DPS alters handgun training

Instructors must ensure students understand missed exam questions

■ Texans could have obtained pistol license while lacking basic understanding of either where weapon could be carried or when it could legally be used, critics say.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — A potential flaw in Texas' concealed handgun training process has been corrected.

Instructors now are being advised to ensure students understand the correct answers to questions they miss on their final exams, the Department of Public Safety announced recently.

Because of the way the written test is structured, a Texan could have obtained a pistol license while lacking a basic understanding of either where the weapon could be carried or when it could legally be used, critics said.

The law requires 10-15 hours of classroom training culminating in a written exam testing the student's knowledge on laws relating to weapons and deadly force; handgun use, proficiency and safety; and proper storage practices for handguns with an emphasis on eliminating accidental injuries to children.

A student has three chances to score at least 70 percent on a test containing 50 multiple-choice and true-false questions.

Because only 16 questions touch on the laws governing the use of lethal force and 16 questions deal with specifics of the gun licensing law, the student could miss 15 key points of one area and still be certified.

The DPS, which devised the test under legislative mandate, said more than 1,500 instructors already trained would receive a newsletter advising them to review missed questions with students.

"We're telling them to review the questions one by one in every single category," said Cmdr. Albert Rodriguez of the DPS Training Academy.

Instructors now in training are being taught the technique in their 40-hour qualification course, he said.

State Sen. Jerry Patterson, R-Pasadena, who wrote the handgun bill, called the post-test review "a tremendous idea."

"I'd rather have them 100 percent sure of 50 points of information than kind of shaky on 200 points of information," Patterson said.

Sibley center becomes birthday hot spot

More and more, youngsters forego commercial pizza, game-center parties for adventure in nature.

The birthday boy had a millipede wiggle around his ear, a tarantula crawl up his arm and a snake slither in his hands. The party of more than a dozen children then went outside and scurried down mesquite-lined trails to a pond for a frog-catching expedition.

"I like the part where you put the stink bug on your nose and you get to hold all those things," replied Nicholas Neinast on why he wanted his 7th birthday party at the Sibley Learning Center.

Beginning about three years ago, with a notable increase about six months ago, some youngsters have foregone commercial pizza and game-center parties for an adventure at the nature study site.

GOP faces key test this week over legislation to reduce taxes

WASHINGTON (NYT)— Congress returns Tuesday to plunge into a final and potentially decisive struggle with the White House for control of the national fiscal destiny, led by a test of Republican muscle on a central issue: tax cuts.

That test comes this week in the Senate Finance Committee, which just the week before last approved a contentious plan to reduce projected Medicare spending by $270 billion over seven years.

Now, it is scheduled to take up a Republican proposal to cut taxes by $245 billion over the same period as part of a sweeping bill that covers health, welfare and other spending totaling a third of the entire federal budget.

'They may call it a tax cut, but if you are a working American it will feel like a tax increase to you.'

— President Clinton

In his radio speech Saturday, President Clinton called on Congress to defeat the Republican measures saying: "They may call it a tax cut, but if you are a working American it will feel like a tax increase to you."

The tax cut will die without the votes of all 11 Republicans on the panel; the Finance Committee's nine Democrats are united against it. This weekend at least one of the Republicans, Sen. Frank Murkowski of Alaska, indicated he was still undecided.

In an interview, Murkowski said he would propose this week that much of the money now earmarked for a tax cut be used instead to start paying down the national debt, which stands at $4.9 trillion. The money Murkowski proposed to tap, about $170 billion of the $245 billion, is a so-called dividend that some experts say the economy would generate from the healthy effects of balancing the annual federal budget.

The Republicans in the Senate have always said that dividend should be set aside to help pay for a tax cut.

"I happen to think that when you're packing a deficit of $165 billion a year and an accumulated debt of $4.9 trillion and you're paying about 14 percent of your budget for interest on the debt, that you'd better do something about it," he said. "Fiscally responsible economics dictates that you put this economic dividend

Officials hope to attract interstate travelers to city with face-lift of I-20

By Melia McEwen
Staff Writer

City officials looking to develop the tourism industry would like to draw travelers off Interstate 20 and the service roads and into Midland.

More than 11,500 vehicles whiz down I-20 during any 24-hour period and another 5,500 to 6,500 drive down the service roads, according to state and city statistics.

To attract some of those travelers, work has begun on the interstate, which city officials have called underdeveloped, especially in light of the surge in development along Loop 250.

Those efforts are beginning to bear fruit with last month's opening of a new McDonald's restaurant. The restaurant, owned by Midlanders Gerald and Donna Kubicki, is at 2307 Rankin Highway. It's just north of Interstate 20, next to a Sonic Drive-In, south of a Family Dollar store and across from a Fiesta Foods grocery store.

Dutch question U.N. troop's actions

AMSTERDAM (NYT) — On the afternoon of July 11, as Bosnian Serb units were tightening their noose around the Muslim town of Srebrenica, the Bosnian Serb commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic, decided to teach Dutch peacekeepers there a lesson in his form of warfare.

Mladic summoned the Dutch commander and several of his officers to a hotel outside of town, and ushered them into a room where a live pig was tied up. As they watched, a Bosnian Serb soldier slit the pig's throat, sending blood gushing onto the floor.

"Mladic told them that was how he would treat people like those protected by the Dutch peacekeepers," said Bert Kreemers, a spokesman for the Dutch Defense Ministry, in recalling the incident. "He said he was going to do the evacuation his way."

A few hours later, Bosnian Serbs marched into Srebrenica and captured it without firing a shot, defying a U.N. order that the town remain a demilitarized "safe area." There was little the 450 lightly armed Dutch peacekeepers could do to stop them.

Many people in the Netherlands, however, believe that the peacekeepers could have done more to prevent the expulsions, rapes and killings that witnesses and human rights workers say followed the takeover. Their failure to do so has stung the national conscience.

Critics say the Bosnian Serb record in treating Muslim civilians, as well as explicit warnings like the pig butchering, should have led Dutch peacekeepers to suspect the worst as Bosnian Serb soldiers began separating military-age men from the rest of the population and shipping them off in trucks and buses.

Instead, even as peacekeepers saw the bodies of freshly killed Muslims in Srebrenica, they raised no alarm.

Dutch politicians are wondering aloud if a tougher Dutch line might have saved civilian lives in Srebrenica. They have suggested that Dutch officers, anxious to avoid casualties in their ranks, allowed honor to give way to expedience by minimizing or overlooking the atrocities being committed around them.

"There is a widespread sense of national shame over the Srebrenica episode," said Fred van Staden, director of the Netherlands Institute of International Relations and a senior adviser to the Defense and Foreign Affairs Ministries. "We always think of ourselves as being very humanitarian and good, but the complete failure of our mission in Yugoslavia shows that there is a clash and a cleavage between our self-image and our actions."

Public anger over the failure of Dutch soldiers to protect civilians in Srebrenica was increased by a series of statements from Dutch commanders in the days after the Bosnian Serb takeover.

On July 17, as Dutch peacekeepers were preparing to leave Srebrenica, one of their senior officers, Maj. Robert Franken, signed an agreement with Bosnian Serbs certifying that "the evacuation was carried out by the Serb side correctly."

Later that week, as the peacekeepers were arriving in Zagreb, Croatia, the commander of Dutch ground forces, Lt. Gen. Hans Couzy, who had flown from Amsterdam to meet them, said he knew of no evidence suggesting that Bosnian Serbs in Srebrenica had committed crimes akin to genocide.

At a news conference the next day in Zagreb, Lt. Col. Ton Karremans, who had commanded the Dutch battalion in Srebrenica, asserted that the Bosnian Serbs' "militarily correct operation" had been carried out "in the right way." Before leaving Srebrenica, Karremans was photographed, glass in hand, with Mladic.

These statements sparked heated debate in the Dutch Parliament, and in August the Defense Ministry opened an official inquiry into events surrounding the fall of Srebrenica. A report is expected later this month, and senior Defense Ministry officials as well as officers who served in Srebrenica are refusing to comment publicly until then.

Few others are so reluctant. Dutch newspapers have been filled with commentaries and letters about the Srebrenica debacle, many conveying anger. Some critics are questioning not only the conduct of the Dutch battalion in Srebrenica, but also the relevance of the Netherlands' traditionally peaceful, consensus-oriented approach to world affairs.

"Srebrenica was a turning point," said a senior Dutch diplomat who deals with Balkans policy. "We are starting to realize that we are no longer the kind of robust society that can deal with tyrants and criminals. We don't back up our diplomacy with a big stick. That is an approach that can have tragic results, as it did in Srebrenica."

In the hours after the Bosnian Serb takeover of Srebrenica on the night of July 11 and the early morning of July 12, an estimated 25,000 residents fled from the town to what they hoped would be safe refuge in and around the Dutch headquarters in nearby Potocari.

Dutch peacekeepers, however, allowed Bosnian Serb soldiers to enter the area, separate men of military age from other residents and send some of them away on trucks and buses unaccompanied by foreign observers. Many have not been heard from since.

Dutch peacekeepers also saw Muslims being taken into a warehouse, and later reported having found bodies there. Other peacekeepers reported seeing Bosnian Serb soldiers interrogating Muslims at the Nova Kasaba football field near Potocari, a site that U.S. officials believe was later used as a mass grave.

Tadeusz Mazowiecki, who quit his post as the chief U.N. human rights monitor in the former Yugoslavia on July 24 to protest the U.N. failure to protect civilians in Srebrenica, urged in his final report that an international investigation of the conduct of Dutch peacekeepers be opened. No such investigation is under way, but several Dutch politicians are determined to pursue the matter.

"I question whether a stronger or more emphatic approach to Mr. Mladic could have avoided what happened," said Jan Hoekema, a former Dutch diplomat who is now a member of Parliament. "I question whether, if we had insisted that no refugees be allowed to leave Potocari before Red Cross or U.N. relief workers arrived, that would have made a difference. It's extremely difficult to prove, but I believe it would."

The fact that the Netherlands is in the midst of a painful reassessment of the role of Dutch collaborators during the Nazi occupation, and that the country is also facing unpleasant aspects of its war against Indonesian guerrillas in the late 1940s, has made the pain of Srebrenica even more acute, Hoekema said.

"There is a very intense linkup of various historical events," Hoekema said. "We always thought, and some still think, that Holland is a white angel in a dark world. Now we are wondering if we really are always heroes. Psychologists and sociologists have not begun to comment on this yet, but I believe they will."

Kreemers, the Defense Ministry spokesman, defended the performance of Dutch peacekeepers.

Defense minister calls for war on Chechen rebels

GROZNY, Russia (AP) — Defense Minister Pavel Grachev called Saturday for an end to peace talks in Chechnya and all-out war against rebels in the breakaway republic's capital, the ITAR-Tass news agency said.

"The bandits must be destroyed," Grachev said after arriving in Geneva, where he is to meet with U.S.. Secretary of Defense William Perry on Sunday.

He spoke a day after a remote-controlled bomb gravely wounded Lt. Gen. Anatoly Romanov, Russia's top commander in Chechnya.

Long a critic of negotiations, Grachev said Russia should "stop the talks and take any measures to wipe out the gangs that have infiltrated Grozny," the Chechen capital.

In Grozny, tensions cranked up another notch Saturday with two car bombs, an attack on headquarters for European mediators and another one on a hostel for Russian construction workers.

Four workers at the hostel were shot to death and several others were wounded. No one was injured by the car bombs or in the attack on the headquarters of the Organization for Security and Cooperation in Europe.

Reports said someone fired on OSCE headquarters with a rifle-mounted grenade launcher, hitting the roof.

"The situation is bad," said Pelen Olivier, deputy head of OSCE mission to Chechnya told Russian television.

A special medical plane was delivering Romanov, 47, to the top military hospital in Moscow.

The commander was suffering from severe head injuries and other wounds inflicted by a bomb that went off Friday in a Grozny underpass. The blast killed three people and wounded 10.

The OSCE is mediating the talks between Russia and Chechen rebels. Romanov was a key figure in the negotiations.

Chechen officials offered Saturday to help investigate the attack on Romanov and condemned it as a "blatant provocative act" aimed at wrecking the peace process.

Angered by the attack on Romanov, President Boris Yeltsin was considering stern new measures in Chechnya, including a state of emergency, his press secretary Sergei Medvedev said.

News agencies said Chechnya's Russian-appointed government objected to the state of emergency, as did rebel negotiators. Relations are already tense between Russian troops and residents of the devastated Chechen capital.

Yeltsin sent troops into Chechnya 10 months ago in a bid to end the southern republic's three years of self-declared independence. Tens of thousands of people have died in the war.

It was the second assassination attempt in three weeks against a senior Russian official in Chechnya.

An agreement last July that calls for Chechen disarmament and partial Russian withdrawal has foundered. In the latest round of daily clashes that have undermined the pact, two Russian soldiers died and 16 were wounded, the Russian military said Saturday.

News agencies also said a well-known Chechen field commander was killed Saturday when someone attacked his hideout with flame throwers and grenades.

Alaudi Khamzatov, 39, made headlines last month when he and his men took over the police station in the town of Argun.

Palestinians block border of Egypt and Libya

CAIRO, Egypt (AP) — More than 100 Palestinians expelled by Col. Moammar Gadhafi lay in the main road between Libya and Egypt on Saturday, closing the border to traffic and brawling with Egyptians trying to cross.

The 16-hour protest was the latest chapter in a monthlong ordeal for Palestinians who once lived in Libya but are now being forced by the hundreds to a wretched desert camp on the border.

Fistfights broke out when Egyptians tried to push their way through the blockade. Some Egyptians carrying luggage walked the last three miles to Libya, and hundreds of cars lined up on each side of the crossing, witness said.

The protest broke up Saturday evening and cross-border traffic resumed.

Egyptian security officials, speaking on condition of anonymity, suggested that the Libyan government had orchestrated the protest to keep attention on the Palestinians' plight.

Gadhafi began expelling Libya's 30,000 Palestinians in September to protest the Israel-PLO accord. He says the pact fails to provide for Palestinians who lost their homes when Israel was created in 1948.

Other Arab states and the Palestine Liberation Organization have condemned the deportations as a propaganda ploy.

Saturday's protest came shortly after Egyptian Foreign Minister Amr Moussa met Gadhafi in Libya to urge him to stop the expulsions. Moussa had already crossed back into Egypt by the time the demonstration began early Saturday.

"I expect positive developments concerning the Palestinians living in Libya," Moussa said. He added that Gadhafi showed a "complete understanding" of the Egyptian position.

Last month, Gadhafi reportedly stopped the expulsions after pressure from Arab leaders, but he resumed them last week.

Egypt had already sent one envoy to Libya to seek an end to the expulsions, but the dispatch of Moussa seemed to suggest Egypt wanted the issue resolved quickly. Egypt has refused to let Palestinians cross the border unless they have travel documents.

At the crossing, between 100 and 200 youths lay down across the border, hoisted a Palestinian flag and claimed the no man's land was Palestinian since neither country would grant them entry.

The young men carried no travel documents and said their families were still living in Tripoli, the Libyan capital. Palestinians on the border have suggested in recent days that Libya had sent young Palestinians to hold demonstrations.

Mid 80s in store for area today

Staff Report

Today's forecast is mostly sunny with a high of 85-90 and southwest winds 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight's forecast is fair with a low in the mid-50s, the NWS said.

Monday's forecast is partly sunny with a high in the low 80s.

After an overnight low of 47, Saturday's high reached 83, compared to the record high for that date of 99 set in 1979. The record low was 38 set in 1976.

STATE

Texans enjoyed another beautiful day Saturday marked by bright sunshine, cool breezes, sporadic cloud cover and no rain.

A ridge of high pressure extending over the state produced the clear, mild autumn day for north texas. In Waco, it was cooler Saturday morning that it had ever been on the date as the mercury dropped to 41, breaking a 4-year-old record by 1 degree.

Sometimes brisk winds up to 25 mph in the Panhandle was the only other element that might have made things uncomfortable Saturday as chambers of commerce across the state tried to bottle the conditions.

The plethora of sailboats on the state's lakes and coastal waters were propelled by 5 to 10 mph winds.

Temperatures dropped into the 40s and 50s statewide overnight and generally climbed into the high 70s and low 80s during the day. That pattern is expected to repeat itself today.

As winter slowly approaches, the Big Bend Valley still managed to be the state's hot spot, as usual, with temperatures in the low 90s.

NATION

Storms lingered Saturday over the Atlantic coast, the Great Lakes, Idaho and the northern Rockies.

Wilmington, N.C., picked up 1.69 inches of rain by midafternoon, and light snow fell in the Yellowstone area of Montana and Wyoming.

A cold front lay across the eastern Carolinas, southeastern Georgia and northern Florida and a weak cold front spread from Wyoming into Utah and Nevada. The cold front was likely to move off the Atlantic coast, taking all of its rain with it.

In Florida, the tail end of the front combining with tropical moisture from the Caribbean was expected to bring yet more storms. Some could be very strong, bringing heavy rain to the southern part of the state.

Low clouds and light rain were orecast from northeastern Colorado to the Dakotas, while a few snowflakes could fall in the highest elevations of the Rockies.

Light rain was expected in the Pacific Northwest.

Hundreds of miles off the Lesser Antilles, Tropical Storm Pablo slowed its westerly pace, but a tropical storm watch was issued for Martinique, Dominica, Guadeloupe, St. Martin, Saba and St. Eustatius in the Caribbean.

The nation's high at 4 p.m. EDT was 90, in St. Petersburg, Fla. The low was 19, in Gunnison and Alamosa, Colo., and Bryce Canyon, Utah.

TRAINING: Instructors get new guidelines for exams

(From 1A)

Lethal Force Institute in Concord, N.H., and a nationally known expert on firearms training for civilians and law enforcement personnel, hailed the change.

He said it is vital for students to know the law, for both safety and liability reasons.

"We (LFI) have them write 'D&U' for 'discussed and understood' and initial each question they miss," he said.

Edwin Lee, a Fort Worth lawyer and handgun instructor who was in the first DPS course in July, said he tests students after each unit and routinely reviews missed questions on the final.

"The only things at stake between a good class or a bad class are your life and jail," he said.

Training classes taught by DPS-certified instructors began Sept. 1. More than 1,500 instructors have been certified, Rodriguez said.

Students also must demonstrate proficiency with a handgun and pass a criminal background check. Permits will take effect Jan. 1.

The shooting test requires the student to score at least 70 percent on 50 rounds fired at a silhouette target from three, seven and 15 yards. The shooting is in several timed stages with the average time allowed for each shot ranging from two to three seconds.

To carry a revolver, licensees must qualify with a revolver of .38 caliber or greater. Qualifying with a semiautomatic pistol of 9mm or greater allows licensees to carry any handgun of any caliber.

TEST: Committee's Republicans must stand together

into reduction of our accumulated debt."

Murkowski said he was "obviously outnumbered" by his fellow Republicans and he predicted that some legislative package that includes a tax cut would work its way out of the committee and onto the Senate floor.

But if he holds fast, the Republicans could face a standoff, because another of their ranks on the panel, Sen. Phil Gramm of Texas, has vowed to oppose any seven-year tax cut below $245 billion.

The tax issue is but one headache in what promises to be a season of political migraines for the Republicans and their revolutionary budget-cutting proposal.

Despite Republican predictions that their spending plans will be complete before Thanksgiving, few experts expect the budget wars to end before the December holiday season, and some say they could spill into next year.

MANY SAY PART the government will grind to a standstill, halted by the lack of a legal budget or authority to borrow, before the fight ends.

The Democrats, who have mounted feeble opposition to the Republican plans so far, spent their one-week recess on a publicity blitz, charging repeatedly that Republicans are plundering Medicare to finance a vast shift of tax money to the rich.

Clinton on Saturday stepped up his criticism of the Republican tax package claiming it would add up to "$148 billion worth of direct and indirect hidden taxes which will hit working Americans hard.

"Most unbelievably of all, 17 million working families who seek to share in the American dream will have to pay $42 billion in income taxes through reductions in the Earned Income Tax Credits for working families."

Some Republicans acknowledged the week before last that the Democratic attacks were finally drawing blood, but said they knew that spending reductions in popular programs would not be met with wild enthusiasm.

"FRANKLY, WE EXPECTED it would be at this level a month ago," one Republican aide on the House Ways and Means Committee, the Senate Finance panel's counterpart, said.

Sen. Orrin Hatch of Utah, another Republican on the Finance Committee, said he believed the panel would produce a spending bill with the full $245 billion tax cut and that Clinton would veto it. But he predicted the two sides would eventually strike a deal.

"Deep down, he has pretty good instincts on this stuff," Hatch said of the president. But as long as Clinton and the Democrats "keep demagoguing the tax issue, Republicans are going to stick it to them, frankly," he added.

But a showdown with Clinton is at least weeks away. The Republicans' most immediate concern is to keep their narrow House and Senate majorities intact and push their budget through Congress.

And while the party has proved amazingly unified so far, some annoying splits developed in recent weeks and the biggest trials lie ahead.

The House and Senate have passed most of the 13 bills, totaling about half the budget, that will pay to run the federal bureaucracy and some programs in the fiscal year that began Oct. 1. But their versions often differ markedly, and so far lawmakers have approved three compromises and rejected three others.

THE HOUSE STUNNED its leaders late last month and voted down a compromise military spending bill when a cadre of populist Republicans, including some who wanted to cut weapons spending to reduce the deficit further, bolted to the Democratic column.

Some of the same deficit-cutters joined Democrats to defeat a compromise version of the Interior Department's budget, arguing that the bill gave mining companies mineral rights that should be sold at a huge profit.

Those bills were supposed to be relatively simple to enact. Far more serious differences split the Republican right and middle — as well as the Senate and House — over spending bills that cut social programs and environmental spending, finance anti-crime programs and pare spending on foreign affairs.

Congressional leaders hope to get the spending bills to Clinton's desk by Nov. 13, the day the government's temporary spending authority expires. Others believe that no more than eight or nine bills will be finished by then and that Congress and the White House will clash again, inevitably, over how to finance the government while they dicker.

The giant spending bill that will eventually contain a tax cut, dubbed the reconciliation package, is an even dicier proposition.

THE LEGISLATION, WHICH is primarily written by the Finance and the Ways and Means panels, authorizes spending for Medicaid and Medicare, welfare, trade, farm programs and a raft of other benefits and entitlements. Republicans want to cut or slow sharply the growth of most but they differ over how much and how.

The House and Senate, for example, are far apart on the outline of a crucial formula for distributing Medicaid money to the states. The Senate Agriculture Committee favors deep cuts in farm subsidies; the House has yet to agree on anything.

The House would deny welfare to unwed teen-age mothers and other recipients' newborns; the Senate would not. Both are torn over proposals to trim spending on student loans.

The House version, to be unveiled on Wednesday, should be easily shepherded to passage by Speaker Newt Gingrich and his aides. Not so, however, in the Senate, where nobody is allowed to amend the reconciliation package, but anyone can try to cripple it by moving to strike portions they do not like.

Democrats will move to strike scores of politically raw provisions dealing with taxes, Medicare reductions, abortion, welfare and farms, among others. Whether the Republican majority can hold its handful of moderates and resist those moves is debatable.

"WHAT COMES OUT of the Senate could look considerably different from what they originally have put before them, and that could make reaching a compromise with the House even more difficult," Robert Reischauer, a past director of the Congressional Budget Office who is now a scholar at the Brookings Institution, said in an interview.

"What they're doing is so complex, so fraught with political dangers that it will be very difficult for them to wrap everything up and have it on the president's desk by the middle of November.

"If they have a reconciliation bill, and I still think the word if is appropriate, it wouldn't reach the president's desk until Thanksgiving recess at the earliest."

At which point, everyone agrees, Clinton will veto it, and the negotiations will begin.

Such delays would not matter much: Medicare and other benefit programs would merely keep running at their current paces until the government's legal authority to borrow money — that is, to engage in deficit spending — is scheduled to run out Nov. 15. Unless it can rack up higher deficits, the government cannot pay its debts and will go into default.

GINGRICH HAS EXPRESSED a willingness to raise the debt ceiling during negotiations in Congress and, later, with the White House. But with each extension, it will become less certain that the right-wing populists in his party will fall into line.

"Once Congress has produced a bill and sent it to the president, and he has vetoed that bill, you would think you would have a season for compromise," Reischauer said. "But some of the participants here seem to be in no mood for compromise."

CENTER: More and more, children opt for nature parties

(From 1A)

Nicholas had recently attended a few such parties at the Sibley Learning Center, located adjacent to Hogan Park. "We asked him what he wanted to do for his birthday and he wanted to go back out there," his mother, Karen Neinast, said.

Birthday parties — for youngsters 6 to 10 years old — are hosted by Burr Williams, education director at the Sibley Learning Center. Williams regularly gives tours and talks to students from kindergarten to college.

The birthday parties generally include an up-close look at various creatures, coupled with a nature lesson done in story-telling fashion. The children can then take a hike on the 49-acre nature site to catch insects and go to the pond to catch frogs, tadpoles and/or minnows. Williams doesn't set a specific agenda but offers choices for the youngsters.

"It appeals to their sense of adventure, and in the city there's not much (adventure for youngsters) that won't get you into trouble," Williams said.

The entertainment is precipitated by Williams' enthusiasm. "That's one of the glories of my job. I get to have a lot of fun," he said.

At Nicholas' party, the children yell and squeal when Williams puts a bug on the birthday boy's nose, then brings out a millipede, a tarantula and three types of snakes. While he has the youngsters' attention, Williams quizzes and informs the children about the various creatures.

'It appeals to their sense of adventure, and in the city there's not much (adventure for youngsters) that won't get you into trouble.'

— Burr Williams, education director at the Sibley Learning Center

For example, Williams tells a story about how a millipede will crawl into the underground home of spider ants and eat food stored by the smaller insects. Despite their pantry being robbed, the ants don't mind, he explains.

Then one night, army ants — an enemy of spider ants — will invade the home, causing alarmed spider ants to run outside, Williams continues.

But the millipede comes to the rescue. "He saves the spider ants from the army ants. How does he do it?" Williams said.

The children scream out several answers before Williams explains that the scared millipede secretes an odorous poison from holes in its side — which it breathes through — causing the intruders to vacate the home.

After some more show-and-tell with other creatures, the youngsters head outside.

Once the group arrives at a nearby pond, Williams passes out hand nets.

"Dad, I caught one (a frog) but it jumped right out," yelled Nicholas.

Seven-year-old Tripp Lybrand — on his first experience trying to catch frogs — commented, "I seen some but every time I try to catch them they get away."

Meanwhile, Hartley Bettis, 5, showed that little girls can be just as enthusiastic as boys about the outdoors. "I caught something," she yelled proudly. "Some little tiny fish."

No one netted any frogs that day but everyone appeared to have fun. The children — a few with muddied sneakers — headed back to the Sibley Learning Center building for birthday cake.

Mrs. Neinast — who referred to the gathering as "the insect party" — added her own touch to the creepy, crawly theme. She passed out live crickets in clear-plastic vials and candy worms and plastic spiders stuffed in baggies.

It was a birthday party Nicholas won't forget. "He'll talk about this for a week," Mrs. Neinast said.

Meanwhile, Williams will continue to introduce and educate children to Mother Earth. For birthday parties, the center only asks for donations. Most contributions are around $35, although some people have been more generous, Williams said.

All donations go toward the operating costs of the Sibley Learning Center.

INTERSTATE: City officials work on I-20

(From 1A)

"The new restaurant has been meeting our projections," Kubicki said. "It has been well-received by local residents and comments from travelers have been along the lines of 'We're glad to see something on Interstate 20 for once.' "

He said interstate traffic is typically slow this time of year, but he expects it to improve once the holiday season — and the corresponding travel — arrives.

The restaurant was built after completion of a 36-inch sewer line, the first phase of a two-phase project expected to be completed next year. Kubicki said that since the sewer line problem has been dealt with, "I'm sure more development will come."

A Smokers Discount store is under construction a block north, and rumors have been circulating about a large hotel planned for I-20.

Midland Mayor Bobby Burns predicted that in the next year, possibly a half-dozen businesses could spring up along I-20.

"Businesses like Burger King and Wendy's, Kent Kwik, major gas stations, hotels are looking. Kmart and big grocery stores have looked at the area as well," he said.

Burns said development along I-20 could have a major effect on Midland's economy.

"Most traffic along I-20 bypasses Midland and attracting that traffic could have a big impact in terms of growth. That's a big potential market that's passing us by."

He said that while efforts to attract I-27 — the north-south interstate — are commendable, "It's almost sad that we haven't capitalized on Interstate 20 ... We need to take advantage of what we've got."

Bruce Partain, communications director for the Midland Chamber of Commerce, said, "We're fortunate to have an interstate highway running through our area and I don't think it was developed fully. It was originally designated a rural highway and all the entrances, exists and access points were designed for low traffic. We at the chamber are hoping the interstate can be upgraded, and we'll see more development."

To help spur development along the I-20 corridor, the Midland City Council hired Dallas consultant J.T. Dunkin of J.T. Dunkin & Associates to help formulate a plan, according to Becky Hamm, a planner with the city.

A public meeting — which attracted 80 residents — was held in June, and a committee comprised of members of the City Council, Planning & Zoning Commission and the public was formed. Ms. Hamm said the committee has been meeting once a week for the last two months to review work by Dunkin and the city staff and to study street and utility access, zoning and beautification plans for the I-20 corridor.

She said another public meeting will be held when the committee finalizes its work and makes its presentation to the City Council.

Marines halt training for day of reflection on core values

NAHA, Okinawa (NYT) — For at least one day this week, this island had some peace. The big guns that fire shells over Highway 104 were silent. The deafening planes that drown out the lessons at elementary schools were grounded. No parachutes dropped from the sky onto the small practice field — or into the residential neighborhood nearby.

Most of the 18,000 U.S. marines in Okinawa held a "day of reflection" to contemplate the rape of a 12-year-old Okinawan schoolgirl, for which three American servicemen have been charged. Regular training was suspended on Thursday and the marines spent the day in lectures and discussion groups on topics like the "core values" of the Marine Corps, alcohol abuse and the customs and culture of Okinawa.

The day of reflection was part of an unusual outpouring of contrition by the U.S. military. But while the Pentagon could silence the guns and planes, it has not been able to silence the controversy generated by the rape and by the presence of so many American military bases, which take up 20 percent of the land on Okinawa's main island.

The incident has added new strains to the relationship between the American military and the local people. And it is raising questions about the behavior and training of the American troops here.

To a man, the marines interviewed said the suspects in the rape case were not representative of the corps. "Those people who chose to do that, they are not marines, in my opinion," said Pfc. Chad Ellis.

But the U.S. government is acting as if the case is part of a systemic problem. Gen. Charles C. Krulak, the commandant of the Marine Corps, flew here specially from Washington to meet with troops. Discipline is being tightened and the sale of alcohol at stores on the bases is being halted at 9:00 p.m.

"There are some people who would love to limit it only to the action of a few bad apples," Iva Hosaka, who works as a community liaison for the U.S. military in Okinawa, said on the day of reflection. "But that's what this day is all about. We have to self-police."

The troops have raised money to help compensate the rape victim. The American government will also pay compensation.

The public displays of contrition are in part aimed at keeping the outcry from the Okinawans in check. The incident has given new momentum to calls by some Okinawans — though by no means all — to remove the bases at a time when the United States and Japan are trying to justify their necessity with the end of the Cold War.

"The Rock," as some servicemen call Okinawa, is the largest Marine post outside the United States. In addition to the 18,000 marines, there are 11,000 from the other services here, together accounting for 29,000 of the roughly 45,000 American troops in Japan.

South Africa adopts affirmitave action

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Affirmative action has given Castro Mafale a chance to fly for South Africa's national airline, a dream he grew up believing was out of reach for blacks.

"But I have problems with the term 'affirmative action,'" the Soweto-born Mafale said during a break in training at South African Airways. "People think you got things because you were pushed. But I'm actually capable of doing it."

Barely started in South Africa, affirmative action already has evoked fears of a clumsy, misguided attempt to fix apartheid wrongs in the workplace. For most companies, it means hiring a showcase black manager or two and handing over a fancy title but few real powers.

White executives contend they cannot find enough qualified blacks. They scramble to poach affirmative action candidates from each other, bidding with six-figure salaries and company cars.

White workers, meanwhile, speak of "lowered standards" and "reverse discrimination" as they watch the beginning of the end of the race-based privileges they held under the racial separation rules of apartheid.

Blacks, meant to be the main beneficiaries, complain that they are treated as tokens, have their abilities questioned and their opportunities to learn and advance blocked.

In the United States, where affirmative action is under new attack, it is a question of the majority trying to redress discrimination against minorities. In South Africa, it is seen as crucial to the most important question of the post-apartheid era: How can the lives of the black majority be improved? How can the country move forward?

Apartheid's discriminatory practices that reserved jobs for whites by law or custom created a stark contrast: The unemployment rate for the nation's 30 million blacks is estimated at 40 percent, while it is just 6 percent for the 5 million whites.

About 80 percent of professional positions and 90 percent of middle and senior management posts are held by whites, according to a 1994 survey by FSA-Contact, a Johannesburg-based firm that advises business on labor issues.

Reversing the situation is proving complex and difficult.

President Nelson Mandela's African National Congress campaigned with calls for increased opportunities for black, Asian, mixed-race and female South Africans. But it has acted cautiously since winning the country's first all-race election last year.

The ANC wants to avoid alienating white workers — including thousands of civil servants — and business leaders it needs to maintain economic stability.

The government has avoided firing whites. But it has started bringing more blacks into the civil service and state-controlled companies by creating posts, encouraging early retirements and favoring "disadvantaged" candidates to fill vacancies.

David Lewis, an adviser to Labor Minister Tito Mboweni, said that instead of imposing race quotas on private business, the government prefers incentives — such as steering state contracts to companies that hire and train blacks.

He called training the key to counteracting the effects of apartheid education, which prepared blacks only for low-skill jobs.

Drafting the state's affirmative action policy will take until next year because of the "systematic and comprehensive discrimination" that exists, Lewis said.

Harriet Webster, an FSA-Contact researcher, agreed. After questioning white executives during three annual surveys, she said the government might have to impose hiring quotas to get business to seriously address the issue.

That prospect worries whites like Raymond Lamprecht, who runs his own ice cream business.

"They want this to be a totally black country," Lamprecht said of black-controlled unions aligned with the government. "Of course whites were advantaged before. But two wrongs don't make a right. ... Why don't they let natural progression take its course?"

The affirmative-action debate in the United States has not gone unnoticed. Conservatives like Ferdi Hartzenberg, spokesman for the white Mine Workers Union, say that if the policy has not achieved racial parity in a country as rich as the United States, it has even less of a chance of working in South Africa.

But supporters of affirmative action can point to a success story closer to home. After the National Party took power in 1948, it deliberately hired and promoted white Afrikaners, as opposed to English-speaking whites.

Thanks to state-financed jobs at the railroads, postal office and phone company, the parents of many of the Afrikaners who now oppose preferential hiring for blacks were able to escape poverty and enter the middle class.

South African Airways was one of those state-supported bastions of hiring Afrikaners.

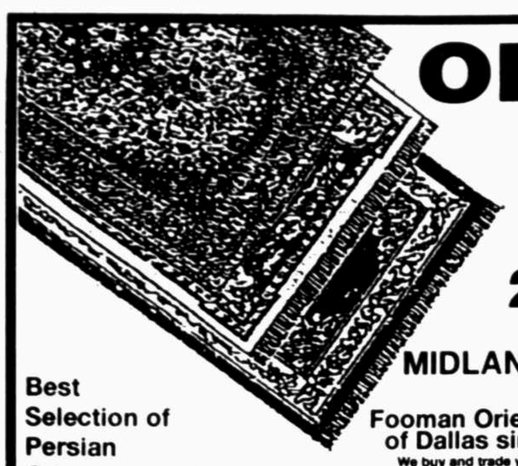

The airline, with a staff of more than 10,000 that is 70 percent white, now aims for a work force better reflecting South Africa's 75 percent black population by 2000.

All but five of SAA's pilots are white. But the airline created a pilot-training program last year whose participants are overwhelmingly black, Asian, mixed-race and female.

Capt. Chris Rademan, the training coordinator, shrugs off complaints that white children have a small chance of entering his class. Eight hundred whites applied for the current class of 18 and only two were accepted.

"We're giving people a chance they never had before," said Rademan.

Despite his reservations, Mafale, the 25-year-old cadet pilot, believes affirmative action is needed.

Molesters, kidnappers are parents no.1 enemy

By Arlene Levinson
Assoiated Press

RIDGEWOOD, N.J. — America doesn't get much safer than this.

An affluent suburban jewel just 20 miles from New York City, Ridgewood is a place where police must scold residents for leaving doors unlocked. Where street gangs roam only in the movies.

Maybe once a year someone reports a child was molested, but police quickly add that no such reports have proved true for five years, at the very least.

Still, Rob and Debbie Maher take no chances.

On the first day of school, a popular Ridgewood ritual of picture-taking and hugs and tear-choked smiles, the couple trooped to the brick Ridge School with their children and met their teachers.

When 6-year-old Heather skips off to Daisy Scouts, Mrs. Maher is right behind her at the door. She hands her daughter to the troop leader, a mother she knows.

When David, their sturdy 10-year-old, races onto the soccer field, his parents are there to cheer him — and check out his coach. When David takes his piano lesson, Debbie Maher usually sits through the scales and arpeggios.

"We just don't leave our kids with people we don't know," says Mrs. Maher, an animated 39-year-old housewife.

The Mahers speak wistfully of their own childhoods spent wheeling carefree about town on bikes, when somebody else's mother told yours if you made mischief, when a whole neighborhood felt like family.

They wouldn't dream of giving their own children such freedom.

It's not that they expect Heather or David to do anything wrong. Says Rob, an affable 38-year-old baritone in the Metropolitan Opera chorus, "I'm worried about other people."

Not all Ridgewood parents are as cautious. Yet here and elsewhere, many are haunted by endless news of another molester, another kidnapping at a day care center, a church, a youth group.

Their fears blanket the traditional child's landscape with suspicion. Kids are drilled in how to avoid abuse — even, in extreme cases, to the point of trying to create 40-pound Terminators. Innocent caregivers adjust their conduct to avoid accusations.

Are parents justified in their fears?

Most sex crimes against children are committed by a family member, and abductions by nonrelatives are rarer still.

Even child safety experts say today's anxious moms and dads may be victims of too much crime reporting. See more, fear more. Some also blame politicians who beat the drum of fear.

But parents today also take more risks.

Yesterday's mom was less likely to have a job and, if she did, often got a relative to baby-sit. Today, many moms and dads must rely on strangers to care for their children.

Americans also move more these days, shattering the cohesion that helped make yesterday's neighborhood safe because you knew most everyone who lived there.

This generation of parents also is more open about once-taboo subjects like sex abuse and incest, and encouraging tykes to speak up inevitably leads to even more awareness and candor.

There are places in America where parents have tangible worries — about sniper fire, about feeding their children, about finding affordable child-care. But not in Ridgewood. And yet they still worry.

"The terror of being a parent is universal, and timeless," says James Garbarino, a psychologist and author who runs Cornell University's Family Life Development Center. "I'm sure that cave parents said to their kids, 'Be careful when you go out. There are tigers out there.' "

It's how parents convey these fears that matters, says Garbarino, an expert on violence against children.

"You have to look at the cost of making kids suspicious of the key people in their lives," he says. "If you do that, you make them more vulnerable to any individual abuser. Then you can't trust anybody."

The plane had just landed at New York's La Guardia Airport. The girl, perhaps 4 or 5 years old, stood in the aisle bv Christine Lavin's seat.

"I smiled, 'Is it fun for you to ride on an airplane?' I asked her," Ms. Lavin recounted in a short item in The New York Times.

"She looked up at me, then looked behind her and in a shrill, anxious voice yelled 'Mommy! A stranger is talking to me.' I was embarrassed and in my calm, most reassuring voice I said: 'You have nothing to worry about; you're with your mom. Sometimes passengers who don't know one another just talk pleasantly when they're waiting to get off the plane.'

"'In an even louder voice she screamed, 'Mommy! She's still doing it!' "

Ms. Lavin is a singer-songwriter; her fans can attest that she is a harmless 43-year-old. But she has had other unnerving encounters with children.

One morning, near her home in New York City, she came upon a girl whose bike was stuck in a rut on a park path. "I said, 'Here, let me help you.' "

Ms. Lavin never had a chance. The child fled.

Wary parents have long expected schools to help teach their children to navigate a world that includes the occasional creep. But heightened fears of sexual abuse and the new frankness is influencing curriculum.

That weirdo who used lollipops to entice girls and boys in school movies of yore is a has-been. Those scary and vague lectures about not accepting rides from strangers are passe.

In Dade County, Fla., a television news report interviewed parents bragging that their children never talk to strangers, but showed how easy it was to approach children in a park So the district launched the Safe Child Program for kids from pre-kindergarten through second grade.

Teachers play roles, making unwelcome advances to children. They then instruct kids how to protect themselves — whether from strangers or people they know. Among the lessons: "Your body belongs to you" and "You have a right to say who touches you, and how" and the all-important "If you're asked to keep a secret, say, 'No, I'm going to tell.' "

Children also learn security techniques. If home alone when a stranger calls on the telephone, after "hello," give no information and then say: "My dad is lying down, may I take a message?"

If approached by someone unknown, say nothing and stay at least an arm's reach away (the length of a grown-up's arm, plus a step back).

A slew of books offer similar — or more drastic — advice.

"The attacker confronts you in the playground while you have your skateboard in your hand," writes Michael DePasquale Jr., in "Streetwise Safety for Children."

"As he goes to grab you, you immediately bring the skateboard up, striking to the side of his head. You finish the move by kicking the attacker in the shin for a quick getaway."

DePasquale's book is illustrated with photographs of a shrimp-sized boy whacking a mean-looking much bigger boy with a board. He offers all manner of tactics — "Defense with a Hockey Stick," "Front Choke or Grab," "Bear Hug Attack" — and advice.

On taking precautions at the mall: Children should wait for rides inside a closed mall door. "This way, they cannot be thrown into a car or van as easily as if they were waiting on the sidewalk."

For a lesson in how the world has changed, look to the Boy Scouts.

For generations, the Scout motto has been "Be Prepared." But today's Scouts are being prepared for things that yesterday's Scouts never discussed; in 1995, a would-be Scout must learn self-protection of the most intimate kind before he can think about building a campfire or using a compass.

Presented as a parents' guide in the Boy Scout Handbook, the material is intended for review by a boy and at least one parent.

It begins with tips for adults who lurch into abuse ("Close your eyes and imagine you're hearing what your child is about to hear"). From there, it shifts to proper responses when a child discloses abuse ("DON'T panic or overreact ...") and teaching assertiveness ("When feeling threatened, your child must feel free to exercise the right to trust his or her instincts and feelings").

Finally, the guide suggests hypothetical situations to serve as a basis for discussions between parent and son.

Fending off schoolyard drug pushers and unwanted picture-takers are covered here, as are how to respond when someone touches you in a public restroom ("Yell 'STOP THAT' as loudly as you can") or if a friend's older brother wants to play "doctor" ("Keep your clothes on").

This is just part of a comprehensive strategy to keep child molesters out of the Boy Scouts of America.

Residents pick up after Opal

NAVARRE BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Nearly a dozen people were found huddling in the wreckage of their homes on t' e narrow barrier island where Hurricane Opal charged ashore, rescuers said Saturday. At least two people were considered missing.

Rescuers using dogs and sensitive listening devices searched for a 51-year-old man who had called 911 to say he was riding the storm out Wednesday on nearby Okaloosa Island, said Tom Carr of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. Carr said the man's house had been washed away.

A 17-year-old girl who also called 911 was unaccounted for, too, but Carr said authorities did not know where she had been or where to look for her. Neither person's name was released.

The death toll rose to 19 when a man died Friday after a tree fell on him as he cleared debris from his yard in DeFuniak Springs, authorities said.

Rescuers searching the eastern end of Santa Rosa Island known as Okaloosa Beach on Friday found 10 or 11 people who had weathered the storm in their houses and condominiums, said Raul Chavez, a rescuer with the Miami Metro-Dade Fire Department. They were taken to the mainland.

As the search wound down, residents of Navarre Beach and next-door Pensacola Beach, at the other end of Santa Rosa Island, returned for the first brief visit to their homes since Opal.

"It's gone. It's flattened. It's a pancake. There's nothing there," Peggy Sparkman told her sister by cell phone as she caught her first glimpse of her summer cottage on Pensacola Beach. The only thing left was the new roof she put on after Hurricane Erin two months ago.

Elsewhere along Florida's Panhandle, life was returning to a semblance of normality. Power was back for all but 150,500 of the 572,000 Floridians who lost it after the storm, but thousands more as far north as North Carolina were still blacked out.

In Gulf Breeze, only a mile across Santa Rosa Sound from Pensacola Beach, it was a normal Saturday for most people as they washed cars, mowed lawns, and played softball. Mail was delivered and trash picked up. The only signs of a storm were piles of tree limbs and leaves in yards.

In Laguna Beach, outside Panama City, a sign at the Carousel grocery store beckoned passers-by: "WE ARE OPEN. WE HAVE GAS."

"All of our advertised specials are in effect. Everything is normal," said the store's owner, Charlie Lahan.

Elsewhere in Panama City Beach, brooms, rakes and shovels were in use as residents cleaned up. Members of the National Guard patrolled past shuttered surf shops and damaged buildings. A few joggers and sightseers strolled the littered beaches.

"Our house is fine so we're just doing some beachcombing," said Bernard Hoffberg as he walked along Pensacola Beach picking up shells.

Okaloosa County sheriff's spokesman Rick Hord said there had been four arrests for curfew violations but no looting.

"It's a burglar's paradise, but everybody seems to be looking out for everybody else's property," he said.

The American Red Cross appealed for more money, saying the year's previous hurricanes and the Oklahoma City bombing had depleted its disaster relief fund, now at $30 million. "We have had so many disasters this year," spokesman Randy Ackley said.

In Panama City Beach, Kirby and D.J. Vieira found their 4-year-old cat, Abigail, alive in their partially wrecked oceanfront house. The Vieiras couldn't find her in the rush to evacuate and had assumed she was dead, but when a neighbor heard a weird sound in the house, they dug through a closet hanging out into the ocean and found the cat unharmed.

