black college student group and captured the hearts — and votes — of his community in less than a year.

And on Monday, the Rev. Michael De Vaughn is scheduled to be sworn in as the city's first black councilman. At 31, he will be the youngest councilman in recent memory.

"I also think I might be the youngest pastor in town, but wisdom does not necessarily come with age," De Vaughn said last week.

The soft-spoken De Vaughn, who came to town in July 1990, has hit east Midland like an organizational whirlwind, affecting the lives of everyone from children to senior citizens.

On Sundays he preaches before an 80-member congregation at St. Paul Christian Methodist Episcopal Church, 409 S. Lee St.

Between Sundays, he immerses himself in a multitude of civic activities, serving as an adviser here and a director there.

But his social burden apparently was not enough, so he added politics to his community involvement.

De Vaughn defeated Jose Alfredo "Beau" Zertuche by 15 votes on May 4 to capture the District 2 seat, which represents east Midland.

He said fellow residents of his community encouraged his candidacy.

"They had some concerns for the community and I had some concerns for the community, so I decided to run," he said.

Born in Boston, De Vaughn moved to a small, predominantly white Indiana town as a child and grew up there.

Music and religion were the ropes

SUMMIT: Bush hails agreement as 'important for world peace'

(From 1A)

bility of having a summit at the earliest possible date." But no date was set.

National Security Adviser Brent Scowcroft said Saturday there were four or five major questions remaining in the START talks, but that the treaty was largely completed.

Asked about a late June summit, he said: "I wouldn't rule it out, but it's ambitious."

A summit to sign START has been the goal of both sides for a year, but Bush hasn't ruled out meeting Gorbachev to discuss such issues as the collapsing Soviet economy even if the treaty isn't ready for signature.

U.S. officials have said the remaining treaty issues are technical. They include how to supervise the production of mobile missiles and monitor their testing.

Also in dispute is the encoding of data generated during missile tests.

The START talks in Geneva have continued in recent months, and minor issues have been settled. But the United States had made clear it wouldn't devote the high-level attention necessary to resolve major disputes until the conventional weapons treaty was settled.

Baker said he and Bessmertnykh resolved the final sticking points that have held up ratification of the conventional arms treaty since its signing by 22 nations in Paris in November.

"We have an agreement in principle that will resolve those issues," Baker told reporters, adding the settlement will be submitted to the other 20 countries, which are expected to approve it.

The treaty requires the Soviets and their former Warsaw Pact allies to destroy tens of thousands of tanks, armored combat vehicles and artillery pieces and sets limits on all conventional forces from the Atlantic to the Urals. Experts agree it means no European country will retain the ability to launch a non-nuclear surprise attack against a neighbor.

Baker said the agreement "maintains the full integrity and credibility" of the Paris document but declined to say how the differences were resolved.

The United States had accused the Soviets of going back on their word, trying to escape the treaty's ceilings by transferring some equipment to coastal defense units and contending ground forces assigned to naval units were exempt from the accord.

After weeks of negotiations, some of which involved Bush and Gorbachev directly, the last remaining issue on CFE had been whether 1,107 tanks and other pieces of equipment assigned to Soviet naval infantry units — similar to U.S. Marines — would be counted under the limits established by the treaty.

A senior U.S. official, asking not to be identified, said part of that dispute was resolved when the Soviets agreed to convert some armored personnel carriers in a way that reduces their capacity for transporting personnel. He did not elaborate.

Taking advantage of the high-level gathering in Lisbon to discuss other business, Baker and Bessmertnykh held separate meetings with Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk al-Sharaa.

Baker gave al-Sharaa what he described as "a very detailed letter" from Bush to Syrian President Hafez al-Assad on the administration's proposal's for setting up Arab-Israeli talks.

Al-Sharaa said the two-hour meeting with Baker was useful, but neither he nor Baker answered questions about the contents of the letter.

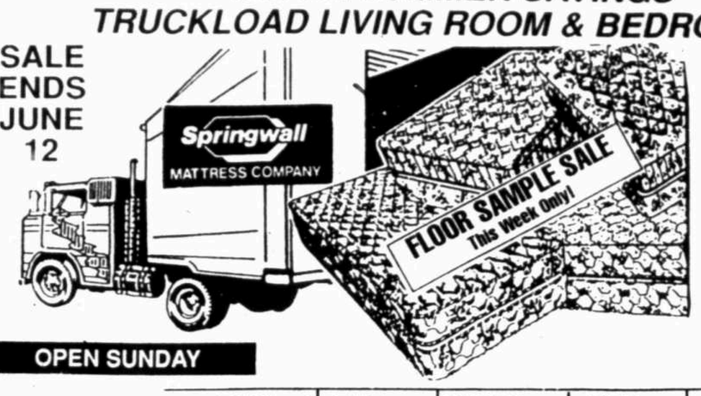

The Washington Post, citing sources in Lisbon, said Bush asks Assad in the letter to compromise and agree to attend a Middle East peace conference with Israel.

Clinton to LULAC: Democratic Party faces uphill battle in '92

WACO (AP) — The Democratic Party faces a tough battle to unseat President Bush and needs a solid message to defeat him, Arkansas Gov. Bill Clinton told Texas Hispanic leaders Saturday.

Clinton said Bush gained popularity in Operation Desert Storm's success, and Democrats' chances in 1992 depend on whether voters remember the victory and how they evaluate the nation's economy.

"I believe a lot of people know that all is not well in America, but they don't think the Democrats have a better idea," Clinton told the Texas League of United Latin American Citizens' convention.

The governor, who has been mentioned as a possible presidential candidate, said he has too much business to take care of in Arkansas, but he didn't rule out a bid.

"We're not going to bring this country together until our social policy reflects our values," said Clinton. "If we're pro-family, we ought to be for child care for working families and for family leave to take care of children when they're born or sick, but we also ought to say being pro-family means taking care of your kids."

Earlier Saturday, an attorney once ousted as the Texas LULAC's head focused on the group's challenges attacked the Bush Administration's decision to oppose civil rights legislation now in Congress.

"It is extremely sad to note that in the country that is the most advanced democracy in the world, we have a president that wants to water down that law," said John T. Garcia, immediate past state director.

"Water it down so that there are no teeth and no ability to enforce equal rights for minority workers as well as women workers at the job sites."

He added that financial and other personal pressures forced him to resign earlier this year.

"Since they (the national group) had taken the state treasury, I was paying for everything out of my own pocket," said Garcia, an El Paso attorney.

"Plus my partners wanted me to get back to work."

Elections of a new state director and other LULAC state officers were scheduled Sunday at the Waco Convention Center.

Soon after Garcia was elected in May 1990 to his second full one-year term as state director, opposition grew. Some questioned councils that received accreditation by Jose Garcia de Lara, then-LULAC national president who Garcia succeeded as state director in 1988.

"The national organization is in charge of checking the accreditation of the local councils," said Garcia.

Jose Velez, who defeated de Lara in the 1990 race for national president, was pressured to look into Garcia's election, officials said. The national office then impounded the LULAC state treasury to pay for a legal judgment against a Texas district.

Velez then named Robert Perez as interim state director, ousting Garcia. He filed suit to block his removal and regain control of the state treasury.

"Since I was the main person trying to get the money back, they tried to remove me. That is why I sued to protect my position," Garcia said.

He voluntarily stepped down in February in what he said was a compromise to remove questions about his or any other LULAC state officer's election.

IRS to let Nelson release album Monday

AUSTIN (AP) — Willie Nelson is hoping to receive more than 3 million answers to the question asked in the title of his latest album called "Who'll Buy My Memories?: The IRS Tapes."

The Internal Revenue Service has agreed to let Nelson release the album Monday. Nelson says he believes the record can solve his tax problems.

"I owe them $17 million," said an upbeat Nelson, whose royalties of $6 per album will help defray his debt to the IRS for back taxes, interest and penalties. "Three million copies will give me $18 million, and I'll have a million to go get drunk with."

The album, which will be sold through telephone orders only, will be marketed during a 12-month campaign engineered by the Austin-based Television Group Inc.

"Willie Nelson has all the right components for success with this," said Television Group President Brian Godinez. "Everybody loves Willie Nelson."

Commercial spots featuring Kris Kristofferson and Paul Rodriguez promote the album as "the opportunity to watch an artist at work up close and personal."

"I'd always wanted to put out an album of just me and my guitar," Nelson told the Austin American-Statesman.

The selection of material for "Who'll Buy My Memories?" befits a man in the midst of troubled times. Songs such as "It's Not Supposed To Be That Way", "What Can You Do To Me Now" and "Wake Me When It's Over" could be considered comments on Nelson's financial crisis.

Thunderstorms in forecast

Staff Report

The National Weather Service forecast for today calls for partly cloudy skies, with a high near 90 and a 20 percent chance of afternoon thunderstorms. Winds will be from the southeast at 10 to 20 mph. Tonight will remain partly cloudy, with a 20 percent chance of showers and a low in the mid 60s.

Monday is expected to be mostly cloudy, with a high near 90.

Saturday's high was 94, seven degrees off the June 1 record of 101 set in 1958. Saturday's low was 73. The record low for today's date is 48 degrees, set in 1970.

STATE

Mostly cloudy skies and warm temperatures were reported across Texas Saturday.

Widely scattered showers and isolated afternoon thunderstorms developed over the piney woods of Northeast Texas, while severe thunderstorms formed in the Panhandle.

A tornado watch was posted for much of Northwest Texas. At least one twister skirted the Childress-Cottle County line shortly before 5 p.m., but no injuries were reported, said authorities.

Forecasters said the chance for thunderstorms and possible tornadoes would linger across North and West Texas through the weekend because of a dry line separating moist Gulf air from drier air to the west. It was expected to be sunny to the west of the line and cloudy to the east of it. Temperatures were to remain seasonally warm with highs in the 80s and 90s.

NATION

Thunderstorms rumbled through parts of the nation's midsection Saturday, deluging parts of Minnesota, Nebraska, Iowa, Missouri and Kansas with up to 5 inches of rain.

A cold front began cooling areas in the Midwest and the East that had suffered abnormally high temperatures most of the week, producing a vertical band of thunderstorms than stretched from Texas to Minnesota.

A tornado damaged buildings on two farms near Grant in south-central Nebraska about dawn, but no injuries were reported.

In Omaha, Neb., thousands of fans attending the College World Series took temporary cover in the lower level of Rosenblatt Stadium when a tornado warning was issued at the end of the game. Many of the more than 16,000 spectators had already driven away from the stadium.

Storms dumped nearly 5 inches of rain in the town of Coldwater in south-central Kansas and more than 4 inches east of Cairo in south-central Nebraska.

More than 4 inches of rain fell in parts of southwestern Minnesota and the central Missouri town of Marshall before dawn, and more than 3 inches fell at Huron, S.D. Heavy rain overflowed Beaver Creek in northeastern Iowa, flooding the town of Clarksville.

Storms and showers also were scattered from Missouri to Virginia, across the Southeast and the central Gulf Coast.

Showers dampened parts of Colorado and eastern Nevada, and snow coated the mountains of northern Utah and northern Arizona.

The Associated Press also contributed to this report.

PASTOR: De Vaughn to be sworn in that closely bound his middle-class family.

In fact, about the only time De Vaughn claims for himself today is his daily 30-minute appointment with classical music.

"People know not to call the house around 5:30 p.m.," he said. "Classical music clears my mind. It's very invigorating and inspiring. It's also relaxing."

Religion as a career did not weave its way into De Vaughn's life until he was a junior in college.

"I never wanted to be a minister," he said. "When I first started out I was in journalism."

Although he never abandoned writing and has composed award-winning columns for Abilene and Dallas newspapers, De Vaughn could not ignore the higher calling.

"When the Lord tells you to do things, you do them," he said. "Everything goes back to the church. I believe that the church has a responsibility to make the world a better place to live."

After attending Vincennes University in Indiana, De Vaughn received his bachelor's of arts degree from Indiana University in 1983. He then earned a master's of divinity degree from Perkins School of Theology at Southern Methodist University in Dallas.

He received the B'Nai B'rith award in social ethics and has studied at the Jerusalem Center for Biblical Studies in Jerusalem, Israel, and at the Gandhi Peace Foundation in New Delhi, India.

The abject poverty he witnessed in India during the summer of 1985 changed his life. Since then, he said helping people better their lives has been one of his goals.

Before moving to Midland last year, De Vaughn was pastor of Antioch C.M.E. Church in Abilene.

"The bishop sent me to Midland," said De Vaughn, who is unmarried. "They needed somebody here. You just go where the bishop sends you."

He now serves as chairman of Midland schools' Alternative School Advisory Board and is an adviser to the African-American Student Alliance at Midland College. He said he helped create the latter to keep black students in college.

"We had a problem with minority student retention," he said. "We had a problem with the black students feeling disenfranchised from the student group. I try to get the students involved in the college community and remind students how important it is to have an education."

De Vaughn serves on the Palmer Drug Abuse Program Board of Directors and organized a fourth PDAP satellite center in Midland last December. The chapter, known as the Kerr Center, operates out of De Vaughn's church.

The reverend also is a member of Citizens for Positive Change and the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People. In addition, he is a member of the Midland Opera Theater Board of Directors and Midland United Way Communications Board.

He organized the Drug Free Southside Rally held April 13 in Washington Park.

De Vaughn said he hopes to use his power as a councilman to push for economic development in east Midland and create more minority youth programs.

"I like Midland," he said. "There are a lot of good things here that need to be built upon."

Noting all of De Vaughn's work so far, the Rev. Hadley Edwards of Hollowell United Methodist Church said his fellow pastor's rise to the black community summit is no surprise.

"I think he is a committed, dedicated leader," Edwards said. "I think he has the heart of the people of his community.

"Even though he's wonderfully educated and has traveled worldwide, he is a down-home person. The time was right for a leader like that."

He said De Vaughn's work with young adults is as admirable as his ascent to a council seat.

"I've never seen anybody from the black community reach out to the students of the city that way," Edwards said. "I've also seen him really come to the forefront as far as the church was concerned. And I don't mean black people; I mean all people."

KANG: Scholar wants to be doctor

that the family moved to Midland from Korea when her daughter was in the third grade.

Even worse than not speaking English was the fact that Kathy kept falling asleep in class. Due to the difference in time zones, daytime in Midland was nighttime in Korea.

"Kathy kept calling me from school saying: Mother, I can't stay awake, what's wrong?" Ms. Kang said.

"It was quite an experience," Kathy said, laughing heartily at the memory. "It was a big adjustment, but I had good bilingual teachers," she said.

Despite her limited English proficiency and tendency to doze off in class, Kathy qualified for the school district's GEM (Gifted Education Midland) program by the sixth grade.

In the seventh grade her SAT (Scholastic Achievement Test) scores were high enough to be honored by the National Recognition Talent Search Program.

'It was quite an experience. It was a big adjustment, but I had good bilingual teachers.'

— Kathy Kang

"She is really a success story," said Patricia Maurer, Carver Cultural Center principal. "The scholarship offers she will receive if succeeding in the North Texas State program will be phenomenal — and I don't doubt that she can do it."

Ms. Maurer noted that Kathy's younger sister is following in her footsteps after completing the sixth grade in the GEM program.

Kathy said she wasn't sold on NTSU's program until Marlin Armstrong —, an LHS graduate already enrolled in the university's program — returned to Midland during spring break and expressed enthusiasm about it.

"My algebra teacher, Mrs. Stelling told me about it first," she said. "But seeing how excited Marlin was about it — and the fact that high school was getting boring — made me want to go."

Kathy said that Midland public schools afforded her "excellent opportunities" to excel, but she is ready for greater challenges.

Nonetheless, she has enrolled in Midland College to try her hand at college algebra. "I want to be sure that I can handle it," she said.

"The schools here are better than any other city I have been too," said Kathy, who also lived in Waco for several years.

Ms. Maurer said another LHS sophomore, Jennifer Howard, also has been accepted to the North Texas State program.

The sophomore has participated in spelling bees, and University Interscholastic League math competitions including Number Sense and MathCounts.

She also has participated in speech and debate tournaments. Kathy said she enjoys playing the piano and drawing when not retiring to the pristine study desk in her room.

Her mother said it's easy for Kathy to keep her desk clean since she seldom has to study. "I never see her open a book," she said.

Although she didn't read much at home, Kathy embarked on a year-long project of writing her own book in her younger years. "She worked on a book every day," Ms. Kang said. "She kept adding to it. It got lost when we moved."

"My husband (Joo-Won) and I are so proud of Kathy," Ms. Wang said. "She was also an excellent student in Korea."

Although the walls of her room boast eye-catching paintings, Kathy pooh-poohs the notion that she is also artistic. "All the good paintings are my sister's," she said, laughing. "She did all the good ones."

Judge rules pizza invented in Italy

By John Flinn
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — Smacking his lips after sampling the evidence, a San Francisco judge has ruled that pizza was invented in Italy, not China.

Municipal Court Judge George T. Choppelas rejected claims that the dish originated in China and was delivered to Italy by Marco Polo, in sort of an early forerunner of Dominoes.

Choppelas, presiding at lunchtime last Wednesday before a room full of growling stomachs at the Court of Historical Review and Appeals, heard testimony from restaurateurs and historians.

Annie Soo, publicist for the Chinese Historical Society, and Joe Ling Jung, a restaurant owner, told the court that today's pizza is the direct descendant of ping tze — flat cakes filled with delicacies and spices, served to the children of the Empress Dowager in the early 13th century.

The recipe, they testified, was taken back to Italy by Marco Polo in 1271. Italian housewives made a number of modifications, including the use of what was then called the "poisonous love apple," and is today known as the tomato.

But restaurateur Gino Biradelli and chef Maurice St. Ives told the court that pizza originated in Italy around 1000 B.C. The name, St. Ives said, is a bastardization of the Greek word picea, which described something baking on a hot slab.

There was no question which side the hungry audience favored, at least not after Biradelli sliced up and passed around "Exhibit B."

The Court of Historical Review and Appeals is a mock court that convenes a couple of times a year and deals with questions of San Francisco history as well as weighty issues such as whether Santa Claus was a man or a woman (Santa could be either sex, the panel ruled).

Several years ago, Choppelas ruled against China and for Italy in another food debate. Contrary to some claims, he ruled, spaghetti was invented in Italy.

TAAS: Test harder, officials say

if they cannot master the test in the 1991-92 school year.

Those students are having trouble with the test even though they are required to answer only 60 percent of the questions correctly to pass. The State Board of Education set the lower passing standard for the first year of the exam so that students would have some time to adjust.

Next year, students will have to answer 70 percent of the items correctly to pass.

About 51 percent of Anglo students who took the test in April passed, with 32 percent of Hispanics and 28 percent of blacks passing.

State education officials said they were not surprised by the difficulty some students are having with the new test. They noted that it is much more difficult than the exam it replaced — the Texas Educational Assessment of Minimum Skills.

"The numbers clearly show that the TAAS is a more difficult test," said Keith Cruse, TEA director of student assessment.

Cruse also said the numbers probably won't improve next year.

state government better.

"I am convinced that together we can make Texas a better place to live and a better place to raise our families," Williams said. "If we don't take responsibility for our future, we have no one to blame but ourselves."

A subscription to the newsletter costs $28 before June 30, or $39 after that date.

Democrats criticized what they called the steep price tag.

"$28 a year?" said Ed Martin, executive director of the Texas Democratic Party.

"That sounds like an awful expensive magazine for most Texans to invest in. But I guess most Republicans can afford it," he told the Austin American-Statesman.

Buddy Barfield, a spokesman for Williams, said the organizers are seeking subscriptions to pay for the newsletter.

"It gets to be very expensive when you're dealing with a group this size," he said.

Barfield said the publication would pay for itself if 10,000 people subscribe.

The first issue of "Eye on Texas" features articles by four elected officials: U.S. Rep. Dick Armey, R-Lewisville; state Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland; state Rep. John Culberson, R-Houston; and Comptroller John Sharp, a Democrat.

Councilman's link to alleged kingpin under investigation

HOUSTON (AP) — Indicted City Councilman Ben Reyes may face more charges if prosecutors prove there is a link between him and an alleged drug king pin.

Reyes, 44, posted $8,000 bond Friday on four felony indictments related to campaign contributions, razing abandoned buildings he believed were crack houses and taking a magnolia tree from one of the yards. His arraignment is scheduled for June 27, when he will plead innocent, said his lawyer, Mike Ramsey.

The indictments handed down Thursday capped a 14-month investigation by the Harris County district attorney's office and a 10-week probe by the grand jury.

Prosecutors have said they are continuing to examine allegations of Reyes' involvement in other matters, including bribery. They also confirmed they are probing the relationship between Reyes and members of a narcotics ring linked to organized crime in Chicago.

Reyes may have received favors from reputed drug dealer Marco Antonio Jaramillo in exchange for helping Jaramillo obtain a lucrative city license, prosecutors said.

Jaramillo, owner of Atlas Body and Paint Shop in southeast Houston, is serving time in a Mexican prison on a counterfeiting charge and federal prosecutors hope to try him in Houston on unrelated drug indictments, Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Shelby said.

But a federal agent told The Houston Post that Reyes is only one of many "small fish" on the periphery of the drug trafficking ring. The agent, who asked to remain anonymous, said the councilman probably had no knowledge of what was going on.

"He (Reyes) was one of dozens of small fish — officials, business people, small-time criminals — in Houston and several other cities who were used by the ring without really being part of it," the agent said.

Ramsey denied Reyes had any connection to drug trafficking.

"There is absolutely — to my knowledge — no allegation, no investigation, having anything to do with drugs," Ramsey said. "Nothing. Zero. Zip."

In early 1989, Jaramillo sought help from Reyes' office because the city denied him a license to operate an emergency wrecker truck. The permit allows operators to tow vehicles from collision scenes and other roadside emergencies.

Jaramillo, like every other applicant in 1989, had been turned down for the "E tag" by the city's director of finance and administration. But after he spoke to Reyes, council members voted unanimously in May 1989 to override the decision and grant the license.

Jaramillo later transferred the permit to his wife, Dora, in March 1990, because he was "'out of town a lot." Dora Jaramillo transferred the tag to Samuel Garcia of Worldwide Wrecker Service in Bellaire in May 1990.

Prosecutors are looking into allegations that Reyes had free work done on his car at Jaramillo's body shop, which could be considered a gift to a public servant or bribery, the source told the newspaper.

Harris County District Attorney John B. Holmes Jr. said a connection between Reyes and the Jaramillo family is not necessarily grounds for indictment.

"It is not a crime for anybody, public official or otherwise, to associate with folks who are not necessarily of good character," Holmes said.

Jaramillo was among several defendants indicted by a Houston federal grand jury last August for allegedly taking part in a marijuana ring that smuggled more than five tons of narcotics into the United States in three years.

That indictment claimed the organization's kingpin was Jaramillo's half-brother, Manuel "Poncho" Jaramillo, a Mission resident accused of dealing with both a Matamoros drug cult and a Chicago mob boss.

U.S. District Judge Sim Lake last month sentenced Manuel Jaramillo to 15 years in prison.

Arizona doctor debunks snakebite treatment

Associated Press

DALLAS — Shocking snakebite victims with a jolt of electricity only delays proper treatment and could do more harm than good, a doctor warns.

The use of high-voltage, low-current electric shock treatment for snakebite has been investigated since a 1986 report in the British medical journal Lancet.

After being consulted on a rattlesnake victim who tried the shock therapy, an Arizona toxicologist concluded there is no evidence to support the use of electric shock for treatment of pit viper and spider bites or scorpion stings.

"The best treatment for snakebite is a set of car keys" to get to the hospital, Dr. Richard C. Dart said Friday in a telephone interview from Tucson.

His article is contained in the June issue of the Annals of Emergency Medicine, the journal of the American College of Emergency Physicians and the Society for Academic Emergency Medicine. The journal is published in Irving.

The Lancet report was based on the practice of natives in Ecuador who used outboard boat motors to administer first aid shocks by attaching a wire to the spark plug.

A simpler method was devised by a company that marketed modified stun guns for treatment of snakebites. Sale of the devices was banned in 1990 by the Food and Drug Administration.

Dart, director of the toxicology program at the University of Arizona Health Sciences Center, said he can see why.

"We cannot find a beneficial effect even when applied under ideal conditions," said Dart, who has experimented with animals and who interviewed a 28-year-old ex-Marine knocked unconscious by a shock treatment.

The Arizona man had been bitten near the upper lip by his pet rattlesnake. Because he had read an article about snake treatment in an outdoors magazine, he asked a neighbor to shock him.

"The patient was placed supine next to a car and a spark plug wire was attached to his upper lip by a wire with a small clip at each end," Dart wrote. "The engine was started and repeatedly gunned to 3,000 rpm for approximately five minutes. The patient lost consciousness with the first electrical charge."

The man was taken to a hospital, where he was successfully treated with antivenin.

Dart is concerned that the folklore about electroshock could delay needed medical treatment.

"I can imagine these guys are out hunting and they shock themselves and decide to have a few drinks and end up dying," he said.

In addition to being a useless substitute for medical treatment for snakebite, electric shocks could cause burns, he warned.

Dart said treatment with antivenin remains the best treatment for snakebite. In the event a patient is more than a couple of hours away from a hospital, the doctor said, a constricting band can be used temporarily while the patient is being transported.

"Just a constriction band, not a tourniquet," he said. "It should be snug, not tight. You should be able to put a finger under it."

The doctor also cautioned against using the cut-and-suck method or application of ice packs. Neither of them is effective he said.

Controversial thrift owner to sell Bluebonnet Savings

DALLAS (AP) — James M. Fail, the controversial owner of Bluebonnet Savings Bank, has agreed to sell the thrift he acquired from the federal government at a bargain rate in 1988.

Fail put up $1,000 of his own money to buy the thrift, which operates with the help of more than $200 million in annual federal subsidies. He borrowed the remaining $85 million from a group of insurance companies controlled by Robert Shaw of Kentucky.

During congressional hearings last year, Bluebonnet became a buzzword for fast deals involving failed thrifts and questionable buyers. Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, revealed that Fail's company pleaded guilty in the 1970s to felony charges in an Alabama insurance scandal.

Fail has agreed to sell Bluebonnet to a group led by former MCorp vice chairman James B. Gardner, The Dallas Morning News reported Saturday.

Those same insurance firms that financed the 1988 purchase will finance Gardner's acquisition of Bluebonnet Savings, according to an application filed in March with federal regulators.

Shaw has agreed to forgive Fail's loans in return for control of Bluebonnet Savings. In addition, Shaw's insurance companies would guarantee Fail a $25,000 monthly income through the end of 1998.

Shaw and his insurance companies would hold no management role at Bluebonnet Savings, said Gardner, who would become chairman of the $3.2 billion thrift.

Since he gained control of Bluebonnet Savings, Fail's personal finances have deteriorated. Several Arizona-based insurance companies he owns have since come under state control.

'Greater Tuna' takes final curtain call in Austin tonight

By Suzanne Miller
Associated Press writer

DALLAS — Not many men who dress as women get invited to the White House.

But Joe Sears and Jaston Williams, who play a variety of male and female characters in the long-running hit play "Greater Tuna," have received that honor twice, and they couldn't be more flattered.

"Being asked to play at the White House is the highest honor we ever received," said Sears, "and being asked twice is the second highest honor."

Sears and Williams have toured nationally to critical acclaim with "Greater Tuna" for over a decade. The play's final curtain call is Sunday night at Austin's Paramount Theater.

"Greater Tuna," written by Sears and Williams with Joe Edwards, was the first vehicle to feature the colorful characters from Tuna, a mythical small town in Texas. The play has spawned a sequel, "A Tuna Christmas," and a third play in the works, "Red, White and Tuna," will round out the Tuna trilogy.

The colorful characters from Tuna return to the White House on June 12 to perform at a luncheon for congressional wives. The performance will consist of new material in which all the ladies from Tuna are taken on a tour of the White House by the First Lady.

Sears and Williams execute their comedy on a minimal set, as they convincingly mime a good deal of their props. A stretch of Texas desert is painted on the backdrop; a sign for Lone Star beer hangs overhead. A smorgasbord of country music, sprinkled liberally with Patsy Cline, plays throughout the production.

The two actors go through costume changes like lightning. As the play opens they portray two middle-aged country disc jockeys reading out the news to greater Tuna from "Radio OKKK." Williams wanders off stage for a brief moment and reappears as hard-boiled Edith Snavely, who pitches a spot for her used weapons shop.

By the next scene Sears transforms into a loud country woman with big bouffant hair, and Williams, portraying her son, slouches onto the stage sporting a bandanna headband and Zig-Zag tee shirt.

"Greater Tuna" is a zany "Our Town." It premiered Off-Broadway in October 1982, and has been staged from the Kennedy Center in Washington, D.C. to the Marine Memorial Theatre in San Francisco.

It was at a performance of "A Tuna Christmas" at the Kennedy Center in 1990 that President and Mrs. Bush first encountered the characters from Tuna. They were smitten.

"They came back and congratulated us on the fun time," Sears said in a telephone interview from Austin. "They had us to the White House to perform in February 1990 at the governor's conference. Both are good laughers; they have good, hearty laughs."

While audiences in D.C. and San Francisco have been appreciative, Austin is where "Greater Tuna" is most heartfelt. "The folks in Austin are very smart people," Sears said.

Sales were brisk for the show's final week. "We're just about sold out," said Bob Tolaro, operations manager at the Paramount. "Austin has typically responded in cult fashion to the show."

Sears claims most of the on-the-road experiences with "Greater Tuna" have been good ones, but a few rough evenings do stand out.

"Occasionally we've had to ad-lib," he said. "In L.A. a drunk got on stage with me when I was playing Pearl. When Pearl ignored him he started singing a song."

Another bumpy night occurred in San Francisco. "In 1989 we opened two weeks after the big earthquake," Sears said. "There was a swimming pool in the bottom of the building; the pool's cleaning system turned on, and everyone thought it was another earthquake. We all had some damp underwear on that one."

Not all their venues have been in big cities. "We did play a small town called Gruene, Texas. It barely had one stoplight," said Sears. "The entire town showed up and had a wonderful time. The whole front row was wearing overalls."

Refined or rural, audiences all over appreciate the show's irony, Sears said.

"Everybody gets it. We are not making fun of our characters. We are having fun with them."

How To Improve Your Home.

1. Think Before You Redo.

Consider the changes you'd like to make to your home. An updated kitchen. A new or remodeled bath. A larger master bedroom. Or maybe even a deck. If the improvements you have in mind are few, remodeling is a great idea. But if they add up to completely redesigning your entire home, you might want to reconsider.

Here's a basic cost guideline: If the investment raises the value of your home more than 15% above the highest-valued homes in your neighborhood, you may want to reevaluate your improvement plans. If you do "overimprove," it could be difficult to recoup your full investment.

But then, resale value isn't the only issue. After all, you're the one who lives in your home. Any improvement may be worthwhile if you have no plans to sell.

So use the 15% guideline to set a maximum budget.

Then let your imagination take over.

Think about the way you live in your home.

Consider improvements that enhance the value of your home.

Improvements That Pay Off*

Project	Average Cost	Average Recovery
Major kitchen remodel	$20,906	98%
Minor kitchen remodel	8,320	100%
Family room addition	30,303	88%
Bath remodel	7,574	88%
Bath addition	10,867	98%
Master bedroom suite	21,680	88%
Sun room addition	15,560	79%

What features make the most sense for your family? List the specific things you want. Make your own rough sketches. Clip photos from magazines.

Try to plan your improvement to blend with the style and character of your home.

And remember, the more homework you do, the easier it gets.

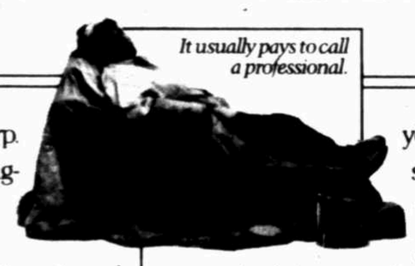

2. Be Prepared.

But no matter how much homework you do, it's still never easy. A major home improvement sometimes can be just as difficult as moving, take longer to finish and end up costing more. Many times, choosing the right remodeler makes all the difference.

Start by calling your local chapter of the National Association of the Remodeling Industry (NARI) or the National Association of Home Builders Remodelers Council (NAHB/RC). Your local Home Owners Warranty Corp. (HOW) Council can also make suggestions on participating home remodelers.

You should discuss the specifics of your job with at least three remodelers. Ask for references and inspect a few finished jobs firsthand. Choose the lowest bid only if you're convinced it provides quality materials and workmanship. (Make sure your contractor is insured, licensed and bonded. And don't make any decisions without first contacting the Better Business Bureau. They can give you a customer-experience report on your contractor.)

Once you've selected a contractor,

It usually pays to call a professional.

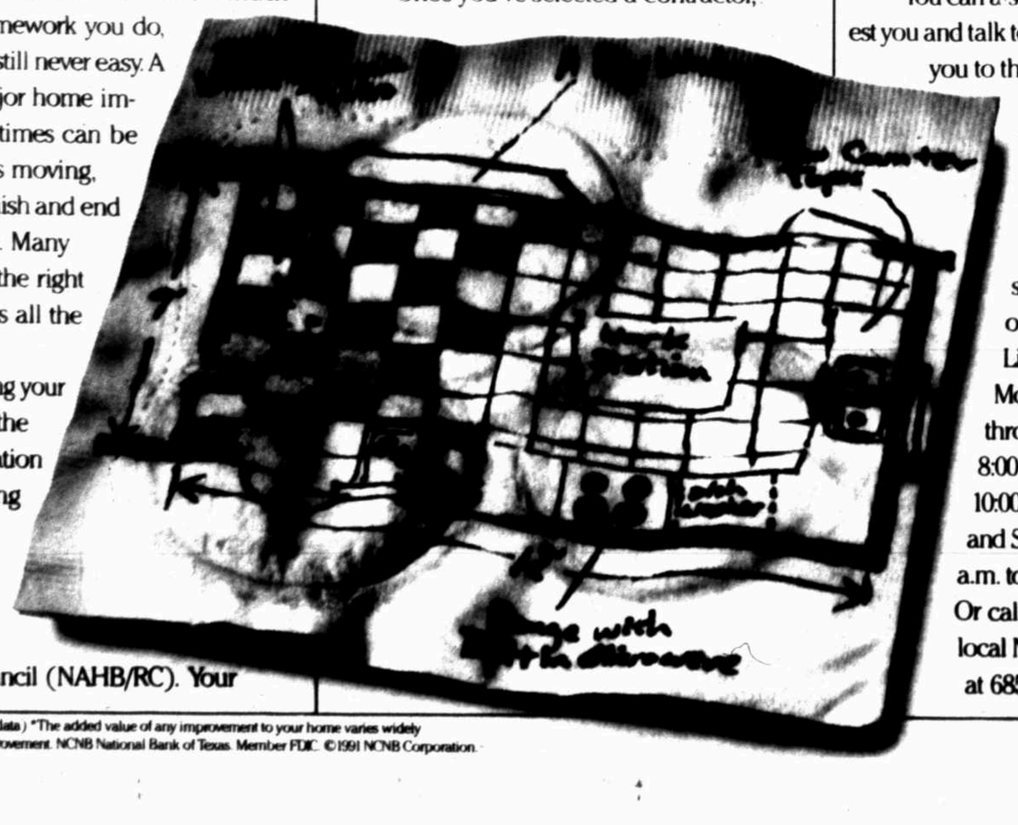

your written contract should spell out all the details of the job: total price, payment schedule, cancellation rights, timetable, job specs, cleanup provisions, permits, inspections and warranties.

■ World Pork Expo turns into sticky mess

DES MOINES, Iowa — The day after an animal rights activist shoved a pie in the face of Iowa's Pork Queen, the other pie dropped.

Sandra O'Neall threw a whipped cream pie Saturday at a protester with People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals.

"Turnabout is fair play," O'Neall said after hitting 16-year-old Denise Berner with the pie outside the World Pork Expo.

O'Neall said animal rights activists are entitled to their view, but should not have taken it out on the Iowa Pork Queen, Dainna J'Ann Jellings.

Jellings, 19, was uninjured in Friday's incident by an anonymous animal rights activist dressed in a pig costume.

Robin Walker, a spokeswoman for the vegetarian advocates, said the action was taken to protest the killing of millions of hogs "to feed America's meat addiction."

The first pie-throwing incident alienated pig farmers on hand for the year's biggest pork trade show as well as an Iowa-based animal rights group.

Vicky Eide, founder and director of the 500-member Iowa Alliance for Animals, said she is urging Midwest animal rights activists to end their financial support for Washington, D.C.-based People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, which claims more than 350,000 members, including 2,000 in Iowa.

■ Operation Rescue defies ban, 200 arrested

BROOKLINE, Mass. — Police arrested up to 200 anti-abortion activists Saturday in the biggest test so far of a court order barring anti-abortion groups from obstructing access to clinics in Massachusetts.

The protest organized by the anti-abortion group Operation Rescue targeted three clinics where abortions are performed in Brookline, a suburb of Boston. One clinic, Repro Associates, closed.

Fifty Brookline police officers were initially dispatched to the three clinics early Saturday, said Police Lt. Daniel O'Leary. Later, all of the officers moved to one of the three, Repro Associates, when police determined it was the demonstration's focus.

About 500 people, both for and against abortion, blocked one side of Brookline Avenue for about two hours. Police called in a mechanic to extricate one protester who used a bike lock to attach himself to the underside of a bus.

Abortion rights activists said police were to blame for the clinic shutdown because they failed to respond quickly enough.

"This clinic has been closed down. People can't go to work, go in for an appointment," said Ellen Convisser, president of the Massachusetts chapter of the National Organization for Women. "The police let the community of Brookline down."

Last year, James M. Shannon, then the state attorney general, secured a court order barring anti-abortion groups from obstructing access to clinics in that state.

■ Cameramen may testify against reporter

GOLDEN, Colo. — Two cameramen facing charges of staging pit bull fights for television are negotiating plea bargains and may testify against the woman who reported the story, their lawyers said.

Former KCNC-TV cameramen James Stair and Scott Wright are expected to plead guilty within the next two weeks, with Stair likely to enter the plea on Monday, the lawyers said Friday.

If the plea agreements are accepted by Jefferson County Judge Gaspar Perricone, then Wendy Bergen, a former reporter for KCNC-TV, would stand trial alone June 17 on eight charges of perjury and illegal dogfighting.

Bergen, Stair and Wright were indicted in September by a Jefferson County grand jury on charges they staged pit bull fights and lied about it to a grand jury. All three resigned from the station. The grand jury also indicted the dogs' owner.

Stair's lawyer, Michael Enwall, said his client had agreed to testify against Bergen.

Bergen was indicted on two counts of perjury, one count of conspiracy to commit perjury, two counts of dogfighting, two counts of promoting a dogfight and one count of hindering prosecution.

Prosecutors said she staged an illegal pit bull fight for her series "Blood Sport," which aired on KCNC-TV Channel 4 during the 1990 spring sweeps period. Sweeps is the name for a national rating survey of local stations for determining advertising rates.

■ Nuclear plant leaks radioactive coolant

CRYSTAL RIVER, Fla. — A Florida Power Corp. nuclear plant leaked radioactive coolant, but a utility spokesman said Saturday the incident posed no danger.

Control room operators noticed pressurized water that circulates around the reactor core and keeps it from overheating was leaking Thursday night at a rate of 40 to 48 gallons a minute from a valve stem inside the reactor building.

"There was no breach of safety," Florida Power spokesman Mark Jacobs said.

The equivalent of about two bathtubs full of the coolant leaked from a closed system and drained into a collection system designed to catch leaks, then was circulated back into the coolant system, he said.

■ University asks Nutri-System to drop ads

STANFORD, Calif. (AP) — Stanford University said its name and logo were used without permission in an advertising campaign for the Nutri-System diet program.

"Stanford University has not conducted any research involving Nutri-System and does not approve of (or) endorse Nutri-System," the school's senior counsel, Susan K. Hoerger, said Friday in a statement.

Stanford said it asked Nutri-System Inc. to stop running the ads and inform the public that the university has not endorsed the program or conducted research on it.

Flawed equipment forces shuttle scrub

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Failed navigation equipment on space shuttle Columbia postponed until at least Wednesday a biomedical research mission involving seven astronauts, 30 rats and a crowded nursery of jellyfish.

Less than an hour before the scheduled 8 a.m. EDT liftoff Saturday, one of the shuttle's three navigational units failed the third in a series of last-minute tests.

Launch director Bob Sieck informed the astronauts, already on board and waiting for Columbia's rockets to fire: "It looks like it isn't a flyable machine."

Mission commander Bryan O'Connor said later that the crew was very disappointed but that "we all realize that there are millions of parts involved in this vehicle and that it's a miracle when we do launch."

Columbia's voyage 184 miles above Earth will be the 41st flight of a space shuttle and the first mission in 5½ years for Spacelab, a laboratory module in the cargo bay.

It was the second time an equipment failure forced postponement of the mission. A May 22 launch attempt was called off with a day to go because of computer trouble and concern over fuel temperature sensors, one of which was cracked.

With that equipment replaced, the countdown had moved smoothly until Columbia's navigation system turned troublesome. That means a launch probably at 8 a.m. EDT Wednesday, but certainly not before then, Sieck said.

Space shuttles have three inertial measuring units, or IMUs, and only one is required to control the craft's navigation. But the National Aeronautics and Space Administration requires all three to be working properly before a launch.

Columbia's No. 2 IMU began giving misreadings during a test of the navigation system several hours before the planned liftoff. While the countdown continued, engineers tested the IMU a second and then a third time. Finally, they gave up and a halt was ordered.

"Nice try," Sieck said. "A lot of hard work was not rewarded today."

Officials said it will take until Monday to replace the IMU and a new countdown would start Tuesday.

The IMU's job is to measure each motion of the spacecraft. By constantly adding the effects of each movement to previous data, it is able to tell the shuttle's computer the precise navigational position of the craft at any point.

Launch workers removed the menagerie of 30 laboratory rats and 2,478 infant jellyfish that were put on board Columbia on Friday. Officials said a fresh group of rats and jellyfish will be used for the next launch attempt.

Columbia's mission is to be the most ambitious space shuttle effort yet to understand how the human body responds to spaceflight.

Studies in the Apollo, Skylab and Soviet space programs have shown that the weightlessness of space affects the heart, brain, blood, kidneys and bone. But physicians still don't understand what precisely is happening in the body at a cellular level.

On Columbia, four of the crew members are acting as guinea pigs for detailed studies of space travel on the human body.

One astronaut, cardiologist F. Andrew Gaffney, had a catheter inserted into his arm and threaded to a vein near his heart in preparation for Saturday's liftoff. The catheter was to have been removed about eight hours into the flight once Gaffney completed a series of tests. Doctors decided to leave it in him until Wednesday.

Actor Michael Landon too ill to attend center's dedication

MALIBU, Calif. (AP) — Cancer-stricken Michael Landon was too ill Saturday to attend dedication ceremonies for a community center named after him.

Landon

"My latest chemotherapy has knocked me on my butt," Landon said in a message read by his 25-year-old son, Michael Landon Jr.

More than 200 people, including family, friends, politicians and fans, witnessed the unveiling of a sign reading "Michael Landon Community Center."

The community center, a gray cinderblock structure surrounded by baseball fields in Malibu Bluffs Park, was a pet project of Landon's.

Landon, 54, is battling inoperable cancer of the pancreas and liver.

The star of the old TV series "Little House on the Prairie" and "Highway to Heaven" remained on his 10-acre horse ranch seven miles west of the new center, which was completed earlier this year and named for Landon after he announced he had cancer.

"I want to thank the Malibu City Council and the people of Malibu for this wonderful dedication," Landon said in the remarks read by his son.

"It means more to me than I can express in words. My younger children will be playing ball on this field someday and I hope, and I'm going to do my best, to be there watching them."

Landon's wife, Cyndi, and two of his younger children, Shawn and Jennifer, also were on hand.

7-year old close to journey's end

MORRISVILLE, N.C. (AP) — Daniel Shanklin says take-offs are the easiest part of flying, and with just one more, he'll end a cross-country journey that has focused national attention on him.

Shanklin

The soft-spoken 7-year-old Texan and his Cessna 172 arrived Saturday amidst the big passenger jets at Raleigh-Durham International Airport.

He'll spend the weekend in the Research Triangle area before returning to his red-and-white single-engine plane Monday morning about 9 a.m. Daniel will make his one-hour, 20-minute trip to First Flight Airport at Kitty Hawk, where the Wright Brothers made aviation history with their first powered flight.

But Daniel is looking forward to old-fashioned kid stuff.

"Go to the beach," Daniel said of his plans once he completes his journey. By landing on Monday, Daniel would be able to celebrate his eighth birthday on the ground Tuesday.

Daniel, flying with instructor Stuart Moon, landed shortly before 3 p.m. at the Raleigh-Durham airport. Their day started with a 9 a.m. departure from Athens, Ga., where Daniel and his grandparents spent the night. He got a haircut in the town, and even signed several autographs.

The next stop was Charlotte-Douglas International Airport, where the Shanklins held a news conference and ate lunch. On the hot and humid day, they left North Carolina's largest city shortly after 1:30 p.m., reaching altitudes of 12,000 feet.

Just before Daniel arrived at the general aviation facility, his grandfather Ken Shanklin flew in with his wife, Colleen, and Daniel's brother, Michael, 9, who is also a child pilot.

Shanklin said his second-grade grandson had logged 30 hours of flying before he began his trip in San Diego last Sunday from Lindbergh Field.

The NIMBY Syndrome

Americans welcome drug treatment centers, just 'not in my back yard'

By Carolyn Skorneck
Associated Press writer

OAKLAND, Calif. — People who live in the working-class Dimond area know this city needs more drug treatment centers. But when faced with the prospect of a facility for teen-agers in their neighborhood, their reaction was emphatic: No way.

