Militants Refuse Release

Khomeini: 'Rub America's Face In The Dirt'

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — The revolutionary government announced Friday some of the 50 American hostages held in the U.S. Embassy will tried as spies and others will be released "as soon as possible." But militants occpying the embassy said they will release no hostages until the ousted shah is sent back to Iran.

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, beset by provincial revolts that pose the gravest threat yet to his 10-month-old regime, urged his countrymen to unite and "rub America's face in the dirt."

Khomeini implied the United States was behind a rebellion by Iran's largest minority, the Azeri Turks, who on Thursday seized control of Tabriz, the nation's fourth largest city 300 miles northwest of here, and still held the radio station and the governor's mansion on Friday.

Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh told a news conference he would announce a date for a spy trial within 48 hours. He said those hostages "not consciously involved in espionage" would be freed "as soon as possible." He accused others of espionage and said, "I don't think those people are going to benefit from diplomatic immunity."

Asked about possible death sentences for the hostages, Ghotbzadeh said, "I hope we don't reach that extent. But on the face of the earth anything is possible." He also said arrangements were made to allow neutral observers to visit the hostages.

State Department spokesman Walter Ramsay called Ghotbzadeh's statement on the spy trials "absolutely outrageous. They (the Iranians) had no business taking them hostage and they have no business putting them on trial."

President Carter, meeting in Washington with about 100 relatives of the hostages, ruled out any military move that might endanger the hostages. "I am not going to take any military action that would cause bloodshed or arouse the unstable captors of our hostages to attack them or punish them," he said.

Although his statement seemed more conciliatory than previous ones, the president did not say he wouldn't use force if the hostages were harmed. He previously warned Iran of "extremely grave consequences" if the captives are injured and his adminisration has left open the possibility of military action if they are put on trial.

In New York, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim said spy trials would violate the Vienna conventions of 1961 and 1963 which specify that diplomats, consular officials and diplomatic premises are immune to seizure. Iran signed both conventions. A U.N. spokesman reported Waldheim "remains in contact with the Iranian foreign minister," but declined to say if that meant the secretary general had had another telephone conversation with Ghotbzadeh.

Waldheim's spokesman Rudolf Stajduhar said the secretary general also deplored the fatal shooting Friday in Paris of Shahriar Mustapha Chafik, 34, nephew of ousted Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi.

A spokesman for the embassy militants contradicted Ghotbzadeh's statement about some hostages being freed. "We will release nobody, nobody at all" unless the deposed shah is returned to Iran, and "we have made no decision on the visits," he said. He said it was "up to the people of Iran" to schedule a trial.

In another broadcast by Tehran Radio, Ghotbzadeh was quoted as saying, "In cooperation with all forces hostile to imperialism and Zionism in Iran and the world, a committee of independent and liberated personalities will be formed to investigate the file on the U.S. government's crimes" against Iran. It reported the foreign minister said "the world will learn from this committee of the activities of U.S. spies who are active in the guise of diplomacy."

The broadcast gave no further information and did not say if his statement was related to a students' call for "libera-

Gasoline Rationing Plan Proposed As Standby

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Energy Department proposed on Friday a standby gasoline rationing plan that would divide available supplies among the states in proportion to their past gasoline consumption.

The plan, subject to revision and then congrssional review, could be activated by the president in any national gasoline shortage of at least 20 percent and which lasted 30 days or longer.

The department provied no official estimates of the impact of its plan either on states or on individual motorists.

But a department source, declining to be identified, estimated unofficially that a 20 percent general shortage probably would mean a cutback of roughly one-third in the amount of gasoline available to the typical motorist.

That's because some of the available gasoline would first be set aside in state and federal reserves for discretionary distribution to hardship cases, and some would go into extra rations for essential services, farming and business requirements.

Ration coupons would be isued for registered vehicles rather than to all licensed drivers. When justified, they would be issued for unregistered vehicles like trctors and construction equipment.

"The possession of a validly registered vehicle is a better indicator of need, as reflected in gasoline use, than possession of a driver's license," the department said.

It said issuing ration coupons to all licensed drivers would provide gasoline to many people who drive rarely or never.

Douglas G. Robinson, acting director of the department's Economic Regulatory Administration, told a news conference, however, the department is inviting public comment on the licensed-driver rationing method or any other alternatives.

Robinson conceded that the system of rationing to licensed vehicles poses problems, such as the built-in benefit it would represent for families with several cars, regardless of the frequency in which these vehicles are used.

But Robinson also said the registered-vecicle criterion would prohibit the issuance of gasoline rations for junk cars that are not in operating condition.

He said public hearings would be held on the proposal, and that Preident Carter wants a final version ready by Feb. 1, for submission to Congress early in the next session.

Uder the new Emergency Energy Conservation Act, Congress will have 30 days to review the final plan, which will be considered approved unless rejected by both houses in a joint resolution. As proposed, the plan includes these prime features.

— In a severe shortage, available gasoline would be divided among the states in proportion to their past use during a "base period," probably the corresponding month of some past year. Under current allocation rules, the base year is November, 1977 through October, 1978, but this probably would change before rationing could be applied.

— Supplemental rations would be granted to "priority" activities including those necessary for national security, public transportation, protection of public health, safety and welfare, energy production and the maintenance of communication services.

— Farmers would receive enough gasoline to meet food and fiber production goals approved by he president.

— Supplemental rations also would be granted to businesses and government organizations for signifcant off-road vehicle uses.

— Businesses would be allotted gasoline rations based on their historic use, not merely on a per-vehicle basis.

— State and local rationing offices would distribute extra gasoline rations to hardship applicants and the handicapped.

— Ration coupons could be freely bought and sold, and the Energy Departent could join in the buying and selling in order to keep the supply of coupons in balance with the supply of gasoline.

Robinson said department economists estimate that, aside from the cost of the gasoline itself, the ration coupons might be worth $1.50 per gallon on this "white market" in a 20 percent shortage.

Social Security Tax Cut Urged

WASHINGTON (AP) — A panel of outside advisers on Friday urged Congress to cut the Social Security payroll tax, tap general revenues to pay for Medicare and make half of all Social Security benefits subject to income taxes.

The Advisory Council on Social Security, in a 400-page report produced in 18 months of study, made many other recommendations for changes in the system that collects taxes from 110 million workers and employers and pays benefits of more than $10 billion a year to 35 million Americns.

The 13-member panel proposed rejiggering the benefit formula to provide bigger retirement checks fo both lifelong low-wage earners and high-wage earners. It called for cost-of-living increases twice a year instead of annually when inflation exceeds 6 percent.

It said widows and women divorced after 10 years of marriage should get a larger share of former spouses' benefits. It said earnings sharing was "the most promising approach" to improve benefits for women, though it stopped short of endorsing a specific plan to split Social Security credits evenly between husbands and wives.

The council's plan would cut the 6.13 percent payroll tax to 5.6 percent in 1980 and freeze it there for 25 years. That tax is scheduled to climb to 6.65 percent in 1981.

The plan would mean that a worker making $10,000 a year would pay $560 in payroll tax instead of $613 in 1980 and $665 in 1981. A $20,000-a-year worker would pay $1,120 insead of $1,226 and $1,330.

The panel said the Internal Revenue Service was wrong in 1941 wen it ruled that Social Security benefits were not income. If the benefits were treated like private pensions, 83 percent would be taxed, because the average retiree paid in only 17 percent of what he gets back from Social Security, the council said.

Taxing half of the benefits would affect about two out of five families and individuals receiving Social Security. Some 10.6 million families or individuals would pay an average $350 a year in taxes, or a total of $3.7 billion. The taxes would not apply to 13.6 milion other families or individuals whose income would remain too low to be taxed, the council said.

A narrow majority of the panel said "serious consideration" should be given to raising the retirement age from 65 after the year 2000. The panel also strongly urged that federal and other government workers be brought into the Social Security system.

By law, the secretary of health, education and welfare must appoint such a panel every four years to review the Social Security system, and such recommendations of past panels as addition of survivor's and disability benefits have eventually been adopted.

This council's recommendations on financing are likely to play a large role in the debate in Congress over whether to roll back the big payroll tax increase scheduled for 1981.

Workers now face an 8 percent rise in Social Security tax in 1981. The council plan would give at least a 9 percent cut to all workers and more to top wage earners. It wants to scale back scheduled rises in the wage base on which the tax is collected. That ceiling, now $22,900, is headed for $25,900 in 1980 and $29,700 in 1981. The council wuld hold it to $24,900 in 1980 and $27,000 in 1981.

The changes in the formula would raise benefits for long-time, low-wage earners by up to 19 percent and for high-wage earners by up to 14 percent. People in the middle would have slight gains or losses on the order of 1 percent or 2 percent, while people who work only sporadically under Social Security — including double-dippers from the federal payroll — would get lower benefits.

For someone who earned an average of $265 a month for 30 years, the council's formula would provide a monthly retirement check of $347 in 1982, up from $292 under the current system. At the same time, someone earning $1,800 a month would get $807, up from $709.

Council Chairman Henry Aaron, a Brookings Institution economist, said that paying for Medicare with a specified portion of corporate and income taxes, which already pay Medicare doctors' bills, "need not necessarily create a larger deficit" in the federal budget.

He said that many panel members believe Congress must cut taxes soon and that Medicare expenses could replace a $14 billion tax cut.

The council was unanimous on Social Security's "soundness" and "convinced that all current and future beneficiaries can count on receiving all the benefits to which they are entitled."

Man In Wheelchair Guns Down Intruder

DALLAS (AP) — Paul Randolph, 61, heard someone breaking into his home about dawn. He got up, got dressed, loaded his gun, sat down in his wheelchair to wait.

"He came in and I saw about a 5-foot silhouette," Randolph recalled later. "He saw me and said, 'Hey, man!' and then I let him have one. Wham! I didn't raise the pistol up. I just shot from the hip."

The shot hit a 12-year-old boy. Police said the youth, wounded in the chest, was hospitalized in fair condition Friday.

"I figure if a person breaks into my home, he's committed a man's crime and he's got a man's punishment coming," said Randolph, a large, disabled man who fired from his wheelchair.

"I never did say anything to him," he said. "I figured I didn't have to say anything about his rights, since he'd already violated my rights by breaking into my house.

"After I shot him, he screamed and took off running. The bullet went right through him and hit the other wall. He ran through the house and out the front door."

Randolph phoned police. About he same time, the boy suspected of being the intruder staggered into a beauty shop to get help. The beauty shop employees phoned police.

Authorities said the shooting would be routinely turned over to the grand jury, but a spokesman for the Dallas Police Department said it appears Randolph was within his rights.

"The law reads, 'A person is justified in using deadly force against another to protect land or tangible movable property,'" said police spokesman Bob Shaw.

Factors In Firing Of Coach Listed

By RICHIE D. REECER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The mishandling of gate and concession receipts at a basketball tournament and the reported use of profanity against his superiors were major factors in the termination of the contract of former Morton basketball coach Dan Smith, according to testimony heard Friday in Smith's $465,000 suit against the Morton school district.

Former Morton school superintendent Marlin Dodds, testifying in the federal district court of Judge Halbert O. Woodward, said Smith mixed together the gate and concession receipts from a junior varsity basketball tournament conducted at Morton during the 1977-78 school year.

Dodds said the funds were to have been kept separate, because concession receipts went into the general funds of the girls' and boys' basketball teams. He said the general funds covered items such as "soap, extra socks and other things not covered in the budget."

The coach in charge of the tournament, in that instance Smith, was responsible for the funds, Dodds testified.

Dodds also testified Morton High School principal Garland Cavitt told the school board during a meeting Feb. 20, 1978, that he was tired of being called profane names by Smith "behind his back."

During that meeting, the board considered the renewal of contracts for coaches and principals in the school system, Dodds said.

Dodds, Cavitt and junior high school principal Robert Lee recommended at the Feb. 20 meeting that no action be taken on Smith's contract, Dodds testified. By taking no action, the board simply allowed Smith's contract to expire at the end of the school year.

Smith alleges in his suit, filed June 1, 1978, that his contract was terminated unconstitutionally. He is asking $225,000 for loss of income and damage to his reputation, and $240,000 in punitive damages — $75,000 from school board member Dexter Nebhut, $75,000 from Dodds and his wife and $5,000 each from board members Herbert F. Greener, Robert Yeary and Raymond Lewis.

During a subsequent school board meeting April 17, 1978, board member H.B. Barker moved that Smith's contract be renewed for another year. However, the board voted 4-3 against the motion.

Smith claims in the suit he was ousted because he refused to show favoritism toward Nebhut's son, a member of the junior varsity team, and because he supported the rights of black athletes to play in proportion to their abilities.

Nebhut testified Friday he and other board members voted against the renewal of Smith's contract solely because the school administrators had recommended the contract not be renewed.

Nebhut said he had contacted Smith to find out whether the junior varsity team had enough uniforms. He said he talked with Smith after his son had not been allowed to travel to Odessa with the team.

Nebhut testified Smith told him only 12 players had been allowed to make the trip.

Dodds testified earlier Nebhut had also contacted him to ask why certain players did not make road trips with the team. Dodds said he talked with the coach and told him, "We should travel all the boys on the squad regardless of race, color or creed."

Defense attorney Max Addison, co-counsel with Lubbock attorney Joe Nagy, asked Friday morning that the claim against Mrs. Dodds, a Morton teacher, be dropped from the suit and that the suit be dismissed.

Woodward heard arguments regarding Mrs. Dodds, whom Smith claims was a leading advocate of his dismissal, but ordered the case continued without granting or denying the motions.

Testimony Thursday indicated Mrs. Dobbs had spoken to Mrs. Rita Tyson of Morton regarding a "terrible thing" Smith had done.

Asked by his attorneys to explain the "terrible thing," Dodds testified Smith's wife, Sharon, came to his home late one night to tell him he "would have to find a new basketball coach" because Smith had left town.

Dodds said Mrs. Smith told him she and her husband were having marital problems. The incident reportedly occurred Nov. 14, 1976, the second year Smith coached at the school.

Dodds said he never told anyone about the incident and that it had no influence on his recommendation to terminate Smith's contract the following year.

Mrs. Smith later testified about the incident, but her testimony conflicted with Dodds' account.

Mrs. Smith said she went to Dodds' home "between 7 and 9 p.m." Nov. 14, and that Dodds was dressed in a suit and tie. His wife was not home, she said.

Dodds, however, said Mrs. Smith awoke him and his wife between 11:30 p.m. and 12:30 a.m. Dodds said he answered the door and that his wife later entered the room. He added, though, that his wife went back to bed when Mrs. Smith indicated she wanted to talk with Dodds in private.

Dodds also testified that Mrs. Smith said she had been abused, but Mrs. Smith testified her husband has never abused her in any way.

Woodward will hear final arguments in the suit at 1 p.m. Monday.

Fair Weather Predicted For Weekend

More unseasonably mild weather is in store for the South Plains region and for the balance of the state for this weekend, according to National Weather Service forecasts.

Friday's high in Lubbock of 63 degrees should repeat today, with a possibility of even higher temperatures under fair skies.

Winds are expected to be southerly at 10 to 15 mph.

Skies were clear with springlike temperatures in the 60s and 70s in most places across Texas Friday.

Meanwhile, a slow-moving storm system dumped snow on northern Wisconsin Friday and spawned snow squalls along the shores of the Great Lakes.

Thunderstorms brought heavy rain to much of Florida.

A storm centered over northeastern Wisconsin sent snow swirling over the western Great Lakes region. Nearly half a foot of snow piled up in parts of northern Wisconsin. Police reported highways hazardous.

Hudson, Wis., reported 5 inches of snow and Iola, Rhinelander and Phillips, Wis., each reported 4 inches.

Snowfalls of 1 to 3 inches were common across northern Wisconsin and rain fell in southern sections of the state.

A heavy snow warning — for up to 6 inches of snow — was in effect for parts of upper Michigan as the storm push pushed eastward. Winter storm watches were posted for parts of lower Michigan, New York and Pennsylvania.

Snow flurries dusted parts of North Dakota and Minnesota.

Strong winds accompanying the storm system whipped up beach-battering waves across the Great Lakes and storm or gale warnings were posted throughout the region.

Winds gusting to 50 mph kicked up waves of up to 12 feet on southern Lake Erie from Cleveland eastward, and the National Weather Service warning of possible beach erosion.

Thundershowers spread across the Florida peninsula. Nearly 2 inches of rain drenched Fort Myers, Fla., in six hours. Key West and Miami each got more than an inch of rain.

High wind warnings were in effect for the fourth straight day along the eastern slopes of the Rocky Mountains, although the hurricane force winds that caused millions of dollars in damage earlier this week had diminished greatly.

HSCH Employee Hunt Nears End

The search for new administrative help at Health Sciences Center Hospital appears to be narrowing, since two candidates are returning for second interviews Saturday.

The Board of Managers for the county hospital district are scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. Saturday in a predominantly closed session. The meeting is intended to include interviews with a candidate for executive director and a candidate for the hospital's chief financial officer.

Health Sciences has been without an executive director since late June, when the board voted not to renew Gerald Bosworth's contract. The hospital's finance director, Bill Stinnett, left in August.

Brookwood Management Services ran the hospital from August through October and interim Administrator Charles Roberts is calling the shots until permanent help can be found.

Board members will also meet with the district's legal counsel to discuss any action to be taken on negotiations with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare. The hospital missed a July payment on an $8 million loan and is trying to persuade HEW representatives that the hospital needs more time.

Santa and the Elf Boy

Chapter One
ONE LAST CHANCE

ONCE upon a time, in far away Fairyland, there lived a freckle-faced elf named Esteban.

He was so tiny he could have slipped into your coat pocket and you never would have known he was there. He had wings and, although they were small wings, they were beautiful and he could fly with them anywhere on earth.

He was the happiest and gayest creature in Fairyland. But alas! Everything he did was wrong and he was always, always in troubles.

Once when he was helping the tooth fairies he collected an enormous sack of baby teeth from under the pillows where the children had left them, but, he forgot to leave any nickles behind. When he remembered he went back to all the houses he had visited, but he was in such a hurry he put the nickels under all the wrong pillows.

The next morning there was an awful uproar when children who had lost their teeth found nothing under their pillows while their brothers and sisters found nickels under theirs. You can imagine how much trouble this caused.

ANOTHER time Esteban was loaned out to Santa Claus to help make balloons for Christmas. He worked for six months and by Christmas he had made over a thousand balloons. On Christmas Eve he blew them up and tied them together and took them out to put in Santa's sleigh.

Half way to the sleigh he stopped to throw a snowball. He put the balloons on the ground so that he could get his gloves out of his pocket. But hardly had he put the balloons downd when the wind swept them up and away into the sky.

There was not a single balloon in a single Christmas stocking that year!

That's the way things always seemed to happen to Esteban and the Queen Fairy was very upset about it. She called Esteban to her and said, "What in the world can I do with you?"

Esteban said, "Give me a big job, a really important job, and you will see what I can do."

"Very well," answered the Queen. "I'll give you one more chance. But I warn you, if you fall down on this job it will be the end."

"Oh, I won't fail!" vowed Esteban. "Just tell me what it is."

"The Sandman has the sniffles," said the Queen. "I will give you his job to do tonight.

Now remember you must work quickly to complete your rounds, for any child you do not visit will not sleep tonight."

"Don't worry," said Esteban eagerly. "I am leaving this very moment."

QUICKLY he filled a bag with sand so fine and soft you could not feel it between your fingers. Then he threw the bag over his shoulder and flew away with it to sprinkle the sand in the eyes of all the world's children and put them to sleep for the night.

But the very first child he visited did not want to go to sleep. He was lying in bed reading a favorite book.

"Come now," said Esteban. "Just a speck of sand and asleep you will go."

But this is such a good book!" protested the child.

"Never mind that," said Esteban. "It's time to go to sleep."

"Please let me read a teeny bit further," begged the child.

"It can wait until tomorrow," said Esteban firmly.

"Just one more line," implored the child.

"What is this book anyway?" cried Esteban. He leaned over the child's shoulder to see. It was a big, big book with wonderful pictures of pirates and shipwrecks and one-eyed men.

"Wht a book!" exclaimed Esteban. "What's it about?"

"Listen," said the child eagerly and he began to read. Esteban snuggled down besides him and in two seconds he had forgotten all about the Sandman's job.

(Tomorrow:
Esteban Goofs Again)

Esteban happily flew off to do the Sandman's job.

Growth In Labor Force Highlights Report By U.S. Government

NEW YORK (P) — Despite the worst inflation since 1946, a troubled dollar and sinking business activity, the economic news has not been universally gloomy.

The government's latest report on employment showed a healthier trend than many economists had expected.

The unemployment rate dipped below 6 percent in November and the number of people working reached a record 97.6 million out of a total 103.7 million in the labor force.

About 2 million new workers were added to the country's labor force so far this year despite earlier predictions of a slumping economy.

The rate of growth in the labor force — which the govenment defines as those working or actively looking for work — has slowed from earlier this year. But overall it reflects continuation of a phenomenal change in the labor force recently.

Since 1970, 21 million peple have been added to the workforce, including a record growth of about 3 million in 1978.

Part of that is because of broad changes in the makeup of the population as many of the children of the baby-boom years finished school and went to work.

But women are an even bigger factor recently. The Labor Department figures show that adult women accounted for three-fourths of the 1.9 million new workers who were added to the labor force so far this year.

Those figures don't reveal the reasons so many women have gotten paying jobs but dramatic increases in the number of married women and workng mothers suggest that many families decded they need two incomes to cope with inflation.

A recent study by Janet Norwood, commissioner of the Bureau of LaborStatistics found that since 1970 there has been a 17 percent increase in the number of women aged 25-35 who found paying jobs.

"This is remarkable because over 70 percent of women in this age group are married, live with thir husbands and have children under age 18 at home," she commented in a Labor Department report on working women.

A separate survey by the Department of Labor Statistics showed that families with both husband and wife working slightly exceeded those with husbands as the sole earner.

The latest Labor Department report showing that unemployment dipped to 5.8 percent in November from 6 percent in October, surprised some economists. But government officials cautioned that it likely wouldn't last. Auto and steel industry layoffs, recently announced, didn't show upin November figures but are likely to force up unemployment this month, according to abor Department officials.

Last summer, President Carter's top economists predicted that unemployment would reach 6.6 percent by year's end and keep rising until topping off at 6.9 percent in 1980. Some private economists had predicted unemployment of 7 percent or mor by now. Those predictions were based on the belief that the economy was sliding into a recession.

The economy so far this year has outperformed the foreasts. But many economists feel it is only a matter of time before the econmy's declining performance results in higher unemployment. Forecasts in and out of government call for the jobless rate to reach 8 percent or so next year.

U.S. Dollar Makes Gain Around World

NEW YORK (AP) — The U.S. dollar rose against most major currencies Friday, recovering losses earlier in the week. Gold prices declined in Europe but rose in New York.

The dollar's gains were half a cent or more against several major currencies, and brought the U.S. currency back from a drop Thursday to wind up generally higher for the week.

In New York, dealers said the dollar's strength was largely due to technical factors — concern that the dollar had been oversold and a squaring of traders positions as the end of the year approached.

"Nothing happened in the Iranian situation (to affect trading) and the fundamentals remain the same," a dealer said.

In earlier European trading, however, a senior currency trader in Frankfurt said the market took news reports from Tehran that some U.S. hostages might soon be released as evidence that moderate thinking is gaining grund in Iran.

Gold prices rose $1.50 a troy ounce to $427 in New York Friday, according to price quotes from the Republic National Bank. On the Commodity Exchange of New York the December futures contract slipped 40 cents to $426 an ounce.

Gold prices, which set a London closing record of $434.25 an ounce Thursday, retreated to $426.50 in that market, still $11 up from last Friday's close. In Zurich, Europe's biggest bullion market, gold ended the week at $429, down from Thursday's $436.00.

In Tokyo, where the business day ends before Europe's begins the dollar closed sharply lower at 241.5 yen, a decline of nearly 10 yen in 10 days, when it hit a 2½ year peak. The dollar closed Thursday at 246.275 yen and a week ago at 249.475 yen. In New York the dollar fell to 239.90 yen from 244.40 yen Thursday.

Saudi Push Becomes A Shove

IN THE RUSH of events which have shaken the Moslem world, the seizure of the Grand Mosque in Mecca is by far among the most bizarre.

It is difficult to imagine an outrage of similar magnitude in Western circumstances. Occupation of St. Peter's by snake-handling fundamentalists from Appalachia still would be considerably short of the mark.

The desecration of Islam's holy of holies shapes up as the work of a small band of religious extremists consumed by their own fanaticism and with no interest whatsoever in the rest of the world.

Whether the battle for the mosque has anything to do with the broader political situation, it has a great deal to do with the country in which it occurred.

SAUDI ARABIA as a nation is a fairly recent invention, notwithstanding its current role as leading oil exporter and most influential power player in the Mideast game.

It was pieced together in a series of desert wars during the early decades of the century when one local sheikh, tougher and craftier than his neighbors, overcame them one by one. He was Abdel Aziz ibn Saud.

During the course of his own empire building, Ibn Saud made many enemies, not the least important being the Hashemite family.

Ibn Saud's last conquest was the Hejaz, the coastal strip along the Red Sea containing the holy cities of Mecca and Medina, previously ruled by the Hashemites.

In the post-World War I settlement, the Hashemites, in one of the ironic twists of Arab politics, were compensated for their eviction with the thrones of Jordan and Iraq. Today, Jordan's King Hussein and the Saudis are the closest of allies on most Mideast issues.

SAUDI ARABIA'S rise to immense wealth and influence has obscured exceedingly shaky foundations upon which the nation rests.

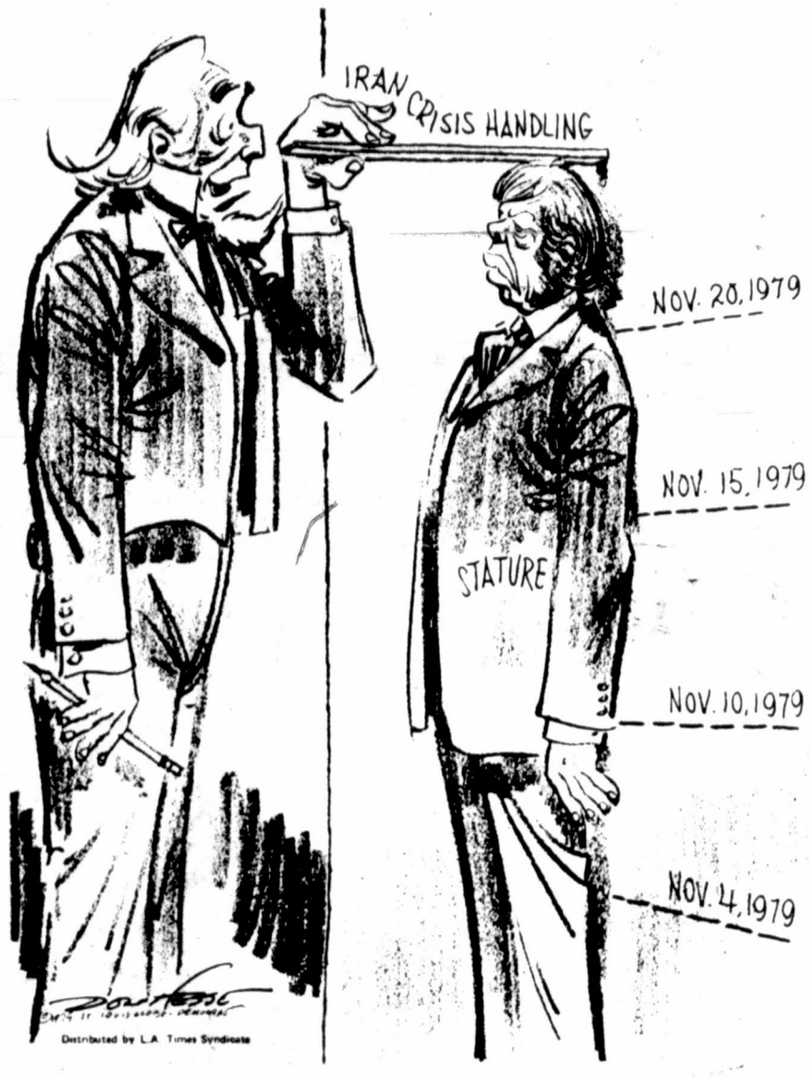
The push to modernize the social structure and diversify the economy, which in the long run should strengthen the state, in the short run have aggravated its weaknesses.

In the view of the more critical faithful, the vast Saudi royal family has become increasingly worldly, drifting away from true Islam.

The Grand Mosque was seized, it is written, on behalf of a self-styled messiah by ultra-orthodox members of a tribe subdued 50 years ago by Ibn Saud.

Whether the incident represents a resurgence of tribal hostility, it certainly demonstrates that there is much more beneath the Saudi surface than is portrayed by the throngs of sophisticated, globe-trotting princes and sheikhs with which the West has become so familiar. In a word: bizarre.

'You've Done Some Growing, Jimmy'



VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Rolling In Dole

DALLAS—It's time to pull out the "slobbism" file again, folks, just to remind ourselves that, to keep from getting "the leadership we deserve," we have to watch the rascals every minute.

Jimmy Carter most likely had something else in mind when he made that long-ago promise on the campaign trail. What he didn't realize was that we don't always ask enough of the people in charge, not at the government level and not in the executive suites, either.

The result is that, while we're busy looking the other way, the inevitable happens. The people with a little bit of power put the squeeze on the little people.

Sooner or later, the law catches up with them, and that's when they land in the "slobbism" file.

IT'S NOT an elegant category, but it's one that covers everything from greed to two-bit corruption to everyday cussedness. Proof, if you still need it, that the pecking order isn't confined to the barnyard.

Where else would you file the latest proof that J. Edgar Hoover, that perennial guardian of the nation's morals, was a gentleman who elevated the dirty deed into a political weapon so powerful even Presidents were afraid to fire him?

Another one surfaced only two months ago when a red-faced William Webster, director of the newly fumigated FBI, owned up that yes, the FBI had indeed smeared actress Jean Seberg's reputation by spreading gossip that she was pregnant by a member of the Black Panthers.

MISS SEBERG, who recently committed suicide, landed on J. Edgar's hit list because he thought she was too cozy with black activists dollar.

That tasty bit of skulduggery happened nine years ago. Hoover is long since dead, and Webster says the FBI is "out of that kind of business forever." We can only hope so.

But charges of new betrayals of the public trust keep popping up.

There's the story of Pride, Inc., a project set up in Washington to help fight Lyndon Johnson's war on poverty. It was supposed to provide jobs for black teen-agers and 99 ex-convicts with funds supplied by HUD.

Now, a dozen years later, come charges that maybe the lady who was supposed to help the jobless also helped herself to $600,000 that was supposed to go for slum repair. She denies it.

AND HERE'S the latest in the way they play fun-and-games with our tax dollars at the General Services Administration.

Seems the government's own auditors tricked the GSA into sending a $95,000 check to a firm that never existed for tool kits that were never delivered.

This time we were lucky. GSA got the money back. But we'll never recover the $100 million it's been frittering away every year, even though it is presently under investigation for fraud and flagrant misuse of tax dollars.

Moving right along.

There's last month's charge that all kinds of corruption are creeping into the Immigration Service, with illegal aliens sneaking in on duplicate cards furnished by immigration officials etc., etc., etc.

AND THE story out of Colorado where it came to light that Veterans Administration officials there are advising men fresh out of the military to drive over to Kansas to file for unemployment pay of up to $123 a week.

If they registered at home, you see, they'd get less because of their military pensions.

But Kansas lets retirees "double-dip" (collect two federal checks at the same time) and, although a new law is going to change that next April, the traffic across the border is pretty heavy on the first Wednesday of every month.

Say thank you, fellow taxpayers, to those friendly fellows at the VA who don't mind spending your money twice.

ONE LAST one under "nice try" category. The government asked Richard Nixon please to reimburse the Treasury for the $701,321 it spent fixing up his San Clemente villa.

Nixon said nix, that all he wanted was the flagpole, enclosed find his check for $2,300 and would Uncle Sam kindly haul everything else away "within 60 days."

Well, that would cost another $80,000. Stay tuned, but don't make any bets on who comes out on top in this pecking contest.

Aid Bill Repaid With Votes

A BILLION-DOLLAR appropriation providing public financing for White House and Congressional re-election campaigns was approved this week by the House Government Operations Committee.

The bill didn't carry the campaign financing label, of course, there still being certain subtleties in the political process that must be observed.

But the aim and effect of the so-called "anti-recession aid bill" is nonetheless to spread federal largesse around where it will do the most good in influencing voters for incumbents in the 1980 elections.

THE BILL, WHICH still has a long way to go in the legislative process, got a $100 million shot-in-the-arm before the committee sent it to the House floor, 27-12, for further consideration.

An increase to $250 million, from $150 million, was approved for so-called "targeted fiscal assistance" to urban and rural areas where local economies are depressed.

In political terms, that means the Carter administration will have $250 million to dole out in areas of high unemployment in hopes of making the recipients grateful at election time.

These areas tend to be heavily Democratic communities represented in Congress by big-spending liberals who are as anxious as Carter is to feather their constituents' nests at public expense.

A SENATE VERSION of the anti-recession bill, containing $340 million for targeted fiscal assistance, already has been approved.

This means that, upon final House approval, the two versions will go to a conference committee to iron out differences.

The chief difference is that the Senate bill uses employment figures as a trigger for the aid handouts, whereas the House handouts would be triggered when wages and salaries fall for two consecutive quarters.

Either way, the politicians are finding a way to make political hay out of the inflation and recession that their big-spending policies have inflicted on the country.

Public financing of campaigns? We've got it, brother!

GEORGE WILL:

Ring Back Memories

WASHINGTON—As a foreign policy, the ringing of church bells may leave something to be desired. But President Carter's suggestion that bells be rung all around the nation until the hostages are home is desirable.

And it gives me an opportunity to address a subject near to my heart: bells, the unfortunate neglect thereof.

The world is divided, by no means evenly, between the enlightened few of us who think bells are an important aspect of commodious living, and those who never have given this serious matter any serious thought.

I have never disguised the fact that I am no friend of up-to-date thought, and high on my list of reasons for regretting the 20th century is this:

The sound of bells is no longer a part of society's life, and people are poorer for this change.

In his book, "The Waning of the Middle Ages"—the very title is enough to break a sensible heart—John Huizinga wrote:

"One sound rose ceaselessly above the noises of busy life (in the Middle Ages) and lifted all things into a sphere of order and serenity: the sound of bells.

"The bells were in daily life like good spirits, which by their familiar voices now called upon the citizens to mourn and now to rejoice, now warned them of danger, now exhorted them to piety. They were known by their names: big Jacqueline, or the bell Roland.

"Everyone knew the difference in meaning of the various ways of ringing. However continuous the ringing of the bells, people would seem not to have become blunted to the effect of their sound.

"WHAT INTOXICATION the pealing of the bells of all the churches, and of all the monasteries of Paris, must have produced, sounding from morning till evening, and even during the night, when a peace was concluded or a pope elected."

Bells were part of society's communication system, part of the conversation of the community, in some places until recently. Amoret and Christopher Scott write:

"Another charming custom which survived into the present century was the ringing of bells not only to warn St. Peter that a soul was on its way but to frighten off the devils which might impede its passage."

Ronald Blythe, in "Akenfield," recorded the memories of a bellringer in Suffolk, England:

"THE BELLS tolled for death when I was a boy. It was three times for a man and three times two for a woman...

"Then the years of the dead person's age would be tolled and if the bell went on speaking, 'seventy-one, seventy-two...' people would say, 'Well, they had good innings!'

"But when the bell stopped at eighteen or twenty a hush would come over the fields."

Proper bells produce one of the man-made sounds worth preserving, but they have been largely dispensed with elsewhere. Of course, we hear bells all day long, thanks to cash registers and telephones.

Many homes have feeble, lisping doorbells that are doing the work that once was done by hefty, shiny, brass doorknockers that made a healthy thump.

THE BELLS we have indoors are pesky nuisances; the bells we used to have out of doors provide decorous counterpoint to the symphony of nature's sounds.

It is hard to rise to Newtonian heights of scientific detachment about the boneheadedness that has caused people to bring this about.

After the revolution of true conservatism, doorbells (and a few other things) will be illegal, and proper bells will be heard everywhere.

If you are one of those pitiable people who do not understand that bells are part of the magic of life, consider this true story, recounted by the Scotts:

"When the Duke of Wellington died in 1852 the Dean of his old parliamentary constituency at Trim ordered the bells be tolled in full peal. No sooner had the ringers begun than the tenor bell, the pride of the church, shattered. When it was examined, it was found to have been cast in 1769, the year the Duke was born."

If that doesn't give you pause, well, the more's the pity. Chekhov wrote of someone, "He was a rationalist, but he had to confess that he liked the ringing of church bells." Me, too.

ANDREW TULLY:

We May Be Next

WASHINGTON—Look around at the vicious fatheads who operate most Communist and Third World countries and you have to entertain the thought that what the International Olympic Committee (IOC) did to Nationalist China it could do to the U.S.

By a vote of 62 to 17, the IOC ruled that both Communist China and the Taiwan regime could participate in the 1980 Olympics but that Taiwan must discard its official name, its flag, and its anthem or be barred from Lake Placid, N.Y., and Moscow.

In the past, Taiwan has competed as the Republic of China. By IOC ukase, it must compete in 1980 as the "Chinese Taipei Olympic Committee" and choose a flag and an anthem approved by the IOC. At that, the IOC showed a touch of moderation.

COMMUNIST CHINA, of course, will compete under the title Peoples Republic of China, raise its own flag and sing its own anthem, and never mind that the mainland mob runs the world's biggest concentration camp.

"Peoples Republic" indeed. The ruling lords of that unhappy country are to people what Marie Antoinette and Hitler were to their captive citizens.

One wonders what the IOC, dominated by Communist and Third World flunkies, would propose as a title for the new Taiwanese anthem. How about "Death to Dissenters." Would Taiwan's athletes be forced to swear allegiance to Marx and Lenin?

To their everlasting credit, the two American members of the committee voted against the resolution. I rather like the comment of one of them, Julian K. Roosevelt of storied Oyster Bay.

IN THE Rooseveltian tradition, he was bluntly logical. "A lot of the delegates who voted in favor of the formula are from African countries and other small nations," he said.

"I don't know why they did it because it could happen to them at any time. Now you've set a precedent that you can hit anybody."

The other U.S. member, Douglas F. Roby of Ann Arbor, Mich., also did all right.

"The Taiwanese have been model members for 27 years," he said. "And here we completely pull the rug out from under them. I think they have a right to have the flag and anthem they want. We don't ask other people to change their flags and anthems."

ROOSEVELT AND Roby, of course, were bucking the sordid facts of Olympic life. What the IOC apparently wanted was proof that the Taipei regime had executed at least a few hundred innocent people.

So those IOC thugs went right ahead and violated the Olympic Charter which provides that all competing teams must use their national flags and anthems in the opening parade and all ceremonies for the presentation of medals.

We must face facts," said Mohammed Mzali of Tunisia in defending that infamous IOC vote. "We are in favor of opening sport for all sportsmen." Sick-making. Hereafter, in this household, it will be IPC—the International Political Committee.

ART BUCHWALD:

Leisure Time Planning Leaves Little For Work

WASHINGTON—This country is producing so much leisure equipment for the home that nobody has any leisure time any more to enjoy it.

A few months ago I bought a television tape recorder to make copies of programs when I was out of the house.

Last week I recorded the Nebraska-Oklahoma football game. When I came home in the evening, I decided to play it back. But my son wanted to play "Baseball" on the TV screen with his Atari Computer.

We finished four innings when my wife came in the room and asked me if I would like to listen to the Vienna Opera on our hi-fi stereo set. I told her I was waiting to finish the baseball match so I could watch the football game I had recorded.

