Refugees' terror

Exiled Muslims fight for food, moan for dead

By Snjezana Vukic
Associated Press

TUZLA, Bosnian-Herzegovina — Dozens of dirty hands clawed upward in the hot air, trying to grab a yogurt, a lemon, or a cucumber being thrown to the sweaty, shouting women. Ajka Husic didn't join the fray.

She stood by, crying silently at the recollection of her 19-year-old son being put on display by Serb conquerors.

"I saw him, I saw my son captured and lying there with his hands tied behind his head," she said.

Traveling in a bus packed with refugees from the fallen U.N. "safe area" of Srebrenica, Husic spotted her boy, Fikret, through the steamy windows, among the men sprawled along the road, some captive, some dead.

"They (the Serbs) stopped the bus and told us: 'Look, this is your army,' and I looked at them and I saw him," she moaned. "I just screamed and called his name, but he couldn't hear me."

It was common knowledge in the refugee camp near Tuzla airport: Muslim men had been rounded up in the woods as they attempted to flee the advancing Serbs.

And with each new busload of refugees came new reports. Someone had seen someone's husband or brother or son lying by the side of the road, or being led away by Serb soldiers, or being shot.

8 oil companies cheat education, land office says

■ Officials sue companies claiming they took money from Texas schoolchildren by underpaying royalties that help fund education.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The state General Land Office sued eight major oil companies Friday, charging that they have cheated Texas schoolchildren out of millions of dollars by underpaying royalties that help fund public education.

The lawsuit names Amoco, Chevron, Exxon, Marathon, Mobil, Phillips, Shell and Texaco. Filed in a Travis County state district court, the lawsuit seeks class-action status and an undetermined amount of damages.

It accuses the companies of short-changing the state and private landowners by incorrectly computing their royalty payments.

"I believe the companies should pay royalties based on what the oil is worth, not on an artificial price they set themselves," Land Commissioner Garry Mauro said. "That is unconscionable at a time when Texas is struggling to adequately finance a decent education for its schoolchildren."

Officials with most of the oil companies either denied any wrongdoing or declined to comment, saying they had not yet reviewed the lawsuit.

"It's strictly about money, nothing else, and it's strictly about the interpretation of the fair market value of crude oil," said Chevron spokesman Neal Miller.

Oil companies pay royalties for the right to drill on government and privately owned land. In Texas, royalties from 13.3 million acres of leased state land are dedicated to the Permanent School Fund, which helps finance public education.

Since it was created in 1854, the fund has received $6.5 billion.

The lawsuit, which includes several private landowners as plaintiffs, contends that oil companies have calculated royalties based on the "posted price" instead of what the oil is actually worth.

Posted prices are set by the oil producers based on what they say the oil is worth. In the early boom days, the prices were posted on fence posts in the fields.

In the 1980s, the use of posted prices decreased when domestic crude oil began being traded on the national commodities markets, thus establishing a more objective way of determining the value of oil.

Ron Calhoun, spokesman for the Land Office, said the agency's land leases specify that oil companies must base their royalties on the posted price, the market price or the gross proceeds, whichever is greater.

Construction travels over to Tremont

From Staff Reports

Last week, it was construction on the overpass at Wadley and Loop 250 that affected the traffic patterns of Midland motorists. Next, the activity will be at the Tremont and Loop 250 intersection, according to a Texas Department of Transportation (TxDOT) official in Midland.

Construction workers will be placing bridge beams for the overpass at Tremont, according to Mike Chetty, the TxDOT engineer in charge of the project.

Beginning Monday, there will be intermittent interruptions of the flow of traffic through the intersection, Chetty said.

"We will periodically close the intersection to allow the contractor to set the beams in place at the Tremont intersection," he added. "It should take about three days to complete the work, so we expect to be finished by late Wednesday."

The work will be done between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., and from 6 p.m. until dark. Traffic will be rerouted while the work is being done.

Motorists are urged to observe warning signs and proceed with caution at the intersection.

Doctor testifies: Simpson may look like Tarzan, but he's physical wreck

LOS ANGELES (AP) — With the defense trying to show that O.J. Simpson was too creaky to be a killer, a doctor testified Friday that while Simpson "looked like Tarzan, he was walking more like Tarzan's grandfather."

Dr. Robert Huizenga, who examined Simpson three days after the double murders, also testified that cuts on Simpson's left hand most likely were caused by broken glass rather than a knife, as prosecutors suggest.

He said the cuts to Simpson's left middle finger and left ring finger appeared to have jagged edges.

"A knife is a possibility," he said. "But to me, the edges look a little bit ragged. It seemed to me to be more consistent with glass."

Before the jury was brought in, a Simpson attorney set the groundwork for a possible appeal by complaining about a key ruling that blocked testimony that Nicole Brown Simpson may have been murdered by drug hitmen intending to kill her friend Faye Resnick.

Huizenga's testimony was the centerpiece of a defense medical presentation designed to explain the cuts on Simpson's hand and to show that he was too arthritic to murder his ex-wife and her friend Ronald Goldman.

Huizenga described Simpson as a physical wreck with knees that crunch, ankles that hurt and arms and wrists

16-year-old finds cigarettes easy to buy in Austin

AUSTIN (AP) — Sixteen-year-old Michelle Martinez stepped up to store counters 10 times in one afternoon, and nine times she turned a clerk into a lawbreaker by purchasing cigarettes.

Not that it took much convincing. A few looked closely at her, but most paid little attention and only two asked for identification before selling cigarettes in violation of state law.

The test was conducted by Miss Martinez for the Austin American-Statesman, which reported the results Friday.

The excuses clerks offered, when told of their crime, were many: They were too busy. Miss Martinez looked 18. Cigarettes aren't dangerous like alcohol. The law is silly.

But the spot sample of convenience stores, drug stores, gas stations and a supermarket in all areas of Austin confirmed the charge made by the Clinton administration: Cigarettes fall too easily into the hands of the young.

The Food and Drug Administration is considering steps to prevent youths from using tobacco products, including a ban on cigarette vending machines, stiffer health warnings on packages and advertising restrictions barring cartoon characters such as "Joe Camel."

The agency reportedly also is considering whether to declare nicotine a drug, opening the door to more stringent regulation. The tobacco industry has promised to fight the proposal.

Smoking is on the rise among the young, especially in Texas, according to state health officials. Half of Texas eighth-graders have tried cigarettes, the number of smoking students in grades 7-12 increased by 16 percent from 1992 to 1994, and more than 20 million cigarette packs are illegally sold to minors each year in Texas, according to the Texas Department of Health.

To test the availability of tobacco, the American-Statesman asked Miss Martinez, a high school junior, to attempt to purchase cigarettes at 10 stores in different parts of the city.

Texas law says it is illegal to sell tobacco products to anyone under the age of 18. It is punishable by a fine of up to $500. Miss Martinez broke no laws purchasing the cigarettes; the law only prohibits the sale to minors.

How many times has it been enforced? No statistics exist, mostly because no single state or local agency is responsible for its enforcement.

Miss Martinez, who does not smoke, bought nine packs in 10 stops.

"It seemed too easy, actually," she said. "I think they need to be stricter. They need to look for identification."

Commissioner: Test scores jump in every grade

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas students did better on the statewide academic skills test this spring, but fewer of them took the exam than in 1994, according to figures released Friday by Education Commissioner Mike Moses.

Moses said exemptions granted to students didn't significantly affect results of this year's Texas Assessment of Academic Skills, which showed a higher passing rate in every grade tested compared with a year ago.

But he said the policy for exempting students from the test is being examined and that the State Board of Education will look at possible changes.

"I would categorize the concern at this point as ... being something that I think we can easily look at and easily correct," Moses said.

"I think that Texas educators are committed to an assessment program that is done with honor and integrity," he said. "We want as many students involved and included in the assessment program as possible, and that's going to be our goal."

Exemptions from the reading, writing and math test can be granted to students who are in special education classes or have limited proficiency in English.

Last spring, 86.7 percent of students were tested. That amounted to 1,680,162 students in grades three through eight and grade 10, which are subject to the TAAS.

This year, 85.1 percent were tested, or 1,677,549 students.

Grades three, five, six and seven took reading and math exams, while grades four, eight and 10 were tested in reading, writing and math.

This year saw dramatic gains in passing rates in the lower grades, which Moses credited to the "combined efforts of teachers and parents."

In the third grade, 66 percent of students passed all sections of the test taken, for a gain of 8 percentage points over last spring.

Fourth-graders showed the largest overall increase in the passing rate, from 54 percent to 64 percent. In the fifth grade, the passing rate increased from 58 percent to 66 percent.

Increases in student performance were smaller in later grades. Moses said he didn't have research showing why — but he has some opinions.

"We need to look real closely at the credentials that we have for teachers in the fifth and sixth grade. I am particularly concerned about mathematics," he said.

Moses said he believes the subject has become more difficult at the fifth- and sixth-grade level, and the state must ensure teachers "are strong in mathematics."

Parents also tend to become less involved in their children's schooling as the students leave elementary school, he said.

"My feeling is if we had parents dropping in instead of dropping out after elementary school and on into junior high, we would probably see some improvement in that trend line," Moses said.

Grand jury indicts judge, 7 officials for bid-rigging

McALLEN (AP) — Federal prosecutors on Friday unveiled sweeping bid-rigging and kickback charges against the Hidalgo County judge and seven officials, once again shaking the political core of this Democratic bastion.

J. Edgar Ruiz, the powerful county judge in the state's seventh most-populous county, was among those accused in a grand jury indictment of mail fraud, racketeering, bribery and extortion.

The 134-count grand jury indictment charges Ruiz, two current and two past county commissioners, and three other officials of conspiring to rig bids for county contracts.

The indictment alleges that county competitive bidding procedures were bypassed in exchange for kickbacks in the form of cash and airline tickets.

Ruiz, 43, is charged with conspiracy to commit racketeering, conspiracy to commit mail fraud, three counts of bribery, five counts of money laundering and eight counts of extortion.

Also charged with multiple counts are Commissioner Samuel Sanchez, Commissioner Abelardo Arcuate, former Commissioner Ramiro Cavazos, former Commissioner Leonardo Camarillo, County Drainage District 1 Director Joaquim Cerda, Drainage District 1 secretary Imelda Villarreal, and county Headstart program director Luciano Ozuna.

The indictment comes on the heels of a federal case last year that landed a powerful sheriff behind bars.

Ruiz was out of town Friday and unavailable for comment, his office said.

"This was a scheduled trip," said Dick Dickinson, the judge's senior administrative assistant.

A news release from the U.S. attorney's office in Houston says that the defendants are charged with conspiring with Ramiro Gonzalez, a former county purchasing agent, to use their positions as county officials to rig bids.

Gonzalez is not named as a defendant.

Jerry Polinard, a University of Texas-Pan American political scientist who studies South Texas politics, said Ruiz is a skilled politician who built a powerful election organization by knowing when to wage battles and when to seek accommodation.

Ruiz came up through the ranks of an activist Mexican-American wing of the local Democratic party in a county where no Republicans have held a county office in recent history.

Getting his feet wet as Donna city manager in the 1970s, he started by battling the party's establishment. Later, after his election to county clerk in 1982 and county judge in 1986, he largely became part of the party establishment.

"I think Edgar moved toward the center and the establishment moved toward the center," Polinard said. "They were coming from different directions."

Ruiz said recently that he had no plans to seek another term. But then he said he might reconsider after learning that longtime McAllen Mayor Othal Brand, a Republican, was interested in the county judge's seat.

Ruiz quipped that a race against the combative Brand might be "too fun" to pass up.

SHAPE: Doctor testifies about O.J.'s physical health

(From 1A)

that have limited motion.

"Do you have an opinion on whether he could hold a knife?" defense attorney Robert Shapiro asked.

"I think he certainly could hold a knife," Huizenga said.

On cross-examination, he said he did not address in his medical evaluation whether Simpson could have wielded a knife to kill two people.

Jurors appeared transfixed by blow-up photos of Simpson's physique, which were projected on a 7-foot screen, showing his head, arms, legs, hands and finally, his powerful torso.

"He really does appear to be Tarzan," the doctor said, noting Simpson's muscular development and low body fat. But he said the former football player's appearance was deceptive. "Although he looked like Tarzan, he was walking more like Tarzan's grandfather."

Huizenga, former team physician for the Los Angeles Raiders, is author of the recent book "You're Okay, It's Just A Bruise," which recounts his experiences with the team and his concerns about football players' health.

He said Simpson suffered from a constellation of injuries typical of an National Football League player and described the scars of many surgeries on his left knee as resembling "railroad tracks." That knee, he said, was so badly injured, it crunched when he walked and would eventually require a full knee replacement.

He said other problems, including arthritis, restricted his movement and he appeared to have the onset of rheumatoid arthritis, a debilitating disease that runs in his family.

"Without question, this was someone who was not able to jog or move quickly," he said.

Huizenga also said Simpson's nasal passages showed no sign of cocaine inhalation.

He said Simpson was brought to his Beverly Hills office on June 15, 1994, three days after the killings. He said Shapiro, a patient of Huizenga's partner, asked him to evaluate Simpson's mental state. Huizenga also did a two-hour physical examination and another evaluation two days later.

Huizenga said Simpson was suffering from "sleep deprivation" and complained of chronic, drenching night sweats as well as a swollen lymph node under an arm. Huizenga said he feared Simpson might have cancer or a severe infection, but he said a biopsy showed these were symptoms of rheumatoid arthritis.

Deputy District Attorney Brian Kelberg, the prosecution's medical expert, pressed the doctor about whether Simpson might have been faking his ailments. Huizenga said that during his tenure with the Raiders, he was trained to unmask players hiding injuries in order to play.

"We were routinely lied to by them," he said.

"Did you consider the possibility on June 15 that Mr. Simpson had a motive to lie?" Kelberg asked.

"Yes, I did," the doctor replied, adding that Simpson's scars and medical records seem to corroborate many of his complaints.

Kelberg noted that the follow-up examination was conducted at the home of Simpson's friend and attorney Robert Kardashian, a remark that drew an objection from Shapiro and sent attorneys scurrying to the judge's bench.

It was quickly dropped as a line of questioning. That was the day Simpson left Kardashian's house and led police on the slow-speed chase in a friend's Ford Bronco. The infamous chase, which ended at Simpson's doorstep, has not been mentioned at the trial.

Kelberg projected Huizenga's medical report on the courtroom screen and asked whether it included any finding "which dealt with any physical limitation of Mr. Simpson's which, in your opinion, would have prevented him from murdering two human beings, using a single-edge knife on June 12 of 1994?"

" No, there was not," said the doctor, who resumes his testimony Monday.

In other developments:

n Defense attorney Johnny Cochran Jr. formally complained about Judge Lance Ito's ruling that barred testimony vital to the defense theory that the killer was intending to murder Resnick over unpaid cocaine debts.

Cochran argued that Thursday's ruling "violates Mr. Simpson's right to present a defense and to due process of law under both the state and federal constitutions."

n Ms. Simpson's former boyfriend, who says Simpson spied on him through a window while he was intimate with her, agreed to testify for the defense.

Keith Zlomsowitch of Tampa told a Florida judge he had decided not to fight efforts to have him testify next Friday.

The day after the sexual encounter, defense attorneys say, Simpson talked with Zlomsowitch and shook hands with him. Simpson attorneys say Zlomsowitch's testimony is necessary to counter prosecution inferences that Simpson "is a maniacal jealous fiend."

TERROR: Refugees cry for lost husbands, sons

(From 1A)

Refugees also told of women being dragged away and raped, civilians being shot to death and young boys being plucked from transports. But their tales of horror could not be immediately confirmed.

Bosnian Serbs refused access to international organizations and to journalists, including most Bosnian Serb reporters.

The 400 Dutch U.N. troops in the enclave had been confined to their base in nearby Potocari or detained in two Serb-held towns nearby. "We have no eyes and ears," Dutch Defense Minister Joris Voorhoeve said Friday.

Even if they couldn't be immediately verified, the many tales — nearly every refugee had one — would be recorded. The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees said testimonies were being gathered and the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, also was investigating.

Semsudin Hasanbegovic, head of Tuzla's emergency headquarters, said Bosnian authorities had received information that about 400 men were being held in two concentration camps in Bratunac and Konjevic Polje.

"At the moment we have no very clear picture. Very soon, we'll know more about it," UNHCR spokeswoman Monique Tuffelli.

"What we know is that their suffering is not finished with this exodus, because they lost a part of their family, (and have) a very uncertain future ahead of them," Tuffelli said.

The uncertainty was more than some could face.

The shoeless body of the woman, dressed in a red T-shirt and skirt, hung from a tree near the Tuzla airbase. Fellow refugees said she had killed herself overnight. They did not know her name.

The more than 13,000 women, children and old men camped in the field surrounding the airbase filled with air with moans, cries and whimpers. About 60 percent of the refugees were children, aid officials said.

The refugees tore branches from spindly trees and bushes to shade themselves against the burning sun in the day and build campfires for warmth at night. There were not enough blankets to go around. No toilets, too few doctors and medicine, not enough water.

Those with the strength to wash used a stream where others were defecating, increasing the danger of disease.

But what concerned the refugees most was the whereabouts of their husbands, sons, brothers and fathers.

As her sons, ages 2 and 5, slept fitfully beside her, a 22-year-old woman who identified herself only as Zarfija said quietly that she did not expect to see her husband again. He had fled with Srebrenica's lightly armed Muslim defenders.

Like Ajka Husic, she, too, had seen the bodies of men she recognized from her village, Slatina, on the bus ride to Tuzla.

"The bodies were just lying there. A few of them were still alive, also lying down. I know they were all among those who fled to the woods," she said.

"My man will never manage to find a way out. There is no way out, Serbs are everywhere."

CHEAT: Lawsuit claims oil companies underpay royalties

(From 1A)

"When they sell oil and it's higher than the posted price, then by the terms of the lease, they've got to determine their royalties on those 'gross proceeds,'" Calhoun said.

Calhoun said the agency cannot determine precisely how much it may be owed in back payments.

However, he cited a study of royalty payments in Colorado, New Mexico and Texas that concluded underpayments have averaged 3 percent to 6 percent of the total value of crude oil royalties paid since 1988. From 1983 to 1994 the crude oil royalties paid to the General Land Office totaled about $770 million, Calhoun said.

