SELASSIE FLOUTS ITALIAN PROTEST

Clyde Thompson On Trial For Stabbing Convict

SLAYER OF 3 IS CONCERNED OVER PICTURE

BULLETIN

ANGELTON, July 22. — An effort to postpone the murder trial of Clyde Thompson, 23-year-old "thrill killed," failed today when District Judge M. S. Munson denied a petition of defense attorneys. The petition was based on the absence of Thompson's stepmother, defense witness.

Following the denial, the defense said a petition for a change of venue would be filed late today.

ANGLETON, July 22 — Clyde Thompson, 23, "thrill killer,,' who has taken the lives of three men was scheduled for trial here today for slaying a fourth.

Thompson has been in prison five years, sent up first because he killed Lucien and Leon Shook, who lived at Cisco, "just to see them kick."

The youthful convict's chief worry, as the trial, neared was his appearance. When a photographer sought to take a picture he was told to "wait until I comb my hair."

Thompson was charged with stabbing a fellow convict at Retrieve prison farm May 29. The slaying occurred during a brawl at the prison barracks.

SHERIFF TO TESTIFY IN THOMPSON CASE

Sheriff Virge Foster of Eastland county left Saturday for Angleton, where he was to be a witness in the trial of Clyde Thompson.

Thompson, slayer of the Shook brothers "to see them kick", was tried in Eastland in 1928 and sentenced to death. The court of criminal appeals reversed the case and at the second trial Thompson was again given the death penalty. This later was commuted to life imprisonment.

Public Utilities Bill In Conference

WASHINGTON, July 22 —House and senate conferees met today in the first of a series of secret sessions in which the ultimate form of the administration's bitterly disputed public utilities "death sentence" on unessential holding companies topped the opposition which must be thrashed out by 5 representatives of each house.

It will be many days before they reach that issue, however, after reaching agreement on less disputed points.

The committee is charged with reconciling differing verisons of the measure passed by the house and the senate. Before the bill can be enacted finally agreement must be reached on an identical writing of it.

BEES ADDED BARGAIN

OAKLAND, Cal.— When Frank Mahan bought a second hand automobile it was agreed the accessories should be included, but Mahan had no idea they would include a swarm of bees, which had swarmed in the interior of the car. Making good on his bargain he drove away with the hive.

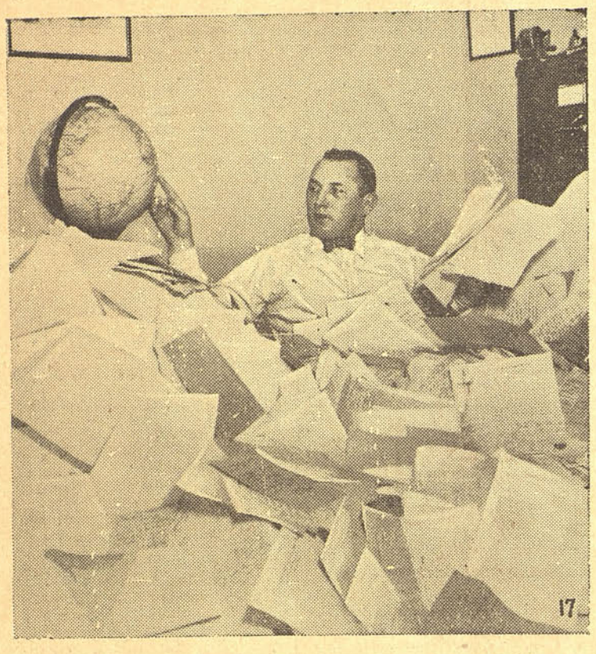

Wife Uninterested In Major's Tales

There's just one person who doesn't get a kick out of Major Hoople's stories of his successes. That's Martha Hoople, the old battle-ax, who has the poor veteran of many a wordy adventure buffaloed.

When the Major's wife goes on a rampage, the old boy takes to the Owl club, even though he knows what it will mean when he finally has to face her. She just won't stand his loafing, and that goes for the other loafers about the place, too.

You will enjoy the all-star cast in the uproarous comedy of "Our Boarding House." It will be one of the features in the Daily News colored comic strip, beginning next Sunday. Be prepared to have the Major puff himself up and tell you about himself, in his own modest way, egad.

Ripley Is Deluged By Fan Mail

Robert Ripley, creator of the famous "Believe It Or Not" cartoon, is shown here coming up for air after looking through contest mail. The Daily News is conducting the contest in Cisco. Have you sent in your believe-it-or-not? Better do it now.

Believe It Or Not Letters Coming In

Believe it or not, they're coming in, these oddities that Ciscoans have collected.

The believe-it-or-not contest sponsored by the Daily News in Cisco begins today, and already readers have been sending in their favorite odd, startling facts, with proof to back them up. Some are bringing their facts to the paper, while others are mailing letters describing them.

Today's winning believe-it-or-not will be published in tomorrow's paper, along with the contributor's name. The prize contest will last two weeks, a winner being announced for each day. Better send yours in.

When the contest is completed, the Daily News will send in the names of the winners to the national contest judges, who will select three, who will be awarded free trips to Hollywood and the Pacific Exposition at San Diego, accompanied by no less person than Robert Ripley himself, creator of the famous "Believe It Or Not" Cartoon of world fame.

Study the Daily News pages for cartoons and pictures showing believe-it-or-nots. Maybe you know some facts even more startling than those shown. Send them in——as many as you like——but be sure you can prove them. You may be one of the national prize winners of a free trip to California where you will meet famous movie stars and see Ripley's "Believe It Or Not" collection.

