U.S. debt straps Clinton

President-elect inherits red ink, few options

By Robert Pear
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — America's vast and growing federal debt is sharply narrowing the options available to President-elect Bill Clinton as he prepares to reshape the budget that President Bush will submit to Congress this week.

That process, which will take place in the coming weeks, will mark a turning point for the new president. The act of subjecting his campaign promises to the discipline of budget making will give the country a first look at his real fiscal intentions, just as Ronald Reagan's first budget message of Feb. 18, 1981, provided a blueprint for the entire Reagan revolution.

Already some things are clear. Clinton's promises to create jobs and bolster investment to reinvigo-

New man's honeymoon: It's fawning time

By Maureen Dowd

WASHINGTON — Sure, it all seems beguiling now. All the lively chat about infrastructure and all the intense seminars on spiritual renewal. The slow jogging and fast-food binges, the lip curls and love handles, the New Age networking and the his-and-hers presidential file boxes full of holiday homework.

This is the time of cuddling, coddling and cooing, that brief, heady respite when Americans treat their new president like a newborn babe, regarding every word and step and smile as wondrous. Past sins are forgiven; future sins are unthinkable.

Bush, Yeltsin toast treaty as 'joint gift'

■ Pact assures Bush a significant niche in history as an arms control president.

Associated Press

MOSCOW — President Bush and Russian President Boris Yeltsin, clinking glasses in a farewell toast Saturday, offered the world a "joint New Year's gift" — a treaty sharply reducing their most threatening nuclear weapons.

"The two powers that once divided the world have now come together to make it a better and safer place," said Bush at the start of a lavish Kremlin dinner launching his 24-hour treaty signing summit with Yeltsin.

Seeking to calm Russian concerns that his departure from office could slow the burgeoning cooperation between the two countries, Bush promised Yeltsin that President-elect Clinton would be a "100 percent partner."

The 100-degree temperature drop Bush experienced as he arrived here from his two-day visit to Somalia was in

Birds — be they perched in trees and on high-line wires or afloat and diving in ponds — were counted one by one by 30 West Texans who rustled over the chilly Midland environs from dawn to dusk on Saturday.

The quest on the annual Christmas Bird Count was to identify species of birds and their numbers within an area covering a 15-mile radius.

Armed with binoculars, tripod-mounted telescopes, note pads and bird books, and clad in winter garb, the birdwatchers sighted 124 species, a record high in the 45-year history of

California's golden dream tarnishes

By Deborah Hastings
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — Janice Sargent so embraced the dream of the Golden State, she had it emblazoned on her license plates.

"DREAM 65" commemorates the year she and her husband migrated here from Maryland and wrapped their arms around the promise of affordable housing, well-paying jobs and seemingly endless good weather.

But in 1992, she and nearly a million other Californians watched that dream slip through their fingers in a bizarre confluence of record-setting unemployment, financial calamity and assorted natural disasters.

Confronted with the Los Angeles spring riots, floods, earthquakes, crop-killing pests in the Central Valley, a nearly bankrupt city school system and the largest state budget deficit in U.S. history, the year was one of the worst in California since statehood.

According to the latest economic forecast, 1993 will provide no relief. The California dream, as it used to exist, is gasping for life.

Even Gov. Pete Wilson's office seems overwhelmed by the enormity of tribulations facing the nation's most populous state.

Baskin looks back at 12 years on state-court bench

After three terms presiding over the 142nd District Court, Pat Baskin, 66, retired Dec. 31 from the judgeship — a position he views as the highest calling in the legal profession.

"I've been in office for 12 years and the option was to retire or seek another term and I decided that with a family I didn't want to ask for another term," he said a few days before his retirement.

Despite Baskin's decision, he won't be hanging up his robe permanently.

50 years later, war machine juggernaut runs out of steam

YPSILANTI, Mich. — The first sight of it was so striking that some of those who drove out from Detroit that spring pulled their cars off to the side of Route 112, got out, and gaped.

There, rising from the soybean fields, was the world's largest factory. There was what Charles Lindbergh called "a sort of Grand Canyon of the mechanized world."

There was Willow Run.

In 1942 those two words summed up America's hopes for winning World War II, and for winning it quickly. Willow Run was where Henry Ford promised to build a better bomber, to build it cheaper, and to build it once an hour.

Face-to-face talks

GENEVA — In the first-ever face-to-face talks between leaders of the three warring ethnic groups in Bosnia, mediators on Saturday proposed splitting the nation into 10 autonomous provinces. But the Serb and Muslim factions did not appear ready to compromise. The proposal by U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance and EC envoy Lord Owen came as Washington considered postponing enforcement of a ban on Serb flights over Bosnia-Herzegovina until mid-January./8A

Going 'ballistic'

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich. — The "associates" who compile an annual list of Words Banned from the Queen's English "went ballistic" in 1992, "downsizing" the language to cut out the fat. The Lake Superior State University wordsmiths, who released the list Saturday, said they weren't trying to get "in your face" by listing words that are misused, overused and generally useless. They just wanted to keep the language on the "cutting edge" and provide the "most complete" attempt to get down to the "honest truth" about the jargon that fills the vocabulary of Americans.

Military troops withdraw after hotel explosions

MANAMA, Bahrain (AP) — The U.S. military has dropped Yemen as a support base for its operation in Somalia, citing fears of rising Islamic radicalism after bombs went off in two hotels this week, an official said Saturday.

Petty Officer Kevin Stephens, spokesman for the U.S. Naval Forces Central Command, said all military personnel had been withdrawn.

Contacted aboard the USS La Salle in the Persian Gulf, Stephens said the evacuation was ordered "because of concern about the security situation, the instability" in Yemen.

Yemeni officials in Aden said Friday that within a few hours of this week's blasts, two U.S. military transport planes had evacuated all of the estimated 100 U.S. personnel and their gear from Aden.

They were based in Aden to provide logistical and technical support for Operation Restore Hope in Somalia.

Stephens would not say how many U.S. military people had been based in Aden or to where they had been evacuated. Djibouti and Mombasa, Kenya, are the closest ports that could serve as alternative stopover points.

Aden, with a key oil refinery, had served partly as a refueling base for the U.S. forces.

Explosions on Tuesday rocked the Gold Mohur and Aden hotels, the only five-star hotels in Aden, killing an Austrian tourist and a hotel janitor.

Four Austrian tourists were wounded in the blast at the Gold Mohur, a hotel frequented by American troops. The blast in the Aden Hotel's parking lot wounded three people, including two men whom government officials said had been rigging the bomb.

The Interior Ministry blamed the blasts on "hirelings" working for a foreign party trying to destabilize Yemen.

But many Yemeni officials privately said the blasts were the work of Muslim extremists unhappy with the big hotels' Western-style decorations, partying and alcohol consumption during the Christmas season.

U.S. cuts troop commitment to Somalia; UNICEF worker dies

MOGADISHU, Somalia (AP) — The U.S. military said Saturday that it sending 4,000 fewer troops to Somalia than expected, and turning more of the front-line duties in the war against Somalia's famine over to its allies.

In the southern port of Kismayu, a 28-year-old British UNICEF worker was shot and killed, UNICEF spokesman Peter McDermott said in New York. Sean Devereux was the first Western aid worker to die since troops arrived Dec. 9 and the second UNICEF worker killed in the past year.

Devereux was shot in the back of the head while he was walking from a UNICEF office, said McDermott, who had no further details.

The shooting occurred the day before U.N. Secretary-General Boutros Boutros-Ghali was to arrive in Somalia to tour Mogadishu and other cities, then attend a preliminary peace conference on Somalia in neighboring Ethiopia on Monday.

But one of the country's principal warlords appeared to be waffling on attending the conference, which is seen as crucial to the rebuilding of the shattered, starving nation.

Marine Col. Fred Peck, a spokesman for the U.S.-led military coalition, said American commanders had decided to halt the marching orders of 4,000 soldiers slated to be shipped to Somalia.

That would reduce the U.S. commitment from the 28,000 troops the Pentagon originally said it would send to 24,000, a reduction made possible by what Peck called the "tremendous response" of other nations.

■ More world news/8A

Twenty other nations have sent more than 7,000 soldiers to Somalia, and thousands more have been promised.

On Saturday, for example, about 300 soldiers from Turkey arrived at Mogadishu's port with armored personnel carriers and light weaponry. They were to help guard the airport.

Most of the troops from other nations do not have adequate logistical support, and Peck said many units will be supplied by the U.S. military machine.

The United States took the lead in the multinational effort to save Somalia's starving because only it had a floating force of 1,800 Marines ready for such an intervention.

The Marines from the Amphibious Task Force at Camp Pendleton, Calif., first came ashore Dec. 9, and the American presence has since swelled to more than 19,000 troops from every military branch.

The United States and its allies have turned Mogadishu's once paralyzed international airport into one of Africa's busiest, with dozens of military and chartered planes landing and taking off daily.

After the United States, France has the most troops in Somalia, with 2,545. Italy is third with 2,150, followed by Canada with 1,213.

The United States has made it clear it wants to hand over responsibility for the operation to the United Nations as soon as possible, while continuing to play a strong supporting role.

But one of Somalia's main warlords, Gen. Mohamed Farrah Aidid, wants the United States to stay and lead the rehabilitation effort because he believes the United Nations favors rival warlord Ali Mahdi Mohamed.

On Saturday, Abdulkarem Ahmen Ali, the secretary-general of Aidid's faction of the fractured United Somali Congress, said Aidid also had not made up his mind about attending the U.N.-sponsored peace conference.

Ali, who said Aidid "would likely" attend, said the United States or Ethiopia should chair the talks, rather than the United Nations.

The United Nations denies it favors Ali Mahdi.

U.N. spokesman Farouk Mawlawi said earlier this week that Aidid had agreed to attend, then reversed himself two days later. Mawlawi called it a setback to the reconciliation process the United Nations has been pursuing for months.

Ali Mahdi, who leads the United Somali Congress' other faction, has agreed to attend the conference, described by Mawlawi as "informal, preparatory talks" aimed at setting up formal peace negotiations within a few months.

Hindus resume prayers in makeshift shrine

NEW DELHI, India (AP) — Thousands of Hindus marched up to a makeshift shrine in northern India on Saturday to offer prayers at the site where Hindu militants demolished a mosque last month.

The government had banned prayers at the site in Ayodhya to prevent a recurrence of the Hindu-Muslim clashes that claimed 1,200 lives after zealots tore down the mosque on Dec. 6. But a state court scrapped the ban on Friday, drawing cricitism from Muslim leaders.

Security forces, authorized by the court to regulate access to the site to maintain law and order, kept Hindu worshippers from getting closer than 20 feet to the makeshift canopied shrine, Press Trust of India reported.

The shrine, built atop the rubble of the mosque, was surrounded by barbed wire.

About 60 saffron-robed ascetics and a few devotees blew conch shells and chanted hymns, Press Trust said. They were among 90 holy men who ended a four-day hunger strike to protest the government's order Tuesday halting prayers at the site.

Asad Madani, president of the Jamiat Ulama-e-Hind, an organization representing Muslim scholars, said the court's decision to allow prayers at the site, 300 miles east of New Delhi, gave legitimacy to the makeshift temple.

Many Hindus believe Mogul invaders built the mosque on the ruins of an earlier temple marking the traditional birthplace of the Hindu warrior-god Rama. Hindus and Muslims have been locked in a decades-old legal battle over ownership of the site.

Man kills wife, self as baby looks on, news reports say

SEREGNO, Italy (AP) — A man apparently shot his wife to death by accident and then killed himself in despair as their baby daughter looked on, news reports said Saturday.

The child, who turned a year old on Friday, was in the room for more than 12 hours before her crying prompted neighbors to call police, the reports said.

Nicola Principato may have been taking out the .38-calibre revolver to fire off rounds in celebration of New Year's when a shot went off, ricocheting off the ceiling and a wall before entering the neck of his wife, 22-year-old Maria Luana Carbone, the Milan daily Corriera della Sera reported.

If so, her killing would be among the New Year's accidents involving gunfire and illegal fireworks that occur every year. At least four other people were killed and 1,100 injured while ushering in 1993, newspapers said.

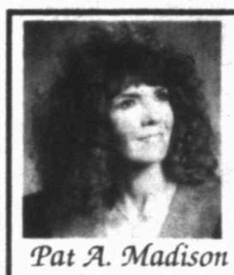

The newspaper said Principato, a 26-year-old vegetable seller, shot himself in the temple while sitting on a couch about 3 feet from his wife. Their daughter, Antonella, was sitting in a high chair.

The killings occurred in the family's three-room apartment in this town about 15 miles north of Milan. The news agency ANSA said neighbors called police Friday afternoon when they heard the infant crying. She was later taken in by her grandparents.

DEBT: Clinton inherits big challenge, few options

rate the economy will be tempered by the federal debt, which is growing faster than the economy. And the costs of servicing the debt are consuming a larger portion of the government's resources.

Since Reagan took office, the debt has quadrupled, from $735 billion in January 1981 to more than $3 trillion today. Last year, for the first time since the late 1950s, the debt was more than half the size of the entire economy.

The cost of interest, $199 billion in the last fiscal year, now exceeds the total of all federal spending for education, science, law enforcement, transportation, housing, food stamps and welfare.

In comments that reflect troubling prospects for the president-elect, Clinton aides, members of Congress from both parties and private economists expressed general agreement on the following points:

■ Clinton probably cannot "cut the deficit in half within four years," as he promised in his campaign manifesto. This task has become more difficult since the manifesto was issued in June, because assumptions about economic growth are less optimistic now. Health costs are also rising faster than expected, and Congress postponed costs associated with the savings and loan bailout.

■ To impose fiscal austerity on a weak economy would abort the current recovery and lead to larger budget deficits in the long run. Congressional Democrats will support measures to reduce the deficit over five years, but see an urgent need for the government to help create jobs.

■ The federal debt will reach the current legal limit in March or the first half of April. Congress must raise the ceiling on government borrowing, or the government cannot operate.

SUMMIT: Presidents offer 'joint New Year's gift' marked contrast to the warm reception he received on this, his third and last summit with Yeltsin since Russian independence in December 1991.

"On this momentous day, may I express our sincere gratitude to the president of the United States, Mr. George Bush, who has contributed so much to the development of the Russian-American partnership," said Yeltsin, as he toasted Bush with vodka under the gilded murals of the Hall of Facets.

The historic START II treaty, he said, is "our joint New Year's gift to the people of the earth."

The treaty assures Bush a significant niche in history as an arms control president. He has reached three major weapons reduction agreements with Moscow since assuming office four years ago.

The dinner, with its promise of a safer world in the future, was as much an event of nostalgia. Bush was joined by his chief of staff, James Baker, who negotiated the first two arms agreements in his capacity as secretary of state.

"As I prepare to leave the presidency, I bid farewell to a man for whom I have enormous respect," Bush said.

The president, on his 25th and final overseas trip, heads home today after a morning meeting with Yeltsin, a signing ceremony, a joint news conference, and a Paris stop for dinner with President Francois Mitterrand.

The 30-page Strategic Arms Reduction Treaty II will reduce the number of nuclear warheads to their lowest levels since the United States and Soviet Union escalated their arms race in the 1960s.

Ten years from now, under the agreement, the two sides should have about two-thirds less nuclear warheads than their current 20,000 stockpile.

The treaty has something for each, a result of compromises

BIRDS: Group sights record number of species

the Christmas Bird Count in Midland. Birds counted totaled 17,600.

"If it hadn't been foggy, we would have counted a few more," said Midlander Frances Williams.

Among the rare winter-time sighting was the Amercan Avocet, a long-legged and long-billed marsh and shore bird that frequents the Midland environs in spring, summer and fall but flies to the Gulf Coast come winter.

Sighted, too, were orioles and gnatcatchers, which are rare in Midland during the winter season.

Gene Grimes and Rose Marie Stortz, both of Midland, and Bill Edwards of Fort Worth sighted the Avocet early Saturday afternoon at Soda Lake southeast of town.

It was the first Midland sighting of the shore bird in the Midland Naturalists-conducted Christmas Bird Count, which was started in 1948.

Results of the count, compiled by Midlander Mark Cranford, will be published in the Midland Naturalists' newsletter, "The Phalarope," edited by Mrs. Williams, and will be included in the National Audubon Society's "American Birds," which lists birds sighted in the nationwide Christmas Bird Count.

Among birds sighted at Soda Lake on J.D. Crawford ranchland were diving ducks, such as mergansers and buffleheads; mallards and pintails; double-crested cormorant sea birds; say's phoebes, flycatchers often seen around farms and ranches; pelicans; bobwhite quail; marsh hawks; sandpipers; lark buntings; red-winged blackbirds; coots; harrier hawks; great blue herons, egrets and sandhill cranes.

Long-billed curlews, members of the sandpiper family, were foraging for foods in pastures between Soda Lake and Gene Jones' Goldeneye Pond just east of Midland.

At Goldeneye Pond, which was named after a bay duck sighted there, were pied-billed grebes, the big-beaked shoveler, the cinnamon teal and sandpipers.

Audubon, into its 93rd annual national Christmas Bird Count, launched the count in the Northeast because in the late 1800s it was "the custom for people to go out and shoot birds just for the fun and sport of it," Mrs. Williams said.

"Nothing was protected in those days," she said.

And Audubon especially set out to protect the egret, which often was shot for its marketable plumage, including feathers for women's hats, by launching a bird count instead of a bird shoot.

Soon, the count spread to all birds, Mrs. Williams said.

Midland's Christmas Bird Count took in Soda Lake and ponds and marshes for counting waterfowl and much of the tree-dense areas of Midland where woodland birds, such as blue jays, woodpeckers, warblers, brown creepers and nuthatches make their homes.

"I do this everyday," Mrs. Williams said of bird watching, counting and cataloging. "I don't have blinders on my windows." She feeds wild birds, and watches them in her walks and chores.

"No matter what happens in Somalia and Washington, you can go out and forget about world problems" while bird watching, she said.

"To me, the worst thing in the world, other than a starving child, is keeping a bird in a cage," Mrs. Williams said. "Birds should be free."

FAWN: It's that traditional time for Americans to cuddle, coddle, coo er last spring with the tag line "Why Voters Don't Trust Clinton," is now celebrating him as "Man of the Year" with the headline "The Torch Is Passed" and a tone of dizzy worship:

"Clinton's campaign, conducted with dignity, with earnest attention to issues and with an impressive display of self-possession under fire, served to rehabilitate and restore the legitimacy of American politics and thus, prospectively, of government itself."

It would be considered churlish to recall any low points of the Democrat's campaign now. The Clintons, after all, should savor this hour of splendor. Those who have enjoyed it in the past can testify that it is fleeting.

As the maxim goes: "We make our arches out of brick so that, after the leader passes through, we have something to throw at him."

"America has a manic-depressive cycle with its leaders," said Michael Beschloss, a historian who has studied the presidency, "and it's a bad thing, because it inevitably sets these presidents up for a terrible fall.

"For the first 90 days or so, this is a Superman; we tend to find a virtue in every defect. Then, suddenly, there's a pardon of Richard Nixon or a Bay of Pigs, and we're disillusioned."

As soon as a president makes an unpopular decision or pushes a difficult program, a fickle public begins to find a defect in every virtue. And the very same qualities that once charmed can begin to grate.

"In the beginning, Jimmy could do no wrong stylistically," recalled Gerald Rafshoon, President Carter's media adviser. "But then after he made his first hard speech on energy conservation, people began to say, 'What is this thing with the sweater?' "

But that new breeze is blowing again, and among journalists, Democratic job seekers and social savants seeking access to the era of Fleetwood Mac and Big Macs, it's the season to be fawning.

In Washington, the number of cars with Clinton-Gore bumper stickers has grown noticeably since the election. Revisionism about his campaign has set in: just about everything he did is now described as brilliant, even things that received mixed reviews at the time, like his saxophone turn on Arsenio Hall's show.

BASKIN: Retiring judge looks back at 12 years on District Court bench kin, who added that he won't return to a law practice.

"I don't know of anything that is demanding of my time except to sit as a visiting judge," he said. "I don't have anything in the back of my mind I'm waiting to get to."

Retiring as a judge seems appropriate for Baskin, who has a high regard for the position — the reason he sought to become a state district judge.

"Frankly, I'd say I always admired the judiciary and tend to think of it as the highest calling in our profession," said Baskin, who practiced law in Midland for 26 years.

Baskin was first elected to the 142nd in 1980 as a Democrat, and was re-elected when he ran unopposed in 1984. In 1988, Baskin switched to the Republican ticket and won his third term.

Despite the political affiliation, Baskin said he feels a judge should remain non-partisan.

"I don't think a person should be elected on the basis of party," he said.

Baskin said public sentiment partially influenced his party choice.

"My political interest and persuasion were better represented by Republicans in the community when I changed," he said. "I could be a Democrat or I could be a judge. I couldn't be both in this community."

But politics, Baskin emphasized, don't make a good judge.

"One of the things you hope for in a judge is that he'll be around for a while. It's a career-type position," he said.

"The experience is enormously helpful because it has to do with an increasing knowledge of the law," Baskin said.

"Most of the important decisions I'm called to make is how the law is applied to a particular situation," Baskin said. And most cases are unique in that they don't precisely match a precedent, he said.

As a result, the most valuable time spent by a judge may not be on the bench but reading briefs and doing research, Baskin said.

"It is my job to apply the law as it is, not change it," he said.

A judge should not use his position to push political or social views, Baskin added.

Other attributes that make a good judge, Baskin said, include an even temperament, a willingness to listen and a considerable devotion to the law.

"I wish they all deeply belonged to me," he said.

But his experience as a judge has given Baskin some insight into the justice system.

As crime becomes more prevalent and prisons overpopulated, the question of how to handle offenders grows in importance.

"I find the situation very disturbing that we are without sufficient prisons to make alternative punishments possible," Baskin said.

For example, he said, consider a situation where a prosecutor offers an offender a five-year probated sentence and to pay restitution and court costs, or be sentenced to five years in prison and pay.

For some people, the degradation of prison would make probation the obvious choice. Other offenders may weigh the consequences differently.

"More and more people are choosing prison," he said.

That's because the offender may serve less than five months and there's no way to force a collection of restitution and court costs, Baskin said.

If the offender chooses probation, he must pay the full amount owed to the court, or if he breaks probation he must serve the full sentence.

Therefore, a prison sentence makes more sense for some people, he said.

"For those folks we've got to make prison not to be the best deal," Baskin said.

"If, all said and done, prison isn't the worse deal, nothing's going to be done," he said.

"Probation and other alternative punishment have to be more attractive than prison," he said. "We've got to make probation a carrot."

On the other side of the legal-system coin, Baskin expressed some thoughts on the increase in civil lawsuits.

"I think people are more litigious. The inclination is more to file suit than to ignore it or do something else. (But) I don't know if I think that calls for limitations," he said.

Civil litigation allows everyone, not just the rich as was once the case, to ask for accountability for another's mistake, Baskin said. More laws protective of the public and a not-always-clear determination of liability also necessitate civil lawsuits, he said.

Most public criticism has resulted from outrageous judgments, which haven't typically been the case in Midland, Baskin said.

"I don't think anything should be done from dissuading the type (of lawsuits) we have here," he said.

In addition to developing an inside understanding on litigation, Baskin said he learned that being a judge can be restricting.

Baskin learned "to some degree the realization that there is a certain amount of isolation" to be a judge, he said.

As a lawyer, one can speak freely in the company of other lawyers but restraint must be used by a judge, he said.

Baskin and his wife, Joan, are the parents of four grown children, Becky Ferguson, Pat "Bo" Baskin Jr., Steve Baskin, and J.J. Baskin.

Baskin, who was raised in Cameron until he was 13 years old then moved to Austin, graduated from the University of Texas law school in Austin in 1950.

In addition to practicing law, Baskin was a Midland municipal court judge from 1955 to 1959 and a City Council member from 1969 to 1971.

DREAM: Nearly a million Californians watched it slip through their fingers

(From 1A)

"At this point, the only precedents for what we've faced are biblical, said Wilson's communications director, Dan Schnur. "We're running two plagues behind Egypt."

The statistics are mind-boggling. California's November unemployment rate was 10.1 percent, the highest since the Depression. A major reason is the recession's disproportionate impact on construction and aerospace, two of the state's largest industries.

Since spring 1990, high land prices and credit shortages contributed to a 20 percent loss in California construction jobs, while the nation experienced only an 8 percent drop in similar positions.

During the same period, post-Cold War defense cuts and a number of firms abandoning California for cheaper quarters forced the aerospace industry into eliminating 22 percent of its state jobs. The United States saw a 16 percent dip in aerospace positions.

And while the country as a whole appears to be making a slow economic comeback after bottoming out this spring, California — with a recession that has run three times longer than the entire nation's — has yet to hit bottom.

For Mrs. Sargent, who lost her construction industry job just before Thanksgiving, time has come to give up the California dream.

"In 1965, land was cheap, housing was cheap," said the 52-year-old mother of two grown children. "I didn't need to work. I stayed home with the kids. The economy was booming, there was a lot of work.

"Everyone wanted to come here," Mrs. Sargent said. "Now everybody wants to get out of here."

She is applying for jobs in Arizona, Colorado and Nevada, states where the construction industry remains healthy. Her husband, who is a Los Angeles County sheriff's deputy, will relocate with her.

It was not the first time they had considered leaving a state that once promised every creature comfort.

"Even before the recession hit really bad, we were thinking about leaving," Mrs. Sargent said. "It's just getting so crowded, and there's so much traffic. We just wanted to go somewhere where it's not so hectic."

The Sargents are not alone. In fiscal year 1992, for the first time in more than two decades, more people left California than migrated here.

Those leaving, according to state records, tended to be white, over the age of 40 and among California's highest wage earners. Those moving here tended to be members of ethnic minorities, under the age of 24 and workers in low-paying, entry level jobs.

Despite intimidating numbers, not every one sees the changing state of California in hues of gloom and doom.

Joel Kotkin, an international fellow at the Pepperdine University School of Business and Management, and a senior fellow at the Center for the New West, believes California is merely in flux.

"Everything that could have gone wrong went wrong at the same time," Kotkin said. "I don't think there's anything fundamentally wrong in California that can't be turned around."

What will help turn the state's economy around, according to Kotkin, are burgeoning businesses such as environmental engineering, biomedical research, semiconductors and small- to medium-sized companies — all of which could take up the slack left by the demise of former boon industries such as aerospace and construction.

"The California dream, if it's defined as Ozzie and Harriet, overpriced jobs in the aerospace industry and living off the government — that dream is over," Kotkin said.

"There's going to be a tendency to panic and to say it's the end of the world," he added, "but it's not the end of the world."

In Los Angeles, the country's second largest city, community leaders are trying to realize new prosperity by holding on to at least a sliver of the old California dream.

The Chamber of Commerce is lobbying to keep open an El Segundo U.S. Air Force research center slated for relocation. The base generates $4 billion each year in contract research, said chamber President Ray Remy, and is scheduled to move to Albuquerque, N.M., next year.

The chamber also is working to reform California's workers compensation and business tax laws.

FILM: Promoters use marketing to lure Hollywood producers to Texas

as, often it's after heavy marketing by local and state officials who want Texas known for more than Dallas, Houston and wide-open spaces.

What do these promoters do to lure Hollywood to Texas?

"Anything we can," said Kathy Rhoads, director of the film commission of the San Antonio Convention and Visitors Bureau.

Their efforts appear to be paying off.

The Texas Film Commission reported production budgets of film and television projects in Texas totaled more than $140 million in 1992, including 12 feature films, 11 television projects, a documentary and two music videos.

"This is the best year that the state of Texas has ever had for film and television production," said Marlene Saritzky, director of the Texas Film Commission in Austin.

In the early 1980s, the state billed itself as "The Third Coast" and in the ensuing years "Terms of Endearment," "Born on the Fourth of July" and "JFK" were filmed in Texas, mostly in and around major cities.

These days, places like Marfa, Cuero, Plainview and Gruene are making it onto the big screen.

"I'd like to think that part of it is due to the different direction we've taken in marketing the state," Ms. Saritzky said.

The commission is promoting the Texas coast, suburbs and small towns in addition to urban areas and western terrain.

"We always say we have everything but snow-capped mountains," she said.

Among the Texas films of the past year were "Leap of Faith," starring Steve Martin and Debra Winger; "Pure Country," with country music star George Strait; the upcoming "Flesh and Bone," with Dennis Quaid, Meg Ryan and James Caan; and an as-yet untitled Patrick Swayze movie.

To attract movie business, Texas promoters make sales calls in Los Angeles, advertise in movie industry magazines and attend trade shows.

The San Antonio film commission, with some of its $200,000 annual budget, buys billboard space on Hollywood's famed Sunset Strip.

"San Antonio's image out there is John Wayne and 'The Alamo' (movie) and we want people to know that we're a big city," Ms. Rhoads said. "A little dusty town in the desert like John Wayne had in 'The Alamo' would not be putting a billboard up there."

The Texas Film Commission keeps a large photo library of Texas sites to field hundreds of inquiries each year. Employees show movie makers possible set locations and assist once a movie locates in the state. The commission has a staff of about 10 and an annual budget of about $450,000.

Sometimes Texas spots are chosen because they look like somewhere else. "Leap of Faith" was set in Kansas but filmed in Plainview, Groom, Claude, Happy, Tulia and suburban Dallas.

Plainview got used to being Rustwater, Kansas. The fictitious name remains painted on the town's water tower.

Townspeople lent their homes to the movie's cast and crew, and many appeared as extras.

"Our community loved it," said Muff London, the city's downtown revitalization director. "It came at a time when our cotton crop had just been flooded. It kind of gave everybody something to do."

For "Flesh and Bone," location manager Andrew Cooke searched for "the best Texas roadhouse" and, with help from the film commission, chose Gruene Hall in the community of Gruene near New Braunfels.

Co-owner Mary Jane Nalley said it was first feature film for the dance hall, which has been in commercials, music videos and television specials.

"There's constantly somebody coming through — somebody looking at us for something," Ms. Nalley said.

"Flesh and Bone" also used locations in other small towns near Austin and in Cuero, Big Lake, Pecos, Monahans and Marfa.

The George Strait movie "Pure Country" was shot mainly in Fort Worth.

In the Swayze movie, his character is on the run and hiding out. Cascade Caverns near San Antonio fit the bill.

"Our script called for caves, and it was just perfect, as though it was designed for the script," said producer Anant Singh.

Other scenes were shot at a downtown San Antonio post office, a country music club and the San Antonio Light newspaper building.

Besides local assistance and crafty promotion, film recruiters say there's something else that contributes to location selection: Some places are just trendy.

"An area of the country will become sort of hot for a while. I hope we are sort of on an upward trend," Ms. Saritzky said.

Nudging that trend along is Gov. Ann Richards, who traveled to California in 1991 to try to attract movie business.

"She's the best pitch person for the state," said Ms. Saritzky, whose commission is part of the governor's office. "I think it says to them that every level of state government is willing to cooperate."

Indeed, when the stars come out, so does the governor.

Richards attended the December premiere of "Leap of Faith" in Dallas. She greeted Swayze in San Antonio. And she did a guest spot on the Bob Hope Christmas special, drawing fire from some Republicans because the state Commerce Department paid $150,000 to lure the Hope program to San Antonio.

The San Antonio Convention and Visitors Bureau, Sea World of Texas and Fiesta Texas also paid $150,000 each to the show.

Richards says she's proud of recruiting show business, which she says is good for the economy.

About 50 percent of a Texas film's production budget is spent in the state, Ms. Saritzky estimates.

The Swayze film's estimated economic impact on the city during its three-week stay was about $3 million.

"They live here. It's like a small army moving in," Ms. Rhoads said. "I would like to pay everybody in $2 bills and watch it float."

WILLOW: Factory rode crest of wave

struction. U.S. Steel demolished a fourth of the town of Homestead, Pa., to expand its steelworks; Dodge built an aircraft engine plant in Chicago that was even larger than Willow Run.

Designed in wartime, Willow Run and its generation went on to bless America with a peacetime richer than any the world had seen.

But five decades later the plants are old, and the production juggernaut seems to have run out of steam. The confidence of the war years has been replaced by anxiety. There are no promises of production miracles, merely hopes for survival.

The Homestead Works are closed. The old Dodge plant is a shopping center.

Even Willow Run, which once seemed two steps into the future, is an official Michigan historic landmark. And to some minds, an endangered one.

General Motors, which now makes transmissions in the plant Ford built, plans to close an assembly plant across the street with about 4,000 workers, 1,500 of whom already are laid off. The 6,000 workers at the old bomber plant wonder if they'll be next, given GM's losses in recent years.

"People are concerned," said Mike Leslie, first vice president of United Auto Workers Local 735. "We're all a little shaken up."

Brad Cole's grandfather, father and stepfather all have worked at Willow Run. But Brad, a junior at Willow Run High, says he'll become a policeman.

"It just doesn't seem like there's much of a future at the plant," he said.

To Brad and his fellow students, the plant's prospects contrast harshly with the wartime heroics recounted in an old Ford Motor Co. promotional film they're shown in history class. In "The Story of Willow Run," bombers roll effortlessly and endlessly off the fabulous assembly line.

But the real story of Willow Run was neither that simple nor that glorious.

Although Henry Ford was slow to convert his factories for wartime weapons production, at the beginning of 1941 the company's production chief, Charles Sorensen, visited an B-24 bomber factory in San Diego. Under optimal conditions, he was told, the plant's craftsmen could produce a bomber a day.

Sorensen stayed up all night in his hotel room, sketching plans for an auto-style assembly line to produce airplanes. The line would be the world's longest, he told colleagues the next morning. It would be manned mostly by unskilled workers, and it would produce hundreds of bombers each month.

Ford broke ground for the plant that spring on a site named for a creek that meandered through. All the men and machinery needed to build a B-24 would be consolidated in a huge L-shaped plant that would ultimately cost the government $65 million.

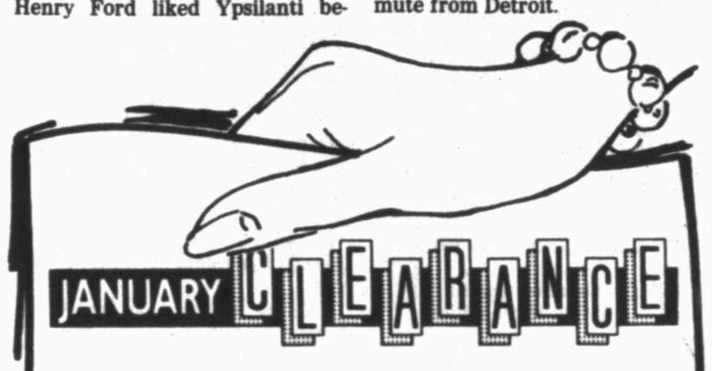

The raw stuff of flight — steel, copper, aluminum — would flow in one end of the building, and a 30-ton plane would roll out three-fifths of a mile later.

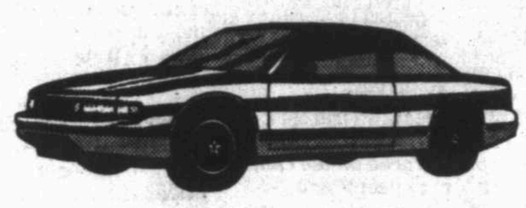

Ford hyped the plant shamelessly, and the government went along, eager to show Henry had climbed on the war wagon. President Franklin Roosevelt, Gloria Swanson, Irving Berlin and Abbott & Costello all came for a look at what a Ford executive said was "the most enormous room in the history of man."

But not, it soon became apparent, the most efficient room.

The plant used costly, long-lasting hard steel dies typically used to make cars, instead of the cheaper soft steel dies commonly used in aircraft production. The latter were more conducive to design changes, and Willow Run faced plenty: 575 in the first year alone, as complaints, comments and suggestions streamed in.

Labor was another problem. Henry Ford liked Ypsilanti because it was far from Detroit, which was pro-labor. There was a reason for that: thousands of workers lived in Detroit. Ypsilanti didn't have many unions, but it didn't have many workers, either. It had even less housing, so most workers faced a long, costly commute from Detroit.

Controversial West Texas sheriff quietly rides off into sunset

By Mike Cochran
Associated Press writer

PECOS — Well, he's gone.

After 35 years of triumph and turmoil in the law enforcement business, the last 16 as sheriff of Reeves County, Raul Florez surrendered his badge and rode quietly off into the West Texas sunset.

His New Year's Day farewell was a bloodless coup, a verdict rendered by voters in his remote desert kingdom.

"A betrayal," he called it.

Some insisted the alternative would have been a stake through the heart. Or a silver bullet.

In a state renowned for law enforcement legends and loonies, tyrants and terrorists, 55-year-old Raul Florez was special, feared and fearless and a brooding mystery to the bitter end.

"Robin Hood or a robbin' hood?" the Pecos Enterprise wondered, accusing him off and on of high- and low-level chicanery.

During his Byzantine reign, Florez clashed with federal agents, state officials, professional rivals, amateur critics and a relentless homegrown newspaper publisher.

While many adored him, his enemies, often anonymously, branded him crazy, crooked and dangerous.

"People think I'm wrong because I'm different," Florez said on the eve of his departure. "But I've put my head on the chopping block for my people and my profession.

"I don't have no regrets."

BORN, HE SAYS, in a dugout on a South Texas ranch, shining boots in a whorehouse at age 7, gunning down bandits as a young deputy sheriff, Raul Florez seems the stuff of legends.

More like myths, critics contend.

It seemed at times that nobody much believed Florez. Nobody, that is, except voters scattered across the stark rolling plains of Reeves County, population 15,850.

They elected him sheriff four times since 1976 and never with less than 72 percent of the vote.

To the largely Hispanic populace, Florez did little wrong.

"He loved this town and these people and they loved him," said his wife, Jon. "His door was open to anyone . . . brown, white, purple or green. He was not prejudiced."

They overlooked or ignored accusations of arrogance and indifference, not to mention charges of theft, assault, filing false tax returns and violating election codes.

And they tolerated his credibility gaffes, such as his "Officer of the Year" award in 1986. Not so, says the Texas Attorney General's office. Not even a finalist.

A Reeves County grand jury did express puzzlement over the sheriff's purchase in 1979 of a $13,500 Cadillac, an $8,000 Lincoln and a $64,250 home.

Referring to the down payment on the house, a grand jury witness said:

"You think about it, $16,250, that's about his salary for the year, you know. Where did it come from?"

Eventually, the Internal Revenue Service nicked him for a tax shortfall.

"They levied on my checks for four years," Florez said frowning, explaining away the problem as a misunderstanding "over income and reimbursement."

In 1982, the Enterprise reported that Florez was using jail inmates to paint his home, and the publisher himself snapped a picture of the men at work.

THAT EPISODE GOT the attention again of grand jurors, but they refused to indict. In fact, Florez said chuckling, they thought "it was a damn good idea."

The Austin American-Statesman triggered a bigger hassle for Florez with a report on missing truckloads of goods for victims of the killer Saragosa tornado in 1987.

Quoting Texas Rural Legal Aid attorneys, the article raised questions about the sheriff's handling of money, appliances and other donations.

"I don't give a damn," Florez said. "I haven't done anything wrong."

While threatening to sue, Florez confirmed he commandeered a chuckwagon trailer donated for Saragosa disaster relief and used it for political fund-raisers.

"It's my trailer. It was given to me, and I can use it for the campaign if I want," he said. But he warned that if the carping continued he might just send the trailer back to its donor.

Along the way, Florez slugged a financial officer at the Law Enforcement Center, which the sheriff helped plan and design and considered among his crowning achievements.

Therefore, he was miffed when the officer, Eddie Markham, accused him of stealing from the correctional facility. Florez denied the theft but pleaded guilty to assaulting Markham.

In 1987, the Enterprise ran a generally flattering story on Florez but deviated from policy and, along with the story, printed several unsigned letters about the sheriff.

"If the sheriff hasn't broken enough laws and stolen enough of taxpayers' money, he is now attacking other law officers," said one. "It is time to end this crook's career. . . . "

THE AUTHOR BRANDED Florez as "mad" and "above the law" and told the Enterprise it was "crazy" if it thought he or she should sign the letter.

Despite all the smoke and frequent fires, even Florez's harshest detractors were stunned when he lost the sheriff's race last spring in a Democratic primary election.

"I put a bullet right between his eyes, but it flattened out like a lead quarter and came out the top of his head. He lived long enough to sue the hell out of me.'

— Raul Florez

"There were a lot of backstabbers from within . . . who turned against him," Florez's wife said.

Andy Gomez, 43, a former jailer and sheriff's deputy, won by 221 votes, 2,525 to 2,304. No Republican dared seek the job.

Barely were the votes counted before Florez fired half a dozen of his employees. He called them "security risks," but some argued that Florez simply considered them disloyal.

"For the people who voted for Andy, I hope they get what they deserve," Florez said.

Anyway, he said, he was tired of working for "beggars' wages." He now would use his talents to make "big money" as a consultant

"I was shocked that he got beat," said Odessa newspaper executive Ray Stafford, a Pecos native and the former Enterprise publisher who clashed often and openly with Florez.

