Soviets shoot down missile talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — The Soviet Union today suspended talks on reducing nuclear long-range rockets and bombers, saying deployment of new U.S. missiles in Europe had created a "change in the overall strategic situation."

The suspension of the U.S.-Soviet negotiations was announced at the end of a 35-minute session today and two weeks after the Soviets broke off talks on reducing nuclear medium-range missiles.

It meant that for the first time in two years the superpowers were without a major forum for negotiating reductions in nuclear weapons.

"A change in the overall strategic situation due to the beginning of the deployment of new American missiles in Europe compels the Soviet side to re-examine all the issues which are the subject of the discussion at the talks on the limitation and reduction of strategic armaments," the Soviet news agency Tass said in a Geneva dispatch. "The date for the resumption of the talks has not been set due to this."

U.S. negotiator Edward L. Rowny told reporters outside the U.S. disarmament headquarters, "We regret that the U.S.S.R. has chosen not to set a resumption date for the next round." He added that the United States was "fully prepared" to continue the regular pattern of the talks.

Rowny said the United States proposed to resume the talks in early February, "and we hope that the U.S.S.R. will soon agree on a date for resuming these negotiations which are in the interest of both our nations and of the entire world."

"We cannot agree with Soviet assertions that developments outside the scope of these negotiations require the Soviet Union to withhold agreement on a resumption date," Rowny said.

At a meeting of NATO foreign ministers in Brussels, Belgium, there was no immediate public comment on the suspension of the talks.

The Strategic Arms Reduction Talks — called START — which opened June 18, 1982, would have normally gone into a two-month recess with the resumption date announced at the end of the round.

The two sides agreed earlier that today's meeting would be the last of the two-month round begun Oct. 5, but there has been no indication from the Soviets that they will resume the talks in February.

On Monday, Soviet leaders in Moscow said the United States was indulging in "wishful thinking" if it thought the Soviets would resume parallel talks on medium-range nuclear missiles.

The Soviets walked out of those talks Nov. 23 after the arrival of the first of 572 U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 missiles to be deployed in Western Europe by the North Atlantic Treaty Organization.

The Soviets have announced plans to put nuclear missiles in Czechoslovakia and East Germany, increase the number of SS-20s in the Soviet Union and have sea-based nuclear weapons aimed at the United States to counter the NATO deployment.

Deployment of the new U.S. missiles and Europe could prompt the Soviets to reconsider or upgrade their START proposal limiting each side to 1,800 launchers, or vehicles capably of delivering warheads.

Americans in Mideast continue retaliation

Shultz discusses peacekeepers' role

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) — Secretary of State George P. Shultz met today with the foreign ministers of nations with peacekeeping troops in Beirut, and France's foreign minister said afterwards they would not abandon Lebanon.

Both the British and Italian governments, which also contribute troops to the multinational force, are said to be voicing doubts whether the peacekeepers are playing a meaningful role in Lebanon.

The 5,600 peacekeeping troops include U.S. Marines, French paratroopers and Italian and British soldiers.More than 300 peacekeepers — including 255 U.S. servicemen — have been killed in Lebanon.

Neither Shultz, Foreign Secretary Geoffrey Howe of Britain nor Foreign Minister Giulio Andreotti of Italy would comment on today's meeting, held over breakfast in Shultz' hotel suite here.

But French Foreign Minister Claude Cheysson said, "There are no changes that would lead us to change our views — we do not want to give the impression that we would abandon the Lebanese."

"We support President (Amin) Gemayel," Cheysson said. "We would like Gemayel's government to represent Lebanon in its entirety so that the process of national reconciliation can continue and lead to a truly representative executive force."

He said "it would be completely irresponsible on our part, while these discussions in Geneva are continuing, to diminish our involvement under the mandate."

Cheysson was referring to the Lebanese national reconciliation talks in Geneva, which are currently in recess.

Earlier, a senior State Department official, who insisted on anonymity, said the United States would not suggest increasing the size or role of the peacekeeping force.

The U.S. official said that in a separate meeting Wednesday, Shultz and Andreotti discussed how the force could increase its support of Gemayel's government "to demonstrate more forcefully support of the government in the fulfillment of the goals that the various MNF partners have set for it."

The NATO meeting comes as Italy and Britain question the usefulness of the peacekeeping force in the wake of Sunday's U.S. air strikes against Syrian positions in Lebanon and repeated attacks on the peacekeeping forces.

But the official who briefed reporters on Shultz' meetings said all the multinational force partners have expressed their determination "to do what they went into Lebanon to do."

He said Shultz spent considerable time in his meeting with Andreotti explaining the reason for Sunday's air strikes, which Washington says were in retaliation for Syrian attempts to shoot down U.S. reconnaisance aircraft.

He said he thought all four partners were agreed that there is an urgent need to achieve national reconciliation in Lebanon, saying this is one development that could lead to the withdrawal of the force.

After the breakfast meeting, the four foreign ministers joined the 12 other NATO foreign ministers for the start of a two-day strategy conference. The ministers will be searching for ways to keep open contacts with the Soviet Union on nuclear disarmament and are likely to continue discussions about the situation in Lebanon.

THe ministers are expected to reaffirm their commitment to continue deploying new U.S. cruise and Pershing 2 nuclear missiles in Europe barring an agreement with the Soviets to restrain missile deployment.

U.S. may change Marine position

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — U.S. Marines retaliated with anti-tank missiles and mortars after coming under heavy fire today at their vulnerable Beirut airport base.

The attack, which included mortar fire and and rocket-propelled grenades, came as Reagan administration officials were reportedly considering shifting the Marines to a safer location, either on warships off shore or southward toward the Israeli army's front line.

Marine spokesman Maj. Dennis Brooks said the U.S. peacekeepers fired back with Dragon anti-tank missiles, 60-mm mortars and small arms after the mid-morning attack on the base. He did not identify the assailants and said he had no reports of casualties

He said the exchange was with militiamen firing at the northeastern perimeter of the Marine compound from a "fortified position" which was destroyed by the return fire.

The Voice of Lebanon radio station of the rightist Christian Phalange Party said the firefight pitted the Marines against Shiite militiamen in southern Beirut, while shelling came from Druse positions in the towns of Amroussieh and Shweifat.

The security of the Marine base has been under intense scrutiny since a suicide terrorist crashed a truck bomb into the Marine headquarters Oct. 23 and killed 240 U.S. servicemen. Last Sunday, eight Marines were killed in an attack by Druse militiamen.

The New York Times and The Boston Globe, in today's editions, quoted sources in Washington as saying plans were being drafted to redeploy the troops in response to military and diplomatic pressures.

Both reports said one option under consideration was to shift the Marines southward toward an area controlled by the Israelis. The Times said another option was to move the 1,600 Marines to U.S. 6th fleet warships offshore.

The attack today followed overnight artillery and rocket exchanges between Lebanese army troops and Druse insurgents that killed four civilians and wounded 14 on Beirut's outskirts, police said.

Police also said a predawn mudslide buried 20 houses while the occupants were asleep in the eastern Lebanese town of Bar-Elias, 25 miles east of Beirut.

Radio stations said rescuers dug five bodies from the rubble by midday. Up to 35 other persons were feared dead, according to radio reports.

Gunmen kidnapped four reporters of Beirut's leading independent newspaper, An-Nahar, in west Beirut's Ras el-Nabaa neighborhood as they were going home early today. They were released unharmed several hours later, police said.

On Wednesday, Syria released the body of U.S. Navy pilot Lt. Mark A. Lange but said the return of American prisoner Robert O. Goodman depended on how relations go with the United States.

The body of Lange, 27, of Fraser, Mich., was flown by the Marines to the aircraft carrier Independence off the Beirut coast for its eventual journey home.

Lange's A-6 fighter-bomber was shot down Sunday in an attack on Syrian positions in Lebanon's central mountains. His body was delivered by the Syrians to the Lebanese army, then passed on to the Marines.

Syria's state minister for foreign affairs, Farouk Charaa, said in Damascus that Goodman, 26, of Virginia Beach, Va., Lange's bombardier-navigator, was considered "a prisoner of war" and would be treated "in accordance with international rules."

Goodman, a lieutenant, was captured after bailing out of the stricken plane Sunday.

In Beirut, President Amin Gemayel delayed a decision on whether to accept the resignation of Prime Minister Shafik Wazzan and his Cabinet, which was submitted Sept. 26.

Wazzan offered to resign to make way for a coalition Cabinet to guide Lebanon.

Computer problems delay shuttle's return

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Columbia and its six crewmen were forced to delay their return to Earth today after veteran spaceship commander John Young reported computer failure on the shuttle just 4½ hours before this morning's planned touchdown.

The astronauts were in no immediate danger. Only one computer was dout, and Columbia has four others, any one of which could guide the ship to a safe landing. The computers operate wing flaps and other spaceship control surfaces during re-entry.

Mission Control said it delayed the touchdown because it did not fully understand the problem at a critical time when it had to give the crew the go-ahead to close the payload doors and prepare for the engine firing that would start the shuttle back toward Earth.

"We have waved off a landing for this morning," Mission Control said. "We need time to better understand the problem before we commit to re-entry."

Four hours later, the control center said: "We still do not know what happened."

Columbia was to have landed on a desert runway at Edwards at 10:59 a.m. EST after a successful 10-day orbital mission in which the astronauts reaped a bonanza of science data in the Spacelab workshop mounted din the cargo bay.

That landing would have been on the astronauts' 162nd circuit of the globe. The control center said that, assuming the computer problem is resolved, it might bring the crew home on landing opportunities on either the 165th or 166th orbits.

Testing begins when shuttle lands

EDWARDS AIR FORCE BASE, Calif. (AP) — Instead of relaxing after returning to Earth, the Spacelab crew faces a week of arduous tests in which they will be rotated, dropped and shocked in a makeshift lab scarcely roomier than the shuttle itself.

The four specialists in Columbia's crew of six were to begin the physiological research so soon after today's landing they weren't even scheduled to attend welcome-home ceremonies.

Astronauts Owen Garriott, Robert Parker, Byron Lichtenberg and West German Ulf Merbold were to rush off immediately to the first of many long days of experiments to measure the effects of space flight on the body.

The test center, called the Baseline Data Collection Facility, is housed in a simple metal-sided building on the edge of the dry lake landing strip. Inside, it looks like a cross between high-tech electronics and a medieval dungeon.

Work areas are divided into small, spartan rooms with machines to spin, restrain, drop, shock, accelerate, tilt and disorient the astronauts.

The experiments began long before Columbia was launched on the ninth shuttle mission, and some were performed in orbit. Many are intended to investigate the function of the vestibular organ, or inner ear, and the eyes in relation to space sickness.

In one test, described by a British researcher, Dr. Alan Benson, as looking more like torture than science, the spaceman is strapped onto a rotating platform.

Another device is used to raise the astronauts off the ground for a small drop that measures the reflexes of the calf muscles. It looks exactly like the frame for a backyard swing.

An experiment to see how well a crewman can determine his position uses just a gurney and a small symbol pasted on each wall of the room.

In all, the crewmen are scheduled for a nearly two dozen tests, 14 of which were also conducted before and during the flight.

Merbold and Parker were scheduled for nine hours of testing each today. Garriott and Lichtenberg faced a 12-hour day, said Robert Clark, who is in charge of the test facility.

"The landing ... represents only two-thirds of the data (to be) collected," said Jerry Homick, a NASA scientist. "It's critical to collect post-flight data."

"The tests are rigorous, but the crew has been in fine spirits through all this," Clark said. "It is a long day. It is tiring to do them but it is not harmful."

The international nature of the European-built Spacelab mission is evident everywhere. Equipment is plastered with logos from NASA, the European Space Agency, MIT, and national symbols.

Benson, of the Royal Air Force Institute of Aviation Medicine, said of the battery of tests dreamed up by scientists on two continents: "So many things are being done that there is a possibility that we will interfere with one another."

Marines enjoy freedom to fight

By ROBERT H. REID
Associated Press Writer

BEIRUT, Lebanon — U.S. Marines at Beirut international airport now may shoot back immediately when they come under fire, and they love the new freedom to fight back.

"We jump at the chance to go at the bad guys," said Lt. John Holloway of Williamsburg, Va., a platoon leader. "The bottom line is that if anybody shoots at us, we shoot back immediately. No one on this line has any qualms about returning fire."

Maj. Dennis Brooks, the Marine spokesman, said individual Marines have had permission to shoot back immediately since the 1,800-man 22nd Marine Amphibious Unit arrived Nov. 17 to replace the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit in the multinational force.

Under regulations of the 24th Marine Amphibious Unit, Marine outposts had to get permission from the battalion commander before returning fire.At the time, Marines complained to reporters that it would often take 10 to 15 minutes before permission was received.

"If a Marine private or a corporal, say, comes under fire, he can fire back with his weapon if he can see the source of fire," Brooks, 38, of Detroit, said in describing the new rules.

"He reports back to his platoon commander, who can use his weapons if necessary. Then the platoon commander reports to the company commander and so on," Brooks said.

Druse militiamen complain the Marines are sometimes too quick to jump into fights that break out between the Druse and the Lebanese army near the Marine base at the airport.

The Lebanese army maintains positions and checkpoints close to Marine lines, and Druse leader Walid Jumblatt claims the Marines join the fighting on the army side after getting caught in cross fire.

Druse fighters in nearby Schweifat say they opened fire on Marines at a checkpoint manned jointly with the Lebanese army after scouts saw the Americans firing.Eight Marines were killed and two wounded in the clash Sunday night.

"A lot of stuff goes over our heads," said Lance Cpl. William Parry of Lancaster, Pa., as he stood at an observation post. "I think we get some strays and ricochets from over there," he said, pointing to Lebanese army and Druse strongholds about 500 yards to the east.

The Marines maintain they are careful to identify who is shooting at them before returning fire.

"We get a lot of machine-gun fire and rockets," said Holloway. "We are very capable of suppressing the fire."

Beside his platoon's amphibious landing vehicle hung a sign marked "Sniper Population" with a tally of the platoon's "kills." The number five had been crossed out and a six scrawled beside it.

"We blew that guy away last night," one Marine said.

Staff Sgt. Paul Germon of New York City said he was on his third tour in Lebanon since the Marines came here in August 1982 to oversee the evacuation of Palestine Liberation Organization fighters under siege by the occupying Israelis.

Germon said he likes this tour best because he gets more chances to use his military skills."It's getting better," he said. "Getting better all the time."

However, he said, "people treated us a lot nicer" when the Marines first arrived. Then, the Marines patrolled with unloaded weapons through the same Shiite Moslem neighborhoods that now harbor snipers.

"They used to come out to talk to us," Germon said. "We had Shiites wandering around selling us stuff."

Now, hunkered down behind earthen barriers or in sandbagged bunkers, the Marines have little contact with Lebanese civilians.

"I've seen a few Lebanese soldiers," said Holloway. "But I don't have much exposure to people. I assume some of them don't like us."

Israel restricting passage over two West Bank bridges

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli authorities today restricted passage to Jordan over two well-traveled West Bank bridges in an effort to prevent the escape of terrorists responsible for Tuesday's bus bombing in Jerusalem, military sources said.

The sources said traffic coming from Jordan was unimpaired, but people wishing to leave the West Bank were being screened according to their places of residence.

Jordan State Radio reported Wednesday night that travelers on both sides of the bridges were refused passage.

The bridges are used daily by hundreds of West Bank residents who work in Jordan and other Arab states and by Jordanians visiting relatives or doing business in the occupied territory.

On Wednesday, five Palestinian leaders, in an unprecedented condemnation of an anti-Israeli terrorist attack, say the PLO bombing which killed four Israelis and injured 46 others on a Jerusalem bus was "harmful and regrettable."

The statement marked the first time since Israel captured the West Bank of the Jordan River 16 years ago that Palestinian leaders openly allied with the Palestine Liberation Organization have condemned an anti-Israeli terrorist act.

Housing swap upsets Clarksville families

CLARKSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Some are outraged, others are sad and yet others vow to stand on firm ground, but feelings aside, some 50 black and white families living in public housing will have to swap apartments.

Last week U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice imposed a federal integration order, ruling that 50 families — 25 black and 25 white — had to exchange residences in this northeast Texas town of 4,500. The deadline is Dec. 15.

"It's torn me up pretty bad," said 79-year-old Iva Sewell, who had 20 days to vacate the apartment she has lived in since 1969 and move to a housing project in a black section of town.

She said the move means giving up her friends and her rose garden.

"No matter what happens, I'm not moving over yonder to that colored neighborhood," she said.

In October, Justice ordered the housing authority to impose a quota system so that no project was less than 45 percent black. His order was upheld by the 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Deberal Brown, 34, will transfer her three children from a three-bedroom apartment to a one-bedroom unit in the white project.

"It sure is a hassle," she said. "It's really putting everyone in a cramp. We're going to be bunched up like sardines, and I don't understand what it's all for."

Doris Holder, a 44-year-old diabetic crippled by arthritis, was ordered to move first. She traded her two-bedroom apartment in the white housing project for a one-bedroom apartment in the black project.

"I had no choice — there was no place else to go," Mrs. Holder said Monday. "I'm trying to keep calm because if I get upset, my blood sugar will shoot way up."

A woman at the station this morning said, "We're asking people to call in and give pledges to put up the decorations. With a $25 pledge or more, they'll get a free album. Right now, we have $301."

A story in Wednesday's Reporter-Telegram noted the decorations normally are put up by the Chamber of Commerce. But because of the estimated cost of $5,000 and a tight budget this year, the chamber opted to keep the decorations in their boxes and use their money for other programs.

The spokeswoman at the radio station said the campaign started at 7:30 a.m., and by 9:30 a.m. they already had a challenge. One woman from Milam Elementary School had challenged all PTA members to donate money. She had given $5.

"We haven't set a goal; we'll see how it goes," said the spokeswoman.

Cuthbert intersection to be closed

The intersection of Cuthbert and Midland Drive will be closed Friday and Saturday, according to the Public Works Department with the city of Midland.

The street will be shut off to traffic from 8 a.m. Friday until Saturday evening, due to the rebuilding of Midland Drive.

All eastbound traffic on Cuthbert approaching Midland Drive will be detoured south on Goliad, then east on Crockett.

Stranded bride can return to U.S.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A New Jersey congressman has managed to iron out the bureaucratic snafu that left a young bride stranded in Mexico after her honeymoon because of visa problems.

Mike Hill, press secretary to Rep. Robert Torricelli, D-N.J., said Wednesday the State Department had arranged a "humanitarian parole" for Marcelina Soprenuk, enabling the 30-year-old Philippine citizen to return to her husband in Emerson, N.J., today.

Mrs. Soprenuk and her husband, Christopher, a 33-year-old medical intern, left for Cancun, Mexico, after their Nov. 12 wedding.

Soprenuk has said that he was assured by American and Mexican officials that his wife, who has lived in the United States for 5½ years with a work visa, would be allowed to return to this country.

When the two tried to return Nov. 21, Mrs. Soprenuk was told she did not have the proper papers to enter the United States.

After trying unsuccessfully for four days to help his wife, Soprenuk returned to New Jersey and enlisted Torricelli's help.

The congressman telephoned the White House and asked for assistance in the case, according to Hill. The White House contacted the State Department, and on Wednesday notified the congressman that the parole would be granted, Hill said.

Aides to Torricelli had initially indicated the processing of Mrs. Soprenuk's papers was likely to take at least a month.

"The State Department said they were doing it for two reasons," Hill said. "One, because they're newlyweds, and two, because of the misinformation given them."

Hill said that Mrs. Soprenuk is expected to go to an American consulate and receive a letter of transport that will allow her to return immediately.

state

DALLAS (AP) — A woman who had her three children in her car when she held police at bay with an empty pistol for more than three hours could not answer a negotiator because she had laryngitis, investigators say.

The standoff began at about 2 p.m. Wednesday, when a woman driving a black Pontiac Trans Am stalled in the middle of a busy intersection and just sat there until another motorist offered to help.

"At 2 o'clock this afternoon the car stalled out. Five to 10 minutes later another motorist pulled behind to help her. She pulled a pistol on him and said, 'No, go away,'" said police Capt. John C. Holt Jr.

There were no injuries in the standoff that lasted until at about 5:20 p.m., when a priest arrived and the woman, whose husband died two years ago, surrendered peacefully.

"She got out of the car. We told her to put her hands up and she put her hands up," said Holt.

Before she surrendered, police had sealed off the area near Buckner and Old Gate Road in northeast Dallas with about 15 squad cars, SWAT teams and police helicopters standing nearby.

No charges were filed Wednesday night, but Hold said the woman would be booked for assault because she threatened an officer or two with the weapon, which turned out to be unloaded.

Her children, ages 3, 5 and 7 were taken into protective custody, said Holt, a member of the negotiating team.

"During the last several hours there were no threatening gestures made toward the children," said Holt. He added that at one point it looked like the woman pointed the weapon at one of her children.

A Spanish-speaking police negotiator relentessly pleaded with the woman through a bullhorn, but she sat there with the window rolled up. Hold said the woman, believed to be in her 30s, also took photographs and talked into a tape recorder.

"We were getting no reaction," Hold said. "Sometimes, she waived at us and made gestures."

At first, it was believed the woman's husband had recently died and she was reacting to her loss. But Wednesday night, Dallas police investigator Donald R. Marshall said the woman's husband died two years ago.

"What background we have is that he (the husband) died two years ago." Marshall said. "But after talking to the arresting officers, they told me she had laryngitis and could barely speak. She wouldn't answer because she could barely speak."

The interpreter tried throughout to make the woman speak.

"I know your husband died. Roll down your window. We can't talk with your window up. I can't tell if you hear me. Can you hear me? Give me the pistol and open the window. If you don't everything stops here," the negotiator said in Spanish.

"She just got in over her head and had no place to go," Marshall said, adding investigators still did not know the woman's motive.

"What are you going to gain?" asked the negotiator. "You won't gain anything."

Holt said the woman finally reacted when a priest from the Good Shepherd Catholic Church in the Dallas suburb of Garland arrived.

Shrimp boats, crews remain in Mexico

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Two Texas shrimp boats and their crews, charged with illegally fishing in Mexican waters, will probably remain in Mexico for a week while authorities try to arrange their release.

Enrique Hubbard, Mexico's consul in Brownsville, said Wednesday the boats will be fined by the Mexican Fishing Authority

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. John Tower says the Reagan administration was surprised at the "extent of the communist presence" on the Caribbean island of Grenada.

"It has become clear that what we found in Grenada was the beginning of another Soviet-Cuban military fortress in our backyard," said the chairman of the Senate Committee on Armed Services.

Tower, who has announced he will not seek re-election next year, spoke Wednesday at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs.

He said "at the time of intervention we found:

— "More than 750 Cubans, 49 Soviets, 17 Libyans, 15 North Koreans, 12 East Germans and three Bulgarians, — "Secret treaties with the Soviet Union, Cuba and North Korea which called for military advisers as well as $37.8 in military hardware.

— "Massive quantities of military equipment, including 15,000-20,000 military uniforms — this in a nation with fewer than 2,000 men in the active military."

"For three years now the Reagan administration has been accused of exaggerating the magnitude of the Soviet threat," Tower said. "What recent events in Grenada revealed is that, if anything, the administration has been guilty of underestimating the extent of the danger posed by the Soviet Union."

He said as a result of Soviet military buildup during "decades of neglect" by the United States, "the competition for power and influence between the United States and the Soviet Union has become truly global in nature."

"Equally as important as rebuilding American defenses," Tower said, "U.S. policy must reflect the fact that we are currently faced with an incresingly hostile international environment.

state in brief

Richards supporting Mondale

DALLAS (AP) — State Treasurer Ann Richards on Wednesday threw her support behind Democratic presidential candidate Walter Mondale, citing the former vice president's experience in government.

"We look to someone has experience in governing, not just brief capacity as an officeholder, but someone who has been a participant in government from the city to hall to state government, to the U.S. Senate and the White House," Mrs. Richards said.

Mrs. Richards, standing beside Mondale at a Dallas press conference, gave him one of the Cabbage Patch dolls, which she said was symbolic of the effort Texas Democrats will make on his behalf next year. "I don't think what we had to do to get this doll will compare to what we will do next year in carrying Texas for you," Mrs. Richards said.

The dolls have received national attention because of their popularity and lack of availability this Christmas season.

Tower recommends attorney

AUSTIN (AP) — Sen. John Tower on Wednesday recommended that President Reagan nominate U.S. Attorney Edward Prado of San Antonio as federal district judge for the Western District of Texas.

Prado, 36, would succeed U.S. District Judge Fred Shannon, who has announced plans to resign Jan. 1, said Tower.

The 68-county Western District includes the following divisions: Austin, Del Rio, El Paso, Midland-Odessa, Pecos, San Antonio and Waco.

Soviet ships denied entry

GALVESTON (AP) — Three Soviet ships won't be allowed to dock at the Port of Galveston until the departure of the U.S. nuclear attack submarine USS Dallas, the Coast Guard says.

The Vlas Nichkov, Dudinka and Meganom were scheduled to arrive on Wednesday and today and load cargoes of grain, Capt. Kyle Shaw of the Coast Guard Marine Safety Office said.

But Coast Guard on Wednesday told the ships' U.S. agent, Southern Steamship Inc., that the vessels would not be allowed to enter the port until Monday. The USS Dallas is making its first visit to Texas this week.

Mattox asks PUC to audit Bell

AUSTIN (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox asked the Public Utility Commission again Wednesday to conduct an audit of Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. before acting on Bell's pending $1.3 million rate hike request.

"The concept behind Bell's huge rate hike request, and what the PUC staff seems to be missing, is to ask for much more than the company expects to receive and then wait for the PUC staff to cut down the rate increase to the amount that Bell wanted in the first place," Mattox said in a letter to PUC chairman Alan Erwin.

Mattox said an audit was needed "in order to determine exactly what the company really is entitled to concerning a rate hike."

Lawyer wants jury sequestered

GEORGETOWN (AP) — A Georgetown lawyer planned to ask a judge today to sequester jurors who will hear the murder case against nurse Genene Jones, accused of injecting a fatal drug dose into a 15-month-old Kerrville girl.

Court-appointed attorney Jim Brookshire said he also would ask for more money to pay for expert witness testimony in Ms. Jones' trial. He said he has been allocated only $500.

Ms. Jones' trial is set for Jan. 9. It was moved to this Central Texas city because of the extensive publicity in Kerrville. She is charged in the September 1982 death of Chelsea Ann McClellan.

Health programs honored

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Department of Health said Wednesday it has honored five Texas communities for outstanding health community programs.

The awards went to Galveston County Health District, child car seat loaner program; Lake Highlands School, Richardson, health promotion program; El Paso County Medical Society and KVIA-TV, health education messages; Brackenridge Hospital, Austin, health education program, and Laredo-Webb County Health Department, chronic disease risk reduction program.

Dentist heads GOP association

AUSTIN (AP) — Dr. Richard Box, an Austin dentist, was elected president of the Texas Republican Party County Chairman's Association Wednesday to fill an unexpired term through June 1984.

Box succeeds Jim Tallas, Fort Bend County, who resigned to make a state legislative race.

Box has been Travis County Republican chairman since 1979. He is a member of the state GOP committee from District 14.

New law to get its first test

AUSTIN (AP) — Two San Antonio school officials and two private contractors were named in a suit Tuesday that is the first test of the new Texas Free Enterprise and Antitrust Act.

Attorney General Jim Mattox said the suit alleged violation of competitive bidding procedures and awarding building maintenance contracts of more than $5,000 without seeking additional bids. It seeks a permanent injunction against the defendants in addition to civil penalties and court costs.

Named as defendants were Antonio G. Alvarez and Herbert Brewer, both San Antonio school district officials; Joe Rincon, plumbing firm owner, and W.A. Wahnmund, a general business contractor.

White seeks disaster declarations

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White on Wednesday asked the U.S. Department of Agriculture to issue disaster declarations for seven counties that have suffered drought or flooding and other severe weather damage.

Named in White's request were Brown, Bailey, Wilbarger, Hale, Coleman, Terry and Cooke counties.

Charge may be dropped

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — A capital murder charge against a Texas prison inmate accused in the death of a prison farm manager may be thrown out if the state fails come up with the funds for his defense, a judge says.

Craig Washington, the court-appointed attorney for Eroy Edward Brown, claims insufficient funds are available to pay for the inmate's defense.

State District Judge Darrell Hester of Brownsville has scheduled a hearing on the matter for Friday in Edinburg.

Brown, 33, of Waco, was indicted on capital murder charges in the April 4, 1981, deaths of Ellis Unit Warden Wallace Pack and prison farm manager Billy Max Moore. Brown has said he acted in self defense, believing the two prison officials were going to torture him.

Brown's first trial in Pack's slaying ended in a mistrial in March 1982, when a Galveston County jury voted 11-1 for acquittal. Another Galveston jury in November 1982 acquitted Brown in the Pack's slaying.

Hester said that state attorneys announced intentions to reduce Brown's charge in Moore's slaying from capital murder to murder, conditioned upon state funding to prosecute the inmate in the new trial.

But Hester said no money has been made available for Washington's fee and for the costs of investigation and expert testimony.

"Now, we must decide if we want to dismiss it (the capital murder charge) because of denial of funds for counsel," Hester said.

"They have simply got to determine where they are going on this. He (Brown) is entitled to a speedy trial on this trial, but he is also entitled to have an attorney represent him, and that attorney is entitled to be paid a reasonable fee," the judge said.

Representatives of the state attorney general's office, the Comptroller of Public Accounts and Walker County District Attorney Frank Blazek have been ordered to appear at the hearing, said court coordinator Oliva Salinas.

Jerry Wooley, a spokesman for Texas Attorney General Jim Mattox, said that Assistant Attorney General Dave Richards would attend the hearing.

"Other than that, I don't have anything to say," Wooley said.

Klansman recounts hanging black in trial

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Two Ku Klux Klansmen cruised the streets looking for a victim before they attacked a black teen-ager, beat and strangled him and hanged his body from a tree, according to one Klan member's testimony.

The youth fought "like a crazed animal" and begged "please don't kill me," said James Llewellyn "Tiger" Knowles, 20.

He testified Wednesday as the state's key witness against Henry Francis Hays, 29, accused of the March 1981 murder of Michael Donald.

Defense witnesses were expected to testify today in the capital murder trial that began Tuesday.

Knowles said Donald, a 19-year-old brick masonry student, was abducted and taken to an isolated area, where he was beaten and strangled with a rope looped in a hangman's noose. Knowles said they assaulted Donald because he was black and "to show Klan strength in Alabama."

Knowles said he tied the hangman's noose himself. He said he and Hays both assaulted Donald with a limb and "pulled on the rope" together. He said Hays later cut Donald's throat with a knife three times before the body was hoisted into the tree across the street from a house where Hays lived.

Knowles said Donald begged for his life when Hays asked if he was familiar with the Atlanta child murders — a string of killings of young blacks that terrorized the Atlanta area in 1980 and 1981. Knowles said Donald replied that he knew of the killings and began saying, "Please don't kill me."

Before killing Donald, Knowles said the two cruised the downtown area looking for a black person to victimize, and rejected an elderly black man because "He was too far from the car."

"He seemed like a good victim," Knowles testified. "He was by himself in a secluded area."

Knowles said Donald fought "like a crazed animal" as the two Klansmen beat him with a tree limb.

