GUYNON AVIATOR DIES IN MAIL SERVICE

John Johnson, the young aviator who lost his life in an Ohio several days ago, was born in Perryton. He had been a number of times pilot-passenger plane. The folk article concerning his tragic death appeared in last week's Herald.

People of Guymon were greeted last Sunday, when they heard the word of the death of Johnson, 21 year old son of Clerk Ellen Johnson, of Guymon some time "Pete," as all school mates and hosts of in Guymon, his boyhood friend, has been in the Continental Air Lines, one of the Louisville-Cleveland, and has flown the mail between Louisville and small. Recently his route had extended to Columbus, Ohio.

The press dispatches we infer he had left Cleveland Sunday with his mail, and when he reached Columbus, on scheduling planes were sent out, he was found in his plane 20 from Cleveland with his mail. This is all that we have been to learn of the accident at the time he went to press.

LET HOW MUCH THE OTHER FELLOW DONATES

People are pretty much like that. What one does the rest will do. This is as true in the most important matters as it is in the most trifling ones. Then it becomes very noticeable in the affairs of the community. Those who have been taught to respect the privileges of their fellows will be quick to come to the front in a helpful spirit.

Others, however, those whose opinions and wishes will not respect. They cannot afford to do as the leaders, but if they are in a get-together meeting the public good as the large service the leaders can give. There is too much "give" and "take" that one give?" signifies that sheep spirit. It really matters what the other fellow does, if it is to you that you should do. There are men in this every town that never give the majority of the benefit on their side of the ledger. They are men in this town and other town that will help their money but have never known to give any of the time for civic work. But there will give freely of both time and money to the upbuilding of the community.

Disabled Veteran's Xmas

American Legion Auxiliary Will Accept Gifts to Be Sent To Hospital Patients

The Perryton American Legion Auxiliary Unit is planning to send Christmas boxes to the disabled ex-service men who are now in the Texas veteran's hospitals located at Kerrville, El Paso, San Antonio and San Angelo. They are asking that the people of Perryton and vicinity assist them by contributing many articles that are needed by the boys.

Quite a sum has been raised by recent activities of the unit and the money on hand will go to help many a poor boy have a better and merrier Christmas. Some of the articles which are acceptable and can be sent are stationery and writing materials, books and magazine subscriptions, toilet articles and toilet goods of all kinds, postage stamps in books, bed slippers and socks, bath robes, house shoes, pipes, flowers vases, belts, laundry bags, mirrors, chewing gum and mints, clothes brushes, ash trays, coin purses, handkerchiefs, mufflers, novelty goods and games, comfort kits and small thermos bottles. It is requested that edibles of any nature be excluded from the gift list.

Mrs. Jack Allen is the chairman of the committee in charge of sending the boxes and anyone having anything that they wish to give, is requested to call or send same to Mrs. Allen. During the war, nothing was too good for the boys in the army and navy. Let's not forget them now, especially those that are in the hospitals.

"MAN POWER" HAS ALL NAME IMPLIES—AND MORE!

"Man Power" is all that the name implies in the Richard Dix Paramount picture which comes to the American Theatre, Monday and Tuesday. It is said to be Dix at his best, in a fast-moving story with suspense enough to keep audiences sitting on the edge of their seats. The story works up to a tremendous climax when the star, driving a tractor through a rain storm, rushes up a hillside to save a dam threatened with a washout.

There is action from start to finish and Director Clarence Badger is understood to have skillfully worked up his situations.

GIVE CANTATA IN TWO WEEKS

TO BE PRESENTED ON TUESDAY, DECEMBER 18; TO BE JOINT WITH ORCHESTRA

The Christmas cantata, "The Glory of Bethlehem" by Petri, is to be presented at the school auditorium Tuesday evening, December 18, according to Rudolph Willmann, director. The entertainment is to be free and everyone is encouraged to attend.

The cantata, while quite difficult is very melodious and very tuneful. It is a modern composition in every respect containing modern harmonies and modern arrangements. It was copyrighted this year.

Eleven sections are contained in the cantata consisting of choir, quartet, duet, trio and solo arrangements. The municipal orchestra will accompany the choir and some beautiful well rounded chorus effects are obtained.

"The Glory of Bethlehem" is the first cantata to be presented in Perryton. It is said and represents a great deal of work. Fifty members of the chorus and orchestra were present at the meeting Monday night and every member is working hard. An extra meeting has been called for Friday evening at 7:00 o'clock in the school auditorium and the regular meeting again Monday night. The orchestra and choir practised together for the first time, Monday night.

LITTLE BABY DIES

Gerald Leon Johnson, infant son of Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Johnson of the Range neighborhood, died last Monday at the home of his grandparents in this city. The little boy was born on May 21, 1928. Besides the parents, there are two sisters and three brothers left behind.

Funeral services were conducted by Rev. C. Lex Shelby, pastor of the Perryton Baptist church, at Hartsville church on Wednesday afternoon. The little body was laid to rest in the Hartsville cemetery.

MAIN STREET SWAMPS DRAINED THIS WEEK

The city grading outfit has been getting in some good work this week grading the streets and draining the swamps on Main street. The excessive amount of moisture and the large amount of construction work has made it impossible to keep our dirt streets in any kind of condition this winter.

