Carter pushes policies in New England

CRANSTON, R.I. (AP) — President Carter set out Friday on a hectic, two-day political tour through snow-covered New England, where he peddled his programs and policies and campaigned for fellow Democrats.

On his first campaign swing this election year, Carter's first stop was at Providence, R.I., where he was greeted at Air National Guard facilities by visiting dignitaries. The public was barred from the airport area where Air Force One landed.

He was hurried to his first stop, the Rhode Island Group Health Association clinic in Providence. His appearance was aimed at underscoring the administration commitment to nationwide development of health maintenance organizations, which are pre-paid group medical programs in which members pay a flat membership fee.

Carter toured the clinic, shaking hands with employees and spending several minutes in pediatrics where he picked up some youngsters and patted others on their heads.

In nearby Cranston, Carter held a nationally broadcast news conference. He threatened stronger action if necessary to end the 74-day coal strike.

Although he said "I don't want to set a rigid time limit on anyone," he indicated his patience will not last another week. He could seek to halt the strike by invoking the Taft-Hartley Act, which would impose an 80-day back-to-work "cooling off" period.

Carter also said the proposed sale of jet fighters to Israel, Egypt and Saudi Arabia will not disrupt Israeli-Egyptian relations.

He also called for "tax reduction and tax reform," although he said the economy is strong.

Later, he attended a campaign reception for Sen. Claiborne Pell "a special friend of mine" and said, "I became president largely because of the campaign reforms of Claiborne Pell."

He told the reception crowd of about 500 that "we hope and pray" to reach agreement with the Soviet Union this year on a new treaty to limit nuclear arms.

He then flew to Bangor, Maine, for a $500-a-plate fund-raising dinner for Sen. William Hathaway at the Penobscot Valley Country Club, named after one of the Indian tribes that have claimed huge tracts of public and private lands in the state. About 100 people attended the fund-raiser. "The Indian claims question is not as unpopular with members of the country club as I thought it was," Carter quipped. "At least you haven't changed the name of the country club."

Later, at a town meeting in Bangor, the president drew warm applause from 3,000 to 4,000 Down Easterners when he criticized business tax deductions for so-called "three-martini lunches."

Although acknowledging that the "three-martini" description is a misnomer, Carter said it is unfair for businessmen to receive tax breaks not available to other citizens.

The White House was not calling it a campaign journey because public events occupied most of the president's schedule. That meant Democratic organizations were paying a minority share of the cost.

And when Carter was not engaged in overt politicking, he was campaigning on behalf of his programs and their approval, both in Congress and among the voters — and, obviously, seeking voter approval of his own stewardship.

Before leaving the White House, Carter declared both Rhode Island and New Hampshire major disaster areas because of the blizzard that struck both states Feb. 6.

After spending Friday night at the Bangor home of Robert Murray, Penobscot County Democratic Party chairman, Carter promised Hathaway he would join him at a political rally for Carter supporters, students, Democratic workers and labor leaders.

Then, at mid-morning today, Carter will attend his second town meeting of the trip, this one a 90-minute question and answer session for New Hampshire high school students in Nashua.

He returns to Washington this afternoon.

Bomb kills 14 persons in Ireland restaurant

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — A bomb exploded in a restaurant where more than 400 people had gone for a Friday night of dinner and dancing, killing at least 14 persons — many of them children — police said.

A spokesman said at least 25 persons were wounded.

"There could be more dead," he said. "It's carnage in there."

Police said the building caught fire after the blast and panic-stricken patrons rushed for doors and jumped out of windows, some with their clothing ablaze. Witnesses said the building turned into "an inferno" seconds after the blast, and then another bomb exploded in the parking lot.

"It exploded without warning," the police spokesman said of the blast inside the building. "We had an anonymous telephone caller on the line telling us that bombs had been planted when they exploded. The place was packed and the people in there had no chance to escape. The number of dead could be as high as 16 or 20. The bomb exploded without warning and there are bodies all over the place."

Security officials said they suspected the bombs were planted by the Provisional wing of the mainly Roman Catholic Irish Republican Army, which is trying to drive the British out of Northern Ireland and is reported launched on a new "campaign of terror" in Ulster's 8½-year sectarian war. The known death toll since August 1969 now is 1,822.

Just as the first bomb exploded, photographer Bill Hamilton arrived at the La Mon House in the staunchly Protestant Castlereagh district on the southern outskirts of Belfast. He was on a routine assignment to take pictures of celebrating members of the Irish Collie Club and a local motorcycle club, at two separate parties.

"People were tumbling out of the restaurant through doors and windows," he said. "They were screaming and panicking. Many had their clothes on fire. Those who were able helped them, but it was just carnage."

Police said many of the casualties were children, outfitted in their best party clothes to attend the Collie Club function with their parents.

Plans to seize coal mines ready

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration drew up plans Friday to seize the nation's strike-bound coal mines as government efforts to end to the 74-day United Mine Workers walkout dragged into the night.

A temporary takeover of the mines, which would be unprecedented, was one of three options presented to President Carter by Labor Secretary Ray Marshall for use if negotiations fail, according to administration sources.

A takeover of the mines would require congressional legislation, the sources said, adding that to be effective, congressional action would have to come quickly.

A temporary government takeover was listed as "a very serious option," by one source. "We're not playing games," he said.

Carter administration officials apparently hoped that a threatened takeover of strikebound mines with the government setting wages and benefits for miners would have the same effect this time.

However, the sources emphasized that this was not meant as an idle threat.

Carter, speaking at a news conference earlier Friday in Cranston, R.I., said he had asked negotiators to remain at the bargaining table "until a final settlement is reached." He warned of "more serious action" if the talks failed.

Truman's threatened takeover of the industry came on March 3, 1950, after an attempt to get striking miners back to work when a Taft-Hartley Act injunction failed.

Truman asked Congress for special legislation to permit the government to seize and operate the coal mines in view of the "dangerous" curtailment of coal production.

A settlement affecting 340,000 miners was reached two days later before Congress could act. It ended a series of intermittent strikes that had begun Sept. 14, 1949.

Secretary Marshall, working around the clock to find terms to end the present walkout, shuttled between union representatives gathered at the Labor Department and industry officials at the White House.

Negotiators for the miners' union was offered new concessions by the industry, but held out for more.

Sources close to the negotiations between the United Mine Workers and the Bituminous Coal Operators Association said the revised industry proposal included four major changes in the tentative agreement which was rejected overwhelmingly Sunday by

Haldeman's book goes on sale; key figures keep their silence

By The Associated Press

H.R. Haldeman's book on Watergate and the Richard Nixon presidency sparked new denials and disagreements Friday as "The Ends of Power" officially went on sale, drawing a steady stream of buyers.

The 352-page, $12.95 book was originally to be released Feb. 27, but was rushed out early after excerpts of the manuscript were leaked. The leak to The Washington Post touched off a furor in publishing circles and among newspapers and magazines that had paid thousands of dollars for the rights to publish parts of the story next week.

Most of the key figures — Nixon himself, Haldeman and chief White House domestic adviser John Ehrlichman — were silent or had little of substance to say about the book.

Haldeman issued a statement saying he was not in a position "to respond to the many questions and comments arising from the news reports of portions of my book .... I will simply say that I believe the book in its totality speaks for itself."

There was sharp reaction from Moscow, however, to Haldeman's claim that the Soviet Union asked the United States in 1969 to join in a nuclear attack on China. According to Haldeman, the Russians planned to go ahead on their own after Nixon rejected the offer, but backed away after diplomatic and intelligence efforts by the United States.

The Soviet news agency Tass described Haldeman's account as "nonsensical statements ... a lie from beginning to end." The agency said U.S. newspapers "continued to spread the fabrication," despite denials by American officials.

William Rogers, then secretary of state, said Friday that he had "never heard of anything like" a Soviet proposal for a joint U.S.-Russian attack on China, and added, "I'm sure I would have if it had happened."

Asked if such a proposal could have been made without his knowledge, he said, "No, I don't think so. I can't tell. There are a lot of people in government but I don't believe there could have been anything as serious as this — about an attack on China — without me knowing about it."

Henry Kissinger, then national security adviser, also said he knew nothing about any Soviet suggestion for a joint attack.

Mexican-Americans to aim probe at law enforcement agencies

By ED TODD

SAN ANGELO — The Mexican-American community in Texas is preparing to seek "a full-scale federal investigation of all law enforcement agencies" in several West Texas counties, according to Ruben Bonilla Jr., state director of the League of United Latin American Citizens.

Bonilla, a Corpus Christi attorney, disclosed that intent in a letter received late this week by District Attorney Rick Hamby of Big Spring.

Bonilla's intent to press for a general probe comes on the heels of a Glasscock County grand jury's decision not to return an indictment in the Nov. 6 slaying of Mexican national farm laborer Tiburcio Griego Santome, 37, between St. Lawrence and Garden City.

Griego was arrested at a church festival by Glasscock County Sheriff Royce "Booger" Pruit for being drunk and disorderly. According to reports, while in the back seat of the sheriff's car, Griego was shot and killed by ex-deputy sheriff G. B.

Constable says beating connected with Lozano

An Ector County constable was in satisfactory condition Friday night in Midland Memorial Hospital after reporting he was drugged and beaten in an attempt to keep him quiet about the death of Ector County Jail inmate Larry Lozano.

Leonard Garcia was in the hospital with three broken ribs and bruises.

Reports that Garcia is a member of the Brown Berets were denied Friday night by his wife. The Brown Berets is an activist Mexican-American group.

"They're trying to shut me up, definitely. They're afraid for me to get on the stand," Garcia was quoted by the Associated Press.

He refused to say who he thought were his assailants. Garcia claimed he ordered a soft drink at a nightspot while making routine checks Thursday night.

"I took a few sips and started to feel dizzy," Garcia told AP. Mrs. Garcia said he goes regularly to the nightspot while making his rounds, but not on a nightly basis.

The constable was quoted as saying

KGB agent questioned U.S. diplomat on strike

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Soviet KGB agent approached an American diplomat over lunch here in August 1969 with a startling question:

"What would be the attitude of the American government if the Russians launched a preemptive nuclear strike against China?"

The KGB agent was Boris Davydov, then listed as a second secretary in the Soviet Embassy here. The American diplomat was William Stearman, a specialist in Communist activies in Indochina.

Without instruction, and entirely on his own, Stearman told Davydov that it would be regarded as a serious threat to world peace.

The U.S. diplomat immediately reported the lunchtime conversation to his superiors and from there word went to former President Nixon.

This account was supplied to The Associated Press by a wellplaced source who asked that his name not be used.

It corroborates, in some ways, an account given by H. R. Haldeman in his new book, "The Ends of Power."

But the source flatly refutes as a total error, the former Nixon adviser's contention that the Russians made overtures to the United States "for a joint venture in the surgical strike (against China)."

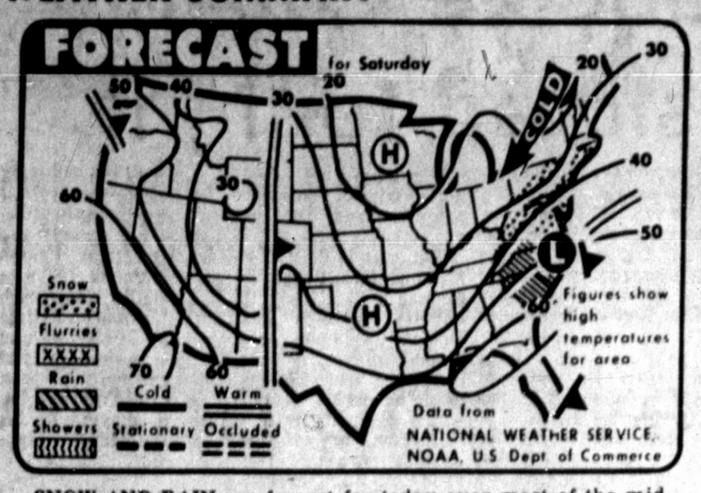

As the source described the luncheon, Davydov told Stearman that he had a chilling question that could not be asked of the United States government officially.

That question, it turned out, is what stand Washington would take if the Soviets attacked China with nuclear weapons.

Haldeman claimed that the Soviets had massed nuclear weapons along their border with China after the two, formerly close communist allies, had seen relations deteriorate.

The Soviets never used the nuclear force on the Chinese.

Therwhanger, 51, of Stanton after Griego attacked Pruit and Therwhanger with a steak knife. Both the sheriff and Therwhanger were cut.

Bonilla, blaming a "shoddy arrest procedure" for the circumstances leading to Griego's death, has claimed that the grand jurors showed "insensitivity" toward Mexican-Americans by not issuing a statement in returning a no-bill of indictment against Therwhanger. Bonilla claims that Griego was not handcuffed properly and was not thoroughly frisked.

Therwhanger, who has more than 20 years of law-enforcement experience, formerly served as a deputy sheriff in Martin County and as chief deputy sheriff in Dawson County.

Hamby and his assistant district attorney, Don Richard, last week presented evidence to the grand jury in its investigation into Griego's death. The jurors questioned and listened to at least 25 witnesses. At that time, Hamby said, the state provided two interpreters for the Spanish-speaking witnesses.

LULAC, through Bonilla, is charging discrimination on part of the grand jury and on the grand jury commissioners who selected the grand jurors. The commissioners were picked by 118th District Court Judge R. W. Caton of Big Spring.

"Quite clearly," Bonilla said in the letter to Hamby, "the Santome (Griego) Grand Jury should have had among its members Mexican-American and blacks who could have fairly and justly heard the evidence and rendered a decision that could be fully accepted by the entire community."

Bonilla is asking that Hamby file a court motion ordering the grand jury to reconvene and to replace some of the Anglos with representatives of the minority community.

"Needless to say, we're not calling another grand jury," Hamby's assistant, Richard, said Friday afternoon.

Otherwise, he said neither he nor Hamby had any comment on Bonilla's letter to Hamby.

"That letter wasn't for us," said Richard. He said, in effect, that Bonilla drafted the letter for the news media and to bolster LULAC's cause. Bonilla made copies of the letter available to the press.

"We feel we're being used," Richard said Friday.

Bonilla was in San Angelo late this week to talk to Griego's widow and Spanish-speaking grand jury witnesses about irregularities in the grand jury's secret proceedings.

"LULAC feels . . . that Glasscock County has developed a systematic pattern of denial of equal protection of the law and due process of the law by effectively excluding Mexican-Americans from serving on the grand jury," Bonilla told The Reporter-Telegram in a telephone interview.

"The grand jury was not 'mixed' . . .(to) properly represent the ethnic make-up of the county," he said.

However, on Feb. 10, the day the grand jury finished its deliberation, Richard said sparsely-population Glasscock County has only 13 Mexican-Americans who are registered voters. All together, about 575 of the county's approximately 1,100 residents are registered voters. Prospective grand jurors are selected from the voter registration rolls.