After Donald's body was hanged, Knowles said he had a cup of coffee and went to sleep.

Knowles pleaded guilty in June to a federal charge of violating Donald's civil rights. He awaits sentencing and could receive a life term.

Before a largely black audience and a jury of 12 whites and two blacks, Knowles also said he and Hays had "beaten a homosexual" on another occasion, and ordered a cross-burning on the lawn of the Mobile County courthouse in 1981. Hays listened quietly.

The FBI contends the Donald killing and the cross-burning were linked to the mistrial in the unrelated case of a black man charged in the murder of a white Birmingham policeman. That trial was moved to Mobile because of publicity.

Congressmen getting pay hike

WASHINGTON (AP) — Beginning in January, members of Congress will enjoy a 3.5 percent election-year boost in their $69,800 annual salaries. They can thank legislative action in previous years and inaction this year for the $2,400 increase.

Earlier this year, senators voted to raise their $60,662.50 salaries by 15 percent to the current level of $69,800. House members had given themselves the same $9,138 pay increase in December 1982.

The history of the upcoming increase reflects the political sensitivity that has been connected with the issue ever since the first Congress in 1789 — members of both chambers then were paid $6 a day.

Whenever it can, Congress takes the most indirect route to a pay raise. Rep. David R. Obey, D-Wis., has said legislators place public discussion of their salaries in the same category as "an unmentionable social disease."

Effective Jan. 1, legislators automatically will be receiving the same 3.5 percent cost-of-living wage increase that will go to most federal government white collar workers.

The legislative path leading to the increase began in 1975 when Congress voted to include its members among the federal workers who automatically get pay hikes. However, the rules still required a separate vote for the annual appropriation providing the additional money.

In 1981, however, Congress removed the necessity for a separate vote on appropriating money for legislators' salaries. Language was inserted in a bill that year saying "the provisions herein for the various items of official expenses of members, officers and committees of the Senate and House, and clerk hire for senators and members shall be the permanent law with respect thereto."

Landing gear fails

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — A section of the landing gear failed on an American Airlines plane from Dallas touching down at Newark International Airport, but 149 passengers were safely removed from the DC-10, authorities said.

An assembly that holds the wheels on the right main landing gear failed Wednesday night after the plane landed, causing the craft to list to the right, American Airlines spokesman Vincent Modugno said.

The pilot of Flight 154 initially reported that a tire had blown, but a subsequent investigation showed that the assembly had touched the runway, producing sparks, Modugno said. The spokesman said the entire landing gear did not collapse, and that there are two other landing gears on the jet.

An emergency call was received by airport police at 9:49 p.m., but an initial report that there was a fire aboard the DC-10 proved false, said Sgt. George Kelly of the Port Authority of New York and New Jersey police.

The passengers and the crew of about 10 used a ramp to leave the plane and there were no injuries reported, said Modugno. The passengers were taken to the airport terminal by bus.

Modugno said Flight 154 made a normal landing at 9:44 p.m. and "there was no emergency landing ... no evacuation."

The airport remained open although the runway where the plane landed was closed until the jet could be removed, Kelly said.

Robber makes late arrival

BATON ROUGE, La. (AP) — Banking hours are banking hours, and sometimes even robbers have trouble getting to the teller on time.

East Baton Rouge Parish sheriff's deputies say a would-be robber got to a Louisiana National Bank branch just after it locked its doors at 2 p.m. Monday.

He beat on the glass doors with his rifle-butt, but no one would let him in. Finally, the man ran off into nearby woods, said Maj. Lonnie Keller.

A man carrying a rifle emerged from the woods a few minutes later, and was arrested by a motorcycle officer, Keller said.

Successful optometrist also winning rider of thoroughbreds

At 29, Ms. Hainline combines her love of doctoring and riding in a novel way — she's a winning professional jockey at Calder Race Course in Miami and runs a budding optometric practice here specializing in helping athletes with vision problems.

"She's a very competent, intelligent individual," observes Richard Root, a veteran horse trainer at Calder. "She has a natural talent and could be one of the best female riders in the world."

A Birmingham, Mich., native, Ms. Hainline admits she'll soon have to make a choice between her professions.

"I'll probably race for another year or so," she said in a recent interview. "I love it, but there's a lot of risk."

Optometry will have to come first, she added, "because I'll be doing that the rest of my life."

In the meantime she continues a hectic schedule seven days a week, waking at 4:30 a.m. to get to the track by 5:15. She leaves at 9 to take a quick shower, change clothes and dash to her office.

Unlike most jockeys who ride several different mounts each race day, Ms. Hainline confines her racing to five or six thoroughbreds she rides on a regular basis. When they are scheduled to run, she arranges her office schedule to accommodate the track schedule.

She has spent years working with thoroughbreds, but it wasn't until last June that she decided to ride professionally, at the urging of her husband, Jim Cross, whom she married in April.

"He thinks racing is great and pushed me into it," she explained.

She doesn't wager at the track, but her husband does. "He bets on me only if he thinks I have a chance," she said. At least once he gambled and lost — betting on another horse when her mount won and paid $72.80 for a $2 dollar bet, she recalled.

She's still classified as an apprentice jockey, but already has enough wins to have her weight allowance dropped from 10 to 7 pounds.

As to her own poundage, Ms. Hainline says she's a natural 110 pounds and keeps in condition by running, playing tennis and doing a little weightlifting.

"The horses will keep you in shape," she said.

She has owned her own horse since she was 3 and competed in barrel racing and cross-country events as a youngster. As a teenager, she worked with her parents, who converted their farm into a convalescent home for sick and injured race horses. Ten years ago, she spent a summer in Lexington, Ky., breaking yearlings.

During school vacations she galloped thoroughbreds at Calder to earn enough money to put her through the University of Houston Optometry School, graduating in 1979.

"Racing is exhilarating," she said. "It keeps me happy."

Mexican man finds girl's letter

SAN LEON (AP) — Ten-year-old Sheri Burmaster only hoped someone would find the letter she wrote, stuffed in an old wine bottle and had her father toss into the Gulf of Mexico.

"It was a school project, and deep down I really didn't think it would work," Sheri, a fifth grader, said.

Almost a year later, Sheri got a reply from Hermenejildo Gonzales Perez, a fisherman from Veracruz, Mexico. Perez returned the letter from his "unexpected friend" and included his own letter, written in Spanish.

Her brother's high school teacher translated it.

"This is how I have the honor of communicating with this stranger, a student eager in work. I send you my warmest greetings for this grand function you have performed, wishing that you continue with the same eagerness in your studies. I will make you this cordial invitation that you come to this place. Waiting for you with open arms, I leave you, your friend and servant," the letter said.

PLANO (AP) — Mark Gebhardt insists he's not fibbing when he says, "The check is in the mail."

Postal workers probably would back him up.

New businesses, subdivisions and apartment complexes have sprouted so fast in Dallas's northern suburbs that the U.S. Postal Service has had to lease temporary office space, speed up construction plans and delay delivering mail to some streets until 50 percent of the homes are occupied.

In Addison, 50 percent more mail is being delivered than the same time last year. Carrollton has had a 42 percent increase in deliveries and has been swamped with mail in its temporary offices.

"I get claustrophobic in here," said Lajuana Dollar, a supervisor in the Carrollton branch. "I turn around, and it's all around me."

Gebhardt, a vocal critic of mail service in Plano, often wonders where his mail goes.

"We've sent letters that never get there or get there too late," said Gebhardt, senior vice president of an insurance firm.

"For important papers, we have to send Federal Express. It costs us money, (but) it hurts us in the eyes of our clients when we send something and it doesn't get there."

Postal service officials admit Gebhardt is not alone in his complaints.

"It has been traumatic," said John Billimek, Postal Service director of customer service for the Dallas area. "Sometimes we can cope better than other times."

On the average, suburban post offices are delivering 30 percent more mail than in 1982, Billimek said. Five-year postal service growth plans failed to predict the size of the boom in many surburban areas, leading to a lag in new construction plans.

"Particularily with such a large organization, to get funding is a laborious process," Billimek told the Dallas Morning News. "You have to plan well in advance. We have problems reacting to something that has not been anticipated," he said.

Hunter seeks art forms

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Robert "Roby" Cogswell has been on the hunt since Oct. 1, and he's bagged quite a catch of tatters, caners and twisters.

Cogswell, coordinator of the Folk Arts in Rural Libraries project for the Kentuckiana Regional Library at Eminence, snared his quarry with camera, tape recorder, pen and paper.

They are the people who build boats, tell jokes, cook country-style and make rope, barrels, fishnets and tobacco sticks. And those who tat (make lace), cane chairs and twist tobacco.

Cogswell is trying to document traditional art forms — and some activities not yet recognized as such — and "identify the people who practice them and to call attention to them through public programs," he said in recent interview.

His turf, for one year, includes seven north-central Kentucky counties — Bullitt, Henry, Jefferson, Oldham, Shelby, Spencer and Trimble.

"The folk arts encompass a wide variety of expressive and creative activities," Cogswell said. They usually are based on skills and procedures not learned from books or formal training and practiced informally.

The project is being financed with grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities, Kentucky Arts Commission and State Department for Libraries and Archives.

Cogswell researches current artists as well as historical information about folk art and artists of the past.

Ed Klee, assistant director of field services for the state Department for Libraries and Archives, said, "A permanent file (of material collected) goes to each library in the region and the (state) archives for safe keeping.

"Roby Cogswell has a slide collection and not only has he interviewed them, but has compiled a collection of slides of the art and has an accompanying narrative that goes along with the tapes and slides. He is doing audio tapes, too."

The collection is important because "it's a compilation of a permanent record," Klee said. "Most of the people he is dealing with are very old. It's a means of preserving history on the local and state levels.

"For example, there was James Miller, who was a potter in Meade County," Klee said. "The pottery is long gone, but his wares are now collector items. Not only has Cogswell reseached the history of this potter, but he's been able to locate a lot of his wares in personal collections. Miller was born in 1814 and made the pottery in the 1840s. He has a picture of Miller and some of the wares he produced."

Issues in Baby Jane Doe case varied, complex

NEW YORK (AP) — Had Baby Jane Doe been born 30 years ago, says Dr. E.F. Diamond of Loyola University in Chicago, there's a good chance no one but her parents and the attending medical staff would have known.

The doctors, seeing her gross deformities — the open spine, the fluid on the brain and the tiny head — might have stamped her files "STILLBORN" and "disposed" of her, says Diamond, a professor of pediatrics.

But when the infant now known in court records as Baby Jane Doe was born on Long Island on Oct. 11, 1983, she arrived in a society that had learned miraculous ways of medicine but had not yet decided whether it always wanted to perform that magic.

So after her parents' decision not to seek corrective surgery was publicized, the fate of the severely deformed infant became a public question, debated on television, at medical academies and in the courts.

Her plight has raised many questions:

Must life be extended, no matter what the quality of that life will be? Should the government intervene in a physician's care of a patient? Should committees be established to make these life-or-death decisions? Does the right to privacy outweigh the government's interests?

The unidentified parents of Baby Jane Doe say doctors told them that corrective surgery could extend the child's life from a maximum of two years to more than 20, but would leave her bedridden, severely retarded and in constant pain.

Other authorities, however, including U.S. Surgeon General C. Everett Koop, say Baby Jane might have a better life than that.

The dispute is a new one, born of technology.

"Thirty years ago, it was simply the will of God. The baby died. Now, we can prolong life, and therefore we can prolong dying and suffering," says Dr. M. Harry Jennison, executive director of the American Academy of Pediatrics.

The question, says Arthur Caplan, associate for the humanities at the Hastings Center, is: "Are we going to be bound by a kind of technological imperative? ... Must we always do what we are able to do?"

Caplan's answer is no. At some point, he says, someone ought to make a decision whether treatment should continue. These are not medical decisions, he says, but "value decisions," keyed to the quality of human life.

Diamond's answer — and the answer of the American Academy of Pro-Life Pediatricians, which he heads — also is no.

But Diamond says the decision not to proceed with a treatment should be made only when it is clear that treatment would be futile. Even then, he says, the decision is "agonizing."

He is not convinced that Baby Jane Doe falls into that category.

Saga of death

A saga of death that has been unfolding for months in Texas contains a number of important lessons about crime and punishment. Those lessons, while sometimes displaying a side of human existence that a lot of us would prefer not to see, must be learned if true progress is to be made on controlling crime.

The case of Henry Lee Lucas has baffled and confused people throughout the nation. Lucas is currently held in Williamson County, awaiting trial in the murder of an unidentified female hitchhiker. Already he has been convicted in two Texas slayings and faces terms of life and 75 years.

What makes the Lucas case unusual is that he has told law enforcement officers that he has killed as many as 150 people across the nation. The officers often find his confessions difficult to believe, but they're difficult to not believe, many of the lawmen say, because of Lucas's graphic descriptions of the murders he says he has committed.

Why is Lucas doing what he's doing? Does he hope to capitalize on book and movie rights he believes may result from his crimes? Or has he actually begun to feel remorseful for any crimes he may have committed and wants to "get it off his chest?"

Regrettably, mass murder has become something of the "norm" in recent times — the "helter skelter" killings that sent Charles Manson to prison, the Houston sex killings and countless others. It's almost as though murderers believe society expects them to kill in multiples. They seem to have turned it into a morbid game in which the object is to shock society, to see how much society can stand.

We've already passed that point in this sickening contest, if that is, in fact, what it is. But has society failed to respond to this outright challenge by the criminal element in the right way? Maybe. Have we bent too far backward in ensuring the rights of the accused, to the point now that it's difficult to send a convicted man or woman to their death?

Texas Department of Public Safety director, Col. Jim Banks, says the criminal justice system is so lax that he is fearful Lucas may someday be a free man. Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said he believes Lucas should be executed because "anyone guilty of a murder should be put to death."

Everyone growing tired of this game of mass-murder-to-shock-the-world should agree.

Another View:

Nuclear nationalism

Argentina's incoming elected government has apparently decided to persist in the same reckless nuclear policy as the outgoing military government. The reason comes down, essentially, to pure nationalism.

There seem to be a good many people in Argentina — particularly in the navy, which runs the nuclear program — who like having their country on the list of countries that have the capacity to produce nuclear weapons.

Argentine authorities keep saying that nuclear development there will be strictly limited to peaceful purposes. If that's true, why not open the plants to international inspection?

Hans Blix, the director of the International Atomic Energy Agency, was in Buenos Aires last week to try to persuade the new government to come into the agency's system of safeguards.

He talked with both the president-elect, Raul Alfonsin, and Alfonsin's designated secretary of energy, Conrado Storani, without success.

In the future, as in the past, they told Blix, Argentina will refuse to sign either the Nuclear Nonproliferation Treaty or the Treaty of Tlateloco, which would ban all nuclear weapons from Latin America.

Storani, the future energy secretary, stuck to the military government's familiar argument that the nonproliferation treaty is merely a ruse to prevent Third World countries from acquiring nuclear technology. That view is incorrect, since signing the treaty would make it easier for other countries to give technology to Argentina — as long as it was not used for weapons.

Storani's insistence on his predecessors' line is more than a little ominous, since it suggests that the Alfonsin government may be conceding more influence to the military than is healthy for either of them.

Perhaps Argentina is also counting on the United States and Western Europe to continue the present rather slack enforcement of their own commitments.

If Argentina can get the equipment and materials that it wants from the Northern Hemisphere without signing the nonproliferation treaty, why should it sign? Last August, to note one recent and conspicuous lapse, the Reagan administration routinely approved the sale of heavy water to Argentina.

Currently the administration is devoting great attention to transfers of potentially dangerous technologies to the Soviet Union. In contrast, it does not seem to be paying much attention at all to the transfers to those countries that decline to join the international effort to restrain the further spread of nuclear weapons.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Invincible (looking) armada isn't

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Navy has put on an awesome show of force recently, with its dozens of gray ships arrayed in battle lines off the shores of Grenada and Lebanon. Viewed from afar, the fleet has been impressive. But viewed up close, in its particulars, the Navy is less inspiring.

Jack Anderson

Some of its ships are simply unfit for service. Others are plagued by equipment shortages and failures. Only four or five of the Navy's 13 aircraft carriers can be deployed on a sustainable basis. The combat planes they carry are short of vital spare parts.

Over the last four years, the money squeezed out of the taxpayers for new ships and planes has increased 99 percent. Yet the money allocated to keep our existing naval forces combat ready has gone up only 17 percent.

Worse, the admirals have vastly inflated the "mission capability" rates, which measure the Navy's combat readiness. The figures make the Navy far more formidable on paper than it is on the high seas.

If an F-14 jet fighter can simply fly, for example, it's likely to be rated "mission capable." Yet it may not be able to launch its air-to-air missiles, or its radar may be missing. And planes awaiting repairs are regarded as if they didn't exist. That way, they don't bring down the percentage of planes that are listed as "mission capable."

The dismal truth is told in the Navy's own classified reports, which confirm the low combat readiness. Situation reports following recent naval exercises, for example, stressed the seriousness of the problem.

Investigators for the General Accounting Office have reached the same conclusion after conducting classified studies of the Navy's readiness. Some of the findings have been shared with my associate Donald Goldberg.

Reviewing 23 types of munitions, for example, the investigators found that the Navy was undersupplied in every category — including such indispensable weapons as Harpoon anti-ship missiles, Walleye warheads, torpedoes and mines.

The Navy is also woefully short of spare parts to keep its ships on the seas and its planes in the air. Not only carrier planes but the ground support equipment lack sufficient parts.

Meanwhile, Navy Secretary John F. Lehman Jr. is clamoring for more money to build a 600-ship Navy when there aren't enough supplies to outfit the ships we now have and not enough spare parts to keep them repaired.

Subordinates who want to tell the truth are afraid to contradict Lehman. Witnesses heard Vice Adm. Robert Schoultz tell Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Tex., after a closed-door hearing, that he'd be fired if he disagreed with the Navy secretary. Afterward, an aide denied that Schoultz said it.

Classified reports provide examples of the kind of ships Lehman wants to buy with big bucks that might be better spent on essential weapons and supplies. Here are three:

— The billion-dollar, Aegis-equipped cruiser: A secret report by the GAO reveals that the cruiser's radar defenses have yet to be tested in a realistic situation.

— The LHD-1, the Marines' newest assault ship: Internal Pentagon notes indicate that the vessel is overpriced and badly designed.

— The DDG-51, a guided-missile destroyer that Lehman wants as the backbone of his 600-ship fleet: A secret GAO assessment concluded that this floating fortress is way over-priced. Yet there are 60 of them on the secretary's wish list.

DIPLOMATIC DIGEST: Our new ambassador to Czechoslovakia does not take criticism gracefully. When William Luers was stationed in Venezuela four years ago, a U.S. Information Agency inspection report faulted him for not practicing community relations according to the official guidelines. Luers fired back a cable to the USIA director suggesting that he "condemn the document to the 'dustbin of history.'"

— One name keeps popping up in the secret documents captured during the U.S. invasion of Grenada. It's the name of Nicaragua's ambassador to the United States, Antonio Jarquin. He acted as if he were also the ambassador for Grenada's former Marxist regime. On various occasions, he took part in secret regional meetings.

— Long a notorious exporter of terrorism, Iraqi President Saddam Hussein is now in trouble and, therefore, is presenting a more benign face to the rest of the world. A recent classified cable from U.S. diplomats in Baghdad quotes a sanctimonious Hussein as bemoaning the downfall of Yasir Arafat because "the break up of the PLO would lead to increased international terrorism and instability in the region."

— The peace movement anticipated a "hot autumn" in Europe when public opinion galvanized over deployment of U.S. missiles. It has not been that hot. Despite some large demonstrations, intelligence analysts believe the governments of Western Europe will hold firm in their support of deployment. But some of them are forecasting a new Soviet public relations push against the missile deployment, and the State Department now talks about a "chilly winter."

GEORGE F. WILL

For some, MIA tragedy goes on

WASHINGTON — Outside, the Sunday afternoon sky was gunmetal gray. Inside the Navy Chapel on Nebraska Ave., candles were being lit. One was held by Christine Hess, whose father was shot down over Laos in 1969. She is 16. He and others listed as Missing in Action were being remembered, in more than 250 similar ceremonies nationwide, by persons who understand that remembering is an important act in an unfinished drama.

George F. Will

Beginning in 1973, 591 American POWs were quickly repatriated. Of the 2,490 Americans killed or missing who were not fully accounted for, approximately 1,100 are known to have died, but their remains have not been recovered. Only the studied sadism of the regimes in Vietnam, Laos and Kampuchea prevents an accounting. And there is a second problem: POWs probably were left behind.

U.S. negotiators yielded on the issue of a full accounting before signing the Paris Accords. Hanoi probably submitted a partial list, expecting subsequent bargaining. Instead, the United States accepted the list. The League of Families kept the issue alive when the Carter administration, eager for "normalization" with Hanoi, de-emphasized it.

During the war, at a state's ceremony for POW families, the host governor was interrupted by a small boy who asked the governor to take him to the bathroom, which the governor, a prudent man, promptly did. When the ceremony resumed, the boy again interrupted the governor: "Can you bring my daddy home?" Until the POWs returned, that governor wore a bracelet bearing the boy's father's name. In 1981 the governor became President and the MIA issue became a high-priority matter. He still has three bracelets in his private study next to the Oval Office.

Boat people and other refugees have been sources of intelligence. One refugee gave convincing information that the remains of 400 Americans were at 17 Ly Nam De Street, Hanoi. There have been 2,000 reports concerning sightings of Americans, crash sites, grave sites and the disposition of American remains. Of 500 live sighting reports, nearly 200 are still under investigation.

As early as 1969, Laotion communists admitted holding 158 U.S. airmen. When the war ended, 600 Americans were listed as missing in Laos. Only eight came home. The current administration's assumption was expressed last month when the President, referring to the MIAs, spoke chillingly of "the sacrifices they made, and may still be making."

Today, posters and public-address announcements solicit information in refugee camps. Refugees are interrogated; when willing, they are given polygraph tests. Satellite cameras are focused on sites said to contain prison compounds. Indigenous agents are used. But no substantial progress is possible until the communist regimes abandon the cruelty that they obviously practice for the pleasure of it.

Hanoi, having manipulated U.S. opinion, knows the power of that opinion. Hanoi is sensitive to signs of American public hostility, and cherishes whatever remains of the world's sentimentality about Vietnamese communism. Furthermore, the United States can, through its leverage over various international organizations, make it costly for Hanoi to remain uncooperative.

Reagan has supported Asian Development Bank loans to Laos to encourage cooperation concerning things such as searches for crash sites. He can push for isolation of uncooperative regimes.

At the end of the French Indochina war, Hanoi returned only one-third of the prisoners the French command claimed were held. In the last 30 years, Hanoi has extorted vast sums for fraudulent exhumations and cemetaries for the remains of 22,000 French servicemen. John Hubell, an American POW, recalls that North Vietnamese torturers would say: "We still have French prisoners. They were not fit to return to their families." Thomas Boettcher and Joseph Rehyansky, in the best article on MIAs (National Review, Aug. 21, 1981), note that none of the 591 repatriated POWs was maimed. Were all those maimed in combat or crashes or torture held back?

Vietnam veterans have suffered because they got no homecoming parade — no ceremony of gratitude. Families, too, have suffered because, denied the remains of loved ones, they were denied the ceremonies that cauterize wounded spirits. And imagine the torment of thinking that a loved one might be living with an unspeakable sense of abandonment.

They have not been abandoned. Ann Griffiths and the other winter soldiers of the League of Families have demonstrated the stirring beauty of fidelity painfully maintained in the blank face of facts that promise no proximate relief. Four years ago, the media kept the nation mesmerized by counting, up to 444, the number of days of captivity for 52 U.S. diplomats. The count of days may have passed 5,000 for some American servicemen. Who is counting? The League of Families, the gallant last battalion in the war's last battle.

ART BUCHWALD

Dr. Gloom just can't tell a lie

There is only one worse sin than to lie in the Reagan White House, and that is to tell the truth.

The latest person to discover this is Dr. Martin Feldstein, the chairman of the president's Council of Economic Advisers.

Art Buchwald

Dr. Feldstein's job is to advise the president on the future of the economy, regardless of political race, ideological creed and bookkeeping color.

What is driving Mr. Reagan's political advisers up the wall is that Dr. Feldstein has not been painting the same rosy future of the economy that the president intends to use in his re-election campaign.

Last week the Harvard professor was called on the carpet once again by the president's inner circle.

They made him put his right hand on the Federal Budget.

"Do you swear to tell the economic truth, the whole economic truth, and nothing but the economic truth, so help you God?"

Dr. Feldstein said, "I do."

"Why do you have to tell the truth during an election year?" another right-hand presidential aide asked him.

"Because I'll look like an idiot if I don't," Dr. Feldstein said. "We're going to have to face up to a $200-billion deficit in 1985 that could destroy any hope of a recovery. The only way to deal with it is to raise taxes and cut back on military spending."

"Dr. Feldstein," a third right-hand aide said, "you're not only not a team player, you're a Benedict Arnold."

"Look," said Dr. Feldstein, "here are the figures. I'm not making any of this up."

"Don't back up your argument with figures," the first right-hand man said. "That's the coward's way out. Do you realize you are making the deficit a political issue?"

"But the president made it a political issue in 1980, and that's one of the reasons he won," Dr. Feldstein protested.

"That was before it became his budget deficit. Your job is to give us economic reasons to show why a $200 billion deficit is good for the economy."

"How can I do that?" Dr. Feldstein said. "If the government has to go out on the public market and borrow money to pay its debts, it will send interest rates sky-high, and the private sector won't be able to afford to borrow money to keep the recovery going. Doesn't anybody here want to deal with reality?"

"We're only willing to deal with one kind of reality," a right-hand man said. "And that's getting the president re-elected. Now you either shut up about budget deficits or get off the team."

"I don't want to get off the team," Dr. Feldstein said. "I believe I'm serving the president by telling him the truth about the economic future of the country. If he gets re-elected and doesn't realize what lies ahead for him he'll become the laughing-stock of the nation."

"All right, doctor," said the hardest right-hand aide. "You haven't got the message, so we're going to have to play rough."

"I'm not going to listen to any more of this claptrap," Dr. Feldstein said, and walked out.

"Bring in Larry Speakes," someone said.

The president's press secretary came in with his notepad.

"Larry," said the chief aide. "Dr. Feldstein refuses to be a team player. At your next press briefing we want you go out and ridicule him in front of the entire White House press corps."

"Oh boy," said Larry. "This is going to be fun. Can I mispronounce his name every time I say it?"

"Give the wimp the full treatment," the aide said. "You can use every joke about him in your book. We're going to get rid of Dr. Gloom one way or the other."

Congress approves Carter Library by doing nothing

By W. DALE NELSON

WASHINGTON (AP) — Congress apparently has approved the Jimmy Carter Library in Atlanta in the same way it has approved similar presidential libraries in the past — by doing nothing.

There is one difference, however. This time the Senate at least held a hearing on the subject.

The Presidential Libraries Act, passed in 1955, requires the General Services Administration to submit all proposals for presidential libraries to Congress.

The law says GSA is free to enter into an agreement for such a library if Congress does not act within the 60 days.

As Sen. Lawton Chiles, D-Fla., sees it, however, there is one problem with the way the law is written.

"The act is silent on what Congress is to do to cause a proposal to be modified or rejected," he told the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee at a hearing Nov. 9.

The hearing was held on the 50th day after GSA had submitted its proposal, which means the 60 days was about to expire.

Gary Brooks, chief counsel of the National Archives, said he did not think that would foreclose the lawmakers from acting later to veto or modify plans for the library if they chose.

Chiles, however, said the expiration of the 60 days seemed to him "to imply congressional approval" of the library agreement.

Chiles, a longtime critic of the rising cost of libraries and other expenses of past presidents, asked for the hearing.

"This is the first time Congress has chosen to hold a hearing on a specific library proposal," he said.

Chiles told the committee that the cost of presidential libraries has increased astronomically.

When the act was passed, it was estimated that if 15 libraries were built within 100 years it would cost about $1.5 million a year to maintain and operate all of them.

As it turned out, there are now seven libraries and their annual cost to the government averages more than $1.5 million apiece.

Chile said he was not singling out the Carter library for criticism. In fact, according to GSA, it will be more modest in size and cost less than any of the last four presidential libraries.

But the Florida senator argued that Congress should have more voice in the matter — a chance to step in and say: "Wait a minute. We don't think this agreement is fair. We don't think you are getting a good deal."

For instance, he said, Congress should have had a chance to review President Lyndon B. Johnson's insistence that admission to the LBJ library be free — although adults are charged 75 cents to $1.50 at all of the others.

Mass said at Madrid airport; Safety measures condemned

MADRID, Spain (AP) — More than 500 people, including nine leaders of Spain's socialist government, attended a funeral Mass today at a chapel at Madrid's airport for the 93 victims of the two-plane collision a day earlier.

Meanwhile, union leaders, newspapers and at least one airline official condemned what they said were inadequate safety measures at Barajas International Airport, which has no ground radar or runway signal lights.

The airport remained closed this morning as personnel, working in full sunlight, continued clearing the wreckage of the two Spanish jetliners, which collided on a runway in blinding fog.

Relatives of many of the victims filed past the airport hangar after the Mass to try to identify bodies, temporarily stored there.

Some of the victims were charred or mutilated beyond recognition. "It is hard whether they are male or female," one member of the identification team said.

The collision was the second major air disaster in Madrid in 11 days.

An official cause for the crash between an Iberia Air Lines Boeing 727 and an Aviaco DC-9 has not yet been given.

Transport Minister Enrique Baron and Iberia President Carlos Espinosa de los Monteros said Wednesday the DC-9 got lost in the fog while taxiing and collided with the midsection of the 727, then went under it and burst into flames. The 727, preparing for takeoff, was heading down the runway at about 100 mph, officials said.

Some Spanish aviation experts today privately blamed an error by the DC-9 for the disaster, which ocurred when visibility in the area was reportedly just 50 feet. The fog-bound airport was closed to incoming traffic when the disaster occurred.

Spokesmen for Iberia, Spain's national airline, and Aviaco, a domestic airliner, said 50 passengers and one crew member aboard Iberia Flight No. 350 to Rome died. All 37 passengers and five crew members of Aviaco Flight No. 134 to the northern Spanish city of Santander were killed, they said.

The Iberia plane was carrying 84 passengers and nine crew members. Forty Japanese, 12 of them honeymooners, were among the passengers. Only six Japanese survived.

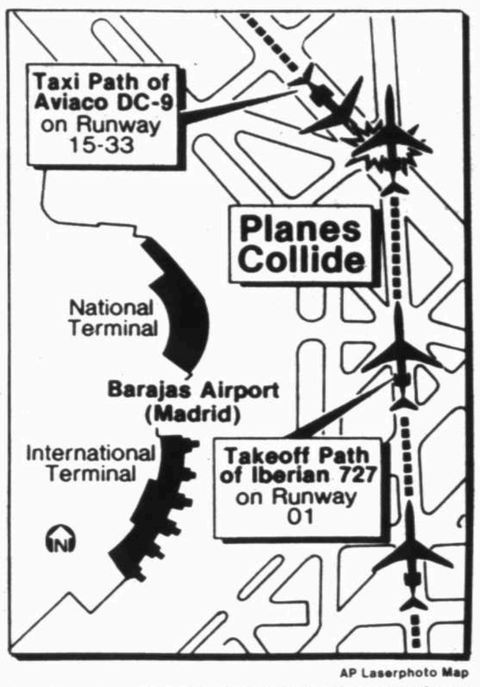
Fourteen of the 23 survivors remained hospitalized, officials said.