Just another talk about paving somebody will say. Righto they are. We're for paving and we don't care who knows it but we are not by ourselves for we actually believe that better than seventy-five per cent of the voters of Perryton are for paving and will endorse it, if given the opportunity to express themselves at the polls.

Let's get out of the mud. Let's pave and build more concrete sidewalks. What are we waiting on? If this is not the logical time then pray tell us when the logical time will come. Will there ever be a time when everyone is ready to pave or do anything else?

The brother, Fred A. Lackey, now lives at Dallas, Texas, where he is engaged in the painting and decorating business.

This uncle immediately started a search for the younger brother, Fred, and he was finally located through an advertisement in the Dallas News.

It was a joyful re-union and all of the children of Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Lackey were present. Valda and Hugh Lackey live with their parents in Amarillo and W. H. Lackey went over from this city.

RANGERS MAKE GOOD RECORD

REMARKABLE IMPROVEMENT IS NOTED AT CLOSE OF FOOTBALL SEASON; LOSE ONLY TWO GAMES

The Perryton Rangers closed one of their most successful football seasons recently after making a record that any school could well be proud of.

Under the able coaching of E. E. Shupe, the Rangers were built up from a weakling team to one of the most formidable grid machines in the district, and even threatened to take the district championship.

While exceptionally light in weight, this Ranger handicap was overcome to some extent by their flashy teamwork and speed. With practically the entire lineup in school again next year and with nearly two full teams of reserves in addition to the new material that will be in school next season, the Rangers should get off to a flying start.

Their record this season is remarkable, losing only two games during the entire season. The games played and the results are as follows:

Perryton 6	Shattuck 12
Perryton 38	Gate 6
Perryton 45	Spearman 0
Perryton 0	Pollett 0
Perryton 13	Follett 0
Perryton 17	Pampa 7
Perryton 0	Memphis 13
Perryton 113	Opponents 38

Football letter awards will be announced soon according to Coach E. E. Shupe. This year in addition to the letters, certificates will be given. This same policy will be adopted in both girls and boys basketball and in track.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Wade were greatly surprised Thanksgiving day when all their children arrived bringing well filled baskets and a very enjoyable day was spent. Those present were Mr. and Mrs. Everett Wade, Mr. and Mrs. Luther Wade and children, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Depew and children and Mrs. R. H. Gamel and children, R. H. and Minnie Kathryn. Mrs. Gamel and Mrs. J. D. Wade are sisters.

Miss Izora Hogue and George L. Goldsmith of near Liberal, were united in marriage by Judge J. M. Grigsby, Monday, November 4.

Sunday School Lesson

International Sunday School Lesson for December 9
PAUL GOES TO ROME
 Acts 28: 11-24, 30-31
 Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D., Associate General Secretary of the World's Sunday School Association

Increasing numbers tour around the Wonder Sea, the Mediterranean, every year and cover much of the itinerary that Paul followed when he was taken as a prisoner from Caesarea to Rome. Read the entire log of the journey beginning with Acts 27 as written by Dr. Luke who was with Paul all the way. Follow the line of travel with your map. You will zigzag to the coast of Asia Minor and then along the lower side of Crete. There the captain was deceived when the "south wind blew softly" and set sail against the advice of Paul, whose judgment as an experienced traveler was worth while. Then the real excitement began and thrills were had for fourteen days after the Euraquillo was encountered.

Landing was made on the mainland at Puteoli, in sight of modern Naples. The distance to Rome was about 80 miles and fellow Christians came out to meet Paul when he reached the Market of Appius, about 43 miles from the city. Still others were at the Three Taverns and when the voyager saw them "He thanked God and took courage."
 Surely the centurion in charge gave a good account of the conduct of his prisoner since leaving Caesarea. The captain could verify much and gave full credit to Paul's part in caring for all on board. Here was a man to be trusted. Permission was given for him to dwell in his own hired house though he must be constantly chained to some guard in turn. His heart and tongue were not bound thereby and he could proclaim his mission to all who would listen. No hour when on guard could have been dull for any of the soldiers, for Paul's experiences in travel must have made any conversation interesting. His earnestness and sincerity in speaking of Jesus Christ must have won fullest respect.

After a lapse of only three days Paul sent for the Jews who were living in Rome. These men had been banished under Claudius (Acts 18: 2) but were permitted to return under Nero. The story of recent years was presented. They expressed general ignorance concerning these facts but asked for a special audience. Then a "great number" assembled for a conference which lasted from morning until night. Similar results were met as when on his three missionary journeys. Some believed in the teachings and others held to their traditions and did not recognize in Jesus Christ their long promised Messiah. In reply Isaiah 6: 9-10 was quoted against them and announcement made that now he would give his further attention to the Gentiles in whose behalf he had been commissioned long ago at Damascus.

Another period of two years was spent in this first Roman imprisonment. During that time four wonderful epistles were written—Ephesians, Philippians, Colossians and Philemon. When in Rome four years ago the writer read with increased interest these four letters which Paul sent forth at the time. Each one was to a Christian group established on one of his major journeys. He kept living the declaration in his letter to the Romans when in Corinth: "I am not ashamed of the gospel for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth."

