Meeting to address Borden County as 4th site

By DONNY BROWN
SDN Managing Editor

Officials with the Texas Low-Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority — who hope to add Borden County property as a fourth candidate site for Texas' first such facility — will be in Borden County Monday night.

Four members of the authority will attend a public meeting in Gail, a session requested by county residents who oppose any such land sales in Borden County.

The meeting will begin at 7 p.m. in the Borden County school cafeteria.

Those expected to represent the state agency Monday are Rick Jacobi, general manager; Bob Avant, assistant general manager; Ruben Alvarado, chief engineer; and Tom Blackburn, director of special programs.

Blackburn said from the authority's Austin office Friday that they will offer a 20 to 25 minute presentation, then open the meeting to questions.

"We're of course aware that there is opposition to us in Borden County. Our attitude during these meetings is to answer any question put to us as honestly as we can."

He said the presentation would serve to "explain activities" related to both a site search and the expected operation of the state's first low-level radioactive waste disposal site.

He said they would try to address both the "positive and the negative" aspects of such sites.

The current indication is that the authority is still in the negotiation phase of a possible land sale in Borden County. If an option purchase can be obtained, Borden County would become the fourth potential site identified to date.

The authority currently has an option to buy some 456 acres in South Texas near Asherton (Dimmit County). In addition, two sites have been identified in Hudspeth County in far West Texas.

Both of these sites are owned by the University of Texas, and regents for the university have informed the authority they would allow the sites to be considered.

Blackburn said Friday that there is no specified agreement that UT would sell this property if selected, however.

Another potential site had earlier been identified in LaSalle County, but Blackburn said these negotiations "fell through" last week.

Opposition to the sale of land there caused the potential seller to call off any transactions, he said.

"If we did get a site in Borden County," Blackburn said, "you could say it has a 25 percent chance of being selected."

Even though the authority has one area of land they could legally now purchase, "every site has pluses and minuses." When a final decision is required, he said these would be weighed against the other.

The fact that the authority has a signed option to buy land in South Texas doesn't necessarily make it the best possible site, he said.

"The ultimate goal is one site, but the variables are so diverse."

In summing up the current status of the site search, Blackburn commented, "We have a legal right to Asherton. In Hudspeth, I think we have a fairly good chance.

"In Borden County, we're at first base trying to get to second."

New building at $3 million over last year

The previously announced plans for a new Anthony's department store helped make February a $1 million-plus new construction month in Snyder.

And it served to widen the gap even further comparing new construction estimates this year to last — a difference now nearing $3 million.

With five months of the fiscal year completed, Snyder's new building valuation stands at some $4.4 million. For the same time last year, it was at $1.7 million.

Exact figures for both are $4,457,924 and $1,789,018 respectively.

The February total equals $1,104,580, according to figures released Friday by city officials.

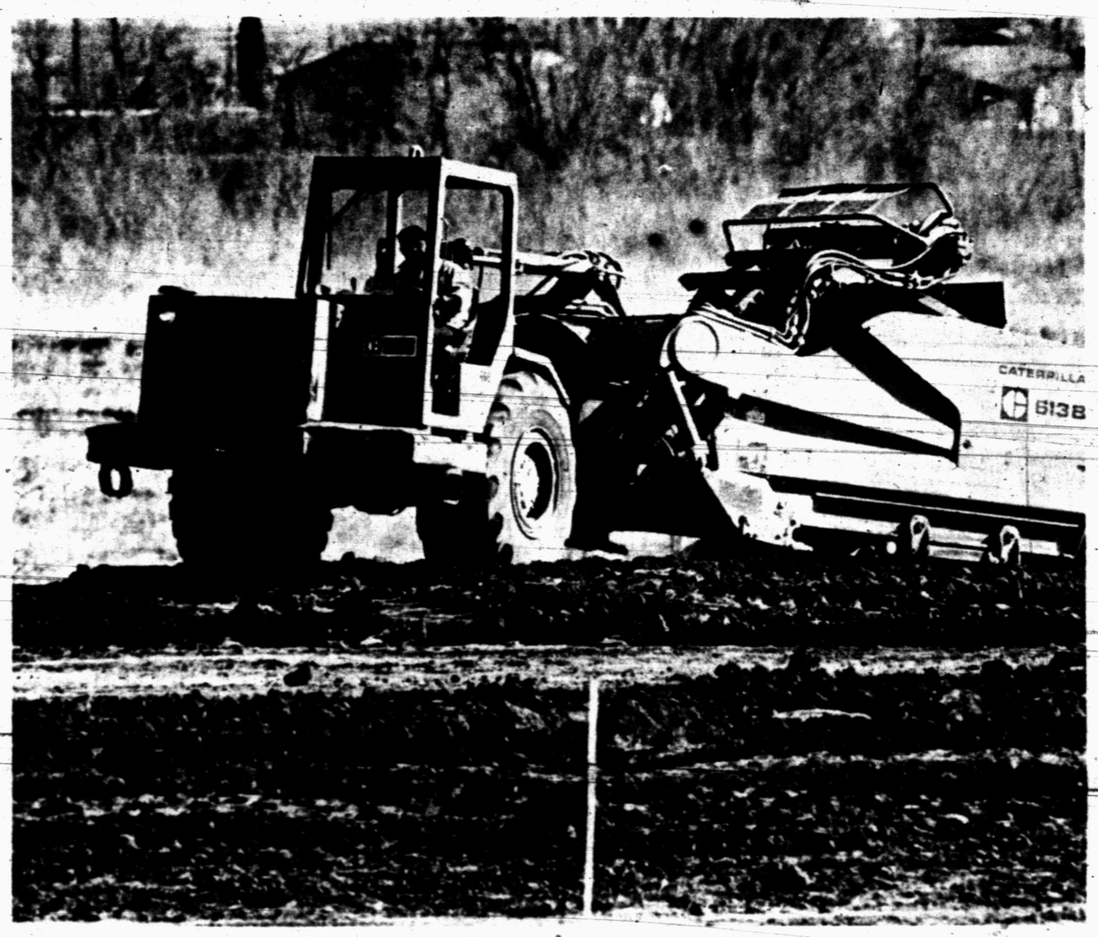

The Anthony's project, now in the dirt work phase at 3210 College Ave., accounted for some $609,000 of this total. The store is being built by Chisum Construction of Snyder. It includes some 17,400 sq. ft.

During February, permits were also issued for six new homes in the city and two other commercial-related projects.

The six new homes accounted for almost $400,000 of the February building estimate. New home owners were listed as Mike Graves, 5402 Cedar Creek; Jack Willis, 2106 Ave. Z; Jerald Smith, 3309 Houston; Perrell Homes, 3205 Houston; and two issued to August Construction at 3603 44th St. and 4305 Lubbock.

Other commercial building projects include a storage facility to be built at 400 36th Place by Omega Properties Inc. and a new office facility to be built by Bill Wilson at 1001 East Highway.

In addition, the month include four mobile home move-ins. Permits for these were issued to Don Vaughan, 414 27th St.; James Bretzin, 2103 O'Neal; Brenda Blackwell, 2603 Ave. B; and Jean O'Connor, 2609 Ave. B.

DIRT WORK BEGINS — This earth-moving scraper is at work at the site for Snyder's new Anthony's at 3210 College Ave. The estimated $609,000 construction cost for the store helped pace the February building figures here to $1 million-plus. With five months of the fiscal year completed, Snyder's new building valuation stands at some $4.4 million. For the same time last year, it was at $1.7 million. (SDN Staff Photo)

Hermleigh, Ira filings updated

Wednesday is the deadline to file for school board seats at both Ira and Hermleigh.

At Ira, four board positions are expiring. For the first time this year, trustees will run for specific places on the board.

As of Friday, candidates were announced for three of the four places. These candidates do not include three board incumbents, however.

Board members with terms expiring are Donnie Dunn, place 1; Tommy Sterling, place 2; Jim Wilson, place 3; and Carl Smith, place 5.

Smith has announced as a candidate, but chose to run for place 1 on the board since the place 5 position will be for an unexpired term rather than a full three-year term.

Other announced candidates are Myron Calley, place 2; and Darvin Baze, place 5. No candidates have filed for place 3 as of Friday.

For the Hermleigh board, the two incumbent candidates are unopposed for re-election. They are Jimmy Hudgins and Alan Kuss, both completing their first three-year term.

Hermleigh trustees run at-large rather than for a specific place on the board.

One post still minus candidate...

3 filing days remain for boards

Wednesday is the deadline to file for expiring positions on the Snyder city council, the Western Texas College board of trustees and the Snyder school board.

With three days remaining, no new candidates have surfaced since an initial flurry of filings in early February.

Candidates are announced for every expiring position except one, place 6 on the Snyder school board, currently held by Ray Max Grimmitt.

For all three boards, prospective candidates may file at the administrative offices for each entity. Since Snyder public schools will be closed this week, administrative officials have announced that school personnel will be in the administration building during regular business hours.

To file for the school board, candidates may go to the ad building between 8 a.m. and noon and 1-4 p.m. through Wednesday.

The doors will be locked, but staffers will be on hand to let them in if they knock.

Western Texas College is observing spring break also, but administrative offices on campus will remain open through 3 p.m. Wednesday.

As of Friday, here is how the races for each stand.

CITY COUNCIL

With three councilman seats and the mayor's post due to expire, candidates are announced for all four positions.

City Mayor Rod Waller has again indicated he will be a candidate and he is so far unopposed.

For Place 6, incumbent councilman Don Osborn has filed for re-election. He seeks his second two-year term.

Two incumbents have indicated they are not seeking re-election, both after serving two terms on the council.

Outgoing council members are Ed Thrift, place 2, and Don Gressett, place 4.

New candidates announced for these positions — both unopposed as of Friday — are Tommy Davis, place 2, and Troy Williamson, place 4.

COLLEGE BOARD

For the WTC college board, the first contested race in the college's history has surfaced as three candidates have announced to date for place 2 on the board.

Incumbent trustee Roy Baze, who is completing an unexpired term after being appointed to the board in December of 1983, faces two candidates.

Also announced for the post are Lee Presswood and Bob O'Day. College trustees serve six-year terms.

One other seat is due to expire on the college board with incumbent Bill Wilson again a candidate. Wilson has served on the board since it was formed in 1971.

SCHOOL BOARD

Two trustee posts on the Snyder school board are expiring. As of Friday one of these had developed into

Chain-reaction crash reported

A chain-reaction crash involving three vehicles sent three Hermleigh residents to Cogdell Memorial Hospital for treatment of minor injuries Friday around midnight.

The traffic accident was reported about 2.5 miles east of Hermleigh.

According to DPS accident reports, Martin Fuentes lost control of a 1977 Chevrolet, causing it to leave the roadway at the intersection of County Rd. 4124 and 4133.

His car clipped a guy wire on a utility pole, causing a momentary power outage in the Hermleigh area. Fuentes' injuries included a broken nose.

A vehicle traveling behind him — a 1983 Jeep driven by Stephen Livingston of Hermleigh — was struck from the rear by a 1978 Pontiac driven by Tom Henry, also of Hermleigh.

Livingston and Henry also sustained minor injuries in the mishap. All were transported to the local hospital by private vehicle.

Clyde Hall, local insurance man, is worried and nature is the source of his concern. Clyde is keeping his eye on next weekend's weather forecast and on rattlesnakes.

Beginning next Friday, Clyde and his wife, Tizzy, will host the Southwest Chapter of the American Navion Society. The chapter is part of a 1,239-member international organization of owners of the classic aircraft.

The chapter will hold a fly-in at Snyder's Winston Field to coincide with the annual Rattlesnake Roundup in Sweetwater.

Plans for the Snyder fly-in began several months ago when a member from Natchez, Miss. contacted Hall and insisted that he host the group. He specified that it must be on the same weekend as the rattlesnake roundup.

Hall confessed, that in the 26-year history of the rattlesnake roundup, he had never been and had no interest in going. But this year he will be host for the group.

Clyde is also keeping a hopeful eye on the weather as 16 planes are expected. The delegation will come from Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas.

Hall says he was surprised that someone in Mississippi had ever heard of the Sweetwater roundup. He then learned from Virginia Williams, secretary in his office, that the event gets international attention.

Last year Mrs. Williams was visiting her sister in England and saw a news report of the Sweetwater event on BBC.

Q. — Why can't we get a schedule for Channel 3 in the TV news?

A. — While it is not carried in the regular 12-channel listing, a schedule for Channel 3 is included in the SDN's "Weekly TV News" publication. On page 17, we have included a separate box schedule for Channel 3, which carries the Christian Broadcasting Network over the SCAT cable system. The newspaper added this schedule several months ago.

Three children die in fire

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Three children left sleeping unattended while their mother was at work died when a fire swept through their home, authorities said.

Wanda Payne arrived in tears at the fire-gutted house at about 7:30 a.m. Friday to find paramedics trying to revive the children. All three were found in a front bedroom of the house.

The children were identified Jules E. Payne, 8; Dan Payne, 4; and Chauncy Payne, 15 months.

Dan was taken to Cook Children's Hospital where he was pronounced dead shortly after his arrival. The two other children were taken to John Peter Smith Hospital, where they were pronounced dead on arrival.

Gentry is sentenced to die

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Georgia prison escapee Kenneth Gentry has been sentenced to death by injection in the 1983 shooting death of a Dallas man.

Jurors deliberated 40 minutes before reaching the decision on the sentence. Gentry was convicted Friday after two days of testimony.

Prosecutors said Gentry, 23, killed Jimmy Don Ham, 23, in a scheme to assume Ham's identity because Gentry was wanted. He had escaped in 1982 from a Georgia prison where he had served time on various offenses.