Glasscock County's economy is rooted in farming and ranching and in some oil and gas production.

In his letter to Hamby, Bonilla said Mexican-Americans in Texas "are in an uproar and outrage due to the killing of four Mexican-Americans within the last 90 days in West Texas while in legal custody."

Bonilla wrote that lawmen in several West Texas counties "apparently have no respect for law and order as it relates to Mexican-Americans."

His reference probably was to the counties of Ector (Odessa), Glasscock (Garden City), Howard (Big Spring) and El Paso (El Paso).

"Law enforcement officials and their cronies . . . are going unpunished and seemingly uninvestigated," Bonilla wrote

Bonilla also wrote that Therwhanger "apparently" had not been deputized at the time Griego was in Pruit's custody.

(Therwhanger and his wife reportedly were visiting Pruit and his wife in Garden City at the time the sheriff was summoned to a disturbance at St. Lawrence, a farming community 15 miles southwest of Garden City.)

Bonilla 's letter said in part that it is "undisputed that Tiburcio Griego Santome was shot from a 9mm gun at least four times at close range, while his left hand was handcuffed to Mr. Therw(h)anger's left hand."

However, law-enforcement sources have said that Therwhanger, who was sitting in the patrol car's front seat with Pruit, was holding onto the handcuff when Griego allegedly lashed out from the back seat of the car and cut the two men.

One source close to the sheriff said the car was traveling about 70 miles per hour and was facing on-coming traffic when the reported knife attack and shooting took place.

Therwhanger's wound to the left wrist required four stitches, the same source indicated.

Therwhanger currently is production superintendent for a Midland-based petroleum company.

Lance among several named in banking suit

WASHINGTON — Bert Lance, the former budget director, was named as a defendant in a suit filed Friday alleging he and others are using illegal means to try to get control of Washington's second largest banking company, Financial General Bankshares, Inc.

The suit, filed in U.S. district court here, was brought by Financial General, which seeks to enjoin the defendants from continuing their alleged takeover attempt. In the suit, the company claims the defendants have already acquired 20 percent of the stock.

Besides Lance, the defendants include Arkansas financier Jackson Stephens, a member of the executive committee of the Democratic National Committee and a major fund-raiser.

Also named in the suit are Stephens Inc., the country's 10th largest brokerage that is located in Little Rock and controlled by Stephens; Agha Hasan Abedi, a Pakistani-born financier, and the London-based bank he operates, Bank of Credit and Commerce International (BCCI); and Systematics Inc., a data processing service company for banks that is 80 percent controlled by Stephens Inc.

Eugene Metzger, a Washington attorney who is an outside counsel to Financial General and a major stockholder in the company, was also named as a defendant.

Financial General is a $2.2 billion bank-holding company that controls Union First National Bank of Washington as well as banks in New York and Tennessee. Financial General also owns a dozen banks in Maryland and Virginia.

According to the suit, the so-called "Lance group" began acquiring stock in the company last October, allegedly by paying "a premium price" to "a select and preferred group" of stockholders for their shares.

This could amount to an illegal tender offer if the premium was paid only to a select few and not to all of the stockholders.

However, the suit does not say which stockholders were paid the premium or the amount of the premium. Nor is the suit precise about how much stock has been acquired by the Lance group, saying only that it acquired "approximately 20 percent of Financial General's outstanding shares ..."

The suit says that, since October, the group has "surreptitiously" acquired more than 5 percent of Financial General with the intent of acquiring control of the company.

the union's bargaining council.

Included in the offer was a proposal to eliminate penalties against miners taking part in wildcat strikes — a key provision that the miners had found unacceptable.

Another key proposal would restore a cost-of-living formula to protect miners' wages against inflation. The proposal could mean pay increases of up to $2.45 over three years for miners who now average $7.80 an hour.

The council must approve any contract settlement before it can be submitted to the 160,000 striking miners for ratification. This would be done through a secret ballot process expected to take 10 days.

A third industry concession was agreement to drop a proposal that would have given mine managers flexibility on shift starting times.

A fourth concession would assure the hiring of UMW members for reclamation work at mine sites. The union's 1974 contract contains such a provision but the one the bargaining council rejected did not.

Despite the industry moves, members of the union's bargaining council said they wanted the industry to give in on other issues.

Council members still objected to industry proposals for company-run health plans, deductible health coverage and the disciplining of miners who refuse to cross picket lines set up by wildcatting miners.

He said two or three men beat him and left him face down in a pool of water near Midland Regional Air Terminal, where he was found by Midland police.

Lozano, 27, died in a hallway just outside a padded cell in Ector County Jail Jan. 22. Ector County Sheriff Elton Faught said Lozano had a history of mental disturbances and beat himself to death by slamming his head against a plexiglass window in the door of the cell.

However, a medical examiner who performed an autopsy at the request of the Lozano family has said it appears Lozano's death was a homocide.

State and federal agencies are investigating the death.

Garcia has been quoted as saying he doesn't believe Lozano killed himself, but would not say what information he might have. Mrs. Garcia said she does not know whether her husband was at the jail on Jan. 22.

Slightly warmer is prediction

Temperatures Sunday should be warmer, but just barely, with a high in the upper 40s compared to today's high which should be in the mid-40s.

The overnight low should be in the mid-20s.

Skies should be clear, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal. Winds should be northwesterly at 5 to 10 mph today becoming light and variable tonight.

The high temperature Friday was 35 degrees, and the low was 25. The weather service recorded a trace of precipitation.

All area towns reported cloudy and cold weather Friday. Stanton reported drifting sleet and snow, and Big Spring was experiencing intermittent mist.

The record high for Feb. 17 is 83 degrees set in 1977. The record low for today is 12 degrees in 1942.

Chowchilla kidnappers draw life sentences

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Two of the three young men who kidnapped a busload of school children in a wild scheme to get $5 million in ransom were sentenced Friday to life in prison without chance of parole.

The third also was sentenced to a life term but was judged eligible for parole under a youthful offender's law.

Superior Court Judge Leo Deegan, noting the planning that went into the crime and the men's convictions for causing bodily harm to three of their victims, refused to overrule the prescribed sentence of life without parole for James Schoenfeld and Fred Woods, both 26.

He ruled that the youngest kidnapper — Schoenfeld's 23year-old brother Richard — was eligible for parole under a youthful offender's law that no longer exists but was in effect at the time of the July 1976 abduction.

The three had confessed to kidnapping for ransom but had contested the bodily harm counts, which carried the noparole sentence. In the pre-sentencing hearing, their lawyers tried to convince the judge that the kidnappers had carefully provided for their victims' safety.

After the sentencing, the attorneys said they would appeal and try to overturn the bodily harm convictions.

The kidnapping at gunpoint began a 30-hour ordeal which ended when the 26 Chowchilla, Calif., children and bus driver Ed Ray burrowed out of a buried moving van which served as a makeshift prison.

Deegan had found that stomach disorders and fainting spells, reported by three of the children, constituted bodily harm.

First geothermal permit issued

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — The Railroad Commission has issued the first permit to drill a geothermal well in Texas.

General Crude Oil Co. of Houston will drill the well 11 miles south of Alvin in Brazoria County under a $5.8 million contract with the federal Department of Energy.

Projected depth is 16,500 feet.

Drilling is expected to begin in March with completion this summer. The company will then monitor the well for a year or so to determine whether brine from the well is a source of methane.

Vice president Robert Draper of General Crude said the well should produce about 40,000 barrels of brine a day, which should include approximately two million cubic feet of gas.

We live our lives surrounded by noise. Some we get used to and are barely conscious of. Some we can't stand — it drives us up the wall.

Yet for relaxation and inspiration millions of us turn to music. We do not think of it as noise. That is because it is sound with a purpose, with mood, message, a beautiful theme.

As music refines the clamor of noise, RELIGION unravels the confusion of everyday experience. Events, incidents, problems and trials that in themselves make little sense — become for the earnest believer challenges and stepping stones in his pursuit of Christian aims.

Join the millions who gather in Church each Sunday. Like you they are tired of noise and confusion. Their souls respond with courage and strength to the spiritual theme that runs faithfully through the Christian experience of life.

Do they come to hear the noise ?

Rev. and Mrs. Gene Moore

Guest minister, wife leading renewal rites

A spiritual renewal mission which began Friday night at St. Paul United Methodist Church, 4501 Thomason Drive, will continue through Sunday.

The Rev. and Mrs. Gene Moore, who have been Midland visitors on numerous past occasions, are conducting the services and special events during the weekend.

The renewal mission began with a fellowship supper Friday evening, followed by a worship service. Today's events will include a salad luncheon at noon and a sandwich supper at 6:30 p.m., with a worship service scheduled to begin at 7:30. An "afterglow" fellowship hour will follow.

Services on Sunday will begin at 10:50 a.m. and 7 p.m.

Moore is the featured speaker at each of the worship services this weekend. He is an ordained United Methodist minister as well as a singer and songwriter. Mrs. Moore is a talented pianist and solo vocalist.

The couple will be presenting special music at the services.

The Moores formerly were members of the Ed Robb evangelistic team and traveled in many parts of the world in that special ministry. They now head their own "Music and The Word" evangelistic association, and reside in Waco.

The congregation of St. Paul United Methodist Church is inviting the public to attend the special services this weekend. The church nursery will be open for the care of infants and small children

Former Midland pastor to lead Crane revival

CRANE — The Rev. Ed Robb, a United Methodist evangelist and former pastor of Methodist churches at Midland and Lubbock, will conduct revival services next week in Crane.

Robb will be preaching at Crane's First United Methodist Church, beginning Sunday and continuing through Wednesday.

The evangelistic crusade will be initiated with services at 10:50 a.m. and 7 p.m.. Sunday. The revival emphasis will continue Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday with breakfast meetings at 6:39 a.m. and evening services beginning at 7. The public has an invitation from the Crane First Methodist congregation and its pastor, the Rev. A. Carl Treat, to attend any or all of the special services.

Robb, who served as pastor of Midland's St. Paul United Methodist Church back in the 1960s, and recently pastored St. Luke's United Methodist Church at Lubbock, began his ministry as a pastor and preacher in 1946. He first entered the evangelistic field in the mid-1960s and during the intervening years has carried his special ministry to 40 states in the nation as well as to 39 foreign countries. Mr. Robb and his wife are the parents of five children, with both a son and a son-in-law now in the Methodist ministry.

Special music at the evangelistic services next week will be under direction of Marion Brunette, choir director for Crane's First United Methodist Church.

Chaplain to speak

Douglas M. Strong of San Antonio will be guest speaker Sunday morning at the Midland Unitarian Church, 3400 North A St.

Strong currently serves as chaplain at Methodist Hospital in San Antonio. He is completing studies at the Starr King School for Religious Leadership at Berkeley, Calif., and the San Antonio chaplaincy is part of an intern program in which he is participating.

A sixth-generation Unitarian, Strong holds degrees in clinical psychology and Spanish literature from the University of Wisconsin. He spent 10 years as a member of the national staff of the American Red Cross and served a Unitarian church in northern California as assistant minister before enrolling in Starr King School for Religious Leadership, a Unitarian theological seminary.

Strong will conduct the 10:30 a.m. Sunday worship service at the Midland church. The public will be welcomed at the service.

Church plans to move soon

Westside Church of Christ is announcing the upcoming move to its new church home, in a series of mailouts to residents in the western sector of the city.

The new church plant is nearing completion at 4410 W. Illinois Ave., and the congregation has prepared full-color bulletins depicting the new structure, as well as describing the church's history, beliefs and program of activities.

Four separate mailings of material are planned, to reach approximately 4,500 homes in the western part of Midland, said Dr. Owen Cosgrove, minister of the church. The mailout project is being overseen by the church's four elders, D. L. Bradley, George Hooper, Irving Jarratt and W. E. Nance. Persons who do not receive the mailouts and would like to have copies are invited to telephone the church office, 694-3614.

Revival offers daily service

ODESSA — Odessa's Victory Temple Revival Center, 6000 Andrews Highway, is presenting dynamic young evangelist Jackie Boiles in special revival services.

The "Sound of Victory" revival has services at 7:30 p.m. daily and the outreach is attracting visitors from throughout the area, including Midland.

Creation topic of conference

A winter Bible conference opened Friday at First Baptist Church, to continue through Sunday.

Dr. David Garland, professor of Old Testament at Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary at Fort Worth, is leader, presenting a study of "The Doctrine of Creation."

The first conference session was held Friday night. Today's sessions will begin at 10 a.m. and 7 p.m. He will be speaking during the church's 11 a.m. and 7 p.m. services on Sunday.

Judson Cornwall, pastor, Bible school teacher, TV minister, author and worldwide traveler, will be featured speaker at a Believer's Meeting scheduled in the city tonight.

The event, sponsored the Believer's Fellowship of Midland, will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the auditorium of Alamo Junior High School, 3800 W. Storey Ave. The public is invited to attend at no charge.

Cornwall's books, "Let Us Praise," "Let Us Draw Near" and "Let Us Abide," are widely circulated and have won him many fans and friends. He has appeared for a mumber of years in the television teaching program, "MANNA," produced by the Christian Broadcasti Network and carried over several dozen TV outlets weekly. He has been in the Christian ministry more than 45 years, 27 of them as pastor of churches on the West Coast. He travels upwards of 100,000 miles annually in his present ministry.

In addition to his speaking engagement here tonight, Cornwall will speak at 10:45 a.m. Sunday at Life Unlimited Church in Odessa, and at 7:30 p.m. Sunday at Holiday Inn of Midland. These events also will be open to the public.

Peace effort bolsters initiative

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

NEW YORK (AP) — A delegation from the three branches of American Judaism was in Egypt this week to open a dialogue with Moslem leaders, the first such officially representative U.S. Jewish visit in history.

It reflected a surge of initiatives both by Jews and Christians to enliven relations with Moslems, sparked by their rising influence in the world and their role in a sought-for peace in the Middle East.

All three monotheistic faiths find their origins in the Bible.

While the political efforts for peace temporarily were snarled over differences between the governments of Israel's Prime Minister Menachem Begin and Egypt's President Anwar Sadat, the new religious contacts bloomed.

Recent events "have opened new possibilities for serious and fruitful encounter between Moslems and Jews," says Rabbi Saul I. Teplitz of Woodmere, N. Y., president of the Synagogue Council of America.

He heads the 12-member council delegation, embracing Conservative, Orthodox and Reform wings of Judaism, with meetings scheduled over a twoweek period with Islamic and other religous leaders in Egypt.

While the Middle East conflict has obscured the fact, "Judaism and Islam share significant spiritual and cultural links," Teplitz says.

"It is our hope that as a result of our visit to Egypt, both faith communities will be encouraged to draw on their respective religious traditions to help heal the wounds caused by 30 years of political conflict and hasten the day of peace."

