New Year's Celebration Is Cover for Shocking Crime In Salt Lake City; Boys Find Body at Noon

(By Associated Press) SALT LAKE CITY, Utah, Jan. 1.—An all night search for 12-year-old June Nelson was turned today into a hunt for her slayer when her body was found today in a shallow water course in the edge of this city. A physician's examination revealed that she had been brutally attacked and choked.

Tonight all available police, detectives and deputy sheriffs had been called out to search out the man who abducted her from near the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Nelson, about 8 o'clock last night, and then threw her body from a bridge that crosses the canal in a sparsely settled part of the city.

Had Fallen Face Down
The child had fallen face down in the water, and police thought there was a possibility that she had not been dead when she was left by her assailant. No tracks were discernible in a light snow fall that had covered the bank of the stream.

Occupants of the only house near where two boys, passing by, found the body shortly before noon today, told police they had heard nothing unusual last night. No tracks were reported by residents of the neighborhood of the girl's home were not considered as having any bearing on her abduction, since such notices were plentiful during the city's New Year's revels.

The girl was last seen yesterday evening when she left her father's sandwich stand for her home, a quarter of a block distant. When she failed to reach the house, officers

(By Associated Press) LOS ANGELES, Jan. 1.—County officials and defense attorneys assembled hurriedly at the county jail here tonight after Gordon Stewart Northcott, charged with the murder of four boys, told Captain William Bright of the sheriff's homicide squad that he was ready to make a full confession.

Northcott was to go to trial at Riverside tomorrow on the alleged slaying of three of the boys. He said tonight, according to Captain Bright that he will plead guilty in court there tomorrow. Bright refused to receive a confession without the presence of Northcott's attorneys and they, headed by Northcott Savoy were immediately summoned.

The alleged "murder farm" owner told reporters this afternoon that he expected to hang and that he would take several others to death with him. Mrs. Sarah Northcott, mother of Gordon, yesterday confessed in court to the murder of one of the four boys. She was sentenced to life imprisonment and today entered San Quentin prison.

Bilbo Declares He Can't Investigate Mob of 2,000

(By Associated Press) JACKSON, Miss., Jan. 1.—Unless the courts take a hand, the curtain has been rung down on the crimes of murder, abduction and lynching that have rocked north Mississippi since Thursday. Arriving here tonight, Governor Theodore G. Bilbo announced that no investigation of the burning at the stake of Charles Shephard, convict slayer and abductor, would be made at his instigation.

Telegrams poured into the Governor's office during the day urging him to investigate the lynching. Some of the messages came from members of the recent mass meeting at Hattiesburg, Miss., where they voted to request an inquiry into the lynching of another negro that resulted in the calling of a grand jury for next Monday.

Robison Is Halted In Selling Leases On Lands of State

Judge Calhoun Grants Injunction to University Regents and Pollard On Petition

Sale Is Forbidden

Action Gives Legislature A Chance to Pass Upon Bids On Lands; True Value To Be Realized

(By Associated Press) AUSTIN, Jan. 1.—The state went into district court today and enjoined one of its agents, Land Commissioner J. T. Robison, from selling oil and mineral rights Wednesday to the highest bidder on nearly 50,000 acres of Texas University land in West Texas.

On petition of Attorney General Claude Pollard for the state, joined by the University board of regents, District Judge Calhoun issued a temporary injunction forbidding the sale, advertised for Wednesday by the commissioner.

Keep Lands off Lease
The effect of the order will be to keep the lands off the lease market until the legislature, meeting January 8, can act on a bill proposed by the regents to give them full control of the University lands on the theory that the school thus could realize more nearly the true value of the acreage than under the present lease law.

Another probable result will be suits by bidders for court orders to compel the making of leases to them on allegations that they filed on the land legally and acquired prior rights to it.

Opposing Robison's contention that he was merely abiding by the law in insisting on the January 2 sale, the State's petition alleged that there was no specific demand for the acreage when the advertisements were prepared November 10 and that there was no such demand until November 19. The printed list of the land offered, were distributed December 10.

The commissioner originally advertised 103,000 acres for sale Wednesday, but later postponed until January 22, the sale of all except 49,800 acres after a conference at Dilley, with Governor Moody, who

Four Contacts With Refueling Ship Are Made During Day of Flight; May Continue for Weeks

(By Associated Press) METROPOLITAN AIRPORT, Los Angeles, Jan. 1.—Success attended the first 12 hours today of the refueling endurance test flight of the army tri-motored monoplane Question Mark. After taking the air this morning on a flight which may run into weeks, four contacts were made with refueling planes, each proving successful in the transfer of gasoline and oil. This evening the monoplane circled the airport Pylon here, and headed back on its loop course for San Diego, where at midnight Major Carl Spatz, commanding officer, ordered a night refueling.

Rough Air Hinders
Rough air which jerked the refueling hose from Major Spatz's hands three times, was reported by him following the second contact, which was made over Rockwell Field, San Diego. In spite of this the army monoplane's tanks registered 270 gallons as having been successfully loaded while in flight. At San Diego also two afternoon contacts with a speeding refueling plane were made, once for receiving seven live-gallon cans of oil, and in late afternoon for another supply of gasoline.

How to Achieve Beauty

BY MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

DISCOLORED NECKS
INDICATE NEGLECT
It is not at all unusual to see a pretty, pale face betrayed by the condition and color of the neck below it. I do not know why so many women stop their beauty treatments at the chin line, but that is so is a fact that I can not deny. And neglected necks have a way of taking revenge by simply discrediting all efforts to appear youthful.

Early in youth, your throat begins to lose a little of the softness and fineness which is such an enviable part of the ensemble of loveliness. If you are wise you will not permit this condition to remain and

MME. RUBINSTEIN

Eventually challenge your claim to loveliness. Not when three minutes a day will insure a white, pretty neck for many years to come. Every time when you are cleansing and stimulating your face, take a little bleaching cream and rub it into your neck and throat. And don't forget there's a back as well as a front to the neck!

Rubbing a cut lemon over the throat area is another way to restore whiteness to the skin. The combination of lemon with milk is also good.

Once in a while I have questions regarding a harshness that affects the skin of neck and throat. Using a slightly stimulating washing preparation twice a day will speedily correct this condition.

A light application of cleansing cream quickly removes all danger of a "shadow" on the back of your neck. As a definite corrective measure, skin cleansing cream massaged into the throat with sweeping downward movements will eradicate the "permanent" condition developing through the constant wearing of dyed furs.

YOUR

by Olive Roberts Barton
©1928 by NEA Service, Inc.

You don't want the children to be sick during the holidays. The best way to prevent sickness of an infectious nature such as colds, grip, or influenza, is to keep them away from other children who are infected.

If Johnny Smith comes to your house with a runny nose, watering eyes, and a cough, you'd better send Johnny home "toot sweet."

Or if Johnny is lying around on the floor or chairs, and looks hot and tired, and doesn't take much interest in anything, I'd say "Here's your hat, my dear. I really think you are needed at home."

Guard Against "Flu"
Then there is so much influenza I'd keep the children home from the movies and stores and crowds.

I should see that they had plenty of sleep; get them to bed early these nights and make them settle down. And don't give them warm baths in the morning and send them right out into the air—even if it isn't very cold. Their pores will be open after a hot bath. Bedtime is best.

Morning baths should be tepid and the cooler the rinse water the better. That closes the pores. Don't wash heads before bed and then put up windows. There should be time for the hair to dry thoroughly, and then come.

See that the air in the bedrooms is fresh but not bitter, and protect the children from wind and draughts.

Limit Rich Foods
Don't allow them pastry and candy, rich desserts, and food that you are reasonably sure will upset them.

Give them warm food, well-cooked, plenty of milk—and water in abundance between meals.

Have the teeth scrubbed mornings and after meals. Also a good gargle for the throat (all children should learn to gargle) is about the best sickness preventer there is.

Clean handkerchiefs are important. The children should learn how necessary it is to clean out the nose passage frequently. And teach them to sneeze or cough into the handkerchief.

Tell the children never to put anything in their mouths but food and tooth-brush and gargle. They should never put horns or things handled by other children into their mouths. And they should be taught to clean their hands thoroughly, before meals.

Why Is A Merchant?

Or, A Short Course In

GO-ZIN-TO

(Accent on the Zin)

Start This Year
Right!

Get Down To Facts!

It's Simple as 2 plus 2 equals 4!

Some Lubbock merchants seem to think that farmers will not spend money with them.

Some Lubbock merchants seem to think that the farmers will not feel welcome in their store.

All of which proves that these merchants are, themselves, lacking in a knowledge of GO-ZIN-TO.

(Accent on the Zin.)

For instance, one Lubbock merchant remarked just the other day:

"There hasn't been a farmer in our store for I don't know how long."

Isn't this funny?

Hardly had the merchant spoken until Ye Editor of The South Plains Farmer saw a farmer, whom he knew to be a farmer, come into this store and make a purchase. After the farmer had gone Ye Editor asked the clerk what the purchase was.

"He bought a $14 hat."

As Simple as 2 plus 2 equals 4.

Who made the South Plains?

The farmers.

Who's keeping 'em up? The farmers.

Who made Lubbock?

The farmers of the South Plains.

Why is a merchant positive that farmers do not trade with him? Is there any peculiar mark on them? More than half the automobiles owned on the South Plains are owned by people living on farms or ranches.

Do you, Mr. Lubbock Merchant, realize that THE FARM LANDS AND BUILDINGS ON THE SOUTH PLAINS TODAY ARE VALUED AT MORE THAN $200,000,000? And, that FARM BUILDINGS ALONE ARE VALUED AT AROUND $10,000,000? Do you know that about 40 per cent of Tech Students come from farm and ranch homes of the South Plains?

Farmers of the South Plains do not have hay in their whiskers. They and their families can read and write. They own automobiles—more than half and write. They own automobiles. They buy tractors farm implements, furniture. They eat, wear clothes—

Fact is, some folks just can't forget their picture of some back-woods farmers of 20 or 30 years ago. There are no woods out here for farmers to be backwards in.

The SOUTH PLAINS FARMER is read by several thousand of as progressive a class of farmers as can be found in the United States. If you, Mr. Merchant, in 1929, think you would like to have some of these progressive farmers' dollars, let them know it through the columns of this Farm Paper. If you don't want the farmers' trade — wouldn't have it—regardless—we'll sell you space in The South Plains Farmer, or tell you where you can have a sign painted to hang on your front door.

"No Farmers Wanted In Our Store"

Isn't it as simple as 2 plus 2 equals 4? Go-zin-to, means 2 goes into 4, 2 times.