LIVE STOCK SITUATION

It is a far cry from the haciendas of the early days in the Southwest to the thickly populated cities, irrigated valleys, farm problems, rotary clubs, Chambers of Commerce and the multitudinous activities of the present West. The carefree life of the rancheros has been replaced by the march of the dinner pail brigade engaged in the greatest industrial activity the world has ever known.

With all of this change, there naturally has been brought about an evolution in the live stock and meat business. It wasn't so many years ago that the beef critter was raised for the value of the hide and the sheep was raised for its wool. The wants of the hacienda were supplied by the butchering of a few steers or lambs. This was doled out to those who lived in the neighborhood. Fresh meals were something of a luxury, for refrigeration was unknown. The usual method was to cut the beef into thin strips, producing what was and still is known as "jerkey." Only the well-to-do ranchero, who owned his flocks and herds, was as a usual thing able to save his own fresh meat at will, and then, it was necessary to butcher the animal, using what could be consumed at once and wasting the remainder.

As the West developed with the coming of the miner, the farmer, the merchant and the manufacturer, settlements grew up and the retail meat shop came into existence. The retailer also was the butcher and slaughterer. As the villages grew into cities, Capital and Labor entered into the business of slaughtering for the retailer, who gradually confined his activities to retailing meat. There were a thousand and one such places throughout the West. As improved transportation came, surplus cattle and sheep were shipped to the big Missouri River markets.

But it was only during the last half of the nineteenth century that the West grew big enough in population to attract the major packing houses. The West has always been quick to take hold of modern things because of the youth and vigor of the country.

The slaughtering of meat animals at the hundreds of villages and towns was wasteful because there was no way of utilizing anything except the meat and the hide. It is a natural development that the meat packing business be centralized in the very large cities for the economies effected through modern refrigeration. Through laboratory work and scientific methods the value of the by-products has helped to carry the overhead expense of the big packing plants. Centralization has made it possible to bring the live stock into the packing centers and to ship the meat back to the producer himself at a smaller cost than he could supply his needs under the old wasteful method.

Great packing houses have been developed in the West. For instance, Los Angeles is one of the big meat distributing centers of the world. The meat food requirements for Los Angeles county alone, with its 2,000,000 inhabitants, are enormous. So great, in fact, that it is necessary to import hogs and pork products from half way across the continent. Moreover, the Pacific slope packing industry can never reach its maximum efficiency until sufficient hogs are produced nearer home to take care of its own requirements. With the development of hog raising on the Pacific slope, there is every reason why an immense export business can be developed, for more than half the world's population lives on the shores of the Pacific.

BIG MEN FROM SMALL TOWNS

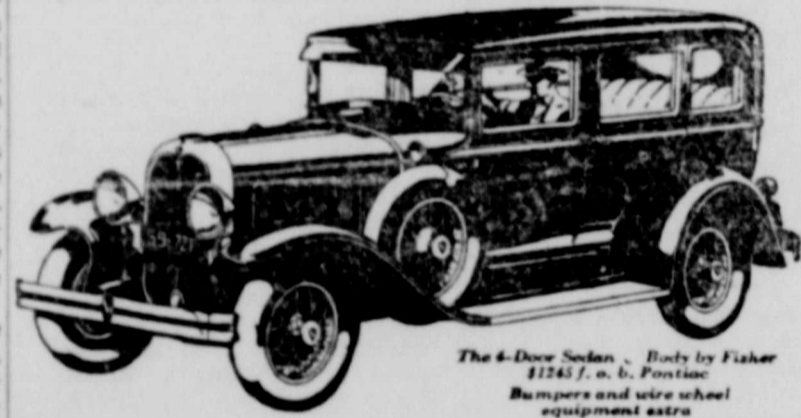

George Eastman, the great pioneer of the camera industry, was born in the small town of Waterville, N. Y., on July 12, 1854. Eastman's marvelous work in the field of photography has made him famous all over the world. He has invented and developed processes that have revolutionized the art. Besides the work he has done in his chosen profession, Eastman is a leader in business and philanthropic movements; he has given over $50,000,000 to institutions of higher education. His life is one of the great romances of this scientific age.

Eastman was educated in Rochester, N. Y., and started his career as an amateur photographer and experimenter. It is hard to think of Eastman as a humble "amateur"—yet it is encouraging to think what an "amateur" could finally achieve. It teaches us the lesson that by cultivating our hobbies to the limit we may make them the main-springs of our existence later on. Many a small town boy now occupying himself with some art as an amateur, will in time become a leader in that art. The secret lies in learning to do something better than it has ever been done before.

In 1880 he began to manufacture dry plates on a small scale; later came the epoch-making invention of the kodak. Eastman rose from obscurity to fame and fortune. From then on his life has been a triumphal march from achievement to achievement.

Now he is chairman of the board of the Eastman Kodak Company of New York and of the Eastman Kodak Company of New Jersey. He is a paramount figure in one of the largest industries in the country—an industry which is becoming more and more important as the years go on, bearing such a vital relation to the progress of the press, the development of the motion picture and the new field television.

