Socio-Economic Disaster Possible

By BILL TORRES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

WHAT COULD be a boon for the Air Force's weapons arsenal looms as a potential disaster for High Plains and Eastern New Mexico residents who may be displaced if an MX missile testing site is situated northwest of Lubbock as has been proposed.

An important link in this country's defense system, the MX is expected to be bigger, more advanced and more securely hidden from potential attack than the Titan and Minuteman missiles now in use.

But the Air Force needs land, lots of it, to situate testing apparatus for the MX and a vast area north and west of Lubbock is being considered for the project.

For various reasons, residents of the High Plains are still unaware of the proposed missile testing project. Testing could have an enormous impact on the economy and livelihood of this or any of seven sites under consideration in the western United States.

A large area of the Panhandle, roughly between Lubbock and Amarillo and extending westward near Hereford and Muleshoe and into New Mexico, is one of two sites in Texas being looked at by the Air Force.

The other candidate site lies in the West Texas-Rio Grande Basin region.

Touted as "the next generation of land-based intercontinental ballistic missiles," the MX is in its developmental stages.

But the mere presence of a testing area for the MX could mean large-scale displacement of residents — "as many as 99,500 persons or as few as 3,000," an Air Force environmental study matter-of-factly concludes. Or the project could create an economic stimulus.

Designed to upgrade the TRIAD defense system, the MX, when fully developed, is expected to carry up to 12 "high-yield" nuclear weapons on its four-stage, 70-foot-high structure.

Weighing 190,000 pounds apiece, the MX missiles would dwarf the Titan and Minuteman now in use. The MX, however, would be hidden via any of several methods to assure a "survivable" force of nuclear weapons in case of attack.

Cost of developing the MX?

Approximately $6 billion to $7 billion. And, up to $35 billion for deployment and maintenance for 10 years.

But the reality is that very few of the dollars for development of the MX would end up at any of the seven proposed sites across the country.

California would stand to gain 28,300 new jobs in conjunction with the MX development. This compares with 3,400 additional jobs in Texas. Of the many billions of dollars being budgeted for the weapons system, only $150 million would filter into Texas's economy and only $40 million in earnings throughout Texas during the preliminary, engineering stage of the MX.

Why the silence on the project in the High Plains?

Only five of Texas's state agencies have made official comments to the Air Force concerning the proposed sites in Texas. The general land office, the office of the governor, the Department of Water Resources, the Texas Air Control Board and the State Department of Highways and Public Transportation made official comments to the Air Force during March — seven months after a 45-day time limit on which to comment expired last September.

The Air Force completed an environmental impact study in July 1978 and sent out a five-volume set of results to the three Texas coordinating agencies whose jurisdictions were affected. They included the South Plains Association of Governments in Lubbock; West Texas Council of Governments in El Paso; and the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission in Amarillo.

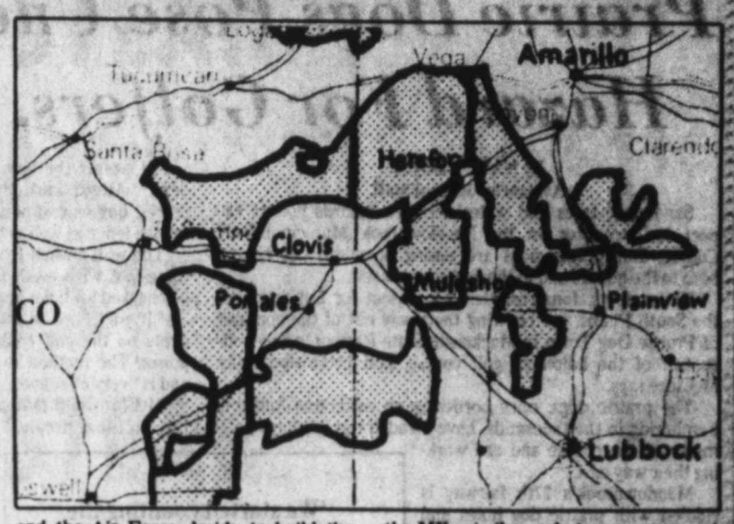

However, none of the coordinating and planning agencies commented on the project.

The five responding state agencies and the one Temple resident who wrote to the Pentagon concerning the MX seem almost lost among the more than 7,000 responses from other areas under consideration for testing.

Areas under consideration include:

- Texas-New Mexico High Plains.
- West Texas-Rio Grande Basin.
- Central Nevada Great Basin.
- California Mojave Desert.
- Luke Air Force Range-Yuma Test site, Arizona.
- White Sands Missile Range, New Mexico.
- And the South Platte Plains of Nebraska, Kansas and Colorado.

Depending upon where the Pentagon and the Air Force decide to build the missile facilities and what type of missile deployment system is used, the facilities could consist of 4,000 three-acre sites for missile silos or 200 20-mile "trenches."

The trench or tunnel system could be used for movement of missiles mounted on tractor-trailers or other means of locomotion. Another concept involves the use of horizontal shelters from which missiles could be driven out for firing. The fourth method method of storing the missiles would be a "slope-sided pool" allowing a missile to be fired from below an artificial lake.

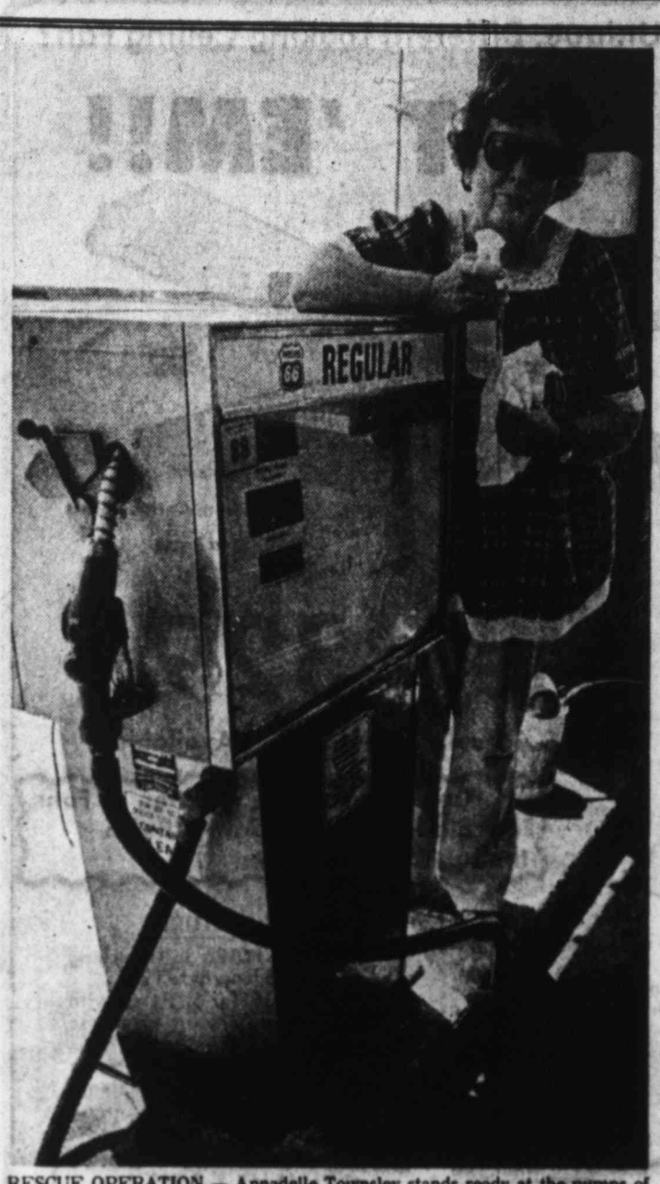

The "trench" method of storing the MX missiles would have numerous "aimpoints" from which a missile could be fired. As explained by Air Force Col. Lawrence Molinar, an aggressor would have to strike an entire trench line in order to destroy one missile.

The Air Force, in citing the need for the MX missiles and storage areas, noted in its environmental impact study, "An attacker will see no advantage in a first strike if he is convinced that sufficient forces for devastating retalitation will survive the attack . . . and the deterrent strategy is based on a triad of nuclear forces — land-based missiles, sea-launched missiles and bombers."

In Texas, little has been said of the MX missile candidate sites as evidenced by a lack of officials' knowledge on the proposal. "There are 120 types of (governmental) applications which require review," says Glenda Robinson, acting director of the South Plains Association of Governments. "Butthere are certain types of studies we have no expertise on," she noted.

The MX missile study was referred to the Natural Resources Committee of the are governmental panel. Members of

Scarce 'Full Service' Returns To Lorenzo

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

LORENZO — The way Annadelle Townsley figures it, every town should have a gas station. A real service station, that is — where you can get your oil checked, your flats fixed and your spark plugs changed.

But when the Phillips Corp. shut down its only station here earlier this summer, Lorenzo became a town without any such thing. Sure, you could buy gas at the co-op or at the convenience store, but if you overheated or broke a fan belt, forget it.

Three of the four corners where U.S. 62-82 crosses Harrison Ave., Lorenzo's main street, are populated by gas outlets these days, and if not for the open bay doors you'd never know Annadelle's 66 was open. The white paint is faded and the red roof dingy. A huge mound of dirt blocks the station from the highway on one side. And the bright lights and tall signs at the convenience store and the co-op naturally draw all the attention.

Once you pull into Annadelle's though, it's obvious there's no other place in Lorenzo, or anywhere else, quite like it. Annadelle's is open all day every day, and the lady in charge loves it that way.

Mrs. Townsley leans back in the metal lawn chair behind the counter, looks up and grins, her mind running back to the time when Lorenzo residents, all 1,260 of them, didn't have to worry about things like gasoline.

"When I was growing up here, there were at least half a dozen gas stations

Airport's Boardings Given Boost By Southwest Airlines

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

AT THE HALFWAY point in 1979, Lubbock International Airport is enjoying a record-setting year, mainly because of the hefty flow of Southwest Airlines passengers.

Through the end of June, 239,359 persons had flown from the airport on commercial airlines, nearly 10,000 more than at the same time last year. And, at the Southwest Airlines gate, business continues to boom — departures from Lubbock are up 27.1 percent over the first half of last year.

Through June, the Dallas-based carrier which has been serving Lubbock since May 1977, has boarded 120,409 persons, more than the combined totals of the other six carriers serving the city. Braniff, Continental, Texas International, Crown Aviation, Air Midwest and Permian Airways together have flown 118,950 persons from Lubbock through the first six months, 11,459 less than Southwest.

Coupled with its June figure of 23,378, Southwest has set records for the month and for the first half of the year.

Braniff International, also based in Dallas, continues as the runnerup airline in the Lubbock market, increasing its business here 12.6 percent for the first half of the year and 13.5 percent for June. BI has flown 55,251 persons from Lubbock through June 30, while 10,963 departed here during June. That June mark is up more than a thousand persons over Braniff's June 1978 mark of 9,662, but the six-month figure is down slightly more than a thousand from the airline's Lubbock record of 56,838, set during the first half of 1977.

Continental Airlines, still in the midst of a route shakeup that saw all its flights between Lubbock and Dallas canceled,

U.S. Rescue Spurs Boat People

Hanoi Accuses Carter Of 'Show-Off' Tactic

ABOARD THE USS WABASH, Pattaya, Thailand (AP) — The U.S. Navy's mission to rescue refugees in the South China Sea is encouraging more Vietnamese "boat people" to flee their homeland, rescued refugees said Saturday.

The refugees, brought into port Saturday aboard the U.S. 7th Fleet tanker Wabash, also said ethnic Chinese still are being allowed to leave Vietnam, provided they pay officials, but ethnic Vietnamese are being stopped.

Hanoi, meanwhile, attacked the 7th Fleet operation as a "show-off" tactic by President Carter, and Malaysia said it was only worsening the situation.

The Voice of Vietnam radio, quoting an official Vietnamese newspaper editorial, said that with its new sea-rescue policy the United States was "showing off with the 7th Fleet" to dominate the region militarily.

It said Carter was using the operation to distract voters from other issues, and that the United States and China were trying to prolong the flow of refugees to "create and explosive situation in Southeast Asia."

Malaysia's home affairs minister, Ghazali Shafie, said rescue missions by the United States and other nations were well intended, but would be seen as an invitation to the refugees to get out illegally.

"The Vietnamese authorities must be given time to fulfill their promises," to control the refugee flow, he said. "They must not have any excuse later." Vietnam promised its cooperation at an international conference on the refugee situation two weeks ago.

Malaysia, continuing its policy of rejecting new boat people, forced 319 more back out to sea in four wooden boats Saturday.

In Washington, a Carter administration official who was asked whether the rescue operation might prove counterproductive said the policy represents a purely humanitarian effort to save lives and was not intended to encourage the flight of boat people. The official asked not to be identified.

The Wabash and other Seventh Fleet ships, acting on Carter's orders to pick up endangered boat people, rescued 65 refugees last week. All the refugees were transferred to the Wabash and were airlifted from the tanker Saturday to the Thai naval port of Sattahip, en route to Laemsingh refugee camp in Chantaburi province. There they will await resettlement in the United States, where they are guaranteed a home.

U.N. refugee officials and representatives of the U.S. Embassy boarded the Wabash shortly after it anchored offshore here and began processing the Vietnamese.

Carter's order to be on the lookout for boat people came July 23 as the fleet aircraft carrier Kitty Hawk, a cruiser, a destroyer, a frigate and the Wabash

Bailey County Sheriff's Department Mystified By Missing $10,000

By TRAVIS BROWN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

MULESHOE — Bailey County officials are baffled by the disappearance of $10,000 from a safe in the sheriff's department.

"I don't know what happened to it," said Sheriff Dee Clements. "But I feel like it's still going to show up."

The missing money — $6,000 in cash and a $4,000 cashier's check — was a cash bond put up by a defendant in a drug case.

The sheriff discovered the money was missing June 28, when the defendant, Gary Hahn of Portales, sought to substitute a property bond for the cash bond.

"When he said he wanted his money back, I told him and his parents that I had already spent it, as a joke," the 71-year-old sheriff recalled.

But the jokes ended when he discovered that the cash bond had never been deposited in the bank.

Clements, who has been the Bailey County sheriff for 23 years, said he double checked the department vault, but couldn't find the money. He said he also checked with District Clerk Nelda Merriott to see if anyone had left the $10,000 with her. They hadn't.

The sheriff said he accepts responsibility for the loss of the money. He already has paid $6,000 from his own funds to Gary Hahn, and he plans to reimburse an additional $4,000 if the cashier's check is ever cashed.

The cash bond had been made by Hahn on April 18, 1978. Hahn was arrested and jailed as part of an alleged Texas-New

No Change Forecast In Weather Pattern

SWELTERING temperatures, no moisture and clear skies can be expected through Monday on the South Plains.

Lubbock and vicinity, along with most of the state, will remain dry. But the Houston area, along with parts of East Texas, is still wet from thunderstorms spawned by tropical storm Claudette. Houston, whch normally has 26 inches of rain by the end of July, has been drenched by 37 inches this year.

Mostly fair skies and temperatures in the upper 90s will prevail in the Lubbock area through Monday. The only relief from the heat will be southerly winds blowing at a mild 10 to 15 mph.

House Leader Urges Increased Oil Production

AUSTIN (AP) — Majority Leader Jim Wright told Texas union laborers Saturday that the only way out of the energy crisis is "to produce our way out."

Wright's address to the annual convention of Texas AFL-CIO was interrupted frequently by applause.

From Austin he went to Corpus Christi for a fund-raising reception Saturday night for the Texas Democratic Party.

"You are my crowd," the congressman from Weatherford and former state legislator told the delegates representing local AFL-CIO chapters. "We have been through a lot together. We have lost some but we have won some, and we can win this one.

"We will triumph over this energy crisis that has us by the throat."

Wright used charts to demonstrate the U.S. was spending about $8 billion for foreign oil in 1973 but now spends almost $60 billion.

"That is more than seven times as much money going out of the country," Wright said. "That is $60 billion siphoned out of the U.S. economy each year that could go to produce new jobs."

He said the tremendous payments to the oil producing countries "puts us in the position that others countries are trying to dictate U.S. foreign policy.

"And we must not be in that position to let any foreign country dictate to us," he said.

There was loud applause.

"The way out of this is we've got to believe in ourselves and our capacity to do things ... We've got to produce our way out of this," Wright said.

Prairie Dogs Pose Unexpected Hazard For Golfers, Course

By NANCY DORN
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Sandtraps, trees and waterholes are hazards golfers expect to encounter on the Meadowbrook Municipal Golf Course. But prairie dogs are posing an additional hazard both to the golfers and to the golf course itself.

The rodents, long considered a mascot for Lubbock and the South Plains, are chewing their way out of the confines of Prairie Dog Town in Mackenzie State Park onto the lusher turf of the adjoining golf course, golf professional Jay McClure says.

The prairie dogs, once bordering on extinction but now numbering in the thousands, have invaded the southern perimeter of the course and are working their way east.

Meadowbrook's 27th fairway is riddled with prairie dog holes and the animals are infiltrating the 4th, 5th and 10th fairways as well, McClure said.

"We started counting the holes once on number 27, but quit when we got to 90," McClure said.

'We started counting the holes on number 27, but quit when we got to 90.' — JAY McCLURE, golf professional

The animated creatures can be seen in the early morning and late evening hours congregated around their burrows in the middle of the municipal golf course, but golfers and city officials are not amused.

City officials are concerned that the prairie dogs are seriously damaging city property. The rodents have already gnawed through six inches of caliche and asphalt to establish one burrow in the middle of a park road.

Up to now the prairie dogs have confined their burrowing to the teeboxes and fairways, but the newest addition on Number 27 is located about 18 inches from green's edge.

McClure said each green on the Meadowbrook course costs nearly $36,000 in construction and maintenance. He said that the course was recently valued at several million dollars "and we're going to let some varmints have it?" he asked, shaking his head.

Parks Director John Alford agreed that the prairie dogs have gotten out of hand and will have to be controlled before they further damage the golf course."If we don't keep the population down, the area (Prairie Dog Town) isn't large enough," he said, adding that the prairie dog population has been thinned in the past in spite of outcries from Humane Society members and environmentalists.

Alford said that the Prairie Dog Town enclosure would be fortified to keep the rodents out of the neighboring golf course.

"It seems the city has bred some high-jumping prairie dogs," Alford said. Prairie dogs don't usually jump over fences, but several persons have seen the local variety jumping the fence as well as burrowing under it.

The wall around Prairie Dog Town will be raised and the three-foot wire mesh fence that runs beneath the wall will be checked for holes and repaired

"It isn't hard to kill a prairie dog," Alford said. The rodents on the golf course will be eliminated by putting out poison The method is approved by the federal government and is "very effective," Alford said.

McClure said that poisoning the golf course prairie dogs just isn't that simple. "To my knowledge, we didn't get even one (when the city used the poison grain several years ago)," McClure said.

He said the prairie dogs would eat just enough of the poisoned oats "to get to staggering around," and then would leave the poison alone.

He said the city had also tried to gas the critters out by pumping carbon monoxide from a tractor down the holes. That method was ineffective, McClure said, because the burrows are interlocking. "By the time it travels through all those tunnels, the gas is so weak it doesn't do any good," the golf pro said.

Cyanide has been used in the past to eradicate the prairie dogs but McClure said he would not want to endanger anyone on the course or children from the park with the poison. "We just can't take the chance of putting the cyanide out," he said.

"It's a question of containment," McClure said, adding that if he got rid of all the prairie dogs on the golf course, a whole new herd from Prairie Dog Town would replace them the next day.

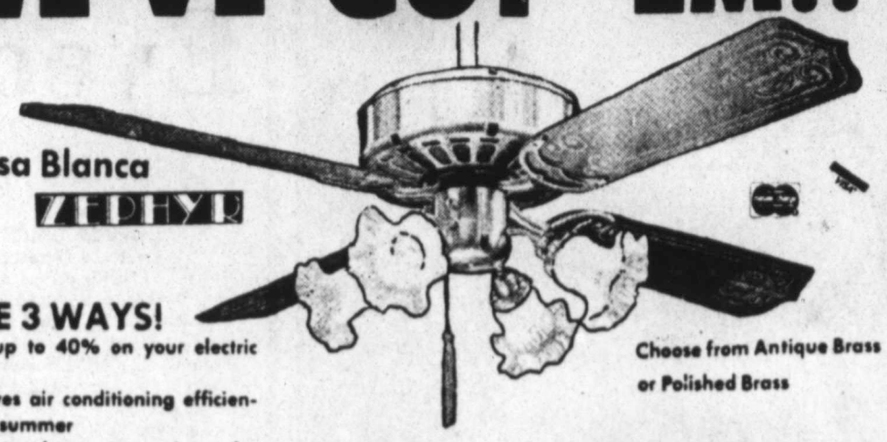

Park Department officials said they would have no problem eliminating the dogs from the golf course and have considered splitting the Prairie Dog population and putting in another colony where the rodents could do less damage.

Alford said establishing another colony would be a three- to five-year process, though. "Besides, prairie dogs just aren't that easy to catch," he added.

Meadowbrook golfers have probably lost thousands of balls down the prairie dog holes, McClure said. But the United States Golf Association is giving the golfers a break. The USGA ruled that if a ball rolls down a prairie dog hole at Meadowbrook, the golfer is spared the customary one-stroke penalty of dropping outside the hole.

HSCH Graduates First Technologists

This year's graduates are:

Randy Glenn Daniel of 1918 5th St., No. 10; Jimmy Ray Grimes of 2807-B 37th St.; D. Long of 5702 50th St., No. 108; and Mary E. Martin of Brownfield.

The four students spent 50 weeks of internship in the HSCH school. Prior to attending the school, each intern spent from three to four years in a college program, majoring in biology and chemistry. After receiving their certificates from the hospital, the students must take the national examination for registered medical technologists.

Medical technologists do more than just give blood tests. Dr. Dale Rector, director of the HSCH clinical laboratory, explains that medical technology "serves as the scientific arm of the practice of medicine."

Rector says medical technologists are able to conduct more than 400 different types of laboratory tests. These tests can aid in the diagnosis of diseases and in therapy for a patient.

REPORT DUE AUG. 1

WASHINGTON (AP) — Agriculture Secretary Bob Bergland says the government will be "reasonable" in enforcing a 1978 law requiring foreign owners of U.S. farmland to report their holdings by Aug. 1. The purpose of the law, Bergland said, is to gather information about foreign land holdings in the United States and not to prevent ownership or penalize foreign owners.

Corporate Profits Hold Well In Second Quarter

NEW YORK (AP) — In the face of declining output for the economy, corporate profits for the second-quarter held up rather well.

Big oil companies, led by Texaco's 132 percent leap in quarterly profits from a year earlier, have been the standout industry in earnings gains for the April-June period.

Banks also turned in a strong industry showing, although results from some consumer-oriented industries like autos have been less impressive.

Real Gross National Product — the measurement of the nation's production after inflation — fell 3.3 percent in the second quarter. Although many economists see that as a signal a recession is underway, few believe that after-tax corporate profits will show a parallel drop for the same period.

Economist Michael Evans who operates Evans Economics Inc., a forecasting company in Washington, said he expects business profits to rise about 12 percent to $136 billion in the second quarter from $121 billion a year earlier. And a recent survey of 437 corporations indicates an even stronger 19.6 percent gain.

Neither that survey, conducted by the Wall Street Journal, nor Evans' forecast are adjusted for the effects of inflation, which will take a big bite out of real corporate profits. But even at that the forecasts imply a net gain.

Economists cite some special factors which may over the short term help cushion profits from the full brunt of a recession. Lower federal tax rates for businesses are in effect this year and were not in the comparison 1978 periods.

And many businesses also seem to be benefiting from lowered labor costs both through restraint in wage increases and by hiring fewer new and replacement workers.

Then too, many busineses that got caught with large inventories on hand and a sudden loss of sales as the 1974-75 recession started, appear to be more cautious this time.

Economists do expect profit levels to suffer if a serious recession develops, but some argue that the degree of shrinkage may not be as much as in previous downturns.

"I don't think profits will decline much more than 10 percent over this recession, even though I see it as a severe one," says Evans, who adds that profits have dropped by 15 percent or so in previous recessions.

"Businesses would rather cut their output than lower prices. Companies are smarter now. They learned their lessons in the last recession," he argues.

Not all earnings reports for the second quarter have been glowing ones. Compared to the first quarter's $140 billion level, a decline in in overall earnings appears to be emerging.

With slowing auto sales and gasoline problems, General Motors posted a modest profits gain of 7.4 percent while No. 2 Ford reported a 5.1 percent earnings decline from a year earlier.

And IBM, the industry giant in office equipment and data-processing equiment, reported a 3 percent earnings decline, the first such dip in years. Among the consumer-oriented companies, Whirlpool said slowing appliance sales were responsible for its 19 percent decline in earnings for the quarter.

Even among some of the strongest gainers, special factors are involved.

Texaco, the nation's third-largest oil company, reported a 132 percent gain in earnings over last year's second quarter. No. 2 Mobil's profits were up 38 percent. And Exxon, the largest company, reported a 20 percent gain.

But oil companies say those results are compared against a 1978 quarter that was weak one for the industry, partly because of relatively plentiful supplies and lower prices.

In the banking industry, high interest rates and high demand for loans combined to help boost profit levels. Chase Manhattan reported a 70 percent jump in second quarter earnings and Bankers Trust reported a 44 percent gain. Bank of America, the nation's largest bank, said earnings rose about 27 percent. Citicorp, the second largest, was an exception and reported an 8.6 percent decline.

In other business developments this past week:

•President Carter nominated Paul Volcker to head the Federal Reserve Board. Volcker heads the New York Federal Reserve Bank and his nomination generally was praised in financial and business circles. G. William Miller, the current chairman, has been nominated to serve as treasury secretary.

•Consumer prices rose at blistering annual rate of 13.2 percent in the first half of 1979. If inflation continued at that pace for the whole year, 1979 would end up the worst inflation year since 1946 when World War II price controls were lifted.

The Labor Department report did have one bit of good news. It showed a slowing in the rate of price increases for food in its latest report for June and a decline in the price of beef and other meats.

DC-10 Airlines Flight Aborted

MIAMI (AP) — A Western Airlines DC-10 bound for Los Angeles and Honolulu turned back to Miami with an apparent equipment problem, the seventh domestic DC-10 to make a forced landing since the planes returned to the skies two weeks ago.

The flight resumed Friday after technicians discovered that what was feared to be a problem with a wing flap turned out to be malfuncioning instrument panel, an airline spokesman said.

All U.S. DC-10s were grounded for 37 days when inspections showed numerous defects. The checks were ordered after the crash of a DC-10 killed 273 people in the nation's worst air disaster.

SCHOOLS ATTEMPT LEVY

CLEVELAND (AP) — Cleveland's school system, plagued by labor strife, desegregation disputes and declining enrollment, will try again this fall to win voter approval for new school taxes, this time totaling $24.5 million. The school board voted Friday to put two tax proposals on the Oct. 2 ballot in the fourth such attempt since April 1978.

Volcker Choice Gives Mart Shot In Arm

By J.L. HUTCHESON
Schneider, Bernet & Hickman Inc.

Relief over the choice of Paul Volcker as Federal Reserve Board chairman this week combined with a stream of strong second quarter earning reports and dividend increases by major industrial companies gave the stock market a shot in the arm as stock prices rallied in heavy volume.

J.L. HUTCHESON

Volcker's appointment, announced Wednesday morning, was well received on Wall Street. By the consensus view, uncertainty over who would fill the Fed post had been the principal weight overhanging the market. Proponents of a disciplined monetary policy saw Volcker's appointment as particularly encouraging.

Toward the end of the week, however, many investors had become worried over just how conservative Volcker might be. Most experts feel that while Volcker's conservative monetary policy is very bullish for the dollar and the stock market long-term, it probably is going to mean lower stock prices in the short and intermediate term.

Optimistic investors faced an uphill battle from the start, as specialists, the individuals who execute orders for the public, reported that they were receiving numerous sell orders just above the market that had been entered on a "good-till-cancelled" basis.

Many investors have been watching several statistical measures of the New York Stock Exchange more than they have the Dow and they report that the market is considerably stronger than surface appearances would indicate. Volume of issues advancing versus volume of issues declining is very favorable as are the list of new 12-month highs, which have outpaced new lows by more than ten to one recently. With action such as this, institutional investors are now wanting to get involved in stocks, even if they are not wildly optimistic.

Despite unexpectedly severe energy supply problems and inflation during this year's first half, money managers and investment advisers sampled late this week say that investors shouldn't expect either a boom or bust in stock and bond prices during the rest of the year. Most experts feel that as the year wears on and uncertainty mounts, more investors will move into the big growth stocks as a refuge and this could provide the fuel for the next major market move up.

Most fund managers continue to be cautious in their approach to the stock market. At last report, they are holding more money than ever before in fixed-income assets invested in high-coupon money market instruments.

Montreal Males Protest Anti-Dancing Decree

MONTREAL (AP) — Two men who say they were forbidden to dance together at a discotheque have filed a complaint with Quebec's Human Rights Commission, alleging they were the victims of sexual discrimination.

The complaint said the two unidentified Montrealers were threatened with eviction if they danced together at the disco in Rimouski, 170 miles northeast of Quebec City.

They called on the commission to make a test case of the alleged incident.

Recession Not Evident In Earning Reports

NEW YORK (AP) — If a recession has indeed begun, not much evidence of it has shown up in the midyear earnings reports of most companies.

With the exception of a few stock market stalwarts such as International Business Machines, which came in early this month with a slight decline in second-quarter profits, the picture generally has been bright.

The oil companies, in particular, chalked up strong gains. Texaco posted a 132 percent gain over the second quarter last year; Getty a 149 percent increase; and Standard Oil of California 61 percent, to cite three examples from among the concerns that made their reports this past week.

Of course, it could be argued that the oil companies are a special case and that the same factors working in their favor — soaring oil prices and fuel-supply problems — are likely to depress the profits of many other industries.

But there have been many non-oil concerns issuing favorable reports as well. On Wednesday Eastman Kodak listed a 16 percent increase in profits, and three other companies among the Dow 30 — Bethlehem Steel and Union Carbide, as well as Exxon — raised their dividends.

Dividend increases are normally interpreted as a gesture of confidence in the business outlook, more so in fact than any number of pronouncements in speeches or press releases.

After all, when a corporation's board votes a dividend it is, in the old gambler's expression, putting its money where its mouth is.

Some of that apparent optimism rubbed off on the stock market. The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials rose 11.69 to 839.76 in the past week, also aided by widespread approval of President Carter's choice of Paul Volcker as the new chairman of the Federal Reserve.

Big Board volume averaged 30.29 million shares a day, against an even 30 million the week before.

Dampening the enthusiasm over the second quarter numbers was the widespread belief that they were a sort of "last gasp" of the economic expansion of the past four years, and that coming quarters will more clearly reflect a slowing of business activity.

Kodak, for instance, added a note of caution to its report: "Business results in the second half will be adversely affected by a slowdown in the U.S. economy and by continued cost escalation at an unusually high rate."

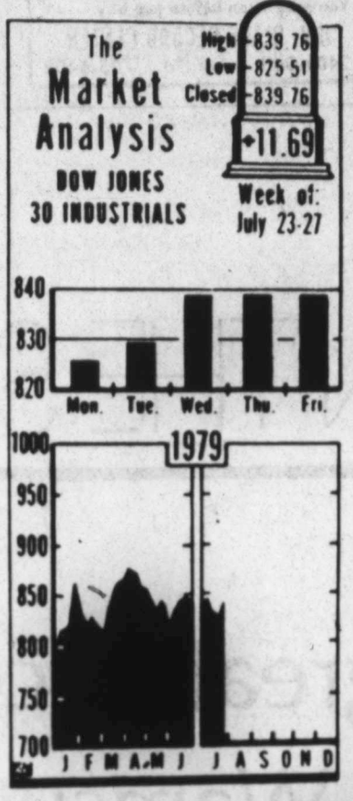

The Merrill Lynch Market Letter, in its mid-year discussion of the outlook for stocks, voiced the belief that corporate profits "reached a cyclical peak in the June quarter and will begin trending downward, on a quarter-to-quarter basis, in the current quarter."

The publication noted that in the past six recessions, declines in earnings ranged from 23 to 29 percent.

"We believe the stock market is in for a long, hard summer as signs of recession increase and the market begins to adjust to expectations of lower earnings.

"While the strength of recent weeks could continue for a while, buoyed by some good June quarter earnings reports, we think prices could undergo a substantial correction before bottoming out in the fall.

"Although the coming months may be a frustrating period for investors, we think brighter days are ahead. It's important to recognize that in recessionary periods the market usually has its worst times in the early portions of an economic downturn and then rebounds strongly well before a recovery is under way."

Sheriffs Feud Over Woman's Bad Check

AUSTIN, Minn. (AP) — Sheriffs in two states are feuding over a bad check for $3.39 that resulted in five days in jail for a woman, $445 in expenses for a county and a round of official buck-passing.

Sheriff Wayne Goodnature of Mower County, Minn., says if his colleagues in Henry County, Mo., had told him how small the check was, he never would have bothered to jail the woman on a fugitive warrant.

Henry County Sheriff Wilbur Schmidt says nobody over tells him the details of these kinds of cases; he just goes ahead and passes along fugitive warrants for fugitives.

"That sheriff is completely out of shape," Schmidt said Saturday.

"I'll sue," Goodnature said.

Ramona VanOster, a former Austin resident, was a free woman after Goodnature's office sent a check for the $3.39 to Henry County along with a bill for $24 in costs for the warrant.

Goodnature said it cost $445 to keep the woman in the Mower County Jail for five days last week during extradition proceedings. The warrant said she was charged with the felony of writing a check on a closed account, but the amount was never mentioned.

After Mower County Assistant Attorney Charlotte Peterson contacted Missouri authorities and learned the amount, County Judge Roger Plunkett dismissed the warrant.

"I feel I've been used. I'm willing to serve warrants for other jurisdictions, but for this?" a steaming Goodnature said Friday.

Flood-Weary Texans Return To Water-Logged Homes, Businesses

HOUSTON (AP) — Thousands of flood-weary Texans, chased from their homes along the upper Gulf Coast by the worst floods in 18 years, returned Saturday and began placing water-logged carpets and sofas out to dry.

"I've lived in Dickinson almost 28 years," said Bill Brady, Galveston County Civil Defense coordinator. "I went through Hurricane Carla. I've worked every hurricane that has hit here in the past 28 years. And I've never seen water like this."

The floods, which were caused by rains of up to 30 inches from the remnants of tropical storm Claudette, subsided enough to allow the remainder of an estimated 5,000 refugees to leave Red Cross shelters.

More than 15,000 homes were damaged, and at least six deaths were blamed on the storm, including those of five Baptists who drowned Friday when their bus was knocked into a flooded creek near Centerville, 120 miles northwest of Houston.

President Carter declared the 10 stricken counties along the upper Texas Gulf Coast a disaster area Saturday, making them eligible or federal relief funds.

The floods forced the evacuation of 5,000 people and damaged 15,000 homes in Harris, Brazoria, Liberty, Galveston, Fort Bend, Jefferson, Orange, Chambers, Matagorda and Wharton counties.

In Washington, President Carter declared the six hardest hit counties of southeastern Texas a major disaster area, allowing federal relief funds for housing assistance and low-interest loans from the Small Business Administration and the Farmers Home Administration.

Gov. Bill Clements asked President Carter to add Matagorda and Hardin counties to the disaster declaration.

Clements said damage throughout the area could total $750 million, and insurance industry officials estimated that privately insured flood and wind losses were $11.4 million.

Up to 85 percent of the homes in the Galveston County town of Dickenson were damaged. Floodwaters began racing through expensive bayou-front homes early Thursday. From the air Friday, it appeared about half of the town was still under water.

"I figure 85 percent of the homes and businesses in north Galveston County were affected by this," Brady said. "I just can't believe anything escaped it."

In nearby Alvin, evacuations continued through Friday as more rain fell, bringing the two-day total to about 30 inches. Alvin Police Chief Mike Jez said most residents could leave evacuation centers Saturday.

He estimated 80 percent of the homes in the 18,000-population town were damaged. "The water will subside," he said, "but a lot of people have absoltely nothing to go home to."

In southeast Houston, people went to work cleaning up with little remorse.

"I consider myself one of the lucky ones," said Mary Jane Smith, standing in the middle of her soggy front yard. Her words were repeated throughout the area, as was "people have been so nice."

The weekend is more like an extra-hard working day for the city's garbage and maintenance crews, telephone repair crews and utilities.

Southwestern Bell spokesman Ken Brasel said it will be late Tuesday before all service is restored after a peak phone outage of 64,000 homes Thursday.

Most roads in the area were passable Saturday, and most water supplies were judged safe. Police reported few looting incidents after their all-night vigil in the hard-hit areas. A few communities imposed curfews.

Carter's disaster declaration for Jefferson, Harris, Chambers, Brazoria, Galveston and Orange counties means temporary housing assistance, low interest disaster loans from the Small Business Administration and emergency loan assistance by the Farmers Home Administration.

Dale Milford, former Democratic congressman from the Dallas-Fort Worth area, was named the federal coordinating officer.

Parolee Tells Officers Of 20 Murders

POUGHKEEPSIE, N.Y. (AP) — A 50-year-old paroled murderer, who says he committed 20 other murders from Maine to California in the past year, was being held in the Dutchess County jail here Saturday, state police said.

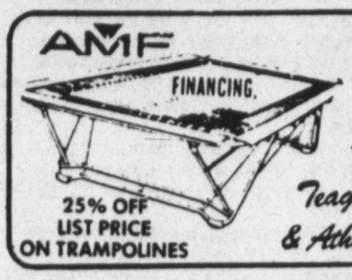

"We could be sitting on a mass murderer here," said Senior Investigator John Crodelle of the state police's Bureau of Criminal Investigation.

John Fischer, paroled from a New Jersey state prison in June 1978 after serving 25 years for a murder conviction, was held without bail on a charge of second-degree murder while authorities investigated his claims.

Crodelle said Fischer turned himself into New York City police on Friday and told them he had killed his wife in Dutchess County.

Man Beaten; Woman Fired At By Bowman

A 29-year-old Lubbock man was in satisfactory condition at St. Mary's Hospital late Saturday after he was beaten in the parking lot of the Rodeway Inn, 2401 4th st.

Tom L. Rapier of 2428 22nd Place told police he was in the parking lot of the motel about 1:40 a.m. Saturday when a man who came out of a nearby nightclub started beating him.

Rapier, who was bleeding from the head and mouth, was taken by ambulance to St. Mary's Hospital. Rapier told the police the man who beat him was about 25 years old. Rapier was not sure of his assailant's race.

A Lubbock woman told police she was shot at early Saturday morning by a man armed with a bow and arrow.

Sharon Manley, 23, of 213 30th St. said a man came to her house and knocked on her door about 3:14 a.m. She said when she refused to let the man in, he went to his pickup and got a bow and arrow.

She said that when she opened her front door again to see where he was, he fired an arrow, which stuck into the wood of her screen door.

A 14-year-old Lubbock youth was taken into custody by police for car burglary and unlawful carrying of a weapon.

Police were called to 4509 Avenue D at 3:15 a.m. Saturday, where Clay E. Herring, 23, of Longview had captured a boy whom he said had broken into his car.

The boy was handcuffed and placed in the backseat of a police car. As an officer was driving the boy to the police station, he looked in his rear view mirror and saw the boy pull a .22-caliber pistol from his pants. The officer stopped and took the gun from the boy.

A Lubbock man said he was flying a kite with his son Saturday when he was approached by an elderly woman who pointed a gun at them and said, "You had better get that kite down."

Bernabe Valdez, 39, of 2122 Main said he and his 12-year-old son were flying the kite about 11:45 a.m. in a church parking lot near their home.

While flying the kite, Valdez told police that an elderly white woman walked up to them, pulled out a large steel revolver and ordered them to take the kite down.

Valdez said the elderly woman also said, "I'm not going to fool around with Mexicans." Then she put the gun back into her pocket and left, reports showed.

In other activity, Steven Foster, 25, of 506 N. Flint told police that someone broke into his house and stole $800 cash and a stereo.

Foster said the burglary occurred between 3 p.m. Friday and 12:30 a.m. Saturday.

About $1,000 in hand tools were stolen last week from the industrial building at Lubbock Christian College, police learned Saturday.

Marcia Karen Scott, 32, of 4608 A Boston Ave. told police that jewelry valued at $1,115 was stolen from her house between 9 a.m. and 6:30 p.m. Friday. Entrance to the house was gained by cutting through a window screen and then prying the window open.

Danny Gutierrez, 21, of 2515 Cornell told police someone broke into his house between 9:30 a.m. Friday and 12:30 Saturday and stole a televison and stereo. He placed value for the two at $898.

Davis Jury Process Set Monday

FORT WORTH (UPI) — The second trial of industrialist T. Cullen Davis on murder solicitation charges begins Monday in his home town with an expectedly lengthy jury selection process that will determine if the trial stays in Tarrant County.

The prosecution team has been clear in public statements in the weeks leading up to the trial that it believes community feeling is overwhelmingly in Davis' favor, and that an objective jury cannot be found locally.

The defense, however, wants the trial to remain in Tarrant County, both for the convenience and financial savings and due to its belief that 12 persons who have not made up their minds about Davis' guilt can be found for the jury. Defense attorney Phil Burleson has alleged that the prosecution team is conducting a media campaign to sway members of the jury panel even before jury selection starts.

Davis, 45, is charged with solicitation of capital murder, but has been free on bond since the first trial, held in Houston, ended with a jury divided eight for conviction and four for acquittal.

The charge is keyed on the testimony of FBI informant David McCrory — a former employee and acquaintance of Davis — who said Davis paid him to hire a gunman to kill Judge Joe Eidson. McCrory, 41, also said Davis wanted to arrange for the murders of a total of 15 other persons, including his ex-wife Priscilla.

The FBI and Fort Worth police video taped and tape recorded meetings between Davis and McCrory during which the two discussed the arrangements. One meeting involved McCrory giving Davis "evidence" that Eidson had been killed.

Burleson has said the defense case in the upcoming trial will hinge on a strong attack on McCrory's credibility. Burleson has called McCrory "a pathological liar," and contended that Davis was framed by his ex-wife and McCrory.

Lubbock Flying Farrier Stays Busy Year Around

By PAULA TILKER
Avalanche-Journal Staff

In today's world of Pintos and Colts that are attended to at gas stations, there still is a pressing demand for attendants who work with the four-legged models.

Burney Chapman, a Lubbockite known throughout the state as an expert horseshoer and lame horse specialist, can attiest to that.

In his care of pintos, colts and quarter horses, he logs each year thousands of miles in his private airplane and up to 70,000 miles in his vehicle. Last year, 10 airplane trips to California accounted for about 30,000 miles.

His Lubbock practice demands the rest of his time. He tends an average of 17 horses a day at his 10-acre spread south of the city. People from Odessa, Dallas, San Antonio, Houston and sometimes from California bring their horses to the lanky 18-year professional for shoeing and foot treatment.

EQUINE GROOMING — Wielding large clippers, Burney Chapman trims an overgrown hoof, part of his repertoire of skills picked up as a horsehoer. (Staff Photo by Paul Moseley)

"Odessa is a pretty good ways to haul a horse just to get him shod," Chapman acknowledged in his slow, twangy drawl. But, he noted, "Anywhere you go they have difficulties finding a horseshoer."

Automobiles are holding their own, but horses are making a steady comeback, said Chapman, who explained the equine population in the United States is "probably bigger now than since the 1920s, when teams were used to farm."

One of his clients has more than 700 brood mares, and some ranches have 2,000 or more mares being bred, he said.

"There's more work than anybody can get to. It's a real shame there's not more men who want to get into this business."

Many who do try to hammer shoes on horses or trim overgrown hooves decide it's too physically demanding because "you're bent over all the time," he said.

Chapman doesn't put much faith in horseshoeing schools. "I don't have too high an opinion of them. The best way to learn is to get a job with a horseshoer who shoes a lot of horses," he explained. "Most of this stuff you don't learn out of a book. You learn it through trial and error and bending over in sweat."

During his 18 professional years of bending, sweating, hammering, trimming and designing shoes, Chapman has collected horse care stories. As some people revel in Aggie jokes, Chapman enjoys relating his horse tales.

For example, he once saved a lame black colt from the "condemned string" on a South Plains ranch. The colt now has won Lubbock recognition as Happy VI and is ridden at Texas Tech home football games.

With relish, Chapman explained that one of his frequent patients at the 6666 Ranch was a black colt that repeatedly injured its leg.

"They were going to put him in the condemned string but I talked them out of it," he said, explaining he boarded the horse at his Lubbock stables while treating the leg.

When Tech sought a replacement for Happy V, the by-then-healthy colt was "put into service earlier than anticipated," Chapman said, adding the horse "was a country boy that came to town" the first couple of times he thundered around the Tech stadium to the cheers of thousands of spectators.

Many of his more colorful horseshoeing adventures involve troubles with flying, not with temperamental horses. Recently, while returning to Lubbock from Austin on a commercial flight, Chapman was confronted by an upset baggage clerk who objected to a 75-pound anvil being transported without a box.

Although he has flown numerous times with the unboxed anvil, a necessity to his trade, Chapman was told henceforth the heavy block of metal would have to be crated.

"He then pulled out a cardboard box that wouldn't have held three pingpong balls, put it in and tied it up with string," Chapman said with a grin. As he expected, when the anvil was unloaded at Lubbock, all that remained of its container was a bit of string and cardboard.

Another time he carried in his pocket a small curved knife he uses to scrape mud from the bottoms of horses' hooves. He was stopped at the airport security desk and told it was a dangerous weapon.

Eventually the police guard realized he was a horseshoer and authorized him to go through.

Then there was the time he flew his private airplane to a race track near Laredo. He flew south past the city over to Mexico and buzzed a ranch to alert it to his arrival. When he touched down at the Laredo airport minutes later, "they were right there" — a border patrolman and two narcotics agents.

"I told them I was a horseshoer and they just howled," he said with a grin, noting an airport sign warns that those with an "unusual occupation" are subject to search. The border patrolman, looking through Chapman's mechanic's box full of tools, said, "Boys, I really do believe he is a horseshoer." They let him go on.

Chapman, on a trip to California with a veterinarian, carried in his luggage an amino acid in a white powerdered form, packed in one-pound plastic bags. Although the duo made it through airport security, Chapman worried about having to convince officials the stuff was not an illegal drug.

"We could have proved what it was, but it would have delayed our flight," he said. He now carries the medicine in his tool box.

Horseshoeing is an interesting business, Chapman concluded, filled with interesting people, from oilmen to rodeo cowboys to ranchers. "It would be very dull if we just shod horses every day," he said.

Yet, it is not a business Chapman intended to make his career. "When I was 13, I worked at the 6666s. All the cowboys had to shoe their own horses. I thought it was fun. Of course, it would take me half a day to shoe my horse."

His experience on the ranch piqued his interest in shoeing and he built his own forge in the basement of his house and practiced through high school.

"Then I got to college. I'd worked all my life to save money to go to school but I blew all my money that first semester, partying," Chapman said ruefully.

He needed money and went to work for a horse farm in Carlisle. He rode a horse to school at Texas Tech and shod it. Eventually, friends asking where to have their horse tended turned to him.

"I said I would do it if they would bring four horseshoes and a handful of nails. The Tech kids got to bringing their horses out there. The first thing I know, people I don't know are coming with four horseshoes and a handful of nails," he said.

He began charging for his services. Then the horse farm closed and he worked for a veterinarian with a wide equestrian practice.

Later he and a friend "got into a shoeing partnership. I had the tools and he had the tools and we'd go around the country. Back then, we'd just shoe one or two horses a day."

In those days, the 90 minutes worth of work meant about $17 for them to split, Chapman said, adding that was more enticing than the $1 an hour wages paid at most businesses.

He eventually started shoeing more horses each day. He got married and put himself through school, shoeing horses and earning a degree in animal science.

Chapman planned to be a veterinarian. He didn't plan on staying a horseshoer. "But as the years went by, I tried to really make a business out of it," he said.

The business has built through word of mouth. Chapman explained he opposes advertising and has not had a business card in about 10 years.

When he started his profession 18 years ago, he only had a pickup truck. Today he has a house and stables on 10 acres south of Lubbock. Then he traveled around the county looking for horses to shoe. Now he serves large ranches such as the Burnett estate, Panhandle spreads and the Broken Arrow Ranch in San Marcos.

He explained that "you couldn't make a living in this business shoeing backyard horses. You have to have a big estate."

He started as a horseshoer and nail trimmer. He now is a foot specialist, working with veterinarians to diagnose foot ailments, studying radiograms, deciding on certain treatments and occasionally fashioning custom-made shoes.

The majority of horseshoes today are machine made. But he will adapt them for special needs.

His tools are the same essentially as those used a hundred years ago by village blacksmiths. He has two anvils, a forge, nail clippers, rasps and pointed nails.

"Basically, the tool end of it hasn't changed in a hundred years. It's just better quality metal," he said.

Chapman likes horses, and after working with thousands of them, says he has been kicked only twice — and then it was by the same horse on two occasions.

"It's really not any more dangerous than you driving a car to work, if you know what you're doing," he said.

When asked whether he regrets not having become a veterinarian, Chapman replies after a pause, "Sometimes I do. I really do. But this has been good to me."

Beef Cattle Premiums For Fair Top $7,500

Beef cattle entries will be competing for a whopping $7,570 in premiums at the 62nd annual Panhandle South Plains Fair here Sept. 22-29.