Love Letters Of Lincoln, Heretofore Not Made Public, Are Uncovered And Published by Big Missouri Newspaper

Three Valued Documents of Civil War President Are Found Accidentally By News Reporter

(By Associated Press)
KANSAS CITY, Jan. 1.—Three love letters written by Abraham Lincoln to Mary S. Owens of Kentucky, who rejected his proposal of marriage because he "was deficient in those little links which make up the chain of a woman's happiness," have been uncovered here and in St. Joseph, Mo., and were published under copyright in the Sunday edition of the Kansas City Star.

The letters are in possession of descendants of Mary S. Owens, who became Mrs. Jesse Vineyard and settled near Weston, Mo. They were brought to light accidentally by A. B. MacDonald of the Star staff after being lost for years to historians, who knew of their existence but not of their whereabouts.

Bound To Keep Promise.
The correspondence, in which Lincoln held himself bound to keep his promises to Mary Owens or to release her if she did not care to share his poverty, followed an effort by Mrs. Bennett Abel, sister of Miss Owens, to bring them together after the death of Ann Rutledge, said to have been Lincoln's first love. The sister took Miss Owens to live with her in New Salem, Ills.

Lincoln at the time was a member of the Illinois legislature and his letters to Miss Owens reveal him as a hesitant lover, rather awed by the brilliant girl from Kentucky.

The first of the letters, written December 13, 1836 from Vandalia, Ill., where the legislature was meeting, is in the possession of Mrs. Jesse J. Vineyard, Kansas City, widow of a grandson of Mary Owens. It told of the fight to remove the state capital to Springfield and Lincoln ended with a plea:

Asks for Answer.
"Write back as soon as you get this, and, if possible, say something that will please me, for really I have not been pleased since I left you."

"When the legislature was adjourned in March, 1837, Lincoln, then 27, moved to Springfield and set up a law office."

The next of the letters, in possession of George H. Vineyard, St. Joseph, Mo., banker, was written May 7, 1837, at Springfield. The historian Herndon in his "Life of Lincoln" quoted this letter, but no photograph was ever made.

"I am quite as lonesome here as ever was anywhere in my life," Lincoln wrote, in part. "I have been spoken to by but one woman since I've been here, and should not have been by her, if she could have avoided it."

"I may have misunderstood about what we said of your coming to live at Springfield. I am afraid you would not be satisfied. There is a great deal of flourishing about in carriages here, which it would be your doom to see without sharing in it. You would have to be poor without the means of hiding your poverty. Do you believe you could bear that patiently? What ever woman may cast her lot with mine, should any ever do so, it is my intention to do all in my power to make her happy and contented, and there is nothing I can imagine that would make me more unhappy than to fail in the effort. I know I should be much happier with you than the way I am, provided I saw no signs of discontent in you. What you have said to me may have been in jest, or I may have misunderstood it. If so, then let it be forgotten; if either, wise I much wish you would think seriously before you decide. For my part I have already decided. What I have said I will most positively abide by, provided you wish it. My opinion is that you had better not do it. You have not been accustomed to hardship, and it may be more severe than you now imagine. I know you are capable of thinking correctly on any subject, and if you deliberate maturely upon this, before you decide, then I am willing to abide your decision."

Meets Her in New Salem.
August 18 of the same year, 1837, Lincoln had a meeting with Miss Owens in New Salem, Ill., but it apparently resulted in nothing definite, for upon his return to Springfield the same day, he wrote asking for her to make a decision as to their future relations. The letter follows:

"Friend Mary:
"You no doubt will think it rather strange that I should write you a letter on the same day on which we parted; and I can only account for it by supposing that seeing you lately makes me think of you more than usual, while at our late meeting we had but few expressions of thought. You must know that I cannot see you or think of you with entire indifference; and yet it may be that you are mistaken in regard to what I really feel toward you. If I knew you were not, I should not trouble you with this letter. Perhaps any other man would know enough without further information, but I consider it my peculiar right to plead ignorance and your bounden duty to allow the plea."

Ends The Affair.
"I want in all cases to do right, and most particularly so in all cases with women. I want, at this particular time, more than anything else, to do right with you, and if I knew it would be doing right, as I rather suspect it would, to let you alone, I would do it. And for the purpose of making the matter as plain as possible, I now say that you can drop the subject, dismiss your thoughts (if you ever had any) from me forever, and leave this letter unanswered, without calling forth one causing murmur from me. And I will even go farther, and say, that if it will add anything to your comfort or peace of mind to do so, it is my since wish that you should."

"Do not understand by this that I wish to cut your acquaintance. I mean no such thing. What I do wish is that our further acquaintance shall depend upon yourself. If such further acquaintance would contribute nothing to your happiness, I am sure it would not to mine. If you feel yourself in any degree bound to me, I am now willing to release you, provided you wish it; while, on the other hand, I am willing and even anxious to bind you faster if I can be convinced that it will in any considerable degree add to your happiness. This indeed, is the whole question with me. Nothing would make me more miserable, nothing more happy, than to know you were so."

"In what I have now said, I think I cannot be misunderstood; and to make myself understood is the sole object of this letter."

"If it suited you best to not answer this—farewell—a long life and a merry one attend you. But if you conclude to write back, speak as plainly as I do. There can be neither harm nor danger in saying to me anything you think, just in the manner you think it."

"My respects to your sister. Your friend,
"LINCOLN."

Lincoln, in a letter to Mrs. O. H. Browning, wife of his friend, told of the rejection, saying: "I have come to the conclusion never again to think of marrying, and for this reason: I can never be satisfied with anyone who would be blockheaded enough to have me."

Mary S. Owens was married to Jesse Vineyard of Kentucky March 27, 1841, and settled on a farm between Weston and Platte City, Mo. She kept and treasured the letters.

Writing of the courtship to W. H. Herndon, Lincoln's former law partner, who was preparing his biography, Mrs. Vineyard said: "My sister was very anxious for us to marry, but I thought Mr. Lincoln was deficient in those little links which make up the chain of a woman's happiness. Not that I believed it proceeded from a lack of kindness of heart, but his training had been different from mine."

APPROPRIATIONS Must Be Doubled

GALVESTON, Jan. 1. (P)—It is necessary that the Texas legislature double its next appropriation for work carried out in connection with the Sheppard-Towner maternity act, Mrs. D. W. Kemper, president of the Texas League of Women Voters, said today in announcing what activities members of the organization would pursue for women and children of Texas.

