Takeshita waves as he and his wife arrive in U.S.

Japan to open up construction

WASHINGTON (AP) — Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita is prepared to satisfy a U.S. demand for negotiations to open Japan's tightly held, multibillion-dollar construction market to bids by American companies, administration officials say.

At his first summit with Takeshita, President Reagan also hopes to move toward solution of other economic problems buffeting relations between the world's two richest nations.

Takeshita was scheduled to meet Reagan today.

State Department spokesman Charles E. Redman said he expected Takeshita's visit to "lay the groundwork for progress on a number of issues facing the United States and Japan."

Specifically, the Reagan administration appeared satisfied with a Japanese proposal, discussed by officials on both sides Tuesday, that could lead to the lowering of barriers that keep U.S. companies out of the Japanese construction market, including the $8 billion Kansai International Airport project near Osaka.

Under the proposal, U.S. and Japanese negotiators would begin talks aimed at changing bidding rules, notably the one that limits contracts only to companies with experience in the Japanese market.

"We hope to break that bind," a U.S. official said. He acknowledged that the negotiations could take a long time, "but until now there has been total paralysis" on the issue.

Another official, who, like the first, spoke only on condition of anonymity, said, "We hope and expect that we will be able to come to some conclusion ... which will meet the requirements that we have been talking about in terms of opening their markets for American business and for American bids on these very large, multibillion-dollar construction programs."

"It's not just Kansai Airport," the official said. "We're talking about other projects. ... It's a multibillion-dollar operation that's going on in Japan and we want to get involved in it."

U.S. inability to penetrate Japan's construction market emerged last year as a major irritant in the trade relationship. Congress has retaliated with a one-year prohibition on the participation of Japanese construction companies in U.S. government construction projects.

Japan sold $60 billion more in goods and services in the United States than it purchased in this country in 1987, the biggest bilateral trade gap in history and the cause of the continued sour relations between two countries that otherwise have been close allies since World War II.

The 63-year-old prime minister and his wife, Naoko, arrived at Andrews Air Force Base in Maryland and plan to leave for Canada on Friday.

Before leaving for Canada, Takeshita is scheduled to meet with House Majority Leader Thomas Foley, D-Wash., and hold a dinner for Secretary of State George Shultz.

Takeshita also is expected to appear at a National Press Club luncheon and meet with Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, D-W.Va., on Thursday.

Officials on both sides have billed the Washington visit as a get-acquainted session for Reagan and Takeshita.

Floydada candidate offers commitment

By CATHY SPAULDING
Staff Writer

Vowing to be a long-term congressman, 110th District Attorney Randy Hollums brought his campaign for the 13th Congressional District to Pampa Tuesday.

Hollums, 45, of Floydada, will face Vernon rancher Ed Lehman and Canyon State Sen. Bill Sarpius in the Democratic Primary March 8. The winner will face the winner of the six-candidate Republican primary in the November general election.

Incumbent Congressman Beau Boulter, R-Amarillo, is giving up his seat after four years so that he may run for the U.S. Senate.

Hollums said Boulter's decision to seek higher office prompted him to run. Hollums believes that a congressman should be more committed to his office.

"Voters have a serious choice to make, not for the next two or three years, but for the next 20 years," Hollums said. "They need someone to remain in Congress a long time, to gain seniority, to sponsor major legislation. People need to look at longer range goals."

The candidate believes that the "instability" of the 13th District, which has "switched from Rogers to Price to Hightower to Boulter," hurts the district.

"As soon as our representa-

Hollums

tives have established seniority, they're defeated or they don't run."

Hollums said he has "no aspiration for any higher job."

He added that, at 45, he's young enough to effectively remain in congress for 20 to 30 years. Hollums stressed that he does not want to change the system of two-year congressional terms.

"It means you have to go back and talk to the people," he said.

Hollums believes congressmen have two main jobs — to represent the district's view and to be a

School board to review 1988-89 calendar plan

Discussions on the 1988-89 Pampa school calendar will begin at 6 p.m. Thursday when school trustees meet at Carver Educational Center, 321 W. Albert St.

Superintendent Harry Griffith said the board will try to determine the process trustees will use to make up the calendar.

The discussion will include how much input from the staff and the community will be solicited.

"Creating a good school calendar is a complicated process that affects many people and school programs," Griffith said in a memo to the board. "I will have some suggestions at the meeting for gaining staff input without creating discontent or limiting the options of the board."

The discussion also will include the remaining 1988 school calendar. Griffith said he advised the board to take a wait-and-see approach to setting further weather makeup days this year.

"Because we still have one snow day available (Saturday, May 7) and we are uncertain about any future snowstorms, I don't think the board needs to set any additional snow days," he said. "We can establish further makeup days as we need them."

Students will make up two days missed in December on Saturday, Jan. 30, and Friday, May 6. The May date had been scheduled as a three-day weekend.

In other action Thursday, trustees will:

- consider the purchase of additional school buses;
- receive bids on paper products;
- discuss enrollment projections for 1988-89 and what projections mean for school facilities next year;
- receive a report on students "at-risk" at Pampa Middle School;
- receive an accreditation report from Texas Education Agency monitors;
- discuss asbestos regulations;
- discuss a citywide anti-drug campaign slated for March;
- review the district's annual performance report;
- review SAT and ACT and 11th grade TEAMS test results;
- set department and campus goals; and
- consider joining the Texas Association of School Boards legal assistance fund.

Peet heats up meeting with 'questions'

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Continuing what has become his habit since he took office last May, Commissioner Richard Peet raised questions about individual accounts payable during Tuesday night's City Commission meeting, leading to a sometimes heated discussion with his colleagues.

During the last action item on the agenda, Peet said he thought the Nov. 15 accounts payable had already been approved and wondered why they were being presented again for consideration, along with the Nov. 30 accounts.

He claimed that they had been approved during the Dec. 8 meeting, but other commissioners disputed that action had occurred.

Peet said the action should be recorded in the minutes for that meeting. But the copy of the Dec. 8 minutes approved unanimously earlier in the meeting contained no record of such action. And a copy of the agenda for that date does not list any action for approving accounts payable.

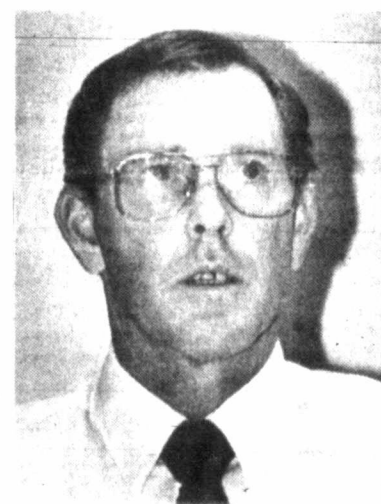

(The Nov. 24 meeting agenda, however, lists approval of accounts payable, and the Nov. 15 listings are in the agenda packet kept at The Pampa News. The commission did approve the Nov. 15 accounts payable during the last regular meeting in November, according to the Nov. 24 minutes that were approved Dec. 8.)

McDaniel

Then Peet began to raise what he said were "a few questions" about some of the individual payments contained in the nearly 50 pages of the Nov. 30 accounts payable listing, each page having six columns on the computer-generated readouts.

A typical listing, for example, indicates that a payment is being made to Larry Beck Electric for supplies to the Parks Department. The description indicates a tork timer #1101 was purchased for $41.55, a tork timer #7100 for $65.86 and wedge clamps for $9.86, for a subtotal payment of $117.27. In addition, Building and Grounds also purchased fusetrons for $44.64 from Beck Electric, for a subtotal of $44.64. Total payment to Beck is listed as $161.91.

Peet

As Peet brought up one question after another, generally as to what the payment was for or what some of the computer-inputted abbreviations stood for, City Manager Bob Hart and other commissioners began to show their exasperation at what they claimed was Peet's wasting of time in the public meeting.

Hart said Peet's questions could easily have been resolved if he had taken his questions to the staff members on individual items prior to the meeting instead of waiting until the meeting to bring them up.

The city manager said the agenda packets, with the accounts payable listings, are delivered to commissioners on Friday afternoons to allow them several days to look over the material and bring up questions "in plenty of time" before the meetings begin.

Hart said Peet is welcome to call him at home over the weekend with his questions, allowing Hart time to check on them Monday and get back to Peet with the answers.

Hart noted that Peet had been told that a number of times in past months but has failed to follow through on that request.

Hart said it is hard to answer questions on the numerous accounts without having access to individual invoices and statements that generally are not available without having to look at specific files or that are not readily accessible at the evening meetings.

Commission declines to call fowl hearing

By LARRY HOLLIS
Managing Editor

Pampa city commissioners Tuesday declined to set a date for a proposed public hearing on the number of fowl, rabbits and livestock permitted within the city limits.

But they almost had a public hearing on the proposal.

Animal Control Director Sandy Burns had requested the commission consider calling the public hearing on limiting or excluding the keeping of the animals in city limits, noting that the department had received several complaints.

But Ed Barker, 1509 Williston, asked the commission not to hold the hearing, claiming the current livestock ordinance on the books is adequate without having to consider adopting a new ordinance.

With a number of his neighbors in the audience to indicate their support, Barker said he presently owns six fowl that he keeps in his backyard. He said he does not feel they create a nuisance or a hazard.

But Mrs. Dewey Palmitier, who lives across the alley from Barker at 1508 Hamilton, said she thinks the fowl, especially honking geese, are a nuisance. She claimed their noise keeps her awake constantly at night.

She added that she does not think any fowl should be permitted inside the city limits, saying she does not feel anyone would want them living next door because of the noise.

Barker said he feels his keeping of the fowl is not violating the current ordinance. But Mrs. Palmitier claimed Barker is violating three sections of the ordinance, including letting the fowl run free closer than 50 feet to adjoining homes.

Another of Barker's neighbors, Bobby Nowell, 1505 Williston, said he has not found the fowl to present any problems, adding that the noise is certainly no worse than barking dogs. He said he and other neighbors have enjoyed having the fowl, feeling they are "a pleasant addition to the neighborhood."

Environmental and Emergency Management Director Steve Vaughn said he feels that Barker is complying "in spirit" with the ordinance as currently written. He said Burns, who was unable to attend last night's meeting, was seeking direction from the commission on how the ordinance should be applied, including whether the ordinance is adequate as written or whether more stringent restrictions should be added.

Mayor David McDaniel said the ordinance was mainly designed to combat problems with people keeping large numbers of animals on premises for commercial purposes. He said the ordinance wasn't designed to be applied to cases where animals are kept for pets, but said maybe the commission might want to consider whether similar restrictions should be applied to pets.

But the problem here seems mainly to be "a neighbor problem," one not affecting the city as a whole, the mayor said.

Commissioners Richard Peet

and Joe Reed both agreed that this specific instance did not warrant a full-scale public hearing. But they suggested the commission could consider the ordinance in a work session to determine if there is any need to proceed further on revisions in the ordinance.

With no motion made to set a date for a public hearing, no action was taken on the request.

In a special presentation, the Pampa Softball Players Association formally turned over the new concession facility at Hobart Street Park to the city.

Association representative Kenny Smith said the concession, built about three years ago, was paid for by players' fees, without any taxpayer dollars being used.

Mayor McDaniel accepted the concession stand on behalf of the city, expressing his appreciation to the association for its efforts.

In the citizens request period, Gene Finney raised questions about the charging of $10 fees in the Municipal Court. Finney claimed the fees were being assessed in other commissioners have followed the request as suggested by Hart and strongly urged Peet to also do so, "as you have been asked to do in previous meetings."

Saying he has confidence in the staff, the mayor said it is only courtesy to allow the staff enough time to check the materials to make proper responses to the questions instead of asking them without materials or resources being present.

McDaniel suggested Peet should present his questions "in a timely manner" to the staff prior to the public meetings.

Amid the exchanges, Peet continued to ask questions on accounts, with Hart replying,

"I don't know. I'll check on it."

Commissioner Ray Hupp, following a "few more questions" from Peet, asked Peet, "Are you saying that any of these accounts aren't right?"

"No," Peet replied.

Hupp then asked Peet why he was bringing them up if he didn't think there was anything wrong.

Hart and Peet also disagreed on City Charter language as to whether the commission even had to approve the accounts payable in a meeting.

Hart said the charter indicates only that the city manager make periodic reports on the accounts to the commission, which he has been doing monthly in following established tradition here. He noted that the accounts had already been paid by check, saying the commission was only OK'ing the issuance of warrants to authorize the expenditures.

Peet disagreed with that interpretation, saying he feels a warrant is a check.

Peet then requested that the city attorney provide an opinion on the wording in the City Charter.