Ham's body was found Sept. 13 in a park on the shore of Lake Lewisville. He had been shot once in the chest and once in the head. Gentry was arrested two days later at a motel in Austin, Minn. and was later returned to Denton County.

Ohio senator grilling attorney general appointee

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Howard Metzenbaum says he isn't finished questioning whether Edwin Meese III, the nominee for attorney general, received special privileges from bankers and the Army because he was a top Reagan aide.

The Ohio Democrat suggested there were several contradictions in Meese's testimony Friday during confirmation hearings before the Senate Judiciary Committee.

Meese denied any discrepancies, but Metzenbaum vowed to continue on Monday to probe for information about loans made to the presidential counselor by calling some of the people to testify who were involved in lending the money.

Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker, however, is predicting that Meese would win confirmation.

"Meese has made a disclosure of all financial arrangements and circumstances and I find nothing in there that is dishonest or immoral or questionable and I don't think it will have a serious impact on his confirmability," Baker, R-Tenn., told reporters.

Metzenbaum is investigating whether some Californians helped Meese financially and, in return, won appointment to government posts. Meese has denied such a role.

The longtime adviser to President Reagan endured two days of intense questioning from several Democrats on the committee into his personal finances, views on civil rights and political independence from te president. He ended his testimony Friday night, but could be recalled.

The exchanges over apparent contradictions arose when Meese was confronted with his handwritten notes which appeared to show he knew more about a deal to sell his California home than he admitted under oath the day before.

Under questioning from the senator, Meese insisted: "There's no discrepancy whatsoever."

Testifying under oath Thursday about the sale of his La Mesa, Calif., home in 1982 to Irv Howard, Meese had said, "I do not know the amount of the Howard loan since he took that out totally separate from any knowledge on my part."

Metzenbaum read those words back to Meese on Friday after the senator had introduced notes which Meese identified as his own handwritten description in 1982 of a telephone conversation about the house sale.

The notes were dated Aug. 18, 1982, half a month before the sale to Howard, and listed Howard as the buyer of the home for $300,000 with a $60,000 down payment and a $240,000 loan.

"It would appear you were very much aware of the whole transaction," Metzenbaum told Meese.

Meese replied, "It was absolutely a legitimate business deal."

During the two days of testimony, Metzenbaum had asked Meese whether he played a role in getting federal jobs for several men involved in his loans.

But at the end of Metzenbaum's questioning, Committee Chairman Strom Thurmond ran Meese through several questions designed to rebut the implication of Metzenbaum's line of attack.

Thurmond asked Meese in quick succession if he had initiated the appointments to federal jobs of four different men involved in his loans. In three cases, Meese replied in the negative and in the fourth, he said he wasn't sure but that he supported the appointment.

Later in the day, Metzenbaum read a classified Army report on Meese's transfer from the retired to the active reserve, his appointment as a reserve Army liaison to the Selective Service and his promotion from lieutenant colonel to full colonel.

San Francisco...

City tries to find youth

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Kevin Collins looks like many a freckle-faced 10-year-old son or pesky kid brother. That helps to explain why his disappearance has touched a nerve in this city which has been literally papered with his photo by thousands of volunteers.

The tousle-haired fourth-grader was on his way home from basketball practice on Feb. 10 when he was last seen at a Haight-Ashbury bus stop around 7 p.m., petting a large black dog.

"We Love You Kevin — Where Are You?" says one of the 200,000 posters plastered up across northern California. "This Child Could Be Yours," reads the caption on another.

All the fliers, seemingly pasted on every tree, store window and building in San Francisco, feature the same photo; a button-nosed child looking over his shoulder, his eyes registering the slight surprise of someone who wasn't expecting to see a camera there.

The campaign to find Kevin is run by his parents, Ann and Dave Collins, and Ann's brother, Michael Deasy. It gets at least 100 phone calls a day on a special hotline.

The calls have included reported sightings, offers to help and claims by about 80 psychics who say they've had visions about Kevin. Nothing has panned out and a $10,000 reward remains intact, but the family, which includes eight other children aged 7 through 19, remains hopeful.

"We're going to go on until we get Kevin back or until we find out what happened to him," Deasy said. "That's the way we feel right now."

The walls of their command center in the St. Agnes Church rectory, less than a block from where Kevin was last seen, are covered with maps of the city sectioned off with red markers. There are posters of Kevin in four languages and an enlargement of the photo used on the flier.

"This is the first case we've had like this," police Capt. Lawrence Gray said. "Kevin is young; he has no history of running away; he was on his way home when he disappeared...."

Police find all but about 200 of the 2,000 juveniles reported missing in San Francisco each year, Gray said, and the rest are considered runaways.

"There's no way (he's a runaway)," Mrs. Collins said. "It's completely out of character. He'd never been away from home at night, except to an aunt's house twice. No way. Not Kevin."

The family has support groups across northern California and has heard from people as far away as New York.

Kevin's disappearance has made it clear to his family that there needs to be a national network to help in cases like these.

"We've all found there's really nothing in place that can deal with the problem, respond effectively, immediately, which is needed. There's no organization out there that can help us," Deasy said.

THE SECRETARY'S MOST COMMON COMPLAINT

The secretary's most common complaint, believe it or not, has nothing to do with the company she (or he) works for or her boss. Although her attitude toward her job may very well be influenced by her work load and her respect for the company and person she works for, most often the complaint centers around the equipment provided her to do her job.

Bad typewriter, you ask? Not at all. Most secretaries are satisfied with their typewriters, desks, and work environments. But their big gripe is their chair. That is, if they are aware enough to associate that chronic nagging backache with an inadequate sitting posture.

The reason: the fact the devoted secretary is prone to severe postural stress and back pain.

Is it any wonder then, that at times she moves a little slower than she used to and doesn't have the smile on her face that customers find so attractive?

Consider the possibility that your valued secretary may have strained muscles and a sore back from sitting in the same strained position for hours on end.

Your doctor of chiropractic, a specialist in treating health problems related to the back and spine, has some good suggestions on how you can keep a secretary happy and more efficient.

(1) Get her a good posture chair.

(2) Advise her to sit erect with her feet firmly on the floor.

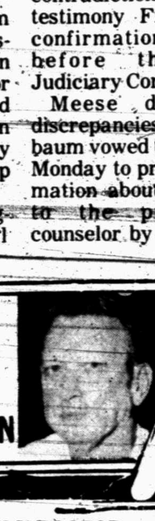

(3) Suggest that she change sitting positions frequently.

(4) Let her take standing breaks occasionally, perhaps by giving her a variety of duties.

If you are a secretary, clip this column and give it to your boss. If you are an executive, hand it to your secretary.

Nicaraguan refugees see U.S. 'double standard'

MIAMI (AP) — The Reagan administration treats Nicaraguans under a double standard, blasting the leftist Sandinista government in Managua yet denying political asylum to those who have fled that Central American nation, refugees here say.

Some Nicaraguan refugees blame what they see as a contradiction in policy on career bureaucrats who sympathize with the Sandinistas. Others see the denials of asylum as part of a strategy by the U.S. government to promote revolt within Nicaragua.

Their resentment and frustration bubbled to the surface Thursday, when more than 300 Nicaraguans demonstrated outside the Immigration and Naturalization Service offices in Miami, chanting "asylum, asylum," and singing Nicaragua's traditional anthem.

Signs reading "No more discrimination for Nicaraguan people" and "Nicaraguans Claim for Justice" dotted the peaceful, three-hour march.

"These people are very afraid," said Rene Quinonez, director of the Miami-based Humanitarian Committee for Nicaraguan Refugees, the most active Nicaraguan organization in South Florida.

From "a mere handful" 10 years ago, Nicaraguan refugees number an estimated 30,000 in Dade County alone, said committee attorney Robert Boyer. There are smaller refugee communities in Los Angeles, San Francisco, New Orleans and Washington, D.C.

The INS has no figures on the number nationwide.

The Sandinistas deposed strongman Anastasio Somoza in 1979. A renewed exodus was touched off last July, when the Nicaraguan government lowered the minimum age requirement for obligatory military service from 18 to 16. Many of the latest refugees are young people who say they won't fight the anti-Sandinista guerrillas.

The wave of Nicaraguans entering the United States, often without visas, has resulted in about 150 applications for political asylum being filed each week, said Quinonez.

It has also meant mass rejections, "more than a thousand in the last two or three weeks, and 2,000 more expected in the next two weeks," said Quinonez, who was in Miami on business when Somoza was overthrown, and never went back.

His estimate differs from INS figures. Immigration agency spokesman George Waldroup said from Dec. 25 to Jan. 25, the average of Nicaraguan claims for asylum was 82.5 a week. During the 30-day period prior to that, the claims averaged 93.5 a week, he said.

Waldroup also said from Oct. 1 to Jan. 5, the United States granted asylum to 314 Nicaraguans and denied 300 claims. There are 8,738 applications pending, he added.

"We have noticed a drop in the number of claims since work authorization has been denied (to new applicants)," Waldroup said. "But don't ask me why they've been denied."

The INS began denying work authorization to new Nicaraguan asylum applicants near the end of October, Waldroup said.

In the year ahead, in order to improve your material standing you may find yourself more daring and enterprising than in the past. This is good, provided you don't become prone to reckless gambles.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Do not permit your extravagant whims to gain the upper hand today. If you're associating with big spenders, there's a chance this might happen. Look ahead into the year following your birthday by sending for your Pisces Astro-Graph predictions. Mail $1 and your zodiac sign to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019. Send an additional $2 for your Matchmaker set, which tells to whom you are best suited romantically.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) It will take more than your charm and good looks to get you by today where important goals are concerned. Objectives will be achieved only through dedication.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Normally you're logical and methodical, but today you may leave important matters to chance and lessen your possibilities for success.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) A wise old adage says, "A bird in the hand is worth two in the bush." Bear this in mind today, especially when conducting business.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Persons in a position to help you will shy away today if they feel you are only cozying up to them because you need them. Be sincere.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) If you are too impressed with your own ideas today, it could cause you to turn a deaf ear to better suggestions made by coworkers.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Subdue tendencies today to impulsively jump into joint ventures before you know exactly what you're getting yourself involved in. Be slow, not sorry.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Persons sincerely interested in your welfare may want to offer you helpful advice today. Hear them out before making big decisions.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You're not the type of person who ignores responsibility. However, today you may step out of character and leave what needs doing up to others.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Even though material conditions are improving for you, this is not a good time to be wasteful or extravagant. Think thrift and prudence.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You might be a shade too opinionated today for your own good. You may think you're impressing others, and you are -- but the wrong way.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Keep a lock on your tongue today or else there's a possibility you might let the cat out of the bag pertaining to something secret.

March 5, 1984

Your possibilities for adding to your material worth look promising in the coming year. You will be more ingenious and resourceful in money matters than you have been in the past.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Let events run their natural course today, because they should work out to your ultimate benefit. Introducing erratic changes may spoil things. Want to find out to which signs you are best suited romantically? Send $2 to Astro-Graph, Box 489, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019 for your Astro-Graph Matchmaker set. Send an additional $1 plus your zodiac sign for your year-ahead predictions.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) Your generosity is easily aroused today, yet you may put strings on that which you give and diminish the luster of your deeds.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) Instinctively you'll know how to achieve important objectives today but, once you get what you want, you may not be equally as wise about holding onto it.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Make it a point today to speak well about persons with whom you're involved careerwise. Gossip or thoughtless comments could alienate an associate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Someone fond of you is willing to do something for you today she wouldn't do for others. Don't mention what transpires to uninvolved friends.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Agreements based upon unselfishness will work out well for all concerned today. In matters where you are trying to gain an edge, this won't be true.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) This can be a very productive day, provided you work on projects you enjoy. Distasteful tasks could prove to be a waste of time.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Take time to enjoy yourself today but don't overload your agenda with fun pursuits to where you neglect your essential responsibilities.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) Try to focus your social activities within the home today. Invite others in, rather than making it an expensive night out on the town.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) You'll be in a better frame of mind for handling difficult assignments early in the day than you will be toward evening. Don't put things off.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You should be rather fortunate today where your material interests are concerned, yet you might be dissatisfied because you expended more.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) In financial or business matters today, be pleasant to those with whom you deal but don't be so easygoing that you give away the store.

March 12 will also be Cowboy and Cowgirl Day and everyone attending the noon meal is asked to get into the spirit of the day by dressing in western attire. Ribbons will be given for the best outfits.

Liquid embroidery classes will be resumed in the center starting Tuesday. Classes are to meet on the first and third Tuesday of each month at 1 p.m. An instructor will be present to help beginners or advanced students with their projects.

The center's annual recognition banquet honoring volunteers is being planned for March 29 in the Scurry County Coliseum. Everyone planning to attend must make a reservation by March 23 because of the food preparation involved. No noon meal will be served in the center on March 29 because of the banquet.

Survey finds bills more than double in 11 years

By Louise Cook
Associated Press Writer

Bad weather continued to take its toll on the family budget during February, boosting supermarket bills by more than 2 percent, according to an Associated Press market-basket survey which shows grocery prices today are more than double what they were when the survey began 11 years ago.

The AP survey covers 14 food and non-food items, selected at random and priced in one supermarket in each of 13 cities on March 1, 1973. Prices have been rechecked on or about the start of each succeeding month. The results are not seasonally adjusted. Nor are they weighted to show what proportion of its budget a family might actually spend on each item each week.

Among the highlights of the latest findings:

—The marketbasket went up in February at the checklist store in 11 cities and down in two cities, for an over-all average increase of 2.1 percent. That followed a nine-tenths of 1 percent boost in January.

