President Offers Conditional Amnesty For Draft Evaders

Rains Drench Area

The President also was moving toward a major announcement on his amnesty plan for Vietnam draft evaders and military deserters. Ford held a meeting on the subject with key advisers last Saturday and aides indicated several decisions have already been made.

Ford instructed the board to give "priority consideration" to those men now imprisoned for such offenses and asked that

The clemency board will consider only the cases of persons who apply before Jan. 31, 1975, and it is expected to complete its work no later than Dec. 31, 1976.

Ford noted that the cutoff date for amnesty, March 28, 1973, was the day the United States withdrew the last of its forces from Vietnam.

Two inch rain during the night produced curb-high water and minor flooding in Abilene and throughout Dimmit, Zavalla and Maverick counties in South Texas.

In addition to confirmation of the election, an annual report on operations of the hotel will be presented by manager Bob Zaph.

The Coronado Inn has served as a community meeting place for many organizations and business concerns and has been popular with the traveling public over the last 14 years.

Your Horoscope

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, Sept. 16
Your birthday today: Opens a big year during which you start fresh and use the past as education. Your life proceeds with energy, eagerness, alternating between quiet preparation and forward-driving action. Relationships continue to thrive despite changing conditions. Today's natives are imaginative, generally talented in politics or public entertainment.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: Make use of your tolerance in coping with the day's challenge and a complex week. Do no more than you must. Every change now is irreversible.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: Expect heated discussion, avoid personalities. Take safety precautions, particularly with unfamiliar equipment. Improved financial conditions are indicated.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: Be helpful to others; bring them together. Travel, events away from home, aren't too productive. Leave business and career out of present adjustments.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: You can make definite decisions, progress in your work, begin new phases of operation, if you ignore personal and family distractions. Remember that machines do not care.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: Rushing sets you back—so don't! Expect dissent, stifling impulsive reactions for the sake of peace and cooperation. Contracts, agreements of any sort are delicate.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You spend money in all directions. Make sure that no special demand gets out of hand. Defer large purchases. Good records are essential.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Associates are impatient despite the need for caution. Interpret the situation correctly and use self-restraint. Slow down while handling appliances.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Stay out of public view, although it may not be easy. Be discreet by not joining in social unrest, needless complaints.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: Competition surfaces among normally close collaborators or regular associates. Keep your share at a minimum. Update facts and figures now.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Too much seems needed to be done too quickly for reasonable thought. Do what you can to simplify all operations. Keep your sense of humor, but don't be flippant.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]:

18]: Prefer easier pathways today. Let others quibble over legal issues, differences between individuals and groups. You aren't necessarily an arbiter nor an official critic.

Places [Feb. 19-March 20]: Anything will set off a bout of squabbling. Take care to choose game pieces you can comfortably leave in play. Prepare for recovery and progress later.

TUESDAY, Sept. 17
Your birthday today: Finds you well on your way to a new life and learning in the process. Physical and intellectual adjustments are easily made this year, while relationships and emotional growth are labored, at best, difficult. Today's natives blend fact and fantasy and keep everybody happy if they themselves are treated well.

Aries [March 21-April 19]: For many, this is a day of great religious significance. Normal schedules and appointments are not likely to be feasible. Conserve your time and energy. Be ready for sudden incident.

Taurus [April 20-May 20]: You easily divert from regular routes and routines. Be prepared to revise your tactics with close friends and family as they change their minds.

Gemini [May 21-June 20]: This is a day of decision. You make subtle new discovery and turning points in relationships. Hold in check any extravagance whatsoever.

Cancer [June 21-July 22]: One word leads to another; in a short while you arrive at a whole different perspective. It's up to you to follow a constructive, dignified path.

Leo [July 23-Aug. 22]: What looks like a chance to conclude a deal is something else. Think it over: Is it really in your best interests? Let others rush into needless travel if they wish. You don't have to join them.

Virgo [Aug. 23-Sept. 22]: You have second thoughts and mind your own affairs. Business of any sort is subject to momentary confusion, temporary changes. It's time to learn new angles.

Libra [Sept. 23-Oct. 22]: Be reluctant to force issues or to have them forced upon you. Check your facts and figures as you proceed, even though you may have little or no commercial activity.

Scorpio [Oct. 23-Nov. 21]: Problems arise slowly from distant or past causes. No on-the-spot answers are promised. Secret schemes are best avoided. Attention to health and its preservation is advisable.

Sagittarius [Nov. 22-Dec. 21]: All agreements should be kept tentative and confidential until it is time for action. Well-meaning friends complicate your plans at the last minute.

Capricorn [Dec. 22-Jan. 19]: Minimize dealings to complete routines, troubleshooting. Defer decisions or major projects. Listen carefully to anything loved ones say; think before reacting.

Aquarius [Jan. 20-Feb. 18]: Money continues to concern you, and no immediate solution is indicated. You eventually resolve matters through hard work. Get started now.

Places [Feb. 19-March 20]: You can stay free to act through discretion and avoiding large groups or mass attractions. Steer clear of final settlements, signing contracts.

Prisoners Swapped

NICOSIA (UPI) — Greek and Turkish Cypriot authorities today swapped 200 sick and wounded prisoners taken during the fighting that followed Turkey's invasion of Cyprus two months ago.

The exchange got under way at 2 p.m. outside the Leda Palace Hotel on the "Green Line" separating the Greek and Turkish sectors of Nicosia.

The prisoners arrived in buses from opposite sides and the exchange was supervised by the U.N. peace-keeping force and the international committee of the Red Cross.

Anti-Busing Crowd Holds March

BOSTON (UPI) — Defying police, a noisy, unorganized crowd of 200 white youths and parents staged an anti-busing march through a section of South Boston today, the third day of a court-ordered plan to integrate Boston's public schools.

One arrest was reported.

There was no violence, but a few youths threw a couple of ashtrays at police. Other children ran across the hoods and roofs of parked cars.

Some 300 police tried to contain the crowd with horses, motorcycles and foot patrolmen, but they kept spilling out and tried to move up side streets towards South Boston High School—the most racially troubled of the city's 80 schools affected by the federal court order.

Police cordoned off East Broadway and Emerson Street thus preventing the group from marching on the school.

The march began shortly after classes started and as it appeared that a black boycott of South Boston High School softened when four buses full of black children attended classes.

Enforcing a 1906 law, Police Commissioner Robert McGreehan and Mayor Kevin H. White ordered all bars and liquor stores in South Boston closed until at least 4 p.m. Under the law, the police commissioner and mayor can temporarily suspend all liquor licenses during emergency conditions. Refusal to obey can result in a fine of $200 and revocation of the liquor license.

Early estimates were that about 200 students, including 110 to 115 blacks, children were in classes at South Boston High. Only 61 children, including 25 blacks, 32 whites and four other minorities were in the school Friday. The school has a projected enrollment of 1,480.

Seven buses arrived safely at Gavin Middle School in South Boston. Officials said about 250 children were in classes at the school today, with more blacks in attendance but less whites. There were 207 children at the school Friday. It has an enrollment of 894.

Police, some on horses and motorcycles, were sent to L Street, several blocks from South Boston High School, after receiving reports that a crowd of 200 white youths and parents had gathered to protest the busing. But when they got there, they said they found no unruly group.

HANG ON, SNOOPY — Science Demonstrator Roy Wickerham joins an old friend, Snoopy, in presenting the Southwestern Bell program, "Little Things Mean a Lot," which explores the world of communications science and technology. The program will be presented locally Wednesday.

NO RED BARON

Snoopy To Make Visit At High School, Rotary

Snoopy may curse the Red Baron, but not Roy Wickerham.

Wickerham is Southwestern Bell's well-traveled science demonstrator who's in town — along with sidekick Snoopy — to talk about new developments in communications technology and how today's scientists are working to meet tomorrow's service needs.

Wickerham's popular show, titled "Little Things Mean a Lot," will be presented to Pampa High School and Pampa Rotary Club on Wednesday, Sept. 18.

Gary Stevens, Southwestern Bell manager in Pampa, said Wickerham's new presentation demonstrates how solid state technology — tiny transistors harbored in infinitesimal integrated circuits — has improved the quality of telecommunications, diversified its services, as well as helped keep costs down.

And where does Snoopy fit in?

"Thanks to today's compact electronic devices, stuffed animals — like Roy Wickerham's Snoopy dog — can be made to talk, explained Stevens.

"Therapists working with handicapped children who have difficulties in talking with adults or other children have found toys like Snoopy an ideal way to overcome these problems. Such talking animals are made available by the Telephone Pioneers of America, our service organization made up of telephone people."

Stevens said Wickerham uses Snoopy along with other gimmicks and audio-visual aids to tell how the transistor — and the solid state technology it spawned — is being applied by the Bell System to meet a variety of society's needs.

In the show, Wickerham discusses such innovations as the transistor, the solar cell, millimeter waveguide and fiber optics — all which came out of Bell Telephone Laboratories.

He also demonstrates some of the studies now being conducted at Bell Labs on human memory, and how it relates to work being performed on designing memory systems for applications in telephone switching equipment.

Wickerham, who makes 300 personal appearances each year before organizations in south and west Texas for Southwestern Bell, has made several visits to Bell Labs research facilities in New Jersey to stay abreast of new developments in communications technology.

The result of his latest trip is his new show, "Little Things Mean a Lot."