George Eastman, small town boy, "amateur" at photography, experimenter, inventor, now the head of a gigantic enterprise, merits the admiration of every small town boy at the threshold of life.

 Beauty, which captures all things, set me free.

TO WASH OR NOT TO WASH

If I were to be asked what constitutes a beautiful skin, I should answer instantly—a healthy one. Health is a primary law of Beauty, and no skin can be healthy unless it is hygienically clean. So the first and universally important role is—Regular and Thorough Cleansing. It simply isn't possible to gauge the number of letters that pour in from time to time, asking me for an expert opinion on the subject of washing the face. Women seem to be swayed so easily from the good, sane, common-sense ways by sensational advertising or incorrect and inexperienced opinions!

To settle all question of washing once and for all, let me say that in the thirty-odd years during which I have acted as confidant and adviser to some of the most beautiful women in the world, I have not come across one dozen instances where the skin was so fragile it would be injured by correct washing. Mind you—I say correct washing.

The use of a harsh or alkaline soap will ruin any skin, eventually. It is only a question of time as to when the protesting tissues will rebel. Complexion Soap, however, is made of the finest oils, and there is one kind in particular which is based on that ancient beautifier, the blended whites of fresh eggs. Such soaps, specially created and carefully perfected, will prove of the greatest value to even finest skin.

In dealing with an excessively oily skin or one marred by blackheads, whiteheads and pimples, the use of a scientifically compounded face wash, either a good stimulating blackhead and open pore paste, which incidentally is excellent for refining large pores, or special beauty grains which, through their content consistency, get right down into the pores, stimulating and cleansing them.

By all means I advise you to wash

THE LAST OF THE DUANES

by Zane Grey
Illustrated by Verne C. Christy

Accounting for the short cut across grove and field, it was about five minutes' walk up to Bland's house. To Duane it seemed long in time and distance, and he had difficulty in restraining his pace.

As he walked there came a gradual and subtle change in his feelings. Again he was going out to meet in conflict. He could have avoided this meeting. But despite the fact of his courting the encounter, he had not as yet felt that hot, inexplicable expulsion of blood. That motive of this deadly action was not personal and somehow that made a difference.

No outlaws were in sight. He saw several Mexican herders with cattle. Blue columns of smoke curled up over some of the cabins. The fragrant smell of it reminded Duane of his home—that he used to cut the wood for the stove. He noted a cloud of creamy mist above the river, dissolving in the sunlight.

Then he entered Bland's lane. While yet some distance from the cabin he heard loud, angry voices of man and woman. Bland and Kate still quarreling! He took a quick survey of the surroundings. There was now not even a Mexican in sight. Then he hurried a little.

Half-way down the lane he turned his head to peer through the cottonwoods. This time he saw Euchre coming with the horses. There was no indication that the old out- law might lose his nerve at the end. Duane had feared this.

Duane now changed his walk to a leisurely haunter. He reached the porch and then distinguished what was said inside the cabin.

"If you do—Bland, by Heaven, I'll fix you and her!" That was panting out in Kate Bland's full voice.

"Let me loose! I'm going in there. I tell you!" replied Bland hoarsely.

"What for?"

"I want to make a little love to her. Ha-ha! It'll be fun to have the laugh on her new lover."

"You lie!" cried Bland.

"Let me go!" His voice grew hoarser with passion.

"No, no! I won't let you go! You'll choke the—truth out of her! You'll kill her!"

"The truth!" gritted Bland.

"Yes, I lied. Jen lied. But she lied to save you. You needn't—murder her for that."

Bland cursed horribly. Then followed a wrestling sound of bodies in violent straining contact—the scrape of feet—the jangle of spurs—a crash of sliding table or chair, and then the cry of a woman in pain.

Duane stepped into the open door—inside the room. Kate Bland lay half across a table, where she had been flung, and she was trying to get to her feet. Bland's back was turned. He had opened the door into Jennie's room and had one foot across the threshold. Duane caught the girl's low, shuddering cry.

"Good morning!" he called, loud and clear.

With catlike swiftness Bland wheeled—then froze on the threshold. His sight, quick as his action, caught Duane's menacing, un-mistakable position.

Bland's big frame filled the door. He was in a bad place to reach for his gun. But he would not have time to step. Duane read in his eyes the desperate calculation of chances. For a fleeting instant Bland shifted his gaze to his wife. Then his whole body seemed to vibrate with the swing of his arm.

Duane shot him. He fell forward, his gun exploding as it dug into the floor, and it dropped loose from stretching fingers. Duane stood over him, stooped to turn him on his back. Bland looked up with clouded gaze then gasped his last.

"Duane, you've killed him!" cried Kate Bland huskily. "I know you'd have to."

She staggered against the wall, her eyes dilating, her strong hands clenching, her face half stunned, but showed no grief.

"Jennie!" called Duane sharply.

"Oh—is it you—Duane?" came a halting reply.

"Yes. Come out. Hurry!"

She came out with uneven steps, seeing only him, and she stumbled over Bland's body. Duane caught her arm, swung her behind him. He feared the woman when she realized how she had been duped. His action was protective, and his movement toward the door equally significant.