Steve Perry, a spokesman for Texaco, acknowledged that the company bases its royalty payments on posted prices. However, he said Texaco sees nothing wrong with the procedure.

"I think that you'll find within the industry that almost every, if not every, company bases theirs on the posted price," Perry said.

In response to whether that procedure shortchanges royalty owners, Perry said: "I guess a court will determine that."

Pete Huddleston, a visiting professor at Texas A&M University's petroleum and engineering department and chairman of Peter Paul Petroleum Co. in Houston, disagreed with Perry's assessment.

"If they have not paid the royalty owner the price that they actually received, then they have not paid the proper amount," Huddleston said.

The issue of whether posted prices should be used to determine royalties has been dealt with previously.

In 1993, Atlantic Richfield told the General Land Office it had been basing its royalty payments on posted prices, which were less than it was receiving for the oil. The company repaid the agency more than $584,000.

ARCO Oil and Gas Co. repaid the state of New Mexico $1.05 million in 1993 after acknowledging it had determined its royalties below the prevailing market price.

California and Alaska officials also have received back royalties from oil companies that undervalued the oil they produced.

Russian roulette gang ritual leaves 1 dead

TYLER (AP) — Police say a participant in a gang ritual of Russian roulette wheeled and put the gun at the head of another youth's head instead of his own, and the weapon discharged, killing 15-year-old David Lee Corning.

"The victim was not voluntarily playing this dangerous game," Tyler police Sgt. Susan Reeves said Friday.

The incident occurred Wednesday afternoon. Corning died Thursday at Mother Francis Hospital, never regaining consciousness.

Jose Valencia Medrano, 17, was being held Friday on $250,000 bond in the Smith County Jail on a charge of aggravated assault, officials said.

Reeves said a Smith County grand jury is scheduled to consider the case next week, and Corning could be indicted on a murder or manslaughter charge.

Lt. Gary Swindle said Corning was only a spectator in the Russian roulette game, but was a member of the same gang as Medrano, police said.

According to a court affidavit, Medrano unloaded a gun, pointed it at his head, pulled the trigger, then passed it to an associate who repeated the action.

A second gang member then took the gun, placed a bullet into the cylinder, spun it without looking and pulled the trigger. The gun discharged into the air.

Medrano then took the gun again, placed a bullet in the cylinder and spun it without looking, the affidavit states. But then, instead of putting the gun at his own head, the document said, "He turned around and pointed the pistol at David Corning without a word of warning and fired the pistol."

The .22-caliber revolver believed used in the shooting has been recovered, Reeves said.

The fatal shooting was the second in Tyler in less than a year involving people associated with the same gang.

Assistant Tyler Police Chief Bob Bond said it appears gang members are just as dangerous to each other as they are to rivals.

"From our standpoint, that seems to be the case," he said. "But any time you have youngsters who are armed, there is a potential for violence."

Grand jury indicts Ranger for assault

HOUSTON (AP) — A Texas Ranger was indicted Friday by a Harris County grand jury on a charge of aggravated assault for allegedly pulling his gun on a state trooper.

Marcus Hilton is accused of threatening Department of Public Safety Officer Michael Coleman during an argument June 27 at a DPS office in Houston, authorities said.

Assistant District Attorney Chuck Noll said conviction of the second-degree felony carries a prison term ranging from two to 20 years.

Hilton was not in custody Friday. Noll said it was likely a bond of $10,000 would be set sometime this weekend.

"I've already heard from his attorney and he will make his bond," Noll said.

Hilton couldn't immediately be reached for comment. The only Marcus Hilton listed in the Houston area telephone directory has an unpublished number. Hilton's attorney, Wayne Hill, did not immediately return a telephone call to his Houston office.

The DPS, which oversees the 170-year-old Rangers, said Friday that Hilton had been suspended and an internal investigation was being conducted.

"The Ranger is on suspension with pay pending the outcome of the DPS' administrative investigation into the situation," said spokeswoman Sherri Green at DPS headquarters in Austin.

Ms. Green said Hilton had been a DPS officer since January 1985 and a Ranger since August 1993.

Mike Cox, another DPS spokesman, last week said Hilton "was restrained by other DPS officers" during the altercation.

Cox wasn't available to comment Friday.

Nigerian government convicts 40 in coup plot trial many say is unfair

LAGOS, Nigeria (AP) — The government concluded its secret trials of former military ruler Gen. Olusegun Obasanjo and 50 others on coup-plotting charges Friday and said it has convicted 40 of them.

The trials were condemned as unfair by governments and human rights organizations worldwide. There have been many unconfirmed reports that some of the suspects had already been sentenced and executed, as has been the case in some past coup trials.

Obasanjo was among those where were convicted, a government spokesman indicated. The government only made public the names of those who were acquitted.

The government alleged it had foiled a plot planned for March to overthrow military ruler Gen. Sani Abacha, who took power in a bloodless coup in November 1993.

Critics have said there was no coup plot and that Abacha simply wanted an excuse to round up opponents to silence them. Monitors from the British Commonwealth are currently in Nigeria to investigate abuse allegations.

"We are extremely concerned that they may be sentenced to death and hastily executed," said Melissa Crow, spokeswoman for the Washington-based Human Rights Watch-Africa.

A government spokesman, Brig. Gen. Fred Chijuka, told a news conference in Lagos on Friday that 40 suspects had been convicted and sentenced. He refused to give details about the sentences, but they are believed to range from the death penalty to various prison terms.

Chijuka said seven people were acquitted and released Thursday and an eighth person was being held while his case was appealed. Three others were out of the country when the trials began, including the son of the head of Nigeria's 30 million Muslims.

Chijuka gave only the names of the 11 who were freed or out of the country — not those who were convicted.

"It means that all others whom you know and who are not among the 11 names given are part of the 40 who have been sentenced and their sentences passed to the (government) for confirmation," Chijuka said.

When asked about Obasanjo, he would only say: "He appeared before the tribunal. You can make your conclusions. If he is not among the 11 either freed or among the three who fled the country, then he is among those sentenced."

There has been speculation in Lagos for more than a week that Obasanjo received 25 years in prison for allegedly concealing information of the coup plot.

About 117 people were executed by firing squad in connection with the last three coup trials in Nigeria.

Technology replaces piazza, some say

By Brian Murphy
Associated Press

ROME — After a brawl in a grimy fringe of Rome, police blocked the street and neighbors discussed how a pleasant summer night could turn so steamy with rage.

No jobs, someone said. Another blamed drugs. A man leaned from a window and growled his opinion: no piazza and therefore no soul.

Such comments are now moving beyond just curbside philosophy.

Urban planners around Italy are looking to reclaim the historic role of the piazza, or plaza, where for centuries neighbors have traded gossip, merchants peddled wares and politicians made promises. The easy gatherings, central to Italian life, have long created a sense of community — soul, in one man's view, that can alleviate misunderstanding.

At the same time, however, others wonder whether technology and changing habits are sapping the traditional purpose for piazzas, leaving them attractive anachronisms like gas lamps and horse carriages.

"The idea of the piazza is not dead, but it's ailing," said Mario Isnenghi, a University of Venice history professor and author of a recent book on the evolution of the piazza.

Isnenghi's research funnels into one central question: Is there space for the old piazza culture in a contemporary Italy of supermarkets, cellular phones and round-the-clock television?

"I'm not trying to be pessimistic, but we've already seen some losses," said Isnenghi.

The withdrawal of politicians from the piazza to the TV studio has been one of the most noticeable changes. As recently as the mid-1980s, political groups held giant outdoor rallies as their main way to reach out to voters. Now, the small screen is the preferred forum.

And many piazzas have seen better days, left to become parking lots.

AP Laserphoto

Romans wait to park their cars in Piazza del Popolo (People's Square) in downtown Rome Friday. In the background, at right, Bernini's baroque church of St. Maria del Miracoli (St. Mary of the Miracles) and St. Maria in Montesanto, at left.

But the piazza hasn't been completely snubbed. Labor groups still pack squares when they're looking to make a point. An estimated 1 million people marched through a central Rome piazza in November to denounce proposed pension cuts.

At night, teen-agers careen their motorbikes through Campo di Fiori, the hot piazza of the moment for pre-disco gatherings in Rome. One of Italy's most recent television programs was a karaoke songfest that traveled to piazzas around the country.

And tourists are forever drawn to the most picturesque of them, to eat gelato and look on Bernini's fountains in Rome's Piazza Navona, feed pigeons in the enormous Piazza San Marco in Venice or stroll along Florence's Piazza della Signoria outside the Uffizi museum.

What trend mavens are watching, however, are the times between the shouts of protesters and the squeal of Vespa motorscooters. They worry about leisure time increasingly moving from the piazza to the living room couch.

"I wouldn't declare the piazza a thing of the past, but the 'virtual piazza' of TV is a powerful force," said Ezio Genovesi, a Rome architect.

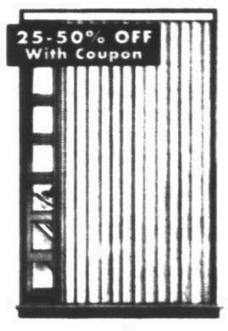

Italy's surge into affluence also strikes at the simple ideals of the piazza.

The millions of new cars purchased since the 1970s need spaces — and many piazzas are now fancy parking lots with fountains and baroque trimmings. And with cars comes mobility: to American-style supermarkets rather than the piazza food stalls or to country homes on weekends instead of cooling off outside with neighbors.

Gianni Panni tipped his chair back on its back legs and watched the Saturday night crowd in a piazza in Rome's old Trastevere section. A group of tourists passed by eating ice cream.

Panni, 72, chomped on a watermelon and spit the seeds on the cobblestones. He recalled how he and his neighbors filled the piazza until late on summer night.

Activist's case spotlights China's harsh crackdown on dissidents

BEIJING (AP) — Chinese-American activist Harry Wu's return to the Chinese gulag spotlights China's harsh handling of dissidents in recent months.

Wu has been charged with espionage in connection with his repeated secret trips into China to uncover abuses in prisons and labor camps. His arrest has drawn renewed international attention to China's human rights practices.

As usual this year, authorities began rounding up dissidents in advance of the June 4 anniversary of the crackdown that ended the 1989 Tiananmen Square democracy movement. But unlike past years, many of those detained have not been released.

With senior leader Deng Xiaoping on his deathbed, Chinese authorities are stepping up measures to rein in dissident activities, which they fear could lead to widespread unrest.

Wang Dan, the top student leader from the 1989 protests, was taken into police custody nearly two months ago, and his family has had no news from or of him since, his mother said Friday.

There also has been no word from Chen Ziming, who was taken back into prison last month after being released on medical parole, his wife said Friday. He suffers from hepatitis and cancer.

Chen, who was sentenced to 13 years for masterminding the 1989 protests, was returned to prison after signing several petitions this spring and staging a symbolic hunger strike on June 4.

His wife, Wang Zhihong, said putting him back in prison with his medical history "is in reality shortening his life span."

Human Rights in China reported Friday that Tong Yi, serving a 30-month labor camp sentence, faces transfer to a labor camp if she does not end her refusal to abide by prison regulations, including meeting work detail quotas.

Tong was the assistant to China's most famous dissident, Wei Jingsheng, before he disappeared into police custody more than a year ago.

Police visited her parents Thursday to give a "final warning," the New York-based rights group said.

Police told them Tong has refused to join other prisoners in singing patriotic songs and works only eight hours a day, even though that means meeting less than half her work quota.

■ Officials find cholera bacteria in river

KHARKIV, Ukraine — Cholera-causing bacteria has been found near Kharkiv, Ukraine's second-largest city where a burst sewage pump contaminated several rivers with hundreds of thousands of tons of raw fecal matter.

Officials said Friday that the bacteria was in the Lopan River north of Kharkiv, a city of 1.5 million people in eastern Ukraine. The officials reported no new cases of the intestinal disease, which can be fatal if not treated.

Ukraine has been fighting a cholera outbreak in the Nikolayev and Kherson regions since early June. Three people have died.

The sewage crisis in Kharkiv began on June 28, when heavy rains damaged the city's main sewage pump and sent 600,000 tons of untreated sewage into several rivers, including the Lopan — one of the city's water sources.

■ Chirac hosts his first Bastille Day

PARIS — Jacques Chirac, cheered at a military parade on his first Bastille Day parade as president, ignored protests overseas Friday and said France will go ahead with nuclear test blasts in the South Pacific.

At home, French environmentalists kept quiet on a day of celebrations of French cultural and military strength, but held a news conference denouncing Chirac's planned nuclear testing.

Chirac must "listen to the clamor that is being heard in the world, including in France, against his unilateral decision to end the moratorium on nuclear tests," said Remy Parmentier, chairman of Greenpeace France.

Chirac, a conservative elected in May, announced last month that France would resume nuclear testing after a three-year hiatus initiated by his socialist predecessor, Francois Mitterrand.

■ Syria doesn't appear for peace talks

JERUSALEM — Syrian negotiators unexpectedly refused to keep their commitment to the United States on peace talks with Israel, an American diplomat told Israeli radio stations Friday.

The Syrians refused to agree to a date to renew talks and raised doubts about whether even to continue U.S.-brokered peace talks in the existing format, the diplomat, who was not identified, told Israel and Army radio.

Damascus radio said the peace process had not failed but "further efforts are required to make Israeli positions more flexible and in harmony with Security Council resolutions."

Israel has ignored U.N. resolutions demanding it withdraw from Arab lands it occupies.

U.S. envoy Dennis Ross left for Washington early Friday after an apparently fruitless five-day visit to the region, shuttling between Jerusalem and Damascus.

He failed to secure a date for resuming direct talks between the two countries — reportedly the purpose of his visit.

Yeltsin extends hospital stay, sets election date

MOSCOW (AP) — President Boris Yeltsin set the date for parliamentary elections from his hospital room Friday, but questions about his health persisted after aides said his stay would be extended.

Yeltsin will remain at the Central Clinical Hospital, where he was rushed Tuesday with acute heart trouble, through the end of next week, top aide Viktor Ilyushin told reporters.

Ilyushin said Yeltsin's schedule through July 26 would be postponed, including a two-day visit to Norway.

"Doctors demand persistently that Boris Nikolayevich spend longer recovering after his unexpected hospitalization," Ilyushin said in an interview with Russian television channels. "There are many events ahead until the end of the year that will require serious psychological and nervous tension."

Earlier, the Kremlin had predicted the 64-year-old Yeltsin would be released Monday and would stick to his schedule. Ilyushin said the change did not reflect a worsening of the president's condition.

"It wouldn't be right to say the Kremlin office has just moved into the building of the Central Clinical Hospital, but the president is aware of all the vital and acute issues which require his attention," Ilyushin said.

Yeltsin's symptoms, as described by the Kremlin, indicate he probably has a form of heart disease called unstable angina, in which the arteries narrow, restricting the flow of blood to the heart. Press reports have been skeptical of the Kremlin's health updates.

The first photograph of the hospitalized Yeltsin was released Friday. It showed the president, wearing a tennis shirt, sitting impassively at a desk with papers in front of him and four telephones to the side.

Naina Yeltsin told reporters Friday her husband was working and signing documents. She criticized the press for spreading "tall tales" about Yeltsin's health.

"I can't see this verbal sadism in the newspapers any longer," she said, calling the presidency a "very heavy burden."

Yeltsin's popularity is low, and he recently fought back a major parliamentary challenge to his government. Ilyushin said the crisis took a toll on Yeltsin, as has the war in breakaway Chechnya.

Yeltsin has not said he will run in presidential elections scheduled for June.

Yeltsin's decree Friday setting parliamentary elections for Dec. 17 was hailed by lawmakers as an encouraging sign for Russian democracy. Although the elections to the 450-seat State Duma, parliament's lower house, had long been planned for December, Yeltsin's decree made the date official.

Many lawmakers had worried he might find an excuse to delay the election.

"We are glad the constitution is working, we are glad this happened in July so that people know now," said ultranationalist Vladimir Zhirinovsky.

"There is a chance that democracy will prevail in Russia, as the election will be the first when an existing parliament will relay its powers (to the next one)," said reformer Boris Fyodorov.

The last parliamentary elections were in December 1993, just months after Yeltsin disbanded the Soviet-era legislature and called out the army when lawmakers' hard-line supporters rioted.

Invading boats, aircraft to be attacked, Cuba says

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Cuba's government, denouncing the American "pirates" who tried to stage a protest in Cuban waters, warned Friday that it will attack any boat or aircraft that tries to force its way into its territory.

Cuban exiles in Miami tried to organize a 15-boat flotilla for a memorial service Thursday for 41 people killed last year in a collision with Cuban gunboats.

But Cuban coast guard craft broadsided the flotilla's lead boat and blocked the path of others 11 miles off the coast. Three people were reported injured.

"The revolutionary government repeats once more its firm determination to take whatever action is necessary to prevent the repetition of acts such as those of yesterday," the Cuban government said.

"Any ship from abroad that forcibly invades our sovereign waters could be sunk and any aircraft downed."

The warning appeared in the Communist Party newspaper Granma and was carried by the official Prensa Latina news agency, monitored in Mexico City.

The flotilla had planned to travel to within six miles of the Cuban coast, to the site where a tugboat was allegedly rammed and sunk July 13, 1994, drowning 20 children and 21 adults.

Cuba claimed the collision last year was accidental and blamed the deaths on the organizers who tried to use the leaky, 115-year-old tugboat to carry children and adults across the high seas.

Cuba acknowledged its vessels tried to block intruders from violating Cuban waters on Thursday, but denied ramming the Democracia. The Cuban government described the boaters' action as "piracy" and portrayed its own response as an exercise in restraint.

"At all moments, our combatants respected the order to not use firearms," the statement said.

No nation can tolerate "flagrant violations of its borders," the statement said, noting that in the past, anti-Castro groups had sent boats "that have perpetrated terrorist actions" in which people have been killed.

Coast Guard Petty Officer Steve Aitkins said three people were injured Thursday, two of them seriously.

Metro-Dade Commissioner Pedro Reboredo lost at least one toe when his foot slipped through a railing after the boats collided and got crushed between them.

"It's a very tiny price to pay for freedom, and for recognition of the suffering of the Cuban people," Reboredo, a Cuban-American, told WSVN-TV in Miami en route from one hospital to another.

