Reagan's sunset

LOS ANGELES — Ronald Reagan cherished the yarns he would spin about Hollywood and his eight years in the White House, but Alzheimer's disease seems to be silencing the Great Communicator. "He doesn't tell as many stories as he used to," daughter Maureen Reagan said of the impact of Alzheimer's on one of the nation's most beloved presidents. Only family, staff and close friends have seen the former president in the year since his heart-wrenching letter disclosing the diagnosis and the start of "the journey that will lead me into the sunset of my life." That was Nov. 5, 1994, and there's been little since. Page 9A.

No winners

AUSTIN — No tickets correctly matched all six numbers drawn Saturday night for the twice-weekly Lotto Texas game, state lottery officials said. The jackpot was worth $10 million. The numbers drawn from a field of 50 were: 6, 8, 20, 24, 44 and 48. Lottery officials estimate the jackpot for Wednesday night's game will be $16 million.

'I really don't know what was in his mind. I just know that he wasn't himself, and I'd like to know myself why he'd go out and shoot a policeman.'

Off-duty police sergeant opens fire on co-worker

DALLAS (AP) — Upset over marital problems, an off-duty police sergeant opened fire on a uniformed colleague Saturday before he was shot and killed outside a southwest substation by his fellow officers.

Dallas Sgt. Stephen Christian, who had split with his wife about a week ago, approached Officer Steven Sparks around 3:40 a.m. after driving some 25 miles from the southeast home he shared with his mother, police said.

Christian, dressed in plain clothes, cryptically asked Sparks something to the effect of "Do you want to be first?" then shot the 34-year-old, said Sgt. Jim Chandler, a Dallas police spokesman.

Two officers, who had just arrived at the station, heard the shot and then killed the sergeant when he turned the gun toward them, he said.

Sparks underwent surgery and remained in intensive care at Parkland Memorial Hospital. Doctors said the chest injury is not life threatening, Chandler said.

At the time of the shooting, the two officers were unaware that Christian, who was trying to get into the station through a locked door, was a fellow officer, Chandler said.

Christian's mother, Edra Weedon, believes her son "just went over the brink." She called police shortly after 3 a.m., warning them of her son's emotional state.

"I really don't know what was in his mind," she said. "I just know that he wasn't himself, and I'd like to know myself why he'd go out and shoot a policeman."

Christian, who turned 47 on Saturday, packed a suitcase, said he was leaving and spoke rhetorically to his wife before firing a shot and driving off in his pickup truck, his mother said.

Authorities who answered Ms. Weedon's call arrived at her home after Christian had left, Chandler said.

Christian, a 23-year veteran of the force assigned to the jail, did not know Sparks, who was taking a break outside the substation when he encountered Christian.

Gunman kills Israel's Rabin

Slaying comes moments after prime minister ends peace rally

■ Officials take into custody 27-year-old member of right-wing group who confesses to shooting.

Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — A right-wing Israeli gunned down Prime Minister Yitzhak Rabin Saturday night, minutes after the premier had confidently told cheering thousands that "people really want peace." Rabin, a war hero who became a leading architect of Israeli-Arab reconciliation, died on the operating table.

The assassination — the first of an Israeli leader since the founding of the state in 1948 — stunned the nation. World and Mideast leaders from President Clinton to Yasser Arafat declared the process of peace would continue.

Rabin, 73, had descended from a city hall balcony and was about to get into his black Cadillac limousine when the gunman fired three bullets from close range, hitting him in the back and stomach. As crowd members surged toward the shooting scene, Rabin's car raced to Tel Aviv's Ichilov Hospital. Rabin arrived unconscious, without pulse or blood pressure.

Israel TV showed the gunman, identified by police sources as Yigal Amir, 27, pinned against a wall by dozens of police. The sources said Amir was seized with pistol in hand, had confessed to shooting Rabin and told investigators that he didn't regret it.

In recent weeks, Rabin had repeatedly voiced concern about growing political violence in Israel and accused the right-wing opposition, which believes he is betraying Jews by handing land back to the Arabs, of inciting explosive rage against him.

The rally was designed to show that despite noisy anti-Rabin protests, many Israelis support the moves toward peace by Rabin, who shared the 1994 Nobel Peace Prize with his foreign minister and

Midlanders to cast ballots Tuesday for state constitutional amendments

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The general election — consisting of 14 proposed state constitutional amendments — will be Tuesday with polling places throughout the city. Voters can go to their designated polling places between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m.

There are 58,632 Midlanders registered and eligible to vote.

Early voting — which began Oct. 18 and concluded Friday — showed a low turnout statewide and locally.

"It has really not done well at all," said Midland County Elections Administrator Pat Eastup. There were only 1,400-plus people who voted early in Midland County.

In 1993, the last constitutional amendment election, there were 2,146 votes cast locally.

Low turnout during early voting may be indicative of what's to come.

Last week, a Potter County jury convicted Henry Lopez Ortiz of capital murder. The punishment phase of his trial will continue this week.

Punishment phase of Ortiz capital murder trial to resume this week

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel

AMARILLO — After 10 days of testimony and evidence, Henry Lopez Ortiz's life is hanging in the balance as he awaits the case to go to the jury that will decide his punishment.

Last Wednesday, the nine-man, three-woman Potter County jury found Ortiz guilty of capital murder for the Feb. 10 kidnapping, sexual assault and murder of 10-year-old Julianne Powell.

The punishment phase is expected to end Tuesday or Wednesday. The guilt/innocence phase ended Nov. 1.

■ Oct. 30 — Among the experts to testify were a forensic toxicologist, a nuclear physician, a neuropsychologist and a neurologist. Ortiz's adult daughter also testified.

Dr. Theodore Simon, a nuclear medical physician from Dallas, testified to running a brain scan on Ortiz and read from a report of the brain surgery Ortiz had on May 23, 1977.

Expo center group works to make dream a reality

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The proposed West Texas Exposition Center is virtually a "done deal" if the project is gauged by the enthusiasm that it has engendered.

But the reality is awaiting seed money and then, initially, about $2.5 million in donated funds to get the center's first phase under way in attracting a variety of popular equine-related events.

The expo center would be a family-oriented facility with two arenas — indoor and outdoor — fit for rodeos or tractor-pulls, a picnic area for concerts, Western Heritage Museum and eight barns of 400 horse stalls, according to Dr. Robert L. Cobb, a Midland veterinarian who is president of the non-profit West Texas Exposition Center Inc.

"This will be an all-or-none deal," Cobb said last week. "We are going to raise the amount of money to be able to build this facility before we start. It is not going to be a deal where we raise a half-million dollars and start and then we're out of

Typhoon's death toll hits 250

'The death toll could still rise. There are 16 missing and are presumed dead.'

— Robert Racelis
Quezon governor

MANILA, Philippines (AP) — A typhoon-devastated town wrapped bodies in plastic bags Saturday after running out of coffins, as the death toll from the most powerful storm in years soared to at least 250 people.

More than 100 died in the town of Calauag, the victims of huge waves that crashed into their homes, little more than bamboo huts perched precariously on the southeastern shoreline of the main island of Luzon.

Dozens more people were reported missing in Typhoon Angela, the strongest storm to hit the Philippines since 1984. Tens of thousands have been left homeless, their houses flooded or flattened by Angela's 125-mph winds.

On Saturday the storm was over the South China Sea and headed for Vietnam. It was expected to hit there sometime Monday.

Government officials warned of impending food shortages unless relief supplies are sent to the province of Quezon, where five other communities in addition to Calauag were hit by high waves at the height of the storm.

Angela destroyed millions of dollars worth of rice and coconut crops, and roads and bridges. Calauag, a fishing and farming town of 60,000 people, was directly in its path.

Many of the dead there were children, and at least 25 people are still missing from the town, about 100 miles southeast of Manila, the government's social welfare agency said.

"Most of the bodies have been found floating along the shores," a local radio station reporter said. The town has run out of coffins, and bodies are being wrapped in plastic bags and piled in a cemetery, the reporter said.

Quezon Gov. Robert Racelis said 43 more people were killed in other towns in the province, including 30 killed in the town of Sampaloc when a dam burst and floodwaters overran it.

"The death toll could still rise. There are 16 missing and are presumed dead," Racelis said. "Many houses have been swept away."

At least 68 people died in Bicol, also on the southeastern end of Luzon, where Angela first stormed ashore Thursday. Most of the deaths there were from flash floods, others from landslides, officials said.

Two other towns hardest hit by the typhoon were Paracale and Jose Panganiban in Camarines Norte, just 40 miles east of Calauag.

Disaster officials said about 40 people were killed, some buried in landslides and some by a storm surge that hit coastal villages in both towns. Other provinces also reported deaths.

The typhoon flooded a large stretch of the main road connecting Manila to Bicol, a peninsular region at the southeastern end of northern Philippines. Calauag lies along the road but other villages hit by the storm are harder to get to, even in good weather.

In some cases, the only access is by foot and even then, it's a few hours hike, said a social welfare officer in Lucena, the provincial capital.

In Manila, thousands of houses along the coast, most of them belonging to poor families, were demolished, leaving nearly 20,000 people homeless.

Many houses were still underwater Saturday in suburban Taguig, where 13 coastal villages along Laguna Lake have been flooded. Taguig Mayor Isidro Garcia warned that floods may take until January to subside.

Some 30,000 people around Taal Lake south of Manila fled their homes at the height of the typhoon and were still in evacuation centers, according to disaster officials.

Angela's death toll has surpassed that of storm Zack, which ravaged the central Philippines last week, killing at least 165. In 1984, Typhoon Ike, wtih 130 mph winds, killed 4,353 people in the Philippines.

Court to allow leading democratic movement to register

MOSCOW (AP) — Overturning an election commission ban, Russia's Supreme Court ruled Saturday that a leading democratic movement must be allowed to field candidates in next month's parliamentary elections.

The court gave the Central Election Commission until Tuesday to register the Yabloko party, headed by pro-reform economist and presidential hopeful Grigory Yavlinsky.

"There is hope for democracy in Russia," Yavlinsky said after the ruling.

The election commission threw Russian politics into turmoil last week when it refused to register Yabloko, citing technicalities linked to the party's list of candidates.

Fellow democrats — notably Russia's Democratic Choice group led by Yegor Gaidar, a former prime minister and architect of the country's market reforms — threatened to boycott the elections in protest.

Other parties across the political spectrum condemned the decision. From the hospital bed where he is recovering from heart trouble, President Boris Yeltsin demanded an explanation of the ban.

Alexander Yakovlev, the president's representative in Parliament, said Saturday the high court's ruling amounted to a "restoration of justice in the democratic procedure of Dec. 17 elections," the ITAR-Tass news agency reported.

Rescue teams attempt to enter munitions plant to search for survivors

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — Small explosions Saturday prevented rescue workers from searching a munitions plant for more victims of three larger explosions the previous day.

At least nine people were killed and more than 300 injured Friday by explosions that swept the army-owned munitions plant in Rio Tercero, 435 miles northwest of Buenos Aires.

Live small arms ammunition, hand grenades, mortar and artillery shells and debris showered an area of several blocks and a 155-mm artillery round was found in a nearby schoolyard.

Explosives experts combed the area Friday night and early Saturday morning for explosive devices and residents were warned to avoid strange objects.

An estimated 10,000 evacuees, almost a quarter of the local population, began returning to their damaged homes or searched for relatives on Saturday.

A defense ministry statement said the explosions were believed to have been caused when a worker accidentally hooked a projectile fuse on a freight elevator, igniting a fire that quickly spread to nearby explosives.

Gen. Mario Groba, the highest military authority in the area, said it would be impossible to enter the plant for at least 24 hours.

EXPO: If fund-raising pans out, center could open next year money."

If the fund-raising pans out, the center would be open late next year or early in 1997, Cobb said.

Cobb, a horse fancier, views the expo center as a "win-win situation for everybody. It would bring money into the Midland-Odessa area and would provide expanded recreation and entertainment for West Texans.

"When you start something, you've got to finish it," Cobb said.

The overall project would be designed for convenience and safety. The arenas' floors would be cultivated soil — dirt — for the surefooting and safety of horses and other animals. And the barn stalls, fitted with overhangs for shade, would be spaced to accommodate trucks and trailers. The stalls, which would rent for $10 to $15 a day, would be a major revenue source, he said.

As planned, the expo center's first phase would take in 55 to 75 acres on a 135-acre site west of Midland toward Midland International Airport and would be convenient to Business Highway 80 traffic. The acreage would allow for expansion for additional parking, recreational-vehicle spaces and more barn stalls.

EVENTS AT THE center would "attract out-of-town people — people and money," said Cobb, who is convinced that the venture would lure a plethora of horse-oriented and livestock events similarl to exposition centers in Abilene, Wichita Falls, Fort Worth and Glen Rose.

Based on 32 events a year, the chamber's Convention and Visitors Bureau projected that those events would bring in $16 million to the economy.

Those projected events include Original Team Roping Finals, American Quarter Horse Association shows, English Jumping, Celebrity Roping, Midland Ranch Rodeo, Tennessee Walkers, American Junior Rodeo Association events, Grand Slam, U.S. Team Roping Champions, livestock shows, equine and other schools, seminars and horse sales.

"Economic development is our objective," said chamber President Marvin Wynn. He said the expo center would bring money into the community and would help stymie the outflow of dollars.

Midland County Judge Jeff Norwood said the project is "a tremendous asset" to Midland.

Cobb said that the job of the expo center's 11 directors "is to prove a need for Midland. We've done our homework for this. We will generate income for the community," while serving much of the Southwest.

Serving with Cobb on the board are Candi Cowden, Blaxton Glass and John Mabee, ranchers; Karl Reiter and Wayne Merritt, bankers; Meg Farrington, horse breeder and trainer at Venture Farms; Susie Hitchcock, businesswoman; Ray Schimcek, conservationist; Jim Cauthen, oil-gas executive; and Dan Anderson Jr., financial resource manager.

Cobb said that Abilene Expo Center generates 16 percent of Abilene's convention-sales market; there were 147 event days scheduled in the first six months of 1993 and 261 event days in 1992. The Somervell County Expo & Texas Amphitheater in Glen Rose scheduled 237 event days in its first 12 months of operation.

The enterprise has gained the endorsement of the Midland County Commissioners' Court, the Midland Chamber of Commerce, the Midland Hotel and Motel Association, the Midland Soil and Water Conservation District, the Midland County Extension Livestock and Natural Resource Committee, the Midland Ranch Rodeo Association, the Arabian Horse Club of West Texas, the American Junior Rodeo Association, the Breeders Guild of Peruvian Horses, the Tex-Mex Barrel Racing Association, the High School Rodeo Association and the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center, which uses horses in its hippotherapy program for handicapped children.

WEST TEXAS EXPO would be the first major equine/livestock-related enterprise in Midland since the demise of the Midland Fair Association Inc., which sponsored a professional championship rodeo for three decades. The Midland Fair Association, established in 1935 by pioneer ranchers, folded in the 1960s after the World's Championship Rodeo started losing money and experienced a decline in volunteers.

Midland oil operator Ed Magruder — a former rancher who was the association's last president — views the expo center "very, soberly" in light of his experience with the old fair and rodeo.

He wished "these young folks all the luck in the world" in promoting the ambitious enterprise. "This is the spot for it. If they (host professional rodeos), they are going back into a big business. That may be wonderful, and it may not."

Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rodeos are held each winter at Ector County Coliseum.

Bill Collyns, Reporter-Telegram editor emeritus and rodeo booster, said that back then "we had the greatest outdoor, under-the-stars rodeo, the biggest prizes and the best contestants. It was a world-championship affair. They ran special trains in here even from Fort Worth. It was our big show."

'We are going to raise the amount of money to be able to build this facility before we start. It is not going to be a deal where we raise a half-million dollars and start and then we're out of money.'

— Dr. Robert L. Cobb, group president

Collyns said the expo center "would be a great asset to the community." Ranching was the foundation of Midland's development in the 1880s and well into the 1900s; "that is all we had to start with," he said.

Cobb said that in recent years the Midland-Odessa area was among the state's more popular horse areas.

Owning and maintaining a horse or horses is an investment and a pleasure and connotes a freedom, Cobb said. "You can get on a horse, ride and get away, and do (most) everything."

Quoting Western writer Chuck Stocks, Cobb said that "the trend in the '90s is heading toward a simpler lifestyle, less stress and a return to basic values. Western, as a state of mind rather than a geographic location, represents these values to a country grown tired of upward mobility."

As head of the West Texas Expo's Western Heritage Museum, Ms. Cowden said the museum would help to "preserve and promote our Western heritage."

Midland blacksmith Mike Watlington, who was born in Midland in 1938, said he misses the fair association's old rodeos. He supports the West Texas Expo Center for its potential benefit to area youngsters.

Jim Crawford, executive director of the Midland Cerebral Palsy Center, said that handicapped children's exposure to horsemanship would be expanded at the West Texas Expo Center.

RIDING HORSES IS "one of the few activities that handicapped children can do and compete with their peers," said Crawford, who noted that the CP Center would benefit from the center's proceeds.

"If you'd ask the kids what they wanted to do, they'd pick the horses every time."

In supporting the center, Charlie Green, president of the Midland County Livestock Association, said the association endorses the project, but "we don't have any money to pledge as an association.

"This kind of thing would, maybe, come near attracting these ropings, and cuttings, schools, trade shows. I know they are always having things at Abilene. I don't know if it would just dilute theirs or just add to. Probably just add to."

Green, the Midland County agricultural agent from 1949 to 1982, recalled the hardships in finding places to hold livestock shows for the 4-H Club and Future Farmers of America.

"It was always bad weather in March (in the 1950s). We'd have those big old sandstorms."

Livestock-show participants endured snow, sleet and blizzards when the show was held in an open hangar at Midland Airpark after the show was changed to mid-winter. "We liked to have froze to death," he said.

By the mid-1960s, the livestock show was moved into the then-new Midland County Exhibit Building. The show has outgrown that building, and the association now rents tents to shelter the livestock.

Earnest Kiker, county agricultural agent, also supports the expo center.

"THE DREAM IS the basis for all things that take place. If you've got a dream and you've got a group of people that's behind it and pushing it, well, then, things are going to happen in the community."

Kiker cited the economic, educational, recreational and entertainment benefits of the project.

"There are (agriculture-related) activities throughout the state of Texas all of the time, and there is no reason why we can't bid for those activities, equine activities, livestock shows, maybe trade shows.

"West Texas and horses are kind of synonymous in that we have beef cattle, cotton and horses," Kiker said.

He said "the horse industry" affords a "tremendous amount" of economic, educational, recreational and therapeutic benefit to West Texas.

We just might see some rain today

Staff Report

You never can tell.

But, it just might.

Might rain.

There's a 30 percent chance of that happening tonight and a 30 percent probability of showers and thunderstorms on Monday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

For today, the high temperature under mostly cloudy skies is to be in the lower 60 degrees, and winds are to be southerly at 10 to 20 mph. The low temperature tonight is to be in the upper 40s.

Monday's high temperature is to be near 70. The sky is to be mostly cloudy then.

Saturday's peak temperature was 47 degrees, and the overnight low temperature was 40 degrees.

The record high temperature for Nov. 4 is 89 degrees in 1988, and the record low temperature for the date is 18 degrees in 1991.

RABIN: Gunman kills prime minister after peace rally

(From 1A)

PLO leader Yasser Arafat.

Like Egyptian leader Anwar Sadat, who was mowed down in 1981, Rabin died in the paradox of peace efforts spawning violence. His policies, especially his autonomy agreements with the Palestinians, have deeply divided Israel.

At right-wing demonstrations, Rabin was routinely denounced as a "murderer" and "traitor." At a recent rally, protesters held up posters of Rabin in a Nazi uniform.

Right-wing extremists who gathered briefly at the hospital condemned Rabin, even while he was fighting for his life. "Rabin is a murderer," they shouted.

But hundreds of others waiting outside the hospital burst into tears when Rabin's top aide, Eitan Haber, announced that Rabin had died.

At the site of the shooting, the Kings Square in Tel Aviv, young Israelis sat on the ground, weeping. Some lit candles, while others sang the "Peace Song," which the crowd had sung at the rally.

Foreign Minister Shimon Peres, who had stood alongside Rabin at the rally, later noted that even the often shy and withdrawn Rabin had joined in song. "It was a happy day in his life, probably the happiest day in his life," Peres said.

Government officials said there might be some delays in implementing the West Bank autonomy agreement with the Palestinians as Israel deals with its domestic problems.

However, Peres, 73, named as caretaker prime minister early today, told the nation he would continue on Rabin's path.

"There is nothing else we can do, as comrades, as friends but to continue along a great road paved by a great leader," Peres said, fighting back tears.

Peres could either form a new government, or serve out the government's term until elections scheduled in October 1996.

A state funeral was scheduled for Monday in Jerusalem. According to Jewish tradition, burial should take place by the sunset of the day following the death, but the funeral was delayed until 2 p.m. Monday to allow world leaders to attend.

Many will be watching to see how many Arab leaders take part.

Today, Rabin was to lay in state outside the parliament, or Knesset. Schools were to begin classes with a moment of silence.

In Washington, President Clinton said "Peace must be and peace will be Prime Minister Rabin's lasting legacy."

PLO chief Yasser Arafat said he was shocked "by this awful, terrible crime." He hoped that "all of us, Israelis and Palestinians, will have the ability to overcome this tragedy against the peace process," he said.

Peres, the driving force behind the peace agreements with the Palestinians, has been more dovish than Rabin, his long-time political rival. The two had put their rivalries aside over the past three years and worked as a team.

The Rabin shooting was expected to trigger a crackdown on far-right extremists, with security sources saying there is a hard-core group of 200-300.

In recent weeks, security had been tightened around Rabin with mounting concern for the prime minister and Cabinet members because of extreme right-wing rhetoric vowing an all-out effort to stop Israel from handing the West Bank to Arafat.

But Rabin had refused heavier security, fearing he would be isolated, according to Ehud Sprinzak, a professor of political science at Hebrew University.

"For 27 years, I was a military man. I fought all the time. There was no chance for peace. I believe that now there is a chance for peace and we must take advantage of it," Rabin told the peace rally Saturday. "This government decided to give peace a chance."

He was about to get into his car when the gunman fired.

Noam Kedem, a 26-year-old lawyer from Tel Aviv, said he heard two or three shots and "I saw Rabin holding his stomach. I don't know exactly where he was shot, but he was holding his whole body and then he fell on the ground." He said security men hovered over him and then two more shots were fired.

The suspected gunman, Amir, was quickly caught. Israeli radio and TV reports said Amir was a law student from Herzliya, near Tel Aviv, who had been involved in right-wing causes, including setting up illegal settlements in the West Bank.

A previously unknown Jewish extremist group, identified only as "Ine," had claimed responsibility in an announcement given to Israeli police reporters on their beepers.

Rabin is survived by his wife, Leah, and a son and daughter.

to one another.

But Rabin's past partners in peace talks mourned his death and worried the killing would undo their work.

PLO chief Yasser Arafat said the Israeli had been "a great leader of peace."

"I hope that ... the Israelis and the Palestinians have the ability to overcome this tragedy against the peace process and the whole situation in the Middle East," Arafat said of the man who signed a peace accord with him at the White House in 1993 but refused to shake his hand.

King Hussein of Jordan signed his own agreement with Rabin in 1994, and said he would attend the slain leader's funeral.

"I really mourn a friend and I'm very, very sorry about what happened," Hussein told CNN.

"I hope that it will strengthen the resolve of all those that belong to the peace camp," he said.

"Those responsible for his death are guilty of a despicable crime and must be brought to justice," said former President Jimmy Carter, who brought Israel and Egypt together at Camp David in the groundbreaking peace talks of 1978.

"But in the wake of this tragedy, the peace process must continue," Carter said. "My hope is that Israelis and Palestinians will come together and reaffirm their commitment to the peace process that Prime Minister Rabin helped start and that those left behind must finish."

In Rome, Pope John Paul II expressed "grief and worry" for peace, Italy's ANSA and AGI news agencies reported.

World leaders noted Rabin was only the latest peacemaker in the Middle East to die for his efforts.

ORTIZ: Punishment phase of trial expected to end this week

(From 1A)

He said Ortiz suffered a depressed skull fracture with the skull moved toward the brain. He said the surgeon drilled a small hole through the skull to get a pliers-type instrument in the head to remove parts of broken skull and to pull the skull off the brain.

Simon said Ortiz underwent a brain scan that showed Ortiz's left parietal area had very little activity and decreased blood flow.

Simon said the left parietal lobe controls self-restraint; damage here can make appropriate decision-making difficult, cause increased agitation and memory loss.

A neuropsychologist, Dr. Jack Price of Dallas, said in a battery of psychological tests, Ortiz's IQ measured about 89-90, which is a "low average score."

He said the sweeping overview indicated Ortiz was "seriously impaired." He said that in 90 percent of the tests, Ortiz scored in the "brain-damaged" range.

Dallas neurologist Dr. Jonathan Walker said he confirmed Ortiz's brain injuries through an electroencephalograph or EEG. He said the EEG showed even more extensive damage between the frontal lobes that control decision-making.

Ronald Backer, a forensic toxicologist and the laboratory director at Harrison Laboratories in Midland, testified that Ortiz's blood alcohol level on Feb. 10 was probably around 0.10, the legal level of intoxication.

Ortiz's daughter, 23-year-old Alina Ortiz, testified that her father suffered the head injury when she was a child.

The Texas Christian University graduate said her father studied very hard while he attended community college classes.

She said following her December 1994 graduation, her father's appearance became disheveled. She said he was under a lot of stress and complained a lot about his work environment.

Following Miss Ortiz's testimony, the defense rested its case.

■ Oct. 31 — The prosecution presented its rebuttal witnesses Tuesday. Among those witnesses were three of Ortiz's co-workers, a neurosurgeon and a psychiatrist-lawyer.

One of the co-workers testified she went through a training program with Ortiz and that he did not display problems in comprehending and learning the material.

Two other co-workers testified Ortiz could follow instructions, did not display impairments in decision-making and interacted at work appropriately.

The neurosurgeon testified that the results of brain damage come from watching the person and how well he functions day-to-day. He said judging from Ortiz's work and school records he assimilated well following the accident.

The psychiatrist-lawyer said his understanding of Ortiz and his background would lead him to believe Ortiz was goal-oriented and understood what was going on at the time he is accused of killing Julianne.

■ Nov. 1 - Jurors deliberated only about an hour before finding Ortiz guilty of capital murder.

During closing arguments, Midland County Assistant District Attorney Teresa Clingman said Ortiz used deadly force to hold Julianne in his apartment by putting her in the hamper "that became her coffin."

She said the proof of the sexual assault was in the child's vagina where she was torn and bruised. "He signed his name in her body" leaving his semen to be identified with DNA testing, Ms. Clingman said.

The child's pubic hair was "on his marital bed" and was found on his clothes, Ms. Clingman said. Ms. Clingman called the child's death a "cold, planned, premeditated murder."

Referring to testimony that Ortiz borrowed some cheese from Julianne shortly before her death, Ms. Clingman called the move a "ruse" to see if the child was alone.

Julianne was "brutally raped ... in keeping with his plan to take her life," the prosecutor said. She said he had to have intended to kill the child because she could identify him.

"I'm not going to downplay the magnitude of Ms. Fisher's loss. There was a crime committed; a crime Henry Lopez Ortiz will have to pay for," said defense attorney H.W. "Woody" Leverett.

Leverett said there was no doubt Ortiz is guilty of murder and aggravated sexual assault, but he said he didn't believe he was guilty of capital murder.

The legal definition of capital murder includes having the intent to kill the person as part of the crime. In murder, the person has to know his actions could cause the death, but that isn't the goal.

Leverett said this was a crime on the spur of the moment; Ortiz knew his wife and Julianne's mother were coming home soon.

Ortiz's background lead to this attack, Leverett implied, saying all the stress, brain damage and the alcohol as well as the years of trying to function converged and were taken out on Julianne.

■ Nov. 2 — A 24-year-old Pecos woman testified that when she was 14, Ortiz forced her to kiss him while he was fondling her. The woman said he was her youth group leader and took her out to a remote location to teach her how to drive. She didn't tell anyone until Ortiz was charged with rape five years later.

A 23-year-old woman testified Ortiz raped her in 1990 when she was 18. She also was in his youth group and said he took her to his home one night after telling her a friend of hers wanted to speak with her.

Two of Ortiz's co-workers at a Midland substance abuse rehabilitation center for adolescent boys testified about his behavior. One woman said she was promoted over Ortiz and he spread rumors about her and him. She said he told her his wife had died in a car wreck and had threatened her. The other co-worker said Ortiz was manipulative and he didn't know Ortiz was married because of the way he spoke about other women.

Dr. James Grigson, the Dallas psychiatrist nicknamed "Dr. Death," testified that he believed Ortiz would continue to be a threat to society and called Ortiz "cold-blooded."

Under cross-examination, Grigson admitted he had been expelled by the American Psychiatric Association for testifying and predicting with 100 percent certainty that an individual would be dangerous in the future. The APA called his actions fraudulent and unethical.

Grigson said this opinion was rendered by people opposed to the death penalty. He fought for reinstatement, he said.

■ Nov. 3 — A Houston psychologist called Ortiz's comforting gestures toward the mother of his victim an "equivalent to the Judas kiss."

Dr. Walter Quijano, a clinical psychologist who formerly worked as the chief psychologist for the Texas Department of Criminal Justice prison system, testified that he believed the offense was planned and that Ortiz would find a way to gain access to his victims and make them trust him.

Quijano said Ortiz showed features of being a pedophile, sexual sadist and anger rapist.

He said Ortiz continued his cover-up when Ms. Fisher came to his door. Quijano said Ortiz used his position of trust through Bible studies with youth to gain access to the two girls who accused him of sexual assault and fondling them.

The state rested its case. The defense began calling witnesses to help outline Ortiz's background.

A friend of Ortiz's testified Ortiz was a religious man and that Ortiz will remain his friend. However, the man sat silent after the district attorney asked him if he would leave his 13-year-old daughter in Ortiz's care.

A 19-year-old Pecos man testified Ortiz was "like my best friend" and talked about how they went to Christian concerts together and hosted a Sunday morning Christian radio show.

Adrian Martinez said Ortiz was a happy person and advised him about life and faith in God. He said he didn't think the sin of raping and killing the child were any different from any other sin in God's eyes and "I think (Ortiz) still loves God."

He called Ortiz his "best friend in the world" and said Ortiz acted "like he was my age." He said he "loves him to death. He's a great guy."

BEIJING — An advertisement for jobs with room and board lured the 17 young men to the city. By the time police rescued them, they were battered and weak, the latest victims of Chinese "vampires."

Instead of work at a brewery for the equivalent of $35 a month, the young migrants to eastern Huaiyin city found themselves hostages of a gang. Its members forced them to sell their blood and beat and drugged them if they refused.

"Vampire gangs" are merely the most ruthless and organized patrons of a medical system so chronically short of blood it must offer cash for contributions.

Most of the clientele is not coerced, just desperate. Many are poor migrants, likely to turn to prostitution or drugs.

In that nexus of mobility, misery, crime and sex, Chinese and Western health experts fear the AIDS virus is seeping into the nation's blood supply.

No one knows how extensive the contamination is. But in a proposed plan for fighting AIDS, the Ministry of Health lists the blood-for-cash system, its own inadequate screening methods and reliance on migrant donors as the primary sources of an expected epidemic.

With money being offered, the donation system naturally attracts the down-and-out, including drug addicts, prostitutes and migrants — all high-risk groups for AIDS, an expert with the World Health Organization in Beijing said. He spoke on condition of anonymity because he works closely with the Chinese government and did not want to jeopardize the relationship.

So far China has avoided the fates of Asian neighbors Thailand and the Philippines, where prostitution and promiscuity have rapidly spread the AIDS virus. But those social ills, largely eradicated after the Communists took power in 1949, are re-emerging in China with economic reforms and the need for a more mobile labor force.

Publicly, the government claims only 1,774 Chinese citizens have been infected, including 64 with full-blown AIDS, since the first case in China was reported in 1985.

Health officials acknowledge that figure is wildly low. Qi Xiaoqiu, deputy director of the Health Ministry's Department of Disease Control, said as many as 90,000 Chinese may carry the AIDS virus. By 2000, they will number "several hundreds of thousands," he said.

The government initially scorned AIDS as a foreigners' disease. But it became concerned in the early 1990s with a surge in sexually transmitted diseases, a key indicator of sexual activity, Qi and other health experts said.

Since then, the government has conducted studies on AIDS, launched testing programs, ordered blood screening in large cities and prohibited people from giving blood outside their hometowns.

The State Council, China's Cabinet, is studying an ambitious five-year plan for fighting AIDS that the ministry drafted with WHO's help, the experts said.

Much of the plan, a copy of which was seen by The Associated Press, concerns stemming the spread of AIDS through sex — the vehicle that experts believe will drive the epidemic.

The main strategy focuses on AIDS counseling for high-risk populations: prostitutes, drug addicts, homosexuals, long-distance truck drivers, patients with sexually transmitted diseases and migrants, especially women.

The plan lists cleaning up the blood supply as the second priority.

Drug use is growing in Chinese cities and with it the fear that the AIDS virus may be spreading among needle-sharing addicts. But health officials believe that is a lesser threat.

"China is the first country to have policies and plans in place before an epidemic," said Emile Fox, a WHO specialist who has set up AIDS projects in Rwanda and other African countries.

Although the State Council has not yet approved the plan after 11 months of study, Qi said the government fully supports his department's efforts. The real problem comes from local governments, he said.

"In 1993, we requested that (blood) screening be done in the big cities," Qi said in an interview. "But it is expensive. Local officials say they don't have a (AIDS) problem so they don't do it. And, even if you can afford the reagents, they're hard to find."

China's blood shortage is rooted in traditional attitudes toward family and health. Many Chinese believe blood is a precious, irreplaceable gift from one's parents and donating it dishonors them and saps the body's vitality.

Depending on how much blood they give and where, blood sellers get anywhere from 50 yuan (about $6), a half-month's wages in rural areas, to about 600 yuan ($72), a month's pay at an urban factory.

Vampire gangs live off the blood trade by preying on migrants and keeping most if not all of the fee.

About 30 people fell victim to the gang in Huaiyin, 500 miles south of Beijing, before police broke the case in August, the official Xinhua Daily reported. Most had to sell three-fourths of a pint of blood a week, the Health Ministry's upper limit for one donation every three months.

One gang tricked Zhang Long, a peasant from outside Beijing's port city of Tianjin, to go to Hejian, 300 miles southwest, the Beijing Youth Daily said. Within a month he sold blood 17 times, once as much as 1 1/2 pints.

In large cities, where blood is supposed to be screened and only residents are supposed to donate, blood merchants trade with corrupt hospital workers. They cover their tracks with the help of residents who lend their identity cards.

Diehard Quebec separatists cling to hope in defeat

MONTREAL (AP) — Jokesters call it the "neverendum" — Quebec separatists lose one secession referendum, and swiftly call for another.

But for French-speaking separatists like Celine Gascon, it's no joke. At age 63, she yearns for independence from Canada before she dies.

"I'm quite positive it will happen," she said. "I just hope it will be in my lifetime."

She poured her energy into the recent referendum campaign, which the separatists narrowly lost last Monday, by 53,000 votes out of 4.8 million cast. Though disappointed, Mrs. Gascon is ready to try again — "in a couple of years."

Her passion, shared by hundreds of thousands of other French nationalists across Quebec, is incomprehensible to most Canadians in other provinces. They tend to view the separatists as whiners, exaggerating grievances while maneuvering for special political privileges.

To the separatists, privileges and grievances are no longer relevant. They don't want to be recognized as a "distinct society" within Canada. Nor do they seek to bargain any more for control over language policy X or social expenditure Y. They want a country of their own, to be run by themselves.

"We'll make mistakes, but they will be our mistakes," said Mrs. Gascon, a painter who lives in Montreal with her husband, Fernand, a retired engineer.

The nationalist crusade can be measured in decades, or even in centuries, as reflected in the Quebec license-plate slogan: "Je me souviens" — I remember.

French Quebeckers bitterly evoke their ancestors' defeat by the British in 1759 in a war that has little modern relevance to English-speaking Canada. They bristle over rebuffs and repression that occurred before their parents were born.

Lucien Bouchard, charismatic leader of the separatists' referendum campaign, urged voters to "think of your ancestors and your children" when casting their ballots.

ATTENTION FAMILY-OWNED BUSINESSES

Baylor University's Institute for Family Business presents

"Family Team Power"

by Drs. Peter and Susan Glaser

This dynamic, practical presentation specializes in family business team building and communication. You will learn how to:

- Establish communication groundrules to resolve conflict.
- Teach people how their behavior is a problem without making them feel (or be) defensive.
- Convert criticism from defensiveness and blame to insight and agreement.
- Apply a five-step problem solving approach that converts decisions to action and action to results.

Catholic bishops declare independence in '96 presidential election

■ Leaders welcome allies in fight against abortion, capital punishment, assault weapons, for welfare.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Leaders of the nation's largest church declared their independence Saturday in the 1996 presidential elections, welcoming allies in their fight against abortion but challenging conservatives on welfare reform, capital punishment and immigration.

U.S. Catholic bishops, whose flocks have been courted in recent months by the Catholic Alliance, an offshoot of the conservative Christian Coalition, declared they are unbeholden to any political party or interest group.

"We stand with the unborn and the undocumented when many politicians seem to be abandoning them. We defend children in the womb and on welfare. We oppose the violence of abortion and the vengeance of capital punishment. We oppose assault weapons in our streets and condoms in our schools," the bishops said in their quadrennial statement on political responsibility, released a year before the 1996 vote.

"Political Responsibility: Proclaiming the Gospel of Life, Protecting the Least Among Us, and Pursuing the Common Good" was approved by the 50-member Administrative Board of the United States Catholic Conference. The bishops have issued a statement on religion and politics before every presidential election since the mid-'70s.

THE CATHOLIC vote is considered particularly important in next year's election. Political observers say white Catholics, who have crossed over party lines to vote for Republican presidents but remained supportive of Democratic congressional candidates, have been a key constituency in maintaining split-party government in the United States.

In 1994, for the first time in more than a century and a half, a majority of white Catholics voted for a Republican Congress.

In 1996, Republicans can likely count on receiving a majority of white Protestant voters, and Democrats will likely win support again from black, Jewish and secular constituencies, political analysts say.

That leaves white Catholics.

"Whichever way they flow, to some extent, determines the election," said Alan Hertzke, a political science professor at the University of Oklahoma and the author of "Representing God in Washington." "They are the quintessential swing voters."

JOHN GREEN, a professor at the University of Akron and a leading analyst of religious voting patterns, said Democrats need the white Catholic vote in '96.

"If I were advising the Clinton White House, which I'm not, I'd say you guys need to pay attention to the Catholic vote. ... You really need that because you're going to have real trouble with white Protestants," Green said.

In their statement, the bishops said the church's role is not to endorse candidates, but to analyze issues for their social and moral dimensions and to participate in public policy debates.

At the local level, the bishops encourage churches to promote voter registration, nonpartisan candidate forums and questionnaires on issues from abortion to peace.

"The challenge for our church is to be principled without being ideological, to be political without being partisan, to be civil without being soft, to be involved without being used," the bishops said.

In setting out their agenda, the bishops distance themselves from both parties.

For example, the bishops said they would work with a variety of groups to defend the poor and seek greater economic justice, but would stand apart on the issue of abortion, which church leaders called the fundamental human rights issue facing the nation.

"WE ASK some of those who claim to stand for the weak why they protect the eggs of endangered species, but fail to defend the lives of unborn children," they said.

Similarly, the bishops said that while they stand with a variety of groups to defend the family, "we also insist that a test of public advocacy is how public policies touch the poor and the weak."

The bishops specifically oppose GOP proposals to place a family cap on welfare benefits for unwed mothers.

John Carr, secretary of the Catholic conference's Social Development and World Peace office, said the bishops felt their statement this year carried a greater sense of urgency because of the polarization and cynicism surrounding politics today.

"In the religious community, there are those who say, 'This is a swamp. Stay away.' This is really a call for engagement," Carr said. "This document is really a challenge to both parties."

Officials: Atmosphere among negotiators not all rosy

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Relations between Balkan leaders at the Bosnia peace talks are tense, and participants are not getting along nearly so well as U.S. organizers of the meeting are trying to portray, officials said Saturday.

"The atmosphere is very strained," a member of one of the delegations from the former Yugoslavia said on the fourth day of the meeting. "The delegates obviously want as little direct contact as possible."

The State Department, the sole source of authorized information on the talks, is painting a picture of Balkan delegates getting along so well they are playing soccer and bowling together this weekend.

Mediators conducting the talks at Wright-Patterson Air Force Base have been anxious to depict them as successful, and have already announced agreements between the Serbs and Croats not to fight over a slice of contested land, and between the Croats and Muslims over the return of hundreds of refugees.

Chief U.S. mediator Richard C. Holbrooke was host for a four-course filet mignon and salmon dinner Friday at the Wright-Patterson flight museum followed by an Air Force band playing Glenn Miller tunes.

State Department spokesman Nicholas Burns said Friday the leaders are getting to know each other even while taking up highly contentious issues such as human rights abuses and a proposed peace accord.

"The Serbs, Bosnians and Croats will be seeing movies, going swimming, bowling and having a soccer match," Burns said in describing the atmosphere at the sprawling air base.

But another Balkan official connected with the talks denied that any spirit of camaraderie had developed.

"It's not true," he said. "There have been no soccer matches or almost any other unofficial contacts." The officials spoke only on the condition they not be identified.

At least 200,000 people have died since war broke out in Bosnia-Herzegovina in 1992, when the state's Serb minority — aided and armed by neighboring Serbia — rebelled against Bosnia's secession from the disintegrating Yugoslav federation.

The bloodshed and numerous atrocities committed by all sides have created a legacy of hatred and deep distrust.

The mediators are shuttling between the Balkan delegations trying to reach agreement on a draft treaty that would constitute Bosnia as a union comprising of a Serb and a Muslim-Croat entity.

Alzheimer's disease seems to be silencing former president, Great Communicator

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Ronald Reagan cherished the yarns he would spin about Hollywood and his eight years in the White House, but Alzheimer's disease seems to be silencing the Great Communicator.

"He doesn't tell as many stories as he used to," daughter Maureen Reagan said. "We are very well aware of it. He's very well aware of it."

Only family, staff and close friends have seen the former president in the year since his heart-wrenching letter disclosing the diagnosis and the start of "the journey that will lead me into the sunset of my life."

That was Nov. 5, 1994, and there's been little since.

Reagan privately celebrated his 84th birthday in February with staff, which issued a photograph and a Reagan statement "on the 45th anniversary of my 39th birthday," updating the Reagan adage.

"He enjoys going to the office every day, playing golf and going to church," Nancy Reagan said this week in a written response to questions submitted to the Reagan office in Century City.

On Halloween, Reagan invited his staff to bring in their children for lunch. "He's doing fine," said Cathy Busch, his former press officer who was in town for the private get-together.

There were no reporters and no media photographers, but Reagan posed for personal snapshots with the dozens of costumed youngsters.

It's a glimpse of Reagan that few see: Post-presidency $50,000 speeches are no more; Secret Service agents drive him from his gated Bel-Air home to the office; worshipers at Bel-Air Presbyterian Church are handed fliers admonishing them to keep away from the former president.

"We're not hiding him," insists Reagan spokeswoman Joanne Drake.

The nation's 40th chief executive also enjoys occasional trips to his Santa Barbara County mountaintop ranch, where he still tools through pastures in his Jeep with the personalized license plate GIPPER.

Later this month, the Reagans will celebrate Thanksgiving at their Bel-Air home with family and, if the weather cooperates, "hang out at the pool," said Maureen Reagan.

"We love these moments," she said.

Alzheimer's is an irreversible neurological disorder that destroys the brain's memory cells. Besides memory loss, symptoms include impairment of judgment, disorientation and personality change.

Among diseases, it's the fourth leading cause of death for adults after heart disease, cancer and strokes. Some 4 million Americans have the neurological disorder, and about 100,000 die every year.

Reagan's announcement was invaluable in calling attention to the disease, said Edward Truschke, president of the Alzheimer's Association.

"Since his announcement came out, we had triple the amount of calls not only to our national office but to our local offices," Truschke said.

"People have finally realized that this very silent disease is more prevalent today because of our life expectancy," Maureen Reagan said. "Almost half the people who reach 85 have some degree of Alzheimer's."

The Reagans disclosed last week that they were lending their names to a "research institute without walls" dedicated to the study of Alzheimer's disease.

The Ronald and Nancy Reagan Research Institute will work with the Chicago-based nonprofit Alzheimer's Association to give research grants to scientists, drug companies, universities and medical centers working on the disease.

"We both agreed that lending our name to the institute was the right thing to do," Mrs. Reagan said. "We've been public people our entire married life, you know. If we can make a difference through our involvement, then we've simply got to do it."

November is National Alzheimer's Disease Month, a designation first signed into law 12 years ago — by President Reagan.

"Back then, Ronnie's goal was to raise the level of awareness of this cruel disease and make people realize they shouldn't be self-conscious or embarrassed," Mrs. Reagan said.

Pan Am 103 families seek closure, justice

WASHINGTON (AP) — Retired building contractor Frank Klein labored 13 weeks and used 270 sandstone bricks in building a memorial to the victims of Pan Am Flight 103. But it wasn't just another project: His daughter was among the passengers aboard the jet when it plunged to the ground at Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988.

Klein and his wife, Marie, were among the 75 to 100 people — family and friends of victims and residents of the Lockerbie area — who attended a second ceremony at Arlington National Cemetery on a sunny, blustery Saturday to remember those who died.

The ceremony was held a day after President Clinton dedicated the memorial, an 11-foot-high tapered circular tower known as a cairn — a traditional Scottish memorial.

After two months of discussion, five families decided to boycott Friday's ceremony because, some family members said, they don't believe the U.S. government has done enough to force Libya to extradite two Libyans indicted by the United States in the bombing.

"That was not an easy decision" to boycott Friday's ceremony, said Bert Ammerman, the unofficial speaker for the families. Ammerman lost his brother, Tom, in the crash. Ammerman's mother, Peg, attended Saturday's service as did members of four of the five families who boycotted Friday's event, he said.

Saturday's event gave family members an opportunity to bring emotional closure to the tragedy, some said.

"This is closure on the emotional side. But there is no closure on the truth," said Joe Horgan, whose 30-year-old brother-in-law, Michael Doyle, was on the plane.

The 270 sandstone bricks — one for each of the 259 people aboard the plane and 11 people on the ground who perished — were kept for five years in Horgan's North Wales, Pa., warehouse.

The five families are now pressing the U.S. government to release all evidence on the crash. They met privately with Attorney General Janet Reno on Friday, Ammerman said.

"If you can't get a trial, which is not a reality, then let's put forward the evidence. Let the force of moral shame come down, let people write books about it," said Aphrodite Tsairis, whose 20-year-old daughter, Alexia, died in the crash.

The heather, Susan Lowenstein said, grows wild on the Scottish countryside not far from where her son's body was found.

Others, likes the Kleins, who lost their 35-year-old daughter, Patricia, in the crash, had not boycotted Friday's service. "As long as the memorial stands, she and all the poor souls that perished will never be forgotten," said Marie Klein, who lives in Trenton, N.J.

Clinton threatens veto of budget with environmental cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Dirty water, toxic air and soiled beaches are the price Americans will pay for the Republicans' balanced budget, President Clinton charged Saturday as he repeated threats to veto the GOP bill.

"This budget will mean dirtier water, more smog, more illness and a diminished quality of life," Clinton said. "Protecting our environment ... can't be sacrificed to balance the budget."

GOP cuts in spending for environmental enforcement are the latest in a long list of reasons Clinton has given for promising to veto the budget bill, now being fine-tuned by a committee of House and Senate negotiators.

The president also has attacked the measure's $245 billion tax cut, which he charges would favor the wealthy. Provisions slashing anticipated Medicare spending by $270 billion and cutting education and other social programs also have fueled Clinton's veto threats.

"Under the cover of balancing the budget, the Republican Congress is going after the essential environmental protections that have guaranteed the health and safety of all Americans for a long time now, and I am determined to stop them," Clinton said in his weekly radio address.

"The pollution lobby knows it could never repeal half our environmental protections, so the Republican budget cuts the resources for environmental enforcement in half. Quite simply, it just pulls the cop from the environmental beat," Clinton said.

Responding for Republicans, Sen. Pete Domenici of New Mexico and Rep. John Kasich of Ohio defended the budget bills as essential to America's economic prosperity and criticized Clinton for not offering an alternative.

"He's had the opportunity to show leadership, but instead he's taken a pass," said Kasich, chairman of the House Budget Committee and a chief architect of the House bill.

"We're making the changes people all across the country have called for over the years, but Washington has failed to deliver," Kasich added.

Clinton charged that Congress' Republican leaders also were seeking loopholes that would effectively gut the Clean Air and Clean Water Acts, and "let more dangerous arsenic into our drinking water, allow raw sewage on our beaches."

"If Congress sends me a budget that guts environmental protection ... I will veto it," the president said.

Domenici said Republicans could not be swayed by veto threats. "We must continue to move forward" with balanced-budget legislation, he said.

Dems hope to plant comeback seeds

By John King
Associated Press

The Republican resurgence in the South will be put to the test Tuesday as voters in Mississippi and Kentucky elect governors and Virginia decides whether to become the first Southern state since Reconstruction with a GOP-controlled legislature.

The balance of power in Maine's legislature also is at stake in the off-year voting, which includes dozens of mayoral contests, including a close three-way race in San Francisco, and several ballot questions on legalized gambling.

In 1993, big GOP gains in gubernatorial and mayoral races foreshadowed last year's Republican rout that left the GOP with control of 30 governorships and both chambers of Congress for the first time in 40 years.

Democrats entered this year hoping to use the contests as a steppingstone to a 1996 comeback, but it was the Republicans who entered the final weekend poised for gains.

