TWO TEXAS OFFICERS DIE AS GUNS BARK IN DUEL

Dallas Contractor And Three Passengers Killed When Airplane Crashes

QUARTET DIES WHEN WING OF SHIP BUCKLES

Lieut. Jack Brooks Falls to Death With Trio of Young Men

PLANE'S NOSE BURIED

Craft Dives 1,500 Feet With Broken Wing Hanging Loose

LEONA, Texas, Oct. 6. (AP)—Lieut. Jack Brooks, Dallas contractor, and three passengers were killed this afternoon. Brooks' airplane crashed on a farm near here after a wing buckled.

The other dead are: Leon Lynch and Allen Powell, Centerville youths, and Marvin Botter of Teague.

The wing gave way at an altitude of 1,500 feet, and the ship shot to earth with the disabled wing folded back over the cockpit. The nose of the ship was buried deep in the earth.

All were believed to have died almost instantly.

A call was sent to Madisonville for an undertaker, and pending his arrival the bodies were held at Leona.

Meanwhile, at Centerville, the county seat, the coroner had not decided tonight whether he would hold an inquest. He thought it probably would not be necessary.

Crobert Wallace and a Miss Winnfield were said to have been eye witnesses to the crash but were between 300 and 400 yards away.

Earl Carrigan was injured in rushing to the scene of the wreck. He was brushed from the fender of a motor car by a wire fence and cut.

BROOKS KNOWN AS CAPABLE PILOT

DALLAS, Oct. 6. (AP)—Reginal M. (Jack) Brooks, 28, killed today in an airplane accident at Leona that took three other lives, was considered at Love field here as one of the best local fliers. He received his transport pilot's license in 1928 and had flown nearly 5,000 hours.

He took off from Love field this morning for Leona on a business trip in connection with work the firm of which he was vice president, the B. F. Brooks Construction company, is doing near Centerville.

TWO PASSENGERS KILLED IN CRASH

MOBERLY, Mo., Oct. 6. (AP)—Two passengers were killed and the pilot probably fatally injured here late today when the airplane crashed in a cornfield near the local airport. All three lived here.

The dead: Miss Deidee Hardin, about 25; Paul Rowland, about 25.

The injured: Bryan Heelin, about 35, the pilot.

New Rothstein Evidence Goes to Probers Today

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. (US)—"New evidence" in the murder of Arnold Rothstein, promised by District Attorney Banton last week, will presumably be presented to the grand jury when that body reconvenes tomorrow.

It was this grand jury which indicated George A. McManus, gambler, and three other persons, for the slaying of Rothstein. McManus goes to trial a week from tomorrow. The other three men whom the state declares were in the "conspiracy" to kill Rothstein, are missing. They are "Hymie" Biller, John Doe and Richard Roe.

Mrs. Tunney's Condition Is "Most Satisfactory"

BERLIN, Oct. 6. (UP)—The condition of Mrs. Gene Tunney, wife of the former heavyweight champion, was reported "most satisfactory" today after an operation yesterday for removal of the appendix.

Dr. Nat F. Grafton Announces Plan To Effect 'Gradual Retirement'

Dr. Nat F. Grafton, pastor of the First Presbyterian church announced from his pulpit Sunday that within the next 12 months he would put into operation a plan that would lead to his gradual retirement.

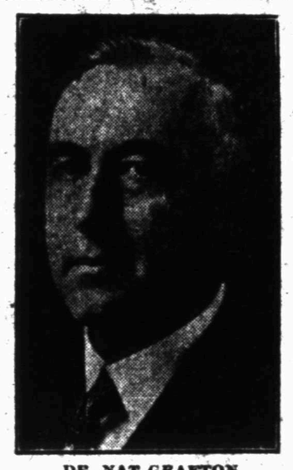

Doctor Grafton came to Wichita Falls in 1915 from Leonard, Texas, and began his work with a membership of 262. Today the church register shows a membership of 1,100.

Next Sunday will mark the 14th anniversary of Doctor Grafton's untiring work in Wichita Falls. At this time he will be in McKinney, Texas, attending the synod meeting.

In June Doctor Grafton plans to take an assistant pastor whom he will gradually train to take the responsibility and will eventually relieve himself of the heavy work.

"I shall always be active in the church, Doctor Grafton said, "I just want the people to get used to the idea that I will eventually retire."

He is moderator of the Wichita Falls presbytery.

Flying Federal Cops Zoom Over Comanche County in Booze Raids

Six Men Held in Jail on Charges After Officers Confiscate Vast Spoils From Cache and Lawton Stills

Special to The Record News

LAWTON, Okla., Oct. 6.—A flying squad of federal enforcement officers from state headquarters at Oklahoma City swooped down on Comanche county Saturday night and 14 persons, including two women, were in jail before noon today as a result of their activities. Only six men were held, however, after the officers had concluded their investigations.

A complete copper still of 1,500-gallon capacity was taken three and one-half miles northwest of Cache, together with 65 gallons of whisky, 21 large sacks of sugar, five sacks of bran, two pumps, 13 steel mash vats, six wooden vats, 36 cases of empty fruit jars and 25,000 gallons of mash.

Men arrested were Emmett J. Long, Herbert A. Forrester, Jack Morris, Robert C. Jacobs and Hank Masoner. They were charged with possession of whisky, possession of a still and possession of mash and bond was fixed in all cases at $1,500 by United States Commissioner M. A. Nelson.

Seven hundred and 62 gallons of wine and 15 gallons of whisky were uncovered in a barn in the Lawton Heights addition, just outside the city limits and a man was arrested in connection with this case. The whisky and wine was found after a door had been located in a false wall in the barn which led into a small room which concealed an opening into a cement cellar. Four federal officers, assisted by local officers conducted the raids.

COSTE FOUND SAFE IN CHINA

French Fliers Believed to Have Set Record

PARIS, Oct. 6. (US)—From far off Manchuria came official word today that Capt. Dieudonne Coste, French aviator who has been missing since he took off from Paris 10 days ago to set a new world's long distance flight record, is safe behind the Chinese-Russian war zone.

Captain Coste, himself today flashed word of his safety, according to a dispatch received at the Quai D'Orsay from the French consul at Mukden.

The Mukden message said that Coste had wired to the consulate: "Landed near Tsitsikar, Manchuria."

While the message made no mention of Maurice Bellonte, Coste's mechanic, it is believed that he, too, is safe.

Tsitsikar is in southwestern Manchuria, on a branch of the Chinese Eastern railway, and about 300 miles from Mukden. It is regarded here as certain that Coste and Bellonte have smashed the long distance record and set up a new one that will stand for some time. From Paris to Tsitsikar is approximately 5,900 miles. If Coste has covered this in continuous flight he has bettered the record of the Italian aviators Delprete and Ferrarrin, who in 1927 flew 4,493 miles.

Coste's landing at Tsitsikar lends credence to the report received several days ago that the Question Mark had been sighted flying over the opposing Soviet-Chinese armies. At that time it was feared the Question Mark might be mistaken for a Soviet plane and shot down by the Chinese.

Graf Returns From Stormy Swiss Trip

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, Oct. 6. (US)—The Graf Zeppelin was safe in its hangar here tonight, following a stormy trip back from Switzerland.

A terrific storm centered in the Swiss Alps necessitated a premature return from the trip. High winds greeted the giant ship when it appeared over the field shortly after noon. For four hours it was forced to circle in the air until the storm abated. Even then officials were forced to enlist the aid of onlookers to aid the landing crew in bringing the Zeppelin to ground.

Lindbergh Flies From Belize to Yucatan

MIAMI, Fla., Oct. 6. (US)—Completing his flight from Belize, British Honduras, Col. Charles A. Lindbergh landed at Merida, Yucatan at 3:45 p. m. today, according to a radio message received here by the Pan American Airways. He was accompanied by Mrs. Lindbergh.

The flight from Belize carried Colonel Lindbergh over the unexplored lands of the ancient Maya tribe. He took off from Belize at 10:15 a. m., completing the flight in five and one-half hours.

Bootleg Booze Kills Six Over Week-End

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. (US)—Six persons, including one woman, died from bootleg liquor over the week-end, Medical Examiner Norris reported tonight. Two of the dead were poisoned by wood alcohol.

The mortality from alcohol was greater this week, the records showed, than at any similar period in several months.

Lobby Investigation Will Be 'Wide Open'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. (US)—Determined to get at the roots of Washington's huge lobbying racket, Sen. George W. Morris, of Nebraska, chairman of the senate judiciary committee, today announced that the probe will be "wide open."

Tomorrow the first momentous step in the investigation will be taken when the judiciary committee meets and selects the members who will conduct the inquiry.

La Guardia Promises 'Overhauling' of Gotham

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. (US)—If elected mayor, Fiorella La Guardia, the Republican candidate, will call upon former Gov. Alfred E. Smith to help him reorganize the city government. La Guardia promised this tonight in an address at the Cornell Methodist church.

La Guardia asserted that the city government needs an overhauling. His first job, if put in the city hall, he said, would be to organize a commission to do it.

Teutonic Simplicity Marks Stresemann Rites

BERLIN, Oct. 6. (US)—Teutonic simplicity today marked Germany's last tribute to her fallen foreign minister, Dr. Gustav Stresemann. The man who for six years directed his fatherland's foreign policy in the face of failing health, was buried today in the tiny Luisenstadt cemetery, in the northern section of the city. None but the closest of Dr. Stresemann's personal friends and members of his family witnessed the interment.

Father-in-law Of Princess Mary Dies

LONDON, Oct. 6. (US)—The fifth Earl of Harewood, Henry Ulick Lascelles, the father-in-law of Princess Mary, King George's daughter, died here today.

Viscount Lascelles, husband of Princess Mary, is his heir. The earl owned land of 29,700 acres and was one of the richest of the English aristocracy. He was born in 1846.

Fifth Week's Work On Tariff Starts Today

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. (AP)—With much work to be done and less than two months left in which to do it before the special session ends, the senate will start its fifth week on the tariff bill tomorrow with Republican leaders hopeful that the highly contested rate schedules will be reached for consideration within a few days.

NAVAL PARLEY TO BE CALLED FOR JANUARY

MacDonald and Hoover, at Rapidan Camp, Agree On Conference

TO MEET IN LONDON

Invitations to Be Seht to Four Powers From London Today

MADISON, Va., Oct. 6. (AP)—Word went forth to the waiting world from President Hoover's wooded haunts at Rapidan today that a naval limitation conference would be called tomorrow to meet at London in the third week of January.

For more than three hours the chief executive discussed the cause of peace with Prime Minister Ramsay MacDonald on the porch of his lodge. Details of the viewpoints expressed were not made known, but announcement was made that the British foreign office was ready to invite the Washington, Tokyo, Paris and Rome governments to confer.

To Be Made Public

The texts of those invitations to be sent out from London will be made public Wednesday. The way for the conference has been paved by the general agreement for naval parity reached by the United States and Great Britain during the conversations there between the prime minister and Ambassador Dawes.

From after breakfast until past 11 o'clock, the president and MacDonald conversed. Warm sunshine dispelled the sharpness of the mountain air, and they decided to prolong their being together for a long stroll down the Rapidan river.

They walked for nearly a mile to a point where the stream breaks into a series of cascades and there admired as well the brillian yellows and oranges of the turning leaves. The stream was running high and the president had the opportunity to point out some of his favorite fishing holes.

Mrs. Hoover and Ishbel MacDonald want horseback riding.

Conference Held

Dinner was served at 2 o'clock and a general conference followed. Those who participated, in addition to Mr. Hoover and MacDonald, were Secretary Stimson, Under Secretary Cotton of the state department, who reached the camp today, Sir Robert van Sittart, MacDonald's private secretary, and R. L. Craigie, chief of the American section of the British foreign office.

The conference lasted for a considerable time and after it the party, with Mr. Hoover acting as guide, went up a hill in the opposite direction from the morning trip for a view of the surrounding country from the mountain top.

The stay at the camp virtually will be the only recreation in the American countryside which the prime minister will enjoy during his trip to the United States, his other time being spent either in traveling or in keeping engagements which have already been made.

The start for return to Washington will be made from the camp at 7:30 a. m., after an early breakfast, the party arriving in the capital in mid-morning.

Car Hurtles Sidewalk, Killing Infant Child

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. (US)—Phyllis Reni, five months old, was crushed to death in her baby carriage by an automobile which hurtled over the sidewalk at Wilson avenue and Hart street, Brooklyn, today.

Francesco Frascina, 19, of Brooklyn, was arrested on a charge of killing her. Police alleged that both foot and emergency brakes on his car were defective.

SHERMAN, Texas, Oct. 6. (AP)—More than 300 head of cattle from Kansas, Oklahoma and Texas have been entered in the Red River Valley Dairy show, opening here Monday.

Police Tyro Defies Superiors To Solve Capital's Murder Mystery

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. (AP)—Robert J. Allen, a "kid cop" just three years on the Washington metropolitan police force, has been victorious in the first skirmish to force denouement of a tragedy that stirred the capital and worried the police.

Pretty Virginia McPherson, 22, was found garroted with the cord of her pajamas in her apartment here. She had been estranged from her husband, Robert A. McPherson Jr., 21-year-old bank clerk.

A coroner's jury held suicide. Lieut. Edward J. Kelly, chief of detectives, agreed that it was suicide, and the case to all intents, was closed.

Allen declared publicly and loudly that he did not believe Virginia McPherson had committed suicide. He forthwith was suspended from duty.

"Prove it," he was told, "and you will be a sergeant of detectives. If your statements collapse you will be stripped of your star and denounced as a 'damnable traitor to the uniform.'"

Now the district grand jury, after five days of hearings in which Lieutenant Kelly and Inspector Shelby clung firmly to their suicide view, has indicted McPherson on a charge of first degree murder in connection with the death of his wife. And it recommended that Kelly and Shelby be relieved "of all duty in connection with the detective bureau until their activities in this case have been investigated."

So young Patrolman Allen is somewhat of a public hero in Washington. The result of the trial remains to climax his efforts.

The national capital watched the play and by-play of the "kid cop" vs. his superiors with unabated interest. Allen's persistent claims led Senator Overman of North Carolina the home state of Mrs. McPherson

Four Duncan Boys Held After Auto Collision Kills 13-Year-Old Girl

Car Which Sped Away After Crash Found, and Three Youths Jailed; Father Surrenders His Son, 16

Special to The Record News

DUNCAN, Okla., Oct. 6.—Four Duncan school boys are being held in the city jail here in connection with a fatal automobile accident Saturday night in which Edith Wiley, 13, was killed.

The girl was riding on the running board of a car when it was hit by another. At the impact she was killed almost instantly. The car which crashed into that on which she was riding sped away.

Sunday morning the car was found by Duncan police, and its three occupants arrested. A 16-year-old boy said to have been the driver of the car at the time of the accident, was surrendered to officers Sunday morning by his father.

More Firearms Found in Prison

CANON CITY, Colo., Oct. 6. (AP)—Discovery of two more revolvers and the belief five convicts still are armed, served to make a tense situation at the Colorado state penitentiary here tonight, following the bloody mutiny in which 12 lives were lost last week.

Shortly after a second convict had been placed in solitary confinement during investigation of the riot two pistols were found in a coal pile. Officers believe a shotgun, 30-30 rifle and two more pistols are hidden somewhere in the prison.

Kansas Wife Killer Jailed at Independence

INDEPENDENCE, Kan., Oct. 6. (UP)—Without bond and refusing to talk to officers or relatives, Carl Schuetz, 23, was held in county jail here tonight, charged with killing his wife, Freida, 23, in a grove of trees near his dairy farm, six miles from Independence.

Schuetz had been sought throughout the state since Mrs. Schuetz' body with a bullet wound in the back, was found Sunday morning, Sept. 22, and neighbors reported seeing the husband accompany her into the grove. He gave himself up to officers Saturday in a weakened condition.

Two Quit Cabinet As Slovak Gets Pen Term

VIENNA, Oct. 6. (UP)—Press reports tonight said that two Slovak members of the Czechoslovakian cabinet had resigned because of the sentencing yesterday of Dr. Bela Tuka, noted political leader, to 15 years in prison on charges of treason. Bitterness was reported throughout the country because of the trial, and many Slovak newspapers appeared with many columns blank—revealing where the censor had cut out adverse comment.