McDaniel finally called for a motion to approve the accounts payable, with Peet claiming he was being interrupted and even asking the mayor if he was trying "to place a gag order on a commissioner" to prevent further discussion.

McDaniel denied that was his intention, allowing Peet to finish his questions.

The accounts were approved, with Peet casting the lone dissenting vote.

Candidate

mediator for people having problems with government agencies. Hollums said Boulder has not been a bad congressman. He said he probably would not have run if Boulder had chosen to seek reelection.

The prosecutor added he avoids "conservative" or "liberal" labels.

"I doubt I would fall into a category," he said. "Most issues are more complex than that. Still, I tended to be a conservative district attorney, pushing strong law and order and a strong defense."

"But I'm not going to vote for or against a bill simply because it's the conservative position," he said.

The candidate said the main issue in the race is the quality of representation for the district. Oil, gas and agriculture are other important issues.

"In oil and gas, we need to develop some sort of policy to improve production of domestic oil," he said. "We can never be entirely self-sufficient. But it's important that we are not held hostage to a foreign country. We cannot pass a bill tomorrow that will improve production overnight, but we need a policy to stabilize oil prices."

Hollums, his wife, Teresa, and their two children attend First United Methodist Church of Floydada. A graduate of Floydada High School, Hollums earned his bachelor's degree from West Texas State University and his law degree from Texas Tech University. He was a captain in the U.S. Air Force and an administrative aide to state Sen. Ray Farabee.

Hollums has been district attorney for 12 years, serving Floyd, Motley, Dickens and Briscoe counties.

"I am familiar with the problems facing our citizens," he said, "and I can provide the type of representation and leadership that will be necessary to find solutions to those problems."

Hearing

cases where defendants choose to take a defensive driving course in having a traffic citation dismissed. He said citizens assessed that fee deserve to receive a refund.

Finney said the city had considered an ordinance permitting the $10 fee but had not passed it. He asked that the ordinance be placed on the next regular meeting's agenda so the matter could be discussed.

City Manager Bob Hart explained that the proposed ordinance arose from a state statute allowing cities to adopt the fee at a judge's discretion. He agreed that specific ordinance had not passed and said no such fees were being charged.

But there are other cases permitted under state statutes in which the judge can assess a $10 fee to cover administrative costs, Hart said, noting that the fee is mandatory in such cases as proof of insurance matters.

The mayor said he thinks the commission could consider the matter in a work session to determine if it needed to be an agenda item, adding that he doesn't think it requires any action at this time. Finney said he would come to make a citizen's request that it be placed on the agenda.

Peet said he feels that the matter should not be discussed "just in a work session," saying he thinks its discussion in a regular session would inform the public about what fees are permitted. He said that as a commissioner, he would formally request the matter be on the agenda.

In other matters, the commission:

- did not hear a report on the Consumer Attitude Survey since Dr. Jerry Johnson of Waco had to leave town earlier than he had expected;

- awarded a bid of $293,450 to Wiley Hicks Jr. Inc. of Amarillo for renovation projects at the Pampa Wastewater Treatment Plant;
- approved on first reading an ordinance requiring a consumer or seller of natural gas to obtain a city permit for transporting gas through pipelines constructed on public ways;

- appointed Lloyd Harvey to the Lovett Memorial Library Board, replacing Howard Graham;
- authorized a contract with the city of Claude for animal control support services; and
- approved accounts payable, with Peet casting a negative vote (see related story).

Mother grateful for neighbor's aid

The mother of an infant saved from a choking spell Monday said the toddler wouldn't have made it were it not for the help of a neighbor who called police.

"We're very thankful to our neighbor for helping us," said Cyndy Needham, 1301 N. Russell St. "If he hadn't been there, our baby probably would have died."

Mrs. Needham said her neighbor, Jerry Nicholas, called police because the Needhams don't have a telephone. The child, 3-year-old Kevin, was having convulsions because of a high fever. He currently is being held for observation at Coronado Hospital, but Mrs. Needham said she hopes the boy will be released today.

Pampa police had reported that Patrolman Bryan Hedrick arrived at the address to find the child's father holding the infant, but Mrs. Needham said Nicholas was in fact holding the child when Hedrick arrived. Police also identified the father as Kevin; his name is Terry.

Dinsmore to keep both titles

MIAMI — Allan Dinsmore will keep his title of school superintendent-principal, Miami school trustees decided Monday at their regular board meeting.

After an executive session, trustees agreed to renew Dinsmore's contract as the district's chief administrator.

Faced with a budget crunch and the July departure of then-principal Jerry Boyd, trustees voted in August to go to a single-administrator campus with Superintendent Dinsmore taking on the additional task of principal. Trustees agreed to raise Dinsmore's salary by $1,000 per month until they found a new principal.

But the first half of the 1987-88 school year apparently went by smoothly enough to convince trustees that an additional administrator may not be needed.

"Because of our support personnel, there was no undue burden," Dinsmore said. "It has been a good working relationship."

In other business Monday, trustees approved a state school policy for dealing with students with Acquired Immune Deficiency Syndrome (AIDS) and other communicable diseases.

The policy, recommended jointly by the Texas Education Agency, the Texas Department of Health and the Texas attorney general's office sets out specific procedures for removing students or employees with communicable diseases. Other area school districts approved AIDS policies last fall.

Under the policy, students with communicable diseases are allowed to attend class unless in such unusual circumstances as open sores, biting behavior or lack of toilet training. Those removed from school will be offered an alternate education program. Infected employees will be allowed to continue to work unless the disease affects work performance or there is a risk of spreading the disease.

Miami trustees also heard a report from the Pampa accounting firm of Lewis Meers about the school's audit. Trustees accepted the audit last month.

Dinsmore reported that 87 percent of the school's property taxes have been collected.

Area students make All-State Choir

LUBBOCK — Pampa High School choir members Chris Wilson and Donnie Berry and Canadian High School singer Amy Hester were named to the All-State Choir last week at auditions at Lubbock Monterrey High School.

Wilson, a PHS senior, made first chair bass. Berry, also a senior, made fourth chair bass.

Pampa Choir Director Fred Mays said the 1988 auditions marked the third straight year Berry and Wilson made the honor choir.

"They both have been in choir since they were old enough," Mays said.

A senior at Canadian High School, Hester placed seventh chair first soprano (highest female voices) during the Saturday competition.

Hester also has placed in the All-State Choir for three straight years, despite the previous lack of a choral music program at Canadian High School. A secretary at CHS said the high school now has a choir, but oddly, Hester is not involved.

Pampa High School senior Anissa Bradsher qualified as a first alternate for first alto for the second year in a row. PHS junior Donnen Hicks qualified for second alternate bass.

Mays said Hicks had never sung in a choir before this year.

The Pampa choir director said being named to the All-State Choir is an honor that goes beyond high school.

"A lot of colleges pay good money to kids who make All-State," Mays said. "Donnie has a scholarship offer from West Texas State University and Chris is looking at Tech and Baylor."

Judge found innocent of assault charge

HUMBLE (AP) — State District Judge Marsha Anthony was cleared of a charge that she threatened a neighbor and the woman's children with a gun during a dispute over a broken toy.

"I believed in the system, and dad gum it works," Anthony said after she was found innocent Tuesday by a six-person jury in Justice of the Peace Tom Lawrence's court in Humble, north of Houston. Jurors deliberated 45 minutes.

"It was a unanimous verdict," said the foreman, Mack Alexander. "It all came down to intent. The bottom line was we didn't feel she intended any bodily injury."

Anthony was charged with assault by threat, a misdemeanor offense that carries a fine of up to $200.

121 Texas schools fail to comply with class-size law

AUSTIN (AP) — More than three years after passage of the state's landmark school reform bill, one of every eight school districts in Texas still does not comply with the law's class-size limits.

Figures compiled by the Texas Education Agency indicate that 121 districts received exemptions this year from the 22-student maximum imposed on all kindergarten and first- and second-grade classes in public schools. Those districts claimed they were unable to provide enough classrooms or teachers to meet the requirement which took effect in fall 1985.

Emmett Conrad, a member of the State Board of Education from Dallas, said he is disturbed that so many school districts have been granted waivers by the state education agency.

"There is no good excuse for that many districts still being out of compliance with the requirement. I think it's tragic," he said.

"I would be interested to find out how much some of those districts spent on athletic facilities the last three years," he said.

Conrad, who served on a special panel chaired by computer magnate H. Ross Perot that drafted the school reform law of 1984, said the reduced class size was probably the most important recommendation of the Perot committee.

Supporters of smaller classes say they allow teachers to give more individual attention to students which produces higher achievement levels.

But school superintendents have criticized the requirement, saying that it has forced huge property tax increases to pay for the additional teachers.

Ruben Olivarez, assistant commissioner of accreditation for the TEA, said the number of school districts receiving exemptions has been declining. In 1985, 325 districts said they couldn't meet the requirement. That number fell to 194 in 1986.

This is the last school year that a district can receive an exemption for not meeting the class-size limit for kindergarten through second-grade.

The 22-student limit will be extended to grades three and four this fall, and state education officials are again considering granting waivers to districts that say they have trouble meeting the requirements.

Man cleared in deaths of parents

BEAUMONT (AP) — A man accused of fatally shooting his parents was cleared of murder charges after a judge ruled the man was insane at the time.

During a brief hearing Monday, State District Judge Larry Gist ordered Andrew Weller, 37, to be committed to Rusk State Hospital for psychiatric examinations. Another hearing in the case was scheduled for Feb. 8.

Prosecutor Bruce Smith said he had not found contradicting evidence to three medical experts' determination that Weller was insane April 25, 1986, when his parents, retired lawyer George Weller Sr. and Eleanor Weller, were shot to death in their Beaumont home.

A fourth medical expert, Beaumont psychologist Ray Cox, who was hired by Smith, reviewed the three medical experts' work and confirmed their methods and findings.

Gist ordered Weller committed to Rusk State Hospital for further psychiatric examinations and ordered that he be returned to Jefferson County for another hearing Feb. 8.

Should medical experts determine Weller is mentally ill, the law allows Gist to commit Weller indefinitely to the maximum security unit of a state hospital until medical experts determine he no longer is mentally ill.

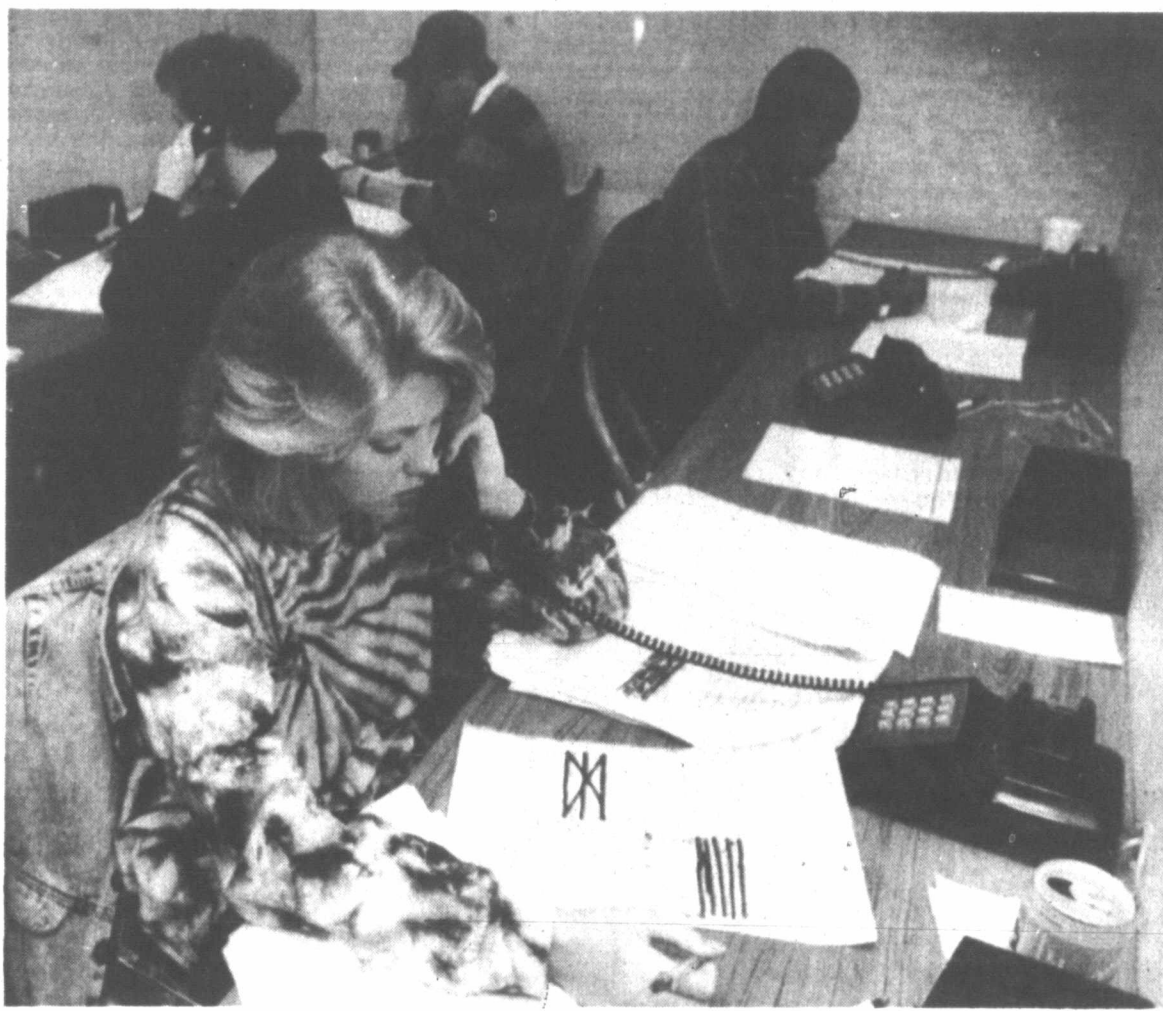

Weller's attorney, Joseph Hawthorn, and Smith waived their rights to a trial by jury, instead consenting to try the case before Gist.