"Duane!" cried Mrs. Bland.

It was no time for talk. Duane edged on, keeping Jennie behind him. At that moment there was a pounding of iron-shod hoofs out in the lane. Kate Bland bounded to the door. When she turned back her amazement was changing to realization.

"Where're you taking Jen?" she cried, her voice like a man's.

"Get out of my way!" replied Duane. His look, perhaps, without speech, was enough for her. In an instant she was transformed into a fury.

"You hound! All the time you were fooling me. You made love to me! You let me believe—you swore you loved me! Now I see what was queer about you! All for that slut! But you can't have her. You'll never leave here alive! Give me that girl! Let me get at her! She'll never win any more men in this camp!"

She was a heavy, powerful woman, and it took all Duane's strength to ward off her onslaughts. She clawed at Jennie over his upheld arm. Every second her fury increased.

"Help! Help! Help!" she shrieked in a voice that must have penetrated to the remotest cabin in the valley.

"Let go! Let go!" cried Duane, low and sharp. He still held his gun in his right hand, and it began to be hard for him to ward the woman off. His coolness had gone with her shriek for help. "Let go!" he repeated, and he shoved her fiercely.

Suddenly she snatched a rifle off the wall and backed away, her strong hands fumbling at the lever. As she jerked it down, throwing a shell into the chamber and cocking the weapon, Duane leaped upon her. He struck up the rifle as it went off, the powder burning his face.

Jennie, run out! Get on a horse!" he said, still low and sharp.

Jennie flashed out of the door.

With an iron grasp Duane held to the rifle-barrel. He had grasped it with his left hand and he gave such a powerful pull that he swung the woman off the floor. But he could not loose her grip. She was a strong as he.

"Kate! Let go!"

He tried to intimidate her. She did not see his gun thrust in her face, or reason had given way to such an extent to passion that she did not care. She cursed. Her husband had used the same curses, and from her lips they seemed strange, unsexed, more deadly.

Like a tigress she fought him. Her face no longer resembled a woman's. The evil of that outlaw life, the wildness and rage, the meaning to kill was even in such a moment, terribly impressed upon Duane.

He heard a cry from outside—a man's cry, hoarse and alarming.

It made him think of loss of time. This demon of a woman might yet block his plan.

"Let go!" he whispered and felt his lips stiff. In the grimness of that instant he relaxed his hold on the riflebarrel.

With a sudden, redoubled, irresistible strength, she wrenched the rifle down and discharged it. Duane felt a blow—a shock—then a burning agony tearing through his breast. He staggered backward, almost falling. The woman's strong hands, awkward from passion, again fumbled at the lever of the gun.

He caught the rifle-barrel again, this time in his right hand, and pulled. She tripped over a chair and crashed down.

Duane leaped back, whirled, flew out of the door to the porch. The sharp cracking of a gun halted him. He saw Jennie holding to the bridle of his bay horse.

Euchre sat astride the other and he had a Colt leveled, and he was firing down the lane. Then came a single shot, heavier, and Euchre's ceased. He fell from the horse.

A swiftly shifted gaze showed to Duane a man coming down the lane. Chess Alloway! His gun was smoking. He broke into a run. Then in an instant he saw Duane, tried to check his pace as he swung up his arm. But that slight pause was fatal.

Duane shot, and Alloway was falling when his gun went off. His bullet whistled close to Duane and thudded into the cabin.

Duane bounded down to the horses. Jennie was trying to hold the plunging bay. Euchre lay flat on his back, dead, a bullet-hole in his shirt, his face set hard, and his hands twisted around gun and bridle.

"Jennie, you've nerve all right," cried Duane as he dragged down the horse she was holding. "Up with you now. There! Never mind long stirrups! Hang up somehow!"

He caught his bridle out of Euchre clutching and leaped astride. The frightened horses jumped into a run and thundered down the lane into the road. Duane saw men running from cabins. He heard shouts. But there were no shots fired.

Jennie seemed able to stay on her horse, but without stirrups she bounced so hard that Duane rode closer and reached out to grasp her arm.

Thus they rode through the valley to the trail that led up over the steep and broken Rim-Rock. As they began to climb Duane looked back. No pursuers were in sight.

"Jennie, we're going to get away!" he cried, exultation for her in his voice.

She was gazing horror-stricken; at his breast as, in turning to look back, he faced her.

"Oh, Duane, your shirt's all bloody!" she faltered, pointing with trembling finger.

With her words Duane became aware of two things—the hand he instinctively placed to his breast still held his gun—and he had sustained a terrible wound.

He had been shot through the breast far enough down to give him grave apprehension of his life. Little pain attended the injury, and no sense of weakness yet. The clean-cut bullet-hole bled freely both at its entrance and where it had come, but with no signs of hemorrhage. He did not bleed at the mouth; however, he began to cough up reddish tinged foam.

Jennie, with pale face and mute lips looked at him.

He felt a blow—a shock—then a burning agony tearing through his breast. He staggered backward, almost falling. The woman's strong hands, awkward from passion, again fumbled at the lever of the gun.

He caught the rifle-barrel again, this time in his right hand, and pulled. She tripped over a chair and crashed down.