Social Security Q And A

(Have you a question about social security? Address it to Howard L. Weatherly, Branch Manager, Social Security Administration, 1541 N. Hobart, Pampa, Texas 79065. You will receive an answer in this column or by mail.)

By H.L. WEATHERLY
Q. I have been hearing about the new Federal payments for aged, blind, and disabled people. Why is social security operating this program?

A. Supplemental security income payments are for people with little or no income and limited resources who are 65 or older, or blind, or disabled. Social Security is handling the Federal program because it is already in touch with many of these people through already existing social security benefit programs, and because social security has a network of field offices and established data processing systems.

Q. In April I hired a woman to come to my house twice a week and help me with the cooking and cleaning. When must I report her wages?

If you pay your household employee cash wages of $50 or more in the July, August, September quarter, you must report her wages and send the social security contributions to the Internal Revenue Service by the end of the month of October.

You can get a copy of the leaflet "Social Security and Your Household Employee" at any social security office for more complete information on this subject.

Area Fair Sets 'Medicare Day'

According to Rex B. Baxter, general manager of the Tri-State Fair, the fair will once again honor Medicare beneficiaries in the Panhandle Area.

Baxter said Thursday, Sept. 19, has been designated "Medicare Day." On that day all persons having Medicare will be admitted to the fairgrounds free of charge upon showing their Medicare card.

Travis C. Briggs, manager of the Amarillo Social Security Office, said there are 22,000 persons living in the Panhandle eligible for free admission.

Briggs added that his office will have a special exhibit in the Southeast corner of the Commercial Exhibits Building throughout the fair. It will be manned each evening from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m. and all afternoon and evening, 12:30 to 8:30 p.m. on "Medicare Day" and Saturday.

Questions regarding Medicare and related subjects will be answered and free literature distributed.

Local Woman Wins Contest

Shannon Loter, 2325 Navajo missed only one game, picking Atlanta to beat Dallas, and came closest on the Pampa-Dumas tie breaker to win the second Pampa Daily News football contest.

The winner correctly guessed SMU over North Texas, LSU over Colorado, Arkansas over Southern Cal, Pittsburgh over Florida State, Lefors over McLean, Groom over Claude, Spearman over Canadian, Clarendon over White Deer and Rams over Broncos.

She picked Pampa to beat Dumas, 23 - 6, in the tie breaker.

Jeff Christener, Box 474, Wheeler, also missed only one game, choosing Southern Cal over Arkansas. He said Pampa would win by only six, 20 - 14, and Drake would beat West Texas, 30 - 22. The Buffs won, 37 - 17.

Jerry McLaughlin also missed Southern Cal - Arkansas and also picked a 34 - point total in the tie breaker, picking Pampa over Dumas, 21 - 13. On the West Texas tie breaker, McLaughlin said Drake would win 19 - 10.

Dog Fighters Bribing Sheriffs

DALLAS (UPI) — A former participant in an illegal dog fighting ring says promoters have bribed the sheriff's of Texas counties to warn them of possible raids by other police agencies, a Dallas newspaper reported today.

The Dallas Morning News, in a copyrighted story, quoted an unidentified source who said, "They (promoters) give the sheriff $500 to warn them if some other police plan to raid the fights."

The source said the promoters "buy the law" in counties near the Dallas-Fort Worth area.

The News said gambling, prostitution and the carrying of firearms were prevalent among the dog fights, often described as "dog shows." The News cited animal society investigations which showed dog fighting was more active in the Dallas-Fort Worth area than in any region of the nation.

The source said an underground magazine, called "Pit Dog Report," is published in Dallas and has a national circulation of about 3,000.

Prostitutes reportedly work the crowds of 300 to 400 persons who frequent the fights which usually match American Pit Bull Terriers trained since birth to fight.

The News said the locations of the dog fights are kept secret by promoters until just before the fights. The participants are then taken to the hidden location—usually a tent or remote barn—by chartered bus or car caravan.

Gummen Shoot 2 Catholic Legal Figures At Homes

BELFAST (UPI) — Gunmen shot and killed two of Northern Ireland's leading Roman Catholic legal figures at their Belfast homes today. Another man died when a bomb exploded at a provincial factory.

The deaths brought to 1,071 the number of persons killed in five years of sectarian violence involving Protestants, Roman Catholics and security forces.

The extremist Provisional wing of the outlawed Irish Republican Army in a statement to a local news agency claimed responsibility for gunning down Judge Rory Conaghan and Magistrate Martin McBirney, 54, both Catholics and both killed at about 8:30 a.m.

An Army spokesman said the third victim was Michael McCourt, director of a small engineering works in Pomeroy, a County Tyrone town 35 miles west of Belfast.

He was killed instantly when a booby-trapped radio exploded in his face. The radio and an umbrella had been left at the front door of the factory and McCourt had taken them inside, the spokesman said.

Police sources said a youth posing as a postman shot Conaghan, 56, at the door of his fashionable Malone Avenue home. The judge's eight-year-old daughter was standing behind her father when he answered the knock at the door.

Pardon Didn't Lift Nixon's Spirits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Former White House physician Walter Tkach says President Ford's pardon was no help in lifting Richard M. Nixon's spirits.

He described Nixon as a "man looking back and wondering what had happened to topple him from the presidency."

Tkach said he has given up, for the time being, trying to persuade the former president to enter a hospital for treatment of the thrombotic phlebitis in his left leg.

well enough to appear, he said that in general: "I'm recommending to him that he not get under any more pressure."

Tkach, an Air Force major general, was relieved of his White House duty after Nixon resigned and is now command surgeon at nearby Andrews Air Force Base. He flew to San Clemente, Calif., Friday to examine Nixon at the urging of the Nixon family, and said he would go there again late next week.

Tkach said in an interview that he had detected "no depression," but found Nixon suffering from exhaustion and "more concerned" than Tkach observed him to be two weeks ago.

tired," said Tkach. "He doesn't have that bounce to attack."

Had the pardon helped his spirits?

"The pardon didn't do him a damn bit of good," replied Tkach.

He said he feared a buildup of more tension or pressure could lead to a heart attack because Nixon is under "severe physical strain."

feared he could develop more blood clots if he was bedridden in a hospital: "He probably thinks being in bed helps develop more clots."

Tkach and Dr. John Lundgren of Long Beach, Calif., who accompanied him on the examination of Nixon at San Clemente last Friday, reported then that a new clot had developed in Nixon's left leg.

Tkach repeated the statement he made Saturday, that Nixon told him: "If I go into the hospital, I'll never come out alive." He said that when the former President spoke so fatalistically, "I stopped right there."

He said he believed Nixon

Hubby's nasty jokes fall flat

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1974 by The Chicago Tribune

DEAR ABBY: Is there something wrong with my sense of humor, or is my husband sick? He's a tease, a clown and an all around kiddier. The problem is that most of his kidding is downright cruel. He has said things to the children and me that have hurt us deeply, and when we become upset, he laughs and says, "I was only kidding...can't you take a joke?" He's done this with others, but— heaven forgive me—sometimes I wish someone would punch him. Why does a person have to hurt and insult others and then try to pass it off as a joke? Don't tell me I'll get used to it. We've been married for 16 years, and I still hate it as much as I did 16 years ago. I honestly believe he's sick. And if he is, can he be cured? TEASED ENOUGH

DEAR TEASED: When aggression and hostility are built into a person's personality, he is indeed "sick." And he can be cured only when he is made to realize what he is doing, and the reason for it. That's hardly a job for a wife and children. It should be done by a very close friend, a therapist, or an empathetic clergyman.

DEAR ABBY: I have been in business long enough to know that in dealing with customers, patience and courtesy is always the best policy. But what do you do when a customer calls you on the phone and curses you out without giving you a chance to explain? To make matters worse, he refuses to give you his name, but keeps cursing you out in four-letter words. BAMBOOZLED IN BEND, OREGON

DEAR BAM: Say, "Sir," if you can't give me your father's name, please give me your mother's. I'll bet he hangs up in a hurry.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for letting your readers know that although many unmarried mothers are keeping their babies, the Salvation Army's Booth Memorial Hospitals are still open and serving a good purpose.

My son was born at such a hospital. I was five months along when I entered Booth. Soon I realized that my impression of unwed mothers' homes was totally wrong. It's not a place where "bad girls" go to have their babies. I met many really nice girls who had gotten messed up one way or the other. Many would-be fathers had just walked out, and these girls had no other place to turn.

I received group counseling, individual counseling, room and board and the knowledge that I wasn't the only girl about to have a baby all alone. I recall all the get-togethers—we girls had and how we talked about our fears. For me, the decision was a good one. For others it would not have been. It was rough. The looks, the criticism, the tears.

I decided to keep my child, although I had no job and no husband in sight. For me, the decision was a good one. For others it would not have been. It was rough. The looks, the criticism, the tears. My story has a happy ending. Seven years later, I married a wonderful man who adopted my son. I know this is too long for your column, but please, Abby, keep reminding girls that homes for unwed mothers offer more than bed and board. It's their counseling that saves so many lives. Every unwed mother needs counseling, no matter how much she feels she doesn't. BEEN THERE

DEAR BEEN THERE: Orchids to you for a fine letter.

