Area prime for pheasant season

From staff and wire reports

In a mixed outlook on the Texas Panhandle's 1990 season, visiting hunters will find the number of birds has increased slightly - and so has the price to hunt them.

Field studies conducted by the Texas Parks and Wildlife show the ringneck population is at 12.3 birds per survey mile, up from 11.7.

This still falls far below the long-term average - in 14 years of studies - of 42 per route, TP&W bilogist Diane Locknane said. But Panhandle sources say the surveys do not take into account new hunting grounds opened by landowners who were "resting" acreage in the Conservation Reserve Program.

"Most places that have had enough moisture still have plenty of pheasants," TP&W biologist Danny Swepston said. "Probably not like we had in the 1970s, but still good."

Meanwhile, the cost of hunting on opening weekend Dec. 8-9, either through a civic group trying to raise money for charity or a private landowner, has increased from $100 a weekend to $85-$150 a day.

Chambers of commerce and service associations from Stratford to Lubbock offer contacts for visiting hunters. Some, such as the Gladney Center hunt in Dimmitt to benefit the nonprofit maternity and adoption home, include everthing from shuttle service from the Amarillo airport to lodging. Many service clubs host breakfasts, lunches or other events throughout the Panhandle-Plains.

The hunting season will bring a huge infusion of money into the Hereford area, still considered prime pheasant territory. The hunting season brings several million dollars into the Hereford area each year, said F. Michael Carr, executive vice president of the Deaf Smith County Chamber of Commerce.

Carr said Friday he had not yet checked on occupancy at local motels, but it is expected that hunters needing rooms should have no problems in Hereford.

Carr said he has not had as many inquiries about hunting this year as he has had in the past, but expected the usual big influx of hunters from across the United States, Canada and Mexico when the season opens at sunrise Saturday.

Despite grim predictions by the TP&W, based on the latest counts, most Panhandle sources remain encouraged that this season will be a bit improved over last year.

"The population may be down because I don't think our hatch was real good in June," said Joe Nisbett of the Dalhart Chamber of Commerce. "But we've got more cover than before, and the birds are still here."

Wildlife researchers at Texas Tech, studying life in and around shallow, bowl-like depressions called playas, found one in Floyd County had 100 pheasants in a three-acre plot.

"Same as always, if you've got food and cover, you've got pheasants," said Jim Steiert, a professional ringneck and waterfowl guide who works out of Hereford. "Our demise has been greatly exaggerated. The hunting will not be the pushover it used to be, but guys who flew in here and had their limits by 8 o'clock in the morning got spoiled in the 1970s."

Steiert said new CRP land bodes well for the future.

"There are bird populations that are just now getting started in some of these CRP plots, and they never got counted by the state," he said. "Some of it is such thick grass, you can walk right over the birds and never see them."

CHRISTMAS STOCKING FUND

CS Fund can help many here during year

A particularly heartwarming aspect of Hereford's Christmas Stocking Fund is the real help the holiday charity is able to extend to those with pressing needs for medical assistance, not only during the Yule season but at other times.

The anonymous volunteers who administer CSF set aside a small "nest egg" at the end of the campaign each year to be used for emergency situations that can come at any time.

Because of the generosity of contributors, CSF was there to help a diabetic woman who needed medication, but had no means to obtain it. Another woman got desperately-needed eyeglasses after hers burned up in a house fire. A senior citizen was able to spend more comfortable days because CSF paid for his prescription medicine in an emergency.

Assistance with medical needs is just one of the forms of help CSF will be providing again this holiday season. The project also extends clothing, utility and food assistance to the community's less fortunate during a special season of sharing and caring.

Applications for assistance from CSF are being accepted at the county Red Cross office at 224 S. Main through Friday, Dec. 7. Applicants must provide proof of county residence, and those requesting assistance with utility and medical bills must provide a copy of the bill and complete information on account nubmers.

The anonymous volunteers of CSF screen all applications. Assistance from CSF is in the form of groceries or vouchers, never cash. A number of local merchants cooperate with the project each year by honoring vouchers for clothing items. Local merchants, schools and churches are also cooperating with CSF in food drives.

Assistance packages from CSF will be delivered Dec. 21.

The amount of help CSF is able to provide the community's needy is dependent on donations to the charity. Contributions may be left at The Hereford Brand office at 313 Lee, or mailed to CSF, Box 673, Hereford.

Members of the CSF committee are hoping to see the project top last season's record total of $20,718 which helped almost 1,000 people in Hereford and Deaf Smith County.

Simons enjoys challenge

By DANEE' WILSON
Staff Writer

People often aspire to change the world in some fashion, but few ever attain their goal. Like many, Tom Simons set out to make a difference, but like so few, he is succeeding.

Simons was elected Deaf Smith County Judge four years ago and was recently reelected without opposition. Simons ran for the position because he wanted to make a difference.

"I thought it was something I'd like to do and I wanted to make a difference where I lived," said Simons. "Deaf Smith County has exceptional people who try to do for others who are less fortunate. These people make it special."

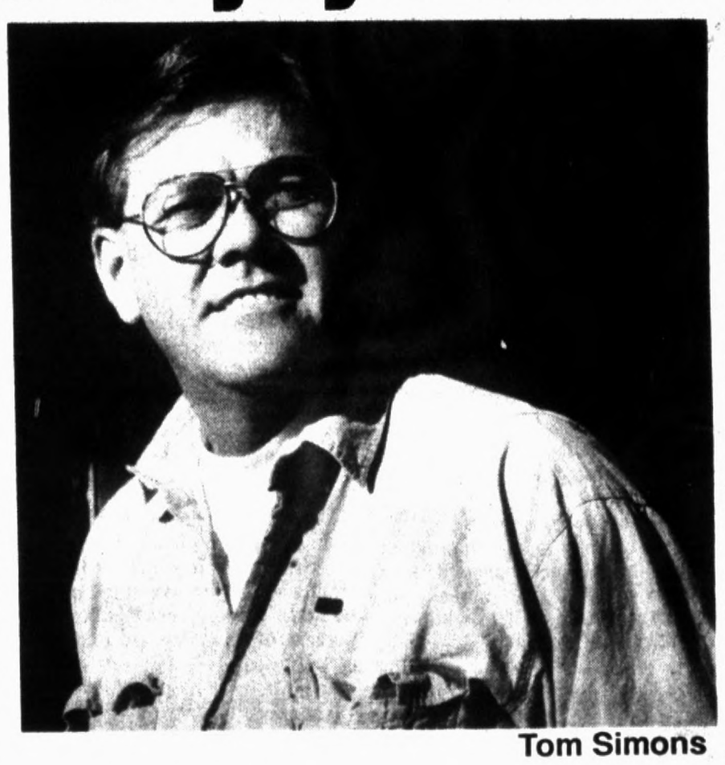

As county judge, Simons handles all misdemeanor matters, probates, protective orders and he serves as the juvenile judge. Administratively, Simons heads the county judge's office and is the presiding officer of the Deaf Smith County commissioners' court.

Since Simons took office four years ago, the county has seen some changes.

"We've made changes in the way the court operates and made it better," he said. "Our community service program is good for the people it serves and good for the community."

Community social services helps provide indigent child care, groceries and regular care items to those who need help.

As with any job, the judgeship carries its frustrations.

Tom Simons

"I get frustrated when I see so much drug and alcohol abuse," said Simons. "What is most frustrating is when you see people who need help (rehabilitation), but don't want it. I can't help someone who doesn't want to help themselves. I can send them to a recovery unit, but the offender has to want to change.

"From the administrative standpoint, it's frustrating to see that the tax base has not grown, but the cost to run the county has grown. In this situation we have two choices, either to cut services or raise taxes. County employees, who have not been given a raise in three years, have suffered because of increased cost.

"I feel like things will start to happen here. Deaf Smith County has gone through the worst of times and it's going to get better."

As juvenile judge, Simons is faced with making decisions that shape and affect young peoples lives.

"Juveniles are both frustrating and rewarding," he said. "So many of them are too far behind in school to ever catch up. I wish I could help more, but I can't send a kid back to school and tell him to make A's and expect him to. Typically, we have 15-year-olds who are in the seventh grade who read on a third grade level. The problem is they can't function because they can't read."

Simons commends Chief Juvenile Probation Officer Lou Serrano for the job he is doing. "Lou is doing an excellent job," said Simons. "He has started a boxing program and takes kids to the YMCA."

Simons is optimisticly looking forward to the rehabilitation facility for offenders to be built by the county.

"The facility will help a lot of local residents," he said "In addition to the drug and alcohol rehabilitation, the facility will have an educational program. This wil! give the offenders skills that will allow them to work."

Simons said that rehabilitation is better than locking offenders up.

Iraq agrees to talk

By ARTHUR ALLEN
Associated Press Writer

The Iraqi government today welcomed talks to resolve the Persian Gulf crisis, urging "the arrogant" President Bush to accept a "serious and deep dialogue," the official Iraqi News Agency reported.

The 10-man Revolutionary Command Council chaired by President Saddam Hussein issued a statement accepting the idea of talks, the news agency said.

Earlier in the day, thousands of Iraqis chanting "Death to Bush!" marched in regime-orchestrated protests in Baghdad and other cities.

Iraq's policy "is be as it has always been, conducting a serious and deep dialogue and not holding informal meetings as America's president has wanted," said the statement carried by the official Iraqi News Agency.

It said the proposal was being accepted even though "the arrogant President of the United States, George Bush, has always rejected dialogue, voicing his contempt of the Arabs and Moslems and all those who believe in God and human values."

Informed sources, speaking on condition of anonymity, said U.S. Embassy officials met with Iraqi Foreign Minister Tareq Aziz, apparently to deliver an official invitation to open a dialogue.

Bush offered Friday to send Secretary of State James A. Baker III to Baghdad and to have Aziz visit Washington for talks to forestall war in the Middle East.

Bush had been under increasing pressure to seek a peaceful resolution, especially since the U.N. Security Council passed a resolution Thursday authorizing the use of force if Saddam's troops do not leave Kuwait before Jan. 15.

The prospect of talks in the nearly 4-month-old gulf crisis sent oil prices tumbling more than $4 a barrel Friday, to $28.85 on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

Bell will upgrade system

Hereford will receive the latest in telephone digital switching as part of an agreement approved by the Texas Public Utility Commission and Southwestern Bell Telephone last week.

Southwestern Bell Telephone will install the switch as part of an accelerated program which will help boost the Texas economy and provide customer benefits worth more than $1.2 billion over the next four years.

A timetable for installing Hereford's as well as 195 other switches statewide over the next four years is not yet available, according to Gary Stevens, external affairs manager in Amarillo.

"Telephone customers all across the state were the big winners today," said Stevens. "With this bold, decisive action, the PUC has not only approved more than $1.2 billion in customer benefits, it has moved to put Texas at the forefront of telecommunications in the U.S.

The settlement includes the largest rate reductions and most ambitious modernization of the telecommunication network in Texas history.

Consumers will see the customer credits and rate reductions starting shortly, according to Gary Stevens. "And we will begin work immediately on the network modernization program."

Other highlights of the agreement include:

--A four-year cap on basic local telephone service rates.

--A one-time refund of approximately $8.75 for residence and $10 per access line for business customers.

--Reductions in Southwestern Bell's long distance, WATS and 800 service rates.

--Reduced access charges to long distance companies in Texas. These savings will flow through to customers.

--A four-year, accelerated program to bring digital technology to 196 communities now served by older, less versatile equipment.

--Eliminate party-line service and mileage charges for more than 300,000 rural customers residing outside "local calling areas." The upgraded service will not increase customers' monthly bills.

--Expanded optional toll-free calling to 32 cities around Austin, Dallas, Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio.

--Touch-tone rate reductions of 60 percent for residences and 33 percent for business customers at the end of four years.

Residential service connection charge reductions from $60 to $38.35.

--A Lifeline program for eligible low-income customers.

"The telecommunications industry has changed dramatically since the Bell System was broken up, and our system of regulation has to keep pace with those changes," said Stevens. "This settlement is worth roughly $1.2 billion in direct customer benefits over a four-year period.

"The agreement provides an incentive to build a telecommunication network that should attract new businesses and jobs to Texas without increasing telecommunication costs to the Texas ratepayers."

Landers honored on retirement

Roy M. Landers, right, is congratulated by Hereford Postmaster Charles Britten last week. Landers retired Friday after 34 years of carrying the mail in Hereford.

Landers retires from post office

By DANEE' WILSON
Staff Writer

For 34 years, Roy M. Landers has faithfully delivered mail to Hereford residents. What started March 24, 1956 ended Friday at his retirement party.

"There has been a lot of changes since I started delivering mail," said Landers. "Back then we started from the post office and walked our route that ended back at the post office."

Landers says one advantage to driving is being able to get back into the vehicle. "We used to be out in the weather all the time. Now, even though we still walk quite a bit, at least we can get into the vehicle for a few seconds.

"All the mail went to the house. Today boxes are on the sidewalk or in curbside clusters. We also made two deliveries to businesses on Main Street, now we make one."

Landers served in the air corps ordnance division of the Army for three years.

Prior to his position at the post office, Landers worked on the road maintenance crew for the county.

"When I came to the post office I was looking for more money," he said. "The post office didn't have the politics that the county had. Every election year you didn't know if you had a job."

Landers moved to Hereford in 1925 and has raised his two sons and daughter here.

"Landers has been a dedicated man," said Hereford Postmaster Charles Britten. "He was always dependable. I remember during a bad snow storm, he walked to work even though we didn't deliver mail that day."

After his retirement, Landers said he and his wife have no plans.

SIMONS

"We are concerned with building jail cells, but jails do limited rehabilitation," said Simons. "If we're serious about trying to make an impact, we need to help while the offender is incarcerated."

Simons attributes most of the cases he hears to drug and alcohol abuses.

"Drugs and alcohol are killing us from a social services stand point," he said. "I would guess that over 90 percent of the cases are related to drugs or alcohol. Whether it's DWI (driving while intoxicated) or theft by check, most of the time it's related to these abuses. I would say 99 percent of the protective order cases involve drugs or alcohol. I see people who say, 'I hit my wife because I was drunk.' or 'We got into a fight because we were drinking.' That makes me feel alcohol and drugs are the root of all evil."

Like most, Simons is concerned with the increasing numbers of DWI's. "I don't understand why someone who knows they are drunk would get behind the wheel of a car," he said frustrated. "I've have actually had a case where the offenders' blood alcohol level is .32. That is practically dead!"

The judge knows there is little he can do beyond sentencing.

"There are those who I send to get help and they come back a year later a new person, but there are too many I know when they leave my courtroom they will end up back here because they are going to go back to drinking. But there is only so much the courts can do."

Simons feels that helping one person change their life makes his job worthwhile.

"It's very rewarding when you send someone to rehabilitation and they come back a new person, with a steady job and just look totally different," he said. "I like the feeling I get when someone comes into my office and thanks me for helping them change their life. I know that only they can change their life, but I'm glad to help out.

Simons doesn't consider himself a savior, but enjoys being in an environment where he can make a difference. "The best part of my job is that sometimes I make a difference in some peoples' lives."

Local Roundup

PCS sets landlord meeting

Panhandle Community Services will hold a public meeting Tuesday for landlords who participate in the HUD rental assistance program. The meeting will start at 7 p.m. in the Hereford Community Center. "The success of the local housing program depends on well-informed landlords," said a PCS spokesman. Participating landlords and other interested property owners are urged to attend.

Crimestoppers offers reward

A reward of up to $300 is being offered by Deaf Smith County Crimestoppers for information leading to an arrest and indictment in the Crime of the Week.