"I don't know what went wrong," he said.

Lots of things, Florez said, including backlash from voter frustration over the economy.

BUT MOSTLY HE blamed witchcraft for his downfall. He insisted that a Mexican witch put a death hex on him and cast a chilling spell over his campaign.

He said her name was Josefina and that she damn near killed him.

On a recent wintry day, with melting snow on the ground, Florez strode into his cramped office, removed his big hat, leaned back in a swivel chair and propped his black boots on his desk.

Tall and a bit paunchy, with dark eyes and hair graying at the edges, he popped a fresh chunk of tobacco in his mouth, squinted across the room at a visiting reporter and offered up his views on life, death and the law west of the Pecos.

Florez says his experiences would rival the experiences of any 10 men combined, beginning back in June 1937.

Whether in a clay dugout or "under a mesquite tree," as he sometimes says, Florez was born on a tip of the famous King Ranch known as "Esquina del Viento," or the "Corner of the Wind."

He was shining shoes in Raymondville brothels and beer joints at age 7 and gathering "dog bones" from the butcher for his mother to make soup.

"OUR FAMILY INVENTED poverty," he said with a smile, adding: "The only reason I played football was so I could wear a pair of shoes a couple of hours a day."

Later, he said, he was one of "Bear Bryant's boys," an end, blocking back and "headhunter" for two seasons on Bryant's Texas A&M football teams in the mid-1950s.

However, Florez did not graduate and the sports information office can find no record of his football career.

Florez first came to Pecos as a teen-ager to work in the cotton mills. Spotting tumbleweeds for the first time, he said he thought they were buffalo.

"But I liked it here. I never went back home."

In 1957, he signed on as a deputy sheriff, and maintains he once worked nights in law enforcement and days for Billie Sol Estes, the state's most infamous con-artist.

"I worked for him and I later arrested him," Florez said, although he was a mite sketchy with the details.

Florez said he took time off for a pair of quickie military stints, once parachuting into Syria with the 82nd Airborne Division and fighting his way into Lebanon in 1958.

The second excursion, he said, took him to Cuba during the Berlin-Cuban crisis in the early 1960s.

It was in Lebanon that he suffered the first of three bullet wounds, he said. The others occurred in Pecos while quelling a family disturbance and during a shootout with a would-be rapist.

"I PUT A BULLET right between his eyes, but it flattened out like a lead quarter and came out the top of his head," Florez said of the would-be rapist. "He lived long enough to sue the hell out of me."

In response to a question, Florez said he had killed "right at a dozen" men and wounded 27 others.

"It's not a fun thing. But back in those early days, there was only four officers. And you don't give in to the enemy. It's just a matter of them or you."

With considerable gusto, Florez recalls the time a previous sheriff sent him to find and return a killer who had escaped from the Pecos jail and fled into the mountains of Mexico.

After four days and nights on horseback, Florez climbed atop a boulder and intercepted his quarry as he descended a mountain trail.

"You come for me?" the man asked.

"No. I was looking for some other bastard, but as long as you're here, I might as well take you."

With his captive in tow, Florez backtracked through the mountains, crossed the Rio Grande, climbed in a car and headed north toward Pecos.

"Why don't you just put me up against a post and shoot me," the prisoner suggested. "Tell people we had a helluva fight. They'd write songs about you."

"Can't do that," Florez replied.

"Why not?"

"Them damn bullets cost 25 cents and you ain't worth two bits."

Florez recalled with robust laughter that the prisoner, furious, kicked in the dashboard of his car.

RAUL FLOREZ is hard-pressed to explain his ouster at the polls.

"All my adult life has been dedicated to the people of this county in one way or another," he said. "I loved public service and I loved educating the people."

There was a time, he said, when Mexicans weren't welcome in certain areas of Pecos, "and now they're living a quarter mile from the millionaires."

He likened his role to "Moses parting the Red Sea."

Florez said he built the first prison of its kind in Pecos and made the county millions of dollars housing state and federal inmates under contract arrangements.

He acknowledged the formal and informal accusations of wrongdoing but said such complaints are not uncommon to people in positions of power, at least not in West Texas.

"Upstairs is a lonely place," Florez said. "You don't have no place to go. That's when the buck stops. Presidents, sheriffs, whatever. . . . "

Ironically, he said it was "all that damn notoriety" generated by his old adversary, publisher Ray Stafford, that kept him in office so long.

"If somebody found out I took pink toilet paper into the bathroom, it would be in the newspaper," he said.

Florez said he was close to being both dead and gone during the last campaign, and he blames Josefina, the witch from the Mexican border town of Ojinaga.

"I'VE HAD CANCER, diabetes and heart disease, and during the election (campaign) I was in the hospital four times," he said. "Witchcraft got me. The spell of death was killing me."

He said it was the "curanderos," or healers, of South Texas who broke Josefina's spell.

Florez described the curanderos as "medicine men" of sorts who are dedicated to fighting witchcraft.

Josefina's hex, however, still cost him votes, Florez said, because supporters feared that if he won, then died, officials would "appoint a gringo" to succeed him.

He said he feels no bitterness, just betrayal.

Several troubled priests hail from Land of Enchantment

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — The Rev. David Holley was treated for pedophilia at a New Mexico retreat for troubled priests in 1971. But several men say he molested them as children after he got out.

And he's only the latest of many priests accused of sexual abuse in a state where the Roman Catholic Church has held sway for centuries.

"Although New Mexico has only one-half of 1 percent of America's population, it has 20 percent of America's priest pedophiles," said attorney Bruce Pasternack, who represents 39 clients in sexual abuse lawsuits against former priests.

While Pasternack's math may not be precise, the state in recent months has been rife with sexual abuse allegations involving current or former clergymen.

Authorities here and elsewhere are investigating seven current and former New Mexico priests for alleged sexual improprieties, some dating to the 1960s.

In all but one case, the accused priests were treated at Servants of the Paraclete in Jemez Springs, a retreat that handles various problems.

The latest allegations center on Holley, now 65 and retired in Denver. Pasternack last week added eight more names to a lawsuit accusing Holley of child sex abuse, bringing the number of plaintiffs to 10.

Holley also faces allegations he molested youths while assigned to parishes in Massachusetts between 1960 and 1972.

The lawsuit in New Mexico also claims Holley exploited children in pornographic pictures and films during the 1970s when he served at St. Jude Mission Church in Alamogordo, N.M.

The diocese of El Paso, Texas, which oversaw St. Jude in the 1970s, has not returned phone calls. Holley has refused to comment.

Pasternack maintains that pedophilia is not curable and that priests were assigned to New Mexico communities after treatment at the Servants of the Paraclete.

James Porter, the former priest accused of abusing dozens of people in Massachusetts, Minnesota and New Mexico, was a resident at the retreat in the late 1960s. He was convicted last month of molesting a 15-year-old baby sitter in 1987.

Pasternack wants the 45-year-old retreat, located in the isolated mountain village 50 miles northwest of Albuquerque, closed.

But the Rev. Liam Hoare, the ranking priest at the retreat, said it serves priests with various problems. The center's lawyer, Alan Konrad, has said fewer than 6 percent of its residents are there because of sexual attraction to children.

At a news conference last week, seven men who claimed they were molested by Holley urged the church to react more aggressively to the charges.

"There's a problem," said Noel Clark, an alleged victim. "Hail Marys and holy hours are not addressing it."

Pasternack said sexual abuse by priests has persisted for decades in New Mexico, with many of the victims Hispanic. More than one-third of New Mexico's 1.5 million residents are Hispanic, and most are Catholic.

The church has played an important role in the state's history since the first Spanish explorers arrived in the 16th century. Catholic churches and missions are the focal points of most communities and Indian pueblos.

Prominent psychiatrists plan meeting with pope

By Peter Steinfels
N.Y. Times News Service

Dr. Joseph T. English, president of the American Psychiatric Association, will lead a delegation of prominent psychiatrists to meet with Pope John Paul II in the Vatican on Monday. But he can remember a time when such an audience would have seemed unlikely, if not absurd.

English was a student in a Roman Catholic high school in Philadelphia in 1947, when Msgr. Fulton J. Sheen gave his famous sermon attacking Sigmund Freud's work as based on "materialism, hedonism, infantilism and eroticism."

Sheen later complained that his remarks were misrepresented as an attack on psychiatry in general, but they became a symbol of the wariness and outright hostility that long marked relations between the church and the profession.

Many of the psychiatrists who will meet with the pope will be Catholics, like English, who is head of psychiatry at St. Vincent's Hospital in Manhattan. "Those of us who are Catholics," he said in a recent interview, "feel that this visit may bury that kind of conflict forever."

A surprising number of Catholic psychiatrists lead professional organizations.

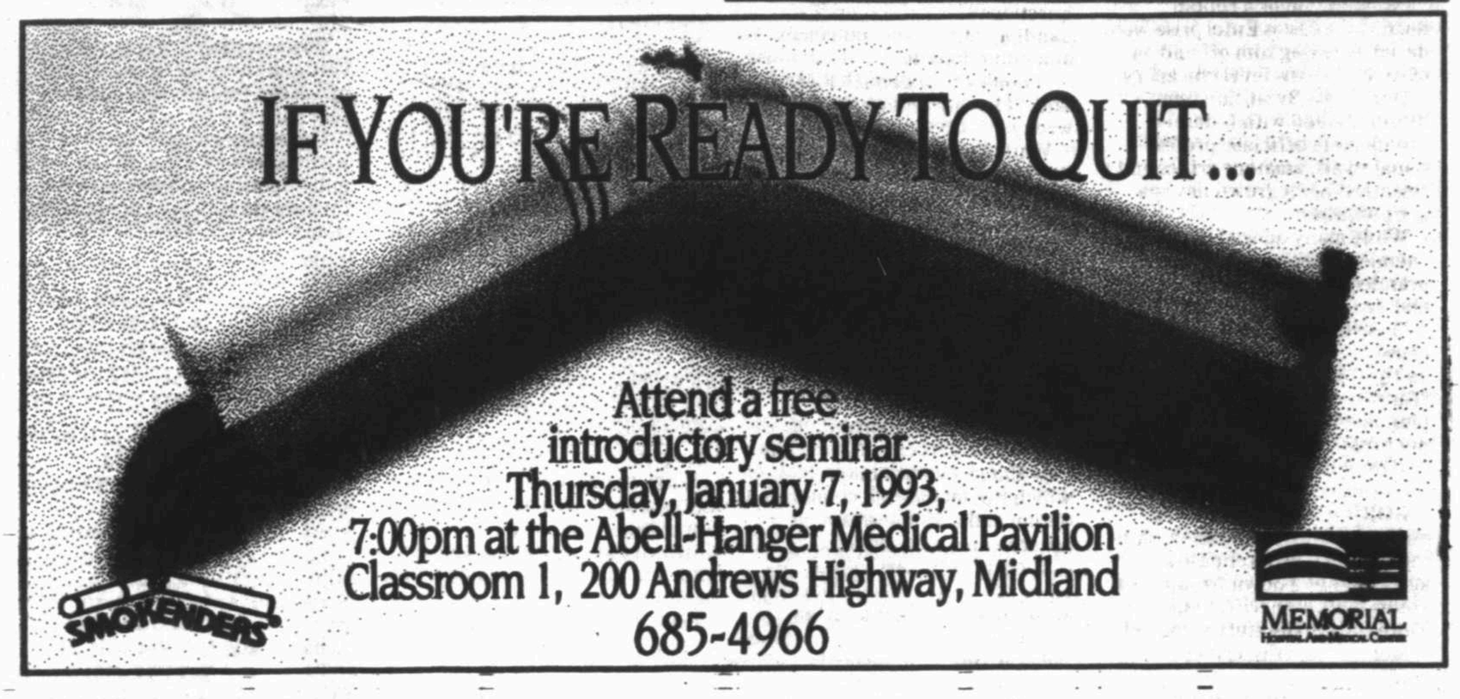

English's successor, the president-elect at the American Psychiatric Association, Dr. John S. McIntyre, is a Catholic. So are the president, president-elect and secretary general of the World Psychiatric Association. So is the president of the American Psychoanalytic Association, Dr. Bernard Pacella. All but Pacella will be in the delegation meeting with the pope.

"No one's figured out the reason for this lineup," English said. "Once anyone does, I suppose it will never happen again." He said that the coincidence had given him the idea of the papal visit, which was arranged by a high school friend who is now a Vatican official, Archbishop John Foley.

English plans to ask the pope to help remove the stigma that the psychiatrist said still affected the mentally ill or those seeking psychotherapy.

Too many people, he says, still believe that the mentally ill, as well as the homeless, suffer as a result of "moral failure rather than the complex product of specific illness and society's neglect," and this impression undermines public support for providing care.

He will stress that psychiatry is rooted in the great religious and ethical traditions and call for more collaboration between clergy and psychiatrists.

Police seek suspects in New Year's Day freeway shootings

LOS ANGELES (NYT) — Authorities were seeking three suspects in the apparently random freeway shooting of a woman and a friend on New Year's Day, according to police.

Peggy Guzman, 34, of nearby Glendale was in critical but stable condition following surgery for two bullet wounds to the head she suffered while riding home from Los Angeles with driver Frank Valenzuela, 31, and two other passengers, officials at Los Angeles County/USC Medical Center said.

"All you can hope for is just for the public to come forward if they saw something," Los Angeles Police Department Sgt. Alex Salazar said. "Other than that you're out in the cold."

Guzman, Valenzuela and Richard Lopez, 39, and Norma Lopez, 37, were shot at from 10 to 15 times as they drove northbound on the Pasadena Freeway (110) at 12:30 a.m. on New Year's Day.

The group had been at a quiet New Year's Eve celebration with friends and had decided at the last minute to leave after initially planning to stay over, police said.

No suspects were in custody and the attack appeared to be random by two or three people in another car firing into the Buick Regal that Valenzuela was driving, police said.

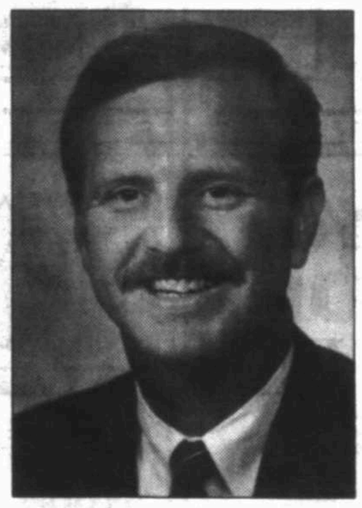

Valenzuela also suffered gunshot wounds to the face, but was able to get his car off the freeway and drive to the hospital, police said.

The shooters' car was described only as dark-colored because the victims were too surprised to note any other details, police said.

Mediators propose splitting Bosnia-Herzegovina into 10 provinces

GENEVA (AP) — In the first-ever face-to-face talks between leaders of the three warring ethnic groups in Bosnia, mediators on Saturday proposed splitting the nation into 10 autonomous provinces. But the Serb and Muslim factions did not appear ready to compromise.

The proposal by U.N. envoy Cyrus Vance and EC envoy Lord Owen came as Washington considered postponing enforcement of a ban on Serb flights over Bosnia-Herzegovina until mid-January.

Vance, a former U.S. Secretary of State, has opposed military intervention and was racing to achieve a peaceful settlement before it could happen.

"The process we are starting today can make the difference between peace and war, between life and death for thousands of people," Vance said. "Those gathered around the table have it in their power to prevent us from sliding into escalation, or expansion of the conflict."

He said the four-day meeting that began Saturday in the European headquarters of the United Nations was the "best chance for peace."

But Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said the mediators' map delineating the proposed provinces was "not acceptable" in its current form. The decentralized provinces would require the government to give up its claim to central control over the country.

Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic described the proposal as "acceptable as a basis for starting the negotiation" but reiterated demands that the Serbs have their own state.

Croatian President Franjo Tudjman said the proposals were "basically acceptable."

Conference spokesman Fred Eckhard said the three leaders were told to submit their objections to the proposal in writing by Sunday morning.

Owen said all the provinces except Sarajevo should have separate legislatures elected by "normal democratic methods."

The proposal would leave the three groups generally in control of their present territories, although the Serbs would be called on to withdraw from some of the 70 percent of Bosnian territory they have seized.

Tudjman and Yugoslav President Dobrica Cosic were present in recognition of the influence Yugoslavia and Croatia have over Serbs and Croats in Bosnia.

Owen told the participants, "There cannot be agreement without compromise, sometimes painful compromise."

Israeli reprisals fan Palestinians' hatred

KHAN YUNIS, Occupied Gaza Strip (AP) — Tharwat Abu Tiyur still believes peace with Israel is possible, even after soldiers killed his 11-year-old daughter, Ranna, as she went to buy milk for her baby brother.

But the taxi driver warns that peace must come quickly. Already, he says, too much hatred has been fanned in this refugee camp by Israeli reprisals for the slayings of six security troopers by Muslim militants last month.

"Ranna's death has created a feeling of revenge among my children," said Abu Tiyur, 39. "But if there is peace, they will forget about it."

The camp and adjacent town of Khan Yunis bore the brunt of the army's crackdown in the occupied West Bank and Gaza Strip last month.

The Israeli human rights group Betselem charged Thursday that army abuses of rights in Khan Yunis were among the worst during the 5-year-old Palestinian revolt against Israeli occupation.

A curfew kept the 120,000 residents of the camp and town indoors for 17 days, barring some 30,000 Gazans from jobs in Israel. Troops shot and killed 11 people, including Ranna and three other children. Betselem said more than 100 were wounded.

Most were killed during protests against the deportation of 415 Palestinians accused of being members of the militant Muslim groups Hamas and Islamic Jihad. Twenty-three of the deportees were from Khan Yunis.

Israel justified the expulsions as an attempt to save the Middle East peace talks. It argued that Muslim extremists opposed to the negotiations had become too powerful and posed a threat to both Israelis and Palestinian moderates.

Dr. Salah Rantisi, a Khan Yunis physician whose brother Abdel Aziz Rantisi was expelled as a founder of Hamas, said Israel's plans were backfiring.

"Hamas will recover quickly," said Rantisi, 31. "As a result of the deportations, more and more people are supporting Hamas."

Rantisi said 50 percent of Gazans and 40 percent of West Bank Palestinians back Hamas's goals of destroying Israel and creating an Islamic state of Palestine.

But the Palestine Liberation Organization, Hamas's chief rival for the loyalty of Palestinians, contends that no more than 20 percent support the radical Islamic movement.

The figures are impossible to prove. In the Khan Yunis camp, walls are sprayed with Hamas slogans. Pictures of the camp's deported prayer leader, Sheik Ahmed Nimer Hamdan, are pasted everywhere.

But the main shopping street in Khan Yunis town is festooned with four bedsheet-sized Palestinian flags, a sign of support for the PLO and its backing of Arab-Israeli peace talks.

Still, there is no doubt Hamas has emerged as a serious challenge to Palestinian moderates since it was founded in early 1988.

Hamas has found fertile ground among the 900,000 Palestinians in the impoverished Gaza Strip, where 40 percent are unemployed and tens of thousands live in tiny cement-block shacks along muddy, garbage-strewn alleys.

With its network of mosques and charities, Hamas is one of the few groups that help poor Palestinians, providing recreation facilities and university scholarships, computer training and Koran school.

Democrats get chance to prove differences when Congress convenes

WASHINGTON — The 103rd Congress convenes Tuesday, with Democrats hoping to prove that inaction in Washington can end now that they have a Democratic president to work with.

With solid majorities in the House and the Senate and promises from leaders and important committee chairmen that President-elect Bill Clinton's agenda is their agenda, the Democrats also know that if they fail to pass a hefty measure of legislation, they will have no plausible excuses.

The Republicans, meanwhile, will enjoy the luxury of opposing when they want to and compromising or even supporting some Democratic initiatives when they think it serves their interest. Their role may be both simpler and more important without the responsibility of supporting a Republican administration that some of them found too rigidly conservative and others considered too accommodating.

The first efforts to prove that things have changed may come this month. House committees will be ready to act right away on some of the same bills that died because of President Bush's vetoes, especially a measure to require employers to offer workers unpaid leave for family and medical emergencies and another that obliges states to permit voters to register when they apply for drivers' licenses, welfare or other social services.

The Senate is less committed to a sprinter's start on legislation, but it hopes to finish informal confirmation hearings on Clinton's most important Cabinet choices in time to confirm them on Inauguration Day, Jan. 20, or the day after. The first hearing will be Wednesday, when Ronald H. Brown, chairman of the Democratic National Committee, goes before the Commerce Committee to begin his confirmation as commerce secretary.

Party ratios have not changed much. The Senate remains at 57 Democrats and 43 Republicans. The House went from 268 Democrats, 166 Republicans and 1 independent to 258 Democrats, 176 Republicans and 1 independent.

But the new Democrats seem more likely to support their leaders on major party issues than some of those they replaced, so there may be little real shift. The Republicans are about as conservative as they were in the last Congress; they had little room to move to the right.

However it votes, the new Congress will at least look different. It will have six female senators, up from two, and 48 female representatives, up from 29. In the House, there will be 38 blacks, up from 25. At 9 percent of the House, blacks will approach the 12 percent of the nation's population they account for. The number of Hispanic House members has increased even more sharply, to 17 from 10.

The House will have 110 new members, more than a fourth of its membership and the biggest freshman class since 1949. The new members are not especially young, and many have experience in state legislatures or other forms of government, blunting the image of change that many sought to cultivate in their campaigns. One difference between new and older lawmakers stands out: Fewer than a fifth of the freshmen have military experience, while almost half of the returning representatives do.

Dante's cord breaks; NASA cancels mission

GREENBELT, Md. (AP) — NASA scuttled its Dante mission to explore the inside of an active volcano at the bottom of the world with a spidery robot after its fiber-optic umbilical cord broke, officials said Saturday.

The mission was called off after scientists concluded they couldn't repair the break or ship a new cable to the Antarctic site before severe weather set in, said Randee Exler, a spokeswoman at the Goddard Space Flight Center.

Barbara Selby, another NASA spokeswoman, said getting the new cable to the icy continent could have taken "several days."

Despite the cable break, which occurred near the robot itself, mission director Dave Lavery called the effort an "unqualified success." He said it demonstrated that scientists could someday control a robot on another planet from earth.

"The disappointment is that we weren't able to conclude the scientific part of the mission," said Exler. Scientists had hope the robot could spend three days inside the volcano.

The 8-foot-high robot, named for the main character in the "Divine Comedy" by 14th century Italian poet Dante Alighierli, stalled Friday after descending only 21 feet down into the crater of Mount Erebus.

Because of increasingly severe weather conditions, scientists had to complete the project and leave the area by Jan. 15, she said.

Chicago archeologist helps discover ancient horse sculpture

CHICAGO (AP) — A 4,300-year-old figurine unearthed in Syria is the oldest known sculpture of a domesticated horse and shows horses played a greater, earlier role than previously thought in the rise of empires, archeologists say.

The clay figure, 3 inches high and about 2 inches across, was dug from a trench last September at Tell Es-Sweyhat, an archeological site in the desert about 200 miles northeast of Damascus.

"This is a very important discovery because it shows that the domestic horse was more important in the ancient Near East than some scholars have thought," said Juris Zarins, an anthropology professor at Southwest Missouri State University in Springfield.

Horses were essential to development of empires, said Zarins, who studies the role of horses in civilization. Horses moved chariots, sped transportation and empowered armies, said Zarins, who was not involved in the dig.

The figurine probably dates from 2300 B.C., about 500 years earlier than domestic horses were thought to have existed there, said Thomas Holland, an archeologist with the University of Chicago's Oriental Institute who led the five-person team.

"We can see from the care that was obviously taken in making the horse that the animal was well regarded," he said Friday.

Expedition member David Schofield, a draftsman from Sheffield, England, discovered the horse in what is thought to be a courtyard, Holland said.

National Guard houses stranded travelers as freezing rain ices Plains

Associated Press

Freezing rain turned the Plains into a skating rink Saturday. Slick roads caused countless traffic accidents, and the National Guard opened armories to house hundreds of stranded travelers.

The storm spread a sheet of ice from Oklahoma to Missouri, Kansas, Nebraska, and Illinois, making driving all but impossible on many roads.

Two people were killed Saturday in separate weather-related accidents in Missouri. At least 10 deaths in Texas and Oklahoma were blamed on the storm Thursday night and Friday.

One runway at Kansas City International Airport was closed all day Saturday and the other was closed twice for de-icing, delaying planes about an hour, said Sandra Campbell, spokeswoman for the Federal Aviation Administration. Some airlines grounded their flights during the morning.

On Friday, two Boeing 737 jets slid off the runway while taxiing at Will Rogers World Airport in Oklahoma City, causing no injuries but delaying flights. Fog closed the Oklahoma City airport late Saturday.

A 45-vehicle pileup Saturday in Chicago sent 21 people to hospitals, authorities said. Police blamed the accident on icy roads. Six of the victims were listed in critical or serious condition.

"We were hit four times after we stopped," said Lynn Colbert of Chicago, who was slightly injured while riding with her sister. She said she saw her sister's head strike the windshield and break it.

Twenty-two cars piled up on Interstate 35 near Kansas City, Mo., late Friday, while 35 cars collided on I-35 near Oklahoma City.

No deaths were reported in those accidents.

A 50-mile stretch of I-35 in Kansas, from Ottawa to Emporia, was closed until noon Saturday and 75 motorists traveling the stretch were housed overnight in the Kansas National Guard armory at Ottawa, officials said.

"We provided blankets, sleeping bags, and we even went out to the store this morning and cooked them eggs and bacon, coffee and juice," said National Guard Capt. Aaron Bien. "We tried to make them feel as comfortable as possible."

When lunchtime rolled around and the travelers were still stranded, restaurants donated pizza.

Sgt. Ronald Bolsinger, his wife and three children took refuge in the armory shortly after midnight.

"There was a long line of cars not going anywhere," he said.

A Red Cross chapter in northern Oklahoma opened a National Guard armory for 96 stranded motorists after full hotels turned them away.

At midday Saturday, temperatures rose above freezing and the ice began to melt. "But there's so much ice on the ground it's going to take some time," said Don Rogers, a weather service meteorologist in Topeka, Kan.

Kavin Marcum, a firefighter in Arkansas City, Kan., near the Oklahoma line, said: "We were hearing about it down in Oklahoma, 'Everybody off the roads,' and the next thing we could hear ice pelting the building. ... By the time we got the (next) fire call, the streets were slick and the fire trucks were sliding."

Young girl receives booklet from convicted child killer

PARMA HEIGHTS, Ohio (AP) — Child killer Westley Allan Dodd, scheduled to be hanged Tuesday in Washington state, sent a 6-year-old girl a booklet he wrote on how to avoid child molesters, the child's grandmother says.

The nine-page booklet arrived in November for the granddaughter of Sandra Clemons. Mrs. Clemons has exchanged letters regularly with Dodd.

Dodd, 31, is scheduled to be hanged Tuesday for strangling or stabbing three boys in the Vancouver, Wash., area in 1989.

He has fought appeals of his execution. He says he wants to die by hanging because he strangled his youngest victim, a 4-year-old, and hanged him in a closet.

The booklet, dated Oct. 10, says on the cover page: "When You Meet a Stranger or Other Bad People — by Westley A. Dodd." A drawing shows a boy lunging away from two grabbing hands.

The signature matches that in about 20 letters Mrs. Clemons has received from Dodd, sent from Washington State Prison to her home in this Cleveland suburb.

The booklet's hand-printed text begins: "My name is Wes, but since you don't really know me, I am a stranger to you. I am the kind of stranger you should stay away from. There are other people like me."

The booklet, which Dodd created about two years ago, contains an admission that he sexually molested a small child in a public park.

It concludes: "Now I can never do bad things to any more boys or girls. What do you do when someone wants to do bad things to you? Just say NO! Run! SCREAM! YELL! GET AWAY! You can protect yourself and other kids too! Be a hero!"

Mrs. Clemons, 48, helped her granddaughter, Becky, read the booklet, she said last Tuesday.

"Becky was happy to get the book, she was excited. She was proud of it," Mrs. Clemons said.

Mrs. Clemons said she has been writing to condemned killers for about 20 years. "You hear their anger," she said. "But I don't let that anger get to me."

Mrs. Clemons said as a Seventh-day Adventist she believes killing is wrong, even if condoned by the government.

Alabama's players celebrate their 34-13 win over Miami Friday that handed the Crimson Tide its sixth AP national championship.

Voters recognize 'Bama's feat

By Rick Warner
AP Football Writer

NEW ORLEANS — No dispute this time.

After two straight seasons with split national championships, Alabama is the unanimous choice as college football's top team in 1992.

The Crimson Tide (13-0) got every first-place vote Saturday in The Associated Press media poll and USA Today-CNN coaches' survey after beating then-No. 1 Miami 34-13 in the Sugar Bowl.

"Our goal going into the season was to play for the national championship. We had the opportunity and thank God, we were able to capture it," said Derrick Lassic, who was named the Sugar Bowl's most valuable player after rushing for 135 yards and two touchdowns.

It is Alabama's sixth AP title, but first in the post-Bryant era. Bryant's teams won five championships in the 1960s and '70s, including consecutive titles in '78-79. He died in 1983, shortly after announcing his retirement.

Alabama's current coach, Gene Stallings, played and worked for Bryant. But he has no desire to replace the legendary coach in the hearts and minds of Tide fans.

"When you talk about coach Bryant, you're talking about the very best that's ever been in college football," Stallings said. "Just because we win a few games, it's not going to make anybody forget him. And I don't want them to. I'm not in competition with coach Bryant at all. I want to see his legacy continue to grow."

Alabama, which was ranked No. 2 going into the Sugar Bowl, is the first consensus champion since Miami in 1989. Colorado and Georgia Tech shared the championship in 1990, with the Buffaloes winning the AP title and the Yellow Jackets getting the coaches' crown. In 1991, Miami was the AP champ and Washington won the coaches' title.

Jackson trouble

COLUMBUS, Ohio — A complaint filed Saturday with police alleges that former Ohio State basketball player Jim Jackson pulled a gun on four teen-agers last week.

Randall Moore, an administrative sergeant in the patrol unit of the Police Division, confirmed late Saturday that the complaint had been filed earlier in the day. He said the complaint alleged that Jackson "displayed the gun, but didn't point it" at the youths Wednesday night.

WCMH-TV reported Saturday that the complaint alleged that Jackson pulled a gun on Gene Sidney, 19; his sister, Adrian, 13; Angie Jones, 13, and Robert Dover, whose age wasn't listed.

Moore said he didn't immediately know the identities of the teens involved. He said no charges have been filed. Moore said the person bringing the charges would have to take the complaint to the prosecutor's office.

Buffalo vows to show up

■ The Buffalo Bills hope to avoid a repeat of Sunday's 27-3 humiliation at the hands of the Houston Oilers.

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. — The Buffalo Bills have reason to be bummed out heading into today's AFC playoff game with the Houston Oilers.

SAN ANGELO — Midland Lee's Rebels found District 4-5A's golden basketball secret here Saturday night. Now they need to find the bottle to keep it.

Lee went on a scoring rampage to open 4-5A warfare here Saturday with a 121-62 win over the San Angelo Bobcats. That is thought to be a Lee single game district scoring record and may be an overall scoring mark.

"To say the least, I'm tickled," understated Lee coach Jon House. "We were just hitting our shots. Ironically, our press wasn't working very well, but we still scored 121 points."

The points aside, Lee (18-3, 1-0) is also a step up on last year when the Rebels failed to win a single district game on the road.

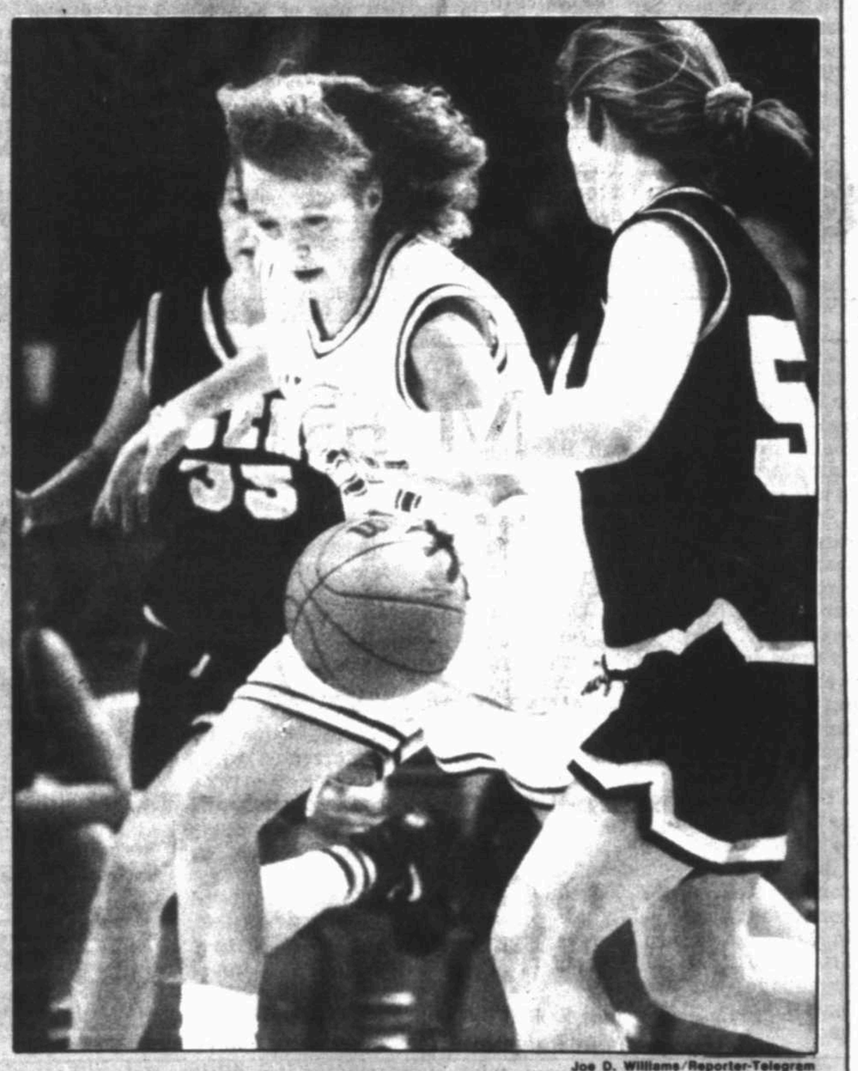

"That's the big thing," House said. "We felt this year that the key for us was winning on the road, but we didn't expect this. You can never expect anything like this."

San Angelo fell to 3-14 for the season and 0-1 in district.

Senior David Wilson led Lee with 27 points, but Ryan Tucker added a season high 21 points and Martin Lattibeaudiere had 20. In addition, Sean Low came off the bench for 16 points and reserve John Sullivan had 12 points.

MHS girls trip Snyder

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

Midland High's Lady Bulldogs opened 1993 with a 55-33 win over Class 4A Snyder at the MHS gym Saturday afternoon, knowing that the rest of the winter season will only count victories if a state basketball playoff berth is to be earned.

The Lady 'Dawgs turn back to District 4-5A play Tuesday with a 6:15 p.m. date with cross-town rival Midland Lee at Chaparral Center, and MHS coach Jim Raughton is hoping the team that played Snyder in the second half is the one that shows up against Lee Tuesday.

"We were just not mentally ready to play early," Raughton said. "When you can't make two-footers, that's a sign that you are lacking in concentration. The effort was good, but we were missing too many shots."

The Lady Bulldogs held a meager 22-18 lead over the Lady Tigers at the half, but woke up in the third quarter and rolled to the victory. MHS is now 15-5 for the season, but 10 key district games loom ahead. The Lady 'Dawgs already own a 2-0 district mark and a good start in 4-5A play.

MHS was sparked in the third period by Amy Alcala, who scored eight of her 20 points in the period. Julie Chancellor scored nine of her 13 points in the second half while Jackie Perez scored eight of her 10 points in

MHS stymies Crane, 78-52

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

The Midland High Bulldogs had the luxury of playing a non-conference basketball game Saturday night while the rest of District 4-5A went to war. The Purple Pack made the most of the wait with a 78-52 win over a scrappy Class 3A Crane.

Andre Gill, one of 4-5A's prominent big men at 6-8, led the way with 20 points by displaying some inside moves that would have done the NBA proud. Donald Carter added 12 points as 11 of 13 'Dogs scored in the game.

"I've never seen a 6-8 kid as quick as Andre and I've coached some good ones in the past," said MHS coach Jack Stephenson.

The Bulldogs, now 12-5 for the year, showed little ill-effect of a long trip to Florida this week as they hit the ground running and gunning, jumping to a 13-2 lead against the slow starting Golden Cranes.

"Actually, the trip helped us a lot," Stephenson noted. "We saw some people in Florida. We went there a little

Lady Rebs win in double OT

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

Susan Seay sank a pair of free throws with 2.55 seconds left in the second overtime Saturday night to ice a dramatic, come-from-behind win by the Midland Lee Lady Rebels, 68-64, over San Angelo's Lady Bobcats.

Lee senior post Tekeira Strambler had 32 points and 17 rebounds as the Lady Rebs, who own a 10-8 overall record, evened their District 4-5A record at 1-1. San Angelo fell to 10-8, 1-2.

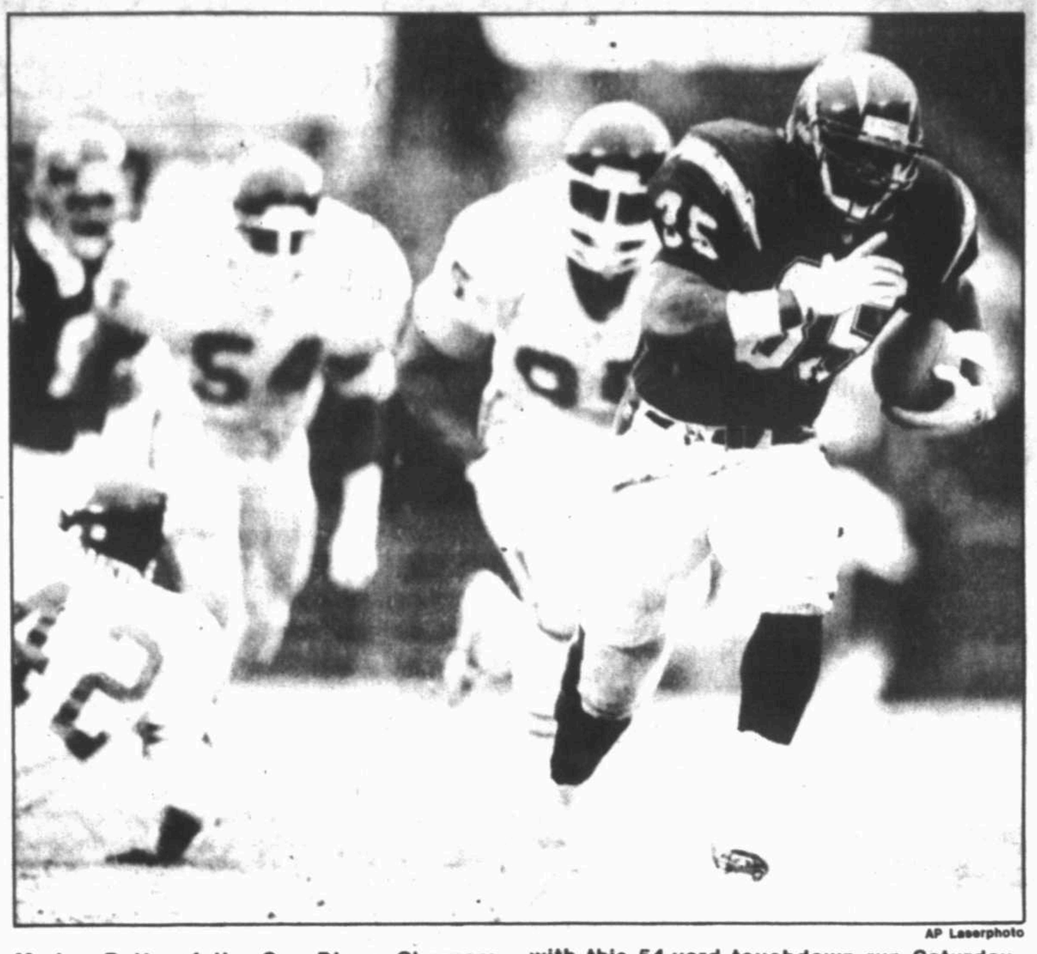

Elsewhere in league play, Odessa High beat Abilene Cooper, 40-34, while Abilene High pounded Odessa Permian, 51-40. Midland High, in a non-district game, downed Snyder, 55-33.

"This is unreal," Seay said of the win. "I'm so happy I made them (the free throws). It was really a pressure-filled situation."

San Angelo had a chance to tie the game and possibly force a third extra period, but both Tiffany Hall and Calia Weaver missed short baseline jumpers before Strambler hauled in her final rebound of the evening. The Lady Bobcats, in fact, were 0-of-6 from the field in the final three-minute period.