"It turned this from the worst day of my life into one of the best because it put all this in perspective," Kirby said. "To have this little critter that we loved, I just held it and wouldn't let go and sobbed."

'It's a burglars paradise, but everybody seems to be looking out for everybody else's property.'

Albertsons U.S.D.A. Select Grade Beef Has Less Fat Than More Expensive Grades

Our butchers carefully trim excess fat, leaving only 1/8" trim which means fewer calories, better nutrition and more value for your dollar. It's the leaner choice for today's lifestyles.

Some tips for tender and flavorful beef preparation:

- Select Grade Beef is most tender when cooked rare to medium rare (135°F. to 145°F.)
- Cuts such as Chuck, Rounds and Steaks are most tender and tasty when cooked by moist heat.
- Ribs and Loin cuts are best when cooked by dry heat such as barbecuing or pan frying.
- Oven Roast larger cuts for maximum tenderness and reduce roasting time so meat is rare to medium.

Once a model, LAPD now defamed

LOS ANGELES (AP) — In the 1960s, when Joseph Wambaugh was a street cop and patrol cars cruised the sea of boulevards like vigilant black-and-white sharks, police work in Los Angeles was a calling.

"We thought we were the best in the world," says Wambaugh, a 14-year LAPD veteran whose books offer up the gritty lives of Los Angeles police. "We set the mark for departments all over the world."

The sharks still patrol, now more resented than revered. Whipsawed by a series of high visibility cases and political infighting, the once-proud Los Angeles Police Department has set a very different mark.

The videotaped beating of Rodney King and subsequent trial of four LAPD officers brought to light the ugly issues of police brutality and bigotry: the 1992 riots following their acquittal challenged the legend of the department's invincibility.

Now, the O.J. Simpson case and the recorded bigotry of Detective Mark Fuhrman have again focused national attention on police racism, long accepted as fact by many black and Hispanic Angelenos.

With the verdict, many of the city's minorities, from those who celebrated outside the courthouse to community leaders who took to podiums, feel their criticism was validated.

"What Fuhrman did was break the code of silence that has been long maintained by racist rogue cops within the department who framed Latinos and African-Americans," says John Mack, president of the Los Angeles Urban League.

'The problems of policing that face Los Angeles are faced by all the other agencies in the country.'
— John Whetsel, president, International Association of Cheifs of Police

The continuing furor has had another debilitating effect, says Dennis Zine, director of the Los Angeles Police Protective League: Morale is gone, sending seasoned officers elsewhere for jobs.

And the union, once a cheerleader for the LAPD image, has encouraged them to leave. Its newspaper, "The Thin Blue Line," a term coined by legendary Police Chief William Parker, has listed job openings and pay scales at other departments — and even carries the phrase "It's not a career, it's a job."

The irony of the department's fall from grace is that it is due in part to strategies that, for decades, maintained order in a sprawling city.

"Pro-active policing" was a buzzword for an in-your-face style of law enforcement that could turn any encounter with an officer into an unpleasant experience, especially for minorities.

Indeed, a panel commissioned to study the department following the King beating noted that such tactics carried a great cost.

"This style of policing produces results, but it does so at the risk of creating a siege mentality that alienates the officer from the community," the Christopher Commission reported.

This legacy of the LAPD past often clashes with the reality of LAPD present.

The department of former Chief Daryl Gates, who once suggested blacks had a defect that caused them to die in police choke-holds, has become the department of Chief Willie Williams, a black who preaches community-based policing.

The department that 15 years ago was three quarters white is now a department of color where white males account for only 35 percent of all officers.

Law enforcement officials elsewhere believe the LAPD has been singled out unfairly.

"The problems of policing that face Los Angeles are faced by all the other agencies in the country," says John Whetsel, president of the International Association of Chiefs of Police.

But the Los Angeles Police Department is struggling with problems well beyond the national notoriety of the King and Simpson cases.

—Once an innovator of radio squad cars, SWAT units, helicopter patrols and DARE, the drug prevention program for students, the LAPD now struggles with aging cars, crumbling station houses and antiquated equipment. Its 8,130 officers and 2,600 civilian workers share fewer than 800 computers; paperwork keeps street cops behind desks hours each day.

—Support services are lacking. The department's crime lab, under fire for its handling of the Simpson case, is down to more than half its assigned staff.

Failed computer halts countdown for Columbia

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — It was Strike 4 for NASA's oldest shuttle. A computer failed late in the countdown Saturday and grounded Columbia, already plagued by sluggish hydraulics, leaking fuel, even a hurricane.

The flight was not rescheduled. Launch director James Harrington expected a delay of at least a week.

NASA came within a half-hour of liftoff, but a computer needed to process vital commands for Columbia's solid-fuel rocket boosters and fuel tank simply would not work.

"We did our best," NASA test director John Guidi said, apologizing to the crew.

The seven astronauts looked glum as they crawled out of Columbia.

The failed computer — called a master events controller — is supposed to process commands for igniting the rocket boosters. It also controls separation of the spent boosters two minutes into the flight and the fuel tank six minutes after that.

There are two such controllers. The failed one is the prime and will have to be replaced.

Saturday's scrub cost $900,000 in overtime pay and wasted fuel. It was the fourth delay in 10 days for the laboratory-research mission.

NASA had feared rain might delay Saturday morning's launch, but the weather turned out to be perfect.

There were other other last-minute problems: birds at the launch pad and nitrogen fluctuations in an orbital maneuvering system.

NASA had to fire a shrill siren several times to scare away starlings. Launch officials were taking no chances: Woodpeckers damaged the external fuel tank of Discovery earlier this year, forcing a long, costly delay for that shuttle's mission.

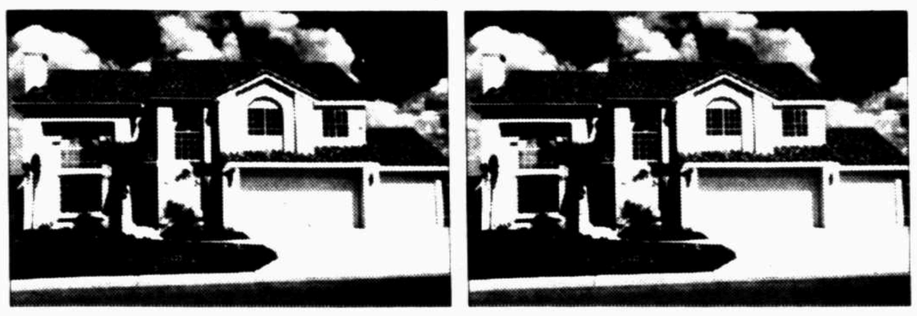

Friday's launch attempt was ruined by an inadequate amount of fluid in a hydraulic line, apparently the result of worker error. A fuel leak and Hurricane Opal caused earlier delays.

The latest delay disrupted the National Aeronautics and Space Administration's flight plans for the rest of the year.

Atlantis is supposed to blast off Nov. 1 on a docking mission with the Russian space station Mir. Depending on the length of Columbia's latest delay, NASA could opt to fly Atlantis next.

Pope John Paul II celebrates Mass in New York's Central Park

NEW YORK (AP) — Central Park was transformed into a giant open-air cathedral Saturday as Pope John Paul II celebrated Mass before a flock of 130,000, urging Americans to stand up for family life and side with the homeless, the disabled and people with AIDS.

"Do not be afraid to search for God. Then it will truly be the land of the free and the home of the brave," the pope said at the end of the service. "God bless America."

The celebration was the pope's farewell Mass in the New York region during his five-day U.S. trip, and the city the pontiff describes as "God's playground" did not disappoint.

A gold carpet in the shape of a cross stretched across the Great Lawn, while performers such as Natalie Cole, Roberta Flack and the Boys Choir of Harlem were among the performers who filled the park with sacred music in the muted light of a cloudy October morning. The tenor Placido Domingo sang at Communion.

Beneath the dramatic Manhattan skyline, where the silhouettes of tall buildings seemed to form cathedral spires rising gracefully beyond an expansive border of greenery and trees, the pope celebrated Mass on a majestic stage framed with a sea of faces.

Even though the pope appeared no more than a speck for many, his mere presence was enough for the faithful.

"It feels very important to be in the same park that the pope is in," said Anthony Michalik, 42, an actor who showed before dawn for the 9:30 a.m. Mass. "It definitely gives you a sense of community and a feeling that you are with your brothers and sisters who really love this man."

If the pope was speck in the park, he was bigger than life walking along Fifth Avenue after praying the rosary inside St. Patrick's Cathedral. He dispatched a waiting limousine to mingle with the people huddled behind police barricades.

"I touched his shoulder!" cried junior high school teacher Bienvenue Rodriguez, a Dominican immigrant. "Now I feel I can die and heaven will open for me."

Not everyone was as pleased with the papal visit.

Outside Central Park, 35 sign-carrying demonstrators from American Atheists marched before Mass. Hours later, more than 500 protesters — mostly women's groups and AIDS and gay rights activists — marched up Eighth Avenue.

"We will live to see the day that St. Patrick's Cathedral is a child care center and the pope is no longer a disgrace to the skirt that he has on," said feminist Gloria Steinem, who was among the marchers.

As the popemobile headed for St. Patrick's for rosary, demonstrators on a sixth-floor ledge at Saks Fifth Avenue unrolled a huge vertical banner reading, "Condoms Save Lives."

The crowd booed. One child asked, "What's that, Dad?" and his father replied, "Those are bad people." Police officers, to a cheering crowd, removed the banner and the men. Six people were arrested and charged with criminal trespass and reckless endangerment.

Inside St. Patrick's, across the street from the department store, the pontiff recited the rosary before 2,400 people.

He urged Catholic parents to rely on prayer to remain strong against "a self-indulgent culture" and "false teachers" and dissenting voices within the church.

"The family that prays together stays together," he said.

The pope started his evening by meeting with more than two dozen Christian and Muslim leaders at Cardinal John O'Connor's residence. Religious broadcaster Pat Robertson described the 30-minute session as "very warm," with the pope greeting and blessing each guest.

The pontiff's New York visit winds up with a separate gathering with Jewish leaders.

On Sunday, the final day of his U.S. visit, the pope travels to Baltimore, where he is scheduled to celebrate Mass at Camden Yards baseball stadium and meet with the homeless at a soup kitchen.

Tens of thousands of people poured into Central Park to hear the morning service, many arriving before sunrise, their paths illuminated by Boy Scouts bearing flashlights.

The Vatican estimated the crowd at 250,000, but police said it was about 130,000.

In his homily, the pope told worshipers to care for the poor, the hungry, the homeless and people suffering with AIDS.

"The man without love has known nothing of God, for God is love," the pope told his cheering flock.

He also encouraged Catholics to work and pray against abortion, pornography and euthanasia, themes he has returned to throughout his visit here.

"Stand up for the life of the aged and the handicapped, against attempts to promote assisted suicide and euthanasia," the pope declared. "Stand up for marriage and family life! Stand up for purity!"

John Paul, who in previous days had commented on the hard rain and strong wind, referred in part to the drizzly weather at the end of Mass when he said, "I can see that Americans are not afraid."

On a more serious note, the pontiff who is often characterized as being critical of America as a selfish, individualistic culture, said Americans "are generally speaking, a brave, good people."

His remarks were greeted by shouts of "Viva el papa" and the familiar chant: "John Paul II, we love you!"

This being America, the Central Park scene was a mixture of the sacred and profane.

"Just in time for the holidays..."

Growing appetite: Japan can't get enough of all-you-can-eat bargains

By Peter Landers
Associated Press

TOKYO — The dainty Japanese appetite is growing. One need only peek in on the all-you-can-eat restaurants that have become Japan's newest dining trend.

Atsuko Unozawa can't get enough.

"Whenever I come here, I try to eat one more piece than I had the last time," said the only slightly pudgy 24-year-old woman during a recent visit to the Cheesecake Factory in Tokyo.

Total consumption: 12 slices.

From cheesecake to sushi, Chinese food to Italian, Japanese are filling up at restaurants that offer as much food as they can possibly ingest in a sitting for a single, moderate price.

At the Cheesecake Factory, that's $15.

> 'Whenever I come here, I try to eat one more piece than I had the last time.'
> — Atsuko Unozawa, 24-year-old cheesecake lover

Big-eating Japanese-style is known as "Viking," a reference to a restaurant that pioneered the all-you-can-eat concept in Japan, the now-closed Imperial Viking in Tokyo. The restaurant itself took its name from an old Kirk Douglas movie, called "The Vikings," that depicted marauding — and presumably big-eating — Scandinavians.

Perhaps the Imperial Viking was ahead of its time when it opened in the 1950s.

No more. In the last five years, the popularity of all-you-can-eat dining has exploded. For women, the preference is for sweet deals, like cheesecake. Hungry men tend to go for Chinese food, spaghetti, or the Japanese beef dish, "shabu-shabu."

It's still unusual to see overweight people on the streets in Japan, but experts often express fear that Westernized fare, not to mention the all-you-can-eat trend, may be hurting the nation's health.

Between bites at the Cheesecake Factory, 27-year-old Michiyo Nara admitted: "I realize I'm going to get fat — but it just tastes so good."

Many link the popularity of all-you-can-eat dining to Japan's long economic slump, which has encouraged people to look for bargains.

But in a population that has subsisted for a millennium on simple diet of rice, vegetables and fish, the success of all-you-can-eat dining is somewhat jarring.

Traditional Japanese cuisine, known as kaiseki, stresses the mixing of delicate flavors and, to a far greater extent than many other cuisines, the appearance of the dish.

A Japanese gourmand would no more consider the quantity of food on his plate than an art critic would measure the number of gallons of paint in a Picasso.

What's more, Japan has little tradition, even among the ruling classes, of the feast, the vast orgies of eating that made ancient Rome famous.

Japan's traditional diet also is considered highly nutritious. The nation's life expectancy is the highest in the world, 83 years for women and nearly 77 years for men.

Many see all-you-can eat as more than just a clever promotion.

"A new Japanese culture is being born," says Kunio Ogura of the Tokyo Hilton, which serves over 100,000 people a year as much cake as they can swallow. "There's nothing wrong with that, is there?"

Dems change political landscape with desertions to Republican Party

By Katharine Q. Seelye
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — June C. Meres won her first term as a state representative in Maine last fall as a Democrat. But she quickly found herself at odds with her party, and last week, less than a year after her election, she went to the town hall in her rural district in central Maine, officially changed her party affiliation and invited a few friends over to celebrate her reincarnation as a Republican.

Mrs. Meres' change of heart tilted control of the Maine House of Representatives to the Republicans for the first time in 20 years, making it the 21st state legislative chamber to go from Democratic to Republican hands in the last three years.

She is the 43rd state legislator and the 137th Democratic officeholder in the country to switch to the Republican Party since Bill Clinton was elected president in 1992.

Political historians cannot recall when so many elected officials at all levels of government, from local constable all the way to the U.S. Senate, have abandoned a single party in such a short period.

"This is probably the greatest one-way exodus we've ever seen," said John Morgan, a Republican consultant and political demographer.

There have been a handful of converts the other way, but they are so few and so hapless that a top Democratic official could not recall even one. In one such case, a Republican state representative in Washington state became a Democrat before the 1994 election and then lost.

Most analysts see the avalanche of Democratic defections as further evidence of the political realignment heralded by the Republican sweep of the 1994 elections, particularly since the vast majority have taken place at the local level, the pipeline for future candidates for state legislatures and Congress.

After winning control of Congress last year for the first time in 40 years, the Republicans now control both houses of the legislature in 20 states, while the Democrats hold 17. (Twelve states are split, and one, Nebraska, is unicameral and nonpartisan.)

This year alone, Republicans have won 22 of the 32 special elections for state legislative seats. As a result of all elections and all switches since 1994, Republicans have posted a net gain of 554 state legislative seats, although Democratic state legislators still outnumber Republicans by about 300, for a 52 percent advantage.

The switches at the state and local levels have generally been overshadowed by the party-jumpers in Congress, where three House members and two Senators have bailed out of the Democratic Party in less than a year and helped solidify the Republicans' new majorities.

Congress has not experienced so many defections in such a short time since the Whigs began disintegrating in the 1850s.

"The trend of party-switching, particularly in the South, is not brand new, but the magnitude is startling," said Malcolm E. Jewell, a retired political scientist at the University of Kentucky. "When you get this kind of shift, it accelerates the trend."

The trend was clearly accelerated by the Republicans' landslide victories in 1994. Of the 43 Democratic state legislators who have switched, two thirds have done so since the 1994 elections.

The Maine House is the fourth state chamber to go Republican because of a party switcher since 1994, following Pennsylvania, South Carolina and, last month, Tennessee.

The conversions in the Tennessee Senate and the South Carolina House were particularly significant, since the Republicans had not controlled a single state legislative chamber in the South since Reconstruction.

They followed the Republican victories in two other Southern chambers — the North Carolina House and the Florida Senate — that occurred in the 1994 elections, giving the Republicans a foothold now in four of the 22 upper and lower chambers in the 11 states of the Old Confederacy.

Morgan predicted that three more Southern chambers — both houses in Virginia and the Mississippi Senate — could go Republican in elections this fall.

Of all the switches, and all the retirements, most have occurred in the South. Southerners have long voted for Republicans for president but had little choice elsewhere on the ballot, starting with their members of Congress, many of whom headed important committees. With the Republican takeover of Congress, that rationale to vote Democratic has vanished.

Freedom Flight is height of patriotism for pilot

■ Bill Pounds of Midland and co-pilot Chuck Francis of Arlington flew over the Statue of Liberty as part of a commemoration of the end of WW II.

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

Flying World War II-vintage aircraft over the Statue of Liberty in commemorating the end of World War II represented the epitome of patriotism and camaraderie for Midland pilot Bill Pounds and his co-pilot, Chuck Francis of Arlington.

"I don't know of anything that could take the place of flying by the Statue of Liberty and throwing the roses out there," Pounds said of the flyby, which climaxed the two-week, cross-country Freedom Flight America.

"There's not enough money in the world to take this flight away from me," said Pounds, who was preparing to become a U.S Navy flying cadet when the war ended.

His friend, Francis, was a U.S. Army Air Forces' instructor-pilot in the Vultee Valiant, which he and Pounds piloted from Texas to the Statue of Liberty.

The Valiant, a single-engine wartime basic trainer — which Pounds owns — was one of 100 World WarII planes that saluted the Statue of Liberty.

"There's not but 30 of them (Valiants) flying in the world, and we had 15 of them" in the salute, Pounds said.

During the two-week Freedom Flight, hundreds of restored warbirds flew various segments of the coast-to-coast flight, which originated at Long Beach Airport in California in late July.

Among those flying the California-to-Midland route were Midlander George Coombes, who was a World War II naval aviator in the Pacific, and his brother, pilot Jim Coombes, of California. Their aircraft, the SNJ, or the U.S. Navy's version of the U.S. Army Air Forces' North American AT-6 Texan trainer, is owned by George Coombes and his son, Bill Coombes, a Midland pilot-historian.

"There never will be another one (commemorative flight) like this with that many airplanes of World War II vintage aircraft," Pounds said.

Pounds said the camaraderie that the pilots experienced in the flight and the expressions and demonstrations of patriotism that they observed among spectators at the various layovers reaffirmed their faith in America and dedications to

Balloons flying high

Albuquerque is world's ballooning capital

By Vidya Srinivas

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — "We land anywhere. In peoples' front yards, backyards, on the streets — you name it, we land there. People see us landing and take another route if they have to. Nobody minds it. If you do, you don't live in Albuquerque. You just move out," said Scott emphatically.

A commercial hot-air balloon pilot, Scott's statement aptly sums up the close relationship Albuquerque enjoys with the sport it is best known for: hot-air ballooning.

Ideal balloon flying conditions created by the "Albuquerque Box," a combination of unique mountain formations, clear weather and moderate temperatures with light variable winds under 10 miles per hour, make this city the "hot-air balloon capital of the world."

Ballooning enthusiasts can be seen dotting the skies in the vividly colored balloons on any of the 250-odd such days that this city enjoys.

Lodgings are scarce

This year's festival kicked off Saturday and continues through Oct. 15, but don't plan on attending this year unless you have a home there or a friend who does. Motels are booked solid and Chamber of Commerce officials advise making reservations soon for next year's festival, which is set for Oct. 5-13, 1996.

Taking advantage of the perfect ballooning conditions, the Albuquerque International Balloon Fiesta was inaugurated in 1972 with 13 balloons. Today more than 650 balloon flyers from 50 countries participate in this nine-day spectacle of color. One of the most photographed events, it attracts approximately 1.5 million spectators every year.

A miniature version of this colorful extravaganza is visible in the early morning or late evening skies of Albuquerque. From march through November balloons can be seen drifting across the skies. While most hot air balloons are privately owned, there are commercial flyers who let visitors, like us, enjoy the experience of sailing in the skies.

Dinner party guest lists always include Willie Nelson

It is one of those games everyone plays from time to time.

One person will look at another and say, "If you could invite any four people to a dinner party, who would they be?"

Ott

The object, of course, is to come up with people you think would be interesting and fun to talk to. Perhaps for that reason, many of us tend to stack our lists with names of entertainers, be they actors, musicians or even stand-up comedians.

Others, and they are definitely becoming a minority these days, will add a politician or two to their group. Athletes on occasion are included, and among the more enlightened, serious authors are sometimes given due consideration.

Over the years my list of names has changed almost as often as Dennis Rodman alters the color of his hair. Among those who have been included are Bob Dylan, Mother Teresa, Jimmy Carter, Colin Powell, Bill Bradley, Kurt Vonnegut, Mary Tyler Moore, Barbara Jordan, John Grisham, Dan Jenkins, Candace Bergen, Richard Nixon, Woody Allen, Connie Chung, David Letterman, and Katherine Hepburn.

Depending on my mood at the time, I will generally choose three of those individuals to join me at my get-together.

The fifth and final member of our party?

That's easy. It never changes. Willie Nelson.

For some reason, I just like the guy. I like his music, his personality, his sense of humor, his golf game (which is as bad as mine), his long hair, his independence, and his laid-back "Hey, these things happen" attitude about owing the Internal Revenue Service umpteen million dollars in back taxes.

Plus, he has always struck me as a genuinely nice guy, and if there is anything this troubled world needs right now, it is more genuinely nice guys, whether they can write poignant songs or not.

So, it was with a certain degree of anticipation that I accepted an invitation to go backstage and meet Willie Nelson Thursday night following his concert at Centennial Plaza.

"We'll even get your picture taken with him," I was told.

My mind began to race. I envisioned the two of us sitting down in his famous bus for a two-hour discussion of everything from his early days in Nashville to his current involvement with Farm Aid. I foresaw us becoming instant pals, kindred spirits, the kind of friends who would think nothing of flying cross-country on the spur of the moment to participate in a surprise party for the other.

Yes, "Gary and Willie" would become the new "Waylon and Willie" of the outlaw country music scene.

This did not happen, of course.

There was no one-on-one conversation, no tour of the bus, no establishment of a long-term friendship.

What did occur, however, was the opportunity for

FLY: Group takes high adventure trip in balloon

From 1B

Our $135-a-person unusual aeronautical adventure began at 6 a.m. on a pickup truck. Scott, who came to pick us up, introduced himself to us as our captain for both the ride on the ground and the one in the air. Patting the two large tarpaulin-covered mounds at the back of the truck affectionately, he said, "That's the balloon. It'll take me 20 minutes to set it up."

Scott drove us toward the launching ground while we read the brochure he'd given us. The literature promised us a continental breakfast with champagne, and made a charming request to give the pilot a hand: "We inflate the balloons providing you the opportunity to become involved 'hands on' as a crew member and help with the inflation."

At the launch site on the banks of the Rio Grande, south of the fiesta grounds, Scott heaved out the vibrantly colored roll of fabric and attached it to the gondola, an oversized rattan picnic basket.

"This holds five," he said reassuringly when he noticed the unsure looks on our faces. Nevertheless, the standing space in a 4-by-4 foot basket between three propane tanks containing 40 gallons of the gas raised our doubts.

The hands-on experience mentioned in the brochure, we discovered, involved two of us holding open the balloon, or envelope. A small but powerful fan blew warm air into it to inflate it. As Scott zipped up the top part of the fabric, propane burners were directed toward the opening, heating the air and making it rise to an upright position.

At this point we were joined by the integral part of the support staff: the chase crew. Entrusted with the responsibility of tracking the balloon as it sails around the city, the chase crew is in constant radio contact with the balloon. The chase crew also helps at take off and landing. Besides, they have the unenviable task of helping fold up the balloon once deflated.

Once the balloon was filled up, we climbed into the gondola under the 2,300 yards of vibrantly colored polyurethane coated nylon fabric. Propane burners took over the maintenance of temperature inside the balloon. The hot air, which should be approximately 120 degrees Fahrenheit more than the outside temperature, lifted us gently off the ground.

Rising over the city, the early morning chill air hit us, making us appreciate the burners that kept us warm. We watched the houses and fields become smaller, turning to dim outlines in the early-morning darkness as the distance between the ground and us grew. Standing in an open cane basket far from the ground, my daughter was suddenly overcome with the fear of heights. Nervously, she asked Scott, "How high will we go?"

"Oh, about a 1,000 feet. Albuquerque is about 5,000 feet so we'll be at 6,000 feet," Scott replied.

"Wanna go higher?" he asked.

"No!" came her quick and empathetic reply.

"You scared of heights?" he asked

"Yeah," she said.

"Don't look down, just look straight ahead," he advised.

Obediently we followed his advice. Between the intermittent roar of the burners our pilot pointed out the natural landmarks of Albuquerque. In the distant north we could see the Rio Grande flowing south from Santa Fe on its way to Texas. Floating east over the river, we watched the rising sun silhouette the peaks of the Sandia mountains.

As we rose higher, we held on tightly to the rim of the gondola standing still, too nervous to move, for every time we did the basket rocked making the imaginary butterflies in our stomach dance. Scott's reassuring tales of his excellent safety record did little to make those insects in our abdomens settle down. "I've never had a mishap," he said.

"A good balloonist must have a healthy respect for mother nature. Never fly when the weather forecast is bad," Scott said.

He said mishaps "are rare. One woman called me up from Chicago and asked me of the chances of an accident. I told her chances of getting killed in her city streets were greater than while ballooning."

Ever so often he turned on the burners to maintain the temperature. "The hotter the balloon the lighter it gets and higher you go," Scott said, shouting above the deafening sound of the burners. Occasionally he'd ascend or descend to steer the balloon in a particular direction.

"In summer the propane can keep one afloat for two hours, but in winter when the temperature outside is lower the balloon can stay up for almost three hours," Scott said.

Halfway into our ride we felt more comfortable with being suspended in the air, and we could move around and look at the topography below. As the sky brightened up, we noticed other balloons rising in the morning sky. One by one as they rose their vibrant hues stood out in the lightening sky. Some had bigger gondolas than ours with space for eight people. Others were smaller ones that held two people. Our pilot occasionally spoke to some of them on his little radio.

Motorists honked at us as we floated around. "It's just their way of saying 'Hi!' to us." We waved back at them doubtful whether they could see us from 1,000 feet above.

A gentle breeze pushed us around. "You couldn't have got a better day for ballooning than today," Scott told us. "The weather is just perfect. Calm and clear."

Finally, our hour was up, and it was time to descend. Scott turned the burners off and gently guided the balloon to the ground, warning us to bend our knees preparation for landing.

"That way you won't feel the impact," he told us. We landed with a gentle thud, and were relieved to see the chase crew arrive to fold up the balloon.

While the crew got to work, we were offered the promised champagne and continental breakfast to celebrate our flight. We politely declined the unappetizing muffin and the contents of the dripping champagne bottle. Straightening our knees and walking on terra firma was enough celebration after this exhilarating flying adventure.

POLICE REPORTS

Accident

ECTOR COUNTY — An 18-wheeler truck ran into the rear of a pickup early Saturday morning, sending two women to the hospital.

Billy Gregory, 62, of Brownwood was driving a 18-wheeler, when he ran into a pickup driven by Dorothy Curlee, 74, of Denton, according to the Texas Department of Public Safety.

The accident occurred about 3:30 a.m., 10 miles west of Odessa on Interstate 20. The truck jacknifed on the road and turned over on its side. The pickup rolled over at least twice, according to DPS reports.

Ms. Curlee, who was not wearing a safety belt, was reported in fair condition at Odessa Medical Center Hospital. Her passenger, Lena Curlee, 44, of Denton, was reported in serious condition and was airlifted to University Medical Center in Lubbock. She was not wearing a safety belt.

Gregory, who was wearing a safety belt, was treated and released from Odessa Medical Center Hospital.

No citations were issued. The accident is still under investigation, according to a DPS official.

A fender bender occurred later at the same scene, from people "rubberknecking" to see the accident, the DPS reported.

SERVICES HELD SEPTEMBER 27TH FOR TYLER BERRY

"To live in the hearts of friends is to never die."

Funeral services were held Sept. 27, 1995, at Davis Morris Funeral Home in Brownwood, Texas, for Tyler Wayne Berry. Burial was in the Eastlawn Memorial Park Cemetery in Brownwood.

He was killled in a one-vehicle accident Sept. 24, near Anson, Texas.

Tyler was born in Brownwood on Sept. 15, 1976, and lived there until 1991 when he moved to Midland, TX. He graduated from Midland High School in 1995. He was a member of the Varsity Soccer team for 3 years, National Honor Society for 4 years, and a member of the Student Council. He received the U.S. Achievement Academy National Award in Mathematics in 1992, Who's Who Among American High School students in 1994 and 1995, the UIL Scholar Award in 1995, was the first recipient of the Bulldog Excel Scholarship for academic and athletic achievements.

Tyler was a freshman student at Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene, Texas. He became a starter on the HSU Cowboys varsity soccer team in his first season.

Pall bearers were members of the Rowdies soccer team of Brownwood. Honorary pallbearers were the HSU men's soccer team.

Survivors include his parents, Gaylan and Carolyn Berry of Midland; one sister, Shelby Berry, also of Midland; his paternal grandparents, Leston and Ruby Nell Berry of Goldthwaite, Texas; his maternal grandmother, Rosalie Meeks of Brownwood; and two aunts and uncles, Dale and Rita Berry of Goldthwaite; Nathan and C.J. Meeks of Midland. He was preceded in death by his grandfather, N.H. Meeks.

The family requests memorials be made to the Tyler Berry Soccer Scholarship Fund, c/o Permian Basin Area Foundation, P.O. Box 10424, Midland, Texas 79702.

Author of 'Hank the Cowdog' to give concert benefiting local recording library for the blind

From Staff Reports

John R. Erickson, author of "Hank the Cowdog" series, will be in Odessa next Sunday, Oct. 15, for a fund-raising concert to benefit the Recording Library for the Blind & Physically Handicapped.

Erickson

Performances will be at 2 p.m. and 4:30 p.m. at the Globe Theatre. Ticket prices are $5 for children and $8 for adults. They are available at Ark Family Gifts & Books in Odessa and Pages & Prints in Midland. Tickets also can be purchased at the door on the day of the event.

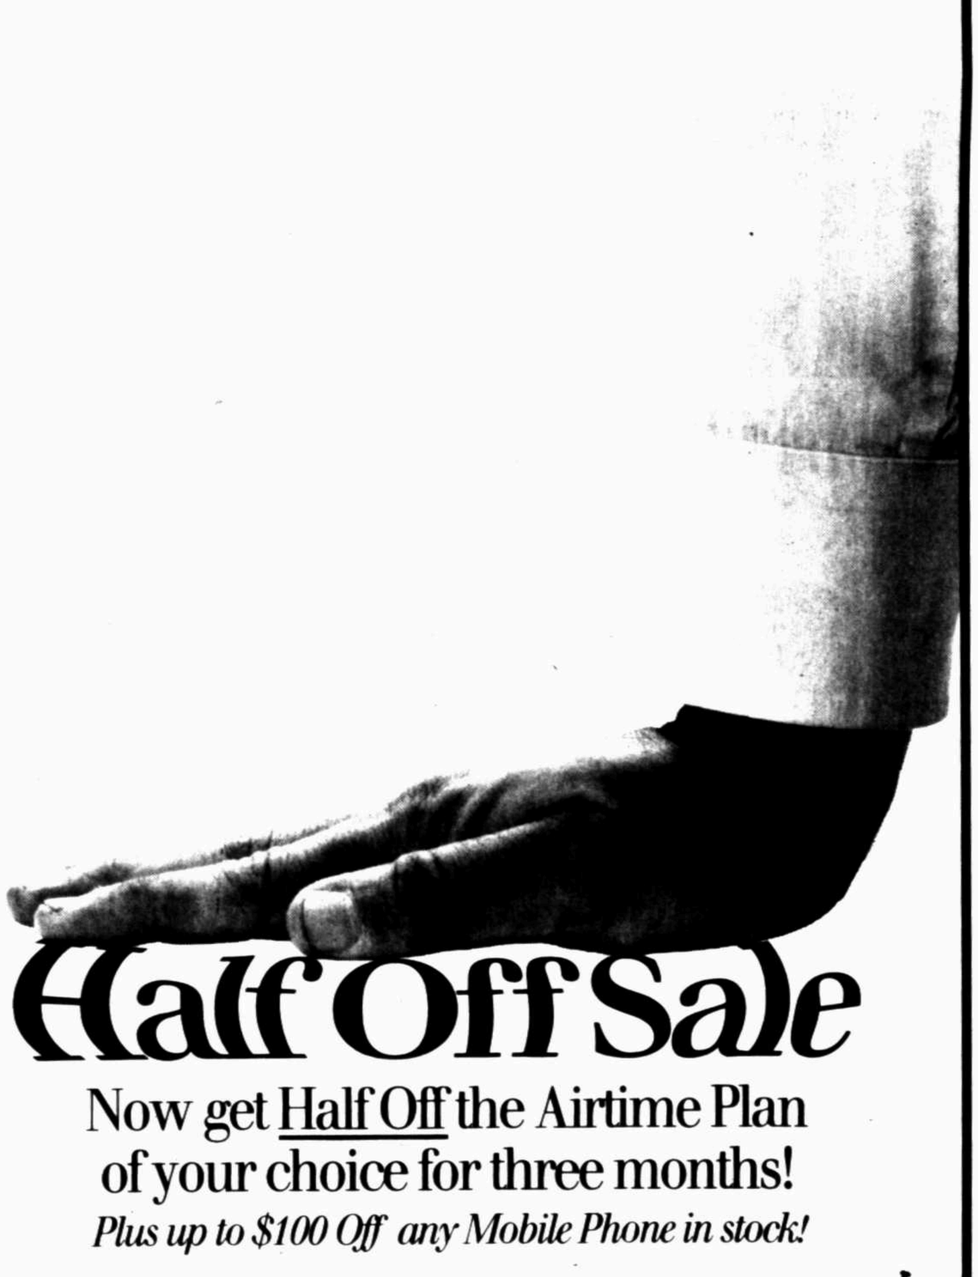

Erickson brings together fun and laughter in his concert through songs and readings. The audience can see characters from his award-winning Hank the Cowdog series of books and audio books brought to life.

Erickson, a fifth generation Texan, was raised in the small Panhandle town of Perryton. He spent 15 years writing in the early-morning hours and working odd jobs, including eight years as a ranch cowboy. After receiving hundreds of rejection letters from New York publishers, Erickson started his own publishing company in his garage and self-published the first 10 Hank the Cowdog stories. Hank the Cowdog is now a national character and more than one million of his books and tapes have been sold. Hank has appeared on national television shows and was named the best children's audio book in 1993 by the American Audiobook Sellers Association.

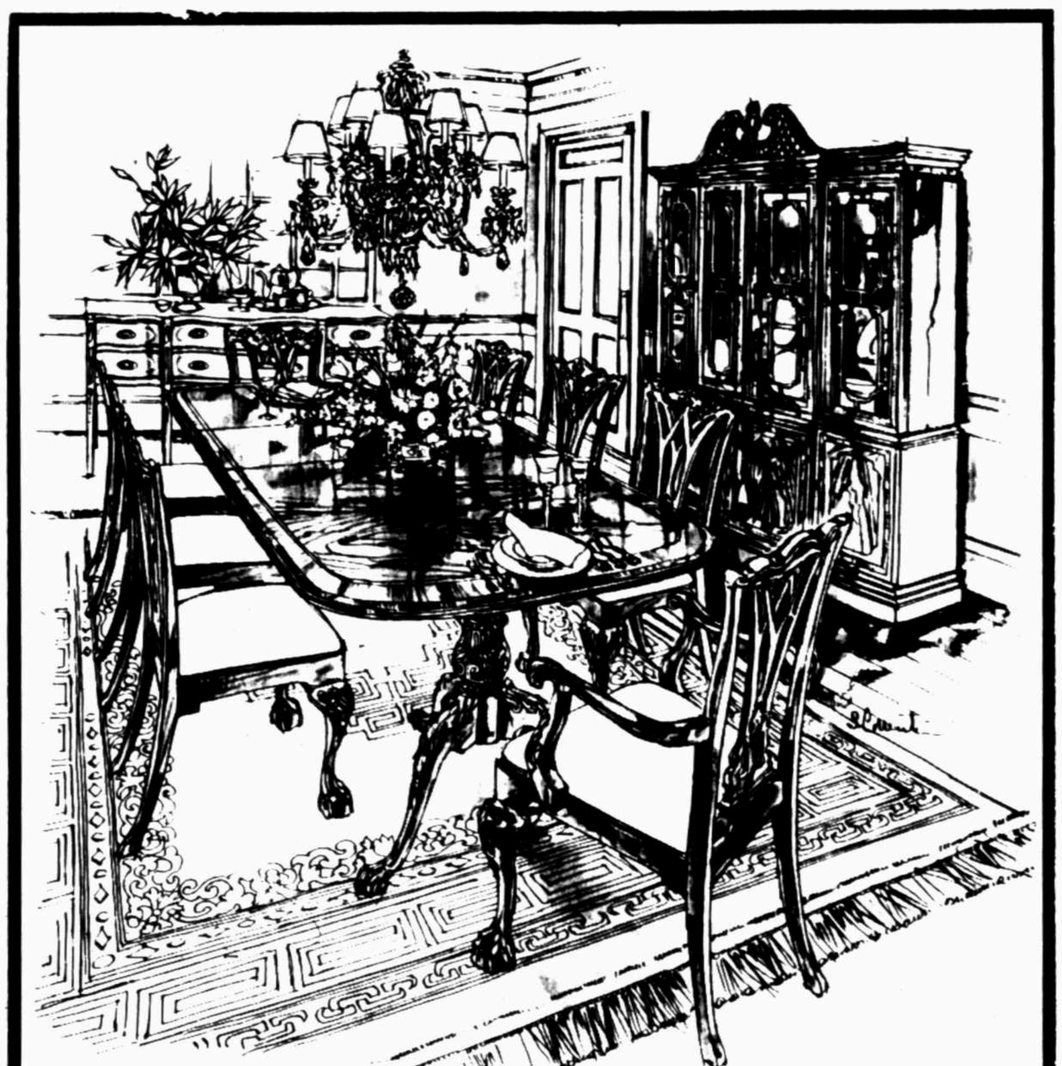

This will mark the third time Erickson has performed for a Recording Library for the Blind & Physically Handicapped benefit, which provides unabridged books on tape to the blind and physically handicapped throughout the Permian Basin area.

Funding for the library is based solely on donations. "This is our major fundraiser for the year. It's a fun event for the entire family, and it enables us to continue to bring a quality product to our clients," said Rod Slaton, president of the organization. "If it weren't for this library, the clients who need this service wouldn't be able to enjoy unabridged audio books because our library is the only resource in this area. Although many of them are visually blind, these audio books enable them to see with their ears."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Activities planned

BIG SPRING — Ghost stories, hay rides around Scenic Mountain and a Haunting Pumpkin Hunt are slated at Big Spring State Park Oct. 28, which has been designated as "Spooky Special Saturday."

Children of all ages will be looking for dozens of pumpkins tucked away in a maze of hay bales. Cost is $3 per vehicle for park entry.

For more information call 1-915 263 4931.

Exhibit hosted

ODESSA — Odessa College is hosting a two-person photographic exhibit titled "Sacred Light: Churches of Mexico and Texas" in the Options Gallery, Learning Resources Center.

The exhibit will remain through Oct. 20.

Beckwith Thompson of Lubbock and Billie Mercer of Houston have produced a collection of black-and-white silver prints which depict the church's relationship to the community, the significance of the religious icons, the juxtapositions of the old and the new and architectural details.

Hours are 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Friday and 2 to 5 p.m. Sunday. For more information call 1-915-335-6497.

'Paint-in' set

BIG SPRING — The Big Spring Art Association is planning an October "Paint In" for 10 a.m. Oct. 21 downtown.

All artists will meet at the Main Street Emporium near the downtown railroad plaza. The Antique Association will host the day.

All artists are invited to bring their supplies and work. For more information call 1-915-267-8255.

Series planned

Bach's Lunch Recital Series will be held every Wednesday in October in the sanctuary of First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

Each performance will be from 12:05 to 12:35 p.m. and lunch will be served a half-hour before and after each concert.

This week's concert features pianist Bill Behrens, a member of the faculty of the Fine Arts School at the church. A newcomer to the Permian Basin, Behrens moved here recently from Santa Barbara, Calif., where he maintained a large piano studio. He graduated with an associate degree in music and business administration from Santa Barbara City College and degrees in music and piano pedagogy from California State University at Northridge.

Lecture

Poets of the Needle of South Texas — Thur. Nov. 16 — 7:00 pm to 8:00 pm
$3.00 members — $5.00 non-members

From professional knowledge and personal interviews, lecturer Wilanna Bristow will reveal the interactions of the lives of eight women artists of South Texas - Martha Mood, Janet Shook, Esther Hardin, Peggy Wahrmund, Becky Patterson, Pamela Studstill, Tinka Tarver and Wilanna Bristow - who have used the medium of fabric or fiber as a vehicle of poetic expression.

Wilanna Bristow, from San Antonio, Texas, is a certified judge with the Embroiderers' Guild of America and has studied couture embroidery at the Lesage Ecole de Broderie d'Art in Paris. Artist, designer, lecturer and teacher, she has taught at national and regional seminars for embroidery organizations and has exhibited her work across the country. Her work is included in the Archives of American Art in Washington, D.C. and the library of the Costume Institute, Metropolitan Museum, New York.

For more information or to register for an adult workshop, children's class, or lecture, please call the Museum of the Southwest at 683-2882 or 570-7770.

This exhibition is sponsored by Mrs. Mary de Compiegne, Mr. Joseph de Compiegne, Mr. & Mrs. Charles Tighe, Mr. & Mrs. David N. Grimes, Suzy Boldrick, Mrs. Charles Dean and Norwest Bank, Midland with assistance provided by the Quilters Guild, Tumbleweed Chapter of Smocking Arts Guild, Embroiderer's Guild, Tall City Stitchers, American Needlepoint Guild, Stitching Post, and Needle Nook.

It's time to raise 55 mph limit

While we still share the concern of those Americans who fear that raising the speed limit above the current 55 mph will inevitably lead to many more fatalities on the nation's highways, there is good reason to support a bill sponsored by U.S. Rep. Larry Combest, a Republican from Lubbock whose district includes a part of Midland.

One is the fact that the way the restriction on higher highway speeds was designed was more like blackmail than reasonable law passed in the interest of public safety. The 1974 legislation that set the national speed limit at 55 included a provision that permitted the federal government to withhold federal highway funds from states that established highway speed limits above 55.

That was never a well thought out feature of the law because denial of the federal highway funds to states that had higher speed limits acutally meant that states that could have used those funds to make their thoroughfares safer for the traveling public actually were left with no federal highway funds and more dangerous roadways.

In the two decades since the 55 mph law was passed, Texas highways have been improved tremendously. Today's automobiles are safer driven at higher highway speeds. And the long distances between cities in Texas have not gotten any shorter. Raising the 55 mph speed limit would be beneficial to numerous Texans.

Yes, there is a very real danger that raising the speed limit could lead to more fatal highway crashes, but that possibility is greatly reduced by the improvement made in automobiles and highways since 1974. Furthermore, the use of seatbelts and a national campaign to discourage drunk driving have improved safety on the highways.

It appears that now is the time to raise the 55 mph speed limit.

Seniors' mail-grams were really ghost-grams

WASHINGTON — A sobering lesson is emerging from the political circus surrounding the Medicare debate: Beware of seniors' organizations bearing "message grams."

As House Commerce Committee Democrats were protesting the GOP's effort to slash $270 billion from Medicare over the next seven years, one of America's largest seniors organizations wanted to give their Republican allies a boost. With television cameras watching, staffers from the Seniors Coalition strode before the committee carrying several large bags of mail — 100,000 "message grams" from senior citizens in support of "saving" the Medicare system.

Anderson

Democrats, meanwhile, eventually became so distraught that they walked out of the hearing in protest. But before they stormed out, Democratic committee staffers scooped up a sampling of the message grams — which were identical form letters containing a vague set of principles with a signature underneath. They were, in reality, ghost-grams.

When Rep. Bart Stupak, D-Mich., looked at a sampling of "about 75" of the letters, he found that several of them were returned with the word "deceased" written across the top, while others were returned with no signatures or simply marked "contributor." One letter was returned by the widow of a man who has been dead for more than a year.

Still other "message grams" were returned with hand-written messages scrawled in the margins or on the back. One letter called for a "single-payer," government-run health system, while an Arizona woman felt compelled to add, "I don't want to be forced into an HMO!!"