"You put 60 kids in that neighborhood, you don't know what's going to happen," said Leonard Casanares, who lives on a street of Mediterranean-style homes built a half-century ago. "They can't keep them locked up all day."

Casanares and his neighbors successfully blocked a proposal from the respected Walden House organization, which wanted to put a drug treatment center in a former nursing home on busy Fruitvale Avenue. Two years later, the building remains vacant.

The scene is being played out in communities across the country — sure, let's treat people with drug problems, but Not In My Back Yard.

"The NIMBY syndrome continues to be the No. 1 obstacle" to increased treatment, even tougher than money problems, said Christopher Policano of New York-based Phoenix House, the country's largest private non-profit drug treatment agency.

Community resistance to such centers "severely undermines treatment availability goals and impedes our progress as a nation," said the Bush administration's National Drug Control Strategy.

"THERE'S NO MAGICAL solution to this," said Dan Schecter of the Office of National Drug Control Policy. "I think it's a problem that ultimately has to be solved at the community level by changing people's attitudes toward drug treatment."

An Associated Press poll on the subject reflected mixed attitudes.

Fifty-three percent of those surveyed said they would support putting a drug treatment center on the block where they live, 42 percent said they would oppose it and 5 percent said they didn't know or gave no answer.

The AP poll of 1,003 randomly selected adults was conducted in late April by ICR Survey Research Group of Media Pa.

Presented with a list of possible disadvantages of such a center, 36 percent said they believe crime would increase, 57 percent said property values would drop, 61 percent said the neighborhood's youngsters would be exposed to drug addicts and 47 percent said the neighborhood would be a less pleasant place to live.

If the poll is any indication, most Americans at least voice tolerance of the centers, despite misgivings about their impact on the neighborhood.

In fact, the people who treat drug addicts say it's the vocal few who usually raise a ruckus. And the objections often have nothing to do with the programs themselves.

"WE DIDN'T have anything against the Walden House program and staff," said Casanares.

He was worried that his 4- and 6-year-old children would be exposed to troubled teen-agers if they used a small park abutting his home.

The neighbors also felt they already had put up with enough.

"We have a high concentration of these kinds of facilities," said Jim Barber. "We felt it was time for other areas to pick up the slack."

Latonia Hurtido, right, holds her 6-week-old son, and Margaret Billsborough holds her 8-month-old daughter in the front yard of the Keller House.

Residents of Oakland's upper-middle-class Sequoyah Hills, where homes boasting spectacular views of the San Francisco Bay cost $300,000 and more, had other worries.

They sprang to action when Minnie Thomas moved to put 12 women and their children into a home she leased there. The home, Keller House, received a $414,000 federal grant as a long-term drug treatment facility for pregnant addicts. But neighbors persuaded the City Council to limit the home to four women and four children, a restriction that will ruin the program's cost efficiency and likely force it to move.

"There's no way you can keep the location a secret so there wouldn't be a threat of drugs," said neighbor Christine Quan, the mother of 7-year-old twins, who said she fears visits from the women's husbands or boyfriends.

CLAUDIA HOLLAND, who moved here from Connecticut last fall, said having numerous unrelated people in one house "detracts from the flavor of the single-family neighborhood."

Keller House clients know of their neighbors' hostility, so they don't walk along the wide, quiet streets, said Margaret, a soft-spoken 24-year-old with learning disabilities who had been homeless since she became pregnant the first time at age 15. Like other clients, she would give only her first name.

"They're keying on us being street people and they don't want to give us a chance to live a nice, beautiful life in a nice house," said Latonia, 28, a trained hospital laboratory technician who once had a $350-per-day crack cocaine habit.

"They figure they worked hard to get here and we're just drug users."

At Walden House's adolescent school and treatment center in San Francisco, a compact 17-year-old named Jesse was surprised and angry to learn how the Oakland residents blocked a similar facility there.

Though he admitted he once fled the Haight Street facility for three months because he was "fiending for dope," he said he never considered bringing drugs to the center because of pressure from the other teen-agers.

"This place, drugs don't come in here," Jesse said flatly. "This is one of the safest environments around."

THAT SAID, many residents still fear such centers will breed crime.

"There has never been anything to prove that it skyrockets when the treatment centers go in," said Oakland police Lt. Fred Peoples, commander of the community services division.

Just the opposite happens with responsible treatment providers, said San Francisco police Sgt. Art Tapia. He saw the results when Walden House opened its Buena Vista West adult residential center in 1978 after a six-month battle with neighbors.

"Street crime, the type of crime where you have assaults, armed robberies, was reduced," said Tapia. "The burglaries in the area were reduced. Order-maintenance type of problems — dirt, abandoned cars — that was reduced. Statistically, we can show that."

Why do centers want to be in residential neighborhoods anyway? Why not simply take over larger buildings somewhere else?

"People live up to your expectations," said Dana Kueffner, director of the Department of Alcohol and Drug Programs in Alameda County, where Oakland is located. Put them in nice surroundings and they will learn to live up to those standards, she said, clearly irritated that some may think they don't deserve such a lifestyle.

"IF YOU PUT people in a warehouse with mats on the floor," she said, "then that says what we expect of you, and that's what they will live up to."

It's illegal to deny housing to recovering drug addicts unless someone proves they are "a direct threat to the safety or health of others in the community," said John R. Dunne, assistant attorney general for civil rights.

Those protections in the Fair Housing Act may be extended beyond housing when the Americans with Disabilities Act takes effect early next year, Justice Department officials say.

And the National Institute on Drug Abuse has a project, "Overcoming Barriers to Drug Abuse Treatment," that advises treatment providers on such technicalities as zoning laws and community relations and helps educate the public about drug treatment, said spokeswoman Mona Brown.

Fans in Hollywood mark Monroe's 65th birthday

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Marilyn Monroe, who remains a sex symbol nearly three decades after her death, would have turned 65 on Saturday, and about 40 admirers marked her birthday at the Hollywood Roosevelt Hotel.

There, a sandstone sculpture of the star's head was mounted on the wall of the Cinegrill bar, one of her former haunts.

"When Marilyn was a budding starlet we would go there and she would say 'I hope when I'm famous my picture will be on the wall of the Cinegrill,'" said Robert Slatzer, a longtime friend. "Now I can make that dream come true."

Other fans were expected to make the annual pilgrimage Saturday to her grave in the Westwood section of Los Angeles.

Earlier this week, Marilyn "wannabes" and spectators swarmed around the Mann's Chinese Theatre in Hollywood to compete in a look-alike contest.

Since the 36-year-old Monroe died in 1962 in her Brentwood home from a drug overdose, dozens of books have been written about her, her relationships with John F. Kennedy and his brother, Robert, and her marriages to baseball star Joe DiMaggio and playwright Arthur Miller.

Her first husband, retired Los Angeles police officer Jim Dougherty, who married Norma Jean Baker when she was 16, predicted she would have lost her famous hourglass figure by now.

"Monroe's mother was a chubby little gal," he recalled. "So she probably would have gotten fatter as time went by too."

Slatzer said he commissioned the three-dimensional portrait, titled "Legend," from artist Bill Mack and donated it to the hotel. Before the hotel was remodeled, pictures of stars used to decorate the bar's walls, he said.

Slatzer, who claims to have been married to Monroe for five days in 1952, said he will share in the cost of placing a single red rose beside the portrait every day, said hotel spokeswoman Jan Walner.

"The hotel is the perfect place to have her memento," Walner said. "It's a living reminder that she was here and spent time here."

"I LOOK GOOD ON THE OUTSIDE, AND I FEEL GREAT ON THE INSIDE."

Storm forces suspension of U.S. relief efforts

DHAKA, Bangladesh (AP) — A new tropical storm approached Bangladesh's southern coast on Saturday, forcing the U.S. military to halt relief efforts for victims of the devastating April 30 cyclone that struck the same region.

The Red Crescent, the Islamic equivalent of the Red Cross, said more than 21,000 volunteers were working to evacuate hundreds of thousands of people from the coast.

The new storm, with wind speeds of up to 55 mph, may hit the coastal districts of Khulna and Patuakhali on Sunday morning, said Shujit Dev Sharma, a Meteorological Department official.

Maj. Gen. Henry Stackpole, commander of the U.S. relief forces, said from Chittagong that "the high intensity of the storm" should hit the area sometime between 3 p.m. and 6 p.m. (5 a.m. and 8 a.m. EDT) on Sunday.

At 6 p.m. Saturday (8 a.m. EDT), the storm was 210 miles south of Khulna, in the Bay of Bengal, and was moving at a speed of 15 mph toward the coast, he said.

Stackpole said "there's no comparison" between this tropical storm and the April 30 cyclone, which produced 145 mph winds and 20-foot-high tidal waves. But he said that nevertheless, the U.S. military was halting relief operations.

Most of the U.S. troops sent to help out the millions of survivors of the April cyclone have returned home.

On Saturday, five remaining U.S. Blackhawk helicopters flew back to Dhaka to ride out the storm. The supply ship USS St. Louis, with about 300 sailors and 200 Marines aboard, headed south to a safe anchorage.

Sharma predicted that the when the storm hits, "coastal districts and offshore islands may be inundated by a storm surge of up to eight feet in height."

At least 139,000 people were killed in the April 30 cyclone that came out of the Bay of Bengal and battered the length of Bangladesh's southern and southeastern coast.

Seven thousand U.S. service personnel who came here as part of the relief effort, Operation Sea Angel, departed on May 29, leaving only the St. Louis and about 200 U.S. military personnel in Chittagong and another 200 in Dhaka.

Africans consider reparations for slavery

ABUJA, Nigeria (AP) — African foreign ministers, setting the stage for a 51-nation summit, put forward a measure Saturday that would seek reparations from countries that enslaved Africans, chief among them the United States.

The measure was one of 14 resolutions to be set before heads of state who are to meet Monday at the Organization of African Unity's annual summit.

The resolutions do not address whether to lift sanctions against South Africa. The issue was so divisive that the foreign ministers were forced to leave it to the heads of state.

Nearly all black African countries trade with South Africa, illicitly or otherwise, despite sanctions agreed to at previous meetings of the African organization.

Thirty-five heads of state are expected at the summit, which the organization's secretary-general, Salim Ahmed Salim of Tanzania, says will be one of the most impressive turnouts in many years.

Their first task is to sign a treaty establishing an African Economic Community, which the organization's officials hope will begin a new era of economic and political cooperation in Africa.

The measure on reparations for slavery also calls for reparations from the colonizers for exploiting Africa's resources.

The ministers called for a Middle East conference to include a delegation of the Palestinian Liberation Organization, and urged the immediate withdrawal of Israeli forces from south Lebanon.

The ministers also appealed for increased international assistance for what they said were an estimated 6 million displaced people in Africa.

The new leader of India's Congress Party, P.V. Narasimha Rao, is trying to unite the party following the assassination of Rajiv Gandhi.

Rao speech marks start of campaign

N.Y. Times News Service

NEW DELHI, India — The Congress Party, bereft of the young leader it hoped would sweep it back into power, resumed its shattered political campaign on Saturday night with a new president, P.V. Narasimha Rao.

In a public meeting attended by a few hundred party workers and several thousand other people brought in by bus and truck, Rao made his first address as party leader. By the time his turn came to speak, just before sundown, members of the audience were leaving in droves.

Security was intense, with black-clad commandos armed with automatic weapons striking menacing poses on the platform and hundreds of paramilitary troops all around the Ram Lila ground, an open space betwen old and New Delhi, where each fall India's beloved Ramayana story is staged.

Saturday's event was not a political rally but a memorial service for the assassinated leader, Rajiv Gandhi. Residents of the capital cast ballots in the first round of elections on May 20, the day before Gandhi was killed, so there were no votes to campaign for here.

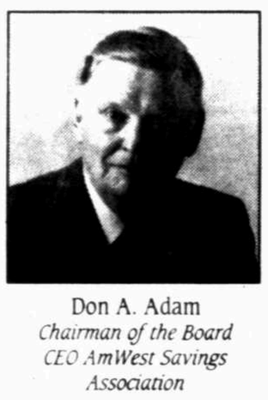

But if the mass meeting was intended to demonstrate that the Congress Party would ride home on a wave of sympathy when voting resumes on June 12, the event was disappointing. The crowd, well below promises of tens of thousands of mourners, showed no emotion and little interest.

On Monday, Rao is expected to take the campaign into south India, which is now critical to the Congress Party's chances.

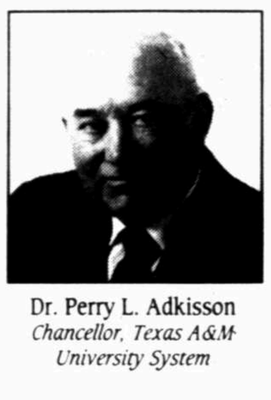

The Congress Party's most serious opponent, the Bharatiya Janata Party, shifted tactics after the Gandhi assassination and is now calling itself the only party that can bring stability and order to India. Stability had been Gandhi's campaign theme.

Campaign routes and schedules have now become secret. An official of the Bharatiya Janata Party, extending an invitation to cover a speaking tour this weekend, could not divulge the campaign stops, only the time of departure from New Delhi.

■ Not to worry, Cheney tells Mideast allies

CAIRO, Egypt — U.S. Defense Secretary Dick Cheney pledged Saturday to continue supplying weapons to meet Middle East allies' security needs, and said the policy can help promote the peace process.

Cheney told reporters that he did not see a contradiction between President Bush's disarmament proposal for the Middle East and promising more military aid to countries in the region.

Regional stability can be promoted through military supplies, he said.

Cheney made his comments after a day of talks with his Egyptian counterpart, Defense Minister Lt. Gen. Hussein Tantawi, and a lunch with President Hosni Mubarak.

Cheney is on a Middle East tour promoting Bush's disarmament plan. In Isreal on Friday, he offered the Jewish state 10 used F-15 fighter jets and promised more military aid.

Egypt wants more F-16 warplanes, tanks, armed personnel carriers, artillery and Apache helicopters, said sources who spoke on condition of anonymity.

Cheney declined to give any specifics about future military aid. He mentioned only the current $1.3 billion-a-year U.S. military aid package for Mubarak's government.

■ Angolan revelers celebrate end of civil war

LUANDA, Angola — Thousands of Angolans danced and cheered in the streets early on Saturday morning in rousing impromptu celebrations marking the formal end of this country's 16-year civil war.

It was too early to tell how well the cease-fire was being observed, Western diplomatic sources and relief workers said on Saturday, but, so far, there were no reports of renewed fighting.

The peace agreement came after more than a year of arduous negotiations in which Portugal, which was Angola's colonial master, and the United States and the Soviet Union, which backed the opposing factions, played a key role in encouraging the two sides to end a war that has taken 300,000 lives and produced no winners.

Later this month, a United Nations force of 600 men is expected to arrive here to monitor the cease-fire.

■ Pope receives subdued welcome in homeland

KOSZALIN, Poland — Pope John Paul II on Saturday hailed the "new voice" of freedom in post-Communist Poland, but urged his increasingly skeptical countrymen to stick to their Roman Catholic traditions.

Sparse crowds greeted John Paul as he opened his 12-city, nine-day pilgrimage, in sharp contrast to the huge turnouts of his three previous history-shaping trips to his homeland.

Since the country's Communist leaders fell from power in 1989, Poland has changed radically. Now many Poles openly question the power of the church and its influence on public life and private morality.

President Lech Walesa, the former Solidarity chief, and a crowd of several hundred stood at the airport in a chilly drizzle to welcome John Paul and pay tribute to his role in ending four decades of Communist rule.

■ At least 15 die in ammunition depot blast

NOWSHERA, Pakistan — Military authorities Saturday were investigating a huge explosion at a military ammunition depot that officials said killed at least 15 people and injured 68 others.

Friday's blast sent giant fireballs leaping into the sky and residents fled in panic, witnesses said. Spent ammunition was strewn over several miles.

For hours after the initial explosion, bombs, shells and missiles rained down on the sparsely populated area, 20 miles from the Afghan border.

The ammunition depot was surrounded by about half a dozen tent villages, home to about 3.2 million Afghan refugees living in Pakistan.

■ North Korean asks for 'loose confederation'

UNITED NATIONS — A North Korean diplomat has suggested a "loose confederation" that would somehow accommodate South Korea's booming market economy and North Korea's faltering Marxist system as a possible first step toward a complete unification of the two countries.

"The United States began as a confederation," said Han Si-hae, deputy chairman for unification in the Pyongyang government.

The North Korean government, which asserts that it is the sole legitimate government of a united Korea, strongly opposes separate United Nations seats for North and South, and relied on its Chinese and Soviet allies to veto any attempt to admit the Seoul government.

Focus now turns to Kurds in Iran

By Stephen Kinzer
New York Times News Service

SILOPI, Turkey — The last Kurdish refugee camp in Turkey officially closed Saturday, marking the end of a highly successful humanitarian mission along the Turkey-Iraq border.

As American forces prepared to withdraw from the border region, however, attention began to focus on the plight of hundreds of thousands of Kurds still encamped in Iran. Helping them to return to their homes is not part of the mission the United States and allied forces have assumed.

The 11-nation humanitarian effort that resolved the Kurdish crisis in Turkey is being hailed here as a model of cooperation among governments, armies and private relief agencies. But the refugee problem in Iran hinges on talks now under way in Baghdad between Kurdish leaders and the government of President Saddam Hussein.

"For a series of reasons that are really quite complicated, the Kurds in Iran do not seem ready to go home yet," Pierre Francois Pirlot, a senior U.N. representative in northern Iraq, said in an interview Saturday. "We have a team touring the Iran area now. We expect to hear from them in a few days."

Pirlot said the United Nations and private relief agencies had spent hundreds of millions of dollars to aid Kurdish refugees in recent weeks.

"If you add the cost of what the American army and other armies have contributed, it could easily be over a billion dollars," he said.

Some allied military officers have said that as many as 40,000 Kurds, most of them women and children, may have died during their dramatic flight out of Iraq and in the weeks before foreign aid reached them. Now, however, aid administrators say that estimate is probably far too high. The true figure, all acknowledge, will probably never be known.

The closing of the seventh and last refugee camp in Turkey, situated near the remote border town of Cukurca, represented a triumph for American and allied forces here.

"It's hard to believe that only a few weeks ago, there were real fears that this situation might drag on not only for months, but for years, and that it would become a disaster like the Palestinian problem," said Bernd Jaenicke, a German relief administrator working at the refugee camp in Zakho, Iraq. "The problem is not yet fully settled, but it is no longer a real emergency."

According to official American figures released Saturday, there are 49,250 Kurds still in Zakho and along the Turkey-Iraq border. They are all that remain of the 450,000 who were there at the peak of the crisis six weeks ago.

The 21,500 American soldiers who were sent to help the Kurds have already begun flying back to their bases. No date has been set for withdrawal, but officers have speculated that the mission will last only a few more weeks.

In the Iraqi city of Dohuk, a Kurdish center, brisk business was being conducted at the sprawling bazaar Saturday.

Dohuk was all but abandoned when the Kurdish refugee exodus began in early April, but more than half of its 300,000 residents have returned, and more are streaming in every day.

Residents said they realize that U.S. and allied troops will soon be withdrawn. They are confident that U.N. guards, about 50 of whom are now patrolling the streets, will remain to protect them.

Some foreign relief workers plan to remain in Dohuk for a month or longer, but many are preparing to leave this week. Among the relief workers, however, pride at having helped the Kurds who fled to Turkey is mixed with frustration at their inability to reach those who remain in Iran.

"We hear that there are still lots of problems there, but that wasn't part of our script, unfortunately," said Gus Kontouras of the International Rescue Committee, who is in Iraq working for the United States Agency for International Development. "We tried to organize a flight over there, but the military command wouldn't authorize it because it's outside the mission we've been given."

The United States has no diplomatic relations with Iran, and neither government has rushed to help Kurds on Iranian soil. American officials, flushed with the success of the mission in Turkey, do not want to undertake a major effort in a country that they still consider hostile, and where they have not been invited.

Many of the Kurdish refugees in Iran are from towns outside the "security zone" established in northern Iraq, and are afraid to return to their homes without security guarantees.

Perhaps the most important reason why refugees have not returned from Iran in large numbers is that their leaders do not want them to.

IRA truck-bomb kills 3 soldiers

BELFAST, Northern Ireland — The Irish Republican Army on Saturday claimed responsibility for a truck-bombing that killed three soldiers and demolished an Ulster Defense Regiment base, the army said.

The driverless truck used to ram a base guardhouse contained a ton of explosive — the largest bomb the IRA has ever detonated against the security forces in Northern Ireland, the army said Saturday.

In a statement issued to local media organizations on Saturday, the outlawed Irish Republican Army said the attack was part of its on-going campaign against the "British military presence" in Northern Ireland.

Japan agrees to open construction projects to U.S. bids

By K.P. Hong
Associated Press writer

TOKYO — Threatened with sanctions, Japan agreed Saturday to double the number of its government-funded construction projects open to U.S. bidders, defusing at least for the moment a major source of trade friction.

Negotiators worked through the night to reach the agreement before a U.S. deadline expired, leaving Japan open to sanctions barring its companies from federally funded U.S. construction projects.

The U.S. Embassy welcomed the agreement to open 17 new Japanese projects worth $7.3 billion to U.S. companies, saying it involved "major revisions."

The agreement "will make a positive contribution to U.S. construction firms seeking access to the Japanese construction market," a U.S. Embassy official said on condition of anonymity.

However, the embassy said in a statement that the agreement must still be accepted by "Cabinet-level" U.S. officials before the threat of sanctions is formally lifted.

Under the agreement, the Foreign Ministry said Japan will add 17 construction projects including airports, a hospital and a national theater to a list of 17 projects worth $25 billion listed under a 1988 agreement to open the construction market to U.S. firms.

Japan also said it will allow U.S. bidding on six other planned projects, if in fact they are implemented.

Construction is one of four most important trade issues between the world's two largest economies. The others are Japanese automobile exports, Japan's semiconductor market and Japan's refusal to import rice.

Japan's giant construction companies, along with some other Japanese industries, have long been accused of collusion and bid-rigging, which U.S. construction companies say have barred their entry into the market.

Despite the 1988 agreement, U.S. companies remained unhappy about trade imbalances in construction. Japanese companies have a $2.5 billion stake in the U.S. construction market, and U.S. companies have a scant $440 million in Japanese contracts.

In reaction, U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills last month announced a plan to bar Japanese firms from federally funded U.S. construction projects if negotiations to open up Japan's market didn't produce results by the end of May.

Construction is one of four most important trade issues between the world's two largest economies. The others are Japanese automobile exports, Japan's semiconductor market and Japan's refusal to import rice.

She made the announcement following numerous rounds of talks over the past year reviewing the 1988 agreement, which involved airports, bridges and highways.

The latest, and ninth, round of talks began Thursday in Tokyo but were pronounced at an "impasse" a day later by chief U.S. negotiator J. Michael Farren.

"Closing the market is the worst case, and it doesn't make sense," because it would heighten trade tensions," said Farren, undersecretary of commerce for international affairs. He spoke at a news conference Friday night.

But he added that "one-way trade doesn't make sense either, and it is unfair."

Washington extended the U.S. deadline by 13 hours to midnight Washington time, or 1 p.m. Saturday in Tokyo. Negotiators worked virtually through the night, finally announcing the agreement a few hours before the deadline.

The only other major set of U.S. trade sanctions imposed against Japan came in 1987 after the United States found that Japan had done little to open its semiconductor market. The sanctions included $165 million in punitive tariffs. Japan is trying to get them lifted in talks on a new semiconductor accord.

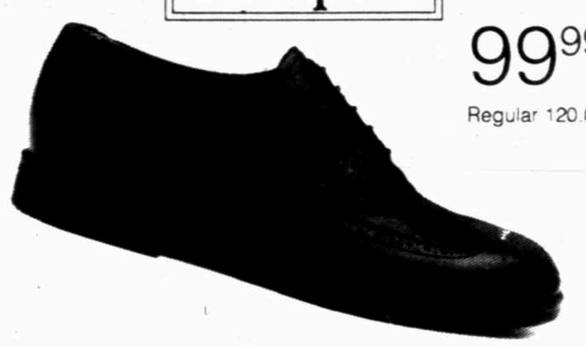

The new agreement calls for the establishment of an independent organization to handle complaints by foreign companies about market access, and a new bidding system incorporating both material procurement and consulting services.

The inclusion of six major but unconfirmed new projects, including an airport in Nagoya to serve central Japan, is a "very positive development for U.S. construction companies who want to come here," the embassy official said.

The United States had a $41 billion trade deficit with Japan last year, down from a $48.4 billion deficit in 1989, according to U.S. figures. The U.S. worldwide deficit in 1990 totaled $101 billion.

In the first three months of 1991, the United States had a $18.37-billion foreign trade deficit, according to U.S. figures. The largest portion — $11 billion — was with Japan.

Cotton Bowl

DALLAS (AP) — The Southwest Conference unanimously approved a proposal that would send its runner-up to the Cotton Bowl if its champion is ranked No. 2 and has a chance to play for a national championship in another bowl.

"What we said is, if you have a chance to play for the national championship, we want you to take it," SWC commissioner Fred Jacoby said.

The Cotton, Orange and Sugar bowls are discussing a proposed alliance with Notre Dame and the Atlantic Coast and Big East conferences to produce better bowl matchups.

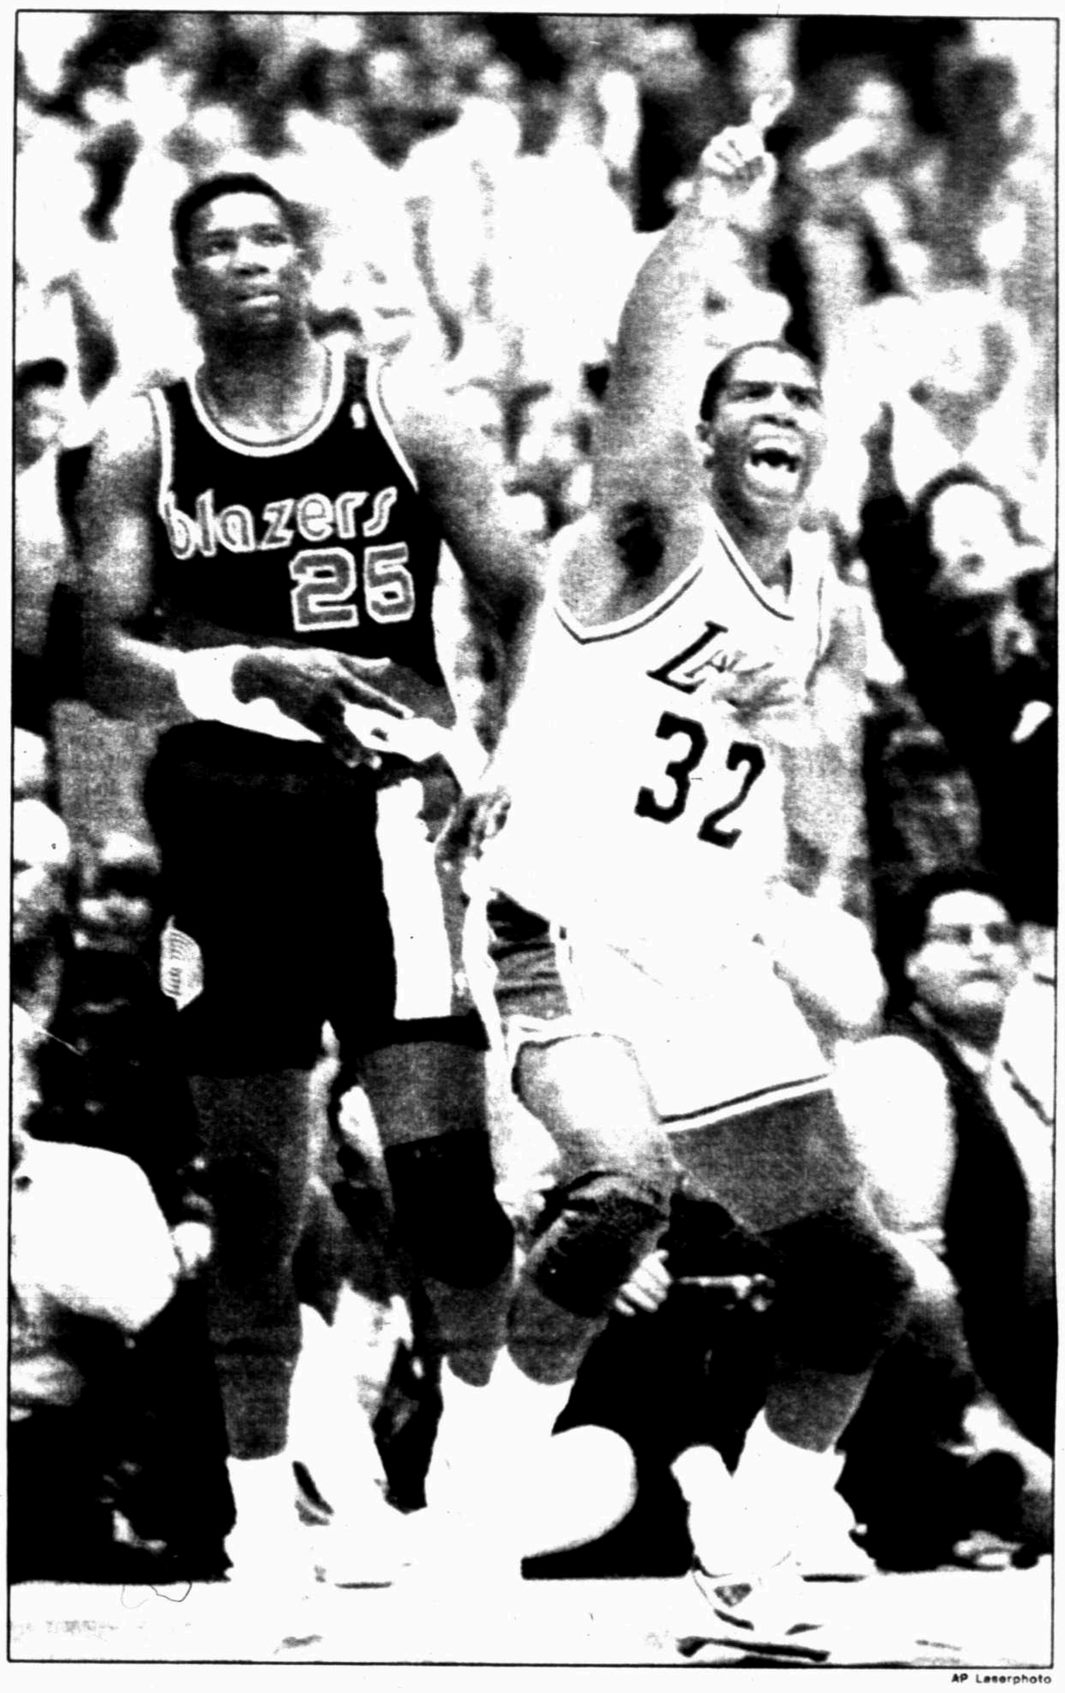

The new twist could open better opportunities for a national championship game among teams from conferences committed to specific bowls — the SWC to the Cotton, the Big Eight to the Orange and the Southeastern to the Sugar.

CHICAGO — Forget, as if that's possible, the Magic-Michael mania. The NBA championship may be determined by players with names like Vlade and Scottie or A.C. and B.J.

The drumbeat continued Saturday for the meeting of two of the league's most spectacular performers. At the same time, those performers hummed a different tune — titles go to teams, not individuals.

"Although the hype is going to be Magic against Michael, I've got to focus on, as a team, what can we do to beat the Lakers, not what we can do to beat Magic," Chicago's Michael Jordan said. "No matter what the media buildup is, it's still a team against a team."

"This is what you live for, to play Michael Jordan in the finals, but you can't get caught in that hype," Los Angeles' Magic Johnson said. "If I get out of my game and try to outscore Michael and all that then we're going to lose big time."

The most glamourous NBA Finals in years begin at 2:30 p.m. (CDT) today.

The Lakers are there for the ninth time in 12 years but had only a two-day rest after beating Portland in six games in the Western Conference finals.

The Bulls, making the first finals appearance in their 25-year history, had five days off after sweeping Detroit for the Eastern Conference crown.

Chicago coach Phil Jackson had several concerns — re-energizing his team after the layoff, getting his aggressive defense to play patiently when the Lakers hold the ball for 20 seconds, and stopping guard Byron Scott from sneaking downcourt when Jordan drives to the basket.

Los Angeles coach Mike Dunleavy had to deal with a rested Chicago team that likes to run and his subpar forward James Worthy, who is expected to play despite an ankle injury.

They had more to think about than two superstars.

"It's not a problem getting the rest of the team up," Jackson said. "We won as a team this year. We've grown up as a team, and as a team we're ready to step ahead."

"We don't look at it as Michael vs. Magic," Dunleavy said. "One guy is not going to beat us and we win as a team."

The best-of-7 series features interesting matchups — Worthy against Scottie Pippen, Lakers forward Sam Perkins against Horace Grant and Chicago's outside shooting center Bill Cartwright against Vlade Divac.

With B.J. Armstrong, Will Perdue, Cliff Levingston and Craig Hodges, Chicago's bench is deeper than the Lakers', which features A.C. Green and Terry Teagle.

"The bench is going to be a key to this series," Johnson said. "I also think one of the silent guys has got to come forward for either team ... somebody who you didn't look for that's going to have a great series."

The focus, however, never leaves Magic and Michael for long, even though Johnson isn't expected to be guarding Jordan much.

"What is really the show," Jackson said, "is who has influence over the game, and Michael and Magic have great influ-

Valenzuela shines, Angels sweep

■ Veteran southpaw leads Midland to a double-header sweep of the Arkansas Travelers with a two-hit shutout in the opener.

Staff Report

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Fernando Valenzuela gave up just two hits in a seven-inning complete game shutout over the Arkansas Travelers in the first game of a double-header here Saturday night, and the Midland Angels used the southpaw's success as a springboard.

The Angels followed the 4-0 win in the opener with a 6-2 triumph in the night-cap for a twin-bill sweep that capped their 10-game road trip with a 7-3 record.

Left-hander Todd James got the decision in the second game to become Midland's first five-game winner, and the Angels moved to 22-28 in the Western Division of the Texas League.

It was the final minor league tune-up for Valenzuela, the former Los Angeles Dodgers star, who signed with the California Angels last month and started once for the Class A Palm Springs Angels, then twice for Midland during its road trip through Jackson and Arkansas, both Eastern Division stops in the TL.

The former Cy Young award winner threw 78 pitches Saturday — 47 strikes — and he did not allow an earned run in any of his 17 innings of minor league work.

"That's what I was supposed to do," Valenzuela said when asked about his performance since signing a free-agent contract with the Angels.

Valenzuela, who won the Cy Young award as a 20-year-old with the Dodgers in 1981, struck out five and walked two in Saturday's opener.

"On a scale of 1 to 10, a 10," said Preston Gomez, an assistant to the Angels' general manager, said before leaving the park.

Valenzuela said he did not talk to Gomez after the game, but would leave today for California.

He said he was surprised that he could complete seven innings and throw less than 80 pitches. But, he said, it's easier to pitch in the minor leagues because the hitters are more anxious.

He said he threw fastballs early against the Travelers and then began using his curve and screwball.

"All my pitches were working pretty good," he said. "The best thing was the location."

Martin win surprising

Associated Press

PARIS — Todd Martin, an American rookie and ranked 243rd in the world, moved into the fourth round of the French Open on Saturday, a chilly and emotionally cool day after the dramatic departure of Jimmy Connors 24 hours earlier.

Top seeds Stefan Edberg and Monica Seles advanced with ease on a day that went mostly according to plan, except for another surprising victory by Martin — who had to win three qualifying matches to even reach the tournament.

Martin had never won a Grand Slam match before this week. He had

NJCAA golf tourney opens Tuesday

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Close to 40 of the top golf programs in the nation are in Midland this week to vye for the National Junior College Athletic Association championship. The 72-hole tournament will be held Tuesday through Friday.

Two local courses — Green Tree Country Club and The Club at Mission Dorado — have been secured to accomodate the 250 collegiate linksters on their 72-hole quest to win the junior team championship and individual medalist honors.

The latest list of official entrants includes 36 of the top junior college golf teams in the country who have notified officials of their plans to compete in three divisions, and there will be individuals representing 79 community colleges.

The reigning favorite to grab national team honors is host Midland College, although MC athletic director and tournament organizer Delnor Poss says as many as eight teams have a legitimate shot at the Division I team trophy.

MC, currently ranked No. 1 in the country, moved into the top spot after a spring victory at the University of West Florida Invitational. It was in that tournament — one of 10 MC won this season — where the Chaparrals bested then-No. 1 Central Alabama.

Central Alabama and Midland are joined by Odessa College, Florida Community College, Miami-Dade (Fla.) Com-

Winfield clouts ninth grand slam

Associated Press

AL

TORONTO — Dave Winfield hit his ninth career grand slam and drove in five runs Saturday as the California Angels took a six-run lead and hung on for an 11-8 victory over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Luis Polonia had his second five-hit game of the season as the Angels sent the Blue Jays to their fifth loss in seven games.

Winfield's RBI grounder in the first put California ahead and his ninth home run made it 5-0 in the second off Willie Fraser, who replaced Dave Stieb as Toronto's starter just before gametime.

Stieb also missed his scheduled start last Tuesday because of tendonitis in his right shoulder. Toronto spokesman Howard Starkman said Stieb's status is day-to-day.

Mark Eichhorn (1-1), the second Toronto pitcher, got the victory in relief of Scott Lewis, knocked out after 3 2-3 innings, seven hits and four runs. Bryan Harvey pitched two innings for his 13th save.

Fraser (0-2) gave up six runs and seven hits in three innings.

Orioles 3, Red Sox 1

BOSTON — Bob Milacki and four relievers combined on a three-hitter and Mike Devereaux hit a two-run homer as Baltimore beat Boston for its fourth victory in five games.

Milacki allowed one hit and one unearned run in 5 2-3 innings, struck out six and walked four. Kevin Hickey (1-0), Todd Frohwirth, Mike Flanagan and Gregg Olson finished, with Olson getting his eighth save.

Danny Darwin (2-2) gave up three runs and eight hits in six-plus innings, struck out five and walked one.

Indians 3, Tigers 1

CLEVELAND — Greg Swindell pitched a five-hitter and Joel Skinner hit a go-ahead single with two outs in the fourth inning as Cleveland beat Detroit.

Swindell (3-5) gave up an unearned run and struck out six as he lowered his ERA to 2.50. Swindell, who pitched his fourth complete game, walked none. He has walked only three batters in his last eight starts, a span of 65 2-3 innings.

Bill Gullickson (5-3) lost despite pitching his first complete game of the year. He allowed nine hits, walked three and struck out one.

Brewers 6, Yankees 3

NEW YORK — Bill Wegman pitched two-hit ball for seven innings and former Yankee Willie Randolph went 4-for-4 as the Milwaukee Brewers slowed down New York.

The Yankees have won seven of their last nine games — including four in the final at-bat — but couldn't slove the oft-injured Milwaukee right-hander.

Wegman, who missed most of the last two seasons because of arm injuries, gave up a leadoff double to Roberto Kelly in the first inning and a single to Randy Velarde in the third. Darren Holmes allowed a run-scoring single to Matt Nokes and an RBI double to Jesse Barfield in the ninth. Dan Plesac gave up an RBI single to Hensley Meulens before getting the final out.

Athletics 7, White Sox 4

CHICAGO — Jamie Quirk tied the score with a home run in the seventh inning and hit a go-ahead single in the ninth inning as the Oakland Athletics beat the Chicago White Sox.

Alex Fernandez (2-5), winless in in eight starts since April 22, walked Harold Baines with one out in the ninth and the score tied at 4. Vance Law's groundout sent pinch runner Lance Blankenship to second and Bobby Thigpen relieved.

Thigpen hit Terry Steinbach on the left side of his helmet with the first pitch. After a delay of several minutes, Steinbach sat up and was taken off the field on a stretcher.

Both teams then emptied out of their dugouts and exchanged words apparently after a remark by A's outfielder Rickey Henderson. No punches were thrown, but A's manager Tony La Russa was ejected following the incident.

Twins 8, Royals 4

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Chili Davis hit a pair of two-run homers off Kevin Appier that litfed the Minnesota Twins to a victory over the Kansas City Royals.

Allan Anderson (2-4) went 6 1-3 innings for his first victory since April 10. Anderson gave up eight hits and four runs, two earned, with two walks and no strikeouts. Carl Willis and Terry Leach finished as the Twins won for the fourth time in five games.

Mariners 12, Rangers 8

ARLINGTON — Rookie Alonzo Powell had three RBIs, including a go-ahead two-run single in the sixth inning, and the Seattle Mariners turned a triple play in a fight-filled victory over Texas.

Powell's single off Kevin Brown (4-4) snapped a 3-3 tie and Scott Bradley added another two-run single through a drawn-in infield for a 7-3 lead.

Texas streak has roots in Inky's release

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

■ AP Sports Analysis

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers "miracle in May" had its foundation in a gamble Bobby Valentine took in spring training when he fired Pete Incaviglia.

Popular with his teammates and left field bleacherites at Arlington Stadium, Inky's departure caused enough stir that fans booed Valentine when he was introduced on opening day.

The Texas manager figured the Rangers needed to take Incaviglia's league-leading strikeouts out of the lineup although the free-swinger was averaging 25 homers a season.

"Little Ball" was the buzzword that sprang up. The Rangers were going more to hit-and-run and sacrifice instead of playing for the big inning.

The insertion of 21-year-old Juan Gonzalez into the outfield paid immediate dividends. Gonzalez triggered the Rangers' 14-game victory streak with late-inning heroics. Now you can find his name on the All-Star ballot.

Gonzalez, Ruben Sierra, Brian Downing, and Rafael Palmeiro were all in the American League's top 10 in batting with Julio Franco fast closing in. During the streak, the "little ball" Rangers averaged almost six runs and 10 hits per game.

They became the first team in three years to win 14 in a row and only the 38th club in major league history.

Texas shot from sixth place to first place.

But there are clouds on the horizon.

Starters Scott Chiamparino and Bobby Witt are hurting and Nolan Ryan just came off the disabled list. Another starter, Kevin Brown, has been wild.

"In spring training we thought the starting pitching was going to be our strength," said general manager Tom Grieve. "Now, it's a big question mark. Our bullpen has been great."

Ryan said the starting pitching has got to get going.

"We've got to start carrying our part of the load," Ryan said. "We can't expect the team to keep hitting like it has."

Ironically, Ryan didn't contribute a victory during the winning streak. He did pitch his seventh no-hitter on May 1 then got hurt in the fifth inning of the second start after that and spent some time getting over a sore shoulder.

Texas didn't need much pitching as they bashed their opponents with barrage after barrage of base hits.

The Rangers led the major leagues in hitting, slugging percentage and on-base percentage during the streak.

"Bobby deserves the credit for making tough decisions like the Pete Incaviglia situation," said owner George W. Bush. "He's the one who has molded this team together."

Valentine is in his seventh year of managing the Rangers. Some critics have said that the nickname Bobby V stands more for "vain" than "victory." That he is guilty of "overmanaging."

Those same critics were after him again after the Rangers lost 3-0 to Minnesota to stop the 14-game victory ride, pointing out that he benched two of the Rangers hottest hitters, Downing and Steve Buechele, to try to matchup up left-handed batters against Scott Erickson.

However, Bush couldn't be prouder of his little battler.

"Nothing better came out of this streak than to show we've got a great manager," Bush said.

Of course, the Rangers need to be in the pennant race on Labor Day to convince the cynics that their franchise has turned the corner to respectability.

A big May was certainly a good start. Last year, the Rangers were long gone by the July All-Star break

PHILADELPHIA — John Smiley improved his record to 8-1, tying him for the major league lead in victories, and the Pittsburgh Pirates won their eighth straight game by beating the Philadelphia Phillies 5-3 on Saturday night.

The winning streak is the Pirates' longest since they won nine in a row from July 5-17, 1988. Pittsburgh also has beaten the Phillies 11 straight times, including all five meetings this season. Philadelphia's last victory over Pittsbugh came on Aug. 5, 1990.

SAN FRANCISCO — Kevin Mitchell drove in three runs with two hits in his second game back from a a knee injury as the San Francisco Giants beat Atlanta and ended the Braves' five-game winning streak.

Will Clark hit a two-run homer, tying him with Atlanta's Dave Justice for the National League RBI lead at 38.

MONTREAL — Mark Grace's sacrifice fly scored Shawon Dunston in the 10th inning and lifted the Chicago Cubs to a victory over Montreal, the Expos' fourth consecutive defeat.

Chuck McElroy (2-0) pitched two scoreless innings for the victory, the Cubs' fifth in five starts against Montreal this season.

Cardinals 6, Mets 5

ST. LOUIS — Milt Thompson's bizarre broken-bat RBI single in the 10th inning gave St. Louis a come-from-behind win over New York night, snapping the Cardinals' four-game losing streak and the Mets' four-game winning streak.

SAN DIEGO — Tim Teufel hit a three-run homer in his first at-bat for San Diego and Fred McGriff added a three-run homer to take the NL in a victory over Houston.

Gehrig legacy still long 50 years later

By Ronald Blum
AP Sports Writer

When Lou Gehrig was playing for the New York Yankees, his name became synonymous with strength and durability. Later, his name has come to mean the crippling disease that killed him 50 years ago Sunday.

Not since has there been a player like him.

In his 13 full seasons, Gehrig averaged 147 RBIs. No major leaguer has reached that number in a single season since George Foster in 1977.

Gehrig's death from the disease that now is known by his name came just about two years after illness forced him to retire.

In his first 28 at-bats in 1939, Gehrig had just four hits with no homers and one RBI. On May 2, 1939, the Iron Horse told New York Yankees manager Joe McCarthy that he was taking himself out of the lineup after 2,130 consecutive games.