About 200 Jews still live in Egypt, compared to an estimated 65,000 to 75,000 there at Israel's establishment in 1948.

In a kindred development, the National Council of Churches, including most major Protestant and Eastern Orthodox denominations, recently set up its first task force to foster Christian-Moslem relations.

The unit's director, the Rev. Dr. Byron L. Haines, says U. S. Christians are taking "increasing interest" in Moslems, whose numbers have grown swiftly in America lately, along with the mounting sway of Islamic Arab nations in international affairs.

Conferences and study seminars of Christians and Moslems are taking place around the country, Haines says, noting that some local churches are offering their buildings to Moslems groups for worship and meetings.

So far, the agency has held two meetings, begun issuing a bi-monthly newsletter and compiled a list of about 300 U.S. Moslem organizations, but says the gathering of information still has a long ways to go, as does development of literature on the subject.

"The oneness of God is central to the belief of the Moslem and the Christian," Haines says. Despite differences over the role of Jesus and over the Islamic Scriptures, the Koran, Haines says both faiths worship the God of Abraham, Moses and Jesus.

Churches join voices for old city

By GEORGE W. CORNELL

For 16 centuries, Constantinople has been a major center of Christianity, at times rivaling Rome, and it remains the principal see of worldwide Eastern Orthodoxy. But it's now reported in trouble.

By a quirk of history, both Roman Catholic and Orthodox leaders — once opponents about it — last week jointly raised their voices in behalf of the historic religious center, appealing to President Carter for help.

They charged that restrictions by Turkish authorities against the Greek Orthodox community there, now a small minority in the modern, predominantly Moslem city of Istanbul, threatens the "very existence" of the spiritual hub of Orthodoxy.

"We express our shock and outrage at these actions," said the joint statement by the Roman Catholic-Eastern Orthdox consultation in this country, pledging common efforts against the restrictions.

Although Rome and Constantinople were bitter antagonists for centuries, particularly after the break between eastern and western branches of Christianity in 1054 A.D., the present era has brought a new sense of mutuality.

That renewed bond was reflected in the joint protest, citing the "historic significance" of the Orthodox see and its Ecumenical Patriarchate in manifesting the continuity of Christianity.

The "oppression of the Greek Orthodox in Turkey and the threat to the very existence of the Ecumenical Patriarch are all the more serious in this period" of increasing religious unity, the churchmen said.

The present Ecumenical Patriarch, Demetrios I, is spiritual leader of the world's 250 million Eastern Orthdox Christians, with offices in the aged center, part of a shrinking Orthodox community amid a now largely Moslem population.

Although recurrent Turkish pressures on the Orthodox enclave have been reported in recent years, the statement charges further "injurious actions" in recent months.

It has been the main Orthodox center since 325 A.D. when Emperor Constantine I transferred his capital there, calling it the "new Rome."

Suppers scheduled

The Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity next week will begin a series of Lenten soup suppers.

The programs will be held at 6:15 p.m. each Wednesday through March 15 in the parish hall. All parish families are invited to attend the gatherings.

'Inner healing' methods combine religion, medicine, psychology

By ROBERT DI VEROLI
Copley News Service

For years Ruth Carter Stapleton has been criticized by all sorts of people, mostly other Christians, except the ones she helps.

Their principal complaint is that she doesn't believe that accepting Jesus Christ as Lord and Savior necessarily solves all your problems.

You can do a lot toward making a place for yourself in the afterlife by being "born again," says Stapleton, but you'll most likely still be stuck with most of the annoying, sometimes crippling, big and little problems that most people must face in their lives.

That's where Stapleton's combination of religion and psychology, which she calls "inner healing," comes in.

Through being born again you are "saved" for eternity, but through inner healing you are made whole for the here and now, Stapleton said in an interview.

The trouble is that some Christians don't like her method today, as they didn't from the beginning 15 years ago, because she relies so much on psychology, long suspect in some Christian circles.

She has also been cricicized lately by Christians upset because she consorts with Oriental gurus, agnostic scientists and other unbelievers at the increasingly popular holistic health conferences which stress treatment of the whole person via medicine, psychology, religion and other disciplines.

And then there are non-Christian scoffers who dismiss her as a fanatical faith healer who has little to say, but who has managed to capitalize on the fact that her brother is President Carter.

Stapleton notes in passing, however, that her first book, "The Gift of Inner Healing," was a best-seller long before her brother became a national figure.

And while none of this criticism is causing Stapleton to abandon her ministry, it has tended in a sense to isolate her, says the diminutive wife of a Fayetteville, N.C., veterinarian and mother of four.

"I guess I really don't have a place to be. It makes for a very lonely life," said Stapleton, whose latest book is "The Experience of Inner Healing."

"I've been pioneering in this field for about 15 years now and only God knows the criticism, the persecution even, I've experienced at the hands of Christians, being called a witch disguised as an angel of light and other things," she said.

In her inner healing method, Stapleton seeks to remove the negative feelings that cause emotional hangups by getting people to relive the harmful childhood experiences in which she thinks they originated.

She then asks them to invite Christ to walk back into the past to be with them as they relive these imaginary scenes or "guided daydreams" so that the emotional scars may be cured by his love and forgiveness.

"Inner healing," says Stapleton, rests on an unconditional love and acceptance offered by both Christ and the therapist.

"Many ministers and religious periodicals criticized my method because it was difficult for them to accept this combination of religion and psychology and also because nowhere in the Bible did it literally say that Jesus walks through the past," she said.

Stapleton's answer is that psychology has since more than proved its usefulness to religion and that it was only after his death that Christ could be spoken of as walking back into anyone's past.

"Even so, I don't think that what I do is nearly as peculiar as spitting in the dirt and placing mud on a person's eyes to heal him of blindness the way Jesus did," Stapleton said in a reference to the account of Jesus' healing the blind man in John 9.

She also feels that criticism of her participation in holistic health conferences is as shortsighted as the suspicions directed at psychology.

"Holistic medicine can mean different things to different people," she said. "But to me it just means concentrating on healing the whole person spiritually, emotionally and physically plus the prevention of traumas connected with each.

"There are some holistic health movements I don't want to be connected with because they're off on tangents and don't have Jesus Christ in their work at all. To me, there's no way to be a whole person unless

Christ is in the center of it all, so if it's not Christ-centered, it's not holistic, even if they call themselves holic.

"But I will speak to some of those groups because I think I can supply the missing dimension, which is Christ, even though I've been criticized by Christians about this more than anything else.

"I just feel like some of these holistic groups need me because I have amessage that is Christ-centered and basic to the idea of the wholeness of the person..

"Sometimes when fundamentalist Christians see my name on one of these holistic health conference brochures I'll get maybe 100 letters wanting to know how I can associate with such people, but I can't always listen to Christians. I have to listen to the Spirit guiding me from within."

Stapleton, a Southern Baptist charismatic who speaks in tongues (but only in private), says she doesn't feel she is necessarily compromising her faith by sharing the platform with non-Christians.

One of these was Hustler magazine publisher Larry Flynt, whom she helped convert to Christianity.

"You wouldn't believe what Christians have said about my appearing with Larry Flint," she said. "Here was a person who wanted to know more about what I was doing, to share his life with him, asking me to pray with his wife and telling me that even if he couldn't accept Christ, to remember the world was full of Larry Flynts and to please don't stop trying.

"You see, some Christians don't know what it means to love unconditionally and I guess that's why I get so much more criticism from Christians than anyone," she added.

Clown ministry next Permian Lodge program

Members of the senior high United Methodist Youth Fellowship organization of First United Methodist Church will take their special clown ministry to Permian Lodge for a program Tuesday night.

The UMYC group instituted the clown ministry several months ago under the joint leadership of the Rev. Bill Weir, minister of program and education at First UMC, and Mrs. Weir. Members of the group dress as clowns and present their program in silence except for musical background. Mrs. Weir introduces the program and explains the significance of the traditional white clown face, and why clowns do not speak. In acting out a service, the young people's message to its audience is a message of love.

The youth clown ministry has been presented at retirement homes and convalescent centers in recent months.

Founder's Day observance set

Dr. Johnny Ramsey, pastor of Fort Worth's Rolling Hills Baptist Church and a widely-known speaker for revivals and Bible conferences, will be a special guest Sunday at Kelview Heights Baptist Church.

Dr. Ramsey will be honored at Founder's Day services at Kelview Heights Church, in recognition of his help in the establishment of the church 16 years ago. He will speak at the 10 a.m. Sunday service and at later services that day, said the Rev. Frank Johnson, host pastor.

Lenten series now under way

A series of Lenten Bible studies is under way at First United Methodist Church.

The studies are being presented between 12:30 and 1 p.m. each Wednesday, with Dr. Charles Lutrick, pastor of First Methodist Church, as leader. The studies are on the gospel of Mark, emphasizing the meaning of discipleship.

Preceding the weekly session, a hot meal is served at the church at 12 noon, open to all interested persons for $1 donation. The study sessions also are open to all interested persons in the city.

Lubbock group plans concerts

The Spiritual Soul Seekers of Lubbock, well-known gospel singing group, will present programs Sunday afternoon and evening in Midland's Antioch Baptist Church, 1400 E. Golf Course Road.

The concerts are scheduled for 3 and 8 p.m. Sunday and will be open to all interested persons in the community, said the Rev. Johnny A. Mitchell, host pastor.

Churches asked to form league

All churches in the city interested in forming a co-ed volleyball league are invited to attend an organizational meeting Sunday night at First Baptist Church.

The meeting is scheduled for 8:30 p.m. in the First Baptist activities building.

Plans call for the establishment of teams in three age groups: Students in grades 7 through 9, students in grades 10 through 12, and adults. Additional details will be provided at the meeting

Youth to serve spaghetti meal

Youth of Asbury United Methodist Church, West Dakota avenue and South Loraine street, will serve a spaghetti supper tonight in the church fellowship hall.

Serving will begin at 5 p.m. and continue until 8. Tickets, priced $2 for adults and $1 for children under age 11, will be for sale at the doors tonight. Proceeds from the supper will used by the youth group for various church-related projects. The public is invited to attend the event.

Congregation hosts secretary

The Church of God of Prophecy, 2211 W. Florida Ave., will be host to the denomination's West Texas missionary secretary at Sunday services.

Evella Bronson, formerly of Morgan City, La., will be featured speaker during the church's 6 p.m. worship service. Mrs. Bronson has been active in missions work for her church for many years and has participated in denominational missionary outreaches to Puerto Rico, the Virgin Islands, Jamaica, the Dominican Republic, Mexico, El Salvador, Nicaragua, Costa Rica and elsewhere.

During the Sunday morning service of the local church, scheduled to begin at 10, a special program titled "Unwanted Cross" will be presented. The Rev. R. A. Sircy, pastor of the church, is inviting the public to attend the morning and evening events.

Dummar feared wife forged will

By LINDA DEUTSCH

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Melvin Dummar, the would-be heir to Howard Hughes' millions, testified Friday he once feared that his wife, Bonnie, had forged a will to fulfill her dreams of inheriting Hughes' fortune.

"She used to tell me someday Uncle Howie was gonna leave us in his will," Dummar recalled.

When he first saw the will, Dummar said, "I was afraid because of her joking that maybe she might even be involved in it."

Dummar, testifying for a second day in the trial to determine the validity of the Mormon will, never explained what spurred his wife's jokes.

He said he had not told her of his 1967 desert encounter with a man who claimed to be Hughes.

"I was scared to death that either she was involved or somebody would accuse me of being involved with it," Dummar said in a slow western drawl.

Eventually, the 34-year-old Dummar said he decided Bonnie was innocent.

But that was after he had told more lies than he could remember. "I was just afraid that the whole world wouldn't believe what really happened," Dummar said.

The red-cheeked, youthful Dummar, a former Utah gas station operator who now delivers beer, hunched forward in the witness box and fought back tears as he recalled his private and public lies about the three-page, handwritten will.

"You got up on public television with a straight face and kept lying?" asked attorney Harold Rhoden.

"Yes," said Dummar.

Rhoden, seeking to restore Dummar's credibility, elicited again and again Dummar's statement that he had lied before but was now speaking the truth.

"You swear to God?" Rhoden asked.

"Yes," Dummar said firmly.

In a story more detailed than he has told before, Dummar said he received the will from a stranger and then delivered it to Mormon headquarters in Salt Lake City.

But first, he said, he used an electric frying pan to steam open the envelope — the same way he had peeked at his former wife's love letters to her boyfriend when they were were married.

Dummar remembered pulling the document from the damp envelope.

"Do you remember anything you saw?" said Rhoden.

"Yes," said Dummar. "My name."

"I just couldn't believe it," he said. "I don't know how many times I took it out and put it back in the envelope."

Then, he said, he decided to reseal it with glue from another envelope. "It didn't stick too good. So I put it in our little sandwich oven to heat it so it would stick."

After a few minutes of baking, Dummar said the envelope was sealed and he hid it.

"I didn't want anyone to see it lying around," he said. "I was scared that I'd opened something that wasn't mine, that I was in a will of Howard Hughes."

Later that day — April 27, 1976 — Dummar said he journeyed to Mormon headquarters where he tried to see the church president but was rebuffed. "He was busy or at a conference."

As Dummar told of leaving the will at the headquarters in another envelope, his explanation became confused and he choked back tears.

Rhoden asked why Dummar had disguised his handwriting on the envelope.

"I just wasn't thinking," said Dummar. "...I just didn't want anybody to know that I had it."

Two days later, he said, his name was in headlines, and the will was international news.

"Right after that they came out with a report that some mysterious woman had delivered it," Dummar said. "I figured if that's what they thought, I'd just leave it at that."

Hill sees suits to be settled out of court

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Attorney General John Hill said Friday he is "cautiously optimistic" that $1.6 billion in claims against Coastal States Gas Corp. can be settled out of court to the benefit of Coastal's natural gas customers.

Hill said, however, he would withhold approval of any proposed settlement until it has been "analyzed carefully" at extensive public hearings.

The attorney general held a news conference before meeting with the Lower Colorado River Authority — one of the major customers of Coastal's subsidiary, LoVaca Gathering Co. — to discuss a settlement.

Hill said he would tell LCRA's customers "to try to push ahead."

After a three-hour hearing, more than half of LCRA's 44 municipal and co-op customers declined to take an informal vote on a proposed settlement. Spokesmen said they wanted their boards or city councils to look at the proposal.

Hill described the proposed settlement as "generally sound and from an overall standpoint it is in the customers' long-range interest."

"I am cautiously optimistic . . . we may be able to bring about a sound settlement," he said.

Jack Hopper, a utilities consultant, asked Hill if he had analyzed the alternative of bankruptcy, and Hill replied:

"Not as completely as you probably have in mind, but we certainly have talked about it a great deal in the office."

The railroad commission, which also would have to approve any out-of-court settlement, has adopted an order requiring Coastal, LoVaca and another subsidiary, Coastal States Gas Producing Co., to refund $1.6 billion to their customers and to sell gas at the old, fixed contract prices.