Marion Butts of the San Diego Chargers made amends for his first-quarter fumble with this 54-yard touchdown run Saturday at Jack Murphy Stadium.

Chargers keep up hot streak with 17-0 win

Associated Press

SAN DIEGO — The lightning bolt is back, and San Diego's Marion Butts proved that electricity and water do mix.

Butts, who fumbled on the Kansas City 9-yard line on the game's fifth play, scored on a 54-yard run up the middle with 5:53 left in third quarter to lead the Chargers to 17-0 first-round playoff victory on a rainy Saturday in San Diego.

The AFC West champion Chargers (12-5), who haven't been in the playoffs since 1982 — the days of Dan Fouts, Chuck Muncie and Kellen Winslow — will play the AFC East champion Dolphins next Sunday at Miami. San Diego, under rookie coach Bobby Ross, won its eighth straight game since a 16-14 loss at Kansas City on Nov. 8.

San Diego's defense, coordinated by 66-year-old Bill Arnsparger, had seven sacks and forced three turnovers. It was particularly dominant in the second half, sacking Dave Krieg six times and forcing two turnovers to preserve its first shutout in 13 lifetime playoff games. San Diego had lost six straight games to Kansas City (10-7).

The Chargers, whose symbol is a lighting bolt, are 12-1 after a 0-4 start.

Butts' run on second and 2 from the San Diego 46 broke a scoreless tie. Strong safety Martin Bayless, a former Charger, missed Butts at the line of scrimmage, and free safety Charles Mincy missed him at the Kansas City 45. The big back outran cornerbacks Albert Lewis and Kevin Ross into the end zone.

On the first play of Kansas City's ensuing drive, tackle Blaise Winter, who was out of football last year, deflected a pass by Krieg and Pro Bowl end Leslie O'Neal intercepted and returned it 3 yards to the Chiefs 26. John Carney, whose 52-yard field goal try bounced off the crossbar with 34 seconds left in the first half, kicked a 34-yarder for a 10-0 lead.

Two-way player Steve Hendrickson scored on a 5-yard run with 4:57 left in the game. The 10-play, 90-yard drive was keyed by a 55-yard pass from Stan Humphries to Anthony Miller. Miller fumbled after a hit by Kevin Ross, but Ronnie Harmon recovered at the Kansas City 28.

Butts rushed 15 times for 119 yards, while the Chiefs gained only 61 yards on 19 carries.

Humphries, who dislocated his non-throwing left shoulder a week ago in Seattle, was sacked five times, four in the first half. He completed 14 of 23 passes for 199 yards. Krieg completed 16 of 34 passes for 233 yards. He was intercepted twice and lost one fumble.

O'Neal forced a fourth-down fumble by Krieg in the closing minutes, and Stanley Richard recovered.

San Diego got inside the Kansas City 35 three times in the first half only to have the drives fall apart.

Humphries went right at the Chiefs, completing a 39-yard pass to Nate Lewis to the Kansas City 41 on the game's first play. Two 13-yard penalties against the Chiefs, for pass interference on Lewis and unnecesary roughness on Neil Smith, helped move the ball to the Kansas City 12.

Butts gained 3 yards to the 9, but on the next play he fumbled and Smith recovered at the 13.

Early in the second quarter Humphries moved San Diego from its 6 to the Kansas City 32, but Derrick Thomas and Leonard Griffin sacked him on first down and Smith got him on third down, both for 13 yards.

On San Diego's next drive, Bayless sacked Humphries for 9 yards on second and 8 from the Kansas City 27. Humphries threw 2 yards to Ronnie Harmon, and Carney, who finished the regular season with a team-record 16 straight field goals, had his 52-yard attempt bounce off the crossbar.

Saints glad to be home

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The Philadelphia Eagles, who have had their troubles on the road this season, may find themselves happy to be playing in the Superdome today.

If they get off to a decent start, the crowd could turn on the New Orleans Saints.

Call the first-round playoff game between the Saints and Eagles, two days after the Sugar Bowl, the Unappreciated Bowl. Philadelphia and New Orleans — both in the playoffs for the fourth time in five seasons — are decidedly unappreciated.

The problem, of course, is that neither has won any of those games.

"The New Orleans Saints HAVE to win their first playoff games," said Sam Mills, one of four New Orleans linebackers voted to the Pro Bowl. "People talk about it all the time — the fact that we haven't won a playoff game."

Mills said the Saints won't get the respect they deserve until they do.

"People try to make the inference that we choke," defensive line coach John Pease said. "That's ridiculous."

The regular-season record does make it a bit ridiculous.

Until 1987, the Saints had not had a winning season in 20 in the NFL.

Then, under second-year coach Jim Mora, they went 12-3 and were knocked out in the first round by Minnesota — at the Superdome. Two years ago, the Saints went to Chicago and lost. Last year, it was a loss at home to Atlanta after New Orleans had won the NFC West at 11-5.

"You can have a really great season, but if you lose that first playoff game, it doesn't seem like a good season," center Joel Hilgenberg said. "We don't want to go through it again."

This season, the Saints were 12-4 and second to San Francisco, losing two close games to the 49ers.

The Eagles beat the Saints 15-13 in Philadelphia the first week of the season. The winner this time has a good chance to wind up next Sunday in San Francisco. The Eagles lost to the 49ers 20-14 on Nov. 29.

But none of that close stuff sits well with the fans in either city. In a recent newspaper poll, 74 percent said they didn't believe the Saints could reach "the next level" under Mora, despite his career record of 69-45.

The fans in Philadelphia sympathize.

OILERS: Bills seek 3rd straight Super Bowl

ch Marv Levy found a sliver of silver.

"They can be something better (than AFC East champs) that they've never been: Super Bowl champs," he said. "And there's only one way to do it."

The way to a third straight Super Bowl appearance will be an exceedingly hard one for Buffalo (11-5). Only twice in NFL history has a wild-card team won three straight playoff games to make the Super Bowl. Only one — the 1980 Raiders — won a fourth to claim the championship.

The Bills say they are ready for the challenge.

"We'll definitely be up for this one. It's the playoffs," linebacker Shane Conlan said. "We just have a difficult road getting there."

Straight ahead are the Oilers, who have to be pretty optimistic about their chances after the thorough whipping they gave the Bills last Sunday.

"It definitely helps our confidence knowing that we can beat them, but there's still a lot more obstacles we have to overcome to beat them in their place, as opposed to playing in our place," Warren Moon said.

Houston coach Jack Pardee wouldn't say whether Moon — who returned from an arm injury to look sharp in limited action last week — or Cody Carlson would start at quarterback.

Either way, Moon said the Rich Stadium crowd will give Buffalo as much of an advantage as the Oilers had last week in the Astrodome.

"It does make it tougher because you have to go up into their place and play this time," he said. "Some of the things that you didn't have to worry about like crowd noises and weather conditions, we're going to have to worry about there."

Although a sellout isn't likely, Buffalo crowds are among the most noisy in an outdoor stadium. Levy said that will help the Bills' offensive line, which gave up seven sacks last week.

"If there's going to be a factor from which the biggest swing could come from, we'll get it more from our crowd ... then we will from keeping in a tight end, as far as pass protection," Levy said.

The Bills know who they'll have at quarterback, they just wish it was Kelly. With him out, perennial backup Frank Reich will lead Buffalo.

Reich said he's hoping to draw on an experience he had in 1990, when Kelly went down late in the season against the New York Giants.

"I came in and didn't play particulary well in the Giants' game, but I felt like I played enough," Reich said. "Then we came back and played the Dolphins (the next week) and I don't think that it took me time to warm up."

Reich led the Bills past Miami in the most recent of a number of solid performances he has made in eight years as Kelly's backup.

"I think our players have a lot of confidence in Frank Reich," Levy said. "They have reason to have it based on past performances. They know he has a great grasp of the offense."

In Kelly's absence, the Bills will look to Thurman Thomas, the NFL's leader in combined rushing and receiving yards for the past four seasons. Thomas averaged 5.4 yards a carry last week against the Oilers.

REDSKINS: Defending champs find form ing the season, carried 16 times against the Vikings. He also returned a punt 54 yards and ran 38 yards on a fake punt.

The Redskins also rediscovered a few old stand-bys: Mark Rypien hitting open receivers; the Hogs clearing the way for 196 rushing yards and nearly 43 minutes of possession time, and a smothering defense that held Minnesota to 148 yards.

Washington, which went 9-7 and backed into the playoffs only because the Vikings beat Green Bay on the season's final Sunday, improved to 16-4 in postseason play under coach Joe Gibbs.

The Redskins will try to improve that mark next Saturday, when they visit the San Francisco 49ers, whose 14-2 record was the NFL's best.

Meanwhile, the Vikings, who entered the game as 3½-point favorites after going 11-5, saw their first season under Dennis Green come to a screeching halt. Minnesota is 0-7 against Gibbs' Redskins, including 0-3 in the playoffs.

The Vikings thought they had cured their own offensive woes in their victory over Green Bay, but they were dominated by Washington's defense. Sean Salisbury, who passed for 292 yards against Green Bay, completed only 6 of 20 passes for 113 yards and was intercepted twice.

Mitchell, used mostly on special teams, was filling in for injured Ricky Ervins. He also keyed several Washington drives with his swivel-hipped, hard-to-catch running and spiced up an attack that had averaged fewer than 19 points during the season.

Rypien completed 16 of 24 passes for 172 yards, including a 24-yard touchdown pass to Gary Clark that finished the scoring late in the third quarter.

The Vikings took the ball 79 yards on their opening drive and went up 7-0 on Terry Allen's 1-yard run.

Swoopes scores 48 for Tech's women

AUSTIN (AP) — Sheryl Swoopes scored a league-record 48 points Saturday night, pacing No. 11 Texas Tech in a 90-74 victory over Washington in the first game of the Pac-10/Southwest Conference Challenge.

Swoopes surpassed her 39-point career mark, set last week against Miami, and the SWC record of 41 by Annette Smith of Texas in 1984 and Maggie Davis of Baylor in 1986.

The Lady Raiders improved to 9-1, their best record ever after ten games, while dropping Washington to 4-4.

Noel Johnson scored 13 points for Texas Tech, while Cynthia Clinger added 12 and Kristi Kirkland 10.

Rhonda Smith's with 22 points and 11 rebounds led Washington.

"I Don't Pay My Servicemen a Commission on Repairs"™
If your furnace breaks down...
Don't panic
Don't pay more
and get it fixed today

Guaranteed Flat Rate Service™ protects you from getting overcharged for furnace repairs. Some companies pay servicemen based on the parts they sell you. This, of course, can lead to abuse and you end up paying the bill.

Other companies charge for their service on an hourly basis. And sometimes they advertise what seems to be an attractive low hourly rate. But it might take the average technician (who is less skilled) two or three hours to make a repair that my Champion Technician™ can fix in 45 minutes.

So what appears to be a savings can actually cost you twice as much.

Here's how I've solved this problem.

I only charge you a low Guaranteed Flat Rate for the diagnosis and repair. I never charge you an hourly fee. After all if one of my Champion Technicians gets "stuck" on a difficult problem why should you be penalized?

One more thing. It's important.

I never charge you for "hard-to-find" parts. I keep over $10,000 in parts and equipment on each service truck. So 96% of the time the exact part you need is there. And if it isn't? I don't charge you extra to get it.

Woeful Mavs lose by 32 points

Associated Press

MINNEAPOLIS — The Minnesota Timberwolves found just the right solution for ending their eight-game losing streak — a meeting with the Dallas Mavericks.

Christian Laettner scored 26 points and the Timberwolves established a franchise-low for points allowed in a 103-71 victory over the Mavericks on Saturday night. In its last 14 games, Minnesota is 2-12, with both wins coming over Dallas.

In losing their eighth straight game and 23rd in 25 outings this season, the Mavericks had their lowest scoring output in three seasons. They shot a season-low 33 percent from the field as their road record dropped to 0-13, with each road loss by at least 14 points.

It also was the biggest margin of victory in Timberwolves history. Their previous largest margin was 29 points two seasons ago, and their previous low for points allowed was 74 against Cleveland three seasons ago.

Half of the Wolves' six wins this season have come against Dallas, and the Mavericks are the only NBA team Minnesota has a winning record against (10-8) in its four-year history.

Bulls 109, Pacers 100

CHICAGO — Michael Jordan had 39 points and Scottie Pippen scored 18 of his 22 in the second half of the Chicago Bulls' seventh consecutive victory.

The loss was the sixth straight for the Pacers, their longest losing streak of the season.

The Bulls led 86-81 with 9:48 left in the game, but they didn't score again for 2:44, when a corner jumper by B.J. Armstrong tied the game 88-88 and started a 15-4 run that gave them their largest lead, 101-92, with 3:06 left.

Reggie Miller scored 21 points, Detlef Schrempf 16 and Dale Davis 15 for Indiana. Horace Grant had 15 points for Chicago before fouling out late in the game.

The Pacers led 60-53 at halftime behind 62 percent shooting, but they lost the lead after hitting just 39 percent in the third period.

Pippen's 12 points and Jordan's 10 in the quarter, giving the Bulls an 81-80 lead entering the final 12 minutes.

Clippers 98, Knicks 97

NEW YORK — Gary Grant nailed a 21-foot jumper at the buzzer in overtime as the Los Angeles Clippers, who had lost 12 straight to New York entering this season, beat the Knicks for the second straight time.

It was just the second loss at home for the Knicks in 15 games this season.

Ron Harper led the Clippers with 20 points, four in the overtime. Mark Jackson, traded by the Knicks to Los Angeles during the offseason, had 18 while Danny Manning added 16 and 13 rebounds.

Patrick Ewing led New York with 26 points and 17 rebounds while Charles Smith added 14 and Greg Anthony and John Starks each had 13.

Pistons 98, Magic 97

ORLANDO, Fla. — Joe Dumars scored 23 of his 32 points in the second half and Dennis Rodman held Shaquille O'Neal without a field goal in the final 15 minutes, leaving the Detroit Pistons unbeaten against Orlando.

The Pistons, one of two NBA teams the Magic have never beaten, shot 32 percent from the floor in the first half and trailed by 19 points before trimming Orlando's lead to 50-38 at halftime.

Dumars, 1 of 9 in the first half, hit 7 of 8 shots and scored 17 points in the third quarter to help Detroit, which made 13 of 17 shots in the period, erase the rest of the deficit. The Pistons outscored Orlando 35-23 in the third quarter for a 73-73 tie.

Dumars' jumper gave Detroit the lead for good, 75-73, and the Pistons led by 11 before Orlando made it close at the end, only to see its record against Detroit fall to 0-13.

Hornets 118, Nets 117

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — Kendall Gill's 14-foot jumper with four seconds remaining gave the Charlotte Hornets a victory over the New Jersey Nets.

Derrick Coleman put the Nets up 117-115 at the 1:20 mark, but they didn't score again. Alonzo Mourning made one of two free throws with 54 seconds left to pull the Hornets to 117-116.

After each team missed shots, Nets guard Kenny Anderson was called for a midcourt violation after catching an inbounds pass, setting up Charlotte's winning possession. Coleman's turnaround jumper from 17 feet fell well short as time expired.

Larry Johnson led the Hornets with 32 points, Dell Curry had 19 and Gill 17. For the Nets, Drazen Petrovic scored 27 points and Coleman 26 while Anderson had 20 points and 15 assists.

Bullets 100, Heat 93

LANDOVER, Md. — Rex Chapman keyed a third-quarter rally by scoring nine of his 14 points in the period, lifting the Washington Bullets over the Miami Heat.

The Bullets, who lost 10 of their previous 11 games, trailed 57-52 early in the second half before an 11-4 run put them ahead to stay. Washington, which fell behind by 12 late in the first quarter, took the lead for good on a layup by Pervis Ellison that made it 63-61 with 8:14 left in the third quarter.

The loss was the 11th in 13 road games for Miami this season.

Harvey Grant, Ellison and Michael Adams each scored 16 points for the Bullets, while Tom Gugliotta added 14. Glen Rice paced Miami with 19 points, Kevin Edwards added 18 and Bimbo Coles 14.

Cavaliers 106, Lakers 91

RICHFIELD, Ohio — Craig Ehlo scored eight points during a 16-5 run at the start of the fourth quarter that carried the Cleveland Cavaliers to a victory over the Los Angeles Lakers.

The win was the Cavaliers' third straight and 10th in 11 games. The Lakers have lost six of eight.

Cleveland entered the fourth quarter protecting a 76-69 lead, the largest for either team to that point. The Cavs then sank their first six floor shots — and 10 of their first 11 — extending the margin to 92-74 when Ehlo made a layup with 7:24 to go.

Los Angeles got no closer than 13 after that.

Bucks 106, Hawks 93

ATLANTA — Blue Edwards scored 31 points as the Milwaukee Bucks ended an eight-game road losing streak and escaped last place in the Central Division.

Eric Murdock had 24 points and Danny Schayes a season-high 16 as the Bucks handed the Hawks their sixth straight loss at home and fifth in a row since Dominique Wilkins suffered a broken finger.

Jazz 110, Blazers 102

PORTLAND, Ore. — Karl Malone had 29 points and 13 rebounds, and the Utah Jazz survived Portland's 21-6 second-half run to win their fifth consecutive game.

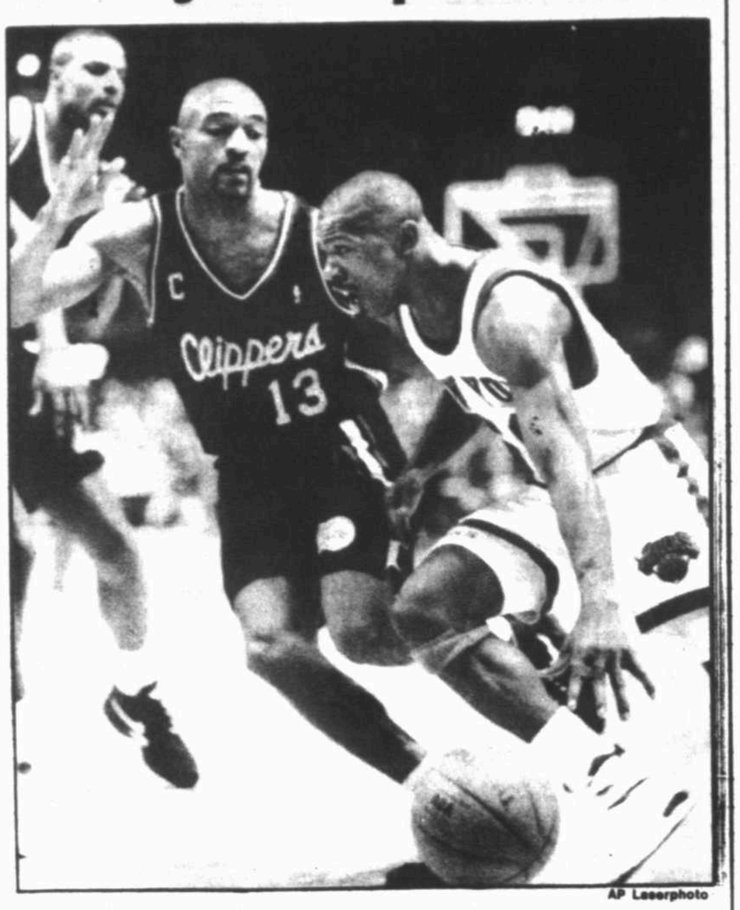

Malone had 16 points in the first half as the Jazz built a 63-49 advantage then scored 11 more in the decisive final period.

Kevin Duckworth led Portland with 27 points and Terry Porter and Rod Strickland had 25 and 23, respectively.

Sonics 108, Nuggets 104

SEATTLE — Nate McMillan stole Todd Lichti's inbounds pass with 3.9 seconds left and scored a clinching layup at the buzzer in the Seattle SuperSonics' victory over the Denver Nuggets.

The Nuggets outscored the Sonics 12-5 the last four minutes and had a shot at a tying or winning shot before the steal and basket by McMillan.

No. 11 UCLA 87, Houston 78

LOS ANGELES — Richard Petruska scored 22 points and grabbed 12 rebounds to lead No. 11 UCLA to a victory over Houston.

Houston closed within one point on a layup by Charles Outlaw with 7:26 remaining.

But the Bruins ran off 11 unanswered points to lead 80-68 with 3:54 left. Mitchell Butler scored four points in the spurt that ended on a pair of free throws by Tyus Edney.

Houston never got closer than eight the rest of the way.

Outlaw led the Cougars (5-2) with 20 points and 10 rebounds. Anthony Goldwire added 13, David Diaz 12 and Jesse Drain and Derrick Smith 11 each.

All five UCLA starters also scored in double figures.

Texas A&M 85, N. Illinois 73

COLLEGE STATION — David Edwards and Damon Johnson each scored 18 points, leading Texas A&M to a victory over Northern Illinois.

Texas A&M (4-5) broke open a tight game with a 12-2 run during the final three minutes of the first half for a 43-30 lead.

The Aggies then led by as many as 18 points during the second half, while Northern Illinois never got closer than eight points on 3-pointers by Mike Lipnisky and Randy Tucker in the final minute.

The Huskies dropped to 3-5.

Lipnisky led Northern Illinois with a game-high 20 points, while Hubert Register added 14 and Tucker 13.

Tony McGinnis scored 15 points for the Aggies, while Chuck Henderson added 13 and Brett Murry 10.

Rice 78, Monmouth 57

HOUSTON — Brent Scott scored a season-high 24 points and Marvin Moore added 23, including a 3-pointer that triggered a decisive 16-4 run in the second half of Rice's victory over Monmouth, N.J.

Moore's 3-pointer, at the 16:41 mark of the second half, also gave him 1,000 career points for Rice (3-4).

The Owls, who led 37-33 at the time, stretched the advantage to 53-37 in the next four minutes and were never again threatened.

San Francisco 70, Texas Christian 62

SAN FRANCISCO — Orlando Smart scored 15 points, including two 3-pointers, to lead San Francisco to a victory over Texas Christian.

San Francisco (8-4) led by 6 points at the half but boosted the lead to 12 in the first minute and 11 seconds of the second half by forcing turnovers.

Knight goes for 600th win against Kentucky

Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. — Kentucky coach Rick Pitino hopes Indiana's Bob Knight is in no hurry to reach career victory No. 600.

Knight, who is in his 22nd season, is only one win away from that milestone as the longtime rivals meet today at Freedom Hall in Louisville before a national television audience.

"I wish it wouldn't happen against Kentucky," Pitino said in a news conference Saturday before taking his team to Louisville.

But he doesn't believe fourth-ranked Indiana (11-1) needs Knight's 600th victory to get them up for his third-ranked Wildcats (8-0).

"This is No. 3 vs. No. 4 on national television," Pitino said. "I don't think they need any other motivation factor. (Indiana) is not going to beat themselves. You've got to beat them. They're one of the brightest teams we'll face this season."

Besides Knight, Missouri's Norm Stewart is also going for his 600th career victory Sunday against N.C. Asheville. Thirteen other coaches have won at least 600 games, headed by late Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp with 875.

Indiana has won seven straight games since falling 74-69 to No. 2 Kansas on Dec. 12.

"Indiana will have the most talent and experience we've seen so far this year," Pitino said. "That's why they are so good."

Indiana starts three seniors — forward Calbert Cheaney, center Matt Nover and guard Greg Graham — along with junior guard Damon Bailey and sophomore forward Alan Henderson.

Cheaney, a preseason All-American, leads the Hoosiers in scoring with 22.0 a game, followed by Henderson (15.1), Graham (14.0), Nover (11.7) and Bailey (10.2).

"Cheaney is poetry in motion because he knows how to read a screen," said Pitino.

Kentucky is coming off a championship in the ECAC Holiday Festival in New York, defeating Rutgers 89-67 on Monday and beating St. John's 86-77 on Wednesday.

Jamal Mashburn, also a preseason All-American, turned in a subpar performance against St. John's in hitting only one of 13 shots and finishing with seven points.

Pitino expects Mashburn, who leads the Wildcats with 22.6 points, to return to form against the Hoosiers.

"That was probably his poorest game since he's been at Kentucky," he said. "He doesn't get fazed too much because we won. If we lost, it would have bothered him.

"I believe he would come back against Indiana, regardless. He'll be ready for Indiana."

Besides Mashburn, Kentucky will start Travis Ford (7.9) and Dale Brown (8.3) at the guards, forward Rodrick Rhodes (14.8) and center Rodney Dent (6.8).

Pitino hopes to counter Indiana's experience with depth since he uses 10 or 11 players each game and the Hoosiers usually go with eight or nine.

"I think if the game is close, it could be a factor," he said.

Miami cagers trip up Georgetown

Associated Press

MIAMI — The Miami Hurricanes made their first victory this season over a Division I team an impressive one, knocking No. 10 Georgetown from the unbeaten ranks Saturday night 80-69.

Miami's Trevor Burton scored 21 points and freshman Steve Edwards 19 — both season highs.

Touted Georgetown freshman Othella Harrington had 27 points and 13 rebounds, but got little help. Twice the Hoyas went more than six minutes without a field goal.

Georgetown, which had been the only Big East Conference team without a loss, fell to 7-1 overall and 1-1 in the league. Miami (3-6, 1-1) snapped a three-game losing streak.

The Hurricanes were 1-17 in the Big East last season, their first in the league.

Miami jumped ahead 16-6 and led the rest of the way. The Hurricanes used an aggressive man-to-man defense to shut out the Hoyas from the field for nearly nine minutes midway through the game for a 40-31 lead.

Georgetown went another six minutes without a basket as Miami built its advantage to 68-55 with 3½ minutes to go.

No. 6 Michigan 88, E. Michigan 58

ANN ARBOR, Mich. — Chris Webber scored 22 points, and sixth-ranked Michigan looked fresh despite a long trip home from Hawaii.

The victory was the ninth straight for the Wolverines since their loss to top-ranked Duke. Michigan (10-1) was playing just 29 hours after returning home from the Rainbow Classic, which it won by beating three Top 25 teams in three days — including No. 5 North Carolina and No. 2 Kansas.

The Wolverines beat the Eagles, from neighboring Ypsilanti, for the 20th time in 21 games. Eastern Michigan (5-6) lost for the third time in four games.

Webber led five Wolverines in double figures, including James Voskuil, who had 13 points off the bench. Ellery Morgan led the Eagles with 21 points.

■ TOP 25 ROUNDUP

Michigan took a 41-18 halftime lead, but Eastern Michigan finally found its shooting touch.

No. 8 Iowa 104, Central Connecticut 58

IOWA CITY, Iowa — Acie Earl scored 25 points and Val Barnes led a big second-half run as No. 8 Iowa stayed unbeaten with a victory over Central Connecticut State.

Ahead 48-40 at halftime, Iowa (10-0) outscored Central Connecticut 35-5 in the first 11 minutes of the second half to take control. Central Connecticut (4-5) made only 2 of 22 shots during that stretch after shooting 55 percent in the first half.

Barnes scored 14 points during the second-half burst and finished with 19, including five 3-pointers. Chris Street and James Winters each had 12 points for the Hawkeyes, who won their 38th straight non-conference game at home.

Iowa, burned by Central Connecticut's outside shooting in the first half, tightened its defense and scored the first nine points of the second half to lead 57-40.

Villanova 79, No. 12 Syracuse 61

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Freshman Kerry Kittles came off the bench to lead a 16-2 second half spurt as Villanova sent No. 12 Syracuse to its second upset loss in four days.

It was the fourth straight victory in the Carrier Dome for the Wildcats (5-2), who were playing their Big East opener, and nearly matched the Orangemen's worst-ever home loss in conference play. That came last year at the hands of Villanova in a 76-56 rout.

The defeat marked the first time since the 14-year-old league's second season that Syracuse (8-2 and 0-2) has lost its first two conference games at home. It also kept coach Jim Boeheim from posting career win No. 400 for a second straight game.

Jonathan Haynes scored 19 points to lead five Wildcats in double figures. James Bryson added 15, Aaron Bain 14 and Lance Miller 10. Kittles finished with 11.

No. 14 Georgia Tech 78, VMI 52

ATLANTA — Freshman Martice Moore returned from a brief illness to score 17 points and start the rally which boosted No. 14 Georgia Tech to a victory over VMI.

VMI shot just 26.6 percent.

Moore, who is averaging just more than 10 points a game for the Yellow Jackets, missed Tuesday's game against Youngstown St. due to the flu and was questionable Saturday. But the 6-foot-8 freshman ignited a 19-5 Tech surge that started late in the first half and carried on past intermission.

No. 15 Oklahoma 109, Lamar 92

NORMAN, Okla. — Terry Evans and Angelo Hamilton led a first-half 3-point binge that carried No. 15 Oklahoma to a victory over Lamar.

Coach Billy Tubbs' team improved to 10-1 at the expense of his son and a longtime friend. His son, Tommy, is an assistant at Lamar (5-1) and the Cardinals' head coach, Mike Newell, used to be an assistant under Tubbs.

Oklahoma tied its Big Eight record for 3-pointers in a half by making 12 in the first 20 minutes.

No. 17 Michigan St. 80, E. Tenn. St. 69

JOHNSON CITY, Tenn. — Shawn Respert scored 27 points and had four steals to lead No. 17 Michigan State to a victory over East Tennessee State.

The Spartans (8-1) never trailed, and took a 47-24 halftime lead. East Tennessee (3-3) made a game of it with a 21-6 run to open the second half.

Eric Palmer scored two 3-pointers during the surge, which ended with Michigan State up 73-67 with 14:05 left. Jason Niblett and Andy Pennington each added a 3-pointer to the rally.

Florida 89, No. 18 Florida St. 86

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. — Scott Stewart hit a 3-point shot to give Florida the lead with 3:36 left and added three free throws in the final minute to preserve the Gators' victory over 18th-ranked Florida State.

Florida (6-3) led for most of the game and survived a 26-7 Florida State run late in the game, falling behind 75-72 with 6:06 left on a 3-point shot by the Seminoles' Sam Cassell.

No. 20 Nebraska 70, E. Illinois 54

LINCOLN, Neb. — Eric Piatkowski scored 17 points as No. 20 Nebraska overcame jet lag and a sluggish start to defeat Eastern Illinois.

The Cornhuskers (9-3), who returned from Honolulu on Friday, scored just three points in the first five minutes of the game.

No. 21 Cincinnati 87, South Alabama 49

CINCINNATI — Curtis Bostic scored 10 of his 16 points in a crushing first-half run that carried No. 21 Cincinnati to a victory over South Alabama.

No. 22 Arizona 87, Rhode Island 79

TUCSON, Ariz. — Ed Stokes scored 24 points and Chris Mills 22, including two last-minute free throws and a dunk, as No. 22 Arizona came from behind to defeat Rhode Island.

The difference may well have been Wildcats freshman Joe McLean, who scored 11 points, most at critical times, in his first college appearance.

No. 24 Vanderbilt 76, Alabama 73

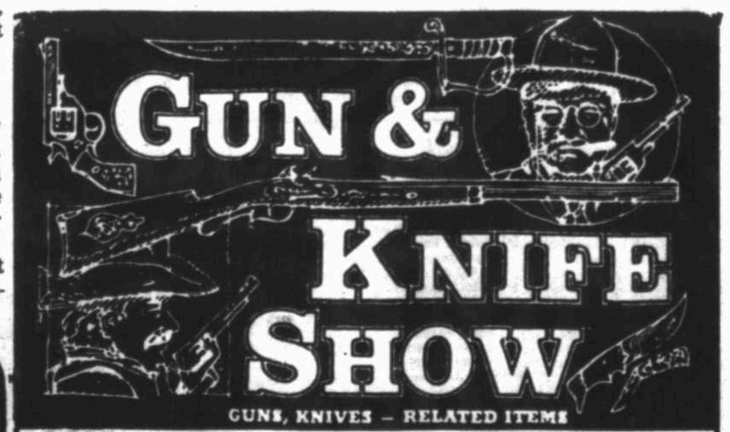

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Billy McCaffrey scored 23 points as No. 24 Vanderbilt held off Alabama for its 10th straight victory in the Southeastern Conference opener for both teams.

The Commodores had the worst half from the field so far this season in the first half.

49ers keep winning tradition alive

By Dennis Georgatos
AP Sports Writer

SANTA CLARA, Calif. — Through a decade of change, winning has remained a constant with the San Francisco 49ers.

There has been transition in the front office, the coaching staff and at key player positions, including quarterback, halfback and the defensive secondary. The offensive and defensive lines have been revamped, rebuilt and reshuffled.

Yet, the 49ers still have won at least 10 games in 10 consecutive seasons, the only team in NFL history to do so, and they have advanced to the playoffs nine times in that span.

A year after missing the playoffs with a 10-6 record in 1991, the 49ers are back as the NFC's top seed, with a league-best 14-2 record. They have a first-round bye this weekend and host a divisional playoff on Jan. 9, starting a postseason quest for an unprecedented fifth Super Bowl title.

How have they managed to win so consistently in such a competitive environment? The answer depends on who you ask.

"The attitude prevalent around here is playing with a sense of urgency," tight end Jamie Williams said. "I've been places where at times the players and sometimes even the coaches seemed like to lose or lose noble was something good when in the end, people don't look at that. They look at how many wins and losses you've got. Here, they don't play like winning is everything. They play like winning is almost everything, and it works. You don't have to be perfect. You just have to be very, very good."

The 49ers have also made a point of having adequate depth, a critical factor in an injury-racked sport.

Some cite a core of organizational stability and management's willingness to commit the resources to acquire — and keep — talent when needed and to let it go when it's not.

Others believe the team has built a winning mystique. In his 10 years as a starter, Joe Montana engineered 26 fourth-quarter comebacks and this season, Steve Young has rallied San Francisco from a tie or deficit five times in the late going.

"We don't have a lot more talent than a lot of teams and don't have as much talent as others," offensive line coach Bobb McKittrick said. "We've been getting the short end of the draft for a decade. People say, 'They've been lucky.' But it's happened enough times now that you say, 'There's something beyond luck.' We create our luck."

"Sometimes it's been tough but players like Ronnie (Lott) and those guys showed us the standard and started the winning tradition. Now we're trying to to pass it on," center Jesse Sapolu said. "It's just the mental approach to the game. That's what separates us from a lot of teams."

For all of the changes, there has been a degree of stability in key positions, starting with the owner, Edward DeBartolo Jr., who purchased the club in 1977.

The 49ers still use the offensive system installed by Bill Walsh 14 years ago and retain his policy of investing in the head coach ultimate say over the drafting of players.

"The head coach has been able to pick the people he wanted in the draft and I think that's very important," McKittrick said. "Probably half the teams in the NFL don't do it that way."

There also is a link to past success in the coaching staff.

McKittrick and defensive coordinator Bill McPherson are both holdovers from the first staff Walsh put together in 1979. George Seifert, who succeeded Walsh as coach in 1989 after six seasons as defensive coordinator, originally joined the staff in 1980 to coach the secondary.

That stability was tested severely during this past offseason, when 14 changes occurred in front office and assistant coaching positions.

The DeBartolos' family-run real estate company, hit hard by the recessionary economy, also had to go through a restructuring to ease its debt burden and the team owner himself came under scrutiny in an alleged sexual assault investigation. No criminal charges were filed and a civil suit brought by the woman was settled by DeBartolo out of court.

None of the tumult affected team operations or filtered down to the players, for which DeBartolo deserves credit, Young said.

"He's just been steady, in this past offseason, despite all of the kind of crazy times there were. I mean the team never felt any lack of support or lack of intensity about what our job was," Young said.

Club vice president John McVay said when it comes to football operations, the organization puts distractions aside and concentrates on finding ways to make the team better.

"A professional sports team is a very fragile entity. It doesn't take much to knock one of the wheels off it," McVay said. "You have to have a tremendous ability to stay focused. We're in the football business so we try to stay focused on that."

The groundwork for the team's success was laid by Walsh and the liberal mandate he was given by DeBartolo, which was essentially to do whatever it took to build a winner and he would provide the resources.

Seifert operates under pretty much the same mandate, although the 49ers are paying more attention to the bottom line as part of an effort to reduce operating costs.

"There haven't been a lot of restrictions," Seifert said.

San Francisco had its breakthrough season in 1981. The 49ers first got past Dallas in the NFC championship on "The Catch," Dwight Clark's arching end-zone grab of a pass from a backpedaling Montana. Then they used a memorable goal-line stand to hold off Cincinnati in their first Super Bowl.

San Francisco came apart in the strike-shortened 1982 season, going 3-6 and failing to win at home all year for the only time since joining the NFL in 1950. But in 1983, the 49ers regrouped to go 10-6 and have won at least 10 games every year since then, including Super Bowl victories following the 1984, '88 and '89 seasons. Walsh was the coach for the first three Super Bowl and Seifert took them to their fourth.

From a purely technical standpoint, McKittrick said he believes a lot of the team's success stems from the continuity of Walsh's offensive system, which advanced the premise of ball control through passing.

This year, the 49ers had the top-ranked offense, led the league in scoring and Young captured his second straight passing title, all under the direction of first-year offensive coordinator Mike Shanahan, who had to take a crash course on the 49ers' system during the offseason.

"A lot of management or ownership didn't ever recognize what a coach had, didn't give it a chance to mature. They'd keep changing coaches every two or three years," McKittrick said. "Here, they recognized coach Walsh had a good system and they had the good sense to maintain it."

In building the team, the 49ers also cast a wide net in their search for talent.

"It all essentially flows from the owner, from Eddie, in giving us the financial wherewithal to get players," McVay said. "We haven't been a team to say the only way to build a team is through the draft or through trades or through free agency.

"We've used every conceivable avenue to build this team. I think that's key. We've tried to blend youth in every year. We've made a sincere effort not to let the team grow old, because if you do it takes more than one year to turn it around."

Holtz already worrying about '93 prospects

Associated Press

DALLAS — It doesn't take long for Lou Holtz to find something to worry about.

Less than 24 hours after Notre Dame whipped Texas A&M 28-3 in the Cotton Bowl, Holtz was fretting over his 1993 prospects.

"I've never had an offense wiped out like this one," said Holtz, who loses quarterback Rick Mirer and tailback Reggie Brooks, who played key roles in the victory over the Aggies. "We're going to have problems next year. I've never had a bad offense but I've got all the ingredients for one.

"We'll have a different style team next year. We have no speed at tailback, the quarterbacking is a question mark and we lose three wide receivers."

Then Holtz quipped Saturday: "The way things are going I won't be calling the plays."

The Fighting Irish, who finished 10-1-1, moved from fifth to fourth in the final Associated Press poll. Texas A&M (12-1) fell from No. 4 to No. 7.

"I thought we might be second if people would be fair and honest," Holtz said. "We beat five top 25 teams in our last five games. But if you can't be number one I guess it's nice to be in the top five."

Texas A&M coach R.C. Slocum said he voted for Notre Dame No. 2 in the coaches poll.

"It's the best team we've played in four years," Slocum said. "They took it to us and it could have been worse if Lou hadn't elected to take it easy. They were a more physical team than we were. We got mashed out there pretty good."

Slocum said A&M's inexperience showed, particularly at quarterback.

"I saw Mirer make plays that average guys don't make," Slocum said. "There was a big difference in the two teams at quarterback. Corey Pullig is a bright prospect but he's not a finished product."

Stadler takes lead at inaugural Pro Stakes event

MISSION VIEJO, Calif. (AP) — Craig Stadler took the lead in the inaugural $500,000 Pro Stakes championship Saturday, a unique event in which four golfers earn point values based on the type of shot they hit.

Stadler led with 7,650 points, followed by Fuzzy Zoeller with 7,450; Peter Jacobsen, 7,400; and Chi Chi Rodriguez, 4,500.

"I played a whole lot better than I ever expected to play," Stadler said. "I've been off for about a month and it showed on some of those shots that were somewhat off line. But I've no complaints at all."

The point values were earned through the first nine holes at Dove Canyon Country Club, which plays to par 36.

The unique format has a variety of ways for each player to earn points. Points range from 200 for a par, or for a fairway hit in regulation, or a green hit in regulation, or the first to hit the green in regulation, to 400 points for a birdie to 3,000 for a double eagle.

Zoeller earned 1,200 points at the par-4, 406-yard 8th hole.

LEE GIRLS: Strambler gets 32 points and 17 rebounds

(From 1B)

Strambler put Lee ahead, 66-64, with 43 seconds gone in the second OT, her only basket in the extra frames. After finishing regulation play having hit 13-of-20 from the field, Strambler went mysteriously quiet, making just one of four attempts in the extra two periods.

"I don't know why I did that," Strambler said. "I kept asking myself that."

In the first OT, San Angelo jumped to a quick 63-60 lead behind a Nicole Zeitler three-pointer. A pair of free throws by Lee's Denessa Kendrick and a layup by Heather Huff later tied the game at 64.

After being fouled by Huff, San Angelo's Hall went to the stripe with .092 left in the first OT, but missed the front end of a one-and-one, a miss that would eventually prove to be the killing factor for the Lady 'Cats.