Entries will be judged in 42 classes by Allen Poe of Waxahachie. Joe Wise is show superintendent.

In certain classes, the premiums range from $40 for fifth place to $100 for first. In addition, grand champion and reserve grand champions will be picked in bull and female classes, and will be worth $75 for the top entry and $25 for second place.

The beef cattle show is one of several cattle shows slated during the fair, which is offering a record $60,000 in premiums, much of which is in the cattle classes.

Banners will be awarded to the premium breeder and premium exhibitor.

Gene Ledel's million-dollar midway will return to the fair again this fall along with a lineup of top entertainment for the stage of Fair Park Coliseum.

One Dead, One Wounded At Rock Concert

CLEVELAND (AP) — One man was killed, another man was wounded and police reported more than a dozen arrests and assorted cases of vandalism at Municipal Stadium as a crowd estimated at more than 60,000 gathered for a rock concert.

Police identified the dead man as Joseph Went, 18, of Cleveland. The name of the wounded man was not released.

Police said most of the arrests were for rock and bottle throwing which started early in the morning after officers moved in to break up a fight. Police would not say whether any of the arrests were connected with the shootings.

Thousands of persons began gathering at the stadium Friday evening for the World Series of Rock. Police closed a stretch of the Memorial Shoreway along Lake Erie early Saturday because of traffic jams.

The stadium holds 75,000 persons. Scheduled to appear during the all-day concert Saturday were singer Ted Nugent and several groups, including Aerosmith, Journey, Thin Lizzy and ACDC.

Peddlers of T-shirts and other rock paraphernalia spread out over city streets early Saturday, stopping motorists to offer their goods.

Boatswain Mate 1st Class George Yaus of the Coast Guard said his unit on the shore of Lake Erie in downtown Cleveland got a call at 6:15 a.m. "that a bunch of those jerks over at the stadium got aboard, ransacked and cut all the lines but the bow line" of the 180-foot retired Coast Guard vessel The Woodbine.

Community Hospital Has New Podiatry Program

Community Hospital of Lubbock has added a residency program in treatment of foot disorders, called podiatry, according to hospital administrator Walt Allinger.

Dr. Diana Saddison is the first resident podiatrist to join Community Hospital under Dr. Paul Schwarzentraub, director of resident training in podiatry.

Dr. Saddison will spend one year with the hospital in residency. She came to Lubbock following four years of study at California College of Podiatry in San Francisco. Dr. Saddison received her bachelor's degree in physiology from Michigan State University in East Lansing, Mich.

Dr. Schwarzentraub explained that Dr. Saddison was chosen from among 51 applicants for the residency position.

Dr. Schwarzentraub said he sees no expansion of the program in the immediate future, but as Lubbock grows and more doctors join the hospital's staff of four podiatrists, another residency position may be added.

The podiatric department of the hospital treated about 125 in-patients and about as many out-patients last year, Dr. Schwarzentraub said.

In addition to its podiatric specialties, the hospital maintains 18 active staff members including 12 Doctors of Osteopathy, who deal primarily in general surgery, radiology, and obstetrics and gynecology, and six medical doctors.

DR. DIANA SADDISON

Allinger said the hospital is in the process of recruiting three general practitioners and an internist to the staff.

Lubbock's Jobless Rate Climbs To 4.3

Lubbock's unemployment rate climbed from 3.8 percent to 4.3 percent from mid-May until June, while the statewide rate increased from 4.2 percent to 4.8 percent.

The number of job openings in Lubbock during June also lagged the past three-year-average for the month by almost 26 percent.

Lubbock's 4.3 percent unemployment rate is just barely below the 4.4 percent high for 1978. Because of that the Texas Employment Commission's July Labor Market Review report states, "Based on indicators of comparison between this year and 1978, another climb (in unemployment) could be expected for next month except that June is traditionall traditionally the high point in unemployment for the year in Lubbock."

Yet at the same time that unemployment rose, total resident employment in Lubbock reversed a two-month pattern and showed a gain in June. Total employment rose from 97,430 to 97,610.

Wage and salary totals in the private sector showed a 300 worker increase over the past month, but retail trade edged backwards with restaurants and drinking establishments showing the largest decline.

In the government sector, totals were down because of reduced staff needs during summer at Texas Tech University and the Lubbock Independent School District.

The TEC estimates that wage and salary totals will climb from the June figure of 86,460 to the 90,000 mark by mid-September as another school year begins.

Hospital Has New Policy For Children's Visiting

The age requirement has been dropped from 14 to 12 years old. However, all children of mothers having a baby may visit one at a time for 10 minutes.

Regular visiting hour are from 9 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. daily.

HANGING LINKED TO ASSAULT

YONKERS, N.Y. (AP) — A 104-year-old man, apparently depressed about an assault that left his son seriously injured, hanged himself in his home, authorities said. Police said Jacob Nassar was found dead by his granddaughter Thursday.

Illegal Alien Presence Still Felt

By BILL KIDD
A-J Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — It was three decades ago, but the image still remains: whole families, from infants to grandparents, crouched in the salt cedar by the drainage canals, waiting for the Border Patrol to pass by before they continued their journey north.

Illegal, or as some prefer, undocumented aliens have been a presence — mainly shadowy and ill-defined — of the Texas economic and political scene for longer than most Texans can remember.

In recent years, that presence has been an increasingly troubling one, as the effect of the uncounted — literally uncounted — workers from Mexico have come more into prominence of a political sort.

State government in Texas generally ignored their presence up to a few years ago; no state agency even now seems to have any clear responsibility in that matter, and inquiries regarding statistics are shunted off to federal officials.

Illegal aliens have come in for attention by winning court decisions to allow their children to attend public schools, by organizing with other agricultural workers, and by being the target of legislation to make it illegal for them to be hired by an employer who knows they are in the country without the proper formalities.

Now, it seems, California, which has had similar experiences with such aliens, may attempt to bring them into political process' mainstream.

California lawmakers (who share with their counterparts in New York and Washington, D.C., the distinction of receiving the least general approval of Texas lawmakers) are considering an $800,000 campaign to encourage illegal aliens to participate in the 1980 Federal Census.

Since, California reasons, various federal grant programs, and representation in the U.S. House of Representatives, are based on population, the more residents (illegal or otherwise) counted in the census, the more money that should flow from the big buildings on the Potomac to the big buildings on the Sacramento.

And, those lawmakers say, California should gain a larger share of the 435 House of Representatives seats when those seats are reallocated.

That latter assumption may be arguable.

It very likely could produce a court challenge, in view of other court decisions on the "one man, one vote" doctrine which set off the last round of redistricting throughout the nation.

A resident alien, legal or illegal, is using at least some government services — and a case can be made for counting him or her in when federal funds are divided up.

But including aliens not entitled to vote when drawing up districts for representation would appear to be a different question — and could be, in effect, a dilution of the "one man, one vote principle."

That question is being looked at by Rep. Tim Von Dohlen, Goliad, who is to have the responsibility (a not particularly pleasureable one) of heading the redistricting effort in the Texas House of Representatives in 1981.

Von Dohlen is checking with officials in Washington on the question of counting illegal aliens, and says he hopes to have some information in a week or so — "we're a little shy of information right now."

What works in California should work in Texas, however, and could result in an increase in funds — and potentially political power on the national level.

Texas is expected to gain two congressional districts with the new census, with the expectation being that one will go to Houston — and one to Dallas, or San Antonio.

Obviously, just where that latter district goes won't be known until the final census tract figures come in — and that will be sometime in the spring of 1981, when lawmakers will have just two months remaining in their regular session.

Preliminary figures will be ready in the summer of 1980, but becuse of the requirement that congressional districts not vary more than 0.5 per cent over or under the average, decisions on redrawing those boundaries can't be made until that time.

If it turns out that illegal aliens can be included in drawing congressional districts, their presence could tip the balance in favor of creation of a new district in South Texas.

That would be a situation creating quite a number of ironies.

Since the votes in the electoral college, which officially elects the President, are based on the number of congressional seats a state has, it would be possible for citizens of another country to have an indirect vote in picking an American leader.

But whatever happens, it isn't likely to make any sudden change for the aliens, whose shadowy presence has always tended to be blotted out in the haze of smoke-filled rooms.

Gasoline Cost In Lubbock Keeps Rising

By JOHNNY HOLMES
Avalanche-Journal Staff

The only thing Lubbockites can be sure of concerning retail gasoline prices is that those prices simply refuse to quit climbing.

The Avalanche-Journal gas survey shows that during the past two weeks prices have risen an average of 2.32 cents per gallon — but that figure of a little more than a penny per week is misleading. Texaco, the city's largest supplier, has raised its prices only about a half cent during that time, while every other major brand has kicked its price up between 2.5 and 4.2 cents.

The only good news around the gas pumps is that the Mars service station at 2315 4th Street has dramatically lowered its prices after about two months of charging $1 per gallon and more for all grades of gasoline. That station last week cut its prices back to 82.9 for regular, 88.9 for unleaded and 91.9 for premium after receiving orders from its main office in St. Louis.

"We're so proud, we wanted to shout from the housetops that we're back down," said Bennie Jester, the station manager who opposed the company's price hikes from the start. "They gave us no reason at all when they ordered the prices down," she said. "But we're happy to do it."

Mars officials in St. Louis refused to discuss the price cut with the Avalanche-Journal. The company was cleared 10 days ago of allegations it had engaged in price-gouging violations, but a Department of Energy spokesman in St. Louis said he felt the cuts could have resulted from the pressure of the audit and numerous complaints from motorists.

Elsewhere in the city, Texaco's attempts to hold the line coupled with the other companies' price hikes caused regular gas to rise an average of 2.31 cents per gallon to 86.94 cents. Unleaded rose 2.25 cents to 90.77 cents as an average price, while premium jumped 2.40 cents to an average of 91.60 cents. And diesel around Lubbock is selling for about 88.5 cents, up about 2.5 cents per gallon.

Most stations appear to be playing "Catch Up With Texaco." Texaco's gas remains the most expensive in town on the average, selling for 90.86 cents per gallon, but gas at both Phillips and Shell stations also averages 90 cents per gallon or more. Mobil and 7-Eleven both sell gas for an average price of 89.5 cents, while Boltons and Gulf stations are averaging selling prices of 88.3 cents per gallon. The least expensive major outlets belong to Exxon, which sells gas for about 86.5 cents per gallon.

Since the last Avalanche-Journal gas survey, taken July 11, Texaco has raised its prices only .58 cents per gallon, two cents less than any other major brand. Conversely, Gulf has raised its pump prices 4.2 cents while Bolton prices have jumped 4 cents in two weeks.

Between those extremes, Phillips is up about 3.46 cents, Shell up 3.4 cents, Mobil up 3 cents, 7-Eleven up 2.83 cents and Exxon up 2.67 cents per gallon on the average.

Since the survey began in April, gas prices have risen in Lubbock about 19 cents per gallon. Pumps at 7-Eleven outlets lead the increases with a jump of 20.53 cents during the 16-week period. Mobil, Bolton and Phillips all have raised their prices more than 19 cents, while Gulf and Texaco have escalated more than 18 cents. Shell has risen more than 17 cents, while the smallest increase since April has been posted by Exxon, with a 14.5 cent per gallon hike.

The cheapest gasoline among the city stations included in the survey can be found at the Exxon Self-Serve at 19th Street and University Avenue. That station sells regular for 79 cents, unleaded for 83 cents and premium for 86 cents per gallon.

The most expensive regular gas among stations surveyed sells for 94 cents per gallon at the Texaco at 34th Street and Quaker Avenue and the Phillips 66 station at 50th Street and Memphis Avenue. The most expensive unleaded sells for 98 cents per gallon at those same two stations, while the most expensive premium gas sells for 94 cents at the Exxon at 50th Street and Slide Road, the Shell at 50th Street and Quaker Avenue and the Gulf at 4th Street and University Avenue.

Littlefield Medical Center Opening Set At 2 P.M. Today

LITTLEFIELD (Special) — The recently completed Littlefield Medical Center will celebrate its grand opening today with dedication ceremonies to begin at 2 p.m.

Public tours of the new 75-bed facility will be given until 6 p.m., according to Robert N. Denson, administrator.

The hospital facilities include a 24-hour emergency room, two surgical suites, a laboratory, an intensive cardiac care unit and medical-surgical patient units. It offers services including cardiopulmonary and physical therapy. In addition to 75 beds for patients, there are five bassinets.

Every patient room is private, and each has a bathroom with shower, toilet and lavatory.

The Lamb County Hospital Authority began planning the project in 1976.

Hospital Affiliates Management Company, a division of Hospital Affiliates International, Inc., will be responsible to the Board of Directors for the operation of the hospital.

were departing the naval base at Subic Bay in the Philippines.

The search area covers 200,000 square miles. It is approximately 1,555 miles from Subic Bay to this beach resort on the Gulf of Thailand.

The Navy Saturday sent three P-3 Orion aircraft out from Subic to renew the search, but they had reported no sightings by late afternoon, a Navy spokesman said.

Lt. Mike Doubleday, public affairs officer of the Kitty Hawk task force, said the ships rescued two groups of refugees in five days' surveillance. The ships also gave fuel and food to refugees aboard a seaworthy boat, and encountered another boat that did not need help and went on its way, he said.

All those rescued said they had been planning to leave Vietnam, but set out when they did because they heard of Carter's order and hoped to be spotted.

One refugee, Dao Van Chuong, told reporters, "We were planning to leave anyway and the president's announcement made us feel more confident."

The task force is not scheduled to pass through the area again for another five days, and some sailors wondered whether they might miss other boats that had left home hoping to be rescued by the fleet.

Dao was among 45 refugees rescued from a foundering 20-foot boat by the cruiser USS England Thursday. All were young male Vietnamese.

Earlier, the Wabash and the destroyer USS Parsons rescued 19 refugees from a 25-foot open boat.

One Wabash crewmen, apparently thinking a delay in boarding the refugees meant they would not be accepted, jumped into the ocean and refused to come back on board until the ships took the boat people aboard.

An officer later said it was a "misunderstanding" — officers were deciding which ship would pick the refugees up.

A cargo helicopter from the Wabash rescued a 16-year-old boy spotted floating in the sea Thursday. He apparently had been in the water for three days and was suffering from exposure and pneumonia. Arrangements were being made to get him to a hospital. Two bodies also were spotted. One was recovered and buried at sea.

Doubleday said the fleet had been rescuing the Vietnamese from foundering boats even before they received Carter's directive.

"The new order is actually an extension of a present policy. the president's order is put forth to us so that we will make more active search for the refugees," he said.

Doubleday said the fleet picked up more than 500 refugees at sea in 1978, and has rescued at least that number so far this year.

Rebellious Tribesmen Ambush Government Troops In Iran

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Rebellious Kurdish tribesmen ambushed government troops, killing about 20 and wounding 30, as the dissident minority renewed its sporadic battle for autonomy in the remote, mountainous region of Kurdistan, news reports said Saturday.

Ten thousand men, women and children from the city of Sanandaj were reported pushing on with a 50-mile protest trek to Marivan, a town abandoned by its 30,000 residents in anger over the arrival of militia units to take over security.

The Marivan Kurds want to run their own security.

Reporters said some of Marivan's townspeople set up tent cities on the outskirts of the town, 300 miles west of Tehran, and others took refuge in the mountains.

The Sanandaj Kurds reportedly launched the march to protest the alleged seizure of Kurdish hostages by government forces in recent fighting near Marivan.

A government mediation team, sent to Marivan to negotiate with the rebels, has returned to Tehran after talks collapsed. A member of the team described the Kurdish demands as 'uncompromising."

Since the Islamic revolutionary victory in Iran in February, rebels seeking autonomy for the Kurdish region of western Iran have waged an on-and-off war against government forces.

The government sent reinforcements and armored personnel carriers by helicopter to Marivan's military compound, a reporter said, and on Thursday troops in the compound fired mortar barrages at suspected Kurd concentrations in the surrounding hills. He said one Kurd was killed and several were wounded.

The same day, the government's revolutionary militiamen, backed by units of the army's 64th Division from Orumiyeh in the north, conducted mopping-up operations trying to open roads to the Iraqi border.

Kurds ambushed one unit, killing about 20 men and wounding 30, and seized a three-quarter-ton army truck, the reports said.

The reporter said the Kurds were keeping government forces off balance with nightly raids, enabling the rebels to maintain control of the roads leading west to the Iraqi border.

Reports from the remote region said Iraq had moved troops to its border with Iran. It appeared that Iranian government forces would attempt to force the rebellious Kurds to the frontier, up against the stronger Iraqi force, possibly cutting off any escape route.

Kurds, a semi-nomadic people, also live in Turkey, Syria, the Soviet Union and Iraq, where for years they have struggled for independence from the Baghdad government.

Jamshid-Haghu, governor-general of western Iran's West Azerbaijan province, said that between 50 and 60 railway workers had been taken hostage by Kurdish tribesmen.

"Because of this, the railway link between Iran and Turkey has been practically severed," state radio quoted Haghu as saying.

Iran has closed two crossings on its border with Turkey in areas where fighting was taking place, official sources in Turkey said Saturday.

The border point of Esendere in Hakkari province and the railroad crossing at Kapikoy in Van province were closed to traffic late last week, the sources said. The only crossing on the border still open was Gurbulak in Agri province, they said.

Meanwhile, in southwestern Iran's Khuzestan province, an explosives depot blew up near the town of Agha Jari, about 30 miles north of the Persian Gulf. Several persons were seriously injured by the blast, felt six miles away, state radio reported.

A security official in Ahwaz ruled out sabotage. He said the explosion was an "accident" caused by improper storage procedures for dynamite and other kinds of explosives.

Arabs in Khuzestan, an ethnic minority in this mostly Persian nation, are trying to win a greater voice in running the oil-rich province, where they claim to be a majority. Arab dissidents claimed responsibility for recent explosions that damaged oil pipelines leading to the huge Abadan refinery.

Scarce 'Full Service' Returns To Lorenzo'

here, almost one on every corner," she said. "I don't really know what happened to them all, but they're not around any more.

"For more than a month, after the Phillips people left, we just didn't have anything, and that's not right. You could get gas here," she said, sweeping her hand toward the co-op and the convenience store, "But elderly folks shouldn't have to pump their own gas. And how are they gonna take care of their car in the evenings or on the weekends? That's what we're here for."

Annadelle's 66 opened for business 10 days ago, after a two-week struggle with Phillips, which at first refused to lease her the station it had just closed. She's now open from 9 a.m. to 8 p.m. every day of the week and, she stresses, hers is a full service station.

"It took two weeks for me to convince the Phillips people that I was serious," she said. "They didn't think I meant what I said." Another broad grin. "But I did, and we're here."

Mrs. Townsley runs the station with the help of her daughter, Lisa Pruitt; Gary Ware, who just graduated from Lorenzo High School; and Daniel Piseno. Gary mans the pumps and the garage while Lisa drives over from her home in Slaton three days a week to do the books and give some baton twirling lessons on the side.

All seem happy about the way business has been, especially this week as trucks carrying loads of newly harvested onions keep the pumps busy.

"We need some more business, even though I know it'll get better when more people realize we really are doing this," she said. "I can't afford to advertise, so we're depending on word of mouth, but the local people really have come through. Sometimes it can sure be holy bedlam around here."

Annadelle's is selling about 400 gallons of gas a day, with regular going for 84.9 cents and unleaded for 91.9 cents, a penny or two more than the self-serve pumps across the street. The prices seem high to Annadelle, but she already is planning on the repair work performed in her garage to keep the operation on its feet. And she has an ace or two stashed up her rolled-up sleeve. She just rented out the cotton patch she's been farming for 20 years, and she plans to sell her "imports" — shelves of jewelry and knick-knacks that occupy the otherwise barren station — to keep her books in the black.

"We probably could make some money off people by charging for more things, but I just can't take advantage of people," she said. "I've been broken down on the road too many times myself and I know it's no fun at all to have car trouble in a strange place."

Sentiments like that you just don't find at gas stations any more, but those words didn't come from a station operator. That's the talk of a lifelong resident of a small town, where life is still simple and neighbors are still friends.

"A lot of our success will depend on our attitude," she theorizes, combining the small town friendliness with some big business savvy. "If we smile and keep people happy, they'll keep coming back."

She means it. Folks keep dropping by, to browse through the "imports," to borrow the restroom, or just to chat about the new business venture, and the boss lady welcomes them all.

And she means it when she says she'll keep the station open. "This town needs it, so I just stuck my neck out," she said. "I don't think the people here are going to let me down, and I'm certainly not going to let them down."

Kissinger Aid Seen On Pact

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Proponents of SALT II are hoping Henry Kissinger can breath some life into a treaty debate that seems to have left the public dozing.

Ironically, the former secretary of state has indicated he may be leaning against ratifying the strategic arms limitation pact in its present form.

Byrd Discounts Pessimism On Carter Chances

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Majority Leader Robert C. Byrd, disagreeing with two senior Democratic senators, said Saturday it is too early to write President Carter's "political obituary."

"President Carter has shown the kind of resiliency that would make it premature in my estimation to count him out," the West Virginia Democrat told a news conference.

Earlier in the week, Sens. Henry M. Jackson, D-Wash., and George McGovern, D-S.D., expressed strong doubts about the president's re-election chances and indicated that Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass., would be a stronger Democratic candidate.

"Quick Rebounds"

Although calling Jackson and McGovern "two very strong voices," Byrd argued that "the power of the president is such that the individual can make quick rebounds. ...

"I would not join with anyone in writing the political obituary of the president at this time."

However, Byrd carefully avoided endorsing Carter for re-election, saying only that he would support the president "if he runs and is nominated."

He also said Carter's recovery depends heavily on the "situation in November or December," on the eve of the early 1980 primaries.

At that time, Byrd said the key factors would be how Carter handled the problems of energy, inflation, the home heating oil supply in New England and his government shakeup.

"Upward Growth"

"If he (Carter) can demonstrate the kind of strong leadership at home and abroad, he can maintain a persistent, strong upward growth," Byrd said.

The majority leader, however, refused to comment when asked about Kennedy's chances for the nomination, saying "President Carter's the one who's in there."

On Tuesday, Jackson, who opposed Carter for the nomination in 1976, predicted that the president would withdraw from or be knocked out of the early primaries and that Kennedy would win the Democratic nomination.

Jackson's comments prompted a curt retort from the president at Wednesday night's news conference. Carter said that in 1976, Jackson "predicted that he would be the next president in 1977. His judgment was not very good then."

Kennedy Backed

On Thursday, McGovern, the Democratic Party's 1972 standard-bearer, accused Carter of "moral posturing, public manipulation and political ineptitude" and said Kennedy would be the "most logical candidate" for the 1980 Democratic nomination.

Kennedy has consistently stated that he expects Carter to be renominated and that he expects to support the incumbent for re-election.

On another topic, Byrd repeated assurances that the Senate would enact major energy legislation this year, including a "windfall profits" tax on extra oil revenues resulting from Carter's decision to gradually decontrol domestic oil prices.

Responding to Carter's criticism of oil lobby influence in Congress, the senator said:

"Nobody expects the Senate to rubber stamp the proposal of any president on energy. ... Because a senator might vote for a change in the president's proposal doesn't mean he's controlled by the oil lobby."

He also said staffs of several Senate committees would work during the August recess to iron out possible procedural problems facing pending energy legislation so the Senate can act quickly when it returns from its month-long break.

After-Dinner Speech Termed Nation's Most Inflated Service

WASHINGTON (UPI) — What would you suppose is the single most inflated product or service in this period of rampant economic hyperbole?

Gasoline? Housing? Basketball players? Hospitalization? Alimony? Bribery? Hazelnuts?

No, according to the International Platform Association, whose annual convention begins Monday, the most sharply rising item is the after-dinner speech.

"The cost of the spoken word has skyrocketed," said Dan Moore, director of the organization composed of professional orators, part-time lecturers, talent agents and heads of program committees.

Among the convention speakers will be Lowell Thomas, Isaac Asimov and Alexander Haig.

When he is out on the lecture circuit, which is about 200 times a year, Asimov, a science-fiction writer by trade, collects up to $10,000 per appearance.

Thomas, 87, the association president, now fills only four speaking dates a year. Yet he brings home $40,000 annually.

Haig, who didn't accept lecture fees while in military uniform, has several $15,000 offers for his maiden post-retirement address, Moore said.

Bob Hope knocks down $30,000 when he makes a speech; Henry Kissinger settles for $25,000. Moore could not say for certain who commands the highest figure of all, but he does know where the potential lies.

"If Richard Nixon were asked by a political fundraising dinner organizer to speak, he could get $40,000 the first time around the circuit," Moore theorized.

Political fund-raisers apparently are the main pump in the elocutionary inflation spiral.

"They have to have well-known personalities as speakers if they are going to get $1,000 a plate for their dinners," Moore said. "At those prices, whatever they pay a speaker isn't of great concern. But if the top speakers get those prices, the demands of the other circuit riders are bound to go up."

One reason for the high cost of oratory may be that lecture fees are not governed by the government's wage-price guidelines. Nevertheless, the Council of Wage and Price Stability may indirectly have a moderating influence.

Bailey County Sheriff's Department Mystified By Missing $10,000

Mexico methamphetamine conspiracy that brought indictments against 30 persons.

The bond was made to Chief Deputy Bud Street. Sheriff Clements had entered the hospital earlier that April for a series of operations that would sideline him for work for most of the next year.

Department procedure calls for bonds of under $1,000 to be kept in the vault, and for bonds of more than $1,000 to be deposited in the sheriff's department bank account.

The Hahn bond, however, was accepted by the chief deputy, placed in the vault, but never transferred to the bank, the sheriff said.

And sometime between the time the bond was made and when Hahn asked for his money back, it disappeared from the vault.

Clements said he believes the money has been "misplaced" or accidentally deposited in another county bank account.

"Almost anything in the world could have happened to it," he said. "It might have been lost or thrown away."

The sheriff said only two persons have access to the vault — himself and the chief deputy, Bud Street, who is now the county probation officer, was succeeded as chief deputy last year by Bob Henderson.

Street, Henderson and the sheriff's other two deputies have passed lie detector tests concerning the missing money, the sheriff said.

The sheriff is conducting his own in-house investigation of the incident. A spokesman in District Attorney Jack Young's office said the district attorney does not plan to investigate the missing cash bond.

"We're not looking at this as criminal case," the spokesman said. "We're thinking that this money has only been misplaced."

County Judge Glenn Williams said the sheriff has not asked for any help from the commissioners.

"This is a loss the sheriff will have to suffer," Williams said. "It's his mistake. He hasn't asked us to replace the money, and I'm sure we wouldn't."

The loss of the money may result in a change in the county's bond handling procedure. In Lubbock County, for instance, bonds are paid directly to the district clerk.

Since the $10,000 was reported missing, two attorneys have delivered large cash bonds directly to the Bailey County district clerk instead of to the sheriff's office.

Sheriff Clements recalled an episode several years ago when $360 that belonged to a captured illegal alien disappeared from the jail.

"I decided I was going to find out who took that money," Clements said.

A few days after the sheriff began his investigation, he said he received the stolen money through the mail.

Southwest Hypes Air Boardings

remains third in the Lubbock air derby, but business has dropped considerably.

For the first half of 1979, Continental flew 40,890 persons from Lubbock, down 36.9 percent over its figure of 64,828 of last year. The 1979 number is by far the lowest boarding count Continental has had in Lubbock in more than five years. For June, Continental's business was down by more than half, from 9,755 last June to the 4,691 persons this June.

Texas International, which is planning to inaugurate flights between Dallas-Fort Worth Airport and Lubbock sometime early next year, is showing facts suggesting its business here is holding steady with 1978. For the first six months, TI's figures have dropped a minute 1.3 percent from last year's record number of 20,630 to 20,361 this year. But in June, TI recorded an increase of 1.6 percent, raising last June's mark of 3,570 to a new TI Lubbock June record of 3,627 passengers.

Regional airline Air Midwest has asserted itself as the largest volume carrier of the smaller airlines serving Lubbock. The Wichita-based carrier reported a boarding figure of 1,527 for the first half of the year, which is a bit misleading because it has served Lubbock only half that time. For June, the company flew 462 persons from Lubbock, as compared to the 441 it flew in May.

Crown Aviation flew 698 persons from Lubbock to Clovis during the first half of 1979, an increase of 6.7 percent over the 654 it flew during the same period last year. In June, Crown reported 110 Clovis-bound passengers, down 36.4 percent from the 173 registered in June 1978.

And Permian Airways, the state's newest airline, flew 140 persons from Lubbock to Amarillo and Midland-Odessa in June. During May, its first month of operation here, Permian flew 83 between those two cities.

Lubbock International's overall boarding figure of 239,359 for the first half of the year is not quite half the 482,825 persons flown from the airport during 1978. The airport still stands an excellent chance to break that yearly record and exceeding the half million passenger boarding mark for the year,though, because two of the heaviest air travel months, November and December, are yet to come. That, combined with Southwest's success here and the entry into the market of three smaller airlines, should allow the airport to board more persons this year than ever before.

Mrs. Schultz Hospitalized

SAN ANTONIO (UPI) — Mattie Schultz, 91 — arrested and jailed for shoplifting $15 worth of food so she would not starve — has been hospitalized for exhaustion, a state official reported Saturday.

Raymond Tripp, supervisor of the Texas Department of Human Resources' office of Community Care to the Aged, Blind and Disabled, said Mrs. Schultz was taken to the hospital after she complained of "severe stomach pain" late Friday night.

"She was seen by a doctor and he said she was totally exhausted. She has been hospitalized in a private room but the doctor does not want his name or the location of the hospital known," Tripp said.

"The patient cannot endure the publicity," said Tripp. "We're going to have to protect her right to privacy."

News reports on Mrs. Schultz' arrest resulted in contributions and sympathy from across the nation for the woman who would steal rather than starve. She was accused of taking $15 worth of ham, sausage and butter and spent a night in jail.

But Mrs. Schultz' burden was eased somewhat when an official of a grocery chain that owns the store where she was arrested said he was recommending dropping the shoplifting charges.

Tripp said Mrs. Schultz refused an offer last fall to be boarded at nursing home.

Pentagon Eyeing High Plains For Vast Missile Installation

the committee decided they had little expertise on the matter and forwarded the study to Reese Air Force Base for comment. To date, the base has offered no comment on the study.

According to Tom Absher of the Panhandle Regional Planning Commission of Amarillo, the MX missile is in its predevelopmental stages and there has been "no time to go into the documents (environmental impact study) themselves."

Absher, who is responsible for reviewing projects, indicated no hearings are planned to inform local government agencies or the general public.

The same holds true in El Paso, where Henry White of the West Texas Council of Governments says the MX missile is only in the "preliminary impact statement and review stage."

"We're not required . . . to comment on non-grant applications," he notes, "unless it looks like it will have a direct effect on our area."

If the MX missiles should be situated in the West Texas-Rio Grande Basin area, some 32,500 persons could be forced to move. If the missiles facility is located in the High Plains area of the Panhandle and New Mexico, up to 66,000 persons could be displaced.

And should the Pentagon decide to build underground tunnels or "trenches" for the missile system, the demand for concrete to construct the underground tunnels could be so great as to create a tight concrete market, according to comments from residents near other possible sites.

The obvious concern to any area would be the probability of the Soviets aiming their own ICBMs at the MX facilities, say some who have responded to the impact statement.

The system is expected to be completed by 1986 or sooner, depending on the urgency.

According to one Pentagon official who declined to be identified, the lack of letters and comments from Texas is unusual and it could signal an acceptance of the MX missile in either Texas location.

But the Air Force and the Pentagon are making no hasty decisions on the MX.

Another round of comments from citizens and governmental agencies will be solicited after the sites are narrowed to three or four.

But the possibility remains there will be more than one site selected "and the MX system will be deployed in a dispersed or a 'split' basing approach. "This approach may prove to be a mitigative measure for environmental concerns regarding large land use," Col. Molinar explained at a public hearing in late August 1978 in Lompoc, Calif.

The final draft of the USAF's environmental impact study stressed that the Panhandle region of Texas is heavily involved in farming and production of oil and gas and contains a network of highways and railroads — all vital to the national interest.

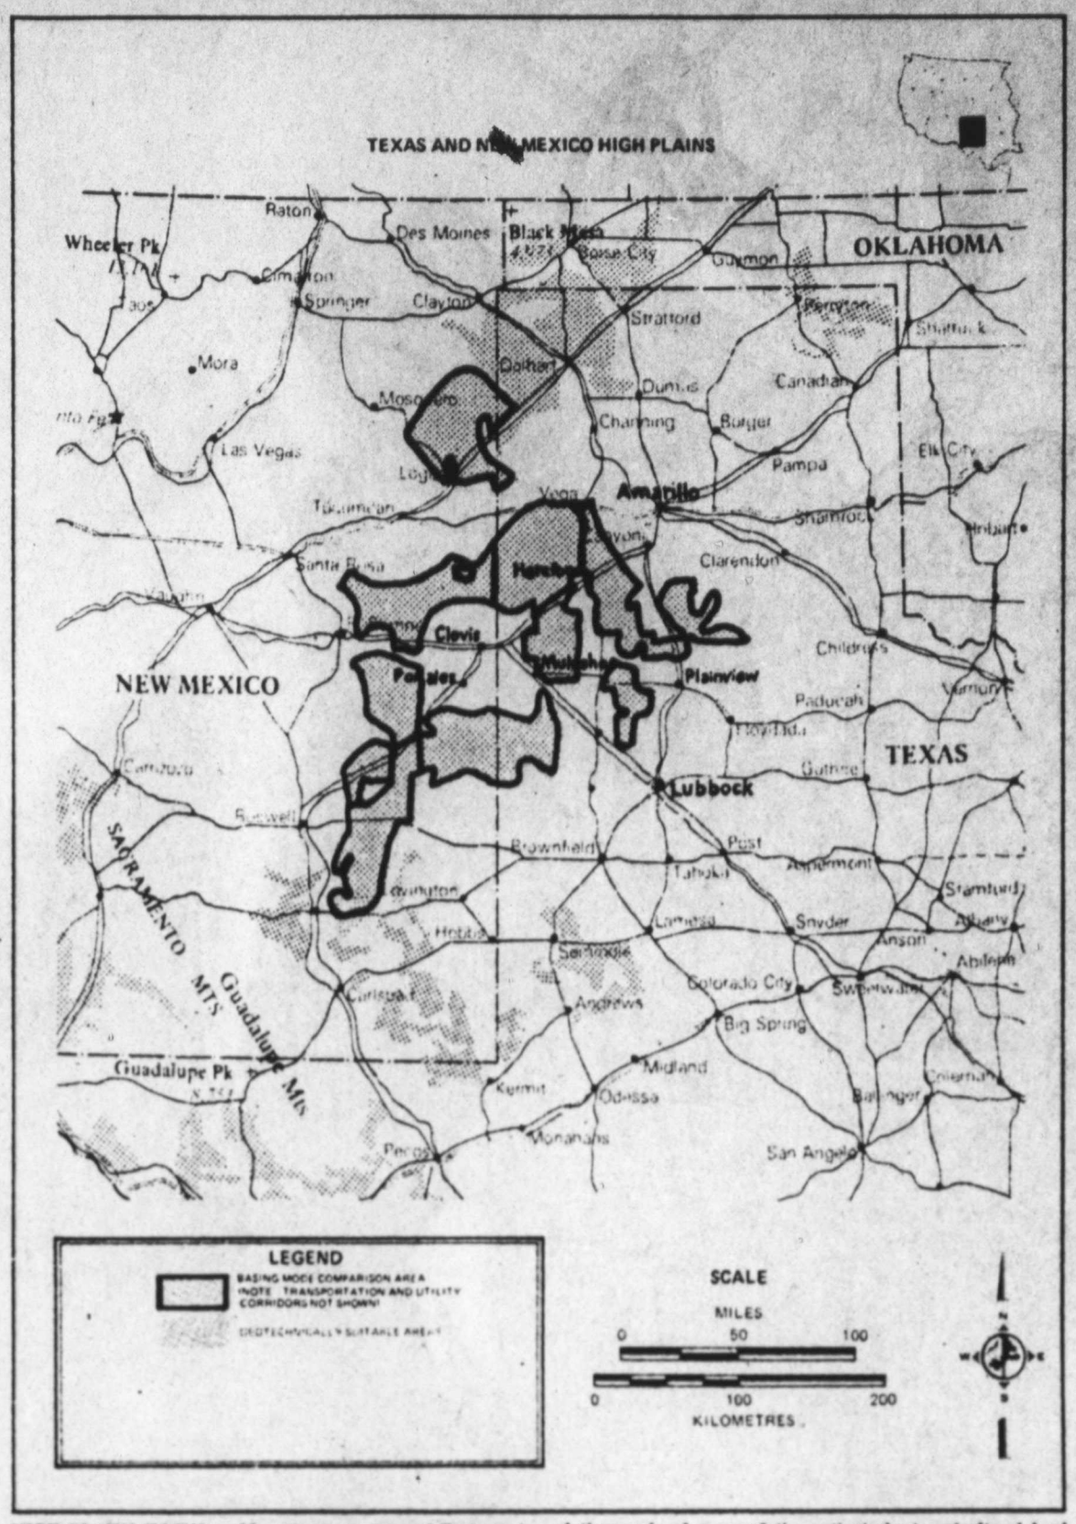

Another factor which may make the Panhandle area an unlikely place for the MX missiles is the amount of land the Pentagon would have to acquire.

The environmental impact report stated that all land in the Panhandle under consideration for the MX missile site is privately owned; land under consideration in far West Texas is 94 percent privately owned.

It will be several years until actual construction can begin on the project but it is reported that the Air Force will zero in on a site in 1980.

Some factors indicate Texas would not be a likely site for MX missile testing. But a general silence and the assumption of disinterest on the part of Texans could play a part in final decision-making for the MX missile testing location.

HIGH PLAINS FOCUS — Map shows portions of Texas and New Mexico now being scrutinized by the Defense Department as possible sites for a complex of MX missiles. Hundreds of thousands of acres of the nation's best agricultural land would be in jeopardy should an area within this map sector be selected.

Impact Statement Got Comment Elsewhere, But None From Here

One year ago the Air Force, seeking to locate an MX missile testing facility at one of seven sites in the Western United States, sent out a five-volume environmental impact study to various governmental agencies for scrutiny.

Some of the studies were examined, as evidenced by more than 7,000 responses and inquiries received by the Department of the Air Force.

Some were shelved and forgotten.

The latter apparently was the case with documents sent to the South Plains Association of Governments in Lubbock, Panhandle Regional Planning Commission of Amarillo and West Texas Council of Governments, headquartered in El Paso.

The South Plains group referred the Air Force's proposal for missile testing to one of its committees, but that was the extent of its concern with the MX missile project.

"The natural resources committee (of the South Plains Association of Governments) determined it did not have the technical expertise," says Jim Crider of the agency's office.

"We forwarded it out to Reese Air Force Base and didn't get a response for it. It wouldn't have done any good if we had gotten a response," Crider notes, "because the time limit the Air Force sets (to respond to the environmental impact report) was 'way too short for comment."

On the other hand, Reese Air Force Base officials say they know nothing of any report forwarded to them by the regional agency.

Commentaries from citizens and governmental agencies is the federal government's way of soliciting ideas and opinions on proposed grants or projects.

A letter from the South Plains Association of Governments to the Pentagon last August indicated the missile testing project would be presented to the natural resources committee Aug. 28 with a recommendation to be formulated by the unit's executive committee at a later date. However, Natural Resources Committee Chairman Jim Bertram says the project never reached the committee, at least not while he was in attendance.

At last report, the Pentagon had received more than 7,000 comments from citizens and governmental agencies, but only six responses were from Texas. One Temple resident responded to the environmental impact statement and five state agencies offered comments. However, the agencies responded about seven months too late.

"Usually, the federal government says they need comments in 25 to 60 days. They wanted them in 25 days when we need 45 to 60 days," Crider said of the time limitations.

The following is a sampling of comments received by the Pentagon and published in the final environmental impact statement this spring:

• "The possibilities of locating one of the alternative base mode types somewhere in western Nebraska, for deployment . . . has stimulated great concern, consternation and opposition on the part of the local populace and members of the council of governments. . ."— Southwest Nebraska Council of Governments

• "Why put it (MX testing) in a rich farming community when there are miles and miles of poor land which won't even keep a cow or horse alive in New Mexico and Arizona?"— Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Klein, Yuma, Ariz.

• "I'm 17 years old and I suffer to think of the way I will have to live my life with the way the government is trying to take over and how such projects as the MX missile could destroy my generation . . ."— Royal Meyer, Ogallala, Neb.

• "From studying that I have recently done, I am aware that already our U.S. arsenals contain enough weapons to destroy the entire world twelve times. Why is there a need to continue the build more weapons . . ."— Sister Hope Steffens, Sandhills Catholic Parishes, Neb.

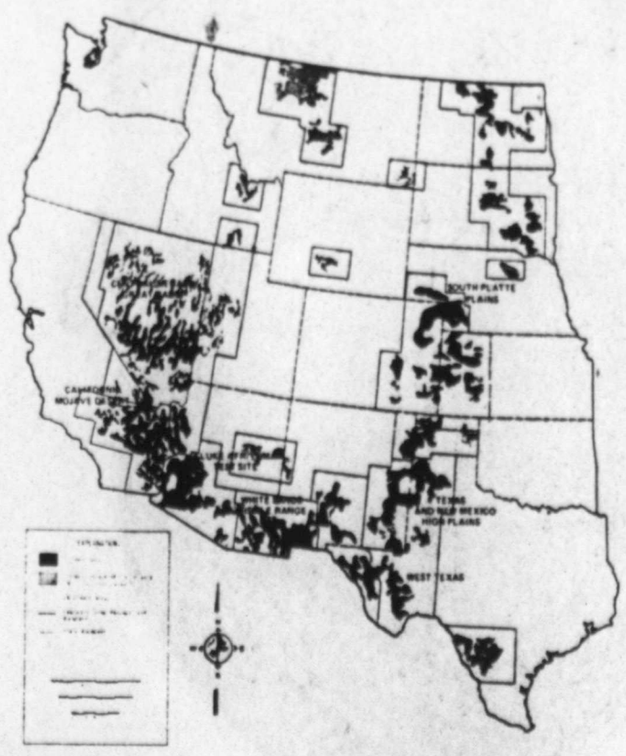

• "I have recently returned from a campaign swing through approximately 15 counties in the area being suggested as a possible missile site. I have found landowners, farmers, ranchers, in the area are quite concerned . . . These individuals are quite upset, about the lack of information concerning the proposed missile sites that have been forthcoming from the Department of the Air Force. We would like to know why only two environmental impact statements were sent to an area that is approximately 5,000 square miles. . ."— Marilyn Fowler, congressional candidate, Kearney, Neb.

• "It is possible that whole towns would be wiped out and the cost to the government would be astronomical . . ." — Burlington, Colo., Chamber of Commerce

• "I am most pleased to note the basic conclusion, namely that the environmental impact of the testing programs associated with the full-scale engineering development phase of the MX program will be minimal . . . I am also pleased to note that the MX program will serve to provide employment for as many as a quarter of a million of our citizens, if the program is implemented in full. . ."— American Security Council

• "The map that I am looking at . . . indicates that some of the very best farm ground in Southwestern Nebraska is being considered, when directly north there are hundreds of thousands of acres of grass land that does not have a tillable value nor the population that the other proposed area has. . ."— John Green, Wauneta Falls Bank, Wauneta Falls, Neb.

— Bill Torres

POTENTIAL SITES — This map of the western half of the United States shows all potential MX missile basing areas under consideration by the Air Force and Pentagon.

PLAGUE DIAGNOSED

SANTA FE, N.M. (AP) — An Espanola woman was under treatment at a northern New Mexico Hospital for the state's fourth confirmed case of plague this year, officials say. State epidemiologist Jonathan Mann said the woman does not have the pneumonic form of plague, which can be transmitted from person to person.

NOTICE OF FINDING OF NO SIGNIFICANT EFFECT ON THE ENVIRONMENT
TO WHOM IT MAY CONCERN:
The City of Lubbock, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457, Tel. 762-8411 proposes to request the Department of Housing and Urban Development to release federal funds under Title I of the Housing and Community Development Act of 1974 (PL 93-383) to be used for the following project:
Improvements to intersection at 50th & Quirt — $65,000.00
It has been determined that the request for release of funds will not constitute an action significantly affecting the quality of the human environment and, accordingly, the City of Lubbock has decided not to prepare an Environmental Impact Statement under the National Environmental Policy Act of 1969 (PL 91-190).
The reasons for the decision not to prepare a Statement are as follows: (a) overall effects of the projects are beneficial; (b) beneficial effects are long-term and the adverse effects are short term and environmentally insignificant, being related primarily to activities necessary to construct the projects; (c) since the projects will occur at the neighborhood level, the short-term, adverse effects will be confined to limited numbers of people; (d) historic and environmentally critical areas will not be affected; (e) no viable alternatives to the projects, including the no-action alternative, exist.
An Environmental Review Record for the projects has been made by the City which documents the environmental review of the projects and more fully sets forth the reasons why the Statement is not required. This Record is on file at the Municipal Building, 916 Texas Avenue, and is available for public examination and copying, upon request, in Room 207 between the hours of 8:00 a.m. and 5:00 p.m.
No further environmental review of the project is proposed to be conducted prior to the request for release of federal funds.
All interested parties disagreeing with this decision are invited to submit written comments for consideration by the City to the Community Development Coordinator, P.O. Box 2000, Lubbock, Texas 79457, by 5:00 p.m., August 13, 1979. All comments will be considered and the City will not request the release of federal funds or take any administrative action on the project prior to the date in the preceding sentence.

Field Goal Return Deflates Cowboys

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — For rookie Henry Williams, it was the thrill of a lifetime, and for coach Tom Flores, it was a big plus as the Oakland Raiders beat the Dallas Cowboys 20-13 Saturday in the annual Pro Football Hall of Fame game.

Williams, a cornerback from San Diego State, scored what proved to be the winning touchdown on the last play of the first half when he picked off a blocked field goal in the air and raced 63 yards to give Oakland a 20-6 lead.

"I was just standing there when the ball popped into my hands," said Williams, who runs the 40-yard dash in 4.5 seconds. "This is the biggest thrill in football for me.

Flores, directing the Raiders as head coach for the first time as the 1979 NFL exhibition schedule opened, said, "I was especially pleased with out special teams.

The Raiders took the opening kickoff and marched 79 yards in 17 plays to a take the lead for good on a one-yard run by Art Whittington. Safety Charles Phillips intercepted a pass by Dallas quarterback Roger Staubach five plays later, running it back 24 yards to the Dallas 15 and setting up Mann's 27-yard field goal.

The Cowboys charged right back, scoring on Staubach's one-yard dive that capped a 66-yard drive early in the second period. The march was highlighted by Staubach's 27-yard pass to Jay Saldi. The Cowboys were called for holding on the first extra point try, and Rafael Septien was wide to the right on the second try.

Clarence Duren intercepted a Danny White pass late in the half to set up Mann's second field goal, a 22-yarder that came with 26 seconds remaining.

Defensive tackle Charles Philyaw blocked the low kick and Williamscaught it in mid-air and raced untouched into the end zone as time ran out.

The Cowboys had the ball twice in the last two minutes and 15 seconds, failing to cross midfield on the first possession but driving from their own 27 to the Oakland 30 in the final 1:12.

White's 11-yard pass to tight end Billy Jo Dupree gave Dallas a first down at the 30 with 15 seconds remaining. White threw three more times, but one was batted down, one was incomplete and the last try sailed over the end zone as time ran out.

Humm and Jim Plunkett shared the quarterbacking duties for Oakland as regular starter Ken Stabler, a late arrival for training camp, watched in uniform from the sidelines. The Raiders also played without All-Pro tight end Dave Casper, who is attempting to renegotiate his contract.

Staubach saw action only in the first two Dallas possessions, with White and Glenn Carano sharing the job the rest of the way.

Whittington, the former SMU running back, led game rushers with 43 yards in 10 carries, while teammate Terry Robiskie added 32 yards in five carries. Scott Laidlaw topped Dallas with 28 yards in six tries, and White led the passers with 11 completions in 23 attempts for 150 yards. Humm hit six of 12 for 69 yards.

Jarrett Admits Luck Helped In Firing 67

By CHUCK McDONALD
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

Mark Jarrett will be the first to admit that it is a little bit easier to start the final round of a golf tournament in second or third place. Sure you want to be close to the leader — but not necessarily out front.

Nonetheless Jarrett will lead the field in the City Golf Championships today when some of Lubbock's finest golfers tee off at Meadowbrook.

Jarrett fired a 4-under-par 67 Saturday to take a 1-stroke lead over Chris Brown and Gordon Butler, who turned in 68s.

"It's good to be ahead," admitted Jarrett. "But if you're behind you can make a charge where sometimes when you're leading you tend to play too conservative.

In fact, Jarrett played pretty conservatively on Saturday. He was 4 under par on the front nine and then just settled down to even par on the backside. But maybe that is the best way to play Meadowbrook — safely.

Meadowbrook pro Jay McClure admitted that the scores were a little higher than expected. Only 28 golfers in the championship flight made the cut, the rest falling into a championship consolation bracket. Several pre-tourney favorites, including Kevin Heise, didn't make the cut.

And, according to McClure, the golfers who did well on the front nine invariably had trouble on the back and vice versa.

Consider Chris Brown.

He went 5 under on the frontside and when he birdied No. 21 (the tournament is being held on the 10th through 27th holes) he dipped to 6 under. But then the Texas Tech golfer got into trouble.