"I haven't been a bit of good to the team since the season started," Gehrig said. "It would not be fair to the boys, to Joe or to the baseball public for me to try going on. In fact, it would not be fair to myself."

McCarthy thought Gehrig just needed some much deserved time off and would soon be back.

"I told him it would be as he wished," McCarthy said. "Like everybody else I'm sorry to see it happen. I told him not to worry. Maybe the warm weather will bring him around."

Gehrig's problem wasn't the weather; it was his body. At the Mayo Clinic, he was diagnosed as having Amyotrophic Lateral Sclerosis, now known simply as Lou Gehrig's disease.

On July 4, 1939, the Yankees honored him with Lou Gehrig Day. When the film is played today on the Yankee Stadium scoreboard, the words still send chills as they sound throughout the ballpark.

"Today, I consider myself the luckiest man on the face of the earth," he said, his voice echoing throughout packed, but cavernous, Yankee Stadium.

The spectre of Gehrig hangs over first base in the old ballpark to this day.

"I remember the first time I played first base at Yankee Stadium thinking I was in the same place Lou Gehrig played," said Don Mattingly, who will be presented with an award Sunday by the ALS Society. "It almost gave me chills."

It is amazing what Gehrig accomplished in such a short big league career. On June 2, 1925, Wally Pipp had a headache and was replaced by the kid from Columbia University. By the time the streak — and his career — ended, he had 493 homers, 1,990 RBIs, a .632 slugging percentage and a major-league record 23 grand slams.

In 1938 — his last full season — Gehrig hit .295 with 29 homers and 114 RBIs at the age of 35. For him, it was an off season. Remember, his career bests were a .379 average in 1930, 49 homers in 1934 and 1936 and an American League record 184 RBIs in 1931.

Who knows if the numbers can be compared to today's statistics, what with night games, artificial turf and expansion? Even if they're not, the stats are overwhelming when compared to his contemporaries.

"I was there," former Yankees broadcaster Mel Allen said. "But sometimes it doesn't seem real now. There was a real Lou Gehrig. A guy who joked with his teammates and argued at bad calls. But after his last game, he became a legend."

Red Sox extend Morgan's contract

BOSTON (AP) — The Boston Red Sox announced Saturday that manager Joe Morgan had been awarded a one-year contract extension through the 1992 season.

Morgan succeeded John McNamara on July 14, 1988. Entering Saturday's game against the Baltimore Orioles, he had a 243-204 record with the team.

"Joe has once again proven himself to be a top manager this year, keeping the club in first place while it has not been playing nearly up to its potential," Red Sox general manager Lou Gorman said.

Morgan is the 37th Red Sox manager .

Sutton takes slim lead into final round

Associated Press

Kemper Open

POTOMAC, Md. — Hal Sutton said he preferred to pit himself against the golf course rather than his playing partner, Greg Norman.

Good idea. Almost everyone who played the forgiving TPC at Avenel course Saturday had reason to smile, because par took a holiday in the third round of the Kemper Open.

Sutton and the other five players on the leaderboard didn't make a single bogey, and Sutton's 7-under-par 64 was good enough to get him a one-shot lead over Norman and Billy Andrade entering Sunday's final round.

The average score was 68.2 on the par-71 course. There were 15 eagles and a double-eagle. Ted Schulz matched the course record with a 63 and only gained a stroke on the leaders.

"The course is laying down right now," said Sutton, who made a 7-foot birdie putt on No. 18 to break a three-way tie. "It was perfect scoring conditions."

Andrade enjoyed his second straight 64 and Norman had an eagle and five birdies en route to the same score and a 17-under 196 total.

"The course was there to be had, so it was tiger golf," said Norman, who played aggressively at virtually every hole. "You shoot an even-par today and you wouldn't even be in the top 20. You've got to focus on making birdies."

Jeff Sluman also had a 64 for a 198. Bobby Wadkins (65) and Bill Britton (66) were at 200.

"I played well and didn't pick up any ground," Sluman lamented.

The twosome of Sutton and Norman, teeing off nearly two hours late because of a rain delay, staged a dramatic battle of brilliant golf. Norman made an eagle, two birdies and six pars on the front nine and still lost a stroke to Sutton, who had five birdies.

Sutton was well aware of the competition shaping up between him and Norman, but he preferred to concentrate solely on his own game.

"I just wanted to play the golf course," he said. "I didn't want to get into a situation where I was playing Greg Norman."

He asserted that position on the 622-yard second hole, when Norman blasted his second shot just past the pin. Sutton calmly put his shot about 70 yards short of the green.

Norman got a birdie and Sutton a par, but Sutton was content.

"I was just trying to play to the best of my abilities," he said. "After seeing Greg's shot I was tempted to go for the green, but that's just not how I play."

Norman, who recently took a five-week vacation from the tour, stayed in the hunt by salvaging par on No. 7. After launching his tee shot into the rough to the right of the fairway, he eschewed the safe shot and tried to split two trees.

He didn't make it. His ball bounced off one tree and ended up in the crowd to the left of the fairway. But Norman reached the green from there and dropped in a 5-foot putt.

Andrade, playing immediately in front of Sutton and Norman, opened with birdies on four of the first five holes. He pulled even with Sutton by getting a birdie on No. 11.

Coody, Bies use 62s to crack Sleepy Hollow course record

Associated Press

Seniors

SCARBORUGH-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. — Charles Coody and Don Bies each shot course-record 8-under-par 62s Saturday as Coody took a one-stroke lead with one round to play in the NYNEX Commemorative at the Sleepy Hollow Country Club.

The 53-year-old Coody, a two-time winner on the Senior PGA Tour, registered two eagles, seven birdies and one bogey for his 128 total for two trips around the 6,545-yard course.

Bies, 53, played bogeyless golf with eight birdies and was one stroke back after breaking 70 only once in his first nine tournaments this year.

In shooting their 62s, low round of the year on the senior tour, Coody and Bies missed the senior PGA record of 61 by Lee Elder in this tournament in 1985, when it was held in Newport, R.I.

Bob Charles, the winner in 1988 and 1989; Dick Rhyan and Al Kelley eached shared the course record of 63.

Bruce Crampton had a 66 to move into third place at 131, one stroke better than defending champion Lee Trevino, Walt Zembriski and Charles.

Trevino shot a second consecutive 66; Zembriski a 67 and Charles a 68, bogeying the 18th hole. Rocky Thompson, who shared the first-round lead with 64, was at 133 with four other golfers.

"My round could have been better if I did anything with my putter," said Coody, who won the 1971 Masters en route to three victories in 24 years on the regular tour.

"I only had four bad shots the entire round, one of them resulting in the bogey. I missed makeable putts on four holes. But I have no complaints. It's ridiculous to think you can make every putt.

"My concentration was the best."

Bies, coming off three excellent years as a senior, hadn't done better than a tie for 30th this year.

"I've been flat and haven't had much enthusiasm," said Bies, who has won five times as a senior. "Despite how poorly I've been playing, I didn't feel badly about my game.

"I was just waiting for something to get me going. I had a 64 in the pro-am on Wednesday, so maybe that set me off."

Rodriguez riled over Crampton's slow play

SCARBOROUGH-ON-HUDSON, N.Y. (AP) — Chi Chi Rodriguez, who shot a 2-over-par 72 on Saturday to fall out of contention in the NYNEX Commemorative seniors tournament, threw objects around the locker room after his round.

Rodriguez, who was grouped with Bruce Crampton and Walt Zembriski, complained about Crampton's slow play throughout the round. Rodriguez is now at 137, nine strokes behind leader Charles Coody with 18 holes to play.

"How can you concentrate when a guy is taking three and four minutes for every shot," said Rodriguez, the senior PGA leader this year with four victories and $400,333. "I went to the officials but nothing ever happens.

"They keep saying they're going to penalize, but they never do. Now I'm out of it.

"Sure, I'm entitled to shoot a bad round once in a while, but I don't want somebody to cause it to happen. I want to do it on my own. I'll get over it, but I'm far from happy."

Crampton had left the course before Rodriguez' outburst.

NJCAA: Tournament is divided into three parts

munity College, Brevard (Fla.) Community College, Scottsdale (Ariz.) Community College and George Wallace-Dothan (Ala.) College as the top teams entered in the tournament with a shot at the team title, according to Poss.

Two teams from each of the 24 regions won berths to compete in the tourney; Odessa and Florida Community College received the two at-large invitations to complete the field.

"It's been a lot of work," Poss said, "but I felt like the community would enjoy something of this nature.

"It will give the people of Midland a chance to see what junior college golf is all about."

The tournament will be divided into three groups. Division I schools, or programs which have players on full scholarship, tee off Tuesday beginning at 7:30 a.m. at The Club at Mission Dorado. Division II (partial scholarship) and Division III (non-scholarship) schools tee off Tuesday at 7 a.m. at Green Tree.

The groups switch sites for the second day's action Wednesday.

A cut to the low 15 teams or any school within 15 shots of the lead, and to the low 24 individuals or any individuals within 20 shots of the lead will be made after 36 holes.

The final two rounds, Thursday and Friday, will be played at Green Tree.

Former Midland High coach and present Paris Junior College golf coach Mickey Flippin will be one of five players and coaches inducted into the Junior College Golf Hall of Fame in ceremonies Monday at Chaparral Center.

Flippin will be joined by Brevard Community College coach Floyd Horgan, Lincoln Trail, Ill. coach P.D. Highsmith, and touring pros Gene Sauers (Central Alabama), and Buddy Alexander (St. Petersburg Community College), both former JUCO players.

Late birdie spree gives Walker Rochester lead

Associated Press

LPGA

ROCHESTER, N.Y. — Colleen Walker started slowly, but had four birdies on the back nine Saturday to take a two-shot lead over Beth Daniel after three rounds of the LPGA Rochester International.

Walker, who has not won a tournament this year, was one over after nine holes, but birdied 11, 12, 16 and 17 for a 3-under-par 69. She is at 10-under 206 after three rounds around the 6,162-yard Locust Hill Country Club course.

"You don't want to know what I said to myself at the turn," Walker said. "I was a little ticked off at myself."

Walker sank a 25-foot birdie putt on 12 and one-putted for birdie after chipping out of the bunker on 17.

Daniel, last year's LPGA Player of the Year, shot a 71 on Saturday. She was followed by Pat Bradley, a two-time winner of the Rochester tournament, and Trish Johnson of Wales, both at 209.

Daniel and Walker started the day tied for second with Chris Johnson at seven under. Johnson shot a 75 to drop to four under going into the final round.

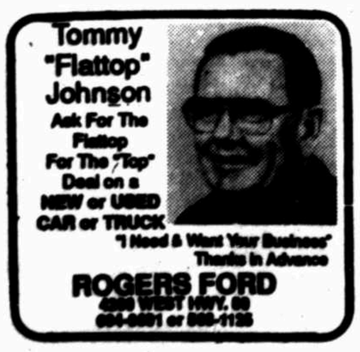

Daniel had three birdies, all on the front half, and two bogeys.

"I thought I played pretty lousy today," Daniel said. She said she was having trouble with her swing and lining up her putts. "It was just one of those days when I couldn't get keyed in."

Bradley, who started the day at four under, moved into striking distance with six birdies and three bogeys. She was at eight under after a birdie on 16, but hit a 3-wood into the bunker on 17 and left it there with her next shot for a bogey.

Michelle Estill, in her first year on the tour, started the day leading at eight under. She had one birdie and seven bogeys to fall to two under.

Patty Sheehan, who won the Rochester tournament in both 1989 and 1990, shot a 68.

Trade agreement good for nations

When the U.S. Congress gave President George Bush the authority to negotiate an historic trade agreement with Mexico recently, it in effect recognized that Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari has been able to change the face of the nation south of the United States border more than most of his predecessors. That change means that a new and economically powerful American trading bloc may soon become a reality.

If Bush can fashion a trade agreement acceptable to Congress, it will undoubtedly benefit both countries. Impoverished Mexico needs U.S. goods such as vegetables, beef and grains, American technology and American tourists and consumers. The United States needs a market for much of its material goods and could benefit from increased importation of Mexican petroleum.

During the eight years of the Ronald Reagan administration, relations between the two countries improved significantly despite challenges posed by illegal immigration and the illegal drug trade. That improvement has been enhanced during President Bush's term and the trade agreement could bring even closer relations on several fronts — but the starting point is the trade agreement.

For decades, the Mexican people have feared growing too dependent on the "neighbor to the North," anticipating domination by the United States or outright subjugation. Since winning the 1988 presidential election, Salinas has brought both attention and a change of philosophy to the Mexican state. That change has been apparent in his work to arrive at the trade agreement.

While some analysts in this country foresee the proposed U.S.-Mexico trade pact as a step toward the creation of a European Economic Community in the Western Hemisphere and an exodus of American jobs to Mexico, it really will likely result in the "recapture" of some jobs that have already fled. In a recent editorial, The Dallas Morning News stated:

"In fact, the North American treaty is more likely to see jobs already lost to the Far East move to Mexico. The relocation of these jobs in nearby Mexico will help provide employment for that nation's vast and growing population, help create a larger Mexican middle class that will provide political stability and a market for U.S. high-end consumer goods, and will help stem the tide of illegal immigration to the U.S."

A trade agreement will be in the best interests of both the United States and Mexico. President Bush is wise in moving toward that end.

Texans need relief on property taxes

To a state facing a $4.7 billion gap between revenue and what budget writers think the state will need, budget cuts as well as new revenue surely will be required.

While management audits aimed at budget cutting are being conducted at this very moment, the Select Committee on State Revenue, chaired by former Texas Gov. John Connally, also is examining revenue alternatives — including tuition increases, fee hikes, tax reform and tax increases.

When the commission issues its report July 1, its charge to the Legislature should include rewriting the tax code to provide relief to property owners. Texas is now sixth in the nation in per-capita property tax burden — and that will become worse as tax hikes included in the 'Robin Hood" school finance plan take effect this fall. ...

However, before lawmakers take up the tax code, they must scrub the budget as never before. Every policy and program must be revisited.

This summer, Texas lawmakers have a rare chance to gain control of state spending, create a new government structure that better serves all Texans and write a reformed tax code that will promote growth while meeting state needs. Doing so will require courage and a willingness to put the good of Texas before personal political futures. ...

Rep. Courter's Grumann link tilted field too much

Former U.S. Rep. Jim Courter, who landed on his feet as chairman of the commission reviewing military base closings after he lost the New Jersey gubernatorial race last year, has resigned his $3,000-a-month consulting job with the Grumann Corp., a major defense contractor.

Courter said he was concerned about "perceptions," but didn't realize what all the fuss was about after his Grumann link was reported, and he said he was considering a similar post with Northrop, another big defense contractor.

When the debate is controlled by insiders, there is no real debate, nor can the base-closing commission be considered impartial.

Millions of little people, such as those in Beeville, are concerned about base closings. So are the big guys, such as Grumann. Courter's link to Grumann hardly made the playing field level.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, June 2, the 153rd day of 1991. There are 212 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

Fifty years ago, on June 2, 1941, baseball's "Iron Horse," Lou Gehrig, died in New York of a degenerative disease, amyotrophic lateral sclerosis.

Today's birthdays: TV producer Chuck Barris is 62. Actress Sally Kellerman is 54. Actor Stacy Keach is 50.

Thought for today: "If there is a possibility of several things going wrong, the one that will go wrong is the one that will do the most damage." — Corollary to Murphy's Law.

Wałesa fighting to make Poland work

WARSAW — These days the problems confronting President Lech Walesa can be sized up by a single screw. He explained it to us during a recent interview:

Anderson

"I have already closed some state enterprises. And now I can't make this appliance because one plant that was making a screw, which is needed, doesn't exist any more. And I can't revive that plant because everything it did, it did poorly — apart from that little screw, which it did well."

Such is the life of the man who is trying to plant the seeds of capitalism in the soil of statism. Poland is finding that growing a society of individual responsibility and capitalism can be no less challenging than facing down communism.

Walesa seemed almost resigned about Poland's current plight. He desires closer economic ties with the West, more trade and foreign investment, but knows that Poland must take root on its own after a history of state planning and control.

Ironically, Poland may find some solution through greater ties to its former masters in Moscow. Walesa knows that Poland cannot afford to be combative with a neighbor like the Soviet Union, which inevitably must be a key trading partner. Characteristically, Walesa's analysis comes marbled in metaphor:

"Whenever someone becomes free, he becomes happy with that freedom. Get the little horse out of the stable when it's cold, and see how it runs. See how it prances. But then it slows down. And eventually it will come back to the warm stable — although at the first moment you let it out, you weren't able to stop it. He must do his joy dance. But outside gets cold, uncomfortable. And it comes back home.

"The same happens with nations. We also break out. Oh, yes! And at that moment we would — oh yes, sir — we would go for a run, a break. But then we come to the conclusion that we are destined to live together (with the Soviets). That we are stuck with each other. That we are condemned to be together. Neither Poland, nor the Soviet Union, can be placed somewhere else on the map. So we must develop relations to the point of a good, comfortable relationship."

Walesa understands that the quick fix of Western aid cannot cure the underlying problems plaguing the Polish economy, and that dependence on the West is no solution. Our U.S. ambassador here, Thomas Simons, believes this attitude underscores Poland's "retreat into reality," that there will be no easy bailouts from the United States.

Walesa feels suffocated by the state enterprises the Communists built up over time and are proving woefully inefficient but difficult to shut down. "It's too big a problem," he shrugged.

Walesa is striving to improve laws regarding foreign investment, but too much red tape continues to discourage investors from abroad. And trade, while not a bail out, may be the salvation for Poland in Walesa's opinion, but it is still an elusive goal. "The West will not accept the products which we used to sell to the Soviet Union. The West doesn't want them. We're not trading enough, but it's because we are not producing enough to be able to trade with the United States. We do trade and make profits. But it's all too slow. Many people are complaining. There are many unsolved problems. And there is going to be a lot of disorder."

Still, Walesa clings to privatization and a diverse political system run by democratic men and women as keys to Poland's future. In Public education, or classrooms from hell?

WASHINGTON — Never has the nation been safer from foreign menaces, and never before has the nation been graduating students less well-educated than those of the immediately preceding generation. These facts warrant this conclusion: Today the principal threat to America is America's public-education establishment.

Will

It tenaciously opposes national testing of primary and secondary school students. As Chester Finn of Vanderbilt says in his indispensable new book, "We Must Take Charge," the education establishment knows that testing would shatter the public's complacency and bring demands for accountability.

Sixty-three percent of those ages 18 to 24 cannot find France on an unlabeled map (fewer than half find New York); 60 percent of 11th graders do not know why The Federalist papers were written; 94 percent of 11th graders cannot compute simple interest; in tests comparing their math and science skills with those of five foreign countries and four Canadian provinces, American 13-year-olds finish last; New York Telephone finds that 115,000 of 117,000 applicants flunk its employment exam; 80 percent of applicants flunk Motorola's exam seeking levels of 7th-grade English and 5th-grade math. Every American employer knows it is possible — indeed, common — for high-school graduates to be functionally illiterate.

National testing would be a lever for moving the entire world of education. Measurable standards for cognitive learning would shape curricula and teacher education, and would provide criteria for pay differentials among teachers, and for declaring the educational bankruptcy of some schools.

Some conservatives are afraid national tests would further institutionalize the political ideology of the education establishment. Testing might be an occasion for indoctrination through politicized questioning. Furthermore, say conservatives, any movement toward a more national curriculum would make possible continent-wide mistakes.

Momentum toward national testing, and all that it entails, was imparted by the 1989 "education summit" with the president and all 50 governors at the University of Virginia — Mr. Jefferson's university. Any permeation of education by national standards does involve another departure from Jeffersonian impulses, toward those of his rival, Hamilton, that apostle of centralization and national, rather than local, consciousness.

However, many conservatives, like most Americans, are alarmed enough to put aside their traditional preference for educational localism. National testing is necessary for acquiring information about educational results that can galvanize and guide reform. Anyway, localism makes less and less sense in a nation of increasing mobility among regions, a nation flunking — as a nation — the international test of competitiveness.

The parlous condition of public education was the foremost domestic concern voiced by voters in 1990 Election Day exit polls. More than 70 percent of Americans (the figure is higher among parents) support standardized national testing, including a national high-school graduation exam, keyed to a national curriculum.

Conservatives' qualms about national tests should be assuaged by the ferocity of the education establishment's opposition to such tests. That establishment wants to preserve America's unwarranted sense of well-being that is based on lax or tendentious assessments of cognitive learning. Most Americans like the illusion of living in Lake Wobegon, where "all the children are above average."

It is no coincidence that the philosophy and interests of the education establishment coincide exactly. Testing is "judgmental" and hence jars the educators' warm, "caring," empathetic, "child-centered" therapeutic ethic that nurtures "self-esteem." This produces today's toxic mixture of low expectations and grade inflation.

Testing would make possible a result-oriented assessment of education, would end today's practice of gauging the quality of education by the amount of money spent on it. Testing is necessary for a system of accountability.

Education is second only, and not by much, to defense as the nation's most expensive common provision. National testing is a step toward facing this fact: The safer the world becomes militarily, the less prepared America is to prosper in it, because knowledge matters more as military prowess matters less.

George Will's column is distributed by Washington Post Writers Group.

RUSSELL BAKER

NRA, a new street sport and instant replay

Here's a film of five low-lifers beating and robbing a man in the street. One of the five filmed it himself with a video camera. It shows how far people will go nowadays to get on television.

Baker

The film was shown in a Washington courtroom where the cinematographer and his cast are on trial for assault and robbery. Fragments of it shown on TV stations there featured a punch to the jaw that left one pedestrian unconscious and a brief sequence in which one assailant urinated on the fallen man's face.

This last ran just long enough to provide good television but not quite long enough to be utterly tasteless. As I watched it, my first reaction was to look in the background for Charlton Heston, the voice of the National Rifle Association.

The scene seemed ideal for a Heston commercial. Studying the squalor, he would look us straight in the eye and, with that fine, gentle decency he projects, lament that there were people, believe it or not, right here in this deadly dangerous nation's capital of ours who wanted to subject us to these mean streets after taking away our right to own guns.

This being the real Washington, Heston was not there, just as he was not really on Mount Sinai when he played Moses and not really on the scaffold in the Sistine Chapel when he played Michelangelo. While illusion may be a pleasant substitute for reality when we lack the real Moses and Michelangelo, illusionists can make an awkward mess when they fool around with the kind of world where people's idea of a good time is recording their depravities on home video.

Like many American cities, Washington already has neighborhoods so heavily armed that everybody, child and adult, lives at constant risk of being shot by randomly flying bullets discharged in the quarrels of strangers. Instead of Charlton Heston pitching for higher levels of armament, someone ought to be crying, "Not one gun more, I prithee!'

Peter Jennings's ABC News show reports that in Chicago, at least, somebody is indeed saying it. There, apparently, some housing projects have concentrations of firepower reminiscent of an old World War I movie about the Western Front: entire populations, men, women and children, falling like flies.

So there's political pressure for sweeps that would confiscate every gun that can be found. The National Rifle Association is opposed.

This produced a rare expression of old-fashioned common-man common sense on the Jennings show. He raised a question that is never quite adequately answered in the usual news accounts of the NRA's powerful lobbying muscle and its ability to strike terror in the hearts of politicians: to wit, who is the NRA? Aside from Charlton Heston, it has no human face. Like the IRS, it seems to be a set of initials functioning as a terror society.

Unlike the IRS, which aims to terrorize all society, the NRA seems to terrorize only politicians. Its purpose appears to be to prevent any restraint on firearms marketing, which suggests that it's a business lobby dedicated to helping the gun industry do well.

But who is the gun industry? The Pentagon's government-subsidized armorers would surely look on automatic pistols and assault weapons for the public as small-bore stuff, wouldn't they? Yet the NRA's most zealously pursued goal is to frustrate every effort at stopping the spread of this street-killer armament that makes places like Washington such effective backgrounds for Charlton Heston commercials.

I am reminded of "Butch Cassidy and the Sundance Kid." Who are those guys anyhow?

Empty homes, packed prisons

The May 28th edition of the Midland Reporter-Telegram carried the syndicated Bill Murchison column entitled "Thick stone walls do not a prison make." Murchison reminded us of the tragedy of early release from prison of hard-core criminals. In addition to blaming the Legislature for not spending more money on the building of prisons, and the Federal Judiciary for preventing the prison system's deterioration into the rat-infested dark ages, he simply missed the point.

In the last 25 years, we as a society have forced our legislators to pass laws at every session, without fail, to enforce the morality of our society, to dictate what we can think and what we cannot think, to establish what we can read and what we must not read, to instruct how we can spend our money or not spend it; indeed, to control, by enforcement or prohibition, every action and facet of our lives. Violation of these laws are generally answered with incarceration.

No citizen nor jurist favors early release for hardened criminals. But until we reserve our prisons for violent crimes and hardened criminals, we are simply going to have overcrowding and early release. No amount of tax increase and building of additional cells can keep pace with the thought process and mind-set that all sinners and all wrongdoers should also be in prison.

Remember when our parents and grandparents used to say, "There ought to be a law against — —?" You don't hear that much anymore. Between the federal, state, county and municipal governments, there is a law against just about everything.

What a view we're getting from Pitts

Has John Paul Pitts (his column of May 19) been in "the pit" so long that he no longer has any sense?

Now when I speak of sense I mean all senses of "sense" because if he doesn't know that Texas and specifically the Permian Basin, as defined in your newspaper, is not "in a mess" he had better lift up his head, shake it real hard and get him a good American Heritage Dictionary and look up some words and try to come out of the dark.

He might take a walk then, into the real world, all the while taking an inventory of what he sees. If he doesn't see a "mess" in the first four senses and then come to the conclusion that the infidels have created a Sodom and Gomorrah, then you had better send him to a retreat in the mountains where he can breathe fresh oxygen and perhaps regenerate his salinized brain cells — if it isn't too late.

You know, salt damages the nucleus of cells and when that gets damaged, all kinds of perverted things happen.

Salt kills the roots of trees and when you start mixing "manure" and water along with it, explosive things start happening. Indeed, we have had "environmental overkill" but certainly not in the same sense that Mr. Spannaus speaks of.

Alma L. Smith
Midland

What was that, killer rain or killer Draino?

As a scientist, I am careful in the conclusions which I draw. Without specific tests I can only speculate on cause and effect. But because hundreds of other groups have made thousands of tests in similar situations, I feel it is reasonable to speculate here having a little information.

Did you notice that by Saturday, May 25, hundreds of fish had died in the pond at Wadley-Barron Park? Is it a coincidence that so many fish died all at once? What is the cause of this mass death if it is not coincidence? Could it be something wrong with the water? Could bad water be connected to the once and only recent rainstorm which cleaned our air and streets Wednesday, May 22? Could the streetwash have contained something lethal to aquatic life?

Earlier that day one of our city employees was spraying herbicide on plants growing in cracks in the streets of that neighborhood at taxpayer expense. Also, for a couple of months now lawn care companies have been spraying chemical insecticides and fertilizers on neighborhood lawns. The potential was there for poisons claimed "safe" to be moved to the pond.

Other animals also have connections with the lake. Ducks, other birds, turtles and pets. Are they being affected now?

There are lots of questions aren't there? If we're not afraid to know the answers perhaps those responsible for the pond should check into the problem. Those users of lawn chemicals should consider their effects beyond their own yard.

By the way, the plants growing in the streets are doing fine.

Carrillo applauded for mature attitude

Now that the Midland City Council elections are final, I would like to take this opportunity to thank Councilman Tony Carrillo. He has done an outstanding job as councilman. Besides participating in the decision-making process of the council, he has brought a sense of maturity to that position, something I find commendable.

Once again, thank you Carrillo. Your efforts have been appreciated.

Time for R-T to bone up on conservancy

Regarding an article in the May 15th Reporter-Telegram, I would like to enlighten readers with a few facts about the Nature Conservancy (NC). It is not the "knight in shining armor" organization that this paper and others continually depict it as being.

In Texas alone, the NC has, since 1965 turned over 92 percent of all land acquired to government. It spends two-thirds of its annual budget purchasing property for government. The U.S. government already owns nearly 40 percent of the total land area in this nation! The NC is not a private preservation organization, it is a conduit for government land acquisition.

The Nature Conservancy is a non-profit, therefore, tax-exempt organization. When it acquires a tract of land, it pays no property taxes on that land, thereby removing a substantial source of income from small, rural communities. Schools, hospitals and social services suffer as a result. This does not even take into account the loss of economic return when land is taken out of production. When the Houston Harte ranch was removed from the tax rolls due to NC acquisition, the NC was asked to help make up the shortfall in tax revenue. They flatly refused.

In the last several weeks I have read a number of articles in the Reporter-Telegram on environmental issues. All presented only one side of the picture. The Reporter-Telegram would serve its readers better by doing more research into conservation/preservation/environmental issues and presenting both sides of the story. There are many of us in this state dedicated to conserving land and wildlife but not at the expense of private property rights which the Nature Conservancy threatens.

The NC is a quasi-governmental agency, not a private preservation organization. Since when has government bureaucracy ever done anything better and since when has preservation in the private sector become such a bad thing?

A wise move

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Editor in Chief, The Hearst Newspapers

NEW YORK — At considerable political risk, President Bush has shown another example of courageous statesmanship in his decision to renew most-favored-nation trade treatment for China for one more year.

Hearst

The announcement of his decision in a graduation speech at his alma mater, Yale University, initially sparked a mostly Democratic partisan firestorm in Congress. It appears to have been the opening round in a major debate that will lead either to a compromise agreement or a presidential veto of a congressional demand that the trade agreement be conditioned on the Chinese communist regime's progress in curbing human rights abuses.

The assailants of President Bush paid little attention to the price he intends to make the Chinese government pay for renewal of the trade agreement, which would continue to entitle China to the lowest tariffs granted any foreign country.

The importance of the military-related sanctions the president will impose on China if he wins the congressional contest have been virtually ignored by those who oppose any improvement in relations with the communist regime, which brutally crushed the pro-democracy freedom movement in Tiananmen Square in June 1989.

There are two vitally important reasons why President Bush was not going to precipitate a grave crisis in Sino-American relations by refusing to renew the trade agreement.

One is that we need China's backing on certain international issues. The other, which was disclosed a few days ago by John Wallach, our foreign affairs editor in Washington, was completely ignored by the president's critics. That was the danger that the Beijing regime would deny us the secret information gathered by the American-established listening posts on the Sino-Soviet border in a mountainous region of western China. These posts monitor Soviet missile tests and are our most effective electronic surveillance of Soviet missile launching.

In return for the opportunity to purchase American military supplies, the Chinese government allowed us to set up the listening posts in 1979 after we were forced to remove them from Iran when the shah left the country.

Congressional critics claimed President Bush was renewing the trade agreement with China without any conditions. They ignored what, in effect, was a drastic condition. That was the president's announcement that renewal of the trade agreement will be accompanied by the imposition of sanctions on China seeking to curb its sale of missile and nuclear weapons-producing technology to anti-American Third World countries. The sanctions will block U.S. firms from selling high-speed computers used for missile testing. Licenses will be refused to U.S. companies that have already applied for the right to sell China 20 such computers valued at $30 billion.

The countries to which China has been selling the American technology include Iran, Syria, Libya and other radical-ruled countries. During the Persian Gulf war Iraqi forces in Kuwait fired a Chinese anti-ship silkworm missile at a U.S. warship in the Gulf.

If President Bush imposed the weapons sanctions without renewing the trade agreement, it would seriously anger the Beijing regime whose tacit support of the United States in the United Nations Security Council was vital for the U.S.-led coalition forces that forced Saddam Hussein to withdraw from Kuwait. The Bush administration is also counting on China's support for a Mideast peace settlement.

Senate Majority leader George Mitchell questioned the morality of renewing the trade agreement with China because it refuses to move toward democratic reform. If we denied trade with China because it lacks morality toward its people, we should have nothing to do with Saudi Arabia and several other Arab and Moslem nations. There is no moral justice in the way a number of Arab states treat women.

When he is not playing partisan politics, Senator Mitchell is one of the most rational and highly respected members of Congress. My guess is he will reach a compromise with the president that may limit the duration of the preferential trade status for China unless the Beijing rulers release still imprisoned students and make some progress toward reform.

The best news this past week was the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's decision to reorganize its forces so that the United States will bear less of the defense burden in Europe.

Keep Midland Beautiful honors youths' letters

As part of Earth Day activities, Keep Midland Beautiful sponsored a writing contest for local fourth, fifth and sixth graders. Entrants were invited to address a letter to the editor or mayor on the topics of littering, recycling, beautification, education or law enforcement.

Selected as winners were:

Littering habit is unfunny, uncanny

Littering is a bad habit. I wish people would stop to think about it. On Thursdays and Fridays on the bus ride to school I go past ditches. They have plastic bags, Coke cans, cardboard, newspaper, and other pieces of trash.

One day we stopped at a traffic light. I looked out and there was a ditch and near the curb was one flower with some other buds. But for the background was trash. Trash! Trash! Trash! Let's help by keeping our world clean.

Katie Hinterlong
Henderson Elementary, Gr. 4

Recycling could be profitable venture

I am sure you are quite aware major cities in the United States have already begun recycling programs. These programs call upon citizens to separate paper trash from plastic and glass products. For instance, Good Housekeeping says Seattle, Wash. runs a total of 16 recycling programs, including curbside pickup, composting, and household hazardous-waste collection. As a result, an impressive 34% of the trash is recycled, including paint the the city recycles into profit by marketing it as "Seattle Beige."

Farther east, Newark, N.J. has a comprehensive curbside recycling program. This year, as the city surpassed a 50% recycling rate, officials there soon hope to begin a buy-recycled-only program for tires, lubricating oils, and paper products.

Midland produces a lot of trash and garbage that could be recycled with similar programs. For instance, the city could set aside money to develop them and set a 1992 starting date. Perhaps a new recycling facility in Midland would create a few new jobs.

Kimberly Gates
Rusk, Gr. 5

It's a sad, dirty world that doesn't recycle

The people of Midland want to do something about litter in our community. We think there should be something done about our parks and highways in Midland. The fines should be raised so that people will start doing something about the trash.

There's also private property that should be dealt with because if people let their grass grow too long it could start a fire or someone could get hurt by playing in or by the grass.

When people throw stuff like diapers into an alley that means they're too careless to take out the trash and instead they just throw it out their window. We need something done about that today. When people drive down the highway, we should stop and pick up trash if there is some and put it into a trash can on the side of the road. In parks, most people pick up trash, but there are people that just leave it there and let it blow away. Something has to be done about that too.

We need to keep out cities and the world clean so that in the future our children can see it as a good place to live and not some place that looks terrible. I think that the people in Midland can make a difference about the littering in our community of we want to.

SPEAKING OUT

Student writer sees a demon in our midst

By Jennifer Silverman

Jennifer Silverman was the "Just Say No" essay winner from Midland Freshman High School this year. The daughter of Joyce and Charles Silverman, she is active in piano, student council, and sports.

Throughout the ominous night I ride across the star studded nation entangling my deadly fingers into peoples lives, bringing them into my caliginous world. Swarthy is my cloak and ghostly is my face for I am the creature of destruction. Those who know me well call the the god of alcohol.

Before anyone ever tries to drink my fatal concoction, I first begin to seep into the brain through colorful commercials with gorgeous women and handsome guys to make people feel like they are riding upon the shoulders of the world. After forcing people to believe that liquor will impress their friends, I sweep over the people's brains like a bitter wind and enrich the powers of curiosity.

It all begins with one simple beer or a shot glass of whiskey; but who cares, drinking is fun; and after all, it beats boredom, they all say. However, so far I, the haunting creature of despair, have entrapped 6½ million Americans in my deadly nightmare. Included in these terrifying numbers are 10 percent of sixth graders, 22 percent of seventh graders and eighth graders, 23 percent of ninth graders, and 39 percent of all high school seniors who are also problem drinkers. So I, the dark repulsive beast, know the real truth about alcohol because once the people are hooked, my evil magic infiltrates the minds of my victims.

Continuing my vicious journey through the body, I act as a depressant on the central nervous system, slowing reflexes, slowing thinking process, and affecting coordination. As people begin to become more familiar with me, the god of alcohol, they talk more than usual. I often paint a slightly rosy color upon their naive cheeks as if all the world were happiness and a candle's flame of hope for the future. But soon the promising color disappears like the sun on a cloudy day, and drowsiness with depression and lethargy take over. This wickedness alone has robbed our nation of 10 million healthy brains as I entrap myself in schools, factories, and offices as well as skid row. Without fail, this sadness continues as I, Mr. Alcohol, continue my atrocities upon society.

The further I go with someone, the more powerful my strength becomes, and I provoke more violent behavior than any other harmful creature. Sometimes the victims no longer hold onto life and resort to suicide before I can completely choke the breath from these alcohol abusers. For over a 20-year period, the number of 15- to 19-year-old's alcohol related suicide rose from 3.7 per 100,000 to 8.7 per 100,000.

Many times innocent victims mistakenly get trapped in my vicious cycle. I kill 50,000 unsuspecting people in car crashes and over one-half of those who caused the accidents had exceeded the amount known to be medically safe. Just imagining the fact that I have murdered 250,000 people and caused 500,000 injuries each year should make your blood run cold and your heart stop. Adding to all of this, I, the grisly alcohol monster, have been responsible for 41 arrests per day in drug- and alcohol-related crimes.

Yes, I am accountable for making 6½ million addicts. Riding forever upon my gallant steed, I turn people toward me, get them hooked, and then work my way to bring them ever closer to a life of destruction, for I am the demon of darkness.

Even as my deadly jaws close down upon the remnants of their lives, they deny their involvement with me, fooling only themselves. Yet you, too, may think you will never allow me into your life; just remember my lethal, potent grasp clutching even the strongest of hearts, especially those who give me a chance while thinking they will always control me.

Foreign Affairs: Free elections do not guarantee a democracy

Last Sunday, 87 percent of Georgian voters cast their ballots for Zviad Gamsakhurdia and independence from Moscow. On the same day, Saudi fundamentalists petitioned their king to broaden participation in government.

The proliferating number of American Savonarolas who preach democracy as the salvation for U.S. foreign policy surely will rejoice at the news. The general sentiment is terrific, but its application at this time in the Soviet Union and the Middle East is highly questionable.

The danger is that the Savonarolas often reduce democracy to "free elections," and free elections can be a trap. They can legitimize would-be dictators as well as democrats.

The United States does not want to be trapped into blanket endorsement of democratic means that can and will be used in many countries for undemocratic ends. Policy should focus not on free elections but on what makes free elections genuinely free — namely a nation's political culture, political leadership and economic base.

Hitler, of course, is the classic example of exploiting free elections and coalition-building to destroy democracy. Others in more recent memory gained or legitimized power through elections to the same end: Indira Gandhi in India, Sukarno in Indonesia, Lee Kwan Yew in Singapore and Ferdinand Marcos in the Philippines. India and the Philippines rebounded, but how well and for how long?

We have the case now of Gamsakhurdia and perhaps others like him in the crumbling Soviet Union. He may well turn out to be a democrat, but there are already troubling signs.

His only commitment, it seems, is to establish Georgian independence from the Soviet Union. Two weeks ago Georgian police under his control burst into the headquarters of an opposition candidate. Only a week before the election, the Georgian parliament banned any statements that would injure Gamsakhurdia's "honor and dignity" and set a six-year prison term for violators. And of a Radio Liberty reporter who charged that soldiers had been used to intimidate voters, Gamsakhurdia said: "He deserves to be arrested."

The American Savonarolas of democracy are quiet about these shortcomings. They think that self-determination and independence for the various Soviet republics is good for them and good for America. They think free elections are the proof of the people's will, and of democracy.

A glance at Gamsakhurdia's slim record, however, suggests that his election may lead not to the birth of democracy in Georgia but to its prenatal demise. Georgians might well enjoy more freedoms under a reformist Gorbachev regime — even without elections.

Similar concerns should attend the new interest of Islamic fundamentalists in democracy. They have pressed for free elections in several Arab countries. Presenting themselves as protectors of the oppressed, they have done quite well in these elections, as they knew they would. But it is questionable that their real aim is to promote democracy.

Islam draws no line between religion and politics. As undemocratic as the present Saudi regime is, a total Islamic one — even with broader political participation — would be less free. It would leave no neutral public space where people's views are treated as opinions, not as truth. Elections would become trivial in that environment.

Creighton more than 'just happy' to be at CWS

Associated Press

OMAHA, Neb. — Creighton showed an entire stadium and the Clemson Tigers that the Bluejays were more than "just happy to be here."

Hometown Creighton, in its first College World Series, upended the second-seeded Tigers 8-4 in the first round behind the seven-hit pitching of Mike Heathcott.

"We had a gread day today," Creighton coach Jim Hendry said. "It was tremendous to play in front of the city of Omaha like this.

"I never got an impression all week that our club was going to just show up and be happy to be here."

The Bluejays were powered by Scott Stahoviak's three hits and two RBIs, and three RBIs by Steve Hinton.

The game matched two of the nation's top offensive teams. Creighton led the county with a .361 batting average and Clemson topped all scorers with a 10-run average.

Creighton (50-20) rewarded the fourth-largest crowd in CWS history with 11 hits off six Clemson pitchers and the 16,244 in attendance made plenty of noise for their hometown team.

There was plenty of noise right after the game too, as tornado warnings were issued for the stadium area. At least one tornado touched down in Omaha with no early reports of damage or injuries.

Heathcott earned a school record 15th win against one loss. The old mark was 14 by Dan Smith in 1990. He allowed Clemson runners as far as second base in only one inning.

"I can't say enough about Mike Heathcoat," Hendry said. "A lot of clubs will tell you he's not the best pitcher they've ever faced, but he just keeps putting up W's."

Creighton scored twice in the third when Dax Jones singled, Stahoviak walked one out later and Hinton tripled on the first pitch.

The Bluejays chased Clemson starter Jason Angel (14-2) in the five-run fifth.

Wichita St. 8, Long Beach St. 5

Jim Audley had three hits and Doug Mirabelli drove in three runs to lead third-seeded Wichita State to a win over No. 6 Long Beach State.

The Shockers' win sets up a rematch with Missouri Valley Conference rival Creighton in Monday night's winners' bracket game. Wichita State, which beat Creighton (50-20) six times this season, is 64-12.

Long Beach State dropped to 44-21 and fell into Monday's elimination game against second-seeded Clemson (60-9), which lost to Creighton 8-4 on Saturday.

The game was delayed by rain for about an hour at the start, but Wichita State scored two runs in the first on a groundout by Mirabelli and Todd Dreifort's run-scoring single.

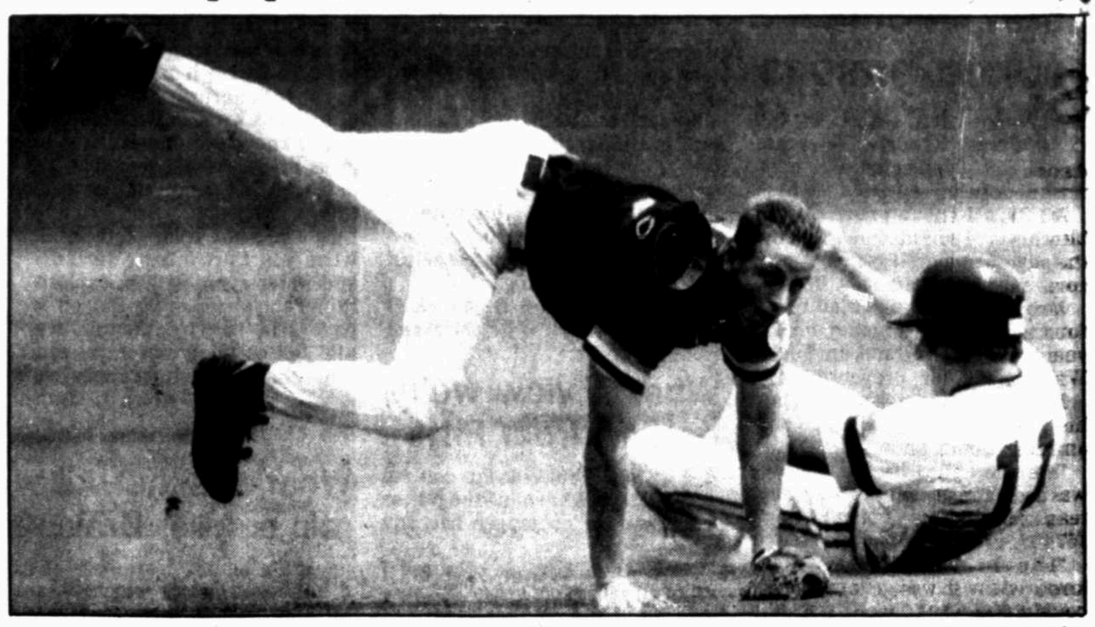

Shocker starter Kennie Steenstra (16-0) had control problems early, working out of a bases-loaded jam in the first and he gave up three runs in the second, one when he walked Jason Giambi with the bases loaded.

Wichita State got two in the third on a run-scoring double by Doug Jones and Scot McCloghan's sacrifice fly.

Steenstra, who threw 93 pitches in the first four innings, had the bases loaded with no outs again in the fifth, but he got out of the jam with a double play and a fly ball.

Mirabelli's 13th home run of the season in the fifth added two more runs and the Long Beach State defense, second-best in the nation this season, cost the 49ers two more runs in the sixth.

Freshman Darren Dreifort relieved Steenstra to start the sixth.

HEALTH EMERGENCY — IMMEDIATE ACTION REQUIRED:
SUPREME COURT RULING THREATENS FAMILY PLANNING AND DENIES WOMEN INFORMATION ABOUT ABORTION — EVEN WHEN THEIR HEALTH IS AT RISK.

One in 4 women who use a reversible form of birth control uses publicly funded programs.

Dropping 4,000 clinics funded by Title X may lead to 400,000 unintended pregnancies.

resulting in over 175,000 births to women of all ages and an estimated 178,000 abortions.