Searchers for Nobile Party Arrive at Oslo

OSLO, Oct. 6. (UP)—The Italian arctic expedition which has been searching in the far north since April for some trace of the missing members of the Nobile polar expedition of 1928, arrived today. The leader, Gianni Albertini, refused to confirm or deny reports the expedition had found traces of the so-called "balloon party" of the Nobile expedition.

Record News Cotton Table

For Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma

Week-end ginnings in Northwest Texas and Southern Oklahoma as reported by correspondents for The Record News in the principal interior markets showed no let-down in the heavy harvesting of early cotton. Nine cities reported a total of more than 2,000 bales, Frederick, Okla., going further into a lead with a season's mark of 7211.

Increased picking in the plains area was indicated by a material increase in Saturday's ginnings at Plainview over that of the preceding day.

A price of $35 on cottonseed at Memphis remained the high figure in the area, $32 per ton being the highest price paid elsewhere. Memphis gins turned out 425 bales Saturday.

BODY OF GIRL 'SAVIOR' FOUND

Priestess' Death Four Years Ago Revealed

LOS ANGELES, Oct. 6. (US)—In a secret grave under the floor of a residence at Venice, police early today found the body of a girl, dead four years, whose resurrection was to prove a new religion.

And with the finding of the body, police and autopsy officials of the coroner's office began an investigation of the possibility that the girl may have been the victim of a sacrifical ritual.

Girl was Priestess

The girl, Willa Rhoads, 16-year-old adopted daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Rhoads, under whose residence the body was hidden, was a priestess of a new cult, the Divine Order of the Royal Arms. She was known as the "tree of life" of this organization, whose head Mrs. May Otis Blackburn, is held on charges of fraud.

Alongside of the steel casket, containing the body of the girl, was a longer casket, in which were seven pups. The pups represented the seven tones of Gabriel's trumpet, which shall proclaim resurrection morn, the girl's foster-mother explained.

Grave Closely Guarded

For four years, the parent said, they had jealously guarded the grave of the girl. At first they were reluctant to tell investigating officers anything and it was not until after dawn that the coffin containing the body was found and opened.

"Our daughter was called the

FEDERAL AGENT AND DEPUTY SHOOT IT OUT

Nacogdoches Sheriff's Office Scene of Double Killing for 'Honor'

FATE RINGS 'PHONE

Sheriff Answers Call Just As Foes Start Row Fatal for Both

NACOGDOCHES, Texas, Oct. 6. (AP)—Believing his honor as an officer had been questioned by Federal Prohibition Agent L. Chance, DeputySheriff Claude King avenged the supposed insult with a ready pistol today and Chance replied in kind. Using the office of Sheriff Eugene Turner as the dueling ground, they shot it out, Chance falling dead instantly under the fire of King, who died a few hours later after an unsuccessful operation.

Phone Takes Witness

But for the inopportune ring of a telephone in an anteroom, Turner might have averted the gun play and at least would have been able to say how Chance answered King's challenge: "I hear you've been saying some pretty hard things about me." Just as the sheriff left the office, he heard the shots.

King had been informed that Chance, a deputy prohibition officer, had charged him with "standing in" with local bootleggers by being too lenient with them.

Sheriff Orders Quiet

Turner was sitting talking to Chance, he said, when King walked in. As the 33-year-old deputy accosted Chance, the sheriff ordered them to cease quarreling, saying, "You can't do that in here."

At that moment, he got up to answer the telephone. There were no witnesses and whether the federal officer denied that he had been speaking ill of King, or whether he replied with his gun, probably never will be known.

Dying Man Walks

King, his wounds looking ghastly, walked 50 feet from the office to the automobile that bore him to the hospital.

King's home was at Douglass, 26 miles west of Nacogdoches. He was an unsuccessful candidate for the sheriff's office last year. He had served on the Shreveport, La., police force.

Like King, Chance left a widow and several children. He formerly was a deputy sheriff here and some time ago entered the government service.

WALLER COUNTY FARMER SLAIN

WALLER, Texas, Oct. 6. (AP)—Twelve months of intermittent quarreling between two men culminated here Sunday in the fatal wounding of a Waller county farmer.

The farmer, who was known by two names, Ed. Finch or Ed. F. Lee, was shot to death in a garage by Fred Burt, 35-year-old automobile salesman, who formerly lived on a farm near Finch's about 12 miles north of Waller.

Following the shooting, Burt Drove to Hempstead, where he surrendered to Sheriff Earnest Lawrence. A murder charge was filed against Burt.

MARTIN CLASS HEARS APPEAL

Teacher Speaks on Man 'Not Far From Kingdom'

In his address to members of the men's Bible class at the Floral Heights Methodist church, Judge P. A. Martin Sunday morning appealed to the laymen of the church to join in an effort to reach the thousands who are "not far from the kingdom." The speaker called attention to a Sunday school mass meeting to be held in the Floral Heights church at 9:30 on the first Sunday in November, the meeting called to organize Bible class membership in a drive for new affiliations. Judge Martin's complete address follows:

"While the greatest Teacher in all history was speaking to the people assembled in the temple at Jerusalem a few days before his arrest and crucifixion, a certain scribe came to him and asked him 'Which is the first commandment of all?' The Savior readily quoted to him the words of Deuteronomy vi, 4-5, the words of the Jewish declaration of faith in one God, and added that the second was to love thy neighbor as thyself.

Christ's Words

"The scribe readily agreed with the great Teacher and acknowledged the truth of His saying, adding that this love of one God and love for his neighbor was greater than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices. Then it was that the Christ said the words that constitute the central thought of my discourse today:

"'Thou art not far from the kingdom.'

"Here was an intelligent man, a scribe, with an inquiring mind, a mind it seems that was already persuaded of the truth of the fundamentals of the faith. So far as his intellect was concerned, he was convinced. His presence in the temple and his profession would indicate that he was well versed in the law of his people and was one who was devout, from the standpoint of his people's faith. He was not one of the many who were trying to trap the Master into saying something against the government of Caesar, so that they might accuse him of disloyalty. I think we may assume that his words, his surroundings, his occupation and his station in life, that he was a moral and upright man, far above the average of his class, willing to subscribe to the truth when he heard it—and yet he was outside the kingdom—close to it, not far from it, but not in it. Like the rich young ruler there was something, perhaps one thing, he lacked, in order to fit his life for the kingdom of God.

"But to be near the kingdom, to stand upon the threshold of eternal happiness, and not to embrace it is certainly as tragic as it is dangerous and unwise. We cannot escape a feeling of great sympathy for this scribe and this young ruler when we read their words and study their experience with the great teacher of men who was undoubtedly seeking to draw them to himself and bind them to him by the cords of a living faith. Each of them was 'not far from the kingdom of God' but neither of them entered therein. They both rejected the Savior and were dropped from the pages of sacred history. Opportunity knocked at their very doors, but they failed to open. The rich young ruler, as was said by Dr. Packard in last Sunday's radio sermon, may have become an apostle of the Christ and the scribe of today's lesson also may have been the first chronicler of the incoming religion of Christ if they had accepted him. They missed their opportunity. If Paul had been disobedient to the heavenly vision that he saw on the Damascus road; if Matthew had remained at his desk at 'the receipt of custom'; if James and John and Peter and Andrew had not left their work and followed the Teacher even unto death, I don't know where the world would ever have had an accurate statement of his teaching and his preaching or an accurate idea of his kingdom.

Thousands Near Door

"And what was it that intervened between the scribe and the kingdom of God? He was 'not far'—evidently within easy reach. I have an idea that there was nothing left for him to do but to accept the Christ as the atoning mediator between him and his God and his conversion would have been complete. But it may have been some pet sin to be repented of before he could entertain the indwelling of the kingdom.

"But while we deeply sympathize with those who lost these golden opportunities let us not forget that countless thousands of men all over the world are right at the door of the same opportunity today and are just as unwisely passing by and failing to enter therein. We meet them every day in the busy walks of life; good men, moral men, law-abiding men, men who acknowledge as the scribe did, the supremacy of the one God and who by precept and example teach the second great commandment of love and charity towards their neighbors and who put into practice the golden rule. And yet they are outside the pale of the kingdom—not far away, but just outside. How often we have followed the body of such a man to the grave and wondered if God in his mercy would not let his good deeds and his useful life come up before Him as a memorial and be recognized at the throne above as a satisfactory substitute for the religion he never professed while alive!

"And right here in my opinion rests a solemn duty upon the men of the church today—the lay members of the kingdom if you please. We know these men who stand just outside; they are our friends and neighbors; they frequent our offices and places of business and we strike hands with them every day of our lives. We speak to them on every conceivable subject except religion. We leave that to the preachers alone.

"A few days ago some half-dozen laymen met by appointment and lunched together at a local cafeteria and discussed ways and means to interest more men in our city in Bible class work. It was decided to invite all the men in all Bible classes in the city to a mass meeting of such classes in this church on the first Sunday in November at 9:30, the Sunday school hour, releasing everybody in time to go to his church for services. A speaker was selected to address the combined classes of Wichita Falls, the purpose being to combine the efforts of all these men of the church to persuade more men to join our classes and to reach, if possible, with the influence of the gospel all these men who are not far from the kingdom, as well as those who are far away. Let us not forget the day nor the work nor the object to be accomplished not only in this meeting but in every day and in every way let us try to make our Zion attractive to all men."

EASY--The Love Story of a Modern Girl--

By Beatrice Burton

By BEATRICE BURTON

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Ann-Marie Macy wanted to be an artist. She told John Lawler, handsome son of a banker and "catch of the town" that she would never marry. But when John came in his car to take her to her father's tiny book store, Ann-Marie's heart pounded violently. Later when she knew he wanted to embrace her, she resisted. All girls pet, John argued; even her sisters, Jeanne and Alice, but Ann-Marie is different." Still arguing, they arrive at Ann-Marie's home to find a gay, informal party. Alice boldly asks John to take her to the Christmas dance but he replies he has asked Ann-Marie. When Ann-Marie suggests that he take Alice, he agrees to but is angry. Lamenting, Ann-Marie calls him back, but Alice makes Ann-Marie forego the dance. She even asks Ann-Marie to paint flowers on her dress. Mrs Leasure, who is housekeeper in the motherless home, sympathizes with Ann-Marie, who is the "goat" of the two more modern flapper sisters. Ann-Marie, however, is secretly saving to study art. Florence Lawler, John's sister, calls on her with "good news."

Now Go on With the Story

Ann Marie had set her alarm for half past six, but it was 8 o'clock when she opened her eyes the next morning.

As she lay staring at the clock, wondering how she had happened to oversleep, the bedroom door opened a crack and one of Mrs. Leasure's sharp blue eyes appeared in the opening.

"Ho! You're awake!" she exclaimed, and came into the room, carrying a little tray of toast and tea in her hands.

"I was going to wake you up," she said, setting it down upon the bed, "Your father says you promised to help him at the store today—it being the day before Christmas an' all."

Ann Marie nodded, pouring her hot tea.

"I did. I promised to go down with him—and then I overslept," she answered, "so I'll have to do some double-quick stuff now, won't I?"

She emptied one cup of the tea and hopped out of bed.

The bathroom was as cold as a tomb when she rushed into it for her shower. Part of the rambling old house was not heated by the furnace—Ann Marie's bedroom, Mrs. Leasure's bedroom and the bathroom.

So Ann Marie shivered as she bathed and brushed her teeth with salt.

Salt instead of tooth powder was one of Ann Marie's pet economies.

She had a great many little ways of her own for saving money . . . Money that she put into Mr. Lawler's bank, little by little and bit by bit. . . . Money that some day, so Ann Marie promised herself, would take her to New York and pay her way into art school. That was her hope and her dream.

Into that steadily growing little account went the money that Ann Marie earned, helping her father at the store, or painting cards for him. Into it went an occasional $10 that Florence Lawler paid her for painting a spray of flowers on some of her dancing frocks or for decorating the place cards for some dinner party or other that she was giving.

"Florence always peys me too much," Ann Marie was thinking as she hung her tooth brush on its hook and started back to her bedroom, "but that's because she's crazy about Howdy, and wants to be nice to me."

At the head of the stairs Mrs. Leasure was waiting for her.

"Miss Florence Lawler's downstairs. She wants to see you for a minute," she whispered importantly. She was proud of the friendship that existed between the young Lawlers and her favorites, Ann Marie and Howdy. "You'd better run down just the way you are—she says she's in a hurry."

Florence Lawler was her brother, Johnny's twin. But she looked years older than he did. For Florence was not plump or rounded, but just "plain fat," as she herself often said in her good natured, comfortable way.

She was blond and pink and the fashionable clothes she wore never looked fashionable on her. So did everything she could to get thin except the one thing she should have done—cut down her food supply.

"Hello, there Honey! I'm out for a walk—trying to get rid of a couple of 'hips!'" she called out as soon as she saw Ann Marie. "And I stopped in with good news for you—and I mean good news!"

CHAPTER V

"Tell me the grand good news" Ann Marie said, shivering and pulling her blue cotton kimono around her as she came into the chill of the front parlor. The old house was hard to heat because of its high ceilings and it was never comfortable until noon on winter days.

"New man!" Florence Lawler answered, and there was a note of triumph in her voice, for a new everybody else always. "He's a friend of my cousin, Neal, in New man was a real event in the little town where everybody had known York. He's driving up from Virginia and last night he had dinner with us—. He's a bachelor, not so terribly good-looking but simply fascinating all the same. One of those 'strong, silent men,' you know." She giggled, and while she was giggling she looked about 15 years old instead of 20 plus.

"I asked him to stay over for the dance tonight—you know, Little Flossie never lets the grass grow under her feet!" She giggled again. She always giggled when she spoke of her huge self as Little Flossie.

"Johnny says he's asked Alice to go to the dance with him, so I thought maybe you'd go with Jim Goodwin—that's his name," she went on, closing the door of the room and dropping her voice. "How did Johnny happen to ask Alice to go with him? He never could stand Alice, you know."

A little pucker came between Ann Marie's black eyebrows. "He asked her because I said I wouldn't go with him," she blurted, "So, of course, I can't go with this Goodwin man, can I?"

Suddenly her face brightened as a brilliant thought struck her. "Maybe Alice would like to go with Johnny after all! If I telephoned him and asked him to take me I know he would!—let's put it up to Alice!"

Alice was lying in bed, flat on her back, reading "Collegiate Comics," a magazine that was her Bible. From it Alice got all the smart cracks and jokes that she entertained her "boy friends" with.

Last night's cold cream glistened on her face and her cheeks and lips had very little color. Her blond hair was done up in curlers and there was no mascara on her light eyelashes.

"Mr. Goodwin! Why I thought you were at the party," Ann Marie said.

Alice in the early morning was very very different from the perfumed, silk-stockinged, rouged Alice of the luncheon-date, the tea-date, and the evening party.

"I hate anyone to see me like this!" she said viciously, as she sat up in bed. She glared at Ann Marie. "You ought to have known better than to bring Florence up here without giving me a minute to scrape the cold cream off my face!"

Florence dropped down on the bed which sagged beneath her 175 pounds. "Oh, that's all right. I'm no dream of beauty myself, when I come to in the morning," she answered easily. "I'd give 10 years from my life—the last 10, though—if I could look the way Ann Marie does, just once! She's prettier without paint and powder than she is with it!"

Her eyes, sunk in fat pink cheeks, glowed with honest admiration as she looked at Ann Marie with the damp gold-brown hair lying in little flat rings along her forehead and temples and the soft color in her face.

Then she turned back to Alice. "How would you like to go to the party tonight with a man from New York who's visiting us, and let Johnny take Ann Marie?" she

Alice's answer came like a shot. "I wouldn't like it at all!"

She gave Ann Marie a suspicious look.

"Is this your idea?" she asked, and Ann Marie shook her head.

"No—that is—why, yes, I guess it was my idea," she answered uncertainly, trying to remember whose idea it had been for Alice to go with the man named Goodwin. "Yes, it was my idea."