In Mississippi, GOP Gov. Kirk Fordice, already the state's first Republican chief executive since 1876, was favored to become Mississippi's first governor to win back-to-back terms this century.

Still, late polls showed Democratic challenger Dick Molpus, the secretary of state, within striking distance at the close of an aggressive campaign in which he has called for halving the state's 7 percent grocery sales tax. Fordice favors an income tax cut.

Republicans are counting on a strong Fordice win for coattails in legislative races long dominated in Mississippi, and across the South, by Democrats.

A nine-seat gain would put the Mississippi Senate in GOP hands. And while the state House is overwhelmingly Democratic, Republicans need to gain just nine seats for the power to sustain vetoes.

"It is going to be close," said state GOP Chairman Billy Powell.

Alice Skelton, executive director of the Mississippi Democratic Party, labeled Republicans "dreamers."

But Powell has a trump card if Republicans fall just short of their legislative goals: Several Democrats in each chamber are negotiating to switch parties, provided that Fordice wins re-election.

In Kentucky, Democrat Paul Patton and Republican Larry Forgy were locked in a close contest, although late polls showed Forgy leading among likely voters. With election officials predicting a record low turnout of 35 percent of eligible voters, Patton appeared sensitive to the abilities of conservative grassroots groups to put Republicans over the top, as was often the case in 1994.

"I don't want anyone messing with my right to have a gun," said Patton, the state's lieutenant governor, who has campaigned as a "different kind of Democrat."

With the Christian Coalition prepared to distribute a half-million voting guides in Kentucky this weekend, Patton told one audience Thursday that he "has the same basic rural values you have. I'm a Christian."

Republican Forgy campaigned on the theme that it was time to end a 24-year stretch of Democratic governors. And in a state where tobacco remains a major crop, he said a Republican governor was needed to defend against President Clinton's pledges to curtail smoking.

"Burley tobacco, in my judgment, has never had a more serious enemy than William Jefferson Clinton," Forgy said.

Overall, Clinton wasn't as big an issue this year as he was in 1994, or 1993 for that matter. He wasn't much of a presence, either: Not once did he campaign with any of this year's Democratic candidates, a reflection of his battered standing across the South.

In Virginia, Republicans took the governor's office in 1993 and hoped two years later to attain something virtually unthinkable in the South since the Civil War: control of both legislative chambers.

Republicans needed to gain three seats in the state Senate and four in the House of Delegates for control, and late polls showed the GOP with an edge in voter preference.

"A process that has been going on for a long time is reaching a critical point," said Merle Black, an Emory University political scientist who studies Southern politics. "We are near the end of the era for conservative Democrats in the South."

Other legislative contests of note were in Maine and New Jersey.

Republicans already control the Maine Senate, and a pair of special elections to fill vacancies will determine control of the state House. In New Jersey, Republicans are defending their 53-27 state Assembly majority, with all 80 seats on the ballot.

Most of the mayoral contests were low key. Incumbents were heavily favored for re-election in Baltimore, Philadelphia and Houston. In Charleston, S.C., Democratic Mayor Joseph P. Riley was heavily favored but hardly complacent in another state where Republicans have made big recent gains. "I'm running scared," he said.

FDA commissioner declares AIDS drugs most potent yet

WASHINGTON (AP) — A long-anticipated new generation of AIDS drugs called protease inhibitors promises the most powerful medicine yet to stall — but not cure — the deadly virus, the nation's top drug regulator says.

The remarks by FDA Commissioner David Kessler bode well for the first protease inhibitor, Hoffmann-La Roche's saquinavir, which this week undergoes scrutiny by Kessler's top advisers as they decide whether the drug should be sold.

Although he wouldn't discuss saquinavir specifically, Kessler told The Associated Press: "There is no question this is the most active class of agents we've seen so far against the AIDS virus."

The key is that protease inhibitors act on a different part of the human immunodeficiency virus' life cycle than currently available drugs. The future in AIDS therapy, Kessler declared, may be combining the two types of drugs "for a one-two punch."

"The real breakthrough here will come from combination therapy," he predicted.

Indeed, the Food and Drug Administration's scientific advisers may essentially sound a death knell for single-drug therapy as they consider whether saquinavir and an unrelated but strong antiviral, called 3TC, boost the potency of standard AIDS treatment. The panel will decide on Monday whether 3TC should be sold as a combination therapy with the older drug AZT, and on Tuesday whether saquinavir should get the same approval.

The two new drugs offer the potential to treat "AIDS and HIV as a chronic condition instead of a deadly disease," said Omar Perez, health director of the National Association of People With AIDS.

Currently, there are just four anti-HIV drugs: AZT, ddI, ddC and d4T. Called nucleoside analogs, they work by blocking a protein active in the early reproduction cycle of the virus, but the virus quickly develops resistance to their effect.

Protease inhibitors block an enzyme called protease that is vital to the final stages of HIV's replication. Three companies are developing the new drugs, but Roche beat the competition to the FDA — and the agency found saquinavir so promising that it rushed the matter to the advisory committee just two months after Roche applied.

Studies show saquinavir in combination with AZT boosts the amount of patients' vital immune cells, called CD4s, by an average of 70 cells per milliliter of blood, said Roche's chief scientist, Dr. Keith Bragman. The amount of virus in patients' blood plunged between 50 percent and 99 percent, and they experienced few of the side effects common with existing AIDS drugs, he said.

Also, HIV may not develop resistance to saquinavir as quickly, he said.

The drug 3TC is another nucleoside analog. When taken together with AZT, it, too, boosted CD4 levels by up to 70 cells, dropped patients' virus content 50 percent to 90 percent and had few side effects, according to manufacturer Glaxo Wellcome Inc. More significantly, 3TC delayed the virus' resistance to AZT.

Glaxo also found that 3TC worked just as well in children with AIDS, and will ask the FDA Monday to approve special strawberry-banana flavored drops for them.

But there are questions about these drugs — particularly, who should take them and when, and do they actually postpone death?

Nobody knows that yet because the FDA allows drugs for fatal diseases to be approved on the basis of quicker studies that track symptoms, not death, and no one has yet directly compared all the varying treatments.

Particularly with saquinavir, patients will face "a conundrum," said Dr. Ellen Cooper of the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

There is some evidence that patients who develop resistance to one protease inhibitor won't respond to any others, she noted. And patients absorb only 4 percent of saquinavir, despite taking a massive 1,800 milligrams a day, she said. Other protease inhibitors appear better, but they're about a year away.

'Dearly Departed' production is 'drop-dead funny', teacher says

■ Comedy to run Nov. 16, 17 and 18.

From Staff Report

"It's drop-dead funny." That's how Midland High School drama teacher Pam Keel describes the school's upcoming production of the comedy "Dearly Departed."

"Not since 'Steel Magnolias' has a more colorful and dysfunctional group of Southern eccentrics gathered below the Mason-Dixon line," Ms. Keel said.

The comedy gets rolling when one of the main characters drops dead in the first scene. The struggle to get him buried involves the entire cast, some of the characters who don't think kindly of the "dearly departed."

The comedy will be presented by the MHS Drama Department 8 p.m. Nov. 16, 17 and 18 in the school auditorium. Tickets are $3 for adults and $1 for students. For more information call 689-1120.

Cast members are: Zachery Pierce, Afton Hales, J.D. Norris, Ashley Lewis, Barry Poage, Brooke Bailey, Elizabeth Boyd, Jared Glover, Amy Gaume, Marissa Kilgore, Tommy Johnson, Maria Jacobsen, David Wade, Rachel Powers, Tommy Johnson, Sandy Wilson, and Roxanne Mitchell.

The production is under the direction of Ms. Keel, assisted by Damie Green, Perri Rock and Whitney Blischke.

The comedy was written by David Bottrell and Jessie Jones.

Gerardo and Masaka Mendez, with son Tavis, 12, display a portrait of Dennis, 14. Dennis' room has not been changed since his death in August of cancer.

Volunteer's friendship sustains teen in losing battle with cancer

By Jimmy Patterson
Staff Writer

For the most part, Dennis Mendez was a typical teen-ager.

Quiet, and not at all outgoing, he counted Jim Carey movies and Mortal Kombat video games as two things he liked to spend his time and money on.

What made Dennis different than most people his age was the cancer that ripped through his body quickly and unmercifully, abruptly ending his life on Aug. 23. He was 14.

There was a tender side of Dennis Mendez that came to the surface during his final days; a side that was brought out by someone who had been a stranger to him just a few months earlier.

That someone was Sammy Dudley, a young college student originally from the Houston suburb of Katy.

It was during one of several chemotherapy treatments at Cook Children's Medical Center in Fort Worth that Dennis first met Sammy, who enjoyed spending his time helping young patients at Cook's oncology wing.

After a couple of visits, a friendship between the two began to blossom. Unfortunately, it was a friendship that would be cut short by Dennis' cancer.

With just weeks remaining before his death, Dennis was given the opportunity to go anywhere he wanted. He had discussed with his mother, Masako, visiting her native Japan. Or he could have gone to Disney World, Six Flags or any number of attractions that most teen-agers Dennis' age would jump at the chance to visit.

But Dennis graciously declined the offer to travel in the final weeks of his life.

Instead of a trip, Dennis said, he

Law officer urges teamwork to help fight drugs, crime

By Ed Todd

Belinda Boone, Midland police officer and crime-fighter, has much in common with Chuck Norris, karate champion, crime-fighter and star of the CBS-TV series "Walker, Texas Ranger."

Norris

Their common mission, their ultimate goal, is to build the confidence and self-esteem of youngsters and to keep them off drugs, away from crime and out of harm's way.

"There is still hope, so don't give up," Ms. Boone said after she received the 200 Club's Officer-of-the-Year award Saturday night at Midland Center.

While acknowledging that the award "is a big honor," Ms. Boone reminded the several hundred law-enforcement officers and their spouses and guests at the 16th annual law-enforcement appreciation banquet that "we are part of a team" whose mission is to keep the children and other citizens safe and free from crime.

Norris, chairman of the "Kick Drugs Out of America" (KDOOA) Foundation, said "you have got to be preventive.

"You have got to figure out a way to keep these kids from getting to that level (of street gangs and crime) and get them involved (in positive programs and projects) and make them feel like they can achieve something in life."

What Ms. Boone does through the Midland Police Department's Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program in schools, Norris does through his inner-city KDOOA classes, in which his black-belt instructors teach karate to build students' confidence and self-esteem.

"Give these kids the self-worth, the strength in themselves, to realize that they can achieve," Norris said.

The bromide "just say no" and words devoid of action do nothing for youths who lack self-worth and who are tempted to get addicted to drugs and to join gangs just to have a sense of belonging, he said.

"Gangs are an avenue of belonging," Norris warned. "It's a bad way. It's a devastating way, as we all know.

"Our program is to develop that discipline, develop that respect, develop this self-esteem," Norris said. "Our whole goal is to pick them up and make them feel like they are worth something, because they don't feel like they are worth anything."

Norris, who has established his KDOOA classes in schools in Houston and

Living History Day recalls Indian Wars at historic fort

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Ed Todd/Reporter-Telegram
Re-enactors of U.S. Army infantrymen of the 1870s and 1880s Indian Wars' period marched in drills Saturday on the grounds of historic old Fort Stockton during Living History Day.

FORT STOCKTON — The old outpost, Fort Stockton, which was abandoned by federal troops in 1886 as the Indian Wars tapered off, was enlivened on Saturday during Living History Day on the grounds of the old fort near Comanche Springs.

Drill sergeants fired staccato commands to lonesome troops wearing heavy blue uniforms.

The report of gunfire, cannons or breechloading Springfield rifles, rang out.

Some soldiers, seemingly weary, stood around tents and campfires.

Richard Roome, fort historian, imagined the toil and trials of soldiers on the West Texas frontier in the late 1800s.

"Re-enacting gives you a unique perspective on what it must have been like to have been a soldier during the Indian Wars period," Roome, 54, said on the cool afternoon.

He had been handling a .45 caliber 1873 Springfield breechloading rifle.

Cavalrymen mounted their horses — the Jeeps, helicopters, and pursuit aircraft of their day.

"We sometimes forget how much change has happened in the past 100 years," Broome said. "And when you do this, you appreciate how much change has come about."

Broome is familiar with change. A historian by training, he "spent 30 years doing every odd job you could think off" — from working as a teacher to being a cashier in a gambling casino — before he

Display of proper respect to elders makes me feel ancient

As a child I was always taught to say "Mr.", "Mrs.", "sir", "ma'am", "please" and "thank you."

It is a way of showing proper respect for your elders, I was told. Besides, if you don't, it was duly noted, a spanking will surely follow.

Ott

So, at an early age I learned to show respect for my elders. It eventually got to the point where saying those words became second nature for me. They just rolled off the tongue, especially when my parents were within earshot.

In hindsight, I'm glad I was taught that lesson. Kids should show more respect for those who are older and wiser.

There's just one problem. I still want to be one of the kids who utters those polite words, and not the recipient of them. There is something about being called Mr. Ott that makes me feel ancient. I'm not Mr. Ott, I'm Gary. My dad is Mr. Ott.

It is a double blow to the ego, when the person calling you Mr. Whatever is not all that much younger than you, or at least you didn't think she was, and I emphasize the word "she."

It embarrasses me to no end to admit this, but here's what happened.

A couple of Saturdays ago I had a sudden urge to play basketball. Why, I don't know. But when an urge hits, you'd better strike fast. So off to the sporting goods store I went. I bounced (no pun intended) into the store and immediately spotted the basketballs over in the corner. I checked out three of them, and after quickly surmising that I would probably use it only two or three times, I shrewdly opted for the most expensive one.

Next, I bounded up — just thinking about basketball had magically put additional spring in my legs — to the checkout counter and tossed out my Mastercard. The saleswoman, who, granted, was just a tad young but terribly attractive, nonetheless, glanced at the name, looked at my face and said, "You're the guy who writes for the paper, aren't you?"

Quite understandably, I took that to be a blatant come-on. She obviously wanted my body. So I quickly launched into my best flirting routine, cutting loose with a series of delightfully witty one-liners, all the while trying to determine if she was wearing a ring on the third finger of her left hand.

She wasn't.

Things were looking good.

We were both laughing and bantering back and forth. I was even toying with the idea of inquiring about her phone number when she suddenly handed me my Mastercard and said, "Come back and see us real soon, Mr. Ott."

Thud.

With shoulders slumped, I made a slow U-turn and

CANCER: Kelsey Logan Angel Fund allows visit

(From 1B)

would rather Sammy come to his Midland home.

Being a 22-year-old, first-year medical student at Texas A&M, Sammy Dudley was not financially able to make the trip to Midland from Forth Worth, where he was attending summer school and volunteering at Cook. The fact that Sammy had recently wrecked his car made the trip to see Dennis all the more unlikely.

Enter Kelsey Logan.

Two-year-old Kelsey died on May 11 following her excruciating, yet courageous, 10-month battle with primitive neural ectodermal tumor.

In her memory, Kelsey's parents, Brad and Pam Logan, established the Kelsey Logan Angel Fund. It was created to help improve the quality of life for children who are stricken with cancer. Money raised from the fund goes strictly to cancer patients and, according to Ms. Logan, "to help children be more comfortable" as cancer tries to render these children helpless.

"If, for instance, Dad has a job but can't afford to leave and drive 200 miles to be with his child, the fund can go toward a plane ticket," Logan said earlier this year.

Because of the Kelsey Logan Angel Fund, which has benefited seven West Texas children in its first six months, Sammy was able to catch a flight to see Dennis one last time.

More importantly, one of Dennis' last wishes came true.

"We were first contacted by a mutual friend who knew Dennis had relapsed," Ms. Logan said. "She told us what a wonderful and heroic boy he was and asked if there was anything the Angel Fund could do for him.

"I think the Angel Fund helped Dennis mentally. He had a much better attitude and he had a good week when Sammy came to see him. He was happy."

Cancer first hit Dennis in the fall of 1993. On Nov. 29 of that year, Dennis and his parents, Masako and Gerardo Mendez, had their worst fears confirmed: Tests showed that their son's cancer was the unrelenting, painful neuroblastoma. If that news wasn't enough, the Mendez family was also told that the growth had already spread to Dennis' lungs, liver and bones.

It had been just three weeks earlier when Dennis first mentioned to his mother that he had some discomfort in his midsection.

Endless rounds of chemotherapy would follow for the next 18 months. Time and again Dennis endured the pain, the vomiting, the hair loss and the other side effects that came along with trying to reduce the monstrous growth.

When Dennis and Sammy first met at Cook, Ms. Mendez said the two liked each other almost immediately, despite their mutual shyness and the tenseness surrounding Dennis' condition.

"Both were very quiet types," Ms. Mendez said. "They don't talk to strangers at the beginning because they are both very shy. But they immediately felt something in common. I was glad Dennis found someone to talk to. Sammy would bring him comics. Sammy helped him build a model car that had been given to Dennis by a child-life specialist. Both of them became absorbed with working puzzles and models with each other."

The day Dennis first became a teen-ager, he lay in the bone marrow transplant unit at Cook. Through repeated visits to Cook and the dreaded BMTU, the Mendez family came to know they could count on Sammy.

"Volunteers usually come and go," Ms. Mendez said. "Dennis would go for chemo treatments to Fort Worth, stay awhile and then come home, and during that time we didn't make very many friends, but Sammy always stayed very good friends with Dennis. Especially when Dennis was in the bone marrow transplant unit. He came almost every day."

Sammy's maturity and desire to help others seems as though it will certainly someday transform him into the kind of doctor who willingly makes house calls. At least that's what Sammy said is his desire: To develop personal, comfortable, long-lasting relationships with his patients. Sammy's lack of years combined with his maturity and compassion are refreshing.

"When I met Dennis it was the first time I had ever met someone whose life was a daily struggle," Sammy said. "But he didn't make it seem like it was hard for him. He was very strong. Just to see someone go through that and still have so much hope and optimism is a huge inspiration.

During one of their many visits, Dennis told Sammy that one of the main reasons he was his friend was because, "I was just his friend. I never stuck him with a needle and I never took his blood pressure," Sammy said.

Shortly before Dennis' death, Ms. Mendez realized that despite his physical battle against cancer, her son continued to grow.

"He not only grew taller than me, but he matured a lot spiritually, intellectually and emotionally," Ms. Mendez said. "It's amazing how a 14-year-old could do that while he was dying."

The Kelsey Logan Angel Fund allowed for one last visit by Sammy. Those who know Dennis said his quality of life was improved in his final days because of Sammy's trip.

"I saw him just a couple of weeks before he died," Sammy said. "We had fun, but Dennis was extremely tired. I could tell it was a struggle for him to get up. We went to the mall, to the movies and out to eat with his mother. He was pretty active, but a lot of times we would just sit.

"I've had some losses in my life and I know what that's like, but I don't know what it's like to be afraid for your life. These children who are afraid for their lives, they just want to be like other children. They don't want to be different. By being a friend who can see them for who they are, I can help them realize what normalcy they have."

Gerardo Mendez, Dennis' father, said Dennis' death has created a "big, big hole for the family," which also includes Dennis little brother, Tavis, 12.

"Spiritually," Mendez said, "Dennis is still with us. And we're very grateful to Kelsey's parents and to the whole family. They went out of their way to help us and guide us through the bumpy road."

If you have a child with cancer or know of any child with cancer who could benefit from the Kelsey Logan Angel Fund, call 683-1944, or contact the Allison Cancer Center, the West Texas Cancer Center in Odessa, or the Hodges Cancer Center in Lubbock for information on how the fund can help a child.

HISTORY: Re-enactment features soldiers, storytellers, soapmaking latched onto the historian's role at old Fort Stockton.

The day's events, sponsored by the Friends of Historic Fort Stockton, featured a lineup of military and civilian activities, such as drills by infantrymen, cavalrymen and artillery units; wagon rides; sheep-dog demonstrations; cowboy poets and storytellers sharing their folk wisdom; Western singing, fiddling and lye soapmaking.

Cynthia Schneider, a Midlander who was donned in a pioneer woman's full dress and bonnet, did the latter.

She was cooking the lye-soap concoction in a cast-iron pot and stirring with a long, paddle-like plank.

"And this is how pioneer women made soap," said Mrs. Schneider, who obviously was working and enjoying not having to make soap the old-fashioned way more than once a year.

Cooking in the pot was 12 1/2 pounds of lard and two gallons of lye water.

"It takes about two hours to cook it down," she said. "It was the only source of soap that they had, so it was multi-purpose. They bathed with it, washed their dishes with it, scrubbed their hair with it. They used it as a form of medication when their children got hurt."

On Living History Day, Mrs. Schnieder and her family were making the lye soap "because we enjoy it.

"It makes me very thankful and blessed that I live in this century, because this is a hard way of life, very hard," she said.

Within earshot, a Kansas singer-storyteller, donned in deerskin pants and coat and buffalo-elk moccasins of a buffalo hunter, offered his viewpoint on "hard way of life."

"Well," said Mike "Blue Hawk" Adams, "it all depends on the way you look at it."

Man receives sentence for endangering child

FORT WORTH (AP) — A man whose 4-year-old son was killed during what prosecutors called a botched drug buy has been sentenced to one year in jail for endangering the child.

A Fort Worth jury convicted Bruce Alexander on Friday in connection with last year's shooting death of Jonathan Alexander. Alexander, 35, also was fined $1,000.

"I just hope the defendant uses this time in prison to rehabilitate himself to become a better father to his children," jury foreman David Purselley said. "It was a tragedy for the father, but it was a bigger tragedy for the son."

Alexander, who also has a 3-year-old daughter and 8-month-old son, had claimed he had gotten lost when he wound up on a motel parking lot and ran into a gang of carjackers.

Defense attorneys conceded, during closing arguments, that Alexander may have used bad judgment when he took his son to the motel, but said there was no evidence Alexander attempted to buy drugs that night.

Prosecutors reminded jurors that Alexander told police he had been trying to buy drugs at the motel.

The Hurst man will remain free on $25,000 bail pending his appeal of the verdict. The judge required he take periodic drug tests and abide by a curfew.

OTT: Father figure receives respect

departed.

"Life is so unfair," I said to no one in particular.

Once home, I called a friend, someone closer to my own age who I felt would lend a sympathetic ear.

I explained what had happened.

She listened intently to my story and then laughed derisively. "Makes perfect sense to me," she said. "After all, she was just showing you respect, like she would any father figure."

Friends can be so cruel.

Coleman announces he won't seek eighth term

EL PASO (AP) — U.S. Representative Ron Coleman announced Saturday he won't seek an eighth term in Congress, saying that he has already served longer than he'd planned.

In a gathering of family and friends at a local restaurant, Coleman launched into a scathing indictment of the Republican-dominated Congress, accusing GOP leaders of declaring war "on working families, seniors, the disabled, veterans and children."

Texas Republican chairman Tom Pauken wasn't immediately available for comment.

Coleman became the second Democratic representative this week to choose not to seek re-election. Rep. Anthony Beilenson of California said Wednesday he wouldn't run next November.

In all, 11 Democrats, including three in Texas, have announced plans to leave the House since the Republicans assumed a congressional majority a ye ir ago.

Rep. Jim Chapman of Sulphur Springs is leaving the House to vie for Sen. Phil Gramm's seat. Rep. Charlie Wilson of Lufkin also has announced he wouldn't seek re-election.

Coleman, Chapman and Wilson are members of the House Appropriations Committee, leaving three Texas vacancies on the Democratic side next year. Coleman took pride in the federal spending he brought to the El Paso area, citing on Saturday a number of multi-million dollar programs he supported for the region.

ARMED FORCES NEWS

Navy Hospitalman Recruit Leslie Hurd, daughter of Harry Hurd of Midland, recently completed U.S. Navy basic training at Recruit Training Command in Great Lakes, Ill.

During the eight-week program, Hurd completed a variety of training which included classroom study, practical hands-on instruction, and an emphasis on physical fitness. In particular, Hurd learned naval customs, first aid, fire fighting, water safety and survival, and a variety of safety skills required for working around ships and aircraft.

Hurd is a 1995 graduate of Rogers High School of Newport, R.I.

Navy Hospitalman Recruit Kelly Briceno, daughter of Patricia Rodriguez of Crane, recently graduated with honors from the Navy's Hospital Corps School.

During the course at Naval Hospital Corps School, Great Lakes, Ill., students receive instruction in the basic medical procedures used by hospital corpsmen who assist Navy doctors and nurses. The course also includes military health services.

The 1994 graduate of Crane High School joined the Navy in April.

Marine Gunnery Sgt. Victor Mosley, son of Jack and Patsy Mosley of Andrews, recently received the Marine Corps Good Conduct Medal.

The medal recognizes the service member's honest and faithful service during a three-year period. To earn it, he achieved and maintained a satisfactory level of performance and an unblemished conduct record for the entire period.

Mosley is assigned to Headquarters and Headquarters Squadron, Marine Corps Air Station in Yuma, Ariz.

He is a 1978 graduate of Andrews High School.

John Dunn II, son of John Dunn of Midland, enlisted in the Texas Army National Guard on Oct. 23.

He is scheduled to report to Fort Sill, Okla., on April 24 to undergo basic training. After completing basic training he will report to Fort Knox, Ky., and receive training as a Bradley Fighting Vehicle System Mechanic and upon completion he will be released from active duty and serve the remainder of his obligated service as a Mechanic with Company C, 2nd Battalion (mechanized) 142nd Infantry in Midland.

Dunn

Dunn received the new GI bill for reserve components upon his enlistment. He and his wife, Kim, and their daughter Dylan, are natives of Midland.

Marine Lance Cpl. Rhett McKeller, son of Red and Bonnie McKeller of Midland, recently completed basic training at Marine Corps Recruit Depot in San Diego and was promoted to his present rank.

McKeller successfully completed 11 weeks of training designed to challenge new Marine recruits both physically and mentally.

McKeller and fellow recruits began their training at 5 a.m., by running three miles and performing calisthenics. In addition to the physical conditioning program, McKeller spent numerous hours in classroom and field assignments, which included learning first aid, uniform regulations, combat water survival, marksmanship, hand-to-hand combat and assorted weapons training.

He and fellow recruits worked as a team to solve a number of tactical problems during the program. They performed close order drill and operated as a Marine small infantry unit in the field.

He and other recruits also received instruction on the Marine Corps' core values — honor, courage and commitment, and what the words mean in guiding personal and professional conduct.

McKeller is a 1991 graduate of Midland High School.

Report: Galveston city manager uses tax money for cruises

GALVESTON (AP) — Documents indicate that Galveston's city manager has an interesting way of showing others his appreciation. He takes them for a ride on a gambling ship.

The Galveston County Daily News revealed in Saturday editions that taxpayers have paid for two cruises — one in 1993 and another in 1994 — at a total cost of $4,880.

Doug Matthews says it's all a part of doing business. The 1993 cruise for 40 Texas State Guard officers and their spouses was a "token of appreciation" for the guard's plans to provide security at the city's 1994 Mardi Gras celebration, he said.

The cruise was aboard The Star of Galveston, a now-defunct casino boat owned by Gold Star Cruises.

According to a Matthews memo outlining the expense, those security services would have cost the city more than $380,000.

On the 1994 cruise were Matthews, his executive assistant and several several city staffers and their spouses.

Matthews was questioned about the expenditures during a closed-door City Council meeting Friday night that lasted nearly four hours.

"Some of these (expenditures) fall into the category of being questionable," Galveston Mayor Barbara Crews said.

"Others, we have been advised by our attorney, are clearly illegal under the state constitution."

Matthews said little after he emerged from the meeting. However he said he "didn't knowingly or willfully" do anything wrong.

The City Council must decide by Dec. 9 whether to renew Matthews' two-year contract.

The city of Galveston finished the 1994 financial year with an operating deficit of $200,000, according to the 1996 city budget.

Art professor to present slide show of current work

From Staff Reports

Marilyn Derwenskus, art professor at Ball State University in Muncie, Ind., will present a slide show of her current work, including a series from northern Italy, at 7 p.m. Thursday in the auditorium of the Allison Fine Arts Building on the Midland College campus.

The presentation, which is sponsored by the Midland Arts Association, is open to the public.

A catered Mexican dinner in Ms. Derwenskus' honor is planned for Friday. Cost is $8. Reservations need to be made by Wednesday. A short business meeting will follow dinner. For reservations call 570-1808.

"Our goal is to make surgical procedures as easy for our patients as possible."

Liz Wedel
Manager, Surgical Services

Many surgical procedures that used to require a week can now be done all in one day. Patients come in, get up on the bed, go to surgery on that bed, and come back to their rooms on that same bed.

Some procedures require an overnight stay and a period of convalescence. Whichever is necessary, Westwood Medical Center is organized for the comfort of our patients and their families.

The rooms are spacious, with TV, a comfortable chair for a family member, and oxygen and suction built into the wall. Each two private rooms share a bathroom.

The five operating rooms are fully equipped. Everything is organized for short trips to and from the patients' rooms. Assistance is available on a moment's notice.

If surgery is recommended, ask your doctor about Westwood Medical Center.

Nobel Prize proves media bias, congressman says

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite some Nobel Prize-winning work to the contrary, Congressman Tom DeLay remains unconvinced that some chemicals hurt the Earth's protective ozone layer.

The Sugar Land Republican, who earned a biology degree from the University of Houston and gained experience as the owner of a pest-control business, says he still believes that the international ban on chemicals to protect the ozone was "the result of a media scare."

"In sum, all I can say is it's ignorance, real ignorance," said Mario Molina, a professor at Massachussetts Institute of Technology and one of the three researchers whose work led to the international ban on chlorofluorocarbons, or CFCs.

DeLay, a leading critic of environmental regulation, described the Nobel Prize's home base of Sweden as "an extremist environmental country," and the award to Molina and two other scientists as "nothing more than the Nobel appeasement prize" linked to a Swedish political agenda.

Molina told the Houston Chronicle in Saturday editions he is more than willing to brief DeLay and other congressional leaders on the Nobel-honored findings about ozone depletion. The MIT professor insists the research was not politically motivated.

The research couldn't come at a worse time for DeLay, who has introduced a bill to lift the international ban on CFCs.

DeLay said he believes former Presidents Reagan and Bush, both Republicans, were "snookered" into supporting the phaseout of the chemicals.

Reagan signed the 1987 Montreal Protocol, an international agreement initiating the ban. Bush championed and then signed a Clean Air Act revision in 1990 to implement the ban in the United States.

William Reilly, who headed the Environmental Protection Agency during the Bush administration, said last week that he wonders if DeLay believes former British prime Minister Margaret Thatcher, was also tricked on the issue of CFCs and ozone depletion.

Thatcher, who received a chemistry degree from Britain's Oxford University and worked as a research chemist before entering politics, was "as passionate and emphatic on the ozone layer as I've seen her on anything," Reilly said.

CFCs, the main focus of the ozone-depletion ban, are used in refrigerators and air conditioners, and formerly were used as propellants in aerosol cans.

They, along with certain other chemicals, are being phased out because of concerns that thinning of the ozone layer is reducing its ability to block ultraviolet radiation from the sun and increasing the risks of skin cancers, cataracts and crop damage.

Judge sentences couple to prison for marijuana farm

LIBERTY HILL (AP) — A Williamson County couple who made big money on a small farm are on their way to federal prison for growing more than 6,000 marijuana plants.

U.S. District Judge Sam Sparks has sentenced Alan Lewis Zedler, 39, to 15 years in prison and his wife, Jo Ann Zedler, 41, to 10 years. The husband got more time because he told the judge the small arsenal of guns in their house belong to him, not his wife.

Both sentences are the mandatory minimum under federal law because of the amount of marijuana involved, officials said.

The couple had no criminal history, have been married for 20 years and were such good neighbors that Alan Zedler once walked two miles to help someone build a fence, the judge said.

But they also operated a large marijuana farm for at least five years, had no other income, kept a dozen guns at hand and refused to reduce their prison time by telling authorities anything about their distribution ring, prosecutors said.

The field was discovered by accident, records said, after a friend of Jo Ann Zedler's called authorities to report that Alan Zedler had assaulted his wife.

"It was a very sophisticated operation," said Williamson County Sheriff Ed Richards. "There was a heavy cedar patch at one side of the property, and they had gone in and cleared the cedar out of the center where you can't see into it. They hauled dirt in ... They set up rows and had water piped in there. They were very healthy plants."

Neither of the Zedlers made a statement during their Friday sentencing. They pleaded guilty in August and agreed to forfeit to the government their 10-acre homesite.

Town's residents brace for next storm season

By Pauline Arrillaga
Associated Press

PORT ISABEL — There's a saying among longtime residents of this sleepy coastal town nestled across the bay from South Padre Island: It's not if; it's when.

The sinister-sounding adage refers to a hurricane, that ferocious force of nature that miraculously swerved clear of the Texas coast through the second-busiest hurricane season in history.

As the season crawls to an end, residents are breathing easier — even feeling a bit charmed. But they know their luck can't last forever.

"You don't know when it's going to happen, but eventually it will," said Luis Buitureira, a salesman at the White Sands Marina bait and tackle shop who has lived here 30 years.

"I think we're darn lucky that we haven't gotten one. If it hits here, we're going to be wiped out," he said.

The last major hurricane to strike the Texas coast was Alicia in August 1983. It hit Galveston and Houston, killing 21 people and causing more than $1 billion in damage.

The lower coast has been more fortunate: It's been 15 years since a major hurricane hit here. That was Allen in August 1980, which left two people dead and more than $50 million in damage.

There have been some smaller hurricanes and tropical storms. But for most coastal residents, the Big One is the subject of fishermen's fables — more an incomprehensible notion than a dangerous reality.

"People are very frightened of things that they have immediate memories of," and most coastal residents have never experienced a severe hurricane, said Paul Cunningham, an attorney who has lived on South Padre Island for 15 years.

In fact, fewer than 1 million of the more than 4 million residents living along the Texas coast have experienced a direct hit from a major hurricane, according to statistics from the National Hurricane Center in Miami.

Therefore, said Cunningham, "You're going to have people who are not as prepared as they should be."

Emergency planners and hurricane specialists warn coastal residents to stay educated and prepared.

"Anywhere along the coast there's always the threat of a major hurricane — any year. Don't get complacent because you haven't seen one for a while," said Richard Pasch, a forecaster at the National Hurricane Center.

"Remember what happened here in Miami. We went 27 years with no major hurricanes and then Andrew hit. So it can happen," Pasch said.

Richard Hagan, a meteorologist for the National Weather Service in Brownsville, said there have been enough close calls and smaller storms to keep people on their toes.

Hurricane Opal headed toward the Texas coast in October before it turned northeast and hit Florida. Hurricane Roxanne, which ravaged Mexico's coast, came within hundreds of miles of Brownsville before heading back south.

Both storms caused some coastal flooding, prompting park authorities in Corpus Christi and South Padre Island to close facilities.

"We haven't been entirely without some threats to remind people that we're still subject to hurricanes," Hagan said, adding that news coverage of devastation elsewhere is a vivid reminder.

"Today, with the ability of the news to convey the pictures of damage that can happen, I don't think people are getting as complacent as they might have a couple of decades ago," he said. "I think they realize that rather than we're all right that we've just been fortunate."

Galveston City Manager Doug Matthews said memories of Alicia are enough to keep the island's 60,000 residents prepared.

"It was a pretty powerful and scary storm. The people in this area haven't forgotten that," Matthews said. "There are some new people in the area, but we try to get the message out to them."

The hurricane-free years have given coastal cities time to update emergency preparations, officials said.

Galveston tests and updates its hurricane drill every year, Matthews said. This year the city added hotels to the list of places warnings and other information are faxed in the event of a serious storm.

Grace Salinas, acting emergency management coordinator for Cameron County, said several changes are under way for the county's disaster plan.

Some ideas include better training for county staff members, a guide for business owners and a community awareness plan that would provide information on flood zoning areas.

Coastal building codes also are undergoing changes.

The Texas Catastrophe Property Insurance Association, known as Catpool, is revising its building codes in 14 coastal cities for the first time since the early '70s.

Catpool sells windstorm and hail insurance to property owners who live in high-risk areas.

Candidates favor new party ideas for Democrats

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democratic Party leaders were told Saturday that the party needs new funds and new ideas to help reverse election losses suffered in 1994.

Two candidates for party chairman said more attention to grassroots organizing and campaigning could help win back middle-class voters and donors.

"We must build the party from the bottom up, not the top down," said former state Sen. Hector Uribe of Brownsville.

"If we rebuild, they will come — come back to the Democratic Party ... As chairman, I can take the party closer to the people and bring the people closer to the party," Uribe said.

Houston lawyer Bill White said a well-organized 1996 campaign would retain Democratic control of the state Legislature and Texas congressional delegation while repudiating what he called a "radical fringe" in the GOP.

He said Republican cuts in Medicare, education and other key programs, combined with efforts to take over school boards and "edit textbooks," frightens many Americans.

"Last year was the high point of the philosophy of fear and greed and division," said White, the former No. 2 official in the U.S. Energy Department.

"There are influences in their party that are not ready for prime time. ... These are not mainstream ideas," he said.

Added Uribe, "Traditional Democrats will come back because of what Republicans are doing to them in Washington."

The 62-member State Democratic Executive Committee, which heard from the candidates Saturday, is scheduled to vote Dec. 9 on a successor to 15-year chairman Bob Slagle of Sherman.

White has received the backing of the top five statewide elected Democrats and enjoys a reputation as a major party fund-raiser. He collected some $2 million for President Clinton's 1992 campaign.

A third candidate for chairman, Texas Southern University professor Carroll Robinson, withdrew after an impassioned speech in which he urged Democrats not to abandon the poor while trying to woo middle-class voters.

"We have to care and reach out to the unemployed and the under employed," he said. "We are solution-oriented, with a conscience."

The SDEC also adopted resolutions calling for voters in Tuesday's election to approve three constitutional amendments — Propositions 1, 5 and 10.

Proposition 10, endorsed on a 28-27 vote, would abolish the state Treasury and merge its functions into the state comptroller's office.

Proposition 1 would allow up to $300 million in bonds to finance more student loans, while Proposition 5 would allow another $500 million in bonds to finance low-interest home loans for Texas veterans. Both were endorsed unanimously.

HONOR: Norris favors support system to fight gang pressure

(From 1B)

Dallas, hopes to expand the program throughout Texas and the nation, particularly since "gang activities are getting worse and worse. They can't build enough prisons to put them all in there."

The pressures in inner-city schools to join gangs are virtually insurmountable, he said.

"If you don't have a support system, there's no way to fight them," Norris said. "That's why gangs are so prevalent today. With our kids today, if they are not athletically or academically inclined, where do they go?"

His program is especially designed for those students who may not be strong academically or athletically.

"PE (physical education) is a joke today in these schools," Norris said. "They don't do anything (other than) kick a ball around or something.

"Let's make that a productive time for the kids to be involved in something."

In awarding the Officer-of-the-Year award, 200 Club co-founder Clayton Williams Jr. saluted Ms. Boone as a "role model, not only to her students, but to her peers as well.

"She is a confident, dedicated, enthusiastic officer who has remained true to her convictions, despite pressures," Williams said. "The love she has for children is evident in the self-sacrificing way she treats them, not only in the setting of the classroom, but wherever she encounters them."

The 200 Club — which also honored slain Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Troy Hogue of Big Spring — was founded by Williams, William B. Blakemore II, Bill Roden and the late Aaron Giebel to honor lawmen and to assist city, county, state and federal law-enforcement officers and their families in Midland County.

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Paintings shown

"Painted Wheels: Cars and Art" will be on view through Nov. 30 at Gallery 1114.

The show features the work of three painters: Travis Beckhan of Midland and Polly Jackson and Jane Shea, both of Santa Fe, N.M.

Ms. Shea paints small, pristine car portraits. She exhibits in Santa Fe and will be in a show in New York this month.

Ms. Jackson, who grew up in Midland, captures the character of post-war classics she finds around New Mexico. She is having shows in Austin and Alpine this year.

Beckham uses cars in paintings of atmosphere and expression.

His work was featured in a one-man show in McCormick Gallery at Midland College last autumn.

Gallery 1114 is a co-operative center for contemporary art located at 1114 N. Big Spring St. New gallery hours are 1 to 5 p.m. Friday through Sunday.

Needlework shown

Now on display at the Museum of the Southwest, the exhibition "Needlework: Blending Art & Craft" spans the history of stitchery and looks at needlework in its various forms.

This exhibition, which will remain through Nov. 30, features needlepoint, cross-stitch, smocking, knitting, crocheting, tatting and quilting. Traditional work is seen as well as contemporary pieces.

For more information call the museum, 683-2882. Hours are 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. Tuesday through Saturday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday.

Library hosts show

The Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave., is hosting a showing of works by the "Southwest Impressionists" through Nov. 17.

Artists whose works are being shown and are for sale include Mary Rasmussen, Charles N. Pruitt, Doris Spires and Don L. Parks. The four formed the Southwest Impressionists nine years ago. Each specializes in plein air painting — painting outdoors on location.

For more information call 682-5785.

ODESSSA — Grammy Award winning entertainer Julio Iglesias performs Nov., 28 at Ector County Coliseum.

To date, Iglesias has recorded 69 albums and sales have exceeded 200,000 million. The popular entertainer has been awarded more than 1,500 gold and platinum records worldwide.

Tickets are on sale at Ector County Coliseum. His West Texas performance is sponsored by K-LITE 100.3, KWES 9 TV, The Odessa American and KMRK.

Bazaar scheduled

IRAAN — The annual Arts and Crafts Bazaar here will be from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Nov. 10 in the Iraan Community Center.

This annual event is sponsored by the members of the Ladies Christian service of the Iraan Christian Church.

Reservations for tables are now being accepted at a cost of $15 per table. The event is open to clubs, individuals and organizations in the surrounding cities.

For more information call Mary Rogers, 1-915-639-2417. Reservations may be mailed to Rose Mary Rogers, Ladies Christian Service, P.O. Box 204, Iraan, 79744.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Conference held

Best selling author and well-known speaker Steve Farrar will conduct his Men's Conference entitled "Equipping Men for Spiritual Leadership" Nov. 17-18 at the Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

The conference will be held that Friday from 7 to 10 p.m. and that Saturday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. Registration is $50 after Nov. 3. Lunch that Saturday will be provided by Chick-Fil-A.

Farrar, who is president of Men's Leadership Ministries, Dallas, also will be the keynote speaker for the sixth annual Community Thanksgiving Celebration at 7 p.m. Nov. 19 at Chaparral Center, Midland College campus. He holds an earned doctorate from Dallas Theological Seminary and is a featured speaker at Promise-Keeper events across the country.

For more information call 694-8836 or 1-800-Men-Lead.

George to speak

Renowned author and host of "People to People" broadcast, Bob George, will be speaking at the KENT Radio banquet set for 6 p.m. Nov. 10.

Suggested donation is $7. The evening will be held at the Prescott's Cafe, next to Water Wonderland. For more information call KENT Radio, 1-915-332-5791. A love offering will be taken.

Exercise offered

The First United Methodist Church has started offering senior exercise classes from 11 to 11:30 a.m. Monday, Wednesday and Friday.

Exercise with Evelyn, sponsored by Nurses Unlimited, is offered free to church members and non-members alike.

Mother devotes life to only son missing since Vietnam War

By George Esper
Associated Press

Emphysema, arthritis and cataracts have tortured her body, but have not dampened her resolve.

ARLINGTON — Twenty years after the end of the Vietnam War, Jane Duke Gaylor bears its emotional wounds, just as surely as if a bullet had pierced her heart.

She writes to her son faithfully in care of the Vietnamese authorities, even though Charles Duke is among the more than 2,000 men listed as missing and the U.S. government has told her it is unlikely he survived.

"Oh, My God! Every time I try to write to you, I start and then I have to stop for a while. I am not able to see for the tears," she said in a May 1994 letter marking the 24th anniversary of his disappearance.

"Somehow, I have the feeling you are still alive. I want to hold you, hug you, kiss you and tell you I love you my dear only son."

Duke, a former Air Force aircraft mechanic working as a civilian for the U.S. government in Vietnam, disappeared after riding a motorcycle out of the central highlands town of Pleiku on May 30, 1970. He was 24 years old.

"I have a gut feeling he's alive," Mrs. Gaylor says. "I don't have that same feeling that I'll ever see him again."

Charles Duke and a fellow civilian mechanic, Kit Mark, were last seen as they left Pleiku on their motorcycles to visit a mountain site seven miles away. Information available at the time indicated Viet Cong activity in the region that day, but a helicopter search turned up no traces of the missing men.

In a recent interview, Bill Bell, former head of the U.S. Office for POW-MIA Affairs in Hanoi, said the area around Pleiku had the highest incidence of Americans being lured to capture of any region in Vietnam.

"Most of the cases of guys being lured, they were killed right on the spot," said Bell, who runs the National Veterans Research Center in Fort Smith, Ark., which conducts research on POWs and MIAs.

It was Bell's Senate testimony in November 1991, while still head of the MIA office in Hanoi, that convinced Mrs. Gaylor more than ever that her government was covering something up.

Bell testified that, based on investigations in Vietnam, at least 10 Americans were left behind during Operation Homecoming, the release of nearly 600 American POWs in 1973. Both President Nixon and Vietnamese authorities announced then that all U.S. POWs had been freed.

In closed door testimony, Bell further identified Charles Duke as one of those left behind, based on composite sketches drawn from descriptions provided by a Vietnamese defector who claimed to have seen three Americans in Hanoi as late as 1979.

That sighting was partially confirmed, Bell said, when Marine Pvt. Robert Garwood, a defector, returned to the United States in 1979. According to Bell, when the Vietnamese defector saw Garwood, he said, "There's one of the three guys I saw in Hanoi."

Bell said he then compared the composite sketches of the other two men to photographs of all of the Americans still missing.

"And I came up with one of them as being Jane Gaylor's son," he said.

The U.S. government says it has no evidence Vietnam is holding any live American POWs, and the Vietnamese government steadfastly denies it.

But a State Department source leaked to Mrs. Gaylor the closed-door testimony and now, in the twilight of her years, the 74-year-old retired telephone company worker is giving up her own life and much of her savings to keep a vigil for her only child.

"I don't have anything else to live for," she says, tears filling her eyes.

The only close relatives Jane Duke Gaylor has left are a sister in Kansas and a niece in Ohio. Except for snapshots, mementos of her son are few — a shoeshine kit and some draftsman's tools.

Even the letters he wrote home from Vietnam are gone, blown away from a box that broke open in the back of a pickup truck.

"If I don't work on this, I'm wasting my time, and I don't have a lot of time," she says.

Emphysema, arthritis and cataracts have tortured her body, but have not dampened her resolve. Her steady companions at her home in Ravenna, Ohio, are an oxygen machine and a wheelchair — along with a telephone, a photocopier and her trusty Marlboro Lights. The fax machine that had been her lifeline was stolen by burglars when she lived in Texas; she has not been able to afford a replacement.

But despite her failing health and dwindling finances, Mrs. Gaylor flew halfway around the world to Vietnam on Christmas Day 1993 — a trip that cost her more than $6,000 — bearing gifts and cards for her son, and for other men missing in action, from their families.

"Because I think they're alive over there," she says. "I know they are."

Last Christmas, unable to return, she sent her son a holiday message as she has for a quarter-century, this one reflecting on what kind of mother she had been.

"Dear Son," it said, "did I tell you to laugh — to dance — to sing — to be as happy as possible. ... Did I tell you the challenge of being a man ... The need to achieve and the need to be strong — and the need to be tender.

"Always keep love at the center, letting it be the star by which you set your sails. If I told you or taught you some of these things, I am humbly grateful."

Mrs. Gaylor can be just as feisty as she is gentle, prodding and pleading her case in stacks of letters, memos and faxes sent to presidents, senators and generals.

She was among the relatives of MIAs who confronted President Bush during a meeting three years ago. Her photo was splashed across newspapers across the country, showing her holding up a photo of Charles.

"No more lies! Tell the truth! Release the files!" she chanted along with other MIA relatives.

A year ago, Mrs. Gaylor chained herself to the White House fence in the wheelchair she sometimes uses. She was arrested, jailed briefly and fined $50.

In the years since her son was declared missing, she has moved from Houston to El Dorado, Kan., to Arlington, Texas, and, in late summer, to Ravenna, in her quest for family and friends who will listen to her.

"People don't understand. They don't know the truth. I couldn't talk about my son," she says.

"The people in the church, when I would talk about it, they would say, 'Jane, you've got to get on with your life. You're ruining your health.' If I didn't try to find my son, I would really ruin my health. If they were in my shoes ... and that was their son, they would do the same thing I'm doing."

But even though the passing years have lengthened the odds against survival and discouraged so many others, time has not diminished Mrs. Gaylor's love, or loss, or resolve, or hope.

Even though she moved from Houston five years ago, she maintains a directory listing there dating back to her first marriage — Charles and Jane Duke — since that's where she was living when her son disappeared. She fears he would not know her by the name she took on by marrying Garland Gaylor, who died in 1990.

Justice Department probes possibility of anti-competitive practices by utilities

Associated Press

The Justice Department is investigating whether the state's top two utilities and a non-profit group are involved in anti-competitive practices.

The agency has sent out a list of 33 questions to Houston Lighting & Power, Texas Electric Utilities Co. of Dallas and the Electric Reliability Council of Texas, also know as ERCOT.

The investigation concerns how the two utilities operate their transmission facilities, which carry electricity from power plants to the distribution lines that run to homes and businesses.

The agency is also seeking information from ERCOT, which oversees most of the state's electric grid.

The three on Friday acknowledged receiving the "civil investigation demands."

"We're not really sure that we understand what they're getting at," said Cindy Conte, a HL&P spokeswoman. "They are very broad questions, and a lot of information is requested."

ERCOT's executive director, Tom Sweatman, was also surprised by the Justice Department's interest.

"I don't have a clue as to who might be behind it, other than the Justice Department itself, and I have no idea what their reasoning or motivation is," he said. "The questions are very broad and don't seem to really pinpoint anything."

Kathleen Miller, a spokeswoman for Texas Utilities, also known as TU Electric, declined comment on the probe.

The questions ask the three whether they have policies that prevent other companies that generate power from using their transmission lines.