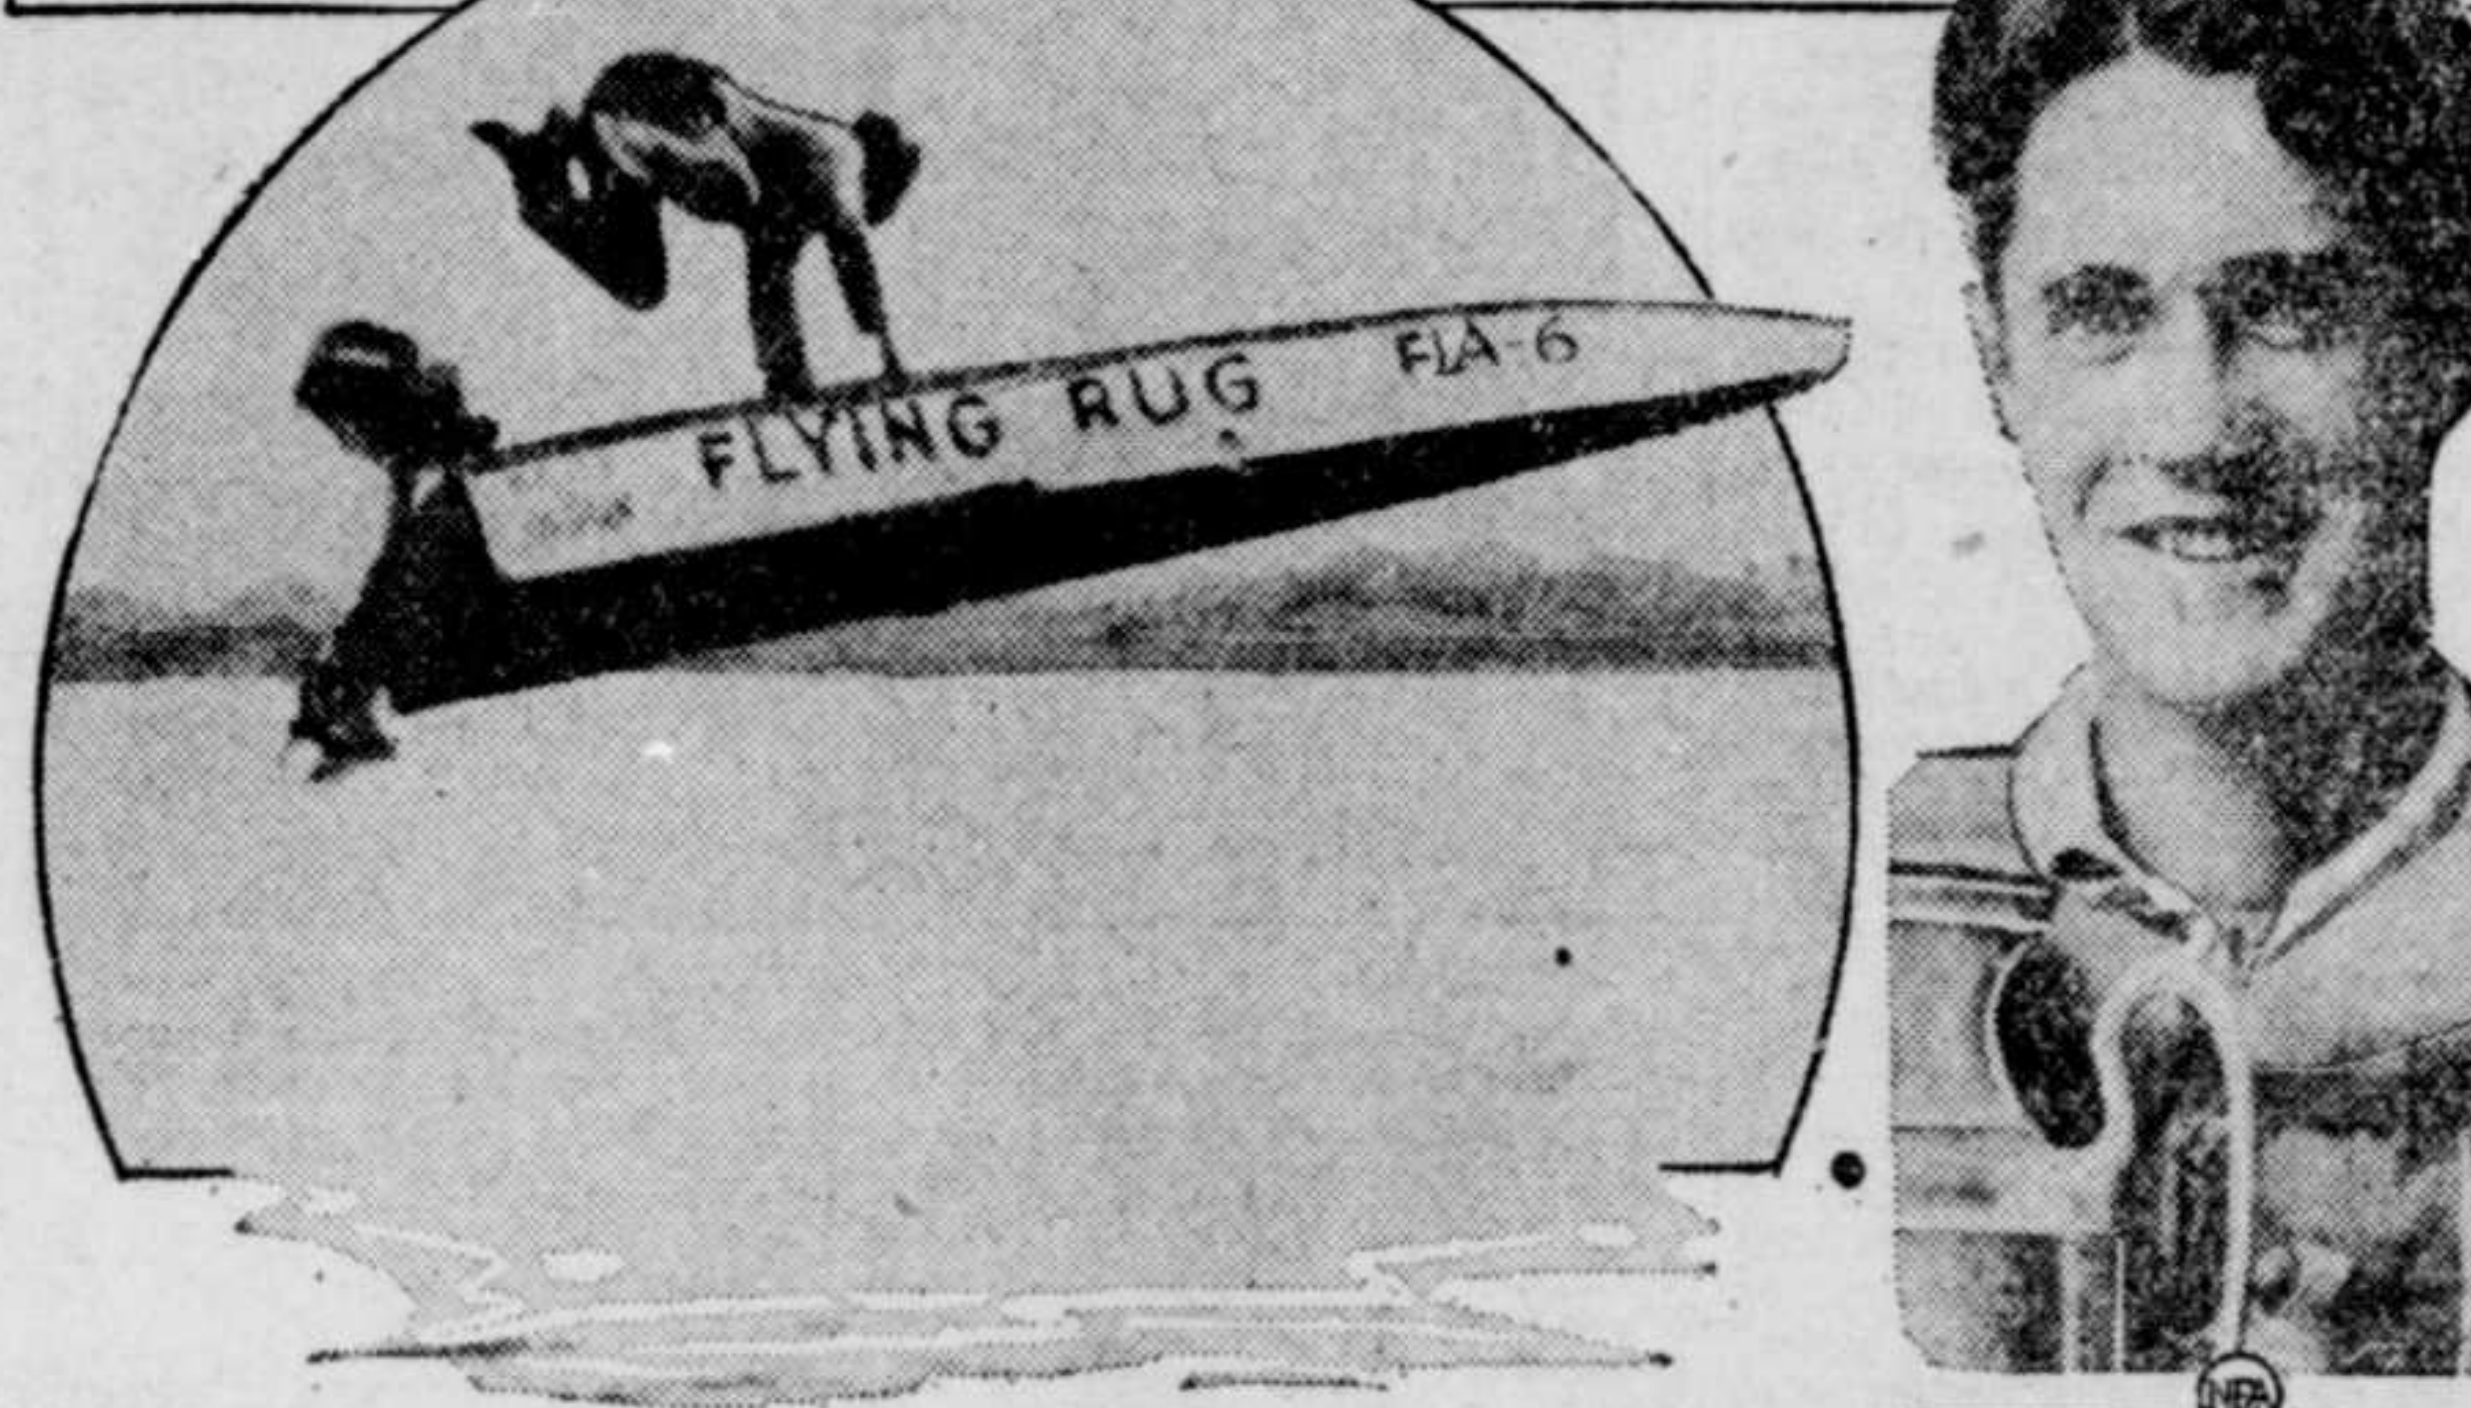

She pointed out that the experimental stage has passed in aiding mothers and their children through funds resulting from the act and declared that great benefits had been accomplished, especially in rural communities.

Closing Rally Team California Triumph

Down and Safety Team in Twelfth Annual Tournament of Roses

BY RUSSELL J. NEWLAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

ROSE BOWL, Pasadena, Calif., Jan. 1.—(AP)—Georgia Tech, Southern Conference champion, snatched a spectacular game from California's Bears, 8 to 7 today in the twelfth annual Tournament of Roses game. Nearly 70,000 persons, massed in this green turf stadium under a brilliant sunshine, saw the Golden Tornado swirl to an undefeated season with a safety and a touchdown. A closing rally by California netted a touchdown in the last quarter, and the closing gun saw the Bears setting started on another offensive in Tech territory.

Tech Scores Safely
Tech's first points, two on a safety, resulted from a freak play in which Roy Rogers, California captain-elect, and center, scooped up a fumble and ran the wrong way. He came to within a foot of his own goal line before Bennie Lom, a team mate, caught him and held him back.

On the next play, Lom's punt from behind his own goal line was blocked and Barr fell on the ball to give the visitors a lead.
With the score 2-0 at half time Tech pushed over a touchdown in the third period. Two long runs, a 30 yard dash by Mizell, halfback, and a 15 yard canter by Thomason, halfback, netted the points. The try for point by place kick failed.

Bears Resort To Air
A sharp aerial attack in the final quarter brought the Bears their touchdown. Lom, punter, kicked to Phillips to put the ball in scoring territory. Two short tosses followed for small gains and Lom again swished one for ten yards to Phillips who caught the leather behind Tech's line. Barr converted the try for point with a place kick.

Tech's Tornado played heads up football throughout, seizing every opportunity to keep the Bears on the defensive. On the offensive the visitors go the hard way but their backfield combination showed up much better than the California ball toters. Mizell, left half for Tech, was outstanding, with gains of from 5 to 25 yards throughout. Lom for the Bears was the punch that kept the Southern players at bay most of the time.

Strolling Down Sports Lane

With Allan Carney
Avalanche Sports Editor

Sport—Strolling down... Facing the new year with the basketball season here upon us with two interesting games scheduled for this week and the regular schedule of T. I. A. A. and Texas Conference games to start next week, we look out upon the months to come with a varied degree of hope and conflicting anticipations. For followers of the indoor game of the winter season, the schedule arranged for the coming season will bring some mighty fine teams to Lubbock.

Of the twenty games on the schedule for the Matador cagers, approximately half will be played at home. Abilene Christian College Wildcats come here for the first stiff games for the locals. Although the Cats are not figured to carry off honors in their conference, Bugs Morris' boys can be depended upon to give the opposition plenty to worry over. Always noted for their fighting qualities, the A. C. C. teams are usually among those present near the top of the ladder when the seasons close.

While Coach Payne is lacking in veteran material around which to build a basketball quintet, he is blessed with a host of sophomores who are showing considerable promise. The Matadors have had a comparatively small amount of practice for this stage of the season, but will probably reach their playing form within the next few weeks.

Basketball at Lubbock high is unusually promising this season. With only three letter men back, Coach Del Morgan has a world of likely looking recruits from which he can draw first string material. Only games with surrounding towns will be played until the district meet is held here. No definite schedule has been arranged for the time intervening, but the high school basketballers are promised plenty of action.

Considerable interest has been manifested over the baseball outlook for the college next spring. Plenty of veteran material and a host of newcomers will give Coach Freedland a world of diamond material. The school's best college teams have held their own with the best college teams in the state since the opening of the school four years ago. Several first class pitchers, a number of veteran infielders and fly chasers will give the baseball coaches a nucleus around which formidable baseball aggregation can be built.