Duane leaped back, whirled, flew out of the door to the porch. The sharp cracking of a gun halted him. He saw Jennie holding to the bridle of his bay horse.

Euchre sat astride the other and he had a Colt leveled, and he was firing down the lane. Then came a single shot, heavier, and Euchre's ceased. He fell from the horse.

A swiftly shifted gaze showed to Duane a man coming down the lane. Chess Alloway! His gun was smoking. He broke into a run. Then in an instant he saw Duane, tried to check his pace as he swung up his arm. But that slight pause was fatal.

Duane shot, and Alloway was falling when his gun went off. His bullet whistled close to Duane and thudded into the cabin.

Duane bounded down to the horses. Jennie was trying to hold the plunging bay. Euchre lay flat on his back, dead, a bullet-hole in his shirt, his face set hard, and his hands twisted around gun and bridle.

"Jennie, you've nerve all right," cried Duane as he dragged down the horse she was holding. "Up with you now. There! Never mind long stirrups! Hang up somehow!"

He caught his bridle out of Euchre clutching and leaped astride. The frightened horses jumped into a run and thundered down the lane into the road. Duane saw men running from cabins. He heard shouts. But there were no shots fired.

Jennie seemed able to stay on her horse, but without stirrups she bounced so hard that Duane rode closer and reached out to grasp her arm.

Thus they rode through the valley to the trail that led up over the steep and broken Rim-Rock. As they began to climb Duane looked back. No pursuers were in sight.

"Jennie, we're going to get away!" he cried, exultation for her in his voice.

She was gazing horror-stricken; at his breast as, in turning to look back, he faced her.

"Oh, Duane, your shirt's all bloody!" she faltered, pointing with trembling finger.

With her words Duane became aware of two things—the hand he instinctively placed to his breast still held his gun—and he had sustained a terrible wound.

He had been shot through the breast far enough down to give him grave apprehension of his life. Little pain attended the injury, and no sense of weakness yet. The clean-cut bullet-hole bled freely both at its entrance and where it had come, but with no signs of hemorrhage. He did not bleed at the mouth; however, he began to cough up reddish tinged foam.

Jennie, with pale face and mute lips looked at him.

Duane kept silence. "What will you do?" she went on. "Jennie, I'll go back to the brakes. I don't show my face among respectable people. I'm an outlaw." "You're no criminal!" she declared with deep passion.

"Jennie, on this border the little difference between an outlaw and a criminal doesn't count for much." "You won't go back among those terrible men? You, with your gentleness and sweetness—all that's good about you? Oh, Duane, don't don't go!"

"I can't go back to the outlaws, at least Bland's band. No, I'll go alone. I'll lone wolf it, as they say on the border. What else can I do, Jennie?"

"Oh, I don't know. Couldn't you hide? Couldn't you slip out of Texas—go far away?"

"I could never get out of Texas without being arrested. I could hide, but a man must live. Never mind about me, Jennie."

"Duane, if ever I'm safe out of this awful country," she cried. "I'll go to the Governor, I'll tell him your story. I'll tell him mine. I'll get you pardoned."

As she looked down upon her, a slight slender girl with bedraggled dress and disheveled hair, her face pale and quiet, a little stern in sleep, and her long, dark lashes lying on her cheeks, he seemed to see her fragility, her prettiness, her femininity as never before. But for him she might at that very moment have been a broken, ruined girl, lying back in that cabin of the Blands.

Tomorrow she would be gone, among good kind people, with a possibility of finding her relatives. He thanked God for that; nevertheless he felt a pang.

She slept more than half the day. Duane kept guard, always alert, whether he was sitting, standing, or walking. The rain patterned steadily on the roof and sometimes came in gusty flurries through the door. The horses were outside in a shed that afforded poor shelter, and they stamped restlessly. Duane kept them saddled and bridled.

In the Senior Class

In the senior class, Walter La is the most valuable boy. He is Student Body president, and president of the Debating Club. Walter has a boy with real brains to either one of these positions. He is a leader in his class.

Walter has proved himself. He is a leader in his class.

famous Perryton eleven, the Rangers. The Senior class is proud of him and feel certain he will be something great, some day;—something to make us glad that Walter had been in our class.

In the Junior Class

Here's to the Junior class! Congratulate them on their luck, for they have Raymond Wilson in their class. Raymond is everything that he could be. In fact, he's almost too good to be true.

Raymond is the artist of the school, and not only of the Junior class. His artistic talent is his greatest asset.

Besides being an artist, he is a poet. He possesses talent in this line, that some students do not know. His ability is not limited to four-versed stanzas, but he can write blank verse, or any other kind, which some of us can not even understand it.

Raymond does not go out for athletics, but when did anyone ever miss seeing him watching the game from the sidelines? And what's a little thing like athletics, between classes?

Raymond has one fault believe it or not! Yes, he is bashful! And yet, we wonder! Is it a fault? We know it certainly is a rarity, but we have almost come to the conclusion that it is another one of his assets! So say—lucky Juniors!

In the Sophomore Class

The sophomore girls state that, to their opinion, Clifton Bell is the most valuable student in the sophomore class. Clifton is the drum player at school, and one of the most handsome, and one of the most popular boys in the whole student body.