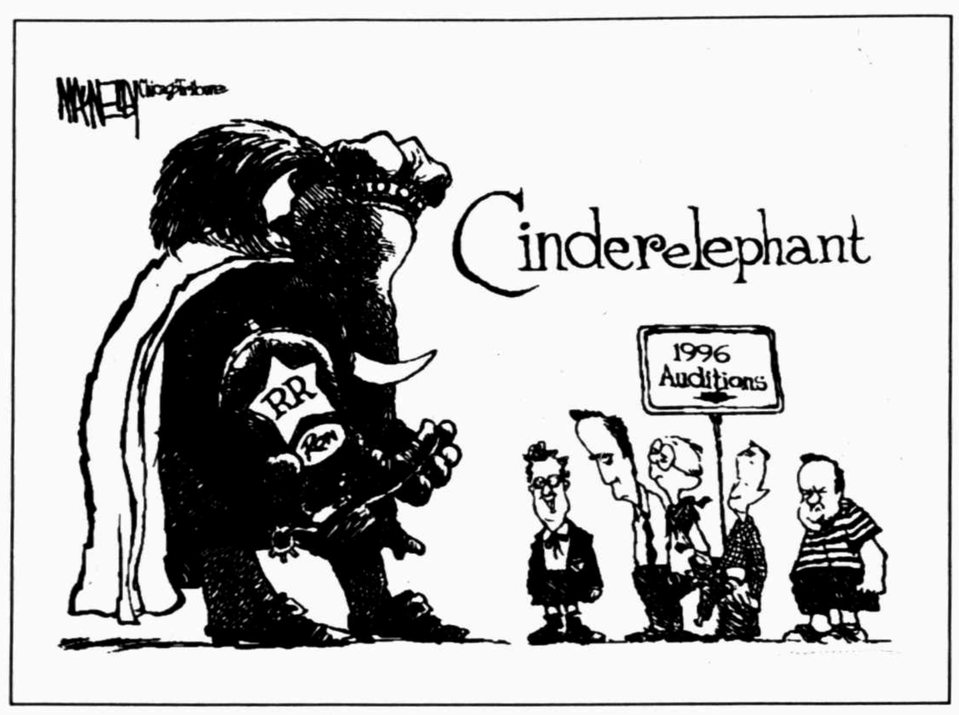

Seniors Coalition officials say there was no intent to deceive anyone with the letters, adding that they are currently sorting through all the mail so it can be delivered to congressional offices. And while Stupak found 12 questionable letters among the handful that were snatched, a Seniors Coalition spokeswoman says the group found only about 1 percent of the letters were marked deceased or had no signature. "I think it's terrible that (the Democrats) are using people's misery for political gain," the spokeswoman said.

Seniors Coalition President Jake Hansen said his group might not have participated if they knew what kind of circus would ensue. "I have never seen any kind of committee procedure that was that wild," Hansen told our associate Jan Moller. "And I recognize that we played a part in that. I wish that this whole issue could be handled in a little less heated manner."

While the Seniors Coalition has conducted a largely respectable lobbying effort, other conservative-minded seniors' groups are mainly making their founder rich. As we reported last week, two groups founded by direct-mail guru Richard Viguerie — 60-Plus and United Seniors Association — have signed contracts with Viguerie's for-profit company, American Target Advertising, which call for ATA to receive as much as 50 percent of all money sent in by seniors. In 1994, United Seniors managed to raise $6.7 million, finishing the year $844,484 in the red.

Under the contract with United Seniors, Viguerie's company also retains 100 percent ownership of the group's mailing lists, which allows ATA to use United Seniors' membership rolls on behalf of other clients. Viguerie did not respond to our phone calls.

Getting government out of railroading isn't option

WASHINGTON — Long ago, before Washington decided it did everything so well it should start running a passenger railroad, American slang included a phrase used to express dismay about mismanagement of organizations. The phrase is "Helluva way to run a railroad." Speaking of Amtrak ...

Will

Congress is speaking of it because conservatives are in a Margaret Thatcher mood. It was said she could not see an institution without swatting it with her handbag. Republicans, who praise governmental minimalism, can hardly close their year of glory without asking why the government is in the railroad business.

In a sense it has been for more than a century. The word "cordial" hardly suggests the intimacy between government — federal and state — and railroads in the 19th century, when 10 percent of the public domain was given in land grants to the transcontinental railroads. The Union Pacific was given one-tenth of Nebraska — 4,845,997 acres.

Amtrak began, as did so much that makes today's conservatives cross, under Richard Nixon, during whose administration there occurred the largest peacetime expansion of government power in American history (wage and price controls) and the creation of the Environmental Protection Agency, the Occupational Safety and Health Administration, forced busing and racial set-asides. He failed to get Congress to enact a new entitlement, a guaranteed annual income, and to embark on what is now called "industrial policy" by funding development of a supersonic transport aircraft.

"All through grade school," said Nixon, "my ambition was to become a railroad engineer." Would that he had. In March 1970, the largest operator of passenger trains, Penn Central, on the verge of bankruptcy, sought permission to end passenger service west of Harrisburg and Buffalo. For that, government deserved a portion of blame, the Interstate Commerce Commission having resisted rate increases commensurate with wage increases unions were winning. In a textbook example of how bad government begets more government, Amtrak was born.

It began operations in 1971, ostensibly as a two-year experiment. It has lost money since 1971, partly because it has been a mini-welfare state appended to the welfare state: It has been forbidden to contract out union jobs, and laid-off workers have been entitled to six years of severance pay. So, having helped make private railroads anemic (jet aircraft, better highways and inept railroad management contributed mightily to the anemia), the government piled on Amtrak its mandates that would keep it running in the red.

Helluva way to run a railroad? What do you expect from something created in defiance of market forces and regarded by its creators, the political class, as several varieties of pork, including an entitlement for small communities that want the government to guarantee continuing rail service for which there is weak demand?

Defenders of the subsidies say, as defenders of subsidies do, that we are all benefiting so much that the subsidies "pay for themselves." Their argument is that because of passenger trains, highways are less congested, air is less polluted, we are delaying the evil day when federal money will have to help build another airport for Boston, and so on. There is some truth in all these arguments and a lot in this one: Government even more heavily subsidizes air and road passengers. United Airlines is not expected to build airports and Greyhound is not responsible for maintaining the highways.

However, Congress is poised to shrink Amtrak subsidies from more than $700 million next year to zero by 2002 at the latest, when Amtrak is scheduled to be privatized. Its roadbed needs work, especially in the Northeast, and its rolling stock is old (the average car is 23 years old), so even with more reasonable work rules and more latitude to rationalize routes, privatization may not be possible. But trying to get the government out of railroading is not optional if the conservatives' determination to rationalize government is real.

'Trial of Century' leaves much to be desired

So this is how the Trial of the Century ends. With a three-hour deliberation and a loud and clear message about the sorry state of race relations in this country.

Two young people are dead, brutally hacked to death on a warm night in June 1994, and apparently no one did it, certainly not Orenthal James Simpson. That's what a jury of his peers told us — a jury supposedly of 12 good people and true.

... We'd like to think justice can't be bought. That even the best legal team, the best investigators, the best experts can't pervert our system of justice. We were wrong.

We'd like to think that justice is colorblind too — that the undeniable racism of one witness, one police detective, wouldn't change that. Mark Fuhrman should indeed be called to account for his failings, but not here, not now. Justice ought not be about settling racial scores.

... If no one beat Rodney King, then how could anyone have killed Nicole Brown Simpson? This is how our racial divisions have made a mockery of justice.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Sunday, Oct. 8, the 281st day of 1995. There are 84 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

On Oct. 8, 1871, deadly fires broke out in Chicago and Peshtigo, Wisc. The Chicago fire claimed more than 200 lives and destroyed more than 17,000 buildings. The Peshtigo blaze claimed an estimated 1,500 lives and scorched 1.28 million acres of timberland.

On this date:

In 1869, the 14th president of the United States, Franklin Pierce, died in Concord, N.H.

In 1892, Sergei Rachmaninoff first publicly performed his piano "Prelude in C-sharp Minor" in Moscow.

In 1918, Sergeant Alvin C. York almost single-handedly killed 25 German soldiers and captured 132 in the Argonne Forest in France.

In 1934, Bruno Hauptmann was indicted for murder in the death of the infant son of Charles A. Lindbergh.

In 1944, "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" made its debut on CBS Radio, an event that coincided with Ozzie and Harriet Nelson's ninth wedding anniversary.

In 1945, 50 years ago, President Truman announced that the secret of the atomic bomb would be shared only with Britain and Canada.

In 1956, Don Larsen pitched the only perfect game in a World Series to date as the New York Yankees beat the Brooklyn Dodgers, 2-0.

In 1970, 25 years ago, Soviet author Alexander Solzhenitsyn was named winner of the Nobel Prize for literature.

In 1982, all labor organizations in Poland, including Solidarity, were banned.

Ten years ago: The hijackers of the Italian cruise ship Achille Lauro killed American passenger Leon Klinghoffer, dumping his body and wheelchair overboard.

Five years ago: Israeli police opened fire on rioting Palestinians on the Temple Mount in Jerusalem, killing 17. The House approved a revised deficit-reducing budget plan, and both chambers of Congress approved stopgap spending legislation to end a government shutdown. American doctors Joseph E. Murray and E. Donnall Thomas were named recipients of the Nobel Prize for medicine.

One year ago: President Clinton, responding to the massing of Iraqi troops near the Kuwaiti border, warned Saddam Hussein not to misjudge "American will or American power" as he ordered additional U.S. forces to the region.

Something will turn up to replace O.J., entertain people

After the verdict or lack of verdict, there will doubtless be fulminations along the usual race lines, and these will keep the news feeling bubbly and nasty for a few days. Then will come the hour of letdown.

And what will poor America do then to amuse itself?

Can you believe baseball? Surely not. Baseball is still convalescing from last year's suicide attempt, and there is nothing entertaining about a sickroom.

Baker

Presidential politics, perhaps? Not half likely unless Colin Powell jumps. The public's dismay with the candidates already running is all too well expressed in the polls. These show a lot of heavy breathing for Powell, a man with so little political identity and experience that you have to despise the great art of politics itself to take him seriously.

What about the Republican sacking of Washington? It could be solid entertainment, if not in a class with the Trial of the Los Angeles Century. Suppose a leader with a little charisma appeared, saying, "These Republicans aren't revolutionaries, they're the Huns and the Vandals loosed on the Capitoline Hill."

Suppose he rallied the losers-to-be for some guerrilla class warfare. It could be quite passable entertainment if such a rogue came along. That is a big if. See anybody on the horizon fitting the description? Ain't nobody there but them chickens.

Maybe Newt Gingrich can recover his magic touch for enchanting the press and recapture the audiences he lost over the summer to Kato, Ito, Fuhrman and Johnnie, to O.J., Marcia and Scheck, not to mention Fung, Lee and the Sidebar Gang.

Maybe, but the press rarely grants an autumn reprise for those it loved in spring. To be sure, it granted reprise after reprise to Richard Nixon, the greatest comeback man since Lazarus. Gingrich's charms, however, lack the dark intensity that made it so hard for the press to give up Nixon.

For one thing, the press believed that Nixon truly, deeply, sincerely hated them. And press people, believing themselves, deep down, to be the salt of the earth, deserving the love of all humanity, could not bear to write off Nixon as a hopeless brute.

New generations of them kept coming along trying to win his stony heart. Gingrich, by contrast, is a jovial fellow who gives every impression of being a pushover for the press.

In the spring Gingrich's skill at keeping the press entertained had many a famous knight of tube and op-ed page dreaming. What joy to have such a garrulous newsmaker, such a superb sound-bite artist in the White House.

That's over now. Now it is Colin Powell they look to for stories, for news to sink teeth into, for somebody new to relieve the tedium of those same old tiresome clods tramping through New Hampshire.

Entertainment is what America expects of the news, and news people are not too pompous about the noble principles of their trade to ignore the story that has strong entertainment values.

The acres and hours of coverage devoted to It has been said by Professor Neil Postman that America is in danger of entertaining itself to death. It may be that we have already done that. Certainly a lot of entertainment offered in movies, TV and bookshops looks, feels and reads as if it were intended for the dead.

The Simpson trial was not one of these. It was utterly absorbing even when it was unbearably dull, and it was an endless series of lessons in the law, in the American character and in human nature. It displayed that popular villain of the day, the American lawyer, at his and her best, most exasperating and worst.

It provided a constant illustration of how deeply the country is split by the race issue and, so, was a reminder that if entertainment is not to be the death of us, then the race division will almost surely be.

Now that it is over except for the shouting, we will be hard pressed to find an entertainment so fascinating or so rewarding. Something will turn up, though. Count on it. America must be entertained. Duty, General Powell! Duty, duty, duty!

Our air terminal is adequate for needs

Who is responsible for the deplorable condition of the terminal building at the Midland airport? It looks as if no proper preventive maintenance has been done on the terminal since a select group of city leaders decided that we needed a new one several years ago. Could it be that adequate maintenance has been deliberately neglected to give the appearance that a new terminal is necessary? Shouldn't the airport manager have made sure that proper maintenance was consistently taken care of?

It has recently been reported by the city manager that the terminal building is sound. If so, why are city leaders proposing the construction of a new terminal at very great public expense rather than simply renovating the present one, with funds that are currently available and forthcoming?

The present terminal is functional, user friendly, completely adequate for our present needs and paid for! It is adaptable for possible future expansion should the need ever arise for more ticket counters, boarding gates, baggage carousels, or automobile parking facilities.

It is difficult to understand why our city officials are so reluctant to let the citizens of Midland vote on an issue of this size or controversy. It seems only reasonable to me that they would welcome a voter mandate to build the proposed new terminal building, or a voter turndown, so some reasonable alternate solutions might be found.

Residents give time to support families

On Sept. 28, the Confederate Air Force (CAF) suffered a tragic loss when five men were killed in the crash of a B-26 Martin Marauder. In the midst of this devastating event, the residents of Midland and surrounding communities generously gave of their time to support the families of those killed in the crash and the CAF as it prepared for AirSho'95. Scores of area residents volunteered to answer telephones, serve as hosts at the Special Show for Special People, help erect booths and tents, and provide assistance in countless other ways.

On behalf of the Confederate Air Force and its board of directors, I want to thank you, the residents of Midland, for your unwavering support and generosity. The Confederate Air Force is proud and very honored to call Midland "home."

The Supreme Court controls Constitution

Our Supreme Court, the news media, social activists, Congress, the intellectual elite, and a lot of "we the people" seem to think our Founding Fathers, who wrote the Constitution, did not understand the Constitution, although they wrote it. Are they right? No! No, they are definitely wrong! Could you help me find a positive way to say that, perhaps to our representatives?

Doesn't the Constitution call for the president as commander-in-chief to enforce the Constitution, and implement the laws passed by Congress? Isn't the roll of the Supreme Court to make clear the unclear laws passed by the legal lawmakers and to leave the clear ones alone? (If it ain't broke, don't fix it.)

The Ninth Amendment to the Constitution says, "The enumeration in the Constitution, of certain rights, shall not be construed to deny or disparage others retained by the people." The Ninth Amendment clearly shows the intent of the 10th Amendment is to protect the people and the states from compulsive controllers in government, because the 10th Amendment to the Constitution says, "The powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the states, are reserved to the states respectively, or to the people!" Do you have any trouble understanding that? I don't. The Supreme Court does! Why? Is it vague, or unclear in some way?

Some say our Constitution is a living Constitution. What does that mean? Does it mean the Supreme Court can change the Constitution as time passes and need arises? That is what they are doing. Does it mean social activists have gained control of the Supreme Court? Or does it mean law is no more than a contest between lawyers, the law of the moment, for the moment?

If the Supreme Court is to "fix" things as need arises, then what is the function of our representatives? Is it to simply keep writing new laws forever, or until we sink under the weight of these new laws? (That won't be long.)

Did our Founding Fathers bestow on us a Supreme Court that we have no control over? One that has no restraints? Appointed lawmakers instead of elected lawmakers? No! They tried to write a document that would ensure our lasting freedom, and they did. It is up to us to safeguard it, they can't do any more for us because they are not here now: it is up to us, what will we do? We means you and me; what will you do, and what will I do? Will we give up our freedom, bend our knees, and bow before the compulsive controllers? While they brainwash our children by rewriting history to change the future?

Blame Ruby Ridge on zealous agent

I have watched much of the hearings on the Ruby Ridge "incident" and it seems that the committee has completely ignored the cause. This entire mess can be traced to an overzealous agent of the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms. A jury of his peers judged that Randy Weaver was entrapped by an undercover agent acting on the behalf of the ATF. This seems to be the modus operandi of many of our federal law-enforcement agencies. Now we have ATF director John Magaw assailing the FBI for mishandling both the Branch Davidian (Waco) debacle and the Ruby Ridge "incident." In fact, had the ATF not acted with such roguishness, these events would never have taken place.

Both Weaver and Harris testified that the system which they so mistrusted did work, in the end. But I wonder how well it would have worked without the pro bono efforts of a first-rate attorney like Gerry Spence? I have a feeling that the high-handedness of the ATF would have won out and those two men would be languishing in prison, or worse, because of a handful of zealots.

How can we be expected to submit to laws that our law-enforcement agencies ignore? I was taught that government officials are to be held to higher standards than those they govern. I am more fearful of a few overenthusiastic government-protected agents than I am of someone who prefers to live in solitude or who is different.

CAF priced AirSho'95 in movie-ticket range

First let me commend Kriste Bullard of KMID television for recognizing a news story when she saw hundreds of people parked along Business 20 during the Confederate Air Force AirSho'95 this past weekend.

Bullard interviewed several people, all of whom were "celebrating freedom" by not paying to watch AirSho'95.

Bullard's story is an excellent introduction to the full situation.

Here is the rest of the story.

One woman stated she had four kids and that tickets would have cost her and her husband $60.

That is true if they paid full adult price — $10 — for everyone at the gate.

Advance adult tickets, available at local convenience stores, were $7 for adults. Children's tickets were $3 for kids ages 6 to 12. Kids under 6 were free. That means it is possible she was avoiding only $26.

It is possible that was still beyond her means, but I think the CAF priced this event fairly, in the range of movie tickets.

What does the CAF do with the gate money?

■ Buy fuel for those airplanes, some of which burn hundreds of gallons per flight;

■ Pay for parts to restore those airplanes;

■ Cover the overhead of the commercial "acts";

■ Pay some of the bills to operate the fabulous CAF facility that Midland is so fortunate to have.

Gate admission does not pay the pilots of the vintage World War II aircraft, or the ground crews or the other dozens of volunteers who make AirSho possible. They work for free.

I agree that the people who watched from the highway did not receive the full benefit of AirSho'95. They are correct in thinking they should not pay full price.

■ They didn't hear the excellent commentary on the public address system;

■ They didn't know the history of the planes they were watching;

■ They viewed the aerobatics from an inferior angle.

My point is this. If the AirSho wasn't worth the stated price, yet it was worth watching, how much was it worth?

If you were along the highway, would you have paid $1 or maybe $2 or even $5?

If so, perhaps you could make a donation now to the Confederate Air Force, P.O. Box 62000, Midland, 79711.

Then you, too, could help keep these airplanes flying.

Season to shoot sheriff is here again

Well, here we go again. It seems that the season has opened to take shots at our sheriff.

If the Midland County commissioners spent half the time seeing about their business as they do seeing about Sheriff Gary Painter we would be better off.

I can't understand why Ms. Louisa Valencia is so upset. She sounds a lot like people who refuse to take drug tests on the job. If all is fine, why worry? I can tell you for a truth, after being a Midland resident for 47 years that we need a Commissioners' Court like another hole in the head. The only thing I have known them to do is be rude to people in their district, draw their paycheck, and make things hard for the sheriff.

Painter is the only sheriff we have had who is truly respectable. He's also a godly family man, and Midland County supports him completely. There is no other person who would take care of our county like he does, and isn't that what county officials are supposed to always consider first and foremost?

Representatives try to import waste

Hardly had we uncorked the bottle to celebrate the 2-to-1 defeat in the U.S. House of Representatives (thanks to Reps. Bonilla, Coleman, Doggett and Bryant) of the widely-reviled compact between Texas, Maine and Vermont to import and dump in this state the radioactive waste of other states when we heard that some elected representatives serving as shills for the nuclear power industry were swearing to bring it back to the floor for another vote. One such representative is Jack Fields of Humble.

Now, it's easy to understand why the representatives from Maine and Vermont would push this idea; nuclear waste is bad stuff, and their constituents want it the hell out of their borders. Why our representatives would push it is another matter; anyone recall ever seeing a poll showing Texas in favor of importing other states' radioactive waste? No, and for good reason. Our elected servants, as they watch their campaign kitties grow with contributions from nuclear utilities in Texas and in all the other states that hope to make use of Texas as a dumping ground, must take another tack — they say that entering into this compact will "protect" Texas from being forced by law to take unwanted waste from other states. Nuke Texas to prevent Texas from being nuked. And you thought you'd heard it all!

Here's a sample of the "protection" this compact offers: The compact commission (appointed, eight-member board) may: Enter into an agreement with any person, state, regional body, or group of states for the importation of low-level radioactive waste for management or disposal, provided that the agreement receives a majority vote of the commission (Section 3.05, paragraph 6). Nothing about legislative approval, nothing about how much imported waste would be allowed; this is carte blanche.

Does Rep. Fields believe that his livelihood depends upon his not understanding that Texans don't want to import other states' radioactive waste? For whom is he working? This compact is a bad idea; it deserves to stay dead. Rep. Fields needs to hear some input from Texas outside the boardrooms of the nuclear utilities.

Cattle guards need retraining, not firing

The article that follows came from "The Linchpin" of the Rotary Club of Stamford. I believe your readers would get a kick from this article.

"The following (provided by Horace Arledge) is supposed to have appeared in the Oct. 26, 1994, 'Newcastle (Wyoming) Reporter,' written by Per Warner. 'In the past, I felt that many times our government was ignorant of our lifestyles here in the west, but when a recent article, written by the 'Billings Gazette' was brought to my attention, I didn't realize just how bad it really is.'"

According to the article, President Clinton learned there were 100,000 cattle guards in Colorado. Since Clinton was so upset with ranchers' protest over his grazing policies, he told U.S. Secretary of the Interior Bruce Babbitt to fire half the cattle guards immediately! Before Babbitt could proceed with the president's wishes, Colorado representative Pat Schroeder intervened with a request that before any were fired, they would be given 6 months of retraining.'

"Yes folks, what you have read is true. Hilarious, depending on how you look at it. Scary, definitely."

I'll add another piece. "God help us if he's re-elected."

What goes around comes around

One hundred and two years ago:

Lizzie Borden took an axe and gave her mother forty whacks
And when she saw what she had done she gave her father forty-one.

The jury said, "Not guilty."
What goes around, comes around.

TV should show what jury sees

The trial is over.

No matter what the verdict, members of the O.J. Simpson jury were going to be asked "How could you come up with that verdict?" We, the public, were able to see all the events in the courtroom. This had to have some effect on anyone watching. But what did the jury see? Do you remember which moments they were out of the room so they didn't get the whole picture?

If television and radio are allowed into the courtroom in the future, I feel that they should only be able to broadcast what is presented before the jury. Let the print media, television and radio only give reports about the events that take place outside of the jury's consideration.

Maybe next time we will be more willing to accept the verdict from a jury of peers, much less the jury of the century. Maybe citizens will be more willing to take on the responsibility of jury duty if they don't have to be caught in the middle of a legal and media circus.

O.J. and people are cowards

O.J. Simpson is, at least, guilty of being a bona fide coward. The People of California aren't much less — and their timidity cost them over $8,000,000 — without result. Here are nine reasons why.

1. Simpson, without dispute, was a wife beater.

2. Any man who hits a woman is a bully.

3. Scratch a bully, and you will find a coward just underneath the surface.

4. The district attorney believed the evidence showed that Simpson murdered two people, which act constitutes a capital crime.

5. However, they didn't try him for capital murder under penalty of death. Remember, he's rich and famous and, besides, a guilty verdict with a sentence of death might have caused a riot.

6. Only Simpson knows, without any question, whether he committed the crime or not.

7. If he knows he is indeed guilty, how would he plead if The People had charged him with a capital crime under penalty of death?

8. He would have copped a plea for a lesser offense because, remember, he is a coward. He would not have risked a death penalty.

9. With the guilty plea, The People could have avoided an $8,000,000 trial and still put him away for much longer than the 16 months he served.

So, there! The younger generations will find my views on wife beaters, bullies, and cowards to be old-fashioned and quaint. But I don't think my generation idolized cads and trashy heroes quite as is done now. I hope this region will resist the kowtowing legal debacles that continue in the Los Angeles area.

Oil development is 'win-win' situation

You may recently have read — or even printed — that Interior Secretary Bruce Babbit's chief spokesman is "hoping for a big, bloody floor fight" in the U.S. Senate as a way to block oil development on part of the narrow coastal plain of Alaska's remote Arctic National Wildlife Refuge (ANWR). But let me give you some facts that explain why it's important to our country and to our economy for Congress to approve the leasing of a small fraction of ANWR:

■ The ANWR coastal plain holds the promise of as many as 15 billion barrels of recoverable oil, according to a study by the American Association of Petroleum Geologists. That's more oil than has been found in the nation's largest oil field, located in Prudhoe Bay, only 70 miles west of the coastal plain. This new domestic supply should add many thousands of new jobs, reduce petroleum imports and generate billions of dollars in revenues that could lower the federal deficit.

■ At the heart of this controversy is a very small piece of Alaskan real estate — about 19 square miles, roughly equivalent to the size of an airport serving a metropolitan area. The vast majority of the refuge — which is 15 times larger than Delaware — would not be disturbed at all.

■ Drilling can be done in an environmentally sensitive and responsible way, just as it has been at Prudhoe Bay, with a minimal impact on the refuge.

■ Then there is the wildlife and the importance of protecting it. Government and industry scientific studies show that wildlife populations on the North Slope have either stayed unchanged or increased since oil development began there in the early 1970s. The caribou are thriving. The Central Arctic Herd, which grazes in the Prudhoe Bay oil field now numbers more than 23,000 — eight times as many as a quarter century ago.

The facts are clear. The opening of the coastal plain of ANWR holds the promise of new jobs, less dependence on foreign oil and a small federal deficit — without hurting the environment. This is a win-win situation. We have everything to gain and nothing to lose — if we act now.

Wheelchair use gives sense of compassion

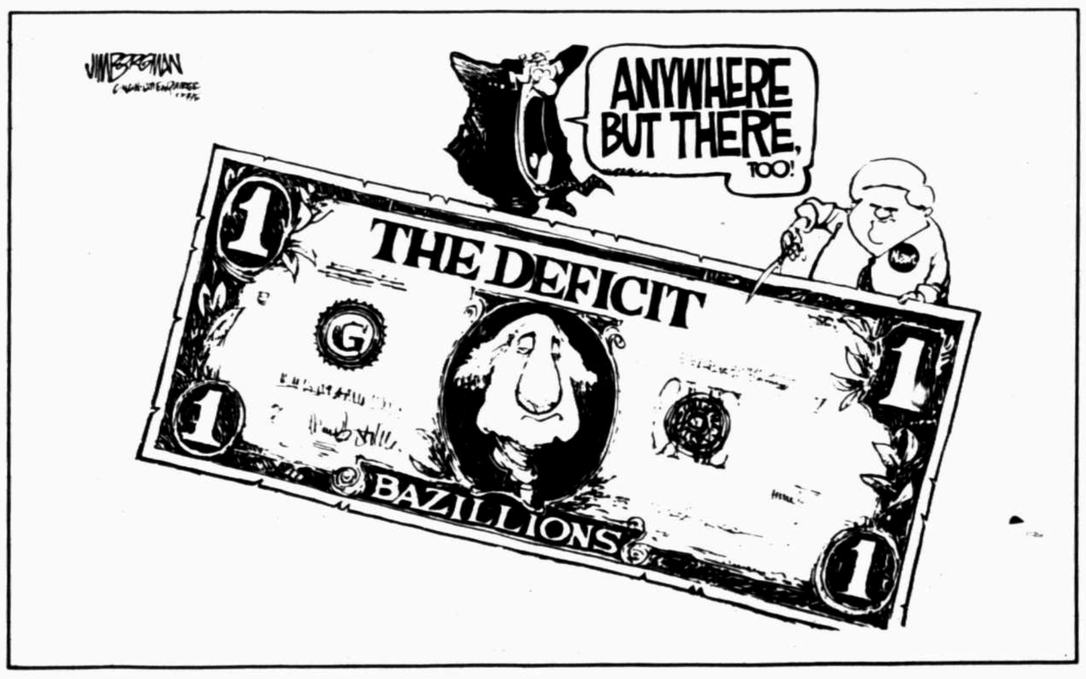

With all the publicity that National Rehabilitation Week received last week, I was caused to reflect on my own recent illness, which confined me to a wheelchair for a couple of weeks. This was a very broadening and humbling experience and I promised not to forget it soon nor to lose my sense of compassion for those who spend their lives in this mode of ambulation.

One of my experiences in the wheelchair was that I found I was invisible. After all, no standing or walking person is required to lower his or her eyes in order to acknowledge a wheelchair-bound person. It is perfectly acceptable to look over the heads of these individuals as if they are non-existent and go on about one's business.

Even the hospital staff is not required to acknowledge the existence of these patients who are more or less left to fend for themselves in the hallways of the hospital. After all, these patients are expected to become more independent if allowed to beat their little fingers off in an effort to learn to operate their new wheelchair.

The next time you encounter a wheelchair-bound person, please at least acknowledge their existence. They probably don't even need your help, although it might be nice to offer. But please don't deliberately look above them as if they are not even there.

Our policy on letters

The Reporter-Telegram recognizes the "Letters to the Editor" format as an important forum for citizen opinion and encourages participation of all readers. To that end, we have set as few rules as possible. However, we must have some, and they are:

■ Letters must be signed and include a street address and daytime phone number for verification. Letters not including this information will not be considered for publication.

■ They should be no more than 350 words in length. While some lengthy letters are published, we reserve the right to edit when necessary due to space limitations. The briefer the letter, the better its chance of publication.

■ Only one letter per month per writer can be published.

■ Letters will be edited for length, taste and legal reasons and are accepted only on that basis. Letters which are difficult to reduce in length will be returned to the writer to be edited before being resubmitted.

■ We do not publish "open" letters, copies of letters sent to others or multiple signatures.

Business and Professional Women chapter to recognize working women

From Staff Reports

The Uptown Chapter of the Business and Professional Women/USA will honor "the many contributions of working women throughout the United States," at a Wednesday luncheon at the Petroleum Club. In addition, Mayor Bobby Burns will issue a proclamation and speak to the group about the economic progress in the Permian Basin and what it means to working women in the area.

Business and Professional Women/USA is the leading advocate of working women and currently is celebrating its 76th year of working toward education, information, better business practices and more political involvement for women.

BPW/USA began in 1919 and 50,000 members in 874 local organizations. Today, BPW/USA has more than 80,000 members in 53 state federations and 2,800 local organizations, the majority of which hold some event to observe National Business Women's Week. The celebration of National Business Women's Week has furthered the leadership roles of women and increased opportunities for their advancement professionally and personally.

The Uptown Chapter actively participates in community events such as Septemberfest and the Chamber of Commerce Expo 95, Storybook Christmas and Midland's Christmas Decoration Campaign. It also has hosted the "Networking in the 90s" seminar open to all women, the district BPW convention, and sponsors educational scholarships for women.

Eagle Scout receives his award at Court of Honor

From Staff Reports

Andy Bingham, son of Barbara Bingham of Midland, formerly of Monahans, received his Eagle Scout Award at an Eagle Scout Court of Honor ceremony Sept. 9 at Fairmont Park Church of Christ.

Bingham

He was 7 when he joined Cub Scouts in September 1986. He worked his way up the Cub Scout ladder from Bobcat, to Wolf, to Bear. He earned two gold arrow points and seven silver arrow points. Then as a Webelo Scout, he earned 13 activity pins. He received the Arrow of Light as he crossed into Boy Scouts.

Bingham advanced through the ranks of Scout, Tenderfoot, Second Class, First Class and Star Scout, was elected to the Order of the Arrow and advanced to Brotherhood by February 1992. He progressed in Troop 270 from Star Scout, to Life Scout, to Eagle Scout by May 3.

He has attended many campouts at Buffalo Trail Scout Ranch in the Fort Davis Mountains, Hughes Aquatic Base at Colorado City Lake and Camp Wehinahpa in New Mexico. He attended the National Jamboree in 1993 to Washington, D.C., and Fort A.P. Hill, W.Va. He served as merit badge counselor for rowing and canoeing at Hughes Aquatic Base t and attended Philmont Scout Ranch in northern New Mexico.

Bingham has held the positions of assistant patrol leader, patrol leader, assistant senior patrol leader, senior patrol leader and quartermaster. He has earned 32 merit badges, 12 of which are required for Eagle. His Eagle project was to clean and paint the Benevolence building for his church, Fairmont Park Church of Christ, which helps feed, cloth, and council the needy people of Midland.

He is a junior at Midland High School. His future plans include earning additional merit badges to earn the three Eagle Palms after his Eagle rank and to continue 4-H and FFA programs. He plans to attend Midland College.

I'd like to take this opportunity to tell you something about myself and this revolutionary method of auto repair.

Midland has been my home all of my adult life. I've been in the Air Conditioning business since 1981 and started my own business "Air Control" in 1989. Four years ago The Paintless Dent Repair System came into my life. When I saw this amazing method of Dent Removal, I had to learn it. This method does not use ice or heat. I have specially designed tools to go behind the metal and work the dent out slowly to where it vanishes before my very eyes. What is so great about this is that you do not have to repaint and are able to keep your factory paint. Where you might have your car stay at the regular body shop for one to two weeks, I can do it in two to four days, unless damage is severe. Thus, you do not have to worry about paint mismatches or body fillers cracking a year or two later. All in all the bottom line is that you will spend 30% to 50% less to have your vehicle fixed and brought back to original form. All work is 100% guaranteed.

With the recent hail storm there has been an influx of out of town hail damage repair businesses moving in. After the hail storms have passed, all damage repaired and the others are long gone, I will still be here. You can count on the Dent Angel now, and in the future.

Thank you for your time.

Sincerely,

Jim Sicard

Construction to widen State Highway 158

From Staff Reports

Construction is expected to begin Monday on State Highway 158 as the Texas Department of Transportation widens the heavily-traveled two-lane highway between Midland and San Angelo to four lanes from south of Interstate 20 to the Glasscock County line.

The 12.3-mile project calls for widening of the highway to four lanes with shoulders — from about 40 to 60 feet — from four miles south of the Midland city limits, according to TxDOT engineer Mike Chetty. North of that point, the road is already four lanes with a center turning lane.

The expanded section will not have a center turning lane, Chetty said.

"The primary reason for this project is to handle the unusually high volume of oilfield truck traffic that uses 158," Chetty said. "There is also a significant amount of recreational vehicle traffic."

In 1994, the Midland County Commissioner's Court, Midland Chamber of Commerce and State Rep. Tom Craddick (R-Midland) petitioned TxDOT's Odessa District to expand the district's portion of the roadway to four lanes and in August San Angelo officials asked the Texas Transportation Commission to consider expansion for the portion of SH 158 in Glasscock and Coke counties within the next five years.

The current $2.25 million project will be built by Price Construction, Inc. of Big Spring. Work will begin just outside the existing northbound lane at the Glasscock County line, according to an official with the contractor. Construction will not interfere with two-way traffic on the highway for the duration of the project, which is expected to be completed by the end of April 1996.

At present, the average daily traffic is 3,800 vehicles, but TxDOT projects that the number will increase to 5,800 vehicles within the next 10 years, Chetty said.

Motorists are urged to observe warning signs and proceed with caution through the work zones.

Judge to speak during luncheon

From Staff Reports

Ann C. McClure, justice of the Eighth Court of Appeals in El Paso, will be the guest speaker at the annual Court Observance Week luncheon noon Friday at Midland Country Club.

The Midland Legal Secretaries Association and the Midland County Bar Association will jointly host the event.

Court Observance Week was originated by presidential proclamation in October 1972. During the week, participants "celebrate and enjoy the freedom and rights afforded through the judicial system."

"Justice With Integrity" is this year's theme.

Supporters hope Court Observance Week will encourage all members of the legal community to present a positive perspective of the strong points of the legal profession to all citizens of Midland County.

For additional information, call Ann Carter of the Midland Legal Secretaries Association at 688-0268.

Forum recognizes four state leaders in ceremony

From Staff Reports

Four Texas leaders were honored Saturday in ceremonies during the John Ben Shepperd Public Leadership Forum at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

The Political Courage Awards were presented to Eleanor Tinsley, Houston City Council member, and Nelson Wolff, former mayor of San Antonio. The Texas Outstanding Leaders Awards were presented to former Gov. Dolph Briscoe Jr., and Pete Laney, speaker of the Texas House of Representatives.

Ms. Tinsley was honored for daring to promote an ordinance requiring planned growth for Houston; Wolff was honored for his efforts in securing passage of the Edwards Aquifer Plan. Briscoe and Laney were honored for their longtime public service.

The 11th annual event began Friday and will conclude today.

The forum, named for the late John Ben Shepperd former Texas secretary of state and attorney general — brings together 100 Texans for discussions on public service issues. The forum is funded by the Legislature and will be incorporated into the John Ben Shepperd Public Leadership Institute at UTPB.

FREEDOM: Flight is once-in-a-lifetime experience for vintage-plane pilot freedom.

"And we had some lovely experiences with people, for sure, and found out that people all over the United States are real good people," Pounds said recently. "You just run across them, and they are there."

"It was a once-in-a-lifetime (experience)," said Francis, who was elated by the camaraderie "of people across the country."

"These folks (are) aircraft-oriented — patriots," Francis said. "America is still alive with our young folks. We had a good many young people making this trip at their own expense. No one prodded them or begged, or paid."

Francis flew piston-powered, propeller-driven airplanes in World War II and U.S. Air Force fighters afterward and later became wing commander at Cannon Air Force Base in Clovis, N.M.

He observed that the best aircraft is "whichever one you are flying right now. They didn't build a bad one. Some you just have got to watch more carefully than others. They are all fine."

'If we did any one thing, we helped the CAF (with) the Freedom Flight America.'

— Bill Pounds, pilot

Following the Aug. 11 flights by the Statue of Liberty, the Freedom Flight America airplanes were on display at McGuire Air Force Base in Wrightstown, N.J. There, approximately "150,000 (people), easy," viewed the vintage aircraft, Francis said.

"If we did any one thing, we helped the CAF (with) the Freedom Flight America," Pounds said, by advancing the Confederate Air Force's multi-purpose mission.

While only one or two of the CAF's 135 aircraft were among Freedom Flight America's warbirds, most of the rare and restored aircraft in the commemorative event were privately owned.

Freedom Flight America was organized by Dallas aircraft-businessman Morey Darznieks to commemorate the 50th anniversary of the end of World War II and to express gratitude to the nation's veterans, living and dead, who fought to preserve liberty and freedom.

Pounds hoped that the Freedom Flight America "may be the rebirth of patriotism and love of country" and certainly was flown to "honor the people who fought the battles and those who lost their lives" for the sake of freedom and liberty.

OTT: Nelson has standing invitation

me to stand in line for 45 minutes so I could shake his hand and get him to scribble his name on a loose piece of paper.

OK, not exactly what I had in mind, but it was certainly better than going home empty-handed like several thousand others did that night.

So, as I waited my turn, I attempted to come up with the perfect one-liner that would leave a lasting impression. Should I go with something witty, perhaps a fleeting reference to his recent marijuana bust? Or maybe something more serious, like wisely noting that he was one of the first songwriters to lift country lyrics beyond simply getting drunk and having your wife run off with your best friend. Or perhaps I should go the nostalgic route, informing him that I had attended his very first Fourth of July Picnic back in the early 1970s in Dripping Springs down in the Texas Hill Country.

Any of the three approaches, I decided, possessed a certain legitimacy, each letting him know in a reasonably casual way that he was dealing with a real fan here and not some Johnny-come-lately.

Slowly but surely, I made my way to where he was standing.

Then I arrived.

He smiled, held out his hand and said, "Hi."

"Hi Willie," I replied. "Nice to meet you."

That was it. No wit, no nostalgia, no nothing.

Ten seconds later I was walking toward my car.

But, hey, that's no problem. He still has a standing invitation to all my dinner parties.

Judge refuses to delay access to accident reports

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge has refused to delay further a new state law restricting access to police access reports.

A group of attorneys and chiropractors who use direct mail advertising filed suit in August and asked U.S. District Judge Kenneth Hoyt to block implementation of the law until he could rule on its constitutionality.

Hoyt has issued at least two temporary restraining orders — which expire today — extending the Sept. 1 effective date of the measure.

The lawsuit filed against the State of Texas and Attorney General Dan Morales also names 30 chiefs of police because they will be responsible for enforcing the law.

Passed by the Legislature as House Bill 391 earlier this year, the law restricts unrestricted access to accident reports to insurance companies and to law enforcement officials.

Anyone else can obtain an accident report only by providing two of three categories of information — the date of the accident, the full name of one of the persons involved and the specific location of the accident.

Prep player dies

SEATTLE — A junior high school football player who collapsed during a game died Saturday.

David Bosse, a 14-year-old running back and ninth-grader at Rose Hill Junior High, collapsed during the first quarter of a game against Kamiakin Junior High Friday night, said Dan Youmans, a spokesman for the Lake Washington School District.

Bosse had carried the ball several times in the first series of downs.

The ball had gone over to Kamiakin, and Bosse, as captain of the defensive unit, had just received defensive-formation signals from the sidelines when he collapsed, Youmans said.

He was flown by helicopter to Harborview Medical Center, where he died.

The cause of death was not known.

Jets top Stars

WINNIPEG, Manitoba — Igor Korolev scored three goals Saturday night, helping the Winnipeg Jets open their final season in Manitoba with a 7-5 victory over the Dallas Stars.

Winnipeg's Alexei Zhamnov tied it 5-5 midway through the final period.

Aggies get Zached by Raiders

By Mike Butts
Sports Writer

LUBBOCK — Hey, Zach Thomas, you just returned an interception for a touchdown to give Texas Tech a jaw-dropping 14-7 upset win over Texas A&M. What are you gonna do now?

Go to bed?

Forgive Thomas if after executing the biggest play of his athletic career to get his team its biggest win in years, his thoughts are on getting horizontal. But the All-American Texas Tech linebacker just went 60 minutes in the warm October sun at Lubbock's Jones Stadium Saturday while trying to recover from a strep throat. And oh, yeah, he also picked off a Corey Pullig pass with 30 seconds left in the game and ran it back 23 yards to end the No. 8 Aggies 29-game undefeated Southwest Conference streak.

"I felt real bad this week," Thomas said. "Just like I feel now. I want to just lay down."

Shake It Up

The Associated Press Top 25 will be quite different next week as four of the top 10 teams fell victim to the upset bug on Saturday, including #4 Colorado and #7 Michigan. Page 5C.

But not until the adrenaline runs out.

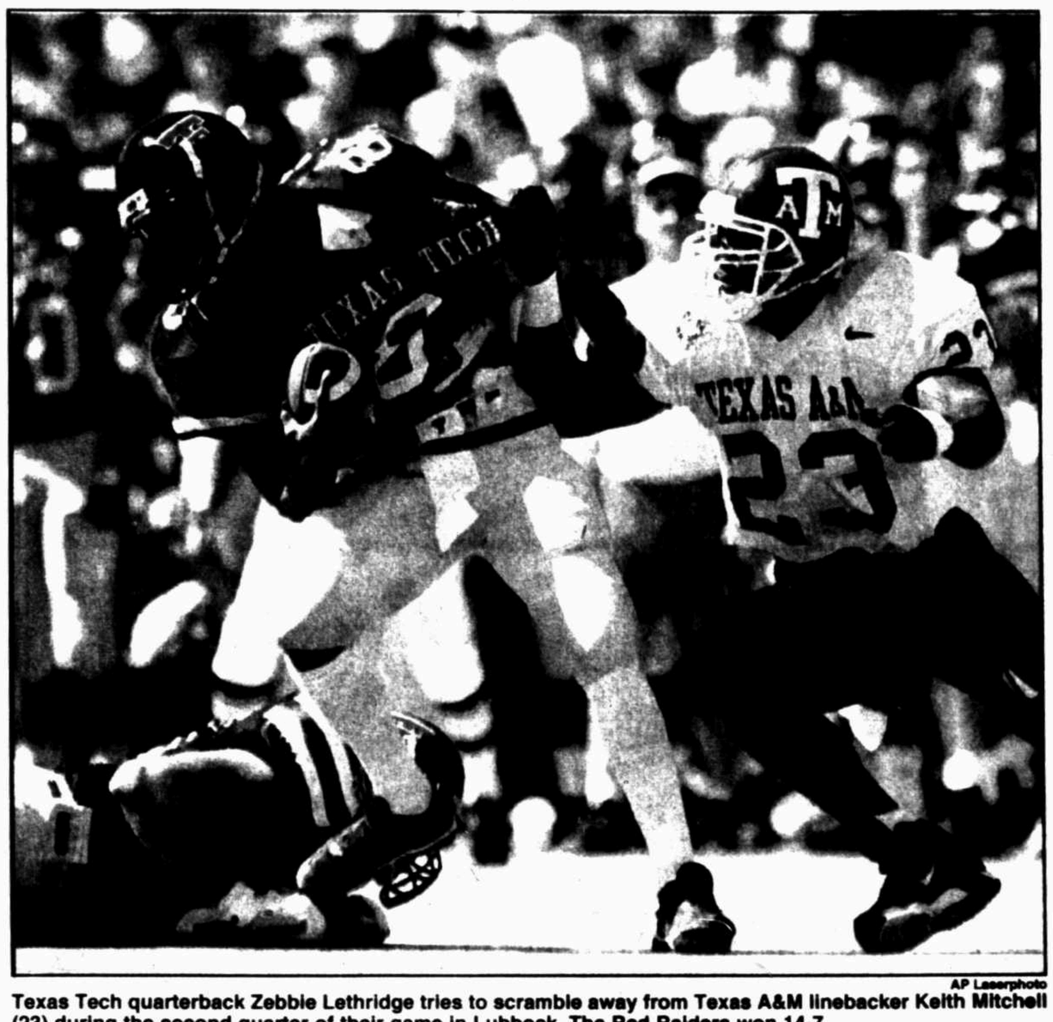

Thomas didn't practice until Thursday and ran a fever earlier in the week. But he showed up Saturday to help Texas Tech's defense give the Red Raiders their first win over a Top 10 team since 1986. Thomas also saved the game, witnessed by a sellout crowd of 51,205, from being a anti-climatic and lackluster tie.

"It's the biggest play I've ever made because it's against the biggest team," Thomas said of his touchdown. "It's against the team I always wanted to beat."

The win opens up the early SWC race, with A&M, the overwhelming favorite to win the title, at 0-1 (2-2 overall). Tech is now 1-1 in conference play and 2-2 overall.

Both offenses struggle and missed several opportunities

Lady Rebels downed by Abilene High

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Sports Writer

The Abilene High Lady Eagles had every reason to give up the fight in their District 4-5A 12-15, 16-14, 15-5 volleyball win over Midland Lee on Saturday.