The Democracia and its remaining passengers made it back to Key West safely late Thursday night, Aitkins said.

Flotilla organizer Ramon Saul Sanchez, president of the Cuban National Commission, said the purpose was not to cause a confrontation.

"We are going unarmed except that we have a very powerful weapon with us: It's our human dignity, which is the weapon that we're going to be using against the government in Cuba," he said.

As part of the protest, two planes from Brothers to the Rescue, a group that aids Cuban exiles, flew undisturbed over Havana and dropped 3,000 pamphlets with the message: "No companeros, hermanos" ("Not comrades, brothers") — apparently both a message of solidarity and a dig at Cuba's Communist "comrades."

Serbs attack another U.N. 'safe area,' demand forces' surrender

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Holding peacekeepers from one conquered U.N. "safe area," Serb rebels battered the defenses of another on Friday, shelling U.N. posts and setting homes ablaze while NATO warplanes did no more than buzz the area.

The Serbs demanded that government forces in Zepa surrender the remote mountain town of 16,000 people. Western nations argued over how to respond, agreeing only that the U.N. mission was crumbling.

The Serbs, who captured the "safe area" of Srebrenica on Tuesday, are surging through eastern Bosnia, intent on conquering government towns blocking their goal of creating a pure Serb swathe of land.

Thousands of Bosnian refugees were on the run, many of them unaccounted for.

Refugees said Friday they saw the bodies of Muslim men, some of them dead, along the roadside as they fled to government-held areas.

Dutch peacekeepers, locked by Serbs into their base on the outskirts of Srebrenica, could not corroborate the refugees' accounts of widespread atrocities, including summary executions and rapes.

The sounds of moaning, crying and whimpering pervaded the field around Tuzla airport, where more than 13,000 women, children and old men expelled by Serbs from their homes in Srebrenica waited in misery. About 60 percent of them were children, aid officials said.

They tore branches from spindly trees and bushes for shade against the burning sun in the day and to build campfires for warmth at night. There were not enough blankets to go around. There were no toilets, too few doctors and insufficient medicine.

Women pulled scarves over their feverish faces and cried over their lost husbands and sons, seized by Serbs and taken to unknown locations.

One despairing young woman committed suicide, hanging herself from a tree with a torn blanket.

The Serb attack on Zepa began after talks there between the two warring sides broke down. The local Serb commander then told the Ukrainian U.N. commander that all civilians in Zepa should leave and government forces should surrender.

Serbs repeatedly have insisted they are justified in attacking "safe areas" because lightly armed government troops in the area mount attacks from them..

NATO jets circled Zepa for 3 1/2 hours after Serb shells rained down on three Ukrainian compounds. Serb fighters were setting fire to houses near the U.N. compounds under attack from the south, said U.N. spokesman Rida Ettasharay.

U.N. spokesman Alexander Ivanko said NATO jets were called in "to try to deter attacks by sheer presence," and added that shelling and shooting subsided after the jets appeared. In the past, concern over the safety of U.N. peacekeepers being held hostage has stopped NATO from firing.

Just outside Sarajevo, meanwhile, Serbs shelled a U.N. aid convoy Friday on the only mountain road into the besieged capital. Two drivers were wounded and two vehicles destroyed, said U.N. spokesman Lt. Col. Gary Coward.

Peacekeepers fired back tank and mortar rounds.

The Serb fighters repeatedly have insisted they are justified in attacking "safe areas" because lightly armed government troops in the area mount attacks from them. But the government's firepower is no match for the Serbs, who have used their enormous advantage in heavy weapons to take 70 percent of Bosnia.

The Serbs' swift, remorseless clearing of the Srebrenica enclave and its estimated 42,000 Muslims was stunning even by the standards of the Bosnian war.

"Probably the Bosnian Serb army will go down in the history books, not only as the perpetrators of some of the most gross violations of human rights and some of the worst ethnic cleansing seen in this country, but also has the fastest perpetrators of this ethnic cleansing," said Ivanko, the U.N. spokesman.

"They have succeeded in rounding up over 20,000 people in under 48 hours."

By Friday, just 59 wounded people remained from the 40,000 refugees who had crowded into the Dutch peacekeepers' base at Potocari, just north of Srebrenica, which was overrun Wednesday.

The Dutch were refusing to leave without safety guarantees for the wounded, Dutch Defense Minister Joris Voorhoeve said. Serbs were also holding 55 Dutch peacekeepers hostage.

France demanded Friday that force be used to re-establish the Srebrenica "safe area" and to defend others, an idea U.N. officials suggested was doomed.

Reinforcing the 79 Ukrainian peacekeepers in Zepa and another 300 in the third eastern enclave, Gorazde, is risky, said Coward, the U.N. spokesman.

Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic reportedly met with European Union mediator Carl Bildt in Belgrade on Friday, while Russian envoy Vitaly Churkin met Serb leader Radovan Karadzic in Pale, east of Sarajevo. There was no word on either set of talks.

Aid workers were left to ponder how much worse it would be if Serbs overran Zepa and Gorazde, sealing their control of eastern Bosnia.

"It's a humanitarian disaster now, and it will be our worst humanitarian nightmare if those other enclaves go," said Ron Redmond, a spokesman for the U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees in Geneva.

Rescuers find another survivor in store rubble

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Astonished rescuers pulled another survivor from the rubble of a department store today, 16 days after the building collapsed and killed at least 300 people.

The condition of Park Sung-yeon, 19, was unknown as rescue workers carried her out of the rubble of the Sampoong Department Store. Rescuers at first mistakenly identified her as a 21-year-old man.

"I can't believe that this is for real," Park's brother told Yonhap Television.

Emergency workers were digging in the rubble for what they hoped was a second survivor next to Park. But it was uncertain whether the second person was alive.

"I heard a slight moan, coming from a hole," said rescue worker Ahn Kwang-shik. He said rescuers didn't expect to find any survivors among the stacks of concrete slabs.

The last survivor was found Tuesday, about 20 yards from where Park was found.

The death toll in the disaster rose to 305 early today in the worst peacetime disaster in modern South Korean history.

Faulty construction is blamed for the collapse of the store June 29 with about 1,500 people inside. Angry relatives of the missing and dead are demanding prosecutors charge store executives with murder.

Some 330 people are believed still trapped under the rubble. Another 292 are hospitalized in serious condition.

Doctors, who initially held out little hope people trapped in the rubble could last more than a few days, say that those who escaped injury could live for up to 20 days.

Families of the missing and dead, frustrated and angry, attacked two government officials with brooms and chairs and drove them out of a meeting Friday at a school auditorium.

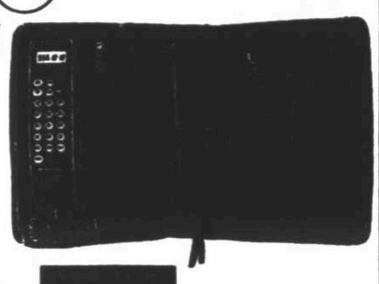

They were angered by rumors that rescuers were letting bodies rot under the rubble in an attempt to hide the extent of losses.

The rumors stemmed from the city's sudden doubling Thursday of the number of people missing to 410. Media and their families have contend the city didn't release the number earlier because it wanted to avoid criticism.

Family members have been demonstrating nearly every day to demand faster rescue work and more severe punishment for those responsible.

Many of the 1,000 families of the missing have been living at a school auditorium near the collapse site for the past 16 days, waiting for word of their loved ones. Others are living out of makeshift tents set up on school grounds.

Several of the family members have been hospitalized themselves for exhaustion.

Lizzie Borden house to become bed-and-breakfast

By Jon Marcus
Associated Press

BOSTON — To sleep where Lizzie Borden "took an ax," you'll have to pay a hotel tax.

The owners of the house where Borden's parents were hacked to death 103 years ago are planning to turn it into a bed-and-breakfast inn.

"Look at today how many people are following the Simpson case," said Ronald Evans, co-owner of the Greek revival-style house and a printing company next door.

"Look at Salem. I bet they weren't too happy about the witches 300 years ago, but now the businesses are thriving," he said.

Evans and his business partner, Martha McGinn, plan to decorate their inn with Borden-era antiques and artifacts, Ouija boards, a library of books related to the case and a video collection of movies it inspired. They also plan the occasional murder mystery dinner.

On Aug. 4, 1892, Abby and Andrew Borden were killed with an ax — Abby in her bedroom and Andrew in the sitting room of the house in Fall River, 46 miles south of Boston.

Abby was hacked 18 times; her husband was struck 10 times in the head. An analysis of the contents of their stomachs showed that she was killed at least an hour earlier than he was.

Lizzie, then 32, was accused of the murders but acquitted on June 20, 1893, after a sensational trial. She died in 1927 at age 67, unmarried and ostracized. The crime was never solved, but the accusations against her were memorialized in doggerel:

"Lizzie Borden took an ax
And gave her mother 40 whacks.
When she saw what she had done,
She gave her father 41."

The partners plan to open the inn Aug. 4, 1996, the 104th anniversary of the murders and McGinn's birthday.

McGinn, whose grandparents owned the house on Second Street, lived there as a teen-ager and says it's haunted.

The Nation in brief

■ Workers picket at 2 Detroit papers

DETROIT — Striking workers picketed the Detroit Free Press and The Detroit News while unions and management prepared for a long walkout and readers made do with scarce copies of a combined run of the papers Friday.

Six unions representing 2,500 workers began the strike Thursday night after talks mediated by Mayor Dennis Archer failed to produce an agreement.

No new talks were scheduled.

Detroit Newspapers, which publishes both dailies under a joint operating agreement, vowed to publish despite the strike. The unions mounted an advertising and circulation boycott.

"So far, it appears we've pretty much shut them down," News sports writer Mike McBride said while picketing outside the newspaper's downtown office.

■ Lawyers disagree in Smith trial

UNION, S.C. — Susan Smith's prosecutor says he would have no problem letting a judge sentence her if she pleaded guilty to drowning her sons. But the outcome may not be any better than if she were tried, defense experts said Friday.

South Carolina judges have sentenced at least five people to electrocution in the past 17 years.

Prosecutor Tommy Pope has rejected the possibility of a plea bargain, suggesting that Ms. Smith, who has confessed to the drownings, plead guilty to two death-penalty murder counts and let Circuit Judge William Howard decide punishment.

David Bruck, Ms. Smith's attorney, wouldn't say whether she has considered throwing herself on the judge's mercy. As jury selection continued, lawyers following the case scoffed at Pope's suggestion.

"Right now, it's a fool's choice, unless (Bruck) already has Howard on board," said Eldon Wedlock, a University of South Carolina law school professor.

■ McVeigh must give writing sample

OKLAHOMA CITY — Timothy McVeigh, the former Army sergeant accused of blowing up the Alfred P. Murrah Federal Building, has been ordered to appear before a grand jury on Tuesday to give samples of his handwriting, his lawyer said Friday.

The lawyer, Stephen Jones, said no decision had been made on whether McVeigh would provide the samples when he was brought before the grand jury. But Jones said that he might argue that to do so would be self-incriminating.

Steven K. Mullins, a spokesman for the U.S. attorney's office in Oklahoma City, confirmed that the grand jury had made such a request.

Jones said he believed one purpose of the request was to bolster the credibility of witnesses who have said that McVeigh rented the Ryder truck that was carrying the fertilizer and fuel oil bomb that exploded April 19, shattering the federal building and killing 167 people.

Clinton indicates strong stance on affirmative action

Some congressional Republicans are advocating the repeal of programs that use quotas, set-asides, timetables, goals and other preferences, arguing that they discriminate against white men.

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton briefed leaders of black and women's groups Friday on his five-month review of affirmative action programs, indicating he will not retreat from preferences based on sex or race in hiring, education and promotions.

Clinton likely will expand the category of federal set-aside programs to include businesses that locate in poor areas, even if they are owned by whites, an administration official said. Currently such programs reserve a percentage of contracts only for minority-owned firms.

"My impression is he's convinced that affirmative action is a high principle that America cannot afford to abandon," the Rev. Joseph Lowery, head of the Southern Christian Leadership Conference, said after meeting with Clinton.

Myrlie Evers-Williams, chairman of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People, said Clinton told them "he stands firm on his lifetime commitment to affirmative action and equal opportunity."

She said he made his statement with enough strength and conviction that "we are certain that we can be in total support of President Clinton."

After weeks of delay and conflicting signals, Clinton is to make a major address on affirmative action Wednesday.

The president once was expected to declare many preference programs no longer useful, but he now appears ready to offer a vigorous defense of affirmative action as a tool to promote equality.

"It is safe to say he will address the arguments made by some that we can just abolish affirmative action altogether and make the assumption the that the United States of America is a race-free, impression-free, discrimination-free society," White House press secretary Mike McCurry said.

He said Clinton will talk about the need for common sense in applying the programs.

Whatever his decision, Clinton will be stirring a political hornets' nest.

Some congressional Republicans are advocating the repeal of programs that use quotas, set-asides, timetables, goals and other preferences, arguing that they discriminate against white men.

Mindful of a possible backlash, Clinton has said he wants to be sensitive to the grievances of so-called "angry white men."

On the other hand, the president does not want to alienate women and minorities who have benefited most from the programs and who make up a major part of the Democratic political base.

An Associated Press poll taken this month found that 48 percent of Americans believe that affirmative action makes hiring and promotions less fair. It found that 39 percent said it's more fair; the rest were not sure.

"For poor women, this issue is a bottom line because it affects them in the pocketbook, it affects them in opportunities, and it affects their ability to get education," said Ellie Smeal, president of the Feminist Majority Foundation and co-chair of the Women's Coalition.

"Frankly, there isn't a woman or a family whose family isn't going to be affected by it," she said, "so it's more of a basic issue than any issue that we face."

McCurry said Clinton's speech would take a broad philosophical approach and would not offer a specific judgment on the many programs offering special assistance to minorities and women.

"I wouldn't describe this as being a specific speech," the press secretary said. "He's going to have a general thematic argument that will help the American people understand the importance that affirmative action programs have played in the life in our country as we attempt to erase general and racial barriers that have existed."

Government advisers recommend risky transplant for AIDS patient

BETHESDA, Md. (AP) — At the tearful behest of an AIDS patient's mother and sisters, government advisers recommended Friday that the man be allowed to get a bone marrow transplant from a baboon — even though they fear it will kill him.

"This is wonderful," said Kim Getty, as she raced to telephone the news to her brother Jeff at his San Francisco home.

Scientific advisers to the Food and Drug Administration weren't so optimistic. They warned that the experiment not only will likely kill Getty but must be carefully controlled to ensure that diseases the baboons carry don't spread to humans.

"This probably will hasten his death, not prevent it," said Dr. Hugh Auchincloss Jr. of Massachusetts General Hospital.

But if Getty who is 38, accepts the risks and the doctors follow strict precautions, the panel said, the operation should go forward to prove whether baboons, who don't get AIDS, hold a key to fighting the fatal disease.

The FDA usually follows advisory committee recommendations. Officials indicated a decision could be made in several weeks.

"This is a unique opportunity to actually study the risks" of cross-species transplants, or xenotransplantation, said FDA biologics chief Dr. Philip Noguchi.

Baboons do not get HIV-1, the type of AIDS virus most prevalent in the United States. Dr. Suzanne Ildstad of the University of Pittsburgh plans to inject baboon bone marrow into Getty.

AIDS destroys blood cells, particularly immune cells. Bone marrow manufactures new blood cells. The theory is that the transplant could resupply Getty's bloodstream with HIV-resistant blood cells.

It is usually impossible to transplant bone marrow between genetically dissimilar people, much less different species. This experiment was tried once before and failed. Ildstad thinks she will succeed because she has discovered "facilitating cells" that appear to prevent the body from destroying transplanted marrow.

She was ready to go in April when the FDA told her federal law required prior government clearance for an experiment that could be dangerous to the patient or the public. Thirty days ago, she filed the proper application.

Getty's family and AIDS activists attacked the FDA Friday for the delay. "Don't take this hope away from him," pleaded his mother, Susan Getty. "Unless you do something now, he will be dead."

But the FDA acted properly, gene therapy pioneer Dr. W. French Anderson told fellow panel members. The oversight forced Ildstad to strengthen her trial and increase safety precautions, he said, and since that has happened, the experiment "should be approved now."

Of particular concern is whether xenotransplants could spread dangerous animal viruses to humans. After all, AIDS itself is believed to have jumped from certain monkeys into humans, and some flu strains come from pigs.