Aviation experts, asking not to be named, said the DC-9 cut across an intermediate lane and into the takeoff strip just as the 727 was starting its lift-off. They said it appeared certain the DC-9 was turning to the right, toward the southeast, while the 727 was heading north, causing a near head-on collision.

The pilot of the 727, Carlos Lopez Barranco, who escaped death along with seven other crew members, is recovering at home from light injuries.

"It appears certain," one Iberia pilot said, "that Lopez Barranco on seeing the DC-9 on the runway, slammed at the accelerator desperately trying to lift the nose of his Boeing and avoid the other plane."

Jose Antonio Silva, a member of Aviaco's board of directors and a pilot himself, said the collision might not have occurred if the runways had a signal system of multicolor lights, like many large airports. The Madrid airport, he said, relies on written signs to inform pilots about the status of various runways.



AP Laserphoto Map

Alejandro Barrio, a member of the Spanish labor union of Spanish Aviation Pilots, also claimed a lack of proper signalization could have been a determining factor in the collision.

The airport has no ground radar, and experts say landings and take-offs are visually monitored.

"In 1977, following the collision in Santa Cruz de Tenerife ... we asked the central administration to provide our major airports with modern radar systems. They said that would be done in one year. We are still waiting," Barrio said.

Posing with their son Matthew are Thomas, center, and Syndey Goltz of El Paso, Texas. Mr. and Mrs. Goltz are among 42 passengers who survived Wednesday's collision of two airliners on a fog-shrouded runway at a Madrid airport.

Mechanic faces two-year prison term for cocaine possession

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

A 30-year-old motorcycle mechanic suspected of dealing in drugs was meted a two-year prison sentence and was fined $5,000 by a 142nd State District Court jury which had found him guilty of possession of cocaine.

The defendant, Dempsey Foy "Jack" Porter, could have been sentenced up to 20 years in prison and fined $10,000 for the offense.

"I'm pleased with it, very pleased," Janet Copeland, co-prosecutor, said of the verdict late Wednesday following the two-day trial.

Co-defense attorney Sandy Torres said the seven-man, five-woman jury "deliberated fairly and took their time about it."

The jury took about 25 minutes to find Porter guilty of the offense but deliberated about 1½ hours before settling on punishment.

"I can't say I'm ever pleased with someone going to prison, especially in a crime like this," Torres said. "There was no violence. No one got shot. I'm real pleased with the jury. I think they did a helluva job."

Porter, who faces three additional state indictments, was charged with possession of eight paper pouches — 7.2 grams — of cocaine, with possession of more than four ounces of marijuana, and with delivery of marijuana to a Midland Police Department undercover narcotics officer at Porter's home at 119 N. Dewberry Drive last July 21.

Undercover agents testified they found three plastic bags of marijuana and a purple Crown Royal whiskey pouch containing the cocaine in two bedrooms in Porter's house. Police also confiscated six marijuana plants from the southside of the house.

An undercover agent testified that police seized six firearms "in various areas" of Porter's house but later returned them and found razor blades which could have been used to "manicure" (cut and combine) the marijuana and cocaine.

The agent said the street-sale value of Porter's marijuana could range from $60 to $90 per ounce but that stronger, higher-grade marijuana could sell for up to $120 per ounce. "It depends how strong it is," he said. A gram of cocaine reportedly has an underground value between $100 and $150.

Dr. Burgess Cooke, a Texas Department of Public Safety chemist in Midland, testified the cocaine he tested was 34 percent pure. He said he did not know what was used for filler.

Shortly after the jury returned its verdict, co-defense counsel Gayle Newman Shackelford indicated she might appeal the verdict.

Co-prosecutor David Joers told Judge Pat Baskin that he has not decided how the state will dispose of the other cases against Porter.

Board will decide whether to replace trustee Hopper

The Midland Independent School District Board of Trustees is expected to decide in executive session at Tuesday's meeting whether or not to appoint a replacement for trustee Gary Hopper.

Hopper was killed Nov. 26 at Midland Regional Airport in a plane crash in which eight people died.

"The board has authority to appoint a replacement," Superintendent Dr. Joe Baressi explained. "We don't need to hold a special election. After consulting with the attorney in Austin, in his opinion we aren't required to (make an appointment), since the elections are just three months away."

Trustees today will conduct a public meeting at 7 p.m. in the San Jacinto Junior High School auditorium, 1400 N. N St., to discuss a proposed junior high boundary change.

The proposal passed on first reading calls for the transfer of about 160 children bound for Goddard Junior High to San Jacinto over a two-year period. It affects those students in the Fannin Elementary/Midland High attendance area and those riding Goddard rural bus routes 6, 9, 30, 68, 77, 58, 10 and 14. Those routes are to the south and southeast of Midland, east of Lamesa Highway and north of Loop 250, and east of Fairgrounds Road and north of Highway 80.

In other business, a hearing before a Texas Education Agency hearing examiner has not been rescheduled. The suit concerns the attempted annexation of 4,000 acres of land in west Midland County into the Ector County school district. Baressi said he hoped it would be set for later this month.

MC golfer has rare ear surgery

DENVER (AP) — Lip-reading and close observation helped Scott Anagnostelis do a lot after an infection destroyed his hearing when he was 7.

Now 20, the Midland College student and member of the golf team, wanted more, though, so Wednesday he underwent a relatively rare operation intended to help him hear many of the sounds his friends and family take for granted.

Anagnostelis, from Albuquerque, received a cochlear — inner ear — transplant that will convert sound waves to electronic signals which will be carried to the auditory nerve to the brain.

A "receiving" coil was imbedded under the scalp behind his left ear and a thin wire threaded into his coclea, or inner ear. An external wire will connect that coil with a microphone about the size of cigarette pack that can be slipped into a shirt pocket.

Anagnostelis still won't be able to understand speech clearly, but he should be able to hear other sounds like footsteps, bird sondgs and traffic noises, said Jerome Alpiner, director of Porter Hospital's speech and hearing department.

The implant was the first performed at Porter, Alpiner said. Only about 250 have been done nationally, he said.

When Anagnostelis returns to Denver for a 12-day training session in two months, he will be taught to reinterpret sounds he last heard at 7, before meningitis ended his hearing.

Shriners invite community to Christmas parade

Children of all ages are invited to the second annual Shriners Christmas parade, which will begin at 10 a.m., Saturday at the intersection of Golf Course Road and Andrews Highway.

Bands, clowns and floats will congregate at 9 a.m. at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ. They will travel down Andrews Highway, cross Wall Street and end at Dennis the Menace Park, according to Shriner spokesmen who held a news conference Wednesday.

Four bands, including the Midland High School group and three junior high school contingents, will provide the music and tempo for the event.

At least 80 entries are expected to join the procession through town, during which clowns will pass thousands of balloons to children. The total number of entries will not be determined until parade day.

"We're hoping that the community turns out," said Gus Hicks. "We're taking on an undertaking we don't know a whole lot about, but we're learning year by year." A few years ago, the Chamber of Commerce failed to organize and sponsor the event.

"It's a hassle, but not an undue hassle," said Hicks. "We feel it's worth it or we wouldn't be doing it."

The Shriners' key function is to help children throughout the country, specifically at hospitals where the youngsters can receive treatment.

Persons wanting more parade information or knowing of a child the Shriners could help may call 697-1755 or 694-2356.

Institute announces plans to build museum on UTPB

By PATRICK DEAREN
Staff Writer

ODESSA — With the receipt of a $400,000 donation, the Art Institute for the Permian Basin announced plans at a Wednesday press conference for construction of an art museum on The University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus.

The building, which will consist of 11,000 square feet, will have a total cost of slightly more than $1 million, according to Doris Breaux of the Art Institute.

Groundbreaking is expected sometime next spring with completion anticipated for the fall of 1984.

The facility will be situated on the southeast corner of the UTPB campus on land leased to the institute in a recent agreement between the two institutions.

The $400,000 donation came from Houston Endowment, Inc. of Houston, which is a major contributor to Texas higher education.

The check was presented on behalf of the Endowment to Beth Gerst of the institute by Louis Rochester, chairman of Murphy and Rochester in Odessa.

Houston Endowment, noted Rochester, has "contributed to the construction of the Globe Theater, supported the Midland-Odessa Symphony, the YMCA, and they recently gave a huge sum to supply Medical Center Hospital with a heart machine."

The donation raised the total amount contributed toward the building to more than $800,000.

Mrs. Breaux noted that $260,000 has been acquired over the years through arts and crafts shows, with such a facility always the ultimate goal of art supporters.

"It's taken us about eight years to get going on it," she said. "Any money in excess of $1 million will be an endowment that will go toward the operation."

Mrs. Breaux noted the facility "will give us something in Odessa for the community to have to enjoy not only fine arts, but also educational facilities that go along with it and art seminars."

The building will include a gallery, in which will be displayed the works of persons throughout the United States, workshops and a lecture hall.

Midland livestock buyer charged

Washington Bureau

WASHINGTON — A Midland livestock buyer has been charged with breaking a federal law that protects cattle sellers against debts by such businessmen, the U.S. Agriculture Department said today.

Alan L. Croy, who operates under the name A.C. Cattle Co., allegedly violated the federal Packers and Stockyards Act by purchasing livestock without a surety bond that would compensate sellers in the event he reneged on credit agreements.

If the civil charge is proven, Croy's license to buy livestock could be suspended and he could be assessed a penalty of up to $10,000 for each day he operated without the required license, according to Al Sylvester, an Agriculture Department spokesman.

Sylvester said the department will hold a hearing on the allegation in Midland, but no date has been set.

Department officials discovered the alleged violation after conducting a routine examination of livestock transaction records for the Midland area, he said.

Fantasy often overshadows holiday's real meaning

Why should there be a melancholy taint to this jolly gift-giving season? But there is.

It's a season of fantasy, delightful fantasy, especially if you tone down the Jesus Christ angle of this season's namesake: Christmas. That's been pretty well done with the enterprise of the secular world and with the amiability of elements of the ecclesiastical world. Both sometimes cast Santa and Christ into the grand Mixmaster and come up with a diluted puree. Nobody knows exactly what it is.

If the hearts of little children and their elders were really filled with the worship of the Christ child, then there would be little room in their hearts for that myth who rides on a flying sleigh, drops down millions of chimneys throughout much of the world, leaves his gifts for the "good little boys and girls," munches on a few cookies and downs a glass of milk while his reindeer await on the snow-covered house top.

It's a make-believe scenario designed to bring joy to children, to delight their parents and grandparents and to create bountiful profits for the manufacturers and retailers who play the role of Santa Claus's helpmates, the elves.

It's a fairy tale, of course. It's a game of let's pretend. Often, though, the naive child is unaware of the pretense. The magical season thrills the child. How better could a little one be honored than to have a benevolent bearded fellow from the far-away North Pole pay the child homage and ask for nothing in return but goodness?

There's a certain symbolism even to that.

And when the child finally detects or is told by his playmates, parents or siblings that the Santa Claus tale is just a story line, there's a certain disillusionment. Sometimes there are tears of disappointment.

But the story continues and is passed down from generation to generation as if it were a folk story; maybe it is.

It's a delightful fantasy which, despite the flashes of altruism amid the commericalism, comes in a sad season.

Why should it be?

By tradition, the Yuletide marks a gathering of families, an exchange of gifts out of love and friendship, or, perhaps, out of duty, obligation and habit. Santa Claus may or may not be "in" the festive occasion, and the Nativity may be overlooked.

The sadness, which seems to evolve after the child has put away childish things and enters the adult world of even more disillusionments, often comes out of nostaglia.

It's a time of remembrance when loving people, no longer among the living, are into the past. Your heart cries. Be glad, though, that you can weep.

White announces job program for veterans

AUSTIN (AP) — State and private officials will work together to find permanent jobs for 50,000 Korean and Vietnam unemployed veterans, Gov. Mark White announced.

White told a Wednesday news conference the new state program would be financed by the recently adopted federal Emergency Veterans Job Training Act.

"Although we cannot put all 50,000 unemployed Korean and Vietnam veterans to work we can take advantage of these federal funds to encourage Texas companies to hire and train as many veterans as possible," White said.

Under the program, financed from $150 million appropriated by Congress, Texas business would be reimbursed up to $10,000 for the cost of hiring and training long-term unemployed veterans.

Veterans out of work at least 15 weeks are eligible.

White stressed that the $150 million in the federal Emergency Veteran's Job Training Act will be destributed to the states on a first come, first served basis.

The governor also told the news conference he was still prepared to call a special legislative session, primarily for a teachers pay raise and public school improvements, but not until he gets recommendations from the Select Committee on Public Education and the backing of the state House and Senate.

"I'm prepared to call a special session just as quickly as we can to get the job done for improving education in Texas," White said in reply to a published prediction from Comptroller Bob Bullock that despite numerous promises, White would not call the Legislature back to consider a teachers pay raise before the 1985 regular session.

Bullock, a member of the blue-ribbon education study committee who has stated he is interested in a governor's race in 1986, said he did not think the committee would make its report until late spring or early summer. As a result, Bullock told reporters, he did not think White would call a special session that close to the November 1984 general election.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros makes a point to former vice president Walter Mondale at a Democratic party fund raiser. Cisneros introduced Mondale as the man who "ought to be president."

Mondale campaigning for minorities' votes

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Former vice president Walter Mondale blamed the Republicans for cutting Hispanics out of mainstream politics and promised to invite minorities "into the government at all levels" if elected president.

Mondale, one of eight Democratic presidential candidates, spoke in Dallas before traveling to San Antonio for a $250-a-person fundraiser Wednesday night. He planned more campaigning in Houston today.

"I want to be the president that breaks the ice toward Hispanics," Mondale said. "Hispanic America is an enormous pot of gold for this country, if we'll just use it."

Mondale blasted President Reagan for "trashing" members of the Civil Rights Commission and then replacing them with Republican supporters.

"You don't give people equal rights. They're born with them," he said. "The president owes a responsibility to see that civil rights laws are enforced."

Mondale's campaign staff estimated that the candidate earned about $25,000 from the fundraiser at the home of Mexican food magnate Raul Jiminez Sr.

San Antonio Mayor Henry Cisneros, trailed everywhere Wednesday night by a crew from the television news program "60 Minutes", introduced Mondale as "the man who ought to be president."

Hispanics were on Mondale's mind in San Antonio — not surprising since the city is 57 percent Mexican-American — but world affairs occupied most of the former vice president's talk in Dallas.

Mondale told supporters there that the nation's "anxiety level" is rising daily, and urged Reagan to reconvene Congress to debate the country's policy in Lebanon.

"One of the serious questions facing our nation is the extremely exposed position of American troops in Lebanon," he said. "Every day their lives are exposed to danger."

The nation needs "a precise definition of what our policy is," he said, complaining that Reagan has failed to fully explain his plans for the peacekeeping force.

Two pilots indicted by grand jury

The two pilots who flew almost 1,000 pounds of Mexican marijuana into Midland last Nov. 8 were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury.

The pilots, Jerry Brian Macoy, 43, also known as Gregory Bryon Shelton, and George B. Bivens, 36, both of California, were indicted on four counts: conspiracy to import marijuana, conspiracy to possess the drug, importation of the contraband and possession with intent to distribute marijuana.

Each is being held in the federal section of Midland City Jail in lieu of a $1 million bond.

Macoy, owner of Western Jet, an aircraft management and charter company in Walnut Creek, Calif., and Bivens were arrested at Midland Air Park on the night of Nov. 8 after Macoy landed their twin-engine Beechcraft King Air 200 on a refueling stop. The aircraft, detected when it flew across the Mexico-Texas border west of Lardeo and failed to land for federal inspection, was trailed by a U.S. Customs Service aircraft dispatched out of San Antonio.

Macoy and Bivens have yet to be arraigned before U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton. Each is seeking a reduction of bail.

Evidence presented before U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith in a preliminary examination last month indicated that both defendants have drug-related convictions. Macoy was convicted of smuggling marijuana in a aircraft in 1974, and Bivens was sentenced to four years in prison in France on a 1974 hashish violation and to three years in prison in England on a similar conviction.

Prosecuting the case is Assistant U.S. Attorney Jim Bock of San Antonio. Defense attorneys are San Antonio lawyer Gerald Goldstein, who is representing Macoy, and California lawyer Dominick J. Franco, who is representing Bivens.

Investigators believe Lucas may have been involved in 30 more slayings

AUSTIN (AP) — Investigators from four states believe they may have 30 more slayings that may be traced to self-proclaimed mass murderer Henry Lee Lucas.

Law enforcement officials from Texas, Louisiana, Arkansas and Florida spent seven hours Wednesday at the Texas Department of Public Safety discussing 39 unsolved murders.

Afterwards, Col. Jim Adams, DPS director, said nine cases were eliminated "because of the time element or the place" or the details of the killings.

"In about 30 cases the modus operandi, time, place and other factors would indicate they could possibly have been committed by Lucas," said Adams.

He said Lucas will be interviewed by investigators assigned to those cases.

Before the closed-door meeting, Adams told reporters that the criminal justice system failed 23 years ago by not ordering Lucas' execution when he killed his mother.

Adams said he is afraid that the drifter who has confessed to more than 100 slayings could one day be returned to the streets.

"I would like to believe he will never be free on the streets again. But I would no more make that statement with certainty because I see too many examples where it just doesn't come about," said Adams.

In addition to discussing Lucas, officials from about 40 agencies traded information about Ottis Toole, a friend of Lucas now being held in Jacksonville, Fla. There was no report on this phase of the discussion.

Lucas has been sentenced to a life term and a 75-year sentence in two murders in Texas. He faces eight other murder charges in Texas, including four that could carry the death penalty.

Lucas was sentenced to 20 to 40 years in 1960 for killing his mother but was freed 10 years later.

He went back to prison on an attempted kidnapping conviction in 1971, but was freed in 1975.

Investigators at the Wednesday meeting were looking into cases dating back to 1975. Adams said Lucas has claimed responsibility for 120 slayings in 23 states.

Lucas is now held in the Williamson County Jail, where he is awaiting trial in the slaying of an unidentified hitchhiker.

Williamson County Sheriff Jim Boutwell said Lucas has talked freely with investigators who are looking for information on unsolved killings.

"He knows what his legal rights are. But he also knows he has the right to talk if he wants to. Fortunately, he's doing that," the sheriff told reporters.

Commission upholds firing of DPS trooper

AUSTIN (AP) — The Public Safety Commission has voted 3-0 to uphold the firing of a state highway trooper who claims that harassment by Department of Public Safety supervisors drove him to consider suicide.

James Wade of Vidor was taken off the DPS payroll in May after he refused a transfer from Beaumont to Garland, a transfer he argues was part of a campaign of harassment against him by Beaumont district DPS supervisors.

Wade, 38, appealed to the three-member commission on Nov. 30 to reinstate him with all back pay and benefits.

The commission rejected his appeal Wednesday without comment.

Wade, who also has filed an $18 million damage suit against certain DPS officials in federal court in Beaumont, testified before the commission that he was a respected officer without medical problems until he complained to his sergeant and his captain about what he said was a required quota of 10 traffic citations a day.

Now, he says, he has no job and suffers stress-related health problems.

DPS lawyer John West said the commission faced a simple case of a trooper's refusing to show up for duty at his new station.

Wade's lawyer, Harris Butler of Houston, said the DPS caused Wade's health problems, and he argued the transfer order to Garland was illegal.

Wade, a 15-year DPS veteran, is a candidate for sheriff of Orange County and has become licensed as a private investigator.

County judge MADD about lenient jurists

DALLAS (AP) — A county judge says that groups such as Mothers Against Drunk Drivers should "seek and destroy" jurists who are soft on drunken drivers.

County Criminal Court Judge Mike Schwille told a meeting of about 50 area law enforcement and highway officials that he's heard about lenient treatment of drivers, but would not name specific jurists.

"There's a whole bunch of judges down there (the Dallas County Courthouse) with a no-backbone problem," said Schwille, "when it comes to convicting and sentencing criminals, especially drunk drivers."

The law enforcement officials had met to promote an anti-drunken driving program called "Holidays Ahead."

Men indicted for illegal re-entry

Gilberto Marquez-Rico, 23, and Pablo Marquez-Rico, 29, both of Mexico, were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury in Midland for illegal re-entry into the United States.

They were arrested last October and had been deported in September 1982 for illegal entry into this country.

Man arrested on claims of unlawful medicine practice

DALLAS (AP) — Police say they arrested a 44-year-old man after receiving complaints that he was pretending to remove diseased lumps and internal organs without surgery.

The man was held for investigation of unlawful practice of medicine and released from Lew Sterrett Justice Center Wednesday night on $200 bond set by County Judge Ben Ellis.

Officers said they found about 40 people waiting for medical treatment in two rooms of the man's northside house, and found a sack of marble-sized pieces of meat and bottles of foul-smelling ointment.

Police said the man's arrest followed claims that he had pretended to remove a lump from a patient's throat by rubbing it, then held up a piece of meat and pronounced the patient cured.

Authorities frown on dental deal

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — County authorities are angry at a district judge for spending $1,290 of the taxpayers' money to transport a prison inmate here for dental work, but the judge says he was merely helping a "poor old lady" get her son's teeth fixed.

The county commissioners have fired off letters to all the district judges discouraging them from offering "preferential treatment" to prisoners at taxpayers' expense.

Commissioner Paul Elizondo estimated that it cost $1,290 to transport and house Henry Hernadez, 20, who is serving five years in the Texas Department of Corrections for aggravated assault.

Hernandez was transferred here for root canal surgery after his mother convinced State District Judge Tom Rickhoff that she would pay for the corrective dental work.

"It just surprises me that some district judges coddle criminals in this manner," Elizondo said. "He's still there in our jail. We don't need any more prisoners. We have enough of our own to take care of."

"Big deal," answered Rickhoff. "The poor old lady came to me to try to get her poor little son's teeth fixed. She offered to pay to have the teeth fixed, because TDC officials told her the teeth would be pulled.

"I was feeling sorry for the poor old lady and I wanted her to stop wandering through the county offices," he said. "And I was just tired of seeing her camped outside my courtroom all the time."

Rickhoff had sentenced Hernandez to five years in prison after the man pleaded guilty to aggravated assault with serious bodily injury in May 1982.

Consumers ringing in new year

LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

As deregulation moves into its final stages with barely a click for a busy signal, telephone marketers are battling for a share of shoppers' holiday dollars.

The phones come in every shape, style and price — from under $10 to over several hundred. The more you want your phone to do — and, in some cases, the longer you want it to last — the more you'll pay.

As a guide through the basics, the U.S. Office of Consumer Affairs is distributing "How to Buy a Telephone," a pamphlet developed in conjunction with the Electronic Industries Association. For a free copy, write to the Consumer Information Center, Dept. 76, Pueblo, Colo., 81009.

If you're planning only one phone — or buying your first one — pick a standard model that is sturdily built and easily repaired. Make sure replacement parts are — and will continue to be — available in your area.

The telephone should operate on DC (direct current), NOT on household electricity. You may also have to plug your phone into a regular electrical outlet to take advantage of all the special features, but the basic phone service shouldn't be dependent on that outlet. Be sure you can make calls during a general power outage — even if the dial doesn't light up.

Test the phone to see how it feels and sounds as well as looks. Is it easy to hold? Comfortable to dial? Is the ring adjustable? How does your voice sound to the person you're calling?

What sort of repair service will be provided? Can the phone be fixed locally or will it have to be sent to a factory service center? How long will repairs take and will you be given a loaner phone while you wait? How long does the warranty last and what are the repair charges after the warranty expires? Is there a flat fee for each repair or is the price based on the amount of time involved?

You will have to decide on either a pulse phone or a tone model. And don't let the pushbuttons be your guide; the older pulse models have rotary dials, but the newer ones have buttons, just like the tone styles.

The "tone" phones (Touch-Tone is the most common; it's a trademark of AT&T) create musical impulses when you dial. You must have this kind of phone — or at least an adapter — if you want to use the new long-distance services, bank-by-phone operations or most personal computer features.

No matter what kind of phone you buy — unless it is the one you already are renting — the Federal Communications Commission requires you to report certain information to your phone company. This includes the maker's name, the model number, the ringer equivalence number and the FCC registration number. (The equivalance number indicates how much ringing current your phone requires; if you have too many phones on the same line, you may not hear them ring. The registration number certifies that the phone won't damage the telephone network.)

Some of the newer phones are cordless; you can walk while you talk. These phones operate like two-way radios and consist of two parts — a base station which plugs into the phone line and an electrical outlet and a battery-powered handset. Short-range models operate up to 100 feet from the base station; long-range models go up to 1,000 feet.

'Tubasantas' won't blow appearance

BLOOMINGTON, Ind. (AP) — An Indiana University professor and 20 of his proteges are going to march on Washington on Dec. 15, and there's little doubt they'll be heard.

Or seen. When music Professor Harvey Phillips and his Tubasantas perform at the White House, they'll be dressed in Santa Claus suits.

"When you get a request like that you know you've made points," Phillips said. Ten years ago, when he conceived the idea of Tubasantas, his proposal to play Christmas carols in front of the White House Christmas tree was politely refused.

'Facial fuzz' takes over southern town

LAPLACE, La. (AP) — Men in this town had better grow beards or they'll land in jail — and they won't go to the jail, it will come to them.

Three-hundred of LaPlace's most prominent men have been asked to show up Dec. 11 in top hats and flashy beards, part of a contest celebrating the town's 100th anniversary.

The object is to get the men looking as much as possible like the people who lived here back in 1883.

Even St. Charles High School is full of facial fuzz, though it's generally forbidden for students at the Roman Catholic school.

"We're not supposed to have beards, but we thought that in the spirit of the centennial it would be nice," says Principal C.J. Tastet. He is growing a beard for the occasion, but his students have been told theirs will have to be shaved off by the time they come back from Christmas vacation.

Many aren't waiting that long. "I just didn't like it," said Kyle Bourgeois. "It kind of itched."

Those who still have beards will be judged — with the businessmen and politicians and anyone else who cares to join the contest — on Dec. 17. Judges will award trophies for best beards — including funniest and longest.

Later in the day, says centennial chairman Joe "Tardy" Lucia, a "jail" will be paraded through the streets in search of the beardless. Men without facial hair will get the choice of incarceration or a $25 "fine," which will help pay for the celebration.

Nostalgia has bumpy hearing

WINTER PARK, Fla. (AP) — Nostalgia may be fine for some, and they may support a plan to strip away the asphalt from streets in this Orlando suburb, revealing quaint bricks.

But, as for George Haddad, "It will be bumpy."

He wondered, "Why are they going back to the primitive way?"

Realists and automobile shock absorbers may not like brick streets, but many people love them, says Commissioner David Currie, as the commissioners scheduled a public hearing for Dec. 13.

Winter Park has many brick streets in its older neighborhoods, but at least 10 streets were paved before an outcry ended the practice years ago.

Much of the work will have to be done by hand because machines can chop up the uneven layer of brick beneath the asphalt, says public works director Joe Compton. And although three city employees know how to lay brick, finding more workers for big bricklaying jobs would be difficult.

Firefighters to dispense citations

SAN DIEGO (AP) — Starting next week, city firefighters will be taking on an extra chore — handing out citations to cars illegally parked in fire lanes and handicapped zones.

The parking laws have been on the books for years, but it wasn't until a City Council action earlier this year that firefighters were authorized to dispense the citations, says Fire Department Capt. Gerald Perkins.

Armadillo may carry leprosy

HOUSTON (AP) — The nine-banded armadillo, a critter held in affection and gustatory appreciation by many Texans, may be a primary source of leprosy, according to medical researchers at the Baylor College of Medicine.

Dr. John Wolf Jr. and Dr. Lee R. Lumpkin III, skin specialists on the Baylor faculty, said that a study of five leprosy patients suggests strongly that they all contracted the disease as a result of handing armadillos.

In a paper prepared for publication in the December issue of the Journal of the American Academy of Dermatology, the physicians said that although it is impossible to prove conclusively that armadillos spread leprosy to the five patients, "the evidence supporting such a conclusion is quite strong."

"The frequency and distribution of leprosy in armadillos in Texas and Louisiana, coupled with the development of leprosy among armadillo handlers, suggests that armadillos may well serve as a reservoir for the disease in this area of the United States," the paper said.

Wolf said in an interview that the five patients, all male, had a long history of intimate contact with armadillos. Four spent years catching, cleaning and eating armadillos and the fifth patient, a 17-year-old, has been chasing and wrestling armadilloss as a hobby for seven or eight years.

The doctor said all of the men had experienced cuts on their hands from handling armadillos and he said this would be an ideal way for the leprosy bacillus to be spread. The physician noted that all of the patients had lesions on their hands, the most common place to be cut by the tough shell of the armadillo.

Wolf said the findings of the study don't mean he would shun the lowly armadillo, considered by some to be a source of meat or recreation.

"My advice would be not to avoid armadillos, or to put bells around their necks, but simply to use common sense," he said.

He recommended the use of gloves while handling armadillos and that handlers should wash their hands frequently.

Leprosy, he said, poses little danger and "is a misunderstood disease."

"Many people think of it being highly contagious and a dreadful, incurable disease," said Wolf. "I think it is important to realize it is neither.

"It's actually rather difficult to get leprosy," said the doctor. "And it's a disease that is very readily treatable."

Few leprosy patients now require hospitalization, said Wolf. Most are treated with drugs and are permitted to live a normal life.

Wolf said most people seem to have a genetic immunity against leprosy. He noted the bacillus is also very fragile and is immobile (it has no means to move through the body of its host). The bacteria is killed by heat, such as in cooking, he said.

Wolf and Lumpkin said all wild armadillos found to have the disease have had the form called lepromatous. He said this indicates the disease moved into the armadillo recently since the species has not had time to build an immunity that would produce a less severe form of the disease.

Crops could survive

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government study concludes that a massive nuclear attack would not destroy the nation's capacity to grow food.

The Federal Emergency Management Agency says in the study released by Rep. Tom Harkin, D-Iowa, that livestock and poultry would be more likely to survive a bomb blast and radioactive fallout than human beings. Crop yields would be reduced by as much as 50 percent, depending on the time of year that an attack occurred, the study said.

The report concluded that "the land and the work force would be available even under the greatest calamity — nuclear attack." There would be no "severe" shortage of farm labor because rural residents would survive a nuclear attack better than city dwellers, according to the report, which was presented at a briefing for the White House Cabinet Council last year.

Harkin told The Washington Post in a story in today's editions that he found the report "shocking" and "disgraceful." Harkin began circulating copies of the report last week.

U.S. fighting crime

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government will wage a "war to the end" against organized crime, President Reagan says.

"We're in this thing to win," the president told 117 U.S. attorneys Monday. "There will be no negotiated settlements, no detente with the mob."

Reagan appointed a crime commission last summer to investigate the mob and conduct regional hearings. The group, headed by U.S. Circuit Judge Irving R. Kaufman of New York, is to make its recommendations in 1986.

nation in brief

Washington's giant female panda, Ling Ling, sits in the corner of her cage at the Washington National Zoo Wednesday morning. A zoo spokesman said the panda's red blood count was 10, compared to 39 for Hsing Hsing, the zoo's male panda.