—The increase last month was the largest since November 1980, when the marketbasket bills at the checklist stores rose an average of 2.4 percent. Like the latest rise, the earlier one was triggered by bad weather — a severe summer drought. This year, prices are being boosted not only by the heat of last summer, but also by the extreme cold of December and January.

—A look at prices today compared with 1973 shows that the marketbasket bill went up at the checklist store in every city, rising an average of 109 percent — slightly less than the rise in the Consumer Price Index for all items during the same period.

—The AP found that chopped chuck went up last month at the checklist store in more cities — nine — than any other item. On a brighter note, egg prices declined in nine cities, although the average price of a dozen medium white eggs remained above $1.25.

—The February increases were widespread and touched many areas of the supermarket. More than one-third of the total number of items checked went up in price and there were more than twice as many increases as decreases.

Against reporter, layperson...'

All charges will stand

McALLEN, Texas (AP) —An editor from the Dallas Times Herald said he was disappointed that charges were not dismissed against reporter Jack Fischer, who is charged with conspiracy to transport three illegal Salvadoran aliens.

U.S. Magistrate Susan Rees Williams refused Friday to dismiss the charges against Fischer and a religious worker, Stacey Lynn Merkt. A third defendant, Sister Dianne Muhlenkamp, waived her right earlier to a preliminary hearing.

"We're eager to exonerate our reporter. We don't believe he's guilty of the charges against him," said Roy Bode, assistant managing editor of the Times Herald.

Newspaper officials have said Fischer was in the Rio Grande Valley working on a story on Central American refugees at the time of his arrest. Last January, Fischer wrote a front-page story on the sanctuary movement in Dallas.

The magistrate's ruling clears the way for federal prosecutors to seek indictments against Fischer, 30, Miss Merkt, 29, of Colorado Springs, Colo., and Sister Dianne, 36, of Donaldson, Ind.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Jack Wolfe said he did not know if evidence against the nun, reporter and layworker would be ready to present to the next federal grand jury, which meets on March 13.

The three Americans were arrested on a rural road near Rio Grande City about 5 a.m. on Feb. 17.

The Salvadorans, Mauricio Valle, Brenda Sanchez-Galan and her 18-month old daughter, were in the back seat of the car which belongs to the Catholic Diocese of Brownsville.

Workers with the sanctuary movement, a loose knit ecumenical group of churches and organizations assisting refugees, say the trial will pit the federal government against the church. It also may be "the political trial of 1984," said Jack Elder, director of Casa Oscar Romero, a refugee halfway house in San Benito.

The Salvadorans had been staying at the house before they were arrested.

Many of those waiting outside the courtroom Friday said the case could decide some complicated legal questions, including the scope of First Amendment rights of reporters, the legality of the sanctuary movement and whether the government is wrongfully refusing to accept Salvadorans as bona fide war refugees.

"We anticipate this will be a big case," said Laurie Lemel, spokeswman for the Chicago Religious Task Force on Central America which serves as a clearinghouse for the sanctuary movement.

"We see this as an attack on the church and the church and the church's ministry. This is a test of everyone's faith," said Ms. Lemel.

Reacting to the magistrate's ruling, Miss Merkt said, "I'm not a criminal. I'm a Christian."

Attorneys for Miss Merkt had argued that charges should be dropped because the Salvadorans were not here illegally, but were in the process of seeking political asylum.

Ms. Williams said in making her ruling, that there had been "some confusion about the role of this court."

"We are not being called upon to decide if anyone is guilty of the offense charged, or if an indictment should be isssued," she said.

The role of her court was only to decide if sufficient evidence existed to believe an offense had been commited and that the reporter and layworker had been involved, she said.

Federal prosecutors have said this alien transporting case is no different than any other and that most Salvadorans are economic, not political, refugees.

Mrs. Sanchez and Valle face separate charges of illegal entry. Deportation proceedings have also been initiated against them.

Ms. Lemel said the Salvadorans are "typical of all El Salvadorans in terms of the suffering they represent."

Mrs. Sanchez and Valle were workers in a displaced persons camp run by the Lutheran Church in San Salvador.

More than 100 churches in the United States have declared themselves sanctuaries for Central American since 1982, Ms. Lemel said.

Ms. Lemel said the arrest of the Fischer, Miss Merkt, Sister Dianne, Mrs. Sanchez and Valle has spawned numerous inquiries from churches around the country interested in opening their doors to aliens.

Nursing class sets precedent

The March vocational nursing class at Western Texas College has set a precedent.

This is the first time that a March class has been filled to capacity, Winnie Poyner, instructor, said. WTC starts vocational nursing classes in March and September and traditionally the fall class is the favorite starting time.

The program is limited to a total of 30 students and reached that total with 12 students in the March class. The class which started in September has 18 students.

Vocational Nursing students attend classes for 12 months. The first four months are spent in the classroom. In the remaining eight months, students work 33 hours in Cogdell Memorial Hospital in clinical training and attend seven hours of classroon study as well. Upon successful completion of their studies at WTC, they are eligible to take the State Board of Vocational Nurse Examiners test to become Licensed Vocational Nurses. Persons wishing information about enrolling in the program are invited to contact Miss Poyner or Diane Beard, instructor, at the college.

The Scurry County Crusade is being sponsored by several churches in the county.

Jackson, a veteran star of country music, has been singing and entertaining throughout the United States and Canada since her early teens.

A native of Oklahoma, Jackson's talents were discovered by Hank Thompson. Throughout her career she has received many honors including being voted "The Favorite Female Country Music Singer" of the Scandanavian countries in 1971 and 1972.

In real life, she is a devoted Christian and lives with her husband/manager Wendell Goodman and their children in Oklahoma City.

LAFF-A-DAY

"Phew, it sure is humid today."

The cock-of-the rock is a bird found in remote areas of South America. It is named for two of its characteristics. The male bird earned the name "cock" because of its rooster-like appearance and combative behavior. The female added the "rock" because of her habit of nesting in sheltered rock niches.

Dinner becomes Demo battle area

ATLANTA (AP) — Walter Mondale says Gary Hart has caved in to the lobbyists and to "Big Oil," while Hart says the voters are backing his solutions and ideas and rejecting the former vice president's slogans and promises.

Mondale and Hart are locked in an increasingly bitter battle as the crucial primaries at Super Tuesday draw nearer in the race for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The weapons Friday were sharp-edged humor and tough criticisms of stands on the issues, particularly at a fund-raising dinner for the Georgia Democratic Party.

With Hart and Mondale trading barbs, Sen. John Glenn pleaded with state Democrats that it was his philosophy that is closest to their conservative views.

Maine was the destination today for both Hart and Mondale on the eve of the state's municipal caucuses Sunday that are the first campaign confrontation since Hart upset Mondale in the New Hampshire primary on Tuesday. Mondale was stopping in Marietta, Ga., and Miami before going north, while Glenn was headed to Arkansas.

The Rev. Jesse Jackson is staying in the South, where he is counting on a big primary vote in Georgia and Alabama.

George McGovern is staying in Massachusetts, hoping to place first or second in another of the primaries on March 13 in an effort to keep his longshot bid to repeat as the party nominee alive.

The candidates in Georgia did not put down their weapons for the Jefferson-Jackson Day dinner with 1,300 party faithful, but they added a sheath of humor.

Hart held up a shower head, quoting Mondale as saying he had taken "a cold shower" in losing the New Hampshire primary.

"It's a new shower head and I think you're going to have a chance to use it in many Tuesdays to come," Hart said.

"Tuesday in New Hampshire, voters chose ideas over slogans, solutions over promises and the national interest over special-interest endorsment and money," he added.

Mondale spent much of the day attacking Hart on the issues and on his new-found interest in the South. Hart spent much of his time in Iowa and New Hampshire until he won on Tuesday. He said Hart had given in to "Big Oil" by voting against the windfall profits tax in the Senate in 1979.

Anyone can learn Spanish Adams says

There is no magic involved in learning Spanish, Robert Adams says. He will be teaching a conversational Spanish course at Western Texas College starting March 12 and encourages those who would like to be able to converse in Spanish to enroll.

"You learned your native tongue by listening to others and imitating the sounds," Adams points out. "This is the approach I take in teaching Spanish. Students listen and repeat words and phrases with the intent of learning to communicate. The more you practice, the easier it becomes."

Adams will be using a testbook designed for Farm and Ranch Spanish. Classes will meet from 6:30-9:30 p.m. on Mondays from March 12-June 18, a total of 45 hours of instruction. Fees will be $45 and students will be required to purchase the textbook which costs $6.25 as well.

"From time to time I am asked if I speak Mexican Spanish or Castillian," Adams said. "My response is what difference does it make? The Mexican can talk with the Spaniard and the Spaniard will respond. The Spanish-speaker can communicate with both. All three can talk with the Cuban. And so the process of communication goes on and on.

To enroll call 573-8511, ext. 240. The office will be closed March 8-9 for spring break.

Beginning typing class is scheduled

Beginning typing will be offered in evening classes as a continuing education course at Western Texas College from March 13-June 19.

Classes will meet from 6:30-9:30 p.m. on Tuesdays. Cathy Chavez, administrative secretary in the student services office at WTC, will be the instructor. Students will pay fees of $50 for the 45-hour course and they will also be required to purchase a textbook costing $11.03.

A minimum of 10 students will be required to form the class.

To pre-register call 573-8511, ext. 240.

Townspeople attend service for newborn

GREENFIELD, Mass. (AP) — A newborn girl whose body found last week in a trash barrel along the Mohawk Trail was buried in a small white coffin in Calvary Cemetery, her identity still a mystery.

There were no flowers, but more than 60 people — many of them elderly and most of them women — attended the funeral service Friday at Blessed Sacrament Church.

"The death of a child under any circumstances is bad enough. It is a nightmare," the Rev. William Cyr told them. "Children ought not to die. So we cry on the inside at this profoundly sad and wrong occurrence."

Greenfield Selectwoman Sandra Pavoni, a soloist with the church choir, sang the hymn, "Like a Shepherd He Leads His Flock."

The one child present, 17-month-old Julia Desilets of Montague City, played with a small stuffed elephant during the service, and at one point cheerfully called out, "Mommy, Mommy."

"I felt it was something I had to do — for myself and on behalf of the people of Shelburne," said Shelburne Police Chief Mark DeJackome, who was there.

Medical Examiner Albert B. Giknis, who performed the autopsy on the infant, and his wife, Dorothy, attended the funeral.

Greenfield Police Chief David F. McCarthy and Capt. David Wood said they were there for personal, not professional, reasons.

But state police Sgt. Norman Roberts, Greenfield police Detective F. Peter Clarke and Lt. Joseph LaChance worked during the funeral, standing in the rear of the church, outside the church and by the gravesite, hoping the child's parents might appear.

LaChance said police had no suspects in the week-old homicide investigation.

Oil prices down in spite of threats

NEW YORK (AP) — Once again the Iran-Iraq war has triggered an outburst of fear about another oil crisis. Will gasoline lines reappear? Will prices jump again?

While these concerns are understandable, they have masked a more basic equation that favors consumers; oil prices are more likely to fall than to rise.

On Friday, Iran's president reiterated that his country would close the Strait of Hormuz, through which nearly 20 percent of the non-Communist world's oil flows, if Iraq destroyed Iran's ability to get its own oil to market.

It is true that a complete and prolonged cutoff of oil shipments from the Strait of Hormuz would trigger a startling jump in oil prices on the cash market. Traders might bid up the price to $60 a barrel or more from the current $28.

That could lead to an oil crisis as bad as those of 1973, when Arab countries slapped an embargo on oil sales to the United States, and 1979, when the Iranian revolution produced a relatively small drop in available oil supplies.

But industry analysts believe such a scenario is unlikely.

For one thing, any interruption of the oil flow from the Middle East probably would be short, since the Reagan administration repeatedly has vowed to intervene militarily under such circumstances. Europe would be expected to act, too.

Also, oil-producing nations outside the Middle East — including Indonesia, Venezuela, Nigeria and Mexico — have the ability to increase their output substantially.

Even more basically, any increase in oil prices due to an Iranian blockade of the Persian Gulf shipping lanes would be limited by a more lasting trend: the oil-producing nations are increasingly desperate to sell all the oil they can.

Even Iran, which is seen as the biggest threat to oil supplies, would be severely wounded and possibly paralyzed if it were not able to ship its oil.

Illegal alien arrests are up 23 percent in Texas

HOUSTON (AP) — More Mexicans and Central Americans crossing the Texas border and immigration officers doing a better job there has led to a 23 percent increase in arrests since Oct. 1, an official says.

Furthermore, said Alan C. Nelson, commissioner of the Immigration and Naturalization Service, for every two aliens who are arrested, another crosses the U.S. border undetected.

INS figures show that alien arrests along the entire U.S.-Mexico border have risen 12 percent so far during fiscal 1984, which began Oct. 1.

"If this rate continues, we will break the record for Southern border apprehensions set last year — 1,034,000," Nelson said.

The greatest number of illegal alien arrests in Texas were made in the El Paso area, according to figures released Thursday by the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

Illegal alien arrests in the El Paso sector rose from 22 percent over arrests made during the first four months of fiscal 1983, according to INS figures. Alien arrests there total 69,956 since Oct. 1, compared to 49,905 arrests made during the same period in fiscal 1983.