He hit one over the green on No. 22 and wound up with a double bogey, then had to settle for bogeys on 25 and 26. Still he managed a birdie on the last hole to take a 68.

Others close to the leader are Scooter Parks (69) and Steve Moss and Hal Schauer, both at 70.

But overall, the scores were fairly high, and they could be high again today.

"The pins should be placed a little tougher tomorrow," figured Jarrett. "And it's going to come down to the same old thing — who's making their putts.

"I made a few today and that was probably the difference," added the leader. "From what I heard, nearly everybody was having their problems on the greens."

But McClure scoffed at the notion that he would try to make the course any harder than it already is.

"I'm not going to try and hide the pins or anything ," he said. "I don't have a fetish about low scores. I just want the best golfer to win — the one who makes his putts."

But even the best golfer needs a little luck now and then. And Jarrett flirted with Lady Luck at least once Saturday.

His tee shot on the 26th hole looked as if it were headed for sure trouble as it sailed off to the left. But the ball hit a tree and bounced out into the middle of the fairway.

"I guess I got a little lucky there," he said laughing.

Jarrett wound up with a par-4 on the hole. That par turned out to be the difference between first and tied for first with Brown and Butler.

So now Jarrett will lead 28 golfers in the championship flight who shot 77 and below into the final round. The rest of the field falls into the consolation.

One of the biggest surprises of the day came in the first flight, though. The leader there is none other than Mayor Dirk West — who turned in a round of 76.

Bobby Wadkins Leads

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Bobby Wadkins, who has spent years struggling with a recognition problem because of golfing brother Lanny, shot a 4-under-par 67 Saturday to take a one-stroke lead after three rounds in the $250,000 Philadelphia Golf Classic.

Wadkins, who celebrated his 28th birthday Thursday, put together rounds of 67, 69 and 67 for a 54-hole total of 203, one stroke better than Australia's David Graham.

Graham shot a 1-under-par 70 Saturday and held second alone at 204.

J.C. Snead, who led going into Saturday's round, carded a 1-over-par 70 Saturday. He slipped into a third-place tie with Mark Hayes, each at 205. Then came Tommy Valentine at 206, and Gene Littler, Doug Tewell, Bill Rogers and Ben Crenshaw at 207.

Defending champion Jack Nicklaus carded a 4-under 67 in the third round and was in a group at 209 in the tight scramble for the $45,000 first prize.

Nicklaus, who tied for second in last week's British Open, said the key for him was making some putts.

In that group with Nicklaus at 209 is former Texas Tech golfers Jeff Mitchell. Mitchell had a 70 Saturday to stay among the top golfers.

Bobby Wadkins, who joined the PGA tour in 1974 and has career earnings of $138,134, hasn't won yet but came close this year when he finished second at Tucson and third at Tallahasse.

"Maybe I'm coming of age," said the East Tennessee graduate. "I'm driving better, starting to putt better. I just hope I can keep it up tomorrow (in the final round today)," Wadkins said.

Wadkins trailed the pacesetting Graham by four strokes starting the third round on a hot, humid day at the Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course. He had a 6-under-par 136 to Snead's 36-hole total of 132. There were four others to overcome, but the 28-year-old native of Richmond, Va., did the job.

The 6-foot-1 Wadkins played the first three holes in par, then took a bogey on the tough 235-yard par-3 fourth. He dropped a 30-foot putt for par 5 on the next hole.

Wadkins rolled in a 12-footer on seven for a birdie-3, parred eight and nine and made the turn in 1-under 36.

Wadkins made three birdies on the back nine, parring the rest. He made one of those birds on a 40-foot shot out of bunker.

"It's been a consistent week for me," Wadkins said. "I started out (Wednesday) with a 67. I'm driving it well and I'm making some putts," said Wadkins.

Golfers Find Fun, Prizes At Rainbow

It was billed as a benefit golf tournament, but the action at Treasure Island Golf Course looked an awful lot like a carnival.

In fact, TI pro Wilson Swinney called the Rainbow Classic just that — a carnival. Sure there were over 200 golfers out on the course trying to win the numerous gift certificates and prizes — but the real objective was to raise money for the Arthritis Foundation.

And maybe have some fun.

From all appearances, the Rainbow Classic seemed successful on both counts. Arthritis Foundation president Taylor Evans reported Saturday afternoon that the tourney, sponsored by the Avalanche-Journal, would raise at least $3,000 —and possibly more — for his organization.

The golfers paid $15 each to enter the tournament and $12 of that went straight to the Foundation. But that was just the start of the cash flow. A beer distributor donated his product, and that generated some more funds. Then there were the contests: For putting, closest to the hole, target holes and the hole-in-one freebies offered on No. 18.

Toss in the presence of plenty of pretty girls running around in short summer attire (they were the official cheerleaders) and a couple of Texas Tech athletic heroes (quarterback Ron Reeves and basketballer David Little) and you've got the full effect.

Possibly even more golfers would have been at Treasure Island but for a conflict with the opening round of the City Men's Championship at Meadowbrook, which had more than 200 contestants.

But that didn't seem to concern the folks out at Treasure Island.

"We told Jay McClure (the Meadowbrook pro) that we're going to have the tournament again next year," said Swinney. "And we're going to have twice this many people next year and we're having the tourney on the same date.

"They can move the date of the city tournament," added the TI pro, "or else they're going to conflict with us again."

The Rainbow tournament was divided into four different teeoff groups. The early group went off in the morning and the rest followed at three-hour intervals as registration continued throughout the day.

But once the golfers finished their 18 holes there were plenty of other things at the course to occupy their time.

South Nudges Yanks 7-6

By JIM FERGUSON
Avalanche-Journal Sports Staff

FORT WORTH — Instead of Gatorade, maybe officials should have passed out Nyquil to the all-stars assembled for the Texas High School Coaches Association football game.

What was supposed to have been, in the words of North coach Frank Beavers, "an exciting contest", turned out to be a real yawner as the South escaped with a 7-6 victory Saturday night at TCU's Amon Carter Stadium.

The North had an opportunity to tie the game earlier in the fourth quarter when McIvor was unable to connect on four straight passes after moving the team down to the South 27.

Craig Waggoner of Dallas Samuel dropped what appeared to be a certain touchdown when he was unable to hang on to the ball after McIvor drilled him

Kingman Clouts Three Homers; Chicubs Lose

NEW YORK (AP) — John Stearns drove in three runs and Lee Mazzilli hit a two-run homer to help the New York Mets defeat Chicago 6-4 Saturday and overcome three home runs by the Cubs' Dave Kingman.

Pete Falcone, 2-7, lasted to the seventh inning before getting relief help from Neil Allen, who picked up his first save. Falcone yielded solo homers to Kingman in the fourth and sixth. His third came off Allen in the eighth.

The three homers raised Kingman's season total to 35 and gave him five in his last two games as he moved into a tie for the National League lead with Philadelphia's Mike Schmidt.

The five homers in two games tied a major league record held by Schmidt and Carl Yastrzemski of the Boston Red Sox, who both did it in 1976.

New York took a 1-0 lead with an unearned run in the third inning against Ken Holtzman, 6-8, the first of three Chicago pitchers. Falcone beat out an infield hit and moved to second on an error on the play by second baseman Ted Sizemore. With two outs, an error by shortstop Ivan DeJesus allowed Falcone to score.

Stearns slammed his sixth home run of the year in the fourth after Richie Hebner had reached base on another error by Sizemore. Mazzilli's 10th homer came after the second of three singles by Frank Taveras and the two-run blast finished Holtzman.

New York scored its final run in the seventh off Willie Hernandez when Taveras singled, stole second for his third steal of the game and scored on Stearns' single.

Money Involved In Track No-Shows?

By BERT ROSENTHAL

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — Illnesses, injuries, visa problems and other reasons that have been used as excuses by many big-name track and field athletes for skipping National Sports Festival II and Spartacade apparently are untrue in several cases.

Thre sources closes to the sport told The Associated Press the real reason for the many withdrawals from both events during the past week is money — or, more specifically, the lack of it.

According to the sources, many of the athletes did not receive so-called "under the table" payments they expected from corporate sponsors connected with the Festival, including Coca Cola, nor did they receive money they expected from the Amateur Athletic Union, which is in charge of sending U.S. athletes to Spartacade.

The AP learned exclusively about the lack of payments from Wilma Rudolph, the first woman to win three Olympic gold medals in track and field, a track and field athlete and an insider in the sport. The athlete and the insider preferred not to be identified.

"There is just not enough money to go round," aid Rudolph, the former sprint star now serving as a consultant to the Department of Labor's national sports training program and an employee of Coca Cola. "There is no way to pay all the kids here now to participate in the Festival. The USOC (U.S. Olympic Committee) does not have enough money to pay them all.

"I can't sit here and tell you that the athletes don't get money under the table," Rudolph told the AP. "It wouldn't be honest. It would bother my conscience if I lied to you."

Saturday evening, the USOC delivered a news release from Rudolph to reporters. It said: "Wilma Rudolph vehemently denied the context of an Associated Press story that she discussed the non-appearance of any athletes at the United States Olympic Committee National Sports Festival or the Spartacade in Moscow."

The statement said Miss Rudolph "at no time in an interview with an Associated Press sports writer discussed any financial conditions of the National Sports Festival."

There was no amplification of the statement and it did not make clear what "context" it referred to.

In the interview with the AP, however, Miss Rudolph said most of the under-the-table money was reserved for specific athletes, the top names. And she said she didn't think it was fair.

"How can you justify paying 15 kids when there are so many others in the program?" she asked. "I'm not against those 15 kids getting the money. I just think it should be a fair distribution.

"I think everyone involved should be dealt with on the same level. You just can't hand-pick certain athletes for certain things.

"Doing it that way, you can't come up with a fair and honest system. Track is such an unpredictable sport. There is no guarantee that a hand-picked person will win all the time."

South All-Stars Nip North 7-6

square in the stomach at the 12. After that, McIvor went to Turner two straight times but neither attempt found its mark, and the North was forced to turn the ball over at the 4:48 mark.

The South finally got rid of its Sominex blues early in the fourth quarter when SMU-bound Eric Dickerson broke loose on a 43-yard run to score the game's only touchdown. Dickerson took a straight handoff from quarterback Mark James of Gregory-Portland, slipped a couple of would-be tacklers and turned on the steam as the South took a 7-0 lead, following the PAT by Craig James.

Then nine-play drive, which was kept alive thanks to a personal foul penalty, was the only show of life by either team. Facing a third-and-9 from their 37, Craig James was apparently thrown for a 5-yard loss but the penalty enabled the South to pick up a key first down. Two plays later, Dickerson scored.

Ernest Jackson did his darndest to make the game interesting when he fumbled with 26 seconds left in the game to give the North a new lease on life. Ricky Sanders recovered the ball, giving the North excellent field position at the 7.

On the firt play, quarterback Rick McIvor of Fort Stockton hit Estacado's Dewey Turner with a perfect strike, cutting the South's lead to 7-6. But on the 2-point conversion try, McIvor and Turner were unable to repeat their earlier success.

Larry Twardowski was the main culprit in preventing the 2-point play when he stepped in front of Turner and batted the ball harmlessly to the ground, preserving the North's win.

It was the second consecutive year the game has ended in a 7-6 count.

Both the North and South squads had chances to score in the first half but neither cashed in on opportunities in the 0-0 tie.

With 15 seconds left in the first period the North, guided by McIvor, managed to move to the South 1. But the 11-play drive fizzled when McIvor fumbled the snap and the South's Elroy Marshall picked up the loose ball.

So much for the North's chance.

After the South was unable to mount a drive following the turnover, the North again moved from its own 46 to the South 14. But a field-goal attempt by Bobby Bishop fell about 10 yards short.

Strike two for the North.

The South missed its first — and really only — opportunity to get on the scoreboard with 3:46 left in the first period when fullback Craig James failed to connect on a 37-yard field goal. The South had taken possession of the ball on its' own 17 when Craig McGallion hopped on a McIvor fumble. However, three plays netted a minus-3 yards thus forcing the field goal try.

Turnovers plagued both teams. The North fumbled two of its three possesions in the first half, while the South saw its first drive of the night halted when a Mark James pass was picked off by Bishop.

Pro Grid Hall Adds Quartet

CANTON, Ohio (AP) — Professional football greats Johnny Unitas, Dick Butkus, Ron Mix and Yale Lary were inducted Saturday into the Pro Football Hall of Fame in an emotion-packed ceremony on the steps of the domed shrine.

Unitas and Butkus, both voted into the Hall of fame in their first year of eligibility, drew the biggest response from the enthusiastic crowd of several thousand persons.

Butkus was presented for enshrinement by Pete Elliott, his coach at the University of Illinois and now executive director of the Hall of Fame. Elliot described him as "the yardstick for linebackers for all time."

An emotion-choked Butkus said, "I dreamed of being a great pro football player as far back as I can remember. I consider being inducted into the Hall of Fame as the top of my dream."

Unitas, calm and dignified as he stood before the throng, which included nearly 800 members of a Baltimore Colts fan club, said, "A man never gets to this station in life without being helped, aided, shoved, pushed and prodded to do better. I want to be honest with you, the players I played with and the coaches I had. . .they are directly responsible for my being here. I want you all to remember that. I always will."

Unitas set many passing records in his 18-year National Football League career, the first 17 with the Colts. Perhaps his greatest mark is a string of 47 consecutive games in which he threw at least one touchdown pass. Unitas also threw for more than 300 yards in a game 26 times in his career, leading the Colts to two Super Bowl appearances.

Joe Madro, the offensive line coach with the San Diego Chargers throughout the 10 years that Mix was the leading tackle in the American Football League, called his ex-protege "the finest offensive line technician I have ever seen. He combined the initelligence and athletic ability that prompted me to dub him 'the intellectual assassin.'"

Dolphins Outscore NO In Scrimmage

VERO BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Rookies Larry Fortner and Tony Nathan again turned in strong performances Saturday as the Miami Dolphins whipped the New Orleans Saints 24-10 in "doubleheader" scrimmage.

The Dolphins travelled to the Saints' training camp at Dodgertown for a multiscrimmage that pitted the Dolphins' offense against the Saints' defense on one field, and the Saints' offense against the Dolphins' defense on a field 50 yards away.

"With only four preseason games, we had to do something like this," Miami coach Don Shula said, as Saints coach Dick Nolan nodded in agreement.

"And we got in twice as much work as we would in a preseason game. You're really squeezed,' Shula said. "With four quarterbacks, how do you give 'em enough time enough time to play without something like this?"

Fortner, a 12th-round pick from Miami of Ohio, is a longshot to make the National Football League club, which has three experienced quarterbacks. However, Fortner hit 9 of 13 passes for 101 yards Saturday, giving him, with a rookie scrimmage against the Saints last week, 23 completions in 32 attempts for 264 yards and two touchdowns.

Nolan, whose club travels to Miami's Orange Bowl for its first exhibition game Friday night, got his first 1979 look at the intricate flex defense the Saints will use.

"I wasn't looking so much at that,' he said, "I was looking at Shula's personnel primarily to see which ones might be cut and we might pick up."

Colts Trips 'Skins

CARLISLE, Pa. (AP) — In a 48-play controlled National Football League preseason scrimmage, the Baltimore Colts defeated the Washington Redskins 6-3 Saturday.

The Colts' touchdown came on a 65-yard pass play from quarterback Mike Kirkland to Ben Garry.

For the Redskins, Mark Moseley kicked a 41-yard field goal in the first quarter and had a 37-yard field goal attempt blocked on the final play of the scrimmage.

Zorn Shines For Seattle

CHENEY, Wash. (AP) — Quarterback Jim Zorn completed 10 of 17 passes for 171 yards and a touchdown Saturday as the Seattle Seahawks' offense scrimmaged against the defense at Eastern Washington University.

The touchdown came on a 62-yard strike to Steve Raible. Zorn also threw one interception.

"I thought Jimmy played very good," said Coach Jack Patera. "He moved the first unit well on the first series."

The Seahawks will test two weeks of training at Cheney when they start their fourth year in the NFL in an exhibition game Thursday against the Minnesota Vikings in the Seattle Kingdome.

Lubbock Pony Team Triumphs

EL PASO (Special) — The Southwest Lubbock All-Stars defeated El Paso Lower Valley 7-6 in the second game of a doubleheader to win the District Pony League Baseball Tournament here Saturday.

Stewart Brann struck out seven and allowed three hits in five innings to pick up the win. Catcher Rick Tamburo was named the tournament's most valuable player.

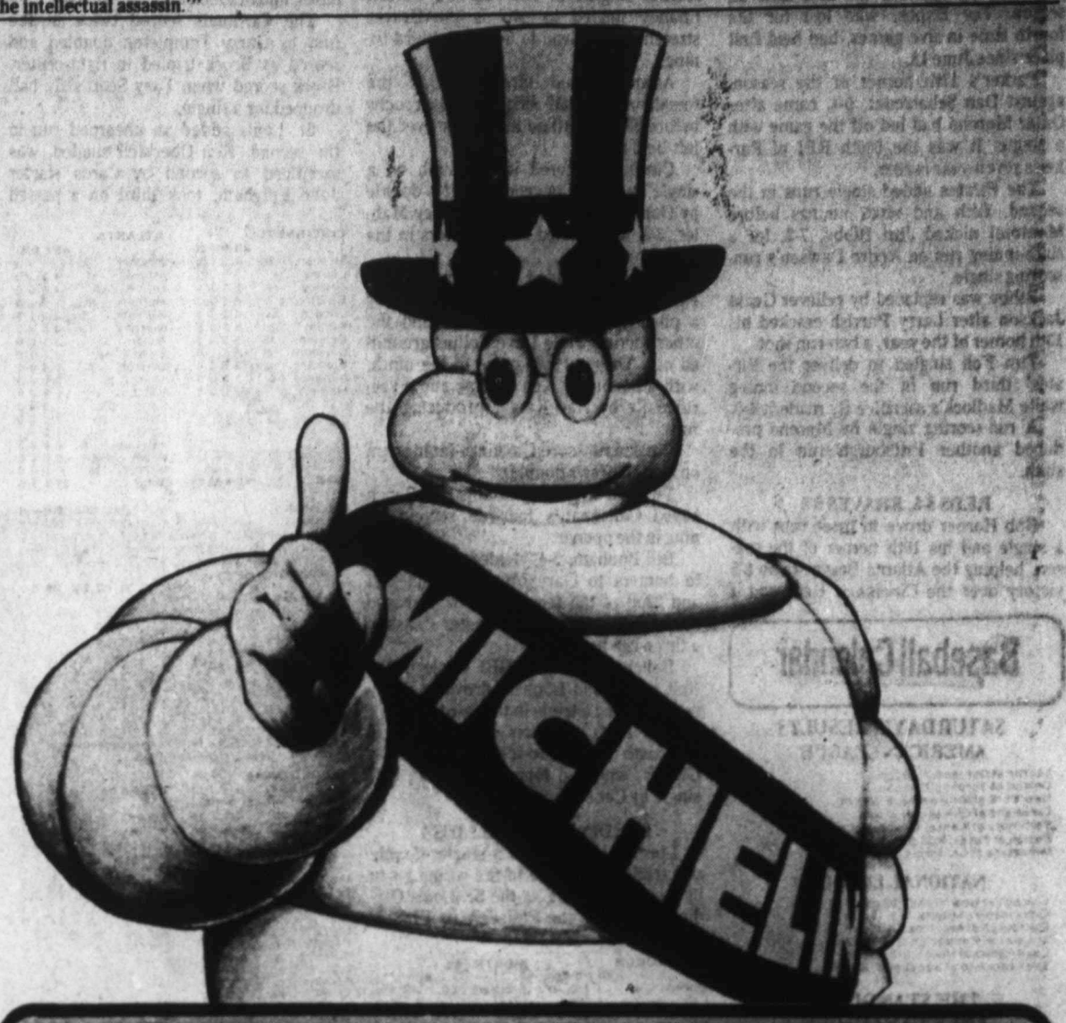

Lower Valley won Saturday's first game 4-2. Southwest had entered Saturday's play undefeated in the tournament.

Southwest Lubbock now travels to DeSoto to compete in the sectional Pony League tournament. Its first game will be at 8:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Pirates Shanghai Expos 5-3, Take Over First

By the Associated Press

Dave Parker homered and Bill Madlock's fifth-inning sacrifice fly drove in the winning run as the Pittsburgh Pirates took over first place in the National League's East Division with a 5-3 victory over the Montreal Expos.

Jim Bibby held Montreal to five hits over 6 1-3 innings as Pittsburgh took over the top spot for the first time all season. The Expos, who lost for the fourth time in five games, had held first place since June 13.

Parker's 17th homer of the season, against Dan Schatzeder, 5-4, came after Omar Moreno had led off the game with a single. It was the 500th RBI of Parker's seven-year career.

The Pirates added single runs in the second, fifth and sixth innings before Montreal nicked Jim Bibby, 7-2, for a sixth-inning run on Andre Dawson's run-scoring single.

Bibby was replaced by reliever Grant Jackson after Larry Parrish cracked his 13th homer of the year, a two-run shot.

Tim Foli singled to deliver the Pirates' third run in the second inning while Madlock's sacrifice fly made it 4-0.

A run-scoring single by Moreno produced another Pittsburgh run in the sixth.

REDS 8-5, BRAVES 6-5

Bob Horner drove in three runs with a single and his 19th homer of the season, helping the Atlanta Braves to an 8-5 victory over the Cincinnati Reds and a split of their doubleheader.

Johnny Bench drove in three runs with a pair of singles as Cincinnati won the opener 8-6 for its fifth straight victory.

Bruce Benedict lashed a two-run double off Reds starter Frank Pastore, 1-5, in the second inning of the nightcap and the Braves went on to build an 8-0 lead. Horner singled in one run and Darrell Chaney singled in two as the Braves stretched their lead to 5-0 in the third inning.

Cincinnati scored in the sixth on a single by Dave Concepcion and a double by Dan Driessen off starter Mickey Mahler, 3-8, who fanned seven batters in the first three innings.

The Reds added two runs in the eighth, one when Vic Correll was hit by a pitch with the bases loaded and the other scoring while Dave Collins grounded out. They got two more in the ninth, with a double by Ken Griffey and a sacrifice fly by Ray Knight producing the runs.

Cincinnati scored a ninth-inning run on Ken Griffey's double.

Two-run singles by Collins and Bench keyed Cincinnati's four-run second inning in the opener.

Bill Bonham, 5-4, yielded a pair of solo homers to Gary Matthews, his 21st and 22nd of the season, and was chased in the sixth after Jerry Royster smashed a three-run homer.

Bench also had an RBI single in the first inning and Bonham drove in Driessen following a triple in the third.

The Reds got their deciding run in the sixth on a run-scoring double by Griffey, who had four hits, and an RBI single by Concepcion.

CARDINALS 5, PHILLIES 4

Lou Brock collected a single, double and triple, and drove in the winning run in the ninth inning as the St. Louis Cardinals defeated the Philadelphia Phillies 5-4.

Mike Phillips opened the ninth with a triple and, one out later, Brock singled on the first pitch from Ron Reed, 6-6.

The Phillies tied the score 4-4 in the eighth. Larry Bowa singled and went to third on Pete Rose's single to right. Mark Littell, 7-3, relieved Will McEnaney and got Mike Schmidt on a popup. But Greg Luzinski walked, loading the bases, and Maddox hit a sacrifice fly.

The Cardinals scored twice in the first as Garry Templeton doubled and scored as Brock tripled to right-center. Brock scored when Tony Scott's fly ball dropped for a single.

St. Louis added an unearned run in the second. Ken Oberkfell singled, was sacrificed to second by Cards starter John Fulgham, took third on a passed ball and scored as Templeton grounded out.

Philadelphia scored once in the first when Bake McBride walked and scored on a double by Rose. The Phillies cut the lead to 3-2 in the sixth on doubles by McBride and Rose.

St. Louis knocked out Philadelphia starter Dickie Noles with a run in the seventh. Templeton singled off Noles' pitching hand and Brock greeted reliever Tug McGraw with a double, sending Templeton to third. Templeton scored as Keith Hernandez grounded out.

Luzinski opened the seventh with his 11th home run of the year to make it 4-3. Singles by Manny Trillo and pinch-hitter Greg Gross knocked out Fulgham, but McEnaney came in to get McBride to bounce into a fielder's choice.

A's 6, MARINERS 5

Larry Murphy's one-out double in the fifth inning scored Mitchell Page from first base, cracking a 4-4 tie and triggering the Oakland A's to a 6-5 victory over the Seattle Mariners.

Oakland's victory enabled starter Matt Keough to avert a 17th consecutive loss over two seasons, but the victory went to reliever Dave Hamilton, 3-2.

The A's took a 1-0 lead in the first on Murphy's sacrifice fly. But Seattle took a 4-1 lead with a pair of runs in both the second and third innings.

Bob Stinson's RBI single and a double steal with Tom Paciorek making a theft of home accounted for two Seattle runs in the second. The Mariners scored in the third on a bases-loaded wild pitch by Keough and Paciorek's sacrifice fly.

Oakland tied the game and chased Glenn Abbott with three runs in the bottom of the third. Dave Revering delivered a two-run double and loser Odell Jones, 3-10, took over and yielded a run-scoring single to Wayne Gross to make the score 4-4.

They scored their eventual winning run on Dave Chalk's RBI single in the eighth, giving the A's a 6-4 advantage before Bruce Bochte's sacrifice fly in the ninth accounted for Seattle's last run.

BLUE JAYS 3, TIGERS 0

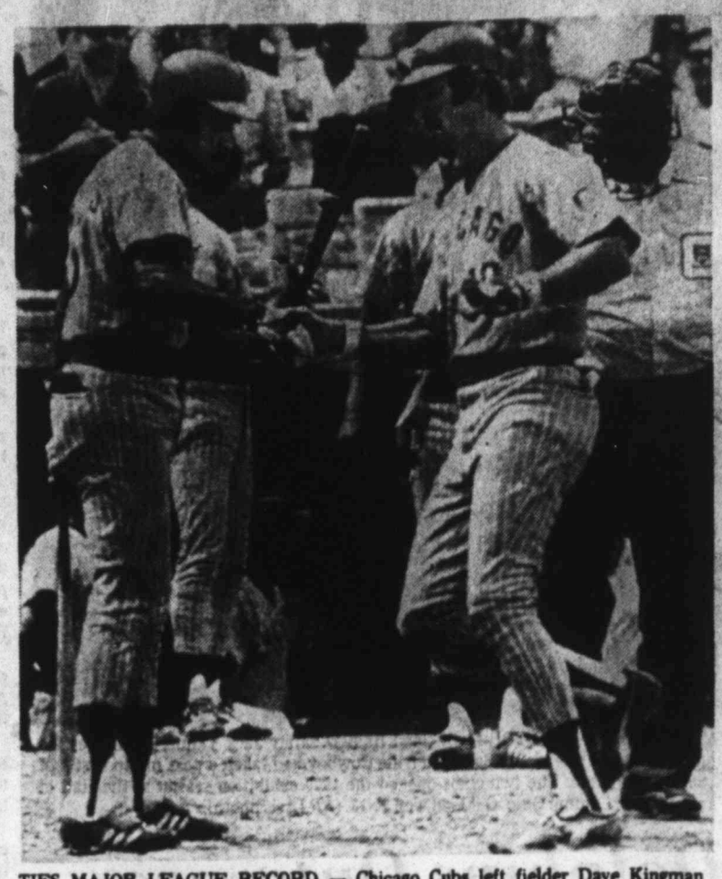

Dave Lemanczyk flirted with a no-hitter for six innings before finishing with a three-hitter in pitching the Toronto Blue Jays to a 3-0 victory over the Detroit Tigers.

Lemanczyk, 8-8, retired the first 16 batters he faced until Tom Brookens drew a one-out walk in the sixth.

The big right-hander retired the side but Lou Whitaker slapped Lemanczyk's first pitch in the seventh by a diving Roy Howell at third base for a single. Whitaker was erased on a double play before Jason Thompson doubled to center field.

Lemanczyk, who struck out three and walked two, also gave up a two-out single to Steve Kemp in the ninth.

Detroit rookie Bruce Robbins, 0-1, making his first major league start, had allowed just one hit over the first five innings until Toronto got to him for two runs in the sixth on a run-scoring grounder by Danny Ainge and an RBI single by Roy Howell.

Mini Racers' Classic Set Here Today

Mini-stock race cars from at least a five-state area were converging on Lubbock Saturday night for a nationally sanctioned race at Lubbock Speedway today.

Track owner Jack Halpain said that the event, sanctioned and conducted by Mini-Stock World Magazine, would bring in 50 or more cars and that many already were on hand from Washington, Missouri, Oklahoma, Colorado and elsewhere in Texas.

The number of entries, he said, would make it necessary to hold time trials and qualifying heats this morning; the regular racing program will start at 8 p.m. Halpain said that spectators to the early portion of the activities would be admitted for $2, with the track's regular $3.50 admission tab prevailing for the night show.

The main program will consist of a trophy dash for the heat race winners, a 20-lap consolation race for cars failing to qualify for the main event, and a 70-lap main split into twin 35-lap segments.

Halpain said a number of Lubbock mini-stock regulars planned to compete against the invading cars.

Prairie Chicks On Increase

WHEELER (Special) — The census of lesser prairie chicken breeding populations on their natural habitat in the Panhandle and Permain Basin regions indicates a slight increase of only one percent, according to a Parks & Wildlife Department spokesman.

"The Permian Basin (South Plains) chicken population shows the greatest gain of 26 percent over 1978," David Sierra, wildlife technician said. "The Panhandle populations of birds, however, show a downward trend of 4.4 percent for the same period."

The severe winter conditions and less than ideal nesting conditions in 1978 appear to be responsible for the decline.

Good nesting conditions are being reported this year and a rise in the chicken populations is predicted.

The annual Texas lesser prairie chicken season has been set for Oct. 20-21.

No Surgery Needed On Fidrych's Arm

DETROIT (AP) — The orthopedic specialist who is going to treat Mark "The Bird" Fidrych for his ailing pitching arm said Saturday Fidrych won't have to undergo any surgery.

Fidrych went to San Diego on Friday for treatment by Dr. Paul Bauer, who is team physician for the San Diego Padres. In San Diego, Bauer said he is confident Fidrych can get his full strength back and be able to pitch again.

Fidrych's right back muscles are 50 percent weaker than the left side from overexertion and from using improper exercise equipment, the doctor said.

The physician said the weakened muscles cannot support his pitching motion and must be restrengthened and Bauer emphasized Fidrych has not suffered muscular damage.

Fidrych has been on the disabled list since May 23 after losing three of four starts and racking up a 10.43 earned run average.

In his rookie season, 1977, the Bird won 19 games and was named American League Rookie of the Year.

Reggie Not Sorry For Bat Throwi

MILWAUKEE (AP) — Reggie Jackson, cheerful and relaxed, said Saturday he holds no grudges against Mike Caldwell, but doesn't regret that he threw his bat at the Milwaukee Brewers' pitcher and then wrestled with him the night before.

"I thought it was a knockdown, and I felt I had to do what I did to preserve some respect," Jackson said.

"But I had no idea of trying to hurt anyone," he said. "Thank God no one got hurt. If someone gets hurt, whoever it is, I'm going to be the loser publicly, because I'm Reggie Jackson."

Jackson, the New York Yankees' slugging right fielder, took exception to what he considered to be two brushback pitches thrown at him by Caldwell in the fourth inning of the teams' game Friday night. The Brewers won 6-5 behind three home runs by Cecil Cooper.

Jackson fouled off one pitch after what he considered to have been the second brushback attempt. As he left the batter's box for first base, Jackson threw his bat toward Caldwell's feet near the pitching mound.

When an angry Caldwell picked up the bat and broke it, Jackson abruptly rounded first base and charged the mound. H grabbed Caldwell near the throat with both hands and the two wrestled each other to the ground, precipitating a bench-clearing melee.

Yankee manager Billy Martin played the game under protest after Jackson was ejected but Caldwell was allowed to remain in the game.

"I stayed as long as I could, but when the press was about to come in I left because anything I say gets blown out of proportion," Jackson said. "It was better to take a little time to think about it. Last night would have been a big story if I had said anything, and I didn't want that. I think I made my point."

Jackson said he had expected to be brushed back once because Yankee pitcher Ed Figueroa had thrown inside to Cooper on Cooper's next time at bat after his first homer.

"The first brushback was something I could deal with because we brush backed their guy," Jackson said. "That's okay. That's part of the game. But there never should have been a second brushback because we had been even."

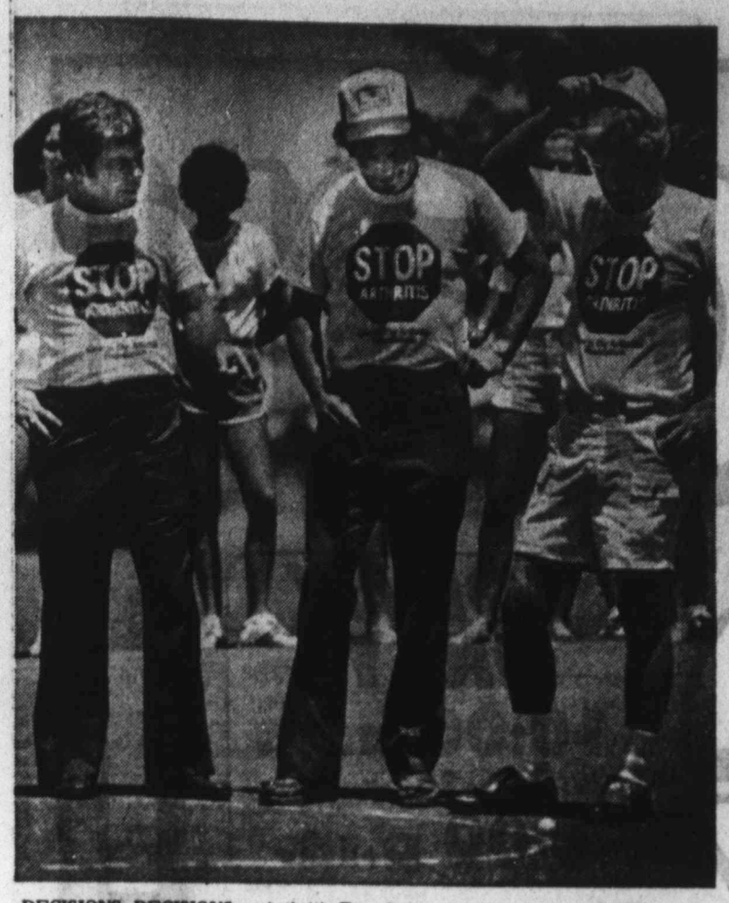

Jackson, echoing Martin's statements of the night before, said rookie umpire John Shulock had let the game get out of hand.

"Any veteran umpire knows I'm not a provocateur," Jackson said. "His (Shulock's) statements were that I had acted hot-doggishly and irrationally. That was one thing that disappointed me.

"After the first brushback, he (Shulock) should have stopped play and said, 'Okay, fellas, everybody's even. No more, Mike. No more, Billy. No more, George (Bamberger).' But he lost control. That second pitch never should have happened.

"But I have no hard feelings," he said. "I don't think Mike Caldwell is a malicious person. If you want to pitch me inside, fine, just be a little careful. I felt Mike was right about breaking my bat, and I felt I was right for going after him."

For $5, a golfer received 12 balls. He'd take 12 putts and attempt to sink as many as possible from about 20 feet away. Then, the golfer took as many balls as he sank and went to the putting green and tried to sink as many as possible before running out of balls.

Each shot that a golfer sank on the green was good for a new golf ball and the golfer that went the furthest won a $360 set of irons.

Tech basketball star David Little dominated the putting world. He got as far as the fifth hole before bowing out; no one else could get past the second.

Still, Little spent most of the day watching his putting competition (and there were plenty of golfers willing to contribute $5 for a chance at a set of irons) to see if anyone could better his effort.

If anyone did, Little would simply try it again. But there was no reason to resume, while he enjoyed a Jack Nicklaus type lead over the rest of the field.

"I've already got a good set of irons," said Little. "But I can probably sell these new ones and make some money."

Thus, the Arthritis Foundation wasn't the only group that was going to profit from the Rainbow Classic.

In fact, there was some kind of prize being offered on every other hole on the course. But the golfers weren't the only ones pleased with the tournament.

"The tournament turned out just super," said Arthritis Foundation president Evans. "People have been coming out all day.

Burnett Duo Cops Title

Tim Allen and John Burnett fired a final round 52 to post a winning score of 101 in the Treasure Island Midnight Partnership Tournament Friday night.

Allen and Burnett were tied for the first-round lead at 49, but Gene Adams and Tony Snook posted a 54 Friday to finish second 2 strokes back.

The tournament had been postponed one week due to rain.

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT

101 (49-52) — Tim Allen-John Burnett. 103 (49-54) — Gene Adams-Tony Snook.104 (52-52) — Steve Mark Hargrove; (53-51) — Mark Jarrett-David Jennings.

FIRST FLIGHT

SECOND FLIGHT

THIRD FLIGHT

Dixie Team Wins Tourney

FORT WORTH (Special) — The Lubbock Dixie 13-year-old Senior Little League All-Stars defeated Fort Worth 7-6 in eight innings Friday night to advance to the state tournament beginning Monday in Austin.

It was a come-from-behind effort, as Dixie tied the score with 3 runs in the seventh inning.

Dixie scored the winning run in the bottom of the eighth inning without the benefit of a hit. Brent Rieger, who walked to get on base, stole second and moved to third on a wild pitch.

Fort Worth tried to pick Rieger off third, and the catcher and third baseman got him in a rundown. But, the third baseman overthrew the catcher in the scramble, and Rieger came home with the decisive run.

Kevin Short went the distance for Lubbock in recording the win. He allowed four hits and struck out 13.

Lubbock will begin play Monday at 9 a.m. in Austin.

Wayland Signs Net, Track Standouts

PLAINVIEW (Special) — Wayland Baptist College head tennis coach Rocky Clindaniel has announced the signing of four players to scholarship agreements.

The recruits are Jerry Low of Plainview, Gregg Newton of Abernathy, Valerie Little of Arlington and Amie Schaefer of Albuquerque, N.M.

Low joins his brother, David, on the WBC squad. The younger Low teamed with high school teammate Bill Harris to place fourth in the District 4-AAAA doubles competition last spring.

Newton placed second in doubles during district competiton as a senior, and placed fourth in District 4-AA singles play as a sophomore.

Miss Schaefer was a four-year letter winner, earning the team's Most Valuable Player and Most Outstanding Player honors the past two years.

Miss Little is a graduate of Bethel Baptist School, which did not have a tennis program, but she is a pupil of TCU coach Tut Bartzen and 1978 Texas Open Champion Betsy Blaney.

In track, WBC signed two Iowa Park athletes.

Crittenden finished fifth in the state Class AAA mile run last spring, posting a personal best of 4:33.3.

Fuller was fifth in the Class AAA state meet in the discus. His best effort is 172-1 in the discus and 55-8 in the shot.

RELATED TENNIS TOURNEY

MONTICELLO, N.Y. (AP) — A tennis tournament featuring National Basketball Association players will be held in conjunction with the 21st Maurice Stokes Benefit Basketball Game next month. The tournament, which Golden State Warriors guard John Lucas, a former professional tennis player, is favored to win, begins Aug. 14 and ends the next day. The basketball game will be held the evening of Aug. 14.

Yankee Relay Triumphs

MOSCOW (AP) — Stan Vinson anchored the United States men's 1,600-meter relay team to an easy semifinal win at the Spartacade track and field competition Saturday.

Vinson, a 27-year-old quarter-miler who won the gold medal in the men's 400 meters, held a comfortable lead over Nikolai Chernecky of the Soviet Union as he came down the homestretch, then clearly slowed near the finish.

The U.S. relay team was timed in 3:07.6.

Miler Craig Masbach of White Plains, N.Y., also took it easy in the semifinals of the men's 1,500 meters, qualifying for today's final by placing third in his heat.

Andreas Busse of East Germany won the heat in 3:41.70, but Masbach appeared to have things under control and did not push hard near the finish, turning to make sure he could not be overtaken by others and eliminated.

Masbach, who was third at Oslo two weeks ago when Sebastian Coe set the world record of 3:49, stayed with the pack throughout the heat and then emerged on the homestretch to secure qualification.

Benn Fields of the United States cleared 7-1¾ on his first try and easily qualified for the final of the men's high jump.

The two gold medals of the day went to Soviet competitors. Sergey Litvinov won the hammer throw at 252 feet 11 inches on his very first throw and Anita Stukane won the women's long jump at 21-10¼, beating world record holder Vilma Bardauskiene, who was only fifth at 20-7¾.

AAU and Pan American champion Kathy McMillan of Raeford, N.C., won a consolation round at 21-6, which would have given her second place behind Stukane. She had failed on Friday to get through the qualifications.

McMillan had slumped to a poor 19-10½ in Friday's qualifications, but she jumped consistently in the consolation round, scoring a personal best for this year.

The track and field competition ends today with 10 finals in which the Americans were expected to collect more gold. They have won four events so far.

In diving, Carrie Irish Finneran of Columbus, Ohio, won the silver medal in the three-meter springboard event, finishing behind Irina Kalinina of the Soviet Union.

Miss Kalinina collected 654.495 points on her 10 dives at the new Soviet Navy swimming arena, while Mrs. Finneran finished with 634.26 points. Tatyana Podmareva of the Soviet Union took the bronze medal with 633.99 points.

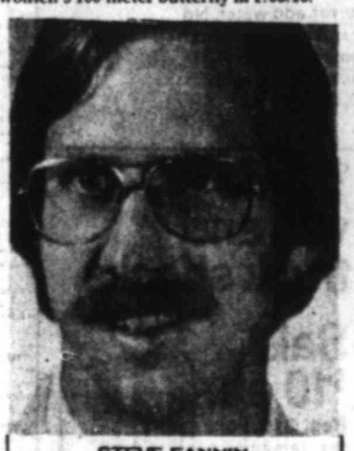

Mrs. Finneran was one of only three foreigners in the competition.

Both the U.S. men's and women's basketball teams, playing in Vilnius, Lithuanina, scored victories after opening losses in the round-robin tournament. The men downed Yugoslavia 87-75 while the women topped Leningrad 93-90.

In boxing, light middleweight Victor Lisicyn of the Soviet Union outpointed Alfred Mayes of St. Louis in a preliminary bout.

In swimming, Alexander Sidorenko of the Soviet Union set a European record of 2:03.46 for the men's 200 meters.

Ballesteros Forced To Skip PGA

BIRMINGHAM, Mich. (AP) — Sam Snead, that marvelous 67-year-old relic of another era, will be in the field. But 22-year-old Severiano Ballesteros, golf's brightest young star, will be among the missing for this the 61st PGA national championship.

The 72-hole event, the last of the year's four major tests of golfing greatness, will begin a four-day run Thursday on the historic, 7,014-yard, par-70 Oakland Hills Country Club Course in suburban Detroit.

Snead, who has been subject to all the ailments and illnesses, all the aches and pains of almost a half century of world class competition, will try again for his fourth PGA national title.

But he won't be competing against Ballesteros, the dynamic young Spaniard who won the British Open two weeks ago.

Ballesteros issued a statement in which an unnamed orthopedic surgeon suggested air travel to the United States would be detrimental to Seve's ailing back. He thus declined a special invitation to compete in the PGA, just as he previously passed up a free pass to play on the American tour on a full-time basis.

"I don't agree with his decision, but it's his life to live, his schedule to make," Jack Nicklaus said with a shrug. "We all have our aches and pains, our physical problems that we have to learn to live with."

Although he has an unpublicized history of back trouble himself, Nicklaus hasn't missed one of the Big Four events since turning pro in 1962. He has won a record 15 of them, has been golf's dominant force for almost two decades and again is expected to play a major role.

While this had been the most unproductive and frustrating season of his spectacular career, Nicklaus' best performances have been in the big ones. He missed the title playoff by a shot in the Masters, had a very good last round in the U.S. Open, and for the seventh time finished second in the British Open.

"I really didn't play all that well in the British, but I managed to get a little more out of my game than I have been," Jack said.

This could be his last appearance of the season. If he wins, however, he'll play again in the Ryder Cup matches. His record this season did not entitle him to a spot on the 12-man team. But one slot is being reserved for the PGA champ.

"Sure, I'd like to make the Ryder Cup team. I'd like it very much," Nicklaus said. "But that's not the only reason I want to win the PGA."

The PGA title alone is more than enough incentive. He needs one more to tie the record five held by Walter Hagen. Perhaps more importantly, a victory in one of the Big Four events could turn around his season.

A broken hand early this season sidelined him for two months.

"It's not yet normal," Mahaffey said. "I won't use it as an excuse, but I don't yet have normal strength in it."

"I'm 30, 40 yards shorter than I used to be," he said. But then, he's now two years past time for collecing social security.

Snead, who owns a record 84 official titles, startled the world of golf a couple of weeks back when he shot 68 in the Quad Cities Open, becoming the first man in the tour's history to post a score lower than his age.

He's certain to draw enormous attention in the 150-man chase for a $60,000 first prize on a course Snead first played in the 1937 U.S. Open.

While he will be a sentimental choice, a clear-cut favorite is difficult to determine.

Tom Watson could hold the role. He's a four-time winner this year, the outstanding player in the game, winner of almost $400,000 this season. But he's played poorly in his last four starts and the current state of his game is suspect.

Larry Nelson has held the hottest hand in recent weeks on the American tour. U.S. Open champion Hale Irwin, Jerry Pate and Ben Crenshaw, who tied for second with Nicklaus in the British Open, are other possibilities.

Other standouts include South African Gary Player, who won the PGA the last time it was played here, Hubert Green, Masters champ Fuzzy Zoeller, Ray Floyd, Andy Bean, Bruce Lietzke, Tom Weiskopf, Lee Trevino and Lanny Wadkins.

ABC will provide national television coverage of portions of the last two rounds Saturday and Sunday.

Rookie Tops Qualifiers In Grand National 500

LONG POND, Pa. (AP) — Rookie driver Harry Gant, who did not finish in the top five in any of his 12 previous starts, took the pole position Saturday at a speed of 148.712 mph for today's NASCAR Grand National 500 race at Pocono Raceway.

It was the first pole position ever for Gant, of Taylorsville, N.C., driving a 1979 Chevrolet Impala.

But during a late afternoon practice session, Waltrip's 1978 Monte Carlo spun and struck the first turn wall at the track. There was extensive front end damage to the car, forcing it out of the race, but Waltrip was not injured.

Waltrip, who was last year's winner here and was the polesitter in 1977, will drive Al Rudd's 1977 Monte Carlo today. Rudd, who qualified for the 20th place, will not drive in the race.

The switch means Waltrip drops from third place and takes over Rudd's qualifying spot. It also cuts the field of qualifiers to 39 from 40.

Gant, who has won $19,960 this year, said he had handling problems early in the morning, then had to solve an ignition problem before time trials.

Gant said he followed Cale Yarborough during warmups to "learn how to drive the track" and then huddled with another rookie driver, Dale Earnhardt, who suggested taking a low route through each of the turns.

"So I went down low, nearly getting into the dirt on the apron of the track on the turns," said Gant.

Sportsmen Honor Owners' Rights

A WELCOME HUNTER — This sportsman will be welcomed this fall because he has obtained permission to hunt on the private property he's inspecting. Plain and simple courtesy pays off for the hunter that avoids shooting near the farmer's residence, barn and livestock. Some sportsmen improve hunter-farmer relations by sharing their bag with the landowner. (Staff Photo by Ted J. Simon)

By J.D. PEER
Parks & Wildlife Department

The Texas sportsman that finds good places to hunt each year starts the search in the summer as nearly all of the private hunting areas are spoken for on the opening day of season.

Hunters know it is impossible to pull off the road and hunt without first getting permission from the owner. Nearly all of Texas is owned and operated by private enterprise with the exception of some federal and state lands scattered across the state.

If the hunter fails to get permission to hunt and goes onto private property to pursue game, chances are excellent that the irate landowner will call the local game warden or county sheriff to file trespass charges against the hunter.

Finding a new place to hunt takes both time and luck. Many sportsmen spend as much time locating the landowner and getting permission to hunt as they spend in the field enjoying the hunt.

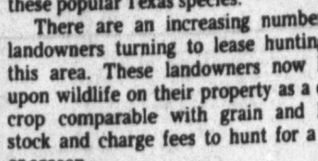

Many areas of Northwest Texas are uninhabited and a sportsman can drive for hours through good hunting country without seeing anyone to ask for permission or to find whos own the land.

Summertime will find most landowners cultivating crops or working livestock on their property making it more convenient for the hunter to talk about hunting opportunities on their land.

Many landowners do not allow any type of hunting on their property due to bad experience from past hunters. A few landowners will allow hunting for certain species such as ducks, geese, cranes, doves, and pheasants. However, most property owners are protective of their quail, turkeys and deer with family members or friends only allowed to hunt these popular Texas species.

There are an increasing number of landowners turning to lease hunting in this area. These landowners now look upon wildlife on their property as a cash crop comparable with grain and livestock and charge fees to hunt for a day or season.

Guadalupe Home To Variety Of Fish

OUTDOORS

AUSTIN (Special) — Where in the world could a fisherman reasonably expect to catch rainbow trout, striped bass, walleye, largemouth bass, spotted bass, smallmouth bass and a variety of sunfish all in the same stream?

This potential mixed bag is a possibility in the Guadalupe River below Canyon Dam, a stretch of water already familiar to a small navy of canoeists and innertube floaters.

