RUMORS OF INFLATION ARE BEING DENIED

By United Press

WASHINGTON, Oct. 13.—New assurances of a conservative financial program came from the administration today as an answer to rumors of impending inflation.

The bold stroke of Secretary of Treasury Henry Morgenthau, Jr., in calling for redemption on April 15, next year, of $1,870,000,000 of Fourth Liberty loan bonds as initial step to replace them with lower interest bearing securities, went far to spike the reports.

The White House indicated at the same time that no immediate change was contemplated in the gold content of the dollar and no new monetary moves were contemplated.

By United Press

SAN AUGUSTINE, Texas, Oct. 13.—Two men from the hill section of San Augustine county remained silent in jail here today as Sheriff W. C. Gary sought to question them about the fatal shooting of Lonnie and Earl Hooper, young cousins.

The bodies of the two boys were found yesterday on an old logging road in a desolate section near Sardis. The suspects, 21 and 30, were arrested shortly after the bodies were found. The section where the bodies were found is infested with whisky stills and is known as a section of violence.

BULLDOGS WIN FROM BOB CATS BY 19-0 SCORE

The Ranger Bulldogs, playing at Cemetery Field at San Angelo Friday night, completely outplayed the San Angelo Bob Cats to win by a score of 19 to 0—the same score by which the Abilene Eagles defeated the Bob Cats earlier in the season.

Aaron Anderson, quarterback, punter, passer, ball carrier, signal caller, and who kicks off and kicks for points after touchdowns, was the big noise of the game, both on the offense and on the defense.

It was Anderson who stood five yards behind his own goal line in a punt formation who surprised even his own teammates when he saw an opportunity to run, after the signal had been called for a punt, and raced 105 yards in all for a touchdown. The official figures on the run, however, listed it as a 91-yard run, as that was the distance from the line of scrimmage to the goal line. Anderson kicked the extra point.

A few plays later it was Anderson who passed to Britt who raced 15 yards for the second score, and it was Anderson who intercepted a Bob Cat pass and ran 40 yards to the three yard line and later carried the ball over for the last touchdown of the game.

Outstanding games were turned in by Rankin Britt, both on the offense and defense, by Mellinger Jacoby, both in breaking up Bob Cat plays and catching passes, while he blocked and recovered a punt that lead to the second touch--down. Walsh played a good game in both departments, while Warden was effective on the defense. In fact the entire team played good ball and each of the 22 men who made the trip was thrown into the game by Coach Moore.

In the first half neither team scored, while Ranger made five first downs and penetrated deep into San Angelo territory, only to fail to score early in the game, while the Bob Cats made but one first down in the first half, and that with the aid of a five yard penalty.

It was early in the third quarter that the Bulldogs began to score, and when they did it took but a few minutes for them to account for two touchdowns and one point after touchdown.

The Bulldogs play Eastland at Lillard field next Friday afternoon in their first conference game of the seasonu. The Mavericks will likely be weakened by loss of Garrison, captain and quarterback, who received a broken collar bone in the Breckenridge game, though reports from Eastland Saturday morning were conflicting, some saying that he would be out of the game for the remainder of the season and others stating that he would be ready to resume play next Friday.

NEW APPEAL MADE IN STOLL KIDNAP CASE

By United Press

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Oct. 13. — Another public appeal to the kidnapers of Alice Stoll was issued today.

The appeal came while a rapidly growing army of searchers divided themselves into squads and began a search of the territory around the Stoll estate.

Headed by Edward J. Connelly, chief of the Cincinnati Bureau of Federal Department of investigation, the searchers were instructed to look not only for a hideout of the kidnapers but also for the body of the victim in case she was murdered.

Fifty county policemen and American Legion members searched the marshy bottoms of the Ohio river and the breaks of numberless small feeder streams.

Federal agents and other temporarily balked by the belief they might disrupt negotiations with the kidnapers, expressed fear they might be witnessnig a parallel to the Lindbergh case.

All signs indicated the $50,000 ransom was paid or cached for the kidnapers yesterday.

MAVS LOSE TO BRECKENRIDGE 26-7 FRIDAY

Eastland Mavericks opened a strong offensive play against Breckenridge Buckaroos in Breckenridge Friday by scoring in the first few minutes of play only to lost 26-7. The Maverick score came when Garrison heaved a nine yard pass over the goal line to Horton. Tully kicked goal.