THIS IS AN EMERGENCY. Congress has 60 days to save millions of women from the effects of regulations designed to disrupt and destroy the nation's family planning program. Trampling on the First Amendment right to free speech, the Supreme Court ruled in Rust v. Sullivan on May 23 that if the government pays for any part of a family planning program, it can dictate what doctors can and cannot tell their patients.

As a result, destructive and abusive regulations concocted by Reagan appointees in 1988 are poised to go into effect in more than 4,000 clinics nationwide.

■ The Gag Rule forbids doctors to answer a patient's questions about abortion, even if pregnancy threatens the patient's health. Denied counseling about all their medical options, desperate patients would be forced to find their own way to safety.

The Gag Rule violates free speech and medical ethics and will expose health professionals who follow the rule to malpractice suits.

■ The Separate Facilities Rule, also upheld by the court, stigmatizes women who choose abortion and creates barriers between poor women and current sources of information about safe and effective birth control.

These regulations are designed to subvert a program that has enjoyed bipartisan Congressional support for two decades. Anti-choice extremists have tried to demolish America's family planning program for the last 10 years, despite the fact that Title X has never funded abortion services.

Indeed, it helps women avert hundreds of thousands of unintended pregnancies and abortions annually.

Unless Congress acts, this Supreme Court ruling will cause havoc in the lives of women.

If care is interrupted, up to a third of current patients may become unintentionally pregnant within 12 months.

CONGRESS MUST ACT WITHIN 60 DAYS TO KEEP THESE DEVASTATING REGULATIONS FROM TAKING EFFECT. WE MUST ACT NOW.

We must protect women's health. Congress has 60 days to free America's family planning program from crippling restrictions that manipulate and limit women's choices.

Make sure women will continue to get the medical information they need.

Please call 1-900-990-4373* to send an urgent letter to your representative in Washington and mail the action coupons below immediately. Thank you.

Title X, the nation's family planning program, has worked well for 20 years. The Supreme Court's ruling in Rust v. Sullivan is nothing less than a public health disaster. Title X must be rescued from regulations designed to destroy it. It must be strengthened to serve every woman in need of care and reauthorized free of restrictive amendments. Please take action now.

Mears sits on 200 pole, so what else is new?

Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — It wasn't even close. Rick Mears blew away the rest of the qualifiers Saturday, taking the pole position for Sunday's Miller 200 with a record-smashing lap of 162.276 mph.

Mears, who drove away last Sunday with his fourth Indianapolis 500 victory, buried his own 2-year-old record of 160.822 with the quick lap on Wisconsin State Fair Park Speedway's one-mile oval.

It was his third pole of the season — all on ovals; his third in a row here, and the 37th of Mears' amazing career.

"He really put it on us," said Mario Andretti, who was a distant second at 158.907, followed by son and teammate Michael at 158.802 and Danny Sullivan at 157.477.

"The car had a good feel and I was confident I knew where it was going to stop at," Mears said. "I could run it right up to the wall."

He did just that, coming so close on his second — slower — qualifying lap that his crew asked by radio if there was any lettering left on the right side of the car.

"I told them there were still a few letter there," Mears said, grinning. "We didn't touch anything."

The second lap, 161.235, was also faster than the old record.

While Mears, whose pole victory added one point to his series-lead, was basking in the glow of his latest triumph, car owner Roger Penske was making an announcement that reflected on Mears' beginnings with Penske Racing 13 years ago.

Penske announced that he has signed 22-year-old Paul Tracy, the 1990 American Racing Series champion, to a multi-year contract. Tracy, who won nine of 14 races in the stepping-stone series last year, will test for Penske during the rest of 1991 and run at least three events next year, including the Indianapolis 500, as a teammate of Mears and Emerson Fittipaldi.

"It's important that Paul gets as much testing as he can," Penske said. "We're going to give him plenty of time to learn his way."

Tracy, who aspires to emulate the 39-year-old Mears, said, "Roger Penske has set the standard for many years ... I've been working toward this opportunity for a long time, and now I look forward to making my contribution through the testing program."

AP Laserphoto

Rick Mears gets 'fearless' instructions from a crew member in Saturday's practice for today's CART Miller 200 race.

Chuck Sprague, Penske's team manager, said, "We've had the test team in place and operating for two years now. Last year, we had three drivers, so testing was no problem. This year, with only two drivers and all the commitments these guys have, there were times when it was tough to find somebody to test. Now, when we decide we need to go somewhere, we'll just go."

The focus, though, remained on Sunday's 200-lap race.

Mears had handling problems at the start last year and, despite overpowering the field in qualifying, much as he did Saturday, fell back at the start before rebounding to finish second to Al Unser Jr.

"He put it on us even worse last year," Mario Andretti said of Mears. "The race was a great equalizer. It happened at Indy, it happened here last year.

NFL Properties sponsors Payton

Associated Press

DALLAS — Walter Payton and the National Football League are together again — sort of.

NFL Properties has signed on to manage Payton's auto racing team.

Payton will race today for the first time this season at the Dallas Grand Prix. He will compete in the Oldsmobile Pro Sports Series, a new national road racing championship sanctioned by the Sports Car Club of America.

"For me, it's just like going to work for the NFL every day," said Payton, former Chicago Bears great and the NFL's all-time leading rusher. "Nothing has changed, except the type of helmet and the uniform I wear."

Last year, Payton competed in the full GT1 Class season and had two victories and one second in seven starts.

Rudd may have extra edge

Associated Press

DOVER, Del. — Ricky Rudd has had an edge all season, but he may have an extra one this weekend.

Rudd is a two-time winner at Dover Downs International Speedway. Although he hasn't won here since 1987, he comes in this time at his strongest, entering Sunday's $804,000 NASCAR Budweiser 500 in second place behind Dale Earnhardt in the driver standings.

Rudd has one win and finished in the top 10 in seven of the first 10 races, leaving him only 36 points behind Earnhardt through 10 of 29 races. A driver can get up to 185 points in one race.

Rudd's 1986 and 1987 wins here showed him he can beat the high-banked, mile oval.

"I have been able to win here," he said. "The driver basically searches for a feel of the race car. Now the car tells me it's right. It gives me that feel that it has what it takes to win here."

His Chevrolet is starting 13th Sunday, with Michael Waltrip on the pole for the first time in his career. Rusty Wallace is starting second.

Earnhardt, meanwhile, also has a pair of Dover wins and is the only two-time winner this year on the circuit. He is starting 10th.

Rudd is enjoying life at the top of the Winston Cup ranks.

He's been driving on the circuit heavily since 1977 and been one of the top 10 drivers all but two of the last 12 seasons. But he's never finished higher than fifth.

Last year he hooked up with Rick Hendrick's team after two years with Kenny Bernstein.

"The first year is really a learning curve," said Rudd, who had one victory and finished seventh overall.

"The cars are far more competitive this year than last year," he said. "The other thing is the guys are doing a good job of putting cars under me that can complete races."

Rudd said with experience he is learning more about how to make the car perform better and relate to his crew.

Rudd, 34, said he looked around the garage area when he arrived at the track Friday and realized something about the guys parked around him — the same drivers he is battling at the top of the standings.

Earnhardt will be 40 next year. Darrell Waltrip is 44 and Harry Gant is 51.

"It never really registered with me until today," Rudd said. "I think there are a lot of guys who are young that can win races, but to put the whole thing together takes a certain amount of maturity."

A good showing in the 12:15 p.m. EDT race Sunday would be a big boost to Rudd heading into the Banquet 300, a road race next week at Sonoma, Calif. Rudd and Wallace have split the last four road races — two at Sonoma and two at Watkins Glen, N.Y.

Tennessee men, LSU women win titles

Associated Press

NCAA Track

EUGENE, Ore. — Louisiana State, with its crack crew of hurdlers and sprinters led by Dawn Bowles, won its fifth straight women's title in the NCAA Track and Field Championships, while Tennessee, spearheaded by decathletes Aric Long and Brian Brophy, took its first men's title in 17 years on Saturday.

While the team competition went as expected, with the favorites prevailing, the individual events were marked by brilliant sprint performances by Texas' Carlette Guidry and Brigham Young's Frank Fredericks.

Guidry, an eight-time NCAA indoor gold medalist, but never a winner outdoors, swept the women's 100 and 200 meters, beating defending champion Esther Jones of LSU in both races, and anchored the winning 400-meter relay, outkicking Jones. Guidry's times were 10.91 seconds in the 100 and 22.44 in the 200. Both times were wind-aided.

"It was exciting for me to win a national outdoor title before I left," Guidry, a senior, said.

Fredericks took the men's 100 in 10.03 and the 200 in 19.90, both also wind-aided. The sweep was the first by a men's sprinter since Clancy Edwards of Southern Cal in 1978.

Meanwhile, 1988 Olympic 1,500 champion Peter Rono of Mount St. Mary's lost his left shoe after one lap and wound up third, behind Samuel Kibiri of Washington State (3:39.53) and Paul Vandegrift of William & Mary (3:40.11). The frustrated Rono was timed in 3:40.47.

"I tried to kick with 600 meters to go, but my leg kept slipping back," Rono said. "I never had this happen to me before."

LSU, extending the winning streak it began in 1987, finished the 19-event women's competition with 78 points. Texas was second with 67 and Nebraska third with 43.

Tennessee, winner of its only NCAA title in 1974, when Doug Brown, now the coach, won the 3,000 steeplechase, wound up 51 points. Washington State was runner-up with 42 points and Oregon third with 36.

The Volunteers swept past first-day leader Washington State in the decathlon, as Long won with 7,916 points, Brophy took third with 7,762 and Matt Shelton was eighth. Those placings were worth 17 points, with scoring on a 10-8-6-5-4-3-2-1 basis.

Among Tennessee's other key point scorers were Todd Williams, second in the 10,000 and third in the 5,000, and high jumper Randy Jenkins and javelin thrower John Richardson, both of whom finished second.

Washington State's chance for its first NCAA title — the Cougars have finished second five times — went tumbling down in the 110 high hurdles when Tony Li, the favorite, hit the eighth hurdle, lost his balance, wound up out of his lane and was disqualified. Had he won, Washington State would have beaten Tennessee, 52-51.

"I was struggling through the whole race to not align myself too close to the hurdles," the subdued Li said.

Li's flop and Jenkins' second-place in the high jump were the keys, Brown said.

"Nobody would have called that," he said.

In the women's competition, Bowles continued her sizzling series of races in the 100 high hurdles.

The junior from Neptune, N.J., was timed in 12.70, leading a 1-2-5 LSU finish. The time would have been the fastest by an American this year, along with meet and stadium records, but an aiding wind of 4.96 meters per second negated any record possibilites. Anything over 2.00 is considered wind-aided.

Bowles ran a legal 12.82, the fastest by an American this year, in Friday's semifinals, and a wind-aided 12.85 in Thursday's preliminaries. They were the three fastest times of her career.

Her victory, along with Mary Cobb's second in 12.97, and Cinnamon Sheffield's fifth in 13.07, gave LSU 22 points in that event.

"I didn't expect to win when I came into this meet," Bowles said, "so this is a real big jump for me. I'm just overwhelmed."

UCLA's Janeene Vickers, the two-time defending champion in the 400 intermediate hurdles and one of the top contenders in the 100 hurdles, was disqualified in the shorter race after intentionally false-starting. She later came back and won her third straight title in the 400 hurdles in 55.65.

LSU scored 16 points in the 100, on Jones' second in 10.99, Dahlia Duhaney's fourth and Cheryl Taplin's sixth, and 12 points in the 200 on Jones' second in 22.57 and Taplin's fifth.

"I'm happy that we're going out as team champion," Jones said. "I just wish I could have gone out as individual champion."

"This is a great one," LSU coach Pat Henry said. "I feel good for Esther Jones, who's been on four national championship teams. There aren't many athletes in any sport who can say that."

In the closest race of the day, Fredericks won the 100, edging Jonathan Drummond of Texas Christian, who had the same time. Olapade Adeniken of Texas-El Paso was third in 10.05, with James Trapp of Clemson fourth in the same time.

Meanwhile, Eileen Vanisi, a 19-year-old freshman from Texas, won the women's shot put with a heave of 57 feet, 9 inches, an American junior record and a meet record.

The previous national junior record was 56-7½ by UCLA's Dawn Dumble, who finished fourth Saturday at 54-9½. The old meet record was 57-6½ by Regina Cavanaugh of Rice in 1986.

Donna Crumety became the first NCAA champion from St. Joseph's, Pa., when she won the women's triple jump at 44-0, breaking the stadium record of 43-11¼ set by Yvette Bates of Southern Cal in 1988.

Other men's winners Saturday were Gabriel Luke of Rice in the 400 in 45.32; Greg Williams, Texas A&M, 11 hurdles, 13.55, wind-aided; Samuel Matete, Auburn, 400 hurdles, 49.12; Shannon Butler, Montana State, 5,000, 13:41.61; Baylor, 1,600 relay, 3:02.52; Darrin Plab, Southern Illinois, high jump, 7-6½; Brian Wellman, Arkansas, triple jump, a wind-aided 56-10¼; Simon Wiliams, LSU, shot put, 61-4, and Christophe Epalle, Southern Methodist, hammer throw, 238-6.

The other women's winners were Ximena Restropo, Nebraska, 400, 51.01, a stadium record; Darcy Arreola, Cal State-Northridge, 1,500, 4:11.46; Laurie Gomez, North Carolina State, 5,000, 16:07.96; Nebraska, 1,600 relay, 3:29.87, and Paula Berry, Oregon, javelin, 188-5.

49ers sign idle Barnes

HOUSTON (AP) — Former Texas A&M shot put star Randy Barnes is using his two-year suspension from track and field to try a new game: football with the San Francisco 49ers.

Barely a year after Barnes tossed a shot record 75 feet 10¼ inches at Westwood, Calif., the 1988 Olympic silver medalist is attempting to make the NFL team's roster as a free agent nose tackle. And he hasn't played football since 1985 — his senior season of high school in Charleston, W.Va.

His two-year contract with the 49ers pays Barnes nothing unless he makes the team.

"Basically, it just gives me a shot to make the team," Barnes told the Houston Chronicle. "I'm showing progress and I'm feeling pretty good about it."

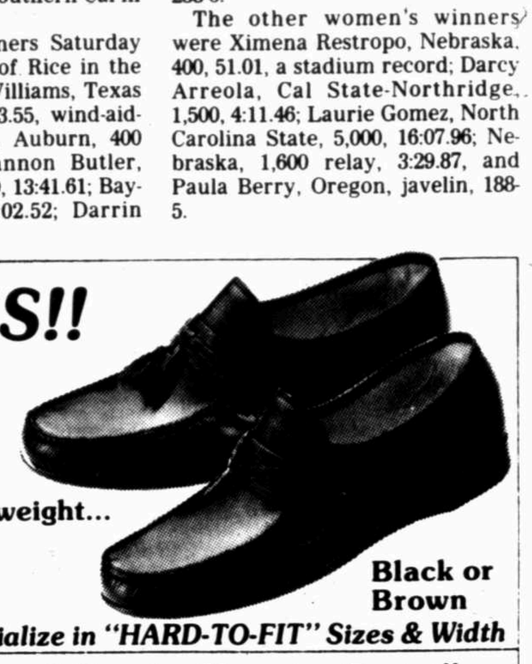

At Texas A&M, Barnes frequently had inquiries from coach Jackie Sherrill about trying out for football. At 6-foot-4 and then weighing about 315 pounds, Barnes looked like a natural defensive lineman.

"We thought we had him one time," said coach R.C. Slocum, then A&M's defensive coordinator. "But Randy always decided the shot was going too good for him to take time away from it."

But now, the International Amateur Athletic Federation and The Athletics Congress has imposed a two-year suspension on Barnes from competing in national and international track events, including the 1992 Olympics, because he tested positive for steroids following an Aug. 7, 1990, meet in Malmo, Sweden.

Barnes, who estimates that he has passed 30 drug tests in the last six years of competition, tested negative for steroids 12 days before the Malmo meet and again five days after. He lost two appeals on the suspension.

"I don't consider my track career over with, but I'll probably spend a lot of my time and most of my money before '92 fighting this thing," Barnes said.

SWC offensive approaches differ

By Jerry Wizig
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — Split personalities cause problems. Just look at Southwest Conference football.

Trying to defend each of the nine offensive schemes will be even more complicated in 1991, when Texas A&M and Arkansas must plug in new personnel virtually across the board.

Houston, Rice, SMU, TCU and Texas Tech will stretch defensive capabilities with their passing games. Texas and Baylor, like the Aggies and Razorbacks, will be run-oriented with controlled passing attacks that promise to be tough to defend.

"It's really kind of a split deal," Rice coach Fred Goldsmith says of the varied SWC offenses.

"Baylor has gone to more of a running game, like Arkansas. I would think Texas, with a guy like Butch Hadnot, would run the ball a lot. I hope they do put the ball in the air instead of giving it to Hadnot," Goldsmith said.

The Rice coach said his own club, along with those at Houston, TCU and SMU "will be more of a one-back look, so about half the conference will be running the I and about half the conference will be running the one-back."

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes frets about the defensive pressures that will be exerted.

"Our conference is getting more and more wide open," he says, "and your defense better be able to adjust from week to week and even in the game, because the offenses are so potent."

Take SMU, for example.

"They've been in the top 20 in pass offense most of the last two seasons. Arkansas was really something with (quarterback) Quinn Grovey and his bunch until they started getting people hurt. Then you've got teams like Houston and TCU that you know are coming out throwing with everything they've got.

"In our TCU game last year, they ran 72 plays of no running back. It was just a quarterback with five receivers running all over the place. That ought to be against the rules."

Told that UH quarterback David Klingler passed for 1,600 yards and 15 TDs in one spring scrimmage, Dykes said: "It may happen in a game sometime. They've taken a concept of offense (the run-and-shoot) and taken it to a level that gives them a chance to be in the upper echelon."

Dykes added, "They couldn't have done it any other way. It's no accident, so it has to be coaching."

It's also another reason for defenses to keep evolving. Dykes, for one, became convinced of the need to change the Red Raiders' defensive base from a 4-3 to a 3-4.

Football

His defensive coordinator, Carlos Mainord, had been trying to persuade Dykes for two years.

"Finally I woke up and saw the light," Dykes said. "You can adjust quicker with more people to handle the different kinds of offensive looks you get so much of these days."

The University of Houston is going back from an odd-man defensive line of last year to the 4-3 it played before Jack Pardee and his defensive coordinator, Jim Eddy, went to the Houston Oilers two years ago.

But the Cougars, too, will be adjusting constantly from three standard linebackers to a more mobile, strong safety type in passing situations.

"The game has become adjustments almost all of the time," Texas coach David McWilliams agrees. "There is no guarantee that your opponent is going to play the same offense they played the week before, so you have to be able to adjust."

For the defending SWC champion Longhorns, the biggest adjustment may be replacing defensive player of the year Stanley Richard at free safety. Van Malone, a big hitter who must learn more caution in reading receivers, and Willie Mack Garza were the top contenders after spring practice ended.

UH coach John Jenkins foresees a different defensive problem each week. He said the league is as different and varied as it's ever been because of the differing offensive philosophies and combinations.

"Baylor looks like it's going to stay run-oriented, and Arkansas and possibly A&M are also very strong the run. Texas will run 70 percent of the time, but still strive for balance between running and passing.

"Rice will be more of a balanced attack. Tech is always a team that adjusts from year to year because Spike changes to his personnel. With Billy Joe Tolliver at quarterback, they were a balanced offense. Then they were 90 percent run with James Gray two years ago. Last year, they ran a lot, but opened it up, also.

"SMU will spread its offense, and TCU is a multiple offense, much like Miami's."

Dykes cast an early championship vote for the Longhorns.

"I'm a big repeat guy, at least until someone beats them. There's a certain mystique in knowing how to do it, how to win a championship. Until you've done it at least once, it's hard to know what it's all about," Dykes said.

"Texas went from being an average, average team to a shot at the national championship in late November. It takes a lot of doing and a lot of action for that to happen from one year to the next, like they did."

Goldsmith adds: "Texas has solid performers. Shane Dronett (defensive end) is a leader of a defense with a lot of good people. (Quarterback) Peter Gardere is a winner. He beats you in different ways."

Goldsmith also warns of the Aggies and Bears.

"Bucky Richardson (A&M quarterback) seems to be in an offense more suited to him. Baylor's personnel scares you, especially in the offensive and defensive lines."

Eriksson wins marathon

STOCKHOLM, Sweden (AP) — Ake Eriksson of Sweden broke away from the leaders on an uphill stretch with about six miles to go and held on to win the Stockholm Marathon on Saturday.

Eriksson, who became the first Stockholm runner to win the race in 13 years, was timed in 2 hours, 12 minutes, 38 seconds. It was the third fastest time ever in the race.

Jose Santana of Brazil was runnerup for the second straight year. Santana was 1.01 minutes behind the winner, and his time of 2:13.39 was a personal record.

Giving away more than $2,000,000 of your money sounds like a fun job. But talk with the volunteers who devote hours as members of the United Way's Allocations Panels, and you'll learn it's a rough tour of duty.

The five panels, each composed of about 10 volunteers, just completed their spring call-up. Their assignment was to tour all the agencies and review their programs to ensure that United Way dollars are being spent effectively and efficiently.

And when this was completed, these volunteers then determined how much money the agencies will need next year to continue serving 36,000 Midlanders. They looked at American Red Cross, Big Brothers/ Big Sisters, Boy Scouts, Boys' and Girls' Club and Camp Fire. They reviewed Casa de Amigos, Community and Senior Services, Family Services and Freewill Foster Home. They studied Midland-Lee Youth Centers, Midland Rape Crisis Center, Midland Need to Read, Palmer Drug Abuse Program and Girl Scouts. They delved into the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children, Salvation Army Corps and Day Care, and the YMCA Day Care and Youth Programs.

Spring reviews are only part of their job. When the Fall campaign ends and the fun is over, these Allocations Panels volunteers roll up their sleeves and burn the midnight oil to decide the best way to hand out your money.

They look at the needs in Midland and how the agencies are addressing them. They look at the programs and how many people are being helped. They look at how your money has been used in the past and how the agencies propose to use it next year.

These Allocations volunteers guard your money as if it were their own. After all, that's their assignment.

ANGELS: Southpaws were too much for the Travelers turned out to be the game-winning hit for Valenzuela, who enjoyed error-free work by the Midland defense.

(From 1B)

Valenzuela said his fastball might have been a little better against Jackson on Monday night, but that his control was not as sharp.

The Dodgers released Valenzuela near the end of spring training and he said he never stopped throwing. In the six innings against Jackson, he threw 91 pitches — 55 strikes — and walked three, all in the first inning. After that outing, he said he thought he would be ready to pitch for California after one more start.

He said Saturday night he did not know when he would start for the Angels, but he is expected to replace rookie Scott Lewis in the California rotation.

Valenzuela was too much for the Travelers, who came into the doubleheader hitting .222 as a team.

He retired the first six Travelers before Tripp Cromer grounded an 0-2 pitch down the right-field line for a double. Cromer reached third on a bunt, but was cut down when he tried to score on a slow bouncer to third baseman Terry Taylor.

Valenzuela faced 25 batters, four over the minimum for seven innings, the length of each game in minor league doubleheaders.

The Travelers managed two base runners only once, in the seventh. Mike Fiore led off with a double. John Sellick walked, but Valenzuela got the next three hitters on fly balls.

Midland scored two in the second with two outs. Taylor slapped a single to left and Damion Easley ripped a ground-rule double down the left-field line. Tim Salmon fouled off a couple of pitches and then grounded a single to right.

Valenzuela's appearance attracted an estimated 11,000 people as fans lined the warning track.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

Dragons blast into title game

BIRMINGHAM, Ala. (AP) — Scott Erney threw a 6-yard pass to Thomas Woods for the only touchdown as Barcelona defeated the turnover-plagued Birmingham Fire 10-3 on Saturday night to advance to the WLAF championship game.

Erney's touchdown pass came with 10 seconds remaining in the first half, capping a 14-play, 89-yard drive which put the Dragons ahead 10-0. Erney accounted for 63 yards in the drive, but completed only 9-of-28 passes for 62 yards in the game.

Birmingham's Win Lyle kicked a 28-yard field goal midway through the fourth quarter, but the Fire wasted an opportunity to tie it after John Miller interrupted an Erney pass and returned it to the Barcelona 26.

A personal foul on Birmingham moved the ball back to the Dragons' 41 yard line and on the Fire's first play, quarterback Eric Jones was stripped of the ball by Barcelona's Brent White. Eric Lindstrom recovered for the Dragons to end the threat.

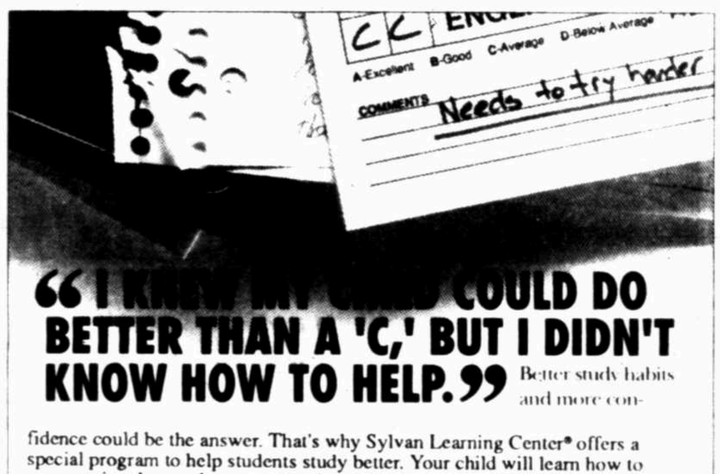

Birmingham finished with two fumbles and Jones was intercepted three times, including two by safety Glenn Cobb. Lyle also missed a 45-yard field goal attempt.

Barcelona opened the scoring on Massino Manca's 25-yard field goal.

Living wills ease tough decisions

■ Documents are called "directives to physicians" in Texas.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Physicians at the Hennepin County Medical Center in Minneapolis, Minn., want to remove 87-year-old Helga Wanglie from a life-sustaining respirator — against the wishes of her 86-year-old husband.

The woman has been in a persistent vegetative state since a May 1990 heart attack left her brain damaged, the Associated Press reported last week. Doctors say she is unresponsive to her surroundings and has no chance of recovery.

Her husband, 86-year-old Oliver Wanglie, says his wife would not want her respirator and feeding tube removed under any circumstances.

But doctors argue that Wanglie is vainly hoping for a miracle recovery and does not understand his wife's condition. They say it's time to "pull the plug" on the woman.

Would Mrs. Wanglie have wanted to remain on the life-support system long after all hope of recovery had faded? Only she could answer that question, and she's in no condition to do so now.

Family members' agony and confusion over deciding when to terminate life support for an incurably ill patient can be alleviated somewhat, local doctors and attorneys maintain, by the use of "living wills."

These documents, called "directives to physicians" in Texas, allow people to make known their desire not to be kept alive through artificial means — before they are left incapacitated by accident or illness.

The Wanglies' situation — now the focus of a courtroom battle — is rare in that it is a case of physicians wanting to remove a comatose person from artificial life support.

Usually, it's the other way around. Doctors often have been hesitant to honor family requests to remove patients from life-support systems, as was the case with the late Nancy Cruzan.

In that case, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled last June that the state of Missouri could require "clear and convincing" evidence that the comatose woman would not want to be kept alive. Her parents provided the evidence, and her feeding tube was removed.

Home fills woman's ambition

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Mildred Ford's approach toward solving problem pregnancies is to pray and then "do something about it."

After 18 months of struggling with financing, city and state codes and the Texas Department of Health, the Mildred Ford Maternity Home is licensed for business. Already, she has nurtured two young and "desperate" mothers, ages 18 and 20, and is welcoming more pregnant girls and women who are without means and who have nowhere to find refuge and life's basic needs.

But Mrs. Ford, the home's director, doesn't cuddle them while they are awaiting childbirth and wondering what happens next. She puts them to work or sends them off to school or college so that they, ideally, can develop skills for a livelihood and will grow in self-esteem and confidence for their benefit as well as for the welfare of the children.

Any money the mothers-to-be earn while living at the maternity home is theirs to do with as they will.

"If they work and save their money, they'll have enough money to get themselves an apartment or transportation," Mrs. Ford said.

Ever since Mrs. Ford was clinic director for Permian Basin Planned Parenthood in the 1970s, she has wanted to develop the means to help pregnant teen-agers out of a seemingly hopeless dilemma. Many of the single teen-agers and young adults didn't have the wherewithal to raise a child and support themselves; yet, they did not want an abortion.

"And I ran into so many girls that were pregnant, and they had the problem of not having a place to stay until they had their babies," Mrs. Ford recalled. "A lot of them said they had no alternative but to have an abortion."

Mrs. Ford's work on her dream, developing a maternity home, didn't begin until later — after she had served for 10 years as director of nurses at the Martin County Hospital in Stanton.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Michele Rowell, 18, holds her 3-week-old son, Justin, at the Mildred Ford Maternity Home for unwed mothers. At left is Mildred Ford, the home's founder-director, and, at center, Charlene Stephens, education director and registered nurse.

With the help of her 41-year-old son, Dana Mann, Mrs. Ford bought three A-frame houses near Scharbauer Draw on Midland's eastside, remodeled them, and now has two of the houses equipped to care for 10 women before and after childbirth. They may be admitted as soon as they discover that they are pregnant and can stay for up to six weeks after childbirth.

The expertise at Mrs. Ford's maternity home comes from Dr. Viola Coleman, medical director; Billy Hamilton, social worker, and Charlene Stephens, a nurse who is education director. The maternity home is supported by donations and grants.

In the Midland-Odessa area, Mrs. Ford said, there was no licensed place "where a girl could stay and have her baby" and either keep the child or give it up for adoption.

Michele Rowell, now 18, happened into Mrs. Ford's care almost midway into her pregnancy after she left her 22-year-old boyfriend following a fight.

"He just wanted me to get an abortion," she said last week.

For awhile, Michele had stayed at the Permian Basin Center for Battered Women and Their Children.

She went back to her boyfriend, two months into her pregnancy, only to be kicked out in her third month of pregnancy.

She moved in with her mother, but, after awhile, her mother "told me I had to get out."

From there, Michele went to Problem Pregnancy, where counselor Connie Snow referred her the maternity home.

There, Michele worked on her high-school diploma. She dropped out of school at the ninth-grade during her "rebellious and wild" years when she was living with foster parents.

Michele's baby, Justin, was born on May 8 at Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center. With her baby, Michele returned to the Ford Maternity Home.

"Oh, I love her," Michele said of Mrs. Ford. "She's my mom. She has a very good heart."

But Michele's mother and her mother's boyfriend persuaded Michele to leave the maternity home and to stay with them.

"I don't mind being there," Michele said. "I'd like to have my own place. I'm trying to hurry up and get a job."

Meanwhile, she plans to get out on her own, return to school, study law, work in a law-related career and gain a new freedom and independence.

"My mother wants me to get my life straight," Michele said. "I was pretty wild when I was in school. I think everyone goes through that.

"But now that I have a baby, and I'm settled down, and I don't go out anymore," Michele said. "Everything is just fine."

Today, Justin's father "still calls me," she said, but he wants to see the baby — not the mother.

He is being compelled to pay child support through the Texas Department of Human Services. She has been receiving temporary support from the Aid to Families with Dependent Children (AFDC) program.

At first, Michele said she "wasn't sure if I could handle motherhood, but I'm doing all right."

In reflection, Michele said a couple are "supposed to be married" before they delve into sexual intercourse.

"It's better to be married," she said, "but sometimes things happen."

And Mrs. Ford, who counsels and teaches, doesn't preach. Rather, her rule is to allow the troubled pregnant girls and women and mothers to "make their own decisions."

Children get help at center

■ Satellite facility can change a child's outlook.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

It wasn't long ago when a shy 10-year-old black girl wandered into the Kerr Center, a southeast-side satellite facility of the Palmer Drug Abuse Program (PDAP).

An occasional drinker of alcoholic beverages, the youngster came from a low-income family, with a single-parent — a mother who was about to be incarcerated.

Today the girl, who hasn't had a drink in three months, is doing good in school and living with a relative that cares for her.

Had the Kerr Center, located at Tyler Street and Washington Avenue, not been available for the youngster, her future's outlook may have not been the same.

"I think that five or six years down the road — it sounds like a stereotype but has some truth — she would have been either pregnant or using, maybe even heavier drugs," said Constance Roberts, a PDAP staff worker.

One advantage the young girl had was the close proximity of the drug and alcohol abuse center to her home, Ms. Roberts said.

Just a few blocks away people, hanging out on the street, can regularly be observed drinking and even dealing drugs.

"What we try to provide is a safe place for youngsters to be that's different from the streets and provide someone to talk to if they need," Ms. Roberts said.

That service became available in Midland's southeast side when the Kerr Center opened on Dec. 1, 1990.

The center — one of four PDAP satellite centers — is housed in the annex building of the St. Paul C.M.E. (Christian Methodist Episcopal) Church, which donated the use of the facility.

"Our church was concerned about the ongoing drug problem in the minority community ... and greatly disturbed about the large number of teenagers exposed to drugs," said the Rev. Michael De Vaughn, church pastor and recently elected city councilman for District 2.

GARY OTT

Racing at full speed on a 'lumpy' road to reality

Ott

It's like the old saying goes: "Expect the worst and you'll never be disappointed."

Good words to live by. Keep your expectations low. Feel sorry for yourself. Whine and moan a lot. Mope around the apartment with your tail tucked between your legs and repeatedly say, "The whole world's against me and there's nothing I can do about it."

Then when something not so terrible occurs you are relieved. At least it wasn't as bad as you had first assumed. In a strange sort of way, you feel good. After all, if could have been worse.

It's an old trick, of course, and one some people might find rather foolish.

Still, it works.

Let me give you an example.

Turn back the clock, if you will, to last weekend. I'm at the house on Saturday afternoon watching a baseball game on the tube and sipping a club soda. I'm bored but, in a peculiar sort of way, reasonably content. A stack of magazines is at my side and the refrigerator is full. Suddenly I notice a rather large lump has formed in my left armpit area.

Lump? Armpit?

This can mean only one thing. Cancer! The Big C!

My mind races.

Good grief, I'm dying. Six months to live, tops.

Beads of perspiration form on my forehead as I leap to my feet.

It's not fair, I cry out to the TV set. I'm a nice guy. I don't kick the dog. I don't slap women around. I even feel guilty when killing insects.

Now, it has been determined that I shall die. And by whom? Fate, that's who. What have I done to deserve this? I even quit drinking. Don't I get points for that?

My anger explodes as I pace the floor like a caged animal. I stop briefly in front of the mirror and begin lecturing myself. "Well, big guy, you blew it this time. You had 39 years to live an exciting life and you let it slip away. Look at yourself. What have you accomplished? Nothing. Absolutely nothing!"

Then a bit of insanity kicks in.

Pretending to be a TV evangelist I touch the lump and scream, "Heal!"

It doesn't.

This pathetic scene is followed by yet another. It is called wallowing in self-pity. "You poor, poor man," I whine to my reflection. "Everyone gets to live a long and happy life but you. It's not fair. You don't sin near as much as most people. Yet, what do you get in return? Death, that's what. Tell me life is fair."

One of the bad things about living alone is that you don't have an attractive companion to pat you on the head at moments such as this and say soothing things like, "Don't worry, baby, everything's going to be all right."

Thus, the creation of self-pity.

I continue fondling the lump. It's getting larger by the second. The movement in my left arm is deteriorating. Suddenly I begin noticing aches and pains throughout my body that weren't there yesterday. I hurt all over.

"I didn't know it spread this fast," I tell the mirror. "I wonder what I'll look like bald?"

A dose of reality slaps me in the face.

A plan. I need a plan.

There are two valid alternatives, I surmise. I can go to a doctor and let him confirm what I already know. Or, I can just whither away. Sorta die quietly and without fanfare. One day I'm here, the next I'm not. Who cares, anyway? Nobody will miss me. In six months they'll be saying, "Gary Who?"

Self-pity is so rewarding.

But reality strikes back.

Get a grip, I lecture myself. Yes, I must plan for the future. What will I do? I certainly don't want to spend my final six months working in an office. I should live it up like they do in those old black-and-white movies. Money. I need money. If I sell everything I own and beg a lot I might come up with $30,000. Hey, that's a start.

A bizarre sort of excitement rushes through my body as I plot my future. How will I spend my final six months? Not in Midland, that's for sure. No, I need something more exciting. More cosmopolitan. More international.

Paris, perhaps. Yes, that's it. Paris.

Visions dance across my brain.

I'm seated at a table in a sidewalk cafe. The sun is slowly fading in the west. A light mist is in the air. Cars are rushing by, horns blaring. There is much laughter and gaiety all around me. The Parisian women are as beautiful as I had imagined. A waiter, smartly dressed and sporting a pencil-thin mustache, asks me for my choice of wine. I tell him. He bows ever-so-slightly and walks away. I'm an American in Paris without a care in the world. My only concern is choosing which woman I will dance the night away with.

All in all, not a bad way to spend your last six months.

Reality returns. Harshly.

I'm back in Midland. The doctor is examining my lump. Like all doctors, he says, "Hmmm."

"Give it to me straight, doc. How long have I got?"

"If you quit smoking, possibly 40 years."

"It's not cancer?"

"Nope. A cyst."

"Does that mean I should rule out Paris this summer?"

"I would," he said. "The cost of living is outrageous."

WILLS: Documents remove burden of difficult decision from loved ones

(From 1C)

In Texas, the directive to physicians is the Legislature's prescribed method for providing clear and convincing evidence of one's wishes.

"The biggest 'pro' is that by signing them, you're telling folks that you don't want to be subject to constant probing and heroic attempts to save your life that go on and on," said Mike Ward, a Midland attorney who provides directive forms to clients for whom he prepares wills.

"In our legal system today ... the directive can be challenged, but I have serious doubts that a court would override the wishes outlined in a directive to physicians," said Ward, who added that nearly 100 percent of his clients who request wills also sign the directives.

The directives, which are spelled out in the Texas Natural Death Act of 1977, authorize doctors to withhold life-sustaining procedures where such procedures would "serve only to artificially prolong the moment of ... death."

Two physicians must certify that the condition of the person in question is terminal; death must be "imminent whether or not life-sustaining procedures are utilized."

Ward said such language protects people from being removed from life-support prematurely or when hope for recovery still exists.

"It requires the decision of two attending physicians — I think that gives some amount of safety," he said. "The biggest con in this whole thing is that it's inflexible. Because once you've made the decision, there's no ifs, ands or buts about it — they're going to unplug you."

Nevertheless, he said, people who sign living wills can revoke them at any time — even from a hospital bed. An incoherent or unconscious person, of course, would be unable to rescind a directive.

"If I say, 'Don't unplug the machine,' obviously the physicians have to do what I'm asking them to do now rather than what I wrote down two years ago," Ward said.

Generally speaking, he said, the directives can only be suspended by an outside party in the cases of terminally ill or injured pregnant women where the viability of the unborn child becomes an issue.

Otherwise, the directives will override the wishes of family members and doctors who may not want care withheld from a terminally ill patient.

The existence of living will can remove much of the pressure from doctors and family members who must make decisions regarding the care of such a patient — especially one who is unable to make his or her wishes known.

Dr. Richard Reese, a Midland gerontologist and internal medicine specialist, said many people hesitate to terminate life support for ill family members, even when there is no hope for recovery.

"Basically, families have an emotional attachment. They're not medical specialists, they're not prepared to pull the plug on loved ones. They need help."

Living wills "take a lot of that guilt away from families because they're just executing the wishes of that family member. It's enormously helpful."

The key to the living will, Reese explained, is that it is executed in consultation with at least two physicians — both of whom ought to ensure that all reasonable efforts have been made to save the life of the person in question.

"If the physician knows that there is a reasonable chance of recovery, that supersedes the living will," he said. "We know some people wake up months after some head injuries. The living wills always come with the reassurance to patients that they'll be well cared for."

But if death is inevitable or a coma irreversible, it's up to the physicians to talk to family members and ask that the living will be executed.

In cases in which people have left no living will, two family members can request that a directive be executed and life-support systems removed or withheld.

For brain-dead patients and their families, Reese said, termination of life support is the most humane and intelligent alternative, especially in light of the cost of continuing such care.

"To me, the real tragedy is someone who has already died — is brain-dead — who is left alive on life support for 20 years," said Reese, who added that he has signed a living will himself. "Unfortunately, we all pay for people maintained in that state."

As far as Reese is concerned, discontinuance of life-sustaining procedures includes the removal of feeding tubes — a form of care that some right-to-life groups maintain should not be withheld under any circumstances.

"We consider that to be one of the cutting-edge issues of the '90s for the right-to-life movement," said Bill Price, president of Texans United for Life in Dallas. "It could even surpass the abortion issue in terms of intensity of debate and discussion."

Price said provision of food and water should not should not be considered an extraordinary measure, but basic care to which all patients, even the hopelessly comatose, are entitled.

"We vehemently oppose the drift that this is taking," Price said. "We believe we are going down the road to legalizing assisted suicide.

"In the 1970s, the issue was whether or not to 'pull the plug.' The debate in the '80s and '90s has centered around the next logical step you take. If you disconnect life-support systems and a patient...continues to breathe on their own, there's one sure way to kill someone, and that's to pull their feeding tube.

"If you're going to starve them, why not go for a lethal injection that would be far less painful?"

Reese countered that removal of feeding tubes is not tantamount to euthanasia.

"It is not an active intervention leading to death. It's been tested in other states and it has been found to be part of heroic measures to keep people going for no good reason. People up until the time of feeding tubes died when they couldn't eat ... and it is not a painful way to go."

Although they are not specifically listed among the "life-sustaining procedures" outlined Texas' natural death statute, Reese said feeding tubes are included in the law.

Harold Freeman, associate director for legislative affairs for the Texas Medical Association, conceded that the statute's language is somewhat ambiguous. However, a bill to amend the law to specifically include feeding tubes died in a state Senate committee in the closing days of the latest legislative session.

"Our physicians wanted a greater understanding," Freeman said. The law "needs to define what artificial, mechanical means are."

In the absence of an amendment, Freeman said, most lawyers agree that the law does include feeding tubes.

But disagreement among states as to the legality of living wills remains a problem.

Reese said a directive to physicians signed in Texas might not be binding elsewhere, and that could leave a person who falls ill or is injured while out of state in a legal and medical limbo.

"The real problem we face is that state to state, the wording varies," Reese said. "I wish there were some sort of standardization of these things."

Attorney Ward, however, said that a directive signed in Texas would probably not be completely invalid in other states, especially the 32 or so that have natural-death laws.

Regardless of where you are, Ward said, the important thing is to make sure your wishes are made known before it's too late. Directives to physicians are available from doctors, lawyers and health-care organizations such as Hospice of Midland, but they're sometimes not easy to ask for. Death, after all, is usually a subject to be avoided.

"I think people don't like to think a lot about death, and living wills are a thing you ought to take a few minutes to think about and consider," he said.

CENTER: Children receive help

for a way to help curb the drug problem, PDAP was seeking a site for a southeast center, De Vaughn said. "While we were both looking, our wires crossed," he said.

The opening of the center has given southeast residents an accessible facility and affordable service not previously provided, De Vaughn said.

In addition, it provided services to previously overlooked minorities, Ms. Roberts said.

"It opened with the concern that the black and Hispanic community wasn't being reached," said Ms. Roberts, who added that accessibility was the solution.

Basing centers convenient for surrounding residents eliminates a barrier built by lack of transportation when help is not nearby, Ms. Roberts said.

"We are at the heart of the problem. We can't be at everyone's front door but if you are reasonably close" area residents in need of the facility are more apt to come, she said.

"The help available needs to be everywhere," Ms. Roberts said.

Like the other PDAP centers, the southeast side facility is a family-oriented, spiritually based, 12-step recovery program for those whose lives have been disrupted by drug abuse. The program is free.

The Kerr Center currently reaches about 50 to 75 youngsters, of which about three-fourths are boys and the average age is 12 to 13.

The majority of youths come from low-income single-parent families, Ms. Roberts said.

"Alcohol is the primary abuse — it's the easiest to get. But that's where it starts and progresses to pot and crack," she said.

"We are there to say we have a way out. We are saying there is something different" than a life of drug and alcohol use which youngsters may see at home and on the street, Ms. Roberts said.

The center provides youngsters with various forms of recreation as an incentive to visit.

"We let them know when we are having meetings and encourage them to come," Ms. Roberts said.

Both group sessions and individual sessions are available to the young abusers and their parents. Group sessions meet three times weekly, and four times weekly during the summer. Individual sessions are on an appointment basis.

"With kids, the main problem is peer pressure. They are starving for a place to find an identity and at PDAP we want to provide a positive place, a safe environment to do that," Ms. Roberts said.

Since the center opened its doors, progress has been made to provide that environment to youngsters and reduce drug abuse, De Vaughn said.

"PDAP has done a wonderful job. I have seen it with my own eyes," De Vaughn said.

NEW: Home provides place for unwed mothers to stay

(From 1C)

"Honestly, most of these girls want (direction)," Mrs. Ford said. "They know what's wrong and what's right."

Often, however, they get "side-tracked," Mrs. Ford said. "I don't preach to them. And I let them tell me what they think. And if you sit there and listen to them, it will always go back to what they were taught. And that goes back to training a child in the way he should go."

Michele was "taught about sex and the institution of marriage," Mrs. Ford said, "but she just strayed away."

And Mrs. Ford simply advised Michele "to get going" with your life. "You don't have any time to waste."

Students, teachers pay for missing books

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Independent School District, fearing a shortage of textbooks due to an expected fall in-enrollment of 3,000, has ordered teachers to pay for books missing from their classrooms.