Everyone has a problem. What's yours? For a personal reply, write to ABBY: Box No. 69700, L.A., Calif. 90069. Enclosed stamped, self-addressed envelope, please. For Abby's new booklet, "What Teen-agers want to Know," send $1 to Abigail Van Buren, 132 Lasky Dr., Beverly Hills, Calif. 90212.

At Wit's End

By ERMA BOMBECK

For the last few years neighborhood businesses have been going out of their way to aesthetically fit into a neighborhood.

Our bank blends so well into the surroundings that I expect any day to see a bread card in the window. And we have a service station so homey I feel guilty if I pull in after dinner when he is trying to get his grass cut before dark.

When a beautiful two-story colonial was going up, we took our Welcome Wagon lady aside and said, "Be sure and find out if she works. If they like music, if he has a riding lawn mower and if they are over 30." She came out of the house in shock.

"Well," we asked. "They have two fire trucks," she said.

"Then they have children," I said excitedly. "Probably boys with a whole fleet of Tonkas."

"You don't understand," she said slowly. "They have two full-scale fire trucks. It's the Fire Department."

We were quite prepared for a restaurant in Hawaii called Plantation Gardens because the tourist brochure said it once belonged to a plantation owner who converted it to a restaurant. "Look for a place that looks like an old mansion," instructed my husband.

"Will there be a sign on it?" asked one of the kids. "There won't have to be a sign," said my husband, "after all, how many old plantations could there be?"

About half an hour later as we all hung out the window checking each house, we began to notice an abundance of cars. They lined the highway on either side and my husband said,

"I'm glad we got reservations. I think we're here."

He slowed the car and there it was to our left—a spacious white two-story mansion with rocking chairs on the porch for diners to await their turn and gardens to tour for those with cameras.

We parked the car and walked across the beautiful lawn to the entrance where a line was formed. When we got inside the door my husband leaned over to the maitre d' and said, "We're the Bombecks."

"So nice of you to come," he said softly.

"You came so highly recommended," said my husband.

"I suppose you get a lot of your business from AAA," I smiled.

The man looked at us blankly.

"There are five of us and we have reservations," boomed my husband.

It wasn't until we were being escorted to the larger room that we saw the sign. "Rest Haven Funeral Home."

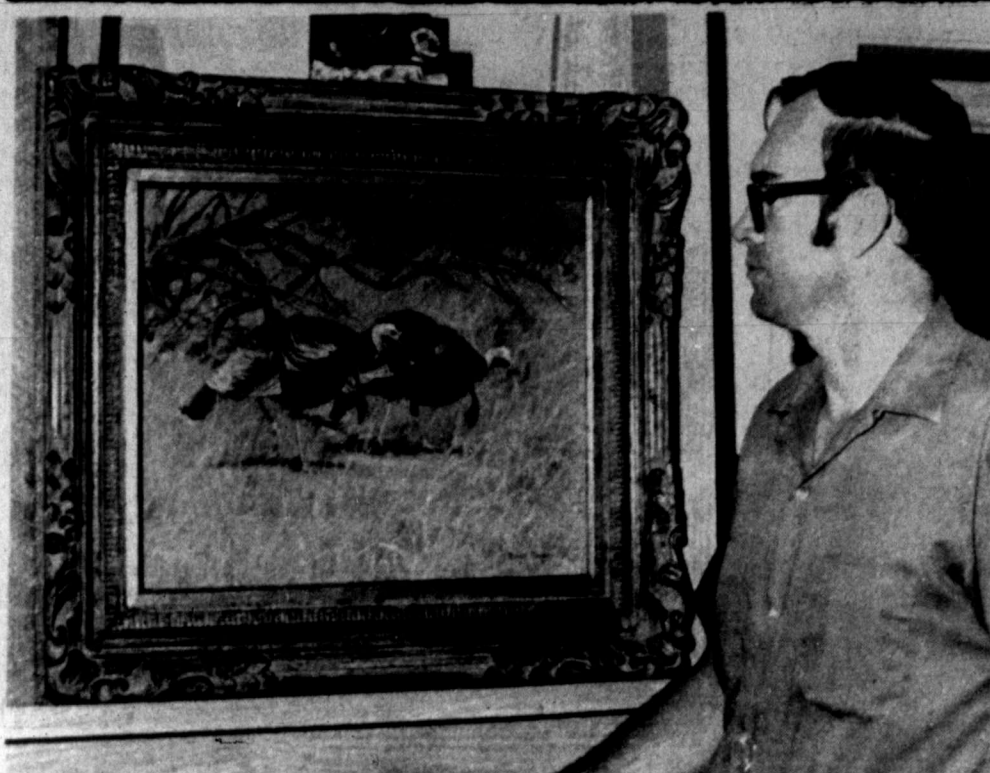

UNTAPPED FUEL

UNIVERSITY PARK, Pa. (UPI)—Dr. John D. Ridge, head of the mineral economics department at Penn State University, says there are vast untapped mineral and fuel resources beneath the continental United States.

Ridge proposes that regularly spaced exploratory holes be drilled across the nation to find the oil, coal, gas and other fuels. He estimates the cost at $3 billion, but he says that would be repaid many times over in the fuel found.

RICHARD THOMPSON
Painting "Grasshopper Hunting"

Annual Arts Festival Will Be Held Oct. 13-14

"Grasshopper Hunting," an oil painting of Rio Grande gobblers by Richard Thompson was purchased by the Pampa Fine Arts Association for the Top O' Texas Arts and Crafts Festival Oct. 13-14 at the M.K. Brown Auditorium.

The Festival is an annual event sponsored by the Fine Arts Association and features local and area artists and craftsmen who desire to exhibit and sell their work. To determine who receives the painting, a drawing will be held at 4 p.m. Sunday Oct. 13. It will be preceded by a demonstration by the artist.

A Pampa resident, the artist is self-employed as a painter and sculptor. He says he prefers to depict the wildlife and landscapes of the southwest, but does not limit himself to these subjects alone. Any subject which captures his eye may serve as a model for either a painting or a bronze.

Thompson studied painting privately during his high school years and continued the study of art at West Texas State University where he received a Bachelor of Arts degree. He was employed on the art staff of Irrigation Age Magazine and later became Art director of Russell Stationery Company. After moving to Pampa, he began to devote his full time to painting and sculpture. His work is currently exhibited at galleries in Ft. Worth and Santa Fe.

United Fund Plans Told To ESA Ladies

Kappa Alpha chapter of Epsilon Sigma Alpha held the first fall business meeting recently in the City Club Room. Following the opening ritual, George Stevens and Luther Robinson told of the coming United Fund campaign. Rush season guests were Mrs. C.E. Gilliland and Mrs. Darrell Linn.

All members participated in a skit, "Scope of Epsilon Sigma Alpha," presented by Mrs. Fern Berry.

Mrs. Irvin Hungerford and Mrs. Bob Yost gave reports on the Jerry Lewis Muscular Dystrophy Telethon which was held in downtown Pampa on Labor Day weekend.

Announcement was made that ESA Men's Club will sponsor a dance Sept. 21, in the City Club Room.

St. Vincent's Hall with Tiny Lynn furnishing the music.

"Back To School" was the theme of the meeting, with each member responding with the grade she is in, which equals the number of years as a member of ESA.

Closing thought was given by Chaplin, Mrs. K.R. Dodd.

Refreshments, in the form of a school sack lunch, were served to other members. Mmes. Ed Bailey, Bill Bennett, Maxine Dunham, Bob Eastham, Roy Floyd, Lewis Hackley, Milton Jones, John McBride, Glenn McConnell, Joe Miller, Ken Shearer, Norman Sublett, Gerald Vaughn, Bob Warnock, Ray Wooldridge, and Bob Yost.

Next meeting will be the Preferential Tea, Sept. 22, in the City Club Room.

My mother used to tell me she made potato flour when she was a girl. It took several days and lots of work but she said it made the best cakes she ever tasted; they were so moist.

Now I have 50 pounds of potato starch, as they call it now. Can it be used in place of cornstarch? In bread? Would you have a recipe for cake made with potato flour or starch, whichever you choose to call it? Any other ways it might be used? Mrs. Emma A. Parker, Brigham City, Utah.

Whether potato flour and the potato "starch" you have are identical I can't say. In-depth research reveals nothing on potato starch, but potato flour is still much in evidence.

I doubt you will find much of it at supermarkets across the country. It is produced from potatoes that have been cooked, then dried and ground. It is used chiefly in soups, gravies, breads and even cakes when used in combination with other flours, or by itself in sponge cakes.

To substitute as a thickener, use 1-1/2 teaspoons in place of 1 tablespoon all-purpose flour; or in baking, five eighths cup potato for 1 cup all-purpose flour.

Here is a simple sponge cake recipe in which you may use either potato or rice flour. Sift three fourths cup of such flours with 1/2 cup sugar 3 times or more. Beat 8 egg yolks until light and creamy. Stir into the flour mixture. Now beat 9 egg whites (yes, nine) until stiff. Fold into first mixture gently but quickly. Pour batter into an ungreased tube pan. Bake at 350 degrees about 45 minutes.

To cool, turn pan upside down as you would an angel cake. If your pan doesn't have the little brackets that keep it up off the surface use snap clothespins or suspend pan over a funnel or bottle.

If you would like to try your hand at potato flour muffins you will need 1/2 cup of the flour, 1 teaspoon baking powder, 1/2 teaspoon salt, 2 teaspoons cold water, 4 eggs (separated) and 1 tablespoon sugar.