Bowe knocks Holyfield down three times in win

By Ed Schuyler Jr.
AP Boxing Writer

LAS VEGAS — Evander Holyfield predicted a knockout. It was Riddick Bowe who got one Saturday night.

Bowe struggled up from a smashing knockdown early in the sixth round and won when he knocked Holyfield down twice in the eighth round.

Referee Joe Cortez halted the fight with Holyfield on his knees near the ropes and his cornermen coming through the ropes to his rescue.

Holyfield was one point ahead on all three officials' cards after seven rounds.

"This fight will be better than both the fights we had before," Holyfield had said.

It certainly was just as exciting as the first two between these two. And it was shorter.

Early in the eighth round, they went at it toe to toe and then Holyfield went face down from a tremendous right to the head. The 32-year-old Holyfield struggled up at 9 and appeared out on his feet.

Cortez took a long look at Holyfield and then motioned for action to resume. Then Bowe ended it with two rights to the head that dropped Holyfield to his knees.

Cortez immediately signaled the action was over at 58 seconds of the round.

Early in the sixth round it appeared Holyfield might fulfill his prediction.

At 23 seconds of the round, Holyfield landed a tremendous left hook followed by a right that put the 6-foot-5, 240-pound Bowe down for the first time in 39 professional fights.

Bowe struggled up at about 5 and obviously was in real trouble. As Bowe staggered across the ring to a neutral corner, Holyfield pursued him and landed two or three more punches to the head.

Then, almost unbelievably, Holyfield backed off while Bowe shot out a few tentative jabs. Finally, Bowe came out of the corner and outjabbed Holyfield for the rest of the round.

It seemed that Holyfield had just run out of gas.

Asked why he couldn't finish off Bowe, Holyfield said, "I was bone tired."

"Man, I love you. Man, I love you," Bowe said to Holyfield immediately after the rubber match.

Longhorns fade Raider red, 48-7

■ Texas Tech suffers its worst conference loss since 1978 in thrashing from No. 13 Texas.

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — With two weeks to prepare, Texas coach John Mackovic figured the 13th-ranked Longhorns could move the ball on No. 23 Texas Tech's blitz-heavy defense.

But in no way did he think the Longhorns would roll up 479 yards, lead 28-0 at halftime and cruise to a 48-7 victory on Saturday night.

"I never dreamed the game was going to go this way," Mackovic said. "I thought we might get into a low-scoring game with them. We told our offense we had to go out and score some points. We did a lot of little things tonight that paid off."

Texas (6-1-1, 3-0 Southwest Conference), destroyed by defensive pressure in losses to the Red Raiders the past two years, scored on four of its first seven possessions to take a 28-0 halftime lead. Three of the scoring drives took less than two minutes.

"I heard them talking a lot about how they beat us the last couple years," said Texas running back Shon Mitchell, who led the Longhorns with 11 carries for 105 yards, including TD runs of 32, 6 and 36 yards. "It's extra special to have your best game at home in front of your friends, family and the great Texas fans."

Texas Tech (5-3, 2-2) lived up to its blitzing reputation, but the Red Raiders were kept completely off balance by the Longhorns, who mixed the pass with the running of Mitchell and Ricky Williams in rolling up 304 first-half yards. Williams ran 15 times for 113 yards.

"I don't know what to say," Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes said. "We got beat by a team that obviously totally outplayed us and outprepared us. It's my fault. They dominated us for 60 minutes."

"I was surprised how well they handled everything," said Tech's Zach Thomas, one of the top linebackers in the nation. "We had a good plan today. I don't know what happened."

The Longhorns, the only unbeaten team in the SWC and idle last week after beating Virginia 17-16 on Oct. 21, notched their biggest victory since whipping Southern Methodist 52-3 in 1990.

Tech suffered its worst conference loss since Arkansas posted a 49-7 victory against the Red Raiders in 1978.

In front of their first sellout crowd this year, the Longhorns took the life out of Tech in the first quarter by going 55 yards for a score in 30 seconds and 73 yards for another TD in 1:27. A six-play, 95-yard drive that put Texas up 28-0 took just 1:52.

"This is a great victory for us on national television and in front of a sellout

Miami's ground attack loosens Bear defense

■ Hurrican tailback Danyell Ferguson runs for three touchdowns to lead his team to a 35-14 rout.

By John Pacenti
Associated Press Writer

MIAMI — Call it the kiss of the spider.

After missing a couple days of practice after being bitten by a spider this week, tailback Danyell Ferguson came back and scored three touchdowns to lead Miami to 35-14 victory over Baylor on Saturday.

The victory was the Hurricanes' fourth consecutive and their 13th straight against a Southwest Conference opponent. The win kept bowl hopes alive for Miami (5-3) in front of an announced crowd of 32,655 at the Orange Bowl.

Ferguson, who had to have the spider bite lanced, had touchdown runs of 1, 10 and 39 yards and rushed for a career-high 143 yards on 18 carries. It was also offered some redemption for the tailback, who lost his starting job briefly this season when Miami struggled.

"This just boosts our confidence through the roof," Ferguson said.

Lady Chaparrals turn close game into rout

■ Midland College has a 103.3 points-per-game average after winning its second game of the year.

Midland College turned on the defense after a sluggish start and in a matter of minutes turned a close game into a 99-55 blowout over San Jacinto Junior College in women's junior college basketball Saturday night at Chaparral Center.

Guards Kellina Bradshaw and Roslynn Dunn were the catalysts in two big defensive plays for the Lady Chaparrals midway through the first half. On those two plays, MC, which held a slim 11-10 lead after the first four minutes against the Lady Gators, took a 20-12 lead and never looked back.

"Kellina, both last night and tonight, came in and really sparked our defense," said MC coach Ron Jones, whose team improved to 3-0 with its third-straight double-digit victory. "When that happens, the rest of the people on the team see that and they are inspired."

Timing deserts athletes at careers' end

Now you will not swell the rout
Of lads that wore their honors out,
Runners whom renown outran ...
— A. E. Housman

Merrick

Timing is everything. And no one knows it better than professional athletes. So why do so many players' careers outlast their abilities? Why can't they admit to losing the edge? Why can't they hang it up, walk away?

Like Satchel Paige — afraid to look back because something may be gaining on them — they play on, blind to the erosion of their own talents.

Maybe it's easy for ballplayers to deny the inevitability of their decline. Easier to believe they've still got the old moves, the old skills. To chalk up poor performances to bad breaks, bad seasons. To think next year will be better.

For the fans, it's a painful vigil. Because the fan knows.

"Here's my knuckle ball," said former pitcher Bill "Spaceman" Lee. "I was saving it for when I got old. I was going to pitch until I was 70."

They hang on.

The lure of another million-dollar contract is seductive. So are press clippings and public adulation. Players begin believing stories of their own prowess. Buy into their own legends.

How many times does a player not quite get around on a fastball before he knows? When does a basketball player understand he can't cut to the right anymore? Or a football player comprehend he's hitting the hole too late? A golfer admit his putting nerves are shot?

Self deception can't last forever; sports have their own bottom line. All those averages, percentages, records. It's hard to disguise mediocrity while examining statistics.

Last week Ryne Sandberg said he's ready to lace up the spikes, pull on his glove and range behind second base again for the Cubs. After a 16 1/2-month retirement.

"I was a baseball player. I'm still a baseball player," he said.

Is he right? Jim Palmer tried to come back and couldn't. But Kirk Gibson pulled it off, having a few more productive seasons with the Tigers. We'll find out.

When Sandberg retired, he was batting .238 with five homers, 24 RBIs and two steals in 57 games. He also was in a 1-for-28 slump.

Fans want their memories intact. We shove aside nagging remembrances of Willie Mays' last year — we're uncomfortable with them. We prefer thinking about the "Say Hey" Kid in his prime. Of the running, over-the-shoulder catches.

But when players hang on too long, unpleasant memories cast shadows across legends.

Who can forget an over-the-hill Johnny Unitas stumbling back to lob yet another incomplete pass? Johnny U, one of the best NFL quarterbacks — his image forever tarnished because he didn't know when to quit.

Bob Cousy admits he dogged it during his last few years with the Celtics. In the clutch, he made sure someone else had the ball.

At 40, Early Wynn vowed they'd have to come out to the mound and tear the uniform off him to get him to quit. Three years later, he was gone.

What makes them stay? Why must the fans know before the players?

Sometimes we're proved wrong. Not often, but it happens. By the George Blandas and the Gordie Howes, out-

Faith Christian beats Trinity

El Paso Faith Christian defeated Midland Trinity 70-25 Saturday in a TAPPS Six-Man District 1 football game held at Trinity.

Trinity fell to 4-5 for the season and to 1-2 in league play with the loss. Trinity will host Abilene Christian at 2 p.m. Saturday to finish the season.

Trinity's Michael Gensert threw touchdown passes of 12 yards to Amer Baluch and 25 yards to L.T. Burns and he also hit Burns with an extra point pass.

Daniel Scott scored on touchdown runs of 45 and 25 yards for Trinity.

Lee frosh top Bowie

Eric Netherlin threw for 220 yards and two touchdowns and ran for two more as Lee Freshman White ended its season Saturday with a 27-18 win over Odessa Bowie.

Netherlin threw touchdown passes to Matt Winston (75 yards) and Scott Worley (30 yards) as White finished with a record of 7-2. Netherlin's touchdown runs were from two and one yards out respectively.

Worley rushed for 65 yards on just three carries as White totaled 364 yards on offense. A.J. Beaty had a fumble recovery to lead on outstanding defensive effort.

7th grade volleyball

Abell White defeated defending champion Alamo White, 4-13, 15-9, 15-11, Saturday to win the seventh grade City Championship Volleyball Tournament.

Shandi Neitherlin, Lindsey Johnson and Shamera Bryson led Abell while Shelly Sledge scored nine points for Alamo, including six straight. Shanna Cox was also outstanding for Alamo.

San Jacinto White took consolation honors with a victory over Alamo Gray.

Abell Blue took seventh place with a 15-4, 15-8 win over San Jacinto Gold as Jenny Maury scored 14 points on 11 aces and Lindsey Brown had five points on four aces.

In other tournament action on Friday, Cox served seven points in a row in the second game and six in the third game as Alamo White rallied to beat Abell Maroon, 13-15, 15-7, 15-1. Kelly Dumas served 12 points for Alamo while Sarah Buchanan had six.

Also on Friday, Natasha Taylor, Steffanie Vernon and Bonnie Miller combined for 30 digs on defense to lead Abell Blue to a 16-14, 15-11 win over San Jacinto Green. Vernon also served six points while Amanda Parish added five.

Baptist Temple takes Cornerstone

SAN ANGELO — Midland Baptist Temple defeated Cornerstone Christian Academy 15-9, 15-12 on Friday to finish the fall volleyball season with a record of 15-3. The team gets back into action in January with the beginning of WTCA winter league play.

Kapp captures diving crown

ABILENE — Midland High's Jena Kapp won first place Saturday in the Abilene Diving Invitational held at the Red Bud YMCA.

Valarie Thomas of MHS placed fourth while Midland Lee's Dani Morris was fifth and MHS' Christy Doss was 11th.

In the boys division, Lee's Jason Haney placed fifth.

The swimmers and divers of both schools will be at the San Angelo Invitational on Nov. 17-18.

Alamo blanks Bowie, 37-0

Alamo finished its season at 7-2 Saturday in the Midland-Odessa eighth grade football conference with a 37-0 win over Odessa Bowie. Tremaine Howell had 203 yards rushing and two touchdowns, giving him 1,022 yards rushing for the season and 20 touchdowns.

Other TDs came from T.J. Chandler, 10 yards, Justin Gonzales, 14 yards and Curtis Prater, 20 yards. Josh Perez had five extra points. Defensively, Shane Barnett and Chandler had fumble recoveries and Perez had an interception. Russell Dominguez had a tackle for a safety.

East Texas State comes back to beat Angelo State with 1:06 left

Texas Roundup

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Jason Smith's 12-yard touchdown run with 1:06 remaining gave East Texas State a 24-21 comeback victory over Angelo State Saturday.

Angelo State (6-2-1, 4-1-1 Lone Star Conference) had vaulted to a 21-7 lead early in the third quarter on two Erik Hartman scoring passes, but it was Hartman's ETSU counterpart who made the difference.

Cole Cayce directed East Texas (7-3, 5-1) to a late third quarter touchdown on a 29-yard pass to Daryl Anderson to begin the comeback.

Cayce guided ETSU onto the scoreboard again in early in the fourth, a 41-yard field goal by David Dell. It was his 17th field goal of the season to set an LSC record.

UNLV 34, North Texas 24

LAS VEGAS — Jared Brown threw three touchdown passes and Tony Burton rushed for 177 yards and a TD as UNLV beat North Texas 34-24 Saturday to snap a six-game losing streak.

The Rebels won despite Josh Gulley of North Texas passing for 422 yards and two touchdowns.

Burton, who carried 29 times, scored on a 50-yard run in the first quarter — the first time UNLV (2-7) has scored in the opening period this season. That gave the Rebels a 7-3 lead and they led the rest of the way.

Shannon Wilson gained 126 yards on 19 carries for the Rebels, who wound up with 313 yards rushing and 512 yards in total offense.

SMU's late two-point try backfires in TCU win

FORT WORTH — Rick LaFavers intercepted Southern Methodist's two-point conversion attempt with 2:17 left and returned it 99 yards to give Texas Christian the points, preserving a 19-16 victory Saturday.

SMU got within 17-16 on a 1-yard touchdown run by freshman quarterback Derek Canine. The Mustangs, who had blown a 10-0 lead, opted for a two-point conversion try to make their comeback complete.

Canine threw to his right, aiming for Vaughn Dickerson, but LeFavers stepped in front, caught it and turned upfield. SMU pursuers never came within five yards as LeFavers sped up the left sideline for TCU's first defensive two-point conversion since the rule went into effect in 1990.

The return gave TCU (6-2, 3-1 Southwest Conference) its fifth victory in six games and kept the Horned Frogs alive in the race for the title in this, the final year of the SWC.

For SMU (1-8, 0-5), the failure to convert meant an eighth straight defeat and kept the Mustangs winless in their last 18 SWC games.

LeFavers' big play was the third game-saver by the TCU defense. The first was his recovery of a goal-line fumble by Canine in the first quarter and a sack of Canine that produced another fumble early in the fourth quarter.

Offensively, the big plays for TCU were touchdown passes of 39 and 35 yards from Max Knake to John Washington. The scores came within a four-minute span of the second quarter, erasing SMU's 10-0 lead.

The Horned Frogs also cashed in on their final drive of the first half, getting a 28-yard field goal from Michael Reeder as time expired.

Although TCU scored on its final three possessions of the second quarter, it couldn't get anything going in the second half, allowing SMU to stay close.

The Horned Frogs offense missed star running back Andre Davis, who earlier in the week was suspended by the NCAA for having dealt with an agent. This was the third of four games he'll miss.

TEXAS: Horns get six sacks, four turnovers crowd," said Mackovic, whose team still faces Houston, Texas Christian, Baylor and Texas A&M. "But we know a lot of tough competition is in front of us."

Texas' defense, criticized for giving up 384 yards per game — including 210 on the ground — before Saturday's contest, played its best game of the season.

The Longhorns had six sacks, forced four turnovers, held Tech to 128 yards in the first half and scored on a 33-yard fumble return by Robert Crenshaw on the second play of the third quarter.

"We tend to start out slowly," said Texas defensive end Tony Brackens, who was in Tech's backfield all night. "We wanted to make a statement to them and to ourselves that we can go out and control a game from the opening snap."

Tech, led by Byron Hanspard with 24 carries for 109 yards, didn't cross the Texas 20 through three quarters and didn't score until Sone Cavazos hit Jerod Fiebiger with a 2-yard TD pass with 6:37 left.

"They dominated us on the defensive side of the ball," Tech quarterback Zebbie Lethridge said.

A botched snap ruined a 50-yard field goal attempt by Tech in the second quarter and a fake field goal on fourth-and-13 from the Texas 30 later in that quarter was stuffed by Brackens.

Brown, who finished 10-of-23 for 174 yards and ran six times for 34 yards, had first-half TD passes of 15 yards to Justin McLemore and 2 yards to Steve Bradley.

Lethridge had thrown an SWC record 211 passes without an interception before Texas' Chris Carter picked one off midway through the first quarter.

The sophomore quarterback, who finished 12-of-23 for 123 yards, was picked off again by Bryant Westbrook midway through the third quarter.

Phil Dawson added field goals of 52 and 32 yards for Texas.

The Longhorns' Mike Adams set the school record for receiving yards, catching two passes for 69 yards for a career total of 1,889, surpassing Tony Jones' mark of 1,882 set from 1986-89.

BAYLOR: Bears dominate possession in first half of 35-14 loss to Hurricanes the pass.

"We felt we could run the football," Davis said. "They obviously expected us to throw."

Ferguson's touchdown at 2:24 in the second quarter gave Miami a 14-7 lead against a Baylor team that had stymied the Hurricanes with its swarming quick defense. The Bears (5-3) came into the game ranked fourth in overall defense in the country.

The Bears dominated possession in the first half, 19:40 to 10:20, but couldn't take advantage of numerous Hurricanes' mistakes. Dropped interceptions, a fumble recovery that amounted to nothing, a drive into Hurricanes territory negated on fourth-and-four at the 30 were all missed opportunities that allowed Miami to regain composure and then the momentum.

Things were going Baylor's way when Michael Benjamin intercepted a pass by Miami quarterback Ryan Clement pass that appeared to be caught by receiver Magic Benton early in the first quarter, giving the Bears possession on their own 48.

The Bears then drove down the field, aided by two Miami penalties on third-and-short sit-punched it in from the two-yards out as Baylor took a 7-0 lead with 5:05 left in the first quarter.

Douglas rushed for 54 yards on the 23 carries.

Miami tied the game 7-7 with 10:49 left in the second quarter when Carlos Jones picked off Bears quarterback Jeff Watson and ran 34 yards for the score.

"I thought we were playing well, doing what we wanted to do until we threw the interception," said Baylor coach Chuck Reedy. "That gave them momentum the rest of the half."

Jones was another Hurricane looking for redemption after finally getting his starting job back from a freshman.

"I felt it was time for me to come up with a big play," Jones said.

Clement then came back after being benched for a series and engineered a seven-play, 69-yard drive that ended with Ferguson's 10-yard jolt up the middle for the 14-7 lead.

It was all Miami in the second half. In the opening drive of the third quarter, Clement (11-of-17 for 109 yards) set up the Hurricanes' next score with a 36-yard pass to Derrick Harris to Baylor's 33. Ferguson capped off the drive with a 1-yard run to give Miami a 21-7 lead with 9:15 left in the third.

Kevin Rhea replaced Watson in the third, but did no better against Miami. After a three-and-out series by the Bears, Miami came right back when Ferguson swept right and ran for 39 yards to put the game out of Baylor's reach 28-7.

The last time a Hurricane had rushed for three touchdowns was last season when James Stewart did it against Division I-AA Georgia Southern.

Ferguson also set up Miami's fifth touchdown with a 48-yard run to the Bears' 16. Dyral McMillan ran it in the end zone the next play in a 2-play, 40 second drive for a 35-7 lead.

Jimenez shoots 69 for two-shot lead over Daly

BRASELTON, Ga. (AP) — Miguel Angel Jimenez shot a 3-under-par 69 Saturday and held a two-shot lead over John Daly, Fuzzy Zoeller and Craig Stadler after two rounds of the $1.9 million Sarazen World Open Championship.

Jimenez feels he deserves to win this year's tournament after what happened to him in last year's final round.

"I think this course has to give me something," Jimenez said after going eight under par with one round to play in the rain-delayed event at The Legends at Chateau Elan. "You never know. There are a couple of players at six under who are good players. You never know. Whatever happens, happens."

Last year, Jimenez, a native of Spain who qualified for this tournament with a victory at the 1994 Dutch Open, was two shots off the lead on Sunday. On the 2nd hole, Tom Sieckmann, playing in the same group, hit out of turn just as Jimenez was in his backswing. Shocked, Jimenez stopped his swing but never regained his composure, falling to a 77 and a tie for 10th.

"This is the best position you can be in," Jimenez said.

Zoeller, who began the day tied for the lead at five under, quickly fell to two under after a bogey at

No. 11 (his second hole of the day) and a double-bogey at the par-3 15th. He rebounded with a birdie at No. 3 and an eagle at the par-5 5th to move to six under. Zoeller, nursing an injured back that will require surgery, finished his round as darkness fell.

Daly followed an opening 70 with a four-birdie, no-bogey 68, while Stadler, who birdied his final hole, had a second-round 70.

Kapalua International

KAPALUA, Hawaii — Jim Furyk shot a 2-under-par 71 Saturday to hold off three challengers — Steve Pate, Hale Irwin and Jim McGovern — and hold on to a two-stroke lead after three rounds of the Kapalua International.

Furyk, who started the day with a three-stroke lead over Davis Love III and Russ Cochran, appeared to be on the verge of putting away the 72-hole tournament early by opening up a five-stroke lead after nine holes.

Starting on the back nine at the 7,263-yard Plantation Course on the Island of Maui, Furyk continued his steady play with two birdies and no bogeys. Over the first two rounds, he birdied 15 of 36 holes.

But he managed to complete the final nine holes in even par to reach the 54-hole mark at 16-under 201.

While Love and Cochran faded as the wind began to kick up over the resort, Pate, Irwin and McGovern began their serious run at Furyk and the $180,000 first prize.

Pate made the day's biggest charge with a 63 that featured eight birdies and vaulted him from a five-way tie for 23rd to the three-man group at 203.

Irwin and McGovern both had third-round 68s.

Barry Lane was alone at 204 after a 69, one stroke ahead of Tom Lehman (69), Ben Crenshaw (71) and Peter Jacobsen (71). Love and Cochran both had 73s and were tied at 206 with Brian Claar, who had a 66.

Emerald Coast Classic

MILTON, Fla. — Bruce Devlin and Isao Aoki had 3-under-par 68s Saturday and held a one-stroke lead in the rain-shortened Emerald Coast Classic, the newest event on the Senior PGA Tour.

Raymond Floyd, who electrified the crowd with a hole-in-one, was in a group of four one stroke behind the leaders going into Sunday's second and final round.

Tied with Floyd at two under were Snell Lancaster, DeWitt Weaver and Ed Sneed. Five others finished the round two strokes behind the leaders.

Sunny skies, brisk winds and chilly temperatures in the high 40s when the field teed off replaced thunderstorms that had dumped more than 14 inches of rain on The Moors Golf Club over the previous three days.

The rain forced cancellation of Friday's first round.

MC: San Jacinto comes off 73-53 loss to Odessa College

rebound by Midland High product Julie Chancellor, a sophomore guard who led MC in rebounding with 10. The former Lady Dawg then flipped the ball out to the speedy 5-foot-3 freshman Bradshaw, who drove the length of the court for a layup to put MC up 15-12 with 12:24 remaining in the first half.

Bradshaw's stifling defense on Lady Gators' point guard Andi Ynostrosa on the very next trip down the court forced Ynostrosa to make a poor decision on a pass, which fell right into the waiting hands of Dunn. The sophomore from Plainview was then so far out in front of the San Jacinto defense that she only had to take a few steps before an easy layup put the Lady Chaps up by four with 11:39 to play.

Bradshaw then pulled in a long rebound on a missed three-point shot by San Jacinto and flipped it out to sophomore guard Shannon Jordan, who hit her first three-pointer of the night with 11:13 to play, giving MC a 20-12 lead before the Lady Gators could catch their breath.

San Jacinto, which lost to Odessa College 73-53 in the opening round of the Odessa Downtown Lioness Classic on Thursday and fell to Southwest Christian College 88-64 on Friday, dropped to 1-2 for the season.

After two games in two days to open the season, the Lady Chaps were a little sluggish in the early going as their 14 turnovers in the first half would indicate. By Monday, when the Lady Chaps host Tyler Junior College, they will have played four games in five days.

"I don't think we were very inspired tonight," said sophomore point guard Amber Follis, who scored 12 points for her best game since going down with a knee injury near the end of last season. "I don't know if it has anything to do with fatigue or maybe we just weren't mentally in it.

"We tend to go in spurts anyway unless we play team defense," said Follis. "When we play team defense, we can stop them (opponents) and our offense then takes control."

After the spark from Bradshaw, the Lady Chaps seemed to pick up their defensive efforts. And with that extra effort, MC forced San Jacinto to commit two times the amount of turnovers it gave up in the first half. The Lady Gators had 10 turnovers in the first half but were plagued with 19 in the second and the Lady Chaps turned most of those miscues into easy layups.

"We picked it up in the second half and really played much better," said Jones.

Even though the Lady Chaps started slow, freshman post Fatou Cisse' kept them in it with a 12-point performance in the first half alone. The 6-0 freshman from Senegal, West Africa, finished with a game-high 20 points — the second time in three games she has led the team in scoring.

She seemed inspired by the better defense as she scored eight points in a row for the Lady Chaps in a span of about two minutes late in the first half, boosting the MC lead to 43-29 by halftime.

Freshman Ndiasse Ndiaye, a 6-1 post from Senegal, was the second leading scorer with 17. Sophomore Stacie Johnson had nine while Bradshaw and Jordan had eight points each.

Bradshaw also led the team with seven assists while Follis and Jordan had four each. Brandy Wright, a sophomore from Greenwood, added three.

Sophomore post Malyssa Thorngren, who did a good job in the paint of getting open but did not have any luck on the roll, pulled down nine rebounds while Ndaiye had seven.

Northwestern rolls; Spartans surprise No. 7 Michigan

The Associated Press

EVANSTON, Ill. — Northwestern matched its highest victory total since 1948 on Saturday and the Wildcats showed those who didn't already believe that they are one of the nation's top teams.

Darnell Autry gained 100 yards for a 10th straight game, set a school season rushing record and scored three touchdowns as the sixth-ranked Wildcats beat No. 12 Penn State 21-10.

The Wildcats' defense, led by Pat Fitzgerald, was just as important on a frigid evening with the game-time temperature at 30 degrees at soldout Dyche Stadium.

The Wildcats had five sacks and held Penn State to three second-half points after the Nittany Lions twice moved inside the 10 and threatened to come back from a 14-0 deficit.

Michigan State 28, No. 7 Michigan 25

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Tony Banks passed for a career-high 318 yards and a 25-yard go-ahead touchdown to Nigea Carter with 1:24 remaining, lifting Michigan State to an upset of Michigan.

Banks, who completed 26 of 34 without an interception, hit 8 of 10 for 94 yards in the winning drive, taking the Spartans (5-3-1, 3-2-1 Big Ten) 88 yards in 11 plays. Michigan (7-2, 3-2) had regained the lead for the third time on a 22-yard pass from Brian Griese to Mercury Hayes with 3:38 remaining. Griese completed 16 of 26 for 140 yards with no interceptions.

No. 1 Nebraska 73, Iowa St. 14

LINCOLN, Neb. — Ahman Green ran for 176 yards and scored four touchdowns to lead Nebraska past Iowa State, stealing the spotlight from once-suspended Husker Lawrence Phillips.

Nebraska (9-0, 5-0 Big Eight) scored on its first 10 possessions and led 20-0 before Iowa State quarterback Todd Bandhauer's 15-yard scoring pass to Ed Williams in the second quarter.

Nebraska then scored 46 straight points. The 73 points were the most ever by Nebraska against Iowa State (3-6, 1-4).

■ Top 25 Roundup

Green scored on runs of 17, 26 and 64 yards. The freshman also had a 6-yard scoring catch early in the first quarter to cap a drive that included Phillips' first action since Sept. 9.

No. 3 Florida 58, Northern Illinois 20

GAINESVILLE, Fla. — With Heisman Trophy candidate Danny Wuerffel watching from the sideline, Eric Kresser passed for 458 yards, a Florida record, and six touchdowns as the Gators crushed Northern Illinois 58-20.

Wuerffel was given the day off against the 49-point underdog Huskies, and Kresser took advantage of a rare opportunity to break Wuerffel's 2-year-old school mark of 449 yards through the air.

No. 4 Ohio State 49, Minnesota 21

MINNEAPOLIS — Bobby Hoying threw for 287 yards and two touchdowns and also ran for a score, helping Ohio State overcome the loss of record-breaking receiver Terry Glenn with a 49-21 victory Saturday over Minnesota.

The Buckeyes trailed 14-7 before scoring 28 points in the second quarter en route to their first 9-0 start since 1979, when they finished 11-1.

Eddie George had 23 carries for 178 yards and three touchdowns, including an 87-yard sprint that gave Ohio State a 42-14 lead on the first play of the second half. It was the longest rushing touchdown of the senior's career and the third-longest in Buckeyes history.

No. 5 Tennessee 42, Southern Mississippi 0

KNOXVILLE, Tenn. — No. 5 Tennessee forced five turnovers, three setting up touchdowns, and Ray Austin blocked a punt for a TD as the Volunteers beat Southern Mississippi 42-0 Saturday.

The Vols (8-1) were lackluster on offense, with usually reliable receivers dropping nine catchable balls. But with the field position afforded by two interceptions and a fumble recovery deep in Southern Miss territory, the offense didn't have to be at its best.

Northwestern's William Bennett (20) pulls down Penn State's Stephen Pitts in the No. 6 Wildcats' 21-10 win over the No. 12 Nittany Lions Saturday in Evanston, Ill.

No. 8 Notre Dame 35, Navy 17

SOUTH BEND, Ind. — Notre Dame backup Tom Krug, pressed into service after Ron Powlus broke his arm, threw for two touchdowns and rallied the Irish to a victory over Navy.

Powlus, who missed his freshman season with a broken collarbone, is out for the rest of the year after breaking his left humerus, the bone that leads from the elbow to the shoulder. Powlus was taken to a local hospital, and surgery was a possibility.

No. 9 Kansas State 49, No. 25 Oklahoma 10

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Kansas State didn't just beat Oklahoma for the third time in a row. The ninth-ranked Wildcats handed the Sooners their worst loss in half a century.

First-year Oklahoma coach Howard Schnellenberger called Sturday's 49-10 defeat "one of the most embarrassing things I've ever been associated with. And I'm sure the entire football team feels the same way."

It was the most one-sided loss for any Oklahoma team since 1945 when Oklahoma State won 47-0.

No. 10 Colorado 45, Oklahoma St. 32

STILLWATER, Okla. — Give John Hessler time to throw and he'll hurt you. Oklahoma State found that out Saturday.

Hessler, a sophomore, took advantage of good protection from his offensive line to throw five touchdown passes and lead No. 10 Colorado to a 45-32 victory.

The five touchdowns tied the school record Hessler set in his first start, which came earlier this season against Oklahoma. He completed 22 of 31 for 301 yards, didn't throw an interception and was sacked just once.

No. 11 Kansas 42, Missouri 23

LAWRENCE, Kan. — Mark Williams threw a 49-yard touchdown pass to Isaac Byrd and Chris Jones returned an interception for a touchdown as Kansas beat Missouri in the 104th renewal of the heated Big Eight rivalry.

Missouri (2-7 overall, 0-5 Big Eight) led 17-14 at the half, but a badly thrown ball by freshman Corby Jones landed directly in Chris Jones' hands, and the linebacker scored untouched from 32 yards with about 13 minutes to play in the third quarter.

No. 14 USC 31, Stanford 30

LOS ANGELES — Keyshawn Johnson caught an 8-yard touchdown pass from Kyle Wachholtz with 39 seconds remaining to lift Southern California past Stanford and within one victory of a Rose Bowl berth.

The Trojans, who rallied from a 16-0 deficit, need only to win at Oregon State next Saturday or over No. 22 UCLA on Nov. 18 to become the Pacific-10 Conference's Rose Bowl representative.

USC (7-1-1, 5-0-1 Pac-10) will have a better overall record than No. 15 Washington (5-3-1, 4-1-1), which lost to No. 19 Oregon 24-22 Saturday, if the teams tie for first place.

No. 19 Oregon 24, No. 15 Washington 22

SEATTLE — Washington's John Wales missed two field-goal attempts in the final 3:02 as No. 19 Oregon held on for a 24-22 victory over the 15th-ranked Huskies on Saturday.

Beating the Huskies for the first time since 1980 in Seattle and for the second year in a row, the Ducks (7-2 overall, 4-2 Pac-10) took a 24-0 halftime lead, sparked by Pat Johnson's 89-yard TD return of the opening kickoff.

No. 16 Alabama 10, LSU 3

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Dennis Riddle rushed for 174 yards and the game-winning touchdown as Alabama beat LSU in an old-style Southern defensive battle.

The Crimson Tide (7-2, 4-2 Southeastern Conference) took over at the LSU 22 with 13:05 left following an interception by Deshea Townsend. After both teams had driven deep into the opponent's territory numerous times without a touchdown, Riddle sauntered in from the 2 on an option play for the only touchdown.

No. 18 Arkansas 26, Mississippi St. 21

LITTLE ROCK, Ark. — Madre Hill's 1-yard run provided the deciding points and Arkansas withstood a late challenge to beat Mississippi State to clinch a spot in the Southeastern Conference championship game.

Hill's 1-yard touchdown dive ended a penalty-peppered drive and put Arkansas (7-2, 6-1 SEC) in front 24-14 midway through the third quarter. The Razorbacks made four first downs on the 67-yard drive, three by penalties against Mississippi State (3-6, 1-5).

Virginia Tech 31, No. 20 Syracuse 7

BLACKSBURG, Va. — With the Big East Conference lead and a major bowl bid at stake, Jim Druckenmiller threw for three touchdowns and Ken Oxendine ran for 113 yards to lead Virginia Tech to a 31-7 victory over No. 20 Syracuse on Saturday.

Virginia Tech (7-2, 5-1) won its seventh consecutive game for the first time since 1967 and must only beat Temple (1-8) to ensure at least a tie for the conference championship.

No. 21 Auburn 38, NE Louisiana 14

AUBURN, Ala. (AP) — Despite injuring a knee on his fourth carry of the game, Stephen Davis rushed for 111 yards and two touchdowns Saturday as No. 21 Auburn beat Northeast Louisiana 38-14.

Davis left the game with a strained left knee during Auburn's second possession, limping off the field between two trainers. But doctors determined the knee wasn't too loose, and he returned midway through the third quarter for touchdown runs of 17 and 21 yards.

Arizona St. 37, No. 22 UCLA 33

TEMPE, Ariz. — Jake Plummer threw two touchdown passes to key a 27-point second half as Arizona State rallied to beat UCLA, denying Bruins coach Terry Donahue a record 98th Pacific-10 Conference victory.

The Sun Devils (5-4 overall, 3-3 Pac-10), who trailed 27-10 at halftime, took a 34-27 lead on Plummer's 27-yard touchdown pass to freshman Kenny Mitchell 1:18 into the fourth quarter.

Voters should OK all amendments

Were it not for the fact that the proposed amendment to abolish the office of State Treasurer was on the ballot for the Nov. 7 Constitutional Amendment Election, the outlook for voter turnout would be appalling. With the amendment being touted by State Treasurer Martha Whitehead as a cost savings, the outlook is merely grim.

In fact, Secretary of State Antonio O. "Tony" Garza Jr. has speculated that voter turnout statewide may not exceed 10 percent. If that prediction proves accurate it will be tragic for the Lone Star State, but voter turnout is traditionally extremely low in elections that don't involve major personalities or issues — and the upcoming amendment proposals don't offer much spice.

The amendment involving the State Treasurer's office — Number 10 on the ballot — should be approved by voters. The estimated savings to be realized by combining the treasurer's office with the State Comptroller's office alone justifies the move.

The proposal is forward-thinking, sound economically and the trend in modern government. Voters should cast their ballots "for" Amendment No. 10.

The Reporter-Telegram also recommends voters cast their ballots "for" the other 13 proposed amendments, which are briefly detailed below. After careful consideration of the proposals, we believe they all would be in the best interest of Texans.

Most importantly, though, voters should go to the polls Tuesday and cast their ballots so they can have a say in the future of this state.

Proposition 1 would provide $300 million in bonding authority for loans to college students for a number of years.

Proposition 2 would exempt from ad valorem taxation property of the Masons, a charitable, benevolent organization.

Proposition 3 would replace the Veterans Land Board with the Texas Agricultural Finance Authority and permit the transfer of $200 million from the farm and ranch program into the Texas agricultural fund to benefit programs to further develop the farm and ranch industry in Texas.

Proposition 4 would permit a homeowner to use his homestead as security to obtain a loan to buy out a shared interest in the home or to pay off a federal tax lien on the property.

Proposition 5 would authorize issuance of an additional $500 million in bonds for housing loans to veterans.

Proposition 6 would permit the surviving spouse of senior citizens to receive the same homestead exemption they had received while their spouse was alive, provided they are at least 55 years of age.

Proposition 7 would reduce the amount of general obligation bonds authorized earlier in connection with the superconducting super collider from $500 million to $250 million.

Proposition 8 would abolish the constable's offices in Mills, Reagan and Roberts counties.

Proposition 9 would end a screening process formerly approved by the Texas Growth Fund, to object to the policy of apartheid in South Africa and Namibia.

Proposition 10 would abolish the state treasurer's office.

Proposition 11 would permit small landowners whose land is rated for agricultural usage to use their land for wildlife management without losing their tax advantage.

Proposition 12 would exempt low-producing energy properties and mineral interests from taxation if the cost of collecting the taxes exceeds the amount to be collected.

Proposition 13 would exempt from ad valorem taxation boats and other equipment used primarily for fishing.

Proposition 14 would raise the limits of the exemption from ad valorem taxation on property owned by disabled veterans, their surviving spouses or minor children.

Society shouldn't see drug addiction as 'a happening'

Society can't save those who are old enough to make their own choices concerning drugs. We can only offer as much of a helping hand as possible.

However, we can try hard to save young children who are easily influenced. Programs such as Red Ribbon Week and the Adopt-a-Cop program continue to make a difference with the message that drugs will take away a person's life.

Parents can help by refusing to accept drug addiction as a choice for their children. Drug use should in no way, shape or fashion be glorified.

A radio personality in Wichita, Kan., recently commented on the death of (rock singer) Shannon Hoon as something "that just happens." His own mother said she didn't figure he would live much past 26 years of age.

Herein lies part of the problem with drug use in this country. When parents give up hope, the battle is half over. If nobody seems to care about a particular individual, he or she will stop caring about himself or herself. ...

Drug addictions and the lives they destroy simply cannot be passed off as "things that just happen."

Doctors to get shot in the arm from GOP

WASHINGTON — The pinch of the GOP's reductions in Medicare will be felt by hospitals, insurance companies — and especially seniors. Everywhere, that is, except the doctor's office.

After months of meetings with House Republican leaders, the American Medical Association got what it wanted from the GOP's Medicare package, which passed last month as part of the omnibus budget package now under debate. While seniors will see their premiums rise and hospitals will see their payments fall, doctors will get a financial shot in the arm if the House version of Medicare reform prevails.

Anderson

Among other things, the Republican plan will allow doctors to form their own networks to compete with managed care companies, and it will make it more difficult for the government to prosecute doctors for fraud and abuse by raising the burden of proof for prosecution. Doctors will also be more insulated from malpractice claims — an issue that's been high on their wish list for years.

It will also scale back one of the best ways the government has of keeping doctors honest: The ban on physician self-referrals — also known as "kickbacks." Under laws that passed in 1989 and 1993, doctors are banned from ordering tests or medical equipment from labs in which they own a financial interest. But the GOP plan would grant exceptions to rural doctors and small group practices.

Numerous studies on the subject have proven the obvious — that doctors are more likely to order diagnostic tests and services from companies if there's a financial incentive to do so. The Congressional Budget Office estimates the changes will cost taxpayers $400 million over the next seven years.

"The American Medical Association wanted this a lot," Rep. Fortney "Pete" Stark, D-Calif., told our associate Jan Moller. "It was (House Speaker) Newt Gingrich's payoff for getting the AMA's endorsement for the bill. That's pure and simple who wants it."

Stark, who was the primary sponsor of the two original kickback laws, says he fears a return to the days when doctors were routinely solicited by medical equipment wholesalers offering deals that were too good to pass up.

"Increase your income — big time!" one such ad read in 1991. The wholesaler was pitching a piece of diagnostic equipment called the Holter heart monitor, which the sales brochure told doctors could "put another $15,000 to $50,000 in your pocket every year."

The problem wasn't with the Holter heart monitor, which is an effective tool in diagnosing heart ailments. But with such bald profit incentives, doctors are encouraged to use their new machines more than they might otherwise do. This, Stark believes, creates a system where "patients become commodities. Instead of providing medical care, (doctors) are marketing medical care. Instead of concern for health it's quality control. Suddenly you'd think they were manufacturing cars rather than providing health care."

AMA spokesman Jim Stacey says that while his group favors the Republican plan, "the AMA agrees with anyone who feels that self-referral is unethical. ... That is illegal under the House bill. That is a kickback, and against federal statute. There is no problem with that." He added that the increase in managed care could lead to a situation where patients are getting too few tests rather than too many.

But don't expect a hot public debate on the issue. The kickback "reform" statues were added to the House Medicare bill behind closed doors — and lawmakers were given no chance to amend the legislation with their own proposals. Right now, the issue is in the hands of House and Senate negotiators, who are trying to hammer out a final framework for the budget bill.

Buchanan's protectionism arguments miss mark

WASHINGTON — Were we picking not a president but the person among the candidates with whom it would be most fun to kick back and kill a six-pack, Pat Buchanan would win in a landslide. A man of laughter and passion, he brims with the cheerful pugnacity of a one-man church-militant in an unconverted world. Unfortunately, he currently overflows with nonsense.

Will

Recently this column noted, with reference to, among other things, his advocacy of protectionism, that he resembles high-tax statist liberals, advocating industrial policy, economic planning and favor-dispensing by a paternalistic government that knows better than consumers do what consumers ought to consume. He has fired back, arguing this:

"America's conservatives — Washington, Hamilton, Clay, Webster, Coolidge — all believed in a tariff wall to protect the standard of living of workers and ensure our independence from foreign countries for national needs. ... Every nation to rise to industrial power in modern times ... did so by first protecting the home market. ... Perhaps (cities are in crisis) because the good jobs that were once there have been exported to Mexico, Taiwan, Korea and China."

But those conservatives did not pursue the Chimera of autarky — national self-sufficiency, independent of the interrelations of trade. And note who is missing from Buchanan's list of conservatives: Reagan, a passionate believer in free trade who Buchanan would have us remember only as the man who occasionally lapsed from that principle to protect the sort of clamorous business interests that Buchanan's protectionism would incite. Buchanan, who claims to represent "Reagan-Gingrich" Republicanism, also omits from his list Gingrich, who saved Reagan's dream of NAFTA when a majority of Buchanan's soul mates — congressional Democrats — opposed it.

Even if Buchanan were right that protectionism was the crucial ingredient in every industrial nation's rise, he surely would concede that the United States has risen already, so the hoary arguments for protecting "infant industries" hardly apply. Today's relatively infant industries — Microsoft, Intel and the like — have flourished under free trade.

But Buchanan is not right about protectionism's role in American growth. Refuting Buchanan in National Review, Ramesh Ponnuru argues that much more important was America's huge continental market. And the most protected industries, such as sugar and textiles, have become uncompetitive and dependent on purchasing political influence.

It is peculiar for Buchanan, ostensibly a "populist" favoring Main Street rather than Wall Street, to adopt protectionism, which aims to correct consumer preferences that the government deems incorrect. Protectionism, Ponnuru says, "invites Big Government, Big Labor and Big Business to form a coalition to socialize the economy; free trade protects ordinary citizens from all of them."

Buchanan, who may be the last person to regard Japan (essentially zero growth for four years; a teetering banking system) as awesome, proposes a 10 percent tariff on Japanese goods until the trade deficit with Japan disappears, and says tariff revenues will be used to reduce other taxes. But before spending your Buchanan Dividend, check his arithmetic.

He says his tariff on Japan's $125 billion of exports to America will yield $12.5 billion. Under his static analysis, American consumers will not alter their $125 billion behavior because of his tariff. This is the sort of analysis that Buchanan's kindred spirits — congressional Democrats — use to justify tax increases and oppose tax cuts: They assume increases will not decrease wealth creation, and that cuts will not increase it. And Buchanan evidently assumes that our trading partners will not retaliate against U.S. tariffs.

Why such a fixation on bilateral trade balances? The United States is not injured by its unavoidable trade deficit with Saudi Arabia. And as the conservative Heritage Foundation notes, Japan uses its surplus dollars to buy U.S. goods and services, invest in U.S. firms and help finance the U.S. budget deficit by buying U.S. Treasury bonds. To adapt a Heritage analogy: Buchanan runs a chronic trade deficit with his grocer. Buchanan constantly buys things from the grocer, the grocer never buys anything from Buchanan. The grocer gets currency, Buchanan gets groceries, and the economy hums.

Beware anything that comes from The Bad Place

Little Old Lady is inside her comfy home. Little does she realize what trouble has just ridden into town. No, it's not the Clantons, not the Daltons, not even the James brothers.

It's none of those over-the-hill horse-borne trouble-bringers that used to tickle Granddad — her late husband — in Saturday afternoon double features at the Capitol Theater, which later became a Pentecostal church before being flattened for a bowling alley that was later knocked down for shops that sell T-shirts with witty sayings on them.

Baker

Funny now to think of Granddad paying his ten cents admission, then sitting there in the dark with his nickel box of Jujubes watching Clantons-Daltons-James boys riding in and out of low-budget towns. Most were too low-budget even to have fake sagebrush in the street. Ken Maynard, Buck Jones, Randolph Scott — they didn't rate sagebrush. For sagebrush you had to be Gary Cooper. Later, Henry Fonda and John Wayne.

Well of course, Granddad wasn't so old then, except in spirit. That's because color movies hadn't come along yet, much less television, even of the antique black-and-white kind.

Which, much as we hate to leave that Old West down at the doomed Capitol Theater, brings us back to the subject. Little Old Lady in comfy home is starring in this new television commercial. Full color. Expensive set. No sagebrush in her comfy parlor, though you can tell if the director wanted sagebrush it would be no problem, they could afford sagebrush. They could afford giant cactus if they wanted giant cactus, as well as the OK Corral and Bobby Short playing piano down at the Silver Dollar Saloon.

We are talking a very polished TV commercial. Very up-to-date. You can tell at a glance that high-stakes advertising is going on. The action moves so fast that without several viewings it's hard to grasp the plot.

Your correspondent here saw it only once, and that was immediately after watching David Brinkley, George Will, Cokie Roberts, Sam Donaldson and William Kristol discuss affairs of state so trenchantly that his mind was still lost in realms of somber ponderation when the story began. He recovered to see Little Old Lady responding to a commotion at her front door.

She peeps out, which isn't easy. She's such a little Little Old Lady. What she sees out there is trouble. A mess of trouble. How do we know this? Guy leaning on the little old front door tells us flat out.

"We're from Washington," he says.

Out here in TV Paradise we all know what that means, do we not, faithful viewers?

This bird and his horde are Bad Guys. Bad Guys from where all the Bad Guys come from. Bad Guys from Badville. Not horseback make-believe bad guys, the old black-and-white movie species.

These are the authentic up-to-date articles. Genuine Bad Guys instantly recognizable as no-good rats because they don't even make an effort to deceive Little Old Lady about where they come from.

With consummate gall, they shout it right out at her. "From Washington!" they say, shameless swine that they are, bold as brass.

This tells us instantly what our geriatric heroine is up against: Bad Guys from Badville are in town.

All seem to be in business suits. Neckties and $75 haircuts. You can bet they're wearing tasseled loafers, too, the identifying mark of the Badville Bad Guy, as noted by Ross Perot. The action moves so fast, though, that we never get to look them straight in the feet.

Do they want to lynch our heroine? Only figuratively. They want to barge into her little old house and do something to her telephone so she can enjoy the benefits of that incredibly complicated new telecommunications law being promoted by Bad Guys down there in Badville.

They aren't bold enough yet to tramp over her and have their way with her telephone. Not yet anyhow. She shuts the door, says they're not going to bilk her with their greedy new telecommunications law, and all falls quiet outside. You just know they'll be back tonight, though, when the moon is down.

Somebody obviously hates this new telecommunications bill, and knows how to make other Americans hate it with him: just tell them where it was written.

What a monstrous place it is, that Washington.

United Way needs Midlanders' help

Having been a United Way volunteer for 30 years, I have had the opportunity of seeing firsthand the wonderful generosity of Midlanders and the multitude of ways that United Way has helped make this an outstanding city in which to live and rear families. This organization has interwoven Midland's pioneer tradition of "neighbor-helping-neighbor" into the fabric of everyday life in our community. For many years, our United Way has not only led the state in per capita giving, but also has ranked in the top level nationwide. This success never has been easy, nor has it resulted from only a few large gifts, but has come from an outpouring of caring Midlanders at all levels of giving.

Without the services of the 16 member agencies, the quality of life in Midland would not be the same for any of us. These agencies have been there to help thousands of families in their time of crisis, as well as to provide youth character building organizations for others and daily sustenance to the elderly who receive Meals-On-Wheels.

The fire that destroyed the United Way building on Aug. 28 caused a two-week lag in volunteer time because of the loss of all campaign materials. Many faithful givers have not yet been contacted and the campaign is almost over. Now, more than ever, United Way needs the help of every Midlander. If you have not already contributed, call 682-4358 for a pledge card or mail your check to: P.O. Box 10070, 79702.

All residents can help keep city beautiful

As a response to Robert G. Kiker's letter (Letters, Oct. 31), I would like to acknowledge Keep Midland Beautiful's appreciation for his concerns about the cleanliness of Midland. His interest is shared by hundreds of other Midlanders, and through the public voicing of these concerns, others become aware of the importance of a clean community.

It is the mission of Keep Midland Beautiful to educate our citizens about the importance of waste/litter reduction, recycling and beautification. Through our efforts the city of Midland has maintained a 95 percent decrease in litter since 1983. We have conducted seminars, teacher trainings, special events, planted hundreds of trees and organized thousands of volunteers for cleanups. All of these efforts have made Midland a clean, more beautiful city to live in, but there is always more to be done.