SHE SAID if I watched the football game for three hours, I would miss "Love Boat." I told her I would record "Love Boat" and we could watch it later in the evening.

She protested that "Casablanca" was showing on Channel 5 at 11:30 and she wanted to see it again.

"Don't worry," I assured her, "we can watch 'Love Boat' late Saturday and 'Casablanca' on Sunday morning when we get up."

"But if we watch 'Casablanca' tomorrow morning when can we see the instant Polaroid movies you took of Ben yesterday afternoon?"

"We'll see them after we play backgammon on the new table."

"If we do that," my daughter said, "we won't be able to see the Washington Redskin-New York Giants football game."

"I'LL RECORD the Redskin-Giants football game and we'll watch it while '60 Minutes' is on the air. We can see '60 Minutes' at 11 o'clock."

"But," my son said, "you promised to play the pinball machine with me at 11."

"Okay, we'll play pinball at 11 and watch '60 Minutes' at midnight."

My wife said, "Why don't we listen to the Vienna Opera while we're eating and then we can save an hour to play computer golf?"

"That's good thinking," I said. "The only problem is I've rented a TV tape for 'Cleopatra' and that runs for three hours."

"You could show it Monday night," she suggested.

"I can't do that. I have to return the tape Monday afternoon or be charged for it another week. I have an idea. I won't go to work Monday morning and we'll watch it then."

"I was hoping to use our Jacuzzi Monday morning," my wife said.

"Okay, then I'll tape 'Cleopatra' and you can see it Monday afternoon."

"I'm using the set Monday afternoon," my son said, "to play digital hockey on the TV screen."

"YOU CAN'T do that," I said, "I have to watch the 'Today' show in the afternoon if I'm going to watch 'Cleopatra' in the morning."

"Why can't you watch the 'Today' show at dinnertime?" my wife asked.

"Because the Wolfingtobs are coming over to hear me play 'Tea for Two' on the electric organ."

"I thought we might play computer bridge at dinner," my wife said.

"We'll play it after my encore," I assured her.

"Then when will we see 'Monday Night Football'?" my son wanted to know.

"Tuesday," I said.

"Does that mean you're not going to work on Tuesday?" my wife asked.

"How can I go to work," I yelled, "when I've got so much leisure time on my hands?"

Offhand Thoughts

Nixon, Shah of Iran, Somoza, Trudeau. There are enough deposed heads of state these days to sell as lost leaders at supermarkets.

From Bud Starwas: If you wonder where the sun goes when it sets, watch it all through the night and it will finally dawn on you.

Said the fair-weather golfer, back on the course after a long winter: "I can't play at all this year. I must have gained weight. If I put the ball where I can see it, I can't hit it; if I put it where I can hit it, I can't see it!"

Columnist Earl Wilson figures that the 1980 census, thanks to the fuel shortage, will be the most accurate ever taken, because everybody will be home.

L.M. BOYD:

...Pass It On

WHEN YOU say "like Grant took Richmond" to describe an easy victory, you don't describe how Grant took Richmond. His was an exceedingly difficult victory there. And originally "like Grant took Richmond" meant just that.

How do these phrases get turned around? People now refer to the rich as the "hoi polloi," but the Greeks used that term to describe the masses. People now say "I could care less" when what they mean is "I couldn't care less." This is slipshod usage—do you hear?—and our Language man will not have it.

How do you account for the fact that numerous famous rulers hated cats? Napoleon Bonaparte did. So did Alexander the Great. Likewise Louis XIV. And a gaggle of less publicized monarchs, chiefs of state, dictators. Scholars have studied the matter seriously. They now conclude there is a type of personality that despises any animal that can't be summoned. Cats can be invited, true enough. But not summoned.

Consider the bachelor. The more education he has, the less likely he'll be offered a matrimonial proposal from a woman. Studies repeatedly prove that. Knowing this, you might also expect this fact: Husbands first invited into marriage by their wives tend to be far better educated than average. And it is further true that the statistics show a high success rate in these marriages.

That phenomenon called photographic memory is exceedingly rare in grownups. It's not so rare, though, among youngsters. One out of 10 children can recreate an exact visual image after seeing it only once. The age at which a student is most likely to be so gifted is 7. Or so report the scholars.

Girls remain ticklish to a greater age than do boys. How the Wayne State University researchers found this out I don't know, but they insist it's true.

Iowa Campaign Important To Kennedy

DES MOINES, Iowa (AP) — From Dubuque to Des Moines, from Davenport to Fort Dodge and with stops in between, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy is crossing cold, windy, Iowa on a tour that combines jet age efficiency with nuts-and-bolts presidential politickng.

"The eyes of the world are on Iowa," Kennedy, D-Mass., told television hostess Mary Brubaker Friday as he taped an interview for local daytime viewing. Kennedy shared the spotlight with a folk singer. Even leaving room for exaggeration, Kennedy's remark underscored the importance he attatches to this state, which he says will provide the first real test between himself and President Carter in their struggle for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination.

The television program was the first "event"on a grueling 14-hour campaign day that began in the state capitol here and was to end near midnight 180 miles away in Sioux City.

In between, were a meeting with the top officials of the Des Moines Register, a speech to a county bar association, phone calls and meetings with supporters, a news conference and afund-raiser. It is Kennedy's third trip to Iowa in the month since he became an official candidate, and he is expected to return a number of times in the next six weeks leading up to the Jan. 21 Democratic precinct caucuses.

Throughout it all, Kennedy is shielded by his Secret Service detail and followed by a large contingent of reporters, photographers and television rews. When he travels by car, all intersections on his route are blocked off by state and local police to allow his motorcde to proceed without interuption. When he travels between cities, it is aboard a chartered 727 jet with a redesigned interior that is equipped with telephone lines, electric typewriters, work space for the staff and a special couch for short rests.Television producer Norman Lear is traveling Television producer Norman Lear is traveling with Kenedy throughout Iowa. He once spent more than a year in Des Moines making a movie.

UNIONS MAY MERGE

NEW YORK (AP) — To major health-oriented unions of the AFL-CIO have discussed merging, a move their leaders say they hope would create a new super-union of nearly 1 million members that would have clout with the health care industry. The proposal was debated Tursday at the biennial convention of the National Union of Hospital and Health Care Employees, which adopted a resolution calling for the merger with the Service Employees International Union.

Wherever he goes, Kennedy seems to be regarded as more than just another candidate in a state that is virtually flooded by presidential hopefuls as the critical precinct caucuses draw near.

Miss Brubaker introduced him for her television audience as the man who is "considered the heir to glory and to tragedy," a reference to his two slain brothers, John and Robert. And when their interview was over, she asked for his autograph on a magazine with his picture on the cover.

Whatever his family history, Kennedy must campaign like any other candidate. Departing the teleision station, he walked coatless across the street in freezing temperatures with about a dozen construction workers.

What counts most in the campaign in Iowa is a candidate's ability to turn out supporters for the caucuses that will begin the process of picking delegates to next year's national convention.

General Allegedly Helped Oust Shah

PARIS (AP) — Deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi claims that a U.S. Air Force general played a role in forcing him to flee Iran in January during the bloody revolution that brought Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini to power.

Extracts from the shah's memoirs, published Friday in the magazine L'Express and other European eriodicals, named the general as Robert Huyser, now commander of the Miliary Airlift Command with headquarters at Scott Air Force Base in Illinois.

The allegation had appeared in some U.S. newspapers last month and Huyser declined comment at that time.

The shah quotes an Iranian general who subsequently was executed as saying Huyser "threw the king out of the country like a dead mouse."

The ousted monarch, now recuperating at an Air Force hospital in Texas from cancer treatment he received in New York, also expressed bitterness about the U.S. and British attitudes during the final days of his rule and denied carges that his SAVAK secret police jailed thousands of political opponnts.

He wrote that during the critical months last fall and winter when thousands of rioting Iranians were clashing with security forces, the American and British ambassadors urged him to adopt even more liberal policies, which could only lead to "catastrophe." At the sAme time, he said, other American envoys urged firmness.

The shah said he met Huyser once, accompanied by U.S. Ambassador William SulLivan, and both men were "preoccupied" with knowing "the date and hour of my departure" from Iran.

Huyser went to Iran in January 1979 from his headquarters in West Germany where he was deputy commander of U.S. Forces in Europe. The State Department in Washington announced later that Huyser made the quiet trip to ask Iranian military leaders to support the government of Prime Minister Shapour Bakhtiar. Bakhtiar was a critic of the shah but the monarch named him to head the government in a last-ditch effort to end the strife.

It was feared the armed forces would stage a coup against Baktiar and there would be civil war. Instead, the commanders capitulated to the rebels, the shah and Bakhtiar fled Iran and Khomeini returned from exile in Paris. His revolutionary courts subsequently sent more than 600 persons, including scores of military commanders, to their deaths before firing squads.

One of the doomed men was air force commander Gen. Amier Hossein Rabii, executed in April.

The shah, writing about Huyser, said, "What happened? All I can say is that during the parody of a trial which preceeded his execution, Gen. Rabii ... said to his judges: 'Gen. Huyser threw the king out of the country like a dead mouse'."

According to the memoirs, Huyser had extensive contacts with army generals and opposition leader Mehdi Bazargan.

Bazargan was named prime minister by Khomeini's Revolutionary Council, but resigned last month after Iranian militants invaded the U.S. Embassy where they are still holding 50 Americans hostage. Bazargan, who apparently is still a member of the Revoltionary Council, said he resigned because his goverment had no real authoitiy.

His memoirs are being published in French by Editions Albin Michel.

Panel Expands Exempt Group

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's Pay Advisory Committee voted Friday to enlarge the group of low-paid workers who would be exempt from the still undetermined voluntary anti-inflation wage guideline.

The 18-member panel of business, labor and "public" representatives again deferred action on their main task— to refashion Carter's 7 percent guideline for the coming year. Committee chairman John T. Dunlop said that issue would be tackled in two weeks.

In the meantime, the group is trying to resolve several secondary issues, including the low-wage exemption question.

Cleveland Teachers, School Board Far From Settlement

CLEVELAND (AP) — Despite some progress in talks between the school board and striking teachers, both sides remain "substantially far apart" in efforts to resolve the 51-day walkout, federal mediator Harold S. Gold said Friday.

And a member of the Ohio Board of Education said he would ask the state board to revoke Cleveland's school district charter.

Meanwhile, 23 protesters demanding a speedy end to the strike continued their sit-in in the lobby of the school administration building, about a block from the office of the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Services. The occupation began Wednesday night.

On Friday, school security officers allowed some of the protesters to leave the building to obtain medication or report for jobs and promised to let them return later. The news media has been locked out of the building.

Negotiations with Gold's help began Wenesday at the urging of Cuyahog County Common Pleas Judge Frederick M. Coleman, who has yet to rule on a school district request for a back-to-work order against the 5,000-member Cleveland Teaches Union.

School have been officially closed to 92,000 pupils in Ohio's largest cit since Nov. 6, about three weeks after teachers walked off their jobs in a wage dispute.

Gerald Kisner, a member of the Ohio Board of Education, repeated his demand Friday that Cleveland's school system be dissolved and its board members recalled.

He said that when the state board meets Monday in Columbus, he will introduce a resolution to revoke the school system's charter because the dictrict has been failed to meet minimum state standards.

There was no immediate response from other state board members.

State Superinendent Franklin B. Walter said a dissolution of a school district under the cirumstances in Cleveland has never occurred.

He noted that although the Cleveland school system does not now meet minumum standards, the district has submitted a plan to bring the schools into compliance.

"The school board has not carried out its responsibilities," Kisner said at a news conference outside the school district's administraton building. "The board has closed the schools, and this denies the children of Cleveland an education, thus endangering their future."

Civiletti Removed From Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Attorney General Benjamin R. Civiletti disclosed Friday he has removed himself from any role in the government's investigation into allegations of White House influence-buying on behalf of fugitive financier Robert L. Vesco. At the same time, Civiletti told an impromptu news conference he believes it is proper that President Carter be allowed to give videotaped testimony to a grand jury. Carter plans to give the testimony to a federal grand jury that has been invstigating the Vesco case for more than a year.

Civiletti said he is taking no pat in the investigation because of his role in the Carter administration's decision in 1977 to abandon efforts to extradite Vesco in fvor of using diplomatic channels to have him deported.

There has been no evidence the decision was made to benefit Veso, who is believed to be living in the Bahamas.

Civiletti said, nonetheless, it would be "inappropriate for me' to take part in the investigation "since I was involved in contemporaneous actions" relating o extradition proceedings against Vesco.

Civiletti said he was not consulted about the plans disclosed this week for Carter to testify by videotape rather in person before the grand jury.

The attorney general said he learned of the plans unofficially. "I may have heard about it second orthird hand," he said.

According to sources close to the investigation, some grand jurors complained that the videotaping procedure would prevent them from asking follow-up questions.

Asked if a president should be given special treatment when called to testify, Civileti said, 'Certainly. Only in the most compelling circumstances should a president have to provide information directly to a court or investigation."

He said that if high public officials were forced to appear in court every time someone subpoenaed them, in civil as well as criminal cases, "you'd have nothing but (the officials) sitting around courtrooms all day."

Civiletti said he regards the videotaping procedure as direct testimon. He said he had not considered what conditions would ever require a president to appear in person before a grand jury.

A District of Columbia grand jury is investigating allegations that shortly after Carter took office in January 1977, an attempt was made to pay off high administration officials to quash extradition proceedings against Vesco, who fled the country nearly 10 years ago after his indictment on sock fraud charges.

R.L. Herring, a Georgia businessman who has been convicted on unrelated federal fraud and racketeering charges, has said he paid $10,000 to a Georgia attorney, W. Spencer Lee IV, to act in Veso's behalf.

Lee has said he met with a White House aide, Richard M. Harden, in February 177, and was persuaded by Harden not to pursue the matter further.

Harden subsequently met with Carter, who sent a note to then-Attorney General Griffin B. Bell which said, "Please see Spencer Lee from Albany (Ga.) when he requests an appointment."

The Justice Department said the memo was placed in a file folder for potential job-seekers, adding that Lee never appeared for an appointment.

Itis believed that Carter's videotaped answers for the grand jury in the Vesco case would mark the first time a president has answered grand jury questions in this manner. Carter has provided testimony in different forms at least twice before criminal investigations since he became president.

On another subject, Civiletti said he wasn't aware of any tension between himself and the White House that has developed from his decision to recomend a special prosecutor investigate allegations that White House Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan used cocaine.

On Civiletti's recommendation, a pecial three-judge federal appeals court appointed a New York lawyer, Arthur Christy, to investigate the case.

Asked if his decision had caused strained relations with the White House, Civiletti said, "Not to my knowledge."

Civiletti said he met this week with Christy for about 15 or 20 minutes to offer Justice Departmentoffice space and staff for the investigation.

Administration Says It Will Sell Plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Services Administration says it will sell an Air Force plant built in 1942 in Wichita, Kan., to the Boeing Wichita Co. for more than $44 7 million.

The GSA said the sale, subject to antitrust clearance by the Justice Department, is part of a continuing national policy of getting rid of defense plants the government does not need while still assuring retention of production capacity.

Boeing Wichita plans to use the plant, which is adjacent to McConnell Air Force Base.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission Gets New Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preident Carter, declaring that "every possible step" must be taken to improve nuclear power safety, announced Friday that he is replacing Joseph Hendrie as chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Carter's move came as he responded for the first time to the findings of a presidential commission investigating the accident last March at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania.

White House aids said Hendrie's demotion was aimed at providing "fresh leadership" at the NRC, which the presidential panel had assailed as a "headless" agency. Carter said he would appoint someone from outside to head the NRC.

Hendrie, chairman of the NRC since it was created in 1975, will remain on the commision until his term expires in 1981, according to a Carter aide who declined to be named.

The decision to replace Hendrie fell far short of the recommendations made by the 12-member investigative commission headed by John G. Kemeny, president of Dartmouth College.

The panel's report, released on Oct. 25, called for a total reorganization of the NRC and said the regulatory agency should be headed by a single administrator.

Carter said he endorsed the NRC's current moratorium on issuance of new reactor construction permits and operating licenses. But he urged the agency "to complete its work as quickly as possible" and resume licensng within six months.

Dog Gives Away Attempted Robber

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — James Taylor had a dog and, according to the police, everywhere that Taylor went the dog was sure to go.

On Thursday, a man accompanied by a small black dog walked into the First National State Bank and handed a teller a note demanding $20 and $100 bills.

Later, police took the bank manager with them on a search of the downtown area. Not far from the bank, the manager spotted a familiar looking dog.

Irish Politician Controversial

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Charles J. Haughey, the Irish Republic's prime minister-designate, is one of the most dynamic and charismatic figures in Irish politic — and one of the most controversial.

His election Friday as leader of the ruling Fianna Fail — Gaelic for Soliers of Destiny — party, following the resignation of Premier Jack Lync, is the climax of a remarkable political comeback.

Nine years ago, Lynch fired Haughey, then his finance minister, for alleged involvement in gun-running to Irish Republican Army guerrillas in the strife-torn British province of Northern Ireland. He later was cleared of the charges.

At a news conference Friday he condemned the activities of the Provisional IRA in an apparent attempt to ease any anger in North Ireland.

The 54-year-old Haugey, a self-made millionaire, always had his sights on becoming taoiseach (pronounced tee-shock), Gaelic for prime minister.

A close friend commented: "The 1970 scandal would have probaby broken a lesser man than Charlie Haughey. But his ambition was so strong he fought his way back in from the cold and now he's made it."

Haughey — pronounced Haw'ey — is a staunch Irish natinalist and a hawk on the volatile issue of pushing the British out of Northern Ireland to unify the partitioned Emerald Isle.

His election by Fianna Fail's parliamentary deputies could mean the Dublin government will revive demands that the British withdraw — a move that many Irish beieve will stok up the political nd sectaian conflict.

The north's million-strong Protestant majority wants to remain British and fears being absorbed by the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic Republic.

Haughey has, since the 1970 arms scandal, made few public statements on unification. But he has been highly critical in private of Lynch's moderate stand and belief that unification can only be achieved by helping the British end the feuding.

When sectarian fighting erupted in Northern Ireland in August 1969, Haughey pressed Lynch to send troops across the border to protect the Catholic minority. Lynch did not — probably averting a war.

The following year, Haughey stood trial on charges of using government funds to buy weapons in Europe for the IRA, which is fighting to end British rule in the north. Haughey, who denied the charges, was cleared. But he was out in the cold. Over the years, he staged his comeback by building up grassroots support in Fianna Fail. Lynch was forced to reinstate him to the party' top echelon in 1975.

When Fianna Fail won a landslide victory in the 1977 election, was named health minister.

Haughey has wide experience in government. In the years since 1960, he has headed the justice, agriculture and finance departments in Fianna Fail administrations.

Controversy has been his middle name. He sparked protest marches by farmers when he headed the Agriculture Department because they opposed his stringent policies.

As health minister, he has sought to legalize birth control in this Roman Catholic nation, a move that has stirred widespread protests and angered the conservative Catholic hierarchy.

He also urged the Irish to quit smoking, drink less and exercise more. He quit smoking and drinking himself — in public, at least.

Haughey, a barrister and accountant who runs his own accountancy business, is one of Ireland's top racehorse breeders. He owns a 280-acre estate.

In 1951 he married into one of the Republic's most influential political families. His wife, Mauren, is the daughter of former Premier Sean Lemss. They have three sons and daughter.

Haughey was born in Castlebar near the border wth Northern Ireland. His parehts came from Swantragh, a Northern Ireland farming community with strong republican traditions.

Civiletti said he is taking no pat in the investigation because of his role in the Carter administration's decision in 1977 to abandon efforts to extradite Vesco in fvor of using diplomatic channels to have him deported.

There has been no evidence the decision was made to benefit Veso, who is believed to be living in the Bahamas.

Civiletti said, nonetheless, it would be "inappropriate for me' to take part in the investigation "since I was involved in contemporaneous actions" relating o extradition proceedings against Vesco.

Civiletti said he was not consulted about the plans disclosed this week for Carter to testify by videotape rather in person before the grand jury.

The attorney general said he learned of the plans unofficially. "I may have heard about it second orthird hand," he said.

According to sources close to the investigation, some grand jurors complained that the videotaping procedure would prevent them from asking follow-up questions.

Asked if a president should be given special treatment when called to testify, Civileti said, 'Certainly. Only in the most compelling circumstances should a president have to provide information directly to a court or investigation."

He said that if high public officials were forced to appear in court every time someone subpoenaed them, in civil as well as criminal cases, "you'd have nothing but (the officials) sitting around courtrooms all day."

Civiletti said he regards the videotaping procedure as direct testimon. He said he had not considered what conditions would ever require a president to appear in person before a grand jury.

A District of Columbia grand jury is investigating allegations that shortly after Carter took office in January 1977, an attempt was made to pay off high administration officials to quash extradition proceedings against Vesco, who fled the country nearly 10 years ago after his indictment on sock fraud charges.

R.L. Herring, a Georgia businessman who has been convicted on unrelated federal fraud and racketeering charges, has said he paid $10,000 to a Georgia attorney, W. Spencer Lee IV, to act in Veso's behalf.

Lee has said he met with a White House aide, Richard M. Harden, in February 177, and was persuaded by Harden not to pursue the matter further.

Harden subsequently met with Carter, who sent a note to then-Attorney General Griffin B. Bell which said, "Please see Spencer Lee from Albany (Ga.) when he requests an appointment."

The Justice Department said the memo was placed in a file folder for potential job-seekers, adding that Lee never appeared for an appointment.

Itis believed that Carter's videotaped answers for the grand jury in the Vesco case would mark the first time a president has answered grand jury questions in this manner. Carter has provided testimony in different forms at least twice before criminal investigations since he became president.

On another subject, Civiletti said he wasn't aware of any tension between himself and the White House that has developed from his decision to recomend a special prosecutor investigate allegations that White House Chief of Staff Hamilton Jordan used cocaine.

On Civiletti's recommendation, a pecial three-judge federal appeals court appointed a New York lawyer, Arthur Christy, to investigate the case.

Asked if his decision had caused strained relations with the White House, Ciiletti said, "Not to my knowledge."

Civiletti said he met this week with Christy for about 15 or 20 minutes to offer Justice Departmentoffice space and staff for the investigation.

Administration Says It Will Sell Plant

WASHINGTON (AP) — The General Services Administration says it will sell an Air Force plant built in 1942 in Wichita, Kan., to the Boeing Wichita Co. for more than $44.7 million.

The GSA said the sale, subject to antitrust clearance by the Justice Department, is part of a continuing national policy of getting rid of defense plants the government does not need while still assuring retention of production capacity.

Boeing Wichita plans to use the plant, which is adjacent to McConnell Air Force Base.

Nuclear Regulatory Commission Gets New Head

WASHINGTON (AP) — Preident Carter, declaring that "every possible step" must be taken to improve nuclear power safety, announced Friday that he is replacing Joseph Hendrie as chairman of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission.

Carter's move came as he responded for the first time to the findings of a presidential commission investigating the accident last March at Three Mile Island in Pennsylvania.

White House aids said Hendrie's demotion was aimed at providing "fresh leadership" at the NRC, which the presidential panel had assailed as a "headless" agency. Carter said he would appoint someone from outside to head the NRC.

Hendrie, chairman of the NRC since it was created in 1975, will remain on the commision until his term expires in 1981, according to a Carter aide who declined to be named.

The decision to replace Hendrie fell far short of the recommendations made by the 12-member investigative commission headed by John G. Kemeny, president of Dartmouth College.

The panel's report, released on Oct. 25, called for a total reorganization of the NRC and said the regulatory agency should be headed by a single administrator.

Carter said he endorsed the NRC's current moratorium on issuance of new reactor construction permits and operating licenses. But he urged the agency "to complete its work as quickly as possible" and resume licensng within six months.

Dog Gives Away Attempted Robber

NEWARK, N.J. (AP) — James Taylor had a dog and, according to the police, everywhere that Taylor went the dog was sure to go.

On Thursday, a man accompanied by a small black dog walked into the First National State Bank and handed a teller a note demanding $20 and $100 bills.

Later, police took the bank manager with them on a search of the downtown area. Not far from the bank, the manager spotted a familiar looking dog.

Irish Politician Controversial

DUBLIN, Ireland (AP) — Charles J. Haughey, the Irish Republic's prime minister-designate, is one of the most dynamic and charismatic figures in Irish politic — and one of the most controversial.

His election Friday as leader of the ruling Fianna Fail — Gaelic for Soliers of Destiny — party, following the resignation of Premier Jack Lync, is the climax of a remarkable political comeback.

Nine years ago, Lynch fired Haughey, then his finance minister, for alleged involvement in gun-running to Irish Republican Army guerrillas in the strifetorn British province of Northern Ireland. He later was cleared of the charges.

At a news conference Friday he condemned the activities of the Provisional IRA in an apparent attempt to ease any anger in North Ireland.

The 54-year-old Haugey, a self-made millionaire, always had his sights on becoming taoiseach (pronounced tee-shock), Gaelic for prime minister.

A close friend commented: "The 1970 scandal would have probaby broken a lesser man than Charlie Haughey. But his ambition was so strong he fought his way back in from the cold and now he's made it."

Haughey — pronounced Haw'ey — is a staunch Irish natinalist and a hawk on the volatile issue of pushing the British out of Northern Ireland to unify the partitioned Emerald Isle.

His election by Fianna Fail's parliamentary deputies could mean the Dublin government will revive demands that the British withdraw — a move that many Irish beieve will stok up the political nd sectaian conflict.

The north's million-strong Protestant majority wants to remain British and fears being absorbed by the overwhelmingly Roman Catholic Republic.

Haughey has, since the 1970 arms scandal, made few public statements on unification. But he has been highly critical in private of Lynch's moderate stand and belief that unification can only be achieved by helping the British end the feuding.

When sectarian fighting erupted in Northern Ireland in August 1969, Haughey pressed Lynch to send troops across the border to protect the Catholic minority. Lynch did not — probably averting a war.

The following year, Haughey stood trial on charges of using government funds to buy weapons in Europe for the IRA, which is fighting to end British rule in the north. Haughey, who denied the charges, was cleared. But he was out in the cold. Over the years, he staged his comeback by building up grassroots support in Fianna Fail. Lynch was forced to reinstate him to the party' top echelon in 1975.

When Fianna Fail won a landslide victory in the 1977 election, was named health minister.

Haughey has wide experience in government. In the years since 1960, he has headed the justice, agriculture and finance departments in Fianna Fail administrations.

Controversy has been his middle name. He sparked protest marches by farmers when he headed the Agriculture Department because they opposed his stringent policies.

As health minister, he has sought to legalize birth control in this Roman Catholic nation, a move that has stirred widespread protests and angered the conservative Catholic hierarchy.

He also urged the Irish to quit smoking, drink less and exercise more. He quit smoking and drinking himself — in public, at least.

Haughey, a barrister and accountant who runs his own accountancy business, is one of Ireland's top racehorse breeders. He owns a 280-acre estate.

In 1951 he married into one of the Republic's most influential political families. His wife, Mauren, is the daughter of former Premier Sean Lemss. They have three sons and daughter.

Haughey was born in Castlebar near the border wth Northern Ireland. His parents came from Swantragh, a Northern Ireland farming community with strong republican traditions.

Carter Seeks Unity For Plan To Place Missiles In Europe

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter promised "a major step toward greater arms control" to wavering members of NATO on Friday as he sought to maintain alliance unity behind a plan to introduce a new generation of nuclear missiles in Western Europe.

But the administration's spokesman at the State Department, Hodding Carter, said there would be "no substantive changes" in the draft of the U.S. plan before the alliance makes its decision.

He said the United States still expects a favorable outcome when North Atlantic Treaty Organzation ministers meet in Brussels next week. NATO members favoring the plan can, if necessary, move ahead without the members who oppose it, he added.

The president met sparately Friday morning with the Prime Minister of Norway, Odvar Nordli, and the Netherlands, Andreas van Agt. Secretary of State Cyrus Vance lanned to meet with Kjeld Olesen, the foreign minister of Denmark, the third country which hasreservations about the plan.

The meetings were held against a backdrop of intense Soviet pressure on Western Europe to abandon or delay the plan, which would for the first time place nuclear wepons capable of hitting Moscow on the soil of Germany, Russia's ancient enemy.

Soviet presure helped derail the U.S. plan to deploy neutron weapons in Europe last year, and the administration has taken great pains to avoid a similar setback this time.

But there is substantial opposition to the plan in Europe. The Dutch Parliament voted 76-69 against the plan Thursday, indicating that van Agt's government could fall if he insists on approving it. At the outset of both of his meetings, Carter allowed reporters and photographers to enter the Oval Office briefly, and in both instances he emphasized the arms control aspects of the plan.

Norway and the United States, he said, share a "constant and increasing commitment to arms control, both in conventional weapons and in nuclear weapons."

To van Agt, Carter observed that the NATO plan is a package containing "a major tep toward greater arms control and reduction in the arsenals of both conventional and nuclear weapons."

The NATO package has not been made public in its entirety, but officials have revealed the outlines. It calls for the production and deployment of 572 new missiles in the 1980s. Of that total 108 would be new Pershing II ballistic missiles. The rest would be an entirely new kind of weapon, the Tomahawk cruise missile. They would be stationed in several European countries, but the United States would maintain control over the "trigger."

The new missiles would replace 572 existing, shorter-range missiles. At the same time, the United States has offered to withdraw 1,000 aging battlefield nuclear weapons, thus reducing the total NATO arseal from 7000 warheads to 6,000 warheads.

In addition, officials sid the alliance would be willing to negotiate reductions in the number of new NATO missiles deployed if the Soviets agree to reduce the number of SS-20 mobile, intermediate-range missiles stationed in Europe. But the have ruled out eliminating the new missiles entirely.

The administration says the new weapons are needed to counter the SS-20 and the Soviets' new Backfire bombers. The approximately 120 SS-20s each have three highly accurate warheads.

The Soviets, as part of their campaign against the NATO plan, have unilaterally withdrawn 20,000 troops from East Germany. They have offered to negotiate reductions in the SS-20 force if NATO abandons the Pershing II and the Tomahawk. If NATO goes ahead with the plan, the Russians have warned they will take "appropriate steps," presumably by adding more SS-20s.

Admiistration officials have been fearful that NATO's unity might unravel if defections begin with the Norway, Denmark, and the Netherlands.

Spokesman Carter said there is normally not a formal vote by alliance members on policy questions. "The objective is consensus, but it is possible that one or more members may not see their way clear fully to join the consensus of the others," he said.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

By BILL DOYLE

Q. I recently took out an endowment life insurance policy on our young child. The main purpose is to provide a college eduction fund. I realize that the policy will also provide that the child will be insured, if he is in poor health when he reaches adulthood.

The premium is $242.19 a year, if I pay it annually, or $22.50 a month, if I pay it monthly. I feel this is too much money for the benefits. For example, after 18 years, the policy's guaranteed cash value will be only $2,931.32.

I feel it would be better to put this money in a savings account and buy savings certificates when enough is accumulated, or even to buy U.S. Savings in the childs name. What do you think?

A. You should have done your arithmetic before you signed for that expensive endowment policy. After 18 years — when college enrollment time arives — you will have paid in $3,240, if you pay the premiums monthly, or $2,906.28, if you pay premiums annually.

You would do much better by depositing that money in a savings account and, everytime there is enough accumulated, getting a savings certificate. Open the account in "gift to minors act" form and, assuming the child doesn't have other income, the interesf will be tax free.

Even the purchase of Series E, U.S. Savings Bonds, with their low 6½ percent interest would be a better deal.

You say you took out that policy "recently." I say you should drop it and go the savings acoount-savings certifioate route. You'll lose the premiums you have paid but you'll build a bigger college education fund.

Q. My husband received about $30,000 in a lump-lum distribution from a retirement plan wbere he formerly worked. He put it into a special "rollover" individual retirement acoount (IRA) so that he would not have to pay income taxes on it at tbat time.

The IRA is at a bank and pays only 7½ percent. We would like to withdraw this money and put it in a money market mutual fund to get a higher yield. We are both 59. He plans to retire next year. Can we do this, without paying a tax penalty?

A. Yes, by opening an IRA at a money market mutual fund and switching your husband's IRA from the bank to that mutual fund. Although there is some red tape involved, it is possible to transfer an IRA from one "sponsor" to another — in this case from a bank to a money market mutual fund.

My suggestion is to pick the money market fund you want to use and contact that organization. The people there will provide you with the necessary forms and handle the details.

Once your husband reaches 59½, he can start withdrawing money from his IRA. He'll then pay income taxes on the money he takes out. Because he'll be retired and figures to be in a lower tax bracket, the tax bite shouldn't be too severe.

If he took money out of an IRA before reaching 59½ he would pay regular taxes, plus a tax penalty.

Q. Both 26-week U.S. Treasury bills and six-month savings certificates pay the same rate of interest — assuming they are issued in the same week. Is there some advantage in owning Treasury bills, rather than six-month oertificates?

A. Yes. It's taxes.

The interest paid on U.S. Treasury bills is not sjeot to state income tax. Nor is it subject to city income tax, if you live in an area where such a tax is levied. It is, bowever, subject to federal income tax.

The interest paid on savings certifioates, of course, is subject to federal, state and local inoome taxes.

DOYLE welcomes written questions, but he will be able to provide answers only through the column.

Policemen Required To Take Lie Detector Tests

BOSTON (AP) — Massachusetts' highest court says police officers may be askd to take lie detector tests in criminal investigations into their actions while on duty. They can be disciplined if they refuse to take the test the court said.

In a unanimous decision released Thursday, the Supreme Judicial Court held that requiring polygraph questioning of police officers does not violate heir Fifth Amendment rights against self-incrimination or a state law banning employers from subjecting employees to such tests.

The decision upheld a ruling by Superior Court Judge Paul G. Garrity that six Lawrence police officers must take the tests in a police department investigation into a 1978 break-in at a sporting goods store. The owner reported nothing missing until after police left.

Gasoline, Heating Oil Prices May Rise Six Cents A Gallon

This year's 63 perent jump in energy prices has almost worked its way through the U.S. economy — just in time for another crude oil price boost when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' oil ministers meet Dec. 17 in Venezuela.

Some oil company experts believe U.S. gasoline and heating oil prices could rise by 5 to 6 cents a gallon as a result of an expected crude-oil price increse by Saudi Arabia and other OPEC members.

And worries over the future of oil production in Iran — one of the 13-nation cartel's largest members — are sure to be hanging over the conference when it opens in Caracas.

"Fom the oil companies' standpoint" and from the standpoint of the United States, which imports half its oil, "the whole situation is very bleak," said one senior oil executive, who asked not to be quoted by name.

As prices have spiraled, demand for oil in the West has grown hardly at all this year, and may even drop 1 percent or 2 percent in 1980.

But rather than lowering price as oil use slows, OPEC could "cut production to 28 million barrels a day" — a 7 percent reduction — "without even breaking into a sweat," the executive said.

"If they cut back, oil markets are likely to remain crazy," he said. "We re going to have to go into a deep recession just to break even."

But others are more optimistic.

"We're going into next winter with better oil inventories than we had at this time last year, and that should give us some breathing room," said Jeffey Matthews, an analst at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

Production increases in the North Sea and Mexico could offset some cutbacks, OPEC countries are continuing to find more oil and U.S. oil companies all have increased their exploration budgets this year, he said.

Kennedy Aide Says Carter Close To Legal Line In Campaign

WASINGTON (AP) — Sen. Edward M Kennedy' campaign manager said Friday that President Carter is "very close to or over the legal line" in using the benefits of the White House for is re-eletion campaign.

As Kennedy campaigned in Iowa, Tom Southwick, his press secretary, also said Carter is actively campaigning despite the president's claims that he has been too busy with the Iranian crisis to engage in active politics.

"Clearly what we've heard just here in Iowa indicates he has spent a good deal of time on the phone," Southwick said.

Earlier this week when he formally announced his candidacy for re-election, Carter said he was abstaining from active politics because of the situation in Iran.

But a Kennedy aide in Washington, who asked not to be named, said there was plenty of evidence that Carter is campaigning, nonetheless.

"The fact is that everywhere we are in touch in the country, people tell us they have been getting calls continuously from the president, including the day of his announcement," the Kennedy aide said.

"Either they are using people who sound like the president or the president is spending one hell of a lot of time calling," the Kennedy aide said.

White House press secretary Jody Powell confirmed that Carter was making calls and holding political conferences at the White Huse despite his decision not to campaign openly. Powell said Carter does not "intend to be held hostage or immobilized" by the Iranian situation.

Meanwhile, Stephen Smith, Kennedy's brother-in-law as well as campaign manager, cited congressional allegaions that Transportation Secretary Neil Goldschmidt had made political use of his department's grant funds.

"Things like Secretary Goldschmidt's efforts to use his department's grant funds for political intimidation aren't just politics as usual," Smith said. "They are very close to or over the legal line.

Sens. Adlai Stevenson, D-Ill., William Proxmire, D-Wis., and Harrison Williams, D-N.J., told Goldschmidt at a Senate Banking Committee hearing Thursday that they would not tolerate his withholding transit money from mayors who do not back Carter's re-election bid.

The senators cited newspaper accounts of a breakfast Goldschmidt had Nov. 20 with reporters in which he was repoted to have suggested that Chicago Mayor Jane Byrne's endorsement of Kennedy for president might affect his decision o transit grants for Chicago.

Thepublished reports also said Goldschmidt would consider Philadelphia Mayor Wiliam Green's position on the presidential race when deciding on grants for that city.

Goldschmidt denied the charges. But Kennedy campaiging in Council Bluffs, Iowa, raised the issue anew Friday.

Smith said, "It's very clear that there is a lot of smoke around the way the Carter campaign is using federal and Democatic National Committee resources and probably a lot of fire, too.

"It wouldn't be important if it were just a few isolated incidents, but if there's a widepread pattern where the Carter campaign is using large amounts of taxpayers' money as a self-serving political tool while every other candidate is working under he new, very tight contribution and expenditure limits," Smith added.

Elvis' Mansion Guarded Against Defacement Acts

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (UPI) — Obscenities spray-painted on the walls outside the mansion of the late Elvis Presley have prompted a group of off-duty policemen, sheriff deputies and security guards to set up 24-hour patrols.

John A. Berry, president of the Graceland Preservation Society, Friday said the volunteers will arrest and prosecute anyone found defacing the stone wall around the Presley family home on Elvis Presley Boulevard.

"We do not object to the small print on the wall, but we do not condone the spray painting of obscenities and such," Berry said.

Since the singer's death in 1977, thousands of tourists have flocked to the home to see Presley's grave in Graceland's garden, and many have left behind autographs and messages on the stone wall that encircles the estate.

There was at least one arrest for spray-painting on the wall.

Comedian Takes 'Wild, Crazy' Trip To City

TERRE HAUTE, Ind. (AP) — After a guided tour of Terre Haute, comedian Steve Martin changed his mind Friday and decided this western Indiana city is not "the most nowhere place in America."

"I was wrong," he told a crowd at the airport on his way out of the city. "I should have said Abilene (Texas).

"If I have offended anyone, well, excuse me."

"I didn't know the town would go this crazy," said Martin after arriving by Lear jet at the Terre Haute airport to the cheers of a welcoming crowd who gave him a bouquet of wilted daises, carnations and one mum.

"I'm a cosmopolitan guy," Martin deadpanned to 115 reporters at an airport news conference. "I've been to a lot of big cities. I've been to Buffalo, Albuquerque, and I've been to Abilene. It's going to take a lot to excite me."

City fathers invited Martin to see Terre Haute first-hand after he referred to western Indiana community of 70,000 as "the most nowhere place in America" in a Playboy interview.

Martin announced plans for the trip during a charity benefit in San Jose, Calif., on Thursday night.