Chances poor for Ling-Ling

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chances are very poor that Ling-Ling, America's female panda, will recover from kidney failure and anemia, National Zoo specialists say.

"She's very sick right now, and the illness and complications could lead to her death," Dr. Mitchell Bush, the zoo's chief veterinarian, said Wednesday.

He said Ling-Ling is being treated with antibiotics and may undergo short-term kidney dialysis. Bush said Ling-Ling's illness might have been caused by her long-awaited pregnancy. Last July, she gave birth to a cub, the first panda to be born in the United States. The cub died three hours later.

Hsing-Hsing, the zoo's male panda and Ling-Ling's reluctant mate, is healthy and in no danger of contracting her illness.

Condor future flying high

VENTURA, Calif. (AP) — The future is looking brighter for the threatened California condor with the number of captive birds rising from one to nine in 1983, "a really good year for the condor," an Aububon Society official says.

The upbeat analysis Wednesday came from spokesman Dick Beamish, despite a report by the society that the tiny wild flock of condors had declined in 1983, from 21 to 18.

Audubon biologist John Ogden, co-director of the Condor Recovery Program, said one bird was captured, one died and one disappeared.

Transit workers end strike

DETROIT (AP) — Bus service to about 35,000 commuters will be restored by Friday, officials said, as a week-long bus strike ended with approval of a new contract by United Auto Workers union members.

Members of UAW Local 417 voted 100-3 Wednesday to ratify the three-year pact reached with the Southeastern Michigan Transportation Authority, spokeswoman Gail Whitty of the authority said.

Teen faces charges in fire

BOSTON (AP) — A 19-year-old man faces arson charges in a wind-whipped fire that burned a section of a crowded tenement, where residents escaped only after two policemen on a burglary call raised an alarm.

More than 20 people safely fled Wednesday from three-story apartment buildings in East Boston near the Porter Furniture Building. One fireman suffered a back injury.

The fire was discovered by two police officers on a burglary call who turned on their siren and pounded on doors to alert residents.

Ex-chairman in kickback scheme

NEW YORK (AP) — The defunct Frigitemp Corp.'s former chairman has admitted being involved in a scheme to pay $2.7 million in kickbacks to two General Dynamics Corp. executives, prosecutors say.

Gerald E. Lee, 57, said Wednesday the scheme was set up to secure $45 million in subcontracts to Frigitemp for insulation work on tankers and Navy submarines built by General Dynamics at Quincy, Mass., and Groton, Conn.

Lee, one of four people indicted by a federal grand jury on Sept. 6, agreed to testify as a government witness, said Assistant U.S. Attorney David W. Denton. In return, prosecutors will tell his sentencing judge about his cooperation.

Justice Department criticized

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department under the Reagan administration's guidance is doing a poor job of protecting people in mental hospitals, nursing homes and other institutions, two former government lawyers say.

Robert Plotkin and Timothy M. Cook, testifying at a House hearing Wednesday, strongly criticized the lack of lawsuits filed by the administration under 1980 legislation designed to protect residents of mental hospitals, nursing homes, retardation facilities, juvenile centers and prisons.

They said the Reagan administration preferred to negotiate weak, voluntary settlements that failed to prevent abuses of residents and inmates and permitted continued operation of overcrowded firetraps.

Dialysis centers laying off

WASHINGTON (AP) — Independent kidney dialysis centers are being forced to lay off employees as a result of dialysis rates designed to encourage home treatment, a lawyer says.

But the government on Wednesday told U.S. District Judge Joyce Hens Green that the system is keeping costs of the federal program down without threatening independent health care suppliers or patients.

The National Association of Patients on Hemodialysis and Transplantation, Inc. and the Renal Physicians Association are seeking to have the government's new rates thrown out.

Midland Lee's "Four Bricks of Gold" have helped keep Rebel opponents out of the endzone this year. They are, front to back, end Eddie Kittle, tackle Carlos Ortega, tackle Pat Stevens and end Nicky Tomlin. The next test is Plano Saturday at 2 p.m. in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Not since China built its famous wall has security had the same meaning.

Now it's the "Four Bricks of Gold" who form an impenetrable wall for Midland Lee's semifinal quest against Plano at 2 p.m. Saturday in Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

Most coaches feel it is defense that wins football games, and when you have names like Eddie Kittle, Nicky Tomlin, Pat Stevens and Carlos Ortega lined up on your defensive front, Allstate couldn't give better protection.

"I'm really proud of our defensive line this year," said Lee's defensive line coach Eddie Wolski. "We felt like we could win this year if we could dominate the line of scrimmage and I think we have done that. These kids are so close and talented and have such good work habits that you don't have to do much coaching."

OPPONENTS HAVE had trouble moving through or around this crew. Odessa Permian, owning its most potent offensive attack in history, was held to a mere 12 yards rushing in the quarterfinals last weekend in Lubbock. The "Four Bricks" were a major reason.

Kittle and Tomlin hold down the fort at the two defensive end slots while Ortega and Stevens do a lot of dirty work inside at the defensive tackle positions. These are jobs that take grit and determination — definitely not for the weak of heart and soul.

Kittle is the veteran of the bunch, having started some last year. He has turned in interceptions in the last two games.

"Kittle is our two-year starter at Lee. He has seen so many plays that he knows where the ball is going to be. Lee has had a tradition of good defensive ends and Eddie grew up watching those people play. He has continued the tradition," said Wolski.

"It's been a fun year and I think we are close in the defensive line," said Kittle. "We know we have to be ready every week and we have been for the most part."

TOMLIN IS the team "crazy." He's always ready to play football. "Let's play ball, coach," is Tomlin's daily cry.

"Nicky just loves to play football," said Wolski. "He goes hard every play and you can see him running all over the field. I don't think he can sit still for any length of time.

"The ends are close and they help each other out every day. It's a team situation. They take care of one another."

Tomlin said, "I play the weak side and Eddie plays the strong side. The strong side is harder to play. I just have to get after it."

Stevens and Ortega are transfers. Stevens came to Lee from South Houston and Ortega from Big Spring. Those moves helped make Lee what it is today.

"You don't get transfers like these every day, I guarantee you," said Wolski.

"Stevens has great strength and is able to control the man in front of him. He and Carlos are real close and are always slapping each other on the back during the games and practices. They have a lot of pride. The only time I have trouble with these two is when I try to take them out of a game for a rest."

Stevens and Ortega are known as "Double Trouble." They have been murder on passing situations this year and there are quarterbacks across the state who can vouch for that tagline.

"We all get along very well," said Stevens. "It's a team game and you have to pull for each other. There's no room for jealousy."

WOLSKI SAYS Ortega "savvies the pass rush. He has a nose for football and has gotten a lot quicker since he moved into the starting role around the fourth week of the season."

Ortega was ineligible the first few games due to a district transfer ruling. "I thought my season would never start," said Ortega. "I'm just now getting the point where I've played a full season."

Has this golden group had any shortcomings this year? The answer was a unanimous "yes."

"We can almost take the blame for the loss to Cooper. We had too many blown assignments. I know I didn't play well in that game and we don't want that to ever happen again," said Stevens.

"We blew it against Cooper," said Tomlin. "But you don't ever have to worry about that happening again. We'll be ready and we only have to be ready two more games."

When fresh troops are needed, Lee has a lot of help for Wolski to call on. David Jackson, who has been troubled with a bad ankle a lot this season, has played at both end and tackle. Tackle David Golden started the first three games and has proven to be a strong player. Randy Ellis was a key in last week's Permian game when Lee dropped into a five-man front. Ellis played nose guard and spent the afternoon in the Permian backfield. Jackson was used at nose guard in the first Permian win and those are the only two times Lee has used the five-man front this year.

"They all compliment each other with strength and quickness," said Lee assistant coach Larry Tate. "They all work so hard in practice, and if a kid works in practice, he's going to work hard in a game."

It is hard work in the defensive line, but this crew seems to be able to handle the chore.

The Lee defense rests its case.

Ward now a Ranger

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Former Minnesota Twins outfielder Gary Ward contends that his trade to the Texas Rangers was racially motivated, according to published reports.

Ward, an All-Star outfielder, was among four black players who finished last season on the Twins' 25-man roster. The others were Darrell Brown, Ron Washington and Al Williams.

"I was wrong ... I realize it now. I feel quite differently now. Once you get started in the regular season, it's a whole new ballgame. When I told you last summer there didn't seem to be an awful lot of difference, I didn't know what to expect. My mind was cluttered. I was getting worse instead of better. It has not been an easy year." — Denver Quarterback John Elway, the No. 1 draft choice in last year's draft, who once said he didn't notice much difference between college and professional football, now sees things differently.

Cinderella Badgers keep rolling

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

When the McCamey Badgers resume their Cinderella season Friday night in Sweetwater against unbeaten Boyd, the script may change a little.

That's because the chariot that got the Badgers to the ball may not be there. No, quarterback Ray Zarate hasn't turned into a pumpkin, but the inspirational leader of the Badgers is nursing a sore foot. Consequently, the hero of McCamey's 13-12 comeback regional playoff victory last week against Morton won't practice this week.

Zarate, the 5-10, 147-pound senior sparkplug for McCamey, had one of his best efforts in the rain and fog of Andrews last Friday. Zarate gained 81 yards rushing against the Indians, scoring on a 37-yard run to give McCamey the lead at 7-6. Zarate kicked the extra point as well. Then, in the fourth quarter with only 1:21 remaining, Zarate eluded a heavy rush long enough to hit split end Steve Brown with the winning touchdown, a 32-yard strike that propelled McCamey to Sweetwater.

BADGER COACH Buster Leaf will start junior Heath Stephens if Zarate cannot answer the bell Friday. Stephens has played a lot, but not at quarterback. "He's going to be our quarterback next year," Leaf said, "He's done everything that Ray's done this year. He's got the same workout experience but not much game experience."

Leaf doesn't plan on making any radical changes in the Badger attack, however. "We're not going to alter our game plan," he said. "For us to be successful, our defense has to be successful. Our coaches are very defensive-minded. Our whole philosophy has been to play good defense."

That the Badgers have done, especially under the gun in the playoffs.

In the Badgers first playoff game against Marfa, turnovers and defense set up three fourth quarter scores as the Badgers broke open a close game to win 40-19.

Against Farwell, the Badgers used two big plays to score 14 points in the second quarter, then let the defense take over. The result was a 14-6 win. A week later, McCamey shut down Haskell 13-3, and last week the defense rested only after the game had ended.

Boyd, 13-0-1, is one of four unbeaten teams left among AA semifinalists. "Of the four teams left, three are undefeated and we're not," joked Leaf. The Badgers' 11-3 mark only emphasizes the Cinderella aspect. McCamey has had to win in each game since a 7-0 loss to Wall eight weeks ago. Now, the Badgers are on a seven-game streak entering the state semifinals.

Boyd's veer offense is paced by senior quarterback Billy Tolivar. "He is a dandy," said Leaf. "He's the ideal quarterback for the veer offense. He's a real intelligent kid who very seldom makes a mistake. He's an extremely gifted young man athletically and he's got a lot of poise and maturity."

To top things off, the veer hasn't been used against McCamey this year. "We have not faced the veer. The game will come down to whether or not we can tackle their quarterback," Leaf said.

THINGS SEEM to be happening pretty quickly for the unheralded Badgers in 1983.

"We were picked to finish fourth or fifth in the district (8-AA)," said Leaf. "It's really phenomenal. Here it is December and we're still playing. It's a dream, really unbelievable. I think I had high expectations, and I believed they could do a lot of things."

Leaf is in his first year at McCamey, and at this rate could probably be elected mayor soon. But even he never expected the Badgers to be a win away from the state championship game. "To go this far, to be honest, was beyond anyone's imagination."

If the Badgers keep up the dream Friday, Leaf won't need anybody to pinch him to see if he's asleep. Leaf and the Badgers are for real.

Tall City tourney up for grabs

By BRUCE CASTLEBERRY
Sports Writer

Trying to pick a winner in this weekend's Tall City Girls Basketball Tournament is a little like playing hide and seek.

The problem is, nobody is hiding, but eight teams are seeking to win the tourney. This year's field has so much balance, however, that nobody seems to know who's going to take home the bacon.

"I may have some weird ideas, but I don't think there's any clear cut favorite. They're all good teams," said Midland Lee coach Shirley Stephenson. The field features Lee and Midland High, along with District 4-5A entrants Big Spring and San Angelo. Filling out the field are Greenwood, Pecos, Del Rio and Bel Air.

Stephenson's counterpart, MHS coach Jane Young, agrees for the most part, but says Lee might be the likely choice to win. "I'm not eliminating us," said Young of her Lady Bulldogs. "But they're the best of those I've seen. They aren't tall but they've got good shooters and speed.

"Greenwood is good, they've improved a lot," Young continued. "San Angelo is pretty good, Bel Air went to the regional finals last year. Four of the teams in this tournament were in the playoffs last year."

Lee, at 5-2, fared well in the Amarillo Tournament last week, winning twice and losing one. What is more significant, however, is the fact that Lee was without leading scorer Felicia Farias (21.0 ppg), who had to take a college entrance exam. And Stacy Harmon, another Lee regular, missed most of the tournament after an ankle injury sidelined her in the first game.

Because of this, Stephenson downplays Lee's fast start. "I don't know if records are indicative of a team's strength," she said. "Each game is that game at that time. It's who does best at that time. A team might come out of the pre-season 12-0, but it depends on who they've played that makes their record. I think that on a given day anybody can beat anybody.

"Sometimes it's a little harder," laughed Stephenson.

BEL AIR, who lost in the Regional finals last year, also beat Lee last year by a point in the tournament. Lee opens with them Friday at 5 p.m.

MHS, 5-4, got back on the plus side of the win column with a 56-47 win over Klondike Tuesday. Young has a somewhat silmilar approach to records and the pre-season contests as does her sister, Stephenson. "You can get too hung up on them," said Young, "but they're nice to have."

MHS has had a roller-coaster year thus far, largely due to the new faces in the purple and gold. "We're getting better all the time. I feel like we're coming along. We play good defense and hustle down the court, we just don't have a good shooting percentage. The shots just aren't falling for us."

Midland High opens play in the TC tourney Friday against Pecos at 6:45 p.m.

Other opening round games are San Angelo and Del Rio at 1:30 p.m., and Greenwood against Big Spring at 3:15 p.m. The Tournament opens Friday at Midland College's Al Langford Chaparral Center.

BOTH LEE and MHS are gearing towards the district slate, which is just around the corner and opens Dec. 19.

Lee, according to Stephenson, is on schedule for district play. "I worry about injuries," she said. "If we stay healthy we can be competitive. We don't have a whole lot of height but I think we're getting as much mileage as we can. They're a very competitive team and they give all they can."

NBA execs meet refs

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association and its locked-out referees union, unable to reach a contract settlement since the officials' contract expired Sept. 1, met for the first time with a federal mediator Wednesday.

The mediator, Ed McMahon of Washington, and the two sides in the dispute agreed not to comment on what was discussed in the 3½ hours of talks, NBA spokesman Alex Sachare said.

Sachare added that more talks would be held Thursday.

Richie Phillips, executive director of the union, said before the talks that the largest stumbling block to a settlement is back pay. He contended that since the union referees have been prevented from working at exhibition and regular-season games since Oct. 1, they're entitled to lost salary.

Milwaukee bucks Rocket rally, 103-101

By The Associated Press

MILWAUKEE — Sidney Moncrief scored 22 points and Junior Bridgeman added 20 to rally Milwaukee to a 103-101 victory over the Houston Rockets, extending the Bucks' winning streak to six games.

Houston, which had trailed by as many as 14 points in the game, had gone up 88-84 on Lewis Lloyd's dunk with 10:14 left in the game. The Bucks charged back to an 89-88 lead with 8:10 to go on two free throws by Paul Pressey and a free throw and followup shot by Moncrief.

The lead changed hands six times over the next seven minutes. The last tie in the game was at 100-100 on Moncrief's two free throws with 1:04 to go.

Milwaukee, 13-6 and undefeated in nine home games this season, also got 18 points from Johnson and 14 apiece from Pressey and Lister.

The Rockets, dropping their third straight game to go 7-13, were led by Lloyd with a game-high 26 points. Sampson added 23 points, Robert Reid 14 and James Bailey 13.

Bullets 114, Mavs 112

DALLAS — Jeff Ruland, who led all scorers with 35 points, backed in for a turn-around layup with 24 seconds left to give Washington a one-point lead to help the Bullets take a 114-112 victory over the Dallas Mavericks.

It was the Mavericks first home loss this season.

The basket by Ruland, who also had 13 rebounds, topped a Bullets' comeback that erased a 110-105 Dallas lead with 2:55 to go.

The loss was the second straight for Dallas, which remained on top of the Midwest Division at 13-6, 11-1 at home.

Utah 116, Portland 111

SALT LAKE CITY — Adrian Dantley scored 32 points and Rickey Green added 23 and handed out nine assists to give the Utah Jazz its fifth straight victory, a 116-111 triumph over the Portland Trail Blazers.

Portland's Lafayette Lever converted a three-point play with 12 seconds left to leave the Blazers down 113-111 but Jeff Wilkins hit one free throw and Rich Kelley sank two to preserve the victory.

Clippers 106, Spurs 102

SAN DIEGO — Terry Cummings scored 23 points, including nine in the fourth quarter, to lead the San Diego Clippers to a 106-102 victory over the San Antonio Spurs.

NBA

The Clippers, raising their home-court record to 7-2 and their overall mark to 7-15, clipped out of a last-place tie with Phoenix with the victory.

The slumping Spurs, who have lost all 11 of their road games, dropped their third straight game and fell to 7-15 despite 34 points by George Gervin.

San Antonio center Artis Gilmore was hit accidentally in the eye by guard Derrick Smith in the first half and suffered a bruised pupil. Team doctors had no immediate word on the seriousness of the injury.

Celtics 100, Pacers 95

INDIANAPOLIS — Kevin McHale came off the bench to score 12 second-quarter points and lead Boston with 22 on the night as the Celtics topped Indiana 100-95, as the Pacers suffered their fourth consecutive loss and their ninth in 10 starts.

Boston, which has defeated Indiana in their last six meetings, took the lead for good 88-86 on a jumper by Larry Bird with 5:10 to play. The shot started a 10-4 Boston spurt that included a jumper and two free throws by McHale and Indiana never drew closer than three points.

Robert Parish had 21 points and a game-high 17 rebounds for Boston and Bird finished with 19.

Clark Kellogg, who had 20 points in the first half to give Indiana a 53-52 edge at the intermission, led all scorers with 25. Butch Carter scored 18 for the Pacers and George Johnson came off the bench to score 17, including a three-point shot that pulled Indiana to within 96-93 with 1:27 remaining.

Boston lifted its record to 15-6. Indiana, which has the league's worst record, fell to 4-15.

Cleveland 106, Atlanta 92

RICHFIELD, Ohio — World B. Free scored 21 points, and the Cleveland Cavaliers' bench contributed 56 points, as Cleveland defeated the Atlanta Hawks 106-92.

Cleveland raised their record to 7-14 with their seventh consecutive home court victory, while the loss made Atlanta 10-10 and 0-9 on the road.

Sixers 133, Nuggets 128

PHILADELPHIA — Moses Malone scored 30 points and pulled down 19 rebounds as the Philadelphia 76ers beat the Denver Nuggest 133-128.

Black Hills herd dwindles to 100

MOUNT RUSHMORE, S.D (AP) — For half a century, mountain goats roamed the Black Hills high country around the presidents' faces carved in Mount Rushmore.

The herd, which once was 300 animals, has dwindled to about 100, and biologists want to know why.

State game officials are trapping goats, tagging them and outfitting some of the shaggy white animals with radio transmitters in an effort to find out what makes the goats tick.

"We just don't know anything about goats," said big-game biologist Les Rice. "In comparison to other big game, very little has been done with goats."

Goats came to the Black Hills when the state brought six of them to Custer State Park in 1929. The goats escaped and headed for higher country around Harney Peak, the Cathedral Spires and the presidents' faces of Mount Rushmore.

Mountain goats normally live in the bare rocks above the timberline in their native haunts in the Rocky Mountain states, Canada and Alaska. The Black Hills aren't high enough to have a timberline.

"It's not at all what you would call typical mountain goat country," Rice said. "We're never going to have a huge population of goats."

When the goat population reached its peak in the 1960s, the state issued 25 hunting licenses a year. The hunt was reduced, then eliminated last year after biologists saw a dramatic decline in the herd, Rice said.

The goat herd could be dwindling because of pressure from people, disease, changes in the habitat, or a natural cycle, Rice said.

Beginning this spring, biologists have driven through the goat range five mornings a week to check traps and try to capture goats near the road.

Most visitors to the Black Hills don't even realize goats live there unless they see goats crossing the road, Rice said.

Tourists who stop along the road to view George Washington's chiseled profile at Mount Rushmore look puzzled when they see biologists peering through a powerful telescope at white specks on a nearby ridge.

So far, the researchers have caught 14 goats in nets baited with salt and another 13 with a gun that shoots a net, said Game, Fish and Parks biologist Ted Benzen. Nine goats now carry radio collars to help researchers find out where goats live and how they move, he said.

The first part of the study, planned for completion in 1985, will collect information on where goats live, how they travel, and how they reproduce and die naturally, Rice said.

"Once we've got the baseline data, we can start looking at the causes of the decline," Rice said. "The actual reason for the decline of the goats, at this time we don't know."

One thing already clear is that goats no longer live in the highest country at Harney Peak, once their main range, Rice said.

Dupree may miss '84 season, too

MISSION, Kan. (AP) — Marcus Dupree, the former star Oklahoma running back who transferred to Southern Mississippi this fall, apparently will have to sit out the 1984 football season.

A rules interpretation by the NCAA says Dupree will not be eligible until 1985, when he will have two years of eligibility left.

The interpretation was sought initially by the Metro Conference.

Athletic Director Roland Dale planned no further action. "Basically, we were asking them to interpret the rule for us. We were not asking for them to come up with something not in the book."

In order to use a term of required residence, the student has to be regularly matriculated in a regular term. The university catalog indicated that registration for the fall semester closed in early September. Dupree didn't start attending classes until about Oct. 20.

AVIATION IS FINE ART WHEN IT'S BY BILL PHILLIPS

"WELCOME HOME, YANK" by Bill Phillips $135
Signed and Numbered Limited Edition Print

The B-24 has been damaged on a mission. But it's back in friendly territory. A British Spitfire escorts it home over the English Channel, the white cliffs of Dover a welcome sight on the horizon. It's a dramatic moment. The planes are accurate to a rivet. The actual event is carefully researched. The composition, lighting and painterly qualities are the work of a master, Bill Phillips. "Welcome Home, Yank." It's just one of an entire collection of limited edition aviation art prints from The Greenwich Workshop.

Cubs, Padres, Expos swap five ballplayers

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — San Diego General Manager Jack McKeon came to baseball's winter meetings determined to deal and, although he needed some help to make the move, he came up with one of the trades he wanted Wednesday.

The Padres acquired three bright, young prospects — pitcher Craig Lefferts, first baseman Carmelo Martinez and third baseman Fritz Connally — from the Chicago Cubs in the five-player swap which sent Padres reliever Gary Lucas to Montreal and Expos starter Scott Sanderson to the Cubs.

Both Dallas Green of the Cubs and John McHale of the Expos agreed that McKeon's persistence had made the deal possible.

"I'm not sure John and I could have worked it out without him," said Green. "We were not that compatible."

Chicago had come to the meetings shopping for starting pitchers. Montreal's Sanderson filled that bill but the Expos were more interested in established relief help than the youngsters the Cubs were offering around.

Sister Marion Irvine of California is a 54-year-old nun who Sunday became the oldest person to qualify for the U.S. Olympic Trials.

Running nun, age 54, gets Olympic shot

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — She's the running nun, and that might not be so remarkable except that she is 54 years old, holds the world record for her age class in the marathon and she has become the oldest person ever to qualify for the U.S. Olympic Trials.

Sister Marion Irvine of the Dominican Sisters of San Rafael started running 5½ years ago when she "felt a need to use up some pent-up energy" and recalled her niece's efforts to get her to jog.

Now, the principal of San Francisco's Sacred Heart Elementary School runs 70 miles a week rain or shine and on Sunday she finished the 26-mile California International Marathon in 2 hours, 51 minutes, 1 second, breaking her own record in the women's 50-and-over class by more than eight minutes and qualifying for May's U.S. Olympic Trials in Olympia, Wash.

"Her performance was probably the greatest running performance by a woman over 50," said Marty Post, statistics editor of Runner's World magazine in Mountain View. "It's the equivalent of a man over 50 running a 2:18, which is 10 minutes faster than any man that age has ever run."

Ken Young of the Athletics Congress records committee said that the record time, expected to receive official certification in a few days, "makes her the oldest person ever to qualify for the Olympic trials."

Her coach, Kees Tuinzing of San Rafael, said he was not surprised about her success despite her late start. He said there are many people who never have trained but who have "the physiological potential just sitting there. It's going to show through, irrespective of age."

Sister Marion said she had been training for seven months to qualify for the Olympic Trials. When she crossed the finish line on Sunday, said her close friend and running partner, Lolly Hess, a nursing professor at the University of California, "she just burst out and said, 'I did it. I did it. I can't believe it. I did it.' And then she just let out a scream."

While the physical side of running may have been a breeze for Sister Marion, she did have to overcome some opposition from the Catholic Church, particularly about the scanty runners' outfits.

She said running is much more than just a physical experience. It is religious, spiritual. "It's a kind of harmonizing of the ... physiology with the environment," she said. "It's especially elevating and humbling at the same time.

"Running along a beach at sunrise with no other footprints on the sand you realize the vastness of creation, your own insignificant space in that plan, how tiny you really are, your own creatureliness and how much you owe to the Supreme Body, the God that brought all this beauty and harmony into being. The same thing can happen in national forest areas."

McEnroe meets Mats

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — John McEnroe, in a tuneup for Friday's semifinal match against Sweden's Mats Wilander, swept Australian Wally Masur 6-2, 6-1, 6-2 Wednesday in the $400,000 Australian Open tennis tournament.

"It's important that I serve well and attack him when I have a chance," the second-seeded McEnroe said, "because that's the way I need to be to play him in order to beat him on grass."

Wilander, seeded third, advanced to the semis with a 6-3, 6-4, 7-6 victory over defending champion Johan Kriek, a South African now living in the United States.

In the other semifinal it will be Ivan Lendl, a 7-6, 2-6, 6-1, 6-2 winner over fellow Czech Tomas Smid, against American grass court specialist Tim Mayotte in, who beat fourth-seeded American Eliot Teltscher 6-4, 6-2, 3-6, 7-6.

In women's play, top-seed Martina Navratilova of the United States moved into the semis against American Pam Shriver by beating Britain's Jo Durie 4-6, 6-3, 6-4 in a rain-delayed match. Durie won the opening set Tuesday before the rains came, Navritilova's first set loss since the Canadian Open last August. The other semifinal also in an all-American affair with Kathy Jordan facing Zina Garrison.

Hanlon leads Rangers past Caps

NEW YORK — Pierre Larouche, Mark Pavelich and Anders Hedberg scored power-play goals to help the New York Rangers defeat the Washington Capitals 7-5.

Washington entered the game with the best record in the league for killing penalties, but gave up goals to the Rangers in each of their shorthanded situations.

Washington jumped to a 1-0 lead at 2:25 of the first period when Doug Jarvis poked a loose puck past goaltender Glen Hanlon, who is now 7-0-1 at Madison Square Garden.

New York came back with its first two power-play goals to take a 2-1 lead. Larouche scored at 7:58 after taking a pass from Don Maloney, and 2:25 later, Pavelich picked up a loose puck and fired a 10-foot backhander past Capitals goaltender Pat Riggin, who is 0-7-1 as a starter this season.

Maloney extended the New York advantage to 3-1 at 12:40 when he fired home a 30-footer. Alan Haworth closed the gap to 3-2 for Washington with a 50-footer at 18:58.

New York outscored the Caps 3-2 again in the second period. Mike Rogers scored 22 seconds into the period and Swedish rookie Jan Erixon made it 5-2 at 5:25.

Devils 6, Jets 3

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Don Lever scored two goals while Mel Bridgman and Bob MacMillan each had three assists to lead the New Jersey Devils to a 6-3 victory over the Winnipeg Jets.

New Jersey scored twice in the first period before Winnipeg had its first shot on goal as the Devils stretched their unbeaten streak at home to four games and snapped the Jets' four-game undefeated string.

The Devils are 3-1-1 over the last five games and 3-3-1 since Tom McVie replaced Billy MacMillan as their coach Nov. 22. Their 5-21-1 record is still the NHL's worst. Winnipeg fell to 9-15-3.

North Stars 7, Red Wings 2

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. — Al MacAdam scored twice and rookie Brian Lawton had three assists as Minnesota skated past Detroit 7-2.

Blues 4, Maple Leafs 3

TORONTO — Left wing Jorgen Pettersson's goal with 7:30 remaining lifted the St. Louis Blues to a 4-3 victory over the Toronto Maple Leafs, for their first road triumph of the season.

Pettersson carried the puck into the Toronto zone on a two-on-one break and, using Toronto defenseman Jim Korn as a screen, whipped a high wrist shot past Leafs goaltender Mike Palmateer for his eighth goal of the season.

The Blues hadn't won in 13 previous attempts on the road and were the only NHL team without a victory in an opposition rink.

The work of St. Louis goaltender Mike Liut, especially in the first period, was the difference.

Chicago 4, Buffalo 2

CHICAGO — Darryl Sutter gave a virtuoso performance in a tough role as the Chicago Black Hawks posted a 4-2 victory over the Buffalo Sabres.

Sutter was matched with two new linemates, Steve Larmer and Steve Ludzik, because of injuries to his regular linemates, and won Tessier's praise for turning the situation to his advantage. Tessier also lauded goalie Murray Bannerman for keeping the Black Hawks in the game.

Oilers 5, Canucks 4

EDMONTON, Alberta — The Edmonton Oilers scored five unanswered goals — four in the final period — to rally for a 5-4 victory over the Vancouver Canucks.

With the Canucks leading 4-0, Edmonton's Mark Messier scored at 15:21 of the second period to start the comeback. Willy Lindstrom added two goals in the final period and Glenn Anderson and Ken Linseman one each for the Oilers.

Islanders 4, Kings 4

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Bryan Trottier triggered a four-goal barrage in the final period with two goals as the New York Islanders rallied to a 4-4 tie with the Los Angeles Kings.

Soviets expected to show

INGLEWOOD, Calif. (AP) — The Soviet Union's top sports official said today he "does not see any reasons" that would keep his country from participating in the 1984 Olympic Games in Los Angeles.

Speaking at a press conference after a week-long visit, Marat Gramov, chairman of the Soviet National Olympic Committee, said "a number of problems" have to be resolved before the final decision on Soviet participation will be made next May.

Neither he nor officials of the host Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee would amplify on what the remaining problems were.

Gramov headed a 13-member Soviet delegation that visited Olympic competition sites and held extensive talks with the LAOOC.

About 50 protesters marched outside the airport area hotel where the press conference was held, chanting for the Soviets to be banned from the Games in Los Angeles.

The Soviets, in the wake of the downing of a Korean Airlines jet, had withdrawn from some pre-Olympic competitions in Southern California earlier this year, and there had been speculation that they might boycott the Games.