They came into Midland as the second-worst team in the district, owning only four wins for the season and a lone league win over last-place Odessa Permian.

But if that was not enough to weigh on the minds of a group of teen-age girls, news of the tragic death of one of their classmates just hours before their match should have put the Lady Eagles down for the count.

Still, the emotional load was not heavy enough as Abilene, which fell to Lee in the teams' first district meeting and dropped a tight first game to the Lady Rebels on Saturday, rallied back from an 11-2 deficit in the second game and then cruised in the third to shock Midland Lee (7-13 overall, 3-5).

The Lady Eagles (5-14, 2-6), said Abilene coach Diane Morgan, were crushed early Saturday morning upon learning of the death of Abilene sophomore Johnathan W. Tschaar, 16. The teenager, while driving home from Friday night's football game, crashed into an electrical pole but was not injured in the actual crash. He was electrocuted, however, when he stepped out of the car onto a downed power line.

"I was not expecting the girls to be ready to play today," said Morgan. "They cried all the way up here on the bus and they were totally drained when we got here. But I just told them to get out there and give it their all and everything would be taken care of."

Tschaar's parents have asked that any donations be sent to the Johnathan W. Tschaar Memorial Scholarship fund, which has been set up by Abilene High.

The loss drops the Lady Rebels into fifth place — one game ahead of the Lady Eagles — and while not math-

Green Bay gets another shot at 'Boys

By Kevin Lyons
Fort Worth Star-Telegram

IRVING — Green Bay Packers coach Mike Holmgren likens his club's recent failures playing the Cowboys to that of the luckless Washington Generals against the Harlem Globetrotters.

"I just hope it doesn't take us that long," Holmgreen said, referring to the Generals' ongoing losing streak of more than 20 years.

The Packers' losing streak has not been that lengthy. It just seems that way to Holmgren, because Green Bay has lost five consecutive games to the Cowboys — including four in the past two years at

Mariners send series to Game 5

■ Martinez grand slam in eighth inning sinks Yankees as Seattle pushes New York to final contest today.

By Jim Cour
AP Sports Writer

SEATTLE — Edgar Martinez and the Seattle Mariners made sure the Kingdome will rock for at least one more game.

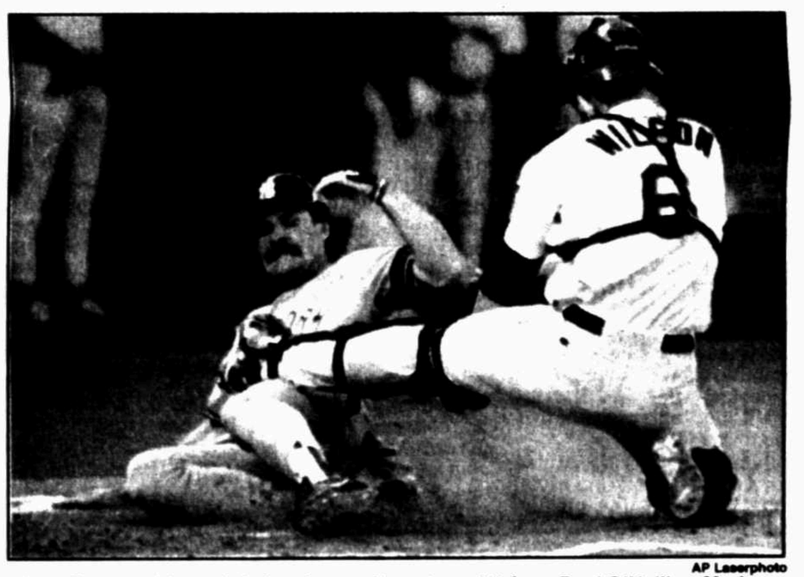

Martinez hit a tiebreaking grand slam in the eighth inning and drove in seven runs — the most ever in a postseason game — to lead the Mariners past the New York Yankees 11-8 Saturday night, sending their riveting AL playoff series to a decisive Game 5.

Martinez, the AL batting champion, homered twice. Ken Griffey Jr. set an AL playoff record with his fourth home run and Jay Buhner also connected for the Mariners, who rallied from an early five-run deficit before 57,180 cheering and chanting fans.

David Cone, who won the series opener for the Yankees, will face Andy Benes, who got a no-decision in the second game, in Game 5 Sunday night. With the three other playoff series already decided, it will be the first postseason game this October televised to the entire nation.

The Mariners staved off elimination for the third time this week, but they had to escape a bases-loaded jam in the ninth. New York scored twice, one on an RBI forceout by Wade Boggs, before Bernie Williams flied out to Griffey on the warning track in center with run-

Braves knock out Rockies

By Ed Shearer

ATLANTA — The Atlanta Braves, still trying to become baseball's best, are back in the NL championship series for the fourth straight time.

Fred McGriff homered twice and drove in five runs as Atlanta overcame another shaky playoff performance by Greg Maddux to beat the Colorado Rockies 10-4 Saturday night and win the best-of-5 series 3-1.

McGriff, battling a 3-for-14 slump, put the Braves ahead 4-3 with a two-run homer in the third, then added a solo homer in the fifth and a two-run single in the sixth.

Permian holds off Carter

By Stewart Doreen
Sports Writer

ODESSA — Even with nine turnovers in the first half, 158 yards in penalties, one ejection, the matchup between No. 2 Odessa Permian and No. 3 Dallas Carter definitely lived up to its billing with a dramatic ending.

However, Permian's 14-13 non-district win at Ratliff Stadium on Saturday was if nothing else...weird.

"I haven't been in a game played this strange and played this well," said Permian head coach Randy Mayes. "Turnovers are the only thing that kept me from being really happy. We didn't do a good job protecting the ball."

Permian, 5-0 for the season and 1-0 in District 4-5A, hung on, surviving a late score by Dallas Carter, 4-1 for the season, in the game's remaining seconds that made the score 14-13. The Cowboys' 32-yard pass from Demarco King to Chris Lewis with 18 seconds left put Carter one point behind. However, an unsportsmanlike conduct (celebration) penalty moved the ball back 15 yards to the 17-yard line for the would be go-ahead two-point conversion, which resulted in an incompleted pass.

"We need to show more discipline," said Carter head coach Freddie James, whose team had 115 yards in penalties. "We would have had the ball on the three-yard line but we have a player do that Indian dance. Odessa (Permian) showed a lot of discipline and we need to show more."

The game's dramatics played a backseat to the what was an error-prone first half. Permian, which started the game with a fumble on the opening kickoff return, proceeded to drop the ball on the carpet four more times in the half. What makes matters worse is that many of the turnovers came in Carter's half of the field, twice inside Carter's five-yard line.

Controlling what was a bigger Carter defense, Permian's blocking controlled the line and made the toss sweep seem to be ridiculously easy for Ja'Quay Wilburn, who took over the district's rushing lead this weekend. Wilburn, who had 148 yards on the game, used his speed and power to help keep the Carter defense at bay.

"We were moving the ball up and down the field," said Mayes. "We blocked well and did a great job up front."

The Permian defense shut down Carter's run early to help Permian win the field position war. More importantly, Permian put the pressure on Carter's starting quarterback Jamal Crisp to throw the ball well. That pressure put Permian points on the board in the second quarter.

On the quarter's first play, Carter faced a third and five on its six-yard line.

Martin overwhelms field to win Bumper to Bumper 300 Busch race

The Associated Press

CONCORD, N.C. — Mark Martin overwhelmed the field in winning the All Pro Bumper to Bumper 300 Busch Grand National stock car race at Charlotte Motor Speedway Saturday.

Martin, a regular in NASCAR's elite Winston Cup series and a part-time racer on the Busch circuit, earned his third Grand National victory of the season and the 20th of his career. He led 167 of the 200 laps on Charlotte's 1 1/2-mile oval, including the final 52.

The winner averaged 136.415 mph as he won $51,750. He now has won this race two of the last times.

"The car was just solid," Martin said.

Dale Jarrett, another Winston Cup star, led 23 laps and wound up second, about 10 car lengths behind, followed by Jeff Purvis, Jeff Fuller, who started 42nd in the 44-car field, and Mike McLaughlin.

■ Auto Racing Roundup

Both series point leader Johnny Benson and closest pursuer Chad Little were involved in separate crashes. Benson finished 26th and Little came back after spending 71 laps behind the walls for repairs to finish 34th and barely keep his title hopes alive.

Benson, who came into the race with a 220-point lead over Little, now leads by 244 with two races remaining. Benson can clinch the championship by finishing 15th or better at Rockingham Oct. 21, no matter what Little does.

There were five caution periods but no serious incidents and no injuries reported.

IMSA Exxon Series

NEW ORLEANS — Bill Auberlen captured his seventh IMSA Exxon Supreme GTS-2 pole of the year Saturday, averaging 70.373 mph in a Porsche 911 on the 1.43-mile street circuit around the Louisiana Superdome.

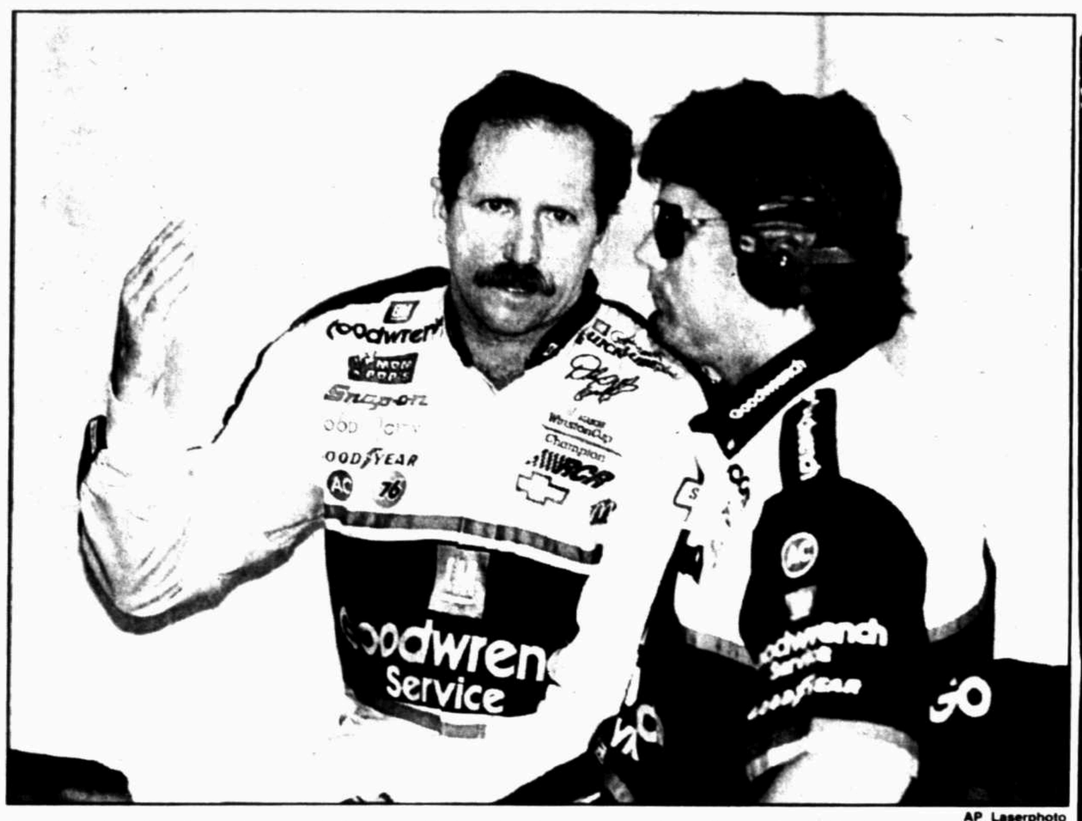

Auberlen switched to the Porsche owned by IMSA chief executive Charles Slater after the driver wrecked his own Mazda RX-7 during the morning session.

"It was interesting moving from a tube-frame car with a trans-axle that handles great, but with no power, to the Porsche. This car has loads of power, but it handles a lot differently."

John Paul Jr. qualified second for Sunday's 45-minute race with a mark of 70.344 mph in a BMW M3. David Donohue was third at 69.775 in another BMW M3.

Earnhardt concentrates on race though points title is unlikely

By Mike Harris
AP Motorsports Writer

CONCORD, N.C. — A record-setting eighth Winston Cup championship is almost out of reach for Dale Earnhardt going into the UAW-GM Quality 500 Sunday at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

But the 44-year-old Intimidator isn't worrying about odds. All he is thinking about is getting to the front of the 43-car field and doing what he has to do to keep alive his faint hopes of catching Jeff Gordon in the points race.

For only the second time in his career, Earnhardt had to use a provisional start to make the line-up for a Winston Cup race after failing to post a speed fast enough to qualify. He will start last.

"I've started back there before," Earnhardt said with grim determination. "We started 38th in this race last year and finished third. It'll just take a little for us to come to the front."

Earnhardt, who was 37th among the 48 drivers who made qualifying attempts Friday in the opening round of time trials, was among 20 drivers who tried again Saturday when positions 26 through 38 were determined.

The two-time defending series champion did improve, from 176.280 mph to 176.725, but it was not enough. Jimmy Hensley took the 38th starting position at 176.922.

"Some days you can run fast and some days you can't," said Earnhardt, who also was given a provisional at Michigan in 1992. "We've got a good car. It's not the car's fault that we didn't qualify. It's just a combination of things."

The first four provisional spots are available each race based on top 40 car-owner points. Earnhardt could have started 39th, but his car-owner, Richard Childress, chose to use the fifth provisional available only to former series champions, thereby allowing another entry, in this case Rich Bickle Jr., to make the lineup.

Gordon, who leads Earnhardt by 302 points with four races remaining on the 31-event schedule, will start third, behind pole-winner Ricky Rudd and top rookie Ricky Craven.

Ray Evernham, Gordon's crew chief, isn't particularly buoyed by Earnhardt's problems so far this season.

"We've got to make sure we don't get ourselves in trouble," Evernham said. "Earnhardt ain't having no problems. He'll be leading this race in 75 laps. All that's done is made him madder.

"He never qualifies good here, and he always gets up front. I wish he would have qualified up front. Then he'd take it easier on us tomorrow. All he's going to get is tougher."

As for Gordon, riding a string of 14 consecutive top-10 finishes, Evernham said, "If the car's good and we can lead the race, great. If not, that's fine, too."

For the first time, Gordon has a mathematical chance of clinching his first title in Sunday's race. If he comes out of the 500-mile event leading Earnhardt by 445 points, all he would have to do to win the championship is start each of the final three races.

To get that big a lead would take a combination of Gordon finishing among the top seven while Earnhardt finishes 41st or worst.

Another big story is Rudd's attempt for his first victory.

The pole-winner needs a first-place finish to extend his string of victories to 12 consecutive seasons.

Only Earnhardt, with wins in 14 straight years, has a better streak going.

UAW GM 500 Notebook

Former Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry will be the guest of former Washington Redskins coach Joe Gibbs and his sponsor for Sunday's UAW-GM Quality 500.

Gibbs, who is in his fourth season as a Winston Cup car owner, fields Chevrolet Monte Carlos for Bobby Labonte, winner of the May race at Charlotte Motor Speedway. The winner of last fall's race, Dale Jarrett, was driving the Interstate Batteries car at the time.

Since Gibbs came to stock car racing, his drivers have worn helmets with NFL colors and logos in every race. Jarrett was wearing a Cowboys helmet when he won both the 1993 Daytona 500 and last fall's Charlotte race.

MONEY TALKS: Three key crewmen have been lured away from Penske Racing South by wealthy Winston Cup car owner Felix Sabates for his Sabco Racing team.

Billy Woodruff will replace the already departed Barry Dodson as crew chief on Kyle Petty's car in 1996. David Evans will be Sabco's engine builder and Ronnie Phillips will build the team's cylinder heads.

All three will finish the season with the Penske team but reportedly are already on Sabco's payroll.

HERO HONORED: J.D. Gibbs, the 26-year-old son of Winston Cup car-owner Joe Gibbs, was honored Saturday night at nearby Concord Motor Speedway, where he regularly races late model stock cars.

The oldest of the elder Gibbs' two sons works as director of marketing for the Winston Cup team.

MHS netters rip Bronchos

The Midland High tennis team won a 13-5 decision over Odessa High in District 4-5A team tennis play Saturday to move to 2-2 in the league race.

MHS playoff hopes now ride on next week's meeting in Abilene with Abilene High. The Eagles have lost only one district match.

"I'm happy that we got the win over OHS, but we sure do need to play better against our next two opponents," said Nathan Lawrence, who is MHS No. 1 boys singles player.

Midland High 13, Odessa High 5

Boys Singles: Sheffield (OH) d. Schmude, 6-4, 6-4; Jennings (OH) d. Mitchell, 6-0, 6-0; Pechin (OH) d. Leach, 6-0, 6-0; Schmude (M) d. Cook, 6-0, 6-0; Van Stavern (M) d. Bolton, 6-0, 6-0.

Girls Singles: Hall (M) d. Cunningham, 6-4, 6-0; Hoover (M) d. Curtis, 6-0, 6-0; Eason (M) d. White, 6-0, 6-4; Cook (OH) d. Jones, 6-0, 6-0; Robinson (M) d. Dunagan, 6-4, 6-4; Martinez (M) d. Swanson, 6-0, 6-4.

Boys Doubles: Sheffield-Schmude (OH) d. Dan Hoover-Leach, 6-0, 6-0; Jennings-Pechin (OH) d. Mitchell-Cook, 6-0, 6-0; McDonald-Van Stavern (M) d. Dunagan-Eason, 6-0, 6-0.

Girls Doubles: Jennings-Hoover (OH) d. Curtis-White, 6-4, 6-0; Hall-Cook (OH) d. Curtis-Jones, 6-4, 6-4; Eason-Robinson (M) d. Dunagan-Swanson, 6-4, 6-4.

Lady Bulldogs fall to Cooper

ABILENE — Midland High's District 4-5A winning streak ended here Saturday with an 11-15, 15-8, 15-4 loss to league-leading Abilene Cooper.

The Lady Bulldogs (14-8 overall, 5-3 in district) had won five straight league matches after starting with two losses and were tied for second with Odessa High entering into the match. The loss sends them to third after Odessa beat San Angelo which falls to fourth. Cooper improved to 18-5 and 7-1.

"We played real good in the first game," said MHS coach Terri McCulloch. "But our serve receive was weak and that cost us the match. In Game One our block was awesome. But they adjusted and those two things more than anything else turned it around for them. Lady Cougars."

The MHS junior varsity (14-8, 5-3) fell in the earlier match, 15-4, 15-11.

Midland hosts last-place Odessa Permian on Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. The JV match is set for 6:15 p.m.

Midland Trinity romps, 60-12

MARATHON — The Midland Trinity Chargers rumbled to a 60-12 non-conference win over Marathon here Saturday afternoon with the 48-point rule taking effect with six minutes left in the game.

Trinity climbs to 3-2 with the win and travels to San Antonio next Saturday to face Sunset Brook Academy at 2 p.m.

The Chargers got five touchdowns from Brad Glassmire on runs of 4, 2, 50, 35 and 40 yards as Trinity rolled out 406 yards of offense while averaging 11 yards per play.

J.T. Burris had a TD and two extra points while Diablo Scott added a rushing TD. Kurt Whitehead caught a TD pass and Michael Sargent returned a kickoff 85 yards for a score. Richard McMullen also had an extra point.

Abell eighth now 4-0-1

Abell tumbled to 4-0-1 in the Midland-Odessa eighth grade football conference Saturday with a 34-12 win over Alamo as Colin McNutt scored three TDs on runs of 37, 44 and 41 yards.

Alamo scored twice on kick returns and Abell's Jerad Cauthren had two two-point conversions.

Mustangs sweep Amarillo teams

AMARILLO — Midland Christian quickly climbed to 2-0 in TAPPS district volleyball play Saturday with a sweep over Amarillo Alamo Catholic and Amarillo Christian.

The Mustangs defeated Alamo Catholic 7-15, 15-8, 15-7 and then came back with a quick 15-5, 15-1 win over AC.

MC will host Trinity in a key match Tuesday at 5 p.m.

BRAVES: In NL Championship Series

series at Cincinnati on Tuesday night, sending Tom Glavine against Pete Schourek. The Braves lost in the World Series in 1991 and 1992, then were eliminated by Philadelphia in the 1993 NL playoffs.

Maddux, whose regular-season record in three years with Atlanta is 55-18, hasn't been nearly as good in the postseason. He got the victory Saturday night despite giving up 10 hits and two homers in seven innings, improving his playoff record to 2-2 with a 6.62 ERA in six starts.

The Rockies, who made the playoffs in just their third year of existence, again couldn't overcome their shaky pitching.

Dante Bichette's three-run homer in the third inning gave Bret Saberhagen a 3-0 lead to work with, but the two-time Cy Young Award winner couldn't hold it for even a half-inning.

Marquis Grissom, who had five hits, and Mark Lemke singled in the bottom of the third and Chipper Jones drove them in with a double past left fielder Bichette, who tried to make a diving catch. McGriff then hit a 2-0 pitch over the left-field fence.

The Braves stretched their lead to 6-3 in the fourth. Ryan Klesko singled, Charlie O'Brien walked and Rafael Belliard was safe on a fielder's choice when second baseman Eric Young fielded his grounder and outran O'Brien to the bag. Young tried to turn a double play but threw wide of first, allowing Klesko to score and Belliard to reach second. Belliard later scored on Grissom's double.

Saberhagen, bothered by a sore right shoulder, gave up six runs and seven hits in four innings.

McGriff's fifth-inning homer made it 7-3, and Maddux, 19-2 in the regular season with a 1.63 ERA, gave up a solo homer in the sixth to Vinny Castilla, his third of the series.

Maddux struck out seven and walked none before leaving for a pinch-hitter in the seventh.

The Braves added three runs in the sixth with another two-out rally. Maddux singled, Grissom followed with his fourth hit of the game and Lemke hit an RBI double down the right-field line. After Jones was walked intentionally to load the bases, McGriff greeted reliever Mike Munoz with a two-run single to right.

Notes: Players from both teams raced to the field later in the seventh when Klesko pointed at Munoz and apparently said something after the Colorado pitcher threw two consecutive inside pitches to him. Order was quickly restored without incident. ... Atlanta is first team to play for the NL pennant four straight times since division play began in 1969. The only team to reach the league championship more times in a row was Oakland from 1971-75. ... The Braves got a scare in the second inning when right fielder David Justice went down in a heap at the plate after fouling a pitch off his right knee, but he was able to stay in the game. ... Both teams took the field for the fourth game with a starter out of the lineup because of injuries. Colorado centerfielder Ellis Burks missed his second straight start because of a mild concussion and bruised right shoulder while attempting to make a diving catch Wednesday night. Atlanta shortstop Jeff Blauser was out with a sore right ankle. ... There was a moment of silence before the game to mourn the death Saturday morning of Ed Holtz, general manager of the Braves' South Atlantic League farm at Macon. ... For the first time in NL playoff history, each of the first three games in the series were decided in the last at-bat, all by the visiting team. The last time three games were decided in the last at-bat was in the 1988 series between the Los Angeles Dodgers and New York Mets, those coming in Games 1, 3 and 4.

nels to second and third to end the game.

Don Mattingly had four hits for the Yankees. But the nine-time Gold Glove winner made two miscues that helped Seattle score 5-1 at home against New York this year.

Martinez, who batted .38, with seven homers and 20 RBIs against New York during the regular season, hit a three-run shot in the third inning. His grand slam off Jack Wetteland gave him the most RBIs ever in 69 postseason games. Bobby Richardson had six in the 1960 World Series and Reggie Jackson had six in 1977 NL playoffs.

Wetteland, the Yankees' closer, relieved to start the eighth with the score tied, and walked leadoff man Vince Coleman. Joey Cora followed with a bunt that Wetteland fielded and tried to nail Coleman rather than fielding for an out and Cora ran around the bag for a single.

Yankees manager Buck Showalter argued that Cora ran out of the baseline and came out of the dugout again when Smiley was hit by a pitch while trying to bunt.

That ended the duties for Wetteland, who had a 2.2 fastball to deep center field. The two-time AL Relief champion raised his playoff average to .800 with his third hit of the game and one out later, while the fans were still cheering, Buhner hit a drive that glanced off Williams' glove in center field and over the fence for a home run and a 3-0 lead.

Mike Stanley put an RBI single in the ninth off Bobby Ayala. Bill Risley, the third pitcher of the inning, closed with the bases loaded, but the Mariners ahead 11-7 and got the last two batters for a save.

Seattle relievers, who began the game with an 0-2 record and 7.24 ERA in the series, kept the Yankees quiet from the fourth through eighth innings. Paul O'Neill's two-out homer in the third chased Mariners starter Chris Bosio and made it 5-0.

The Mariners scored four times in the third, three on Martinez's homer, and tied it at 5 in the fifth when Mattingly made a wild throw that enabled a run to score.

Smiley set the AL playoff homer record with a solo shot in the sixth inning off Sterling Hitchcock for a 6-5 lead. Griffey passed George Brett and Jose Canseco, who also hit three homers in AL playoff series.

The Yankees came back in the eighth and tied it on a wild pitch by Norm Charlton, the eventual winning pitcher. Wetteland was the loser.

The loss marked only the second time this year that the Yankees have lost a game they led by five runs. They blew a 7-2 edge in Baltimore on June 20 and lost 8-7.

Notes: Mariners' ace Randy Johnson will be ready to pitch in relief in Game 5, manager Lou Piniella said before the game. Johnson won a one-game playoff against California on Monday for the AL West title, and beat the Yankees in Game 3 Friday night. ... Cora was spiked in the hand trying to break up a double play in the eighth inning and left the game. ... The switch-hitting Williams was the first hitter in major league postseason play to hit home runs from both sides of the plate in Friday night's game. ... Mike Blowers originally was scratched from the starting lineup because of stiffness after being hit in the back by a pitch from Jack McDowell on Friday. But Piniella changed his mind and put him back at third.

Home bittersweet home: Upsets rock Top 25

■ No. 4 Colorado, No. 7 Michigan and No. 12 Penn State lose on home fields.

The Associated Press

Home was hardly hospitable for a fistful of ranked college football teams on Saturday.

The day's biggest stunners came at Boulder, Colo., where No. 24 Kansas ripped No. 4 Colorado 40-24, and Ann Arbor, Mich., where No. 25 Northwestern upset No. 7 Michigan 19-13.

Earlier, No. 12 Penn State lost its second straight at home, bowing 28-25 to No. 5 Ohio State at Happy Valley, where times have turned decidedly unhappy lately.

Mark Williams riddled Colorado's defense for 299 yards passing and Kansas converted two fourth-quarter turnovers for touchdowns to upset the Buffaloes.

June Henley ran for 137 yards and two touchdowns in the Big Eight opener for the Jayhawks, who went to 5-0 for the first time since 1968. It was Kansas' first win over Colorado since 1984.

"It's only an upset if you think you're a lesser team," he said. "I told our kids we were going to win it."

Northwestern, which shocked Notre Dame in its season opener, went to 2-0 in the Big Ten by beating Michigan. It was the first time the Wildcats had beaten the Wolverines in 30 years and the first win for Northwestern at Ann Arbor since 1959.

Darnell Autry rushed for 103 yards on 26 carries, his sixth straight 100-yard game, and Sam Valenzisi kicked four field goals for Northwestern. Tim Biakabutuka rushed for a career-high 205 yards on 34 carries for Michigan (5-1, 1-1 Big Ten).

"This is a special group of kids," Northwestern coach Gary Barnett said. "It was just a great team win. It's a heck of a way to get to 4-1, beating Michigan and Notre Dame away. I dream about those things, but it's hard to pull those things off."

Meanwhile, defending Big Ten champion Penn State dropped into the league cellar, losing to Ohio State. The No. 5 Buckeyes had to rally in the fourth quarter, with Eddie George barreling in from the 6-yard line for the deciding touchdown with 1:42 to play. George, averaging 160 yards per game, gained 105 on 24 carries, and Bobby Hoying passed for 354 yards against the Nittany Lions, who had their 20-game home winning streak broken a week ago against Wisconsin.

No. 19 Stanford was at Arizona State in the late game. No. 2 Nebraska and No. 22 Wisconsin were idle.

No. 1 Florida St. 41, Miami 17

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Warrick Dunn ran for a career-high 184 yards and a touchdown and Danny Kanell threw three scoring passes as Florida State shook off a sluggish start and demolished longtime nemesis Miami.

The Seminoles (5-0) extended their unbeaten string to 12 straight since losing 34-20 last year at Miami. It was Florida State's largest victory margin over the Hurricanes since a 38-3 win in 1984 and just its third victory in their last 11 meetings. Miami (1-3) is off to its poorest start since an 0-4 beginning in 1975.

No. 3 Florida 28, No. 21 LSU 10

BATON ROUGE, LA — Fred Taylor ran for touchdowns on his only two carries and Florida shook off a slow start to beat LSU.

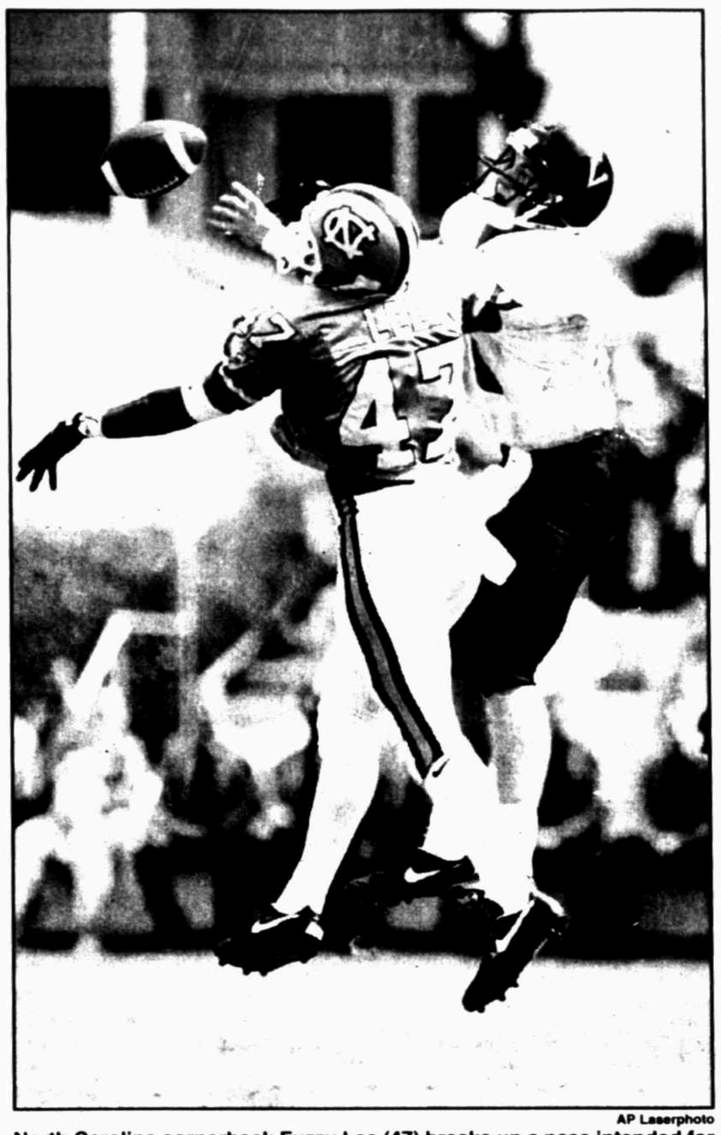

Florida's misfiring fun-and-gun offense, averaging 544 yards and 44 points a game, was held to 28 points for the second striaght week, but it was enough for the Gators (5-0, 4-0 SEC) to remain the only undefeated team in the Southeastern Conference.

Florida, which had just 321 yards total offense, did the most damage with three rushing touchdowns in a span of 5:05 to lead 21-0 early in the second quarter.

No. 5 USC 26, California 16

BERKELEY, Calif. — Kyle Wachholtz threw two touchdown passes and LaVale Woods ran for two scores as Southern California defeated California, but Trojans receiver Keyshawn Johnson had his record streak of 100-yard games snapped.

Johnson, who had at least 100 yards in catches in an NCAA-record 12 straight games, was held to five receptions for 57 yards, his lowest output since the opening game of last season.

North Carolina cornerback Fuzzy Lee (47) breaks up a pass intended for Virginia wide receiver Patrick Jeffers during the Tar Heels' 22-17 upset win over the ninth-ranked and previously undefeated Cavaliers.

Wachholtz had scoring passes of 19 yards to John Allred and 21 yards to Tyler Cashman and Woods ran for touchdowns of 4 and 19 yards as the Trojans (5-0, 3-0 Pac 10) overcame 140 yards in penalties.

North Carolina 22, No. 9 Virginia 17

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Leon Johnson raced 19 yards on a key fourth down play and scored on a 6-yard run with 6:13 left as North Carolina rallied to upset Virginia, ending the Cavaliers' five-game winning streak.

The Tar Heels (3-2, 1-1 Atlantic Coast Conference) picked up their first victory against a top 10 team since beating No. 8 Texas 26-10 in the 1982 Sun Bowl.

Johnson also completed two halfback passes, one setting up his 2-yard TD run and the other going 19 yards for a touchdown to Marcus Wall.

No. 10 Tennessee 49, No. 18 Arkansas 31

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Peyton Manning's precision work in a 16-play drive carved up Arkansas and helped Tennessee come back to beat the Razorbacks in a Southeastern Conference game.

Manning completed three third-down passes in the 77-yard drive that ended with Jay Graham's 1-yard dive, giving the Volunteers (5-1, 3-1 Southeastern Conference) a 35-24 lead in the third quarter.

No. 11 Auburn 48, Mississippi St. 20

AUBURN, Ala. — Patrick Nix was 23-of-28 and Stephen Davis rushed for 162 yards as Auburn unleashed a dizzying offensive display to beat Mississippi State.

In a game postponed from Thursday by Hurricane Opal, Auburn (4-1, 3-1 Southeastern Conference) blew easily through the Bulldogs' defense. The Tigers scored 31 unanswered points, giving coach Terry Bowden a chance to fiddle with his play book with No. 3 Florida the opponent next week.

No. 13 Kansas St. 30, Missouri 0

MANHATTAN, Kan. — Kansas State posted its third straight shutout and Eric Hickson ran for two touchdowns as the Wildcats beat Missouri in the Big Eight.

The Tigers (2-3, 0-1 Big Eight) became the first team to get inside the Kansas State 20 in the last three games following Shad Criss' second interception late in the third quarter. But a fourth-down pass from Brandon Corso to Lou Shepherd fell incomplete to preserve the K-State shutout.

Kansas State (5-0, 1-0) won its 10th straight regular season game and has allowed only six penetrations inside its 20 in five games.

No. 14 Oklahoma 39, Iowa St. 26

AMES, Iowa — Oklahoma shut down the nation's leading rusher and freshman Eric Moore threw a 90-yard pass for the go-ahead touchdown as the Sooners turned back Iowa State.

Moore's pass to P.J. Mills with 11:22 left matched the second-longest in Oklahoma history and gave the Sooners (4-1 overall, 1-1 Big Eight) a 30-26 lead. Oklahoma recovered a fumble by rushing leader Troy Davis on the ensuing kickoff, and six plays later, Moore hit Stephen Alexander from 13 yards for an insurance touchdown.

No. 23 Notre Dame 29, No. 15 Washington 21

SEATTLE — Allen Rossum returned an interception 76 yards for a touchdown inside the last minute to secure Notre Dame's victory over Washington.

The Huskies (3-2), trailing 22-21, were threatening late in the game. One play before Rossum's game-turning interception, Washington quarterback Damon Huard scrambled 27 yards to the Irish 33 with 44 seconds to play.

Notre Dame coach Lou Holtz, still recovering from spinal surgery and wearing a neck brace, followed the advice of doctors and watched the game from the press box. He walked the sidelines last week as Notre Dame was beaten 45-26 by No. 5 Ohio State and he complained of pain after the game.

No. 16 Alabama 27, N.C. State 11

TUSCALOOSA, Ala. — Alabama's Brian Burgdorf threw for two touchdowns and 196 yards as the Crimson Tide beat North Carolina State, the Wolfpack's fifth straight loss.

Dennis Riddle caught one of Burgdorf's scoring tosses, and he ran for a 6-yard touchdown on the way to a season-high 85 yards rushing on 18 carries. Riddle caught four passes for 38 yards.

Alabama (4-1) once again was besieged by penalties. The Tide was flagged 12 times for 91 yards just a week after it had 16 penalties against Georgia.

No. 17 Oregon 45, Pacific 7

EUGENE, Ore. — With former coach Rich Brooks watching after the field was dedicated in his name, 17th-ranked Oregon routed Pacific behind the play of Tony Graziani and Ricky Whittle.

Graziani passed for 222 yards and a touchdown and ran for another score. Whittle rushed for 130 yards in 19 carries, including a 13-yard touchdown run.

Longhorns bust open in second half to blast Rice

By Chip Brown
Associated Press Writer

AUSTIN — For a half, No. 20 Texas looked like the team that lost to Rice last year for the first time in 29 years.

Fortunately for the Longhorns, the offense made up for a poor tackling defense and Texas scored 24 unanswered points in the second half to beat Rice 37-13 Saturday.

"The good thing about football is there are two halves. Thank goodness for that because the first half we didn't play the way we should," Texas coach John Mackovic said.

"We missed so many tackles and gave them so many opportunities. Offensively we were sharp in the second half. We moved down the field and had very few miscues."

Ricky Williams ran for two touchdowns and James Brown threw for two as Texas (4-1, 2-0 Southwest Conference) avenged a bitter 19-17 loss to the Owls (1-3-1, 0-1) last year.

Texas got little help from its defense, which gave up 428 yards, including 275 on the ground. Rice had 253 yards in the first half as the Longhorns repeatedly let the Owls slip through their arms.

"We did a poor job of tackling," Mackovic said. "I don't know, we may have to wear pads every day next week and just tackle. We should not have allowed them all the yards we did."

The Longhorns had their hands full Saturday, surrendering a 13-3 lead as the Owls tied it at 13-all on a field goal with three seconds left in the half.

But Texas, which faces No. 14 Oklahoma next week, was successful throwing in the second half and wore down the tired Rice defense.

"They were going to score as many points on us as they could," Rice coach Ken Hatfield said. "That's all we read about in the paper and heard about for a year. I think it was a lot harder than they thought it would be."

The Longhorns went 80 yards on their first possession of the second half and scored on a 19-yard pass from Brown to Pat Fitzgerald on fourth-and-1.

Texas then mixed the pass and run and began rolling, going up 27-13 with 12:27 left in the game on a 1-yard touchdown run by Williams after needing only six plays to go 73 yards.

Texas made it 34-13 on a 2-yard TD run by Williams with 8:48 left after taking possession at the Rice 39. The six-play scoring drive was highlighted by a 22-yard pass from Brown to Mike Adams.

"They came back in the second half and kicked our butts," said Rice linebacker Larry Izzo, who had been averaging 13 stops per game. "They just ran it straight at us."

Brown, who was 13-of-25 for 211 yards without an interception, has thrown TD passes in seven straight regular season games. That breaks the school record of six set by Shea Morenz last year. His favorite target Saturday was Adams, who caught seven passes for 99 yards including a 6-yard TD toss in the second quarter.

Rice, which faces Texas Christian next week, was led by freshman Michael Perry, a converted defensive back who carried 11 times for 123 yards, including a run of 60 yards.

Quarterback Josh LaRocca was 13-of-22 for 153 yards and carried 15 times for 42 yards in the Owls' option offense.

Texas finished with 348 yards.

Phil Dawson connected on field goals of 36, 33 and 43 yards for Texas, while the Owls' Mike Ruff booted field goals of 24 and 25 yards.

Texas went up 13-3 on a scoring drive sustained by a roughing penalty on a 51-yard field goal attempt by Dawson. The penalty gave Texas a first down at the Rice 19, and five plays later, Brown threw 6 yards to the well-covered Adams, who made a diving catch in the left corner of the end zone.

Rice's only touchdown came on a bizarre run on a broken play with the Owls facing fourth-and-goal at the Texas 2.

LaRocca appeared lost on an option play and made a sloppy pitch to Keilone Gordon, who couldn't get a handle on the ball.

But Mike Gingrich picked up the loose ball near the 10 and outraced four Texas tacklers down the left sideline into the end zone, pulling the Owls within 13-10 with 5:42 left in the half.

Robinson gets win No. 400

New York Times News Service

GRAMBLING, La. — Grambling State University's Eddie Robinson became the first coach to win 400 football games here Saturday when the Tigers defeated Mississippi Valley, 42-6.

Robinson, 76, who worked in a Baton Rouge, La., feed mill for 25 cents an hour before becoming Grambling's head coach in 1941, increased his career record to 400-145-15. He received congratulatory phone calls from President Clinton and Louisiana Gov. Edwin Edwards.

"I'm just glad it's over with and we can start getting down to the business of winning a conference championship," Robinson said of his team, which is 3-2 overall and 3-0 in the Southwestern Athletic Conference. "I wish I could cut up all of these victories into 400 pieces and give them to all of the players and assistant coaches I've had. They are the ones who truly deserve the credit."

Coach Larry Dorsey of Valley (0-5, 0-3) said: "Our players gave it all they had. But we weren't only playing Grambling. We were going up against a legend."

to score. The Aggies, who had never lost back-to-back games under head coach R.C. Slocum, were trying to get in position for a score when Pullig threw his third interception of the day right to Thomas.

"I faked a blitz and Leeland stayed in (the backfield)," Thomas said. "He's my man, so I dropped off into coverage and read the quarterback's eyes. The ball almost slipped from my hands."

Thomas rumbled to the corner of the end zone and the Tech celebration started.

"Honest to goodness, the defense was coming off saying, 'We've got to get a turnover, we've got to get some points,'" Dykes said. "And by golly, they did."

Pullig threw 46 passes, but the last one was the killer.

"Obviously, I didn't see him (Thomas) or I wouldn't have thrown it," Pullig said. "They doubled down their two inside backers on the receiver and they usually don't do that."

Dykes, in his ninth year at Tech, refused to rank this win in terms of importance in his career in Lubbock.

"I can't remember last week hardly," Dykes said. "(But) I don't know that you could ask for anything better. Weren't they (A&M) ranked?"

Ranked, and three weeks ago given a chance to win the national title. But after losses to Colorado two weeks ago and now Tech, the Aggies may have to rethink their expectations.

"This is a bitter experience," Slocum said. "The disappointing thing is that we played so poorly. The defense played pretty well. But we struggled offensively."

Texas Tech contained the Aggies top offensive threat, running back Leeland McElroy, to 84 yards. They tackled Texas A&M's 12th leading rusher in the nation seven times behind the line of scrimmage and held him to minus one yard on five second-quarter carries.

"Leeland made 84 yards, which is good for another running back, but not for Leeland," Thomas said.

Tech concentrated on the run and hoped the Aggies couldn't pass well enough to win. But the Aggies did pass effectively in the first quarter, getting 66 yards of a 96-yard touchdown drive through the air to take a 7-0 early lead.

But Pullig never had quite the same accuracy after Thomas and Anthony Armour hit him on a pass play in the second quarter, sending him out of the game for one play. After that hit, Pullig went 14-for-36 with three interceptions.

It was a game of missed chances to both teams. The Aggies turned the ball over twice in Red Raider territory in the second half. Tech place kicker Tony Rogers missed two long field goals and had one blocked.

The Red Raiders had the clock run out on the first half on a drive that went to the Aggie 30-yard line.

But the play that could have changed the game's outcome involved an official's call. A&M returned a Red Raider fumble for an apparent touchdown in the fourth quarter, but the ball was ruled dead.

"I'm not going to discuss the officiating," Slocum said. "Whatever is called on game day remains the same anyway. You can't change it."

Tech tied the game on a 41-yard drive in the second quarter. It came after Pullig's first interception, this one by Tech's Robert Johnson. Quarterback Zebbie Lethridge threw 26 yards to freshman Donnie Hart for the score.

Davis burns Houston for 166 yards in TCU victory

By Denne H. Freeman
AP Sports Writer

FORT WORTH — Texas Christian had a simple game plan Saturday. Give the ball to Andre Davis. The Horned Frogs did and it paid off.

Davis scored four touchdowns and rushed for 166 yards as TCU opened Southwest Conference play with a 31-21 victory over the Houston Cougars, who lost their 10th consecutive game since last October.

"Davis played just a great game," said Houston coach Kim Helton. "Their offense was very effective."

Houston linebacker Mike Parker said, "Davis is real quick and hard to stop. He also has a good offensive line in front of him."

TCU coach Pat Sullivan said "Andre came up big today. He made some big, big plays out there."

Davis became the first player in TCU history to have 14 career games with 100 yards or more rushing. He carried 28 times as TCU improved its overall record to 3-1 while Houston dropped to 0-5. Both teams are 1-0 in the SWC.

"Houston was tough but we wore them down in the second half," Davis said.

Davis scored on a 2-yard pass from Max Knake and ran 20, 17, and 1 yards for touchdowns in the second half as the Frogs overpowered the Cougars. Davis set up the 17-yard scoring run with a 49-yard dash.

Houston's Chuck Clements threw touchdown passes of 33 and 25 yards to Larkay James and 16 yards to Charles West, but he couldn't offset Davis' offensive exploits.

Clements completed 35 of 48 passes for a career-high 401 yards with two interceptions.

Interference penalties against Houston's Thomathan Good and Dedric Mathis set up the Horned Frogs for their only first-half touchdown as they led 10-0 at halftime.

Thanks to the penalties, TCU went 72 yards in 11 plays and scored with just six seconds left in the half on a 2-yard touchdown pass from Knake to running Davis.

It was the 43rd touchdown pass for Knake in his career. Coupled with two rushing touchdowns, he broke Sammy Baugh's TCU record of accounting for 44 touchdowns.

Michael Reeder kicked a 36-yard field goal for TCU in the first quarter as the Frogs' offense struggled against the nation's 103rd ranked defense.

Dan Majerle, who helped the Phoenix Suns reach the NBA Finals two years ago, was traded to the Cleveland Cavaliers.

Suns deal Majerle to Cavs

FLAGSTAFF, Ariz. (AP) — The Phoenix Suns traded three-time All-Star Dan Majerle, second-year forward Antonio Lang and a first-round draft choice to Cleveland on Saturday for center John "Hot Rod" Williams.