Buckaroos came back strong when their turn came. Taylor after gains made by his co-mates took the ball over for Breck. Clark converted.

After Breckenridge's kickoff to Eastland, Garrison received the ball for a fair run. Sikes in the next play made two yards. Hart, Brawner and other made measurable progress, however not nearing the goal line.

Buckaroo Taylor in the second quarter heaved a touchdown pass to Magness. Taylor received an Eastland pass in the third quarter to run over 50 years for a touchdown. In the fourth quarter he passed in the end one to Cudd who went over the line.

In the second quarter Eastland opened up their aerial attack only to have their attempts incomplete. Taylor of Breck shined with several good runs.

Eastland's passing attempts in the third and fourth quarter were marked by being too long. Many balls were thrown with the intended receiver being from 12 to 8 yards being behind the ball and some times within a few feet.

In the latter part of the game, the affair took only the appearance of catch and catch-can affair. Passes were thrown furtively, with Breck receiving some Eastland passes.

Mavericks in the fourth quarter made a vain attempt to gain territory by passes and many times failed to complete.

Brawner, who scored in the Stephenville game, showed up well in the game and made many effective tackles. Sikes revealed in himself as one who could make small gains fairly consistently.

Garrison was injured in the game and seemingly the spirit of the team was dissipated entirely. Reports are to effect that the captain will be back in time for the Ranger game.

Eastland made seven first downs while Breckenridge made 14.

The starting line-ups:

Breckenridge— B. Collins, le; W. Holt, lt; J. Ellis, rg; J. Morris, c; B. Piter, rg; C. E. Orea, t; J. Cudd, re; Spud Taylor, qb; J. Magness, lh; E. Clark, rh; D. Hall, fb.

Defense of Bruno Hauptmann to Be Reviewed Monday

By United Press

TRENTON, N. J., Oct. 13.—Nef Jersey today anticipated a complete view of Bruno Hauptmann's defense against an indictment charging murder of the Lindbergh baby when his application for a writ of habeas corpus is argued in New York Monday.

Hauptmann seeks to avoid extradition to New Jersey where the indictment was returned. To defeat extradition he must prove beyond reasonable doubt he was not in Hopewell, N. J. the night of March 1, 1932, when Charles A. Lindbergh Jr., was stolen from his parents' home.

If extradition efforts fail he will face an immediate trial on the extortion indictment against him in New York.

ATTITUDE ON TWO BILLS IS STILL UNKNOWN

Water Rights on Two Rivers Present Complications For Solons.

By United Press

AUSTIN, Oct. 13.—Issues to be fought over in the Texas Legislature next week were fairly well defined today on three of the governor's five session topics.

Until bills are offered on enlarged relief expenditures and on a Centennial appropriation, the attitude toward them is uncertain.

The fight over the Colorado river hydro-electric program will center on Section which defines relative rights to the water.

The only opposition so far voiced to the Brazos river project is because of the tax remission feature of the bill.

Tax leniency bills face a fight in the House preliminary to renewal of last season's battle between house and senate.

The Colorado river water right fight is complicated.

Rep. Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo doubts that provisions written by Senator Walter Woodward of Coleman are adequate. Years ago the state water agency granted Colorado river permits proposed to be kept alive by the new river authority bill.

Since those grants, the state has adopted a policy of reserving water rights for domestic, municipal and irrigation purposes before power rights can be granted. The old permits do not make any such reservation.

Now is the time, people on the watershed say, to seize the opportunity to re-establish prior rights. Metcalfe said the Woodward provisions only safeguard communities that already have begun use of water. He wants the right kept over for communities that may later wish to use it.

UNEMPLOYED HOLD KEY TO INDUSTRIAL JAM

An administration that came into office to the tune of a nation-wide banking collapse and the almost complete stagnation of trade and industry, is being forced by the irresistible logic of circumstances to discover in unemployment the key log of the entire jam.

The banks have been put on their feet, and trade and industry are being stimulated; but 8,000,000 unemployed men can cast a longer shadow than closed banks and unbalanced profit ledgers, and if their condition cannot be improved the improvements that are made in other quarters are not likely to be permanent.