A new program, which may be of interest, has been installed using Midland County probationers. To date, they total more than 700 individuals who are required to do community service hours as part of their judgment. Over the past several months they have cleaned vacant lots, refurbished park equipment, worked in the cemetery, pruned roes in the Rose Garden and done many other activities. Their director, Teresa Howery, can be reached at 688-1847.

Concerns about dilapidated/abandoned buildings can be directed to the City of Midland Code Enforcement division. Their telephone number is 685-7414.

Keep Midland Beautiful's staff is available to provide information about how Midland citizens can get involved in the cleaning and beautification of our community. Anyone wishing more information can call us at 688-4190.

All immigrants should learn English language

This letter concerns the controversy over making English the official language of the United States. What is the debate here?

When this country was founded, did our forefathers not speak English? Was the Constitution not written in English?

Yes, we are a melting pot of different nationalities. That is great. It makes this country so exciting and sets it apart from other countries.

When immigrants come to this country, and I am one of them, we come for the purpose of permanent residence. Our reason may be religious freedom, political persecution or just to get a slice of the American pie. We want to prosper and live well.

We, the immigrants, also pledge to be loyal to this country, forsaking all loyalties to our former motherland. We promised. That means we are Americans now. We are descendants of Germany, Mexico or another country, but we are Americans. That also means, fellow immigrants, that we live and speak like Americans. We have a duty and obligation to raise our families in the proud traditions of this nation. It means that our children will go to school knowing and speaking the English language.

There is nothing wrong with being proud of our heritage and culture. There is nothing wrong with speaking our native language at home (contrary to the opinion of the judge in El Paso). But it is wrong when we fail to teach our children English at home and then send them to school with this terrific handicap. They live in America and must speak English well. I have not heard of any European country that bends over backward to provide so many mechanisms (bilingual education, etc.) to mainstream the children of immigrants.

English is the language of business and trade all over the world, and we Americans must speak it well. If we immigrants want to live a full life and be a part of every aspect of this great land, we better do as the Romans do while in Rome.

Complacency shouldn't destroy education

Watching the Midland Lee vs. San Angelo football game in San Angelo left me and many of my fellow Rebel fans aghast at the transparent, malicious bias portrayed by the game officials. These men were perfect examples of the lack of character, integrity and responsibility that plagues our society.

My initial resolve to do everything I could think of to keep these individuals from ever officiating again gave way to a more positive approach. This letter is an attempt at reinforcing the desire of all those who have supported and will continue to support the "tradition of excellence" at Lee High School.

Through hard work by all involved over the years, it has been a joy to see the school's academia, extracurricular and co-curricular activities be recognized as outstanding in every area. My pleasure has been extended further through watching my son attend the same great school as I did. I know the memories of his years at Lee will become as endearing as mine have become.

I think it is important that all of us don't become complacent at any point in life or else good things deteriorate. Students, parents, teachers, administrators, school board members and all other friends: Beware that it is easy to become complacent and forget that the entire high school experience is important to the development of our children. I know that high school was my first real sense of knowing "that what I sowed was what I would reap." Our kids' development is more important now than it ever was, as our society and those the world over grow more unstable and unGodly on a daily basis.

In closing, there is another high school in this town that has just as avid supporters as I am for Lee, and rightfully so. I believe all of us should take pride in these schools' past contributions in the development of their respective students. We must evaluate every aspect of our students' experience at Midland schools in order to properly balance academia, social interaction and competition. They are all equally important. Instances like last Friday night in San Angelo provide a very important lesson in what should not happen in life, but does and has to be overcome. Let's hope, pray and work toward all our kids learning to do so.

Together, we can all help our children

This letter is written to appeal to the adult citizenry of Midland — all citizens, regardless of color or creed. The children of Midland need your help. I am a parent of four children and an educator. Each day within the school system I see hurting children, teen-agers from single-parent homes. Many are living with grandparents, aunts or cousins or anyone who will take them in. They have been abandoned and/or neglected by one or both of the two people who were responsible for them being in this world. Many times their entire lives have been spent living in an environment of domestic confusion, deprivation and insecurity.

These children are looking for a place to belong, looking for someone to care, looking for stability. So they turn to gangs and illicit and dangerous lifestyles. I realize that the schools, the churches and the community organizations individually cannot fill the void.

However, caring adults, the school system, churches and community organizations collectively can do a great deal to fill the void. There are many organizations within Midland that provide assistance to families and children. The school system has programs to address the needs of at-risk students; some of the churches have programs to address the physical as well as the spiritual needs of our citizenry.

We need to coordinate our efforts so that all who need and want help will be aware of where to go to receive it. It would be good if the newspaper could run a list of all public service organizations providing assistance to families. Perhaps there could be a "Hands that Help" fair where all the groups could come together and present to those attending brochures that outline how they help. A "Family and Children Services Directory" also could be developed.

Yes, the primary responsibility for nurturing a child to maturity is the parents'; nevertheless I agree with the African concept that states, "It takes a whole village to raise a child."

Self-defense is only reason to use force

As to the Million Man March, I say bully, and the oath taken by those men that day is an oath worthy of us all. However, the point may have been missed when white racism was identified as the problem. It is a symptom of the problem. The problem is and always has been the willingness to use force outside of self-defense and the belief that the initiation of force to achieve any goal, good or bad, is right.

The original goal of our government's formation was to insure the greatest amount of liberty and freedom to all. We are a nation of sovereigns; that is why the initiation of force by our federal government against citizens is limited in the Constitution and subordinate to the rights of each individual citizen to live as they wish until they initiate force or fraud to take or destroy property that is not theirs.

The socialist turn our government took in the '30s and since operates on the false assumption that your equal human owes you more than the respect of your property and the freedom to use the same without interference for your own and your family's benefit. It is this very socialism that is destroying the poor and enslaving them. This march may have begun the awakening in these men that it is truly up to them to get an education, own their own business, raise their own families and instill in them the love of liberty and freedom that is our birthright: owning and training with weapons but saving violence for self-defense.

The socialist devils tell the poor they are owed something just for being born and children would be protected from the sins of their parents, regardless. The costs of the very programs that offer this "safety net" have driven inflation up 1500 percent since I was a young man in the '60s. This federal tax falls on the poor and elderly, period. My buying power is down, but as a business owner I pass some or most of the costs on to my customers. The poor and elderly are the only ones truly devastated. They have no one on whom to pass the costs. The other result is, because of this caring government's regulations and hidden taxes, I can no longer afford to hire help or meet the requirements set to have an employee.

However, the lamp of knowledge was lit that Monday and I pray its light will spread across this nation and into every home. All must acknowledge that the initiation of force to achieve any goal is immoral and if it is to be, it's up to me to believe and achieve, not Uncle Sam.

Hospice deserves continued support

The Odessa American has recently printed several articles about alleged financial improprieties involving Hospice of the Southwest.

Readers should understand that Hospice of Midland is an independent organization with absolutely no connection with Hospice of the Southwest.

Hospice of Midland has consistently operated by sound and ethical management practices. The patients and their families are its first priority.

Hospice of Midland has provided invaluable assistance to many individuals at the time of their greatest need and deserves the continued support of this community.

Police Department's priorities aren't right

I read the police reports in the Reporter-Telegram and find the list constantly full of robberies, vandalism, rape, assault and murders. Recently, on our local news and in the newspaper, I was informed that the Midland Police Department is going to crack down on people running stop signs and yellow traffic lights.

They are even going to use off-duty officers to stop these "felons." Is it just me or has the Midland Police Department got its priorities screwed up? Maybe they can activate their S.W.A.T. team to enforce the seatbelt law.

Utility management needs re-examining

We are writing in response to the article in last Sunday's paper (Oct. 29) detailing the Muhlinghauses' ordeal with the City of Midland Water Department. What the Muhlinghauses' experienced with the attitude of the Water Department was not an isolated incident, it is the "norm." We know this because we also have had the unfortunate experience of human/customer relations with the "demi-god."

On one occasion, our water bill was due on a particular day, and somehow I had overlooked it in paying our bills. The following morning, I had my husband drop the payment by to the C.O.M. cashier. Our water was cut off that same afternoon, approximately after 4 p.m.

When we confronted the C.O.M., it was stated to us that our water was scheduled to be cut off the day before, but wasn't because they were behind schedule. When we questioned why the cashier could not have walked six to 10 feet behind her into the accounting office so that our payment could be posted, we were told to take it up with the city manager. In addition, we had to pay a re-connect charge to have our water turned back on.

While we admit that we were at fault for not paying the bill on time, it is our contention that it was paid in time to avoid the 4 p.m. cutoff.

As taxpayers, we need to re-examine the manner in which our leaders are running our utility departments. Perhaps management of them should be transferred to a private firm whose employees are more courteous and cooperative in establishing good customer relations and not treating them as though they are deadbeats and idiots.

Readers' views on: Pornography awareness

We must be voices for nation's children

It's that time of year again. The last week of October was designated "Pornography Awareness Week" and "The White Ribbon Campaign" (Oct. 29-Nov. 5). This is a campaign that is recognized in order to help concerned citizens be more aware of the harm that pornography has on men, women and children.

In Midland County we have many businesses who refuse to profit off of something that has caused devastation to so many families. And yet, we have businesses that do not care about the ones whose lives have been ruined by this $10 billion a year industry.

If you would like to make a difference in your community, find out what the businesses are really selling in the way of books, comic books, magazines, videos and computer software — also music. You may be surprised. If it alarms you at all, go to the manager and inform them of the dangers of this material.

A few facts you may want to note are as follows:

- Pornography is an $8-10 billion a year industry. It is the third largest revenue for organized crime, trailing only drugs and gambling.
- 86 percent of convicted rapists said they were regular users of pornography.
- More than 250 out of 450 pornography magazines feature child pornography.
- The typical child molester abuses more than 360 children during his lifetime. One of every three girls and one of every seven boys will be sexually molested before the age of 18.

If you are at all concerned by these facts, you can make a difference. Let your voice be heard. Speak up for the many children who can't.

Bev Dillow

Fueling of molesters' desires must stop

Please make it known in Midland that Oct. 29 through Nov. 5 is "Pornography Awareness Week." It is so tragic to read pathetic and graphic news stories two days in a row having to do with children being raped and murdered, or being molested by Disney movie directors.

When we stop allowing so-called "respectable" bookstores and businesses to fuel the desire of those who would assault and mutilate our children, we'll have less of those sensational headlines to mourn over.

SPEAKING OUT

Midland deserves school system it pays for

By Dr. Viola Coleman

On Nov. 2, the committee of 20 met to consider ways to re-align the elementary schools of Midland Independent School District (MISD) that would meet federal guidelines (in regard to desegregation) and not place the burden of busing on any one ethnic group. This will mean that the cluster system as it now exists will be no more and the cheers will probably be deafening when this happens. I'm writing this because it seems to me that it has become very easy to blame the problems in our schools on the cluster system and not really ask the tough questions and demand answers.

The cluster system is the scapegoat, and until we are brave enough to face the issues, we will never do much better than we are doing now — remember an onion called by any other name smells the same. For the past 18 years the cluster system has been in effect. The present MISD administration has been in office for 16 of those 18 years — so whatever accolades that come this way, they are worthy of praise, i.e. the latest SAT scores, but they must also be willing to take the responsibility for the faults the school system has. What are some of the tough questions that need to be asked?

1. Why all the discrepancies the Justice Department found?

2. Is the cluster system responsible for the size (49 students) of the Midland High School (MHS) Band? (Lee and Midland have roughly the same number of students.)

3. MHS football teams lose year after year; is the cluster system to blame? I came to Midland in 1951— when there was just Midland High, no Lee and no cluster system — it was losing then and it's still losing!

4. Is the cluster system why some of the students at MHS hang out across the street from their youth center? A stranger driving by before school starts, at noon, or after school would think he was in the midst of a ghetto. Recently the parents of a MHS student learned of their student's drug abuse. Because this student was dropped off and picked up at the school, the parents went to talk to the administration about the source of the drugs. They were told that this "hangout" was possibly the source. I ask again, is this the result of the cluster system?

Dr. Viola Coleman is a Midland physician who has been active in matters involving education.

5. The schools in the eastern part of Midland usually rank lowest when it comes to standardized testing. We all know this, but have we demanded to not only know why, but that some remedy be made to change this? For instance, where are the Level 3 teachers in MISD? Are they being utilized to improve this situation?

6. Why was the bilingual program allowed to deteriorate to the point that the Hispanic parents literally had to "storm the halls" to get promises of relief?

7. Why are our students having so much trouble with the TAAS test, especially the math?

8. If we are to solve the dropout rate among Hispanics (their's was the highest), shouldn't we have somebody like Mrs. Delores Medrano, former principal of DeZavala and now the assistant superintendent of the Laredo school system, on board?

9. Why shouldn't any student wanting to take advanced or honors courses be given the opportunity to either pass or fail the course?

Are we so concerned with busing that the bus ride is more important than what happens to our children once they arrive at schools?

When the trustees voted 5-2 to pursue unitary status only one question was asked. Superintendant Joseph Baressi asked, "How much will this cost?" The answer given by Charles Tighe was "about $20,000." To date we've spent $220,139.01 and $179,910.74 of that has been paid to Tighe. Dr. John McAfee, principal of Pease Elementary, delineated the issues involved in unitary status on two separate occasions before the board; trustee James Fuller also stated why he thought we were not ready for unitary status, but did the trustees hear them? What have we gained for our $220,139.01? We've gotten three years probation with the costs still mounting and a prayer that in 1998 we will be found unitary. It seems that if we knew in advance what unitary status entailed, we might have saved ourselves a lot of money by preparing ourselves before seeking same. I'm sure that the same experts we're going to use in the next three years could have helped us get ready for unitary status.

The budget for this year is $105,842,059, and the student enrollment is less than 25,000. We've got 35 schools; 54.13 percent goes to classroom instruction, 5.34 percent to administrative salaries. I feel that educators are grossly underpaid, but I also know that just throwing money after a problem solves nothing. Despite the welfare system we've now got more poor people in America than we had before the War on Poverty. Look at what's happening to the family farmer despite the agricultural subsidy!

We, the taxpayers, have a right to demand of trustees, administrators, teachers, parents and students that we get what we are paying for. Whatever system we end up with, unless we get answers to questions like these, we will never have the type of school system that we are paying for.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

- Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.
- They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.
- Only one letter per month per writer can be published.
- Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being re-submitted.
- We do not publish 'open' letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Drivers impressed with new Homestead track

HOMESTEAD, Fla. (AP) — The Jiffy Lube Miami 300 on Sunday, the Busch Grand National season finale, is only the beginning for the Homestead Motorsports Complex.

"Overall, it's incredible," Terry Labonte said of the sprawling new facility in this community 30 miles south of Miami. "I have seen a couple of pictures (before arriving here), but they certainly didn't do it justice."

Labonte, whose younger brother Bobby qualified his Busch Series car on Friday, while Terry was away on a hunting trip, will have to drop his Chevrolet Monte Carlo from sixth to last in the 43-car field because of the driver change.

The former Winston Cup champion and one of several regulars from NASCAR's premier stock car series taking part in the 300-mile, 200-lap Busch Race on the 1.51-mile oval, said, "I ran a little bit this morning to get used to the track and I think it's going to be kind of hard to pass.

"I can run fast when I'm following people," he added. "But one of the fun things about racing is passing a lot of people and I will have a chance to pass a lot of people."

Joe Nemechek, another Winston Cup driver, will start from the pole position, alongside defending Busch Series champion David Green in an all-Chevy front row.

"I think everybody is going to have to be real careful at the start of the race," Nemechek said. "Everybody has to pace themselves. There is going to be a lot of give and take being that it's the first time we have run here.

"If you don't do that, something is going to come back and bite you," he continued. "The track seems to be coming in real well.

"In practice, we were doing a lot of passing with guys. You can't get too wide in the corners, yet. When the race starts and the groove keeps moving up, you will be able to get two wide through there."

Nemechek's track qualifying record of 134.628 mph on Friday was broken on Saturday in the second round of time trials by yet another Winston Cup driver, Dale Jarrett, who turned a lap of 134.875 in a Ford Thunderbird.

Jarrett moved up from 29th to 26th after improving from 131.654 on the considerably faster track.

"Should've done it yesterday," he said. "I thought about it last night and made a few adjustments and the track looked great this morning."

Among the Busch Series regulars, the key in Sunday's race is the final point scramble, with the possibility of change in 20 of the top 25 positions.

While Johnny Benson, who will move to Winston Cup next season, already has locked away the Grand National championship, second place is up for grabs on Sunday. Runner-up Chad Little leads Mike McLaughlin by only 17 points. McLaughlin will start 12th and Little 19th.

There were 17 drivers who failed to make the field for the last of 26 Busch Series races this season. That includes Winston Cup stars Kyle Petty, comeback-minded Ernie Irvan and Ricky Craven, as well as U.S. Auto Club open-wheel star Tony Stewart, trying for his first NASCAR stock car start.

Sunday's race has been a sellout for several weeks, with all of the approximately 59,200 seats at the sparkling new facility expected to be filled.

Paris Open final rematch of Wimbledon championship

PARIS (AP) — Sunday's Paris Open championship will be a rematch of the Wimbledon final — Pete Sampras against Boris Becker, with the American trying to celebrate his return to the world's No. 1 ranking with another victory.

Sampras, who beat Becker in the Wimbledon final on grass, automatically will regain the top ranking from idle and injured Andre Agassi whether or not he beats Becker again. Agassi, last year's tournament winner, withdrew because of a recurrence of a chest injury.

In Saturday's semifinals, Sampras topped Jim Courier for the 14th time in 17 meetings, 6-4, 3-6, 6-3, with a double fault by Courier in the final set proving costly. Becker, who won the Paris Open in 1986, 1989 and 1992, defeated South African Wayne Ferreira, 6-2, 6-1.

Sampras and Courier battled for nearly two hours. The turning point came when Courier was serving with Sampras up 4-3 in the third set.

At 30-30, Courier made his only double fault of the set, but questioned the decision on the second serve that gave Sampras the break chance.

"It was just a bad call," Courier said. "That's part of the game. But it's a shame a match of this caliber has to come down to a linesman's call."

"There are going to be good calls and bad calls," Sampras said. "No one enjoys losing, especially a match he was playing well enough to win."

Sampras won the next point after a long exchange by getting to the net to put away an easy volley, punching the air after he went up 5-3. Sampras served out the match, winning the final two points with excellent forehand crosscourt winners.

This will be his ninth final of the year. He already has won Wimbledon, the U.S. Open, Indian Wells and Queens Club.

Becker will be playing his fifth final of the year. He won the Marseille indoors, and lost at Milan, Italy, on clay at Monte Carlo and at Wimbledon.

Sampras also beat Becker in the ATP final last year, but Becker holds a 7-5 career edge.

Becker has now made five of the 10 Paris Open finals since 1986.

"I remember 5-6 years ago, I couldn't have played from the backcourt like I do now," Becker said. "I changed my attitude, my approach and that is the main reason or the reasons why I am still one of the best players."

Ferreira has been fighting a stomach muscle problem in the past month but refused to make excuses.

"I just had a bad day," he said. "I had a little difficulty on serving. Against someone like Boris, you need to serve well and go to the net often and I wasn't able to do that."

Becker went up an early break at 2-1 in the first set and went on to win the first set in 37 minutes. Becker lost the first game of the second set, then took the next six easily to close out the match in 1 hour, 8 minutes.

It was a contrast to his two previous matches that went three sets and more than 2 1/2 hours each.

Former NFL tough guys never wore earrings, do-rags

By Hal Bock
AP Sports Writer

A couple of years ago, some of the sporting goods companies licensed to manufacture NFL shirts and shoes put out a vintage clothing line called Throwbacks, complete with an advertising campaign that seemed to tweak modern players.

One ad pictured Gale Sayers and said, "He never pumped up his shoes."

He didn't need to. He once scored six touchdowns in a game on a field that was composed mostly of mud.

Another showed Dick Butkus and read, "He never wore an earring."

And if he happened to come across somebody making that particular fashion statement, he probably would have grabbed onto the thing and given it a good tug.

And a third showed Ray Nitschke and confided that, "He never had turf toe."

Or a do-rag, either. With his bald dome, it would have had trouble finding a place to hang on.

Sayers, Butkus and Nitschke played a no-holds barred, tough guys game. It was down and dirty football.

That's not to say that some of the current generation would not have fit right in with this cast of characters. Guys like Bruce Smith, Greg Lloyd and Reggie White come to mind immediately.

Jack Lambert, another tough guy who played in the generation between those groups, used to dismiss quarterbacks as necessary evils who rarely got their jerseys dirty. "They ought to wear dresses," he once hissed with the classic disdain of a linebacker.

He never met Jim Kelly or Troy Aikman. Or Bobby Layne, for that matter.

Forget Kelly's considerable quarterback skills. The guy is a survivor, always bouncing back from batterings.

AP Laserphoto

"He's one of the toughest players I face, in general, and by far the toughest quarterback," Miami defensive end Jeff Cross said. "The guy takes a beating and he always comes back. He's not afraid to run the ball or block or get run over. I have a lot of respect for him. He does it all."

Aikman collects concussions the way some guys collect signing bonuses. He had six at last count and shrugs them off as part of the game. He has been banged up from ankle to chin and he plays on, ignoring the batterings.

He went down against Washington with a sprained calf muscle that was supposed to keep him out for three weeks. A week later, he was playing, throwing for a couple of touchdowns against Green Bay.

This is a strange way to recuperate.

"He's one of the toughest guys on the team," Dallas receiver Michael Irvin said of Aikman. "Everybody talks about Daryl Johnston or Nate Newton. They forget about how Troy will play with injuries."

Cowboys coach Barry Switzer put it simply.

"If he can be there at all, he'll get there," Switzer said. "If he can't play, you know he's hurting."

Layne, too, played hurt, although much of the damage often was self-inflicted. He never met a curfew he liked very much, so he simply ignored all of them. And when a lineman missed a block or a receiver dropped a pass, well, the next huddle wasn't the most pleasant place to be.

Sports Illustrated's current special NFL classic edition considers some of the game's great pioneer quarterbacks — Graham, Van Brocklin, Waterfield and the rest, and concludes that Layne was the toughest. It is, by any measure, a safe choice.

Doak Walker, who grew up with him and played at SMU when Layne was at Texas, once described his old pal this way: "Bobby never lost a game in his life. Time just ran out on him."

Time was something that never figured in Layne's recipe for life. Teammates marveled at his ability to function on little or no rest, sometimes as little as four hours the night before a game. "I sleep fast," he once said.

Usually with a six-pack nearby.

At the time of his death in 1986, ex-teammate Yale Lary reviewed Layne's approach to football and life. "When Bobby said, 'Block,' you blocked," he said. "And when Bobby said, 'Drink,' you drank."

Layne had the swagger of a linebacker and the demeanor of a tackle. And as tough as Jack Lambert was, it might not have been a good idea for him to discuss wardrobes with this guy.

Baltimore fans not counting on move

BALTIMORE (AP) — Burned before on promises to bring the NFL back to Baltimore, fans and some officials took a prove-it-to-me attitude Saturday to reports that the Cleveland Browns were moving to Baltimore.

Browns owner Art Modell confirmed Friday night that he was negotiating seriously with Baltimore but wouldn't confirm that a deal was reached.

Clint Coleman, a spokeman for Mayor Kurt Schmoke, on Saturday said Cleveland Mayor Michael R. White was expected to arrive in Baltimore on Sunday. No meeting had been scheduled, but Coleman said he expected Schmoke and White to meet.

TIMING: Sometimes injuries lead to retirement decisions

witting Father Time. By a Jack Nicklaus winning the Masters at 46. A self-deprecating George Foreman. Ocassional flashbacks from Joe Montana. Nolan Ryan. But these are the exceptions.

Often, perhaps mercifully, injuries make the decision. For Gale Sayers, Dick Butkus, Joe Theismann, to name a few. But if easy on the player, the effects are tough on the fan. We feel cheated because the end was quick and unexpected.

Sayers' career with the Bears was brief. Yet fans still relive his quick cuts, dazzling speed.

Sayers the thoroughbred.

How wonderful it would have been to have him around a few more years.

But, no. In our memories, Sayers will remain forever young, forever fleet.

"My dream is to get the '75 Red Sox back together again," said Spaceman Lee. "No one is going to age, There will be no sore arms, no aches and pains. We'll just play every day and never get old. Then we'll all sit around and drink beer together, and no one will ever get drunk."

...in the City of Midland, Texas, have become a public nuisance and health hazard in as much as they have become overgrown with weeds, tall grass and brush, become strewn with litter, or become a collection point for stagnant water. The owner of the above named properties are hereby ordered to abate the nuisance within ten (10) days and notify the City of Midland Property Code Administration of the same. Otherwise, the City of Midland will then enter the property, abate the nuisance thereon, and charge the cost of so doing as a lien against the property. You may appeal the decision of the City of Midland to enter our property and assess a lien against it by contacting the City Manager's office at 300 North Loraine, Midland, Texas 79701, phone number 685-7200 within nine (9) days of this notice.

ADVERTISEMENT FOR BIDS
NOTICE TO BIDDERS

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Mayor and City Council of Midland, Texas, will be received at the office of the City Secretary, City Hall, Midland, Texas until 10:00 A.M., Tuesday, December 5, 1995 for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence, and labor for constructing certain improvements at Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas. These improvements are contained in the plans and specifications entitled, "City of Midland, Texas, Midland International Airport, Demolition of Buildings and North Service Road Realignment for New Terminal Complex, " dated October 1995.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The principal items of work are set forth in specific detail in the proposal section of these specification; however, the work items may be generally described as: the demolition and removal of six buildings and structures, including asbestos abatement, lead paint removal, utility removal; the construction of approximately 4,700 square yards of new bituminous pavement and related items of work.

The work will also include other miscellaneous materials, equipment, machinery, superintendence and labor for constructing these improvements for the Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas.

A bid proposal guaranty is to accompany the bid, thereby guaranteeing the good faith of the bidder and that the bidder will enter into the written contract. The guaranty is to amount to five percent (5%) of the total bid and must be in the form of cash or certified check, issued by a bank satisfactory to the City of Midland, or a bid bond. If in the form of cash or certified check, it is hereby expressly understood and agreed the City of Midland is given the right to retain such as liquidated damages if such bidder withdraws its bid anytime after such bid is opened and before official rejection of such bid, or, if successful in securing the award therof, such bidder fails to enter into the contract and furnish satisfactory performance bond and payment bond. If a bid bond is submitted, it shall be executed on forms contained in these contract documents by a corporate surety authorized to do business in the State of Texas, acceptable to the City of Midland and accepted according to the latest list of companies holding certificates of authority from the Secretary of the Treasury of the United States of America. Proposals submitted without bid guaranty in the form of cash, certified check or bid bond for 5% of the maximum bid will not be considered.

The successful Bidder will be required to furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond each in the amount of the contract, written by a responsible Surety Company authorized to do business in the State of Texas, and satisfactory to the Owner, as required by Chapter 2253 of the Texas Government Code, as amended.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof or to reject the bid. Unreasonable (or "unbalanced") unit prices will authorize the Owner to reject the bid.

Bidders are expected to inspect the site of the work and to inform themselves regarding all local conditions.

This project is an AIP Project. The proposed contract is under and subject to Executive Order 11246 of September 24, 1965, as amended, and to the equal opportunity clause contained in these specifications. The Bidder must supply all the information required by the proposal form.

The successful bidder will be required to submit a Certification of Nonsegregated Facilities prior to award of the contract, and to notify prospective subcontractors of the requirement of such a Certification where the subcontract exceeds $10,000. Samples of the Certification and the Notice to Subcontractors appear in the specifications.

In all areas of employment women and men will be afforded equal opportunity for employment. The employment of women shall not diminish the standards or requirements for the employment of minorities.

Minimum wages and labor rates for the construction of the proposed work have been established by the Secretary of Labor. A schedule of labor classifications and wage rates to be paid are included in the specifications and will be made a part of the contract. The bid form shall contain a statement that the prices bid are based on such wage rates.

This project is subject to Equal Opportunity, Affirmative Action, Minority Business Enterprise Contract Provisions, and other requirements stated in the Instructions to Bidders and other sections of the project specifications and contract documents.

Policy. It is the policy of the Department of Transportation (DOT) that disadvantaged business enterprises as defined in 49 CFR Part 23 shall have the maximum opportunity to participate in the performance of contracts financed in whole or in part with Federal funds.

All bidders and proposers shall make good faith efforts, as defined in Appendix A or 49 CFR Part 23, Regulations of the Office of the Secretary of Transportation, to subcontract 10.0 percent of the dollar value of the prime contract to small business concerns owned and controlled by socially and economically disadvantaged individuals (DBE). In the event that the bidder for this solicitation qualifies as a DBE, the contract goal shall be deemed to have been met. Individuals who are rebuttably presumed to be socially and economically disadvantaged included Women, Blacks, Hispanics, native Americans, Asian-Pacific American and Asian-Indian Americans. The apparent successful bidder (proposer) will be required to submit information concerning the DBE's that will participate in this contract. The information will include the name and address for each DBE, a description of the work to be performed by each named firm, and the dollar value of the contract (subcontract). If the bidder fails to achieve the contract goal as stated herein, it will be required to provide documentation demonstrating that it made good faith efforts in attempting to do so. A bid that fails to meet these requirements will be considered nonresponsive.

Information for bidders, proposal forms, specifications and plans are on file in the office of the Director of Airports, Midland International Airport, Midland, Texas, and at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, phone (915) 697-1447.

Copies of the plans and specifications may be secured at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, (915) 697-1447, at a cost of $50.00. The cost for the plans and specifications is NON-REFUNDABLE.

KIA

It's about time everyone had a well-made car.

A funny thing happened on the way to the showroom.

Actually, to be perfectly honest, the Kia engineers didn't seem to think it was all that funny.

We had them take two of our Sephia sedans on a 100,000-mile spin around the country. From the suffocating heat of Death Valley to the spit-freezing cold of a Minnesota winter. With a 14,000-foot grind to the top of Pikes Peak thrown in for good measure.

A full year and countless greasy truck-stop burgers later, we were convinced the Sephia was tough enough to survive life in Everytown, USA. And having driven the full 100,000 miles right alongside a Honda Civic, we know we're in pretty good company durability-wise.

We even learned a thing or two along the way that helped us to make our car even better.

The Sephia sedan can now be found parked in the showroom of the dealer listed below, starting at under $9,300. Stop in and take one on a test drive of your own. A considerably shorter one, please.

As for the Kia engineers, we're sure that some day they'll have a good laugh over this.

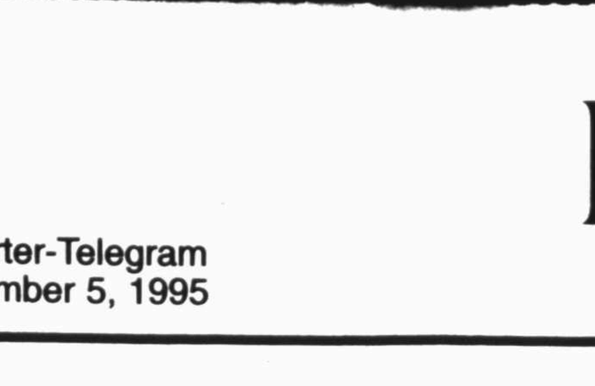
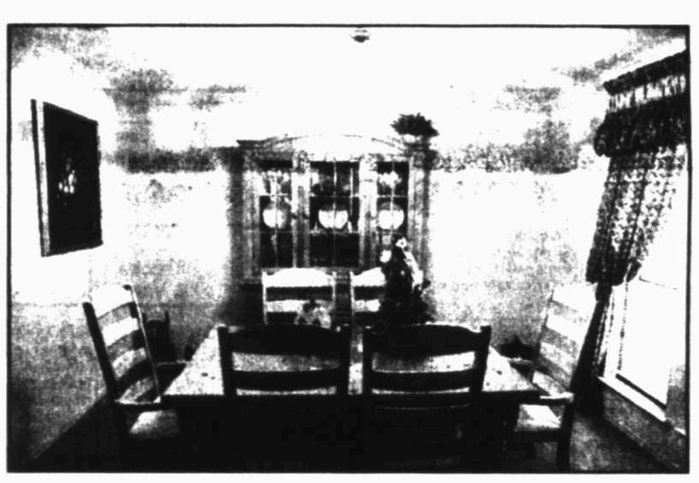
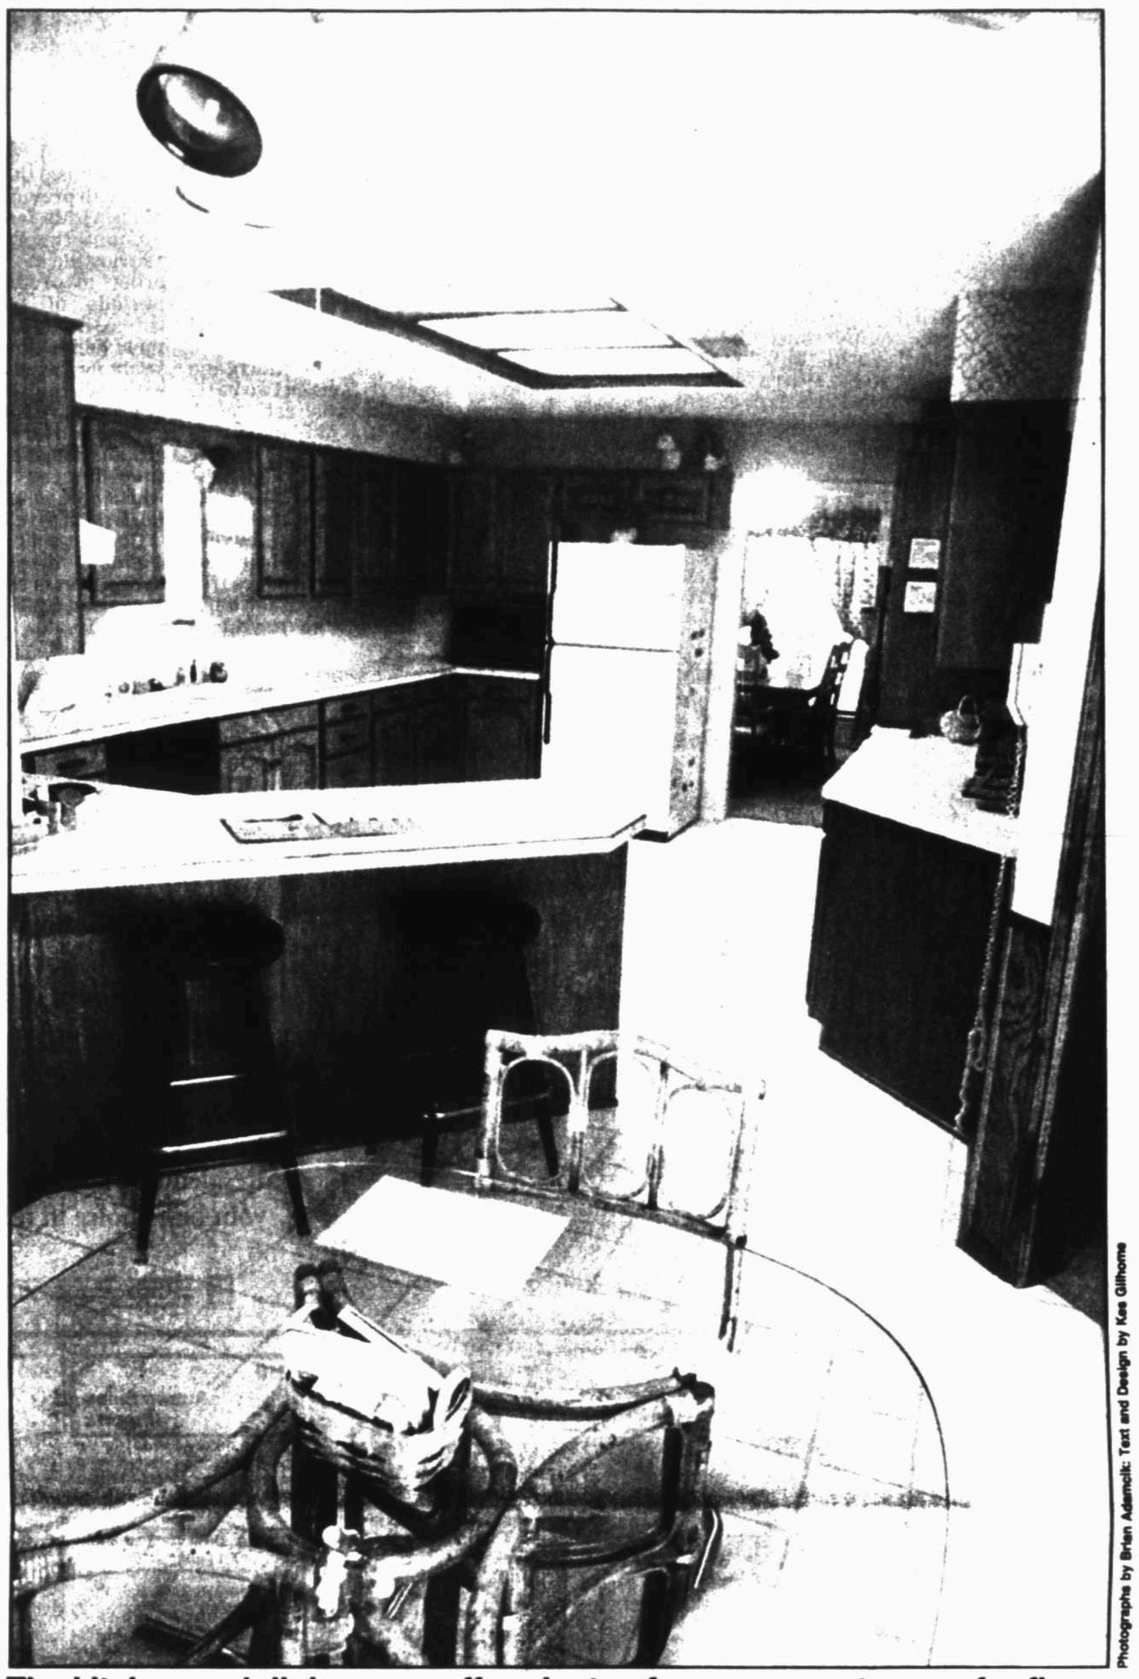
HOMES
& Classified

Plenty of space, elegant decorative touches and practical considerations combine in this house to produce an ideal family home.







Photographs by Brian Adamcik: Text and Design by Kas Gilthorpe

The kitchen and dining area offer plenty of space, easy-to-care-for flooring and masses of work and storage space. Perfect for entertaining, it leads onto the formal dining room and the living room and offers a full compliment of built-in appliances as well as a sizeable utility room.

Chic, affordable and practical

Situated north of Loop 250 in the quiet Plantation Hills neighborhood on the edge of town, this charming and affordable family home proves that successful homes, like successful businesses follow the maxim, "location, location, location'.

In this case, 5013 Melville offers just about every advantage associated with a home's location. The streets are quiet with little through traffic, shops and restaurants are just a short drive away and there is a good choice of schools in north Midland.

Add the fact that this is a section of Midland that is growing and expanding - with new businesses and homes springing up all the time and the result is an ideally placed property.

The family room offers a large brick and brass fireplace, wood paneling and plenty of space. A built-in wet bar allows graceful entertaining

A true family home, 5013 Melville balances practical concerns such as easy-to-clean flooring with stylistic aspects such as the leaded-glass front door.

Listed at $114,900 this is a large four bedroom home that has much to offer the discerning home buyer. The kitchen is a good example of how well thought out the house is. The layout is very practical with lots of work space and storage and it has a full compliment of built-in appliances that make entertaining and cooking a breeze. Intelligent lighting in the form of spotlights and recessed fluorescent tubes help to define the kitchen and the accompanying breakfast area while providing a safe environment in which to work. The adjacent utility room offers plenty of space for machines as well as a half bath for convenience.

The spacious, wood paneled family room leads off from the kitchen and includes a wet bar, views over the yard, a brass/brick fireplace and built-in shelving. All of these features combine to produce a very cosy and comfortable room.

Another room which could certainly be described as cosy is the master suite. Set away from the other bedrooms fro privacy it offers a decorative ceiling treatment, plenty of space and a very attractive bathroom. The bathroom features decorative trim, separate shower and tub and a huge walk-in closet which is full of customized shelving and storage.

There will be a chance to tour this property this afternoon during the open house which is being hosted by the listing agent - Cheryl Parrish of Kay Sutton Realtors. For two hours, starting at 2 p.m. she will be showing this attractive property. For more information, or to arrange an alternative appointment call her at 570-8200.

Surfing for homes

Carriage Company Realtors, one of the area's leading real estate companies has joined HomeWeb, the industry's leading on-line information network.

Muldrow

"Our company is proud to be one of the first in the area to have the availability to place all of our homes-for-sale on the HomeWeb Internet service. Potential home buyers can now shop for a home or a property 24-hours a day, seven-days a week," said John Muldrow, Resource Director.

Unparalleled exposure: Educated consumers make great customers.

Today, millions of on-line users are previewing properties on HomeWeb from the privacy of their own homes and offices; even properties outside their local area. HomeWeb offers consumers and businesses access to a vast library of homes and property for sale. Other real estate information on-line includes detailed profiles of services and professionals, published articles on all aspects of home ownership, relocation, financing and much more.

Each listing can show a color photograph and 30 categories of information including: price; number of rooms and baths; architectural style; amenities; acreage; lot size and a short profile of the agent broker handling the property for sale. Each property can be searched by a number of criteria including: price; zip code; city and state; style; number of bedrooms and bathrooms.

More than 32 million consumers use the Internet and World Wide Web (Business Week, March 1995). The Internet market is expected to grow to 60 million users by the end of 1995, with two-thirds of those users within the United States.

HomeWeb is a product of U.S. Digital Corporation with headquarters in Norwalk, Connecticut.

Carriage Company Realtors is a full service residential Real Estate firm serving Midland and Odessa.

Mortgage types

Confused about the various types of mortgages available? Your best bet would be to ask your real estate professional to help you with some basic planning.

Sutton

Factors which should be taken into consideration include: the amount of down payment, your present and projected household income, your reason for buying the property, planned length of occupancy, tax consequences and career expectations.

Most of today's mortgage options are variations on two basic types: the adjustable rate mortgage (ARM) and the fixed-rate mortgage.

Many home buyers prefer their mortgage payments to be stable, making the fixed rate mortgage the most popular. Those buyers who plan to remain in the house for a short time (less than five years) typically care less about the long-term stability of the payment. For them an ARM may be the way to go - especially if the margin between ARMs and fixed-rates is 1.5 - 2.0 percent.

The length of time buyers can cash in on the lower starting interest rates associated with ARMs varies greatly; many have a three-year or a one-year starting rate. Some may carry six-month teaser rates as well. After the initial interval, the lender periodically adjusts the rate, keeping it in line with prevailing interest rates. Most ARMs feature a cap on the amount the rate can increase (during the mortgage contract) in order to protect buyers during periods of turbulent interest rates. Buyers who pan to stay in their homes for more than a few years and want to save money for expenses may prefer the stability of a 30-year-fixed-rate mortgage.

Cash conservation is among the greatest benefits of an ARM to first time buyers, especially those who's goal is to save cash during the first few years of ownership.

Contact your real estate professional to discuss the mortgage option that is right for you.

Kent Kwik offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs! Our stores are open 7 days a week, with many open 24 hours a day. We have some hours available for all shifts. Full-timers work a five day week!

BENEFITS

We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We also have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement ($300 a semester), several bonus plans, and a profit sharing plan. In addition, all Team Members are covered by a $150,000 accidental death life insurance policy!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES

95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks.

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?

Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making $20,000 or more, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday - Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 So. Crane Hwy. On Tuesdays at 9 A.M. and Saturdays at 10 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. Relocation within our operating areas may be available.

Alligators II

2 weeks ago we found 1 alligator. We are still looking for 3 or 4 alligators to fill new positions that are open. I'm interested in hiring semi-obnoxious, pushy sales pros for a very boring, repetitious job of selling. My current staff, the laziest group of individuals you'll ever meet, drag themselves to work Mon.-Fri. to decide whether to complain about the weather, coffee, the thermostat, or their manager. When that's over somehow they mange to organize themselves, run my leads, work their appointments and make lots of money, which is surprising because no one wants to buy anything we sell because the Economy Stinks! Applicants should have skin like alligators and desire to suffer their way to $73,216 + in commission per year. If interested call Mr. Smith on Monday Nov. 6th between 9:00 am & 7:00 pm at 1-800-969-7581 to schedule appointments for Tues. Nov. 7th in Midland.

CHECK US OUT!

EDUCATION EXTRAS

Bands rank high

Three of four Midland schools scored Division I ratings, the highest possible, at the recent Region 6 University Interscholastic League Marching Band Competition in Lubbock.

Obtaining Division I ratings were Midland and Lee high schools and Lee Freshman High School. Midland Freshman High School earned a Division II rating.

Comedy 'deadly'

"It's drop dead funny." That's how Midland High School drama teacher Pam Keel describes the school's comedy production of "Dearly Departed."

"Not since 'Steel Magnolias' has a more colorful and dysfunctional group of Southern eccentrics gathered below the Mason-Dixon line," Ms. Keel said.

The fun begins when the patriarch of the Turpin family keels over in the first scene. The struggle to get him buried involves the entire clan, including the not-so-grieving widow who wants to engrave "mean and surly" on her late husband's tombstone.

The comedy will be presented by the MHS Drama Department 8 p.m. Nov. 16, 17 and 18 in the school auditorium.

Tickets are $3 for adults and $1 for students. For more information call 689-1120.

The comedy was written by David Bottrell and Jessie Jones.

OC trains guards

ODESSA — Odessa College is accepting applications for a session of prison guard training scheduled to begin with day classes March 18, 1996, and continuing with night classes which will begin March 19.

The deadline for prospective students to apply is Nov. 21.

Jobs will be waiting for those who pass the course, according to OC spokeswoman Susan Hammons.

"This is because Texas plans to hire 5,000 correctional officers in the next year," she said.

The starting salary for prison guards is $1,612, increasing to $2,027 after 18 months.

Students must apply to OC and will be chosen by the Texas Department of Criminal Justice. Women and minorities are encouraged to apply, according to Sidney Lyle, chair of the OC criminal justice/law enforcement department.

To be accepted into training applicants must be 18, have a high school diploma or an equivalency degree, pass an entrance exam, and be willing to relocate.

The four-week day class will meet from 8 a.m.-5 p.m. and the eight-week evening class will meet from 7-11 p.m.

Cost for the training is $300. For more information call (915) 335-6505.

'Celebrations' set

Five nationally-known storytellers are bound for Midland for the third annual "Celebrations of Light." The Midland Independent School District multicultural storytelling festival will feature six days of school programs, student and teacher workshops, and an evening concert Dec. 4 for the public.

Storytellers who will participate in the festival are Donald Davis, an author who tells tales of growing up in Appalachia; Laura Pershin who tells stories of her family's migration to America; Rex Ellis, who weaves African American history into his tales as well as its culture and heritage; Joe Hayes, a bilingual author and storyteller who weaves oral adventures from the Hispanic, Native American and Anglo cultures; and Joseph Burchac, who presents Native American tales.

The festival will be presented by MISD's language arts and social studies departments.

A day-long workshop will be offered 8 a.m.-3:30 p.m. Dec. 2. Cost is $15.

Cost of attending the 7:30-10 p.m. Dec. 4 storytelling concert (featuring all five storytellers) is $10 for adults and $5 for students ages 5-20.

Admission to both the workshop and concert is $20.

All events will be located at First United Methodist Church Activities Building, 300 N. Main St.

For more information or reservations call 689-1017, 689-1010 or 689-1019. Checks should be made out to MISD Storytelling.

Rallies range from silly to solemn

Red ribbons have been seen all across Midland in the past few weeks as drug and alcohol prevention activities abounded. From preschool to high school, activities ranged from the silly to the solemn. some students wore outlandish socks to represent "socking it to drugs." A prekindergarten youngster danced with a police department robot, and other students cavorted during drug-free rallies.

But at Goddard Junior High School, one day's activity took on a serious tone.

It began one morning shortly after school started when a black paper arm band was fastened around Schuqueitor Brown's right arm. The eighth grade Goddard student's arm band signified a student lost to drug or alcohol abuse.

"It meant she had died, so she couldn't talk," said Goddard computer teacher and Student Council sponsor Melody Schulthies. The school's Student Council representatives organized the event, and Student Council members volunteered to "get banded."

"I couldn't talk all day and no one could talk to me. But it was pretty neat because the message got out," Schuqueitor said.

All day long, every 15 minutes, a student donned a black arm band. By the end of the day, Goddard had "lost" 23 of their own.

"It was a scary feeling," said seventh grade student Rebecca Saunders. Even though she didn't put her arm band on until the last class of the day, she said the impact of staying silent to signify death — and seeing her peers who could also be victims — got through to her.

Seventh grade student Stephanie Chamness said, "Everybody tried to make me talk, it was hard."

But Student Council representatives wearing arm bands took their commitment seriously. So, seriously, in fact, answering a question posed by school Principal John Bettina wasn't even an option.

"One of the students wearing an arm band refused to say a word when I asked a question," Bettina said. "The students were very disciplined, and very serious about not speaking."

Bettina said students participated in a week's worth of activities, including taking pencils with drug-free pledges to nearby Emerson Elementary School pupils, and wearing goofy hats in honor to "hats off to being drug free."

"There were hats all over the place," Bettina said, noting the activity was popular because students are usually not allowed to wear hats inside the school building.

Many students said the arm band activity had the most meaning for them and their fellow students.

"It showed everyone how many friends we could be losing to drug-related deaths," said Goddard Student Council President Wendy Leaverton.

"I think it made everyone realize how important it is to stay drug free," said Student Council Vice President Katie Lea.

And as a reminder of the potential loss of friends to drug and alcohol abuse, seventh grade student Stephanie Chamness said, "I'm taking my arm band home. I'm going to keep it to remember this."