The Suns said the Cavaliers could exercise the draft choice any time over the next three years.

"He (Williams) has been an integral part of this franchise for a long time," Cleveland coach Mike Fratello said. "I can't say enough about what he has done for this team and we wish him the best.

"In Majerle, we've acquired a three-time NBA All-Star and two-time second-team all-NBA defensive member. He also adds some perimeter shooting."

Williams, 6-foot-11 and 245 pounds, had been a power forward but played center for the Cavs last season after Brad Daugherty hurt his back. Williams, 33, averaged 12.6 points and 6.9 rebounds in 74 games last season.

"He's obviously not Patrick Ewing or Hakeem (Olajuwon), but he's a lot better than your average center," Suns coach Paul Westphal said. "He's a shot-blocker and a guy that fits in well, because you don't have to run a lot of plays for him, but he still scores. You have to guard him."

Joe Kleine, Danny Schayes and Wayman Tisdale played center for the Suns last year. Schayes' contract wasn't renewed at camp this year.

Majerle, 30, was a first-round draft choice (No. 14) in 1988.

He earned the nickname "Thunder" for his spectacular dunks and drives to the basket early in his career, but his role changed to a prolific 3-point shooter in recent seasons. He was No. 2 in 3-pointers made last season, with 199 to John Starks' record 217.

Lang, a second-round draft choice in 1994, got into just 12 games as a rookie because of injuries last year.

Lewis stops Morrison in sixth round

AP Boxing Writer

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. — Tommy Morrison knew all about Lennox Lewis' right-hand punching power before the fight began. Then he learned a painful lesson about Lewis' left hand.

Lewis closed Morrison's eye with a punishing left jab and knocked him down three times with left-hand punches in stopping him at 1:34 of the sixth round of a scheduled 12-round heavyweight bout before 8,369 fans Saturday night at the Convention Center.

Lewis didn't totally ignore his right hand, knocking Morrison down once with a right uppercut.

"All I needed was a good coach," said Lewis, praising trainer Emanuel Steward, who took over Lewis' training after he lost the WBC title and has been with him for three victories. "I'm a good student. I knew my skills would come out."

Lewis landed 92 of 198 left jabs thrown and connected with 62 of 101 power punches.

Morrison, who is known for his left hook but used it sparingly, landed 43 of 108 jabs and 31 of 61 power punches.

At the end of the fifth round, judges Frank Brunette and Eugene Grant each had Lewis ahead 49-44, while judge Al DeVito favored Lewis 50-43.

"I want Frank Bruno first and foremost," Lewis said of a fight with his fellow Briton who now holds the WBC title after outpointing Oliver McCall a month ago. It was McCall who took the championship from Lewis by stopping him in the second round Sept. 24, 1994.

Promoter Dan Duva contends the WBC has promised the second-ranked Lewis a fight against Bruno, who Lewis stopped in the seventh round of a title defense Oct. 1, 1993. However, boxing politics being what they are, it wouldn't be surprising to see Bruno make his first defense against No. 1-ranked Mike Tyson. Tyson and Bruno are promoted by Don King.

"He was tough, very tough," said the 26-year-old Morrison. "Trying to fight guys like that with that reach is tough, especially with one eye. I'm not used to fighting with one eye."

The end came after Morrison got up from a second knockdown in the sixth round. Referee Mills Lane looked at the wobbly Morrison and say, "No, that's enough."

Morrison boxed cautiously and well and might have had an edge in the first round. Them Lewis took charge in the second.

"I nullified his left hook," the 6-foot-4 3/4 Lewis said. "I got an arsenal filled with punches. The best of Lennox Lewis is yet to come. Put the right opponent in front of me and different things come out."

Lewis scored his first knockdown in the second round with a left hook to the head that also ripped a cut over Morrison's right eye. Lewis' jab then had the eye closed by the fifth round.

LEE: Lady Eagles overcome tragedy to win

ematically eliminating them from the playoff race, it certainly puts them against the wall with four matches left to play.

"I think, more than anything, the relaxation factor had to do with the way things came out," said Lee assistant coach Chan Langley. "Aleena (Smith) had just scored nine or 10 points from the serving line and it came too easy."

After holding on for a close win in the first game, Lee took a 10-2 lead in the second behind the booming serves of the junior specialist Smith. Her serves were so good that the Lady Eagles were only able to return one of the 10 and the Lady Rebels hitters got cold during the inactivity, Langley said.

"We didn't get to hit for the longest time and we kind of fell asleep, and anytime you do that, games can slip away," he added.

An Abilene hitting error by junior Tabatha Breeding and a serving ace by junior Allison Bradshaw pushed the Lee lead to 12-2.

But a passing error and a hitting error on the Lady Rebels' next two service games caused sideouts and kept the Lee drive stalled at 12.

Then Abilene took advantage of the cold Lady Rebel offensive attack — Lee committed five hitting errors and a setting error in the stretch — as the Lady Eagles rallied back to within 12-9. More Lee errors, due mostly to miscommunication, combined with a huge block by sophomore Candace Oliver of Lee senior Amber Willis gave Abilene a 13-12 lead.

Lee fought back to a 14-13 lead on two tough serves by senior Ida Molina that pushed the Abilene offense back and forced two hitting errors. A missed set for Lee, however, knotted the game again at 14-14.

Breeding got a kill for a 15-14 lead and the Lady Rebels were not able to return a tough serve by freshman Leah Galloway on game point.

In the third game, the rejuvenated Lady Eagles jumped out to a 12-3 lead and never looked back as they ended the day feeling as good as possible under the tragic circumstances.

"Our defense really picked up in the second game," said Morgan. "I was really pleased with their adjustment because defense has been one of our weaker points all season."

AHS had to adjust after the Lady Rebels pounded them in the first game with cross-court kills from Willis, who had four in the first game, Bradshaw with five, senior Kasey Wolters with four, and junior front-line specialist Vanessa Mosely, who had a career-high four.

"Their back row players were adjusting to the cross-court attack in the second game," said Langley, "and when that happened we were trying to get our hitters to go down the line but it just wasn't happening."

The Lady Rebel junior varsity almost let the same thing happen to them in the first match of the day as they let the Lady Eagles back into the game before winning 15-9, 13-15, 15-10 to improve to 13-6, 6-2. Lee had a 12-9 lead in the second before falling to the Abilene rally. But Sarah Buchanan with a strong serve and Tiffani Zachry at the net helped Lee to a 10-0 lead in the third. AHS rallied to within 11-9 but Mareesa Underwood and Kelly Kozlik led Lee to the win on the service line. Ritha Belizaire and Cassandra Love both had good games at the net for Lee.

Lee travels to second-place Odessa High on Tuesday for a 7:30 p.m. match. The junior varsity match begins at 6:15 p.m.

Detroit takes on Cleveland after much-needed off week

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

Last year, the Lions (1-3) beat Dallas on a Monday night, then crashed the next two weeks. Now, they had a week off to come down from the high of beating San Francisco and sat back and watched Cleveland (3-2) lose to Buffalo Monday night.

That week had to help the Lions. Wayne Fontes has a history of getting teams way up for one week, only to flatten out the next. It also had to help Scott Mitchell, whom the Lions think is finally starting to find himself after 1 1/2 seasons of being in and out of the lineup because of injuries.

Cleveland's Vinny Testaverde also has found himself. His problems in the loss to Buffalo were twofold: he couldn't finish off drives and his defense kept him from having the ball. But he's still up there in the quarterback ratings with the likes of Dan Marino, Steve Young and Aikman, a far cry from his Tampa Bay days.

San Diego (3-2) at Kansas City (4-1)

This game is more important for the Chargers more than the Chiefs, because they can't fall too far behind Kansas City and Oakland in what's become the league's strongest division, the AFC West.

The Chargers' Junior Seau probably will play despite an aching hamstring. If he does, it's unlikely Steve Bono will have another 76-yard touchdown run. Even with his injury, Seau could run him down.

The main improvement in Kansas City this season is the defense, which has switched to an attack mode under new coordinator Gunther Cunningham. Derrick Thomas has adjusted particularly well and got 2 1/2 of the seven sacks the Chiefs had at Arizona last week.

The Chargers got hurt last week by another attack defense. Pittsburgh, which intercepted Stan Humphries four times, returning two of them for touchdowns.

Denver (2-3) at New England (1-3)

The loser falls into a hole.

"This is probably the most exasperated I've been in 10 years in coaching," Bill Parcells said of his Patriots. "I just feel like the team is better than what we're doing, and I've just got to figure out a way to get it going."

One way might be getting Drew Bledsoe back at quarterback, although it was Scott Zolak who had the first TD pass this season by a New England quarterback in the 30-17 loss in Atlanta last Sunday.

Denver has John Elway, who could use Anthony Miller back to stretch defenses. In the Broncos' two losses at San Diego and Seattle, they've scored one touchdown and only 16 points and one touchdown, and that came with them trailing 24-3 in the fourth period last week.

Indianapolis (2-2) at Miami (4-0)

Don Shula's guys have outlasted San Francisco and Dallas to become the NFL's only unbeaten team, although they had to work hard last week at Cincinnati, against Shula's son, Dave. Marino, who threw for 450 yards last week, needs four completions to pass Fran Tarkenton for the most completions ever.

The Colts' Marshall Faulk had his breakout game of the season last Sunday, rushing for 177 yards as Indianapolis handed the Rams their first loss.

Seattle (2-2) at Oakland (4-1)

It may be too early to put Oakland in a class with Dallas, San Francisco and Miami, but the Raiders are close. They've scored 95 points in their last two games, albeit against Philadelphia and the Jets, and have the best points scored-to-allowed ratio in the NFL, plus-84.

"We played well, but we don't know how bad the Jets are," Tim Brown said, after the 47-10 victory at the Meadowlands Sunday night.

Are the Seahawks teasing their fans again by beating the Broncos or are they beginning to move up?

Wash. (2-3) at Philadelphia (2-3)

This pits Gus Frerotte against Rodney Peete, while millionaires Heath Shuler and Randall Cunningham watch.

Frerotte is creating a problem for Norv Turner. While Shuler nurses his injured shoulder, Frerotte continues to play well. He made only one mistake — an interception returned for a touchdown on a pass that shouldn't have been thrown — in the upset of the Cowboys last week.

The Eagles won 15-10 at winless New Orleans last week, but Ray Rhodes acknowledges he needs touchdowns more than five field goals to win most games.

Arizona (1-4) at N.Y. Giants (1-4)

Disenchantment with Buddy Ryan is beginning to set in in the desert, although he's not to blame for the injury that cost him Eric Swann. Still, the image of Steve Bono trotting 76 yards for a touchdown with no Cardinals within 20 yards may be close to the last straw.

The Giants have yet to put their offense together with their defense. Last week it was the defense that played well and the offense that didn't in a 20-6 loss in San Francisco. Rodney Hampton has a broken hand, so Tyrone Wheatley gets unveiled.

Cincinnati (2-3) at Tampa Bay (3-2)

These teams are improving in fits and starts. The Bucs are beating bad teams, which is better than losing to them, as they have in the past, and the Bengals have lost three straight but scared Miami last week as Jeff Blake and Carl Pickens continue to emerge as one of the NFL's better young passing tandems.

This is the first time Sam Wyche has faced the Bengals since being fired or quitting after the 1991 season. But there aren't many of his old Bengals left in Cincinnati, except Lee Johnson, Rod Jones, Bruce Kozerski and Harold Green.

N.Y. Jets (1-4) at Buffalo (3-1)

The Jets usually overachieve at Buffalo, winning there two of the past three years and coming close in 1993. But these Jets are more like an expansion team than the mediocre teams fielded by Bruce Coslet and Pete Carroll. Defense is supposed to be their strong point, but they've allowed opponents an average of nearly 30 points per game.

It may be too early to say the Bills are back, but their old guys — Jim Kelly, Thurman Thomas, Andre Reed and Bruce Smith — certainly played like young guys Monday night at Cleveland.

Will the short week hurt the old legs? They may be lucky to be playing the Jets.

Pitt. (3-2) at Jacksonville (1-4)

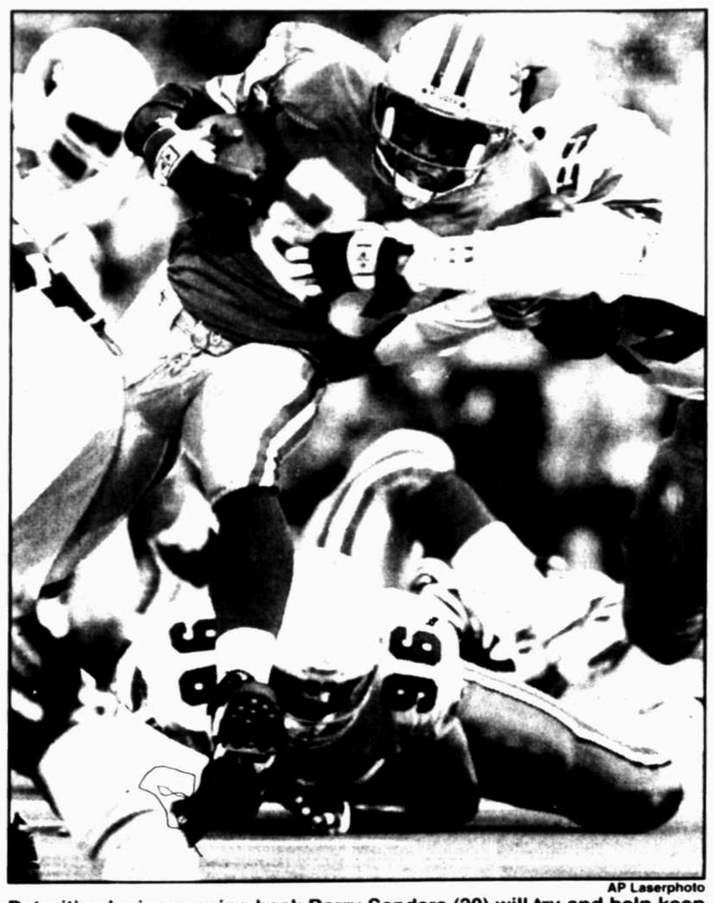

Jacksonville remains euphoric over its first win. But its offense isn't the kind that plays well against a takeaway defense, which is what the Steelers have. Mark Brunell was the winning quarterback last week, so he gets the start over Steve Beuerlein in Tom Coughlin's quarterback shuffle.

Until last week, Pittsburgh also had a giveaway offense, a problem that could be rectified with the possible return of Neil O'Donnell at quarterback. One problem: O'Donnell's still-broken pinky makes taking snaps difficult, something that could result in the ball on the ground too much.

Carolina (0-4) at Chicago (2-2)

Dom Capers apparently has decided he can't do any worse with Kerry Collins than with Frank Reich or Jack Trudeau. So Collins and his porous offensive line and non-existent running game get thrown to the Bears.

Chicago's problem, surprisingly, also has been running. Erik Kramer is having a solid year at quarterback, but Rashaan Salaam, the prize rookie, turned over the ball twice in the loss to the Rams two weeks ago.

Detroit's elusive running back Barry Sanders (20) will try and help keep the Lions in the playoff chase when they host the Browns today.

Oilers, Moon fallen on hard times since trade

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — It's hard to say who has fallen further since the Houston Oilers traded Warren Moon to the Minnesota Vikings in April 1994.

The Oilers reached the playoffs in each of Moon's last seven seasons, but they have lost 17 of their 21 games since his departure. That includes last week's loss to a previously winless expansion team, the Jacksonville Jaguars.

Moon, meanwhile, has had his once idyllic off-field reputation shredded. Once the NFL's Man of the Year for his charitable work, his image now is shaped by allegations he beat his wife, sexually harassed an ex-cheerleader and operates a financially irresponsible charity.

After spending 10 spectacular seasons in Houston, Moon will face his former team for the first time Sunday when the Oilers (2-3) visit the Vikings (2-2), who are coming off their bye week.

"It doesn't matter how many years Warren played in Houston," said Minnesota coach Dennis Green. "In the NFL now, this is a very common thing. Very few guys stay with the same team."

Minnesota safety Charles Mincy, an offseason acquisition from Kansas City, practiced against his former teammates in preseason and played against them in an exhibition game.

"It was a little weird," Mincy said. "But now things change so much, half the dudes I didn't even know. There's still some unity there, but a lot of the guys I just wasn't familiar with."

Moon restored excitement to a franchise that had languished since the late 1970s. Houston won just 10 games in the three seasons before Moon arrived, and only 13 in his first three years.

But the Oilers made the playoffs every year after that, finishing first in the AFC Central in 1991.

DALLAS: Jinx against Packers still intact

(From 1C)

Texas Stadium, two of them in the playoffs.

"For two years in a row, when it really counts, they've just dominated us," Packers general manager Ron Wolf said. "We have not gotten to the part where we say, 'What can we do to beat Dallas?' We're still trying to beat Minnesota, Chicago and Detroit, people of that nature. We're not in the same class with the Cowboys, and we don't pretend to be."

A loss to the Cowboys at Texas Stadium today would extend the Packers' misery. Ironically, the Packers' troubles against the Cowboys actually began with a victory.

On Dec. 18, 1988, the Packers defeated the Cardinals, 26-17, to finish the season 4-12, one game ahead of the Cowboys, who, in Tom Landry's last season as head coach, finished a league-worst 3-13. The Cowboys, therefore, gained the No.1 pick in the 1989 draft and selected quarterback Troy Aikman.

The Packers had the No.2 pick and chose offensive lineman Tony Mandarich. Had the Packers lost to the Cardinals, they would have "won" a tiebreaker with the Cowboys and had the No.1 pick.

Aikman has led the Cowboys to the playoffs the past four seasons, including two Super Bowl championships. Mandarich led the Packers on a fruitless, four-year hunt for his potential before he left football in 1992.

The Packers have since upgraded their talent. They have made the playoffs the past two seasons, the first time they have had back-to-back postseason appearances since winning Super Bowls I and II.

Green Bay quarterback Brett Favre has completed more passes (1,067) the past three years than any other NFL quarterback. With two touchdown passes today, he would become the first player in league history to accomplish that feat in 13 consecutive games.

The Packers' defense, with the addition of free-agent end Reggie White, has been among the league's best in recent years. It is No.1 this season in average total yards allowed per game (233.5).

But the Packers cannot seem to figure out the Cowboys, whether or not Dallas is playing with its first-string quarterback. The closest the Packers have come in the past two years is a 27-17 playoff loss.

Last season, backup quarterback Jason Garrett led the Cowboys to a come-from-behind 42-31 victory against the Packers on Thanksgiving Day.

A lovely lakeside look

Sarah Schuessler of Langston Realtors will be holding an open house this afternoon to show off this glamorous, five-bedroom home in north Greentree.

Overlooking a series of ornamental lakes with easy access to the Greentree golf course, this is a large, impressive family home that is listed for $405,000.

As one would expect from a home of this caliber there are a lot of very interesting features. Not only is the house set on impressively big, landscaped grounds, but the interior has been designed to maximize the internal space. The two story design allows for very high ceilings and a dramatic staircase leading onto the entry hall.

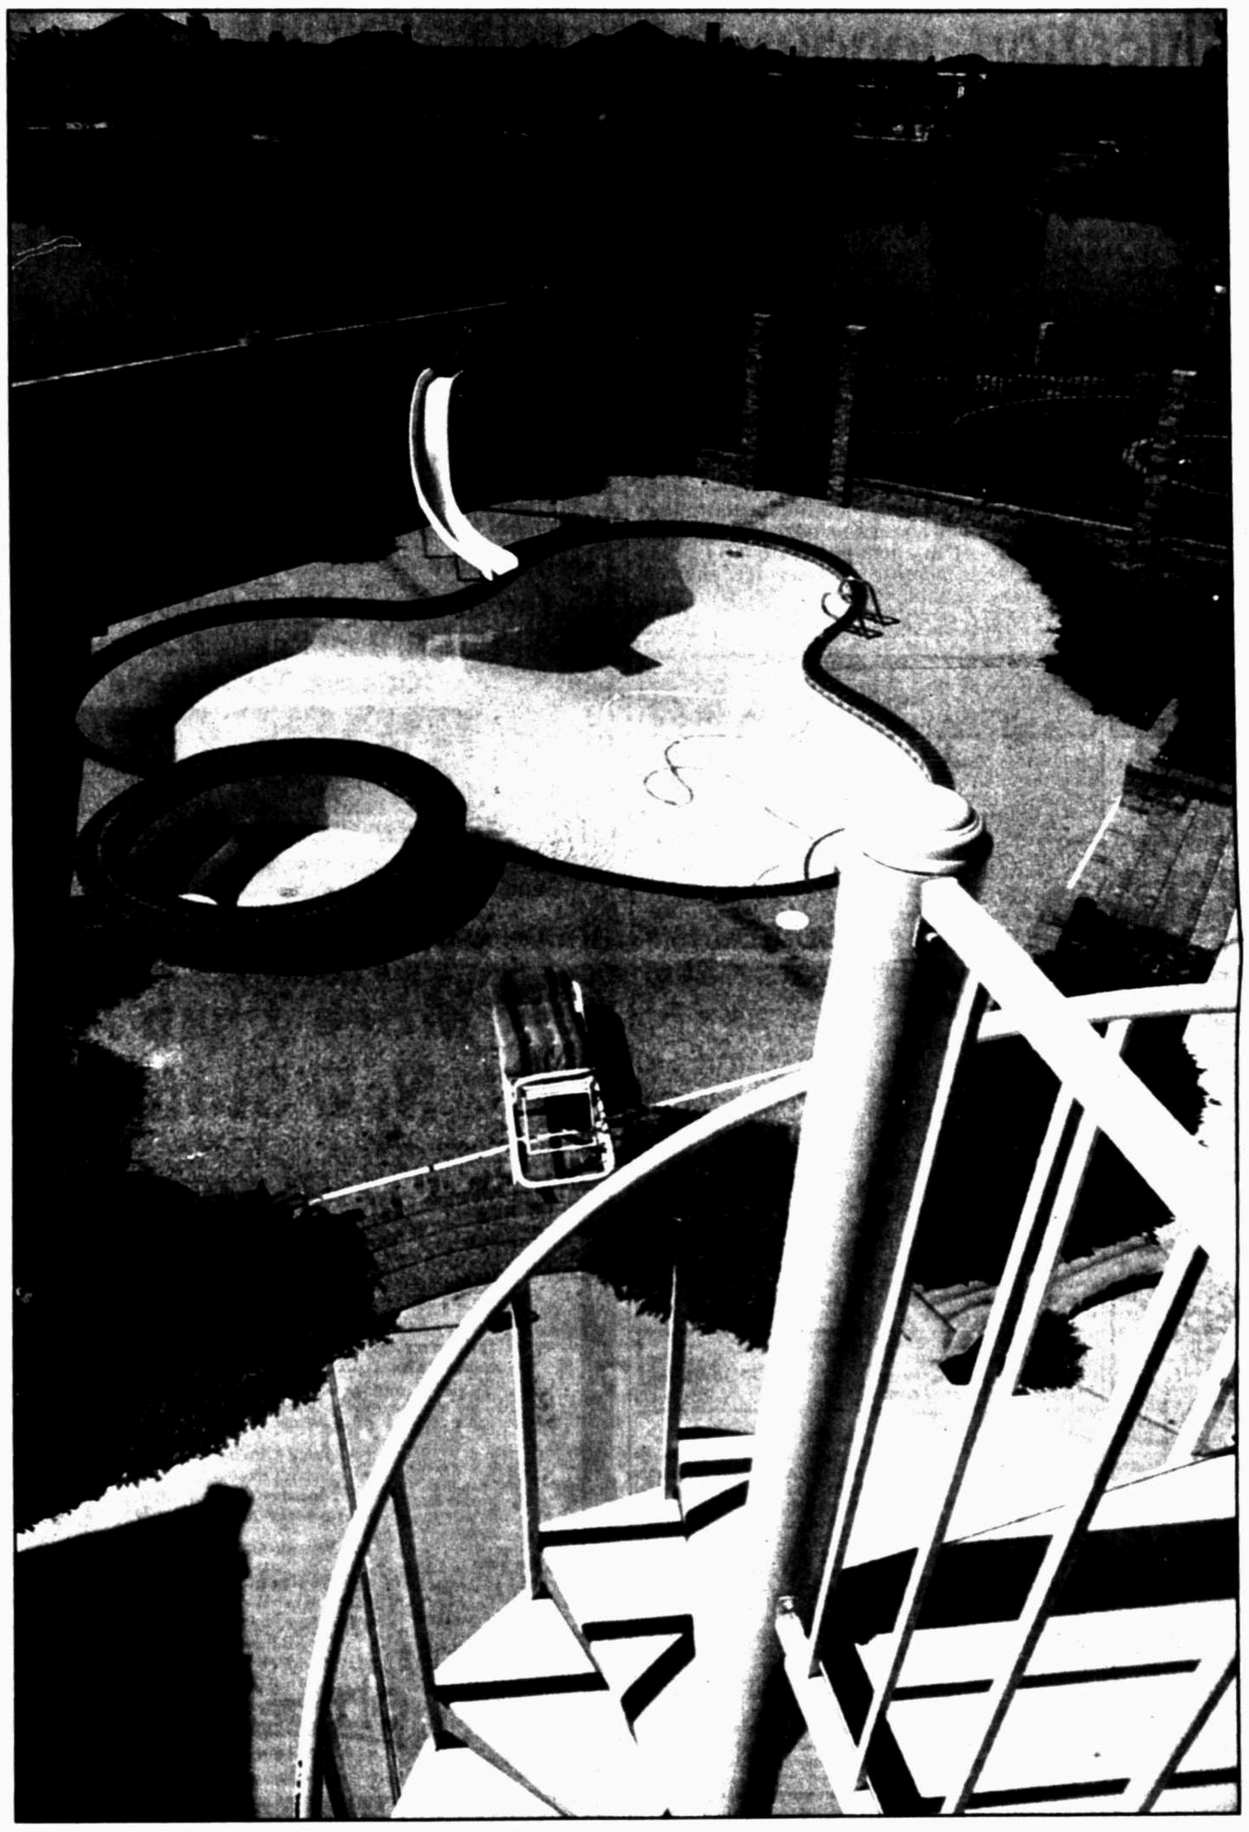

This wood floored foyer opens out onto the formal living and dining rooms which are oversized with sweeping ceilings and dramatic views over the patio, swimming pool and hot tub at the rear of the house. Other features of the formal front room include an impressive fireplace and stained bookshelves and cabinets.

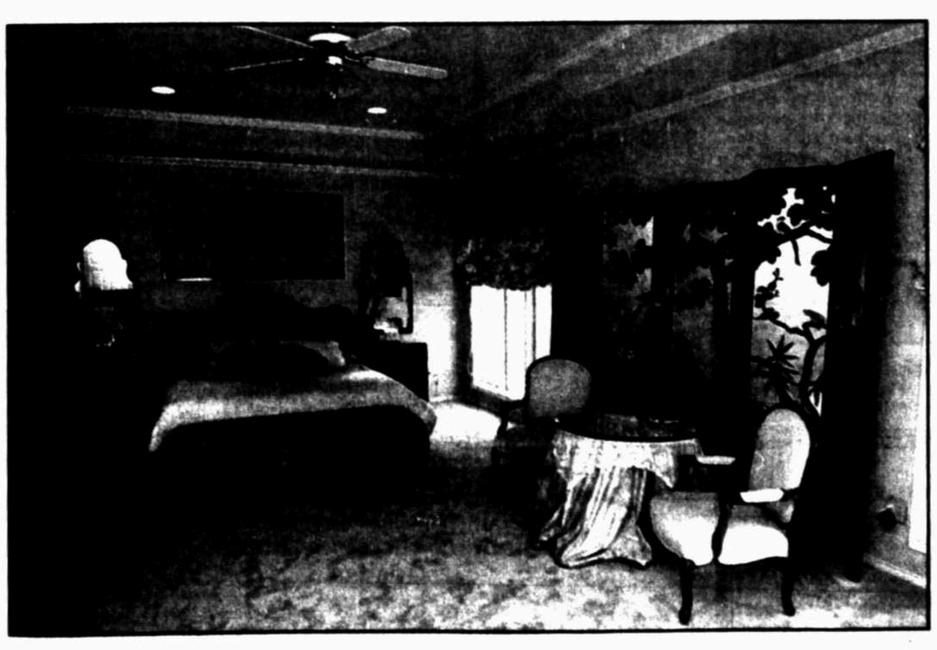

Wood is certainly a theme within this property and it is used extensively as paneling, trim and as an elegant base for built-in storage and work spaces. A good example of this is the ground floor study which is big enough for an executive desk and a large computer system.

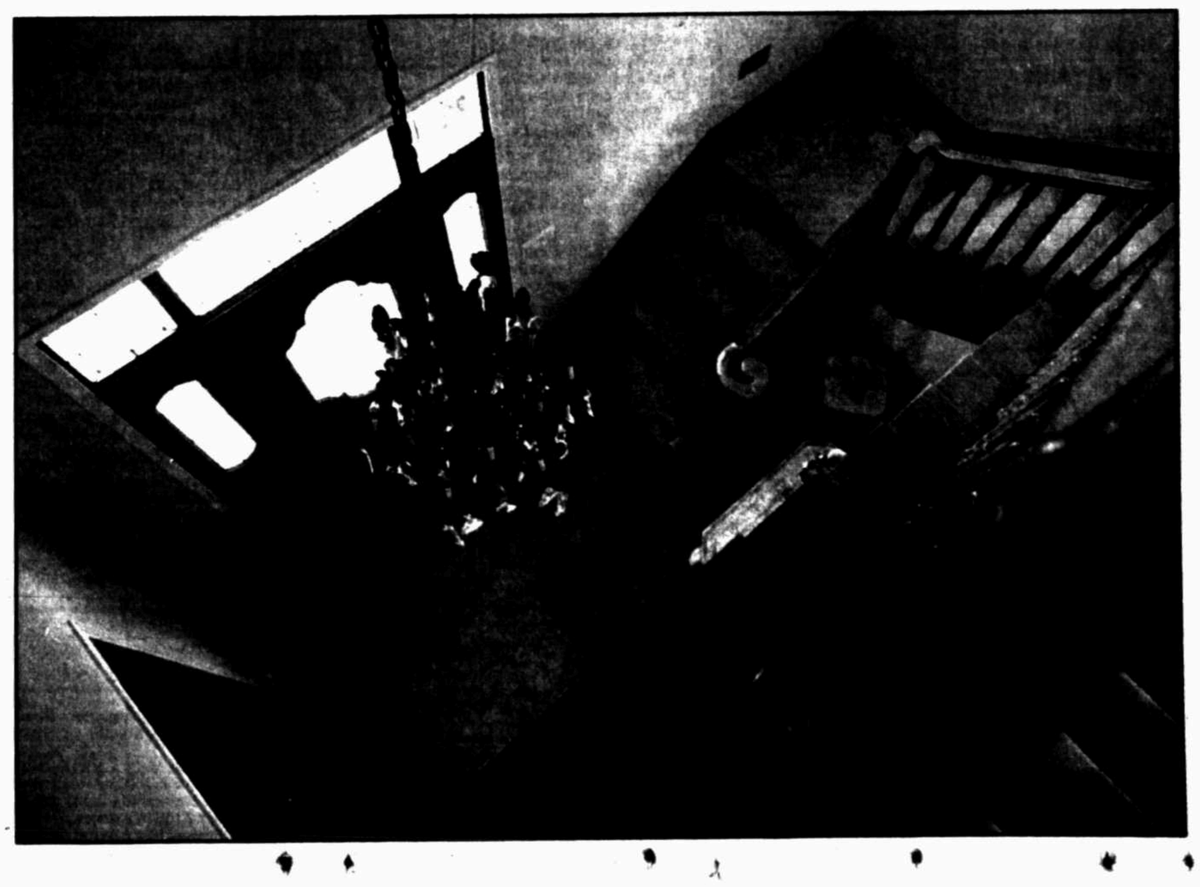

The kitchen is a fine example of how well designed and thought out the property is. Opening out onto the family room, the dining room and its own patio, it is full of practical touches such as built-in appliances, a walk-in pantry and masses of storage space. A separate laundry room provides extra space. While practical, the kitchen is also very attractive. Designer touches such as hand painted tiles on the island counter-top and on the backsplashes help to add an element of refinement.

The master suite, also opens out onto the rear patio and pool area and takes full advantage of the house's location. With its colossal closet, whirlpool tub and ceiling treatments this is a suite that is designed for pure escapism.

For more information about the property, or to arrange a private appointment to view, stop by the open house (1:30 -3:30 p.m.) or call Langston Realtors at 682-9495.

Home buying tips

Sutton

The purchase of a new home is one of the largest investments most people will ever make. Take the time to ensure that the house you consider today will fit your lifestyle and budget tomorrow.

If you have children, some things you might consider are sidewalks on nearby streets which will provide safe bicycle riding. Make sure that the sidewalk fronting the property is in good shape and find out if you will be legally liable for its upkeep. Also find out whether the front yard is bigger than the back yard: If it is, children may be tempted to play in the front, closer to the street.

Does the driveway slope away from the house? If it doesn't, water may end up flowing into the garage.

Is the roof in good condition? Are any of the shingles visibly curling? Find out how many layers of roofing there are. Many contractors for example will not lay a third roof without first removing the earlier ones. Check that gutters are in good shape with no visible cracks, holes or loose sections.

Ask yourself whether the rooms will feel too small once furnished and whether there is adequate storage space. If closet space is minimal, is there an attic to take up the slack?

Find out what kind of heating system is in pace and whether or not it is in good working condition. Make sure that the electricity supply is a 150-amp service or better. less will probably be inadequate for today's modern households. Are there enough outlets for your needs?

A realtor can help you with all these questions and help you find the home that is perfect for your family and your financial needs.

Certification announced

The Employee Relocation Council (ERC), a professional membership association of individuals concerned with domestic and international employee transfer, recently announced that Kay McDonald, Relocation Director with Century 21 Midtex Real Estate of Midland, has earned the Certified Relocation Professional (CRP) designation after successfully completing the CRP exam May 17 in Houston.

The CRP program was introduced in 1990 to formally recognize ERC members' knowledge about the entire relocation industry and requires awareness of residential real estate and appraising, corporate relocation policies and issues, relocation tax and legal issues, and family relocation issues. To date, 3,393 ERC members hold the designation, and must earn 30 recertification credits within each three-year period following certification to maintain their CRP.

The May 17 exam was administered to 564 candidates and Kay McDonald was one of 421 ERC members who were awarded the designation from this group. David Du Mez, chairman of ERC's 1995 Certification Review Board notes that, "This year we reached a landmark in the short history of the CRP program. Now in its fifth year, the CRP is held by 3,393 members and is now more widely recognized than ever in the relocation industry. Through this exceptional program, ERC has succeeded in raising the level of knowledge and professionalism among relocation practitioners and has enhanced the image of the relocation professional in both corporate and service environments."

NOW HIRING FOR OUR NEW KENT KWIK ON WADLEY & LOOP 250

KENT KWIK
CONVENIENCE STORES

How Does Your Job Stack Up Against Team Kent?

SALARY
Our minimum starting salary is $5/hour, Manager trainees can start at $300 a week or more (depending on experience.) We also give you a SIGNING BONUS of $200 ($100 for part-timers) at the completion of your first week!

SECURITY and FLEXIBILITY
Kent Kwik offers stable employment year-round. If you aren't getting enough hours (at least 40) at your current job, WE CAN GIVE THEM TO YOU! If you want to work part-time, we can work with you to tailor-make a schedule that meets your needs! Our stores are open 7 days a week, with many open 24 hours a day. We have some hours available for all shifts. Full-timers work a five day week!

BENEFITS
We offer medical, dental and life insurance to our full-time Team Members. We also have paid vacations, a sick pay plan, college tuition reimbursement ($300 a semester), several bonus plans, and a profit sharing plan. In addition, all Team Members are covered by a $150,000 accidental death life insurance policy!

CAREER OPPORTUNITIES
95% of our Managers started at the entry-level and received the training necessary to become successful at running a small business. We offer continual classroom education in customer service and personal leadership skills. You can tell the difference high-quality training makes when you come into one of our Kent Kwiks.

SO HOW DO WE MEASURE UP?
Where will you be one year from now if you stay with your present company? With Kent, the chances are very high that you could be running one of our locations, making $20,000 or more, plus bonuses! If all of this interests you, the first step is to pick up an application at any one of our Kent Kwiks, complete it, and bring it to our Midland area office (3314 No. Loop 250) between 8 A.M. and 3 P.M. Monday - Friday. If you live in Odessa, we take applications at 809 So. Crane Hwy. On Tuesdays at 9 A.M. and Saturdays at 10 A.M. You will then take a battery of tests and questionnaires which give us the information we need to determine if you have the customer service attitudes, math skills and work ethics required to be successful in our business. We also do criminal and credit background checks, and a drug test is required. Relocation within our operating areas may be available.

'Pilgrims' trek the road to Canterbury

Now, let us ride, and harketh what I say.
And with that word we riden forth our way,
And he began with a right merry cheer
His tale anon, and said as ye may hear.

--Geoffrey Chaucher, "Canterbury Tales."

A motley crew of monks, a fryar, a miller, convent-bound young ladies, knights, a squire, a boisterous Wife of Bath and her equally-scandalous sister recently set forth on merry "pilgrimages" down hallways at Midland High School.

"We are on our way to Canterbury to pray at the shrine of St. Thomas. We will entertain each other with tales along the way," promised the Wife of Bath (MHS English teacher Karan Young). "We are together in our sins. I have been married five times. Our monks know more of worldly pleasures then they do of the church, and our shady fryar here is know to pick pockets."

Despite the modern-day touches —— the fryar (senior Mykal Van Stavern) wore tennis shoes and a baseball cap along with his robe belted at the waist by a rope, and a knight sported white socks with his sandals -- the humble pilgrims brought a breath of Medieval society into MHS classrooms. Three of Ms. Young's classes participated in writing tales which were required "to entertain, yet have a moral." The students shared those tales with somewhat startled peers along their noble trek last week.

Two authentically-costumed monks, seniors Richard Vasquez and Stephen Carrasco, said they donned the robes which they usually wear as altar boys at their church. Richard read aloud the tale "The Hunters' Club," which he and Stephen wrote together.

"The Hunters' Club" featured a habitual criminal, womanizer, and wife beater "who had absolutely no remorse for his actions." The despicable character gets his comeuppance from two men who throw him into piranha and shark-infested waters. The wrongdoer is attacked by hundreds of the flesh-eating fish before he is engulfed in the jaws of a shark when "the rushing blood turned the river a deep red color, and the men felt that all the women that he had hurt were avenged."

Ever wary of pointing out the lesson in terms young adults can understand, Ms. Young admonished, "In other words, don't mess around with women."

Richard said coming up with the idea for the story wasn't difficult once they got into the spirit of seeking to entertain while imparting a lesson.

"I feel pretty comfortable," he said concerning his attire and his task of reading his tale to classes.

Ms. Young, an educator and local thespian, has also trod the boards at Cole Theatre, most recently in the production of "Harvey."

She is currently rehearsing as Sister Henderson (a nurse in a London hospital) in the Midland community theatre comedy "It Runs in the Family."

Her students, garbed in period costumes, used drama to capture the imaginations of their peers. "Now, comes the hard part," Ms. Young said. "Reading the Canterbury Tales and getting down to the nitty gritty (of classwork)."

But before the pilgrims' minds grow weary, another treat is in store. "We'll have a banquet of Midland High School student Sherri Roberts (right, foreground), adjucts Rachael Verrett's nun habit. The students participated in the "Canterbury Tales Trek."

...It would be a three-day trip, deep into the forests of Virginia. Michael was excited, for he had never been hunting before. Little did he know, his new friends would be the predators and he would be the prey.

... They awoke way before dawn and carried out their plan. While Michael slept soundly they rushed into his room and woke him up, screaming and hollering. They kicked him around and made sure he was awake. They said to him: "You have exactly three hours to get from here to the other side of the river before we come after you." They threw him outside and began timing. Of course, they knew that the river was filled with flesh-eating piranhas and was 30 feet deep at the center. Also, the only river great white shark lurked in those waters."

Tom Craddick named Texas Tech Distinguished Alumni recipient

From Staff Reports

LUBBOCK— When Texas Tech university presents its Distinguished Alumni awards, a Midlander will be among the four honorees this year.

Craddick

State Rep. Tom Craddick, R- Midland, is one of four Texas Tech-exes who will receive the award at a Nov. 10 reception.

"Thousands of Texas Tech alumni have gone on to make their individual marks in life. But only 111 Texas Tech-exes have been honored with Distinguished Alumni Awards," said Peggy Pearce, of the campus Ex-Students Association office.

Craddick and three other alumni — Dallas attorney R. Guy Carter, Assistant Judge Advocate General of the Army Brigadier General Walter B. Huffman, CEO and co-founder of Software Spectrum Judy Sims — will be honored at a 6:30 p.m. reception and 7 p.m. dinner Nov. 10 in the university's Merket Alumni Center. A slide show, reflecting the lives of each award recipient, will be the highlight of the event.

Alumni will walk onto the field at Jones Stadium, either prior to or during half-time at the Tech vs. Texas Christian University football game.

Craddick graduated from Tech in 1965 with a bachelor's of business administration degree. He graduated with a master's of business administration in 1966. The state representative said he fascinated with politics by age 13 and sought student body offices while attending junior high and high school. "I was living in Midland and started looking around at colleges in the area," Craddick said in a news release. "I was interested in politics and wanted to attend a West Texas school that would give me a chance to meet people in the area."

Craddick is the past director of the Midland Boys Club and a member and past director of both the Midland Jaycees and Midland Downtown Lions Club. He was elected state representative in 1968 and at 25 was the youngest person serving in that session in the Texas legislature. He was re-elected in 1970 and every two years since. Recently, he has served as chair of the House Ways and Means Committee, a member of the House Calendar Committee and as member of the State Affairs Committee.

The first Distinguished Alumni Awards ceremony was held in 1967. Since then nominees continue to be chosen on the basis of significant contributions to society at large either through their lives or their professions.

Tickets for the reception and dinner are $35. For reservations call (806) 742-3641.

Software takes nail-biting out of SATs

By William H. Honan
N.Y. Times News Service

The highly competitive SAT-preparation industry this fall is marketing several CD-ROMs designed to take the nail-biting out of that most dreaded rite of passage that most college-bound teenagers have to endure.

Tricked up with wacky cartoons, splashy color, abundant animation, movies, music and sly swipes at overbearing teachers, all of which are calculated to put prospective takers of the Scholastic Assessment Test at ease, the new CD-ROMs seem more like video games than anything with a serious purpose.

Nevertheless, they make sophisticated use of artificial-intelligence technology to diagnose a student's academic strengths and weaknesses and then create lessons and practice tests tailor-made to enhance test scores.

With the next SAT examination scheduled for Oct. 14, shops that sell the new software, at prices ranging from $35 to $60, are reporting a strong demand.

THE NEW CROP of CD-ROMs are usable by students who have a Windows or Macintosh personal computer with a CD-ROM drive. Some of them, like "Score Builder for the SAT and PSAT," are smarter than others.

"Score Builder" is produced by the Learning Co. of Fremont, Calif., and is based on the work of Gary Gruber, an SAT-preparation analyst who has published more than a dozen books on the subject.

It not only checks to see whether the student has answered a practice question correctly but also delves into the student's thinking, asking how the answer was arrived at.

As the student answers a series of SAT-style questions, the computer analyzes the responses, looking for patterns of errors.

A common one is forgetting the final, simple step of a complicated mathematics problem — say, "divide the result by 2."

If the correct answer is 4 and the student has answered 8, the computer notes this. If the same kind of mistake is repeated, the computer, in its evaluation, will identify the pattern and give the student a series of similar practice questions.

ANOTHER SOPHISTICATED program is "Your Personal Trainer for the SAT," made by Davidson & Associates of Torrance, Calif. It walks the student through a diagnostic test and then assigns practice drills in areas where the student has come up short, like the analogies that bedevil some students on the verbal part of the SAT.

"SAT Roadtrip 96," a CD-ROM produced by the Kaplan Educational Center in New York, offers an instructional program that not only addresses a student's academic weaknesses but also seeks to improve test-taking skills.

"The Kaplan CD-ROM figures out if you're taking too much time on each question, or habitually revising your answer from a right to a wrong answer or switching from a wrong to a right answer," said Melissa Mack, a Kaplan spokeswoman. "If you habitually switch from a right to a wrong answer, then it will tell you to trust your gut instinct more."

FOR THOSE who may find some of the test-preparation software overproduced, Cliff's "Studyware for the SAT I" is reassuringly matter-of-fact. The video parts are straightforwardly narrated by a test expert, Jerry Bobrow.

Then there is Princeton Review's "Inside the SAT," which, among other things, shows the student "how to get the right answers to algebra problems without doing algebra." This and other Princeton Review test-preparation products have been frequently criticized for helping students outsmart the test rather than master the subjects in which they are being tested.

But James Reynolds, Princeton Review's director of electronic publishing, defends the approach.

"I don't apologize for it a bit," he said, "I defend it aggressively. The SAT is not a good test. If it is asking questions that are vulnerable to prediction, it's not cheating for us to develop strategies to accomplish that," Reynolds said.

THE NEW practice disks are not designed as coaching aids for the SAT's still distant computer version, now being developed by the test's makers. Nor are they meant to substitute for in-person, after-school SAT preparation courses, which cost as much as $750.

Those courses are offered by some of the same companies that are now marketing the new CD-ROMs. Most of those companies earn at least 10 times as much from the courses as from selling the software, and so they have an obvious financial incentive to temper their enthusiasm for the new products.

"Teaching is best done one person to another," said Reynolds of Princeton Review. "It's more than a transfer of facts. The teacher watches the student nod, or he notices his eyes glaze over and adjusts what he's saying accordingly. It'll be decades before a computer can do that.

"On the other hand," he continued, "computers are better than a book. They're interactive. They can branch off and take you down a special road."

But Gruber said the new CD-ROMs signaled the very future of teaching. "This technology," he said, "is applied to SAT preparation today because that's where the market is. But there's no reason why in the future it won't be used to teach all the basic skills you need in high school. This is the wave of the future."