He said he had decided to give Terre Haute a second chance and was "really looking forward to the laundromat there. I hear it's the best in the nation."

On Friday, Martin was greeted by hundreds of people, carrying such signs as, "They All Come Back to Terre Haute," and "Mr. Martin, Haven't You Ever Heard of Haute Cuisine?"

"The last time I was here was on a one-night tour and frankly, I was a little bored," Martin conceded. "Maybe it still will be boring, but I came with an open mind."

Martin passed up the offer of a 1969 blue Chevy Malibu, its windows covered with plastic sheeting, and rode into town in a blue Lincoln.

He passed such Terre Haute landmarks as the Highland Lawn Cemetery, the auto graveyard, the state Highway Department garage and the Pride City Auto Sales with a sign in the window that read, "Welcome Stan Martin."

At the modest Shuffle Inn, more than a hundred people crowded around the windows to peer in at Martin lunching with Mayor William Brighton and two Playboy bunnies.

A chef from Maxim's of Paris, a Chicago restaurant, was flown in to prepare the meal — and Playboy was picking up the tab.

"The chef came in and did it all," said Alice Corenflos, one of the managers at the Shuffle Inn, where the most expensive item is a $2.65 dinner with choice of entree and homemade rolls. "We just stayed out of his way."

While Martin was inside eating, what amounted to a traffic jam for Terre Haute developed as motorists tried to catch sight of the gray-haired comedian in his distinctive white suit.

Martin said if he liked Terre Haute this time, he would consider naming some other city as the most nowhere city in America.

"I have a town in mind," he said, adding, "But I may be moving here if I really like it."

Martin decided against doing his famous drop-the-pants routine while in Terre Haute.

"I didn't bring the right underwear," he said.

Scientists Eye Changes In San Andreas Fault

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The earth around the cantankerous San Andreas Fault in Southern California is expanding mysteriously and the sudden change, if it continues, "is not a particularly healthy thing," scientists report.

The rapid growth spurt is so poorly understood that "it's premature to speculate on the implication for future earthquakes," said Barry Raleigh, a division chief at the U.S. Geological Survey's earthquake research center in Menlo Park.

"However, if the present pattern continues it would lead to an earthquake sooner rather than later," he said. "If it persists for a long period of time, it's not a particularly healthy thing to have going on."

Land throughout the region previously had been contracting — slowly shrinking into a smaller area — for years, scientists said. The sudden change from contraction to expansion was discovered independently by researchers at the U.S. Geological Survey in Menlo Park and the Natonal Aeronautics and Space Administration's Jet Propulsion Laboratory in Pasadena.

The findings were disclosed Thursday at an American Geophysical Society meeting by James Savage of the geological survey and A.E. Niell of the NASA lab.

Raleigh said in an interview that the earlier period of contraction had helped to squeeze the two sides of the San Andreas together and hold them in place. He said the expansion away from the fault reverses that trend and is "reducing the frictional strength" that temporarily keeps the fault from slipping and producing an earthquake.

Raleigh emphasized there's also reason to suspect the expansion, which began in 1978, may be only a part of some repeating geologic cycle. "Maybe the changes just go back and forth without leading to an earthquake."

Scientists generally agree the southern leg of the San Andreas is primed to generate a major earthquake, so almost any unexplained geologic change in the area sparks some concern.

The Palmdale Bulge, an apparent swelling of the land in much the same area, raised concern for three years. The existence of the bulge, however, wasquestioned at the meeting by UCLA geophysicist David Jackson, who contends its reported existence was apparently the result of surveying errors.

Savage said the geological survey's measurements were made with laser beams and the readings near Palmdale "were so surprising that we went back with entirely different instruments and measured it again."

Venezuela To Cut Back Oil Production In 1980

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — Venezuelan Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti reaffirmed Friday his nation's plans to cut oil production by 6 percent in 1980, and charged other Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are "speculating" on the lucrative spot market.

Berti aso said Venezela will urge the Organzation of Peroleum Exporting Countries' oil ministers at their Dec. 17 meeting here to return to an orderly system of petroleum prices.

Several OPEC members already charge about $3 above the cartel's official top oil price of $23.50 for a 42-galon barrel, and individual sales in the spot market at $40 and up are common.

"We'll make every effort to reunify prices, returning to a single price" said Berti. "But I am aware that this is not easy."

Berti said said that of the 13 OPEC nations, only Venezuela, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, whose combined ouput of 14.3 million barrels daily is about 47 percent of the cartel's production, have refrained from spot-market "speculating."

He said spot market sales account for 25 percent of OPEC's trade — slightly higher than an estimate by Gulf Oil this week — and added the continued diversion of oil away from long-term contract sales "makes us extremely worried."

Venezulan officials have sai they expect a "moderate" hike in OPEC prices at the meeting here, but they have not made exact predictions.

Oil industry sources, however, believe the cartel's actions could result in a gasoline or heating oil price increase of 5 to 6 cents a gallon in the United States.

Berti said Venezuela's current oil output of 2.3 million barrels a day willbe spared by 150,000 barrels next month in a move aimed at conserving the country's natural resources.

According to industry sources, Venezuela also is telling major international oil companies that the percentage of Venezuelan oil they receive under long-term contracts will be reduced by an unspecified amount under new pacts beginning in Januay.

Additionally, the energy and mines ministry has proposed that all long-term contracts require customers to specify here the oil would be delivered.

According to newspaper reports, the restriction would diminish oil companies' capacity to shift destinations and limit their ability to sell oil on spot markets at a profit.

Earlier in Viena, OPEC Secretary-General Rene Ortiz said the "tremendous difference" between official and market prices will play a role in the setting of a new price list for the cartel.

"OPEC will have to make a decision takng this (difference) into account," Ortiz said. "At the moment, the main factor" influencing the cartel "is the market."

Ortiz said consuming nations today are buying oil at a rate that does not reflect their actual consumption as they build up their stockpiles.

He estimated OPEC's production is running 5.7 percent ahead of last year's output, while consumption in industrial nations has gained by 1 percent.

'Hated' Law Abolished

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The nation's new president, in a move Friday "to promote national reconcilation," released 68 political prisoners and abolshed a hated 4-year-old law which banned political dissent.

It had been expected a larger number would be freed but government officials said 46 prisoners had been released previously.

President Choi Kyu-hah's move to eliminate Emergency Decree Nine did away with what was considered one of the most repressive laws imposed by President Park Chung-hee, who was assassinated Oct. 26.

The Justice Ministry said 417 persons were charged with violating the law and while the announcement made no mention of amnesty, informed sources said Choi probably will grant amnesty around the time of his inauguraion, which is expected to be Dec. 21. He was chosen Wednesday by the electoral college.

Choi's abolishment of the anti-dissent law ultimately affects thousands of dissidents, including former presidential candidate and opposition leader Kim Dae-jung.

Kim's six-month house arrest ended at the stroke of midnight — when the decree was officially lifted — and dozens of journalists rushed into his home to talk to him.

Kim, who, before his house arrest, spent almost three years in prison for violating the decree, said there are still "many patriotic political prisoners" jailed under other laws who must be freed and an illegal and undemocratic constitution that must be amended.

Choi is expected to oversee revision of the 1972 Yushin constitution, which Park wrote to perpetuate his one-man rule, and then prepare for direct presidential elections.

The new president has not announced an election timetable and while the opposition New Democratic Party said Choi's successor should be inaugurated by Aug. 15, 1980, Korea's National Day, political experts are guessing Chois interim presidency will last one to two years.

Under the provisions of Emergency Decree Nine, it was illegal to criticize Park or even suggest amending the 1972 constitution. It was also against the law to hold demonstrations or criticize emergency decrees. All student political activity was banned.

The abolition of EM9 — as it was called — will not immediately restore all political freedoms to the 37 million South Koreans because the country has been under martial law since the assassination and demonstrations and political gatherings are still banned.

Venezuela To Cut Back Oil Production In 1980

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) -- Venezuelan Energy Minister Humberto Calderon Berti reaffirmed Friday his nation's plans to cut oil production by 6 percent in 1980, and charged other Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries are "speculating" on the lucrative spot market.

Berti aso said Venezela will urge the Organzation of Peroleum Exporting Countries' oil ministers at their Dec. 17 meeting here to return to an orderly system of petroleum prices.

Several OPEC members already charge about $3 above the cartel's official top oil price of $23.50 for a 42-galon barrel, and individual sales in the spot market at $40 and up are common.

"We'll make every effort to reunify prices, returning to a single price" said Berti. "But I am aware that this is not easy."

Berti said said that of the 13 OPEC nations, only Venezuela, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, whose combined ouput of 14.3 million barrels daily is about 47 percent of the cartel's production, have refrained from spot-market "speculating."

He said spot market sales account for 25 percent of OPEC's trade — slightly higher than an estimate by Gulf Oil this week — and added the continued diversion of oil away from long-term contract sales "makes us extremely worried."

Venezulan officials have sai they expect a "moderate" hike in OPEC prices at the meeting here, but they have not made exact predictions.

Oil industry sources, however, believe the cartel's actions could result in a gasoline or heating oil price increase of 5 to 6 cents a gallon in the United States.

Berti said Venezuela's current oil output of 2.3 million barrels a day willbe spared by 150,000 barrels next month in a move aimed at conserving the country's natural resources.

According to industry sources, Venezuela also is telling major international oil companies that the percentage of Venezuelan oil they receive under long-term contracts will be reduced by an unspecified amount under new pacts beginning in Januay.

Additionally, the energy and mines ministry has proposed that all long-term contracts require customers to specify here the oil would be delivered.

According to newspaper reports, the restriction would diminish oil companies' capacity to shift destinations and limit their ability to sell oil on spot markets at a profit.

Earlier in Viena, OPEC Secretary-General Rene Ortiz said the "tremendous difference" between official and market prices will play a role in the setting of a new price list of the cartel.

"OPEC will have to make a decision takng this (difference) into account," Ortiz said. "At the moment, the main factor" influencing the cartel "is the market."

Ortiz said consuming nations today are buying oil at a rate that does not reflect their actual consumption as they build up their stockpiles.

He estimated OPEC's production is running 5.7 percent ahead of last year's output, while consumption in industrial nations has gained by 1 percent.

'Hated' Law Abolished

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — The nation's new president, in a move Friday to promote national reconcilation," released 68 political prisoners and abolshed a hated 4-year-old law which banned political dissent.

It had been expected a larger number would be freed but government officials said 46 prisoners had been released previously.

President Choi Kyu-hah's move to eliminate Emergency Decree Nine did away with what was considered one of the most repressive laws imposed by President Park Chung-hee, who was assassinated Oct. 26.

The Justice Ministry said 417 persons were charged with violating the law and while the announcement made no mention of amnesty, informed sources said Choi probably will grant amnesty around the time of his inauguraion, which is expected to be Dec. 21. He was chosen Wednesday by the electoral college.

Choi's abolishment of the anti-dissent law ultimately affects thousands of dissidents, including former presidential candidate and opposition leader Kim Daejung.

Kim's six-month house arrest ended at the stroke of midnight — when the decree was officially lifted — and dozens of journalists rushed into his home to talk to him.

Kim, who, before his house arrest, spent almost three years in prison for violating the decree, said there are still "many patriotic political prisoners" jailed under other laws who must be freed and an illegal and undemocratic constitution that must be amended.

Choi is expected to oversee revision of the 1972 Yushin constitution, which Park wrote to perpetuate his one-man rule, and then prepare for direct presidential elections.

The new president has not announced an election timetable and while the opposition New Democratic Party said Choi's successor should be inaugurated by Aug. 15, 1980, Korea's National Day, political experts are guessing Chois interim presidency will last one to two years.

Under the provisions of Emergency Decree Nine, it was illegal to criticize Park or even suggest amending the 1972 constitution. It was also against the law to hold demonstrations or criticize emergency decrees. All student political activity was banned.

The abolition of EM9 — as it was called — will not immediately restore all political freedoms to the 37 million South Koreans because the country has been under martial law since the assassination and demonstrations and political gatherings are still banned.

Sports Car Stripped At Local Dealership

The service manager of a Lubbock automobile dealership came to work Friday morning to find one of the business' 1980 sports cars stripped of its tires and wheels and sitting on cinder blocks and bricks.

Ken Mead of Frank Brown Pontiac at 4637 50th St. told police the 1980 dark blue Trans Am was missing its four Goodyear tires and four aluminum cast mag wheels. Mead valued the missing items at $1,140.

Police reports indicate the thieves apparently climbed over a fence surrounding the dealership's parking lot to get to the car. Mead said the theft occurred between 6 p.m. Thursday and 6 a.m. Friday.

A 23-year-old Texas Tech University student told police someone stole his 1979 motorcycle from the second level of the parking garage for Bromley Hall at 1001 University Ave.

Roy W. Hendrick, a resident of the private dormitory, told investigating officers the dark blue Yamaha 400cc motorcycle was locked and that keys to the vehicle were in his possession at the time of the theft. The student theorized that someone lifted the 400-pound vehicle and placed it in the back of another vehicle for transportation.

Reports indicate the theft of the $2,000 motorcycle occurred between 12:05 a.m. and 10:20 a.m. Friday.

A man apparently angered over losing several arm wrestling matches at a 34th Street club allegedly slashed his opponent's car tires about 2:30 a.m. Friday.

Richard Lee Smith Jr., 19, of Box 175A, Route 5, Lubbock, told police that after he came out on top in the contests, the loser pulled a knife and threatened to cut someone inside the nightspot in the 5000-block of 34th Street.

The armed man reportedly had told club patrons he had just "done a lot of time in prison."

Smith said he and a friend ran out of the club and the knife-wielder followed. The man allegedly cut the tires on Smith's vehicle and then drove off on his motorcycle.

In other activity, a 25-year-old Lubbock man was arrested about 2:45 a.m. Friday after he allegedly attempted to break into two houses in the 2800-block of Bates Street.

Barbara Martinez of 2816 Bates St. told police she came home to find several of her windows shattered. Marie Ruiz of 2818 Bates St. said she and a friend were home when the man allegedly broke one of her windows, apparently attempting to get in.

Reports indicate neither of the victims' houses was entered by the suspect.

While police were making out their reports, the suspect walked up and was identified by one of the complainants as the man they saw attempting to get into the houses.

The arresting officer, in his report, stated the man was not read his rights nor questioned at the scene because he appeared to intoxicated.

A 28-year-old Levelland man allegedly threw a firebomb at the assistant manager of the Sweet Retreat club, 1813 Texas Ave., after the suspect was told to leave the club shortly after 5 p.m. Thursday.

The man was apprehended near the scene and taken to the county jail, where he was booked on suspicion of arson.

No one was injured in the incident and the fire was quickly put out, according to reports.

Vandals and thieves reportedly struck several cars parked at St. Mary's Hospital, 4000 24th St., late Thursday and early this morning.

Reporting damage and losses were Ginger McMurray of 520 E. Stanford St., car battery stolen; Andy Baquera of 4702 Fourth St., Apt. 101, shattered windshield; Frances Tatom of 113 Waco Ave., battery stolen and windshield broken; Evangeline McGuinness of 4407 Lehigh St., electrical system destroyed; and Gary Rodriguez of 3615 40th St., windshield broken.

Gilbert Mora of Littlefield said he was at a club in the 1700-block of Fourth Street late Thursday and early this morning when someone stole his wallet, containing $80 cash, a $312 check and credit cards.

Josefina P. Gonzales of 1011 Second St. told police her loss was about $1,000 after someone drove a car into the front of her house about 9 p.m. Thursday.

She described the suspect as a short Mexican-American female, about 27.

A 33-year-old student teacher in Lubbock said a man exposed himself in front of her shortly after 8 p.m. Thursday at a laundromat at 13th Street and Slide Road.

She told police she saw the man unzip his pants and walk past the business. She said he walked past again several minutes later and this time he was naked.

The suspect was described as a tall, thin white man, between 18 and 25, with blond hair. Before disrobing, the man had been wearing a shirt and pants, both tan colored, the woman said.

A 28-year-old Lubbock woman, who identified herself as a student, told police Thursday someone stole her research papers and estimated the loss at more than $1,000.

She said that each of the seven papers was worth $150. Part of the research, police were told, was on George Washington.

The papers were to have been left on the woman's front porch, according to reports. The woman said when she arrived home the papers were not there.

The officer, in his report, stated [illegible] searched the area to see if the small bundle had been blown away by Thursday's high winds.

Youth Questioned Concerning Local Warehouse Firebombing

A 16-year-old Lubbock boy was questioned early Friday in connection with the theft of a van and the firebombing of the storage warehouse where the stolen vehicle was recovered Thursday night.

Authories were speculating the office of Near-By Storage at 5106 Santa Fe Drive was bombed about 5 a.m. Friday in an attempt to destroy rental records for the bin where the customized 1979 Chevrolet van was recovered.

The vehicle was reported stolen Nov. 13 from Modern Chevrolet at 41st Street and Avenue Q.

No one was injured in the early morning bombing, but Lubbock Fire Inspector Grady Ammons said the storage office sustained extensive smoke damage.

A bottle which appeared to have contained a flammable liquid, and a rag which was thought to have been used as a wick, was found at the scene, Ammons said. Another fire inspector said it appeared to have been a "Molotov cocktail."

Police Cpl. Dan Hale, with the juvenile division, said another van, with seats from the stolen vehicle, was spotted traveling on Fourth Street. The witness took down the van's license number and it was traced to a Sudan residence.

In Sudan, Lubbock police received information which led to the apprehension of the youth at a residence in the 2300-block of 23rd St.

The stolen van was found stripped Thursday night in a bin at Near-By Storage. The bombing Friday morning may have been done to destroy evidence in the theft, Hale said.

Governor Says He Supports Council's Refusal To Allow Demonstration

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he supports the San Antonio City Council in its refusal to let Iranian students demonstrate against deposed Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi.

He also told a news conference his feelings aren't hurt that he wasn't consulted before the shah was moved from New York to Lackland Air Force Base.

Clements, an acquaintance of the shah, was asked by a reporter if he planned to go to Lackland and visit "your old buddy, the shah."

"He's not my old buddy. I have no plans for a visit," the governor answered.

He said his position "from the very begining" had been to oppose any demonstrations because "violence undoubtedly will come out of this and people will be hurt."

Clements' aide Jim Adams, who will become Department of Public Safety director on Jan. 1, said the DPS has no extra troopers in San Antonio but would be able to help local authorities if asked.

The governor said the National Guard "is prepared" to intervene if needed should the shah's presence cause an outbreak of violence in San Antonio.

Clements said his first word of the shah's flight to San Antonio came from his wife, Rita, who heard the news on a radio broadcast.

To this day, he said, he has received no official word "from anybody about the shah being here in Texas."

"I really don't care," he went on. "He is on an Air Force base. ... If I had objected, what difference would it have made. ... I am not the least bit sensitive about it."

Clements said the shah "is welcome. I want to make that absoltely clear. ... This man is convalescing from a serious illness. He has been a long-time ally of this country."

Asked how he felt about the possibility of giving the shah permanent asylum in the United States, Clements said he was "not going to kibitz the president."

The Soviet Union is expected to spend $23 billion on U.S. farm products this year.

Panama Accuses U.S. Of Treaty Violations In Appointments

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Panama has accused the United States of violating the new canal treaties by delaying appointment of commissioners who will operate the waterway for the next decade, the State Department said Friday.

"Panama sent a note to us expressing its concern over the delay, which it regards as noncompliance with the treaty," department spokesman Hodding Carter said.

"We have explained the circumstances and assured the Panamanians we are moving as quickly as possible."

Under the treaties, control of the waterway reverted on Oct. 1 from the United States to a nine-person commission, which will run it until control is turned over to Panama in the year 2000.

Carter said the five U.S. Commission appointments were slow in coming because Congress did not approve the treaty implementing legislation until Sept. 27 and implied it was also because the president has been tied up with the Iranian crisis.

"This is one of the reasons we were pressing for an earlier passage of the implementing legislation," he said. "I think it has just been a matter of a press of an incredible amount of business in the period of time" since then.

Carter said the implementing legislation "lays down very specific requirements for candidates for U.S. board membership. It took several weeks to find qualified persons who might serve."

But he said the nominations are now in the White House and, "We hope the president will announce the U.S. board membership very shortly and send the list to the Senate for early confirmation."

Officials said three of the candidates under consideration are Clifford B. O'Hara, of the port authority of New York and New Jersey; Frank Nemec, retired president of Lykes Youngstown Corporation, and William Siddell, president of the United Brotherhood of Carpenters and Joiners of North America.

The other two American directors will come from the government and one of them will be a defense official.

American Hostage Has False Passport, Students Charge

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — An American hostage in the occupied U.S. Embassy came to Tehran as a spy with a phony Belgian passport under an assumed name and was told how to doctor the passport, an official Pars news report said Friday, quoting militants in he embassy.

Pars, reporting on a Thursday news conference, said the hostage was Thomas Leo Ahern Jr., who entered the country last summer, and the militants said he possessed a passport with the name Paul Timmermans.

"We see that America has continued its espionage in a more complex way since the (February) revolution," Pars quoted a student spokesman as saying.

Ahern is from McLean, Virginia, is married and has a 12-year-old daughter, his brother, Mike Ahern, of Fond du Lac, Wis., said. he brother declined to comment on the militants' claims he was a spy.

In Washington, Susan Pittman, a State Department spokeswoman, said:

"We're not going to make any comment on any purported doument that the students may have, nor are we going to make any comment on the people who might be held hostage in the embassy compound."

A copy of a purported secret document headed "cover considerations" handed to reporters through the embassy gates Friday contained three pages of instrucions on how to activate the Belgian passport, which the students said was in Ahern's briefcase.

"According to personal data in your passport, you are single, were born in Antwerp, Belgium, on 8 July 34, have blue eyes, have no distinguishing characteristics, and are approximately 1.88 meters (5 feet 11 inches). Your cover occupation is that of a commercial business representative," the document said.

The purported instructions explain in detail all sorts of personal background on Timmermans, including previous jobs and travel, and how to put phony vaccination stamps on a health card.

"Remember, you will ostensibly get these shots in Belgium, and your passport should not show you in Iran when you update your cholera shot," the document said.

Students said the instructions on how to use the fake passport, and change the health certificates also were found in Ahern's briefcase.

State television showed Ahern's real passport, and the alleged phony one, with similar photos on each, and a separate photo that appeared to have been taken since the embassy was taken over Nov. 4 by militants demanding that the United States return deposed Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi to Iran for trial.

Another document given to Western reporters, dated Sept. 18, marked confidential, and purportedly signed by the embassy defense attache, Col. Thomas E. Schaefer, ordered visa referrals (apparently for persons seeking to travel to America) be handled only "to gain intelligence information useful to the United States government."

In the document, Schaefer, also a hostage, told his Tehran staff the visa referral service could be valuable for gathering information, but should not be abused.

According to a third document, Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance telexed the Tehran embassy in October, saying visa clearance for members of the deposed shah's regime should be double checked only if the consular office found "ineligiblity may exist."

For weeks the embassy occupiers confined their periodic release of seized documents to secret embassy-State Department correspondence simply reflecting State Department determination to admit the deposed shah permanently.

Last weekend the students produced a document purporting to be approval by Charge d'Affaires L. Bruce Laingen of the assignments of two men, now hotages, as "SRF (believed to mean Special Reporting Facility) officers," and including considerations of the need for cover.

The students claim one of the "SRF" officers named William Daugherty, has confessed to being a CIA agent.

The latest student claims of espionage coincidd with an announcement by Foreign Ministr Sadegh Ghotbzadeh that Iran planned to differentiate between "the spies" and non-spies when deciding about releasing hostages.

Inflation May Hurt Gas Importation

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Mexico possibly would cut back on its exportation of natural gas to the United States if Americans do not control inflation, a spokesman for the Mexican national oil company says.

Jesus Chavarria, sub director of exploration for Pemex, said Friday the cost of exported gas to the United States will depend upon the inflation rate of the dollar.

Chavarri told an energy conference that about 300 million cubic feet per day can be exported via resent connections and should be flowing very soon.

"While we see no alternative to raising real oil and gas prices throughout the world, I can assure you that the increase in actual dollars will be abated if the U.S. inflation rate is reduced," Chavarria said.

He warned the 200 participants at the symposium on theTexas A&M University campus that gas export levels will never be exceeded unless the Mexican government lifts the present production ceiling. A decision to lift that ceiling will depend upon the United States' ability to control it inflation rate.

"Inflation is of deep concern and, if it escalates, we will feel forced to slow our growth and our oil and gas exports as well," Chavarria said. "If the U.S. inflation rate is brougt under control, the inflationary pressure on Mexio will be reduced and our economy will be better able to absorb larger export revenues from increased exports of oil and gas.

"Conversely, we will not subject our people to higher and higher rates of inflation, and if that trend continues, our hydrocarbon development program and exports will be curtailed."

The production ceiling of 300 million cubic feet per day was established for 1982, but will be reached in mid 1980 or sooner, Chavarria said, adding he could not estimate the new limit, but much of the export would be concentrated in U.S. markets.

The Pemex officials said geological authorities agree tht approximately 80 percent of the land mass in Mexico has oil and gas producing potential and the potential offshore adds about one third as much additional area.

Onl about 10 percent of the area has been explored, he said, adding the Mexican government plans to develop the coastal plains of Baja California as well as the northern part of the county along the Texas border near Eagle Pass.

UT Regents Approve Agreement

AUSTIN (AP) — University of Texas regents approved Friday a new agreement with educational television station KLRN/KLRU that shifts day-to-day management from UT-Austin to Southwest Texas Public Broadcasting Council.

The council holds the Federal Communications Commission license for the station but since 1961 has contracted with UT-Austin to manage it.

In the new contract, the council receives "sole responsibiity for the management and operation of the station, the employment and compensation of all personnel, including the general manager, and all administrative and professional functions pertaining thereto."

The council approved the contract on Tuesday.

The university agreed to lease the council about 42,000 square feet in the Communications Building, plus certain equipment, for $187,300 a yar.

Under the agreement, the station will provide internships for about 60 UT students.

The joint management of KLRN, San Antonio, and KLRU, Austin — which provide identical, simultaneous public TV programing — has been a subject of continuing controversy for about a year.

Harvey Herbst resigned recently as manager of the station. Later, UT stopped paying its share of several KLRN employees — including Bill Anderson, originator of the popular "Governor's Report" show — who had criticized Herbst.

California entered the Union in 1850 as a bilingual state, its constitution requiring that all laws be published in both Spanish and English.

Khomeini Implies U.S. Behind Iran Rebellion

Government, Militants Disagree On Hostages

tion movements" to hold an international conference in Tehran. A separate broadcast said "Moslem student followers" of Khomeini have sent invitations to the Palestine Liberation Organization and liberation groups in South Africa, South-West Africa, Zimbabwe Rhodesia, Algeria, Oman, Ethiopia, Chile, Lebanon and other countries to send delegates to the conference. It did not say when the conference might be held.

Iranian militants seized the embassy Nov. 4 demanding President Carter send the ousted shah back to Iran to stand trial for alleged crimes against the people. Carter has refused, and last Sunday the shah was moved to a Texas Air Force base to convalesce from his cancer and gallbladder treatment in New York.

For the second time in 24 hours, Khomeini sought to rekindle Iranian hostility against the United States and divert opposition from his Islamic Consititution, passed overwhelmingly this week. The charter establishes a theocracy and makes the 79-year-old Khomeini ruler for life.

In a statement read over Tehran radio he said, "In the present sensitive situation Iranians should cherish their links wih each other because this is our motto for victory .... You brave people of Iran have decided to rub America's nose in the dirt."

"The United States and the CIA-subservient SAVAK (the shah's secret police) attempt new plots every day to disrupt your unity," he said. "The Iranian nation ... will not cease to maintain its campaign to neutralize world imperialist plots led by the United States..."

After the speech, thousands of Tehran residents shouted "Allahu Akbar -God is Great!" from their rooftops.

Khomeini blamed "foreign agents and plotters" for the attack Wednesday on the home of Ayatollah Mohammed Kazm Shariat-Madri, spirtual leader of the AzeriTurks of Iran's Azerbaijan region. Witnesses said the attackers were Khomeini supporters.

Two of Shariat-Madari's supporters were killed and eight others injured in violence Wednesday in the holy city of Qom, 100 miles south of the capital, Tehran. No violence was reported Friday in Qom or Tabriz.

The insurgents, members of Iran's 13-million member Turkish minority, demonstrated Thursday, taking over the broadcastig station and driving provincial Gov. Noreddin Gharavi from his mansion. They said thy were angry over the incident at Shariat-Madari's home and opposed the constitution because it did not give them adequate autonomy.

"Tabriz At Peace"

"Everything is in the hands of the people, and Tabriz is at peace. Any governor or official sent to Tabriz must have the approval of Ayatollah Shariat-Madari," a rebel spokesman said in a telephone interiew.

Shariat-Madari reiterated concern over the constitution and told reporters he supported the Tabriz rebels, who he said were "seeking freedom and their rights."

He told reporters he met with members of the ruling Revolutionary Council who told him they would investigate "every problem and will let me know and then I will make a statement. I particularly want to tell you that Azerbaijan does not seek separation from Iran."

Several hundred supporters gathered around Shariat-Madari's home, mourning the deaths of their two comrades, while hundreds of Khomeini supporters mrched elsewhere in the city.

"Very Cautious"

In Washington, speaking to a group of State Department employees, Carter said: "I'm going to be very moderate, very cautious."

His remarks appeared to indicate a change in the administration attitude toward the Iranian crisis. Administration spokesman consistently have refused to rule out military action against Iran if normal diplomatic efforts to free the hostages fail.

But Deputy Secretary of State Waren Christopher, speaking to reporters later, said the president has not ruled out any option.

"I think the president has made clear he prefers means peaceful in nature to resolve this problem. But the president has also been equally clear that he has maintained his other options," Christopher told reporters after emerging from a briefing for top Senate leaders.

Possibility Of Force

While the president in his statement appeared to rule out military action if it would endanger the hostages, he did not rule out the use of force if the hostages are harmed.

Carter's meeting with the relatives of the hostages was private, but the sister of one Marine held in Tehran said the family members were promised that the government will take action soon to free the Americans.

Mrs. Judy Ehrlenbeck of St. Louis refused to comment on what type of action was discussed. She would not say whether the comment had come from the president or from other high U.S. officials who spent some five hours briefing the family members.

Decline In Jobless Rate Shows Slowing Of Economy Ineffective

WASHINGTON (AP) — The jobless rate declined to 5.8 percent of the labor force in November while employment hit a record 97.6 million, showing the nation's economy continues to outperform the recession forecasts of most government and private economists.

The drop in unemployment from 6 percent in October will unquestionably reinforce sentiment within the Carter administration against a major tax cut in the near future. The report also illustrated that government policies aimed at slowing the economy haven't yet worked.

The administration had predicted unemployment would rise to 6.6 percent by the end of this year. But the November jobs gains, reported by the Labor Department on Friday, make it virtually certain the unemployment rate will be significantly lower than this.

Layoffs Not Shown

However, Janet L. Norwood, commissioner of labor statistics, said rcent layoffs in the auto and steel industries didn't show up in the November figures, and that these could push up the unemployment figures in the months to come.

Most of the jobs gains in November were for white collar sales workers, the Labor Department said.

It said total employment increased by 350,000 during the month, while the number of unemployed declined 140,000 to just over 6 million. The total employment of 97.6 million, out of a labor force of 103.7 million, surpassed the previous record of 97.5 million in September.

Nears Recent Low

The 5.8 percent unemployment rate in November came close to the post-recession low of 5.6 percent in June.

What was most surprising, however, was that the decline in unemployment came against a background of efforts by the administration and he Federal Reserve Board to slow the economy to help curb inflation.

It has been widely expected by economists both in and out of government that these policies, especially the steep increase in interest rates, would push the economy into a recession and drive up unemployment. Neither result has materialized yet, and economists and other officials admit they're at a loss to explain it.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, chairman of the Joint Economic Committee of Congress, said he is puzzled by the recent pattern of unemployment.

The jobless rate has moved in a narrow range, rising from 5.7 percent in July to 6 percent in August, back down to 5.8 percent in September, up to 6 percent again in October and back to 5.8 percent.

"For four months now our nation's unemployment rate has bobbed up and down like a yo-yo on a short string," Bentsen said. "It is ironic and more than a little puzzling .... We keep getting signals from various economic measurements that the nation is either on the verge of a recession or in the middle of one."

Meanwhile, Citibank of New York, the nation's second largest bank, said Friday it was lowering its prime interest rate to 15¼ percent, the second decrease in two weeks, indicating some easing of the upward pressure on inerest rates.

In another development, a report showed that Americans demonstrated concern over rising interest rates by curtailing borrowing in October to the lowest level in three years. Borrowing for automobile purchases, for example, was off by 8.9 percent.

The Federal Reserve Board said total debt increased just $2.19 billion, less than half the record monthly increase of $4.45 billion in September, and the smallest gain for any month since January, 1977.

The drop meant the Fed's Oct. 6 decision to drive up interest rates was successful in achieving at least one major aim — a slowing of the rapid surge in consumer indebtedness.

John Bregger, a Labor Department economist, said that while the latest jobs figures show the economy is "holding up better than predictions," a continued slowdown in the rate of growth of new jobs and recent layoffs by manufacturers could contribute to a higher jobless rate in December.

Commissioner Norwood told the Joint Economic Committee the recent growth in employment, now 1.9 million for the year, "has been much lower than in 1978 or early 1979."

But the improved employment outlook should make it easier for the administration and the Federal Reserve Board to continue concentrating their policies on fighting inflation, which is expected to be about 9½ percent this year, worse than the administration's original forecast of 7.4 percent for the year.

Michael Evans of Evans Economics Inc., a private forecasting firm, said the November jobs figure is the last one the administration will have available for preparing the budget and 1980 economic program it will submit to Congress in January.

He said the administration is sure to interpret it as an indication of a strong economy, and that it will tip the scales against a tax cut early in the year.

"I'd say the probability of that is about zero," he said. Evans, who had been forecasting a rise in unemployment to 6.5 percent by the end of the year, said he now thinks it will be closer to 6 percent, although he still held to a his earlier prediction that joblessness will rise to over 8 percent next year during a recession.

The Labor Department said most of the decline in unemployment in November occurred among women and blacks, the same two groups most affected by a rise in unemployment during October.

Protection Of Shah Bolstered; Iranians Picket Near Base

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Security guards stretched barbed wire across both main gates at Kelly Air Force Base late Friday after intelligence reports that hundreds of Iranians were headed here to protest the shah's stay at an adjacent base. Air Force officials said.

"We have received reports of possible covert action which may endanger lives and government property, and are taking precautionary measures as a preventative," said a Kelly source who requested anonymity.

Lackland Air Force Base officials were already using newly-imported military security specialists Friday to bolster protection around the shah's quarters, according to sources.

That increase in security began Thursday and was not connected to the assassination Friday in Paris of the shah's nephew.

A Lackland source, requesting anonymity because of a tight news blackout, said they had received intelligence reports that about 500 Iranians were headed here to stage anti-shah demonstrations.

But the source said the Iranians had been expected about 1 p.m. Friday. The only protesters who appeared were five students who quietly picketed without incident outside the base for about 30 minutes before leaving.

City officials and a state judge have banned any anti-shah demonstrations because they feared they might become violent clashes between Iranians and Ku Klux Klansmen who threatened a counter-march.

"The students were expected this afternoon. We don't know now what to think. Obviously Kelly has gotten some word. We are taking appropriate action at Lackland," said the source close to the shah's security. "We feel very confident the shah is safe."

The Kelly source said the base security was being increased because of the large number of aircraft inside. Access to the sprawling, fenced-off base was limited to one or two lanes in and out.

The Air Force could muster a force of up to 2,000 officers for riot control if necessary.

In El Paso, 10 Iranian students or sympathizers tried to stage a protest at about noon. They were surrounded by about 400 hostile University of Texas-El Paso students.

A source close to the shah said the military defenses were extended one block in all directions Thursday around the white wooden visiing officers barracks where the shah is housed in a comfortable carpeted apartment.

Various base sources, all of whom requeted anonymity, refused to say how many of the PSO officers were brought in.

The FBI stopped guarding the shah Tuesday, sources revealed. Until the special security officers arrived Thursday, the exiled ruler was protected only by regular Lackland Security Police, most of whom have no such special training, according to sources.

The shah has a $131,000 bounty on his head offered by the revolutionary Iranian regime demanding his return to Iran for trial, and the Air Force fears assassination attempts.

Shahriar Mustapha Chafik, 34, a son of the shah's twin sister and a one-time naval commander during his regime, was killed by an unknown assailant in Paris.

Clements Feels Texas Can Meet Fuel Slash

AUSTIN (AP)— Gov. Bill Clements said Friday he supports a U.S. Department of Energy request that Texans cut their gasoline consumption by 5 percent.

"I find no fault with this," Clements said of the federal proposal at his weekly news cnference. "... I have no doubt whatsoever we can reach our 5 percent goal."

Clements said his office would devise a plan for cutting gasoline consumption in the first quarter of 1980 by 5 percent, compared with the first three months of 1979.

"We could go to 'not-drive-your-car-a-day-a-week.' We could go into a really hard sell on car pooling. We could get into a voluntary cutback — only purchase so much gasoline a week on a voluntary bais," Clements said.

He said he differs strongly, however, with proposals to increase the federal gasoline tax by 50 cents a gallon. Clements wants to increase the nickel-a-gallon state gasoline tax and said a federal increase would make this harder politically. He said a gasoline tax increase could come up in the 1980 special legislative session but added it was "like No. 82" on his list of possible issues for the session.

The governor said he has confirmed that low-level radioactive waste from other states is being stored at the Todd Shipyard on Pelican Island near Galveston. He said he is trying to determine if he has the power to send the material back.

"I don't want any out-of-state waste in Texas. Any! Any!" Clements asserted.

On another energy issue, he said he would allow construction of a state "superport" for oil tankers only after its bonds are backed 100 percent by oil company contracts.

"I have made it very clear to the superport authority that unless those contracts are in hand ... under no circumstances would this project be approved. I think they're going to have a very difficult time," Clements said.

The problem, he said, is competition from a commercial deepwater port that is being dredged at Pelican Island. Oil companies could use it without having to make the kind of advance guarantees the state requires.

Clements said he was "not prepared to say" the state's offshore tanker port is dead because a month remains in which to obtain the necessary contracts.

Ousted Residents Seek Land Taken In 1943

WASHINGTON (AP) — The displaced residents of Harris Neck, Ga., forced from their land 37 years ago to make room for a wartime air field, asked Congress Friday to let them go home.

"We gave to the defense of our country willingly, and to our heritage and home," Edgar Timmons Jr. told a House subcommittee. "We do not come asking you men for something that was never ours, or which we have no right to.

"We come only asking you to return that which was first ours, and will forever be ours in our heart."

Timmons, whose grandfather was among those evicted during World War II, testified before a House subcommittee on wildlife conservation in support of a bill that would allow the former residents to buy back their land, which is now the Harris Neck Wildlife Refuge in south Georgia.

They would pay the same price that the government forced them to accept in 1943 — about $7 an acre.

Rep. Bo Ginn, D-Ga., the bill's sponsor, said the official history of he 2,701 acres of Harris Neck is clear. The land was condemned by the federal government in 1943, and its residents removed to make way for construction of a military air field.

The military abandoned the field shortly afterward, however. It was held by county and federal offcials before being designated a wildlife refuge in 1962.

Ginn said many of the residents — mostly poor, black farmers — complained they were forced out with as little as 48 hours notice on threat of being burned out. And a representative of the government apparently promised verbally that the land would be returned after the war.

"This pledge, which has been confirmed by many individuals, was not honored," Ginn said.