The companies have asked the commission to reconsider its order, stating that it would bankrupt them and threaten gas service to its customers.

Hill said he had some "problems" with bankruptcy, and Hopper asked what they were.

For one, Hill said, "producers would not want to sell any more gas until" the companies had been restructured "and that can't be done overnight."

Also, he said, there is some question whether Coastal States Gas Corp. could be held liable for the $1.6 billion in claims.

In addition to the commission and Coastal-LoVaca customers, including the LCRA, Austin and San Antonio, any proposed settlement would have to be approved by such federal agencies as the Federal Power Commission and Securities and Exchange Commission.

England reports rate of inflation drops

LONDON (AP) — A jubilant Labor government announced Friday Britain's inflation rate has dropped below 10 percent for first time in four years.

The retail price index for January showed an annual inflation rate of 9.9 percent over the previous 12 months, compared with a 12.1 percent annual rate in December. The U.S. annual rate was last reported at 6.8 percent.

"The fact that our year-on year inflation rate has fallen below 10 percent for the first time since the oil crisis in October 1973 sets the seal on the transformation in Britain's financial situation over the last 12 months," Chancellor of the Exchequer Denis Healey said.

Healey, whose post is equivalent to America's treasury secretary, referred to the heavy financial burden imposed on the oil consuming nations when Arab oil producers initiated a trebling of oil prices after the 1973 Arab-Israeli war, and the world oil cartel picked up the higher rates.

"Our main aim in 1978 is to build on our success in reducing inflation so as to increase output and get unemployment down, while carrying the fight against inflation still further," Healey told a London business conference.

The government had been predicting inflation would slip below 10 percent by spring and Labor ministers were clearly delighted at beating their target.

"The achievement of singlefigure inflation months ahead of target is a bonus for us all," Employment Secretary Albert Booth said. "Now we have got to make sure that we keep it there — 7 percent or less is quite on the cards soon if we keep up our efforts.

LoVoca delays action against commissioner

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Lawyers for LoVaca Gathering Co. and its corporate parent agreed Friday to an indefinite delay in court proceedings attempting to show bias on the part of railroad commissioner Jon Newton.

The agreement was announced at a hearing that had been set on LoVaca's attempt to interrogate a dozen news reporters about their accounts of Newton's 1976 campaign statements.

Parties to the agreement included the railroad commission, Newton and commission chairman Mack Wallace.

A "stipulation" filed with State District Judge Herman Jones says issues between LoVaca and the commission would become moot if a settlement is reached with LoVaca's customers.

Settlement talks were being conducted Friday.

LoVaca's lawyers questioned Newton for three days last month in an effort to prove he had pre-judged the LoVaca gas rate case before he and Wallace voted for a final order on Dec. 12.

Jones previously gave LoVaca permission to interrogate Wallace about the bias issue.

The commission order holds LoVaca to pre-1973 gas rates of about 20 cents per 1,000 cubic feet (mcf), compared with current field prices of around $2 and requires customer refunds totaling $1.6 billion.

Newton denied making statements critical of LoVaca that were attributed to him in news reports. LoVaca then moved in Jones's court to compel 12 reporters to submit to questioning about their stories.

Reporters for The Associated Press, Harte-Hanks newspapers and the Houston Post were represented by lawyers in opposition to LoVaca's motion.

The AP's response said LoVaca's motion, if granted, would violate the constitutional guarantee of a free press by allowing its lawyers to interrogate reporters about information obtained in confidence.

Finger pressure therapy grows

The Los Angeles Times

TOKYO — When Yutaka Fukuda heard about the liver trouble suffered by the aunt of one of his patients, his advice was: "Have someone press vigorously on her big toes. That will help the liver."

Fukuda, a shiatsu (finger pressure) therapist, was serious.

An estimated 10 million Japanese take such advice, at least from time to time, and pay about $10 an hour for finger pressure therapy for such ailments as headaches, depression, asthma, and even diabetes. Wives are paying $125 for special courses so they can treat their husbands at home. And word of the needle-less Japanese version of the more famous China-originated acupuncture is beginning to spread abroad, as well.

Tokujiro Namikoshi, 73, chairman of the Japan Shiatsu Association, recognizes that the ancient therapy, older than Japan's recorded history, still faces an uphill battle to win the recognition he thinks it deserves.

Many people tend to lump finger pressure treatments, the more famous acupunture, anma (Chinese-style massage) and Western-style massage together.

To the true practitioner of finger pressure therapy, however, it has little in common with either of the two forms of massage practiced in Japan and only coincidentally shares with acupuncture an emphasis on "points" in the body.

While most Japanese learn massage techniques from their parents while they are children, training to become a finger pressure therapist is a two-year ordeal of 18-hour-a-week lessons. The training, for which future therapists pay $3,000, includes detailed lessons in anatomy, physiology, and pathology. And to Namikoshi, finger pressure therapy and acupuncture are "as different as peace and war."

"The needles of acupuncture are a form of anesthesia," he said." They 'kill' the nerves, at least temporarily. Pressure therapy brings forth the well-spring of life. It stimulates the body to use its own natural powers of recuperation. The principle of acupuncre is 'killing.' The principle of shiatsu is 'bringing to life.'"

Accupuncture, Namikoshi insisted, fails to treat an illness and only deals with the manifestation of an illness — pain.

"We do not regard pain itself as an illness," he explained. "Pain is only a warning signal (of an illness). It's like the alarm that goes off when an accident stops an elevator. Stopping the alarm isn't going to make the elevator work again. In the same way, acupuncture can stop the pain, but that isn't going to eliminate the cause of pain."

Namikoshi claims finger pressure therapy can do that.

From the patient's point of view, pressure therapy is part pleasure, part pain. The soothing, sleep-inducing effect of a massage is lacking. Rather, when the therapist presses his thumbs in a series of movements over the patient's clothed body, both the therapist and the patient can feel where the patient's trouble is located.

The "diagnosis" itself becomes a treatment.

"When a therapist presses on a congested or painful area, the patient does feel pain, but it is a pleasurable pain," said Tsuneo Kaneko, a therapist who runs his own school for therapist-trainees.

At the end of a treatment, the patient feels neither lethargy nor invigoration. After continued treatments over a period of time, the patient gradually comes to feel the body is "in tune" and "ready to go again," Kaneko said.

Shiatsu therapists, unlike masseurs, are careful to restrain pressure on problem points in the body and only build up the pressure applied as the problem area improves in subsequent treatments.

"It's when muscles get stiff that blood circulation becomes poor and the nerves malfunction (thus causing an illness)," Namikoshi said. "With high blood pressure, the neck is stiff. With diabetes, the pit of the stomach is hard. We tackle these stiff spots, softening them up to restore balance to the body and allow the body itself to carry out recovery."

Practitioners of Western medicine remain skeptical of the claims of finger pressure therapists. But one doctor, who asked not to be named, pointed out that many illnesses result from lack of exercise, which causes the stiffening of the muscles that finger pressure therapists treat.

"And besides, there is the psychological factor," this doctor said. "If a patient believes that shiatsu — or any other kind of therapy —will cure him, that fact alone does help recovery."

Quite a variety of people have been willing to give finger pressure therapy a try.

When Marilyn Monroe visited Japan on her honeymoon with Joe DiMaggio in 1951, Namikoshi took care of a crick in her neck with seven treatments. While visiting the United States, Namikoshi was called in to work on a stiffness in Muhammad Ali's shoulders before a bout with Floyd Patterson. And one of Namikoshi's therapists, while working on contract for a full year treating a Swiss industrialist, treated Princess Grace of Monaco, Namikoshi said.

Probe into cocaine for other uses suggested

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Harvard researcher urged Friday that the coca plant, the source of the drug cocaine, be investigated for possible use as an anti-depressant, for stomach disorders and as a coffee substitute.

The coca leaf is a South American folk medicine that Indians in the Andes chew to give them endurance. The leaf could be incorporated into a coca chewing gum, a prescription medicine, according to Dr. Andrew T. Weil of Harvard's Botanical Museum.

"...The leaf contains essential oils that give it a pleasant odor and flavor and may stimulate gastrointestinal secretion," Weil told the annual meeting of the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

"Coca also contains a number of vitamins and minerals, including nutritionally significant amounts of vitamin A, riboflavin, vitamin E, calcium, iron and phosphorous. It is important as a dietary adjunct in the lives of Indians of nutritionally deficient regions of the high Andes."

Weil said he is planning to apply to the Food and Drug Administration for permission to test the potential medicinal properties of the coca leaf.

"It tastes good," he told a news conference. "The act of chewing it is pleasant. It has a numbing effect in the mouth...a pleasant, warm feeling in your stomach....and there is an elevation of mood."

The drug is not toxic, Weil said, although there are some reports of mouth irritation in some users in South America. Coca products have a long history of use, according to Dr. Lester Grinspoon of the Harvard Medical School. Among users were Sigmund Freud and Thomas Edison.

Grinspoon said: "One of the most popular drinks containing coca extract was Coca-Cola, first concocted by John Styth Pemperton, a Georgia pharmacist, in 1886.

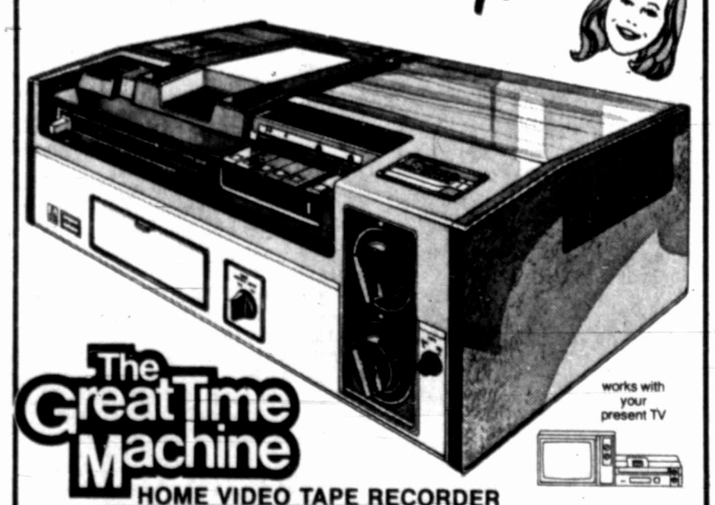

"Since cocaine is no longer an acceptable or legal stimulant, the Coca-Cola Co. does not like to have 'the Pepsi generation' reminded of this aspect of its early history....

"But the men who ran the Coca-Cola Co. were commercially astute enough to sense the change in public opinion that was to make cocaine a social outcast, and by the time the Pure Food and Drug Act was passed in 1906 they had taken it out of their drink and replaced it with caffeine."

Weil said that in South America, the coca leaf is used to relieve any sort of stomach distress, especially pain or spasm, nausea and indigestion.

Epileptics face massive social problems despite medical gains

By SHERRY ANGEL
The Los Angeles Times

SANTA ANA, Calif. — When it happened during her childhood, the nuns at her parochial school slapped her face and her parents spanked her while holding her head under cold water.

Today, Lottie King is 33, and it has been a long time since her epileptic seizures were mistaken for temper tantrums.

But Miss King says she still is being punished for her brief lapses of consciousness — in ways that hurt far more than a slap in in the face or a spanking ever did.

According to medical experts, Miss King is one of many victims of epilepsy who suffer more from society's reaction to the neurological disorder than from the seizure problem itself.

"The person with epilepsy has been handicapped not only by the unpredictable and evastating character of the disorder, but also by the consistent rejection in a society that fears what it does not understand," Dr. Richard Masland of Columbia University declared in a newsletter published recently by the Epilepsy Foundation of America.

DR. STANLEY VAN DEN NOORT, dean of the University of California at Irvine's college of medicine, noted that "our medical ability to control the disorder has run far ahead of social acceptance."

He said medication that reduces the frequency and intensity of seizures now enables about 80 percent of the estimated 2 million Americans who have epilepsy to lead normal lives.

However, officials of the Epilepsy Foundation of America say the stigma that has been attached to epilepsy has made many victims feel socially isolated and useless.

That stigma is believed to be an outgrowth of superstitions dating back to the Middle Ages, when people commonly thought epileptics were possessed by demons.

Epilepsy was viewed as a sacred illness when Julius Caesar had it, but fear characterized the prevailing attitude toward the mysterious disorder after the Roman leader's death in 44 BC.

In Scotland during the Middle Ages, men with epilepsy reportedly were castrated and women were buried alive with their children.

Historians also note that epileptics in America were ostracized in colonies like lepers as late as the 1800s.

And, until recent years, many states had laws that prevented victims of epilepsy from marrying and having children, even though many forms of the disorder are not hereditary.

THE PROBLEMS NOW being faced by victims of epilepsy may seem slight by comparison, but they have had a significant impact on the life-styles of many who suffer from seizure disorders.

Congress was concerned enough about those problems in 1975 to create the National Commission for the Control of Epilepsy and Its Consequences, which was authorized to develop a national action plan to help epileptics.

After a 16-month study, the commission concluded that unemployment is the main social problem facing epileptics today.

The study, which was made public last summer, revealed that the unemployment rate among epileptics is more than twice the national average.

The commission found "underemployment" to be an even greater problem, with epileptics being forced to settle for low-paying, menial jobs for which they were overqualified.

The Epilepsy Foundation of America (EFA) reports that victims of epilepsy also have difficulties obtaining insurance at reasonable rates.

(The EFA has addressed this problem by developing a low-cost national group life insurance plan for epileptics.)

"MISUNDERSTANDING is responsible for a large number of the problems faced by epileptics," explained Peter Van Haverbeke, director of information and education for the EFA.

"People don't understand that epilepsy has a wide diversity of symptoms. One person with epilepsy can be incapacitated while another can be president of a company and have no problem."

Public education was listed as a top priority in the national action plan developed by the Commission for the Control of Epilepsy and Its Consequences.

Education is crucial, according to the commission, because studies show that at least one-sixth of the victims of epilepsy suffer from psychological problems related to discriminatory treatment.

"Many victims of epilepsy either have been beaten down so much that they can't look you in the eye when they shake your hand, or they're mad as hell and walk around with a big chip on their shoulders," explained Charlie Stevenson, the EFA's western region representative.

BECAUSE OF THE WAY they have been treated, many victims of epilepsy attempt to hide the fact they have a seizure disorder, another EFA representative noted.

If asked about the disorder, they may deny they have it, becoming defensive or even hostile.

Through such behavior, epileptics sometimes alienate people, thus perpetuating the stigma others have attached to their disorders, the EFA official said.

Many EFA chapters and other epilepsy groups provide counseling to help the epileptic learn to accept himself so he can project a positive self-image.

That is also the goal of the national commission, which included in its action plan a provision to make such counseling widely available.