TERRE HAUTE SEEKS TROOPS TO END STRIKE

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., July 22. —National guardsmen were sought by city officials today to prevent violence in a general strike which paralyzed business and threatened to cut off the food supply pof Terre Haute.

All deliveries of food supplies were halted and stores closed rapidly as strike leaders went through the city urging all workers to join the walkout. They met with almost instant success. Virtually every industry is unionized. There was no violence.

L. B. Brown, president of the Enamel Workers local union, which precipitated the walkout estimated there were 60,000 persons cooperating in the strike. Although Terre Haute has a population of 63,000, he explained that coal miners employed throughout Vigo county have joined the walkout. Union operators officials refused to com operators officials refused to comment on Brown's statement.

The labor union refused yesterday to sanction the strike.

Walkout of teamsters and truckers had the most serious effect. It halted the delivery of bread, ice, fresh meat, and other commodities. The city's three ice plants were closed. Grocery firms were closed when they were unable to make deliveries.

BONUS ARMY CONVERGES ON CAPITOL HILL

WASHINGTON, uJly 22 — The 1933 bonus army, 200 strong, converged today on Capitol Hill to canvass congressmen individually in behalf of immediate cash payment of the bonus.

Roy Robertson, leader, said the men would go through the house offfice building, attending talks of congress.

When the house convenes, he said the group would try to reach those they had not been able to talk to during the morning.

The bonus group met in orderly fashion with a special detail of a dozen policemen keeping a watchful eye. Robertson said he did not intend to hold any meeting or to do anything which would invour official displeasure.

Capitol authorities said there would be no attempt to disband the group as long as it continued in orderly fashion. They said no attempt would be made to stop the men from attempting to contact congressmen.

Agriculture Import Quota Bill Okehed

WASHINGTON, July 22. — The senate today approved a proposal for establishment of agricultural import quotas in connection with AAA legislation.

The proposal was in an amendment offered by Robert LaFollett and would permit the president to fix quotas as a means of safeguarding price gains achieved through American processing taxes.

The vote was 60 to 17.

PRORATION OF GAS IS TO BE ON TWO BASES

AUSTIN, July 22 — The Texas Panhandle production on August 1 will be allocated on two bases in separate zones under the first natural gas proration order issued by the railroad commission. An eastern zone, embracing Wheeler county is allocated on a basis of 160 acre tracts. West of that the allocation is on 640 acre tracts.

The 486,512,000 cubic feet daily representing market demand from the field is allocated on a combination of acreage and well potential factors.

The allocation is 482,000,000 cubic feet today for the west and 88,500,000 for the east panhandle or Wheeler county area. The total is larger than reported market demand to care for additional purchasing nominations received since the demand was computed.

PRESIDENT AVOIDS FIGHT WITH BUSINESS ON WEALTH-TAX PLAN

(Copyright, 1935, by United Press)

WASHINGTON, July 22. — President Roosevelt has vetoed a plan to avoid a bitter fight with big business organizations over his tax-the-rich program. The house ways and means committee was informed that the president wants increased taxes on big corporations today.

The president had received congressional suggestions that the increased corporations tax feature be eliminated from the program. Charges by organized business that a graduated corporations income tax would be a levy against efficiency in industry had resulted in a tacit agreement by committee democrats to abandon such attack in favor or an excess profits levy.

As a result of Mr. Roosevelt's suggestion, it appeared both a graduated corporations income tax and an excess profits tax would be included in the measure which the committee hopes to have ready next week.

Bleak areas where scraggly vegetation belies the legend of tropical lushness, a hazardous, mountainous terrain, insect infected lowlands, reptile ridden underbrush—these are some of the things that await the invaders of Ethiopia. Above is one of the sights the Italian forces are likely to see if ordered into action against Ethiopia—Lake Tsana in the Danghel-Ber region adjacent to Eritrea, where Premier Mussolini is concentrating his troops. Below, on the way to Addis Ababa, the difficult, militarily dangerous mountain country around Gondar is shown.

KATY MEN TO HOLD MEETING HERE AUGUST 4

Maintenance of Way employes of the M.-K.-T. railroad have selected Cisco for their meeting place August 4, it was announced today by J. C. King, E. L. Laird, Cisco section foreman.

About 200 persons are expected to attend. This will include employes and their families from not only the Texas Central division but also from the South Texas division.

A business meeting will be held in the Woodmen hall, it was said. Some sort of outing and sightseeing trip is being planned. A box lunch will be provided and a musical program is being planned.

Through the efforts of Laird and other Cisco Katy men, the meeting was brought here as a part of the general move to establish the city as a resort and to advertise it generally.

MAGNOLIA PICNIC GOES TO BROWNWOOD

The Magnolia picnic for 1936 will go to Brownwood it was announced today by Cisco representatives who attended the outing at San Angelo Saturday. Brownwood had 25 workers there seeking the nomination of their city as the site for the next picnic.

Lloyd Hughes, Dick Giles, and Ed Huestis represented Cisco. They said that Cisco would have a good chance to obtain the picnic in 1937, and that they were given a very favorable reception Saturday.

NO APOLOGY FOR ADDRESS TO BE GIVEN

ADDIS ABABA, July 22. — Emperor Haile Selassie gave new evidence today that he is prepared to accept only an honorable peace to a war in which he proposed personally to lead his warriors into the field.

Confident in his destiny, and believed by many of his countrymen to bear a charmed life, the 43-year-old emperor courted an open break with Italy, it was learned, by a cold firm reception to an angry protest by the Italian minister over his speech of last Thursday.

The Italian request, the government was reported to have replied only with a complete refutation of charges by Mussolini that the emperor had usurped power.