Story festival set

Midland County Library will offer a Fall Festival of storytelling 6-8 p.m. Oct. 26 on the second floor of the library.

Children are invited to dress in costumes portraying a character from a favorite story.

There is no admission charge and young children must be accompanied by an adult.

Seating is limited. The event will be offered on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Fifth-grade hero drives school bus

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A quick-thinking 10-year-old boy grabbed the wheel of a runaway school bus and stopped the vehicle after the driver collapsed from a stroke.

Classmates cheered Larry Champagne III at Bellerive School, where he attends fifth grade, chanting "Larry saved our lives" to principal Ken Russell.

The bus was carrying about 20 students down a highway en route to the suburban school Tuesday when Larry saw the driver slump and fall into the stairwell, authorities said.

He ran to the front of the bus, grabbed the wheel and hit the brake. The bus hit two guardrails and collided with a pickup truck before Larry got it under control. Police didn't know if the truck's driver was injured.

Five children suffered minor injuries. The driver, Ernestine Blackman, apparently suffered a stroke and was hospitalized in serious condition Wednesday.

Students told Russell the bus driver had in the past told them what to do in an emergency. And Larry said his grandfather had given him some driving tips.

"I'm proud our students were able to remain calm and take care of one another," Russell said. "I'm also proud that they listened to the instructions that the driver gave them and remembered those."

Grads gravitating to software

By Trip Gabriel
N.Y. Times News Service

A few years ago, Orion Letizi, an English major who graduated from the University of California at Berkeley, would probably have become a teacher, journalist or graduate student. But just three months after leaving behind Milton and the metaphysical poets, Letizi is up to his ears in computer software.

He has a job offering technical advice to customers of a company that sells access to the Internet. On his own time, he is learning computer programming. And with six other people, he is starting a service to distribute music on the Internet.

"Previous to my current experience, I really was at sea when it comes to computers," said Letizi, 23, who lives in San Francisco. "I just walked into it."

Across the country, a generation of college graduates with no technical training is streaming into the software business, drawn by the industry's image as a generator of personal fortunes and cultural excitement.

"There's no doubt that being a computer software company — people see that as the place to work right now," said Lisa Mars, the vice president of human resources at Computer Associates in Islandia, N.Y., the nation's second largest software company. Last spring, recruiters from Computer Associates, who visited more than 75 campuses nationwide, were besieged by applicants with majors ranging from economics to music composition to philosophy.

Call it the Netscape effect, after the company that this summer came up with one of the biggest opening days in Wall Street history when it offered shares to the public, making Marc L. Andreessen, its 24-year-old cofounder, worth $58 million overnight. Or perhaps the phenomenon can be credited to popular culture, which has glamorized computer programmers recently in movies ("The Net," starring Sandra Bullock), in novels ("Microserfs," by Douglas Coupland) and on television ("Dweebs," a new sitcom on CBS).

All this is a reminder that fads in careers are spurred not only by economic opportunity but also by deeper social and cultural currents. In the 1970s, many bright and ambitious graduates went into journalism, inspired by the Watergate reporting of Bob Woodward and Carl Bernstein of The Washington Post. In the 1980s, an era marked by preoccupation with wealth, many of the brightest graduates joined Wall Street.

THE POPULARITY of software in the mid-'90s "is an interesting coming-together of a business that's on the covers of all the business magazines and that's extremely hip and sexy," said Jeremy Ross, an executive at Byron Preiss Multimedia in New York. "You have kids coming out of school who see it as not only a hip thing to do, but also getting reinforcement from their parents that it's a smart business move."

Many are lured by the prospect of jobs in multimedia, that burgeoning market for on-line services, CD-ROM's and video games that has given a digital flavor to whole neighborhoods in San Francisco and New York.

Creating multimedia products, including displays on the highly popular World Wide Web, the graphical portion of the Internet, requires less programming skill than sheer creativity. Demand is rising for digitally saavy graphic artists, sound engineers, film makers, producers and journalists. The trend reflects a fundamental shift in the computer industry: What was primarily a business tool a few years ago is rapidly becoming a central technology for information and entertainment.

At New York University, applications for the Interactive Telecommunications Program — a kind of computers-for-poets master's degree — increased by a "phenomenal" amount for this fall's class of 85 students, said Red Burns, the director. "We had many hundreds of applicants."

Damion Clayton, 25, who left a career as a stockbroker to learn programming in the NYU program, said: "This is a huge opportunity; it's the dawning of a new era. If you're losing money in this business, you're an idiot."

Few smitten with software's Klondike Fever will ever get rich. Although tales of overnight fortunes like those made at Netscape become legend, computer technology evolves rapidly, leaving many start-up companies out of business.

Salaries in the industry are rising, but they are not comparable with those of corporate lawyers or investment bankers.

The median base salary for an entry-level programmer is $31,000, according to a survey by the Software Publishers Association, an industry trade group.

But many drawn to the field distinguish their motives from those of '80s-era graduates who went to Wall Street to make big money fast.

Echoing the utopianism of the 1960s that has long been intertwined with the ideology of the personal computer, they talk of software as a cultural revolution, akin to drugs and rock-and-roll.

EDUCATION IN BRIEF

SAN ANGELO — Bedford "Beep" Cain, III, has been named Angelo State University's first director of development. The 1969 ASU graduate most recently served as district manager for Texas Congressman Charles Stenholm.

As ASU development director Cain will be responsible for planning, coordinating and implementing a program of private and other types of support for the university. He will also be responsible for the development of special support areas, including volunteer groups, friends of the university, and alumni.

Are some of the nation's best and brightest college students attending the University of Texas of the Permian Basin?

If so, don't hesitate to nominate Permian Basin area students. USA Today is seeking top students for its 1996 All-USA College Academic Team.

The seventh annual All-USA team, to be announced in February, will honor 60 students as representatives of outstanding academic talent and leadership. Twenty students each will be named to the first, second and third teams.

First Team members win a weekend in Washington, D. C., and a $2,500 cash award.

Past first team members have been scientists, musicians, writers, artists, historians and innovators who brought change to their campuses and communities.

Nomination forms are in the mail to college presidents, deans, and others at four-year colleges. Individuals can request forms by calling (703) 558-5613 and leaving a message. Nominations may be submitted by Nov. 30.

A separate All-USA Academic Team for two-year colleges will be announced in April.

Inefficiency, not a lack of funds is what's crippling American schools, according to the report "Making Schools Work: Spending and Student Achievement," by Eric A. Hanushek, professor of economics and public policy at the University of Rochester and director of the W. Allen Wallis Institute of Political Economy.

His report, based on research originally conducted for the Washington D.C.-based Brookings Institution, was recently released.

The report said school policy makers should not ask " where new money for schools is to come from, but whether schools spend existing funds wisely."

It said per pupil spending has increased while student performance "has remained flat" in many schools.

The 28-page report or a two-page executive summary is available by sending a Fax to The Heartland Institute's research service at (510) 272-4915.

Follow the recorded message and have your fax machine number ready.

The report is also available on the Internet World Wide Web at http://www.heartland.org. at Heartland publications, Heartland Policy study.

Monopoly sets sail in electronic format

By Tom Abate
San Francisco Examiner

Would-be tycoons the world over will soon be able to buy, sell and trade "virtual" real estate on the Internet, as the popular Monopoly board game makes its debut in a new electronic format. Parker Brothers, which has sold over 160 million copies of Monopoly since it first appeared in 1935, showed off a CD-ROM version of the game at San Francisco's Icon Byte Bar & Grill.

The $40 CD-ROM, which can accommodate up to six players, contains a feature that lets people with Internet access dial up other players for long-distance games.

"We have simultaneous language and currency translations" into French and German, making transatlantic play possible even between strangers, Parker Brothers Vice President Tom Dusenberry said.

"We've even got a cheat option, although we're not promoting it," he said.

But at Wednesday's demonstration the Internet version of Monopoly seemed to lack the spontaneity and competitive thrill of play around the living room table.

And the Internet was being cantankerous, as usual. First it disconnected some of the remote players in New York and London. Then it gave game designer Louis Castle, of Westwood Studios in Las Vegas, a hard time when he tried to hook back up and resume play. Castle said he took Internet glitches into account when designing the remote play option.

"If someone gets disconnected, an artificial intelligence (AI) kicks in and takes over the game," he said. "You can make the AI as smart or as dumb as you want."

It's all a far cry from the board game that Charles Darrow of Germantown, Pa., invented in 1933 and began selling in 1935 during the depths of the Great Depression.

Monopoly has since been translated into 25 languages, and is sold in 45 countries around the world.

"Board games were very popular then and they remain popular," Parker Brothers spokeswoman Carol Steinkrauss said.

"Especially when times are not so good, families tend to stay inside and spend less money."

She said the CD-ROM and Internet versions of the game were attempts to update this perennial favorite.

The Windows 3.1 and Windows 95 versions of the game should be in stores by mid-October. A Macintosh version is expected later this year.

As for Parker Brothers, it promises that Monopoly is only the first of its venerable board games to be reborn in CD-ROM and Internet form.

"Risk is under development now," said Steinkrauss, promising that fans of this game of world conquest will soon be able to move armies on a truly global stage.

Dear Abby/6F

Let's face it, the world is moving faster than most of us would like it to. The work day is filled with crises, some major but mostly minor, that build up and build up, so that by the end of the day the word "hibernation" takes on a whole new meaning.

After-work wind-down time is very important in maintaining a mental balance for most employed people. And individuality is very evident in the ways some area residents choose to relax.

TEXT BY LINDA ANDERSON

DALE PALMER, general sales manager for FOX-24 TV (KPEJ), takes a musical turn when it's time to kick back.

"I play guitar," he said. "I've done it for years. It's just for myself, particularly if I'm kicked back. It's very calming for me.

"The key is," he laughed, "don't take requests. If you take requests, then it becomes a job."

This time of year — the fourth quarter — is the busiest for most people who work in sales, and Palmer is no exception, so his time to play guitar is more limited right now than it is rest of the year. But that doesn't prevent him from enjoying is favorite form of relaxation.

"I also play keyboard, but usually it's guitar," he said. "I got a guitar for Christmas ... when I was 10 years old. My parents got it for me. I taught myself (to play) with the book that came with it."

ROD BISHOP is the director of youth ministries for First United Methodist Church, one of the biggest and oldest congregations in Midland. He said the church has about 240 seventh- to 12-grade youth on the roll, with a group of about 60-80 regulars who attend the church's youth functions on Sunday nights. That makes Bishop's job a very busy one.

When he just wants "to hang out," he said, he spends time with his wife. Long-term relaxation might involve the couple going on vacation, maybe to see family. Hanging out at home involves watching movies on video on Friday and/or Saturday nights.

"On Thursday nights, we watch NBC from 7-10 p.m.," he said, adding that the couple are big fans of the series "ER."

For refreshment while kicking back and watching television, "we sit around and drink Coke," Bishop said. "Only I eat popcorn, which means I have to make it, which is why I don't have it very often," he laughed.

AS AN oil and gas attorney in the Permian Basin, Mary Lou Cassidy has one of the busiest jobs around. And as a volunteer for Midland Community Theatre and other local organizations, she doesn't have that much free time.

When she does have an evening free, "I generally go and veg out in front of the tube," Ms. Cassidy said. "It's not very exciting ... but that's what I do."

Her work at the theater is relaxing — "sometimes," she laughed. One of the parts she is best known for is the one-woman band who performs during the Olio at Summer Mummers. Her character, fashionably dressed in hair net, robe and bunny slippers, and carrying a cigarette (unlit, of course) in her mouth, performs percussion on an instrument that can only be described as unusual.

She said in spite of her fame for playing that part, she doesn't actually own a pair of fuzzy slippers, "after wearing them for so many years at Mummers." And, she added, "I don't have bunny slippers at home — they are props."

One thing she does enjoy when she isn't busy. "A nap is nice on weekends," Ms. Cassidy said.

BRUCE PARTAIN, communications and membership manager of Midland's Chamber of Commerce, leads a busy life. Not only does he keep regular working hours, but often he attends meetings and functions that are scheduled for after 5 p.m.

When he does get a chance to relax, he prefers to spend time with his family.

"I don't have a lot of unstructured time, but when I do, I try to do things mainly with my son and then relax," Partain said. "We love the outdoors and sports. We do a lot of things together that revolve around that."

Some of their favorite activities involve Boy Scouts and organized sports. "We started off in Indian Guides, which is a great program," he said.

Since then his son has grown old enough to be in Boy Scouts, and has learned a great deal from that program. For example, Partain said, "My son learned how to cook in Boy Scouts" which will help him take care of himself when he is older and out on his own. "He earned a merit badge" for cooking too.

Partain's wife, Linda Bond, has a busy schedule too, but when the whole family has a chance to spend time together, their methods of relaxation are simple. "In my family, we read a lot," he said, "and we do watch our share of television."

They also enjoy going to movies together because Partain's wife "is a real movie fan," he added.

A LOT OF people like to relax out on the golf course, swinging clubs at little dimpled balls. But golf professionals play the game for a living — what do they do to relax?

Randal Strickland is head golf pro at Master Golf and Training Center in Midland has played some Nike events and competes "on a professional level with other club professionals." He has what many other Midlanders would consider a dream job.

"That's because they don't realize we don't play as much as we would like," Strickland said.

"The golf profession out here is, we work real hard for about eight months out of the year and then for about four months don't do a lot" because of the weather, Strickland said. "that's when we catch up."

Playing golf is Strickland's profession, and although he does enjoy playing the game for fun, he also enjoys other forms of relaxation. "My wife and I like to go to movies or Midland Community Theatre," he said, "and do our share" of vegging out in front of the tube.

They also like to "travel out of Midland," he said. Their favorite places to visit include Ruidoso, N.M., and San Antonio.

And does he play golf in those two vacation spots? "No," he laughed, "my wife won't let me."

Midlanders travel to WWII unit's reunion

By Marilyn McKnight-Harrison

This past August, Midlander Bob Cain and his wife, Katrena, attended a reunion of Bob's World War II unit, the 509th Composite Bomb Group. This was the Army Air Force unit that dropped the two atomic bombs on Japan. The reunion was planned to coincide with the 50th anniversary date of the events.

McKnight-Harrison

The reunion started in Albuquerque and continued to the Trinity Site on Ground Zero, where the first atomic bomb was tested on July 16, 1945. It went on to the National Atomic Museum at Sandia Laboratories and to Los Alamos, where the bomb was built. The group also toured Kirtland Air Force Base, where they were saluted by a B-2 Stealth Bomber.

Social events included banquets commemorating the 50th anniversaries of both the Hiroshima and Nagasaki Missions.

Among the 174 members of the original bomb group present was Ret. Gen. Paul W. Tibbets, commander of the 509th Composite Group and pilot of the Enola Gay.

En route, the Cains visited in Santa Fe in the home of former Midlanders, Bob's cousin, Ann Killins, and her husband, Robert.

"SHHHHHHHHH! It's a Surprise." So began the invitations to a party honoring Nickie (Mrs. Les) Oppermann on a milestone 50th birthday.

Guests gathered at the home of Kay (Mrs. Tom) Brahaney a recent Friday afternoon for the fun affair. Hostesses with Kay were her mother, Ruth (Mrs. S.T.) Miller, and Diana Daugherty.

Multi-colored balloons added a festive touch, as friends of the honoree, a longtime employee at Midland High School, enjoyed birthday cake and other sweets and joined in singing "The Birthday Song." They were accompanied by Kay, former choir director at MHS, at the piano.

Coming in for the festivities was Nickie's daughter, Anna-Margaret (Mrs. Trey) Morris of Austin.

OUR CONGRATULATIONS TO Mary Elizabeth, (Mrs. Frank) Ittner, who has been a member of Delta Delta Delta sorority for 75 years. She recently was honored and presented a gift by the Midland Tri Delt Alumnae Chapter at a meeting in the home of Kathy (Mrs. David) Childress.

In addition, Mignon (Mrs. Bruce) Pearson and Don Marie (Mrs. William) McIntire, who pledged together at the University of Texas-Austin, received certificates and pins for 50-year memberships.

Marian (Mrs. Clifford) Matthews and Shirley (Mrs. Wilbur) Rocchio, who had been honored previously as 50-year members, also were recognized.

MORE RUSH NEWS — Word has been received that two additional Midland girls pledged college sororities during the recent fall rush.

Suzanne Riggs, daughter of Marsha and Mel Riggs, pledged Alpha Gamma Delta at Texas A&M University.

Sarah Innerarity, daughter of Paige and Ed Innerarity, is a new pledge of Delta Delta Delta at Jacksonville University in Jacksonville, Fla.

FIRST LADY OF TEXAS Laura Bush and a former hometown girl was the featured personality in the Dallas Morning News' Sunday High Profile section recently.

The former librarian is now the wife of our governor and mother of 13-year-old twin daughters, Barbara and Jenna. A native Midlander, Laura is the daughter of Jenna Welch and the late Harold Welch.

The article states that Laura's pet causes during her husband's stay in office are literacy, building up the Capitol's art collection and increasing awareness of a number of women's health issues.

SEEN AROUND TOWN: Actor Tommy Lee Jones was spotted eating alone recently at the Jumburrito Restaurant on North Lamesa Road.

The Academy-Award winning actor, who grew up in Midland and now lives on a ranch near San Saba, was in town to participate in Pony Up '95, a United Way fundraiser.

He often returns here to play polo with longtime friends.

'Longboard' skateboards are freestyling fun

By Brett Pauly
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — After 30 minutes of wheelies, cutbacks, noserides and knee drops on 100-degree pavement, bare-footed Tyler Trivette cooled his heels by squatting atop his skateboard.

The towheaded cruiser from Agoura Hills had plenty of room to chill. His homemade board of birch measures 5 feet, nearly matching his height when placed on its end.

"Yeah, it's a big board," the 14-year-old said. "But it has a lot more style — it's more stable, more relaxed than smaller boards. You can lose control on little boards going downhill."

UNTIL A recent comeback, longboard skateboards — with lengths of 34 inches and longer — were considered unhip novelties by the throngs of highly competitive tricksters who preferred shorter, more responsive planks.

Yet, more skateboarders — just like their brethren who ride the gnarly waves — have discovered the mystique of the retro longboards.

"It's a lot different than jumping and new-school skateboarding," said Garner Gerson, a 13-year-old Malibu longboarder. "We used to skate a lot on the little boards, but after a while it got boring. You either were a professional or you sucked. There was no middle ground."

Longboard surfers at heart, Gerson, Trivette and friends carve blacktops to hone their skills when the swells are flat.

"When you can't do everything (on a short skateboard), you get mad," said Trivette, whose contractor father, Roger, cashed in on the longboard craze by developing the 5-foot-long Old Log skateboard deck, which retails for $79 — wheels not included — at an Agoura surf shop.

"LONGBOARDING IS easier, but it's still harder to turn than our long surfboards," Trivette said. "So when you get back on a surfboard, it's a lot looser — a lot easier — to turn and walk to the nose."

Jeremy Collings of Agoura Hills, a longboarding colleague of the other youths, jumped into the craze by fashioning a 62-inch skateboard out of oak and mahogany in his seventh-grade wood-shop class.

"It's more classic, like longboard surfing," said the 13-year-old skater, who specializes in agile moves with only one foot planted on the plank. "You just cruise. You don't have to do the regular tricks; you can make up your own."

Made at home or manufactured by Alva, Think, Real, Powell, Topp's and other skateboard companies, fully assembled longboards sell for more than $150 each. Primarily shaped from wood (maple is a popular source), they are hot commodities at area surf, skate and ski shops.

"Longboards have been going through the roof," said David Cockrell, a salesman at Perfect Balance in Agoura Hills. "We've been ordering them as fast as we've been getting them for over a year. It's incredible. You go down south, to San Diego, and no kids are on shortboards anymore."

WHETHER THEY know it, the local longboarders who frequent the boardwalks of Santa Monica and Venice enjoy a long history.

Former three-time world-champion skateboarder Tony Alva of Santa Monica — now owner of the Alva company in San Marcos — explained that skateboards were developed decades ago as dry-land practice devices for surfers.

Surfboards were first adapted to roll on solid ground, Alva explained. And, like their wave-catching forefathers, those first skateboards were very long. The evolutionary process has seen shorter styles — as well as applications on snow — ever since, and now is coming full circle.

"It always comes back to basics," said Alva, whose company began producing long skateboards in late 1993. "The roots of skateboarding are based off the longboard designs, and guys want to have a wider stance because there is a direct relationship to cross-training for snowboarding, which has just boomed in the last couple of years."

BRIAN BRANNON, an editor at the San Francisco skateboarding magazine Thrasher who noticed the jump to extended planks last year, said the longboard has its pros and cons.

It's smoother to ride on downhill pitches because the trucks — wheel mounts — are further apart, which spreads out the wobbling and makes the board more stable, Brannon said. Since it is so solid, it makes a great mode of transportation.

Yet, the longboard is tougher to perform tricks on and is harder to turn. Because there is more surface area, riders must go faster, push harder and apply more torque to twist it around, Brannon explained. It's also more expensive than a shortboard.

But for simplicity, there's nothing better than a longboard.

"There's no gimmicks or extras involved. It's functional, not fashionable; and function is more important now than fashion," Alva said. "A lot of guys have a lots of boards in their quiver. The longboard is more stone age, a primitive model — functional and aesthetically pleasing.

"All it does is give you more dimension. You're missing part of the experience if you don't try a longboard."

WHILE CUSTOM longboards can be costly, less-expensive designs can be fashioned from water skis, said Brannon, whose curb-side cruiser is a 66-inch converted ski. He advises bargain hunters to scour garage sales for an old, sturdy water ski and offer $5 to take it off the owner's feet, er, hands.

Remove the shoe, turn the ski around so the nose is at the back and you're looking at the perfect longboard skate deck. Add trucks (Brannon says to keep em' small), wheels, bearings and the other essentials, and you've saved yourself at least $50.

"That was a trend in the 1970s, and people still do it," Brannon said.

Duke of Windsor's home-in-exile to open to public

By Christopher Mason
N.Y. Times News Service

'It's quite astonishing. It's uncanny because everything is intact. The duchess's clothes, shoes, hair pins and gloves are arranged just as they were when she died, as well as the duke's shoes, suits and mementos. It's like a time warp. Eerie, but rather fascinating.'

— Mark Simpson,
co-founder of Fox & Simpson travel company

The elegant home-in-exile of the duke and duchess of Windsor, an imposing stone villa in the Bois de Boulogne in Paris, will open its doors to the public for the first and only time on Dec. 10, the 59th anniversary of the duke's abdication.

Devotees of Windsor style need not expect lines around the block at 4 Route du Champ d'Entrainement, however. The visit will be limited to 20 people, and reservations are being accepted on a first-come, first-serve basis.

Mohamed al-Fayed, the Egyptian businessman who owns Harrods in London and the Ritz Hotel in Paris, leased the 19th-century mansion with 14 rooms from the City of Paris after the death of the duchess in 1986, with the intention of creating a private museum. But he has rarely allowed anyone to see it. Since then he has reportedly lavished $15 million on a painstaking restoration.

LAST WEEK Fayed granted permission for Fox & Simpson, a travel company based in London, to include the house on a week-long tour commemorating the duke's abdication.

So why has Fayed suddenly decided to welcome a few visitors? He wants the home all to himself; he has decided to move into the historic site in January.

"It's quite astonishing," said Mark Simpson, 37, who founded Fox & Simpson last year with his partner, Lucy Fox, daughter of the actor Edward Fox (and, coincidentally, a great-granddaughter of one of the duke of Windsor's early loves, Freda Dudley Ward). "It's a once-in-a-lifetime chance to see how the Windsors lived.

"It's uncanny because everything is intact. The duchess's clothes, shoes, hair pins and gloves are arranged just as they were when she died, as well as the duke's shoes, suits, and mementos. It's like a time warp. Eerie, but rather fascinating."

THE ONE-WEEK trip, which will include a tour of the Royal Library at Windsor Castle, begins on Dec. 6 and costs approximately $9,000.

Claridges, the hotel favored by the duke and duchess, will be the setting for a lecture given by Hugo Vickers, the royal historian whose book, "The Private World of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor," was published Wednesday in London by Harrods Publishing. The source of Vickers' book was the discovery of 10,000 photographs hidden under the mahogany lid of the duke of Windsor's bathtub in Paris.

"The duke liked showers and never took baths," Vickers said. "It was finally lifted in 1988 to reveal an extraordinary cache of pictures, from family snapshots to official portraits taken by Sir Cecil Beaton, Dorothy Wilding and Man Ray."

They had been hidden by members of the duchess's staff, Vickers said, "to prevent them from being seized by the legendary Maitre Blum, the duchess's indomitable lawyer, who has been blamed for a great deal of looting from the house."

DURING A protracted widowhood, the house and grounds fell into disrepair. C.Z. Guest recalled the atmosphere.

"I remember it as a house filled with exquisite flowers, laughter and a great sense of fun," she said. "She told me that she had tried to create a paradise for the duke to ease the burden of all those years in exile. But when I went back to see the duchess after the duke died I was shocked."

Fayed invited her back some years ago to see the restoration. "My God, it was beautiful," she recalled.

NOT EVERYONE remembers the Windsors with reverence.

"I've always thought it so odd that the French gave the Windsors that glorious house rent free," said Lady Caroline Blackwood, the author of "The Last of the Duchess" (Pantheon), a harrowing account of the duchess's declining years that was published this year. "My theory is that the French did it to spite the English."

SEEDS FOR THOUGHT

Lilies are welcome 'surprise'

By Deborah A. Benge-Frost

Benge-Frost

One indication of the nearing end of our long, hot summer is the emergence of several fall blooming perennials. Called "surprise lilies" by some because they seem to appear out of the ground with no evidence that a plant exists on that spot, these flowers include spider lilies (Lycoris radiata), Oxblood lilies (Rhodophiala bifida), and certain rainlilies (Zephyranthes spp.).

They arrive on the scene, adding color and interest to our tired, heat-weary gardens. These plants can often been seen in older landscapes year after year and slowly increase in numbers and flower production. These late summer/early fall bloomers are a beautiful sight to see.

All three plants have similar growth cycles. They produce most of their leaves during winter and spring, go dormant during the heat of summer, then flower in early fall.

They actually require a dormant period during the heat of summer when very little water is needed. Over-watering during this period may be harmful to these plants.

Spider lilies and oxblood lilies are especially sensitive to overwatering during this "baking period;" therefore, it is best to plant these tough and hardy plants where they are not in a bed that gets frequent watering.

One of the most common and elegant-looking bloomers is the spider lily, a novelty in the world of ornamental plants. Each spring the strap-shaped leaves appear, ripen, then die down in the heat of summer.

In September, usually after a soaking rain, clusters of red, pink, white or yellow flowers suddenly spring forth from the ground. Stems may reach 18 to 24 inches and are topped with spidery-like flowers with wavy-edged segments and long stamens.

The red form (Lycoris radiata) is much more common than the other species and is the easiest to grow. A pink form (L. squamigera) is sometimes called magic lily. It has flowers slightly larger and will increase over time making an attractive group. There are several other species that have similar form but different flower colors.

They are very easily grown and pure pleasure to see in late summer when everything else is rather worn and fatigued-looking.

Oxblood lilies are another introduction from Argentina. They were introduced by a German-Texas plantsman named Heinrich Oberweiter, an early colonist in central Texas.

Oxblood lilies appear to be equally well adapted to heavy clay or deep, sandy soils. The flowers resemble small red amaryllises and are borne several to a stem. Foliage is strap-like and emerges after flowering to flourish through the winter, and then it yellows and disappears by summer.

Among the large and diverse groups of plants known as rainlilies, the most common cultivated form is (Zephyranthes candida), the white rainlily, which is sometimes called "Autumn Crocus, only because of its tendency to bloom profusely in the fall. It somewhat resembles monkey grass and is useful as an edging plant in the garden during the fall, winter and spring when its foliage is most abundant and attractive.

The flowers have six petals and resemble crocus in shape and they are available in yellow and pink. Plant height is 5 to 8 inches tall and makes good rock garden plants. Flowers appear mostly in late summer and fall, usually beginning with the first autumn showers.

These flowers look great in a group making bold color statements. The red flowers combine well with purple liatris for a really spectacular combination. Left in place for several years, they will begin to make an attractive clump.

The spider lilies lend themselves to container growing as well as in the landscape. They can also be used in as ground cover.

Rainlilies, oxblood lilies and spider lilies are all propagated by dividing mature clumps of bulbs. This can be done successfully at any season, but transplanting just after summer is less likely to interrupt their bloom cycle.

Commercial availability is limited on all three of these plants, although it appears to be improving and specialty bulb catalogues and gardening friends are another source of these fine bulbs.

These are considered old-fashioned flowers by most. They are often seen in old landscapes and cemeteries, but what a gorgeous plant they are.

Due to their dependability, longevity and beauty, they should be used in more landscapes.

What's in a name? Plenty, experts advise

Hearst News Service

'Naming children is another arena where people feel they have to make a statement.'
— Cleveland Kent Evans, professor of psychology, Bellevue University

Corporations are more likely to consider Alma executive material than Cheryl. Boys tend to find Jennifer more attractive than Gertrude, and women with nicknames score lower in trustworthiness than those who use full names.

There's plenty in a name, Susan V. Seligson wrote in an article in a recent issue of Redbook, and your first name can influence your success at school, work and play.

"Our names have a significant impact on the impressions we make," said Albert Mehrabian, a professor of psychology at the University of California at Los Angeles and author of "The Name Game."

A century and a half ago, one out of every six girls in the country was named Mary. Now we can be named for anything.

"Naming children is another arena where people feel they have to make a statement," said Cleveland Kent Evans, a professor of psychology at Bellevue University in Nebraska.

A parent who names a child Prudence isn't betting on a giddy party girl, and often the prophecy in a name becomes self-fulfilling. A study by British psychologist Helen Petrie showed that girls with exceedingly feminine names such as Lucy and Rose did have more girlish personalities.

"It makes sense psychologically," Petrie said, "because parents who choose very feminine names for their daughters are probably more traditional and expect their girls to behave in a more feminine way."

Whatever parents' intentions, the names they choose trigger judgments by others. Mehrabian, who developed a system to rate names, found that Jacqueline, Katherine and Samantha weighed in highest for ambition, intelligence and creativity, while Brooke, Kim, Jessica and Tonya connoted health or popularity.

Lolly, Olive and Trixie scored low in the success category, while highest warmth ratings went to classic names such as Beth, Ann, Hope and Emma. Topping the list of cheerful names were Stacy, Mandy, Julie, Holly and DeeDee.

Comparing the relationship between women's names and corporate hiring, Alma, Doris and Mildred were considered executive material, one study revealed, while Heather, Jennifer, Cheryl and Dawn were not. The name stereotype starts in school. Grading identical essays, elementary school teachers gave students lower grades if their names seemed unattractive, unpopular or uncommon, an earlier study found.

If you'd like to see your daughter in the boardroom, said Linda Rosenkrantz and Pamela Redmond Satran, authors of "Beyond Jennifer and Jason," consider the "intellectual power names" - Kay, Louise, Ruth, Madeline and Vivian - or the trend-resistant, classy but not flashy Natalie, Nell, Faith, Alice, Julia, Martha, Tess, Claire and Virginia.

Evidence suggests certain names can boost sex appeal, at least initially. A psychologist at Tulane University; New Orleans, La., showed students' pictures of six women previously judged equally attractive.

When three of the women were given "undesirable" names such as Ethel, Harriet and Gertrude, and the others were dubbed Kathy, Jennifer and Christine, the "desirably" named women outranked the others by 158 votes to 39.

Nicknames can work against you. Mehrabian asked 280 men and women to rate the qualities associated with 398 names and their most common nicknames. He found that the nicknames - Katie instead of Katherine, for example - scored consistently lower on success and trustworthiness than given names.

"Given names are more suitable for business settings, where an image of success, intelligence and reliability is an asset," Mehrabian said.

Every year, tens of thousands of Americans officially change their names. While laws vary from state to state, it generally costs about $170 and takes a few weeks to make the change legal.

LIFESTYLE POLICIES

Information for Sunday pages must be in the Lifestyle Department office by 5 p.m. the preceding Monday.

ANNIVERSARIES

Couple celebrates 50th anniversary

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. — Former Midlanders Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Coppedge of Tijeras were guests of honor at a reception Sept. 30 at First Baptist Church Tijeras in Albuquerque and a family dinner afterwards in celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary. Hosts were their children and grandchildren.

Coppedge and the former Earnestene Bigham were married Oct. 7, 1945, in Medford, Ore. They have four children — Mike Coppedge of Albuquerque; Teresa Almand of Midland, Texas; Steve Coppedge of Tahlequah, Okla., and the late Judy Whittemore — as well as nine grandchildren.

Coppedge served as an electrician's mate on the USS Monpellier in World War II. The couple lived in Hobbs, N.M., in 1947, where Coppedge went to work in the oilfield. In 1956 he went to work for Christensen Diamond Products, and in 1968 the family moved to Midland, where Coppedge worked in the district office. He was employed with Christensen for 27 years and was district manager in 1983. Mrs. Coppedge is a housewife and was a member of Epsilon Sigma Alpha for 18 years in Hobbs and Midland.

Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Coppedge

They are members of Taylor Memorial Baptist Church in Hobbs, Fannin Baptist Church and Crestview Baptist Church in Midland, and First Baptist Tijeras in Albuquerque.

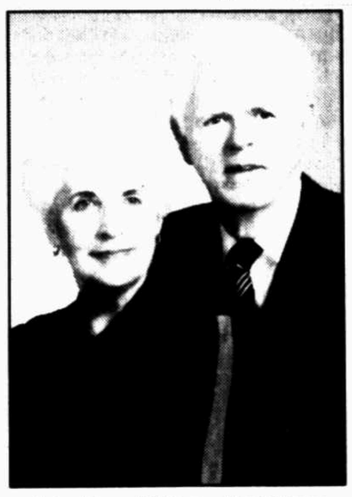

Armstrongs honored with reception

John F. (Jack) and Peggy Armstrong of Midland celebrated their golden wedding anniversary with an afternoon reception Saturday at the Petroleum Club. Hosts were their children. Other family gatherings are planned throughout the weekend.

Armstrong and the former Peggy Farrior were married Oct. 6, 1945, at Central Presbyterian Church in Chattanooga, Tenn. They have four children — Anne Churchill of League City, Kathy Alexander of Katy, Emily Scott of Midland and John Armstrong Jr. of Jackson, Miss. — as well as 11 grandchildren.

The couple, who met when Armstrong was serving in the Army Air Corps, moved to Altamont, Ill., in 1947 after Armstrong graduated from Vanderbilt University. They lived in Shreveport, La.; Robinson, Ill., and Dallas before moving to Midland in 1966.

Armstrong has been employed with Permian Enterprises since the couple moved to Midland, except for two years — 1979-80 — when they lived in The Woodlands. Mrs. Armstrong is a housewife and volunteer in church work and the hospital auxiliary.

John F. and Peggy Armstrong

They are members of First Presbyterian Church.

Start half-time recipe before game

Associated Press

When thinking football fare for at-home fans, select recipes that allow you to do most of the cooking and chopping before the game. "Halftime" stir-fry is a recipe that can be literally thrown together at halftime.

HALFTIME STIR-FRY

1 cup pineapple-orange juice
¼ cup teriyaki sauce
1 tablespoon dark sesame oil
1 tablespoon white-wine vinegar
1 tablespoon cornstarch
2 teaspoons fresh grated gingerroot
1 clove garlic, minced
1 teaspoon fresh grated lemon peel
1½ pounds boneless, skinless chicken breasts, cut into 1-inch pieces
1 tablespoon vegetable oil
3 cups chopped or julienned fresh vegetables, such as snow peas, carrots, celery, broccoli, red or green bell pepper
6 cups cooked rice, cooked in chicken broth and chilled
1 cup cashews
½ cup thinly sliced green onions

Combine juice, teriyaki sauce, sesame oil, vinegar, cornstarch, gingerroot, garlic and lemon peel in a large bowl; add chicken, cover and marinate in refrigerator for one hour or overnight.

Drain chicken, reserving marinade.

Heat oil in a large wok over medium-high heat until hot. Add chicken; stir-fry 7 to 10 minutes or until chicken is brown and thoroughly cooked. Remove chicken, set aside.

Add vegetables, cook 3 to 5 minutes or until crisp-tender. Add rice, reserved chicken, cashews and green onions. Stir reserved marinade; pour over mixture. Cook and stir 3 to 4 minutes or until mixture thickens and is thoroughly heated. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Fashions fit for young not always suitable for mature

By Sheila Taylor Wells
N.Y. Times News Service

Every month I see fashions I would never wear in fashion magazines I swear I'm never going to buy again. What happens is I fall for the cover promos that say something like, "At last! Real clothes you'll really live in!" So, against my better judgment, I go ahead and buy the magazine that turns out to be 250 pages of clothes that do not look in the least like real clothes that I'll really live in.

That holds true even during years such as this, when the fashion press says clothes are "pretty" again. Well, pretty they may be, but they still look like costumes by the time they appear in the spreads with the skirts hiked up 14 inches above the knees and paired with go-go boots.

I simply don't like clothes that call attention to oneself. I used to, but no more, and it isn't that I've grown more modest, but alas, merely older, and no longer as cute as a bug's ear. Young women that cute don't mind the attention; they thrive on it, and who can blame them? I recently encountered three such bubbly creatures on a plane. They sat way up front and were so full of giggles and loud Valley Girlspeak that I grew cross before we even left the runway.

Do you have such moments, when anyone young, cute and having a good time must be doing something of which you disapprove mightily, if you only knew what it was? Oh, please. Say you do, say you do. I hate to think I'm cross by nature. It's those magazines; they bring out the worst in me, and I'm helpless in their hold. No wonder teenagers have trouble finding a positive self-image. I'm an adult who usually considers herself mature, confident and even a bit wise on isolated, selected occasions, yet whenever I open Vogue, I become a bundle of my own insecurities.

Earlier that day, the day of the flying young pretties, a gang of fleshy, ill-groomed travelers drew all eyes by wearing tank tops and gimme caps that said "Believe in Jesus or burn in hell" (that one set upon a background of bright orange flames) and "I work out at the gym of Jesus." They must think the message outshines the messengers, rather than the latter deflecting the former. Why else would they want everyone looking at them, while others, far more sightly, are uneasy in the midst of even an adoring public?

Last week, a friend married in a lovely, traditional wedding, a few days prior to which she remarked that although she was looking forward to the big day, she was afraid everyone would look at her.

Guess what? Everyone did indeed look at her. It's simply hard not to stare when you're sitting there in church, and a young woman in a beautiful long white dress with a long train and veil passes right there in front of you. One doesn't naturally avert one's eyes to such a sight, gazing instead at the minister's front or the organist's back.

"She should have dressed one of the bridesmaids in a wedding dress as a decoy," another friend suggested after the fact. Then, at the last minute, the real bride could have popped up from the front row just in time for the vows. Not a bad idea, one all you shy brides might want to remember for your own big day.

Shoppers take vintage train to Tecate

By Carol Bidwell
N.Y. Times News Service

"All ab-ooo-ard," the conductor called, leaning out of the Pullman car in the Campo station to scan the tracks for latecomers. "All ab-ooo-ard for Mexico."

There was a lurch and a clank — and the chug-chug-chug of an antique steam engine soon told us we had embarked on an adventure that would wind through the canyons and mountains of northern Mexico. Our destination was the sleepy border town of Tecate — just south of the U.S.-Mexico border, 50 miles east of Tijuana — which gave its name to the giant brewery that keeps the pueblo's economy solvent.

More than 350 people filled the train bound for Tecate, looking forward to a tour of the brewery, an authentic Mexican lunch and some shopping in a town not yet ruined by tourists like us. With about 20 others, I had chosen to go on a guided tour that provided transportation to the Campo station from San Diego, plus the train ride, the brewery tour and lunch.

"The town is small," explained Veronica, our tour guide, whose mother owns a home in Tecate. "It's easy to get around. There are no crowds, not too many people. It's a border town, but only about 1.3 million people cross the border there every year, and most of them work in California and go back home at night. About 32 million cross the border every year in Tijuana."

WE LEANED back and savored the ever-changing scenery outside the train windows. The train followed a winding route through rugged territory studded by jagged rocky outcroppings, thick brush and delicate mountain flowers. Along the route, it slipped through three tunnels, and in the middle of the second, the train crossed the U.S.-Mexico border.

(A yellow line is painted inside the tunnel to mark the border crossing, but the tunnel is so long — and so dark — it can't be seen from inside the passenger cars.) The tunnel, our conductor Bruce explained, is the only international railroad tunnel in the U.S.

For our comfort, he joked, our passenger cars, built in the 1920s, came with built-in air conditioning — the windows open. But he warned about putting heads and hands outside; in places, spiny brush grew so close to the tracks that it slapped against the side of the train.

Mary Ann, daughter of a railroad family who brought her husband to Campo just to ride the train, said the ride brought back memories.

"I love trains," she said, swaying with the motion of the coach, a grin on her face. "Remember the dining cars? And the sleepers? Did you ever try to get dressed in an upper berth?"

For her husband, Byron, the trip recalled not-so-pleasant associations.

"During World War II, I rode a troop train cross-country to go to boot camp in South Carolina," he recalled. "It was a train like this. We had all the windows open because it was summer. There was soot all over everything."

THE TRAIN'S arrival in Tecate was an event. We were greeted by mariachis and the local beauty queen, wearing a charro suit and spangled sombrero and posing for photos.

It was a quarter-mile walk to the brewery over rough ground that lay along the railroad tracks. The brewery (macquiladora) — owned by the Monterey- based company that also makes and bottles Bohemia, Carta Blanca, Superior, Sol and Dos Equis beers — welcomed visitors with a big "Bienvenidos" sign and herded groups through the facility's bottling plant.

We didn't get to see beer actually being made (20 million liters are processed here each month, a process that takes 25 days from start to packaging), but we did get a look at the noisy assembly line where 4,000 cans of beer an hour are filled, plastic-wrapped into six-packs, dumped into cases, then stacked into towers of filled beer cans piled on wooden pallets and whisked by a forklift into a vast warehouse.

The yeasty smell of new beer permeated the assembly facility, causing teetotaling tourists to wrinkle their noses in disgust and beer aficionados to anticipate the end of the tour, where free beer was promised.

THE NOISE of the filling line was deafening, precluding any questions, but signs in Spanish explained that the glassed-in area (pasteurador) was where the beer is pasteurized, a centrifugelike apparatus (llenadora) was where cans are filled and the dizzying roller-coaster feeder line delivered cans from some overhead source, whizzing them along a wall and down through the pasteurizer and filler, through the capper and packager.

Outside, a large pavilion provided shade and a spot to sit and enjoy a cold beer before a short walk to one of Tecate's nearly two dozen restaurants for lunch.

Over tacos and enchiladas at El Passetto (200 Libertad Alley), Veronica told us we would have a little more than an hour to explore the town and gave us a quick lesson in shopping. Prices would be shown in pesos ($N followed by a number), she reminded us, and the exchange rate that day was about 5.5 pesos to the dollar. That meant that the lunch we ordered, listed at $N35 on the menu, set us back about $6.25, and a beer — Tecate, of course — priced at $N7, cost about $1.25.

She also issued a lighthearted warning to the women about unwittingly flirting with the townsmen in Parque Hidalgo, the zocalo (central plaza park), just a block from the restaurant shaded by big trees, decorated with blooming rosebushes and centered with a bandstand.

"On Sundays, the women sit on the benches in the zocalo and the men walk around and around, and eventually they sit, too, and that's how you get to meet your future husband," Veronica explained. "So you married people, don't sit on the benches."

EXPLORING TECATE is easily done on foot. Parking places are at a premium, but dozens of small shops lie within a block or two of the brewery and the plaza, which is in the center of town. A block away is the Catedral de Guadalupe, the town's Catholic church, just a few doors from the police station.

Tecate's border crossing is just two blocks north of the park, but the town has escaped the gaudy bustle of Tijuana and Mexicali, border towns where shops are filled with made-in-Taiwan curios and other touristy articles.

Tecate is a real town where real people live; the streets are lined with the kind of shops that made up Southern California downtowns in the years after World War II. Here, you can stop for a shave ice in one shop, get a haircut in an old-fashioned barbershop, buy fabric for a new dress or shirt, shop for baked-on-site bread at the panaderia, or buy a lacy white confirmation dress for a daughter.

Even on a Saturday, the town is hard at work, the brewery crews working at full tilt and the storekeepers exchanging their wares for handfuls of pesos. What lightheartedness there is — there was a small fiesta in the park the day we were there — is designed for the townspeople, not tourists. That gives you the feeling that you're seeing a little piece of the real Mexico here, not a movie set dragged out and propped up for the tourists that'll disappear once the train chugs out of town.

THE TOWN'S oldest houses were built in the 1920s, and the brewery opened in 1944. Although the brewery is the major mechanized industry, the town lies in a fertile farming area and many townspeople work in the fields and in vegetable packaging.

The town's one bow to boisterousness was the Tecate Pamplonado, staged each October until a few years ago. A scaled-down version of the running of the bulls in Pamplona, Spain, bulls bred and raised for bullfighting at a local ranchero would be stampeded through town on the way to the bull ring. But the practice was ended when it was deemed too dangerous.

Although the town has a sleepy air, seemingly stuck back in the 1940s, modern life hasn't passed anybody by.

During our visit, an old woman, dressed in the costume of one of the Mexican Indian tribes that still live outside town, sat on the pavement outside the town bank, her handmade jewelry laid out before her on a blanket. Jewelry prices were reasonable, and several people stopped to inspect and to buy. But when one tourist asked if she might take the woman's photo, the answer was first no — then yes.

"Si, photografia," the woman responded, then demanded: "Diez dolares (10 dollars)."

As the afternoon sun began to dip, we headed back toward the train tracks. We had been warned not to be late.

"We leave at 3 o'clock whether you're there or not," the conductor had told us. Back on the train, we nursed sunburned noses and reinspected the items we'd purchased as the train built up a head of steam for the return trip.

"You look like you've drunk all the Tecate you can hold," the conductor observed, walking through our car of tired passengers, some yawning and settling in to sleep during the hour's ride back to Campo. "It must be time to go home."

For the remainder of the year, trains to Tecate will leave from the Campo station Sept. 30, Oct. 28 and Nov. 25. Trains leave Campo at 10:30 a.m. and return about 4:30 p.m. Tickets are $35 per person and reservations are required.