Baseball as a college sport has been on the down grade for the past several years. The rise of football as a collegiate pastime has had a decided tendency to push the older sport into the background. This decline in the popularity of America's national pastime has been partly attributed to the growing demand for more action in the part of the fans. Football furnishes a different sort of thrill for the spectator and has gradually become a game requiring brains as well as brawn.

Professional baseball moguls deplore this situation which undoubtedly is keeping a number of talented diamond stars from being developed. Those who are interested in the future of the game point out that a large number of the major league baseball players are found on the college diamond. In the last few years a number of large universities have abandoned baseball as an intercollegiate sport. Fans have turned out in surprisingly small numbers and from a financial standpoint, the game has been a failure. Some attribute this lack of interest to the fact that baseball comes at the close of the school year when the school spirit is at a low ebb, examinations are coming on and the students in general are beginning to tire of the hallaballoo of competition.

Actions of Jack Dempsey To Hold Interest In 1929

Showdown On Return Of Manassa Mauler Is Due; Position of New York Yanks Also Prominent

BY NORMAN E. BROWN
Sports Writer For Central Press and the Morning Avalanche
The sport year of 1929 is past and accepted for what it was worth. What does 1929 hold for the fans in general.

Off-hand, these matters present themselves for discussion.
A showdown on the return or retirement of Jack Dempsey. In view of Tex Rickard's recent efforts to bring Young Stribling and Jack Sharkey together in a spring battle in Miami, Dempsey's reported partnership with Rickard and others in sporting activities there and the general dearth of "big time" boys in the heavyweight ranks, Dempsey's possible actions still form the leading topics of conversation in winter fanning beds.

The possible chance of the New York Yankees holding the American league pennant another year. The uncertain pitching staff, the need of a catcher and Huggins' willingness to affect several trades for material desired would indicate that he is not satisfied with his present lineup.

The probable realignment of the American Davis Cup team in what now would appear to be a vain effort to regain the cup, taken in handy fashion by the French last year.

The usual lapse in interest in track athletics—it being the first off-year after the Olympic. This interest may be stimulated a bit, however, by the appearance of Pavo Nurmi, Edwin Wide and other foreign stars who have already reached the U. S. shores or plan to within the next few weeks.

Stiffer competition than ever before in the major golf events—Johnny Farrell in the open tournament by the success of the youthful new last season and the general play of the other young stars.
Diligent effort on the part of the British polo enthusiasts to build a team which can furnish real opposition in the new international matches with America's four. The British army in India's team work last year was brilliant, but the service men were no match for the Meadowbrook squad.

As for football. The ever growing interest in intercollegiate games, the rise of new teams to the forefront through the medium of such battles, and the reverses suffered by many of the "old guard" in the 1928 season ought to make the 1929 campaign a more interesting if not more hectic one than last passed.
There is just one sure bet, however. That is that the old game of chasing the jolly nicker and keeping one step ahead of the sheriff at the same time will furnish the real thrills of the year.

Starts Out Right Dallas Golfer Makes Hole In One

DALLAS, Jan. 1.—(AP)—It was his first stroke on the first hole of his first round of the first day of the new year. The result was a hole-in-one.

They Keep Money In Family

Earnings of most fighters are diminished by a cut for the manager or managers, but that is not the case with what Ace Hudkins earns in the fight racket. This young man, who is trying so hard to get Mickey Walker's title, believes in keeping all the money in the family. His uncertain pitching staff, the need of a catcher and Huggins' willingness to affect several trades for material desired would indicate that he is not satisfied with his present lineup.

Billiard Tourney Set For February

(By Associated Press)
CHICAGO, Jan. 1.—Carrying the largest cash prizes ever offered, the next international championship billiard tourney will be played at the New Level Club, New York, starting Feb. 4, the National Billiard Association announced today.

To the champion will go an annual salary of $5,000 for one year not subject to challenge, a diamond medal emblematic of the championship, a cash prize of $2,500 and 33 per cent of the net gate receipts.

The tournament, conducted under the auspices of the N. B. A., will be a round robin affair, lasting 11 days and bringing into competition seven of the outstanding billiard shot makers of the world, including Edouard Foremans of Belgium, the present title holder. Willie Hoppe will not compete, being ineligible as the result of his participation in the recent three cushion tourney.

Dal Paso Highway Ready For Traffic

(Special To The Avalanche)
SNYDER, Jan. 1.—Announcement has been made by Gaines county that the final strip of road on the Dal Paso Cavern highway has opened directly west from Seminole to the state line, completely graded and ready for traffic by the Commissioners Court of that county.
The new Mexico State Highway has also authorized the grading and completion of 26 miles from their state line which will carry the traffic through Hobbs, New Mexico, and on to the Caverns and the western coast. The new route will eliminate further distances that have heretofore been caused owing to traveling many miles off the route by way of Lovington and will greatly lessen the present saving in distance over this route. As the old route stood from Dallas to the coast, the Dal Paso Highway saved 103 miles but with the new improvement that amount will be greatly increased.

Hard Road Ahead Of Golf Champs During This Year

Titles Have Habit Of Slipping Away, Says Expert; Bobby Jones Has Best Chance To Retain Crown

BY BRIAN BELL
Associated Press Sports Writer

NEW YORK, Jan. 1.—The long straight fairway of 1929 probably will prove a trail beset with trouble for golf champions. Many a great golfer goes through his competitive life without winning a title and once won the championships have a habit of slipping away. Three of the major champions go into the campaign of the new year with chances to make new golf records by winning again and this added responsibility may prove too great a burden.

If Bobby Jones is again crowned amateur king he will annex the title for the fifth time—something that has not been done before. Walter Hagen can give future generations of golfers something at which to shoot by successfully defending the British open for he had his name on the cup three times, more than any other player from the United States.

Glenna Collett may be the first woman to win the championship of her class four times. Bobby Jones, perhaps has the best chance if for no other reason because winning has become a fixed habit with him. The Atlanta lawyer has not been without a major title since 1923 and for six years has had at least one and sometimes two. His record of eight world series golf victories in six years seems safe from immediate attack.

The Atlanta has never played golf in California where he will be called on to defend his amateur championship but there is a considerable part of his golf reputation in California and certainly will know his way about. Phillips Finlay, the long hitting collegian, reversed the process employed by Von Elm. When George moved east Phil went west and he will play at Del Monte for the glory of his adopted state.

The coaches will be meeting in New Orleans soon. Every thing of general interest concerning football will be discussed, except players' salaries.

Several all-America selections are said to be clamoring for more pay. The subject will be avoided.

Nobody will talk on the subject, "Football as a Training School for Life for Blacksmiths, Freight Handlers, Piano Movers and Floorwalkers."

There are two kinds of coaches, of course—those who produce winning teams and those who "develop" the young men under their charge into educated gentlemen.

Campaigns Waged For House Speaker

Grady Woodruff, W. S. Barron, and W. R. Montgomery Seek Position For Forty-First State Legislature

(By Associated Press)
AUSTIN, Jan. 1.—Representative Grady Woodruff of Paradise, Wise county, has announced himself a candidate for speaker of the House of Representatives of the 41st Legislature.

W. S. Barron, of Bryan and W. R. Montgomery of Edinburg were the only candidates prior to Woodruff's entry. They have been conducting an intensive campaign for several months an according to claims made by their friends the membership of the House is fairly evenly divided in its sympathies.

It has been reported that Montgomery's seat will be contested when the legislature convenes by his opponent in the bitter campaign between the democratic nominees and a ticket of republicans and independents in Hidalgo county.

Montgomery claims that the proposed contest is aimed at his race for the speakership, and that he will be able to prove his right to his seat beyond question.

Southwest Eleven Goes Down Before Versatile Attack

Howell and Mehrle Lead A Dazzling Running Attack To Score Impressive Win Over Littlefield-Bell

BY HAROLD BANKS
Associated Press Sports Writer

DALLAS, Jan. 1.—Two whirling dervishes answering to the names of "Battering Blue" Howell of Nebraska and Bob Mehrle of Missouri plunged and side-stepped in phantom fashion today to give a team of Big Six gridiron stars 14 to 6 victory over a Southwest conference handpicked eleven while 10,000 spectators sat enthralled at this greatest exhibition of ball carrying seen on a Texas football field this year. The game was staged for benefit of a children's hospital.

Darting through holes opened by a stalwart line, the Cornhusker and his aide wasted no time in smashing through a forward wall that the Southwest thought impregnable. In less than four minutes after the kick-off Howell and Mehrle alternated at their relentless driving for the former to score a touchdown, Mehrle to kick the extra point.

The Southwest squad braced momentarily but early in the second quarter Mehrle knifed through the line, eluded the secondary interference and scored. Before he was brought down on the Southwest's 28-yard stripe, Behind perfect interference Howell plunged for a first down, then cracked the line for his second touchdown. Again Mehrle accounted for the extra point.

With these two backs on the sidelines, the Southwesters resisted further forays into their territory, and according to their lone touchdown shortly after the half. King's punt rolled out of bounds on the Big Six team's eight-yard line and when Haskins attempted to kick, Bartlett, Texas Aggie captain, hurried and carried the ball to within eight yards of the goal line as the final gun sounded, several thousand persons again surged across the gridiron, believing a scramble for the ball as a souvenir, was a fight.

Coach Clyde Littlefield of this Southwest team denied this, however.
King Is Star
"Rammin' Rufus" King, captain of the Texas University Southwest conference championship team, bore the brunt of the losing team's attack in convincing manner. It was King's passing in the late stages of the game that saved the Texans from a worse defeat and when he failed at times to locate a receiver.

Had Good Scents Coppers Arrest Perfume Burglar

CHICAGO, Jan. 1. (AP)—Patrolman Weimer and Kescog, to employ a pun, showed extraordinary good scents last night. They were looking for a man who had burglarized several homes in the Wilson avenue section during the past few weeks. The "perfume burglar", he was called, because all his victims said he was heavily perfumed.

The officers were passing a street corner when to their noses turned to coal smoke and gas fumes, there was wafted an alien fragrance. There on the corner, perfumed to the saturation point, stood Jason Fuller, 29.

Local Drug Firm Awarded Valuable Agency For Sargon

City Drug Stores Get 5 Year Franchise For Scientific New Formula
Never before in the history of the world has the progress of Medical Science been so rapid. One important discovery after another has been made which will have a far-reaching effect upon the health and well-being of mankind. Some of these "discoveries" are startling in the extreme and absolutely disprove many of the beliefs, practices and theories we have known for a lifetime.

As scientific investigators learn more and more about the human anatomy, the practice of medicine changes—the old is discarded for the new.