"I think the tragic thing is that Andrew Weller has been mentally ill and a danger to himself and others for years," Hawthorn said. "He should have been committed long before this. Had he been committed before this occurred, this probably would not have occurred."

Smith said after reviewing medical experts' opinions he was satisfied with the resolution of the case.

A Jefferson County grand jury in May 1986 indicted Weller on a capital murder charge in connection with the shooting deaths. Weller lived with his parents until their deaths.

Earlier this year, Smith dismissed the capital murder charge against Weller and a grand jury reindicted him on two murder charges.

Vicki Ford checks petition signatures.

GOP starts checking petitions

AUSTIN (AP) — Republican presidential candidates whose petitions do not include 5,000 signatures confirmed by the party will be left on the ballot, but treated as if dead or withdrawn from the race, officials say.

The confirmation process began Tuesday night after recent published reports of phony signatures on ballots submitted by Republican presidential candidates Sen. Robert Dole, Pete du Pont, Jack Kemp and Alexander Haig.

GOP Chairman George Strake said a statistical spot check would be made on petitions submitted by candidates Vice President George Bush and Pat Robertson, although there have been no allegations of forgery on their petitions.

"It is my sincere hope that our telephone verification will indeed verify all six candidates are qualified to be on the ballot and earn delegates in Texas," Strake said.

But if the party cannot verify 5,000 signatures each for Dole, du Pont, Kemp and Haig, they will not be eligible to earn Texas delegates to the Republican National Convention. The delegates will be allocated after the March 8 Texas primary.

The deadline for removing candidates for the ballot has passed, but state party rules for candidates who die or withdraw after the filing deadline say any votes for them go toward uncommitted delegates.

Strake said the goal is to know by Feb. 1 if any of the candidates are not qualified. He said the party "is working to solve this problem in a way that preserves the integrity of our election system and is fair to all our candidates and all the voters."

The verification process began Tuesday with calls to people whose signatures were on Robertson petitions, according to GOP spokeswoman Karen Parfitt Hughes.

"We didn't create the problem, but we have to fix it," said John Weaver, the GOP's Texas director, adding the effort will cost $20,000.

The confirmation process was initiated in response to newspaper reports that petitions for Dole and Haig carried faked signatures. The probe widened when a Houston Chronicle reporter found the signature of her deceased father on former Delaware Gov. Pete du Pont's Texas petitions.

New York Rep. Jack Kemp's petitions came into question Tuesday when The Dallas Morning News reported that a random check of signatures on Kemp petitions indicated possible forgeries.

A Kemp campaign consultant, Richard McBride, said the faulty signatures may have been the work of one "overzealous" petition collector. Of the 11 questionable signatures, seven were obtained by the same person, The News said. The Dole and Haig campaigns have blamed Southern Political Consultants of Houston, which was hired to help collect signatures.

Texas, California, Florida to see big House seat gains

WASHINGTON (AP) — California would gain four seats in the House of Representatives if Congress were reapportioned based on the most recent population estimates, while Florida and Texas would add three apiece, a private study shows.

Significant losses — two seats each — would strike Michigan, New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, according to new calculations by a Washington consultant.

Kim Brace, president of Election Data Services Inc., has calculated how the seats in the House would be distributed on the basis of 1987 state population estimates released Dec. 30 by the Census Bureau.

The House won't actually be reapportioned until 1991, based on the results of the 1990 national census.

But using a computer to apply the complex reapportionment formula that has been in use since 1930 to the most recent population estimates allows a look at trends since the last redistricting in 1980.

The widely documented shift of the nation's population to the Sun Belt apparently is continuing, boosting the number of residents, and thus the congressional influence, of states in those regions.

Because Congress requires that the House be limited to 435 members, a gain by one state requires a loss by another.

Texas is set to gain three seats in the current estimate, bringing its total to 30. Texas also picked up three seats in 1980. The population of the Lone Star State is currently estimated at 16.8 million, up from 14.2 million in 1980.

California, which grew from 23.7 million people in 1980 to a 1987 estimate of 27.7 million, would get an extra four seats, boosting its delegation to 49 members, according to Brace's calculation. The Golden State had added two seats in 1980.

Retirement haven Florida, which added four House members in 1980, would gain three more if the shift were made now, bringing its total to 22.

The 1987 population estimate for the Sunshine State was 12 million, up from 9.7 million in 1980 to push it past Pennsylvania as the fourth most populated state.

States which the estimates show would add one seat apiece are Arizona, Georgia and Virginia.

At the other end of the scale, the nation's second most populous state, New York, would drop two seats to 32. It grew from 17.5 million in 1980 to a current estimate of 17.8 million, but that doesn't keep pace with other states. The Empire State lost five seats in 1980.

Other states losing two seats apiece would be Michigan, Ohio and Pennsylvania. Those losing a single seat, according to the estimates, would be Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Massachusetts and West Virginia.

The method used to distribute seats makes assignments based on a priority developed by multiplying populations by a formula.

The law requires that each state have at least one seat, and after that the formula varies by population and number of the seats being assigned.

Clements names three to panel

AUSTIN (AP) — Three physicians have been named to fill vacancies on the State Board of Medical Examiners, Gov. Bill Clements' office says.

Appointed to the panel were Drs. Alfred R. Johnson, Dallas; George S. Bayoud, Dallas; and James G. Morris, Lubbock.

The three appointments were announced Tuesday, and all require confirmation by the Texas Senate.

Johnson, 39, is with WJR & Associates, a doctors' clinic, and is the former coordinator of the environmental control unit of the Dallas Environmental Health Center. His term ends April 13, 1993.

Bayoud, 64, is in private practice in Garland and serves on the surgical staffs of Memorial Hospital in Garland and Parkland Hospital in Dallas. His term also ends April 13, 1993.

Morris, 65, is in private practice in Lubbock and is a director of the West Texas Hospital there. His term ends April 13, 1991.

Houston lawyer visits secret rocket launch site

HOUSTON (AP) — A lawyer who wants to do aerospace business with the Soviets says tight security prevailed on his visit to a secret rocket launch site in the Soviet Union, the Houston Chronicle reported in a copyright story today.

Arthur M. Dula, head of Space Commerce Corp., spent two days in Baikonur — the Soviet equivalent of the Kennedy Space Center in Florida — and inspected several rocket sites and Proton rockets, one fitted with its payload and ready for launch, the newspaper said.

In a seven-page memo describing the November visit, Dula said he was forbidden to take photographs of the base or the nearby town.

"I had the impression that the people operating the (Baikonur) cosmodrome were not universally in favor of allowing American inspection of their launch sites," Dula wrote.

"I doubt if 10 percent of the 60,000 people living in Leninsk (the town near the cosmodrome) have the ability to travel freely even within the U.S.S.R.," he said.

Dula and two companions — Robert Citron, an aerospace businessman and engineer, and Dan Cassidy, a director of the Marsh & McLennan insurance brokerage — were the first Americans in 10 years to visit the cosmodrome, located in Kazakhstan in Soviet central Asia, the newspaper said.

Several U.S. astronauts visited the site as part of the joint U.S.-Soviet Apollo-Soyuz space mission in 1975.

Dula's company has contracts with the Soviet civilian space agency Glavkosmos to negotiate launches of U.S. satellites on Soviet Proton rockets. Space Commerce has signed an agreement with Glavkosmos allowing shipment of sealed payloads into the Soviet Union without any inspection.

for customs or any other purposes, for launch on the Proton, Dula said.

But the U.S. government has refused to issue export licenses to U.S. satellite companies on the grounds the Soviet could steal the technology after the satellites arrived at Baikonur.

The Soviet Union is suspending talks with Dula about the matter until after the presidential election, said Stepan F. Bogodyazh, a top Glavkosmos official.

In the memo, Dula wrote that his hotel in Leninsk was surrounded by a strong fence and guarded by militiamen. He described the Proton launch site as having the look of a working offshore oil rig in contrast with the pristine facilities at Cape Canaveral.

Secrecy about the Soviet rocket launch sites has prompted some to discourage any U.S. commercial satellite companies from dealing with Glavkosmos. However, the Soviets have kept trying to win permission. Western experts say the Soviets need Western cash to finance economic reforms in their own country and for the purchase of huge amounts of wheat to bolster their failing agriculture program.

The Proton rocket launches Dula is interested in cost $20 million to $40 million, compared to $50 million to $150 million for a U.S. rocket launch.

Dula said in the memo that available free world launchers should be used before turning to communist bloc vehicles, but only Proton is both large enough and available in time to take some of the warehouse communication satellites to orbit.

He said Space Commerce wants the U.S. government to grant limited-duration waivers to existing restrictions on satellite shipments until U.S. launch vehicles are available for commercial use.

McClure family upset over DHS letter

MIDLAND (AP) — The family of Jessica McClure is angry that state officials released a letter blaming the little girl's mother and aunt for the accident that trapped the toddler underground for 58 hours.

Jessica was being supervised by her mother, Reba "Cissy" McClure, when she fell down an uncapped well Oct. 14. The well was in the back yard of Jessica's aunt, Jamie Moore, whom state officials said was operating an unlicensed day-care center. The 18-month-old's right foot lodged near her head, and two toes had to be amputated after she was rescued from the 58-hour ordeal.

The Department of Human Services said Mrs. McClure and Ms. Moore did not adequately supervise Jessica. "The (DHS) has found there is reason to believe the child's injuries and the time spent in the well are the result of negligent supervision by child-care provider Reba McClure," Carolyn Langendorf, day-care licensing regional director, wrote in the letter addressed to Ms. Moore.

The Oct. 30, 1987, letter was released Monday after it was reviewed to insure no one's privacy was violated, Ms. Langendorf said. But relatives of Cissy and Chip McClure said releasing the letter violated their privacy.

"They come out and say she (Cissy) was neglectful," Cedie Proctor, Chip McClure's older sister, told the Odessa American. "If they wanted to say that, why couldn't they just tell them? I thought this was supposed to be confidential. ... It really got to us that they said it was all Cissy's fault that Jessica spent three days in the well."

Chip's father, Harold McClure, worried that the letter's release would upset his daughter-in-law. He said he had not talked to Jessica's parents since the letter was released, "but I'm mad about it, that's all I've got to say."

Jessica's parents have an unlisted phone number and could not be reached for comment. Ms. Langendorf wrote that state officials believe Ms. Moore should have had the well capped. It was capped with a steel plate the night Jessica was rescued.

EVER STRIVING FOR THE TOP O' TEXAS
TO BE AN EVEN BETTER PLACE TO LIVE

Let Peace Begin With Me

This newspaper is dedicated to furnishing information to our readers so that they can better promote and preserve their own freedom and encourage others to see its blessings. Only when man understands freedom and is free to control himself and all he possesses can he develop to his utmost capabilities.

We believe that freedom is a gift from God and not a political grant from government, and that men have the right to take moral action to preserve their life and property for themselves and others.

Freedom is neither license nor anarchy. It is control and sovereignty of oneself, no more, no less. It is, thus, consistent with the coveting commandment.

Our opinion

Shopping changes need joint efforts

In the past two days Dr. Jerry Johnson of Waco met with Pampa Community and business leaders to discuss the Consumer Attitude Survey conducted in Pampa and surrounding communities last summer. The purpose of the survey was to gauge opinions concerning Pampa's business climate, especially as a retail market.