Instead of explaining his speech or apologizing for it, the government, at the emperor's orders characterized the Italian claims and charges as inaccurate.

WAR OR PEACE VERDICT THIS WEEK

(Copyright, 1935)

ROME, July 22. — Benito Mussolini, defiant and in fighting mood, is due this week to give Great Britain and France the final word of war or peace with Ethiopia.

If the week passes without an approach to specific negotiations, it was indicated today, war will be almost inevitable.

Britain and France, it was learned, were working on what they feared and Italy believed offered the last hope for peace.

These consultations, it is understood on reliable authority, have reached the state where Mussolini, his own war minister and the final authority, must be consulted and say the word that mean a precasious of hostilities when the Ethiopian rainy season is over in September.

End of Navy Ratio System Is Foreseen

LONDON, July 22 — The International system of limiting navies by ratio, such as the 5:5:3 among Britain, the United States, and Jappan ,is about to be discarded, Sir Eolton Eyres-Monsell, first lord of the admiralty, announced today.

Suspect Held After Greenville Robbery

GREENVILLE, July 22 — Police today held a suspect for questioning in connection with the kidnaping and robbery of Roy Pounds, Sulphur Springs produce man.

Pounds reported that he was drugged Sunday and taken to a lonely spot where he was robbed and abandoned. He said the robbery occurred after he sold a load of produce there.

Seek To Bolster AAA Legal Status

WASHINGTON, July 22 — The senate today sought to bolster the legal status of AAA by adopting an amendment specificially validating benefit payments to farmers who signed the government crop control contracts.

Scenes to Trace Growth of City

Remember the scenes of early days in Cisco? Remember the changes that marked progress from the time between little Red Gap to the present important West Texas city?

The Daily News, in a special edition due to apear shortly, will attempt to trace the progress of the city through scenes of the little town that grew steadily until the oil boom, and then weathering the depression, settled down to steady growth again. Both word pictures and photographs will be used to show this progress.

Do you know any stories of Old Cisco or have you any old pictures of the city. Remember those picnics at Lake Bernie years ago before the Lion-Rotary park and Lake Cisco were dreamed of and when Lake Bernie was the pride of the city? Remember? The Daily News would like to hear about it.

Beauty of Texas Tree Belts

Some people will go to Europe to watch day dawn from the tip of an Alpine peak, when they will not get up at 5:30 to see from their own side porch a sunrise of the same excruciating beauty. Similarly some Texas vacationists will return from roaming the East or the West with eyes dulled to the splendor of the woodlands soon to flame across a narrow strip or the Lone Star state.

From Oklahoma two belts of timber cross the Red River and grow well into Texas. One of these, known as the Western Cross Timbers, reaches a misshapen finger down through Montague county, Breckenridge on the west and Fort Worth on the east, to the hills of Kerr and Kendall counties on the south. Tree lovers scattered over the United States know that this timber belt will dress itself more brilliantly next fall than other to be found in the entire country. Cisco people will have grandstand seats at the dress parade.

"New Englanders may carol about their golden Indian Summers," says Lulu C. Gough of the biology department at John Tarleton college, "but their yellow maples cannot compare with our autumn reds, splashed with the dark relief of the evergreens."

Sumacs, black jacks, and Texas oaks produce the vivid hues that contribute largely to the Cross Timbers' title for All-American Fall Wardrobe Championship. Providing contrast are the spots of yellow where cottonwoods and pecans grow, and the interspersed green of cedars and live oaks. As Dean J. Thomas Davis of Tarleton says, "Together they make poets of the crudest of us."

Federal Court Declares TVA Valid

Another very important decision has been made by a three judge federal court. Just the other day in the city of Boston a two judge federal court declared the AAA program and its processing tax unconstitutional. This was the decision of the circuit court of appeals in and for New England, with one judge dissenting. It was held by the two judge opinion that the congress had delegated its power to the president and hence the act was void.

The fifth United States court of appeals for this district (at New Orleans) upheld the constitutionality of the Tennessee Valley Authority's yardstick electric program. This was a reversal of an anti-TVA ruling, by Federal Judge W. L. Grubb of Alabama and swept aside all argument that the federal government may not go into the business of selling surplus electricity. It was held "It is within the province of congress to adopt any reasonable means whether for lease or sale, for disposing of the surplus hydro-electric power at Wilson dam; that the use of transmission lines to facilitate sales cannot thoroughly be said by the courts to be unreasonable or inappropriate; that of course, it is true that the government of the United States cannot engage at will in private business, but it by no means follows that it cannot sell property which it owns, even though in doing so it may enter into competition with other public or private owners of property."

In answering the challenge that congress had no authority to establish such a vast operation in competition with private business within state domains the court held:

"We live under a dual government of divided powers — federal and state—not under two separate governments of conflicting powers. The powers of navigable waters rented to the government are not in conflict with but necessarily superior to the dominion over such waters that the states reserve for themselves. It leads nowhere to say that the federal government in exercising its constitutional powers, acts within state domain since at the same time it is acting within its own domain as well."

Judge Grubbs had held that in creating TVA that congress had exceeded its constitutional authority. The three judge court reversed and remanded the Alabama judge's decision and now the case returns to his court for rehearing.