As a result of this world-wide medical research, Science has discovered that good health is largely governed and maintained by three vital organs and fluids of the body. These are the liver, the blood and the endocrine glands.

What is more important, we have learned that these organs and fluids can be stimulated and invigorated by certain basic elements. Having knowledge of these important discoveries, one of America's leading bio-chemists, succeeded, after two and one-half years of laboratory research, in combining these basic elements in one formula—which may well be considered one of the greatest health-giving remedies of the age.

It is called Sargon. This formula and the formula for Sargon Soft Mass Pills, which are an essential and integral part of the treatment, are the property of the Sargon Laboratories and can be obtained by no other firm or individual in the world.

This new scientific treatment, which represents much of our latest knowledge on modern therapy, has been acclaimed by druggists throughout America as a triumph in the field of medicine. With the needs of their customers uppermost in their minds, leading druggists everywhere have been eager to be among the first to supply it to their trade.

Although introduced in the Southwest only a few weeks ago, Sargon has already become a household word. In Dallas and Ft. Worth alone, over 49,000 bottles of Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills have been sold and distributed by local firms. Nothing like it has ever been seen before.

The agency for Sargon and Sargon Soft Mass Pills for this city and section has been awarded to the City Drug Stores. In anticipation of the enormous demand, this well-known firm has just received a large shipment of these celebrated medicines.

SCRIPTURE: Woe unto them that decree unrighteous decrees, and that write grievousness which they have prescribed.

To turn aside the needy from judgment, and to take away the right from the poor of my people, that widows may be their prey, and that they may rob the fatherless!—Isaiah, X, 1, 2.

GOING AFTER 'EM

Sheriff Wade Hardy, who has just taken oath of office, is credited with a statement, in the newspapers, that he is going to wage a war on the bootleggers of this community, and with this statement fresh on his lips, we believe that he will make it a rough life for that element of men who insist on peddling this fire-water to the people of this community. We do not for a moment believe that the retiring sheriff and his force have been unmindful of the traffic of bootleg whiskey in Lubbock, and many arrests have been made. Many raids have been successfully carried out, but it is our honest opinion that the people failed to back up the efforts of the sheriff's department along this line. It is common talk among people here that there is a certain place where whiskey can be bought, and they can get all they want within a certain distance, but when these people are pinned down to the actual state before a jury they will not make the statements, and hence the officers are disappointed and we might say disgusted. If it has been your custom in the past to not cooperate with the sheriff's department in driving the bootlegger from the town, fall in line with Sheriff Hardy, and help him and his office force to clean up the community, and make it a better and safer place to live.

All the law abiding people of Lubbock county should be glad to hear Mr. Hardy make the statement that he is going after 'em, and we should give him our hearty cooperation.

OPTIMISM IN LUBBOCK

Short interviews with prominent men who are connected with business enterprises that should be well informed along the line of progress and the conditions of the country show a very optimistic spirit, and there seems to be no one that has a pessimistic utterance for this splendid country. Everyone who has taken any interest in the community at all should know that this section of Texas is in excellent condition, and is in shape at this time to go forward with greater confidence and assurance and that there is going to be a great program under way this year than has ever been seen on the South Plains. More big enterprises are in sight now than the first of the year has ever known in Lubbock. The country is better established, the people are more settled in their plans for the future than ever before. Business concerns have a better idea of what they can do and what they may expect than ever before, and for that reason it is not wonder that all of the men interviewed by the newspapers have the same optimistic statement to make. Lubbock is off with a bang on the first of January, 1929, and we are of the opinion that she will keep a strong head of steam throughout the year.

NO SATURATION POINT

The increase in enrollment in universities and colleges this fall was less than any year since the World War, the gain over last year being only 2 per cent. Already some critics of education who before have professed alarm at the increase in enrollment, and who have forecast the saturation point and lamented the system as productive of too many applicants for "white collar" jobs are attributing the reduction in the increase to these causes.

While it would be difficult to definitely place the cause for the reduced increase, especially since regional variations are noticeable, and the justification for the argument that the saturation point has been reached. Taking into consideration the steady increasing complexities on modern civilization, it is difficult to conceive of a saturation point in education. The field for the college-trained man and woman is being steadily widened. On the other hand the vocations left open to the untrained are constantly being reduced in number as mechanical operations replace man power.

Business is not suffering from any cause attributable to too many college-trained workers, or too many seekers of "white collar" jobs. The employment problem that is a real enigma for the National Government today does not embody the university graduate's situation. Business experts tell us that there is still a demand for men capable of filling executive positions.

Competition is keen on the commercial levels most influenced by the newly graduated college product but rivalry is even more pronounced in channels open to the untrained worker. If the saturation point has been reached in education, restriction can be hardly expected to solve the problem, since it is more acute in activities of the untrained.

Education as notified by the courses offered in the colleges and universities of today is not necessarily conducive to an increase in applicants for "white collar" jobs. Colleges today do not restrict their activities to literary courses.

There may be need for revision of curricula from time to time to meet the needs of the changing complexities of modern business, but there is no grounds for restriction. There is an ever increasing demand for education.

Don't Let's Import This Idea.
"Applauding a movie actor is the act," says a paragrapher, "because he can't come back and give an encore."

Looks Like It.
"Jones has 11 children."
"Good heavens! Has he gone stark mad?"
"No, he's just a father."

A Washington Bystander

BY KIRKE L. SIMPSON

WASHINGTON, Jan. 1.—Paradoxical as it seems, there is something about the life of a soldier that promotes longevity. The retired list of the army shows no less than five survivors in their nineties.

Perhaps it's just accident; perhaps the years of active warfare these elder statesmen of Uncle Sam's military family put in during youth and middle age only widened their span of life. But for whatever reason, there they are, a quiet of devotees to the calling of glory who are looking back over the top of almost a century of life.

Regulars' Dean Is 96.
First among them, dean of the whole tribe of army "regulars," stands Brigadier General David Stewart Gordon, born in Franklin county, Pennsylvania, in 1832.

Two wars have been fought by him, and he has been a devotee to the calling of glory who are looking back over the top of almost a century of life.

General Gordon's military record reads like a soldier's romance. As a dragon lieutenant and aide to General Keyes he was captured at Bull Run and languished a year in military prison before his exchange.

Then he fought at Fredericksburg, Brandy Station, Culpeper, Wilderness, Todd's Tavern, Old Church, Cold Harbor and Gettysburg. Immediately followed frontier service against the Indians in the Dakotas up to '79, then garrison duty until '94, when he commanded the federal cavalry during the Chicago railway strike troubles. He retired as a cavalry colonel.

Four Other Nonagenarians.
Only six months junior to General Gordon is Major John V. Lauderdale, living at Brooklyn in his native state of New York. He was born in 1832, became an army surgeon in '67 and retired in November, 1896, with the rank of major doctor.

Only two months his junior is Major John Wesley Bean of Attleboro, Mass., born in 1833, a lieutenant of foot in '62, twice brevetted for valor at Fredericksburg and Cold Harbor, severely wounded at Chancellorsville, and with battles like Antietam, Second Bull Run, South Mountain, Yorktown and many others on his list. Later he served at nearly every post of the old frontier in the west.

To this trio of ancient, valorous men, fellow retired officers like Capt. William H. Nelson of Roan Mountain, Tenn., "Civil War" volunteer and later regular, who retired in 1888 due to injuries in a fall from his horse, and Brigadier General Aaron Simon Daggett of Washington, a Maine volunteer in the '60's, must seem mere boys. Both were born in 1837 and what is a mere 91 years to a man of 95 and up?

Yet Daggett added two more campaigns to his list. He was three times cited for gallantry in the Civil war and three times cited for gallantry in China, where he supervised the advance of American troops against the imperial forces of Peking.

Daggett's record shows he fought all the way from Gaines Mill in '61 to San Juan, Cuba, in '98 and Peking in 1900. He was twice wounded, at "bloody angle," Spotsylvania, and at Cold Harbor.

CLIMATE DOES PLAY PART IN DEFEAT OF TUBERCULOSIS

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first of an important series of three articles on tuberculosis, its relation to climate and the treatment of the disease.

BY DR. MORRIS FISHER
Editor of the American Medical Association and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

It is generally recognized that what it is possible for a person to recover from tuberculosis in almost any climate, climatic factors nevertheless play a considerable part in the speed of the recovery.

In considering climate one is concerned not only with temperature and humidity, but also with wind, dust and storms, with rain, the character of the soil, the sunshine and many other factors.

Heat or cold in great excess are dangerous to health and may be fatal to life. The effects of temperature on the body are dependent to a great degree on humidity.

Warm, moist climates are generally believed to have a depressing effect. Cold, dry air is stimulating, but as pointed out by Dr. James A. Miller, demands a capacity for response from the individual.

If the body is not able to respond properly to cold, dry air, as is the case with persons who have been greatly weakened by long continued illness or by old age, the effects of cold dry air may be harmful.

Excessive moisture has a relaxing effect which may predispose to infection. The movement of the air materially influences the temperature and the humidity.

If the air is hot and moist, movement of the air will aid in elimination of heat. If the air is very cold, there will be an increased demand for heat produced from the body. If the air is both moist and cold, conditions are extremely uncomfortable, and may be harmful.

In selecting a climate for the invalid, Doctor Miller suggests that there is no one best climate for tuberculosis. In other words, proper treatment under scientific conditions is more important than climate alone.

Some types of patients never should be moved in search of climate. This includes patients who are severely ill in the early stage of the disease. In such cases, complete rest in bed either at home or in an institution in the home city is the first step in treatment, and should be continued until the patient is able to travel without risk.

Not long ago the United States government through the Public Health Service protested against the shipping of patients to certain states when such patients did not have the means to provide for the necessities of life after their travel.

The cost of invalid care almost anywhere is from $25 to $50 per week. Therefore, at least $1,200 to $1,800 per year must be available for the care of the invalid if he is to go to any health resort.

When the burden of providing for one's self in a strange land is added to the burden of the disease itself, the invalid has a handicap to overcome which may result in the difference between life and death. Good food and lodging are just as necessary as plenty of sunlight and fresh air.

Resolutions That Will Be Kept

SO THINK WE

We think it will probably be more difficult than ever to see juries, if this new law that is being recommended should go into effect. It is hinted around that all jurors will have to go under an intelligence test. Well, what next. Is it going to get to where we cannot have real honest to goodness juries? Is it going to come to the point where jurors are to be educated specially for that purpose. We hope not.

We think the next big thing that Lubbock people are to lay their shoulders to is to vote the paved roads bonds. It will be the big opportunity of the 1929.