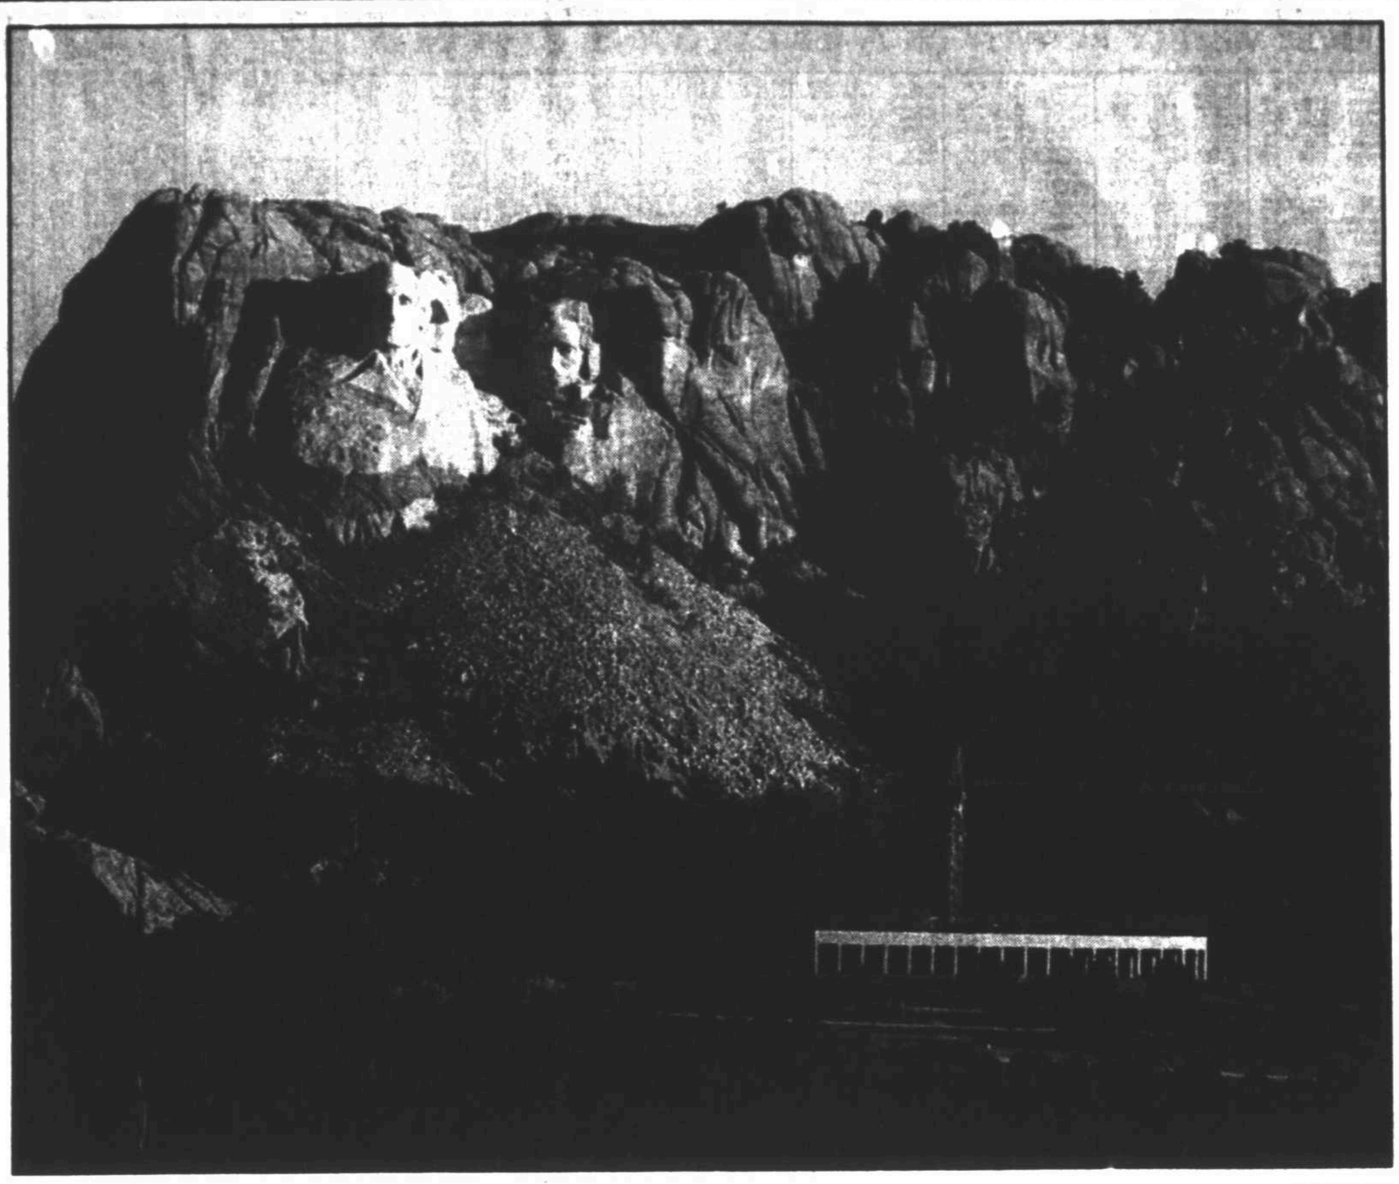

In fact, the two baboons slated for Getty's marrow donation have five known viruses. They possibly could infect Getty outright or merge with each other or a germ already in his body to form a virulent hybrid.

Nobody knows how likely that is, FDA advisers said. But the panel insisted Ildstad look for healthier baboons, proceeding only if there are none or Getty's condition worsens. Searching scientific baboon colonies will take about two weeks.

Regardless, Getty, 38, and his doctors will be repeatedly tested for disease.

But some panelists' biggest fear is that Getty will die before Ildstad can tell if baboon marrow could possibly manufacture blood cells that work in people.

The reason: The baboon's immune cells will be removed from his marrow before the transplant to prevent Getty's body from automatically rejecting it.

Legalize drugs or adopt penalties to stop usage, Gingrich says

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — The nation ought to "quit playing games" on illegal drugs and either vote to legalize them or adopt penalties severe enough to get rid of them, House Speaker Newt Gingrich said Friday.

"I'm sick of being told we don't know how to do it," Gingrich told a meeting of the Republican National Committee.

He said those who import "commercial quantities, large quantities ... to sell them to our children" should get the death penalty, and those who purchase illegal drugs should be required to perform two days of public service a week for at least a year.

Gingrich spoke at the GOP summer meeting along with Republicans contending for the party's presidential nomination. The speaker has said he doesn't expect to run but has declined to rule it out.

To force the question on illegal drugs, he said he "would be prepared to put it on the ballot in November, either legalize it or get rid of it, but quit playing the games that enrich the evil, strengthen the violent, addict our children and make us look pathetic and helpless."

White House drug policy adviser Lee Brown issued a statement calling Gingrich's proposal "a simplistic silver bullet."

Gingrich is guilty of "political hypocrisy," Brown said, for "suggesting the defeatist alternative of legalization" while congressional Republicans try to cut funds for treatment and prevention programs.

Asked later by reporters about his idea for a ballot measure, which only some states allow, Gingrich said it could recommend that Congress enact "a decisive program that has the kind of sanctions I'm talking about, or let's legalize it." He said sanctions would have to be "very Draconian, very real steps."

Brown denied Gingrich's contention that Clinton has presided over the first upswing in drug use since the Reagan administration, saying an increase in marijuana use among young people actually began while George Bush was president in 1991.

Gingrich also used his talk to criticize Clinton as leader of "the least competent, least adult, least structured, least disciplined and least responsible administration ... probably in our country's history."

But Gingrich and many others at the Republican gathering underscored a need not to underestimate Clinton, whom they characterize as a savvy politician willing to change positions for votes.

"Clinton is starting to move into what he does best, and that's run for office," said Don Bain, state chairman from Colorado.

Gingrich characterized Clinton as a "terrifically good talker" and said that if the election "is about personalities there is a fair chance that Bill Clinton will be re-elected."

ACS online

The American Cancer Society has moved into cyberspace with a forum on America Online that provides a broad array of information about cancer incidence, prevention, diagnosis and treatment.

Derrick Wheeler, vice president of the ACS Information Center called the new service an "example of how technology can be used to empower individuals."

The ACS Forum is part of Health ResponseAbility Systems' Better Health and Medical Forum on AOL and can be accessed using the keywords "ACS" or "cancer."

The cancer forum emphasizes prevention and early detection as well as self-help and mutual support for individuals and families living with cancer.

Health ResponseAbility Systems currently hosts three live cancer support groups live online each week. The Living With Cancer Self-Help Group meets Sundays at 6 p.m. CDT; the Cancer Survivors Group meets Mondays at 9 p.m. CDT; and the Loved Ones of Cancer Survivors meets Tuesdays at 6 p.m. CDT. All groups meet in the AOL Health Conference Room.

Coffee houses have become chic outlets for today's new technology.

By Jerry Markon
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — The coffee house — a place to read poetry, eat muffins, gossip, philosophize ... and surf the Internet?

Welcome to the cybercafe, the newest addition to the on-line lexicon.

It offers more than cappuccino and cholesterol-free brownies. And the chips aren't just made of chocolate.

New York's first three cybercafes, which opened this spring in the East Village, charge customers $10 to $14 an hour to use a computer linked to the Internet. While they eat or drink, patrons can send e-mail, scope a chat line or, at one cafe, plug in their own laptop.

More than making money, the cafe owners say their goal is to educate a public still intimidated by computers.

"You don't have to be a brain surgeon to use the Internet," says Dave Williams, co-owner of The Heroic Sandwich Cybercafe. "It's very easy to understand. We're trying to provide a comfortable atmosphere to use it."

The on-line cafes are among about 50 that have opened worldwide in the past several years — with at least 25 more in the works — according to a cybercafe

BACKSLASH
The symbol that means a lot to PCs

N.Y. Times News Service

In its own small way, one slim character that is now a fixture of every keyboard could be called a herald of the computer age. It is, the backslash, the newer sibling and mirror image of the more familiar slash.

It is as common and essential to computer grammar as the period is to written language. To those who talk to and through computers all day long, it is part of the linguistic furniture — at least when one is using the Disk Operating System, or DOS, which provides the underlying architecture that controls most personal computer software.

But before DOS, the backslash lived in obscurity, a minor symbol used on Western Union's telex keyboards, a bit player in a world of symbology that featured such perennial favorites as the symbols for number, ampersand ans asterisk.

With the creation of the personal computer — and more particularly with the arrival of the hard disk drive — the backslash took on a whole new meaning. Before the advent of the hard drive, data were stored on floppy disks or magnetic tape. Because a floppy disk's capacity was extremely limited, there was little need to really organize that information.

That changed when the hard drive became commonplace. With the opportunity to store vast amounts of data came the need to organize, sort and separate the information.

Enter the backslash. The character now serves as a stop sign signaling the user's journey through the sets, subsets, and sub-subsets of information on a personal computer's hard disk. A body of information is collected as a directory with its own name. The entire hard drive is usually represented, in DOS configurations, by the letter "C" followed by a colon. To explore the mysteries of C:, one must go into its component directories — lands separated by backslashes.

"Its purpose has really always been as a delimiter," Matthew Carter, type

VIRTUAL VEGAS

Turn your living room into a casino with new software

By Lonnie Brown
N.Y. Times News Service

Going into a casino can be confusing for anyone. The easiest thing to do — and the road of least resistance most gamblers take — is playing the slot machines:

1. Drop in money.
2. Push "spin the wheels" button or pull lever.
3. Repeat until "1" is not an option.

Most casino gamblers understand the basics of blackjack, but few know the basics of "counting cards" to estimate where the deck has grown rich in 10s, face cards and aces. Even fewer understand the craps table beyond the pass line. Few of the gamblers I've watched at craps tables take advantage of the casino's offer of "free odds" on pass line and come bets, even though it's to the player's advantage to do so.

'Dummies' series a phenomenon

By Susan F. Rasky
N.Y. Times News Service

■ Literature

FOSTER CITY, Calif. — At first blush, it's your basic Silicon Valley success story: brash, 30-something executive markets breakthrough product and leads tiny company to overnight fame and profit. Then again, there's a lot in the tale of John J. Kilcullen and the " ... for Dummies" publishing phenomenon that could have come straight from Broadway.

For starters, take the concept itself — a line of how-to computer and personal finance books written specifically for people willing to admit, indeed to glory, in their own ignorance and technophobia. Major booksellers and publishers, who said readers wouldn't buy books about their inadequacies, now clamor to stock or to imitate the bright yellow and black paperback volumes that take the side of people challenged by the complexities of modern life, making the series "a reference for the rest of us."

And there's Kilcullen — a working-class kid from the Bronx, a former altar boy with a Type A personality, with an instinct for promotion and packaging that would have shamed P.T. Barnum.

Then there's Kilcullen's ascent. Five years ago, as part of the small team that started IDG Books Worldwide, a subsidiary of the Boston-based International Data Group, Kilcullen's job was directing sales and distribution. But when the top man was yanked away early on to head another IDG subsidiary, young Kilcullen, like the proverbial Broadway understudy,

HDTV — A high-tech wonder that may never be

By Edmund L. Andrews
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — High-definition television, which became the rallying cry for the revival of the American electronics industry in the 1980s, now seems to be a wonder technology whose time never came and may already be gone.

Just as the vision of HDTV, with its promise of dazzlingly sharp pictures, is on the verge of becoming reality, broadcasters and regulators increasingly agree that what the American public will want is more television, not better television.

For broadcasters, the hot new buzz words are standard-definition television, or SDTV. Using the same technology created to make high-definition television possible, standard-definition television allows a broadcaster to pack four or five programs of ordinary quality onto a single channel. Picture

Technology may be GOLDEN for years to come

By Charles Stein
The Boston Globe

■ The Business of Technology

After the remarkable rally in technology stocks in the second quarter, you might expect money managers to be sending out caution signals about the group.

You know the cliches: Trees don't grow to the sky. Nothing goes up forever. What goes up must come down.

Instead, what you hear is something closer to gushing.

The people who follow technology use phrases like "second industrial revolution" and "golden age" to describe what is happening in the electronics world. While they concede there could be a correction coming soon, they remain very bullish on the sector.

"The trends we see could last for the next 10 or 12 years," said Scott Pape, a vice president at the Boston investment firm Loomis Sayles.

In other words, technology, like rock and roll, is here to stay.

No matter what happens in the future, the second quarter of 1995 will be a tough act to follow. Lipper Analytical, which tracks the performance of mutual funds, reported that its Science and Technology Fund Index climbed 20 percent in the second quarter. Most of the top performing mutual funds for the quarter were technology funds, with returns in the neighborhood of 20 to 30 percent.

Some of the biggest individual technology stocks climbed a comparable amount. Hewlett-Packard Co. was up 23 percent; Microsoft Corp., 25 percent; Apple Computer, 37 percent; and Intel Corp., 52

GAMBLE: Instructional CD-ROMs full of advice

(From 1B)

stands them all. He has a book on playing craps, and another called, "Slots: 41 Different Systems for Playing the Slots."

He now has a CD-ROM too: Casino Master Multimedia CD-ROM Edition for Windows from Centron Software Technologies Inc. is a collection of nine popular casino games: craps, blackjack, video poker, roulette, baccarat, pai gow poker, keno, slots and red dog.

Players can learn the basics of the game, move on to more-advanced play, and finally test their understanding of betting theory by playing the games.

For each game, there are video clips of Patrick offering explanations or tips on playing and betting.

His advice on red dog (a card game in which players bet whether or not a third card dealt will be numerically between the first two dealt) is the easiest to understand: Stay away. The payoff odds are terrible. If you insist on playing, he provides some tips to at least less the damage the lopsided odds may do to a bankroll.

Why is the game here, anyway? Why not simply issue the warning about the odds? Patrick's video said the computer might give an idea of how poorly the game pays in relation to the odds. Better to find it out here then at the tables.

Patrick speaks rapidly on the videos, and has the distracting habit of looking frequently off camera to his right. A few of the videos aren't very informative and could have been left out to provide longer segments for others.

Novices who ever hope to understand the craps table would do well to buy Patrick's book on it as well. On the CD, he likens the knowledge to something magical that will one day dawn on a player.

As with any good magician, however, it takes practice to saw the woman in half without a lot of screaming and blood. You'll never understand the craps table by watching the video. Patrick's book on it, which I had coincidently purchased a few months before seeing the program, is handy to have for picking up the details on why "22 inside" (better $22 on the numbers five, six and eight and nine) pays the way it does.

There are many thoughtful features to the game. If you want to bet a certain amount each time on place bets, the amounts can be preset. Then, by clicking on just one button, several bets can be placed at once. If you want to bet a certain amount on the field (not one of the better craps bets, incidentally) and another amount to come, the buttons make that simple, too.

There is an on-disk catalog for purchasing Patrick's books and videos (some may be available locally in bookstores, too), as well as a listing of casinos, card rooms and other gambling establishments around the nation.

The listing isn't too complete for the casinos in the Biloxi, Miss., area. But given the rapid expansion (and failure of two there in the past six months), it's understandable. Otherwise, it's amazing how casinos and card rooms have spread across the United States in the past few years. The number of locations with Indian tribal names gives a clue as to why it has.

If Herbert Hoover were running for president today, he'd no longer promise, "Two cars in every garage and a chicken in every pot." With the White House on the World Wide Web, the slogan for the (Lots of Worthless) Information Highway Age might be: "Two computers in every home and a modem in every communications port."

How pervasive is the World Wide Web? The Polk County Sheriff's Department recently went online with its own WWW homepage.

If you have access to the web, type: http://legal.fern.edu/sheriff/polk/polk.html. (Don't include the final period, however. As you may have guessed by now, one typo will bring an error message, and the web not a very user-friendly place to be. The good news is that web browsers have "bookmarks," so once a home page has been visited, it can be saved to a list so getting back is just a matter of pointing and clicking.

It's not surprising. When Sheriff Lawrence Crow was chief of the Lakeland Police Department, he had one of the first departments to allow officers to file reports using laptop computers. And using an inexpensive home computer in the department basement, LPD ran a bulletin board so computer owners could call in and find information about the department.

There was even a section that showed what streets LPD would be concentrating its radar units on. (See? Telecommunications can be useful for something.)

Today's computers allow pictures, various type styles and colors instead of the text and simple graphics from Crow's LPD days. You'll see a Sheriff's star and the symbol for the national accreditation on the home page. A home page is like a visual table of contents for what is offered: A greeting from the sheriff, tips on crime prevention, child safety advice, and a picture of Polk's most-wanted.

A five-page telephone listing for the department is also available. It lists everything from the account's payable to the Boot Camp commander's office.

But there are no names on the list. Only numbers for departments or locations, including the 13 community policing stations in the county, are listed.

(Lonnie Brown is associate editor of The Ledger in Lakeland, Fla. His reviews and articles have appeared in several national computer magazines. Messages can be left on the Prodigy information service at WRCF87A or America Online at LonnieB001.

HDTV: FCC prepares for policy revamp quality could actually be worse for some new services, depending on how a television station uses the newly available technology.

"With digital, you can make the picture as bad as you want," said Peter Fannon, head of the Advanced Television Testing Center in Fairfax, Va. Weaker pictures require less data, making it possible to send more programs over one band of radio frequencies.

The new possibilities leave broadcasters and regulators confronting a basic transformation in the television industry. The Federal Communications Commission is preparing this month to overhaul its policies in response.

That process, in turn, is spawning a huge political battle over the control of both old and new broadcast frequencies. The fight centers on who should pay for the frequencies, who can profit from them and how the public should share in the benefits.

Television broadcasters, who had been promised new channels to launch high-definition television, want the freedom to do as they please with those channels. In Congress, however, Republicans are hungrily eyeing this new broadcast real estate as a source of income to help reduce the deficit. They want to make broadcasters pay for the channels, one way or another.