"That makes three games in a row we've gotten beat at the free throw line," San Angelo head coach Doug Snowden said. "If I were to play my team, I'd foul everybody just to try and beat us on the free throw line."

That the Lady Rebels were able to forge an overtime was an achievement in itself. After turning the ball over on the tip off, Lee went on to record turnovers on 12 of their first 16 possessions. By the end of the first quarter, Lee limped to the bench, down 23-8. But in the second quarter, the two teams traded fates. In the eight minutes before the half, San Angelo recorded 12 turnovers and shot a mere 2-of-13 to allow Lee a 33-29 lead at the break.

"We did that against Canyon," Lee head coach Elise Wheat said of her team's first quarter cold spell. "If the girls don't score right off, they tend to lose it for awhile.

"We had a whole lot of team effort tonight. I think we've turned the page and gone on to where we're supposed to be. The first quarter we played like we did in the pre-season, but the rest of the game, we played like the we've been playing since Christmas break."

Both teams finished with high turnover rates, Lee giving it up 31 times, San Angelo 29.

"In the last three minutes plus the two overtimes, we probably had eight or 10 turnovers. We can't afford that," Snowden said.

"We were trying to capitalize on their turnovers, and you can't make mistakes when you try to do that. We did everything wrong."

Zeitler, who made 30 three-pointers in the pre-season, was cold from long range Saturday, hitting just 3-of-11, but still led the Lady Bobcats in scoring with 16. When she fouled out in the first overtime after making her final three of the night, the air was obviously missing from the 'Cat balloon.

Lee meets cross-town rival Midland High Tuesday at 6:15 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

In junior varsity action Saturday, San Angelo downed Lee, 56-47.

tute — and I'm never going to tell our kids to quit shooting. That's just part of our game," House said.

Lee erupted for 36 points in the first quarter of play and never looked back. Lee's 25-point effort in the second period of play was the Rebels' worst quarter. Lee led 61-28 at the half.

The Rebels will face cross-town rival Midland High Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center and you might say they have some momentum built up for that contest. It will be the district opener for Midland High, so both teams will have a full head of steam.

Both Abilene schools joined Lee in the victory circle on the league's opening night of play.

Defending champion Abilene Cooper defeated Odessa High by a 64-37 margin with 6-10 junior Andrea Patterson scoring 17 points. Abilene High, in the playoffs last year, had to pull out a tough 84-81 decision over Odessa Permian behind 22 points from Jeral Henderson and 21 points from Jason Anderson.

Lee's junior varsity did the varsity one better by scoring 42 points in the third quarter on the way to an 88-64 win over San Angelo. Aldolpho Garcia led the way with 22 points and was followed by Patrick Finney with 17, D.C. Montgomery and Joel Skaggs with 11 points each.

In sophomore play, Lee took a 63-29 victory with DuShawn Hicks hitting 12 points and Jerry Stanford 11.

MHS BOYS: Bulldogs open 4-5A play vs. Lee Tuesday tentative, but I think we came away realizing that we can play a little bit. We came back believing in ourselves.

"Crane has a good team. (Coach) Mark (Wendel) does a good job of coaching that team and they gave us a good battle, but we played very well."

The Golden Cranes, now 12-6 on the year, got 17 points from guard Phillip Hambrick and 15 from Michael Carrasco, but Crane didn't shoot well from the field, hitting only 22 of 67 shots, including four of 22 from three-point range. Sean Abron, who is averaging 19 points per game this year for Crane, was held to four points with a one of 12 shooting eye from the field.

"We came in here expecting to play a talented team and got it," Wendel said. "Midland did a good job of executing. We just didn't hustle like we usually do because I think we came in here a little bigeyed. We were a little off target with our shots, but we think we got a lot of good out of this game."

Despite Midland High's torrid start, Crane managed to narrow the Bulldogs' lead to 24-20 in the second quarter only to see the Bulldogs roll off 10 unanswered points on the way to a 14-4 run and a 38-24 lead at the half.

Jumon Hailey sparked the run with back-to-back treys and Crane could never get back in the game despite 11 fourth quarter points from Hambrick, who nailed three treys in the period.

But the non-conference wars are over for the Bulldogs, who face cross-town rival Midland Lee Tuesday at 8 p.m. at Chaparral Center.

"This was a nice win for us," Stephenson said, "but what we did yesterday isn't important for us any longer. It all counts now."

It wasn't all good news for Midland High, however. Starting guard Rob Foster went down in the second quarter with what was believed to be a broken ankle. Foster had to be carried off the court. The extent of the injury wasn't known at press time, but it is certain that he won't be able to play against Lee Tuesday.

In junior varsity action, Midland High climbed to 13-3 with a 60-37 win over Crane. Cameron Stotts with 14 points and Chris Junker with 12 points led the way. No Crane players were in double figures.

the second half.

"We just weren't intense enough at the start of the game," Perez noted. "We put good pressure on them, but we didn't execute and our shots weren't falling. It was a lot better in the second half.

"I know one thing. We'll have to show up earlier against Lee Tuesday and have a good first half of play."

Snyder didn't have a player to hit in double figures as Annie Ragland led the Lady Tigers with nine points. Snyder hit only nine of 46 shots from the field, a poor 20 percent shooting eye. MHS countered with a 40 percent shooting effort, hitting 25 of 63 shots.

But Snyder even aided in the Bulldog totals as Kristin Huff got confused on which end of the court she should be shooting in the first quarter and went uncontested for a wrong court layup and two points for Midland High. It was a good thing at the time because MHS ended the first quarter with a meager 10-9 lead.

New arms pact still 'untasted' commodity

No doubt President Bush will point to the Start II agreement worked out in the final days of his presidency as one of his crowning accomplishments. Along with the START I treaty that he and former Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev signed in July 1991 and the agreement reducing tank and troop strength in Europe that the two signed in November 1990, Bush's arms reduction efforts will stand out as a highlight of his four years in office.

The qualifying factor, however, is that the provisions of an arms treaty do not always jibe with reality. A good example is Belarus, Kazakhstan, and Ukraine which now control numerous nuclear warheads formerly held by the Soviet Union. When the Soviet Union broke apart in August 1991, and former Soviet states began to find their way independently toward a different system of government, the nuclear arms long held by the Soviets became a major concern for U.S. policymakers.

During the time since, the future of those deadly arms has remained uncertain and those weapons have figured prominently in the three treaties signed during Bush's presidency. But even yet, there are no good answers on what will happen to those arms.

Those nations have not even agreed to the provisions of earlier accords to remove all nuclear arms from their territories. The result is that an even more dangerous situation exists today than did before the Soviet Union collapsed.

Provisions of the new treaty, which Bush and Russian President Boris Yeltsin were to sign this weekend, would reduce by two-thirds the number of strategic arms in the two nations, essentially dropping the number of arms in Russia to 3,000 and those in the United States to 3,500. That would be roughly the levels the two nations were at during the 1960s before the advent of multiple warhead missiles. And, arguably, a lower number of arms could translate into a reduction in the possibility of nuclear warfare.

Key to the success of the latest treaty is what happens in the other nations still holding arms formerly controlled by the Soviet Union and what evolves in the Russian parliament.

At this point, the START II treaty, like the others signed by Bush and Yeltsin, is merely words on paper. In that regard, it's only good for a false sense of security.

As they say, the proof of the pudding is in the tasting and this batch, along with the batches just before, hasn't been eaten.

Foreign policy cabinet choices are 'cautious'

President-elect Bill Clinton's choices for his top foreign policy posts were not as bold and visionary as would be expected from the candidate for change. But they are consistent with positions he staked out during the campaign.

In Warren Christopher, Mr. Clinton gets a highly competent and trustworthy secretary of state. Steeped in the art of quiet diplomacy as the No. 2 man in the Carter State Department, this low-key man gives Mr. Clinton the comfort of not having to worry about foreign policy adventurism while he focuses on the home front.

For defense secretary, Mr. Clinton again delivered as promised by selecting Rep. Les Aspin. As chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Mr. Aspin is particularly knowledgeable about the defense budget. Mr. Aspin has advocated not only downsizing the nation's armed forces, but restructuring it for a new era, with new missions.

James Woolsey is a solid choice for director of the Central Intelligence Agency. He brings a conservative element to the Clinton administration. He served in both the Reagan and Bush administrations, and brings with him impressive arms control credentials.

While very capable, Mr. Clinton's foreign policy appointments on the whole can be best described as cautious. Making sure these appointees fit his positions is fine — as long as the president-elect understands that his positions must be flexible enough to adapt to an ever-changing global landscape.

Expulsions illustrate Israel's key to survival

While Israel's expulsion of 415 suspected Palestinian terrorists threatens the Middle East peace talks and could make martyrs of the deportees, Americans should keep a few things in mind in judging Israel's decision.

The banishment of the 415 to the freezing no-man's land between Israeli-controlled southern Lebanon and Lebanon proper appears harsh. By Middle Eastern standards, it is moderate.

Israel is surrounded by countries that rule by terror, secret police and rigged elections. Dissidents or minorities, such as the Kurds in northern Iraq, are exterminated.

When you face that kind of threat each day, you tend to get tough with those who threaten you. Americans should not judge what Israel does by U.S. standards.

Doves within the Israeli government are calling for direct peace talks for the first time with the PLO, but in such a neighborhood, Israel has survived by being tough, even though it is a democracy. Those expelled Muslims could count themselves as lucky.

Prosecutor Walsh is his own worst enemy

WASHINGTON — By the time Caspar Weinberger formally requested a pardon in a Dec. 18 note to the White House, the case for the pardon had already achieved critical mass, thanks to Independent Prosecutor Lawrence Walsh. He's been his own worst enemy.

Anderson

"The one principal person responsible for the pardon was Walsh," said one Weinberger intimate. "Over a period of time people got tired of him. He kept losing in court. He kept getting angrier."

The pardon bandwagon, which crept along in the early fall, was at full steam in November thanks to two tactical blunders by Walsh: a second indictment four days before the election, and the disclosure of $50,000 mock trials.

The Oct. 30 indictment played into the hands of Republicans who dismiss the entire six-year investigation as a political prosecution. The second indictment not only charged Weinberger with perjury for lying about his knowledge of the Iran-Contra scandal, but contained a note contradicting claims by Bush that he was "out of the loop" in the secret deal that sent arms to Iran in exchange for American hostages.

Republicans blamed the second indictment on snuffing out Bush's rally in the polls, and point the finger at lead prosecutor James Brosnahan, who was brought into the case in October to replace Craig Gillen. Brosnahan, a prominent San Francisco attorney, has contributed heavily to Democratic candiates in the past, arrived in Washington with a partisan baggage that Walsh should have anticipated.

"When (Weinberger's attorney Robert) Bennett knocked Gillen out of the case, I think it was a real blow to Walsh and I think he panicked.

Brosnahan quickly stunned Weinberger's attorneys by offering a plea bargain agreement in October under which Weinberger would plead guilty to one felony count. It made no sense.

We first reported last June that Walsh had offered Weinberger a plea-bargain deal in which he could have plead guilty to a misdeameanor of withholding information from Congress in exchange for testimony implicating others. When Weinberger's lawyers pointed out that his client would have to admit wrongdoing, Walsh was quick to offer that they "could work out the language."

"Walsh never figured that Cap would have the guts not to plead, or that Bennett would have the guts not to push Cap into blinking," said one Weinberger intimate. "Bennett told Walsh it was a terrible error of judgment to go forward, and if he did they would be in nuclear war ... that there will be no pleas in this case." Walsh's typical retort was, "Don't put yourself in concrete."

Since the pardon, Walsh has been hurling unsubstantiated charges like so many pipe bombs — accusing Bush of "misconduct" and a "cover-up." Taking on an incumbent U.S president shouldn't be an afterthought in the 11th hour of a six-year, $35 million investigation. It's one of the reasons Walsh is regarded by some as his own worst enemy.

In the end, just as Walsh never suspected that Weinberger had the "guts" not to plea bargain, Weinberger never suspected that Bush had the "guts" to issue the pardon.

Sears realizes economic change in '90's

WASHINGTON — It is axiomatic that people who worship the sun will resent people who proclaim the scientific laws of heat. And as long as Americans believe their prosperity is linked to the fortunes of familiar old corporations, Americans will resent the laws of economic change. Consider the case of Sears, Roebuck.

Will

Retailing has become rough sledding for Sears, which reportedly is thinking of closing up to 100 of its smaller stores and shrinking its famous "Big Book" catalogue operations. Bad news? Not necessarily. Times have changed, as usual.

Time was, in 1886, Richard Sears was a 22-year-old railroad agent in North Redwood, Minnesota. Having on his hands an undeliverable consignment of watches, he discovered that he could sell such merchandise to agents down the line, who sold it in their towns. Sears paid the manufacturers when the agents paid him, so he needed no capital. He made $5,000 in six months, quit his $6 a week railroad job and, working with Alvah Roebuck, by 1898 was sending 583-page catalogues into the prairie.

Sears, Roebuck's path had been blazed by another Midwestern merchandizing genius, Aaron Montgomery Ward. As a traveling salesman of dry goods, Ward had discovered what railroads and the Homestead Act had wrought — a vast, thinly settled inland empire of lonely farm families. Ward's catalogue drew them into what historian Daniel Boorstin calls a "consumption community."

Ward's catalogue customers did not just send orders, they sent letters. One farmer proposed marriage to the girl modeling the hat "on page 153 of your catalogue." Other letter-writers chatted, as over the backyard fence:

"I supposed you wonder why we haven't ordered anything from you since the fall. Well, the cow kicked my arm and broke it and besides my wife was sick, and there was the doctor bill. But now, thank God, that is paid, and we are all well again, and we have a fine new baby boy, and please send plush bonnet number 29d8077. ..."

Sears, Roebuck prospered with the help of Rural Free Delivery, which made the Big Book as central to many rural lives as the Good Book. Indeed, in an oft-told story a boy who was asked by his Sunday school teacher where the Ten Commandments come from replied, "Sears, Roebuck."

In 1907, Sears mailed three million fall catalogues; in 1927, 75 million catalogues and other mailings. There were lots of satisfied customers, and resentful competitors. Some Main Street merchants paid children to turn in their families' Sears catalogues for burning.

In 1991 Sears' long run as the nation's largest retailer was ended by a company born and still headquartered in Bentonville, Arkansas (population 11,000). Wal-Mart built an empire on an insight: the dispersal of Americans from central cities would enable a chain of discount stores to grow by starting in small towns and moving toward suburbs.

Just 12 years ago Wal-Mart had less than 12 percent of Sears' revenue. Today Wal-Mart is as resented as Sears once was by many merchants in the small towns. They have seen their downtowns wither as the small stores lose customers to the Wal-Marts out along the highways.

Small stores lack Wal-Mart's muscle in negotiating advantageous relationships with vendors. Hence small stores, so important for so long to the social fabric of their communities, lose the price competition with Wal-Mart.

Wal-Mart is just one part of Sears' problems. Competition has become fiercer because many of today's most skillful retailers are specialists — The Limited (fashionable apparel), The Gap (basic apparel), Circuit City (consumer electronics), Pier 1 and Ikea (home furnishings), Trak Auto (auto supplies). Furthermore J. Crew, L.L. Bean, Victoria's Secret and thousands of other firms enable customers to shop by mail or by 800 numbers. Such companies put severe price pressure on Sears.

Sears has various strategies for coping with its changed environment, and in some form or other Sears will be around for a while.

Economic history, like the history of the Earth's species, is a story of adaptations and extinctions. In dynamic capitalism, the pace of change is generally rapid and usually accelerating. But freedom is not supposed to be restful.

Rhetoric determines placement of moveable parts

This department is blessed not merely by the existence of the Lexicographic Irregulars, with shock troops of the Gotcha! Gangsters, but also by a more irenic quartet of advisers: the On Language Board of Octogenarian Mentors, acronym'd Olbom.

Safire

What a crew: Jacques Barzun, author of "The House of Intellect" and "The Modern Researcher"; Alistair Cooke, just retired as host of "Masterpiece Theater" and long the interpreter of America to the mother country; Allen Walker Read, the etymologist of American English who found the origin of OK, and Frederic G. Cassidy, editor of the Dictionary of American Regional English, our answer to Sir James Murray of the Oxford English Dictionary. Their collective ages, projected backward in time, would take us to 1649.

Want to see Olbom at work?

"The question is whether anti-Castro forces are willing to watch what he says, not what he does" was a citation from Newsweek submitted by Bruce Kluger, an editor of Playboy. He asks: "Shouldn't whether be followed by or not at all times? And if or not is not needed after whether, shouldn't some sort of alternative-choice phrase be added?"

Modern usage books say that the only time or not must be used is in an adverbial clause, as in "Whether or not you like listening to speeches, you'll tune in to the Inaugural Address." Otherwise, the or not can be clipped, as the writer cited in Newsweek did.

Now let's deal that card to a couple of members of Olbom. Allen Walker Read thinks the clipping is OK: "The full phrase whether or not is appropriate in formal writing, but whether by itself is often found in colloquial contexts. Sentences can read smoothly with whether by itself."

Jacques Barzun thinks that "rules" about such things as split infinitives and beginning sentences with conjunctions "all are schoolmarm short cuts to bypass the thinking that ought to guide choice in different situations." On the matter of whether or not, he applies that thinking to three sentences:

1. "Whether or not he apologizes, he must leave my house."

2. "Whether the event favors us or not, we made a point."

3. "Whether these figures are right, I don't know."

Writes Professor Barzun: "All three are perfectly good sentences. Now, why do I write them as they stand? The first emphatically urges the alternative. The second has the same intention, but the rhythm requires putting not at the end of the clause: try to put it up front and you'll see how weak 'favors us' will sound.

Finally, with the presidential inauguration at hand, I turned to Fred Cassidy, the man from DARE, for the pronunciation of the word for a person from Arkansas.

The state is pronounced AR-kin-saw. The derivation, according to the Illustrated Dictionary of Place Names, edited by Kelsie B. Harder, is from the Quapaw tribe of the Sioux, who were called Ugakhpah, "downstream people"; French explorers called them Acansa. (Do not confuse this with the origin of Kansas, from the Siouan Kansa or Kaw, "people of the south wind.")

"People in Arkansas used to spell it Arkansaw," Professor Cassidy informs me, "and were often called Arkansawyers in the days when trees were cut up by hand." A sawyer was one who sawed lumber; it was also the name of a log bobbing in the Mississippi River, and may have led to Mark Twain's selection of the name Tom Sawyer. "But the word is no longer acceptable," Cassidy reports. "Now one must say Arkansans, alongside Kansans."

Bill Clinton, then, from AR-kin-saw, is an ar-KAN-zen.

Hang up the hangers; focus on streets, trash

So now the City of Midland proposes to venture into the property management business by buying up millions of dollars worth of airport hangers. Is this going to be like the police department parking lot expenditure? If you missed that turkey, it was when the city leaders paid 500,000 tax dollars for a parcel valued at $84,000? Next the city can add another layer of bureaucrats to attempt to operate them. Maybe another political job can be created like the economic development official's position was for Carroll Thomas.

If this is such a good deal, a huge money-making proposition, why does the owner, a Mr. Perry, want to sell? If a large fixed-base operator is going to relocate to Midland, they are not going to care who owns the building? They will just come. That is unless there is another underhanded deal in the making.

City officials are sending out contradicting stories to suit their needs. On the one hand they are touting privatization and flaunting how much money contracting has saved and now they are advocating buying up properties. This appears to be the first phase of the Faircloth-McGregor alliance. Faircloth comes out for it in the paper, and McGregor talks it up on the tube. Neither one has convinced me.

Let's just take care of normal city business and leave property management to those that are experienced in doing it. Then try to do a better job doing what cities are supposed to do like fix the potholes and pick up garbage, fight fires and keep crime under control. Thank you.

Reader doubts claims of new 'wonder drug'

Why is RU-486, the "abortion pill," being promoted as a "wonder drug" that could supposedly cure breast cancer, Cushings Syndrome and possibly even AIDS?

Only preliminary tests have been conducted on RU-486 to see of it can be used for nonabortive therapeutic treatment.

Despite this fact, many medical and political groups are pushing to get this drug approved for public use.

Why?

Dr. Baulieu, credited with inventing RU-486, has implied in his writings (JAMA, Oct. 6, 1989) that the purpose of the drug would be for medical killing and abortion. He suggested only briefly that the "abortion pill" might have any other use.

An interesting "coincidence" is the connection that the manufacturer of RU-486, Roussel-Uclaf, has with a company previously involved with "social engineering" or medical killing.

Hoechst A.G., one of the world's largest chemical corporations, is the parent firm of Roussel-Uclaf. Hoechst A.G. was created when the I.G. Farben company was broken up at the end of World War II.

I.G. Farben was the largest chemical corporation of its kind. I.G. Farben owned the Degesch Company that developed Zyklon B gas that was used in the "medical" killing of millions of "unwanted" humans at Auschwitz.

This historical connection may not bother some ... but to others it is cause for concern.

Cheer Fund loses out to bullet-proof vests

I'm most concerned when Midlanders donate $82,500 to $88,000 for bullet-proof vests when most police officers I have talked to have told me the only place they have fired their guns is on a firing range. So I ask what difference will these vests serve when only one or two are used in a 20-year period.

What I'm most ashamed of is that we as Midlanders donate nearly $100,000 for bullet proof-vests, and let other Midlanders go hungry.

That's right, $100,000 for vests and only $3,000 to 4,000 for the Midland Cheer Fund. Somewhere we as people have lost something. I mean what are we trying to do, save lives right?

Public apology gives example of maturity

Most of us recall incidents when our impulsive, inconsiderate behavior caused inconvenience or embarassment to others. Few of us, upon reconsideration, have demonstrated the integrity and forthrightness to apologize publicly, or privately for that matter, as did Stewart Mann (Letters, Reporter-Telegram, Dec. 27).

Stewart took a giant step toward responsible adulthood with his sincere and thoughtful apology. It was an act of maturity and serves to remind all of us, young and not so young, that such contributes to a worthwhile value system which is the foundation of a decent society.

Midlander continues to notice strangeness

Before I get into my "I Find it Strange" part, let me thank the Reporter-Telegram for the excellent interview done by Johnnye Montgomery in the Nov. 22 edition. She quoted me to a tee. The only thing she left out was a statement, in answer to her question, "When did you get in the oil business?" I replied that I had never been in the oil or gas business, only worked for those who were, and that I had no run, royalty, override or any other kinds of checks coming to me from the Oil Bidness!

I find it strange that:

— Some people insist on taking things people say out of context. For example, in my last letter I said that I had never heard of a pro-lifer offering to take any baby to raise, or offering to pay for the expenses of having the baby and for raising said baby by the mother. I further stated that I feel that those who appear in protest at abortion clinics, or in other protest efforts, should be required to make such an offer and live up to it! I heard both pro and con on this.

— Some people like to think they know how you voted and make snide remarks about how you helped elect someone, even though they really have no idea of how you voted. And, although I don't really care what they think about how I voted, for a fact it's none of their damn business!

— We changed the name of our Midland Memorial Hospital, but the public had no say in said change, even though we have to help support it with our tax dollars, and more each year!

— I am aware of a couple of armed robberies that took place in Midland, but saw no mention of either in the newspaper, on TV or radio. Most folks know that some bad things go on in every city. What we wonder is, is this an effort to protect someone or an attempt to keep Midland's image clean?

— The lady who lost the flags was flying them at night. I thought that that was against flag protocol. If I'm wrong, I do apologize and hopes she gets the flags back.

— There are still people in the USofA, who believe that our Constitution prohibits religion in our schools. It did not when written and does not now, although the Supreme Court decided they know more what our forefathers meant than what they said. We had really gotten along well, but have been going downhill ever since!

Hats are off to Martin County's retired sheriff

I read in your newspaper about nine or 10 weeks ago, concerning the retirement of Martin County Sheriff Dan Saunders.

I have know Dan since he was about 11 years of age back in 1937. I knew his family as well — Jack, El and Dee, also his mother. They were, and are, good people.

My younger brother, Lee Roy Wood, Dan Saunders, Marshall Yates and Deuton Hines were know as the Four Musketeers as they were growing up. Where you saw one, usually the other three were not far behind. They remained good friends through the years, and when my brother passed away with cancer, the other three were pallbearers for him. This sort of friendship is rare, and is very much appreciated by the Wood family. Dan always had a kind word for everyone.

He was, and is, well liked and those who know him, know of his kindness. My mother and dad (N.A. Wood Sr. and Mary) were always looking to Dan for help if such was needed. He was a great help to our family when mom and pop passed away in 1970. Our most sincere thanks to Dan.

He has also shown kindness and concern for the Fincher family that used to live in Stanton, and later moved to Midland. Dolores Fincher is my sister, and her husband Leroy and three sons were always a good part of the Wood family.

The J.E. Hollandsworth family would also like to say a big "thank you, Dan" for the kindness shown, and the many good things he has done for them. I married Lucille Hollandsworth, and know first hand of the many things Dan has done. Byrd Hollandsworth especially says a big thank you, Dan.

Martin County is losing a good seven years, I can certainly see his point. Our collective hats are off to retiring Sheriff Dan Saunders of Martin County. The best of luck to him and his family.

America's power presents dilemma to U.N.

Can't work with the U.S., can't work without it.

That is the dilemma the U.N. secretary general, Boutros Boutros-Ghali, faces as he grapples with America's role in U.N. peacekeeping and peacemaking operations since the cold war's end. Without U.S. leadership and power, the United Nations lacks muscle. With it, the United Nations loses its independent identity.

Gelb

The secretary general acknowledges in an interview that the United Nations cannot undertake any major military operation unless the United States participates actively. But when it does, it insists on running the whole show and uses the United Nations simply as a fig leaf, as in Iraq and Somalia.

Thus the double whammy of America's power and its insistence on full control forces the United States to shoulder the burden of policing the world and simultaneously undermines the United Nations, which could otherwise unload some of that burden.

The solution to the dilemma is for Washington to back a larger role for the United Nations, even at the cost of some U.S. independence.

No one is more aware of both the problem and the solution than Boutros-Ghali. "With political imagination," he says from his riverside perch high atop U.N. headquarters in Manhattan, "the United States can play an umbrella role and still allow us to do our operations with, let us say, the necessary minimum of independence."

The U.N. leader chooses his words carefully, reflecting long years as Egypt's chief diplomat and one year at the United Nations, where he has engaged in intricate battles with the United States and other major powers.

Boutros-Ghali is now tussling with Washington over Somalia. He wants the United States not simply to deliver relief supplies, but to disarm thugs and stay until the job is largely finished. But President Bush has dispatched U.S. forces only on American terms — a quickie operation under U.S. command, with forces empowered only to deliver food and medicine and to "defend themselves."

Though the Americans were to operate on their own and not through the U.N. chain of command, Bush asked for permission to use the U.N. flag. Boutros-Ghali refused.

Relations with the United States have often proved so touchy that Boutros-Ghali prefers to talk about cases where Washington's role has not been so prominent. "We have many operations where we have been able to act with force without a central American role," the secretary general says, as seagulls swoop through the fog past his windows, "and many where we operate with only marginal cooperation from the United States." He cites U.N. intervention in Cambodia, Angola and Mozambique.

Even in these instances, he acknowledges, U.N. forces require American logistical support, and they hope the United States will ride to the rescue in an emergency. "But," he says, "I can assure you that in the majority of disputes, the situation can be solved without the big deployment of forces" if the United Nations intervenes early.

Boutros-Ghali then makes a sad admission. He has suspended efforts to establish a standing U.N. military force. The opposition of the United States and other major powers, he says, remains too strong.

Instead he wants member nations to "earmark certain forces" for U.N. use. He hopes that "at a minimum" the United States will provide logistical support under U.N. command. "If this can be done, it will solve 60 or 70 percent of the problems" of deploying U.N. forces to trouble spots quickly and sustaining them. He also wants Washington seriously to encourage regional organizations to act under U.N. sponsorship.

Sound economy may be vital link to successful foreign policy

By WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST JR.
Hearst News Service

NORTH SALEM, N.Y. — As we enter the New Year, there are encouraging signs for both our domestic and international problems.

To the astonishment of many skeptical economists, there is growing consumer confidence that the country is continuing to move out of the recession.

Hearst

The research arm of a New York investment firm — Donaldson, Lufkin and Jenrette — announced that consumer confidence increased in December to its highest level in 1½ years. It followed an 11-point increase in November. Two days before Christmas, the Wall Street Journal said optimism "continued to rebound across the country, reflecting "greater expectations for the future."

This past week, four days after Christmas, the New York Times reported that Irwin L. Kellner, chief economist for the Chemical Banking Corporation, said his company and others believe "the holiday splurge bodes well for the economy in coming months." Citing recent substantial growth in wages and salaries, he added: "I am very hopeful it can be sustained."

New York Times financial writer Robert D. Hershey, Jr. said the figures suggest that "incomes are rising, that a newly confident consumer is once again taking on new debt and that households are also pulling money out of savings."

The Commerce Department reported that "wage and salary income has climbed sharply — by seven tenths of 1 percent in each of the last two months." Kellner, when asked the reason for the economy's improvement, said: "It's coming from a surprising source — incomes earned from employment. The number of new jobs may be microscopic, but the people who have jobs are working longer hours, and hourly wages are apparently going up even faster."

The Federal Reserve policymakers have also promised to keep interest rates low if the economic improvement starts to weaken seriously.

President-elect Bill Clinton has made it clear that a sound domestic economy will be essential for a successful foreign policy. He will strive to create economic ties with U.S. allies and intends to elevate to Cabinet rank Madeleine Albright if she is confirmed by the Senate as American ambassador to the United Nations. Being a Cabinet member would give her much greater authority in dealing with foreign representatives, especially in the United Nations Security Council. So I am confident that when Clinton becomes our new leader, he will give equal attention to domestic and foreign affairs.

As he nears the end of his presidency, George Bush, with the almost team-like support of Clinton, has been scoring historic achievements in the foreign field.

On Tuesday the United States and Russia finally reached an agreement on the text of the START II treaty, mandating the biggest cuts ever in the world's most destructive nuclear weapons. The treaty, when ratified, will reduce by two thirds the two nations' strategic weapons, eliminating those that either might be used in a preemptive first strike, particularly land-based missiles with multiple warheads.

If the proposed cuts are completely made, Russia will, according to the New York Times, be down to 3,000 warheads by the year 2003, and the United States will have 3,500, about the same levels they had in the 1960s before the development of multi-warhead missiles. President Bush and Soviet leader Boris Yeltsin are scheduled to sign the pact today, Sunday, in the Black Sea resort city of Sochi. Before going there, Bush again risked his own life by visiting Somalia. Killings by gangs continue, particularly against educated Somalis suspected of supporting the Americans. The visit was another example of President Bush's courage.

Acting under his authority, American airmen quickly met Saddam Hussein's latest challenge last Sunday when two Iraqi fighter planes entered the no-fly zone in southern Iraq and threatened to fire on two U.S. planes patrolling the area. One Iraqi plane was swiftly shot down. The other fled. Iraqi planes continued to violate the ban in subsequent days but were chased away by U.S. fighter jets. The president-elect publicly supported the actions that Bush had authorized, making it clear that when Clinton assumes the presidency, he is not likely to tolerate aggression, especially in the Middle East. Such aggression could cause oil prices to soar, and we would be confronted with the danger of another Great Depression. So let's bear in mind the vital link between our domestic and foreign policies.

North Carolina drops Mississippi St., 21-17

Associated Press

ATLANTA — No. 19 North Carolina's defense cashed in with two second-half touchdowns, including a 45-yard interception return by Cliff Baskerville, to earn a 21-17 victory over No. 24 Mississippi State in the Peach Bowl Saturday night.

■ PEACH BOWL

North Carolina's victory in its first bowl appearance since 1986 was preserved when Kerry Mock intercepted Greg Plump's pass at the Tar Heels 19 with 2:37 left after the Bulldogs had driven 57 yards.

Mississippi State (7-5) also had two second-quarter touchdowns nullified by holding penalties.

Trailing 14-0 at halftime, North Carolina (9-3) tied it 14-14 in the third quarter on a 1-yard TD run by Natrone Means and defensive back Bracey Walker's block and 24-yard TD return of a punt by Scott Jordan.

North Carolina took the lead 21-14 only 2:24 into the fourth quarter when Walker knocked the ball loose from receiver Chris Jones. The ball popped into Baskerville's hands and he went untouched 45 yards for the go-ahead score.

Mississippi State got to within 21-17 on a 46-yard field goal by Chris Gardner with 8:42 left in the game.

Plump threw for one touchdown and Kenny Roberts scored on a 22-yard run to give the Bulldogs a 14-0 lead after one quarter.

Mississippi State's Kenny Roberts breaks loose for a first down in the Bulldogs' 21-17 loss to North Carolina in the Peach Bowl Saturday at the Georgia Dome.

Plump, who connected on a 2-yard TD toss to Olando Truitt to cap a 69-yard, 9-play drive on the game's opening drive, also had second-quarter TD passes of 82 and 21 yards to Truitt nullified by holding penalties.

It was North Carolina's first postseason appearance since the 1986 Aloha Bowl and the Tar Heels' first win in four appearances in the Peach Bowl.

The Bulldogs, who lost in the Liberty Bowl last year in coach Jackie Sherrill's first season, haven't won a postseason game since beating Kansas State 10-0 in the 1981 Hall of Fame Bowl.

North Carolina's victory before a sellout crowd of 69,125 in the Georgia Dome closed out the college bowl season and spoiled what had been a perfect postseason for members of the Southeastern Conference. Led by Alabama's victory over Miami for the national championship, SEC teams were 5-0 before the Mississippi State defeat.

Michigan unbeaten but also unfulfilled

By Harry Atkins
AP Sports Writer

PASADENA, Calif. — After one of the proudest wins in Michigan's long football history, Gary Moeller went back to the hotel and fell asleep in a chair.

There is good reason why the coach didn't go out and party. There really was nothing to celebrate. The Wolverines went undefeated, and unfulfilled.

With their 38-31 win over Washington in the Rose Bowl, the Wolverines finished 9-0-3. But that only moved them up to No. 5 in the final Associated Press poll. The nation's only other undefeated team, Alabama, won the national championship.

Florida State, Miami and Notre Dame, all finished higher than Michigan, even though each lost a game. And it left Moeller to ponder what might have been.

Those three ties, one of them in the season-opener at Notre Dame, did Michigan in.

"Right. We're undefeated and unfulfilled," Moeller said Saturday. "Yet as I said before, and there's truth to this, maybe because of all the injuries we had, maybe we were an outstanding team to keep from getting beat a few times."

Moeller feels the true measure of this team came on Oct. 31 at Purdue. The Wolverines, coming off a 63-13 blowout of Minnesota the week before, found themselves down 17-7 at halftime. But the Wolverines responded with a 17-point third quarter and won 24-17.

"I think the trademark of the whole season was not the games that we tied, but the way that we came back and won at Purdue," Moeller said. "That's the one game that normally would have slipped away."

Of the three ties, the most disappointing was a 22-22 standoff with Illinois. The Wolverines lost four of 10 fumbles in that game, and also gave up two interceptions.

Tyrone Wheatley was responsible for five of those fumbles against Illinois. Yet it was Wheatley's stirring performance that lifted the Wolverines to the Rose Bowl win.

Wheatley ran for 235 yards and three touchdowns against the Huskies. It was, in Moeller's eyes, one more example of the excellent character his team displayed all season long.

"Yes, we're disappointed," Moeller said. "And I know that probably we had a great chance of doing a lot more if we had kept a few guys healthy. But that's spilled milk and I don't want to cry about anything. I want to be proud of this team and what he has accomplished.

"Maybe in some ways our kids learned more than if we had done it the other way. They learned how to fight. There was some emotion."

Ahead lies the job that seperates the Michigans and Alabamas from the rest of the college football world. It's time to recruit new talent from the high school ranks.

Michigan returns almost off of its skilled players. Wheatley, Ricky Powers and Ed Davis all return to the backfield. Virtually all the receivers, including Derrick Alexander, return. And most of the defensive secondary will be back, including Shonte Peoples and Ty Law.

Hurricanes come up short in history-making bid

Associated Press

NEW ORLEANS — The uncharted ground Miami sought was a fifth national championship in 10 years. The unfamiliar territory they found was a loss — the first in college for the younger Hurricanes and the school's first defeat in 30 games.

"It was a devastating loss, and we're not used to losing," Miami coach Dennis Erickson said Saturday, a day after Alabama beat the Hurricanes 34-13 in the Sugar Bowl to win the national championship.

"The seniors, I'm sorry they're going out like this. But if you look at the overall performance, they've had a good career. One game doesn't make a career, and they've had a lot more positive things happen than negative things."

Miami's freshmen and sophomores had not lost in college, and the rest of the team will have to think back to a 29-20 loss at Notre Dame on Oct. 20, 1990, to remember how to deal with it.

"Losses last a heckuva lot longer than wins. It's going to take some time, but young people are a lot more resilient than old people," Erickson said. "It's going to take me a long time to get over it."

Friday's loss was also Miami's worst since a 35-7 upset by Tennessee in the 1986 Sugar Bowl.

Miami, which won national titles in 1983, '87, '89 and '91, is more concerned now about the one that got away. This team's seniors were looking for their third championship, and a fifth for one school in 10 years would have been unprecedented.

"I don't know how many times you have an opportunity to ... make history," Erickson said. "To be that close and not get it, it is very disappointing."

In Erickson's eyes, though, finishing No. 3 does nothing to diminish the dynasty the Hurricanes have established. It is their seventh consecutive top-three finish, extending their own record.

"We're the University of Miami, we lost a football game. We've lost before and we're going to lose again but this program will always be in the upper echelon," said Erickson, who has been rumored to be heading for an NFL job. "And I'm going to work hard to keep it there."

But Gino Torretta won't be around then.

"It's the last game I'll put on a Miami uniform and we lost," said Torretta, who threw for no touchdowns and three interceptions — two on consecutive plays as Alabama broke the game open in the third quarter. "It hurts bad."

Grambling takes Heritage Bowl

TALLAHASSEE, Fla. (AP) — Eric Gant ran for 128 yards and a touchdown and Alex Perkins passed for two scores Saturday as Grambling beat Florida A&M 45-15 in the Heritage Bowl.

With Gant leading the way, Grambling (10-2) rushed for 277 yards. Grambling went ahead on the game's fifth play when the 255-pound Gant went 35 yards for a touchdown.

Perkins' 18-yard pass to Ron Dyson with 3:23 left in the third period pushed Grambling's lead to nine points after Florida A&M had closed to 17-15. Kelvin Raddix's pass interception two minutes later set up a 28-yard TD pass from Perkins to Dexter Butcher.

Midlander returns to bright lights

■ After leaving show business for three decades, Laura Williams makes a comeback of her own.

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

Chorus girls in Broadway-type shows usually don't perform after the age of 30, but that's not the case with long-time Midlander Laura Williams.

"It feels good to perform again in show business. It gets in your blood and you really never get it out," the 59-year-old dancer said.

After stepping out of the limelight almost 40 years ago to get married and raise four children, Ms. Williams has returned to it.

"There are not a whole lot of opportunities at this age to do something like this," she said.

But the Golden Girl show at Bally's Grand casino-hotel in Atlantic City, N.J., has afforded an opportunity — for a few talented performers no younger than 50 years.

"Everybody in the show is an ex-professional. Most have never left show business," she said.

The Broadway-type show consists of a chorus of seven women who range in age from 50 to 62. They are accompanied by male and female singers, a male specialty tap dancer and a male comic, all over 50 as well.

Ms. Williams has been with the two-year-old group since August. During the fall, she performed in the "Golden Girl Follies Holiday Show."

"Every performance has been a sell-out. Mostly, we have the older crowd," Ms. Williams said.

"They (senior citizens) like the old-time style of dancing and music. They can relate to it better," she said.

Nevertheless, the performances are lively — and demanding.

"Our rehearsals are very tough and I almost didn't last," she said.

Despite being a dancer and "in shape," Ms. Williams said she works hard.

"When I finish a show my hair is completely wet," she said. "It's hard work but it feels good to be performing again."

Ms. Williams, in Midland for the holidays, will return to Atlantic City for three weeks of rehearsals beginning in January followed by the show that runs Feb. 8 to June 20.

The new 90-minute show, the "Golden Girl Broadway Review," will run eight times in six days per week. The show consists of nine production numbers including acts from Music Man, Fiddler on the Roof, and Best Little Whorehouse in Texas.

Although show business has changed a lot since her younger years, joining the Golden Girl show brought back some memories, she said.

"In my youth before I was married I was in show business — a dancer, an actress," Ms. Williams said. "I worked in the theater, nightclubs and in television.

Her career lasted about four years beginning when she was 16 years old.