Under the International Olympic Committee charter, all 154 countries recognized by the body must respond to their invitations to the Summer Games no later than June 2, 1984.

Peter V. Ueberroth, president of the LAOOC, said during the news conference that a protocol agreement between the committee and the Soviet Olympic group has been reached.

He said the accord was the "first step toward making all the preparations and arrangements for participation of the Soviet team" in the Games.

Gramov's impressions of Los Angeles seemed generally positive. In response to a question regarding a report in a Soviet publication that described Los Angeles as an "urban jungle," he said, "We did not get that idea."

Questions of security, considered to be one of the Soviets' main concerns during the Games, were referred to the LAOOC. Gramov explained that it is "an issue that must be kept confidential and I am not authorized to discuss those things."

The LAOOC will have state-of-the-art facilities to test athletes for drug use at the Games, and Gramov, asked about the recent steroid scandal, said: "Our attitude on doping is absolutely negative. Whenever we have an athlete using doping, we always disqualify them. The doping control must be very strict and very strict sanctions must be applied against those using doping."

It also was announced at the press conference that Soviet athletes will be housed at UCLA.

Your horoscope

By JEANE DIXON

Friday, December 9, 1983

YOUR BIRTHDAY TODAY: The English poet John Milton, author Joel Chandler Harris (the "Uncle Remus" stories) and the great clown Emmett Kelly, Sr. were born on this date. Also sharing your birthday: Dick Van Dyke, football's Dick Butkus, Redd Foxx, Kirk Douglas, Broderick Crawford, Speaker of the House Tip O'Neill and jockey Willie Hartack. Pursue one goal at a time in the coming months. Inspiration comes from within when the chips are down. Mate is eager to be a full partner. Show your appreciation. Higher-ups cannot be rushed. Remain calm and confident while awaiting their decision. A young person looks to you for guidance.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Keep others guessing while taking stock of your finances. Then, make your move. A friend's proposition is worth investigating. Keep your temper under control when disagreeing with a family member.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An older relative could force you to change your plans. Do not take anyone or anything for granted. Creative work brings the greatest satisfaction. A platonic relationship becomes more intense.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): A busy and stimulating work day lies ahead. Your personal appearance is in the spotlight. Avoid all forms of gambling. The sudden termination of a relationship will work to your advantage.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Creative enterprises should become easier. Ask loved ones to pitch and help with holiday tasks while you concentrate on artistic projects. You save money by learning how to make home repairs.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Push for the kind of results you know you are capable of achieving. Others are eager to jump on your bandwagon. Decline any invitation to travel long distances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A great day for engineers and those who work with computers. A real estate transaction could lead to larger profits. Romance continues to be happy. Work at keeping it exciting.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Learn to pace yourself so that you can complete all those tasks on your list. A project's success depends on your enthusiasm and efficiency. You develop better rapport with higher-up.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Someone shows real trust in you. Help small children learn to make choices. Study or travel will broaden your horizons. You discover new things about yourself. Count on romance being terrific!

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Your domestic responsibilities seem awesome at times. A talk with mate could clear the air. Speak from the heart. Listen to people with more experience. Romance can be tricky.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Use your energies wisely. Finish your work before leaving for the weekend. This may not be the time to make a commitment. Say "no" to someone who presses you too hard.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): People look up to you. Go ahead and talk to higher-ups about your workload. Take on only what you know you can handle. Loved ones want more of your time.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Your charm works wonders, providing you are not too obvious. A new romance gets off to a flying start this evening. Your doubts evaporate. Have a good time, but limit spending.

Movie makers go to Florida

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — When filmmakers shot "Jaws II" in northern Florida a few years ago, they spent $18,000 just for paint and brushes. Sales at a local lumberyard topped $200,000.

Filmmakers are perhaps America's richest and most sought-after tourists — they spend vast sums quickly without straining government services.

Florida is among the most successful states in luring movie productions from Hollywood by offering fresh scenery, lower costs and government cooperation.

"With the help of film directors and stars like Burt Reynolds, Florida has the potential to be the No. 1 site for filmmaking in the nation by the year 2000," said Florida Gov. Bob Graham, who worked last month on the set of Reynolds' new film "Stick" in Fort Lauderdale.

In 1982, budgets for films and television commercials shot in Florida exceeded $141 million, compared to about $49 million in 1978, according to state figures.

Part of Florida's success is attributed to actor-director Reynolds, who has a home in Florida and attended Florida State University at Tallahassee.

Others credit Florida's governor, who has pushed for increases in the state's film-promotion budget and traveled to Hollywood to woo the industry. This budget year, Florida's Motion Picture and Television Bureau will spend $430,000.

"The drive behind Florida's success has been Governor Graham, who is very convincing," said Tom Mount, former president of worldwide motion-picture production at Universal. "Plus, Florida is an excellent place to work."

"The quality of actors which we interviewed in Florida was equal to that which we found in Los Angeles and New York, for we cast in all three places," producers Paul Newman and Ronald Buck wrote Graham in May after filming "Harry & Son" in Florida.

Florida locations were considered for "The Right Stuff," but California won out, apparently because of interior scenes that were more economical to shoot on the West Coast, according to Ben Harris of Florida's motion picture bureau.

In 1981, some Miami-area parents and teachers complained that filming "Porky's," an irreverent look at 1960-era teen-agers and their sexual adventures, at a local school had interfered with regular activities. Despite the grumbling, the Dade County School Board voted unanimously a year later to allow filmmakers to return for a Porky's sequel shot under tighter controls.

CBS Software's bridge program, "Goren: Learning Bridge Made Easy," now available for Apple II and IBM personal computers, contains a feast for those wanting to improve their game. Besides ten random bidding quizzes and 75 declarer play hands, there are 25 hands covering defense. This is one. To simulate the computer display, cover up the East and South hands and decide how you would defend four hearts.

You have learned little from the auction other than that South has at least four hearts and 6 points. From your hand, it is obvious that you can expect at most one trick from partner. Therefore, your hand must produce three tricks if you are to beat four hearts. For that to happen, declarer must have the king of hearts so that you can score both the ace and queen. And your other trick will have to come from a ruff, so you lead your singleton club.

Declarer wins on the table and runs the jack of hearts to your queen. What now? If you decide that you have to find an immediate entry to your partner's hand, you shift to a diamond. Declarer wins, forces out your high trump, wins the spade return with the ace, draws the last trump and claims his contract.

Since you still have the ace of hearts, you know you can defeat the contract if partner has either the king of spades or ace of diamonds, so it is vital for you to attack spades first.

At trick three, you lead a low spade and dummy's ace wins. If partner signals with a low spade, you will later try to get to partner's hand with the ace of diamonds. But as the cards lie, partner will encourage with the nine of spades. Now you win the ace of hearts and return another spade. Partner takes the king and gives you your club ruff — down one.

Justice drops Aramco antitrust inquest

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, saying international oil companies no longer have the power or the incentive to control world oil prices, is ending a federal antitrust investigation which dates back to 1977.

The investigation was closed without any prosecution because "there is virtually no likelihood that a successful antitrust case could be brought," Assistant Attorney General William F. Baxter wrote in a 66-page report.

The decision, announced Wednesday, marked the third major antitrust case dropped by the Reagan administration. In January 1982, a 12-year-old suit against International Business Machines Corp. was dropped, as well as a 10-year-old case charging the nation's three largest cereal makers of monopolizing the market.

Baxter, head of the Justice Department's antitrust division, made the decision to drop the oil investigation. Attorney General William French Smith and Deputy Attorney General Edward C. Schmults, whose former law firms had represented oil companies, had removed themselves from the investigation.

THE INVESTIGATION began six years ago with requests for documents from seven U.S. oil companies and four foreign companies. It was subsequently narrowed to four companies that jointly own the Arabian American Oil Co., known as Aramco, which produces and markets crude oil from Saudi Arabia. The four Aramco partners are Exxon, Texaco, Standard Oil of California and Mobil.

The Saudi Arabian government objected to U.S. government demands in 1979 for documents from these companies and effectively blocked the turning over of the documents sought in the second request.

Baxter said he issued the report to "demonstrate both to the Congress and to the public that the investigation ended, not because of the Saudi government's objection, but because after careful analysis the division discerned no analytical or factual basis for pursuing possible antitrust action."

At a news conference Wednesday, Baxter added: "I concluded we had found nothing which justified the almost inevitable foreign policy costs of pushing this further." He said the costs might include "changing the tone of Mideast relations."

BAXTER SAID IT may have been possible before 1977 for the Aramco partners to have reduced Saudi oil production by enough to increase the world price of oil by 5 percent.

But, he said, the arrangements between the companies and Saudi Arabia had been altered and the world oil market had changed enough since then so that the companies could no longer control the world price of oil by manipulating Saudi production.

Baxter noted that before 1977, an increase in the world oil price of just 2.5 percent would have cost U.S. consumers more than $1 billion a year.

Since that time, however, Baxter noted, "the competitive concerns on which the investigation focused has ceased to be significant."

"I have concluded that the Aramco partners have neither the power nor the incentive" to manipulate Saudi production and "control over Saudi production alone may no longer be sufficient to affect the price of oil," he said.

BAXTER SAID HE also had found no evidence of any private agreements regarding crude oil production or prices between the companies.

Texaco said in a statement that it had "scrupulously adhered to the letter and spirit of U.S. antitrust laws" and welcomed "the action of the antitrust division in closing this 6-year-old investigation and thus clearing the air."

In earlier dismissing the IBM case, Baxter said it was without merit because events in the industry had so changed in the intervening years that there was no point in pursuing the civil suit.

The antitrust case against the cereal makers was dropped by the Federal Trade Commission after an administrative law judge ruled that the agency's antitrust lawyers failed to make their case. Kellogg Co., General Mills Inc. and General Foods Corp. had been charged operating a "shared monopoly" of the cereal market.

ASKED WEDNESDAY whether the fact that both the IBM and oil cases had been outpaced by world events concerned him about the antitrust division's ability to move quickly in complex cases, Baxter said, "One has to be concerned about that but it is not a major concern."

He said the division has no time problems in ordinary price-fixing cases, only in complex investigations.

"One can find that we are outrun by the world, but my personal solution is to go into such cases in a more focused way. I am enormously reluctant to do total industrial histories as the division has done occasionally in the past," he said.

Oil stocks look good

An Analysis

By DONALD C. BAUDER
Copley News Service

It's looking more and more like the international price of oil will remain relatively stable for the next few years, and politicians and bankers are doing handstands: That should buoy the Mexican economy and help bail out the big U.S. banks.

But investors should rejoice, too. If the international oil price stays stable or even recedes slightly, stocks of some big international oils look like very good bargains.

Some of the big international oil companies that buy crude in international markets benefit from a soft-to-stable oil price. Their stocks' yields are high and price-earnings multiples low.

Make no mistake, however: Energy conservation is here to stay. Even as the economy has picked up and travel has come back the last few months, the price of gas at the pump has dropped by more than four cents a gallon nationally.

Overall demand for petroleum has been rising month by month — but not as fast as the economy has been rising. Petroleum consumption rose 1.3 percent in the third quarter — but the total economy was expanding by 4.6 percent.

According to the Department of Energy, it now takes 46,150 BTUs (British thermal units) to produce one dollar of real (inflation-adjusted) economic growth. Ten years ago, it took 59,500 BTUs to do the same.

Similarly, in 1973, the average car got 13.1 miles per gallon of gasoline. Now it's 16.4 gallons. "Despite increased consumption in this recovery, price-induced conservation efforts adopted over the past decade remain an important part of the energy picture, and improved efficiency still has a high priority in American industry," said economist Irwin L. Kellner of New York's Manufacturers Hanover Trust.

Demand may not be wildly upticky for a number of years — but the stock market has overkilled many of the big oil stocks. Mobil, Exxon and Standard of California sell for a mere seven times earnings and Royal Dutch sells for just five.

The big oils' yields are high: Mobil yields 7.1, Exxon 8.4, Royal Dutch 6.4 and Standard of California 7. By contrast, the average NYSE stock is yielding 4.4 percent now.

And several oils sell at a huge discount from their book values. According to Investment Quality Trends, Royal Dutch sells for a stunning 33 percent below its book value. Mobil is 22 percent below book and Standard of California 13.

Standard & Poor's recently asked its computers to round up stocks with high current yields and a record of raising the dividend in each of the past five years. Standard of California and Standard of Indiana passed both tests. S&P also programmed its computers to find companies with high returns on equity, strong five-year earnings growth and low price-earnings multiples. Exxon and Standard of Indiana qualified.

John P. Dessauer, publisher of Dessauer's Journal, said, "The oil glut has reduced costs for crude oil. Oil companies have reduced operating and exploration costs. Gasoline sales in the United States are rising and are likely to keep rising." It all adds up to increasing profit margins, particularly for the big international oils.

But Wall Street is only nibbling on the oils timidly, said Dessauer, because, "Few seem to understand that rising gasoline sales in the United States and soft world oil prices are benefitting select U.S. companies."

Exxon is "the premier example of a company positioned to benefit from present conditions. The shares sell at a modest premium to book value, offer a generous dividend and are down from the 1980 high of $44," Dessauer said.

Mobil sells for a big discount from book, and its money-losing Montgomery Ward subsidiary is finally turning into the black.

Oil stocks are unpopular now: That's all the more reason to buy them.

TAE subsidiary allowed rate hike

Texas American Energy Corp., Midland, announced the Public Service Commission of Kentucky has authorized a $5.1 million general increase in service rates for customers of Western Kentucky Gas Co., the utility division of Texas American. The rate increase was effective on and after the day of the Commission's order, Dec. 1, 1983.

Westen Kentucky Gas Co., Headquartered in Owensboro, Kentucky, serves more than 138,000 residential and industrial customers in the central and western sections of that state with natural gas service. The utility was acquired by Texas American Energy Corp. on Dec. 1, 1980. Although the increase is significant to the companies profitability, the effect on individual customers of the utility is minimal.

Western Kentucky's sales for 1982 were $153,129,000, or approximately 85 percent of Texas American Energy's consolidated revenues. For the first nine months of 1983, the gas utility's sales were $118,488,000, or 86 percent of the corporation's consolidated revenues. Western Kentucky's last general rate increase was authorized by the commission effective Oct. 10, 1981.

The utility operates approximately 2,860 miles of transmission mains, gathering lines and distribution mains, six underground storage fields and five propane air plants in Kentucky.

Texas American Energy Corp., through its subsidiary, Texas American Oil Corp., operates oil and gas properties principally in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Colorado and Wyoming.

Texas dandy, Tandy chief says

DALLAS (AP) — A different financial outlook toward Wall Street by the leaders of Tandy Corp. is the reason behind the legendary success of the Fort Worth electronics company, says company President John V. Roach.

Roach, also Tandy's chief executive officer, spoke Wednesday to some 150 financial analysts and portfolio managers at a seminar on investing.

"We think Texas is an excellent place for us to grow over other business climates, in terms of expansion, product development, marketing and other management functions," Roach said at a noon luncheon. "We think the prospects are good for growing from this base."

The three-day seminar, which ended Wednesday, was sponsored by the Financial Analysts Federation and the Dallas Association of Investment Analysts. It was designed to expose investment experts to a cross-section of businesses headquartered in the region.

"We have a great advantage down here in doing business, in that we are not exactly as sensitive (to) what Wall Street is doing," said Roach. "For many southwestern companies, that has been a great way for us to do business."

Sam Barshop, chairman of the board and president of La Quinta Motor Inns Inc., and F.J. Spilman, chairman and chief executive officer of Pizza Inn, Inc., gave company presentations in afternoon sessions during the seminar's last day.

"There are a diversity of business opportunities in the Southwest," said Benjamin A. Hock, chairman of the Dallas Association of Investment Analysts. "We think the majority of opportunities are undeveloped or unrecognized by Wall Street, and it is a super opportunity for financial experts to come and visit here, and see for themselves."

Hock said that although the Southwest is not recession-proof, the U.S. Census Bureau has long predicted growth in the Sunbelt.

Gas strike will help Texas Indians

INDIAN VILLAGE, Texas (AP) — Substantial amounts of natural gas located beneath an East Texas Indian reservation will help ease poverty that has plagued the Alabama-Coushattas, tribal leaders say.

But Ray Apodaca, executive director of the Texas Indian Commission, vowed Wednesday the tribe won't go on a spending spree.

Union Oil Co. of California announced Tuesday workers had found a substantial natural gas reserve on the 4,000-acre reservation 75 miles northeast of Houston.

Leaders say they hope they will receive about $8 million in royalty payments over the next 20 years from this week's find and another strike brought in earlier this year.

The reservation has been in financial trouble for years. Median income of residents is about $6,500, about two-thirds of the national median per capita income.

The reservation has recorded revenues of $1 million this year but failed to show a profit.

Health study ammo for cost cutters

BOSTON (AP) — People who get free medical care aren't much healthier than those who pay part of their own doctor bills — although costless treatment does help poor people with high blood pressure or vision problems, a study today shows.

The research, part of a $78 million study, demonstrates that people are not necessarily better off when they go to the doctor more often. It provides ammunition for those who say cutting back insurance benefits is a way to hold down the rapid rise in the price of medical care.

The project enrolled families in a variety of medical insurance plans. Some got unlimited free care, while others had to pay part of their bills.

People with free care visited their doctors and were hospitalized a third more often.

"For the average, non-elderly American, the additional health care bought by free care didn't do very much, and I don't think there's much doubt about that," said Dr. Robert H. Brook, who directed the study for the Rand Corp.

There are some advantages to free care. The researchers found that poor people's high blood pressure drops slightly, and nearsighted people take advantage of the program to get glasses, so their vision improves a bit.

Otherwise, people who avoid doctors because of the expense are about as healthy.

The federally financed research, conducted on 3,958 people in 2,005 families, was published in today's New England Journal of Medicine.

Children, the elderly and those with serious disabilities were excluded from the experiment.

Dr. Arnold Relman, the journal's editor, criticized the study for following only relatively healthy adults, employing only a few limited measures of health and observing patients for only three to five years. Still, in an editorial he called it "a landmark study."

The researchers found that the more people had to pay for medical care, the less of it they used.

Free health care had no effect on the bad health habits that are linked to heart trouble and some kinds of cancer. Even though people getting free care saw doctors once, twice or more often a year, they were just as likely to smoke, be overweight and have high blood cholesterol levels as the other people.

The free care plan's effect on blood pressure was its major benefit. This can save lives among people who are at high risk. "If 1,000 50-year-old men at elevated risk were enrolled in a free insurance plan, we could anticipate that 10.5 of them, who would otherwise have died, would be alive five years later," they wrote.

But the doctors said there are cheaper and more efficient ways of accomplishing this, such as screening programs.

The study was conducted between 1974 and 1982 in Seattle; Dayton, Ohio; Fitchburg and Franklin County, Mass., and Charleston and Georgetown County, S.C.

Families were given either free care or were randomly assigned to 14 different cost-sharing insurance plans. Some families had to pay as much as 15 percent of their income on health bills.

Pickens speaks up for stockholders

CANYON, Texas (AP) — Business executives need to be more responsive to their stockholders and should work primarily toward enhancing the value of shareholders' investments, said Mesa Petroleum president T. Boone Pickens Jr.

Pickens, who has been trying to force Gulf Oil Co. to establish oil royality trusts for its shareholders, said shareholders are becoming increasingly dissatisfied with unresponsive managements.

Speaking to more than 200 business students and faculty Tuesday at West Texas State University, Pickens referred during his talk to the Mesa-led Gulf Investors Group, which has committed up to $1.1 billion for a total investment in Gulf Oil Corp.

Institutional shareholders, with increased awareness of their fiduciary responsiveness, will take the lead in voicing disapproval of management, Pickens predicted.

Pickens called maximizing shareholders' investments "the most important subject" facing American corporations.

He said he has been trying to force Gulf to change its business practices in a way he believes would be beneficial to shareholders. But the oil company's executives have fought his efforts.

He predicted that this emerging shareholder awareness will cause management to begin to "think like shareholders."

"For managements to share the same objectives as shareholders, they should be owners or prospective owners of meaningful amounts of stock," said Pickens.

Economists on lookout for inflation

WASHINGTON (AP) — Inflation, the economy's untamed lion of just a few years ago, has been quieted recently and most economists say there's no reason for it to roar back next year.

Many, though, are predicting prices will climb somewhat more than they did this year, and some are even keeping a watchful eye out for worrisome flare-ups later in the year.

Paul Volcker, who as chairman of the Federal Reserve is the nation's chief inflation-fighter, says, "We are in a period of testing."

In a recent speech, he said, "Memories of inflation — and of failed anti-inflation programs — remain strong. The temptation to return to habits learned in the previous decade — to anticipate inflation, to take precautionary steps to protect oneself, or to make up for losses of the past in one fell swoop — could return."

Adds Donald Ratajczak, economic forecaster at Georgia State University in Atlanta, "This is a period of lasting opportunities ... 1984 is our year of really solidifying the gain" made against high inflation rates.

The inflation rate, as measured by the Labor Department's Consumer Price Index, is expected to rise approximately 4 percent this year, just about the same as the 3.9 percent of 1982, which was the best price-showing since the early 1970s.

It was 8.9 percent in 1981 and 12.4 percent in 1980.

For next year, analysts are predicting an advance in the range of 4 percent to 7 percent.

"We still have one more really good year left on inflation," says Allen Sinai, chief economist at Lehman Brothers Kuhn Loeb Inc. in New York.

Volcker asserted recently, "Those of us responsible for monetary policy don't mean to let inflation get a head of steam again." The Federal Reserve has helped reduce price increases by restraining the amount of money in banks, checking accounts and wallets.

Even so, Lawrence Kudlow, former chief economist of the federal Office of Management and Budget and now an economic consultant here, sees warning signs already pointing to stronger price rises next year. Consumer prices, he notes, rose at a 5.5 percent annual rate in the August-October quarter.

Analysts generally attribute the recent moderation in prices to last year's recession, worldwide oil glut and abundant harvests.

Next year's expected price pickup is mostly attributed to just the reverse — the healthy economic recovery, stabilizing energy prices and the harsh summer drought which hurt the grain crop in America's breadbasket.

The price rises showing up next year, will, as usual, be most noticeable to consumers at the grocery checkout counter.

Meat prices are expected to climb in the second half of the year because of the effects of the drought. Those prices have been tumbling this fall as producers send their herds to slaughter rather than pay higher feedgrain prices. When supplies diminish next year, the trend should reverse itself, analysts say.

But prices for other goods also may rise. And analysts offer a variety of reasons for that — the economy's return to health, wage settlements negotiated by unions and the efficiency of workers on the job.

Explaining their predictions, analysts say the inflation rate usually goes up in a period of economic recovery as some manufacturers boost their prices to try to make up for lost profits. Corporate profits, though, have soared this year after sharp declines in 1982, which may ease price pressures.

Wages have not risen sharply in the past year, and some unions have even agreed to salary give-backs to hold onto industry jobs, analysts note. Added to that has been a marked increase in worker efficiency.

The salary and productivity trends put less pressure on manufacturers to pass along their increased labor costs to consumers in the form of higher prices for their products.

"Both of those factors have helped enormously in achieving a sharper reduction in inflation than almost any had anticipated," Volcker said in a recent speech.

But he said there also are "some potentially disquieting signs" because "restraint on wages and costs so far has been quite uneven among industries."

Improvement has been greatest in manufacturing and construction, he said.

"There has been less improvement," he said, in finance, utilities and service sectors. Wage hikes have been in the range of 6 percent to 8 percent, or more, he said, "seemingly signaling further upward pressures on prices in those areas."

Indeed, private analysts look for some increase next year in the amount of money unions are able to negotiate in new labor contracts and they also expect slower improvement in worker efficiency, or productivity.

Tipperary finances better

Tipperary Corporation Wednesday announced its earnings for the fiscal year ended September 30, 1983. The company had net income of $848,000 on gross revenues of $60,724,000 compared to a net loss of $5,500,000 and gross revenues of $60,162,000 in 1982. Funds provided by operations were $9,228,000 in 1983 as contrasted to a negative $702,000 in 1982. Yearend reserves were 4.6 million barrels of oil and 25.4 billion cubic feet of gas wih future undiscounted, escalated, net revenues of $258,691,000.

Aminoil strikes

HOUSTON (AP) — Aminoil Inc., a subsidiary of R.J. Reynolds Industries Inc. of Winston-Salem, N.C., has discovered natural gas at a wildcat well in Fort Bend County.

J.B. Coffman, Aminoil's president and chief operating officer, said a 55-hour tests at the Denton A. Cooley No. 1 well produced 1.98 million cubic feet of natural gas and 50 barrels of condensate per day.

The depth of the well is 14,600 feet.

Aminoil holds 50 percent interest in the well and is operator of the venture. The Anschutz Corp. holds the remaining 50 percent.

Dollar soaring; Pound sagging

LONDON (AP) — The dollar soared to a record high against the British pound today but was mixed against other currencies. Gold prices climbed back above the $400 an ounce mark.

Dealers said the pound was again being hit by investor worries over the price of oil, which affects income from Britain's North Sea fields. Those worries were being fueled by the meeting of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries Meeting in Geneva.

In London, Sterling sank to an all-time low of $1.4372 shortly after the opening before recovering to $1.4395. Wednesday's late rate of $1.4420 was an all-time closing low.

Elsewhere, traders said, the dollar was stable in quiet trading, as interest rates, which affect dollar-denominated investments, remained unchanged.

In Tokyo, where trading ends before Europe's business day gets under way, the dollar finished at 233.80 yen, level with Wednesday's close. Later in London, the dollar was quoted at 233.60 yen.

— 8.3000 French francs, up from 8.2975.

— 3.0640 Dutch guilders, unchanged from Wednesday.

Superior Oil's budget to be higher in 1984

HOUSTON (AP) — Superior Oil Co., the nation's largest independent oil and gas exploration firm, said Wednesday it would spend $1.2 billion in 1984, up from $1.1 billion the company expects to spend this year.

The Superior budget, approved Wednesday by the company's board of directors, includes about $300 million next year for exploration activities in the U.S. Another $560 million would go for U.S. production.

In a statement, Superior said its wholly owned Canadian subsidiary, Canadian Superior, would have 1984 expenditures of about $170 million, an increase of $20 million from the current year. About 44 percent of that money would go for exploration.

FORT WORTH(SWN) — Southland Royalty Company announced Tuesday it had completed an agreement with four financial institutions to form limited partnerships for the purpose of acquiring up to $210 million worth of producing oil and gas properties.

Southland will manage the venture under a joint operating agreement with the financial institutions. To date, Southland has purchased, on behalf of the venture, several producing oil and gas properties located in Arkansas and Texas for $10.4 million.

Under the terms of the agreement, the financial institutions will contribute two-thirds of the equity in the partnerships up to $70 million, and Southland will contribute one-third up to $35 million, for a total equity contribution of $105 million. The agreement contemplates additional funding in the form of non-recourse debt in an amount equal to the equity contributed by the partners.

Bad weather threatens thousands of antelope

CHEYENNE, Wyo. (AP) — Desperate to reach clear areas to feed amid unrelenting snows, hundreds of antelope have been killed by trains while others await slow death "bunched up" along a fence erected to protect a cattle range, officials say.

About 1,500 antelope are being prevented from reaching Red Rim, a southern Wyoming plateau that dependably blows clear, by the 40-mile fence which has become a focus of wildlife protecters' protests.

The rancher who built the fence argues the antelope herd has been mismanaged by the state Game and Fish Department and is destroying his range for grazing, an issue hotly contested in Wyoming for years.

Wildlife groups have charged that the real reason for the obstruction is to clear the land for coal mining.

Rancher Taylor Lawrence has offered to open some gates, but insists the fence won't come down.

And Bureau of Land Management spokeswoman Pat Korp of Cheyenne said Wednesday her agency and the U.S. attorney's office were "checking all the alternatives" to see if legal action might bring the Red Rim fence down.

Bitter cold and as much as 2 feet of snow have created a death trap for thousands of antelope in southern Wyoming that cannot find exposed sagebrush for feeding, state wildlife officials said.

Trains have killed at least 200 antelope that gathered in the cleared areas along railroad tracks in the past two weeks, and more have died on highways.

The plight of the Red Rim antelope has prompted a "flood" of calls Wednesday to the National Wildlife Federation and the Wyoming federation from people who "want to do something," spokesman Tom Dougherty in Cheyenne said.

Dougherty said some members of Congress called — and a New Hampshire woman offered to sell her property to pay for feeding the animals.

Stopping the antelope is a 5-foot fence erected by Lawrence, who owns land on Red Rim.

About 400,000 antelope roamed Wyoming before this year's hunting season, which killed about one-quarter of the herd and brought it nearer to ideal size, state Game and Fish Department spokesman Dale Strickland has said.

When the national and Wyoming wildlife federations warned last fall the fence would mean death to thousands of antelope during a severe winter, Lawrence said the animals would go elsewhere.

Instead, the animals are "bunched up" along the fence, trying to find a way into the one area they rely on during critical winters, according to Game and Fish biologist Dave Moody.

Famed pharmacy auctioned

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Schwab's Pharmacy, the Sunset Boulevard landmark where myth has it that movie star Lana Turner was discovered, has been placed on the auction block.

Owner Leon Schwab watched as more than two dozen fixtures, including coffee shop equipment and the entire prescription inventory, went on sale Wednesday inside the famed drugstore.

The pharmacy has retained a loyal Hollywood following even though the story about Miss Turner has never been proved.

Schwab said friends and celebrities called him with "condolences."

Actress Barbara Stanwyck called in tears, he said.

"She's been a customer here for almost 40 years and she called me up when I closed the store," Schwab said. "She was crying and that to me is a great tribute."

Schwab said he was closing the drugstore for family reasons.

Hope may entertain troops in Beirut

Bob Hope

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bob Hope, who has entertained the troops during the holidays starting back in World War II, may not be home for Christmas once again.

A United Services Organization spokesman says the 80-year-old comedian may be entertaining U.S. Marines and sailors stationed in Lebanon.

Details have yet to be worked out, USO spokesman Paul Regaski said Wednesday.

Pentagon sources, who spoke only on the condition they not be named, said if Hope makes the trip this year he probably will not land in Lebanon but will give his shows aboard Navy ships offshore, with Marines being ferried out to the U.S. fleet. "It is too hot in the Beirut area for him to go there," one source said.

SEATTLE (AP) — Singer-composer Carole King, who showed up at a federal appeals court to fight a decision concerning a dirt road that runs through her Idaho ranch, says the dispute is spoiling her dream to "have privacy."

The 42-year-old Miss King, dressed in a black velvet dress and cowboy boots, voiced her ire to reporters after her hearing Wednesday before the 9th U.S Circuit Court of Appeals.

She explained that she left Hollywood in 1981 to escape traffic and find a new lifestyle in the Idaho wilderness on her 117-acre Robinson Bar Ranch along the Salmon River.

She contends her rights were violated when Custer County, Idaho, officials declared the road public and is asking that the appeals court reverse the lower court dismissal of her case.

Jodie Foster

NEW YORK (AP) — Actress Jodie Foster says she wanted to sue John Hinckley Jr. after he said he tried to assassinate President Reagan 2½ years ago because he wanted to impress her.

Hinkley had seen the 20-year-old actress in the movie "Taxi Driver" and claimed he had fallen in love with her.