"... We in the Congress have a clear responsibility to explore allegations regarding Harris Neck," he said. "Upon a finding that the government was either directly or indirectly responsible for injustices, we have a mandate to correct them."

Walter E. Fauntroy, the District of Columbia's non-voting delegate in Congress and cosponsor of the bill, said the question of whether the land was improperly taken "is a difficult and complex legal and moral matter."

Dolphin Birth Eagerly Awaited At Aquarium

NIAGARA FALLS, N.Y. (AP) — The birth of 22-year-od Gabrielle's second child is imminent — just when, no one knows — and the impending event is exciting her attendants at the Niagara Falls Aquarium.

Staffers at the aquarium have been watching the dolphin in her 100,000-gallon tank for months, but now that birth may be near, the watch has been extended to 24 hours a day.

Gabrielle's pregnancy is drawing special interest because "the chances for a marine mammal to mate and give birth in captivity are pretty slim," said John Nicolas, a marine mammal biologist at the National Marine Fisheries Service Laboratory in Woods Hole, Mass.

With the gestation period for dolphins believed to be 12 months, the word at the aquarium has been "any day now" since October; aquarium officials do not know when Gabrielle became pregnant.

Aquarium staff members have not found much documentation of what exactly takes place during the birth of a dolphin, especially one in captivity.

In fact, they said they had heard that when Gabrielle's first offspring, Spray, was born five years ago, it came as a complete surprise to Gabrielle's previous owners at an aquarium on Cape Cod.

When the moment arrives, Spray is expected to play an important role "helping in the delivery. Just like a nanny in the nursery," said Nancy Gray, an aquarium spokeswoman.

Because dolphins breathe air, the newborn calf would drown if it did not reach the surface quickly.

"It's common for other dolphins to be there," said Mrs. Gray. "As the baby is born, it has reflex swimming motions. It paddles automatically. So the others usually help nudge it to the top to get its first breath of air."

Over the past two weeks, Gabrielle has been in what Dr. Shaheen Nakeeb, consulting veterinarian at the aquarium, called "false labor." Animal handler Suzanne Fortier described the symptoms as "lying and bumping herself on the bottom of the tank, flapping her pectoral fin ... rubbing her stomach against the glass and other areas of the tank; body slaps by jumping from the tank ....

"She's probably agitated from being frustrated and not knowing what to do."

The first hint of Gabrielle's pregnancy came earlier this year "when she quit working," said Mrs. Gray. An examination in May revealed a fetal heartbeat.

Iran Might Accept Soviet 'Protection'

MOSCOW (UPI) — Iran's new foreign minister indicated Friday his nation might accept military protection from the Soviet Union in the event of an attack by the United States.

Sadegh Ghotbzadeh said in an interview with a Soviet television reporter in Tehran, "The cultures of Iran and the Soviet Union have much in common.

"Iran favors consolidating this friendship on the basis of reciprocity so that we could together resist any forces that could try to undertake aggression against weaker countries."

Earlier statements by the Iranian government indicated it would not accept Soviet military assistance.

Ghotbzadeh was interviewed for the Soviet evening news program "Vremya."

Kennedy's Criticism Of Shah Blamed For Asylum Rejection

WASHINGTON (AP) — Carter administration officials insisted Friday that criticism of the deposed Shah of Iran by Sen. Edward M. Kennedy caused Argentina to reverse a decision to grant asylum to the deposed monarch. But Argentine officials said they never considered letting the shah enter their country.

The dispute began when a White House official told reporters Wednesday that one country had backed out of an agreement to give asylum to the shah because Kennedy was critical of the ousted ruler.

Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi now is in Texas, under guard at Lackland Air Force Base while the government seeks a permanent place of asylum for him.

The White House official's comments were obviously aimed at criticizing Kennedy, who is challenging President Carter for the democratic presidential nomination. The official refused to be publicly identified and would not say what country had agreed to accept the shah and then changed its mind.

But in a report published Friday, columnists Rowland Evans and Robert Novak identified the country as Argentina. Th columnists said Kennedy's criticism of the shah as having run an oppressive regime in Iran "killed the deal" for the shah to go to Argentina.

The columnists did not name the source for their information.

But the same administration official who initially leveled the blast at Kennedy said the column was accurate. He offered no details.

Later, another White House official, also asking that he not be named, said the source who confirmed the accuracy of the column naming Argentina "did not lie." He said the source did not confuse one country with another.

But Argentinian officials firmly denied the story. Privately they said the circumstances of the public disclosure of the issue seems to indicate that it is an outgrowth of the Carter-Kennedy election clash.

"I flatly deny there have been any secret negotiations" on the subject of admitting the shah to Argentina, said Hernan Massini, press attache to the Argentine ambassador to the United States.

In Buenos Aires, a spokesman for Argentina's foreign ministry also denied the White House official's statements.

"Every time the possibility that the shah may leave the United States is mentioned, inevitably Argentina is mentioned," said Berta Remela, chief of the Argentinian ministry's press section. "But we are able to affirm that such reports are without foundation."

Another ministry spokesman, who asked not to be identified, said, "there is not nor has there been any negotiation concerning the shah's residence in Argentina. We already have enough problems here to want to create more."

Presidential press secretary Jody Powell, asked at Friday's daily White House briefing about the controversy, refused to discuss it.

The Carter administration has been obliquely critical of Kennedy's statements on the shah since the Massachusetts senator said in San Francisco that the shah had run one of the most violent regimes in history.

Since the Kennedy statement, Carter aides have hinted that the remrks were making it difficult for the administration to work behind-the-scenes to find a country where te shah can seek asylum. But Carter aides have been cautious not to allow their names to be linked to the anti-Kennedy comments.

Rosalynn Carter, campaigning for her husband in Mississippi on Friday, was asked about Kennedy's criticism and stressed that she would not comment directly on the senator's statement.

However, she made a point of saying the president is concerned about the 50 hostages being held in Iran and "we don't care about the past history of Iran...."

Then, asked if she included Kennedy when she said "almost all Americans" are united beind Carter in the Iranian crisis, she replied: "I said almost every American."

Rosalynn Carter Focuses On Hostages

ATLANTA (AP) — Rosalynn Carter said Friday the exiled Shah of Iran has never asked for permanent asylum in the United States and that "we don't care" about his wealth, his past record or where he will take up residence.

At a news conference in her home state, where she was campaigning for President Carter, the first lady said:

"There is one issue that is important and that is the hostages in Iran. We don't care about the past history of Iran. We don't care about the shah's money. We don't care about whether he was a good leader or not. We don't care about where he stays at this point.

"Any discussion of those issues is harmful to the hostages and doesn't help us in trying to free the hostages."

Asked what solution to the crisis was likely, Mrs. Carter replied:

"I don't know what the ultimate solution is. But he (the shah) has never asked to stay here permanently. He has asked us to help him find a place to go, which is what the administration is doing at this point."

Until he finds a home in another country, the shah is recuperating from cancer treatment at Lackland Air Force Base in Texas.

Earlier Friday, in Jackson, Miss., Mrs. Carter said there was "plenty of time later" to discuss the controversial shah. She would not say whether she supported attempts to air Iran's grievances in an international forum.

Her comments about the importance of focusing attention on the 50 American hostages held in Tehran since Nov. 4 echoed recent comments by Carter administration officials. Her remarks seemed aimed at Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, who accused the shah recently of running one of the most violent regimes in history and stealing billions of dollars from the country.

However, Mrs. Carter refused under questioning to respond directly to Kennedy. She did say that "almost every American" supports Carter's efforts to free the hostages, suggesting Kennedy was not among them.

The Massachusetts senator is challenging Carter for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination. The first lady said she has "never considered the thougt that he (Kennedy) might get the nomination."

Mrs. Carter was here to attend a $500-a-plate dinner and reception with Vice President Walter F. Mondale. Carter originally was scheduled to speak but canceled to remain close to the Iranian situation at the White House.

Mrs. Carter, Mondale and other administration officials are appearing at a week-long series of fund-raising events expected to generate an estimated $.5 million for Carter's re-election campaign.

Iranian Demonstrators Outnumbered In Texas

By BILL GREER
Associated Press Writer

Iranian students who tried to demonstrate against "U.S. imperialism" Friday were outnumbered in El Paso by American students who shouted them down, and outnumbered in San Antonio by reporters and police.

Ten members of the "Committee to Support the Revolution in Iran" — includng six Iranians and four Iranian sympathizers — were ushered away by campus police after about 400 students at the University of Texas at El Paso surrounded the shouting "Bomb Iran."

The Iranians, trying to use a couple of bullhorns and a public address system, gave up trying to speak at the protest when they were drowned out by students jeering and singing "The Star-Spangled Banner." The Americans also threw apple cores, popcorn, and paperwads at the Iranians and made obscene gestures.

The pro-Iranian protesters gatherd at the student union building with signs reading, "Long live the revolutionary struggle in Iran," "Remember Vietnam — same struggle in Iran," and "U.S. imperialists keep your bloody hand off Iran."

But their protest attracted the much larger crowd of Americans, who chanted, "Go home, camel jockeys," "Go home, you commies," and "Bomb Iran," drowning out the Iranians.

The Iranians tried to walk around the campus, but the crowd headed them off at every corner. Finally, a dozen policemen ushered them into the back door of the student union and ordered the American students back to class.

About 75 American students failed to leave the area, and campus police later slipped out a side door with the pro-Iranian demonstrators. There were no arrests or injuries during the 45-minute incident.

In San Antonio, a protest by five Iranian students outside Lackland Air Force base ended in less than 30 minutes. The demonstration took place on the highway right-of-way outside the base.

The students carried a picture of Ayatollah Khomeini and wore tape across their mouths with "Free Speech?" written on it.

The Iranians were outnumbered six to one by reporters and police. Officers made no effort to break up the demonstration.

A few passing cars slowed down, and the strongest reaction came from a young man in a car who yelled, "Long live rock 'n' roll. Death to Khomeini."

Iranian groups in both San Antonio and El Paso had been denied parade permits to march in the street, but both demonstrations Friday were legal, since public rights of way were not blocked.

In Fort Worth, a campaign started last week by a local radio station calling on all Americans to display something white to show support for the hostages was gaining support, the station said.

"I thik it may fill a need," said WBAP station general manager Warren Potash. "Just like those people in Iran, they (Americans) want to be counted."

Potash taped a station editorial that ran every 90 minutes last Friday and called for Americans to wear something white, "the color of hope" to symbolze national pride and unity.

Freeze On Iranian Assets To Be Challenged

LONDON (AP) — A High Court showdown is shaping up between the United States and Iran over Iranian assets temporarily frozen by the court earlier this week at the request of a U.S. bank.

The High Court, acting on an application by the London branch of Chemical Bank of New York, on Wednesda issued an injunction temporarily freezing assets of Iran and Bank Markazi, its national bank, held in branches of U.S. banks in Britain.

"Undoubtedly the court injunction will be challenged by appeal," an Iranian Embassy spokesman told The Associated Press. He also said "a government protest is possible."

Skirmishing began last week when Bank Markazi started legal action in Britain against President Carter's order to freeze some $8 billion worth of Iranian assets eld in America or by U.S. institutions.

Iranian writs claimed more than $3 billion worth of assets on deposit with American bank branches in London. Citibank and Chase Manhattan Bank were reported among five London branches of U.S. banks named in the writs.

The High Court ruling, considered routine, is temporary, pending a hearing on the merits of the case. No date was set for further action, and the court did not announce that it had granted Chemical Bank's temporary writ.

Chemical Bank said it obtained the injunction in connection with a $50 million loan to Iran. It said the loan was part of a $500 million loan floated by Iran through a consortium of international banks.

The bank refused to give reasons or further details, but said last moth it was invoking an "acceleration" clause on the loan. The action, typically used when a debtor fails to make regular payments, makes the whole outstanding balance pyable.

Citibank had responded to the Iranian writs by asking on Monday that the British High Court declare the bank is subject to U.S. law and therefore cannot release money to Iran or its central bank. No ruling has been announced, but London's respected Financial Times newspaper reported that a Hungarian application along similar lines was rejected in 1939.

The Financial Times reported that applications similar to Chemical Bank's have been made in other countries, including West Germany and France. It said Iran owns 25 percent of Germany's Krupp manufacturing industry. A French commercial court, it said, has frozen Iranian assets in a French-based uranium enrichment company because of Iran's refusal to go along with the company's financing program.

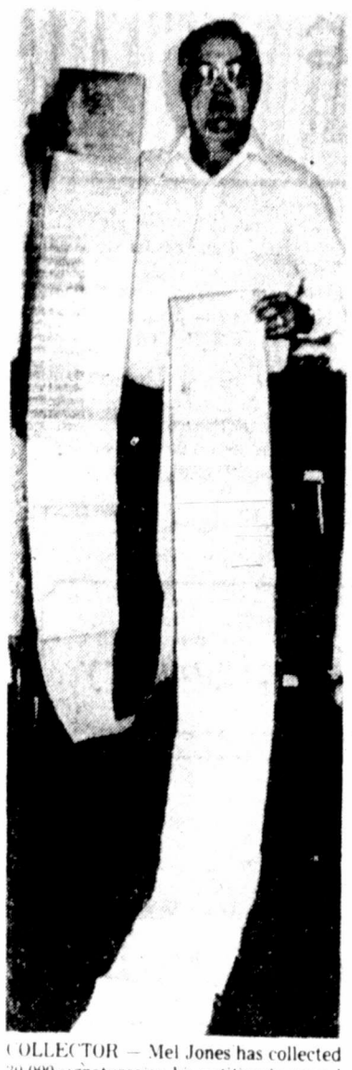
Man Battling To Eliminate Speed Limit



COLLECTOR — Mel Jones has collected 30,000 signatures on his petition to repeal the 55 mph speed limit. He calls it the most unpopular regulation since the prohibition of booze. (NEA Photo)

Founder Of Group Says Gas Shortage A Fraud

By TOM TIEDE

COLLINSVILLE, Ill. (NEA) — Mel Jones is fed up with the government. He is angry with Washington's increasing interference in and regulation of his life. He says the president is dangerous, Congress is arrogant, and the bureaucracy stifles clear thought. So he's putting his foot down.

On the gas pedal in his car.

Jones is founder and chief officer of the Committee to Repeal the 55 mph Speed Limit. The position of the group is that enough is enough. The federals may rob Americans by tax, or strangle initiative by decree, but, by Godfrey, there's nothing in the Constitution permitting the restriction of wheels.

Did the Minutemen fight for fewer horsepower? No.

Did Tom Jefferson speak of rolling road blocks? No.

As for the gas emergency, Jones says it's just fiddle-sticks: "The petroleum shortage is a fraud. The government perpetuates it simply in order to get more contro over the people. The real shortage in this country is the shortage of liberty. Washington wants to have complete power over transportation."

Seriously, Jones adds. First the rules took away the gold standard; then they tried to take away private arms, and now it's automobile. Jones says the double nickel speed law is the first step toward vehicular confiscation. "The government wants to force everybody to ride the damn buses."

So he's fighting back — at full rpm, of course. And he's by no means alone. Six years after the imposition of the 55 mph speed limit, millions of Americans continue to disapprove. Some of them are joining organizations such as the Jones' committee, far more are simply and pointedly ignoring the law.

Indeed, Jones says the reduced speed limit is the most unpopular federal notion since the prohibition of booze. Polls indicate that as many as eight in 10 citizens are opposed to the restriction. One man from Missouri is running for president on a promise to give the highways back to the people.

And the Missouri chap may be at the heart of the matter. For the speed limit is only part of a greater issue. "The highways belong to the people," says Mel Jones, "they pay for them with the gas tax. So what we say is that the government has no right to regulate the movement of people on their own roads."

Well, Jones adds, the government can regulate a little. The people want it to keep drunks from the freeways, and traffic cops on the corners. That's only common sense, and acceptable.

But 55 mph? Ridiculous.

In the first place, Jones claims the limit does not save gas. If people obeyed the law, it might, but people are not obeying. In Nevada, for example, federal studies suggest the average highway speed is now 15 mph above the limit. For the nation as a whole, people are traveling between 60 and 65.

And no lives are being saved either, the critics insist. The highway death rate (50,000 last year) is nearly what it was before the speed limit was lowered. Some policemen now say they must spend so much time looking for speeders that they have to ignore the more serious road violators, such as drunks.

So the critics conclude the law does no good.

Instead, it may be doing some damage.

Jones says the 55 mph limit discriminates, for one thing. A motorist who can afford a radar detector or a citizens band radio can avoid arrests, but the driver with fewer funds cannot. Besides this, drivers in some states are subject to strict enforcement, while drivers in some other states are not.

Then there is the variation in penalization. In Virginia a minimum speeding fine is $22; in Pennsylvania it's $65. And an Illinois motorist may lose his license after only three speeding convictions, though drivers in many other areas can be convicted dozens of times without suffering the same loss.

But Jones says the greatest damage of the 55 limit is that done to the relationship between the public and its authority. Breaking the speed law has become more than sport, it seems it's become patriotic. "The thing is," Jones asks, "do we give in again, or do we start taking back our freedoms?"

Several members of the U.S. Congress have opted for the latter course. Sen. S.I. Hayakawa, R-Calif., for one, has introduced legislation that would once again allow the states to make their own laws regarding speeding limits. Rep. Dan Crane, R-Ill., has done the same thing in the House.

And Mel Jones' committee is trying to bulwark the legislative effort. It's collected 30,000 signatures on a repeal petition, which may be only the start. "I want 30 million signatures," Jones says. "I want 30 million Americans to stand up, be counted, and send me their names for this battle."

If he gets them he'll take them to Washington.

At 70 mph, no doubt.

ROUNDUP

'Cavalcade Of Homes' Slated

LITTLEFIELD (Special) — The Lamb County unit of the American Cancer Society is sponsoring a Christmas cavalcade of homes at 3 p.m. Sunday.

The five homes included in the cavalcade are: Richard Shipley, 1234 W. 14th St.; Deryl Bennett, 300 E. 22nd St.; Leroy Maxfield, six miles north on Highway 385 and then four miles west on the farm to market road; Nevill Manning, 122 E. 21st St.; and Betty Johnson, 211 E. 17th St.

Visitors may begin the tour at any one of the homes.

Tickets are $2.50 and may be purchased from any local member of the cancer society board or at the door. One ticket will allow guests to tour all five homes, and proceeds will go toward cancer research.

Refreshments will be served at one of the homes.

Lubbockites To Receive Awards

Bill Clayton, Speaker of the House, will present awards to Lubbockites Dr. Ray Santos and Jack Brown in recognition of their participation on the State Board of Health.

The presentations will be made at 12:30 p.m. Monday, at the Lubbock Club.

Dr. Robert Berstein, M.D., Acting Director, Texas Department of Health, and other local and state officials are expected to attend.

Appointment Announced

Arthur W. Hastings, administrator for West Texas Hospital, has announced the appointment of Michael R. Bieber, Ph.D., to the hospital staff.

Bieber will serve in the areas of psychological consultation and evaluation for the hospital.

He received his bachelor of arts cum laude from Tulane University and his Ph.D. from the University of Utah.

Bieber is a full member of the American Psychological Association, the Southwest Psychological Association and the Texas Psychological Association.

He also is a member of the staff of the Texas Tech University psychology department.

Doctor Raps Sex Studies

GAINESVILLE, Fla. (UPI) — Sex researchers should spend more time trying to find out why people indulge in sex and less studying the kinds of sexual activities people like, a University of Florida psychologist says.

Sex research in the past has been about who does what to whom, but if you don't know the meaning of the act, then you don't really know what you're measuring," Dr. Harry Grater, who has conducted his own survey of 400 college students with a test designed to measure feelings about sex.

"I don't think we're going to find out much about sex by just finding out how much sex people do," he said Thursday.

Need For More Military Strength Stressed

By GERRY BURTON
Avalanche-Journal Staff

"It's gone on for 34 days and no end in sight; it's hard to see a happy ending," the deputy executive director of the Air Force Association said Friday in Lubbock about the Iranian situation he termed a "mini-Pearl Harbor."

John F. Loosbrock, also editor and publisher of Air Force Magazine, stressed that, like Pearl Harbor, the embassy seizure has united this country in purpose. It also, he added, may result in an awakened realization of the need for a strong military.

The AFA spokesman took time to discuss the Iran crisis before addressing the Lubbock AFA's quarterly meeting. The AFA is dedicated to promoting a strong U.S. military force.

"It may be that the Vietnam syndrome has ended and we are shedding our collective guilt complex we seemed to have after Vietnam.

"Rebels and dissidents of 10 years ago and people in the same age group" have done an about face and are now demonstrating in the opposite way, he said.

The problem, he emphasized, is whether the politicians will understand and permit the admistration to lead.

Had this country been stronger militarily, the situation might not have come about, he contended. Or, if it had, the U.S. would not have had to consider what a militarily strong Russia might do about options toward correcting it.

"We (AFA) consider the Iranian crisis a documentation for what we have been saying all along — the U.S. military strength is less in comparison to what it was and, as a direct result, our ability to influence events declines."

The nation's leaders, he added, will have to act bilaterally with Iran while considering how Russia would respond.

"Growth of Russian strength left us where we have to concern ourselves very, very much with how Russia would react in the options in Iran.

Loosbrock doesn't believe the situation will lead to a military confrontation with Russia although nuclear blackmail still describes the situation, even with Iran, he said.

"It will show itself more in the gradual decline of our freedom of action and an increase of their freedom of action in the world."

Loosbrock's talk to the Lubbock AFA was on "The Politics of Military Strategy," and focused mostly on SALT II and how Russians have behaved since SALT I was signed.

Debate on Salt II, he said, has concerned decreases in defense forces and "the Iranian situation has solidified this."

It will be difficult now, he emphasized, for the administration to get the SALT II agreement it wants as there will be more pressure for modification and amendments.

To Your Good Health

By PAUL DONOHUE, M.D.

Dear Dr. Donohue: What does "preeclampsia" mean? Is it the same as toxemia of pregnancy? I had this when I had my baby a few years ago. Now I have a vaginal discharge, whitish but not odorous. Can this be related to the problem I had with my pregnancy (my first)? — G.S.

"Eclampsia" (ee-CLAMP-see-uh) refers very specifically to convulsion or coma in a pregnant woman. Preeclampsia refers to a group of conditions leading up to it — a combination of high blood pressure, spilling of protein into the urine and fluid retention, causing puffiness of the feet and legs.

Now, each of these conditions can occur separately during pregnancy, but it takes all three to constitute preeclampsia or toxemia of pregnancy (same thing).

Without proper treatment, preeclampsia can lead to the convulsions and threaten the life of the baby. This is why proper obstetrical care is so important during pregnancy.

I can't associate your present vaginal discharge to the toxemia of a few years back. This may be nothing of serious importance, perhaps a simple yeast infection, or a trichomonas infection. You should report it and have your doctor evaluate it.

You were fortunate in getting proper medical attention for your preeclampsia. You will have to be especially careful in any future pregnancy, since you have shown yourself to be especially prone to getting it.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: My husband was treated three years ago for ulcerative colitis. Recently, he has had more frequent bouts of cramps and has noticed blood in his stool. We are not sure of our next step. He is 25 years old and is in good physical condition.

What kind of doctor should we see? Should we be alarmed? — C.M.

Certainly, your husband should see a doctor, especially if he is having blood in his stool. A gastroenterologist will be able to evaluate him accurately and help get his colitis under control. Blood in the stool is ALWAYS (and without exception) more than sufficient reason to be examined. For a fuller discussion, see the booklet, "Colitis and Kindred Complaints," which other readers can order by sending 50 cents and a stamped, self-addressed envelope to Dr. Donohue, P.O. Box 11210, Chicago, Ill. 60611.

• • •

Dear Dr. Donohue: Are there other causes of small stool besides obstruction of the bowels? My stool is about the size of my thumb. I had two colon x-rays and a proctoscope examination, but no obstruction was found, nor any reason for my pain. I take Metamucil for this. — Mrs. G.A.

With two x-rays and the proctoscope (direct viewing with the special instrument) you have fairly good assurance that there are no obstructing growths causing the diminished stool size.

The Metamucil is to help keep the stool soft. It's a bulk laxative. A trial of high fiber foods on a regular basis might also be considered. Be sure to take plenty of whole grains, bran, rolled oats, shredded wheat, etc. This will add bulk to your stool and help them stay soft as well as promote effective bowel lining activity. Note: Small stool can also indicate dehydration. Be sure you are getting sufficient fluid.

Maid Of Cotton Shows Wardrobe

Janis Johnson, Lubbock's candidate for the Maid of Cotton, will model her all-cotton wardrobe for the Lubbock Cotton Auxiliary's Christmas Tea today at 2:30 p.m. at the Lubbock Women's Club.

Miss Johnson, chosen as finalist in the 1980 Maid of Cotton selection, will go to Memphis, Tenn., to compete with some 20 girls from cotton-producing states for the title of "Maid of Cotton" just after Christmas.

Miss Johnson is making many personal appearances before local community organizations, showing part of the all-cotton wardrobe she will take with her to Memphis, during the month.

In connection with her selection as local Maid of Cotton candidate, Miss Johnson has been awarded scholarships from the Texas Cotton Ginners' Association and the Texas Cottonseed Crushers' Association.

The bride-elect is a candidate for December graduation from Texas Tech University. The future bridegroom attends Tech.

The couple plans to be married Jan. 5 in Quaker Ave. Church of Christ.

ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: My aged mother needs to be placed in a nursing home. There are several in this area, but I don't know which ones are good. In fact, I don't even know how to evaluate a nursing home.

Can you suggest some questions I should ask? I plan to visit several and make comparisons.

This emotionally loaded problem has been keeping me up nights. Thanks for any help you can offer. — A Loving Daughter

Dear Daughter: Here are some superb guidelines which appeared in a brochure put out by the Illinois Council for Long Term Care. I'm sure these same questions would be appropriate anywhere.

1. Is the home licensed? Ask. If the answer is yes, ask to see the license.
2. Does the administrator have a current state license? Again, if the answer is yes, ask to see it.
3. Is the nursing home Medicare-and Medicaid-approved?
4. What other insurance plans are accepted?
5. Are there additional charges for personal laundry? Does therapy cost extra? If so, how much?
6. Are residents allowed to furnish their rooms with their own furniture? Can residents have their own radio or television?
7. Can a husband and wife share the same room?
8. Can residents have alcohol? Can they smoke in their rooms if they are able to do so unsupervised? Are there other convenient places where smoking is permitted?
9. Are there restrictions on making or receiving phone calls? Is a phone readily available?
10. What are the visiting hours? Is the resident allowed to visit friends and relatives outside the nursing home?
11. Where is the resident's money kept? Are there provisions for personal banking services? Are accurate records kept of residents' financial transactions?
12. Does each resident have his own closet and chest of drawers?
13. What is the capacity of the home? How many residents are presently there?
14. Are the residents encouraged to leave their rooms when able?
15. When was the last state or local inspection? You may want to see the most recent inspection report.
16. How often are fire drills held for staff and residents?
17. What types of activities are available to residents? Don't hesitate to ask to see the schedule of activities.
18. How are residents' medical needs met? Does the nursing home have an arrangement with a nearby hospital to handle emergencies?
19. Is there a dining hall or do residents eat in their rooms? Are special diets available for those who need them? If one is not, is there a professional dietician on the staff available as a consultant?

These are all valid questions. Don't hesitate to ask.

Hints From Heloise

DEAR HELOISE:

How do you get grease out of clothes? We carried a moped in the trunk of our car on a trip and got grease on a fabric suitcase and on some good clothes.

I'll be looking for your reply. — Betty

I'll bet next time you'll try an ounce of prevention and wrap an old shower curtain or somesuch around that motor machine, right?

But, since that's water under the bridge now, let's get on to a pound of cure.

One of the best things I've found to remove grease, especially from a suitcase that can't be laundered, is talcum powder. Sprinkle some on the stain and let the powder set awhile.

It will absorb the grease and the powder can then be brushed off. It may take more than one application.

The same thing can be done with washable clothing. If any stain remains, use a pre-wash spray before laundering.

Sometimes you'll find it takes a lot of "elbow grease" to remove a little grease, though. — Heloise

When purchasing Christmas gifts, put the name of the item purchased on the back of the receipt.

In addition, staple pricetags to the receipt, then everything is handy if refunds or exchanges are necessary. — Carol Botelle

DEAR HELOISE:

We had a small party during one of the coldest nights of the year.

Usually our fireplace is burning for such an occasion but, knowing the great heat loss through the chimney, I decided against a fire and kept the damper closed.

A fire is so cheerful and I was very disappointed with having to conserve. However, the following thought came to mind:

Place a metal tray on top of the fireplace grate and place eight or more fat candles of varying heights on the tray.

Just light them before the guests arrive.

I was so pleased with the effect when I tried this and thrilled by the compliments! — June Ficker

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

"How did you make the spade slam on board five?" asked the student.

"I just took the first twelve tricks," replied the Professor.

It wasn't quite as simple as that, but perfect timing plus a little bit of luck had let the Professer make his contract.

He started by cashing his ace and king of trumps. Then he went after clubs. The slam would be easy if clubs broke 3-3.

When West showed out on the third club, the Prof ruffed in dummy and went after hearts. Maybe someone held queen-10-small. That didn't work, but the Prof did get to ruff the third heart. Then he ruffed another club with dummy's last trump and led another heart. East could not afford to ruff so the Prof made his last trump and had 10 tricks in.

Now he led his last club and discarded duummy's five of diamonds to leave the ace of diamonds and a good heart in dummy. East could ruff and give dummy the last two tricks, but East simply chucked a diamond. Now dummy's ace of diamonds became the 12th trick and the Prof took it.

Survey Indicates Highpaid Female Executives Frequently Divorce

By PATRICIA MCCORMACK

NEW YORK (UPI) — A fat paycheck and divorce go together for a lot of top female executives, a report says.

But there was no way of telling from the survey of highpaid female executives which came first — the divorce, or the salary of $50,000 or more a year.

The report was based on an international executive headhunting firm's mail survey of 485 superpaid working women.

Women earning $50,000 or up a year are more likely to be divorced than female executives who earn less, the report said.

The best compensated working women in American business also work longer hours and "derive greater pleasure" from their work than do female executives earning less," the survey said.

The female executives surveyed included officers of the nation's 1,000 largest industrial firms and 50 leading organizations in six non-industrial categories, the executive search firm, Heidrick and Struggles Inc., said.

Highlights of the report:

— One in four women earning at least $50,000 considers work and pleasure to be the same, in contrast to just 12 percent of their lower paid peers.

— While two-thirds of the highest paid women have been married —the same proportion as women officers overall — top earners are half again as likely to be divorced.

— Top earners among female executives also showed they are more highly educated, made superior grades in school, were more active in extracurricular activities, and worked outside the home for pay at an earlier age than do lesser paid female executives.

About that top money: the report claims nearly three of every 10 women officers earn $50,000 or more; nearly one in 10, at least $80,000; and nearly one in 20, base pay and bonus, $100,000 or more.

The report said 46 percent of those responding to the survey believe progress for female executives will be greater during the next decade than it was in the past 10 years.

The majority felt the greatest opposition to the growing number of female managers and professionals comes from white males, 40 or older.

The top earners believe women have the greatest opportunity for advancement in the creative and performing arts in the years ahead.

Second greatest: health, education and welfare fields; third, government, all levels.

Last? Business corporations.

American Girl Expects Sihk Marriage

MODESTO, Calif. (AP) — Hardeep Singh attends college, works part time and wears jeans just like many other 18-year-old American women.

Miss Singh also plans to be married later this year, but her marriage will be far different from what is customary in the United States.

She has never met her bridegroom and can't even pronounce his name.

Miss Singh's parents arranged her marriage five years ago in the custom of upper-caste Sikhs, a monotheistic offshoot of Hinduism. She will be married in her native Fiji Islands to a 22-year-old college student who will emigrate to America after the ceremony.

The young couple will be able to communicate because she can speak Indian and "he probably speaks English," Miss Singh said.

Even though she has lived in this central California city for 13 years and wants to be a lawyer, Miss Singh is willing to go through with the arranged marriage for her parents' sake.

"I love my parents and to do otherwise would disgrace them," she said in an interview. "They care for us...I could still be in the Fiji Islands where the life is hard. My parents brought us here so we could have a good education."

Her parents would become social outcasts among other Sikhs if she failed to accept the arranged marriage, Miss Singh said.

"If I ran away, if I went against my parents' wishes, they would probably never be socially accepted again," she added. "It would be such a disgrace.

"If I married an American, my father would never talk to me. I can't imagine not spending Christmas at home, not seeing my parents. I'm financially dependent. I would have no way to go to school."

Miss Singh has never dated American boys because her parents were "afraid it would corrupt me."

Her parents sold a sugar-cane plantation in the Fijis 13 years ago and bought farm land here. They returned to Fiji five years ago to arrange traditional marriages for their two oldest daughters.

Cultural differences have caused some problems in her older sister's marriage because in Fiji, "the men make the rules," Miss Singh said. "My parents have let us be very independent."

She doesn't expect to lose her independence after marriage, though, because her husband will be a stranger in this country.

"I know what's going on here," Miss Singh said. "He's going to be dependent on me."

Miss Singh termed the divorce of a cousin "a disgrace" but then vowed of her own arranged marriage: "I'm not going to stay with it if it doesn't work."

She is satisfied with the arrangement, however, because "I like my life to be planned. If it doesn't work out, you can always blame your parents. After all, they got you into it. It's their fault."

When her parents went to Fiji to arrange the marriage, Miss Singh told them "I didn't want a smoker or a drinker, an old man. I didn't want anyone ugly."

New Miss Lubbock To Be Crowned Tonight

"Spotlight '80" will welcome the new Miss Lubbock when the 1980 pageant selects one woman to wear the crown at 7:30 p.m. today in Lubbock Municipal Auditorium.

Twelve contestants will vie for the title, plus a $750 scholarship, a $1,000 wardrobe and an all-expense-paid trip to the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant in the summer at Fort Worth, where she will compete for the state crown.

The judges for tonight's competition will include B. Don Magness, Carol Cushman, Carlene Fisher, Gary Jordan and Chet Nash.

The five judges, all from outside Lubbock, will select the winner, runners-up and talent leader from private interviews held earlier in the afternoon, talent presentations, evening gown competition and swimsuit modeling.

Magness is chairman of the board and executive producer of the Miss Texas Pageant Corp., and served as president of the corporation for two years. He also was executive director of the pageant for two terms and currently a member of the board of trustees and the board of directors of Miss Texas.

Magness has been named as one of the "Outstanding Young Men in the United States," and is listed in "Who's Who," "Personalities of the South." He has judged more than 400 pageants, both on the local and state levels.

Magness is employed by the city of Fort Worth as director of public events and oversees all the cultural, public meeting and entertainment facilities of the city.

Miss Cushman is a native of Fort Worth and acts as chairman of advertising sales for the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant program book. She is a member of the board of directors of the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant and is a traveling companion for Miss Texas.

Mrs. Fisher also is with the Miss Texas Pageant as a member of the board of trustees and as an official member of the Texas delegation to the Miss America Pageant in Atlantic City. She currently is serving her third year as traveling companion to Miss Texas. Mrs. Fisher is an elementary school teacher and is married to Dub Fisher, associate producer of the Miss Texas Pageant.

Jordan is a member of the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant board of directors and is serving as executive director for the second year. Previously, he was an associate director for four years. He also was manager of three Miss Texas winners and has served as a member of the production staff of the pageant. Jordan is self employed in Fort Worth in manufacturing.

Nash was instrumental in establishing the Miss Guymon Okla., Pageant in 1961 and since then has been director and chairman in the pageant. Nash has judged numerous contests in both Kansas and Oklahoma, including Miss Phillips University and Miss South West Kansas.

Nash is employed as a John Deere Implement Dealer and lives in Guymon.

Entertainment for the evening will feature the barbershop quartet, "Music West," offering a medley of songs to the tune "Feelings."

The Miss Lubbock Dancers also will perform with the contestants for the opening number, "City Lights."

Helen Geddes and John Packard will open the talent presentations with the song, "Got A Lot of Living To Do." Leslie Thurman, Miss Lubbock 1978, will highlight the swimsuit segment singing "Main Event."

A special performance by Alice Kindle, Miss Lubbock 1979, will feature the piano playing which won her talent honors in the Miss Texas Scholarship Pageant last summer. Miss Kindle also was second runner-up to Miss Texas.

Mike Myers and the "Bad Jamming" band also will entertain.

The twelve contestants include: from Lubbock: Dona Jo Barnes, 24; Terri Lynn Eoff, 19; Bethany Evans, 17; Susan Leigh Harrison, 19; Janna Lawson, 19; and Vickie Walker, 19.

Also competing are: Cynthia Goodson, 20; Sharla Jayroe, 20; and Amy Mager, 20; all of Amarillo; Karen C. Roberts, 19, of Irving; Leslie Shelton, 21, of Denton; and Patrice M. Whittington, 18, of St. Louis, Mo.

Tickets for the Miss Lubbock Scholarship Pageant will be available at the door the night of the event.

Taxpayers Should Plan Ahead

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

Now is the time to start planning for the tax return you file next year.

Changes in spending before the end of 1979 can affect the amount of money you owe or the size of the refund you will get.

It is important to decide now whether it will pay you to itemize deductions.

Under current law, the standard deduction — officially called the zero-bracket amount — is $3,400 for a married couple filing a joint return and $2,300 for a single person. (The amount has been increased from 1978 for both married and sinle people.)

If your total deductions are less than the zero-bracket amount, it generally doesn't pay to itemize.

Start by estimating the amount of deductions you would have if you itemized. Include things like state and local income taxes, interest on the mortgage and other loans, sales taxes, charitable contributions, medical bills that total more than 3 percent of income, etc. Go through past records to refresh your memory and try to anticipate spending next year.

Assume your deductions — both for 1979 and for 1980 — will be on the borderline, slightly less than, or just about equal to, the zero-bracket amount. Suppose, for example, your estimated deductions are $3,300 for 1979 and $3,350 for 1980 — a total of $6,650. You might think you'd be better off taking the standard deduction each year and exempting $6,800 from taxes.

Consider, however, what happens if you shift deductible spending — delaying or advancing purchases or bill payments so that you can lump expenses together.

Antitrust Chief Denies He Was Pressured In Oil Case

WASHINGTON (AP) — Justice Department antitrust chief John H. Shenefield denied on Friday that he was pressured by the State Department into not seeking a felony indictment against Gulf Oil Corp. for participating in a foreign uranium cartel.

Shenefield, testifyng at a Senate Judiciary Committee confirmation hearing on his nomination as associate attorey general, said State Department officials merely "raised questions aout how the case would appear from a foreign policy point of view."

"It was an entirely legitimate thing for them to do," he said. "No pressure was put on me by the State Department. Never once did they give me advice that I should not bring a case."

Gulf pleaded guilty to a misdemeanor and was fined $40,000 in the uranium cartel case last year. If convicted of a felony, it could have been fined up to $1 million and its individual executives could have faced fines of up to $100,000 and three-year prion terms.

Sen. Howard Metzenbaum, D-Ohio, presiding at the hearing, said the misdemeanor fine was "barely pin money" to a company that earned $791 million in 1978.

Metzenbaum questioned Shenefield about a New York Times article published Tuesday saying that after receiving objections from the State Department and the Canadian government he overruled a staff recommendation that Gulf and eight other companies, most of them foreign, be indicted.

Shenefild told Metzenbaum, "The State Department in no way affected, in the sense you are talking about, my decision."

Rice Shortages May Worsen Cambodian Famine

NEW YORK (AP) — As relief agencies try to untangle the web of intrigue hampering efforts to aid millions of starving Cambodians, one American official says the situation could get even worse next spring because of predicted rice shortage.

The Cambodian famine is roving much more complex than similar catastrophes in Biafra, West Bengal and the Palestine regin at the end of World War II, said Henry R. Labouisse, who has helped with relief efforts in all those countries.