Meanwhile, Reed E. Hundt, the chairman of FCC, would like to force broadcasters to provide more public services like educational programming for children.

But the broadcasters are hardly of one mind about how to proceed. Many are uneasy about all the available options. Companies that own local stations fear that having four or five channels will cannibalize their existing business, forcing them to pay for more programming without being able to attract more advertising.

But companies that own stations and produce large quantities of programming — like Rupert Murdoch's Fox Broadcasting and some major networks — see a big opportunity to market their material in new ways.

Murdoch, whose News Corp. owns Fox, has floated the idea of creating a new all-news channel, among other things, that would be carried as part of a digital package by Fox affiliates.

DUMMIES: DOS manual a breakthrough stepped in to the leading role.

Out of that early chaos came two nondescript books on computer games, and then the runaway hit "DOS for Dummies," Dan Gookin's sassy, irreverent reference book that became the prototype for the "Dummies" series. But like most history, the particulars are in some dispute. IDG's "official" version is that Kilcullen was visiting a computer store in 1987 and overheard a customer ask a clerk for a very simple computer primer — something, the customer pleaded, like "DOS for Dummies."

Gookin and Michael McCarthy, a former editor in chief for IDG Books, say the idea sprang from McCarthy's Uncle Huey, a chemist who complained that books on computer operating systems were either insulting or impenetrable.

In any case, as president and chief executive of IDG Books, Kilcullen, 36, oversees a company of more than 200 employees, with annual revenue last year of $50 million — about 70 percent of it from the "Dummies" books. That gives IDG Books about a third of the computer trade book market. Another third belongs to archrival Macmillan Computer Publishing, a division of Simon & Schuster that jumped on the technophobe bandwagon with "The Complete Idiot's Guide."

"We probably didn't recognize that there were so many new computer users coming into the market," says Macmillan's vice president and publisher, David G. Israel. "We had tried various forms of cartoons and humor in books for casual users, but without success. The market grew and Dan Gookin wrote a really good book. IDG hit gold."

IDG, meanwhile, keeps cranking out "Dummies" titles on topics that range from camcorders and V.C.R.'s to taxes and mutual funds. More than 18 million copies have been sold, and there are translations of the more popular titles in 26 languages. In the wings is a whole line of general interest "Dummies" volumes, including "Sex for Dummies," by Dr. Ruth Westheimer, set for release in August.

So what does a young publishing executive who has turned the computer book industry on its ear do for an encore? "You're always looking for T-N-B-T," Kilcullen says. "The Next Big Thing."

At the moment he is flicking specks of dust from his immaculate black conference table and chatting on the speakerphone with his corporate shrink. They are planning this year's management retreat, which will focus on something about enhancing managers' ability to communicate with the staff.

"Silence," Kilcullen tells a visitor, "is anything but consent. Right, Dr. B?"

"Dr. B" is Stephen Berglas, a Boston-based psychologist who helps executives cope with stress. Kilcullen hired him two years ago to consult on personnel matters and to ease the company's transition from a freewheeling start-up to a more disciplined, hierarchical organization.

The doctor is helping Kilcullen to make a similar transition. Apparently, for this enormously successful salesman and promoter, The Next Big Thing is to learn to be the boss. He has the traditional CEO trappings in his spacious office — congratulations from Patrick McGovern, IDG's chairman, a plaque proclaiming "4th Quarter 1992, Greatest Improvement in Profit Margin Over Plan" — but he knows he needs to change to succeed in the job.

The psychologist has presented a variety of knickknacks to Kilcullen as reminders of his managerial role. One is a brass mirror that carries a tiny plaque that reads, "You Are the CEO, You Are the CEO."

Another is a drawing of the biblical story of King Solomon ordering the infant to be cut in half to settle the dispute between two women claiming to be its mother. It was, Kilcullen explains, the doctor's way of reminding him "to let the system tolerate conflict while you take the heat."

But for all the reminders of his exec tive responsibilities, Kilcullen can't seem to pry himself from the smallest details of "Dummies" promotion. "He's very much a graphic-oriented person, definitely left brain," says Polly Adams Papsadore, marketing director for IDG Books. She has come to Kilcullen's office to show him plans for an exhibit at an upcoming book sellers' conference, and he pores over the details.

And when he struck his deal with Dr. Ruth, Kilcullen, ever the salesman, wanted to print T-shirts with her picture on them. The sexologist said no.

He has another trait incongruous for a boss: a populist identification with the underdog. "I like to hire people who have a point to prove," he says, "people who have great ideas like I did in New York City. I left because I wasn't being heard in that kind of dictatorial environment."

Kilcullen, who is married and has a young son, graduated with a degree in communications from Fordham University and spent 14 years working his way up the sales ladder in the technical books divisions of Bantam, Prentice Hall and elsewhere.

"Editors," he snorts. "I think most of the editors I knew back East were effete snobs who showed an acute disdain for the sales and marketing side. It made me sick."

This is the Bronx kid talking, the son of Irish immigrants who shared his parents' three-bedroom apartment with seven siblings and is proud of it. His mother, a retired waitress, pushed them all through Catholic school and on to professional careers. His father was a truck driver.

The chief executive's sympathies for the underdog may be the secret of his success with "Dummies." True, he and others say that his resemblance to the nerdy cartoon character in the "Dummies" logo is entirely a coincidence. But there is no denying that Kilcullen encourages his authors to take an iconoclastic tone toward the computer industry and their other subjects, and that this attitude reflects his own world view.

"I'm a user, not a programmer," he says. "I'm probably one of the least technically adept people in the company."

The heart of the "Dummies" books, he says, is their appeal to "people who are working two jobs, to single parents, folks who've been downsized out of a job and know they lack the skills to get a new one."

A love of risk sets Kilcullen apart. "My mother used to say: 'John, go work for the telephone company. You'll get a pension and you'll be set,'" he recalls. "I've always had a risk orientation."

percent. Local companies that participated in the rally included Parametric Technology Corp., up 22 percent; Cabletron Systems Inc., up 20 percent; and Analog Devices Inc., up 36 percent.

Even investors who didn't set out to buy technology stocks benefited from the rally because so many money managers packed their portfolios full of them. Fidelity's Magellan Fund has about 40 percent of its $40 billion invested in technology. For growth managers, the norm is closer to 20 percent, Lipper found.

Although they don't challenge the basic upbeat story about technology, a few money managers are nervous about what may lie ahead.

Some contrarians worry that Wall Street's nearly universal love affair with technology stocks is, in itself, a bad sign: If this many people believe one thing, can they possibly be right? Others point to the buoyant market for initial public offerings as a sign of trouble. "You see companies going public today that perhaps couldn't go public in less robust markets," said Stephen Gaal, a principal in the venture capital firm TA Associates.

Christopher Ely, a portfolio manager at Keystone Investmentsin Boston, knows all that, yet still he remains optimistic. "The four most dangerous words in investing are: This time is different," said Ely. "But this time things actually may be different." Ely and others are convinced that the fundamentals are so good for technology that the rally does not have to end.

If you ask investment professionals why they are so high on technology, they will tell you that:

—The industry is growing at a terrific pace. Annual worldwide sales of personal computers should nearly double by 1999, according to Dataquest, a market research firm. The growth is expected to come from both the industrial nations and the emerging markets. The Semiconductor Industry Association recently predicted that microchip sales this year will grow by 40 percent. Only last October the group forecast a growth rate of 15 percent.

The increases are coming on top of large bases. Both personal computer and semiconductor sales are greater than $100 billion a year. "Technology is part of the mainstream industrial base of the US economy," said Katherine Kirk, an investment banker with Hambrecht & Quist in Boston.

No company better illustrates the incredible potential of technology than Intel, the world's premier semiconductor company. Analysts say that if Intel can keep up its pace of growth, it could be America's most profitable company by the year 2000. Its stock price has doubled from 32 to 64since the beginning of the year and it now has a market capitalization of $52 billion.

Technology will grow in almost any economic environment. In good times, companies invest in technology because they can afford to.

BACKSLASH: Microsoft cofounder culprit designer at Carter & Cone Type in Cambridge, Mass., speculated. It was character No.92 out of the first set of 96 characters created as part of the American Standard Code for Information Interchange, a character set created under the auspices of the American National Standards Institute.

(From 1B)

As Carter recalled, "I think it was part of the Ascii character set, which goes back to the days of the teletype system to make distinctions between normal text and the normal alphanumerical characters and function codes — instructions — set between backslashes," he said. A Western Union official confirmed this hypothesis.

If one person is largely responsible for making a big splash with the backslash, that person seems to be Paul Allen, co-founder of Microsoft.

"Blame me for having to type the backslash in DOS," Allen told Wired magazine in an interview last year. The character first appeared in the second version of DOS, which was introduced in 1983 simultaneously with IBM personal computers using the information-rich hard drive.

CAFES: Education one goal of diners guide obtained electronically at Manhattan's Internet Cafe.

(From 1B)

About 20 of those are in the United States, in cities ranging from Seattle and San Francisco to Nashville and Atlanta.

Trendy? No, says Lu Ratunil, a customer at the "at" cafe.

"I dare you to go outside and find someone who will pay $5 to use the Internet for a half-hour," Ratunil, a Manhattan computer graphic artist, says as he nibbles on a BLT and scrolls through a database directory.

"A one-time customer won't come back here unless he has a reason to be on the Net, and what's a reason? To look at cool stuff? That's not enough."

But Bert Presberg, a computer-illiterate psychiatrist, was entranced with the Grateful Dead song lyrics his two friends were showing him at a nearby terminal.

"They're trying to get me interested in the computer, so they put up a subject I'm interested in," says Presberg, a Berkeley, Calif., resident who was so inspired he may now buy a computer.

One of his friends, Manhattan free-lance writer Mark Shulman, says he likes the cafe's "social setting. Doing the Internet is very solitary at home. We're sharing our interests here."

Co-owner Glenn McGinnis says that's just the kind of social atmosphere he was seeking when he opened the cafe April 24 with five investors.

The "at" is Manhattan's largest cybercafe and the only one that offers a full menu with everything from sandwiches to sushi and meat loaf. But it feels like a coffee house, with 15 terminals scattered amid red brick walls that used to house the St. Mark's Bookshop.

The atmosphere is so mellow that employees sometimes need to be reminded to answer the phone.

"We encourage people to hang out," says McGinnis, 25, a recent Cornell University graduate.

His MacIntosh PowerMac 6100s and PCs cost $5 per half hour to use, while an e-mail address is $5 per month.

The cafe also offers video conferencing and concerts or poetry readings that are "broadcast" onto the Internet through tiny cameras and microphones atop five computers.

Education is the goal at the Internet Cafe, which offers Internet training classes — $20 for two hours, plus one hour of computer time.

The cafe is one narrow room with a few tables, loose chairs and bookshelves lined with computer magazines, novels and that day's copy of The New York Times. A sign on the wall reads "Smoking Permitted."

"If you don't work in technology, you can't learn everything about computers from a book," says owner Arthur Perley, a Wall Street computer consultant who lives next door to the cafe.

His four PCs run from $6 to $10 an hour, depending on what you want to do. Customers can also connect their own laptops and use a color scanner and laser printer.

Perley, 38, says the favorite Internet databases are usually chat lines and e-mail. Kids often peruse "The Lion King" Home Page, while one woman doing genealogical research found Virginia census data from 1850.

The Heroic Sandwich is the smallest local cybercafe, with one Pentium PC ($7 per half hour).

Owner Dave Williams, 26, says the "non-threatening" approach is deliberate — and designed to attract women.

"Some people say the Internet is like six guys sitting around the hood of a car and checking the carburetor," he says, referring to surveys that have said women use the Internet less than men.

"We want to show men and women that the Internet is a tool for them," he adds. "It's only limited to your imagination."

Death toll continues to mount as massive heat wave moves east

Associated Press

An oppressive heat wave that derailed trains in the Midwest settled over the East on Friday, sending people to penguin exhibits and tanning salons in search of relief.

At least 23 deaths were blamed on the 100-degree temperatures and humidity, many of them in homes without air conditioning.

"All you want to do is take your clothes off," said Melissa Dougherty, a 33-year-old New York marketing researcher as she walked to work in black stockings and an olive green suit and the temperature in the mid-90s.

The National Weather Service blamed the extreme heat on a high pressure system that was slowly moving east from the western Great Plains. Forecasters said the heat wave would last through the weekend.

Chattanoogans opened fire hydrants to help youngsters cool off and the Tennessee Valley Authority churned out electricity at a record pace for a third consecutive day as people kept their air conditioners revving.

Deserted parks and playgrounds were as much a testament to the heat in Wichita, Kan., as the packed swimming pools.

Reggie Billups, manager of Waves of Fun in Hurricane, W.Va., said attendance at the park's wave pool has averaged about 1,000 each day, about 25 percent above normal.

"We've been wall-to-wall this whole week," Billups said.

In Washington, President Clinton gave a speech in the sunny courtyard of CIA headquarters, and noted that some in the crowd had sought refuge in the shade.

"I can't help thinking here at the Central Intelligence Agency that if we were giving intelligence awards today, they would go to the people back there under the trees," Clinton said.

Sixteen of 53 train cars derailed in Athens, Ohio, about 70 miles southeast of Columbus, because temperatures in the 90s caused the track to shift 14 inches.

Several hundred residents were evacuated briefly because one of the cars leaked a small amount of dimethylformamide, a combustible solvent, said Conrail spokeswoman Christine Wagner.

Earlier this week, a freight train derailed near Nebraska City, Neb., because the rail buckled in the heat.

The simmering weather claimed a seventh life Friday in Missouri, and throughout the Midwest, numerous other people sought treatment from the oppressive combination of heat and humidity.

The weather was the prime suspect in five deaths in Milwaukee and two more Chicagoans died of heat stroke Friday, bringing the toll there to four.

Kentucky and Iowa authorities each reported two heat-related deaths while officials in Texas, Nebraska and Indiana each reported one.

Record highs included 102 in Green Bay, Wisc., 100 in Boston and 96 in Portland, Maine.

And not just humans were suffering.

Turkey growers for Jerome Foods of Barron, Wisc., reported losses of about 15,000 birds so far, spokeswoman Cheryl Forehand said. Some were asking firefighters to mist the birds to keep them cool.

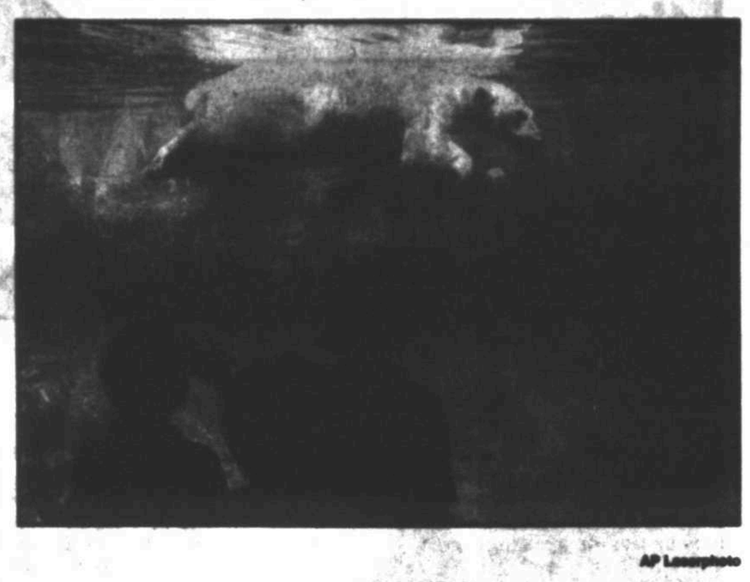

Marshall Dead Stock Removal in southeastern Wisconsin has been picking up 300 carcasses a day since Wednesday, manager Joe Merrick said.

"It's extremely bad," Merrick said. "Worse than winter. We're talking cows, horses, calves and pigs."

In Newport News, Va., Mac's Heating and Cooling was jumping Friday with calls from people who said their air conditioners weren't working.

"The weather gets hot and the people get cranky," office manager Pam Truston said. "They take it out on us, especially when you tell them you can't get to them till tomorrow.

Blanche Burrell, 84, of rural New Kent County, Va., kept cool with a new electric fan given her as part of a program for the elderly.

Director removes FBI's No. 2 man from post under pressure

WASHINGTON (AP) — Under pressure from Congress, FBI Director Louis J. Freeh removed his friend Larry Potts as the bureau's deputy director on Friday because of controversy over Potts' role in a deadly 1992 FBI siege in Idaho.

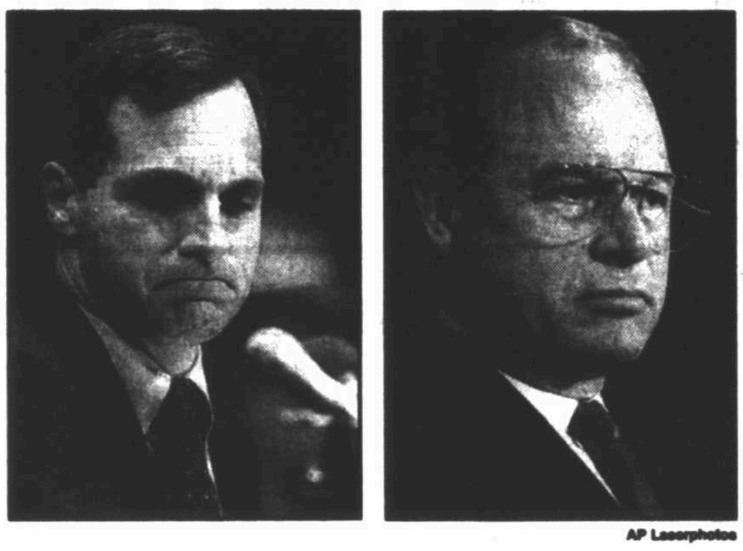

That public debate, fanned by a continuing Justice Department investigation and impending congressional hearings, had left Potts "unable to effectively perform his duties as deputy director," Freeh concluded.

Freeh acted just before two House subcommittees opened joint hearings next Wednesday into another deadly FBI siege, in 1993 at the Branch Davidian cult compound near Waco, Texas. Both operations were managed from headquarters by Potts while he was an assistant director of the FBI.

The action also came the same week that Freeh put another senior FBI official, E. Michael Kahoe, on administrative leave from his job as chief of the FBI's Jacksonville, Fla., office.