"There may be another river in the United States where you can catch such a variety of fish, but I certainly haven't about it," said Bob Bounds, inland fisheries management coordinator for the Parks & Wildlife Department.

The picturesque Guadalupe has earned some acclaim as the state's best put-and-take rainbow trout fishery, but its sometimes swift currents and limited access keep anglers from putting much of a dent in the population of the other sport fishes in the river, according to Bounds.

Before Canyon Lake Dam was constructed, the Guadalupe had populations of sunfish, catfish, largemouth black bass and the Guadalupe spotted bass (a subspecies found only in Central Texas river systems). Shortly after impoundment of the lake in the mid-1960s, the department began stocking rainbows in the swift, cold tailrace waters below the dam.

At the same time, Canyon Lake became the recipient of generous stockings of smallmouth bass, walleyes and striped bass. These fish have exceeded expectations by growing and — in the case of smallmouths and walleyes — have reproduced. Natural reproduction of stripers in Canyon is suspected but not yet confirmed by department biologists.

These imported fish have expanded Canyon Lake's fishing scene, and a sizable number of them have tumbled through the dam into the river below, Bounds said.

It might seem that this mix of species would cause problems within the narrow confines of the Guadalupe, but Bounds points out that each species has gravitated to a particular habitat type.

"You can fish for each individual species by working the different areas," Bounds explained. "The trout stick to the riffles and swift areas, stripers and walleyes like the deep pools, and the bass tend to find the eddy areas where overhanging trees provide shade."

There even are differences in the habitat preferences of the three bass species, Bounds said. The largemouths like shallow, shaded areas close to the bank, while spotted bass venture into swifter water toward mid-stream. Smallmouths like to hug the bottom in pools and eddies where there is plenty of rock and rubble.

A canoe or flatbottom boat is almost a necessity to fish long stretches of the Guadalupe, although there are fairly extensive areas which can be wade-fished. Bounds cautions anglers that while the riverbed is public property, most of the shoreline is private and subject to trespass laws.

"So unless you have permission to trespass or are fishing legally at one of the campgrounds or road crossing areas, it's a good idea to stay within the river's banks to fish," Bounds said.

Northern Next Areas Indicate More Ducks

WASHINGTON, D.C. (Special) — A recent aerial count of waterfowl breeding populations of ducks in the prairie "Pothole" country in the Dakotas, Montana and Canada by personnel of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service indicated an overall increase this summer.

A 10-15 percent increase over last year has been observed with much improved habitat conditions. Many of the ducks are finding ponds with good food supplies and residual nesting cover.

Breeding populations of mallards and pintals are up about 10 percent over last year, and blue-winge teal are up 20 percent according to the report.

This region of central North America furnishes most of the ducks that migrate through Texas each fall.

The U.S. post offices in Texas now have the federal Migratory Bird Hunting and Conservation stamp required of all persons 16 years of age and older who participate in a duck or goose hunt.

The $7.50 stamp helps create funds for waterfowl habitat acquistition and restoration in the U.S. The stamp became a requirement in 1934 and is also purchased by non-hunters as well as stamp collectors each year to aid in conservation work.

Where They're Biting

Buffalo Springs Lake — Ken Nails of Lubbock knows where the big channel catfish can be found. Nails used a live frog for bait at the lower end of the lake in three feet of water to hook a 16¼-pound channel. The angler found the fishing excellent in the early morning hours. J.A. Peterson landed an 8¾-pound channel, and Willie Brown hauled in a 9¼-pound yellow catfish. Rubin Lara caught a 3¼-pound bass, and Keith Morgan landed a bass of the same weight. Crappie are plentiful and hungry at the dam in deep water. Some of the crappie are going at 1¼ pounds. Perch and carp are providing constant action in all areas of the lake.

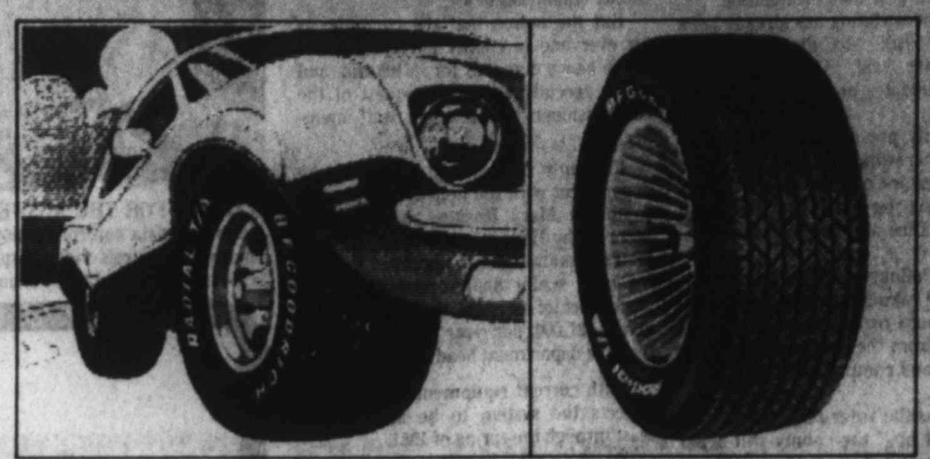

Oak Creek Lake — Rains have provided 14 inches of fresh water to boost the fishing for all species. Catfish, carp and bream fishing is excellent as the lake has settled. Ronnie Parsons of Sweetwater landed a string of bass weighing from 2 pounds 5 ounces to 3 pounds 7 ounces.

White River Lake — Drop-line fishing continues to be excellent for channel catfish. Most species are biting, although crappie action remains sporadic. Richard Johnson of Lubbock used a live minnow to land a 5½-pound bass. The water temperature is 80 degrees, and the lake is in good condition.

Lake Whitney — Tommy Pate of Lubbock used a Hellbender and jig to haul in a 13-pound 9-ounce striper. Active striper fishing was reported in most areas of the lake this past week. Catfish results improved in many areas. Water temperature is now 74 degrees.

County Computers Processing Tax Rolls

By BOB CAMPBELL
Avalanche-Journal Staff

Lubbock County's new computer system is running at a high-pitched whine as tax rolls are chattered out for the first time on a county-owned system.

County commissioners last year spent $100,000 building a data processing center on the courthouse fourth floor, and the $350,000 IBM computer they bought for it is turning out its first major project in the fall tax notices.

Video display terminals — which are sort like TV sets and typewriters combined and hooked up to a computer — have been scattered around the courthouse to help in the tax rolls being readied earlier this year than ever before.

"All of the updating has already been completed," Bill McCullough, county "DP" director, said. "Our own personnel can do updates now from their own terminals."

The county previously contracted all of its computer work.

Tax Assessor-Collector Frank Stuart was given six terminals for the main part of his office and two for auto registration.

Now McCullough and his three-member staff are taking on more than property taxes, auto registration and property indexing from the county clerk. Voter registration and computerized jury selection are next.

As soon as the voter registration rolls are "brought up," the county will begin choosing veniremen at random through the system, and reluctant jurors will have only a humming computer on which to focus their chagrin.

In the past, they have been chosen by a random drawing of voters' names from a spinning wire barrel. Now the computer will choose however many are needed from anywhere among the expected 78,000 names of registered Lubbock County voters.

"The odds against being chosen at any one time will be 78,000 to 1," McCullough said.

Instead of getting their checks from the bailiff after a trial, jurors will get them in the mail the next week after the checks are processed by the computer.

The new system of jury selection will be inaugurated by September, McCullough said.

Also in the works are plans to computerize child support payment records from the district clerk's office and the county payroll.

Next year, McCullough said, the No. 1 priority will be to get the accounting system from the auditor's office onto the computer.

Then, for some time in the future, he expects to have charge of city and county law enforcement records.

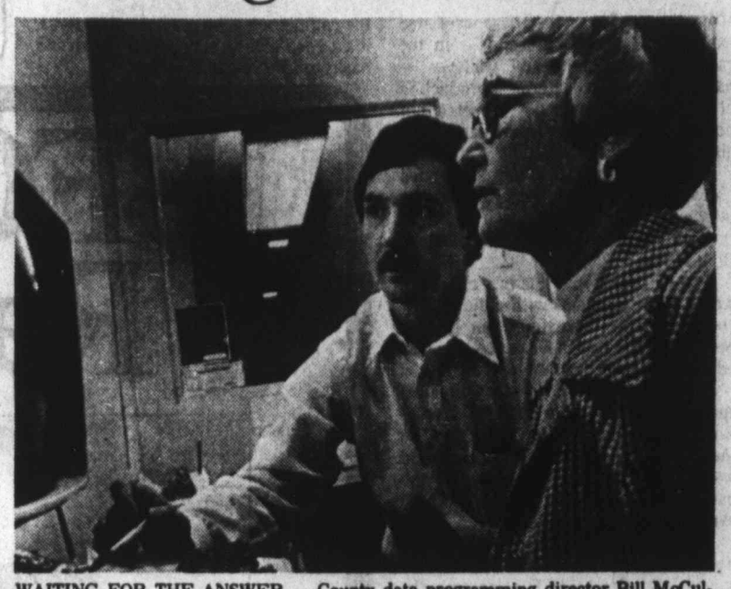

"I don't know if we'll ever run out of projects," he said. "It's a tool for all county employees to use."

But the notion that the computer is for everyone in county government has led to heavy demands for it, he said, and to his recently approved request of the commissioners for another staff member.

Currently, McCullough is running the department with the help of operator-receptionist Mary Rositas and programmers Kathy Henson and Wayne Hoelscher. The commissioners approved the hiring of a senior analyst-programmer to work as chief assistant to McCullough at about $21,000 per year or slightly less than the department head is getting.

With current equipment, McCullough expects the system to be adequate at least through the spring of 1981.

The equipment situation was greatly improved when Itel Corp., which handled the sale of the IBM 370-125 to the county, inadvertently sent along an extra memory unit worth about $15,000. McCullough tried the unit for two months, telling the company the county might make an offer for it if it proved to be necessary, and Itel recently offered to give the county the unit rather than bother with taking it off the computer and reclaiming it. All the county has to do is provide maintenance for it while the company does maintenance on the rest of the system until the whole thing is paid for under a multi-year lease-purchase agreement.

WAITING FOR THE ANSWER — County data programming director Bill McCullough and data control employee Irene Jernigan look at information on one of the county computer's video display terminals. The computer is doing its first large-scale work, processing the county's fall tax notices.

A MACHINE FOR ALL SEASONS — County computer operator Mary Rositas sits amid the many components of the county's data processing center. Data programming director Bill McCullough, right, says the computer now is used to speed processing of automobile registration, property taxes and property indexing. The computer soon will take on voter registration and random selection of voters for jury duty.

Carter's Popularity Off In West Germany

TUEBINGEN, West Germany (AP) — President Carter's popularity in West Germany decreased significantly this month, according to a national public opinion poll published Saturday.

The poll by the Wickert Institute said only 25 percent of 1,922 persons interviewed throughout the country said they approved of Carter. Sixty-five percent had a negative opinion of Carter and 10 percent were undecided.

In a poll published one month earlier, the institute said 40 percent of those questioned approved of the American president. Carter had a 78 percent approval rating in West Germany eight weeks after his inauguration, the institute said.

JENNIFER GREER (Color)

Snapshot Winners

GLENDA KNIPHFER (Color)

LARRY LITTLE (Black and white)

JOANN ROSS (Black and white)

Six Finalist Chosen In Snapshot Contest

Six finalists in The Avalanche-Journal's summer snapshot contest have been named by the newspaper's board of judges.

Color category — Glenda Kniphfer of 4907 41st St.; Joan M. Wilson, 4933 17th Place; H. Jennings, 2015 70th St.; and Jennifer Greer, 1514 24th St.

Each winner will receive $50 from The A-J, and their entries will be forwarded to the Kodak International Newspaper Snapshot Awards program, where they will compete for $55,000 in cash and travel prizes being offered by KINSA this year.

The A-J received a total of 2,607 entries, well ahead of last year's 2,261 total.

Kodak's grand award — for either category — is a 30-day, around-the-world tour for two plus $1,000, or $10,000 in cash. KINSA winners will be announced this fall.

Non-winning entries may be claimed in the lobby of The A-J between the hours of 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. Aug. 1-10. They will be grouped according to the week entered.

The competition was conducted June 3 through July 14.

Gas-Saving Car Getting Less Miles, Test Shows

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — A car touted as getting 84 miles per gallon actually gets only 52 miles — 34 in the city — and is an a unacceptable polluter in the bargain, according to federal test results released last week.

The car was the "Shetleymobile," named after Mike Shetley, who helped Ralph Moody in the earlier "Moodymobile" that attracted congressional attention when gasoline lines started forming in California.

Shetley's Mercury Capri, fitted with a small turbocharged diesel engine, exceeded the 1980 permissible limit for hydrocarbons — unburned fuel — by 68 percent and the nitrogen oxide standard by 15 percent, the Environmental Protection Agency said Friday.

It would be in a three-way tie for fifth, sixth and seventh places on the EPA's list of high-mileage cars based on its city rating; the Plymouth Champ and Dodge Colt Hatchback both came up with the same performance figure. The Datsun 210 gets 35 mpg, and three diesel-powered Volkswagens do better — 36 mpg for the Dasher, 40 mpg for the four-speed Rabbit and 41 mpg for the five-speed Rabbit.

Shetley said "everyone at the Environmental Protection Agency was hostile. A conspiracy was put into motion."

Shetley, an Oak Hill, Fla., automotive engineer, complained at a Daytona Beach energy fair that he was not allowed to be present while the EPA tests were being run, that the rating of the fuel used wasn't as high as he had been told it would be and that his car didn't run well after the tests.

His request that the car be tested at a steady 45 miles per hour was ignored, Shetley said.

"That would prove the car would get 110 miles to the gallon," he said. "To prove that there was a conspiracy on the part of the EPA, we are planning on having that car tested at three schools — Daytona Beach Community College, Brevard Community College in Titusville and at Hartford Community College in Connecticut."

Shetley showed up at the energy fair driving an Alfa Romeo Alfetta, an Italian subcompact, powered by a new turbocharged diesel engine. He described the engine as having 140 cubic inches and 110 horsepower, and claimed to get 97 mpg at a steady 45 miles an hour.

Dick Harrington, director of the EPA's certification division, said, "We are indeed disappointed that the high-mileage claims by the developer were not achieved and that it wasn't better than it was. But the results are quite good.

"This could still be the first American-made vehicle that achieves anything near these high-mileage figures."

Although they carry American nameplates, the Plymouth Champ and Dodge Colt are made in Japan by Mitsubishi Motors Corp., in which Chrysler Corp. has a 15 percent interest. Although VW makes cars in Pennsylvania, all its diesel models so far have been made in Germany. Shetley's engine was made in England by Perkins Engine Co.

Asked if changes could enable the car to pass the emissions tests and win certification for production, Harrington said, "They are relatively close. It isn't unusual to see vehicles pass after recalibration."

YOUR PERSONAL BIORHYTHMS

By Bernard Gittelson, Author of "Biorhythm: A Personal Science"

The personal science of biorhythm can tell you how your day will go. Now you can judge the highs and lows of not only yourself, but loved ones and friends, and celebrities and stars. Biorhythm, our newest scientific discipline, is the study of the built-in natural cycles that powerfully influence our behavior.

BIORHYTHMS FOR JULY 29, 1979

PHYSICAL
Criticals: 5, 17, 28, 40, 51, 63, 74 ... Easy to get hurt
Highs: 1-4, 18-27, 41-50, 64-73 ... Good for tackling chores
Lows: 6-16, 29-39, 52-62, 75 ... Down time physically

EMOTIONAL
Criticals: 1, 15, 29, 43, 57, 71, 85 ... Unstable emotions rule
Highs: 2-14, 30-42, 58-70 ... Can be a friend easily

INTELLECTUAL
Criticals: 4, 21, 37, 54, 70, 87 ... Don't drop your guard
Highs: 1-3, 22-36, 55-69, 88-95 ... Brain is working well
Lows: 5-20, 38-53, 71-86 ... Don't trust your memory

Enter your own permanent numbers in the chart in the bottom right-hand corner. To figure your own permanent numbers, follow these three steps:

Step 1: From the year chart, find the numbers corresponding to your year of birth. For instance, if you were born in 1947, your number for Physical would be 21, Emotional 17, Intellectual 19. Note whether your numbers are preceded by an A or B; this will be used for Step 2.

Step 2: Now find the corresponding number for the month you were born. If your month is February, and your year numbers were preceded by a B, your month numbers would be 8 for Physical, 3 for Emotional and 31 for Intellectual. Enter your own numbers in the figure chart for Step 2.

Step 3: In the figure chart, enter your day of birth three times, one each for Physical (P), Emotional (E) and Intellectual (I). (If you were born on April 3, for instance, place a 3 in each column.)

Add the three columns to derive your permanent biorhythm numbers for your Physical, Emotional and Intellectual cycles. Now you can refer to today's rhythms.

These numbers are yours permanently. Check them each day for your biorhythm reading.

Ranchers Fight Grazing Cutback Plan

By MARILYN HOLMES
A-J Correspondent

Some New Mexico ranchers say they are fighting for survival against a Bureau of Land Management proposal that would reduce by 28 percent average livestock grazing levels on 1.6 million acres of public land in Chaves, Lea and Eddy counties.

The proposed herd reductions, made in a Draft Environmental Impact Statement, vary in effects they will have on area ranchers. While some ranchers will lose most of their allotment, about 30 of more than 150 affected operators will be granted increased grazing rights, according to BLM Roswell district manager Smokey O'Connor.

But the overwhelming majority of lease holders will lose at least some of their grazing rights if the BLM continues its plan to reduce herds over the next three years for range and wildlife improvements.

U.S. senators from New Mexico, Pete Domenici and Harrison "Jack" Schmitt, both Republicans, labeled the BLM proposal a "potential economic disaster" for the area.

Area ranchers, business representatives and government leaders blasted BLM survey methods used in the DEIS at July hearings held at Roswell and Carlsbad.

Bill Dinwiddie, who ranches in Lea County 40 miles southeast of Carlsbad, said BLM spot surveys of rangeland apparently were taken in extreme drought conditions from 1976 to 1978.

"This was a period when we had less than 50 per cent of our average rainfall," Dinwiddie said. "It's unfair that such drastic reductions be made based on a single survey in such a dry period."

"Unfortunately, there are some in public government who do not want public land to be productive," he said. "They are sincere but they are wrong."

•Market values will drop.

•Jobs will be lost.

"This proposal is to reduce stocking to proper levels," O'Connor has said.He did not speak at the meeting. "One of the concerns here is wildlife. And the proposal also calls for range improvements."

He added that some statistics on possible economic impacts have been misinterpreted.

"One of the things being projected is a $1.5 million decline (in livestock sales)," he said. "The maximum decline would happen in 1983 or 1984. It starts back up after that."

"Another thing overlooked is that decreases in ranch income in the 1980's would be less than two-tenths of 1 per cent of total personal income in Chaves, Eddy and Lea counties," he said. "This action would have negligible effects on the economy."

O'Connor explained that the BLM is seeking material that is "factual" and"credible" during public input that ends July 31 for the DEIS. The final environmental impact statement is slated for completion by Oct. 1.

"We are following the policy laid down for us by Congress," O'Connor said. "We are given the authority to control the amount of grazing on public land. We are an executive agency and we cannot shirk our responsibilities.

He said the BLM is charged with weighing all concerns including recreational, wildlife and historical aspects of public land management.

Monsoon Rains Spawn Bangladesh Flooding

DACCA, Bangladesh (AP) — Hundreds of thousands of residents fled their homes in several regions of Bangladesh last week as monsoon rains drove rivers over their banks, devastating rice fields and cutting rail links.

The northern Rangpur district was cut off from the rest of the country when the main railroad line to Dacca was swamped by floodwaters.

EPA Proposing Cotton Oil Permit

LAMESA (Special)—The Environmental Protection Agency says it proposes to issue a Prevention of Significant Deterioration permit to Chickasha Cotton Oil Company for the construction of a cottonseed oilsolvent extraction plant, replacing an existing plant, in Lamesa.

An EPA review of the application shows that Best Available Control Technology is required to control hydrocarbon emissions in the form of hexane.

A copy of all materials submitted by the company is available in the office at City Hall of Ben H. Allen, city secretary, and the Air Compliance Branchof EPA, Region 6, First International Building, Dallas.

Written comments or requests for a public hearing on the proposal may be submitted to LaRee Eschberger, Enforcement Division, Permits and Support Branch, First International Building, Dallas, until Aug. 14.

INTEREST ON LOANS

WASHINGTON (AP) — World Bank loans for the first quarter of fiscal 1980 will carry an interest rate of 17.9 percent per year, the same rate as in the last quarter of fiscal 1979. The bank's lending rate is adjusted every quarter according to the average weighted cost of funds borrowed in the preceding 12 months.

THREE REASONS TO CALL 800-348-2191
and Find Out For Yourself Why You Should Become An Owner/ Operator with northAmerican Van Lines
1. Initial Investment Reduced $1,600
2. Compensation Increases With Rising Fuel Costs
3. Still the Best Way To Go Into Busness For Yourself With a Big Business Behind You.

But, just don't take our word for it, ask a northAmerican Owner/Operator.
He'll tell you that since January he has received compensation increases that average out to approximately 50 cents per gallon of fuel used.
What's more he'll tell you that, as an owner/operator with northAmerican, he has a lot of freedom in running his own business, yet he has a big business behind him when he needs it.
Also, be sure to ask us about the cost of becoming an owner/operator with northAmerican. It used to be the cost was $4,600, now it's $3,000...and that includes the downpayment on a new tractor and interim living expenses during training, if you need it.
If you're 21 or over, and quality, you can take advantage of this special opportunity. Call Toll Free 800-348-2191....

MANY PEOPLE SETTLE FOR LESS IN A BRICK WITHOUT KNOWING IT.

Surprisingly, not all brick are alike. Some cheaply made brick do not have the quality or strength to last the life of your home. Constant weathering (freeze-thaw cycles) can cause cheap brick to crumble, fail or even melt away. Acme Brick, on the other hand, has the quality and strength to last. Why settle for less? Ask for Acme.

Luckily, cheap brick give themselves away to the homebuyer who bothers to look closely. To find out what to look for, send for a free copy of "Brick Facts for the Homebuyer. How To Test Your Brick For Quality." Mail this coupon and a self-addressed stamped envelope to Acme Brick Company, Marketing Services, 2821 W. 7th Street, Fort Worth, Texas 76107.

Staff Photos By Paul Moseley

COOL CLASSIC — Mrs. Steve Hill, Phi Mu, wears an elegantly simple ensemble: slit skirt, so popular this season, in bright colors with a plain blouse and classic jacket. Belt, jewelry, and pumps complete the outfit.

PACE SETTERS — Fall fashions this year are especially wearable, says Margaret's, which is co-sponsoring the scholarship style show Thursday; here Elizabeth Nabors of Alpha Phi, Tech Junior, and Diana Butler of Sigma Kappa, Tech Senior, show two styles which will be seen on campus this winter: a classically simple dress suitable for many occasions and a belted coat with a notched shawl color; gloves, scarf and hat provide warmth and contrast.

Panhellenic Hosts Annual Style Show

Lubbock Alumnae Panhellenic Council will hold its annual Scholarship Style Show Thursday night at the Lubbock Civic Center Theater.

The annual event, which will be hosted by Margaret's, will begin at 7:30, and feature autumn and "back to school" fashions. Tickets are on sale at Margaret's or from any member of Lubbock Alumnae Panhellinic.

The traditional style show enables the local organization to provide scholarships for many students each year, and is a major project of the alumnae group.

Representing the various sororities in the style show will be alumna and present members of local sororities. Modeling will be: Alpha Chi Omega, Lauretta Williamson, Stacy Owens and Karen Garrett; Alpha Delta Pi, Mrs. Don Crow, Lyn Calloway and Karla Knight; Alpha Phi, Mrs. Ted Bushing, Elizabeth Nabors and Margaret Beeton; Chi Omega, Mrs. Bob Craig, Janet Busby and Nancy Bray; Delta Delta Delta, Karla McCay, De De Shuman and Kim Greer; Delta Gamma, Mrs. Benny Nixon, Carla Hatfield and Suzanne Hubert; Gamma Phi Beta, Catherine Aufill, Laura Folmor and Diana Wilson; Kappa Alpha Theta, Mrs. John C. Blakey, Susie Crowder and Carolyn Pasewark; Kappa Beta, Mrs. William Lipe; Kappa Kappa Gamma, Carolyn Darden, Vickie Walker and Vivian Buhrman; Phi Beta Phi, Mrs. W. G. McMillan Jr., Cindy McShan and Alice Williamson; Phi Mu, Mrs. Steve Hill, Kathleen Campbell and Elizabeth Zingula; Sigma Kappa, Mrs. Jim Farmer, Anna M. Howard and Diana Butler; Zeta Tau Alpha, Mrs. Wayland Taylor, Robyn Roarck and Terri Thorn.

Care Important During Pregnancy

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the first in a series on pregnancy.

Pregnancy and birth are such common events that it may seem unnecessary to consider the physiology of these very natural occasions. Yet the knowledge of the process of pregnancy may assure that children come into the world healthy and whole. The increasing numbers of teenage mothers and the high rate of infant mortality as well as the possibilities of birth defects, indicate the need for wider knowledge about the management of pregnancy.

Pregnancy is, in itself, a normal bodily function. Without knowledge of that function a future mother can be taking many risks unknowingly during her pregnancy. In modern society, the trend toward smaller, more mobile families creates a climate in which young people may never come into contact with pregnancy before they themselves are about to become parents.

This series is aimed at developing a clearer understanding of the process of pregnancy, along with offering some suggestions and resources available to pregnant women in Lubbock.

BEGINNING OF LIFE

THE BASIC FACTS surrounding pregnancy are simple: an ovum or egg is released from one of the woman's ovaries and travels along the Fallopian tube connecting the ovary with the uterus. If sexual intercourse has occurred while the egg is on its way to the uterus, releasing sperm into the uterus, and no preventive measures have been taken, there is a good chance of conception.

If one of the sperm meets and joins with this egg, usually while still in the Fallopian tube, conception occurs. Conception usually takes place about two weeks after the beginning of a menstrual period.

Soon after the egg is fertilized, the egg begins to divide. The nucleus of the new cell is composed of 23 chromosomes from the father and 23 from the mother, through which the hereditary traits of each parent are passed on to the child. This cluster of up to 50 cells travels to the uterus in the next three to five days. It continues to develop and by the tenth day after fertilization implants itself in the uterine wall.

ONCE THE EGG is implanted in the uterine wall, it is composed of about 150 cells and is called a "blastocyst." According to information in a publication by Dr. L.M. Del Bo, "The egg has by now exhausted its reserves of food, which gave it the energy necessary for its job of cellular multiplication, and it now needs to extract nourishment from the maternal surroundings. That is why it looks for the most suitable spot for its nesting. From this moment on it will be nourished by the uterine mucous membrane."

When the egg attaches itself to the uterine wall, the mucous membrane of this lining forms a capsule over the egg to protect it better. The cluster of cells "quickly regroup to form a being that is visibly human," said Dr. Del Bo. At that time, about two weeks after conception, the egg becomes an "embryo." At the end of two months, it becomes a "fetus."

ONCE PREGNANCY IS established, a hormone called "progesterone" is produced to protect the pregnancy and the woman experiences a series of body changes.

Some of the physical changes show up as the early signs of pregnancy: an absence of menstruation; nausea and vomiting; abundant salivation; sudden dizziness; toothaches and headaches; disturbances in vision; a general feeling of discomfort, fatigue, hot flashes, changing moods and changes in taste; bladder problems; and a sense of weight in the abdomen, due to swelling of the uterus and painful tightness in the breasts. (Not all these symptoms are experienced by all women.)

Some symptoms are due to pregnancy-related changes in the sympathetic nervous system and renewed activity of the thyroid gland, including low-grade fever and digestive disorders.

The most remarkable change is in the reproductive organs. According to Dr. Del Bo, the internal surface of the uterus is normally about two square inches. During pregnancy it increases to 62 square inches. The muscle in the uterus stretches and thickens to produce the strength to expel the baby during labor.

The cervix and vagina thicken or soften, depending upon their function, to allow the baby passage out of the mother's body. The ovaries enlarge while producing progesterone. The breasts swell as the mammary glands grow and more blood is circulated through them.

The kidneys, bladder and heart are the organs most under stress: the kidneys must eliminate the wastes of both the child and mother; the bladder is constricted or pushed down by the uterus during the early and late stages of pregnancy; and the heart must circulate harder to provide plentiful oxygen for the growth of the child.

STAGES OF DEVELOPMENT

DURING THIS TIME, the fetus is growing. The third week after fertilization, the cell cluster is only about 1/100 of an inch in diameter, but has primitive lung buds and the beginnings of a heart and nervous system. At the end of the fourth week, the embryo is 3/16 of an inch long, having grown 10,000 times bigger than when it started. It has a primitive face: the mouth, lower jaw and throat are developing. The gallbladder, liver and stomach are beginning to develop and circulation begins. The "heart" tube is beating 65 times per minute.

At the end of the fifth week, ears, arms and legs and eyes emerge. There is an indication of a nose and tongue. The embryo has eight to ten vertebrae, while the brain, spinal cord and nervous system are well established. During the sixth week, the baby's digestive system starts developing, an entire backbone is laid down and there is an entire skeleton of cartilage. The embryo at the end of sixth weeks is ¼ of an inch long.

The embryo becomes a fetus at seven weeks. The heart moves into the chest cavity. Nasal openings have appeared. Fingers and toes are beginning to develop and so are the muscle fibers. The fetus is ½ inch long and weighs 1/1000 of an ounce.

Facial features, fingers and toes and ears are present during the eighth week. The fetus has grown to ⅞ inch long and weighs 1/30 of an ounce. The genitals appear. The baby is more than one inch long and weighs 1/5 ounce.

During the tenth week, the eyes move from the sides of the head to the front. The major blood vessels are almost completely formed. The baby's head is almost half its entire size.

BY THE END of the third month, hair follicles and vocal cords begin to develop. The fetus has fingernails and can make a fist with its fingers. The fetus is three inches long and weighs about one ounce.

During the fourth month, the doctor can hear the baby's heartbeat. The skin is thickening and developing sweat glands. The fetus has eyebrows and eyelashes, is 8½ inches long and weighs six ounces.

The mother can feel the baby's movements during the fifth month. The fetus has hair on its head and fat is collecting under the skin. It weighs one pound and is 12 inches long.

The baby develops a protective cheese-like coating over his skin called "vernix" during the sixth month. The eyes, which are sensitive to light, are open and the baby can hear sounds. He is 14 inches long and weighs two pounds.

During the seventh month, the baby's body is covered with downy hair. Now the organs are properly developed, so that if he were born prematurely, he could survive. At the end of the month, the baby is about 16 inches long and weighs 3½ pounds.

THE FINAL TWO months are a period of growth. Completely formed, the baby accumulates fat under his skin, gaining weight and "filling out." At the end of the eighth month, he may weigh more than five pounds and be about 18 inches long. In the last month, he may gain a few more pounds and grow to 20 inches in length.

At this point, the child is ready to be born, which is signaled by contractions or "labor pains."

PRENATAL CARE

PREGNANCY AND BIRTH are often considered miracles of creation. Usually there is no difficulty during pregnancy. However, the key to health, both for the mother and baby, is good prenatal care. Many of the problems associated with pregnancy have definite, easily detected signals. Under a doctor's care, problems can be prevented or handled easily.

In My Corner

By FRANCES LOWE

Ah, summer! — when the sound of the sneeze is loud in the land...

To the man with hay fever, heaven is a day without pollen and he is to be caught in a sneezing fit, in church, without a tissue.

I inherited my allergies, along with a lot of other bad qualities, from my family. When we are together, the sound of sneezing, wheezing and blowing can be heard for miles. Our shared physical characteristics include red noses and clutched boxes of tissues, and the tendency to stay indoors, with the doors and windows closed, on beautiful days.

The allergy is different from a cold in that it does not go away after a few days. A cold on top of hay fever is compound agony. An allergist has observed that his patients never die and never get well — an ideal profession.

Not long ago, Colorado was touted as the most pollen-free state in the union; it may still be, but Denver has achieved the dubious distinction of being the most polluted.

My affliction didn't come upon me until I was grown, as a punishment for my sins of not sympathizing enough with my brothers and for taking my girlfriend to play in the barn everytime she came to visit, knowing that she would be sick with hay fever the next day.

One spring in Georgia, I developed a cold that lasted for two months, settled in my chest, and was accompanied by a low-grade fever. When I bullied my way into the doctor's office (he didn't see anyone with a temperature of less than 103) he was surprised I had not thought of allergies.

It had been brought on by the pine pollen that sifted across the sidewalk, settled on the cars like West Texas dust, and was brought into the house by the cats, who liked to roll in it.

I developed a certain fame for creative sneezing. Stifling a sneeze will, I believe, cause the pressure to build up in your head until your eyes pop out while a good sneeze can clear the passages and give you a momentary feeling of well-being (I have a lot of sympathy for snuff-takers).

Once I was overcome with a fit of sneezing and heard the Angel remark proudly to a little friend in the next room: "Don't my Mama sneeze good and loud? My Mama has the best sneezing of anybody."

The antihistimine prescribed by the doctor was the first of many remedies that I have tried over the years with mixed results. The first dose caused my head to float above my body and gave me a feeling of detachment about the realities of life, such as fixing dinner. Since I was carpooling youngsters for several hours every day, I became concerned over my lack of appreciation for the importance of traffic lights and stop signs.

The doctor prescribed another potion. That night I woke up with my heart pounding, my mouth dry and an overwhelming feeling of impending doom. He said, without sympathy, that I would have to choose between the hay fever and the side effects of the medicine.

Unlike many people, I suffer less in West Texas than anyplace in the country; apparently I am not allergic to dust, or I would not be able to live in my own house. I may begin sneezing at a change in wind direction, something the farmers are doing to the fields, atmospheric pressure. I have identified laundry detergent as a culpret and am trying to learn to be allergic to dirty dishes. Perfumes and scents are among the worse offenders; I have yet to find a way to explain to a lady in church why I am changing seats to get away from her, without causing offense.

Of my family, only the Angel seems to share the problem. I think it is not helped by the fact that she sleeps with a cat. The directions on my latest allergy medicine describe a house suitable for allergy victims: no drapes, carpets, upholstered furniture, not even a stuffed animal for the children. It seems a bleak existence.

Some soaps cause me to break out in hives and welts which look dreadful but go away on their own after a while. I also have some food allergies, especially to some kinds of seafoods (the varieties with hinges). Growing up inland, I didn't realize this until I was fully grown, although I knew that Howard Johnson's seafood platters always made me violently sick.

One year we went to Atlanta for some business and to celebrate our anniversary. I bought a handsome outdoor grill at Rich's, which agreed that I could pick it up later at the loading dock. Then I met Himself at our favorite fancy Spanish restaurant, where he ordered a bottle of wine and one of those Spanish dishes that comes with clams in the shell floating on top. I took a sip of the sauce and got very sick.

As I sat at the table, becoming progressively greener, he tried valiently to finish the expensive meal, including the wine, by himself. By the time we left the place I was doubled up with stomach cramps and he was floating above the ground. When I told him we had to go by Rich's to pick up the grill, he groaned. He managed to get the car caught between two concrete posts at the loading dock, ripping off the chrome strips on both sides of the car — a reminder of the dangers of overindulgence and what foods I should avoid. I have never touched a clam since...

EVENING OUT — Terri Thorn, senior at Texas Tech and member of Zeta Tau Alpha, and Vivian Burran, junior at Tech and member of Kappa Kappa Gamma, will model the new fall fashions at the style show an annual project of Lubbock Alumnae Panhellenic to provide scholarship funds. Tickets for the style show are available at Margaret's or through any member of Panhellenic; the program begins at 7:30 in the Civic Center Theater. (Staff photo by Paul Moseley)

DEAR ABBY

DEAR READERS: If you have no interest in improving your health, losing weight or feeling better about yourself, skip this column. It will bore you.

If you're still reading, have I got an exercise for you! Just plain, old-fashioned walking.

Walking improves circulation, reduces your heart rate, aids digestion, eases tension, burns calories and, praise the Lord, conserves gasoline. It's less strenuous than jogging or running and will do just as much for you.

Walking requires no lessons, no skills, no costly equipment, and you don't have to join a club to do it. All you need is a pair of good walking shoes. (Any old pair of comfortable shoes will not do.) Invest in some quality, lightweight running shoes with crepe soles to cushion the shock created by constantly pounding the concrete.

I know you've been walking for a long time, but if you want to start off on the right foot, you should know that there is a right and wrong way to walk for health and exercise.

Dr. Charles Kuntzleman, in his book, "The Complete Book of Walking," says, "Each foot should strike the ground at the heel, allowing your weight to be transferred from the heel up along the outer border of the foot toward the toes. Then push off with your toes to complete the foot-strike pattern. As you move from heel to toe you will develop a rolling motion. Avoid landing flat-footed on the balls of your feet."

When you walk, keep your chin up, head high and back straight. And let your arms swing naturally.

It doesn't matter whether you take long strides or short ones. Take the size steps that feel comfortable to you, but do try to work up to a peppy rhythm and stick with it.

If you're walking for exercise, don't stop to window shop, do errands or visit.

While walking, breathe naturally. It doesn't matter whether your mouth is open or closed, but the faster you walk, the more oxygen you'll need. If you're walking with a partner, you should be able to carry on a normal conversation. And in case you're wondering, yes, you should be able to walk and chew gum at the same time.

Walking should be painless. If you notice any chest pains, neck or back pains, slow down. If the pain persists, see your doctor.

If your heart starts to beat too fast, or you feel light-headed or dizzy, take it easy. You're pushing yourself too hard.

If you're a beginner and very much overweight, don't wear yourself out walking. And don't try to tackle hills and steep inclines. Walking should be enjoyable — not exhausting. And perhaps I should mention here that walking is not for everybody. If you're not in normal good health, ask your doctor if you should join the walkers.

Distance is important. If you're never walked for exercise, start by walking a mile a day on a flat surface. Then build up to two miles. The ideal daily walk is three miles per day. (More is better.) Try to walk every day. If you can't manage that, force yorself to walk at least four times a week for at least 30 minutes. The average walker can walk three miles in an hour.

First the good news: Studies show that half an hour of steady, brisk walking will burn from 180 to 250 calories. So without changing your eating habits, 180 half-hour walks per year can whittle 15 pounds off your frame.

Now for the bad news: If you "reward" yourself with a hot fudge sundae you will have to walk from five to six hours to make up for it!

Some people find walking a bore. If you do, recruit some walking partners. Or take a pocket radio along for company.

If you develop foot problems — blisters, aching arches, "hot spots" that burn your feet, your shoes are wrong. See a podiatrist and follow his instructions.

Walking (as well as running and jogging) is now the "in" thing for us formerly lazy Americans, and it's high time. The Harris Poll found that half the people in the United States don't get enough exercise. And 47 percent of those polled gave "lack of time" as the reason for their failure to exercise, while others said frankly it was "lack of concern."

According to a recent article in the Minneapolis Star, we are the best-fed nation on earth, yet our males rank 22nd in life expectancy and our females rank 10th in the world.

If that doesn't get you off your duffs, in men 40 years of age the U.S. ranks 37th in life expectancy, compared with an 11th-place ranking 20 years ago!

But cheer up. The fat-fighters, the cardiologists — in fact, the entire medical establishement — sees walking as the best alternative for non-exercise, many of whom are contributing to the grim statistics quoted above.

So, shape up, America! If you're not already doing something about keeping fit, join the pedestrians and put your best foot forward — again and again and again. I am!

Love,
Abby

If you are like many women, there are times you would like a change in apperance, a new hair style, but without getting a cut or color to your own hair. Why not investigate the world of hair goods and go from short to long, from cute to sophisticated or from sweet to sexy? Belinda Walton is new with us and is our specialist in hair goods. She has six years of experience in this field and can show you how convenient a wig can really be.

Now is the perfect time to consider wearing a hair piece. What could be easier than slipping into a comfortable wig, either real or synthetic hair, after a refreshing dip in the pool? Perhaps you play tennis or visit the health spa. With a wardrobe of hair goods, you can do all of these things and still manage always to look your best.

Though summer is almost over, there are still many weddings in the forecast. Plan to use a hair piece for a special romantic look for the bride, and for the bridemaids use braids, add flowers or ribbons, and you have a very elegant look.

Many people have a real need for hair pieces following chemotherapy threatments. Our wig room is fully equipped to style your wig in privacy. Belinda can help you purchase, style and fit your wig or hair piece so that you are comfortable and confident wearing it.

We know that no matter what a woman is doing, swimming or planning her wedding day, she desires to look and be beautiful. A wig is just another way for that to be possible. Let us be of service to you here at Jessie Lee's. Phone 792-6311 and just ask for Belinda!

When we photograph your wedding, we try to make ourselves as invisible as possible...because that's how you get the best candid shots...the pictures that make your wedding uniquely yours. Like your mother stuffing rice down his back...or his dad waiting outside the reception in rubber nose and glasses. Naturally, we get all the traditional shots...coming down the aisle, the shared wedding cake...but, we try very hard to also get the spontaneous pictures...as they happen.

TUNA SPECIAL

2 cans (6½ oz. each) tuna, drained and flaked
2 hard-cooked eggs, chopped
¾ cup chopped celery
½ cup chopped sweet pickle chips
½ cup mayonnaise
¼ cup chopped onion

Combine ingredients; mix well. Chill. Garnish with lettuce and tomato, if desired. Makes four generous salads or enough filling for 8 sandwiches.

FREEZE FRUIT

Freeze blueberries for use during the cold months. Remove cellophane top from pint baskets and overwrap with plactic wrap. Do not wash blueberries before freezing. Wash just before using. Correctly frozen blueberries should be individually frozen so that they pour freely from the container. When they are washed prior to freezing, the berries freeze together into a solid lump and become mushy upon thawing.

Trivia Quiz

Come play Trivia. Play alone or with anyone who'll listen. You need five right to pass, eight right rates an "A."

1. In their songs, Carl Perkins wore blue suede shoes and Nancy Sinatra wore boots; what kind of footgear did Pat Boone wear for real?

2. Can you name Liberace's brother.

3. And can you match the brand of auto with the model?

Willys	Clipper
Hudson	Fireflite
Nash	Ace
Packard	Rambler
DeSoto	Hornet

4. Follow-up on cars, a little tougher: Which of those five on the left made the Commodore? And which made the Statesman? (Two points if you know both.)

5. The titles of two big songs of 1956 had to do with places — one a European city, the other a North American country. Fill in the blanks: "— Antigue" and "— Sunset."

6. "You Can't Run Away From It," starring Jack Lemon and June Allyson, was a 1956 remake of what classic film.?

7. Why did the Imperials run all the way home?

8. What was Stanley Andrews' big role on television?

9. He used to sing with Freddy Martin's band. In 1958 he started a TV game show that ran daytime and nighttime: "Play Your Hunch." Can you name him?

10. Who was the hillbilly-type comedienne whose popular radio program included a character called Pedro, played by Mel Blanc? (Extra credit: What was the name of her maid?)

(c) 1979 by Dan Carlinsky, New York City

10. It was Judy Canova. (Extra credit for those recalling her maid, Geranium.)
9. Merv Griffin
8. The Old Ranger on "Death Valley Days," the show later narrated by Ronald Reagan, Californian.
7. Just to say they're sorry. ("I ran all the way home," the old rock song went, "just to say I'm sorry...")
6. "It Happened One Night," a la Gable and Colbert; the remake never quite earned the reputation of the original.
5. Lisbon; Canadian

COTTAGE VEGETABLE BAKE

Cottage Vegetable Bake makes a delightful supper dish that's as good to eat as it's nice to look at with a golden puffy topping: Place a 20-ounce package of frozen mixed vegetables, thawed and drained, in a 1½-quart buttered, shallow casserole. Beat 2 cups of cottage cheese and ¼ cup of dairy sour cream until smooth; add 2 tablespoons flour, 1 teaspoon salt and a dash of pepper. Add 2 eggs and beat until well blended. Pour over vegetables and bake 40 minutes in a preheated 350 degree oven. Serves 6-8.

Volunteers Break Down Language Barriers

By BEVERLY O'BRIANT
Family News Staff

Have you ever been faced with a situation in which you were trying to communicate with a person who did not speak your language? Or been a visitor in a foreign country where English was not spoken? The Altrusa Club in Lubbock has initiated a program that might help solve that problem.

A classified service club for professional and executive women, Altrusa has long been known for its interest in international relations. The international organization has sponsored an exchange program involving foreign students in American universities for a number of years. The international relations committee of the Lubbock chapter, of which Mary Butcher is chairman, originated the idea of a language bank about two years ago.

Local hospitals, legal institutions and other public areas were surveyed by the group to determine the need for such a service. According to Dr. Norma Porres, a spokesman for the group, this was done to "identify the people who would need such a service and those who would volunteer."

The club collected money for the project through bazaars and other fund-raising activities in an attempt to make the program self-operating. An independent board of directors was established, with one director a member of the Altrusa Club. Contact Lubbock was approached to handle the telephone calls requesting assistance and to maintain a current file of volunteers available in any given language.

The program was named "Altrusa Volunteer Interpreters of Lubbock." More than 55 languages and dialects are on file, noting individuals in the Lubbock area competent in the given language.

Gradually the group found the services were imminently wanted in Lubbock, said Dr. Porres. "The number of people in Lubbock from other countries is unbelievable."

"Lubbock is becoming more and more cosmopolitan; the schools (universities) are growing and the ability to communicate is paramount," said Dr. Porres.

The function of the language bank is to help those persons who do not speak English to communicate in an emergency situation; that is, when receiving medical care, handling legal matters, translating letters or anything in which there is a language barrier.

Many of the original volunteers were solicited from Texas Tech University. All of the romance languages, many Asian languages and Middle East languages are plentifully represented. Some languages which only a few volunteers speak are Russian, Romanian, Lithuanian, Portugese, Japanese, Swedish, Polish, Hungarian and Turkish. There is a need for more Slavic languages such as Finnish, according to Dr. Porres. Those language for which there are requests which are not on file are often provided through a public plea for a volunteer.

Volunteers fill out an application after calling to offer their services. They are screened to a certain extent; not to turn any away, but to match their capabilites with those of the requests. A command of medical terms, legal terms or technical terms may be needed. A specific dialect may be requested. "The more volunteers we have," said Dr. Porres, "the more representation we will have."

Serving on the board of directors for the program are: Christine Pappas, chairman of the international relations committee of Altrusa Club of Lubbock; Dr. Donald Dietz of the Department of Classical and Romance Languages at Tech; Margaret Henderson; Larry Elms, attorney; Dr. Hugh Paik; Jay Gordon, asst. superintendent of the Lubbock Independent School District and Mrs. Roshawn Mehdiabadi.

The latest in a series of projects planned by the Altrusa Club to provide funds for the program is an international festival. The festival will be held Oct. 27 in the National Guard Armory.

PRESHRINK ZIPPER

To prevent puckering of home-sewn permanent press garments when they are washed and dried, remember to preshrink zipper, tape and any interfacings used, says Nancy Brown, clothing specialist. Working with cotton-covered polyester thread is helpful because it gives with the fabric, she points out.

Author Suggests Businesslike Approach To Household Duties

EDITOR'S NOTE: Any job, whether in the executive suite running a corporation or at home bathing an infant, can be made easier, faster and more enjoyable with planning. Housewife Shirley Conran took a businesslike approach to her household duties, and over 20 years devised a system of "sensible selfishness" that allowed her to do an excellent job with her home, yet escape the virtual slavery so many housewives resent. In this first of a series, Conran shares her secrets. The first one is, "get organized."

By SHIRLEY CONRAN

A tycoon millionairess once told me that she found a business easier to run than a home. I'm sure she's right. I've never yet been able to make housekeeping show a profit; but my sytem is to run it in the same way as I run an office, with a planned budget, and with purchasing and filing departments (all me). This is not nearly as clever or complicated as it sounds. Any sane woman in a perfect world wouldn't bother, but if like me you've lost two vacuum cleaners and $280 worth of laundry in one year, you'll know it's worthwhile to keep track.

Equipment: All you need to get organized is a writing surface, a chair, a kitchen drawer, a large cardboard box, or a bit of shelf space on which to store two office trays or a couple of shopping bags (In and Out). You will also need an office accordion file with about 16 pockets in which to start a filing system, envelopes, carbon paper (so you get file copies of the letters you write), one big notebook and one small notebook for your purse. You will also need a slim little appointment book to carry in your bag in which to record such vital things as orthodontist, eye doctor and pediatrician appointments, dates of PTA meetings, telephone numbers, expenses and anything you want pegged to a date, such as birthdays.

Shopping Lists: Tape a shopping checklist of food and household items you often buy in the back of your address book. Expect no cooperation from your family. The only family rule is: Everyone must write in the shopping list notebook what is about to run out. This works, because the family doesn't see it as a chore, but as a sensible necessity. They know if they don't do it, they'll run out of peanut butter or whatever they're about to use up.

Mail: I throw incoming mail in a wicker basket on top of the refrigerator and outgoing mail in a string bag hanging by the kitchen door. I open the mail immediately after breakfast and deal with small items by postcard. When the string bag looks full enough to warrant a trip, I take it to the mailbox.

It's easier to write a line than a letter. Try to write thank-yous on pretty postcards, as soon as you can, while you're still feeling grateful. You can also buy plain but convenient prestamped postcards at the local post office.