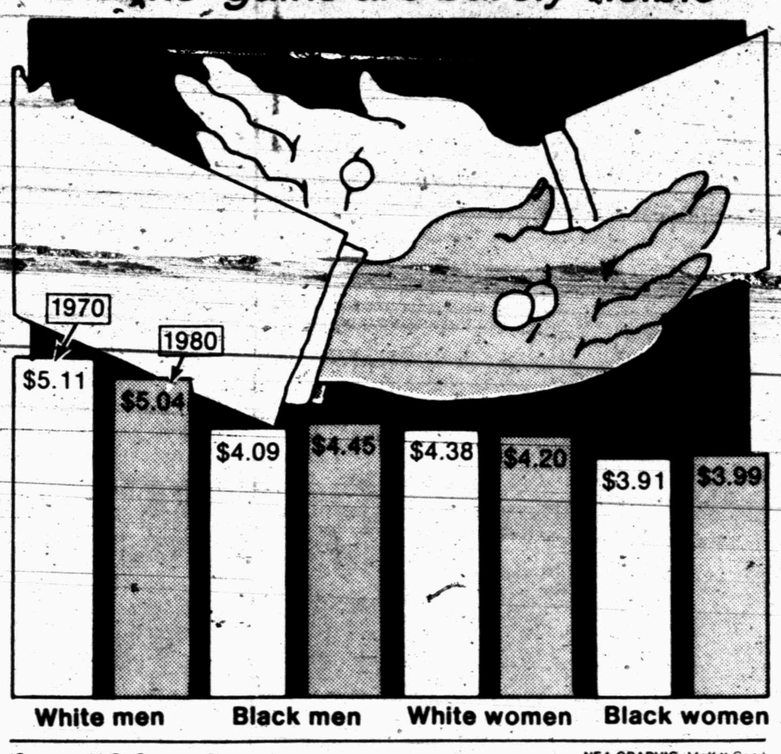

Car fire reported

Snyder firemen were dispatched to the scene of a minor car fire at 8:50 p.m. Friday.

According to reports, a 1972 Oldsmobile owned by Mary Alvarez and driven by George Guzman sustained minor damage to the engine compartment from a carburetor fire.

The vehicle was parked at Bell-Seale Funeral Home at the time of the fire and the blaze was out by the time firemen arrived on the scene.

Democratic solon calls on Congress for help

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. Walter D. Huddleston, D-Ky., may have fired the parting shot in this week's election-year skirmish on farm policy by calling for bipartisan Senate action on "a multitude of problems" he said have been caused in part by Republicans.

Filings noted

a contested race and one remained with no candidate announced.

Ray Max Grimmett, who won an unexpired term on the board last spring for place 6, had not indicated as of Friday if he would be a candidate.

For place 7, incumbent J.D. Hinton will seek a second three-year term. A second candidate has announced for this seat also, Kathie Sarchet.

Huddleston, the ranking Democrat on the GOP-dominated Senate Agriculture Committee, issued the call Friday in a stinging attack on Reagan administration farm policies.

"After three years of this administration's disastrous farm policy, it is now time for Congress to take the lead in bringing about a sustained recovery in American agriculture," he said. "I strongly believe that farm and food policy must be one of the Senate's highest priorities during 1984."

Earlier in the week, the House Agriculture Committee opened debate on legislation to replace the Agriculture and Food Act of 1981 which is due to expire next year.

The administration, meanwhile, does not expect to offer a full-draped farm bill until after next fall's election. Generally, however, it is apparent that President Reagan and his farm policymakers favor more flexibility and, where possible, a winding down of government involvement.

Huddleston, in a lengthy paper on "The State of American Agriculture and the Need for Action," said that the problems include an overabundance of some commodities and weak export demand which "has led to unstable or depressed prices" for farmers.

"Complicating our job will be the policy restraints caused by the current and projected budget deficits," Huddleston said.

Nursing program accredited again

The Howard County Junior College District has been notified that continuing accreditation has been granted to its associate degree nursing programs — which includes a branch on the Western Texas College campus.

The accreditation comes from the board of review of the Council of Associate Degree Programs of the National League for Nursing. It covers an eight-year period and will be reviewed for continuing accreditation at the end of that time.

Students who successfully complete the prescribed two-year course of study may become registered nurses by passing state board of nursing exams.

Persons who would like additional information about the program are invited to contact Bettie McQueen, director of vocational education at WTC.

Donations asked for foster home

An account has been opened at the Snyder National Bank for those who would like to make contributions to the proposed foster home for abused and neglected teenage girls.

This facility will be called Friendship House. Plans are to open the home by August of 1984 if sufficient funds are raised.

Scurry County Options and Opportunities for People (SCOOP) hopes to establish the facility through community funds before applying for outside grants.

Project sponsors say that outside funding such as grants is more readily available to homes already established.

In pointing to a need for the home, sponsors note that Scurry County child welfare workers investigated 46 cases of suspected child abuse involving 67 children in December.

At the present time there are three children in foster care in Scurry County and nine Scurry County children who have been placed outside the county.

Of those in foster care now, at least three would be eligible for Friendship House. It is anticipated there are enough teenage girls in foster care in the surrounding counties to fill the home.

Those wishing more information about SCOOP may contact Peggy Kennedy, 573-2973; Karan Wilkins, 573-5928; Melinda Drum, 573-1439; or Diane Price, 573-5107.

Car's hood is damaged

Snyder police detectives are investigating a criminal mischief incident involving a damaged car hood, a complaint filed Friday night.

Randy Wolf called city authorities at 11:27 p.m. and told investigators that someone had apparently walked across the hood of his 1980 Chevrolet Camaro, breaking the hood scoop.

Damage to the car was estimated at $100. It apparently occurred while the vehicle was parked at Snyder Lanes in the 1900 Block of 35th St. between 10:30 and 11 p.m.

In other action, city officers jailed seven subjects for public intoxication Friday evening.

Lone wreck here Friday

A single minor traffic mishap was reported in Snyder Friday morning.

Involved in the 9:53 a.m. accident at the intersection of 26th St. and Ave. M were a 1979 Ford driven by Kerry Lee Smith of Hamlin and a 1981 Chevrolet driven by James Edwin Jackson of 3726 Highland Dr.

No injuries were reported in the mishap and damage to both vehicles was listed as minor.

Otoselerosis at any age

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I read one of your columns about a person with otosclerosis. I developed this disease when I was just 21. By the time my fourth child was born, I lost 80 percent of my hearing.

I wore a hearing aid and subsequently had surgery on both ears. Please urge people with otosclerosis to try surgery. My hearing has been restored to near normal, which has caused wonderful changes in my life and personality. I bless the doctor who helped me.

DEAR READER — I want to include your letter to encourage people who have hearing problems to have a proper evaluation. Some cases can be helped.

In your case, the small bones in the ear that vibrate from sound and make hearing possible must have been fused together. That's what otosclerosis is. The calcification process can extend and be difficult or impossible to treat. But many cases can be cured.

There are many other causes for hearing loss, however, and some of these can't be corrected. Some may benefit from a hearing aid. Find out what is causing the hearing loss and take advantage of what medicine can offer.

Otosclerosis can occur at an early age, as in your case.

You'll want to read the Health Letter 16-8, Your Vital Hearing, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

DEAR DR. LAMB — In our cold Wisconsin climate, I'm cold seven months out of the year unless I'm dressed very warmly. My doctor says it's a difference in metabolism. I know that activity keeps me warm, but why do I need two or three layers and someone else is very comfortable with just one layer? Why can two people sit in the same room and one is comfortable while the other is cold?

With the energy crisis, more people are living in colder homes. This makes it difficult for those of us who feel cold all of the time. Do you have any explanations?

DEAR READER — A major part of the sensation of cold depends upon the amount of blood circulating through the skin. When you exercise vigorously, let's say to the point of sweating, you produce a lot of excess body heat. The body must lose this heat, so it sends a lot of blood to the skin. The blood going through the skin gives up heat to the environment. That hot blood stimulates your nerve endings in the skin and you feel warm.

You may have a perfectly normal internal body temperature and still not have a large flow of blood to the skin. Being active is helpful. Working your muscles generates heat and increases the circulation to the skin.

Keeping the living quarters at the proper humidity level rather than having them be too dry also seems to help. I think hot fluids or hot foods help, possibly because the heat entering the digestive system tricks the body's thermostat into cooling the body and increasing the circulation to the skin. Short of that, I'm afraid you are stuck with warm clothing.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I have considerable abdominal pain, mostly in the upper right quadrant and sometimes in the upper left. I also have distention. Sometimes it's after eating. Other times when I'm having the pain it will go away after I've eaten. This is rather contradictory, isn't it?

I had X-rays, including a barium enema, and it was determined I have an irritable bowel. Librax was prescribed, but it doesn't seem to help.

Can you suggest a diet? Are raw fruits and vegetables detrimental or helpful? I find that eating a vegetable salad every day relieves constipation.

DEAR READER — The term, "irritable bowel," actually means a spastic colon, which explains what happens. The colon has segments that contract or go into spasm. The spasm itself can cause pain just like any other muscle cramp.

When the spasm occurs it often traps gas in the colon before the spasm. The trapped gas accumulates in the part of the colon that runs across the top of your abdominal cavity. The distention can cause pain in either the upper right or upper left quadrant, or both.

If you have a spasm and then eat or drink, reflexes filling the stomach cause the colon to resume contracting in a rhythmical fashion and the spasm relaxes. On other occasions eating may precipitate a muscle spasm in the colon.

I've outlined the problem and what to do about it in the Health Letter 16-4, Spastic Colon, Irregularity and Constipation, which I'm sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

You have to experiment to know what you can and can't eat and drink. Usually coffee, tea and colas make the problem worse. Bulk is often helpful as long as it doesn't produce more gas.

DEAR DR. LAMB — I've read some enthusiastic reports about a procedure for removing fat, called suction lipectomy. None listed any adverse side effects. Are there any? How would I go about finding a qualified specialist to perform this procedure?

DEAR READER — This is a technique recently imported from Europe. It consists of sticking a probe underneath the skin and suctioning out fat tissue. It literally tunnels through areas of fat. It's primarily for those fat rolls around the middle and thigh areas.

Yes, it certainly has its limitations. Most authorities don't recommend it for anyone older than 40 because of loss of skin elasticity. It can leave you with a rippled effect. Only very limited amounts can be removed, because if too much is sucked out, it may cause shock.

It should not be done by anyone except a specialist, preferably a plastic surgeon who is knowledgeable in handling skin tissues. Anyone who is considering this procedure should talk to a plastic surgeon who does cosmetic surgery. Only about six and one-quarter pounds can be removed at any one treatment. It's not very useful for people who need to lose a lot of body fat. Half the body fat in the waist area is inside the abdomen, not just underneath the skin.

Snyder girls showing promise for future

SAN ANGELO – Snyder girls came up with only 20 points in the Concho Belle Relays here Friday, but all indications are the Lady Tigers will be a formidable foe in weeks to come.

The 20 points is misleading considering the Class 5-A dominated competition and the fact that Snyder took itself out of the 400 and 800 meter relays with a couple of dropped batons.

"I thought we could have had more points but everything we ran in we improved in time, considerably over last week," said Coach Patty Grimmett. "We didn't do as well as we wanted to in the field events, but I think we will eventually. All of the schools here were 5A expect us, Lake View and Pecos. I am real proud of the girls, especially Katrina Reed. She did an excellent job. She made the finals in the long jump and was fourth in the 200 and she's just a freshman."

Reed also ran the second leg of Snyder's 1600 meter relay team which placed fourth against some heady competition. The Tigers turned in a 4:19.03, beating District 2-4A competition Lake View by almost six seconds.

Running the relay were Reed, sophomore Karlene Thompson and seniors Anderiña Kitchens and Dora Hernandez.

"Thompson took the baton with a good lead and it was obvious no one was going to catch her. She had taken second place in the 400 meters earlier in the evening with a 1:01.84 - shaving almost five seconds off of her previous best of 1:06.9.

It was a day of mixed results for Thompson and Kitchens. Thompson ran well, but scratched out in the long jump and placed fifth in the triple jump with a leap of 32-11. She had an effort of 35-7 a week ago, which would have tied for first place here.

Kitchens, who ran a 27.3 in the 200 last week, did not reach the finals here but ran strong in the relays. She had obtained a lead for Snyder in the 800 relay prelims, but Reed - running her first relays - dropped the baton as she took her first stride. Later, Hernandez dropped the baton in the finals of the sprint relay.

"Katrina was running her first relays for us and Dora didn't even run last year. She just threw the shot and discus. We're going to make some mistakes," said Grimmett. "We just want to get them all ironed out before district. I'm happy with our performance. We're showing improvement and that's what we want to do."

San Angelo Central won the meet with 105 points. Hereford was second with 94, followed by Midland Lee with 78, Abilene High with 77½ and Midland High with 67.