To reach Campo, nearly 60 miles east of San Diego, take Interstate 8 east from San Diego toward El Centro, exit south at Buckman Springs Road and follow the signs to the railroad museum.

The San Diego Railroad Museum also offers every-weekend (except Thanksgiving and Christmas) train trips to Miller Creek, a barren, unpopulated turn-around spot in the high desert about 16 miles east of Campo. Trains depart Campo at 12:01 and 2:30 p.m. Saturdays, Sundays and other holidays and return at 1:30 and 4 p.m. Fares are $10 for adults, $8 for active-duty military and seniors, and $3 for children age 6-12; kids 5 and younger ride free.

Reservations and information: (619) 595-3030.

Visitors to Tecate with a bit more time to spend can visit Rancho La Puerta, a fitness resort on the outskirts of town, or drive south of town to see a glass-blowing factory where glass is still mouth-blown.

And hikers can explore along the train tracks east of town, where locals say there are still paintings made by primitive peoples 10,000 years ago. Further south of the town are some of Mexico's finest vineyards.

Shoppers can buy and bring back into the U.S. up to $400 worth of Mexican goods duty-free, including up to 750 ml of liquor per person.

DEAR ABBY

Having pets 'fixed' may be kindest cut of all

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Stemming the tide of pet overpopulation is a never-ending battle, and I'd like to tell you that your recent series of letters about the advantages of neutering pets was appreciated. The letters were triggered by a Florida woman who said her husband wouldn't allow her to neuter their cocker spaniel. Although the dog was urinating everywhere, including the house, her husband just "couldn't do that" to his dog.

Van Buren

Unfortunately, there's another reason why some people do not have their pets neutered: THEY CANNOT AFFORD IT. You would help prevent a tremendous number of unwanted dogs and cats and do your readers a great service if you would let them know about SPAY/USA.

SPAY/USA is a nationwide network of spay/neuter clinics. When people call SPAY/USA, they will be referred to one of more than 3,500 veterinarians from coast to coast who perform this surgery at an affordable price. (Some vets charge more than $120 to neuter a female cat.)

Please, Abby, help those who cannot afford to pay the full price by letting them know about our service. With the help of animal lovers like yourself, we can make this a better place for all of us — humans and animals alike. — ESTHER MECHLER, DIRECTOR, SPAY/USA

DEAR ESTHER: I am delighted to help. Readers, the toll-free number for SPAY/USA is: 1-800-248-SPAY (7729). Dogs and cats that are not intended for breeding should be neutered. Not only does this prevent a homeless population of millions of unwanted dogs and cats, it also eliminates the risk of ovarian or testicular cancer, and greatly reduces the risk of prostate disorders, as well as eliminating the urge for the pet to "mark its territory."

DEAR ABBY: I disagree with your response to the mother of the rejected "two-toned" bridesmaid. What happened to freedom and the right to express yourself? If a bride chooses a bridesmaid, she chooses ALL the qualities of that individual, not just the ones the bride wants or the ones the bride's mother wants.

You said that the attention should be focused on the bride. If the bride can't capture the attention at her own wedding, I don't think a bridesmaid with a different hairstyle should be responsible!

What happened to marriage as the focal point of the wedding?

I personally think bridesmaids and groomsmen and everyone involved in the wedding are there to assist in the grand celebration, not be dressed up like dolls! And certainly they should not be thrown out of a celebration just because of the way they look! I think the bride's mother acted very immaturely and is just as responsible for apologizing for HER behavior.

On a personal note, I would say (believe it or not), "Way to go!" to anyone in my wedding party who would choose to express herself (or himself) in a unique way. My friends always have freedom in every way — even on my wedding day. — LAURA BOEDEKER, LOS ANGELES

DEAR LAURA: Surely you jest. I still believe that a bridesmaid's half blond/half brunette hairdo would be very much out of place in a church wedding.

If a person wants to "express herself," she should find another occasion. This is the bride's day, and all the attention should be focused on HER.

DEAR ABBY: Handling "pop-in visitors" is really very simple — just give them something to do!

"Betty, I haven't had time to do the dishes — would you rather do that or clean the litter box?"

"Dill, I've got some yard work to do — want to handle the lawn mower or the rake?"

The problem will be resolved in a hurry! — KEN LORD, TUCSON

DEAR KEN: Right on! Now, why didn't I think of that!

For everything you need to know about wedding planning, order "How to Have a Lovely Wedding." Send a business-sized, self-addressed envelope, plus check or money order for $3.95 ($4.50 in Canada) to: Dear Abby, Wedding Booklet, P.O. Box 447, Mount Morris, Ill. 61054-0447. (Postage is included.)

Computer program will fail to make the grade

By Erma Bombeck

When I married my husband, he taught six classes a day in a rural school. Two of these were in spelling, with about 30 children in each class. He gave them three tests a week.

Bombeck

To this day I blame his schedule for our inability to conceive children during the first six years of our marriage.

Our nightly ritual was always the same. We would shower, get into our nightclothes, carefully fold down the covers and climb into bed. Then he would turn to me and whisper, "You want the tests from the 10 o'clock class or the 1 o'clock?"

"Doesn't matter," I would say.

For the next several hours the only communication between us was an occasional, "Is sieve spelled with 'e' or 'ei'?"

I was known to fall asleep with my glasses perched on my nose and Eileen Nycholl's spelling paper (with her name misspelled) resting on my chest.

One year my husband was offered two history classes in exchange for the spelling classes, but I rebelled. With all those essay answers on the tests, my biological clock would never have a chance.

It's too bad we were born too soon for the computer program, just out from Duke University, that reads and grades papers. It's a bit of technology whose time has come.

It was created by — who else — an English teacher, who felt guilty if he didn't give a lot of tests and even more guilty if he didn't grade them.

The computer not only grades essays for grammar and fluency, but for style and creativity as well. Its only problem is that it prefers long, complicated essays using big words.

When I told my husband about the computer program, he was less than enthusiastic. If technology can grade papers, what is the future of teachers?

Will a computer welcome the students in the morning and instruct them to deposit their milk money in a receptacle? Will a video with a mechanical voice lecture them?

Will it announce lunchtime, take attendance, dismiss students to go to the restroom, and flash their grades on the screen?

Who will help the younger ones take off tight boots? What happens if someone throws up?

Will the computer stop to bring someone who doesn't get it up to speed? Will it smile and hug? Discipline and move the class outdoors when the weather is good?

"What about your job?" he continued.

"Suppose a computer replaces your editors and judges you on grammar, fluency and creativity. You might even have to learn a big word."

He's right. Technology has gone too far.

CITYLINE The Talk of the Town

All-inclusive competition forces king of clubs' hand

By Patricia Rodriguez
N.Y. Times News Service

SAN SALVADOR ISLAND, Bahamas — Under a slightly overcast sky, Asiz and Patrice and Lily and other Club Med staff members ring the swimming pool overlooking the ocean, urging assorted guests reclining on chaise longues to clamber to their feet.

"Let's go for a sun dance!" shouts Asiz, his hips and arms swaying as the loudspeakers blast Caribbean-inspired disco music. "C'mon, it's free!"

Slowly, guests join them, at first a little sheepishly, but soon clapping and dancing with enthusiasm, warming up for the beach games that are to follow.

Yes, Club Med is still Club Med, still something of a summer camp for adults, with lots of sports, games and camaraderie, designed for the vacationer who plays well with others.

Yet Club Med has reinvented itself for the '90s. At some clubs, like this nearly 3-year-old resort on isolated San Salvador, luxury and elegance — and solitude if you so desire — are the draws.

Other clubs have targeted the family market, with special activities, meals and caretakers for the kiddies and privacy for their parents.

And still others have revamped attitudes to appeal to vacationers other than just the pleasure-seeking young singles that the original Club Meds courted a generation ago. These clubs organize special weeks around golf, gourmet food, family reunions, soccer, or even TV soap opera stars.

In other words, Club Med has to keep up with the competition.

Having pioneered the idea of all-inclusive resorts, in which guests pay one up-front charge for lodging, meals and most activities, Club Med has perhaps been too successful for its own good. At least six other major companies, including Jack Tar Villages and Sandals, now offer all-inclusive beach vacations. Many are narrowly targeted, with some resorts reserved for couples only, some aimed at the luxury traveler, others at sports nuts.

Meanwhile, Club Med had made its name with a one-style-for-all type of resort, which didn't fit as well with the specialized travel market that has grown up over the past decade.

For instance, the first Club Meds featured basic, almost rustic accommodations (no TVs, no phones, no fancy decor, and, originally, no deadbolts on the guest rooms). Meals were taken at communal tables. Sports, both water and land, were the draw.

Some newer clubs, however, have gone upscale in recent years. Thirteen of the more than 100 villages in 35 countries are now classified as Club Med's Finest, with fancier rooms, the option of private meal times, and more-pampered service. The San Salvador club, which opened in 1992 to coincide with the island's 500th anniversary of its discovery by Christopher Columbus, is perhaps the flagship in this category.

Guests are housed in 2-story bungalows, painted in bright pinks, blues, greens and yellows, fanned out along the beach so that each double room has an ocean view. Rooms have walk-in closets, color TVs, push-button phones, built-in hair dryers, refrigerators, and private balconies. They're decorated with furnishings and artwork from around the world — decidedly chic and expensive-looking. The technology is so sophisticated, the air-conditioning shuts off the second a door or window is opened.

The three restaurants, including two specialty restaurants with waiter service and tables for two, the lobby, the two bars, and several smaller lounges are furnished in the same fashion.

Four years ago, Club Med also began planning a small number of special "theme weeks" around sports, food and celebrity guests. Two years ago, the program was expanded, with some 20 events planned this year. Already concluded are weeklong food and wine festivals at San Salvador, Sandpiper in Florida and Huatulco in Mexico; a comedy festival at Cancun, during which pros taught improvisational skills to guests; and tennis week at Paradise Island in the Bahamas, where such former stars as Roscoe Tanner held court.

The Hobie Cat sailing championships took place in May at Huatulco, and soccer stars put on a soccer clinic the same month at Punta Cana, Dominican Republic. At Sonoma Bay in Mexico, marine biologists led ocean awareness workshops in June. Most clubs also offer special rates for family reunions, with a family party thrown in. Families, indeed, have been the focus of some of the most intense marketing.

Some clubs — among them Sandpiper in Florida, Eleuthera in the Bahamas, and Ixtapa in Mexico — now include Mini-Clubs, just for kids. Sandpiper takes infants as young as 4 months; St. Lucia in the West Indies prefers toddlers 2 years and older. And the Huatulco Club Med this year opened a Teen Club, with sports, activities and meals for teens 12 to 17. These Mini-Clubs offer traditional beach sports, plus kid-friendly activities such as circus workshops, pony rides, and go-cart tracks.

The main constant among all the clubs is the staff, an international group of mostly twentysomething sports enthusiasts called Gentle Organizers (G.O.s for short.)

The G.O.s have, shall we say, a multifaceted job description. The one leading the bike tour at 8 a.m. may also organize the pingpong tournament after lunch, lead the trivia contest during happy hour, chat with guests at dinner, then perform a song-and-dance during the nightly 10 p.m. show.

Although most of the G.O.s are unfailingly polite and friendly, even perky — they almost have to be to endure that schedule — an encounter with the occasional rude one leaves a sour taste. And when things don't work quite right, there is a tendency, in a sometimes-subtle but classically French way, to blame problems on the guests. None of that U.S.-style "the customer is always right" philosophy here.

To be fair, however, most perform even the silliest tasks with enthusiasm. One afternoon, three G.O.s dressed in 1920s-style striped bathing suits, complete with knickers, roamed among sunbathers, passing trays of chilled melon and pineapple slices. Daily, dozens gather in a clapping, singing mass in the lobby to welcome the new guests, hand out fruit punch, and escort them personally to their rooms.

Other G.O.s patiently teach guests, even the ones with minimal hand-eye coordination, how to sail, water-ski, wind-surf, play tennis, or do step aerobics. They want guests to have a good time. That's their job. And mostly they succeed.

After all, even the San Salvador sun dance worked. Barely half an hour after its conclusion, the remaining clouds melted away. The rest of the week was beautiful.

'All-inclusive' may have its limitations

By Patricia Rodriguez
N.Y. Times News Service

All-inclusive vacations are often touted as the no-brainer way to go. Pay one price and never make a decision more difficult than, pina colada or rum punch? Instead, the decision-making comes on the front end. Club Med has more than 100 villages; choosing the right one involves research and a willingness to read the fine print.

What exactly does all-inclusive mean? Some resorts may cover everything, including bar drinks and expensive sports such as scuba diving. Others, such as Club Med, tack on extra charges for some sports. Outside trips almost always cost extra, sometimes a lot. A tour-by-plane to Nassau from San Salvador, for instance, cost $280 per person.

Extra charges sometimes pop up unexpectedly. The airport transfer at San Salvador, a trip of about three minutes, cost a whopping $10. Although beer, wine and soft drinks were included with meals, guests are on their own the rest of the day; the tap water wasn't palatable, and those $2.80 liter bottles of water and $2 Cokes added up fast. Specialty services, such as massages, hair care, and boutique purchases also add to the final bill.

All-inclusive plans work best on remote islands such as San Salvador, where the population numbers about 700 and there's little else to see. At more populated destinations, such as Cancun, Paradise Island in the Bahamas, or Ixtapa, guests may feel they're missing out by bypassing local restaurants, shops, discos and historic attractions.

How are extra charges assessed? Club Med eschews cash, instead selling guests bar beads to pay for drinks, including sodas and bottled water, at the bar. Choose the amount carefully; beads can be used at other clubs later, but can't be redeemed for cash. This system works well on the convenience factor, but not so well on the budget factor. It's easy to hand over beads without realizing that can of Diet Coke cost $2 or the small daiquiri went for $4.80.

DAR honors MC history instructor

■ The Daughters of the American Revolution recognize Dr. William Morris for his dedication to history, education and community service.

By Shawna Loyd

History instructor Dr. William Morris describes College Classics as "the best teaching situation I have ever been in."

His enthusiasm and dedication was recently rewarded by the Lt. William Brewer Chapter of the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR). Morris was granted a National Distinguished Service Award for his work and service to the historical community through his College Classics courses in American History.

The DAR is a volunteer group dedicated to remembering their revolutionary ancestors, education, preservation of historic artifacts and information, fostering patriotism and community service. Nationwide, the DAR boasts more than one million members.

> "We have nothing but admiration for Dr. Morris."
> —Patti Carter, DAR member

Many DAR members are long time students of Morris' and, according to Patti Carter, Correspondent Docent for the DAR, "we appreciate his interest in history. He knows us personally and is interested in each one of us. He answers our questions and always has a sense of humor."

Finding three people to recommend Morris for the award was easy, Carter said. "They were delighted—we have nothing but admiration for Dr. Morris."

The National Distinguished Service Award is the first national award of its kind originating from the Midland DAR chapters.

Morris is Division Chair of Social/Behavioral Sciences at Midland College. He began teaching world history courses for College Classics in 1989 but turned to American History two and a half years ago. "We're up to the 1820s now," he said. The slower pace of the class gives participants time to do in-depth research on specific subjects of interest. Morris said he appreciates his students. "My College Classics students are intelligent people who have the time and interest to study," he said. "They want to learn."

Dr. William Morris, MC History instructor, was awarded the National Distinguished Service award during a meeting of the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Morris said his College Classics students' response to his courses encourages him. "I spend double the class time preparing. From the beginning, I have enjoyed teaching real history to senior citizens."

The second session of College Classics runs October 23-November 17. College Classics is designed to provide interesting, pressure-free classes for local residents 50 years of age and older. For a single $25 registration fee, students may sign up for as many courses as they wish during the four week session. In addition to American History, Genealogy, Piano, Quicken, Cultural Studies/Japanese, History of England, Economic & Federal Policies, Public Expression and Creative Memories will be offered. For more information about College Classics, call 685-4518.

Health care, real estate, scheduled for Oct. 16

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer 24 short courses beginning the week of October 16.

Chap Basketball Season Tickets—A 'Slam Dunk' Deal!

■ The Midland College Chap Basketball season tips off Nov. 2—get your tickets now!

$2.32 per game...that's what it will cost you to watch some of the most exciting junior college basketball in the country, right here in your own backyard!

Reserved seat season tickets are now on sale to the general public for the 1995-96 season of Chaparral basketball. The price of a season ticket is $65 and includes all 28 scheduled home games for both the men's and women's teams.

For those of you who have not previously purchased season tickets because of a lack of available "good seats," we have expanded our reserved seating to include the center court, cushioned seats on the west side of the arena.

If comfortable seating and inexpensive tickets are not enough to entice you to become a Chap season ticket holder, we are adding a variety of new give-aways to make your evening more fun and in some cases, profitable.

In addition to giving away our popular "3" point T-shirts and mini-basketballs, we will be selecting lucky fans to participate in our half-time cash scramble and long distance shooting contest. Everyone will be invited to try for winning free airline tickets or cash in our "paper airplane throw." Other entertainment includes the PIPS—not the same PIPS of Gladys Knight—champion drill teams, award winning cheerleaders and more.

Along with all the fun we are going to have in the Chap Center this season, we also will put two great teams on the floor.

On the women's side, Coach Ron Jones' "Bomb Squad" will again light up the scoreboard with its run-n-gun style of play. Six veterans return from last year's 23-8 inaugural team, combined with four freshmen and three transfers, including Midland High graduate Julie Chancellor.

Coach Pat Rafferty returns one of the premier guards in the country in preseason All-American D'Juan Baker, along with Devon Phillip and Mike Carrasco from his 22-7 squad of 1994-95. Add in 11 talented freshmen and you have the ingredients for a team poised for a run at the title.

The season begins Nov. 2. Come by the Chap Center office and pick out YOUR reserved seats now! We are open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., and you may purchase your season tickets by cash, check or Visa/Master Card.

Remember: great arena + comfortable seats + $uper price + outstanding entertainment + family fun = Chaparral Basketball.

Stories by Georgia Temple

Elizabeth Manley, the 1988 Olympic Silver Medalist and Olympic Freestyle Champion, has been skating since she was 3 years old.

"I have three older brothers that were all avid hockey players, and the natural thing was to throw me on skates as well. That's how it all started, said the Canadian skater who is now a member of the Ice Capades and will be skating here Oct. 12-15 at Midland College's Chaparral Center. Tickets may be purchased at Midland Sound, Comm West in Odessa and Sound Decision in Big Spring. For group information call 1-915-362-5669.

Ms. Manley began competing when she was around 6 years old, but it wasn't until she was in the Olympics at Sarajevo in 1984 that she realized she had the talent to be an Olympian skater.

"It was quite an experience," Ms. Manley said of her first Olympics. "I think it was after '84 that I really realized that I had the potential of being an Olympic medalist, and, therefore, the four years going into '88 was a lot more focused in serious training."

When she competed in 1988, she had already garnered 51 national and international awards.

"I think the greatest part about the Olympics in '88 was the fact it was in my home country and the tremendous amount of support I had from the country and people," Ms. Manley recalled. "A lot of people say, 'How does it feel to win the medal?' And it's just a tremendous victory. I don't even think winning a medal can come close to how I felt just having

The Village Fair scene features the Ice Capades ensemble skaters. Jugglers and tumblers have been added to the production to compliment the ensemble of 25 skaters. The show includes a storyteller, who will move through the crowd, speaking with patrons and narrating the story. The show is set for Midland College's Chaparral Center Thursday through Oct. 15. Tickets, priced at $20, $14.50 and $10.50, may be purchased at Midland Sound, Odessa's Comm West and Big Spring's Sound Decision.

The Mystery of Irma Vep

Above, Lady Enid (Gray Childs) blows out the ghost candle in Center Stage Theatre's production of "The Mystery of Irma Vep," which offers a sneak preview Thursday, with opening night set for Friday. The show will be on stage Halloween. Above right, Jane Twisden (Jack Harding) is startled by an intruder in this scene. At right, Nicodemus (Gray Childs) muses upon his mummy in this scene.

ODESSA — Vampires, mummies, werewolves and other strange intruders will invade Center Stage Theatre this month when "The Mystery of Irma Vep" unfolds on stage.

"It's kind of spooky, and it's also kind of funny — at times silly," said director Jack Harding. "In a nutshell, it's a parody of the silent movie serials and horror movies of the '30s — the way that those were overacted and everything was very dramatic. If you were watching one on TV nowadays, you would go, 'How stupid.' So, it's kind of fun that way. Almost melodramatish."

ENTERTAINMENT IN BRIEF

Season begins

ODESSA — The Kaleidoscope Company of the Permian Playhouse will kick off its 26th season with the children's musical, "Dorothy Meets Alice."

The production will open at the Playhouse, 310 W. 42nd St., Oct. 21 and will continue Saturdays and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. through Oct. 29.

This show will mark the debut of the new Kaleidoscope Company director, Elizabeth Cleveland. Ms. Cleveland is educational director of the Playhouse and as such is responsible for the youth performing troupe and the theater school programs.

She is teamed with musical director Deborah Martin, who is remembered for her work with "Aladdin and His Wonderful Magical Lamp."

Kaleidoscope Company 1995-96 season coupon books are available through the run of this show. Each coupon book is $10 and gives the holder four admissions to the four K.C. productions. A coupon book represents a more than 50 percent savings on the box office ticket price. For more information or to make reservations call 1-915-362-2329.

Annual event set

ODESSA — This year marks the second annual Fajitas, Friends & Football Feast at St. Ann Seton Catholic Church.

Rosa's Cafe and the Permian Playhouse have teamed together to offer a Friday Night Fajita Feed from 5:30 to 7:45 p.m. before the Permian-Lee football game Oct. 27. Seating will be available as well as drive through.

"No matter what school you're rooting for, come share the fun," said Chris "toper" Olsen, director of Permian Playhouse.

For more information call the theater, 1-915-362-2329. All proceeds go the Playhouse.

Concert planned

The Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale will present a pops concert entitled "Dance to the Big Band Sounds of the '40s" at 8 p.m. Oct. 21 at Midland Center, downtown.

The concert will feature the "Symphony Swing Orchestra," a big band in the style of Glenn Miller's Orchestra, led by Robert Hunt, the orchestra's music director.

The first part of the concert will feature the band and the Symphony Pops Singers performing music by Miller, Ellington, Basie, Goodman and others. The audience will then be invited to take the floor and dance to the big band sounds.

General admission tickets only are available. Call 563-0921 for more information.

Sponsors for the event are NationsBank, Wagner & Brown Ltd., Symphony Home Care Services, Health Care, KMND and KMID-Channel 2.

Works shown

The works of Peggy Catlett are being presented in the gallery at Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave.

The showing is sponsored by ACT IX, Midland Community Theatre's woman's auxiliary organization.

Ms. Catlett, has paintings hanging in the Governor's Mansion and the capital building in Oklahoma City, Okla., as well as in galleries in Amarillo and Corpus Christi.

The show will be on display during the run of the comedy "Crimes of the Heart," which closes Oct. 28. The works are for sale.

Recital planned

Organist Peter Hurford will be presented in recital at 7:30 p.m. Oct. 17 at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, 1412 W. Illinois Ave.

Hurford studied at the Royal College of Music before going to Cambridge University where he took degrees in music and law.

He served as master of the music at St. Albans Cathedral for 21 years. During that time, he founded the International Organ Festival, which, in its 29 years, has done much to restore the organ to the mainstream of music-making and through its competitions has launched many now-famous artists.

Hurford has served on many international competition juries. He has been visiting professor of organ at the universities of Cincinnati and Western Ontario. From 1980 to 1982 he was president of the royal College of Organists, and in the same period was visiting Artist-in-Residence to Sydney Opera House. For 1992-93 he held the Betts Fellowship at the University of Oxford.

A public reception will follow his Midland performance. This is Hurford's third concert appearance in the Midland-Odessa area.

Fall festival set

Hermleigh United Methodist Church is holding its annual Fall Festival from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Oct. 14.

Arts and crafts including quilts, wreaths, Christmas items and woodwork will be for sale. Also, a big flea market with everything from antiques to new and used items will be conducted during the festival.

A Farmer's Market will contain canned goods from the garden and produce. As usual, the cooks of the church will have available cakes, pies and other baked goods for sale.

A barbecue lunch will be served beginning at 11 a.m. featuring brisket, sausage and roast pig with all the trimmings. The Richburg Band will play during lunch and through the afternoon.

A Chinese Auction also is planned.

Member announced

ABILENE — Hardin-Simmons University School of Music has recently announced the members of the 1995-96 HSU Concert Choir.

Kristin McPeak, a junior from Midland, is a member of the Concert Choir.

The Concert Choir is a vocal ensemble that is open to all university students by audition and gives members the opportunity to study and perform a variety of

SUNDAY, OCTOBER 8, 1995

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will be more creative than ever. Shed your usual shy style and reach out to your business associates. Off-the-job socializing can help you build a network of support. A promotion or new job is likely as 1995 draws to a close. Romance plays a major role in a decision you make early in 1996. Save money for an overseas vacation or honeymoon. An educational offer is widely applauded.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Do not feel guilty if you profit from someone else's mistake or misfortune. Step in immediately if asked to fill another's shoes. A trip could be involved. Be discreet about a previous romantic alliance.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Your well-known charm helps you get things done. A public display of your work results in word-of-mouth advertising. Showcase your wares! You will feel more comfortable on your own turf tonight.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): The highway of romance could have some rough spots. Buckle your seatbelt. Knowing exactly what you want to achieve is a tremendous asset. Stop relying on other people's hospitality.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Those who are unattached are not necessarily alone. Close friendships and affectionate relatives fill the void. Seniors looking for new activities should contact their church or synagogue.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A new career cycle begins this week. Partnerships of all types enjoy favorable influences. If married, give your marriage top priority. Clearing up a financial tangle will put you back in the driver's seat.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A church or community campaign would benefit from your organizational skills. Do what you can to educate others about a special challenge. Children look to you for leadership.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Join your chums or relatives for a fun celebration. You could meet a potential business client or romantic partner at a party. Avoid revealing too much too soon. An alliance that develops gradually will last longer.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may be preoccupied with the need to make far-reaching decisions. Focus on practical problems first; you can solve them easily. A nostalgic mood takes hold this evening. A few tears may be shed.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Put forth your best arguments. Your keen powers of persuasion help forge an important agreement. Your social life begins to accelerate. Dress to impress if invited to a formal event. Pour on the glamour!

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Those in the market for love or real estate will find this a perfect day for joint ventures. Your winning personality convinces people to help you. Original ideas receive a warm welcome. Emphasize cost-cutting benefits.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Your inner strength stems from your compassion. Additional advantages come from your thoroughly professional approach. Domestic issues and family concerns may be sensitive. Keep a close eye on the bottom line. Lavish spending is out.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Certain relationships may be strained now. Do not fret; the damage is repairable. In the future, select your business partners and confidants more carefully. The outlook for romance is excellent. Talks and trips progress nicely.

Opening lead: Five of ♡ Study the diagram above. Would you choose to play or defend three no trump after West leads the five of hearts and East follows with the king? At the table, would the play to the first trick change your mind?

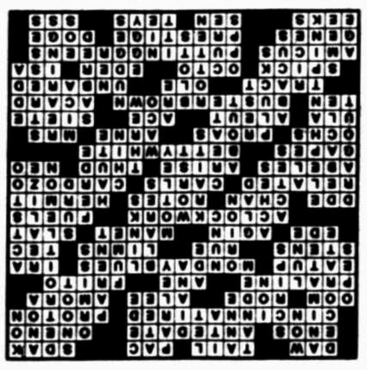

Note that once North had shown at least nine cards in two suits, South didn't bother to introduce the hearts and, instead, rebid two no trump. North's sequence showed a better than minimum opening with a six-card major (with a minimum and six spades, North would have rebid two spades immediately rather than introduce the four-card minor), so South had an easy rebid of three no trump.

Double dummy, you are correct if you chose to defend. There is only one entry left to the South hand and, since the queen of clubs does not drop doubleton and diamonds are not evenly divided, South will fall a trick short.

Alternatively, declarer can win the ace of hearts, cash the two winning hearts, discarding the ace and king of clubs from dummy, and lead the jack of clubs to set up the suit while the queen of diamonds is still in hand. But that enables the defenders to score two heart tricks, two spades and the queen of clubs for down one.

Nevertheless, in practice we would choose to play three no trump. When East plays the king of hearts at trick one, we would allow the monarch to hold! It would be inhuman of East not to return a heart. Now declarer can win the next two heart tricks, discarding the offending club honors from the North hand, and force out the queen of clubs. Since a high heart honor remains in the closed hand to control the suit, the defenders can come to no more than four tricks.

PLAY: Mystery comes in time for Halloween

(From 1G)

The story takes place in various locations including an Egyptian tomb. "It's been unique for us doing the set and lighting," Harding said. "There's been a lot of special effects and built-in things that we've had to do. And, in a way, it almost looks like you're watching a movie, except, of course, its right in front of you — live."

Written by Charles Ludlam, founder of The Ridiculous Theatrical Company of New York, "The Mystery of Irma Vep" was cited by Time magazine and The New York Times as one of the best plays of the year in 1984, Harding said. "This is one of the shows they did. They wrote their own productions. He was there like 20 years, and he died in 1987."

Show times are 8 p.m. Oct. 12-14, 19-21, 26-28 and Halloween, Oct. 31. Tickets are $6 on Thursdays and $8 all other times. For more information or to make reservations call, 1-915-335-8881. The theater is located at 1617 E. 8th St.

Harding isn't certain what age group is too young to enjoy the production. "There's no bad language or anything like that. It's spooky, but it's not terrifying by any means. I would say 10, 12ish. We haven't had a lot of young kids here at all, so really I don't know."

The production actually is a replacement for "Blood Ties," which was originally scheduled for the October show.

"They were going to send us a revised script, and they did just before the audition, and it was just not what I expected," Harding said of 'Blood Ties.'

"We had this slot picked for a Halloween show. It ('Blood Ties,' which is about vampires) had some good Halloween-type stuff, but with all the rewrites and stuff they did, they had basically turned it into a farce. All the spooky stuff was moved off stage so you never saw it. It was only referred to. And the way they ended up resolving the story was unsatisfying."

Harding said he decided that "instead of doing a production that I though was substandard, we decided to switch to this show, which I was planning for next year."

The two-member cast is being played by Gray Childs and Harding. Designed somewhat like "Greater Tuna," the play requires a number of costume changes.

"If people are familiar with 'Greater Tuna,' it's the same premise as far as two people play all the roles, which really adds to the humor.

"And I'll tell you, some of the changes are so quick, you have to stop and tell yourself that it is actually the same person. Sometimesthere isonly one line spoken while you are off stage changing, and you have to come in as someone else immediately after."

The sneak preview is set for Thursday.

When asked if he anticipates any unusual circumstances on opening night, which is Friday, Oct. 13, or on Halloween, Harding replied, "I certainly hope not."

ICE: Olympic medalist to play Cinderella in Ice Capades skated the best I could have ever skated in my home country and at the Olympic games. The medal was just kind of a reward at the end for everything that all came together at the right time."

Following the Olympics, she was made a member of the Royal Order of Canada, the highest civilian honor, and was named "Woman of the Year" by Chatelaine magazine. She also joined the Ice Capades and is starring in the company's "Cinderella" production.

"As skaters, you pursue the Olympic dream and the world dream and then it's kind of a natural thing that that's when you're ready to move into professional skating," Ms. Manley said of her decision to turn professional. "And I'm very lucky I'm involved in professional skating at this time with the amount of open doors for professionals now. "And Ice Capades was always the show that I went to as a kid and that was really the direction that I had always wanted to go in. Ice Capades did a tremendous amount for me. They mmade my name known and gave me that opportunity to perform in the United States, which I didn't have as an amateur."

Ms. Manley finds professional skating has its own intrinsic rewards. "I put a lot of pressure on myself to skate well. But you have so many opportunities to perform. You have good and bad nights, but you know you still have another 25 shows in the next couple of weeks to overcome the bad performance. It's just being able to go out and do what I love to do the most and not really being judged for it."

After the 1988 Olympics, Ms. Manley was in a number of television specials in Canada, where she developed a passion for character roles. "In my TV specials here, I played Red Riding Hood and Jack and the Bean Stalk, and I played a lot of character roles and absolutely fell in love with doing that sort of work. Playing a character like Cinderella has just been so much fun, and so enjoyable for me."

Although the Ice Capades' "Cinderella" was on the road last year, this season's show has been updated.

"There's been some tremendous changes put into the show," said Ms. Manley, noting that Family Channel now owns Ice Capades. "I think 'Cinderella' is going to be one of the best shows out there this year. There's no stress. There's no pressure. It's nnot a real competitive atmosphere. It's just a good night of entertainment and falling into a fairy tale for a couple of hours and enjoying it."

At the time of the interview, Ms. Manley was skating in Canada on the three-week Elvis Stojko Tour. Stojko is the present world champion male skater from Canada.

"We're doing one nighters — going from city to city to city. It's been great. We have an accumulation of all the present Olympic champions as well as some of the past Olympic champions. And it's quite the cast of skaters."

She also considers the skaters with Ice Capades to be quite a cast of performers.

"They are such hard workers and completely committed to making this the best show out there," she said of the "Cinderella" cast.

"And it's a treat for me. This show I'm on right now, you have 24 Olympic medalists out here. So I'm working with the best talent that exists in the skating world. And when I go back to 'Cinderella,' I can honestly say there's just as much talent in most of these skaters."

Ms. Manley's career has not always been as fulfilling as it is now. In her autobiography, "Thumbs Up: The Elizabeth Manley Story," she writes of the hard times and the lessons she learned at an early age.

"I went through a lot of hardships in the skating world, a lot of ups and downs and I went through a depression when I was younger, when I was about 13 or 14.

"I was skating for everybody else and not myself. And I let the pressure get to me at a very young age. I was trying to please people too much, and I really forgot about why I was really skating and that was because I loved it.

"I went through some major physical problems with the depression. I lost all my hair, gained a tremendous amount of weight and ended up quitting skating because of it. And after being off skating for a while and spending time with the family and talking out my fears and my problems and things that were scaring me with the sport, I re-evaluated my career and came back to the sport with a whole different attitude and a whole different thinking pattern as far as why I was doing this. And I just realized that I was skating because I loved it."

Ms. Manley, who handles all her fan mail personally, has learned where to put her focus. "You see skaters with license plates on their car, 'Going for the Gold.' I know that's the focus that athletes need to have, but they also need to keep the focus that they are enjoying it. And that's what I did."

For her, success means "being able to accomplish a dream or a commitment that you've made to doing something but continuing enjoying it as you're doing it. That is my key to success. Once you aren't happy or you're not enjoying something, then it's time to move on to a new venture."

When she quits touring — if she does — she hopes it's to have a family.

"It's really hard to keep a personal life with the type of career that I'm running. Everybody always says, 'Well, you're not going to meet that special someone until you're off the road.'

"I would like to have that as a reason for me to finally get off the road. I'm very family oriented. I'm very close to my mother. She's my best friend. And family is very important to me."

Drilling improves

Drilling activity was mixed for the final week of September, according to Baker Hughes Inc.

The Permian Basin rig count inched up two rigs to 125 for the week, well above last year's count of 111.

Lea County, N.M. was the most active in the Basin with 20 rigs, followed by Eddy County, N.M. with 17 rigs and Midland County with nine rigs.

The U.S. rig count sank 20 rigs to 755 for the week, well below the year-ago count of 838.

Among major producing states, Oklahoma lost 16 rigs and Texas 11. Louisiana showed the largest gain, three rigs.

P&P finals sale

LAKEWOOD, Colo. — K N Energy Inc. has finalized the previously announced acquisition of gathering and processing assets located in the northeast panhandle of Texas from Parker & Parsley Petroleum Co.

The assets include a 32 million-cubic-feet-per-day cryogenic natural gas liquids processing plant and approximately 900 miles of gathering pipeline.

A tank battery ready for products.

Prices slump

Crude futures fell to two-month lows this past week on the New York Mercantile Exchange as damage from Hurricane Opal to Gulf production and port facilities appeared light.

Major producers announced plans to staff offshore platforms. The reports of increased production at a time of falling demand also sent prices lower.

On the NYMEX, West Texas Intermediate for November delivery closed at $16.87 late in the week. The posted price was lowered to $15.25 a barrel.

Natural gas for November delivery closed at $1.79 per thousand cubic feet.

Patterson warrants

SNYDER — Patterson Energy, Inc. has received proceeds of approximately $3.1 million from the sale of 426,874 shares of newly issued common shares.

The new shares were issued in response to the company's announcement on July 5, 1995 that it would redeem its outstanding Redeemable Warrants. Two Redeemable Warrants gave registered holders the right to purchase one share of the company's common stock at $7.50.

A total of 853,748 warrants were exercised, representing 99.6 percent of the 856,760 warrants outstanding. Patterson now has a total of 3,159,374 common shares issued and outstanding.

The Redeemable Warrants were sold as a part of the company's initial public offering completed in December 1993. Gilford Securities Incorporated and First Colonial Securities Group, Inc., the underwriters of the Company's initial public offering.

Training well will increase Basin expertise

■ Company training will draw international students

By Ellen Hopkins

A state-of-the-art, globally-connected training facility for oilwell logging gives the Permian Basin another leg up in the export of oilfield technology and expertise.

Western Atlas Logging Services recently dedicated two training wells at its Odessa Training Center that will not only train the company's field engineers but client representatives from around the world. About 400-600 per year are expected to graduate from the training school. Foreign students will leave the facility not only with a wide knowledge of logging services, but a rude working knowledge of English and West Texas culture.

"The Permian Basin is the obvious choice for testing and training logging technology due to the area's reservoir diversity and its people," said Damir Skerl, president of Western Atlas Logging Services, who along with Odessa community leaders cut a wireline to open the facility. Western Atlas also took advantage of the event to introduce the company's new-generation ECLIPS surface data acquisition system to the Permian Basin.

"The people here are key," Skerl said. "Western Atlas is investing here because we can send students from the Middle East or the North Sea and they will all leave here with a conversational level of the English

Dues dispute source of rift at AGA meet

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

Discontent among members of the American Gas Association over the cost of dues came to the floor at the annual meeting of the association in Atlanta this week, threatening the solidarity of that industry icon.

Carl Erickson, spokesman for AGA, said the dispute that caused eight interstate pipelines to tender their resignation was all about money and did not involve political or regulation issues.

"Some of the interstate pipelines thought they were paying too much in dues, and wanted them reduced by 40-50 percent. That request was denied by the executive board of AGA."

The threat to resign involved: The Williams Companies, Tenneco, Coastal, Enron, Sonat, Panhandle Eastern, MidCon and El Paso Natural Gas, which compose slightly less than one third of the interstate pipeline membership in AGA. Erickson said there were 16 straight pipes, five North American pipes (Canada & Mexico) and nine integrated pipes in the industry association. Altogether AGA represents 300 natural gas pipelines, utilities, gatherers and marketers in the U.S.

The gas industry association, which represents 90 percent of the gas delivered in the U.S., has now countered with a list of compromise proposals designed to keep the interstate pipes within the fold.

"I think we will work out something," said Erickson. "They value their membership in AGA and AGA values them as members."

He said a proposal to keep the pipelines in the association called for the pipes to stay in the organization through 1996, during which time a formal study of dues would take place. Erickson said dues in AGA are calculated on a formula using revenues and sales.

"I think we will find a compromise that will accomodate both parties."

AGA Chairman George A. Davidson, Jr., chairman and CEO of Consolidated Natural Gas in Pittsburgh, urged the gas industry to work past its discord and unify in its efforts toward a common goal.

In a statement, Davidson said: "Competition, conflicts, and clashes are now new phenomena within our industry. There are some differences among us that will create some rough going in the next year."

He said he was looking forward to being on hand "when the combined energies and our shared ideas come together to achieve a common vision." He said the common vision was a natural gas industry that was prosperous and growing, and develops, delivers, and distributes the clean-burning fuel to homes and businesses.

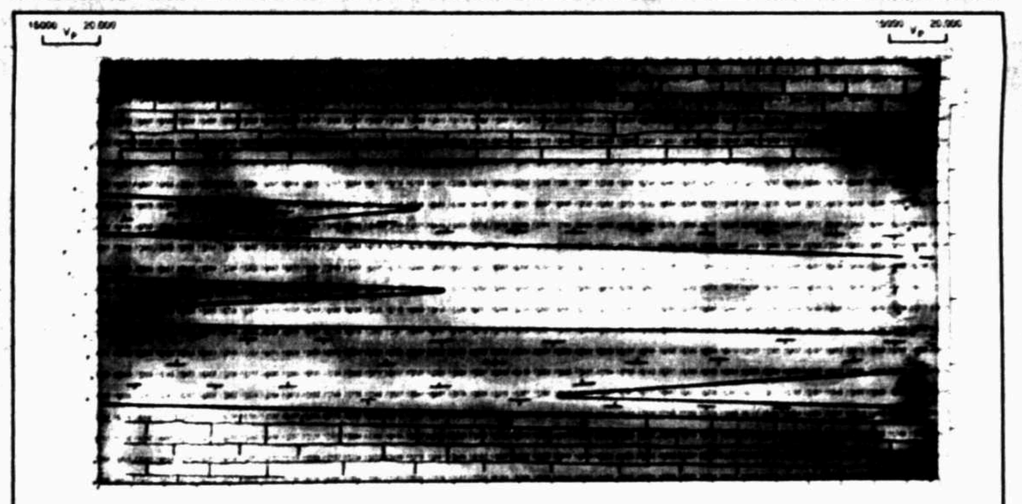

He added: "Being one industry with one vision does not mean that every member of the AGA and natural gas industry must constantly embrace the AGA position on any given topic. What one industry and one vision means is that we share something that goes beyond our day-to-day disagreements."

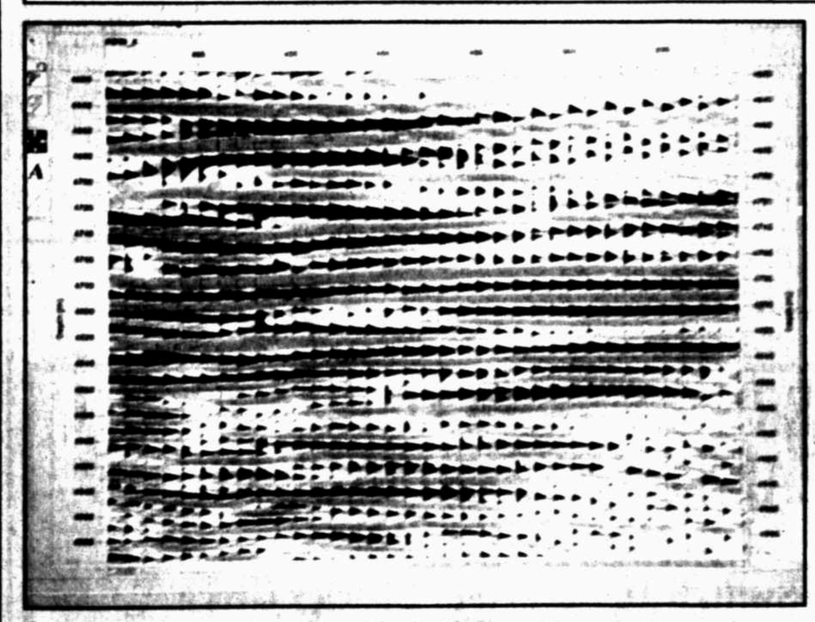

He said his vision for the industry was using marketing to gain a larger share of the nation's energy consumption; using advanced technologies to make gas more appealing to consumers and businesses and becoming more efficient in an increasingly competitive market.

Erickson said the pipelines are now considering the proposal of the American Gas Association to do a total review of the dues structure of the organization, and would report back to the association soon.

He said the disagreement over the dues structure had created a lot of interesting discussions among industry members.

Tomography right on track

Tomography is the whole picture

■ Crosswell tomography promises to be the next generation of technology

By John Paul Pitts
Oil Editor

For those wondering what the next round of technology will be after 3-D seismic, these three words are suggested: crosswell tomography.

With 30 times more resolution than surface seismic, crosswell tomography, or interwell seismic, promises to be the next technological frontier in the Permian Basin, doing for exploitation and recovery what 3-D did for exploration.

According to James Justice PhD, the new technology is a "geological cat scan," except instead of getting picture slices of the entire human body from side to side, you get a geological picture from well to well. And instead of using X-rays as a source, sound waves are used.

"There is little doubt that this will be the next technological wave in the oil industry," said Justice, the recognized guru on crosswell seismic technology. "With 30 times the resolution, you can create a very comprehensive geological picture. It gives you the ability to spot very thin beds that could not be identified by surface seismic."

The technology, which involves putting a source down one wellbore and receivers down another

CROSWELL: Technology could become significant in two years

well or wells, is also able to spot bypassed oil and to track CO2 gas and water through a reservoir.

"It can tell if the CO2 or water is going where it should, and if you can get it to go where it should, you can save millions of dollars and recover thousands more barrels of oil."

Several tests involving the technology have already been tried in the Permian Basin, both partially funded by the Department of Energy.

In its test, Fina declared the process a scientific success but not a commercial success. The jury is still out on Oxy USA's project in the Welch Unit. That too may be a close call commercially, but it has already been pronounced a technological success. The fact that neither was a resounding commercial success does not deter Justice. In fact it only gave him encouragement.

"Every great and new technology starts out as too expensive. They said 3-D was too expensive, and they said horizontal drilling was too expensive. But the economic return eventually overcame the high cost, and now with frequent use both 3-D and horizontal drilling costs are coming down all the time. You have to realize, I am one of only a handful involved in crosswell technology. We have only two sets of tools which are virtually handmade. With volume and competition the cost will come down. So cost is not a factor."

George Watts, Senior Geophysical Advisor to Oxy USA on its West Welch reservoir characterization study, agrees with Justice. "The cost will come down. Had it not been for the $10 million contributed by DOE, we probably would not have tried tomography, but I don't think there is any question that this interwell seismic logging will become the next technological wave to try and produce oil from depleting fields in the Permian Basin."

He said interest in the technology was very high. A recent seminar at CEED, presented by Justice, was sold out and a second has been scheduled for November 4.

Watts said a key to getting the cost down was to develop multiple receivers. Current receiver strings contain six elements and cost $1-2 million per string. "We need to get four such strings in a well to be cost effective." He explained that cables, connections and sophisticated electronics made the downhole receivers expensive.