Weightier things such as bank statements get thrown into the In tray for Monday morning, when I do all my office work, belated thank-yous and general organization. Anything that doesn't get done on Monday doesn't get done. There is always another Monday.

Bills: Always save business letters, bills and receipts (otherwise what proof have you that you paid cash to the repair man when his firm sends you an invoice for it six months later?) This is especially necessary in this unnerving age of automation: computers do go wrong and people with (or without) computers can be inefficient.

Keep carbon copies in your bill file of correspondence concerning bills-in-question. Don't ever send the receipt that proves you've paid; if you do, you may lose your proof. Send a copy.

Work Lists: My work notebook is just a list of nonfood work to do and reads "Buy name tapes," "Order lampshade," "Get new sink stopper," and so forth. I never promise to do anything unless I have scribled it down in a handbag notebook or workbook.

Go through these notes every Monday morning, ticking off a job when you've done something about it and crossing it out when it's completed. Write work lists on right-hand pages only, and make any notes about the job on the left-hand pages. So when the cleaner promises to have your purple skirt ready, check the note; but not until the skirt has been picked up do you cross it off completely.

Make sure all articles are checked in and out of your home (things sent to the cleaner, appliances picked up for repair). Get the proper person (family member, tradesman) to sign your work notebook for anything he removes; date it. The busier you are the more you should make it a rule always to keep track of who has what and where. When signing for any parcel always add "not inspected" or "not tested," whichever applies. Jeer if you must, but this sort of efficiency take little time and can save a lot of trauma.

The only New Year's resolution I keep is to look at my yearly list — things to do on Jan. 1. Sometimes you may feel too drained to cope with things on Jan 1, in which case do them as soon as convenient. This list may look dreadful, but I find that mine (reproduced here to offer you inspiration) took only two hours to sort out last year. On Jan 1? No, on Feb. 14.

NEW YEAR CHECKLIST

Insurance: personal, house, health (if not paid by employer).

Membership renewals.

Check passport is up-to-date.

Arrange service of air conditioner and electrical appliances, such as dishwasher and washing machine.

Service car if necessary.

Transfer important items from old appointment book into new appointment book. These might not be only family birthdays but also such vital reminders as "Oct. 1: Check roof, gutters, chimney." "Clear leaves from now through fall." While you're at it, you might make a little list of these items and tape it to the back of your diary, where it's easy to transfer from year to year. (The leaves always fall.)

Income Tax: The New Year is a good time to start organizing your income tax paperwork, simply because nobody else will do it; and accountants just love you if you can get your work in before the April 15 crunch!

Address Book: Some people write out a new address book (saving the old one) every January, sadly weeding out the dead and discarded. If you use a card desk index system, it makes your ruthless weeding that much easier.

New Appointment Book: In my new appointment book I jot down all seasonal items, transferring them from year to year. (For example, "April, or whenever, rake up lawn, sow 18 pounds coarse shade-grass seed. Ignore existing grass, which looks messy for a few days, then springs back to life. Hose well immediately after.")

I also jot odd notes in the back of the book, knowing that I won't read them until the year's end: a Christmas present list, a list of the current medicines the family is dosing itself with, the collar sizes of my favorite men, and the various sizes of my mother-in-law (dress, gloves, blouse, and so forth).

THE DRAWER WITH THE ANSWER TO EVERYTHING

Filing is a word that makes most women mutinous; however, it's not only a good idea but in home emergencies absolutely essential. Don't be frightened by the idea of filing. The verb only means putting things in a sensible place where you can find them quickly and easily. Four years of my filing fits into one suitcase.

Know your limitations, and don't plan a filing system that is sure to get the better of you because you won't stick to it, and you'll find that even more depressing than setting up the system in the first place.

My humble system started with two cardboard boxes labeled "IN" and "OUT" and one kitchen drawer that deserved its peeling label, "The drawer with the answer to everything." It contained an accordion file with 16 compartments, which is the minimum for any fun-loving, file-hating harassed woman.

What to put in your files: Everyone's individual filing system is a different sort of organized chaos. Once you've started it, the only thing you will have to remember is that this repository, whatever its size or situation, is from now on the one and only safe place in the house. Any scrap of valuable paper (except money) should be in it, even if it's just saved in a huge envelope labeled "For sorting out sometime."

How to file: Below is one example of a filing system; yours will vary according to your circumstances. Incidentally, I never think about filing anything in alphabetical or date order, or it would never get filed, but if you always shove the latest document in the front (i.e. nearest you) of the compartment, the file will automatically be kept in date order.

File 1: Guarantees and Warranties.

File 2: Instruction Leaflets.

File 3: Health. Any relevant corespondence and a little notebook listing children's illnesses with dates; health certificates, inoculation records, doctors' and dentists' visits, medical bills and payments, health insurance records, pets' inoculation records.

File 4: Licenses requiring yearly renewal.

File 8: Important Documents.

File 9: Money File. Stick bills in one pocket, leaving the other side for bank statements, used and unused checkbooks, and savings account books.

File 10: Expenses. This is an optional for most housewives, but if you run your own business you must keep all expense records; however trivial, for income tax purposes.

File 12: Household Addresses. This file contains a list of names, addressed and telephone numbers of importance to you and to anyone else who is temporatily in charge. For example: doctor, dentist, veterinarian, garage, fire department, police and so forth.

List of Family Numbers. Could you describe your valuables from memory at that agitated moment when you'd just been burglarized? Could you include the brand names and serial numbers of TVs, stereos and watches?

If not, you might, given the strength, time and patience on a rainy afternoon, draw up a list of your family numbers — Social Security, dog license, passports, drivers' licenses, insurance policies, mortgage number, cassettes, sterros, TVs, cameras, watches, bicycles, slide and movie projector, cars. Almost anything mechanical and stealable has a serial number somewhere on it. Note these numbers with a short description of the object.

List of Items You Keep In Your Purse. Another good idea is to list such items together with their indentification numbers. Credit cards, bank card, checkbook, union card, commutation ticket, drivers' license, medical bank membership card (which lists your own blood type and can be a lifesaver if you or you family need blood after an accident).

File 14: Keep an envelope or plastic bag full of assorted adhesive labels for files, jam jars, and so forth.

Use the additional compartments for your own specialized files.

Antennas, Gadgets Pose Death Threat

Almost 1,200 people died from 1975-1977 in the United States from accidental electrocution, says Claudia Kerbel, consumer information specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service. Antennas for television and CB radio base stations were the number one hazard, she adds.

Most deaths linked with antennas happened when the device hit an overhead power line as the victim put it up or took it down. As a result, the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission now requires manufacturers and importers to include warning labels — and insulation instructions — with all outdoor television antennas and those for CB base stations. They must do the same with masts or other devices intended to support these antennas.

Other electroctions involved hair-care equipment and other devices. Hair dryers were a major culprit — killing children who dropped a plugged-in hair dryer into a sink full of water or into a bathtub while bathing.

Many appliances can kill when not turned on — only plugged in, Kerbel warns. Never leave electrical appliances in the bathroom plugged in, she says. Even better, do not use electrical appliances in the bathroom. Industry has agreed to put stronger warnings and more visible markings on hair dryers to caution against their use in or near water.

CANCER / ANSWER LINE

A woman writes: "Can you give me any reason why I shouldn't use laetrile?"

ANSWERline: The number one reason is the fact that laetrile has never been scientifically proved effective in any way against cancer. If you take laetrile to treat cancer you are betting your life on an unproven remedy instead of a verified form of treatment. By delaying treatment known to be effective, you reduce your chance of survival. This is because cancer advances with the passage of time and must be stopped at the earliest possible moment. Stopping cancer is what laetrile has never been scientifically proved to do.

A high school teacher asks: "Has there been any progress in treating bone cancer in young people? A 17-year-old in my class was treated several years ago but he lost a leg in the process."

ANSWERline: The outlook for some young bone cancer patients has brightened considerable. The use of cancer drugs in addition to other forms of treatment such as surgery has helped deal with the problem of recurrent or spreading disease. The treatment plan has to be carefully designed according to each patient's age, stage of disease at diagnosis and other information. In some instances, it is possible to remove cancerous bone and replace it with either an artificial device or with a donor's bone that has been freeze-dried. At Memorial-Sloan Ketering Cancer Center in New York City, cancer drugs are given to young patients before surgery to shrink the size of the tumor. This therapeutic approach has made more bone implants possible and has bettered the chance of survival. Fortunately, bone cancer is rare. Also, there have been definite improvements in treatment and survival.

A businessman writes: "My wife is very worried about getting breast cancer. I have read that a change in her diet might protect her. Is this true?

ANSWERline: Some medical scientists believe that there is a possible link between breast cancer and a high-fat diet which is more or less the typical American diet. Dr. Ernest L. Wynder, president of the American Health Foundation, believes that women would benefit from an overall reduction of fat to 30 percent of total food intake. A number of labortory studies and a comparison between the dietary habits of Japanese women (who have low breast cancer rates) are the basis for his suggestion. At this point, there is no conclusive evidence about this relationship between diet and breast cancer. Obviously this is a question for research to answer. Even so, since a high-fat diet has been definitely linked to heart disease, a low-fat diet is prudent for everyone. If your wife is worried about breast cancer; she should have a thorough examination by a physician who will also assess her health history for possible risk factors. Your wife should learn how to perform monthly breast self-examination as another safeguard. Your local American Cancer society has simple instrutions available free in leaflet form.

Interior Design Class Scheduled

Whether you live in a house, apartment or "life space," there is satisfaction to be gained from properly furnishing and arranging your living area. A growing public interest in interior design has sparked the need for adult short courses which will help a person choose colors, furniture and accessories to achieve harmony and prevent costly errors.

South Plains College at Lubbock will offer an adult short course in Interior Design beginning Aug. 7. The course will meet from 7-9 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday at the 1302 Main St. campus.

The course is designed for consumers and professionals interested in the housing design field as well as for homeowners who desire a basic knowledge of functional, attractive, residential design. Course content includes the nature of design, its principles and elements, and their application to interior spaces and materials. The course will also cover a brief history of furnishings, furniture selection and arrangement, lighting and ways to achieve energy efficiency in home interiors. Cost of the course is $30.00.

Rachal Wortham, instructor and research assistant in the Department of Family Management, Housing and Consumer Science at Texas Tech University, will teach the course.

Students may register by phone at 747-8111 or 747-0576 or at the Main Street campus. Enrollment is limited.

LEMON ICE

2¼ cups sugar
1½ cups water
¾ cup bottled lemon juice
1 tbsp. grated lemon peel
3-4 drops yellow food coloring
1 large egg white, stiffly beaten

In heavy enamel or stainless saucepan, combine sugar and water. Cook, stirring constantly, over moderate heat. Brush down any sugar that clings to sides of pan using brush dipped in cold water. Bring syrup to boil; cook five minutes. Stir in lemon juice, peel and food coloring. Cool; pour mixture into refrigerator tray. Freeze two hours or until edges are mushy. Transfer mixture to chilled bowl; beat two minutes. Fold into beaten egg white. Return to refrigerator tray and freeze, stirring about four times, until frozen. Makes 6 ½-cup servings.

Continental Dessert Offers Elegant Dining

Fresh Summer Fruits Provide Continental-Style Desserts

NEW YORK (Special) — With gourmet cooking the current vogue, wouldn't you like to serve your guests elegant continental-style desserts this summer — with a minimum of effort?

Luckily, it's quite easy to create international specialties with the wide variety of colorful, succulent fresh fruits so readily available. And this summer promises superior quality and abundance, reports the United Fresh Fruit and Vegetable Association, especially for peaches, nectarines, plums and the fresh limes whose juice and rind add zest to fruit dishes and iced drinks.

Try sugar dusted sliced peaches, strawberries and blueberries in our version of the "Dutch Baby," traditional to the Netherlands. The only cooking required is for the delicate shell — a fritter batter baked in a skillet. Just heap the luscious fruit into the shell and serve warm to your guests' delight.

The key to success with these beautiful desserts is to use fully ripe, well-shaped, bruise-free fruit. Peaches and nectarines should have a rich yellow background color and should yield slightly under gently pressure. Plums should be full-colored for the variety and not hard. Firmer fruit can be ripened at home at room temperature.

Blueberries, strawberries and cherries, on the other hand, are picked ripe, so good color and smooth, unshriveled skin should guide your choice.

At cherry harvest in France's Central Plateau region, the heady aroma of Fresh Fruit Clafouti wafts from every oven. This sturdy dessert — a melange of nectarines, peaches, plums, blueberries and cherries baked in a pancake-like batter that's accented with grated lime rind — adds a sophiosticated touch to summertime dining.

DUTCH BABY WITH FRESH SUMMER FRUIT

2 eggs
½ cup flour
½ cup milk
¼ tsp. salt
1 tbsp. butter or margarine
4 med. peaches, peeled and sliced
2 cups fresh strawberries
1 cup fresh blueberries
Confectioners' sugar

In small bowl, combine eggs, flour, milk and salt; beat until smooth with rotary beater or electric mixer. Place 10-inch, oven-proof skillet in 450 degrees oven until skillet is very hot, about three minutes. Remove skillet from oven, place butter in skillet. Allow butter to melt and immediately add batter. Bake 12 minutes; reduce heat to 350 degrees F. continue baking 10 to 15 minutes longer until batter puffs and is golden brown. Place Dutch Baby on serving platter. Fill with fruit; sprinkle with confectioners' sugar. Serve immediately. Makes 6-8 servings.

If using a skillet with handle that is not heat-proof, wrap handle carefully with double layer of aluminum foil.

FRESH FRUIT CLAFOUTI

3 cups mixed fresh fruit, unpeeled, cut up (nectarines, peaches, plums, blueberries, pitted cherries)
4 large eggs (about ¾ cup)
½ cup sugar
⅛ tsp. salt
½ cup sifted all-purpose flour
2 tbsps. butter, melted
1 cup milk
1 tsp. freshly grated lime rind
Confectioners' sugar

Generously butter a 10-inch pie plate or quiche dish. Arrange fruit in dish. In a medium bowl, beat eggs lightly. Beat in sugar and salt. Blend in flour. When smooth, beat melted butter into batter. Stir in milk and lime rind. Pour batter over fruit. Bake in a 375 degree F. oven 30 to 35 minutes, until batter has set. Serve warm, sprinkled with confectioners' sugar. Makes 6 servings.

Blueberies and cherries should not be cut-up.

'Hidden' Sugar Adds Calories

COLLEGE STATION (Special) — Did you consume 102 pounds of sugar last year? And not know it? Or 15 pounds of salt?

Probably you did says Mary K. Sweeten, foods and nutrition specialist with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service.

Most Americans did — and unknowingly gained weight. In fact, researchers say we're eating and drinking more sugar, salt, fats and meat each year.

We get much more sugar and salt from processed foods and beverages, Mrs. Sweeten says. We don't realize how much we're getting, because we don't stop to read labels, she adds.

For example, studies show that each of us consumed about 102 pounds of sugar last year. That equals about eight or nine pounds of sugar each month — per person. Most of that sugar was syrups and sugars in processed foods and beverages.

What's the verdict on all this?

Not too bright, Mrs. Sweeten cautions. This trend is linked to nutrition-related problems such as obesity. Too much of any food will make you gain weight, the specialist says.

How can we fight the problem? Read labels, she says. Read the ingredient listings and the nutrition information on each label, especially if you're on a special diet or trying to lose weight.

Calling All Homemakers

By SYD MOORE, A.S.I.D

Many love seats that were manufactured years ago were uncomfortable — but in recent years, love seats have real comfort and afford wonderful decorating possibilities, too.

And, today there are so many designs and styles of love seats that can bring both beautiful decor and practical advantages to your rooms.

You might place one or two love seats in a corner with a lamp table either between or beside.

Or, you can place a love seat at right angles to your sofa, or to another chair for a nice living room setting.

Love seats can also be effectively used in bedrooms, family rooms, playrooms and other rooms, giving you a good decorating touch and answering a seating need.

THOUGHTS ON STUDIES

In my early years I read very hard.
It is a sad reflection, but a true one, that I knew almost as much at eighteen as I do now.

"Somebody's got to worry about these kids down here," says Gilbert Herrera, director of Auxilio, Inc., explaining the existence of the drug abuse prevention and education program of the center.

"People should care about the young people caught up in the physical and mental damage of drugs," he said, "and not just because the drug problem affects all groups in Lubbock, but also because anyone is a potential victim of their violence."

The program of Auxilio has a number of facets. Taken together, they make up a program aimed at teaching young people about the dangers of drugs and the attendant crime spiral. One part of the program involves talks to Lubbock public school students on a regular basis. The staff of Auxilio has spoken to students at a total of 13 schools (elementary, junior and senior highs.) This contact leads to opportunities to counsel with individuals who are experiencing drug-related problems.

There are elements of the Auxilio program which sound very much like the educational message of the recent television special, "Scared Straight."

Herrera, himself an ex-convict and ex-drug user, endorses the message of the program, but disagrees with those who feel the language used was necessary to convey the message. "I have been involved in a drug education program now for four years," he said, "and I don't use objectionable language. I may holler a lot, but I don't use those words and the kids still know I know what I'm talking about."

He also said that people who had talked to him about the special program expressed the feeling that the young people pictured were more frightened by the convict-speakers than by the prospects of prison which resulted from their crimes.

He sees the drug-crime spiral as one basic problem, and he speaks from personal experience. Of his background and youth in Lubbock he related, "At the time there was virtually no education about drugs. And, in the barrio, if someone got in trouble and needed help and advice, there was no place to go and get it. So, I did go to prison."

"Prison doesn't solve anything. If prison taught me anything, it meant only that I learned new ways to commit crime. Drugs were also very available in prison."

The rest of Herrera's story involves his decision to come back to Lubbock and start the work which is now the Auxilio program.

Herrera knew he definitely wanted to help young people avoid the problems he had had. So after getting out of prison, he began working with a youth program under the sponsorship of the Knights of Columbus. But he kept thinking about his own experience in Lubbock and decided to return to his own community and establish a similar program.

In the files of the Auxilio office are letters attesting to the effectiveness of the Auxilio program. Many of the young people themselves who have been aided have written letters describing the effects the program has had on their lives. The letters are poignant and direct.

Presently, Auxilio has several sources of funding. The Lubbock Catholic Priests Association is responsible for providing the agency housing located at 304 Avenue F. Utility bills for the facility are paid by the Palo Duro Union Presbytery. Llano Estacado is providing some funding. Funds for summer youth work staff are provided by the CETA youth employment program.

Speaking again from his own experience and his recent work with Lubbock youth, Herrera has asked the Lubbock City Council to enact an ordinance which will prohibit the sale of glue and spray paints to minors who might use them as inhalants. The City Council has agreed to study the proposal.

Herrera sees these two products as grave dangers to youth. Presently they are available and reasonably priced and are as deadly as any drugs, he said.

What does Herrera see as the future for the Auxilio program? He would like to have an excursion trip to both the state prison and to a state mental hospital and take local youngsters to see for themselves the results of continuing the drug-crime spiral.

Cocaine Problem Receives Attention At Local Level

BY JEANNE LIVELY
Family News Staff

Although the public's attention has only recently been called to the use of cocaine in the Lubbock area, the drug has been around a long time.

Legends of the Incas relate that during a time of great famine and starvation the sun god, looking down from his domain high in the southern Andes, saw the suffering of the tribes and gave them coca plants. Again, according to legends, the sun god instructed the people to chew the leaves of the plants, thereby appeasing their feelings of hunger until the famine was gone.

The wild leaves of the coca are unfit for chewing; and if the sun god gave the Incas the plants, there are no clues of its introduction to cultivation. So, in actuality, a pre-Inca tribe must have learned to cultivate the plant. When excavated, many tombs dating back to about 3,000 B.C. in South America had sacks and baskets of coca leaves found in them.

Today the coca plant still grows high in the South American Andes. The plant is a shrub, growing from five to eight feet tall. It has widely branched trunks and twigs which become densely leafed toward the ends. Two different species are grown, one a Bolivian variety and the other a native of Peru. Because in most South American countries the upper classes frowned upon chewing the coca leaf, the plant was refined and made into a liquid cordial. From simple primitive presses, modern refining plants came into being. Today refining processes present to the consumer a choice of rock, flake or powdered cocaine.

The rock form of cocaine is more readily available, the flake considered a delicacy for users, but the powder is usually diluted and who knows how many times the latter has been "cut" and with what?

Local health officials say that cocaine can be injected, swallowed, smoked, applied to oral or genital mucous membranes or mixed with liquor. The most popular method is to snort cocaine. This is done by placing cocaine on a smooth surface, and the finely divided powder is snorted into a nostril through a plastic straw or a rolled currency bill.

Popular literature emphasizes the pleasant feelings of euphoria resulting from cocaine use. Generally, the same literature gives the impression that the user of the drug is partaking of something no more harmful than tobacco or alcohol. But, Drs. Charles V. Wetli and Ronald K. Wright, reporting on their recent findings in the June 8 issue of The Journal of the American Medical Association, say they can only conclude that cocaine cannot be considered a safe recreational drug in any respects.

Wetli and Wright studied 68 deaths associated with the recreational use of illicit cocaine as investigated by the Medical Examiners's office of Dade County (Fla.) and found that most fatalities occurred since 1975. Twenty-nine of the deaths involved the use of other drugs (usually heroin), but 24 persons died directly of the toxic effects of cocaine. Findings indicated that respiratory collapse and death occurred rapidly after the intravenous injection of cocaine; and that oral or nasal ingestion resulted in a symptom-free interval lasting as long as an hour followed suddenly by generalized seizures and death.

The physicians comment that the renewed popularity of cocaine usage partly stems from the widespread belief that there is no hard evidence to indicate cocaine is dangerous. "Nevertheless," Wetli and Wright said, "when any drug becomes popularly abused, there is an increase in deaths related to that drug. Such is the case with cocaine, as reported here and elsewhere."

Unidentified drug enforcement officers in the Lubbock area say it is difficult to tell what a person is "high" on, differentiating drugs. "Cocaine paraphernalia tells the story," one officer commented, "and a cocaine user probably will have some items hidden around wherever he stays. What I mean by cocaine paraphernalia is that a user may possess a kit containing a flint disc and razor blades for reducing the substance to the finest powder. Kits usually contain a small vial to hold the powder or plastic baggies and a small spoon for snorting. On the other hand, a cocaine user ordinarily carries the drug on his person in order to better protect the product.

But if the cocaine user does not care that he is causing potential harm to his own body, law enforcement officials are trying very hard to keep anybody from using, distributing or selling a dangerous, controlled substance.

Errors Found In Diet Book

WASHINGTON, (Special) — The U.S. Department of Agriculture has requested Baronet Publishing Co., New York, to remove from circulation all copies of "The Complete Guide to Cholesterol, Sodium and Fats," a book which gives the amounts of these substances found in various foods.

According to D. Mark Hegsted, administrator of the department's Human Nutrition Center, this recall was requested because of potentially dangerous errors in the sodium content listings.

The book, based on the department publication "Nutritive Values of American Foods in Common Units," uses the values for iron in place of those for sodium. In a telegram to Baronet, Hegsted said he considered the error a "serious one because high-salt foods (including table salt)" appear to have negligible quantities of sodium.

Since the book's cover states that the figures included are those of the department, it "adds an authoritative stance that could contribute to unquestioning acceptance of these tables," Hegsted said.

The error was discovered by a reader in Philadelphia who contacted the department.

Clip 'n' Cook

GLAZED CHICKEN

Honey Orange Glaze:
1 cup (8 oz.) French dressing
1 orange, peeled and sectioned
¼ cup honey
1½ tsps. dry mustard
Pineapple Red Glaze:
1 cup (8 oz.) Russian dressing
1 can (8 oz.) crushed pineapple in natural juice, undrained
¼ cup brown sugar
1½ tsps. dry mustard
2 to 2½ lb. chicken, quartered

In 5-cup blender, combine all ingredients except chicken; process at low speed 30 seconds or until well blended.

Grill or broil chicken 20 to 25 minutes, turning twice. Grill an additional 20 minutes, basting frequently with half the glaze. Makes about 4 servings.

Note: Store remaining glaze in refrigerator.

New Approaches Control School Crime

By BETTY YARMON

NEW YORK (WNS) — School crime in the United States is said to cost us more than $200 million a year, which means it is taking a financial toll on each and every one of us.

The ideas being circulated to promote safety in our schools should have more than passing interest for us even when we seem far removed physically from the toll that finds 5,000 teachers attacked each year, 280,000 students the victims of physical assault and more than 110,000 students forcibly robbed.

Here are some of the more interesting and promising approaches that have recently been noted in the fight against school crime:

1. ENVIRONMENTAL DESIGN CRIME PREVENTION: Westinghouse has sponsored crime-prevention programs in four high schools in Broward County, Fla., using what are called Crime Prevention Through Environmental Design techniques, such as: Locker rooms are kept locked except for the beginning and end of the school day; bicycle compounds and other areas with high crime risk are located in easily observed areas; windows are placed in corridors and classroom doors; portable two-way radios are given to staff, etc.

2. SECURITY GUARDS AND DISCIPLINE: At the reputedly "rough" Boys and Girls High School in Brooklyn, N.Y., guards were assigned last year to the halls and stairwells of every floor, and teacher assaults fell from 50 the first semester to six the second.

3. CRISIS COUNSELING: A crisis-counseling program is under way at Yerbe Buena High School, in San Jose, Calif., a school with many minority students from low-income and welfare-status families. This program identifies the problems of students who might become disruptive and delinquent. Through an interpersonal relationship, the program seeks to resolve the problems both for parents and students.

4. VANDAL WATCH: In Elk Grove, Calif., the problem of school vandalism has been alleviated by the presence of family "school-sitters" who live in a mobile home on school property. This program is active in 17 schools in the district, with the district administration paying for utilities in exchange for the watching. As a result, vandalism has declined to the point where insurance rates have dropped 25 percent for fire, theft and malicious mischief, at a yearly savings of $20,000.

5. RHYMES AGAINST CRIMES: Crime prevention authorities in the Portland, Ore., metropolitan area annually sponsor a crime-prevention week, part of which is a contest for elementary school children called Rhymes Against Crimes. One winner was this rhyme:

"Peter, Peter auto stealer
Stole a car and couldn't wheel her,
Crashed the car into a tree,
And is now doing one to three.

6. OPERATION 'STOP': Student Telephone Observation Projection (STOP) was organized by the Junior Women's Club of Chevy Chase, Md., to monitor student absences from school in an effort to reduce crimes against youth and by youth. Parents, volunteers, and local school administrators join in. A crime of abduction or an accident can be verified and reported within two hours after school begins, and a search for a missing child can begin at that moment. As a result, potential offenders are said to be more afraid to commit such crimes, given the short time to get away.

7. PREVENTATHON: In Raleigh, N.C., a program called Prevent High School Dropouts (PhD) threw a "Preventathon." This event consisted of eight hours of free entertainment to get volunteers to help out in the schools by tutoring slow learners, taking them to cultural and educational events, or just talking out problems with the students. The entertainment included a gospel choir, a fashion show and a band concert.

8. LEARNING ABOUT THE LAW: In a joint effort by the high schools and the Police Department, junior high school students in Baltimore, Md., are getting the chance to study law enforcement. This helps the students to expand their knowledge of law enforcement issues and to improve their attitudes toward police officers. Other students learn about the criminal justice system by going to jail and having the chance to talk to the inmates about how it feels to be a prisoner and the effects that imprisonment has on families. Back at school, the youngsters write reports of their experiences.

According to recent estimates, 17 percent of all teachers report being in constant fear of physical attack, while 7 percent of the students in urban junior high schools say they "are afraid most of the time." It is hoped that projects such as these can reduce this toll.

Books Offer Educational Fun For Children

By FRANCES LOWE
Family News Editor

A delightful little book, "Free Stuff For Kids," has been released by Meadowbrook Press, which touts it as both useful and educational for the kids to whom it is directed.

Now that the dog days of summer are upon us, and the children have done all the things they looked forward to when school was out and are beginning to ask, "What can we do now?" you may be ready to look for some new ways to expend their energy and curiosity.

This book, the second of its kind, is a catalogue of printed materials that kids can send for, either free or at little cost — sometimes postage and handling, sometimes a little more — from public agencies and private companies. It tells them not only what to order but how to do it, which is the educational part of the deal.

The authors, Pat Blakely, Barbara Haislet and Judith Hentges, promise that the items available are the best free offers for children. "You will not find any 'trick' offers — only wholesome, safe fun and informative things we know kids like," they say.

If, for instance, your kid is addicted to yo-yos, he can write to Duncan for "Yo-Yolympics Trick Book." Or the Chicago Roller Skate Company will teach him skate safety; the Basketball Hall of Fame, Little League Baseball or the American Junior Bowling Congress will give him pointers on these sports. Or Grumann Boats will teach him about sailing.

If your kid is a do-it-yourselfer — and what kid isn't? — he or she can write to Morton or International Salt for directions for that homemade clay which makes such nice Christmas tree ornaments, or the Swingline Company has projects to make from staples, or Coats & Clarks has sewing ideas.

There are books about books, about words, about Braille; books about music, chess and foreign coins and foreign and domestic pen pals. Hobby books include ideas on building a rocket, collecting stamps, model railroading or caring for your pet.

Shell Oil has a booklet about collecting shells, rocks and fossils, while Edmund Scientific Company provides a bulletin, "Your Science Project" and a catalogue of scientific items they sell. The National Solar Heating and Cooling Information Center has a solar energy booklist for children and teenagers — perfect for school reports — while Eastman Kodak will tell them how to make and use a pinhole camera.

If you are having trouble converting to metrics, your kid may be able to explain it to you with the help of a booklet from the National Bureau of Standards. Lots of booklets are designed to help kids learn about health and safety, from "Tuffy Talks About Medicine," from Aetna Life and Casualty to books on toy safety from the Consumer Product Safety Commission or a book on first aid for little people from Johnson & Johnson.

Owlie Skywarn will tell them about tornadoes or Central Logistics Supply Center will give them the word on hurricanes or lightning. All sorts of nutritional information materials are available, along with directions on how to grow your own avocado tree or how to bake bread. If you are planning your summer vacation, the book will tell the kids where to write for tourist information.

The book is divided tidily according to subject matter, liberally illustrated, and printed in large type. Each page has a different topic and contains not only a description of the item but directions on how to order it, from "send a postcard" to "use paper and an envelope." There are directions on how to address the envelope.

The beginning of the book contains general information to help kids learn how to write letters — surely a skill most of them can use — and also directions on enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope, how long to expect to wait (important to kids) and sample letters to write with your request.

A few of the more interesting items are listed; if you want more you'll have to buy the book ($2.95 at bookstores; 50 cents more for postage and handling if ordered from Meadowbrook Press, 16648 Meadowbrook Lane, Wayzata, Mn., 55391).

•A 32-page booklet with car travel games for the whole family, 70 cents (ask for Travel Games) from the Beavers, Star Route, Box 184, Laporte, MN 56461.

•A full-color guide to all our national parks, for 70 cents (ask for Guide to National Parks) from the Consumer Information Center, Pueblo, CO 81009.

•A book about outstanding women in America's history, free, from the Sperry and Hutchinson Co., Consumer Services, 2900 W. Seminary Dr., Fort Worth, TX 65133.

•A booklet on helping blind friends, including "What Do You Do When You See A Blind Person?" and a Braille alphabet card, free from the American Foundation for the Blind, Inc., 15 W. 16th St., New York, NY 10011.

•Booklets for youngsters who have alcoholics in the family, including Alateen's "Do's and Dont's" card, "If Your Parents Drink Too Much," and Alateen's "Just For Today" folder, free from Al-Anon Family Groups, Box 182 Madison Square Station, New York, NY 10010.

Real To Reel

By William D. Kerns

It was five years ago that Joe Camp first began breaking the rules of moviemaking — choosing to ignore Hollywood and keep his base of operations in Texas, involving himself in every aspect of the product from writing the film to writing the press releases and, most incredible of all, refusing to gear his "family films" only toward the kids. The results were amazing. Soon earning a solid reputation as "Dallas' Disney," his first feature film was about an expressive pooch named Benji and soared right through the box office roof. And while his debut film's profits have probably yet to be equalled, it must be said that his followups, the camel comedy "Hawmps" and the much underrated "For The Love Of Benji," were even more slick, ambitious and entertaining.

Indeed, though his canine star may have more expressions than a few human actors we've seen, there's no denying that Camp's precisely calculated direction and talented Don Reddy's camera work were both worthy of raves in that Benji sequel.

And now Camp is releasing a new picture, a murder mystery called "The Double McGuffin," with a big splash and a few surprises — the foremost of which is the film's PG rating. Oh sure, the MPAA's rating system is strange enough to fathom as it is, with the inoffensive "Star Wars" and the rather bloody "Jaws" both rated PG. But Camp is a man dedicated to the principles of the G, as evidenced by the fact only a couple mildly startling words in "The Double McGuffin" provided the ratings boost. Words which could have been easily edited out.

During a recent telephone conversation from Dallas, though, Camp explained that it is society, and not his priorities, which is changing. He's still making family pictures, but he feels the G-rating is considered by many moviegoers to denote "a kiddie picture rather than a family picture." Too many viewers to ignore.

The producer-screenwriter-director elaborated, "It was our intention in forming Mulberry Square Productions to supply good family product, good G-rated movies. The public tried what we offered and liked it. . .And part of the reason was the ratings backlash. For a couple years, filmmakers were scared to make R-rated pictures. Then 'Midnight Cowboy' and some other good R and X-rated pictures came out and did well — and it was like filmmakers were kids turned loose in a candy store. All you saw was R-rated movies.

"So by the time we made 'Benji,' I think there was a backlash. The public was ready for family movies. They'd had enough blood, enough sex, and just wanted a good piece of entertainment. And few realized that we always made pictures for adults. The national box office average showed that there were two and one-half adults for every child attending 'Benji.'"

But the tide soon turned. "Hawmps" surpassed "Benji" in profits in this area but, according to Camp, "did absolutely nothing in the Northeast and the Midwest. We spent a ton researching promotional programs. I mean, if you could get people to watch it in Boston, they loved it. But you virtually had to offer to drive them to the theater to get them interested." And the "Benji" averages completely flip-flopped with the release of "For The Love Of Benji." As Camp explained it, "The same number of children attended, but we lost the adults. Now there were two kids for every adult. And this is when I started taking a closer look at what I was doing.

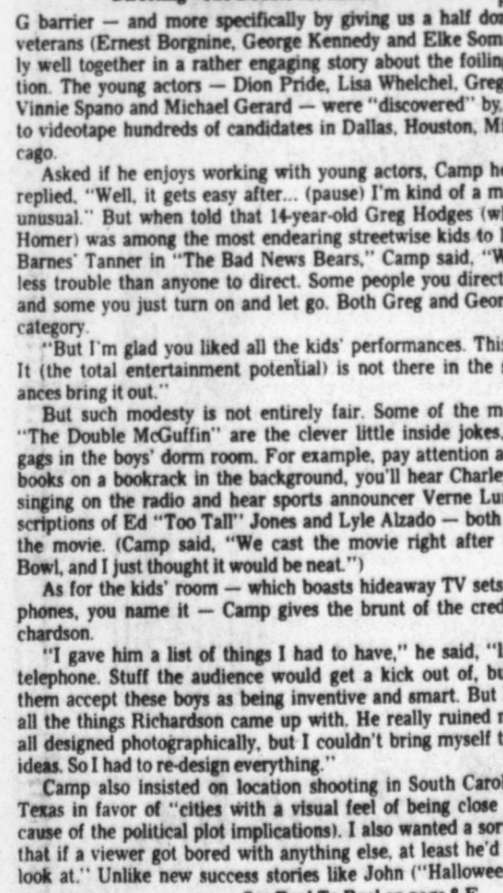

"This was when the thought occurred that maybe what we were calling 'family' in 1975 was perhaps something different in 1977. All of a sudden Disney and Benji took on a puritan label. A G-rating began to be construed as sugary clean, sweet, saccharine. It became impossible to get families to believe in the G-rating."

Two occurences helped push Camp further toward the PG. The first was the Christmas release of both Disney's "The Rescuers" and Hal Needham's "Smokey And The Bandit." He said, "The Disney picture showed in theaters about half full with just kids, while 'Smokey' played to packed houses full of kids, teenagers and adults." The second came when he guested on a talk show with a Baptist minister in Indiana. Camp explained, "He had me on and started telling me how he respected me and thought it was great that I was offering families a (movie-going) alternative. Which I'd been told before and I appreciated.

"But I went to dinner with him and 10 of his friends afterwards, and when the subject turned to movies the minister and everyone else started talking about what a great picture 'Smokey' was.

"I didn't say anything then, but I thought to myself it was time to re-evaluate our (Mulberry Square's) policies. There's no point in having a principle if nobody cares about it. If a principle no longer exists other than in lip service from a minister in the Midwest, then maybe it no longer exists at all."

Mind you, "The Double McGuffin," an undeniably entertaining movie, cannot possibly be labeled explicit within today's definition of the word. But that's because attitudes change with the times. Camp offered an example of changing sexual film encounters: "I remember when I was a kid in the 10th grade, which was about 900 years ago, and I was working in a theater showing a film called 'Haji Baba.' The hero laid down on an Arabian couch next to a girl, and the camera panned up her arm to her hand as she reached over to the table and snuffed out the candle. I'm telling you, every usher was inside watching every time that scene came on. That says something about us then; the film was more enticing when it depended on our imaginations.

JOE CAMP
Directing "The Double McGuffin"

"But kids today don't look at it like we do. The frankness of sex is no big deal anymore. Nowadays it's hard to believe 'damn' was ever a bad word. Nobody even blinks at it anymore. Because society changes. .In fact, society is a lot like a pendulum swinging through water. It doesn't retain everything, but it can't help but stay wet. Everything we have been through (i.e., war, inflation, discontent) has had its effect on our attitudes."

So with "The Double McGuffin" Camp is attempting to attract more people by removing the G barrier — and more specifically by giving us a half dozen youngsters and three veterans (Ernest Borgnine, George Kennedy and Elke Sommer) who work extremely well together in a rather engaging story about the foiling of a political assassination. The young actors — Dion Pride, Lisa Whelchel, Greg Hodges, Jeff Nicholson, Vinnie Spano and Michael Gerard — were "discovered" by sending casting directors to videotape hundreds of candidates in Dallas, Houston, Miami, New York and Chicago.

Asked if he enjoys working with young actors, Camp hesitated only slightly and replied, "Well, it gets easy after... (pause) I'm kind of a masochist. I like doing the unusual." But when told that 14-year-old Greg Hodges (who plays the lock-picking Homer) was among the most endearing streetwise kids to hit the screen since Chris Barnes' Tanner in "The Bad News Bears," Camp said, "Well Greg is very natural, less trouble than anyone to direct. Some people you direct one way, some another, and some you just turn on and let go. Both Greg and George Kennedy fit the latter category.

"But I'm glad you liked all the kids' performances. This is an execution picture. It (the total entertainment potential) is not there in the screenplay; the performances bring it out."

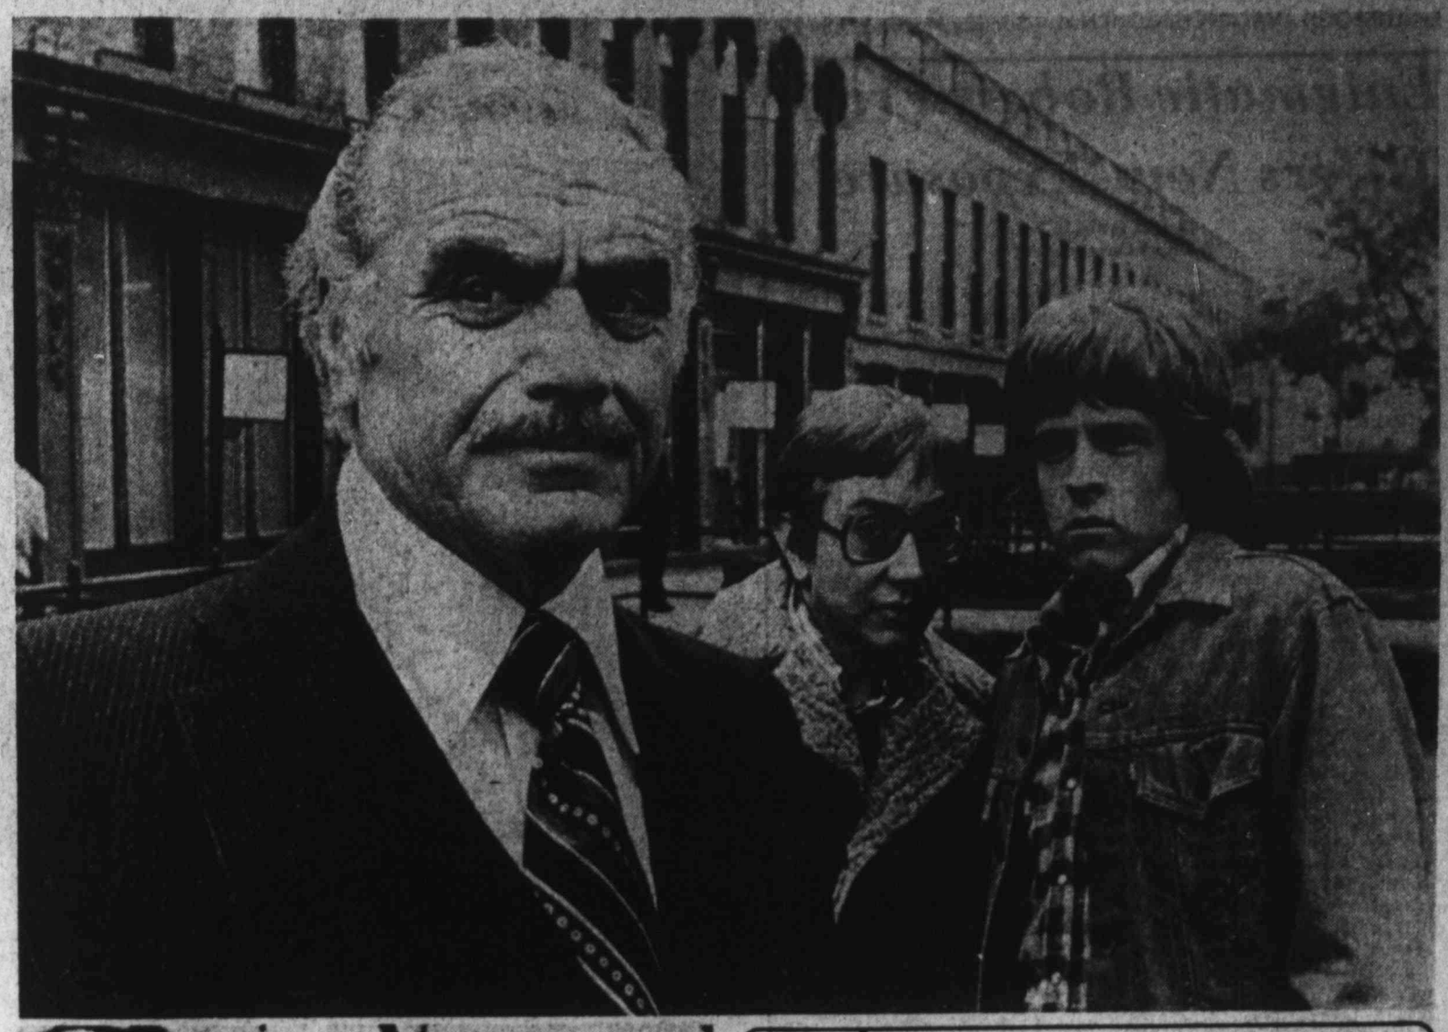

But such modesty is not entirely fair. Some of the more delightful aspects of "The Double McGuffin" are the clever little inside jokes, and the hilarious visual gags in the boys' dorm room. For example, pay attention and you'll see a few Benji books on a bookrack in the background, you'll hear Charley Pride (star Dion's dad) singing on the radio and hear sports announcer Verne Lundquist's Super Bowl descriptions of Ed "Too Tall" Jones and Lyle Alzado — both of whom play hit men in the movie. (Camp said, "We cast the movie right after the Dallas-Denver Super Bowl, and I just thought it would be neat.")

As for the kids' room — which boasts hideaway TV sets, radios, ince chests, telephones, you name it — Camp gives the brunt of the credit to art director Ed Richardson.

"I gave him a list of things I had to have," he said, "like the ice chest and the telephone. Stuff the audience would get a kick out of, but which would also help them accept these boys as being inventive and smart. But I freaked out when I saw all the things Richardson came up with. He really ruined my week. I already had it all designed photographically, but I couldn't bring myself to give up even one of his ideas. So I had to re-design everything."

Camp also insisted on location shooting in South Carolina and Georgia, leaving Texas in favor of "cities with a visual feel of being close to Washington, D.C. (because of the political plot implications). I also wanted a sort of Williamsburg feel. So that if a viewer got bored with anything else, at least he'd have something pretty to look at." Unlike new success stories like John ("Halloween") Carpenter, Camp be-

Paramount Signs Dyan Cannon

NEW YORK (Special) — Academy Award nominee Dyan Cannon has been signed to star in Paramount Pictures "Coast to Coast."

Miss Cannon will enact the role of a Beverly Hills heiress who attempts to outwit her husband's efforts to have her declared insane and flees cross-country with a truck driver. The film is described as being in the tradition of Hollywood's classic comedies of the 1930s.

"Coast to Coast" will be produced by Steve Tisch and John Avnet, with Vince Cannon serving as Associate Producer. Jeff Boam has been engaged to write a revised screenplay based upon the original script by Stanley Weiser.

"Coast to Coast" will mark Miss Cannon's return to Paramount after winning an Academy Award nomination as best supporting actress for "Heaven Can Wait." She also won a Golden Globe Award for her performance in this film and was named Female Star of the Year by NATO. The actress won the New York Film Critics Circle Award for her supporting performance in "Bob & Carol & Ted & Alice" and was Oscar-nominated for that role as well. "Number One," the documentary feature which she directed, also received an Academy Award nomination.

Hays Stars In New Film Spoof

HOLLYWOOD (Special) — Robert Hays, co-star of the new television hit series "Angie," will make his theatrical movie debut as the male lead of "Airplane!" (tentative title).

In the zany comedy, a spoof of disaster movies, Hays will star as an ex-Air Force fighter pilot who takes over the controls of a jetliner when the pilot and co-pilot are stricken by food poisoning during a cross-country flight.

The film is the brainchild of Jerry and David Zucker and Jim Abrahams, who wrote the screenplay and also serve as executive producers. The same trio wrote "Kentucky Fried Movie," a surprise boxoffice hit of two years ago. Jon Davidson will produce "Airplane!" and Abrahams N. Zuckers will direct. The comedy began filming June 20 at Culver City Studios.

"Airplane!" will be released in the United States and Canada by Paramount Pictues.

Enigmatic Robert Fripp Offers New 'Exposure'

By DOUG PULLEN
A-J Rock Correspondent

Rock music took on a new seriousness in 1969. After all, the political climate in the free world was turbulent, tense, and, thus, creative. This type of interaction reflected on society as a whole, and rock music specifically. Rock musicians began to take their world and, most importantly, their music much more seriously than in the past.

Much of the newly born political concern was derived from the ongoing world situation — riots, war and inflation. But musically, a guitarist named Robert Fripp almost single-handedly opened galaxies of space in which musicians might work, experiment with and progress their form of expression. Fripp had formed and styled a group called King Crimson. The band's "In the Court of the Crimson King" debuted to overwhelming sales and a new awareness of rock's vitality and worth, that amid constant predictions that rock and roll would some day fade away.

Robert Fripp is the most enigmatic of rock's individuals. King Crimson was his dream and vision, a vehicle which allowed Fripp to educate himself as well as thousands of eager listeners throughout the world. The incorporation of rock, jazz and classical stylings helped expand what Fripp calls rock's "vocabulary," an aim he has never quite forgotten.

Such is evident on his first solo album, "Exposure" (Polydor). "Exposure" is not only another of Fripp's cleverly packaged and presented interpretive works, but it comes at a time when rock is again at a turning point. The political and musical horizons have indeed altered during the 10 years that have passed since Fripp debuted King Crimson. The guitarist has come a long distance in refining and expanding his art, a fact which best explains the alarming eclecticism of his debut solo album.

Disenchanted with the vehicle that King Crimson once was, but could no longer be, Fripp disbanded the group in 1974 and enrolled in philosopher J.G. Bennett's International Academy for Continuous Education in England. Fripp spent three years there while working on projects with David Bowie, among other artists. Fripp preserved samples of Bennett's wisdom on tape, some of which he utilizes throughout the course of "Exposure's" duration. Take, for example, Bennett's philosophy that "it is impossible to achieve the aim without suffering." A practical thought indeed, and one that many artists, Fripp included, have pursued.

But that quote is not merely enough to describe and explain the abrasive character that Fripp and his music have projected throughout the years. Fripp is by no means a widely known musician, though his work is followed by a devoted, though relatively small proportion of the active listening population.

He is, thus, considered somewhat of a maverick, maybe even an unlikable sort. Though most of the musicians with which he has worked would describe him otherwise, Fripp applies another Bennett quote to explain his persistent attempts to expand the rock form: "If you know you have an unpleasant nature, and dislike people," Bennett says, "it is no obstacle to the aim."

Deep stuff, if you think about it. And it's all representative of the directness with which Fripp approaches his craft.