A more immediate goal of the commission and the EFA, however, is to destroy myths that have linked epilepsy with mental retardation, insanity and impaired intelligence.

THE COMMISSION'S national action plan calls for the establishment of a national information center on epilepsy to distribute literature emphasizing the following points:

—Epilepsy is not a disease, but a symptom of a disorder of the brain. The seizure occurs when the normal discharge of electrical activity from brain cells gets out of control, causing various reactions that often include involuntary movements and a temporary loss of consciousness.

—Epilepsy has no single cause. It can result from a number of conditions that injure the brain, including high temperatures, infections, head injuries and alcohol and drug abuse. Many cases can be prevented through immunizations against infectious diseases and optimal medical care during pregnancy and delivery to protect newborns from brain damage.

—Although 75 percent of all cases occur before the age of 20, epilepsy can affect anyone, at any age, at any time.

—There are many types of epileptic seizures, ranging from momentary lapses of attention that may go unnoticed to violent convulsions.

—Epilepsy is an episodic disability. In most cases, seizures are brief and infrequent. Between seizures, most victims are not physically or mentally affected by the disorder in any way.

THE NATIONAL COMMISSION for the Control of Epilepsy and Its Consequences agreed, noting that employers interviewed through its study still harbored many of the old fears and stereotypes that have been associated with epilepsy.

Epi-Hab, a nonprofit corporation in Los Angeles, fights the unemployment problem by providing jobs for persons who can't get industrial work because of seizure disorders.

Those jobs include packaging, machine shop work, product assembly and electronics.

Joseph Henry, general manager of Epi-Hab, says on-the-job accidents have been minimal. He said he minimizes risks by analyzing seizure patterns of individual workers to prevent them from being assigned to tasks that might be hazardous during a seizure.

Epi-Hab's goal, Henry said, is to prove to industry that epileptics can be productive workers, if they are given proper training, medical care and stable employment.

THE NATIONAL ACTION PLAN developed by the Commission for the Control of Epilepsy and Its Consequences includes a provision to prevent the unnecessary confinement of epileptics in jails and hospitals.

The plan calls for an eductional program to teach all public transit personnel, police officers and fire fighters how to recognize and handle seizures.

Public transit personnel are included as a target group primarily because many epileptics are unable to obtain driver's licenses.

According to state law, epileptics cannot be issued a driver's license unless their doctors will testify that they have been seizure-free for at least one year.

If a seizure occurs after a license has been issued, the license is suspended until the epileptic has gone another year without having a seizure.

A state official said epileptics also must pass a more stringent driver's test than most to obtain a license.

ALTHOUGH FEW DISPUTE the need for regulations restrictins restricting epileptics from driving, it is this limitation that most disturbs some victims — particularly youths such as Bryan Atkinson.

Bryan, a 16-year-old La Habra, Calif. High School student, wants nothing more than to have the independence and sense of belonging the driver's license has given his friends and older brothers.

Patty Wilson, 16, of La Palma, Calif., an epileptic who last year ran 1,310 miles from Buena Park, Calif., to Portland, Ore., keeps herself in condition by jogging 10 miles a day. Patty, who has become a symbol of hope to epileptics across the country, is planning to run across the United States in 1979. (Los Angeles Times Photo)

"I don't go to parties because I'm afraid if I stay up late or drink I'll have a seizure and injure my hopes of getting a driver's license," he said.

SIXTEEN-YEAR-OLD Patty Wilson of La Palma shares Bryan's longing to use the family car. But Patty doesn't let anything slow her down.

The talkative, boisterous Buena Park High School student became a symbol of hope to epileptics across the country last summer when she ran 1,310 miles from Buena Park, Calif., to Portland, Ore. — with a broken foot.

She completed the run — and keeps in shape by jogging 10 miles a day — despite the fact that she still has occasional petit mal and psychomotor seizures, which cause her to have brief lapses of consciousness.

She once had a seizure during a two-mile cross-country race in which she was the only female competitor.

She said she ran the last mile of the hilly course in a trance-like state, finishing ninth although she later couldn't remember anything but the beginning of the race.

SHORTLY BEFORE HER TREK to Oregon last summer, Patty decided she wanted to run for a cause.

With the encouragement of her parents, she chose to represent a minority group that had received little public exposure until that time.

The response was far more dramatic than she and her family had expected.

Patty, who is planning to run across the United States in 1979, received stacks of letters from other epileptics who said they were inspired by her accomplishment.

And, as she jogged up the pacific Coast with her father last summer, Patty met many people like Richard — a 16-year-old Oregon youth who ran across the state border with her.

As they talked, Richard revealed that he, too, had epilepsy. The friend who had accompanied Richard seemed stunned.

"Richard, you never told me you had epilepsy," he said.

"I never had the courage before this," Richard answered.

Professor's model train collection mind-boggling

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — Dr. William Furnish, a college professor with a genial laugh and a mischievous gleam in his eye, plucks a Lionel Blue Comet off one of the homemade track shelves in his home.

He delicately pulls off the roof and points to the car's toilet. "Look at this," he says. "The toilet actually lifts up. Can you imagine that?"

Furnish owns a model train collection that boggles the imagination. But it's not so much the thousands of cars and accessories that call attention to him as it is the perspective from which he views his avocation.

For Bill Furnish, a 62-year-old professor of anatomy at the University of Louisville, a train collection is a hybrid of history book and Disneyesque fantasy land.

Illusion and reality are blended in the basement of Furnish's roomy Louisville home, which is occupied by colorful tin-plate models — the kind you buy your kids for Christmas, only fancier.

On the one hand, as three or four trains begin to whoosh, hiss and chug, Furnish gently chides a visitor for suggesting that the noise lends reality to the scene.

"Remember," the white-haired Furnish admonishes, "there is no attempt to make this realistic in any way.

"A dealer friend of mine once came by and said to me, 'You know, your derricks are too large.' I said, 'You flunk.' He flunked because he was asking for everything to fit together and that defies the whole idea of toys."

On the other hand, Furnish researches his trains and their surroundings for every historical nuance.

Furnish hopes to perpetuate his collection by passing it on to his six children and their children. "I look on it as a kind of art form, a whole culture."

The third floor houses Furnish's model railroad collection, which, he explains, represents a more serious attempt to reproduce a railroad to scale.

In this model, Furnish's trains travel through a dizzying array of tunnels under a homemade Mount Rushmore. The maze is so complicated that Furnish promises visitors he will give them the train if they can guess which tunnel it will emerge from.

Furnish, who has been collecting intensively for 20 years, says he doesn't know the value of his collection and wouldn't tell if he did, though he admits his most valuable piece — a black Buddy-L locomotive — could bring $4,000 to $5,000.

Putting a monetary value on his trains "takes away from the spirit of collecting," Furnish says. "If I couldn't collect for the pleasure of collecting, something would go out of my life."

Hearing to be slated on CRMWD water bid

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — The Texas Water Commission plans to set a hearing on the application of the Colorado River Municipal Water District to construct 554,339 acre-front Stacy Reservoir on the Colorado River when the TWC meets Tuesday.

That hearing could see some opposition from the Lower Colorado River Authority, depending on the results of a study being prepared by Lockwood, Andrews and Newman for the LCRA.

LCRA General Manager Charles Herring says the study was ordered to determine the effects of the upstream reservoir on the Highland Lakes—which are under his agency's control.

"Based on that report, we'll determine what our position will be," Herring says.

The proposed reservoir would be located on parts of Runnels, Coleman and Concho counties.

In its application to the TWC, CRMWD requests a total impoundment of 554,339 acre-feet, with diversion and use of 89,000 acre-feet annually for municipal purposes, 30,000 acre-feet annually for industrial purposes, and 200 acre-feet for construction purposes.

Supreme Court may decide on civil rights liability

By MORTON MINTZ
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — At about dawn on May 29, 1975, in Pittsburgh, a cary carrying two black men was stopped by two white police officers for alleged traffic violations. A violent dispute, arrests and convictions followed.

Such episodes are commonplace around the country. But the one in Pittsburgh has put before the Supreme Court a question it hasn't answered up to now:

If police officers misuse authority entrusted to them by a municipal government to deprive citizens of constitutional rights, can that government be held accountable, in the federal courts, under a Reconstruction-era civil rights law?

In the Pittsburgh case, the occupants of the car were brothers Glenn R. and Harvey L. Mahone. They allege that solely because they are black, Police Officers David S. Waddle and Albert B. Ellway arrested them without probable cause to do so and abused them with racial epithets and other verbal harassment — and also with fists and nightsticks. Their lawyer said they were treated in a hospital.

Then, the brothers say in a brief in the Supreme Court, the officers threw them into a van, drove them to a station house and charged them with speeding and following too closely behind another car. The Mahones claim the charges were false. They were convicted the same day, on the basis of testimony by the officers that, they charge, also was false.

Later, claiming they had suffered bodily injury and mental anguish as a result of "a racially motivated patern of police misconduct ... against black citizens," the Mahones went into federal court to sue for damages.

They based their suit on various constitutional and legal grounds. But the 3rd U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals, accepting the allegations in the Mahones' complaint as true, focused on one issue: did the brothers have a claim against the city of Pittsburgh under what is known as Section 1981 of the U.S. Code?

Section 1981 says blacks "have the same right in every state ... to the full and equal benefit of all laws and proceedings for the security of persons as is enjoyed by white citizens, and shall be subject to like punishments, pains, penalties, taxes and exactions of every kind, and to no other."

Because of their race, the Mahones contended, they were subjected to officially inflicted "punishments, pains, penalties" and denied the "equal benefit" of laws and proceedings guaranteed by the section.

In modern times, neither the Supreme Court nor any federal appelate court has considered such a contention.

Last Aug. 24, the 3rd Circuit decided, 2 to 1, that the Mahones were right: "... the facts alleged fall within the broad language of both the 'equal benefits' and 'like punishment' clauses of section 1981."

In the opinion for the majority, Judge Max Rosenn wrote that 1981 derived from the Civil Rights Act of 1866, which "was not intended to have merely limited effect; rather, it was to eradicate all discrimination against blacks and to secure for them full freedom and equality in civil rights."

He said that section 1981 makes the city liable because the Mahones' complaint was "based not on private acts of violence, but instead on official misconduct under color of state law by the city's police officers."

The city, in its petition for Supreme Court review, denied that it is liable, citing a grant of congressional immunity recognized by the court in a 1961 ruling.

Rosenn, however, said that the ruling was based on a different section of the U.S. Code, 1983, which derived not from the 1866 civil rights law, but from the Civil Rights Act of 1871.

The 1871 law had a narrower scope because it was enacted to implement only the 14th Amendment, Rosenn said. The 1866 law, resting on the 13th Amendment as well as the 14tth, was intended to abolish all of "the remaining badges and vestiges of slavery," he held.

Carter leans to education

By FRANK CORMIER

WASHINGTON (AP) — What Cabinet officer do you suppose deals most ofen with President Carter on education matters?

If your answer is Joseph A. Califano, Jr., the secretary of health, education and welfare, Carter says you're wrong.

According to the president, the correct answer is Attorney General Griffin Bell.

Carter made this somewhat startling disclosure at a private White House reception last week for officials of the National Education Association.

According to a guest at the affair, Carter recalled that as governor of Georgia he spent 20 to 25 percent of his working hours dealing with one or another facet of education.

He was quoted as reporting the proportion is far, far less now that he's president. In fact, Carter was further quoted, Bell brings more education issues to the Oval Office than does Califano.

The informant said the president attributed the situation to the legal complexities involved in many education questions, notably those involving racial integration and desegregation.

Lest anyone mistake him, Carter quickly added words of high praise for Califano, the partygoer reported.

•

The reception for the NEA was one in a continuing series of White House social gatherings for groups ranging from Polish-Americans to Democratic Party fundraisers. NEA officials presumably were invited because Carter is counting on their help in trying to persuade Congress to create a new Department of Education.

Although Carter held a few similar receptions last year, the pace of entertaining has been stepped up since advisers recently began urging the president to widen the circle of those with whom he rubs shoulders — and to whom he delivers brief speeches intended to win new friends for the administration.

The Executive Office of the President has a new monthly newsletter for employees. It's called "People."

The three-page February issue, the first, contains such "hot" items as reports that James T. McIntyre, Jr., had been nominated to succeed Bert Lance as director of the Office of Management and Budget and that Special Trade Representative Robert Strauss had conducted trade talks in Tokyo.

Of course, EOP employees could have read about McIntyre and Strauss weeks earlier in the local newspapers.

Baby gets pacemaker

TOKYO — A team of Osaka surgeons saved a baby by fitting its heart with a pacemaker a week after its birth, a General Hospital spokesman said Friday.

The baby girl, born with a serious heart disturbance, was operated on January 18 and her progress since has been satisfactory.

The pacemaker was 5 centimeters in diameter, 19 millimeters thick and weighed 100 grams.

She will need a new operation in five or six years to change the battery.

Weak takeout double acts like boomerang

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

The young Swedish expert Svante Ryman did some fine card reading on today's hand in one of the tournaments sponsored by Philip Morris, demonstrating that a weak takeout double sometimes backfires.

Ryman captured the queen of spades with the ace and led the jack of hearts. West took the ace of hearts, cashed two high spades and gave up a spade to dummy.

Ryman could take eight tricks but couldn't rely on the diamond finesse since West needed the king of diamonds for his takeout double and for his eagerness to set up the spades.

South could also tell that West had doubled one club with very few high cards. Surely West had compensating distributional strength, such as a singleton club.

FORCED DISCARD

When Ryman ran the hearts, East, holding two diamonds and four clubs, had to make a final discard. He released a diamond, and South likewise saved one diamond and four clubs.

Declarer now cashed the ace of diamonds and led a club to dummy's king. On a club return from dummy East had to put up the jack since otherwise South would win a finesse with the ten. But South played low, and East then had to lead from his Q-9, allowing South to take the last two tricks with the A-10 of clubs.

ANSWER: Bid two clubs, the Stayman Convention, asking partner to bid a major suit of four or more cards. If he bids two spades or two hearts, you will raise to four of his suit. If he bids two diamonds (denying four or more of either major suit), you will jump to 3 NT.

March 1 deadline for car registration by mail

AUSTIN — Deadline for renewing 1977 motor vehicle registrations by mail is March 1, R. W. Townsley, director of the Motor Vehicle Division of the state Department of Highways and Public Transportation, reminded Texas motorists today.

Because of the new staggered registration system, it is taking longer to register vehicles this year, Townsley said.

Mail applications must include $1 for each registration to cover the cost of handling and postage.

Deadline for affixing new validation stickers to existing plates is April 1, as usual.

Houston signs Cesar Cedeno for $3.5 million

HOUSTON (AP) — The Houston Astros, named in one survey as being he lowest paying team in the National League, Friday signed centerfielder Cesar Cedeno to the biggest contract in major league baseball history, a 10-year pact calling for a reported $3.5 million.