He is good in his studies, and is a good sport, and full of fun. We hope to have him with us next year. (Editor's note.)

Not only the sophomore girls like Clifton, but the student body in general.

In the Freshman Class

Of all the pupils of the Freshman class, we think Elizabeth Manning is the most favorable. Elizabeth is always ready to do what she is asked to do, in her school work, with a willing and ready smile.

She is talented in music, and reads exceedingly well. Although she is leaving us soon, she will always be remembered by the Freshman class of '28 and '29.

The English Club

Officers: President—Melvin Manning Vice-President—Cromwell Rogers Sec.-Treasurer—La Ferne Wooten

From a brief conversation with President Manning, it was gathered that the English Club has a favorable number of members, and is making rapid progress in its work.

They have, for the past, been studying the lives and literature of great and famous authors, which is very interesting and instructive.

Beautifying School Ground

We talk of what a fine school we have; of the buildings, the classes, athletics and all that is a part of the school with pride. When a visitor comes to town he is always taken to the school and shown thru it.

This is what should be done, for I admit that in the way of a school Perryton has the best that can be had. But one notices with regret that the Perryton High school lacks something that is found in schools every where but the Panhandle. This something is a lawn and more trees. Even more walks could be added. To have these is only a matter of a little work and money. By starting next spring and planting trees, and sowing grass seeds, we could soon have a lawn of green grass instead of one of weeds.

With a little landscaping, Perryton could rightly claim the best school in the Panhandle and would have something to prove the claim.

Yes! It would be a little difficult to keep the students from running across the lawn at first, but they would soon learn to take great pride in the green grass which is such a help in beautifying property and would gladly refrain from walking on it.

Why doesn't Perryton be the first in a beautiful campus as well as first in other things.

Another Party

The Debating club and their guests met at the home of Miss Mildred Todd last Friday evening and went to see the picture "Lilac Time," at the American Theatre.

The picture was good and everyone returned to Mildred's, feeling fine. A social hour was spent in playing the phonograph, cracking jokes, and making breaks, after which refreshments were served to Bessie Littleton, Lola Belle Barbour, Ione Packard, Essie Todd, Pauline Falls, Geneva Green, Elizabeth Richardson, Paul Pittman, Jack McCracken, Irvin Hergert, Mansel Coffee, Ralph Shearer, Walter LaMaster, and Mr. and Mrs. Irvine. Mr. and Mrs. Irvine were wonderful and the club hopes that sometime they can have another party with them as chaperones, for a very enjoyable evening was spent.

After an enjoyable trip to Austin, to attend state teachers meeting, Miss Clayton arrived at home Sunday nite. The students welcome her, and it might be of interest to some, to know that she met Henry Richardson, while there, who is a graduate of Perryton High School.

Miss Mitchell—When I was your age, I knew the names of all the Presidents by heart.
Ralph Shearer—Yeah, there was only a couple, then.

METHODIST CHURCH

All the services of the Methodist church will meet at the same hours they have been meeting and will be held for the purpose of education, worship, and fellowship.
 The services Sunday will be an installation service for all the church officials and Sunday School officers and workers. This is one service that we hope to have as many of the people present as possible. Especially let all the officers be present.
 We are here to begin a new year and we hope to start with something in view but we must have the assistance of the entire church to carry on the work of a church like this.
 The Methodist Church offers its people one of the best and most definite programs of work and we need only to study this and follow the directions of the leaders. Some people resent the giving of programs of work from the heads of the various departments of the church and general boards, but those churches which most nearly carry out these programs are the most successful in their work.
 The great corporations have experts to plan for them and then they dispatch these plans to every department and man on their force. Roger W. Babson tells us that until churches adopt better and more systematic methods, there is going to be a continuation of much loss in motion. But in no case should organization supercede the spiritual aims of the church. Plans, organizations and churches are not an end in themselves but they are a means to an end, the evangelization of the world and saving of souls.
 The annual conference at Lubbock was one of the best we have attended. There were more people who attended more of the services than we ever saw. Most of the churches had their reports in good condition. No church the size of this one had a better report than the Perryton church, for which the pastor claims no credit himself.

 We call the church to a task greater next year. Shall we not win and at Pampa next year when the conference meets again, be there with all business finished for the best.
 The new seats for the church are ordered and the furnace is being installed this week.

Mr. and Mrs. K. F. Miller, Follett returned to their home Wednesday after several days visit in the home of Mr. and Mrs. George Rupperecht Jr. Mrs. Rupperecht and children returned with her parents for a short stay as they leave soon for the valley to spend the winter.

Author of "PRACTICAL AUCTION BRIDGE"

ARTICLE No. 6

When said of a sound preemptive or shut-out bid that if defeated it saves small expense by preventing the opponents from showing the suit that were produced game between the combined hands. This principle is well illustrated by the following hand:

Z should lead a low spade, a trick in Y's hand with the queen then lead his last diamond in Z's hand with a low spade now lead another spade trick in Y's hand with the queen now lead the queen of clubs B should cover. Z then lead the trick with the ace. Z now lead three rounds of leading two hearts from the one club. B must discard one heart and one club. Z discard more than one club or Z can lead a club and make two club tricks in Y's hand. Z can now force B in the lead by playing the three of hearts from his hand and the seven of hearts from Y's hand. B must win this trick with the ten of hearts. After B plays the ace of hearts, he must lead clubs up to Y's hand, thus giving Z game and rubber.