A residence in the 400 block of Ave. J was burglarized on Nov. 26 between 9:30 and 10:55 a.m. Over $4,000 worth of items were taken, including a homemade Holly carburetor intake, two television sets, and a VCR.

If you have information about this or any other crime, call the Clue Line at 364-2583. You may remain anonymous by using a code name or number. All final rewards are determined by the Crimestoppers Board of Directors.

Three arrested by police Friday

Three persons were arrested Friday by Hereford police, including a man, 27, for driving while intoxicated, and two men, ages 18 and 26, for second offense no liability insurance.

Reports included theft in the 600 block of Irving, and three convenience store thefts; disorderly conduct in the 800 block of Knight and in the 600 block of Grand; assault in the 1500 block of Blevins; assault by threat in the 300 block of Ave. D; criminal mischief in the 600 block of Irving; and unauthorized use of a motor vehicle in the 200 block of Beach.

Police issued 20 citations and investigated two accidents Friday.

City will meet Monday

The Hereford City Commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Monday at the City Hall meeting room.

The agenda includes a presentation from representatives of the beautification committee of the chamber of commerce; Christmas lights; transfer of $50,000 from the water and sewer fund to the airport account; fire department computer; and appointment of members to the Panhandle Plains Higher Education Authority.

Items added to recycling

Magazines have been added to the list of reusable items to be collected by EnCoRe at its next drop-off day, scheduled from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Dec. 15 at St. Anthony's Church parking lot.

The Newsletter Company, a Hereford business, invites local residents to save their used magazines, which will be used for research work. After being scanned, these periodicals will be shared with the local hospital, schools, King's Manor and Hereford clinics.

EnCoRe stresses that is currently seeking magazines, not catalogs. Other recyclable goods to be accepted on Dec. 15 include: plastic, glass, all metals, batteries and newsprint (bundled and tied). EnCoRe does not have a market for cardboard or styrofoam.

The magazine collection drive is part of EnCoRe's emphasis on reuse, renewal and recycling. Recyclable materials delivered to the Environmental Coalition for Recycling on designated drop-off days are kept out of the Hereford landfill.

Individuals needing further information can contact Tonya Kleuskens, 258-7583 or Kerrie Steiert, 364-1855.

PHEASANT

Thus, veteran pheasant guides advise visitors to walk slowly, in a zigzag pattern, when hunting heavy cover. A well-trained pointer can be helpful.

Most hunters pack a 12-gauge shotgun, usually with a short, lightweight barrel for carrying long distances and swinging fast on pheasants erupting from cover in a blaze of color.

For hunting long rows of grain that might require shots up to 40 yards, a modified or full-choke barrel is best. A more open choke - improved cylinder, perhaps - is better for working heavy cover in the playas or CRP plots.

Selma mayor helps bridge many huge gaps

EDITOR'S NOTE - To serve as mayor more than 25 years is remarkable in the most placid of cities. But in Selma, Ala., Joe Smitherman has survived volcanic Selma's racial eruptions to win election seven times. In retrospect, he says, "If I were black, I would have agitated, too." Now he says enough's enough. He's stepping down at the end of his current term.

By JULES LOH
AP Special Correspondent

SELMA, Ala. (AP) - Shortly before a heart attack laid him up a few weeks ago, Mayor Joe Smitherman was ruminating on the formula that has kept him in office a quarter century. Could it be the one had something to do with the other?

"You start a project," he was saying, "and before you finish it, start another, and before you finish that one, start another, and so on.

"Be the busiest person in town, doing things for Selma that the people can see and touch. It never fails. It keeps your friends happy and your enemies off balance."

Those who know Joe Smitherman, friends and enemies, agree that he is a man of action, all right. They say he seems driven. He runs on high test and makes decisions more on gut instinct than deep thought. A hip shooter. On this Sunday morning, though, Smitherman was in a reflective mood.

The upheaval that rocked Selma a generation ago changed the political landscape of the South and rippled through the entire nation. It is where black Americans, systematically disenfranchised, won the right freely to vote, to have a say in their own governance. From that day to this Joe Smitherman has been mayor of Selma, experiencing all the predictable aftershocks.

Coffee in hand, feet on desk, Smitherman was saying the other day that he intends to leave office when his current four-year term, his seventh, expires in two years.

Selmians, as they call themselves, have heard that tune before. This time, though, they're betting the heart attack may influence the mayor's resolve, and are wondering what is to become of Selma when "the Smitherman reign," as one historian calls it in a recent volume, comes to an end.

"Selma will do just fine," Smitherman said. "It will have to because it's time for me to go. I've walked this tightrope long enough and I'm getting tired. Do you know how wearing this job can be?"

Wearing, yes. According to a researcher at the U.S. Conference of Mayors, it is rare in this country for anyone to last in that office for as long as 25 years. That would include mayors of complacent towns where nothing much happens to cause a happy citizenry to want to change anything.

If such places exist, this storied town on the blood-red banks of the Alabama River surely is not one of them.

Whatever happens in Selma, good or bad, has for the past 25 years been viewed against the backdrop of its past. A surprising number of visitors still drop by daily to gawk at the city that became a symbol, its very name a curse, a rallying cry for passage of the Voting Rights Act back in 1965.

A historical marker outside City Hall records the two pivotal events a hundred years apart that marked their city for all time.

One side commemorates the day in 1865 when Yankee troops sacked the town and burned its Confederate arsenal. The other side commemorates the day in 1965, "Bloody Sunday," when troopers and mounted deputies whipped and tear-gassed black Americans protesting the blatant scheme that denied them the ballot.

That event, and the 10 angry weeks of demonstrations leading up to it, occurred the year after Joe Smitherman took office. It fell upon him, then, to preside over what could be called Selma's second Reconstruction.

Selma, then and now, is a city of about 27,000 almost equally divided racially, about 52 percent black. But the differences between then and now are striking.

The Selma where Smitherman grew up was a cotton town ravaged by the boll weevil and the Depression. He was born in 1929, the youngest of six children of a widowed mother who died when he was 11. He was raised in a shotgun house on a dirt street in East Selma, the wrong side of the tracks, where scrawny chickens scratched around outhouses.

Back then Selma was so rigidly segregated that even the fishing ponds, side by side, were designated "colored" and "white." To Smitherman it was an unquestioned way of life, like lining up Saturdays on Water Avenue for government surplus food. Those lines, though, were for both races.

"In retrospect," said Smitherman, "especially after I took office, I knew good and well we were wrong. If I were black I would have agitated too. And if I couldn't vote I'd have been an activist probably more extreme than some who came here."

And Selma today? The mayor likes to take visitors on personal tours. What they see at first glance could serve as a model of civic progress and racial harmony in any region of America.

Side by side, blacks and whites work, live, shop, worship, vote, serve on the city council and the school board, patrol together in police cars.

Today's generation of Selma blacks take integration for granted and view Bloody Sunday as something from long ago that they learn about during Black History Month, like slavery.

And yet, not unlike cities of all sizes in every region, Selma still feels the ache of what has become a national migraine reduced to a single syllable. Race.

Black eligible voters in Selma and Dallas County now outnumber whites, barely. Under Smitherman, Selma has gerrymandered its wards so that five blacks and five whites sit on the city council. The council president, elected at-large, is currently white. Council members have an unwritten agreement that a person of the same race will be appointed to replace any one of them leaving office in midterm.

Very often in Selma, seemingly neutral issues that come before the council are resolved along racial lines. Many chalk it up to the city's heritage of confrontation. It seems to have left Selma as fragile as a house of cards, the whole town hoping nobody will bump the table.

Somehow Smitherman has managed to keep the balance, to walk the tightrope as he says, without losing control.

"Joe Smitherman is a man of great cunning," says the Rev. Fred Reese. "He knows how to manipulate the white people to accept changes that will benefit the black people - and them too, really. He knows just how far to go and still keep white support without losing black support."

Reese is the principal of Selma High School. Back in 1964 he was the head of the Dallas County Voter's League, the person who lured Martin Luther King to Selma for the voting rights crusade. He was also one of the few blacks who managed to register to vote despite the obstacles of the time. In the 1964 mayor's race he voted for Smitherman.

"Joe and I are the same age. We grew up in the same part of town in similar circumstances," said Reese. "Blacks can identify with him."

For the 30 years before Smitherman ran there hadn't been a real race for mayor. Selma's ruling gentry passed the office from one of their number to the next, like a fiefdom. The only requirement was to keep things as is.

Smitherman, then, was a brash upstart. He was a gawky young appliance salesman with a long neck and big ears and no friends at the country club. He managed to get elected to the city council, where he became a royal pain. He wanted to do

The right to a jury trial dates back to the Magna Carta, but it only works if citizens assume the responsibility of serving on a jury when called.

A bad example came to light here last week when 20 citizens were summoned for jury duty in Hereford Municipal Court and only 4 appeared at the appointed time. Sid Ham, acting as city attorney in the traffic case, reported that City Judge Tawanna Hollowell was unable to locate enough of the jury panel to get the required six jurors, so the case was dismissed.

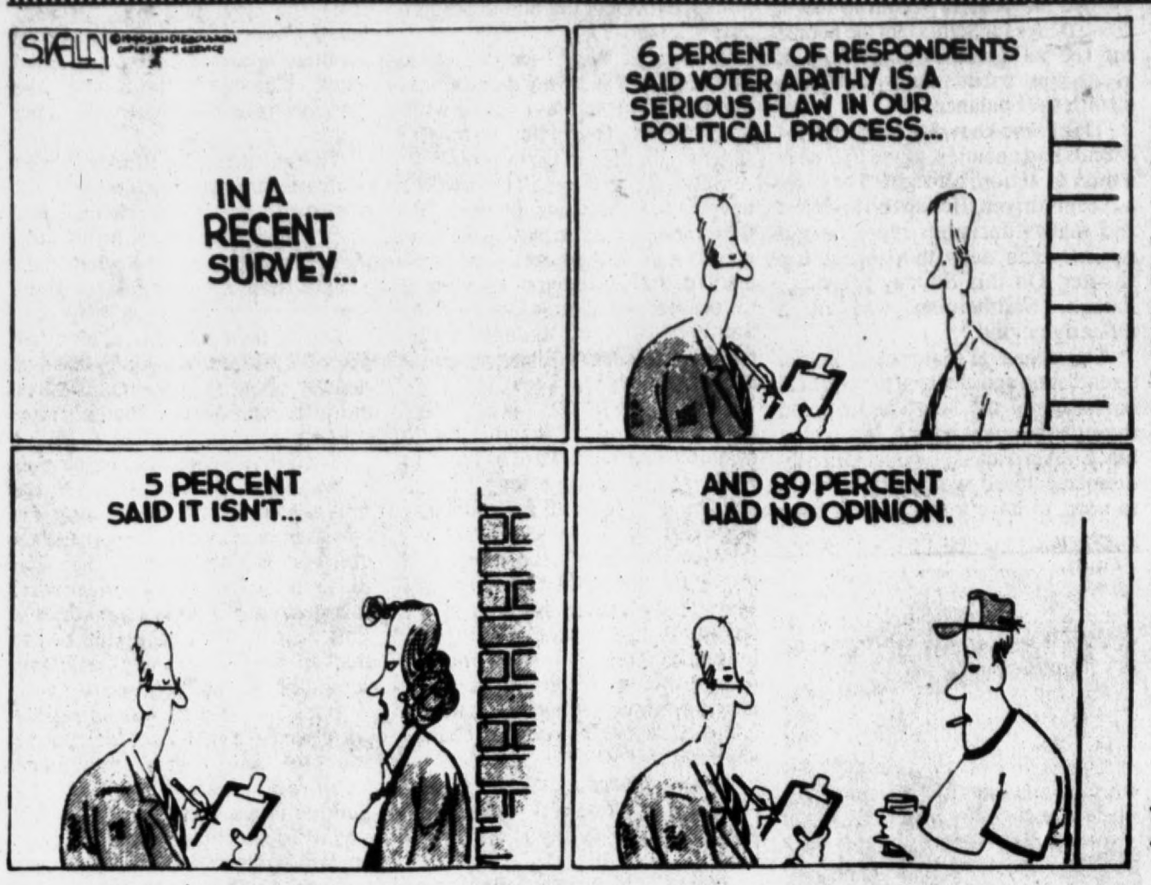

Luckily, this event was an exception rather than the norm, says Judge Hollowell. She reported that more than enough showed up when the last municipal court jury was called.

The judge explained that prospective jurors can be fined or jailed, although this is not usually done in the lower courts. She did send letters to those who failed to show, pointing out the violation of the law and reminding them of their responsibilities.

If you get a jury summons, you best report--it would be embarrassing to have a law enforcement officer come after you!

Voters at fault?

One of the oldest myths in American politics is one used by members of Congress They say that the reason this nation cannot pay off its national debt or even operate a year at a time in the black is because of us voters.

They have sold the idea that the reason for the deficit is because of the voters who want all manner of government benefits but then they don't want to pay for them.

How many letters to our Senators and Representatives from this area have asked for something requiring government money? The truth is that the people who demand benefits from Congress and get them are a well organized minority, structured to lobby well for what they want.

Voters are willing to pay for programs they deem essential. Right now, we are paying a hefty increase in federal gasoline tax with the money earmarked for repairing and improving the interstate highway system. The fact that much of this money has been siphoned into other expenditures is not the fault of the voter.

Medicare and Social Security are often cited as huge causes of government spending, but the Social Security fund takes in more than it pays out at the present time. It is not the fault of the voters that Congress keeps dipping into Social Security funds to pay for other spending programs.

It would appear that members of Congress are out of touch with the voters, but maybe not.

Since 98 percent of the incumbents are reelected to Congress, it may be that the American voters like the way things are going. It does not seem to cause much of a voter reaction to be falsely accused of causing the deficit, because we keep sending the same folks back year after year to spend more of our money than we can send them.

Farmers' woes

Thanksgiving is behind us, but it's not too late to remind folks that Texas farmers received only 2.2 cents as their share of this year's average Thanksgiving dinner.

This is the second lowest net return in the six years that the Texas Department of Agriculture has tracked holiday meal prices.

The share that the farmer gets for providing the raw material for our meals has been going steadily downward. In 1985, farmers got 7 cents per meal. That year, farmers received 26 cents of every food dollar, and now it is 24 cents.

The farmer share of the food dollar has been going downward for quite some time and the only way farmers have been able to cope with the trend is to produce more and more, which in turn brings less and less. Eventually it will come to a halt.

There is a boom these days in breakfast cereals, caused by the popularity of getting fiber in the diet to ward off colon problems as well as to provide nourishing food that is fat free. In a box of wheat cereal that costs $3.75, there is only 3 cents of wheat in it. Everybody else in the food chain makes more than the fellow who provides the wheat in the first place.

This means that the box costs nearly as much as the wheat. Those who package it, process it, transport it, stock it, sell it, all make more than the farmer who produces it. There is something wrong with this kind of system.

Every other line of business selling a product takes the raw material, applies the processing costs of labor and handling and packaging and comes up with a cost per product. A fair margin of profit is added and this becomes the selling price.

Not so with the farmer. He invests in labor, seed, fuel and fertilizer, and finally brings the crop to market. Instead of placing his product on the market at the price he has determined on the basis of costs, the farmer is forced to lay it on the open market and take whatever somebody else wants to give for it.

This applies to all phases of agriculture, from grain to livestock. In a free market, when the supply is short and the demand is high, the price goes up. But the farmer produces so much that he is always putting out more than buyers need, so they control the price.