Of course you may have dated all of your letters January 1st, 1928, yesterday, but that will not be noticed by many, and you will have become accustomed to the nine by this time, and we will be settled down to business by this morning.

We think if one percent of the population has flu in the United States it certainly must be mighty curious, its relation to climate and the treatment of the disease.

The Way Of The World

BY GROVE PATTERSON

SUCCESS

Apparently there are some great spirits who make themselves and others happy and their lives useful by creative work without much interest in personal reward. Perhaps they would do just as much good and make themselves and others even more happy if they gave more attention to personal fortune. After all, intelligent self-interest is a great spur along the road to all around success.

A few weeks ago John B. Johnston, inventor, died in a Wisconsin town. He was 87 years old. He was the inventor of machinery and processes which revolutionized the flour making business. Others are said to have amassed great fortunes out of his devices. Johnston invented a machine which in some cases he did not even take the trouble to patent. He died in moderate circumstances. This is not altogether surprising. Had he made himself rich and spent his money wisely he might have been a more useful and a greater man.

USING A FORTUNE.
Speaking of the accumulation of money and its use, how fortunate for the human race that John D. Rockefeller chose to be rich, that he went after huge profits, that he was moved by a desire to accumulate a fortune. Having acquired it he proved to be a man who knew what to do with it. We do well to be glad to see some fellow citizen become immensely rich if he is the kind of man who has a great spirit within him.

FOOLED BY BIGNESS.
Strangely many so-called business men are fooled by bigness. A survey by experts from the agricultural college of the University of Illinois shows dairymen of that state are selling milk for less than it costs to produce it. They carry on a widespread business at a loss.

Men have gone to the wall in many lines because they were excited and led astray by the sound and fury of business, by the sight of goods coming in and going out. Either they lacked the ability to get at the real costs or they sought to avoid bad news by ignoring costs. It seems hard for some supposedly intelligent business men to believe they are making money when the shop is going full tilt.

NOBLEST
"The noblest mind the best contentment has," said the poet Spenser. But the getting of a noble mind—that's not easy.

and are losing sight of the importance of the Golden Rule. The first of the year is a good time to be taking inventory, not only of the merchandise in stock, but of the friendship and good will toward men. After all the dollars will vanish, while friendship might be made to live on and on and would bring the greatest dividends that any thing could possibly bring.

We think a great many people have a peculiar idea about a newspaper. They think that it is the duty of the newspaper to do the scrapping for the whole town. If there is something to be said or done that is not exactly popular, many people seem to think that it is the duty of the newspaper to jump in and do the work regardless of the financial loss that it might entail to the newspaper.

We think that now is a good time for every fellow to fall in line and help in all of the public enterprises of the community. Don't be that selfish one who is satisfied to make money at the expense of the other

PRESS COMMENT

INVESTING IN HUMANITY

Corpus Christi Caller: Five million dollars is a lot to pay for an experiment. A five-million-dollar campaign, though, has been launched in Chicago, with the object of reducing the growing amount of juvenile delinquency. Twenty-five boys' club buildings are to be erected, if the project is carried out; the buildings will be equipped with gymnasium, swimming pools, libraries, and playgrounds.

The campaign is based upon the theory that juvenile delinquency is the result of environment, to a large extent; that the boy in the congested districts of our large cities where juvenile crime is most prevalent, hasn't much chance to go straight; that his surroundings, his associations, all tend to make him an enemy of society.

The solution, then, logically, would be to provide the boys with the right sort of surroundings, to bring him into contact with groups which are not essentially anti-social, to give him, in short, the opportunities to which every boy is entitled.

Here is a project in which every patriotic organization in the country may well interest itself. The city-dweller does not alone suffer the penalties of juvenile delinquency. Its evil effects are spread all over the land in the form of growing disregard for law and order. It is an unusual youth, indeed, who can become a decent, respectable, law-abiding citizen after he has spent his most impressionable years in an atmosphere of criminality; it is an unusual youth who can fight off the effects of early environment. As young criminals grow up, their influence will tend to corrupt boys of the next generation, and the evil of juvenile delinquency will spread everywhere.

There are many explanations for the astounding and startling increase in the percentage of crimes committed by youthful offenders. The fact that the percentage has grown in much the same proportion that the shift in favor of urban population has grown may not be without its significance. Every child is entitled to a chance; the child of the city slums is deprived of it.

This is the situation which the five-million-dollar Chicago campaign is designed to remedy, insofar as Chicago is concerned. It is a situation which persists in only proportionately lesser degree in every city in the land. The results of the Chicago experiment should be followed with the closest attention wherever cities face a juvenile crime problem.

WIDE PLANNING FOR CITIES
Kansas City Star: There is a warning to big cities generally in a study made by the regional planning body of New York. It is that urban planning, to serve its purposes, must go beyond city limits. If this planning body brings out, the present trend of development into suburban areas is not accompanied by well considered provision for order, convenience and attractiveness, then the movement "may in time mean nothing more than the transfer of population from already deteriorated areas to new areas where the same defective conditions will be repeated."

The condition is illustrated by an old saying about a jump from the frying pan into the fire. The principle relates to planning within as well as about a city. If there isn't comprehensive, far-seeing action to protect property values and promote good order, then no area, in the end, will be secure.

No considerable part of a metropolitan district finally can be advanced at the expense of some other considerable part. The community must be carried forward as a unit with due attention to the welfare of each group and interests if its progress is not to be a questionable kind. City planning has been

THIS HAS HAPPENED

ASHTORETH ASHE, beautiful stenographer, appears to have made a decided impression upon HOLLIS HART, her wealthy employer, when in breezes little SADDIE MORTON, known to Mr. Hart as MAE DE MARR.

Sadie, frivolous and tawdry, has accepted an extraordinary gift of $10,000 from the rather quixotic millionaire. He is astonished when he discovers that she and Ashoreth are old friends. And Ashoreth is afraid that he will be no longer interested in her.

She goes with Sadie to the grand apartment rented and furnished through the benevolence of Mr. Hart. And there Sadie airs a gold-digger's view on men and morals. Ashoreth secures from her a partial promise that she will not attempt to blackmail her benefactor and return to the office, greatly relieved. Perhaps, after all, she will remain in the good graces of the famous Mr. Hart.

There is another man in Ashoreth's life—MONTY ENGLISH, who sells radios. Ashoreth's mother, Maizie, approves of Monty. But Ashoreth, when she learns that he has asked for a transfer to New York, is rather relieved.

She lets him kiss her goodby but her thoughts are with Hollis Hart. She will see him tomorrow and explain away her old friendship with Sadie. She can assure him, also, that Sadie has promised to make no further trouble.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER IX
But Ashoreth did not see Hollis Hart the next day. Nor the day after. Nor for many weeks.

It was rumored that he had gone abroad. Quite alone, and to escape some entangling alliance.

There was a story smeared across the front page of a newspaper devoted to scandal. "Boston Millionaire Flees Pretty Stenog." Hollis Hart's name was not mentioned in the narrative, but the inference was obvious. A score of papers appeared that morning in the office and were, surreptitiously devoured in the so-called "ladies' washroom."

"Mae de Marr got him scared," the girls said, and bet on it. That she had accompanied him, that Ashoreth knew better than that. But she wondered if his lawyer had been in touch with the girl. If, perhaps, there had been a "settlement," engineered by George Sibley, "engineered" and find out. But she would have nothing further to do with the affair. Sadie was dangerous company. And discretion, with Ashoreth, was a saving grace.

Monty English had gone to New York. And life had grown dull and meaningless. Ashoreth enrolled for a course at Boston University. A course in psychology. It was, she considered, a rather impressive subject. Less practical than shorthand. But even so much smarter. She paid $5 in advance and bought a new fountain pen. Then her interest waned and she decided that street cars made her really ill.

If only Monty had been around with his little coupe. Ashoreth wondered how she had ever felt superior to that car. There was, it was sure, an advertisement in large blue letters on the door, exhorting the public to buy radios at Whitman's. But Monty had covered it rather neatly with a piece of leather that he snapped on stiffly and was a nice, cozy little car. Infinitely preferable to stuffy old subways.

It had, really, been lots of fun last winter. Especially in retrospect. Monty used to take her to a restaurant on Huntington avenue, where the waitresses dressed like French peasants. She and Monty used to go there after class and Ashoreth felt like a student in the Latin Quarter.

She missed Monty dreadfully. And he had not even written! Nothing but a wire occasionally with a mailing address and a breezy message. Every Saturday he sent Maizie a box of glace fruits. She specially enjoyed them. No hand at writing. Sundays, when she sat reading the latest thriller, she would declare she was entirely ashamed of herself.

She speculated constantly upon his transfer and opined that her daughter's coolness had had something to do with it.

Maizie was an old-fashioned mother. And not at all in sympathy with the modern trend of things.

"What's the world coming to?" she would ask plaintively. "Companionate marriage and all! Sakes alive—married people don't live together any more. And the other kind—they're the ones that ought to be married, not the others. I tell you, Ashoreth, when a girl gets a chance to get a nice clean young man these days she ought accepted with that understanding; still wider playing must proceed on the basis of it."

Maizie closed her little book. "It's my new novel, 'Mae de Marr,'" she said. "It's interesting to look back these days. My power has a new tint, that's all. Sort of ashy, like Russians in the movies."

Maizie clicked her tongue impatiently. "Tut! Tut! Sit down here, young lady, and stop your nonsense," she ordered. "And remind me tomorrow to write Monty, honey. I don't know what he'll think of me."

They went to bed shortly and Maizie heated a hot water bag for her daughter. Ashoreth had grown unaccountably chilled over their tea, and her mother was worried. When she crept shivering, between her pale pink sheets, Maizie covered her with every puff and blanket in the house, and then threw a coat over her feet. By midnight Ashoreth was running a temperature and shivering convulsively.

When she lay perfectly quiet a pleasant languor possessed her body. But when she moved she ached and throbbed with dull misery.

At seven o'clock Maizie called the doctor. A round little man, pleasantly antisepic, who held Ashoreth's wrist in one hand and his watch in the other. And tipped presently, quite silently, out of the room.

He came again later that day. And when he had gone Maizie put little pieces of ice in a handkerchief and gave them to Ashoreth to hold in her mouth. Finally she dragged the big wing chair from the living room and sat beside Ashoreth's bed.

Time lost all significance and importance. The doctor kept coming. And Maizie tipped in and out. Cracked ice. And orange juice. And hot gruel.

Ashoreth raised herself weakly on one elbow. "Mother!" she cried. "Your hair's dark at the roots." Maizie sitting on the side of the bed, poked an invisible hairpin through the sideburn that framed her left ear.