It is this factor in the situation which is more and more coming to occupy the center of the administration's attention. It is reflected in the president's recent assertaion that he "will not accept as a necessary condition of our future a permanent army of unemployed"; and it bids fair to give the administration an extraordinarily complex problem.

* * *

It is interesting to analyze the unemployment army.

A few months ago Isador Lubin, U. S. commissioner of labor statistics, made such an analysis. He found that factories making consumers' goods—food, clothing, luxuries, shoes, and so on—are now employing only 100,000 fewer persons than they employed in 1929. The durable goods industries—those which produce things used in the making of other things—are, on the other hand, now employing 1,500,000 fewer persons than they employed in 1929.

Employment in the railroad, mining and "service" industries is about 2,000,000 below the 1929 level.

* * *

Thus, in these great industrial and business groups, a complete return to the 1929 level would result in re-employment of only 4,000,000 men. And more than twice that number, by the most conservative figures, are now idle!

Where do we turn, then? Most of the remaining jobless, says Mr. Lubin, originally worked in building construction, on the farms, and in professional and domestic service. The new housing program may restore jobs to those in the first group; improvement in the farm situation is the key to the second group; and only a general, all-around business revival will take care of the third.

Analyzed in this way, it is obvious that the unemployment problem is far from simple. No one program, by itself, will come close to solving it. There must be a broad [illegible]onts.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SERVICES

"Are Sin, Disease and Death Real?" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist, on Sunday, October 14.

The Golden Text is: "The Lord is our judge, and the Lord is our lawgiver, the Lord is our king; he will save us" (Isaiah 33:22).

Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Whether it is easier to say to the sick of palsy, Thy sins be forgiven thee; or to say, Arise, and take up thy bed, and walk?" (Mark 2:9-.

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "Sickness, sin, and death, being inharmonious, do not originate in God nor belong to His government. His law, rightly understood, destroys them. Jesus furnished proofs of these statements" (page 427).

FRECKLES and HIS FRIENDS—By Blo

The Clew of the Forgotten Murder

CHARLTON KENDRAKE ©1934 NEA Service Inc.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

When DAN BLEEKER junior publisher of The Blade, learns that CHARLES MORDEN police reporter, has been mysteriously killed he determines to employ SIDNEY GRIFF, famous criminologist, to solve the murder.

Morden had been assigned to learn all he could about FRANK B CATHAY wealthy and prominent, who had threatened to sue The Blade because the newspaper reported Cathay had been arrested. Later it was proven that the man arrested, giving the name of Cathay and accompanied by a girl called MARY BRIGGS was an impostor. MRS CATHAY assures Bleeker her husband will drop the charges if The Blade publishes a retraction and this is done.

A day later Morden is found dead. Shortly after that comes news that Cathay is dead—possibly of poison. Bleeker goes to see Sidney Griff.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER IX

BLEEKER spoke slowly. "You understand," he said, "that Morden was investigating Cathay's life. Cathay isn't what he's cracked up to be."

"How do you know that?" Griff asked.

"Because," said Bleeker, "I've been in the newspaper business too long to accept any small town celebrity at his face value."

"Riverview isn't exactly a small town," Griff pointed out.

"The same principle applies," Bleeker said. "It's a suburb, and as far as that's concerned I won't accept any man at his face value. Not unless he's a gangster, or a crook. That's one thing you find out from being in the newspaper business. You're a criminologist, Griff, you know crooks. I am a newspaper man, I know people. And this man Cathay is simply too good to be true. The president of the luncheon club, the president of the chamber of commerce, director of the bank, candidate for city councilman on a reform ticket. And his wife had fear in her eyes."

"Fear?" asked Griff.

"Fear," repeated Bleeker. "She was afraid of something."

"Afraid of the newspaper?" asked Griff.

"Perhaps," Bleeker said. "But it looked to me as though she was too adept at covering up the fear to have recently acquired it. I would say it was something she had been living with for weeks or months."

"And there was some talk about Cathay's death being due to poison?"

"Apparently there was," Bleeker said, "but it's being hushed up. Cathay was an influential man in Riverview. The family have influential friends. There were two doctors on the case. One of the doctors thought there were circumstances surrounding the death that made it resemble poisoning. The other doctor attributed it to natural causes. He's signing a death certificate."

"There'll be no autopsy?" asked Griff.