Initially there will be the usual complaints about why an outsider was hired instead of getting some local firm to tell us about ourselves (and, of course, keeping the money here in Pampa). When a couple or a family has internal problems, they go to an outside counselor for advice and help. Someone who is outside the situation and not embroiled in the immediate conflicts often can more objectively assess the problems and offer reasonable solutions to the difficulties.

While Pampa has not yet reached a divorce stage or family break-up situation, we would be kidding ourselves if we were to deny there haven't been tensions and conflicts building up in the past few years of the economic downturn among our "family."

A conflict that has been getting attention at public meetings, in private conversations and in letters to the editor in recent months has been the recurring theme of whether we should shop Pampa first — or just bypass straight to Amarillo. The survey report addresses that problem, among others.

The report notes that the people surveyed indicated "they would prefer to shop in Pampa, but they just cannot find some of the merchandise they desire. There is a positive attitude toward Pampa, but people know what they want, they are mobile, and they are willing and ready to drive elsewhere to get the goods. People will no longer just accept what is available."

Those may be tough words for many merchants here, who would rather just assume the loyalty of local and surrounding shoppers instead of earning it. As the report states, "The options for merchants in Pampa are to disagree with the study results and say 'people really do not know what they want,' or they can get busy and work to improve the situation."

But there are also some strong words for the customers. Perhaps perceptions about Amarillo always having a better selection of merchandise and always having lower prices are just beliefs and not necessarily always true, Dr. Johnson explains. And Pampa's economy, once the over-inflated "good times" of the early 1980s are adjusted realistically, is really no worse than most other parts of the state. Perhaps the customer can also show a little trust and loyalty to the local merchant.

"The real test," the report says, "comes when Pampa citizens are given the opportunity to support the local retail business community and when retailers are given the opportunity to supply Pampa citizens with a selection of quality merchandise at fair and competitive prices. If both of these elements come together in cooperation and support, the outlook is positive."

In a joint work session Monday evening, representatives of the city of Pampa, the Pampa public schools, the Pampa Chamber of Commerce and the Pampa Industrial Foundation began efforts to develop an overall community strategy to meet changing conditions. In later meetings, they will be honestly seeking more public input toward strategic economic planning.

Let's hope citizens will accept the challenge. As Dr. Johnson puts it, Hoechst Celanese's decision to rebuild their plant here shows strong confidence in the future of the community. Perhaps it's also time for the citizens of Pampa to show confidence in their home.

A bag of trash has meaning

WASHINGTON — Where does one look for the meaning of the Constitution? Next week the U.S. Supreme Court, figuratively speaking, will be looking for it in Billy Greenwood's bag of trash.

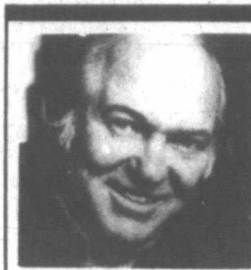

The case has an unusual aspect of universality. All of us have trash to dispose of. In the cities, we leave it to public collectors; in the country, we take it to landfill dumps. The question before the high court is a close one: Once we have let go of our trash, what right of privacy remains in the contents? Think it over.

Back in the spring of 1984, police in Laguna Beach, Calif., got word that Billy Greenwood was involved in drug trafficking. The tip was not enough to support a search warrant, but Jenny Straener, a county narcotics investigator, had an idea: What if a more substantial lead could be obtained by searching through Greenwood's trash?

Police observed that Greenwood was a fellow of regular habits. On the mornings of trash collection, he bundled his trash into a green plastic bag and left it on the street to be hauled away. On April 6 and again on May 4, police arranged with the trash man to pick up Greenwood's bag and to turn it over to them.

Sure enough, a search of the bags provided the evidence they needed. Police got a warrant, searched his home, seized drugs and arrested him for possession of cocaine for purposes of sale.

Before the case could go to trial, Greenwood's lawyer moved to suppress the evidence. He argued that the search of Greenwood's bag of trash violated his Fourth Amendment rights. The trial court agreed, dismissed the case, and the California Court of Appeals affirmed. Now the U.S. Supreme Court will have a final word.

James J. Kilpatrick

The Fourth Amendment, rooted in Magna Carta, says that "the right of the people to be secure in their person, houses, papers and effects, against unreasonable searches and seizures, shall not be violated." Once the trash had been put outside, was it any longer a part of Greenwood's "papers and effects"? Was it abandoned property, belonging to no one? If so, was the search "unreasonable" as a matter of constitutional law?

The high court almost decided the issue a year ago in a similar case that also came from California. This one involved an alleged bookmaker in Hollywood, Peter Rooney, who lived in a 28-unit apartment building. There the police found evidence sufficient to justify a warrant. Rooney moved successfully to dismiss, but the high court, after first accepting the case for review, subsequently changed its mind and dropped it.

The same conflicting arguments that were advanced in the case of Peter Rooney will be heard in the case of Billy Greenwood. The state contends that the act of placing the plastic bag on a public street amounted to an abandonment of any rights Greenwood may have had.

Neither trash collectors nor police have a constitutional obligation to aid an individual in concealing criminal activity. Anyone could have picked up the bag and rooted through it. The defendant had no "expectation of privacy."

The defense responds by saying that police officers are not just "anyone." They are the law; they are agents of the state. The opaque plastic bag effectively concealed the contents from casual observation. Until Greenwood's trash had been commingled with the unidentifiable trash of other persons, it was his property.

What about it? Trial courts across the country are divided on the issue, but most of them appear to accept Greenwood's argument. In 1969, California's Court of Appeals held that "We can readily ascribe many reasons why residents would not want their castaway clothing, letters, medicine bottles or other telltale refuse and trash to be examined by neighbors or others." In 1985, Hawaii's highest court ruled that police may not indiscriminately rummage through trash bags for evidence of a person's "activities, associations and beliefs."

Would it have made a constitutional difference, I wonder, if police had followed the trash truck to a public dump and there cut open every green plastic bag until they found Greenwood's bag? Hard to say.

I suspect that most of us, on reflection, would wince at the thought of police inspection of our everyday trash. What might be inferred from discarded letters, bottles, contraceptives, magazines? The story of our lives can be read in what we throw away. Without a proper warrant, this is no business of the cops.

A good way to meet girls?

Is Gary Hart running for the presidential nomination of the Democratic Party or is he running "interference"?

Whenever hardball politics overlaps with lip-licking scandal, every professional political observer is supposed to have something to say about it.

Frankly, I'd rather not but I must. Gary Hart's six-pack of rivals is trying hard to ignore him but they cannot.

The first quickie survey following his re-entry into the race revealed a sampling of Democrats favor Hart over the others — two-to-one over Dukakis.

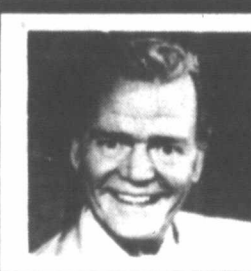

One of the problems with being judgmental in these matters has to do with historical precedent.

Did the Eisenhower mistress make him a lesser leader?

Did the naked playgirls in the Kennedy White House diminish his effectiveness as a chief executive?

Indeed, even puritanical Jimmy Carter confessed to "lusting" in his heart.

The peccadilloes of some public figures goes back through American history — all the way back.

Paul Harvey

Is it hypocritical now to say that a confessed sinner is automatically ineligible for public trust?

Hart says that during the campaign he will refuse to discuss any personal issues. He says, "That's nobody's business!"

Hart's wife is said to have encouraged him to re-enter the contest. His daughter has agreed to manage his campaign.

When Hart dropped out of the race seven months ago, the Federal Elections Commission declared him ineligible for matching campaign money from the federal treasury.

Back in the race, he becomes eligible again though he told a TV interviewer "that's not the reason" he re-entered the campaign.

I don't think it was, even though he still owes more than a million dollars in 1984 campaign debts. He also has some debts from his 1986 race.

By re-entering the campaign in time to qualify for the New Hampshire primary, Hart is saying that "we can thus let the people decide."

May I suggest that what they are deciding is something more significant than his own candidacy?

What New Hampshire voters are going to tell us is whether we should measure politicians by standards which we do not necessarily apply to ourselves.

Yet, if our leaders are not "better men" than we are, what qualifies them for leadership?

Some Democrat insiders are also figuring that if Hart can rally public support for a personally discredited candidate, can Kennedy be far behind?

Irreverent writer-editor Robert Orben says, "A whole generation of American schoolboys is growing up with the notion that running for President is a good way to meet girls."

Sowetos, Gaza Strips exist elsewhere

By CHUCK STONE

Maybe some of my sadness over the violence in two cities 10,000 miles apart stems from having lived and played in both places.

Palestinian youths in Gaza City and black youths in New York City angrily swarmed into the streets recently, protesting the injustice of their condition. The official responses differed.

In Gaza City, a brutal Israeli army struck back with life-destroying fury. In New York City, police employed only enough force to break up and arrest civil-disobedient protesters. But officials in both jurisdictions adopted the same harlotry of image massaging.

New York City's Mayor Koch loftily proclaimed a policy of equal protection for everybody and deplored the black despair over increasing racism, as exemplified by the Howard Beach incident where whites attacked and beat up three black men. One of those men died when he ran out on a highway to escape his assailants.

As the Gaza City mini-war worsened, I received a hand-addressed letter from the Israeli Consulate General. I anticipated an explanation of the government's policy. Instead, the letter contained background paper No. 11, "A Black South African Choir in Israel," and background paper No. 12, "Syria Supports Terrorism."

I already know that Syria supports terrorism. And a report about the appearance of a black South African choir in Israel reeks with absurdity when the Israeli army replicates the repressive tactics of the South African police. Like South Africa's P.W. Botha, Israel's Yitzhak Shamir has promised to take no prisoners.

That tragic parallel with South Africa has distressed some Israelis. Gaza is "the Soweto of the state of Israel," declared Israeli writer, Amos Elon.

Just as Soweto blacks can't vote in South Africa, Palestinians can't vote in Gaza. Just as one person/one vote is the decisive issue for peace in South Africa, Palestinian sovereignty, in the words of American-born Israeli writer Haim Chertok, "is the vital precondition to peace. The Palestinians ... have earned a share of sovereignty in this tired little land." Israel disagrees.

Since 1956, when I lived in Gaza as an official for a relief organization, this strip of land that juts from Israel like a hitchhiking thumb has survived "between two worlds, one dead, the other waiting to be born."

On many Mediterranean sea breeze-cooled evenings, I sat in a small seashore cafe, arguing heatedly, but futilely, with Arab guests that Israel was not some American creation.

In 1973, when I returned for another visit, an Arab friend, Nihad, who had been almost irrational in his hatred of Israel, gingerly conceded that under Israel rule, "things have gotten better." Fourteen years later, Nihad's illusion of progress has crumbled in the vise of a repressed people's violent despair and an oppressive regime's military crackdown.

The Arab refugees of Gaza City are the black prisoners of Soweto. In both communities, voteless people are sardined inhumanely into concentration camps that seem to march endlessly over parched landscapes. Only the color of the dirt differs — ochre in Soweto, beige in Gaza City.

Soweto transcends national boundaries. Soweto festers wherever people cannot live under their own "vine and fig tree and none shall be afraid," whether in an all-white New York City neighborhood, or an all-Arab Gaza City, or an all-black Soweto.

"Nobody cares about us," lamented a Gaza youth last week.

Until this country gets around to proving that the right to self-determination is as important for Gaza City as we claim it is for Managua and Johannesburg, we must accept responsibility for the Sowetos of the world.

Saudi strategy change could signal new price battle

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil giant Saudi Arabia, strapped for money and weary of cheating by other OPEC members, may be taking steps to distance itself from the cartel in what could signal a new price war, some petroleum analysts suggest.

Although the Saudis still insist on unity in the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, they have watched their oil income tumble while other OPEC members cheat and sell more oil in violation of production-sharing pact.

Reports that the Saudis are now cheating on their own and foresee $15-a-barrel oil soon, $3 lower than OPEC's official selling price, sent oil prices falling for a second day Tuesday in volatile trading. There also were reports of discounting by Kuwait, another key proponent of OPEC discipline.

Although prices partly recovered and ended the trading session with only a modest loss, a number of analysts said the overall trend is down.

"The Saudis have cut back production. Will they keep doing that? Not when their buddies are undercutting them," said Dennis Eklof, a director of Cambridge Energy Research Associates in Cambridge, Mass.

Saudi Arabia, the most important OPEC producer, reportedly is producing about 3.8 million barrels a day but has stated intentions to raise output to the kingdom's OPEC allotment of 4.3 million barrels a day.