Education a dance against drugs

How do you teach a three year old about the dangers of drugs and alcohol? The Midland police department does it with robots, animated puppets, and a willingness to get up and dance. Sometimes just keeping officers visible to youngsters encourages them to talk about drug or alcohol problems in their neighborhoods.

"It can be as simple as having a police officer walk through a school cafeteria and say: 'Hi,' to all the kids," said MPD Sgt. David Garcia.

However, Garcia said the police department's animated McGruff the Crime Dog (which features a moving mouth and audiotape recording) "really holds the attention span of youngsters for a long time. And some of those kids usually only have a three-second attention span."

Midland police officers have been operating drug abuse activities in the schools for years.

Officer Phyllis Blair-Spinuzzi said the department began a Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) program in 1989. "The actual program began in 1984 in Los Angeles," Ms. Blair Spinuzzi said, noting the program is offered locally in kindergarten through third grade. "Then there is 17 weeks of instruction for sixth graders which ends with a culmination ceremony."

The colorful culmination ceremony is popular with youngsters since it often includes loud music and police officers have been known to don "cool shades" and dance.

But DARE isn't the only educational program in town offered by police officers.

The MPD Crime Prevention Relations Unit also offers drug and alcohol abuse prevention programs, along with safety and crime awareness courses.

Officer Ron Sartor of the MPD Crime Prevention Relations Unit said many programs

Twenty Ways to Encourage Your Children to Use Drugs

1. Never eat together as a family.
2. Never have weekly, monthly, or annual family outings that they can look forward to as a family unit.
3. Talk to your children, not with them; never listen.
4. Punish your children in public, and never praise them or reinforce their positive behavior.
5. Always solve their problems; make their decisions for them.
6. Leave the responsibility of teaching morality and spiritual training to the schools and the church.
7. Never let your children experience cold, fatigue, adventure, injury, risk, challenge, experimentation, failure, frustration, discouragement, and so on.
8. Threaten your children (e.g. "If you ever try drugs or alcohol, I'll punish you").
9. Expect your children to get A's in all subjects in school.
10. Always pick up after your children, and don't encourage them to accept responsibility.
11. Discourage your children from talking about their feelings (anger, sadness, fear, etc.).
12. Be overprotective, and don't teach your child the meaning of the world "consequence."
13. Make your children feel that their mistakes are sins.
14. Put your children off when they ask "Why?" and tell them, "Because I said so."
15. Lead your children to believe that you are perfect and infallible.
16. Keep your home atmosphere in a state of chaos.
17. Never tell your children how much you love them, and never discuss your feelings with them.
18. Never hug them or display affection in front of them.
19. Always expect the worst, and never give them the benefit of the doubt.
20. Don't ever trust them.

DRUGS: School programs appeal to younger set his department presents are tailored to the needs of a specific young audience.

"It depends on what the class needs, whether it's information about school crossing safety or talking about the danger of strangers or drugs, we create programs to suit a particular need," Sartor said.

Sartor is the voice and guiding force behind the robot police car known as Sgt. McCrime. "McCrime sings and dances and talks to children. He also tells about the dangers of drugs," Sartor said. "I operate him backstage by a remote control. I can hear the children in the microphone and answer their questions."

Both Sartor and Garcia said young children are inclined to hang onto every word spoken by a robot or animated figure. "They will often listen to an animated figure more than us," Sartor said.

Sartor breaks the ice with youngsters (in the guise of Sgt. McCrime) by asking them simple questions, such as their names and if they have any brothers or sisters. "Then McCrime may say: 'We were talking about strangers today, weren't we?"

'The kids like the robotronics. But even though the voice comes from a robot, the message comes from the heart.'

— Ron Sartor, Midland Police officer.

"The kids like the robotronics," Sartor said. "But even though the voice comes from a robot, the message comes from the heart."

"We also offer a Whodunit program, where children solve a crime and learn how to work as a team," said Officer Blair-Spinuzzi. "It's important to communicate. Children learn about evidence. They become aware of the facts, and how not to jump to conclusions."

Then there are bicycle safety programs, and presentations on using 911 emergency services as well as how to react in other emergencies. And in many cases, getting the attention of the younger set requires music. "We have music with Sgt. McCrime," Ms. Blair-Spinuzzi said. "Kids get up and dance and we get the teachers up there, too."

And what with taking their show on the road to churches, day care centers and oil companies, Sgt. Ron Sartor said, "Our dance card stays full."

Scholarships available to high school juniors

From Staff Reports

Not everyone's achievements can be measured in grade points. That is the assertion of the Discover Card Tribute Award Scholarship Program.

The program offers scholarships to juniors in high school who exhibit excellence in many areas of their lives, other than just academics. State and national scholarship awards are offered to assist students beyond high school. Scholarships are from $2,500 up to $10,000 each. The scholarship program was developed by the American Association of School Administrators.

Juniors enrolled in public or accredited private schools are eligible. Applicants must have a 2.75 cumulative grade point average on a 4.0 scale for the previous two academic years (9th and 10th grades only). Applicants must also be planning to continue their education or training beyond high school in any accredited training, licensing or certification program or institution of higher education.

Applicants will be judged on special talents (having special skills, aptitudes like working with people, music, skills with their hands, athletic ability, public speaking), leadership (in community or academic life), obstacles overcome (achieving goals despite economic, mental, physical, geographical or societal barriers or challenges), community service and unique endeavors (using a special talent to expand a program, taking or making an opportunity to live away from home or a community, or taking a special course of study).

Winners may use scholarships for enrollment and attendance tuition, fees, books, supplies or equipment. Winners will be notified May 29, 1996. National winners will be announced at a special event in Washington, D.C., in June 1996. Proof of graduation and community service hours worked, and three reference letters will be required. Students will also need to state education and career goals.

For an application package contact by AASA, P.O. Box 9338, Arlington, VA, 22219 or call (703) 875-0708 by Jan. 10, 1996. Application deadline is Jan. 17, 1996.

Test scores improve by 19 percent in Tacoma

Superintendent hailed as miracle motivator leaves district awash in contorversy

N.Y. Times News Service

TACOMA, Wash. — Less than two years into Rudolph Crew's tenure as Tacoma school superintendent, a piece of astonishing news circulated through the schools that hug the hills of this blue-collar mill town.

In one year, the standardized test scores for students in the two major grade levels went up by an average of 19 percent. Teachers were stunned. Administrators were jubilant. Parents saw the bright light they had been looking for in the long night of the public schools.

The turnaround was attributed to Crew, a man described by some as a sort of miracle worker, who brought his philosophy that every child can learn here in 1993.

But even while he was being praised in national education journals and by a majority of the school board and the political leaders, some dissenting voices were emerging in the trenches — among teachers and parents. They wondered whether the test results might represent a short-term turnaround, and they questioned his decision to spend $2 million, or 1 percent of the city's $200 million budget, on motivational training for teachers.

To his most ardent supporters here, Crew has done for Tacoma what a baseball hitting coach does for a slumping slugger. He made students and administrators attend special "efficacy" classes, where they visualized excellence and were taught that failure was not an option.

But to others, now bitter over his departure, his vision did not easily translate into the classroom. The improved test results, his critics say, reflected better training for tests — not necessarily smarter students.

"There were a lot of raised eyebrows among teachers when those test scores came in," said Karen Dasher, a high school principal in Tacoma who has been with the school district for 21 years. "While you can't teach the test, there are ways to make the curriculum match it." She also said that special-education students had been excluded.

School officials denied that students had been left out, and said they had not tried to "teach the test," as the practice is known. "We couldn't believe it ourselves when those results came in," said Gay Campbell, the Tacoma school spokeswoman. "So we went back and checked them, and it all added up. We attribute it to Dr. Crew's leadership and his vision that all children can learn."

At a recent board meeting called to wrestle with Crew's departure, parents were divided on what kind of legacy he would leave. Patsy Hingnell, a member of the United Parents for Supporting Education in Tacoma Schools, called herself one of his "big supporters" and said she was "very disappointed he's leaving."

But Jeanette Ruckle, who has had four children in the Tacoma schools, said he had not stayed long enough to prove himself. "He's charismatic and he has a wonderful view of what he wants for children," she said, "but it's real tough to implement his ideas."

Some of the criticism of Crew, people here say, can be attributed to the normal tensions within a school bureaucracy. And many, like Ms. Ruckle, feel a sense of betrayal at Crew's departure that may have contributed to their disapproval.

Still, these critics say that the money that was spent on efficacy training could have been better spent to prevent teacher layoffs, or on books that were in such short supply that some students had to make do with photocopies.

And while saying he wanted to be more involved with teachers, Crew dismissed three of the district's five high school principals, causing a rift among teachers, but with the support of the school board.

Crew said the move was in the best interest of the school system. "I know it can be disruptive, but it needed to happen," he said.

With 180,000 people, Tacoma is a much smaller sister to Seattle, 30 miles to the north, and it has a political climate as benign as the weather. There are more than five times as many students in New York as there are people in all of Tacoma.

It is a city where the middle class, by and large, has not given up on the public schools. There are just under 32,000 students attending 55 schools. About 37 percent of the students are members of racial minorities, primarily black and Asian. The five-member school board runs the school district and selects the superintendent. The mayor has almost no involvement.

When asked if a school superintendent from Tacoma could handle the raucous political environment of New York, Doug Sutherland, a former mayor, started laughing.

"We don't even understand that word 'raucous,'" said Sutherland, who is now the Pierce County executive, governing the county that includes Tacoma. "We don't work against each other. There's a high degree of cooperation."

Indeed, Lynn said that the school board had been unanimous on "just about 98 percent of all the things we've voted on."

He added, though, "that most of decisions are just about buying milk and tissue paper. I suspect New York's going to be a lot like that, but just with more milk and paper."

But while the board has nearly always sung with one voice of praise about Crew, teachers and parents have not.

"He hasn't been as forthcoming here as we expected him to be," said Patsy Hegstad, a parent who has been active as a volunteer for the district. "He says he wants more involvement, then he excludes parents from major decisions. He set up this parent center, but a lot of people see it as just so much fluff."

Some teachers feel the same way. "We would have this big gathering at the start of the year, a rally in the Tacoma Dome, and then we would be excluded from most major decisions," said Ms. Dasher.

Crew said that those kinds of complaints often arose if parents and teachers disagreed about how progress could be made in the schools. He said he wanted to help parents help their children do well.

In Sacramento, Calif., where Crew was the superintendent before coming to Tacoma, he left a big mark as a motivator.

"He has a good feel for what you need to do to move a district," said David W. Gordon, the superintendent of Elk Grove, bordering Sacramento. "No one will outwork Rudy."

Education Policy

The Midland Reporter-Telegram publishes information on upcoming school-related events in the Education in Brief section and announces high school and college academic achievements in the Making the Grade section.

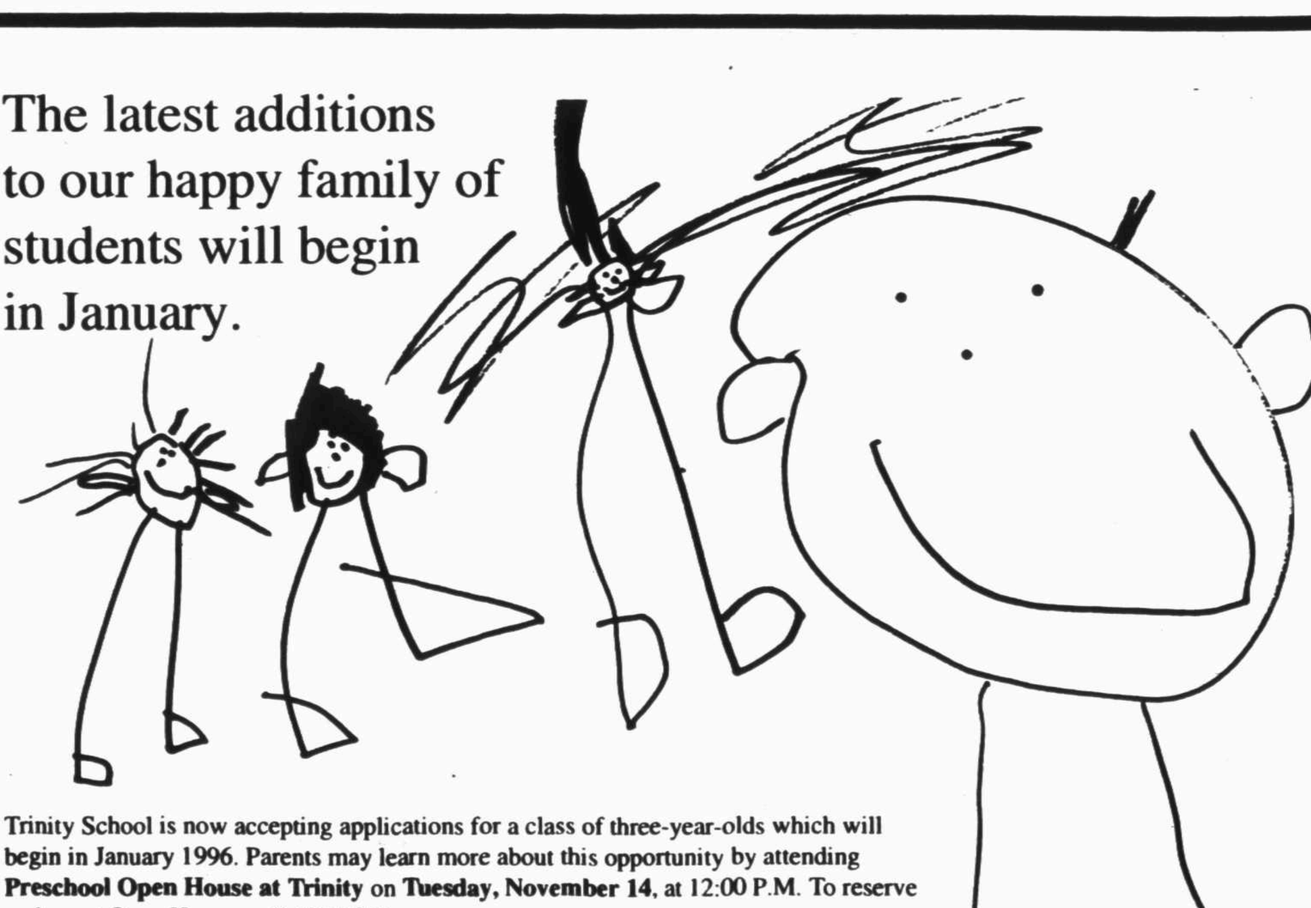
All articles are edited to Associated Press style and deadline for any articles is Monday at noon to be published in the following Sunday education section. Items will be published on a first-come-first-serve basis as space allows.

The Making the Grade section honors local students and former area students attending universities. Head-and-shoulder photographs may be submitted with articles for Making the Grade honorees.

Band and cheerleader competition results are published as they are received. Photos are published of All-State students and cheerleaders winning sweepstakes trophies, or state or national awards.

High school end-of-year award night honorees, junior high school honor roll lists, National Honor Society inductees, Duke Talent Identification honorees are provided to the newspaper from local schools. Duke Talent honorees and Who's Who Among American High School students are published twice a year as a group, and are not published individually.

The latest additions to our happy family of students will begin in January.



Trinity School is now accepting applications for a class of three-year-olds which will begin in January 1996. Parents may learn more about this opportunity by attending Preschool Open House at Trinity on Tuesday, November 14, at 12:00 P.M. To reserve a place at Open House, call 697-3281.

MAKING THE GRADE

Midland Downtown Lions Club has named Clay Johnston, son of Jan Johnston and the late Byron Johnston and a senior at Midland High School, as its Junior Lion of the Week.

Johnston

He is active in National Honor Society, D-FY-IT, Student Council, varsity baseball (3 years), Teen Community Bible Study, First Baptist Church youth group, Texas Scholars and Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He has received academic letters, the Optimist Award for Outstanding Baseball Teenager, MHS Outstanding Student in Social Studies, All Tournament Player - 1995 Tournament of Champions, 1st Team - All District Baseball (Soph. year), 2nd Team - All District (Jr. year) and Who's Who Among American High School Students.

Johnston plans to major in business or engineering.

Midland Downtown Lions Club has named Matt McKinnon, son of Anne and Ed McKinnon and a senior at Lee High School, as its Junior Lion of the Week.

McKinnon

He is active in National Honor Society, Texas Scholars, First United Methodist Church and participated in the National Young Leaders Conference in June. He has received Presidential Academic Fitness Awards and has been named to Who's Who Among American High School Students.

McKinnon plans to study engineering at Texas A&M.

Report shows students lack in knowledge of U.S. history

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than half of America's high school seniors don't know basic facts about U.S. history, and they cannot use what they do know to reason or back up their opinions, a national report card indicates.

"Our kids did poorly across the board," said Naomi Cohen, a former Connecticut state lawmaker on the citizens board established by Congress to oversee the National Assessment of Educational Progress.

The scores, released Wednesday, are certain to intensify the political debate over school quality. Just two months ago, Education Secretary Richard Riley pointed to upswings in other test results and declared that U.S. education was "on the right track."

RILEY, IN a statement Wednesday, said the history scores prove the need for voluntary national academic standards.

"This test says that when measured against high standards, our children don't know enough — and that's probably right," said Riley, who missed the NAEP news conference because of a scheduling conflict.

However, he called both the test and its scoring difficult: "It's a tough test — much more rigorous than what most students are used to seeing in school," he said.

FOR EXAMPLE, the test required students to analyze such documents as maps, paintings and magazine covers, and covered areas that some schools may skip, such as the history of technology and religion.

NAEP officials acknowledged the test was tough, but insisted it represented what students need to keep strong "our system of democratic self-government, which depends on knowledgeable citizens," said William T. Randall, Colorado's education commissioner.

Many NAEP board members noted that history is often still taught as in the early 1900s.

But conservative critics argue the voluntary standards touted by Riley infringe on local control of schools.

SCORES ON other NAEP tests over the past decade have shown students improving in math and science — possibly as a result of school reform efforts of the 1980s — while barely holding steady in reading and writing.

Upset by such statistics, conservatives in Congress and the states have pushed for public financing of private schools and more local control for parents.

The history test, given in early 1994 to a national sample of 22,500 fourth-, eighth- and 12th-graders, found:

- Among 12th-graders, only 43 percent attained at least the basic level; 11 percent were proficient; and 1 percent advanced.
- Among eighth-graders, 61 percent attained basic; 14 percent proficient; and 1 percent advanced.
- Among fourth-graders, 64 percent attained basic; 17 percent proficient; and 2 percent advanced.

The 1994 Test results cannot be directly compared to 1988 NAEP results because the test form and content have changed. But Randall said an informal comparison indicated general consistency in scores.

The test contained both multiple choice questions to measure factual knowledge, and essay questions to measure a student's ability to reason, weigh conflicting information and back up arguments.

One question asked seniors: "What goal was most important in shaping United States foreign policy between 1945 and 1990?

(A) Preventing the spread of communism to new areas and weakening it where it already existed; (B) Encouraging trained scientists and other skilled workers who lived in foreign countries to immigrate to the United States; (C) Strengthening the United States industrial and agricultural sectors to help them compete against the British and French; (D) Providing foreign aid to all poor countries to help them develop economically and technologically."

Only 47 percent of high school seniors chose the correct answer, A.

THE TEST showed sharp differences by race.

About half of white and Asian seniors, but only 20 percent of black and Hispanic seniors, were at or above the basic level.

Boys and girls did the same in fourth and eighth grades, but boys scored better in 12th grade.

The test also found, as other NAEP tests have, that children of more educated parents did better.

Students in private schools did better than those in public schools — probably in part because of parents' education levels and the makeup of private schools, NAEP said.

Experts answer students' questions about clouds

N.Y. Times News Service

Students often ask questions about clouds. Science experts are providing answers. One common question is: " If I could touch a cloud, what would it feel like?

"We have all felt a cloud," said Fred Gadomski, a meteorologist at Pennsylvania State University. "Fog is nothing more than a cloud on the ground," he said, and a warm cloud, one above freezing temperature, feels the way fog feels. Such a cloud contains tiny droplets of water and sometimes slightly larger ones, called drizzle. If you touched one, you would probably sense some moisture, but your hand would not actually feel wet unless drizzle was present," Gadomski said.

With other clouds, he said, the dominant sensation would probably be extreme chill from the very cold air.

At the tops of most clouds at midlatitudes, the temperature is well below freezing, and there is a mix of water droplets and ice crystals that ultimately combine and grow large enough to become snowflakes. These fall as snow if the ground is cold enough or as rain if the ground is warmer.

In high wispy cirrus clouds, which are 25,000 to 35,000 feet up, the temperature is far below zero, perhaps minus 30 or 40 degrees: they are primarily made up of tiny ice crystals, he said. In wintertime, precipitation in very cold air masses can form ice needles, which are essentially crystals that condense in cold, dry air. "You can see them catch the sun but you can't feel them," Gadomski said.

What about asbestos, other students have asked? Why doesn't asbestos burn?

The answer: Because asbestos, like glass, is already oxidized, it cannot be further oxided by burning. The various compounds called asbestos are basically silicon dioxide, a compound of silicon and oxygen found in common beach sand.

Science

Charles Bell was preparing for graduate studies in Anatomy when he "stumbled" into teaching. While waiting for his fiancée to finish her degree, Bell accepted a position at a middle school on an emergency teaching certificate. "To my complete surprise, I discovered the thrill of helping students realize their potential."

He soon returned to school and received a M.Ed. in Science Education from Vanderbilt University. Bell has now completed 15 years of teaching in the public schools of Texas and New Mexico and has spent over "one-half million student contact hours working with adolescents." He has taught Chemistry, Biology II, Physical Science, Physics and is now Midland High's Science Department Chairman. Bell belongs to several professional organizations and has served on the CEIC, DEIC, Campus Technology Advisory Committee and the School Liaison Committee of Texas Scholars.

Winter interim classes set

Winter interim classes will be offered at Midland College Dec. 27 though Jan. 11.

Early registration for the interim session is Dec.4-14 in Student Services area of the Scharbauer Student Center. Students may also register the day classes begin at 8:30 a.m. Tuesday, Dec. 27 in the Roadrunner Room of the Scharbauer Student Center.

Scheduled classes are: Introduction to Film, Composition and Literature, Technical Writing, Masterpieces of Western World I, State and Federal Government I, U.S. History to 1877, U.S. History since 1877, Rock Music in American History, Spreadsheet Training-MS Excel/Windows, Sociology and Public Speaking.

For information about winter interim classes, call 685-4501.

Senior citizens discount available for credit classes

Midland College offers senior citizens a discount when they enroll in credit classes.

To be eligible for the discount, students must be 65 years of age or older, pay a minimum tuition cost for four credit hours (a total of $68 for in-district) plus any lab fees necessary for that course. Students must pay the semester by hour rate for any additional hour in which they enroll.

Other fees including parking, student activities fees and general use fees will be waived. For more information, call 685-4501.

AIMS test offered

The AIMS Aptitude Test, a test designed to assist students in making a decision on career choices, will be given at Midland College Dec. 8-10.

For more information about the AIMS Aptitude Test, call (214) 234-8378.

SSAT offered

The Secondary School Admission Test (SSAT), a entrance examination for admission to secondary private schools, will be given at Midland College Dec. 9 and Jan. 13.

For more information about the SSAT, call (609)-683-4440 or fax 1-800-442-SSAT.

Graduation intent deadline

Students who plan to graduate on May 10 must file an intent to graduate in the registrar's office by Nov. 30. A $20 graduation fee is required when filing the form.

Early registration lets students plan ahead for spring

Early Spring registration begins Nov. 14 with many advantages for students who want to get a head start on their education next semester.

Midland College has an "open door" registration policy, and that policy has become even more student-friendly. Any student—not just returning students—may register early, 8 a.m.-5 p.m., Nov. 14-21 and Nov 27- Dec. 1 in the Student Services office in the Scharbauer Student Center.

Phone registration is available for returning students who have passed the TASP during any of the early registration periods by calling 685-4706.

The spring class schedule will be inserted in the Nov. 12 issue of the Midland Reporter-Telegram so that students can choose classes, see a counselor and finish the registration process before the end of the fall semester. Students must pay tuition and fees no later than Jan. 3 to ensure that schedule.

New students must bring their transcripts from the last school attended. Some testing such as the state-required TASP test and math and English placement test for students enrolling in these subjects for the first time may be required.

For students unsure about admissions requirements, counselors will be available to:

—Arrange TASP testing
—Arrange GED testing
—Arrange interest inventory or other special tests
—obtain degree plans from four-year schools
—refer students to other sources of assistance at Midland College.

Registration time permits for the Jan. 10 arena registration may be obtained in the Student Center Dec. 4-8 and Jan. 2-5.

For more information about spring registration at Midland College, Call 685-4501.

Silent Auction

Student Services Secretary Flo Skinner and Director of Special Populations Rita Nell Diffie contemplate bidding on a ceramic piece in MC's annual silent auction to benefit the United Way Nov. 1. The auction raised more than $2,000.

Freshman Orientation offers help to new students

MC students check their options as they go over the course schedule. Early registration for Spring 1996 is 8 a.m.-5 p.m., Nov. 14-21 and Nov 27- Dec. 1.

Attending college for the first time can be confusing but for students attending the Spring 1996 Freshman Orientation on the morning of Monday, Nov. 13, the path to higher education may be a little bit smoother.

Freshman orientation is designed to help students get ready to register and and to encourage them to take advantage of testing offered during this time. It is held in an effort to be helpful and student-friendly for people new to Midland College.

"We want students to have a great experience on this campus," said C.C. Dakil, Vice President of Student Services. "Orientation is just one way we try to make beginning college less stressful," he said.

MC Counselors, student services staff and faculty will present programs concerning college catalogue information, the Honors program, choosing a major, TASP and placement testing, credit by examination, scholarships and financial aid and guidance in transfers and schedule development.

For more information about Freshman Orientation or registration at Midland College, call 685-4501.

Journalism students win awards at state contest

Midland College journalism students won 13 awards at the Texas Community College Journalism Association convention Oct. 26-28. The winning entries are from material published during the 1994-95 academic year.

A series of El Paisano issues edited by Tonya Bullard received a third place in the general excellence category. Bullard is now serving as the features editor for the Angelo State University student newspaper.

Overall staff awards included second place for layout and design and third place for headline writing.

Other awards included second place in sportswriting by Amy Hargis; second place in news photography by Kes Gilhome; third place in newswriting by Wendy Hobbs; third place in sports photography by Charlotte Martin, and honorable mention in column writing by Tara Brady.

The top individual award was a first place for advertising won by Crystal White, last year's El Paisano advertising manager and currently a student at Angelo State.

In the magazine categories, current El Paisano editor Benjamin Adams received a second place in cover design for the spring 1995 issue of the Chaparral, MC's news-feature publication.

Tanya Warnick received a second place award in the non-journalism story category for a short story in the fall 1994 issue of Tableau, MC's literary magazine.

Other magazine awards included an honorable mention for photography by Ron McFadden and an honorable mention for layout by Nancy Calhoun, this semester's Tableau editor.

The awards are recognition for long hours spent by these students who create publications that are among the best in the state, according to Bob Templeton, MC Allison Chair of Journalism and the TCCJA president for 1995-96.

"Journalism is often among the most demanding areas of study since it requires critical thinking skills as well as a strong work ethic," Templeton said.

"My thanks goes to the hard-working students, journalism lab instructor Karen Lanier and the MC administrators who have been very supportive of the publications."

The awards were presented at an evening banquet following a day of concurrent seminars coordinated by the TCCJA host colleges of Brookhaven, Richland and Eastfield.

Templeton attended the convention with current MC students Benjamin Adams, Jeanna Cuny, Tisha Tharp, Kes Gilhome and Paul Lloyd .

Former MC students Tonya Bullard and Chris Voss also attended.

Elise Coombes is public relations director for Midland College.

DIABETES

Non-Curable but Controllable

Cal and Brenda Yonts' son Conner (middle) was diagnosed with diabetes when he was only 8 months old. Now 2½, Conner and his family have learned to handle his disease. His brother, Cameron (right), even helps test Conner's blood sugar.

Conrad Quiroz Jr., above, was diagnosed with Type II diabetes about 10 years ago. He controls his disease with exercise, diet and medication, but he does not have to take insulin.

Diabetes is nothing to fool around with.

Diabetes is a non-curable but controllable disease that affects somewhere around 8,000 people in Midland County, according to information from Clair Koetitz, president of the Midland County chapter of the American Diabetes Association.

And a lot of these people might be unaware of their condition, he added.

"You can go along for a long time and not even realize you have diabetes," Koetitz said. Often some other condition prompts a visit to the doctor, where the underlying diabetes is discovered.

Diabetes is a physical condition in which "the pancreas doesn't function properly," Koetitz said, which results in an "imbalance of insulin in the system. The body doesn't secrete enough insulin and the blood sugar (level) gets out of whack."

Insulin is used in digestion to "stabilize blood sugar. It (blood sugar) can get too high or too low." If blood sugar is too high, the result can be a diabetic coma, which can be fatal, Koetitz said. If it is too low, the result might be insulin shock, "which is just about as threatening (as a diabetic coma), but easier to control."

Symptoms of diabetes include excessive thirst, sudden and unexplained weight loss, fatigue and sometimes mood swings. A diagnosis by a physician is the only way to know for sure if someone is a diabetic.

But the diagnosis isn't as frightening as it was 75 years ago, when insulin shots were first administered. "Until insulin was discovered, it (diabetes) was just fatal," Koetitz said. People died, and "often people didn't know what they were dying of."

Today diabetics can live normal lives, with some adjustments in some of their behaviors. Here are some of their stories:

Frances Bardin, above, was diagnosed with diabetes about 30 years ago. Although she had to change some of her habits, she has been able to lead a full life by maintaining her health and taking insulin.

FRANCES BARDIN

Frances Bardin was diagnosed with diabetes about 30 years ago "when I was in my mid-30s," she said. The mother of seven children, she said her youngest was only 6 at the time. "It was Feb. 7 — I remember that!"

Her first reaction to her new medical status was anger. Although she knew diabetes often runs in families, she still didn't think it was going to

Haley Library hosts show of works by four Southwest Impressionist

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

McKnight-Harrison

From the opening Oct. 26 to its conclusion Nov. 27, an Art Show and Sale of the works by four Southwest Impressionists is the current drawing card at the Haley Library, 1805 W. Indiana Ave.

Dedicated to the memory of J. Evetts Haley, the show opened with a reception honoring the artists, Mary Rasmussen, Doris Spires, Charles Pruitt and Don Parks.

Guests enjoyed a cocktail buffet and anticipated the drawing for four paintings donated by the artists. The happy winners were Tommye Conner, Georgann Harben, Helen Pogue and Harry Harrison. Proceeds from the sale of chances for the art work benefit the library.

Among those seen in the large throng were Mary (Mrs. Robert) Griffith, Frances Tompkins, Carolyn Roden, Liz and Bill Adam, Diane McElligott, Ivan Ard, and Cathy and Dick Stump, with their houseguests and Cathy's old college friends, Pat and Tom DeWees of Dallas.

Those who have not had the opportunity to see the show may do so during regular library hours, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Mondays through Fridays.

THERE WERE WITCHES and goblins, but also pirates, hippies extraterrestrials, members of the ATF, Frankenstein and his bride, a carhop on roller skates, and a host of other costumed characters at one of Midland's largest Halloween parties last weekend. Approximately 350 persons attended.

Held at the Yucca Theatre, the party featured dancing to the music of Skeleton Crew and tables full of treats in the form of hors d'ouevres. Orange and black balloons and crepe paper streamers added a festive touch to the All Hallow Eve celebration.

Hosting the fun affair, in conjunction with Ham Hocks, one of Midland Community Theatre's volunteer arms, were the following individuals: James Huddleston and Sue Smith, O.C. and Becca Maxwell, Earl and Kathy Keller, G. Thomas Harlow, Cindy Botes, Bill Rutter, Mike Fields, Greg Dove, Ginny Bynum, Rick Lanning, Sharon N-Davidson, Mark Byrne, Brian L. Yates, Jeff Latimer and Janna Thompson, Brenda Lawson and James Lucas, Paul Hiebert and Suzanne Voltz, Jack and Shelley Hickman, Roger and Connie Barnes and Doug Seawright.

TWO YOUNG MIDLAND women were recently nominated for Homecoming Queen at their respective universities.

Abby Geltemeyer, daughter of Gwen and Jim Geltemeyer, was a nominee at Baylor University. Representing Tau Delta Epsilon fraternity, she is a junior pre-med major.

Jennifer Yocham was nominated at Abilene Christian University. The daughter of Mary and Pat Yocham, she is a speech pathology major and president of Tri Kappa Gamma women's social club.

AN EARLY THANKSGIVING dinner was held last weekend at the home of Jody and Bob Slaydon to celebrate the upcoming marriage of their daughter, Cyd Slaydon, and Tony Bradford, both of Boulder, Colo.

Other guests were the Slaydon's daughter, Susan; her husband, Mike Higgins, and their children, Will, Seth and Lucy, of San Angelo, and Bob's mother, former Midlander Mary Lou Shaw of Lubbock.

The Slaydon sisters are both graduates of Lee High School, Susan in 1983 and Cyd in 1988.

KATHERINE HATCH, Pulitzer Prize-nominated newspaper reporter, foreign correspondent and best-selling author, presented an entertaining program for the Midland Country Club Ladies Association's October luncheon meeting.

Katie recounted her many and varied assignents as a reporter in such intriguing places as Cuba and Venezuela and her interviews with a number of celebrities and politicians.

The speaker moved to Cuernavaca, Mexico, where she still resides, in 1971. There she met and became friends with the actress, Helen Hayes. They worked together on and off for 10 years on Miss Hayes's autobiograhy, "My Life in Three Acts," which became a best-seller. Ms. Hatch also wrote "Washington Through a Purple Veil" with former Congresswoman Lindy Boggs of New Orleans. In additon, she has written a guidebook to Mexico for children traveling with their families.

Members and guests enjoyed a luncheon featuring Beef Tip Diane over steamed white rice and for dessert, Chocolate Mousse Cake. Hostesses for the social hour preceding lunch were Babs (Mrs. Richard) Sevier, Nancy Hull and Jere (Mrs. Walter) Hubbard.

affect her.

"It comes from my mother's side of the family," Mrs. Bardin said. "My mother had it. My grandfather probably died of a diabetic coma (although no one knows for sure)" and several of his brothers had the disease.

At first she thought she had a kidney infection that wasn't responding to her usual self-treatment, she said. "I called the doctor and he said to come in."

His diagnosis was diabetes.

Mrs. Bardin uses two insulin shots every day to keep her blood sugar level within safe limits. She is careful with her diet, tries to get a certain amount of exercise and just in general takes care of herself.

"When I first got diabetes, I got an American Diabetes diet and did not venture off it at all," she said. "In the past 30 years some of the recipes have changed; some have a very little bit of sugar, and some use artificial sweetener."

Because she has a sweet tooth, sticking to a diabetic diet was difficult for her, but "I accepted it immediately," because she knew her health depended on it.

Her advice to newly-diagnosed diabetics is basic common sense. "First of all, watch your diet; take your shots; check your sugar; take exercise — walking is right good, when you can walk," she said, thumping the cast on her currently-broken leg.

Then, Mrs. Bardin advises, "They should be on some kind of schedule. I try to take my insulin around the same time every morning," and tries to eat around the same time every day, whenever possible.

And, she added, it's helpful to attend meetings of the diabetes support group that meets once each month at the Abell-Hanger Medical Pavilion. "Diabetes affects your whole body — your eyes, your hair, your complexion, your feet ... It makes you heal (from injuries) real slow, and sores get infected easily, especially on your feet and legs."

The support group is a wonderful source of information about how to live with diabetes, she said. "Every time I go there I learn something new. It may be a little something, but that little something could save your life.

"Diabetes is not something you play around with. If you don't take care of yourself, you can lose your legs, lose your eyesight — you don't play around with diabetes.

"And it's no respecter of anybody — rich, poor, fat, thin, black, white, purple, pink..."

Learning about the disease, taking care of your body and especially following doctor's orders can make life easier for diabetics, Mrs. Bardin said. "And then just get on with your life. And pray a lot. Turn yourself over to the Lord and say, 'OK, Lord, you're in charge'," she smiled.

CONNER YONTS

When Brenda and Cal Yonts took their sick 8-month-old son to the doctor almost two years ago, the last thing they expected was a diagnosis of diabetes.

Diabetes is rare in someone that young, they said, so the doctors weren't even considering the possibility when their son, Conner, became so sick.

"At first they thought he had a virus," Cal said.

The baby had been unusually thirsty and fussy for a couple of days, Brenda said. Finally he started having breathing difficulties, "and still nobody was thinking it was diabetes because they don't see it in babies."

And his eyes "kind of rolled around," added Conner's 8-year-old brother, Cameron.

Finally at 8 a.m. on a Saturday the frantic parents took Conner to the emergency room, and by 10 a.m. Conner was admitted into the hospital, where a blood test was run and his blood sugar was discovered to be 1089.

"He was almost in a coma," Cal said. "Normal blood sugar is between 80 and 120 — 200 is high."

"Once we got the diagnosis, we were sent to Lubbock" to the pediatric endocrinology unit at Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center.

"The nurses told us he was close to respiratory arrest" at the time of the diagnosis, Cal said. "He went from being pretty OK two days before to real bad, real fast."

Conner is a Type I diabetic, which means his body doesn't produce any insulin of its own, his father explained. Without his daily injections of insulin, Conner would become desperately ill again.

He and his parents follow a daily routine to keep his illness under control. "We check his blood sugar around 7 a.m.," Brenda said, using a finger-prick method to draw a drop or two of blood. "Then I figure out how much insulin he needs to have. He gets his shot, and then has breakfast."

Conner's blood sugar is checked before each of his three meals and before bed, she said. He also gets three snacks, and his foods are "regular and just about the same every day as far as a carbohydrate value.

"We take him to Lubbock every three months for a checkup," she added. While there, the family has consultations with a dietitian, who helps them plan Conner's food plans.

Because diabetes is so rare in children as young as Conner, the Yonts have had to find a support system of their own. Friends who have diabetes in their own families are a help, Brenda said, and "Cal gets a lot of stuff off Internet."

"We found a diabetic forum" off Internet, Cal said.

"They even talk about potty training a diabetic child, and how often do you get that!" his wife said, adding, "Cameron is a big help. He makes it a lot easier. He can check his (Conner's) blood sugar."

Today Conner is an active 2 1/2 -year-old with the busy lifestyle of a typical toddler. He loves toy cars, videos, running around and kittens — especially a tiny one named Max — and is crazy about his mom, dad and big brother. He has an engaging smile and a winning personality.

Recently, he has been attending a Mother's Day Out program with other children his own age, and loving every minute of it, his mother said.

His parents' and doctors' philosophy is, "He's a boy first, a diabetic second," his father said. "We deal with the day-to-day stuff first, diabetes second." The adults in Conner's life are making sure he enjoys a normal childhood.

Besides, his mother added, "all the doctors are convinced there's a cure right around the corner."

"The first thing everybody always says is, 'He looks so healthy'," Cal said.

"Well, he is."

CONRAD QUIROZ, JR.

Conrad Quiroz Jr., an account manager with TU Electric, has been with that company for about 25 years, he said.

About 10 years ago, "right after I turned 40," he was diagnosed with Type II diabetes. He doesn't have to take insulin shots, but rather controls his diabetes through diet, exercise and medication. "And sometimes that's hard," he said.

Both his parents and several other members of his family have diabetes, Quiroz said, but "I didn't know much about it before" his own diagnosis. His own symptoms included fatigue, weakness and irritability. "Sometimes I would go home and just fall asleep in front of the TV, all of a sudden," which was not something he normally did.

He knew something was wrong, but didn't know what.

"When they told me diabetes was a non-curable illness, I was very concerned," he said.

Since that time he's learned to control the condition through diet, exercise, medication and taking care of himself. Things haven't been all that bleak, although at first he did find it difficult to adjust his eating habits. "To me, that was one of the hardest things to do. It's hard to break old habits.

"I'm not someone who craves sweets much, but (soon after his diagnosis) I found myself having to eat a candy bar or something.

"After my diagnosis, for some reason, I found myself needing sugar," he laughed.

To new diabetics, "I would say be real careful about what you eat and the amount you eat," said Quiroz, who also is an board member for the American Diabetes Association's local chapter. "And you have to exercise. Medication by itself will not do it. And like I said, I find that hard.

"You can eat just about anything (within certain limits), but you definitely have to limit the amount," he added. "Like my wife says, don't eat a whole watermelon."

He also has made sure his children know of their chances of becoming diabetic, since the illness tends to run in families. "I've made sure my children are aware it does run in families and they have to get themselves checked. I've got a niece in her mid-20s and she's already on insulin."

But diabetes isn't the death sentence it was decades ago. Quiroz said he would tell new diabetics, "that this is an illness you can live with, if you are willing to make sacrifices in diet and exercise, manage your blood sugar and, above all, take care of yourself."

Quiroz said he recently read an article that stated that about 14 million Americans have diabetes. Of those, about 1 million are Type I diabetics who need daily insulin injections; the rest are Type II who possibly don't.

But, according to the article, "about half are not aware (they have diabetes) because their symptoms are very mild, and that's scary," he said.

Living with diabetes on a daily basis is a fact of life for him and other diabetics. "At the time (of his diagnosis) and still, when you go to the doctor it is a scary feeling when you first find out," Quiroz said, but managing diabetes is very possible.

"But you have got to want to."

Holiday Festival fund-raiser planned to benefit local ADA

Staff Reports

November is National Diabetes Month, dedicated to providing diabetics and their families with the latest information about the condition, according to information from the American Diabetes Association.

In keeping with the month-long awareness campaign, Midland chapter of the ADA will present its annual fund-raiser Holiday Festival 7 p.m.-midnight Saturday at ClayDesta Atrium.

Featured performer will be Houston native Brian Black, who will present a show of country/western music for dancing. Black has been on tour of the U.S., entertaining at fairs, festivals, rodeos and special events.

Also included in the event will be open bar, hors d'oeuvres and silent auction. Festive Western attire is recommended but not required.

Proceeds will benefit Permian Basin diabetes educational programs, materials, literature and public awareness campaigns. "Research will probably receive 75 percent of the money," said Clair Koetitz, president of Midland chapter, ADA.

Tickets are $15 per person, and are available from Lusky's Western Stores in Midland and Odessa; tickets will not be sold at the door. For more information call 685-3375.

Diabetics with a sweet tooth can still have their cake and eat it too

Staff Reports

For diabetics with a sweet tooth, a company called PalateAbility is offering three cakes designed for no-sugar diets.

Classic Cheesecake, Chocolate Velvet Cake and Aunt Sally's Coffeecake are available by mail from PalateAbility, which was founded by Carol Whitton, a diabetic. Ms. Whitton's company worked with Walter Tanner, a master baker from Switzerland, to develop the desserts, which can be shipped frozen, second day air, to anywhere in the continental U.S.

"I have diabetes and I enjoy great food ... especially great desserts," Ms. Whitton said. "I work long hours and I have three young children. I don't have time to bake from scratch. But I still want a delicious treat on occasion. These cakes are so good I serve them to guests, and they never realize they are eating dessert without added sugar."

But good taste isn't the only consideration. "The cakes have all been nutritionally analyzed by a registered dietitian," she said. "It is important for people with medically restricted diets to know exactly what they are eating. Our labels clearly show the diabetes exchanges.

"These desserts don't taste 'diet,' but they are."

For more information contact PalateAbility Inc., 12201 NW 35th St., Suite 201, Coral Springs, Fla. 33065, or call (305) 340-8108.

"I had it sold by 10 am the first day", says S.M. of Midland.

S.M. sold her Little Tikes Toys with an ad in the Midland Reporter-Telegram Classified. Her advertising investment was only $6!

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Fall is best time to do some 'transitional' work in garden

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

When it comes to plants, there is a window of opportunity that should be seized if you want to be successful. Fall is an important transitional period, when several yard and garden activities need to take place. We are just about at the point when that "window of opportunity" is closing. Here are some of those timely activities:

Benge-Frost

TOMATOES

Many gardens have tomato plants still going strong when the first freeze hits. Some of these plants are from spring plantings and have remained healthy and productive, while others are fall tomatoes. Regardless of the planting date, you may not be ready to let nature take those big green tomatoes. There are a couple of steps you can take to save your fruit.

If the predicted freeze is to be of short duration, you can simply cover the plants with plastic sheeting, old blankets or similar frost protective coverings. If you use these be sure to remove them first thing the next morning if the temperatures are above freezing. If the freeze is predicted to be very low and last for several hours, it would be best to harvest the green fruit.

Mature green tomatoes will ripen to a bright red and full flavor if they are far enough along in their development. You can make this determination by taking a sharp knife and cutting through the tomato. If the seeds move out of the way of the knife, the tomato will ripen inside the house. If the knife slices through the seeds, the fruit is too immature to turn red.

Once you've determined the approximate size of mature green fruit, pick all tomatoes of comparable size and larger. These can be stored in a cool, dark place to develop the desirable deep red color and use for the next several weeks.

PEST CONTROL

If you've got root knot nematodes in your garden, now is the time to take steps to control them. Root knot nematodes are the microscopic round worms that invade the roots of susceptible plants and cause large root swellings (galls). The pest causes so much disfigurement and restriction to the roots that susceptible plants may turn yellow, wilt and die. Tomatoes, beans, okra, peppers, cucumbers and many other vegetables and plants suffer from this hard-to-control, damaging pest. Control is difficult at best, so plan to fight this pest with a combination of practices such as plant nematode resistant varieties, added organic matter, crop rotation, soil solarization and trap crops.

Elbon cereal ryegrass is the most effective trap crop tested for reducing root knot nematode populations. This cool-season grass needs to be planted in the fall before temperatures get too cold. It should be grown just like a crop, with proper watering and fertilizing techniques used to promote a big healthy plant. A big plant will yield a big root system, which will trap more nematodes. In the spring, three weeks to one month before planting, shred and till the cereal ryegrass into the soil. As the plant decomposes, the nematodes will perish.

Not only is this a good way to control nematodes, but it is an excellent method to improve your soil.

COOL COLOR

Don't delay getting some cool season color established in your landscape. Pansies are probably the most popular of the cool season annual plants, and it's no wonder why. They are delightful. A cheerier, brighter flower simply can't be found. The range of colors and combinations are phenomenal — bright yellows, oranges and reds; velvety purples, rubies and deep blues; contrasting whites with deep purples are just a few. Some have faces or blotches in the center of the petals while others have subtle whiskers or no markings at all. Some are bi-colored while others are all the same color (these are called selfs).

Plant them almost anywhere. They like full sun, but will tolerate semi-shade, and need well-drained soils.

Prepare the soil with generous amounts of compost or other forms of organic matter along with a slow-release or organic fertilizer. Plant on about an 8- to 10-inch spacing.

With most flowering plants like colors should be massed together in drifts, but with pansies you can break the rules. Use mixes of colors; mix two or three colors if you have the discipline to do so, or use just one showy color or type.

Keep soils moist throughout the growing season. Mulch soils to help soil moisture retention, protect roots from freezes and heat, and cut down on weeds. Fertilize once or twice a month with a nitrogen fertilizer to keep plants healthy and blooming. Deadhead as flowers become faded to stop seed production and keep more blooms coming. Another good alternative to deadheading is to pick flowers for indoor use in vases, desserts or salads decorations, or crafts and cards.

There are lots of other bedding plants that could be used in your winter landscape, including flowering kale and cabbage, stock, snapdragons, dusty miller, dianthus and sweet alyssum. Be sure to brighten up your winter landscape with some of these outstanding cool season color plants.

PLANT MIGRATION

Tender tropical and sub-tropical plants should be headed indoors before they get caught in a freeze. When night time temperatures start getting down in the 50s, move plants inside. A gradual transition to the indoors, rather than a sudden move, is best for the plants. If you can gradually move plants in a series of steps to conditions increasingly like those inside, you'll have better results. Plants that have spent the summer outdoors in bright light, higher humidity, fresh air and plenty of water and fertilizer will sometimes rebel if suddenly jerked up and placed in some dim, too-warm corner of the living room. The sudden change in light and temperatures can cause yellowing and leaf and bud drop. A gradual move back indoors will give plants more time to acclimate to these inside conditions.

Before moving plants indoors, slip plants out of their containers to check the root ball for unwanted hitchhikers, such as snails, slugs, sowbugs (rolly pollies), lizards and frogs.

A good washing down of leaves and branches and leaching salts out of the soil is a good idea before moving them inside. Some plants can be pruned if they've outgrown their indoor space. These activities are much easier to do outdoors than indoors.

If you simply don't have the room for the move but don't want to permanently part with your plants, look into boarding your plants in a greenhouse for the winter. Another alternative is the garage. A few tender plants can usually be carried over in the garage or other unheated structure. Hibiscus, bougainvillea, mandevilla, geraniums and firebush are likely candidates. They may drop their leaves and look pretty rough, but next spring they should leaf back out and become vigorous and beautiful after just a month or so outdoors.

Don't let the time slip by without taking advantage of some of these activities. It is a great time of year that can yield great results if you take action now.

Deborah Benge-Frost is the extension horticulture agent for the Texas Agricultural Extension Service in Midland and Ector Counties.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Lifestyle Department office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday. For publication in a weekday paper, we must receive the information by noon two days before the information is to be published. For example, an item for Wednesday's paper must be received by noon Monday.

Engagement announcements must appear at least two weeks before the wedding date. Wedding announcements must appear within one month of the event. Anniversary announcements — 25th or higher — must be published within one month of the anniversary date.

All articles must be submitted in writing. Forms for weddings, engagements and anniversaries, only published Sundays, are available in the Lifestyle office. All materials must include the signature and telephone number of the person submitting them.

Photographs may be submitted with wedding and engagement announcements, and with anniversary announcements of 50 years or more, but are not required.

A portrait of the bride-elect or of the future bride and bridegroom together may be submitted with engagement announcements.

Portrait photographs of the bride only or photos of the wedding couple may be submitted with wedding announcements.