"I haven't touched it up," she murmured. "since you've been sick, honey." Ashoreth fell back on her pillows.

"How long," she asked feebly, "have I been ill?" Maizie slipped a firm, plump arm under her daughter's slight shoulders.

"Oh, dearie," she murmured, "let mother help you. Just a swallow, Baby Lamb. It'll do you good." Obediently Ashoreth tasted. "Mother?" she insisted. Maizie wiped her eyes on her

THE GRAVE OF LOVE

I dug, beneath the cypress shade,
What well might seem an elfin's grave;
And every plume in earth I laid,
That erst they false affection gave.
I pressed them down the sod beneath,
I placed one mossy stone above;
And twined the rose's fading

wreath
Around the sepulchre of love.
Frail as they love, the flowers were dead,
Ere yet the evening sun was set;
But years shall see the cypress spread,
Immutably as my regret.

"Land sakes," she said, "but I'm the old sooty. Two weeks Monday Baby."

Two weeks. Blankness and forgetfulness for two weeks. And misery, and dull aching pain. And poor, darling Mother, red-eyed, with her hair all streaked! Crying because her Lamb was sick.

Maizie's hand lay on the pillow. There were knotted blue veins across the back. Her finger nails were bitten. And the tips of her fingers were red and blunted looking. Mother's pretty hands.

Weakly Ashtoreth raised her pudgy fingers to her lips. "Mother," she whispered.

Then Maizie was on her knees beside the bed. Crying on her outstretched arms. "Oh, Baby—Baby Lamb, Mother was so worried. Her little girl was so sick."

The bell in the hall purred softly. "Goodness, there's the doctor now. We had the bell muffled."

Maizie rubbed her eyes childishly with her fists. "Won't he think I'm the old cry baby?"

She went to the top of the stairs. "Come right up, doctor. Our little girl's all better."

"Well, well—so our patient's out of the woods, is she?"

He took her wrist again. And slid a thermometer between her lips. Studied it approvingly and shook it with alacrity.

"Fine! And now, Mrs. Ashe—" he turned briskly to Maizie—"you'd better be careful or we'll be having you on our hands."

Maizie shook her head. Her eyes were flooded with tears. And she could not trust her voice. She turned her back and blew her nose violently. Then she left the room. To return in a moment, smiling hazily.

"That little surprise we've been saving, doctor," she said. There was an enormous paper box in her arms.

A marvelous and surprising gift for Ashtoreth. A nightgown that passes through a wedding ring—in the next chapter.

Hudspeth Promises Much Work For Big Spring In House

Congressman Pledges Support for Numerous Projects Including a New Federal Building

(Special To The Avalanche)
BIG SPRING, Jan. 1.—Congressman Claude B. Hudspeth of El Paso, on route to Washington was guest at the last meeting of the Big Spring Chamber of Commerce directors for 1928 on December 27th. President Phillips made his farewell talk in which he extended thanks to the entire membership for their cooperation given him during the time he filled office, and gracefully handed over the reins to E. A. Kelly who pledged his best efforts towards carrying out a constructive program for 1929.

Congressman Hudspeth expressed his opinion that Big Spring was entitled to a federal building and that he was going to do his best to help secure one. He suggested that Big Spring send two representatives to Washington with all necessary data and that he would take up the matter with the postoffice department. He also stated that he was going to make an effort to secure appropriations for the improvement and development of the U. S. experimental farm at Big Spring.

Wants To Go Home Mrs. Seale Sticks to Old Philosophy

DALLAS, Jan. 1.—(P)—Mrs. Lula Seale, who Monday ending her term as sheriff of Dallas county, is eager to return to her home to care for her five children and supervise the cooking and housework.

"It is a man's job, not a woman's," Mrs. Seale declared with a sigh of relief as she prepared to turn over affairs of the office to sheriff-elect, Hal Root, after serving as a successor to her late husband for seven months.

"I ascribe to the old philosophy that a woman's place is in her home," Mrs. Seale said.

Daily Markets

KANSAS CITY LIVESTOCK

KANSAS CITY, Jan. 1.—(P)—

(U. S. D. A.)—Curtailed receipts of cattle around the midwestern and southwestern circuits resulted in fairly active trade on most killing classes of cattle, except weighty steers. Desirable light yearlings including fed heifers were unevenly steady to 25c higher with spots at St. Louis 50c up. Weighty steers, scaling 1,200 pounds and above, ruled steady to 35c lower, stocker and feeder classes were scarce. Supplies at most points were insufficient to test values. A few markets were closed and this partially accounted for the comparatively light receipts. Total offerings were around 18,200 as compared with 32,341 the same day a year ago. Last Christmas day all markets were closed.

The hog supply approximated 63,900, a shortage of 21,500 from the same day last year. Opening trade was fairly active to shippers at unevenly higher prices but packers were bearish and on the close made their purchases at values only steady to slightly higher. The shipper market was generally 10c to 15c higher with a maximum upturn at St. Louis of 30c to 40c. St. Louis on opening had a top of $9.50.

Fat lambs were on a firm to 35c higher basis; choicer offerings in Chicago reached $16, and the best available at Kansas City scored $13.15. Chicago attained a 25c to 30c advance on fat lambs, but weight kinds up to $9.25. Aggregate receipts were estimated at 14,200 against 56,997 a year ago.

FT. WORTH LIVESTOCK

PORT WORTH, Jan. 1.—(P)—

(U. S. D. A.)—Tuesday's trade in all classes of cattle very poorly tested, owing to the short receipts. Only 700 cattle and 250 calves estimated and the cattle supply consisted of eight cars of slaughter steers, 2 loads of low cutters, mixed butcher classes. Practically no desirable fat cows or good to choice slaughter calves included in the day's arrivals.

The market for all classes of cattle and calves on sale renewed steady. Two cars of fed steers brought $11.50 and a few other sales reported at $11.00 and less, short fed steers in the $10.00 range. Two carlots of low cutters reported at $4.60 and $5.10. The latter price paid for one load carrying a cutty end. Butcher cows noted under the $7.00 level. One load of good light slaughter yearlings on the heavy call order topped at $11.75; one load sold at $11.00 and other yearlings in the plainer grades at $9.00 and less. No business of consequence transacted with slaughter calves, the trade in this division presenting a nominal appearance.

Hog prices ruled strong to 15c higher, carlot butchers showing the most advance. The day's top, $9.10, paid by shippers for one load of good to choice 245 pound butchers, other butchers in the rail section reported at $8.90 and less, best truck hogs at $.83.

No sheep or lambs of consequence received at the yards Tuesday and values remained untested.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 1.—(P)—

Sawyer Is Posted On City Property

The furthest west residence on Broadway was located on the east side of Avenue S—back yonder when T. W. Sawyer, pioneer Lubbock realtor, began business here. Mr. Sawyer, whose offices are in the Lowery building downtown, specializes in city and farm loans. He began business here seven years ago and is today considered one of the city's foremost authorities on property values. One reason for this recognition is that for several years he appraised city valuations while serving as a member of the city equalization board. For a number of years Mr. Sawyer was one of the exclusive city real estate men in Lubbock.

Mr. Sawyer is extremely optimistic over the outlook for the New Year.

"It seems to me that we are in for the best year in our history for all lines of business," he said yesterday.

Cut Flowers Form Specialty Here

"Say it with Flowers" may be an old phrase but it is one that is never more frequently applied than at the present time according to J. C. Dean, owner and manager of the Lubbock Floral Company, whose offices are located at 1608 Seventh Street.

The Lubbock Floral company makes a specialty of cut flowers and pot plants, although all of the many kind of floral specimens may be secured at this local establishment.

Mr. Dean, the owner, has had twelve years of experience in the business. A large greenhouse is operated in connection with the shop here. A good telegraph business is carried on.

"Flowers are now used for almost any occasion," said Mr. Dean yesterday. "They express sympathy in bereavement, joy at success or on happier occasions, are used to convey a congratulatory message and truly may be said to adequately express every sentiment and emotion."

Barr Moves From Myrick Building

Dr. I. E. Barr, who for many years did general veterinary work in Lubbock and over the South Plains, has now restricted his time entirely to the serum end of the business and is no longer a general practitioner. Dr. Barr recently has moved his offices from 213 Myrick building to 1212 Texas Avenue. Dr. Barr, seasoned through many years in the government veterinary and animal husbandry service has been in Lubbock since 1913. He has been located in the Plains section since 1907.

His skill in his line of work is well known throughout this entire area. With his professional proficiency he has linked a devotion to the civic interests of Lubbock. He is prominent in every move for betterment of the city and is at present president of the Panhandle Plains Fair Association, operators of the annual fair here.

Rapid Growth For Fender Body Works

Organized only ten months ago, the Lubbock Fender and Body Works, 1009 Avenue H, has developed a reputation that has a drawing power of some 100 miles in each direction, even extending across the New Mexico line.

The company began with only two mechanics, increasing within the ten months' time to seven, each with more than five years' experience in their respective lines. This limit of experience has been made the requirement of the local company.

L. C. Hewitt and B. G. Williamson are the owners and managers. All kinds of fender, body, glass, top, and upholstery work is done in the plant.

Of the seven mechanics gathered together here, one comes from Canada, one from Belgium, another from Oregon, and one from Minnesota.

Temple Trust Firm Here Twelve Years

Variety Featured By Fletcher Shop

Being a reputation on nine years in the city, Fletcher's Electric Shop 12141-2 Texas Avenue, does a wide variety of business, including contracting, general electrical merchandizing, sale of light fixtures, motor rewinding and repairing.

Upon moving to this new location the company became the exclusive agent for the Graybar Radio and Western Electric speakers.

Many prominent Lubbock homes are furnished with Fletcher's electrical fixtures, and several buildings of Texas Tech are equipped with fixtures from this place. Nothing other than standard, trade-marked merchandise is sold, and Mr. Fletcher, experienced in electrical work, knows what you need in the way of fixtures and can supply those needs. The phone number is 569.

Big Mail Business For Acme Seed Co.

With a capital of $62,500, H. F. Stubbs began a small mail order seed company in Lubbock in 1915. The largest shipment made that first year was 100 pounds. Today this same company, the Acme Seed company, after fourteen years of steady growth, handles upwards of 800,000 local shipments each year and employs eighteen men during the busy season.

Shortly after establishing the business, Mr. Stubbs enlisted and served during the entire World War. The seed company was operated by his wife and small children during his absence.

R. Q. and C. F. Stubbs are now in charge of the company, the profits from which have already purchased four lots and a building. The company is located at 506 Broadway.