Maureen Peters, president of the Alliance of Dallas Educators, said some school principals have threatened to withhold paychecks to teachers until they pay for the missing items, which could cost some teachers up to $100.

"They're trying to shake down teachers," Peters said. "That's enough for everybody to call for a revolution."

DISD spokesman Larry Ascough supports the plan.

"We've all got to work together to solve this problem," Ascough said. "If we can't be responsible, how can we encourage the students to be responsible?"

A shortage last fall left hundreds of students without books, and some did not receive them until after the first marking period.

The district lost about $90,000 in textbooks last year, although officials say losses have run as high as $300,000 in previous years.

Gas line leak closes highway

Staff Report

State Highway 669 was closed for about four hours Satuday afternoon near the Borden-Howard County line north of Luther as the result of a leaking liquified petroleum gas line, Howard County Fire Department officials said.

Two fire-fighting units responded to the call, initially reported as a crude oil spill. In fact, condensate was spewing from the high-pressure line, blowing 4 inches of dirt and mud onto the road.

Traffic was halted while the mud was cleared away and the potential fire hazard passed. The road was reopoened about 2:30 p.m.

Fire officials said the line, owned by Texaco, normally operated at a pressure of 560 pounds per square inch and was a production line running to the company's gas plant at Vincent, in northeast Howard County.

The cause of the leak was still under investigation late Saturday.

Red Cross relief fund nearly depleted

Staff Report

In the midst of tornado and flood season in the United States, an unusually high number of disasters throughout the U.S. have already nearly depleted the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund.

Since last July 1, the Red Cross has allocated more than $40 million of its $46 million relief fund to help the victims of flooding, tornadoes, fires, ice storms and other natural disasters. Red Cross workers have sheltered and fed more than 549,000 people, distributed more than 71,000 comfort kits and 31,000 clean-up kits, and given more than 48,000 disaster-affected families financial assistance to purchase new clothing, groceries and household items.

Currently, 33 major Red Cross disaster relief efforts are helping people in several states including tonado and flood ravaged Kansas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama and Texas.

Red Cross relief efforts for victims of the Kansas tornadoes and Louisiana flooding are approaching $7 million.

"While this area is fortunate not to have suffered a major natural disaster recently, our Red Cross workers respond around the clock to the emergency needs of local people including those who are victims of fires," said George Kalcevic, chapter manager.

"The Midland County Chapter has provided disaster assistance to more than 25 families in Midland County during the past year," said Kalcevic.

The American Red Cross tabulates disaster relief expenses from historical data to estimate how much to budget for disaster relief. With only $6 million remaining in its disaster relief budget for this fiscal year, the organization fears that a series of small disasters or a single large disaster could quickly wipe out remaining funds.

Financial contributions to the American Red Cross Disaster Relief Fund can be mailed to the Midland County Chapter, P.O. Box 1706, Midland, TX 79702.

The toll-free number for charging a contribution to VISA or Mastercard is 1-800-842-2200.

A Tribute to Ken Peeler

Kenneth A. Peeler

40 Years With Midland 66 Oil Co., Inc.

Four decades have passed since Ken Peeler began his career at Midland 66 Oil Company, a remarkable achievement. At first the company primarily serviced and supplied drilling rigs, and sold the kerosene needed for the hydrofrac process used in developing the Spraberry. Since 1951 he has helped lead our company through the cycle of boom and bust three times.

In 1965 Ken helped us diversify, getting us into the LP gas business. Later he moved us into a gasoline cardlock system which is still expanding. Under Ken's leadership, Midland 66 Oil Company now serves a five county region as a distributor for Phillips Petroleum Co. products.

He has served our industry by taking an active role in the Texas Oil Marketers Association, and actively encourages younger members to get involved. In 1975 Ken served as president of the Association, and for the past 12 years as a board member of its Insurance Trust.

Because of his many years of outstanding service and leadership, Ken was named recipient of the 1990 E. K. Bennett Award, named for TOMA's first president.

Midland and West Texas have benefitted from Ken's generosity and involvement. His long participation with the Buffalo Trail Council, Boy Scouts of America prompted that organization to present him the Silver Beaver Award for distinguished service to youth in 1982. Ken is serving his fourth six-year term on the Midland College board of trustees. He has also been active as a board member of the High Sky Children's Ranch.

He has served in many capacities in his church, St. Luke's United Methodist, the Lions Club, The United Way of Midland, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Midland County Livestock Association, to name a few.

He is chairman of the board of Community National Bank of Midland.

Ken and his wife LaVoe are the parents of two sons, Kyle, who is an attorney in Pleasanton, and Bruce, who owns a heavy equipment company in Odessa. Ken and LaVoe have five grandchildren.

We wanted you to know what a great guy Ken Peeler is, and hope you will join us in congratulating him on his 40th anniversary.

Congratulations, Ken!

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

National junior college golf championships set this week

Midland College is hosting the National Junior College Athletic Association's national golf championships for the first time. Thanks to the generous assistance of the members and staff of Green Country Club and The Club at Mission Dorado, golfers from all over the country will be here from today through Friday.

Tuck

Practice rounds are today and tomorrow. Competition begins Tuesday with part of the field playing at Mission Dorado and part at Greentree.

They'll swap courses Wednesday for the second 18 holes. After cutting the field, the top teams and individuals will play 18 holes each day on Thursday and Friday at Greentree to determine the 1991 championship in Divisions I, II and III.

There's no charge to come and watch the action. If you'd like to meet the players and extend a West Texas welcome, come out Monday evening for the players' banquet. It's scheduled for 8 p.m. in Chaparral Center. But you need to call 685-4575 by noon Monday to make reservations.

Tickets are $10 each.

Summer I begins this week and, as is true for all summer sessions, everything happens quickly. Registration is Monday from 12-2 p.m. and 4-7 p.m. Those who pre-registered have assigned times to come for registration in the Student Center. Those of you who didn't get pre-registered should report to the Student Center at 6 p.m. for processing, payment of fees and even purchase of books.

Classes begin on Tuesday and last through July 9. Classes are Monday through Thursday, except students do get July 4 as a holiday.

There is a late registration period for Summer I, but showing up very late for summer classes is dangerous as each class session covers so much material.

If you have any questions about registration or classes being offered, call 685-4501 Monday morning.

The Midland College Basketball Camp is scheduled to begin tomorrow at 9 a.m. The first day will be at the Physical Education Building with the other four days at Chaparral Center. Deposits were due last week, but call 685-4581 between 7 a.m.-8 a.m. tomorrow if you are interested. Fee is $70 for the five days, with instruction from 9 a.m.-1 p.m. each day. New MC head basketball coach Steve Green and his assistants will be in charge of the camp.

It was another great year for Chaparral tennis, with a seventh national title for the women's team and a strong third place finish, plus four singles titles and two doubles titles, for the men.

MC coach Joe Williams already has a powerhouse lineup for next season with most players from both teams returning, plus some very strong recruits signed.

All six candidates for the Midland College presidency now have been interviewed, with the last finalist visiting the campus on Thursday for his interview. Members of the Board of Trustees likely will make their decision very soon, then offer the post to one of the candidates.

Trustees have never announced a timetable for selection of the president, but it is anticipated the new person might be on board by Aug. 1.

One of our campus foxes and several of our ground squirrels have been killed recently after playing in the street. The fox met his demise on nearby Wadley while some of the 13-stripe ground squirrels have committed suicide by darting across Chaparral Circle during busy times of the day. We've also had some birds meet their end by flying headlong into glass doors or windows.

We would particularly urge drivers on Chaparral Circle to use caution and watch out for the baby squirrels who, like young children, don't always heed their mothers' warnings to look both ways before crossing the street.

There's a plentitude of courses starting this week under sponsorship of the Continuing Education Department. Getting right to them, you can choose from: The Diet Dilemman, Fire Protection and Emergency Medical Technician-EMT Update (two sections), Job Interview Techniques, Speed Reading, Sunrise Tummy Trimmers (two sections), Travel Beaches, Language Arts for Business, Personal Finance, Travel Texas, Travel Cruises, Beginning Typing/Keyboarding (two sections), Intermediate Typing/Keyboarding (two sections), Advanced Typing/Keyboarding (two sections), Word Processing Training and Study Skills.

Just drop by the Continuing Education office in the Administration Building to register between 7 a.m. and 8 p.m. Monday through Thursday or call 685-4518 for more information.

New York artist wins Hubbard award

RUIDOSO, N.M. (AP) — New York City artist Ron Sherr on Saturday won the second annual $250,000 Hubbard Art Award for Excellence for his oil and gold leaf painting titled "Portrait of Elaine."

Sherr's painting was among six that made the finals for the juried prize sponsored by Fort Worth, Texas, glass manufacturer R.D. Hubbard. The award recognizes American representational and realistic art.

Sherr's 44- by 28-inch painting shows a woman dressed in black sitting in a chair backed by a gold wall.

Sherr was born in Plainfield, N.J., in 1952 and studied at the Ducret School of Art in New Jersey and the National Academy of Design's School of Fine Art.

Sherr won the Allied Artists of America's Gold Medal of Honor in 1986 and created a portrait of Andreas Papandreou for the cover of Time Magazine in 1983.

Other pieces which made the finals were "War Bonnet and Peace Pipe" and "Purple Maize" by William Acheff of Taos; "In the Beginning ... Friends" by Paul Calle of Ridgefield, Conn.; "Line Squall" by Wilson Hurley of Albuquerque; "Five Apricots" by John Stuart Ingle of Morris, Minn.

Calle won the $5,000 People's Choice award.

The winners were announced at a banquet emceed by comedian Tim Conway.

Competing artists were among 51 nominated by museum and gallery directors nationwide. Each artist submitted two sculptures or paintings.

The four judges who selected final entries were: author and collector John Arthur of Boston; John Bullard of the New Orleans Museum of Art; author and collector Bill Frazier of Montana; and Jacqueline Pontello of Southwest Art Magazine in Houston.

The winner was chosen by Hubbard and his wife, Joan Dale.

The work of five Soviet artists was displayed alongside that of the Americans, The Soviets, who did not participate in the competition, included sculptors Alexander Belashow and Oleg Komov, painters Afanasi Osipov and Tair Salakhov as well as graphic artist Guri Zakharov.

Hubbard is chairman and chief executive of AFG Industries, the second largest glass manufacturing company in the United States. The company is headquartered in Fort Worth, Texas.

The longtime horseman and Ruidoso Downs stockholder paid $2.6 million in cash and assumed $9 million in debts to gain controlling interest in the race track in August 1988.

Ruidoso Downs is home to quarter horse racing's richest race, the 440-yard All American Futurity.

Feisty sea lions give Alaska firm weighty problem

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Jim Ramaglia used to think it was cute when sea lions lounged on his fuel company's float in Kodiak Harbor. That was about $50,000 ago.

Now he's pulling his hair out trying to find a way to get rid of the sea lions without incurring the wrath of federal officials, not to mention that of the giant, barking mammals themselves.

"We're not allowed to do anything — not even yell at them," said an exasperated Ramaglia, co-owner of North Pacific Fuels in Kodiak. "Basically, our hands are kind of tied."

He isn't alone. In California, businesses have tried fences, ultrasonic whistles and other noisemakers, high-pressure water hoses and broom patrols to persuade sea lions to abandon their claims to floats and docks. The efforts have had limited success.

In Seattle, officials have tried trapping, firecrackers and blunt arrows to try to keep sea lions from snacking on fish runs.

The problem is that sea lions are legally entitled to be the house guests that never leave.

They have been classified as a threatened species under the federal Marine Mammal Protection Act. Their numbers in the Gulf of Alaska have fallen 82 percent since 1958, from about 140,000 to about 25,000.

Sea lions' threatened status means they are protected from harm or harassment by humans. Give one a hard time and you're looking at a hefty $25,000 fine and some jail time.

Anything that causes a sea lion to change its natural behavior falls into the harassment category.

Ramaglia said sea lions turn up daily at his float off Kodiak Island, about 260 miles southwest of Anchorage. They are becoming more aggressive and less willing to leave, he said.

"They get on, get over to one side and sink the decking under the water," Ramaglia said in a recent telephone interview. "They've broken the structure down on it."

Ramaglia said the float, which provides fuel to small boats, has suffered about $50,000 in damage. And the animals haven't been good for business, scaring off owners of small boats.

"I don't want to see them harmed — they're a smart animal," he said. "The problem is that as soon as they get a situation checked out and see that it's safe, they don't want to leave."

Ramaglia said fish waste and scraps discarded from processing plants in Kodiak Harbor lure the hungry sea lions. After they eat, they look for a comfortable place to flop.

"We're sort of at the end of Cannery Row — it's a nice convenient place for them," he said. "It's like being at the end of the buffet line."

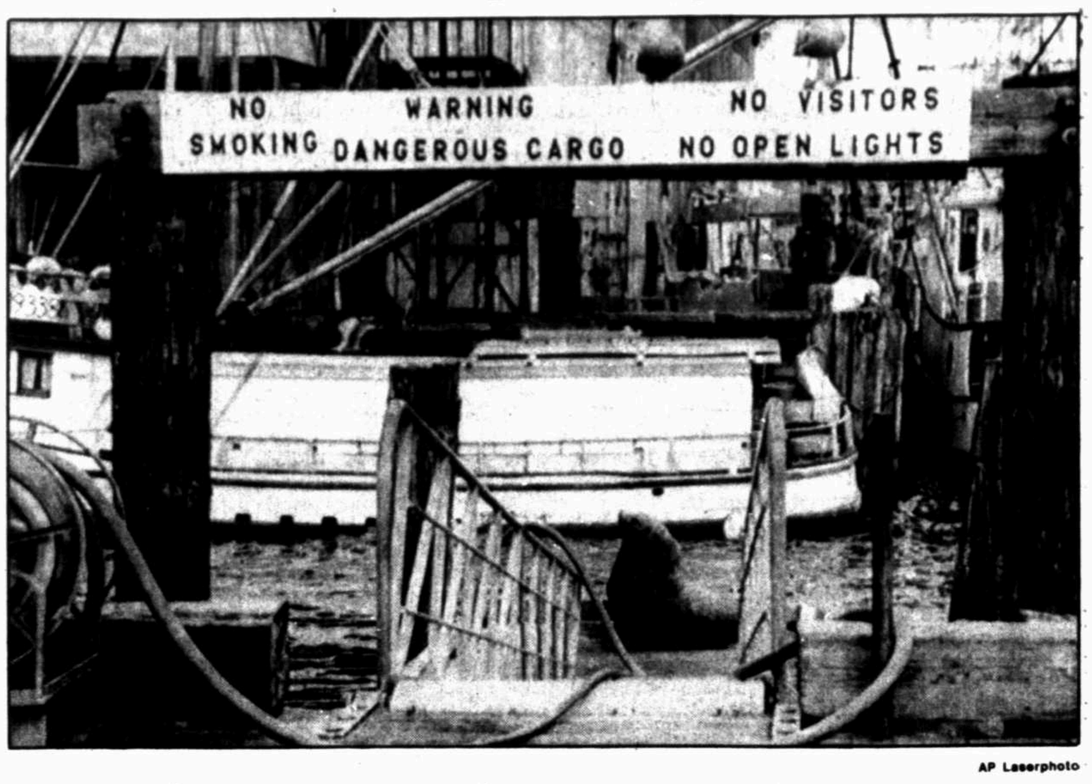

Earlier this year Dave Snodgrass, a crewman on a fishing boat, was bitten on the buttocks while standing on Ramaglia's float. Snodgrass said the sea lion tried to drag him off the float and into the harbor.

John Sease, a wildlife biologist for the National Marine Fisheries Service's Alaska region, said something must be done, but just what is unclear.

"We realize that he is losing business and suffering physical damage, and that we have to do something to help," said Sease.

"Our experience with these kinds of problems is that they aren't easy — when a sea lion decides, 'This is my spot,' it's kind of hard to persuade him otherwise," he said. "Anything we do will be experimental."

Cindy Lowry of Greenpeace USA's office in Anchorage said her organization wouldn't automatically oppose efforts to coax the sea lions to leave the North Pacific Fuel float.

AP Laserphoto

Steller sea lions, such as the one shwon, have begun congregating on a fuel dock in Kodiak, Alaska's busy fishing harbor giving all kinds of headaches to the company that runs the dock. Officials are trying to figure out how to get the big sea mammals off the dock, without harrassing then, a violation of federal law.

Hardware store owners can rustle up sandwich or bolt

MINEOLA (AP) — At the hardware store on Broad Street, Jim Young — he's the guy in the apron — will rustle you up a Reuben on rye, or any one of 14 other sandwiches on the menu. Meanwhile, his wife, Bunny, will hunt down the right size handle for your sledge hammer or fetch the piece you need to fix your plow.

This division of labor, not to mention the store's strange mix of products — nuts, bolts, beef and bologna — may have puzzled the locals at first. "It took Bunny a long time to get to where people would come in and ask her about hardware," says Jim. But it suits the Youngs just fine.

"He doesn't fix things, and I don't cook," says Bunny. Or as someone said, "If you want to see a grown man cry, ask Jim about hardware."

The Youngs bought Kitchens Hardware, one of tiny Mineola's oldest establishments, four years ago. It wasn't so much that the couple wanted to be in the hardware business. It was more that they didn't want to see a little piece of small town Texas disappear.

"I'd never been in hardware," says Bunny. "But being the historical preservationists we are, we hated to see it closed."

But the Youngs bought more than a piece of Americana. They bought into a lifestyle, turning their backs on the fast pace of big city life in Dallas, where Jim, as a vice president at A.G. Edwards & Sons, supervised 200 stockbrokers in 13 offices and easily made more money every year than Kitchens grosses in several.

"I wanted to get out of the day-to-day rat race," says Jim, now 57. "What we found by giving up NorthPark-type shopping malls and good restaurants was this very elusive thing called peace of mind."

Jim had been a regional vice president at A.G. Edwards during the late 1960s. In 1969, acting in behalf of the investment firm, he assisted in arranging the $8 million public offering that transformed Dallas-based Pizza Inn into a public company.

Several years later, Jim became secretary-treasurer of Pizza Inn Inc., as well as the owner of seven Pizza Inn franchises. He left the corporation to concentrate on managing his pizza stores in the mid-1970s. At the same time, Jim, along with his wife and a partner, ran a consulting firm that specialized in raising venture capital for agricultural enterprises.

The money was good — he says he regularly pulled down "an easy six figures" a year — but the pressure was relentless.

"No matter how much you make, it's not enough," says Jim. "And the responsibility in the brokerage business is awesome. If I lost somebody money, it just killed me. I never had the mental toughness."

What he did have, however, was a 40-acre farm just east of Mineola, a railroad town of 4,000 people about 80 miles east of Dallas. He'd bought the farm in the early 1980s — a weekend retreat where he raised horses and was able to get away from the telephone.

When Kitchens Hardware, founded in 1889, fell into the hands of bankers in 1987, Jim, who had sold off his pizza franchises by then, took the leap into full-time small town life as proprietor of a main street hardware store.

But with a Wal-Mart store only half a mile away, Jim figured he couldn't survive if he merely competed on price and volume. So he and Bunny put their efforts into accentuating the store's historical charm: They uncovered the tin ceiling that had been lost to years of dust, they put in a dozen ceiling fans, they threw in a few Rockwellian antiques — a fire engine red Coca-Cola cooler, an old-fashioned gas pump and a wood-burning stove.

And to diversify beyond bolts, pipes and plowshares, Jim put in a deli, replete with red-and-white checkered table cloths and a menu with items guaranteed to clog arteries.

"It's not Wal-Mart's or Handy Dan's. We'll sell you a single screw or bolt," Jim says.

But they're also selling service. "People come in here and we make them feel good. We speak to everyone who comes in. Everybody likes to hear their name," Bunny says.

What they get in return, they say, is a six-mile drive to work slowed only by a single traffic light and a place where folks leave their cars unlocked and need only dial four numbers to make a local call.

"I think I like the stability of a small town," says Jim. "There isn't anybody in Mineola I don't know."

Panhandle town to open new hospital

DALHART (AP) — Amid many struggling rural hospitals, Coon Memorial is a rarity — it is preparing for its grand opening.

"We're probably the only town building a new hospital that will open its doors debt free when construction is completed," said hospital administrator Joe Duerr.

A grand opening for the newly built Coon Memorial Hospital is scheduled to begin at 1:30 p.m. June 2, Duerr said.

The old Coon Memorial Hospital, which was more than 60 years old, was strained beyond its capacity and couldn't deliver modern quality care, Duerr said.

"There was just a general need to rebuild," the administrator said. "We didn't meet life safety code standards."

When the Dallam and Hartley counties hospital district decided to build the $3.4 million hospital, they didn't have to borrow any money, which was a major deciding factor to build, the administrator said.

Another reason the hospital district went ahead with rebuilding was because of community support.

"More than 75 percent of residents in the district responded in a 1990 survey that they would support the building of a new health care facility," he said.

Duerr, who has been hospital administrator since 1988, said visitors will have the opportunity June 2 to tour the facility, which includes 16 acute-care beds, a two-room surgical suite with two recovery room beds, a nursery, a gift shop, a doctor's library, a chapel and a pharmacy.

The hospital administrator said new equipment the hospital has purchased includes a CAT scan and a System 9000 Automated Cell Counter, which allows an operator to test blood without coming into direct contact with the blood samples.

Duerr said patients were moved to the new hospital May 2 and most of the equipment was moved the previous weekend.

"It was a challenge to build the hospital, but moving it was even more of a challenge," he said.

The administrator said the hospital was full one week after patients were moved.

Duerr said a fund raising drive, called "Challenge To Action" in 1987, kicked off the project. The goal was to raise $800,000, he said. Instead, $1,235,000 was received in pledges, the administrator said. Duerr said about 70 percent of the pledges have been collected.

In the late 1920s, Richard and Katherine Coon established the Richard Coon Hospital Estate to fund future hospital needs. Some of the money was used in 1957 when a new wing was added and more was used in 1961 when Coon Memorial Nursing Home was built.

Duerr said that when construction began on the new hospital the trust had about $5 million in it. With the $1,235,000 in pledges collected during the fund-raising project, the hospital building began.

The administrator said two of the four different phases involved in building the new hospital are completed.

Duerr said the first phase was finished with the completion of a 111-bed nursing home. The second phase is the newly completed 16-bed hospital facility, he said. The third phase will be the demolition of the old, four-story building and the fourth is tying the old with the new.

Ramps on spring rampage through Appalachia

RICHWOOD, W.Va. (AP) — For some, the most welcome scent of springtime is the sweet smell of daffodils or the wafting fragrance of cherry blossoms.

And then there are ramp lovers.

"You really have to like them to eat anything that smells so bad," said Gladys Hammons, a resident of this mountain town of 2,800.

The bulbs have a pungent aroma; their taste is stronger than onions, and they linger on the breath longer than garlic. But ramp lovers are undeterred — from mid-March through May, they ransack the mountains for the delicacy.

Ramps — or ramsons, as they are sometimes known — are akin to scallions and wild leeks. They grow wild on Appalachian mountains aided by high altitudes, cool temperatures and generous rainfall; they are also found from southern Quebec and New England to Iowa and Minnesota.

Ramps have grown wild for centuries and, according to folklore, are the first greens to appear in spring. Indians and early settlers looked forward to the first leafy ramp shoots after a long winter of hard tack and cornbread.

These days, ramps are favored by both down-home cooks and gourmet chefs. They are devoured by the bushel at spring ramp dinners in Richwood and dozens of other towns across central Appalachia.

Ramps are "the dirtiest littlest stinkers in the whole world when you have to clean 1,200 pounds of them," said Maxine Corbett, executive secretary of the Richwood Chamber of Commerce which sponsors a ramp festival each April.

This year, nearly 2,000 people gathered to feast on pinto and navy beans, cornbread, ham, bacon — and ramps, of course, sauteed in bacon grease.

Corbett said the "mystique of the ramp" draws ramp lovers and the "just plain curious" to Richwood and other ramp fetes.

Ilene Schnall of Charleston, W.Va., said there are two kinds of ramp dinners — "big events where all the politicians turn out and smaller ones. The small ones at the VFWs (Veterans of Foreign Wars) really know how to cook ramps.

Ramps are revered in West Virginia as delicacies and heralded as a "spring tonic," according to Glen Facemire Jr. of Summersville, a mailman and self-proclaimed expert who published a pamphlet on the subject.

Thousands may travel to Mexico for eclipse

N.Y. Times News Service

MEXICO CITY — Tens of thousands of international star gazers are expected to make boat and plane pilgrimages to Mexico for a July solar eclipse that will be among the most stunning of the century.

Around the time of the eclipse — July 11 at noon — Mexicans and foreigners will clog the highways leading to Mexico's west coast states and Baja California, where the astral happening will be dramatic.

A partial eclipse will take place in the United States and will look most dramatic in southwestern states, such as Texas.

But during the week before the eclipse, travelers to Mexico are expected to greatly outnumber local residents in some small Baja California towns. "Some hotels have been booked for two years," said Marivi Lerdo, an eclipse publicist for Mexico's Tourism Ministry.

She said there is no official estimate of the number of people expected to go to Mexico, or the amount of tourism revenue the country is likely to earn.

Clear Mexican skies and the unusually long time span of the eclipse will make the phenomenon even more dramatic than usual, said Alan Dyer, an editor for Astronomy, a national science magazine. He said the total eclipse — in which the moon fully covers the sun — will be the fourth longest in this century.

"It's just so powerful a sight," he said, describing the experience of seeing an eclipse, which he likened to a "very eery sight of the black hole in the sky."

He said he expects "tens of thousands of people" to descend on Mexico.

One California tour agency, called Biological Journeys, plans to avoid crowds by taking eclipse fans to Mexico down the Pacific coast in motor-powered boats. The boaters will watch the eclipse from an offshore island.

Another California tourist firm has organized a Mexico-bound caravan of recreational vehicles.

"The people I'm getting are Trekkies," said Ken Stewart, owner of Sportsmen Tours and Travel and Insurance, in Leucadia, Calif. "I'm sure they've never missed an episode of Captain Kirk and the Enterprise."

In the Baja California town of San Jose del Cabo, hotel owners are expecting 60,000 eclipse watchers, though the village has only 30,000 residents, said Roberto Lopez, spokesman for the Posada Real Hotel.

But Marcia Roberts, owner of Mexico Connection in El Paso, said she still has 200 places left on her tour. She said Americans seem not to be aware of the eclipse.

"People from Japan and Europe are going. We don't seem to be as knowledgeable as the rest of the world," she said.

The total solar eclipse will take place along a path from Hawaii to central Brazil. Along that stretch, viewers will be able to see the moon slip in front of the sun, slowly covering it. The sky will grow darker, as if dusk has fallen, until the sun is completely blocked out for a few minutes.

The time span for this "total solar eclipse" will depend on where the viewer is along the path. This part of the eclipse will last the longest — 6 minutes and 58 seconds — at the center of the path in the Mexican town of Tuxpan, south of Mazatlan on Mexico's west coast.

The July eclipse is only 10 seconds shorter than the longest eclipse in this century, which took place on June 20, 1955 and was visible in the Indian Ocean. No other total eclipses will be visible from the Western hemisphere until 2017.

During the partial eclipse that will take place in American states, the light will dim, but the sun will never be totally covered. Southern Texas will experience a 75 percent eclipse, said Bill Wren, an astronomer for McDonald Observatory in west Texas.

He said eclipses provide scientists a rare chance to see the sun's corona, or rim. Made of intensely hot gases, the solar corona is most easily seen when the more intense light of the sun is blocked.

"Astronomers get a chance to see how the gases behave," he said.

Other side effects include fleeting specks of light, produced because the mountains of the moon cover the sun before the flat lands. "In the last few seconds, the last bits of light shine through the valleys," Dyer said.

He said that seeing an eclipse is a "dramatic and emotional" experience that becomes 'addictive.'

Porn star turned politician weds New York artist

BUDAPEST, Hungary — Porn star-turned-politician Ilona "Cicciolina" Staller married New York artist Jeff Koons in her native Hungary on Saturday.

Staller, 39, dressed in a high-necked white satin gown, arrived with Koons for a civil ceremony at one of the municipal marriage bureaus that are popularly known here as "Lenin Chapels."

Only family and close friends were invited. All photographers, except for an officially commissioned one, were barred.

The newlyweds tried to cover their faces with a shawl as they dashed into the building. An elevator-music-style version of "What a Wonderful World" could be heard from inside. The wedding party later made its way to a Protestant church for a religious ceremony.

Koons has won renown for his stainless steel rabbits, floating basketballs and a white statue of pop star Michael Jackson.

Staller, a member of the Italian Parliament, last captured headlines when she offered to have sex with Saddam Hussein if he would agree to release Western hostages held after Iraqi forces invaded Kuwait.

The Hungarian daily Kurir said the couple plan to honeymoon in Mexico.

PHILADELPHIA — Temptations singer David Ruffin, whose distinctive baritone was featured on such hits as "My Girl" and "Ain't Too Proud to Beg," died Saturday of an apparent drug overdose, police said. He was 50.

Ruffin

Police Detective Joan Duffy said a limousine pulled up to the University of Pennsylvania Hospital emergency room shortly before 3 a.m.

The driver, whose name is unknown, dropped off Ruffin, saying the singer had overdosed on drugs, Duffy said. Ruffin was pronounced dead at 3:55 a.m.

Esther Edwards, president of Detroit's Motown Historical Museum and the sister of Motown founder Berry Gordy, said Ruffin would be missed.

"We all know and love David very much as part of the Temptations," said Edwards. "Of course, David has been gone for a long time from the Temptations."

Edwards, who was the group's first manager, said Ruffin was a very important part of the Temptations. "He was a very dynamic performer — his singing, the dancing," she said.

Davis Eli Ruffin was born Jan. 18, 1941 in Meridian, Miss. Known professionally as David Ruffin, he was an original member of the Temptations.

He joined the group, formerly known as the Primes, in Detroit in the early 1960s, bringing a gospel singing style that blended with the group's harmonies.

At that time the group, composed of Ruffin, Eddie Kendricks, Paul Williams, Otis Williams and Mel Franklin, was signed to Detroit's Motown label.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — There will be no more sad songs for Lorrie Morgan, despite a well-publicized personal tragedy and a history of tear-stained hits.

Morgan's upbeat "We Both Walk" is at the top of the country song charts and she says she's in love for the first time since her husband, singer Keith Whitley, died from alcohol poisoning in 1989.

Morgan, 31, says slow, mournful ballads were all songwriters offered her after his death.

"I mean, it was all kinds of dying songs," Morgan told The Tennessean in an interview published Saturday.

"I said, 'I'm not going to do that. I'm not basing my career on a tragedy. I live the tragedy every day without it being in my music.'"

After dating other men, including singer Johnny Rodriguez, Morgan said she fell in love with singer Clint Black's bus driver, Brad Thompson.

"He's a wonderful, wonderful guy . . .," Morgan said. "This guy is very special and I'm into him real bad."

Morgan's earlier hits include "Trainwreck of Emotion," "Dear Me" and "Out of Your Shoes."

NEW YORK — Ted Turner, already the owner of sports teams and a television network, is trying to widen his audience further by going into book publishing.

Turner

Hitting the shelves today is "War in the Gulf," a history of the war published by the new Turner Publishing Inc.

Turner's Atlanta-based Turner Broadcasting System Inc. is the parent company of Cable News Network and Turner Network Television, among others. TBS also has a division that makes videotapes from its MGM film library.

In addition, Turner owns baseball's Atlanta Braves and basketball's Atlanta Hawks.

The book, written by Thomas B. Allen, F. Clifton Berry and Norma Polmar, recounts the events leading up to the war and the war itself.

Five Vietnam heroes plan reunion

TYLER (AP) — Harold Sherman said he knew he was on his last patrol mission in the Mekong Delta region of South Vietnam more than 23 years ago, just before a band of communist insurgents put the wills of him and four of his fellow U.S. Navy crewmen to a deadly test.

He was aboard one of two fiberglass craft known as river patrol boats, or PBRs, that were slinking southeastward down the Lower Bassac River about 9 p.m. on March 1, 1968, he said.

Suddenly, what Sherman believes were North Vietnamese soldiers opened up with rifle, heavy machine gun and rocket fire from nearby Cu Lao May island.

"It was the scariest night of my life. It was supposed to be my last patrol before I was taken off PBRs for a paperwork job," Sherman said.

"For the first time ever, I wore my flak jacket and helmet from the time we left the dock. All this time, I kept hearing automatic weapons firing in the distance."

The PBRs engaged their unseen enemy in a firefight for roughly two minutes before a pair of the rocket rounds slammed into the craft's rear, starboard side.

Sherman says his memory is spotty following the rockets' explosions, yet the actions he took are credited with saving a crewman's life and earned him the Silver Star.

The night Sherman has trouble remembering is a night he will never forget.

"The explosion knocked me across the boat. I was blacked out. I could not see or hear due to the shock," Sherman said. "Someone, either (Lt. Richard) Godbehere or (Dallam) Bailey, asked, 'Where's (Jere) Beery at,' and I went down to check on him...

"I remember he was laying up in a corner, about halfway out the boat. He later slid down into the boat, and I was talking to him and remember holding his guts in my hand."

Signalman Beery, the boat's rear .50-caliber gunner, had been disemboweled from a shrapnel wound. Numerous accounts indicate Seaman Sherman and "God-Be-Here," as the lieutenant was known to his men, battle dressed the critically wounded man despite their own injuries as the crippled boat made its way to the nearest aid station at Tra On.

During the attack, Sherman is also credited with preventing the boat's internal explosion. Part of Sherman's Silver Star citation reads:

"Later, when a fire developed in the boat's grenade storage locker, Seaman Sherman single-handedly extinguished it amidst a hail of exploding ammunition and still under intense fire."

Sherman, Beery, Godbehere, Bailey and then Seaman David Otto all survived to tell their harrowing tale, but until recently, only two of the other four men aboard the boat that night were able to locate Sherman, now a Tyler resident.

Earlier this year, Beery, who after two years of recovery time went on to become a professional stuntman, placed a phone call to Sherman, and two "brothers in the night" were reunited at last.

They since met face-to-face about a month ago, but in a letter Beery wrote to Sherman dated Feb. 4, Beery expressed his gratitude to the man who saved his life.

"I will never forget our last night on the river in 'Nam. I will always be extremely grateful to you for the part you played in keeping me alive. Despite the fact you were hit, bleeding and in pain, you did everything you could to save my life," Beery wrote.

"I will never forget you for that. You are a very special person in my life. We are 'blood brothers' in the truest sense."

Immediately following the incident, which occurred two months following the start of the Tet offensive, the boat crew was split up. Beery, Gobehere and Sherman and one crewman from the second boat were evacuated to stateside hospitals, and following recovery, went their separate ways.

Otto went on to work for a Georgia electric company, while Godbehere retired as a lieutenant commander and served as a sheriff of Maricopa County, Ariz., before moving to Hawaii. Bailey also retired as a lieutenant commander and Beery claims to have retired from the stunt business and lives in Newnan, Ga.

Sherman spent nearly 20 years in the Navy before retiring to Tyler, and now works for Trane, Inc. But in Norfolk, Va., July 31-Aug. 3, the five members of Bravo patrol in Special Forces Task Force 116, River Section 511, also known as the "Game Wardens," are planning to come together again.

According to Beery's letter, to his knowledge they will be the only complete boat crew able to get back together. Even more amazing is a statistic in Lt. Cdr. Thomas J. Cutler's book "Brown Water, Black Berets," which indicated one out of three PBR sailors in Vietnam was wounded in action; many more than once.

"Back then, these boats, these guns and these men were our lives. If you got into trouble, you depended on the boat and each other to get by," Sherman said of his life and relationship with his crewmates.

This is an anniversary gift from Howard Van Dyke to his wife, Marilyn.

Love is in the air

Associated Press

Two lonely people, trying to escape another solitary Saturday night, tune in their CB radios.

A connection is made, a spark is lit and a relationship — bound by airwaves — develops.

They discover they both like baseball. They discover they share a love for gospel music. They discover they both are physically disabled.

Howard and Marilyn Van Dyke were already in love when they finally met face to face two years later.

"Here we are, 25 years later, and we've never stopped wanting and needing each other ... and having a whole lot of fun at it, too!" Marilyn says.

Howard, 51, has cerebral palsy, and Marilyn, 41, has a mild case of the same disease and is confined to a wheelchair because of a back injury.

With Howard's job as a school crossing guard, the Kentwood, Mich., couple struggles to make ends meet. They also must cope with chronic health problems that often leave Marilyn bedridden.

"We've made it all these years because we understand each other's limits," explains Howard. "We know what to expect from each other. We're together 99 percent of the time and we never get on each other's nerves. Lots of people couldn't do that."

AP Laserphoto

Howard and Marilyn Van Dyke share a tender moment in their Kentwood, Mich., mobile home. The Van Dykes, who both have cerebral palsy, met and fell in love via CB airwaves. "Howard thought no one would want him, being handicapped," Marilyn said. "I thought the same thing about myself. Then we found each other."

AP Laserphoto

Marilyn, above, playfully nips at her husband with the "arm" that enables her to grab items from shelves. "We have fun," Marilyn says of their marriage. The Van Dykes and their dog take a stroll through the mobile home park, right. "The good Lord never gave us kids, but he gave us a good little dog," Howard said.

AP Laserphotos

The Van Dykes snuggle at the end of the day. "We've always got each other; together we can get through anything," Marilyn said.

A home for tranquil transitions

Text by Zena Sikes

Interior landscaping of contoured grounds, trees, accent boulders and annuals greet visitors entering this stylish four bedroom, three bath, three living area home in Polo Park. Upon entering through the charming front door with its window of thick, leaded glass, visitors will be impressed with both the spaciousness and brightness of this home. The star burst transom window above the door is one of the many lovely touches which make this home so delightful. Large windows in the big, airy kitchen offer a good view of the back yard while double ovens, built-in microwave, walk-in pantry, island and counter bar with a corner sink make this room a great place to work. Crown moulding and whit-washed cabinets perfectly match the hue in the designer wallpaper while the gray ceramic tile flooring coordinates beautifully with the taupe colored carpeting found throughout the home.

All carpet in the house has been cleaned with a stain resistant finish so that spots will quickly clean up with only water.

A built-in desk with bookshelves overhead helps to make menu planning and household budgeting more organized and convenient.

Entertaining is a breeze with the formal living room and formal dining room separated only by the entry hall. Matching custom draperies cover the large windows in the living and dining areas. Fabric for these exquisite draperies were imported from Europe, both rooms translate silence to the height, elevated atmosphere.

For less formal entertaining at home with the gameroom all the inviting area. It boasts a large window seat flanked by built-in bookcases. Drawers underneath the window seat provide even more storage.

Another informal living area, the family room, includes special custom features such as a fireplace with electrical outlets on top of the mantel. The bookshelves, which are large enough to hold games, also have electrical outlets.

Crown moulding, a ceiling fan and marvelous views of the landscaped backyard add to the enjoyment of this room.

The luxurious master bedroom features a vaulted ceiling with ceiling fan and a master bath with two walk-in closets and lots of built-in cabinets and shelves. In addition to the bath including a garden tub, separate dog run west of the house. In addition, all lights in the bedrooms and living areas have dimmer switches.

A guest bedroom on the opposite end of the house from the family bedrooms provides privacy and a large walk-in closet, while the guest bath includes a full-sized linen closet.

Two remaining bedrooms are joined by a spacious, compartmental bath with double vanities and lots of storage space.

The three-car, rear entry garage provides plenty of room for the family cars, storage and more.

And if all this weren't enough, the home is located in one of the friendliest neighborhoods in Midland. The Polo Park Home Owners Association schedules four couples' socials each year and has four women's Bunco groups, a baby-sitting co-op and a monthly newsletter. Add caring neighbors for a complete picture of what living in this subdivision can mean.

This home is offered by Don Harvey Realtors for $169,500.

Langston Realtors Talk About...

Sunday open house headquarters

Langston

While we are not yet quite unpacked and ready for business in our new North Offices at the Collonade, Loop 250 and Garfield, we are ready for our inaugural Sunday Open House Headquarters.

Every Sunday at North Office from 1 to 5 p.m. we will be handing out free maps featuring all that day's open homes. We'll also have favors for the younger family members, lemonade and coffee and mortgage qualifying forms. And, especially for newcomers, we'll have tons of information on the city, its organizations, sports, neighborhoods, schools, arts, etc.

So make your Sunday afternoon open house visiting twice as effective and certainly more enjoyable. come by the north east corner of the Collonade - behind Chili's - and pick up a map of open houses grouped by neighborhoods. Then feel free to stop back for a refreshing pause, a glass of lemonade and whatever additional you need. We're there for you - not quite open for business yet but certainly open for some cool hospitality. Please come by.

"All About Midland video has traveled not only, all over the United States, to England and to Argentina for viewing by incoming transferees, it most recently was off to Hungary and Poland as part of a presentation on our nation's private enterprise system. Midland Travel's Sue Snelson took the video along several weeks ago when she visited both countries as a member of a prestigious team sponsored by Rotary International. So there are lots of audiences in Hungary and poland learning a little bit about living in Midland, Texas USA!

Many of our petroleum, oilfied services, manufacturing, and professional businesses plus other organizations are using our video in their recruitment efforts. If you would like a copy for your company's use, please call Richard Langston, Relocation Director, at 682-9495 or 800-231-2483 and he'll be glad to send one off for you or to drop one or more by.

Good news for sellers is the continuing strength of our local real estate market. The increasing occurrence of sales in two to three weeks, multiple offers on the same property and contracts at full and above listed prices are reminiscent of what one of our good friends refers to as "the do-dah days." Three offers - all by Langston agents - on Needa Faught's neat listing at 4309 Nelson Road and multiple offers on Jim Hoisager's property with a pool at 3623 Hyde park were pretty ordinary occurrences in our market and office last week; and it has really been that way all month for most of us.

But there's also good news for buyers in some terrific new properties listed the past several days. Melissa Herndon put 4001 Livingston and 5108 Daventry on the market; Tish Duncan listed 4910 Fields; Roberta Aldridge listed 1303 Nelson; 4502 Princeton with 2 acres was listed by Jim Hoisager, 101 North Dewberry and 4704 Bishop's Castle (already under contract) were listed by Jerry Holt; Pat Paxton is marketing 1703 Maberry; 4318 Ferncliff is being handled by Kaye Horchler; and I have a new Wallace Townhome at 1403 Ventura and a terrific new Gil Bates home at 4101 Springfield. Terrific properties! Call to let us show you!

HOW TO BUY A VA OR HUD GOVERNMENT ACQUIRED HOME

JO DENNIS
CRS, GRI
Certified Real Estate Specialist

HOW TO BUY A GOVERNMENT ACQUIRED HOME
1. You must have excellent credit.
2. Must have letter from Mortgage Company saying they will make you a loan based on what you have told them.
3. Mortgage Company will want to know where you have lived for the past two years, how much money you made, and who you owe!
4. A realtor can make out a contract for either HUD or VA. For VA must have proof of employment when you send in contract.
5. $500.00 must be placed in escrow at time of offer.
6. HUD does not require an appraisal or survey. HUD will pay points and credit report of buyer if qualified.
7. VA will pay points and closing if does not come to more than 10% of sales price. Most VA houses sell for more than asking price.
8. If you only pay $100 down, you must pay full price for HUD properties.

Any realtor in town can show you these properties but why not let a realtor that belongs to the Board of Realtors also show you as they know what is on the market and sometimes the listings by realtors are a better buy.

WHAT A MELON!

Although summer doesn't officially begin until June 21, the West Texas sun has turned on it's heat and thoughts just naturally turn to hot weather activities such as baseball, swimming and golfing. And with Memorial Day having just past, and Fourth of July just a month away, picnics, backyard barbecues and informal get-togethers also are on the top of the list of things to do, and summer foods are usually in the forefront of such festive occasions.

Most picnic or barbecue fare consists of such items as hot dogs, hamburgers, fried chicken, potato salad, cole slaw and sometimes even homemade ice cream. But one of the most popular summer foods is the watermelon. There is something that is naturally wonderful about a slice cool, crisp watermelon, not to mention how good it can be for you. Watermelon offers a good source of potassium and vitamins A and C, has only 45 calories per serving and has no fat or cholesterol.

Most people consider watermelon the perfect dessert for picnicking. After all, watermelon comes neatly packaged in its own easy to carry shell. The rind doesn't need washing because you don't eat the outer portion and it easily contains the juicy flesh. Once cut, the rind transforms into the perfect plate or holder of the flesh inside. The consumer needs only to remove the seeds.

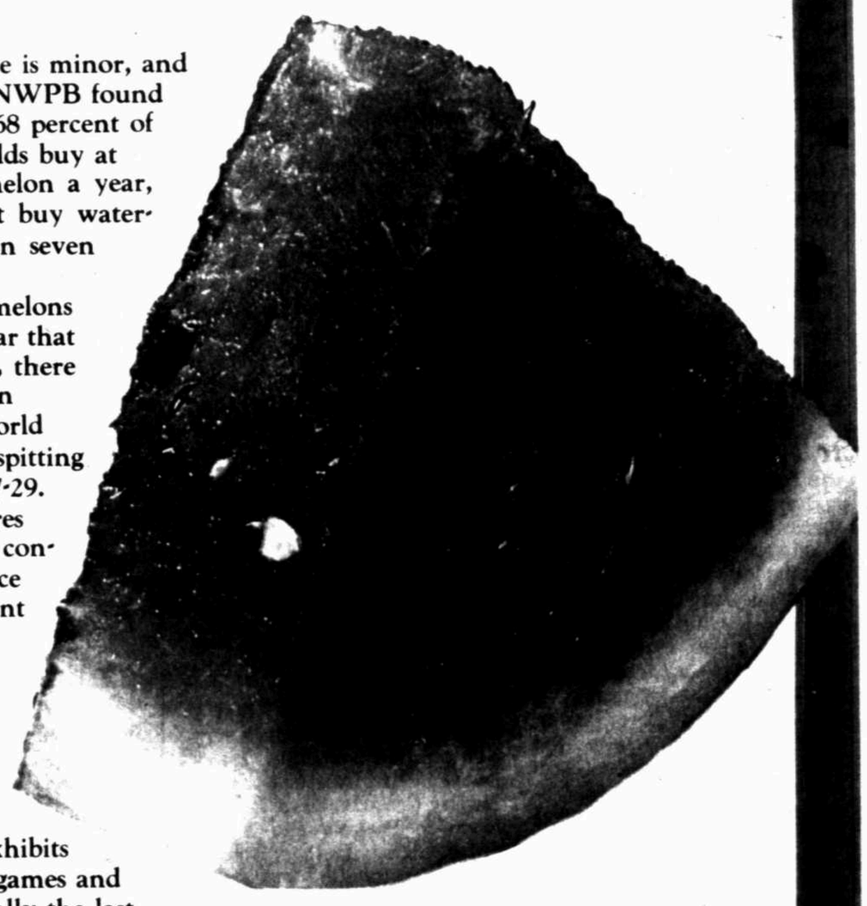

Although the watermelon is considered a large, sweet fruit by most people, it is actually considered a vegetable by horticulturists because it grows on a vine and must be replanted annually. It is a Citrullus lanatus of the Cucurbitacae family, and is a cousin of the cucumber and kin to a gourd.