A different photo must be submitted for the engagement and wedding announcements. Anniversary photos must be relatively current. Photos should be vertical, black and white, glossy finish, studio portraits. Studio color pictures may be submitted, but quality reproduction cannot be assured. Snapshots generally are not acceptable and Polaroid shots are not accepted.

Photos can be picked up in the Lifestyle Department after publication, or a self-addresses, stamped envelope can be enclosed for the photo to be returned by mail.

There is no charge for publication of photographs and articles.

Get in touch with true feelings

By Dr. Hap LeCrone
N.Y. Times News Service

Learning to recognize your feelings can help you maintain good mental health.

Most of us would say that we usually know why we feel the way we do. When we are happy, we can quickly say why. When we are sad, we think we know the reason. And when we are mad, we can rationalize or point the finger at someone or something that has happened.

But to be really in touch with our feelings, we have to be aware of signals we receive.

I frequently ask my patients to check themselves on day-to-day routines, such as:

■ How do you respond when you see a beautiful sunset? Does the majestic beauty of fresh fallen snow make you tingle? What do you feel when you salute the flag or listen to the "Star Spangled Banner"?

After they have thought about these questions, I ask them to label the emotions and feelings that they have. Then we move on to specific feelings and try to identify them. I ask them:

■ What makes you angry?

It is OK to be angry, but what do you choose to do about your anger? Will you use this strong emotion to do something in a positive way? Or will you let this feeling destroy you?

■ Are you sensitive to the feelings and emotions of your spouse?

If you keep in touch with the feelings of your spouse, your relationship will improve.

■ Do you consider the feelings of your children?

Talk to your children at an early age about feelings. Get them to express their thoughts about daily happenings. What makes them laugh? What makes them cry? Who really hurts their feelings?

■ At work, what part of the day you feel the happiest? Do you notice your co-workers? Are you aware of their feelings?

Human resource specialists say that knowledge and intelligence are components of success, but equally important is the component called people skills. If you are sensitive to the needs of your co-workers, you will be a better communicator and a stronger member of the team.

■ What is your greatest feeling of joy? What gives you a burst of happiness?

Obviously this varies with each person. But it is good to check yourself to realize that happiness does not usually equate with money, fame or material things.

■ What do you know about grief?

If you or someone within your circle of friends experiences a loss, how do you express your feelings? It has been said that since we are born to die, we are born to grieve, to mourn the loss of those for whom we care.

Remember that no two people experience grief the same way. Talking about your feelings of grief has a healing effect. Understanding the grieving process helps one to move on with life.

Other than losing a loved one, what other losses in your life would cause you to grieve?

Feelings are emotions, and we need work to check ourselves so we can keep our lives on an even keel.

DEAR ABBY

Keep those letters coming in for Operation Dear Abby XI

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am an F-16 avionics technician in the U.S. Air Force. In December 1991, I was on a temporary duty assignment to Incirlik Airbase in Turkey. During that month, we received many bags of cards and letters addressed to "Any Serviceperson" from your readers. One afternoon, our officer in charge brought in three mailbags stuffed with greeting cards. I drew one card from each bag and wrote to the people who sent them. The second card I drew was from Laura (the woman I married a year and a half later).

Van Buren

We became fast friends by writing to each other constantly. When I returned to the United States from my overseas assignment in Germany, Laura came to visit me for four days while I was at my mother's home on leave. It was love at first sight. At the end of the four days, I drove her to the airport, bid her farewell and drove home. During the drive home, I was in tears. (Later, I found out she had experienced the same feelings.)

My next assignment took me to Hill Air Force Base in Utah. Laura came to visit a couple of times before deciding to move there to be with me. On Valentine's Day of 1993, I proposed to her, she said yes, and we were married on April 15.

I am currently finishing a one-year tour in South Korea. Unfortunately, Laura and I were unable to celebrate our second anniversary together, but we plan to make up for lost time when I return.

So, thank you, Abby, for a great morale-boosting program. Because of you, I met and married the greatest woman in the world. -- SRA BRIAN A. RONNING, KUNSAN AB, SOUTH KOREA

DEAR BRIAN: Thank YOU — not only for a beautiful letter, but for giving me this opportunity to remind my readers that it's time to begin preparing for Operation Dear Abby XI.

Readers, thanks to all of you who have made Operation Dear Abby so successful every year. Your outpouring of letters, cards and packages lifts the spirits of our men and women in the military who are far from home and family during the holidays. I invite you to participate again this year.

Many schools and clubs make this a group project; people who enjoy baking prepare goodies; others send cards and letters with personal messages.

Cards, letters and packages may be sent to the addresses listed below. Mail will be distributed on a fair-share basis from these Aerial Terminals and Fleet Mail Centers. Please use first class or priority mail. These addresses can be used ONLY from Nov. 15, 1995, to Jan. 15, 1996.

Designer making waves with 'unisex' line

By Amy M. Spindler
N.Y. Times News Service

MILAN, Italy — Because Jean-Paul Gaultier and Giorgio Armani began their careers by designing clothing for men, their women's clothes have always had a seductive androgyny. Now there is Carol Christian Poell.

When Poell's clothes were first displayed at Ron Herman/Fred Segal Melrose in Los Angeles, Nina Garduno, the store's vice president for men's wear, noticed something exceptional: Women were as drawn to the low-slung trousers, tight stretch shirts and tailored jackets as were men. Women wear his clothes now, but Poell will not present a women's line until next fall. Until then, he has a unisex collection that is sexy for both sexes.

Born in Linz, Austria, Poell (pronounced pole) is fascinated with innovative fabrics, denim and rigorous tailoring — interests he shares with his countryman Helmut Lang. "Anyone today who wants fashion to be modern is working on those same concepts," Poell said.

Poell's clothes are so fitted that they tug across the body, making even the leanest form look muscular. Because they are hand-tailored, the clothes give in all the right places. A black leather jacket is lined with cotton Lycra and stretches like skin. A white shirt is pleated, then printed with black so that it ripples and turns white again when the body moves. Even prints like elephant skin or python are sexy. It's steamy stuff.

AT WIT'S END

Great quest of modern lifestyle is searching for the remote control

By Erma Bombeck

Forget the search for excellence.

Forget the quest for the meaning of life.

Bombeck

Forget finding out who you are.

The most important mystery pursued by most Americans is finding the elusive TV remote. Those who service TV sets say most of the missing ones are found in the refrigerator, but that's just the tip of the iceberg. They have been found in recycling bins, garage workrooms, clothes hampers and glove compartments in cars.

Before TV remotes came on the scene, my husband and I had a pretty decent marriage. Our television choices were based on who had the stamina to get out of the chair and change the channel.

Then came the remote, and all of that changed. Before my eyes, my mild-mannered husband turned into a terrorist. He wore the remote around his belt like a Colt 45 and drew it whenever I was in the middle of a movie or waiting for the final question on "Jeopardy."

I was watching "Baywatch" one night when suddenly David Hasselhoff said, "I just hired a new lifeguard." There was a flick of the channel and an elephant seal slid into the water.

I haven't seen a commercial on television in years. You cannot explain to him that when shows are changing on the half-hour and hour, it is solid commercials. Those messages whiz by like we're on fast-forward.

Sometimes as he sleeps I am tempted to unhook the remote from his pajamas, but he's a light sleeper.

Watching him control the TV set wouldn't be so bad if we were compatible on the shows we like. His favorite stand-up is Louis Rukeyser; when MacNeil left Lehrer — he cried.

I visited my mother the other night and asked, "What's wrong with your set?"

"Nothing. Why?"

"It isn't flickering."

"It isn't supposed to flicker. How can you see a program if you're surfing all the time?"

"Look at that!" I said excitedly. "It's a panty protection commercial with June Allyson. I've never seen that before."

"You should see the denture commercial with Jane Powell and her granddaughter. Why don't you stop being a wimp and get control of the remote?"

You never approach someone who is armed.

Renovating home pays extra dividends

Associated Press

If a white-knuckle roller-coaster ride in the stock market isn't your idea of sane investing, maybe you should consider putting your money into a solid, familiar investment you can keep track of every day — your home.

Whether you're remodeling a dingy kitchen or bath, adding an extra bedroom or boosting the "curb appeal" of your house by installing attractive new siding and replacement doors and windows, you can often increase the market value of your home by the full amount or more than you spend on a home improvement.

And, unlike stocks or bonds, renovating your home pays a valuable extra dividend — the pleasure you and your family get from living in a comfortable house whose decor reflects your personal style.

When considering home remodeling, here are some things to keep in mind. If you're financing an improvement, make sure the monthly payments don't put too much of a strain on your budget.

If you're counting on getting back some of the money you will be laying out in a year or two through a higher sales price, keep an eye on resale prices in your neighborhood. If they're flat or dropping, consider scaling down a planned improvement.

Instead of refurbishing your kitchen from ceiling to floorboards, try less costly touches such as new surfaces on cabinets and countertops, inexpensive flooring and a fresh coat of paint.

If you're remodeling for your own enjoyment, you don't have to worry about what you spend. But if you're doing it as an investment, you want to make sure you don't outprice other houses in your neighborhood.

A good rule of thumb: Make sure the current market value of your house plus planned improvements doesn't exceed the value of the better houses in your area by 20 percent. That would mean limiting the renovation on the $90,000 house above to about $30,000 tops.

Society studies Victorian way of death

By Enid Nemy
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — It's possible that some people might consider an "At Rest" coffin plaque hanging over their bed a trifle morbid, not to speak of a bedroom decorated with a 19th-century child's coffin, tastefully topped with funereal floral baskets. But then, these are the people who probably wouldn't understand the kick of munching on coffin-shaped fudge or, for that matter, the joys of a picnic in a cemetery.

None of these kill-joys were in attendance at "In Memoriam," the Victorian Society in America's symposium on "Death and Dying, Mourning and Remembrance in 19th-Century America" at the Sumner School in Washington last weekend.

However, some 70 men and women turned out for it, a group that included historians, museum curators, homemakers, an interior decorator and a retired real estate executive. Most refused to recognize the word "morbid."

"IT'S NICE to be in a place like this, where people don't think you're strange," said Dr. Carla Sofka, an assistant professor of social welfare at the State University in Albany.

Dr. Sofka has Currier & Ives mourning prints on her walls at home, a framed "I brake for old graveyards" bumper sticker in her office and, on occasion, she makes lollipops and chocolates in the shapes of skeletons, tombstones and coffins. "It's not morbid — maybe a little unusual," she said.

She became interested in the subject of death, and how traditions and dealing with loss have changed, she said, while working with a bereavement counseling program in funeral homes when doing her clinical work. And, she said, she uses her collection of more than 400 cartoons on death, funerals and cemeteries as a teaching tool in her courses on the grieving process.

"My hobby helps me bring some spice into my teaching," she said.

THE TWO-DAY symposium featured six speakers, a party at the 19th-century Tortoursky Mansion, and a tour of the Congressional, Rock Creek and Oak Hill cemeteries.

Sergei Troubetzkoy, a historian from Staunton, Va., who organized the events, delivered one of the more esoteric talks, on the technological advances that made possible the cast- and wrought-iron fences and gates in 19th-century American cemeteries. He also claimed responsibility for the coffin-shaped fudge and bat-shaped gingerbread cookies served at the evening Halloween party.

Stephen Jerome, the curator of the Brookline (Mass.) Historical Society, ended his talk on the influence of the European garden cemetery movement on 19th-century American cemeteries with a word of advice. He urged his listeners to visit a cemetery when traveling to other cities. "It tells you much about the culture of a place," he said.

Linda LeTendre, a social worker from Ballston Lake, N.Y., said she had been doing that for years. In fact, she's a member of the Association for Gravestone Studies in Worcester, Mass. (Her therapist once told her, "When you find out why you're interested in cemeteries, don't tell me.")

"A cemetery is like an outdoor art and history museum," Ms. LeTendre said.

SHE INTERRUPTED herself to observe that after arriving in Washington at 3:15 a.m. she felt like "death warmed over." "This is just the conference for that," she said.

Back on the subject of cemeteries, she said she had taken her current boyfriend for a picnic in a cemetery on their first date. "He's a convert now," she said. She did not s go into his reaction to the child's coffin in her bedroom or to the two folding embalming tables stored in her garage.

Gary W. Parks, the director of the Slifer House Museum in Lewisburg, Pa., didn't have as much luck when he took one of his dates to a cemetery. She fell in a hole and broke her ankle.

"She never wanted to go out with me again," he said with some surprise. However, this failed to dampen his enthusiasm. "I still take dates to cemeteries."

May N. Stone, the reference librarian at the New-York Historical Society, used books of the era to illustrate the change in American attitudes toward death in her talk.

"In Harriet Beecher Stowe's 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' of 1852, saintly Little Eva takes 14 pages to die," she related. In "Jennie Gerhardt," a turn-of-the-century Theodore Dreiser novel, according to Ms. Stone, the heroine's daughter dies without fanfare in four pages. "Another age was dawning in American life and death," she said.

HOW THE Victorians dressed themselves and their houses for mourning was outlined by Laurel E. Fant, the curator of collections at the Rock County Historical Society in Janesville, Wis. House dressing, she said, included black covering or draping for windows, chandeliers and mirrors, and a black ribbon rosette for the door. Custom also dictated, she said, that "the corpse was always carried out feet first so that it could not beckon the others to follow."

A widow was expected to observe a year and a day of full mourning, six to nine months of secondary mourning and three to six months of ordinary mourning, all in various textures of black. Gray and shades of purple were allowable after two years and a day.

Ms. Fant also brought with her a 19th-century recipe for the simple cakes served at funeral receptions. She served them at a staged funeral held last October at the Lincoln-Tallman historic house in Janesville. "They're good, but they don't stand out like a wedding cake would stand out, or like a Christmas fruitcake," she said.

Owen Shows, who lectures on the architecture of death at the Massachusetts College of Art in Boston, noted that although an allegorical female figure on a high pedestal was one of the most noticeable features of the Victorian cemetery, there were numerous motifs, like urns and vases, carved lions, sphinxes, altars, even furniture.

WHEN SHIRLEY Sue Swaab rose to speak on "Death as a Way of Life: Mourning Art and Customs," the oversize identification tag on her purple dress read "Hello, My name WAS Shirley Swaab." Mrs. Swaab, an antiques collector from Melrose Park, Pa., (who signs some of her correspondence, "Mournfully yours") turned out to be wearing some of her death-related memorabilia — including three mourning pendants, which she dug up from the depths of her bosom. Two bracelets, five rings, various stickpins and a single earring completed her funereal ensemble.

To say nothing of what she had brought to show. Her exhibits included a silk-on-silk embroidered picture of a mourning scene, posthumous photographs, daguerreotypes, tintypes and porcelain with funereal motifs.

"Mourning artifacts in America were kicked off when George Washington died in 1799," she said. "By the turn of the century, such memorabilia had almost stopped."

CERTAINLY BY then Victorian-era funeral parlor advertisements like this one were no longer seen:

FOR COMPOSING THE FEATURES, $1.
FOR GIVING THE FEATURES A LOOK OF QUIET RESIGNATION, $2.
FOR GIVING THE FEATURES THE APPEARANCE OF CHRISTIAN HOPE AND CONTENTMENT, $5.

First president's ancestral home in England

HELMDON, England (AP) — Sulgrave Manor, the early English home of George Washington's ancestors, is situated about 50 miles northwest of London.

Northhampton Mayor Laurence Washington, from whom George Washington was seventh in direct descent, bought the property from King Henry VIII in 1539.

From there, George Washington's great-grandfather, John Washington, emigrated to the American Colonies in 1657.

Sulgrave Manor, purchased in 1914 to celebrate 100 years of British-American peace, is partly restored to its original condition. It was furnished by British and American donors with furniture of the period.

Sulgrave Manor has the Tudor royal arms over the central porch, and over the main doorway are the Washington arms — three mullets and two bars.

Experts specialize in fashions for TV's 'powerbrokers'

By Constance C.R. White
N.Y. Times News Service

NEW YORK — The television-scape is filled with prime-time characters who must be dressed and anchorwomen who cry out to be clothed. They and significant number of women who take their fashion cues from the tube are indebted to Linda Allard, the designer for Ellen Tracy.

On Ms. Allard's runway were a dozen suits for Barbara Walters, a couple for Sally Jessy Raphael and three more for Mariel Hemingway's character in "Central Park West" — women who must wear classic suits with enough elan to identify them as powerbrokers of a sort.

Sleek white body-hugging cloque pants suits and little fitted skirts that slid over matching ankle-length skirts were Ms. Allard's deft acknowledgment of fashion trends.

Color is important for spring, and Ms. Allard goes with the flow while being careful to choose that which is familiar and understandable. A television anchor needs presence and definition above the waist, so Ms. Allard provides large shoulders in watermelon pink suits with black buttons, and navy and white pieces that make wardrobe combinations easy.

Unlike those of Ms. Allard, Vivienne Tam's designs are, relatively speaking, too experimental and too idiosyncratic to make it into television's fashion value system. Unless, of course, Ms. Tam were dressing the eccentric cool character who is killed off at the end of the show.

There was a white T-shirt dripping with sequins topping hot pink nylon crop flare pants, a sky-blue fitted shirt with all-over perforations with a lime nylon pencil skirt, a white and black embroidered sleeveless crop top with a black-and-white knee-length skirt, and a lime-colored dress with shades of transparency and opaqueness that formed a leaflike pattern in the fabric. Ms. Tam's program notes for the show described the fabric as "computer lace."

One of the factors that have defined Ms. Tam's esthetic is her work with unusual fabrics. And in the last five years, several designers have touted advances in fabric as the locomotive that would move fashion forward. A case in point this season was provided by Cynthia Steffe.

Ms. Steffe tends to be a cautious designer who never strays too far from the classics but always manages to inject them with vitality. Much of the spirit in her new collection came from her use of innovative fabrics.

Slinky long hipster skirts were made slinkier by the addition of heat-transferred red sequins. A lightweight trench jacket was fashioned out of heat-treated fibers in a delightful red and yellow sunflower print. White T-shirts were veiled in sheer black netting and slipped under glossy transparent jackets in white or lavender fabric, similar to the mesh used in window screens, but much softer.

Anni Kuan showed promise in an uneven collection. Best were lavender jackets over skinny pants, a lavender voile trench jacket over a sleeveless shift and a buttery voile shirtdress that slid sweetly over a miniskirt. Ms. Kuan has always had an interesting take on sportswear, and she was strongest when she kept this as her focus.

THIS SEMINAR IS FOR YOU

Baylor University's Institute for Family Business presents
The Midland/Odessa Family Business Seminar Series

"Family Team Power" by Drs. Peter and Susan Glaser

This dynamic, practical presentation specializes in family business team building and communication. Transform yourselves from opponents into negotiating partners.

Establish Communication Ground Rules to Resolve Conflict

- DECODE the hidden world of non-verbal communication to understand what people are really saying.
- TEACH people how their behavior is a problem without making them feel (or be) defensive.
- CONVERT criticism from defensiveness and blame to insight and agreement.

Build Consensus Through Collaboration

- BUILD consensus decisions from divergent points of view.
- CRAFT agreements that build coalition and support.
- APPLY a five-step problem solving approach that converts decisions to action and action to results.

For affordable trip to Japan, make every yen count

By Helen Hu
N.Y. Times News Service

Atmosphere aside, bargains can be had for cameras, appliances, clothes, toiletries and Asian trinkets at various spots around Tokyo. A brochure with the straightforward title 'Japan for the Budget Traveler,' found at tourist information centers, gives good advice on this and other money-related topics.

TOKYO — As my friend stood guard, I tried to peel a wanted poster for the Aum Shinri Kyo (Sublime Truth) doomsday cult from the wall of a subway station.

"I'm going to do it," I said between clenched teeth. I was determined to seize the item as a most unusual — and free — souvenir of my trip.

But the poster, showing mug shots of suspects linked to the cult accused of spreading nerve gas in the Tokyo subways last spring, was taped on too well. It tore. Then I heard footsteps. I gave up.

In this polite, generally law-abiding country, where people refrain from jaywalking and littering, I was too afraid of being nabbed for stealing a poster.

Despite this setback, I still found some relatively cheap ways to play tourist in Japan on a recent 11-day visit.

IT'S NOT AN easy place to take in without breaking the bank — not when a movie can cost $18 and an unremarkable cup of coffee, $3.50.

Still, with some planning and imagination, I found that one can see and enjoy Tokyo and other parts of Japan without spending the equivalent of the gross national product of a small nation.

Cheating a bit, I saved money in Tokyo by staying in my friend's apartment. I also benefited by a currency exchange rate that had become a bit gentler, about 100 yen per US dollar.

Bypassing taxicabs — which can be prohibitively expensive, costing about $200 to get from Narita Airport to Tokyo, for example — I walked and took trains and subways. One day, I borrowed a bicycle and had a fine time tooling around the Shibuya area in Tokyo.

Shunning expensive restaurants, I breakfasted on a box of cereal bought in a grocery store and turned to humble noodle shops and fast-food restaurants for lunch and dinner.

THERE ARE affordable and free things to do. Tokyo, which is lovelier and easier on the nerves than one might assume, has graceful parks and green areas that are safe and scenic.

Ueno Park, a fine place for rambling, is dotted with attractions including the Tokyo National Museum, a bargain in a land where touring a small shrine can cost $5. A $4 admission for adults covers three buildings that hold a mother lode of art and artifacts from Japan and other Asian countries.

By contrast, Yoyogi Park, southwest of Ueno Park, turns into a giant, rollicking admission-free stage on Sunday afternoons. Teen-age boys with slicked-back hair, boots and jeans imitate Elvis as they gyrate to oldies tunes on boom boxes. Punk and jazz musicians also set up shop.

About 1½ miles away, Aoyama Cemetery, an enchanting place overhung with old trees and enlivened by squawking birds, is an ideal spot to spend a quiet moment and to watch families lovingly tend gravestones and plots. Joggers roam through it, too.

Many delightful places are accessible by the subway system, which is safe, clean, efficient and cost me about $1.60 per ride, depending on the destination.

THE SUBWAY MAP, showing multicolored routes going in all directions, was bewildering at first. But I dived right in, helped by the many signs in English, and soon rode without worry, at times steered in the right direction by toll collectors.

I seldom used my minimalist Japanese, learned from a self-taught Berlitz course. Many Japanese spoke at least some English, and were patient with the mix of grunts and pointing that made up my vocabulary for the most part.

A friend and I splurged twice, both times on trips out of Tokyo.

We stayed overnight in a pricey hotel in Nikko, a mountainous city known for ancient Shinto shrines, Buddhist temples and natural beauty.

About $156 apiece got us a spacious room, a dinner of a dozen small delicacies served on beautiful dishware and bowls, and breakfast, which we couldn't stick around for, alas.

Our Japanese-style room had tatami straw mats, futon bedding, tea-drinking implements, sliding screen doors and a sitting area overlooking the mountains. Like other patrons, we sauntered around the hotel in cotton robes and slippers set out for us in the closets.

I ALSO SOAKED in sulfurous hot spring water in a rock pool on the premises. Overcoming my American inhibitions, I stripped, washed at a counter and carefully slipped into the vaporous pool with several elderly Japanese women. Men have separate facilities.

We lucked out in transportation costs for Nikko. A special $57 per person deal, arranged in advance through a travel agency, covered our train rides there and back, and bus rides while in the area.

In a day, we managed to tour most of a big compound that includes the mausoleum for warlord Tokugawa Ieyasu and ornate, carved temples and shrines. The sites could be seen individually for about $4 apiece or by purchasing multiple-site passes.

We also took buses up the mountains to Kegon Falls — an elevator takes visitors down to the foot of the towering waterfall — and to the point where the hotel's shuttle would pick us up.

WE SPLURGED a second time by taking the shinkansen, or bullet train, from Tokyo to Kyoto and back, whisked along at top speeds of 170 m.p.h. Tickets of $129 apiece, each way, got us to this historic, but bustlingly modern, former capital in about 2½ hours.

This time we got an inexpensive but clean, functional room by contacting in advance the Japan National Tourist Organization, a centralized office that handles reservations for various types of accommodations.

For a total of $285, the two of us stayed for three nights at a ryokan, a traditional Japanese inn that was near the train station and the central city bus station.

Admissions to shrines and temples, Kyoto's main attractions, added up at $3, $4 and $5 apiece. But the spot I enjoyed the most, the huge Higashi Hongan-ji Temple, near the train station, was free, and locals seemed to enjoy it as a place to relax and hang out.

A VISIT TO the grounds of the Imperial Palace was free, too, and a highlight of the trip. As foreigners, we had to fill out a short application to take one of two daily tours of the Sento Palace garden, which has quiet ponds, tea pavilions and small waterfalls.

Footsore, we bought sherbet in endearing fruit-shaped plastic containers at a snack bar on the palace grounds and ate in a shady picnic area.

Meals in Japan can be unsatisfying to Americans, with unfilling portions of seafood, rice, noodles and vegetables. Big meals, served at some places for $10 and less, still left me feeling hungry later.

Like many Japanese, we often relied on fast-food restaurants for our meals in Japan, finding them cheaper and more filling in a meat-and-potatoes sort of way.

One night in Kyoto, after an exhausting day of touring temples, we pounced on the food at Kentucky Fried Chicken like starved orphans. Some fast-food places seek to cater to Japanese tastes with items such as teriyaki burgers.

WE ALSO found a real gem in Kyoto, an African restaurant that served chicken, skewered marinated beef and potatoes in inventive ways and big portions.

But I also ate in restaurants serving Japanese food. I would pull the waitress outside and point to the succulent-looking plastic models many restaurants displayed in their storefronts to depict what is on the menu.

Between meals, I often ate snack-sized packets of fresh rice, wrapped in dried seaweed and filled with tuna, sold at convenience stores for about $1. In Nikko, I gnawed with gusto on grilled squid on a stick sold at a stand ($4).

Noisy basements at Daimaru, Hankyu and other department stores sell meat, produce, pastries, and prepared foods including bentos — meals-in-boxes with little compartments of tempura shrimp, rice and other goodies.

Simply looking at food provided some free entertainment in Kyoto. Stalls at the Nishi-koji market sold tiny dried sardines in piles that looked like gray pencil shavings, bloody fillets of barracuda, slivers of horse mackerel sprinkled with sesame seeds, and other goodies.

Shopping in a huge open market area near Ueno Park in Tokyo was a fun way to watch people. Vendors sell knockoffs and lower-priced leather jackets, pocketbooks, perfumes, golf clubs, seafood and a world of other goods.

With hawkers shouting out their wares, punks with dyed hair eyeing jeans and white-collared "salarymen" combing through the merchandise, this area was grittier and more compelling in some ways than the glitzier shopping spots.

ATMOSPHERE ASIDE, bargains can be had for cameras, appliances, clothes, toiletries and Asian trinkets at various spots around Tokyo. A brochure with the straightforward title "Japan for the Budget Traveler," found at tourist information centers, gives good advice on this and other money-related topics.

But after a while, money concerns subside and visitors often feel the urge to collect things — even odd things, like posters with mug shots — to remind them that they actually spent time in this strange, intriguing place.

As I marveled at prices in Tokyo, an American journalist who had been in Japan for three months gave me some advice.

"Don't worry," she said. "Just get into the zen of the yen."

Tips can make 'flying for two' safer experience

HOUSTON (AP) — Most women can travel during the first 28 weeks of pregnancy if they use caution, says Dr. Kenneth J. Moise Jr., obstetrician and gynecologist at Baylor College of Medicine.

His recommendations:

■ Consult your doctor before you travel.

If you plan to be away more than a day or two, have him give you the name of a doctor in your destination city, in case something goes awry.

■ Take exercise breaks every hour or two to stretch your legs and back to stimulate your circulation while traveling by plane, car, train, etc.

■ Drink water and juices while flying, to avoid dehydration.

■ Buckle up whether on the ground or in the air.

More fetal injuries are caused by the mother not wearing a seat belt than by the seat belts themselves, says Moise.

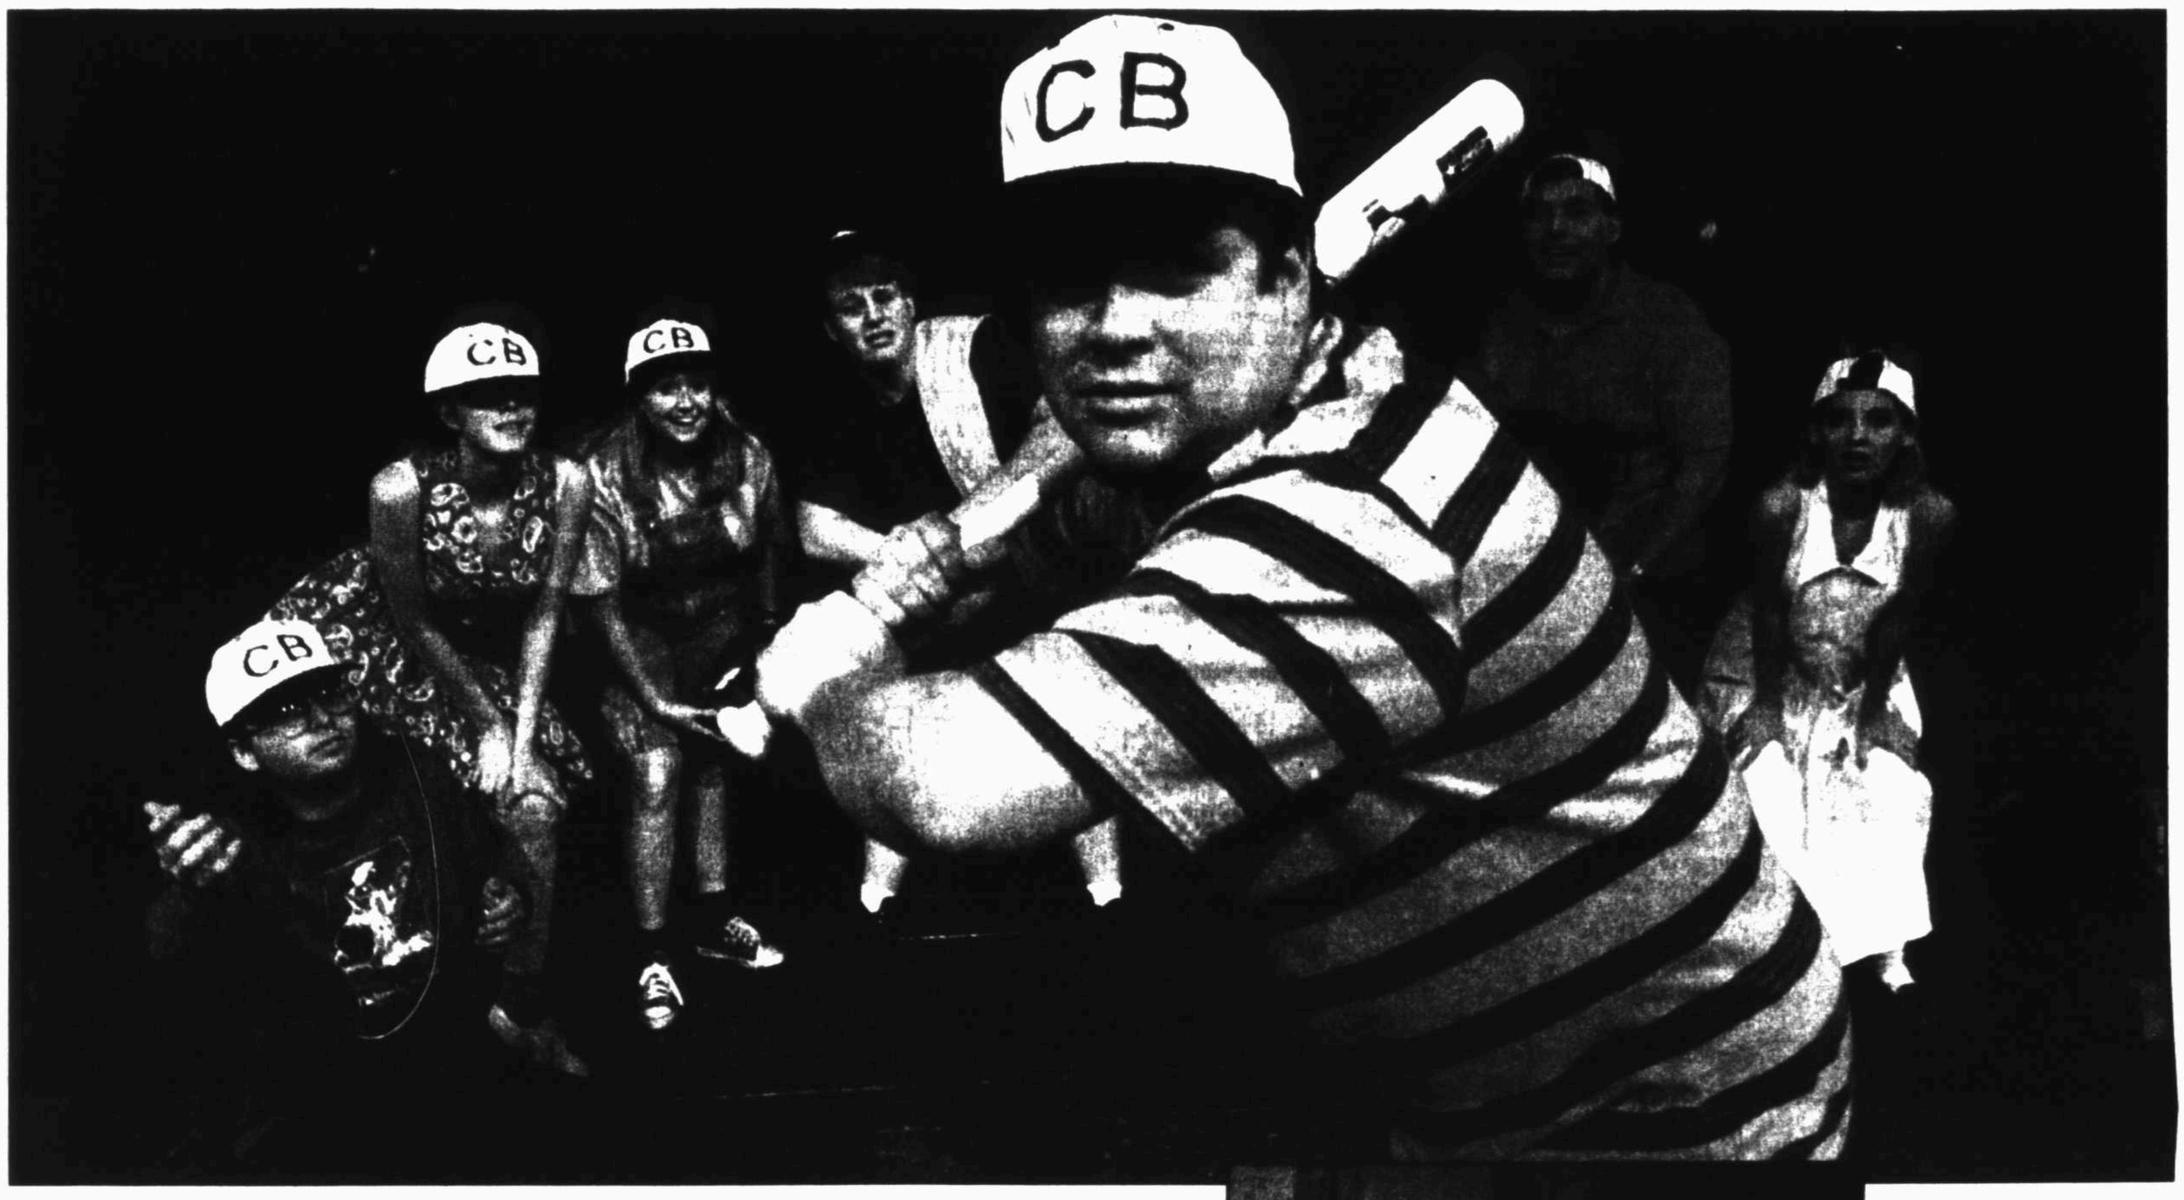
You're a good man Charlie Brown



This musical represents 'a fantastic opportunity to get children into theater...If we don't get children into live theater, who is going to see it when they get old?'

—Tony Paris
director

ODESSA — The Globe Theatre is celebrating Charlie Brown's 45th birthday by staging the musical "You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown."

"October is Charlie Brown's birthday," said Tony Parris, who is making his directorial debut in this production.

This musical represents, Parris said, "A fantastic opportunity to get children into theater. There's a lot of plays that aren't for children to come and see. I think it's great to have a show where children can come in and enjoy live theater. If we don't get children into live theater, who is going to see it when they get old?"

Parris also finds the Globe a perfect location for children to experience their first live theatrical production. "We've got a replica of Shakespeare's theater you can't see anywhere except here and England. When most people think of theater, Shakespeare is one of the things that comes to mind. To come and see live theater in a theater very similar to what Shakespeare performed in is a great opportunity for anyone."

The musical, with music and lyrics by Clark Gesner, is based on the comic strip "Peanuts" by Charles M. Schultz.

"We're not doing this as a cartoon," Parris said. "You'll know who the characters are by the things they do and say. None of the costumes are going to look like the comic strip. I've gone out of my way not to do the Sunday morning

The English novelist William Makepeace Thackeray called a good laugh "sunshine in a house." Director Stephen Cole hopes to light the house during the run of Ray Cooney's "It Runs in the Family," now on stage at Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave. "It's a very funny play; it will sell out in two minutes," said Cole, who leaves West Texas this January to take a position at Cornell University where he taught for 19 years.

The comedy will be on stage through Nov. 25. Tickets are $10 Friday and Saturday and $8 Sunday through Thursday. For reservations call 682-4111. Also involved in the production, which is co-produced by Chevron and rated PG, are John Glover, stage manager; Paul Fiorella, set design; Edward W. Taylor, lighting and special effects; and Mae Dawson, costumes.

This isn't the first Cooney play Midland Community Theatre has presented. "They loved this author last year," said

She also earned a bachelor in business administration in accounting from the University of Oklahoma. She is involved in various musical endeavors in her community, such as accompanying and performing. She lives in Waco with her husband and four children.

Ms. Rich and Ms. Rodman began performing together in 1994 and have been giving duo piano recitals in Texas for the past year.

Today's program will include Sonata in D Major, K. 448, by Mozart, "Scaramouche" by Darius Milhaud, "They All Sang Yankee Doodle" by Dave Brubeck, Romance from Suite No. 9 by Rachmaninoff and "Paganini Variations" by Witold Lutoslawski.

The Festival Music Series is an outreach of the Music Ministry of First Presbyterian, 800 W. Texas Ave. Child care will be provided for children through age 5. A reception will follow the performance. For more information call 684-7821.

Recital presented

Ricardo Veiga, a piano student at Texas Christian University, will present a recital at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave., at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Veiga has come from his native country of Brazil to study at TCU as an artist diploma student under the supervision of Jose Feghali, TCU Artist in residence.

The program will include works by Bach, Mozart and Chopin, as well as Veiga's own compositions. This recital is free and open to the public.

Walking tours set

BIG SPRING — Hear tales of a long-ago railroad and cow town by walking the historic streets of downtown Big Spring every Saturday through the end of the year.

Walking tours will begin at the Heritage Museum, 510 Scurry St., at 2 p.m.

Tour guides will recount the town's early history and legends including stories of the arrival of British nobility, cattle barons, cowboys, saloons, mercantile stores and the early railroad.

The tour also will visit the inside of some of the downtown's restored buildings for views of wood floors and tin ceilings.

Groups and individuals are welcome. The walking tours are free. For more information or weather cancellations call the museum, 1-915-267-8255.

Jazz concert

John Pizzarelli plays an 8 p.m. concert at the Yucca theatre, 208 N. Colorado Ave., Nov. 16. Pizzarelli is being brought to Midland by the West Texas Jazz Society. Admission is free to WTJS members, $15 for non-members and $5 for students who are non-members. Reserved seating is $25 for non-members and $10 for members. For more information call 563-1701.

Paintings displayed

The oil paintings of Jerry Romine are on display in the lobby of Midland American Bank, 401 W. Texas Ave., this month.

Romine is an active member of the Midland Palette Club and the Midland Art Association. He specializes in realistic paintings of wildlife, seascapes, landscapes, florals and in portraits.

One of his teachers in seascapes, Jerry Fugere of Ruidoso, N.M., will be doing a demonstration and workshop at 9 a.m. Nov. 14 at the Midland Palette Club, 907 W. Wadley Ave.

Others he has studied under include Naomi Dixon, Judy Morris, Pattie Bullard, Cristina Robins, Bill Hagerman and Dalhart Windberg.

Show scheduled

ODESSA — Mortal Kombat fans are in for high-tech thrills and excitement when "Mortal Kombat — Live on Stage" rocks across the country this autumn.

The action-fantasy spectacle, the first interactive live show derived from a video game, plays Ector County Coliseum at 7 p.m. Monday, Nov. 6.

"Mortal Kombat — Live on Stage" will bring to life the storyline and characters of the popular video game. The live extravaganza features martial arts, state-of-the-art special effects and illusion, laster lighting, gymnastics, stunts and audience participation.

According to the New York Times, "The movement, staged by karate instructor and choreographer Pat Johnson, was reminiscent of Beijing Opera, with its mix of acrobatics, martial arts and dance."

The show will star some of the real life actors digitized for the Mortal Kombat video and arcade games including "Sonya Blade," who has recently been rescued from the Outworld to join the Mortal Kombat warriors as they defend mankind. The tour producers worked closely with Williams Entertainment, and Ed Boon and John Tobias, creators of the Mortal Kombat video game series, to keep the live show true to the game's story.

The audience will learn "secret kodes," revealed exclusively during the live show, which are flown in by laser and mystically revealed by Lord Rayden. These secret kodes will empower video game enthusiasts to reach higher levels in the new Mortal Kombat 3 arcade and home video games.

The live stage show is produced by David Fishof Presents, Inc., which has produced more than 4,000 rock 'n' roll, variety and family events over the past 10 years. Larry Kasanoff, whose credits include "True Lies," "Terminator 2," "Platoon" and the "Mortal Kombat" feature films, and Danny Simon, president of The Licensing Group, are the executive producers. Jeff Lee, who staged the national tours for "Cats" and "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat," is the director. Choreographer is Pat Johnson, the Hollywood martial arts master who coordinated stunts for the films (original and sequels) "Mortal Kombat," "Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles," "The Karate Kid" and "Buffy the Vampire Slayer."

David Fishof Presents has named the National Multiple Sclerosis Society as the benefiting national charity for the tour, which debuted Sept. 14 at Radio City Music Hall, New York City.

Lunch meeting set

Jane Phares of the Petroleum Museum is hosting a brown bag lunch meeting of the Midland arts organizations quarterly meeting at noon Wednesday in the Hall of Fame at the Petroleum Museum, 1500 Interstate 20 West.

Beverages will be available. Those wanting to order a ham or turkey sandwich may do so by calling Ms. Phares by Monday at 683-4403.

The meeting is important and all organizations are asked to be represented either by staff or a board member. to RSVP call 687-1149, the Arts Assembly of Midland.

Conference planned

ODESSA — The arts are the topic of the Texas Alliance for Education and the Arts, conference here Nov. 8-10 at the Odessa Holiday Inn Centre.

Representatives of community arts organizations from across the state will spend three days working on ways to form partnerships and find new support, foster success and survive the times ahead.

Titled "Winning Teams for the '90s: The Game Plan for Support, Survival and Success," the conference speakers include Senator John Montford, Brenda Arnett, executive director of the Texas Department of Commerce, economist Ray Perryman and marketing executive Bill Chaffin.

Special events include "A Night on the Town," hosted by Odessa arts organizations and a gala dinner and entertainment.

All those interested in visual and performing arts in Texas are invited to attend. For more information or to register call the Odessa Cultural Council, 1-915-337-1492, or the Arts Assembly of Midland, 687-1149.

COMEDY: Cole Theatre to present 'It Runs in the Family'

(From 1G)

Cole, referring to "Out of Order." "They'll love him again this year."

In this British farce, Dr. David Mortimer (Michael Trost) is rehearsing the lecture he will deliver to fellow neurologists when Jane Tate (Sherry Engstrom), with whom he had a brief affair 18 years ago, arrives with the news that their son, Leslie (Todd Manning), is downstairs looking for his long-lost father.

The swinging doors of the common room admit in quick order Mortimer's dignified wife, Rosemary (Wendy Linde), the apoplectic hospital director, Sir Willoughby Drake (Greg Alexander), the Matron (Tracy Alexander), a colleague, Dr. Mike Connolly (Mike Harrell), the patient, Bill Lesley (Andy Salcedo), a police sergeant (Les Reik) and the punk-haired son.

"Timing is everything in farce — no question about that," Cole said: "Pacing and timing. It's got to go fast. It's got to stop dead when the audience responds and pick up at the same pace."

Cole has had years of experience training professional actors. At Cornell, he trained such professional actors as Jimmy Smits of "NYPD Blue," Ethan Phillips of "Star Trek Voyager," Catherine Hicks of the "Star Trek IV: The Voyage Home," William Sadler, the blond villain in "Die Hard 2: Die Harder," Margaret Reed of "As the World Turns," and Pulitzer Prize recipient, Texan Robert Schenkken.

The director's job, Cole said, is to make the production "a whole and not to invent the whole thing. Whatever happens that works goes in. There's a lot of that in theater. Some of the funny business in this ('It Runs in the Family') is my idea. Much of it is the individual actors' ideas."

Most people, Cole said, "Don't understand the psychology of laughter. The world is over when you are laughing. Your energy is going out when you laugh. You can't take in sensory information.

"There's a survival technique that goes with that. If you see something that needs your attention coming in, you stop laughing. You can't exist undefended.

"If a cast goes on, you will stop laughing. Over the course of an evening, you will stop laughing completely."

Thus, Cole explained, "When a human being laughs, time stops. You (the actors) have to freeze on the stage and stay that way."

In a farce, such as "It Runs in the Family," the actors have to jump back in at the same pace that was fueling the humor before the laughter began, Cole said.

Some of the humor in "It Runs in the Family" comes in the form of running gags, he said. "Things that keep coming up over and over."

Laughs follow the Sister (Karen Young) helping with the medical staff's preparations for the annual Christmas pantomime. Her efforts provide opportunities for cross-dressing, slapstick, innocent double-entendre, and dialogue like Dr. Booney's (G. Thomas Harlow) "Ahoy in front and a vast behind," as he follows the Matron across the room. Dr. Booney's mother (Sharon Petty) then arrives, bringing refreshments for the party.

Cole noted that one of the classic theories about why people enjoy comedy is "we feel superior to those characters" caught up in the situation and it "gives us a sense of power. Sometimes that's true, perhaps, but that's not why we go."

Comedies represent the "positive reality of a tragic situation," Cole said. "That's why we do two masks. You can make a comic version of any tragedy, and likewise you can make a tragic version of any comedy. There are a couple of comic versions of 'Hamlet,' which are just hysterical. You could make a serious domestic tragedy out of 'It Runs in the Family,' if you wanted to."

Laughter appeals to people because, Cole said, "It fills our spirit with hope and glory. I believe it raises the spirit and energizes the soul."

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Influential people welcome your ideas. Their financial backing could send your career soaring ahead! Make a presentation clear and concise. Early in 1996, your family ties or social connections give you a chance to make valuable business contacts. Patch up a quarrel with relatives. Romance sizzles under next summer's starry skies. By fall, you may finally be ready to settle down. Let offspring know your intentions.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DAY: director Sam Shepard, actress Tatum O'Neal, actress Elke Sommer, musician Ike Turner.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Have faith in yourself and you will quickly defeat a tough adversary. A former flame re-enters your life. Be discreet if you decide to give romance a second chance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): A once-in-a-lifetime love returns. You feel blessed. Stop living in the past; instead plan for the future. A family reunion will strengthen ties that have gradually weakened. Always emphasize the positive!

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Decline an invitation to go to an unfamiliar location. Sticking to familiar territory is more relaxing. Be imaginative when planning group entertainment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): If tempted to explode in irritation, hum or whistle a catchy tune instead. Contentious people are best avoided. Go to a movie or concert or take a long walk by yourself.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Travel enjoys favorable influences, and so does family life. A short visit to a nearby place could reward you in unexpected ways. Take along your camera to record the moment. Write any overdue letters.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Use some imagination when promoting a church or community event. A positive approach will attract the support of worthwhile people. A mislaid object surfaces in an unusual place.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Recognize the wisdom that comes with age and experience. Meditation and prayer bring enlightenment. Do not allow a financial worry to keep you from enjoying the company of people you love.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Spending time in a house of worship helps you face your fears and let go of them. Keep domestic peace by being diplomatic. Let your mate play the starring role at social events while you sit back.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Are you attracted to an older individual? Shared interests and hobbies can provide the basis for a genuinely rewarding relationship. See unfinished chores through to completion before getting together with friends. Make overdue repairs.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Unconventional views or wild behavior could alienate someone you hope will like you. Conform to custom when dealing with conservative people. Kind words and deeds will win you a special place in a child's heart.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A great day for making long-term commitments and renewing old friendships. You will need every ounce of patience when trying to resolve an emotionally-charged situation.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): A visit to a new store or restaurant boosts your spirits. Your words of wisdom could catch the ear of someone special. Turn in early tonight. A very busy week lies just ahead.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST
2NT	Pass	3NT	Pass
Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Three of ◇

Watch the cards partner plays. Often you will need no further clue to the winning defense.

South's hand was near-classic for a two no trump opening bid — balanced distribution and 21 high-card points. While South would have preferred a somewhat better heart holding, any bid other than two no trump would have greatly distorted the holding.

West led a low diamond, and East's ten was a revealing card — it confirmed that South had started with the three top honors in the suit. With only six fast tricks, declarer had to go after clubs for the contract. West held up the ace until the third round, to give East a chance to signal strength.

There are two ways to direct a shift. One is to discard a high card in the suit where your strength lies. More often than not, however, you cannot afford to part with a card in your strong suit. Equally effective is to discard a low card from a weak suit, so East conveyed the message by letting go of the two of spades.