This means the Saudis will almost certainly have to discount the additional oil to sell it, which would effectively scrap the country's effort to defend the $18 OPEC price and mark a significant blow to the cartel, already frayed by internal feuding and duplicity in price and production decrees.

Although OPEC ministers have pledged to hold production at 15.06 million barrels a day, the 13-member cartel's output remains at least 2 million barrels a day above that level at a time when supplies already are outstripping demand.

On the New York Mercantile Exchange, the contract for February delivery of West Texas Intermediate, the main U.S. crude, closed Tuesday at $16.63 per 42-gallon barrel, compared with $16.75 at the close Monday. At one point during hectic selling, West Texas contracts hit $15.95 a barrel.

Refined-product prices dropped as well. The February contract for wholesale unleaded gasoline fell .53 cent a gallon to 43.49 cents, and the February contract for wholesale heating oil lost about .49 cent a gallon to 51.27 cents.

"The reason behind the price decline is this OPEC crowd has not been able to get its act together," said John O'Dea, manager of international energy futures at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc. in New York.

"They cheat on prices and production, they give discounts and make a number of arrangements under the table. For the past year, their credibility has eroded," O'Dea said. "It just seems to be every man for himself."

Some analysts said Saudi abandonment of production restraints would be understandable considering the financial pressure faced by the kingdom, not only because of lower oil prices but the dollar's weakness. Since OPEC prices oil in dollars, the currency's erosion has deflated the cartel's income.

"The Saudis have said over and over again they're not going to be the swing producer in OPEC," said Carol Epstein, managing editor of Petroleum Analysis Ltd., a publishing and consulting firm. "Maybe people are beginning to believe them."

Father of quintuplets happy; mother, children doing fine

DETROIT (AP) — The mother of babies believed to be the nation's first "test-tube" quintuplets says she's ecstatic about the five new additions to her family but "a nervous wreck" about raising eight children.

Michele L'Esperance, 34, delivered the babies by Caesarean section late Monday within four minutes. The four girls and one boy ranged in weight from 1 pound, 14.5 ounces to 3 pounds, 2.5 ounces, and were two months premature.

"They're beautiful," said Mrs. L'Esperance, who with her husband have three sons from previous marriages.

"I don't know that I can say anything and I don't know how I'm going to deal with it but we're going to take it a day at a time and see what happens. ... I'm excited. I'm a nervous wreck. I'm sore."

The quintuplets, believed to be the nation's first born through in vitro fertilization, were doing well, said Valerie Mahaczek, spokeswoman at William Beaumont Hospital in suburban Royal Oak.

A London woman gave birth to five test-tube babies in March 1986.

Mrs. L'Esperance was unable to conceive because her Fallopian tubes had been removed. Her eggs were fertilized in a culture dish with the father's sperm, and implanted in her womb.

Before the delivery, the parents instructed doctors not to consider aborting any of the fetuses to improve the chances of the others, Mahaczek said.

The babies were placed in the neonatal intensive care unit. Two required oxygen, and one, a girl, has been placed on a respirator, Mahaczek said.

"Her prognosis is still very good," Mahaczek said. "It's not unusual for premature babies to have lung problems, and she is stable."

The spokeswoman said specific medical conditions are not characterized for newborns because the conditions change too often.

Dr. Daniel Batton, a neonatologist, said the babies have a 90 to 95 percent chance of survival.

"We had no way of expecting them to do as well as they have," Mrs. L'Esperance's 27-year-old husband, Raymond, said Tuesday.

"I don't think that anybody can realize the relief that we felt," said L'Esperance, a corrections officer with the Macomb County Sheriff's Department. "It's the happiest moment of my life and my wife's. ... I'm ecstatic."

Mrs. L'Esperance, a former counselor for abused women, may be released from the hospital this weekend or early next week, Mahaczek said. She said doctors have not estimated when the babies may go home.

The quintuplets weighed 3 pounds, 2.5 ounces; 2 pounds, 11.9 ounces; 1 pound, 14.5 ounces; 3 pounds, 1.4 ounces; and 2 pounds, 11 ounces. The parents have chosen the names Veronica, Erica, Alexandria, Danielle and Raymond, after his father.

The L'Esperances live in Clarkston with their sons, Brian, 2½, Christopher, 5 and Larry 7.

Severe cold in northern Plains, Midwest

By The Associated Press

Bone-chilling temperatures blew into the northern Plains and upper Midwest today, after a storm dropped more than a foot of snow, stranding hundreds of travelers and forcing one presidential hopeful to cancel campaign appearances.

The snow, however, eased early today, said Dan McCarthy, a meteorologist at the National Weather Service's Severe Storms Center in Kansas City, Mo.

The storm was caused by a cold front pushing across the Ohio Valley. "Behind it are strong, gusty winds and very cold temperatures," he said. "Wind chills are ranging between 20 and 40 degrees below zero."

The wind at Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., made it feel like 33 degrees below zero early today, and wind gusting to near 35 mph at Mason City, Iowa, produced a wind chill of minus 51.

On Tuesday, the storm dumped up to 14 inches of snow at Grand Rapids, Minn., and a foot or more on parts of Wisconsin and North Dakota. Eight inches fell over upper Michigan, where 4 inches more was expected today.

Blizzard conditions in South

Dakota on Tuesday disrupted traffic and sent wind chills to 40 below zero. While snowfall was generally light, winds gusting to 50 mph reduced visibility to zero at times.

Snow flurries whipped by gusty winds up to 50 mph created havoc in parts of Iowa, causing numerous accidents, forcing schools to close early and resulting in the closing of a 100-mile stretch of Interstate 35.

North Dakota State Radio reported some people stranded along Interstate 94, and the the Highway Patrol and sheriff's departments sent four-wheel-drive vehicles to rescue them from chest-high drifts and wind exceeding 50 mph.

Wind gusts of up to 40 mph in Minnesota whipped the snow, causing visibility to drop to zero across parts of the state.

Reagan suffers stomach upset, curtails plans

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan canceled his plans to attend the funeral of a former White House aide today after suffering an upset stomach in the early morning hours, the White House said.

Chief presidential spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said Reagan would go ahead with plans to greet Japanese Prime Minister Noboru Takeshita, but would be unable to attend funeral services for Edward Hickey, 52, formerly the head of the White House security office and more recently chairman of the Federal Maritime Commission, who died last week.

"The president's schedule ... is being changed to reflect a mild episode of gastroenteritis experienced during the night," said a statement by Fitzwater. "Dr. John Hutton, the president's physician, examined the president this morning and found him to be in good health except for the stated complaint."

Unfriendly skies in '87

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three major airline crashes including one that claimed 156 lives gave 1987 one of the highest death tolls during the past decade from commercial U.S. aviation accidents, according to figures from the National Transportation Safety Board.

The safety board said more deaths occurred in commercial airline crashes last year than in seven of the previous nine years. The commuter airlines also posted their worst safety record since 1979.

The major airlines flying large jet aircraft had 31 accidents during the year including four involving fatalities. The crashes resulted in 231 deaths, the highest number since 1982.

Commuter lines had 35 accidents, 10 involving fatalities. Fifty-eight people died, the most in commuter crashes since 66 were killed in 1979.

The figure of 31 airliner accidents was the highest number since 1974 when there were 42, according to the safety board. The agency counts an accident whenever there is significant injury or damage.

The 231 deaths were eclipsed over the past decade only in 1979 when 351 people were killed in aviation crashes involving major U.S. airlines, and in 1982 when 233 people were killed.

Airline industry officials suggest, however, that the total accident and fatality figures are misleading when trying to make comparisons because they do not take into account changes in traffic volume. Furthermore, a single accident involving a large aircraft could cause the total figures to soar.

Industry spokesmen said a better indicator is the rate of fatal accidents per 100,000 departures. It climbed in 1987 compared to the previous year, but still was lower than normal.

"Taken over the long term (1987) was one of the better years for airline safety," maintained Bill Jackman, a spokesman for the Air Transport Association, which represents the major air carriers.

The rate of accidents involving fatalities — 0.43 per 100,000 departures — was lower in 1987 than the rate in seven of the previous nine years, according to the NTSB.

The airline association pointed to accident rate figures going back even further.

"There were only six other years since the beginning of safety regulations in 1926 that had a lower rate," said William F. Bolger, the industry group's president.

During 1987, the overall accident rate — covering fatal and non-fatal accidents — was 0.43 per 100,000 departures compared with 0.31 the previous year, the safety board said.

Going Bald? Try This, At No Risk

Pd. Adv.

HOUSTON, Texas—if you are gradually going bald, obviously, something is causing your hair loss to be greater than the growth. It stands to reason that if you can reduce your hair loss to where it is less than the growth... you can stop the balding process... and gradually thicken your hair.

It is a known fact that "sebum" which is discharged through the sebaceous glands in the scalp, can cause excessive hair loss. (Seborrhea) The symptoms of a sebum problem are: greasy forehead; dandruff, dry or oily; itchy scalp; and if your hair pulls out easily on top of your head. If you have one or more of these symptoms, sebum could be the cause of your problem.

A firm of laboratory consultants has developed a scientifically advanced formula and regimen to remove and control the continuous discharge of toxic sebum, so the scalp can function normally and effectively. This, in turn, greatly reduces excessive hair loss... and, helps promote natural hair cell production.

A study of these formulas and regimen recently completed by a California medical school shows the average subject reduced hair loss by 87%. Forty percent of the subjects also showed an increase in hair density in just 90 days.

This scientific regimen has proven so successful the firm invites you to try it for 32 days, at their risk, and see for yourself. Experts believe that the majority of cases of excessive hair fall and baldness are the beginning and more fully developed stages of male pattern baldness and cannot be helped. But, if your hair loss is caused or effected by sebum, here is help.

Everyone has a full head of hair until some time after puberty. In the case of hair loss caused by "sebum", the problem starts when the male hormone production reaches its peak. This causes an excessive discharge of toxic sebum, which if not properly controlled, will gradually destroy the hair-producing cells on top of the head.

Hair loss caused by sebum can also run in your family, and, if you wait until you are slick bald and your hair-producing cells are destroyed, you are beyond help.

So, if you have sebum symptoms and still have any hair on top of your head... now is the time to do something about it before it's too late.

Loesch Laboratory Consultants, Inc., will supply you with treatment for 32 days... at their risk... if you have the sebum symptoms and are not already slick bald. Just send them the information below. Or, call them toll-free at 1-800-231-7157 (in Texas 1-800-833-8387) 8:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m., Monday thru Thursday, and they will send complete information. Cheesecake is appetizer as well as dessert

Two original recipes judged grand prize winners in the 1987 "Philly" Hall of Fame Recipe Contest proved once again that there is no end to the versatility and variety of one of America's favorite indulgences — the cheesecake.

The winning entries of the Philadelphia Brand cream cheese-sponsored competition were submitted by Debbie Vanni from Libertyville, Ill., who won the Appetizer and Snacks category for "Southwest Appetizer Cheesecake," and Kim Marsden from Renton, Wash., grand prize winner in the Cheesecake category for "Supreme Chocolate Cheesecake."

Both recipes have been tested by the Kraft Kitchens.

Debbie Vanni's appetizer cheesecake reflects the current popularity of spicy Southwestern cuisine. A unique blend of cream cheese, natural cheddar cheese, cottage cheese and chilies is baked on a crushed corn chip crust. This base is then topped with a sour cream and jalapeno cheddar dip and baked again for 10 minutes. The "cake" is festively decorated with concentric circles of chopped tomatoes, black olives and green onions. Perfect for parties and buffets, this appetizer can be served in thin slices or with crackers as a spread.

For the past four years, Debbie, 35, a homemaker and mother of two, has made a career of creating original recipes for contests. She religiously keeps up with current food trends and works out of her basement which houses 700 cookbooks and extensive recipe files. Her efforts have paid off in prizes which have included blue ribbons, appliances, cash and trips.

Debbie's interest in food stems from when she was a small child. "My grandmother lived in our home and taught me all of the basics like soup, bread and pie crusts. And my mother was a gourmet cook and entertained a great deal," she explains. Debbie later earned a degree in dietetics, nutrition and food science.

In contrast to Debbie's studied technique for entering contests, Kim Marsden claims she created her "Supreme Chocolate Cheesecake" simply "out of love for my husband." Kim's entry was originally a birthday surprise for her husband who had challenged her to create a better chocolate cheesecake than one they had recently enjoyed in a restaurant.