Kahoe was placed on leave after admitting he destroyed the after-action report on the Idaho incident, according to administration and congressional officials, who demanded anonymity. He was chief of the shooting review team.

That report might have shed light on whether Potts approved much-criticized "shoot on sight" orders issued to FBI snipers during the standoff in Idaho with white separatist Randy Weaver. An FBI sniper shot and killed Weaver's unarmed wife, Vicki, as she stood behind a door at the couple's remote Ruby Ridge cabin. The government says the sniper was aiming at an armed associate of Weaver's who was running into the cabin.

AP Laserphotos

Freeh went door-to-door in Congress earlier this week providing individual briefings about Kahoe to key members on committees that oversee the FBI. Two congressional aides said Freeh heard calls for Potts' removal from both Democrats and Republicans who thought his promotion last May was a bad move and that the latest revelations about Ruby Ridge only worsened Potts' position.

Republicans and Democrats hailed Freeh's move Friday.

"Freeh did the right thing," said Rep. Charles Schumer of New York, ranking Democrat on the crime subcommittee holding the Waco hearings. "Larry Potts' removal takes a sword away from those who believe that Waco and Ruby Ridge were a grand government conspiracy."

Republican Sen. Larry Craig of Idaho, who had criticized Potts' promotion, said, "We now may be moving in the direction of full public disclosure of this incident and the behavior of the agents involved."

Rep. Helen Chenoweth, R-Idaho, who had asked Attorney General Janet Reno to remove Potts on Wednesday, applauded his transfer and urged that he be fired.

Freeh informed Reno during a Justice Department meeting Friday of his decision to transfer Potts to the FBI's training division. Freeh said he would select a new deputy soon and, in the meantime, William J. Esposito, assistant director in charge of criminal investigations, would serve as acting deputy.

White House press secretary Mike McCurry said the president has made clear any wrongdoers will be fired, adding, "We are satisfied that the Justice Department is now pursing this diligently and conducting an appropriate inquiry into the facts."

A central issue in the Idaho case has been who was responsible for special rules of engagement that said FBI snipers "could and should" use deadly force against armed men spotted in the open at the Weaver compound. Longstanding FBI policy bars the use of lethal force except in self-defense.

Potts has denied he approved or even saw such language. But Richard Rogers, head of the FBI hostage rescue team, and Eugene Glenn, who was Salt Lake City office chief and field commander in the Idaho standoff, have sworn that Potts did.

Kahoe's admissions came during a 2-month-old Justice Department investigation of charges by Glenn, whom Freeh blamed for the "shoot on sight" order, that previous FBI reviews of Ruby Ridge were designed to cover up for Potts.

Potts did not immediately respond to a call to his office.

Freeh said, "Potts agrees with my decision to transfer him. He fully supports this transfer for both personal reasons as well as his desire to best serve the FBI."

The decision could not have been easy for Freeh, because Potts was among his closest aides. Their friendship stretched back to their work together in 1990-91 when Freeh, then a federal prosecutor, and Potts were put in charge of and won a conviction in one of the government's biggest cases: the mail bomb killings in 1989 of 11th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals Judge Robert Vance in Alabama and Savannah, Ga., City Council member Robert Robinson.

Freeh pushed for Potts' promotion to deputy director at the same January news conference at which he called for Potts to be censured for failing to pay enough attention to the orders given to FBI snipers at Ruby Ridge.

Both House and Senate committees are gearing up to look into the Idaho incident in September.

The House hearings beginning Wednesday will examine an FBI tear gas assault on the Branch Davidian compound in 1993. During the attack, a fire broke out that destroyed the complex. Eighty-one bodies were found in the ashes.

Researchers estimate 328 potential drugs are hidden in world's vast rain forests

N.Y. Times News Service

Flowering plants from the world's tropical forests have produced 47 major pharmaceutical drugs, and an estimated 328 more drugs are hidden somewhere in the forests' vast reaches, two researchers have estimated.

With the tropical forests being steadily destroyed, they say, social institutions should be put in place to slow deforestation and protect biological diversity before it is too late.

The researchers, Dr. Robert Mendelsohn, an economist at Yale University, and Dr. Michael J. Balick, director of the Institute of Economic Botany at the New York Botanical Garden in the Bronx, estimated that collectively the 328 drugs would be worth $147 billion to society, substantially less than some previous estimates.

And for a single pharmaceutical company, various factors reduce the economic value of collecting and screening all flowering plants in the tropical forests to as little as $3 billion.

"People are always talking about the potential of the tropical forest as the source of medicine," said Balick. "We tried to establish a realistic set of expectations for the number of drugs that could be found."

Mendelsohn said: "There's been a vague argument that there are all these wonderful drugs hiding behind every tree. But it's more like a needle in a haystack."

In a paper published last month in the journal Economic Botany, the scientists took into account the costs of research and development, manufacturing, marketing, taxes and other factors.

The analysis makes clear the difficulty of finding a useful drug in the tropical forests, which shelter 125,000 flowering plant species, or roughly half the world total, the researchers said. Past experience with large samples of botanical tests suggests that it takes from 1 in 50,000 to 1 in 1 million screening tests to make a commercially useful drug. The researchers made their calculations using the more conservative figure, estimating that the potential value to society of drugs derived from the rain forest is $48 per two and one-half acres.

Dr. Jim Miller, an expert on tropical forests at the Missouri Botanical Garden in St. Louis, said that the study was valuable, but he was skeptical of the specific figures.

"I think cumulatively the point they are trying to make is probably right on target," he said. "There are a fair amount of drugs in tropical forests, and those drugs do have a very large market value. But a lot of the figures they're selecting are almost arbitrary."

Balick said: "Because this estimate is built on so many numbers and so many assumptions, we realize the uncertainty and fully expect that as future studies are published, researchers will bring in additional data which will allow for even greater precision. What this paper attempts is to begin to quantify realistic possibilities from a conservative standpoint.

"In those 328 potential drugs, there are a lot of drugs for diseases for which we have therapies with limited effectiveness or no effectiveness at all," he said. "One of the dangers in standing by is, biodiversity is lost in the tropical forest. The potential of these pharmaceutical products will never be realized to the extent that it's possible at this point. That's a great tragedy for society."

The drugs previously discovered in tropical forests include vincristine and vinblastine, which are used for cancer, and quinine, the oldest malaria medicine.

Still, pharmaceutical industry experts remain skeptical.

"We have no way of knowing what's in the rain forest," said Steve Berchem, a spokesman for the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association, a nonprofit organization representing more than 100 drug companies.

The analysis makes clear the difficulty of finding a useful drug in the tropical forests, which shelter 125,000 flowering plant species, or roughly half the world total, the researchers said.

He said that many products were found not in flowering plants, but in insects, fungi, bacteria and other organisms. He added that only a handful of companies are actually screening the tropical forest for potential medicines.

"The trend is away from screening materials because it's so expensive and so fraught with failure," Berchem said.

"Companies are looking into rational drug design," which means identifying chemical structures that are active against specific diseases. Rather than screening each new substance, companies would simply compare its chemical structure to those that are known to be effective.

One of the companies combing through the forests is Merck & Company, which has invested $2 million since 1991 in the National Biodiversity Institute in Costa Rica to hunt through the country's biological resources for new medicines. So far, there have been no returns, said a company spokeswoman, Joan Jones. The contract runs through 1996.

Still, one of Mendelsohn's suggestions is for more drug companies to do what Merck is doing — paying countries for rights to search their rain forests for medicines, thereby providing an economic incentive for the countries not to develop these areas.

Mendelsohn also recommends that the federal government subsidize drug research, because new drugs have a greater potential value to society as a whole than to an individual company.

Tropical storm Chantal strengthens but remains far from land in Atlantic

MIAMI (AP) — Tropical Storm Chantal showed signs Friday of gradual strengthening and a shift to the northwest, but the 40-mph storm remained far from land in the Atlantic.

By today "it should get interesting. It will have died away, or it will have strengthened significantly," said National Hurricane Center forecaster Steve Lyons. "It could still go either way."

At 11 a.m. EDT, the storm was near 21.3 north latitude and 65.2 west longitude, putting it about 200 miles northeast of San Juan, Puerto Rico, and about 1,100 miles southeast of Miami.

Chantal was moving west-northwest at about 5 mph. Storm-force winds extended 145 miles from the poorly defined center.

Forecasts indicate the storm would be well north of the Dominican Republic on Sunday, but the distance made any predictions about landfall on the U.S. mainland very iffy.

"We couldn't be happier," Page Crosland, director of communications for the U.S. Tennis Association, said.

It has not been determined whether Seles will be seeded, whether she will have a ranking that would put her in the main draw, or whether she will be granted a wild card for the tournament that begins Aug. 28 at Flushing Meadow.

Caps rip Angels

■ Jamie Brewington pockets his eighth victory for Shreveport in a stout outing against Midland.

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

Angel fans worried about the recent loss of Todd Greene and Jovino Carvajal may want to redirect their concern. The last three nights Midland's pitching has allowed 32 runs on 51 hits, falling Friday at Christensen Stadium 10-4 to Shreveport.

The Angels were without home-run leader Greene for the second night and without Texas League RBI leader George Arias, scratched from the lineup because of headaches. But starter Ryan Hancock never gave the depleted offense a chance by giving up seven runs in the first two innings for the Angels' third straight loss. The Angels (11-11) have not lost four games in a row since May 3-6.

"If the starting pitching continues to do that — give up so many runs in the beginning of the game — it might be hard to come back," said Angel Manager Mario Mendoza, whose team fell out of first place in the Western Division with Thursday night's loss. "I'm not concerned about the guys that have (been promoted). I know we're going to miss Todd's home runs and Jovino's stolen bases, but the starting pitching has been our concern."

Starting pitching has never been a concern for Shreveport, which won the Eastern Division first half title and had the best team ERA in the league at 3.07 entering Friday's game. And for the last three nights, hitting hasn't been a concern either. The Captains (14-8) knocked out two home runs, three doubles and one triple Friday. Hancock (8-5) ended up allowing 10 runs on 12 hits in five innings.

Angel pitching coach Kernin Ronan said Hancock, who began the year at 6-1 but has lost four of his last six starts, has been working on a change in his technique.

"We've been trying to make some adjustments to his delivery and he's been working hard," Ronan said.

Meanwhile, Shreveport starter Jamie Brew-

Martinez hurls first no-hitter

By Beth Harris

LOS ANGELES — Ramon Martinez threw the first no-hitter of the season Friday night as the Los Angeles Dodgers beat the Florida Marlins 7-0.

Martinez was perfect through 7 2-3 innings, then walked Tommy Gregg on a 3-2 pitch. He struck out eight and threw 114 pitches in completing the first no-hitter for the Dodgers since Aug. 17, 1992, when Kevin Gross beat the Giants.

In the ninth, he struck out Charles Johnson, got Jerry Browne on a grounder to second and then Quilvio Veras lined to Roberto Kelly in left to end it.

Unknown rises to seize lead

Dawn Coe-Jones of Canada is playing in the U.S. Women's Open while being pregnant. It hasn't slowed her down much since she is in contention at 2-under par.

By John Moseman

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — With her competition collapsing around her, unheralded Jean Bartholomew carded nine straight pars Friday to claim the lead in the weather-delayed second round of the U.S. Women's Open.

Bartholomew, a veteran of the European and Japanese tours, was three under par through nine holes of her second round with darkness approaching.

Seven players were just one stroke behind.

At mid-afternoon, play was stopped for 1 hour, 45 minutes because of lightning, with about half the field still on the course.

At that point, four players were tied for the lead. Kris Tschetter had just chipped in for birdie on No. 10 to get to three under. She was tied with Tammie Green, Val Skinner and Bartholomew. Green had played nine holes of her second round, Skinner had played six and Bartholomew five.

Play resumed with about three hours of daylight left, but some golfers appeared likely to have to finish their rounds this morning.

Tschetter faded on the back nine, losing four strokes over three holes. She bogeyed 14, double-bogeyed 15 and bogeyed 16 to go one over.

Green, runner-up in this event last year, got to three under with a birdie at No. 9, but also dropped two shots on the back nine. Skinner birdied her first hole and then ran off five pars before bogeying twice.

In the clubhouse at 2-under 138 were six golfers — first-round leader Jill Briles-Hinton, Pat Bradley, Annika Sorenstam, Dawn Coe-Jones, Dale Eggeling and LPGA Tour rookie Leta Lindley. Briles-Hinton had a 72 Friday.

CFL to hit San Antonio with blast of Alamodome air

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — South Texans can escape the sweltering summer heat by heading into the Alamodome Saturday for a blast from the north — Canadian-style football.

The city's new Canadian Football League team, the San Antonio Texans, faces the Baltimore Stallions in the team's first regular-season home game Saturday night.

The CFL offers some new twists for football fans who may be more accustomed to watching the National Football League. In the Canadian league, the game is faster, there are three downs instead of four and the field is longer and wider.

San Antonio opened the season July 1 with a victory at Shreveport then lost last Saturday at Baltimore, 50-24.

Stallions quarterback Tracy Ham threw for 233 yards and ran for 57 more, earning CFL Offensive Player of the Week honors.

"We're looking forward to getting another chance against him," said San Antonio defensive coach Bill Bradley. "It's no place for boys out there. ... We need to see what we are made of. We'll see who are our men this week."

"This has been an easy game to prepare for," added Texans defensive end James King. "If I could describe last week's performance in one word, it would be 'embarrassing.'"

The Texans have worked to tighten their pass rush, which produced four sacks against Ham last week but couldn't contain him in key situations.

"We broke down last week and Tracy (Ham) was able to take advantage of it," said Texans coach Kay Stephenson.

The Texans moved to San Antonio this year from Sacramento, where the team was called the Gold Miners. San Antonio and Birmingham are the last teams to open their home schedules with games Saturday night.

Clemens' year is unexplainable

By Howard Ulman
AP Sports Writer

BOSTON — One by one, Roger Clemens looked up as the balls that had just left his hand were being hit over the outfield walls. Kevin Kennedy had seen enough. He took his slow stroll to the mound.

Again, the Boston Red Sox manager pulled one of baseball's best pitchers of the past decade from the game. It's happened a lot lately.

"I don't have an answer for it," a somber Kennedy said, "other than he got hit."

The game wasn't even half over when Clemens left Thursday night's 9-8 loss to the Texas Rangers. He was trailing 8-0 with none out in the fifth inning after allowing four homers.

In his last four starts, Clemens is 0-1 with a 7.87 ERA. For the first time in his career, he has allowed four homers in one game and hit three batters in another.

"Roger's been the ace here a long time," Mo Vaughn said. "It's tough to see him get hit like that."

He has won three Cy Young Awards in his 11 full big-league seasons. He was the AL's most valuable player in 1986. He led the league in ERA in 1990, 1991 and 1992. Last year, opponents' .204 batting average against him was the lowest in the league.

This year, nothing has gone right.

After the strike, Clemens strained a muscle behind his right shoulder in spring training and was put on the disabled list. He has made nine starts and is only 2-2 with a 5.30 ERA and no complete games.

Have all those years of throwing more than 90 mph fastballs taken their toll? Is he completely healthy? Has he, at age 32, forever lost the ability to be a dominant pitcher?

Clemens says he feels fine. He shows little concern.

"I've got to continue to get ahead (in the count) and make good quality out pitches," he said.

Ivan Rodriguez hit homers on counts of 0-1 and 1-2 Thursday.

"I'm not concerned," Clemens said. "Lately it's just been one big inning."

He gave up five runs to Detroit in the third inning July 2 and four runs in the third to Minnesota five days later. But on Thursday, he allowed two in the first, three in the second and three in the fifth.

"I threw the ball up and in twice to Pudge (Rodriguez)," Clemens said. "He kept them fair."

In past years, those pitches might have been too fast for Rodriguez to get around on them.

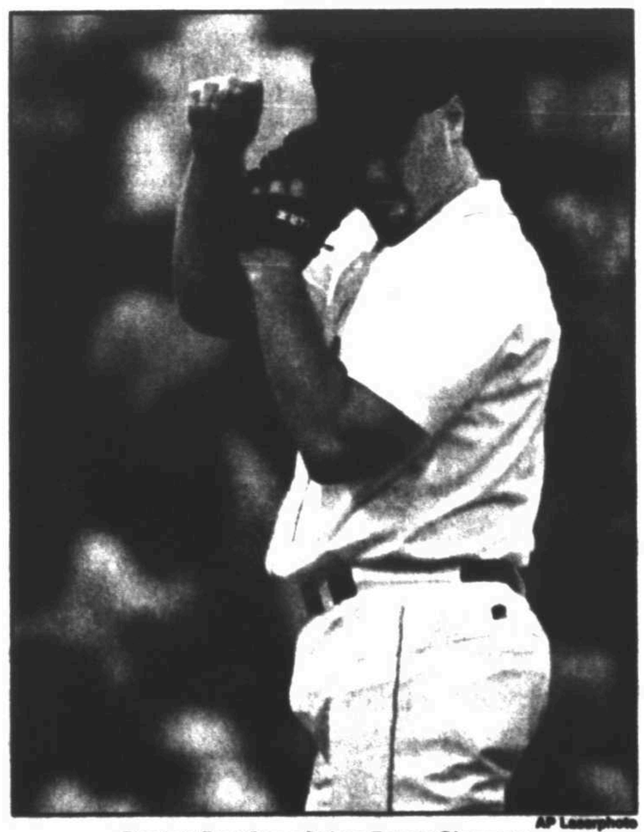

Clemens has been unusually wild, hitting seven batters and throwing six wild pitches. But he has 49 strikeouts in 52 2-3 innings. Opponents aren't convinced he's over the hill.

"Clemens still has a good fastball," Rodriguez said. "It's still there."

"The second time against me he looked real effective," said Mike Pagliarulo, who followed his first homer of the year in the second by looking at a third strike in the third.

There was talk that Clemens was slipping when he went 11-14 with a 4.46 ERA in 1993. But he rebounded last year with a 2.85 ERA and 9-7 record despite little run support.

With the Red Sox leading the AL East, he's critical to their pennant chances. Tim Wakefield and Erik Hanson have been their only reliable starters.