"Aid pledges are already running $100 million short of the $300 million we need to finance a full year of accelerated assistance," said Labouisse, executive director of the Unite Nations Children's Fund. It is estimated that since the end of the Vietnam war in April 1975, Cambodia's population has dwindled from 7 million to 4 million as a result of famine, disease and killings.

The figures cannot be verified, but last summer the magnitude of the famine was revealed whn the Cambodian government asked the World Food Program, a food aid and development organization, for assistance for 2¼ million peole, a figure since raised to 3 million.

UNICEF joined with the International Red Cross and the World Food Program to send in supplies by air and sea, and the agencies are now proviing the target amount of around 1,000 tons a day of rice and other food supplies.

Labouisse, 75, a former U.S. ambassador to Greece, served inthe State Department and various U.N. agencies before becoming head of UNICEF in 1965.

In November, he visited the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh and met with Prime Minister Heng Samrin and other senior officials. He characterized the Phnom Penh governmentas "inexperienced," with a shattered civil service trying to operate from "a stunned capital."

It was "traumatic," he said an interview.

Labouisse aid Heng Samrin informed him that requiremens would be much higher next year because the spring rice crop will be small, resulting inserious shortages until the major crop is harvested next autumn.

"We do not yet know the magnitude of their needs," Labouisse said. "But Food Agricultural Organization officials have been given permission to travel around the country to assess the situation."

Musical Man Has Feet Like Hands

By KEVIN GONZALEZ

COWTOWN, N.J. (NEA)-Archimedes was supposedly taking a bath when he discovered the principle that equal weights displace equal amounts of water.

Isaac Newton was said to be basking beneath an apple tree when a falling fruit rapped him on the noggin, causing him to discover the principle of gravity.

And Greely Robertson, a one-man 15-piece country-western band, says he discovered how to play the rhythm guitar with his feet while helping his wife wash the dishes.

Robertson, who plays seven instruments with his feet and the other eight with his hands, says he always knew he could do it-providing he found the right gadget.

That turned out to be an all-metal kitchen knife with a round handle. By inserting one such knife blade-first into the sole of his left cowboy boot, he discovered he had a way of "fingering" the chords on his Gibson guitar.

By pressing down with that boot, the round handle comes into contact with the strings on the instrument's neck. It's roundness lets it slide easily up and down the guitar neck.

He strikes the guitar's strings across the sound hole with another knife, which has a spring attachment connected to an ordinary pencil, that is placed into the toe of his right boot.

He then set about figuring how to play other instruments with his feet.

Two hooks are also set into the right toe of his boot, one on either side of the knife. One leads via a wire to a tambourine, the other to twin mariachis.

With a single tap of his foot, he can thus play four instruments.

But that's not all. That same right foot can also hit one of three plungers that activate a bass drum and double snare drums.

As all this is happening, his left foot, which rests on a chromium bar set just above his prone Gibson, is moving back and forth. Since most of his weight rests on the bar, only the tip of the knife handle actually touches the guitar's neck.

"While my right foot moves north 'n' south, my left travels east to west," says Robertson of his fancy footwork.

His hands are free to play his other instruments: steel guitar, electric mandolin, rhythm banjo, electric guitar, electric harmonica and so on.

"This little Martin, it's the boss," he says, pointing to the guitar that lies across his lap. "That's the starting point on all my songs."

If all that isn't enough, he can add another instrument-his voice, which might charitably be described as more reedy than twangy.

Originally, Robertson didn't sing; he is well aware of his vocal limitations. But others kept saying his band wasn't complete without singing.

So, he manages to croon such tunes as "Release Me," "Back in the Saddle Again" and "Lucille."

Robertson says the band took about five years to evolve.

He bagan playing the guitar quite a bit back in 1953, but found it difficult to get together with other musicians. So, he decided to accompany himself by also playing a violin.

But the big breakthrough didn't come until he discovered the round-handled knives.

It then required some discipline and ambition to teach himself to move his feet in opposite directions simultaneously. Robertson estimates it took him six solid weeks of practice to master it, while friends and relatives kept telling him he was crazy for even trying.

He also kept adding instruments to his rig, the stand that holds all of them in the proper position ready to go. By 1958, he was up to 15.

"Yeah, people hear all that noise and then they're surprised when they see I'm the only one on the payroll," Robertson chuckles.

They were more than surprised; they were willing to pay to listen.

Robertson became a fulltime musician in 1978 with the folding of the company for which he drove a truck. He was then offered a chance to tour the country for a dealer in Indian jewelry.

He plays while customers mill around the display tables. Half seem interested in the jewelry, while the rest marvel at his musical ability.

His wife, Lorene, is also part of the act. She sells photos of Robertson and his rig for $1. Cassettes of his playing are available for $5.

She has another function, too: cooling him off while he's playing by fanning him with a piece of cardboard.

Robertson looks forward to when he will not be touring all the time. He wouldn't mind doing rehabilitation work in Veterans Administration hospitals, teaching amputees how to use other limbs to make up for those they have lost. He figures his rig would be his way of demonstrating.

"After all," he reasons, "they may have lost an arm or a leg, but they haven't lost their heads."

Tapping his own shaggy white locks, he adds, "And it's the head that tells those limbs what to do."

ONE MAN BAND — "People hear all that noise and then they're surprised when they see I'm the only one on the payroll," chuckles Greely Robertson, a one-man 15-piece country-western band. (NNE Photo)

WHAT'S UP?

A capsule view of tastes, interests and attitudes

What's up in scholarships?

College scholarships are not awarded solely because of financial need or academic standing.

Here are some of the most unusual criteria for awarding scholarships, according to Robert Freede, head of Scholarship Search, the New York City-based research arm of the Student Assistance Council of America:

—Just having the right name can net you a scholarship. Harvard will pay $1,000 a year to students with the last names of Murphy, Pennoyer or Leavenworth.

—Clean living can pay off for some women seeking to attend the University of California, Berkeley. A Shasta College alumna can obtain $300 a semester for studies at Berkeley if she can prove she neither drinks nor smokes.

—On the other hand, a brandy company offers a $500 scholarship to any student who can paint a "recognizable likeness" of its bottle.

—California Indians descended from the Mad River tribe can collect scholarships from a fund set up by Uncle Sam in 1929 upon the death of Maple Creek Willie, a tribe member who left his land and fortune to the government.

Jane Fonda

Katherine Graham

Most influential women

Katherine Graham, chairman and chief executive officer of the Washington Post Co., has been named first in a list of the 25 most influential women in America compiled by The World Almanac.

Actress and political activist Jane Fonda placed second. First Lady Rosalynn Carter placed third. According to Jane Flatt, publisher of The World Almanac, no first lady has topped the list in the five years of its existence.

The World Almanac's annual selections were made by the editorial staffs of 126 newspapers that cosponsor The World Almanac in their communities. The list is included in the volume's 1980 edition.

The two other women finishing in the top five were syndicated advice columnist Ann Landers (who finished first last year) and broadcast journalist Barbara Walters.

The 20 other most influential women are: Bella Abzug, former congresswoman; Shana Alexander, author and TV commentator; Erma Bombeck, author and columnist; Helen Gurley Brown, editor of Cosmopolitan magazine; Anita Bryant, entertainer and anti-homosexual leader; Jane Byrne, mayor of Chicago; Joan Ganz Cooney, president of Children's TV Workshop.

Betty Ford, former first lady; Patricia Roberts Harris, secretary of Health, Education and Welfare; Barbara Jordan, former congresswoman; Coretta Scott King, civil rights leader, widow of Martin Luther King; Juanita Kreps, former secretary of commerce; Virginia Johnson Masters, co-author of several books on sexual behavior.

Woman Files Lawsuit Against General Foods For Firing

GRAND RAPIDS, Mich. (AP) — A 32-year-old East Lansing woman has filed a $5 million suit against General Foods Corp. claiming she was fired because she complained of sexual harassment on the job.

Regina Alus, a former packaging engineer at General Foods' Battle Creek cereal plant, filed suit Thursday in U.S. District Court.

Miss Alus was hired by General Foods on Oct. 1, 1974, according to the suit. Her attorney, Philip Dean, said that in late 1976, she complained to her superviors of sexual harassment by her male co-workers.

Her supervisors did nothing to reprimand the workers for their sexually suggestive remarks or improve the woman's work environment, the suit charged.

The workers "began to increase their harassment and disparate treatment" in retaliation for her complaints, the suit said.

On Oct. 26, 1977, Miss Alus walked off her job to protest the harassment and was fired, according to the suit.

DNA Variation Found By Team

BOSTON, (AP) -A variation of DNA, the molecule that is the basic building block for all forms of life, has been discovered by a team of scientists at the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, it was reported Friday.

Professor Alexander Rich, the biophysicist who led the research group, said the discovery may change science's understanding of the DNA molecule. The molecule contains the chemical code that tells each cell how to perform.

The results of the study, which will be published next week in the British journal Nature, were reported in The Boston Globe.

Rich said the DNA his group discovered is in "an entirely novel form" which "differs significantly" from the famous double helix DNA that was found b James Watson and Francis Crick 26 years ago and won the pair the Nobel prize.

The DA double helix of Watson and Crick is described as "right-handed" because its strands twist in a spiral to the right. The DNA discovered by the MIT group twists to the left, a characteristic that the MIT researchers say could mean it functions differently.

Hospitalized Woman Kills Husband

SPRINGFIELD, Mo. (AP) — As a nurse's aide watched in horror, a woman in a hospital bed shot and killed her estranged usband as he tried to run from the room, police say.

Authorities said Pamela Hurd, 28 fired one shot at her husband, Larry, 31, during an argument in her hospital room Tursday but did not hit him. He fled into the ajoining bathroom, but when he tried to escape from the room moments later, she allegedly fired a second shot.

Hurd died later in surgery at the hospital, Cox Medical Centr, from a wound in the heart.

Prosecuto David Geisler said Friday that Mrs. Hurd was charged with manslaughter and remained under guard in the hospital. Police said Friday the shooting apparently stemmed from an argument over the keys to a pickup truck.

The hospital said Mrs. Hurd was admitted sveral days ago suffering from lower back pains and was assigned to a private room.

Police Cpl. Richard Wells said an argument apparently started a short time after Hurd arrived for Thursday's visit. He said Mrs. Hurd apparently pulled a 22-caliber pistol from an undisclosed location and fired at her husband, who was standing near the bed. The shot missed and lodged in the door frame of the bathroom, he said.

Hurd ran into the bathroom and pulled a chain which turned on a light at the nurses' station. Wells said a nurse's aide went to the room and found Mrs. Hurd lying in bed and yelling at her husband, who was still in the bathroom.

The nurse's aide told Wells she tried to persuade the woman to surrender the weapon, but Mrs. Hurd yelled, "Get him out of here. I hope he's dead."

Wells said Hurd ran from the bathroom past the end of the bed and was heading out of the room when Mrs. Hurd fired a second shot. He said Hurd was struck in the back under the right arm and the bullet entered his heart.

"Hospital security had already cordoned off the hallway when we arrived at the scene. Patients in the area were safe and eveything was uder control," Wells said.

"We talked to Mrs. Hurd though the door and she somehow slid the weapon across the floor and it banged into the door," Wells said.

The hospital spokesman said there were no other reports of the Hurds fighting during her stay in the hospital. Police said they had been called to the Hurd residence several times bcause of family quarrels.

Scholars Claim People Losing Sense Of Presence Of God

Narcissim, Desacralization Seen As 'Fist In God's Face'

By The Associated Press

An interdenominational gathering of Christian scholars says the modern generation has "lost the sense of the presence of God," plunging society into a "pervasive spiritual numbness."

They urged a reaffirmation of classical doctrine, of Biblical standards of faith and practice and moral disciplines in sexual behavior.

"What the culture critic calls 'narcissism' and 'desacralization,' we see as a fist shaken in the face of God," declared the group after a four-day colloquy this month at the University of Notre Dame.

When divine standards revealed through history and conscience are defied, "the processes of self-destruction are set loose," declared the approximately 50 leading Roman Catholic and Protestant scholars, both liberals and conservatives.

"We are convinced that, in these times, the first order of business for Christians, is to recover our own 'sacred center': the Holy God as the focus of all worship, the faithful appropriation of the whole of Holy Scripture..."

The group said the present age has distorted "its proper quest for freedom" into enslavement to hedonistic perversions and idolatries described in Romans 1 and 2, plus new ones devised in modern times.

These range from "the exotic quests for self-salvation to the pervasive drug culture and the threat of nuclear holocaust," the scholars said. "All this is taking place on a planet so fragile that the prospect of human survival has become a question."

The meeting, sponsored at Notre Dame's Center for Continuing Education, said secularistic advocates of a "'world free from God' promised us a paradise" but "today's world is shadowed" by rampant demoralization.

"We see at the heart of the human tragedy there is an imperial claim of human autonomy, the renewal of the ancient rebellion against God's design."

The meeting, focused on the "Loss and Recovery of the Sacred", said its "loss is the vanity of a rebel race. Its judgment is the eclipse of hope and the fracture of personal and social wholeness; the wages of sin is death.

"The recovery is a church whose salt regains its savor through quickening prayer, fidelity to the Word of God, a commitment to works of mercy and justice, carrying out mission by the way of the cross."

In voicing hope for that recovery, participannts urged a reawakening of fervent piety, prayer, contemplative devotion, evangelism and committment to justice for the oppressed, poor and hungry.

Pastor Begins Ministry

The Rev. Fred H. Wolfe will begin his ministry at First Baptist Church Sunday by preaching a sermon entitled "Our Motto for Ministry."

Wolfe, formerly pastor of the Cottage Hill Baptist Church of Mobile, Ala., accepted the call of First Baptist on Nov. 11. The downtown Lubbock church has been without a senior minister since the resignation of Dr. Jaroy Weber in the fall of 1978.

The evening service will feature special music for the Christmas season. Under the direction of Ron Lowry, minister of music, the sanctuary choir will present "Sing the Joys of Christmas." Narrators for this presentation will be Larry Rice and Eloise Schreiner.

The congregation will hold a reception for Wolfe following the 7 p.m. service Sunday.

The Ron Lowry Family will sing "Wise Men Still Seek Him."

A 12-member ensemble will present "Cherish That Name." Soloists will be Barry Watts, Terry Fisher and Beth Perry.

Christian Athletes Plan Rally

The Fellowship of Christian Athletes will hold a Christmas Rally Sunday from 2 to 4 p.m. in the activities building of First Baptist Church. All high school and junior high school huddles in the West Texas area are invited.

Johnny Ray Watson, gospel singer from Lorenzo, will provide special music for the meeting.

Texas Tech athletes, John Greve and Mindy Dunn, will lead the program.

The main speaker for the event will be Ray Woodard, college minister of First Baptist Church.

A special event will be a mini-Dogpatch-Olympics competition. Rally participants are urged to bring gym shoes to wear for this event.

Ed Mooney, West Texas Area representative for FCA, said plans for the state rally to be held in Dallas in January will be discussed at the Lubbock meeting.

Anyone wanting additional information may contact Mooney at 792-5493.

Methodists Advised By Council

ALBUQUERQUE (Special) — United Methodists have been cautioned by the Council of Bishops "to resist all efforts to arouse personal reactions of violence against Iranian people in the U.S." as a result of the seige of the U.S. embassy in Tehran.

"Our Christian faith mandates us never to return evil for evil," the bishops said in a resolution adopted at their autumn meeting here, "but to support in every way possible positive and good responses to influence bad situations toward peaceful resolution."

In other actions, the bishops invited President Carter to address the 1980 General Conference, supported a constitutional amendment to give voting representation to the District of Columbia, and voted to establish a study committee "to define normative standards of Christian conduct for United Methodist ministers" and report to the council's meeting next spring just prior to the General Conference.

Jesuits Ordered By Pope To Strictly Follow Vows

VATICAN CITY (AP) — Pope John Paul II, worried about a "general lowering of sexual standards in religious life" and secular tendencies, has ordered the world's 27,000 Jesuits to strictly follow their vows to the Roman Catholic Church, Vatican sources said Friday.

"To put it simply, the Holy Father wants it understood clearly that the church is not an association of free thinkers and that belonging to it means to submit to a set of beliefs and duties," said one Vatican source, asking not to be named.

The pope's directives were conveyed to the Jesuits in a letter by the Rev. Pedro Arrupe, superior general of the Society of Jesus, the largest order of the Roman Catholic Church, often describe as its vangard or "first legion."

The Jesuits run respected Roman Catholic universities in the United States and elsewhere, operate the Vatican Radio and staff key religious missions overseas.

In the letter, dated Oct. 19, and made available to reporters Friday, Arrupe asked the Jesuits to adopt "necessary changes" demanded by the pontiff at a Vatican meeting with 30 Jesuit superiors in September.

The pope reportedly told the Jesuits "the crisis that has been troubling religious life lately has not spared your order, causing disorientation in the Christian people and worry to the church, the hierarchy and also ...the pope."

A Vatican-based U.S. priest said the pontiff is "upset with the general lowering of sexual standards in religious life, including homosexuality, a lack of loyalty to the Vatican and central authorities."

The priest, who asked not to be named, said an American leader has reported to the Vatican many young Jesuits in the United States "don't believe in life after death, don't believe Jesus to be the son of God and even skip Mass on Sundays."

He added some Jesuits, even high ranking ones, have "accepted a Marxist analysis of society in a profound way."

The pope also has been worried by Jesuit theologians speaking out against traditional doctrine and those actively espousing leftist social policies in various parts of the world.

"I urge you... to bring remedy with due firmness to the deplored deficencies," the pope told the Jesuit leaders at the meeting, the priest said.

Vatican sources said the pope discussed individual cases in detail to make his point. One, according to the sources, was the Rev. John McNeill of the United States, a homosexual sympathizer whose 1976 book on homosexuality has been sharply attacked by the Vatican.

Another controversial Jesuit cited by the sources is the Rev. Fernando Cadenal of Nicaragua, who played a key role in the guerrilla overthrow of the regime of Gen. Anastasio Somoza earlier this year.

Arrupe in his letter asked the Jesuits to report on "any personal or collective situations which may be ambiguous... for instance, independence from superiors, relationships full of ambiguities with other persons, mistakes in observing the vows" — the vows of poverty, chastity and obedience to the pope.

A conservative in discipline and doctrine, John Paul — in personal directives and through church organs — has spoken out forcefully to stress traditional papal authority.

Some critics have warned that the pope's doctrinal rigidity may lead to intellectual repression.

The Vatican-based U.S. priest told The Associated Press John Paul has introduced "a new climate and a new, very direct, clean Polish administration. There is no confusion about signals and directions now."

Prayer Vigil For Hostages Begun

NEW YORK (AP) — Manhattan's Trinity Church, which faces the Wall Street financial district, has started pealing its bells for two minutes each day at noon in prayer vigil for the American hostages held in Iran.

The observance — also including noontime sermons devoted to the Iranian situation — is part of a spreading practice of special devotions in behalf of the Iranian-held Americans and prayers for peaceful resolution of the crisis.

The White House had issued a special appeal for such services, including the noon-time bell-ringing.

And calls for such prayers and support came from agencies of the United Methodist Church, from the Baptist World Alliance and from the United Church of Christ, among others.

The United Church's president, the Rev. Dr. Avery D. Post, urged the denomination's 6,000 local congregations to include in their Sunday services "public prayer" for the hostages, giving all churchgoers an opportunity to "speak their individual prayers aloud."

Advising continued hospitable treatment of Iranians living in this country, he urged ministers to "remind our people that our conduct as Christians and Americans in this time of crisis will have far-reaching consequences for our future.

"We can best uphold our Christian principles and be of aid to the American captives in Iran by remaining calm and demonstrating our over-riding concern for the welfare and dignity of every human being in our midst."

City Church Names New Pastor

The Rev. Murry Haber is now the pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church. He preached his first sermon at the West Lubbock church Dec. 2.

Haber formerly was associate pastor of the Collingwood Presbyterian Church of Toledo, Ohio. There he carried particular responsibility for the educational ministry of the church and coordinated the ministry to older members. While heading a task group on the International Year of the Child, he worked to raise the awareness of that congregation to the

The new Lubbock pastor, a native of Port Arthur, was graduated from Austin College in Sherman and McCormick Theological Seminary in Chicago.

Haber will be installed as pastor of Grace Presbyterian Church by Palo Duro Union Presbytery Jan. 13.

The Habers have two sons, John and Jeff.

An addition to the Grace Presbyterian Church facilities is expected to be completed by the end of the year. The offices of Palo Duro Union Presbytery recently moved into some of the new space at the church which is located at 4820 19th St.

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A Navy medical corpsman, Michael Dean Hagen, says the military services should provide a program and counseling for atheists, just as chaplains do for believers.

According to the Air Force Times, he has asked the U.S. Department of Defense to set up an "Armed Forces Atheist Council" to provide information and activities to non-believers.

LCC Graduates Told To Live For Today

By LISA PAIKOWSKI
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Thirty-one December graduates of Lubbock Christian College were urged Friday to make the most of the present and to express appreciation for the opportunities that are available to them at this time in their lives.

William E. "Bill" Young, minister of the Johnson Street Church of Christ in San Angelo, spoke to the graduating seniors at the baccalaureate service in the college chapel.

Young referred to the scriptural mention of a time to be born and a time to die, but said that in between those times is "the most undervalued, abused, misappropriated times in our lives — the now."

He said that it is impossible to look toward the future without sizing up the "immediate foreground," adding that "a lot of life will pass us by" if we look too much toward the past or future.

"If we can't express appreciation for what's being done now in our lives, we will miss seizing and capturing a beautiful moment in eternity — the now," said the former minister of Broadway Church of Christ.

Young noted that "it was on just such a day as today" that inventions were discovered and that important decisions were made. "It's not an average day at all. This is the eternal moment. We have the chance to place today as the tile in the mosaic of our continuing lives."

He told the graduates "it is not time that is going, it's you who are going" and told them that they have a responsibility for finding a "reason for being."

Young said, "As you made your way through life now, embody it with faith."

Young has served as minister at churches in several states and has worked at the development office at Pepperdine College in California.

He has been a member of Kiwanis International for 15 years and currently serves as a member of the 20th Century Christian's editorial board.

The seniors of the college's second annual December graduation will receive their diplomas Saturday in the Moody Auditorium. Dr. Billy Ray Cox will deliver the commencement address at 9 a.m. in the auditorium.

Missionary Activity Not Curtailed

RICHMOND (Special) — Southern Baptists are not curtailing missionary activity in Arab countries because of the current crisis in Iran, according to a Southern Baptist Foreign Mission Board official just returned from the Middle East.

"I know nothing of any plan or thought of withdrawing from any Arab country at this time," said J.D. Hughey, the board's secretary for Europe and the Middle East, just back from a tour of 15 countries within his area.

Missionaries earlier had withdrawn from Iran and for several reasons the Baptist church in Ankara, Turkey, has been put on inactive status.

If tensions were to arise, Hughey said it would be strictly the missionaries' decision whether or not to withdraw. They have been authorized in advance to take whatever action seems desirable.

"But, I repeat, I saw no evidence of fear or panic on the part of the missionaries, just a readiness to get on with the job, prudently, but persistently," Hughey emphasized.

Hughey did not visit Iran but said, "It is clear we won't have missionaries in Iran for some time because of highly volatile and unstable conditions."

The area secretary said he understands that the holding of hostages by Muslims is not new. He related an incident in which one Muslim leader had offered the sons of prominent families an opportunity to be educated in one of his schools, in effect holding them hostage to see that the families followed his will.

But, he said, during visits to Yemen, Gaza, Jordan, Israel and Egypt he saw no disturbances or display of any anti-American feelings. Many showed the same degree of Arab hospitality he had been accustomed to.

In Yemen, Hughey and other members of a hospital evaluation team touring Southern Baptist-supported hospitals in the Middle East were invited to a feast by the local hakim (the local Muslim religious leader).

Hughey expressed appreciation for the hospitality shown them by the hakim's father who had held the same position. The hakim replied that "the friendship of the father is carried on by the son."

Highey said that in Gaza, the atmosphere was remarkably quiet. In Amman, after the takeover of the U.S. embassy in Iran, it was absolutely quiet, he said, and in Egypt, every one was very freidly and he felt no anti-American sentiment.

"What has happened in Iran has caused waves throughout the Arab world," Hughey said. "Even in Egypt now you see women with the Muslim scarf (not veil) on their heads and covering their hair and necks. This is the accepted feminine orthodox Muslim attire. They call it 'decent dress.'"

Convict Sends Judge Christmas Greeting After Sentencing

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Melvin Brecht sent a Christmas card to the judge who sentenced him fo forgery.

"Now that Christmas is here, it prompts a special thought of all the joy and happiness that knowing you has brought," said the card to Judge Phillip J. Thompson of Superior Court.

"I wish you and your staff, the prosecuting attorney and the officer who took me backto Oregon, a very merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Thanking you all for your just decisions in my behalf, Melvin Brecht."

Brecht, already serving a five-year prison term in Oregon for theft, appeared in Thompson's court Wednesday on a forgery charge. He said he felt bad for his victims and just wanted to plead guilty and go back to jail.

Thompson gave Brecht a suspended five-year term on condtion he makerestitution, pay the $700 it cost to transport him from Oregon and sucessfully complete his sentence.

"Knowing him, his demeanor in court and all, he was just happier than a mudlark to be back in prison," Thompson said Thursday.

'Me Decade'

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — "We are coming into the 'me decade' and worshipping at the 'shrine of selfism,'" the general secretary of the United Methodist General Council on Ministries told its annual meeting.

The Rev. Norman E. Dewire citing a "growing trend among our local churches to be places where we focus on just the human potential movement and body-building programs ... all with a focus on the new narcissism."

There are "all kinds of pulls and tugs within this council to move us toward ... selfism," he said, adding that they "pull us away from being the church of Jesus Christ" concerned with crucial world issues.

Spaghetti Sauce Dispute Keeps Court Tied Up Four Years

PHOENIX, Ariz. (AP) — A spaghetti sauce dispute simmering since 1975 has entangled a judge, tied up eight jurors for three weeks and filled four volumes of legal paperwork.

Monte Berrett sued Spaghetti Company restaurant owner Michael Pulos of Phoenix for $4 million, charging that Pulos backed out of a verbal agreement that Berrett bottle and market Pulos' spaghetti sauce.

The case has delayed Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Sandra O'Connor's move to the State Court of Appeals. She was sworn into the higher court Tuesday but can't assume the appeals bench until the sauce case is finished.

Through cold, snow-covered fields, underneath ice-encrusted trees, the river runs its course.

This brings to mind the Christian Church. It was founded upon the teachings of Jesus who lived His life and did His work unperturbed by the coldness of many of His fellowmen and of the ruling officials. He knew that His work would stand because it was founded upon truth. It not only stood, but has flowed steadily on for centuries. It is still going on today in His churches.

If you do not attend church services why not go this coming Sunday, and identify yourself with this steady flow of the best for which life stands?

There is always room in the river for one more drop of water. There is always room in the Church for one more worshipper.

Gang Of Four Botches Extortion Plot

FORT WORTH (AP) — Four men were in federal custody Friday after they botched a plot to extort $100,000 from a bank president, FBI agents said.

All four were members of a gang that called itself "The Circle of Thieves," and two of them had done odd jobs at the bank official's home, said agent David Rarity.

Three of them were picked up Thursday morning and arraigned that afternoon, Rarity said. The fourth as arrested late Thursday night and arraigned late Friday, according to the U.S. Magistrate's office.

Cental Bank & Trust President B.G. Jenkins told invstigators two men armed with a shotgun and a pistol burst into his home Wednesday morning, smashing a door and shooting out a window.

They held Mrs. Jenkins at gunpoint while Jekins was ordered to go to the bank, get the money and leave it in a garbage can, where the men woud pick it up, Jenkins told agents.

He said he made the drop then notified the FBI. Agents switched the money for a package of marked bills and staked out the area, but the money was never picked up.

Two men of the men used to do odd jobs for Jenkins, the FBI said.

The three men arrested Thursday morning — Ricky Joe Bostice, 21, John S. Thompson, 23, and Leland Earl Williams, 18 — were arraigned before U.S. Mgistrate Alex McGlinchey. Bonds were set at $100,000 for Bostice, $75,000 for Thompson, and $40,000 for Williams.

Bond for the last suspect, Otha Lee Davis, 18, arrested on a complaint accusing him of extortion, was set at $25,000, also by McGlinchey.

Bostice was also accused of extortion, and Thompson and Williams were charged with conspiracy to commit extortion.

Bostice gave FBI aents a five-page statement concerning the incident shortly after his arrest.

Thompson and Williams had done work at Jnkins' home in recent months, one as a gardener and one mending a fence, according to the FBI.

Council Recommends Deregulation

AUSTIN (AP) — A council that includes Texas' top elected officials avoided direct criticism of President Carter's admiistration Friday in recommending deregulation of oil and natural gas prices.

The Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council adopted a resolution by Democratic Attorney General Mark White.

The original resoluton — presented by Republican Gov. Bill Clements — said the "national administration and the Congress have failedto respond to the nation's energy crisis with strong programs to boost domestic energy production and to curb bureaucratic regulatory barriers ..."

White said, however, "this has been a problem with national administrations for 25 years, and I hate to isolate this administration."

"I couldn't agree more," responded Clements, council chairman.

White's substitute resolution sated "for the past 25 years the national government has failed to consistently address the energy needs of this nation through a program encouraging domeste producion and alternate resource development ..."

Both versions of the resolution called for the plowback of oil companies' "above-normal revenues" into domestic energy production "of all forms."

Both versions also called for the federal government to develop precise goals for domestic energy production from each major source of energy for each year from 1980 to 1990

The council put off until its January meeting a vote on a committee report on nuclear energy and a proposal to spend $1 million to explore the use of plant and crop residues as fuel sources.

The nucear report recommends that sites for the disposal of high-level nuclear wastes "be located in Texas only after a determination has been mde that such is in the national interest and after comparative evaluation with other sites in other states."

The report recommends a state study to determine whether a severance tax "can be imposed without damaging the economic viability of the uranium mining industry in South Texas."

A committee headed by State Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown recommended spending $1 million on possible use of plant and crop residues as fuel sources.

Party Defections Growing Worry To Democrats

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democratic leaders gather today to raise money for President Jimmy Carter's campaign and the same time try to do something about defections of party officials.

A 9 a.m. meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee will precede a 11 a.m. brunch, advertised as costing $1,000 per person.

Carter had been the scheduled attraction at the big-time fund raiser but cancelled because of the Iranian sitution.

Instead, thoe featured at the party affair will be Robert Strauss, Carter's campaign chairman, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Energy Secretary Charles Duncan and presidential assistant Sarah Weddington.

State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg said others attending will include Bob Krueger, special envoy to Mexico; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Billy Clayton, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brwn, Treasurer Warren G. Harding, John Hill, former attorney general who lost the 1978 gubernatorial campaign, and Lady Bird Johnson.

Goldberg said the early morning session of the committee will include discussion of party integrity, making the state chairmanship a salaried position and other party matters.

Party integrity was the subject of a hot debate at the committee's last meeting in Houston Oct. 30 but a decision on purging defectors was left to the Austin session.

Thursday, a group of 21 current and former Democratic precinct chairmen announced in Dallas they had switched to the Republican Party. A spokeman for the defector said the switch came because the Republican Party trends more toward responsible conservative governent than current Deocratic efforts.

Other party switchers said they changed because of their dislike for Democratic presidential candidates Carter, Edward Kennedy and Gerald Brown.

At the Houston meeting the SDEC received from its rules subcommittee a recommendation to implement party purity rules by removal of any Democratic office who publicly endorses or supports nominee of an opposing party.

Several SEDC membes indicatd they will hve amendmnts to the subcommittee report at today's session.

Boring Job Can Cause Illness

NEW YORK (AP) — When a young woman we'll call Susan says her boss makes her sick, she's speaking literally. Her insomnia, loss of appetite and crying jags are common symptoms of stress.

Yet Susan is not overburdened, harassed or overworked. She suffers from the flip side of stress: She is sick with boredom and frustration.

Susan's ailments come from "underload." The experts say hers is a problem as serious as the much-ballyhoed distress of a harried, overloaded executive staggering through 80-hour work weeks.

"There's been too much generalizing about stress. Sterss is not necessarily bad. We all need some stress and it is possible to suffer the same distress from underload as from overload," said one expert, Dr. Tobias Brocher of the Menninger Foundation.

That's what has happened to Susan. She is an ambitious young law graduate in her late 20s who took a job two years ago as assistant to the chairman of a small public relations firm. After a period of orientation, the boss said, she would be assigned to handle clients.

It is clear now he hadn't wanted an assistant at all. The duties he assigned to Susan amount to those of a secreary-receptionist.

"I give him a wake-up call. I make his luncheon reservations. I read novels. I answer the phone. I arrange his tennis matches. A moron would be bored with this job," Susan said.

Physicians and psychologists say scores of people grow ill because their lives have too little stress. The ailments they suffer mirror those of patients in high-stress jobs: ulcer, insomnia, depression and headaches. Some retreat into alcoholism or drug abuse.

"Too little stress is a real problem. Underload is as distressful as overload," said Dr. Kenneth Greenspan of the Laboratory for Stress Related Disorders at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center here.

Experts say the amount of stress that is desirable varies with each individual. One man's underload is another's overload.

"There are people who can't bear to give the same speech twice. Some creative people suffer greatly when they're not involved in something demanding," said Dr. Daniel X. Freedman of the University of Chicago.

Those who do repetitive, monotonous taks — such as assembly line workers — are more vulnerable to underload distress, but the experts say no one is immune.

"Nobody is underloaded on purpose," said Dr. Hans Selye of the International Institute of tress in Montreal. "People are very motivated to achieve, to accomplish."

"Take a government bureacrat who is very well paid to do a routine job pushing papers around," Brocher said. "Everybody's surprised when he suffers from stress, but he's dying of boredom.

"Or take the executive who's been passed over for promotion. He sits at his desk and his phone never rings. He develops stress symptoms."

Brocher said he believes "many executives generate work because they are afraid of the boredom and emptiness they experience over the weekend. They prefer to be overloaded."

The happiest people are those who are able to keep pressures and challenges at a level that suits them, Freedman said. "You're more likely to get sick if you haven't chosen the level of stress, if you feel thrust into the situation," he said.

"An overloaded executive will often feel OK because he has a role in deciding how much he handles," Greenspan sid. "His secretary will be less comfortable because she's dealing with the same overload and has no choice.

"Assembly line workers are likely to experience tremendous distress from sensory deprivation because there are too few creative demands on the line. They are doing monotonous, rote work. They can't speed up the line or slow itdown or alter the work."

Because underloaded workers feel trapped, their muscles tense, Greenspan said, as if to flee. Many of the resulting medical problems are thus muscle-related: headache, low back pain, insomnia, fatigue.

Underload also breeds depression, anxiety, heart palpitations and moments of panic.

"A normal response is to try to compensate for the sensory deprivation on the job. The moment the assembly line stops, they'll use a stimulant — coffee or a cigarette, beer or pills," Greenspan said.

"A healthy response? OK, everyone has something that makes them high, something that they could do after work to compensate — music or skiing or meditation."

Three Soldiers Injured In Korean Blast

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — Three American soldiers walking through the Korean demilitarized zone in a heavy fog Friday were injured by an explosion and officials speculated they triggered a land mine. One of the injured men apparently staggered away and was being sought.

A U.S. Army spokesman mentioned the possibility that a mine caused the blast, but said an investigation was under way.

The soldiers were part of a platoon on a routine U.N. patrol in the 2.4-mile-wide buffer zone about one mile east of the truce village of Panmunjom, said Col. John A. G. Klose, spokesman for the U.N. command.

Klose said the soldiers could have been lost in the fog and he could not tell if the explosion took place in the southern half of the DMZ, patrolled by a U.N. force, or on the half patrolled by the communist North.

Despite the fact the area is off limits to aircraft, a helicopter swooped in to to evacuate two unidentified injured soldiers, members of the 2nd U.S. Infanry Division.

They were taken to U.S. Army medical facilities in Seoul where one was reported in serious condition and the other in good condition. The U.N. command asked North Korea for assistance in locating the missing soldier, officials said.

It was originally reported that five soldiers were injured and a sixth missing in the explosion but the command later corrected the number to three injured, including the missing man.

A few months ago, the U.N. command accused the North of placing mines along the 151-mile-long military demarcation line in the center of the DMZ in violaion of the 1953 armistice agreement that ended the Korean war.

Th last major incident in the DMZ involving Ameican soldiers occurred on Aug. 17, 1976 when two American officers were killed by ax-wielding North Korean guards in a dispute over pruning a tree in Panmunjom.

Drug Users Cause Hamburger Chain To Change Spoons

CHICAGO (AP) — McDonald's is changing the design of its coffee stirrers because some drug users apparently have found another purpose for them.

The plastic mixer — a long handle with a tiny spoon bowl on the end — is similar to paraphernalia used by cocaine snifers. They also reportedly are being used to inhale PCP, an animal tranquilizer with hallucinogenic properties.

Doug Timbelake, a spokesman for McDonald's Corp., said the fast-food chain decided to redesign its spoons because "it has been brought to our attention that people are using them illegally and illicity for purposes for which they are not intended."

Use of the chain's spools was discussed recently at a U.S. subcommittee hearing of the Senate Judiciary Committee.

A MONUMENT TO STALIN — Local traffic passes by a major construction project along the main road outside Gori, U.S.S.R., recently, an agricultural town of 20,000 situated in the shadow of the Caucasus Mountains. Residents say the project will be a new monument to Joseph Stalin who ruled the Soviet Union for nearly three decades until his death in 1953. On Dec. 21, the nation celebrates the 100th anniversary of the birth of Stalin. (AP Laserphoto)

Financier Told To Pay Investors

SAN DIEGO — The expensive cars, stylish clothes and luxurious lifestyle are still illustrative of a man with a fortune, despite court decrees ordering financier C. Arnholt Smith to pay untold millions of dollars to investors.

The Federal Deposit Insurance Corp., which absorbed losses in a bank failure blamed on Smith, has been trying since 1976 to get $26.6 million from him. A federal jury recently ruled he is liable for damages to private shareholders before his U.S. National Bank folded.

A jury fund Smith guilty of grand theft in connection with the looting of $8.9 million from Sovereign State Capial, a Smith-controlled firm which also went bankrupt.

In another court last summer, a judge ordered Smith to repay $681,000 in penalties and income txes due fo the year 1973.

Attorneys in more than 40 private suits are seeking "several billion dollars" as the outgroth of the Chapter 10 bankruptcy filed by Smith's conglomerate, the Westgate-California Corp. almost seven years ago.

Gang Of Four Botches Extortion Plot

FORT WORTH (AP) — Four men were in federal custody Friday after they botched a plot to extort $100,000 from a bank president, FBI agents said.

All four were members of a gang that called itself "The Circle of Thieves," and two of them had done odd jobs at the bank official's home, said agent David Rarity.

Three of them were picked up Thursday morning and arraigned that afternoon, Rarity said. The fourth as arrested late Thursday night and arraigned late Friday, according to the U.S. Magistrate's office.

Cental Bank & Trust President B.G. Jenkins told invstigators two men armed with a shotgun and a pistol burst into his home Wednesday morning, smashing a door and shooting out a window.

They held Mrs. Jenkins at gunpoint while Jekins was ordered to go to the bank, get the money and leave it in a garbage can, where the men woud pick it up, Jenkins told agents.

He said he made the drop then notified the FBI. Agents switched the money for a package of marked bills and staked out the area, but the money was never picked up.

Two men of the men used to do odd jobs for Jenkins, the FBI said.

The three men arrested Thursday morning — Ricky Joe Bostice, 21, John S. Thompson, 23, and Leland Earl Williams, 18 — were arraigned before U.S. Mgistrate Alex McGlinchey. Bonds were set at $100,000 for Bostice, $75,000 for Thompson, and $40,000 for Williams.