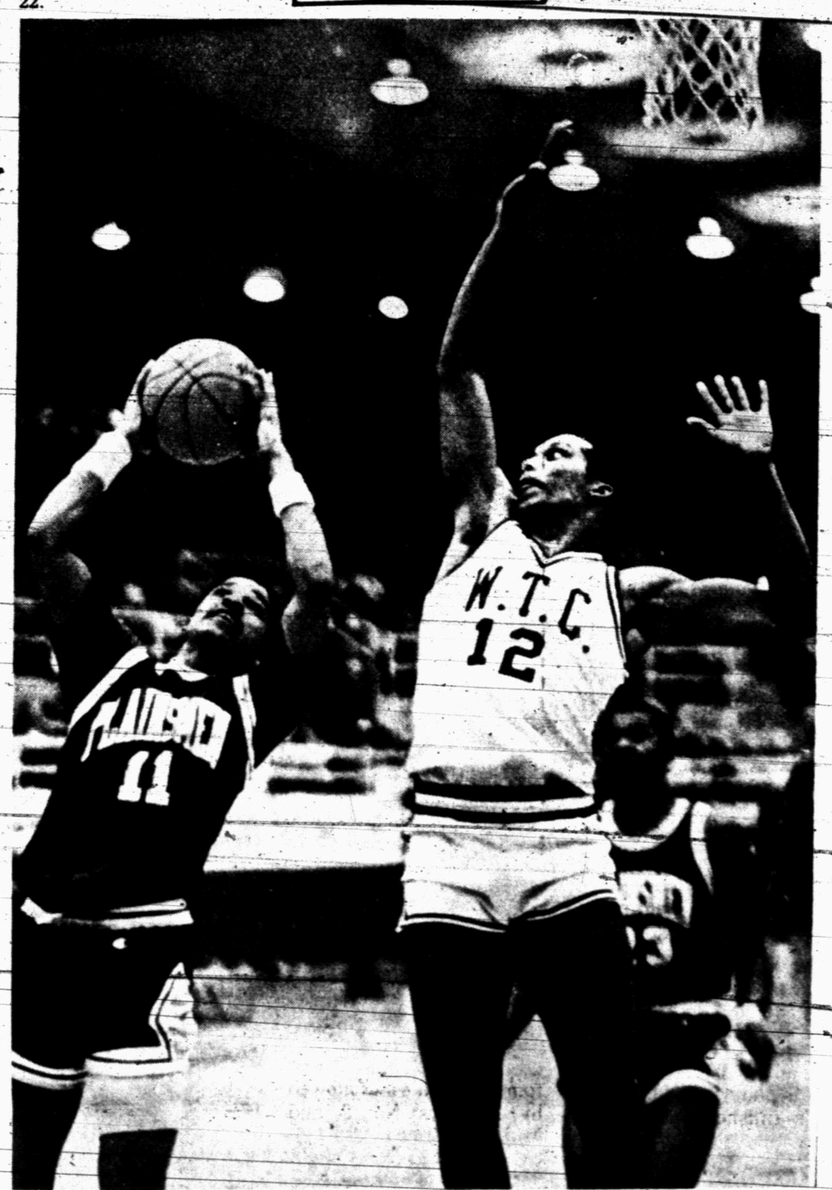

Snyder will attend the Whirlwind Relays in Floydada next Friday and Saturday.

SHS Tigers tripped up by Austin Reagan, 4-1

FREDRICKSBURG -- Snyder's Tigers gave up four runs in the second inning here Friday afternoon and slipped to Austin Reagan 4-1 in their second baseball game of the 1984 season.

The Tigers, now 1-1, were to play New Braunfels Canyon for third place in the Fredricksburg Tournament at 2:30 Saturday. Fredricksburg and Austin Reagan were to vie in the 4:15 finals.

Charles Bollinger went the distance and took the loss, giving up six hits.

Phil Ragland, who reported on the game, said, "Snyder played real well except for the second inning. They made a couple of errors and Reagan scored on those."

Snyder was led at the bats by Chris Sanders and Justin Webb who punched a double apiece. Bollinger, Willie Greathouse and Norman Malone slapped a single each as Snyder got five hits. The Tigers' lone run came in the fourth on a Webb RBI.

"Webb made an outstanding running catch and Norman made some nice plays to pull balls out of the dirt at first base," added Ragland.

Snyder had reached the tournament semifinals by defeating Austin Lanier junior varsity 6-2 earlier in the day. Paul Tate went four innings to pick up the lead. William Cotton pitched two innings of relief before the game was stopped by a two-hour time limit.

After Saturday's action in the tournament, Snyder returns home to host Plainview at 4 p.m. Monday. The Tigers then play San Angelo Central in San Angelo at 4 on Tuesday.

Dupree clear to sign with USFL

NEW YORK (AP) - The United States Football League indicated Friday that it would sanction the signing of running back Marcus Dupree by the New Orleans Breakers, but added that there will be no effort by the league to "recruit, solicit or draft underclassmen."

In a statement issued by Commissioner Chet Simmons, the league openly acknowledged for the first time the negotiations between the Breakers and Dupree, who is reportedly set to sign a $5 million, 5-year deal.

Simmons' statement was the league's first official reaction to a Federal court ruling Wednesday holding that its rule against signing college underclassmen violated antitrust laws.

Dupree, who has dropped out of both the Universities of Oklahoma and Southern Mississippi in the past year and is a sophomore in eligibility, has been negotiating with the Breakers for the past week. The league meanwhile, had continued to maintain that its teams were barred from even talking to players whose college eligibility hadn't expired.

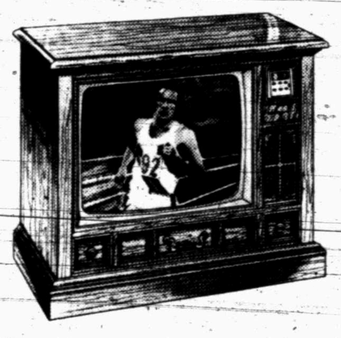

That policy followed last year's signing of Herschel Walker by New Jersey while Walker still had a year of eligibility at

Ueberroth uncertain

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) - Baseball's 26 owners met here Saturday to ratify the selection of Peter V. Ueberroth as the sport's next commissioner amid a report that Bowie Kuhn will accept a third contract extension.

Ueberroth, reportedly the choice of the owners' selection committee, continued to deny Friday that he had been formally offered the job. He also said that if he were to take it, owners would have to make changes in the structure of the job.

Late Friday night, the New York Times reported that baseball's Executive Council had convinced Kuhn, the outgoing commissioner, to accept a third contract extension to serve until Ueberroth could take over or until Sept. 30, whichever came first.

Ueberroth is president of the Los Angeles Olympic Organizing Committee, and the Summer Games run through Aug. 12.

"It's a real delicate thing," the source told the Times. Owners apparently feared that premature disclosure of the decision to once again extend Kuhn's contract, which expired Thursday, would damage the plan.

Kuhn had said previously that he absolutely would not serve past March 1.

Despite protestations from Ueberroth, baseball insiders continued to express confidence that he was all but installed as the successor to Kuhn.

"There won't be any surprises, we all know who the next commissioner will be," one source told the Associated Press Friday.

Kuhn failed to gain reelection to a third seven-year term on Nov. 1, 1982, when five of the 12 National League owners opposed him. His term expired last August, but he agreed to two extensions while a Search Committee hunted for a successor.

Nelson Doubleday, owner of the New York Mets and a member of baseball's Executive Council, said he expected some changes in the commissioner's job as Ueberroth takes over. Among them would be a shorter term - four or five years - and an easier method for re-election. The commissioner currently must receive a three-quarters majority in each league to be re-elected.

Col. E. R. Bradley twice had horses finish 1-2 in the Kentucky Derby — Behave Yourself and Black Servant in 1921 and Bubbling Over and Bagan-baggage in 1926.

Western judoists cop Texas collegiate title

ODESSA -- As is becoming customary, Western Texas College went against the "big boys" and once again brought home top honors.

The latest prize was the Texas Collegiate Judo Championships title, won here a week ago. WTC won the 1984 collegiate team trophy by defeating eight other schools, including the University of Texas, Texas A&M University and Texas Christian.

Dr. Shelby Hillis' Westerners polled 33 points to win first place by seven over Texas. Odessa and Midwestern University tied for third with 10 points each.

In taking the victory, Western won four gold medals, three silvers and a bronze.

Snyder's own Judy Irwin and Jean Anderson copped gold in the women's divisions. Irwin won the heavy-weight while Anderson took first in the 134-division. Sister Margaret Anderson was a silver medalist in the 114-division.

League City's Dean Mackey took gold in the men's 156-pound division while Kurt Johnson, who hails from Rogers, Ark., won the men's 209 gold and took a silver medal in the Open Division.

Ironically, former WTC player Jim Cottingham won the 172-pound, the Open Division and the Grand Champion. Cottingham played for Western Texas as recently as the fall semester.

Abilene's Eric Stevens was a silver medalist for WTC in the 132-division while Snyderite Don Boone took a bronze in the 143-division.

Odessa Permian High School won the Texas State High School Judo Championships, held in conjunction with the collegiates. Kevin Burns, who attends Snyder High School and works out with the WTC Judo Team, won a gold medal in the boy's 150-pound division.

In the Junior Open Tournament, also held at the same time, Steve Broker was second in the 9-10 light weight division; Larenda Broker was second in the 9-10 light weight division, and Chris Smith was fourth in the 11-12 light weight division. All three are from Snyder.

Georgia. Simmons then vowed that the USFL would sign no more undergraduates.

However, Simmons noted Friday that the rules had been changed by Wednesday's decision by U.S. District Court Laughlin E. Waters.

As for the future, Simmons said: "The federal court ... leaves no doubt that the relationship between underclassmen and professional football will undergo change." But he added: "I want to reassure all involved that this does not signal an effort to recruit, solicit or draft underclassmen."

Lady Tigers place 3rd in Snyder Tournament

Andrews gave something for Snyder's girls to think about here Friday as they edged the Tigers by a single stroke to take second place in the Snyder Golf Tournament.

Kermit won the 18-hole meet with a 394. Andrew carded a 398 and Snyder a 399.

It was the final tuneup for the girls before beginning District 2-4A play March 12 in Fort Stockton. Snyder is the defending district champion.

Snyder's Lisa Franklin won medalist honors for the fourth straight tournament, shooting an 83 to claim the prize by seven strokes over Marina Jackson of Kermit and Ronna Wilson of Wylie.

Sophomore Xalyn Harris finished with a competitive 98 but Snyder scores dropped off after that. Freshmen Leslie Light and Michelle Holder shot a 109 and a 111 respectively while senior Susan Hamlett turned in a 110.

Other team scores left Snyder's No. 2 team in fourth with a 445, followed by Andrews No. 2 and Midland Lee at 469, Seminole at 478, Sweetwater at 488 and Abilene Wylie at 506.

Playing for Snyder No. 2 team were five freshmen: Stacy Randall, 104; Rebekah Powell, 111; Angie Lay and Lea Ann Thompson, 115; and Camille Reed, 118.

Stephanie Blair, playing as an individual, shot a 135.

The upcoming district meet will tee off at 11 a.m., as will all 2-4A tournaments. After Fort Stockton on the 12th, the site moves to Andrews on March 19, Monahans on March 26 and ends at Sweetwater on April 2.

Owners will not stop Baltimore Colts move

CHICAGO (AP) - National Football League owners, facing a $49 million penalty for trying to block the Raiders from moving from Oakland to Los Angeles, decided Friday not to interfere with Baltimore Colts owner Robert Irsay's desire to move his franchise, Commissioner Pete Rozelle said.

At a news conference after a morning meeting with representatives of the 28 NFL clubs, Rozelle said, "With that judgment against them now, they decided it would not be prudent to take any action should he (Irsay) decide to move."

Rozelle said Irsay indicated he had discussed moving the Colts to several cities. Irsay acknowledged in-depth discussions with officials in Indianapolis, but insisted there was no firm commitment. Of the other cities, only New York had been ruled out by Irsay, said Rozelle.

Rozelle said Irsay planned to inform league owners of any move by the time of the owners' scheduled March 18 annual meetings in Hawaii or shortly thereafter. The commissioner said the league needed notification by April 1 in order to make scheduling commitments.

Pair wed in candlelight service

Patti Ann Clark became the bride of Trevlyn Dane Pitner at 7 p.m. on Dec. 9 at Colonial Hill Baptist Church. Rev. Miller F. Robinson, pastor of the church officiated at the double ring candlelight ceremony.

Parents of the couple are Bob and Peggy Clark of Abilene and Keith and Chiva Pitner of Snyder.

Brass candelabra accented with gypsophila, white carnations and greenery held 104 tapers. Pews were marked with white satin bows. The couple's parents lit the memory candle as they entered.

Mrs. Troy Lilly, pianist, Mrs. Earl Watts, organist, and soloist, Mrs. Scott Clark, the bride's sister-in-law, presented "The Wedding Song," "The Lord's Prayer," and Candle On the Water."

Given in marriage by her father the bride wore a white silk organza gown trimmed in Chantilly lace. The Queen Anne neckline was outlined in lace and the fitted bodice featured Chantilly lace appliques embroidered with seed pearls. The empire waistline and the back of the sheer organza bodice were overlaid with Chantilly lace. Full sheer organza sleeves were gathered to fitted cuffs of Chantilly lace enhanced with seed pearls and fastened with covered buttons.

The full skirt featured four rows of alternating lace and organza ruffles at the bottom. Multi-rows of ruffles were at the back of the skirt. The dress swept into a full cathedral train.

The wide-brimmed picture hat was covered in Chantilly lace to match her dress. The crown was embroidered with seed pearls and there was a cluster of silk flowers on the brim near the crown. Another cluster of silk flowers was on the underside of the brim. Appliques of lace adorned the entire hat. A two-tiered fingertip veil fell from the back of the hat.

The bride carried a bouquet of white sweetheart roses, gardenias, stephanotis, baby's breath and greenery accented with picot streamers atop the Bible carried by the groom's mother in her wedding.

Something old was a linen handkerchief carried by the groom's mother in her wedding. The bride's dress was new and she borrowed a string of pearls from Sandra Robinson. Her blue garter was a gift from the groom's sister. Pennies minted in the year of the couple's birth were placed in her shoe.

Carrie Crenwelge was maid of honor and Susan Clark, sister-in-law of the bride, was matron of honor. Bridesmaids were Donna McGee of San Angelo and Paige Pitner, the groom's sister.

Each wore a burgundy taffeta gown with ruffles framing the elasticized neckline worn off the shoulder. Puffed sleeves were gathered to ruffled cuffs above the elbow and a deep ruffle cascaded down the back of the skirt and around the bottom. They carried crescent-shaped nosegays of pink carnations, starburst mums, pink sweetheart roses, baby's breath, and greenery. Halos of the same flowers adorned their hair.