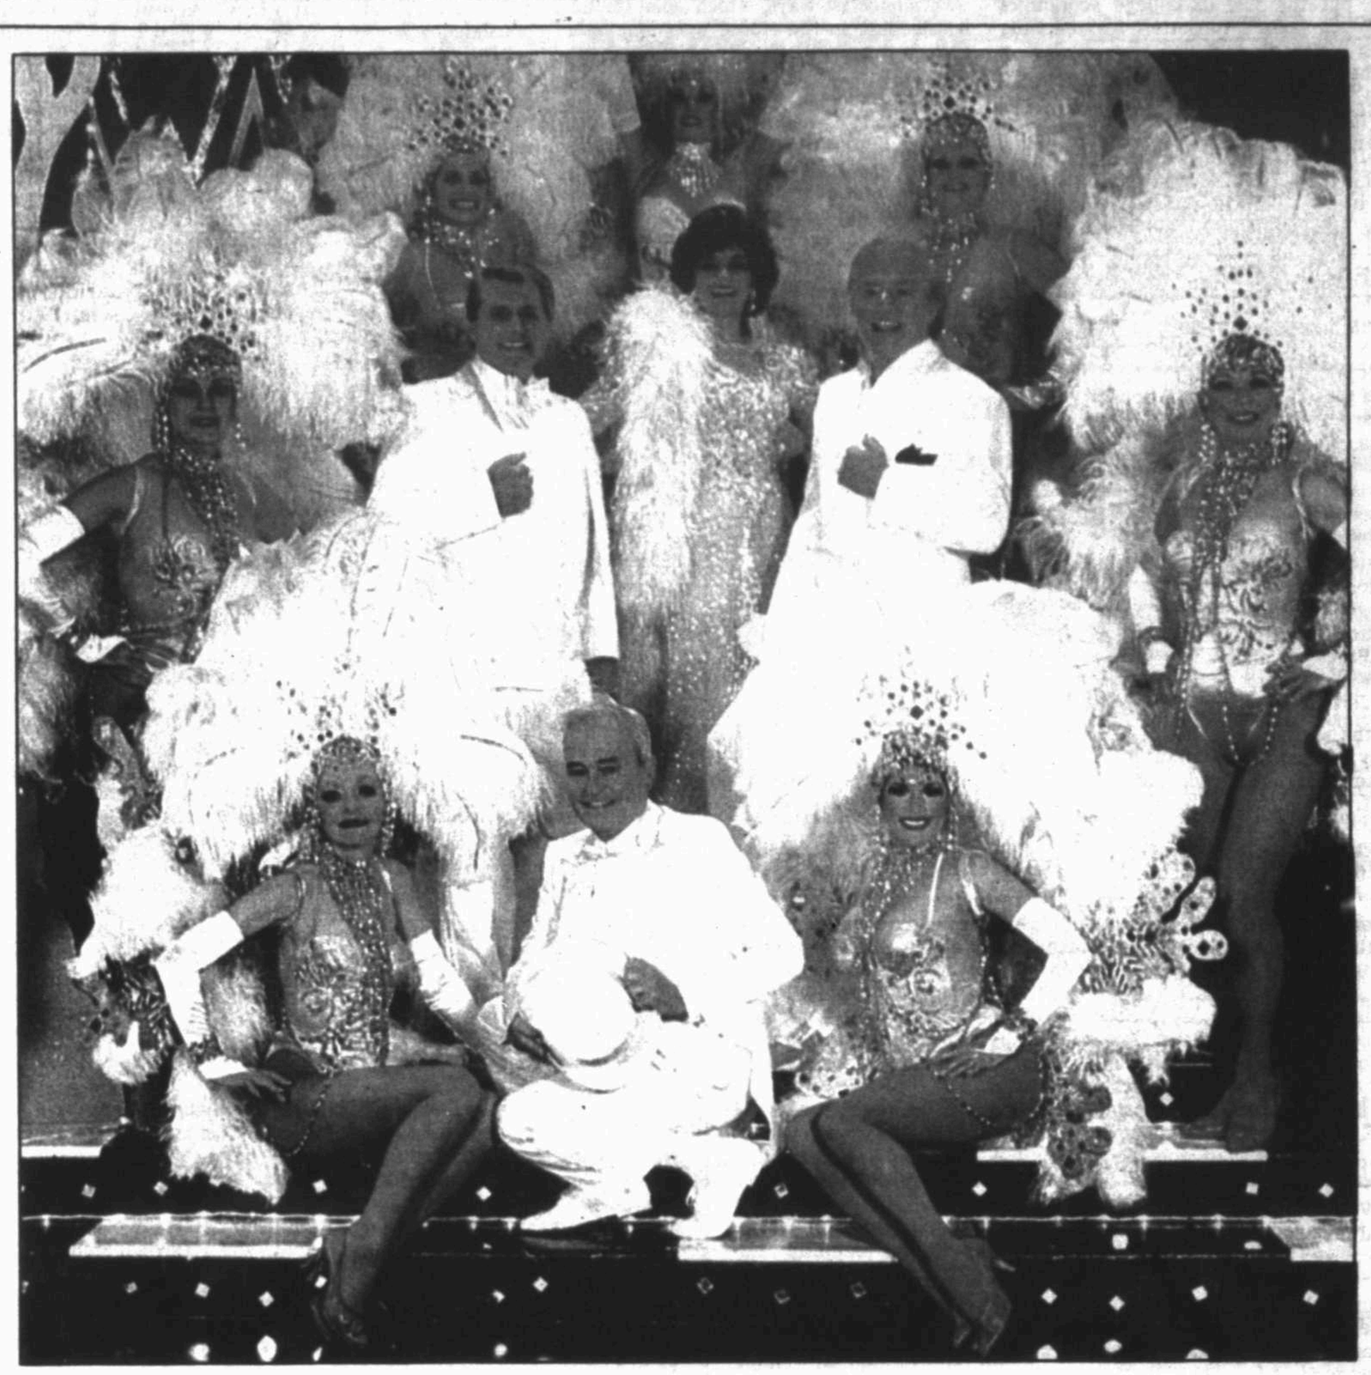

"I was born and raised in New York City and took dancing lessons. My older sister was in the business and sort of paved the way for me," she said.

Ms. Williams recalled her senior year in high school when she worked until 2 a.m. and arrived home an hour later. After a few hours sleep, she was off to school and rehearsals afterward.

She danced in Broadway-type shows to classical jazz. The teen-ager's performances included the Latin Quarter and Copacabana in New York.

Appearances on at least five different television shows included the Milton Berle Show and the the Colgate-Palmolive Hour.

"These were dancing, commercials or small acting parts," she said.

Long-time Midlander Laura Williams, front left, is back in show business as a performer in the "Golden Girl Follies Holiday Show" in Atlantic City, N.J. Ms. Williams, below, returned to her Midland home for the Christmas holidays.

The young performer also acted in a few off-Broadway plays.

While in Las Vegas for a dance performance at the Desert Inn, she met Deen Williams of Texas.

They were married and he brought her to Midland in 1954 to raise a family.

"Here I was in Texas and having babies," she said.

Her children are now between 26 and 34 years old and her husband died in 1984.

"I resumed my dancing when my younger child went to prep school," she said. Ms. Williams taught for six years at the Bingham Dance Center in Midland.

The idea of performing again developed from a reunion of dancers, one who had become a Golden Girl.

The same sister who introduced Ms. Williams into show business urged her to apply as a Golden Girl.

"My sister thought I'd be great for that," she said.

"My kids were really the ones who urged me to make a stab at it," she said.

Ms. Williams said she would have passed up the chance if it had not been for the persistence of two of her children.

At first the work seemed hard and living in a house with the other dancers was not appealing.

But Ms. Williams said she adapted and now loves the work.

"I look forward to starting the new show but I miss Texas, my friends and family," she said.

DPS tries to quell threats

Staff report

ODESSA — Law enforcement officials took precautions to quell threats made in light of a fatal motorcycle accident that occurred the day after Christmas just west of Odessa, according to the Highway Patrol of the Department of Public Safety.

Friends of the victim, Scott William McDonald, 20, reportedly had talked of retaliation against anyone who contributed to the accident, officials said. The threats stemmed from the assumption that McDonald's 1991 Honda 600 was forced off Yukon Road, south of Texas Highway 302, by a car, officials said.

Economic census tells city merchants trends

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

Between now and the end of January, some 2,200 Midland businesses will have received the 1992 Economic Census form, a census taken every five years to measure economic activities.

Businesses have until Feb. 15, to turn in their responses, which are required by law. The penalty for not responding is up to $500 for failure to report and $10,000 for willfully providing false information.

The census was established in 1902 under the authorization of Congress and is taken every five years to identify trends in business activity that are vital to measuring and encouraging growth in the American economy.

The forms are to go to all mid-sized and large businesses, with a small sample sent to small businesses. The forms are tailored to the size and type of business.

Businesses are asked to report basic operating statistics for each location, including the number of employees, annual payroll, and the value of goods produced and services provided during the year.

The eight major components of the 1992 Economic Census are retail trade; wholesale trade; service industries; manufacturers; transportation, communication and utilities; financial, insurance and real estate industries; construction industries; and mineral industries.

New programs covered in this year's census are minority-owned businesses, women-owned businesses, purchased services, a transportation survey and new metropolitan area definitions set up by the 1990 Census of Population.

GARY OTT

Learning how to get dumped takes years of practice

One of the more intriguing aspects of life is the phenomenon known as — and I quote — "breaking up with a loved one."

It knows no boundaries. It can be as serious as a complicated divorce involving millions of dollars and the custody of several small children, or as seemingly trivial as leaving one high school sweetheart for another.

Ott

But in any case, there is always a certain amount of pain inflicted. You eventually get over it, of course, but that doesn't make it any easier.

Pain is pain.

At one time or another all of us have experienced the two extremes — either doing the breaking up or being on the receiving end. Neither is much fun.

If you have any decency at all you don't enjoy hurting someone with whom you have shared many happy moments. But, by the same token, you don't necessarily want that person suddenly informing you that those happy moments are over, either.

Like I say, pain is pain. It doesn't matter whether you are doing the giving or that receiving.

Wait a minute, that's asinine. Of course, it matters. Given a choice, I want to do the giving. Only a fool enjoys being rejected. It hurts.

I know. I've been there. Many times.

Indeed, I have become something of an expert in the field of being told, "Gary, take a hike."

Allow me to expound. And, please, pay attention. It is possible that my words of wisdom will some day help you avoid the agony of being dumped on by that "special someone" who always swore — and, again, I quote — "There will never be another person who will make me feel the way you do."

Yeah, right.

First, let's examine the events that generally lead up to the big "break-up."

Your No. 1 clue that things are not going as they should is when she (or he, though for the purposes of this column that "special someone" will be a "she") no longer responds to your inquiries with civil conversation. Instead, she shrugs her shoulders in an indifferent sort of way and rolls her eyes upward as if to say, "That's the dumbest question I've ever heard. But coming from you, why am I surprised?"

If you ask something simple like, "What's wrong, sweetheart?" and she responds by rolling her eyes upward and snapping, "Well, if you have to ask, I'm certainly not going to tell you," then you can pretty well assume you've got yourself a serious problem.

The big break-up in just around the corner.

Word of your fate — being dumped — generally comes in the form of a letter, or perhaps a brief note.

But strangely enough, despite all the anger the two of you have exchanged of late, that "special someone" will take this opportunity to try and be gentle. Among her more popular phrases will be:

■ "I hope we can continue to be good friends."

■ "I want to remember us the way we were, not the way we are now."

■ "Please realize you have been a very important part of my life."

■ "You have made me a better person."

■ "I will never forget you."

■ "You are one of the most decent human beings I've ever known."

And, then, there is my all-time favorite.

■ "In an odd sort of way, Gary, it was you who provided the strength and self-confidence I needed to branch out on my own."

Oh, terrific. Glad I could be of assistance.

But the point is, none of these phrases, no matter how gently they are uttered, will make you feel any better. The basic fact remains unchanged: You have been dumped, rejected, axed, eliminated, replaced. In short, you have been had.

So what should you do to prepare yourself for the inevitable?

Never get involved again? Of course not.

Be the perfect mate? No way.

Become so charming and witty that she couldn't possibly order you out of her life? Dream on.

Dump her before she dumps you? Now you're talking.

Armey moves to inner circle of GOP power on Capitol Hill

By Michelle Mittelstadt
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Dick Armey may have left academia for a career on Capitol Hill, but the former college economics professor hasn't forgotten his teaching skills.

Armey

The Texas congressman, elected in December to the No. 3 Republican leadership position in the House, envisions using his added clout to instruct GOP newcomers on how to succeed in an environment controlled by Democrats.

The lessons will be modeled largely on Armey's own strategies — working outside established chains of command and pushing reform with coalitions of insiders and outsiders.

It's less likely he will school them in his own iconoclast ways, which once included sleeping in the House gym and later his congressional office to save money on rent.

As chairman of the House Republican Conference, Armey will have a key voice in formulating the GOP's position on legislation and parliamentary strategy.

A staunch conservative, Armey is expected to add a more ideological element to the conference and reinforce a Republican move toward more frequent challenges to the Democrats.

"I don't like confrontation," Armey insisted in a recent interview. "I'll do confrontation, but I'm certainly not going to enjoy it. Every time I've done it, I've had to go back and get all the knots out of my stomach."

Tensions between Democrats and Republicans likely will grow, Armey predicted.

"The fact is the Democrat majority in the House and the Senate have 12 years of frustration ... and had a lot of their stuff vetoed by presidents for 12 years," he said. "They're going to want to move their legislation."

And Armey expects that with a Democrat in the White House, congressional Democrats will move swiftly to pass their legislation.

He draws on football analogies to make the GOP case, saying that Republicans must defend against a Democratic offense that writes the rules as it goes along.

"At every juncture they are carrying the ball, they are calling the play and we are trying to defend," he said. "Our ideas are real and different from their ideas."

The role of insider is a new one for the 52-year-old Lewisville lawmaker, whose eight years in Congress have been marked first by a reputation as a firebrand then as an unlikely coalition builder.

Armey turned conventional wisdom on its ear when, as a second-term member, he was able to assemble a coalition that pushed through Congress legislation closing obsolete military bases.

The next sacred cow he targeted was the farm price support system — a fight in which he's been less successful to date but vows to continue when the farm bill authorization comes up in 1995.

Armey also went after the National Endowment for the Arts, a favorite target for conservatives. Brandishing "dirty" poetry written by NEA grant recipients, he didn't succeed in his attempt to cut NEA appropriations but eventually did see funding withdrawn for several controversial grants.

But Armey's focus always returns, inevitably, to the economy.

"The first thing I want to do is refocus the Republicans on the issue of the economy," he said. "I think it's the unifying thing within our party."

Concentrating on the economy could lessen GOP rifts over abortion, homosexuality and other social issues, he said.

Krueger makes short list for Bentsen seat

By John Gonzalez
New York Times News Service

AUSTIN — After a soul-searching, two-hour chat with Gov. Ann Richards, Railroad Commissioner Bob Krueger has emerged as one of two finalists for the job of replacing U.S. Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas.

Krueger's meeting with the governor New Year's Day came amid speculation that Richards had already decided to appoint Democratic U.S. Rep. Jim Chapman to succeed Bentsen, who is joining President-elect Bill Clinton as secretary of the treasury.

But aides to Richards said the critical appointment remains an open question that will be answered later this week, just when vocal critics of Chapman were arranging to meet with him about his conservative voting record in Congress.

Chapman's East Texas-style conservatism is, for some, one of his biggest assets because, if he were appointed, he would face fierce GOP competition in a special election in the spring. But environmentalists and advocates for gays, lesbians and African-Americans have criticized Richards for considering Chapman as Bentsen's replacement.

The outcry has forced Richards to reconsider Krueger, a former congressman and ambassador from New Braunfels in South Texas.

Richards could not be reached for comment on Saturday, but Krueger confirmed that he had a private meeting at the governor's invitation. He declined to divulge the tone or contents of the session.

Speaking in general terms about the choice on the governor's hands, Krueger said Richards is seeking the most viable Democratic candidate to confront a Republican thrust led by Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison for the Senate seat.

"The Democratic Party will want to have the candidate who can unite all parts of the Democratic Party and draw from the independents and Republicans, as well, who are open to the new vision," Krueger said. "I'm convinced that the governor is working very diligently to listen to a lot of different people.

"She's obviously considering this as an extremely important decision that takes a great deal of time. I think she ought to be respected for that."

Glen Maxey, D-Austin, a gay state House member who is an advocate for homosexual causes, said he has been among those who have approached Richards with concerns about Chapman. He said the congressman of seven years had repeatedly voted against measures supported by homosexuals.

At Richards' urging, Maxey said he wants to meet with Chapman this week to air various objections.

"It's a laundry list.... His record is such that it would be really hard for me to support him," Maxey said.

Gaming industry bets on Texas expansion

AUSTIN (AP) — The multibillion-dollar casino gaming industry is betting on Texas for expansion in the near future, officials say.

In Texas, most of the attention is expected to focus not on land-based casinos but on gambling on riverboats, which would troll the waters up and down the Gulf Coast, from Pleasure Island off Port Arthur to Corpus Christi and beyond, officials said.

Heading the efforts is Lloyd Criss, a former state representative from LaMarque.

Criss is representing Pratt Hotels, which has casinos in Las Vegas and hotels and around the world; Jean Development of Las Vegas, which owns five small casinos; Lambert Development, a family-owned business preparing to launch a riverboat at Baton Rouge, La.; and Seven Circles Resorts, which owns a casino in Central City, Colo.

"We haven't really gotten intense with it yet," Criss told the Austin American-Statesman. "We are laying the groundwork. We've sent people to Iowa and Illinois (where riverboat gambling recently began) ... We've tried to determine what impact this type of activity had on those communities, and it's been very positive."

Riverboat legislation, which would authorize 15 boats from Jefferson County to South Padre Island, will be carried in the Texas House by Democratic Reps. Debra Danburg and Ken Yarbrough of Houston and Mike Martin of Galveston.

Casino gaming proponents believe Texas may be ripe to roll the dice. The state is basking in the glow of a successful state lottery. And Texas once again faces a multibillion-dollar budget shortfall that has raised the specter of slashing government services or raising taxes.

"The morality question is discredited because government is sponsoring it, and there is perceived economic crisis," said William Thompson, a Nevada gambling expert.

Supporters believe riverboat gambling will be more palatable than land-based casinos, even though the gambling is the same.

ACCIDENT: Car search continues

(From 1C)

DPS officers talked with the friends Saturday to "head off any future problems," officials said.

Officers have found no evidence that another vehicle was involved but haven't determined the cause, officials said.

The accident occurred about 11:35 p.m. some eight miles south of Odessa. McDonald was traveling east when he went off the road at a curve. The motorcycle rolled two times, struck a barbed wire fence with McDonald hitting a fence post.

Car skid marks at the scene are believed to have been made the day before during an unreported accident. Officials are looking for a dark brown car, possibly a 1975-1978 Mercury, to confirm when that accident occurred.

No one witnessed either accident although the car skid marks were reportedly seen before the night of Dec. 26, officials said.

CENSUS: Study shows activity

(From 1C)

Statistics from the census will be published in more than 500 printed reports and in formats for computers.

The census is then used by federal agencies as a basis for measures of economic activity, by state and local agencies for economic development and regional planning, by trade associations and business publication to find key business facts for readers and to project future trends and by businesses to get information for marketing and planning.

LETTER FROM COLLEGE

Midland College activities resume after semester break

By H.A. Tuck

Activities resume, and quickly, beginning tomorrow in preparation for the 1993 spring semester. Both faculty and staff report on Monday morning for meetings before registration on Tuesday and Wednesday.

Tuck

If you have already early registered and paid, you are ready to buy books and get started. If you early registered but didn't pay, you received a letter of instructions prior to Christmas about how to make sure you are on class rolls when instruction begins.

Those of you who received time permits know when you are to report for processing Tuesday or Wednesday.

Now, for those of you who want to attend MC this spring but didn't do anything yet. You need to report to the Student Center on Wednesday between 1-4 p.m. or 6-8 p.m. When you arrive, you will be processed as quickly as possible.

Thursday and Friday are days when the faculty and staff are doing preparation for the start of classes. This includes processing class rolls, creating any additional classes which are needed (and for which there are classrooms, lab facilities and instructors), and preparing class materials.

Classes begin on Monday, January 11. A brief late-registration period also starts then, but with an additional late fee imposed.

If you have questions, visit the Student Services area of the Student Center on Monday between 8 a.m.-5 p.m. or by calling 685-4501.

Please find the bulletin, read it, and then sign up for a number of classes. You'll enjoy them and learn from them.

You may register for Continuing Education classes in the departmental offices, located in the Administration Building. You can call 685-4518 and the helpful staff can provide answers for you.

There's no basketball this week for the Chaparrals, but there's something to watch and hear about the Chaps. It's the first weekly "Steve Green Basketball Show," which is presented on KMID-TV, Channel 2 (cable 3) on Saturday afternoons through February. The show is scheduled to be shown at 5 p.m., but check the weekly television listings for any changes.

Now in its second year, the Steve Green Show provides interesting insights into the Chaparral team, the Western Junior College Athletic Conference, and anything else which happens to pop into the minds of Coach Green and his guests.

Chap basketball resumes on Monday, Jan. 11, when the Chaps venture into Southwestern Kansas for a game against Seward County Community College in Liberal.

Then it's back home for a game on Jan. 14 against Clarendon College. This would have been a WJCAC game in previous years. But last summer Clarendon College decided to go independent. They are honoring their contract with WJCAC teams, but the game will not count in the conference standings.

That week closes out with a rare Saturday evening game at Levelland against South Plains College.

Oh yes, you might have missed hearing that two Midland College players were selected as the first WJCAC Players of the Week. Sophomore Demeitreus Drew was named "Offensive Player of the Week" and sophomore Terrance Rone was selected as the "Defensive Player of the Week."

Should you absolutely not be able to get along without basketball, there are some dandy high school games slated at Chaparral Center this week. On Tuesday, it's the cross-town teams as Midland Lee tangles with Midland High. Lee hosts Odessa High on Thursday. There are games at 4:30, 6:15, and 8 p.m. each night

Tickets are moving briskly for the Feb. 12 concert by Wynonna Judd with special guest McBride and the Ride and Chris LeDoux. Tickets are priced at $20 each for reserved seats. They may be purchased at Chap Center, Midland Sound or Endless Horizons in Odessa.

You may purchase them with a charge card either in person or by calling 685-4584.

Opening Saturday is the first show of the semester for the McCormick Gallery.

Midland photographer Mike Andrews will have about 70 of his recent photos on display for about three weeks. Located in the Allison Fine Arts Building, the McCormick Gallery is open to the public without charge. Gallery hours are 8 a.m.-10 p.m. Monday through Thursday, 8 a.m.-5 p.m. Friday, 9 a.m.-5 p.m. Saturday, and 1-5 p.m. on Sunday.

If you are debating with yourself about coming to MC this spring, please heed this: I've never heard a person who regretted attending college. I've heard hundreds who said "Oh, how I wish that I had gone to (stayed in) college when I had the chance."

And if you are concerned about being on the campus with all those "young people," keep in mind that the average student at Midland College is age 31, which means not everyone on campus is a teenager.

H.A. Tuck is public relations director for Midland College.

Hillsboro residents refuse to let memories fade through smoke

HILLSBORO (AP) — A massive blaze gutted the century-old Hill County Courthouse over the weekend, but residents say it won't snuff out their memories of the historic building.

"I played in that building 60 years ago," said Commissioner John Erwin. "Kids went up on the catwalk and played together."

The three-story limestone courthouse was the largest building and a popular tourist site in this town about 60 miles south of Dallas. It was located in the center of downtown about seven miles from Interstate 35.

It was built in 1890 and is considered an architectural marvel because it combines the styles of Classical Revival, Italiante, and French Second Empire. The building was registered with the Texas Historical Society as a state landmark in 1964 and was listed in the National Register of Historic Places.

The fire, which began around 5:30 p.m. Friday, was still going strong well into the night, witnesses said. Dozens of firefighters from 16 companies finally brought the fire under control around 1:30 a.m. Saturday, said firefighter James Peacock.

There were still some hot spots inside the structure Saturday morning, and officials expected remnants of the courthouse to smolder for days.

No injuries were reported.

"It's totally gutted," Peacock said. "Just the (outer) walls are standing."

Hillsboro Mayor Henry Moore said he saw the clock tower topple onto the third floor, where officials believe the blaze began.

"I didn't see any flames coming out of the first floor, but everything above it was totally destroyed," he said.

"Some of the walls appeared to me to be freestanding, not supported by anything on the interior," he said.

Doctors, scientists defend animal use in research

AUSTIN (AP) — Lorraine Hough's office in the Texas Medical Association's building downtown is calm for a battle zone.

Hough, the new director of the Texas Society for Biomedical Research, is a leader in a war. Under the society's logo (a reclining armadillo balancing a heart on its nose), Texas doctors and scientists are fighting what some fear is growing public sympathy for the animal rights movement's effort to halt the use of animals in medical research.

A recent Gallup Poll, for instance, found that 2 out of 3 American teen-agers support animal rights.

Thus the 3-year-old society is taking its fight to the schoolchildren of Texas with an essay contest for high school seniors and juniors on "Why Animals are Important to Biomedical Research."

But word of the contest, and its $500 first and $250 second prizes, has been slow getting out. Ken Heydrick, coordinator of science and health courses for the Austin Independent School District, still awaits details.

"I'll make sure all our teachers know about it," Heydrick said.

Hough said the entry deadline of Jan. 8 may have to be extended.

In South Austin, meanwhile, where senior Lauren Ornelas is president of the St. Edward's (University) Animal Rights Society, the enemy is not amused.

"It sounds like propaganda to me," Ornelas said. "Sounds to me like they're not trying to help students but to push animal experimentation."

Indeed, the biomedical society does promote scientific experiments with animals. Through posters, brochures, a newsletter and other advertising, the society drums its message: Without continued use of animals — mainly rodents but also some cats, dogs and monkeys — cures for heart disease, Alzheimer's disease, cancer, AIDS and a host of other illnesses will be permanently out of reach.

"We feel that the more scientifically literate people become, the more they will understand," Hough said.

Animal rightists disagree.

"All life is pretty much equal," said Ornelas. "The suffering of animals is unjustified when they're not the victims of (for example) AIDS, but humans are."

In mid-December, Dr. John Howe, president of both the biomedical research society and the University of Texas Health Science Center in San Antonio, was in Nashville for a meeting of the American Medical Association.

He said the association unanimously passed a resolution to "quicken the pace of advocacy" for medical research in general and animal research in particular.

"Most of the major advances of medicine in this century have been related in a very direct way to medical research involving animals," Howe said.

The Texas society, a chapter of the national Foundation for Biomedical Research, was founded soon after animal rights activists did $70,000 worth of damage to a sleep researcher's lab at Texas Tech University in Lubbock in the summer of 1989.

People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals, a Maryland group that often issues statements after such incidents, contended the researcher abused the five cats in his lab. The National Institutes of Health later said his work was humane.

There have been no more incidents in Texas. But there have been three elsewhere in the country this year alone.

Last February, an animal lab was trashed at Michigan State University. One at Washington State University was raided in August. And, in October, a federal animal research lab in Utah was destroyed by fire. The principal researcher's nearby office also was destroyed by explosives. No one has been charged in the incidents.

With help from U.S. Rep. Charles Stenholm, D-Stamford, the Texas Society for Biomedical Research succeeded last summer in getting the first federal law passed making such attacks criminal offenses if they cause more than $10,000 in damage.

Violence isn't what the society fears, however, as much as legislation that would make animal research more expensive.

"We've seen $1.5 billion in added costs in the last decade," Howe said, some of it for security.

The society is sensitive to common misunderstandings such as the idea that research animals are abused. Officials point out that research would be jeopardized if an animal were not in good health.

A society brochure quotes a 1985 survey by the U.S. Department of Agriculture that found 62 percent of experiments with animals involved no pain for the animal.

In another 32 percent, the animals felt no pain because they received either anesthesia or pain-killing drugs. But in 6 percent of experiments, pain-killers and anesthesia were withheld, because they would obscure the results.

"An example of such research is the study of pain, itself a major human health problem," says the brochure.

Against the persistent denials of most scientists, however, animal rights activists insist that alternatives — mainly computer simulations and cell cultures — are as good as animal research.

The society argues that computers are in their infancy and, in any case, most drugs and procedures must be tested in living animals with multiple organs functioning as a system, before being tried on humans.

"I wouldn't want anybody performing surgery on my 7-year-old who'd only ever practiced on a computer," Hough said.

Howe predicted that medical science ultimately will triumph.

"We're very confident that, in the end, the right decisions will be made," he said.

Houstonians begin year with six homicides

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston's homicide statistics hit a four-year low in 1992, recording just over 500 slayings compared with 671 in 1991.

But 1993 got off to a bloody start in the Bayou City with five people killed here and a sixth in nearby Baytown in the first four hours of the new year.

A sixth Houston resident, a 15-year-old boy, died early Saturday after being shot by a police officer late Friday during a family disturbance.

"Alcohol, guns and macho don't mix," Houston police homicide Sgt. A.J. Toepoel said. "People just get out there and get drunk. They're not thinking right. They say something that makes somebody mad, and instead of fists start flying, bullets start flying."

The shooting began just after midnight Friday when a group celebrating the new year at an apartment complex fired .25-caliber automatic pistols into the air about 25 times, police said.

At the same time, two men were arguing at the same complex about a woman both men were dating. During the confrontation, the brother of one of the men heard the gunfire and believed his brother was in danger. He came out of his apartment with an automatic pistol and approached the two men.

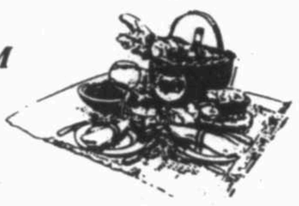

Nearby celebrants Juan Francisco Orellana, 28, and Jose Pena, meanwhile, had just emerged from another apartment as the brother began firing and struck the two bystanders. The brothers fled the scene, Orellana and Pena were killed and the other man who had been involved in the argument was shot in the hand.

In a second Houston incident, Leonard Roy Johnson, 21, was fatally shot at 1:40 a.m. Friday while standing in the parking lot of a nightclub.

Witnesses told police Johnson had been involved in a dispute inside the club with another man, who waited outside and shot Johnson in the back as he left the nightclub. The suspect was still at large Saturday.

Fidel Villanueva, 26, also was fatally shot after a parking lot altercation. Sgt. Ken Williamson said a man involved in a fender-bender in an apartment complex with a relative of Villanueva returned to the scene with friends and fought with family members. Villanueva was shot in the chest and the suspects fled.

Teens quit gang life to follow Jesus

By Cathy Chapaty
Hearst News Service

SAN ANTONIO — At 13 years old, Beatrice Vasquez ran away from home and to the streets, dropping out of school, sleeping under West Side bridges, doing drugs — going days without eating.

But today, at 19, all that has changed. She is back home, has quit drugs and expects to graduate from Holmes High School in May as an A and B student.

The reason, she says, is Jesus.

And about 350 other youths who packed the International Bible College auditorium Monday night agreed. They were there for the seventh Victory Outreach holiday assembly, targeting San Antonio youths who need a "clean break" from gangs and life on the streets.

The three-day "Firepower Youth Conference," aimed at getting local teen-agers to turn away from gangs and toward Christ, ended Wednesday.

The organization, which since 1970 has helped drug-addicted adults through its rehabilitation programs and non-denominational churches, uses testimonials of former gang members and runaways to bring the message to troubled youths.

"It's a peer-to-peer kind of thing," said Johnny Zamarripa, Victory Outreach's youth director. "We want to reach out to the young people and let them know that there is a solution to their problems.

"We've got a message for the gang bangers. We've got a message for the runaways. We've got a message for the drug users, and that message is Jesus is the answer."

And the youths were listening.

Fernando DeLeon Jr., 19, remembers his gang days. The memories live in the gang's tattoos and the bullet and knifing scars he wears.

His story is similar to that of many gang members: He started smoking at age 9, joined a gang by 11, was introduced to marijuana and cocaine at 13, and by 15 had shot two people.

"It was like a broken record, going 'round and 'round," DeLeon said of his gang days.

Then, one day, a friend and Victory Outreach member, Juan "Bubba" Osteguin, said to him, "Jesus didn't quit on me, so I'm not going to quit on you."

Osteguin had asked him previously to come to Victory Temple. This time DeLeon agreed, and he says once he asked Jesus to come into his life, everything turned around.

"I never had that kind of love in my heart," he said.

Dionicio Senac, 18, a former gang member, agrees. He idolized gang members and thought "that's where I'm gonna find love." He says love was all he was looking for, but he did not find it in gangs. He found it in Jesus.

Now, he and DeLeon are trying to bring the message to the very gang members they used to accompany in drive-by shootings.

"We know who can fill the emptiness in their hearts," Senac said.

As a high school student, Osteguin says he was "always doing what the crowd was doing." He also was using so much cocaine that his nose bled during football practice.

Osteguin says he now uses his popularity to his advantage, letting the crowd follow him to "a better way."

And, Osteguin says, "It's been wonderful ever since. There's nothing better."

Professors denounce English teacher exam

AUSTIN (AP) — A new state proficiency exam for public-school English teachers lets them off easy, say some college professors.

In a letter to Texas Education Commissioner Lionel "Skip" Meno, 14 instructors at the University of Houston-Clear Lake took issue with proposed changes in the Examination for the Certification of Educators in Texas — the so-called ExCET test.

At issue are proposed revisions in the Texas Education Agency's test, which the professors contend do not measure a teacher's knowledge of specific literary works.

The instructors say Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" could be taught "by a teacher who had not been exposed to a piece of late 16th-century writing" since high school.

"These new competencies for the English ExCET exam never suggest that a teacher needs to know anything about English, American or world literature. And yet this is the English teacher's primary subject matter," the letter said.

But TEA officials defend the proposed revisions. While the new test does not ask questions about specific literature, it stresses a prospective teacher's instructional competency in literature generally, officials said.

"They have to be able to read literature and assess its meaning," said Pamela Tackett, TEA's director of programs. "While there may not be any items that address Shakespearean literature or ask what Character X did at some point, we are trying to establish a balance between content and pedagogy (teaching)."

Teachers must pass the test to be certified to teach public-school English, TEA officials said. To be certified, a student must pass 24 hours of literature classes and 12 hours of English at the college level.

A teacher already certified in another field can become certified in English by passing the English ExCET test. It is one of 64 ExCET tests administered by the TEA, covering everything from science and math to speech and journalism.

Revisions in the English ExCET test are the first since the testing began about seven years ago as part of Texas' education reforms, officials said. It is scheduled to be administered to new teachers beginning in October.

The professors contend that accepting the new exam would contribute to "dumbing down" high-school education in Texas.

Dallas' 'D' magazine for sale

DALLAS (AP) — American Express Publishing Corp. says its three city magazines — D, Atlanta and LA Style — are up for sale.

According to a letter of intent signed by American Express, Time Warner Inc. will manage American Express' other publishing ventures, but the three city publications were left out of the agreement, effectively putting them up for sale.

"D" was down 6 percent in advertising pages for 1991; Atlanta was down 7 percent and LA Style was down 31 percent, according to recently published estimates.

An American Express spokeswoman said that the company is "just starting to entertain offers" for the city magazines, and that the publications can be sold as a group or individually. There is no deadline for the sale, she said.

In late summer, a trade publication of the magazine industry speculated that the city magazines would be included in a complex three-way trade involving Time Inc. and Herb Lipson, owner of Boston and Philadelphia magazines. But apparently the plan unraveled.

The company's other publications, those that Time will now publish, include Travel & Leisure, and Food and Wine.

New state justices sworn in, includes first woman

AUSTIN (AP) — Rose Spector says her rise to the Texas Supreme Court is proof the system is working.

After putting on her black robe, taking the oath and stepping up to the bench Friday as the first woman ever elected to the state Supreme Court, Ms. Spector said:

"The system really does work. It is the election process and the jury system that make it work."

Also taking a Supreme Court seat for the first time during the New Year's Day ceremonies at the Capitol was Craig Enoch of Dallas, while Justice Jack Hightower took the oath of office for the second term on the state's highest court of civil cases.

Chief Justice Tom Phillips administered the oaths with a Bible given to the court by Sam Houston.

Enoch has served as chief justice of the 5th Court of Appeals in Dallas, while Ms. Spector has been a state district judge in San Antonio.

"The women of Texas are particularly pleased with this very timely and historic election," said state District Judge Carolyn Spears-Petersen, who introduced Ms. Spector at the swearing-in ceremony. "We will now have a woman serve at the highest level of the judicial branch of the state of Texas."

Ms. Spector, a Democrat, won her seat in the November election when she challenged Justice Eugene Cook, the Republican incumbent. She won with about 52 percent of the vote.

Other women have served briefly on the court by appointment, but none ever had been elected to it.

Cook, who joined the court in 1988 during a controversy over campaign contributions to justices, told the audience he thought he had helped restore public confidence in the court, as well as rekindle a spirit of professionalism among the state's 56,000 lawyers.

In a speech honoring Justice Oscar Mauzy, a liberal Democrat who was defeated by Enoch in the November election, Justice Lloyd Doggett said the outgoing jurist always tried to defend the "powerless against the powerful."

Mauzy, 66, was elected to the Texas Senate in 1966 and served there until 1986, when he was elected to the Supreme Court.

Doggett recited some of Mauzy's judicial accomplishments, including the unanimous decision in the Edgewood school case that ruled the state's system for funding public education unconstitutionally discriminated against property-poor districts.

PART-TIME INCOME OPPORTUNITY

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has early morning routes which need to be filled with dependable individuals with reliable transportation. Often asked questions:

- Is it worthwhile for adults also?

  YES! 95% of our Distributors ARE adults! Morning Routes are attractive for:

  - ★ ADULTS who have fulltime jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job!
  - ★ MOTHERS who can't justify a small job AND daycare, because as a Distributor, you do not need daycare!
  - ★ COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
  - ★ SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added retirement income, or just want to work with people, neighbors and friends!

- How much money can I make as a Distributor?

  Depending on the size of the route(s), from $350 to $800 monthly, in some cases ... even more!

- OK ... but how long does it take?

  The actual delivery takes 1-2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2-3 hours on Sunday, depending on the size of the route(s). Also some time is needed each month to collect from subscribers. Many Distributors choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in the subscribers' papers and having payments mailed to them. Some collecting in person will be necessary though, particularly on some routes more than others.

- When do the papers have to be delivered by?

  Papers must be on the yards by 6 am Monday - Friday, and 7 am on weekend mornings.

- Do I ever get a day off?

  The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, most Distributors do take days off by finding a friend, family member, or another Distributor to substitute for them!

- What else?

  An initial $100 deposit is required.

Courtyard Rendevous

Text by Sherry Freeman

Shaded trees and lush greenery beckon you into a private courtyard where the convenience of today's lifestyle is found in a custom built townhome.

Nestled between 2 private courtyards, this lovely 3 bedroom townhome is an ideal starter or retirement home with accommodating living space both indoors and out.

A mirrored foyer creates a dramatic entry and adds dimension to the expansive living areas that open up into high vaulted ceilings.

A large living and formal dining area combine to provide an open setting that is ideal for entertaining. A mirrored accent wall lets the outside in and is a reflection of the panoramic view of both patios seen through the liberal use of windows.

This great room is versatile for every day living as well, where a warm fireplace and built-in bookshelves add further comfort. Sliding doors open to the back courtyard for outdoor enjoyment.

The living area easily flows into an extensive kitchen with separate sitting area. Bountiful cabinets make storage easy, and additional closets and cabinets are also found in the adjoining utility room.

Enjoy a morning coffee on the private patio, or choose the comfort and convenience of a dine-in sitting area off of the kitchen.

The butler's pantry is a rare and delightful find, where sliding drawers and custom cabinets are the perfect storage for a collection of silver and china. Guests also find a convenient half bath.

Retreat to a spacious master bedroom featuring built-in bookcases with swivel TV shelf and built-in desk. These added features provide additional living space, while the sliding doors allow access to the back patio.

The master bath is also convenient for today's lifestyle with separate closets, a large vanity and separate tub and shower.

Added living comfort is found in the pass-through bath that adjoins two additional bedrooms. Spacious walk-in closets in each bedroom are a plus!

Langston Realtors is featuring this custom built townhome for $139,000. For a private showing call Nonnie Buller at 682-9495 or 685-0870.

Serving 54 counties in West Texas and New Mexico

BRIEFING

Working rigs

Roughnecks send drillpipe down the hole as a rig makes a well.

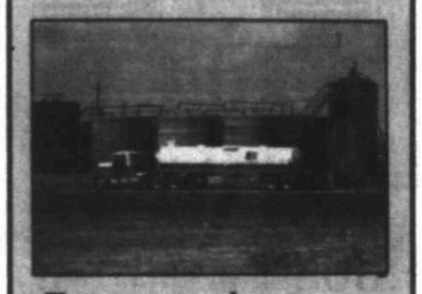

According to Baker Hughes Inc., the Permian Basin rig count rose four to 136 during Christmas week, with Lea County, N.M. leading the area with 21 rigs at work within county lines.

For the first time since October, the national rig count retreated during the week, the company reported. Nationwide, Baker Hughes reported 928 rigs at work, down seven from the previous week but up from year-ago levels of 770.