"I thought so," Alice's voice was flat and cold. "Well, it was a waste of energy, because I'm going with Johnny unless he calls me up and says he doesn't want me to go with him."

And so that matter was settled.

All day long people came and went in the store.

All day long Mr. Macy and Ann Marie wrapped up books and boxes of writing paper, fancy book-ends and children's games.

All day long they made change at the cash register in the corner behind the Christmas card table, opened and closed the front door for people too burdened with bundles to do it themselves, and welcomed others who rushed in for last-minute things that they wanted to buy.

At noon Florence Lawler telephoned from the country club.

"We've just simply got to have 30 more dance programs!" she declared breathlessly. She was chairman of the decorations committee for the party that night. "Do you suppose by any chance you could paint them? If you haven't time just send along the plain ones—"

"Send them?" wailed Ann Marie. "We haven't any delivery boy, Flossie—you must knew that. But look here, if you could stop in for the programs on your way to the club tonight, I think I can have some holly and things painted on them so they'll be just like the other ones I did for you."

"Fine!" And Florence hung up. Life was simple like that for Florence. When she wanted things she went to someone or other who could do them—and the someone or other did them and was well paid for the job. Her father's money made everything smooth for her.

Sometimes Ann Marie wondered if Howdy would ever have looked twice at her if she had been a poor girl . . . and sometimes she wondered if Howdy had ever had a chance to look at anybody but her. For she was always calling him up and asking him to take her to the movies or to parties or to meals at the Lawlers' big, luxurious, hospitable house on the country club road just outside of town.

She brought him home from the bank in her own little closed car almost every night in the week, and Howdy knew that he never would have been given his position there if it had not been for her friendship with him.

"But I wonder if Howdy's really in love with her." Ann Marie asked herself that afternoon when she carried the contents of her father's cash register across the street to the bank. "She's just as sweet as she can be, but she's too fat and she's not pretty . . . Howdy ought to have a pretty girl—"

She knew that he worshiped beauty as much as she did—but in a different way.

For when a woman loves beauty, she sees in it flowers and in the sky at sunrise or the silver-gray sheen of rain on roofs . . . Or she listens to it in music or in wind or the beating of waves on a beach.

But when a man worships beauty, he usually worships it in women—and on the walls of Howard Macy's bedroom in the Pleasant street house were photographs of Janet Gaynor and Marilyn Miller and Marion Davies and Clara Bow. Photographs that he had torn from magazines and tacked there himself, among his pictures of "Babe" Ruth and Bobby Jones and Jack Dempsey. Among his heroes.

He took the money when Ann Marie handed it across the counter to him and made out a deposit slip for her.

"Tell Dad I borrowed a ten-spot from him, will you?" he asked her, stripping a bill from the sheaf she had handed to him. "I'll pay it back to him next Saturday—maybe."

He grinned amiably as he handed her back the worn brown leather bank book that belonged to Mr. Macy.

"Tell him I took it as a Christmas present in advance," he added cheerfully. "He won't mind. He's a good scout."

But Mr. Macy did mind. He was very much upset when Ann Marie went back to the store and told him that he had just given Howdy a Christmas present $10.

"I'll have a lot of bills to meet the first of the year!" He shook his head hopelessly and looked glum. "That fellow just robs me, Ann Marie! He robs me every chance he gets!"

"Never mind, Pete!" Ann Marie called him "Pete" sometimes. His name was Peter. "I won't charge you a cent for working for you today—so you'll have that much to the good. And we're doing a rushing business, aren't we? Here's the country club telephoning for some more hand-painted programs, too!—Don't you worry, Pete! We're going to come out the big end of the horn, this time!"

She was working on the programs for Florence Lawler, during a lull at 5 o'clock when Jeanie and Alice came flying in, laden with wrapped up Christmas presents and bringing a heavenly fragrance of "Rose Jaquemniot" perfume with them.

Ann Marie gave them a suspicious look, and her delicate nostrils quivered as she sniffed the air.

"You two!" she said accusingly. "You two have opened my bottle of French perfume!—My bottle that Johnny gave me last Easter—that I wasn't going to open myself until that German cologne of mine was all gone—"

She turned to her father, blazing.

"I knew they'd use it if they found it!" she cried. "And for months I've had it hidden in that hollow place in the newel post at the foot of the stairs!—I have to hide everything I own from them! They steal everything of mine that they can lay their hands on! And now they've even discovered the newel post—"

Alice interrupted her with a tiny laugh.

"Well, that's why we took this perfume—because you'd hidden it from us. It made us angry to think that you'd hide things from your own sisters as if we were common thieves!" she explained smoothly. "We just decided we'd show you that you can't hide things from us—"

"Psst!"

Jeanie gave a little hiss of warning as the front door of the shop opened. In from the darkness came Florence Lawler, rosy and beamling above her furs, and with her came two men whom Ann Marie never had seen before.

Week of Major League Baseball Brings Out New Angles on Game

By HUGH S. FULLERTON JR.
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. (AP)—The small number of games in the closing week of the major league season kept the teams from performing any great scoring feats, but it did serve to produce the surprising result of putting the Boston Red Sox on top of both circuits. They played but two games and won both of them while no other team reached Saturday without a defeat.

Cleveland had the second best mark in the American league with two victories and one defeat. The Indians were the only other team to get better than an even break. In the National three teams had the same percentage for the week. Chicago played a full schedule, winding up with four victories and two defeats while Boston and New York each won two games and lost one.

The Chicago White Sox pulled a surprising feat of leading their townsmen, the Cubs, in scoring for the week. The Sox got only an even break in four games but they tallied 28 runs while the Cubs got but 24 counters in their six games. The Cubs, however, did more hitting, connecting for 62 blows to lead both leagues. The Sox topped the American league with 54 hits.

Detroit, the other half of the White Sox series, took second place in the American in both scoring and hitting, getting 46 hits for 22 runs. The St. Louis Cardinals were second in the National with 47 hits and 21 runs. Washington, which lost two to the Red Sox, was low in both respects, getting only three runs and 11 hits.

Boston had a double triumph in the matter of outscoring their opponents. The Red Sox had the best record with 24 runs to three for their rivals while the Braves topped the National league, leading their opponents by a 15-7 margin.

The error column showed the Cubs at one end and the New York Giants at the other. The Giants played three errorless games while the Cubs committed 11 bobbles. Four teams went through the brief schedule with only one mistake.

The Phillies topped the home run column with five. The Cardinals took second place with three circuit blows while two for Detroit headed the American league.

Constable Takes Threat as Joke

SAN ANGELO, Texas, Oct. 6. (AP)—"Pack your trunk and move on to safer country," was the admonition of Jack Miles, San Angelo constable, to those who pinned a note to his office door threatening his life.

The note read:

"Jack, we sight you to the murder case at Borger. It is no pleasure to us to have job of that kind done. We do not give you any number of days to resign. We mean for you to do it now."

Miles had participated in a number of liquor raids here recently.

Clara Boy Breaks Arm Cranking Automobile

Special to The Record News

CLARA, Texas, Oct. 6.—Eldon Ruff, son of W. W. Ruff, sustained a broken arm while cranking his car here this morning. He was taken to Burkburnett by his father for treatment.

Other booths reserved were Floral club, home economics, ladies' department, American Legion, and Future Farmers of Texas instructional display.

Boy, 15, Arrested For Theft of Watch Here

A career of juvenile criminality which has been under the observation of local officers for several months was halted Sunday when James A. McDonald, county juvenile officer, placed a 15-year-old boy, half drunk and charged with stealing a $15 watch, in the juvenile ward of the county jail. The boy is already on probation and will probably be given a Gatesville sentence during the week, Mr. McDonald said. The watch, stolen from a north Wichita jewelry shop and later sold for $3, has been recovered and returned to its owner. The boy denied the theft. "If I took it I was drunk at the time and don't remember anything about it," the 15-year-old said.

Leaders Seek to Dispel Opposition to Williams

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. (AP)—Efforts will be made by administration leaders before the senate agriculture committee meets this week to dispel the opposition which has developed to Carl Williams of Oklahoma and Sam R. McKelvie of Nebraska as members of the federal farm board representing respectively cotton and wheat.

Unless the leaders obtain enough support to prevent a coalition of wheat and cotton groups, they admitted confirmation of the two board members could be blocked.

Gales and Rainstorms Cause Havoc in France

PARIS, Oct. 6. (UP)—Gales and rainstorms in many parts of France were reported today, torrents of rain at Marseilles and in the Rhone valley doing considerable damage. The Manin railroad was undermined and a freight train derailed, delaying fast express trains.

JURY TO HEAR CRIME CHARGE

Officers Continue Drive on Vagrants

A special charge, urging an investigation of a flare-up of burglaries and knob-knockings in and around Wichita Falls during the past 10 days, will be given the 30th district grand jury in Judge Allan D. Montgomery's charge Monday morning, Judge Montgomery announced last Friday that he expected to include the special instructions along with the routine charge.

Among the 25 routine complaints to be presented to the investigators by the district attorney's office Monday are a criminal assault charge brought against John J. Bartlett, former deputy United States marshal here; an assault to kill accusation against Elmer Thornton, former city officer who recently wounded Perry Cowan in a raid upon an alleged crap game; and three robbery counts against Otis Akers, charged with the hold-up of three Wichita county business houses more than a year ago. Bartlett and Thornton are on bond. Akers is being held in the Wichita county jail.

While county officials awaited the special grand jury charge both city and county officers continued their work of combing the city for idlers and suspicious characters in their war on the threatened outbreak of crime. The county jail held 30 new inmates Sunday and Sunday night, 17 of them arrested by members of the sheriff's department on vagrancy, gambling and other misdemeanor charges. At the police station Sunday night a dozen more undesirables had been booked for vagrancy and investigation and members of the force continued their clean-up work under the direction of Chief of Police Frank Burns.

"We can't give Borger the credit for things that have been happening here," Chief Burns declared. "Wichita Falls can produce as good a knob-knocker as any city in the state. We're looking after our own local burglars more than after these drifters from Borger they talk about. Most of the Borger boys are going back to Oklahoma where they came from."

tree of life of the order and her resurrection, which was to take place upon completion of the 'Sixth Seal' (a book now being written by Mrs. Blackburn) was to prove the truth of the resurrection for the whole world," Mrs. Rhoads said.

"She was sacrificed to save the world," the foster-mother declared. But she insisted that the girl was not slain to fulfill a prophesy, but died a natural death.

Tooth Infection Fatal

According to Mrs. Rhoads, the girl's "passing," as she terms it, was the result of an infection of a tooth, which spread to her throat. She admitted that no physician was called, but declared that Mrs. Blackburn and other members of the cult did everything they could for her.

Both Mr. and Mrs. Blackburn were held as material witnesses following the finding of the body.

Mrs. Blackburn, the leader of the cult, and her daughter, Ruth Wieland Rizzio, admitted that they knew the dead girl and of her final sickness. They insisted, however, that they advised Mrs. Rhoads to call a physician and that they made no promises of resurrection.

Woman Defies Wrecking Crews

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. (AP)—In an old house in Chelsea where, more than a century ago, Dr. Clement Moore wrote the famous yuletide poem, "'Twas the night before Christmas," a determined woman tonight sat, firm in her resolution that wrecking crews should not force her to leave.

Although the rest of the block has been razed in preparation for the erection of a huge apartment house, leaving her home standing gaunt and lonely amidst the wreckage, Mrs. Tillie Hart has in a bureau drawer a lease which she insists does not expire until next June.

The owners think differently and a lawsuit is pending. Meanwhile the steam shovels continue their march and tomorrow will scrape the walls of Mrs. Hart's home. Her water supply has been cut off and her rooms are filled with the dust rising from excavations, but she stands firm.

Husband of Lord Byron's Daughter Dies at 64

LONDON, Oct. 6. (UP)—The Earl of Loveland, 64, died last night at his Scottish home, Torridon Rossshire, from pneumonia. His first wife, Ada Augusta Byron, was a daughter of the poet, Lord Byron. His daughter, Lady Diana Gibb, and her husband are in the United States at present.

JACKIE CATHERINE JONES

Jackie Catherine Jones, nine-months-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Jones of KMA, died at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon at the family home. The baby had been sick only a few days. Funeral services will be held at the KMA Baptist church at 3 o'clock Monday afternoon, Rev. George A. Weems of the First Christian church of Iowa Park conducting the service. Burial will be in Iowa Park. Besides her parents the baby is survived by two sisters, Clytie and Bernice, and a brother, Bryan.

Rhine Troops' Future Argued

What is to be done with the 6,000 men that will be returned to Britain from the Rhine when it is evacuated, is being discussed in England. One military authority believes that the enlarged camp at Catterlick, England, will be used to complete the establishment of the men as a fifth expeditionary division. At the same time it is evident that, with fewer troops required in Egypt and no Rhine army to maintain, the home garrisons must become stronger and more troops made available for service in India and at other stations. It is predicted that the army will not be reduced in size because the military authorities have, in the last two years, been hard pressed to supply the requirements of India and China.

'Kid' Policeman Solves Mystery

to request a grand jury investigation.

The young patrolman wove his case around the fact that he gave vain chase to a man who fled from a rear window of the McPherson apartment the night of the tragedy. Only the transcript of the grand jury proceedings, and the trial itself, will clear the mystery.

Allen's career on the metropolitan police force has been one of stormy individuality. He came to Washington three years ago to study law and joined the police force to help pay his expenses.

Almost immediately he began a single-handed crusade for "police reform" and has been in the spotlight in several "exposes" of irregularities. It has made him friends and many enemies.

Allen was a pilot during the world war, he says, and was decorated for his air exploits.

MARTIAL LAW TAMES BORGER

Peaceful, 'Dry' Winter Is Now in Prospect

BORGER, Texas, Oct. 6. (AP)—Borger's transition from a "free" oil town of 10,000, with a murder on an average of every six weeks, into a peaceful community virtually has been accomplished by national guardsmen without mishap.

Only two shots, both accidental, have been fired since martial law was declared here last Monday. Khaki clad patrolmen direct traffic without the ordinary back talk from motorists. Drinkers stay at home and lock the doors before imbibing. The lady barbers have discarded their pajamas.

The town seems to be in for a cold, peaceful, "dry" winter. Since District Attorney John A. Holmes was assassinated Sept. 13, the invasion of Texas rangers and the subsequent arrival of the military many changes have taken place. City and county officers have been deposed with soldiers taking their places. Numerous bootleggers and questionable women have obeyed orders to "leave town by sundown." Saturday night, ordinarily the night on which oil field workers came to town for their fun, has become the "nicest" night of the week.

The police court docket yesterday showed only two arrests for intoxication, and both of those before 7 p. m.

Borger knows, fairly definitely, what the future will bring if Mayor Glenn A. Pace, Sheriff Joe Ownbey, Police Chief J. W. Crabtree and other city and county officers resign. Martial law will be lifted. Governor Moody, who declared military rule because his investigators told him an "entrenched criminal ring" and a "conspiracy" between peace officers and criminals existed here, has suggested the resignations more than once.

Air School Turns Out Pilot in Short Time

What is believed by officials of the Wichita Falls Air Transport company to be a record in this section for abbreviated training periods prior to solo flying was set Sunday morning at Staley field by Roy Riner, local oil man, who enacted successful solo flights after only six hours and 55 minutes of training, according to Fulcher Armstrong, president of the transport company.

Mr. Riner enrolled for training at Staley field only a short time ago, it was said, and the flights accomplished Sunday were said to reflect a surprising adaptibility to easy handling of the plane.

State Weddings

COHEA-STILWELL

Special to The Record News.

FREDERICK, Okla., Oct. 6.—Miss Alexia Charlene Stilwell, daughter of Mrs. Marie Stilwell, 216½ West Grand avenue, was married to Wayne D. Cohea of Los Angeles last Thursday at Hobar, leaving the same day for Los Angeles to reside. Cohea was formerly connected with his brothers in the Cohea Grocery store at this place. While attending the local schools he first met the girl who later became his wife. Mrs. Cohea graduated from the Frederick High school last term.