• • •

"THERE'S going to be an autopsy," Bleeker said grimly. "I'm going up to interview Beckley, the editor of The Riverview Chronicle. That was the newspaper that was on the opposite side of the political fence from the Cathay side. Beckley and I have exchanged favors in the past. He started in investigating the Cathay death and then telephoned me that he was going to have to lay off because of pressure that was being brought to bear on him by members of the chamber of commerce, of the luncheon club and various banking influences."

"In other words," Griff said, "Cathay's friends are trying to stop a scandal."

Bleeker nodded.

"Subject, of course," Griff went on, "to the fact that there's a strong probability that this was due to natural causes, and that the younger doctor simply made a mistake in diagnosis."

"That, of course, is a possibility," Bleeker said.

"Getting back to this woman angle," Griff told him, "I take it you feel Morden was murdered because he was on the trail of some woman who had been having an affair with Cathay. Is that right?"

"That's right."

"Then obviously," Griff went on, "the woman would not have been guilty of the murder."

Bleeker stared at him. "How do you figure that out?" he asked.

"Quite simple. A woman's good name is, of course, an important possession to her. But a woman of the type who could carry on an affair with a man of the social prominence of Frank B. Cathay is probably the type of woman who does very much as she pleases. She's probably a woman who has an apartment of her own. Who comes and goes as she pleases and doesn't have to account to any man."

"That's reasonable," Bleeker agreed.

"Therefore," Griff went on, "such a woman would hardly commit murder to protect her so-called 'good name.' On the other hand, Cathay's good name involves political prestige, social prestige and rich financial returns."

"All I do," said Griff, "is interpret the facts . . . also I play human checkers."

"I see what you're getting at," Bleeker remarked.

• • •

"I'M not certain that you do," Griff told him. "Here's the point I had in mind. Let us suppose that Morden was about to contact or had contacted some woman who offered him an opportunity to get some information concerning Cathay. And we'll further suppose that that information was of a nature which would be derogatory to Cathay's character.

"Obviously, if Morden was to contact a woman, he expected to get some information from the woman. If he was murdered because of that contact, he was murdered by someone who was anxious to keep Morden from getting that information. Now then, let us put ourselves in the position of the murderer. Having eliminated Morden from the picture, what would be his logical next step?"

"You mean the woman?" Bleeker asked.

"Exactly," Griff said. "He would see that the woman was removed from the picture. Either by seeing that her lips were silenced, or by seeing that she was placed in a position where she was not readily accessible to those who were investigating Morden's death. Remember this, that the murderer knew that Morden was working for the newspaper. He knew that Morden was working to uncover evidence against Cathay. He doubtless surmised that Morden was making daily reports. He didn't know the nature of those reports. Morden told you over the telephone that he didn't wish to mention any names but the man who murdered him—and the crime indicates that it was a man—didn't know how much Morden had told you."

Bleeker nodded thoughtfully.

"Therefore," Griff said, "I would suggest that you do two things. That you concentrate upon finding Mary Briggs and that you make a complete investigation of every disappearance case where the party who disappeared was a woman, and that the time of disappearance was within the last 48 hours."

Bleeker's eyes glinted with appreciation.

"That," he said, "is an idea."

• • •

THERE was a moment of silence. Bleeker took the pipe from his mouth, scraped out the ashes and dropped the pipe into his pocket.

"You understand, Griff," he said, "this is the first time we've ever had occasion to employ you. I know something of your work from a standpoint of results, but I don't know how you work. Now just how much of this investigation will you take over, and just how much are we expected to do?"

"Let's not have any misunderstanding," Griff said. "You're to do it all."

"All?" asked Bleeker.

"Every bit of it," Griff said. "All I do is furnish ideas and correlate information. You get the facts."

"It virtually amounts," Bleeker said, "to putting our men at your disposal."

"You can hire private detectives if you wish," Griff said.

"Our men are better than private detectives."

"Then you can use them if it's economically advantageous for you to do so. But I don't gather any facts. All I do is interpret the facts that are gathered and suggest the direction in which a search should be prosecuted for additional facts. Also, I play human checkers."

"Human checkers?" Bleeker asked.

"That's what I call it," Griff said. "A lot of detectives monkey around with dead clews. They take some inanimate object and attach a great deal of importance to it. I don't. I feel that the solution of every crime depends upon the animate rather than the inanimate. Not that I overlook inanimate clews. I try to notice such clews and to give them due importance, but I don't attach an undue importance to them.