Keith Pitner was best man. Groomsmen were Scott Clark, Bill Hayes of Amarillo, and Bret McCormick of Lamesa.

The groom wore a white tuxedo with a white rose and stephanotis boutonniere. Groomsmen wore gray tuxedos with burgundy rose boutonnieres.

The bride's mother was attired in a pale orchid chiffon dress and the groom's mother was dressed in pale apricot chiffon. Each wore a gardenia corsage.

A reception followed the ceremony in the fellowship hall of the church.

The bride's table was covered with a white cloth and held a two-tiered column cake surrounded with four heart-shaped cakes. Each layer was topped with a miniature bouquet of fresh flowers in the bride's chosen colors.

Punch was served from a silver bowl and the table was centered with a silver candelabrum holding pink minis, burgundy roses, carnations, greenery and burgundy tapers. The table was flanked by a lattice work screen with touches of greenery. Tracey Letz, Susan Rosser and Vickie Chalette presided.

The groom's table was covered with a burgundy cloth. A dark chocolate cake was topped with a horseshoe and decorated with light chocolate roses. Brass appointments were used and two brass candlesticks held burgundy candles. Presiding were Tonya Foreman and Kay Holland.

Sheryl Prewitt registered guests in the bride's book.

Following a wedding trip to Ruidoso, N.M. the couple resides in Snyder.

The bride and groom graduated from Snyder High School and attended Western Texas College. She is employed by R. E. Smith and the groom is employed by Superior Production Logging Inc.

CHECK OUT TAX PREPARERS

With the income tax deadline growing nearer, the idea of simply having a tax preparer do the job becomes more attractive each day.

But, as with any service, it pays consumers to investigate before they select a tax preparer.

Suggested guidelines for choosing an income tax preparer:

•Look for a tax preparation business that is open all year, rather than just the few weeks before income tax time. You may need to contact the preparer later if you are audited.

•Beware if an income tax preparer offers a "guaranteed refund," suggest you under-report your income, or create non-existent deductions. You are still liable for any misrepresentations on your tax forms.

•The preparer should be willing to explain how your return was prepared, both to you and the Internal Revenue Service. The preparer should also explain how your return will be checked for accuracy: will it be examined for problems in tax law interpretation or just math errors?

•The tax preparer must be willing to sign your return, and should not ask you to sign a blank return.

Since taxpayers are responsible for the accuracy of their returns, it's important to choose a trustworthy tax preparer with training and experience.

"Enrolled agents" are certified by the IRS after having worked five years as a tax auditor or having passed a federal exam. Enrolled agents, certified public accountants and attorneys may represent taxpayers before the IRS. The qualifications of other tax preparers may vary widely.

Whether you actually need a tax preparer or not may depend more on the complexity of your financial situation than your income level. Unless your financial situation is complex, you may be able to get along simply by calling or visiting an IRS office, using IRS publication 17, or purchasing one of the many income tax books on the market.

If you use the short form, the IRS will complete most of it and figure your taxes for free.

In addition, you may qualify for other sources of help. Many senior citizen centers and public service organizations offer free help in tax preparation for the elderly, handicapped, non-English speaking and others.

Vegetable, cheese combination good

By Aileen Claire
NEA Food Editor

Many are making the effort to add more vegetables to their daily diet.

Here, a combination of fresh sliced vegetables is cooked with brown rice and Cheddar cheese for a tasty, nutritious dish.

VEGETABLE-CHEESE MELT

- 1 cup chicken broth
- 1 tablespoon cornstarch
- 1 teaspoon paprika
- 1 teaspoon chili powder
- 1/4 teaspoon garlic powder
- 2 tablespoons vegetable oil
- 1 1/2cups green pepper strips
- 1 1/2cups sliced carrots
- 1 1/2cups sliced zucchini
- 4 cups hot cooked brown rice
- 1/2 cup shredded Cheddar cheese

Preheat broiler to hot. Combine chicken broth, cornstarch, paprika, chili and garlic powders; set aside. In large skillet, heat oil until hot. Add green peppers, carrots and zucchini; stir-fry until crisp-tender, about 5 minutes. Stir in reserved chicken broth mixture; cook and stir until thickened, about 1 minute; remove from heat. In greased, shallow 2-quart casserole, place rice. Top with vegetables and sprinkle with cheese. Broil 6 inches from heat source until cheese melts, about 1 minute. This kitchen-tested recipe serves 4.

Lots of ways to try it

Jim: "Here is an instructive hand that demonstrates almost all the various ways that the declarer can take tricks. What are some of those ways? How about drawing trumps, ruffing losers in the dummy, setting up a side suit, and cashing high-card winners.

"First we'll show you how declarer went wrong. And then we'll see what should have been done about it.

"East won the king of spades and immediately led back the heart nine. Declarer won the king of hearts and then played the ace of hearts. Next he trumped a spade, led a diamond to the ace and trumped another spade. When he played the king and queen of diamonds and the jack did not fall, he had to lose a spade, club, heart and diamond for down one.

"What went wrong? Declarer was too hasty to play the second high heart. Instead, after winning the heart return at the second trick, he should now play a club. West can win the club king and lead the heart queen, but now declarer has the timing to do what he needs to do to make his contract. He will take the heart queen with his ace, play a diamond to the king, trump a club, play another diamond to the queen and trump another club. Next he will ruff a spade and trump a fourth club from the dummy.

"West can overruff or not, as he chooses, but he cannot stop declarer from taking 10 tricks.

"Norman Kay, one of Dad's teammates, played this hand correctly in the Reisinger win. The other South went wrong."

Star's mom is convicted

NEW YORK (AP) — The mother of "Fame" television series regular Gene Anthony Ray, Jean Ray, has been convicted of narcotics charges and could be sentenced to 15 years to life in prison later this month.

Acting state justice Herman Cahn scheduled sentencing of the 44-year-old Mrs. Ray, from the Bronx, for March 22 after a jury on Thursday found her guilty of four counts of illegal drug sales to undercover police officers, the district attorney's office said.

Ray, who portrays a dance student at New York City's High School for the Performing Arts, was not arrested or involved in the case in any way.

The Bohemian composer Antonin Dvorak was born in 1841.

Centennial Corner By Charles Anderson

An early hotel in Snyder

The first hotels in Snyder were vastly different than we see today. This hotel, owned by W. S. Dunbar and his wife, along with their daughter, Josie, was considered the best to be found in the 1880s. There was a hallway down the middle and simple rooms on each side of the hallway. Some rooms did not have windows and there, of course, was not inside plumbing or utilities. A bell was mounted on the front to announce dinner for the guest or others who wanted to pay for a meal.

When Pete Snyder surveyed for his town in July, 1883, building such as this one were already beginning to be erected. The citizens were coming in from other states as there was lots of land in West Texas for them to claim.

The ranchers were not too happy about buildings going up in the middle of their grazing lands, but they could do little about it. Some of them eventually became a part of the business enterprise by setting up a portion of their land to build houses, hotels, and other necessary buildings for a city.

Pete Snyder had visions of a city with lots of hotels, houses, and banks built on the land that he claimed in September, 1883, when he drew up a map with 640 acres for a city. His hopes fell, however, when the courts took the land away from him and awarded it to a rancher by the name of Tommy Nunn. Nunn had also claimed the land.

This hotel did not stand long as progress took hold and bigger and better buildings were erected. It served, however, for a time as the city and county were established. When these two governing bodies became operational, the whole town and county took an organized turn for growth and this hotel faded with the times. In Turkey...

Bootleg videotapes popular

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — U.S. Information Agency officials, fearing endless requests for a chance to view "The Day After," urged Turkish guests at a recent private screening, "Please don't tell anyone how you got to see this movie."

They needn't have bothered. More than a dozen "video clubs" were already offering their customers a bootleg videotape of the nuclear war movie.

In this fashion Turkish video buffs have seen such recent hits as "Return of the Jedi," "E.T.," "Sophie's Choice" and "Gandhi" soon after release — years before they normally would have.

The video business, dealing mainly in feature films and cartoons for children, is booming in Turkey.

And in most cases, both the tapes and the machines have entered the country illegally. Thousands of videotapes circulating in Turkey are pirated, dealers confess.

In this nation of 47.7 million people, there are an estimated 1 million home video recorders, according to ODVI, the first and largest video distribution company in Turkey, and others in the business. In comparison, there are over 9 million machines in the United States, or about 1 for every 25 people.

Video sets can even be seen in some village coffeehouses in remote parts of the country where domestic movies and belly dancer shows are in high demand.

Turks took to video because the one-channel state-run television has few good programs. Three times a week there is a movie show that usually features a black and white relic from the 1950s. Locally produced shows are few and severely censored. Most programming is in black and white.

Foreign movies reach Turkey two to four years after their release in Europe and the United States. They too undergo censorship.

In the past two years, 2,000 video clubs have mushroomed throughout the country. These lend cassettes for a fee of 300 Turkish lira, or the equivalent of $1, per day.

In the major urban centers of Istanbul and Ankara, every affluent neighborhood has at least one video cassette dealer who will also help with repairs in equipment and make a copy of a cherished tape for $8 if the customer provides the empty cassette.

Baran Sarol, owner of ODVI, contends there is a video-piracy underground operating out of the Western capitals of London, Paris and Brussels.

These groups tape the latest movies, he said, and Turks living or traveling abroad carry them to their homeland.

Foreign television shows appear to be another source for videotapes. Some tapes distributed in Turkey include the commercials of the foreign show. Others have subtitles in Arabic, Dutch, German or French.

Turkish officials occasionally raid the video shops. ODVI has been raided and investigated dozens of times, Sarol says. But for lack of any legislation on the newfangled business, police in the past were unable to impose any sanctions.

Last November a new copyright law embracing the video business went into effect. The law calls for prison terms ranging from one month to three years for copyright violations, and all video cassettes must have special markings to show that the distributor has the copyright.

ODVI is hoping the new law will bring the video business under some kind of control. The company has signed copyright agreements with the British Broadcast Corp. and another British distributor, the Rank Corp. ODVI has plans for similar agreements with at least half a dozen more foreign distributors, making it tough competition for the free-lancing pirates working out of neighborhood corner shops.

Last month, the government of Premier Turgut Ozal allowed the importation of video recorders and cassettes as part of an import liberalization program. Some Turkish companies have started manufacturing video sets and tapes locally under foreign license. Most of them produce the Sony Betamax cassettes that are popular here.

The easier availability of the equipment will further boost the demand for movie tapes, most dealers believe.

Said a high-level official who refused the use of his name: "Turks are expert at getting around official regulations. As long as there is a high demand and good profits to be made, tapes will keep coming, with or without copyright."

Theoretically, the video cassettes must also pass through the censor to enter the country. But the cassettes are so small, so easy to declare untaped and so abundant that effective official control has so far proven impossible.

Under the circumstances, the authorities have opted for a general ban and sent a list of forbidden video films to all dealers last August.

Stage and film comedian Zero Mostel died in 1977.

Raze house foundation

FARMINGTON, N.M. (AP) — A contractor estimates it will cost $15,000 to replace the foundation on a two-story house here were investigators found radioactive steel reinforcing bar was used in its construction.

The original foundation on the house located in a subdivision here was demolished Thursday after state officials decided the radioactive steel could pose a health hazard.

"We expect the new foundation to be poured, the house reset and ready for a certificate of occupancy in about 20 days," said contractor Ken Dannenbaum, president of Ken Inc.

The house is one of two in San Juan County which state officials have determined contained radioactive rebar from Mexico. The other is in Bloomfield.

Jere Millard, director of the state Health and Environment Department's Radiation Surveillance Division, said the radioactivity in the Farmington house was measured as high as 40 microroentgens per hour above background levels. Measurements in the Bloomfield house were as high as 120 microroentgens per hour above background, Millard said.

The maximum allowed by the Nuclear Regulatory Commission is 33 microroentgens per hour, he said.

He said the radioactivity did not pose an immediate health hazard but could cause health problems if someone was exposed to the radiation over an extended period of time.

Millard said the contractor estimated it would cost $15,000 to remove the foundation of the house and replace it with new concrete.

Since only a corner of the Bloomfield house was found to be radioactive, Millard said contractor Harvey Johnson might be able to jackhammer the contaminated steel from the foundation without having to move the house from the foundation.

Millard said investigators are continuing to work with Mesa Concrete, a local construction firm that bought the radioactive rebar Jan. 11 from Smith Pipe and Steel Co. of Albuquerque.

Larry Anaya, owner of Mesa Concrete, is providing a list of projects his company completed from November through mid-February. Millard said his investigators will return to San Juan County to check the houses on Mesa's list for radioactivity.

Above the Fold

By Donny Brown

That little doo-dad they put on the roof isn't the only change the Associated Press made at the Snyder Daily News.

The AP wire copy used to be sent via rented telephone lines. It is now bounced off of a satellite and "caught" somehow by a 30-inch receiver dish mounted on the roof.

Ma Bell may have lost the AP's business, but the staff lost an old friend.

We ran a front page picture showing the new roof dish. The picture we didn't take is of two AP wire teletype machines standing useless and mute.

Emphasis on the mute, because that driving clackety-clack racket which once paced you along toward news deadline is silent.

In its place, they gave us a computer printout device. Rather than that wonderful old rhythmic clatter, this new printer goes "ZZZZZZZZIT." It waits a moment, then it goes "ZZZZZZZZIT" again.

We've been around wire machines for several years, and the noise they produce is like any other mild inconvenience. Once you get used to it, you start to like it. And when its gone, you miss it.