CHEVROLET ANNOUNCED

to the motoring public the benefits of economies arising from the tremendous volumes produced by the Chevrolet Motor company. The Outstanding Chevrolet—A Six in the Price of the Four.

This important announcement, W. S. Knudsen, president and general manager, points to the sensational reception of the car in recent years and Chevrolet at this time added power, speed and six cylinder performance. Practically the same prices are maintained so much to the popularity of the four cylinder for the greatest year are now being made by the Chevrolet Motor company. The new car was started in the company's five factories across the country turning out cars to be delivered by December 15. The public will start to see the new car.

No definite schedule has been set for the 1929. Mr. Knudsen declared that the production of the new car probably exceed 1,250,000 units, surpassing all former records.

Offering Chevrolet has the highly successful valve-in-head principle. The motor is a compression type with a valve head and develops 40 per cent more power than its predecessor; its acceleration is measurably greater and has been stepped up to meet the requirements of the piston displacement is 194 cubic inches.

Despite this greatly improved performance standard, thousands of miles of testing under every road and weather conditions at the General Motors proving ground in addition to many cross country runs, have shown that the new Chevrolet engine will operate with an economy averaging better than 20 miles on a gallon of gasoline. This is practically the same fuel economy enjoyed by the owners of the previous four cylinder model.

The motor develops forty-six horse power at low speed and as a result the valve mechanism the motor is exceptionally quiet throughout the entire speed range.

Seven models of passenger cars and three commercial types comprise the line, which according to General Motors officials, embodies the greatest dollar value ever offered in an automobile. Included in the passenger car line are five closed and two open models. All bodies this year carry the famous Fisher stamp of craftsmanship. The commercial car line embraces a new and larger utility truck of one and one half ton capacity, a new light delivery chassis and the sedan delivery.

From an appearance standpoint as well as from inherent design, the car is completely new with a wide range of attractive colors and fine car appointments formerly found only on the more expensive makes.

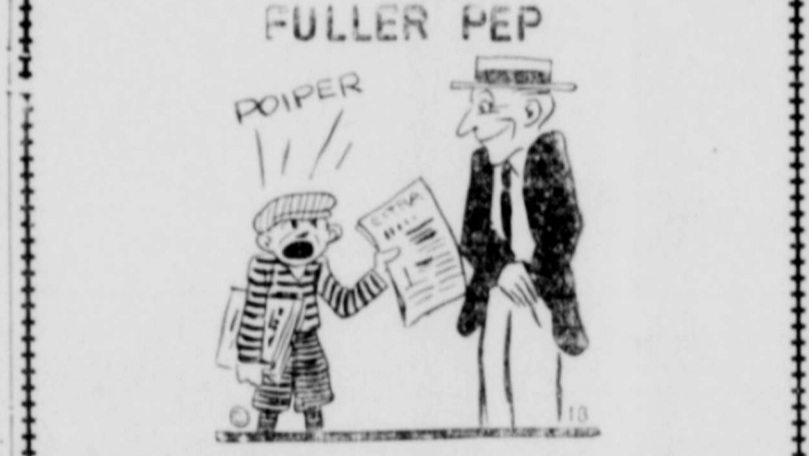

Despite the score of advanced features, prices remain practically the same, chiefly as a result of the influence of tremendous volume production. The passenger car range is from $525, to $725, f. o. b. Flint, Mich. The prices, according to models, are as follows: Roadster $25; phaeton $25 coach $595; coupe $595; sedan $675; sport cabriolet $695; convertible landau $725. The commercial car prices are: light delivery chassis $400; one and one half ton utility truck chassis $545; one and one half ton utility truck chassis with cab $650 and the sedan delivery $595.

COX-ALLEN

Miss Flora Cox and Mr. Rupert C. Allen were quietly married in Amarillo on Wednesday of last week in the presence of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Allen of Stinnett. This ceremony unites two of Perryton's very best citizens.

Mrs. Allen came to Perryton a number of years ago from Liberal, Kansas, where she had been head nurse at the Liberal Hospital. By her efficient and kind work at the latter place and here in Perryton, she won a place in the hearts of many by the assistance she was able to render in times of illness. For several months past, she has been serving as manager of a large sanitarium at Sweetwater, Texas.

The groom is one of Perryton's most successful business men. He has lived in Ochiltree County since early manhood. Mr. Allen is the owner and manager of the Allen Abstract Co. and is also county surveyor. He is also a state surveyor and in this capacity straightens out survey tangles all over this section of the Panhandle.

Mr. and Mrs. Allen returned to Perryton last Saturday afternoon. They were guests of honor at a big turkey dinner on Sunday in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Allen. The Herald joins with the host of friends in wishing them a long and happy married life. They will be at home in a short time in the beautiful new home which Mr. Allen is building in Ridge Lawn.