"On the other hand, I don't try to follow a cold trail while our quarry sits still. I try to devise ways and means of keeping the quarry restless, keeping it moving around. Then it's always leaving a fresh trail.

"If you've ever hunted deer, you know what I mean. The hunter who tries to follow a cold trail doesn't get his bucks as regularly as the man who sits down some place on a rock and makes the deer keep moving."

"But," Bleeker said, "suppose you sit on a rock and the deer don't move?"

"That's just the point I'm making," Griff said. "You've got to keep them moving. You can do that by making some commotion elsewhere which makes them uneasy and apprehensive. Then they start moving around through the brush."

In the next installment Sidney Griff makes the first move in his game of "human checkers."

Mechanical Cotton Picker Proved In Exhaustive Tests

MEMPHIS, Tenn., Oct. 13.—A cotton picking machine that can pick 100 acres an hour and do the work of 100 laborers was assured today by John and Mack Rust, Memphis inventors, who claim their long experimenting has proved a success.

It would be the first mechanical cotton picker on the market. More than 700 patent applications on cotton picking devices are on file in Washington.

The Rust brothers' machine has a rapidly rotating smooth steel spindle that is moistened as it enters the open boll. The moistened spindle has no hooks of claws; it twist the cotton out of the bolls.

John Rust said he got the idea while watching an old negro woman spin a thread of cotton on a Louisiana spinning wheel.

The Rusts sought to convince the public by exhibiting a letter from W. E. Ayres, assistant director in charge of the Delta Experiment station at Stoneville, Miss. The letter read in part:

". . . I am glad to repeat to you that in my judgment your machine should be placed on the market without delay. . . . There is no question but that it works and works well. The fact that you picked five bales in less than a day in cotton ranging from 36 to 71 inches tall is enough to convince the most skeptical."

The machine is being demonstrated near Burdette, Ark., in Mississippi county.

Where's My Prince Charming?

So asks Joan Blondell, pretty star of Warner's "Kansas City Princess," coming to the Lyric Theatre, Glenda Farrell and Hugh Herbert head the all-comedy cast.

GAYNOR-AYRES BRING LAUGHS IN NEW FILM

Janet Gaynor and Lew Ayres, erstwhile screen sweethearts of "State Fair," have been reunited by popular demand in the Fox Film "Servants' Entrance," playing Monday at the Lyric theatre. Miss Gaynor plays a rich society girl in search of new experiences, and Mr. Ayres portrays a young inventor who has turned to chauffeuring in order to support himself while he perfects his new type motorboat.

The picture is a departure from the usual straight romantic role played by Miss Gaynor. Here comedy is blended with romance, and for the first time on the screen Janet Gaynor is seen as a versatile and able comedienne. Her characterization ranges from the wistful romance, which she portrays so well, to hilarious comedy, at which she proves herself a master.

The theme of "Servants' Entrance" deals with the romance which develops between Ayres, as the family chauffeur, and Miss Gaynor as the rich girl who is continually in hot water as an inexperienced kitchen maid. The two give a fine performance, and after viewing the picture it is easy to see why the team was so successful in "State Fair."

The principals receive splendid support from a cast headed by Ned Sparks, Walter Connolly, Louise Dresser, G. P. Huntley Jr., Astrid Allwyn, and Siegfried Rumann.

The picture is an adaption by Samson Raphaelson from Sigred Boo's novel, and was directed by Frank Lloyd.

JOAN BLONDELL AND GLENDA FARRELL IN FUNNIEST FILM HIT

Joan Blondell and Glenda Farrell, the pair of charming bombshells who caused explosions of laughter in "Havana Widows," and other pictures, again are teamed as a couple of chiseling, gold digging manicurists in the Warner Bros. picture, "The Kansas City Princess, which comes to the Lyric theatre on Sunday.

Supporting this comedy pair are such famous comedians as Hugh Herbert, Robert Armstrong, Osgood Perkins, Hobart Cavanaugh and Gordon Westcott, which places "The Kansas City Princess" high in the ranks of riotous fun makers.

The story is by Sy Bartlett and Manuel Seff, and has more mad mixups and merry love triangles crowded into the plot than are found in half a dozen books.