That the album is eclectic is not only testimonial of Fripp's pursuance of "true" art, that is, in his terms, art as it is received from a higher source and transmitted through the artist. Fripp's thirst for rock's inherent energy propels the new album, an album which Fripp points out in his liner notes is only the first installment of a makeshift three-album series, the second of which, "Frippertronics," is recorded and set for a September release. The third album is called "Discotronics." It is a continuation of Fripp's tape-loop produced technique called "Frippertronics," and delves into the world of disco as an established musical form, not a fly-by-night commercial product, as many people consider and approach it.

Fripp's hunger has led to collaborative efforts with people such as Brian Eno, best known for his technical but simple approach to music; Darryl Hall, singer of Hall and Oates fame; Terre Roche, of the increasingly popular Roche sisters; Peter Gabrial, departed Genesis lead singer who is concluding part three of a three-album character study; and Peter Hammill, formerly the lead singer of Van der Graaf Generator.

Fripp utilizes the talents of these and other musicians to present a most unusual, but awesomely visceral piece of rock sculpture.

Much of the music on "Exposure" contains the raw energy that musicians of the punk/new wave bent have been able to produce, but not contain. Granted, much of punk's drive is taken from this seemingly uncapturable energy, but Fripp uses his wits, and his skill as a technically gifted guitarist to explore and indeed bridle this energy.

Fripp's infatuation with the form is obvious in a handful of songs, "You Burn Me Up, I'm a Cigarette," "Disengage" and "NY3" most notably.

His most commonly known excursions have been into the pastoral realms of rock, an area he has helped pioneer along with Eno. The two combine on the album's more highly textured, picturesquely conceived pieces such as "Haaden Two," "Urban Landscape" and the two songs entitled "Water Mark."

Fripp's music is not easily categorized. Grouping songs by similarities does not accurately represent the diversity of each piece. The 17 strands of thought which Fripp strings together on "Exposure" are individually different in meaning and performance. Some songs are hard, repugnant, violently aggressive and noisy, spurring some rather unusual performances from the likes of Hall on "You Burn Me Up, I'm a Cigarette" and "North Star" and from Roche on the sweet ballad "Mary" and the title track.

Each piece on this album is a virtual exercise in experimentataion, something which is at the core of rock's very nature. Rock is a progressive music, one which has inspired musical and technological advances during its short life span.

Fripp has spent many a waking hour trying to further this expansion, he being a firm believer in the immediacy of rock's ability to express. The overridingly serious tone applied to what at will long be considered a bizarre album gives "Exposure" a sense of immediacy similar, but broader in scope, than that of most rock music.

That may be what Fripp wants the listener to believe. Or, as he says at the conclusion of the album in "Postscript," the whole album may be a "big hoax."

OUTDOOR 'MELLERDRAMMER' CONTINUES — Shannon Gale, left, and Skipper Wood play Uriah Blackstone and Floozy, the villain and villainess, in the outdoor mellerdrammer "Dastardly Doin's At Dove Manor," which will have its final performances at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday at the Show Wagon in Wagner Park. The play was written by Dan Donahue and directed by Linda Donahue, and also stars Duane Whitaker, Lori Wilkerson, Aubrey Washington, Mary Donahue and Bill Conley. There is no admission charge for the performance, and popcorn (to be thrown at the Bad Guys) is on sale at the park. (Staff Photo by Milton Adams)

Maynard Completes New Carillon Studies

Texas Tech University music professor Judson Maynard recently returned from a six-month visit in Amersfoort, Holland, where he studied the carillon, viola da gamba and organ. Maynard was granted a faculty development leave from Tech, and his wife Gladys was permitted to accompany him for further study of the harpsichord.

Maynard's main interest was the study of the carillon, so he attended "Nederlandse Beiaardschool" (Netherland's Carillon School) under the instruction of the school's founder, Leen't Hart. "Nederlandse Beiaardschool" is one of the only three carillon schools in the world, the other two being in Belgium and France. He chose the Dutch school because, geographically speaking, it was the one location where he could obtain excellent instruction in all three instruments. This is also where the carillon originated.

JUDSON MAYNARD

Upon completion of his studies, Maynard was awarded the Final Diploma of Carillon Playing, which is the equivalent to an advanced performance degree. Only seven Americans have been awarded such a degree from this school. In fact, so rare is the art of carillon playing in the western hemisphere that only two full-time positions of carillonneurs (carillon-players) exist on the North American continent: one in Ottawa, Canada and one in Lake Wales, Fla.

Lubbock's one and only carillon is located in the west tower of the Administration Building on the Tech campus. The rare instrument was installed in May 1976 by Harry van Bergen, the American reresentative for van Bergen Bell foundries in Helligeriee, Holland. Some of the bells were cast in Holland and some in France.

The carillon was invented by the Dutch hundreds of years ago, its purpose being to inform the villagers of the time of day. The forerunner of the carillon, called the "voorslag," had only four bells, each bell sounding at a different pitch. Three bells would be struck by hand with a hammer-type instrument to serve as a little "prelude" to get the attention of the villagers. Then the fourth bell was struck repeatedly according to the hour. The four bells were collectively called the "Quadrillon," and it is from this word that the name carillon evolved. In 1510 a keyboard was added, which is in no way similar to the smooth, easily-depressed ivory keyboards of pianos and organs. The carillon keys are wooden pegs which must be played with the side of a fisted hand. It is actually the side knuckle of the little finger that receives the roughest treatment.

There are two methods of playing the carillon: the "baton clavier" method, which works manually and is used at Tech; and the "automatick," which is a programmed method. Maynard compares its mechanics to that of a giant music box.

Most Dutch towns have their own carillons which are owned by the city. The competition between the carillonneurs is very stiff, according to Maynard. Informal recitals are given periodically from the centrally located carillon. They are called Market Recitals because the villagers are able to listen while shopping in the open-air markets. The more formal recitals are called Evening Concerts, and include printed programs.

Maynard gave carillon concerts in Holstebro, Varde and Svendorb, Denmark, as well as in Munich, Germany at the Olympic Grounds; in Alkmaar, Holland, and in Amersfoort where he lived. Organ concerts were given in Amersfoort, Munich, and Bergisch-Gladbach, Germany.

There has been quite a bit of contemporary music composed for the carillon, some of which was written by Tech music professor Mary Jeanne van Appledown. Maynard performed her "Suite for Carillon" at most of his concerts, which she dedicated to him. Performed at one of his concerts were some pieces that every Texas carillonneur should have in his repertoire: "The Eyes Of Texas Are Upon You," "The Yellow Rose Of Texas," "The Streets Of Laredo," and "Deep In The Heart Of Texas."

Maynard will give his next carillon concert at Tech at 8:15 p.m. August 12. He says the best places from which to hear, are the courtyard between the wings of the Administration Building, the steps of the Chemistry Building or Memorial Circle.

Robert Hays, the handsome young star of ABC's "Angie," can really relate to the "poor, starving actor" stories of show business. While working at the Old Globe Theatre in San Diego, the aspiring actor was paid $45 a week — $2 less than he would have received through unemployment insurance — for nine shows a week.

Screen Newcomer Sigourney Weaver

She Fights Aliens, But She Won't Watch Them

By WILLIAM D. KERNS
A-J Entertainment Editor

DALLAS — The role of Ripley, warrant officer on the commercial space-tug Nostromo in Ridley Scott's outer space thriller "Alien," was originally conceived as a male character. That an actress — any actress — could step into such a role and shape it into a believable person would be indicative of talent. So consider the surprises offered by Sigourney Weaver, a 29-year-old stage actress with no prior film experience: Not only does her wonderful performance add to the gritty fear and tension in a genre in which the real star is the director, but she also winds up being compared by the national press to Jane Fonda. And not just because of the slight physical resemblance.

Not bad for your first movie.

But Miss Weaver appears to be taking it all in stride, playing down her own contributions and appearing truly amazed at the excellent critical reception to her performance. In an interview in a Dallas hotel conference room, the actress was completely at ease as she chatted about her parents, horror films and bad-tempered cats — but began by explaining why she chose to make her film debut in this particular chiller.

"Mainly because I'm from the theater," she began, "I was concerned because this is obviously an action script. And I must say this wasn't the picture I foresaw myself as doing. I have always played a lot of character roles, and I expected to work my way up through character roles. But here I was offered the part of a heroine and I thought, well, this is what's offered. But also, I was challenged by the character because I felt she walked a very thin edge.

"You see, I feel some people think Ripley knows what she's doing the whole time. But I don't think anyone aboard that ship knows what they're doing. They're just trying to cope the best they can. And Ripley is forced to go from being someone very rational who works by the rules to someone who has to work by instinct while trying to survive. That adjustment for her is a very difficult one, and appealed to me as an actress because I think that's very hard to do."

Miss Weaver was but one of several actresses interviewed for the part, and had to meet separately with producers Gordon Carroll and David Giler, director Ridley Scott and 20th Century-Fox president Alan Ladd before even being invited to fly to London for a screentest. She comes from a show business family — her mother is an actress and her father is Sylvester Pat Weaver, president of NBC-TV during the 1950s and creator of both the "Today" and "Tonight" programs — but has concentrated entirely on the stage, even to the point of turning down offers for television series.

She said, "I think that one reason you (an actress) go into the business is to try a variety of different things. One of the reasons I never moved to California to accept one of those TV offers is that that can become a very demanding sort of 9-to-5 job. It can tie you up day to day, week to week or, if you're successful, year to year. Mind you, I have nothing against television. I think because my father is in the business that I was able to grow up and see it all as a wonderful opportunity. I also have no illusions about the business. I've seen my parents' frustrations, and that has been an asset.

"Really, I feel lucky not so much that I got the role in 'Alien,' but that I was privileged to begin working in films with such a high level of surrounding talent, intelligence and taste. In the wrong hands, 'Alien' could have been just another potboiler. But it turned into an amazing movie. It seems like a classic to me, a classic of its kind."

And though there were times when she and Ridley Scott disagreed on technique — "He tried to keep me in the mood once by putting an 'alien head' on a stagehand off camera, but I told him it would be easier for me to react if there was nothing there" — she insists the best portion of the film is the final half hour. "At least that's my favorite part," she said, "because that was just me and Ridley communicating, making it work."

Scott, of course, has already been noted for his rather unorthodox preference for surprising his actors. For example, no one in the cast knew to what extent gore would be used in the so-called "mess scene," the one in which the tiny alien emerges rather graphically from John Hurt's chest. Asked for her reaction to the scene, Miss Weaver said, "We did that scene for two full days. And I must say that everytime we did it, it wasn't so much the blood or the gore, but just seeing that happen to another human being that was so awful. The special effects were so good and John was so convincing that we didn't have to act. Everything was so real, so agonizing.

"And the reality extended to everything else in the movie. My gun, the flamethrower weapon, weighed a ton. It was so heavy that it forced me to change the way I moved. I also had to be given lessons, field training, in how to operate the weapon because there was another scene (later edited out of the picture) where I had to use the flamethrower. The first time you use it, it's terrifying because of the heat and the recoil. But then, I started to like it..."

What she didn't especially like was working with Jones, the ship's cat.

"God, what a bad-tempered cat," she recalled. "I mean, I really like cats. And I think that helped me, because I had to film a lot more scenes with the cat which wound up being cut out of the picture." Giving the animal its due, though, she reflected, "But I guess if you were a cat working in that situation, you'd also get pretty ill tempered. Because there was all this incense around. And all this smoke coming from the same sort of incense they use in the Catholic church. And you know the scene where we think we've cornered the alien, but it's the cat? Well, the cat had to literally be thrown out of that thing and then caught in a net.

"After doing one take, that cat was never ready to go back on the set again."

(After the interview I showed Miss Weaver a publicity still photograph of her smiling while holding the cat, and she reacted with amazement, "My God, where did you get that picture? I've never seen it. I look like Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." She also revealed that Jones had a feline understudy.)

Many are already calling Sigourney Weaver a name to watch, a future star, but you can bet such declarations have a few editors tugging at gray hairs. The spelling is bound to wind up being butchered occassionally. Asked how she got such a unique name, she said, "It's pronounced Si-gore-nee, and I just adopted the name for myself when I was 14. I took it from a book. What's interesting is that my family all has strange names like Desiree, Sylvester and Tragen. And they named me Susan.

"How they thought they could get away with just naming me Susan is still beyond me.

"Looking back, I guess taking a new name was a pretty strange thing to do. I really did it as a lark, actually just to keep people from calling me Weaver since I was at an all girls school. But the name stuck."

The 5'10" actress also says she's in no hurry to rush into more movies. She's not even reading any current scripts, hoping instead to return to the stage and "get back to some Shakespeare." She had only just learned the possibilities of an "Alien" sequel when we spoke, commenting that she'd "had no time to really think about it, but my participation would certainly depend on whether Ridley was going to direct again." And then, in one of her more surprising statements, she revealed that she doesn't even like horror or science fiction movies — and never has.

Indeed, this actress who helps put us on the edge of our seats by battling a hideous, murdering creature from another world actually said, "I hate scary movies. In fact, I can't stand them. And it's not even just the good ones which scare me. It's the ones where you open a drawer and there's a hairy hand inside. That's the kind of level where I get afraid."

Consider it. If Sigourney Weaver had not been offered the starring role in "Alien," certainly one of the most frightening films ever made, she most likely would have purposely avoided seeing the movie.

Stallone Shared Hard Times With Canine Co-Star — Butkus

NEW YORK (Special) — When a person chooses a cavernous, crochety-looking canine for a traveling companion on a cross-country flight, traditionalists aboard might feel some explanation is in order. Sylvester Stallone was happy to oblige as he and his 140-pound bull mastiff settled down for a trip to Philadelphia. He was headed there to film "Rocky II," the sequel to the 1976 Academy Award-winning movie that thrust him from unemployment to interntional acclaim.

"Butkus and I had some lean years together," recalled Stallone, petting the affable dog whose aircare cost a small fortune. "I kept promising him that if we made the big time, he'd always go first class."

In addition to Stallone, Talia Shire, Burt Young, Carl Weathers and Burgess Meredith, Butkus also reprises his role in "Rocky II," a Robert Chartoff-Irwin Winkler Production for United Artists release. "In the original 'Rocky' script," Stallone reminisces, "Rocky owned a scruffy 'fleabag.'

"I was surprised that a scruffy animal 'fleabag,' trained and for rent to movie companies, did not come cheaply. Since our budget didn't allow for even a feeble hamster, much less a trained dog, the producers asked if I happened to have a beast of my own. I responded that I had a thing called 'Butkus,' a throwback to the Stone Age. I talked the proposition over with 'Butkus,' who promised to give it his best shot. Unfortunately, a few days before his acting debut he took a nap on a wet carpet and one side of him turned red. We couldn't use a two-toned beige and red dog, but fortunately he finally came clean.

"We got him when he was about six weeks old," the filmmaker continues. "He was a ferocious looking little devil and when he ate his security blanket we decided to name him after Dick Butkus, possibly the fiercest football player in history. We became very well acquainted, because in addition to me, there was my wife Sasha and another giant dog, all living in the third tiniest apartment in New York."

"Since then, Butkus has done something mind-boggling an average of once a month. He has a penchant for attacking giant bottles of spring water. He onc broke one and damaged two apartments in the process. I think it's the blue cap on the top he's after. We don't dare leave him alone with bottled water."

Stallone remembers, "On our way from New York to Hollywood to seek our fortune, the heat became so intense that we had to pack old 'Butkus' in cracked ice for two days. I promised him that if we survived, he'd someday get treated like a king. But I almost changed my mind when he practically got us killed in a wild life preserve. An exceptionally large ostrich decided to peck him to death and attacked the car. Rather than being diplomatic, Butkus jumped out in a counter attack and I practically got slaughtered trying to separate them. By the time I got him back in the old car for a quick escape, the thing stalled and a herd of unhappy buffalo descended and attempted to upset the car with us in it. In the middle of all that confusion, Butkus jumped in the back seat and went to sleep.

"The most incredible thing he ever did, and there are witnesses who'll back me up, is related to his TV addiction. I pointed a finger at him and went 'bang bang.' On cue, he did one of the best death scenes in history. One leg folded, then another. He finally slumped to the floor, did a little writhing, then rolled on his back and stuck all four legs straight in the air. It was brilliant!"

Butkus, who acts under his own name, serves as a sounding-board for boxer Rocky Balboa's hopes and fears in "Rocky II." Stallone claims he has used the dog for the same purpose during difficult times. "Rocky II" was produced by Irwin Winkler and Robert Chartoff, with Gene Kirkwood as executive producer. Both the "Rocky" films were made for release by United Artists.

"Rocky II" is currently playing at Showplace Six jn Lubbock.

The setting for this novel is the world of professional basketball.

"Peso Pete" Pendleton, star cager for the New York Heroes, gets a desperate call from the eccentric old woman owner of the Ebony Pharaohs. The Pharaohs are an exhibition team that relies more on antics than on playing skill.

The woman's call concerns her star player, "Muley" Bishop. Muley, blacklisted for years from the pros for his confessed involvement with a gambler, has suddenly declared his innocence. He wants Pete to help him get the blacklist lifted so he can join the Heroes.

Pete takes the case up, and though it's a struggle all the way, he finally gets his man into the league just in time to replace an injured Heroes player. Along the way, the reason for Muley's false confession is uncovered, and a brutal and vulgar story it is.

Pete would come off as the heartwarming hero of this story except for one thing — Muley Bishop is such a mean, arrogant ingrate that he doesn't deserve anyone's help or sympathy. Pete the Hero looks more like Pete the Fool.

Ruth, Pete's wife, is a bit of a trial, too. She is an icicle of a woman who spends most of her time smoking cigarettes, chewing gum and dropping a "ho ho ho" in the middle of nearly every sentence. Also, nearly everyone in this tale has a corny nickname — "Pop," "Punch," "Mousie" — yet Pete's dog is named Roger!

"The Power Forward" is not a pleasant tale, and its appeal seems limited to those who like action and brutality but care little about finesse.

YOU DON'T HAVE TO BE IN WHO'S WHO TO KNOW WHAT'S WHAT. By Sam Levenson. Simon and Schuster. $9.95.

"What," asks comedian Sam Levenson, "did I learn you?"

Well, Sam, you learned us that you don't have to be a big shot to be a big shot.

Levenson's "You Don't Have to Be in Who's Who to Know What's What" is a collection of the witty sayings of Mr., Mrs., and Ms. Anonymous — the folks who write cute things — no dirty stuff — on restroom walls, or just plain folk who pass on bright comments about life.

It ain't Aristophanes, Levenson notes. It ain't even Swift, or Wilde, or Voltaire. Not even Twain or Shaw.

But it is brilliant.

From it all — Levenson's been collecting this stuff since his college days — he determines:

— "Marriage is on the critical list."

— "The American female is testing out the possibility of being a woman, a wife, a mother and a careerest all at the same time. And it is not easy."

— The voice of youth "is changing earlier than it used to."

— "Twentieth-century man expects to live longer than his ancestors, who unfortunately had no coverage against sudden recall by their Maker."

— "Some people call on God as the Superspecialist."

— "In our thriving society, crime thrives."

All in all, it's delightful. Indeed, Mr., Mrs., and Ms. Anonymous know what's what.

— ALLAN R. BRUCE, UPI

CALYPSO. By Ed McBain. Viking. 217 Pages. $8.95.

"Calypso" is not a novel for the faint of heart.

It's brutal, gory, sadistic. However, it's also very well-written — an Ed McBain trademark — contains some excellent verbal portraits, and is laced throughout with thoughtful social comment.

The story deals with murder — one to start with, then another, and several more by the end of this terse novel. Calypso singer George Chadderton has just finished a gig in a club and is walking to his car in the early morning hours when he is shot dead.

Why?

It's up to detectives Steve Carella and Meyer Meyer of the 87th Precinct to find out. But the two officers have barely finished examining Chadderton's body when a prostitute named C.J. Hawkins is cut down by bullets from the same gun.

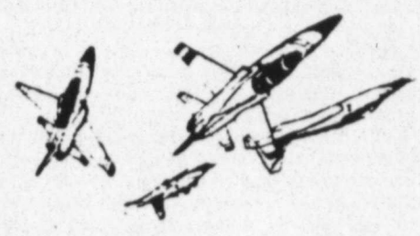

The hunt for the killer is on and McBain sparkles as he describes in minute but fascinating detail the police procedures Meyer and Carella use as they set out after the murderer. Every lead, no matter how insignificant it may seem, is followed up, old friends of the victims — in some cases people who haven't seen them in years — are contacted by the officers, and step by painstaking step the hunters get closer and closer to the killer.

Jayaseelan Violinists In Recital

The Texas Tech University music department will sponsor a rather unique violin recital at 8:15 p.m. Monday in the campus Recital Hall. The recital will feature the talents of Suneetha, Chitra, Nirmal and Mithran Jayaseelan, the four children of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Jayaseelan of 3818 30th Street.

There is no admission charge.

The Jayaseelans moved to Lubbock from Madras, India in 1969. All four children are violin students of Virginia Kellogg, and each began taking violin lessons in the sixth grade. Their musical influence no doubt derives from their grandfather and aunt, both of whom played violin in India, and from their mother's playing the vena, a stringed lap instrument similar to the citar.

Suneetha is a 17-year-old sophomore at Texas Tech University, studying microbiology. A graduate of Coronado High School, she is involved with chamber music at Tech and is also a member of the Texas Tech Symphony, Lubbock Symphony Orchestra and Roswell Symphony Orchestra.

Sixteen-year-old Chitra just graduated from Coronado and will enter Tech as a music education major in the fall. She was president of Coronado's orchestra and a member of the Texas All-State Orchestra.

Both Chitra and Suneetha also perform the native Indian dance called the Bharathanatyam. They wear colorful costumes while dancing to the accompaniment of the citar and rhythm section. The dance is expressed by movement of the hands and tapping of the feet.

Nirmal is a 15-year-old junior at Coronado and a member of the school orchestra. He recently attended the Summer String Quartet Program at Tech.

Thirteen-year-old Mithran will be in the eighth grade at Wilson Junior High School; he is also in the school orchestra.

Monday's recital will consist of a variety of string quartets, trios, duets and solos. The Jayaseelans will be assisted by pianist Michael Dunning, violinist Liz Fresinger and guitarist Larry Hammett.

Nussbaum On Books

MAURA. By Marilyn Granbeck. 508 pages. Jove. $2.50

A half dozen names have risen to the top as the cream of the practitioners of historical romance since the genre came to full flower five or six years ago. Among these names certainly must be included that of Marilyn Granbeck. "Maura" is the present outstanding example of the work she is doing in the field.

Granbeck skilfully avoids the minefields inherent in this type of story. In books so lengthy that a multitude of subplots is a must, she joins the seams so craftily that no lumpy bulges are visible. And in regard to the present-day requirement tht the heroine must be portrayed as a Christian young lady not too far removed from female animal, Granbeck makes believable a situation Thomas Castain never had to face.

Adding to the tale's believability is the wealth of historical incident and detail stirred into the mix. Did you ever wonder where the phrase "coppering a bet" came from? Granbeck tells you, as she tells you about the high living and the low life of New York City, Pittsburgh, and the Mississippi River valley during the 1949-50 period.

Believability is additionally helped by Granbeck's presenting her fast-paced story in a writing style suitable to the period. Gobs of action, related with wit and humor, spin the reader along effortlessly.

"Maura" is a winner.

'Hunter' To Star Steve McQueen

NEW YORK (Special) — Buzz Kulik has been signed to direct "The Hunter," starring Steve McQueen.

Based on the novel, "The Bounty Hunter," by Christopher Keane, the screenplay tells the true life story of the modern-day bounty hunter Ralph Thorson.

The Rastar/Mort Engelberg production is scheduled to begin shooting on location in Chicago on Sept. 10. Mort Engelberg is the producer.

Kulik's credits include the highly successful television film "Brian's Song" and "The Lindbergh Kidnapping Case," and most recently two NBC mini-series, "Ziegfeld: The Man and His Women" and "From Here To Eternity."

Jim Dale Jousts With 'Oddball'

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) — When British actor Jim Dale takes on a new role, whether it is in movies, TV or stage, he accepts all the challenges and responsibilities that go with it. Some even above and beyond the call of duty.

Currently starring as the villainous Sir Mordred in Walt Disney Productions' new comedy fantasy "Unidentified Flying Oddball," now playing at the Cinema West in Lubbock, Dale saw that the script involved him in a jousting sequence — so he called on a jousting expert and learned the finer points of the ancient sport even before the cameras started to turn.

"I learned to be a fairly good horseman for the western, 'Hot Lead and Cold Feet,' I recently did for Disney," he recalls. "That was the first hurdle. Now the big problem was to stay in the saddle when your opponent comes riding head-on at top speed with his lance pointed directly at you. Balance is another important factor, which I learned walking a tight rope for another film. After I had mastered that stunt and performed it for the camera over a steep gorge. I sadly learned when I saw the film that the cutter had omitted the long shots and concentrated on those from the knees up. I could have walked a board and saved myself a lot of trouble."

Not easily discouraged, Dale perfected all his joust and then went on to learn to duel with a broad sword.

"We had a top stunt coordinator on the film and he knew every technique in the art of swordplay. My disadvantage was a magnetic sword that attracted metal of every size and shape. By the time I got to the end of the fight, my sword was so loaded down with goblets, gauntlets, cutlery and utensils I could hardly lift the darn thing, let alone keep my balance," he explains.

One of the top physical comedians in show business, Dale does not rely solely on facial expression, delivery of lines and timing to get the laughs. He uses his whole body. When he started out as a novice comedian, he worked a couple of falls into his act and became a comedy tumbler.

Through the years, he has worked to perfect his falls and stunts and is filled with satisfaction when he can add a new one to his repertoire.

"An actor, and particularly a comedian, should realize that the whole body is important in creating a characterization. The way the actor walks, sits and moves should convey to the audience something more about the character being portrayed," Dale adds. "Just speaking the lines is not enough."

"Unidentified Flying Oddball" also stars Dennis Dugan, Ron Moody and Kenneth More as King Arthur. Russ Mayberry directed from a screenplay by Don Tait.

IMPROV FADES

George Memmoli, who co-stars as Earl, the overweight studio engineer on NBC-TV's comedy "Hello, Larry," founded The Ace Trucking Company improvisational comedy team. "I think improv has faded a bit," said Memmoli, who left the five-member group in 1975.

WB, Tokofsky Land Comedy

BURBANK, Calif. (Special) — Warner Bros. and producer Jerry Tokofsky have concluded a deal for the development of the contemporary comedy, "The Girl That He Marries."

Based on the novel of the same name by Rhoda Lerman, "The Girl That He Marries" is the ironic story of a young woman who gets the man she wants, only to discover in short order that he wasn't the man she really wanted, after all. The book will be adapated to the screen by Susan Silver.

Tokofsky, a former vice president of production for Columbia Pictures, coproduced the outragious comedy, "Where's Poppa?" as well as "Born To Win." He is currently head of Jerry Tokofsky Productions, a company active in both television and motion picture development.

"The Girl That He Marries" marks Silver's feature film screenwriting debut. Among her television writing credits are numerous segments of "The Mary Tyler Moore Show," "The Bob Newhart Show" and "Maude," for which she wrote the premiere episode, as well as several movies for television. She has also written the book for the upcoming Broadway musical play, "Juliet Of The Spirits," based on the famed Fellini film.

Lerman, who has been active in the women's movement over the years, has writen three novels, the second being "The Girl That He Marries." Her first, "Call Me Ishtar," is currently being developed by Tokofsky as a series of three two-hour television films. "Eleanor," her third book, is a fictionalized autobiography of Eleanor Roosevelt. Her film, "Soul Of Iron," produced by Norman Lear, was the theme for the International Women's Year.

But his next picture will involve many more interior shots and "more studio work than my last three pictures combined."

That new film will be titled "Oh Heavenly Dog," and will star Chevy Chase and Benji. Chase is cast as a man who is killed and then returns to Earth in the form of a dog ("there are no other bodies available") to solve his own murder. Camp seems to honestly enjoy the prospect of casting Benji in a "new role," saying, "Benji will play a part, just like any other actor. It's a natural extension of his talent."

Asked if he plans to stop making Benji-as-Benji movies, the filmmaker replied, "I won't say unequivocally that there will never be another, but that's probably true. You eat enough steak, you get tired of it. . .We're leaning toward more adult comedy now."

Indeed, Joe Camp has recognized the barriers and is trying to find solutions. He's made four films, all extremely entertaining, and one can only hope "The Double McGuffin" will bring back the audience that lost its faith in a rating. As he put it, "It's hard to sell a picture that doesn't have a hook like a $25 million budget, a best selling book or big stars. We're finding now that you really do need stars, and that's why we're leaning that way with 'Oh Heavenly Dog.' The kids here in 'The Double McGuffin' are all super, but nobody knows who they are."

Not yet anyway. Word-of-mouth publicity can save even bad pictures, and it's only natural to assume that word-of-mouth will bring the family crowd back in to catch a well-made mystery like "The Double McGuffin." Because no matter what the rating, G or PG, Joe Camp is still sticking to his goal of providing an entertaining movie which leaves viewers exiting the theater with good feelings. And no matter how much society changes, no matter how jaded or depressed we as a people become, no matter if we run out of gasoline tomorrow and have to start walking to the theaters, there will always be room for movies of this nature. We need them.

But as Camp will no doubt testify: the hard part isn't making good family movies, it's getting families to go see them.

Each person viewing the Lubbock Art Association's 1979 Invitational Membership Show was asked to vote for his favorite three artists. According to LAA officials, "this was done with the hope that it would encourage the average viewer to take a more serious look at the entries and view them with a more critical eye." In any case, the results have been tabulated and the public's favorite representatives in this particular show are Toni Arnett, Marcia Standefer and Judy Lee.

Don't make the mistake of thinking everyone in California loves rock and roll. A Patti Smith Group concert scheduled for the Starlight Bowl in Burbank was just one of a series of concerts cancelled by the Burbank City Council. It seems Burbank mayor Dan Remy was quoted in the Los Angeles Times as saying, "Rock draws an undesirable crowd to the city. We just don't need that." A tape of the June 26 Burbank City Council meeting — during which concerts by Miss Smith, Todd Rundgren, Blue Oyster Cult, Jackson Browne and Roxy Music were disapproved — saw councilman James Richmond state: "In looking at some of the police backup, I note that the police department has suggested that one of the groups that was talked about tonight would draw mostly a homosexual crowd. In fact, there are two such groups that would draw, per the police reports, a homosexual group.

"I really don't think that's what we want in town. The others would draw a long list of anti-nuclear demonstrators, dopers, hard rock. It's an incredible combination of horrors."

Patti Smith issued a lengthy reply, which included the statement: "I do not wish to be labeled as anything except as an American artist and allowed to present my work to whomever wishes to come and experience it."

Parker Follows 'Express' With 'Fame'

Alan Marshall and David De Silva are producing "Fame" from an original screenplay by Christopher Gore. Set in Manhattan's High School for Performing Arts, it follows the lives of eight kids trying to make it in the sometimes painful professions of Music, Drama and Dance.

Alan Parker has been looking for his talented young cast for four months and of the thousands considered, the eight leading roles went to Irene Cara, Lee Curreri, Laura Dean, Antonia Franceschi, Paul McCrane, Barry Miller, Gene Ray and Maureen Teefy.

Louis Falco, who heads the celebrated Falco Dance Company in New York, will make his debut as a film choreographer in "Fame." Michael Gore is serving as musical coordinator.

Shooting entirely on New York locations, "Fame" will be Alan Parker's first film made in America and is his first film since last year's "Midnight Express," which received six Academy Award nominations as well as winning six Golden Globes, including Best Picture.

"Fame" is the third collaboration of director Parker, producer Marshall, director of photography Michael Seresin and production designer Geoffrey Kirkland. Their previous films are "Midnight Express" and "Bugsy Malone."

The MGM presentation of "Fame" will be released in the United States and Canada by United Artists, and throughout the rest of the world by Cinema International Corporation.

Art Talk: By La Wanda Murfee

One of the pleasures of being associated with artists is the frequency of visits to other artist's studios or working areas. Their personal think tanks are as varied as the work that comes out of them.

Although New York and California are touted as the art centers of the western world, artists live and work in many environments. Regardless of location, some artists with glamourous studios produce only nominal work while less pretentious sites inspire great works of art.

After recognizing some portraits in one western gallery-studio, where the artist worked in the rear of the commercial establishment, I developed a warm friendship with the young artist, and I watched his talent refine. Unfortunately the gallery was unsuccessful, the painter moved and I lost track of him. Several years later, I learned he lived in a tumbling down hut at the edge of the mountains. After driving over rugged, twisting roads, I found the house. The path to the door led over a neglected irrigation ditch through a gate made of sticks and rope. Goats and chickens pecked about the yard.

A handsome young man, now stooped and full bearded, answered the door. Before I could fully see him, I caught a glimpse of the sunlight on the opposite wall. There hung a most magnificient full length portrait of a mother and child, equal to museum quality. I could hardly speak, so great was my overwhelming reaction to the painting. My eyes and heart still on the painting, we stepped inside, where I had a chance to look around. The handsome antique framed painting was out of place among the adobes that had melted into the floor. The resulting hole in a corner was covered with a tarp, and a soiled sheepskin lay over an old chaise lounge. Frames and paintings were stacked around the room. After a few words, we literally ducked through a door into the adjoining room. A projector was set up in the doorway, and we had to crawl under it. The second room was hung with small paintings, mostly unframed, that fairly glowed in the dimmer light. A black cast iron cookstove dominated the room, minimizing the only new item, a superb new easel, built of polised hardwood. Iron pots hung from the vegas while broken dished lay upon open shelves. A round table, covered with a worn oilcloth, looked inviting with the many art books tossed carelessly around. This was the main working and living area.

The artist was such a recluse he did no promotion of his own work, but had made arrangements with a friend who lived with him, to market the paintings. The artist's one desire was to paint. He did not care for materialism or comforts. Money meant nothing to him, except as a means of exchange for paint.

The artist has grown into an important painter in the Southwest. His paintings are in'demand by the most sophisticated buyers, and his work is marketed through several outstanding galleries.

The artist remains isolated, will not attend his own shows, receives few visitors. His paintings will leave his identity among art lovers for a long time.

Singer Warnes Aids Cohen LP

By MARY CAMPBELL
AP Newsfeatures Writer

"As long as there is music that stirs the heart and pleases the imagination, then I'm happy," says singer Jennifer Warnes.

She says that, during an interview occasioned by her new Arista album, "Shot Through the Heart," not about her own music but about an upcoming Leonard Cohen album for which she sang background vocals.

"It's the highest form of song writing I've heard in ages. It's so pleasing to be part of something that is that good. I couldn't care less about disco after working on stuff like that."

The single from Miss Warnes' new album is "I Know a Heartache When I See One."

She would like to be touring to promote the new records but can't afford it. James Taylor invited her to be the opening act on his tour thsummer. She had enough time to put a band together but says Clive Davis, president of Aristuldn't advance the money to do that.

"It is something I have to face," she says. "that e thing I Do best — perform — is not now possible. I know if another offer comes up, it is not possible. It's a shock to my artistic heart. If I sell platinum, there is money to spend on those things. At this pointn there is not."

The "Shot Through the Heart" album, whc has three by Miss Warnes among its 10 songs, has been called bittersweet by some. "I Think it's more angry," she says. "It says 'ouch' real loud. I Had to write 'Shot Through Thert' and I had to sing 'Don't Make Me Over' the way I did rather than sweetly.

"It was just a point in my life. I lived with e fw four years. He was driving a cab. He was murdered. It put me in a state of mind where ft if I didn't make some intense, aggressive move, I wouldn't get up out of my stupor. The last album, two years ago, was an attempt to siain. This album is more of an expression of defiance against whatever is going to go wrong next.

"I think the next album is going lotlo frand less tied to expressions of anger. That has been done. I have a lot of softer, more joyful, more exploratory tunes.

"I'v lot more space for myself by velling. I can still write and sing. I'm still alive. Now I have a bit more control. There is a bit more room to do what I want.

"Albums for me are like stages in a certain kind of internal growth. I'm just trying to stay open and let it come out, whatever it is, and express it with as much craft as I can."

The next album, her sixth, will have more songs by the singer, because she is more interested in writing than she has been before. And the next one should be cut faster than usual.

"I enjoy recording. Too much," she says. "I just don't want to leave the studio. My ideas take a long time to perfect in the studio.

"But I've got Andrew Gold now and he is real fast. He played a lot of instruments on this album. He is sympathetic to my musical ideas and he can translate what I'm thinking and execute it real fast."

'Serial' Cast Moves To San Francisco

HOLLYWOOD (Special) — "The Serial," which has been shooting in Los Angeles for the past five weeks, has moved to the San Francisco Bay area where the company will be filming on-location for the next two weeks.

Martin Mull, Tuesday Weld, Sally Kellerman, Christopher Lee, Bill Macy, Peter Bonerz and Tom Smothers star in the satirical comedy based on Cyra McFadden's best-selling book about life in Marin County.

Sidney Beckerman is producing the film for Paramount Pictures, with Bill Persky directing from a screenplay by Rich Eustis and Michael Elias. The production is running exactly on schedule, with one more week of filming scheduled to take place at Paramount Studios following the locations in northern California.

Toy Manufacturer Not Playing Games

F BUSINESS

Lubbock Avalanche-Journal
Sunday Morning, July 29, 1979

EAST AURORA, N.Y. (AP) — They're not playing games at Fisher-Price Toys.

"We object to the dictionary definition of toys as something frivolous," said Henry H. Coords, president of the company, which is headquartered 20 miles southeast of Buffalo in upstate New York. "Toys are a very serious business."

Still, the style of business for Fisher-Price, the third-largest American toymaker and perhaps the most recognizable name in the infant and preschool toy market, is not exactly staid and somber.

Miss Piggy watches over top management meetings in the boardroom. President Coords demonstrates a toy kitchen set for visitors. And, in the research and development department, engineers watch through one-way mirrors as children play with dolls.

The company, which sells no toy guns, refuses to compete with "Star Wars" or "Superman" or other flashy fads, and does no television advertising aimed at children, expects its growing sales to reach $300 million this year.

Together with a small subsidiary, Fisher-Price brought in about $33 million in operating income in 1978 for The Quaker Oats Co., their parent company. The toy division, purchased by Quaker in 1969, now has plants in Mexico, Europe, Kentucky and western New York.

Fisher-Price, which will celebrate its 50th anniversary next year, has a reputation for producing "educational" toys, another definition objected to by Coords.

"We don't claim that," he said. "We think all toys are educational."

Coords calls toys a "staple product" for families with children. In that market, Fisher-Price has established itself as the leading company in products for infants and pre-school children.

"We sold four infants' toys for every baby born in the U.S. last year," Coords said.

The company is estimated to be third largest in sales of toys, behind the General Mills Creative Division and Mattel.

Fisher-Price clings to an image of wholesomeness, Coords said. It sells no toy weapons.

"We're non-violent throughout," Coords said. "There's so much to life that is pleasant."

Another area considered out of bounds for the company are dolls with sexual anatomy or biological functions.

"No genitals," Coords said. "Just love. Our dolls don't wet or spit up or do other things."

The company's full line of toys, which range from rings and balls to toy cars and buses to record players, includes just a single teddy bear.

The line, though, does include a version of one of the original toys produced by co-founders Herman G. Fisher, a former employee of a toys and games manufacturer in Churchville, N.Y., and Irving L. Price, a retired employee of a variety store company.

The third founder was Helen M. Schelle, former operator of a toy shop in Binghamton, N.Y.

The surviving toy is a pull-along wooden dog. Throughout the years, the animal's appearance has become friendlier, but the design remains nearly the same.

The three founded the company in East Aurora in 1930. Coords was hired as president in 1966 after a 25-year career as a manager for Western Electric. Neither the Fisher nor Price families now have any financial interest in the company.

The company produces virtually all of its toys, purchasing only some small hand-painted plastic and ceramic items from abroad. None of its products is sold under other names.

About 40 percent of the company's sales are overseas — an estimated $100 million this year.

"We're probably the only toy company with a favorable balance of trade," he said.

Coords said the company is very discriminating in decisions about new toys, being particularly careful about licensed "name" toys.

"We don't want a flash in the pan, like the Evel Kneivel, Star Wars and Superman types," he said. "We've had some very nice options, but turned them down because they did not reflect our overall image."

A high-visibility product line for Fisher-Price is its line of Muppets dolls and puppets, including Kermit the Frog and the mock sex-siren Miss Piggy. A new motion picture starring the puppets has recently been released.

"Everybody loves Miss Piggy," said Coords.

But is she wholesome?

"Oh yes," Coords said. "She's sort of wholesome in a tongue-in-cheek sort of way.

"Nobody's going to model herself after Miss Piggy."

The heart of the toy business, Coords said, involves the development and testing of new products.

Fisher-Price has unique market research. The company operates a nursery school on the factory grounds. Children there play with prototypes of new toys while the company's child psychologist and others watch from behind a one-way mirror.

Burle Pettit

It's All In How You See It

THERE'S BEEN speculation all along that Dirk West always wanted to be mayor but only wanted to do it once. In fact, he has insisted every, heh-heh, STEP of the way that ol' Dirk would be a one-term burgomaster.

Over at traffic court the other day there were a bunch of people saying boy they sure hope so.

Maybe Dirk won't run again, but this bet here is that he will. West, mind you, is as shrewd of mind as he is of pen. Just look, for instance, at the power block — special interest factor, if you will — that he has quietly put together.

• • •

OUT THERE AWAITING his call are all those people whose lives he promised to spare, and did. I don't know offhand how many there are, but it's pretty easy to decipher: Take the number of registered voters who are licensed drivers, subtract the number of traffic fatalities, and you see how many votes are morally pledged. They are the Spared.

And, at last count, their number still held an edge over those whose houses were burgled over the same period. So Dirk probably could win, if the election were today, just on the strength of the Spared. And figuring that some of the Spared surely were also among the Burgled, a challenger to West's office would be hard-pressed to mount a special core of support.

• • •

SHOULD DIRK RUN again, I have to vote for him, even if I had a cousin in the race. I am among the Spared.

It happened to me while driving south on Avenue L, along about 28th Street, where Avenues L and K straddle a block of houses and an LPD radar unit.

Despite the fact I can never remember during my 19 years of local residency a single fatal accident at that intersection, it is a perfect place to save lives. By setting up there, the young patrolman can Spare people coming (Avenue K) and going (Avenue L).

• • •

AND, REALLY, THAT'S one of the few places a real live policeman is needed. Most streets in town have their speeds governed by traffic signals in sync only with Skylab and the whims of Idi Amin. I have waited as long as two cigarets for a left-turn arrow only to have it wink at me and leave before I could touch the throttle.

Somebody asked my neighbor if he is familiar with Lubbock. "Parts of it," he said. "I'm really familiar with areas near traffic lights. And the Civic Center. I know by heart."

He and Ken May watched it built while sitting on 8th Street, waiting for the signal at Avenue K to turn green.

• • •

TRAFFIC HEREABOUTS is about to take on an added array of confusion, if I may digress a bit. The yield signs that have always favored those on the frontage roads over those leaving Loop 289 will have their roles exactly reversed. It shouldn't make any difference, really, except to the guy who was in Defensive Driving class when it was announced and didn't see his paper.

Otherwise, everything is relative. Europe has proven that driving on the left is as safe as it is on the right. But I'd hate for them to suddenly change that here and I be the only one in town who didn't get the word.

• • •

DIRK JUST HAS to run again. Otherwise, many of us will have been Spared in vain. Those little yellow slips that verify our memberships would revert back to the same stigmatic stature as traffic tickets of yore. Only with even more bothersome results. With the new Municipal Court of Record, for instance, you no longer can hand it to your neigborhood attorney and say hey Bill, get this lost in there with those I gave you last week.

Then here comes your insurance company. Although it can't use a ticket as reason to go up on your rate, it is not without its own legal and painful recourse. About the second or third time you get caught break-necking down Avenue L at 34 mph, you are tossed headlong into that Calculated Risk Pool with the bashers and dragstrip dropouts.

• • •

ENDORSING CANDIDATES is left to someone heavier than I. So it's a personal appeal that I extend.

Run, Dirk. Heck with those grumblers over at traffic court. Even they may come to realize they've been Spared, not Shafted, and run right down and register.

If so, you'll win in a walk.

Which hereabouts may be the best way to move.

AKRON, Ohio (UPI) — Flooring engineers for a tire and rubber products manufacturer have found a new use for home hair dryers. They recommend the appliances for loosening damaged vinyl floor tiles.

CHICAGO (AP) — For white America, the leading business city is New York. For black America, it's Chicago.

This city, with the nation's second largest black population, "is the capital of black business in America," says Vernon E. Jordan, president of the National Urban League, which had its annual convention here this week.

"Chicago is the center for black business in the United States," says Earl G. Graves, publisher and editor of Black Enterprise magazine, which ranks black-owned businesses the way Fortune magazine lists the major corporations.

Although New York state is home to 18 of the businesses named in the Black Enterprise's top 100 list and two fewer than that are in Illinois, "In Chicago you have many of the biggest ones," Graves says.

According to the rankings, Chicago is headquarters for three of the nation's top 10 black businesses, the two largest banks and two of the top four insurance companies.

During talks at the Urban League meeting, and in interviews beforehand, black leaders cited several reasons for the strength of black business in Chicago.

Among them were a history of discrimination in Chicago that has required blacks to succeed independently of the white business establishment, a close-knit community of business leaders and success at competing with white businesses for a chunk of the black market.

A number of leaders say that one illustration of the way blacks have forged the beginnings of an economic base in Chicago was the reaction to the failure earlier this month of two black-owned banks, ranked 20th and 34th in Graves' listing.

Federal and state officials closed the two banks at the end of a Saturday's business. A few hours later, the two institutions were purchased by the Independence Bank of Chicago, the nation's largest black-owned bank. Monday the two bank offices were open for business as usual.

"That was black history. That was a first," Graves said at an Urban League meeting.

Alvin J. Boutte, president of Independence, said many black enterprises have begun during the past two decades, and "a period of consolidation" is to be expected as some succeed and some fail. He said he doesn't expect the two bank failures to cause the black community to lose confidence in his bank.

"It makes us stronger," said Boutte, who became president of the Independence bank in 1970 when it had about $11 million in assets, which have grown to about $76 million. "The reaction from the black community is that they want us to be stronger."

Graves said Chicago's record of discrimination — the city has sometimes been called the most segregated in the nation — has pushed blacks to build their businesses without much help from whites.

"It necessitated people setting up their own entities, being independent, being self-reliant," he said. "In some areas New York doesn't even begin to hold a light to Chicago."

That independence led to creations of a network of black business leaders.

Contractors Get Permits From City

Lubbock contractors have received permits from the city for $2,090,416 in future construction activity, with $853,500 of that amount classified as commercial projects, and $1,236,916 as residential programs.

The largest permit for the week went to H. A. Sessions for a 35,330-square-foot office-retail structure at 4601 50th St. The facility, which is underway, is expected to cost $600,000.

Sessions, an architect and owner of the building, indicated the Southwestern-style facility will be completed within approximately four months.

Both office space and retail quarters will be available for lease in the two-story building.

Claude Martin & Sons will add a new building to the Cumberland Presbyterian Church facility at 7701 Joliet Ave. for an estimated cost of $160,000. The work involves 5,598 square feet of floor space.

Hallmark Builders plans the construction of a service facility for U-Haul at 1613 34th St. Estimated cost for the 3,500-square-foot structure is $58,000.

In the residential category, First Manufactured Homes plans five new homes in the 2800- and 2900-blocks of 95th Street. Costs are expected to range from $34,000 to $34,600.