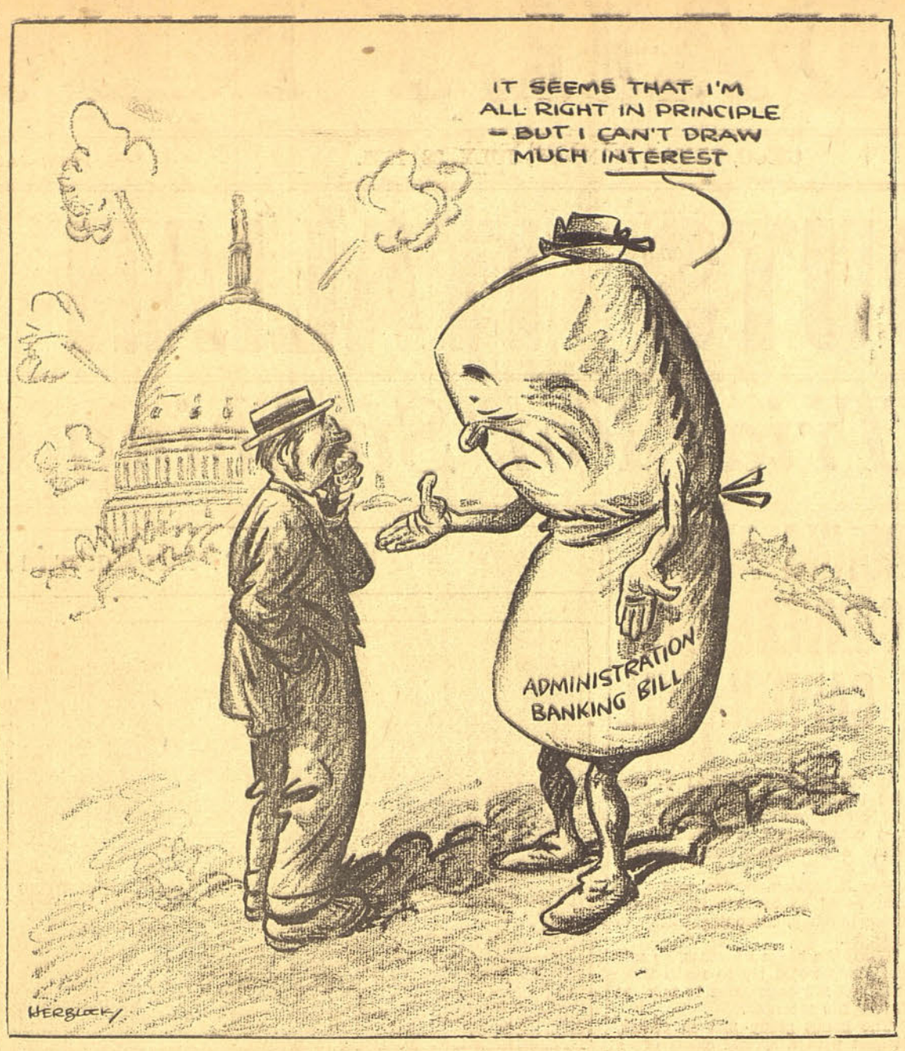

Attorneys for the government and the attorneys for the private power companies agreed that the last word would be said by the supreme court of the United States. It was a tremendous victory for the Roosevelt New Deal administration. It was a victory that came in the wake of the Massachusetts decision where a two judge court declared that the AAA processing tax program was unconstitutional because the congress had delegated its authority to the president of the United States.

Young Roosevelt Gets Demo Baptism

Elliott Roosevelt was not ousted as a vice president of the state committee of the faction known as "young democrats of Texas." He was overwhelmingly sustained. And why not? He married a Texan. He votes in Texas. He is a resident of Texas and he has been given a place in the set-up of the Dallas committee handling the Centennial celebration. He has an American background of 350 years. He did not ask for the job of vice president. It was thrust upon him. He accepted it.

The man who named a jackass as the emblem of democracy realized that there were many clowns in the democratic wigwam and that clowning was necessary for publicity purposes and to enable the performers to get near the throne or bray like the wild animal which goes on the rampage occasionally on the broad plains of Texas and other commonwealths. Why not make the rooster the emblem of the party? He crows most of the time but he is a bird of great dignity and knows when to efface himself.

Crowded Out of the National Spotlight

UNDER THE DOME AT AUSTIN

By GORDON K. SHEARER
United Press Staff Correspondent

AUSTIN, July 22 — Astrologists would have described the week at the state capitol as a period of unrest and friction. Maybe the unusual position of the celestial bodies had something to do with it. Whatever the cause, there was almost an open breach between Attorney General William McCraw and Chairman Ernest O. Thompson of the Railroad commission over rivalry of their organizations in the war to stop "hot" oil in East Texas.

SHEARER

A statement that might have been like the shot at Sarajevo was withdrawn just in time to prevent an open breach.

The state highway department also suffered from unrest. Quickly and mysteriously, there spread around the highway building and the state capitol a report that a highway department shake-up was about to take place. This, too, apparently quited down.

Indications, later, were that there would be no change in important offices in the department, at least so long as D. K. Martin is a member of the commission. What will happen when the San Antonio member's term expires in 1937, will depend upon who is named then.

Uneasiness spread rapidly through the department, for Chief Engineer Gibb Gilchrist and many of the staff were appointed before either Commission Chairman Harry Hines of Wichita Falls or Commissioner John Wood of Himpson became members of the commission. Two members have a majority vote. If they should agree that they want a change and a voice in naming new employees, they could have it.

The week was unrestful for the governor's office, too, though it failed to cause uneasiness. Governor Allred had announced that he would not comment on any communication given to the press for publicity before it reached him.

He made an early exception to the rule. Dry leaders let the press know that the governor was being asked to take the stump against repeal of prohibition. His answer that he favored submission, opposed repeal and accorded every one else the same right, to vote his convictions, quited the situation which might have been a ticklish one, politically.