West needed no more information. In with the ace of clubs, and to make sure that East did not revert to diamonds on gaining the lead, West shifted to the king of hearts! When that held, a heart continuation allowed the defenders to collect four heart tricks for a one-trick set.

Thoughtful partners are those who make it easy for you to do the right thing.

cartoon strip."

Parris chose to avoid the cartoon-strip look. "People see that everyday, and I wanted them to see the characters and not have to rely on costumes to know who the character was."

Curtain is at 8 p.m. A 2:30 p.m. matinee, with all seats $5, is planned for Nov. 12. Production dates are Nov. 10, 11, 17 and 18. For reservations or more information call the Globe office, 1-915-332-1586. Tickets are $8 for adults and $6 for seniors. Music is being provided by pianist David Hinson.

Playing Charlie Brown is Victor Lopez.

"Victor understudied for this role at West Texas State University, now West Texas A & M," Parris said. "He's wanted to do the part since and that was probably about 10 years ago. He's a fantastic Charlie Brown. Perfect for the part."

Also in the cast are Kristy Partridge as Lucy; Christ Borgman as Linus; Allan Jeter as Schroeder; Robin Dulin of Midland, who is a freshman at Midland College, as Patty: Carla Griffith as Marcie; and Aaron Cox as Snoopy.

"If anybody was made for the part of Snoopy, it was Aaron," Parris said. "He has got more energy than any five people I know. He never stops moving. He's always on the go. He brings all that to Snoopy. He's scared to death because this is his first musical. And he also says, 'This is his last musical.'"

Cox is not the only one who's been nervous. After Parris said "OK" to directing the musical, he had second thoughts. "Then I got nervous because I had to direct a show instead of being in it."

The job has not been as difficult as he imagined it could be. Thus far, the hardest task Parris has had has been casting the show. "It took me forever to make up my mind — who was going to fit what part. But the cast we've got is marvelous. Everyone is doing a fantastic job."

Syndicated from 1938 to 1964, the handsome and heroic Red Ryder on his faithful horse Thunder, rode the range for justice by rounding up the rascals and riff-raff of the West.

Ballet performed

Midland Festival Ballet has issued the following weather report for Midland and Howard counties for later this month. Snowflakes are on the way followed by hot chocolate, candy canes, sugar plums and much more.

All are characters in "The Nutcracker," which is among the world's most beloved ballets, scheduled for performances by Midland Festival Ballet at 8 p.m. Dec. 9 and at 2:30 p.m. Dec. 10 at Lee High School Auditorium and at 8 p.m. Dec. 16 in Big Spring Municipal Auditorium.

Midland Festival Ballet will be joined by the Midland-Odessa Symphony. Special guests are soloists from the New York City Ballet — Bart Cook, who appeared as Father Drosselmier in the movie version of "The Nutcracker" with McCaully Caulkin, Maria Caleghari as the Sugar Plum Fairy and Cornell Crabtree as the Cavalier. Mary Beth Budd and Jose Beraca from New York Metropolitan Opera will be dancing as the Sugar Plum Fairy and the Cavalier in the Big Spring performance.

Eighty-five local dancers will dance in the ballet. "The Nutcracker" is sponsored, in part, by The Midland Reporter-Telegram, KMID-TV and KOCV-TV.

Tickets go on sale Nov. 15 at Midland Park Mall at the customer service booth. Ticket price is $10 for adults and $7.50 for children and senior citizens. For more information call 694-0358.

OIL REPORT

SUNDAY, NOVEMBER 5, 1995 SERVING 54 COUNTIES IN WEST TEXAS AND NEW MEXICO

BRIEFING

A rig lies stacked in a drilling yard, awaiting its next job.

Drilling steady

Drilling activity was steady as the month of October ended, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

In the Permian Basin, the rig count fell one rig to 122 for the week but remains above year-ago levels. A year ago the rig count was 110.

Nationally, the rig count was lower for the week, dropping four to 761. A year ago the rig count was 631.

Please see COUNT GRAPH/6H

Tom Brown shares

Tom Brown Inc. announced that it sold 4 million shares through an underwriting led by Schroder Wertheim & Co. Inc. this past week. The public offering was priced at $11, resulting in net proceeds to the company of approximately $41.5 million. The proceeds will be used to repay outstanding bank debt.

Midland Resources

HOUSTON - Oil and Gas Investor magazine ranked Midland Resources 7th nationally among publicly traded, small cap oil and gas companies. The analysis of 156 oil and gas companies is prepared annually with the assistance of Kirkpatrick Energy Associates Inc. of Denver and appraises such areas as improved cash flow per share, increased reserves, improved net income and improved shareholder equity.

A lonely pumpjack continues bringing crude to the surface.

Prices rally

Crude futures rallied this past week amid concerns about low levels of crude oil and heating oil.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, West Texas Intermediate for December delivery closed at $17.98 late in the week. The posted price closed at $18.25 a barrel.

Please see PRICE GRAPH/6H

Southwest Royalties

Southwest Royalties Inc. of Midland has acquired producing properties situated in five fields in the Permian Basin. The properties are located in the Jalmat, Stasbrough and Wilson fields in Lea County, N.M., the Yeamon field in Hockley County, the Shannon field in Crockett County and the Enterprise field in Mitchell County. The acquisition was made in conjunction with Hal J. Rasmussen Operating Inc. of Midland.

The producing properties were purchased from Elkhorn Oil and Gas LLC. The purchase price was in excess of $5 million and increased net reserves by 1,711,000 equivalent barrels.

Apache properties

HOUSTON — Apache Corp. announced the sale of interests in certain Permian Basin properties to Dallas-based Central Resources, Inc. for $22.8 million. The effective date of the transaction is July 1, 1995.

The properties are primarily non-operated and comprise 67 fields in Southeast New Mexico and West Texas. Reserves are approximately 65 percent crude oil.

The sale furthers Apache's strategy of reducing debt and upgrading its asset base through the disposition of certain non-core, non-operated properties. Apache retains the bulk of its properties in the Permian Basin, the company's largest oil-producing region.

Petroleum accountants design accrediation program

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

An accreditation program for petroleum accountants, similar to the Certified Public Accountant program, is in development with assistance from several Permian Basin residents.

In fact, Midland will host the first offering of the examination Feb. 23-24, 1996. The test will also be offered in Dallas in March and in Galveston in April.

The Accredited Petroleum Accountant program will be overseen by the Council of Petroleum Accountant Societies, which is comprised of 25 societies and of which Midland's Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin was a charter member.

Donnie Hall, president of the 130-member Petroleum Accountants Society of the Permian Basin, said the idea was conceived by a chapter member in Anchorage, Alaska, and received the support of COPAS' research and advisory committee, comprised of past COPAS presidents. A member of the committee is Midlander Steve Castle.

The research and advisory committee, along with COPAS' education committee - which is chaired by Hall - began developing the accreditation program, which is comprised of eight separate tests or modules.

The eight modules cover: Operations, oil and gas law, financial reporting, revenue, joint interest, tax, managerial accounting and auditing. Next year, the association hopes to add a ninth module in international accounting. Review courses are being developed.

Hall, an associate accountant with Oxy Petroleum, said all eight modules deal solely with accounting issues within the petroleum industry.

Those wishing to become accredited must pass three core examinations, according to Hall: The operations, law and financial reporting modules.

"If you don't want the full accreditation, and you work primarily in revenue, you can pass the core group plus the revenue exam and become an accredited revenue accountant; the same if you work in joint interest, you can take the core exams plus the joint interest and become an accredited joint interest accountant. If you want to be an accredited audit accountant, you have to pass the three core exams plus revenue, joint interest and auditing. To become an accredited managerial accountant, you have to pass the three core tests plus revenue, joint interest, tax and managerial accounting."

Petroleum accountants can meet eligibility for the accredibility program three ways: Hold a college degree with 12 hours of accounting; have five years industry accounting experience or be a licensed CPA. Once accredited, a petroleum accountant must have 10 hours of continuing education annually and pay a $25 annual fee. Continuing education can be earned through the Permian Basin group's annual fall seminar - eight hours; and the remaining two can be earned by attending monthly technical sessions offered by the group.

COPAS has been working with the Professional Development Institute of the University of North Texas

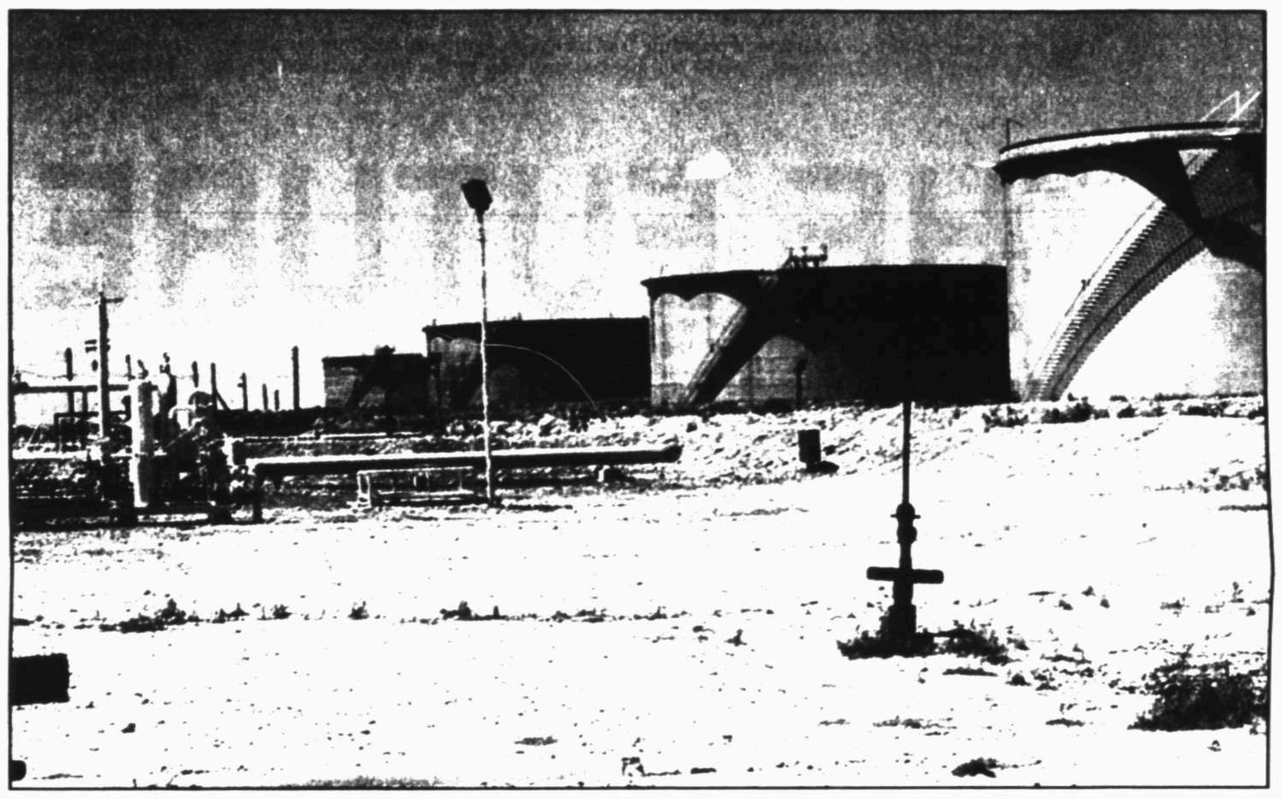
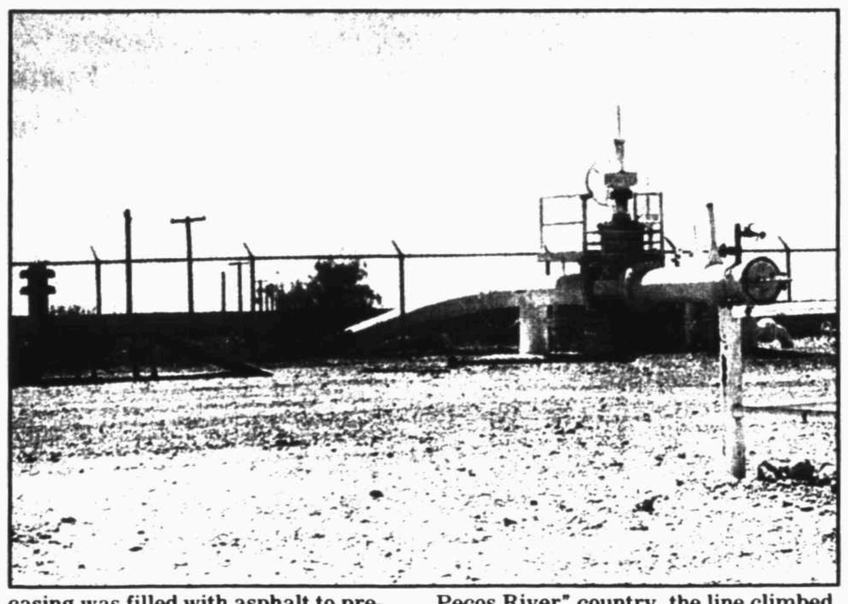
Pipeline wound way from Wink to El Paso

■ Pasotex pipeline in 1928 became first line to ship oil in westerly direction.

By Ellen Hopkins





Above, a line of storage tanks sit outside of Wink, holding crude waiting transport to refineries in El Paso through the Pasotex pipeline. Built in 1928, the pipeline was one of the first major pipelines to be made of high quality steel. It was also the first pipeline in the midcontinent to ship crude west. Left is a "pigging point" outside of Wink where 'pigs' enter the pipeline and monitor it for obstructions.

John Paul Pitts/Reporter-Telegram

The year was 1928, and oil began flowing through a newly completed 200-mile line of eight-inch pipe from Winkler County oilfields, through desolate territory without roads or a water supply, to the Standard of Texas refinery in El Paso.

The three-month pipeline construction venture incorporated 15 contractors at an expense of over $3 million. The Pasotex pipeline was one of the first major pipelines built entirely of high-strength seamless steel tubing. It operated at 900 psi, an unusually high pressure for eight-inch line. And its history is noteworthy because it was the first line in the entire mid-continent area to transport oil in a westerly direction.

Standard's 14,000-barrel refinery in El Paso and the Pasotex pipeline were built simultaneously. Two mountain ranges, desert winds and other physical obstacles slowed the line's completion such that Standard's manufacturing plant and marketing organization for distributing the refinery's products were awaiting the line's completion.

The refinery and pipeline projects were completed as a joint effort of three subsidiaries of Standard Oil Company of California: The California Company which had been exploring West Texas oilfields since 1922; the Pasotex Pipe Line Co. which would operate the carrier; and Pasotex Petroleum Co. which would operate the refinery and handle product distribution.

The line was a common carrier and supplied oil from the Hendricks Field in Winkler County to other El Paso refineries as well. Completion of the line in 1928 was praised by El Paso civic officials as the beginning of a new industrial era for the city. Certain city officials, along with army representatives from Fort Bliss, assumed refinery employee positions as the first batch of oil was sent westward and reached the refinery on July 14th.

The first joints of pipe were connected on April 7, 1928. From the western edge of the Hendricks field, the caliche ground was blasted foot by foot using 30 tons of dynamite. The line crossed these 37 miles of desert before reaching the Pecos River.

The river's occasional raging torrents were compensated for by enclosing the pipe in a 12-inch casing. The casing was filled with asphalt to prevent corrosion, and buried well beneath the river bed.

Continuing through "west of the Pecos River" country, the line climbed the eastern slope of the Delaware Mountains and past the nearby 10,000-foot peak of El Capitan. At one point the line was laid across the rimrock at an elevation of about one mile. It then

LOCAL OIL PRODUCERS' EARNINGS

Clayton Williams Energy reports third quarter income

■ Net income comes on heels of $782,000 loss in third quarter of 1994.

Staff Reports

MIDLAND — Clayton Williams Energy, Inc. reported net income for the third quarter of 1995 of $4.2 million, or $.72 per share, on revenues of $10.7 million, compared to a net loss of $782,000, or $.14 per share, on revenues of $11.7 million for the third quarter of 1994.

The company cited a $6 million gain on the sale of its two principal gas gathering and processing systems as the primary reason for the increase in net income. Income from operations for the 1995 period declined $775,000 as compared to 1994, due primarily to a combination of reduced natural gas services activity associated with the assets which were sold and lower average prices received for gas production.

For the nine months ended September 30, 1995, the company reported net income of $2.7 million, or $.47 per share, compared to a net loss of $2.3 million, or $.41 per share, for the same period in 1994.

The company also announced it received $3.9 million in proceeds from the sale of 1,598,971 shares of common stock under a registered rights offering made to the company's stockholders.

The proceeds from the rights offering, combined with the $7.7 million of proceeds received in connection with the sale of gas gathering and processing systems, were used to repay indebtedness on the company's bank credit facility. The company has reduced its bank indebtedness by $16.1 million since December 31, 1994.

Clayton Williams Energy, Inc., headquartered in Midland, Texas, is an independent oil and gas producer.

Exploration, development boost TMBR/Sharp earnings

Staff Reports

MIDLAND — TMBR/Sharp Drilling, Inc. reported that net income and revenues increased for both the fiscal second quarter and the six months ended September 30, 1995 over the same periods a year ago.

For the second quarter, revenues increased by 44 percent to $5.6 million from $3.9 million in the year-earlier quarter. Net income increased to $630,000, or 15 cents per share, from $257,000, or 6 cents per share.

For the six-month period, revenues increased by 62 percent to $11.9 million from $7.4 million in the year-earlier period. Net income increased to $1.1 million, or 28 cents per share, from $109,000, or 3 cents per share.

Thomas C. Brown, Chairman of the Board, commented that oil and gas revenues increased by 100 percent and 121 percent, respectively, for the three months and six months ended September 30, 1995, over the same periods a year ago, due to the company's continuing success in exploration and development. In early September TMBR/Sharp entered into a 10-year license agreement with the Government of the Republic of Palau and the State of Kayangel which will allow the company to explore for oil and natural gas offshore. The license covers approximately 1.1 million acres within the waters of Palau.

Contract drilling results also continued to improve, as gross operating margins improved to 24 percent in the quarter ended September 30, 1995, compared to 17 percent in the year-earlier period.

TMBR/Sharp Drilling, Inc. is engaged in the contract drilling of oil and gas wells and the exploration for and development and production of oil and natural gas.

NOV 05 1995

Officials of Amoco, Enron guests and operator Tom McKnight gathered recently for the dedication of the El Mar CO2 project. The El Mar project was one of the first successful independent CO2 projects in the Basin, and marked a new era of cooperation between independents and majors in initiating a new era of recorvery in the Permian Basin.

THE FUTURE IS HERE

For decades the Permian Basin has spoken of the day when independents would have share the responsibility of putting ailing fields on CO2 — that day is here

Through a chain of events the day when independents must assume responsibility of putting many of the Permian Basin's declining fields on CO2 has come sooner than expected. Majors will still operate CO2 projects.

But a sense of urgency has come upon us. The majors are selling out of non-core properties, meaning more and more properties that are potential CO2 candidates have fallen into the hands of independents. At the same time many of the fields that are on waterflood have almost reached their economic limits. They must either be placed on CO2 in the very near future or abandoned.

However, while faced with urgency, a number of positive factors have evolvedthat make CO2 a real opportunity for independents.

First, the cost of CO2 has come down and the majors with CO2 supplies are willing to negotiate its sale, through production payments or other financing means.

Second, the cost of installing and operating CO2 projects has come down dramatically, since the first pilot projects were initiated in the 1970s, as major oil companies learned that the "Cadillac" approach is not always the best approach. In many cases off the shelf equipment is used. In other cases custom designed components can reduce both installation and operating costs.

Third, major oil companies are willing to pass on all the lessons they have learned, giving independents an oppoturnity to capitalize uon two decades of experience.

Fourth, over the past two decades, a CO2 infrastructure has been solidly placed, with pipelines connecting nearly all corners of the Permian Basin. Also, pipeline operators now stand ready to negotiate the construction of delivery lines to those leases that are viable economic CO2 prospects.

Now is the time to think about CO2 and plan for its eventuality. THE WINDOW OF OPPORTUNITY IS WIDE OPEN

If you plan to be a part of the CO2 future either as an operator, supplier, service company or in any other capacity we invite you to attend the largest and most comprehensive CO2 conference, exposition and short course ever staged in the U.S.

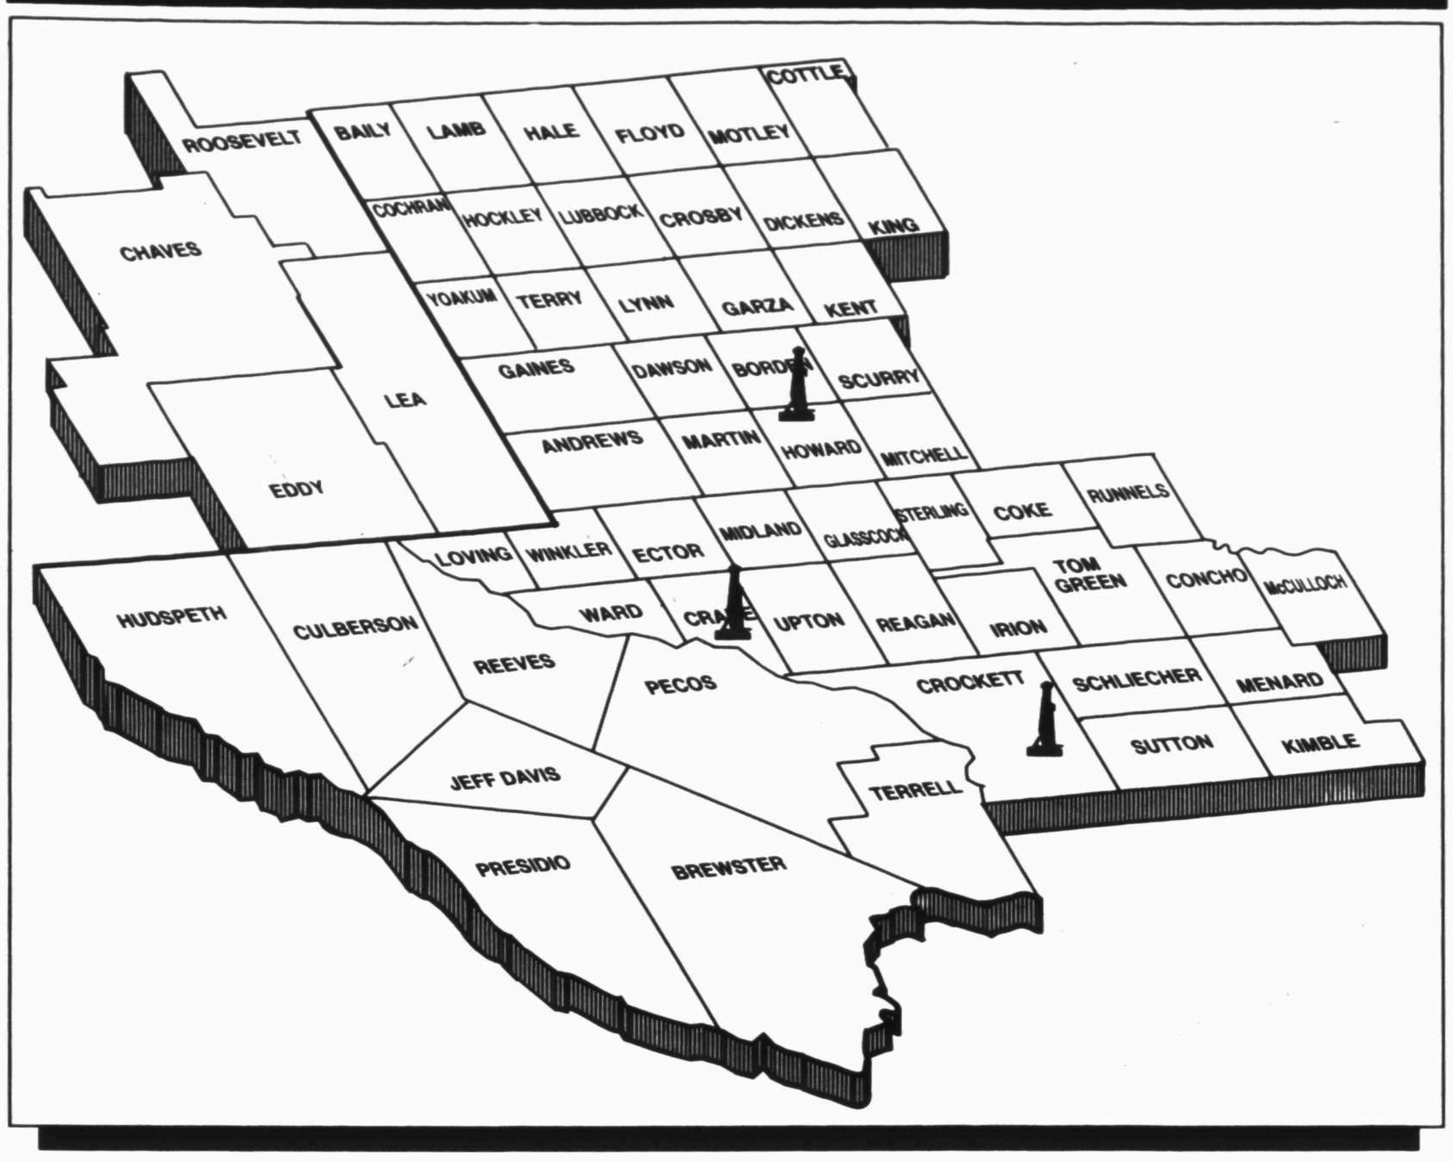
ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS



The rigs on the map above show counties in which significant drilling activity has taken place, as reported in the Activity Highlights below.

Crane yields 69-barrel upper Clearfork find

Staff Reports

Crane County has yielded an Upper Clearfork discovery, 3/4-mile west of 3,400 Tubb production in the Roberdeau North field, 12 miles southwest of Crane.

SAHARA OPERATING CO. completed the No. 1 Soda Lake "2" to pump 69 barrels of 42 gravity crude and three barrels of water from perforations 2,951 to 2,956 ft. The interval was acidized with 3,000 gallons of 15 percent NeFe-HCL acid.

Permitted as a 4,200 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 3,5090 ft. and plugged back to 3,220 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 3,293 ft.

Formation tops, on kelly bushing elevation of 2,332 ft., include the Yates at 1,024 ft., Middle Grayburg at 1,865, San Andres at 2,024, Upper Clearfork at 2,924, Tubb at 3,290 and Lower Clearfork at 3,376 ft.

Location is 700 ft. from northwest and 2,700 ft. from southwest lines of Section 2, Block 35, H&TC survey, Abst. 722.

Canyon Reef pool opened in Howard

COSTILLA PETROLEUM CORP. has completed a possible new Canyon Reef pool discovery in the Talbot field of Howard County, nine miles north of Big Spring.

On potential test, the No. 1 Cobra-Talbot "40" flowed 2,790 Mcfd from perforations 8,722 to 8,733 ft.

Scheduled as a 9,000 ft. explorer, the well was drilled to 8,735 ft.

Location is 197 ft. from south and 2,063 ft. from west lines of Section 40, Block 32, T-2-N, T&P survey, Abst. 1373.

Texaco opens new Canyon Sand pool

A new Canyon Sandstone discovery has been completed in the Ozona field of Crockett County, eight miles southeast of Ozona.

TEXACO EXPLORATION & PRODUCTION INC. tested the No. 5U C.E. Davidson Jr. "B" for a calculated absolute open flow of 1,970 Mcfd from perforations 6,310 to 6,340 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,700 gallons of 7.5 percent acid and fractured with 23,000 gallons of gel and 73,000 lbs. 20/40 sand.

Drilled as an 8,100 ft. wildcat, the well reached total depth of 8,100 ft. and was plugged back to 6,600 ft. with 3-1/2 inch casing set at 8,093 ft.

Location is 1,000 ft. from north and 800 ft. from west lines of Section 3, Block KL, GC&SF survey, Abst. 4390.

Texaco has requested a field designation of Ozona Northeast (Canyon Sandstone) and plans to commingle this production with production from the Davidson Ranch (Pennsylvanian 7890) field.

ICO Inc. reports record operating results

HOUSTON — ICO, Inc. announced record operating results for the year ended Sept. 30, 1995. For its fourth quarter, ICO had net income of $1,960,000 or $.16 per share, after preferred dividends of $544,000, on revenues of $24.8 million, compared with net income of $1,160,000 or $.07 per share on revenues of $20.3 million in the fourth quarter of the previous year. The company reported net income of $5,789,000 or $.41 per share, after preferred dividends of $2,177,000, on revenues of $88.9 million for the year ended Sept. 30, 1995, compared with net income of $1,225,000, or a loss of $.07 per share, after preferred stock dividends of $1,826,000 on revenues of $76.0 million for the previous year. Net income for the year ended Sept. 30, 1994 included an extraordinary loss of $1.4 million recorded in the first quarter resulting from the retirement of indebtedness recorded on the balance sheet at a discount to face value.

ICO also was pleased to announce the establishment of a quarterly dividend of $.05 per share on its common stock. The first dividend will be paid on Dec. 31, 1995 to the shareholders of record on Dec. 21, 1995.

TransTexas Gas raises reserves 57 percent

HOUSTON — TransTexas Gas Corp. announced that its [illegible] proved natural gas reserves escalated by 56.5 percent to 1.111 Billion cubic feet of natural gas equivalent (Bcfe) over its 1994 reserves. Netherland, Sewell & Associates reported that TransTexas added 412 Bcfe of new proved reserves during the fiscal year ended July 31, 1995. This resulted in 272 percent reserve replacement at an all-sources finding cost of $0.46 per thousand cubic feet (Mcfe) and a drillbit finding cost of $0.21 per Mcfe. The substantial growth in reserves at such low cost resulted directly from the company's exploration and development drilling programs in its La Grulla, Bob West North and Cuba Libre gas development areas.

Average daily natural gas production for the year rose 12.9 percent to 405 Million cubic feet per day (MMcfd) from 359 MMcfd in 1994, mitigating a precipitous 28.6 percent decline in the price of natural gas to $1.40 per thousand cubic feet (Mcf) from $1.96 per Mcf a year ago. Management's successful operating cost reduction efforts continued as lifting costs in 1995 were reduced by 12.5 percent to $0.21 per Mcfe from $0.24 in the year earlier and G & A was lowered 30 percent to $0.21 per Mcfe from $0.30. Reflecting the gas price decline, the company reported a loss for the fiscal year ended July 31, 1995, before extraordinary items, of $11.9 Million, or $0.16 per share, on revenues of $312.7 Million. Net income for 1994 was $23.8 Million on revenues of $335.9 Million.

Lomak Petroleum places $25 million in offering

FORT WORTH — Lomak Petroleum Inc. sold in a private offering $25 million of $2.03 convertible exchangeable preferred stock (the "Preferred Stock").

The Preferred Stock is convertible into the company's common stock at a conversion price of $9.50 per share, subject to adjustment in certain events. The Preferred Stock will be redeemable, at the option of the Company, at any time on or after November 1, 1998, at redemption prices beginning at 105%. At the option of the Company, the Preferred Stock is exchangeable for the company's 8 1/8% convertible subordinated notes due 2005. The notes will be subject to the same redemption and conversion terms as the Preferred Stock. Lomak has granted the Initial Purchasers an option to purchase up to an additional $3.75 million of the Preferred Stock to cover over-allotments, if any.

Within the past sixty days, Lomak has completed over $40 million of acquisitions which were funded primarily from borrowings under its revolving bank credit facility. Lomak will use the proceeds from the sale of the Preferred Stock to repay a portion of such borrowings. The Company intends to use the resulting borrowing capacity under the credit facility to fund future acquisitions and development activities.

Triton Energy revenues triple in quarter

DALLAS — Triton Energy Corp. reports earnings from continuing operations for the third quarter of 1995 were $1.3 million, compared with a loss of $7.6 million for the third quarter of 1994. Earnings after discontinued operations and preferred dividends for the third quarter of 1995 were $926,000, or $.03 per share, versus a loss of $8.3 million, or $.24 per share, for the year-ago quarter. Total revenues for the third quarter of 1995 of $36.8 million were more than triple revenues of $10.6 million for the year-ago quarter.

Previously reported results were restated to reflect the discontinuance of Triton's aviation sales and services business, as the company continues to divest its noncore businesses and to reflect Triton's reporting financial results on a calendar-year basis beginning in 1995.

Contributing to the improvement in third-quarter 1995 results was the continued increased production from the ongoing development of Triton's Colombian oil fields. Triton's third-quarter average net production from the Cusiana Field was 15,718 barrels of oil per day (bpd), compared with 1,008 bpd for the third quarter of 1994.

Patterson Energy posts third quarter results

SNYDER, Texas — Patterson Energy, Inc. reported net income for the third quarter ended September 30, 1995 of $868,000 on revenues of $12,656,000 compared with earnings of $852,000 on revenues of $10,573,000 during the third quarter of 1994.

Primary earnings per share in the third quarter were $0.30 on 2,849,000 outstanding shares. Fully diluted earnings per share during the quarter were $0.29 per share on 2,955,000 shares outstanding. In the third quarter of 1994, earnings per share were $0.33 on 2,597,000 shares. The increase in outstanding shares in 1995 primarily reflects exercise of Patterson's outstanding redeemable warrants during the quarter.

Energy Ventures reports higher income

HOUSTON - Energy Ventures Inc. announced income from continuing operations of $3,556,000 or 24 cents per share on revenues of $93,797,000 for the third quarter of 1995 compared to income from continuing operations of $1,679,000 or 13 cents per share on revenues of $68,079,000 for the third quarter of 1994. Operating income was $9,195,000 compared to $6,162,000 for the same period last year.

Valero sets record for operating income

SAN ANTONIO - Valero Energy Corp. reported third quarter 1995 net income of $22.6 million or 45 cents per common share, compared to third quarter 1994 net income of $12.5 million or 22 cents per common share.

Valero's third quarter 1995 operating income of $57.8 million represents a new quarterly record for the company and was the second consecutive quarter in which a new record has been achieved. Last year Valero reported $43.1 million in operating income for the third quarter.

Parker Drilling reports earnings for quarter

TULSA - Parker Drilling Co. announced revenue of $157,371,000 and net income of $3,916,000 or 7 cents per share for its fiscal year 1995, which ended August 31. This compares to the previous year's revenue of $152,424,000 and a net loss of $28,806,000 or 53 cents per share for fiscal 1994.

Wainoco Oil suffers net loss in third quarter

HOUSTON — Wainoco Oil Corp. reported a net loss for the quarter ended September 30, 1995 of $3.5 million or $.13 per share compared to net income of $2.6 million or $.10 per share for the comparable quarter of 1994. Operating income before depreciation was $6.6 million compared to $14.8 million in last year's third quarter. Cash flow before changes in working capital was $906,000 compared to $10.1 million in the similar quarter of 1994. The financial results reflect weak natural gas prices in Canada as well as unseasonably low refined product margins throughout most of the quarter.

Cross Timbers Oil reports higher earnings

FORT WORTH — Cross Timbers Oil Co. reported third quarter net earnings of $1.8 million or 10 cents per share compared with net income of $1.5 million or 10 cents per share for third quarter 1994. Total revenues for the quarter were $28.1 million, an 11 percent increase from third quarter 1994 revenues of $25.3 million. Cash flow from operations, before changes in operating assets and liabilities, was $9.7 million compared with $11.1 million for the prior year quarter.

Included in third quarter 1995 net income is an extraordinary gain of $600,000, net of tax, recognized upon the company's purchase and retirement of $7.6 million principal amount of its convertible subordinated notes.

Employees of the McVean & Barlow Pipeline Construction Co. celebrate completion of the "The Last Link From Snyder to Wink" in January 1954, a trunk line connecting Snyder to the Pasotex pipeline.

PIPELINE: First made of high quality steel

followed a sheer drop of 1,000 feet.

Just past the Delawares, the pipeline crossed an area known as "crow flats." These odd salt sinks, irregular in shape, were basically pools of briny mud encrusted with a treacherously thin layer of dry sand and salt.

Although previously a source of salt supply for the generations who lived during Geronimo's reign, the crow flats were nothing more than a supply of corrosion for the pipeline's construction crews. The Pasotex was carried above ground through this region on a trestle of wooden piles.

Eighty miles east of El Paso, the line crossed sandy rangeland surrounding the Hueco Mountains. The deep, loose sand and rocky area made transportation of materials and supplies difficult, and trenching laborious at best. Frequent sand storms were known to halt work.

Functional location of camp sites was difficult and in most cases required the transportation of water. Water was hauled as far as practicable by railroad, and then delivered by tank-truck over almost non-existent roads the remaining five to 75 miles.

The roads were said to be of "indifferent quality," but sufficed to transport hundreds of tons of pipe and machinery. When the line was completed, it was estimated that 700,000 ton-miles of hauling had been done.

Extensive storage facilities and gathering systems were tied into the line.

Also along the line, pumping equipment and employee housing facilities were located at four company stations spaced about 50 miles apart. The stations each had a maximum operating pressure of 900 psi, and they were connected by company-owned telephone lines bordering company-constructed roads. The path of the buried pipe was only visible to travelers by this solitary line of telephone poles.

The first station, located near the expanding town of Wink, was operated by electricity. It contained two 8500-barrel-per-day pumps driven by 150 hp motors, and two 4250-barrel pumps hooked to 75 hp motors. The diverse units allowed the station to deliver from 4,000 to 17,000 bopd, while still maintaining full load for maximum efficiency and economy.

The other three stations were located at Orla, Guadalupe and Hueco. They were equipped with three identical four-cylinder vertical, diesel engines. The engines had 205 hp and were the mechanical-injection type. Each engine was directly connected to a pump capable of delivering 8500 bopd, such that two engines could handle full capacity of the line with the third as a standby.

Those residing at the stations were given every convenience to ward off the sandstorms in the dry months and the cold winter winds. All buildings were equipped with electricity for lighting and refrigeration. Supplies were delivered by the same employees who inspected the Pasotex line, and where feasible, water wells were drilled.

Prior to WWII, the Pasotex line flowed 14,000 bopd. War demands increased the volume to 20,000 bopd.

ACCOUNTANTS: Tests similar to CPA programs

in Denton to develop the test and the institute has promised that results of the accreditation exams will be given to COPAS within a week to 10 days.

Work began on the program in October, 1994 at COPAS' annual meeting in Denver, where the education committee adopted what was then known as the Petroleum Accountants Standards of Knowledge program and nominated eight COPAS members to serve on the board of examiners. Hall serves as vice chairman and another member is Sandra Baxter, an employee with Lynx Petroleum in Hobbs, N.M.

The education committee had developed study modules in each of the eight areas that contained bibliographies and began meeting monthly in December 1994 to structure the test, working in conjunction with the Personal Development Institute. The committee supplied information they wanted on the test and professional writers from the institute wrote the questions, with the exception of two tests which Hall said were written by two board members themselves.

The test was reviewed several times and a sample exam given this past September at the Fall 1995 COPAS meeting in San Antonio, taken by 48 people.

He said COPAS members feel confident they have a program similar to the CPA program and that the credentials are portable, following the accredited accountant from company to company.

The program was warmly received recently by the Upstream Accounting Group of the American Petroleum Institute when it was presented by COPAS executive director John Gear. Hall said the upstream group is comprised of such types as chief financial officers and financial vice presidents. Asked how to reward an employee who passed the program, Gear said he recommended promotions or raises, "but there should definitely be something to reward the person for his time and effort. I mean, they have to spend at least in excess of 20 hours studying for each test," Hall pointed out.

Not only will accreditation give the accountant more marketable skills and enhance his chances for promotion, it will also benefit his employer, according to Hall.

"This will increase the accountant's skills because, in studying for these tests, he has to review and go over things that petroleum accountants work on. In most of the industry, you have highly specialized people. Say, someone works in the tax department at Texaco, they're really up on tax matters, but they may never have worked in joint interest. This program will increase their knowledge, thus benefiting the company they work for."

Swift says Texas development above expectations

HOUSTON —A. Earl Swift, president and chairman, of Swift Energy Co., while addressing a regular meeting of the Pacific Stock Exchange Club in Seattle, Wash., reported that the company's accelerated development programs in McMullen and Fayette Counties, Texas, are on schedule and providing production results above the company's expectations.

Swift recently accelerated its drilling activity in two core areas, facilitated by a $49 million July equity offering. In the AWP Olmos Field in McMullen County, Texas, Swift has identified over 100 proved undeveloped locations adjacent to its current operations. Of these, 89 locations are in an 8,830 acre lease called Two Rivers. Swift has a 100 percent working interest in this area. In the Two Rivers portion of the AWP Field, three rigs are currently drilling wells. Since completion of the equity offering, 19 wells, 16 in Two Rivers, have been drilled which are either currently producing gas and condensate or are awaiting completion.

Swift estimates that its net daily production from the AWP Field has already tripled from approximately 2.0 million to 7.4 million cubic feet of gas per day as the result of the new wells drilled. Plans call for 12 more wells to be drilled in the field during the remainder of 1995 and 64 wells to be drilled in 1996.

The company is encouraged by the fact that recent well completions in this field are providing initial production rates up to 25 percent above projections. The production and completion techniques being used on these wells, which include large hydraulic fracture treating and utilization of coil tubing, are providing excellent results.

In the Giddings Field located in Fayette County, Texas, the company has another development program underway, also facilitated by the proceeds from the stock offering. In this field, Swift recently accelerated its activity and now has under contract three rigs drilling horizontal wells. The first well completed in this field since the offering was reported on Sept. 27, 1995, with an initial state potential test of 10.1 million cubic feet of natural gas and 450 barrels of condensate per day. In this well Swift's working interest was approximately 27.5 percent. Swift has plans to drill 25 gross (9.0 net) wells in this area through year-end 1996.

Swift began expanding its exploration and development drilling effort in 1991 and significantly increased its activities in 1994, with the drilling of 44 wells. The AWP Olmos Field and the Giddings Field are the company's two primary areas scheduled for significant development drilling in 1995 and 1996.

Based in Houston, Swift Energy Company is a 15-year-old independent oil and gas company engaged primarily in the exploration, development, acquisition and operation of oil and gas properties, with an emphasis on domestic natural gas. During the first three quarters of 1995, Swift has participated in drilling six exploratory and 39 development wells with three exploratory successes and 38 development successes. Swift's current plans are to drill a total of 15 exploratory and 64 development wells for all of 1995, with seven wells currently drilling.

Sonat Offshore awarded Amoco contract

HOUSTON — Sonat Offshore Drilling Inc. said that its deep-water drillship, the Discoverer 534, has been awarded a new contract with the exploration and production sector of Amoco Corp.

Amoco will contract the rig for an estimated period of 27 months, beginning in the fall of 1996, with one well plus one year guaranteed. The guaranteed term of the contract should generate revenue of approximately $56 million. The Discoverer 534 is one of two dynamically positioned, deep-water drillships in Sonat Offshore's sixteen rig fleet. The rig is currently operating in the U.S. Gulf of Mexico and is expected to be utilized within this market by Amoco as part of a deep-water exploration and appraisal drilling program.

A tip for measuring mutual fund performance

If you'd like to evaluate your mutual fund more carefully, but aren't sure what to look for, you should know about total return.

Total return is one of the best indicators of a mutual fund's performance. It includes income dividends, capital gains and changes in the value of a mutual fund's shares. Your total return will vary slightly according to whether you take your dividends in cash or reinvest them.

Here is an example of total return assuming all dividends and capital gains are reinvested:

Raul Benavides

Account Value 12/31/94	$20,250
Account Value 12/31/93	$18,000
Changes in value	+ $ 2,250

To find the total return on this account, take the change in value and divide it by the beginning value:

$2,250 ÷ $18,000 = .125 or 12.5 percent.

If you choose to receive dividends in cash, total return is calculated as follows:

Account Value 12/31/94	$18,558
Account Value 12/31/93	$18,000
Change in Value	$ 558
Total Dividends	$ 1,674

$558 + $1,674= $2,232
$2,232 ÷ $1,800 = .124 or 12.4 percent total return.

As you can see, taking dividends in cash rather than reinvesting them and letting them compound will give you a slightly lower total return. The difference becomes larger over longer periods of time.

You can find a mutual fund's total return in its annual report. The total return reported by the fund, however, may not agree with your calculations. Mutual fund performance figures are based on specific time periods. If you do not own the fund for the entire period covered by the annual report, your total return will be different.

Total return also is affected by additional investments and redeemed shares. If you buy more shares or sell shares right after a major increase or decrease in the fund's share value, your total return will reflect this.

However, long-term investors should not be overly concerned about short-term results. Over meaningful periods—five to 10 years or more—your fund's total return figures are generally a good measure of how well your investment is progressing.

There are several ways to measure the performance of any mutual fund, but total return is the most widely accepted. No other method simultaneously takes into account income, gains and changes in share value.

MEETINGS

API-IADC meeting to host Reed Tool president

Roy Caldwell, president of Reed Tool Co., will be the guest speaker at Tuesday's joint meeting of the Permian Basin chapters, International Association of Drilling Contractors and American Petroleum Institute. The meeting will be at the Petroleum Club beginning with social hour at 5:30 p.m. and dinner at 6:30 p.m.

Caldwell will present this year's annual rig census and an overview of the drilling contractor industry.

Cost is $20 and reservations can be made by calling 684-4423 or 550-2353.

Division order analysts schedule meeting

The Permian Basin Association of Division Order Analysts will meet Wednesday at Ranchland Hills Country Club beginning at 11:45 a.m.

Guest speaker Bill Milam will offer a "Gas Processing Overview." He is project development coordinator for the West Texas area, GPM Gas Corp.

SEG lecturer to visit Basin geophysicists

The Permian Basin Geophysical Society will meet Wednesday at 902 W. Dengar beginning at 11:30 a.m.

Dr. John P. Castagna, a fall 1995 Distinguished Lecturer for the Society of Exploration Geophysicists, will be the guest speaker, talking oin "Applied AVO Analysis: Use and Abuse of Amplitude Variation with Offset."

Castagna, a senior principal research geophysicist with Arco Exploration and Production Technology, has worked on AVO analysis forover 15 years. He advocates the intelligent utilization of AVO analysis and will discuss aspects of the method's lack of credibility and show how AVO crossplots may improve AVO analysis.

Miscible flooding topic for SPE study group

Loren Stiles will be the guest speaker at Thursday's meeting of the Reservoir Study Group of the Society of Petroleum Engineers. The meeting will be at the American Legion Hall beginning at 11:30 a.m.

His topic will be "Economic Outlook for Miscible Flooding." He is currently technical advisor and Noel Energy Research professor for the University of Texas of the Permian Basin's Petroleum Industry Alliance. Prior to joining the alliance in1992, he had been with Exxon Co. U.S.A. for over 44 years.

Arthur Andersen sets oil and gas symposium

Energy industry chief executives, independent producers and leading energy financing sources will discuss the major issues facing the worldwide oil and gas industry at the 16th annual Arther Andersen Oil & Gas Symposium, set for Dec. 5-6 at the Westin Galleria Hotel.

Major areas covered in 14 CEO-level panels, presentations and speeches will include U.S. and North American exploration and development outlook; technologies and strategies that improve success and cut costs; emerging global exploration and development opportunities; innovations in financing energy investments and managing price risks; and financial analysts view of the U.S. oil and gas industry

Confirmed speakers inlcude Constantine S. Nicandros, president, chief executive, Conoco Inc; Victor G. Ashland to develop offshore field

HOUSTON — Ashland Exploration, Inc., a subsidiary of Ashland Inc. announced the decision has been made to construct and install production facilities on its Vermilion Block 410 field, offshore, Louisiana.

Ashland Exploration Inc. has a 50 percent working interest and is the operator for joint venture partners McMoRan Oil & Gas Co. /MCN Corp.offshore joint venture (37.5 percent) and Taurus Exploration Inc., a subsidiary of Energen Corp. (12.5 percent)

Vermilion Block 410 field was discovered in August 1994. Subsequently, seven additional successful wells have been drilled to exploit numerous natural gas reservoirs. All eight wells will be completed to produce. Two additional wells have been temporarily abandoned and saved for potential future use.

Ashland and its partners plan to install a four pile self-contained manned production platform over four wells drilled from a common surface location on Vermilion Block 410. Also, a tripod well support structure will be installed over four wells drilled from a common surface location on Vermilion Block 389.

The eight production wells are all drilled directionally at angles as high as 70 degrees from vertical and production will come from four Outer Continental Shelf leases totaling approximately 11,000 acres, Vermilion, South Addition, Blocks 389, 409 and 410, and East Cameron, South Addition, Block 362.

The new field is located in approximately 360 feet of water, 105 miles offshore from Vermilion Parish, La.

Initial production is expected by early 1997 at rates of approximately 100 MMCFGPD. Additional exploitation and exploration drilling is anticipated in the field.

Ashland Exploration is engaged in exploration for and production of crude oil and natural gas in the United States and overseas. Based in Houston, it is a wholly-owned subsidiary of Ashland Inc., which is a diversified energy corporation engaged in petroleum refining, transportation and marketing; retail gasoline marketing; motor oil marketing; chemicals, coal; and highway construction. Ashland Inc. is based in Ashland Ky.

The MOXY/MCN joint venture interest is shared 40 percent by MOXY and 60 percent by MCN. MOXY is engaged in exploration for oil and gas reserves in the Gulf Coast area and offshore in the Gulf of Mexico using state of the art 3-D imagery and technology. MCN is a natural gas holding company based in Detroit.

BRIEFS

Israel, Enron to supply gas from Qatar

HOUSTON (AP) — Israel has signed a tentative agreement with Houston-based Enron Corp. that could lead to natural gas shipments from the Arab state of Qatar in the oil-rich Persian Gulf.

The $4 billion deal would be the first of its kind between Israel and a member of the outer ring of Arab states that refuses to trade directly with Israel, according to the Israeli Foreign Ministry.

"This memo of understanding symbolizes the dramatic changes taking place in the Mideast," Israeli Consul General Tzion Evrony said Tuesday in Houston. "We used to have cross-border wars. Now we have cross-border ventures."