"I would have loved to sue him," said Miss Foster, a student at Yale University in New Haven, Conn., in an interview for Sunday's Parade magazine. "I was followed all over the place. I had to go around in people's trunks, take freight elevators (to avoid the publicity surrounding the attack.)"

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House spokesman Larry Speakes staged a surprise anniversary party for his secretary — and several of her former bosses were there to join in the celebration.

Speakes pretended he had forgotten some papers when he asked Constance Gerrard Romero, who has worked with five presidents and eight press secretaries, to join him on the podium during his daily briefing of reporters.

Mrs. Romero, 42, marking the 20th anniversary of her years at the White House, started with George Reedy, President Lyndon B. Johnson's press secretary.

With former presidential press secretaries Jerry Horst, Ron Nessen and Jody Powell looking on, Mrs. Romero said "I know that nobody's ever worked with a more interesting, fascinating, unusual bunch of people, and it's just been a real treat."

PLANTATION, Fla. (AP) — Police thought they were doing Burt Reynolds a favor when they caught an amateur photographer taking pictures of the star with a telephoto lens — and confiscated his film.

The 47-year-old actor was filming a scene for "Stick" on Monday when Young snapped a few shots from his grandmother's lawn. Witnesses said police gave him a choice: Hand over the film or go to jail.

"Burt doesn't like long lenses," explained Stan Brossette, publicist for the movie. "Raquel Welch doesn't. Charlton Heston doesn't. Olivia Newton-John doesn't — all those unflattering nose-picking shots."

"Someone probably told the police that. And, well, quite often, local police tend to overreact when we're out filming a movie," he added.

Mary Margaret Byrum, president of the Midland Symphony Guild and John Igram of Julian Golds, introduce "Oscar de la Rented," Harry Miller.

'De la Rented' comes to town; Show goes on

By LISA GERLOCK
Lifestyle Editor

The guest of honor wasn't at the "Symphony of Fashion," but the Wednesday evening presentation of Oscar de la Renta's 1984 springwear collection for the Midland Symphony Guild's black tie affair was a success anyway.

The benefit, sponsored by the Guild in conjunction with Julian Gold, was Midland society's christening of ClayDesta National Bank building. It is also said to have been the largest fund-raising event put on by the Guild.

Oscar was scheduled to introduce the fashions himself, but because of illness, was unable to attend. His absence at a private reception Tuesday night, hosted by Momo and Harry Miller, prompted Miller to greet guests sporting an "Oscar de la 'Rent-ed' " sign.

The lavish party nonetheless entertained de la Renta's business partner, Syd Shaw and Guild sponsors, such as Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Williams, Mr. and Mrs. Sid Curle, Mr. and Mrs. Roger Allen, Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Anguish, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Black, Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Busby, Mr. and Mrs. Bert Conly, Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Cowden, Mr. and Wright Cowden, Mr. and Mrs. Earl Craig and Mr. and Mrs. W. Watson LaForce Jr.

Catered by Don Strange of San Antonio, the buffet dinner featured stuffed artichoke hearts, mushroom and shrimp crepes, broccoli, beef tenderloin, and a dessert table ornamented with chocolate crepes, strawberries, chocolate sauce, chocolate cake, cheesecake and other delectables. The hors d'oeuvres table presented tantalizing oysters, smoked salmon and baked brie.

The Midland-Odessa Symphony performed from the second floor of the atrium throughout the evening.

Local models Roma Conder, Cookie Wetendorf, Nancy Coleman, Nancy Gibson, Denise Jolly and Jill Poage, and others from Dallas and San Antonio strutted on the ramp in front of the water fountain, lowered for the show, to a taped orchestration. They twirled in circles showing de la Renta's 1984 spring collection — everything from sport suits in his famed navy and white nautical themes to colorful dress suits to ruffled evening gowns to the "jungle-fever" prints floor length dresses and mariachi-style cocktail fashions.

John Ingram, past president of the Midland Symphony Association and manager of Julian Gold, said the 19 models made 106 changes in 36 minutes. He said he is involved in the fashion show because of his committment to the symphony.

"The symphony is the focal point of the community's artistic endeavor. And we are very happy to be a facilitator."

The runway's route began in one corner of the atrium and winded through the forested pathway and across the front of the fountain.

The bank building was decked with thousands of red poinsettias, red bows and garland for the Christmas holidays.

Though an exact count was not tallied, Ann Herbig, chairman of the event, estimated about 820 persons attended the social. About 900 tickets, $150 per couple and $2,000 for a sponsor table, which seated eight, were sold for the show, according to Julie Weis, the Guild's publicity chairman.

Syd Shaw, Gold and Bobby Gurwitz will be in Midland for the continuation of de la Renta's show through Friday at Julian Gold's.

It was supposed to be the day "Oscar came to town," but by the end of the evening, the disappointment of his absence had subsided.

"I think people came to see the show and the building," said Mrs. Herbig.

Margaret Leigh Anguish, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Buddy Anguish and Mrs. Agnes Anguish was escorted by John Albert Steele III. Her gown, a Richard Brooks of Dallas design, was chantilly lace, reembroidered in sheet silk gauze ribbon, sparkled with silver. The bodice had an off-the-shoulder flounce and the antebellum skirt was gathered in the back and dropped below the waist.

Elizabeth Knowles Black, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan Preston Black, was escorted by Joseph Sheffield Hilliard. Miss Black wore a gown of silk peau de soire designed in a late 18th Century fashion. The molded bodice featured a wide neckline and period sleeves, flounced in wide ruffles of French Chantilly lace. The tiny nipped waist held the voluminous peau de soire skirt with garlands of lace ruffles.

Angela Essman, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Max Curry and Mr. James H. Essman, was escorted by Gregory Scott Spencer. Miss Essman wore a gown of white silk taffeta and imported re-embroidered alcenon lace, designed by Ron LoVece. The lace scupltured basque bodice, beaded with pearls and crystals, was fashioned with a bateau neckline and the back of the gown featured a deep V, caught at the waist of the full silk taffeta skirt with a cluster of alencon lace appliques.

Sarah Ann Grimes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. David N. Grimes, was escorted by Kenneth Brent Jonsson. Miss Grimes wore a white silk taffeta gown. The molded bodice was strapless and featured a large bow above a corded V to accent the waist. The skirt also had a bow at the waist in the back, with a ruffle on both sides of the skirt extending to the hemline.

Jill Leifeste, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William H. Leifeste, was escorted by Robert McCall Davenport Jr. Miss Leifeste's gown was silk satin faced peau and French reembroidered alencon lace worn off the shoulder, designed by Ron LoVece. The lace bodice was accented with silk flowers and crystal pleated organza. The satin faced peay skirt flowed from an A-line style into a soft sweep train. The gown's hemline was also finished in crystal pleated organza with alencon lace scalloped border showing beneath the pleats.

Michal Elizabeth Marcum, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Marcum II, was escorted by John Dedwylder. Miss Marcum wore a sleeveless gown of candlelight silk taffeta with a sweet heart neckline accented with a scalloped border of crystal bugle beads and rhinestones. The empire waist line and hem of the full A-line skirt were also accented with a scalloped border of crystal bugle beads and rhinestones. The bodice and lower skirt were scattered with medallions of pearls, rhinestones and crystal bugle beads.

Julie Jeanette Norris, daugther of Mr. and Mrs. Terrell Tone Stallter and Mr. Darrell Norris was escorted by Curtis John Holcomb. Miss Norris wore a gown designed by Phyllis for Bianchi. Fashioned of embroidered organza over taffeta, the fitted bodice and portait neckline was accented with Grace Kelly-styled sleeves with rows of scalloped oranza ruffles. The A-line skirt, also of floral embroidered orangza, was swept in the back held by a taffeta bow with streamers to the hemline, also accented with organza ruffles.

Rachal Pearson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce T. Pearson, was escorted by Thomas A. Hyde Jr. Miss Pearson wore gown of beaded alencon lace and silk satin designed by Bianchi of Boston. The molded bodice of lace featured a wide portrait neckline and drop waist. A tiny bowed sash circled the nipped waist. The full A-line skirt was embroidered in scalloped alencon lace detailed in seed pearls.

Mary Randall Redfern, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Joseph Redfern III, was escorted by Duncan Cameron MacNaughton. Miss Redfern wore a gown of imported silk peau d' soie designed by Ron LoVece. The bodice was fitted with a piped, low shaped neckline and full Juliet sleeves, enhanced with a pattern of seed pearls. Gathers at the waist extended to the carpet-length hemline and swept to a longer line in the back. A long tailored bow marked the closing at the waist in the back.

Claudia Saxe, daughter of Mr. Richard P. Saxe, was escorted by David Sneed. Miss Saxe wore a formal gown of tissue taffeta and French re-embroidered alencon lace designed by Priscilla of Boston. It featured a Florentine neckline, shirred puffed sleeves and a fitted basque waistline. The skirt was softly gathered at the wiast.

Heather Yvonne Trotter, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. William P. Trotter, was escorted by Michael C. Sledge. Miss Trotter wore a gown of white starburst rose lace over Italian satin, with a strapless bodie and full circle skirt bordered with white turkey feathers, designed by Les Wilk. The lace design of the skirt and bodice was accented with Aurora Borealis. The bodice was also hand-beaded in white irredescent sequins and crystals.

Molly Schneider, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tom Schneider was escorted by Brian Schneider. Miss Schneider wore a gown of lustrous Habitae with a molded bodice and sweetheart neck ruffled with a small satin edge. The full skirt had shirring down the front. Rows of satin-edged ruffles were at the hem and a frothy mass of ruffles extended from the low back waist.

Tennis designer 'free spirit'

HONOLULU (AP) — He's a free spirit, the man who put lace tennis panties on Gussie Moran. Ted Tinling, 6-foot-5, wears a 1½-carat diamond in his left ear, three gold chains, a gold and diamond tennis ball pendant given to him by the Lawn Tennis Association of Australia, a chunky gold and turquoise bracelet — and shaves his head in a Daddy Warbucks lack-of-hairdo.

He reached the rank of lieutenant colonel in World War II, serving with the American forces in North Africa, Italy and Normandy.

He's the man who dressed Billie Jean King in sequined tennis wear for her Astrodome victory over Bobby Riggs, and who has designed thousands of different styles for women players. Thinking up that many changes in what is basically a sleeveless, mid-thigh-length dress is sort of like developing 1,000 ways with hamburger.

Tinling's first taste of international fame, though, dates back to 1949 when Gertrude "Gorgeous Gussie" Moran asked him to design a tennis dress for her to wear at the Wimbledon championships, a dress with some color on it.

"I told her she'd be banned from the courts unless she were dressed entirely in white. I had already done a dress for Betty Hilton, then the No. 1 player, that had a pale rose-pink trim on the skirt, and they asked her to chauge before her match," Tinling recalled.

Those in charge at Wimbledon, though, have long ago come around from their stand against color on the courts, and tennis champions dressed in unrelieved white are now something of a novelty. Tinling credits television more than liberal thinking for the change.

"Gussie was very feminine, so I thought of adding lace — white lace — to her tennis panties," he said. "It was a real happening when she wore them at Wimbledon. Made all the papers."

Tinling was in town for part of the Virginia Slims World Championship Series. He serves as director of international liaison for the series, a function he defines as "keeping the flags from being flown upside down."

Then he modified this. "Being so old (he is 73) when the average player is 22, the girls and their mothers accept that I am as much a part of tennis as the net post or the ball."

During the years between 1952 and 1962, Tinling said he had dressed every woman tennis star in the world.

DEAR ABBY

Fiance struggles with knotty bedroom problem

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am a 26-year-old man with a problem I've never heard of before. I'm engaged to a 22-year-old girl named Gina (not her real name). We've gone together for a year, and I thought we knew each other well, but she laid something on me yesterday that set me to wondering.

While shopping for a bedroom set, Gina insisted on a double bed with bedposts. I said it looked kind of old-fashioned, but Gina said that is what she wanted in case we wanted to tie each other up! Abby, the way she said it I'm sure she was serious. I was totally surprised. Now I am wondering if maybe my fiancee isn't some kind of pervert.

I have no desire to be tied up, and I certainly don't want to tie her up. Am I square or is there something wrong with Gina? — NO TIES IN TEXAS

DEAR NO TIES: It's time you and Gina had a frank talk about your sexual expectations. Tying up one's partner, or being tied up, is part of a not-uncommon fantasy to heighten sexual pleasure. It's called "bondage." If your fiancee is seriously entertaining these thoughts, it doesn't necessarily mean she's a "pervert." The best rule of limitations is: Anything that goes on between consenting adults is OK as long as it's agreeable to both parties and harms no one.

DEAR ABBY: In these days of the "liberated woman," more women are phoning men and asking them out. Not that there is anything wrong with that, but it does raise some questions:

If the woman calls the man, does she pick him up? Or is he expected to pick her up? Who pays the tab? It seems to me that the person who does the inviting should pick up the tab. But some men might not feel right letting a woman treat them. — NO SIG

DEAR NO SIG: When the woman calls the man, the transportation is provided by the person for whom it is most convenient. As for the tab: The person who did the inviting should be prepared to pick up the tab.

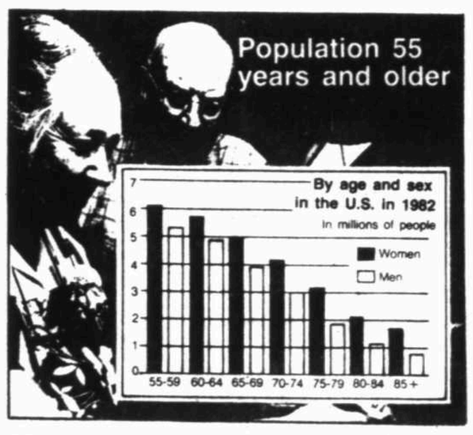
DEAR ABBY: What do you think of the following? My husband and I were shopping last week, and as we were walking along the street, I became very dizzy.

I noticed a cleaning shop nearby where I saw some empty chairs. I told my husband to continue shopping, and I went into the cleaning shop and asked the young man there if I could sit down for a few minutes because I wasn't feeling well. This was his answer: "These chairs are only for people who are having their things cleaned here. If you are sick, go to a doctor."

Please comment. — MARION T.

DEAR MARION: I'm sure that cleaning establishment will never get a penny (or a good word) from you, and I don't blame you. But please, take a few minutes to write a letter, addressed to the owner, describing your experience. Clip this column and enclose it. Be sure to state the day and time it occurred. There is always a chance that some uncaring or poorly trained employee acted without authority. Enclose a self-addressed, stamped envelope for a reply, and let me know what happens.

If you put off writing letters because you don't know what to say, send for Abby's complete booklet on letter-writing. Send $2 and a long, stamped (37 cents), self-addressed envelope to Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.



Codeine shown effective in narcolepsy treatment

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Codeine, a drug that makes most people drowsy, can help narcolepsy sufferers stay awake, according to a sleep specialist at the Medical College of Pennsylvania.

June M. Fry, director of college's Sleep Disorders Center, found that people with narcolepsy had their dangerous naps less frequently after taking the painkiller.

Narcolepsy can send its victims into deep sleep without warning at any hour of the day — while they are driving, talking and even eating. It is normally treated with stimulant drugs such as amphetamines, which can have undesireable side effects and sometimes become less effective with long-term use.

Ms. Fry, however, decided to study the effects of codiene when she read about one narcoleptic whose condition improved when he took the painkiller for an unrelated medical problem, the college said in a statement.

Five narcoleptics participating in a nine-month preliminary trial all "feel more normal than they have for a long time" on codiene, while none yet shows signs of addiction, said Ms. Fry.

Deja vu tennis shoe lecture contradicts 'style'

By ERMA BOMBECK

When Prof. Irwin Corey wore gym shoes with a tuxedo, little did he know he was 30 years ahead of his time.

When there was a transit strike in New York, women, faced with walking long distances, wore tennis shoes to work. That was several years ago. They're still wearing them.

Tennis shoes have become a shoe for all seasons.

Frankly, I never thought I'd accompany my husband to a formal wedding where the stars on his shoes matched the groom's tie.

I was going out with my son the other night when he looked at my shoes.

"Where do you think you're going in those tennis shoes?"

"What's the matter with them?" I asked.

"I'm not everybody else's kid," he said. "Go!"

"But they're comfortable," I said stubbornly.

"Of course they are, but they're not supposed to be worn 24 hours out of every day. You'll ruin your feet."

"How?"

"They'll spread all over and besides, you don't get enough support out of them."

"Do too! Look at these arches."

"Look," he smiled condescendingly, "listen to your son. I know about these things. I was young once. There's a place for good shoes to be worn and there's a place for play shoes to be worn. Now go change."

"Dad wears tennis shoes everywhere."

"Of course he does," he said "which is why you must set th example. After all, you're 26 day older than he is."

"Well, we're just going to th movie and who's going to notice m feet anyway?"

"I'll notice," he said. "Now be good person and go change them."

New environments teach different perspectives

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

The word this year is "excellence." But it's not specific enough.

Define "excellence" to mean enrichment through crossing over from one field to another. New inventions are more likely to be hybrids than completely new. We need to come into another's world of work to see how we are relevant and where we can change and grow.

Last week, for example, I moderated a panel on academic excellence. It was aimed at high school teachers, whose raw nerves are more exposed today than ever before. Teachers — at least those who are left after the burn-outs fled to business — are hungry for change and recoil against the attacks of their incompetence.

One of the panelists, a representative from an oil company, spoke of his company's joint ventures: first underwriting scientists' experiments, and recently sending high school science teachers to summer school to study educational methods.

Why not send science teachers to oil refineries or labs, and give them the chance to change their perspective?

Let's look at some examples of working toward excellence. What could auto mechanics do? Most mechanics already know enough about fixing cars, so school is not the only place to go. Perhaps watching great hairdressers at work would teach them that illusive skill called taking care of customers.

Or hairdressers themselves, rather than go back to beauty school for better basics, might observe how lawyers professionalize their advice.

ARTS channel marries Entertainment Network

By TOM JORY

NEW YORK (AP) — So what's wrong with putting Beethoven and Foggy on the same cable-TV channel? The wonder is that no one thought of the ARTS & Entertainment Network before now.

If it sounds like the marriage of Hearst-ABC's Alpha Repertory Television Service and RCA's dormant Entertainment Channel, it is. The two parties were expected to sign the merger papers today.

And it means, starting Feb. 1, a mix of classical music, like Beethoven's Concerto No. 1 in C, and comedy, like "The Last of the Summer Wine," featuring Clegg, Compo and Foggy, the three elderly gents who get involved in extremely unlikely situations.

There's more, of course, to the new service than that: drama, theater, the cinema, music, opera, dance, art, poetry and literature, conversation.

What's behind the merger? Survival, no doubt, in the increasingly chancy world of cable TV. And that seems to demand a lineup of shows that will appeal to as many people as possible, while attracting advertisers interested in a so-called "upscale" audience.

It might be Wilkie Collins' "Woman in White" one evening, with "Bach Goes East" the next, "A Midsummer Night's Dream" the third night, maybe British comedy shows "Two's Company" and "Kelly Monteith" the fourth.

Though there is no sign that ARTS was anywhere near the precipice, the service, introduced in April 1981, was indeed losing money...a reported $10 million a year.

The Entertainment Channel, built largely on a wide selection of programs from the British Broadcasting Corp., collapsed in a much bigger heap of debt in February. The merger with ARTS probably saves face for some people, and money for others.

ARTS was introduced as a basic service, supported by advertising and available to cable-TV subscribers at no additional charge, and A&E will stay that way.

Cable-system operators, however, will be assessed for distributing the service: a nickel per subscriber each month in the first year, beginning March 11, 6 cents in the second and 7 in the third.

The tactic is not uncommon in cable, though some system operators are reluctant to pay the subscriber fee. So it will cost the new service some viewers: ARTS is available in 12 million homes, and A&E is counting on about 9 million to start.

Will it work?

CBS Cable, which devoted most of its short run to the performing arts, lost an estimated $30 million to $35 million before its demise toward the end of 1982. The Entertainment Channel, a pay service, lost about as much in 10 months, and listed only 45,000 subscribers when service was discontinued.

Commenting in Electronic Media, a trade paper, on the prospect of merger with the Entertainment Channel, Herb Granath, president of ABC Video Services, said, "If the industry can't support what seems to be the last quality cable service, maybe there isn't room for one."

In any case, there seems to be a new attitude in the cable industry designed to attract viewers rather than merely serve up shows and hope that people will be willing to pay for them.

"What we've recognized," says Kathryn Creech, president of the newly formed Council for Cable Information, "is that we never really positioned cable for the consumer. We advertised all the products — all these great programs — but never really gave them a sense of the store."

Recent research, she says, suggests some people who refuse to subscribe overestimate the cost of cable service, while others aren't aware of the variety of entertainment and information available to them.

"One of the things we're finding is that people are confused about the product. Some actually believe it's all dirty movies," Ms. Creech says.

"We've got to do the job of telling them what's there, and how to find it," she says.

Space Center will feature special Christmas program

ALAMOGORDO, N.M. — For the third year in a row, the Space Center, Alamogordo, N.M., will feature a special Christmas planetarium program "The Star of Bethlehem" Saturday through Jan. 1 at 10:30 a.m., noon, 2 and 4 p.m.

The show, a logically presented theory, uses new and more accurate measuring devices and historial discoveries to pinpoint the origin of the famous star seen by the "Wise Men" of the Orient. New photographic and computer capabilities have resulted in a spectacular ending of animated Christmas scenes choreographed to seasonal music.

"The star of Bethlehem" will be shown daily in conjunction with the regular Omnimax feature. It will also be included in the new 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday triple feature on the following dates: Saturday, Sunday, Dec. 16-18, 23-24 and 30-31. The Space Center will be closed Christmas day.

Church presents voice recital

A voice recital will be presented by Bevra Carruth at 2:30 p.m. Sunday at Memorial Christian Church, 1001 Andrews Highway.

The program includes art songs by Brahms, Faure, Debussy and Barber as well as arias by Mozart, Puccini and others.

A native of Hobbs, N.M., Mrs. Carruth has been a Midland resident for the past two years. A soprano, she is a senior voice major at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin and a member of the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale.

She will be accompanied by Dr. Stanley Engebretson, chorale director, coordinator of music at UTPB and director of music at Memorial Christian.

The public is invited to attend this free performance.

Boys Ranch puts on holiday play

A traditional part of the holiday season at West Texas Boys Ranch is the Christmas play. This annual event will be staged Sunday at 7:30 p.m. in the Boys Ranch Chapel.

Each year, a chosen Christmas story is performed by the boys. This year's selection is Jerry Millard Davidson's "Jesus — God and Man," from the book "Christmas Programs for the Church," Vol. XIII.

The play focuses on the life, death and resurrection of Jesus. It will be performed by an all-boy cast, ranging in age from 9 to 16.

Refreshments will be served following the play. The public is invited to attend this free performance.

Chorale kicks off holiday season

To kick off the holiday season, the Midland-Odessa Symphony Chorale on will sing 30 minutes of favorites from Handel's "Messiah" along with other Christmas selections at 7 p.m. Saturday at Midland Park Mall.

Included on the program will be the Hallelujah Chorus, "Chestnuts Roasting on an Open Fire" and a sing-a-long for audience and chorale.

The performance will be in the courtyard near J.C. Penney's. The public is invited to attend this free presentation.

Leo's features live entertainment

Leo's Oyster Bar, 117 E. Wall Ave., is featuring live entertainment Friday and Saturday.

The Marbles, based in Midland-Odessa, will perform Friday and The Juke Jumpers, a six-member blues band from Dallas, will be on Saturday.

Cover for The Marbles is $3 and for The Juke Jumpers is $5. Showtime both nights is 10 p.m. For more information call 686-9100.

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Company of the Permian Playhouse of Odessa is presenting "The Littlest Shepherd" Saturday, Sunday and Dec. 17-18.

The Kaleidoscope Company is Permian Playhouse's youth performing group.

Tickets will be available at the door for the 2:30 p.m. performances. For more information call 1-362-2329.

Singer overcomes adversity

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — As she rebounds from career setbacks and personal tragedies, singer Helen Cornelius looks to her upcoming role as sharpshooter Annie Oakley as a signal that her life might be back in order.

"I feel the musical will be a new dimension in my career," Miss Cornelius, 41, said. "It'll be fabulous, and I think more things like this will come into my career."

Though her recording career has declined since her highly publicized split with duet partner Jim Ed Brown, she has remained busy with personal appearances.

She has been memorizing her lines for "Annie Get Your Gun," which will open in Dallas in January. She'll appear in the 1946 Irving Berlin musical for four months with country music singer Dave Rowland co-starring as Frank Butler, her competitor and eventual lover.

"The more I memorize my lines, the more confident I feel. There's no more nightmares," she said.

Helen Cornelius

"Annie is basically like me. If you can do something, even in a man's world, you should say so. If I know I can, I'm not one to hold off. I feel the part very much."

She and Brown, voted duet of the year in 1977 by the Country Music Association, broke up in 1980 after being linked romantically, though both were married to others. Brown publicly begged his wife, Becky, to forgive him and maintain their marriage — which she did.

Then in July 1982, Miss Cornelius' 19-year-old son, Joey, died after being thrown from a bull and trampled in Lawrenceburg, Tenn.

Her first marriage ended in divorce in 1980, and her father died during the summer. Miss Cornelius remarried following the divorce and now says she views life "probably better than at any other time.

"I feel positive," the singer said. "I'm together. Most of the time, I'm real strong. I try not to let my emotions bring other people down. You try to stay busy and believe in yourself."

She and Brown had a string of No. 1 and Top 10 country hits, including "I Don't Want to Have to Marry You," "Don't Bother to Knock," "Born Believer," "The World Ran Out of Love," "Tonight," "Lying in Love With You," "The Bedroom" and their version of "You Don't Bring Me Flowers."

"The duet was a very great building block in my career," she said. "It was a good association for me. But there were negatives in it."

Miss Cornelius said the press has wanted her "to say derogatory things" about the split, but she won't. "I'm a lady, and I always hope to be," she said.

"A man becomes wise through his errors," she said. "I grew from my errors. I'm a better person because of it."

Three days before her son was killed, Miss Cornelius had begged him to give up the rodeo."I told him, 'You're going to be killed.' He said he was going to live his life and grow old and didn't want to look back at the things he didn't do."

But her faith in God helped her through the personal tragedy. "If you're a Christian, you know there's a heaven," she said.

Aykroyd, Murray together again for the first time — in movie

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — Dan Aykroyd and Bill Murray, two graduates of NBC's "Saturday Night Live," are together again — and for the first time in a movie.

Aykroyd and Murray, along with Harold Ramis, play three eccentric parapsychologists who set up in Skid Row looking for paranormal occurrences after they are kicked out of New York University.

The movie is "Ghostbusters," and Columbia Pictures has put up $30 million for the comedy. Much of that money will go for special effects.

Murray recently stood outside an abandoned fire station waiting for a camera call. A young passer-by watched him for a moment and finally said, "'Saturday Night Live,' right?"

Murray ignored him. He was deep in conversation with a man carrying a bedroll under his arm. They were comparing notes on their favorite macho screen stars.

After three visits from a production assistant Murray was finally lured back to work.

Count Basie to swing into Midland Thursday

An only child, William Basie was born Aug. 21, 1904 in Red Bank, N.J. His first musical training came from his mother and a "wonderful German lady named Holloway" who gave him piano lessons and charged 25¢ a lesson.

Although Basie's first choice in instruments was drums, he played the Harlem clubs in the early 20s and the instrument of the day was piano. During that time, perhaps the most important influence on his playing was Thomas "Fats" Waller.

Basie then toured the TCBA "sheel," the major vaudeville circuit for black entertainers. When he was stranded in Kansas City he joined the Walter Page Blue Devils, a group he calls "the happiest band I've ever been in." Then several members joined Bennie Monton. Soon after Monton died in 1935, Basie became the leader.

Music critic John Hammond heard Basie and his 10-piece band performing on a small Kansas City radio station. Hammond convinced Basie to come to Chicago and then to New York in 1936. In 1937, the band made its first recording (Decca).

The qualities that established Count Basie's band were Basie's simple, swinging, elliptical piano style and the driving impetus of a strong rhythm section. Since then, Basie has led a big band (except for a small period in 1950-51 when he led a swinging sextet), gaining a worldwide reputation for his undying allegiance to the beat.

Sponsored by RDC Productions in conjunction with Big Brothers, Big Sisters, the $100 per-couple evening includes an open bar and hors d'oeuvres catered by Leo Palitti, owner of Leo's Oyster Bar. Doors open at 7:30 p.m.

Part of the proceeds go to Big Brothers, Big Sisters. For more information or to purchase tickets call 686-9100.

Comic characters reach middle age

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Isn't it enough that Popeye, Betty Boop and Mickey Mouse have all turned 50 and face the prospect of suffering from hardening of the ink?

How about Tarzan — he's 71 and still on the vine.

Now comes news that space adventurer Flash Gordon is going to turn 50 in January. The famous newspaper comic strip created by Alex Raymond also became the stuff of movie serials starring Buster Crabbe in the 1930s, and was made into a big-budget movie in 1980.

Flash turning 50? Ming, you're merciless.

California film companies head for greener pastures

By JAY ARNOLD

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — "They went thataway!"

The posse's cry from old Westerns is being heard here again as film companies stampede out of California to greener pastures.

With Hollywood long the world's undisputed film capital, California is now competing with other states eager to attract the glamour, and big bucks, of the $3.6 billion-a-year film industry.

The stakes are huge. The Alliance of Motion Picture and Television Producers estimates California lost $1.6 billion from 1979 through 1982 to "runaway" producers who were able to find "Hollywood" in Houston, Atlanta, New York and Miami.

Dallas, New York, Orlando, Fla., and Nashville, Tenn., have movie sound stages. Every state has a film commission putting the hard sell on movie and television producers.

Florida boasts "Hollywood weather without Hollywood overhead" and flatly declares in advertising: "In Florida you can produce as good a film as you could in Hollywood or New York...on a much better budget."

Gov. Bob Graham thinks Florida will someday dethrone Hollywood as the leading production center.

The California Legislature is alarmed. An Assembly committee heard Ed Asner, president of the Screen Actors Guild, testify last month that twice as many movies were made outside California in October as were made in the state.

"Other states are hungry for the business, and we take it for granted because it was founded here," said California Assemblyman Tom Hayden, who is married to actress Jane Fonda.

Movie executives say the primary reasons for this Hollywood exodus are California's costly film permits and use fees, Hollywood labor costs and regulations, an expanding pool of acting and production talent and aggressive recruiting efforts.

The city of Buffalo, N.Y., last month turned over its National Guard armory for use as a studio and office for the crew of the Robert Redford film, "The Natural."

When the makers of the movie, "A Soldier's Story," which stars Howard E. Rollins Jr., needed an all-black Army battalion, the governor of Arkansas called up 600 members of the state's National Guard.

During filming of the TV miniseries "Chiefs" in South Carolina, the state's film office provided a red tape-cutting liaison officer on location every day for five months — at no charge.

Such generosity rarely occurs in Southern California, where film companies may be greeted by hostile citizens who don't want their streets blocked off or their sleep disrupted by 4 a.m. filming starts.

"If you're shooting on (Los Angeles') Mulholland Drive, which has been done many times, and a motorist goes by, he doesn't look approvingly on that production, but is likely to curse it for the inconvenience it causes," said Sam Arkoff, an independent producer.