An AP News Analysis

Deficit control: first dose, not cure

By WALTER R. MEARS
AP Special Correspondent

WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite new rules, new taxes and a new scoring system, all part of the five-year plan advertised as tough deficit control, the federal debt numbers are about to get worse, rising to record levels next year.

They're supposed to get better later.

But the deal President Bush called good medicine for the deficit problem is not a cure, only a first dose.

That leaves both sides of the bargain with some explaining to do as the budget cycle begins again next winter.

Congress and the White House both left the impression that their five-year budget agreement charts the way out of chronic deficits. It took the better part of seven months, and in the process, according to budget director Richard Darman, "the political system seems to have exhausted (even disgusted) itself with its effort."

"There is an ironic tendency to pretend that the deficit problem is over with, and that it is time to change the subject," Darman said in a speech this month. "As a result, there may be less political restraint on the generation of new ideas and initiatives."

While nobody said the problem was solved, Bush and Democratic leaders said it had been tamed. And political rhetoric obscured the fine print of red numbers to come.

"It's cut about $492 billion over five years off the deficit; that's progress," Bush said shortly before the Nov. 6 elections. "And $350 billion of that was in spending cuts ... And we did put Congress - and this is the most important part of it - on a pay-as-you-go plan."

Some of those reductions are based on a system of counting that Bush had spent part of the campaign criticizing as inside-the-beltway arithmetic, in which reductions are figured against projected levels and so serve to limit future increases, not to cut from actual past performance.

In his assessment on Nov. 16, Darman said the five-year deal was a fair one, with "the toughest enforcement system ever" on federal spending. But he also said:

"The deficit will, in any case, rise to record levels before turning down."

Darman estimated the deficit for the current budget year will be between $250 and $300 billion when the books are closed next Sept. 30. For the year just ended, the deficit was $220.4 billion, just short of the record high of 1986.

There will be new, almost certainly higher deficit projections in the budget Bush is to send to Congress by Feb. 4.

The new budget deal eliminates the system of annual deficit targets that were supposed to be enforced by automatic, across-the-board spending cuts. The targets are adjustable now, depending on circumstances. For the current budget year and the two to follow, the new process sets limits in three categories: domestic, defense and foreign aid. When spending exceeds the ceiling, automatic spending cuts would be triggered on all the programs in that category.

That strengthens the administration hand in enforcing spending restraints because the Office of Management and Budget will be keeping score, and thus deciding when automatic cuts are warranted.

The new law also requires pay-as-you-go measures to offset any tax reductions or increased entitlement spending programs.

It is an intricate process that comes with no guarantees.

"With legally binding spending caps and the new pay-as-you-go system, we may be able to break free, somewhat, from the consume now, promise to pay later approach," Darman said, hedging his forecast.

It sounded simpler and surer in the shorthand of the campaign.

"Most Americans are sick and tired of endless battles in the Congress and between the branches over budget matters," Bush said before the final deal was fashioned. "It is high time we pulled together and got the job done right."

Editorials from around the state

Nov. 22

Port Arthur News on anti-drug driving law:

A new federal law that requires states to suspend the driver's license of all convicted drug offenders is getting a cool response from state officials and local law enforcement officers.

They say the law sounds like a good idea but might be more trouble than it is worth.

As part of the 1991 transportation appropriations bill, the law calls for withholding 5 percent of federal highway funds from states that fail to place a six-month driver's license suspension on any person convicted of a drug offense.

The penalty goes into effect Oc. 1, 1993, and increases to 10 percent in 1995.

Texas receives about $850 million a year in federal highway funds. Failure to comply with the suspension law could cost the state $43 million a year by 1994 and double that amount after two years ...

Texas convicts several thousand drug offenders every year. Keeping up with thousands more driver's license suspensions would be an unwelcome task and law enforcement officials say six-month suspensions will be useless against hardened, professional drug traffickers.

But the law could be a deterrent to recreational drug users - the otherwise law-abiding citizens who provide drug dealers with the bulk of their prosperity.

Targeting this group of "respectable" drug users makes the law worth a try in Texas.

Dallas Times Herald on S&L debacle:

Now comes the United States House of Representatives Government Operations Committee to give us the explanation for the greatest destruction of private assets and the worst incursion on the credit of the national government in this country since the Civil War:

What went wrong in the savings and loan debacle, a committee report tells us ..., is that the Justice Department spent too much money on travel back and forth between Washington and Dallas rather than setting up a special office in Dallas to seek S&L criminal indictments. The United States House of Representatives proposes to fix the problem by severely curtailing the Justice Department's Washington-to-Dallas travel funds.

(W)e are forced by the sheer magnitude of the problem - a serious threat to the entire banking system of the nation - to question the appropriateness of the committee's focus on airplane tickets. There is the distinct possibility in all this, after all, that there may have been relatively few criminal indictments in the S&L and banking crisis because it was almost impossible to break the laws the Congress had passed.

The nation will have a far more serious problem than the plane tickets, after all, if it turns out the problem in all this is the law itself. ...

We hope the committee is not merely seeking to deflect attention from the Congress by ferreting out expense account problems in the bureaucracy. This would be a very poor time for the Congress to toy with the public patience.

Nov. 26

Fort Worth Star-Telegram on state lottery:

Among the dozens of bills that have been prefiled for consideration when the 72nd Legislature convenes in January is one that would place before voters a constitutional amendment establishing a state lottery.

So far, so good. Lotteries have proved to be a popular source of revenue in several other states, and voters should be granted the right to decide for themselves is they want one in Texas.

But the bill, filed by Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, would dedicate the money raised through a lottery to education, and we have some serious problems with that. ...

Regardless of what Wilson may say, it is impossible to predict, with any degree of certainty, that a lottery would raise $1 billion - or any other amount - over a two-year period. Economic fluctuations are such that guarantees of that nature are worthless. ...

But there is still another problem with Wilson's proposal. ...

Dedicating lottery revenue to the schools, as Wilson wants to do, would relieve lawmakers of much of the pressure that must be maintained to ensure that they do the right thing by the schools. ...

Gov.-elect Ann Richards, while favoring a lottery, has said repeatedly that she does not want lottery proceeds earmarked for education because they are an unstable revenue source. Instead, she would have such money flow into the general fund for use where needed, including the schools.

Hers is a better idea than Wilson's, and the Legislature should follow her lead when the measure comes up for debate.

Nov. 26

San Antonio Light on democracy in Mexico:

Democracy can be awfully inconvenient sometimes.

Mexican President Carlos Salinas de Gortari is doing such a great job of modernizing his nation's economy that many Americans prefer not to dwell on his lack of progress toward modernizing its political system. ...

Unfortunately, at this point he is probably more popular in Washington than in Mexico City. His stock among Mexican voters has risen considerably since his narrow 1988 election victory, but it seems suspicious that his Institutional Revolutionary Party - the PRI - so completely dominated the recent congressional and municipal elections.

Salinas himself is thought to be genuinely interested in abandoning the PRI's long tradition of stuffing ballot boxes and intimidating opposition supporters. But he must deal with an entrenched party machinery that has little reason to welcome the advent of true democracy. ...

As Mexico and the United States negotiate a free-trade agreement that would hasten the modernization of the Mexican economy, Salinas' American admirers must apply subtle but steady pressure, insisting that political reforms are part of the equation. In the short run, a more democratic Mexico could be harder to modernize. But a Mexico that is not democratic can never truly be modern.

Grady store provides more than groceries

GRADY, N.M. (AP) - Four giggling children run into Grady's only store as a string of bells hanging from the door continues to jingle seconds after the heavy door slams shut.

The wide-eyed children scan the selection of chocolates, gum and other goodies behind a tall glass counter with a wooden top.

Bob Sherwood, with a smile so big that his puffy cheeks nearly meet his eyebrows, leans over and hands each of the children a stick of red licorice, free.

"Thank you," they chorus softly, inhaling the candy.

Sherwood Grocery feels like the country store of television's "Little House on the Prairie."

But Sherwood, wearing overalls, an old baseball cap and a gold-stud earring, is no actor. This is life in the 1990s in rural eastern New Mexico.

It's also a scene that couldn't have taken place 10 months ago in this town of 150 people.

Sherwood Grocery, located on the half-mile strip of New Mexico 209 that makes up downtown Grady, is the first grocery store to operate in Grady since a fire destroyed Wood's Grocery about three years ago.

Sherwood, a farmer and first-time store owner, says he did a bit of marketing research before he decided to make the $895 investment to open the store.

"I called about 10 people and they said, 'Yeah, I'll buy milk from you,'" says Sherwood, who now sells about 25 gallons a week.

Sherwood, 47, and his wife, Pat, decided to open the store after Grady residents failed last year to get a grocery co-op going. The project was abandoned when investments totaled only $5,000 of the $75,000 needed.

A friend of Sherwood's leased him the building, once a gas station. Rent is "dirt cheap" and most of his expenses were for operating licenses and stock, he says.

> "I hate for somebody to tell me something's not going to work when I'm trying to make it work. Now, I'm working just to prove them wrong."

"The old guy gave me a good deal on it," he says of the beige cinder block building, which has a wooden sign on it that reads "This & That" underneath the store's name.

After the Wood's fire, Grady residents had to drive nearly 40 miles south to Clovis for groceries or settle for the convenience store in Broadview, five miles east.

Some residents weren't always willing to make the drive on the two-lane Clovis road for a half-gallon of milk or loaf of bread.

"We just did without," says Tresa Pond, a Grady native and mother of three of the children who hurried into the store for candy.

"It takes too long to drive to Clovis, so it's nice to have the store here," she says.

Sherwood's amply stocked grocery store also doubles as a town meeting place where Grady residents stop to rest their feet, catch up on the latest news or seek shelter from the weather.

"When it's bad, the farmers all come in and drink some coffee and sit around and shoot the bull," says Sherwood.

It gets crowded if more than a half-dozen people congregate at once.

"We want to expand," Sherwood says, pointing to a wall he'd like to tear down. That would nearly double the store's size and accommodate more merchandise - and people.

"You've got to have a dominoes table in here and a big coffee pot," he says.

The coffee's always on at the store, which has large front windows and a bare, unpainted concrete floor. Items that must be kept cold are stored in three old borrowed refrigerators. Most of the signs are handwritten.

Sherwood, who buys his merchandise in Clovis and Amarillo, Texas, says that after nine months in business, the store is paying its own way.

But he says it has been tough, especially getting operating permits and figuring out taxes.

"It's harder than I thought it would be," he says.

A robbery in the early morning hours of Nov. 25 didn't help, but Sherwood says it won't put him out of business. Local residents donated money after the break-in, in which someone took soda pop, chips, sandwiches and cigarettes.

"We're still open," Sherwood says. "We had some people donate some stuff, which will sure help."

He uses a calculator to figure customers' bills and says he often extends them a bit of credit if they need it.

But Sherwood realizes most Grady residents do the bulk of their shopping in Clovis and Amarillo and that he'll likely never make a fortune.

He has to charge slightly higher prices to break even. A gallon of milk goes for $3.25; a dozen eggs are $1.30.

"We have to mark it up so much. We can't compete with Clovis because they (merchants) can buy truckloads of stuff," he says. "It would take us months to sell a truckload. A big store just won't go."

Sherwood says he ran into some critics who insisted Grady couldn't support a store, but he didn't let that stop him.

SELMA

city business in the open, for example, instead of the back room. Brash.

He ran for mayor pledging to represent "all the people, not the favored few," and his campaign flyers underlined the word "all."

The civil rights demonstrations behind him, Smitherman became the busiest man in town. He pushed through a penny sales tax and did things people could see and touch - paved and lighted streets, new garbage trucks, fire engines, sewer lines.

He became an expert at wheedling money out of Washington, money the old guard shunned as "tainted," inviting federal interference.

"Only thing tainted about it," Smitherman told them, "is t'aint enough of it."

And more visible and touchable things appeared, each new project overlapping the last, new libraries, new city hall, new housing projects, schools, museums, fountains, trees and flowers and parks.

Train crossings were a hazard. He stopped a 180-car freight with a police car and ticketed the conductor for blocking streets. The railroad rescheduled.

He refused to pay the city's electric bill until the power company explained its "pass-on charges" so the people could know what they were paying for.

When Ku Klux Klansmen showed up on the city hall steps he called them "white trash" and ran them out of town. Blacks applauded. He padlocked the anti-poverty office because only 5 percent of the paid employees were white. Not enough. Whites applauded.

At the 20th anniversary observance of Bloody Sunday, Smitherman went to the pulpit of Brown Chapel, where Martin Luther King had preached, and said, "My hands are as dirty as the others. We were wrong. I'm sorry." He shared a hymnal with Jesse Jackson and sang "We Shall Overcome."

"I suppose I've been the most visible person in the state short of the governor," Smitherman said, "and a lot of people expected me to run for higher office.

"When I was younger I gave some thought to it but after a few terms I discovered it's hard for mayors to do that.

"Also, you need what I call the Big Mules, the money boys who finance your campaign and don't let you forget where you got the money. I've shifted around so much politically, backing Democrats, Republicans, whatever, that the Big Mules who know me could never be sure if I'd stay hitched.

WHO'S MAKING SURE YOU'RE INSURED?

Probably nobody. If you're a woman, the odds are you're under-insured. But think how vital your role is. How much your family needs you. How you always take care of them. And what would happen if you weren't there. Then call me.

Herd drops opener to Canyon; Lady Whitefaces top C'rock

By SAM WALLER
Sports Editor

The Hereford Whitefaces opened the 1990-91 basketball season Friday with a 69-54 loss to Canyon High.

Herd coach Jimmy Thomas said lack of court time for the Herd at the start of the season was the difference in the contest.

"I definitely feel that them having all of their players in the gym all year," Thomas said, "and working together since September against our guys' having had only four days of practice made the difference. I really think if we played them on even terms it would be a much different game. We might not win, but we would certainly make it closer."

Hereford opened up a 5-0 lead in the game on baskets by Leo Brown and Andrew Tijerina with Tijerina converting a three-point opportunity after being fouled. The Eagles came back with a 9-2 run to take the lead, but Richard Sanderson scored the next five points as the Herd ended the first period with a 12-9 lead.

Canyon High moved ahead for good with a 15-2 run over the first four minutes of the second quarter that included three three-pointers as the Eagles began hitting from outside. Canyon High led by as much as 10 at 24-14 before the Whitefaces clawed back to within seven to trail 30-23 at the half.

The Eagles used another big run, 20-9 behind Chad Welty's 10 points, to start the third quarter and took their biggest lead of the game at 50-32. Hereford once again chipped away at the lead and closed to within 10 at 54-44 with a 9-2 run to open the final period.

That was as close as the Herd would get, however, as the Eagles began pressing and forced turnovers resulting in three straight layups for a 60-44 advantage. Hereford was never closer than 12 points the rest of the way.

Tijerina finished with 16 points to pace the Herd with Sanderson getting 14 and Brown 12 despite having a tooth knocked out during a second-half scramble for a loose ball. Blake Buckley added seven points off the bench while Chris Steward had five. Si Bosley led all scorers with 25 points for the Eagles and Welty posted 17 before fouling out.

Thomas said there were several bright spots in the Herd's performance despite the outcome.

"I was really pleased with our rebounding," he said. "We really got after them under the boards and that's one thing that kept us as close as we were.

On its way

Blake Buckley of the Hereford Whitefaces lets fly with a jumper from the corner as Canyon High's Si Bosley gets there too late to block the shot during Friday's season opener with the Eagles at Whiteface Gymnasium.

"We had a little trouble with our shooting, but we got a lot of second chances with the rebounds. Our shots just weren't falling and theirs were. That was the difference in the game."