Mix and sift potato flour and baking powder. Add salt and water to egg whites. Beat to a heavy foam. Sprinkle sugar over the surface and beat until stiff but still moist and glossy. Beat egg yolks until thick and lemon colored. Fold into beaten whites, then fold that into the flour mixture. Turn into ungreased muffin tins.

Bake at 350 degrees until delicately browned on top, about 15-20 minutes. Loosen sides to remove muffins and serve at once. Makes a dozen.

The booklet, "Luscious Loaf Cakes and Tea Breads," can be yours by sending 25 cents and a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope to Nan Wiley in care of the Register and Tribune Syndicate, Des Moines, Iowa 50304.

KARPIN ON BRIDGE

By FRED KARPIN

It will become perfectly obvious, after observing East's play at trick one in today's deal, that he did the wrong thing. But the question is WHY his play was wrong. As a bridge detective, it is your job to find the reason that will convict East of "conduct unbecoming a good bridge player."

The bidding:
North East South West
1♦ Pass 2NT Pass
3NT Pass Pass Pass

Opening lead: Five of ♦.

It should be stated that South's response of two notrump was a horrendous call. But, as frequently happens, "evil" triumphed over "good."

On West's opening lead of the spade five, the eight was played from dummy, and East agonized for about a minute trying to figure out whether to put up the ten or the king.

If West were leading away from the jack (say, J-x-xx-x), then the play of the ten would force South's ace; and all South could then make in spades would be the ace. But if East played the king, to be taken by South's (presumed) ace, then dummy's queen of spades would be promoted into a second spade winner for declarer.

Finally East decided to play the ten, on the assumption that South had the ace (based on South's direct jump to two notrump). South made haste to win the trick with his jack. He then exposed his hand and claimed the contract with an overtrick.

It is evident that if East had put up the spade king, the defenders would have been enroute to cashing five spade tricks. Had East thought the situation through, he would have put up the king. But this required looking at the set-up through the eyes of the declarer.

Suppose you were the declarer, and had held in your hand either the a-x or the a-x-x of spades. What would you have played from dummy at trick one? Would it have been queen, in the 50-50 hope that West's opening lead had been away from the king? Surely every declarer in the world, finding himself in the above-described position, would have put up the board's queen.

Hence, did not declarer's play of the eight - spot from dummy at trick one indicate that HE DID NOT POSSESS THE ACE?

Dallas Museum To Exhibit Rembrandt Painting

In the mid-1600s, the great Dutch master, Rembrandt, painted a tender and loving portrait of his only son, Titus. The Dallas Museum of Fine Arts is currently exhibiting this portrait for a limited period through the generosity of the Norton Simon Foundation. The portrait will be on view through Oct. 20.

In announcing the event, Harry S. Parker, III, Director of the Museum stated, "Rembrandt is surely one of the great creative artists of all time. The opportunity to show the extraordinary portrait of his son, Titus, is a high moment in the history of the Dallas Museum of Fine Arts."

"For many visitors during the State Fair this may be a once in a lifetime chance to see a great Rembrandt painting. I am sure that all Dallas citizens will join me in thanking the Norton Simon Foundation for lending us a painting of this importance."

The winsome portrait captures the boy Titus at about age seven, with a princely mien and aristocratic composure, belying the childlike chubbiness of his youth. This painting is consistently referred to as the earliest portrait of Rembrandt's son, one of the artist's favorite models, and has been dated between 1648 and the early fifties.

The name Rembrandt conjures up visions of one of the most famous artists of all time, an unsurpassed painter who captured the ages of man from the first bloom of childhood to senility. Rembrandt was an indefatigable portrait painter. He experimented with light effects, expression and movement with his subjects who ranged from burghers and scholars to the socially accepted and socially outcast. His portraits were marked by a deep and intimate probing into human personality.

The Simon painting holds a somewhat exceptional place in Rembrandt's oeuvre. The position, costume and overall impression of aristocracy in this work is more often associated with Rubens than with Rembrandt. The full frontal light which reveals the boy's full face is without any of the dramatically obscuring shadows typical of Rembrandt's portraits.

The painting offers an unusual insight into Rembrandt's method of working since the entire lower section was left in its first, intuitive stage of development. The composition is broadly blocked in, with highlights in swift and sure strokes suggesting arms, chain and what might be a falcon held on the boy's left wrist. The shirt, face and hair are developed in further detail in a harmony of warm hues of high value, creating a luminous contrast to the rich darkness of the hat topped by warm highlights.

The Museum of Fine Arts has scheduled the exhibition of the Rembrandt portrait to coincide with the crowds expected for the State Fair of Texas. The dates were set specifically to offer this rare opportunity to view a Rembrandt painting to the largest possible number of Texans. The Museum will install the painting with special explanatory panels, a gallery give-away with full information on the artist and this particular portrait and full color postcard available in the Museum Shop.

DOG CATCHER AXED

MUNISING, Mich. (UPI)—The Alger County dogcatcher, who refused to cut off the ears of the dogs he shot, got the ax Tuesday.

Earl Rowley was fired Tuesday night a few minutes after the seven-member county Board of Commissioners rejected his final expense account — $15 for treatment of an ear infection he said was caused by the noise of gunblasts as he destroyed stray dogs.

Rowley was paid $3 for each dog he shot. When he submitted a bill last month, one dubious commissioner suggested Rowley cut off an ear from each dog he destroyed as proof he actually killed it.

But the dogcatcher refused. "There's no place to put the ears if I cut them off," he said, "and it's a silly idea. I wouldn't do it."

2 Killed, 7 Missing In Flash Flood

NELSON LANDING, Nev. (UPI) — Two persons are dead and at least seven are missing in a weekend flash flood that ripped through this shoreline settlement Saturday.

Clear and warm weather was forecast today as searchers prepared to resume rescue operations at daybreak for at least seven persons missing when a killer flash flood swept this shoreline settlement into Lake Mojave Saturday.

The bodies of Marian Carter, formerly of Santa Ana, Calif., and Nadine Peterson of Las Vegas, Nev., were recovered by rescue workers. They were reported to have been inside a restaurant near the shore of Lake Mojave when the flood waters struck.

A National Parks Service spokesman said the seven missing were presumed dead.

Gov. Mike O'Callaghan, who flew to the flood-devastated shore Sunday, offered state assistance in the search for victims and said he was there to make sure the rescue operation was coordinated properly.

O'Callaghan, who was also a regional director of the Office of Emergency Preparedness in Santa Rosa, Calif., said, "Anytime that you go to a disaster where human lives are lost, even with the sun shining brightly, it's a dismal scene."

The temperature Sunday was near 100 degrees, with one white puffy cloud marring an otherwise clear sky over the mountain where a cloudburst spawned the flash flood Saturday afternoon.

The flooding of Nelson Landing, located about 35 miles south of Las Vegas, Nev., was caused by heavy rains in the mountains about six miles west of El Dorado Canyon. Nelson Landing is located between the canyon mouth and the lake.

Water began rolling down the canyon and picked up debris and momentum as it neared the narrow funnel-like mouth of the canyon that leads into the lake.

The flood waters washed buildings, trailers, boats, cars and people into the lake as it churned down the canyon.

A 100-foot crane with a "clamshell" scoop was brought into the area to dig up the debris before rescue divers entered the lake.

The shoreline has been pushed several hundred feet into the lake by the debris. The bay, once about 40 feet deep and used for launching boats, virtually has been filled by mud and silt.

A Las Vegas police helicopter combed the lake that widens the Colorado River behind Davis Dam for bodies that may have been washed downstream.

Dr. Otto Ravenholt, Clark County coroner and health director, said many of the victims buried in the mud never might be recovered. He likened the result of the flood to an avalanche.

The National Parks Service had warned of flash flood dangers in the area and sought to restrict Nelson Landing to daytime use only. However, local protest groups persuaded political leaders to overturn the park service proposal.

The Almanac

Today is Monday, Sept. 16, the 259th day of 1974 with 106 to follow.

The moon is approaching its first quarter.

The morning stars are Venus and Saturn.

The evening stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Virgo.

American historian Francis Parkman was born Sept. 16, 1823. This is actress Lauren Bacall's 50th birthday.

On this day in history:

In 1630, the Massachusetts village of Shawmut changed its name to Boston.

In 1893, more than 100,000 persons rushed to the Cherokee Strip in Oklahoma as the area was opened to homesteading.

In 1963, the Asian nation of Malaysia was created, occupying the southern portion of the Malay Peninsula and the northern part of Borneo. The country is the world's largest producer of rubber.

AUXILIARY DONATION — Robert Monogue, right, Highland General Hospital administrator, accepts a check from Mrs. Carolyn Horn, first vice president of the HGH Women's Auxiliary for a $4,000 donation to be used in the purchase of monitoring equipment for the Surgery Department. TO CHART STRATEGIES

Rogers Opens Mini-Summit On Peacetime Inflation Rate

DALLAS (UPI) — Secretary of the Interior Rogers C.B. Morton today opened a mini-summit conference designed to chart strategies for dealing with the worst peacetime inflation rate in U.S. history.

More than 70 leaders of energy industries, government and special interest groups will make recommendations to Washington for consideration during President Ford's final economic summit meetings Sept. 27 and 28.

The Dallas conference, one of 13 being held at federal regional centers, will concentrate on energy and minerals shortages, recreation industry problems and environmental issues and their relationships to inflation.