Bond for the last suspect, Otha Lee Davis, 18, arrested on a complaint accusing him of extortion, was set at $25,000, also by McGlinchey.

Bostice was also accused of extortion, and Thompson and Williams were charged with conspiracy to commit extortion.

Bostice gave FBI aents a five-page statement concerning the incident shortly after his arrest.

Thompson and Williams had done work at Jnkins' home in recent months, one as a gardener and one mending a fence, according to the FBI.

Council Recommends Deregulation

AUSTIN (AP) — A council that includes Texas' top elected officials avoided direct criticism of President Carter's admiistration Friday in recommending deregulation of oil and natural gas prices.

The Texas Energy and Natural Resources Advisory Council adopted a resolution by Democratic Attorney General Mark White.

The original resoluton — presented by Republican Gov. Bill Clements — said the "national administration and the Congress have failedto respond to the nation's energy crisis with strong programs to boost domestic energy production and to curb bureaucratic regulatory barriers ... "

White said, however, "this has been a problem with national administrations for 25 years, and I hate to isolate this administration."

"I couldn't agree more," responded Clements, council chairman.

White's substitute resolution sated "for the past 25 years the national government has failed to consistently address the energy needs of this nation through a program encouraging domestc producion and alternate resource development ... "

Both versions of the resolution called for the plowback of oil companies' "above-normal revenues" into domestic energy production "of all forms."

Both versions also called for the federal government to develop precise goals for domestic energy production from each major source of energy for each year from 1980 to 1990

The council put off until its January meeting a vote on a committee report on nuclear energy and a proposal to spend $1 million to explore the use of plant and crop residues as fuel sources.

The nucear report recommends that sites for the disposal of high-level nuclear wastes "be located in Texas only after a determination has been mde that such is in the national interest and after comparative evaluation with other sites in other states."

The report recommends a state study to determine whether a severance tax "can be imposed without damaging the economic viability of the uranium mining industry in South Texas."

A committee headed by State Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brown recommended spending $1 million on possible use of plant and crop residues as fuel sources.

Party Defections Growing Worry To Democrats

AUSTIN (AP) — Texas Democratic leaders gather today to raise money for President Jimmy Carter's campaign and the same time try to do something about defections of party officials.

A 9 a.m. meeting of the State Democratic Executive Committee will precede a 11 a.m. brunch, advertised as costing $1,000 per person.

Carter had been the scheduled attraction at the big-time fund raiser but cancelled because of the Iranian situtions.

Instead, thoe featured at the party affair will be Robert Strauss, Carter's campaign chairman, Labor Secretary Ray Marshall, Energy Secretary Charles Duncan and presidential assistant Sarah Weddington.

State Democratic Chairman Billy Goldberg said others attending will include Bob Krueger, special envoy to Mexico; Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas; Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby, Speaker Billy Clayton, Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong, Agriculture Commissioner Reagan Brwn, Treasurer Warren G. Harding, John Hill, former attorney general who lost the 1978 gubernatorial campaign, and Lady Bird Johnson.

Goldberg said the early morning session of the committee will include discussion of party integrity, making the state chairmanship a salaried position and other party matters.

Party integrity was the subject of a hot debate at the committee's last meeting in Houston Oct. 30 but a decision on purging defectors was left to the Austin session.

Thursday, a group of 21 current and former Democratic precinct chairmen announced in Dallas they had switched to the Republican Party. A spokeman for the defector said the switch came because the Republican Party trends more toward responsible conservative govenent than current Deocratic efforts.

Other party switchers said they changed because of their dislike for Democratic presidential candidates Carter, Edward Kennedy and Gerald Brown.

At the Houston meeting the SDEC received from its rules subcommittee a recommendation to implement party purity rules by removal of any Democratic office who publicly endorses or supports nominee of an opposing party.

Several SEDC membes indicatd they will hve amendmnts to the subcommittee report at today's session.

Career Counselor Takes Trip To Get Firsthand Information

By LINDA SCHWARTZ

MESA, Ariz. (NEA) — There are some things you just can't learn from a book.

That's why Dodie Gadient decided that if she was going to be a good career counselor, she ought to get her information firsthand.

So, she set out in her motor home on a six-month journey across the country, stopping along the way to interview loggers, fishermen, merchants and horse trainers.

"I got tired of advising people about careers out of a book," says Miss Gadient, who coordinates on-the-job experiences for students at two local high schools.

"I felt I needed to get out. Instead of reading about oystermen, I wanted to get information from the horse's mouth."

Equipped with camera and tape recorder, she interviewed workers about their occupations. She also probed their lifestyles, their values, their satisfactions and their frustrations.

Miss Gadient stresses that she learned more about the people she interviewed than how they earn their livings.

"People pay a price for fame and success," she says, recalling that she met many people to whom money meant less than happiness.

On of her strongest memories is of a former marketing executive who quit his $65,000-a-year job to live in the small town of Ouray, Colo, where he runs the corner drugstore.

"He found the money was not worth the price he had to pay for his and his family's happiness," she recalls.

Sometimes her visits lasted an afternoon. Sometimes they lasted a few days.

She often carried her interviews into the evening, visiting her subjects and their families at home, over a meal or tea.

"I was getting more perspective on their lives this way," she notes.

In Oregon and Washington she talked to crew members of merchant ships. In Colorado she interviewed a sheriff, a silversmith and a store owner.

In Durango, Colo., Miss Gadient was advised to mount a black horse if she really wanted to find out about cattle ranching.

"I was told, 'If you want to learn about cattle, you've got to get run over by a few,'" she says, laughing.

An experienced rider, she proceeded to help the cattlemen sort younger calves from the herd.

Miss Gadient's travels next took her to Kansas, where she talked to farmers. Then it was on to Saginaw, Mich., to interview an executive responsible for more than 10,000 workers in an assembly plant.

At Chesapeake Bay, Miss Gadient learned how oyster fishermen do their jobs.

And in Kentucky, she interviewed the managers and grooms at two of the state's famous thoroughbred breeding farms. She saw Seattle Slew at Spendthrift Farms and Forego at the John Ward Jr. Farm.

There was another bonus from that part of the trip: She has a standing offer of a job as a groom.

Agents Show Example Of Drug Profits To Panel

WASHINGTON (AP) — Saying it represented only a fraction of the profits available to dug dealers, federal agents Friday dumped $3.2 million in cash onto a table during a Senate hearing.

Cameras clicked as several senators fondled the money. Sen. Charles Percy, R-Ill., playfully tossed a six-inch-high stack of $100 bills to the subcommittee chairman, Sen. Sam Nnn, D-Ga.

Armed guards stood by lest temptation overcome anyone in the crowded hearing room. No one made a serious grab for the money, although several senators were tempted to make a few jokes.

"For the benefit of the audience, this is not the windfall profits tax," said Nunn as he caressed a stack of $100s.

And Sen. William S. Cohen, R-Maine, taking note of Percy tossing the money about, said, "Sen. Percy is not normally known to throw money around like that." Perc is one of the wealthier men in the Senate.

The money was taken from a van in Los Angeles less than six weeks ago during a search for narcotics. It was uncovered by a dog trained to sniff out narcotics.

So far no one has claimed the money and the case remains open.

Peter Bensinger, admnistrator of the Drug Enforcement Administration, said the money weighed 45 to 50 pounds.

The profits in drug dealing, he said, are so vast that many top drug dealers purchase money counters — machines that can quickly count bills and sort them into neat stacks.

Federal estimates of illegal drug profits in 1978 range from $44 billion to $63 billion. That is about half the total $120 billion that federal agents estimate was collected from all illegal activities of organized crime.

Virtually unnoticed amid the glamor of the cash were two bales — each weighing about 100 pounds — of high-grade marijuana taken in another drug case. Drug agents brought those bales along as well in their effort to dramatize the scope of the drug conrol problem.

Unveiling of the money overshadowed the actual hering itsef, called by the Senate permanent subcommittee on investigations to explore whether a 1976 effort to curb one of the alleged abuses of Waterate was harming federal efforts to get at the big money men behind drg dealing.

That 1976 law prohibited the Internal Revenue Service from giving information uncovered from tax returns and from its investigations of possible tax evasions to other federal agencies without a court order.

It was passed after allegations that the Nixon White House had used tax returns for political purposes. But some senator are concerned that the law may have had the effect of hamstringing drug control efforts.

"The type of cooperation that sent Al Capone and Frank Costello to jail on tax evasion charges is not there any more," Bill Goodwin, a spokesman for the subcommittee, said before the hearing opened. "We're interested in finding out why."

One witness, Irvin B. Nathan, deputy assistant attorney general in the department's Criminal Division, specifically cited the 1976 changeas a major deterrent to federal efforts to get to the men behind drug trafficking.

Nathan said the law had "severely restricted" the government's "ability to identify and prosecute narcotics financiers and to trace and seek forfeiture of their assets."

Nathan cited a recent case in Philadelphia, where IRS agents and officials of the Drug Enforcement Administrtion both were investigating a suspected illegal drug chemist but neither could disclose their investigation to the other.

The drug agents eventually learned the IRS had found "evidence corroborative of drug dealing" in the chemist's trash can.

But when the prosecutor trying the case against the chemist subpoenaed the IRS agent, "the IRS took the postion that the agent could not testify about why he was going through the defendant's trash unless the prosecutor obtained a court order, which could not be done prior to conclusion of the trial," Nathan said.

Officials Accused In Illegal Gambling

TYLER, Texas (AP) — Three law enforcement offices testified Friday they had no knowledge of and heard no complaints about illegal gambling in Gregg County.

That testimony came as the second week ended in the federal trial of five current or former Gregg County officials accused of corruption in public ofice. The indictment alleges, among other things, the defendants conspired to permit illegal gambling.

On trial are sheriff Tom Welch, County Commissioner Bill Satterwhite, Peace Justice Charles Cashell and two former deputies — Jim Cochran and Bill Roach.

Economist Proposes Nine-Day Work Week

By the Editors of Psychology Today

Most of us simply moan and groan when we're stuck in weekend traffic. Not Carlos Varsavsky.

Varsavsky, an astrophysicist, industrialist and economist now at New York University, has proposed a nine-day week in which people would be off work at different times so that weekend traffic jams would be reduced.

Varsavsky's idea is now circulating in a paper that he wrote with an $18,000 grant from the Ford Foundation. The nine-day week would consist of three "triads" of three days each. Staggered shifts of employees would work two triads each week and take one off.

This rotating work force would enable companies, institutions, offices and schools to keep a full staff on hand every day, and to stay open continuously. Construction and manufacturing would speed up, Varsavsky says. Absenteeism would decline as employees stopped taking off work time for personal business at doctor's offices and shops that are now closed on weekends.

Varsavsky got the germ for the idea when he found himself stuck in traffic with his wife and six children one Sunday evening six years ago.

He realizes his proposal will meet opposition, particularly from organized religion, since Sunday would no longer be everyone's day off. He says the problem could be met, however if religious services were held once every three days. The entire labor force would get the day off on national and religious holidays.

Barsavsky thinks his idea should be given a first trial in relatively self-contained and isolated communities. He proposes mining, resort, industrial or remote military towns. Or maybe the Ford Foundation would like to give the idea a whirl?

Sad children are often selfish — but not always. A study has found that if children are sad because they are thinking about someone else's misfortunes, their desire to help others seems to be enhanced.

Psychologist Mark Barnett and graduate students Laura King and Jeffrey Howard of Kansas State University set up a study in which a researcher tested the generosity of 85 boys and girls ranging in age from 7 to 12. She talked individually with them, telling them she was studying what children remember. As a reward for helping, she gave each child 30 chips that they could exchange for prizes later on.

The researcher also pointed to a box on the table and said that some children would not have a chance to be in the study and earn prizes, but that the child could share with them by putting some of his or her chips in the box.

The next step had variations to induce different frames of mind in the children. The experimenter asked different children to tell her about either a happy incident in their own lives or an unhappy one, or to tell about another child, describing either something good or something bad that had happened.

The experimenter then left the child alone for a few minutes. As she left, she reminded the child "You may share with the other children, if you want," thinking about what had been discussed.

The researchers tested generosity by measuring how many chips the child contributed to the box for non-participating children. They found little difference among the children who had discussed happy items about themselves or others. The children in these groups donated an average of five or six chips.

A big difference, however, turned up in children who were asked to think about something sad. The ones who had related something unhappy about themselves contributed an average of only two chips. But the ones who were unhappy about someone else's troubles chipped in nearly 10.

California Prison Riot 'Symptomatic Of System-Wide Problem'

SOLEDAD, Calif. (AP) — The state director of corrections said Friday that the riot that left two inmates dead and 17 other injured at Soledad state prison was symptomatic of a system-wide problem.

"Otis Loggins did the best he could under the circumstances," Corrections Director Jerry Animoto said of the Soledad superintendent. "I've been in that situation myself...we're doing the best we can to handle a difficult population the best we can."

Loggins had decided to end what was a four-month confinement of inmates to their cells after an attack by white prisoners on blacks in August.

Most of the prison had returned to normal but one section, where the inmates involved in the August melee were kept, had remained "locked down" until Thursday. The rioting occurred within hours of the end of the lockdown.

The deaths were the third and fourth at Soledad this year. After earlier killings, the California State Employees Association, which represents prison guards, had called for Loggins to be fired.

Animoto said Friday that Loggins wuld not be dismissed.

About 100 correctional officers were required to break up the melee, swinging clubs and firing birdshot to disperse the 80 fighting inmates.

Those who started the fight wielded crude knives and clubs, which were scattered on the prison yard after the 35-minute battle prison officials said.

Both the dead inmates, who suffered multiple stab wounds, and all but two of those injured were white, the officials said.

"It appears to have been a preplanned assault by blacks on whites and Chicanos...and it appears to have been a retaliation for an assault by whites on blacks Aug. 19," said Phil Guthrie, state Department of Corrections spokesman.

Many of those involved in Thursday's riot were also involved in the August incident in which white inmates clubbed black prisoners with baseball bats as they marched in memory of George Jackson, the so-called "Soledad Brother" who was killed at San Quentin a decade ago.

After that incident, the North Facility, which houses about 1,300 inmates, was "locked down," which confines inmates to their cells except for brief periods of exercise and eating.

That lockdown was phased out over a period of months, ending Thursday for about 100 residents of Whitney Hall, a four-story cellblock in the North Facility.

Feminist's Excommunication Explained

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Mormons who support the federal Equal Rights Amendment need not fear that they will be excommunicated because of their backing for the ERA, church spokesman Don LeFevre said Friday.

Sonia Johnson, a feminist who founded Mormons for the ERA, was excommunicated from the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints this week. She said it was because of her support for the amendment, but LeFevre said it was for her personal attack on chuch leaders and misrepresentation of the church's stand against the ERA

LeFevre said many active Mormons support the ERA, and that their membership has not been called into question.

The church's First Presidency has urged that members work for the amendment's defeat.

"The fact is, a number of church members have obviously elected to advocate passage of the amendment, and in no instance that I am aware of has the church taken action against them," LeFevre said.

They include Utah Gov. Scott Matheson, former Gov. Calvin Rampton and former Sen. Frank Moss.

But LeFevre said he couldn't "conceive of a faithful member not viewing the concern of the president of the church as being inspired."

Mormons, who number 4.5 million worldwide, believe church President Spencer Kimball is a prophet.

LeFevre said Mrs. Johnson was charged before a church court with demeaning the church, impuning the motives of church leaders and accusing them of "savage misogyny."

Proper Care Necessary To Insure Yearly Crop Of Pecans

Timed Applications Of Insecticides, Fungicides, Fertilizer Important

By L.P. KOJIS
Texas Certified Nurseryman

Pecan nuts are enjoyed by people in all walks of life throughout the world. Pecan trees, which are perennial both in growth and production, begin bearing nuts within six to ten years after planting. Pecan trees will continue to produce nuts annually for many years, provided they are protected against insects and disease. Since insects and diseases cause inferior nuts and production, it is important to set up timed applications of insecticides and fungicides.

A pecan tree will stay healthy and vigorous only if it is fertilized with a well balanced fertilizer and then sprayed repeatedly for insects and diseases. A balanced fertilizer containing zinc should be applied in February. Fertilizing in February will insure production of well developed nuts in the fall.

Spraying pecan trees should start in January or February with the application of a 97% Oil Emulsion. Dormant Oil applied now will control overwintering insects and Phylloxera. Pecan Phylloxera causes galls on the leaves, stems and nuts of many varieties of pecan trees. Phylloxera Devastatrix, which is the insect that causes the gall, overwinters in the crevices of the bark and then emerges the following spring.

The application of dormant oil should be the only spraying required before the pecan tree starts to bud. Approximately two to three weeks after the buds break open a solution of Zinc Sulfate, Benomyl and Malathion or Diazinon should be applied to control pecan scab, rosette of pecan and any foliage feeding insects. This same combination of insecticides and fungicides should be applied again in late April or early May. An application made at this time will again control pecan scab, rosette, and also your pesky pecan nut casebearer. The casebearer feeds on new leaf development and a reduction in the final pecan nut yields. A third application of Mallathion, Benomyl and Zinc Sulfate should be made about forty days later to control the second generation of casebearers.

Somewhere between the middle of July and the middle of August, a combination of Benomyl and Diazinon should be applied to control the on coming foliage disease (scab) and the Hickory Shuckworm. Also at this time Fall Webworms will begin to infest many pecan trees. These worms live in a loosely woven web and eventually ruin the pecan crop. Webworms eat all the foliage, which averts photosynthesis of plant foods responsible for the setting of fruit the following year. The Webworms can be controlled by burning or removing the webs. Also the application of Diazinon will control these pests.

The spray program just outlined will be a minimum one needed to assure a good productin of pecan nuts annually. Remember to use the manufacturers recommended pesticide dosages and also follow all safety precautions.

Dry Weather Hindering Grain Growth

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) — Cool,dry weather continues to prevail over Texas, allowing harvest operations to make rapid progess in western areas but hampering grain growth for winter grazing, says Dr. Daniel C. Pfannstiel, director of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Cotton harvesting remains the major farm activity and is past halfway point over the plains and other western locatiions, Pfannstiel said. Yields are above average in many locattions but much of the crop has immature fiber due to weather conditions.

Some soybeans are still being harvested in Northeast and South Texas. Harvesting of citrus and sugar cane continues in the Rio Grande Valley among with some harvesting of all vegetables. The pecan harvest continues across the state.

More ranchers are starting to feed livestock due to declining forage conditions and cooler weather, Pfannstiel said. Stockmen also are culling herds and marketing lambs and calves, particularly in West and South Texas.

Due to limited growth on wheat fields in the plains, the number of stocker cattle moving into these areas is down from previous years. Small grains for winter pasture are making limited growth in other areas due to lack of moisture and are offering little livestock grazing.

Reports from district Extension agents showed the following conditions.

PANHANDLE: About 30 percent of the cotton has been harvested. Harvests of sorghum and sugar beets are virtually complete. Most wheat is upbut is making little growth due to dry conditions. Cattle are in good shape, but numbers on wheat fields are down due to lack of growth.

SOUTH PLAINS: Cotton harvesting continues in full swing, with gins running around the clock. Much cotton is being field-stored in modules. Yields are generally good but micronaire is down. Irrgated wheat is making good growth but that on dryland needs moisture. Range conditions are declining due to the dry weather.

ROLLING PLAINS: Cotton harvesting is dominating the farm scene with about 50 percent of the crop in in most counties. Yields are generally above average although micronaire is low. Wheat grazing prospects are dim due to continued dry conditiions, so cattle numbers are down. Lack of stock water is becoming a major concern in some locations.

NORTH CENTRAL: All fields are in and yields have generally been good. Harvesting of an excellent pecan crop continues. Wheat and oats are up and making some growth, but most fields need rain. Pastures and ranges also need moisture. Cattle are in good shape, with supplemental feeding in progess.

SOUTHWEST: Deer hunting is dominating the picture, with good harvests under way. Recent scattered rains helped some smal grains but remains generlly dry. Harveting of an excellent pecan crop is winding down; prices are generally good. Supplemental livestock feeding is increasing due to poor grazing.

COASTAL BEND: Harvesting of peanuts and soybeans is complete while cucumber and pecan harvesting continues. Wheat planting remain active but soil moisture remains short. Oats are making poor growth due to cool, dry conditions. Livestock are getting supplemental feed due poor forage conditions. Calving is active.

SOUTH:Good rains fell over the Rio Grande Valley but the rest of the area remains dry. Soybean harvesting is past the halfway point whie 12,400 acres of sugarcane have been harvested. Peppers are being harvested in good volume but cabbage and carrots are in light supply. Demads for gift fruit are strong; 20 percent of the grapefruit and 10 percent of the early oranges hae been harveste. Livestock and forage conditiions continues to decline due to dry weather.

CENTRAL: Stockmen have started winter feeding due to cooler weather and poor forage conditiions. Small grains are in poor shape due to lack of moisture; some fields hae grain mites and greenbugs.

EAST: All field crops are in, with good to excellent yields for the year. Pecan harvesting continues; yields and quality are good. Most wheat and oats have been planted for winter pasture; however, growth has been slow due to cold weather. Livestock feeding is in progress; calving is heavy.

SOUTHEAST AND UPPER GULF COAST: Farmers are busy getting land in shape for next spring's crops. Pecan harvesting continues, with a good crop. Cattle remain in good condition, with average grazing. Recent freezing temperatures killed summer pastures and tender vegetables.

SOUTH CENTRAL: An excellent cotton harvest is complete. Harvesting of a

SHAH'S SON UNDER GUARD — The youngest son of the former Shah of Iran, 13-year-old Prince Ali Reza, arrives at the New York residence of his aunt, the Shah's twin sister, Princess Ashraf, Friday. Security for the former monarch's family was tightened after the murder of the Shah's nephew in Paris Friday (AP Laserphoto)

Shah's Memoirs Released

Ex-Ruler Blames U. S. For Oust From Power

LONDON (UPI) — The deposed shah of Iran accused the United States in memoirs published Friday of helping to oust him from power by sending a U.S. Air Force general to "neutralize" Iran's army during his overthrow.

In the first installment of memoirs published in the British news magazine Now!, Shah Mohammed Reza Pahalvi also said he saw Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini as a "menace in the mouth of an old man who pretended to speak in the name of God."

But he had high praise for both former Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and former President Richard Nixon who, he said, "has a remarkably accurate view of men and events."

Both men visited him at his exile home in Cuernavaca, Mexico, the shah said, demonstrating "there are some Americans who remain faithful in their friendships, unlike those who 'threw the emperor out of his country like a dead mouse.'"

The memoirs are to be published in Paris later this month. There had been reports the shah wanted publication delayed because of his criticism of the United States, which granted him a temporary visa last month to undergo medical treatment.

In the seven-page Now! excerpt, entitled "How the Americans Overthrew Me," the shah said Gen. Robert Huyser, deputy commander of the U.S. Air Command in Europe, arrived in Tehran last January amid rumors of an imminent military coup.

"My officers were bound by their oath of allegiance to the crown and the constitution (to support the government)," the shah said. "As long as the constitution was respected, they would not falter.

"But the intelligence services of NATO and the CIA may have had good reason for thinking that the constitution would be abused. It was, therefore, necessary to neutralize the Iranian army that was clearly the purpose which brought Gen. Huyser to Tehran."

In Washington, the Pentagon had no immediate comment. Government officials said privately Huyser went to Tehran at the request of President Carter but denied his mission was to speed the departure of the Shah.

The shah said Huyser made the "surprising" request that Gen. Ghara-Baghi, Iran's chief of staff, meet with Mehdi Bazargan, the head of the Iran Liberation Movement who later was appointed prime minister by Khomeini.

"Gen. Ghara-Baghi told me of this, but only Gen. Huyser and Mr. Bazargan can say what decisions were taken," the shah said. "I know only that Gen. Ghara-Baghi used his authority to persuade the generals under his command to play no part in the events about to take place.

"I saw Gen. Huyser on a single occasion during his visit. He accompanied Ambassador Sullivan of the United States on one of the last interviews I had with him.

"The one thing that was on the minds of both of them was to know on what day and at what time I should be leaving."

Khomeini, the shah said, had long caused problems in Iran, including his part in a month of riots that followed announcement of a new law to limit individual ownership of agricultural land in 1963.

"The man behind the riots, pillaging and fires turned out to be someone practically unknown," the shah said. "He was an obscure agitator, the Ayatollah Khomeini, who was opposed to agrarian reform, to emancipation of women, to the principles of the White Revolution.

"His support at this stage was, however, extremely limited. As a result, he was not even brought to trial; he was simply asked to employ his inflammatory eloquence elsewhere."

Assassination Saddens Shah

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Shah Mohammed Reza Pahlavi was "deeply saddened" to learn of the assassination of his nephew in Paris, according to a statement issued Friday by his official spokesman, Robert Armao.

"He was a gallant naval officer who served his country with distinction," Armao said of Prince Shahryar Shafik, 34, son of the shah's twin sister, who was shot to death Friday.

The leader of an extremist group in Iran claimed one of his death squads was reponsible for the killing.

"Captain Shafik, born in 1945, served in the navy of Iran for the past 16 years," said Armao's statement, which was issued from New York, where he is spending the weekend. "He completed two naval tours of duty in the United States. H was loved, respected and admired by the men who served under him.

"His policy was to eat, sleep and work side-by-side with his men, be it in the heat of the Persian Gulf or at sea. He shunned any privileges of his position. His devotion to the needy Iranian people of the region where he was stationed was well known.

"In addition to his mother, he is survived by his wife and two small children."

The shah and his wife have been secreted at San Antonio's Lackland Air Force Base since last Sunday.

Questions About Iran Lining Campaign Trail

United Press International

Both Rosalynn Carter and Sen. Edward M. Kennedy fielded persistent questions about Iran — the deposed shah and the 30 U.S. hostages in Tehran — while campaigning in different parts of the country Friday.

In a telephone interview with the Iowa State Radio Network, Kennedy reacted to administration criticism of his statements by saying the issue "has been blown out of proportion."

Asked whether, if he were a hostage, he would want to be part of a domestic political debate, Kennedy answered: "To tell you the truth, my own sense is that it may enhance the security and release of the hostages."

But Mrs. Carter had a different view. Winding up her four-day campaign trip with Vice President Walter Mondale by a visit to her home state of Georgia, she said: "We don't care about the past history of Iran. We don't care about the Shah's money. We don't care about whether he was a good leader or not. We don't care about where he stays at this point.

"Any discussion of those issues are harmful to the hostages and don't help us in trying to free the hostages," the first lady said.

She said she received "a real warm, wonderful welcome" by New York blacks at a Harlem church earlier this week, and hecklers at the meeting were members of "a new progressive party" strategically planted in the crowd.

The Washington Post, meanwhile, quoted Stephen Smith, Kennedy's brother-in-law and campaign manager, as complaining that President Carter is "blatantly" playing politics from the White House while using the crisis in an effort to muzzle criticism from other contenders.

Commenting on Smith's complaints, press secretary Jody Powell said Carter does not intend to "be held hostage or immobilized" by the crisis, and will continue to pursue his political campaign from the White House.

Asked how much time Carter is spending on politics, Powell said: "I don't generally ask the president for a time card."

Kennedy was critical of former California Gov. Ronald Reagan's call for permanent U.S. asylum for the exiled monarch, and asked: "Why is Mr. Reagan, when he calls for granting permanent asylum ... interpreted as supporting the president?"

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

WITH COTTON MOVEMENT QUICKENING on the High Plains, meetings are being planned with officials of key cotton organizations and heads of railroads in Texas to attempt to alleviate potential congestion problems.

One meeting was held Friday in Fort Worth. Attending were officials of the Fort Worth & Denver Railroad Co. and executives of the American Cotton Shippers Association, the Cotton Warehouse Association of America, several domestic textile mills and the National Cotton Council.

Cotton and railroad officials discussed the need to have an ample number of rail cars and other equipment available to ship cotton to domestic mills and for export.

Information from an ACSA survey was presented on how much cotton merchants have committed for shipment during specific months of the season. This was intended to help railroads to schedule the necessary equipment in moving cotton more efficiently.

COTTON SHIPPERS ARE EXPLORING other possible arrangements in moving cotton this season, such as substituting containers for rail cars when supplies are short and shipping cotton piggyback in containers with wheels on flatcars.

The Plains Cotton Cooperative Association, based in Lubbock, is arranging for the first time with a domestic steamship line to load cotton into boxcars at interior points and ship directly to West Coast ports. The cotton then would be reloaded into containers and shipped to the final destination.

Transportation manager Bob Nuffer of the PCCA said the plan would eliminate delays in trucking cotton to Gulf ports and then by rail over the mini-land bridge network to the West Coast.

Sources reported early this week that rail car supplies were tightening in the Delta and continuing to cause more serious problems in South Texas. However, an ample supply of trucks in both locations was reported relieving much of the pressure.

A Gulf compress at Corpus Christi was beginning to catch up on backlogged orders with the help of another press now in operation and about 40 newly hired people. The compress, which formerly was six to eight weeks behind on shipping orders, was still about four weeks behind.

COTTON PRODUCTION IN THE SOVIET UNION this year will be a new record at more than 9 million metric tons of seed cotton, according to a recent Soviet radio news report.

In reporting this, the U. S. Department of Agriculture's attache in Moscow said, however, that calculations by the agricultural counselor's office show the total crop still is slightly below 9 million tons.

But harvest operations are continuing at a strong pace relative to end-of-harvest daily rates at a comparable period in 1978, he added in a field report. A dry, warm period that extended into late October and early November may have allowed boll development beyond the normal period, the report said.

Some sources now expect the USDA's next estimate of the Soviet crop to be as high as 12.9 million to 13.0 million bales, up from last month's projection of 12.6 million and last year's output of 12.3 million. Others believe the estimate may be raised but will not speculate on the size of the increase.

Soviet ginning yield historically is about 0.316 metric ton of lint per metric ton of seed cotton, a USDA source said. One metric ton of cotton lint is the equivalent of about 4.59 480-pound net weight bales.

PRESIDENT CARTER SHORTLY WILL SEND the Senate the nomination of Hugh Cadden to the fifth seat on the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, a White House source said this week.

However, a spokesman for the Senate Agriculture Committee, which must approve the nomination, said there has been no change in the panel's stance against Cadden.

Cadden has not withdrawn his name from the nomination, the White House source said. Nor is the president considering Susan Phillips, an economist at Iowa State University, for the job, he added.

IN SEPTEMBER, 15 MEMBERS OF THE Senate Ag Committee signed a letter to Carter saying they would not vote for Cadden. Only two members, chairman Herman Talmadge, D-Ga., and Sen. George McGovern, D-S. D., did not sign the letter.

They told Carter it was important to have a fifth commissioner who understands agricultural production and marketing. This also is the position of the Grain Sorghum Producers Association, based in Lubbock, and other agricultural groups.

Cadden, an attorney, worked briefly for CFTC chairman James Stone after resigning his post as director of the commission's trading and market division. He has since left the CFTC.

The Senate panel said his close association with the CFTC and Stone would preclude his exercising independent judgment.

COTTON FUTURES SURGED TO THE session's highs on late trade buying Friday to close with 127 to 102-point gains in nearbys.

Floor brokers said local short covering before the weekend added to market strength as spot March finished up 118 points at 70.70 and May ended up 127 points at 72.22. July closed up 102 points at 73.40.

The market gapped higher on the opening following release of a big export commitments report after the close Thursday. Estimated volume Friday was 8,250 lots.

Trading on Telcot totaled 16,341 bales on an average price of 54.01 and an average over the loan of 953 points.

'Bottlenecks' Slowing World Grain Exports

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bottlenecks in the United States are slowing grain exports which the world needs to buy and American farmers need to sell, Congress has been told.

Spokesmen for farm, railroad and barge groups disagreed on chances that U.S. exporters wil fail to meet rapidly rising grain needs of the Soviet Union and other nations this year.

And they also named different causes of transit problems — railroaders blaming government regulation, a barge man pleading for faster work on a new lock and dam to clear up major Midwest river delays.

But they all agreed there are significant problems in getting American grain to ports for shipment.

"The bounty of the world's most efficient food producer, the American farmer, is limited in feeding the world's hungry" and in helping the nation's international financial standing, said Richard Wilson, head of Agri-Trans Corp., a cooperative barge line.

Wilson testified before two Senate Agriculture subcommittees which are looking into farm transportation problems, particularly in light of rising export demands.

American farmers are easily meeting those demands, said Sen. Thad Cochran, R-Miss., but "it does no good to produce an abundant crop if the commodities remain bottlenecked in our transportation system."

Farm exports are expected to increase 18 million metric tons to a total of 130 million in the 1979-80 year — as much as 25 million of that for the Soviet Union.

Donald Frederick of the National Council of Farmer Cooperatives told the subcommittees, "We believe that the country will somehow get the grain sold to the Soviet Union."

He added, however, that Congress should do what it can to speed completion of new facilities at Locks and Dam 26 near Alton, Ill., and make sure covered-hopper rail cars are distributed for efficient use and arrange in advance for food-carrying vehicles to obtain fuel in any oil-supply emergency.

Wilson said barges, which face long river delays, now carry a heavy share of U.S. grain to New Orleans and other ports for export, and he said he was "not as optimistic" as Frederick that demands can be met this year.

Richard Briggs of the Association of American Railroads said rail lines could haul all the freight needed if federal regulations would be lifted or eased enough to end what he called unfair competitive advantages given trucks and barges.

However, Wilson said there are "areas where we cannot get the trucks or where rail service is very unsatisfactory."

Concerning efforts to meet new export demands, he said, "perhaps the job can get done but I think there's a great deal of uncertainty."

Energy Director Warns Against Price Gouging

BOSTON (AP) — The director of the state Office of Energy Resources has warned against price gouging by retail heating oil dealers in Massachusetts.

Energy Director Joseph S. Fitzpatrick said in a recent interview that if weekly surveys of supplies and prices showed evidence of unreasonable markups, his office might call in the U.S. attorney or federal Department of Energy.

Wheat Producers Approve Resolutions

AMARILLO — A lengthy list of resolutions dealing with issues ranging from wheat set-asides, grain reserves and payment limitations to transporation problems were considered and approved by members of the Texas Wheat Producers Associatin during a membership meeting at the Hilton Inn here recently.

Resolutions committee chairman Davie Key presented a report from his group, which also included Jim Dixon, John Studer and Randy Kirk.

Most of the resolutions dealt with regulations governing actual domestic production of wheat or in areas involving wheat exports.

A number of legislative and administrative changes to the Food and Agriculture Act of 1977 were proposed, including the setting of national average cost of production figures including land cost, to be computed annually for the target price.

Under the proposals, the TWPA also called for the price support loan rate to be set at 80 percent of the target price; the loan maturity period be continued in the present program but at 11 months from origin; storage cost for wheat under reseal in commercial facilities be paid by goverment at actual commercial rates; that no wheat reserves be maintained by the government other than the farmer-owned grain reserve; substantial increases should be made in current release and call target prices and that in the event of a call on any grain in the reserve, farmers should be allowed at least 120 days for dispensation of the grain; that set-aside not be left to the discretion of the secretary of agriculture but be based on a scale related to carryover wheat stocks; payment limitations be removed; planted acres of wheat be considered as harvested acres if grazed or hayed; comparable set-asides be required in other grains when called for in wheat; a non-grazing period be set by each county Agricutural Stabilization and Conservation Service committee; disaster payments be maintained and extended through 1981; and that in the event of no set-aside, a farmer should not exceed his normal crop acreage as set by the ASCS.

In other policy proposals, the TWPA expressed opposition to any move to abolish or separate any of the programs of the U.S. Department of Agriculture and urged the fullest use of the ASCS under the leadership of farmer-elected county committeemen in implementing and administering programs.

Other resolutions called for the highest priority for agricultural uses of fuel, fertilizer and chemical allocations.

More timely mowing of the full width of right-of-ways was called for from the Texas Highway Department to facilitate control of weeds.

The TWPA also called for expanded use of Public Law 480 food aid programs, expressed its support for the Wheat and Wheat Foods Foundation, and expressed support for the negotiation of an international wheat agreement that will "contribute to the expansion and liberalization of trade and to the stability of the international market for wheat at reasonable prices that provide a fair return to producers."

Another resolution called for maximized use of alternative energy sources in agriculture, including reasearch, production and use regarding gasohol, solar and wind power.

The association urged granting "Most Favored Nation" status to Russia and China and commended the secretary of agriculture for raising limits on the amount of wheat and feed grains that could be purchased by the Russians.

Support for the Senate Agriculture Committee's continuing inquiry into foreign ownership of U.S. agricultural land and the requirement for all existing and future foreign owners of American agriculture land to report their holdings also was indicated.

The TWPA expressed opposition to "any action that interferes with international exporting of wheat," and urged that information on sales be used only for monitoring market activity. "We vigorously oppose grain export interference by strikes, embargoes or other related actions," the association said.

Members also voted on resolutions concerning federal grain standards, U.S. cargo preferences, European community export subsidy, coalition of exporting nations, rail transporation and enforcement of state highway truck weight regulations in a uniform manner.

The TWPA expressed its opposition to granting powers of emminent domain to coal slurry pipelines and to "any land planning schemes."

The association commended the actions of Rep. Jack Hightower concerning legislation seeking cost disclosure on bread wrappers, and endorsed a minimum five-year average proving period including the most recent year of production and the preceding four years for proven yields.

In a final resolution, the TWPA called for farm program provision announcements at an early date.

Cattle Futures Close 75 Points Lower To 70 Higher

By Reuters

CHICAGO — Cattle futures closed 75 points lower to 70 higher in heavy trade of 36,720 cars Friday on the Chicago Mercantile Exchange. February was off the most with August the highest. The market fell 125 to the lowest since September and gained 95 in erratic trade.

The nearby gained on discount under cash after slipping to 64.95 for a time. Much of the activity seemed to be evening up ahead of the week end and uncertainty over the confusing situation in Iran.

Deliveries total 940 thus far. Wholesale beef was unchanged at 104½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river points. Cash cattle were steady to up 50 cents with the best top $69 per hundredweight at Illinois Direct. Slaughter was 119,000 head. About 15,800 head are expected on Monday at the major terminals.

Feeder cattle futures closed 30 to 120 lower led by September at the day's low. Volume was 3,210 lots. The market fell to the lowest in more than one month after a brief early gain of 75 ran into resistance.

The setback followed a reaction in live cattle futures and also stemmed from increased feeder cattle arrivals. Scale down buying was prompted by steady cash trade and firmness in beef.

Cash feeder cattle were steady with the best top $86 per hundredweight at St. Paul. About 1,200 head are expected on Monday at the major markets.

Hog futures closed 97 higher to 35 lower on 8,005 contracts. December was up the most at the day's high with only distant February lower. Prices slipped 62 to the lowest in more than one month before rebounding.

The nearby rose on covering ahead of Monday's delivery day with five cars tendered. The contract fell under cash after holding a premium recently. The improved tone to cash hams and loins sparked late support.

Wholesale hams were unchanged at 80 to 98 cents a pound, f.o.b. river. Cash hogs were up $1.25 to off $1 with the best top $42 per hundredweight at Indianapolis which is the highest since August. Kill was 368,000 head. Receipts at the major markets on Monday are expected to total 36,500 head.

Pork belly (bacon) futures closed 105 to 145 higher with May in the lead after February rose 167. Sales totaled 9,201 cars. The market fell 70 to five-week lows before rebounding in aggressive local short covering.

Stops touched off on the scale up fed the advance. Traders were watching events in Iran. Strength in cash hogs was also cited and tended to offset weakness in cash bellies and active belly storings locally as kill continues heavy.

Wholesale bacon was off 1 to 2 at 29 to 38½ cents a pound, f.o.b. river.