In comparision, a crowd of 2,500 people lined up for two days in Pontiac, Ill., recently for $30-a-day jobs as extras in the movie, "Grandview USA."

Los Angeles charges $100 a day for film permits, while nearby Santa Monica demands $400 a day. California's state parks charge $600-$900 daily. And filming in the affluent communities of Beverly Hills or San Marino is rare at any price.

Noting the "astronomical levels" of California's state park filming fees, Bob Hirsch, director of the motion picture division of the Nevada Commission on Economic Development, said Nevada, like virtually every other state but California, charged nothing for filming permits.

"Some of the guild restrictions can literally prove to be prohibitive in terms of a certain film with a restricted budget," said Rick Bieber, vice president of business affairs for HBO Premiere Films.

Bieber said the U.S-Canadian monetary exchange rate alone made it 20 percent cheaper to shoot north of the border. Cost-conscious producers of HBO's "The Glitter Dome" chose Vancouver, British Columbia, for a 1940s story about two cops trying to solve the murder of a Hollywood film mogul. The film company imported Southern California palm fronds to give the set a "Hollywood look."

Rich Little voices opinion

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Canadian Rich Little can't vote in the upcoming American presidential race but he does have a voice in it.

The impressionist, in fact, is wondering what the 1984 election holds for him. "What if America elects a president I cannot do?" he asked.

He has President Reagan down pat but he can't get a grip on Vice President George Bush.

"Bush simply doesn't impact on my audience right now," he said. "Nobody really knows what he sounds like. People like Henry Kissinger, for example, register immediately. But Bush, who has been around the White House for three years, might as well be Marcel Marceau."

The recent announcement by civil rights activist Jesse Jackson to run for president pleases Little. "There's definite style, a lot of charismatic animation, and an unusual voice there. He's also certainly been visible — all requirements for inclusion in my act. I'm working on Jackson's voice now."

Nicaragua softens hard stance despite opposition

By JOSEPH B. FRAZIER

An Analysis

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The leftist government's recent softening of its hard-line policies, apparently in response to foreign military and economic pressures, is taking place despite opposition by some powerful national leaders.

In recent days the government has eased press censorship, offered amnesty to dissidents, freed 300 imprisoned Miskito Indians, and shown willingness to work with the Roman Catholic church.

It has sent home some of the thousands of Cubans technicians and on Sunday announced that an electoral process would begin early in 1984.

The Sandinista leadership "seems more willing to make openings, but their big question is, how do they do it without appearing weak," Monsignor Bismarck Carballo, spokesman for the Catholic church, said in an interview.

He spoke after Venezuelan church leaders met with Nicaraguan leaders and received the impression the Sandinistas were easing pressures on the church.The meeting came a month after pro-government mobs attacked priests in their churches because of church opposition to a new military draft law.

Carballo confirmed what other political observers here have said for some time — there is a significant and widening split between those in the government who favor dialogue and moderate changes and those who want to continue to follow a hard line.

Those in favor of the changes are led by Daniel Ortega, coordinator of the ruling three-man junta. Those opposed are led by Interior Minister Tomas Borge. Both are among the most powerful men in the country, and recent events indicate Ortega's view is holding sway.

Others downplay the internal struggle and say the Sandinistas are simply being pragmatic.

The government "is under a variety of pressures including the realization that military action against them is feasible," said a foreign diplomat who asked not to be named.

"The changes they are making are not because they are having a change of heart. It has nothing to do with that."

He said the changes are at least in part an attempt to stave off an invasion Nicaragua has long said is imminent from the United States or rightist governments in the region.

But the diplomat said the United States was not yet convinced that many of the changes are more than "window dressing."

He predicted pressures by the United States and other countries would not ease "until the major concerns of the countries in the region are adequately addressed."

The concerns include a military buildup, the presence of thousands of Cubans, and Nicaraguen aid to rebels in neighboring countries, especially El Salvador.

Some Salvadoran guerrilla leaders based here have left in recent weeks, apparently at the request of the Sandinistas. An estimated 2,200 Cubans also reportedly have left in recent weeks, most of them teachers. U.S. sources estimate 2,000 Cuban military advisers remain, although the government says there are only 200.

The changes were not enough to persuade the United States to grant a visa to Borge, who had planned a speaking tour of the United States last week.

Observers say the opening may also be seen as necessary by the Sandinistas to get aid for its foundering economy.

Listeners tune in to matrimony

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — Listeners of radio station WLAC-AM are invited to a wedding — but they have to tune in Friday if they want to catch the nuptials of talk show host Rich Garratt and Diana Swan.

Garratt, who has been hinting on the air that something big was in store, dropped the bombshell recently during his two-hour show.

Drug use rises dramatically in Chile

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Drug use is dramatically on the rise and becoming the focus of national attention in Chile.

Recent studies show that 25 percent of people between the ages of 17 and 25 in Santiago, the capital city of 4 million, suffer some form of chemical addiction.

Chileans were shocked by accounts in October of the drownings of three working-class teen-agers in a lagoon after a night of drinking and drug-taking. They were even more shocked when hundreds of apparently drugged youngsters showed up for the funeral.

The problem exploded into a political issue recently when the health minister, Dr. Winston Chinchon, charged that drug use increased 40 percent on days of mass protests against the 10-year-old military regime of President Augusto Pinochet.

Chinchon said the government had investigated 40 doctors on suspicion that they intentionally gave drugs to protesters before anti-regime demonstrations. Twelve of them face formal indictment.

On the other side of the political fence, opposition activists claim that unidentified civilians, presumably secret police agents, have been turning up in anti-government neighborhoods before such demonstrations, offering marijuana to young people in exchange for information.

Dr. Juan Luis Gonzalez, president of Chile's most important doctors association, said it was oversimplifying things to point to ideology as a direct cause of drug use.

"The problem is not basically political," he said. "It is a result of many factors: poverty, hunger, unemployment, recession, frustration and a moral crisis."

Gonzalez said the doctors association had been trying for some time to get the government to do something about the growing drug and alcohol problem, but with no results.

"Now, all of a sudden, we get this spectacular denunciation (of drug use by protesters)," he said. "It is very strange."

The Roman Catholic Church, which last year opened a drug rehabilitation center, says rapidly growing numbers of slum children, hungry and despondent, sniff industrial glue to get high and take their minds off more pressing problems. Later they "graduate" to amphetamines and marijuana.

Judge wants to end 18th-century dress

SYDNEY, Australia (AP) — It's time to deflate pompous Australian judges and to get them and lawyers out of uncomfortable 18th-century courtroom wigs and robes "resembling a dress," says a senior judge.

"It saddens me to observe lawyers whom I have known for years...inflate like bullfrogs the moment they take their place on the bench," says Justice Jim McClelland.

He also told a meeting of the Journalists' Club recently that Australian law must be demystified and the first step should be abolishing the robes and wigs worn by lawyers and judges.

"I have never been able to understand how the administration of justice is enhanced by barristers and judges, especially on a muggy Sydney day, donning a starched collar, putting on a little bib, enclosing the torso in a vest, then adding a knee-length gown resembling a dress and garnishing it all with a dandy's peruke (wig) made of horsehair," he said.

Namibia remains under control of South Africa

OVAMBOLAND, South-West Africa (AP) — Independence, long a goal of black nationalists, the United Nations and major Western nations, appears a long way off for South-West Africa.

After 17 years of guerrilla war, the territory also known as Namibia is firmly in the hands of South Africa. Its soldiers control the war zone and its money and civilian officials are dominant everywhere else in the territory.

Even if guerrillas of the leftist South-West Africa People's Organization did come to power, they would inherit a country as dependent on South Africa as any of South Africa's tribal homelands. Annual South African aid, not counting war costs, totals the equivalent of $540 million.

SOUTH Africans hold crucial jobs in transport, health, education and agriculture. Army personnel hold about 250 such jobs in the northern war zone — Ovamboland, home of the 500,000 Ovambos who make up half of territory's population.

South Africa has accepted independence in principle but has tied elections to the withdrawal of an estimated 25,000 Cuban troops from neighboring Angola. The United States, leader of Western efforts to arrange peace, backs the South African view. Angola, fighting an anti-Marxist movement, says the Cubans must stay.

Some 15,000 to 20,000 South African troops, plus additional soldiers from a territorial force under their command, have reined in SWAPO with massive cross-border raids against guerrilla camps in Angola.

FOR the first time since 1979, the annual number of SWAPO guerrillas killed is likely to be under 1,000. South African commanders say this reflects sharply reduced SWAPO infiltration.

Civilian losses to landmines and bush skirmishes have dropped to just over 100 so far this year.

"There is no war in Ovamboland," said Andreas Shipanga, a founding member of SWAPO who split to form his own party.

If there is no war in Ovamboland, which extends 95 miles south from the Angolan border, that would mean there is no war in all of Texas-sized Namibia. SWAPO was founded by Ovambo tribesmen and draws the bulk of its support from them.

SOUTH Africa invaded South-West Africa, then a German colony, at the request of the Allies in World War I and was subsequently given a League of Nations mandate to administer the territory. South Africa has ignored a United Nation revocation of the mandate.

Gold-rich South Africa can pay the bill of a Namibian stalemate for years, while mining Namibia's diamonds and uranium and keeping the territory as a buffer between South Africa and Angola.

Despite successes in warfare, South Africa has been unable to achieve its main nonmilitary goal of establishing a civilian government as a credible alternative to SWAPO. Many Namibian analysts believe that SWAPO would win elections, even though it is losing on the battlefield.

SEVEN Namibian political parties have begun talks in hopes of developing a coalition to press for independence. But founders of the effort are not optimistic and have no timetable.

Islanders don't want Boston bank

BOSTON (AP) — In this corner stands the Bank of Boston, $18.7 billion in assets and offices around the world.

In the other corner is Martha's Vineyard National Bank, assets of $35 million, branches in Edgartown and Oak Bluffs. Plus a summer office in Chilmark.

Bank of Boston Corp., the nation's 18th largest bank holding company, wants to buy Martha's Vineyard National Bank, a tiny institution with 5,000 customers. The residents of the small resort island want nothing to do with the Boston bankers.

To get the message across, 1,800 people — some 25 percent of the island's population — have signed petitions asking the state Board of Bank Incorporation to turn down Bank of Boston's bid to buy controlling interest in their bank.

ISLANDERS HAVE even formed an organization — Friends of Island Banks — to fend off the fiscal invasion from the mainland.

William Honey

"They see that it's an off-island institution that's trying to force its way down here," said William Honey, the president of the island bank.

Bank of Boston, he said, "is showing an arrogance often displayed by large corporations and the islanders don't want any part of it. This is definitely a David and Goliath competition."

But the officials of the Boston company are a bit bewildered at the opposition. The bank company has acquired nine banks in the past decade with barely a whisper of complaint.

"IT'S DOUBTFUL that we would change much," said spokesman Wayne Taylor. "It's doubtful we would even change the name."

Bank of Boston first approached the board of directors with an offer to buy the bank in June. The offer was generous. Bank of Boston would pay $47.50 a share of bank stock that carries a book value of around $22. The offer was turned down.

Taylor said Alfred Hall, board chairman of Martha's Vineyard National Bank and its largest shareholder, originally approached Bank of Boston last spring, and later agreed to sell 30 percent of the little bank's stock.

Last month the Federal Reserve Bank gave Bank of Boston its approval to purchase the stock, saying "The transaction would be in the public interest."

"THE ISLAND had a right to expect better," Henry Beetle Hough, the venerable author and editor of the Martha's Vineyard Gazette, wrote in his weekly editorial Nov. 18.

"The issue, vitally important to the island and of national significance, also is that of centralization against local initiative and local independence," Hough wrote.

Honey said those opposed to the sale were afraid Bank of Boston could "crush" the island's three other banks.

"We compete, but we don't use supermarket tactics," said Honey, who started at the bank 44 years ago, first sweeping the stairs, then climbing the corporate ladder from bookkeeper to teller to president.

Richard Reston, the newspaper's executive editor, said the hue and cry over the takeover bid came from residents' fears that the unique life on the island would be tainted by the everyday business world of the mainland, and that new investment and new development would disrupt the island's quiet pace.

German astronaut swears in English

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Spacelab astronaut Ulf Merbold's native language is German, but when he accidently turned off a switch and spoiled an experiment, the expletive he chose was a very active English verb.

Merbold, a West German physicist who is the first non-American member of a U.S. space crew, was floating around in Spacelab when his foot brushed against a switch and turned it off.

"I'm in trouble," he told the ground. "I hit the 54 switch. I lost everything."

Officials in the science control room told him the switch turned off a furnace that was melting a silicate. The experiment, they said, would have to be restarted.

"Aw," said Merbold. Then he added the active verb.

Make Christmas A Snap

With Our Holiday Camera and Accessories Guide

Cameras make Christmas memorable

Christmas morning grab your robe and instant camera to capture the moment your youngster has been waiting for. For excitement and happiness there is no match for Christmas Day, and there is no better way to capture that delight than with an instant camera.

Photographing children: Snap or challenge?

How do you best record a child's growing up years? Take lots of photos, advises Pentax Life Editor Corinne Dubois. While formal portraits can be keepsakes, don't rely on them to capture your child's individuality. The personality of young subjects may best be portrayed by the parent patient enough to stalk the sandbox, camera in hand.

Be comfortable with your camera equipment, said Dubois. While creativity is more important than gear, the right equipment for you could be the key to unlock your potential. The new crop of compact 35mm rangefinders, for example, are fully automatic for a spontaneous shot.

Single Lens Reflex photography allows for flexibility in choosing lenses and many new SLR cameras can be manually operated or set for automatic exposure control. Some models set aperture and shutter speed for you. For general shooting situations you should find the standard lens that the camera came with is appropriate; it nearly duplicates the view and perception of what you see.

Lenses for specific situations include the telephoto, which can help record children at play. A moderate telephoto, such as a 100mm or 135mm, allows for tight, close-up shots at a comfortable working distance from the subject. A wide-angle lens is a boon in tight spaces but can also distort images.

Dubois offers some suggestions to help the amateur achieve better results in photogrphing children, regardless of type of equipment used. While everyone has realized the elusive nature of a certain gleeful expression and the quick-silver attention span of small children, turning these quirks of nature into assets is a trick.

First, get your children into a comfortable routine with the camera. If you carry it around with you often they will stop paying attention to it.

Before snapping the shot take a look at the backgrond. Is it cluttered? Will the subject, especially if he/she is an infant, be lost? Are there distracting bright colors; does a tree "sprout" from the child's head?

Your object is to fill the frame. This may mean getting on your hands and knees, even on your stomach. Get to the child's own eye level. Filling the frame properly will mean deciding on vertical vs. horizontal format: is the child sitting, lying down? Don't use a flash at close range (under three feet) as it could wash out the image.

You have seen the portraits of stiffly grinning or slightly weepy children. Chances are the subject's time fuse blew. Children who are ingrossed in an activity can be kept happily in one spot the longest. When you attempt a format portrait do the experimenting with the camera settings and background prior to posing the subject.

Photos of children: Tips from experts

Compostion: Look before you shoot

— Determine whether a horizontal or vertical format will best fill the frame.
— Plan background to eliminate distractions.
— Photograph the child from his/her own eye level.
— Try moving child toward center of frame rather than in exact center. Experiment.

— Telephoto lenses help capture children at play.
— A standard lens is good for general shooting situations providing view and perspective similar to what you see.

Working with children: Keep your camera ready

— If the children are accustomed to seeing you with camera they will act more naturally.
— Formal portraits require advance preparation for a speedy sitting.

New cameras easy to operate

By JENNY CUMMINGS
Copley News Service

As the holiday season approaches, it's time to get the photo gear in shape once again. First, of course, make sure to have plenty of film on hand so you don't miss those once-in-a-lifetime shots.

After you have the equipment all set, take a look at your attitudes. Is there only one family member who takes the holiday pictures each year? Do most of the pictures show kids opening gifts? If so, this could be the year to change your habits, to let others enjoy the fun of photography and to begin your children's photographic education.

Modern cameras have become so simple that they can be operated, literally, by a child. Many of the newer models require only the press of a button to take good photos — nothing to focus, no exposure to set, no flashbulbs or batteries to worry about. These cameras automatically fire the flash when it is needed and advance the film after each shot, leaving the photographer free to concentrate on the basics of a picture, such as pretty framing.

Children will love being able to take pictures of their parents opening the gifts they gave them or being able to photograph their friends, pets or prized possessions.

Try to involve more adults in the picture-taking, too. If the same person is missing from most of the holiday pictures in your photo albums, the odds are that's the person who does most of the photography. By passing the camera among the whole family, you can get pictures of everybody enjoying the holidays.

Of course, you don't have to wait until Christmas morning to take your pictures. Photograph people wrapping gifts, finding and trimming the tree and preparing special holiday treats. Keep your camera ready for unexpected events, too, like long-lost friends who drop in or carolers making a visit.

— Beware of shiny surfaces if you're using a flash. A mirror or window may reflect the flash back into the camera, causing a white "hot spot" on your picture. When a flash is aimed at a reflective surface, avoid shooting directly into it. Instead, shoot at an angle, from slightly to one side.

— Vary the angles, distances and styles of your pictures. Don't forget that you can shoot with the camera held horizontally or vertically. Try both before selecting your composition.

Planning necessary for better holiday photos

Americans will take more pictures at Christmas than at any other time this year, according to photo-industry statistics. Here is a checklist to make sure that you get the best possible snapshots:

— Film: If there is leftover film in your camera have it processed now. Start fresh for the holidays. Describe the kind of shooting you will be doing to your photo dealer and ask him to suggest the best film. The new super-fast films are great for subdued indoor lighting but they can result in overexposure when used out-of-doors, especially with a flash.

— Loading: Check to see if the film is advancing properly. How depends on your camera. With most single-lens reifex cameras see if the film rewind knob rotates. If it doesn't you will be shooting a roll of blanks.

— Flash: Most automatic cameras warn you when flash is advisable because of low-light conditions. If needed flash is not used the result can be fuzzy pictures with an orange cast. Pictures taken outside of a flash's range will be underexposed — dark.

— Focus: If you have an automatic focus camera there is no need to worry. But if your camera requires focusing do it quickly and leave it set at that point. If you fiddle with the focus everything starts to look sharp.

Composition: Study the viewfinder for a second or two before snapping your picture. Check the background. Is there something back there that will appear to be growing out of your subject's head? Squeeze; don't push.

— Contrast: Watch out for scenes in which part of your subject is brightly illuminated with the rest in deep shadow. Today's miracle films won't be able to bridge the gap if it is too great. Even illumination is best.

— Action: Too slow a shutter speed and a moving subject will be blurred. If your camera does not have a shutter speed adjustment and the light is low use flash. It is also easier to freeze action that is coming at you rather than crossing your field of view.

— Blinkers: One way to get shots of people with their eyes open is to ask then to close their eyes and then open them. Shoot then. Or you can cheat a little. Say you will count to three. Shoot on the count of two. Asking your subject to say "cheese" sounds corny but it works.

Professional photographers list common 'goofs'

The frustration and embarrassment of missing that terrific shot because you left the lens cap on or double exposing your film by accidentally putting a used roll of film back in your camera are not limited to the amateur photographer. In fact the experts have compiled a list of common errors to watch out for based on their own experiences. Here are some frequently encountered problems of photography that all are susceptible to:

— Camera loaded improperly. Always be sure that the film leader is securely engaged on the sprockets, both at the top and the bottom. In order to see that the film moves smoothly around the take-up reel, snap one test shot and advance the film before you close the camera.

— Camera opened in middle of a roll. To determine if any film is in the camera cover the lens, click shutter button and wind to the next frame. There should be no tension as you advance and the knob on the left side of your camera should not move. Next you should press the rewind knob and begin rewinding. Again there should be no tension. Most likely there is no film in the camera.

— Wrong ASA speed. Each time you load a new roll of film be sure to reset the correct ASA for that roll. If you find that you have used the wrong ASA go to a custom film lab to have the film developed. They might be able to compensate for this during developing.

— Camera moved. This is most common with "pocket" cameras that are small and cannot absorb the shock when the shutter is pushed down. To avoid blurry photos practice being steady with your camera. Right before you shoot breathe in deeply and partially exhale. Using a tripod or other support is most helpful in this situation.

For those who need a "brush-up" on the terminology of camera use and features, here is a list of common expressions:

— F-stop number: indicates the size of the aperture and determines the amount of light entering the lens and striking the film. The smaller the number, the wider the lens opening, and the more light the film is exposed to. The larger the number, the less light.

— Shutter: controls the length of time that the film is exposed to light.

— Aperture: the round opening in the lens of the camera that regulates the amount of light permitted to strike the film. The size of this opening is represented by the f-stop number.

— ASA: a number that indiciates the film's sensitivity to light. It is written on the box of film itself. The larger the ASA number, the more sensitive the film is to light. The smaller the number, the less sensitive the film is.

— Depth of field: the portion of sharpness of focus in front of and behind your subject. The depth of field becomes deeper as the f-stop number is increased.

— Wide-angle lens: provides a broad range of view for inclusion of maximum area in the photo.

Family group portraits make Christmas memorable

By MELANIE HOWARD
Copley News Service

When grandparents or other loved ones live faraway, one of the best ways you can stay in touch this Christmas and after is with a family group portrait framed and ready to hang on their walls.

If it's been a few years since you've had a family group portrait made, it may be time to have another that shows how the children have grown.

A family portrait made by a professional photographer can be as creative and varied as your lifestyle. For a formal, traditional look, you can arrange to have a portrait made in the studio with dramatic lighting and background. For a photograph that captures a more informal lifestyle, consider a portrait made in your home or outdoors in a park or other suitable location.

Because the pre-Christmas season may be the photographer's busiest during the year, it is wise to plan ahead for an appointment.

When you make the appointment with the photographer, select the style and setting for the portrait session. The professional will be able to answer any questions you may have about coordinating clothing colors and styles for each member of the family.

Generally, it is best for women to select outfits with long or three-quarter-length sleeves, flattering — not bulky — necklines and a minimum of jewelry and accessories. Black and stark white should be avoided except as accent colors. Men can opt for conservative business suits — again, avoiding solid black — or coordinated slacks, sweaters and shirts for an informal portrait. Children should be dressed in appropriate outfits, but avoid T-shirts and jeans, which will soon look outdated.

Your photographer will probably advise bringing two or three choices of oufits for each person to the portrait session.

If you have a treasured family pet, you may wish to have it in the group portrait. Alert your photographer ahead of time so he is prepared to handle and pose the pet.

If your children are grown and away at school, try to arrange a portrait session for the Thanksgiving weekend when they will all be home to celebrate.

If you don't have enough time between the portrait session and Christmas to have the final photograph framed and wrapped, ask the photographer to make a small print of the selected view and give this to your loved ones with a note explaining the present to come.

Quality camera special gift for Christmas giving

Should you consider a quality camera as a Christmas gift? Not long ago you would have been gambling if you did unless you were gifting an experienced photographer. Fine cameras were complicated and expensive.

That has all been changed. There are now a number of easy-to-use models that will produce clear and sharp prints as large as 11 x 14-inches and even 16 x 20-inches from 35mm negatives, and most are moderately priced.

Automation is what makes these cameras so simple most any beginner can use them. Some automatically load the film for you. These models also have miniature motors that automatically advance the film after each exposure and then rewind it at the end of the roll. Some have automatic focusing and most all of them feature automatic exposure and automatic built-in flash.

Most of these cameras are what the photo experts call "lens-shutter" models in which the shutter is part of the overall lens assembly permanently attached to the camera body. This means that you can't use different lenses — wide angles and telephotos with the latter being ideal for most sports photography. For that you will need a single lens reflex or "SLR" as they are called.

When giving someone a camera give some film too, possibly as a stocking stuffer. The color print films rated at ASA 100 to 400 are suitable for most shots. Another appropriate stocking stuffer is a packet of lens cleaning tissue.

Also make sure that the batteries in the camera are fresh. Because you have bought them new doesn't always mean that they are fresh. Ask the dealer to check them.

Color photographs perfect presents for family, friends

The Christmas season is a time of celebration, made especially festive through the exchange of gifts with family and friends. But choosing just the right gifts is often a confusing and frustrating task. This Christmas season why not give your loved ones photographs.

A photograph is the perfect gift to share with those who mean the most to you, to demonstrate how much you care. An attractively matted, framed and personally signed color photograph can preserve a special moment in time as a precious and vivid memory that lasts a lifetime.

The vibrant colors of the holiday season are perfectly suited to color photography. Photographs of the family gathered around the Christmas tree or in front of a crackling fireplace will be especially treasured as gifts.

A photograph offered as a gift should represent your best efforts, and choice of film is important. For indoor and outdoor family portraits or scenic shots, a fine grain film with an ASA/ISO of 100 provides brilliant color saturation and sharp definition, qualities especially important if you plan to make enlargements.

When photographing under low light conditions or shooting candid or action scenes, a faster film that is more sensitive to light and permits the use of a faster shutter speed is recommended.

Do not limit your subject matter by any means only to loved ones. An architectural study of a friend's home will be cherished by the owner. Any animal lover will be grateful to receive a photo of a beloved pet. Try to match the subject of the photograph to the interests of the person and your gift is bound to be a source of delight.

— Always check to make sure your camera and flash unit are working properly. Thoroughly familiarize yourself with your equipment, remember to remove the lens cap and be certain the film is properly loaded.

— Use plenty of film, match the film type to the situation and light conditions and bracket exposures in order to be sure the exposure will be correct and to be able to select from a variety of lighting effects.

— Plan ahead. Try to schedule your shootings far enough in advance of the holidays to take advantage of beautiful outdoor lighting conditions when they present themselves.

— Pre-visualize the photograph you intend to take. Move in close to the subject so the image fills the viewfinder. Change positions, shoot from several angles, place subjects in front of a variety of backgrounds.

— Be aware of color. Brilliant colors, pleasing natural patterns and brignt, even lighting produce the best family portraits, while more dramatic lighting enhances the beauty of scenes and environmental shots.

— When shooting family portraits, for color harmony coordinate clothing and select a complementary backgronud. Never allow the background to distract from or overpower the main subject of the photograph.

— Carefully examine the full selection of photographs before selecting the final shots for enlargements. Check for closed eyes, unappealing facial expressions, unsightly or intrusive background elements, accidental scratches and spots on the negative or transparency caused by handling. Problems are always far more apparent in enlargements. After the photographs have been enlarged and printed, check again for any unattractive elements. Use your most critical eye to determine if the photographs truly represent your best work. If not, reevaluate your selections and enlarge additional shots.

— Choose mats and frames that complement the photograph. Most photography labs or retailers offer custom mounting and framing services as well as greeting card and Christmas card services.

Whether they live down the block or miles away, grandparents will appreciate the Christmas gift of a portrait of their families.

Burnout relieved by holiday spirit

Suffering from burnout weeks before the holidays arrive? Sick of the crowds, confusion and commercialism long before December 25? This year give yourself and your family the gift of a happier, more relaxed holiday. The following tips will help you rediscover the Christmas Spirit:

— Simplify shopping. Make a gift list and stick to it as closely as possible. Try to think of personalized gifts with long-lasting appeal. Group gift selections by store and head for a shopping mall or department store where you can make most purchases. Set aside one to two days for shopping, arrive early and avoid distractions. For example consider giving an instant camera to family and friends.

— Wrap as you buy. Don't gift wrap on Christmas Eve — that's the time you will want to put your feet up before the busy day. Before you wrap take an instant picture of each gift, date it and note who it is for. Having pictures on hand will help you avoid duplicate gifts next year.

— Even young children can do creative, personalized packaging. Display the decorated packages to add to the festive atmosphere.

— Find pleasure in giving. Thoughtful attention to your gift selections pays off in the heartfelt pleasure and enthusiasm of the recipient. Let the children in your house decide on the "perfect" gift for Mom, Dad or grandparents. Involving the children helps then experience the special pleasure in giving a gift.

— Take time for fun. Schedule Christmas dinner to allow for sit-down time with family and friends. Set aside time to let the children demonstrate their new toys. Enjoy a look at the gift book or sing a carol around the piano. An instant camera will add to the fun of the moment and provide a lasting record of the day's events.

— Share the holiday spirit. Remember old friends and faraway relatives with a special holiday note and an instant picture of the family. Personalize thank-you notes by including an instant picture of the gift being unwrapped. Or take shots of the children on their new sleds or in their new sweaters to accompany their post-Christmas notes. Collect the fun shots you took on Christmas day, date them and put them in an album.

Encourage children to select and wrap their very own Christmas gifts for members of their families. By sharing the pleasure involved in giving they will double their enjoyment of the day.

Home video cameras, picture perfect gifts for the holidays, are now actually outselling home movie cameras. Last year for the first time electronics manufacturers sold more than 190,000 home video cameras in the United States, a figure that exceeded the sales of 8mm and super-8 movie cameras combined.

There are many reasons why the popularity of video cameras is increasing so rapidly. Home video cameras have many advantages over conventional movie cameras. When you shoot a scene with a video camera you can rewind it and take a look at it on the spot without sending any film out to be developed. You can't ruin a videotape by exposing it to light. You can use videotape over and over and that can save money. You can watch a tape on any TV set without setting up a projector. And, since a videotape can run for two hours or more you will never again have to put up with the hassles of changing, cutting and splicing film.

Now for some specific answers to your questions:

— Video cameras are designed to be used with videocassette recorders. If you plan to do any outdoor shooting you will probably want to use your camera with a portable VCR. You can sling your VCR over your shoulder, connect it to your camera and start shooting. Your camera will run off the rechargeable battery pack built into your VCR.

— If you want to use your camera indoors off house current, you will need another component — an AC adaptor designed to match your camera. Retail prices of AC adaptors range from around $50 to more than $100, depending on the kind of VCR you own and the kind of camera you buy.

— Lights and tripods are also handy accessories for both indoor and outdoor shooting. You won't need any special accesories to shoot in color since virtually all of the home video cameras now on the market are color models. You won't have to buy any special audio equipment since most home video cameras are equipped with built-in microphones. Some cameras have mikes mounted on little telescoping booms above the lens, and a good boom mike usually works better than one hidden away in the front panel of a camera.

— Retail prices of home video cameras range from around $600 to more than $2,000 and you can get just about as many special features as you can afford. One feature to look for is an eletronic viewfinder — a tiny, built-in black and white TV monitor that works just like an optical viewfinder. With an electronic viewfinder you can rewind and review a scene you have just shot without lugging a television set around. And that is one good reason to choose a camera with an electronic viewfinder.

Other important features of video cameras include:

— A color temperature control. This mysterious-sounding feature is usually a simple switch used to set a camera for indoor or outdoor shooting. Its name stems from the fact that hot light sources such as the sun give off a different kind of light than cooler sources such as light bulbs. A color temperature control does what filters do on film cameras.

— A white balance control is also a color-compensation control. On some cameras it is automatic and on others it is manual. An automatic white balance control with a manual override is a nice feature if you are new to home video but don't want to outgrow your camera.

— A zoom lens is a very useful feature, both for special effects and to switch between closeups and wide-angle shots without changing lenses. A 1:6 zoom lens will zoom farther in and out than one with a smaller ratio, such as 1:4. Some lenses also have a feature called a macro for extremely closeup shooting.