"We Fix Anything" Is Motto In Shop

"We fix anything" would be an apt motto for the Lubbock Bicycle Shop, located at 1005 Thirteenth street. This, in fact, is the claim put forward by Roy Lynch, owner of the shop.

All sorts of repairs for bicycles and other mechanical devices, such as victrolas, air guns, are made and work guaranteed. Modern tool equipment helps Mr. Lynch give the ultimate in service.

The shop is three years old. Its owner has had many years of experience in general repair work.

Question Mark

crushed back and forth above Southern California's shore line, the beginning of the most elaborately mapped out aerial endurance test in history.

Flying into a thirty miles an hour north ground wind, the big ship this morning lifted from the front line of the field with the pep of a pursuit plane, with such ease that even had it carried the 2 1-2 tons or reserve fuel with her special tanks would accommodate, it could have taken off with ease.

Captain Eaker Smiles Broadly
Captain Ira C. Eaker, noted cross country and international flier of the air corps, was seen to smile broadly as the big ship sailed past the pylons tower at the take off. There was less than a hundred gallons of gas in the wing tanks, about three hours supply and within three quarters of an hour from the 7:24 a. m. start, the initial refueling of some 100 gallons of gasoline was made over the town of Lankershim, near the field.

Lieut. Oda Moon, piloting the Douglas transport refueling ship, when he landed after the initial refueling said:
"We held contact for eight minutes. We started at 2,800 feet altitude and Major Spatz (flight commander) found that 2,000 feet was the best. After we had dropped eight hundred feet in experimenting for ideal condition.
Moon later took off for Imperial airport, near El Centro, Cal., in Imperial Valley, an emergency station. Following the second refueling at Rockwell field, the crew participated in a new year's turkey dinner on the northward flight, which lasted until they flew over the Rose Bowl. Successful refueling contact was made over North Island at 5 p. m. when 200 gallons of gasoline were transferred to the Question Mark.

the protocol expresses the agreements of the governments. Presumably on account of today being a holiday instructions from Bolivia were delayed and her representatives here did not feel authorized to sign the protocol.
The Paraguayan delegate after the meeting said that he would have been ready to sign the document in the name of his government. The meeting of the special committee had been delayed over half an hour by Minister de Medina, the Bolivian delegate, because of his hope of receiving instructions from La Paz. He said that the draft protocol was cable to his government late last night and he did not feel authorized to affix his name to it without definite instructions.

Two More Fliers Take Off In Test Flight Is Missouri

MARSHALL, Mo., Jan. 1. (P)—

Prepared to brave near zero weather in a little open cockpit monoplane, Elaine M. Tuxhorn and Leonard Rhiner announced tonight they would take off shortly after midnight in their attempt to establish a new refueling endurance flight record.

The start of the flight was fixed for between midnight and 2 a. m. so that it would not be necessary to refuel until after dawn.

The small Barling monoplane will carry a load of 25 gallons of gasoline, sufficient to maintain flight for 7 or 8 hours.

On a final test flight this afternoon the pilots reported they were not bothered by the cold because of the heavy clothing worn. To turn the key blasts of air the men covered their faces with leather masks.

Substitute Teachers Take Place of Sick Members

Lubbock schools will be unhampered by the influenza epidemic and will renew regular class work this morning, Supr. M. H. Duncan said last night when questioned regarding rumors that the schools would not open until next week.

Although several teachers in the schools are ill with light cases of the flu, substitutes will take their places during the next few days, Mr. Duncan said.

An increase of approximately 100 students are expected, he estimated, placing the enrollment for the year around the 4,700 mark. The first semester of the schools will close on January 11. At that time, eighteen students are to finish their work required for graduation, it was learned. They will not graduate, however, until the regular commencement time in May.

A majority of the students finishing their work are to enter the state university.

Only 2,153 Cars Are Licensed Here

Clerks Added to Collector Force In Registering Cars For 1929; Slaton People Get Collector Sub-Agent

Announcement from our new county tax collector, A. J. Clark, Tuesday, his first day in office with that title in his possession, was to the effect that up to close of business Monday night, December 31, 1928, a grand total of 2,153 automobile licenses had been issued.

Saturday and Monday witnessed growing lines of anxious auto owners waiting at the windows, and standing their turn on out into the west entrance to the courthouse. Monday saw about 850 licenses issued by the office and Tuesday's was approximately the same.

Several clerks were added to the force Tuesday by Mr. Clark to help during the rush, these including E. C. Priest, Frank Kerr, Mr. Lynn, Ulysses Howard.

No Penalty Until February
"There is no penalty assessed against tax payers for not having their automobile taxes paid and licenses for the year secured, before February 1," said Mr. Clark. "But, it is against the law for an automobile owner to drive his car, after January 1, without the new year's license. The penalty is to be attached for back due taxes will be put on after February 1, the same as is done with all other taxes, overdue."

Slaton Gets Sub-office
Beginning today, Wednesday, January 2, 1929, citizens of Slaton and the southeast part of Lubbock county will have opportunity of paying their automobile taxes and all other taxes, in Slaton, saving them the time and trouble of coming to Lubbock and waiting in line which is now the order of days at the county tax collector's office.

County Tax Collector Clark is opening up a sub-office in Slaton, with E. C. Priest, deputy tax collector, in charge. The office will be maintained throughout the remainder of January.

an old year. A number danced the new year in, others attended the midnight matinee, and some few passed out with the old year—but not many, as the police blotter yesterday morning showed that only four fines had been paid on drunkenness charges.

Peace enforcement officers report that the night was unusually quiet and that all of the expected excitement failed to materialize.
At the midnight frolic at the Palace Theater, David Powell, won first prize as the best singer in the amateur contest while Jimmy Hutson was acclaimed the best dancer. Second place went to Don Baxter and Donald Shepherd. In a pleasing bill featured the frolic. Scores of New Year revelers were turned away from the doors.

children with whistles.
One of the most interesting features of the affair was the new burglar alarm system, which has been installed at considerable cost, and which is the most modern in the city. The system was explained in detail by an expert in charge, the exhibition showing that the machinery included in this system is almost human, guarding against not only the entry of bank robbers, but against employees or officials of the bank permitting the clock on which the system depends from running down; warns or doors having been left unshut, following banking hours, and otherwise proves that it is just about 97 per cent proof against burglars entering the bank and getting away with any loot without an alarm being sounded to the entire city.

Statement Is Presented
A statement of the condition of the Lubbock National bank was given out, which shows the status of the institution at the close of business on December 31, 1928. Of this, the most outstanding feature is the increase of about $500,000 in deposits over the year 1927.

There were $1,364,266.75 on deposit at the close of business Monday, with the same day a year ago showing less than a million dollars on deposit.

According to the official statement, the bank's resources are given. Loans and discounts, $533,742.05. School warrants, $39,557.26. Banking house, $48,000. Furniture and fixtures, $21,000. Other real estate, $100. Stock of Federal Reserve bank, $3,600. Interest earned, not collected, $4,893.23. Call loans, $100,000. Bonds, $250,019.98. Bills of exchange, $178,600.88. Cash and exchange, $324,253.67. Total, $1,493,826.67.
Liabilities of the bank are given: Capital stock, $100,000. Surplus, $20,000. Undivided profits, $4,560.12. Dividends unpaid, $5,000. Deposits, $1,364,266.75. Total, $1,493,826.67.

had threatened to call a special session of the legislature if such became necessary to keep the lands off the market. When Governor Moody returned from the conference and said a legislative session would not be called, he related that Robinson said he would postpone sale of all except about 20 sections. This angle of the case was noted in the petition.

Justiceburg Span To Be Opened Soon

Traffic will be directed over the new bridge at Double Mountain river bridge near Justiceburg on State highway number 7 between Lubbock and Snyder during the next few days, according to local highway officials. Construction of the span has been completed and the road will be passable as soon as the road leading to the bridge can be put into shape.

With the completion of unit one of the greatest hazards on the highway will be eliminated as the crossing will always be a serious menace to the traffic during rainy weather. Only last summer five cars were washed into the quick sand of the creek during rises caused by heavy rains.

Instead of crossing the Santa Fe tracks just south of Justiceburg, the route now runs direct across the river east of the old crossing and parallel with the rail line. The bridge will be open for service by January 10, it was said.

Flu Epidemic

and more severe wave might follow. Twenty-four states and New York City today reported 90,000 new cases, compared with approximately 168,000 cases in the same states during the previous week. Officials saw in these reports a probability that the wave has reached its peak in the West, and that prevalence in straightaway country would be less for this week than for the preceding.

"This, however, would only substantiate the belief that a second and more severe wave may follow this one later in the winter," health officials said, recalling that the more severe wave of the 1918 epidemic was preceded by a widespread outbreak in which cases were mild as they have been thus far in this epidemic.

The possibility that the seasonal holidays might have interfered with reporting, making figures less accurate was suggested by officials who said today's reports would not interfere with plans of the public health service for a national conference on influenza, to be held here this month.

Masked Man Seen
June's 5 year old sister Betty, told her parents that a man who she believed had worn a mask over his face accosted her near her home last Friday and had fled when she screamed and ran. A woman's footprints were found in the snow in the yard of the Nelson home today. And were declared not to have been made by any member of the family.

Police found a stolen automobile in the vicinity of the spot where the body was discovered, but a pair of child's gloves it contained were not identified as having belonged to the dead girl. Neither did it show any signs of a struggle.

The girl's shoes, hat and galoshes were missing, and her clothing was disheveled.
An ex-convict, who had served two terms for attacks on girls and whose victims had been left in the same locality where June's body was found, was taken to the police station for questioning, but he was declared to have given a straightforward account of his whereabouts last night and the officers did not believe he had any connection with the crime.

the calling out of troops to search for the negro when he passed through Parchman Saturday on his way to Tennessee. He said he offered Superintendent L. T. Fox of the penitentiary, the entire Mississippi militia, if necessary as "the State could not afford to let the perpetrator of such a crime go free."

"No request was made for troops to guard the negro after he had been captured either by the prison superintendent or sheriffs in the counties through which Shepherd was carried," Governor Bilbo said. "If such a request had been made by a person authorized to do so, I would have granted it."

Opening their activities for 1929, members of the Woodmen of The World gathered in a banquet at the Elk Cafe last night to make plans for the year and elect new officers. About 25 members were present including a number of members of the ladies circle.
A. Judd, retiring council commander, was toastmaster for the occasion and short informal talks from those present featured the program. M. C. Bryan was selected as council commander for the year after which the following officers were elected: W. B. Thorp, advisor; lieutenant: L. O. Briggs, banker; H. D. Phillips, clerk and W. E. Lowery, manager.
A full program of activities during the year was planned by the group.