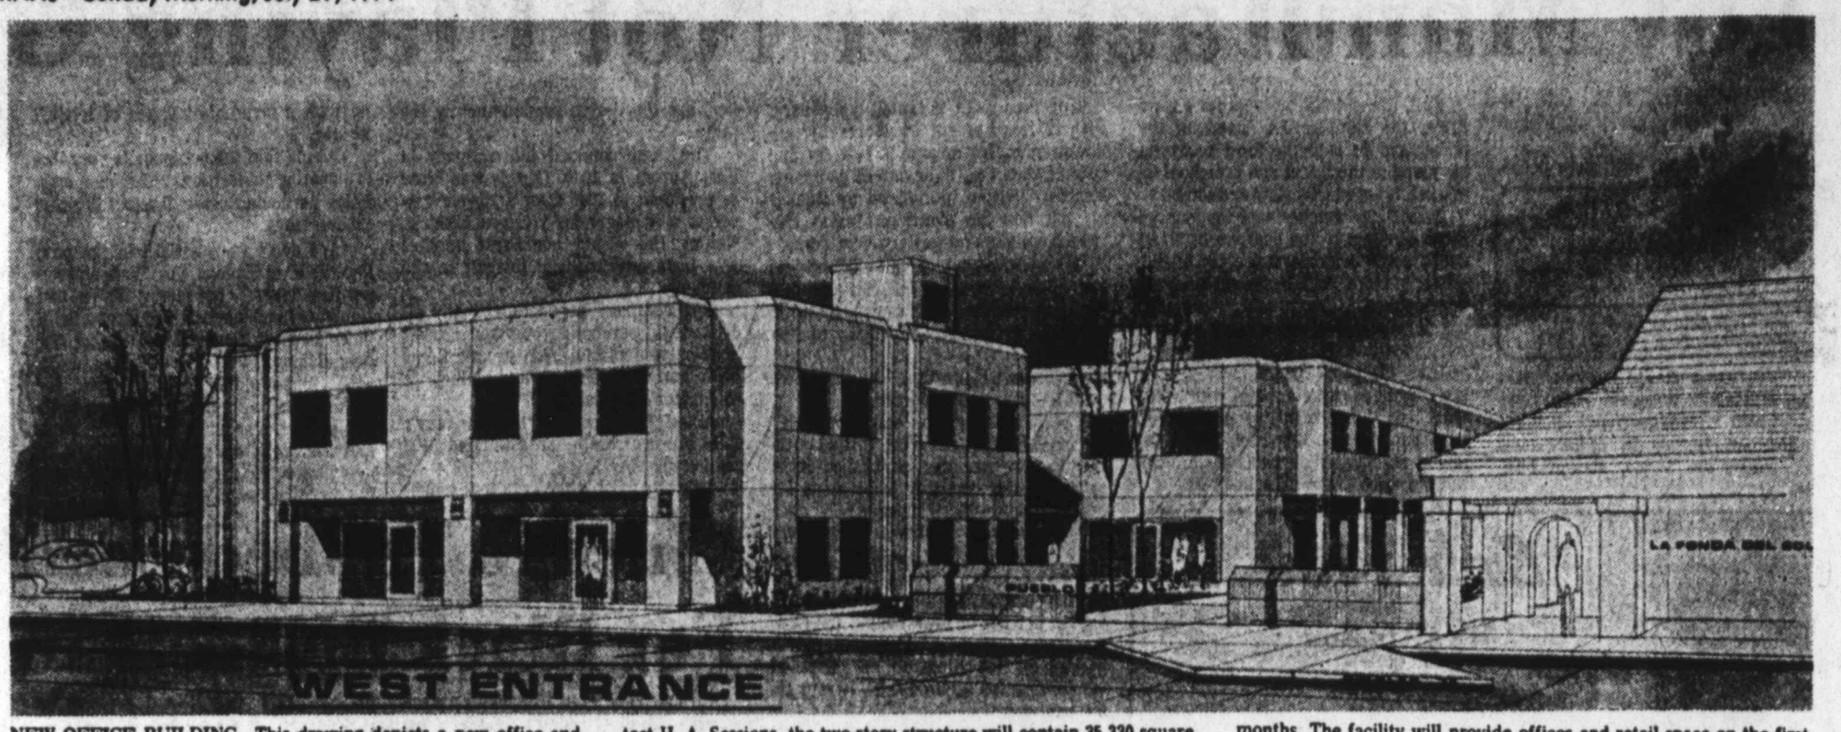

Stinsons Inc. plans four homes at the following locations: 2310 77th St., $47,500; 2308 77th St., $43,500; 7711 Ave. W, $44,000; and 7709 Ave. W, $44,000.

Day & Co. will build houses in the 6400-blocks of 37th and 38th streets at costs ranging from $40,000 to $41,000.

Two homes have been planned by Bob Dozier Homes at 4414 89th St. ($90,000), and 5406 94th St. ($54,950).

Other single-family homes, with estimated costs and contractors, include:

3616 93rd St., $75,000, Sam Reyes Construction; 802 N. Q Drive, $47,500, Lubbock Redi-Built Homes; 6016 13th St., $38,550, Personality Homes; 4422 88th St., $94,500, Meador Construction; 4912 79th St., $95,950, Campbell Building; 4809 61st St., $50,000, Kent Rabon; 5918 13th St., $47,000, C. W. Turner; 3243 91st St., $51,500, V. O. Murray.

NEW OFFICE BUILDING—This drawing depicts a new office and retail building under construction at 4601 50th St. Owned by Architect H. A. Sessions, the two-story structure will contain 35,330 square feet of floor space. It is expected to be completed within four months. The facility will provide offices and retail space on the first floor and office space on the second floor.

Local Sales Increased In First Quarter

Gross sales in Lubbock County increased more than 29 percent in the first quarter of 1979 compared to the same period last year, while gross taxable sales jumped a whopping 103 percent in the first three months of this year.

With 3,960 outlets reporting sales to Comptroller Bob Bullock, gross sales for the first quarter of 1979 totaled $735.6 million with $659 million in gross taxable sales reported.

During the first three months of 1978, 3,901 outlets reported gross sales of $569 million and gross taxable sales of $323.8 million.

The sale of wholesale goods accounted for more than 41 percent of the county's gross sales. Sales of $211.6 million in wholesale nondurable goods were reported, as well as $92 million in the sale of wholesale durable goods.

Those categories were followed in order of amount of sales by: various types of retail sales, $259.7 million; transportation, communication, electric, gas and sanitary services, $44.9 million; services, $20.6 million; construction, $15.76 million; agriculture, forestry and fishing, $1.1 million and finance, insurance and real estate, $168,000.

Gross sales in area counties reported for the first quarter of 1979 include: Andrews, $28.5 million; Bailey, $16.3 million; Briscoe, $7.9 million; Castro, $21.4 million; Childress, $14 million; Cochran $6.4 million; Cottle, $4.1 million; Crosby, $8.98 million; Dawson, $31 million.

Also, Deaf Smith, $76 million; Dickens, $4.4 million; Ector, $529.6 million; Floyd, $15.6 million; Gaines, $31.1 million, Garza, $6.9 million, Hale, $77.9 million; Hockley, $43.5 million, Howard, $225.6 million; King, $189,816; Lamb, $47.4 million; Lynn, $1.9 million; Martin, $10.8 million.

Also, Midland, $257.8 million; Motley, $1.4 million; Parmer, $17.3 million; Scurry, $41 million; Swisher, $15.9 million; Terry, $36.1 million; and Yoakum, $24.2 million.

Bullock reported gross sales in Texas totaled $48.5 billion in the first quarter of 1979, a $6.1 billion increase over the same three-month period last year.

Sales reported in the state's major urban areas include: Harris County, $12.4 billion; Dallas County, $7.5 billion; Bexar County, $2.1 billion; and Tarrant County, $3.2 billion.

Adobe King Plans Plant

Adobe King International Inc., a Denver-based corporation, has announced plans to establish an adobe block and surface bonding material manufacturing plant in the Lubbock area.

The company said it intends to joint venture the cost of the facility with local businessmen and developers. When completed, the plant will be capable of producing approximately 50,000 adobe blocks and 5,000 bags of the company's surfacing bonding material per day.

Adobe said, "The plant is being established in order to meet the area's future housing and construction demands for energy efficient construction and is expected to be completed and ready for full production by late spring of 1980. Plant facilities will require approximately 50 acres."

Realtor Calls For Support

CHICAGO, Ill. (Special) -Dr. Jack Carlson, executive vice president and chief economist of the National Association of Realtors, says President Carter should be supported in his objective to reduce interruptable and high-priced crude oil imports.

About 1½ percent of the current acceleration of inflation and about 1 percent of the slowdown in national output is being caused by OPEC price increases and production controls, according to Carlson.

"OPEC is the most important secondary cause of double-digit inflation. However, the federal government is the primary cause of both double-digitinflation and the current recession because of inflationary deficits, excessive growth of money supply, and acceleration of inflationary and production-limiting regulations," he said.

Representing the nation's realtors, Carlson said, "President Carter is correct in identifying the need to remove government-created roadblocks to energy production, such as excessive government regulations and delays. However, he would do this by creating another federal bureaucracy, the Energy Mobilization Board. Rather, he should review and reform badly designed environmental, health and safety, endangered species, governmental land withdrawal, and other policies stopping U.S. energy production and conservation.

Texas Industrial Output Fell 5.5 Percent In June

DALLAS (Special) -Preliminary estimates show industrial production in Texas fell at a 5.5 percent seasonally adjusted annual rate in April and was only 1.3 percent above the level recorded a year earlier. The decline resulted from a drop in manufacturing output which more than offset an increase in mining output.

Manufacturing output fell as a sharp decline in durable goods production more than offset an increase in nondurable goods production. Reduced output was evident in all major durable goods industries except transportation equipment and stone, clay, and glass products.

Increased output in petroleum refining, chemicals, and food accounted for the gain in nondurable goods production. Declines were evident in textiles, apparel, paper, and printing and publishing.

All major components of the mining sector posted increases in output except crude oil production, which declined for the third month in a row. Drilling activity rose following six consecutive months of decline.

Reflecting the drop in factory output, the manufacturing capacity utilization index edged down in April to 103.7 percent of the 1972 base.

INS Will Welcome Violation Hearings

WASHINGTON (AP) — Immigration and Naturalization Service officials say they would welcome hearings for allegations that border authorities are violating the civil rights of Mexicans and Mexican-Americans.

Service spokesman Verne Jarvis called the charges "wild allegations" and said hearings would give the agency a chance to "present the facts." Earlier Wednesday, a group of Mexican-Americans urged Congress to investigate the alleged abuses against illegal Mexican aliens and U.S. citizens of Mexican descent. Herman Baca, chairman of the Committee on Chicano Rights, charged the abuses ranged from improper searches to fatal shootings.

FIRM CONVERTS COLLEGE

ST. CHARLES, Ill. (UPI) — A Chicago-based international accounting firm has converted a small private college in St. Charles into an education center for training its United States-and Canadian-based personnel and overseas partners. The success of that program led Arthur Andersen & Co. to make its center available to train clients and provide continuing professional training.

PLAN NO. 31217
1466 SQUARE FEET

Horizontal Siding, Brick Give House Nice Exterior

By HIAWATHA ESTES

Here is a good combination — a home that looks inviting outside and is liveable and satisfying within. From its handsome entrance to the spacious master bedroom, this home is distinctive in every detail.

Horizontal siding, used brick veneer and planter, louver shutters and wood roofing combine to present a pleasing, colonial exterior that has much charm.

After living in a home for some time, one of the most appreciated features is good traffic flow. From the front entry and from the rear entry and service, there is access to every area. One has access to the kitchen without having to walk through the living room. All of this, plus adequate size rooms, ample storage and two baths are offered here in a minimum of square footage.

The furnace and water heater are located in the home, but if more storage space is preferred, they would be located in the oversized garage which measures 21' x 21', outside dimensions.

For a home of this size, there is a large amount of storage space. Wall cabinets are above the washer and dryer and there is a pantry in the kitchen along with an extra large amount of other cabinets. There are numerous closets and both baths have pullman lavatories. One bath is accessible from both the service and master bedroom. If desired, the door to the service could be eliminated.

Complete working drawings for plan 31217 can be purchased for only $19.95 for the first set and $10 for each additional set ordered at the same time. This plan will be available at these special prices until Nov. 29, 1979. Please allow at least three weeks for delivery. A large reproduction rendering of the exterior is available for $4. Also available are six home plan books illustrating nearly 1,000 plans — a $13 value — for only $9.95 plus $1 for postage and handling. Send all orders to: Hiawatha Estes, P.O. Box 404-J, Northridge, Calif. 91328.

Braniff International Reveals Purchase Of Modified 747s

DALLAS (Special) -Braniff International has announced the $55.5 million purchase of a Boeing 747SP, an ultra long-range version of the four-engine, widebody jet, for delivery in September, 1980.

Board Chairman Harding L. Lawrence said the new purchase makes a total of eight 747s which Braniff has on order, including four 747-200Bs and four 747SPs. The SP, or Special Performance version of the 747, has a range in excess of 7,000 miles. The airline utilizes 747s on its Transatlantic and Transpacific routes.

The $55.5 million purchase price of the latest 747SP, which includes buyer-furnished equipment and spares, brings to $808.5 million the value of Braniff's outstanding orders for 32 new Boeing aircraft to be delivered during the balance of 1979 and in 1980 and 1981.

Lawrence said the first Braniff 747SP will be delivered in October of this year with another being added to the fleet in December. The other two will be delivered in April and September of 1980. Three new 747-200Bs will be delivered in 1980 and one in 1981.

Southwest Sets Passenger Mark In June

DALLAS (Special) -Southwest Airlines established records in passengers carried for both the month of June, 1979, when it boarded 461,800 passengers, and for the quarter when Southwest again exceeded 1 million passengers carried with 1,290,487 passengers boarded systemwide.

June, 1979, passengers carried increased 44 percent, up from 321,512 passengers carried during the same period in 1978. Revenue passenger miles (RPMs) were up 53 percent to 148.3 million from 97.1 million during June, 1978. Load factor for the month climbed to 75.3 percent. Available seat miles increased 50 percent to 196.9 million RPMs versus 131.6 million RPMs.

During the quarter Southwest flew 1,290,487 passengers, up 41 percent. This compares to 916,098 passengers carried during the same quarter, 1978. RPMs advanced 51 percent to 409.3 versus 271.6 for the second quarter, 1978.

Scientists End Marriage Study

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (UPI) — Americans today are more tolerant of people who don't want to get married or have children than were their counterparts of 20 years ago, University of Michigan researchers say.

The study of 2,400 persons by three U-M scientists also found those questioned were less enthusiastic about the benefits of marriage in general, but happier in their own marriages.

The findings by Elizabeth Douvan, Joseph Veroff and Richard Kulka were reported in the quarterly issue of "Economic Outlook USA," published by the U-M's Institute for Social Research.

The study was based on a similar study conducted in 1957.

In 1957, 80 percent of the participants expressed negative attitudes about people who decided not to marry, and the remaining fifth expressed neutral attitudes.

In the lates survey, however, less than a quarter of the respondents still had negative views on those who choose to remain single, with two-thirds neutral, U-M scientists said.

West Virginians Began Holidays

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (UPI) — West Virginia is in one sense the birthplace of three family-related holidays, the latest of which is only a year old.

Researcher Sally Hopkins says the first Mother's Day and Father's Day were observed in the West Virginia towns of Grafton and Fairmont in 1908.

The first statewide Grandparents Day was proclaimed in the same state in 1973 by Gov. Archibald Moore Jr. in honor of West Virginian Marian McQuade, mother of 15 and grandmother of 14, says the researcher for a greeting card manufacturer, Hallmark.

The holiday was officially recognized on a national basis when President Carter signed a bill last July designating the Sunday after Labor Day as Grandparents Day.

Radio Frequencies To Be Decided

By MIKE WENDLAND

Copyright, 1979, Universal Press

Two months from now representatives from thre U.S. and more than 100 other countries will converge in Geneva, Switzerland, and — in a series of meetings that will last for 10 weeks — set worldwide radio and television priorities for the next two decades.

The gathering, called the World Administrative Radio Conference, will have a monumental impact on the use of two-way radio communications. The delegates will divide up and allocate all radio frequencies to specific user groups.

Those of us whose use of radio is primarily recreational, such as CB or amateur radio, thus stand to lose or gain by what is decided in Geneva.

For example, ham operators could pick up two new bands, to go with the eight bands they now have, if the recommendations of the FCC and Canada's Department of Communication are followed by the WARC delegates.

The WARC conference is a function of the International Telecommunications Union (ITN), the United Nations agency that governs worldwide communications. The decisions reached in Switzerland, approved by the U.S. Senate and signed by the president, become treaty obligations of the U.S. government.

While the FCC and similar agencies in various countries enact and enforce their own communications law, they do so under a larger, worldwide plan. Radio signals know no international boundaries and unless frequency use is coordinated globally, radio chaos would result.

For example, suppose military communications occurred on the same frequencies that international short-wave broadcasts used. Neither service would be usable.

Or what if CBers operated in the U.S. on the same band that another country used for police communications?

Because of the propagation characteristics on the CB band of long-distance skip signals, the American CB signals could seriously affect life-or-death activities in radio services in another nation.

The last WARC conference was in 1959, when CB was still in its infancy here and virtually unknown in the rest of the world. Since then, CB and amateur radio have grown dramatically. But so have the needs of other radio services.

At the same time, the radio spectrum, being a finite resource, has stayed the same.

Each nation has only one vote. Thus, this year's gathering — which will see the inclusion of numerous Third World and developing nations whose communications needs were non-existent 20 years ago — will surely result in surprising changes.

Public Talk Sponsored By Institute

"A Step-Up in Consciousness through Corrected Reason" is the theme of a free public lecture to be given at the First Federal Savings & Loan Branch office, 3845 50th St., at 7:30 p.m. Thursday.

The local study club of the Concept-Therapy institute of Route 8, Box 250, San Antonio is sponsoring the lecture which is given to "acquaint the public with an educational study explaining a workable understanding of life based on a correlation of universally accepted, factual principles. The scientifically substantiated principles presented through Concept-Therapy are the correlation of areas common to the sciences, psychology, philosophy, and theology."

The lecture will be presented by Dr. and Mrs. Herbert Dill, Area Directors of the Institute which is non-profit and chartered by the State of Texas as an educational institution in 1931.

When asked about Concept-Therapy, Dill said "It is a correlation of the factual principles existent within the structure of all present systems. Therefore we do not delve into theories and various beliefs; we respect them all. Our presentation enhances the truth in a person's beliefs and helps to make one's formal education applicable to life as we present in simple, understandable language a correlation of the wisdom of the ages."

Dill explained further: "We start with the average person and factually show how to improve the personality. Anyone who will study and apply the laws and principles can benefit in whatever areas he chooses. Unknowingly breaking these natural laws creates disharmony and emotional turmoil in one's life. Our students become aware of how law operates in their lives and are then able to bring their lives into harmony with law. In short, we explain the working of the entire human personality and the universal laws governing the factors of man's personality. Also we explain logically the working of the mind, suggestion, ESP, always stressing the importance of self-mastery through proper reasoning based on principle."

There is no obligation and the public is welcome to attend the free talk about developed reasoning which scientifically combines psychological principles with the philosophical.

Hansard Gets Promotion

Gary R. Hansard has been promoted to assistant vice president, and Karen Price and Jody May have been elected assistant secretaries of West Central Investment Corp., according to an announcement by Wayne Finnell, chairman of the board, and Carlos H. Thornton, president.

Hansard, located in West Central's home office in Lubbock, handles all funding and settlements of residential loans. He is a graduate of Eastern New Mexico with a B.B.A. degree and has served with West Central since 1976.

Miss Price, also with West Central's home office, handles home office funding and is responsible for setting up loans, transfers and dispersing of loans. She has a psychology degree from Texas Tech University.

Miss May of West Central's Lubbock branch has been promoted to loan processing. Prior to joining WCIC, she was with the Dallas Mortgage Co., and attended Texas Tech University. She has been with WCIC for 1½ years.

CB Static: Readers Air Gripes

Dear Mike: Amateurs can criticize all they want, but the fact remains that CBers are non-professional radio operators who want to enjoy a hobby. That makes them amateurs as well. The amateur fraternity would do better to take the beginning hobbyist under his wing, rather than constantly attacking CBers. For the two are really the same. Using different names for the same hobby only serves to divide the participants further. Hams and CBers are both radio hobbyists. The world doesn't end at 11 meters and you don't get reborn at 10 meters.—F. M., Garland.

• • •

Dear CB Static: Whatever one becomes involved with, be it a marriage, a business or a hobby, it's only as good as what one puts into it. That's why CB is so worthless. CBers get radio privileges for nothing. Hams have to prove themselves by working for their airwave right. —M. R., Oak Park, Mich.

• • •

Dear Mr. Wendland: I just finished taking a CB in a small private plane a friend of mine has. Talk about range! It was really a ball. I talked to a guy 50 miles away, and both of us were barefoot. Just think of how well I could have done if the skip was rolling.—N. R., Evanston, Ill.

To: The People of West Texas and Eastern New Mexico
From: Shallow Waterbeds, Inc.
Regarding: Shallow Waterbeds, Inc. Franchise Prospectus

Dear Folks:

This prospectus is offered on a first time basis to the people of this region. The people that made Shallow the Texas waterbed leader. We know many of you thought our new store at the South Plains Mall was our First Expansion since we started nearly four years ago. We appreciated the cards, flowers, and plants; however, the truth of the matter is that the mall store is our seventh retail outlet. The city of El Paso has had two Shallow Waterbed stores for nearly six months. All total there are currently seven outlets in operation with a new store opening in Hobbs, New Mexico on September 1st, with Midland, San Angelo, and Clovis, New Mexico to be opened before the years end. If that sounds like alot of work — it is! However, when opportunity presents itself we pride ourselves on being able to take advantage of profitable expansion, but we've reached the point where it's no longer feasible. Hence, this offer to Qualified Buyers to review a Shallow Waterbeds Franchise general prospectus for strip centers and mall locations across the United States.

If you're wondering, if this is such a fine opportunity, why don't we take advantage of it ourselves? We understand, we would ask the same question. The reason is simple. Shallow opened its first mall store in Wichita Falls six months ago. After the first month our annual projected gross per square foot was one hundred dollars. After six months it's at one hundred and forty dollars. The annual convention of mall owners was held in Montreal three months ago. One of the most important topics was the developers search for successful new businesses. Shallows name was one of the first to be mentioned. Within weeks we were deluged with offers for mall locations in places like Texarkana, Laredo, Kerrville, Austin, Lawton, Okla. and as far away as Chicago.

In a nutshell, there are more opportunities than our capital will currently cover. Shallow has organized and prepared for this day. It has come even faster and bigger than we expected. This is not a ground floor opportunity-it's the basement. We're a phone call away from anyone who is interested.

Respectfully
Edward C. Robertson, Tres.

TODAY'S EDITORIAL:

Carter Takes Show On Road

IT SHOULD BE obvious by now that not only has the battle been joined to determine what the nation's energy future may be, but that the 1980 Presidential campaign also has been launched.

Any question about this was removed the past week as President Carter, facing continued criticism in Congress and across the nation, served notice he would take his show on the road.

Anticipating what he called "a massive struggle to gut the windfall profits tax bill" in the Senate, the President appealed to the American people to demand its approval. "I need your help," he said.

MR. CARTER'S effort to marshal public opinion in support of his massive energy package in which the federal bureaucracy will play an even greater role in the citizen's life, not less, sounded almost like a campaign cry.

And although the surveys show the President's recent energy "sermon" and firing of almost half his Cabinet did not materially enhance his standing as a "forceful leader," it is a "new Carter" the nation is seeing.

That the new Carter is cloaked in political overtones is no accident.

For several months, the White House has chafed under what some Carter people apparently regard as unfair treatment by the Washington press corps.

For whatever reason, Mr. Carter has announced he will sharply curtail his two news conferences a month in the nation's capital and conduct more such sessions with newsmen and the people in various parts of the nation. In this manner, he says, he will have an opportunity to hear what others may be thinking. At the same time, he will be carrying his battle to the voters.

The President also has left no doubt who "the enemy" will be. On the domestic front, it is "the powerful oil lobby." On the foreign front, it may well be the OPEC.

AS A SKEPTICAL Senate Finance Committee began work on the "windfall profits" tax, Mr. Carter said that if the tax were not imposed, "we cannot reach our energy goal."

And after suffering a major setback in the House on efforts to give the President authority to impose standby gasoline rationing, House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D. Mass., put it this way: "The oil lobby is more powerful than it's ever been."

It will be recalled that Mr. Carter's chief domestic adviser, Stuart Eizenstat, in his famous "crisis" memo, urged the President to "seize this opportunity...and make OPEC the enemy."

In other words, as the spectre of higher priced and scarce gasoline faces Americans, it is Mr. Carter who will be riding across the land exhorting anguished citizens to support him and all will be well.

It is just such demagoguery that got the President and the nation into the mess we are in now. Not that he is solely responsible for our energy problems by any means. But, by propagating and enlarging upon past mistakes of a bungling federal bureaucracy and its controls over the oil industry, he is only compounding the felony.

ON THE inflation front, Mr. Carter's stance seems to be that the energy problem is the key to that issue and that he has no concrete alternatives.

The latest cost of living figures for June, showing another 1 percent rise—at an annual rate of 13.2 percent—did nothing to ease worries on that count.

And although Mr. Carter's appointment of New York banker Paul A. Volcker as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board was commendable, it offered only a brief respite for the skidding dollar. Gold prices remained in the $300 an ounce area.

THE PRESIDENT is to be commended for trying to do something about the nation's problems and his standing in the polls.

But, his "medicine" for what ails the nation and his Presidency apparently is going to be more of the same sort of government intrusion into the private lives and business of the American people which has been the norm for four decades now, four decades which have brought an ever-increasing federal debt, loss of stature abroad and a crisis of confidence in U.S. institutions and leadership.

The American people, we believe, still believe in themselves and their country, and their ability to solve their problems if given a chance without Big Brother looking over their shoulder. Maybe in his travels, President Carter will "get the message..."

If not, he and the nation, remain in trouble.

ART BUCHWALD:

Carter Chops Trees, But Leaves Monkeys

WASHINGTON—Having done everything they could to cleanse the Administration of disloyal and incompetent appointees, the White House advisers were surprised their actions didn't go over well with a majority of American people.

"There must be something else we can do to show Jimmy is a strong President," a White House image-maker said.

"I think I've got it," said the in-house pollster. "Why don't we ask every American to hand in his resignation? Then we could decide who we want to keep in the country and who we don't."

The chief of staff said, "I like it. The President could go on television and explain that he had made a lot of mistakes by not demanding the discipline and loyalty of the electorate.

"HE COULD ask every American of voting age to hand in his resignation so he could restructure the country and get rid of the deadwood and those who aren't team players."

The press secretary said, "It's a gamble, but it makes political sense."

The in-house pollster said, "How do we decide which American resignations we'll accept and which ones we won't?"

The chief of staff replied, "We'll send out a questionnaire, asking the head of the family to evaluate everyone living in the household."

"Beautiful," the image-maker said. "We could have everyone rated on a scale of 1 to 6.

"We could ask if they had the skills to be a good American, if they'd come up with new ideas when Carter was President and most of all how loyal they were to Jimmy."

THE PRESS secretary said, "We should also find out their strengths and weaknesses and what they've accomplished since Carter's been President."

The chief of staff said, "I want to know how they feel about the President's energy proposals and the SALT treaty.

"If they can't support him on those two measures, they don't deserve to be part of this Administration."

The in-house pollster said, "I think we should also ask them how they feel about Kennedy. Anybody close to Kennedy has to go. You can't be a good American if you don't support the incumbent President."

The press secretary said, "I know a lot of members of the media whose resignations I'm going to accept."

The image-maker said, "I think we should appoint a whole new Congress."

THE IN-HOUSE pollster added, "What I like about it is that it takes the heat off Carter and puts it on the American people where it belongs. If it hadn't been for them, the President wouldn't be in all this trouble."

The chief of staff said, "Then it's agreed. We'll have another domestic summit at Camp David, and after the President consults with all the leaders of the country, except Republicans, he'll come down and say that he did the wrong thing by asking his Cabinet to resign.

"He'll admit the trouble with his leadership was that the American people wouldn't follow it. Therefore he is asking for everyone's resignation so he can put the country's house in order."

"Does that mean we have to resign, too?" the in-house pollster asked.

The chief of staff said, "Yes, dummy, but don't get nervous. Carter has to keep us. Great balls of fire. We're all he's got."

Metric Board Makes Pitch For System As Energy Aid

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

With the approach of $1 per gallon gasoline prices, your newspaper recently ran an editorial concerning sale of gasoline by the liter. At that time, gas-by-the-liter was merely a proposal. It now appears that it may become a reality at many stations across the country.

The U.S. Metric Board has issued a declaration supporting the sale of gasoline by the liter. The 17-Member Board adopted this position for some very practical reasons:

1) Most of the nation's gas pumps cannot compute a price higher than 99.9 cents per gallon, and will have to be changed as prices pass that point, as it now seems assured.

2) The retail gas industry will have to make a choice between available options for modifying the pumps. From public hearings and research conducted by the Board, the petroleum retailing industry is generally willing to choose the liter dispensing option.

3) The Board's economic analysis of the options shows that it will save about $100 million nationwide to convert the pumps to dispense gas by the liter instead of changing the pumps to handle prices up to $1.99 per gallon.

4) Metric conversion of gasoline pumps adheres to the voluntary nature of the national policy on metrics, as outlined by the Congress in the Metric Conversion Act.

The U.S. Metric Board, an independent Federal Agency, is charged with planning and coordinating the increasing use of the metric system in this country. The Board has declared that "this is an opportune time for the development of a planned and coordinated voluntary program of dispensing gasoline by the liter and urges all affected parties to participate in the planning process."

The Board's declaration further "calls attention to the need for adequate public information in connection with liter dispensing," and stands ready to assist in the conversion process.

Vietnam Protesters Fail To See Light, He Claims

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

After years of wondering why the supposedly "morally concerned" critics of America's role in Vietnam weren't morally concerned over the mass exodus from that Communist country, I found the answer in Sunday's A-J (July 15).

Lawyer Kunstler, an avid civil rights spokesman, baldly admitted that he didn't "believe in publicly criticizing a Socialist nation, even if there were human rights violations." In this he spoke truly!

Quite obviously such critics of the late 60s were never truly concerned for human injustice; they were concerned for far-out social systems. And following the relentless logic of such faith, they cannot see tragedies like the boat-people as the historical result of Marxist ideology. So, as always, it falls upon the shoulders of such evangelical Christian groups as World Vision to cope with the human debris of grandiose Socialist experiments.

It seems strange that the Vietnam war critics never realized that on their basis, there can be no human rights. Matter-in-motion, even a human body, has no "rights."

Carter Policy Playing Into Russian Hands, She Charges

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

Crying "Human Rights," President Carter arrogantly demanded pro-American anti-Communist Nicaraguan President Somoza resign, resulting in Castro-led, Sandinista guerrillas, arms shipped thru "Panama," to conquer Nicaragua, a launching-pad for Soviet-Cuban conquest of Central America.

"Human Rights" Carter destroyed America's friend, the Shah of Iran, protector of the Persian Gulf, losing American oil and a vital listening post on Russia's border.

President Carter signed the perilous SALT II treaties leaving America vulnerable to attack by the Soviet military juggernaut.

Will a Soviet-encircled America (Panama, Nicaragua, later Central America) be the next addition to the Soviet empire?

In contrast was Pope John Paul's pilgrimage to his Polish homeland. Despite the roadblocks, no buses, millions of Poles walked 5-10 miles to hear the ringing cries for freedom from brutal Communist oppression from this God-like man.

While thousands of Vietnamese "boat people" risk drowning to escape the Communist hell, President Carter embraces the Satanic leader of the Soviet anti-Christ that's enveloping the world.

She Regrets Poor Support For Good, Local Talent

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I enjoy Bill Kerns' column and last Sunday was no exception. The key sentence, and I quote: "You never realize how much you enjoy something until it's no longer there to enjoy."

How true.

Mr. Kerns is right and the Theatre Centre does have it's share of financial difficulties. I wish he had pursued the subject a little further.

The biggest problem is community "apathy." Last summer, the play was a delight, the olio was good and the attendance was poor.

It's a shame when questionable talent is patronized and well attended and local talent in the form of live theater, symphony and many fine guest artists are so poorly attended.

I hope I'm not around to see the demise of these aspects of Lubbock's entertainment offerings due to a lack of community support.

Brownfield Woman Would Walk To Save On Energy

Editor, Avalanche-Journal:

I just finished listening to the 5 o'clock news and decided nothing could be as bad as the newscasters said about the country.

A lot of us would have to be off mentally to let our personal and national affairs reach this condition. But on the other hand, I know several people who pay money and burn gas in their cars to ride to weight loss clinics.

My question is: Why, as high as food is, don't they cut out a little food and walk to the grocery store? There are little wire carts you can buy to bring groceries home.

Think of the money you could save on food, gas and reducing.

Lottie Ferguson, Brownfield

Jest For Fun...

Overheard: "Inflation is so bad these days I can't even afford to pay attention."

Miser: The least of the bigtime spenders.

Part of a Republican campaign slogan in 1928 was "...a car in every garage." Our next President undoubtedly will be somebody who campaigned on "some gas in every tank."

VIRGINIA PAYETTE:

Kiss It Good-by

WASHINGTON—Jimmy Carter wants us to have confidence that, with a little luck and a lot of sacrifice (mostly ours), he can "May-Day" his way into a new technology that will free us from the Arabs before you can say $50 a barrel.

He forgot to mention money. But he probably didn't have to. By this time, any tax-paying American has a pretty good idea of what it's going to cost us to switch over from OPEC crude to synthetic fuel.

That's where the "sacrifice" comes in.

He didn't have to labor the technology point, either. We already have engineering geniuses with the know-how to whip their computers into action. In no time at all, Carter tells us, they can come up with something that we can produce at home to heat our bones and run our automobiles.

THAT'S WHERE the "confidence" comes in. And that's the part that bothers me.

It's one thing to design a new technology. It's something else to find people to make it work. And nobody has yet come up with a new-and-improved model of human being who can, in this age of awesome electronic miracles, keep from lousing them up.

Yea, verily, the "Peter Principle" strikes again. As a nation, we have reached our "level of incompetence."

On paper, we can do anything: Conquer outer space, build a missile to wipe out every living thing on the planet, even design machines capable of harnessing the sun. Put man into the picture and things start to fall apart.

Think about it.

REMEMBER THE massive blackout in New York a few years back when the electric power system failed? Only it wasn't the system that failed; it was a human being who failed to spot the warning signal in time.

Something almost like that happened at Three Mile Island. The giant reactor tried to tell the folks in charge that it was in trouble, but they didn't get the message.

Skylab, which was programmed to stay in orbit for 10 years, slammed back to earth four years ahead of schedule because somebody miscalculated something somewhere along the line.

And it was man, not the machine, that caused the DC-10 tragedy in Chicago. Hundreds died because the jet was capable of being done in by somebody who didn't follow the rule book.

DETROIT HAS to recall millions of cars a year because somebody slips up on the assembly lines. And you and I wind up with the lemon that rolled off on Monday, when the man called in sick to get a three-day weekend.

We spend billions of dollars to develop the Alaskan oil fields and then, because somebody was careless, more oil spills out of leaky pipes than comes out the other end.

All across the country, there are trucks and railroad cars rumbling through our back yards with tanks full of liquids and gases that, in case of a crash or derailment, could wipe out everybody for miles around.

And, with men at the throttles of trucks and engines, accidents are not unheard of. It's just a matter of time.

NOW WE'RE getting ready to build a $30-billion MX missile system that will have 2,000 nuclear warheads running along 4,000 miles of railroad tracks in underground trenches.

That's to fool the Russians. But, in the end, the operation depends on saying goes, "The most dangerous part of the machine is the nut behind the steering wheel."

"Human error." "Pilot error." "Computers are only as good as the people who run them."

Back in the horse-and-buggy days, nobody got hurt when great-grandpappy fell asleep at the reins. But today's high-performance technology creates massive risks, and those risks are compounded by faulty designs, shoddy workmanship and careless maintenance.

Toss the politicians into that mix and you compound the danger with the added element of waste, fraud, greed and incompetence.

And that, friends, is why—where Carter's political energy program is concerned—I long ago reached my level of no-confidence.

He is that most valued of West Texas' natural resources: a character. And he is the man the Los Angeles Times has called potentially the most important country singer of the 1980s.

Born and raised in Lubbock, the 32-year-old Ely has gone from scuffling around town, playing private clubs, to scuffling around the country, playing where he could, to headliner status at such showcase clubs as L.A.'s Palomino Club and New York City's Lone Star Cafe.

He now has three highly-praised albums out on MCA Records and is well on his way to becoming his home town's favorite son. But it wasn't always this way. Time was when he was a rambler, what they call a "running dog," rambling around the country trying to get people to listen to his songs.

"People used to see me coming and run," he said. "They figured I was either up to something or wanted to borrow a buck from them."

Now those same people delight in telling Joe Ely stories.

"That's just the way it is," he says. "I hear stories every day about myself or somebody will ask me about one and I don't have the slightest idea what they're talking about.

"If it's a real good one I'll say 'Yeah, I did that.'

"That's just the way it is. I'm doing the same things I've always done, it just so happens that I got lucky and ran into a record company who put some things on tape and made some records. There's no difference in what I'm doing. I'm just reaching more people."

There were hard times though, lots of them — hopping freights, finding gigs where he could, passing the hat for meal money. Joe jokes about them now, but you can still feel the blues.

There was the time he and some friends jumped a New England-bound freight just to see the leaves turn.

"It was like the first of October or something," he said, "and boy, a norther blew through Amarillo just as we were going. There was this old man getting off when we were getting on, he didn't have anything on but a short-sleeved shirt. He saw us and waved and said 'So long, you crazy fools.'"

By the time the bunch reached Texarkana, the cold had forced them to burn splintered parts of the car floor for heat. That provided some relief, but mostly the only thing the oil-soaked wood made was smoke. So much thick, black, smoke, in fact, that it was almost impossible to breathe.

Eager for a change of weather, if not some fresh air, they moved south, searching for a warmer climate. They found it in Louisiana. Unfortunately, they also used up most of their meager funds getting there.

"I walked into some place in Bossier City and played a gig," Ely said. "I had to alternate sets with a go-go dancer. She danced to the juke box music for about 45 minutes, and then I'd come on and play for 10.

"Then I'd pass the hat, make three or four dollars, just enough for a meal, and be on my way."

He did this through the south, playing any place he could with just an acoustic guitar, until he got to Toledo where, as he puts it, "things got kinda tough."

He scraped enough together to make it to Pittsburgh but things only got worse. "Things got REALLY tough there," Joe said. "It's a factory town, you know. People just didn't take to us playing country tunes in some old bar.

"My friend kind of set himself up in a bowling alley as a marriage counselor. I just kind of walked around.

"A fellow in a fruit stand probably saved our lives, he gave us a couple of apples. He probably saw the lean, hungry look in our eyes and decided to give them to us because we'd probably pick them up anyway.

"Oh, anyway, remember our whole purpose was to get up there in the fall — by the time we got to Pittsburgh all the leaves had fallen off the trees already. We headed on, but kind of forgot about New England and got sucked into New York City."

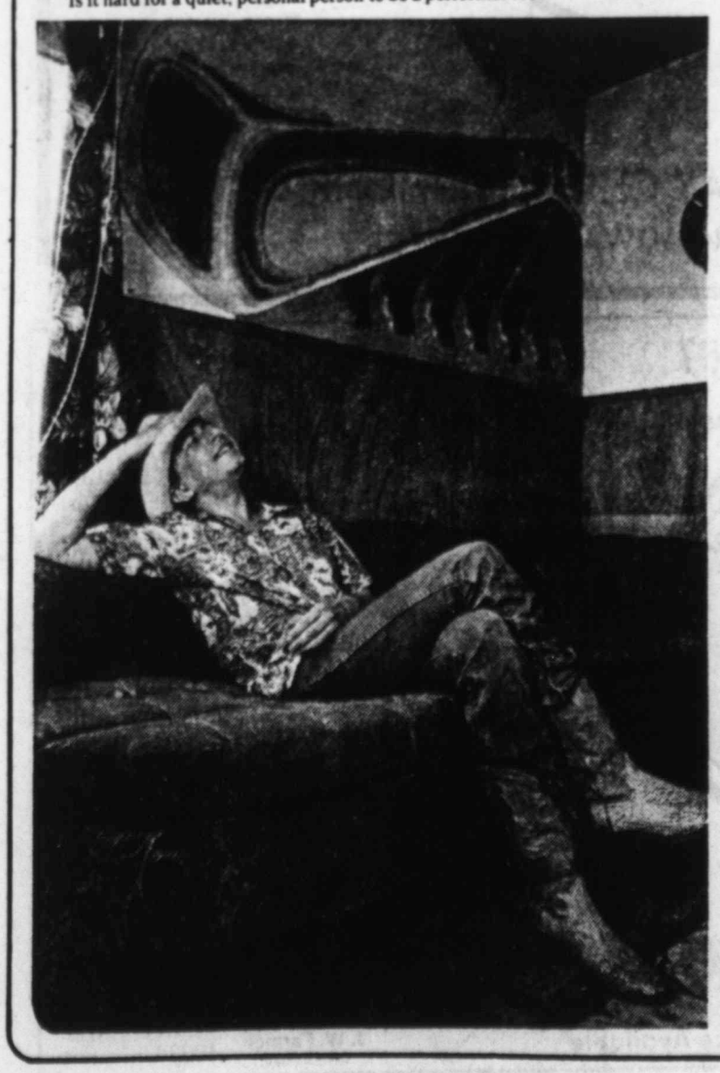

But that's another story. Sometimes talking to Joe is like listening to a hobo travelogue. A highly-animated travelogue at that. When he sits down for any length of time he positively bristles with energy. He's like a nervous cat.

He'll suddenly jerk his head to the side or run his fingers through his short hair. And when he talks it's slow and it's quiet, with long spaces in between sentences, as if he is picking his words very carefully.

The only time he really relaxes is when he's moving, cruising about town in his car, or shooting pool and watching in some bar.

This contrasts with his on-stage appearance. When the lights hit him and his band starts cooking behind him, Joe burns with energy. He has that rare quality called "stage presence."

Is it hard for a quiet, personal person to be a performer too?

"No," he said, "why should it be? Maybe it is opposites, but you don't have to entertain all the time. Playing is a time when I let everything go. It's hard to be an observer of things and talk all the time. Observing people and places and situations is more an inside thing.

"Of course I like to go out and boogie every once in a while, but most of the time I kind of tend to sit over there in a corner and observe things. That's where a lot of songs come from."

Though he is best known as a singer, Joe is pround of his songwriting and works hard at it. He really got started while living in Austin.

"Jimmie Gilmore and I had kind of messed around playing different places," he says. "He introduced me to Butch Hancock. We just really put our thoughts together and sat down and played tunes back and forth.

"We were all living in the same house, where there was a lot of music. Another guy, Tony Pearson, played mandolin, and a guy named Steve Wesson played the saw. It was really more of a living room band than anything else, purely acoustic.

"It was more just doing it for the music instead of making a living out of it. Of course we had to make a living too, so we'd play a few places in Austin.

PARSONS ADAMS

We played the first Kerrville Folk Festival, and we did a little recording."

The band was called Jimmie Dale and the Flatlanders and it's members are prominent figures in the Lubbock music scene today. They also provided Ely with many of his songs.

"We all had the same philosophy about it," he said. "We weren't interested in the business, we were just in it for the music. After a while we all went our different ways. We still meet up with each other and play songs though."

Joe and Butch tried to "make it" in the Nashville scene once about four years ago, before Ely's present band was formed.

"Things just didn't work out," Joe said. "We had a ride to Nashville and we thought we'd take some tapes and look around. The first place we went, we could almost hear the tape hit the trash can on our way out."

After several similar experiences, "We went to Capitol Records. A guy named Bill Williams said, 'Yeah, I'll listen to your tapes.' Well, we'd recorded this stuff in Lubbock before we left and hadn't listened to the tapes at all. We just figured that the needles were moving so it must be working.

"But when we put on the tape, there was just this great clatter of noises. What we'd done was somehow make one song go forwards and one song go backwards on the same track. We had a great laugh about it. It was perfect.

"That was kind of the extent of our trying to get anything done."

Joe started playing in junior high. Coming from a poor family (his father died when he was 14), he couldn't afford any equipment at first. He solved that with typical Ely street smarts.

"We used to go to all the music stores around town and ask them if we could test amplifiers. We'd skip school and go down and borrow them, then take them over to somebody's house and just play, then take them back and say 'No thanks, maybe next time.'

"We had to go to about three or four different stores because we'd have to wait for a while before we could go back."

His first paid job was in a VFW hall, and he earned the glorious sum of $15 for he and his band. Of course, it wasn't much of a band.

"We knew about five songs, so we wound up playing them over and over," he said. "We'd do one song fast and then the next time it came around we'd slow it way down, change the time on it."

It wasn't much, but it was a start. And pretty soon it became clear that music was to be Ely's path. Joe quit high school in his junior year to try music full time. Up to then it had been pretty hit or miss — mostly miss.

"If I had a band going I'd try to do something like playing one of the private clubs — which was a little depressing. I usually didn't stay in one place too long. I just didn't feel right playing to a crowd that would come up and say 'Hey, play this or I'll break your neck.'

"I guess that's why I didn't get on the Holiday Inn circuit. I've always hated to play something I didn't want to play. In those places, music always seems like just another luxury, instead of a necessity. That's the kind of crowd I like, somebody who's worked all week and wants to come out on the weekends and let it all loose. For them it's a necessity, not just one more luxury."

He's got a lot of musical roots, but then he's got a lot of physical roots too. While still in high school, he left home to go to Fort Worth, then Dallas and then Houston, looking for places to play.

That was the start of a rambling period in his life that was to last right up to the time his current band formed four years ago.

Joe was running. Whether it was toward something or away from something is hard to say, but he spent a lot of years on the road, living the life of a modern gypsy.

"When I was traveling I was really kind of searching," he says. "Searching for the music well — and going in a helluva lot of big circles that ended up nowhere — but I had to do it.

"How can I say how it changed me when it just did? I don't know where I would have gone if I hadn't (hit the road). I don't recommend it as a way of life though, it's rough, it's rough out there.

"I was almost a gypsy, doing what I could. I think I learned a lot by doing it, if somebody was a writer or a musician or something like that, that's part of your life anyway, sooner or later it might help you.

"But anybody else, I don't know, I don't think it's necessary.

"I was totally broke and everything, but really watching what was going on, working on music. But there was this one cop in town that used to pick me up and throw me in jail for vagrancy. That was back when there was like 31 vagrancy laws in the state of Texas and they could get you for any of them.

"I never felt like I was doing anything wrong, I was simply broke all the time. What's wrong with that? But every time he'd see me he'd say 'Got five dollars on you Ely?' No sir, I'd head to the car. I hung out with a pretty salty crew, but it was just other musicians. He just probably figured I was always up to something... He was probably right, but I never could understand things like that.

When you go to a Joe Ely show, there's no telling what you'll hear. Besides the usual assortment of original songs off his albums, there will probably be some country standards, a little rockabilly and some straight rock and roll.

"I guess being in different places gave me a lot of sources to pick from. I think probably the best music I heard on the road wasn't from shows, but from people sitting in cafes and gas stations. People like that influenced me more than anything else; there's a lot of great songs out there on the wind."

Listen to his music and you can hear that his influences are many. Ask him to describe his music and he comes back with "honky-tonk ballad punkabilly," but that's really just a funny evasion of a question he's grown tired of answering.

In fact, the diversity of sound that makes his music distinctive has hurt his career. Radio stations, those great arbiters of public taste, can't type him, so they don't play him.

"Radio stations have a lot of problems with us," Joe says. "Rock stations say you're too country or southern, and country stations say you're too much boogie-woogie."

Listen to his music closely and you'll hear echoes of Jimmy Rodgers, Hank Williams, Bob Dylan, Jerry Lee Lewis, Jimmy Reed and scores of others.

His sound incorporates traces of most things going on in American popular music, then projects them in an amalgamation that can only be described as "Joe Ely."

His voice is clear, with just enough back-room smokiness to make it distinctive. His band, led by raging steel guitar player Lloyd Maines, boils with as much intensity as anything you're likely to hear in some time.

He is justifiably proud of his band: Maines on steel guitar, Jesse Taylor on lead guitar, Ponty Bone on accordian, Gregg Wright on bass and Robert Marquan (replacing Steve Keeton just recently) on drums.

His rhythm section rolls with a rockabilly beat, providing a jumping, rollicking base through the tempo changes. Maines plays his steel with a blazing, raving, raucous energy that cuts true to the bone. Describing the music is like describing the electric yellow-green of a West Texas tornado sky. It is excitement. It raises the hair on the back of your neck and turns your emotions loose.

But for all his band's instrumental virtuosity, the sound originates with Ely. Even when he does songs by such close friends as Hancock and Gilmore, they bear only a pssing resemblance to the way those writers perform them. Joe imbues even folkish love songs with an undercurrent of energy.

It seems the drive "to get the music out," as Joe puts it, has been one of the main forces in his life. He is still almost continuosly on the road, but this time there's a difference.

"What I get out of the road now are a lot of musical directions and maybe even hidden fantasies that would never happen here," he says. "Those things are really inspiring to me, like the time in St. Louis when Chuck Berry came up and joined us on stage. Chuck Berry, you know. I just couldn't fathom it, but he was up there playing with our band.

"If we played Coldwater (Country, a Lubbock dance hall) the rest of our lives, I don't think Chuck Berry would ever show up. You've almost got to go out there in order to come back. Reaching out, hearing different things, playing with different people, that's probably why I go on the road now, as opposed to when I was traveling."

But after playing all over the country and touring Europe, he still calls Lubbock home.

"Lubbock's a good place to come to after a long run, to come out and just flatten out. Literally level out, there's no hills to get in your way and a lot of sky.

"It really is a shock to come back after being in some of the biggest cities in the world for months at a time. To just come back to Lubbock bam, just bam, like that, without any warning, it takes a couple of days to really get over the shock of it all.