"What we have here is a career contract," Astros President and General Manager Tal Smith said in announcing the agreement. "With a 10-year term and the opportunity to extend at that time, that makes it the longest playing contract in the history of baseball and the entire contract package makes it the largest in baseball history."

Cedeno's total contract exceeds the reported six-year $3.1 million contract outfielder Larry Hisle has signed with the Milwaukee Brewers. Hisle's annual salary would be higher, however if figured on the basis of the total package averaged per year.

Smith said the Astros and Cedeno had signed a letter of intent which outlined terms of the contract.

"All that remains is for the attorneys to draw up the contract," Smith said.

Sidney Shlenker, Cedeno's agent, agreed that all contract terms had been settled. "There are no further issues to be settled," Shlenker said.

The agreement means Cedeno, who started his career in an Astros uniform eight years ago, will be with the team through the 1987 season and the multi-talented outfielder said that's the way he always wanted it.

"I'm very pleased that we've finally made an agreement," Cedeno said. "As I've said before, I never wanted to leave Houston. Now I just think I'll be here forever."

Despite all the glamorous features of Cedeno's contract, it does not include a no-trade agreement, Smith said.

"We have not waived the right to waive or assign the contract of any player," Smith said. "We never have and I don't think we ever will."

Cedeno has a career batting average of .292, has appeared in four All-Star games and won Golden Glove fielding awards in 1972 and 1976. He slumped badly in the first half of the season hitting .179 as of June 22 before finishing at .279 for the year.

"I want to start out this season the way I finished last year," Cedeno said. "I've been working out hard every day and I feel like I'm ready to play."

Cedeno said he felt capable of playing 10 more years.

"I've kept myself in pretty good shape and unless I get hurt pretty badly I don't see why I couldn't (play 10 more years)," he said. "Probably even longer. I'll say this. They'll have to release me. I'll never retire."

Smith said the agreement with Cedeno leaves 18 players on the Astros' unsigned list for the 1978 season.

"And given the current rules of players contracts, I don't think that is very unusual," Smith said.

The Astros president also took strong exception to a Major League Players Association survey which ranked the Astros last in the National League in player payroll behind No. 1 Philadelphia.

"You have to look at the experience factor," Smith said. "The Houston Astros' 25-man roster at the start of the 1977 season had 73 years of major league experience. Philadephia's 25-man roster had 163 years of experience.

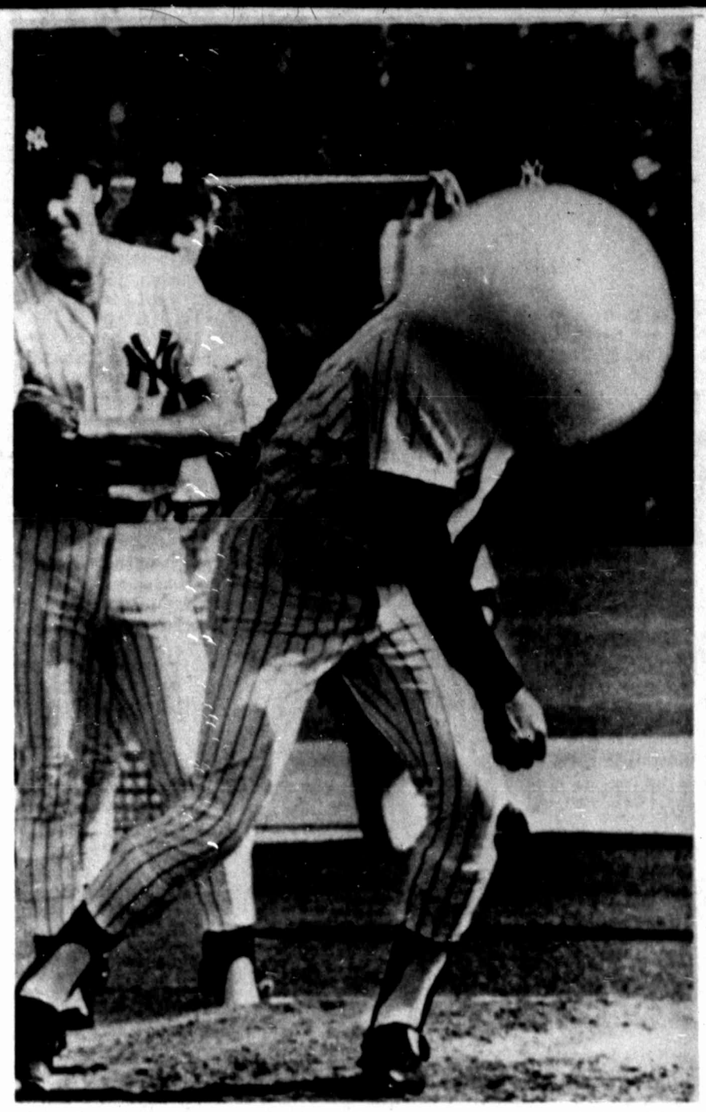

"If you averaged it out based on years of service, I think the Astros would compare quite favorably."

McGinnis leads 6ers past San Antonio

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — George McGinnis scored seven of his game-high 36 points during a fourth-period 13-point run as the Philadelphia 76ers rallied to beat the San Antonio Spurs 125-116 Friday night in a National Basketball Association game.

The game was tied at 95 after a basket with 8:55 left by George Gervin of San Antonio. But McGinnis started a 19-5 Philadelphia rally that gave the 76ers command.

It was the fourth straight victory and eighth in the last nine games for the 76ers, while the Spurs lost their second in a row.

Baseball breaks winter

By The Associated Press

The brutal winter still hasn't finished with much of the country, but in Florida and Arizona the rites of spring begin this week.

Forget the fury of winds and snow. For pitchers and catchers reporting to spring training bases this week, all that matters now are fast balls and curves.

A host of major league teams will shrug off the chills of winter by throwing open their camps to early arrivals this week. Or will they be late arrivals?

The world champion New York Yankees have been running an informal, unofficial camp at Fort Lauderdale, Fla., since Feb. 8, the day after 20-odd inches of snow fell on New York City. Chicago White Sox pitchers and catchers went to work at Sarasota, Fla., last Wednesday, the earliest official opening date.

Under terms of the current Basic Agreement between organized baseball and the players' association, players are not required to report to training camps before March 1. But every team in the majors except Baltimore has scheduled all of its players in camp before then and 17 clubs have set their first serious work for that date.

The Orioles have a March 2 arrival set for their infielders and outfielders with first fullscale workouts scheduled the next day.

The earliest full squad workout is the Feb. 25 set by the San Diego Padres, one of seven clubs pitching their camps in Arizona. The others are the Chicago Cubs, Cleveland, Milwaukee, Oakland, San Francisco and Seattle. Eighteen teams train in Florida and one club, the California Angels, will do its training in Holtville and Palm Springs, Calif.

The Padres will have company in their camp. The Yakult Swallows from Japan's Central League will share San Diego's base at Yuma, Ariz., from Feb. 20-March 13. In a similiar arrangement, the Chunichi Dragons trained with the Pittsburgh Pirates at Bradenton, Fla. in 1975.

The Swallows will play practice games against the Padres in Yuma March 5 and 8 and a regular exhibition game is scheduled between the Japanese team and the Cleveland Indians in Tucson March 12.

There are 15 exhibition games scheduled between major league clubs and various college teams. Included is a doubleheader at the Houston Astrodome April 4 with the University of Houston meeting the Texas Rangers in one game and the Houston Astros in the other.

The college games and Cleveland's contest against the Japanese team are part of a 350-game spring training schedule, with a half dozen of those games scheduled outside of the continental United States. St. Louis and Philadelphia will make a three-game swing through the Dominican Republic March 17-19 while Boston and Pittsburgh have a two-game set in Puerto Rico March 20-21 and Minnesota will play San Diego in Tijuana, Mexico, March 31.

The Boston-Pittsburgh games are part of the Ciudad Deportiva Series with proceeds turned over to the construction of the Roberto Clemente Sports City, named for the late Hall of Fame star of the Pirates.

Roger wants replays, but at team expense

BOSTON (AP) — Dallas Cowboy quarterback Roger Staubach said Friday the National Football League should settle officiating disputes with videotaped instant replays — but only if the complaining team uses one of its alloted timeouts.

"I'd hate to lose a game on a key officiating mistake," said Staubach, who guided the Cowboys past Denver in Super Bowl XII last Jan. 15, "but there should be strategy involved. I think replays would take pressure off the officials."

"A team gets three time-outs per half," he said, "and to see a replay on an official's call it ought to cost you a time-out." He said he rarely would use a timeout for that purpose.

"There were maybe 20 key plays last year that people complained about," Staubach said. "Special cameras could be used just for those selective situations."

Staubach defended NFL officiating in general but added, "With players so much quicker and faster than they used to be, the (officiating) mistakes become much more significant."

Alluding to the controversial "non-fumble" in the pivotal game between the Baltimore Colts and New England Patriots, Staubach said, "If cameras can prevent a New England-Baltimore situation, I'm all for it."

The Colts apparently fumbled the ball late in that game, but officials ruled the play had ended before the bobble. Baltimore then scored a winning touchdown in the final regular-season game and clinched a playoff berth.

Knicks romp over Detroit, 128-108

DETROIT (AP) — Earl Monroe, Spencer Haywood and Bob McAdoo combined for 76 points Friday night as the New York Knicks coasted to a 128-108 National Basketball Association victory over the Detroit Pistons.

Monroe finished with 28 points, Haywood with 25 and McAdoo 23 as the Knicks snapped a five-game road losing streak.

New York, which never trailed after midway through the first period, built a 67-56 halftime lead, then surged to an 8263 advantage halfway through the third period.

Doctor maintains Campbell edge

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Dr. Gil Morgan maintained his lead after the second round of the Glen Campbell-Los Angeles Open by firing a two-under-par 69 Friday for a 135 total. But the optometrist-golfer was wary of Jack Nicklaus, looming just three strokes behind.

Nicklaus, winner of 16 major championships, found his game with four birdies on the final nine for a 66 and a 138 total at the midway point of the 72-hole tournament.

"I took a so-so front nine, turned it around and played golf the way I know how to play," said Nicklaus.

He birdied the 11th hole with a 12-foot putt, the 13th with a four-footer, the 14th with a 10-footer and the 18th from 15 feet.

"That's by far the best nine I've played this year," said the five-time Masters champion who is playing his second tournament of 1978.

Dr. Morgan said after his round that he was aiming for a 69 after shooting a 66 in the opening round over the demanding, par 71, 7,029-yard Riviera Country Club course.

"I think I play better on difficult golf courses," said Dr. Morgan, who graduated from Southern College of Optometry but never has practiced that profession although licensed in both Florida and his home state of Oklahoma.

Morgan, a native of Wewoka, Okla., who had won his only pro tournament in the B.C. Open at Endicott, N.Y. last year, had four birdies, two with putts of 40 and 33 feet and carded a pair of bogeys.

Nicklaus started with a pair of birdies, including two putts from 25 feet, but finished the first nine at even par, missing putts of 12 and 3½ feet at the fourth and fifth holes. Then came his rally.

After Friday's round, the field was cut to 71 for Saturday and Sunday's nationally televised rounds. Scores of 149 or lower qualified.

Barry Jaeckel, who grew up near this Riviera course and was club champion, carded a 70 for 139. The son of character actor Richard Jaeckel said, "I definitely have a good advantage knowing this course as good as I do."

The two golfers who shared second place two strokes behind Morgan after the first round fell back. Danny Edwards shot a 72 for a 140 total, Forrest Fezler slipped to a 76 and 144.

Defending champion Tom Purtzer stayed in the running with a 69 and 141, while Keith Fergus matched that score. Nicklaus' 66 matched Morgan's opening round, but the veteran had opened with a 72, one over par.

Among those missing the cut were former U.S. Open champion Orville Moody with a 76— 152 and Pat Fitzsimons, the 1975 champion here, with a 79—156.

Fezler stayed in contention until the final hole when he carded a triple bogey.

Missing from the Los Angeles field are Tom Watson, winner of two Professional Golfers Association tourneys this year, Hubert Green, winner at Hawaii, and Arnold Palmer, who is in Australia. Bill Rogers, winner of the Bob Hope Desert Classic last Monday, remained in the field with a 7272—144.

At par 142 were a group including Wally Armstrong, Peter Oosterhuis, Tom Weiskopf, with a 68, Mike McCullough, also with a 68, Andy North and Gary Cook.

Ron Commons of Westlake Village, near Los Angeles, was the only amateur remaining. The University of Southern California freshman shot a 72 for a 147 total.

Burfeindt hits birds

PETERSBURGH, Fla. (AP)—Betty Burfeindt carded five birdies on the front nine en route to a 69 and grabbed a one-stroke lead after the first round of the 25th Ladies Professional Golf Association Orange Blossom Classic.

The 1976 LPGA champion from Palm Springs, Calif., had nines of 31-38 for a three-under-par score on the rain-soaked Pasadena Golf Club course.

One stroke back was another former LPGA champion, Sandra Post of Boynton Beach, Fla., and Kathy Ahern of Dallas.

Burfeindt credited her round to a chipping lesson from fellow LPGA professional Carol Mann of Towson, Md.

"She gave me a few pointers on my short game. I now have a tremendous amount of confidence. I feel I can get it up and down easily after missing a green. Just last week, I missed 10 greens in all and made eight bogeys on those holes. It affects my whole game," said Burfeindt.

Seven players were tied at 71, including Jane Blalock of Higland Beach, Fla.; Debbie Massey of Bethlehem, Pa.; Sandra Palmer of Boca Raton, Fla.; Debbie Meisterlin of Long Beach, Calif.; M.J. Smith of Dallas; Hollis Stacy of Savannah, Ga., and Donna White of West Palm Beach, Fla.

Heavy rain Thursday made for sloppy conditions on the 6,330-yard Pasadena layout.

The purse for the Orange Blossom Classic, the oldest cosponsored event on the LPGA tour is $60,000.

Curtis Dickey misses world record attempt

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — Texas A&M's Curtis Dickey, a newcomer to indoor track competition, raced to within two-hundreths of a second of the world indoor 60-yard dash record Friday in the preliminaries of the Southwest Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Dickey, an Aggie football running back, clocked a 6.13 to gain the finals and expected stiff competition from Texas Christian's Don Collins, who clocked 6.19 in his heat.

The world record is 6.11, set by Houston McTear.

Dickey ran the indoor 60-yard dash for the first time in his life last week and clocked a 6.17, the third best recorded time in the 60-yard dash. He took the finals medal with a 6.18 clocking.

The distance medley and the shot put were the only finals held in the afternoon session. By virtue of a 1-2-3 sweep in the shot, Houston took an early lead with 24 points. Arkansas, winner of the distance medley, was second with 10 points.