In other games, the Lady Whitefaces knocked off Amarillo Caprock 51-46 in the Canyon Classic to advance to the consolation finals of the tournament, the Herd junior varsity drooped a 67-60 decision to Canyon High in a prelude to the varsity game and the Lady Whiteface JV lost to Hartley 33-27 in the Vega Invitational Tournament.

Lady Whitefaces 51, C'rock 46

The Lady Whitefaces used an 18-2 edge in the third quarter to overcome a 27-21 halftime deficit and snap a three-game losing streak.

"That (third quarter) was the turning point in the game without a doubt," Lady Whiteface coach Dickie Faught said. "It was good for us to be able to come out and have a quarter like that because we really haven't played well in the second half the last few ballgames."

Caprock edged out to a 13-8 lead at the end of the first quarter before Hereford played nearly even with the Lady Longhorns, being outscored 14-13.

After getting the lead in the third quarter, the Lady Whitefaces had to hold off a Caprock rally the entire fourth period as a 10-point lead shrank to two before Hereford sealed the win.

Jennifer Bullard and Shantel Cornelius shared high-point honors with Caprock's Shannon Dunavin with all three players finishing with 14 points. Brek Binder added nine points for the Herd with freshman Misty Dudley getting a career-high

Black Cats stay alive in 4A

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Associated Press Writer

Bay City's hopes of a Class 4A state championship remain alive, thanks to some last-gasp heroics from a would-be goat - quarterback Albert Hall - and Edwin Knowles, a track star who showed he has good hands, too.

The No. 2-ranked Black Cats (13-0) beat Crosby 21-19 on Hall's 25-yard touchdown pass to Knowles, the state 100-meters champion last spring as a sophomore, with just 1:36 left in Friday night's game in the Astrodome.

To beat Crosby, Bay City had to overcome a nightmarish second half in which the Black Cats suffered five turnovers, including two interceptions off Hall by Crosby's Jason Hudson.

In other high school football playoff action Friday, defending Class 2A champion Groveton stretched its winning streak to 29 games by beating previously undefeated Grand Saline, 35-6.

Groveton's Rodney Thomas, the state's leading rusher with 2,932 yards, rushed for 166 yards and scored three times, including a 60-yard kickoff return that followed a safety. Groveton tied the 2A record for consecutive victories set in the early 1960s by Albany.

No. 2-ranked Pilot Point (13-0) kept pace with a wild 28-21 victory over Clifton, behind touchdowns of 18, 1, 68 and 19 yards by Richard Anderson. No. 3-ranked Schulenburg rolled on in the 2A playoffs via a 27-17 victory over Yorktown.

Schulenburg trailed 10-6 late in the first half, but got good field position from a kickoff return and two interceptions for three touchdowns and a 27-10 lead in the third quarter.

Southlake Carroll, Connally and Crockett all improved their records to 13-0 in Class 3A. No. 2-ranked Southlake Carroll routed Gilmer, 42-0, but Connally and Crockett both came from behind.

Connally scored two touchdowns in the final 13 minutes to beat Hamshire-Fannett 30-29, and the fifth-ranked Crockett Bulldogs gave coach Monte Driskell his 275th victory by coming from behind to beat Newton 17-7.

Two other 3A teams with perfect records, No. 1-ranked Vernon and No. 6-ranked Childress, were in Saturday night games - Vernon against Abilene Wylie and Childress against Sonora.

Munday, ranked No. 1 in Class A, destroyed Fort Davis, 48-2, but No. 2-ranked Italy and No. 3-ranked Farwell were bounced out of the ranks of the unbeaten and out of the playoffs.

Italy was obliterated by unranked but also unbeaten Oakwood, 38-8, while Farwell, whose top two running backs were sidelined with injuries, was beaten, 17-14, by Rankin.

Farwell's Shawn Stewart, who rushed for 1,473 yards and 32 touchdowns during the season, was bothered by a pulled leg muscle and played only briefly. Monty Delgado, the Steers' second-leading rusher, went out in the first half with a sprained knee and never returned. Stewart and Delgado combined for 11 yards rushing on three carries.

Valley Mills (12-0), ranked No. 7, also stayed alive in the Class A playoffs, shutting out Eden 24-0. Defending Class A champion Thorndale tied Ben Bolt, 22-22, but Ben Bolt advanced on a 4-3 edge in penetrations. No. 8-ranked Bartlett beat Flatonia, 37-0.

In Class 4A, fifth-ranked Austin Reagan lost for the first time, dropping a 27-7 verdict to Calallen.

Reagan's loss left only Bay City and No. 1-ranked A&M Consolidated with perfect records in 4A. A&M Consolidated played Willis Saturday afternoon in the Astrodome for the right to play Bay City next week in the state quarterfinals.

Crosby turned its two interceptions against Hall into third-quarter touchdowns for a 19-14 lead over Bay City, and with only 4:55 left in the game, they were marching again. Crosby had the ball on the Bay City 10, and Crosby quarterback Jeff Green fired a pass toward the end zone.

Bay City defensive back Romale Green intercepted at the 2 and dashed to the 35, giving the Black Cats what it appeared would be one final shot at putting together a winning drive.

Imagine the dismay of Bay City fans when Hall was intercepted again on the very next play. Crosby's Ray Carter grabbed the interception, but before Crosby fans could celebrate, he fumbled into a swarm of Black Cats at the Bay City 30 at the end of the return.

"I told the guys, 'If you want a state championship, this is it,'" Bay City coach Jim Walker recalled after the game.

This time, Hall took Bay City 70 yards in eight plays, including passes of 29 and 16 yards before hurling a 25-yard touchdown pass to Knowles. The game-winning catch was Knowles' sixth reception of the night. He finished with 137 yards in catches, including a 57-yard bomb from Hall for a 14-7 Bay City lead with 34 seconds left in the first half.

Buffs get last chance

CANYON, Texas (AP) - West Texas State officials say the school's football program will be dropped if more than $300,000 is not raised by Jan. 10.

University President Ed Roach said Friday in a news release that the school would continue as an NCAA Division II school, offering scholarships in volleyball, basketball and tennis, but will drop football if the school cannot raise $362,511.

Roach said soccer would replace football if the money is not found.

Texas A&M University chancellor Perry Adkisson put off a final decision on whether to keep football at West Texas State until Jan. 10.

West Texas, which is in the Texas A&M University system, is a member of the Lone Star Conference.

"We are hopeful that the money will be raised and that WTSU will be able to maintain a competitive Division II football program," Roach said in a press release. "If the money is not raised, however, we will submit a formal request to the Lone Star Conference to grant us a three-year waiver to continue its conference affiliation without football."

If the conference denies the request, Roach said, the school's remaining teams would compete as Division II independents.

"This is tough to swallow," WT athletic director and head football coach Steve Graf said, "but this decision is based on a proposal submitted by the coaching staff, and I believe that if football is to be competitive at the Division II level, we have got to come up with the $362,511. I appreciate the fact that we have a reprieve until Jan. 10."

Athletic Booster Dean Kelley said the possibility of losing football had a bright side.

"All of us are sad at the possibility of losing football, but we have to face reality," Kelley said. "We have nationally strong programs in other sports that have to be considered. Basically it boils down to the fact we can either accentuate our weaknesses, or build on the strengths. We have chosen to build on the strengths.

"There is still an outside chance enough money will be raised to keep football."

HERD HOOPS

seven, D'Ann Hill five and Lori Sanders two.

The win advanced the Lady Whitefaces (5-5) into Saturday's consolation finals against Lubbock Monterey.

Canyon High 67, Herd JV 60

Canyon led by as many as 10 points three different times in the first half, but the Herd managed to close the gap every time.

After taking a 27-17 first quarter lead as Richard Lowery connected on four three-pointers, the Eagles allowed the Herd to get as close as three points with just more than a minute to go in the half. Hereford had the ball and a chance to tie, but Canyon forced a turnover and went on to score the last five points of the half for a 36-28 advantage.

Canyon cranked up from outside again after the intermission and built its lead to 12 points, the largest margin of the game, and appeared to have the game well in hand. But Hereford went on a 9-0 run into the final period and eventually tied the game at 51-51.

The Eagles were able to add just enough scoring from the floor to go with a seven-for-12 free-throw shooting performance to hold the Herd off down the stretch. Hereford scored 15 points from the field in the final eight minutes, but made only two of six from the line after having connected on six of seven in the first three quarters.

Four players finished in double figures for the Herd, led by Chad Sandoval with 16 while Derek Mason had 13, Jason Paetzold 12 and Mark Kriegshauser 10. Clay Wallace added five and Kevin Kelso four.

Lowery finish with 28 points in the contest to lead all scorers.

Hartley 33, Lady Whiteface JV 27

Hereford got going in the second with a 12-7 advantage in the period for a 16-12 halftime margin.

The Lady Whitefaces maintained the edge through the third stanza by outscoring Hartley 8-6.

Hartley came alive in the final period to outscore the Herd 15-7 and put away the win.

Hereford was led by Lindsay Radford with 7 points with Amber Griffith and Jill Robinson scoring six each, Kathy Hernandez and Kara Sandoval three apiece and Joanna Redelsperger two points.

Get that outta here!

Cowboys ready to renew acquaintance with New Orleans quarterback Walsh

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) - The Dallas Cowboys have homecoming plans for Steve Walsh. It's called a Texas necktie party.

The Cowboys traded Walsh to the New Orleans Saints and they are afraid his knowledge of family secrets could hurt them on Sunday at 3 p.m. in Texas Stadium. The game has been sold out for weeks in anticipation of the duel between Walsh and Troy Aikman.

Walsh admits he will try to use his inside information to the good of the Saints.

"I have an advantage in that I know their personnel," Walsh said. "Also, I'll be helping out with our techniques in practice."

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson, who traded Walsh although he won a national collegiate championship for him at Miami, said, "It does concern us that Steve knows as much about our defense as anybody. We ran the same defense four years at Miami and he's practiced against it this year. We're going to change our signals."

Wildcard playoff hopes are at stake in the game. Dallas is 5-7 and the Saints are 5-6. Another loss would just about eliminate one of them.

Walsh was a first-round pick in the supplemental draft although Dallas had taken Aikman in the first round of the regular draft.

Walsh said he wished the game wasn't billed as Aikman vs. Walsh.

"It's not just me versus him, you don't play against the other quarterback," Walsh said. "If he has a good game and scores then it's my job to come back and score. He either has to match me or I have to match him. But the rest of it is blown out of proportion.

"We were competing and wanted to be starting quarterback. Troy has tight personality. I open up. We were different. But our relationship ended up pretty good."

"I've got a lot of strong feels for Steve because I was his coach a long time and I have a lot of respect for him," Johnson said. "But he's just another quarterback on another team the way I look at it."

Walsh has a better ledger book than Aikman.

In seven games, Walsh has completed 116 of 197 passes for 1,295 yards. He has thrown nine touchdown passes and interceptions.

Aikman has hit 199 of 359 passes for 2,238 yards but has 17 interceptions to 9 touchdown passes.

But he doesn't have as much zip on the ball as in the past.

"I'm not throwing the ball as deep as I used to," Aikman said recently on his radio show. "I'm going in after the season to get some bone chips cleaned up."

The Cowboys are 16-6 in games played after Thanksgiving.

Pardee works to change Oilers' image

An AP Sports Analysis
By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

HOUSTON (AP) - The House of Pain. Jerry Glanville loved that image of the Astrodome.

He wore black and encouraged his players to inflict black and blue bruises on the opponents. They led the NFL in senseless penalties and acted proud of it.

The Houston Oilers annually placed the most players on the NFL's All-Macho defense. They also led the NFL in games lost through pure late-hit stupidity.

Now the House of Pain is the House of Gain.

Jack Pardee is class under the glass and he wants his players to act that way for their own self esteem. Also, fewer roughing penalties have helped the Oilers stay on the plus .500 side of the won-loss column.

Pardee and offensive coordinator Kevin Gilbride are involved in a noble experiment with the Oilers.

Houston and the Detroit Lions are the only two NFL teams operating the Run-And-Shoot offense which doesn't have any tight ends and sends out at least four receivers on most downs.

After a sputtering start, the Oilers are starting to click with the offense that has drawn scoffs from some NFL coaches.

For example, when Buffalo played pass by dropping back six defenders on Monday night the Oilers countered with The Run part of the offense as Lorenzo White rushed for a career high 125 yards.

White averaged seven yards a carry and he had a 22-yard run, longest of the season for an Oiler running back, in the important 27-24 victory over the Bills and Jim Kelly.

White also showed another side of the offense. He caught five passes for 89 yards. This is another damaging aspect of the run-shoot. When the wide receivers clear the defensive backs out, the running back can slip under the coverage.

"We are starting to hit the big plays when we have to and the way we are running the ball I can be selective with my passes," said Houston quarterback Warren Moon.

Moon is having his finest season. He's had eight 300-yard games, including four in a row, one short of Joe Montana's NFL record.

NFL coaches are confused which way is best to attack the Run-And-Shoot Offense.

"You have to stop the passing game first, and the running game second," said Buffalo coach Marv Levy.

Well, that didn't work.

Most NFL coaches believe the Run-And-Shoot is just a passing fancy that will quickly be destroyed by adjusting defenses.

Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson said, "What helps the Run-And-Shoot is the guy (Moon) they have running it and all those first round draft picks in the offensive line. You can run any offense and do well with those people."

There's also other problems with the Run-And-Shoot. It gobbles up ground between the 20s, but doesn't produce many touchdowns in the confining "Red Zone" where receivers have limited freedom for their moves. This has been a big problem for the Oilers.

The true test for Houston will come when they have to trot out the Run-and-Shoot in cold weather.

Should the Oilers win a wild card, they'll have an advantage against any team that's seeing the offense for the first time.

However, if it's 20 degrees and the wind is blowing 30 miles an hour, the Oilers might wish they were in a Split T.

The Oilers have at least proved they are more dangerous now that they've figured out how to get production out of the Run in the Run-And-Shoot.

GATT talk failure could launch subsidies battle

WASHINGTON (AP) - If the European Community doesn't negotiate realistically next week at the closing rounds of global trade talks, it will virtually launch an export subsidy war, warns a USDA official.

Deputy Agriculture Secretary Jack C. Parnell said the bargaining nations scheduled to meet in Brussels are "looking at the final moments in the negotiations" on liberalizing global agricultural trade.

The 12-nation EC has long been at odds with the United States and other countries that are calling for reducing not only export subsidies but internal farm supports that distort trade.

The so-called Uruguay Round of negotiations has been going on for four years under the auspices of the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

"If the Europeans can't come to the GATT negotiating table in good faith, and discuss concrete reductions in agricultural subsidies and the real, measurable lowering of tariff walls, then they are making the initial unfriendly moves of a subsidy war," Parnell said Thursday.

"There is little doubt that the United States will retaliate, using every tool available to us, in order to maintain our market share," he said.

Parnell also told the concluding session of the department's annual outlook conference that U.S. farmers could face even greater trade competition.

"Eastern Europe has been liberalized and we've all rejoiced," he said. "But suppose the rest of Europe seduces these countries into joining its common agricultural policy?"

Parnell said that would mean the former East Germany, Poland, Hungary, Czechoslovakia, Bulgaria and Romania all would be joining the existing bloc.

"Can you imagine an 18-member common agricultural policy? American farmers have many good reasons to support a GATT agreement, not the least of which is holding onto their own financial prosperity," he said.

Parnell said there is "a great sense of urgency" surrounding the successful completion of the Uruguay Round of talks. There is intense competition and "the high-risk path for U.S. agriculture in today's world is to do nothing."