One reason that the governor doesn't get into the campaign is that he knows from experience that he could not be temperate on the stump. When he begins talking, he becomes vehement. He has been a jury lawyer and pleads his cases to the limit. If he campaigned against repeal, he likely would find himself denouncing all antis in his enthusiasm. Many of his close friends and strong supporters are antis who are thoroughly sincere in the belief that prohibition does not prohibit.

He also feels, possibly, that his campaigning would reach against the dry side. A governor always has many active critics in the first summer of his administration. He has unavoidably disappointed many persons about jobs. His policies have not been what many people hoped and expected, so there might be opposition to what he advocated from personal dislikes.

Personally he is not averse to announcing his views on the proposed amendments to the state constitution. He is against prohibition repeal; for old-age pensions and for emergency submission of constitutional changes. He has not finished a study of the other four.

Ir the legislature is permitted by constitutional change to provide old-age pensions, he thinks the legislators will do so sensibly, not authorizing grants beyond the ability of the state to pay them. The cost can be limited by strict eligibility requirements.

Confederate pensions are far in arrears, not because of inadequate tax but because eligibility has been enlarged more rapidly than time has decreased the number of pensioners.

Women who were born 8 years after the Civil War ended can get Confederate pensions if they married a veteran 50 years after the war started and lived with him 10 years preceding his death. Those eligible originally, were more limited.

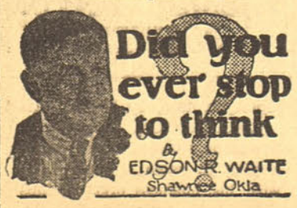

Rep. Kenneth McCalla, Houston, has been designated to head the wet drive in Harris county for votes for prohibition repeal. He says he never took a drink. A personal abstainer, he is against bootleggers. As a former assistant district attorney in Harris county he had practical experience with the difficulty of enforcing prohibition.

Prospect Park Zoo, New York, shortly will be overrun with Texas civets, bobcats, mountain lions, armadilloe, horned toads and deer.

In an unguarded moment, Former Governor Alfred E. Smith of New York, has written to Gov. James V. Allred saying that he, personally, will appreciate contributions of native animals for the zoo.

Tablets describing the animals and noting the names of donars are to be placed on the Zoo cages. Gov. Allred has passed the request-message on to Texans inviting them to communicate with him or with Former Governor Smith of New York.

Add another to the list of new Texas laws that are under fire in the courts. The latest is the act requiring permits or certificates of authority from the State Insurance commission for operation of burial associations. Associations at Amarillo, Palestine, Mexia, and four other places have joined in a suit to be heard by District Judge Chas. Wheeler on July 26.

When times are good, competition is keen.

When times are dull, competition is keener.

Business concerns that use comprehensive, honest advertising stay ahead of their comeptitors in both good and dull times.

Newspaper advertising creates an increasing desire for advertised goods.

Under any circumstances, business will grow faster by using newspaper space. Newspaper advertising will increase the demand for anything anywhere.

The longer business concerns wait for business to come without asking, the longer they will wait for business to come their way.

PROGRAM WILL SHOW WORK AT CAMP BULLIS

SAN ANTONIO, July 22—A program of varied events, designed to demonstrate every phase of student activity has been prepared by officials of the C. M. T. camp at Camp Bullis for Visitor's Day, Friday, July 26.

An invitation to all parents, relatives and friends of students attending the camp has been extended by officials of the camp. They will be entertained at the Hostess House and guests at noon and evening meals. No advance notice need be given.

The day's schedule will start at 9 a. m., when all the new types of motor vehicles recently purchased by the Army and used in the regular C. M. T. C. training will be displayed. At 9:40 a. m., an exhibition of massed calisthenics will be given. A dismounted parade has been set for 10:15 o'clock. The remainder of the morning will be devoted to visiting and to permit students to show their parents and friends around the camp grounds.

A chicken dinner will be served for the visitors in the students' mess halls and an opportunity will be given for visitors to inspect the kitchens, maintained by experienced Army cooks and mess sergants all of whom are graduates of the Army Cooks and Bakers School at Fort Sam Houston.

Afternoons are devoted to athletics. For the Parent's Day program, a track and field meet has ben scheduled. Medals will be awarded individual winners of the various events and rivalry between companies will be keen.

One of the features of the day will be a retreat parade at 5:30 p. m. Fourth year students will be in actual command of all the companies for this impressive ceremony. After the evening meal, a program of entertainment has been arranged by the students and will be staged in the Hostess House at an early hour to allow the guests ample time to return home.

The hearing has been set for August. Palmer was given a life sentence in June.

Behind the Scenes in Washington

BY RODNEY DUTCHER
NEA Service Staff Correspondent

WASHINGTON—This is a story of how a big joke was played on the New Dealers, of the way a congressman can most effectively guarantee himself a miserable future in Washington, and of the explosion of the theory that there is any such thing as a progressive Republican congressman from the east.

The hero of it all is Congressman Ralph O. Brewster of Maine. A former governor with a reputation as a foe of the "power trust."

Brewster is now celebrated as the man who precipitated a House investigation by charging that Thomas G. Corcoran of RFC had threatened stoppage of Maine's famous Passamaquoddy project in case Brewster didn't vote for the administration's proposal to dissolve the biggest public utility holding companies.

The story of how Brewster reached his present position is remarkable and instructive.

• • •

SOME years ago Samuel Insull went to Maine with the intent of adding it to his empire. His agents obtained passage of a legislative bill permitting export of electric power from the state. Brewster, as governor, vetoed the bill.

Thereafter, Brewster ran for the Senate and was defeated by the power and other interests. But last year he was elected to the House over a Democrat described as a "100 per cent power trust man."

Progressives first began to worry about Brewster a few days ago, when the Bland-Copeland merchant marine bill was up. They opposed it, labelling it a steal for the ship operators and shipbuilders.