The fun starts when Miss Blondell flirts with the wrong baby while her own sweetheart is out of the city, the man proving the smarter of the two and getting away with the girl's flashy engagement ring as well as a little loving.

Knowing her gangster lover, Dynamite, and realizing her inability to explain the loss of her ring, she and her pal, Miss Farrell, beat it for New York on a convention train as two "out-door scout girls." They fall in with two small town aldermen, somewhat worse, or better, for drink, and are persuaded to join them in a trip to gay Paree. But Dynamite is wise and has followed, bent on getting revenge and his big sparkler.

On the boat the girls meet a millionaire playboy and in Paris they bust right into the aldermen's wives and the philandering wife of the millionaire and her lover, and the fur flies in a regular storm of laughter.

Robert Armstrong has the role of Dynamite. Hugh Herbert is the dumb, but droll millionaire, with Hobart Cavanaugh and T. Roy Barnes as the two small town aldermen. Gordon Westcott is the love thief who steals not only the hearts of the ladies but their jewels as well, while Osgood Perkins plays the role of a double-crossing French detective.

The New WATERLESS WAY

While the New Utility Cooker brings to you the possibilities of enjoying old-fashioned meals in addition, it permits you to prepare foods by the newer methods of cooking without water.

Science has discovered that there is so much natural moisture in all meats, vegetables and fruits that it is entirely feasible to cook them with little or no water.

About the only reason why we have cooked with water was to avoid burning. Water distributes the heat evenly, conducting it away from the point nearest the fire.

However, after we have cooked our foods we have poured off the excess water and with it we have poured the bone-forming, teeth-building minerals; the iron, calcium and phosphorus that constitute the essential elements which the human system must have. With the new perfected Utility Cooker you can prepare foods deliciously tender and full of these health-building elements. The Utility Cooker is ideal for the housewife who wishes to practice this modern, more healthful and more economical way of cooking.

CCC Has Built 7500 Check Dams In Erosion Program

COLLEGE STATION.—Nearly 7,500 check dams have been built by CCC camps in Texas assigned to soil erosion control work since June, 1933, when this particular program in Texas as a CCC project was started, M. R. Bentley, agricultural engineer with the Texas extension service, who is directing the camp work, has announced. These camps will enter upon their their fourth enrollment period in October when workers who have served the maximum time allowed will be mustered out and new workers enrolled and organized.

There are now 10 of these CCC units operating in Texas in soil erosion work. Two of these will be moved to new locations the beginning of the new period, the Cleburne camp to Hillsboro about Oct. 15, and the Dublin camp to Brenham after that date. The other eight camps are at Farmersville, Collin county; Boyd, Wise county; Weatherford, Parker county; Taylor, Williamson county; Graham, Young county; Coolidge, Limestone county; Belton, Bell county, and Bowie, Montague county.

This work was started in Texas June, 1933, with the organization of seven CCC camps assigned to the forest service, U. S. department of agriculture, financial support being from emergency conservation work funds. Since the extension service already had a state-wide program of erosion control and soil conservation under way, the forest service to that agency for technical supervision and Mr. Bentley was made director of the CCC erosion control program, as outlined by the federal bureau of agricultural engineering, in Texas.

At the end of the first six months period, the original group of seven camps in Texas was increased to 11. That number has carried on a continuous program over the one-year period ending Sept. 30, 1934. Ten of these will continue for the fourth period, beginning in October. The eleventh, formerly stationed at El Paso, is being transferred from erosion control to other work.

The Texas camps, under USDA supervision, survey for terraces but do not build terrace ridges. Their work is confined to the construction of check dams at terrace outlets and outlet ditches for terrace systems. In order that the work may serve as demonstrations, no outlets are constructed except to serve terraces located and built according to approved extension service methods.

Mr. Bentley in directing the work has been assisted by a corps of technical men and construction foremen, eight men being directly in charge of field work at each camp. Of the check dams built, nearly 2,600 are concrete and over 4,700 are of rock masonry. A total of 121,900 sacks of cement were used and 45,700 tons of rock. In setting these dams 28,400 cubic yards of dirt were moved by hand in addition to that moved by landowners with teams where practicable.

The Washington naval treaty is expected to expire soon, but its death will put new life into some of the rival navies.

Every time you think you have an idea that should set the world afire, there's always some one to throw cold water on it.