ELDERS-TINNIN

ELECTRA, Texas, Oct. 6.—Mrs. H. H. Hall of 108 East Wharton avenue announces the marriage of her sister, Miss Delcia Mae Tinnin to Robert Elders of Memphis on Friday, Oct. 4 with Brother Burt Shoffner, of the Church of Christ reading the ceremony. Mrs. Elders has resided in Electra a number of years and lived with her sister until her marriage.

Mr. Elders was formerly of Deihart but recently moved to Memphis where he is engaged in the oil business there. Mr. and Mrs. Elders left Friday for a few days' honeymoon in West Texas, after which they will be at home to friends in Memphis.

Two Clara Girls Hurt As Auto Overturns

Special to The Record News

CLARA, Texas, Oct. 6.—Mary Opal Head and Lesta Sullivan, both of Clara, were badly bruised when the automobile in which they were riding with two boy companions overturned three miles west of Burkburnett at noon Sunday. The two boys were unhurt. The girls were taken to Iowa Park for treatment and later returned to their homes here.

SHOOK SUFFERS FOURTH CHILL

Malarial Sickness Grips Prisoner Here

The fourth chill in as many days gripped Tom Shook, recaptured fugitive facing murder charges in two states, in his cell in the Wichita county jail Sunday. The seizures come in the early afternoon and are of brief duration, jail attendants reported. Physicians said Sunday evening that the prisoner is suffering from malarial chills probably contracted in Tennessee, where he was arrested under a second murder charge 10 days ago.

A fortnight of resting from the exposure and nervous strain of his fugitive's life will be afforded Shook before the trial on the first of five indictments against him is called in the 89th district court on Oct. 21. He will be tried first on a robbery charge in connection with the hold-up of J. B. Early in the Jefferson hotel in Electra in the summer of 1928. Murder charges, alleging the fatal stabbing of Oscar Daugherty in Electra, are also held against him and will be brought to trial later, it has been announced.

Meanwhile the prisoner has been unable to communicate with an attorney. He was too ill to see the lawyer who called at his request to discuss the case on Saturday, it was reported, and no further arrangements had been discussed Sunday.

Shook was brought back to Wichita county from Tennessee last Friday afternoon in the custody of Sheriff W. G. Bralley and Charlie Gant, deputy.

Negro Dying Of Stabbing Injury

Because both players claimed $2 involved in a crap game, S. M. Madison, negro, was dying of knife wounds in the Wichita General hospital Sunday night, and Pastell Young, another negro, was under arrest at the city jail, the charges against him dependent on the fate of Madison.

Bob Miller, city policeman, Sunday afternoon ran to separate the men, fighting in a Lake street yard just as Young lifted his knife and slashed into his opponent, the officer reported to Chief of Police Frank Burns. Madison received several deep intestinal wounds and was reported in a critical condition at the hospital late Sunday night.

In a statement made to George Anderson, assistant district attorney, Young said the two had quarreled over a crap game, and especially over $2 which he claimed Madison had appropriated. He drew his knife in self defense, the prisoner said. Mr. Miller reported to Chief Burns that he had seen the pair run from the house of Genevieve Ellis on Lake street, Young pursuing Madison into the street and back again into the yard. The officer knocked Young from Madison's body as the knife blows continued to fall, his report continued.

New By-Laws of Rabbit Breeders to Be Discussed

Discussion of the constitution and by-laws for the American Rabbit and Cavy Breeder's association of Texas now being drawn up will feature the regular meeting of that organization to be held Tuesday night, Oct. 8, in the basement of the courthouse at 7:30 p. m., according to W. L. Smith, corresponding secretary.

Plans for organized marketing of rabbit meat and furs also will be discussed Tuesday night, it was announced, and the attendance of all breeders in this community was urged.

REVIVAL OPENS

Rev. Clarence Bounds, of Megargel, Sunday morning opened a revival meeting in the First Methodist church at Valley View. The local pastor, Rev. E. H. Coburn, is assisting in the services. Large crowds attended both the morning and evening gatherings Sunday.

HAD TO WORK TOO HARD
Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Gave Her Strength

Mt. Carmel, Pa.—"After my second baby was born I had to work too hard and be on my feet too soon because my husband was ill. After his death I was in such a weakened and run-down condition that nothing seemed to help me. I am starting the fourth bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and feel a great deal better. I am much stronger and don't get so tired out when I wash or work hard. I do housekeeping and dressmaking and I highly recommend the Vegetable Compound. I am willing to answer letters."—Mrs. Gertrude Botts, 414 S. Market St., Mt. Carmel, Pa.

Floral Heights League Has Japanese Program

At the Sunday afternoon meeting of the Epworth league young people of Floral Heights Methodist church, "Japanese schools" was the subjects that brought forth much interesting information.

The schools for grammar grade pupils were described and the differences in the Japanese and American schools shown by Frances Gardner. Margaret Pease told about the founding of Hiroshima Girl's school located at Hiroshima, Japan. This school and college has an enrollment of 900 girls coming from nine different nationalities. It has been for four years, the "foreign special," of Southern Methodist young people's missionary societies. This is the last year that it will be their foreign special.

The college was founded by a poor Japanese sailor, who, having heard of America as a land of wealth, came to this country to try to amass a fortune. He gained no money but became converted. He went back to Japan to his old grandmother who was waiting for him to return a wealthy man. He told her he brought not wealth, but something better, Christianity.

His dream was to found a girl's Christian school in his home town of Hiroshima. It seemed impossible, but with the help of Doctor Lambuth, who had just come to Japan as a missionary, his dream was realized.

Today this school stands as one of the most important centers of Christian education in Japan.

Miss Julia Lake Stevens, now superintendent of young people's work, who was in Wichita Falls a year ago as a visitor to the young people's district meeting, which met at Floral Heights Methodist church was formerly a teacher in Hiroshima Girl's school.

After the program there was a business session, during which the members were divided into two sides. These two sides will have an airplane race, to see which one gets to Jerusalem first. This race is in connection with the study of the mission book, "Going to Jerusalem." The race will take place on Sundays.

The meeting was dismissed with the young people's benediction. About 35 members were present.

PEEPS AT PEOPLE

By MRS. L. N. CASON

A stout woman in black, with ankles that looked as if they had borne her weight for many years, stood at the front of the restaurant with a row of bead necklaces to sell—Indian weaving, she said—done by herself. She was asking a precarious living that way. Several of the waitresses bought of her.

Seated near the rear of the same cafe were a man and woman, waiting for their lunch. She was smoking. Her hands, loaded with diamonds, flashed as she knocked the ash off the cigaret. The waitresses waited on her.

So many women of so many kinds, and their lives fall into so many different lines.

Later, on the same afternoon, we spent some time in a beauty parlor. We watched three different women having waves and were interested throughout. They were of such different types, and when the hair was drawn up from round the face, it was almost like undressing souls. No softening fluffs to hide what time had written.

And speaking of permanents, we asked the operator working on us, how many permanents that shop gave in a day and she said from three to 20. There shouldn't be a straight hair left in Wichita Falls.

Even the children are permanently waved. Such things were unknown when we were a child. We remember one little girl who had her hair wrapped each night on long rags; we doubt if she rested well. She had curls each day unless it rained.

When it rained, life was a tragedy. But in youth, so little makes a tragedy. Youth has no retrospect for comparison. When people grow older, they grow more hopeful.

When they grow older, they need more hope. Life does not last always. It is good to be able to thrill over loveliness and it is good to be able to laugh.

We thrilled this day over a bird that perched in the shrubbery at our dining room windows and sang over and over a clear, sweet note of hope.

And we laughed the other day, this Rev. Mr. Clark who is suing Mrs. Kennedy, (Aimee Semple McPherson's mother) for breach of promise, had grown old and set in his virtue. Mrs. Kennedy is no girl. A newspaper ran the story of the trial which is being a show in Seattle now. Below the story of the trial, a filler said, "Vesuvius was thought to be an extinct volcano until the fatal eruption of 79 A. D."

We Women

By BETTY BRAINERD

These Poor Rich Women!

There are approximately 40,000 millionaires in the United States. Most of them can afford luxuries and are probably married. There are, therefore, about 40,000 women in the United States who are pointed out by less plutocratic women as being "married to a millionaire."

It is a dubious and, often, a pathetic distinction.

Wives of poor men are poor in almost everything except happiness. The precincts in which the poor dwell are in almost every town fog-bound by want and worry. But to achieve happiness in spite of the constant pressure and torment of financial want is a sign of strength. The poor, in the light of my examination, which looks to the wide horizon of human existence rather than to fractions of it, are gloriously and magnificently strong.

Their triumph is nothing more than the triumph of heart over mind. Indeed, I'll go so far as to say that there is, proportionately, more happiness to the square block in those sections where the poor live than there is in the square mile where not only millionaires live but where the middle classes as well live.

There is no divorce problem among the poor.

That is a luxury indulged in almost exclusively by the rich and middle classes. The poor marry only to be happy, and in spite of want and worry they are happy. They do not know how to make money but they do manage to get all that is truly rich out of the raw elements of life.

I have no statistics to prove my point but I'd wager that there are more divorces among millionaires than in any other class. Of course, not every divorce is news. What the poor do is not interesting reading. The rich, consequently, suffer unfairly from publicity given to their divorces. But when due allowance is made for this it still remains my conviction that too much money affects happiness more than too little.

But money is not the root of all unhappiness. It is a contributing cause in the millionaire class. The problem of existence has already been solved for both husband and wife, and thus life loses much of its zest. The wife of a millionaire is compelled to live on the surface of things. She becomes a social automaton. And as life proceeds life becomes shallower and shallower—and she knows it.

Wherefore the millionaire's wife, to me, is more to be pitied than the wife of a poor man.

Hostess Day To Feature Lovely Style Promenade

A gold and silver luncheon will feature Hostess Day at the Woman's Forum clubhouse Wednesday of this week. A gold and silver back drop will be hung by Perkins-Timberlake, who are giving a fashion promenade on that date and autumn shades in leaves will be used with red and golden zinnias to decorate each individual table. Place cards will emphasize the motif.

Misses Dorothy Nolen, Ina Merle Robison, Jimmie Duke, Geraldine Monroe, Helen Fowler and Mesdames John Harris, D. L. Fritz, Q. B. Lee and T. A. Hicks will be models for the beautiful gowns to be displayed.

Miss Marguerite Fisher will announce the program.

Many parties have already made reservations. Members may entertain their friends at this luncheon, but all reservations must be in by Tuesday noon.

Mesdames Rhea Howard and E. P. Bass are hostesses for the day and will take reservations. Phone 6178 and 9033.

Great Value Of Child's Technical Training Is Shown

Importance of Technical Training in Fitting a Child for Life—One Exception Only Proves the Rule That Early Marriages Are Hazardous

Dear Dorothy Dix—We have four children. My husband is one of the best men, very kind and loving to us all, but he and I differ on one point—educating the children. He earns only a small salary and it has been a hard struggle for us to live, and he thinks the children should go to work as soon as they are through grammar school. I want them to have one or two years in high school and then a course in a business college to fit each of them for life.

Four years ago my eldest girl graduated from public school with honors. Her father said she must find work of some sort, but I insisted on her going two years to high and then saw that she had a business course. It meant more skimping and saving, but she got a good job as soon as she graduated. The usual rate for board and rooms here is $30 per month. I told her that if she would pay me that much I would be satisfied, but her father doesn't think it is fair for her to have so much of her salary left for herself while the balance of us are so pinched for money, but you know how girls want pretty clothes and to have good times. What do you think about this? —MRS. X.

Answer: You are very wise in insisting that your children should have as much education as you can possibly give them and in seeing that they are trained for some specific job, because that will affect their earning power as long as they live.

You have a vivid illustration of this in the fact that your young daughter, who has a trade at her fingers' ends, was able at once to get a good situation and that her education enables her to make as much at 18 as her father earns at middle age. Also, the girl will go on progressing and making more while he has reached his limit.

The first question that girls and boys are asked when they start out to hunt for work is how much education they have had, and so parents should, if they possibly can, put their children through high school and then, at any sacrifice, have them taught some trade by which they can make a living.

I think that technical education comes nearer to solving the financial and moral problems of our day than any other one thing. It is, to begin with, the road to success, because in this day when efficiency is our god there is no room for any but experts. No employer wants to bother with bungling amateurs. Nobody has the time or patience to deal with those who turn out faulty and fli-done work. The untrained find it difficult to get even a chance to work and always have to take the most menial jobs.

And the fat pay envelopes go to the trained and skillful. They invariably command the high wages. They are the ones who are never laid off in slack times. And so it becomes increasingly important, as competition grows closer, for young people to be fitted for their life work.

One of the great problems of our day is the delinquent young, the boys and girls who will not work and who drift from job to job, staying only a few weeks at any place. The reason for this is that they are unskilled workers who hate the tasks they do so badly, who have no pride of craftsmanship and who have never found the joy that comes in turning out good work.

They never give satisfaction to their employers, hence their working days are made unpleasant by fault-finding and so they grow discouraged and quit. They are always trying to find some new job, some employment that their unskilled hands and untrained minds can perform.

Police records show that most of our criminals are boys and that every year more and more young girls set their feet upon the path that leads to hell. The lack of technical training in gainful occupations does more than anything else to account for this sad state of affairs. These boys and girls crave pleasure and good clothes, the things that you have to have money to buy. They have not the skill to earn enough to supply their wants, and so they steal it or get it by other nefarious means.

So, if I could urge one thing more than any other on parents, it is to have their children taught some way to make a living. Give them a good trade and you have given them a weapon with which to fight the world and take what they want from it. Give them that and you will have done more than anything else to make them useful, law-abiding citizens.

As for how much money your daughter should give you out of her salary, that depends upon the girl's generosity. If she pays you for board the usual price in your community, she has dealt fairly with you and given all that you have a right to demand, but she must be a very selfish girl if she spends the balance of her earnings on herself when the family is in such need.

I should think her sympathy for her poor, hard-worked father would prompt her to put her young shoulder under the family load and help him bear it. You have to teach children to give and to be unselfish and to consider their parents, so I would certainly advise you to impress upon yours that it is their duty and their privilege to pay you back for the years of sacrifice you have made for them.

—DOROTHY DIX.

Dear Miss Dix—I note that you are very much opposed to early marriages, especially so when the parties have very limited means to start with. My wife and I are celebrating our 43rd anniversary today. We married when we were 19 years of age over the objections of both of our parents. We were very poor and still are, but we loved each other devotedly, and the ensuing years of grinding toil, the rearing of a family of seven children under the most adverse circumstances has only driven us closer together. Now our children are grown and are all upstanding men and women forging their way in the world and devoted to mother and father. Would it be possible to regret our early start? —R. F. L.

Answer: In a column such as this is one can only deal in generalities and, taking it by and large, there can be no doubt that very early marriages are a mistake, especially when the young couple have no money.

Naturally there are exceptions to every rule, and despite the fact that statistics show that young marriages result in divorce oftener than any other, there are many boy-and-girl marriages that are successful and that end in the storybook fashion, "they lived happily ever afterward."

Such a marriage was yours, but it takes more love, more courage, more stamina than many people possess to go through the grueling ordeal that you and your wife have experienced and come out of it with your romance unscathed and your affection undimmed.

To begin with, you and your wife grew up together and developed along the same lines, and that is the mercy of God that doesn't happen to many couples. Generally, either the husband or the wife outgrows the other and then the marriage ends in divorce or an endurance test. Then, 43 years ago, young people did not think so much about amusing themselves as they do now.

There were no automobiles, few parties, people expected to drop out of the running when they got married. Women, in especial, expected to dress plainly and stay at home and rear their children. Now the young married set is the gay set and few young married people are content with spending their evenings sitting at home.

And not many young people in these days can stand the acid test of poverty and still keep their love for the one who has brought it upon them. Few girls who have had ease and luxury at home or who have earned good salaries can stand wearing shabby clothes and doing without amusements after they are married. Few young men who have been able to indulge themselves in everything they wanted before they were married can gracefully see their salaries go for paying household bills and skimp along on carfare and cigaret money for themselves.

So I stand by my guns and repeat that early marriages are always hazardous and that it is safest for a young couple to wait until they are old enough to know their own minds about marriage and until they can finance their marriage safely.