— Low-light lenses can be adjusted for use in very low light. A lens with an f1.4 iris setting can take pictures in lower light than one with a larger f-stop rating such as 1.6.

Other special features for home video cameras include viewfinders that can be used on either side of the camera, standby switches to cutdown the drain on VCR batteries and low-light sensitivity switches, also called automatic gain controls. Some new video cameras even have built-in letter and number generators that can be used to compose movie titles over any background.

Some home video cameras are lighter than others and some new models have new, improved picture tubes. Most cameras that have been around for a while use a standard RCA-developed tube called a Vidicon. New, more advanced tubes have names such as Newvicon, Saticon and Trinicon. And Hitachi recently introduced a new camera with no tube at all.

There will always be a place in the home for a good 35mm camera but it will have to make room for the video camera, a gift that can provide lasting enjoyment.

Holiday photographs special when children are subjects

By TRISH DiPETTE
Copley News Service

The holidays are approaching fast — that time of year when picture-taking and dressing up are customary. And with good reason. Just think of all the parties and activities that take place: Opening gifts under a gaily decorated pine tree, building a snowman, sitting on Santa's lap for the first time. These are only a few of the memories that make the holidays special. And photographs are a great way to capture these moments and treasure them forever. Kids can always be counted on to "ham it up" in front of the camera, so parents will want them to look their best, since it's the way they'll be remembered.

According to Betty Adcock, vice president of design for Nannette, "This season there are a variety of looks, fun or fancy, for the holidays and all the parties to come."

Parents can wrap their little ones in fashionable packages of delicate voile, luxurious velvet, plush panne or Shantung "silk" for formal shots, such as a family portrait. Picture-perfect styles feature elegantly engineered tucks or satin ribbon and lace that curve around a sleeve, and unusual collars that form a bow or a bordered "V" shape. Embellishments such as satin ribbon-beading, a soft sash at a dropped waistline, lace appliques and dainty embroidery accent dress-ups. Picture Brother and Sister in a classic navy and white nautical dress and John-John, or garnet panne styles. For less-formal occasions, a candy cane-striped mini-dress is paired with matching knee socks, while a group of minis with graphic animal appliques gets printed tights for a bit of whimsey.

Once your youngsters are dressed up and the festivities are underway, get your camera ready and click away. You don't have to be a professional photographer to take good pictures of your kids, nor do you need expensive equipment. For best results just keep a few things in mind:

— Keep the background simple (unless you want all the decorations and packages in the picture).

— Take the picture at eye-level. This will provide the best view of your child's face (and expressions) and make the photograph more personal and appealing.

— Be spontaneous. "Catch" your child while he or she is happily wrapped up in an activity (like making ornaments for the tree) and capture his or her enthusiasm.

— Move in as close as your camera will allow for impact.

Clothing is always a welcome gift, and doting relatives are notorious for lavishing mounds of presents on the children in their family. Send Grandma a photograph of your youngster wearing the outfit she gave him or her for a lovely thank-you and a cherished gift.

Most of what you will need is already in your house — bits of ribbons, trims, beads, buttons, flowers, shells, even pasta. The basis for each frame is a picture mat (available in variety, hobby and frame stores); some come in a variety of sizes, openings, colors and textures. If you use plain cardboard mats you will want to cover the whole mat with a wide ribbon or with fabric. To avoid having to turn the fabric under or having it ravel, glue tissue paper to the back of the fabric. Then glue the fabric on to the mat and cut out the opening and the excess off the edges without any trouble.

If your matboard is colored all you need to do is add a flower or two in one corner, a cluster of shells around the bottom of an oval opening or edge the opening with a lacy trim.

Home movies easier

A one-piece video camera/recorder is making it easier than ever before to shoot home video movies. With simple controls, variety of accessories for indoor and outdoor shooting and up to four hours of continuous recording, capturing special times and people has never been simpler.

VCR ideal family gift

Video cassette recorders (VCRs) are selling faster than ever, and it is not just price that consumers are looking for. What everyone is looking for now are features.

The big difference this year is that most of the changes involve the addition of extra-performance capabilities to lower-priced models or improvements in convenience cosmetics. There really are no major changes in speeds or functions that have outdated previous models.

Prices, too, have finally stabilized, with leader models starting at around $400. The difference is that the same amount of money now gets you a more reliable electronic VCR rather than the older mechanical tuning units. Almost all the step-up models now offer front loading slots for inserting the cassettes. This allows for slimmer design and for storing the VCRs in narrower cabinets.

VCRs are becoming easier to use, with single-button instead of two-button record control being the norm.

A much requested feature — multi-speed fast forward and reverse with visuals — is now standard on all but the lowest-priced machines. Electronic on-tape cueing permits automatic location of the start of individual programs recorded on the same tape.

New features include prompts, electronic alpha-numeric and graphic displays that let you know whether there is a tape in the VCR and will tell you what function is being performed.

CATV channel-tuning ability is available in both remote and manually tuned VCRs this year. This is a critical feature for those receiving cable as it eliminates the need for an extra cable decoder box for those who want to watch one channel while recording another. A decoder box will still be needed for pay-TV channels in areas where scrambling is used for security.

The biggest change in home-deck VCRs this year is in the audio rather than the video. Beta hi-fi VCRs now on the market and VHS hi-fi models expected to arrive by the end of this year offer a full-frequency stereo audio record and playback performance that is exceeded only by the latest in digital audio equipment.

Portables are coming into their own in 1983. Ultra-compact Beta and VHS models in the four-to-six pound weight range are available from most major manufacturers. As an enhancement most have the same performance features as the home decks and can be purchased with matching tuner-timers. These two-piece sets offer everything home decks can including wireless remote and cable reception.

Where portable VCRs are you are sure to find color camers. The changes in that field this year are just as innovative. This year's cameras are lighter in weight and more sensitive than ever. Prices start at about $500 or about half of what they were just two years ago. Step-up models feature power zoon, automatic focusing and white balancing, and electronic viewfinders. Many boast built-in time, date and character generators for titling.

Ultra-light cameras at ultra-high prices using solid-state imagers have been introduced. There are also portables designed for consumers who already have a home VCR deck and want to move to portability without duplicating the equipment they already own.

The basic parameters agreed to by an international standardization committee in Japan earlier this year, calls for a compact deck that will provide up to 90 minutes of record-play time from a metal tape cassette only slightly larger than a standard audio cassette. It will have hi-fi quality helical FM audio recording with space left over for stepping up to digital audio. While it is generally expected that many of the first 8mm VCRs will be available in one-piece camera combinations, that aspect wasn't addressed in the standardization agreement.

The differences in this year's video cassette recorders are improvements in performance capabilities, pricing and convenience. Speed and basic functions have not substantially changed over previous models.

Travels more fun with memories in photos

Part of the fun of traveling, whether summer or winter trips, is in reliving your experiences and sharing them with others through pictures. As you prepare for that trip make sure your camera is ready to capture those special moments and scenes you will always treasure.

If you already own a camera have it checked for any malfunctions. If you are purchasing a new camera especially for this trip be sure to take and develop some pictures beforehand to make certain you know how to handle the camera properly. Nothing is more disappointing than to take rolls of exciting travel photos and then have them turn out poorly or not at all.

Be sure to take plenty of film along with you, especially if you are going abroad. It is not always easy to find film and even when you can prices will be considerably higher in foreign countries.

Once you are on your trip keep your camera handy at all times. You never know when you will come across a scene you will want to capture on film. To make the most of photographic opportunities keep in mind these suggestions offered by the experts:

— When shooting a landscape try to keep the foreground as interesting as the rest of the scene by incorporating features into your composition.

— Don't overlook the smaller details of panoramic scenes or more mundane surrondings as you travel. These can make compelling pictures that capture the favor of where you have been.

— Try to take your photos in sequence so they will tell a story about your vacation and make more interesting viewing.

If you are going to be taking movies be sure and include plenty of close-ups. Avoid taking shots from a moving car and use zoom and panning techniques sparingly. Keep in mind that your film should tell a story about your trip so don't jump from one point to another that is hundreds of miles away, leaving a gap in your narrative. Take some transitional scenes to establish the sequence of events.

A little planning beforehand and a sharp eye for detail can ensure that your vacation photos or movies will provide enjoyable viewing long after the trip is over.

Instant camera thoughtful gift for Dad...

Who is the toughest guy in the world to buy just the right present for? It is Dad, of course. This Christmas another tie, shirt or pair of socks just doens't seem appropriate for telling him how much you care. There is always a useful gadget or workshop tool, but you are not sure just which one Dad wants. There is the latest best-selling novel, but he might prefer non-fiction. He likes to take pictures but he already has a camera...

Even hard-to-please dads will beam their approval when they unwrap an instant camera this Christmas. Features such as through-the-lens viewing, auto-focus and built-in flash help Dad make perfect pictures of hobbies, family fun or projects at work.

How about bringing Dad up to the minute with a new instant camera that will let him take pictures like a pro? Advanced electronics in auto-focus, auto-strobe cameras make picture taking more fun and more foolproof than ever.

Does Dad collect coins or stamps, build hobby kits or construct cabinets? A new instant camera will help him document his collection or record progress on projects. He can move in as close as 10.4 inches to make sharp, detailed images instantly.

Is gardening his specialty or does he spend his outdoor time hunting or fishing? Either way he can show off his success with instant pictures of the bountiful harvest or the big catch. Family get-togethers are always more lively when there are instant pictures to show and share, and graduations, weddings, and important family trips can be enjoyed on-the-spot and for years to come.

Instant pictures start working their magic at the push of a button. Dad doesn't have to be a genius to operate the camera, but the beautiful pictures it provides will make him look like one. Indoors and out, focus, flash and exposure are all controlled automatically.

If Dad feels guilty about all the fun he is having, advise him to take the camera to work. Instant pictures quickly prove their worth in marketing real estate, documenting insurance claims, taking inventory or adding visual support to presentations.

This year give Dad a special treat that will provide instant — and lasting — pleasure. After he says "Thank you," he will say "Smile!"

...And appreciated by Mom, too

The modern mother juggles a career, home and family. Wouldn't it be thoughtful to remember her this Christmas with a gift that she can use all year long, at home and at work.

An instant camera is a welcome gift that adds fun to holiday celebrations. Here are some ways Mom can use instant pictures to keep things running smoothly:

— Tired of hassling the kids to do their chores? Get the message across instantly and painlessly. Snap a picture of the cluttered room, the towering trash pail or the unwashed dishes. Note the child's name, the date and time on the bottom border of the picture and tape it to the refrigerator door. Have the kids photograph and document the completed chore and tape the evidence over the job reminder. Add an incentive by establishing a privilege for the task done best or most quickly.

— Simplify shopping. Take instant pictures of colors or patterns you want to match and slip the pictures into your pocketbook for shopping trips. Take your camera to the store and photograph possible puchases for study at home.

— Considering home repairs, some painting or landscaping? Be businesslike and document the work area with instant pictures to show the contractor exactly what needs to be done and help him give you accurate estimates. Take pictures of the job in progress and photograph any areas that need special attention. Pictures help prevent any misunderstandings and are solid evidence if anything goes wrong. In addition to making the job go smoothly instant pictures provide a lasting record of "before," "during," and "after" for the family album.

— Like to entertain? Busy mothers may long for an evening of adult company but when time is short the thought of an elegant dinner party is overwhelming. Instant pictures can help organize social events. Photograph table settings using different combinations of tablecloths, napkins and dinnerware. Snap flower arrangements, special casseroles, salads and hors d'oeuvres. Use the bottom border of the print to jot down names of florists, caterers or recipe books. You will have an instant reference file for planning every detail of your next party.

Along with that gift of a new instant camera for Mom or Dad, remember to include a box or two of film. That way all the fun and excitement of Christmas will be captured for the whole family to enjoy all year long.

Jack Henry

Henry has earned the title of Certified Photo Finishing Engineer. He has been in the photographic business for thirty years. The past two years he has been with Fotomakers.

The certification examination given by representatives of the society, tests the applicant's knowledge of the managerial and technical skills needed to operate a photo finishing plant. Successful completion of the test indicates that the applicant has thoroughly understood the the entire lab process.

Those who pass the exam and have at least five years experience in the photo finishing field are eligible to enter the society as Certified Photo Finishing Engineers. This is what Jack Henry has accomplished

PMA International, founded in 1924, is an international organization of photographic equipment retailers, photo finishers and repair firms. The association provides for nearly 10,000 members in the United States Canada, Mexico, Australia, New Zealand and 70 other countries, a wide range of services designed to assist them in operating their businesses.

Pet photos appealing

There are no more appealing photographic subjects than dogs and cats and none more difficult to catch on film. With a little camera savvy and a bit of animal psychology you can capture the essence of your pet on film.

Strange noises, even whistling through your teeth, will make your dog perk his ears and cock his head for the camera. A cat's curiosity will send her inside a brown paper bag and out again, hopefully head first, for a picture that clicks.

In such situations be prepared with your camera ready ahead of time. Take your photos at the pet's eye level. Shooting from above, a common mistake of amateurs, leads to distortion. Keep your backgrounds simple and a contrast in color to the subject. Study professional pet photographs you admire to learn the art of the well-composed picture.

Above all be patient. You won't be successful every time but with patience and a quick trigger finger you will someday get a photo of your pet that will be a lifelong treasure.

New cameras simple to use

Christmas morning is a time of action with gifts being opened and children playing with new toys. Thanks to modern high-technology cameras, stopping that motion for pictures is a matter of aim and shoot.

Suggestions for better video recordings offered

Taping your own home movies using a videocassette recorder and a video camera can be rewarding if you devise a method and plan of action before you actually shoot.

Before you go out and buy, here are a few tips from the Electronic Industries Association Consumer Electronics Group:

— It is wise for a beginner to buy a camera and a VCR of the same brand. Always try out the camera and recorder in the store. Make sure you have everything you need including a rechargeable battery and blank videotape. You might want to consider buying some accessories like a tripod and a carrying case with a shoulder strap.

— The first point to remember is to always look through the viewfinder and to never turn and check out the monitor to see what the picture looks like. The best idea is to not even connect the VCR to the TV when you are shooting indoors.

— Unless you are a great improviser don't get fooled into thinking that anything and everything you shoot will somehow end up as viewable material. This is not to say experimentation is out; it is very much encouraged. Just don't expect it to produce provocative material that will hold viewers enthralled.

— Indulge yourself to your heart's contnet when familiarizing yourself with the equipment and its capabilities, but when recording a piece intended for viewing by family, friends and relatives don't be self-indulgent. It is not necessary to spend hours planning your home movies. Just jot down some notes outlining what you would like to see on the finished product. Have an objective in mind which will serve as a road map of where it is you are going. Also consider staging a run-through of any specific action you have in mind to give yourself and your on-camera "talent" a sense of direction and unity. Remember that a little patience and planning go a long way. It will make your role as director/producer/cameraman that much easier and more effective.

— A common pitfall for many beginners is the tendency to turn the VCR on, point the camera and simply shoot everything in sight. You can avoid slipping into this by becoming as intimate as possible with the camera's features and controls. Develop a sensitive trigger finger for the camera's VCR pause control. After repeated practice with this touch-sensitive technique you will be able to catch all the essential action on tape and leave behind those static moments that prove dreadfully dull during playback.

— Assuming you are not yet ready for post-production editing (using two VCRs to remove and rearrange the sequence of selected shots) keeping a ready finger on the pause control is a convenient way of editing with the camera.

— A couple of other useful techniques to keep an eye on are "composition" and "framing." The first simply means that what goes into the viewing area should comprise a pleasant, balanced picture. Proper framing means fitting all elements of the picture composition within the borders of the viewing area. Leave room to spare because what you see through your camera's viewfinder may turn out to be a little more than what shows up on the TV screen when you view the playback.

— Even though you are using portable equipment you do not have to carry it around every minute you are shooting. There are those special occasions when continuous body movement is the only way to capture the true spirit of an event. Still you would be suprised how many times you can remain stationary and still capture exciting footage that evokes all the flavor of the scene on which you are focused.

— A good rule of thumb when taking video movies is that the action should be taking place in front of the camera, not behind it. Some behind-the-camera action is unavoidable. Hand-holding the camera can give you the shakes after only afew minutes, depending on how much it weighs and how well it is balanced. This is where a tripod comes in handy. The tripod actually frees you to appear on camera yourself and affords flexibility of camera movement that your hands could never match. If you do not have use of a tripod be sure to balance the camera securely on your shoulder or place it firmly against your body for maximum steadiness.

— Perhaps the most misused function on a video camera is the zoom lens control. It can never be used with too much discretion since the zoom's primary purpose is to let the camera operator adjust the focal length in between shots.

— One of the most important jobs of the person operating a video camera is to keep the on-camera subject(s) animated and inspired. This only applies if you are not shooting a pre-staged event. For original home movies remember that talk translates into action, so get a conversation going with your performers.

— Do not be surprised when you play back the tape to hear all the remarks and background noises that occurred during taping come over as part of the soundtrack. The camera's built-in microphone picks up everything, so keep that in mind during the recording process. You can always employ the standard audio dubbing feature to add new audio after the camera recording is over.

Video cassette recorders make family events special

Video cassette recorders (VCRs) and video cameras are more popular than ever this Christmas season. More and more Americans are discovering the fun and excitement of taping birthdays, anniversary parties and other special family events. But have you ever really considered all the things you can do with a VCR or video camera? Especially at this time of year, a video Christmas card might be just the right way to send Christmas greetings to family and friends.

According to video experts at General Electric, more than three million VCRs and 400,000 video cameras will be sold in the U.S. in 1983. By the end of the year about 8 percent of all U.S. households will own a VCR. These figures are expected to increase dramatically in years to come.

The popularity of video comes at the expense of old-fashioned film movie cameras and projectors. And it is easy to see why. For shooting home movies, video is both easier to use and less expensive.

With a video camera there is no need to worry about missing an important shot. Unsure whether you caught Junior blowing out his birthday candles? Simply pop the tape cartridge into the VCR and watch the replay, instantly. No need to wait days or even weeks for the film to return from the processor. Don't like what you saw? Simply re-shoot the scene.

Capture moments on video

Imagine the joy of capturing those precious moments of Christmas morning on video tape and being able to play them back through your television set later the same day — and for generations to come.

Millions of American families have discovered the pleasures of owning a video cassette recorder (VCR) not only for making instant "home movies," but for recording programs off the air and showing first-run films at home.

What better stocking gift for the VCR owner than a high-quality video tape? It is a practical, fun gift that is sure to be appreciated during the holiday season and long after. For less than $10 you can provide hours of enjoyment for the whole family.

Before you buy shop carefully, warned Mark Dellafera, marketing director for a large manufacturer of video and audio tape products. "Unless the results are picture perfect, with colors true to the original and without dropouts and annoying 'snow,' your gift can turn out to be a source of disappointment," he said.

"Beware of so-called bargain tapes and those sold in white boxes with no brand name. You may save a few dollars initially but if the picture begins to fade or break up after just a few plays it is certainly no bargain," he added.

Dellafera explained that making video tape is a highly complex process requiring the very finest care in manufacturing and strict quality control.

"We have found that chromium dioxide is the best metal pigment for both audio and video fidelity," he said. "Pure chrome particles are 'laborator;y-grown,' which gives you the best results in color, contrast and detail. Chrome also eliminates dropouts and visual 'noise' caused by large, irregular particles or uneven tape surfaces."

Hobbyists' gifts easy

Hobby gifts will be more welcome than ever this Christmas, thanks to the leisure time that more and more Americans are enjoying.

There is a wealth of hobby gifts to choose from, designed for beginners or experts alike.

From stamp collecting to embroidery, hobbies appeal to all ages and all types. Check your local craft or hobby shop for appropriate pursuits that will interest those on your list.

Security measures make it tougher to get inside White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — When it comes to new security procedures in Washington, it's getting tough on everyone.

Concrete barriers make a quick drive up to the White House gates on the south grounds impossible. Briefcases carried into White House offices are examined in spot checks for weapons and explosives. The limousines of visiting Cabinet members and other dignitaries are often given a once-over to see if bombs have been hidden underneath.

At a White House party the other day, Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, said that he, too, is taking some steps to make himself less conspicuous in security-conscious Washington.

"I'm taking off my license plate tags on my car. That's the first time in 17 years that I've done that. I like to drive around with Illinois license plates on. We're all more security conscious, at the Capitol. It's a lot more complicated than it's ever been before."

He said that he was planning to give up his Illinois VIP license plate and hide his foreign-made luxury car behind a more anonymous set of numbers.

• • •

At the party, a reception saluting five American artists being honored by the John F. Kennedy Center for the Performing Arts, President Reagan had a chance to deal with some familiar material.

First, he talked about choreographer Katherine Dunham, working from note cards. Then, it was Virgil Thomson, the composer. Then, he talked about Elia Kazan, the director.

But then, the president turned to the other honorees, Francis Albert Sinatra and James Stewart. It was not difficult for the president to carry out his emcee chores.

Sinatra, he said, developed "a distinctive song style — long phrases and glissade — that's technical talk for crooning."

Old Blue Eyes won an Oscar for his performance in "From Here to Eternity," Reagan noted, and he appeared in "On the Town" and sang with Bing Crosby in "High Society."

"You know, Frank, if they'd only given me roles like that, I never would have left Hollywood," Reagan said, adding that had he taken over Sinatra's roles in the musicals, "They'd have had to get you to dub the voice in."

As for Jimmy Stewart, a long-time Reagan friend, the president recalled this tale from his California political days:

"When Jack Warner, head of Warner Brothers, first heard that I was running for governor of California, he said, 'No, no. Jimmy Stewart for governor; Reagan for best friend.'"

NEIL SOLOMON, M.D.

Solomon

Dear Dr. Solomon: My father will be going for a coronary bypass operation, and he never even thinks that it might not be successful. But he has always been a very active person, and the thing that worries him most is whether he'll be able to return to work and do all the other things he's been accustomed to doing. What has been the experience of other patients who have had this type of operation? — Hal, Philadelphia

Dear Hal: The news appears to be good for patients who undergo coronary artery bypass graft surgery. Dr. C. David Jenkins, of the University of Texas Medical Branch in Galveston, reports that these patients enjoy an improved quality of life within six months after the operation.

Interviews with more than 300 patients both before and after surgery show that they experience less anxiety, fatigue, depression, and insomnia following the operation. In addition, 75 percent of those who had been employed prior to surgery returned to work within the six-month follow-up period, many within the second or third month. Twenty percent of those who had been unemployed before the operation also were able to return to work within six months after surgery.

A significant finding was that 71 percent of the patients who had the operation said they would do the same thing under similar circumstances, while only eight percent said they would not. The remaining patients reported that there decision would depend on the situation at the time.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Are there any figures that show how the new contraceptive sponge compares with the diaphram in relation to preventing pregnancy? They seem to be similar in many ways. — Ruth, Dover, Delaware

Dear Ruth: The effectiveness of the contraceptive sponge in protecting against pregnancy is about the same as that of the diaphram. About a 16 percent pregnancy rate was found among more than 700 sponge users. By comparison, the pill provides about 99 percent protection.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am 45 years of age and still have an occasional wet dream. Is this normal in a person my age? — Clarence, Ann Arbor, Mich.

Dear Clarence: Nocturnal emissions, which generally begin about one to two years after the start of puberty, may occur among men well past the age of 45.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My son is recovering from a case of mononucleosis, but the only medicine that the doctor gave him was aspirin. Aren't there other drugs that can be used to treat mononucleosis? — Mrs. F.O., Norfolk, Va.

Dear Mrs. O.: Steriods may be prescribed for some patients with infectious mononucleosis, but their use is limited to individuals with potentially serious complicatons. For example, severe neurological involvement may dictate the use of steroids. However, the possible side effects of these drugs rule out their general use.

Dr. Robert A. Gates, Jr., of the Tripler Army Medical Center in Hawaii, says that the treatment of infectious mononucleosis is primarily supportive since more than 95 percent of patients recover spontaneously. Patients are usually advised to avoid contact sports or heavy lifting during the first two to three weeks of the illness, and to use aspirin or acetaminophen as needed. Salt water gargles may help ease a sore throat, and laxatives may be advisable in the event of constipation to avoid straining.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I attended a health fair that was sponsored by a local hospital, and one of the doctors who spoke said that if he needed an operation, he would use his own blood if he needed a transfusion. How is something like that possible? — Sonia, Valparaiso, Ind.

Dear Sonia: The speaker was apparently referring to a procedure called autologous transfusion. Individuals who are scheduled to undergo elective surgery and who have several weeks in which to plan for the operation can arrange to set aside their own blood for use at the time of surgery. This practice virtually eliminates the risk of transfusion reactions.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I don't understand the meaning of the term "passive-aggressive," and I wonder if you would explain it. How can someone be passive and aggressive at the same time? It seems impossible to me. — Dot, N.Y.C.

Dear Dot: Aggression can be manifested in a variety of ways. For example, a person who procrastinates or who is stubborn may actually be expressing anger.

Dear Dr. Solomon: Can a lump on the breast mean something besides cancer? I think a lot of women may feel something on their breast but they don't go to a doctor because they're afraid of what he'll find. — Mrs. T.R., Flint, Mich.

Dear Mrs. R.: Most breast lumps are not cancerous but they should be evaluated by a physician. Early detection of breast cancer is the best assurance of a cure.

Dear George, Silver Spring, Maryland: I agree with you that shock-trauma units perform a tremendous service. But I would point out that the simple habit of using a seat belt can help reduce the need for these units.

(If you have a medical question write to Neil Solomon, M.D., 1706 Reisterstown Road, Baltimore, Md. 21208. Dr. Solomon cannot give personal replies but will answer as many questions as possible in his column.)

UNICEF says lives of many youngsters could be saved

UNITED NATIONS (AP) — Half of the estimated 40,000 children in developing countries who die each day from malnutrition, dehydration and illness could be saved through simple, low-cost remedies, the U.N. Children's Fund said today.

Last year, 15 million young children died in developing countries — equal to the number of children under 5 years old in the United States, UNICEF Executive Director James P. Grant said in his annual State of the World's Children report.

"They do not die from exotic causes requiring sophisticated cures. And for every child that has died, another has been left blind or deaf or crippled or retarded," he said.

UNICEF believes that widespread use of such low-cost remedies as 10-cent salt and sugar packets, reintroduction of breastfeeding, expanded immunization and monthly weight checks to guard against "invisible malnutrition" could help cut those numbers in half.

There are indications that as infant mortality rates drop, birth rates fall because parents who are confident of their children's survival have fewer babies, Grant said in his 42-page report.

Former presidents retired

GUATEMALA CITY (AP) — The military government is forcing four former presidents to retire from the army in an apparent attempt by chief of state Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia Victores to strengthen his rule.

The move was announced Wednesday in a decree published by the government. The decree also authorized military service for women and said any military person involved in "political militanacy" must resign.

Publication of the decree coincided with attacks by leftist guerrillas on five police checkpoints on keys highways leading into the capital. Police said five officers were killed and five wounded.

Reagan considers request

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan says he will give "immediate and serious consideration" to former Solidarity leader Lech Walesa's call for an end to economic sanctions imposed against Poland almost two years ago.

In a statement issued Wednesday, Reagan said he would consult closely with U.S. allies on Walesa's request, adding, "We have great respect and admiration for Lech Walesa, the courageous leader of Poland's free trade union movement."

Walesa said Monday that the sanctions should be ended because Poland needs "not losses of millions but aid of billions of dollars."

Navigational error blamed

TORONTO (AP) — An International Civil Aviation Organization report says a navigational error probably caused a South Korean airliner to stray over the Soviet Union before it was shot down with 269 people aboard, the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. reports.

The CBC said Wednesday the report suggests the Boeing 747's navigational computer probably was programmed with the wrong starting point, resulting in a course that took it over Sakahlin island, where Soviet warplanes shot it down Sept. 1. The report, drafted by ICAO investigators, is expected to be discussed by the ICAO council next week.

The jetliner had other navigational systems aboard besides the on-board computer. But the CBC quoted an ICAO official as saying that whatever scenario was chosen, "you have to make the assumption the crew wasn't paying much attention."

Assassination plan alleged

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Protestant politicians say the mainly Roman Catholic IRA may have launched an assassination campaign to wipe out Protestant leaders in this British-ruled province.

James Molyneaux, leader of the Protestant Official Unionist Party, told reporters Wednesday night the guerrilla group's murder of Edgar Graham, the party's law and order spokesman, indicates "a determined campaign to pick off the anchormen of the Unionist Party and the Loyalist (Protestant) community one by one."

The Rev. Robert McCrea of the Democratic Unionist Party told the House of Commons in London the Irish Republican Army and its rival Marxist offshoot, the Irish National Liberation Army, appeared about to launch "a competition of murder... against Loyalist politicians."

Andropov returns to work

NEW YORK (AP) — Western diplomats have seen Soviet leader Yuri V. Andropov in a limousine entering and leaving the Kremlin, indicating he has returned to work after a four-month absence, The New York Times reported today.

Quoting unidentified officials in a Washington-datelined story, the Times said Andropov's limousine and security convoy first were spotted going into the Kremlin one afternoon last week.

Monday and Tuesday of this week, the convoy was seen entering in the mornings and leaving in the afternoons, and Andropov, who reportedly has been in ill health, was identified as being in the Kremlin, the Times said.

U.S. diplomat expelled

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — The government ordered a U.S. diplomat to leave the country for allegedly receiving secret information about Soviet weapons purchased by India, a newspaper reported today.

The independent Indian Express said Harry Wetherbee, a first secretary, was accused of receiving the information from retired Indian military officers.

Both the Indian External Affairs and Defense Ministries declined to comment on Wetherbee's departure.

Pontiff to meet assailant

ROME (AP) — Pope John Paul II has asked to meet with the Turkish gunman who shot him in 1981 so he can personally convey his forgiveness, Italian newspapers said today.

Leading Italian papers, including La Repubblica of Rome and La Stampa of Turin, cited "authorative Vatican sources" as saying the pope has asked to meet with Agca.

The Vatican announced earlier this week that the pontiff will visit a Rome prison during the Christmas season as part of the celebrations for the current Holy Year of Redemption. It said the prison probably would be the Rebibbia facility where Mehmet Ali Agca is serving a life sentence for the May 13, 1981, attack on the pope and that the visit probably will take place Dec. 26.

Movie to trace Mao's life

PEKING (AP) — A movie tracing the life of Mao Tse-tung will be shown nationwide to mark the 90th anniversary of late Chinese leader's birth on Dec. 26, the official Xinhua News Agency reports.

The 80-minute color documentary includes rare footage never shown publicly before, Xinhua said. It starts with Mao announcing the foundation of the People's Republic of China in 1949, flashes back to earlier periods of his life and ends with a 1981 Communist Party meeting that criticized him posthumously, the agency added.

Mao died in 1976. A Communist Party resolution adopted at the 1981 meeting praised his contributions to the Communist victory in China but described the policies of his later years as politically divisive and economically unrealistic.

Four die in Hong Kong fire

HONG KONG (AP) — Four people were killed and 13 injured today in a fire which gutted four floors of an eight-story commercial-residential building in one of Hong Kong's busiest sections, police said.

Police said three of the victims were overcome by smoke before they were caught in the flames and a fourth was dead upon arrival at a hospital.

The fire broke out shortly before dawn on the first floor of the building in the Mongkok district and spread rapidly to other three floors. The fire was brought under control three hours later.