The past performance of GATT shows that the process does work, he said. Tariffs on manufactured goods were reduced from 40 percent in the mid-1960s to less than 6 percent now.

But at the same time, the rate of protection on agricultural goods has risen to 40 percent from 21 percent, Parnell said.

Besides world trade, Parnell said environmental issues such as food safety, wetlands, water quality and land use are other problems facing agriculture. Government spending, budget deficits and interest rates are others.

Decisions will be made in the next 10 years "to balance this very fragile equation between the environment and our standard of living," he said.

School burgers will be leaner

WASHINGTON (AP) - A plan by the Agriculture Department to reduce the fat content of some hamburger served in school cafeterias will take effect on a trial basis this winter.

Daniel D. Haley, administrator of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service, said Tuesday that the current fat content of beef patties served in school lunch programs averages 20 percent to 22 percent.

Federal regulations, by comparison, allow ground beef sold in supermarkets to be as high as 30 percent fat.

But Haley said that under the trial program the agency will buy ground beef patties having a fat content as low as 10 percent. Distribution to schools would begin by Feb. 11, 1991.

Under the school lunch program, USDA buys a wide variety of foods for donation to cafeterias.

The department said in June that it planned to buy bulk ground beef this school year with a maximum of 22 percent fat and that a pilot program for beef patties with 10 percent fat was in the works. Previously, the fat limit was 24 percent.

Agency spokesman George L. Clarke said the low-fat patties scheduled for trial distribution this winter would contain vegetable material, including soy protein and seaweed.

The vegetable filler is supposed to help ground beef retain the texture, flavor and juiciness of a patty having a higher fat content.

Some consumer groups have urged for years that USDA reduce the fat content of hamburger and other foods donated to schools so that children get less of their total calories from fat.

Public Voice for Food and Health Policy said last month that the total fat content of school lunches should be reduced to no more than 30 percent of the total calories consumed. Yet, it said, the average school lunch provides for 39 percent fat.

The group said healthful, nutritious diets developed in childhood reduce the risk of heart disease and cancer later in life.

Kenaf could be good forage

WASHINGTON (AP) - An Agriculture Department scientist says kenaf, a fast-growing plant that already has potential as a wood pulp substitute, could also be a good livestock forage crop.

Charles L. Webber III of the department's Agricultural Research Service said kenaf, a bamboo-like relative of cotton and okra, would be grown throughout the South and Southwest.

A plant to produce newsprint from kenaf is under construction near Raymondville, Texas.

Webber said kenaf's value as a feed would give farmers another good reason to grow it. For one thing, he said, kenaf is an annual, which presents fewer problems than with crops such as alfalfa that must be planted each year.

"And kenaf can be grown under a much wider range of conditions than can alfalfa - all over the South and Southwest," he said. "It can tolerate more acid and poorer soils than alfalfa as well."

Webber, an agronomist who works at the USDA agency's South Central Agricultural Research Laboratory in Lane, Okla., reported on kenaf last week in Riverside, Calif., at an international conference on industrial crops and products.

Some of his remarks and findings also were released here by the agency.

Although kenaf can be used to make silage, Webber said its best potential could be as a less-expensive supplement in alfalfa-based pellet feeds.

"Some businessmen have told me they expect to produce alfalfa-kenaf feed pellets that will have the high protein values of normal alfalfa pellets but at about 75 percent of the price," he said.

Kenaf reaches a peak as a feed crop in 90 days after planting, according to Webber's research.

"Before 90 days, the yields are not that high," he said. "But there's no advantage after 90 days because the plant begins to get woody."

Kenaf yields run as high as 3.1 tons per acre, dried weight, at 90 days of growth, with "a minimal input of fertilizer and pesticides," Webber said. "With a 90-day harvest date, it may even be possible for growers to get two cuttings a year."

Trade watchers are wary

WASHINGTON (AP) - Trade watchers in the Agriculture Department are straining to see what other countries are doing that could affect the prices American farmers get for wheat, corn and other commodities.

In other words, competition is the name of the game, and practically every foreign grain exporter is swinging away.

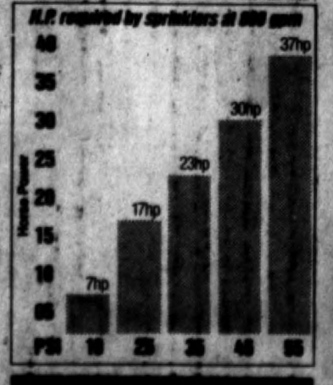

For example, a report by the department's Foreign Agricultural Service included an article about the Canadian Wheat Board and its guaranteed price to farmers in today's competitive world market.

"With the recent precipitous decline in world wheat prices, attention is drawn to the role of export monopolies, such as the Canadian Wheat Board, and the extent to which guaranteed price levels to producers may have been overestimated, possibly requiring government treasuries to cover resulting losses," the report said.

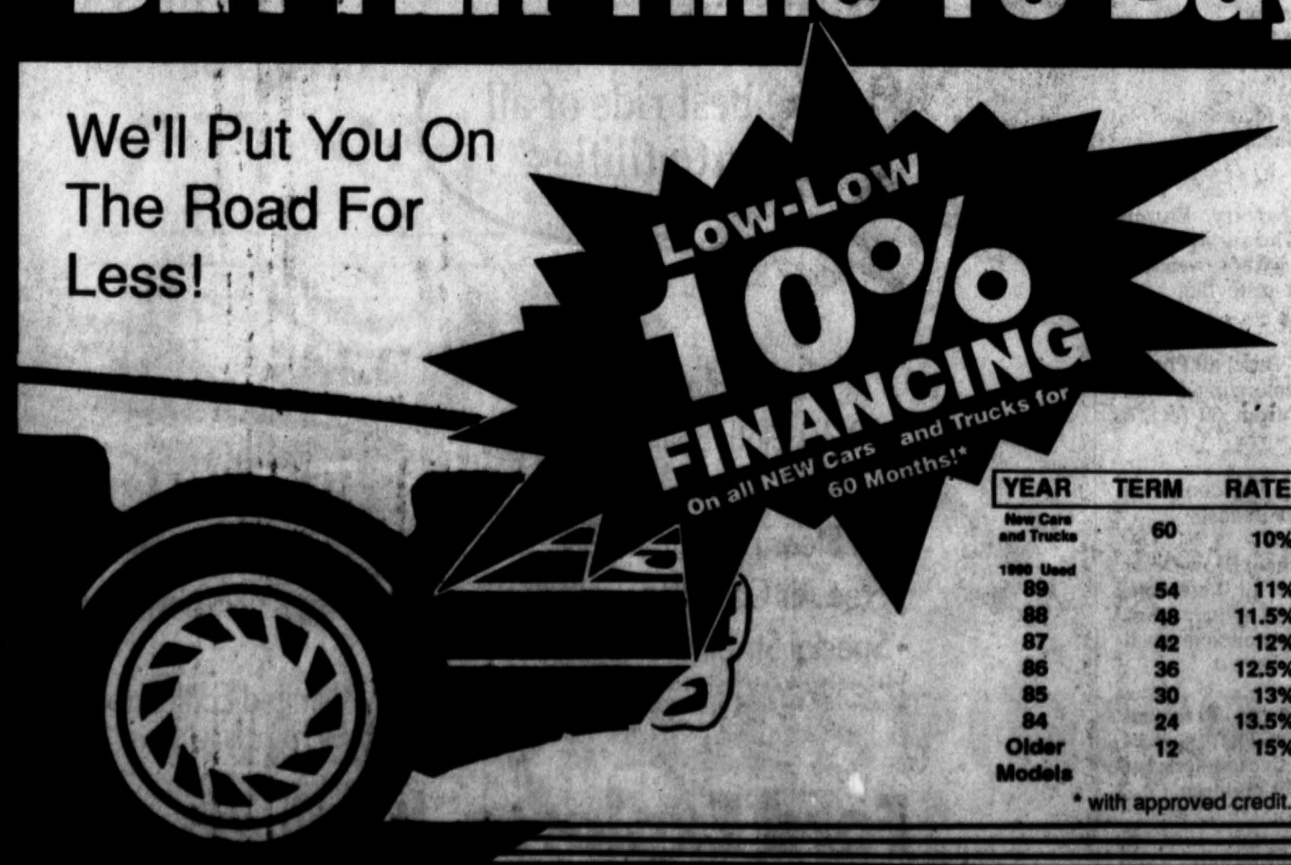

In many international markets, Canadian wheat must compete with prices established by subsidized wheat from the European Community.

Yeutter urges awareness of European trade

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Soviet Union buys a lot of U.S. grain, but Agriculture Secretary Clayton Yeutter says policies of the European Community also have had a major effect on the incomes of American farmers.

Yeutter said Tuesday that Russia is a huge and valued customer of the United States and could become even more valuable in the 1990s.

But Yeutter said that "what has happened in the last decade outside the Soviet Union has had a greater impact - a far greater impact - on farm income here in the United States, and we need to understand that."

Simply in terms of grain programs, he said, EC policies have resulted in the shifting of 50 million metric tons of grain in international trade.

"A decade or so ago the European Community was an importer of between 20 and 30 million tons of grain per year," Yeutter said. "Now the community is an exporter of between 20 and 30 million tons of grain per year."

Yeutter said this shifting has happened because of "distortive practices" followed by the EC in its farm policy structure. And that has meant tougher times for American farmers in international markets.

Next week world trade negotiators will reconvene in Brussels in hopes of concluding the Uruguay Round of talks aimed at reforming global trading rules under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Agriculture has been an obstacle in the talks, and Yeutter is pessimistic about reaching an agreement.

Yeutter and U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills recently visited European leaders to urge compromises on agricultural issues confronting Uruguay Round negotiators.

"I came back very pessimistic about the outlook, and I'm still pessimistic," Yeutter said. "It seems to me the position of the European Community is so far from that of, essentially, the rest of the world that I see no way to bridge that gap in the few days that remain."

Japan, which wants to continue protecting its domestic farmers by banning rice imports, is "the only country that is at all supportive" of the EC position, he told the Agriculture Department's annual outlook conference.

The EC members are Belgium, Denmark, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Luxembourg, the Netherlands, Britain, Spain and Portugal.

Yeutter said the United States wants a 75 percent reduction in trade-distortive internal supports and a 90 percent cut in export subsidies over 10 years.

The EC has offered a 30 percent cutback in internal supports, based on 1986 levels, but has not made any specific commitment to reducing export subsidies. Yeutter said nearly half of the 30 percent reduction in EC supports has occurred since 1986, leaving only about 15 percent to be carried out in the next 10 years.

Further, he said, the EC has not offered any net gains for those countries wanting more market access to the bloc.

If the talks fail and everyone goes home without liberalizing global trading rules, it will mean a full-blown reappraisal of U.S. policies.

"We'll have to determine how best to protect our own interests," Yeutter said. "In essence, we'll have to determine how to get the most bang for the buck in a more confrontational environment in international trade in agriculture, and perhaps in international trade in all the other spheres of economic activity as well."

Yeutter said he hoped such a gloomy development does not emerge and that "we're certainly going to go to Brussels next week with an open mind."

But he added: "We're not going to negotiate with ourselves in Brussels next week. We're not going to come back with an agreement that we do not believe is in the best interests of this country. And I'm certainly not going to come back with an agreement that I do not believe is in the best interest of American agriculture."

Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I read with interest the comments about overcrowded ladies' rooms (men seem to have no such problem).

My social life takes me to events ranging from football games to opera and ballet. The long lines I encounter outside the toilet facilities are a terrible nuisance. I have wet my pants more than once. When I get desperate, I enlist the help of two or three women and we invade the men's room which is invariably vacant. One woman stands guard while the others go in. It's a shame that we must subject ourselves to this indignity. There oughta be a law. -- Puddles in Wilmington

DEAR PUDDLES: There IS a law now and soon there will be others. Read on:

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Tell your female readers in California, New York, Virginia and Washington that recent legislation dubbed "The Potty Parity Bill," "Squatters' Rights" and "Rest Room Equity," mandates that in new public buildings there be at least as many toilets for women as there are toilets and urinals for men. Your readers in Illinois, Michigan, Georgia, Mississippi, Vermont, Pennsylvania and Maryland should know that similar bills have already been introduced. Men as well as women in other states ought to urge their legislatures to support these efforts. -- John F. Banzhaf III, professor of law and legal activism, George Washington University (Washington, D.C.)

FROM SANTA BARBARA: I was married for 20 years and raised two daughters. I can attest to the fact that women can attend to their bodily functions quite rapidly when they are forced to. So why do they take so long? Because they are putting on make-up, combing their hair, applying perfume and hand lotion, straightening their stockings and probably gossiping.

CHICAGO: Several years ago students at the University of Chicago did a time study and found out that it took a woman three times as long to relieve herself as it did a man. One reason: Ninety percent of the women washed their hands. Fewer than 30 percent of the men did.

WINNIPEG: Ann, I'm surprised you couldn't figure out the bathroom mystery. Women go into a stall and sit down. If there's none vacant they must wait. Men line up at a urinal where there is never a waiting line. They are out in no time.

PENSACOLA, FLA.: It's biological, Ann. Studies at Cornell University showed that females average 80 seconds at the fixture while males average 45 seconds. Dr. Sandra Rawls' research at Virginia Polytechnic showed females averaged 179 seconds in the bathroom while males average 85 seconds.

COLUMBUS, OHIO: Please read the riot act to the owners, managers, architects and builders of stadiums, arenas, theaters, restaurants, schools, shopping centers, museums and all public places that must have rest rooms. They owe it to the public to have adequate facilities.

WEST PALM BEACH: I am a male who drinks a gallon of water every day. I don't go more frequently than most people. "Going" is a matter of habit. For example, at intermission during a play, I never leave my seat, but the women I take always do.

ST. PETERSBURG: When is America going to grow up? In Europe, bodily functions are considered natural. Co-ed facilities are acceptable. How about spearheading a drive to do the same in the United States? -- R.C.T.

DEAR R.C.T.: Sorry, I already have a job. Why don't you do it?

Is life passing you by? Want to improve your social skills? Write for Ann Landers' new booklet, "How to Make Friends and Stop Being Lonely." Send a self-addressed, long, business-size envelope and a check or money order for $4.15 (this includes postage and handling) to: Friends, c/o Ann Landers, P.O. Box 11562, Chicago, Ill. 60611-0562. (In Canada, send $5.05.)

NEW YORK (AP) - David Opont, the 12-year-old who was tied up and set afire by a neighborhood bully he thought was forcing drugs on him, was hailed as a "hero of the year" by Vice President Dan Quayle.

Quayle embraced the boy Thursday in presenting him with the American Sportscasters Hall of Fame's Hero of the Year award.

"David's courage has set an example for all Americans to stand their ground and not let drugs take over," said Quayle. "With brave Americans like David, I'm convinced we'll win the war on drugs."

Opont was accosted by a 14-year-old on March 7 and taken to the basement of an abandoned building, where he was set on fire.

Self-examination can help save your life

A woman's breast change constantly throughout her lifetime. Theses changes may be related to age, the menstrual cycle, birth control pills or pregnancy.

Although it is normal for the breasts to feel lumpy or uneven, sometime a lump in the breast may be a sign of a problem, including one serious condition-breast cancer. That's why it is important for some women to have regular mammogram and for all women to learn to examine their breast regularly to detect puckering, dimpling-that might be a sign of cancer.

The best time to do a breast self-exam to establish a regular monthly routine to continue when you stop menstruation.