Brewster, a member of the merchant marine committee, signed a minority report excoriating the bill, but merely voted present on the vote to report it out. At a time when Moran of Maine and Wearin of Iowa, leaders in the fight, expected him to be introducing amendments to the bill, they found Brewster was out of town.

• • •

VOTES on the holding company bill followed almost immediately. Again Brewster was missing. A friend, advised by administration agents, found him and escorted him to the Capitol.

That friend and many others in the galleries gasped in amazement as the famous foe of the "power trust" marched up the aisle with Republicans and conservative Democrats in a vote against substitution of the Senate bill dissolving big holding companies.

Reaction against Brewster among his friends of the last few months set in immediately. These progressives say Corcoran had merely told Brewster that if he wouldn't support the administration against the "power trust" he couldn't be trusted to participate in plans for the Passamaquoddy project.

• • •

SO now a supposedly impartial investigation of administration and utility lobbying is supposed to be staged by a rules committee which voted almost unanimously against the holding company "death sentence."

An anti-administration Tammany Irishman named O'Connor, chairman of the committee, is pitted against a brilliant young Irishman named Corcoran and it will be a grand fight.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

JO DARIEN, finishing her first year in college, learns her father is out of work. Jo hunts a job and secures part time work in a marine supply store. There she meets wealthy, handsome DOUGLAS MARSH who offers her the job of hostess at his inn at Crest Lake. Jo accepts and this causes a quarrel with BRET PAUL to whom she is engaged. Jo breaks the engagement.

She goes to Crest Lake. Marsh warns her that many people consider his mother eccentric. Jo is sure that MRS. MARSH dislikes her.

BABS MONTGOMERY, a school acquaintance who is jealous of Jo's popularity, arrives with her parents, PETER FRAGONET, motion picture star, and his wife, also engage rooms at the inn. Marsh takes Jo to the station to meet Mr. and Mrs. Fragonet.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

THE Fragonets walked hurriedly to the car almost before Marsh had a chance to get out of it.

"Doug!" Fragonet cried jovially. "How glad we are to get off that blasted train. I hope your place is worth it. I'd have flown up—but Edna doesn't like planes."

Mrs. Fragonet laughed. "I think Pete can get me into a plane when it's time to return to Hollywood. . . . How are you, Doug?"

"Great, Edna," Marsh told her. He turned to Jo Darien. "This is Miss Darien. I think you two will be great friends. . . . And this, Jo, this is the one and only, the stupendously charming, the colossal—"

"Never mind, Doug." Fragonet stepped forward, grinning. "My name is Peter Fragonet, Miss Darien."

Jo liked him at once. She decided she liked him better off the screen than on, for now he seemed real and natural and without pose. His voice was wholly unaffected. It was, in fact, quite ordinary, and without the deep quality she had heard in the sound pictures.

"Edna and I will sit in front," Douglas Marsh said. "I hope you and Pete won't mind the rumble seat, Jo."

"She'd better not," Fragonet said, smiling at Jo. "Me, I like rumble seats." He helped Jo into the rear compartment and hopped in beside her. As the car pulled away from the station, he heaved a great sigh. "It's certainly great to be here." He turned to Jo with a sudden troubled expression. "No other Hollywood denizens at Crest Lake, are there?"

"No." Jo told him lightly. "The best we can boast so far is a department store owner and a long-distance aviator."

• • •

"GOOD," he said humorously. "I don't like other Hollywood people around. Especially movie people. I want to be the whole show." He grinned at her, his hat pulled down against the wind. They might as well have been alone in the car, for Marsh and Mrs. Fragonet seemed absorbed in their own talk, but against the sound of the motor and the rush of wind the two in the rumble seat could not distinguish their words.

"You know," Jo confessed, "I don't know what to say to you. I've thought of movie stars as people from another world."

"Well," Fragonet laughed, "we're from another world, possibly. But it's a mighty human world just the same. Look!" He held out his wrist. "Pinch me—and you'll find I'm just like anybody else."

Her eyes twinkling with delight at Fragonet's bandinage, Jo pinched his wrist and raised her eyebrows in mock astonishment. "You are!" she exclaimed. Then she grew suddenly serious. "Honestly, though, I've enjoyed your pictures a lot, Mr. Fragonet."

"Don't you dare begin that!" he warned her. Then: "Have you known Doug long? I don't seem to remember you being with him when he was in Hollywood—and I'm darned certain I would remember if you'd been there."

"Your memory's still good. I've known Mr. Marsh only a few days. You see, I'm working for him."

"Oh, I see. His secretary?" Fragonet asked.

"No. . . . I'm the hostess at Crest Lake Inn."

"And a delightful one, I'm sure," Fragonet said.

When they reached the Inn and debarked from the roadster, Jo thought that Mrs. Fragonet glanced at her and the actor rather suspiciously—as if she hadn't trusted them together. But Jo tossed this from her mind as imagination, excused herself from the trio and went to her room.

Fragonet, she decided, was an admirable young man, and deserving of all the success he had attained. She had thought he would be arrogant and blown with ego; but, surprisingly, he was—well, he was something a great deal like Bret Paul. A handsome Bret Paul who was careful about his dress.

• • •

JO had dinner in her room, then read for an hour or so before beginning leisurely preparations for the dance that evening. She was not quite certain as to what her duties would be at the dance. She had half-expected that Marsh would escort her, or at least advise her, for this was the first formal function at the Inn since her arrival. But he had said nothing further about it since the morning he had told her he planned the affair for Friday night, and had ordered down an orchestra.