Kim, 31, a dental hygienist, admits she broke all rules on using less sugar with her rich and all chocolate creation. Her cheesecake begins with a crushed creme-filled chocolate cookie crust. A sweet mixture of chocolate and cream cheese provides the filling, and then the whole dessert or cheesecake is topped with chocolate icing with a hint of orange flavored liqueur.

"I had never seen an iced cheesecake, but I wanted to write 'Happy Birthday' on it, so I frosted it," Kim explains. Her husband enthusiastically claimed she had met the challenge and encouraged her to enter the competition.

Both Debbie and Kim recently returned from their grand prize all-expense-paid trip to San Francisco. The two were among 6,444 contestants from across the country. From this total, 20 semi-finalist recipes were selected and taste-tested by a distinguished panel of judges which included Jeff Smith, "The Frugal Gourmet."

Winners in the other two categories were Stephen Thomas from Bethlehem, Pa. for Main and Side Dishes, and Jane Exline from Milwaukee, Wis. for Cookies and Desserts.

The 1988 competition will accept entries from March 1 to June 30. Contestants must submit and original recipe using as an ingredient a minimum of one 8-ounce package of Philadelphia Brand cream cheese.

The grand prize this year for the four winners is a trip to New Orleans for two from April 13 to 17, 1989. In addition, winners will be featured in an ad to appear in the October 1989 issue of Better Homes and Gardens magazine.

For a complete set of contest rules, send a self-addressed, stamped envelope to: "Philly" Hall of Fame Recipe Contest Rules, P.O. Box 1225, Skokie, Ill. 60076-8225.

SOUTHWEST APPETIZER CHEESECAKE

2/3 cup finely crushed tortilla chips
2 tablespoons margarine, melted

1 cup cottage cheese
3 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened

4 eggs
1 10-ounce package sharp natural cheddar cheese, shredded

1 4-ounce can chopped green chilies

1 8-ounce container sour cream
1 8-ounce container jalapeno-cheddar gourmet dip

1 cup chopped tomato
1/2 cup chopped green onions

1/4 cup pitted ripe olive slices
sour cream

Combine crumbs and margarine; press onto bottom of 9-inch springform pan. Bake at 325°, 15 minutes.

Place cottage cheese in blender container. Cover; process on high speed until smooth. In large mixing bowl of electric mixer, combine cottage cheese and cream cheese, mixing at medium speed until well blended. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Blend in cheddar cheese and chilies; pour over crust. Bake at 325°, 1 hour.

Combine sour cream and dip; mix well. Spread over cheesecake; continue baking 10 minutes.

Makes 16 to 20 servings.

Loosen cake from rim of pan; cool before removing rim of pan. Chill. Top with tomatoes, green onions, olives and sour cream. To serve, cut into wedges or spread on crackers.

Makes 16 to 20 servings.

SUPREME CHOCOLATE CHEESECAKE

1 1/2 cups (16) crushed creme-filled chocolate cookies

1/4 cup margarine, melted

3 8-ounce packages cream cheese, softened

1 14-ounce can sweetened condensed milk

3 eggs

1 12-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate pieces, melted

2 teaspoons vanilla

1/3 cup margarine

1/2 cup powdered sugar

1 6-ounce package semi-sweet chocolate pieces, melted, cooled

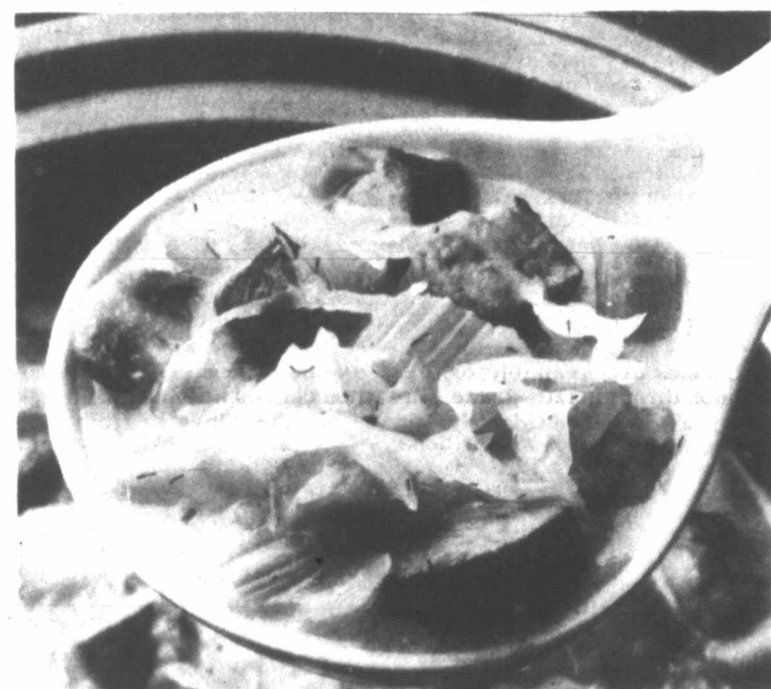

2 tablespoons orange flavored liqueur

Combine crumbs and margarine; press onto bottom of 9-inch springform pan.

Combine cream cheese and milk, mixing at medium speed on electric mixer until well blended. Add eggs, one at a time, mixing well after each addition. Blend in chocolate and vanilla; pour over crust. Bake at 300°, 1 hour and 10 minutes. Loosen cake from rim of pan; cool before removing rim of pan.

Beat margarine and sugar until light and fluffy. Add chocolate and liqueur, mixing until well blended. Spread over top and sides of cheesecake. Chill. Remove from refrigerator 30 minutes before serving. Garnish with chocolate curls, raspberries and powdered sugar, if desired.

Makes 10 to 12 servings.

Put vegetables, cooked chicken and Polish sausage in a slow crockery cooker in the morning, and in the evening you'll have soup for supper.

Make potato soup in crockery cooker

By NANCY BYAL
Better Homes and Gardens

Polish cooks make a potato-sauerkraut soup that traditionally uses potatoes, sauerkraut, smoked sausage and vinegar. Gene Orlovski, the Chicago reader who shared the recipe with us, converted it for crockery cooking and added other ingredients for more color and flavor. Put the ingredients in the pot in the morning; the cooker makes home-made soup for you all day while you attend to work or other activities.

HEARTY POTATO-SAUERKRAUT SOUP

4 cups chicken broth
One 10 1/2-ounce can condensed cream of mushroom soup
One 16-ounce can sauerkraut, rinsed and drained
8 ounces fresh mushrooms,

sliced
1 medium potato, cut into small cubes
2 medium carrots, chopped
1 medium onion, chopped
2 stalks celery, chopped
3/4 pound smoked Polish sausage, cubed
1/2 cup chopped cooked chicken
2 tablespoons vinegar
2 teaspoons dried dillweed
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Combine all ingredients in a 3 1/2- to 4-quart electric slow crockery cooker. Cover and cook on low-heat setting for 10 to 12 hours or until vegetables are tender. If necessary, skim off fat before serving. Makes 6 to 8 servings.

Dear Abby

Marijuana jeopardizes marriage

DEAR ABBY: Shortly after I was married, I learned that my husband is a habitual marijuana smoker and has been for the last 20 years. I'm 25 and he's 41 — a product of the '60s. Had I known this beforehand, I never would have married him. Unfortunately, I didn't find out until after I became pregnant, and now that we have a 3-month-old son, it's not easy to leave.

I asked him why the subject of pot never came up while we were dating, and he said he knew that I was "straight" so he never smoked in front of me. Even now, he never smokes in front of me, but I can smell it on him quite often. He says he doesn't "need" it, but I don't believe him because every time I step out — even for 20 minutes — I'll come back to the smell of pot.

He's a good husband and father, but we argue about this constantly. More and more I notice that his eyes are constantly bloodshot and he seems drowsy and lethargic and has to be reminded several times to do something. I'm concerned.

Am I making a mountain out of a molehill? How serious is this? Could he really quit if he wanted to? Please help me. I love him, but I can't live this way.

TORN

DEAR TORN: If your husband smokes pot "every time you step out," he's hooked. A 20-year habit is no "molehill," and you are wise to be concerned. Marijuana affects different people in different ways, but a habitual user will usually suffer from impaired vision, inability to respond quickly in emergency situations, diminished memory and lack of motivation. He shouldn't drive, and you should refuse to allow him to drive you and the baby.

Tell him that if he doesn't seek professional help to kick the habit, you are leaving. Contact the National Institute on Drug Abuse hot-line: (800) 662-HELP. They can put you in touch with drug-rehabilitation facilities in your area. Pot smokers don't just fade away — they go up in smoke!

DEAR ABBY: For "California Girl" whose Prince Charming has bad breath: There is a simple remedy to eliminate bad breath: Use a soft toothbrush and brush the tongue well.

TORONTO SUN READER

DEAR ABBY: I just read the letter from "Reluctant Gift Collector," the schoolteacher who resented receiving such "useless gimcracks" as mugs, plaques and pins that say "No. 1 Teacher."

She (and you) missed the point: It was not a "self-proclaiming" item, but an expression of love and respect for the teacher.

I have taught school for eight years and I drink my tea from a No. 1 Teacher cup, and I have a No. 1 Teacher pin in my jewelry box.

NANCY LAWRENCE

DEAR NANCY: I heard from hundreds of schoolteachers who wanted to teach "Reluctant Gift Collector" (and me) a lesson. They succeeded. Here's one from a teacher with a sense of humor:

DEAR ABBY: As a teacher in a major metropolitan area, I have a suggestion for "Reluctant Gift Collector." Be thankful for the gift, but next time suggest lottery tickets.

You have a better chance of winning the sweepstakes than having the school board give you a raise.

Dutch teens give advice to each other in TV magazine

By PAUL VERSCHUUR
Associated Press Writer

HILVERSUM, Netherlands (AP) — A unique advice column here has found a way to avoid preachiness by letting its readership answer the calls for help that come in the mailbox.

Take the despondent teen-ager contemplating suicide who recently wrote to the "Rear End" advice column, and got back more than a hundred reasons not to do it from his own peers.

"If you get it into your head to put an end to your life, I think you're a stupid idiot... I have also gone through rough times but I've always recovered," wrote 17-year-old Rianne Dekkers, who said three of her family's friends had recently killed themselves.

Rianne's letter and more than a hundred others were given to the teen-ager by Nelleke van der Drift, editor of the irreverent "Rear End" column, which appears in the VPRO television program guide.

Van der Drift runs an advice column, targeted to teen-agers, in which she doesn't offer advice "because that'll turn me into a kind of auntie."

Instead she lets her readers address the calls for help that appear in the column.

Van der Drift offers her contributors a chance to let off steam about anything they can't discuss with parents, teachers or friends, such as adolescent sexuality or parents' marital problems.

"If you're a boy and fall in love with another boy, and you can't talk about it at home, you feel extremely lonely," she said. Her column tries to alleviate that sense of isolation.

The language of the column often matches its name, a tongue in cheek reference to its original location on the back page of the television guide, which claims a weekly circulation of 140,000.

Many of her correspondents "are in a body they still haven't accepted," and editor Van der Drift believes that allowing explicit language encourages her correspondents to speak more freely.

"I think that if you want to allow those kids some freedom... they must be allowed to use their own language... You can't censor Rear End," she said.

That openness has spawned its own controversy, with one irate parent recently writing in that "I protest... the polemic about private parts, a disgusting display of pornographic lust."

Van der Drift says her role in editing the column is to select about eight letters from a weekly crop of 200-300, with her sole criterion being if "the letter makes me feel this is real, these are emotions."

About a dozen of the 700 responses to the suicidal boy's lament made it into the Rear End column, and she delivered 120 in person.

The 47-year-old editor refuses to change the letters, even to the point of allowing spelling errors to appear.

Rear End is unique even in a nation like this, where there are virtually no subjects that are taboo, because of its function as a debating-by-mail forum.

"I'm pretty worried about that group of 13- to 18-year-olds," said Van der Drift, who started the column 13 years ago when her own children were teen-agers.

"What I wanted was a column that would be read by children and adults alike."

Although the Rear End letters deal mostly with personal problems, some writers air their views about environmental pollution, nuclear arms and the problems of the Third World.

"My experience is that girls are much better at putting their emotions in writing than boys," Van der Drift said.

In the case of the suicidal schoolboy, "It was all a matter of getting attention... he just beamed," she says.

Photography workshop Saturday

Pampa Fine Arts Association is sponsoring a photography workshop which will be held from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday, Jan. 16 in the Pampa Community Building, 200 N. Ballard.

Featured speaker is Robert Hirsch. He is a leading educator and has participated in numerous exhibits and workshops across the nation. He holds a bachelor of fine arts degree from the Rochester Institute of Technology and a master of fine arts degree from Arizona State University.