Jimmie Gibbs Weds Miss Clovis Robinson

A wedding service quiet and simple was that performed Saturday evening at 6 o'clock when Miss Clovis Robinson and Jimmie Gibbs were wed at the First Methodist church, Rev. S. S. McKenney reading the ring ceremony before relatives and a few close friends.

The bride was gowned in cream lace and chiffon and carried a shower bouquet of lilies of the valley and pink rose buds. Miss Catherine Minter, who was her bridesmaid, wore orchid taffeta and carried pink carnations. Mr. Gibbs was attended by his brother, Ed Gibbs.

After the ceremony, an informal reception was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Stokes Jr., on Speedway avenue. The house was filled with a profusion of pink roses for the occasion.

Several out of town guests were present for the wedding, among them being Mrs. E. P. Greenwood of Houston, an aunt of the bride, Mrs. V. Phillip of Carey, Mrs. Gibb's mother and her two sisters and brother, Eva, Fannie Edna, and Jack Robinson, off Carey, Texas.

Miss Robinson, whose mother, Mrs. V. Philip lives in Carey, Texas, has been making her home with Mrs. J. B. Stokes Jr., 1716 Speedway and is a popular young business woman of Wichita Falls. Mr. Gibbs is a geologist with the Panhandle Refining company.

Directly after the reception, they left for a trip to San Antonio and points in South Texas. They will be at home in Wichita Falls on their return.

Warehouses Warned To Reject Florida Fruit

Special to The Record News

AUSTIN, Oct. 6.—The state department of agriculture Friday issued a warning to cold storage warehouses in Texas not to be misled by circulars issued by fruit growers and citrus fruit growers associations of Florida that special treatment of the fruit would make it permissable in Texas under the existing Texas quarantine against this fruit, J. M. del Curto, chief entomologist of the department said.

Attention of the department was brought to circulars sent out from Florida attempting to entice the Texas warehouses to accept the fruit.

Del Curto said all fruit found in Texas would be confiscated and destroyed.

CHURCH HOLDS PARK SERVICE

500 Attend "Homecoming Day" Program

More than 500 members and guests of the First Church of Christ attended the annual "Homecoming Day" at the church Sunday and the dinner and services at Week's park Sunday afternoon.

Singers from all over the state and parts of Oklahoma were present and participated in the singing at the afternoon services. Rev. Horace Busby of Fort Worth, evangelist who is conducting the revival, delivered inspirational addresses at each service.

Preparations For Handling Audition Ballots Complete

Adequate preparations are being made to handle thousands of votes within a few hours Wednesday night, Oct. 9, when the finals in the national Atwater Kent radio audition will be held from station KGKO, according to Mrs. Lois Parker, chairman of the local committee.

"In order to afford the committee of judges the best possible opportunity for evaluating the quality and broadcasting capacity of the various voices to be heard, the latest model Atwater-Kent receiving set is being installed in the audition room of station KGKO by the Perkins-Timberlake company, which is sponsoring the local contest, it was said.

Augmenting the telephone capacity of the radio station, the Perkins-Timberlake switchboard in the store at Ninth and Indiana is to be manned by at least two operators beginning at 9:30 p. m. next Wednesday. In addition to that service, two telephones in the offices of the National Security Life Insurance company, on the sixth floor of the Perkins-Snider building, will be used for taking votes. With four telephones in the radio offices, a total of eight receivers will be engaged constantly in order to permit the registration of this community's vote with as little delay as possible.

The use of numerous phones is made necessary, Mrs. Parker said, by the rule requiring that all votes in the amateur singing competition be registered either by telephone or telegraph. In order that the vote be accepted, it must be accompanied by the name and address, or phone number, of the voter. Any person of 15 years or more is eligible to vote. The singers will be announced by number, and votes will be cast by the same designation.

More than 20 applications have been received thus far, and with the contest open to new entries until 6 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, it was said that a considerable increase in that number was enticipated.

Radio Locates Widow Of Man Who Died Here

A radio broadcast of the news of the death of D. Coughey, 39, who died in a local hospital on Sept. 30, Saturday led to the location of Mrs. Coughey and the first arrangements for the funeral. The widow, who lives in Lubbock, heard news of her husband's death through a radio receiving set in Burkburnett, where she was visiting relatives.

The body will be sent to Burkburnett for burial Monday. The arrangements will be under the direction of the Hines Undertaking company.

The teachers voted to hold their next meeting during the latter part of January.

Delegates Elected To D.A.R. Conference

At the opening meeting Saturday at the country club of the Major Francis Grice chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution, delegates were elected to the state conference of the D. A. R. which meets in Beaumont, Oct. 28-31 with the Col. George M. Moffett chapter as hostess.

Delegates named were Mrs. Fred Couper, regent, Mesdames J. L. Jackson, B. M. Bell and Laura Porter Bristol. Alternates are Mesdames Luke McCrory, E. T. Duff, George Truitt, G. K. Wilson, Wayland Sanford, S. Y. Ferguson, Charles Borland, G. W. Cain, Walter Bachman and Miss Nell Gibbs.

The setting for the luncheon was particularly beautiful; all decorations were in native wild flowers and native mesquite and chinaberry leaves and the program emphasized the theme of conservation of Texas flowers and trees.

Mrs. Roy King talked on "Conservation," and her speech was reported to be unusually interesting. She visualized for her hearers the manner in which they might make state conservation a wonderful work, and also how the local Daughters of the American Revolution might build a memorial through conservation of native beauty. She said, "A beautiful city that faith built; a beautiful memorial auditorium and a beautiful garden of native flowers, shrubs and trees; trees and shrubs in friendly groups here and there like boys at play on a school ground or friends gathered for a visit. A rock path; down a few stone steps,—more rock path and then a pool—a rather large pool, a mirror of mothers' tears; around this, a few weeping willows, drooping to touch this pool;" and this would be a beautiful memorial for the Daughters of to the memory of the boys from the American Revolution to create this locality who gave their lives in answering our country's call.

A CONFIDENCE GAME

Daily Editorial

PROSPERITY and success are largely attitudes of mind. The Imperial valley is an attitude of mind; Nature didn't give it a second thought, and abandoned the spot in disgust to sagebrush, cactus and side-winders.

But Harriman, the empire builder, believed he could change that drear patch of desert to flourishing orchards and lush fields.

The waters that since irrigate and fructify those once-dead sands—which crowd them with fig trees and orange groves and date palms and garden truck—flowed from the well-springs of his vision.

Present Los Angeles is likewise an attitude of mind; it's the same Los Angeles, in the same location, with the same possibilities that it had before, plus only the wits and wills of a few optimists who first filled the neighborhood with their enthusiasms, and then thrilled the nation with faith in Southern California.

Florida had nothing to sell the world in 1922 that she didn't possess in 1892, except a different attitude of mind.

Kansas was once the official Jeremiah of America—the stronghold of the Greenbacker, the Populist—and the unpaid mortgage.

Her folk were always searching for a philosopher's stone—too busy snooping for agricultural cure-alls to earn livings and raise crops.

When she dropped her false prophets, she began to gather real profits.

As soon as freak legislation ceased muddling matters, Kansas began to hit the high spots and break bumper records.

POLITICAL quackery never yet increased grain yields or bettered market prices.

Commonsense and productive effort run agriculture, business and finance, alike. Where neither is in charge, creditors are.

If land is haphazardly handled, people go broke—as they do in haphazard retailing and wholesaling, haphazard mining and haphazard newspaper publishing, haphazard steel-making and haphazard banking.

Every game's a losing game if it isn't played for all it's worth. Nine store-keepers out of ten don't make the grade. Ninety per cent of professionals are a half jump ahead of monthly rent and living expenses.

Farming offers the same chances as any other trade, and the same mis-chances.

There's too much loose, depressive talk about the future of agriculture.

Irresponsible statement and pessimistic propaganda are groaning the value out of sound acreage, frightening investment and holding back the further settlement of the land.

Federal relief, alone, can't furnish the silver polish for rural cloud-linings. The right attitude of mind is needed too.

Population keeps growing, and with each rise in the birthrate, there are just that many more mouths to feed. Cities must eat and pay the fair value of foodstuffs.

Year by year the labor of production is being lightened by efficient tillage tools, improved traffic facilities and power substitutes for expensive human labor.

The rigors and isolations of pre-robot, pre-electrical, pre-telephone, pre-radio and pre-automobile days have vanished. Husbandry isn't in the doldrums, but on the threshold of a long-awaited kingdom.

Necessity is the farmer's unescapable customer. There are no equivalents for milk and butter, wool and flour, fruit and greens and grains.

And there's no alternative for stick-to-it-iveness, management or thrift, either.

Why War Still Lives

IN the last few years the world has heard more eloquent pleas for peace than ever before in its history.

Gradually, the minds of men seem to be accepting the fact that war is an institution that must be abolished. A good bit of machinery to accomplish this has been set up. Treaties have been signed, agreements have been made, to make a repetition of what happened in 1914 less easy.

The novelists, too, have done their share. Such books as "All Quiet on the Western Front" have stripped war of its glamour, have revealed it for noncombatants in all of its filthy horror.

Yet the job is going to be a hard one. We can become thoroughly convinced that war is a dreadful thing—but our emotions are still such easy prey for the war-makers! In a national crisis we are ruled by our hearts instead of our heads; and as long as that remains true it will be comparatively easy for the nations to slip into war again and again.

The latest of the war novels provides striking proof of this.

"All Else Is Folly," by Peregrine Acland, tells the story of a line officer in a Canadian regiment, sent overseas with the first hundred thousand and serving in the trenches throughout the long years to the armistice.

This officer saw war in its most horrible guise. He saw his battalion riddled again and again, at Ypres, at Vimy Ridge and along the Somme. Finally he was dreadfully wounded and put out of action for good. For months he existed in a pain-racked stupor at a base hospital. He came back to Canada a mere wreck; crippled, half blind, utterly broken in body and spirit, everlastingly disillusioned about war.

Then, a decade after the armistice, he revisited the armory of his former command in a Canadian city. A battalion of kilties was just returning from drill, bag-pipes skirling, drums beating, mailed feet crashing on the pavement. And this officer, watching them and hearing the martial music, felt his blood stir again as it had in 1914.

He knew that war was vile, horrible, blind; yet, swept away by his emotions, he knew that he would enlist at once if another war came along—would enlist because the bag-pipes and the drums and the bugles would overpower his reason and make him one of a cheering, war-bound mob of enthusiasts.

In that incident the author has put his finger on the great hope of Mars.

We can talk about the horrors of war all we please; we can satisfy our minds that war must be averted; we can tell ourselves, for years, that war is useless and futile—but all of us, to a greater or lesser extent, are helpless when the flags wave and the bands strike up.

For that reason it will be a long time before war dies.

Our emotions are stronger than our brains. And our emotions are still the willing slaves of war's bright, tragically alluring trappings.

A Poor Excuse

HARRY SINCLAIR attempts to defend his recent plea for release from the federal jail at Washington by pointing out that he asked to be freed, not on the grounds of ill health, but on the grounds that the jury-shadowing of which he was convicted is not really a crime.

Somehow this excuse fails to move us greatly. To Harry Sinclair's high-priced lawyers jury-shadowing may not seem criminal; but to the great body of American citizens it is pretty obvious that it was simply part of an attempt to save the multimillionaire oil man from prison by fair means or foul.

Legal hair-splitting doesn't extenuate it. Sinclair, on trial for a serious crime, tried to influence the jury in a way not provided for in the legal machinery of the courts. He got caught at it and got sent to jail. The average American fails to see any reason why he shouldn't serve out his time.

How High Is Too High

A STUDY just completed by experts of the American Institute of Steel Construction reports that it is structurally possible to build sky-scrapers 2,000 feet in height, but that considerably less than that—around 70 stories—is the economic limit.

The experts figured that a 2,000-foot building would not pay. On the other hand, where land values are high, they assert it pays better to erect a tower of 60 to 70 stories than one of half that height.

All of this, of course, is from the standpoint of the building owner. The thing now needs to be figured from the viewpoint of the city as a whole. It is a grave question whether the giant sky-scraper may not do a city more harm than good, by increasing traffic past the saturation point. What is needed is a study that will show just how many sky-scrapers the large city can bear.

Enemies No Longer

THE story of the nine former German soldiers who are living in Lancaster, N. Y., and making buddies of the members of the American legion there, makes mighty pleasant reading.

The incident proves, for one thing, that our war with Germany left us with no such heritage of hatred and distrust as the civil war, for instance, bequeathed to the country. A scant 11 years after the armistice, veterans of the rival armies are glad to fraternize with one another.

War's worst feature is the bitterness that follows in its train. We seem to be discarding the bitterness of the world war very rapidly. It can't be done too fast.

"All Quiet on the Western Front"

By ERICH MARIA REMARQUE

CHAPTER XX

Still I do not give up hope. I do not, indeed, go to my room any more, but comfort myself with the thought that a few days are not enough to judge by. Afterwards—later on—there is plenty of time for that.

So I go over to see Mittelstaedt in the barracks, and we sit in his room; there is an atmosphere about it that I do not like, but with which I am quite familiar.

Mittelstaedt has some news ready for me that electrifies me on the spot. He tells me Kantorek has been called up as a territorial.

"Just think of it," he says, and takes out a couple of good cigars, "I come back here from the hospital and bump right into him. He stretches out his paw to me and bleats: 'Hullo, Mittelstaedt, how are you?' I look at him and say: 'Territorial Kantorek, business is business and schnapps is schnapps, you ought to know that well enough yourself. Stand to attention when you speak to a superior officer. You should have seen his face! A cross between a dud and a pickled cucumber. He tried once again to chum up. So I snubbed him a bit harder. Then he brought up his biggest guns and asked confidentially: 'Would you like me to use my influence so that you can take an emergency exam?' He was trying to remind me of those things, you know. Then I got mad and I reminded him of something instead. 'Territorial Kantorek, two years ago you preached us into enlisting, and among us there was one, Joseph Behm, who didn't want to enlist. He was killed three months before he would have been called up in the ordinary way. If it had not been for you he would have lived just that much longer. And now: Dismiss. You will hear from me later.' It was easy to get put in charge of his company. First thing I did was to take him to the stores and fit him out with a suitable equipment. You will see in a minute."

We go out to the parade ground. The company has fallen in. Mittelstaedt stands them at ease and inspects.

Then I see Kantorek and am scarcely able to stifle my laughter. He is wearing a faded blue tunic. On the back and in the sleeves there are big patches. The overcoat must have belonged to a giant. The black, worn breeches are just as much too short; they reach barely halfway down his calf. The boots, tough old clod-hoppers, with turned up toes and laces at the side, are much too big for him. But as a compensation the cap is too small, a terribly dirty, mean little pill-box. The whole rig-out is just pitiful.

Mittelstaedt stops in front of him: "Territorial Kantorek, do you call those buttons polished? You seem as if you can never learn. Inadequate, Kantorek, quite inadequate—".

It makes me bubble with glee. In school Kantorek used to chasten Mittelstaedt with exactly the same expression — "Inadequate, Mittelstaedt, quite inadequate."

Mittelstaedt continues to upraid him: "Look at Boettcher now, there's a model for you to learn from."

I can hardly believe my eyes. Boettcher is there too, Boettcher, our school porter. And he is a model. Kantorek shoots a glance at me as if he would like to eat me. But I grin at him innocently, as though I do not recognize him any more.

Nothing could look more ludicrous than his forage-cap and his uniform. And this is the object before whom we used to stand in anguish, as he sat up there, enthroned at his desk, spearing at us with his pencil for our mistakes in those irregular French verbs with which afterwards we made so little headway in France. That is barely two years ago—and now here stands Territorial Kantorek, the spell quite broken, with bent knees, arms like pothooks, unpolished buttons, and that ludicrous rig-out—an impossible soldier. I cannot reconcile this with the menacing figure at the schoolmaster's desk. I wonder what I, the old soldier, would do if this skin full of woe ever dared to say to me again: Baumer, give the imperfect of 'aller.'"

Then Mittelstaedt makes them practice skirmishing, and as a favor appoints Kantorek squad leader.