Historians say that watermelons first grew in the Kalahari Desert of Africa, according to the National Watermelon Promotion Board (NWPB). There, they were used as a source of water — since they are about 93 percent water — for thirsty traders. By the 1600s, the cultivation of watermelon had reached Great Britain, Spain, China and farther. Thanks to the European colonists and the African slaves, watermelon made its way to North America.

It is believed that watermelons were first cultivated in Massachusetts in 1629 and that the colonists used every part of the melon. The rind was pickled, the juice was drunk, the seeds were toasted for snacks and the flesh was eaten with relish.

Through breeding, the watermelons of today are considered twice as sweet as those in 1629, and are three times the size — 20-25 pounds on average. More than 200 varieties of watermelons are grown in 44 states, with Texas, California, Florida and Georgia among the major producers. The main reason for the high production rate in these states is their weather. Growing the best watermelons requires warm days and nights, and plenty of water (often through irrigation).

On the average, Americans consume almost three billion pounds of watermelon every year, which averages out to more than 13 pounds each, the NWPB said. Although that sounds like a lot of watermelon, growers think of the 1960s as the watermelon's heyday when consumers chowed-down on nearly 17 pounds each of the juicy flesh each year. But smaller families, busier lifestyles and increased competition from other types of produce are sited as key reasons for the industry decline.

But this decline is minor, and research by the NWPB found that more than 68 percent of all U.S. households buy at least one watermelon a year, while 33 percent buy watermelon more than seven times a year.

In fact, watermelons are still so popular that in Luling, Texas, there is a "Watermelon Thump with World Champion Seed-spitting Contest" June 27-29. The event features the seed-spitting contest, a street dance each night, a giant parade June 29, free live entertainment in the Beer Garden, a car rally, the champion melon auction, arts and crafts exhibits and sales, food, games and rides. It is annually the last Thursday, Friday and Saturday of June. For more information, write to Susan H. Ward, Box 710, Luling, Texas, 78648.

Another watermelon related festivity is the Mize Watermelon Festival in Mize, Miss., July 20, which features watermelon eating contests, seed-spitting contests, greased watermelon races, arts and crafts, food and entertainment. The festival is annually the last Saturday in July. For more information, contact Pat Sullivan, P.O. Box 56, Mize, Miss., 39116.

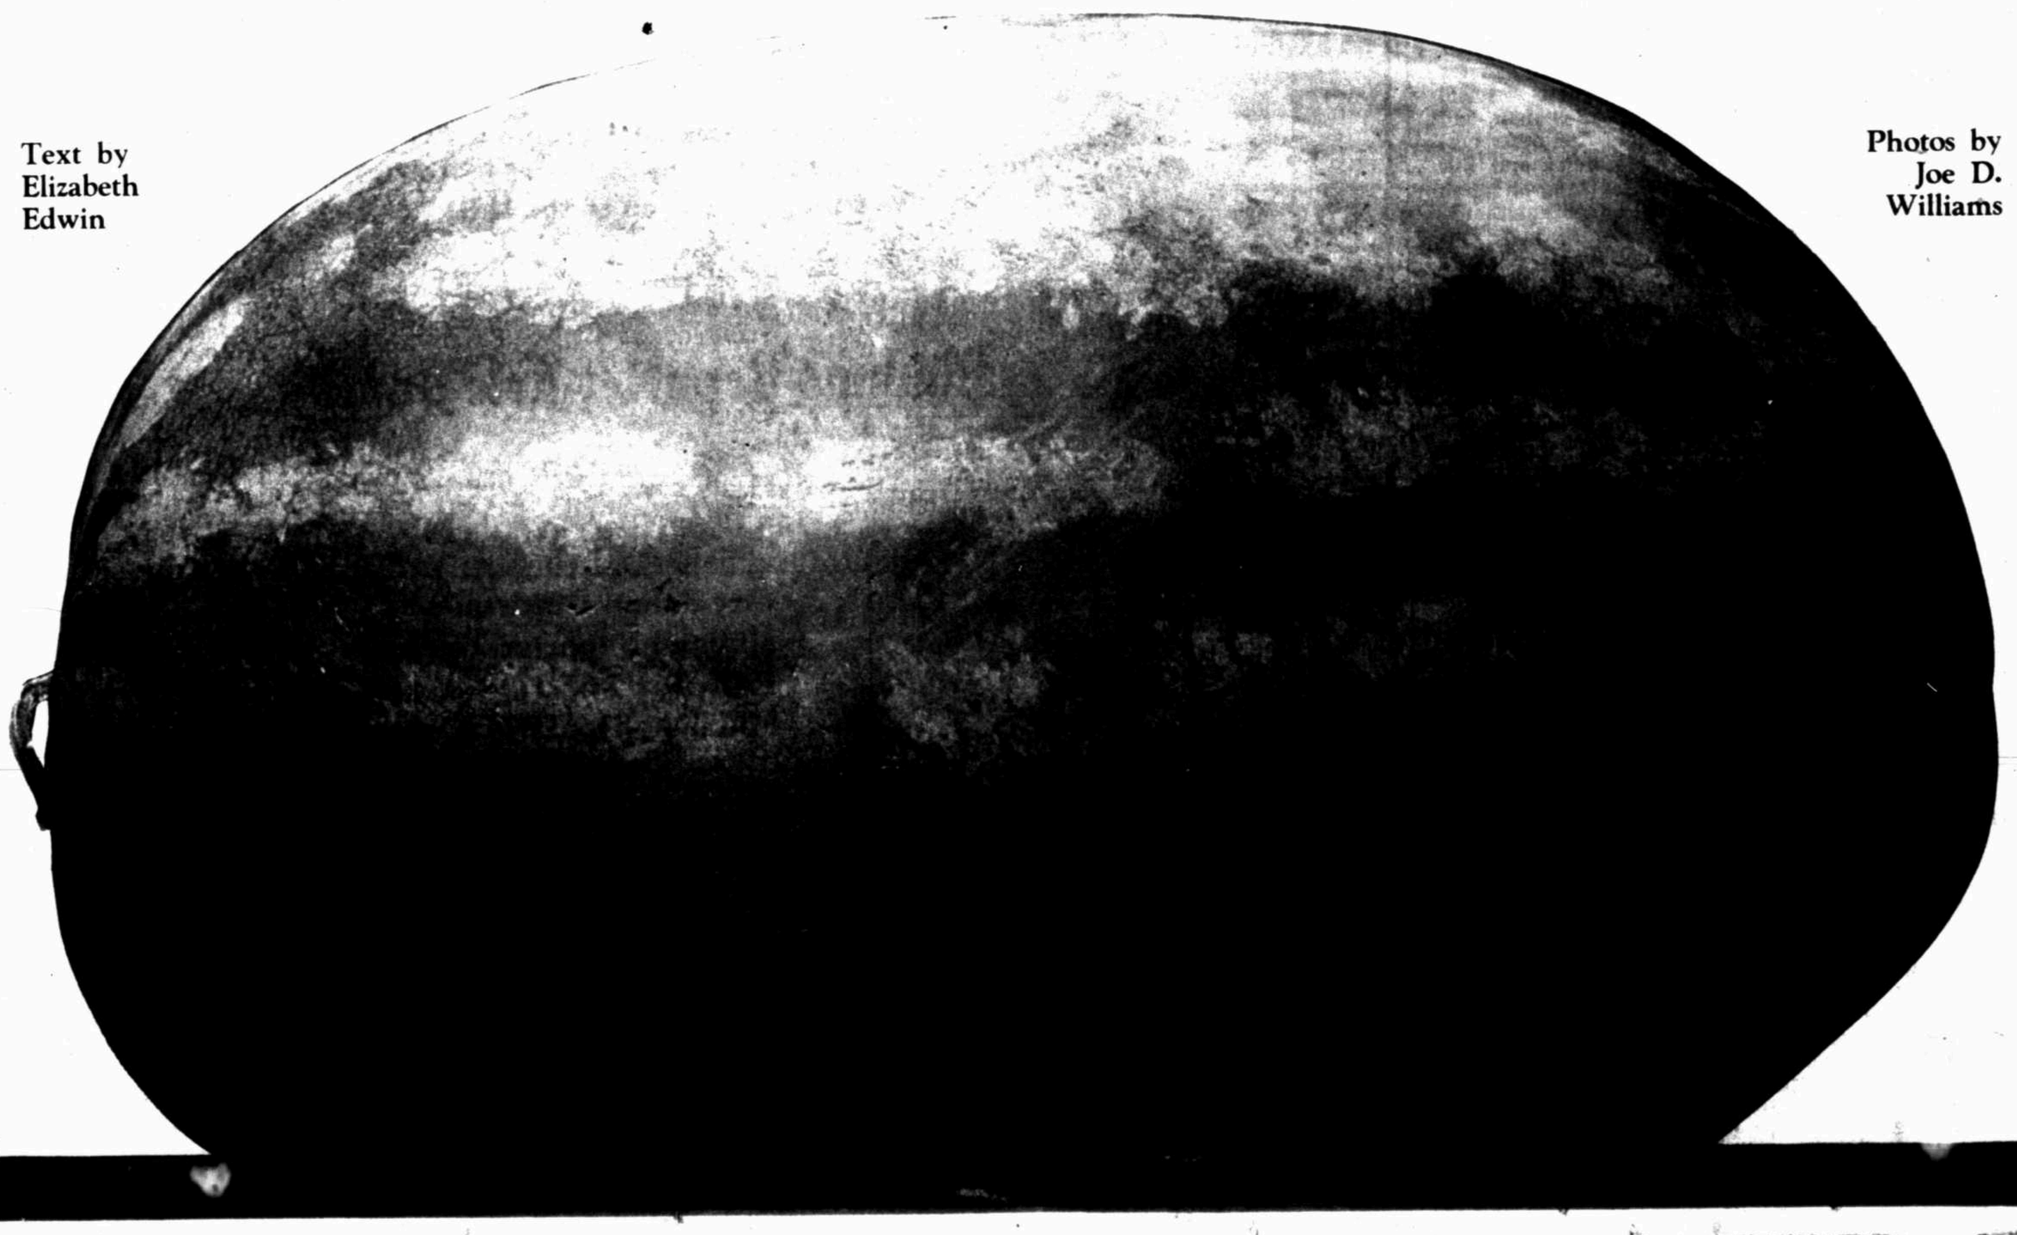

Aug. 15 brings the Hope Watermelon Festival to Hope, Ark., which is touted as "an inexpensive event the entire family can participate in while promoting the city of Hope and having fun." Annually, it is the third weekend in August and is sponsored by the Hope-Hempstead County Chamber of Commerce, Box 250, Hope, Ark., 71801.

And the event to end all watermelon events is the U.S. Watermelon Seed-Spitting Championship Sept. 7-8, at Park Lake Park in Pardeeville, Wis. The world record, to date, for watermelon seen-spitting is 66 feet, 11 inches, made by Jack Dietz of Chicago. This championship event includes a carnival, watermelon seed spitting, speed eating, watermelon football, volleyball, water battles and watermelon carving contests. For more information, contact The Mid Country Times, c/o Todd Hepler, editor, Pardeeville, Wis., 53954.

HAVE YOU HEARD?

Retirement party honors minister

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

The sounds of Radio Station WEIR wafted through the air last Sunday evening at the retirement party honoring Dr. Bill Weir, associate minister of First United Methodist Church.

McKnight-Harrison

The mythical station sounded to our ears a great deal like the one in the play, "Greater Tuna." From where we were sitting, the announcers certainly resembled Jack Reed and Jerry Krueger, two real-life pillars of the church, who affected a West Texas twang and work clothes suitable for the fictitious town of Crystalline Creek, home of the radio station.

During the radio skit, "Billy Bob" Weir was called to the stage again and again to receive gifts and accolades from the various groups with which he has worked in the church and community during his 15 years here.

A sing-along featuring Bill's favorite songs also was a part of the festivities.

Despite 100-degree temperatures, the party, billed as "A Hoedown," began in the church parking lot with a social hour to allow time for visiting with the honoree. Moving indoors to the Fellowship Hall, more than 400 guests enjoyed a barbecue dinner prior to the program.

Carrying out a western theme, tables were decorated with hurricane lamps, red bandanas and red cardboard cutouts of cowboy boots, arranged on blue cloths.

Special guests included Bill's children, Cindy Weir of Dallas and Andy Weir of Garland; his brother, the Rev. James Weir, a Baptist minister, and his wife, Mary of Cooper; his sister, Hazel Johnson and her husband, Johnny, a Methodist minister, of Tira; his nephew and wife, Jim and Linda Garner of Grand Prairie.

In addition, Dr. Charles Lutrick, former senior minister of First United Methodist Church, and his wife, Ruth, of Lubbock, and Jerry Wyatt, formerly an associate pastor of the church; his wife, Melody; their son, Chris, a student at Texas Tech, and daughters, Kari and Karen, all of Allen.

Bill, who has been minister in charge of programming at the church, is planning semi-retirement and will relocate to Sulphur Springs in mid-June to be near his family.

RISING YOUNG OPERA STAR Susan Graham of New York City and formerly of Midland had another honor come her way recently when she was asked to sing the National Anthem at a luncheon at which Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf was the guest of honor.

The annual corporate-sponsored Father's Day luncheon was held at the Sheraton Hotel in New York and attended by some 2,000 guests.

In visiting briefly with the general, Susan learned he is an opera fan. He complimented the mezzo-soprano on her lovely voice, and she, in turn, praised his outstanding war efforts.

The daughter of Midlanders Betty and Pete Graham, Susan will perform at the Santa Fe Opera during the months of July and August and will make her debut at the Metropolitan Opera in New York in September.

A GRADUATION PARTY recently honored Bryant Mueller and Rob Neatherlin. Held at the Saddle Club South pool and tennis courts, the event was co-hosted by Pam (Mrs. Mark) Branum and Brenda (Mrs. Jim) Cauthen.

A Hawaiian theme was carried out in the decor and refreshments.

The party had many fun aspects, but the group particularly enjoyed entertainment by Polynesian dance instructor Diane (Mrs. Sandy) Faulkner, who then had Bryant and Rob don grass skirts and receive dance instruction.

There also was a dance floor, with country and western music provided.

Games included water volleyball, the limbo and tennis. The boys particularly enjoyed the limbo contest, with Midland High School Valedictorian Stephen Canon stealing the show.

Both MHS graduates, Bryant is the son of Brooke and Bill Mueller, and Rob is the son of Karen and Craig Neatherlin. Bryant plans to attend the University of Tulsa and play on the soccer team there. Rob has a four-year swimming scholarship to the Coast Guard Academy in New London, Conn.

TO HONOR MIDLAND High School graduate Libby Sanders, a Spud Party was held recently at the home of Sue (Mrs. Jim) Brusehan. Co-hostess was Jean (Mrs. Buddy) Knight.

The guests lunched on baked potatoes with all the trimmings and for dessert, praline cookies.

The tables were covered with purple and white checked cloths and centered with pots of gold mums.

Attending were Kelly McQueen, Kenda Wells, Kerry Hansen, Heather Jones, Tracy Jones, Stephanie Starns, Christy Groome, Susie Litrell, Jennifer Nichols and Leigh Blunt. Libby's mother, Bonnie (Mrs. Lee) Sanders was a special guest.

TWO MILESTONE EVENTS occurred within a couple of days for Jennifer Jackson recently. On May 25, she became the bride of Carlos Balido in a ceremony at St. Nicholas Episcopal Church. The previous day, she was sworn into the Texas State Bar by Judge Pat Baskin.

Jennifer is a December 1990 graduate of the Texas Tech University School of Law. Her husband, also a graduate of Texas Tech's Law School, is an attorney in Dallas.

Pre-nuptial festivities began with a bridal tea at the home of Edna (Mrs. Mack) Hibbitts. The other hostesses were Janet (Mrs. Bob) Pollard, Janet Foster, Charlotte (Mrs. Newnie) Ellis, Sue (Mrs. Ed) Harris and Marsha Nickel.

A Christmas ornament shower and luncheon at Memories Restaurant was hosted by the office of Adobe Realtors.

The rehearsal dinner was given at Midland Country Club by the groom's parents, Leslie and Carlos Balido, of San Antonio.

A wedding day brunch for the out-of-town guests was held at the home of Louan and Glenn Rogers. The other host couples were Betty and Bill Sumner, Mary Jane and Bob Young, Pat and Brent Blonkvist, Sara and Norman Fry, Jeanene and Jimmy Wheeler of Stanton and Wanda and Mike Mitchell of Post.

A bridesmaids' luncheon was given at the home of Jane and Dick Lamphere. The hostesses were Susan Lamphere of Boulder, Colo.; Sara Sumner of The Woodlands, and Catherine Furgeson of Midland.

The wedding reception was held in an outdoor setting at the home of the bride's parents, Judy and Billy Jackson.

Tickets delivered to business travelers

DALLAS (AP) — An electronic ticket delivery network with more than 200 printer locations has been established to speed up delivery of airline and rail tickets to business passengers with last-minute changes in travel plans. Travel agents using the network — called QuikTix — can print tickets, boarding passes and trip itineraries round-the-clock at the site closest to their client, with deliveries then made directly to clients' hotel rooms, or to their homes or offices.

"Studies have shown that more than 50 percent of business travel includes a changed flight plan," said Nick Bredimus, president of QDAT (Quick Delivery Airline Tickets), which operates the network. "And business travelers account for over 60 percent of all air travel. Historically, these people have had little recourse but to wait in lines at airports if they needed new tickets. This, of course, means they've usually had to get to the airport early, wait in line to get a new boarding pass, and pay a prepaid ticket fee."

WATERMELON: Juicy friut is a veggie

(From 1E)

The typical watermelon consumer has been tagged as a busy mother of a family of five, however, marketing of the product in pre-cut pieces, chunks or slices, as well as being served in many take-home salad bars, has made watermelon a convenient item for those with smaller families and singles. In fact, some 25 percent of the total dollar value of watermelons sold is in pre-cut watermelon.

But there seems to be something nostalgic about buying and cutting a whole watermelon. Demand for whole watermelons peaks during the Forth of July holiday, but retailers also have seen an increase in sales during Memorial Day and Labor Day weekends.

To pick a ripe melon, harvest teams look for watermelons that have turned yellow on the bottom. The ripe melons are hand-cut from the vine — one of the few produce items still harvested by hand — and prepared for shipping.

In the store, consumers should look for melons that aren't cut, dented, broken or bruised. Although the watermelon appears to be hardy and tough, the rinds are actually quite fragile.

TO TEST A watermelon for ripeness, some say the thump, some say smell, some shake and some feel the rind. But according to the NWPB, one out of four consumers rely on plain old luck in choosing a watermelon that's ripe.

However, the board recommends that the most reliable method is to simply turn the melon over. If the underside is yellow and the rind overall has a healthy sheen, the watermelon is most probably ripe. The skin should be even, but several insect bites or marks left on the rind will not affect the melon's flavor.

Whole watermelons should be stored between 50-60 degrees for no more than two weeks. Once the melon is cut and wrapped, the slices should be kept chilled and eaten within two days. However, pre-cut slices must not be wrapped tightly, or the flesh will become mushy. Watermelon also becomes mushy and mealy if frozen. All watermelon stored more than two weeks loses its sugar content and its quality deteriorates, according to the NWPB.

Most people like watermelon plain, just cold and crisp. But many are discovering that watermelon can be used in recipes for a different twist.

TWO RULES OF thumb are offered by the NWPB when working with watermelon: 1) Never cook it (it returns it to its cucumber roots, losing texture and sweetness) and 2) Don't chop it too finely (it disintegrates when mixed with other ingredients).

For those who are daring and would like to try some of the ways people are eating watermelon, the NWPB offers the following recipes.

SUMMER PITA SANDWICH
4 wedges seeded watermelon
1 cup diced cooked chicken
1 tablespoon chopped cilantro
2 tablespoons plain yogurt
¼ teaspoon garlic salt
Dash of cayenne pepper
2 whole wheat pita breads, halved
¼ cup prepared spreadable herb cheese
4 large lettuce leaves

Place sliced watermelon on paper towels to remove excess liquid. Mix chicken, cilantro, yogurt, garlic salt and cayenne. Spread inside surfaces of pita bread halves with herbed cheese and fill each with about ¼ cup chicken mixture. Arrange watermelon and lettuce in pita bread. Makes 2 to 4 servings.

FRESH WATERMELON SALSA
2 cups seeded and coarsely chopped watermelon
2 tablespoons each chopped onion and water chestnuts
2 to 4 tablespoons chopped Anaheim chilies
2 tablespoons Balsamic vinegar
¼ teaspoon garlic salt

Combine all ingredients; mix well. Refrigerate one or more hours. Makes 2 cups.

Serving tip: Serve with grilled chicken.

For Nachos: Arrange 4 cups tortilla chips in a single layer on a 10-inch plate. Sprinkle with one cup shredded Cheddar or Jack cheese and chili powder. Bake at 400 degrees about 5 minutes or microwave at 50 percent (medium) for 2 to 5 minutes or until cheese melts; rotate dish one or two times. Spoon Fresh Watermelon Salsa over or serve on the side.

WATERMELON SMOOTHIE
2 cups seeded watermelon chunks
1 cup cracked ice
½ cup plain yogurt
1 to 2 tablespoons sugar
½ teaspoon ground ginger
⅛ teaspoon almond extract

Combine all ingredients in blender container; blend until smooth. Makes 2 to 3 servings.

Population trend may cause food shortage

Associated Press

If present population trends continue beyond the year 2000, the world's farmers will have to grow as much food in the first two decades of the new century as was produced over the past 10,000 years, predicts National Geographic.

"We respond to calls from police, psychiatric professionals, relatives of those in distress and troubled people themselves," notes Richard Conte, president of the 51-hospital company.

Firebush has interesting history

By Deborah A. Benge

Extensive testing by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service has proven firebush to be a worthy annual and a new candidate for the title of "Superstar of the Summertime Landscape." Because of the cooperation of Texas growers, this bedding plant is now available throughout most of Texas, including the Permian Basin.

Benge

Besides its beauty, drought and pest resistance, heat tolerance, and attraction to hummingbirds, firebush has an interesting history.

An evergreen shrub or small tree (3- to 13-feet tall) native to many areas in tropical and subtropical America, firebush grows in profusion near magnificent stone pyramids in Veracruz and Yucatan. While red is the only firebush bloom color currently being sold in this area, yellow-flowered species have been seen in the Mexican states of Michoacan and Chiapas as well as in Guatemala. Another species that produces orange flowers that become red with age is found from Sinaloa to Oaxaca.

Firebush has long been prized by the native peoples in many areas of Mexico and Central America, not only for its beauty, but for its many utilitarian and medicinal uses as well. The leaves and stems have long been used in tanning; crushed leaves have been used as a poultice; lotions prepared from the plant have been used to reduce swelling in legs; and it has even been used as a deodorant.

The fruit is a dark-colored small berry that has five cells and several seeds. Firebush fruit is said to be acidic and edible; in fact, a fermented drink is said to have been made from it, and in the West Indies a syrup for treatment of dysentery is made from it. But think about, use the plant to its potential in the home landscape.

Firebush is available in local nurseries, where you can also pick up fliers on firebush or the "Earth-Kind" publication on firebush available through participating nurseries.

To ensure success with firebush, try these tips:

- Begin setting transplants into the home landscape in mid-May and continue planting into the summer months.
- Plant in full sun (at least eight to 10 hours per day). Eastern, southern or western exposures are usually suitable.
- Provide good soil drainage by adding four to six inches of organic matter and planting in raised beds.
- While tilling in organic matter is one of the best things you can do, additional fertilizer based on a soil test will be even better. If soil tests are not available, use one to two pounds of a complete fertilizer like 8-8-8 or 12-12-12 per 100 square feet of bed. Sidedress monthly with a soluble nitrogen fertilizer.
- Space transplants one foot apart. Mulch the entire bed after planting to reduce water loss, soil surface salt accumulation and discourage weed growth.
- Water in thoroughly at planting. After that check soil moisture by feel to determine when water is needed. Of course more water and attention is needed during the establishment period, but don't overwater.
- Occasional light shearing encourages almost constant blooming as well as a denser plant.

These principles will apply to many annual bedding plants and can be used with them as well, for the very best performance you can get from your investment.

Study finds women are 'natural leaders'

NEW YORK (AP) — That well-known "glass ceiling" that women encounter isn't due to any inherent lack of leadership skill, according to a survey commissioned by a New York executive recruiting firm. Women, in fact, may be more natural leaders. The survey, for Russell Reynolds Associates, Inc., looked at "leader-style" and "manager-style" attributes among upper level executives and line and staff positions. The results indicated that women were more likely than men to be leader-style executives.

"We commissioned this study to give us a basis for advising our clients and helping them develop future leadership," says Malcolm McKay, the firm's managing director. "The results of the study, however, surprised us in the way they contradicted our traditional views of the ways men and women act in corporations."

The study was conducted among 164 men and women in upper management at Fortune 500 companies and was based on the Burke Leadership Questionnaire, along with questions about demographics, corporate culture and advancement opportunities.

McKay says the profiles of male executives were about as expected. Manager-style executives — task-oriented, empathetic and stabilizing — are usually found in staff positions, while leader-style executives — visionary, solitary and charismatic — are most often found in line positions. The surprise, he says, was that a majority of women in both line and staff positions were leader-style executives.

Regardless of sex, most leader-style executives considered their leadership skills to be the most important factor in their most recent promotions, and manager-style executives thought their promotions were due to "consistent good work."

The survey also revealed differing perceptions about the access to top jobs. Two-thirds of the women leadership executives thought their companies were hostile toward women, while only 2 percent of their male counterparts agreed with them. Three-quarters of leadership men think their companies actively encourage career development for women executives.

New book offers how-to tips on designing flower arrangements

By Tinah Saunders
N.Y. Times News Service

If there's a wedding in your future, run, don't walk, to the nearest bookstore and ask for "Wedding Flowers" by Fiona Barnett.

This exquisite book is for the bride who will not be satisfied with the ordinary — no stephanotis, baby's breath or carnations can be found in the bountiful bouquets, Renaissance head dresses, medieval garlands and old-fashioned baskets pictured on these pages.

Using seasonal garden, meadow and woodland flowers and greens, the author has created lovely, loosely assembled arrangements and bridal adornments. Barnett is a young Englishwoman who has gained a reputation for her creative approach to arranging — a well-deserved reputation, as the beautiful color photographs by Deborah Patterson attest.

Although no bride wants or needs to think about arranging flowers on the morning of her wedding, this book is intended as a do-it-yourself manual. Each composition is accompanied by illustrated instructions in an appendix titled "Practicalities." Included is help on choosing or substituting flowers, finding suppliers, calculating quantities and conditioning flowers and other live materials as well as assembling tools and materials.

Even if you have no intention of doing your wedding flowers yourself, the book can be invaluable in communicating your ideas to your floral designer. It also would be a wonderful shower gift for the discriminating bride or her mother.

If there is one fault to find with "Wedding Flowers," it is that it is probably impractical for most brides in this country. It is a very English approach to flowers and weddings — and very romantic.

'Boring' task is time consuming

MILFORD, Conn. (AP) — American men spent at estimated $700 million in 1990 pursuing what most of them consider a boring task, according to a survey on shaving. Another $2.4 billion was spent worldwide.

"By the time most men reach age 18, shaving becomes a 'chore'," says Dave Rivers, director of research, development and engineering for Schick. A recent Schick Tracer survey, he notes, found that more than 95 percent of all men consider shaving boring.

An estimated 78 million Americans, or 88 percent of all men in the U.S., shave regularly, the study results showed, and the average American male starts shaving at age 15, shaves nearly six times a week and spends some 10 minutes at the task each day.

Tips make house cleaning easier

Associated Press

OK, so most people's cleaning doesn't pass the white-glove test. Here are some tactics for getting a better rating when time is at a premium, according to Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

Avoid dirt catchers. Shop with upkeep in mind. Steer clear of open shelves, knickknacks, and plant racks that demand cleaning. Select wash-and-wear draperies and consider ready-made or quick-sew slipcovers that can be freshened twice a year.

Gloss over floors. Keep up the luxury of carpet with a high-powered, cordless vacuum cleaner. This rechargeable convenience, now available from a variety of manufacturers, is the ultimate in easy handling.

Or, stick with natural wood or stone floors that require damp-mopping once a month or so, in between regular dust-mopping. For warmth, use machine-washable throw rugs. Double their duty before washing; flip to the clean side when one gets dirty.

Tame beds. Cover comforters with duvet covers. These are large envelopes of machine-washable fabric that eliminate the need for a top sheet and a blanket.

Give it the once-over. Guests are on the way and there isn't time to prepare? Dim the lights and bring out the candles for instant atmosphere and no-show dust.

Annual Benefit Bachelor Auction to be June 15

This year's benefit Bachelor Auction will feature 30 single men including, from left, John Brinlee, Eric Ostrom, Mike Harrell, Kevin Widner and Phil Allard (seated).

Included in the Bachelor Auction, which will benefit Big Brothers/Big Sisters, will be, from left, Devin Alsup, Hank Pearson, Bill Cameron and Keith Jobe.

By Linda Anderson
Staff Writer

Officially, summer begins June 21, but school's out and many Midlanders are already into their summer schedule. Swimming, golfing, bicycling, picnicking and traveling are all summer traditions. But for many Midland singles, summer just wouldn't be summer without the Big Brothers/Big Sisters annual Benefit Bachelor Auction.

This year the auction, which features 30 of Midland's "most eligible" bachelors and their pre-selected date packages, will be June 15 at the Petroleum Club of Midland, 501 W. Wall Ave. Preview party will be 6-7:15 p.m., with the auction to follow at 7:30 p.m. General admission is $15, and reserved seating is $25.

The event is a fund-raiser for Big Brothers/Big Sisters, which is "the only youth-serving organization in Midland based on a one-on-one relationship between an adult and a child," according to Nancy Anderson, executive director of Big Brothers/Big Sisters. "We serve children ages 6-16 from single-parent homes."

Big Brothers and Big Sisters, who spend two or three hours a week with their Little Brothers and Little Sisters, act as mentors for the children, she said, and help them by encouraging them "physically, emotionally, academically, socially."

Many of the bachelors to be auctioned off this year are involved in the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program. Mark Linroth, 31, is an engineer with Chevron USA and has participated in the bachelor auction before. He is also a Big Brother who recently was matched with his second Little Brother because his first Little Brother has turned 18. "It's one of the coolest things I ever did," he said, "watch a kid grow up."

Bachelor Mike Harrell, who gave his age as "28 going on 14," is a Big Brother who recently was matched with his first Little Brother. An accountant, Harrell also is a participant in Summer Mummers (which is another Midland summer tradition).

Phil Allard, 39, said he has been "a participant in Big Brothers for about a year and a half."

Bill Cameron, 38, is a newcomer to the Bachelor Auction. He said he saw the event as "a good opportunity to help a good cause — and maybe meet somebody too."

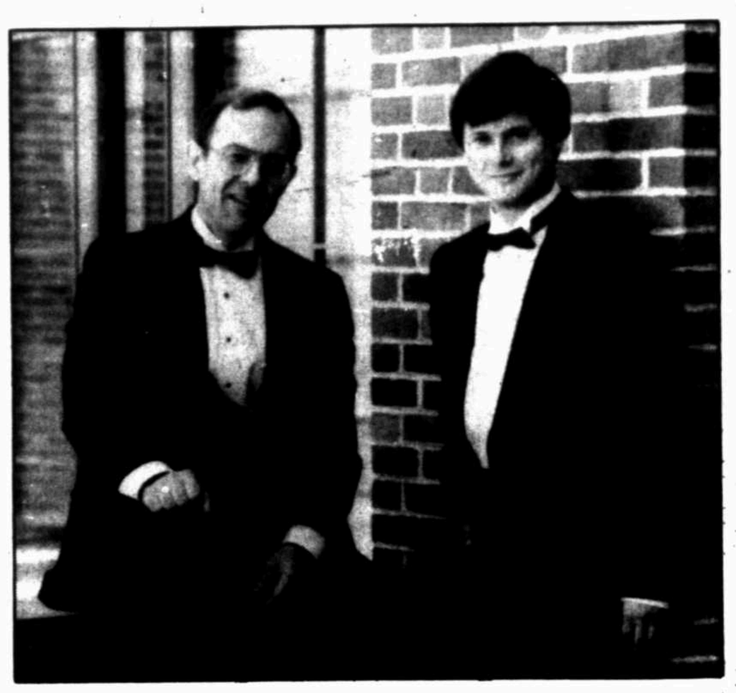

The bachelors in this year's auction, in alphabetical order, are: Allard; Devin Alsup, 26; Rene H. Barreda, 22; William Spencer Bennett, 26; Cody Bell III, 31; John Brinlee, 36; Shelby Bush, 27; Robert Chaney, 32; Gerry Cales, 40; Cameron; Mike Deichert, 25; Mike Dreyer, 31; Adam Flores, 25; Patrick Galvin, 36; Steve Green, 37; Harrell; Richard Hartzoge, 25; Geoff Hasley, 28; David Raymond Holguin, 33; Keith R. Jobe, 42; Jeff Kendziorski, 33; Linroth; Eric Ostrom, 26; Hank Pearson, 27; Thomas Ramos, 25; John Roosa, 48; Terry Urban, 34; Tim Welch, 27; Paul W. White, 31; and Kevin Widner, 31.

Funds raised by the auction will "go directly to client services," said Ms. Anderson. Currently, "we have about 140 children on the waiting list. We constantly have 125-plus children on the waiting list. Statistics show that one out of three children will spend a significant amount of time in a single-parent home."

The agency is offering two new programs for interested volunteers, she said. One is designed for juniors and seniors in high school who are "matched with low-risk children on the waiting list." The other is a couples' program. "They choose either a Little Brother or a Little Sister," Ms. Anderson said, and the child is able to see a "healthy marital lifestyle."

Anyone interested in learning more about the Big Brothers/Big Sisters program and persons wishing more information on becoming a volunteer for the organization, call 687-0195.

Skip Baldwin and Becky Neighbors of KMID-TV will be masters of ceremonies for the auction this year. Dennis Black will be auctioneer. Sponsors include Mobil, John and Karolyn Hendrix, Midland Reporter-Telegram, KMID-Big 2, Lisa Frosch Photography, Janee's Evening Wear and Tuxedo, The Printers' Touch, Chevron USA, Museum of the Southwest, Magic-102 FM, Midland Park Mall and Buddy's Flowers. Door prizes were donated by The Shop, Backstage, Julian Gold Inc., Bellini and Thompson, Pappagallo, Dillard's Department Store, Joanne's Fine Gifts, Cristiani's Jewelers, Ron's Floral Designs and Barker's Gifts.

Bachelors Gerry Cales, left, and Mark Linroth will be among the men who, with their date packages, will be auctioned off in the fifth annual Big Brothers/Big Sisters Benefit Bachelor Auction.

Currently, 'we (Big Brothers/Big Sisters) have about 140 children on the waiting list. We constantly have 125-plus children on the waiting list. Statistics show that one out of three children will spend a significant amount of time in a single-parent home.'

Garden vegetables make stir-fry colorful

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Now that gardening season is here and farmers are setting up their market stalls, you can stock up on colorful fresh vegetables for this picture-perfect stir-fry.

STIR-FRY PORK AND JICAMA

½ cup cold water
¼ cup dry sherry
¼ cup soy sauce
4 teaspoons cornstarch
1 teaspoon grated gingerroot
1 clove garlic, minced
2 tablespoons cooking oil
1 pound lean boneless pork, cut into thin strips
½ of a medium jicama, peeled and cubed (1 cup)
1 cup red and-or green sweet pepper strips
2 tablespoons sliced green onion
2 cups chopped Chinese cabbage or spinach
Hot cooked rice

In a small bowl stir together water, sherry, soy sauce and cornstarch; set mixture aside.

In a wok or a large skillet cook gingerroot and garlic in hot oil for 15 seconds. Add half of the pork; stir-fry for 3 to 4 minutes or until no longer pink. Remove from wok. Stir-fry the remaining pork until no longer pink.

Return all of the pork to the skillet; add jicama, pepper and green onion. Stir-fry for 1 minute more. Stir cornstarch mixture; stir into pork mixture. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbly; cook and stir for 2 minutes more. Stir in cabbage or spinach; heat through. Serve with rice. Makes 4 servings.

MICROWAVE DIRECTIONS: In a small bowl stir together water, sherry, soy sauce and 5 teaspoons cornstarch; set mixture aside.

In a 2-quart microwave-safe casserole combine gingerroot, garlic and pork. Omit the oil. Cook, covered, on 100 percent power (high) for 5 to 7 minutes (low-wattage oven: 7 to 9 minutes) or until no pink remains, stirring once. Drain off fat.

Add jicama, pepper and green onion. Cook, covered, on high for 3 to 4 minutes or until pepper is crisp-tender (low-wattage oven: 6 to 8 minutes).

Stir cornstarch mixture; stir into pork mixture. Cook, uncovered, on high for 2½ to 4 minutes (low-wattage oven: 4 to 6 minutes) or until thickened and bubbly, stirring after every minute. Stir in cabbage or spinach. Cook on high for 30 to 60 seconds more or until heated through. Serve as directed.

DEAR ABBY

Brief encounter may have deadly results

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I have just been informed of a very delicate situation, and I am not sure how to handle it. My husband and I separated for a short time in September 1988. While separated, I started seeing another man. It was a very brief encounter, needless to say. Since then, my husband and I are together again — and I have given birth to a son.

Van Buren

I recently ran into some friends who knew of this other man and also live near him. My friend told me some very disturbing news about this man. He has been diagnosed HIV-positive. Needless to say, I was floored hearing this. I plan to be tested very soon.

The problem is: Should I discuss this with my husband? If I tell him, it could destroy what is left of our marriage, especially if the test is negative. On the other hand, he has a right to know that the risk is there.

I cannot even comprehend the fact of AIDS. The thing that gets to me more than anything is my son. I had him after the fact. Is he infected? I could not live with myself knowing that my lack of self-control could possibly kill both of us. Please help me any way you can. — DEVASTATED

DEAR DEVASTATED: You must be tested immediately to determine whether you have been infected, and have your questions answered first-hand. Call the government AIDS hotline: 1 (800) 342-AIDS to find the location of a center near you for anonymous testing. If you are positive, then you must discuss this with your husband, and both your husband and your child should be tested.

If you are negative — it's "our" secret.

DEAR ABBY: I am a 15-year-old high school sophomore and my parents have this rule: I cannot go in cars driven by any of my friends. Abby, they have driver's licenses and are all good drivers, but my folks won't listen. I hope to get my own driver's license when I turn 16. I'm taking Driver's Education in school.

I have been asked on dates by guys my age, but of course I can't go because of this dumb rule my parents are sticking to. Abby, it's very embarrassing to be driven places by my parents.

Why do parents worry so much? It's like they don't ever want their kids to grow up. — FOREVER A BABY

DEAR FOREVER: Why do parents worry so much? Because it's every parent's nightmare that their teen-ager will be badly hurt — or killed — in an automobile accident.

If your friends who drive would meet your parents and impress them with their maturity and sense of responsibility, it may make a big difference in your parents' attitude. It's worth a try.

DEAR ABBY: I do something I think more people would do if they just stopped for a moment and thought about it. I have a very select list of charities I always give to. But when I send a check, I also include a short note: "Please do not send me a thank-you! Save the postage. My canceled check is my receipt." — DON C. IN K.C., MO.

DEAR DON: Thanks. I learned something today. Most charities need every penny they can raise.

Some memorable desserts are also easy to prepare

By Ann Byrn
N.Y. Times News Service

Who cares that you've marinated a flank steak for two days, spent 30 minutes hand-selecting tiny green beans and borrowed a sweet potato recipe from Aunt Ida?

All your dinner guests really want is dessert.

The last course of the party is inevitably the first course they remember once the china has been washed and put away. While meat and potatoes provide sustenance, dessert evokes smiles, laughter and a sense of awe that someone, anyone these days, has time to make something sweet.

But not all desserts are time-consuming projects. Many, such as these, are speedy to prepare and more special than serving a scoop of store-bought ice cream.

The first, an ice cream terrine, starts with frozen poundcake, which you layer in a loaf pan with your choice of ice creams. The terrine is kept frozen until party time and can be made a week or two in advance.

Another combines the flavors of fresh berries with a Beaujolais wine syrup. It's light, bright and dazzling and takes just minutes to assemble.

Rum-soaked chopped pineapple is a spirited addition to coffee ice cream, and once the minced macadamia nuts are sprinkled on, you have a tropical finale.

If your preference is Italian, whisk together lemon ice cream, pureed raspberries and sparkling wine for a refreshing pick-me-up.

And finally, a pie made from store-bought caramel sauce, pecans and chocolate chips will please any chocoholic.

Although the following recipe calls for cherry, peach and blueberry ice creams, use whatever flavors you prefer. But don't scrimp on the quality of the ice cream. Buy the best you can afford.

ICE CREAM TERRINE

1 16-ounce frozen poundcake, slightly thawed
1 cup cherry ice cream, softened
1 cup peach ice cream, softened
1 cup blueberry ice cream, softened

Line a 10x5x3-inch loaf pan with wax paper. Remove poundcake from its pan and slice into four sections lengthwise. Place the bottom section in the bottom of loaf pan and spread on 1 cup cherry ice cream. Top with another section of poundcake and place in freezer 5 minutes.

Spread on peach ice cream and top with the third section of poundcake. Place in freezer 5 minutes.

Spread on blueberry ice cream and top with final section of poundcake. Cover with aluminum foil and store in freezer.

When ready to serve, run a sharp knife under hot water and slice. Serve with fresh fruit garnish and raspberry sauce made by pureeing fresh or frozen sweetened raspberries.

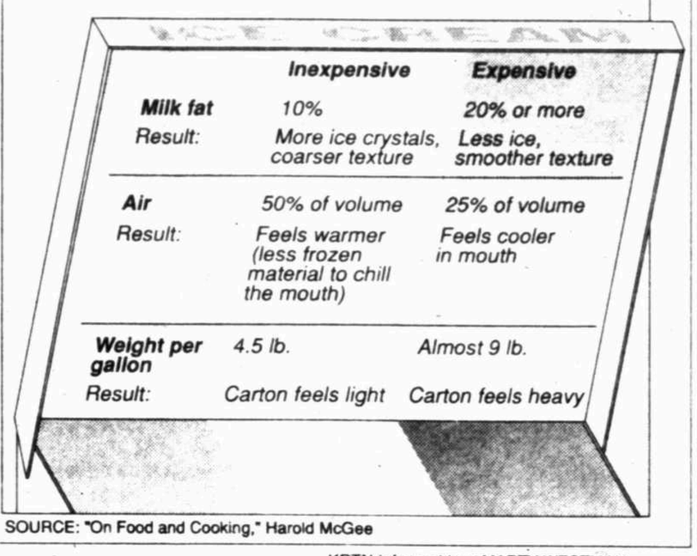

Per serving: 250 calories, 15 grams fat, 92 milligrams cholesterol, 95 milligrams sodium.

The idea for this dessert comes from Paul Bocuse's restaurant outside Lyon, France, where fruity Beaujolais wine often is used in desserts. This show-stopper is best served with a variety of berries — blueberries, blackberries, raspberries and strawberries. Until summertime fruit arrives in markets, strawberries in Beaujolais makes a great solo act.

BERRIES IN BEAUJOLAIS

1 cup sugar
1 cup water
1 cup Beaujolais wine
2 cups cleaned mixed berries (raspberries, strawberries, blueberries, blackberries)
Fresh mint sprigs for garnish

Combine sugar and water in saucepan. Stir and bring to a boil. Boil gently for a minute, then turn off heat. Stir in wine. Let cool.

To serve, spoon ½-cup berries into each wine goblet. Pour in wine syrup and garnish with a mint sprig.

Per serving: 83 calories, less than 1 gram fat, no cholesterol, 42 milligrams sodium.

Classic ice cream desserts often have called for rum. The following is a twist on an old favorite. The secret is to use fresh pineapple and allow it time to soak up the flavors of the rum and brown sugar.

TROPICAL COUPE

1 cup chopped fresh pineapple
½ cup dark rum
3 tablespoons light brown sugar
4 scoops coffee ice cream
4 tablespoons minced toasted macadamia nuts

Combine pineapple with rum and brown sugar in small bowl. Let sit, preferably overnight but at least 2 hours.

To serve, spoon ice cream into bowls and top with pineapple and rum. Scatter macadamia nuts on top.

Per serving: 315 calories, 13 grams fat, 29 milligrams cholesterol, 61 milligrams sodium.