The American College of Obstetricians and Gynecologists recommends the following eight-step procedure to perform a breast self-examination:

1. In good light, stand or sit in front a of a mirror, arms at your sides.

2. Look for dimpling or puckering of the breast skin, retraction (or pushing in) of the nipples, and changes in breast size or shape. Look for the same signs with your hands pressed on your hips and then with your arms raised high.

3. Lie flat on your back. Place a folded towel or a pillow under your left shoulder and place your left hand under your head.

4. With your right hand, keeping the fingers flat and together, gently feel your left breast without exerting too much pressure. Use small, circular motions with your fingers.

5. Picture your breast as the face of a clock. Begin your small circles at 12 o'clock at the very top of the breast. Repeat the circular motion at 1 o'clock, 2 o'clock, and so on. When your hand returns to 12 o'clock, move it closer to the nipple and repeat the process. Do this in smaller and smaller circles until you have examined all the breast tissue.

6. Examine the nipple area in the same way and check for any discharge.

7. Be sure to examine the area below the armpit, which also contains tissue.

8. Lower your right arm to your side and reverse the procedure: place the folded towel or pillow under your right shoulder, right hand under your head, and sue your left hand to feel your right breast.

One you learn how to perform breast self-examination, the procedure should be easy and quick. Get in the habit of doing a self-exam every month.

ATLANTA (AP) - Jordan Knight of New Kids on the Block and one of the pop group's bodyguard are being sued by a man who says he was assaulted in a nightclub.

Douglas Winston of Yonkers, N.Y., charged in a complaint filed in state court Thursday that bodyguard Steven Chandler attacked him without provocation Aug. 8.

He said the incident occurred at an Atlanta nightspot where Chandler and Knight had gone after a performance.

Chandler, arrested and charged with two counts of battery, was freed on $4,500 bail.

The lawsuit seeks payment for medical expenses and punitive damages.

Diamonds still best friend

For bachelors, husbands and fathers worried about finding the perfect holiday gift for the woman in their lives, the clue may lie in her personality. Whether she's a little "rough" around the edges or highly polished, there's undoubtedly a diamond that's right for her.

According to Lloyd Jaffe, chairman of the American Diamond Industry Association (ADIA), no two diamonds are alike-due to variations in the cut, caratage or weight, clarity and color of the stone. As with diamonds, each woman is unique and her individual character can help you figure out what to buy this holiday season.

For the "conventional" who don't take many risks, choose diamond stud earrings or a diamond cocktail ring; for the adventuresome with a more casual lifestyle, a tennis bracelet or a small diamond ring might be appropriate, and for the "sentimental," select a piece of diamond estate jewelry or a diamond brooch.

"Diamonds continue to be America's number one gemstone." Mr. Jaffe notes. "In 1989 more than $11 billion was spent on approximately 18.4 million pieces of diamond jewelry in the U.S., and many of these sales were generated during the year-end holiday season."

In fact, diamonds continue to be favored at a rate of nearly eight to one over the combined value of all precious stones, including emeralds, rubies, sapphires, ect.

So when shopping for your gal this holiday season, let her style be your guide to find the diamond that is "cut" for her personality.

Odor eaters that will keep your refrigerator sweet: charcoal, dried used coffee grounds, a piece of vanilla bean or vanilla-soaked cotton, baking soda or a wad of crumpled newspaper.

Project proceeds to benefit hospital

Dee Anne Trotter, at left, and Kay Lynn Caviness, members of L'Allegra Study Club, invite the public to participate in the club's Annual Project Christmas Card. In lieu of using the money normally spent on mailing local Christmas cards and postage, citizens may donate to this major fundraiser. Canisters have been placed at local businesses throughout town including both Hereford State and First National Banks to receive contributions. Those making donations by Friday, Dec. 14, will have their names printed in a full-page yuletide greeting in The Hereford Brand's special Christmas edition, Sunday, Dec. 23. This year's proceeds will be used to purchase a fetal monitor with intra-uterine pressure monitoring for Deaf Smith General Hospital.

Morrison gives program on Project Christmas Card

Members of L'Allegra Study Club met recently in the home of Jan Weishaar with Phyllis Morrison of Deaf Smith General Hospital presenting a program on Project Christmas Card.

Morrison expressed appreciation on behalf of the hospital for L'Allegra Study Clubs involvement in Project Christmas Card. She told of how in the past, the project was the brainchild of the physicians wives, and was set up to provide hospital equipment needed for the doctors, but not a part of the budget. It is a unique way to send Christmas wishes and help the community at the same time.

She presented several items that are needed at the hospital, along with those items that have already been purchased through Project Christmas Card. The three ideas that Morrison felt might be of interest to the community would be the purchasing of new chairs for the hospital patient rooms, a donation to the Endowment Fund, and a fetal monitoring machine.

Morrison explained that there are no sitting chairs for patients in the rooms. She showed the club several different styles of chairs that could be purchased.

The Endowment Fund was first established by Dr. Nadir Khuri in December of 1987, with a donation of $1,000. The fund today has a balance of $34,428.28. This fund is a separate fund of the hospital district and monies are kept in separate banking accounts at local banks. The Board of Directors have agreed not to spend any of these funds unless an extreme emergency, which would keep the hospital from closing, should arise. The governing board of the Endowment Fund are the current hospital board elected officials.

The Fetal Monitor with intra uterine pressure monitoring allows the capability to tell the exact pressure inside the uterus, and is extremely helpful with labor inductions. Morrison said that with the high number of "drop-in" deliveries with no medical histories, it would serve as a safe guard and greatly aid the doctors in delivery. This instrument comes highly recommended by Dr. Payne and Dr. Johnson.

After the program, a short business meeting was held. Weishaar reminded members of the Christmas party.

Those attending the meeting were Juanita Bowles, Margaret Carnahan, Kay Lynn Caviness, Janice Conkwright, Carmen Flood, Kitty Gault, Dianne Hoelscher, Barbara Kerr, Sylvia Khuri, Karen Payne, Kilda Perales, Suzanne Smith, Dee Anne Trotter, Ella Marie Veigel, and Weishaar.

Abundant Life

BY BOB WEAR
Quality of Life

We are putting forth great effort and expending much wealth to add years to our life and this is normal. The desire for long life is a vital factor in our general well-being. It seems, however, that there is more interest in the quantity of life than there is in the quality of life. It has been suggested that it would better for us if we were more interested in adding life to our years than we are in adding years to our life. Of course, it is right to be interested in both accomplishments.

The excellence of life is our great need and probably the desire of most folk. Without it, the increase longevity is of little value to oneself or to one's family. Our strength, our happiness and our profit are found in adding life to our years and not in adding years to our life. Of course, we desire to continue living and our loved ones want us to live and we want our loved ones to live. With all of this, we must ask the question: Is not living much more than just putting in our time?

In any consideration of the quality of life, there are many worthy ideas and suggestions. The following may not be everything involved in quality living but is worthy of considers: "Understanding ourselves; understanding keeping out of trouble; polishing our conduct with good manners; reducing the cost of living by avoiding waste; making every dollar spent bring us 100 cents in value; learning not to abuse credit; and taking advantage of the experience of others."-A.B. ZuTavern.

Quality life must surely include the proper consideration of God and his expectations. God's blessings are given generously, and for good purposes. These good purposes can be realized to the extent that we give wholesome emphasis to the quality of life.

The herbs sage and mint are related.

MRS. RANDAL STEVENS

Wedding announced

Marilyn Osborn and Randal Eugene Stevens, both of Lubbock, were married in a double-ring ceremony Nov. 23 in First United Methodist Church in Temple.

The bride is the daughter of former Hereford residents, Ron and Barbara Osborn of Temple, and the bridegroom is the son of Harry Stevens of Hereford and Cherry Brown of Corsicana.

The ceremony was officiated by Dr. Jack Riley.

Michelle Osborn Richburg of Temple served as matron of honor and Charles Brown of Corsicana was best man.

The bride's aunt, Cindy Barrett of Hereford, was soloist.

The dinner reception was held at the Mill Creek Country Club.

The bride, a senior nursing student in Lubbock, is employed as a nurse technician at St. Mary's Hospital.

The groom, a 1977 Hereford High School graduate, is the assistant manager at Metal Mart in Lubbock.

Experts suggest chain saw test drives before you buy

Weekend woodsmen and part time Paul Bunyans ready to trade in their axes for chain saws this fall will do well to take the move seriously.

A reliable chain saw is a great firewood cutting timesaver and has plenty of tree felling and trimming applications year round

"A chain saw is a sophisticated power tool. Just as you wouldn't buy a car or tractor without a test drive, you shouldn't purchase a saw without trying it out, " Michaels says.

To make sure you get the best value, Michaels recommends buying from a reputable dealer who sells and services chain saws. He says buyers should spend at least a half-hour talking with a salesman to hear about the saw's operations and maintenance.

Further, Michaels says know how much time you will spend operating the saw and the type and size of wood to be cut.

When comparing different models, buyers should look for qualities that will make the saw comfortable, quiet and reliable.

Features such as anti-vibration and noise dampening systems, good balance and well-designed handles will make your saw easier and safer to use.

"Don't be misled by bar length." Michaels says. "That can make very different saws seem the same. Instead, look at engine size, weight and engine speed at maximum power as the first criteria for comparison."

To enhance safety, comfort, ease of use and durability, these features include:

*Solid state ignition, which eliminates the need for ignition tune-ups;

*Anti-vibration handles;

*Manual and inertia-activated chain brake;

*Steel ball-bearing supported crankshaft which contributes to a smoother running engine and higher cutting speeds;

Between the Covers

BY REBECCA WALLS

I hope all of you had a wonderful Thanksgiving. I am sure many of you have run out of reading material and would like one last good book before you're caught up in the Christmas rush. This week the book selection is filled with fast-moving suspense and thrilling adventure.

Clifford Irving's Trial takes the reader into the courtroom with Warren Blackburn, a Texas defense lawyer. Warren, a former star on the rise, is back after serving a year's term in jail for perjury on behalf of a client. Trying to make a living with the run-of-the-mill court appointed cases, Warren thinks maybe his life is finally coming together when a high-profile murder case falls in his lap. As Warren prepares the minor case involving Hector Quintana, a homeless illegal alien accused of killing a Vietnamese for his wallet, he begins to feel uneasy. It isn't until the preparation for the Johnnie Fay Boudreau case, the beauty queen, topless nightclub owner, involved the murder (in self-defense) of her multi-millionaire doctor-lover, that Warren suspects the two cases may be connected. As Warren discovers the truth he realizes that nothing can be done about it without forfeiting his career and sacrificing the life of one of his clients. Faced with unsurmountable obstacles, Warren decides to risk everything in an effort to wrest justice from the complexity and absurdity of the law.

The Last Raven by Craig Thomas takes the reader inside the Russian border with Afghanistan to the wrecked fuselage of a military transport plane that lies half-submerged in a lake. Everyone on board is dead, the crew is burned and all identification lost. Patrick Hyde, Sir Kenneth Aubrey's top intelligence operative, witnesses the eerie scene and discovers to his horror the identity of one of the bodies. The crash was no accident. The time is the present when the hunger for democracy makes world peace a viable possibility at last. But there are those who have everything to lose if peace prevails and will stop at nothing to see it undone.

War of the Raven by Andrew Kaplan is set in 1939 Argentina. The German battleship of Graf Slpee steams toward the South American shore. "Raven", the code name of the allies' mole in the German embassy in Buenos Aires, may have comprised. The single link the allies have to Raven is an Argentinean playboy. When this link is hunted down by Nazi agents through bawdy, tango places and dark, filthy alleys of Buenos Aires, he is trapped, hideously tortured and then murdered, the allies become desperate. An American agent, Charles Stewart, is sent to find "Raven" before the Nazis can. Stewart winds his way through a deadly labyrinth in which he meets Julia Vargas, a woman who holds the key to the past that can save Argentina's future.

In Fade the Heat by Jay Brandon, a quiet, peaceful April night in San Antonio is shattered by a woman's screams. A black maid, working in a downtown office building, says she was attacked and raped by a young man. The young man is dumbfounded and confused as he is handcuffed and taken way. The accused young man tells the preposterous story of the woman appearing at his office door, ripping off her clothes, clawing her own flesh and screaming "rape!". Why he is being framed was unknown. For Mark Blackwell, the newly elected district attorney, this may prove to be the most difficult case of his career because the young man who stands accused is his son. In law as in politics, power makes its own way. Mark Blackwell can use the connections and shortcuts he knows to "fade the heat" away from the son he hardly knows or from himself. Is son David really innocent? Who believes him? If David is innocent as he claims, that can only mean that someone, an unknown enemy, is trying to frame Mark, an enemy whose vile motives he has yet to fathom.

Greeting at door ranks first

Restaurant patrons want to be greeted at the door, and know the prices of "specials," reports the new "Salute to Restaurant Service Survey" released by American Express. What they don't want is a chorus of "Happy Birthday."

The survey was conducted for "An American Express salute to Restaurant Service," a nationwide program that allows diners to vote for outstanding service personnel.

When American Express Cardmembers are pleased with the level of service shown in a restaurant, they can present the employee responsible with a Thank You Certificate. The employee with most can win $10,000 in American Express Traveler's Cheques. And each time the diner casts a note for an employee, the diner's name can be entered in a sweepstakes where the grand prize is a culinary tour of France.

"Service is the priority in a decade when consumers are returning to more traditional, less status oriented values," says Bonnie Schwartz, director of restaurant marketing at American Express.

Seventy-nine percent of those surveyed said they want to know the prices of "specials" before ordering. sixty-three percent said they want to read the "specials" as opposed to hear them recited by the waiter.

And, fifty-five percent of those surveyed want to know the waiter's name. Regionally, Westerners most appreciate the name introduction (72 percent), followed by those in the North Central region (62 percent), followed by people in the Northeast (56 percent).

Under "most desirable restaurant service," a greeting to the door ranked first, followed by a complimentary cocktail. Any rendition of "Happy Birthday" ranked last.

In a list of preferred service characteristics, a waiter's "personality"ranked first, with 39 percent of the vote, followed by grace and speed with 22 and 19 percent, respectively.

Adopt a grandparent for Christmas

This year some grandparents will be unable to visit with their families due to various circumstances. Golden Plains Care Center has initiated a program, "Adopt a Grandparent". This program's available to those who would enjoy sharing the joys of Christmas with a grandparent. From left, Opal Andrews, Wilma Dairs and Gladys Bardin invite anyone interested in the program to stop by for a visit or call Kari Sanders at 364-3815. The deadline for adoption is Wednesday, Dec. 5.

Students recognized

Conduct award winners for the second six weeks at St. Anthony's School were named recently. They included, from left, Kyle Artho, Sarah Artho, Aja Albiar and Gilbert Rodriquez.

BALTIMORE (AP) - A scene in "Die Hard 2" in which Bruce Willis takes a power drill to an airport air duct ended up on the cutting-room floor, and now 20th Century Fox could end up in court.

Black & Decker Inc. has filed suit in federal court in Baltimore, accusing the filmmaker and the marketing firm Krown-Young & Rubicam of failing to fulfill a promise that one of its drills would be featured in the film.

Black & Decker said in court papers filed Nov. 7 that it had planned an ad campaign based on the scene.

The company is seeking at least $150,000.

The cold facts about infection

The common cold is irritating enough, but complications can make matters worse. In the presence of a cold, germs can cause more severe respiratory infections such as sinusitis, bronchitis and pneumonia, which prolong the misery.

The symptoms of sinusitis or inflammation of the sinuses are similar to those of the common cold: stuffy nose, nasal discharge, facial pain, headache and fever.