Now in the skirmishing the squad leader has always to keep paces in front of his squad; if the order comes "On the march, about turn," the line of skirmishers simply turn about, but the squad leader, who now finds himself suddenly 20 paces in the rear of the line, has to rush up at the double and take his position again 20 paces in front of the squad. That makes altogether 40 paces double-march. But no sooner has he arrived than the order "On the march, about turn," comes again and he once more has to race at top speed another 40 paces to the other side. In this way the squad has made merely the turn-about and a couple of paces while the squad-leader dashes backwards and forwards. That is one of Himmelstoss' well-worn recipes.

Kantorek can hardly expect anything else from Mittelstaedt, for he once messed up the latter's chance of promotion, and Mittelstaedt would be a big fool not to make the best of such an opportunity as this, before he goes back to the front again. A man might well die easier after the army has given him just one such stroke of luck.

In the meantime Kantorek is dashing up and down like a wild-boar. After a while Mittelstaedt stops the skirmish and begins the very important exercise of creeping.

On hands and knees, carrying his gun in regulation fashion, Kantorek shoves his absurd figure over the sand immediately in front of us. He is breathing hard, and his panting is music.

Mittelstaedt encourages Kantorek the Territorial with quotations from Kantorek the Schoolmaster. "Territorial Kantorek, we have the good fortune to live in a great age, we must all humble ourselves and for once put aside bitterness."

Kantorek sweats and spits out a dirty piece of wood that has lodged in his teeth.

Mittelstaedt stoops down and says reproachfully: "And, in the trifles never lose sight of the great adventure, Territorial Kantorek!"

It amazes me that Kantorek does not explode with a bang, especially when, during physical exercises, Mittelstaedt copies him to perfection, seizing him by the seat of his trousers as he is climbing along the horizontal bar, so that he can just raise his chin above the beam, and then starts to give him good advice. That is exactly what Kantorek used to do to him at school.

The extra fatigues are next detailed off. "Kantorek and Boettcher, bread fatigue! Take the handcart with you."

In a couple of minutes the two set off together pushing the barrow. Kantorek in a fury walks with his head down. But the porter is delighted to have bcored light duty.

The bakehouse is away at the other end of the town, and the two must go there and back through the whole length of it.

"They've done that a couple of times already," grins Mittlestaedt. "There are still a few people waiting to see them."

"Excellent," I say, "but hasn't he reported you yet?"

"He did try. Our C. O. laughed like the deuce when he heard the story. He hasn't any time for schoolmasters. Besides, I'm sweet with his daughter."

"He'll mess up the examination for you."

"I don't care," says Mittelstaedt calmly. "Besides, his complaint came to nothing because I could show that he had hardly anything but light duty."

"Couldn't you polish him up a bit?" I ask.

"He's too stupid. I couldn't be bothered," answers Mittelstaedt contemptuously.

What is leave—A pause that only makes everything after it so much worse. Already the sense of parting begins to intrude itself. My mother watches me silently;—I know she counts the days—every morning she is sad. It is one day less. She has put away my pack, she does not want to be reminded of it.

The hours pass quickly if a man broods. I pull myself together, and go with my sister to the butcher's to get a pound of bones. That is great luxury and people line up early in the morning and stand waiting. Many of them faint.

We have no luck. After waiting by turns for three hours the queue disperses. The bones have not lasted out.

It is a good thing I get my rations. I bring them to my mother and in that way we all get something decent to eat.

The days grow ever more strained and my mother's eyes more sorrowful. Four days left now. I must go and see Kemmerich's mother.

I cannot write that down. This quaking, sobbing woman who shakes me and cries out on me: "Why are you living then, when he is dead?"—who drowns me in tears and calls out: "What are you there for at all, child, when you—" —who drops into a chair and wails: "Did you see him? Did you see him then? How did he die?"

I tell her he was shot through the heart and died instantaneously. She looks at me, she doubts me: "You lie, I know better. I have felt how terribly he died. I have heard his voice at night. I have felt his anguish—tell the truth, I want to know it, I must know it."

"No," I say, "I was beside him. He died at once."

She pleads with me gently: "Tell me. You must tell me, I know you want to comfort me, but don't you see, you torment me far more than if you told me the truth? I cannot bear the uncertainty. Tell me how it was and even though it will be terrible, it will be far better than what I have to think if you don't."

I will never tell her, she can make mince-meat out of me first. I console her, but she strikes me as rather stupid all the same. Why doesn't she stop worrying? Kemmerich will stay dead whether she knows about it or not. When a man has seen so many dead he cannot understand any longer why there should be so much anguish over a single individual. So I say rather impatiently: "He died immediately. He felt absolutely nothing at all. His face was quite calm."

She is silent. Then she says slowly: "Will you swear it?"

"Yes."

"By everything that is sacred to you?"

Good God, what is there that is sacred to me?—such things change pretty quickly with us.

"Yes, he died at once."

"Are you willing never to come back yourself, if it isn't true?"

"May I never come back if he wasn't killed instantaneously."

I would swear to anything. But she seems to believe me. She moans and weens steadily. I have to tell how it happened so I invent a story and I almost believe it myself.

As I leave she kisses me and gives me a picture of him. In his recruit's uniform he leans on a round table with legs made of birch branches. Behind him a wood is painted on a curtain, and on the table stands a mug of beer.

The Once Over

By H. I. PHILLIPS

College Questionnaire

There is getting to be no limit to what our universities want to know about candidates for higher learning. A questionnaire submitted to all registering freshmen at the University of Chicago includes these queries:

PHILLIPS

1—Is your mother satisfied with her lot in life?

2—Are you apt to be frightened in the dark?

3—Have you ever experienced a complete lapse of memory?

4—Have any of your family ever taken drugs?

5—Are you shy?

6—Are you shocked when sex problems are discussed?

Whether students whose mothers are dissatisfied with their lots in life are rated below those whose mommers find everything okay, and whether or not a collegian who is nervous when the lights are out is considered poor material for the football squad has not been revealed by the faculty.

The possibility that a student may be deprived of his letter for once having a complete lapse of memory, or barred from the glee club on the ground that his old man once took a sleeping potion does not, however, appear remote.

But why stop with a few foolish questions? Why leave anything unrevealed? Let's go to the bottom of things:

1—Did you ever have any uncles who cut themselves while shaving?

2—Is your father satisfied with his bridge game?

3—Are you irresolute when faced with the opportunity to grab the brass ring on merry-go-rounds?

4—How is your Aunt Minnie?

5—Did any female members of your family ever stop to talk to and feed cookies to horses on the city streets?

6—Do you pull the sheets over your head when you hear the floor creak in the night?

7—Is your mother satisfied with the new cook?

8—Were any of your ancestors addicted to:

(a) Side-whiskers.
(b) Croquet.
(c) Zithers.
(d) Dotted nightgowns.

9—Do you open your own soft-boiled eggs in a public dining-room?

10—Did you ever experience a complete loss of character?

11—Are you timid in the presence of dentists?

12—Are any members of your family, now living, still addicted to the high-wheel bicycle craze?

13—On which side did your great grandmother sleep?

14—How do you like your minute steak?

15—Have there ever been any rickets, gas-meter inspectors, delirium tremers, stamp-collectors, hay fever or dog-show judges in your family?

16—In sighting a rifle do you squint with the left eye or the right?

17—Have you at any time in your life ever tried to put your pants on over your head?

18—What are your reactions when you are necking on a yacht club veranda when somebody fires the sunset gun?

19—Do you blush when abused by traffic policemen?

20—Have either of your parents ever written letters to the newspapers signed "Pro Bono Publico."

21—Do you care for animal crackers?

22—Have you any uncles named Otis, Godfrey or Chester and did they raise mushrooms to earn money at home?

THE DUCTLESS GLANDS

The Thyroid Gland

People with an excess of thyroid secretion (hyperthyroid) are usually thin and nervous. The heart beats rapidly upon the slightest exertion; those with an insufficient amount of thyroid secretion (hypothyroid) are usually fat and phlegmatic.

There is a very close connection between the chemical secretions of the thyroid and the ovaries. For this reason, more women are afflicted with thyroid trouble than men.

When there is a lack of thyroid secretion in infants, they remain dwarfed. This condition has received the name of "cretinism." A child does not develop physically and mentally when the thyroid secretion is lacking. In adults a lack of thyroid secretion has a definite effect, and is known as myxedema, so called because of a peculiar mucus-like substance underneath the skin which produces a puffy swelling. This puffiness resembles ordinary dropsy but differs in that it does not pit upon the pressure of the fingers. There is much swelling especially in the nose and cheeks, thus giving a thickened, dull expression. A person with myxedema may appear prematurely aged. The tongue becomes enlarged, the skin is dry and of a peculiar sallow color, the hair becomes brittle and baldness frequently results. The patient becomes depressed and shows a desire to avoid exercise. The weight often increases. The temperature is subnormal and the heart action slow.

Myxedema does not always show these exaggerated forms, but may exist in a limited degree. It is almost always associated with a lack of functioning on the part of the ovaries.

An excess of the thyroid secretion produces a loss of weight and rapid beating of the heart, restlessness, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, intestinal disturbances, feverishness and sweating. The excessive secretion of this gland also produces a too-rapid oxidation of food materials in the body.

In every case of hyperthyroidism with women whom I have examined, the plevic organs, especially the intestines, have been greatly prolapsed, with usually adhesions around the ovaries, and this leads me to believe that hyperthyroidism with women is usually caused by a reflex from ovarian irritation, as the cases usually improve rapidly on the proper dieting regimen after the adhesions have been loosened and the prolapsed organs raised to their normal positions. If this theory of sexual irritation is true it may be that hyperthyroidism with males is likewise due more or less to some irritation of the prostate, seminal vesicles or testes.

Sex Glands

The sexual glands or gonads also produce an internal secretion which influences the principal differences in the appearance and temperament of men and women, and influences their youth and maturity. When these glands do not function properly, the figure remains small like that of a child. A man affected with an underfunction of these glands does not exhibit masculine characteristics, and a woman affected with an under-secretion of these glands is not fully feminine and has a tendency toward obesity.

In dealing with the other glands I spoke somewhat of the inter-relationship and action of the gonads upon some of the ductless glands.

In tomorrow's article we will discuss the thymus, pituitary, pineal and spleen.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Vine Poisoning

Question—Mrs. H. writes: "I have read in newspapers that being subject to ivy poison was merely a matter of diet, and with the proper diet, immunity from this poison could be brought about. Is this true, and if so, where could I learn this diet?"

Answer—Live on a diet free from bad food combinations and you will be able to build up your blood carbonate reserve so as to resist the invasion of the vine poison. The weekly menus published in this column should be sufficient to accomplish this for the average person.

Baby's Diet

Question—Mrs. I. O. J. asks: "Is oatmeal a sufficient food for a baby 1 year old? If not, what is a good diet without milk?"

Answer—A baby 1 year of age should have only milk and orange juice. Cereals should not be added until the third year. The first food added to the milk should be the cooked, leafy vegetables, finally the milk and vegetables being used at some of the meals, and proteins added to the greens at other times when the milk should be left out.

Phlebitis

Question—Mrs. B. asks: "Will you please tell me what would cause a 'phlebitis leg' after an operation for acute appendicitis?"

Answer—Phlebitis is often present after an operation in the lower abdomen. A swelling in the leg is caused by some interference with the circulation of blood of lymph. This is due to an injury from the operation and usually caused by the removal of some of the lymphatics in the groin.

Cucumbers and Ice Cream

Question—H. G. asks: "Is it all right to use cucumbers and ice cream at the same meal?"

Answer—Cucumbers and ice cream make a good combination, providing the cucumbers are not flavored with dressing and the ice cream is made of real cream and does not contain any cornstarch.

BIG UPSETS IN DOPE MARK WEEK-END GRIDIRON WARFARE

PONIES FURNISH MAIN SURPRISE

Razorbacks and Longhorns Undefeated

By GAYLE TALBOT JR.
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Oct. 6. (AP)—Southern Methodist university's surprising scoreless tie with the Nebraska Cornhuskers at Lincoln and Texas Aggies' 13 to 10 defeat at the hands of the Tulane green wave at New Orleans supplied the high lights of Saturday's Southwest conference grid program.

As a result of the Mustangs' spectacular stand against the Huskers and Texas university's impressive 20 to 0 triumph over Centenary, the strength of the conference appeared more evenly distributed today than at any time since the season opened. It becomes steadily more apparent that the Baylor Bears, conference favorites, must overcome five powerful adversaries. Only the Rice Owls appear definitely out of it.

The Aggies already had been stamped dangerous contenders for the crown. Their loss to the mighty green wave by the narrow margin of three points detracted nothing from their prestige. Southern Methodists' great showing at Lincoln, however, caught most of the conference by surprise. The concensus was that Coach Ray Morrison's machine had been "possuming" in its early games and might yet make a bold bid for the title.

Both the Texas Longhorns and Arkansas Razorbacks, who were scheduled to clash at Fayetteville next Saturday in the first conference battle, came through the semi-finals unscathed. The Steers, featuring the brilliant Dexter Shelley, disposed of Centenary much more easily than had been anticipated. The Porkers cleared their decks by humbling Henderson-Brown, 30 to 7, bringing to light a great aerial attack.

Although only the one conference tussle was booked for the coming week-end, an attraction of equal promise and with an intersectional flavor will bring together the Texas Aggies and Kansas Aggies at Fair Park stadium here. The Farmers' loss to Tulane on a muddy field was a heartbreaker, Armstrong running through them 76 yards for one marker. The Kansas Aggies' stand here will mark the first time Bo McMillan has brought an eleven to Texas since he coached Centenary college.

The Mustangs, due to the foresight of a schedule maker, will have plenty of time to recuperate from their strenuous tilt with Nebraska before going back to the wars. They meet the comparatively inoffensive Austin college Kangaroos here Friday. The Ponies' fine stand against the Huskers, incidentally, was attributed largely to the sterling play of Weldon Mason, sophomore quarterback. His passing and punting was exceptional.

Texas Christian university satisfied its adherents with a comfortable 20 to 0 victory over the Simmons university Cowboys at Breckenridge. By defeating the eleven which the previous week had downed the Longhorns' "B" team, the Frogs left no further doubt of their power. Cy Leland, nationally known sprinter, ran 70 yards for the Christians' third touchdown. This week Coach Schmidt takes his promising squad to Shreveport for a bout with the Centenary Gentlemen.

The Baylor Bears continued their string of easy conquests, walloping the Trinity university Tigers, 43 to 0. Saturday they meet St. Edwards' university, another trial horse. The Bears are the only conference eleven not to tackle some stiff outside competition before opening their championship schedule.

The punchless Rice Owls squared their season's account by downing the Sam Houston normal Bearkats, 7 to 2, at Houston, gaining a measure of solace for their one-sided loss to Loyola the previous week. They will meet the Southwestern university Pirates this week at Rice field.

BROWNIES WIN TWO

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 6. (AP)—The St. Louis Browns ended the 1929 season today by taking a double-header from Cleveland, 4 to 2, and 4 to 1. The Browns, who finished third in the American league race last year, wound up in fourth position this year, one game behind the Indians. Stiely, a southpaw from the Texas league, won the first game for the Browns, and Kimsey all but shut out the Indians in the final game. Score:

First Game of World Series To Play Before 51,000 Baseball Fans

By WARREN BROWN

CHICAGO, Oct. 6. (US)—That baseball business known as the world series, at which the National league's representatives haven't been eminently successful these past two years, is to be resumed Tuesday afternoon at Wrigley field in the presence of some 51,000 paying guests, the largest crowd ever to witness a ball game in Chicago.

Chicago's Cubs—a fighting, pounding courageous band of ball players who battered their way into a championship this year earlier, and by a wider margin than any other National league club has been able to do in many a season—tangle up with her American league counterparts, the Philadelphia Athletics. And woe to any pitcher who isn't himself for every moment he is on the mound!

Seldom has there been assembled in world series play, a collection of bat wielders such as the Cubs and Athletics will send into the fray on Tuesday with much the same tactics that characterized the Cubs' pace setting. The difference, if there was any, was that the Athletics made their start earlier, thanks to the collapse of the two-time champion New York Yankees. There were no collapses in the National league. The clubs that took the count, were actually battered down, by the power of the Cubs' offensive.