Commission fine

AUSTIN — The Railroad Commission has fined C&C Systems Inc. of Arlington $2,500 for an unplugged well and for the discharge of oil around a tank battery on the Paul Moss SWD lease in Ector County.

The agency said it has assessed more than $1.4 million in well plugging and pollution penalties in 1992, compared with $733,400 during the same period last year.

Energy prices

A Koch truck gathers crude at a lease off CR 120 East.

Oil prices were slightly lower most of this holiday-shortened week, with futures prices for West Texas Intermediate falling to $19.59 on Wednesday. The posted price ended the week at $18.25 per barrel.

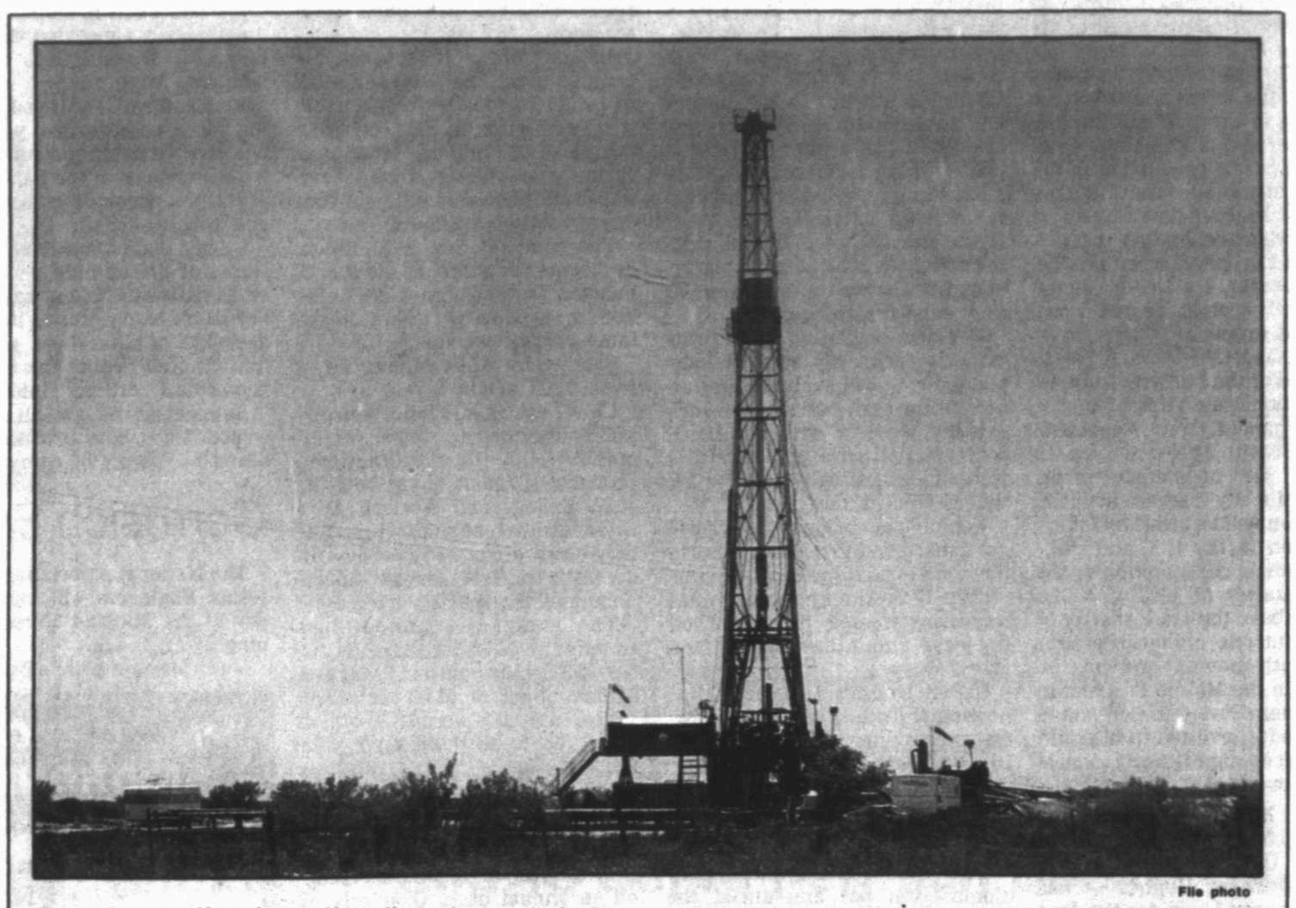

Natural gas prices, which began the week with a 13 cent loss on the futures market, continued to slump. February contracts for natural gas closed almost a cent off Wednesday at $1.695 per thousand cubic feet.

Grace moves

BOCA RATON, Fla. — W.R. Grace & Co. announced the signing of a definitive agreement to sell Support Terminal Services, Inc. to Kaneb Pipe Line Partners, L.P. for a cash purchase price of $63 million, plus working capital adjustments. Grace expects the transaction to close in January 1993.

Support Terminal Services, Inc., a specialized liquid storage company headquartered in Dallas, Texas, is one of five units of Grace Energy Corp. that Grace announced its intention to divest in July 1992.

In addition to Support terminal Services, Grace has announced its intention to sell Grace Drilling Company, headquartered in Dallas, which has the largest drilling rig fleet in the world with 168 rigs located in 17 states, including Alaska; New Orleans-based Grace Offshore Company, a leading provider of offshore drilling, workover and well completion services in the Gulf of Mexico; Homco International, Inc. a Houston-based oil field service firm; and Grace Petroleum Corporation, an oil and gas exploration and production business, based in Oklahoma City.

Experts say the domestic oil and gas industry should see at least modest improvements in all sectors — from drilling to prices — during the new year.

Looking forward to 1993

Oilmen can expect see modest gains in 1993

By Mella McEwen
Staff writer

It's a new year.

A new man is being inaugurated as President of the United States, bringing with him a new administration and new philosophies.

In this time of change, Permian Basin oilmen wonder what the new year will bring.

"It's certainly a hazy picture," said Harry Spannaus, executive vice president of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association. "But we remain optimistic that President-elect Clinton will recognize that the domestic oil and gas industry has severe problems and we need to do something about the increasing demand for imported crude oil, and also imported natural gas."

Spannaus added, "I've felt in the last quarter of 1992 that things were looking up, and we remain optimistic that we're going to continue with a gradual improvement on the domestic side."

He suggested Clinton study import fees "more so than additional taxes at the pump if we're thinking of new sources of revenue."

He added that the PBPA is working on a list of new initiatives to present to various organizations in Washington to assist the domestic oil and gas industry in its recovery efforts. He said some initiatives are expanded relief from the Alternative Minimum Tax and others concern environmental issue.

"But they all point toward lessening the regulatory burdens we now face."

While optimistic about improvement in the domestic enegy industry, Spannaus remains worred about continued unrest in the Middle East and in Europe.

"We've still got a lot of major problems to face before we declare a winner in this effort," he said.

NATURAL GAS

Perhaps the future glows brightest for natural gas.

Clinton has promised to develop programs to boost use of natural gas in residences, commercially and in liquified natural gas and compressed natural-powered vehicles, a plan cheered by both natural gas producers and environmentalists.

After seeing prices sink to new lows the past two summers, producers this past summer saw prices rise above $2 per thousand cubic feet.

"1993 should be an eventful year, if the courts allow FERC Order 636 to take effect," said Robert Anderson, a Midland natural gas consultant. "There'll be both good news and bad news for producers as a result of that order."

Anderson explained that the good news will be increased prices at the wellhead, "which we're already seeing to some extent pending Order 636's arrival."

The bad news "if you want to call it that, is that producers will be required to have a much tighter rein on their daily production information from the field. The reason for that is that pipelines are going to begin implementing gas volume balancing

Survey gauges E&D funds

■ An annual survey by Arthur Andersen finds most independents will increase domestic exploration and development spending while most majors will decrease U.S. exploration.

Staff report

Most independent producers plan increased U.S. exploration and development spending in 1993, while a majority of the major oil and gas companies say they plan to decrease their new exploration activity in the U.S., according to company spending plans reported in the 1992 Arthur Andersen Oil & Gas Industry Outlook Survey. The annual survey, completed in November, polled the chief executive officers of 149 energy industry companies.

"Fifty-two percent of independent producers plan increased domestic exploration spending in 1993, 71 percent will increase development spending, and 80 percent expect higher property acquisition expenditures," reported Victor A. Burk, managing director of oil and gas industry services for Arthur Andersen.

"Nevertheless, these increases will likely be offset by continuing declines in U.S. exploration and development by the majors," Burk pointed out. Fifty-six percent of the major oil and gas companies responding to the survey indicated they plan to cut domestic exploration and 44 percent will cut U.S. development spending in 1993.

In 1991, the last full year for which data is available, the majors accounted for $12 billion or 68 percent of U.S. exploration and development spending by publicly traded companies, while independents spent $2.4 billion or 14 percent of the U.S. total.

"The pattern outlined for 1993 exploration and development spending also applies to companies' longer-term plans," Burk observed. "Among independents, 68 percent plan increased U.S. exploration activity over the next three years, while none of the major company survey respondents expect to increase U.S. exploration; in fact, 56 percent plan to expand their foreign exploration during the next three years.

"The decision by independents to increase their U.S. exploration activity reflect some underlying economic realities," Burk said. "First, as we pointed out in releasing the Reserve Disclosures survey results in June, companies are not abandoning the U.S. Many companies believe there are significant opportunities in many areas of the U.S. if adequate economic incentives exist. Second, while many companies, both majors and independents, are making substantial investments outside the U.S., they are also attempting to limit the capital they have at risk in foreign countries," he added.

The Outlook survey results indicate trends in individual companies' operations, planning decisions and forecasts. The survey results are reported without weighing as to reserves, production or company size, and therefore are not directly projectible into aggregate levels of future spending or production.

The 1992 Arthur Andersen Oil & Gas Industry Outlook survey questionnaires were sent to the chief executive officers of more than 300 U.S. energy companies during late October and early November.

Floyd Oil buys properties from Oryx

■ Among the Oryx properties purchased by Floyd Oil are stakes in three waterfloods in West Texas.

Staff report

HOUSTON — Floyd Oil Co. announces that it has acquired five properties from Oryx Energy Co. for $24.1 million. The purchase closed on December 11 and has an effective date of December 1.

The five properties are located in the San Juan Basin and in Lea County, New Mexico, and in the Permian Basin of West Texas.

The interests acquired include:

■ A 38 percent interest in the Canada Ojitos Unit in the West Puerto Chiquito Field in the San Juan Basin;

■ An average 95 percent working interest in 14 wells in the Basin Dakota Field near Farmington in the San Juan Basin;

■ Interests ranging from 15 percent to 33 percent in three large waterflood units in West Texas located in the Slaughter, Levelland and Ownby Fields;

■ An approximate 100 percent working interest in 22 Devonian and San Andres wells in West Texas and 5) various interests in 70 wells in Lea County, New Mexico.

Floyd will operate the West Texas Devonian and San Andres wells, nine wells in Lea County and the Basin Dakota properties. Outside operators include Benson-Montin-Greer at Canada Ojitos and Amoco and Texaco in the West Texas Units.

The Oryx purchase brings total acquisitions made by Floyd in 1992 to approximately $32 million. Floyd has acquired approximately $140 million in properties since it began operations in 1986.

Floyd is a privately owned independent based in Houston engaged in the acquisition of long-life properties in the onshore areas of Texas and the states of the Mid-Continent.

JOHN PAUL PITTS

Is it time for the oilpatch to fight back?

EDITOR'S NOTE: John Paul Pitts is on vacation. He left behind this column that ran earlier this year.

Pitts

Politics, they say, is the art of compromise. What they don't say, however, is that perpetual compromise is a sure means to a long, slow death.

When Texas Railroad Commissioner Bob Krueger was in Midland last week to address an environmental gathering of the Permian Basin Petroleum Association, he brought the contradiction to the forefront.

Krueger, a former Texas congressman and U.S. Ambassador to Mexico, explained that federal proposals to regulate produced brine water and drilling fluids as hazardous waste could devastate the industry, shutting down 74 percent of all oil wells in the state and 56 percent of all gas wells.

Then, almost in the same breath, he made a statement which struck a raw nerve with many in the crowd. In essence, he said: The environmental movement is here to stay...better learn to live with it...everybody is for it...you can't win.

He compared the strength of the environmental movement to the civil rights movement. "Somehow, when I saw George Wallace in the doorway of that school in Alabama, I knew that he had already lost," Krueger said.

While discussing changes in the drilling fluid and produced water exemption, he suggested the industry can only try to strike a deal it can live with. In other words, just relax and enjoy the inevitable.

That attitude may be politics as usual, but to the rest of us it's outrageous — as usual. It is kind of like negotiating with an embezzler how much money he will steal from you.

Some will say that Krueger was just telling it ike it is. But that doesn't mean that what is is right. The throw-the-bums-out mood in America is growing. Could it be because the people are growing weary of adversary-driven compromise legislation that permits only "half-right" solutions?

Outraged at Krueger's statement about compromising on such a critical issue, Bruno Hanaon, a Midland oilman and former president of the American Association of Petroleum Geologists, stood and asked:

"If salt water is a hazardous substance, why don't we prohibit putting salt on icy highways up north? If drilling cuttings are a hazardous substance, why don't we require that all the geological outcrops in America be covered with dirt? If crude oil is a hazardous substance, why don't we tear up all the asphalt highways in America?"

When Hanson cornered Krueger after the meeting, he asked him point blank: "Why do we have to compromise or give up ground on something so outrageously stupid?"

Krueger replied: "Because the chairman of the committee has to feel that he is doing his job."

Said Hanson: "That means that a stupid, oppressive, unneeded, unjust and costy environmental regulation could be placed upon an entire industry just because the chairman of a congressional committee needs to feel like he is doing something. Doesn't being right count for anything anymore? Is there never a time when you stand up for what is right and refuse to compromise?"

Barry Williamson, Republican candidate for the Texas Railroad Commission, attended the meeting at which Krueger spoke and later commented that there is a time to fight — to get down in the procedures."

He explained: "What that means is that when you nominate gas into a pipeline each month, you'll have to get as fairly close as you can to the actual production at the end of the month. If you miss, you'll pay a penalty for the excess volume you failed to nominate properly."

He said that Northern Natural Gas, a division of Enron, implemented the beginning of this year a program allowing producers a 10 percent tolerance monthly. For example, if a producer nominates 100 Mcf monthly to the pipeline, the amount can miss 10 Mcf on either side of that number. Produce less than 90 Mcf or over 110 Mcf and Northern Natural will charge 33 cents per Mcf as a penalty for excess production.

"It's critical for the producer to understand this, because if he continues to mis-nominate gas production, he can find himself owing more money to the pipeline than he has coming in revenues from the well."

Anderson said this won't have an impact on casinghead gas, unless it's directly connected to an intrastate pipeline. And he added that this will require more precise communication from field personnel as to how much a well produces daily.

As to Clinton's plans to emphasize natural gas, Anderson said, "I think we expect positive results from the Clinton administration. He is putting a natural gas person in the Department of Energy, and all of his transition team continues to state his support for natural gas and interest in removing barriers to its use. I don't think we'll be any worse off from a natural gas standpoint. And I'd like to see Martin Allday continue at the Federal Energy Regulatory Commission at least through 1993, to ensure that Order 636 remains in place."

In short, he summed up, "The upside is I really believe the price of natural gas will continue to grow at a rate above inflation and hopefully significantly above the rate of inflation. Some trade organizations are predicting a growth in demand for natural gas and most are predicting a return to normal winter conditions. It looks good for the natural gas industry."

OIL PRICES

Even though the incoming Clinton administration intends to shift the focus from crude oil to natural gas, there are reasons to be bullish about crude oil prices as well.

Crude prices have shown signs of weakness since November and were not helped when members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, at their regular November meeting, made only a token cut in production in an effort to boost prices.

The weakness, said analyst Robert Phaneuf of Rauscher Pierce Refsnes in Houston, is due to an oversupply of oil produced in anticipation of a demand target set by OPEC. This target wasn't met, he said, due largely to economic weakness in the U.S. and Europe.

Phaneuf sees a long-term trend of flat-to-falling production in the U.S. and members of the Commonwealth of Independent States and growing demand in first the U.S. and then Europe as economies begin to recover. He also predicted that OPEC — which he said is producing in excess of 90 percent of current capacity — will have to bear most of the burden of supplying additional amounts of oil.

Like Phaneuf, Tony Annuziato, an analyst with Shearson Lehman Brothers, sees an increase in demand while any increase in OPEC production will be offset by falling production in the U.S. and CIS.

He predicts consumption in the fourth quarter of 1993 to be 1.5 percent above the same quarter of 1992, about one million barrels.

And both men say growing instability in the Middle East and in the former Soviet Union could bring about events that could boost prices significantly almost literally overnight.

RIG COUNT

In the final three months of 1992, the U.S. rig count — as reported by Baker Hughes — was above year-ago levels for the first time in approximatelfy 18 months, rebounding significantly from a record low of 596 set last June to over 900 at year's end.

Most of the increase can be attributed to Section 29 tax credit drilling for tight sands gas and, with the expiration of that credit, a significant decline in the rig count is expected early this year.

But, Ike Kerridge, vice president with Baker Hughes, is upbeat about U.S. drilling activity.

He said the company expects the average rig count in 1993 to rise about 7 percent to a range of 760 to 780 rigs; in 1992 the rig count average was between 710 and 715. He said the forecast is, of course, based on continued satisfactory natural gas prices and the benefits of partial relief under the Alternative Minimum Tax enacted in the new National Energy Policy.

Leroy Peterson of Midland's Peterson Drilling is also optimistic, and believes relief under the AMT will help the Permian Basin rig count. He said tight sands gas tax credits may have expired but that doesn't mean all the rigs will be stacked.

Peterson cites as reasons for optimism the fact that some tight sands gas drilling will continue and strong natural gas prices will also boost gas drilling.

In addition, advances in 3-D seismic will help sell prospects, boosting drilling activity.

And finally, Peterson said, drilling activity will be helped by property divestitures by the majors as they concentrate overseas.

The new owners of these properties — primarily smaller independents — will evaluate new acquisitions and possibly rework existing wells or drill additional wells on the leases, projects that weren't economically feasible for the majors, he noted.

Kerridge also expects activity to get a sharp boost from advances in horizontal and directional drilling, especially as the applications are increasingly used in waterflood projects and other specialized cases.

Baker Hughes forecasts that horizontal drilling will be the fastest growing segment of the drilling industry.

Accounting change brings Dresser loss

DALLAS (AP) — Dresser Industries Inc. said Wednesday it lost $365.5 million in its 1992 fiscal year after a $394 million charge for a mandated accounting rule change.

The company reported slightly lower sales and service revenues for both the year and fourth quarter ending Oct. 31.

In addition to the charge for complying with new rules on retiree benefits and deferred tax liability, Dresser incurred a one-time charge of $50 million for restructuring and ending some operations not associated with its core energy service business.

The company lost $4.5 million, or 3 cents per share, in the fourth quarter. Dresser earned $60.5 million, or 45 cents per share, in the same period last year.

Sales were $1.01 billion, down from $1.07 billion a year ago.

Chief executive John Murphy said Dresser had a stronger performance from its manufactured products segment along with its M.W. Kellogg and Western Atlas International subsidiaries. But they were offset by weakness in domestic oilfield service operations and the special charges.

The company's annual loss amounts to $2.70 per share. In fiscal 1991, the company earned $146.8 million, or $1.09 per share.

Year-end sales were $3.80 billion compared to $3.97 billion a year ago.

PITTS: Time comes to fight

trenches and go at it toe-to-toe.

"Sometimes it's better to lose it all in a good political fight than to 'win' a little bit in a compromise," Williamson said. "Next time they come after you, they'll know they're in for a fight. If they know they're in for a fight every time they come for you, eventually they'll stop making you the whipping boy."

That's a possibility the oil industry would cherish. Oilmen almost unanimously agree that the oil industry is Washington's favorite whipping boy.

It's a political law: If you go looking for a compromise, you'll get one every time. If you get nothing but compromises, you half lose every time. Enough compromises and you lose it all.

I don't doubt Bob Krueger is a friend of the oil industry. He has enthusiastically taken up a number of oil patch causes, including decontrol of natural gas, repeal of the Windfall Profits Tax and now "hazardous" drilling fluids.

But perhaps he, and all our other politicians, have become too attuned to the art of compromise.

Bob Krueger, for all his negotiating on behalf of the Texas oil industry during the Carter years, voted for the Windfall Profits Tax. He compromised because he thought plow back provisions would somehow mitigate the evil of the tax.

But if Krueger is guilty of signing on too quickly to the compromise process, perhaps the oil industry itself is equally guilty. When was the last time the oil industry became outraged, indignantly self-righteous and pulled all the plugs in a bloody win-or-lose battle against the insanity and tyranny of liberal oil haters?

Most often, friendly politicians have been asked to negotiate the best compromise possible. Those who think the oil industry is winning would do well to count the political trophies.

So maybe it is time the industry stopped being so passive and played some hardball. It might win us a little respect. What's to lose — a wonderful public image? Friends?

J & B Trailers & Equipment Inc. Opens in Lubbock

Odessa based J & B Trailers & Equipment, Inc. is expanding their operations into the Lubbock market according to Jim Boyd, owner and general manager.

The new location will be the old Hobbs-Fruehauf facility located at 5619 Avenue A.

In April of 1990, the Fruehauf Trailer Corp. decided to close the Hobbs-Fruehauf Trailer Branch, which had been located for over 34 years at 5619 Avenue A and whose presence had served the Trucking Industry in Lubbock for over 50 years.

In May of this year Boyd had the opportunity to purchase the Fruehauf Trailer Operations Branch located in Odessa, Texas and has been doing business as "J & B TRAILERS & EQUIPMENT, INC." as a full-line Fruehauf Dealer serving the Odessa-Midland area.

Several of the former Hobbs/Fruehauf Employees are going to work for us, and our Parts Operation will be under the direction of Mauricio Trejo. Mauricio was the Parts Manager for Hobbs/Fruehauf for 5 years before the Branch was closed.

Jim has over 24 years experience in the Trailer and Truck Equipment business. He started with Hobbs Trailers in Lubbock in 1968 while attending Texas Tech. He held several positions, including Shop Foreman and Truck Equipment Manager before transferring to the Fruehauf Branch in Odessa in 1990 when he accepted the position of Branch Manager.

Jim reports that the Parts Department in Lubbock was opened and in operation on December 15th and he plans to have a full Service and Sales Staff in place by January 15th and eventually will employ a total of 20-25 full time employees.

We will specialize in a complete line of ALL TRAILER PARTS as well as the full line of Fruehauf Trailer parts. We will feature a complete selection of Truck Equipment including Mabar Dump Bodies, Harsh Hydraulic Hoists, and we are the Authorized Dealer for STAHL Utility Truck Bodies.

As a Full-line Fruehauf Dealer we will offer Sales and Service on any of the Fruehauf New Trailer line as well as all types of Used Trailers.

We invite all our old Friends and Customers to give us a call or come by and visit and see if we can be of service to them.

Kelly Maclaskey Oilfield Services, Inc. Is A Family Tradition

In the "pre-boom" year of 1977, Kelly Maclaskey formed Mclaskey Vacuum Tank Service. This followed a hitch working several years for his father, the late Bill Maclaskey, at Maclaskey Vacuum Transport.

Starting with a vacuum truck hauling water to Kansas rotaries and cleaning tanks, the El Dorado Kansas company steadily grew to include hot oilers, transports, and crude oil purchasing and transportation, servicing over 400 leases in the Mid Continent area.

In the mid 1980's, the name was changed to Kelly Maclaskey Oilfield Services, Inc. to better identify the scope of the operation.

In March of 1992, operations were expanded into the Permian Basin with the opening of offices and yard facilities in Hobbs, New Mexico, offering the same quality service that the company has been noted for.

As a third generation oilman, he takes pride in the fact that his family has served the oil industry from his grandfather, Walter in 1924 to his company in the Oil patch of today.

To faithful old friends, to cherished new friends, to those whose friendship we hope to earn, all of us at Maclaskey Oilfield Services, Inc. wish you a good and prosperous 1993.

Few gifts actually improve with age. Your bank sells one of them.

You can count on one hand the gifts that actually get better as they get older. There's only one, though, you can buy at your bank: a U.S. Savings Bond.

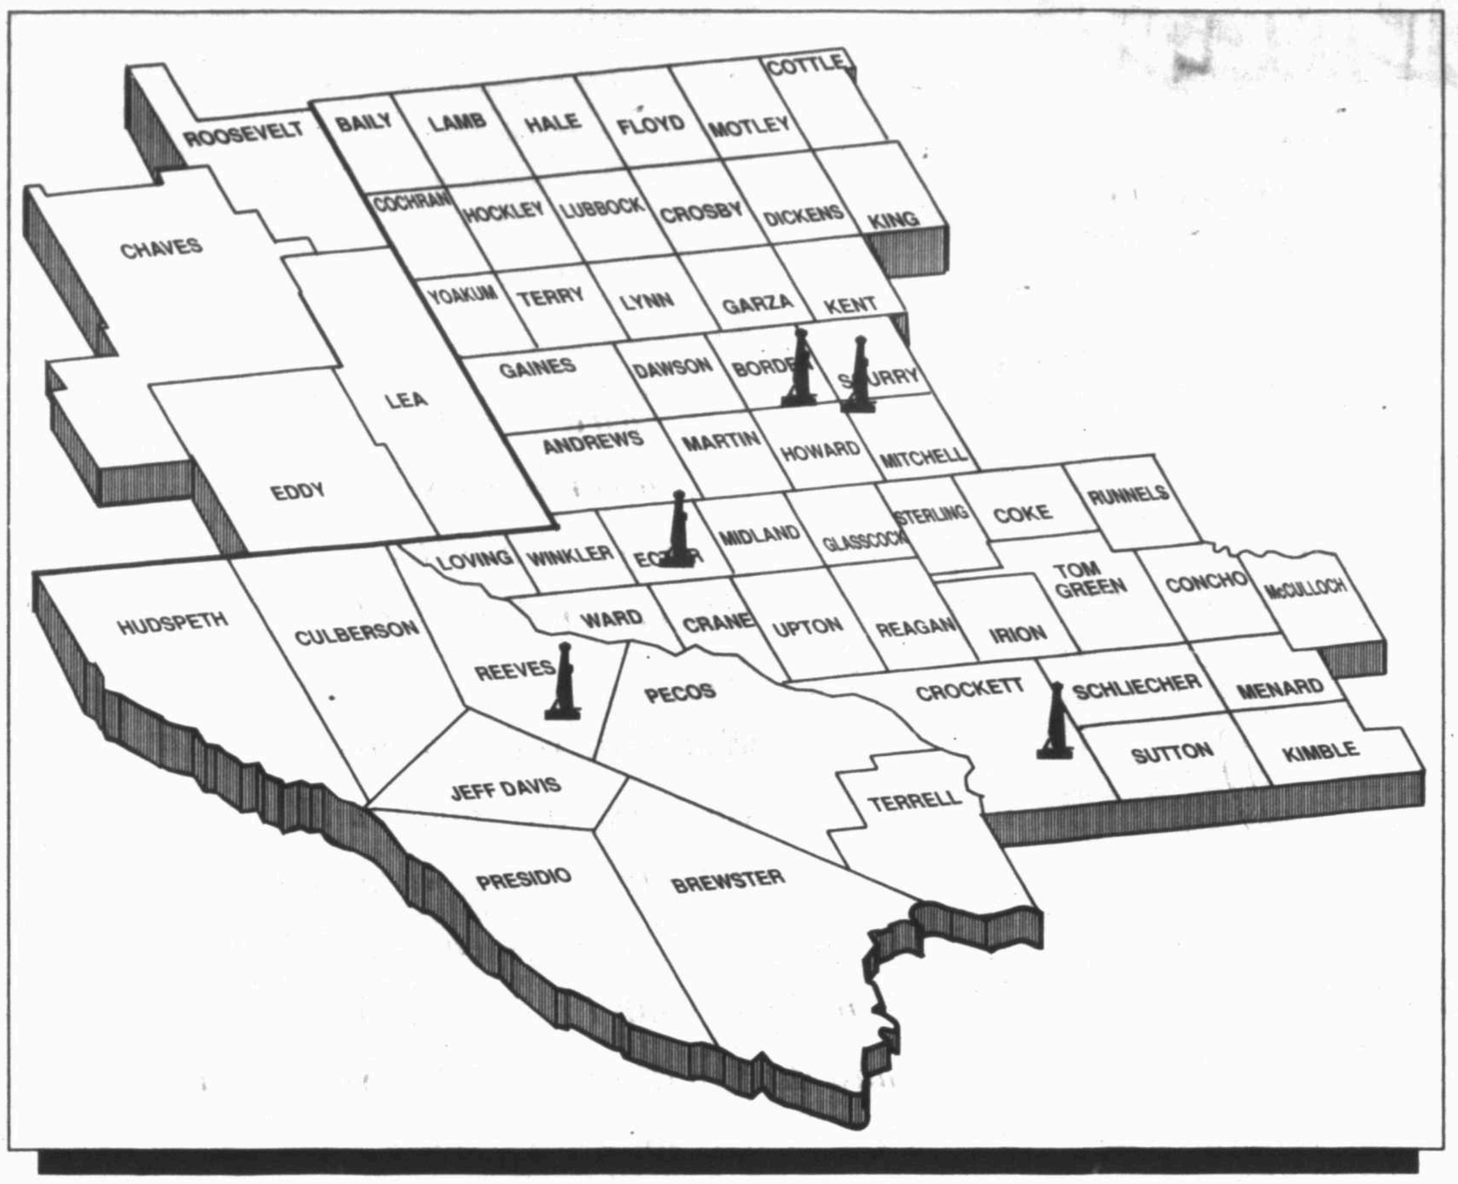

The longer Savings Bonds are held, the more they're worth. You buy Savings Bonds for half their face value. They earn competitive, market-based interest — compounded semiannually, when held for five years or more —with a guaranteed return. And they're absolutely safe.

Savings Bonds are easy to buy, too. Order them at any full-service bank, savings and loan or credit union, and ask for a gift certificate to give now. When the person receives the Bond in the mail, you and your gift will be remembered for years to come. Visit your bank for the gift that improves with age: a U.S. Savings Bond. Duff & Phelps rates Oryx debt

Staff report

The Duff & Phelps Credit Rating Co. has assigned a rating of 'BBB-' (Triple-B-Minus) to the oustanding notes and debentures of Oryx Energy and a rating of 'BB+' (Double-B-Plus) to Oryx's convertible subordinated debentures. The ratings apply to about $1.3 billion of debt.

In 1991 Oryx began a restructuring program designed to implement key operating strategies, lower debt and reduce its workforce. During 1992 Oryx continued to move aggressively to bolster its financial condition. The company reduced its common stock dividend, focused its capital spending on a reduced number of projects, sold common equity for net proceeds of $344 million and continued its asset sale program. Using proceeds from the asset sales and the common equity offering, Oryx has reduced its debt from $2.4 billion at the end of 1991 to $1.9 billion at the end of 1992's third quarter. By year-end 1992, total debt should be reduced to around $1.7 billion.

Despite Oryx's substantial debt reduction, the company's balance sheet remains relatively highly leveraged. Fixed obligations at the end of the third quarter were 69 percent total capitalization, and the fixed charge coverage approximated 1.0 times. With Oryx's financial and operating restructuring earnings, cash flows and coverages are projected to improve modestly in 1993.

JACK BAIN has joined Benchmark Research & Technology as controller for the Benchmark family of companies. He will be responsible for all financial accounting and tax reporting functions.

In addition, the company has promoted DOUG SALYERS to general manager for West Texas Drum Co., a Benchmark subsidiary.

Texas A&M University Professor Robert R. Berg has been named the 1993 recipient of the Sidney Powers Award by the American Association of Petroleum Geologists.

Panhandle Eastern debt rating raised

Staff report

CHICAGO — The Duff & Phelps Credit Rating Co. has raised the debt ratings of Panhandle Eastern Corp.'s principal pipeline subsidiaries.

The ratings on the debentures of Panhandle Eastern Pipeline Co. have been raised to "BBB" (Triple-B) from "BBB-" (Triple-B-Minus) and the preferred stock rating has been raised to "BBB-" from "BB+" (Double-B-Plus).

The ratings on Texas Eastern Transmission Corporation's notes and debentures and Texas Eastern Corporation's senior notes have been raised to "BBB" from "BBB-". About $1.9 million of debt and preferred securities are outstanding.

Panhandle has made substantial progress in strenghthening its financial condition and improving the competitive posture of its pipelines. Fixed obligations have trended down from 1990's peak and should represent less than two-thirds of total capitalization by the end of 1992. Further improvement is projected in subsequent years. Debt paydown could accelerate with asset sales or other strategic initiatives the company may pursue.

The company has also strengthened the competitive position of its pipelines. The change in rate design, where substantially all of the pipeline fixed costs are recovered in a monthly demand charge, will provide earnings stability and lessen the effect of weather on pipeline earnings and cash flows.

Duff & Phelps assumes that Panhandle's pipeline subsidiaries will be able to recover nearly all of the transition costs that may be incurred as they begin operating under the rules promulgated in Federal Energy Regulatory Commission Order 636.

Tucker Drilling takes part in seismic shoot

Staff report

SAN ANGELO — Tucker Drilling Co., Inc. announced its participation in an 18,000 acre seismic project and reported two successful well completions.

Larry J. Tucker, Chief Executive Officer, announced that the Company has agreed to participate with industry partners in a 3-D seismic shoot on approximately 18,000 acres in Dawson County, Texas. The Company and its partners have lease options on approximately 10,5000 acres under the shoot area. The Company would have a 6.25% working interest in the project. Management believes there is a good possibility of at least three drillable prospects being identified.

Mr. Tucker, in addition, reported the completion of the Harris Railroad Unit No. 1 in Nolan County, Texas. The well flowed 127 barrels of oil per day and 69 MCF of gas per day on an initial potential test through a 10/64 inch choke. The company owns a 25% working interest (19.48% revenue interest) in the well, plus the right to earn a similar interest in approximately 640 additional prospective acres by continuous drilling. This well is the Company's second successful completion in this prospect, along with one dry hole.

Mr. Tucker also reported the completion of the Cloudt 55-1, a well in Edwards County, Texas, which tested 1,400 MCF per day based on calculated absolute open flow. The well is now on line with a flow rate of 545 MCF per day through a 12/64 inch choke. The Company owns a 27.5% working interest (22.3% revenue interest) in the well which is one of two producing wells on this prospect which is now fully developed.

Tucker Drilling Company, Inc., a diversified energy company headquartered in San Angelo, Texas, is engaged in contract drilling and exploration and development of oil and natural gas. The company has 12 drilling rigs available for operation in Texas and Oklahoma, and has producing oil and gas wells undeveloped acreage primarily in Texas. The common stock of Tucker Drilling is traded in the NASDAQ, National Market System with the symbol TUCK.

Medical science and technology has increased with amazing speed in the last few decades, and the result is that for many patients, life and its quality have been improved.

But human patients are not the only ones to benefit from new medical knowledge. Man's best friends are living longer and healthier, thanks in part to new veterinary techniques.

One of these technologies is Cardiopet, a diagnostic tool that allows veterinarians more information about the condition of their patients' hearts.

According to information from Cardiopet, the system works in three steps: (1) The veterinarian positions four electrode clips on the animal, then places the telephone receiver over the electrode clips' transmitter and calls Cardiopet's Data Center; (2) The electrocardiogram (ECG) picked up by the electrodes is transmitted to the Data Center for analysis, diagnosis and recommendations by a cardiac specialist; and (3) Interpreted results, complete with detailed reports, mounted and labeled ECG graph, diagnostic and therapeutic advice are sent back to the veterinarian within 24 hours. Emergency cases can be handled immediately.

In Midland, Cardiopet is used in such clinics as Tall City Veterinary Hospital, Mesa Verde Animal Clinic, Shannon Animal Hospital and Animal Clinic and Hospital, and the local veterinarians report a high degree of satisfaction with the service.

At Tall City Veterinary Hospital, Dr. Robert Boyd has used the service for five or six years. "We use Cardiopet any time we suspect a dog has a heart problem," he said. "They have staff cardiologists — veterinarians who are heart specialists."

Dr. Boyd likes the fact that local veterinarians can receive advice from heart specialists, including information on "new medications not normally used routinely by veterinarians," and the newest in cardiology, "and you don't have to take the dog anywhere. You can send them an X-ray of the heart, and never have to leave Midland."

Dr. Mark Miller at Animal Clinic said he and his partner, Dr. Craig Brown, have used Cardiopet for eight to 10 years.

"We normally would use it when we feel an animal has a heart condition," he said. "It's a good service. It allows our clients to have access to a specialist in veterinary cardiology."

These heart experts "can recommend treatment, if any," Dr. Miller said. "They give good advice. Before we send the ECG off, we do X-ray and blood work. We tell them what it is (the test results) and they use the information to interpret the ECG."

In his clinic, Cardiopet is used on dogs and cats, although "cats seem to have less problem with heart disease than dogs, generally."

In dogs, heart disease can be found in any breed. "Certain dogs may be predisposed to certain heart conditions, but heart problems in general are in all breeds," Dr. Miller said.

He has found Cardiopet to be a very useful diagnostic tool. "I like it (Cardiopet) a lot," he said. "The ECG gives a much better look at the total problem. The owner can get much more reliable results."

Some owners, though decide not to utilize Cardiopet because of the expense, he added. "Sometimes they opt not to go this route, with the economy being tough." Miller estimated that the service costs around $50 to $60.

At Mesa Verde Animal Clinic, Dr. Linda Smetak has experienced the same reluctance in some owners. "A lot of times the owner doesn't want to spend the money (for Cardiopet), so we put the dog on medication."

She has used Cardiopet for "almost 12 years. Ever since I got out of school, and the veterinarian who was here before me used it too.

Any time we have a dog come in with a heart murmur or cough of undetermined origin, I like to do an ECG on it. They are generally older dogs, but not always."

Dr. Smetak also appreciates the fact that the service links local veterinarians to experts in heart problems. "They are board certified in cardiology. Most of them teach in school." For non-emergency cases, local veterinarians can get the results the next day, she said. In emergency cases, "you can get them in a couple of hours."

The service is "mostly for dogs and cats, but I bet you could do it for anything that you can put the leads on," Dr. Smetak said.

The local veterinarians listed some of the symptoms of heart disease in dogs that owners might want to watch for. "The first thing most people see is a persistent cough," Dr. Boyd said. The dog also might be easily fatigued or have an unusual heart rate.

"The older an animal gets, the more likely we are to see heart problems," he added. "Being overweight is a major contributing factor for heart problems. It's just normal, common sense stuff."

"We would expect to find heart conditions in older pets, just like people," said Dr. Miller. "We see a lot more small dogs under 40 pounds who have heart conditions than dogs over 40 pounds." However, he added, "more people have small dogs than big dogs. About 60 percent of the dogs in

Midland celebrates 1992 holiday season

By Marilyn McKnight Harrison

As the New Year begins, we want to recap just a few more of the holiday gatherings before Christmas '92 becomes but a memory.

McKnight-Harrison

CONTINUING A LONG-STANDING tradition, Susan and Ron Britton entertained with their annual Christmas sing-along recently at their home on Weeping Willow Lane.

Joining in hosting the party were their children, Andrew, a vice president with Comerica Bank in Dallas, and Carolyn, an assistant director at Camp Longhorn in the Hill Country. Unable to be here was their younger daughter, Elizabeth, who attends the Nick Bolleiteri Tennis Academy in Bradenton, Fla.

Guests sang their favorite carols to the accompaniment of pianist Darryl Knapp. In addition, they enjoyed an array of mouth-watering delicacies. As is their custom each year, the Brittons made a gingerbread house, which was a conversation piece on the serving table.

A limousine took guests to and from the parking area to the Brittons' home.

Seen among the partygoers were Sally and Bill Stella, Suzanne and Mike Conaway, Mary and Richard Greth, Charlotte Welch, Suzanne Givens, Janet and Bob Pollard and Joe Martin.

IT JUST WOULD NOT seem like Christmas for the friends of Eleanor (Mrs. Mike) Morse and Sharla (Mrs. Bart) Hotchkiss without the pair's annual Cookie and Candy Swap. The party, which alternates between their homes, was held at Sharla's this year.

Per usual, the guests were requested to bring six dozen treats apiece. A few were placed on the serving table for sampling, and each guest then selected five and a half dozen of the sweets to take home to her family.

Given by the two friends for the past 15 years, the party this year included a first, a three generational group: Gladys (Mrs. Scott) Hickman; her daughter, Cathy (Mrs. Danny) Norwood, and Cathy's daughter, two-month-old Libby. Among others seen at the party were Jananne (Mrs. Les) McLaughlin, Nadine (Mrs. Tom) Craddick, Marylyn (Mrs. Dave) Leonard, Margaret (Mrs. Burgess) Wade, Lynn (Mrs. Joe) Lynch, who recently moved back to Midland from Andrews, and Eleanor's daughter, Laura Morse.