As she was laying out the new beige lace she had bought at Lytsen's the telephone rang and she heard the voice of Todd Barston.

"I wondered if you'd let me take you to the dance tonight," he said gaily. "The truth is, I'd much rather stag a dance—but I know I'll never have a chance to dance with you unless you're very much with me."

For a moment Jo was nonplussed. She was not at all certain whether she should accept such an invitation from one of Marsh's guests—and there was still the possibility that Marsh expected her to be free.

"Well, you see, Mr. Barston—"

"I would have asked you much sooner," Barston broke in, "but I had an idea our young owner was taking you. I just learned a moment ago he's dining with the Montgomerys in their cottage and they'll all be over later. So I grabbed the telephone and my courage—and here I am."

Jo's heart skipped a beat, and she couldn't have honestly told herself why. But in a flash she pictured Marsh and Babs Montgomery dancing together, and Babs smirking beside his shoulder.

"What I was going to say, Mr. Barston, is that I may have some things to look after, and—"

"Oh, I won't mind that. I'll just hang about until you get through pouring coffee or waxing the floor, or whatever it is you have to do."

Jo laughed in spite of herself. "All right, then. Knock on my door about nine."

His knock came very promptly at nine, and when Jo stepped into the hall the aviator's gaze swept her up and down appreciatively.

"You're lovely, Jo Darien. You—"

• • •

HE stopped suddenly, looking beyond her with a sudden, embarrassed expression. Jo turned to see Mrs. Marsh coming quietly down the hallway.

"Good evening, Mrs. Marsh," Jo said. "Are you going to watch the dancing tonight?"

For a moment Mrs. Marsh did not reply. She glanced at the door which Jo had not yet closed, and then at Todd Barston. Then, very deliberately, she said. "I hardly care for modern dance music, Miss Darien. Thank you, and . . . good night. Good night, Mr. Barston."

When she had disappeared up the stairway to the Marsh apartment, Barston let out a long low whistle. "That old gal certainly disturbs me. She looked at us as if she thought we might have been picking the embroidering out of the towels."

Jo's face was flaming. "Obviously she thinks you were in my room."

"Well, good Lord, even if I had been, I don't see—"

She forced a laugh. "We mustn't let the evening be spoiled. M... Marsh really doesn't mean a... thing."

The band was already playing when they reached the Inn's huge ballroom—and it was a band which set Jo's blood tingling and her foot tapping. The Fragonets had come down early, and were dancing together, the only couple so far on the floor.

"Let's not have such music go to waste," Barston said, and Jo drifted away in his arms. Across the floor, towering above his wife's red head, Peter Fragonet nodded and smiled; and Jo knew from his glance that Barston had been right, and she was lovely in the beige lace.

Soon other couples dropped in, some who had come to Crest Lake for the dance and the week-end, Jo guessed. She knew none of them, and felt suddenly strange and alone. Resentment welled up inside her at the thought that Marsh, after being so solicitous all week, had left her to shift for herself. "And yet," she told herself, "I've no right to feel that way. What I have here is a job. I mustn't forget that." Nevertheless she was extremely glad Todd Barston had called her.

As the music stopped the Fragonets joined Barston and Jo. At the next song Jo danced with the movie actor. She could not help smiling at the thought of what Tubby Davis would say if she could see Jo now, held in arms which had crushed all the beautiful figures Tubby so envied on the screen. The lithe, slender figures of the Crawfords and the Harlows and the Colberts. Only—it was queer but true—only she would rather have seen Tubby's familiar, cherubic face at that moment than be dancing with Peter Fragonet!

HITLER'S AIMS GET SACRIFICE FROM SISTER

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the second dispatch giving intimate glimpses of Adolf Hitler, his sister, Paula, and their lives.

By F. C. M. Jahn

United Press Staff Correspondent

VIENNA, July 22. -- Paula, only sister of Adolf Hitler, gave up love for "The Cause" 15 years ago and today she lives in voluntary seclusion on a small allowance from the dictator of Germany.

In character, as well as in physical respects, Paula has much in common with her brother. The resemblance between the two is striking. Both possess an indomitable will-power and once their mind is set on something nothing will deviate them from their goal.

Hitler's spinster sister is a bit shorter and more stocky of stature than her brother. Her cheekbones are a trifle higher and give her a Slavic touch.

Gave Up Marriage

Soul and heart Paula is devoted to her brother. For her nothing but Adolf and his "Cause" exists.

Fifteen years ago, when a pretty buxom girl of 23, she was in love with a young man of promising talent and artistic ambitions. At that time the Nazi party was making its first program in public.

Paula felt that in her heart there was no room for both the "Cause" and love. She chose the "Cause" and told her lover so. The two have remained friends ever since.

It is believed by his Austrial friend that Hitler, like his sister, has renounced marriage because he is convinced that, for a character like his, family life and the "Cause" are incompatible.

Prefers to Live in Vienna

One-sidedness and stubbornness which both possess to an extraordinary extent, is perhaps the main reason why Paula chose to stay in Vienna instead of following Anna Rauppach's, her stepsister's, example and going to live in Germany, where she would meet a more congenial atmosphere.

If not wittingly, at least subconsciously, she may feel that continued contact between two characters of such equal obstinacy would unavoidably lead to clashes.

She is, therefore, satisfied with an annual visit to her brother, and, for the rest, to admire him from afar.

Shuns All Publicity

Paula is absolutely free from any personal ambition.

When in Germany she tries to be as unobtrusive as possible and never permits her name to appear in the press.

She detests publicity of all kinds and lives in the greatest retirement. Never has she given an interview, nor has any stranger been admitted across her threshold.