For world series purposes good pitching is always desirable and neither one of the contending clubs in the 1929 affair is lacking in its quota of good pitching.

All season long, the American league has resounded with the praises of Connie Mack's pitching trio, George Earnshaw, Rube Walberg and Lefty Grove. Of late, some mention has been made of the ancient John Picus Quinn, largely because he flings the spitball.

The Cubs' pitchers, having their good moments, as well as the bad, have managed to marshal for world series duty, Pat Malone, the leading strikeout collector of either league; Charley Root, who will probably be the most dependable pitching asset, and have watched Guy Bush and Sheriff Blake recover, in the past week or so from slump, and declare themselves in on the pitching argument.

Add to these, the cagey old-timers, Art Nehf, and Hal Carlson, and whatever else the Cubs may lack, it will not be pitching.

The series, which opens Tuesday, marks the first appearance of this city's baseball forces in a championship since 1919, when the White Sox lost to the Cincinnati Reds, and Chicago began to think about losing a few of those particular White Sox.

CHICAGO, Oct. 6. (AP)—Selection of William Dinneen and Roy Van Graflan as American league umpires for the world's series was announced tonight. Dinneen, a former big league pitcher, is a veteran of 20 years of officiating but Van Graflan has been on the staff only three years and is making his debut in the championship classic.

Jr. College Indians To Start Training Today

The Wichita Falls Junior college football arrived back in town late Saturday night fresh from a 6 to 0 defeat at the hands of the Cameron Aggies of Lawton, Okla., and will renew their training Monday afternoon, looking toward the coming battle with the North Texas State Teachers college football team here at Athletic field next Saturday.

The Junior college Indians are not dismayed at the showing made at Lawton but are rather elated with their success in holding the Aggies to the close score which culminated their fracas. The Oklahomans were doped to have a picnic with the local boys, but, as it turned out, they were hard put to eke out a single touchdown on the Indians.

The splendid showing which the Indians displayed against the Cameron eleven seemed to bear out the wisdom of the general shakeup which Coach Baggett instituted in his team last week. The forward wall held unyielding against the hard plunges of the Cameron backs, and on the offense the Indians clearly outplayed their opponents.

The result of long hours of practice on the passing element of the game bore fruit in the game Saturday when the Junior college outfit showed an edge in the aerial attack.

In discussing the game last night Coach Baggett said that he would continue his drill on the passing game and the perfection of deceptive plays. He feels that in this direction he has a real potential strength and intends to make the most of it.

The team will resume training without a single serious injury from the game with Cameron. Barring accidents in the coming week's training grind, every regular on the team should be able to start the game here next Saturday.

Scotch Greet Tiny Princess

Little Princess Elizabeth's recent visit to Scotland was almost a triumphal tour. Whenever she appeared at Glamis, cottagers rushed out to see her pass, a radiant little vision wearing either golden yellow or pink, and firmly grasping the lace parasol which the queen gave her just before she left London. When she entered Forfar, her carriage was beseiged, many women throwing flowers and sprays of heather into the automobile. The two nurses seemed rather alarmed at the crush, but Princess Elizabeth thoroughly enjoyed it, laughing merrily and waving both her hands to the crowd. At Birkall she attracted much attention. There she was joined by the Prince of Wales, whom she greatly admires, especially for his ability to imitate roaring lions.

Gang War Started in Sydney

Gang war, as colorful as any in this country, has broken out in Sydney, Australia, with the killing of George L. Gaffney, a criminal known as "Gunman Gaffney," by James Edward Devine, who is being held for murder. Other gangsters were wounded in the sensational gun and revolver duel during a raid on the home of Devine. Devine said that he had heard that an associate named Green had been shot at Woolloomooloo early in the evening and that he was to be the next victim of the gang, so was prepared when they arrived. At the inquest toughs with battered faces rubbed shoulders with women in furs, and all were watched by many detectives, plain clothes men and uniformed police. One witness brought her personal body guard.

COYOTE SQUAD RESUME GRIND

Will Meet Sherman Eleven On Saturday

Heartened by their first victory of the season last Saturday when they crushed the Ardmore, Okla., eleven by a 19 to 6 count, the Wichita Falls Coyotes prepared for a jubilant resumption of training Monday afternoon in anticipation of their coming game with the strong Sherman high school Indian team. Fortunately for the Coyotes not a single man on the team suffered any injury to speak of, and the full squad will be back ready for practice Monday afternoon.

In the Sherman eleven the Coyotes are expected to meet their strongest opposition of the season. The Ardmore boys were no match for Sherman when they played a week ago and lost by a margin of 46 points. Considering the Coyote 13-point margin over the Ardmorites, and by a comparison and deduction with the Sherman score Wichita Falls will be at a handicap of 33 points, or a matter of four touchdowns, when the two teams square off next Saturday afternoon at Sherman.

But this item is worrying Coach Holton not at all and he is going about the task of preparing for the coming week-end battle firm in the conviction that his charges have shown a marked improvement over the preceding week-end game, and that they will further round into a smoothly functioning football machine by the time of the Sherman game.

Pursuant to his avowed policy, Coach Holton used a large number of reserves in the game Saturday and practically every man on the "A" squad was given a chance to demonstrate his ability as a football player. Such a policy is calculated to build up a strong reserve of strength in the event injuries and ineligibilities beset the team. Also, it is only in this employment of as many men as possible that new and unknown players of ability and worth may be uncovered.

A total of nine different men were sent in as substitutes in the game Saturday, some of them playing their first match game, and they performed like regulars under fire. In the backfield the veteran like playing of Smith, Allen, Elliot, Dickey and Norwood is sure to gain for them assurance of further service on the squad. And in the line Captain Hodgkiss, Dixon, Holden and Davis all played a good game, getting in to break up opposing plays before they had time to get under way, and often throwing the opponent for losses behind the line of scrimmage.

Practice sessions for the week will continue to stress the fundamentals, blocking, passing, signal drill. The coach said last night that he was a staunch believer in the necessity of a team's mastery of the fundamentals of the game. Without this equipment, he said that no team could hope to achieve lasting success in a gruelling campaign on the gridiron.

The game with Sherman will no doubt put the local boys to a severe test. Sherman high is a school with long history of victorious elevens and the Coyotes will be matching skill with probably the best outfit in the Lone Star state.

CHISOX BEAT TIGERS

CHICAGO, Oct. 6. (AP)—The White Sox won a last minute victory from the Tigers, 8 to 7, in the final of the season today. Some spirited swatting at the expense of Ed Walsh Jr. gave the Bengals the lead in their half of the ninth but the Chicago team came from behind again to win out in their half of the inning. The Tigers made 13 blows as against only seven by the Sox.

There were 800 persons in the stands and one of them was Donie Bush who takes charge of the Comiskey team tomorrow. Score:

PIRATES ROUT CHICAGO CUBS

Hank Grampp Shelled Out Pitcher's Box

CHICAGO, Oct. 6. (AP)—Chicago's champion Cubs and Pittsburgh closed the 1929 season today and Pittsburgh took an 8 to 3 decision in a listless game.

Hank Grampp, batting practice pitcher, started for Chicago but was pounded from the mound in the second when the Pirates scored 6 runs.

Fred Blake, Hal Carlson and Guy Bush hurled a few innings each thus eliminating themselves from starting the opening game of the world series with the Athletics.

Either Malone or Root will face the A's in the first game.

YANKEES LOSE

NEW YORK, Oct. 6. (AP)—The Philadelphia Athletics, champions of the American league, closed their season today by defeating the Yankees, 5 to 2.

A fluke home run by Mule Haas in the seventh inning was the deciding factor. The ball bounced out of left fielders Paschal's glove into the stand to give the Athletics a tie. French was on base. Al Simmons added two more runs in the ninth with his 35th home run.

Gordon Rhodes blanked the champions up to the seventh inning. Three Philadelphia pitchers worked three innings each with Ed Rommel getting credit for the victory.

ELECTRA ROTARY CLUB

Special to The Record News.

ELECTRA, Texas, Oct. 6.—The Rotary club held its regular meeting at the Marriott hotel Friday at noon with C. P. Engleking in charge. Much interest in the Fire Prevention week to be held Oct. 6 to 12 prevails in the club. Mr. Engleking introduced Mayor Ragland and Red Louis, local fireman, who gave a demonstration on electric wiring showing how fires are sometimes caused by defective wiring.

CARDINALS NAB GAME OFF REDS

St. Louisans Outhit But Romp Home

CINCINNATI, Oct. 6. (AP)—Marvin Gudat, starting his second game of the season, held the St. Louis Cardinals to eight hits here today, while his mates gathered 10 off Frankhouse, but lost the decision 2 to 1. The Redbirds clustered their blows to better advantage than the Reds.

The Cardinals took the season's final contest without exertion. Score:

JAKIE ATZ BACK

Former Manager of Fort Worth Cats to Pilot Steers

DALLAS, Oct. 6. (UP)—Jakie Atz who managed the Fort Worth baseball club this past season probably will pilot the Dallas Steers in 1930, it was reported here today following the dismissal of Milton Stock.

Fred McJunkin, club president, refused to comment. He announced Stock's dismissal Saturday.

BOSTON WINS GAME

WASHINGTON, Oct. 6. (AP)—Two Boston pitchers—Durham and Simmons—held Washington to five hits today and the Red Sox won the final game of the season, 2 to 1.

Liska returned to the mound for the Senators after a long layoff and also allowed but five hits.

K. C. BLUES COP GAME BY 6 TO 2

Victory Gives Westerners 2 Game Lead

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Oct. 6. (UP)—The Kansas City Blues closed their season before their home fans here today by winning the fourth game of the little world series from Rochester, 6 to 2.

The victory gave the American association champions a three to one margin in games. The teams will close the annual minor league classic in Rochester, with Kansas City needing only two more wins to take the flag.

While the Blues nicked Bell for runs in the first, third, fourth, seventh and eighth, the International league champions were unable to do much to the offerings of Sheehan. In the third Knothe took one of Bell's fast pitches for a homer into the stands for the only hit of the inning.

Rochester scored in the third when Brown was hit by a pitched ball, Torporcer singled and Southworth laid down a grounder, forcing Torporcer and sending Brown home. Their other tally came in the sixth on a single by Southworth, a sacrifice fly by Worthington and a double by Collins. Littlejohn replaced Bell in the eighth for a pinch hitter.

. . . The Cremo Process guarantees Cremo Purity . . that's why I certify these cigars sanitary and safe!"

says

Alfred W. McCann
D. Litt., A.B., LL.D.,
famous pure food expert, long active in crusades for pure foods and sanitary factories.

"Cremo cigars are made as you would have them made—as safe as certified foods!

"Every tobacco leaf entering the Cremo factory is scientifically treated by U. S. Government approved methods. And every sanitary precaution known to science is taken to safeguard its purity along each step of the way.

"Cremo cigars are folded, wrapped and tipped by amazing inventions without the menace of spit . . . in factories that are models of cleanliness . . . air-flooded, sun-bathed, spotlessly clean!

"This Cremo purity is sealed . . . in separate sanitary foil wrappers. Thus the method of manufacture insures a cigar that aims to give you the same standard as found in certified milk."

Here's a suggestion deliberately made with confidence, which you smokers of imported cigars will appreciate: Try a Certified Cremo. You will recognize the superiority of Certified Cremo which starts with the choicest and tenderest leaves, ripe and mellow, and continues in goodness through a slow, expensive maturing and mellowing process . . . topped off with the finest imported Sumatra wrapper! For 5 cents you get the delight of a high priced cigar for Certified Cremo contains no scrap—no floor sweepings—all long filler—all fresh, tender leaves. Over $7,000,000 was spent in perfecting the method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo that insures uniformly fine, clean cigars. Foil-wrapped . . . sanitary . . . crush-proof . . . the kind of cigar the late Vice-President Marshall must have had in mind when he said: "What this country needs most is a good 5-cent cigar."

Do you remember the old, filthy shop where the man in the window rolled the leaves with dirty fingers . . . and spit on the ends? What a far cry this is from the modern method of manufacture used by Certified Cremo.

"I certify Cremo sanitary and clean" Alfred W. McCann

Cotton Market Generally Quiet

NEW ORLEANS, Oct. 6. (AP)—While the cotton market experienced some periods of activity during the past week it has been generally quiet with price fluctuations rather erratic though at times broad enough. Starting at the low point of 18.42 for December prices worked upward, stimulated by fears that the tropical storm which struck the gulf coast near Pensacola and then moved northeastward through the eastern cotton states might further damage the crop in that section.

At the highest point reached for December, 18.89, prices showed gain of fully a dollar and a half a bale. As fair weather followed in the wake of the storm the market eased in the second half of the week on a more hopeful view.

The advance in the early part of the week was held in check and the reaction later on was increased by rather liberal hedge selling.

The demand for spots was heavy from domestic mills and from exporters. The spot sales at New Orleans alone during the week totaled 79,000 bales.

The average of the private crop estimates of the week was about 14,600,000 bales. All showed decrease in their estimates from those of a month ago but one who increased his somewhat. The government will issue a report showing the condition and indicated crop on Tuesday, Oct. 8.

The following shows the high, low and closing sales in the New Orleans futures market during the past week compared with a year ago.

	High	Low	Close	Last Year
Oct.	18.73	18.24	18.49	18.08
Dec.	18.89	18.42	18.65	18.15
Jan.	18.98	18.57	18.75	18.11

Bodies of Pioneers To Be Reinterred at Austin

Special to The Record News

AUSTIN, Oct. 6.—Remains of Richard Ellis and wife are to be removed from the old Ellis family cemetery near New Boston, Bowie county, and reinterred in the state cemetery at Austin. Ellis was a delegate to the constitutional convention which proclaimed Texas a republic, and free from the domination of Mexico. Ellis was born in Virginia, Feb. 14, 1781 and received a liberal education. In 1813 he removed to Franklin county, Ala., where he engaged in the practice of law. In 1825 he removed to Texas and obtained a Spanish grant of land but soon found that the land was situated in Miller county, Ark. He later obtained a headright survey on the banks of Red river in which is now Bowie county, Texas.

Railroad commissioner Lon A. Smith will deliver the funeral oration when the bodies are reinterred in the state cemetery.

State to Distribute Fish to Hatcheries

Special to The Record News

AUSTIN, Oct. 6.—Distribution of from between 1,000,000 and 3,000,000 fish from the six state fish hatcheries will be started Saturday, William J. Tucker, executive secretary of the game, fish and oyster commission has announced. The fish are to be distributed to public waters and to private parties who apply for them. The department anticipates that a sufficient supply of fish is had to fill all applications.

A month will be required to distribute the huge supply of bass, brims, crappie, channel catfish and green perch from the hatcheries which are located at Dallas, Cisco, Brownsville, Tyler, Wichita Falls, and Kerrville.

The newest state hatchery, at San Angelo, will be completed in time for production of fish for distribution during the spring.

SCHOOL CHILDREN TO RECEIVE FIRE PREVENTION QUIZ TODAY

PUPILS ASKED TO TAKE TEST

Original Compositions to Be Written

All children enrolled in the fourth, fifth and sixth grades of the city schools will be asked to participate in a combined art and literary contest on the subject of fire prevention during the coming week, according to officials of the Junior chamber of commerce, which is sponsoring the city-wide observance of Fire Prevention week.

Questionnaires dealing with precautionary measures practiced in the home for prevention of fires will be issued to all children choosing to enter the contest Monday. These questionnaires, filled out by the entrants themselves, are to be returned to their respective home-room teachers on Wednesday morning. On that day subjects for themes are to be assigned by the English teachers of the three grades, it was announced. The pupil is to submit an original composition not more than three pages in length.

Fire prevention posters, 15x18 inches in size, which may be made up either of cut-outs or drawings, will be prepared with the assistance of the art department of the schools, according to the plan announced. The three pieces of work from each entrant are to be handed in by Friday morning, when they will be judged by the English and art teachers of each school, assisted by a third person of their selection.

The three pieces chosen from each school will be submitted to a committee of the Junior chamber of commerce, and a silver loving cup will be presented to the school whose exhibit is adjudged the winner.