Delegates to the all-day conference will include Texas Gov. Dolph Briscoe, Attorney General John Hill, eight senators and congressmen, administration officials and leaders of energy industries.

The first presentations after Morton's opening remarks were made by Gary L. Seever, member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, and Frank G. Zarb, associate director of the Office of Management and Budget for Natural Resources, Energy and Science.

The conference then broke into four workshop groups — oil and gas, minerals and materials, coal and electrical generation and recreation and the environment.

The workshops reported their findings to a plenary session focusing on drafting general conclusions and major recommendations, which will be forwarded to Washington for the closing conferences to be presided over by President Ford.

HISTORIC FORT LINCOLN, Neb. (UPI) — Fort Robinson, located near the northwestern tip of Nebraska, was established in 1874 to protect the Red Cloud Indian Agency.

Today the fort is one of Nebraska's better tourist attractions. Part of the old facilities have been converted into rooms for tourists.

It was from the fort that troops went out to fight at the Little Big Horn and at the massacre at Wounded Knee. Crazy Horse, war chief of the Oglala Sioux, was killed at the fort in 1877 and the northern Cheyennes of Chief Dull Knife were imprisoned there briefly.

During the 1920s Fort Robinson was the world's largest remount station, where thousands of horses and mules were bred, trained and issued to army units.

During World War II it became a training ground for K-9 dogs and also was a prisoner of war camp for German prisoners.

LAUDABLE AUSTIN, Tex. (UPI) — Sixty Texas families have qualified for special recognition for working the same land for 100 years or more, according to Agriculture Commissioner John C. White.

White said brief histories of the families and their land will be published in a land heritage directory.

Soviets Bulldoze Abstract Exhibit

MOSCOW (UPI) — "It's just like Czechoslovakia," one man shouted as a handful of Russians pelted the advancing Soviet bulldozers with balls of mud.

The mud failed to stop the bulldozers from smashing up an abstract art show, however, just as rocks could not keep Soviet tanks from overrunning Czechoslovakia in 1968.

Bulldozers, water trucks and burly police barreled in Sunday to disperse about 500 men, women and children gathered in a Moscow suburb for an unsanctioned exhibit of abstract art.

The Soviet Union, which only sanctions art depicting "Socialist realism," arrested six artists, manhandled some foreign diplomats and assaulted five Western newsmen.

A group of 13 underground artists picked a patch of wasteland in suburban Semenovskoye for the exhibition, hoping the out-of-the-way location would head off troubles with Soviet officials.

Authorities used an iron fist to break up the show, however, claiming the rainswept muddy tract southwest of Moscow was needed for building a "park of rest and culture."

Plainclothes police knocked one American correspondent to the ground and cracked the tooth of another. The U.S. Embassy promised to protest the assaults.

During the confrontation, some Russians tossed clods of dirt and mud at advancing bulldozers. The bulldozers rolled large sewage pipes toward the crowd, missing several persons by inches.

Plainclothes police, backed by burly young men claiming to be Young Communist League members, ripped the canvases out of the hands of artists. One man, trampled a painting under his boots, screaming curses.

An arrested artist, who was later released, said all confiscated paintings were burned on the spot.

A truck dumped a load of earth on one group, partly burying a girl of about six. She was rescued unhurt but shaken.

Women clutching children in their arms fell on the slippery ground as they tried to escape the speeding water trucks. Others were drenched scrambling up a grassy embankment.

The artists informed city officials of the show and sent out invitations. They said authorities did not ban the exhibition specifically, so they assumed it was all right to go ahead.

Uniformed police watched a group of men grab New York Times correspondent Christopher S. Wren, 38, and punch him repeatedly in the stomach. Another man smashed Wren's camera into his face, cracking a tooth.

When Lynne Olson, 26, of The Associated Press, protested, a man punched her in the stomach, sending her sprawling into the mud. Three other Western newsmen were roughed up and one was detained briefly by police.

THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS

...it tells you how

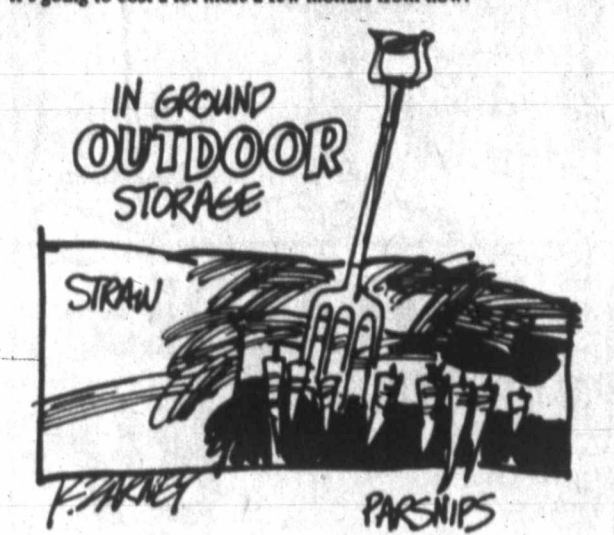

This is the season when home gardens and roadside stands overflow. Prices of produce are currently running as low as they're likely to until next summer. If you ever expect to stock the family larder with inexpensive fruits and vegetables, now's the time to do so.

But how will you preserve those bushels of edibles until you can use them? In any one of a half dozen ways!

If you have a freezer, fill it. If you don't, rent a box in the nearest cold-storage locker. Or how about getting together with a neighbor or two for a traditional canning party? Such work always goes easier when you have someone to share it with.

And have you forgotten that most fruits and some vegetables can be sun-dried? Or that kale, collards, parsnips, alfalfa, leeks and Brussels sprouts—to name a few crops—can be left right in the ground where they grew until you're ready to eat them? Or that most root vegetables and a few fruits can be safely kept in a storage cellar or a barrel buried in the backyard?

There are many ways to carry this season's harvest over for consumption next winter. If you've never tried them before, ask someone older and wiser to show you how to preserve the summer's bounty. Or check a few books out of the library. It's a shame to let all that food go to waste... especially since everyone knows that it's going to cost a lot more a few months from now!

For a mini-manual of instruction in the arts of canning, sun-drying and root-storing fruits and vegetables, send 10¢ and a stamped, self-addressed long envelope to THE MOTHER EARTH NEWS, Box 957, Des Moines, Iowa 50304. Ask for Reprint No. 77, HOW TO PRESERVE PRODUCE.

Giving Information On Cancer

By G.C. THOSTESON, M.D.
Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have read about cancer, lumps, etc., but I had a different problem. My breast had bleeding at the nipple. I had surgery and the test showed cancer. So my doctor had to remove my right breast.

That was two years ago. I will go for another six-month examination soon, but I would like to know why he told me I had cancer and when I ask him if I would need treatments to help control it he said no.

He tells me just as little as he can, but I ask to be told the truth. I've lived from day to day expecting something to happen. I know cancer can't be cured but why do they wait until you are dying before they give you all those treatments? I want to know. Should I go to a cancer doctor? — J.S.

Bleeding (or other discharge) from a nipple may be an indication of cancer, or may not. The test showed that yours was, and in due time there would have been a lump, as the cancer grew.

I do think you should have been told more. However, because of psychological differences in people, a doctor doesn't always know when a patient wants more information or prefers not to talk or hear about cancer.

Reading between the lines, I would guess this is what happened in your case. It required minor surgery (biopsy) and a test to tell whether you had cancer or whether something else caused the bleeding.

When the test showed cancer, the breast was removed. I would judge that the surgeon had reason to believe that the entire cancer was removed.

The cold fact is, though, that nobody can be immediately certain of this. That is why you go back at six-month intervals for examination.

The rule of thumb is that if cancer has not started to grow again after five years, it can reasonably be assumed that the entire cancer was removed, and you no longer have cancer.

In short, you are not correct in saying that "cancer can't be cured." It is being cured, in about one case in three, by removing it. The fact that the bleeding led to discovery of yours may be an indication that yours was found earlier than if you had waited for a lump to appear.

If there is a suspicion that all of the cancer has not been removed, then such rigorous treatments as massive radiation and chemotherapy are used.

But since (I gather) your doctors believe that all of yours was removed, there is no reason to resort to such treatment. Indeed, without some indication of where to apply the treatment, it would be pointless.

Under the circumstances, I doubt that you should keep on "expecting something to happen." Perhaps nothing will. Perhaps you were successfully cured by the surgery. But your doctor knows that five years of periodic examinations must pass before he can tell you so with assurance.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I am a diabetic. The other day I had to have a hearing on my unemployment, and I was so nervous I didn't know half the time what the man was saying. When I got home my sugar tested pretty high.

Ed Sullivan's back in the hospital, for further tests... Jennifer O'Neill, who have up her husband Joseph Koster for Elliott Gould, has now given up Elliott Gould for her husband... Frank Sinatra's now represented by publicists Solters-Sabinson-Roskin.

Entrepreneur Jerry Weintraub's buying a Beverly Hills home.

A new muscular image for male hairdressers? Ernest Borgnine portrays one in "Law & Disorder," and so does Warren Beatty in "Shampoo!"

The late David Selznick's son Donald is turning film producer... James Mason, Susan George and Perry King, filming "Mandingo" in Louisiana, were among those in the path of Hurricane Carmen, they rode it out in a hotel in Baton Rouge... Harvey Sabinson, who was one of the top B'way publicists (with David Merrick among his clients) is writing a book about the show scene, titled "You Were Wonderful, Darling!"