Reds rally past Cubs in ninth

Associated Press

CHICAGO — Benito Santiago lined a pinch single off Randy Myers to break a ninth-inning tie Friday, lifting the Cincinnati Reds to a 5-4 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

With Barry Larkin on second base and two outs, Cubs manager Jim Riggleman instructed Mike Perez (1-5) to intentionally walk Reggie Sanders. Myers, an All-Star reliever with 21 saves, then came on to face Morris. But Reds manager Davey Johnson summoned Santiago to bat for Morris, a .308 career hitter, to avoid a lefty-lefty matchup.

Santiago lined a 1-1 pitch to center field to score Larkin, who reached with his third single and stole second.

Astros 13, Giants 8

SAN FRANCISCO — Dave Magadan had a three-run double as Houston scored six unearned runs with two outs in the fifth for a victory over San Francisco.

Jeff Bagwell had four hits and four RBIs for the Astros, including a three-run homer in the sixth. Craig Biggio homered in the first inning for the second straight day.

Tony Eusebio added four hits and three RBIs for the Astros, who batted around in the fifth and sixth innings. Houston has won eight of 12.

Glenallen Hill's grand slam and a pair of solo homers by Kirt Manwaring had given the Giants a 6-2 lead after four innings. But a pair of errors by shortstop Royce Clayton led to Houston's big fifth inning.

With outs and runners on first an second thanks to Clayton's errors, Bagwell and Derek Bell had RBI singles. Phil Plantier walked, and Magadan cleared the bases to knock out Mark Portugal (5-4). Eusebio greeted reliever Jose Bautista with a run-scoring single.

Braves 6, Padres 2

SAN DIEGO — Javier Lopez hit a three-run homer and Tom Glavine threw eight strong innings for his fourth straight victory as Atlanta beat San Diego.

It was Atlanta's 11th victory in 12 games this month. The Padres have lost 12 of their last 17.

Expos 8, Phillies 2

MONTREAL — Rondell White, hitless in his last 13 at-bats, went 4-for-5 with two RBIs and Pedro Martinez allowed six hits over eight innings as Montreal routed Philadelphia.

White, who had only one hit his last 20 at-bats, had a two-run single in the fifth off reliever Kyle Abbott and scored twice. Martinez (7-5) struck out six and walked three in his second victory in his last seven starts.

Cardinals 6, Pirates 4

PITTSBURGH — Ken Hill turned a rare early-inning lead into seven effective innings in 93-degree heat and St. Louis stopped Pittsburgh's four-game winning streak.

St. Louis, which scored only seven runs with Hill on the mound over the right-hander's last eight starts, reached Pirates starter Esteban Loaiza (6-4) for a 4-0 lead in the first inning.

Mets 13, Rockies 4

NEW YORK — Ryan Thompson had a two-run homer, Todd Hundley added three hits and each drove in three runs as New York crushed Colorado.

Rico Brogna contributed a two-run homer as the Mets had 20 hits off three Rockies pitchers.

Villeneuve wins Molson pole

TORONTO (AP) — Jacques Villeneuve has found the knack for coming up with just a little more speed when he needs it the most.

The Canadian driver blasted around the 1.78-mile, 11-turn temporary circuit at Exhibition Place at 109.855 mph to wrest the provisional pole for Sunday's Toronto Molson Indy from three-time series champion Bobby Rahal.

That lap came with only about 30 seconds remaining in Friday's 30-minute qualifying session. The top spot changed hands three times in the final five minutes.

Rookie Andre Ribeiro of Brazil, coming off a career-best fourth-place finish last week at Elkhart Lake, Wis., was on top with a lap of 109.689 when Rahal, whose last career pole came on this track in 1992, knocked him off with a 109.689.

Al Unser Jr., a two-time Toronto winner and the defending PPG Cup series champion, then leaped over Ribeiro to take second place with a lap of 109.638 with only about three minutes remaining.

Villeneuve, who is seeking his third career pole and third in a row, won the pole last week by taking it from Brazilian rookie Gil de Ferran on his last lap. De Ferran drives for the Midland-based Hall Racing Team. He is setting in 13th position after qualification.

Rahal was a little disappointed by the outcome, saying, "I would have liked to have maybe one more lap."

Colbert smokes record in Senior Players play

Associated Press

DEARBORN, Mich. — The sweltering heat didn't slow down Jim Colbert on Friday as he shot a tournament- and course-record 9-under-par 63 to take a four-stroke lead halfway through the Senior Players Championship.

Colbert, who won this senior major in 1993, chipped in for an eagle on the par-5 17th and was at 11-under 133 for 36 holes, with Lee Trevino and J.C. Snead tied for second.

Trevino shot a 67 Friday, while Snead had a 68 at the 6,876-yard TPC of Michigan.

Defending champion Dave Stockton and Kermit Zarley were another stroke back at 138 after firing their second consecutive 69s.

Course-designer Jack Nicklaus, Dave Eichelberger, Isao Aoki, Rocky Thompson, Raymond Floyd and Bob Murphy, the Senior PGA Tour money leader, were all tied at 139.

Nicklaus, Murphy and Aoki each had a 68 on Friday, Thompson a 69 and Floyd and Eichelberger shot 70s.

None of the first-round leaders — Jerry McGee, Bob Charles and Bob Zimmerman — remained close to the top after their opening-round 68s. McGee and Charles followed with 73s, while Zimmerman, despite getting as low as seven under for the tournament through 10 holes Friday, limped home with a 74.

Colbert began the day, on which temperatures topped the 100-degree mark, at two under. He birdied four of the first seven holes en route to a front-side 31.

Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic

WILLIAMSBURG, Va. — Jim Gallagher Jr., one of the rising stars on the PGA Tour, moved to the top of leaderboard Friday after two rounds of the Anheuser-Busch Golf Classic.

Gallagher shot a 6-under-par 65, matching the best score of the first two rounds, to reach the midpoint of the $1.1 million event at 8-under 134.

Blaine McCallister's 67 and Jim Carter's 69 left them one stroke off the lead, and Steve Pate had a 66 and Jim McGovern and Ted Tryba 67s to join Scott Hoch and Fred Funk in a group at 136.

Don Reese also shot 65 Friday and was one of nine players at 137. Kirk Triplett, who was eight under after 15 holes, bogeyed 16 and was penalized two strokes for putting from the wrong marker on the 18th green. He's also at 137.

Gallagher, who made a 12-foot birdie putt on 18, had moved from a pack at five under with an eagle on No. 15.

"I was trying to land the ball on the green and it came out a little soft," he said of the sand wedge from 20 feet. "But it hit the fringe hard and released really well. I was surprised it rolled as far as it did."

Gallagher made a similar shot two weeks ago on his way to winning the St. Jude Classic in Memphis, his second victory of the year. He'a also finished second twice and is sixth on the money list with $832,038.

Wakefield too much for Rangers

Associated Press

BOSTON — Tim Wakefield got his fourth win in his last four starts and Chris Donnels drove in two runs as the Boston Red Sox beat the Texas Rangers 5-2 Friday night.

Donnels, a third baseman, got his first start of the season at first base because Mo Vaughn was sidelined with a bruised left eye suffered in a nightclub altercation.

No charges were filed in the incident after Texas' 9-8 win over Boston on Thursday night. Red Sox manager Kevin Kennedy didn't rule Vaughn out of Saturday night's game.

The win increased Boston's AL East lead to four games over Detroit, which lost to California. Texas fell out of a tie for the AL West lead with the Angels.

Wakefield (8-1) struck out a season-high seven batters but walked four, matching his season high. He lacked his usual sharpness, throwing 130 pitches in 6 1-3 innings. His ERA increased from 1.61 to 1.70, still the best in the league.

Angels 7, Tigers 3

DETROIT — J.T. Snow and Garret Anderson homered on consecutive pitches to break a sixth-inning tie and California went on to a victory over Detroit.

Snow broke his 0-for-14 slump with the two-run homer, his 12th of the year, after the Tigers had rallied to tie the game 3-3 in the fifth.

Anderson then hit Felipe Lira's next — and last — pitch off the right field roof for his third homer of the season and third RBI of the game. Anderson also hit a two-run single in the second inning.

The win was the Angels' second straight over the Tigers, who have lost three of their last four.

Indians 7-1, Athletics 6-0

CLEVELAND — Carlos Baerga drove in the only run in the first game and hit one of Cleveland's three home runs in the nightcap as the Indians swept a doubleheader from Oakland.

The Indians, winners of 12 their last 16 games, improved the best start in franchise history to 48-21. Oakland has lost nine of 12 overall and eight straight against Cleveland.

Jose Mesa finished off both games, giving him 23 saves in 23 chances.

Baerga went 4-for-7 in the two games, driving in the lone run in the opener with a two-out infield single in the sixth inning and contributing a two-run home run in the first inning of the nightcap.

Royals 7, Orioles 2

BALTIMORE — Tom Gordon pitched eight strong innings and Bob Hamelin hit a three-run homer as Kansas City beat Baltimore.

Jon Nunnally also homered for the Royals, who have won all three of their games against Baltimore this season.

Gordon (6-5) allowed seven hits and one walk to earn his first victory since June 21.

Twins 11, Yankees 4

NEW YORK — Pedro Munoz drove in four runs and Brad Radke won his third straight start as Minnesota beat New York.

Munoz had a sacrifice fly in the first inning, a two-run double in the fifth and an RBI single in Minnesota's five-run sixth.

Radke (6-7) allowed four runs on nine hits in five innings, raising his record to 3-0 in July.

Brewers 8, White Sox 7

MILWAUKEE — Greg Vaughn hit a 444-foot homer and tied a career-high with six RBIs as Milwaukee built a six-run lead and then hung on to beat Chicago.

Vaughn, who entered the series with a .190 batting average before getting a season-high three hits Thursday night, had a run-scoring groundout in the first, a three-run homer in the third and a two-run triple in the fifth.

The triple gave Milwaukee a 7-1 lead and chased Chicago starter Jason Bere (4-8), who surrendered eight earned runs on five hits and five walks in 4 1-3 innings. B.J. Surhoff's sacrifice fly off reliever Jose DeLeon made it 8-1.

JULY 17TH GREEN TREE COUNTRY CLUB

Well, here we go again . . . a bunch of golfers are going all out for one day in the scorching July heat to help raise money for the kids at the Boys & Girls Club of Midland. We will begin at the crack of dawn on July 17th and keep going until we drop or shoot a hundred holes of golf...whichever comes first.

So - where do you come in? No, we're not asking you to join us in the scorching heat. We aren't asking you to participate in the dehydration, exhaustion, sunburn and sunstroke frequently associated with non-stop golfing in 110° heat. We are asking you to join us in providing the sponsorship to make this madness all worthwhile.

Yes! I agree to sponsor a golfer in the Third Annual Midland Boys and Girls Club Marathon!

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, JULY 15, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Hold tight to your values as you climb closer to the top at work. You can gain great insight from observing your peers' behavior. New financial rewards will come through hard work. Let higher-ups know that you are willing to work long hours to achieve your dreams. The right romantic partner will admire your dedication, not disparage it. Keep looking!

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: cover girl Kim Alexis, musician Julian Bream, actor Ken Kercheval, singer Linda Ronstadt.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Continue work on a venture that has received encouragement. You may have something to offer that others desperately need. Control an inclination to throw your weight around.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): An unusual development creates an unexpected opportunity for you to shine. Your instincts will not fail you. Focus on bringing people together to work for a common cause.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Be certain you know all the rules and regulations surrounding a recreational pursuit. Carelessness could cause mishaps. The best conversationalists do as much listening as talking.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If you want to talk business at a social function, show some finesse. Only say enough to capture the other person's attention. It would be a mistake to accept an assignment you do not want.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): It is not always easy to mix business with friendship. The financial stakes could be high. Do what is right even if you fear unpleasant repercussions. A happy home life should be your top priority.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): An excellent day for recreational pursuits that will include family members of all ages. Do not spring into action until you have a chance to find out what your potential allies are thinking.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Getting off on the wrong foot with a newcomer could bring discord at home. Property transactions are favored. Sell something you no longer use. A neighborhood campaign is worthy of your support. Donate some time.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-No. 21): Your keen intellectual powers serve you well now. Show your entrepreneurial side by starting a new business. The news from people at a distance is encouraging.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Negotiations are finally concluded to your satisfaction. You attain your heart's desire! Domestic matters press for attention. Put a child's needs ahead of your own. A romantic interlude may have to be postponed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-An. 19): Another excellent day for family affairs and financial transactions. A stroke of good luck makes a social event a roaring success. Refrain from acting overly anxious about a loved one's health. Have faith.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): If planning to change residences, today is the day to enlist family members' cooperation. Contact with your relatives should be pleasant. Avoid making critical remarks. A neighborhood project would benefit from your personal involvement.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Catch up on important correspondence. Your persistence will be rewarded when an influential person finally says "yes." Romance will crowd out other thoughts late in the day. Follow your heart when a proposal is made.

Battle over diamond necklace ends in big donation to AIDS foundation

NEW YORK — An ugly fight over a gorgeous necklace ended with a generous donation as Sharon Stone settled her $12 million lawsuit against a jeweler.

Harry Winston will make a donation to the American Foundation for AIDS Research to resolve the feud, both sides said Friday. The exact amount and other terms of the settlement were not released.

The diamond dispute started in 1993, when Stone wore a $400,000 Winston necklace during the promotional tour for her movie "Sliver." Stone claimed the diamond necklace was a gift from Winston; the jeweler called her contention "mind-boggling."

Stone sued Winston in June 1994, charging misrepresentation and breach of contract. The necklace was returned to Winston.

AmFar vice president Sally Morrison described both Winston and Stone as past benefactors and said the charity was "thrilled" with the latest gift.

Stone was host this year of AmFar's fund-raising dinner at the Cannes Film Festival.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden — With cannons booming, music blaring and even skinheads offering congratulations, Crown Princess Victoria turned 18 on Friday in a celebration worthy of a future queen.

Crown Princess Victoria turned 18 on Friday in celebration worthy of a future queen.

"Stock-holm's skinheads congratulate you!" read a sign held by a small group of skinheads among about 5,000 people who massed at the city palace to cheer the coming of age of the heiress to the throne.

There were no reports of anti-royalty protests; Sweden's royalty long has kept a low profile and stirs little controversy.

Victoria, her long brown hair in a bun and wearing a full-length royal blue dress, appeared with her parents King Carl XVI Gustav and Queen Silvia in a palace ceremony. She then emerged to hear the traditional song, "May You Live 100 Years," with the king joyfully "conducting" the throng.

PASADENA, Calif. — Louie Anderson isn't apologizing for teaming up professionally with famous house guest Kato Kaelin.

Their joint Las Vegas show didn't come off, but the comedian said he considers Kaelin a friend. And an asset.

"I was completely up front with it (the idea of pairing up)," Anderson told a gathering of the Television Critics Association. "I said this is a draw. This will pack the house."

The pair met when Anderson approached Kaelin at a restaurant and told him he was funny and should consider doing stand-up comedy. They've appeared together several times.

"I was trying to help this guy and fill my showroom," Anderson said.

The moon-faced comic met with TV reporters to promote "Life with Louie," a new Fox animated series based on Anderson's family and childhood.

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — It seems the Beatles don't appreciate a ruff version of their songs.

An attorney for Paul McCartney, George Harrison, Ringo Starr and John Lennon's widow, Yoko Ono, is threatening to sue a publisher over an album featuring dogs barking to the tunes of Fab Four melodies.

"Live from the Pound THE BEATLES" is a satire distributed by Dove Audio Inc., known for its quick-to-the-newsstand books about the O.J. Simpson murder trial.

A lawyer for Dove denied infringing on Beatles' trademarks.

"Everyone at Dove is an enormous fan of the Beatles and represented the 'Barking Beatles' satire with the greatest affection to their legendary status," Steven Salloway said. "Frankly, we're disappointed that they didn't see the satire but we continue to plan to release the tape."

Rutgers hires Stringer as cage coach

NEW BRUNSWICK, N.J. (AP) — Vivian Stringer has been hired as women's basketball coach at Rutgers University, the university announced today.

Stringer, who coached the University of Iowa for the past 12 seasons, will reportedly be the highest paid women's basketball coach ever.

News reports said Rutgers offered Stringer a seven-year contract with a base salary of about $175,000 and benefits that bring the contract's value to about $300,000 per year.

Rutgers officials first met with Stringer in early June, but the coach was reluctant to move her three children from their home in Iowa, said Stringer's brother, Tim Stoner.

"She isn't real thrilled with the idea of having a nanny taking care of her disabled daughter in strange surroundings, and we already know that her sister isn't going to make the move," Stoner said.

Stringer, whose husband died two years ago, lives with her children, mother, sister and brother-in-law.

Stringer's career coaching record is 520-135, a .793 winning percentage over 23 years. She coached for 11 seasons at Cheyney State (Pa.) before taking over the Iowa program.

The Rutgers job has been vacant since Theresa Grentz left May 15 for the the University of Illinois.

Stringer, a 1970 graduate of Slippery Rock University, has a 269-84 record at Iowa.

Eastern falls in tourney

Midland Eastern fell out of the 9-10 year-old District III Little League Tournament Thursday with a 5-4 loss to Odessa North Ector.

The loss ended a comeback run for Eastern, who lost on opening night and then won four in a row before losing to Ector.

North Ector scored four runs in the first inning and the winning run in the fifth while Eastern scored two in the third and two in the sixth.

North Ector played Midland Mid City in the loser's bracket survival game Friday night. Results of that game was not known at press time. The Ector-Mid City winner advances to the championship round against Midland Northern at 6 p.m. today at Windlands Park. Midland Northern is unbeaten in the tournament.

Angels raise charity funds

The Midland Angels' July Celebration raised $8,400 for Casa de Amigos. The Angels donated 100 percent of the sponsorship money from the event and 100 percent of the parking revenue from the two fireworks nights on July 1-2.

Over $17,000 has now been raised for charity over the past three years from the event.

"Our July Fireworks nights are always a big hit. Sponsors have always participated in the weekend and the Angels have made a point to donate that money to Casa," said Monty Hoppel, Angels' general manager. "We also appreciate our fans for paying a $1 parking fee just for the two big nights of the year. All the parking money went directly to Casa."