She dresses plainly and wears dark garments, although she possesses artistic tastes and has arranged her apartment with great thought in light and gay colors.

Nepotism Not Tolerated

With her brother, she agrees that the "Fuehrer's" relatives should not draw material profit from his high position.

She therefore deeply regrets that she cannot find a job and must depend on her brother's allowance.

Paula has no political aspirations, and she carefully abstains from taking part in political activities. Nor has she ever permitted any ovations which Austrial Nazis would be only too glad to offer to the "Fueher's" closest relative.

Hitler Stubborn as Boy

A childhood occurence, recently told by friends here, provides a vivid insight into the make-up of Hitler.

"One day," Paula said, "our father almost killed Adolf, who was then about 12 or 13 years old, because he demonstrated for the Anschluss (union between Germany and Austria). From his savings he had purchased a black-red-golden ribbon, the symbol of the Austrial Pan-Germans who agitated for the reunion of their country and were, therefore, considered as traitors under the Hapsburg regime.

"This ribbon Adolf proudly dangled from his waistcoat pocket. The school teacher noticed it and informed our father.

"Father, a customs official at Braunau, on the Austro-German frontier, and a convinced follower of the Hapsburgs, got into such a fury that he beat the boy senseless.

"Nevertheless, Adolf did not yield, but continued, although clandestinely, to wear his ribbon.

"This was not the only thrashing Adolf had to undergo from his father, who was an irascible man and who considered his son as a stubborn and obstinate good-for nothing.

"Adolf was, it is true, always very taciturn and reticent.

"When asked by his family what he was pondering about, he usually replied with a shrug: What is the use of telling you? You would not understand," Paula concluded her narrative.

Bernie Cummins To Play Here Tonight

Bernie Cummins' idea of a vacation is going on tour to meet the thousands of radio fans whose letters, post cards, and telegrams have been piling up during the past few months as a result of the orchestra's broadcasts over WJN, Chicago, and the Columbia network of stations.

In line with Bernie's "get acquainted plan," arrangements were made with Lloyd Hughes to bring the dapper young maestro and his orchestra to the place "where West Texas dances" for an engagement at Lake Cisco tonight in co-operation with Music Corporation of America who are managing the famous dance band's personal appearance tour.

"I really mean it when I say I want to get out and get acquainted with the fans," Bernie declared during a recent interview in Chicago. "You know, when one receives countless letters and cards from radio fans who invariably express a wish for the band to visit their community, it really makes one want to travel to some of those towns."

Bernie is bringing to Lake Cisco the same great band that has been featured during the past year at the Trianon ballroom in Chicago and has been heard in many coast to coast broadcasts over the Columbia network of stations. After playing a series of college engagements throughout the east and south, the orchestra will return to Chicago where they will again resume playing at the Trianon.

Canadian Camp Is Opened by Climbers

BANFF, Can., July 22 — The three-week encampment of the Alpine club of Canada has opened in the Mt. Assiniboine area with camp pitched on the shores of Lake Magog.

As usual, the camp is open to non - members who qualify for membership by ascending such peaks in the Assiniboine area as the Climbing Committee approves. But there is ample time for recreation other than climbing. Even Alpinists require preliminary hikes. Each day's activities are concluded with a nightly camp-fire meeting where songs and stories alternate with talks on geology and climber's technique.

Special interest centers on one of the hikes to Assiniboine Pass and down to Cascade Rock, where a waterfall drops 1,500 feet sheer from the snow above. The precipices of Cascade and Gilbraltar Rocks rise 2,000 feet above the trail. Directly opposite are the secret hollows of Cave Mountain, which are to be explored by veteran Alpinists.

The Canadian Pacific Railway has detailed two of its Swiss guides to plan routes and accompany the more difficult ascents. In addition to Mt. Assiniboine itself, the following peaks will be scaled: Mt. Eon (10,860 ft.), Mt. Aye (10,640 ft.), Mt. Magog (10.050 ft.), Mt. Sturdee (10,300 ft.), Mt. Marshall (10,465 ft.(, Mt. Gloria (9,500 ft.), Mt. Aurora (8,500 ft.(, Mt. Alcantara (9,910 ft.), and Mt. Brusiloff (9,990 ft.).

STRONG AND MANLEY

EAGLE RIVER, Wis. — Strong and Manley is the name of a hardware store here.

Spring Wool Being Shipped to Boston

KERRVILLE, July 22 — A total of 67 cars of spring wool has already been moved from Kerrville to Boston buyers.

About 80 cars will be shipped from here, ranchmen estimate.

Badly washed ranch roads and hot weather caused delays in shearing and consequently wool is late in reaching the warehouses of a large wool and mohair firm here.

This firm has sold 2,250,000 pounds of 12-months wool to a Boston firm at prices ranging from 23 to 23 1-2 cent, and eight-months wool to another company at 21 to 23c.

Some of the clip concentrated here comes from ranches as far as 50 miles away.

CLOCK STOPS

ALAMEDA, Cal. — On orders of City Manager B. Ray Fritz the chimes on the city hall clock were discontinued. In protest, the clock itself stopped three hours later.

An Obligation of Automobile Ownership

When you buy an automobile you incur a big responsibility.

If your car injures another person or damages his property, you are obliged by law to make good this loss.

Automobile accidents are frequent.

Juries award large sums.

Why carry this burden yourself?

A Travelers Automobile Policy with adequate limits lifts the financial responsibility for an accident from your shoulders.

I looked up Satisfy and it says—

SAT-IS-FY. Something that pleases, gives satisfaction; something that just suits. For example, you are pleased with a dress. As applied to cigarettes, it means one that is MILD—that is not harsh or bitter; one that TASTES just right.