I'D RATHER BE LIGHT
Today's best laugh: John Markos grumbles about the potholed streets in his home town: "It was so bad that the spare tire in the trunk got a flat."

WISH I'D SAID THAT:
Taffy Tuttle's catty description of another gal: "She always looks as though she'd just washed her face — and then ironed it."

Remembered Quote: "If you've learned by losing, then you haven't lost." — Wayne Mackey.

Earl's Pearls: Remember (asks Bill Gold) when the term "high rise" referred only to the architecture, and not the rent?

Ruth Gordon, returning to B'way next month in husband Garson Kanin's play "Dreyfus in Rehearsal," recalls that when they were married in 1942 a headline read: "Actress, 46, Marries Director, 30."

She complained, "They might at least have said, 'Great Actress, 46...'"

Under Twenty

Under Twenty

By KURT LASSEN
Talking to Steve Baron, one is soon convinced that he is a deep thinker. Much of him lives deep inside. Listening to his music on his album, "A Wanderer Like You," reinforces the sense of depth felt in this comedian and comedy writer-turned-composer-musician.

Steve Baron is the wanderer and his words and music strike a responsive chord in a listener who, like him, is a wanderer.

"I wandered around," he told us, "until I got to Nashville and then I had the feeling that I'd found home, at least for the time being. There was a whole difference in the people. They truly cared and you began to know that their friendships counted for something."

New Jersey-born Steve spent most of his life on the New York scene after majoring in broadcasting at the University of Miami.

"At college," he recalls, "I got involved in the Coral Gables folk scene with people like David Crosby, Patrick Sky, Fred Neil, Buffy St. Marie and Tom Rush. I was president of my fraternity during the week and a folksinger on weekends. I alienated both sets of people," he said with a winning grin.

"Then I moved back to New York," Steve told us. "It was wild, then I lived in an apartment in Greenwich Village, paid $48.36 a month rent. The tub was in the kitchen, the toilet was in the hall and there weren't any lights."

Steve worked as a page at NBC, a job that has started many a person on a show business career. He teamed up with two ex-pages, Bob Minkin and Dennis Wholey to form the Hardy-Worth Players comedy group.

Out of this association came their hit single, "Wild Thing With Senator Bobby," an impersonation of Bobby Kennedy.

"Bobby Kennedy loved it, laughed at himself and invited us all down to Washington to meet him. We sat down and had a nice talk with him," the former comedian told us, "and he asked us if he really sounded like that. Then the last thing he did was to come up to our car with his dog and his kids and give us the peace sign."

Later on a rock show Steve shared a room with The Who, then on their first American tour.

That was when Pete Townsend and I became good friends," the result was a single, "Tell Me," which Townsend produced in 1971.

"Then," Steve recalls, "I put together the Steve Baron Quartet and we played the coffeehouse circuit in the Village. We got great reviews but then an album we recorded got lost because the record company folded. So did we," he added.

Then Steve went on "to do everything, you know," including driving a cab in New York City. He had a wandering, longing need to get out of the city, to play his gentle folk poems. It seemed natural for the wanderer to go to Nashville, which he did. Steve was armed with a batch of folk-soul songs he had penned in cabs and in the small Greenwich Village bathtub.

"The whole thing," Steve says, "is a circle. From the beginning it is a song that wants to say something. It leads into the arrangements and finally to a recording or a performance. I wanted the album to update my inner and outer life. It is like a time capsule of who I am up to today."

The circle is closed when Steve has finished his work. He looks for very little beyond it. Somehow one realizes that his statement is enough for him.

Cowboys Blank Falcons With Awesome Defense

ATLANTA UPI — Maybe now Dallas Coach Tom Landry can quit worrying about the Cowboy's defense.

If Sunday's performance is an honest indicator, the Cowboys should be one of the top defensive teams in the NFL this season.

The defense was awesome in the 24-0 opening win over the Atlanta Falcons. It allowed a net of only 108 yards, holding Atlanta to 64 yards on the ground and allowing only eight completions out of 28 passes.

"It was a good way to start," said Landry. "The whole defense had a great game, no question about it. We had not been playing very good defense in pre-season."

The Cowboy's offense wasn't bad either. Roger Staubach, starting at quarterback although he's still nursing a cracked rib, ran for one touchdown and passed for another to put Dallas into a 17-0 halftime lead.

Staubach wasn't as mobile as normal and got sacked seven times. But he completed 13 of 27 passes for 252 yards and gained 24 yards on four runs.

"I can still feel the muscle pull a little bit, but each week it is getting better," said Staubach, who wore a foam pad with a cast Sunday. "I think I'll be able to throw the football full go next week at Philadelphia. I think the ribs are good enough now so I shouldn't have any trouble next week."

The Pampa Daily News SPORTS

"You have to be lucky to shut out a team in the NFL," said Landry. "Every time they'd get started, they'd miss a play — get a penalty or catch the ball out of bounds."

But Landry admits his defense had something to do with that shutout.

"With Ed 'Too Tall' Jones, Harvey Martin and Bill Gregory, we've got a good defensive nucleus for the future. They were moving off the ball and tackling well."

Atlanta did not get past midfield until six minutes into the third period and it took a 49-yard pass interference penalty to accomplish that. The Falcons got inside the Dallas 30 only twice, both times in the third period, and it took fumble recoveries to accomplish that feat.

The first time, they grabbed the football at the Dallas eight and gave it up at the nine. The other time they got the ball at the Dallas 27 and wound up punting from the 35.

"It was a bad performance, wasn't it?" said Falcons Coach Norm Van Brocklin. "They whipped up in every direction. We just weren't aggressively competitive which is strange because we are an aggressive ball club. God, they manhandled us. But even at that, we had people open but we couldn't get the ball to them."

"Our defense never gave up," said Falcon running back Eddie Ray. "That's the sign of a good team. It would have been easy for them to say the hell with it. We were all down out there because nothing, nothing was going right."

Pats Upset Miami

United Press International Don Shula's dream has started off like a nightmare. Shula's dream is to surpass the late Vince Lombardi and become the first coach ever to win three Super Bowl titles. He has two and figured to get off on the right foot toward a third Sunday when he sent his Miami Dolphins against the New England Patriots.

But the nightmare started early and when it was all over, Shula saw his Dolphins on the short end of a 34-24 decision.

Little Mack Herron, a 5-foot-5 refugee from the Canadian Football League, started it for New England with a 14-yard touchdown run and after Larry Csonka helped tie the game with a ten-yard plunge, Jim Plunkett took over.

He threw 13 yards to Reggie Rucker for one score, set up John Smith's 21-yard field goal and then ran five yards for another TD for a 24-10 New England halftime lead.

Garo Yepremian's 33-yard field goal put a small dent in the lead but Sam Cunningham ran 13 yards for a TD and then the young Pats held on as Bob Griese threw 13 yards to Marlin Briscoe and Csonka plunged four yards for another TD. Smith applied the crusher with a 26-yard field goal.

"We saw it on the films," Shula moaned. "They're much improved. They have a lot of young kids on defense. They're not going to make the big mistakes they did last year. And their offense was a tough one to stop last year. Plunkett really makes it go."

Plunkett, who had one of his finest days as a pro, hit 14 of 24 passes for 177 yards. Herron carried 18 times for 88 yards and Cunningham 21 for 87 to provide the balance.

"It seemed like everything worked today," Plunkett said. "That's what makes a good quarterback... when everything works. We were up emotionally; this is really what you call being up for a game."

In other opening day action Sunday, Pittsburgh blasted Baltimore, 30-0. St. Louis stunned Philadelphia, 7-3. Cincinnati ripped Cleveland, 33-7. Washington edged the New York Giants.

Shockers Fall To Clovis JV

CLOVIS, N.M. — Clovis evened the Pampa junior varsity's season record at 1-1 with a 13-8 win Saturday afternoon here.

Pampa had two touchdowns called back because of penalties as Clovis avenged last year's loss.

In other football action last weekend, the Pampa ninth-grade B-team belted the eighth-grade Blue, 35-0. Friday in Pampa.

Conference Favorites Take Impressive Opening Victories

United Press International Texas A&M came out of the blocks in a feisty mood, the Texas Longhorn bullpen is in fine shape and Arkansas' defense will be worth taking a second look at.

Those were the major revelations last Saturday on the opening orgy of Southwest Conference contests.

The Aggies not only became involved in a 24-0 whitewash of Clemson, only the second shutout for Texas A&M's defense in the 1970s, but they also became involved in a first class brawl which required both coaching staffs and some police to stop.

Fights are certainly not called for on the football field but it is good to know that the Aggies are in a test frame of mind because they must go to LSU this week and a team needs to be cranky when it goes to Baton Rouge.

In Massachusetts, Mike Presley came in to replace Texas' Marty Atkins at quarterback when he went out with a concussion and Presley immediately ignited the Longhorns to a 42-19 win over Boston College.

And at Little Rock, the Razorbacks stopped Southern California time and again to post a 22-7 upset over the Trojans.

"They did the best job that I've seen since I've been at Arkansas," said Razorback Coach Frank Broyles, and that is quite a compliment.

On the whole it was a profitable opening week for the conference, winning six and losing two, and with Baylor showing a good deal of stubbornness in holding the highly favored Oklahoma Sooners to a 28-11 count.