The most common germs causing sinusitis are Haemophilus influenzae, Streptococcus pneumoniae and Mycoplasma pneumoniae.

Bronchitis is the inflammation of the bronchial tubes. Constant coughing up of phlegm, known as a "productive cough" is the chief symptom. The same germs which cause sinusitis, along with Chlamydia psittaci, are usually implicated in bronchitis.

Another complication for cold sufferers is one of the atypical pneumonias. These differ from typical pneumonias in that they're characterized by a slower onset of fever, aching, chills and a dry cough.

Atypical pneumonias are caused by a certain group of germs, including Mycolplasma pneumoniae, which accounts for one third of all pneumonias in the general population.

Doctors will often prescribe antibiotics to kill the germs causing these ailments.

Master Bedroom Suite Fit for a King and Queen

FEATURE HOMES

BY W.D. FARMER, A.I.B.D.

A full formal entry foyer is endowed with an open rail stair and provides direct access to the formal living room and dining room. Both of these rooms are designed with identical bay windows.

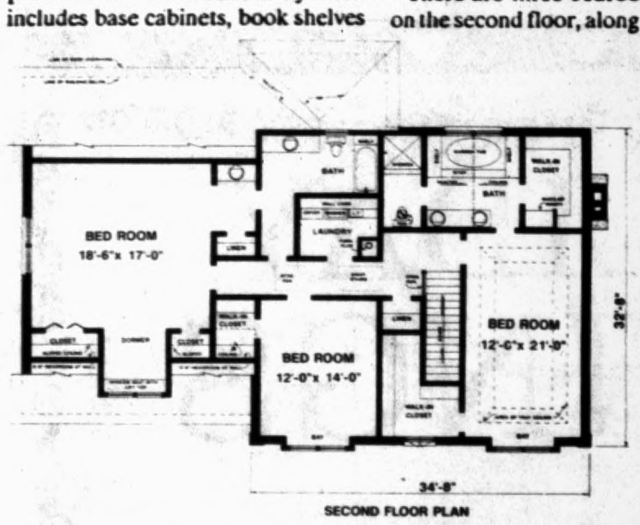

The family room and sun deck are private to the rear. The family room includes base cabinets, book shelves and a TV cabinet all on one wall. A fireplace and deck access are also shown here. The central kitchen is U shape with excellent cabinets and counter top and breakfast room is equal in size to the formal dining room. The breakfast room also has deck access and a central hall from the breakfast area leads to a full bath with shower and a study or fourth bedroom. The side entry garage is from this central hall.

The large laundry is accessible from the central hall of the second floor and an attic fan and disappearing stair are from here too.

The Tudor style exterior is enhanced by a blend of hip and gable roof design, multilite windows and brick facade.

The plan is Number 3132. It is a computer generated plan and it includes 3,195 square feet of heated area and is furnished with basement, stairs to which are below the stair up for greater space utilization. All W. D. Farmer plans include special construction details for energy efficiency and are designed to meet FHA and VA requirements. For further information write W. D. Farmer, P.O. Box 450025, Atlanta, GA 30345.

Appreciation extended

Judy Baker with Deaf Smith County Social Services, at left, and Betty Henson, director of the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross, present a certificate of appreciation to Joe Easton, manager of the Sirloin Stockade. Restaurant management and staff prepared Thanksgiving dinner Nov. 22 to residents not having a special meal. Also, assisting at the dinner were Red Cross volunteers who delivered meals to homebound residents.

Toys program underway

Volunteers with the Deaf Smith County Chapter of the American Red Cross are busy collecting and repairing toys for the organization's annual Christmas Toys Program. Volunteers, Benny Womble, at left, and Steve Cortez, are repairing one of the numerous bikes that the local chapter has collected for the project. Anyone interested in donating toys to the local chapter is asked to do so as soon as possible. Toys will be accepted until the delivery date, Dec. 21. More information may be obtained by calling Betty Henson at the Red Cross office.

The first offical basketball game was played in 1891.

Children taught new 3-Rs

For many youngsters today, the three R's often men Reduce, Recycle, Reuse. Why?

When today's five-year-olds are 25, over half of America's 9,300 landfills may be closed. When these same youngsters are only 15, the U.S. may be producing almost 200 million tons of garbage a year, more than 40 tons more than Americans currently produce.

The volume of U.S. garbage is up 80 percent since 1960. By 2000, it's expected to rise another 20 percent.

Yet we currently recycle only about 10 percent of our trash. We incinerate another 10 percent, but with potentially serious consequences to the atmosphere.

Children can be taught to recycle from a very young age, but to become committed recycles, they need to understand that recycling includes not only separation and collection of discarded objects, but also reuse because, until an object is returned to the marketplace and reused, recycling really has not occurred.

"The Scrap Map" is a colorful new publication for children in grades kindergarten through six that explains the fundamental of recycling by using familiar products.

Through illustrations, games and an ingenious poster that maps out the journey these scrapped products make through the recycling process, it gives even very young children an understanding of how recycling works.

For a free, single copy of "The Scrap Map: An Environmental Publication for Grades K-6," write to Dept. NAPS; Institute of Scrap Recycling Industries; 1627 K St., N.W., Washington, DC 20006-1704.

UNEXPECTED GUESTS

Dear Heloise: I prepare for unexpected guests at Christmas in advance. I purchase a variety of inexpensive gifts suitable for young and old. I then wrap them and put a bow only on the females' presents.

Nieces and nephews who visit with their girlfriends and boyfriends all receive a gift and feel welcome and a part of the festivities. — Agnes Snell, Throop, Pa.

I do the same, but I buy all generic, no-gender gifts like coffee mugs, decorative candles and candy. — Heloise

Red Cross Update

BY BETTY HENSON

All volunteers are invited to visit with Joe Norton, field service manager of Odessa, Wednesday, Dec. 5, from 10-11 a.m. at the Red Cross office. Norton is visiting in Hereford and will present a program to the Lions Club.

Applicants who are applying for assistance from the Christmas Stocking Committee and the Toys Program should bring two forms of identification with the correct address and name to the Red Cross office.

Toys, especially bicycle parts, are needed for the Christmas Toys program and may be brought to the Red Cross office or call 364-3761 for someone to pick them up.

Our Chapter has five trained volunteers to assist Service personnel and their families in the event of an emergency. Call the office during the regular office hours for assistance.

YOUR EYES

CONTACTS -- AND GLASSES, TOO

Contact-lens wearers -- even those with extended-wear lenses -- need to have a pair of current-prescription eyeglases on hand for those special times when they're needed.

Why? Smog, pollution and other environmental factors -- even a high pollen count -- may irritate the eyes and make wearing any lenses uncomfortable. There may be times during a day that a contact-lens wearer may prefer not to use them. And should contact lenses get lost or torn, eyeglasses can be a lifesaver.

Sunglasses are necessary for no-glare comfort and for vital protection against ultraviolet rays that can damage the eyes. Reading glasses may be recommended if the contact lenses are made up in a distance-only prescription. And safety goggles or glasses should be worn over or instead of contacts for sports like racquetball or swimming or for any work with machinery that throws off dusts or debris.

To perform in Amarillo

Camille Vasek, daughter of Ronald and Janice Vasek of Hereford, will be an angel in the musical, "The Nutcracker", sponsored by the Lone Star Ballet Co. Performances are scheduled Dec. 7-9 at the Amarillo Civic Center. Camille, a K-5 student at St. Anthony's School, is a second-year student with Hess School of Dance in Amarillo.

Berlin, Gershwin works are found

WASHINGTON (AP) - Smithsonian Institution curators are busy cataloguing a monumental new collection of nearly 200 years of popular American sheet music, including stacks of rare, long-forgotten Broadway melodies by George Gershwin and Irving Berlin.

This bonanza from the nation's musical past, a gift from Fort Wayne, Ind., broadcaster Sam deVincent, consists of 130,000 original editions of illustrated sheet music, nearly 20,000 recordings and boxes of posters, concert programs, newspaper clippings and other memorabilia.

"This is one of the great, legendary collections of sheet music in the world," said John Edward Hasse, curator of American music at the Smithsonian's National Museum of American History. "It contains some of the rarest of the rare."

The scope of the deVincent collection is staggering. It ranges from yellowing reprints of parlor piano pieces of the 1790s to mournful Civil War ballads, the shameless bigotry of minstrel show music, railroad songs and ragtime, military marches, antiwar protest songs, Beatles favorites and political campaign choruses.

The bulk of the collection focuses on the golden era of Tin Pan Alley, from the 1890s to the 1940s, when Gershwin, Berlin, Cole Porter and other great songwriters were churning out Broadway show tunes.

Scores of large cartons in the museum's archives are stuffed with their most memorable hits and some of their most forgettable words and lyrics.

Among the latter is a 1919 Gershwin song titled "Tee-Oodle-Um-Bum-Bo" and a few of Hoagy Carmichael's obscure World War II morale boosters, including "I'm a Cranky Old Yank in a Cranky Old Tank ..."

Berlin wrote "I'm the Guy Who Guards the Harem (And My Heart's in My Work)" for the Ziegfeld Follies of 1919. And little remembered from his 1933 hit musical, "Easter Parade," is a song titled "I Say It's Spinach."

As America sang deeper into the Depression, Berlin wrote:

"Things don't come on a silver platter,

"What does it matter,

"Long as there's you, long as there's me,

"Long as the best things in life are free,

"I say it's spinach,

"The hell with it, the hell with it, that's all!"

The collection represents a 60-year labor of love by deVincent, retired music director of Fort Wayne radio station WOWO, who began hoarding sheet music as a 12-year-old in Chicago.

By 1978, while Hasse was writing a doctoral dissertation on ragtime music at Indiana University, deVincent's collection had filled his two-car garage and spilled into nearly every room of his home.

DeVincent says the rarest items in his collection include an original copy of Berlin's first published song, "Marie From Sunny Italy," written in 1907, and a first edition of "Old Zip Coon," an 1816 minstrel song that later became known as "Turkey in the Straw."

VIDEO CHRISTMAS SUGGESTIONS
RENTALS: NEW RELEASES

December 5: GREMLINS 2: (1990) Zach Galligan, Phoebe Cates, and director Joe Dante re-team for this sequel to Gremlins. This time Zach's unusual, furry little pet (who can never be fed after midnight) is almost taken over by a greedy multi-millionaire who wants to control the Gremlin population. The drill is almost the same as in 1: one part scary, one part horror, and one part clever.
The film is rated PG-13 for violence and some language. If you are a Gremlins fan, you'll be happy to hear that 2 is on the shelves at your local video.

Two Boxes

December 6: HENRY V: (1989) Starring Kenneth Branagh.
One of history's greatest action stories is told in this power-packed production. Kenneth Branagh, who wrote the screenplay, directs and stars in this Shakespearean masterpiece about the young king of England who invades France after the French people refuse to recognize his claim to their throne. Emma Thompson stars as Princess Katherine, the beautiful daughter of the French King (Paul Scofield) and the object of Henry's desire.
This brilliant and highly recommended video won an Academy award for the Best Costume Design, while Branagh was nominated for best Actor and Director. Rated PG.

Four Boxes

(And, available on video is the 1945-British version, directed and starring Laurence Olivier. This production is also a masterful rendition of Shakespeare and a cinematic treat. Not rated but would be a PG. Four Boxes)

December 18: DICK TRACY: (1989) Starring Warren Beaty.
Yes, last summer's smash movie finally makes its video debut. Dick Tracy is a live comic strip directed by its star, Warren Beaty. Beaty plays the cartoon detective trying to clean up Chicago.
The movie is worth seeing just for the cameo villains - Big Boy (Al Pacino), Mumbles (Dustin Hoffman), Lips Manlis (Paul Sorvino) and 88 Keys (Mandy Patinkin). They all conspire to throw Tracy off course. He's also challenged by down-to-earth Tess Trueheart (Glenne Headly) and Breathless Mahoney (played by Madonna). Madonna is a disappointment but the rest of the cast is first-rate. There is an excellent musical score by Stephen Sondheim and the dazzling sets are all filmed in primary colors. A good family film. Rated G.

CLASSIFIED ADS

Classified advertising rates are based on 14 cents a word for first insertion ($2.80 minimum), and 10 cents for second publication and thereafter. Rates below are based on consecutive issues, no copy change, straight word ads.

TIMES	RATE	MIN
1 day per word	.15	3.00
2 days per word	.26	5.20
3 days per word	.37	7.40
4 days per word	.48	9.60

If you run ads in five consecutive issues with NO changes, you get the same ad in the Reach 4 More free. The regular charge for that ad would be $4.00

CLASSIFIED DISPLAY

Classified display rates apply to all other ads not set in solid-word lines-those with captions, bold or larger type, special paragraphing; all capital letters. Rates are $4.15 per column inch; $3.45 an inch for consecutive additional insertions.

LEGALS

Ad rates for legal notices are same as for classified display.

ERRORS

Every effort is made to avoid errors in word ads and legal notices. Advertisers should call attention to any errors immediately after the first insertion. We will not be responsible for more than one incorrect insertion. In case of errors by the publishers, an additional insertion will be published.

'Decoration Day' explores military racism in WWII

By Amy Schmidt

Why would anyone turn down the Congressional Medal of Honor? That is the subject of Decoration Day, a Hallmark Hall of Fame movie airing Sunday, Dec. 2, on NBC. Decoration Day is based on the novella by John William Corrington.

Judge Albert Sidney Finch is a lonely widower existing in a gloomy retirement. His only contact with the world is through his irascible but loyal housekeeper Rowena.

James Garner (The Rockford Files) stars with Bill Cobbs (Rage of Angels), Judith Ivey (Down Home), Ruby Dee (Do the Right Thing) and Larry Fishburne (Cotton Club) in this human-interest story set in 1975 Georgia.

Judge Finch (Garner) is jolted out of his languor when he is asked to champion the cause of a former boyhood friend, Gee Peniwell (Cobbs), a black World War II veteran. On a point of principle, Penniwell has refused to accept the Congressional Medal of Honor.

Why? In a recent interview, Judith Ivey, who plays the woman who helps the judge begin his life anew, wouldn't give that away: "It's part of the mystery of the piece which is unwoven by James Garner," she said enigmatically. She did tell us this: "Ultimately it's dealing with the racism that he felt existed at the time while he was in battle."

It is interesting to note that both Garner and Cobbs are military veterans, and Cobbs' father fought in World War II. "I had very strange feelings as a boy," said Cobbs, "seeing my father in the service, and then seeing him as a second-class citizen." A native of Cleveland, Ohio, Cobbs recalls, as a boy, visiting his father at Orlando Air Base, in Florida and hopping up onto a counter seat at a local drugstore. "I found out that I had no right to sit in that chair, that we had to go to the back of the drugstore and wait until everyone else had been taken care of."

Garner also recalls racial discrimination within the Army when he was in Korea. "The Army was still basically segregated. I remember there was a black unit of 14 soldiers, and nobody knew what to do with them."

"Their unit was too small to really stand alone, and nobody else wanted them in their section," said Garner.