Under the tentative plan, Enron would tap gas from Qatar's vast offshore North Dome field.

Enron spokeswoman Carol Hensley said gas would be liquified at a new Enron plant in Ras Laffan, Qatar. Then, it could be shipped to a still-undetermined port on the Red Sea — likely Aqaba, Jordan, or Eilat, Israel — where another plant would be built to turn the liquid back into gas.

Hensley said the gas would be sold in both Jordan and Israel.

BP agrees to sell Pennsylvania refinery

CLEVELAND — BP has agreed in principle to sell its refining and marketing interests in the Northeast United States to the Tosco Corp.

The sale includes the Marcus Hook refinery near Philadelphia, nine petroleum product terminals and associated pipeline interests in Pennsylvania, Maryland, New Jersey, Massachusetts, and Maine.

It also includes a 15-year license agreement under which Tosco will develop the presence of the BP brand in the Northeast region which currently consists of some 500 BP branded service stations supplied by independent jobbers.

BP said it expects the proceeds of the sale to be approximately $235 million. In addition, BP will participate in future profits in the event that refining margins in the Northeast improve over the next five years, up to a cumulative $50 million.

BP said that the sale to Tosco is subject to various approvals and consents but is expected to close around year end.

Marathon makes East Texas reef discovery

HOUSTON — Marathon Oil Co. has announced the discovery of the sixth reef in the Cotton Valley Reef Trend. The Brounkowski No. 1 discovery well in Robertson County, Texas encountered a productive reef similar to previous discoveries at the Poth No. 1, located eight miles to the northeast, and the Riley Trust No. 1, located six miles to the southwest. The Brounkowski well tested natural gas at the rate of 18.1 million cubic feet per day through a 21/64-inch choke at 7,820 psi flowing tubing pressure. Marathon has a 100 percent interest in this well.

The company continues an active exploration program in this play, where it has over 40,000 acres and a large inventory of reef prospects to drill.

Nuevo announces Austin Chalk completion

HOUSTON - Nuevo Energy Co. announced the successful completion of the No. 1-H Hobbs Unit located in the Brookeland field in Newton County.

This Austin Chalk well, operated by Bexco Operating Inc., tested at an initial rate of 8.4 million cubic feet of gas per day and 1,680 barrels of oil per day on a 26/64 inch choke with a flowing tubing pressure of 3,200 pounds per square inch. This dual lateral horizontal well was drilled to a vertical depth of 11,300 ft. and then drilled 6,207 feet horizontally.

This well is located on a 3,100 acre farmout from Texaco Exploration & Production Inc. and is near the Texas-Louisiana border. It further extends Nuevo's successful Austin Chalk activity tot he east with plans to continue the drilling into Louisiana. Nuevo holds interests in over 28,000 acres to the east in Vernon and Sabine Parishes, La., where Sonat has reported recent successes.

Partners in the Hobbs well are Nuevo with a 25 percent working interest; Southwest Gas Supply Inc., a subsidiary of MCN Corp., with a 15 percent working interest; and Baker et al with a 10 percent working interest. The other 50 percent working interest is privately held.

Berry Petroleum sells Rincon properties

TAFT, Calif. — Berry Petroleum Co. announced that it has completed the sale of its Rincon, Calif. holdings to Rincon Island Limited Partnership for $5.8 million plus certain reimbursements.

Rincon Island Limited Partnership is a limited partnership between Windsor Energy US Corp. of Dallas, a subsidiary of Windsor Energy Corp. of Calgary, Alberta, as the general partner and the Torch Energy Finance Fund Limited Partnership I of Houston, as the limited partner. Net daily production from the six properties, which comprise 1,635 acres and 15 producing wells, represents 2.6 percent of Berry's current production. Torch Operating Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of Torch Energy Advisors Inc., will operate the properties beginning Nov. 2, 1995.

Valero Energy announces credit agreement

SAN ANTONIO — Valero Energy Corp. has entered into a new revolving bank credit agreement with a group of banks led by Morgan Guaranty Trust Company and Bank of Montreal as agent banks. The $300 million, five-year agreement became effective on November 1, 1995, and replaces a previously existing $250 million facility.

The facility provides for lower borrowing spreads, as well as reduced commitment fees and letter of credit pricing, compared to the previous agreement. In addition, certain restrictive covenants, which specifically limited capital expenditures, dividend payments and stock redemptions, have been eliminated.

Coastal unit plans power plant in China

HOUSTON — The Coastal Corp. announced that its power subsidiary, Coastal Power Company, has signed a joint-venture contract to build and operate a 58-megawatt power plant in the industrial city of Suzhou in the People's Republic of China.

Coastal Power is nearing completion of its first joint-venture power project in China, a 40-megawatt plant in Wuxi City, 30 miles northwest of Suzhou. The Wuxi plant is scheduled to begin producing electricity in mid-November.

The Suzhou joint venture would build, own, and operate a simple-cycle, gas-turbine plant to provide 58 megawatts of electricity. Construction could begin in December 1995, with production of electricity starting in July 1996.

The Suzhou project is estimated to cost approximately $29 million. Coastal would bear 60 percent of the cost, while the remaining cost would be born by a consortium consisting of affiliates of the Suzhou municipal government.

In addition to the joint-venture contract, Coastal and its Chinese partners also signed articles of incorporation for the joint-venture entity and a power purchase agreement.

Pride finals buyout of Colombian contractor

HOUSTON — Pride Petroleum Services, Inc. announced that it has successfully completed the acquisition of Marlin Colombia Drilling Co., Inc. from Shell Overseas Trading Limited, a member of the Royal Dutch/Shell Group of Companies. Marlin owns six drilling/workover rigs in the Republic of Colombia.

Parker signs contract with Chinese driller

TULSA - Parker Drilling Co. has signed a contract with Great Wall Drilling Co. of China to act as its liaison with Western oil companies who will be working in China's Tarim Basin. Great Wall is part of China National Oil Co., the government oil ministry.

The agreement calls for Parker to manage Great Wall's rigs and train its crews. In addition, through equipment and safety audits, Parker will help the Chinese meet international industry standards for its rigs and crews, a requirement for Western operators who will begin exploration of the Tarim Basin in remote, western China in 1996.

Robert L. Parker Jr., president and chief executive officer, explained that the Chinese purchased several Western-technology rigs at U.S. auctions and now the Tulsa-based company will assist Great Wall ih modifying and upgrading the rigs for difficult Tarim Basin drilling programs. Parker will also provide rig supervisory, safety and accounting personnel for the venture.

In addition, part of the agreement is to provide hands-on training to Chinese rig personnel, said Parker.

Vastar Resources announces offshore natural gas discovery

HOUSTON — Vastar Resources Inc. announced test results of an exploration well at its Bastian Bay prospect (South Pass 17-1), which is part of the company's South Pass 60 federal unit. Vastar has a 100 percent working interest in the unit.

Vastar logged 102 net true vertical feet of pay from a measured depth of 12,990 feet to 13,322 feet and tested a 20 foot interval from 13,246 feet to 13,266 feet. The flow rate was test equipment constrained at 17.8 million cubic feet per day (MMcfd) of natural gas and 3,100 barrels of oil per day (Bbld) with a flowing tubing pressure of 5,905 pounds per square inch on a 29/64-inch choke. In addition, the company tested a lower laminated zone from 14,720 feet to 14,820 feet, which flowed oil in non-commercial quantities. At least one more exploration well is planned during 1996 to further delineate the discovery.

The Bastian Bay discovery was drilled in 140 feet of water from a semi-submersible rig in a mud flow area at the mouth of the Mississippi River. It was the second successful exploratory well in the unit this year. An extension well was completed earlier this year and is now producing at a rate of 1,850 Bbld and 1.5 MMcfd.

Equine center could boost city's economy

Dr. Bobby Cobb's four-footed patients don't know it yet, but they could be prancing around in style in about a year.

Cobb, a veterinarian, is president of the volunteer, non-profit board of directors of the West Texas Exposition Center.

"The facility will be tailored for a variety of family-oriented events, including horse and livestock shows, rodeos, fairs, educational seminars, trade and craft shows, art exhibits and concérts," Cobb said.

The proposed $2.5 million facility will include a covered arena, seating for 2,000-plus, 400 horse stalls and 20 acres of parking. The proposed 135-acre site is located just west of Loop 250, between Interstate 20 and Business 20 on Midland's west side.

Organizers have contacted several event organizers, many of whom are anxious to book events, including the U. S. Team Roping Championships, the American Junior Rodeo Association, the Texas State Championship Team Roping Association, the American Novice Horse Association and the Tex-Mex Barrel Racing Association.

Modern airport helped city win Continental

By W.H. "Bill" Collyns

Ever wonder what brought then Denver-based Continental Airlines to Midland, a town of 8,000 to 10,000 population, back in the early 1940s?

Well, therein lies a right interesting story, in which a modern, up-to-date airport played an important role.

In the late 1930s and early 1940s, when aviation really was coming into its own, the Midland City Council, looking to the future with confidence, purchased the privately owned Sloan Field, located at the present site of Midland International Airport, and made extensive improvements, making it one of the best facilities in the region. An intensive effort to gain commercial airline service was launched at that time by the Midland Chamber of Commerce, of which I happened to be the manager.

Late one afternoon during that period, John W. House, Chamber president and an aviation enthusiast, stopped by the Chamber office to advise that he had learned that Continental Airlines planned to start flight service from Denver to San Antonio, with stops at Hobbs, New Mexico, Big Spring and San Angelo.

That news demanded prompt attention on Midland's part. It also was learned that a flight over the proposed route would be made in a few days, with an overnight stop scheduled for Hobbs at 4 p.m. on a certain date. After discussing the situation, it was decided that I should prepare a factual information brief on Midland, the headquarters city of the Permian Basin empire, for presentation to the Continental chiefs upon their arrival at Hobbs.

This was done promptly, and I was on hand at the Hobbs Airport at the scheduled hour.

The Continental plane also was on time, and following its landing, President Bob Six and several vice presidents deplaned. After the Hobbs delegation had concluded its welcoming ceremony and departed the scene, yours truly greeted the airline officials, stating my purpose in being there, and invited them, on behalf of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and the Midland City Council, to alter their plans and to consider Midland as a West Texas stopping point.

After a brief discussion among themselves, I was advised that although they appreciated the invitation, it could not receive further consideration. I thanked them for their courtesy in listening to me, and dance supplied by the West Texas Expo board of directors, the Midland Chamber's Convention and Visitors Bureau (CVB) calculated the economic impact on Midland at more than $.6 million annually for 32 events.

CENTER: Proposed facility could bring a lot of visitors to Midland

"There is a need in Midland for a facility like this," Cobb said. "It will bring a lot of visitors to the city."

Cobb said that between 300 to 2,500 people attend the horse-related events, which typically last two to 10 days.

"Most of the participants will be out-of-town people," Cobb said.

"The International Guild of Peruvian Horses has a show that's traditionally been in Denver," Cobb said. "They said they would love to hold one here in Midland."

Susie Hitchcock-Hall, who volunteers as vice president of the CVB, is impressed with the expo center's possibilities.

"The economic impact is just incredible," Ms. Hitchcock-Hall said. "The visitors will be looking for hotel and motel rooms. Many will be pulling horse trailers and will need a lot of fuel for their pickups. They will go shopping — big time — and eat out for all their meals."

CVB manager Suzy McElmurry concurs.

"This opens a whole new avenue for marketing Midland to visitors," she said. "Abilene estimates about 15 percent of their visitors are attending events at their horse expo center. It is possible we could add a significant amount of new money coming into Midland's economy with this new facility."

The expo center will also add to the community's quality of life.

The Cerebral Palsy Center will use the facility for their horse therapy program, known as hippotherapy.

"We'll donate use of the facility to the CP Center, as well as monetary donations when funds become available," Cobb said. "Any other funds in excess of operating will be made available to other worthy non-profit charitable organizations."

'The International Guild of Peruvian Horses has a show that's traditionally been in Denver. They said they would love to do one here in Midland.'

— Dr. Bob Cobb, Midland veterinarian

Also in the works is a western heritage museum at the site.

"This will be part historical, part educational," Cobb said. "Some displays could show the western way of life, while other exhibits might compare grasses from East Texas to those in West Texas."

The expo center board scheduled a founders dinner Nov. 1 to raise initial seed capital.

"This facility will be privately funded," Cobb said. "Midland taxpayers can rest easy that the only effect on local taxes will be out-of-towners contributing cash to our sales tax totals."

Dr. Robert L. Cobb, Cobb Veterinary Clinic, president; Candi Cowden, Half Circle C Ranch, secretary; Karl Reiter, assistant vice president, NationsBank, treasurer; Dan R. Anderson, financial resource manager of The Carter Anderson Group; Jim Cauthen, president of Lone Star Oil and Gas; Meg Farrington, Venture Farm; Braxton Glass, Lazy Z Ranch; Wayne Merritt, president of Norwest Bank, Midland; John Mabee, Mabee Ranch; Susie Hitchcock-Hall, Susie's South Forty Confections; and Ray Schimcek, district conservationist, USDA Soil Conservation Service.

Horses are a part of Texans' lives — at work and at play

By Bruce Partain

Horses have been a part of West Texas even before there was a Midland.

Comanches guided their speedy steeds toward Mexico while raiding the borderlands.

In the 1850s, cavalry units from the U.S. Army surveyed what would later be known as the Permian Basin.

As soldiers, ranchers and cowboys forged the American West, the horse played a vital part.

The equine tradition began to fade as oil, the internal combustion engine and urban development took over.

But the westerners in general, and West Texans in particular, never completely gave up their love affair with the horse.

In fact, modern life may have spawned the next great trend in the horse world.

People now have the money and the leisure time to spend on their animals.

Also, the stress and complexity of living in the '90s makes the rugged simplicity of horse-related activities extremely appealing.

The result is that ropers, barrel racers, rodeo riders, polo players, jumpers, cutters, show horses, and the people who love to watch them are a huge market that cannot be ignored.

Western English World magazine cites a Cowles/Yankelovich research study of the national western market that found that 31 percent of Americans are western enthusiasts. That adds up to 57 million people, averaging $30,000 in household income, representing a combined buying power of $1.5 billion.

The West Texas Exposition Center is Midland's opportunity to tap into this market.

Figures on retail sales are gauge of city's, region's economic health

By Kevin Skipper

One statistical indicator economists use to gauge a city's or region's health is retail sales. Retail sales, as classified by the Texas Comptroller's Office in Austin, are collected by businesses in the retail trade industry. Each business in Texas and throughout the United States receives a Standard Industrial Classification (SIC) code. For retail businesses, the SIC codes range from 5211 to 5999. Any business with an SIC code within that range is defined as in the retail industry and collects sales tax. Retail businesses must report their sales to the Comptroller's Economic Data Section each month. Every business must complete a State Sales and Use Tax Form in which the owner or an employee must calculate the amount of tax due. The Comptroller's Office compiles these data. Often, changes must be made to account for delinquent calculations.

Cities throughout Texas receive payments or allocations from the Comptroller's Office based on the number and type of sales made within that jurisdiction. This reimbursement process takes about two months after businesses report their sales and corresponding tax collections. The state charges a 2 percent fee for collecting and administering city allocation payments. Further, the state retains 2 percent of each allocation payment for one month to cover potential refunds.

Many organizations or non-profit corporations in Texas do not collect sales taxes. These include organizations that qualify for exemption from federal income tax, volunteer fire departments, chambers of commerce, and political subdivisions such as school districts or county governments.

Labor is taxable if it is part of the price of goods sold, rented, or leased. For example, manufacturing, assembling, or fabricating represent taxable activities. Products of taxable labor include tailoring, catering, artwork, photography, printing, or assembling furniture or equipment. We are all familiar with sales taxes for cable television, pest extermination, landscaping and lawn maintenance, laundry services, and telecommunication services. Any item mailed into and used in the state is subject to Texas sales tax. Businesses do not collect tax on goods or services used outside the state.

Festival of Trees

Holiday event benefits community groups

The second Festival of Trees Extravaganza, hosted by the Junior League of Midland Inc., is set for Nov. 9 - 11 at Midland Center which will be transformed into a holiday wonderland of mystical trees and inviting wreaths.

These unique holiday decorations are designed and sponsored by local businesses and individuals. Shoppers will want to visit the quaint village of gingerbread houses and churches, and browse at the royal procession of miniature trees, each with its own original theme. All items are offered for sale or raffle.

Through Sherwood Forest will be the Enchanted Merchant Village. Open for holiday shopping needs, merchants will offer their wares for sale.

The Festival of Trees opens 6 p.m. Thursday, Nov. 9, with a family preview party.

Young and old alike will enjoy entertainment, tempting desserts and coffee bar. Those who love to dance can experience the elegance of the annual charity ball 8 p.m. Friday, Nov. 10.

Saturday activities begin at 9 a.m. with a children's concert. Kids will be held spellbound by the Holiday Kingdom's own minstrel, Eddie Coker. Afterward, children can enjoy reindeer games and activities in the Children's Kingdom.

A visit may also be made by the jolly old elf himself!

Admission is charged to all events. Proceeds will benefit the community projects of the Junior League of Midland and other non-profit organizations, including the Senior Craft Fair, Teen Court and Rainbows.

Chamber kicks off holiday season withWorld's Largest Office Party

On Friday, Dec. 1, the Midland Chamber officially kicks off the Christmas season with the World's Largest Office Party.

Sponsors are Associated Publishing, Permian Basin Waste Management, Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, Preferred Personnel, NewsWest 9, Webco Printing and the Reporter-Telegram.

"This is a wonderful business networking event hosted by the Chamber of Commerce," said Jane Inskeep of the Midland Chamber. "Hundreds of business people attend. They love to browse through Midland Center, sampling the delicious food prepared by 15 or more restaurants."

Some of the restaurants and food suppliers that have already committed are Liz Chancellor Catering with assorted cheesecakes and hors d'oeuvres, Graham Pharmacy with deep chocolate fudge, Johnny's Barbecue with southwestern barbecue, Main Events Catering with Chicken Roulade in Arizona Sauce, Miss Olsen's Coffee and Bookstore with delicious coffees and home-made cookies, Pecans International with delicious flavored pecan products, Sandhill Ratite Ranchers with exotic emu game birds and Susie's South Forty with fresh toffee and fudge.

Ms. Inskeep said the silent auction has grown tremendously over the past several years.

"This has always been a favorite part of the World's Largest Office Party," she said. "Our volunteers were so successful last year in obtaining items that we've expanded it again for 1995," Ms. Inskeep said.

Many items have been received, but companies are still encouraged to donate items of at least $25 value by calling the Chamber, 683-3381.

"We're especially interested in framed artwork and also vacation packages," Ms. Inskeep said. "But we will consider anything of value. Call me and either I or a volunteer will be glad to pick it up"

Proceeds from the auction will help fund Chamber community programs for 1996.

WIN: Up-to-date airport was turning point in city's favor asked them if they would accept copies of a brief on the subject. My offer was accepted. I told them that I too was spending the night in Hobbs and would be available to answer questions.

Terribly disappointed, of course, I made my way back to my hotel room to shed a few tears and perhaps get some sleep before returning to Midland with the negative news.

After about an hour of feeling sorry for myself, the telephone rang and Clarence West, Continental vice president, said that his group had read the Midland brief, and wondered if I could have dinner with them that evening. Acceptance was prompt. My spirits were back on the upward track as I headed to the hotel dining room. After a delicious meal and light conversation, the questioning started, and for more that an hour I fielded scores of questions concerning the Tall City, its economy, airport and various other qualities.

Finally, Six advised that if I could have the mayor and City Council members and the Chamber of Commerce officials at the Midland Airport at one o'clock on the following Saturday afternoon, his group would be on hand to discuss the matter further. I assured him that the Midland group would be on hand and ready to talk.

I drove back to Midland the next morning singing and whistling all the way.

Everything worked out satisfactorily, and full negotiations soon were under way.

After the official route application listing Midland as a landing point had been filed, I made two trips to Washington, D.C., to testify in favor of the proposed route. Approval finally was announced, but World War II interrupted this smooth progress. All airline expansions were put on hold until near the war's end. Continental was then granted permission to inaugurate its new service, landing at Midland Airpark until later arrangements could be made at Midland International Airport, then Midland Regional Airport.

That was the way it all came about. The Continental officials liked what they read and heard about Midland and the vicinity, but it was Midland's modern, up-to-date airport that was a turning point in Midland's favor. Without it, things very well might have been different.

Bill Collyns was manager of the Midland Chamber of Commerce from 1936 until 1946. He was editor of the Reporter-Telegram from 1946 to 1980, when he retired and was named editor emeritus.

Community leaders

Butler, Collyns receive lifetime memberships to Midland Chamber

Jno. P. Butler and W.H. "Bill" Collyns were presented with life memberships Oct. 3 at the Midland Chamber's annual meeting.

Outgoing chairman Kyle Womack thanked the two community leaders for a lifetime of service to Midland and the Permian Basin.

Butler has lived in Midland for 68 years; he arrived in the Tall City in 1927. He joined the First National Bank as a teller and advanced to cashier, vice-president, president and chairman before his retirement in 1991. He has been a member of the Midland Chamber for more than 60 years and served as president in 1947.

He served on the Midland City Council several years, including terms as mayor pro tem.

Butler has held leadership positions in the West Texas Chamber of Commerce, the Federal Reserve Bank's West Texas Division, the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, The Permian Basin Petroleum Pioneers and the Midland Downtown Lions Club.

Collyns moved to Midland 60 years ago. He served as manager of the Midland Chamber from 1936 until 1946, with the exception of two years out for military service during World War II.

Collyns became editor of the Reporter-Telegram in 1946. He retired in 1980, at which time he was named editor emeritus. He has served as president of the Midland Chamber, the West Texas Chamber and the Texas State Chamber of Commerce.

Collyns still serves on the Chamber's Transportation Committee and he has also been active in numerous organizations, including the United Way, Community and Senior Services, Presbyterian Homes, Crime Stoppers, Keep Midland Beautiful, the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, Junior Achievement, Red Cross, Leadership Midland and the Jaycees.

He is elder emeritus of the First Presbyterian Church and past president of the Midland Downtown Lions Club.

Collyns is chairman of the Hall of Fame committee for the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum.

W.H. "Bill" Collyns, left, & Jno. P. Butler, with outgoing chairman Kyle Womack, received lifetime Chamber memberships in October.

Waterford Signing Event Returns To Midland

To Celebrate Driscoll's Gifts, Inc.
34th Anniversary on November 16th

Driscolls Gifts, Inc. has been honored for several years as the only independent store in the Permian Basin to have a Waterford Signing event.

Dixie Otto, owner of Driscolls Gifts, Inc., announced that Walter Walsh will be in Midland for the Waterford signing

Walter was born in 1950, 'a stones throw' away from what is now the site of the Kibarry Plants. He was educated in Mount Sion Primary and Secondary school and on completion of his Intermediate Certificate left school to become an apprentice glass cutter.

Walter began working with Waterford Crystal in 1965. He served his first five years as an apprentice cutter and in 1975 he became a Master Cutter. He spent a further eleven years as Master Cutter and in 1986 he became a Department Supervisor, three years later he joined the Training and Development Department and is now Training Coordinator. In his role of training Coordinator he is repsonsible for training company wide and his work includes artisan training for overseas promotional events.

Since joining the Training Development Department, Walter has gained extensive knowledge of all the different production processes. Walter has successfully completed course in Training and Development, SupervisoryManagement and Personnel Practice.

Walter's interests include tennis, gardening, and reading. He resides with his wife. Nellie, his daughters Erika, Leona and son Jody.

Ranchland Apartments are off beaten path

By Mary Frances Beverley

"There's no place like home." Shelby Concotelli, manager of the Ranchland Apartments, said that is how she wants residents to feel in this quiet apartment-home community at 1212 E. Wadley Ave.

"Our apartments have a down-home atmosphere. We're not exactly in the country, but we're off the beaten path and the noise of the city. Our residents enjoy the peaceful surroundings here."

Located next to Ranchland Hills Country Club and across from Christensen Stadium and Hogan Park, the Ranchland Apartments provide easy access to a multitude of Midland services and businesses. They include both fast food and fine dining restaurants, Claydesta Bank, Midland College, Cole Theatre, Air Park, ClayDesta Station post office, the Woman's Club, Sibley Environmental Learning Center and Nature Trail, Alldredge Gardens, The Midlander Physical Fitness Center, the Hogan Park Golf Course, softball field and driving range, specialty shops on Big Spring Street, as well as a quick route to the downtown business district and Loop 250.

The apartments are located in the school districts of Abell Junior High-School, Lee Freshman School and Lee High School.

Exclusive with Ranchland are the fully furnished executive suites, available from a month to a year. These are especially convenient for anyone who has come to Midland from out of town to look for a new house or for other temporary residents, such as field trainees for oil companies and nurses in training. Out-of-state families with a family member in one of Midland's hospitals enjoy the relaxed atmosphere of the apartment-homes. The Midland Angels lived at Ranchland during the 1995 season.

Eighty-seven of the 204 garden-style apartment homes are being refurbished with new carpet, tile, wallpaper, sinks, washers and dryers. The upstairs units have vaulted ceilings and ceiling fans. Each bath has a linen closet, and the kitchen has a separate pantry. All of the units have reverse osmosis water systems and cable TV.

In the near future, the community will have a playground, extensive landscaping — including trees — an updated club room, a renovated pool and jacuzzi area, new paint and fencing.

"We use Permian Basin contractors and businesses for almost all of our furnishings and maintenance: cleaning chemicals, pool cleaning, miniblinds, carpet and paint," Ms. Concotelli said.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Ranchland Apartments residents enjoy peaceful surroundings, manager Shelby Concotelli said.

Ms. Concotelli, senior property manager, is a native Texan and has 15 years experience in multi-family management. Both The Lakes Apartments on the loop and Ranchland are managed by the Bonner Group, Inc. "Being locally managed gives us better insight into the needs and wants of apartment living," she said.

The one and two-bedroom apartment-homes can be seen Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m.-5:50 p.m. and on Saturdays from 10 a.m.-4 p.m.

For further information. call 687-1438.

The Lakes' residents live in serene setting

By Mary Frances Beverley

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

The Lakes Apartments has a pond where water lilies bloom pink and yellow in the summer.

A serene setting embraces residents of The Lakes Apartments. Tall, graceful willow trees and Pampas grass surround the swimming pool, jacuzzi, and adjoining pond where water lilies bloom pink and yellow in the summer. Flower beds are filled with color throughout the year.

On most days, splashing fountains are the only sound heard in the interior of the apartment-home complex, loçated on N. Loop 250 W., just west of Andrews Highway.

Midland's clean air and clear skies invite relaxation here. House Park and a quiet residential area stand at the back of the complex. "We are proud of our harmonious neighborhood atmosphere," manager Cary Story said.

The Lakes is home to many families; some residents work in Odessa but prefer to live in Midland. Children and small pets are welcome. The complex is located in the school districts for Anson Jones Elementary and Alamo Junior High, Lee Freshman School, and Lee High School.

One of The Lakes' most appealing features is its accessibility to businesses such as Sam's and Builders Square. Two Albertson's stores are an easy drive from the apartments. Memorial Rehabilitation Hospital and HealthSouth Rehabilitation Hospital are only a short distance away. Midland International Airport, Business 80 and Interstate 20 can be reached within minutes.

During ongoing Loop 250 construction, an easy route to The Lakes is the back way: west on Cuthbert Avenue, left on Bentwood Drive and right on Ric Drive. The apartments are visible from this location.

Many of the apartments have balconies overlooking the pond. The bright interiors of the one- and two-bedroom units include garden windows for plants and high, vaulted ceilings in the upstairs living rooms. Each downstairs apartment has a separate, enclosed patio and outside gate. Ceiling fans and generous closet space are two more amenities residents enjoy. The kitchen has a separate pantry. Each bath has a linen closet, and tubs have enclosure doors. Washers and dryers and reverse osmosis water systems provide unique conveniences in each apartment. Free cable TV is also provided.

More landscaping and extensive painting are part of the ongoing plans for The Lakes. There is a club room, which is available to small, local groups for a fee.

Ms. Story shows the apartments Monday-Friday from 8:30 a.m.-5:30 p.m. and Saturdays 10 a.m.-4 p.m. Ms. Story has 11 years' experience in apartment management and takes a personal interest in the comfort and satisfaction of the residents.

For more information. call Ms. Story at 689-9865.

Chamber's board of directors

The Chamber welcomes nine new members to its board of directors.

Vicki Bailey DeShaw

DeShaw

Vicki Bailey DeShaw has been general manager of Julian Gold Inc. for the past six years. She has 25 years total experience in the retail field.

She serves on the Salvation Army Board of Advisors and is an American College of Sports Medicine Certified Director.

Ms. DeShaw earned a bachelor's degree from North Texas State University. She's married to Steve DeShaw and has lived in Midland all of her life.

She's a fitness buff and teaches exercise classes. She also holds a private pilot's license and has performed in legitimate theater.

K. Michael Conaway, CPA

Conaway

K. Michael Conaway has 23 years experience in the accounting field. He serves as Chamber treasurer.

He's been self-employed since 1992. He's a member of the Texas Society of CPAs, AICPA and holds a bachelor's from East Texas State University.

Conaway and his wife have four children. He has lived in Midland for 16 years. His outside interests are truly "outside" — golf and fly fishing.

John Foster

Foster

John Foster is general manager of NewsWest 9, KWES-TV. He also worked with KMID-TV for 32 years.

Foster was born in Bridgeport, Conn., but grew up in San Antonio and the Rio Grande Valley, where he began his broadcasting career.

He serves on the board of the Private Industry Council and the UTPB Development Board. Foster has previous service on both the Odessa Chamber and Midland Chamber boards of directors.

Foster is single and has one son, whom he lost last year.

"Auto racing is my love," said Foster, who drives late-model stock cars in highly competitive TIDA circuit. His racing ambitions once led him to purchase a race track, which he has since sold.

Victor V. Hardy

Victor Hardy has been a Midland resident since 1985 and is general manager of Plaza Inn.

He also has 13 years in management with J.C. Penney Co. and 25 years in management with Beall's Department Stores. He also spent four years as owner of The Fashion Touch, a women's clothing store in Beaumont.

Hardy

He and his wife, Nancy, have been married for 43 years; they have one son and two grandsons.

Hardy is a graduate of McAllen High School and attended East Texas Baptist College in Marshall.

He's a member of First Baptist Church, a board member of the Texas Hotel & Motel Association and vice president of the Midland Hotel & Motel Association.

Hardy is a veteran of the Korean War.

Jack D. Hightower

Hightower

Jack Hightower was born and raised in Midland. He graduated from Texas Tech University with a bachelor's in administrative finance and bachelor's in money, banking and investments.

He and his wife, Robin, have two children, Amber, a senior at Midland High School and Haley, an eighth-grader at San Jacinto Junior High School.

Hightower is the president, CEO and chairman of the board of Titan Resources, L.P., a newly formed oil and gas company that opened its doors on April 1. He is also active in the real estate market; he is the owner of the Fasken Center Towers downtown.

Hightower's favorite hobbies include riding cutting horses, playing golf and skiing.

Mike Munnerlyn

Munnerlyn

Mike Munnerlyn is CEO at HealthSouth Rehabiliation Hospital of Midland/Odessa.

He worked as CEO/administrator for The Rehabilitation Hospital of Austin, Abbeville General Hospital in Abbeville, La., Mid-America Hospitals Inc. in Houston, Hermann Hospital System in Port Lavaca and Houston.

Mike is married and has one son.

He enjoys fishing, hunting, golf, landscaping and family activities.

Donna Northcutt

Donna Northcutt is CEO of Composite Design Network Inc. and has spent 30 years in the work force.

She and husband, Dewey, moved their company from California to Midland in 1994, but Mrs. Northcutt is no stranger to the Tall City. She graduated from Midland High in 1964 and worked 18 years for independent oil companies in the Tall City. She worked three years for an experimental aircraft company in California.

Northcutt

She served three years as a volunteer for the United Way in California.

Mrs. Northcutt attended Ventura College in Ventura, Calif.

She has five children and four grandchildren.

Mrs. Northcutt enjoys family activities, watching athletics, reading, traveling and watching Midland grow.

Terry Phillips

Terry Phillips is known as one of the top salespeople in the Permian Basin. He has spent the last 25 years in sales, marketing and upper management for firms ranging from computers, to office equipment to health and fitness.

Phillips

His expertise has been very valuable to the Chamber. In the volunteer membership sales committee — the President's Club — Phillips has earned Top Achiever of the Month a record 14 times. He was named Top Achiever of the Year for the 1993-94 fiscal year. He has been a strong supporter of the annual membership drive and served as co-chairman of the Membership Services committee. He will serve in 1995-96 as vice president of Membership/Communications.

Phillips has also been active in the Rotary Club, Lions and Ambucs. He also volunteers for several law-enforcement agencies in Mid'.and.

He is a graduate of Big Spring High School.

Phillips and his wife, Susan, have three children. He enjoys hunting, fishing, camping and spending time with his children.

Tony Valadez

Valadez

Tony Valadez is president/general manager of Permian Distributing Co., for which he's worked for 10 years. He has 20 years experience in the beverage distributing industry.

He serves as a director for the Midland Hispanic Chamber and is on several advisory councils, including those of Coors Brewing Co., Seagraves Beverage Co. and the UTPB School of Business.

Valadez holds a bachelor's degree in Business Administration from St. Edwards University in Austin.

He is married and has five children, three at U.T. - Austin and two at Lee High School.

Valadez enjoys supporting his children's interests and playing racquetball.

Thomas

The Midland Chamber of Commerce has named Mark Thomas as manager of its economic development department.

He replaces Tom Stinson, who has taken a similar position in Conroe.

"The Chamber continues to work toward diversifying the local economy, while maintaining the quality of life that makes Midland an attractive community in which to reside and to raise a family," said Thomas, who has worked for the Chamber's economic development department since April 1991.

Chamber President/CEO Marvin Wynn said that Thomas has been "a very integral part of the Chamber's economic development efforts for the past 4 years. He has good rapport with local businesses and an ideal background in marketing.

"He was a logical choice. We were fortunate to already have Mark on board, playing an important role in our ongoing efforts to enhance the local economy. We believe Mark's new role as manager of the economic development department will strengthen our overall efforts."

Midland Chamber Chairman of the Board Larry Holden said, "The Midland Chamber's economic development efforts are two-fold. First we work to retain and expand the existing local job base. Secondly, we recruit new industry to Midland. The overall goal is to bring new capital into the economy, making the 'economic pie' bigger, which creates jobs and helps all businesses.

"We accomplish this through a 50-50 partnership. About half our funding is through city contracts. The other half comes from private industry commitments through Forward Midland."

Before joining the Chamber, Thomas had experience in purchasing for an oil and gas exploration company and in consumer product sales and marketing.

He and his wife Kelly have three children, Justin, Miranda and Catherine.

He is a graduate of the University of North Texas with a business degree in industrial marketing.

Thomas is a member of the Texas Economic Development Council and serves as chairman of the group's communications committee. He is a graduate of the Basic Economic Development Program through Texas A&M University and a graduate of the Economic Development Institute through the University of Oklahoma and the University of Indiana. He is a member of the American Economic Development Council.

Meet the Chamber staff

Jane Inskeep:

Membership, advertising sales representative

Inskeep

Each month the Midland Chamber Business Journal will introduce you to a Chamber staff member. Your Chamber staff is ready and willing to help you. Contact the Chamber at 683-3381.

Jane Inskeep is the Chamber's Membership and Advertising Sales representative. She joined the Chamber July 20, 1980, making her the staffer with the most tenure.

Mrs. Inskeep is nearly a native Midlander; she moved from "Lonesome Dove" Knox County to Midland at age 5. She claims to have raised many of Midland's business people — when she was an elevator operator at the Petroleum Building.

Mrs. Inskeep and her husband J.D. have been married since 1955. They are proud of their sons, Dale, Teddy, Gary and Joe, and eight grandchildren. The family is deeply involved in horses and all things cowboy.

On Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday nights, the lights are usually blazing at the Inskeep Roping Arena.

Meet Jane Inskeep ...

■ The best thing about working at Chamber is "meeting new people and keeping in contact with friends."

■ The biggest challenge about working at the Chamber is "keeping membership up, with all the ups and downs in the area."

■ The funniest thing that's happened while working at the Chamber is: "It wasn't funny at the time, but now I find it funny. A new CEO was hired. He and his wife came to Midland to find a new house, and then he came to work. But he stayed only four days. He left at night and called back to say he didn't want the job. The annual report was already printed with his picture in it, so we had 'him' around for a year, anyway."

■ "My favorite way to relax: watch my boys perform in anything — roping, boxing, football, etc."

■ "My perfect vacation would be to watch my sons rope in the World Championship in Las Vegas."

■ "People would be surprised to know this about me: I was the Texas/New Mexico barrel racing champion two years in a row, many years ago."

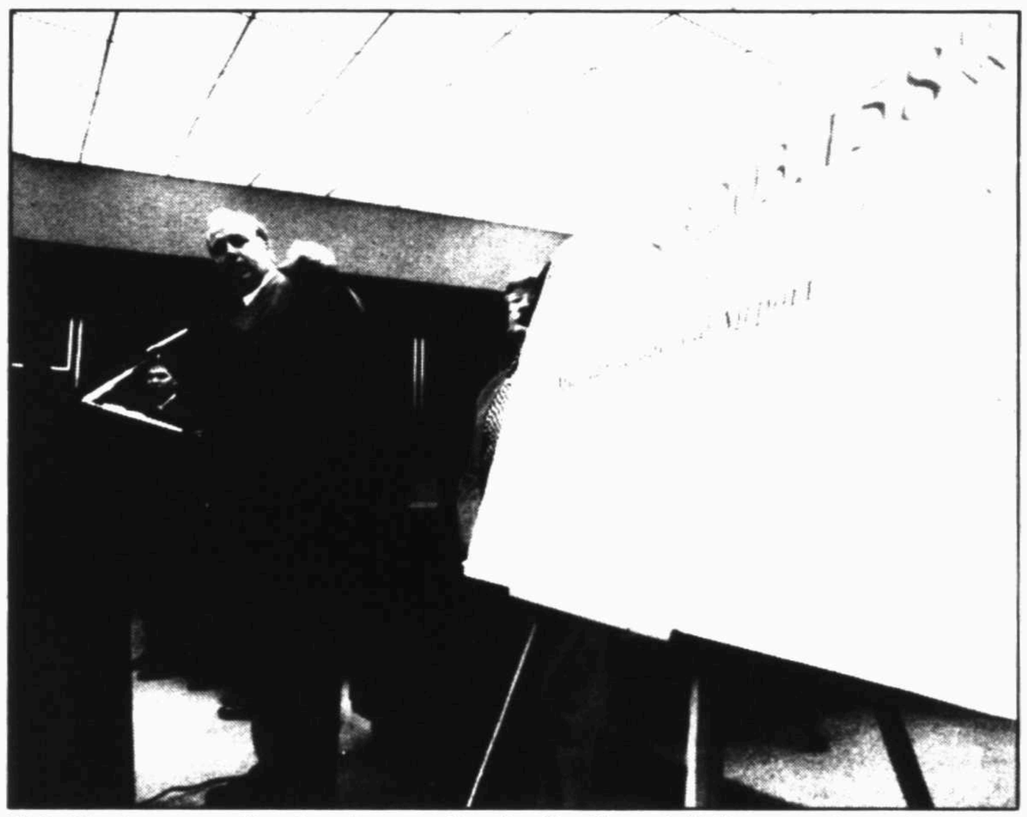
■ "My biggest strength is my faith in God."

■ "I'm happiest when my family works and pulls together."

■ "Other places I've lived are Kermit, Texas."

■ "Other jobs I've held are sales manager for the Winkler County News in Kermit, for 13 years."

■ "My biggest accomplishment is working at only two jobs in my life



Bob Montgomery, director of properties for Southwest Airlines, gestures towards a "check" representing the $3.2 million dedicated by the Federal Aviation Administration toward construction of a new air terminal at Midland International Airport. Montgomery said Southwest endorses the new project, which will be constructed using local airport revenues and Passenger Facility Charges. No property or sales-tax funds will be used on construction.

Chamber names Carole Hobbs as its Volunteer of the Month

Hobbs

Each month the Chamber will spotlight a person whose volunteer efforts for the Midland Chamber are exemplary.

Carole Hobbs is the Chamber's volunteer of the month for November.

Mrs. Hobbs has served on the Midland Center Advisory Board since its inception in 1980, making her the longest-serving member of that board. She was honored by the Arts Assembly of Midland as the Midland Center Volunteer of the Year for 1994-95.

She and her geologist husband, Robert, have lived in Midland since 1958. Her volunteerism has benefitted many organizations, including First Presbyterian Church, Midland Association of Churches, Church Women United, Presbyterian Historical Society of the Southwest and the Memorial Hospital Auxiliary.

The hospital auxiliary awarded her life membership in 1977, as did the Women of the Church in 1978. She was Altrusa Club Community Service Woman of the Year in 1987.

In 1982, as president of the Presbyterian Corporate Ministry, she helped lead the effort to establish a clinic for sick children of low-income families.

When asked why she volunteered so many hours, she said "I just feel this is what I owe to the community. Midland has been such a warm giving community, I feel I should do my part. We've lived in other areas, but we have been so impressed with Midland and are so glad we stayed here."

Angels' manager Hoppel is honored as Texas League Executive of the Year

For the second time in five seasons, Midland Angels General Manager Monty Hoppel has been named the Texas League Executive of the Year.

Hoppel, who also won the award in 1991, was selected by the Texas League Board of Directors.

The 1995 season saw the Midland franchise reach a major milestone, as the club drew more than 200,000 fans to Christensen Stadium, an attendance figure once considered unreachable in the Permian Basin, the smallest in all of Double-A baseball.

Texas League President Tom Kayser said that drawing 200,000 fans in a market this size is a real testament to Hoppel. Kayser said the recognition was well deserved and it honored not only Hoppel but also the fine staff he has put together.

Since Hoppel's arrival in 1990, the Angels have engineered a remarkable track record. In addition to the two league Executive of the Year awards, the franchise has twice been named the Texas League Organization of the Year, most recently in 1994.

The Angels attendance of 202,830 was up by more than 6,000 over 1993's 196,464, the previous record.

The 1995 per-game average of 3,073 was also an all-time franchise high.

The Midland Chamber salutes the Angels, General Manager Monty Hoppel and the loyal Angels fans.

Ratite ranchers Glen Lane, center, and Juanita Seales, right, explain to the Chamber's Linda Brown the future of the emu industry. After a successful state convention in Odessa in October, the producers of this exotic large bird are anxious to develop their latest product — emu oil, which some say is of help in the treatment of arthritis and rheumatism.

Bergen is named Top Achiever of the Year

Bergen

Achievement is the common theme in the Midland Chamber's President's Club.

During the Chamber annual meeting in October, Top Achiever of the Year Debbie Bergen was presented with two tickets from Southwest Airline's Matt Scott. Ms. Bergen helped retain and sell 90 Chamber memberships for the 1994-95 fiscal year.

Ms. Bergen is marketing manager for The CashBack Card program. She also took top honors as the Top Achiever of the Month for September.

The Top Ten Achievers of the Year also included Shelby Concotelli of Ranchland Apartments, Grace Graham of Grace Graham Advertising, Tami Wade of Featherlite, Sara St. Clair of TU Electric, Terry Phillips of the Midlander, Connie Baird of Midland American Bank, Kathy Churchill of Farmer's Insurance, Bill Moler of A-1 Office Service and Joyce Reaves of TravelHost Magazine.

The President's Club is the Midland Chamber's volunteer committee for membership recruitment and retention.

Each month volunteers meet to discuss their efforts to invite businesses to be a part of Midland's oldest continuously active business organization.

Midland businesses that join the Chamber receive a free ad — valued at $195 — in this publication, the Midland Chamber Business Journal.

For more information about the President's Club or Chamber membership, call Jane Inskeep at the Chamber, 683-3381.

The Midland Chamber Convention and Visitors Bureau held their Local Sales Blitz Luncheon at the Plaza Club on Sept. 27. The theme of the luncheon was "Bring it Home to Midland." Hotels, motels and attractions exhibited information about their facilities. At the luncheon were members of local associations interested in discovering the ABCs of bidding and booking a convention. Businesses that would like to schedule a convention in Midland should call Anita Rogers at 683-3381. Pam Six, left, and JamiOwen entertained at the luncheon.

Midland racing legend continues his quest

By Bruce Partain

Ever since 1954, when he borrowed his brother's Austin Healey and raced in Fort Sumner, N.M., James Ellis Hall has been building for speed, not comfort.

Hall and his associates at Hall Racing Inc., continue the quest to win from their race car design and manufacturing shop in Midland.

Over the years, he progressed from driver to designer to team owner.

Since 1978, the lanky Texan has concentrated on Indy cars. With Al Unser at the wheel, Hall became the first and only team owner ever to win the Triple Crown of Indy car 500-milers — Indy, Pocono & Ontario.

In 1980, Johnny Rutherford drove Hall's car to wins at Ontario, Indianapolis and other races.

Hall retired from racing in 1982.

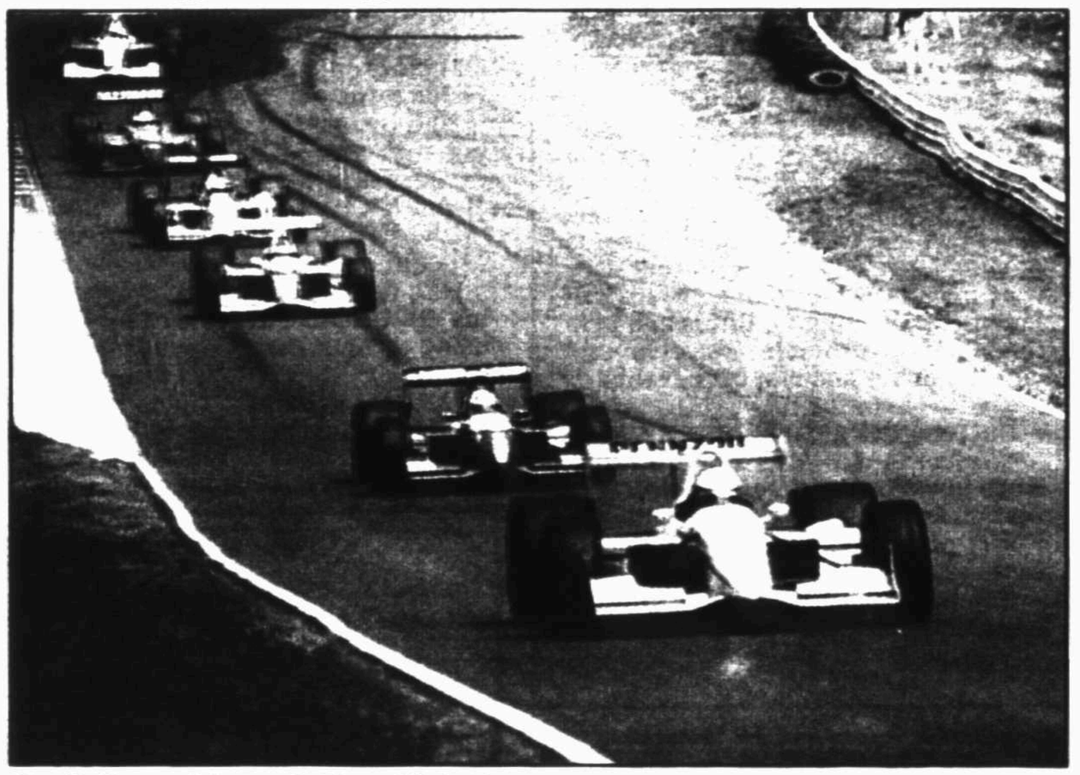
But in 1991, Pennzoil coaxed him back to the asphalt track. He teamed up with Franz Weis for three seasons, running as the Hall/VDS team, and winning right from the start in Australia.

In 1993 the two friends agreed to split, and Hall Racing Inc. went solo.

The just-completed season has been the best since Hall returned to racing. Driver Gil de Ferran won the final Indy car race of the season at Monterey, Calif. The Brazilian-born racer also won rookie of the year honors.

Hall is still looking for better results.

Although the Mercedes-Benz engines in Hall's cars have performed well, he's switching to Honda motors for the 1996 season.



Jim Hall, top right, and driver Gil de Ferran, pose with one of their cars. Hall will soon begin another year on the Indy circuit.

Perfection in 28 minutes

Hall has reason to be confident about his team, especially after witnessing the magic on-site rebuild of the team's racing car at Vancouver in September.

"We crashed into the wall on the first lap, after making contact with Al Unser Jr.," Hall said.

"The suspension was damaged. Normally, the race would have continued and we would have been too far behind to compete, but the rules require a re-start if the red flag comes out in the first two laps."

Team manager Gerald Davis and his pit crew flew into action.

"We had 40 minutes to get our backup car ready to race," Hall said. "We found out, however, we did not arrive with two identical cars. We had different gear boxes, so we swapped that out.

"We also swapped the aerodynamics — the nose wing and rear wing. We exchanged the shocks, the steering wheel assembly and the driver's seat. All this was done in 28 minutes, including refueling.

"The amazing thing is not that the crew could do this, but that even with the time pressure, they made no mistakes. Gil said he could not tell any difference in the two cars."

De Ferran worked his way from eighth to fifth, dropped off to 18th after the first pit stop, then picked off drivers one by one on his way to a second place finish and a $60,000 prize.

Fast cars mean big business

Despite their national and international travel, Hall Racing Inc., makes a significant economic impact in Midland.

Employing 20 skilled workers in Midland, Hall signs about $850,000 in paychecks a year.

Team manager Gerald Davis said the company buys locally.

"We probably spend about $700,000 per year locally, mostly on raw materials, since we manufacture our own pit equipment and suspension components," Davis said. "We buy metal tubing, carbon fiber, paint and other raw materials. We also pack our truck with consumables before we hit the road, mostly to save time when we arrive, but also because we like to support the community."