Marcella Hazan, an Italian cooking teacher and author, lives in Venice but travels to Atlanta to visit her son Guiliano, who is a chef there. On one visit, she prepared this dessert, Groppino. Guiliano said the name has no special significance in Italian, but the dessert is "quite the rage" in Italy. Undoubtedly this is because Italian cooks also are busy. This takes only minutes to prepare, and even less time to eat.

GROPPINO

2 cups lemon ice cream or sorbet
1 cup fresh or frozen raspberries, pureed
¼ to ½ cup dry sparkling wine

Spoon ice cream into mixing bowl and quickly but thoroughly whisk in raspberry puree. Pour in sparkling wine, a little at a time, and whisk until incorporated and frothy.

Note: Don't start with ice cream or sorbet that is too soft. It will soften as you incorporate fruit puree and wine.

Per serving: 171 calories, 7 grams fat, 29 milligrams cholesterol, 58 milligrams sodium.

Most of us know someone (including ourselves) who doesn't think a meal is complete without a bite of chocolate. This dessert is in their honor. If you're really short of time, use a store-bought pie shell (you'll have to prebake the crust longer). Because of the runny caramel, this pie must be chilled before slicing.

CHOCOLATE TURTLE PIE

2 cups all-purpose flour
1 cup light brown sugar
½ cup (1 stick) unsalted butter, softened
1½ cups pecan halves
1 cup prepared caramel sauce
2 cups semisweet chocolate chips

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Spray a 9- to 10-inch pie pan with vegetable oil. In bowl of food processor fitted with steel blade, combine flour, sugar and butter. Pulse until mixture comes together in a ball. Press into pie pan. Prick a few times with a fork and place in oven for 5 minutes.

Sprinkle pecans onto partially cooked pie shell and pour caramel sauce over. Return to oven and bake another 15 to 18 minutes or until crust is browned and filling is bubbly.

Remove from oven and sprinkle with chocolate chips. When chips are melted, spread to form a topping. Chill, slice and serve.

Per serving: 779 calories, 40 grams fat, 31 milligrams cholesterol, 101 milligrams sodium.

Fat-free cheeses are short on taste

N.Y. Times News Service

For people on strict fat-free diets, the development of fat-free products means that mayonnaise, some cheeses and cakes are no longer off-limits. Such products also offer a saving in calories but compromise in flavor and texture.

Fat-free mozzarella and ricotta cheeses have just been introduced in supermarkets by Polly-O. The products also have no cholesterol. They are made with skim milk and rely mostly on vegetable gums to replace the fat.

An ounce of the mozzarella has 40 calories, compared with 80 in an ounce of Polly-O's part-skim mozzarella. The ricotta has 25 calories an ounce, compared with 45 in the company's part-skim ricotta.

Don't even think about using the mozzarella in a salad; the texture is dry and rubbery. Its acceptability as pizza topping declines rapidly as the pizza cools and the cheese begins to firm up and loses its molten quality.

The fat-free ricotta is watery and rather chalky-tasting but with abundant seasoning is adequate as a sweet or savory filling.

Models make you want to flee

By Erma Bombeck

I don't get out a lot, especially to women's events. So I was really looking forward to a style show held recently in Chicago. I had a great seat, and get this ... I even thought if there was something I couldn't live without, I'd see what they had in the way of financing.

Bombeck

Well, the music started, the curtain opened, and down the runway came a rush of heels, bones, white legs and hollow faces. At first I thought they were X-rays.

After the original shock of seeing garments that clung to these cadavers like peeling paint, it occurred to me that models haven't changed in the last 30 years. You'd think that if someone is trying to sell you something, there would be a warm rapport, an eye contact — a bonding between them and your checkbook. Forget it.

Models have a way of looking at you as though cellulite were contagious and they are at high risk just breathing.

They pout. They look hostile. They challenge you. They look over the top of your head with indifference. But mostly they are bored. In their hearts they know there isn't one thigh in that entire room that will fit into one of the skirts they are wearing.

One model came out with an exaggerated swing to her hips. If that was her normal walk, then someone should stage a telethon on her behalf.

Another came down the runway with small baby steps. She had the look of a tortured woman who had just sneezed after surgery.

A small brunette suffered from a tic of sorts. Her head was completely pivotal and she could twirl it all the way around on her shoulders. It rotated constantly, her vacant eyes seeing nothing.

The male models acted the same way. As they took a beach stance in their brief bikini suits, looking cool and detached, I felt like Peg Bundy on "Married ... With Children."

Maybe I'm used to warm, fuzzy television pitchpersons such as June Allyson, who tells me to stay dry and get in the swing of things, and Angela Lansbury, who answers all my questions on aspirin. They want to be my friends, not adversaries.

Even when Tommy Lasorda implores me to lose weight, I want to say, "I'm overweight, Tommy, not hard of hearing," but deep down inside he is warm and personable.

When the show was over, there didn't seem to be a rush to go out and buy skirts priced just under a thousand dollars that didn't cover as much as the table napkins. As one woman observed, "New clothes should make you happy. These models are wearing new clothes and they are not happy people."

She's right.

Etiquette book written just for children

NEW YORK (AP) — What's the best way to teach children manners?

Ask Beth Brainard and Sheila Behr, two Florida mothers who have revised their manners book for children, and they'll say make it real and fun for kids and involve them in the process.

Their "Soup Should be Seen, Not Heard! The Kids' Etiquette Book" (Dell, $9.95), designed for 4- to 12-year olds, does just that.

"The key is to relate it to their lives," said Brainard in a telephone interview from her home in Longwood, Fla.

She says kids understand when you tell them, as she does in her book, "Never say or do anything gross at the table."

As president of her own image consulting firm, Brainard says she's amazed at how many questions kids ask in the classes that she gives at schools and at local department stores. Says Brainard: "Kids don't want to be embarrassed. They like to know what to do."

It's when they don't know what to do or are uncomfortable that they "act off the wall," she says.

The 151-page etiquette book is an outgrowth of Brainard and Behr's experience raising children. Brainard is the mother of Nate, 14, and Zach, 10. Behr, who is a cookbook illustrator and has her own line of dolls, caricature pillows and posters, has three grown children and eight grandchildren.

"We tried to make this a user-friendly book. We wanted it to look like a little workbook," says Brainard, who "read every etiquette book on the market."

The 6x9-inch spiral-bound book has hand-printed lettering with easily understood and down-to-earth instructions.

"Soup" opens by introducing young readers to four "Good Idea Kids" and their dog Vitamin. These cartoonlike characters start by explaining why manners are important. Through illustrations and conversations, the four kids teach their readers about making introductions and the proper telephone, party and dining etiquette.

For this revised edition, the authors expanded the book to include chapters on writing letters and notes; dressing, grooming and personal habits; behavior in public places; and handling difficult situations, like bad news, hurt feelings and deaths.

Asked what most concerns youngsters, Brainard says dining and party etiquette top the list, especially pesky questions like "how to deal with your worst enemy at a party."

"Families don't eat together like they used to," says Brainard, adding that youngsters aren't getting basic table etiquette at home. Her book walks kids through what silverware to use and the courses in a meal, and also gives them fast-food restaurant etiquette. Advice includes humorous notes like "when cutting and eating your food, always keep your elbows relaxed at your sides. Do not stick them out like chicken wings."

Brainard says manners are not a concept that kids grasp easily on their own. She adds: "Parents need to share time with their kids and teach them the important things. It's the only way they'll learn."

Florida recipes cause 'Sunshine State' of mind

By Natalie Haughton
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — A reader called recently to tell us that she enjoys recipes from other parts of the country and would like to see more included in the food section from time to time.

For those who would like to sample what Florida restaurants have to offer, "A Taste of Florida," by Dorothy Chapman (Sentinel Books; $18.95) should fill the bill. Chapman is the former food editor of the Orlando Sentinel. Although she retired five years ago, she continues to write her weekly Thought You'd Never Ask column, which answers readers' requests for restaurant recipes.

The book is a collection of the best and most popular recipes culled from her columns of the last six to eight years. All of the recipes that chefs and restaurants have shared have been kitchen-tested, and most have been honed down to consumer-size proportions.

The recipes concentrate on Central Florida eateries in Orlando, Winter Park, Altamonte Springs, Maitland, Daytona Beach and Melbourne. Several recipes from Walt Disney World and Epcot Center are also included. The 210-page book includes many appealing recipes like Garden Terrace's Cream of Zucchini Soup (one of Chapman's favorites), Bay Hill Club's BLT Soup, Pebbles' Chinese Pasta Salad, Hemingways' Maryland Crab Cakes, The Gables' Hummingbird Cake and Aunt Catfish's Key Lime Pie.

Those who like to experiment with restaurant recipes will no doubt enjoy this volume. To order a copy, call Sentinel Books at (800) 347-6868 or send a check or money order for $23.09 (includes postage and handling) to Sentinel Books, "A Taste of Florida," P.O. Box 1100, Orlando, Fla. 32802.

Meanwhile, a trio of recipes to give you a taste of Florida follows.

3 tablespoons dairy sour cream
1 cup whipping cream
Salt and pepper to taste

LEE'S LAKESIDE'S PINA COLADA MUFFINS
(Orlando, Fla.)

These Pina Colada Muffins have long been a signature item at Lee's Lakeside. At night the restaurant features a gorgeous view of the lighted fountain on Lake Eola.

1 box (1 pound 2 ounces) yellow cake mix
1 teaspoon coconut extract
1 teaspoon rum extract
1 cup flaked OR shredded coconut
½ cup chopped walnuts
1 cup drained crushed pineapple

Using electric mixer, prepare cake mix according to package directions.

Stir in remaining ingredients; mix 1 minute longer. Be careful not to overmix batter.

Grease muffin tins or line with paper cups; fill each cup ¾ full.

Bake in preheated 350-degree oven 15 to 20 minutes or until a wooden pick inserted in center comes out dry. Makes about 30 muffins.

From "A Taste of Florida," by Dorothy Chapman, Sentinel Books.

OVIEDO INN'S FRESH STRAWBERRY PIE
(Oviedo, Fla.)

1 cup sugar
1 cup water
¼ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons cornstarch
1 box (3 ounces) strawberry-flavored gelatin
1 teaspoon strawberry extract
2 pints fresh strawberries, washed and hulled
1 (9-inch) baked pie shell, cooled
Whipped cream

In medium saucepan stir together sugar, water, salt and cornstarch. Bring mixture to a boil over medium heat, stirring constantly.

Continue to cook and stir about 1 minute or until thick and glossy. Remove from heat and stir in gelatin and strawberry extract. Let cool to room temperature.

Place ½ of whole strawberries over bottom of baked pie shell. Spread ½ of filling mixture over strawberries.

Add remaining strawberries to pie and cover with remaining filling. Pie will be about 3 inches high with a lot of strawberries in a good, thick filling.

Refrigerate 2 to 3 hours before serving. Serve with whipped cream. Makes 8 to 10 servings.

If you're a dairy-product fan, and more specifically, a fan of Knudsen products, you might enjoy "The Very Best Recipes," by Knudsen, Division of Kraft General Foods Inc., Los Angeles. The 90-page, colorfully illustrated spiral-bound cookbook includes 100 recipes from the Knudsen kitchen.

Recipes (many sound and look tempting) are geared for busy cooks and saving time in the kitchen and range from breakfast ideas to desserts. An interesting note: Recipes in the book using sour cream and cottage cheese were developed and tested using Knudsen light sour cream and Knudsen Nonfat Cottage Cheese. The light and non-fat products can be used interchangeably with the regular products without adjustments to the recipes in this volume.

To order a copy of the cookbook, send a check or money order for $5.45 (includes $1.50 for postage and handling) to: Knudsen "The Very Best Recipes" Cookbook Offer, P.O. Box 100, St. Cloud, Minn. 56302; or call (800) 356-5060. Meanwhile, try a sampling of the book's recipes below.

WESTERN RANCH DIP OR DRESSING

A dip or dressing that's so thick and creamy, you'd never suspect it's based on cottage cheese and buttermilk.

4 green onions, coarsely chopped
¼ cup parsley leaves
1 garlic clove
1 cup cottage cheese
¼ cup buttermilk
1½ tablespoons lemon juice
½ teaspoon EACH salt and pepper
½ teaspoon sugar

In food processor or blender, finely chop onions, parsley and garlic, pulsing on and off. Add remaining ingredients and process until smooth.

Use as a dip for chips or vegetables, or as a salad dressing. Dip can be covered and refrigerated up to 1 week. Makes 1½ cups (8 servings).

From "The Very Best Recipes," by Knudsen.

TORTILLA CHIP CASSEROLE

There's something especially inviting and homey about casseroles. Here's one with south-of-the-border intrigue to assemble ahead, bake and serve piping hot.

1 pound lean ground beef OR turkey
¾ cup chopped onion
1 jar (14 ounces) prepared meatless spaghetti sauce
½ to 1 tablespoon minced jalapeno pepper
1 teaspoon dried cilantro
4 cups tortilla chips
1 cup cottage cheese
1 cup (4 ounces) grated Monterey Jack cheese
¾ cup dairy sour cream
½ cup (2 ounces) grated Cheddar cheese

In large skillet over medium heat cook beef and onion, stirring occasionally, until beef is browned and onion is translucent, about 8 minutes.

Stir in spaghetti sauce, jalapeno pepper and cilantro; cook, uncovered, 15 minutes.

In greased 2½- to 3-quart casserole, layer ½ EACH of tortilla chips, cottage and Jack cheeses, and sauce mixture; repeat layers.

Bake in preheated 325-degree oven about 20 minutes until heated through. Spread sour cream over top; sprinkle Cheddar cheese in a ring around edge of casserole. Broil just until cheese melts.

From "The Very Best Recipes," by Knudsen.

LEMON YOGURT BUNDT CAKE

There's no need to confine this pretty cake to the tea table -try it with hot coffee or icy milk, too.

1 cup (2 sticks) butter, softened
1½ cups sugar
½ cup cottage cheese
3 eggs
3 cups flour
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons lemon juice
1 tablespoon grated lemon peel
1 container (6 ounces) non-fat lemon yogurt
Lemon Icing

In large bowl of electric mixer, cream butter and sugar; beat in cottage cheese. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each addition.

In another bowl 1combine flour, baking soda and salt. Stir lemon juice and lemon peel into yogurt. Add dry ingredients to creamed mixture alternately with yogurt mixture, beating just until smooth. Spoon batter into greased and floured 9-inch tube pan; smooth top.

Bake in preheated 350-degree oven 1 hour and 10 minutes or until pick inserted into center comes out clean. Cool cake in pan 5 minutes; invert onto rack to cool completely. Spoon Lemon Icing over cake, allowing it to drip down sides. Makes 12 servings.

LEMON ICING: Mix 1 cup powered sugar with 4½ teaspoons lemon juice. Cover until ready to use.

Grill preparation is basic cook-out skill

By Nancy Byal
Associated Press

Whether you've fired up your grill already this season or not, don't forget to brush up on your barbecue skills. Clip out this grilling primer for a handy reference.

■ Test the heat.

Your coals need to provide varying levels of heat, depending on the food you're grilling. To test the temperature of preheated coals or the heat of the flame from your gas grill, hold your hand, palm side down, above the heat source at the height your food will be cooked. Then count the seconds, "one thousand one, one thousand two..." If you need to remove your hand after: 2 seconds, the fire is hot; 3 seconds, the fire is medium-hot; 4 seconds, the fire is medium; 5 seconds, the fire is medium-slow; 6 seconds, the fire is slow.

■ Adjust the temperature.

When your coals aren't quite the right temperature, you can adjust the heat by the following methods.

If the coals are too hot, you can:
— raise the grill rack;
— spread the coals apart;
— close the air vents halfway to restrict the air flow;
— use tongs to remove some of the hot briquettes.

If the coals are not warm enough, you can:
— use tongs to tap the ashes off the burning coals;
— move the briquettes closer together;
— add more briquettes;
— lower the grill rack;
— open the vents to allow more air to circulate.

■ Control flare-ups.

Fat and meat juices dripping onto hot coals can cause sudden bursts of flame — called flare-ups — which char your food. To control flare-ups on charcoal grills, you can:
— raise the grill rack;
— cover the grill;
— space the hot coals farther apart;
— remove a few hot coals;
— take the food off the grill and mist the fire with water.

For flare-ups on gas grills, you can:
— lower the burner's heat setting;
— take the food off the grill.

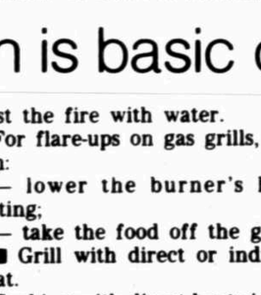

■ Grill with direct or indirect heat.

Cooking with direct heat simply means spreading the preheated coals out and cooking the food directly over the coals. Usually direct cooking works best for small or thin foods such as steaks, chops, fish fillets and boneless chicken or turkey.

Indirect grilling means cooking the food over a drip pan surrounded by coals, rather than directly over the heat. The grill is covered during cooking to create an oven-like effect. Larger foods that need to cook slowly should have indirect heat so they won't burn on the outside before cooking on the inside.

For indirect cooking with charcoal, mound and light the coals as you normally would. Then, when the coals are ready, arrange them around the drip pan. Hot coals provide medium-hot heat over the pan. Medium-hot coals provide medium heat, medium coals provide medium-slow heat, and so on.

For indirect cooking with a gas grill, light the burner on just one side and place the food over the drip pan on the other side. Or, place the drip pan on the grate over the center of the burner and place the food above the pan. The same temperature test applies as for direct cooking with charcoal.

Journal's focus is on why people go mountaineering

Associated Press

There's more to mountaineering than boots, binoculars and rappelling gear, the editor of Summit: The Mountain Journal believes.

"Many of our readers experience the mountain environment through alpine sports such as climbing, skiing and kayaking, but just as many enjoy the spirit of the mountains as hikers, readers and dreamers," says John Harlin III, who edits the year-old glossy quarterly at Fleetwood, Pa.

The magazine features photo portfolios, creative writing, travel and environmental articles. Harlin, also author of "Climber's Guide to North America," says he veers away from technique and equipment stories, instead concentrating on why people go to the mountains.

"If you focus on the activity itself, it's a sport; my interest is not so much what you are doing as what you are thinking, seeing, feeling. This is what makes writing worth reading."

Pickens

The price Mesa Limited Partnership gets for natural gas may fall lower this year than last, says T. Boone Pickens.

Pickens says Mesa expects its average natural gas price for the year to be between $1.50 and $1.60 per thousand cubic feet.

Last year, the partnership received an average of $1.61 per thousand cubic feet and that resulted in a $208.9 million loss for the year.

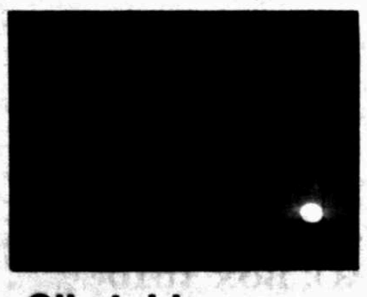

"1991 is not going to be the year of the great turnaround in natural gas prices unless it turns cold by July 4th," Pickens said.

Mesa, the nation's third-largest independent energy producer, needs natural gas prices to rise to $2.30 per thousand cubic feet to break even, Pickens said. He does not envision a restoration of dividends to unitholders until gas prices are sustained at $2.50 per thousand cubic feet, he said.

During the first quarter of 1991, normally the time when demand and prices for gas are high, Mesa received an average of $1.72 per thousand cubic feet.

Mesa lost $19.6 million during the quarter.

"Our chief goal is to weather this prolonged period of bargain basement gas prices," Mesa spokesman Jay Rosser said.

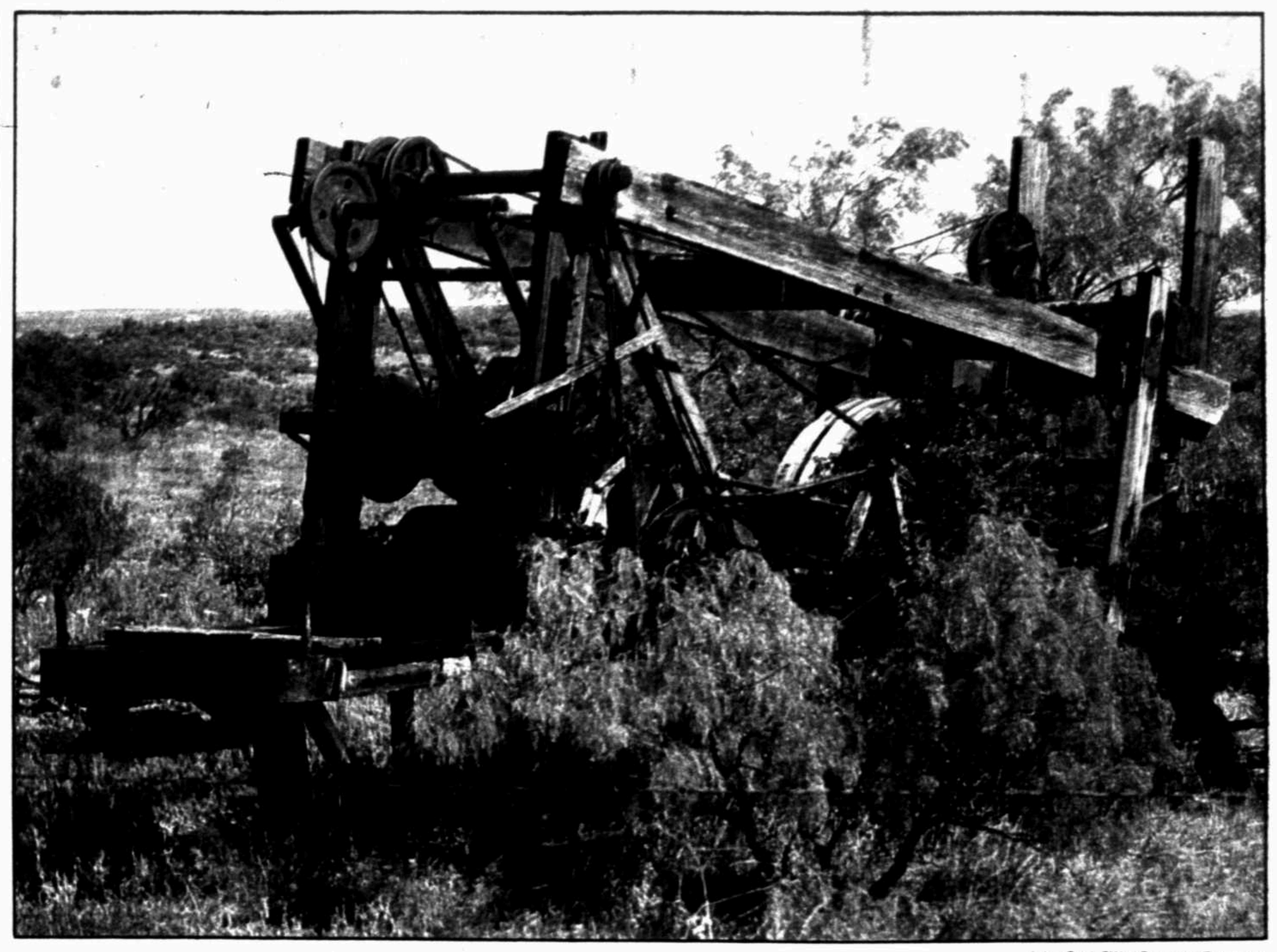

Oil stable

Oil prices this week improved slightly averaging 13 cents higher, on the New York Mercantile Exchange, than the previous week. Posted prices remained stable at $20.00, as traders await the upcoming OPEC meeting Tuesday in Vienna.

Drilling still flat

■ As the cost of drilling and equipping wells shrink, so does the outlook for a prosperous drilling industry.

By John Paul Pitts
Business / Oil Editor

The outlook for oilfield drilling remains flat despite gains in technology and a slight improvement in the rig count, says the Independent Petroleum Association of America.

When the IPAA Petroleum Cost and Finance Committee presented its annual report at the trade associations annual meeting in San Diego in May, it reported a number of significant trends in cost-index surveys, rig outlook, and contractor payments.

Ike Kerridge of Baker Hughes predicted that the U.S. rotary rig count would average 1,074 for 1991, up 6.3 percent from 1990.

However, Kerridge also noted that this increase follows an expected 15 percent decrease in the total number of wells

Symposium expected to draw 1000

Staff Report

Approximately 1,000 delegates and their spouses and exhibitors are expected at the 32nd Annyal Symposium of the Society of Professional Well Log Analysts, hosted by the Permian Basin Well Logging Society. At least 10 different countries will be represented.

The symposium will be June 16-19 at both the Midland Center and the Midland Hilton, with some functions at Green Tree Country Club and the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

The symposium will get underway June 15 with a field trip to the Guadalupe Mountains near Carlsbad, N.M., a trip co-sponsored by the Permian Basin section, Society of Economic Paleontologists and Mineralogists. The field trip will study the sequence stratigraphy, facies and reservoir geometry of the San Andres/Grayburg formations of the mountain range. Cost is $195 for symposium registrants, $250 for non-registrants.

The symposium will open at 8:30 a.m. the 17th at the Hilton with keynote speaker John A. Masters, chief executive officer of Canadian Hunter Exploration Ltd. talking on "Do Good Science or Give Up."

At least 50 technical presentations are scheduled, and there will be an exhibit hall with over 70 exhibitors. Other activities include workshops on "Invasion Process" and "Seismic/Log Interpretation" both scheduled for 1 to 5 p.m. June 16 at the Hilton and a short course on "Reservoirs and Seals" set for June 20-21 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa.

Several social activities have been scheduled, including the West Texas 5k "Log Jog" scheduled for 8 a.m. June 16 at Green Tree Country Club and the "Great

AAPG head tells Century 21 plans

By Mella McEwen
Staff Writer

The geologists at work in the early part of this century likely would not recognize their profession today.

The profession has been buffeted by industry booms and busts and challenged by ever-advancing technology.

In recognition of this, the American Association of Petroleum Geologists Geologists in 1988 established the Twenty-first Century Committee. As current AAPG President James Gibbs explained, the committee "was to study the past, present and future of the AAPG in all categories, including scientific programs, financial areas and government relations. The committee was to carefully consider the future by having in-depth philosophical discussions of AAPG's future developments and through those discussions formulate specific short-term, intermediate-term and long-term goals. The committee will also suggest specific ways of implementing those goals."

In Midland this week to address the West Texas Geological Society, Gibbs told the members that the committee, in its recently-released final report, had focused on seven major areas and trends that will affect geologists in the future.

■ The first trend discussed was world population and energy demand. The committee expects that world population will at least double over the next century, resulting in a doubling of world energy consumption.

"This means an increase in world energy consumption from the equivalent of 150,000 barrels a day currently to over 300,000 by the year 2100," Gibbs said. "Much of this increase over the next two to four decades will be provided by oil and gas. It is estimated that world energy needs will require a greater than 50 percent increase in the fossil fuel production rate over the next 40 years, even if we consider conservation and improvements in efficiency and fuel utilization."

■ The second trend was exploration and production. According to the committee's report, the majority of reserves of conventional oil and gas are located outside the U.S. The committee expects that there will be a continued increase in international exploration activities by major multi-

Oil industry sings praises of Craddick

The Texas legislature has written the final chapter on this session's energy legislation and the industry appears to have been spared some major headaches — thanks to Rep. Tom Craddick of Midland.

Pitts

"There were a lot of bills on the table that could have been very harmful to the industry," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "I feel like we came out of this session very well. It could have been very bad if it had not been for the efforts of Tom Craddick."

Among the issues resolved this session in which Craddick played a hand were bills or compromise efforts that:

■ halted the practice of writing division orders contrary to lease contracts,

■ made it easier for operators to haul oilfield equipment,

■ killed the notion of a "super environmental" agency for the state of Texas,

■ killed a move that would have prohibited the use of freshwater in waterflood projects,

■ refused to grant Texas Parks and Wildlife full authority over hazardous or toxic materials on oilfield leases,

■ stopped a proposal to make it mandatory for lease operators to call a central number before digging anywhere on a lease, and

■ altered a plan to put most of the burden of liability for well plugging upon the backs of independents.

Perhaps the most controversial was the Plugging Fund bill, which squarely pitted independent operators against major oil companies. "I think independents won on this one," said Spannaus.

While everyone agreed that a fund was needed to properly plug the 46,000 wells not in compliance, there was a wide difference of opinion as to how the fund should be created.

Major oil companies proposed blanket bonds or statements of fiscal responsibility for everyone drilling a well. "Everyone drilling a well should be able to demonstrate the financial ability to plug that well," said Jack Erskine, Amoco's senior governmental affair representative in Austin. "Currently more financial responsibility is required of an individual driving a car to the lease than the individual drilling a well."

Independents insisted that all the responsibility would fall on them, since majors could merely provide a statement of financial responsibility. They also contended that since they drill most of the wells, the biggest share of funding the plugging fund would fall on them.

Majors wanted a $300 permit for everyone for all wells. Independents wanted a sliding scale that did not penalize the small operator. The bill as passed would require a $100 permit for wells to 2,000 feet; $125 to 4,000 feet; $150 to 9,000 feet and $200 for 9,000 plus feet.

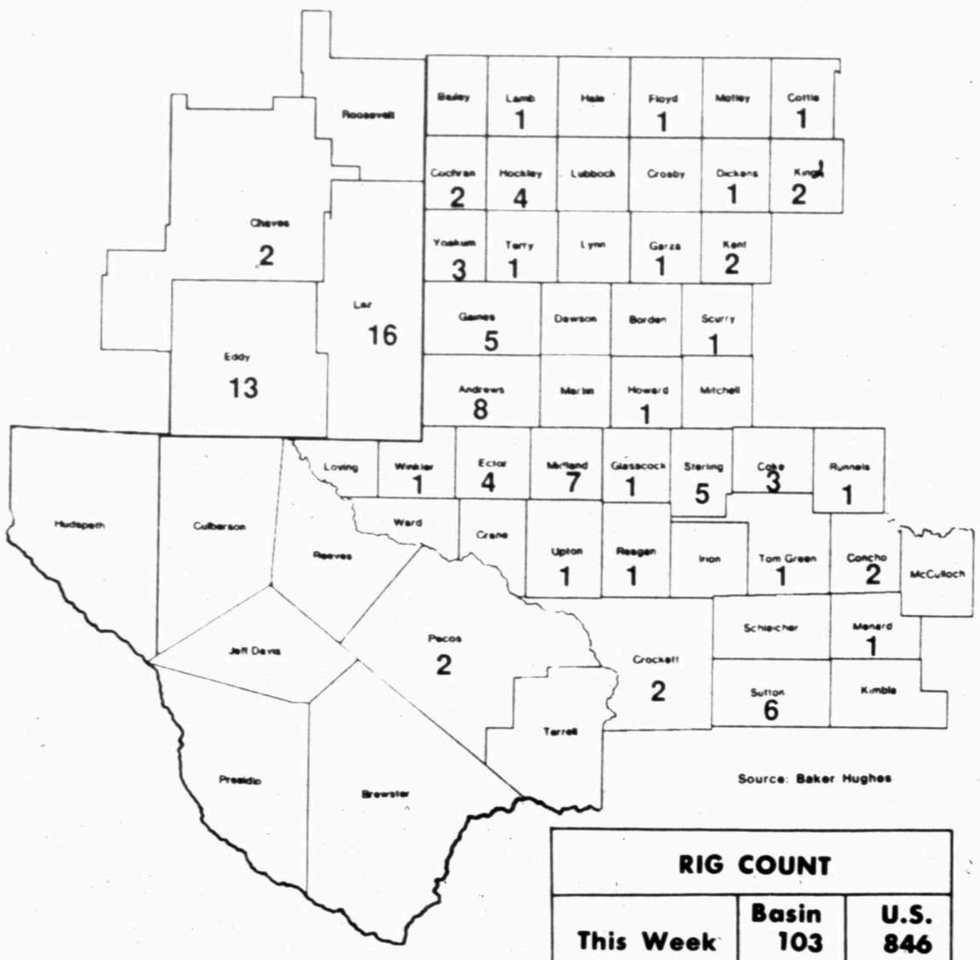

A three percent bond would be required, but only for "black hatters" with previous plugging violations.

Also in the plan is a production tax of 1/30 of one cent on natural gas and 5/16 of one cent on oil which would go straight to the state spill and plugging fund.

Grace, Exxon celebrate safety record

Staff Report

Grace Drilling and Exxon recently celebrated a two-year safety record on Grace Rig No. 405 in Midland.

Exxon's drilling team and Grace's rig crews drilled 442,156 feet in 697 rig days and scored two record wells, all without a lost-time accident.

"We are very proud of our rig crews, Grace and Exxon place a lot of emphasis on safety. Nothing is more important than sending the crews home safe and sound," said Gene Grimes, president and general manager of Grace Drilling's Southwest division.

PITTS: Craddick praised for legislation

(From 1F)

Two bills brought division to the Basin, between oil operators and truckers and operators and the agriculture community.

Operators hailed the death of Rep. Gary Watkins' bill, which would have brought all oilfield hauling under the TRC permit system. The bill, which was supported by truckers, was strongly opposed by oil operators. A compromise bill offered by Craddick now makes it legal for a pumper to haul a pump to the warehouse without calling an oilfield trucking company.

The oil industry also applauded the demise of a bill introduced by Senator Bill Sims which would have prohibited the use of fresh water in waterfloods. Sims, however, won oil support with the plugging bill he introduced. It was identical in content to a bill introduced by Tom Craddick, but Craddick stepped aside to fall behind Sims Senate bill.

Royalty owners are also singing the praises of Tom Craddick. "For several years royalty owners have watched apalled as crude oil buyers issued division orders which gnawed away at their royalty interest by the imposition of transportation fees, shrinkage fees, pipeline fees and other fees," said Grier Brunson, chairman-elect of the National Association of Royalty Owners. "But a bill sponsored by Tom Craddick has put an end to that."

Brunson said crude purchasers had treated royalty owners like working interest owners, sometimes taking as much as 50 percent of royalty payments for fees, but the Craddick bill requires crude purchasers to abide by the terms of the lease.

"We couldn't have had this bill without Craddick," said Brunson. "He brought all the parties together, arrived at a concensus and the bill passed without opposition."

DRILL: Drilling still flat for contractors drilled, and an 11 percent decline in the total footage drilled. At the same time drilling expenditures are expected to fall six percent to $10.8 billion.

Kerridge said the drilling activity is forecast on the assumption of $17.07 per barrel for oil and $1.65 per Mcf for natural gas.

Ken Peters of Ziadril Inc. told IPAA members that while contractor payments have improved slightly, allowing for the first wage increase for drilling crews since 1982, that contractors should be cautious. Peters said drilling crews were still in short supply during the final quarter of 1990 and that drillpipe was the only equipment item in short supply.

Dick Ghiselin of Schlumberger Well Services reported that great technological strides had been made in the industry in recent months, especially in the area of horizontal drilling. He noted, however, that the rates of return from earlier horizontal completions have not lived up to some expectations.

He said other technological methods which have helped the drilling industry tremendously include:

■ Three-dimensional seismic which makes it possible to illuminate the target area for optimal drilling,

■ Real-time drilling monitors which anticipate drilling problems and allow for maximum drilling efficiency and risk reduction,

■ Real-time logging while drilling tools that provide information that keeps the bit on target,

■ New and more effective completion and stimulation technology that increases near-wellbore permeability and minimizes production of unwanted water.

Meantime, the Committee issued its annual cost index of drilling and equpping a well in the U.S. and reported that the cost index for 1990 declined by 7 percent on cost-per-foot basis and 5 percent on a cost-per-well basis.

It was the second consecutive year the drilling cost index has declined. Payments to drilling contractors decreased by 15 percent on an annual basis, while the cost of 21 items purchased directly by operators increased by 5 percent.

TREND: Geologists reveal 21st century

national oil companies, and increasing participation by small companies and independents as well as national oil companies.

"In the U.S., we can expect a continuing shift from domestic frontiers to mature basins and from exploration to development. More than 340 billion barrels or 65 percent of the crude oil discovered will remain trapped in existing reservoirs if recovery methods are not improved," Gibbs told the group.

He added that the U.S. is expected to lose more than one-third of its conventional production capacity by the year 2010, and beyond the year 2025, "we anticipate increasing emphasis on alternate fossil fuels such as heavy oil, tar sands, clean coal, geopressure and geothermal resources."

■ The environment was the third trend studied by the committee. Gibbs told the gathering that there will be continued awareness of and concern about the environment, and the energy industry should expect more stringent legislation impacting both energy and non-energy businesses. He noted that atmosphereic pollution, acid rain and concerns over global warming are rapidly becoming major political and economic issues worldwide and there will be mounting pressure to reduce dependence on fossil fuels.

Environmental concern should benefit the geological profession by creating more employment opportunities, he said, particularly in the fields of hydrogeology and geological engineering.

"I saw the results of a survey conducted by Western Michigan State University last year," he said. "They sought to determine how many recent geological science graduates would be hired by major oil companies in a one-year period. The number was 200. They then sought to determine now many positions there were to needed by the environmental services in the same year. That number was 9,000. If you consider that there were only 4,500 geologists graduated from all U.S. colleges and universities last year, you get some idea of the scope of where the employment opportunities are going to be over the next several years."

Gibbs stressed that "The green movement is more than cosmetic. It is a concept the world will have to embrace. Coexistence with nature is incumbent upon us."

■ The fourth trend mentioned by the committee, geoscience demographics, ties into the third trend. The committee expects that there will be fewer geologists working for major oil companies and more working as consultants or independents, with continued growth in special uses within petroleum geology due to expanded technology. Gibbs stated that "the masters degree has become an entry-level degree in geosciences."

The number of students majoring in geology at U.S. universities will stabilize or increase modestly, with decreases in the number of petroleum geology students offset by increases in students studying environmental geosciences. Gibbs went on to predict that "more foreign-born students will study in the U.S. and Europe, and return to work in their own countries."

■ The fifth trend was education. "For the geoscience professional, we can expect an increasing emphasis on quantification, computer literacy, integration of diverse technologies, and multi-disciplinary studies. Staying abreast of new technologies will be one of the most significant challenges facing explorationists in the years ahead," he said.

■ It's in the sixth trend, technology, that the committee found the greatest number of challenges. According to the report, there will be continued emphasis on quantification and the integration of diverse data sets, and it is expected that an ever-increasing variety of data will be stored digitally, independent of a specific medium, enabling the data to be transmitted and displayed in a wide variety of formats.

"We can expect significant technological advances in seismic analysis, reservoir characterization, log analysis, instrumentation, surface exploration methods and hydrocarbon recovery methods," Gibbs told his audience. "Significant improvements can be expected in drilling and production technology. And there will be continued advances in computer technology, leading not only to smaller, faster, more powerful machines and workstation, but possibly to a new generation of computer technology."

He went on to note that "major technological breakthroughs concerning new energy resources or utilization tend to be unpredictable, but their economic and political impact can be profound."

■ The final trend noted by the committee was in government, primarily where it concerns the environment.

"We can expect growing environmental awareness and concern among legislators and the public. National policies and legislation affecting environmental quality will increasingly impct the energy industries. Increased taxes and penalties can be expected for a growinb variety of industries and businesses."

Gibbs also threw in a word of warning: "Geopolitical considerations and government decisions and policies will become increasingly important. The largest reserves of petroleum and strategic minerals occur in countries which may become increasinginly unstable politically and economically."

Another challenge facing geologists is the current atmosphere of acquisitions. Acquisitions, Gibbs said, are fueled by economics — right now it's less expensive to acquire reserves than it is to explore for them. He said geologists have a role to play in acquisitions by helping the acquirer better understand his new properties.

Gibbs, a native of Wichita Falls and holder of degrees in geology from the University of Oklahoma, offered several responses to these growing challenges suggested to the AAPG.

First, acknowledge the growing importance of international operations by establishing international sections and regional overseas offices and by offering short courses and field trips pertinent to the international arena, and bring back the World Development Volume.

Second, form a division of environmental geology and hydrogeology and publish special publications and periodicals dealing with environmental and groundwater geology and establish special sessions on these topics at annual AAPG meetings. Gibbs told the group that he expects a new environmental division will be formed at the AAPG annual meeting in Calgary next year.

On an individual basis, Gibbs urged members to "get back on the learning track. We need to greatly increase our knowledge of new methods and the new knowledge that's coming along in petroleum geology." He called for members to become more computer literate. "For those of us who grew up in my generation and didn't take the time or effort to learn how to manipulate data via computer, I think the time we're going to be able to get by without doing that is rapidly passing." He noted that there is talk of establishing a national database that will include subsurface data from logs, electrical logs, seismic data and other geological data, and predicted that "we will be able to access that data via modems and have that data at our fingertips within the next 10 years."

He called on geologists to become more entrepreneurial and improve communications and business skills.

"We need to understand how to do a financial analysis of our exploration and development projects. I can tell you there is an awful lot of money available for drilling, exploration and production purposes today, and the point of the talks I have made on selling prospects has been that I think we have, in the past, done a less-than effective job in accessing financial sources. I think we need to become aware of what the financial community is looking for in oil deals, and become much more able and efficient in accessing those capital markets."

He said geologist should play a greater role in accessing capital, serving as a link between financial centers and oil centers. "We need to step out of our technical role and learn the language, requirements and customs of financial markets." He said that geologists can help the increasing number of international investors by helping them understand potential oil deals and helping them best place their money.

One point he emphasized is a synergystic approach to exploration, using a team of workers with different disciplines. "The team approach has been around in the oil business a long time, but now we need to sit down at an early stage with geologists and petroleum geologists, geophysicists and drilling engineers. We can understand reservoirs better and use that analysis to find other reservoirs a mile away or 10 miles away or 50 miles away with similar characteristics."

He cited an experiment done by Bob Snyder of Houston and a major oil company on two drilling projects. Snyder used a synergystic method, and Gibbs said he found twice the oil at half the cost as the team using the traditional methods.

For all the changes and challenges, Gibbs is upbeat about his chosen profession. "I think the opportunities are great. We need to approach the business differently, we have to broaden our range of knowledge, but I think the opportunities for success are as great as they've ever been."

RRC requires bird protection

Staff Report

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has adopted a new rule which requires oil and gas operators to screen, net, or otherwise make harmless certain open-top tanks and pits that are likely to collect oil and pose a hazard to birds.

The new rule, which takes effect Sept. 1, requires screens, nets, covers, or other protective measures on open-top storage tanks more than 16 feet in diameter that contain a continuous or frequent surface film or accumulation of oil. Oilfield skimming and collecting pits must be similarly protected.

The rule states that if the Commission finds a surface film or accumulation of oil in any other regulated pit, the operator must remove the oil. If the operator doesn't, or if the Commission finds oil in the pit again within 12 months, the operator will be required to protect the pit.

Pits that are used in connection with the operation of oil and gas pipelines are included in the rule. But temporary, portable storage tanks used to hold fluids during drilling operations, workovers, or well tests are exempt.

The Commission also approved publishing for a 30-day public comment period a provision that would require protection for open-top tanks down to eight feet in diameter.

The new rule also advises operators that federal statutes, such as the Migratory Bird Treaty Act, provide substantial penalties for the death of certain species of birds due to contact with oil in a tank or pit. State statutes also protect certain species of birds.

3-D seismic growing as exploration tool

By Paul H. Pause'

One of the most exciting and promising new tools in the arsenal of the oil and gas explorationist is the 3-D seismic technique. Unfortunately it is also one of the most expensive.

Pause'

Generally, 3-D processing has been on large VAX or IBM mainframe systems. But the expense involved in purchasing, maintaining, and using a mainframe system is tremendous.

Now, however, a new generation of personal and mini-computers is coming on the market with the processing capabilities needed to manipulate the large amounts of data, involved in 3-D processing.

John Faught and Bill Youngblood, with Geophysical Quality Assurance in Midland, for example, are using an Intel 486-based PC with 2.7 gigabytes of disk space and 16Mb RAM running under Unix to process 3-D data. They use Mercury International Technology (MIT) software, which was adapted from a mainframe package called Prism. They bring in raw data from the field and do the processing locally.

Processing includes correction for near-surface static distortions due to weathering, frequency enhancing "whitening," and stacking of data.

They also re-process data already on company's shelves, and convert digital tapes to disk format for downloading onto a PC-based workstation or mini-computer. Additionally, the company produces hard copy seismic lines using a 36 in. VersiTech plotter.

PC based systems and software may cost orders of magnitude less than a mainframe computer, and those savings can be passed along to the customer.

At Meridian Oil in Midland, geophysicist Joe Caputo uses Landmark Graphics "3-D Plus" software on a Sun 470 stand-alone workstation to interpret the data he receives. The system runs under the Unix operating system and uses 64Mb of RAM — one hundred times more than a typical PC can access!

Recording data in a grid at the surface, instead of a single line, results in a "volume" of data — a cube — in the third dimension. Once the raw data has been processed, it can be manipulated and viewed in ANY direction within that cube.

This means you can generate a new section, called an "arbitrary line," in any direction. "You get all this cross-line data you never had before," said Caputo.

Another feature of 3-D seismic is the ability to generate time-slices. This is a horizontal, rather than vertical, slice through the cube at some chosen time (depth) horizon. A time-slice illustrates dip components of structures and faults more clearly than conventional methods can. By generating multiple time-slices, one can see how a structure broadens at depth or how faults develop up and down dip.

Bob Vest, president of Vest Exploration Services in Midland (682-7317), is working on a 3-D interpretational package for PC-based systems. He is designing the system to run on a 386 chip with math coprocessor, and expects the price for a complete system (hardware and software) to be one-fourth or even 1/10 the cost of a current system. According to Vest, many people are not doing 3-D work because of the cost of the systems currently required. "There's too much data to look at," he said. "It has to run on powerful computer systems."