Report Says Minority Workers Not Cheated

WASHINGTON (A) — Blacks and other minority workers are not cheated by Social Security even though they are less likely to live long enough to draw retirement benefits, a report said Friday.

The Advisory Council on Social Security said that although a disproportionate number of minority workers do not live beyond middle age, they are more likely to have surviving spouses and children who collect Social Security survivor benefits.

Black workers are far more likely to draw disability benefits, the independent review panel also said, and the system's tilt in favor of low-income workers also helps minorities.

Blacks constitute 11.6 percent of the U.S. population, 10.3 percent of all Social Security beneficiaries and 7.8 percent of retired workers.

Grain Futures

CHICAGO (AP) — Grain and soybean futures were mixed in quiet trading Friday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Prices for wheat for delivery during the next few months were strongest with gains of 4¾ to 5 cents a bushel.

Prices for soybean products were generally ower because of adequate cash supplies. Processors have crushed record or near-record quantties of soybeans into soyean oil and meal during the last several weeks, leading to adequate supplies and declining cash prices for soybean oil.

At the lose, soybeans were ½ cent ower to 1½ ents highr, January $6.59½, wheat was ½ cent lower to 5 cents higher, December $4.19¼; corn was ¼ to ¾ cent higher, December $2.68¼; and oats were ½ cent lower to ½ cent higher, December $1.41¼.

ELBOW ROOM— Seagraves running back Ronnie Griffin moves through a gaping hole in the New Deal defense during Class A quarterfinal action Friday night at Lowrey Field. Lion Todd Holly gives chase. The Eagles, led by Griffin's 99 yards rushing, edged the bigger Giants on penetrations to advance to next weekend's semifinal game with China Spring. Eagles, Lions Tie; Drives Decide Tilt

By RUSS PARSONS
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

If, as the old saw goes, a tie is like kissing your sister, Seagraves must come from an awfully attractive family. New Deal, on the other hand, well...

The Eagles and the Lions battled to a 10-10 deadlock Friday night at Lowrey Field, but Seagraves took the quarterfinal victory and a berth in the Class A semifinals on the basis of penetrations, inside an opponent's 20 yard line, 5-2.

The Eagles will face China Spring, a 20-6 winner over Pilot Point, next weekend at a site and time as yet undetermined. The game will probably be played in Abilene.

The quarterfinal game pitted New Deal's huge size advantage and Seagraves' quickness and playoff experience and the result was about as close as could be expected.

The teams were about even in total yardage. New Deal gained 238 and Seagraves 232, the average punting distance was exactly the same, 35 yards; Seagraves turned the ball over only one time more than the Lions but got three more first downs.

And, in the final outcome, all those factors played a vital part, one way or another, in the decision.

Both teams could only put together one sustained drive in the first half. The difference was, New Deal had to settle for a field goal after a 13-play, 64-yard march while Seagraves got a touchdown on a seven-play, 55-yard campaign. The Eagles also added a field goal following a fumble recovery.

New Deal struck first, scoring the field goal on its first possession of the game. Quarterback Ricky Smith rolled 23 yards for a first down on third and nine to get it started, made a perfect pitch to Tony Howell to convert another long-yardage down, and then picked up 15 yards on a quarterback sneak to give the Lions a penetration and a first down just inside the Seagraves 20.

Fullback L.K. Bradley gained 11 yards from there but the drive bogged down after that and the Lions had to settle for a 25-yard field goal by Martin Adams.

The teams then exchanged punts, Seagraves picking up six yards on the swap. That was all the Eagles needed as the offense suddenly caught fire, picking up solid yardage on almost every play.

Four plays carried the ball from the Eagle 45 to a first down at the Lion 28. Halfback Ronnie Griffin swept to the 12 for a penetration and then quarterback Dale Welch followed a Ted Ward block on a bootleg into the end zone.

Davis Morgan made the extra point, and with just under a minute gone in the second period, Seagraves led 7-3.

That was when New Deal made its first big mistake. On the first play after the ensuing kickoff, Howell carried into the line and was belted hard and lost the ball. Seagraves' Richard Wilson caught the fumble on the fly and returned it to the Lion 14 for another penetration.

Three plays gained only four yards and, on a fourth down from the 10, Morgan booted home a 26-yard field goal, putting Seagraves up 10-3.

New Deal made another big mistake minutes later.

The Lions recovered a Griffin fumble at the Seagraves 36 and drove to a first down at the 24 before faltering. Bradley gained three to the 21, but a five-yard intentional grounding call and two incomplete passes stopped New Deal without a penetration.

The Lions got a break going their way in the third period and converted it into a touchdown.

After a Seagraves punt had pinned New Deal deep in its own territory,

For the Estacdo Matadors, the games just get bigger every week. And today, in Abilene's Shotwell Stadium, the Mats have another big, big contest in store.

Kickoff is slated for 2:30 this afternoon as the Mats face the McKinney Lions in Class AAA semifinal action.

Right now Estacado is one of only four teams remaining of the state's 150-odd Class AAA schools. But that's not enough — Estacado coaches and fans have made it clear that second-best just isn't good enough this year.

The Matadors, you see, got exactly this far last year before being eliminated. So it's natural to figure that if you aren't getting better — you're getting worse.

"We have this little saying," explained center Leonard Chatham, "state is fine in '79."

But standing between the Matadors and a trip to the state championship are those growling McKinney Lions. The Lions didn't have the kind of year that the Matadors did in that they've had to scrap and struggle just to get this far.

The Lions lost three early games and then lost another in District 6-AAA competition before sneaking into the playoffs with a 9-4 record.

The Mats, on the other hand, rolled through District 1-AAA competition like a steamroller through a cotton patch. Estacado's average margin of victory in loop play was 25.4 points. No one ever came closer than 20 points of the Mats as they rolled up an 11-1 record. Only a 7-0 loss to Monterey blemished that record.

In 12 games thus far, the Matadors have scored 287 points while yielding only 57. But none of that means anything if the Matadors can't win this one. Nobody knows that better than Estacado coach Louis Kelley.

"Just checking the film on McKinney," Kelley said, "it's apparent that they've got a very good football team. They're just now reaching their peak — it's a whole new season for them."

So how does Kelley rate the game?

"It's a toss-up," he says. "They're a good outfit. It's going to be a head-knocker — but we're going to take the fight to 'em."

Last year the Matadors were buried in the semifinal game by Gainesville — a team that the Lions whipped 16-7 in district play. Kelley doesn't think that'll happen again.

"There's been no comparison between our workouts this week and the kind of practice we had at this same time last year," he said. "This is the biggest game we've played and we've worked hard to get here.

"Maybe last year, this was as far as we wanted to go," he added. "But we've been talking about this game since two-a-days started. We'll be fired up."

But the McKinney Lions should be just as ready to play as those Matadors.

"I feel like it says something about our kids character and determination," said McKinney coach Ron Poe, "the way we were able to turn this season around. We were hurt by injuries early in the year but we've got everybody back now."

Tech Puts Perfect Mark Up Against CSU, AFA

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Even Gerald Myers, often his own worst critic, will admit that the Red Raider basketball team is off and flying to one of its fastest starts in recent memory.

The Raiders are 3-0 on the year and averaging 97.3 points a game — the highest point production in Tech history. But so far, the Raider cagers have done all their soaring at home in the friendly confines of the Municipal Coliseum.

The Raiders travel to the mountains of Colorado this weekend and tonight Myers will get to see how they fare in these higher altitudes — far removed from the South Plains of Texas.

Tonight the Raiders face the Colorado State Rams in Fort Collins at Moby Gym. Tipoff is set for 8:35 (Lubbock time) and the action will be brought back to Lubbock on KFYO radio.

On Monday, the Raiders will tangle with the Air Force Academy at 8:45 p.m. in Colorado Springs before Tech returns home.

The Rams of CSU are 1-3 thus far but have faced considerably tougher competition than have the Raiders. CSU opened the season with at home with a 65-55 loss to Purdue and then went on a rugged road trip.

The Rams lost a nip-and-tuck affair 72-65 to Indiana State and then were blown out 113-66 at Iowa State. Thursday the Rams returned home and knocked of the University of Denver 69-61.

Matadors Face McKinney In Class AAA Semifinal

he added. "This is a whole new season for us."

The key to the McKinney attack is the running of tailback Tommy Hargraves. At 5-4, 151, Hargraves is a little bitty runner — but as a three year starter he has proved his durability time and again. This year he led the Lions in rushing with 1,202 yards on 203 carries. The other Lion threat is quarterback Johnny Holley.

Physically, Holley is nothing like Hargraves. The senior quarterback stands 6-4 and tips the scales at 205. He's big and fast and can run as well as throw.

When Holley goes to the air, he's generally looking for little Jamie Harris. The 5-4 senior has snagged 41 catches this year for 673 yards and five touchdowns.

Holley, who completed 50 of 110 attempts this year for 770 yards, also likes to throw to his twin brother Ronny Holley (also 6-4, 205). He's caught 15 passes for 155 yards and four TDs this year.

Like the Matadors, the Lions operate offensively out of a straight I-formation although they will occasionally go into a pro set.

Defensively, the Lions line up in a five man front that's keyed by noseguard Ronnie Self. Self leads the Lions in tackles with 96 and has 36 assists. Linebacker Kyle Horton is another defensive cog — he's had 71 tackles and 20 assists on the year.

But the Lion defenders are going to have their hands full with the Matador attack. Kelvin White seems to run better from his tailback slot every game. Against Lake View last week he broke open a tight 7-7 ballgame with a 53-yard touchdown juant.

White has gained over 100 yards in both the Mats' bi-district and regional contests and he has also scored three of the Mats four TDs since the regular season ended — although he's only been carrying the ball 15-16 times a game.

"He's the kind of back that you just need to keep running and running," said Kelley of White. "And we've also got (fullback) Alvin Davis who can run up the middle for us."

But the Lions are more concerned about stopping the Matador outside attack — which has been Estacado's bread and butter all year.

"That's the key," says Poe: "to stop that tailback sweep."

"I don't believe they can stop 'em both (White wide and Davis up the middle)," countered Kelley.

"But the key to this game," said Kelley, "is to just play well. You can't expect to play mediocre at this stage of the season."

And when the game gets close — as it did against Odessa Ector in the bi-district game and Lake View in the regionals — the Matador playoff experience just may carry them though.

"Right now we're ready," said tight end James Rose. "We've been there before — nothing's going to stop us now."

Red Raiders Meet CSU Rams On Road

That victory over Denver was No. 472 for CSU head coach Jim Williams — who ranks with the all-time leaders among active coaches today. In 25 seasons at CSU Williams owns a 343-279 record.

The Rams were 11-16 last year and wound up sixth in the Western Athletic Conference (WAC). But they return eight lettermen from last team's squad and one of the biggest players in the country in 7-2 center Mark Jung.

Jung, however, has been bothered by a virile infection and has averaged only 10 minutes of playing time a game thus far. Nonetheless, Tech's Myers has an abundance of respect for Williams and the Rams.

"We can't afford to get the big-head," he said after the Raiders crushed North Texas 103-68 Wednesday night. "We've got a rough road trip ahead. We've still got a lot of things to work on."

Scoring though, isn't one of those things. Three Raiders are averaging in double figures for Tech right now and three more are just below that mark. Sophomores David Little and Jeff Taylor lead the team — Little with 20.3 points per game and Taylor with 19.0.

Both figure to start tonight as does center Ralph Brewster who's averaging 13 points an outing. The other starters are forward Ben Hill (9.5 ppg) and quarterback Kent Williams (8.3 ppg). Sixth man Thad Sanders (9.0 ppg) has been playing almost 10 minutes a game.

Williams, who was Tech's leading scorer last year, has devoted his energies this year to quarterbacking the club and rarely shooting. In three games, the 6-5 senior from Hobbs, N.M. has attempted only 15 shots — making good on 10 of those. And the Raiders are shooting well as a team, hitting 59 percent from the field.

Keying the Ram attack is 6-5 senior forward Barry Young, who's averaged 13.5 points a game thus far. Others in double figures for CSU are guard Eddie Hughs (12.0 ppg) and post man Ken Williamson (11.5 ppg).

The other Ram starters are 6-8 forward Rudy Watley and 6-3 guard Reggie Talley. Jung should see more action tonight than he has in the Rams previous four starts.

"It's good to get a road trip like this," said Myers. "It gives us a chance to develop a little team unity."

It also gives the Raiders a chance to see if they can continue to fly away from home. Tech defeated CSU 79-67 last year, but that was in Lubbock.

"We always have a tough time up here," admitted Myers.

Eichelberger, Miss Breer Lead Golfers

LARGO, Fla. (AP) — Dave Eichelberger and Murle Breer battled fog and drizzle to pick up 10 strokes Friday and catch the leaders in the second round of the $400,000 Mixed Teams Golf Tournament.

Eichelberger and Breer, who didn't even break par the first day, had a 9-under-par 135 fter two rounds.

"It was a fairly good round of golf I would think," beamed Eichelberger after the duo shot an eagle, eight birdies and a bogey to tie early leaders Jim Colbert and Silvia Bertolaccini.

Colbert-Bertolaccini fired 4-under-par 68 over the gusty, wind-whipped Bardmoor course for a slim 1-stroke lead Thursday. Meanwhile, Eichelberger and Miss Breer, playing their first tournament together, wound up 1-over after that round.

Fifty teams are competing for a $72,000 top prize in the 72-hole four-day event which ends Sunday at the 7,015-yard central Florida course.

Dave Stockton and Donna Capone Young finished the day with a 7-under-par 137 for third place on the par-72 course.

In a two-way tie, 3 strokes back, at 138 were Jerry McGee and Cathy Thompson and Joe Inman and Dot Germain.

Pre-tournament favorites Curtis Strange and Nancy Lopez finished down the pack at 1-under 143; and defendng champions Lon Hinkle and Pat Bradley were even farther down the ladder in a five-way tie at 1-over-par 145.

"I wasn't really thinking about the score," said Miss Breer, a 12-year-pro from Savannah, Ga., after the duo put together the best game of the tournament wih a stunning 31-31 round to go with a first-round finish of 73.

Barry, Dunleavy Thwart Pistons

By The Associated Press

Houston's Rick Barry scored 20 points including 12 in the first quarter and the Rockets broke away from a slim fourth-quarter lead to a 124-109 victory over Detroit Friday night.

The Rockets hit 70 percent of their shots from the field in the first quarter as Barry led the Rockets to a 34-24 edge at the end of the period and the Rockets never lost their lead.

Guard Mike Dunleavy came off the bench to score 16 points and add a career-high 16 assists.

Dunleavy helped the Rockets control the tempo in the fourth quarter when Houston built on an 89-83 lead going into the final period.

The Pistons were led by John Long with 18 points and Bob Lanier with 17.

Houston's Rudy Tomjanovich scored 14 points in his first appearance since coming off the injury list.

The Rockets led 65-59 at the half.

Spurs 117, Bucks 105

Larry Kenon poured in all but seven of his 30 points in the second half Friday and George Gervin had 39, rallying San Antonio to a 117-105 victory over the Milwaukee Bucks.

The Spurs came from a 14-point third-quarter deficit and held the Bucks scoreless for seven minutes in the final quarter to break a three-game losing streak.

Marques Johnson led Milwaukee with 28 points.

Brian Winters and Junior Bridgeman provided four points apiece as the Bucks outscored the Spurs 14-4 to lead 71-57 with 5:08 left in the third period.

But Kenon put in 12 points the rest of the period as the Spurs cut the lead to 83-77 going into the final 12 minutes.

A basket on an offensive rebound and a jump shot by ex-Buck Kevin Restani pulled the Spurs to an 87-87 tie with 8:47 to play. They took the lead to stay on a jumper by Kenon at 93-91 with 6:36 left.

Bucks coach Don Nelson was charged with a second technical foul and was ejected for protesting a call with 3:48 left.

Mike Gale sank the free throw on the technical to give the Spurs a 104-93 lead while Nelson clasped his throat in a choke sign to referee Mike Mathis befoe stalking off the court.

Penetrations Decide Eagles-Lions Game

Smith, looking only for a first down on a third-and-three bootleg, reversed his field and outran his pursuit 85 yards for a TD. Adams made a key block on the play, erasing the last man who had a shot at stopping Smith at about the 20.

Adams' kick tied the game at 10-10 and the touchdown tied the penetrations at 2-2, setting the stage for the climactic finish.

For all intents and purposes, that game quickly. Starting at their own 29 after the ensuing kickoff, Seagraves marched steadily upfield. Five plays moved the ball to the Seagraves 45 where, needing 15 yards for a first down, quarterback Welch scrambled for 16 behind a key block by Alfredo Serna.

Two plays later, fullback Morgan made another first down by just inches at the New Deal 29 and then carried for six yards to the 23. Johnny Castro picked up a first down and the tie-breaking penetration on a six-yard run to the 17, but on the next play Welch fumbled and New Deal's Jim McIntire recovered.

That's where Seagraves' tenacious defense and a fortunate punting game came into play. The Lions only got the ball four more times in the remaining 14 minutes and only once did they start outside their own 25. Also, the Lions only picked up three more first downs.

Lions' quarterback Smith was the game's leading rusher, gaining 133 yards on 14 carries, including the 85-yard touchdown run. Griffin led Seagraves with 99 yards on 17 tries and Morgan added 60 on 16.

Holtz, Hogs Work Hard

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. (UPI) — Arkansas went through a hard-hitting practice on fundamentals Friday to begin preparations for its Sugar Bowl game against No. 1 Alabama.

"We had to get better and we really did," Razorback coach Lou Holtz said. "It's a question of whether we will be better tomorrow. We had a really good practice. Our attention span was good and we did good things."

Holtz praised defensive tackles Danny Phillips and Billy Ray Smith and linebacker Mike Massey. Defensive linemen Alfred Mohammed and Jim Elliott were hampered by knee injuries and offensive guard Chuck Herman had a twisted ankle. Defensive end Jim Howard was slowed by an injured calf muscle.

"The players seemed really happy," Holtz said. "I don't think they know who we're playing. I think they miss football and the contact and all of the hollering. They felt they got better today."

Holtz said the Razorbacks will have two more days of fundamental work before concentrating on Alabama. He said secondary coach Bob Cope would assume the defensive coordinator duties that had been handled by Monte Kiffin, who was named head coach at North Carolina State.

AUSTIN (AP) —Undefeated Texas raised its record to 3-0 Friday night — its best start since 1970 — as it defeated Vermont, 90-71, with seniors Ron Baxter and John Danks combining for 43 points.

The intersectional basketball game was the first ever played between Texas and Vermont, which fell to 1-2 with the loss.

Another freshman, 6-10 LaSalle Thompson, scored 15 points for Texas but he also sat out much of the game as he picked up his fourth foul with 13:49 left.

Jeff Brown, a 6-3 sophomore, led Vermont with 21 points.

Four Texas players each had three fouls at halftime, and the Longhorns played much of the second period without a ball-handling guard to work against the Vermont press.

Baxter missed his first free throw of the season after hitting 16 consecutive charity tosses.

Lobos Add Football Players, Trainer To Roster

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — New Mexico, rocked by a probe that left most of its basketball team ineligible, will suit up four remaining team members, two football players and perhaps a student trainer for tonight's game against New Mexico State.

But coach Charlie Harrison, an assistant who took over the head job last week when Norm Ellenberger was suspended, says his makeshift squad is out to beat its arch-rival.

"We're going down to win, not just play a game" Harrison said. "We'll try to stay as close as we can through the game and hope we have a chance to come on and win it at the end."

Athletic Director John Bridgers said Thursday night that five players, including three starters, were ineligible and that another had been suspended temporarily while officials try and determine whether he was eligible to play. A sixth player, Craig Gilbert, was declared ineligible last week.

That leaves Harrison with Jim Williams, Kenny Page, Everette Jefferson and Michael Johnson as the only players available who started the season with the Lobos.

He picked up two football players to augment the roster, freshmen Keith Magee and Derwin Williams.

"And we perhaps have another kid who has been an athletic trainer," Harrison said. "I can't recall his name, but he's been around for two years. He knows what's going on.

"He came in and said that if we needed a body he'd be glad to fill in for a while."

Bridgers said a check of records revealed that Larry Belin, a 6-foot-8 center who was the team's top returning scorer, and four other players — Paul Roby, Andre Logan, Larry Hubbard and Larry Tarrance — had been given credit for a course they were never enrolled in. Without the credits, they are ineligible.

The tallest player remaining on the roster is Jim Williams, a co-captain along with Logan, who is 6-7.

Harrison said Jefferson has played forward in the past. Page and Johnson are guards.

"We've contacted several people who will walk on later," Harrison said. "I'd rather go with what we've out — people who have been associated with us for a while. We'll try to fill some holes Monday so we'll have enough people to practice."

Harrison said the situtions may be improving for the four players who were not dropped from the team.

"I think they're OK. They have to be hurting inside because their friends are not with them," Harrison said. "They have to be confused. We lived for quite a while with uncertainty. At least now they know what is going on. "You just have to go with what you've got. You're faced with poblems a lot of times in life — and this is one of those times."

Harrison said the Aggies, 2-0, are a good team, as are most of New Mexico's opponents for the rest of the season.

"But I think we can compete with the four kids we have left and Magee, who is a very good basketball player who just has to learn what he's doing," he said. "We can compete if we play hard and play with intelligence."

Harrison said he will make some adjustments in New Mexico's run-and-gun style, but won't go to a real slowdown against the Aggies.

"You have to keep some offensive pressure on them," he said. "You can't just walk it up the floor."

Harrison, who has spent eight years as a college assistant and as director of player personnel for the Buffalo Braves of the National Basketball Association, said he didn't feel any extra pressure.

"That would be a copout," he said. "I was hired to do a job. Nobody told me these circumstances would come up but I'm going to continue to do a job."

The investigation of the Lobos' players declared ineligible Thursday began after the FBI filed a transcript of a tape-recorded telephone conversation in which Ellenberger and Goldstein discussed Gilbert's transcript in U.S. District Court.

Backboard Breakers Subject To Suspension

NEW YORK (AP) — Commissioner Larry O'Brien of the National Basketball Association, acting in response to "an extremely serious problem calling for immediate action," announced Friday that any player who causes the breaking or shattering of a basket or backbard will be subject to a fine and suspension.

O'Brien's action came following a 90-minute meeting with Darryl Dawkins, the muscular center of the Philadelphia 76ers who has brought down a pair of backboards within the past month. Also attending the meeting were Billy Cunningham and Pat Williams, the coach and general manager, respectively, of the 76ers.

No punitive action was taken against Dawkins or the 76ers, despite the fact that the commissioner has warned the 6-foot-11, 252-pound pivotman against a repeat of the backbard breaking incident that took place in Kansas City on Nov. 13. Dawkins also broke a backboard with a dunk in Philadelphia Wednesday night.

"Dawkins' position is that both incidents were unintentional," said O'Brien. "So be it. But I was deeply concerned about taking a responsible action to bring about a close to these incidents before someone gets hurt."

In his memo to NBA owners and general managers, O'Brien said he was "satisfied that the dunk shot can continue to be an exciting part of our game without endangering the safety of players, referees and fans." He then outlined a punitive procedure for dealing with future incidents.

"The rule against hanging on the rim, calling for a technical foul and $100 fine, will be applied to any player whose contact with the rim and-or backboard causes the backboard to shatter," O'Brien said.

"Any player who does cause a backboard to shatter in the manner described above with be ejected immediately from the game and, absent the most extenuating circumstances, be automatically suspended without pay for at least the next regularly scheduled game."

Dawkins, meanwhile, maintained that he had not hung on the rim in either incident and said he could live with O'Brien's action.

Pat Dye Accepts Position As Wyoming Head Coach

LARAMIE, Wyo. (AP) — Pledging to make football fun again at the University of Wyoming, Pat Dye took over as head Cowboy football coach Friday.

The former East Carolina University coach's appointment was announced Friday afternoon by UW President Edward Jennings, ending days of speculation Dye would become Wyoming's 23rd footbal coach.

The former Georgia All-America lineman and Alabama assistant coach called the Wyoming coaching job a "a tremendous opportunity and challenge" and said he is looking forward to competing for the Western Athletic Conference championship.

Dye, 40, replaces Bill Lewis, who agreed to step own after Wyoming's last loss of the season and become an alumni relations specialist.

The Cowboys managed a second-place finish in the WAC last year but were 13-21-1 under Lewis' three years as head coach and slumped to a 4-8 record this year and a seventh-place conference finish. Attendence slumped too and was a factor in the decision to hire a new head coach.

"We hope to build a program that the people will be proud to support," Dye said at a news conference.

Eagles, Cowboys Ready For Key Contest

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — When Coach Dick Vermeil arrived four years ago with the unenviable task of making the Philadelphia Eagles winners, he didn't forget his roots.

Vermeil brought his most valued assistants from UCLA and initiated the building of a spirit more akin to a college campus than a professional organization.

And UCLA grads kept popping up with Eagles' wings on their helmets — linebacker Terry Tautolo, wide receiver Wally Henry, safety John Sciarra, and linebacker Jerry Robinson. All possessed the willingness to sacrifice and work that Vermeil wanted.

The Eagles never became UCLA East, but they have gone from a 4-10 record in Vermeil's first season to become a contender in the National Football Conference's Eastern Division.

In fact, having already become the only NFL team guaranteed a playoff berth, the Eagles, 10-4, could clinch the division title here today against the Dallas Cowboys, 9-5, in a nationally televised game.

"I'm really excited about it," Vermeil said. "I feel pretty much like I did prior to the Rose Bowl (when his UCLA team upset top-ranked Ohio State in 1976).

"I feel we're capable of winning, but I know it's going to take one heck of a performance. The big thing is to execute big plays and create mistakes like we did down there," said Vermeil, referring to the Eagles' 31-21 upset in Dallas last month.

In breaking a three-game losing streak and winning their first game in Texas Stadium since 1965, Philadelphia turned three Dallas turnovers into 17points.

"We can't make mistakes like we did the first time," said Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, the NFL's leading passer. "Turnovers really hurt us."

"I think we've been paying well the last two games," said coach Tom Landry after the Cowboys broke their own three-game losing streak with a 28-7 victory over the New York Giants last Sunday. "The specialty teams didn't have the penalties they've had in the past. The offense didn't give the ball up on fumbles or interceptions.

"There isn't any question that we're going into a tough situation. We're one game behind (in the division, tied with Washington) and we're going into their home field," Landry said.

Landry said that wide receiver Drew Pearson, sixth in the conference in receptions and second in total yards, and defensive end John Dutton are both questionable with bad knees.

Pearson injured his left knee against the Giants after catching the second of three touchdown passes when he threw the football into the stands and landed off balance.

On the Cowboys' bright side, defensive tackle Randy White appears completely recovered from a sprained foot he suffered against the Eagles.

Philadelphia has replaced free safety Bernard Wilson, who broke his foot in the Eagles 44-7 win over Detroit last Sunday with veteran Deac Sanders, who will back up Sciarra.

In another game today, Denver, 10-4, is at Seattle, 7-7. The Broncos can lose this game and still win the AFC West title by beating San Diego next Monday night. On Sunday, the Chargers face the Saints at New Orleans.

The Broncos have allowed the AFC's fewest points (217), but must contend with the Seahawks high-powered combination of quarterback Jim Zorn and wide receiver Steve Largent. Largent, who has 63 receptions for 1,159 yards and seven touchdowns, needs 11 yards for the highest receiving total of the 1970s. He would surpass the Jets' Wesley Walker's total of last season.

In other games with a bearing on the playoffs, the Chicago Bears are at Green Bay hoping to keep their slim NFC Central Division hopes alive; the Redskins host the Cincinnati Bengals in a key game in Washington's NFC playoff drive; the Rams and Falcons play in Atlanta in agame that could lead to Los Angeles winning the NFC West; Tampa Bay travels to San Francisco for a game with the 49ers that could lock up the NFC Central for the Bucs; New England travels to New York to play the Jets in a game vital to the Patriots' AFC East playoff hopes, and Miami, the AFC East leader, is at Detroit.

In other games, the New York Giants are at St. Louis, Minnesota hosts Buffalo, Kansas City plays the Colts at Baltimore and Cleveland travels to Oakland.

Monday night, Pittsburgh takes on Houston in the Astrodome.

Philly Given Nod Over Dallas

By BRUCE LOWITT
Associated Press Writer

Don't start calling it the Keystone Bowl just yet — but, then, don't ignore the possibility that the Philadelphia Eagles and Pittsburgh Steelers could waltz into the Super Bowl and turn it into a Pennsylvania Polka.

They'll take big steps in that direction in this penultimate weekend of warfare in the National Football League, the Eagles surprising the Dallas Cowboys on Saturday and the Steelers mauling the Houston Oilers on Monday night.

Looking for another upset special? Here's two for the price of one: the New York Giants over St. Louis and San Francisco over Tampa Bay.

Last week's 7-6 mark put the season record at 121-72, .627.

The picks:

PHILADELPHIA 27, DALLAS 24 (today): Despite limiting the Giants to one touchdown, the Cowboys' defense doesn't seem all that impressive anymore. And a less-than-healthy Drew Pearson doesn't help. We think Ron Jaworski has sufficient weaponry at his disposal and the Eagles are flying.

PITTSBURGH 31, HOUSTON 17 (Monday night): Sorry, Earl, but you're not getting you 100 yards this time — and without you to carry the load, Dan Pastorini's going to be in a mess of trouble. The Steelers' attack is really smoking these days.

N.Y. GIANTS 24, ST. LOUIS 13: The reshuffled Cards were hardly impressive against San Francisco's nonexistent defense and the Giants have one of the more punishing ones.

SAN FRANCISCO 21, TAMPA BAY 14: The 49ers can pile up points against anyone, and the Bucs are beginning to doubt themselves.

CHICAGO 28, GREEN BAY 19: Don't count the Bears out just yet. Tampa Bay's no longer a shoo-in and they know it.

SAN DIEGO 41, NEW ORLEANS 20: Had the Chargers won last week, the Saints might have had a chance. But now San Diego is out for blood.

DENVER 21, SEATTLE 17 (today): The Seahawks play fumble-itis better than anyone. Denver specializes in causing turnovers.

WASHINGTON 30, CINCINNATI 24: The Redskins will get an earful from Jack Pardee at halftime once again and will rally once again.

MIAMI 21, DETROIT 16: With Don Strock back on the bench and Don Shula backing Bob Griese again, the Dolphins are title-bound.

NEW ENGLAND 31, N.Y. JETS 17: This victory only delays the inevitable for the the Patriots.

OAKLAND 27, CLEVELAND 24: Ken Stabler vs. Brian Sipe. Whew! This may be the best game of the season.

BALTIMORE 20, KANSAS CITY 18: The best thing is that it's the Colts' last home game.

LOS ANGELES 24, ATLANTA 14: The Falcons, unfortunately, have one more to go.

MINNESOTA 23, BUFFALO 16: The Vikings have the home-ice advantage.

Franklin Revives Scoring Punch

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Rookie kicker Tony Franklin has never booted a field goal for the Philadelphia Eagles.

Tht's only because Franklin doesn't wear boots, preferring to launch his soccer-style kicks with the side of his bare right foot.

And in so doing, Franklin has revived a scoring punch long absent from the National Fotball League team's offense.

Last year, Nick Mike-Mayer conneced on only eight of 17 field goal attempts before suffering a rib injury with four games to go. The Eagles tried no more field goals until only 17 seconds remained in their wildcard playoff game with the Atlanta Falcons.

Punter Mike Michel, pressed into place-kicking duties, attempted a 34-yarder, but his kick was wide right and the Eagles fell 14-13.

The Eagles drafted Franklin, a 5-foot-8, 182-pounder from Texas A&M who holds 18 NCAA kicking records, in the third round of the college football draft last spring. Mike-Mayer is now kicking for the Buffalo Bills.

Franklin's 59-yard field goal with 27 seconds left in the first half of the Eagles' initial encunter against the Dallas Cowboys this season lifted Philadelphia to a 17-7 lead that they never relinquished, giving them their first win in Dallas since 1965 and breaking a three-game losing streak.

The kick was not only instrumental in the Eagles' upset; it was the second longest field goal ever kicked in the National Football League and a club record. But afterwards, Franklin described his effort as "poor," kicking himself for missing two other field goal attempts.

Earlier in the season, Franklin was set to face his old college rival, Russell Erxleben, the former University of Texas kicker the Eagles had drooled over until he was drafted by New Orleans in the first round last spring.

Against the Saints — minus Erxleben, who was injured — Franklin hit field goals of 19, 24, 36 and 44 yards. To celebrate his 23rd birthday, Franklin nailed three out of three attempts to bear primary responsibility in the Eagles' 16-13 win over St. Louis.

Franklin ranks second in scoring in the conference to Washington's Mark Moseley with 92 points, having made 32 of 34 extra points and 20 of 28 field goal attempts. Among the eight misses are efforts from 52, 50, 52 and 55 yards, but he has made field goals from 51, 50 and, of course, 59 yards out.

He has kicked barefoot successfully in Green Bay in November and avoided having his bare toes stepped on so far. He's also made his way through innumerable interviews, all of which seem to dwell on his naked toes.

The barefoot Texan has earned his spurs with the Eagles.

Tigers Dispatch Veteran LeFlore To Montreal

TORONTO (AP) — The Detroit Tigers shipped standout outfielder Ron LeFlore to the Montreal Expos Friday for Dan Schatzeder, a promising young pitcher, as the trading pace quickened on the final day of baseball's annual winter meetings.

The move was the second Friday for the Tigers, who earlier dealt third baseman Aurelio Rodriguez to the San Diego Padres for a player to be named later. This was a deal contingent on Rodriguez's approval since he's a 10-year veteran with the last five on the same team, giving him veto rights.

The LeFlore-Schatzeder deal, however, was the big one of the week long meeting.

Some experts were surprised that either team parted with the players.

LeFlore, who was signed in 1973 out of a state prison in Michigan, batted .300 last season, stole 78 bases and was rated an outstanding oufielder defensively. Two seasons ago he led the American League in base stealing.

Schatzeder, who celebrated his 25th birthday this month, posted a 10-5 record in 1979 for the Expos, who finished second in the National League East. Since he joined organized baseball in 1976 with West Palm Beach of the Florida State League, he's never had a losing season.

Then, why the trade?

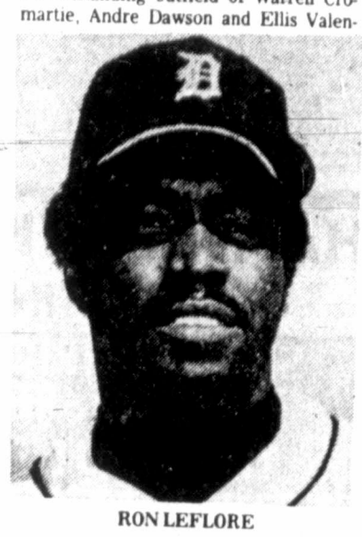
LeFlore will be in the option year of his contract at Detroit next season, and has refused to sign what the Tigers describe as a handsome contract.

"I'd be kidding if I said the contract had no bearing on the deal," said Jim Campbell, general manager of the Tigers. "We tried to sign him this year but he indicated he wasn't interested .... He said that at this time he thought he'd wait."

Campbell said also that the Tigers were in desperate need of a good, young left-handed pitcher.

Campbell added, "We came here looking for a left-handed pitcher and I think he (Schatzeder) is one of the best."

John McHale, president of the Expos, insisted he wasn't concerned about the apparent logjam in the Montreal outfield. Th Expos acquired free agent Rowland Office this week, and already have an outstanding outfield of Warren Cromartie, Andre Dawson and Ellis Valentine.



RON LEFLORE

The obvious move appears to be switching Cromartie to first base, replacing Tony Perez, who played out his option and signed with the Boston Red Sox.

A five-player deal between the Texas Rangers and Atlanta Braves fell through Friday night when the key player, Jeff Burroughs, exercised his contract's no-trade clause and vetoed the move.

A source told The Associated Press that Braves' officials, including General Manager John Mullen and owner Ted Turner, were unable to convince Burroughs to go to Texas along with pitcher Adrian Devine and infielder Pepe Frias.

The Braves were to have received pitcher Doyle Alexander and infielder Larvell Blanks.

In order to consummate the deal, the Braves had to get an okay from Burroughs before midnight Friday, the interleague trading deadline at baseball's annual winter meetings.

The Braves reached Burroughs, the American League's Most Valuable Player in 1974 while playing for Texas, while he was vacationing in Hawaii.

Immediately after learning that the Atlanta deal was out, the Rangers renewed talks with the Philadelphia Phillies, with whom they had been negotiating almost all day Friday.

The Phillies admittedly were seeking reliever Sparky Lyle and were offering such players as pitcher Larry Christenson, reliever Tug McGraw and outfielder Bake McBride. There also was a possibility that Texas utility outfielder John Grubb would be part of the package.

In another trade, the Philadelphia Phillies sent utility infielder Pete Mackanin to the Minnesota Twins for right-handed pitcher Paul Thormodsgard. The pitcher was assigned to the Phillies' Triple A Oklahoma City farm club in the American Association, but will be invited to spring training.

Rodriguez, a fine defensive player, batted .254, with five home runs and 36 runs battd in for the Tigers last season. He has been with the California Angels and the Washington Senators before joining Detroit in 1971.

"He can play for us," said San Diego General Manager Bob Fontaine, citing the Padres' need for a third baseman. "He wants to play regularly and that's what he's coming to talk about. I think we can make him happy."

Palmer May Remain Oriole

BALTIMORE (AP) — A trade that would send veteran pitcher Jim Palmer from Baltimore to another city appears unlikely, Orioles General Manager Hank Peters said Friday.

Peters said he and other Orioles officials at baseball's winter meetings in Toronto had talked with all of the teams on a list of those to which Palmer said he would accept a trade but came up empty.

The Orioles will now probably try to extend Palmer's contract, which has two years remaining at an estimated $260,000 annually.

Palmer, a three-time Cy Young Award winner and named this week as the major leagues' winningest pitcher of the 1970s, has complained that he is paid too little in Baltimore.

While he was always declared untouchable in earlier trading seasons, Palmer was clearly on the block this year. Peters asked for the list of desired cities and talked with at least eight teams about a trade. As a 14-year veteran with the Orioles, Palmer as the right to veto any deal involving him.

"We have talked with every team Jim had said he would be interested in going to and it does not appear likely anything will be happening," Peters said.

"I would think we might now have an interesting dialogue with Jim after our exploratory week (in Toronto)," Peters continued. "We have never discarded the option of extending his contract. But we wanted to see what kind of prosects might be available by trading him.

"So, now we'll go back with Jim and his agent and see where we stand. Because it appears highly unlikely anything is going to happen this week concerning Jim."

NBA's Eddie Gottlieb Dies

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Eddie Gottlieb, a long-time sports figure known as "The Mogul" and "Mr. Basketball," died early Friday at Temple University Hospital. He was 81.

Gottlieb, coach and owner of the old Philadelpia Warriors and a member of he Basketball Hall of Fame, died in his sleep after being hospitalized about four weeks with vascular problems, according to a hospital spokesman.

Since 1965, he had been a consultant to the National Basketball Assocation, which he helped organize in 1946. He served under two commissioners, the late Walter Kennedy and present Commissioner Lawrence F. O'Brien.

A bachelor, Gottlieb was born in New York, but lived most of his life in Philadelphia.

In 1918, he founded the Philaldelphia Sphas — South Philadelphia Hebrew Association — a professional team that competed in the American and Eastern leagues and won 13 championships from the early 1920s to the early 1940s.

Gottlieb coached the 1946-47 Warriors team that beat the Chicago Stags for the first NBA championship. He later became general manager of the Warriors and team owner in 1952.

In 1962, Gottlieb sold the franchise to a group in San Francisco. The team became the San Francisco Warriors, now known as the Golden State Warriors.