Hirsch is the author of a college-level textbook on photography scheduled for release in July of this year. The book, "Exploring Color Photography," is a comprehensive study of color photography which includes the most current non-silver process.

At the workshop, Hirsch will give a brief summary of the development of color photography and then show the works of several of the masters of contemporary color photography. Participants will learn how these photographers became involved with photography and how their styles and careers developed.

Following the presentation by Hirsch, workshop participants will be able to choose one of four areas of interest and attend a session of their choice. The sessions, listed with persons coordinating each, are:

- Camera selection, lens choice and use — Loyd Harvey.
- Visual awareness; finding and exploring a subject — Darlene Holmes.
- Mounting photographic prints — John Goes.
- Light; using flash and natural light — Michael Hartsock.

The workshop will conclude with a presentation by Harvey on composition and creativity.

The workshop is presented by Pampa Fine Arts Association as a service to the community and area. The public is invited.

Participants may register at the workshop between 8:30 and 8:55 a.m. Fee for attending is $5 for Association members and $10 for non-members.

Membership to Pampa Fine Arts Association will be made available at the workshop.

Gifted, talented classes to be held at WTSU

CANYON — The spring session of the Gifted and Talented Institute is scheduled to begin Jan. 16 on the West Texas State University campus.

A variety of enrichment classes designed to develop students' talents and interest through in-depth exploration will be offered Saturdays from 9:30 a.m. to noon.

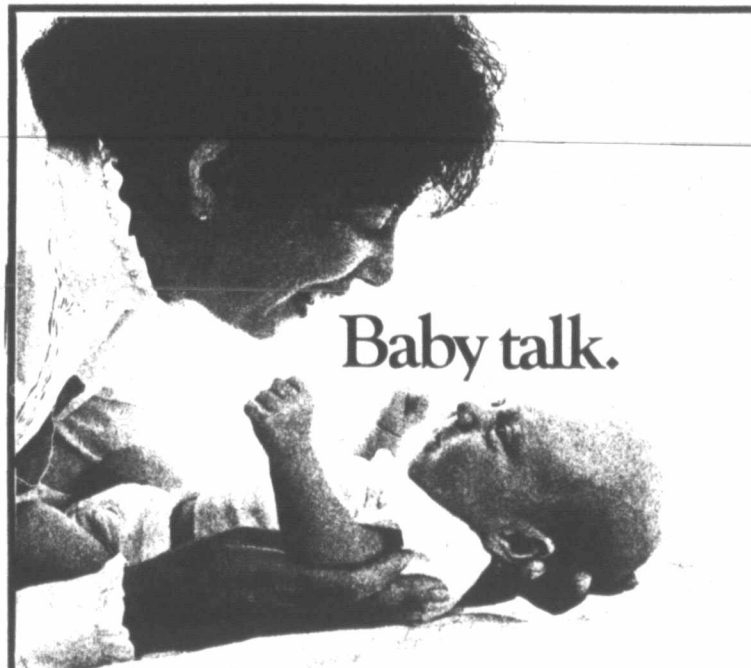

Classes are available to pre-school through 12th grade students who have been identified as gifted/talented or capable of high-level academic performance.

A variety of subjects will be offered, including reading, writing, the sciences, foreign cultures, fine arts and hobbies. Courses vary in length, lasting from two to seven weeks.

Spring curriculum also includes mentorships with WTSU faculty and staff for junior and senior high school students with a national percentile ranking of 97 or above and a study course for the SAT/ACT college entrance exams. The SAT/ACT preparation classes will meet from 7 to 10 p.m. Thursdays or from 2 to 5 p.m. Saturdays.

Persons interested in learning more about gifted and talented spring course offerings or in registering for classes may contact Mary Jane Reeves at 656-2619.

Astro-Graph

Dare to be a bolder person in the year ahead. Establish definite objectives financially and careerwise. Don't be afraid to try methods others don't endorse.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You will be greatly influenced by the company you keep today. Fortunately, you'll be associating with nice people, but they could have extravagant tastes. Major changes are ahead for Capricorns in the coming year. Send for your Astro-Graph predictions today. Mail $1 to Astro-Graph, c/o this newspaper, P.O. Box 91428, Cleveland, OH 44101-3428. Be sure to state your zodiac sign.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) If there is a secret ambition you want to fulfill today, don't allow yourself to be side-tracked by outside influences. Home in on your target.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Don't let someone create complications for you today just because this person doesn't like certain people that you do. It's not your problem.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) There are people who might try to trip you up today, but they'll have very tiny feet. A little deft maneuvering on your behalf will enable you to skip over them.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) The reason you've been unable to resolve a problem could be due to the angle from which you've been viewing it. A fresh slant may provide the elusive answer.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) Don't look for an easy out today in a tedious career matter. The sure-fire way to shift the tide in your favor can only be accomplished through hard work.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Your performance level will be up a few notches today, so strive to make the most of it. Don't worry about making a few boobies. They can easily be corrected.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Something you thought could be easily accomplished today may turn out to be a bit more difficult than you had anticipated. Nevertheless, you won't be confronted by anything you can't overcome.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) In order to further a personal interest today, you may be required to take a chance. Don't be afraid to gamble if you feel the odds are in your favor.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) Should you buy anything expensive today, be sure to keep the sales slip and the warranty. There's a slim possibility that you may need one or both.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) You are likely to be better at making money today than you will be at making friends. However, if you put your mind to it, you can do both equally well.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Try not to be reluctant today about sharing what you have with others. If you remember what they've done for you, you'll quickly have a change of heart.

Former Pirates' slugger elected to Hall of Fame

NEW YORK (AP) — After spending 21 seasons hitting towering drives into the summer sky, Willie Stargell just wants to keep both feet on the ground.

Stargell, who guided the Pittsburgh Pirates to two World Series titles with his bat and leadership, on Tuesday became the 17th player to be elected to the baseball Hall of Fame in the first year of eligibility.

Stargell was named on 352 of 427 ballots (82.4 percent) returned to the Baseball Writers' Association of America. In order to be elected, a player must be named on 75 percent of the ballots, which this year was 321.

When he learned of his induction, Stargell's eyes filled with tears. "I don't know where I'm at, I've lost that big ol' composure," he said. "To be in the same room as Babe, Hank and Ernie ... what a feeling. What an honor."

Stargell hit 475 homers with 1,540 runs batted in and a .282 batting average, all with the Pirates. He was equally regarded for his qualities as a leader on the field and in the clubhouse.

"I still try to keep both feet on the ground because my mama once told me to," the 47-year-old Stargell said.

For the other favorite on this year's ballot, Congressman Jim Bunning of Kentucky, the returns were not as favorable.

Bunning won 224 games, pitched a perfect game in 1964 and had 40 shutouts. In 17 seasons with Detroit, Philadelphia, Pittsburgh and Los Angeles, he struck out 2,855 batters. He was the second pitcher ever to win 100 games in both leagues and have a no-hitter in each. Cy Young was the only other man to achieve both.

After missing by 21 votes last year, Bunning fell four votes short with 317 (74.2 percent) in his 12th year of eligibility.

"I thought I had a shot," said Bunning, who was in Hawaii on Tuesday. He is still eligible for three more years. After that, he must wait three years before he can be considered by the veterans committee.

"I think I was right the first time," Bunning said. "If you don't make it right away, you should take your name off the ballot so you won't have to go through this every year."

"But I'll live. I'll get up in the morning and the sun will shine. It's great for Willie."

PMS cagers sweep Dumas

Pampa's 8th grade Red basketball team continues to roll along with a perfect record.

Pampa Red (10-0) wiped out Dumas Orange 41-13 Monday night. Sammy Laury was top scorer for Pampa with 7 points, followed closely by Randy Nichols, Phil Sexton and Andy Cavalier with 6 points each.

In a 7th grade game, Pampa Red won over Dumas Orange 42-22. Jason Brantley and Dwight Nickleberry had 12 points each to lead Pampa Red scoring.

Pampa 7th graders are now 7-2 on the season.

In girls' action, Nikki Ryan scored 30 points to lead Pampa 8th grade Red to a 43-16 win over Dumas Orange Monday night.

"It was a great effort by the whole team," added Pampa coach Connie Nicklas.

In a 7th grade game, Dumas Orange defeated Pampa Red 22-17. Elina Ryan was high scorer for Pampa with 12 points.

Cowboys looking to trade Dorsett

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

IRVING, Texas (AP) — Coach Tom Landry says Tony Dorsett's age will keep the Cowboys from getting a first-round draft pick for the 33-year-old running back.

But Landry said Tuesday he needs a good solid player in several positions, so perhaps Dallas can swap for somebody else.

Landry also said Dorsett's price tag could be a drawback.

Dorsett has a two-year contract at $500,000 a year and a $2.4 million annuity. Club President Tex Schramm said any club getting Dorsett would have to pick up the base salary and fund the annuity.

"It would be a gamble for another team," Landry said. "Of course, other top backs are getting what Tony is getting."

Landry told Dorsett on Monday he will try to work out a trade for the 11-year veteran who lost his starting tailback job to Herschel Walker during a 7-8 season in 1987.

"We'll test the trade market and see what is best for Tony and what is best for the team," Landry said. "We are the world's worst traders. Obviously, we won't get a first-round pick because of Tony's age. Maybe we can trade for a player. Maybe there is a player out there who can help us. We need help in a lot of positions."

Landry said Dorsett's age "will be a very critical thing. It eliminates so many teams because they are rebuilding. However, there are some teams that just missed the playoffs that might need help. Tony could go a couple of years. He is in remarkable shape."

Dorsett told Landry in a half-hour meeting he would like to go to Denver, San Francisco or the Los Angeles Rams.

"Tony said he doesn't want to finish his career on the bench," Landry said. "He would still get a lot of playing time with us behind Herschel but we'll try to honor his wishes."

On another matter, Landry said he has invited Danny White to quarterback school in the spring to see what kind of progress he is making with his injured right wrist.

White has said he might retire if his wrist doesn't get better. "We want to watch Danny and see how his wrist is doing," Landry said. "We want to see if things are going to get better. It's hard to speculate on whether Danny will be with us next season."

Harvesters shake off Dumas

By L.D. STRATE
Sports Editor

DUMAS — Pampa slipped out of Dumas Tuesday night with a chance to gain a first-place tie in the District 1-4A basketball race.

Dumas, however, almost made the Harvesters alter their plans just a bit. The matter was settled down the stretch when Pampa's David Duke hit three consecutive foul shots to turn back Dumas 37-34 and set up a meeting between the district's top two teams Friday night in McNeely Fieldhouse.

"We played hard, especially on defense, but our offense had trouble adjusting to Dumas' hustle," said Pampa coach Robert Hale. "They were after us."

Dumas came out with a press that caused Pampa more problems than it should have, according to Hale.

"Their press didn't hurt us that much. For some reason we couldn't see the back man and get him the basketball," Hale said.

Dumas never held a lead the final three quarters, but the Demons were persistent enough not to let the Harvesters gain more than a 6-point advantage. The score was tied seven times throughout the low-scoring contest and the Demons' biggest lead was two points, coming in the first quarter.

Pampa lifted its district record to 5-1 and 14-7 overall while Dumas falls to 1-5, 9-7. The Harvesters keep sole possession of second place with the victory.

Duke, the Harvesters' senior point guard, scored only 5 points, but his three foul shots in the closing seconds shut off upset-minded Dumas.

"David played some heady basketball and there was a lot of pressure on him when he hit those free throws," Hale said.

Pampa led 28-23 after three quarters, but Victor Tarin's basket and Dallas Smith's 3-point shot early in the final period knotted things at 28-28.

Pampa center Dustin Miller, who finished the night with 14 points, broke the deadlock with two consecutive baskets. Dumas never caught up again, but the Demons were never out of it until the final buzzer.

A driving layup by Smith cut Pampa's lead to two (34-32) and Dumas got the ball right back on a steal by James Tyler. However, Tyler missed a short-range jumper and Duke was fouled by Darren Dunham with 22 seconds to play.

Duke calmly drilled both foul shots, but the Harvesters weren't out of the woods yet. On Dumas' next trip downcourt, Smith missed a pull-up jumper, but Tarin was there to put the rebound in with 17 seconds to go.

After a Dumas timeout, the Demons tightened up on the in-bounds pass and Duke was intentionally fouled. Duke hit one of two from the foul line with seven seconds remaining and Pampa was awarded possession due to the intentional foul. With the score 37-34, Duke went to the foul line again with five seconds to go. Duke missed, but the Demons couldn't score the tying 3-pointer before the buzzer sounded.

Besides Miller, Jason Farmer was only other Harvester in double digit scoring with 12 points. Farmer had Pampa's only 3-pointer. Derek Ryan added 4 points and Jimmy Massick 2.