Jalabert gives French 12th stage win

MENDE, France (AP) — Laurent Jalabert supplied his own fireworks on Bastille Day with a French victory in the 12th stage of the Tour de France, while Miguel Indurain remained the overall leader.

Friday marked the anniversary of the storming of the Bastille prison in Paris on July 14, 1789, setting off the French Revolution that toppled King Louis XVI. The event is celebrated throughout the country.

Jalabert took off with almost 125 miles left in the 138-mile leg from St. Etienne to Mende, a relatively flat stage.

He was part of a group that gradually built up an advantage of more than 10 minutes on the field, including Indurain, who appears to be on his way to a fifth consecutive Tour title.

Jalabert broke away from the remnants of the original group with 2.5 miles to go.

"It was perhaps suicidal but we succeeded," Jalabert said. "We made some good fireworks today."

Italians Massimo Podenzana and Dario Bottaro were second and third in the stage.

Elliott's pole breaks 42-race drought

■ NASCAR Miller 500

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — While Bill Elliott led a surprising domination by Fords in Friday's qualifying for the Miller Genuine Draft 500, Rusty Wallace never got a chance to see if he could break his own track qualifying standard.

Elliott turned a lap of 162.496 mph at the 2.5-mile Pocono International Raceway to put his Thunderbird on the pole for the first time in 42 races. Mark Martin was second at 161.993 and Morgan Shepherd third at 161.438.

But the biggest story in time trials for Sunday's $1 million Winston Cup race was that Wallace never left his garage.

"He did not pass technical inspection because of unapproved roof flaps," NASCAR spokesman Kevin Triplett said. "We are examining them, and I don't think anything will be decided before (Saturday)."

Triplett refused to be specific about the infraction other than to say the material used in the flaps — which slow cars in the event they spin — was being studied. Wallace, contacted outside his hauler, said only that he was confused.

He set the track qualifying record last June with a run of 164.558.

Elliott said the 47th pole of his career and the success of the other Fords — pole winners just five tmes in 17 events — should not be misconstrued to mean the Chevrolets are underdogs Sunday.

"That was qualifying," he said. "The race is another deal altogether. We'll just have to see what happens."

Elliott, whose last pole came in March 1992 at Darlington, said he was relieved to have the inside of the front row after a run that extended to 12 years his streak of starting up front at least once.

"I think everybody gets down on themselves a little bit in our situation," he said.

Six cities shoot for Big 12 championship

DALLAS (AP) — Six cities have submitted final bids to host the Big 12's first football championship game in 1996, Commissioner Steve Hatchell announced Friday.

The possible sites are Houston (Astrodome); Dallas (Cotton Bowl); San Antonio (Alamodome); Irving, Texas (Texas Stadium); Kansas City (Arrowhead Stadium) and St. Louis (The Dome at Americas Center).

Each venue submitted one, three and five-year proposals for the contest that pits the league's North and South divisional winners.

The game will be played on the first Saturday of each December.

"We're pleased by the quality and quantity of the bids received," Hatchell said. "Any of the six would be an excellent host for what will truly be a premier event. It will provide an outstanding opportunity to showcase Big 12 Conference football."

Conference officials will evaluate and compare the bids, then secure sponsorship and negotiate television rights, the Big 12 said. The athletic directors at each school will make a recommendation.

Hatchell said he would like to see a decision made by summer's end, but no timetable has been established.

A fun-to-drive hatchback: the Tercel

By Bob Plunkett
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

Inventive Toyota squeezed a squirt-size commuter car out of its price-conscious Corolla series back in 1980 and called this gas-miser the Corolla Tercel. Stripped of fancy performance features and comfort perks, Tercel promised high fuel economy numbers and a low price tag.

It was, simply put, a cheap set of wheels.

Successive models attached more mechanical hardware to improve driving response and occupant safety. With the fourth generational design of 1991, Tercel began to behave in a friendly fashion in terms of its driving attitude and even its stock of standard comfort fittings.

Unveiled at the '94 Miami Auto Show, the re-styled '95 Tercel boasts a blend of performance, chic appearance and affordability.

By 1994, after 1.5 million sales from 15 annual models, Tercel had acquired a reputation not only for low prices but the quality of its components and the way all parts fit together to form a tight little subcompact package. Last year's Tercel, in fact, led its class in the J. D. Power consumer opinion survey of vehicle initial quality.

Then, last fall at the Miami Auto Show, officials of Toyota introduced a fifth generational successor to Tercel styled as either a 2-door hatchback coupe or 4-door sedan.

Tercel for 1995, we who watched its unwrapping were told, would wear smooth new exterior lines, pack a new twin-cam powerplant and carry new systems for safety and comfort.

Yet there was more to Tercel's promise: This would be a set of cheap wheel that's actually fun to drive.

How can one car be both cheap and fun? For that matter, since cheap usually means boring and fun on wheels often costs beaucoup bucks, don't these term virtually contradict each other?

For an answer, I had to wait multiple months until Toyota finally let me drive a Tercel sedan across rolling ranch lands of east Texas. To season the test, my first ten miles in this tiny car with its eensy-weensy engine would traverse Houston's crazy, crowded maze of freeways.

The intended route — over three freeways through various interchanges and multiple lanes filled with hordes of Houston commuters — would require quick accelerations and sure-footed lane change maneuvers, so I was prepared to add power of my own, if only Tercel provided bicycle pedals.

Right out of the parking lot, though, I discovered this new Toyota engine applied feisty torque against Tercel's two front wheels. After flooring the accelerator and rapping through bottom gears, I found it difficult to believe such lively action flowed from a plant which generated only 93 horsepower.

Toyota engineered Tercel's new 1.5-liter 4-in-line engine to produce a kick, particularly at lower speeds for city driving situations, but at the same time achieve superior fuel economy numbers.

It hits the highest ratings when this engine combines with the 4-speed manual transmission that comes as standard equipment on Tercel's price-leading 2-door coupe. The optional 5-speed manual, by the way, hits the same highway fuel economy figure of 39 mpg.

In addition, Toyota offers two automatic shift options — a 3-speed variation for the least costly coupe, or an electronically controlled 4-speed for coupe or sedan with DX trim features.

My little DX sedan rigged with 5-speed box zipped up the Houston on-ramp, easily reached cruise speed, then leaped crisply into and out of various lanes as I wove through all that traffic. To my surprise, I even found myself backing off the pedal at times just to keep it legal.

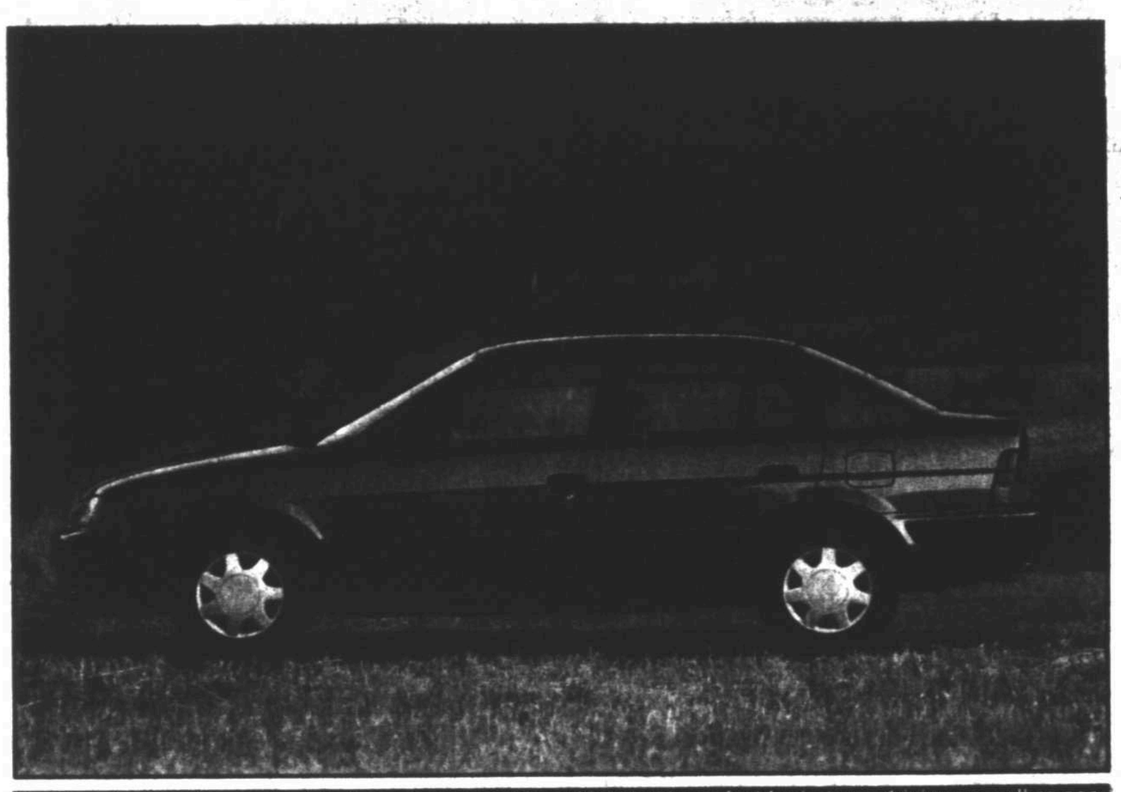

Running up and down the gears, Tercel complied aggressively on demand. Eager is the word I used during that first test to describe the new personality.

Did I have fun driving it?

Yes, I must admit, I did.

Two more months passed before I acquired a production Tercel for a week of driving trials on familiar home routes.

That's when I realized Tercel goes beyond the initial rush for fun driving and becomes a car that's easy to live with — it's easy to enter, ease to load with groceries, easy to operate with automatic shifter, easy to reach the controls and view analog dials, easy to peer out of with the bold display of windows. In short, it's easy to drive.

The Toyota Tercel's new 1.5-L in-line engine provides a kick that is perfect for in-town driving as well as economic on the highway.

Designers for devising an interior environment that's friendly and comfortable, especially when judged against some entries.

Even the price-leader — Toyota's least-expensive model — contains comforts, beginning with two high-back front bucket seats with reclining feature and 2-way adjustments. The rear bench has two sculptured spaces to make rear riders more comfortable, and seats on this base model wear vinyl upholstery while floors merit carpeting.

Above the base Tercel 2-door, the DX coupe and sedan have seats upholstered in cloth fabric, plus adjustable front shoulder belt anchors, assist grip handles, a couple of cup holders and, for sedans, childproof rear door locks. Tercel's Standard Coupe lists for only $9,998. A DX sedan nicely equipped adds up to about $13,000.

An emphasis on economy

By Tom Keene
Special to the Reporter-Telegram

The all-new 1995 Nissan Sentra is ideal for those who are more interested in saving money than speeding down the road. This is definitely an economy car.

In order to put "economy" in its proper perspective, keep in mind that the average price of a new car today is a little over $20,000. The Sentra XE is about two-thirds than amount. It is also economical with gasoline, as the EPA mileage rating is 28 city and 37 highway for a model equipped with a four-speed automatic transmission. For better fuel economy, the five-speed manual transmission gets 30/40 city/highway mileage.

On the down side, the engine produces a modest 115 horsepower. It will require a little more distance to pass a slow-moving vehicle compared to other cars. Those looking for a fast car should look for other cars on the Nissan showroom floor; the Sentra in not in that class.

The Sentra is cornerstone of the Nissan franchise, and their highest volume vehicle. The Nissan people expect this new model to continue to attract buyers and after one ride, it was easy for me to understand why they feel that way.

The new Sentra has a 4-inch longer wheelbase, therefore the ride isn't as bouncy as the previous model. The interior has more room, especially for head and leg, and the additional space makes the ride more comfortable.

The front end is a bit more eloquent with a lower hood line. Adding a touch of eye-appeal is a slight crease in the hood. From the inside, there is improved visibility in the front, side and rear, which helps in backing up.

I like the appearance of the two-tone instrument panel. The dark top helps reduce glare, and the contrast of the light-toned bottom gave me the feeling of more spaciousness. The controls are well laid out and the switches are bigger and have a quality feel to them.

There are more safety features, too. I liked being able to adjust the three-point seat belt so it wouldn't cut into my neck. There are dual air bags, child-proof locks, 5-mph energy-absorbing bumpers, steel side-door guard beams, and an energy-absorbing steering column. The fact is, this car already meets all the safety standards required by 1998, which is something that can't be said of some cars costing twice the price.

The Sentra has a split fold down rear seat for additional storage space, and the trunk is slightly larger than in the previous model. The new design offers easier access to the trunk.

Definitely an economy car, the new Nissan Sentra offers a four-door package with an emphasis that is as much on safety as economy.

Nissan's Sentra lineup has a good range: there's a base model and the XE (which is the car I drove) plus the GXE and GLE models, which are equipped with more luxurious appointments. Those cars are available with four-wheel disc brakes, when equipped with the optional anti-lock braking system.

It's the old story of the more you pay, the more you get, but one thing all the Sentras have in common is the warranty: bumper-to-bumper for 3-years or 36,000 miles and S-year/50,000 on the power train.

My XE tester was equipped with air conditioning, plus a decent four-speaker stereo cassette radio and power steering — at no additional charge. That's another reason I find this car attractive: no additional charges. What you see is what you get, and what you get is this: an economical car that allows you to pass by the speedsters while they are filling up at the gas pump.

1949 Pontiac 8

Though the Pontiac name was used on an early horseless carriage, General Motors revived the name in 1926 on a new lower-priced companion car to the Oakland automobile. Within a short time, Oakland Pontiac dealers were selling more Pontiacs than Oaklands. Oakland's "All American Six" model was fairly popular—especially the 1929 series—but in 1930 and 1931, all Oaklands were powered by an unsuccessful V8 engine. And in 1932, Pontiac replaced Oakland completely (offering a choice of a six or V8). In 1933 and 1934, all Pontiacs were straight-8s, and from 1935 to 1954 Pontiac offered a choice of that or a six.

In 1935, Pontiac drew many new buyers by not only offering the six or eight and all-new "Turret-Top" steel roofed styling, but also by introducing its famous "Silver Streak" might of parallel chrome strips along the top of the hood.

The Indian-head radiator ornament (or hood ornament) that bore the image of the historic Chief Pontiac was another noteworthy characteristic. In the later years of Pontiac's Indian-head figure, it was often of clear amber plastic and illuminated by a small concealed bulb.

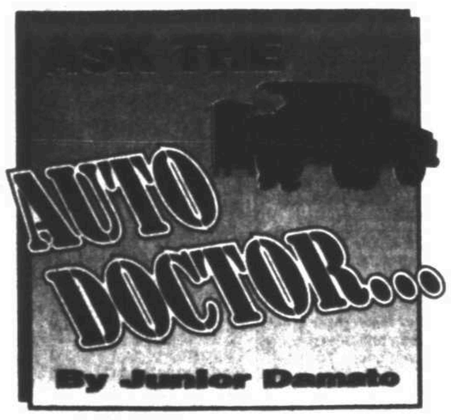

In 1948, Pontiac joined the growing ranks of cars to offer an optional automatic transmission. And in 1949, all Pontiacs were restyled with the attractive new GM-Fisher "pontoon type" body, with graceful curves and fenders blended into the sides. From 1949 through 1952, Pontiac retained this general design. The grille, trim decorations and interiors were altered slightly from year to year.

A July 1949 advertisement for the Pontiac convertible was entitled "When You Make a Sweetheart Your Own." It read, in part: "What happier day is anyone likely to know than a wedding day — always an occasion of complete joy, a time to be long remembered.

"And what finer companion for every happy couple—than a beautiful new 1949 Pontiac? For here, truly, is the perfect car for perfect days. No smarter, more beautiful car will make its appearance before any church or cathedral. And no car will give greater satisfaction and pride to those who own it, than this great new Pontiac."

In 1950 advertising, the Pontiac was hailed as "The Most Beautiful Thing on Wheels."

Dear Doctor: I read your column and find a lot of very good answers. Maybe you can help me with my 1989 BMW 528 E with 148,000 miles. I can detect a gas odor in the car while driving. I have had it to the garage several times without any luck, because there are no signs of leaks. Can you help? Jack W.

Dear Jack: This is one of the more common problems that come into my shop. It does not take magic to find where gas fumes are coming from. I have answered this question over and over again, both here in the column and on radio and TV shows. The easiest way to find the origin of gas fumes is with a gas analyzer. All a technician has to do is use the probe to sniff where the gas vapor in leaking. The most common problem is a worn out gas cap rubber seal. It could also be a vent at the top of the tank, a return line, or the filler neck. Find a shop with a gas analyzer and they should be able to find the leak within an hour.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1991 Buick LeSabre with 45,000 miles on it. Several months ago, a thumping sound developed in the rear when I applied the brakes. A friend with an older Buick said he had the same problem, and it was expensive to repair. I went to the Buick dealer. They cleaned the rear brakes. The noise was gone for a month. Now it is back again. My friend's Buick had rear disc brakes, mine has rear drum brakes. Is this a common problem with Buicks? Herbert R.

Dear Herbert: General Motors has had rear disc brake caliper problems since they started using them on all their cars. The Corvette calipers seem to leak fluid at an early age. The mid and full-size GM cars with rear disc brakes have problems as follows: frozen caliper slides, frozen rear adjusters (in the calipers) that cause a loss of brake effectiveness, low brake pedal, and inoperative parking brake. Rear rotors rust up and can not be resurfaced; they have to be replaced. The rear brake pads are semi-metallic, which aggravates this situation. GM vehicles with rear drum brakes do not seem to have any real problems. On occasion I will see one with a minor amount of rust. This will cause a grinding noise. Sometimes the brake shoes become glazed and need replacement even though they are not worn out. Have the car checked out by a brake shop. This problem seems to be only in the snow belt area.

Dear Doctor: I own a 1993 Mercury Villager with 45,000 miles. Recently the transmission has been making a very soft whining noise in overdrive. When I disengage overdrive, the noise immediately stops. Reengaging the overdrive brings the noise back. Do I have any reason to be concerned? The warranty expired 10,000 miles ago. Tom K.

Dear Tom: I suggest you get two opinions on the transmission whine. I have heard a lot of transmissions whine in overdrive, even some of the new 1995 models. Have you checked the fluid level or changed the fluid lately? Don't become overcritical; there is always some noise connected with moving gears and parts. Even the fuel injectors give off a tapping sound.