Texas Tech had no trouble in bumping off Iowa State, 24-3 while SMU nipped emotional North Texas 7-6 and TCU survived against Texas-Arlington 12-3. Houston bounced back from its embarrassing loss to Arizona State to down Rice 21-0.

The showing of the Longhorns against Boston College was impressive in

Miller Nears Mark After Another Win

PINEHURST, N.C. (UPI) — Johnny Miller, on the verge of smashing golf's money winning record, still gets nervous in a playoff.

But the 27-year-old blond Californian overcame those jitters Sunday to beat Jack Nicklaus, the current season money-winning titleholder, and two other golfers in a four-way sudden death playoff for the $50,000 first prize in the PGA's richest tournament — the $300,000 World Open.

With the win, Miller needs only $4,160 the rest of the year to break Nicklaus' record of $320,542.

"I was thinking about the money championship more than anything," said Miller after winning his seventh tournament of the season in 19 outtings. "To win it when Jack Nicklaus, (Gary) Player and Lee Trevino are in their prime — that's really something."

He had been thinking specifically about the money-winning title for this season, he said, and hadn't yet realized he was so close to setting an alltime record. He has now taken in $316,283 for the year. Nicklaus is runner-up at $231,507.

Nicklaus' earnings include the $23,200 he received for finishing in a tie with veterans Frank Beard and Bob Murphy for second place after the playoff.

Jim Bakken of St. Louis kicked seven field goals in a game against Pittsburgh in 1967.

The Pampa Daily News

A Watchful Newspaper

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Our Capsule Policy

The Pampa News is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessing. Only when man is free to control himself and all he produces can he develop to his utmost capability.

The News believes each and every person would get more satisfaction in the long run if he were permitted to spend what he earns on a volunteer basis rather than having part of it distributed involuntarily.

Now's The Time To Watch

The American public should always speak in favor of the freedom of the press if freedom for all is to survive, but also the public should be the critical watchdog of the press.

This seems to be a greater necessity now than before because people have a tendency to relax their vigil following a traumatic experience.

Critics of the press during the Watergate episodes always cited past scandals in high places and wondered why newspapers and television stations did not pursue those stories with the zeal that marked the Watergate reporting.

Honest newsmen will have to admit that the press was not as aggressive as it should have been in such stories as the Bobby Baker scandal, Sen. Ted Kennedy's coverage of the court hearing in the death of Mary Jo Kopechne, the Bay of Pigs fiasco and a few others.

To some extent, the power of the government in those cases was sufficient to thwart reporters and there were not the convenient leaks which are often so necessary if a newsmen is to be successful in his probing.

Still, the critics have a point, and the press will have to live with past failures. But the error of most of the critics is that they wanted the press not to pursue Watergate because it had failed to pursue other scandals.

Such an attitude would excuse any wrongdoing present and future and the public's right and opportunity to know would be lost forever.

The key to the survival of a free people is the vigilance that is maintained now and tomorrow and tomorrow and tomorrow.

The new administration in Washington is headed by a different personality. He's low-key and appears to be more of the 'common-man type' similar perhaps to the late Harry Truman.

People are going to feel comfortable with President Ford. The press is likely to feel comfortable. The congress will feel comfortable because he is one of their own.

And with everybody feeling so comfortable, and with the awareness of serious economic problems we quite likely will have some disastrous programs unloaded.

The system has not been impeached nor forced to resign, and it is the system, the Washington bureaucracy, that still governs, controls, interferes and limits individual opportunity.

If those huge newspapers and television networks with vast audiences really wanted to assist in the struggle for improved conditions for all Americans, they would get to work now encouraging government to pull back.

The value of government action should be measured by what it does to the individual. Does it limit freedom or increase freedom for the individual?

More simply put, does it deny you a choice?

This is what the press should be watching for, and the public should be watching the press to see if the press is watching.

THE CONSERVATIVE ADVOCATE

1976 Patterns And Prospects

By W.M.A. RUSHER

Political observers, noting President Ford's recent concessions to liberal opinion, and especially his designation of Nelson Rockefeller for Vice President, are wondering whether someone has persuaded Mr. Ford to abandon the "New Majority strategy" that has dominated Republican thinking in recent years and return to the "Old time religion" of seeking victory through an Eastern-Midwestern coalition.

From the time of McKinley until the San Francisco convention of 1946, Republicans traditionally sought to win the presidency by carrying the big states of the Northeast and the Midwest, leaving most of the border South, the deep South, the Southwest, the Mountain states, and the West to the Democrats. The coalition that nominated Barry Goldwater in 1964 spectacularly reversed that strategy, virtually conceding the Northeast to the Democrats and concentrating instead on the areas of former Democratic predominance in the South and West. And while Goldwater was soundly defeated by Lyndon Johnson (himself a Texan, be it remembered), Richard Nixon employed the New Majority strategy triumphantly in the elections of 1968 and 1972.

As developed by the Republican theorists, the New Majority strategy was based simply on an appreciation of what was happening in the country. The Northeastern WASP's who had dominated the GOP since its foundation were trending steadily leftward — either into the sort of near-beer Republican liberalism typified by the Ripon Society, or (like such bellwethers as John Lindsay) into the Democratic party itself. Meanwhile the old Democratic South was breaking up, and a whole new culture sympathetic to conservative Republicanism was developing in the fast-growing Sun Belt states of the Southwest. From 1964 forward, Republican conventions have been dominated, in a ratio of at least 2 to 1, by a basically conservative coalition determined to continue expanding the dramatic Republican gains in those areas, at the expense if necessary of the Party's crumbling bastions in the Northeast.

Gerald Ford, of course, hails from Michigan — one of the old Republican bailiwicks now to be found, more often than not, in the Democratic column on Election Day. And as his

Vice President and potential 1976 running-mate he has chosen the long-time New York governor and champion of Eastern liberal Republicanism, Nelson Rockefeller.

Off hand there would seem to be little in such a ticket designed to appeal to the New Majority put together by Richard Nixon in 1968 and 1972. If the Democrats in 1976 decide to pass up Senator Kennedy and nominate instead a ticket aimed at regaining the South and West (with Texas Senator Lloyd Bentsen, say, as the Presidential nominee, and California's young Senator John Tunney for Vice President), Ford and Rockefeller may have to do very well indeed in the Northeast and Midwest to offset Democratic inroads elsewhere.

There are, of course, various possible counters to such a danger. In the first place, President Ford may prove personally conservative enough to hold the South and the West despite his Michigan background. If so, however, his recent cordial nods toward the black caucus, Women's Lib and the draft-dodgers had better be followed up pretty quickly by some comparable courtesies to conservative opinion — for example, in the choice of a new GOP Chairman.

Alternatively (and it would have to be just that: alternatively, not additionally), Nelson Rockefeller might conceivably prove popular enough in the Northeast to start delivering it again to the GOP, despite the overwhelming Democratic lead in many states of the region.

But if President Ford has indeed been persuaded that he can safely ignore the South and West, in return for electoral votes to be produced by teaming with Rockefeller in the Northeast, conservative Republicans may not consent to sit idly by and watch the Democrats reclaim the South and the Sun Belt. The stage, then, might be set for a new and independent conservative movement in 1976, designed to carry these potentially dominant regions of a changing America.

DUNAGIN'S PEOPLE

"YOU'VE DROPPED TO PUBLIC ENEMY NUMBER TWO, BOSS. YOU'VE BEEN REPLACED BY INFLATION."

There's no truth to the rumor that Rockefeller is taking vocal lessons to raise his voice — from gravel to crooning.

"If this keeps up we're gonna get block-busted by the middle class!"

SOVIET STRATEGY

There Is Still An Iron Curtain

By VICTOR RIESEL

WASHINGTON — After hydrofoiling under the Iron Curtain some weeks ago, and speeding by car across some of its instant-death border strips (along well-marked routes since this was no movie script) and jetting in and out of Communist capitals, I came to a strange conclusion: yes, there is an Iron Curtain.

It's lifted for a while by the detente-minded USSR. To paraphrase Shakespeare, "the prince of darkness is a gentleman." The revolution is being sugar-coated as sweet bait for the purchase of critical American industrial and computerized expertise on long, long-term 6 per cent interest rate credits.

But mistake it not. The Soviets are still spying, sabotaging, electronically bugging, surveilling and skillfully plotting to destroy the very same American capitalism which it is now entertaining so graciously. But, in the words of a man whose identity would mean his death, the Soviets are the same ideologists and killers of Stalin's day.

To the Soviets, this is a one-way detente. Though the revolution has low visibility these days it grinds on inexorably. The Soviet politburo is convinced world capitalism will collapse from inflation corrosion.

Its affiliates abroad have been directed to behave like patriots — until after the deluge. The Italian Communist party — with one of the toughest, heavily armed and financed underground army and espionage apparatus — has in dialectic fashion declared itself pro-West. The powerful French Communist party and its General Confederation of Labor has passed on word that its workers and wage demands will be gentle — vive la France.

But most dramatically the script is being played in lovely Portugal among its gentle people under perpetual sunshine.

The Portuguese Communist Party (PCP) today — to prove its sense of responsibility — is more conservative than America's Right To Work Committee when it comes to labor action.