As PC-based processors, disk storage systems, and graphics capabilities continue to improve, we'll see more and more applications running on 386 and 486-based computers. For example, a typical Landmark 20 in. workstation screen has a resolution of 1200 x 800. Now, current high-resolution PC-based VGA monitors are capable of displaying 1048 x 780, so "We're able to see high-resolution 3-D data on these screens that you couldn't do before," according to Vest.

WELL BORE DAMAGE?
ASPHALTINES?
PARAFFIN?

CALL THE ACIDIZING SPECIALIST FOR:
"THE SOLUTION"

- IS YOUR WELL PRODUCTIVITY DECLINING DUE TO FORMATION DAMAGE?
- ARE PARAFFIN AND ASPHALTINES LIMITING THE EFFECTIVENESS OF YOUR ACID STIMULATIONS?
- WOULD YOU LIKE TO REDUCE THE REMEDIAL EXPENSE AND WELL DOWNTIME CAUSED BY THESE TROUBLESOME DEPOSITS?

IF THE ANSWER IS YES TO QUESTIONS LIKE THESE, THEN YOU NEED
"THE SOLUTION...PENTOL"

PENTOL IS A SPECIALLY FORMULATED BLEND OF HYDROCHLORIC ACID, AROMATIC SOLVENT AND SURFACE ACTIVE AGENTS.

PENTOL WILL DISSOLVE AND DISPERSE PARAFFINIC AND ASPHALTIC DEPOSITS, BREAK UP EMULSION BLOCKS, PREVENT SLUDGING, AND AID IN THE REMOVAL OF PROBLEM MATERIALS FROM THE WELL.

PETROLEUM PERSPECTIVES

U.S. hard-pressed to fuel war machine

By Harry Spannaus

To many of us, the war in the Middle East was easily forecast because it was a war over oil. The war took place in an area that has 75 percent of the world's crude oil reserves and whose representative countries manipulate world oil prices by simply turning up or down the spigot to control the volume of oil spilled into the world's marketplace. It's really the first war ever conducted where the host ally furnished the majority of the fuel to support the mechanical fuel burning war machine.

Spannaus

While some at the Department of Defense claim that the U.S. had sufficient high sea tankers available and an inventory of 82 million barrels in storage worldwide, one must question our ability to conduct an extended war in a far-reaching country such as Iraq, with only our own energy resources to draw upon.

According to DOD, the total consumption for U.S. combat machines during Desert Storm was about 2 billion gallons. That's 47 million barrels for a 100-day war effort.

Had the U.S. had to use their own supplies, that 82 million-barrel reserve in storage would have lasted just 200 days or less. Of the 2 billion gallons consumed, 45 million was used in the actual combat effort. Forty-five million barrels supported 1,800 aircraft, 125 ships and more than 4,000 vehicles.

Other fuel requirements for airlift, sea lift and direct preparation was in excess of 41 million barrels or just short of 1 billion gallons of fuel — one-third of the total volume consumed for the total effot. These consumption figures are for U.S. forces only. At least 10 percent more went to allied supporting forces.

From my point of view as a retired military officer, we were extremely fortunate to stage our combat operations from Saudi Arabia and use their refueling hoses to keep our gas tanks full. We consumed 30 million barrels of fuel per day to fight — that's 22 million more total barrels of crude oil per day than we produce domestically and 14 million barrels per day more than we consume across this nation to keep our lifestyles in motion. Regardless of all the contingency plans, if any war we are engaged in lasts longer than six months, fuel replenishment will be a major supply and logistics problem.

The Department of Energy estimates that within 20 years, U.S. oil production will fall at least 3 million barrels per day, which, at current domestic peacetime consumption needs, could account for three-fourths of our oil needs being supplied from foreign sources. Today our near-50 percent dependency on oil imports constitutes approximately 40 percent of our trade deficit. In 20 years, imported oil could contribute up to 75 percent of our total trade deficit.

In a base-case scenario, by year 2010, U.S. crude oil production will decline to 4.4 million barrels per day from the current 7.4 million barrels at the end of March 1991. Net imports will have increased to 75 percent of demand and oil prices will increase to an average of $34 per barrel, calculated in 1990 dollars. Either political or market influences could push or pull prices far outside of this range. No one has been able to accurately forecast oil prices, as the market is controlled by foreign governments, not the free enterprise system that we are always led to believe.

The theory of economics, to let the free market or supply and demand concept determine the price, is a bunch of hogwash when it comes to crude oil. Just a few months ago, during Desert Sheild, our economists were predicting $50 to $75 per barrel oil if war broke out. Well, it did just the opposite. It fell $8 to $10, where it remains today at around $20 per barrel.

The volatility of the crude oil pricing market caused by foreign control and those who deal in paper barrels on the futures exchange market is one of the greatest deterrents to investing in the nation's crude oil business. It is one primary reason why our industry is in shambles, why our production continues to decrease and why our demand for imports continues to increase at alarming rates.

The other reason is credited to our federal government. Under President Reagan's Tax Reform Code (I call it "Tax Deform") every incentive provided for oil and gas exploration, drilling and production was repealed. To add to the injury, new taxes were established, such as the Alternate Minimum Tax, which simply slammed the door on almost all outside capital investment in oil and gas.

The new tax code has dried up all such investment capital, therefore our domestic industry has crashed to where it most likely will never recover. Oil and gas investments have always been high risk situations, where if you won, you won big, and if you lost you could at least recover some of your losses in tax credits. Not so today.

The attitude of the administration and the Congress for cheap energy regardless of its source is difficult to change. We have 10 major petroleum producing states in this country. This puts us at a ratio disadvantage of 1:4 in the Congress. Simply, 10 states for energy enhancement legislation and 40 against. Coupled with this, you have abnormal hate, by some, for anything that Texas represents. We are blamed for all bank failures, the savings and loan crisis, the fallen housing and real estate markets, and the general mismanagement of funds and greed by some whichhave led to corruption within our banking institutions and the general economic recession we are said to be in today.

These are difficult obstacles to hurdle unless we can change the poor image the nation's public has of the petroleum industry and get everyone concerned over our inadequate National Energy Policy. There is one very positive step that has been taken: The TV program "Dallas" has been canceled. This TV series, with slippery and shady J.R. Ewing, has probably been one of our worst image breakers of all time.

We thought Desert storm would help alert our people to our energy problems. It did not. It may take another 1973, when we suffered long lines at the gas pump and restrictions on how much gasoline we could purchase. It may take a total shut-down on the part of OPEC or our own domestic production to reunite an effort to be less dependent on foreign crude sources.

I believe it is important for the security of the United States to not be dependent for our energy needs on foreign and, many times, unfriendly governments. Surely, if it is worth fighting for in Kuwait, it is worth drilling for in the United States.

Harry Spannaus is executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association.

Clayton Williams finals wells

Staff Report

Clayton W. Williams Jr. announces the completion of two horizontal development wells in the Pearsall field of LaSalle County.

The two were completed for a combined 3,604 barrels of oil plus 2,101 million cubic feet of gas. They represent the 77th and 78th horizontal completions Williams has made in the Austin Chalk since January 1, 1990.

The Wright-Avant Unit No. 1, located in J. Poitevent survey 17, Abstrct 608, was tested to produce 2,192 barrels of oil, 1,150 Mcfd and five barrels of water on a 24/64 inch choke and 1,110 psi of flowing tubing pressure. The well was drilled to a measured depth of 12,312 ft. and a total horizontal section of 4,560 ft.

The No. 1 Burns EG Unit, located in I&GN RR Co. survey 682, Abstract 934, was tested to produce 1,412 barrels of oil, 951 Mcfd and 200 barrels of water on a 30/64 inch choke with 450 psi flowing tubing pressure. This well was drilled to a measured depth of 12,507 ft. and total horizontalsection of 4,573 ft.

Williams owns over 200,000 acres in the Cretaceous trend and is continuing in its development.

API survey records closing of refineries

Staff Report

WASHINGTON - Between 1981 and 1989, some 134 oil refineries in the United States with a combined capacity of 2,493,988 barrels per day (b/d) were shut down, a new survey by the American Petroleum Institute reveals.

These closures were partially offset by the reactivation of 32 refineries that had previously been shut down, the survey noted.

According to the survey, the number of refineries declined in all of the five refinery districts into which the nation is divided.

District 3, which includes the major refining states Texas and Louisiana, had the most closings - 57. District 1, which encompasses the East Coast and District 4, the Rocky Mountain region, had the fewest closings - 13 each.

During the period, the largest facility to be shut down was one with a 190,000 b/d capacity owned by Dow Chemical Company in Freeport, Texas. Four other refineries with capacitie⅛s in excess of 100,000 b/d were also shut down.

Copies of the survey, American Petroleum Institute U.S. Refinery CapacitY Shutdown Inoperable 1951 Through 1989 (Order No. 864-82000) may be purchased for $15.00 each from Publications and Distribution, American Petroleum Institute, 1220 L Street N.W., Washington, D.C. 20005. Phone: (202) 682-8375. FAX: 202-682-8537.

Prepaid orders should be sent to the American Petroleum Institute, 1970 Chain Bridge Road, McLean, Va. 22109-6000.

Oxy braces for losses from Chinese coal mine

N.Y. Times News Service

BEIJING — Arranging a $175 million investment in a coal mine in China was hard enough. It took several handshakes with Deng Xiaoping and other top Chinese leaders to get Beijing's agreement.

But now, the Occidental Petroleum Corp. has set itself up for what may become an even tougher task: getting rid of the investment without a huge loss.

The open-pit An Tai Bao coal mine in China's Shanxi Province — the dream of Occidental's late chairman, Armand Hammer — is one of the biggest and most famous joint ventures in China.

As Western investment in China boomed in the early 1980s, and board chairmen competed to sign agreements in the Great Hall of the People, the Occidental deal symbolized the hope that Chinese-American cooperation could be lucrative for both sides.

These days, as Occidental tries to withdraw from an apparently money-losing venture, the mine exemplifies the skepticism with which many foreign companies now view the Chinese market.

"The An Tai Bao case becomes symbolic of both the potential and the problems," said an American consultant familiar with the project. "China is a developing country, and a lot of projects were thought up that went beyond China's real capability."

China may be a huge market, but the economy is severely underdeveloped, with supply shortages, crumbling roads, antiquated trains and countless Chinese officials willing to wait forever rather than sign agreements that do not suit them perfectly.

More than three months after Hammer's death in December and more than two months after Occidental announced it was pulling out of China, the joint venture is illustrating another pitfall of foreign investment: the difficulty of withdrawing gracefully or profitably.

One foreign business executive said Occidental had decided to sell its stake to the Chinese, possibly because of difficulties in finding an outside buyer. He added that Occidental was close to reaching a settlement with the Chinese, but this could not be confirmed.

Occidental could withdraw from the investment under terms in the contract, lawyers familiar with the project said. The Chinese side would pay for Occidental's holdings according to complex formulas in the contract.

One lawyer in Beijing said the amount would be substantial enough so that the Chinese would want to find a buyer to help cover the payment.

In any case, bankers say, Occidental would have to offer its stake to its Chinese partners before it approached an outside buyer. An analyst said some companies had considered purchasing Occidental's interest, but none seemed eager to buy.

Without a settlement, Occidental could probably find a buyer itself, but only at a depressed price. The Chinese partners must approve any transfer of Occidental's 25 percent stake in the mine, and analysts said some of the Chinese involved were offended by Occidental's sudden announcement of plans to pull out.

Those familiar with the mine said that because of economic factors, especially low coal prices, it could take a couple of years to sell the stake to an outside buyer.

"The overall investment climate is not conducive to people investing in a project of this size, and China projects are not famous for their quick returns and lack of operational problems," said Paul Y. Au, regional representative for China at the Royal Bank of Canada, one of the banks financing the deal.

Occidental executives declined to be interviewed, as did the Chinese partners. Most bankers and business executives associated with the project declined to be named, for fear of offending the Chinese.

Occidental has said that its decision to pull out reflects a new investment philosophy and not any disillusionment with China. Ray R. Irani, Hammer's successor, plans to sell about $3 billion in assets, including the company's 51 percent stake in the meatpacker IBP Inc., to reduce debts.

Bryan Jacoboski, an analyst at Paine Webber Inc., said that much of the $3 billion would come from the sale of many oil, gas, coal and chemical operations.

He said that the disposal of Hammer's money-losing pet projects — among them a Soviet petrochemical business, Arabian horses, Black Angus cattle, a film production company and the Chinese coal mine — is likely to bring relatively little.

"The symbolism is more important than the financial impact," he said.

Occidental has said that it is prepared to write off much of its China investment, which analysts say has increased over the years to about $250 million.

Despite Chinese annoyance at Occidental and determination to bargain hard, they need to maintain the impression that Occidental was able to leave gracefully and that the mine is a success.

Texas talent

■ The Thouvenel String Quartet will be one of the performers at the Texas Festival at Washington, D.C.'s, Kennedy Center later this month.

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff Writer

This month's Texas Festival at Washington's Kennedy Center will include a performance by Midland-Odessa musicians.

The Thouvenel String Quartet, artists in residence with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale, will be performing in the center's Terrace Theater June 18 at 7:30 p.m.

The quartet will be performing Dvorak's String Quartet in G major, Opus 106.

Also on the program that evening will be the Chamber Soloists of Austin.

All of the talent performing for the two-week festival comes from Texas and includes such well-known artists as Kris Kristofferson, Willie Nelson, Jerry Jeff Walker, Freddy Fender, Butch Hancock, Ray Benson and his Asleep at the Wheel band, Playboys II with Jody Nix of Big Spring, Bobby Blue Bland and the Fabulous Thunderbirds.

Other performers include the Dallas Symphony, the Houston Ballet, the Fort Worth Ballet and the Texas Boys Choir.

As the time to leave for Washington draws near, quartet members — violinist Janet Chisholm; her sister, violist Sally Chisholm; Sally's husband, violinist Eugene Purdue; and cellist Rebecca Seiver — talked about how it felt to be chosen to perform at the Texas Festival.

'I was thrilled," said Janet Chisholm. "My family background has a strong inclination toward politics, so Washington, D.C., is an intriguing place to me. Musically, because of Kennedy Center it's a great honor. It's a very provocative situation in which to play, at least for me."

"There is this significance in us being the only quartet that is being invited to perform at the Kennedy Center," said Ms. Seiver.

"The community then should be proud, because considering the growing popularity of chamber music, and the string quartet chosen is right here in Midland and Odessa," Ms. Seiver said.

"Let me also add that an exciting aspect...is being placed along with groups of such high caliber as the Dallas Symphony, the Fort Worth Ballet, the Texas Playboys and Willie Nelson. I would like to thank anyone and everyone who has been helpful to us and who helped make this possible," she said.

'It's a great honor, and it's a privilege to represent not only West Texas, but also the State of Texas in our nation's capital.'

— Sally Chisholm

"It's something that we've been aware of," said Purdue. "We know our name had been in the pot for three years, and it's something that we've been working for. There's a certain sense of satisfaction when something like this comes through."

"I thought it was great," said Sally Chisholm. "It's a great honor, and it's a privilege to represent not only West Texas, but also the State of Texas in our nation's capital.

"As far as the performance itself, to perform in Kennedy Center is an artistic challenge in which we would hope to rise to even higher levels to make everybody back here proud," Sally Chisolm said.

The opportunity to perform at the Texas Festival comes at an advantageous time for the quartet, which is entering its 15th season with the MOSC.

'We plan to take this opportunity to reinforce to the community what an institution the quartet has become, and by no means is it a passive institution," said Ms. Seiver.

"We're principal players in the orchestra, performers in concerts outside of Texas and teachers. All that is an indication of the quartet's value and proof of what a vital institution it is," she said.

None of the quartet members have played at Kennedy Center before.

"It's a beautiful building, and I've run into many people who have taken the tour and say that it's just very impressive," said Purdue, who added that the complex contains a number of theaters.

"I haven't heard anything about how the hall sounds, but the fact that I haven't heard that it's bad is probably a good sign."

Work on the Texas Festival began around three years ago.

"There was talk that goes back even farther, but it officially goes back three years," said Purdue. "A statewide committee was formed and the purpose was to bring a festival of the performing arts from Texas to Kennedy Center, and it was supposed to represent all aspects of the performing arts in the state."

Purdue added that Midlander Joanie Holt served on the statewide committee and was instrumental in raising money in Midland for the Texas Festival in order to send the quartet to Washington.

"As I understand it, the Texas Commission on the Arts and the Texas Advisory

"They even sent a person out unbeknownst to the groups being considered to a concert of the groups. We didn't know that, and we don't know which concert they came to."

'The Texas Advisory Committee in conjunction with Kennedy Center chose the performing artists for the two-week festival," said Mrs. Holt. "We are very fortunate to have a representative in the classical field that we are sending from this part of the state."

Mrs. Holt served on the Texas Advisory Committee along with another Midlander, Mary de Compiegne. The burden of raising money locally fell to Mrs. Holt and Mrs. de Compiegne.

"We were told that we needed to underwrite the performers from the different communities in order for them to be able to go to Kennedy Center," Mrs. Holt said. "With that in mind, Mary de Compiegne and I just went out to our wonderful patrons of the arts and collected the money."

The Texas Festival, which runs June 11 through 22, also includes a salute to Texas films. In addition, a Juneteenth Celebration featuring, among others, the Dallas Black Dance Theatre, is set for the Concert Hall June 19.

The festival features Spanish dance and Hispanic folk dance provided by Ballet Fantasia Espanola of San Antonio and Tejano Music from the Texas-Mexico border by The Texas Tornadoes. In addition there will be roadhouse cafe featuring entertainment and Texas food and drink.

Acts performing in the Roadhouse Cafe, being held in the Encore Cafe above the Hall of Nations, include, among others, Delbert McClinton, Zydeco and Clarence "Gatemouth" Brown.

The Terrace Theater, where the Thouvenel String Quartet performs, will also be the site for "In The West," a series of 17 monologue portraits designed to illustrate the Southwestern spirit. The monologues feature an all-Texas cast.

Few performances are free. Special rates are available at some Washington, D.C., hotels. For special festival tour packages call 1-800-654-5322. The ticket box office number for the Texas Festival is 800-444-1324.

Zubin Mehta ignores those critical of him

By Daniel J. Wakin

NEW YORK (AP) — Zubin Mehta gave his annual dinner for the musicians of his New York Philharmonic at the Indian restaurant Raga last month, and the food was spicy — almost unbearably so for some of the players.

Mehta

Several said half seriously that the maestro probably ordered the extra-incendiary seasoning as a parting shot.

"No, no, no, there was no plan. No," Mehta said chuckling at the end of a recent interview between rehearsals at Carnegie Hall. "It was a little bit hot. In fact, as soon as I tasted it, I said 'Uh-oh.' "

If the food was hot, many of Mehta's performances over the years have generated all too little heat for many critics and a number of orchestra members, some of whom are resentful of Mehta's stewardship.

"I want to be as much disconnected from this era as possible," said one member. "I want to wake up from this bad dream."

YET AFTER 13 years, Mehta has plenty of supporters among musicians, and audiences have approved: Philharmonic performances are filled to 95 percent capacity on average, and 80 percent of its seats are bought by subscribers. Donations have risen from 17 percent of the budget during Mehta's first year to 22 percent. The budget has more than doubled, to $24 million.

"He knows so well the music, his job and what you're about to do," said cellist Yo-Yo Ma. "He is so giving to all those who play with him."

Mehta, who conducted Arnold Schoenberg's "Gurrelieder" two weeks ago in his last performance as Philharmonic music director, professes only a sense of harmony with the players and blithe dismissal of his critics.

"I finished my contract. Nobody challenged me, I didn't challenge anybody else," he said. Simply, "It's time to move on."

Mehta said he plans to do more opera in Europe and a Ring cycle in Chicago. He'll continue conducting the Israel Philharmonic, of which he is music director for life, and the Maggio Musicale festival orchestra in Florence.

Kurt Masur, conductor of the Leipzig Gewandhaus Orchestra in Germany, takes over as music director of the Philharmonic this fall.

APPOINTED IN 1978, the Bombay-born Mehta, now 56, stayed to become the longest-reigning music director of a highly talented orchestra that often was said, justly or unjustly, to make life difficult for conductors.

Yet Mehta says of the experience: "When I look back after 30 years from now, this will be the central focus of my life, no doubt about it."

It would have been hard to predict that focus 30 years ago when Mehta began guest-conducting the world's great orchestras in his mid-20s. Time magazine put him on its cover and The New Yorker magazine ran a profile.

Soviet conductor Kiril Kondrashin called him "probably the best conductor alive today," and to pianist Artur Rubinstein he was a "universal musician." At 26, Mehta was the youngest director of a major orchestra when he took over the Los Angeles Philharmonic.

Mehta said he "didn't believe all that" early praise. Asked if he feels he has lived up to his billing, he quickly replies, "I don't know, ask The New York Times. ... But I mean, I'm not living on that."

His years at the Philharmonic have been marked by tepid reviews.

"THE CRITICAL response, I'd say, has been fairly underwhelming," said Tim Page, a music critic for The New York Times and now Newsday for nine years. "I don't think that anybody has ever mistaken him for a great interpreter." Nor has he shown much commitment to contemporary or American works, Page said.

Though capable of rising to the occasion, "the orchestra was probably better 14 years ago than today."

Even in Israel, one critic several years ago repeatedly called for Mehta's departure. The orchestra, though, responded with a vote of support.

Any conductor of the Philharmonic has to contend with a built-in handicap: The world's greatest orchestras routinely pass through New York and usually play in a superior auditorium — Carnegie Hall.

Mehta's critics in the orchestra say his strength is limited to the big 19th-century war horses, and that he is more surface than substance. They say he seems more concerned with his image than preparation and pits members against each other. None would be quoted by name.

Members also bitterly recall how CBS Records ended its long-term recording contract with the orchestra because the releases under Mehta weren't selling. The small Teldec label of West Germany now has a contract with him.

MEHTA SAYS he put his stamp on the orchestra by hiring 43 of its 106 members, brought a flexibility borne of what he claims to be his own "eclectic" repertoire.

As for journalistic criticism, Mehta says: "That's really not my problem. How come orchestras keep on inviting me?" And he dismisses criticism from within the orchestra as the product of disgruntled musicians.

"One has to understand that year by year, in a music director's job ... certain enemies are made. And the ones who don't make the enemies don't also build the orchestra."

Howard: 'Backdraft' about heroes

By Bob Thomas

LOS ANGELES (AP) — He may have filmed a spectacle about firefighters, but Ron Howard denies that his childhood ambition was to be a fireman. With remarkable prescience for a 12-year-old, he set his sights for exactly what he's doing today.

"I recently bumped into an interview I did at the time of 'Music Man' (in which he appeared in 1962)," Howard says. "I was asked what I wanted to do, and I was quoted as saying, 'I want to be an actor, writer, producer, director — and baseball player.'

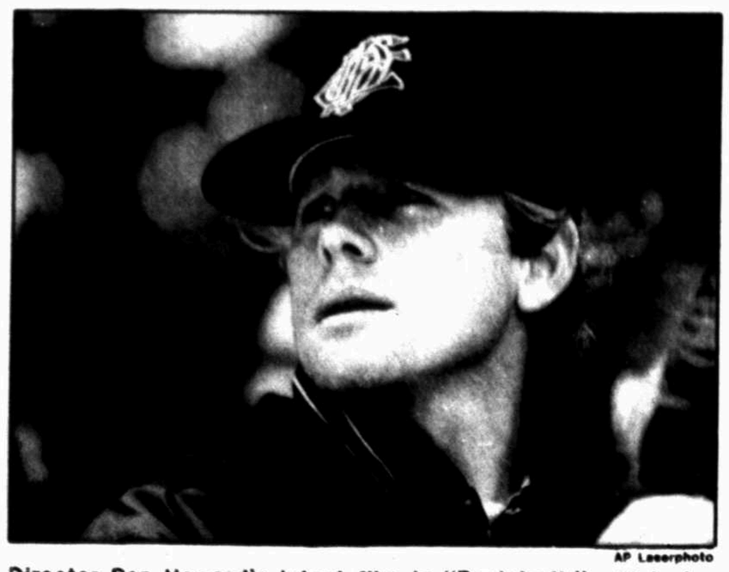

"Somewhere around the age of 13 or 14, I realized I couldn't hit curve balls. I gave that up. At the same time I realized that of all the facets I was interested in, the one person who participates in all those areas was the director. That's what I aimed to do."

Howard was only 23 when he achieved his ambition, directing and starring in "Grand Theft Auto" on a frayed shoestring for the king of the quickies, Roger Corman. The action film drew decent notices, but it was considered an indulgence for the young star, a welcome break from the grind of the "Happy Days" TV schedule.

With "Night Shift," Howard proved he was not just a dilettante TV star. The outrageous comedy was a hit, establishing stardom for Michael Keaton. Then came "Splash!," "Cocoon," "Gung Ho," "Willow" and "Parenthood."

His new film is Universal Picture's "Backdraft," a firefighting epic starring Kurt Russell, William Baldwin, Scott Glenn, Jennifer Jason Leigh, Donald Sutherland, Rebecca De Mornay and Robert De Niro (billed in a cameo role).

The title refers to that dreaded condition when intense fire consumes all the oxygen in a room so that a sudden gust of fresh air can trigger explosive combustion.

AP Laserphoto

Director Ron Howard's latest film is "Backdraft," which depicts the heroics oft Chicago firefighters.

Filming with the cooperation of the Chicago Fire Department, Howard sought a level of reality that bordered on dangerous. One of the city firemen recruited as actors was singed by a sudden burst of flame. He told Howard the next day that his wife was furious, exclaiming: "You've been fighting real fire for 10 years and you never got burned. Now you're making this movie and you're getting burned! What are they doing to you down there?"

Movie firemen Russell, Baldwin and Glenn also experienced the real thing.

"They actually went to the fire academy," said Howard. "We did our own training as it related to the things we were doing in the movie. We also spent evenings in the firehouse and rode out on fires to see what they were like.

"When Kurt went out, a firefighter asked him, 'How far in the building do you want to go?' 'All the way,' Kurt said. He went right in and was working the fire. So did Bill Baldwin and Scott Glenn."

When Howard's partner and producer, Brian Grazer, heard about their exploits, he fired off a memo to cease and desist.

"It was a very dangerous movie to make," Howard said in an interview. "We knew that, we talked about it, we tried to cover our risks. Fire is a very unpredictable thing. We had the best special effects people, the best stunt coordinators. Thank God, no one did get hurt.

"But more than any movie I've been around, I lost sleep over this thing. I was very concerned and more than relieved when we finally wrapped."

"Backdraft" originated from Howard's desire to make a movie about heroes. He shied away from the Indiana Jones type of fantasy hero in favor of something more realistic. He also wanted to do a film about brothers. He found what he was looking for in a script by Gregory Widen, who worked as a fireman for two years in Laguna Beach, Calif., before entering film school at the University of California at Los Angeles.

Ron agreed with Grazer that fire could be a force of nature, like the shark in "Jaws," but he also saw the chance to portray heroes.

"I wondered why there haven't been more movies about firefighters," said the director. "None of them has given the inside scoop. We've seen it with police. We've seen it with the military, the legal profession. But never with firefighters."

Even when he is directing high-powered actors and battalions of firefighters, Howard never seems to lose the boy-next-door quality he had as a young actor. His first film role came at the age of 4 in "The Journey" with Deborah Kerr and Yul Brynner. He then starred with Robert Preston in "Music Man" and Glenn Ford in "The Courtship of Eddie's Father."

He became ingrained in the national psyche as Opie Taylor in "The Andy Griffith Show" and Richie Cunningham in "Happy Days" on television. He seemed to slide easily into directing, and now he and Glazer have a thriving enterprise in Imagine Films.

"Although I never really worked under the system, part of me kind of misses the idea of the big daddy, the boss, the studio that has a machine going," he said. "If you're a participant in the machine, then it's a great creative environment with a lot of support. But that may be romanticized."

Howard is now in rehearsals for his next film, "Distant Shores," a romantic adventure about Irish immigrants in the 1890s, with Tom Cruise and Nicole Kidman.

"I'm very lucky," said Ron. "I'm getting to make the films I want to make, and different kinds of films. I'm living my dream."

Utah playhouse to offer International Vocal School

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah — Applications are being accepted for the fifth annual International Vocal School at Utah's Promised Valley Playhouse.

The school, which will be held July 8-20, features intensive vocal instruction from an acclaimed international faculty and several opportunities for concert performance. Vocal school director Iain B. McKay said in a news release those who wish to participate should submit a cassette tape of their performance of excerpts from their repertoire by April 1. The tape need not be professionally produced but should be of sufficient quality to allow proper assessment.

Co-sponsored by the Playhouse, the Canadian Resource Centre for Career Performing Artists, the Israel Vocal Arts Institute and the Australian Singing Competition, the program "has been designed to allow plenty of individualized instruction from a variety of well-qualified teachers," McKay said. "Registration is limited because we like to keep our classes small. That's why we have to make the Vocal School available only on a first-come, first served basis."

The school also conducts an "Overture Class" for singers high school age and older who are interested in an introduction to the world of singing as well as room for observers who would like to watch without actually participating.

Fees for the program are $300 for participants, $100 for the overture class and $50 for observers. In each case, the fee includes admission to all classes, lectures, public concerts and social events.

For more information write Promised Valley Playhouse, 132 South State Street, Salt Lake City, Utah 84111, or call (801)364-5696.

■ Exhibit depicts ranch life

Staff Report

The museum exhibition "Journey of Lost Images," which is comprised of 26 original oils by Gary Ernest Smith, opens Friday at the Museum of the Southwest, 1705 W. Missouri Ave.

The paintings in Smith's show were completed in the summer of 1989, after the artist spent a month reliving experiences of his childhood on his parents' ranch, capturing images in numerous sketches and oils.

This journey found the artist retracing the dusty roads, barbed wire fences, watering troughs and visiting with the hired hands he had known in his youth.

"These canvases are more icons and symbols than mere representations," said Vern G. Swanson, director of the Springville Museum of Art and curator of the show.

"They transcend what they are because the artist had imbued them with a nobility which has surprised the ranchers and pleased the art critics," Swanson said.

The exhibit closes July 28 at the Museum of the Southwest. No admission is charged to view exhibits at the museum. Hours are 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information call 683-2882.

■ Western exhibit upcoming

OKLAHOMA CITY, Okla. — Artists, critics and collectors will soon converge upon the National Cowboy Hall of Fame for what is traditionally one of the most prestigious western art exhibits in the country. The National Academy of Western Art (NAWA) Exhibition will open June 8 at the Oklahoma City museum.

The exhibit will feature more than 180 works of art.

The event traditionally begins with several activities, including day-long art seminars and demonstrations that will be conducted June 7 and 8.

Topics and speakers include "Illustrating the Pulps and The Slicks," a panel discussion featuring artists Raymond Kinstler of New York, Tom Lovell of Santa Fe and Ken Riley of Tucson and moderated by author/historian Walt Reed; "Mexico Market Scene Demonstration in Watercolor," by Tucson artist Tom Hill; "My Friend John Clymer," a lecture on the late artist by Eddie Basha; and "Horse Packing and Painting in Rungius' Wyoming" by NAWA artist Tucker Smith; "One Hour Ahead of the Posse and Other Stories: an Artists' Anthology," conducted by Maine artist Ned Jacob; "John James Audubon: The Birds of America," a lecture given by Dr. Ron Tyler, director of the Texas State Historical Association and outdoor demonstrations in oil painting and sculpture by NAWA artists Richard Greeves, Wilson Hurley and Bill Reese.

The official opening of the 1991 National Academy of Western Art Exhibit will begin at 5:30 p.m. Saturday. All works will be available for purchase at that time.

■ Decorators to show wares

AMARILLO — The country's leading decorators and artists are gathering in Amarillo for the first time to offer their handmade designs at the Country Peddler Show, coming to the Amarillo Civic Center on June 14-16.

A listing of just a few of the items found at a Country Peddler Show include furniture, textiles, woodcarvings, prints, pottery, paintings, potpourri, porcelain, baskets and jewelry.

Robbin Ely-Ramsey, manager and founder, stresses that the Country Peddler Show caters exclusively to those searching for the very best.

The Country Peddler Show has evolved from folk art to include a wide range of decorator styles and original designs. Today the emphasis is not only a country, but also Victorian, Southwest, French and original styles that defy categorization.

For information on the Country Peddler Show, contact Ramsey at Box 560, DeWitt, Mich. 48820 or call (512)669-5162.

■ Festival songbook for sale

KERRVILLE — A limited edition printing of the first annual Kerrville Folk Festival songbook has been announced by the festival producer, Rod Kennedy.

Official release of the publication, which features 10 favorites of festival audiences, will be during the festival's 20th anniversary celebration, which runs through June 9 at Quiet Valley Ranch.

None of the featured works previously have been published for sale in either songsheet or songbook form. Proceeds of this commemorative edition will benefit the Kerrville Music Foundation.

Orders for the songbook, which sells for $12, may be made by contacting the Kerrville Music Foundation, P.O. Box 1466, Kerrville, Texas.

Blues band

Black Top Records' group Rod Piazza and the Mighty Flyers will perform at The Bar Friday and Saturday. The group has released its debut album on the label, "Blues in the Dark." Musician Magazine called the harpwork and vocals of Piazza "the standard by which other harp players are judged," a reputation earned from more than 20 years of being an in-demand harmonica player. The band, whose members include, from left, Alex Schultz, Jimi Bott, Piazza, Miss Honey and Bill Stuve, will play the Hollywood Blues Festival.

■ Museum to honor artist

KERRVILLE — At its eighth anniversary celebration, Roundup '91, the Cowboy Artists of America Museum in Kerrville presented its special Kieckhefer Award to Jim Boren for exceptional contribution and dedication to the museum since its beginning over 10 years ago.

After a period as the art director at the Cowboy Hall of Fame in Oklahoma City, Boren left to become the full time fine artist he was until his death in 1990.

He became a member of the Cowboy Artists of America in 1966 and was twice elected president of this group. He was also a founding member of the museum board of directors and a great contributor to its beginning and its growth.

CHECKING OUT THE LIBRARIES

Sandra DeFore Wegner

Summer camp doesn't always mean insects and sunburns. At Camp Wanna-Read, summer can be filled with trips to mysterious places, exciting tales and the secrets of the universe — all in books, of course.

Camp Wanna-Read opened its tent flaps on the children's summer reading program at Midland County Public Library, 301 W. Missouri and Midland Park Mall this week.

Campers can pick up a reading log at either library and set their individual goals of how many books or magazines he or she will read, or if younger, hear books read to them. Campers that reach their goals earn certificates and chances for special prizes to be awarded in August.

The downtown library is featuring weekly programs for a variety of ages as part of Camp Wanna-Read. Campfire stories, snakes, water safety, birds and other thrills of camp life make up the schedule.

Preregistration for programs is required only for the Creative Writing Workshop, June 18, 19, and 20. A limited number of third, fourth, and fifth graders will be accepted. All other programs are limited by the fire code room capacity, so come early.

Camp Wanna-Read participation is free. Children do need library cards to check out books. An added summer bonus is free admittance to a Midland Angels game. With their card in hand, library users of all ages can attend the game with the Tulsa Drillers July 11.

Program schedules and details on camp Wanna-Read are available at both libraries.

The 1991 edition of Dun's Million Dollar Directory is now on the reference shelf of the downtown library and it lists about 120 Midland businesses in the geographical index. Described as America's leading 160,000 public and private companies, the directory says these companies must have at least one of three criteria: 250 or more employees, $25,000,000 in sales volume or a tangible net worth greater than $500,000.

Information cited for each company is brief with cross references for location and industry type. For more information patrons may check America's Corporate Families and Dun's Business Ranking.

In contrast, another reference book, the Hoover's Handbook does not list any Midland-based company. Besides historical and current status descriptions of "500 major corporations," the handbook features "a list-lover's compendium," with such tallies as the 10 largest restaurants in the U.S. and 20 largest computer companies in the world.

All the profiles are interesting reading despite the fact that the criteria for inclusion in the book leaves one's eyes rolling.

While the book sub-title says corporations, the key word in the introduction is "enterprises." How else can one understand this unusual combination of organizations such as: Chevron Corporation, American Cancer Society, Fiat, Quaker Oats and the state of California. You'll find all these books for reference use in the downtown library, 301 W. Missouri.

New U.S. travel videos, additional books on cassette tape and a new microfilm reader are the latest gifts to the library from the Friends of the Library. While you are sampling the videos, take a look at several other fine videos donated to the downtown library by the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter Day Saints. Two features the Mormon Tabernacle Choir singing Christmas and Patriotic songs. Other tapes of general interest are an O'Henry story, "The Last Leaf starring" Art Carney and "Mr. Krueger's Christmas" starring James Stewart.

There is cause for celebration in the Petroleum Department. The new Bibliography and Index of Texas Geology is here. This latest edition covers geological writings about Texas published in 1981 through 1985. It helps fill a big gap when hunting recent data. The bibliography joins a series of five earlier indices from the Bureau of Economic Geology at the University of Texas at Austin. These are the most popular geological indices in the department. Using the Texas geologic volumes is much simpler than using the Bibliography and Index of Geology which consists of five volumes per year. Although the Bibliography and Index of Geology encompasses articles of worldwide interest, searching this set takes time and determination. The Petroleum Department hopes for the day it can purchase this essential index on CD-ROM for quick key word searching. All that is needed is contributions to the Friends of Midland County Public Library. Attn: Petroleum CD — ROM, P.O. Box 1191, Midland, TX 79701. On-line database searches of GeoRef are available now at the library for a fee.

A few words on the subject of money. Yes, the Friends of the Library are still collecting funds for library expansion. We are $80,000 short of our goal at the time of this writing. Used magazine sales, by the Friends of the Library, in the library foyer are brisk. National Geographics are hot items; we could used more.

During the week of June 3-7, the Friends are making a special effort to collect books for their fall used book sale. They will be waiting from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at their book drop on the corner of Illinois and Weatherford. They need your donations of hardbacks, paperbacks, records and tapes.

Sandra DeFore Wegner is Midland County Librarian.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JUNE 2, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Avoid pushing others too hard and you will have a highly productive year. Family matters enjoy especially favorable influences in late summer.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actor Charles Haid, composer Marvin Hamlisch, actor Stacy Keach, actress Sally Kellerman.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Getting together with old friends could be expensive; avoid going overboard, even if your pals do. A "think" session will shed new light on a tricky question. Open up to your mate.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Getting out of the house will energize you today. Attending church in a different neighborhood helps you meet new people. You are in a friendly and sociable mood. Entertain at home.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Yesterday's positive outlook lingers on today. Be alert to dissension on the home front. You and mate need to reach some common ground where spending is concerned.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your intuition is excellent now. Except for an occasional delay, nothing will mar this day. A quiet chat will improve a mother-daughter relationship. Accusations are best avoided.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): As the day progresses, you will get more and more enthusiastic about a family project. Confiding in your partner will help you overcome certain inhibitions. Let go of the past.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Today marks the beginning of a period of preparation. Your plans may have to be overhauled when you decide what kind of future you want. A positive attitude is linked to good health.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Friends encourage you to take a quick trip or try something exotic. A close relationship needs more attention. Do not let others take advantage of your natural generosity.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Taking control of your finances will reduce stress. Be decisive. Admitting past mistakes will win your loved ones' respect. Welcome ideas from your children. Show off your tennis backhand or golf stroke.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Return to your earlier conservative ways. A radical approach will not work. An investigation you conduct now could prove historic. Quietly discuss a delicate matter with your partner.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Your upbeat nature keeps the wheels of progress turning. Happily, you are in a good financial position. A distant or out-of-the-way place plays a prominent role in your social plans.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Thanks to a recently negotiated agreement, you can make record financial gains now. Take full advantage of this situation by aligning yourself with those who truly count.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Shunning the spotlight will bring welcome relief today. Afternoon or evening is the perfect time to lend someone a helping hand. Avoid mental fatigue by giving a wide berth to quarrelsome people.

There's hardly a bridge player who doesn't know how the defenders signal encouragement or discouragement of partner's lead—a high card says, "I like it," a low card suggests casting around for more fertile fields. What is not as well known is that declarer can disrupt the opponents' attempt to communicate with each other in exactly the same fashion with carefully selected falsecard "signals."

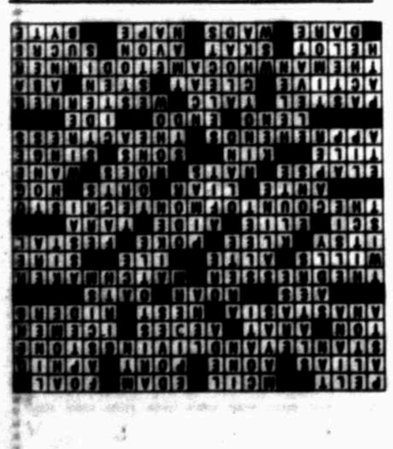

Suppose, for example, declarer is trying to discourage the defenders from continuing a suit. The way to do that is by playing the lowest card held. Conversely, to try to tempt a defender into persevering with the suit led, declarer spends a card higher than necessary. Here's how it works.

As a viable contract, three no trump is hardly an artistic triumph. The reason for the debacle is that North, with eight soft points and a flat hand, should not move over partner's no trump opening. With 17 points and a five-card suit, South's acceptance of partner's invitation was routine.

West's lead of a club inspired no fear in declarer. On the contrary, what would have been unwelcome was a heart shift before declarer's clubs had been set up. When East rose with the ace of clubs, had declarer reflexively followed with the deuce the defender might well have decided a heart shift was attractive, since West would have been marked with no more than five clubs and declarer with at least four.

Instead, South dropped the nine of clubs, concealing his two lower clubs. Suddenly a club return looked much more attractive to East, because West could have held a six-card suit. The six of clubs back allowed declarer to set up three club tricks, and 10 in all, before the defenders discovered they had to mine the heart suit for the wherewithal to defeat the game.

Club haven for aspiring artists

By Tamara Starks

CHICAGO (AP) — The days of donning white gloves for formal high teas are long gone at the Three Arts Club women's residence hall.

The teas were replaced by casual coffee house performances. Residents, once limited to those pursuing the original "three arts" of music, painting and drama, now may study architecture or art therapy, photography or graphic design, fashion or literature.

Yet women still come here with the same need that prompted the house to open 80 years ago: a cheap, safe place to live in an often forbidding city.

"When I came to the Three Arts Club, I was here for the first time in the United States," says Bibiana Suarez, who came from Puerto Rico to the Three Arts Club in 1980. She stayed for two years.

"It was my first time in a huge city," says Suarez, who now is an assistant art professor at DePaul University in Chicago. "It was my first winter, my first time seeing snow. It was an exciting and terrifying time for me, and the Three Arts Club is a very nurturing place, very safe."

Chicago's Three Arts Club is the sole survivor of five such clubs founded in London, Paris, New York and Cincinnati.

Much of the history of the clubs has been lost over time. But sketchy accounts indicate the Chicago club was founded by a woman named Gwethalyn Jones, whose father — a Chicago zinc manufacturer — gave her the building as a birthday gift.

"We have a history chest with some documents and minutes of the residents' meetings," says Nancy Moore, the club's executive director. "It's fascinating. For example, in 1921 there's a notation that Robert Frost stopped by to read some of his poetry at one of the teas and Carl Sandberg just happened to be with him."

Chicago's Three Arts Club nearly suffered the same fate as the other clubs. In the early 1980s the residence housed only 40 percent of its capacity and the board of directors wanted to close it.

But the students launched a campaign, inviting the public and the media to a showcase of their talents to show the importance of the club, says Caroline Ash, a board member since 1979.

"The artists displayed their work and the singers and dancers performed," Ash says. "We brought the Three Arts Club to the attention of the community. It really kept the club open and the tradition alive."

Today, the residence thrives and operates at its full capacity of 110 women.

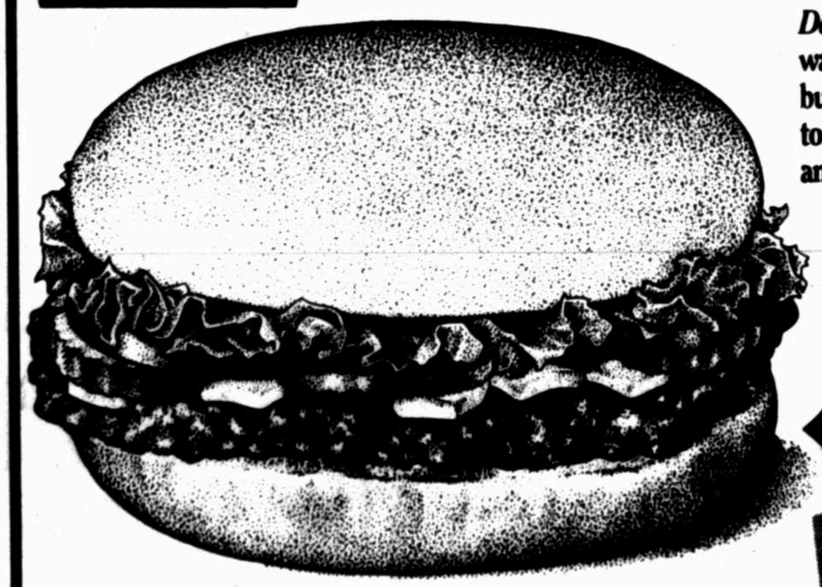

Residents of the Three Arts Club pay from $445 to $480 a month for room and board in a neighborhood where studio apartments alone often rent for twice as much.

"For students who are coming from around the world or from less metropolitan areas, to come to Chicago, find an apartment that's affordable and in a good neighborhood is difficult," Moore says.

The four-story brick building, constructed in 1914, features an elevated stage and sitting room with two grand pianos. First-floor areas often are hired out for performances. The residents live on floors above.

"Where else can you walk downstairs and listen to the Chicago Ensemble?", asks Sheri Workman of Joliet, a resident studying fine arts at the School of the Art Institute of Chicago.