IN LIEU OF ITS traditional Presentation Ball, the Minuet Club held a formal Christmas dance recently at the Petroleum Club.

As the members arrived, they were greeted by the board, consisting of Louan (Mrs. Glenn) Rogers, president; Betty Rae (Mrs. Paul) Davis, vice president; Eileen (Mrs. M.T.) Stallter, secretary-treasurer, and directors Dyan (Mrs. Frank) Agar, Lynda (Mrs. Carlton, Jr.) Beal, Kay (Mrs. Charles) Bird, Rhonda (Mrs. Lynn, Jr.) Durham, Nancy (Mrs. Richard) Gibson and Patty (Mrs. Tevis) Herd.

The Connie Mims Band of Houston provided the music for dancing and received an enthusiastic reception from the crowd. In addition, a delicious buffet dinner, featuring tenderloin of beef, was served.

As the clock struck midnight, a delightful evening came to an end, but the membership now has the resumption of the Presentation Ball and all its attendant festivities next December to anticipate.

"PLEASE COME BY for some Phi Psi Christmas Cheer." So began the invitations to a party for the West Texas Alumni of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity and their wives.

The event was held at the Midland home of Vicki and Harris Kerr and co-hosted by Nancy and Tom Rodman of Odessa.

Cocktails and hors d'oeuvres were served to a festive group, which included Helen and Judge Ray McKim, Margaret and John Rhea, Carol Ann and Lynn Hunt, Jean and Courtney Clark and Mary and Mark Taylor.

SINCE THE MID-SEVENTIES, Virginia (Mrs. Bob) Jones and Nelda (Mrs. Bill) Johnson have co-hosted a Christmas party. With a few exceptions, the event has been held on an annual basis.

This year's party was held at Virginia's home, and guests were asked to join the hostesses for "Christmas Cheer."

Eggnog, hot spiced cider and coffee were served, along with gourmet appetizers and assorted sweets, such as Nelda's specialty, homemade divinity.

Virginia's home was beautifully decorated for Christmas in the traditional reds and greens, with gold accents. A profusion of red poinsettias, garlands and bows added to the festive ambience.

The party continues to grow each year and has become an important part of the season for the hostesses and guests alike.

THE CHRISTMAS SEASON has been a busy and happy time for Linnie and Art Donnelly and family.

Their daughter, Magan Donnelly, and Kenny Catney were married in an 11 o'clock ceremony the morning of Dec. 19 in Wichita Falls' Sacred Heart Catholic Church. Afterward, a wedding brunch was held at the University Club.

Attending the couple were the groom's father, Paul Catney of Houston, and the bride's sister, Degen Donnelly of Midland.

The newlyweds will live in Wichita Falls, where Kenny is the soccer coach at Ryder High School.

Also announced during the holidays were plans for another wedding in the Donnelly family. Their son, Arthur, and Stella Cunningham will exchange vows May 29 in the bride's hometown of Wichita Falls. They met at the University of Oklahoma, where both are juniors.

In a postscript to the news of Magan's marriage, it was Stella's mother, Gail Cunningham, who played cupid and arranged a blind date for Magan and Kenny. As they say, the rest is history!

AND IN THE LAST but certainly not least Department: They have traveled thousands of miles touring Europe, Mexico and the United States to bring their special blend of a wide variety of music to their audiences. "Who's that?" you ask. Why, the Texas A&M University Singing Cadets, of course.

As an Aggie mom of two, yours truly is hoping you and your family will turn out for their Midland performance this Saturday at 7:30 p.m. at First Presbyterian Church.

Tickets may be obtained from any member of the Texas A&M Mothers Club, its president Gayle (Mrs. Doc) Dodson, or by calling 570-4016 or 697-3689.

DEAR ABBY

Gay veteran talks straight about military

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: All the negative hype about gays in the military is nonsense. Alexander the Great was gay. Julius Caesar was gay. Legendary Greek warriors were gay. And gays have died on all the battlefields of America's wars.

Van Buren

Straight men have been showering and going to the bathroom beside gay men all their lives. I've worked in the theater for 40 years. Heterosexual actors work beside and change clothes beside gay actors. Straight stagehands use the same restrooms as gay men. There has never been a problem.

Of course, the theater was racially integrated long before the nation's churches, schools and military institutions. It has always judged people by their character and talent, rather than by the superficial.

Furthermore, if gays are not asked to state their sexual orientation, they will most likely keep it to themselves and reveal themselves only to those who are likely to be sympathetic.

The legal admission of gays into the U.S. military will be as easy or as difficult as Gen. Colin Powell and the Joint Chiefs of Staff want it to be. I'm signing my name, but if you use this, sign it ... A GAY VETERAN IN NEW YORK CITY

DEAR VETERAN: I think you are probably right. Because so many gays are still in the closet, there are no reliable statistics on how many gays are serving honorably in the military, but a fairly good estimate would be 10 percent.

DEAR ABBY: I have a suggestion for "Cheated in Memphis," the little boy who was born on Dec. 25.

Many years ago a famous writer (I believe it was Robert Louis Stevenson) gave his birthday to a little girl who had been born on Christmas Day. I remember the publicity when that "little girl," who had grown up and reached a venerable age, bequeathed the famous author's birthday to another child whose birthday was on Dec. 25.

I have had so many birthdays that I feel I no longer need one. Although I am not a famous writer and my birthday is not in June or July, I will happily give my Jan. 27 birthday to "Cheated in Memphis." — MRS. S.V.H. UPJOHN

DEAR MRS. UPJOHN: What a generous — and charming — lady you are. Unfortunately, "Cheated in Memphis" didn't sign his (or her) name, but if he (or she) is a daily Dear Abby reader, your offer will have been officially extended.

DEAR ABBY: When someone says, "I'll meet you next Friday," would you take it to mean THIS Friday, or the Friday in the NEXT week?

I told my husband that we had plans for next Friday. What I meant was not THIS Friday, but NEXT Friday.

He says I'm wrong — next Friday means the closest following Friday. Please settle this. — WHAT'S NEXT IN YAKIMA

DEAR WHAT'S NEXT: Your husband is right. I would have assumed you meant the upcoming Friday — or the next Friday you encounter.

What you consider to be "next" Friday would be better described as "Friday after next," or "a week from this Friday."

CONFIDENTIAL TO "AFRAID IN WASHINGTON, D.C.": Heed the wise words of Dorothy Fosdick:

"Fear is a basic emotion; it's part of our native equipment, and like all normal emotions, it has a positive function to perform.

"Comforting formulas for getting rid of anxiety may be just the wrong solution. Books about 'peace of mind' can be bad medicine. To be afraid when one should be afraid is good sense."

Warning to parents: Better think twice before springing for shoes

By Erma Bombeck

Listen up, parents. This will make your year. A running shoe with a spring built into the heel was unveiled recently — priced at $500 a pop. Theoretically, it is a shoe you have to buy only once in a lifetime and will slice seven seconds from a four-minute mile. It's the latest in a line of shoes that make kids jump higher, run faster and look taller.

Bombeck

Children all over the country who never walk anywhere will demand them. Children who wouldn't travel to the front door to let the dog in if he were tunneling under the house will swear they cannot live without them. They will get a paper route, borrow from the credit union, engage in serious whining or anything it takes to buy a pair.

Kids have always been pushovers for something that will improve them without any effort whatsoever on their part.

They go back to the days when Wonder Bread claimed to make them jump taller than a basketball hoop if they ate four slices a day. They conned parents into buying a toothpaste that they actually believed made stars jump out of their mouths when they smiled.

Their popularity hinges on their hair. If it is bright and shiny, girls will dangle from their arms like Christmas tree lights. If they are denied this miracle shampoo, they are doomed to being short, fighting bad skin and having no hopes of a future.

So why do parents cave in to pressure for these products? Probably because there's a little bit of Peter Pan in all of us. When I sit on a stool in the cosmetic aisle, I want to believe that those silky creams basting my face will fill in the laugh lines the size of drainage ditches.

The price of these shoes should make buyers drop dead in their tracks, but it won't. I can hear kids whining now, "I need a pair of $500 shoes for college."

"Let us buy you a secondhand car instead. Then you won't have to fiddle with shoestrings and all that nonsense."

"Oh sure! I'll be the only kid on campus who drives. All my friends will spring to classes."

My husband is a runner. I told him about the shoes. The man doesn't have the patience to wait for a traffic light to change, but he spends three months selecting the right running shoe. Like the kids, he believes that milk makes you strong and eating the right oleo can put a crown on your head.

He believes that with these shoes he could set a record in Boston in his age group. He has a loose spring — and it won't be in his $500 shoes.

here (Animal Clinic) weigh less than 35 pounds."

He advised against a common practice among dog owners. "Feeding dogs table scraps can make them prone to heart disease. I'm 100 percent convinced they shouldn't eat off the table, no matter how hard they beg. It can lead to other problems too, like arthritis. It doesn't help their health later in life."

Treatment for heart disease in animals is similar to treating it in humans — exercise, medication and diet are all part of the recovery process.

Dr. Smetak said if a dog has heart problems, the veterinarian can put the dog on different medications to help get rid of fluid buildup or lower blood pressure, and can recommend a low-sodium diet, "the same as for people." Most special diets for pets are available through veterinarians, she added. "Most store-bought (pet) food has a lot of salt" to make it taste better.

Another possible source of dietary salt is Midland water. Dr. Miller said giving the pet bottled water or distilled water can help.

The veterinarians also recommend exercise for pets with heart problems. If the dog isn't interested in exercise, "go for a short walk," Dr. Smetak said, even if it's only for half a block. "It's better to get exercise than be fat with heart problems."

Newbolds celebrate 50th anniversary

Thomas A. and Lois Newbold of Midland celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a reception Saturday in the parlor of Trinity Presbyterian Church. The couple's children hosted the party.

Newbold and the former Lois Richards were married Jan. 2, 1943, at Western Presbyterian Church in Washington, D.C. They have four children, Janet Ellis of Lubbock, Pamela Johansen of Vernon, Richard Newbold of El Paso and David Newbold of Midland, as well as seven grandchildren.

Thomas A. and Lois Newbold

The couple lived in Bethesda, Md., and Kalamazoo, Mich., before moving to Midland in 1947. They have resided in Midland since that time, except from 1951-52 when they lived in Fort Smith, Ark. Mrs. Newbold is a member of Church Women United and co-founder of the local chapter of Celiac Sprue Association. They are both active in Meals on Wheels and many church activities. They belonged to First Presbyterian Church, then became charter members of Westminister Presyterian Church, which is now Trinity Presbyterian Church.

His wife is a salesperson with Carter Furniture in Midland. They are members of Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

Waterford Crystal: Taking 'a shine' to fine glass

By Michelle Hancock
N.Y. Times News Service

As Jim O'Leary says with an Irish lilt in his voice and a twinkle in his eye: "A good wine deserves Waterford. A bad wine needs it."

As head designer at Waterford Crystal in Waterford, Ireland, it's safe to say O'Leary isn't the most objective of observers, but he is obviously a man in love with his work. When he describes a piece of Waterford, he does so in terms that prickle with sensuality.

O'Leary on a Waterford wine glass: "It's always cold and soft and well-balanced when you go to put it in your hand."

O'Leary was at Neiman Marcus in Fort Worth recently to sign and date Waterford pieces. He's been with the company 33 years, beginning as an apprentice cutter, then working his way into cutter, master cutter, designer and, two years ago, head designer.

Among his designs are the Araglin and Carina patterns, both of which "are doing, thank God, very well," he said.

To design a pattern, each dimension must be worked out and the pattern laid down with pencil on paper. There's no hit or miss about it, he said. Each motif has a name: fan cut, thumb print, blaze cut, stars, diamond and strawberry diamond. In the end, they should fit together as neatly as a jigsaw puzzle.

And he describes cutting as a strenuous job requiring tremendous dexterity in both arms. He says that it is like soccer, "having to kick equally well with both legs."

By far the most popular Waterford pattern is Lismore, which he said is the No. 1 pattern of all crystal patterns made by any company. It appeals to daughters, mothers and grandmothers.

Glass has been made in Waterford since the 1600s, he said. Waterford Crystal was established in 1783 and shortly thereafter began exporting to the Americas, Spain, France, England and Australia.

Skip forward two centuries, and the wealth-obsessed 1980s were very good years for Waterford, O'Leary said, providing the company with its highest production level ever. The following recession bit into Waterford, but the company has coped by downsizing its operation, he added. Still, Waterford does $200 million business annually in the United States.

Frontier wedding customs were simpler than today's

Associated Press

So you want to have an old fashioned wedding. If so, start scaling down your plans. Throughout the 18th, 19th and early 20th centuries, weddings in the United States were much less elaborate than they are today.

Unless you happened to be a member of an especially socially prominent family, chances are you would have been married in a simple religious service at church or at home. The celebratory meal, if there was one, most likely was a buffet breakfast at home.

Of course, wedding celebrations depended greatly on family traditions, local customs and resources — just as they do today. There were enormous variations, says Betty J. Mills, a costume historian at Texas Tech University, but in general weddings were much simpler than we imagine.

She says it wasn't until the turn of the century that it became common for brides in all social classes to wear a white dress. The white lingerie dress popular after 1910 helped speed the custom since it was widely available, not too expensive and practical because it could be worn again.

Especially on the frontier, brides were often under 16. This fact may explain why many bridal dresses that have survived are so tiny.

A wedding took place wherever space permitted — at home, in church or even on the back of a buggy with the guests standing around to witness the nuptials, says Mills, author of "Calico Chronicle" (Texas Tech University).

OBTAINING A license might require a ride on horseback of 200 miles on the Texas frontier, adds Mills. She read old diaries, letters and newspaper accounts to gather information for her book and for a master's essay on wedding customs from 1860 to 1960.

Weddings on the American frontier in the late 19th and early 20th centuries often were hurried affairs that took advantage of the presence of the circuit riding preacher. Invitations were circulated by word of mouth until late in the 19th century, when printed or handwritten invitations became available. Everyone from a radius from 30 to 40 miles was usually invited.

A quaint custom after the Civil War on the Texas frontier was for guests to bring a cake layer to the wedding. The layers were stacked with whipped cream to hold them steady, and this then became the wedding cake.

The most elegant frontier weddings took place in and near military posts when eligible young officers wed young ladies of good family. Wedding cards were sent out. Homes were decorated with flowers and evergreens, and an elaborate wedding breakfast buffet was prepared for invited guests.

Hand in hand with the growth of affluence and mass-produced goods, weddings slowly became both more exclusive and more elaborate. New traditions started with new inventions. For example, commercial photography gave rise to the wedding picture and wedding albums. This process is still going on, says Mills, observing that a newer custom of videotaping the wedding is growing.

DURING THE 19th and early 20th centuries, upper-crust people in northeast and midwest cities were married at church with a wedding breakfast immediately after, says Carolyn Flaherty, co-author of "Romantic Victorian Weddings Then and Now" (Dutton) and editor of Victorian Homes magazine.

"The middle classes read about society weddings in the magazines and newspapers of the day and copied some of what they read," Flaherty says. "Godey's Lady's Book, a popular magazine in the 19th century, published two supplements a year on wedding dresses and also carried articles on gifts, wedding food and other traditions."

Flaherty says that in one respect only — that of sentiment — early weddings were more elaborate than today. The bride would choose "her" flower, such as a carnation. She might carry a bouquet of that single flower, use it for decor and be given jewelry containing references to the flower.

A pioneer woman's wedding looked a lot different from the prominent lady's wedding in Philadelphia, says Georgene Muller Lockwood, author of "Your Victorian Wedding" (Prentice Hall).

An 18th or 19th century bride was usually married in a dark-colored dress, because it was practical. That dress became her Sunday best and was worn for decades. Eventually it got handed down or made into something else, very often a quilt.

Joe D. Williams/Reporter-Telegram

Tenor Joe Duerksen of Crane is one of the guest artists for the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale's third Classical Series concerts scheduled for Jan. 19 and 21.

Conductor, teacher, soloist

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

A decade ago, tenor Joe Duerksen's conducting career as a teacher began with a crisis.

"In my first concert, it was a Christmas concert, I had a little girl who forgot the words in her solo," Duerksen said. "And, instead of just remaining calm and trying to be subtle, she burst into tears and ran down the aisle of the auditorium and bolted out the back door."

Duerksen's sympathy went out to his student, but his duty was clear.

"We just continued on," he said, adding, "I saw her after the concert. She didn't say much really. She was just mortified and embarrassed, and I assured her I didn't hate her, and that we would all get over it, and that I had forgotten words myself before when performing in public."

He isn't anticipating a memory loss when, as a guest artist, he is to perform Arthur Honegger's "King David" with the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale on Jan. 19 and 21.

"It doesn't happen very often anymore," said the Crane High School and Middle School choral conductor. "The embarrassement of it happening in the past encouraged me not to let it happen anymore, if at all possible — to do enough preparation that I don't have to worry about it."

This is Duerkson's first time to perform "King David," which the composer wrote for the theater in 1921. Honegger was a member of a group of six French composers — Les Six — who rejected the prevailing taste for romanticism and impressionism in music.

"I like it," Duerkson said of the work. "I feel comfortable with it."

Other soloists with MOSC include Priscilla Peebles and Tom Laney. Guest artist for the concerts are to be Dona Lee Croft, who will perform Mendelssohn's Violin Concerto in E minor.

For more information or to purchase tickets to the MOSC's third concert of the 1992-93 Classical Series call the MOSC office, 563-0921.

Duerksen last performed with the MOSC in the 1992 Christmas Pops.

"I have particularly enjoyed working with Mr. Rob Hunt, the choral director of the Midland-Odessa Symphony & Chorale," Duerksen said.

"He is a superb conductor and performer, and the Midland-Odessa area does not fully appreciate how fortunate they are to have Rob. Rob is one of the most talented musicians I have been associated with in my entire life as a musician."

Music has been a part of Duerksen's life for as long as he can remember. His father, Dean, a Fort Stockton dentist, performed in musicals at Midland Community Theatre and Permian Playhouse. His mother, Carol Duerksen, who now lives in Oklahoma City, was a homemaker who played the piano.

Duerksen, who plays trombone, began in band in the sixth grade and added singing in the school choir in Fort Stockton when he was in the ninth grade. He made the All State Choir his senior year in high school.

"I had a lot of different goals when I was in high school," Duerksen said.

"My goals were to eventually sing and conduct professionally and to play in and conduct orchestras professionally, and I also had a goal of becoming a composer. As my education progressed, I began to narrow it down to just a teaching job."

When Duerksen enrolled as a music major at West Texas State University, he was a double major working toward an instrumental as well as a vocal degree. He graduated as a vocal major.

"I felt I could never probably get as good with my trombone as I could with my voice," he said. "Also, I had many more satisfying musical experiences in choral music than I did in instrumental music."

Since graduating in 1982, he has taught choir in Crane schools. He also has done extensive solo work in churches and directed church choirs on a part-time basis.

In addition, he has performed with the Rio Grande Valley Symphony in Edinburg, in the chorus and as a soloist.

'My goals were to eventually sing and conduct professionally and to play in and conduct orchestras professionally, and I also had a goal of becoming a composer. As my education progressed, I began to narrow it down to just a teaching job.'
— Joe Duerksen

In 1990, he was selected to sing with the Robert Shaw Festival Singers, a 60-voice choir selected by audition. The singers spent three weeks in southern France studying and performing works by Johann Sebastian Bach.

Then, in November 1990 the Robert Shaw Festival Singers, joined by another group of 70-plus singers (also chosen by audition), sang at New York City's Carnegie Hall. The concert, directed by Robert Shaw, featured the Brahms German Requiem.

"It was incredible," Duerksen said about the time he spent working under Shaw.

"It was an indescribable experience working with a master of choral music on some of the most wonderful music that's ever been written."

Duerksen again sang with the Robert Shaw Festival Singers a year ago. This time the group performed Beethoven's Missa Solemnis (Solemn Mass).

The experiences with the Robert Shaw Festival Singers provided Duerksen with the opportunity "to see how a master teacher rehearses a masterpiece."

Not everything he has learned translates into classroom language.

"When you're in an experience where you're working with some of the best singers in the country and also choral conductors from major universities, and it's a very musically sophisticated setting, not everything you learn is going to be easily transferrable to a small town public school music program," he said.

"But many of Mr. Shaw's techniques are very valuable and can be put to use in any situation. There are some techniques which work best with adults, but most of his musical principles can be fitted to high school or middle school classroom since choral music is a fairly exact art and most choral conductors have the same goals musically."

Duerksen said he wishes he had "pushed" himself more when he was younger to develop a solo career.

"But I can do some of that even where I am now," he added.

He doesn't regret choosing teaching as a career.

"I'm glad I'm teaching," Duerksen said, "I'm glad I'm doing what I'm doing. There are times of tremendous difficulty. There are also times of great satisfaction.

"The thing about being a music or choral director is that I get to have these students for several years whereas your English or math teacher usually only gets that student for one year. Over the years that I have the students, we get to know each other pretty well and establish a working relationship."

He also likes where he's teaching.

"As far as my particular position with the Crane School District, I'm very happy," he said. "And my family and I are happy living in a small town where the people are very friendly, and everybody knows everybody."

In the near future, he hopes to get involved with his wife, Karen, who also sings, in part-time music evangelism. The couple have two children — Robert, 8½, and Angela, 4.

"I enjoy singing the kind of music I get to sing with the symphony choral and the church because it's what I believe," Duerksen said.

"Most of the music I do with the chorale has a sacred text, and I try to sing it in such a way that it sounds like I mean it. I think any sort of musical presentation should be done as flawlessly as possible, especially when it concerns the Lord."

Low-budget, personal screenwriter makes most accessible film so far

By Bob Thomas
Associated Press Writer

Though occasionally working as a "screenwriter for hire," John Sayles has devoted most of his career to making low-budget, highly personal movies. Among them: "Return of the Secaucus Seven," "Baby, It's You," "The Brother From Another Planet," "Eight Men Out," "Matewan" and "City of Hope."

Sayles continues his history of independence with "Passion Fish," his most accessible film so far. An actor himself, he inspires his players to their best work. His visual sense is keen. But most of all, he writes dialogue that delights the ear.

The premise sounds like a downer, but it isn't. A soap opera diva named May-Alice (Mary McDonnell) is paralyzed in a taxi accident and abandons New York to hide out at her family homestead in the swamplands of Louisiana.

May-Alice must have been a hellcat in television, and she is worse as a recluse. Her scathing tongue, made worse when she belts the grape, drives off one nurse-housekeeper after another.

Along comes Chantelle (Alfre Woodard). She's a Chicagoan with a troubled past, and in her own quiet way she can match May-Alice in toughness. They battle like alligators until they realize how much they need each other.

The co-existence of the two women is enlivened by an array of visitors: two ditzy high school friends dazzled by May-Alice's fame; Chantelle's stern preacher-father and her young daughter; a trio of soap opera actresses full of gossip; a local handyman who had been May-Alice's youthful heartthrob.

Sayles, who served as editor as well as writer-director, combines the divergent elements seamlessly, polishing each scene like a gem. He and cinematographer Roger Deakins provide lovely views of the bayou country.

McDonnell, impressive in "Dances With Wolves" and "Grand Canyon," has her deepest role as the astringent, vulnerable May-Alice.

Woodard is wondrous as Chantelle, using her intelligence to live down the mistakes of her past. Especially fine is David Straithairn as the high school Romeo who reenters May-Alice's life.

"Passion Fish" (a legendary inhabitant of the bayou) was produced by Sarah Green and Maggie Renzi. The releasing company is Miramax Films. The running time: 138 minutes. The rating is R, mostly for language.

Motion Picture Association of America rating definitions:

G — General audiences. All ages admitted.

PG — Parental guidance suggested. Some material may not be suitable for children.

PG-13 — Special parental guidance strongly suggested for children under 13. Some material may be inappropriate for young children.

NC-17 — No one under 17 admitted.

Video-store inventories to expand

By Peter M. Nichols
N.Y. Times News Service

Filling the demand for more than just recent movies, producers are branching out to special interests, old TV shows and even soap operas.

Asked about tapes they'll offer in the future, video dealers invariably tick off a list of new feature films to rent. This year, though, many also talk about other things: children's videos, exercise tapes, sports events, documentaries, old television shows, instructional videos, to name a few.

In 1993, dealers say, video-store inventories will broaden significantly to include many special interests. Stores have always carried tapes other than movies, of course, but now diversity has become good business.

"People are looking for a wider range of programming," said Jon Peisinger, the president of Capital Cities/ABC Video Publishing, a new company formed to package ABC television shows and distribute them on cassette. Some statistics show a flattening in the movie-rental market in the 1990s. "As the VCR gets further integrated into people's lives, they want more to watch than simply movies that were in theaters six months ago," Peisinger said.

No one predicts the decline of the movie in video stores, but even Hollywood studios are setting up special-interest departments in their video divisions and are reaching out for new kinds of material to offer customers. Video games are one possibility, some with movie tie-ins. Sony, for example, has a game based on the film "Bram Stoker's 'Dracula,'" released by Columbia Pictures, a Sony affiliate. Paramount will distribute the Lewis Galoob Toys video game enhancers, Game Genie, which heighten the games' effects.

A television network has a trove of material to choose from. Peisinger said that his company would release its first titles next year and that he was rummaging in ABC files for programming. In the public affairs area, he said, the news archives are a source of documentaries, and "20-20" with Barbara Walters and "Prime Time Live" also might be put on tape.

Sports is a popular category, but Peisinger said that major sports like professional football already have video arrangements through their leagues. Instead, he will concentrate on things like auto racing and ice skating, which have programming available.

Another show that might provide material for cassettes, Peisinger said, is "Good Morning America," from which instructional tapes on gardening, cooking or other activities might be drawn. He also plans to release daytime soap opera, a category little exploited on tape.

Not all the shows will be old. Peisinger said he planned to use ABC news and sports commentators and other known personalities to create new programming. Other projects might bring in celebrities, he said, a tactic that has worked well for him before. When he was with Vestron several years ago, he said, there was a demand for new-age material. He hired Shirley MacLaine to tape her "Inner Workout," and it became a best seller.

HOROSCOPE

SUNDAY, JANUARY 3, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Renewed energy and enthusiasm make it easier for you to succeed in business. A partnership begins to provide the benefits you have long wanted. Welcome technological advances. Buying a computer will save you time and money. The behind-the-scenes maneuvers of a third party in September will help romance along. A new home, car or luxury purchase may be possible in November. Plan on traveling in early December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actors Mel Gibson and Robert Loggia, hockey great Bobby Hull, actress Victoria Principal.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): You may wish you were miles away from your regular environment. Pick up the phone and arrange a trip to see good friends. Just planning a vacation puts you in good humor!

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Guard against overconfidence today. Certain plans may not work out. Buy tickets for a play or concert or take a friend to brunch at an elegant restaurant.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) : A good day for shopping in out-of-the-way places. Just don't go for the ultra-expensive on a day that emphasizes the practical. Give mate the benefit of the doubt tonight.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You may be impractical about certain matters. Be more cautious in your spending, please. This is not a good time to make a serious romantic commitment. Wait until you are absolutely sure.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): You may feel uncertain about what is going on behind the scenes. A difficult situation could explode without much warning. Draw comfort from solo pursuits such as reading or a favorite hobby.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Seek companions who are flexible instead of stuck in their ways. Trying new activities gives you a fresh perspective. Urge someone who is quick to censure to be more compassionate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): The emphasis today is on meeting your obligations. A desire for more personal freedom must give way to duty. Check the Sunday newspapers for promising job leads.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Do not steel your heart against someone who wants in. A compromise can lead to an exciting new alliance. Make the most of a financial planning session. Ask important questions of experts.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Take a break and get outdoors today. Active sports such as skiing or skating hold powerful appeal. Do not go home until you feel completely refreshed.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): A change is apparent in some area of your life but it may not be an improvement. Correct what can be corrected without delay. Welcome suggestions from those who know you best.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Taking a practical approach to any domestic problems will stand you in good stead. Avoid pointing the finger of blame. A favorable cycle for creative projects begins today.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Expressing yourself on paper will solve a problem. You find out who your real friends are. Get the most for your dollars. A former pal tries to saunter back into your good graces.

Opening lead: Four of ♡

Follow the play of this hand, then judge South's ability. Was declarer an expert, an average player or a beginner?

It might seem that South's jump to four spades was something of a stretch, but that's not really the case. North could not have much wastage in hearts, so not only was there a good trump suit, but South's king in opener's suit had to be upgraded and the club honors would mesh well with any holding in the North hand.

West led a heart to East's king and declarer ruffed the ace continuation. When the ace and king of spades did not bring down the queen, declarer started on diamonds. West took the ace immediately and shifted to a club, and there was no way declarer could avoid losing a trick in each suit—down one.

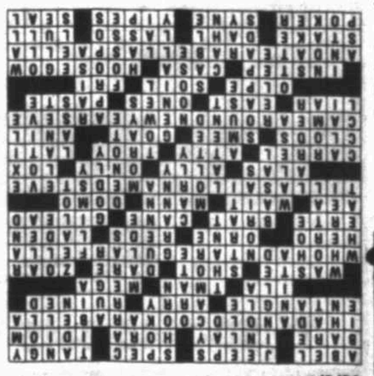

What's your opinion?

Regardless of whether the game was rubber bridge or duplicate, South deserves no more than an average rating. At rubber bridge, there's an obvious avoidance play to secure the contract. After ruffing the heart, declarer should cash the king of spades and continue with a spade to the ten. If the finesse wins, declarer will make 11 tricks. If it loses, the club suit is safe from attack and declarer can establish the diamonds for two club discards from hand, thereby avoiding a club loser.

At duplicate, South should realize that, with only 23 high-card points in the North-South holding, some pairs would not bid the game. Therefore, simply nailing down 10 tricks would insure a good score and the avoidance play again should have been taken.

A&M Singing Cadets to perform at church

The Singing Cadets of Texas A&M University will be heard in concert on January 9, 1993 at First Presbyterian Church in Midland at 7:30 p.m. The concert is sponsored by Midland A&M Mothers Club and The First Presbyterian Church.

A variety of songs, popular music, hit tunes, spirituals, patriotic selections, novelty numbers and school songs are included in the Singing Cadets' repertoire.

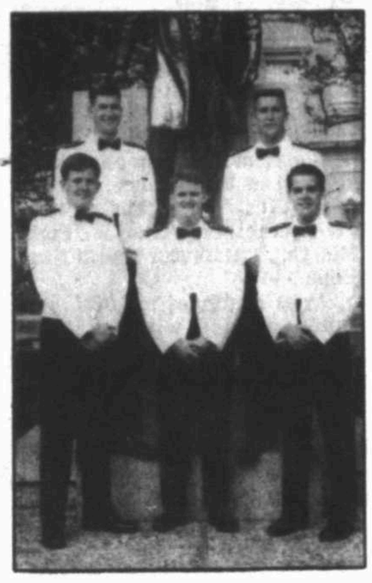

Texas A&M has had an all-male chorus since 1984. This group has been called the "Singing Cadets" since 1940. That year, "The Battalion," Texas A&M's student newspaper, sponsored a contest to name the men's choral group. The winning entry was "Singing Cadets," and the student submitting the entry received a $5 prize.

The Singing Cadets have traveled thousands of miles in Texas, the United States, Mexico, and Europe to bring their special blend of popular music, hit tunes, classics, spirituals, patriotic selections, novelty numbers and school songs to audiences.

The Singing Cadets wear Air Force blue dress-mess uniforms modified with Army brass buttons, maroon and white shoulder boards, maroon bow ties and cummerbunds. Members sometimes change to white dress-mess jackets.

More than 60 members are selected by passing a vocal audition and interview held during the first two weeks of the fall semester and the first week of the spring semester. Members rehearse from 5 to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday throughout the academic year.

All proceeds go toward A&M Programs. $5 per person.

Teen-age comedy doesn't have to be dopey

There's no law that says teen-age comedies must be totally dopey. It's a relief to find one like "Class Act," which has an abundance of silliness, yet manages to generate belly laughs.

That's largely due to the efforts of Kid 'N Play, who demonstrate as much skill at film comedy as they do with rap music. Kid (Christopher Reid), the one with the eraserhead hairstyle, is a unique comic inspiration. He can be as docile as Stan Laurel, yet when he asserts himself, he can be a marvel. His pliant face and moony eyes give him a wide range of expression.

Play (Christopher Martin) is more the straight man, though he can deliver comic moments. He anchors the looniness and keeps the nonsensical plot moving fast enough to escape scrutiny.

The interplay of the two characters is finely tuned. They perform one scene — in which Play tries to teach Kid the rudiments of street talk — that is worthy of Abbott and Costello.

The mistaken identity plot of "Class Act" is no more outrageous than the comedies of Shakespeare. Duncan Pinderhughes (Kid) is a genius and a nerd from a solid, middle-class family. Blade Brown (Play) is a jailbird from a broken home.

They enter a new high school for different reasons: Duncan to pass a gym course so he can win a college scholarship, Blade as part of his parole. On the first day of school, their records are switched, and they exchange identities.

Now the bookish Duncan must assume the role of the toughest guy in school, and the larcenous Blade has to appear as a first-class brain. A further complication comes from the school bully (Lamont Johnson in an inspired parody of the aggressive muscleman) and his hoodlum friends.

First-time director Randall Miller conducts the zaniness with admirable verve, providing a variation of the obligatory car chase. John Semper and Cynthia Friedlob tailored the screenplay to the talents of Kid 'N Play. The competent cast includes MTV's spacey Pauly Shore, and Rhea Perlman in an unbilled bit as a hormonal Latin teacher.

Alexander's parents prayed for orthodontist, support actor

Paul Lomartire
N.Y. Times News Service

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. — With the holidays and all, it really isn't a good day to drop by Alex and Ruth Greenspan's home in northwest Broward to talk about their son, Jason Alexander, a star of the NBC comedy "Seinfeld."

The popcorn popper and the other gifts on the dining room table need to be wrapped. And a Federal Express driver is due any minute to pick up Jason's bar mitzvah photos for NBC's Later With Bob Costas (scheduled to air Tuesday).

And this is a work day. Alex, 81, has his pressed Pinkerton security uniform hanging on the door of the family memorabilia room, which he calls the condo's "wreck" room. Ruth, 72, is a part-time nurse for a dermatologist. Oh, and Jason's coming home for a visit with wife Daena and 7-month-old son Gabriel. (The visit is scheduled to include an appearance at a Jan. 3 brunch to benefit the Jewish Federation of Greater Fort Lauderdale at the Inverrary Country Club in Lauderhill.)

On this day, Jason and family are in New York, closing out their apartment to complete their move to California. On the phone he says, "They're the only Jewish parents on the face of the Earth who prayed for an orthodontist and supported an actor."

But even with hectic being today's theme at the Greenspan home, Ruth and Alex still have time to talk about being the parents of Jerry Seinfeld's best TV pal, George Costanza, one of network TV's memorable and popular characters.

Ruth, sitting on a living room chair, Alex, on the couch, listen to the first question: "You probably see every Seinfeld ..."

"What a question!" Ruth says, the exaggeration making even her laugh. "We tape everything he ever did!" (And for the record, mom and dad thought the recent episode involving George and a Glamour magazine was one of the funniest Seinfelds ever.)

The condo walls feature lobby cards and posters from their son's career. Along with Broadway and TV, he has appeared in films, including White Palace, Jacob's Ladder and Pretty Woman, as well as recently starring in the feature I Don't Buy Kisses Anymore. That lobby poster is framed near the front door.

Sharing wall and table space are framed photos of Jason's older brother and sister along with their five children. Oldest son Michael, an Air Force Vietnam veteran, heads New Jersey's IRS office. Karen is a CPA/controller in Houston.

After a half-hour with the couple, you wonder why actors were hired to portray the recurring roles of George's parents on Seinfeld. Ruth and Alex, though, were extras once in the episode where Elaine (Julia Louis-Dreyfus) thought she had an ulcer. After fasting for two days, while waiting for X-rays, she was fantasizing about food in a scene with extras Alex and Ruth flanking her.

Ruth is asked if family anecdotes are ever offered to Jason for Seinfeld, but before the question's done, Ruth begins to answer. Alex leans over and says, "I want you to know she always interrupts. You get used to it. You don't have to prompt her."

Ruth explains the name change. Jay Scott Greenspan, too long for a marquee, became Jason Alexander after he tried to register Jay Scott with the actor's union and found the name being used. He called home to Livingston, N.J.: "Ma, what should I do?" Knowing Alex wasn't happy about Jay dropping the family name, Ruth suggested he use his dad's first name as his stage surname. Jay became Jason and an actor was born. Or, at least registered.

New 'Trek' series promises creative crew of aliens, humans

By Diane Joy Moca
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — When "Star Trek: the Next Generation" was broadcast in 1987, 18 years after the original "Star Trek" ended, producers hoped that avid "trekkies" would accept the updated version of the '60's cult classic.

Not only was the new crew of the starship Enterprise welcomed, but their popularity remains strong five years later, longer than the entire run of the original series.

Now the makers of "Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" hope loyal viewers will boldly go where no viewer has gone before — in front of their television sets for a third incarnation of the popular science fiction series.

The problem with wooing the loyal fans of the former two shows is that viewers don't have the same affinity for the new characters — yet. But here is a short description of the new faces so you'll be one step ahead during the two-hour premiere at 8 p.m. Tuesday.

"Star Trek: Deep Space Nine" takes place in the 24th century — the same era as "Star Trek: The Next Generation." The series follows the adventures of a team of Starfleet officers who take command of a remote alien space station positioned at the Bajoran wormhole — one of the most strategic points in the galaxy.

Comdr. Benjamin Sisko is a human Starfleet commander, assigned by the Federation to head the Deep Space Nine team. He was aboard his home starship, the Saratoga, when he lost his wife in a battle with the Borg — lead by Capt. Jean-Luc Picard. Although the Borgs had captured Picard and brainwashed him to the point where he was under their influence during that fateful battle, Sisko still considers Picard his adversary. Sisko and his son, Jake, reluctantly transferred to the space station in order to spearhead Bajor's lengthy entry procedure into the Federation.

Maj. Kira Nerys is a former member of a Bajoran terrorist group who now serves as Sisko's first officer. She is aggressive and extremely dedicated to the Bajoran people and unabashedly criticizes the provisional government ruling her home planet. Initially opposed to Bajor joining the Federation, she soon realizes that union may be necessary.

As chief operations officer, Miles O'Brien is responsible for the overall maintenance of the space station. His new post marks a promotion from his previous position as transporter chief aboard the Enterprise. O'Brien is a down-to-earth Irishman who values the simple things in life, such as spending time with his wife, Keiko, and daughter, Molly.

Lt. Jadzia Dax, an attractive Trill female, is a Starfleet science officer. As a Trill, she is a joined species comprised of two separate but interdependent entities: a host and a symbiont. The host provides a humanoid body and the symbiont is a short, snake-like lifeform that lives inside the host.

Odo is Deep Space Nine's security officer and a shape-shifter, an alien who can turn himself into any inanimate object he wishes. His natural form is that of a gelatinous liquid, but he chooses to remain in humanoid shape to perform his job.

Fresh out of Starfleet Academy, Bashir is a human male full of lofty ambitions about heroic adventures.

Quark, like most Ferengi, is an offensive, sexist and greedy alien predominantly concerned with making a profit.

Jake Sisko is the 14-year old son of Benjamin Sisko, an army brat who doesn't remember life on earth. His transient lifestyle has stationed him on two planets and four different starships.

Rob Lowe takes on his own reflection, Tennessee Williams

By Jan Hoffman
N.Y. Times News Service

As reformed sinners go, Rob Lowe is not half bad. He doesn't preach or beat his breast; he owns up, gets a laugh and nimbly moves on.

At the end of the smash 1992 film "Wayne's World," in which he portrays a manipulative smoothie (someone, perhaps, not unlike his former licentious self), he looks into the camera and opines, with choirboy sincerity: "I've learned that a flawless profile, a perfect body, bright clothes and a great car can get you far in America, almost to the top, but it can't get you everything."

Bravo. And bravado.

Though he won't come right out and say so, Lowe, now 28 years old and married to Sheryl Berkoff, a 30-year-old film makeup artist, has been reintroducing himself to audiences this year, trying to prove that the statute of limitations has run out on his Brat Pack period — and the public's impatience with him.

But his recent roles coyly acknowledge that while fans may forgive his stunningly bad judgment in an Atlanta hotel room four years ago (involving a 16-year-old girl and a videotape recorder), their memory is long.

Last winter he braved the chill of New York critics, making his Broadway debut in the National Actors Theater production of "A Little Hotel on the Side"; he played, of all things, a virginal lad seduced by a maid. Then came "Wayne's World."

And this week he appears in the BBC/WNET production of "Suddenly Last Summer," as a character described in Tennessee Williams' script as dressed "all in white, glacially brilliant, very, very good looking," with "icy charm" and aptly named Dr. Sugar.