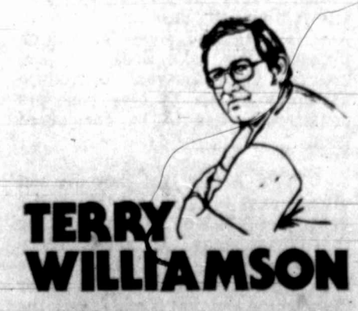

Another outstanding preliminary performance was turned in by Arkansas' premier distance runner, Niall O'Shaughnessey. The Irish Olympian turned in a 2:20.61 in the 1,000-yard prelims and came back about 15 minutes later to anchor the Razorbacks to the distance medley title with an anchor mile timing of 4:16.8.

Arkansas won in 10:07.24, with Texas Tech a close second at 10:08.09.

Mark Collins, Baylor's premier quarter-miler, won his heat of the 600-yard run in 1:12.01 and James Hymon of Houston led all qualifiers in the 880 with a clocking of 1:54.15.

Mark Baughman surprised favored teammate Randy Coffman by winning the shot put with a heave of 59-2¾ — 1¼ inches ahead of Coffman. Mark Chew was third at 55-11½.

Heaven is extra innings for Norman Autry

TERRY WILLIAMSON

I hope you will stay with me for a few minutes because I want to tell you about Norman William Autry. He was one of my best friends.

Norman left this world Thursday afternoon at the age of 81. I will miss him. He really knew how to live, and he packed a lot of living into those 81 years.

He was a Snyder oil distributor for 30 years and served that city as volunteer fire chief for 29 years. He was a Mason of 52 years, and he was once the president of the Texas Fireman's Association.

NORMAN ALSO had four children, eight grand children, eight great-grandchildren and one great-great-granchild. To top it all off, he was married to the same wonderful woman for 62 years. As you can see, he was a family man, who had a great sense of community service, and he had time for everybody. You just can't have many more riches than he possessed, and I never mentioned money once.

The world went through more changes in his lifetime than all of the history before him, and he was a student of the changes. Nothing escaped him, but he was amazed at the things that happened during his life. He once told me, "I never thought as a kid that it would be possible to go from Snyder to Amarillo in a day's time. You don't think anything about it now, but I think about it every time I drive in a car."

HERE WAS a man who went from horse and buggy transportation to rocketing a man to the moon. It was a swift change for all those who lived during his lifetime. Atom bombs, world wars, global disasters, computers, planes, cars and a multitude of other changes swept through and around his life. Somehow, it never changed him. His priorities were set, and his family, his God and his friends came first in his life.

He had another love, and that was baseball. That's what I really want to tell you about, but I just didn't feel it was fair to just jump into it. I think you should know what kind of man he was. He was lovable, and he loved baseball.

OH, HOW he could tell stories—especially baseball stories. I could sit and listen for hours to his baseball memories, and I often did. He could send my mind reeling with glorious diamond dreams. I heard those stories a hundred times, and I believed every one of them because he didn't deal in fiction. It didn't matter a bit to me that the facts would change every once in a while because the theme was the same every time. The heart of his stories never changed.

Many of his old friends often told me that Norman was a tremendous baseball player. Most think to this day that he had major league stuff as a pitcher, but he never saw a playing field that didn't have wagon ruts, lumps, bumps and a few scattered cow chips.

MY FAVORITE story concerns a game played between Ira and Roscoe on July 4. I was never able to ascertain what year that game was played, but it must have been a real event.

Norman got up that morning as a hungry teen-ager, hooked up the horses to the wagon and drove his team from Ira to Roscoe to arrive just in time for the game, which featured the best farm talent in the two towns. And that was real farm talent in those days.

Norman said, "It was 100 degrees in the shade." That didn't make much difference when there was baseball to be played. Norman pitched for Ira that day, and I wish I could have been there.

THE TWO teams battled to a 0-0 deadlock through 14 innings, and Norman had tossed a no-hitter. In the top of the 15th, he slamed a home run, a real shot. "The outfielders hadn't even picked up the ball when I crossed home plate," Norman would say, and that part of the story never changed.

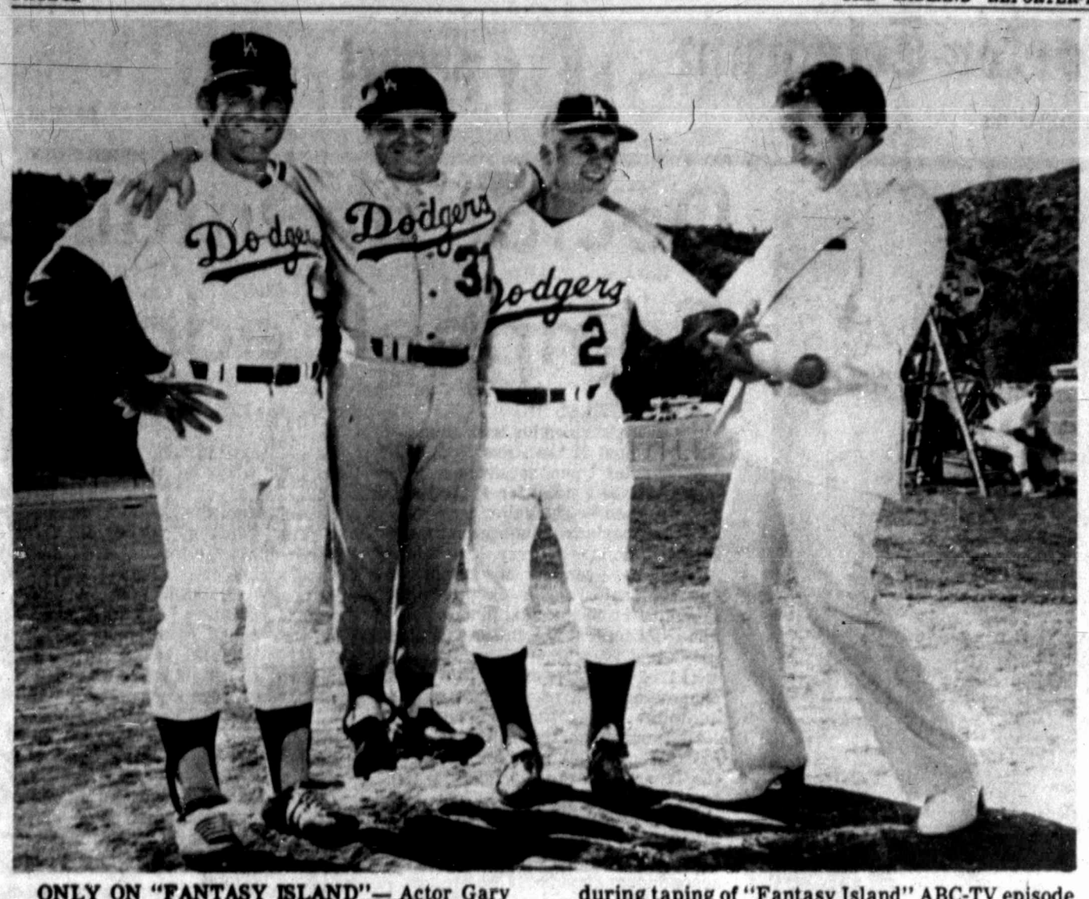

He went on to strike out the side in the 15th inning to perserve his no-hitter. Nineteen Roscoe batters had gone down swinging. Norman couldn't remenber if he had walked one or two men that day, but it was one of the best days of his life, and he often told me about it.

His family replaced baseball later in his life, but he never lost his love for the game. A few years ago, he went with my father, brother and me to Houston to see the Astros and Cubs play in the Astrodome. It was his first major league game, and it made me particularly happy to share that time with him.

"I NEVER thought I would see baseball come to this," he said after his first two innings in the Dome. "Just think, they pay those guys for playing on a rug under an air conditioner. In my day, I would have given up the farm to play in this place. But you know, the game is still the same. You still have to get three guys out every inning. The batters still have three strikes and four balls. I think we knew this game as good as they do." (I think he took great comfort in that.)

I guess everyone has his own opinion of what heaven is like, and I don't really want to get into that. Still, I can't help but feel that today Norman is going 15 innings, pitching a no-hitter, and winning it all with his own homer over a golden fence.

I know he can do it too—because he's my Grandad.

Andretti wins IROC; Petty hurt in pileup

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Mario Andretti captured a comfortable victory Friday in the final race in the 1977-78 International Race of Champions series after surviving a brutal three-car pileup that sent stock car star Richard Petty to the hospital.

Al Unser, involved in the crash, came out with enough points to take the IROC championship, joining his brother Bobby, A.J. Foyt and the late Mark Donohue as IROC titlists.

Petty, who blacked out when his car was punched in the side, came around in the track hospital and was held briefly for observation. Doctors said there appeared to be no serious injuries. But he later was moved to a local hospital for overnight obseration. Petty's crew said he seemed OK and would be able to race on Sunday.

Andretti was 7.8 seconds ahead of Darrell Waltrip, with Gordon Johncock third by a hood length. Cale Yarborough, Benny Parsons and Belgian Jacky Ickx followed.

Andretti, running in a draft with Yarborough, pulled away from the pack in the final laps and had the easiest win in the five years of IROC racing here.

The nine starters ran in close formation through 22 of the 40 laps.

But coming out of the second turn on the 23rd circuit, Andretti and Al Unser, one-time teammates, touched wheels and Unser went sideways out of control.

The other seven drivers made split second decisions on what evasive tactics they would take. Johncock, in third, tucked in high along the wall right behind Andretti, but the others fanned out in all directions.

Petty ducked in along the infield grass and just missed Unser. Unser started two complete loops when he hit the sodden infield turf. The car skipped along the regular surface, then nosed into a six-foot earthen wall, and vaulted over it. The mutilated car finally came to a stop just a few feet from the infield lake.

Petty, meanwhile, spun back across the track and was tboned by Johnny Rutherford. It took several minutes for rescue workers to get the dazed Petty out of the wreck. Unser and Rutherford walked away unassisted.

The race restarted with only Andretti, Johncock and Waltrip on the same lap.

The wreck gave Unser the title because Petty and Yarborough, who dropped hopelessly out of contention because of an unscheduled pit stop just before the wreck, were the only ones in the field with even a mathematical chance to overtake him.

In the first three races in the series (one on the oval at Michigan International Speedway last September and two on the road course at Riverside, Calif., International Raceway in October), Unser won two and finished fourth once.

Twelve drivers started the elite invitational series. Al Holbert, Tom Sneva and Benny Parsons failed to score enough points in the first three races to make the cut to nine for Daytona. Parsons was added to the field after Swedish Grand Prix driver Gunnar Nilsson withdrew because of illness.

The drivers compete in Chevrolet Camaros, all of which are prepared as identically as possible.

Bowlers make third tourney appearance

The third annual Tall City Professional Bowlers Tournament will get underway 10 a.m. today at the Super Bowl with the first of two squads rolling their six games.

The second or B squad rolls at noon with play continuing through Sunday.

Among the favorites are Bill Wells, the defending champion; John Denton and Henry Gonzales. Bob MacGregor, the 1976 champion, is not bowling this year because of hand problems.

Bowlers are entered from New Mexico, Colorado, Kansas, Oklahoma and Louisiana, as well as Texas, for the regional tournament which will pay $1,500 to the winner.

After Saturday's session, the bowlers will come back Sunday for four-game strings in the morning, the B squad rolling at 9 a.m. and the A group at noon.

The top 12 qualifiers then go at it head-to-head with the survivors settling the championship with a roll off at 5:30 p.m.

One of the highlights of the weekend will be a Pro-AM Saturday night with squads bowling at 7 and 9 p.m.

Amateurs will bowl three games on one pair of lanes and combine their handicap total with the scratch games of three different pros to make their pro-am score.

NFL musical chairs end as Bears name coach

CHICAGO (AP) — Neill Armstrong, newly named head coach of the Chicago Bears, Friday picked up the team's new motto of "Whatever It Takes."

Armstrong, 51-year-old defensive coordinator with the Minnesota Vikings the last eight seasons, was named the ninth head coach of the Bears in their 59-year history Thursday night and held a press conference Friday.

Armstrong, a native of Tishomingo, Okla., played for Oklahoma State from 1943-1946 when the Cowboys went 21 games without a loss in that span.

He played with the Philadelphia Eagles from 1947 through 1951 as an offensive end and defensive back, was an assistant coach at Oklahoma State and head coach in the Canadian League with the Edmonton Eskimos before joining Bud Grant and the Vikings as defensive coordinator.

"The Bears are a good, young team making progress," Armstrong said. "I'm fortunate to be coming into a situation where a team is coming off a good record. Usually when a new coach takes over he inherits a team that has been through disaster. The Bears made the playoffs last season.

"My philosophy and goal is to win with whatever it takes," said Armstrong, who took turns at the speaker's rostrum with his new boss, Jim Finks, general manager and vice president of the Bears.

Finks said he was relieved that his search for a head coach had ended following Jack Pardee's departure to take over the Washington Redskins last month.

"Neill was my first choice," said Finks, who was associated with Armstrong when Finks was boss of the Vikings and hired Bud Grant as head coach at Minnesota.

"I interviewed other people because I didn't want to leave any stone unturned and I wanted to get a feel of the situation. I talked to six other persons and all of them came to Chicago, but Neill was my choice all along.

"I feel we have potential on offense," said Finks. "Our offensive line is good and deep. We are stable at the quarterback position and we have five running backs that anyone in the National Football League would want.

"We are suspect on defense," said Finks. "We had injuries there last season but we still need help."

Finks said he was unimpressed with labels of a coach being a defensive specialist, which Armstrong is, or an offensive specialist.

"Neill will hire specialists to do their respective jobs," said Finks. "He will wear well and handle the pressures involved in the job."

Continuing the "Whatever It Takes" theme, Armstrong said "If we have to give the ball to Walter Payton 30 times to win, that's what we'll do. If we have to pass 30 times in a game, then that's what we'll do.

"Payton and (quarterback) Bob Avellini are important in the makeup of the team but it takes everyone to make a successful offense," said Armstrong. "But team defense is what wins. Every individual has to fit in the defensive scope."

Armstrong disagreed with those who want to label him as strictly a defensive coach and said "I've coached for 23 years and I was drafted as an offensive player but I ended up playing defense with the Eagles.

"Coaching defense makes you realize what you need on offense," said Armstrong.

Admitting that most teams have their staffs together for the 1978 season, Armstrong said there are a lot of good assistant coaches around who are not working.

"I want to get a staff together as quickly as possible but I also want to make sure that we get the right people for the right jobs," he said. "It shouldn't be too big a problem."

Before leaving the Bears, Pardee had hinted he was not happy with the Bears' playing or practicing facilities, nor pleased with the weather conditions.

"I haven't seen the facilities as yet," said Armstrong. "And who can complain about the weather after coming out of Canada and Minnesota."