Tarin led Dumas with 14 points, followed by Smith's 13.

Pampa hosts district leading Levelland at 8 p.m. Friday night.

"It's great to be a position to play for first place," Hale said. "All the coaches and players are excited about it."

In the girls' game, Pampa saw its district hopes dimmed with a 64-56 loss to Dumas.

Pampa was ahead by six at halftime 33-27, but the ballhawking antics of Dumas' 5-1 guard Nichole Guidry helped force the Lady Harvesters into a dozen second-half turnovers. Dumas captured the lead 49-47 after three quarters and never trailed again.

Pampa's Yolanda Brown had 30 points and 16 rebounds, but her fourth foul just before halftime forced the 5-11 scoring machine to play conservative the second half.

"When Yolanda got that fourth foul, we just went flat," said Pampa coach Albert Nichols. "The other girls are going to have to learn to take up the slack in that kind of situation."

Dumas had four players in double figures to offset Brown's heavy point production. April Garrett led the way with 15 points, followed by Stephanie Barker with 14, Deedra Houlett 13, and Guidry 10.

Tacy Stoddard added 11 points for the Harvesters, followed by Melissa Redeemer with 6, Diane Wood 4, Keitha Clark 3, and Shawna Ford 2.

The Lady Harvesters host Levelland at 6:30 p.m. Friday night. In the latest Texas Association of Basketball Coaches poll, Levelland is ranked as the top Class 4A team in the state.

"We may not make it to the playoffs, but we've still got a good shot at our other goal, which is to win 20 games," Nichols said.

The Lady Harvesters have an overall 14-7 record with nine games remaining.

Astros' Pena on trade block

HOUSTON (AP) — Bert Pena has been placed on designated assignment, meaning the Houston Astros can try to trade him within 10 days or the infielder becomes a free agent.

The Tuesday move clears space on the Astros' 40-man roster for the additions of pitchers Dave Smith, Danny Darwin, Larry Andersen and Joaquin Andujar, who all signed free agent pacts with the club on Friday. The additions put the Houston roster at 40.

Pena, 28, has been in the Houston organization since signing a free agent contract on May 2, 1977. He spent parts of six seasons in Houston. In 21 games with the Astros in 1987, Pena had a .152 batting average with no home runs or RBI.

Pena is currently playing winter baseball for the Caguas club in his native Puerto Rico.

Good 'D' leads to victories

IT'S GREAT TO SEE basketball, Harvester style, starting to return to the PHS program. And increasing numbers of victories is the result.

In the successful "Mc Years", the McNeely and McPherson periods as head coaches, the emphasis was on defense and execution. Those two key ingredients to success of any sports team...football, hockey, baseball or basketball...had been omitted from the playbook at all levels in the school system, as well as the Optimist and summer league programs. It has taken Coach Robert Hale some long, dedicated hours and sleepless nights making his athletes understand that offense begins with defense, that defense begins with movement of feet and bodies and teamwork, not reaching arms and slapping hands; that offense demands respect for ball possession. But he's slowly getting that across, and it's paying off with "W's" on the scoreboard.

16, 16, 16, 15, 4. Those are the total number of games the six members of the District 4-1A boys basketball program had played entering last night's competition. It points out the great problem that some successful football program cause to exist. While five of the six district schools have fulfilled contracted agreements and maintained full basketball programs, Wheeler, which won the state Class A football title, has played only one-fourth of its scheduled contests.

That used to happen in the Phillips ISD in the period of sustained football success by the legendary Chesty Walker. Basketball coach

Sports Forum

By Warren
Hasse

Joe Hayes would arrange his basketball schedule, get it approved, and then be told, as the football season became successful, that he and his basketball players, fans and parents, would not be allowed to compete until the football team had played the final game. It wasn't for lack of basketball players, there were plenty available to keep the program going until some of the football players came out. It was, instead, a determined and conscious effort to keep Hayes' cage program from anyway siphoning any attention from the boss's football program. No matter how it cheated the basketball-only athlete, or more importantly, forced cancellations of scheduled games, thus impugning the school's image to uphold agreements, verbal or written, or the disappointments and hardships it caused coaches and players from the other teams.

After it had happened a couple of years in a row, those unexpected and unwanted open dates popping up on the early-season Harvester schedule, Clifton McNeely dropped the Blackhawks from any consideration. Instead, at increased expense and missed classroom time, but with guarantees that the games would be played, Vernon, Quanah and Childress became early season opponents as the Phillips Blackhawks became history. But at least there were no game-cancelling disappointments.

SPEAKING OF COACH Mc, it doesn't seem possible it was over 500 college wins ago that McNeely called the office early one afternoon and said: "Come on up to the gym about 3:30. We're going to scrimmage Hedley, and you'll enjoy watching their coach." That coach was Don Haske, the first time I had met him. That practice session, and others in his lengthy tenure at UTEP, were really fun to watch (and hear). He has a good set of lungs, an ample vocabulary, total self-confidence, and truly is "the Bear". Those verbal offerings, directed at some upper balcony students who found Haske's comments to his players very hilarious, sent UTEP athletic director George McCarty fleeing for his office rather than busting out laughing at courtside, leaving a couple of radio men to choke back their guffaws during a Miner practice session one day.

He invited the wife and me to breakfast one late December morn in the Border City. "I'll sure be glad when he graduates," said The Bear. He, in this case, was Bad News Barnes, the massive hunk that was leading the Miners to national prominence. Reasoning for the startling statement was nit-picking off-court antics of the to-be all-American that were making The Coach a financially devastated basket case.

And the story of Hank Iba's comments about an unheralded guard Don brought with him from Hedley are for another time. But that was more than 500 wins ago, a total quietly reached recently.

GOOD FRIEND PUTT wrote recently "the major reason the Aggies have a talent edge right now is because the Texas A&M backers are supporting (Jackie) Sherrill and most of the Longhorn backers quit supporting (Fred) Akers. They are supporting (Dave) McWilliams. Just wait and see how the University of Texas recruiting improves".

It is against NCAA rule for supporters to get involved in any way in recruiting, even talking to the kid next door if he's a prospect. If Putt means via financial contributions, one visit to the Austin school's campus verifies money never has been a problem. Most of the state's schools, such as WTSU, could operate on the Longhorn's discarded material.

But Putt is absolutely correct in one thing. Involvement by backers does get the job done. Example: SMU didn't lose a football game this past season, and chances are at least 50-50 the Mustangs won't lose one next season, either.

McLean girls victorious

By JIMMY PATTERSON
Sports Writer

McLEAN — Misty Magee sunk an outside shot with 1:45 left in the fourth quarter to lead the McLean Lady Tigers to a 57-44 win over visiting Groom.

With Magee's shot, the momentum shifted heavily to McLean as the Lady Tigers pulled ahead 51-38, their biggest lead of the game.

Although McLean shot only 35-percent from the floor, they did have four girls finish in double figures.

Magee, with 15, led the pack. Shandee Rice had 14, and Kim Beaver and Darla McAnear had 10 each.

Rebounding was the key for McLean, as the Lady Tigers pulled down 40 boards. Rice's 11 and Angie Reynolds' 10 led the way. By comparison, Groom was able to grab only 28 rebounds.

The Groom girls also had problems with consistency in their shooting, connecting on only 34-percent of their shots from the field.

Karen Bohr and Erin Eschle both had 14 points while Shannon Fields dropped in another 10.

With the win, McLean moves to 13-4 overall and 1-1 in district; Groom, also 1-1 in district, falls to 7-6.

McLEAN — 12 23 39 57
GROOM — 9 21 32 44
McLEAN (57) — Kim Beaver 5-8 FG, 0-0 FT, 10 points; Misty Magee 8-15, 3-5, 15; Darla McAnear 4-16, 2-3, 10; Angie Reynolds 2-10, 0-0, 4; Shandee Rice 5-12, 4-5, 14. TOTALS: 24-68 FG, 35-percent; 9-13 FT, 69-percent. GROOM (44) — Erin Eschle 7-23, 0-6, 14; Leslie Swett 1-4, 0-0, 2; Shannon Fields 5-10, 0-0, 10; Karen Bohr 5-12, 4-9, 14; Kelly Stroupe 0-3, 2-2, 2; Jenni English 0-1, 2-7, 2. TOT. ALS: 18-53 FG, 34-percent; 5-24 FT, 33-percent.
Halftime — McLean 23, Groom 21. Fouled-out — Karen Bohr, Rebounds — McLean 40, Groom 28. Turnovers — McLean 15, Groom 17.

Names in the news

NEW YORK (AP) — Sonny Bono — singer, restaurateur and Palm Springs mayoral candidate — says it took about 10 years to get over his split with Cher and get on with his new careers.

"Up until then, in the back of your mind you always have that picture of 'This would be real good if I could do that with Cher,' or whatever," Bono told Vanity Fair in its February issue. "But to move forward you really do have to disconnect. If you don't, you can't go on."

Bono, who hopes to be elected mayor in April, said his career went down after the split. "It's depressing. You become part of a circuit ... you guest-star on 'Love Boat' and 'Fantasy Island' and that's your career."

WASHINGTON (AP) — CBS anchorman Dan Rather acknowledges 1987 "wasn't my best year," but was a comeback year for him and the news division.

"We had a year, and I had a year, in which, yeah, we got knocked down a few times, more than one would like," Rather said, interviewed in Tuesday's editions of The Washington Post. "But when you can get up and come back, that's a good year."

The "CBS Evening News," which spent weeks at the bottom of the ratings earlier in the year, has been in first place for the past 16 weeks.

1 Card of Thanks

HAROLD SWANEY

We wish to thank Dr. Black, Dr. Sy and their office staff for their kindness and helpful efforts during the death of my husband, Harold Swaney. A thank you to the Pallbearers, those who sent flowers, food and performed other acts of kindness. Being almost total strangers in this community we are eternally grateful to the people of St. Vincent De Paul Church who attended the funeral services for my husband, the organist and vocalist, and Father Gary Sides who was there for us when needed him most. A special thanks also to Cabot Corporation employees and Southwest Bell and Engineering and many other Pampa businesses. May God bless each and every one of you. Our grateful and sincere thanks.

American charged

Marie Denby cries Tuesday after the Sandinista government charged her husband James of anti-government acts. Denby, of Carlinville, Ill., was captured by troops Dec. 6 while flying over Nicaraguan airspace. His brother William is at left.

Another Arab dies in Gaza

JERUSALEM (AP) — Seven Arabs were reportedly wounded today in scattered violence in the occupied territories, and sources said that four Palestinians accused of leading some of the riots would be deported soon.

On Tuesday, troops shot and killed a Moslem fundamentalist who charged them with a knife. The shooting in the Gaza Strip brought to 32 the official death toll in five weeks of riots and unrest in the Gaza Strip and West Bank, which Israel seized in the 1967 Middle East War.

Also Tuesday, a top U.N. official visiting Israel to investigate conditions in the occupied territories, was turned away from refugee camps in the Gaza Strip by Israeli troops and Arab rioters. The incident drew expressions of concern from the White House and the State Department.

Seven more Arabs were reported hurt today. One of the Arabs was wounded in a clash with troops at the Shati refugee camp in the occupied Gaza Strip, officials at Gaza's Shifa hospital said. They said the man, 20-year-old Mahar Hosni Taha, was shot in his right arm.

The Arab-owned Palestine Press Service said the other six Palestinians were injured in protests at the Gaza Strip town of Beit Hanoun. An army spokesman said only one protester was wounded by gunfire.

Sources, who spoke on condition of anonymity, confirmed Israeli newspaper reports that the four Arabs could be expelled within days, possibly even today.

Israel's select 10-member inner Cabinet met today to discuss the situation in the occupied territories. Israel radio said the meeting followed a consultation among Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir, Foreign Minister Shimon Peres and Defense Minister Yitzhak Rabin.

A commercial strike today silenced streets throughout large areas of the West Bank and Gaza Strip. Shopkeepers in Arab east Jerusalem also observed a partial commercial strike.

The daily Yediot Ahronot said preparations were being made to send the four deportees to Lebanon. They are among nine Palestinians ordered expelled. The paper said final decisions would be made by Shamir, Peres and Rabin.

Arab states neighboring Israel have said they will refuse to accept deportees, who have been accused by the army of inciting riots in the West Bank. The deportation order was criticized by the United States, which also voted for a U.N. Security Council resolution asking Israel to cancel the order.

Jawwad Boulos, an attorney for the prisoners, said Tuesday the four Arabs ordered expelled dropped their appeals after the army refused to reveal most of the evidence against them and barred family members from the hearings.