It also reminds us once again that the newspaper business is slowly gathering its own collection of dinosaurs.

When the "hot lead" Linotype machines were replaced, a few were relocated to small print operations. But most were sold for scrap or now sit unused and dust covered in the backs of newspaper buildings.

The same is true of the old style press before offset.

Some were offered to museums, but the size of the monsters pretty much prohibited any but the largest and richest institution from accepting them as displays.

The majority wound up like the proverbial giant rock in the middle of the road. You couldn't move it, use it or go around it. The only solution was to bury it.

Now we have two new anachronisms sitting in the newsroom.

The old-style wire machine is about the size of a mailbox. It is essentially a souped-up typewriter in a black metal box. We honestly don't know if the style ever changed, but it has that clunky look of machines from the 30s and 40s.

The SDN's new printout doo-hickey is about the size of a Star Wars toy spaceship and is made of the same durable plastic.

But, what we'll miss most is the bells. AP notified working journalists of a significant breaking story by tripping a bell built into the machine.

A series of bells were available, beginning with a four-bell ding for an "urgent" story. Five bells signified a "bulletin." Ten bells were a "flash," a signal for a news story of such significance that the AP in Dallas claims there have been only "five or six" flash reports in the history of that city's bureau.

By definition, a flash was not even a sentence. It was merely a blurb to warn that a bulletin was on its way.

The recent stories involving these are familiar to all newspaper readers, "Kennedy shot," "Kennedy dead," "Man lands on moon."

The new machines do not include ways to notify us of breaking stories. And it seems to us another watermark is passed.

But like all changes, there are advantages. It separates a generation of journalists, and 20 years from now we'll be able to say, "Shoot kid, we remember when wire machines had bells."

Editorials-Columns-Cartoons-Kidstuff-Look Back-Letters

John Dunnam

In a pound of Bermuda grass seeds, how many are there - seeds that is? Give or take a few there are 1.8 million. I thought everybody knew that.

Do you know how many 16 penny nails (those are the big ones) it takes to weigh a pound? For your information, it takes 47.

Where, you may be asking, did I find such trivia, and above all, why? In a dull-looking spiral-back book called the "Landscape Data Manual" are 164 pages of charts, lists, charts, formulas and more charts telling you about everything anybody ever wondered about anything but was afraid to ask out of fear of eliciting an apathetic "who cares." And that is just the first 64 four pages. The rest of the 4 in. by 8 in. book is devoted to more charts, lists...

Why would I shell out $11 plus tax for something only slightly larger than the average back pocket? Well, it's this way: I'm taking this here course out at the college and my lofty prof said I couldn't live without it. And when the renowned and easily irritated James Eby says you can't live without something, suddenly something that sells for a mere $44 a pound (.25 lbs. times $11) seems like a bargain. I suppose it's really all a matter of perspective.

Actually it is a novel little book. I'll devote the rest of this column to promoting it in hopes of driving the cost down to that of a dime store dictionary, since I'll probably lose it by next week.

Assimilate this: A gallon of water weighs 8.33 pounds. You knew that. But if you had a square bucket one foot deep of the stuff, how much would that weigh? A cubic foot of fresh water weighs 62.4 pounds and it would take 7.48 gallons to fill this square pail.

If you own an acre of land and it rained an inch, how many gallons fell on your piece of turf? Does 27,154 gallons sound reasonable? If you want the weight of this wet stuff, multiply by 8.33. Catching on? Good, let's move on.

You know that ½ inch expressed decimally is .5 inches. But do you know how to express 6 ½ inches as a decimal part of a foot? If you had this book you would. Six and one-half inches equals .542 feet. A handy chart to have around if you need to figure up something on a calculator that doesn't savvy there are 12 inches in a foot instead ot 10.

Do you ever wonder about circles? Me neither, but just in case I have all the formulas right here including the oft quoted A ¾ pi R Squared. There is no need to wonder what that means, because all the areas and circumferences (distance around) are right here for circles up to 100 feet across.

For example, if the distance from one side of a circle to the other (diameter) is 8 ft., then it says here that there are 25.133 square feet in the circle, and that it is 50.266 feet around the thing. Incidentally cow people, if you have a tank that's 8 ft. across, the sucker holds 376.01 gallons for every foot of depth. (Multiply by 8.33 to find weight.) If you have kids instead of cows it might amuse you to know that your bathtub will hold in excess of 50 gallons per foot of depth. To find the weight, multiply by 8 and add the weight of the kids. (Figures were rounded down to allow for the dirt on the kids.)

A practical application of this diminutive, biodegradeable publication is to use it to drive your hardware dealer crazy. Don't go to the lumberyard and ask for 10 feet of 12 gauge wire. Instead ask for .296 pounds of .1055 size. Give him a hint by telling him that a mile of the stiff stuff weighs 156.7 pounds and one pound will span 33.69 feet

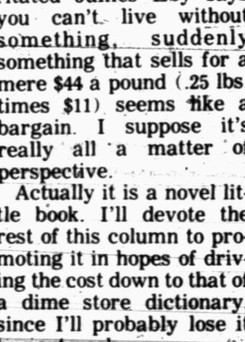

Know why a bag of cement weighs 94 pounds? That happens to be the weight of a cubic foot of cement, which is what the bag contains. A three-quarter inch sheet of construction grade plywood has seven plies and weighs 71 pounds. A brick weighs 5.4 pounds.

There is no room here for the statistics on excavation in case you are into digging trenchs; likewise, I'll skip all the poop on fertilizers, tractors and proper spacing between the various kinds of trees and plants. Being a landscape manual there is oodles of this stuff, but who cares.

For you heavy weight executive types, I will give you one more thing to worry about. Based on a 44 hour week, with 255 working days to the year, a $6 an hour employee who wastes five minutes a day will idle away $1,275.

Let's see here. It took me 1.887 hours to write this column and at almost $2 an hour and 50 columns a year...

This week's fifth graders were interviewed at Northeast Elementary.

Question: Do you think Ronald Reagan has been a good president? If you were old enough to vote would you vote for him in the November election?

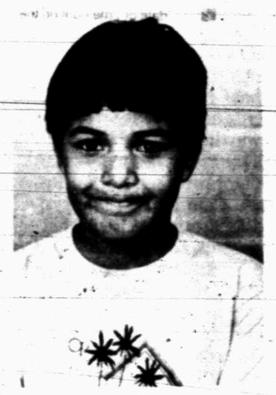

RYAN BRYD
Age 10
"Yes because he sent the Marines to try and make peace and stop wars in other countries. Now he's going to try and bring them back. I would't vote for him though because I think someone else should have the chance to be president."

ANGIE BURLESON
Age 11
"Yes. He's nice. When he's on TV he's not hysterical and talks calm. I would vote for him."

SANDRA GARCIA
Age 11
"No, because he says he needs four more years to finish the things he said he would do before. I would not vote for him."

EDWARD ALBAREZ
Age 10
"Yes. He hasn't done anything to make people not like him. I would vote for him."

SDN Week in Review

SUNDAY
Feb. 26

Reports indicate negotiations have been broken off between officials with the Texas Low Level Radioactive Waste Disposal Authority and a Borden County landowner, it was reported Sunday.

The accounts indicate these talks have been terminated at the request of the landowner. The manager of the authority is quoted as saying that the unidentified landowner was "rattled" by rising opposition to the sale among Borden County residents.

The injunction has been overturned which prevented SACROC officials here from discontinuing the use of residual gas by county residents leasing land to the county-based oil field unit.

The decision from the 11th Court of Appeals in Eastland was reported Sunday. Writing for the majority opinion, Associate Justice Raleigh Brown points to the "undisputed" contention that "concentrations of contaminants (in the residue gas) are now at unsafe levels."

MONDAY
Feb. 27

Members of the Texas National Guard's 111th Engineering Battalion have entered into an agreement with Snyder city officials to clear a 5,000 ft. stretch of Deep Creek and Dry Run Creek, it was announced Monday.

The project — which includes National Guardsmen volunteering their drill time toward the community project — was given a final okay Saturday. Except for providing liability insurance, it will be cost free to the city.

The project's first phase will consist of clearing trees and shrubs at where the two creeks run parallel between 30th and 37th Sts.

Letter to the editor

To the editor,

This Tuesday the U.S. Senate will vote on whether voluntary prayer should be allowed in public schools. Now is the time for citizens concerned about this to telephone or wire their U.S. senator.

They are Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and Sen. John Tower. Their telephone numbers are Sen. Bentsen (202) 224-5922; and Sen. Tower (202) 224-2934.

The abolishment of voluntary prayer in school was a violation of our children's constitutional rights. Now's our chance to right this wrong.

Cotton holds promise of rich protein foodstuff

DENTON, Texas (AP) — Fields of soft, fuzzy bolls of cotton that for almost a century have been a mainstay for Texas farmers may glitter more like white gold in years to come.

Cotton holds the promise of a protein-rich food that could become a mainstay for good nutrition. If dreams of a Japanese company and researchers at two Texas universities come true, cotton could again become king in Texas as its seed becomes a worldwide food.

Research at both Texas A&M and Texas Woman's University has opened the door for development of cotton seed as a food source for humans.

The problem of getting the word to the buying public may be solved by a Japanese firm which is buying the only business in the nation that processes the cotton seed kernel for human consumption

Yazaki USA Inc. is in the final stages of purchasing Rogers Cotton Seed Co., a Waco seed firm that for several years has been the only source of the edible seed used by A&M and TWU research kitchens.

"We're selling out because we needed worldwide marketing and we did not have the capital," said Rogers' board chairman, W.T. Rogers.

He will continue to operate the seed company under the new contract while Yazaki handles marketing, Rogers said.

What makes the cotton kernel so important is its high protein content.

It contains more protein than any other nut, including peanuts. One hundred grams of cotton seed flour is 60-percent protein, as compared to 48-percent protein for the same amount of peanut flour, said Carol Shanklin, associate professor of nutrition and food science at TWU.

The same amount of all-purpose flour is only 12 percent protein and whole wheat flour is 14 percent. Soy flour is 42 percent protein. By contrast, 100 grams of broiled ground beef or stewed chicken contain about 30 percent protein.

Substituting cotton seed flour for even 10 percent of wheat flour in a product will increase the protein content by 50 percent, TWU research shows. In some recipes for brownies and bar cookies, cotton seed flour can replace all the wheat flour, increasing the protein content as much as 400 percent.

For undernourished people around the world, such a protein increase could be the difference between death and a healthy life.

And to top it off — cotton seeds are tasty.

Most people who try them describe the flavor as akin to peanuts, cashews and sumflower seeds, said Rhonda Simmons, research associate for the Texas A&M Food Protein Research and Development Center.

The A&M center distributes what it calls TAMU nuts at conferences and meetings to advertise the product. TWU experts have developed a product called a bolla chip.

Similar in shape to a tortilla chip, it has a delicate, nutty flavor. Currently, TWU officials are working with their attorneys on possible sale of the product to a major company. They hope to work out a deal so that TWU might receive continuing financial benefit to be applied to more research, Shanklin said.

Research kitchens at both universities have tested a whole line of recipes using the kernel, flour and the latest development — flakes. Flakes are being used to replace flour in many of the recipes with rave results, Shanklin said.

Manufacture of the flakes eliminates removing the oil from the kernel, a step that some believe leaves a slight aftertaste, although not as strong as the taste of soybeans. To substitute flakes for cotton seed flour, the cook has only to reduce the oil called for in the recipe, she said.

Eliminating manufacturing steps also lowers the cost of the product — making it even more marketable.

A five-pound sack of wheat flour sells for about $1.20 retail, while one pound of cotton seed flour purchased wholesale is $1.75. Flakes are just under $1 a pound wholesale.

Other recipes tempt sweets lovers with cookies and a peanut butter cup-style candy made with cotton butter. There're also pizza rolls with a crust of cotton seed flakes. The university researchers have tested their products on the best judges in the world — youngsters in public schools and day-care centers.

The real benefit more than taste, however, was that students were taking in much higher protein levels than they would had they been eating products with wheat flour or peanuts.

Within five years, researchers and producers say the seed can assume a role in the marketplace as a major source of protein.

Cotton has been a staple for cloth production in nations for centuries. For years in the United States, the seed and waste products from the plant have provided cattle with a high protein diet. And cotton seed oil is found in an array of products already on grocery shelves.

But humans — and other animals that lacked the double stomach that cattle have for digestion — have been unable to use the high protein substance left after the oil has been removed.

Fruit trees need annual "lube" job:

Have you given your fruit and nut trees their annual "lube" job? This refers, of course, to an application of dormant oil to control scale insects.

Why control scale insects?

The answer is simply to save the tree. If a scale insect such as the San Jose scale or white peach gets started, it could kill your tree.

Dormant oil can be purchased at many different stores where garden supplies are sold. Be sure to follow all label directions and apply the mixture when the temperature is between 40-70 degrees F. Do not apply if a freeze is likely within 48 hours after application, and do not apply after the tree has budded out.

Dormant oil is applied when the tree is dormant. Spraying flowers and leaves could cause leaf burn and flower drop.

Scale insects are difficult for most people to detect, so dormant oil should be applied once each year. Sooner or later your tree will probably be attacked by scale insects, so be ready by guarding against them with an application of dormant oil.

Star receives life award

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — "She was there at the birth of an art form," said Douglas Fairbanks Jr. as the film world saluted Lillian Gish, the last great star of the silent movie era.

Miss Gish, 90, was presented Thursday night with the Life Achievement Award of the American Film Institute, the second woman recipient of the 12-year-old honor. Bette Davis won the award in 1977.