Yanks give Hunter clean bill of health

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. (AP) — Pitcher Catfish Hunter of the New York Yankees was given a clean bill of health Friday.

The New York Yankees' onetime ace visited the team physician Thursday, fearing a recurrence of the urological problem — seminal vesiculitis — which bothered him in 1977. He was told everything was okay.

Diamond Trophy set for Lake Placid

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — Diamond Trophy events in skating and bobsledding and the North American two-man bobsled championship competition are set for today, Sunday and Monday at Lake Placid.

The champion North American two-man bobsled team is to be determined by competition Sunda, when American and Canadian sledders compete on Mt. van Hoevenberg.

The competing bobsled teams were to be chosen Saturday after both the Canadians and the Americans hold national events. The Saturday morning bobsled races feature 20 American sleds and six or seven Canadian sleds, officials said.

Defending champions for the American two-man title are the Saranac Lake team of Brent Rushlaw and Dennis Duprey.

The Canadian defending champions are Joe Kilburn and Joe Colvey.

The teams in the Canadian and American national events were to have a chance to compete again Monday in the Annual Diamond Trophy event.

Saturday, at the newly refrigerated speed skating oval at Lake Placid, 120 skaters were to compete in a Diamond Trophy pack-style speed skating event. Skaters from the eastern United States and Canada were to compete in seven age classes.

Skiers who are eligible to compete in the Feb. 23 National Alpine Championships on nearby Whiteface Mountain were expected to begin arriving in Lake Placid during the weekend. Former Olympic skiers including Phil and Steve Mahre of Whitefish, Mont., and Becky Dorsey of Wendham, Mass., are among the competitors in the first National Alpine event ever to be held on Whiteface. Officials say the event will be a test of the 3,000-foot slope that will be used during the 1980 Winter Olympics.

Ali wants championship

LONDON (AP) — Former heavyweight champion Muhammad Ali's flight to Dacca, Bangladesh was detained for two hours at Heathrow Airport Friday after a stopover here from Chicago.

At the air terminal he learned of the delay of his plane's departure because of a minor engine fault to the Bangladesh Airlines Boeing 707. Ali, his wife Veronica and the rest of the boxer's party of 10 spent the time in the VIP lounge.

The flight was due at Dacca at 1:15 a.m. EST.

Ali and his wife spent four hours at a hotel near the airport and drove back to the terminal after a lunch of kippers (smoked herring) and Brussels sprouts.

As Ali sat waiting in a car to leave for the airport, he greeted a 5-year-old girl who waved to him.

Ali beckoned Sarah Bevis, daughter of a professor at nearby Brunel University, over to the car and told her, "You're very pretty. I'm really glad to meet you."

Ali had arrived here earlier in the day and said he'd have a new battle plan the next time he meets Leon Spinks.

Spinks, a 24-year-old former Marine from St. Louis, won the world heavyweight boxing title from the 36-year Ali on a 15-round split decision in Las Vegas, Nev., Wednesday night.

Ali told newsmen at the airport on his way to Bangladesh, where he will become an honorary citizen, "It was a long fight and I now realize that my battle plan was wrong.

"I gave away the first five rounds thinking that he would punch himself out. Boy, did he prove me wrong. Next time I will come out dancing and keep moving around the ring and not just hang out waiting for him to hit me.

Ali insisted that he was not about to retire. "I must carry on," Ali said. "I cannot retire without the championship. It would disappoint and humiliate my fans. Very soon I will win back the championship for the third time — the first ever to do it."

He said that he planned "to rest for some time and then have another go to prove I am still the greatest or that time has beaten me. But I must try."

Ali said he was going to Bangladesh because "they have a few things to sort out and want Ali to make their country look great."

Ali was met in the airport's VIP lounge a Bangladesh representative in London, who said,"It is a great honor that we welcome Ali to our country. To celebrate the visit he will be made an honorary member of Bangladesh. This is the greatest honor in our country."

Ali said the invitation for his four-day visit, beginning Saturday, came from the Bangladesh government two months ago. The honorary citizenship will be bestowed by President Ziaur Rahman at a reception at Presidential House in Dacca.

The former champion will do some sightseeing in Bangladesh, attend a round of civic receptions, fight an exhibition bout at Dacca Stadium and dedicate a new boxing stadium to be named for him.

If Ali was tired at the airport news conference, he didn't show it. He seemed to be the Ali of old, clowning with newsmen and displaying some of the hijinks that made him boxing's most colorful champion.

"I asked how much money you guys were going to pay me, and they said you didn't have a budget," Ali joked to reporters. "So I made up a poem: 'I love your show, I admire your style, but with the money you pay, I won't be back for awhile.'"

Rookie goalie's debut fizzles in 4-2 loss

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — His debut fizzled in a 4-2 loss to the Minnesota North Stars, but rookie goalie Rick St. Croix is taking a live-and-learn attitude about minding the net for the Philadelphia Flyers.

"It's my first game," the 23-year-old said after his first National Hockey League start at the Spectrum Thursday night. "It was still quite a thrill for me. I know we wanted to win badly, but if I get down now, I'd be in bad shape in a few years.

"I was happy with some saves. I felt if I had played the goals differently, I might have had them, too. But that's how you learn in this game.

Flyers Coach Fred Shero said it shouldn't have been surprising for fans to see St. Croix in goal instead of No. 1 shot stopper Bernie Parent.

He also said St. Croix, the Flyers' 1975 fourth-round amateur draft choice, will remain with the team until back-up goalie Wayne Stephenson returns from his father's funeral in Winnipeg.

"We wanted to use him before, but then the Boston game was postponed," Shero said. "We used him tonight (Thursday) because we know he's capable."

On Friday, Shero said he gave his rookie a No. 4 rating — "That's above average" — and clearly wasn't blaming the loss on St. Croix.

"I liked a lot of things he did. We know he's capable. I think he handled himself well and he handled the shots well," the coach said in a telephone interview.

St. Croix, a former Oshawa junior goalie, is only the 11th man ever to play in goal for the Flyers in their 11 seasons. In the 1971-72 season, the club had four goalies and two more who dressed, but didn't play.

Shero said Parent will be in goal when the Flyers meet the Detroit Red Wings Saturday in a 1:30 p.m. matinee.

WEST TEXAS HUNTING AND FISHING

Crappie provide action at Spence

Big news at Lake Spence last week was that the crappie are biting. Numerous large strings were reported, along with some white bass, several striped bass and a few channel catfish and an occasional black bass.

Five fishermen reported an aggregate of more than 200 crappie and one striped bass weighing 17 pounds. Don Baker, Midland, hooked the striped bass and four blue catfish to six pounds.

David Waldrop and Lloyd McMann, Midland, took 61 crappie....David Foster Midland, landed a 10 1-2 pound stripler; Gayland Hunt, Midland, a four-pounder; Robert Corbell, Midland, a three-pounder; Mickey Honi and party of Midland, checked in with 20 white bass.

LAST WEEK, reports Oak Creek's Ike Pate, "was one of the best we have seen around this ole fishing hole in many moons. The fish were biting so well that the only way you could keep from catching something was to keep your hook out of the water. Boats were everywhere and fishermen lined the banks from one end of the lake to the other. "It sure would be nice if all of this was the truth,' confesses jokester Ike, "Fact is, it was a downright miserable week and even if the fish were biting, the few that came out didn't stay long enough to catch much." On the fishing prospects for the future, Pate says, "Most every fisherman already knows about the bass in Oak Creek. Any lake that receives the fishing pressure this lake does and can continue year-after-year to produce as many as six to nine pounders consistently has to be considered good.

"IT'S A fact that they are not always easy to catch, but they didn't get to be big fish by biting everything that comes along." He adds, "There is no shortage of channel cat in the lake either. These fish seem to prefer deep water and that is one reason the fishing dock here at Sportsman's Lodge is one of the better places on the lake to catch channel cat. "The north bank of the peninsula on the lake is one of the better spots to fish.

Parks and Wildlife people stocked bluecat in the lake in 1976 and this program is scheduled to run over a span of five years. These fish grow at a slow rate for the first three years, but then excelerate at a rapid rate. They often grow as large as the yellow cat and twice as mean."

A PUBLIC hearing on proposed changes in hunting and fishing regulations will be held 7 p.m., March 13 at the Midland County Courthouse. All interested citizens of Midland County are invited to attend and express their views on the proposals which are still subject to P&WD Commission approval.

Some of the changes include no protection of spike bucks; closing the season on whitetail deer in El Paso, Hudspeth, Culberson, Winkler and Andrews counties; increasing the Panhandle antelope season; eparate mule deer and whitetail deer regulations; increase the number of counties im which spring turkey season will be held; make quail seasons more uniform throughout the state, and for the first time the P&WD will be asking for comment in selected counties in the Hill Country and Edwards Plateau concerning the possibility of holding whitetail doe only hunting seasons.

THE FISHING reports from Colorado City Lake reveal the bluegill have been active in recent days, but Bill Glesby of Midland had even better luck with bass, landing 12 from two to six pounds.

Richard Smith and Bud Johnson, Midland, took 57 crappie to ¾ pounds and 52 pounds carp. Tim and Larry Reynolds, Midland, caught a string of crappie, several channel cat and several dozen carp up to six pounds each. M. Tremble, Stanton, took a 12-pound cat and 24-pound carp.

Slope travels West

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Franklin Jacobs, who has used his "slope" technique to make the high jump one of the glamor events of indoor track, makes his only West Coast appearances of the season tonight.

The 5-foot-8 Jacobs gets top billing, since he set the world indoor record by clearing 7 feet, 7¼ inches with his unorthodox "slope" style jump at the Millrose Games in New York last month.

Former record holder Dwight Stones will be among those competing against Jacobs, a sophomore from Fairleigh Dickinson in New Jersey. Olympic champion Jacek Wszola of Poland and 1976 Olympic silver medalist Greg Joy of Canada are among the other high jump entries.

"It's a difficult thing to be upset about, losing the indoor record," Stones said before the meeting with Jacobs at the Cow Palace. "That's because the event now draws a lot of attention. It's a major event and a lot of kids are getting into it.

Lost rivalry gets new spark

By The Associated Press

It was bound to happen sooner or later. But 47 years later...?

That's how long it has been since West Virginia University and Marshall University have met on the basketball court.

But Monday night, the teams will play in Morgantown and renew their almost forgotten series, which the Mountaineers lead 3-0, before a packed house of 15,000.

"The game has been sold out since the start of the year and the enthusiasm shown is tremendous," says Ron Steiner, WVU sports information director. "It's the first total sellout at the Coliseum since it was opened in 1969."

In addition, a West Virginia Invitational Tournament has been set for the 1978-79 season with West Virginia and Marshall acting as the host clubs. The first tournament will be played in Morgantown.

Why has the rivalry been renewed after all this time? Steiner believes that a change in WVU's adminstration accounted for it.

"James Harlow departed and Gene Budig became president of the university," noted Steiner. "I think political things were involved as to why WVU and Marshall have not gotten together until now. It wasn't up to the athletic department if we played them."

John Evenson, the SID at Marshall, echoed Steiner's thoughts: "The factor that pushed the game into reality was two college presidents agreeing to compete. I told them (WVU) we would play them on any date and under any terms if that is what they wanted and when Dr. Leland Byrd (WVU athletic director) called and told me he had an open date the game was set."

WVU and Marshall are the state's only Division I schools. Marshall gained Division I status in 1955, and since then, sports enthusiasts throughout the state have been calling for the series to resume.

The incident that might have led to the termination of the basketball series, surprisingly enough, had to do with a 1931 football recruit named John Zontini and a former Marshall and WVU Athletic Director named Roy "Legs" Hawley.

Miller worries Central Casting

By JIM MURRAY
The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

There was no such person as Johnny Miller. He was a product of Central Casting. He was the invention of the same wonderful people who brought you "Barb," or Edward G. Robinson as Little Caesar, Cagney as a hood or Ingrid Bergnan as a nun. Perfect type casting. Somebody at MGM phoned up MCA and said "Send me over a golfer. Blond, blue eyes, all these curls hanging over his forehead. Be sure he looks good in slacks and an alpaca."

Sears Roebuck clothing department drooled. Teen-age girls swooned. Madison Avenue went bonkers.

Now, if he could only play golf! One Laura Baugh was all the toothpaste ads could take.

Johnny Miller could play golf as if somebody reached in back and couldn't birdie. He could eagle Rhode Island. He didn't drink, smoke, chew or swear. Lochinvar. A character right out of King Arthur or Ivanhoe. All this and an Open winner, too. Man, he'd sell all the toothpaste they could make! There wouldn't be a pair of slacks on the rack.

IT WASN'T a career, it was a parade. He birdied life. The big home in Napa. Australia was on the phone. Would he come down and play for $45,000 or so a week? Sponsors took numbers and lined up

Then, suddenly, the music stopped. The lights went out. The drives started landing in the rough. Excalibur turned into a wet noodle. Lochinvar missed the cut. Sir Lancelot was shooting 85's.

In January of 1974, Johnny Miller won the Crosby, the Phoenix and the Tucson Opens and made $4,000 in Hawaii. He shot one 62, one 66, one 67 and several 68's and 69's in that stretch. He made $91,804 for the month. He was running neck-and-neck with the Bank of England for the period.

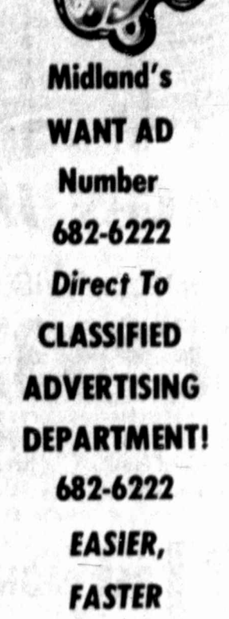

In January 1975, Johnny Miller won the Phoenix by 14 shots, the Tucson by 9 shots and the Hope by a bunch. He shot two 61's two 64's and a whole bunch of 66's and 67's and 68's. He made $107,318 for the period.

In January 1976, Johnny Miller in January. "Cactus John," they called him. In three

Make a very wise investment:
The 1978 Taurus.

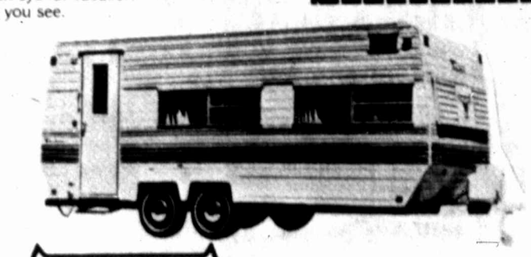

This is the travel trailer that offers features you'd expect in a much higher priced RV.

For example, measure the headroom in the new Taurus. It's a full 6'4½" throughout.

You have nine Taurus floor plans to choose from, in models ranging from 17 to 29 feet.

Check them out at your Jerry/Taurus Dealer. If you've got an eye for vacation value, you'll like what you see.