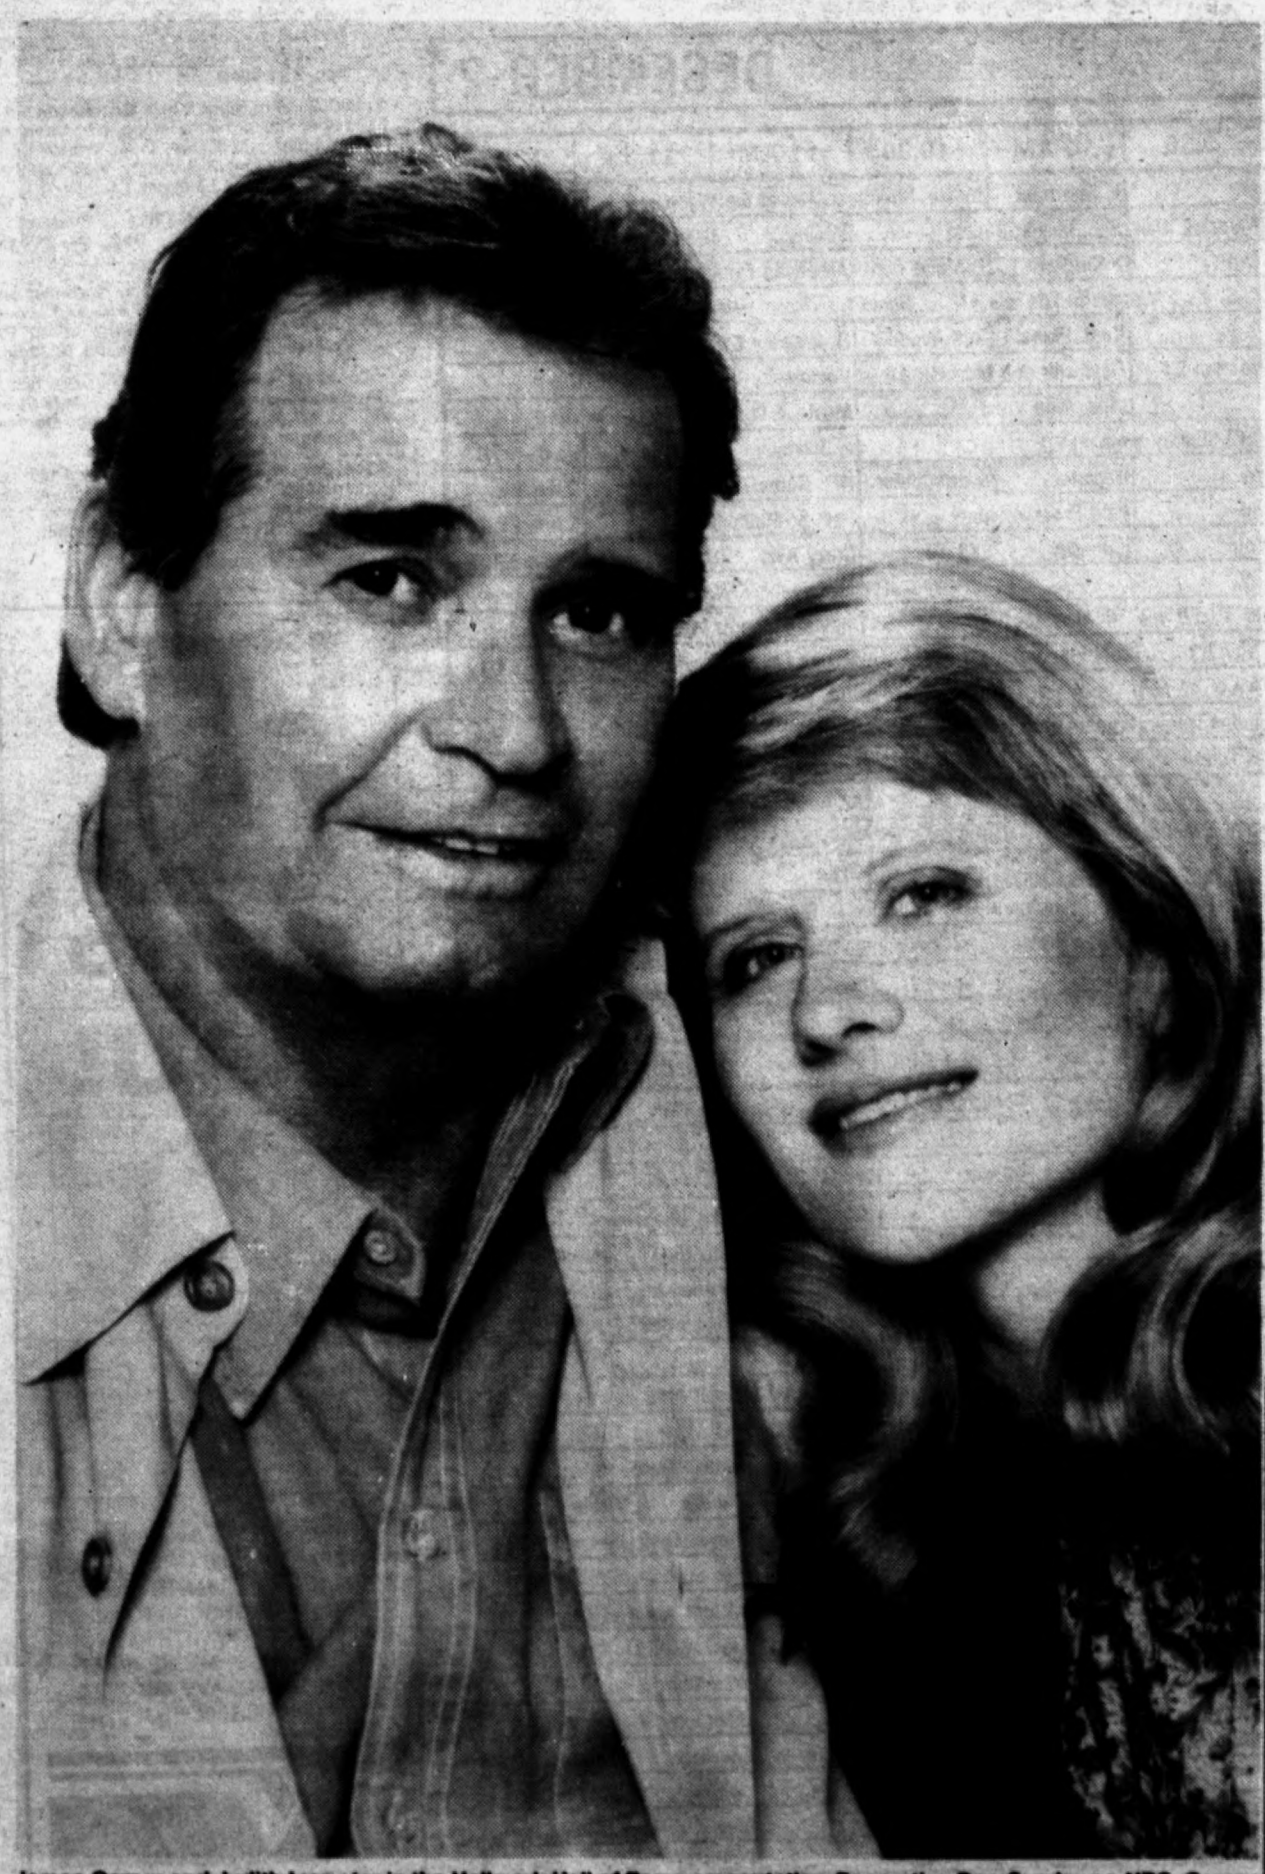

Bill Cobbs plays a WWII veteran who refuses the Congressional Medal of Honor on a matter of principle.

"When I heard about it, I said, 'My God, give them to me. They can join my section.' And you know what, after that I had the best section of all!"

The passing of friendships is also an issue in this film. "I think it's awfully important to try to maintain relationships with people you know and like," said Garner. "In the story, Albert Sidney has let about 30 years pass without talking to his closest childhood friend, a black guy named Gee. I guess everybody lets that happen, but it's a real shame."

If there is one thought that Garner says he would like audiences to take away from Decoration Day, it is that people should never give up on life. "Here's Albert Sidney; his wife's gone and died on him, he's quit his job, he's bored out of his mind, he's feeling terribly sorry for himself. And then he's presented with a challenge and he starts living again. He even falls in love, for heaven's sakes!" said Garner. "You know, it doesn't matter what curves life throws us, it's not over 'til it's over. This story is all about hanging in there, and picking up the pieces, and moving on."

BITS AND PIECES

Pernell Roberts

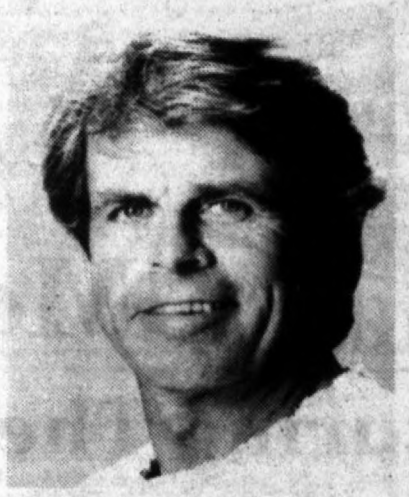

Pernell Roberts will return to television in the cast of Donor, a dramatic new motion picture-for-television also starring Melissa Gilbert and Jack Scalia and set for broadcast Dec. 9 on CBS. Roberts plays Dr. Martingale, the chief of staff in a hospital where a horrifying cover-up involving human experimentation and murder is taking place.

Family Dog, a new half-hour animated comedy series which explores the life of a family's pet dog, has begun production in Los Angeles for future broadcast on CBS. Steven Spielberg, Tim Burton and Dennis Klein are executive producers. The series centers on the day-to-day concerns and dog-sized adventures of a nameless family dog: looking for a sunny place to nap, digging up and burying bones, avoiding confrontations with larger neighboring dogs and relating to his human family, the Binfords. The Binfords are aware of the dog but are mostly wrapped up in their own concerns. The series is based on an episode of Amazing Stories.

Jerry Lewis, the comedian/actor, is currently in demand as a TV director. He has been signed to direct an episode of Viacom Entertainment's weekly series Super Force. He most recently directed episodes of CBS' Wiseguy.

After 50 years of playing the game of cat-and-mouse in more than 200 cartoon shorts, Academy Award-winners Tom & Jerry will hit the big leagues when they star in their first feature-length film. The film also offers the duo another first: the chance to finally speak their minds!

Keenen Ivory Wayans, creator and star of the comedy series In Living Color, will host the 18th annual American Music Awards.

FAMILY FAIRE

Mary Poppins pops on to Disney Channel

By Lee Irby

The holiday spirit is in the air at The Disney Channel.

On Sunday, Dec. 2, Julie Andrews becomes the "practically perfect" nanny who comes to live with the Banks family in 1910 London. She enjoys a jolly holiday with her friend Bert the chimney sweep and the two Banks children in the time-honored classic Mary Poppins.

Then on Thursday, Dec. 6, Disney exclusively premieres A Hobo's Christmas, starring Barnard Hughes and Gerald McRaney. With Christmas only a week away, hobo Chance Carson has decided to visit his only son, Charlie, whom he has not seen in more than 25 years. The son is not enthusiastic about the visit, but Chance's two grandchildren are delighted by his colorful stories about life riding the rails.

Also premiering this week is the ABC Afterschool Special, "Stood Up." The story focuses on a teenage girl, Becky, who is stood up by a senior class hunk for the school prom. Becky decides to sue the boy for the cost of her prom dress and the alterations.

Her trial is conducted by the "Street Law" class at her school. Becky's action illustrates the hard feelings and harmful publicity a trial can trigger, as well as the need to take responsibility for a decision and the satisfaction of seeing justice done.

"Stood Up" airs Thursday, Dec. 6, on ABC.

Morgan Fairchild

LET'S TALK

By Polly Vonetes

Q: I want to know, is my favorite actress, Morgan Fairchild, married? And where was she born? I read in Star Magazine that she is from California. Is this true? — "Anthony," Lufkin, Texas

A: Texas has the honor of claiming the beautiful Morgan Fairchild. Born in Dallas (Feb. 3, 1950), she is proud to call Texas her home state. As of this writing, she is single.

Q: I would appreciate some information about Kate Jackson and Bruce Boxleitner. I really enjoyed the show Scarecrow & Mrs. King. Are they married to each other? If not, who are they married to, and are they making any new movies or TV shows? —Nancy Goodwin, The Woodlands, Texas

A: Both Kate Jackson and Bruce Boxleitner have been married to others; neither is married at the present time. Both would like to do another series and are considering scripts for the future. Both are coming on the small screen in movies. Kate just starred with Rick Schroder in the CBS movie The Stranger Within. Bruce is starring in a Judith Krantz miniseries, Wait Until Tomorrow, scheduled to air in the spring.

Q: When I was 9 years old, I would listen to The Lone Ranger on the radio. I sent for an autographed picture of him that was offered for 50 cents. Well, I have kept it all these 51 years, and it looks just like the day I got it. I would like to know how I could write to Mr. Clayton Moore (The Lone Ranger) and tell him about my picture. —Eleanor Fish, Machias, N.Y.

A: I hope this address will work for you. Write to: Mr. Clayton Moore, 4720 Park Olivo, Calabasas, CA 91302.

Q: I appreciated so very much the information you put in the paper about my special hero, Eric Pierpoint. Would you please tell me how Duncan Regehr (Zorro) got started in show business, his credits, how old he is and is he married? —Vivian Pollard, Lenox, Iowa

A: Duncan Regehr was born Oct. 5, 1954, in Alberta, Canada. He had his own television talk show when he was 14. He became an actor after pursuing careers as a figure skater, Olympic heavyweight boxing hopeful and an artist. He has played a variety of dramatic roles at the Stratford, Ontario, Shakespeare Festival and has done voices for cartoon characters. He made Canadian films and starred in a Canadian TV series before arriving in Hollywood in 1981. He and his wife Catherine, a writer, are happily married. They reside in Los Angeles, where Regehr has been in demand by casting directors since his performance as the gladiator in Pompeii. His other credits include the television movies The Blue and the Gray, Goliath Awaits, My Wicked, Wicked Ways and Earth Star Voyager.

SOAP TALK

Yet another actor assigned to role as Mason Capwell

By Candace Havens

In yet another surprise move in the casting of Santa Barbara, Canadian actor Gordon Thomson returns to television this month on the popular daytime series.

Thomson replaces Terry Lester as Mason Capwell on SB, since Lester left the show abruptly at the end of October. It had been rumored that Lane Davies would return to the role he made popular, but as we can see, it was exactly that — rumor.

Thomson is best known for his portrayal of Adam Carrington on Dynasty, but this isn't his first stint on a daytime series. He portrayed Egyptologist Aristotle Benedict on Ryan's Hope from November, 1981, to March, 1982, before capturing the role of Adam Carrington.

We know Thomson can play the devious, manipulative side of Mason, but will he be able to bring out the comedic side as well? We'll have to wait and see.

Speaking of manipulative bad guys... Just when we thought we would never hear or see another relative of the evil Jerome family, General Hospital writers decide to create a new character for the show. Mark St. James joined the GH cast in November as Evan "Edge" Jerome, a music video director.

Scotty Baldwin (Kin Shriner) is responsible for bringing Jerome to Port Charles to lay claim to the Jerome diamond fortune. Of course this new development has thrown a definite kink in Lucy Coe Quartermaine's plans to claim the diamonds herself.

St. James is new to the daytime scene, but he is a veteran actor of the stage. His latest role was in the play Temptation, written by Vaclav Havel, the new president of Poland. His other theater credits include roles in Macbeth, The Taming of the Shrew, Final Passages and Hair.

Born in Odessa, Texas, and raised in Dallas and Altus, Okla., St. James has appeared in several national commercials and regional commercials for his home state.

I want to hear from you! If you have a favorite soap scenario you would like to sound off about, or a question about the soaps, write to Candace Havens, Soap Talk, P.O. Box 17748, Fort Worth, TX 76102-0748.