To prove this I must report the sardine strike. Portuguese fishermen are a friendly albeit sometimes hungry lot. Their crafts are old. They can't chase the ever-receding swarms of sardines. So their income has dwindled. On June 15 shortly after the military junta seized power, the sardine fishermen struck. They had been paid by canners by the catch. Now they wanted a guarantee of $40 a week — which would include the cost of maintaining their small craft, high-cost fuel, repairs, etc. They were backed by shellfish gatherers and some boat operators.

The Lisbon Communist party politburo screamed. This was unpatriotic. It would unhinge the government. It was a capitalist trick really. Then the canners (fish packing plant owners) were contacted. They flew to Stockholm. No one quite knows with whom they dealt. But they returned happy.

On July 16, the Soviet refrigerated fishing vessel "Nackichevan" steamed into Oporto, the big northern industrial city. On board were 3,400 tons of frozen sardines and an average of 400 tons were unloaded daily. There could no longer be any shortage of sardines to can. The "Nackichevan" could steam to the fish-swarming waters between the Azores and Canary Islands and back to Oporto indefinitely.

On July 25 the Communists working with the canners had smashed the strike. The fishermen returned to work. They had to feed their families. So they took far less money than they had originally demanded.

There are many such stories of the newly patriotic

Communist party under Minister without Portfolio Alvaro Cunhal who was trained for years by the Soviet Communist party for just such an assignment. For example, shortly after the Portuguese postal workers struck for several days. Once again the Communists swung into action. They brutalized the strikers. All in the hope that the good people of Portugal would vote for the CP during the next election.

The thrust of the party's propaganda is the charge that the multi-nationals international capitalism — especially American capitalism — are responsible for the impoverished plight of the proletariat. Communist journalists and Communist-dominated journals pound away daily at this anti-American theme.

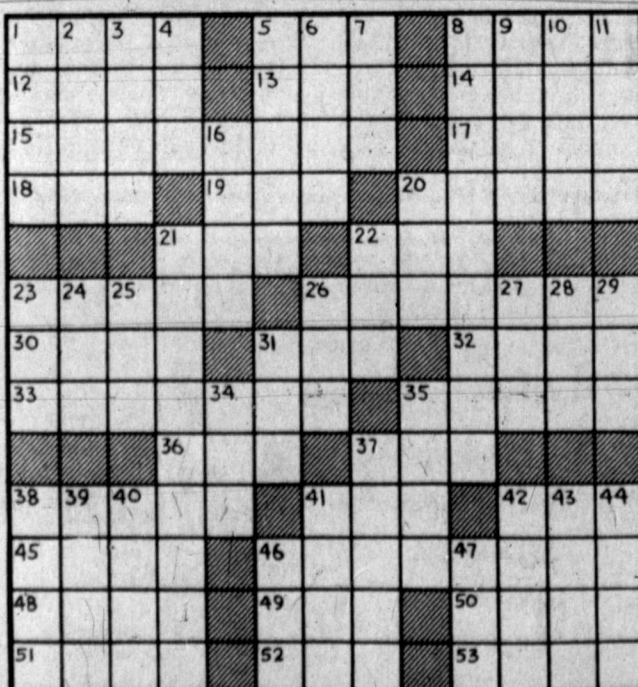

Thus it goes all over free Europe.

Things are never so bad that they won't get worse, when government moves, in to correct them.

Senate Not Practicing Its Plan To Economize

By ROBERT S. ALLEN
WASHINGTON, Sept. 7 — Economy is as economy does, and as the Senate doesn't!

Despite all the righteous orating and fulminating about the urgent need to slash spending and balance the budget, the Senate is quietly set to vote a $16,322,000 installment for still another office building. That will bring the total so far appropriated to $85,147,000.

But that's far from the end. Capitol architect George White anticipates the final cost will be upwards of $100 million.

This new marble structure will be the Senate's third office building, and the second built for the 100-member legislative body ("most exclusive club in the world") in the past 20 years. Also the most expensive.

Combined cost of the other two buildings was $28,432,000. They are:

Russell Senate Office Building, named after the late Sen. Richard Russell, D.-Ga., long-time chairman of two of the most powerful committees — Armed Services, later Appropriations. He was also leader of the highly influential Southern bloc, and was chiefly responsible for making Lyndon Johnson, then a junior Senator, Democratic floor leader — thus starting him on the road to the White House.

The Russell Building, originally known as the Senate Office Building (SOB), was begun in July 1906, completed in March 1909, and cost $8,390,000 — including the then-unique subway and electric tram connecting it to the Capitol.

Dirksen Senate Office Building, named after the late Republican floor leader Everett Dirksen, Ill., fondly known among colleagues and newsmen as "mellifluous Ev." Begun in January 1955 and completed in October 1958, the structure cost $20,042,000 — also including a subway and electric tram to the Capitol.

Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., Dirksen's son-in-law, doesn't think much of the design of the new office building. But he's not doing anything about it.

Says Baker, "I don't want to get into a hassle with the flock of distinguished architects. I'm not on the commission in charge of the project, so I had nothing to say about the plans."

Why It's Needed

With President Ford vigorously beating the drums for economy, it remains to be seen what's done about the latest $16,322,000 installment. The other two were $47,925,000 voted in 1972, and $20,900,000 last year.

Capitol architect White sees no purpose in not granting the additional money. He points out delay will only add to the cost.

"Everything is going up all the time," says White. "When this building was first projected back in 1967, the estimated cost was $67,925,000. Now due to spiraling inflation and a number of design changes, it's likely the final cost will top $100 million. I would be the last to question that cutting federal spending isn't essential, but economy won't be served by delaying completion of a building for which more than $68 million has already been appropriated."

That view is forcefully challenged by Sen. Harry Byrd, Ind.-Va., who contends "austerity in the federal government is crucial, and the place to start is in Congress."

While conceding that he and his colleagues need more office space, Byrd nevertheless maintains there is no getting away from the grim fact that the "No. 1 problem is to get government spending under control, and for the time being at least the Senate can get along without a new office building. It's a sacrifice we can well make."

The remaining weeks of the session will tell the story — whether this "sacrifice" is or isn't made. To camouflage the real nature of this building, it's being officially tagged as "Annex to the Dirksen Building." It's quite an annex. Undoubtedly, when completed, it will be given another name.

The structure will have seven stories (two more than the others), and multi-room suites for 50 Senators — one-half the membership of the chamber. Like the other two buildings, it will be connected to the Capitol by a subway with an electric tram.

Size of the office suites of the 50 Senators who will occupy the Russell and Dirksen Buildings will be doubled. Cost of that is still up in the air, but it's certain to run into several or more millions.

Reason for the "need" for more Senate office space is the constant proliferation of committees, subcommittees and special committees.

It's a rare session that doesn't see the creation of several or more of these panels.

Take this session. Last month, Congress created an entirely new major committee — the House and Senate Budget Committees, which presumably will have controlling authority over the formulation and final determination of the federal budget, exceeding $300 billion this fiscal year.

These committees, comprising more than 50 members, will have majority and minority staffs totaling well over 100 each. And that means a lot more office space and all the furnishings, equipment and apparatus that go with it.

Another graphic example is the sonorously titled "Select Committee on Nutrition and Human Needs" — Sen. George McGovern's high-flown boondoggle which is costing taxpayers $288,000 this year.

That requires office space for a staff that last year got more than $200,000 in salaries, and "consultants" some $20,000.

There are numerous tax-consuming gimmick panels of this kind on Capitol Hill — all with sizable staffs occupying office space and, necessarily, office buildings.

That's why the House of Representatives has a new office building gleam in its eye.

The chamber already has three large office buildings — the last one, Rayburn Building, completed in 1965 at a cost of more than $120 million. But the 435-member chamber is still itching for more office space.

As revealed in this column several months ago, House leaders considered converting the huge Library of Congress annex, under construction on Independence Avenue adjoining the row of House office buildings, into their fourth office building.

An unpublishing petition advocating this was signed by 200 Democratic and Republican members — 18 short of a majority.

Its leading sponsor was Rep. Fortney (Pete) Stark, D-Oakland, Calif., who lists himself in his self-penned biography in the Congressional Directory as "banker, chairman, board of trustees, Starr King School for the Ministry, trustee, Graduate Theological Union; sponsor, Northern California American Civil Liberties Union; director, Common Cause."

But disclosure of the scheme squelched it.

It was immediately tagged a boodle grab, and with elections in the offing, that killed it. While the desire was there, the fear of irate voters was greater.

Estimated cost of the Library Annex is $90 million. Conversion to a fourth House office building would have run that to well over $100 million — too much to try to get away with in a highly uncertain election year.

BREADLINE PLANNED
HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — A group of radio, television and recording personalities have decided to kick off the coming depression by opening a unique — and expensive — breadline here on Friday the 13th.

The bread will come from a health food store and apples will be available — at $1 each. A band will play music and unemployed trumpeter Jeff Ehrhart will offer an original composition, "Brother, Can You Spare $1.75."

"A ground-floor window will be available for jumpers," said spokesman Les Carter, a Los Angeles disc jockey. "We don't want anyone to get hurt."

HOT DOG
NILES, Ohio (UPI) — An Ohioan gave America its first hot dog.

Harry Stevens of Niles is said to have been the first to sell frankfurters in bread, and later in rolls.

Stevens called the combination hot dogs after seeing a newspaper cartoon in 1900 that showed a frankfurter that looked like a daschund.