Western Conference Elevens Hold True

CHICAGO, Oct. 6. (AP)—Without a real upset to complicate the situation, Western conference football elevens, with the exception of Indiana, breezed through practice games Saturday, each coming out on the right side of the score, and sharpened for the start of the championship race next Saturday.

Eight of the 10 teams in the conference will tangle in four title games this week-end, with Northwestern meeting Wisconsin at Madison; Indiana playing Chicago at Stagg field, Iowa with Ohio State at Columbus, and Michigan meeting Purdue at LaFayette. Minnesota will engage Vanderbilt at Minneapolis, while Illinois will have Bradley as its foe in another polishing up contest.

The four championship games figure to be tough ones, particularly at this early stage of the season, with the losing elevens facing the possibility of elimination as contenders.

Plenty of Hard Work Will Solve Prison Problem, Says McFarlane

Graham Senator Takes Issue With Governor, Defending Health Conditions on State's Penal Farms

Graham, Texas, Oct. 2, 1929.
Editor of The Record News,
Wichita Falls, Texas.

Dear Sir:

The correct solution of the existing penitentiary problem has caused much comment in the press of late, and due to the fact that the penitentiary board is to file their report and recommendation shortly, and that the governor has recently seen fit to express himself fully on this question, it is fitting and proper that the people of this state study this question, carefully and render all the assistance possible for the correct solution of this great problem.

We now have 77,910 acres of land of which 43,899 are in cultivation and 34,011 acres are uncultivated. This land is divided into 12 farms, 11 of which are within a radius of 70 miles of the Huntsville prison, at which there is 110 acres. We ought to try to profit by the experience gained in the past in the operation of the penitentiary, and bearing this in mind, we find that the system has engaged at one time or another in the manufacture of iron products, furniture, fixtures, brooms, boxes, wagons, shoes, machine shop work, and other miscellaneous industries, and all of said enterprises have been tried at considerable loss to the state. Farming has always been the principal occupation and the records will show that the farms having competent management have continued to pay a profit over a period of years.

Management Important

It is a well recognized principle in business that no concern can be successful without honest, efficient management. The penitentiary system is no exception to this rule.

Governor Moody, in his speech, at Dallas Friday night, is quoted in the press, as saying "That the prison system is opposed absolutely to any principles of humantarianism, is manufacturing criminals and is breeding physical, social and psychological disease . . . That it is rotten, since rather than restore criminals to society, as citizens, it manufactures them and throws them out as an economic charge on the community . . . that the prison camps were so flimsy, that the prisoners broke down their walls with their bare feet . . . that they sleep touching one another."

Let's examine these charges and place the blame where it belongs. In 1926, the system of management was changed, and Governor Moody appointed the entire new prison board, that have had charge of the prison system during his administration, and the prison reports show that the convicts have received good treatment and if the system is manufacturing criminals and breeding physical, social and psychological disease, it is certainly no fault of the law, and must be the direct fault of the present prison board, in failing to give proper management to the system.

$3,000,000 for Debts

Governor Moody says: "Since 1927 about $3,000,000 has been required to pay inherited prison debts." The records show that a total of $8,084,658.43 has been appropriated since January, 1927, to date, that of this sum $1,979,559.36 was applied on outstanding indebtedness, that $3,244,411.00 was appropriated at the last session, to pay the running expenses from Sept. 1, 1929 to Aug. 31, 1931. That during 1927, and 1928 according to the prison reports filed the penitentiary system deposited in the state treasury $1,985,922.00, which would leave a net operating loss for the penitentiary system for 1927 and 1928, of $1,774,755.54. The governor, in his speech said, "that he was appalled at the lack of general knowledge of the prison system and emphasized that the taxpayers themselves were paying for the prison loss."

It seems from the above figures that the governor would do well to study the prison system during his own administration and get the matter a little bit better in hand. The governor "denied that the lands upon which the prison farms are located, are of agricultural value, because of their subjection continually to severe and damaging floods."

The Harlen, Blue Ridge, and Imperial farms are touched or divided by a 36-foot wide concrete highway and a main line railroad. It is true they have had three floods on the lower penitentiary farms within the last 30 years, including the one this year, and these farms in flood years will average raising as much as the farms in most sections of the state will in normal years.

Farms Defended

When Mr. Mead the present general manager addressed the senate this spring, when asked the question "what kind of farms are they below Houston?" he replied, "I am sure they are as good farms as there is any where in the world."

When asked what he thought of the overflow on the farms he replied: "The overflow on the prison farms is good for these farms as fertilizer would be, due to the silt left on the soil."

When asked about the health of the penitentiary system he replied: "My observation of the inmates is that they are mighty healthy."

The report of Doctor Bush, chief surgeon of the prison is "none of the deaths were due to any disease that could be attributed to confinement, climate, or any local condition . . . the death rate for patients treated at the hospital is a little less than three-tenths of 1 per cent or a little less than three to the thousand. This is less than the death rate of any city or town in the state of Texas."

Rainfall Record

If health, climate, rainfall and flood menace are such a detriment and so dangerous to Fort Bend, Harris and Brazoria counties, where these seven farms are located, why is it that the citizenship of Galveston, Houston and the other progressive cities in these three counties, do not take up and move to a more satisfactory location? The Texas almanac for 1929 shows the rainfall of these counties less than 21 other counties in the state. That the health conditions in these counties, especially the penitentiary health record shows that it is better than any city in Texas, the flood hazard this year according to all of the reports have not caused any of the citizens of Houston to leave, and it did more damage there than elsewhere. If the system is "rotten" as the governor says, why don't he ask for the resignation of his self-appointed board. They are spending more than a million and a half dollars per year, to maintain the convicts.

It is a well known fact that truck farming, fig orchards, and various other farming enterprises are growing in the Houston area by leaps and bounds, and perhaps the governor is familiar with the engineering project that has been completed whereby a 26-foot dam would be thrown across the Brazos river and could irrigate by gravity flow that entire section below Houston, covering thousands of acres.

It is well known about how the state was euchred out of the mineral rights to the Blue Ridge farm, which has produced millions of dollars worth of oil, the state not receiving one penny, and it is further well known that each of these farms below Houston, especially the Harlem, Imperial and Clements farms have a very high speculative mineral valuation and it is further a well known fact that it is the person who owns land when the mineral development comes that realizes the money on the land.

Manufactures Urged

With efficient management the idle convicts could be put to work at once in the manufacture of brick, plenty of material being available and this would provide work for the idle convicts, so badly needed and would permit the construction of fire-proof buildings to take care of the future needs of the system.

With 110 acres of land at the walls at Huntsville, with a large investment already made there, and this property being within a radius of 70 miles of the 11 farms, it seems that this would be a suitable location to construct and maintain the principal cell houses and manufacturing industries of the system. Should we decide to dispose of the present penitentiary system worth $10,000,000 and purchase a new system elsewhere, naturally all the buildings on the present property would be practically a complete loss to the state, and it being admitted that farming will continue to be the principal industry, it would take not less than 40,000 acres of land for the new site, and it would take condemnation proceedings by the state to secure this land which of necessity would cost the state several times its value.

It is well recognized by those in touch with the penitentiary situation that the present prison board, with perhaps one or two exceptions have expressed themselves as being in favor of the sale and re-location of the penitentiary system, and this was their opinion before they were placed on the board. That four of the nine members from the house and senate voted regularly at the last session in favor of the sale and re-location of the penitentiary system and bearing this in mind, if present reports are true the report to be filed shortly by this commission will be overwhelmingly in favor of the sale and re-location of the penitentiary system. If we had efficient management it is easily seen that most of the complaints raised by the governor should and would be eliminated.

Wouldn't it be the part of wisdom to put our idle convicts to work, making brick so that when we get ready to build we would have a large part of the material on hand to start with and after we have completed the cell houses and a cold storage plant, packing plant, laundry, automobile license plate plant, and various other needed buildings, we could then begin the construction of permanent fire-proof barracks on the different farms that were found advisable to keep, and all of this at the lowest possible expense to the taxpayers.

Juries vs. Moody

Governor Moody says that we are making criminals down there; I disagree with him. I think 101 per cent of them were criminals when they were sent there, or the juries convicting them were in error, there may be one in 100,000 convicted who ought not to have been. I never saw one. Most of them became criminals because they did not want to work, all criminologists agree that idleness is bad for a convict. My idea is that should be the first rule for the manager, "keep them at work." No man who is a man would be cruel or inhuman to a convict, if such developed the management should fire him "pronto." A good engineer always keeps his eye on the steam gauge, in the penitentiary the gauge should be the cost, all the cost not paid by the labor of the convict must be paid by the labor of your boy and mine, think of it, in the battle of life, your child and mine is to be taxed that, what? a convict shall be "coddled," it makes me hot. Every farm manager who shows a profit should be promoted or his pay increase; every one whose farm shows a loss, unless it be for reasons beyond his control should be fired. If this was done the second year the farms would all show a profit, the great cell house would be completed, and the farms would each have barbed wire entanglements around them to prevent escapes. Give them plenty of medical attention, yes, give them plenty of fresh air and food and plenty of work. I can see a good farm manager pick out a good working convict and say to him, "here are 10 men, I will give you a $1.00 per day to take them and cultivate that field," and to each of the 10 men "I'll give you each 10 cents per day if you do your duty and will raise it if you prove efficient," and to the boss man "if any one doesn't do his duty report him to me, I'll see that he gets justice, if he won't work I'll put him in the walls."

It would reduce the guarding force and increase the labor output. It takes head work, brains and above all the will to win. Efficient management is all we need, we have the farms, we have the location, all we need is to utilize what we have and stop the waste.

Think people, how many honest boys and girls in the state could be educated with the money we waste in this penitentiary upkeep, all in my judgment on account of inefficient management. I agree with our good governor, it is shameful.

Your paper has contained much of the sale and relocation idea and I would be glad that you print this letter and would like to have an expression along this line.

Yours very truly,
W. D. McFARLANE.

CHURCH NEEDS PERSONALITIES

Two Great Commandments Daniels' Subject

Christ's enunciation of the two greatest commandments while being questioned by the scribes in the temple at Jerusalem were the subject of Roy J. Daniel's address before the Kay Bible class at the First Methodist church Sunday morning.

Defining the admonition to worship God with "all the heart, all the soul, all the mind and all the strength," one may have, Mr. Daniel said:

"God's work needs a man's pleasing personality just like any other kind of work in the world. We seek to develop personalities pleasing to our employers—let us also seek to develop personalities pleasing to God."

The address follows:

This lesson brings to our minds three important things to think about; first, the kind of love we owe God; second, the kind of love we owe our neighbor; and third, that faith without works is no faith at all.

One day Jesus was teaching in the temple. An interested crowd of people were listening to him. The scribes of the temple were among the crowd. One of the scribes said, "Master, what is the first commandment?" Jesus was the greatest of all teachers, and the great teacher is always ready to answer any question. Jesus replied that the first commandment is that the Lord is the only God, and that God is to be worshipped with all the heart, with all the soul, with all the mind, and with all strength. And as second part of that first commandment He added that your neighbor is to be loved as yourself. What does it mean to worship thy God with all thy heart? It means to put God first in the human heart. Jesus even said that if the love of a relative comes between you and the worship of God to forsake the loved one and take up the cross and follow Him.

What does it mean to worship God with all thy soul? It means that your personality must be dedicated to God. A man makes application for a job. The employer says, "I like that man's personality. Enthusiasm radiates from him. Pep sticks out all over him. He will make me just the man I need in my business. I'll hire him and give him the job." God's work needs a man's pleasing personality just like any other kind of work in the world. We seek to develop personalities pleasing to our employers—let us seek to develop personalities pleasing to God also.

What does it mean to worship God with all your mind? It means to give God an intelligent worship. The worst enemy to any progressive movement is ignorance. The most dangerous animal in the forest of life is ignorance. One of God's worst enemies is ignorance. The man who works in the bank must study his banking courses to keep abreast with the banking game. A fireman on the railroad, who wishes to become an engineer, must study and prepare for the job ahead. Likewise, to worship God intelligently a man must give intelligent study to God's guidebook of life—the Bible.

What does it mean to worship God with all your strength? That means that the physical being of a man—his body—must be ready to go any where for God any time. The early Christian martyrs never feared nor hesitated to give their physical bodies to God. The records tell of the whippings they endured, of the stonings they suffered, the cruel tortures of many different kinds.

One Roman emperor lined the side of the road with crucified human Christian martyrs, and when night came covered their bodies with oil and lit them for torches. I believe that persecutions such as the martyrs suffered would find the modern Christian just as ready and willing to give all his physical strength for his Christian faith. Martin Luther was willing. Charles Wesley was willing. Knox and Calvin were willing. There are many men in Wichita Falls who would be ready and willing.

On that occasion in the temple the scribe answered that he believed the things the Master had said were more important than forms and ceremonies. And the Master replied by saying that he was nearer the kingdom of God than he knew.

"Love thy neighbor as thyself." That is the second part of the first commandment. Love your neighbor as you love yourself. The law permits you to love yourself so much that if another man seeks your life you can kill that man before he kills you. To love your neighbor as yourself means that you would save his life as quickly as you would your own. It means that if your neighbor is hungry and without food and you have just enough for yourself, then you will feed him before you satisfy your own hunger. It means that if you love your own good name and do not wish it covered with muck and mire and slime, then you will not seek to smear the name of your neighbor with those ingredients. It means that if you want happiness and success in this world then you will wish those things for your neighbor also.

Jesus had a brother named James who became bishop of Jerusalem. James said that faith without works was the same as no faith at all. Your works must prove your faith. Abraham's willingness to offer up his only son on the altar proved his faith in God. Moses proved his faith when he turned his back on the palaces of the Pharoahs and suffered the hardships of his people to lead them to the promised land. That noted woman of Jericho hid the two spies from Joshua, and her faith was proved when her request of God that she and her household be spared the destruction of the city was granted. Paul's work as the greatest missionary of all time proved his faith in God and Christ. Martin Luther's work in bringing about the reformation proved his great faith.

Hagenbeck-Wallace Tent at Spudder Park

Today is circus day! The sawdust trail leads to Spudder park where the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus is showing today.

Thousands were on hand early Sunday morning to greet the arrival of the circus train as it steamed into town. As the brightly painted wagons were unloaded down the inclines they were met with shouts of joy from the children. The M. K. & T. railroad yards was a Mecca for Wichita Falls circus fans.

Today is to be a gala day in the hearts of the children of the Day Nursery and the Texas Children's Aid society for they are to be the honored guests of the Hagenbeck-Wallace circus management at the matinee performance.

Through the courtesy of the circus the children will sit in a special reserve seat section and be treated to refreshments. The clowns are looking for them and will make every effort to make this one day for them to long remember.

Horses in spans of eight and 10 marched in regular formation to receive their charge and draw it to the show grounds. A feature of the morning was the two elephant teams of four elephants each which were harnessed like horses and used to pull the heaviest wagons.

At the circus ground all was a scene of busy activity. While spectators gazed in interested wonderment the tented city appeared to rise before their eyes as if by magic. Although the circus is equipped with the modern mechanical stake drivers, gangs of working men swinging heavy hammers, drove the "stobs" with rythmic cadence that was a delight to the onlookers.

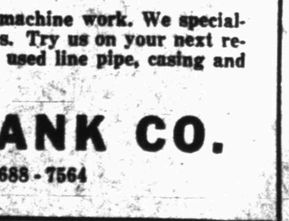

The circus will start Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock with the doors opening an hour earlier so that ample time is allowed to view the menagerie. Tonight the doors will open at 7 with the show beginning an hour later. Tickets are on sale downtown at the same prices are prevail at the show grounds, at the Renfro Drug store at Eighth and Scott streets.

Bourland and Shipp End West Texas Tour

Special to The Record News.

VERNON, Texas, Oct. 6.—A. M. Bourland, president-manager of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, and Grady Shipp, secretary of the Vernon Chamber of Commerce, returned Friday night from a tour of West Texas cities including Paducah, Childress, Shamrock, Stanford and Borger in the interest of the West Texas Chamber of Commerce convention to be held in El Paso. They report much interest shown in the convention.