The role is both a humble one and difficult. As a brain surgeon who must determine whether to perform the lobotomy that a furious older woman wants her niece to have, Lowe serves essentially as a handmaiden to the play's two thunderous characters, played by Maggie Smith and Natasha Richardson.

He cheerfully agrees. "Those two ladies have the home-run parts," he said. "But I brought the baseball."

Some pitcher. Revealing either false modesty or the real thing, and a dollop of practiced charm, over the phone he helpfully tells a visitor what he'll be wearing so she'll be able to recognize him in the lobby of the Regency Hotel: black blazer, white T-shirt and jeans (a kind of Don Johnson-manque look).

In person, though, even with a faint 5 o'clock shadow, Lowe's profile, flawless indeed, is less handsome than pretty, and the physique displayed so satisfyingly in films like "Bad Influence" and "Masquerade" now appears, to the casual observer, rather slight.

Never mind. Though he is married with puppy ("It's a Norwegian sheep hound. Or shag hound. A Norwegian shag rug? Whatever. It's a moving toupee.") and is a 12-step devotee to boot, Lowe still knows how to navigate a crowded hotel bar with panache.

The offer of Dr. Sugar came last summer from Richard Eyre, artistic director of the National Theater in London, in part at the behest of Ms. Richardson, whose husband, Robert Fox, is the executive producer of "Suddenly Last Summer." She had recently caught Lowe's performance in the 1984 film "The Hotel New Hampshire," directed by her father, Tony, who died last year.

"Suddenly Last Summer," mounted as the original, uncensored one-act play, will be broadcast on PBS stations Wednesday at 9 p.m. as part of the "Great Performances" series.

It was filmed in 10 days at Shepperton Studios in England, where the 1959 movie was also shot, starring Katharine Hepburn, Elizabeth Taylor and, as Dr. Sugar, Montgomery Clift.

Curtis faces up to her image

By Jamie Diamond
N.Y. Times News Service

LOS ANGELES — Jamie Lee Curtis is sitting in the study of her new Santa Monica home, trying to get comfortable. The room, with its Spanish, high-beamed ceilings, feels airy and light.

But the light is too harsh, so she rises to adjust the curtains. Then she feels too warm, so she jumps up to open the window. Except the gardener is working outside with a whining, electric leaf blower. So she dashes out the door in her brand new, black-suede platform heels to tell him to stop.

When she returns, she notices a spot of water glistening on the floor. So she flies to the kitchen for a towel, and then she's down on her knees in her beautiful black jumpsuit. After three seconds in the loveseat she decides it's too drafty and leaps up to close the window.

Ms. Curtis, who has spent her whole life in the public eye — in addition to appearing in a string of movies, she co-starred in the ABC series "Anything but Love" — takes a long time to feel comfortable.

"She's very reactive, both as an actor and as a person," says Steve Miner, who directs her in "Forever Young," a romantic comedy that opened earlier this month.

In the film, which received generally positive reviews, Ms. Curtis plays the spunky single mother whose son (Elijah Wood) brings home a recently thawed hunk, namely a blue-eyed pilot (Mel Gibson) who had been cryogenically frozen in 1939.

The actress waits until the noise from an airplane fades. "Forgive me. I'm wasted," she says, smiling. "I stayed up until 2:30 to shoot a difficult emotional scene with Vanessa Redgrave last night and got up early to go to my daughter's school."

The reference is to "Mother's Boys," being directed by Yves Simoneau, in which both Ms. Redgrave and Ms. Curtis play abusive mothers.

Ms. Curtis' voice has a husky quality, as if it were singing harmony with itself. Yet her smile is a subject-closed-don't-come-any-closer smile. And she projects a businesslike image that's brisk enough to rake the lawn.

The 34-year-old Ms. Curtis knows about creating a public image as well as living under the shadow of one. Or two, in her case.

She is the daughter of Bernie Schwartz and Jeanette Helen Morrison — also known as Tony Curtis and Janet Leigh.

Ms. Curtis was 3½ and her sister Kelly (now an actress) was 5 when their parents divorced. The girls lived with their mother, who recently celebrated her 30th wedding anniversary with Bob Brandt, a stockbroker. Curtis, in turn, married a young actress named Christine Kaufmann.

"When you're a celebrity's daughter, you have to ride that horrible line between wanting to be proud of your parents and being ashamed of them," Ms. Curtis says. "You're proud because it's neat. At the same time, you get a strange attention. And when you're forming an identity, you don't want their identity to be the loudest color.

"I know this is going to sound insane, but I never thought, 'Acting is what they do and I'm choosing to do it too.' When I started out, the fact that I was someone famous's daughter was all people talked about: 'She has no talent, she's just their daughter.' Was I tempting that? Yes. Subconsciously, without a question."

But because Ms. Curtis had always, as she put it, "demanded a lot of attention," acting seemed a natural choice of profession.

Her husband of seven years, the actor and director Christopher Guest, says: "At most opportunities, Jamie will be a ham. It's part of her nature. She'll do it almost anywhere. I'm not always there. Sometimes I wait in the car."

At least in the beginning, Ms. Curtis was not shy about using colors from her parents' paint box. After a three-month stint at the University of the Pacific, her mother's alma mater, Ms. Curtis moved to Los Angeles and landed a seven-year contract with Universal.

(Her mother had started with a contract at MGM.) She worked regularly in television, and ended up playing a nurse for two years on ABC's "Operation Petticoat," based on a film in which her father had starred.

As much as it may have been hard to be known as Curtis's kid, when she formed her own company, she named it Kid Curtis.

In 1978, Ms. Curtis escaped the small screen to exercise her lungs on the big screen. John Carpenter gave her the lead in "Halloween," one of the highest-grossing independent films in history, for which Ms. Curtis received $8,000. For the next several years, she ran through horror films, pursued by psychopaths.

When John Landis picked her to play a miniskirted hooker in the 1983 movie "Trading Places," attention shifted from Ms. Curtis' vocal abilities to her physical attributes.

Her performance in "A Fish Called Wanda" marked her as a winning comedian, a talent she honed for several seasons on "Anything but Love," in which she played a magazine journalist opposite the comic Richard Lewis. The show received warm responses from critics but was canceled last spring.

Now Ms. Curtis can lay claim to a new label: The Movie Mom. "I think I've completed the arc, though," she says. "I went from the poster-girl stepmom in 'My Girl,' to a more realistic mom in 'Forever Young,' to an abusive mom in the new film."

In 1970, Tony Curtis was arrested for possession of marijuana. Several years ago, Ms. Curtis revealed to the press that when she was in her 20s she and her father free-based cocaine together.

"It's nobody's business, and I was wrong to think it was," she says. "I won't speak of it again. My dad and I get along great now."

While Tony Curtis did not raise his daughter, he says: "I was always there. We always had a relationship. Jamie had to go through the tunnel of life like anybody else. Parents don't hang in the closet waiting for children to come and say, 'Dad, I need you to come and fix the car.' " Parents have to live their own lives, and you have to accept that."

Ms. Curtis says, "I don't look to him in ways he does not want." She speaks in the tone of a drill sergeant, sits with her neck held as regally as Grace Kelly's, and when she gets excited, waves her hands like a child who has seen a really big elephant in the kitchen.

Having grown up under the shadow of a mother and father who were stars, it is now her turn to deal with the issues of having a public persona.

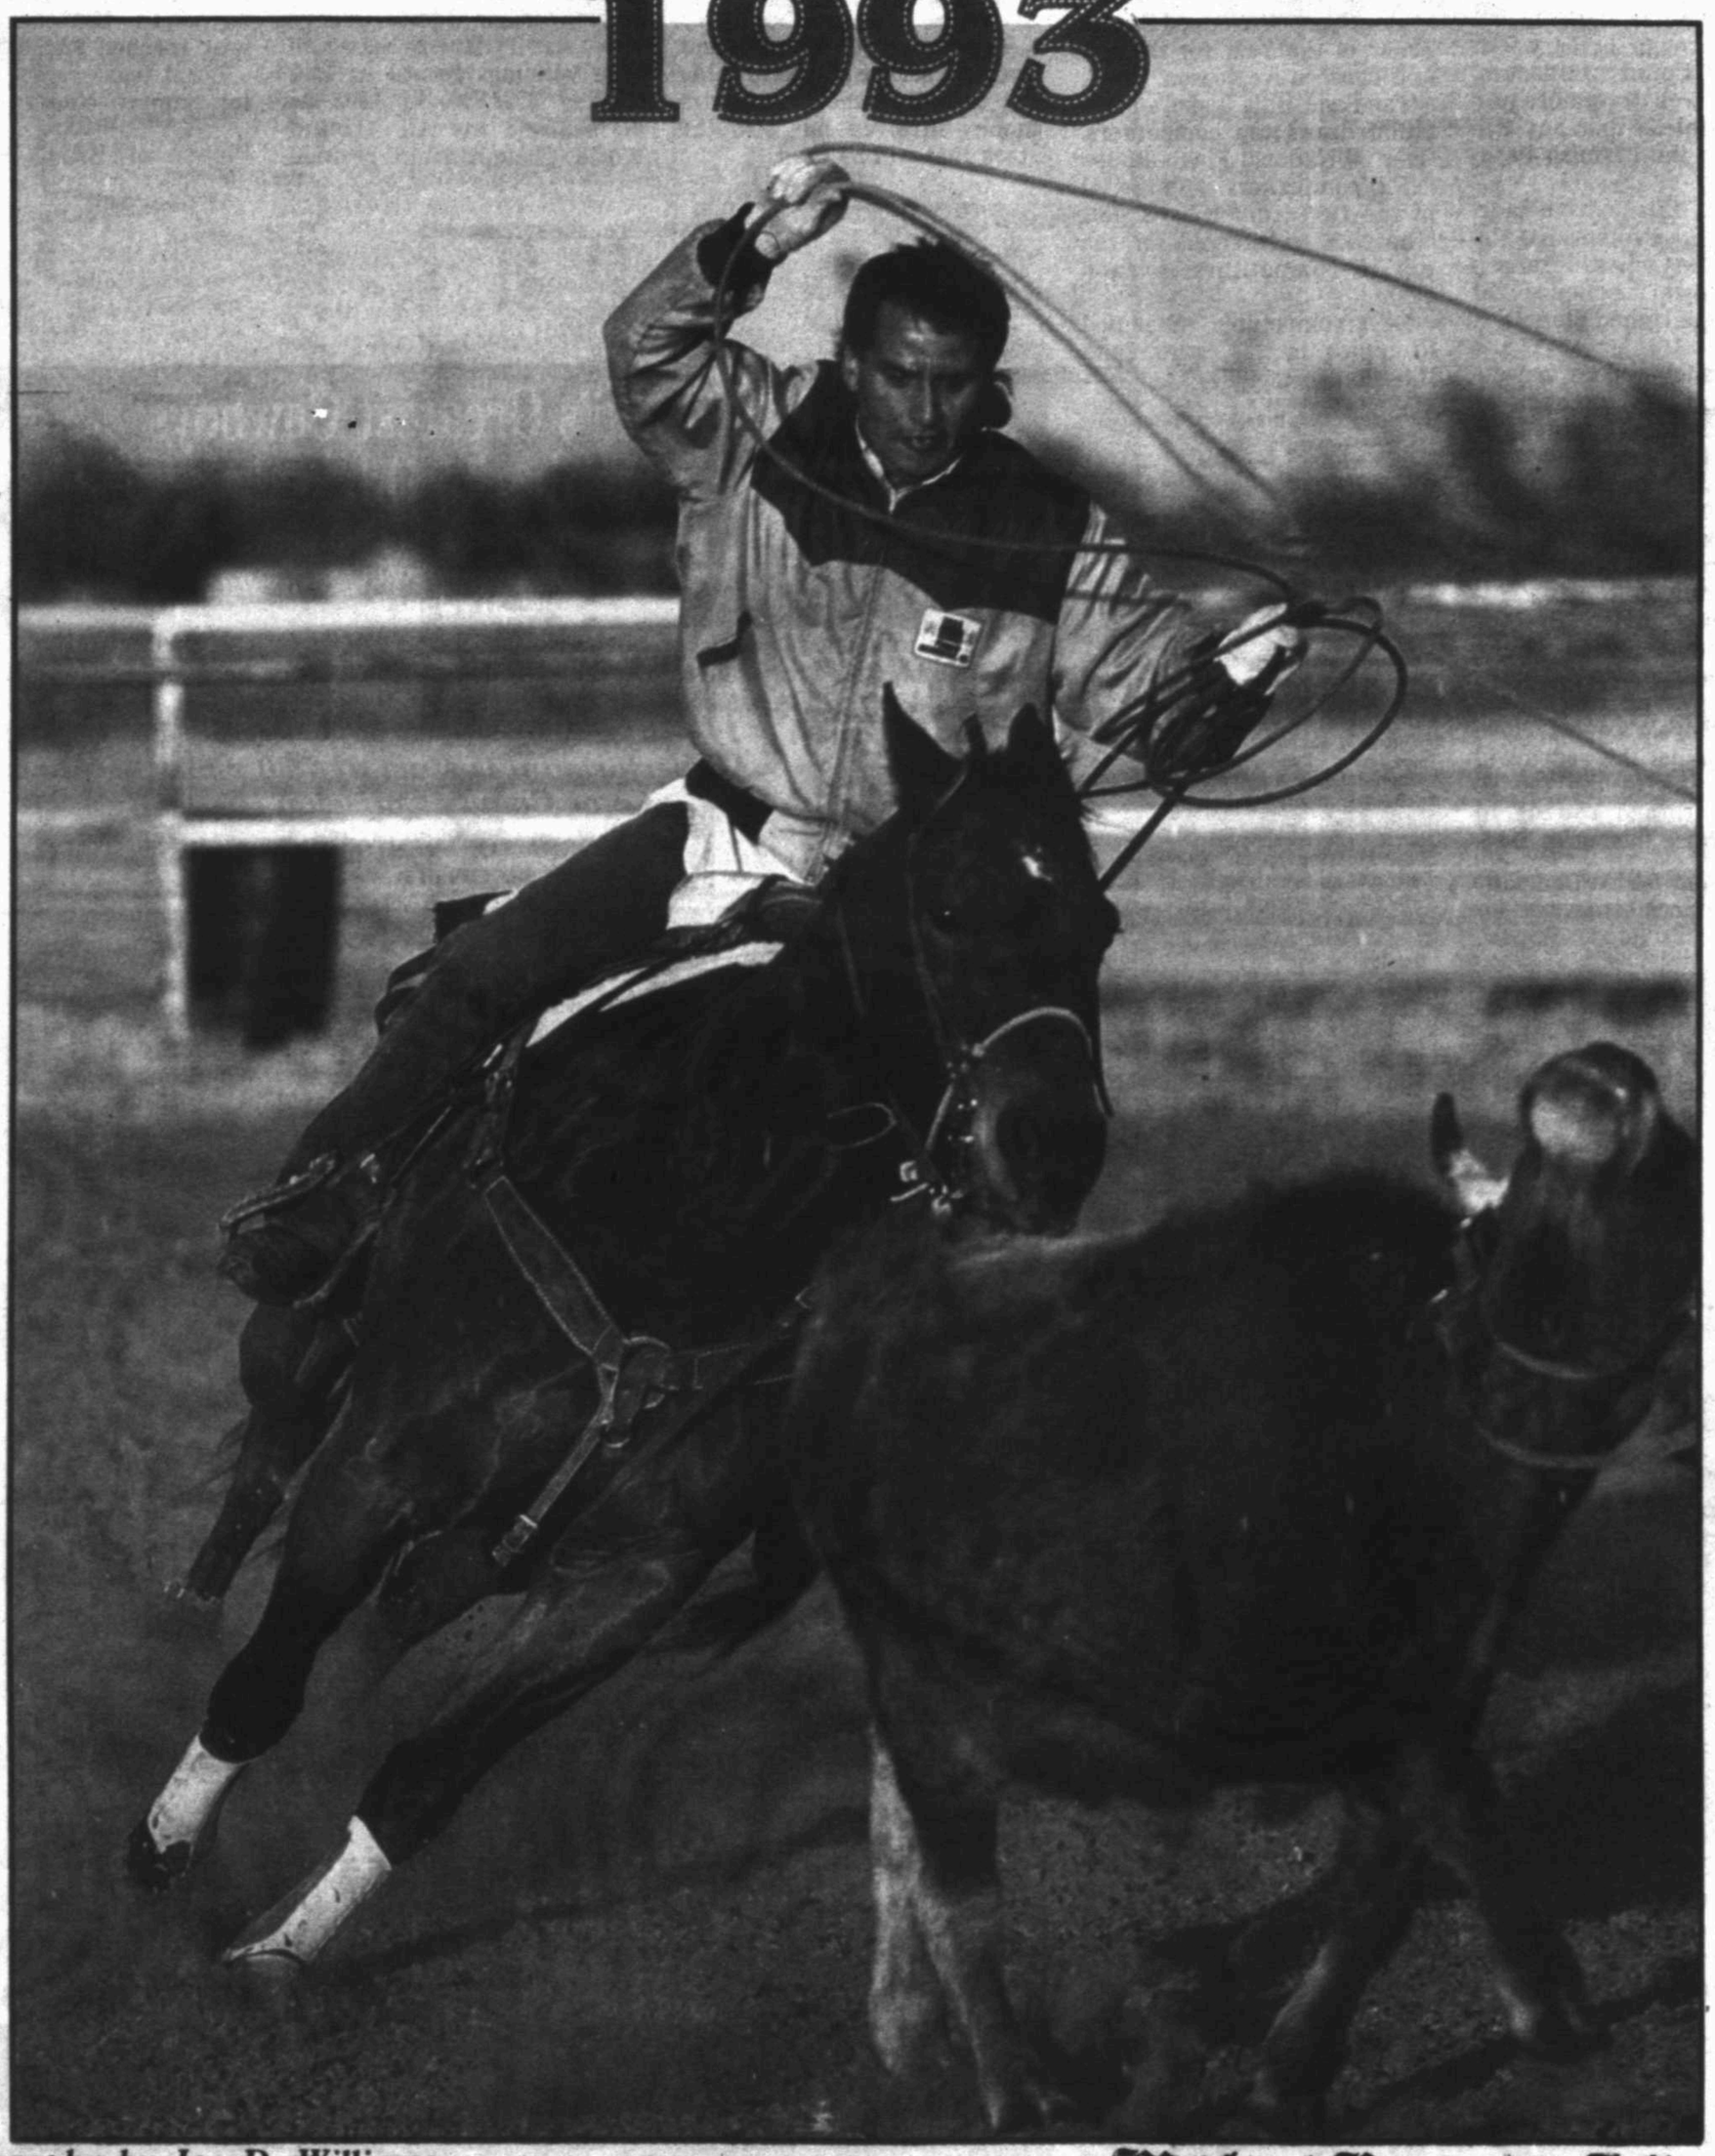

"My biggest conflict in being who I am is that I represent some ideal," she says. "I was up until 2:30, and yet when the photographer comes here today to take my picture I'm not going to say, 'Sure, shoot me with my big circles under my eyes.' I'm going to say, 'Give me a lot of light in the front and make me look pretty.' "

And yet the woman who understands how little the picture reflects the reality admits that she fell in love with her husband partly because of a photograph she saw of him in Rolling Stone magazine in 1984.

Sand Hills Rodeo attracts world class athletes

Julie A. Wiseman

The 1993 Sand Hills Rodeo, which began January 1 and will run through January 9 at the Ector County Coliseum, could very well draw more professional athletes than any other event in the Permian Basin this year.

The Sand Hills Rodeo is sanctioned by the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA), which sanctioned 771 rodeos in the United States last year.

While ranch rodeos are designed to display the skills of cowboys whose business is ranching, PRCA-sanctioned rodeos showcase the skills of professional rodeo cowboys. Rodeo is the business, not simply a weekend pastime, of these professional athletes.

Sand Hills Rodeo director Randy Howell said there should be a little over $90,000 in prize money and 639 contestants at this year's event. Howell projects that this rodeo will probably rank in the top 60 PRCA-sanctioned rodeos in terms of prize money in 1993.

Harry Vold Rodeo Company will be the stock contractor for the Sand Hills Rodeo. Repeatedly, Vold has been voted the top PRCA stock contractor of the year. Recently, Vold's Bobby Joe Skoal was named Saddle Bronc of the Year for the second consecutive season.

The Sand Hills Rodeo's reputation draws top competitors. Over 30 National Finals Rodeo (NFR) competitors are entered in the 1993 Sand Hills Rodeo. (The NFR is reserved for the top 15 competitors in each event.)

NFR competitors scheduled to appear in this year's Sand Hills Rodeo include:

Wednesday, January 6
Bull riding - Clint Branger, Tuff Hedeman, Jim Sharp.
Steer wrestling - Todd Fox.
Calf roping - Morris Ledford, Fred Whitfield.
Barrel racing - Donna Kennedy, Deborah Mohon.

Thursday, January 7
Bull riding - Cody Custer.
Bareback riding - Chuck Logue, Denny McClanahan, Ty Murray.
Saddle bronc riding - Billy Etbauer, Dan Etbauer, Craig Latham.
Steer wrestling - J.T. Ecksterum, Mike Smith.
Calf roping - Roy Cooper, Lanham Mangold.
Team roping - Dennis Gatz, Tee Wolman.

Friday, January 8
Bull riding - Scott Mendes
Saddle bronc riding - Toby Adams, Ty Murray, Kyle Wemple.
Steer wrestling - Scott "Ote" Berry.
Calf roping - Brent Lewis.

Saturday, January 9
Bull riding - David Bailey, Gilbert Carrillo, Cody Lambert, Ty Murray.
Bareback riding - Lance Crump.
Saddle bronc riding - Tom Reeves.
Calf roping - Joe Beaver, Marty Jones.
Team roping - Steve Northcott.
Barrel racing - Corley Cox, Kim West.

These competitors take their business seriously, researching not only the amount of prize money involved but also the stock that will be used.

Successfully combining the sport with good business skills can mean big earnings. For example, former Odessa College rodeo star Ty Murray set an all time winnings record in 1991 totaling $258,750. In 1992 he maintained his All Around World Championship position (based on total earnings), despite an injury which prevented him from competing for seven weeks. His earnings that year reached $225,992.

New chutes, replay screens enhance view

Staff report

Permian Basin rodeo fans are viewing rodeo events in a way they've never seen them before. VIP guests are enjoying new seating space just above newly installed $20,000 chutes. Meanwhile, all the fans enjoy a close up view of the action on two eight foot by 11 foot instant replay screens placed at each end of the arena.

Sand Hills rodeo director Randy Howell is excited about these two enhancements for the 1993 show.

Howell said the modern chutes replace equipment which was installed in the 1950's. Though the old chutes were still functional, the new ones offer some strong advantages.

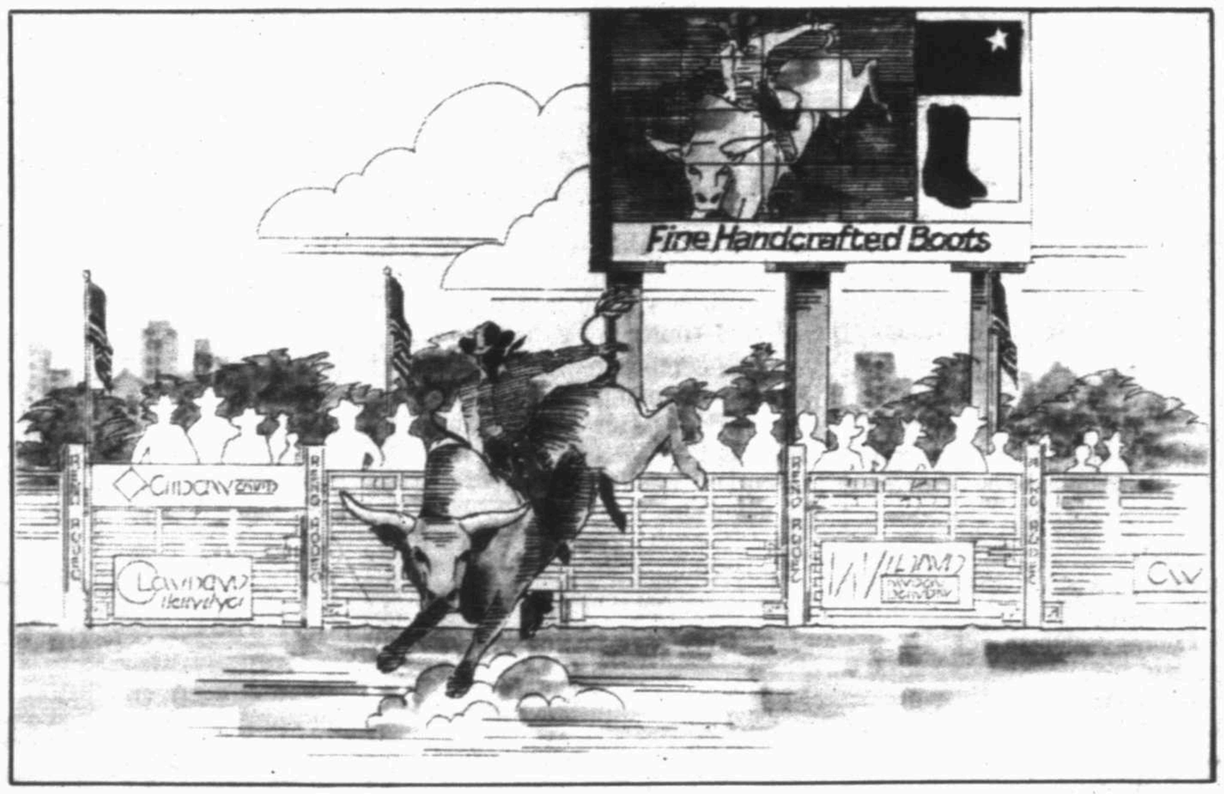

In addition to the VIP seating, the announcer is given a new perch over the chutes. According to Howell, this enables the announcer to see "the center part of the chute from 14 feet above the coliseum floor."

Howell is equally enthusiastic about the use of the video replay screen. Two high-resolution, state-of-the art screens enable fans to relive the excitement of a spectacular ride in slow motion and stop action.

The video replay screens are sponsored by the Tony Lama Boot Company of El Paso, Texas and will travel in a mobile video production truck throughout the United States this rodeo season.

Tony Lama Boot Company has committed $1.5 million to the program and plans to have additional systems in operation by 1994.

Tony Lama President Frank Scivetti says the company sees the screens as an opportunity to help enhance the fast paced sport of rodeo. "It is our hope that the screens will give each spectator his or her own chute pass to the action behind the scenes giving everyone an exciting entertainment experience," Scivetti said. He went on to say the company expects the screens will add to the excitement of rodeo the way video replay has helped football's popularity with fans.

Sand Hills Rodeo crowds will view live action and instant replays on large 16-monitor screens for the first time. The screens are expected to enhance audience participation just as replay screens have built interest in other fast action sports such as football.

Tony Lama's recent announcement of the program has stirred up lots of excitement and is causing considerable discussion amongst rodeo industry leaders throughout the United States.

Stock contractor Cotton Rosser of Marysville, California, said, "I'm really excited about the screens. How many times have you wished you could see a beautiful bronc ride again? I also think the screens are going to promote cowboys and help fans to better understand each individual event."

Bob Tallman, a popular rodeo announcer, said he thinks the screens will help build fan clubs for top cowboys. "Being able to preview a cowboy's recent performances and then join him behind the scenes while he gets ready to ride will enable fans to develop a relationship with a cowboy. Rodeo fans are going to get to know these guys and gals up close and personal. That camaraderie will definitely build fan followings for the contestants."

The screens used in Odessa were also used in Reno, Nevada at the Senior Pro Rodeo Finals.

Extra events add fun opportunity for locals to participate in rodeo

Staff report

In between the PRCA sanctioned events at the Sand Hills Rodeo fans get to enjoy several light hearted events.

Area radio and TV personalities make up 15 teams which are competing in the calf dressing event. Each night three teams compete. On Saturday night the five winning teams will compete for the championship.

Paul Wood of Woods Boots will present a scholarship donation to Odessa College on behalf of himself and the winning team.

To win the calf dressing event a team must be the first to get a pair of bloomers on their calf and to lead it across the finish line.

A wild cow milking contest is open to teams of three. An entry fee is required for a chance at winning a buckle.

Wild Jersey cows are let out at the beginning of the event. The teams must catch a cow and get some milk into a long neck beer bottle. The first team to dash across the finish line with at least one drop in the bottle wins.

A third special event is designed for children. Any child who wants to can compete in the boot scramble. All they have to do is toss their boots in a pile with all the other contestants' boots. The children must run the length of the arena then find their own boots. The first to get the right boot back on wins a gift certificate to Wells Boot City. There are two age division in this competition.

Ty Murray scheduled to compete in area rodeo

Former Odessa College rodeo star and World Champion All-Around Cowboy, Ty Murray, is scheduled to ride in the Sand Hills Rodeo.

Murray is entered in the bareback riding event on Thursday night, saddle bronc competition on Friday and bull riding on Saturday night.

Murray just earned another All-Around Cowboy World Champion title by compiling winnings of $225,992 in 1992. A knee injury kept him out of competition for seven weeks or, perhaps, his earnings would have eclipsed his 1991 record of nearly $259,000.

In 1990 Murray was the first cowboy to top $200,000 in single-season winnings.

Murray is a native of Stephenville, Texas.

During his college days in Odessa, Murray competed in steer wrestling as well as rough stock events.

Ty Murray is scheduled to compete in the Sand Hills Rodeo Thursday, Friday and Saturday night.

Polhamus announcing

Staff report

Boyd Polhamus,the youngest announcer in the history of the National Finals Rodeo, will be the announcer at the 1992 Sand Hills Rodeo at the Ector County Coliseum.

Randy Howell, director of the rodeo, said they are really excited to have an announcer of this calibre.

At the age of 26, Polhamus was selected as an announcer for the National Finals Rodeo in 1991.

He is a former Wisconsin high school all-around champ.

Polhamus feels, however, that he is more talented in the area of communications. When he left the arena of rodeo competition, his love for rodeo took him to the announcer's booth.

how seriously the cowboys take their business. "I don't spend $150 on an entry fee just for fun. Some of us make a living at this... Before I rope I'm concentrating on the event. I put everything I have into it and when I finish I'm exhausted."

Local competitors like Nunez and world champions will compete side by side at the Sand Hills Rodeo as they show the Permian Basin what professional rodeo is all about.

Rodeo performances January 6,7,8 and 9 will begin at 7:30 p.m. Reserved seats can be purchased at the Ector County Coliseum box office for $7. General admission tickets are $5 and are available at Luskey's, T Bar H Western Wear, Wells Boot City and Woods Boots.

Several country bands tune up for Sand Hills dances

Staff report

The Sand Hills Rodeo will be followed by a dance Wednesday, January 6 through Saturday, January 9 at 9 p.m. in Barn G behind the Ector County Coliseum.

Tickets will be available at the door or can be purchased ahead of time at the Coliseum Box Office.

The dances will feature a number of bands.

Johnny Blaine and the Spur Band will play on Wednesday night when the dance is sponsored by KGEE.

West-Wind of Odessa will be backing up the raspy and sexy vocals of Jerry Dugan on Thursday night when KCRS sponsors the rodeo dance.

Opening for such acts as Earl Thomas Conley, Charley Pride and Eddie Rabbit, this local five man group claims to have moved beyond the realm of "hometown band" and into the ranks of professionals.

They perform both top Billboard hits and original songs.

New MCA artist Tracy Byrd and Jody Jenkins, son of popular singer-songwriter Bobby Jenkins, will provide the music for Friday's dance.

Byrd, a native of Vidor, Texas, recently recorded a debut album including "That's The Thing About A Memory."

Byrd is comfortable with a wide variety of music from the classic fiddle-led Texas swing of "Back In The Swing Of Things" to the sorrowful, self-pitying "I Got The Blues From You."

Byrd says he selected Keith Steagall as his producer, because "I wanted a Texas swing sound, which is what I do. And I wanted that sound with a little edge rather than a slick, polished sound."

The New Jody Jenkins Band may be taking their own sound to a major record label soon. Recently, the band was chosen as the best unsigned country western band in the nation during the annual Marlboro National Talent Round-Up.

Jody Jenkins has a smooth, easy-going style which is suited to the traditional country song as well as more contemporary music.

KGEE will sponsor Friday's dance featuring Jody Jenkins and Byrd.

On Saturday the Rodeo Dance sponsored by KCDQ will feature the Nashville Sounds.

Besides the standard steel guitar, fiddle, lead and bass guitars and drums, the Nashville Sounds switch off to trumpet, piano and trombone combinations which allow many variations in their music.

This band has opened shows for Willie Nelson, John Conlee, Ricky Skaggs, T. Graham Brown, Rodney Crowell, Conway Twitty and Tammy Wynette.

Tracy Byrd and his Texas swing sound will be featured at Friday night's rodeo dance in Barn G behind the Ector County Coliseum.

Odessa artist Jerry Dugan and West-Wind will be performing Billboard hits along with their own material on Thursday night at the rodeo dance.

Nashville Sounds will bring a variety of music to Barn G on Saturday night. They often switch off between traditional country sounds and that of trumpet, piano and trombone combinations.

Coors Rodeo

Rodeos bring excitement and thrills to small towns and big cities. They create a yearning in the young cowboy's heart that won't cease till he rides his first bronc, ropes his first calf. Offering a glimpse into America's past, rodeo attracts the young at heart, the old of spirit.

For years, Coors, The Rocky Mountain Legend, has been a proud supporter of American rodeo. For over 100 years, Coors has been brewing the finest tasting beer in the West. Our commitment to quality has made Coors the first choice in beers... from cafes in Manhattan to campfires in Montana. The original taste of Coors and the thrill of the rodeo—two great American legends.

Function dictates much of rodeo fashion

Julie A. Wiseman

With country music's increase in popularity, interest in western wear has picked up among the general population in the 1990s. Among rodeo cowboys and cowgirls, western wear has been in style for years.

For these individuals western attire is more than a fashion statement. It also meets certain functional needs.

The wide hat brim is designed to protect the cowboy from the sun and rain. The cowboy hat also has a deep crown which leaves air space to keep his head cool.

Over the years a wide variety of styles have served these purposes. The most popular style right now, according to Larry Luskey of Luskey's Western Store, is the black gold 20X with a wide brim and a gentle curve on the edges. Many recognize it as the George Strait style.

The shirt is where a cowboy or cowgirl can really show their individuality.

Bright colors and bold patterns are the leading sellers. Stripes are particularly hot whether it's a chest stripe going across the middle of the shirt or a vertical stripe of bright colors. Solids remain a popular choice, also.

Cowgirls are likely to be more diverse in their selection, according to Luskey. Crop tops and key hole designs are popular variations of the traditional top.

Details on shirts can vary greatly. Most of the younger cowboys tend to choose buttons rather than snaps. The amount of design in the yoke varies.

Despite the wide variety you will see in shirts at the rodeo, one thing will always be the same. Rodeo contestants will always have long sleeves, which are required by Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association rules.

Trends are set both by country singers like George Strait and Clint Black as well as rodeo stars such as Ty Murray. When Ty Murray began wearing Larry Mahan shirts, Luskey said, people were asking specifically for that line.

Often a manufacturer will get a highly visible person in the rodeo or country music industry to wear a particular style which they want promoted. So, Luskey said, it's debatable who sets the trends - the stars or the shirt makers.

Rodeo cowboys are fairly uniform when it comes to jeans. Wrangler cowboy cut jeans tend to be the most popular choice. Part of this is due to design. These jeans are bigger in the knee, hips and thighs to make horse riding more comfortable. The leg is cut to make it easy to pull over a boot.

Advertising Age (May 25, 1992, p.38) also credits Wrangler's 45 year association with the Professional Rodeo Cowboy's Association for much of the popularity.

Local rodeo competitor Sammy Nunez says a few cowboys are going to "fancier" jeans.

While the men stick almost exclusively with the Wrangler jeans, the cowgirls who compete in barrel racing select from a wider range of jeans. Rocky Mountain jeans and Panhandle Slims with more decorative stitching seem to be popular with the ladies. The narrower belt loops found on many of these jeans do prevent the women from wearing their trophy buckles.

Belt styles vary from simple leather designs to highly decorated leather to laced belts. A rodeo cowboy is likely to have a prize buckle on whichever belt he chooses.

Ropers are the most popular boots. Black is the strongest seller among the men, while women will tend to choose boots to match their outfits, Luskey said.

The low heel makes the Roper more comfortable according to Nunez. "It feels like you're wearing a shoe, instead of a boot," he explained.

Luskey pointed out that ropers are designed to help the cowboy get on and off the horse quickly.

From year to year, slight variations may be found in the wear of a rodeo cowboy. The function remains the same - to enable the cowboy or cowgirl to make the best time or earn the highest points and do it safely and comfortably.

Dale Smith and Kati Caudle of Luskey's Western Store model the fashions many rodeo fans will be wearing this week. Caudle sports roper boots, Rocky Mountain jeans with a narrow leather belt and a western top with extra detail on the pockets. Smith also wears ropers and a bold western shirt. He adds an initial buckle and a George Strait style black hat.

Rodeo's new popularity spurs need for fan education

Staff report

With rodeo being ranked as one of the world's fastest-growing sports, rodeo promoters are emphasizing the need to involve and educate the spectators.

Sand Hills Rodeo Director Randy Howell sees at least two ways this task can be accomplished: by using the Tony Lama Instant Video Replay Screens and by simply providing information about the rodeo events.

"The replay screens allow us to run replays in slow motion and explain why something was a good ride," Howell said.

World Champion Bullrider Tuff Hedeman sees similar benefits to using the screen. "I think being able to simply and briefly demonstrate in slow-motion why a saddle bronc rider scored the way he did or show a calf roper's horse breaking the barrier is going to result in fans getting more involved in the sport. Educating an audience about the finer points of each event is only going to increase the level of involvement each spectator can enjoy.," Hedeman said.

Here's a guide to help new spectators know what to watch for on the big replay screens.

The Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association (PRCA) sanctions seven events in two catagories.

The first category, riding events, includes bareback riding, saddle bronc riding and bull riding. These are often called roughstock events and are scored by judges so that the highest scorer wins.

The rider must stay on the animal for eight full seconds or no score is awarded. The stock's performance accounts for one half of the score, making the stock drawn by the cowboy a very important factor in the competition.

All other sanctioned events fall under the category of timed events. Thus, the shorter the time used to complete the event, the greater the chance of winning calf roping, steer wrestling, team roping and barrel racing.

Here's an overview of each event:

Calf Roping- The contestant starts behind a barrier and begins to chase the calf after the animal is given a predetermined head start.

He ropes the calf then dismounts to catch the calf, flank it and tie any three of its legs together using a "pigging string." When the roper finishes his tie, he throws his hands in the air to signal the judge.

The contestant must then remount his horse and allow the rope to become slack. If the calf kicks free within six seconds the run is invalid.

Team Roping- Two cowboys, a "header" and a "heeler" work together in this event. The header must first rope the steer around the head and one horn, around the neck or around both horns.

After the header rides off to the left, changing the steer's direction and having it move forward, the heeler moves in and ropes both hind legs.

If only one leg is caught a five second penalty is accessed.

If the heeler tosses his rope before the steer's direction changes the team is disqualified.

Steer Wrestling- The steer wrestler also starts behind a barrier and is required to give the animal a designated head start. A 10 second penalty is accessed for a broken barrier.

The bulldogger's objective is to pull even with the steer, ease down off of his horse and grab the steer's horns as he digs his heels into the dirt to stop the animal's momentum. Meanwhile, his "hazer," another horseback cowboy, is keeping the steer from veering away. After the catch, the steer wrestler strives to bring the steer to a stop or change its direction before he throws the animal.

Barrel Racing- Judging of this event is based strictly on speed. Three barrels are placed in a cloverleaf pattern. The horse and rider begin in an alleyway, then circle each barrel and return to the start/finish line.

A rider may touch or tip a barrel, but if the barrel is turned over a five-second penalty is added to the time.

Saddle Bronc Riding- Timing and control are both judged in this event. Spurring which is synchronized with the horse's bucking and a long spurring stroke are characteristic of a good ride. The cowboy's control throughout the eight second ride is also important.

A rider is disqualified if he touches the animal, himself or his equipment with his free hand. Allowing a foot to slip out of a stirrup or dropping the bronc rein also leads to disqualification.

Bareback Riding- During an eight-second ride, the cowboy grips a bareback rigging which resembles a suitcase handle. Only one hand can be used. If the free hand comes in contact with anything during the ride the cowboy is disqualified.

The rider must start with his feet above the break of the horse's shoulder. Control and spurring technique are judged.

Bull Riding- Judges watch for riders to stay over the middle of the bull without tilting or leaning back. They also consider use of the free arm and spurring action, though spurring is not required in this event.

A bull rider is disqualified for touching the animal, himself or his equipment with his free hand.