He remained a member of the NBA Competition and Rules Committee. Starting in 1946, he made up the league schedules until this season when he had the help of a computer.

He was a long-time promoter of black professional baseball before black players entered the major leagues.

Soviet Gymnast Edges Thomas For All- Around

FORT WORTH (AP) — The Soviet Union's muscular Alexandre Ditiatin powered his way to the all-around gold medal in the 20th World Gymnastics Championships Friday night despite a determined and spectacular effort by America' Kurt Thomas.

Ditiatin, who was third last year, succeeded fading 27-year-old star Nikolai Andrianov, who performed poorly in the compulsories early in the week.

For the 23-year-old Thomas, a graduate of Indiana State, he earned his first medal.

Ditiatin was consistent but unspectacular in the optional events as he earned 9.9s on the horizontal bar, the floor and rings.

"There is no doubt Ditiatin won," said Thomas. "He had a great night and was very consistent. I'm pleased with my performance."

Ditiatin scored 108.35 points to Thomas' 108.125.

The Americans protested a 9.725 given to Thomas in the rings and it was raised to 9.8. Thomas scored 9.9s in the vault and the pommel horse. The judges in the event were from Poland, the Soviet Union, Hungary and East Germany.

Thomas stumbled on his dismount from the parallel bar and his landing on his floor exercise or he could have scored higher. He was 9.85 on both events.

"It's going to be tough to beat Ditiatin at the Olympics in Moscow next year but it can be done," said Thomas. "It seems I'm always just behind him."

Russia's Alexndre Tkachev earned the bronze medal and Vladimir Markelov of the Soviet Union was fourth.

America's Bart Conner came in fifth.

The women's all-aroud title will be decided tonight in Tarrant County Convention Center without Romania's Nadia Comaneci, who failed to qualify for the final 36 because of an infected hand.

Ditiatin went into the last event with a narrow lead over Thomas but clinched the championshp with his 9.9 in the rings. Thomas breezed through his parallel bar routine until his stumbling dismount.

A less than capacity crowd gave Thomas a standing ovation after his free-wheeling pommel horse routine, his favorite event. The judges were booed heavily when only a 9.9 was posted.

An injury forced Japanese sensation Eizo Kenmotsu to drop out of Friday's all-around competition at the injury-plagued 1979 World Gymnastics Championships here.

And Soviet star Natalia Shaposnikova who has nursed a torn tendon in her left calf all week, was scratched from today's all around finals.

The Romanian team, meanwhile, stole the gold despite the absence of Nadia Comaneci, who suffered an infection in her left hand Wednesday. She scored 9.95 on the balance beam and 10.00s in the other three events.

America's Leslie Russo, who sustained a cracked rib last week, was pulled from Thursday night's lineup in the women's optionals after doctors said the injury was too severe for the 16-year-old from Milford, Conn., to compete.

Defending silver medalist in the all around, Kenmatsu apparently sustained an injury prior to this week's competition. Details of the injury were not known, and officials of the Japanese delegation were unavailable for comment.

The 31-year-old sensation failed to dominate Wednesday's optionals as predicted and ranked only 12th going into the all around.

Kenmotsu and teammate Shigeru Kasamatsu, who led the Japanese team to three World Championship and three Olympic team gold medals, have discussed retiring from gymnastics after the 1980 Moscow Olympics.

They were unseated for the first time in 11 years this week when the Soviet team took the team title, dropping he Japanese to second place

Irish Gymnast Thankful For Chance To Compete

FORT WORTH (AP) — Team after team paraded onto the stage during the resplendent opening ceremonies at the 1979 World Gymnastics Championships. But behind the Irish flag, Rachel Kidney stood alone.

As Ireland's sole representative at the second most important gymnastics meet in the world, the raven-haired, freckled faced 16-year-old could have been the loneliest athlete in Fort Worth.

"I wanted my teammates to be with me, cheering for me," she said. "I would see all thee groups of girls in track suits and there would be just me in my track suit.

"But everybody has been just great."

Her coach, Barry Trower, said police officers and hotel personnel have taken a real shine to his charming pupil.

"They ask me where she is when they haven't seen her. I think some of them want to adopt her," he said in a teasing tone. "She's a real mankiller."

Kidney was in good spirits after her last performance, the women's optionals — where she took rather low scores. She pulled "four to five ligaments" in her leg several weeks ago and was in a cast until last week.

"I wanted to go so badly, they just let me," Kidney said.

She ended competition ranked 162 of 171 with a 64.30, just above Romania's Nadia Comaneci, who performed only one routine in the optionals because of an infected left hand; American Leslie Russo, who dropped out because of a cracked rib; and the Italian team, which walked out in protest of the judging after their compulsaries.

Every day of the competition, Kidney took whirlpool therapy in the training center, hoping to ease the pain of her throbbing leg.

"It was touch and go even here," Trower said. "We had to ice her leg after every piece."

But because of the game leg, Kidney was forced to drop all but the most basic moves from her routine. And she toppled to the mat off the uneven bars and the balance beam, where she took a 7.45 and a 7.35.

Her vault earned an 8.10 and her floor exercise, performed to "The Irish Washerwoman," won an 8.60 and applause from the audience.

"I think to score what she did was fantastic," Trower sad. "It meant her exection must have been perfect."

"It's bad when you have to do the simple tricks after working on the difficult ones for so long," she said. "I was doing some lovely flip-flops on the beam and a double full twist on the floor."

Kidney recently won a gold medal in the individual all arounds at the World Catholic School Games in Ireland. She is the top gymnast from the Emerald Isle, and the first from that country to perform a back somersault on the beam and a side aerial.

But she moved to Connecticut to train late this summer because of the sparse facilities in Dublin.

"It's a crazy set-up," Trower said, of the practice gym. "We only get it from 6 to 8 in the morning and we have to set up and take down the equipment. That means she only gets to work out about an hour and a half a day.

"Gymnastics haven't gained any priority in Ireland. It is still considered a way to relax rather than a fierce competition. It will take 15 to 20 years to get up to the standards of the Americans, if ever."

By that time, of course, Kidney will be too old to compete, but not too old to coach.

"I don't know yet," she said, giving Trower a playful kick. "I hear it's rewarding to coach."

BRAVES GET CATCHER

TORONTO (AP) — The Atlanta Braves acquired reserve catcher Bill Naharodny, 26, from the American League Chicago White Sox for a minor legue pitcher. Naharodny hit .256 in 64 games for the Sox last season with six home runs and 27 runs batted in. In return the Braves gave the Sox Rick Weiters, 24.

NEPHEW OF SHAH OF IRAN SHOT — This is a stock picture of Shahriar Mustapha Chafik, a nephew of the deposed Shah of Iran, who was shot and killed Friday on the street in Paris. (AP Laserphoto)

Caller Says Shah's Nephew Killed By 'Front'

PARIS (AP) — A lone gunman killed a nephew of the deposed shah of Iran Friday by firing two bullets into his neck and head as he strolled along a fashionable Paris street.

An anonymous caller to the French news agency Agence France Presse claimed responsibility for the killing in the name of the "Moslem Liberation Front."

"In the framework of our work of liberation, we have eliminated Prince Chafik, enemy of our faith and our people ... long live (Ayatollah Ruhollah) Khomeini," the caller said.

Knowledgable sources in Tehran said they did not know of such an organization. Iran's official Pars news agency reported former Chief Prosecutor Sadeq Khalkali claimed his fedayeen gunmen killed the prince.

The dead man, 34-year-old Shahriar Mustapha Chafik, was a son of former Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi's twin sister and had been a commader of his country's Hovercraft fleet in the Persian Gulf before the overthrow of the dynasty 10 months ago.

Like the rest of the shah's family, he had lived under threat of death from Moslem militants since Khomeini's revolutionaries drove the shah into exile last January.

The gunman followed Chafik along the quiet dead-end Rue de la Villa Dupont, on which Chafik lived, pproached him with a pistol held in both hands and fired a bullet into his neck, according to the only witness to the shooting.

The witness, a man sitting in a car on the narrow street in the 16th district, said the wounded man fell to the street and the gunmen leaned over him and fired another shot to the head.

A woman ran from the house, he said, and wept over the body, which lay in the street for nearly two hours before police finally moved it.

Police are searching for a man about 25 to 30 years old of medium height and athletic build. Two 9mm cartridge casings were found on the ground at the scene.

Chafik was one of three children of Princess Ashraf, who has an apartment across the city. There were reports she was in New York, but a family spokeswoman there would neither confirm nor deny it. The spokeswoman issued a statement from the princess that said of her son's death:

"The hands which cowardly murdered him are holding in bondage 50 Americans at the U.S. Embassy, thus trampling on the most elementary human rights and principles of international law.

"My heart, which grieves today the loss of a son, is also with all the American mothers and fathers who have their children captive in Tehran. I pray for their safe release and hope that they can spend Christmas in the safety of their own homes with their families. I pray for the Amerian people and the Iran my son died for."

According to Pars, Khalkli said his fedayeen, a fanatically religious group in Iran, had wanted to assassinate Princess Ashraf, "but we are glad this man has been killed." It said Khalkali made the statement at his home in the holy city of Qom.

Citizens Join Protests With Armbands, Cards

By The Associated Press

A campaign to send Christmas messages to the 50 Tehran hostages was gaining momentum Friday, while other Americans staged demonstrations, donned white armbands, signed petitions, and prayed.

National religious leaders issued a joint appeal Friday for weekend prayers for the Americans spending their 34th day of captivity in the U.S. Embassy in Iran.

"We must tap our spiritual resources and not just our political ones," said the appeal issued by leaders of the Protestant Catholic and Jewish faiths.

In Janesville, Wis., about 800 high school students — four times as many as expected — turned out at 6:30 am. to march through the damp and chilly streets in a show of patriotism.

In what was proclaimed as "Unity Day" by city officials, the marchers sang "America the Beautiful" and the national anthem and some pushed an old truck painted red, white and blue and bearing a sign reading, "Powered by the love of 50 states."

In New York City, veterans groups from Long Island drove in a motorcade, accompanied by several police cruisers, to the U.S. Mission across from the United Nations.

Their cars bore signs reading, "Khomeini is Zany," "No Wheat for Iran," and "Get IBM Out of Iran."

Thousands of taxi drivers cruised New York with their headlights burning, and other anti-Iran rallies were staged at Dag Hammarskjold Plaza at the United Nations and in the Wall Street area.

About 700 junior high and high chool students turned out for a "Support America Rally' in Marietta, Okla., organized by Lynn Self, president of the Marietta Future Farmers of America.

Across the country, radio stations were urging listeners to send Christmas cards and letters to the hostages.

In Sun City, Ariz., 81-year-old George Thompson sent two Christmas cards addressed:

"The Hostages, U.S. Embassy, Tehran, Iran."

"There is an old adage that the pen is mightier thn the sword," he said. "Let Americans prove it."

Possibly motivated more by profit than patriotism, new products came on the market, notably an "The Ayatollah Khomeini Doll" in New York City and the "Iranian Trash Bag" in New Hampshire.

Badges with an obscene message for Iran were on sale in some suburban shopping centers.

Like a number of other radio stations around the country, WBAP in Fort Worth, Texas, was urging people to wear white armbands — "the color of hope" — or tie a white ribbons to the antenna of their cars and trucks.

Warren Potash, general manager of the country and western station, said so far 100 businesses and organizations have started offering the armbands or ribbons.

"Just like those people in Iran, Americans want to be counted," Potash said. "I think it is a manifestation that people want to stand up and get into the program."

As a sidelight, officials in New York City reported Iranians were rushing to the altar this week to marry Americans and thus get permanent status in this country.

First Deputy City Clerk Herbert F. Ryan said he had personally performed 11 such international weddings this week at City Hall. While he had no comparative statistics, Ryan called the number "unusual."

Chrysler Aid Bill Faces Criticism

WASHINGTON (AP) — Treasury Secretary G. William Miller said Friday the Senate Banking Committee version of the Chrysler aid bill is "unworkable," in part bcause the automaker might lose many of its best workers.

Miller issued a statement indicating the most objectionable feature of the committee bill is a requirement that Chrysler workers accept a three-year wage freeze in exchange for $1.25 billion in federal loan guarantes for Chrysler.

"Under the proposed bill, efforts to aid Chrysler would fail, because the conditions of the bill simply could not be met," he said.

Miller said the wage freeze would impose "a disproportionate financing percent of its common stock to its employees.

The administration supports a bill approved by the House Banking Committee that would provide $1.5 billion in loan guaranees without a wage freeze.

Chrysler officials are getting impatient for Congress to act on an aid bill, saying it will run out of money early nextyear if help isn't approved. Congress adjourns for its holiday recess on Dec. 21, and there is speculation that if it doesn't act before then, it may not act at all.

Senate Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said Friday the congressional recess will be abbreviated unless action is completed on the Chrysler legislation by the time the scheduled recess arrives.

The schedule calls for Congress to return Jan. 22, but Byrd told his Senate colleagues they would be called back on Jan. 3 unless final action has been taken on the Chrysler bill.

Until Miller's statement, the administration had not said much recently about the issue, drawing criticism from some lawmakers for not working actively for a compromise between the House and Senate committee versions.

While Miller's statement broke the administration's recent silence on the matter, it focused entirely on the Senate committee bill and didn't contain an endorsement of any particular aid plan for Chrysler. Neither did it reiterate past expressions that Chrysler should be helped.

Miller said the Senate committee version would place the burden on workers for about half of the unguaranteed financing needed by the company, while banks, government entities, dealers and suppliers would be making much smaller contributions.

He added: "The administration has always maintained that all interested parties, including labor, must make substantial concessions and contributions if the Chrysler Corporation is to survive. We feel strongly, however, that these efforts must be shared fairly among all parties."

Earlier Sen. Paul Tsongas told a United Auto Workers representative he is open to compromise on the three-year wage freeze he has demanded as a condition for federal aid to the Chrysler Corp.

Tsongas, D-Mass., met with UAW legislative director Howard Paster and said it "would not be unthinkable to support a two-year wage freeze" as an alternative, said Mary Helen Thompson, the senator's press secretary.

Tsongas also indicated flexiblity in a meeting Thursday with Lee Iacocca, Chrysler's board chairan. Tsongas said afterward that he was "willing to sit down and talk to anyone in this who had legitimate concerns."

Both the union and the corporation hav announced opposition to the three-year freeze although arguing that loan guarantees to Chrysler are needed to keep the company going.

Iacocca predicted that efforts to reah a compromise would be successful, saying, "I am an optimist."

Rep. Jack Kemp, R-N.Y., described the proposed wage freeze for Chrysler workers as "a slap in their face and a repudiation of collective bargaining rights."

"The Senate effort to force Chrysler workers to forsake wage increases would be inflatonary, not deflationary," Kemp said.

"If we make working people the fall guys for government inflamed problems, workers will have less incentive to be productive and lower productivity aggravates inflation," he added.

"I wholeheartedly support the United Auto Workers' rejection of the committee's outrageous proposal because it, unjustly, puts the blame on the workers for Chrysler's malaise which, in large part, is the result of excessive, counterprodutive federal tax, energy and regulatory policies."

Both the UAW and Chrysler have come out against the Senate-approved bill. They are seeking a compromise designed to pass both houses and stave off what they say is threatened bankruptcy for the company.

Hike In Energy Prices Likely

Oil Executive Says Outlook For U.S. 'Bleak'

By The Associated Press

This year's 63 percent jump in energy prices has almost worked its way through the U.S. conomy — just in time for another crude-oil price boost when the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' oil ministers meet Dec. 17 in Venezuela.

Some oil company experts believe U.S. gasoline and heating oil prices could rise by 5 to 6 cents a gallon as a result of an expeced crude-oil price increase by Saudi Arabiaand other OPEC members.

And worries over the future of oil production in Iran — one of the 13-nation cartel's largest members — are sure to be hanging over the conference when it opens in Caracas.

"From the oil companies' standpoint" and from the standpoint of the United States, which imports half its oil, "the whole situation is very bleak," said one senior oil executive, who asked not to be quoted by name.

As prices have spiraled, demand for oil in the West has grown hardly at all this year, and may even drop 1 or 2 percent in 1980.

But rather than lowering prices as oil use slows, OPEC could "cut production to 28 million barrels a day" — a 7 percent reduction — "without even beaking into a sweat," the executive said.

"If they cut back, oil markets are likely to remain crazy," he said. We're going to have to go into a deep recession just to break even."

Others are more optimistic. "We're going into next winter with better oil inventories than we had at this time last year, and that should give us some breathing room," said Jeffrey Matthews, an analyst at Merrill Lynch, Pierce, Fenner & Smith Inc.

Production increases in the North Sea and Mexico could offset some cutbacks, "OPEC countries also are continuing to find more oil," and U.S. oil companies "all have increased their exploration budgets this year," he said.

But Iran, which has been responsible for most of OPEC's production cuts this year, may face new difficulties in producing oil in 1980.

Iran's current output of 3.5 millin barrels a day is down from 5. million last year, and the industry magazine Oil and Gas Journal estimates "little if any" exploration or sophisticated production work is underway.

But Matthews maintains output is not likely to cease, despite President Carter's ban on U.S. purchases of oil from Iran.

Analysts agree that the price of oil is sure to rise at the Caracas meeting. But which price?

World oil markets have become so chaotic since the Iranian revolution that "no one is really sure what the real price for crude is these days," said Frank E. Moser, a vice president of Standard Oil Company of Ohio.

OPEC's base price is $18 for a 42-gallon barrel of high-quality Saudi Arabian oil, up from $14.54 in March and $13.35 at the beginning of 1979. Oil industry sources say the Sadi price could climb to $25 by Jan. 1.

Saudi Arabia's oil outut of 9.5million barrels a day comprises neary a thirdof OPEC's daiy producton and has been a relative bargain lately — although whether Saudi production will be cut next year is a major source of concern.

OPEC's "official" top price is $23.50 a barrel, but Nigeria and others have been selling oil under long-term contracts at about $26 — a price that could rise to about $30 next year.

At the same time, 20 percent or more of the cartel's il is being diverted toindividual spot market sales at $40 a barrel and up — and "OPEC will have to make a decision taking this (price difference) into account," the cartel's secretary-gneral, Rene Ortiz, said Friday.

One of the reasons for the high spot prices is that theUnited States and other nations have been intetly rebuilding inventories depleted by the seven-week shutdown of Iranian oilfields early this year.

U.S. crude-oil stockpiles at the end of November totaled 350.2 million barrels,enough to supply 17 days' consumption and up from stockpiles of 325.9 million barrels a year go.

Congress Wants Voice In Price Controls

WASHINGTON (P) — The Senate took action Friday to assure Congress will have a voice if the president decides to hasten or slow the removal of price controls from U.S. crude oil.

Senators approved an amendment requiring that, once the "windfall-profits" tax is in effect, President Carter or his successor give Congress 30 days' notice before changing the decontrol formula.

The amendment by Sen. Dale Bumpers, D-Ark., was approved 42-40. It substituted for a stiffer plan by Sen. William Armstrong, R-Colo., that would have ended the tax the minute decontrol was slowed.

In an effort to stimulate oil production, Carter has begun a process that by mid-1981 will end federal controls on crude-oil prices. He proposed the windfall tax to take from the oil industry a portion of the higher prices that will result.

There is no indication he wants to slow decontrol so long as Congress enacts an acceptable "windfall-profits" tax.

The Armstrong amendment would have effectively blocked the president from changing the pace of decontrol.

The substitute that the Senate accepted would not impair the president's ability to slow or expedite removal of controls. But the 30-day notice would allow Congress to try to block any decision.

Meanwhile, Senate Democratic Leader Robert C.Byrd announced that: "I am going to tell the president that if Congress does not pass a meaningful windfall-profits tax, he should put controls back on.."

Byrd did not say what kind of a bill he would consider acceptable; nor have Carter and his advisers defined what they'd accept. However, both Carter and Byrd have said the $138-billion bill recommended by the Senate Finance Committee should be toughened.

The Senate already has fattened that bill to a level that would bring in about $157 billion in the 1980s. That still is far below the $277-level passed by the House.

Byrd's statement was part of his plea to expedite action on the bill.He told colleagues that unless the Senate passes that bill and one to aid Chrysler Corp. before Dec. 21, senators will have to cut short a planned month-long vacation and return to work on Jan.3.

In another vote on the tax bill, the Senate refused for the second day in a row to restore the federal income-tax deduction allowed for state and local gasoline taxes.

The proposal by Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., was rejected 44-42. The Senate had defeated the same provision Thursday by a 40-39 margin.

Democratic leaders contended it would be inappropriate to approve what amounts to a subsidy for gasoline use at a time when the Carter administration is considering higher gas taxes to force conservation.

"This amendment simply pleads for a bit of simple equity for the middle-income taxpayer," said Helms. Sixty percent of the deduction would go to couples or individuals with incomes of $30,000 a year or less.

Congress voted in October 1978 to repeal the gasoline-tax deduction at the end of 1978. That means that when tax returns are filed early next year, no deduction will be available for state and local gasoline taxes paid in 1979.

Actor Plays Likable Character

'Lou Grant' Star Says He Knows Little About Newspapers

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mason Adams, who plays managing editor Charlie Hume on "Lou Grant," is the kind of guy you'd assume never has trouble cashing checks.

There is something about him that inspires trust. Maybe it's that mellow voice with just a hint of rasp to it. Or the kind, fatherly face, with brown eyes staring out from under a furrowed brow and a thatch of brown hair turning gray and starting to thin.

Adams fits the role of managing editor well. With that sometimes worried expression, he looks like he belongs in a newsroom.

A Tampa newspaper recently conducted a poll on the most trusted men in America. Charlie Hume was right up there with Walter Cronkite.

"People apparently watch the show and like Charlie," said Adams.

"I guess it's the way he's written. He's placed in a position where he has to make decisions. He doesn't pull any punches. He has a warm and easy relationship with Lou Grant. I hope also it's the way I play him, but they really write it that way."

The CBS Monday night series, which stars Ed Asner as Grant, won a well-deserved Emmy in September as the best dramatic series. It got off to a slow start two years ago, but now is firmly entrenched near the top of the ratings.

Despite his easy manner in the newsroom of the Los Angeles Tribune, Adams said he really knows little about newspapers. He said he met the managing editor of the New York Daily News on a commuter train after he got the part, and later sat in on an editorial conference at the paper.

In the beginning, Charlie Hume wasn't quite so trustworthy. "He was a bit of a patsy in the early scripts," Adams said, "but we've gotten away from that. A managing editor of a newspaper can't be wishy-washy."

Oddly enough, it was a different kind of role that brought him to the attention of the producers of "Lou Grant."

"Allan Burns had seen me in 'The Deadliest Season' in which I played a hockey club owner who was a real bad news guy," he said.

Adams was living in Connecticut at the time and had a semi-regular part on the soap opera "Another World." He flew out to California for the audition, and when he was signed he went back to New York and asked for his release from the serial.

"What I'd like to do is get an interesting part in a feature film," he said. "You keep getting calls about things, but always when the show's filming.

"I've become hooked on movie acting. This is my first extended exposure to it and I really enjoy it. The camera is a cruel, microscopic taskmaster, and you have to watch your step.

"I feel very lucky to be working with this group on 'Lou Grant.' I've heard so many horror stories about working on other series. My only wish is that I had more to do. But that's true of any show with an ensemble cast."

Adams recently appeared as an obstetrician in the NBC movie "And Baby Makes Six." He also plays a doctor in the upcoming movie "The Shining Season," about a young runner and school teacher who has cancer.

"I guess playing a managing editor isn't all that different from playing a doctor," he said.

Adams lives on a hilltop in Bel Air overlooking the Stone Canyon reservoir. He doesn't go out much, or need to. His wife, Margot, is a gourmet cook.

His daughter, Betsy, is a theatrical lighting designer in New York, and son Bill is an art major at Claremont College. When "Lou Grant" had a show about a murdered art student, Bill supplied the paintings.

"I'm urging him as my parents urged me, to prepare yourself to teach," he said. "I got my master's degree and taught for a couple of years in New York. It's a way of keeping body and soul together."

Adams was born in New York, but got his degree in theater arts from the University of Wisconsin. When he returned to New York he taught at the Neighborhood Playhouse.

He was a radio soap opera actor for many years and had the title role in "Pepper Young's Family." Adams' voice is still heard frequently on the many commercials he does.

Stiff Winds Aid Sloop On Journey

BEDFORD, Mass. (AP) — Aided by stiff winds, the 57-foot sloop Desperado and its nine-member crew were reported ahead of schedule Friday in a bid to break the 74-year-old speed record for crossing the Atlantic by sail.

Jim Serna, a meteorologist with Weather Services Corp. said the Marblehead, Mass.-based craft traveled an estimated 600 nautical miles between Wedesday and Friday.

Serna estimated the sloop was about 800 miles east of St. Johns, Newfoundland, on Friday, traveling at speeds up to 17 knots an hour. That meant the ship had covered about 1,900 miles in 6½ days at sea.

That would put the ultra-light craft slightly ahead of the pace set by the Atlantic, a 18-foot schooner which set the record in 1905 by covering the 3,013 miles from Sandy Hook, N.J., to the coast of England in 12 days, four hours, one minute and 19 seconds.

The Desperado, owned and skippered by John Tuttle, a 39-year-old land developer from North Andover, Mass., left Sandy Hook on Nov. 27. It must reach The Lizard, a lighthouse off the southwest coast of England, before 3:37 a.m. EST next Wednesday to beat the record.

Serna, whose Bedford, Mass., firm is providing weather information, said winds of 30 to 40 knots in the past few days more than made up for last weeend's light winds which put the vessel behind schedule.

Serna said of this weekend's weather: "I feel pretty good about the next 48 hours. I don't see anything under 20 knots for that period."

Serna said the Desperado's exact position is uncertain because it missed its daily radio transmission. But that was no reason for immediate concern, Serna said, because poor weather and growing distance made radio contact difficult.

He said the $250,000 craft was probably experiencing seas with waves of 17 or 18 feet — not unusual for the North Atlantic in December.

Tuttle claims his specially designed vessel is the fastest of its type in the world. He claims the Desperado, which has a flat-bottomed hull of Fiberglass and foam, hit speeds of 40 knots during Caribbean races earlier this year and predicts he will beat the record by a full day.

"It's going to take quite an effort and a little bit of Lady Luck to do it," Serna said. "They could loose a mast, rip a sail, a stay could go ... But right now we feel pretty good."

British Overseas Airways Corp. began transatlantic jet airliner passenger service in 1958.

'Soaked' Actress Says TV Role Not Exploitive Of Women

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — The cleanest and warmest blonde in TV unquestionably is Lois Areno, the curvesome cutie who spends most of her time in "The Ropers" series dunking in a hot tub.

Lois soaks for at least two hours a day during dress rehearsal and taping of the half-hour sitcom starring Norman Fell and Audra Lindley as maxi-incompatible marrieds.

Fell, in the role of Stanley Roper (comically impotent in his marriage) suffers paroxysms of lechery at the sight of bikini-clad Lois who is only partially submerged in the Ropers' apartment complex hot tub.

As Debbie Hopper, an airline stewardess, Lois provides a classic example of jiggle show pulchritude to prime time viewing. Some might construe Debbie to be little more than a bawdy wink.

Debbie doubtless delights Playboy readers who salivate at the sight of expanses of female epidermis and infuriates feminists who cry out against female sexual exploitation.

Lois takes a dim view of both. She agrees there are erotic and subliminal sexual overtones to her role. All the same, she thinks sex is a healthy element of the show, one that shouldn't be suppressed.

If Lois (as Debbie) were sitting fully clothed at, say, a bridge table or at a desk every week instead of in a hot tub, she might be just another pretty girl with so-so prospects of advancing her career.

But because her full figure is regularly and amply on display, Lois has attracted considerable attention among Hollywood directors and producers as well as with viewers who, by the hundreds, request autographed bikini photos.

Early next year Lois, a brown-eyed blonde of Italian descent, will pose for a poster in her scanty swim suit.

"I don't see Debbie as being exploitive of women," Lois said in answer to charges that the stewardess is a fantasy figure for immature males.

"Women writers invariably ask me if I feel Debbie is against the women's lib movement. My answer is a flat 'no.' I'm a feminist myself, but within reason.

"Spice works for television. I'm all for it when it's handled subtly. My bikini is as teenie as the network allows. I like wearing it. I'm proud of the part I play. If I weren't, I wouldn't be doing it.

"Women's bodies are esthetic if they're in good shape. Denying spice is like saying there is no such thing as a woman.

"Show business is show business and you utilize anything you can to increase your worth. A girl would be a fool not to utilize her body if she can combine it with talent.

"What catches the initial attention on television is a beautiful package. Then if you can substantiate the package with talent you have a salable commodity that is in demand.

"My part is more than just decorative. It's not easy to be a straight man and set up comedy lines for Norman and Jeff Tambor in the show. It takes very fine and expert timing.

"I also have to concentrate on dead-pan delivery. Almost all my dialogue involves double entendre because essentially Debbie is innocent and naive. That's what makes the sexual overtones funny instead of blatant.

"I don't play Debbie as just another dumb blonde. She's really not aware that Stanley Roper leches after her.

"It's a God-given law of nature that if you're feminine you are soft and round. I don't believe in fighting that natural advantage by being masculine and aggressive.

"You don't have to be tough to be assertive. I defy any woman to be more feminine than I am.

"And while I believe in the woman's movement, I think it's beautiful for a woman to pamper, serve and cater to a man. I wouldn't like to lose that attitude at the peril of losing my identity.

"My attitude about the difference in the sexes is my heritage —biologically as a woman and racially as an Italian."

Lois is no hothouse filter. She's a rated airplane pilot with some 400 hours of solo flight in single and twin-engine aircraft. She hopes to earn her commercial instrument rating next year.

She studied for two years at the University of Florence (Italy) and graduated with a degree in psychology from Temple University in her native Philadelphia.

Lois came to Hollywood a year and a half ago and landed small roles in episodic television. She played a southern belle in a segment of "The Dukes of Hazzard" and appears in a modest role in Robert Redford's new movie, "The Electric Horseman."

"You do what you can to establish yourself as an actress and still remain faithful to your beliefs," Lois concluded. "That's what I'm doing, and as a woman and an actress I like playing Debbie Hopper."

Star Makes Four Movies First Year In Business

NEW YORK (AP) — Last year, Lisa Eichhorn had never appeared in a movie. By the end of this year, she will have starred in four: "Yanks," "The Europeans," "Why Would I Lie?" and "Cutter and Bone."

Here on a break from filming "Cutter and Bone," one of America's hottest young stars revealed how she lied about being British so John Schlesinger would cast her in "Yanks," the film that led to her sudden success.

"I figured it would be a psychological advantage for him (Schlesinger) to think I was English," explained Miss Eichhorn. "He wanted an English girl and I knew how much he wanted to do this film. Two days after I got the part I told him I was American, but had lived in England five years. I thought he'd take the movie away from me because I lied. He took a huge risk in using me."

The risk apparently paid off. Less than 24 hours after completing her work with Schlesinger, Miss Eichhorn was on a plane to America to begin filming "The Europeans" with Lee Remick. Her friends thought the transition might be too abrupt.

"For me, it was the healthiest thing to do," said the 25-year-old actress. "Sometimes, when I finish a role that's particularly close, I'd get maudlin, cry for no reason.

"Going directly into 'The Europeans' didn't give me any time to be morose. It also meant six months of work and learning in 'Yanks' could be put into a natural perspective in another job. And believe me, on 'Yanks,' I learned everything."

Chrysler Executives Purchase Boat Manufacturing Firm

DETROIT (AP) — Six top executives of Chrysler Corp.'s boat manufacturing firm have purchased the subsidiary from the parent company and will run it as a new corporation, the automaker said Friday.

Chrysler B at Corp. will become Texas International Inc., based in the Dallas suurb of Plano, the automaker said. The amount of money the sale would raise for the ailing carmaker was not disclosed.

A Chrysler spokesman said the 12,000 shares of boat company stock — all owned by Chrysler — would be sold to the executives, led by William Maxwell who headed the company under Chrysler.

The automaker will keep the 477,000-square foot Plano fatory and lease it to Texas International. The agreement takes effect Jan. 31.

The company that became Chrysler Boat was acquired from the Lone Star Boat Co. in 1965. The company designs, manufactures and sells fiberglass power boats, sailboats and cruise boats.

Chryser said the sale would have no effect on its outboard motor operations in Hartford, Conn. and Beaver Dam, Wis. The automaker said it would continue to build boat motors in the United States and abroad.

Media Conglomerate May Have To Give Up Cable Operations

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — State Consumer Counsel Barry Zitser has formally asked the state Division of Public Utilities Control to order Times Mirror Co. to sell its two Connecticut cable televisin franchises.

He said Times Mirror, a Los Angeles-based media conglomerate, should not be able to keep the franchises in Hartford and Meriden because of its purchase in October of the Hartford Courant, the state's largest daily newspaper.

The Division of Public Utilities Control held hearings last month on the question of Times Mirror's cross-control of competing media but has issued no decision in the case.

When the company purchased the cable television operations in 1978, the Division of Public Utilities Control said part of the reason it approved thedeal was that Times Mirror did not own any newspapers in the central Connecticut area. The conglomerate also owns the Greenwich Time and the Advocate of Stamford in southwestern Connecticut.

Zitser said he wanted Times Mirror to divest itself of the cable television copanies because "cross-control could lead t homogenied news ad unfair competitive advantage."

Times Mirror executives have mantained the cable operations and the Courant will be kept entirely separate.

A hearing on Zitsr's request was scheduled for Thursday.

Plymouth became the first British town to be incorporated by an act of Parliament in 1439.

'Serious' Singer Doing Well On Charts

Graduate Of Manhattan School Of Music Shows Versatility

NEW YORK (AP) — Considering the state of most Top 40 music, you'd think it'd hurt a pop singer to hold a degree in voice from the Manhattan School of Music. Why, they do classical stuff there.

It hasn't hurt Angela Bofill. Her first jazz-and-Latin-flavored album, "Angie," did moderately well on both jazz and pop charts. Her second, "Angel of the Night," is doing okay there, too.

But it is a far cry from her graduation recital: "I had to do a classical repertoire of arias and songs in Italian, French, German and English, and different periods, from baroque to contemporary.

"I had a good time, though. It was fun."

Miss Bofill, 25, a tall, cheerful lady, has a 3 1/2-octave range that vocally puts her right up there in Minnie Riperton country. Professionally, she's still a long way from superstar country.

But Miss B., daughter of a Cuban-born dockworker, is trying. She just finished a grueling 15-city tour and constant interviews, which her label hopes will get her music heard and her albums sold.

Born in New York and still a Bronx resident, she's sung pop, Latin and jazz since her teens and has opened here for jazz stars such as Dizzy Gillespie. She says her mother first hooked her on music. "When I was four, she taught me my first song, a Spanish version of 'Magic in the Moonlight,'" she says. "And while I was in school, I was always drawn to any kind of musical happenings."

Such happenings, after school, included two years with the Dance Theater of Harlem. She also wrote music, including a jazz suite, "Under the Moon and Over the Sky," a melodic, wide-ranging work.

When signed to an album contract by jazzmen Dave Grusin and Larry Rosen last year, she included part of the suite on her first record. Getting the tune — and album — aired on radio was hard.

It's understandable. An estimated 7,000 new records are loosed each year. She credits New York writer Pete Hamill, who usually dwells on societal matters, with getting her debut album moving. A lyrical column he did about her and the record "really helped a lot; because I was not getting any airplay," Miss Bofill explained in her soft, slightly husky singer's voice.

"Nobody wanted to hear about this Angela Bofill, who sings about the moon, stars and all kinds of weird things. Then I went on tour, opening for Al Jarreau, a fantastic singer. We played six major cities.

"It helped kick off a lot of airplay, particularly in the blues and jazz markets. Then the album started getting reviewed in magazines like 'Cue' and 'People,' and that helped, too.

Six Chicks Survive Migration

MOSCOW, Idaho (AP) — Six of the 18 rare whooping cranes chicks hatched last spring at Grays Lake National Wildlife Refuge in southern Idaho have survived the fall migration and safely reached New Mexico.

Te survivors were the reslt of a program in which 24 whooping crane eggs were transported to Grays Lake and entrusted to Sandhill crane foster parents in an effort to increase the number of the endangered whooping crane.

Bill Loftus of the University of Idaho College of Forestry said of the 18 hatched, 11 have die and one is missing.

Th project to reintroduce whoopers to areas they formerly inhabited is a joint effort between Amrican and Canadian wildlife services and the University of Idaho.

The chicks have joined the ranks of one of the world's rarest birds. Biologists es[illegible]120 whooping cranes now live in th[illegible]or in capivity. The foster-parent flock of sandhills is man's first attempt to reintroduce the whoopers, and numbers about 15, Loftus said.

About 75 whoopers breed and summer in Canada and migrate south for six months on the Texas Gulf Coast during the winter.

In Maryland: Patuxent Wildlife Research Center holds captive a flock of 26 whooping cranes for research and to insure that no sudden catastrophe in the wild exterminates the species, Loftus said.

Biologists have transported 108 eggs from the wild and from captive flocks to Grays Lake during the past five years. Since only one egg of two or more laid usually survives in the nest, the first is left there and the extras are taken to Grays Lake.

Elwood Bizeau, assistant leader of the Idaho Coperative Wildlife esearch Unit, says the production of whooping cranes at Wood Buffalo National Park in Alberta, Canada, has not declined despite the removal of one egg from each nest. He says the use of sandhills as foster parents has worked well.

Critic Delighted By Film's Peformances

HEAD OVER HEELS (PG) — John Heard, Mary Beth Hurt. (Comedy-Drama) On-gain, off-again romance between a confused young woman and a flakey young man. Film is uneven but the performances are a constant delight. Heard is once again brilliant. GRADE: B

APOCALYPSE NOW (R) — Martin Sheen, Marlon Brando, Robert Duvall. (Drama) This is Francis Coppola's long-awaited and very expensive epic — and worth the wait and the cost. It is a study of the madness of war, and Coppola has created a procession of insane images of Vietnam and that terrible war to make his point. It is long and flawed, but must be rated an American classic. GRADE: A-plus

AVALANCHE EXPRESS (PG) — Lee Marvin, Robert Shaw, Linda Evans. (Spy thriller) A confusing mess, about (perhaps) a defecting Russian leader who is placed on a train (why?) and the attempts of the bad guys to stop the train. Some exciting moments, but mostly a lot of shooting and dreadful acting and lines that are silly. GRADE: C-minus

BREAKING AWAY (PG) — Dennis Christopher, Dennis Quaid, Daniel Stern, Jackie Earle Haley. (Romantic comedy) This American film in the kind of thing the French do so well: warm, funny, a little romantic, tied up just right. It's set in Bloomington, Ind., a college town, the summer the local boys finally realize they don't mind being "townies." Briefly, it's the "Rocky" of bicycle racing — but so much better. A fine job by these four young actors. GRADE: A

LUNA (R) — Jill Clayburgh, Matthew Barry. (Drama) This is the story of a sensuous widow, an opera star, who becomes physically involved with her adolescent son. The acting is excellent — Clayburgh shatters her "nice girl" mold — but the film moves fitfully and is too long. Ads discreetly warn that parts of the film may be too intense for some viewers. It's true; incest is uncomfortable viewing. GRADE: B-minus

Senator Facing Tough Race

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern, D-S.D., is mounting an urgent drive to raise funds to overcome a $1-million campaign he says is being waged by conservatives to defeat him for re-election.

"I face a tough re-election fight," the Democrat's 1972 presidential candidate says in a letter to potential contributors. "Right-wing extremist forces across the country have pledged to raise over $1 milion to finance a 'Get MGovern' campaign in South Dakota."

The letter makes points that indicate why many conservatives would like to see a Republican win the seat that McGovern has held for 18 years.