Watts said Justice was now trying to develop the multiple receiver strings that would record four profiles at once and bring the cost down, comparable to logging costs. The lowest bid Watts was able to get for logging runs in the West Welch project was $70,000 per profile.

"It will take some time to get past the learning curve and for cost to come down, but I think interwell seismic imaging will have a significant footing in the market within two years," Watts said.

Jim Justice says the beauty of interwell seismic imaging, which he prefers to crosswell tomography, is that it gets the signal down into the rocks where the sound is propagated better and the higher frequencies are preserved.

"Rocks are competent and resonate sound much like a steel tuning bar, but on the surface there are many places where you can't get good reflection. Caliche and volcanic formations will nearly always eat up good seismic data."

Justice says the longer the distance between wells — the source and the receivers — the higher the risk of ruining resolution. "In the Welch project, we were 700 feet and got good resolution, but we once tried a mile-long line and it did not work. That, however, does not mean it can't work."

Justice uses a modified marine air gun, such as those in offshore seismic, to generate sound waves, but several sources are being considered as a downhole sound source. Among them are small charges of primer cord which act as firecracker-sized charges; Piezoelectric bender bars which hum to generate a signal; and even a magnetic technology in which a small crystal deforms in a magnetic field to produce a bang has also been considered.

"A lot of sources are being considered, but any source that is used must ultimately produce a wide band of frequencies, from the very low to the very high." Justice says it is not uncommon to receive 1,500 hertz in cross well reflection as compared to 50-100 for the surface. He says it is so sensitive the eye cannot manage it and the frequencies have to be filtered back to 750 hertz to get it look like seismic data and to see the separate beds.

Justice says a tomograph (whole picture) is merely a map of velocities through rock. To interpret the data the velocities are assigned colors. The higher velocities 20,000 ft. per second and higher are shown as blue-violet colors, velocities down to 16,500 ft. per second are shown as shades of green and yellow with red being the lowest velocity.

By calculating shear waves which are sensitive to fractures and porosity and compression waves, which are sensitive to what's in the pores, engineers are able to determine porosity and fluid or gas saturation. Gas is highly compressible and the oil-gas contact in a formation is easily distinguishable. However, water is barely compressible and determining the oil-water contact is more of a challenge.

"You can watch water, CO2 and steam move through a reservoir," says Justice. "But the hardest to see is water." He notes that one cannot read the degree of saturation in the pores, but can sometimes distinguish the content of the pores.

Both Justice and Watts believe that if and when tomography or crosswell seismic takes off, it could create a high demand for horizontal drilling in the Permian Basin. "Using existing wellbores and horizontal drilling to link porosity and sweet spots makes a lot of sense," said Watts.

"Horizontal drilling should prove itself as a powerful application to link fractures and porosity," said Justice, who first became interested in crosswell seismic in the 1980s. "I saw the industry heading toward exploitation, and decided to focus my energy on developing technologies for getting more oil out of known reservoirs. Knowing where not to drill a well can be worth a lot of money. So can knowing where your CO2 or water is going in a recovery project." He told of one major oil company that drilled a well outside its CO2 project and found a lot of CO2 where it should not have been.

The concept of crosswell seismic has been around since the 1950s, but Justice said it was too far out at that time. "It needed computer power to be effective. I started thinking about all this in 1983, and since then I have built a number of tools and written a lot of software."

He predicts that one day 3-D and crosswell seismic will be used together as the ultimate tools for modeling reservoirs. He says 3-D will provide aereal coverage and help extrapolate the information of tomography.

George Watts predicts that 3-D crosswell seismic imaging will be the next generation of technology after tomography, and that it will give the total volume of reservoir of a survey area. After that, Watts predicts that 4-D, the addition of time to dimension, will be the next round of technology. A consortium of industry partners is now examining the 4-D concept at Phillips Petroleum's Vacuum field in New Mexico.

As for his own future, Justice says the next few years will determine the options for his Dallas-based Advanced Reservoir Technologies. "We will either become a worldwide force, or we will go bust." Ultimately, he expects one of the major service companies to buy him out.

TRAINING: Center made available to both employees and clients

language. And that is basic to understanding our technology as they work at our locations around the world."

Kirk Langford, training manager at the Odessa Complex, which is closely linked to Odessa College's Continuing Education program, said three types of training are accomplished at the Center.

First, engineering graduates right out of a university are taught an intricate, intense course that takes about a year to complete.

Second, the center upgrades technology training for field employees. This is where the new version of ECLIPS will be taught, said Langford.

The third type of training is for clients. For example, he said majors call for special training and he said they recently ran a school for the Algerian Logging Co.

Along with bringing students to Odessa on a continuing basis, Western Atlas brings the latest oil and gas exploration technology to the Permian Basin. The new test well will be used to support a full range of research projects including cross well tomography and vertical seismic profiling.

There are actually two wells on the site with an air gun pit between them and Langford says this will enable the facility to experiment with cross well seismic and cross well tomography. "We are heavily focused on reservoir modeling, and anything that will help the producer," said Langford. "We intend to focus more on cross well tomography."

The training well simulates actual field conditions for enhanced research and personnel training, and includes an openhole reservoir completion with built-in casing and cement defects such that a variety of training activities and research can be accomplished.

Skerl said through factory training at the Center students can actually run a log, not just a simulation of one. And the training allows students to work on "an absolute characterization of the well, coring the well and determining exactly what is behind the casing, even testing the cement."

Skerl noted that a complete water treatment center is located underneath the rig floor of the well to treat all the chemicals used and ensure there are no spills into the ground water. All the tools used at Western Atlas' sites around the world are steam-washed and the sludge is treated, separated and the water is recirculated.

"A lot of countries don't have environmental requirements," said Skerl. "We are operating on the basis that our safety, health, environmental and quality processes are standardized operations everywhere. So when we bring people from the Middle East, Africa or Latin America here to Odessa they all learn the same operation standards. Whichever way you look at it, this is good, sound business. We create a much more productive environment."

He said the long-term benefits prove that this approach is an investment and has all the keys of success. It not only gives Western Atlas employees pride in their work, Skerl said it's fundamental.

"It's good citizenship," he said "The customer sees the benefits and appreciates it."

Skerl described Western Atlas' assets as its people and technology. Part of the technology training at the Center is the new version of ECLIPS. This vertical seismic technology allows for five tools or more to be run in the hole simultaneously. He said the original was on the market a couple of years ago and the company is now producing 75 to 100 systems per year.

Fritz Reuter, senior vice president of technology, said the ECLIPS is a fast, versatile data collection system that allows downhole measurement tool combinations for quality control to analyze data simultaneously. He added that some of the tool strings are as long as 150 feet.

"The intent is to save the customer rig time by only going in the hole one time, and measuring as much as possible in one run," Reuter said. "ECLIPS allows data manipulation because the recording is done on magnetic tape and can be transmitted from an offshore rig to the customer's office or home where recommendations can be made on a remote basis."

Along with determining a reservoir's natural gamma ray radiation, formation density, conductivity of the formation, travel times for acoustic signals through the formation and other log data, Reuter said the tool combination can include devices that extract cores -- up to 32 at a time -- from the formation sidewall. These are stored in magazines and retrieved at the surface. Fluid samples can also be taken.

"We are able to replace drill stem testing (DST) to a major extent so customers can reserve the DST strictly for those situations where they are absolutely sure they do have a reservoir and want to sample pressure, temperature and reservoir behavior in larger volumes," Reuter said.

"All this can be done with the ECLIPS system which allows quality assurance processing at the well site with greater speed and greater ease of use."

"We're working on real time transmission, we're able to run everything out of one truck and do it in any order you want," said Gary Cresswell, an engineering instructor on the applicability of the ECLIPS.

He described the logging unit cable as physically moving the tools in and out of the wellbore. It has seven copper conductors to feed information back and forth so the computers uphole talk to the computers downhole.

"It's a whole computer network in the truck," said Langford from inside the roomy, air conditioned logging truck which costs about $1.5 million by the time all the instrumentation is included. "The client sits in here next to the Atlas engineer and works on the data as it is compiled and is making decisions in real time."

This type of spontaneous decision making means cost savings to clients. He explained that an hour of thinking can be a very expensive thought process considering the cost of running some rigs especially in the Gulf of Mexico that cost $60,000 a day.

"This is true multitasking that allows the client to do anything at anytime," said Cresswell. "There used to be one set of tools and wet film to work with, now we can have two strings out and get results quicker and better."

Multitasking processors in the ECLIPS van at the well site allow multiple simultaneous operations, including logging, verification and data transmission.

Western Atlas engineers and customers can work together at the wellsite to improve reservoir characterization. Real-time quality controls afford data integrity and instrument calibration, while multitasking capabilities streamline the job and reduce rig time.

For example, the ECLIPS tool can be downhole with five tools on it. Along with density and acoustic logging tools, a dipmeter tool can be run on a stack to aid engineers in tracking orientation of reservoir rocks and patterns of depositional environment.

Western Atlas' Segmented Bond Tool works behind pipe to check the quality of cement which supports casing and isolates the different reservoirs. It sends signals radially to give a cement map image around the well and indicate communication possibilities between reservoirs.

An RCI (reservoir characterization instrument) tool can make fluid measurements as it is cycling through the tool and the engineer can determine whether to take a sample.

"A tool like this gives clients good information so they can make good decisions, and that just boils down to economics," said Langford.

Safety features included in the ECLIPS system include reduced non-circulatory well exposure due to minimal operating time, data preserved through an uninterruptible power supply in case of emergency and built-in data security during communication to and from customer locations through encryption.

The digital data is received and decoded by the processors in the van. The engineer looks at the individual waves from an acoustic log in microseconds printed out on high-definition color monitors for log viewing. The signals from downhole are processed in the two hard drives, each 11 gigabytes, and transmitted via fax or modem.

Western Atlas is also using satellite transmission with data encryption for security purposes. Future access may include using the World Wide Web.

"Early on we developed the multi-level vertical seismic tools at Stanford University and then developed the energy sources to go with them," said Skerl. "Now we are evolving the whole system further, increasing the number of sensors and miniaturizing so we can use smaller tools in smaller diameter wells."

He said the small diameter wells are a trend in the industry especially for exploration. He said the technology allows the user to go away from the borehole and image the subsurface much further than with regular logging tools. It also enhances interpretation from seismic response.

"You have the direct measurements and fluid properties you gain from normal logging tools, and on the same well you run borehole seismic," explained Skerl. "This gives a direct correlation with measurements in the same position at the same time. Then you overlay the 3-D seismic volume and you've found a direct linkage to calibrating the subsurface data."

He said this combination offers a tremendous economic advantage in minimizing risk and maximizing potential success. It not only pinpoints infill locations but also allows the user to see where the reservoir changes so it's obvious where not to drill.

For horizontal wells, he said the results show a dramatic improvement of identifying fracture patterns and fine-tuning where to drill horizontal wells along the fractures for maximum production.

ACTIVITY HIGHLIGHTS

The rigs on the map above show counties in which significant drilling activity has taken place, as reported in the Activity Highlights below.

Martin County yields Silurian oil discovery

Staff Reports

A Silurian discovery has been completed in Martin County, 14 miles west of Tarzan.

SANTA FE ENERGY RESOURCES INC. completed the No. 1 Mabee Mercury to flow 355 barrels of 39.1 gravity crude and 5 Mcfd on an 8/64 inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 850 psi. The well flowed from perforations 12,805 to 12,816 ft., which had been acidized with 250 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Permitted as a 13,350 ft. wildcat, the well was drilled to 13,441 ft. and plugged back to 13,354 ft. A 4 1/2 inch casing liner was hung from 10,700 to 13,438 ft.

On kelly bushing elevation of 2,975 ft., formation tops include the San Andres at 4,676 ft., Dean at 9,498, Strawn at 10,879, Silurian at 12,225 and Ellenburger at 13,255 ft.

Ellenburger discovery pumps 103 barrels

GECKO INC. has completed an Ellenburger discovery in Borden County, 10 miles southwest of Justiceburg.

On potential test, the No. 1 Gecko Perryman "2" pumped 103 barrels of 38 gravity crude from open hole interval 8,484 to 8,509 ft. The interval was acidized with 200 gallons of 15 percent NeFeHCL acid.

Scheduled as a 9,000 ft. test, the well was drilled to 8,509 ft. with 5 1/2 inch casing set at 8,483 ft.

Formation tops, on ground elevation of 2,647 ft., include the San Andres at 266 ft., Lower Leonard at 4,952, Upper Spraberry at 5,068, Lower Spraberry at 5,755, Dean Sandstone at 6,565, Wolfcamp at 6,674, Strawn at 7,962, Mississippian at 8,340 and Ellenburger at 8,484 ft.

Location is 980 ft. from east and 1,664 ft. from north lines of Section 2, Block HB, J.D. Black survey, SF 5913, Abst. 1363.

Chi Operating tests Eddy County find

Eddy County, N.M. has gained a modest Bone Spring discovery.

CHI OPERATING INC. potentialed the No. 1 Millman State to pump eight barrels of 42 gravity crude, 221 Mcfd and 215 barrels of water from perforations 6,315 to 6,462 ft. The interval was acidized with 2,000 gallons of 7.5 percent HCL acid and fractured with 266,000 lbs. 16/30 sand.

Total depth was 6,630 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

The well topped the San Andres at 2,412 ft., Bone Spring at 3,036 and Bone Spring Sandstone at 6,306 ft. on kelly bushing elevation of 3,473 ft.

Location is 660 ft. from south and west lines of Section 11, T19s, R28e.

Crockett County gets Seven Rivers strike

A Seven Rivers discovery has been recorded in Crockett County, southwest of multiple production in the Clara Couch field and south of the Noelke field, 12 miles southeast of Iraan.

BEACH EXPLORATION INC. completed the No. 2 Noelke "34" to flow two barrels of 34.9 gravity crude, 25 Mcfd and three barrels of water from perforations 1,475 to 1,491 ft. The well flowed on a two inch choke with flowing tubing pressure of 20 psi.

Staked as a 1,650 ft. test, the well drilled to 1,499 ft., where 4 1/2 inch casing was set.

Location is 1,220 ft. from south and west lines of Section 34, Block GG, HE&WT survey, Abst. 5238.

The operator has requested a field designation of Halff North (Seven Rivers) for the discovery.

Lomak Petroleum completes $21 million property acquisition

FORT WORTH — Lomak Petroleum Inc. reports that it had completed the previously announced acquisition of Appalachian properties from Transfuel Inc.

The properties, located in Ohio, Pennsylvania and New York, were purchased for $20.2 million in cash and $800,000 worth of Lomak common stock. The acquisition includes proved oil and gas reserves, gas gathering lines and undeveloped acreage. A large portion of the properties is adjacent to existing Lomak production.

Combining the Transfuel transaction with the Parker & Parsley purchase completed in August, Lomak completed $41.2 million of Appalachian acquisitions in the third quarter. In aggregate, the properties are estimated to contain proved reserves of nearly 69 Bcfe of gas and currently produce over 18,000 Mcf per day. The nearly 1,400 miles of gas gathering systems included in the purchase greatly expand Lomak's marketing activities close to the attractive northeastern gas markets. Also included were 190,000 undeveloped acres, a large portion of which has drilling potential from the Knox (Rose Run) formation which lies below existing producing zones.

The company also reported that it is contemplating a private placement of $25 million of convertible preferred stock. The proceeds of the proposed private placement, when and if completed, would initially be used to pay down the company's revolving credit facility. Subsequently, Lomak expects to use the availability under the credit facility to assist in funding future acquisitions and development activities. In the absence of another significant transaction, the private placement is expected to eliminate any need to issue common stock in an underwritten offering for the foreseeable future.

In commenting on the acquisition, John H. Pinkerton, Lomak's president, said, "Upon giving effect to all the acquisitions completed in 1995, as well as from the impact of our 1995 drilling program, production by year end is expected to reach 10,000 BOE per day, more than double 1994's average of 4,950 BOE per day. Given the numerous acquisition opportunities and inventory of over 600 drilling projects, we expect to continue to grow Lomak using the same strategy that has taken us from $7 million of assets in 1990 to over $200 million today."

Sales strategies: It's time to evaluate the options

Recently, the public auction process has become very popular as a way to divest oil and gas properties, especially in the lower price ranges. While auctions may be appropriate for some properties, they may not be right for every seller, according to PLS President Ron W. Wise. In fact, according to Wise, sellers should take an aggressive look at their options and goals before picking a sale technique for their individual properties.

For example, many companies pick the quick close as the number one reason for choosing auctions, since sellers generally receive their proceeds within 60-90 days. Wise said this is important for people in a hurry but should not be the sole reason to pick auctions over negotiated sales. The time it takes to sell is generally a function of the time required for the seller to gather data, negotiate the price and close the sale. A disciplined seller with a realistic price can move properties in today's market very quickly (21-45 days) through negotiations.

The flip side to speed at the auction is the no-minimum sale. Unfortunately, selling without a minimum raises unnecessary risk. Certainly more traditional sale techniques offer sellers more protection and control than the no-minimum auction.

Since an auction involves a public event on a set date and time, sellers must meet deadlines. Having a limited time to gather data for buyers can put undue pressure on a seller.

Engineering and well review always take longer than expected, especially in large companies where some personnel may not want to sell. Large companies may need deadlines to keep a program on line, whereas most smaller companies do not.

Sellers should take an aggressive look at their options and goals before picking a sale technique for their individual properties.

Buyer perception is another variable to consider. Most auction buyers are there for a (perceived) bargain since there are no minimum sale prices. For a quality property with upside and development potential, an auction probably does not attract the proper buyers or provide the right atmosphere (buyer interaction) to leverage price. Consequently, most properties with upside potential are better sold under a negotiated, hands-on marketing effort where technical marketing agents lead buyers through an organized data room.

One advantage to the auction is that it provides a seller the ability to unload a "grab bag" of properties quickly and efficiently without having to negotiate individually with each buyer over every property.

Wise pointed out, however, that improvements in packaging, desk-top publishing and software make marketing individual properties under sealed-bid more cost-effective.

"PLS specializes in preparing One and Two-Page Grid Sheets™ to simplify the evaluation stage and allow sellers to break-out field level properties.

Auction sale terms are also rigid, with all buyers bound by the same rules. "There is no reason sellers cannot incorporate more rigid terms and conditions with traditional means of marketing properties to keep buyers from re-negotiating," Wise said.

Wise also pointed out that the location of an auction is important since selling a Permian Basin property in Houston would limit the number of Midland buyers who might attend. Sealed-bid and negotiated sale procedures can be accomplished by phone, fax or mail.

"Money on the table" is also an important consideration, since the winning bidder at auction knows exactly how much higher his bid was than that of the competition. A sealed-bid sale, besides limiting downside, allows profit opportunity for sellers since buyers risk "leaving money on the table" by bidding blind.

Finally, sellers should consider cost. Auctions are traditionally more expensive than selling properties by owner, using a listing service or retaining contractual services through an experienced agent. Sellers should look closely at marketing costs, evaluation costs and fees before deciding on their agent or technique.

Wise concluded, "Auctions have established themselves as a bona fide strategy to help oilmen sell properties, but sellers should look at all options before signing on the bottom line."

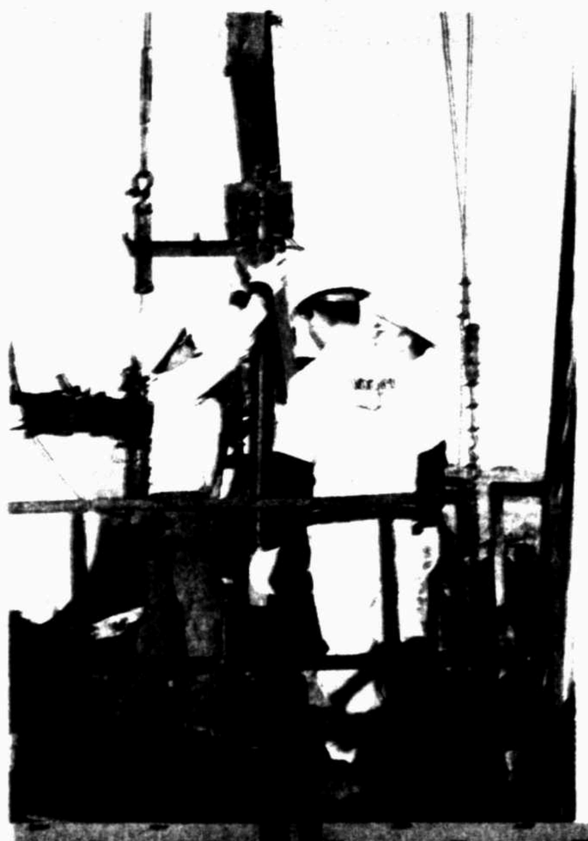

*PLS is a marketing and information service company with offices in Midland, Houston, Dallas and Calgary. The firm publishes reports listing properties for sale and newsletters on mergers, acquisitions, divestitures and trades. PLS also manages TradeBank, directly consults for sellers and provides other industry advisory services. It pays to explore the possibilities

Horizontal drilling expands completion options

Acidizing and fracturing have long been important well completion methods, but they are not the most effective in all cases. Horizontal completions give the operator another strong option.

Rod Vogel, President of Vogel Horizontal and Directional Drilling in Midland, listed four primary ways horizontal drilling can improve production:

1. Increased total reservoir exposure.
2. Intersecting fractures or areas of secondary porosity.
3. Greater exposure to thin reservoirs.
4. Can reduce water coning.

"This method is most economical when used as a re-entry technique, because the vertical part of the well has already been drilled," he said.

Vogel offers complete horizontal and directional drilling services including medium radius and short radius drilling.

In addition to using articulated motors, the company does short radius horizontal drilling using high torque, low speed motors that can run a rock bit with no articulations. This motor and bit combination provides excellent directional control and makes for a very good rate of penetration (ROP). Horizontal well bores over 2,500' have been drilled using this assembly.

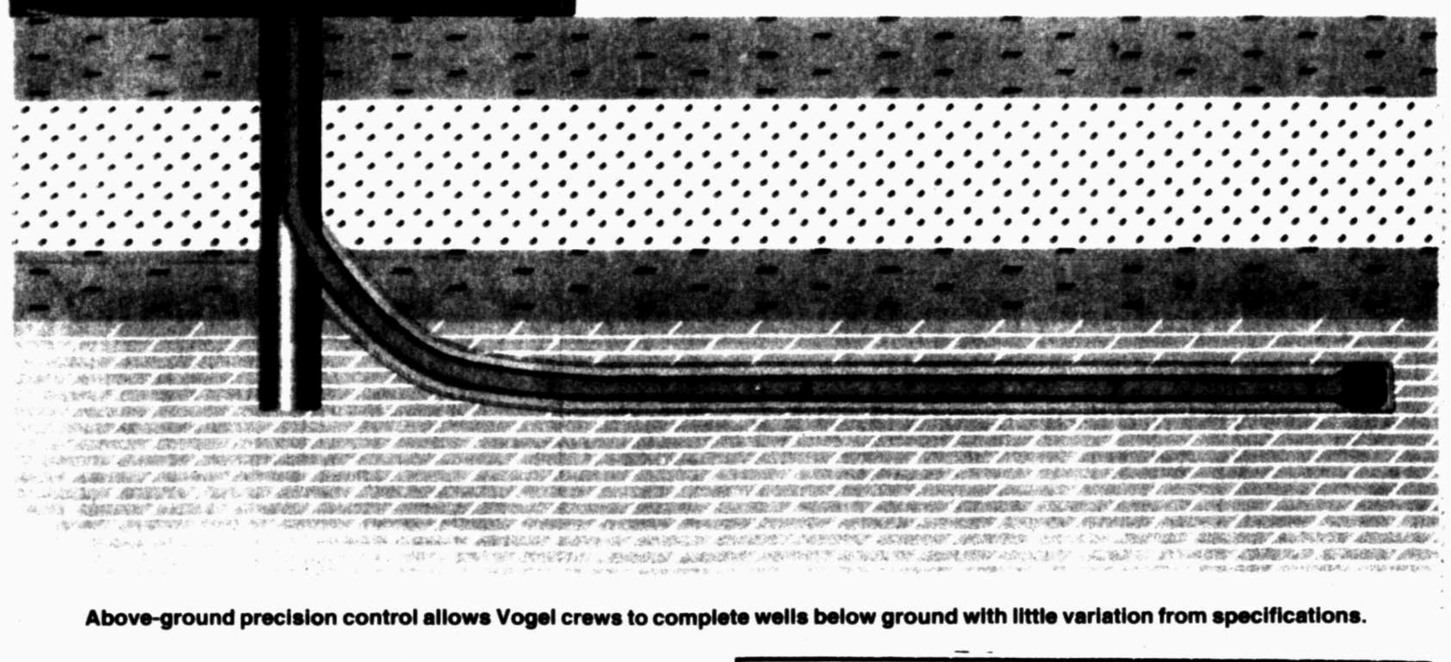

It also allows the operator to rotate the drill string in short radius turns, further increasing the penetration rate. A faster penetration rate reduces the cost of the operation.

Using this motor assembly allows 1,000' horizontal re-entry projects to be drilled for less than $100,000.

Vogel also provides well and project evaluation, and can design a project from "wellhead off to wellhead back on."

By considering all factors, they help clients decide if horizontal drilling is appropriate for a given well.

Vogel Horizontal and Directional Drilling designs and executes horizontal and directional drilling plans. The company headquarters is at 415 West Wall. The phone number is (915) 570-4719.

Armco, USX agree to sell National-Oilwell

PITTSBURGH - Armco Inc. and USX Corp. announced that a definitive agreement has been reached to sell their jointly owned partnership, National-Oilwell, to an investor group including Duff & Phelps/Inverness LLC of Greenwich, Conn. and National-Oilwell management. The companies had previously announced a letter of intent in May.

The sale, which is subject to several contingencies, including financing, is expected to close by the end of the year. The companies said that most of the purchase price would be paid in cash, with the balance in notes.

National-Oilwell, headquartered in Houston, manufactures drilling equipment and pumps and distributes equipment and supplies to the oil industry through moire than 120 outlets worldwide.

Occidental given Congo exploration rights

LOS ANGELES — Occidental Petroleum Corp. has been granted production-sharing agreements for two offshore blocks in the Republic of the Congo.

The 345,000-acre Marine XI and 242,000-acre Marine XII blocks are in the west Africa Salt Basin, which stretches from northern Gabon to southern Angola. Eight billion barrels of oil have been discovered in onshore and offshore areas of the basin, with one-fourth of those in offshore fields in the Congolese sector. Occidental's blocks are immediately offshore in less than 100 meters of water and are adjacent to major producing oil fields.

Under the agreements, Occidental initially will conduct a 1,000-kilometer seismic program and drill one exploratory well on each block. Occidental has an 85 percent participating interest and is the operator. HydroCongo, the Congolese national oil company, has a 15 percent participating interest.

UTI completes sale of Union Supply Co.

WAYNE, Pa. — UTI Energy Corp., a diversified, domestic oil field service company, and Continental Emsco Co., a manufacturer and distributor of oil field equipment, announced that they concluded a transaction on September 29, 1995, whereby Continental Emsco Company has purchased for cash substantially all of the net operating assets of Union Supply Co., a wholly owned subsidiary of UTI.

The assets acquired by Continental Emsco represent all of UTI's oil field supplies assets. Union Supply distributes oil field supplies and repairs subsurface pumps at fifteen locations throughout west Texas and New Mexico. Union's operating results for 1994 were essentially break even on revenues of $18.6 million.

UTI expects to realize cash proceeds of approximately $4 million, net of costs associated with the sale, and a net loss of approximately $0.12 per share on the disposition.

Following the sale, UTI's operations primarily consist of contract drilling services in the Anadarko and Appalachian Basin, and pressure pumping services in the Appalachian Basin.

Noble Drilling unit to buy two jackup units

HOUSTON — Noble Drilling Corp. reported that its subsidiary, Noble Drilling (U.S.) Inc., has entered into memoranda of agreement to purchase two jackup drilling units and related drilling equipment for a total of $10.1 million in cash. The Azteca and the Maya, both Levingston 111 slot rigs, were originally constructed in 1977. The rigs, which are currently idle, will be refurbished and cantilevered by Noble Drilling prior to being returned to service. Closing is scheduled to occur in October 1995.

Aviva Petroleum awarded block in Colombia

DALLAS — Aviva Petroleum Inc. has been awarded a new association contract with Ecopetrol, the Colombian national oil company, covering the 39,000-acre Yuruyaco block adjacent to the eastern boundaries of its Santana and La Fragua blocks in the eastern Andes over-thrust belt in southwestern Colombia.

The contract is expected to become effective in November after ratification by Colombia's Ministry of Mines and Energy. Under the terms of the contract, seismic surveys totaling 19 and 12 miles, respectively, must be completed in the first and second contract years, for which the company's 45 percent share of the costs is estimated to total approximately $530,000. If Aviva decides to proceed into the third year, the drilling of a test well would be required.

Through its 100 percent owned subsidiary, Neo Energy Inc., Aviva holds a 45 percent working interest in its Colombian acreage. A subsidiary of Garnet Resources Corp. owns the remaining 55 percent.

Kelley Oil tests successful Louisiana well

HOUSTON — Kelley Oil & Gas Corp. announced the completion of the Mears No. 1 well in the Sibley Field of Webster Parish, Louisiana.

The well encountered productive Hosston A and B sands and tested at a daily rate of 7.2 million cubic feet of gas and 20 barrels of condensate through perforations from 7,963 to 8,870 feet. The flow rate was achieved through a 20/64 inch choke at a flowing tubing pressure of 1,400 pounds per square inch. The well began flowing to sales on September 25, 1995

Kelley Oil & Gas owns a 23.51 percent working interest in the well, and Total Minatome Corp., an indirect wholly owned subsidiary of Total, S.A. located in Paris, France, owns a 34.69 percent working interest.

Two pipelines may move Caspian Sea oil

BY N.Y. Times News Service

HOUSTON — King Solomon would be proud.

Unable to decide which of two routes represents the wiser course for shipping out oil from the Caspian Sea, the members of an international oil company consortium are expected to split up the production and transport the crude on both routes.

Facing political pressure from Russia, Turkey and the United States, a 12-member partnership led by British Petroleum and Amoco Corp. is believed ready to spend tens of millions of dollars more to develop two pipelines and avoid a potential quagmire.

"You've got two choices, and you're going to make somebody mad; the most obvious decision is you split it in two," said Matthew Sagers, director of energy service for the Washington-based consulting firm PlanEcon.

The partners met in London last week and are slated to announce their final decision Monday in the Azerbaijani capital of Baku on the western coast of the Caspian Sea.

The five U.S. partners — Amoco, Pennzoil Co., Unocal Corp., McDermott International and Exxon Corp. — all back the dual-route option, a source close to the consortium said.

And many analysts agree with that choice. "You need two routes," said John Hervey, an analyst with Donaldson, Lufkin & Jenrette in New York.

The consortium — known as the Azerbaijan International Operating Co. — is trying to develop three huge oil fields in the Caspian Sea that contain estimated reserves equivalent to 4 billion barrels of oil.

The partners plan to spend $7.5 billion over the next two decades to develop the Guneshli, Chirag and Azeri fields near Baku, one of the world's largest refining centers. They hope to begin pumping oil next year, with production expected to reach 600,000 barrels a day by the end of the decade.

But like all oil projects in that part of the world, the dilemma has been how to get the oil out for export to world markets.

The Azerbaijan International consortium partners aren't ready to address the ultimate question of how to export the bulk of their production from the Caspian fields. Instead, they're looking for a short-term solution to handle the first oil coming out of the region, up to about 100,000 barrels a day.

Because which route opens first could have great bearing on which route is ultimately chosen, analysts are tracking developments with great interest, the way U.S. political analysts would watch the New Hampshire primary.

Of the two options being considered for this "early oil," neither is pretty.

The Russians have pushed for the consortium to use an existing pipeline that runs from the Russian Black Sea port of Novorossiysk, through war-torn Chechnya, to Baku.

Built in the mid-1980s to transport Siberian crude to Baku refineries, the pipeline would require at least $60 million of work to carry the Caspian crude. Besides being vulnerable to sabotage in Chechnya, the line ends at a port that is closed 30 days a year because of bad weather, Hervey noted.

The Russian route would require transporting the oil via tanker through the already busy Bosporus Strait to reach world markets. Over a 10-year period, 167 major tanker accidents were recorded on the waterway.

This Russian route was favored by British Petroleum, the Russian oil company Lukoil and Norway's state-owned Statoil, a source close to the consortium said.

The second route would run from Baku west to Supsa, a Georgian Black Sea port found on almost no international maps. This option, which would cost more than $200 million to develop, would likely involve shipping oil by rail car from Baku, at least at first, to link up with an existing pipeline east of the Georgian capital of Tbilisi, Sagers said.

That line runs to the Black Sea port of Batumi, just south of Supsa. And while that line is only about 15 years old, the pipeline is in poor condition. Oil-hungry locals have been poking holes in the pipeline to help satisfy their needs, Sagers said.

This proposal was strongly backed by Turkey, whose state-owned oil company is a member of the consortium. Turkey has promised to help finance construction of such a route and has agreed to buy oil for domestic consumption.

But, like Chechnya, Georgia is highly unstable.

The United States has urged the consortium to use both routes.

MEETINGS

API, SPE chapters schedule joint meeting

A special industry luncheon is set for Tuesday at the River Oaks Country Club.

NAMEDROPPING

Two promotions have been made at Midland-based Rice Engineering Corp.

MIKE POSSON has been named vice president of engineering and manufacturing. He has held several positions with the company during the past 11 years, including quality control manager and most recently manager of engineering and production. He relocates to Midland from the company's Great Bend, Kansas facilities.

TOM JORDAN has been promoted to vice president of sales and marketing. He has been with the company since 1993 when he joined the firm in Houston as international sales manager. He will remain in Houston.

GEORGE A. DAVIDSON JR., chairman and chief executive officer of Consolidated Natural Gas Co. has been elected 1995-96 chairman of the American Gas Association during the organization's annual conference.

Davidson has been chairman and chief executive officer of Pittsburgh-based Consolidated Natural Gas since 1987. He joined the company as a senior rate engineer in 1966, after serving with the Federal Power Commission, the forerunner of the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission.

Two senior Chevron executives will gain added responsibilities with the retirement at year's end of J. DENNIS BONNEY, Chevron vice chairman and director.

His responsibilities will be divided between RAY GALVIN, president of Chevron U.S.A. Production Co. and DICK MATZKE, president of Chevron Overseas Petroleum Inc.

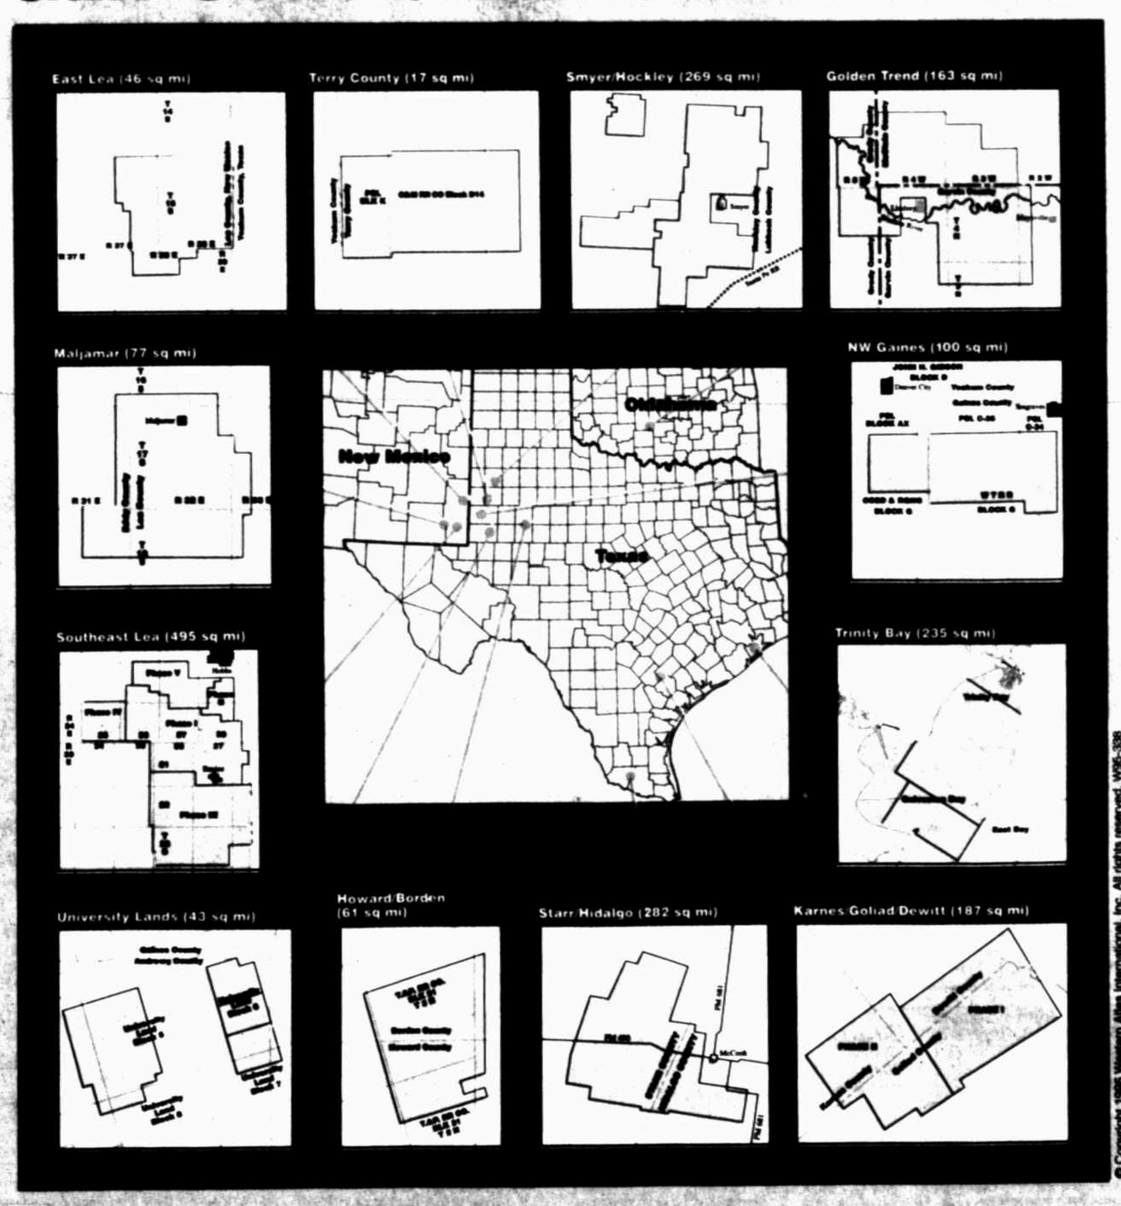

Noble Drilling Services Inc. announces a promotion and a management addition.

DOUG L. WHITE has been promoted to Vice President - International Operations. He joined Noble Drilling in September 1994 as Director of Operations for the company. White previously worked for Amoco Production Co. in various capacities for 20 years prior to joining Noble.

In addition, C.H. (BUDDY) KING has joined Noble Drilling Services Inc. as Vice President - Technical Services. King has 29 years of experience in the drilling industry in the area of operations.

Sheffield Exploration sells assets

DENVER — Sheffield Exploration Co. Inc. has closed the sale of all its gas processing, gathering and storage assets in Kansas and Oklahoma for $5.5 million. The assets were sold to subsidiaries of NGC Corp. of Houston. The proceeds will be used to pay down substantially all of the company's existing bank debt of approximately $2.5 million and for working capital.

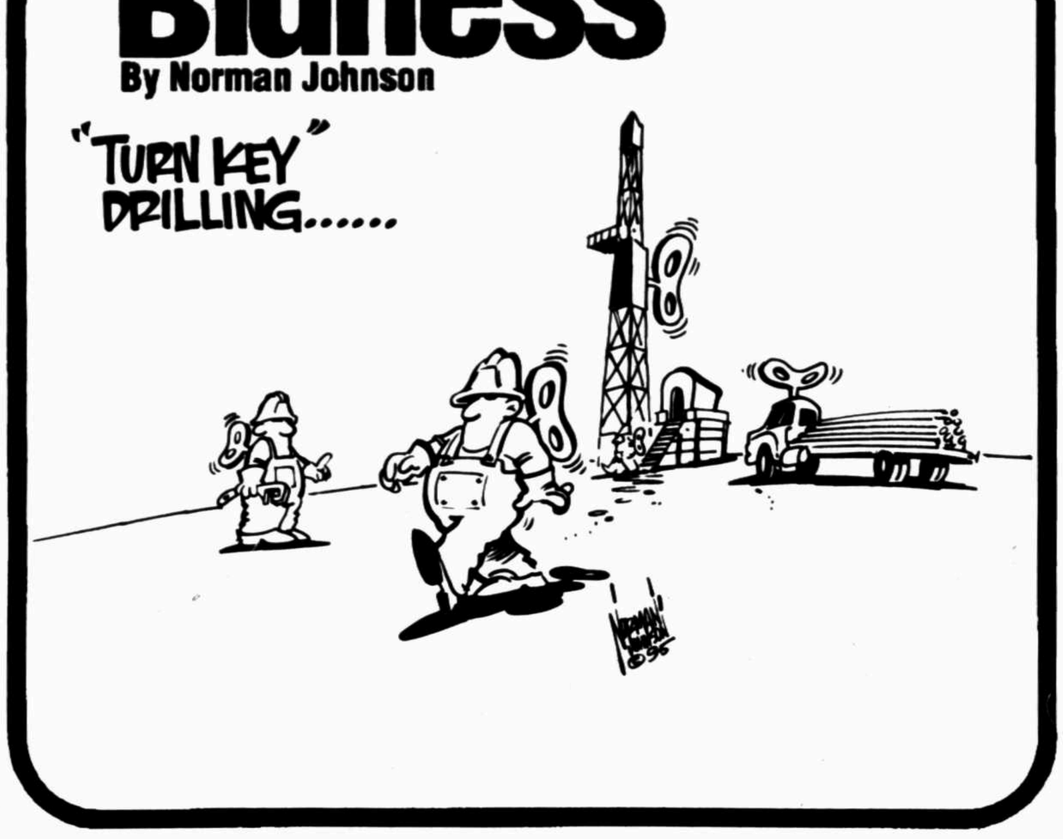

The company will recognize a gain of approximately $1.1 million (33 cents per share) during the quarter ended December 31, 1995 (the second quarter of its fiscal year).

The company also announced it had delayed filing its form 10-K for its fiscal year ended June 30, 1995 with the Securities and Exchange Commission until the week of October 2, 1995. The Company plans to file the 10-K on October 6, 1995. The extension was requested in order that the information about the asset sale could be included in the filing.

Sheffield is an energy company involved in exploration, production and natural gas services in the United States.

Hallwood Consolidated acquires Hallwood Energy Partners units

DENVER — Hallwood Consolidated Resources Corp. announced that on Sept. 29, 1995 it purchased 1,158,696 units of Hallwood Energy Partners, L.P. from the nominee of the class in the In Re: Hallwood Energy Partners, L.P. Securities Litigation filed in federal district court in the Southern District of New York.

The settlement of this litigation was effective in September, and the class had received the units as part of its settlement with the defendants. HCRC exercised its option to acquire such units for $5,330,000 in cash, which represents the same price at which they were issued to the class nominee. After this acquisition, HCRC owns 19.5 percent of the outstanding units of HEP.

HCRC also announced that it has called a Special Meeting of Stockholders for November 8, 1995 to consider a one for ten reverse split of HCRC's common stock and a reduction in the number of authorized shares of common stock from 50,000,000 to 2,000,000 shares and of authorized shares of preferred stock from 10,000,000 to 500,000 shares. The record date for the Special Meeting is Sept. 27, 1995.

Noble Affiliates buys Gulf of Mexico properties

ARDMORE, Okla. — Noble Affiliates, Inc. has purchased interests in three offshore properties for $24.7 million.

The properties and working interests acquired consist of High Island A-325 (100 percent W.I.), Galveston 150L (100 percent W.I.) and Eugene Island 286 (55 percent W.I.).

The properties are presently being developed and will require additional capital to install production facilities and pipelines, as well as additional drilling and completion activities.

The company estimates it will incur approximately $15 million of development costs on these properties over the next nine months.

Gas production from High Island A-325 and Eugene Island 286 is projected to commence during the first quarter of 1996. Gas production from Galveston 150L is expected to commence during the second quarter of 1996.

The company estimates the net proved gas reserves associated with the interests acquired at 42 billion cubic feet.

Noble Affiliates, Inc. is an independent energy company with exploration and production operations throughout major basins in the United States, including the Gulf of Mexico, as well as international operations primarily in Canada, Tunisia and Equatorial Guinea.

Schlumberger Wireline & Testing GeoQuest Schlumberger

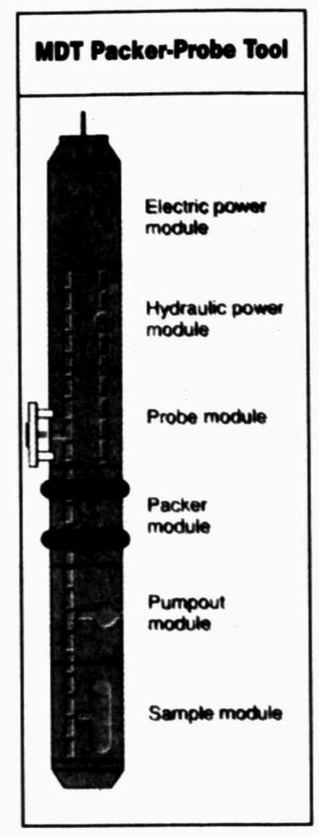

SCHLUMBERGER'S MDT MODULAR FORMATION DYNAMICS TESTER

The MDT Packer Module employs two inflatable packers to isolate a zone for testing. Minimum packer spacing is 3-ft. which allows testing an area 4,000 times greater than the standard probe and with a radius of investigation approaching 80-ft.

Applications
• Pressure and fluid sampling when conditions are difficult for a standard probe:
-Fractures
-Vuggy formations
-Unconsolidated formations
-Supercharged reservoirs
-Low permeability reservoirs