It was an evening for women achievers in the movie world, and Miss Gish presided at the table of honor in the Beverly Hilton ballroom with stars Sally Field, Jessica Lange, Jeanne Moreau, Sissy Spacek, Mary Steenburgen, Lily Tomlin and Cicily Tyson.

"She is the symbol of eternal youth of America," said Miss Moreau, who has filmed a documentary of Miss Gish's life.

"She had an air of serenity that made everybody calm," said Robert Mitchum, who starred with Miss Gish in the 1955 film "The Night of the Hunter."

Dear Abby

Good Example, Not Sample, Is Best Religious Training

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1984 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: Concerning your response to "Conscientious Mother," I would agree that consistency in religious training is essential, but far more important than going to the same church every Sunday is for parents to live daily lives that embody the best and most noble tenets of all religions.

If you take your children to the same church every Sunday and then set negative examples, you might as well take them to the pool hall for all the good it will do them. True religion is taught first in the home, and then the church.

JIM ENGLISH

DEAR MR. ENGLISH: Thanks for saying in plain English what all churchgoing people need to know. To recap the letter to which you refer: The divorced mother of two daughters, 8 and 11, had custody of the girls, but their father had them every other weekend. Father had remarried and joined his wife's church (Baptist). The children had been baptized Catholic and had attended Mass every Sunday. Father wanted to take the girls to the Baptist church every other Sunday. Mother thought consistency in their religious upbringing was important—that going back and forth between the Catholic and Baptist services would only confuse them, so Father should take the girls to Catholic services when he had them for the weekend.

I agreed with Mother.

Well, an avalanche of letters hit my desk—overwhelmingly critical of my view. Some said, "Of course you'd agree with the mother because you're Catholic." (I'm not. I'm Jewish.)

Most insisted that unless we are exposed to many different religious views, including Lutheran, Methodist, Jewish, Christian Science, Mormon and even atheism, we can't be expected to make an intelligent choice.

I agree. A variety of religious beliefs should indeed be studied, but I maintain that children under 10 should be brought up to believe in one church. To alternate weekly between the Catholic and Baptist churches at such a tender age would only confuse them.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: I have a problem. There is a guy at work who is around 35, married and obsessed with me. I am in my mid-20s and single.

He leaves flowers on my desk, calls me on the phone and drops notes on my desk. Once he appeared drunk at my home looking for me. Today he handed me a note asking me to marry him!

I told him I care for him only as a friend, but that did not discourage him. He continued pestering me, so I finally told him to please leave me alone. I hate to resort to informing his supervisors because I don't want to see him lose his job.

A lot of women must have this problem. How should I handle it?

HARASSED IN MILFORD, N.J.

DEAR HARASSED: Tell him that you never date married men, and that if he continues to harass you, you will report him to his supervisor. And if that doesn't cool him down, report him.

• • •

DEAR ABBY: My niece is 19 and pregnant. The boy is 16 and a casual acquaintance. They have no intentions of marrying, thank goodness. The pregnant girl's mother is my sister, and we have been going round and round about something I hope you will settle. She is planning a huge baby shower, inviting relatives and friends she has known for years.

I think she is flaunting a sad situation and she should forget the shower. Am I wrong?

Our family has bent over backward trying to help this girl feel good about herself. We have not criticized her. What's done is done. It's my sister I'm criticizing. Whose side are you on, Abby?

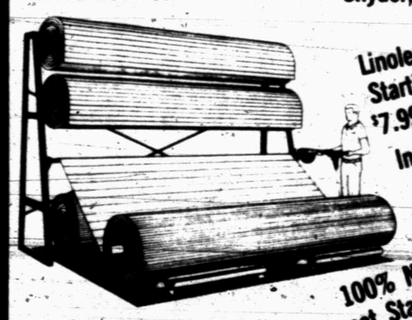

FAMILY FIGHT

DEAR FIGHT: Yours. Not only for the reason you mentioned, but because it is considered poor taste to give a shower for a member of one's own family.

Instead of rooting in soil, mistletoe means the opposite for its host tree. mistletoe prefers the wood of trees. A symbol of Mistletoe saps the tree's health and good luck, strength to nourish itself.

THE CIRCUS IS COMING!--The American Continental Circus is coming to Snyder March 8. Performances at the Scurry County Coliseum are slated for 2 p.m. and 8 p.m. Tickets go on sale one hour before showtime. Featured acts include Kay Rosaire's mixed wild animals, the Flying Caballinis from Chile, the Zamudios Giant Wheel of death, elephants, acrobats, and jugglers. (Circus Photo)

COMPLETES COURSE--A recent Texas Parks and Wildlife Department sponsored teaching procedures and methods workshop was completed by Billy Robbins of Snyder (left) at the Texas 4-H Center in Brownwood. The workshop certificate was presented by Darrell Holt of Austin, hunter education coordinator. This specialized workshop enables each instructor to utilize new and innovative teaching techniques in future hunter education classes. Please contact Robbins for information on the next hunter education course. (TPWD Photo)

Powder puff mechanics class slated

A powder puff mechanics course for women who would like to be able to perform routine maintenance on their cars will begin March 12 at Western Texas College.

Classes will meet on March 12, 13, 19 and 20 from 6:30-9:30 p.m. in the WTC automotive shop with Andy Daniel as instructor. Fees will be $20 per persons.

Students will learn how to change tires, jump start a car, check the oil and transmission fluids etc. A question and answer period will follow each session.

Students may preregister by calling 573-8511, ext. 240. Fees may be paid on the first night of class.

Two locals are named top pupils

COLLEGE STATION--Two students from Snyder have earned "distinguished student" status at Texas A&M University.

They are Melanie A. Jarrell, senior, educational curriculum and instruction and Sammie D. Robertson, senior, civil engineering.

Recipients of this honor must earn at least a 3.25 grade point ratio, out of a possible 4.0, during the most recent grading period and must be registered for at least 15 semester hours.

Snyder grads garner top recognition

COLLEGE STATION--Three students from Snyder have been recognized for academic achievement at Texas A&M University.

Students named to the list include: Bradley D. Robertson, sophomore, pre-medicine; Valeta L. Wheeler, junior, computer science; and Charles B. Wilson, senior, range science.

Those selected to the "Dean's Honor Roll," require at least a 3.75 grade point ratio, out of a possible 4.0, during the most recent grading period. The student must also be registered for 15 semester hours.

Prospective educators to take test

AUSTIN (AP) — Prospective Texas educators are slated to take the first state-mandated basic skills test today, with educators predicting the tests will set higher standards for teachers but could also reduce their numbers, especially among minorities.

"We're addressing a population in the (Rio Grande) Valley that is 75 to 80 percent Hispanic. Our student population is 78 percent Hispanic, and it's going to have a devastating effect on that group — especially when there is a terrible shortage of bilingual teachers in the state," Peter Garcia, dean of the school of education at Pan American University in Edinburg, told the Dallas Morning News.

"It (the test) can have a potentially negative effect on the pool of teachers," said Dr. Richard Swain, the Texas Education Agency's associate commissioner for professional development.

However, Swain added that stricter standards for students will eventually mean that more students will be able to pass the test.

About 2,400 prospective education majors will take the Pre-Professional Skills Test or P-PST. The three-hour examination was designed by the Educational Testing Service of Princeton, N.J., to measure proficiency in math, writing and reading.

In a pilot program last year to establish the validity of the test, 87 percent of the blacks who took it and 65 percent of the Hispanics failed at least one part of the exam — compared with 22 percent of the Anglo students tested.

Teacher colleges with mainly minority enrollments have since instituted remedial programs. And some colleges, anticipating a sharp drop in education majors in the next few years, are trying to find jobs for education professors in other academic departments.

Starting May 1, the students must pass all three parts of the test in order to get their degrees in education. Those who fail one or more parts of the exam will have two more chances to pass the part they flunked.

Results from the test will be returned in six weeks.

Gallery displays artwork

NEW YORK (AP) — Delorys Welch-Tyson, director of a new gallery of children's art, says she's "not interested in perpetuating the idea of children's art as cutesy stick drawings."

"I pick good art and I'm very selective," adds Ms. Welch-Tyson, whose gallery, the Rainbow Connection, is in Manhattan's Tribeca area. "Many of these young artists are very serious about their work. Who knows but that any of them could grow up to be a Picasso."

Ms. Welch-Tyson, who originated the idea of the gallery, is an artist herself, and recalls fondly her own excitement and pride when she exhibited at New York City's Lever House 20 years ago.

"There are so many really talented youngsters out there, there's a need for a place where they can show their work in a setting that's accepted and taken seriously," she says.

She sent out mailings, contacted art teachers, ran newspaper ads and handed out flyers outside art schools to solicit young artists.

"The private schools were the first to pick up on it," she says, "but that didn't bring me the 'rainbow' collection I wanted. Later I developed a sponsorship program — sort of adopt-an-artist idea."

Through this plan, young people who are unable to pay the nominal fee which helps defray expenses for the enterprise, will have it taken care of by sponsors, as they become available, who will then share in the gallery's commission on sales.

The gallery opened late last year, and an enthusiastic crowd at the first show was greeted by seven excited youngsters: Tara Fields, 16; Kenneth "Spank" Collado and John Simoes, 17; Jessie McKie, Tony Szoradi and Sarah Kellman, 15, and Nat See, 9.

Their work ranges in style from large-scale graffiti on canvas, "pop" fantasy and surrealist art to classical themes. The media include airbrush, oil, spray paint, pen and ink and watercolor.

Prices start at $100 and go to $5,000, and several of the works in the current show have already been sold. Ms. Welch-Tyson, who at first conceived the gallery as a not-for-profit venture, changed her mind and decided to make it a commercial operation.

"I thought it would be taken more seriously," she explains.

Esthonia, Latvia and Lithuania were admitted to the League of Nations in 1921.

The U.S. tax burden for ordinary Americans is rising. Working people have faced a doubling since 1960 in the proportion of their income collected by the IRS to finance federal spending. More than 90 percent of U.S. income tax revenue comes from Americans in low to middle income brackets.

Man likes to hike during the winter

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — With the mercury at minus-20 and falling, Brian Legault thawed his moustache over a mug of buttered cocoa and prepared to seal himself in a down cocoon for the night.

On the other side of ice-capped, 5,114-foot Algonquin Peak in New York's Adirondack Mountains, two Philadelphia men were snug in a snow cave, where they had been living for two weeks. Three men and two women from Montreal were struggling to keep warm in a three-sided log lean-to five miles away.

What moves a person to strap steel-pronged crampons onto bulbous rubber boots, tote a 50-pound pack up an icy peak in sleet and piercing winds, dine on buttered gruel and hot Jello, sleep in a snow burrow and risk death from simple mistakes like sweating in one's long johns?

"I know it sounds crazy to most people," says Dr. Edward Hixson, a Lake Placid surgeon who has been hiking in the Adirondacks for 25 years and has been on Mount Everest expeditions the past two springs.

"One reason I like it is that it's so easy to travel on snowshoes or skis," says Hixson. "Also, you're relatively alone. And the scenery is so much different than in summer.

"And there's a certain satisfaction in being able to do it well," he says.

Whatever the attraction, a growing number of people are packing up their ice axes and six-pound sleeping bags and heading for the mountains, to live in the snow and survey the world from a frozen summit.

"If you hiked up to Marcy Dam (a popular base camp in the heart of New York's highest Adirondack peaks) in the winter 20 years ago, you almost never saw anyone," says Steve Frauenthal, who has been a leader in the Adirondack Mountain Club's winter mountaineering school for 13 years. "Now, there's almost always someone camped out. It's unusual not to find broken trails to the summits."

On a late January weekend when the temperature dropped to record lows across the country, hardy souls were bivouacked all over the high peaks region around the Adirondack Loj, where Frauenthal was instructing 30 men and women in winter mountaineering.

The students, ranging in age from 13 to 66, tried out crampons, ice axes and snowshoes. But most of the instruction centered on coping with weather.

The Adirondacks are known for extreme and changeable weather. On a clear, subzero day, winds may gust to 75 mph on an open summit — ideal conditions for frostbite on any exposed flesh.

But the really dangerous weather is rain or sleet. Once clothes are dampened by sweat, rain, snow, or a fall through a snowbridge into a stream, dropping temperatures quickly lead to hypothermia — chilling that can be fatal.

Fish advises winter hikers to remove or add clothing to avoid sweating or chilling; put moleskin over zipper pulls to keep them from freezing to chin or cheek; write down compass bearings before getting to a summit to avoid being lost in a white-out; and above all, avoid getting wet.

Searches draw fishermen's ire

BOSTON (AP) — Angry fishermen say the Coast Guard's practice of sending gun-toting guardsmen aboard vessels in random drugs searches amounts to armed harassment, but officers say the policy has helped cut down on smuggling.

"These boardings the past couple of years have been very stressful; M-16s, sawed-off shotguns and sidearms are not very inviting," Cyrus Lauriat, representing the Maine Fishermen's Cooperative Association, told members of the House Subcommittee on Coast Guard and Navigation on Friday.

"Some of our boats have been inspected so frequently that the word harassment best describes this practice," added Dan Arnold, director of the Massachusetts Inshore Draggermen's Association.

U.S. Rep. Gerry Studds, D-Mass., opened Friday's hearing by pledging that Congress would again reject Reagan administration cuts calling for the elimination of 755 Coast Guard personnel in 1985.

Rear Admiral Richard Bauman, commander of Coast Guard District 1, consisting of Rhode Island, Massachusetts, New Hampshire and Maine, said in opening remarks that the Coast Guard has received only three formal complaints after boarding more than 3,200 vessels in drug searches.