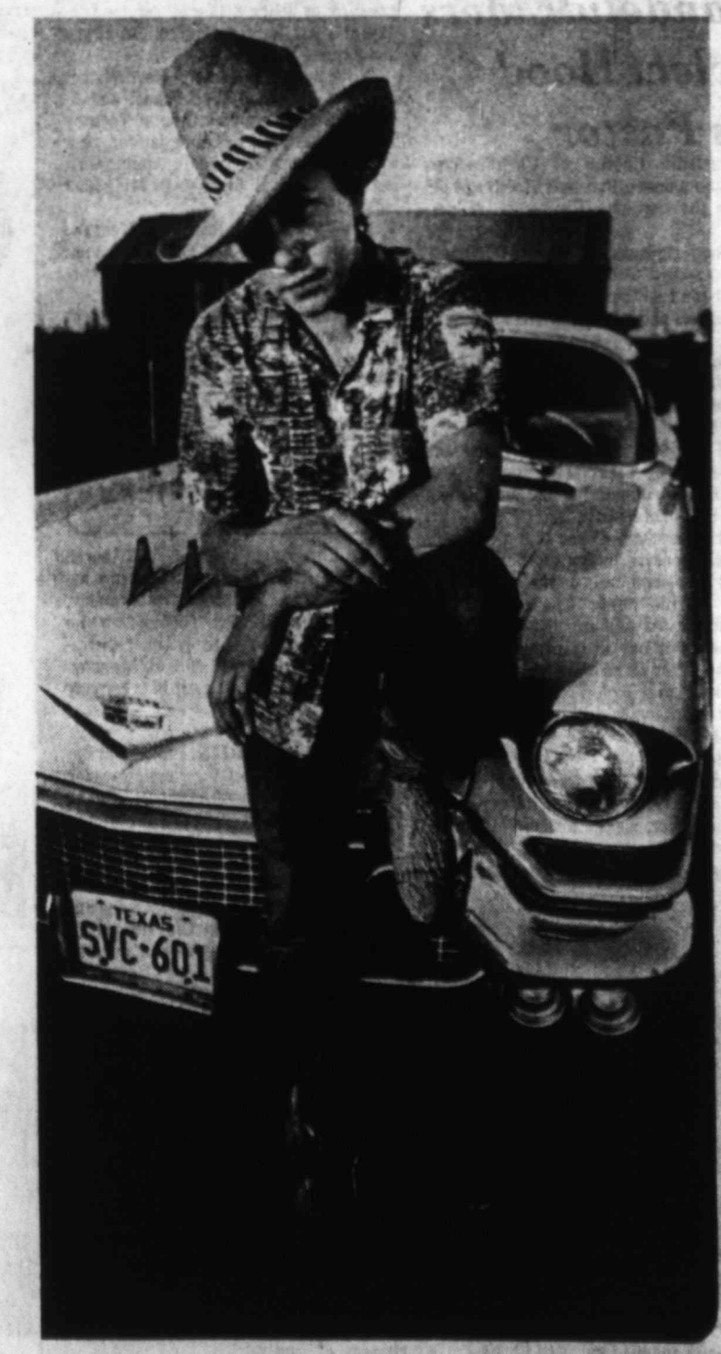

"Coming off a long tour I'm just as crazy as I can be for a few days, there's so much space out here. Especially after traveling in a bus all cramped up and crowded into cities and around people all the time.

"Then all of a sudden you're here in a completely different environment, and it hits me in the head. Then after I've leveled out here, it kind of hits me again when I go back out."

Maybe that drive to get the music out is part of what makes him special. He has a sound in his mind and he is totally true to it. Especially when every day "someone goes to Miami, cuts one disco record and puts on an Indian headdress and some bowling shoes and makes it," this dedication makes Ely a special artist and a special person.

"I'm trying to make the kind of music that I want to," he says. "I'm trying to get the sounds out.

"I'm not interested in being commercial and I've never been interested in being commerical. The people I listened to and was influenced by, they weren't really million-dollar sellers in their time either. But still, they brought something out that was never heard before. They helped other people carry on."

Several Religions Combine To Make Energy Statement, Plea

NEW YORK (Special) — National religious leaders from the Protestant, Catholic, Jewish and Evangelical communities, pledging support for President Carter's recent call to arms on energy, joined hands in a group statement on energy conservation.

More than 40 religious leaders signed a communique asking every American to help in meeting the energy crisis, calling for a transformation of the materialistic values that dominate American life and committing the churches and synagogues to lead the way.

"Americans must make the transition from a world where energy was cheap and plentiful to one where it is expensive and limited in supply," the joint statement released in New York says. "This will mean changes in the way we live, a return in part to the simplicity that distinguished earlier generations.

"It will require giving up certain conveniences, and our habits make that difficult. But even when viewed from the blandest moral perspective, the great majority of Americans are far too dependent on the ethics of materialism.

Cardinal Terence Cooke of the Roman Catholic Archdiocese of New York summarized the statement by saying, "It is important not that we have more, but that we be more as human beings."

Joining Cooke in signing the statement were Dr. Claire Randall, general secretary of the National Council of Churches, Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum of the American Jewish Committee, The Rev. M. William Howard, president of the National Council of Churches and Dr. Jimmy Allen, immediate past president of the Southern Baptist Convention.

Also signing the statement were Dr. Adrian Rogers, president of 13-million member Southern Baptist Convention.

The statement also pledged specific tasks for the religious community in reducing our energy consumption in the coming months.

"We will take steps to intensify our efforts to reduce energy consumption in our churches, synagogues, schools, hospitals and other religiously sponsored institutions," the statement said.

"We will urge all religious leaders to set a good example by adopting where possible simpler means of living. We will ask our religious bodies to formulate local programs of emergency assistance for the poor and the elderly, the disabled and those for whom the spiraling cost of fuel and home heating oil present especially critical problems."

Several religious leaders said they discussed the possibility of calling a major interfaith energy consultation to further mobilize the religious community.

The statement also said the sacrifices Americans are going to have to make should be borne fairly by all.

"Given the structure of our society, there is always the danger that the rich and comfortable will go on their way undisturbed while the poor, the disadvantaged, the politically weak will suffer cutbacks in the very necessities of life."

Rev. Howard added that the churches have a responsibility to educate their members about the economic system on which any changes are dependent.

"We have to stimulate among the folk out there called 'average Americans' some understanding of this economy," he said.

"This is no longer an economy of the mom and pop grocery store. This is an economy which does not thrive on romantic patriotism. And I think that the quicker we understand that, the quicker we will be able to take some initiatives on our own."

New Bible Translation Took 10 Years Of Work

LONDON (UPI) — Not everyone has noticed, but there's vigorous new life these days in the best-selling book of all time. The Bible is booming. A new American-inspired translation just published in London is giving the boom a mighty push.

"The New International Version," translated by 105 scholars, took 10 years and cost something like $2 million to produce. In nine months since its American publication it has sold 2 million copies in the United States.

Printing the Bible always has been profitable. It is a publisher's dream, producing sales figures which make Shakespeare and Agatha Christie and the biggest paperback heroes look like nonstarters. Now it is very big business indeed.

"The New International Version" is the eighth new translation of the Bible into English since World War II, said a spokesman for Britain's 175-year-old Bible Society. Together they have sold a staggering 100 million copies. The boom comes at a time when church attendance generally is in sharp decline. Not even Bible publishers understand this paradox.

"We don't really have an explanation," the Bible Society spokesman said. "But we consider it good news."

"Good News" also is the name of one new Bible translation. In three years "The Good News Bible" has sold more than 7 million copes. "The Living Bible," an adaptation rather than a complete translation, has sold 23 million copies in eight years. "The New English Bible," nine years old, has sold 10 million.

Is there really a need for so many Bible translations?

"I think they come at different levels. It is almost like having clothes for various occasions," says Edward England, an official of the company publishing the "New International Version."

"The old Authorized King James Version of 1611 is the Bible in tails and top hat. "The Good News Bible" is really the Bible in sports clothes. "The Living Bible," a paraphrase, is the Bible in pajama language.

"And the 'New International Version' is the Bible in a business suit. It is honest, it is down-to-earth, it is reliable, it is not sensational at all."

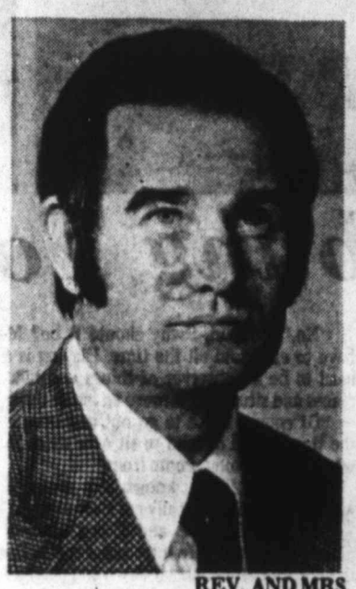

England cited a comparison of the first verse of Genesis as an example.

The King James version's familiar words are:

"In the beginning God created the heaven and the earth. And the earth was without form and void; and darkness was upon the face of the deep."

"The New International Version:"

"In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth. Now the earth was formless and empty; darkness was over the surfaces of the deep."

Missionaries To Speak At Highland Baptist Church

Missionaries To Preach

The Rev. and Mrs. W.A. Beckham, Southern Baptist missionaries to Thailand, will be the guest preachers at the 10:45 a.m. services today in Highland Baptist Church, 4316 34th St.

Rev. Beckham graduated from Baylor University in Waco and received his masters of divinity degree from the Southwest Baptist Theological Seminary in Fort Worth.

The Pittsburg, Tex. native has pastored Baptist churches in Jefferson, Tex.; Omaha, Tex.; and Mt. Pleasant before his appointment as missionary to Thailand in 1974.

Mary Ann Beckham attended Texas Christian University and taught special education in high school in Jefferson. The Dallas native was appointed as missionary to Thailand with her husband in 1974.

Vocal Instruction Series To Begin

The Broadway Church of Christ will host a Training Series in Song beginning today through Friday at the church, 1924 Broadway.

The week-long series will begin with a special service at 6 p.m. today and gospel singing classes will begin at 7 p.m. nightly followed by a general assembly at 8 p.m. The public is invited to attend.

The four-man team organized more than 30 years ago by L.O. Sanderson to conduct singing schools throughout the country will conduct the series.

L.O. Sanderson is the associate minister and counselor for the Wooddale Church of Christ in Memphis, Tenn. Widely recognized as a songwriter-arranger, he is the music editor of the Gospel Advocate.

Leon Sanderson, currently the minister of music for the White Station Church of Christ in Memphis, has directed singing at a number of meetings which featured evangelists Willard Collins, Jimmy Allen and George Bailey.

Stevens joined the team in 1947 and is now the minister of music for the Bammel Road Church of Christ in Houston and is a writer for Gospel Services Inc. He also served as director of the Houston A Cappella Chorus from 1972-76.

Religious composer Epps is the associate minister of the Church of Christ in Corsicana and has been on the team since 1945.

Fleming Plans Sermon At Local Church

Dr. William R. Fleming, superintendent of the Lubbock District of the United Methodist Church, will deliver the sermon at the 8:30 a.m. and 10:50 a.m. services today in the First United Methodist Church, 1411 Broadway.

The former pastor of St. Luke's United Methodist Church here was appointed to his current position in May. His sermon subject will be "Let's Continue To Grow."

A reception honoring Dr. Fleming and his wife will be held in the church parlor immediately following the second service.

He has been the secretary of the Northwest Texas Conference Council on Finance and Administration for the past three years and has served on the boards of the Texas Methodist Foundation, Methodist Home in Waco and the Sears Memorial Methodist Center in Abilene. He also was a delegate to the World Methodist Conference in Dublin, Ireland, in 1976.

Vandelia Elders Select Hood As Pastor

Vandalia Church of Christ elders have announced that Jeff Hood will become the new pulpit minister Wednesday.

Hood replaces Dr. Tom Milholland, who resigned to become assistant director of the Institute for Marital and Family Studies at Abilene Christian University.

The 24-year-old minister graduated from Oklahoma Christian College and received the Hugo McCord Bible Award for the "most promising senior ministerial student." He also attended the University of Texas at Arlington, Tarrant County Junior College and Brown Trail School of Preaching.

"I have come to see that the 'traditional' approach in our brotherhood has put a lot of emphasis on the outside, but little on the inside. The test of true Christianity is not attendance and worshipping without an instrument, however important these may be. The test is surrender to a Savior," Hood said in his application as minister.

Hood and his wife, Debbie, have two children.

Former Dallas Minister To Speak At City Church

Rev. Charles "David" Walker, a Texas Tech Univeristy graduate and former pastor of the Firside Drive Baptist Church in Dallas, will be the pulpit guest today at the 8:15 a.m. service Sunday at First Baptist Church, Broadway and Avenue V.

Now living in Denton, Rev. Walker attended Coronado High School and financed his college education at Tech by working odd jobs, including janitor, photographer, roughneck, dark room assistant and surgical orderly at Methodist Hospital.

Rev. Walker is fluent in Hebrew, Greek and German and has been a Sunday school teacher, counselor and missionary in the Rio Grande ministry.

His college activities include Student Union involvement, intramural sports and a four-time member of the dean's list. He is also an Eagle Scout.

His father is Rev. I.D. Walker, who has been an associate minister since 1973 and is presently serving as the interim pastor.

The Rev. Doug Tipps, University minister, will preach at the 10:45 a.m. services and the elder Walker will conclude the day's activities with a sermon at 7 p.m.

Jack Dale, KRLB radio station sportscaster, will be the guest speaker for the Lubbock Christian Men's Club at 11:45 a.m. Tuesday in room 107 of the Memorial Civic Center. The public is invited to attend and hear Dale, who has been named Sportscaster of the Year in Texas several times and has been the announcer for Texas Tech University basketball games for more than a quarter century.

Siamese Twins With Common Heart Die

ATHENS, Greece (AP) — The second of a pair of Siamese twins born with a common heart and surgically separated Wednesday died during the night, hospital officials reported Friday.

The twins were born 3½ months ago in the central Greek town of Larissa. A team of Evangelismos Hospital physicians had said the 48 hours following the operation would determine the baby's chances of survival.

Singer Kicks Off Spectacular At Southcrest Baptist Church

Recording artist Cynthia Clawson will be the featured singer at 7 p.m. Thursday to kick off Southcrest Baptist Church's Summer Spectacular 79.

The month-long series of services with well known speakers and entertainment will be held each Thursday during August. The public is invited to attend.

Thursday's guest speaker will be S.M. Lockridge, president of the California Baptist State Convention and pastor of Calvary Baptist Church in San Diego.

The Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary graduate has been a guest at nine Billy Graham Crusades and a lecturer at several state Baptist conventions nationwide.

The native Texan also is a graduate of Bishop College in Dallas, received his doctor of divinity from the California Baptist College in Riverside and his doctor of litterarum from the California Graduate School of Theology.

Miss Clawson, who is known for her nearly four-octave vocal range, has appeared on the Christian Broadcasting Network's "700 Club," the Carol Burnett summer replacement show, evangelist James Robison's series "Get Together" and the syndicated series "Spring Street USA."

Speakers and entertainment to be featured each Thursday at Southcrest's Summer Spectacular 79 include Harold O'Chester of the Allandale Baptist Church in Austin and the group Bridge (Aug. 16); Bailey E. Smith of the First Southern Baptist Church in Del City, Okla., and singer David Meece (Aug. 23); and Peter McLoed of the First Baptist Church in Waco along with recording artist Larnelle Harris (Aug. 30).

Amendments Will Affect Church Tax Exemptions

WASHINGTON (Special) — Three amendments that would affect the tax-exempt status of church-operated schools were added to the Treasury-Postal Services Appropriations Bill by the U.S. House of Representatives before sending the bill to the Senate.

One amendment passed by the House would stop the Internal Revenue Service from threatening private school tax exemptions because of alleged racial discrimination.

That amendment would "prohibit the use of appropriated funds to formulate or carry out any rule or policy which would cause the loss of tax-exempt status to private, religious or church-operated schools unless in effect prior to Aug. 22, 1978," the amendment states.

A second amendment specifies specific procedures that private schools have objected to since announcement in the Federal Register last August. The IRS proposal threatens the tax-exempt status unless private and religious schools meet certain quotas of minority students and staff.

The third amendment would allow an individual to claim a charitable deduction on income tax forms if the contribution was, in effect, payment for tuition at a religious school.

'PASSING THROUGH'

Unusual Legends Abound In Southeast New Mexico

By MARILYN HOLMES
A-J Correspondent

Take any expansive area with unusual features or vast wilderness and you'll find an old-time resident who will wag his finger and point:

"There's gold (or monsters) in them thar hills."

In recent years, a "horrid critter" sighting has even created the Guadalupe Mountains version of Big Foot.

Southeastern New Mexico is richly endowed with tall tales because of its unique geological makeup and porous ground. Sink holes could appear anywhere. For example, one Roswell resident a few years ago was astounded to find that part of his back yard had disappeared into a gaping abyss. The same porous ground created Bottomless Lakes near Roswell, formations which are simply a grandiose version of collapsed earth.

Authorities have made futile efforts to convince people that the Bottomless Lakes are not bottomless and that corpses of murder victims do not sink into the Roswell lakes, only to mysteriously reappear in the Carlsbad Caverns some 100 miles to the south.

Tall tales are universally adored — and the biggest killjoys when it comes to slaying local myths are cave specialists Ron Kerbo (park service) and Jerry Trout (forest service), both of Carlsbad.

These fellows have been exploring new caves recently detected by a unique infrared system that pinpointed potential sites from a helicopter. Since they've been in unexplored caves before, they are totally skeptical about stumbling upon any of the rumored treasures of lost gold or loot.

They'll even tell you that caves in the Guadalupes, despite popular myth, are not interconnected with the Carlsbad Caverns. The Carlsbad Caverns, in turn, are not interconnected with any other cave system in southern New Mexico or Texas, although this tall tale also is fairly popular.

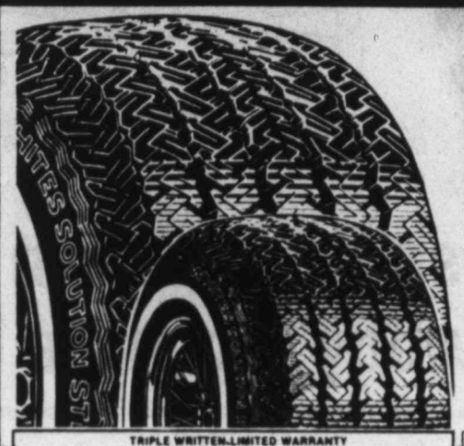

Trout tells the story about the time he was eating lunch in the cave at Sitting Bull Falls when he heard the rather loud approach of a group who sounded like they had been doing some serious partying. For that reason, they couldn't tell the difference between his forest service uniform and the usual garb worn by park service personnel at the Carlsbad Caverns miles away.

As Trout wandered out of the cave, he explained with a deadpan expression that he was a tour guide and had taken a wrong turn in the Carlsbad Caverns, only to emerge at Sitting Bull Falls.

Whites Solution--our newest steel belted radial

•Double steel belts •Radial body plies •Compounded polybutadiene tread •Radial design for better gas mileage 155-740-757

Protected by our industry-leading 40,000 mile triple written limited warranty which covers all road hazards, tread wearout and defects in materials and workmanship.

TRIPLE WRITTEN-LIMITED WARRANTY

1. LIMITED FREE REPLACEMENT WARRANTY
Whites tires will be replaced free within 30 days, excluding repairable punctures when used under normal conditions. This free replacement limited warranty covers tire failures due to BLOW OUTS, CUTS, BRUISES, TREADWEAR, or separations resulting from usual wear and tear in road use under normal conditions providing the tire is not repairable.

2. LIMITED MILEAGE SERVICE WARRANTY
Whites tires are warranted for the number of miles (or months) indicated against BLOW OUTS, CUTS, BRUISES, TREADWEAR, RUT WEAR, and all other road hazards except running flat or use on misaligned wheels. Any tire failing from any of these causes will be replaced on the basis of service rendered or repaired free of charge if repairable, providing failure resulted from usual wear and tear in road use under normal conditions.

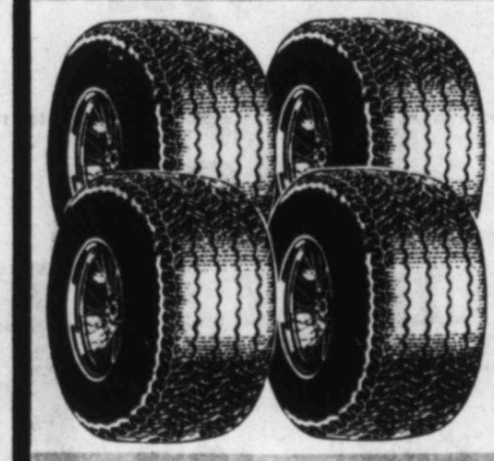

3. LIMITED LIFETIME WARRANTY
We further warrant all White tires for the life of the tire against defects in workmanship and materials during and after the above warranties have expired, without limit as to time or mileage prorated on tread wear.

Mint Official Says Continued Use Of Coin Will End Confusion

By JAMES HILDRETH

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The U.S. Mint acknowledges that the new Susan B. Anthony dollar has generated "confusion" among retailers and customers, but says continued use will eliminate the public's grumbling.

"You'll get used to it after awhile," said Patricia Espey, a mint marketing specialist.

"As your major retailers and your banks start using the coins, really start getting into the system, the confusion is going to subside. It's not an overnight thing."

Amid a torrent of publicity, the mint unveiled the new coin on July 2, saying it would save taxpayers $17.5 million annually in production costs and at the same time honor "a real American woman with real accomplishments" — suffragette Susan B. Anthony.

But the initial reaction from consumers and retailers has been far from encouraging. It has ranged from general apathy — refusing to use the new currency — to outright hostility.

The main reason is that the new dollar coin can be easily mistaken for the quarter dollar coin.

The Anthony dollar weighs more than a quarter, but it is only slightly larger. The design on the reverse side — an eagle landing on the moon — is close to the eagle sitting on a perch on the reverse side of a quarter.

Another problem was that some stores refused to accept the coin from their customers.

The Treasury Department was forced to issue a statement warning that "federal law provides that all coins and currency of the U.S. shall be legal tender for all debts, public and private, public charges, taxes, duties and dues.

"Under federal law, thereforce, the public has the right to use the new Susan B. Anthony dollar, which is a lawfully authorized coin, in all commercial transactions, and commercial establishments that refuse to accept the new coins must be prepared to accept the consequences."

Despite the Treasury's decree, the new coin appears to be as popular as the $2 bill and Eisenhower dollar — which is to say it is bordering on being a flop.

"It looks like it might turn out to be the Edsel of the U.S. Currency system," said one Treasury Department official.

But mint officials remain convinced that it is too early to make a judgment on acceptance.

Miss Espey said the mint receives only "between five and eight letters" daily commenting on the new coin, "not all of which are complaints."

"There have been no complaints over the idea of having a dollar coin," she said. "The American public seems to like the idea of having a dollar coin. The complaint comes from the confusion over the size of the coin and the color of the coin."

"Our way of combatting that is to say there's not any difference between a $1 bill, the $5 bill and a $10 bill except for the number in the corner," she continued. "You look there, so you now have to look at your coins."

Mint officials have indicated they favored brass-colored coins with 11 distinctive sides that could be readily felt with the fingers.

But, they hint, the vending machine industry stopped that plan dead in its tracks because of the huge expense they would have had to undertake to retool their machines.

Miss Espey said that within the next six months a clearer picture should emerge on public acceptance of the new coin.

But in the meantime, the mint is moving ahead with producing the coins and distributing then into the general economy through the Federal Reserve System.

Miss Espey said 500 million coins already have been minted — 300 million of which are distributed — and that the total will swell to 1 billion by the end of this year.

Positive Thinking

By Norman Vincent Peale

"I really believe the reason many people are not well is that they are being poisoned by a continuous succession of small thoughts," said a well known physician.

I had never heard it put quite that way before and was impressed by the remark. The doctor went on to say that he was putting less and less medicine in the mouths of his patients and giving them more and more "medicine" by way of the eyes and ears in the form of positive and creative thinking. "Much human illness," he continued, "begins in the mind and is the result of the way we think."

He illustrated his point with a story about a man who had bought some new shirts with French cuffs, the kind you fasten with cufflinks. And someone gave the man a beautiful set of cufflinks. But the links always seemed to disappear just when he wanted to wear his shirts with the French cuffs. This exasperated the man and he would shout at his wife and blame her and she retorted with accusations of her own. This foolish quarrel led to one thing and another, and finally they were in the divorce courts. Moreover, the man had become a problem for his physician. But, when they got to the bottom of the whole thing, it was all the French cuffs. He had destroyed his marriage and himself by unimportant puny thoughts which he had allowed to become magnified into tremendous conflicts.

"It is this kind of thing," my doctor friend told me, "that takes happiness and well-being from life. A cure is to fill our minds daily with big and creative thoughts."

And what do we mean by big thoughts? It's just as simple, for example, as to go out and look up at the sky. That vastness of blue by day, and star-studded, moon-bathed canopy by night is a constant reminder of the things that are eternal, the things that remain, while men and their petty problems come and go.

How well Emerson explained it when he wrote, "The sky is the daily bread of the soul."

So if someone says something that annoys and irritates you, look at the sky and bring its bigness down into your mind. Practice thinking on a big scale, about the world and its problems instead of your own small concerns. Think big thoughts of charity, good will and forgiveness. Cram the mind with hopefulness and faith.

Life can be either a great experience for us or a small one, depending on the quality and character of the thoughts we think. When you change your thoughts from petty, minor ones to enlarged ideas, you will make of yourself a bigger and better person. It is immense and almost unbelievable, the power of the uplifted thought. As the famous psychologist, William James, said, "The greatest discovery of my generation is that human beings can alter their lives by altering their attitudes of mind."

Creative thinking can give you a perpetual source of mental, spiritual and physical rejuvenation. It can give you a sense of tingling good health. It can make possible a fresh and delightful and eager appreciation of life and its constructive opportunities, which is characteristic of those who have changed their lives by changing their thoughts.

Where can you find these new thoughts? You can find them in association with alive, alert and stimulating people. But, best of all, you can find these great thoughts in one book which is a treasure chest of the most creative thoughts of all time. That book is, of course, the Bible, and in its pages there is a wealth of ideas that have changed not only men's lives, but indeed the whole course of human history. Get the habit of reading and studying it, and so begin to change your thoughts and change your life.

Designer Predicts Brighter Colors

NEW YORK (UPI) — Brighter colored merchandise with the emphasis on solids and fewer styles are the wave of the future in tabletop products, say home furnishings designer Bob Van Allen and merchant Bernard Olsoff.

Speaking at an industry seminar, Van Allen said the domestics and ready-to-wear industries set trends in concert, and that contemporary designs tend to involve simple shapes and materials that mix.

The Almanac
TODAY IN HISTORY

By United Press International

Today is Sunday, July 29, the 210th day of 1979 with 155 to follow.

The moon is moving toward its first quarter.

The morning stars are Venus And Mars.

The evening stars are Mercury, Jupiter and Saturn.

Those born on this date are under the sign of Leo.

American novelist Booth Tarkington and Actor William Powell were born on July 29 — Tarkington in 1869 and Powell in 1892.

On this day in history:

In 1914, the first transcontinental telephone linkup was completed with conversation between San Francisco and New York City.

In 1967, fire swept the aircraft carrier USS Forrestal off the coast of Vietnam, killing 129 men.

In 1968, Pope Paul upheld the prohibition of all artificial means of birth control for Roman Catholics.

In 1974, the House Judiciary Committee voted a second impeachment article against President Nixon. The vote was 28-10.

A thought for the day: Commenting on the fact that boys can't wait to be men and men would like to be boys again, Booth Tarkington said, "It really is the land of nowadays that we never discover."

University Offers Higher Education Plan To Senior Citizens

By LIDIA WASOWICZ

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — This college program is for seniors only — 50 years and up.

A program of higher education to people in retirement is offered by the Fromm Institute for Lifelong Learning on the University of San Francisco campus. Current enrollment totals 135 students, aged 50 to 92, including 20 survivors of Nazi concentration camps, a veteran of the Spanish Civil War and an 89-year-old sailor who spent a life at sea.

Subjects from biology and foreign affairs to architecture and philosophy are taught.

The faculty is made up of nine emeritus university professors who rotate each term from a pool of 40. Those who taught this spring were aged 65 to 84. They included Robert Thornton, a physics professor who was Einstein's protege; Thomas Blaisdell, a political science professor who taught in India and China before holding a series of appointments in the Roosevelt and Truman administrations, and Charles Easton Rothwell, world traveler and expert on Asian politics who spent a dozen years in China, held various posts in the State Department and served as president of Mills College.

"We thought we'd be lucky to get 50 students when we first started," said Anna Fromm, who with her viticulturist husband Alfred co-founded the institute in 1976.

"Imagine my utter surprise when 600 people got in line to sign up for classes. One man even brought his 3-year-old grandson whom he wanted to register for a class in 60 years."

Interest in the institute has spread. Fromm, who is 74, said 52 universities have contacted the institute to inquire about the program.

"In 10 to 15 years, 10 percent of our population will be over 65," he said. "You can't just toss them aside with nothing to do. I hope this program will spawn somthing similar all over the nation."

There is a practical aspect to the program, Fromm said. "It keeps people out of nursing homes."

Tuition is low — $150 per year for three eight-week terms.

"I feel like a schoolgirl again," said one student, Anne Davis, 68, a retire librarian. "If you keep busy, you feel so much better mentally and physically."

Usage Of Plant Analysis Offering Farm Benefits

By KATHLEEN HARRIS
Avalanche-Journal Farm Writer

While agronomic researchers may disagree on the advantages and disadvantages of plant analysis, most will agree that farmers would benefit in some way from the relatively new tests.

The practice of sampling various parts of the plant is not a modern discovery, according to Dr. W. F. Bennett, associate dean of the Texas Tech University College of Agricultural Sciences.

"Plant analysis has been used by researchers for years as a diagnostic tool to see the results of soil fertility experiments," he said.

What is new is the use of plant analysis by farmers to determine the amount of nutrients within the plant for commercial production.

Bennett, whose speciality is plant nutrition and soil fertility, said the purpose of analyzing plant tissue is to increase yield by applying correct nutrients or decreasing the amount or type of fertilizer needed and therefore reducing production costs.

One of the nutrients checked in plant analysis is nitrogen. Large amounts of nitrogen can produce large, healthy plants while prohibiting blooms in cotton and tomatoes and affecting quality in sugarbeets and potatoes.

Art Carnrick, managing director of A &L Plains Laboratories, Inc., one of the area laboratories that performs plant analysis tests, said determining the nitrogen level can help the farmer decide if a nitrogen-arresting substance is needed.

"Some researchers have said spraying sugar on the crop will reduce the production of nitrogen," Carnrick said, "and, therefore, enhance the reproductive stage of the plant."

While the plant needs a vigorous vegetative stage to produce healthy stems and leaves to support the fruit or bolls, the farmer wants the plant to shift into a reproductive stage as soon as possible for as long as possible, he explained.

Sugar application is not recommended in this area, Carnrick said, but boron applications may be used to achieve the same affects.

The petiole, or stalk that supports the leaf, is used to monitor cotton based on research and field data developed by Professor Richard Maples and Dr. Woody Miley of Arkansas. Research has determined which part of the plant is the best indicator in most crop plants.

"If the farmer wants to test his cotton, he should bring in about 50 to 60 petioles from average plants," Carnrick said. "The first sample should be taken about four weeks before the average first bloom. Tests should be rerun about every week to 10 days throughout the growing season."

Bennett pointed out that, like soil sampling, the results will be only as good as the sample.

"Petiole and plant analysis can be used beneficially, provided the samples are properly taken," he said, "and they are analyzed with the correct interpretation."

"One of the disadvantages of plant analysis," Bennett continued, "is that data for interpretation of results often is unavailable for local conditions."

General nutrient levels for most crops grown commercially have been established for a large number of conditions and growth stages, but such data includes information gathered from across the nation, which is not always sufficient for the West Texas area, he said.

If the plant material is found to have an excess of nitrogen, Carnrick said it is usually recommended to apply one-tenth of a pound of boron per acre. The treatment may have to be applied up to three times in the growing season, he said.

Cotton is unique, Carnrick pointed out, because even after the bolls have set, they can begin to fall off. Most other crops will not drop their fruit after it has been established.

"If the crop has been irrigated," he explained, "the nitrogen may have been washed deeper and deeper into the soil.

"If a July rain comes, the tap root may grow down to where the nitrogen level is. This may cause a return to vegetative growth and blooms and bolls may drop off."

Carnrick said plant analysis at this stage could show the excess of nitrogen present and an application of boron would be recommended instead of waiting for a stress period to force reproductive growth.

Bennett cautioned that deficiencies may show up too late for corrective action and nutrients may be in excess or deficient status due to climatic conditions and adequacy of moisture.

"Samples of plants should be taken to a laboratory of the farmer's choice," Bennett said. "Field tests can often be manipulated to obtain certain results."

Tests will cost about $10 per sample and cotton should be sampled up to 10 times during the season, Carnrick said. The biggest cost of treatments would be the expense of aerial application, he noted.

"If the program prescribed by a lab is followed," Carnick said, "the farmer could expect one-fourth to one-half bale per acre extra."

Carnick quoted a study conducted by Texas A&M University in Dawson County where it was found that cotton bringing 45 cents a pound could net an extra $45to $60 per acre with petiole monitoring or analysis.

Even if the results of the analysis are not used during the current growing season, Bennett said, the information could be used to monitor the nutrients captured and give a reflection on the adequacy of the fertilizer program for next year.

PLAINS AGRICULTURE

By DUANE HOWELL

HIGHER-YIELDING COTTON PLANTS that can be genetically engineered to provide the desired fiber length, strength, and micronaire, as well as disease and insect resistance, are just around the corner for cotton producers.

That is the word from several researchers who have been striving to develop hybrid cottons.

"In the next five years, commercialization of hybrid cotton will expand to where it is a common product in the marketplace," says Dr. Wolfgang Wessling, director of genetics and breeding research for Cotton Inc.

Cotton Inc. since the mid-1970s has been funding research on hybrid cotton with Dr. Dick Davis of New Mexico State University at Las Cruces and with Dr. J. B. Weaver at the University of Georgia.

THE BIGGEST OBSTACLE IN DEVELOPING hybrid seed that could be commercialized now has been overcome, says Wessling. That obstacle was developing fertility restorer lines which are necessary for seed breeders to assure complete fertilization in the hybridization process.

New Mexico State University has turned over to five commercial seed breeders seed of one restorer plus the A and B seed lines necessary for the breeders to develop commercial hybrid cottons.

"With the hybrid seed, we eventually will be able to find the parent plants that can give us a wide range of properties for the marketplace," says Wessling.

"With the hybrid cottons, cotton will become more competitive with synthetic fibers because we will be able to provide mills with made-to-order fibers in a much shorter time span than is conceivable now with conventional seed breeding programs," he adds.

"WHILE GETTING INCREASED YIELDS, we will be able to manipulate the plant to give us the desired fiber length, strength, micronaire and fiber uniformity. We also will be able to obtain a range of maturity groups and also incorporate disease or insect resistance into the hybrids."

Boosts of up to 20 percent and more have been reported, according to Wessling. But he cautions that when hybrid seeds become commercialized, producers could expect about a 10 percent increase in yields.

Weaver's research involves crossing Pima cottons with upland cotton. The challenge for researchers, he explains, is to create a hybrid by crossing an upland cotton with an upland cotton while getting the same fertility that is currently available in the upland-Pima cross.

Researchers say a cross of upland with upland should give an increase in yield and earliness as well as better disease resistance, more tolerance to certain insects, and improved seedling vigor.

He explains that for hybrid cotton to be of value belt wide the researchers have to develop sucessfully a match of upland cottons with full fertility and excellent combining ability. Combining ability, he explains, is the ability to transfer selected characteristics to the offspring.

"Achieving full fertility must come first," he comments. "I suspect it will come in three years."

His work with a cross of upland and Pima cottons has resulted in a long staple hybrid cotton with 15 percent more fiber yield than the best Acala 1517 and 20 to 25 percent more seed, he says.

"We are going to have far more versatility with hybrid cottons than we can have with conventional breeding programs," he says.

He also speculates that development of hybrid cottons will result in the reconsideration of all aspects of cotton production, from row spacing to irrigation to harvesting, ginning and spinning.

Farm Income Data Eyed

By DON KENDALL

WASHINGTON (AP) — After many years of using assorted bookkeeping to show how farmers' incomes stack up, the Agriculture Department is trying to work out a single method of making the figures public.

The department's annual income figures, almost continually revised as further information is available, frequently are disputed, particularly by many farmers when the statistics show big increases from one year to another.

Last winter, for example, the American Agriculture Movement — which at the time was moving tractorcades into Washington — denounced the department's claim that net farm income rose sharply in 1978.

Farmers who did not share in the reported huge gain disputed the latest figures showing a 43 percent increase in farm income last year to $26.8 billion from $18.7 billion in 1977.

Reporting farmers' incomes always has been difficult for department analysts and others who have to interpret and write about the figures.

For one thing, income figures are national in scope. They do not, by themselves, indicate the great variations among regions of the country, nor the differences among producers of the various farm commodities.

One year livestock producers may fare much worse than grain or cotton farmers. Soybean producers may reap much richer rewards than rice producers. Or dairy farmers may be doing better than poultry producers.

The main value of farm income statistics on a national scale is in changes from one year to another, recognizing that not all farmers share equally in the increases or declines in farm income when they occur.

Another substantial increase in farm income is forecast for this year, based in part on the outlook for bumper grain crops and the higher prices farmers are getting for wheat, corn, cattle, milk and a number of other commodities.

But the method of reporting the figures for 1979 is undergoing a significant change from previous years. It involves somewhat nightmarish procedures that only USDA economists seem to understand or appreciate fully.

Even so, because USDA's farm income figures so often get involved in controversy — and sometimes in political claims and accusations — some explanation may be in order.

For many years, the department has published annually or more frequently two basic farm income references to show how much farmers actually netted after paying their bills.

These figures involve only the incomes from farming — the sales of grain, cotton, livestock and other products. They do not take into account earnings from off-farm jobs, which are reported in other ways by the department.

In most years, the two methods have resulted in one set of figures being somewhat larger than the other. Obviously, if an official or politician wanted to claim progress in bolstering farm income, the higher figure was tempting.

Department income reports also show the total gross or "cash receipts" farmers get from selling their products, the value of government payments and other incomes related to farming operations.

The amount of money left over then is the net income of farmers. This is the point at which USDA experts are seeking to make changes. And it is complicated.

For many years net farm income has been reported in two ways. The first method existed under different names, including "realized net income" and, the latest label, "net farm income before inventory adjustment."

This method, which has been favored by many authorities over the years, includes only the actual money farmers have left over after paying expenses, the amount they "realized" as net income in a year.

The second method involves reporting "net farm income after inventory adjustment." It takes into account the increases or decreases in value of commodities that farmers have on hand.

For example, if a farmer had 1,000 bushels of wheat stored that was worth $2 a bushel one year but had 2,000 bushels worth the same price the next, the inventory adjustment would be $2,000. Price changes also are taken into account.

That would be counted as "net farm income after inventory adjustment." Similar procedures are used in estimating changes for other items, including livestock and other sources of potential cash income.

In an annual farm income report by USDA three years ago, officials explained that "for some purposes, particularly for combining with the national income estimates of the nonfarm economy, which measure the net value of production during the calendar year, it is necessary to take into account changes in farm inventories."

But the report continued that "it should be kept in mind that the value of a buildup in inventories is 'unrealized' until sold and that prices realized at the time of sale may be considerably different from those prevailing during the year of accumulation."

The 1976 report also noted "the most commonly used measure of the net return from agriculture is realized net income" which later was changed to "net farm income before inventory adjustment."

Currently, USDA is forecasting net farm income in 1979 will rise to between $30 billion and $34 billion, with the most likely level predicted at $32.8 billion, according to the economists. That is on the basis of "after inventory adjustment."

By comparison, farmers' "net income after inventory adjustment" last year was about $27.9 billion, about $1.1 billion more than the $26.8 billion computed in the other way.

SCABIES OUTBREAKS

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department says eight outbreaks of cattle scabies, a skin disease caused by small mites, were confirmed last month. They were reported in Arizona, California, Colorado, Iowa, Minnesota, Nebraska, Nevada and Texas. The disease can be remedied by dipping the infected cattle in pesticide solutions.

JAMES TAYLOR

S.M. TRUE

County Agents Pick Area 'Men Of Year'

S. M. True of Plainview and Jimmy Taylor of Big Spring have been named "Man of the Year in Texas Agriculture" for 1979 for the South Plains and Far West Texas districts, respectively, by the Texas County Agricultural Agents Association.

The men, along with five other Texans selected for the honor, will receive the awards during the state association annual meeting Aug. 5-8 in Amarillo.

The awards are presented annually to outstanding leaders in agriculture and related industries, said Houston County extension agent Billy R. Percival, president of the association. The award also recognizes contributions made by these leaders to improving levels of living and economic growth in their communities, counties, state and nation.

True has been a longtime leader in the Texas Farm Buresu and has been a supporter of extension service programs. He currently serves as chairman of the South Plains Development Program which is designed to improve the economic well-being of a 19-county area, particularly relating to agriculture and agribusiness.

He also has been chairman of the Hale County Program Building Committee for eight years and has served as advisor to four subcommittees dealing with the production of cotton, feedgrains, small grains and other crops. True has served on the advisory committee of the Texas A&M University Agricultural Research and Extension Center at Lubbock.

The agricultural leader has supported and participated in agricultural result demonstrations in Hale County and been a 4-H leader for more than 20 years. He received the 4-H Alumni and Spur Clip awards for his support of the organization.

True is a director and secretary-treasurer of the Texas Farm Bureau and is chairman of the Education and Research Committee. For the past 17 years, True has served as superintendent of the swine division of the Plainview Stock Show and has been a past president and on the board of directors of the stock show during the past 25 years.

He is a director of the Plainview Chamber of Commerce and Agriculture, past president of the Hale County Fair Association and is active in many civic and church activities.

Taylor has been in the ranching business since 1956. He is a Quarter Horse and Hereford breeder and is president of First National Bank of Big Spring.

He has shown his support of extension service programs through his work as a 4-H leader for horse programs in Howard County and numerous 4-H and youth related livestock activities.

Taylor was Howard County Extension agent until 1961 when he became agricultural representative and later assistant vice president of the bank. Before moving to Howard County, he was extension agent in Young, Reeves and Loving counties. He received a bachelor's degree in animal science from Texas A&M.

He is director of the Big Spring Cowboy Reunion, director of the Howard County Fair Association, director of the Sandhills Hereford and Quarter Horse Show, director of the Dora Roberts Foundation, and secretary of the Howard County Hereford Breeders Association.

Taylor also serves on the board of directors of Howard County College and on the advisory board of the Howard County Junior Rodeo. He is past president of the Big Spring Rotary Club and YMCA and is chairman of the Big Spring Industrial Foundation.

Other recipients are Homer M. Gibbs, agricultural official with Texas Power and Light Co., Dallas; Clark Bolt, Waco Tribune-Herald farm editor; J. D. Sartwelle, Jr., president of Pork City Stockyards of Sealy and Brenham; Reynaldo Alaniz, Starr County rancher; and Ulus E. Ray, Sinton farmer and agribusinessman.

Boosts Slated For Cotton Classing Fees

Increases in fees for cotton classing services and cotton fiber processing tests, and increased prices for cotton standards, will take effect Aug. 1, a U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) official has announced.

Jesse F. Moore, head of the Agricultural Marketing Service's cotton division, said the higher fees are needed to cover the costs of performing services.

The minimum fee for classing each lot of cotton handled separately will be increased from $4 to $5.

The fee for rewriting classification memorandums will be increased from $1.35 to $1.50 per sheet.

The fee for a combination classification for cotton futures will be increased from $1.20 to $1.50 per sample.

Prices for domestic shipments of physical grade standards for American Upland cotton will be $35 for the 12-sample Universal Standards box and $20 for a six-sample guide box. A six-sample grade standard for American Pima cotton will cost $35. Lengths of staple standards for American Upland and American Pima cotton may be purchased for $6 and $7 per one-pound roll, respectively.

Fees for more than 90 cotton fiber and processing tests also will be increased beginning Aug. 1.

Solutions To Energy Problems Expected By Company Official

By MAX B. SKELTON

HOUSTON (AP) — W.T. Slick Jr. says solutions will soon take shape once Americans accept the fact an energy problem really exists.

"The citizenry has to be rallied to the cause," said the Exxon Co. USA senior vice president.

"Hopefully, that process has been set in motion."

Slick said President Carter laid out an ambitious program in his energy messages.

"Whether all his goals are fully attainable is less important than the president's determination to meet the energy problem head on," he said.

"There can be disagreement about the specifics and emphasis of policy, but none about the need to take action."

Slick said there is need now for a united national effort to deal realistically "with the situation this country has gotten itself into."

"We have become dependent on other countries for almost 50 percent of our crude oil supply," he said.

The fundamental cause of gasoline lines, he said, is a crude oil shortage and supply shortfall complicated by substantially increased demand for gasoline.

"The reality of the situation is Americans want more petroleum products, including gasoline, than can be obtained from the crude oil supplies we have available," Slick said.

"Although the supply outlook fluctuates almost weekly, we have scant hopes for a miraculous increase in supply."

Slick said there are several things that can be done right now, at no great expense, to reduce the ever-increasing dependency on high cost foreign oil.

"They start with conservation," he said.

This means, he added, obeying the 55-mile speed limit, moderate thermostat settings, inducing airlines to carry more passengers, and intensifying production and use of the domestic energy resources now available, such as the substitution of coal for oil wherever possible, especially in power plants.

"All of the steps available add up to over 1.2 million barrels per day, more than enough to meet the immediate problem," Slick said.

For the longer term, however, Slick said the nation must face up to the "plain fact we will never solve our energy problems until the selling price of U.S. oil is equal to its replacement cost."

A business that offers merchandise at a price lower than its replacement, he said, will not be in business very long.

"But that is exactly what our governments policy has been for domestic oil supplies for most of this decade," Slick said.

Slick said that does not mean ever-escalating gasoline prices are the answer to the energy problems.

"All I am suggesting is the prices of produts, including gasoline, should more accurately reflect the replacement cost of the oil from which those products are refined," he said.

Slick said Carter has called for 2.5 million barrels per day of alternative domestic fuels by 1990, such as synthetic fuels from coal and oil shale.

He said such a program can be accomplished but added there is need to check on what it would accomplish and what it would require.

Slick said Americans now consume the equivalent of about 28 million barrels of oil and gas each day and another 10 million barrels equivalent of other energy forms such as coal and nuclear.

"Of our petroleum consumption, this year, about 10 million barrels per day is domestic oil, another 10 million barrels is natural gas, and the remaining 8 million barrels is imported oil," he said.

"So even if our imports don't grow in the future, which is a story by itself, 2.5 million barrels per day of alternative fuels would be only a beginning at working on our import problem."

Slick said a 50,000 barrels a day synthetic fuels plant would take at least eight years to be designed and built and would cost $2 to $3 billion.

"By way of contrast, when Exxon enlarged its Baytown refinery two years ago, for an added output of 250,000 barrels a day, the total cost was $500 million," he said.

"In other words, for less than one-fourth of the cost, we got five times as much production. That should give an idea of the enormous expense involved in producing synthetic fuels."

OFFSHORE TEST—This offshore rig is shown drilling for reserves in the Lake Washington field off southern Louisiana. A recent test in that field recovered 432 barrels of oil plus 1,250,000 cubic feet of natural gas per day. While the nation's energy dependence continues to grow, such additions to existing fields appears to offer the best prospects for assured supplies of petroleum in the immediate future.

Railroad Commission Reports New Strikes In Texas Sectors

AUSTIN (Special) -Texas operators reported 24 oil and 61 gas discoveries during the July 1-15, 1979, period, according to the Railroad Commission's Oil and Gas Division.

In the year-earlier period, 11 oil and 54 gas discoveries were filed with the state's energy regulatory agency.

Through the first 6 1/2 months of 1979, Texas operators have reported 709 gas and 247 oil discoveries, against 582 gas and 243 oil discoveries in the year-earlier period. Successful exploratory and field completions in the 6 1/2 months of 1979 total 4,260 oil and 3,075 gas, against 4,503 oil and 3,057 gas completions in the same period last year.

Oil discoveries in the first half of July included six in the Refugio area, five in North Texas, four in deep South Texas, three in the Lubbock area, two each in Southeast and West Central Texas, and one each in the San Antonio area and East Texas.

Gas discoveries included 26 in deep South Texas, 12 each in the Refugio area and Southeast Texas, four in the San Antonio area, two each in East and West Central Texas, and one each in East, North and Panhandle Texas areas.

In the July 1-15 period, operators reported 164 exploratory and field tests wound up as dry holes. There were 1,809 dry holes reported in the first 6 1/2 months of 1979 against 2,281 a year earlier.

New applications for permits to drill oil and gas tests totaled 841 in the first half of July compared with 667 in the same period of 1978.

Operators filed 189 amended applications to drill.

There have been 10,442 applications to drill new oil and gas tests this year, against 10,641 in the same period of 1978. Applications to drill, deepen, plugback and for service wells so far this year total 12,150 against 12,703 in the first 6 1/2 months of 1978.

The commission reports that state and federal leases in offshore and coastal Texas petroleum provinces produced 156,973 barrels of crude oil during April, 1979, in contrast to 132,561 barrels in the same month of 1978 and 130,695 barrels in March, 1979.

Casinghead gas production totaled 288,604 Mcf in April against 379,735 Mcf in the same month of 1978 and 384,659 Mcf in March.

Condensate production on the state and federal leases amounted to 287,128 barrels in April, up from 136,315 barrels a year earlier and down from 320,419 barrels in March.

Wells on state offshore leases in April produced 69,889 barrels of oil; 99,124 Mcf of casinghead gas, 16,269,780 Mcf of natural gas and 146,155 barrels of condensate.

THE ROUSTABOUT

By RAY WESTBROOK

THE PRESIDENT'S energy program is a giant step backward, according to David L. Babson & Co. Inc., an investment counseling firm.

Thomas C. Stakem Jr., writing for the company's weekly staff letter, said changes in federal energy regulations which were proposed by President Carter some three months ago might have pulled the nation out of its energy enigma.

Referring to the President's recent energy address to the nation, Stakem said, ". . .Sunday night he wiped out that hope, and apparently dropped the free-market approach he previously favored. He committed himself—and perhaps the nation—to a wrong-headed course of action that would certainly make the energy situation worse."

The investment official believes the new proposals bring together all the least practical solutions to our energy problems, at least for the next decade, and that private enterprise will take a back seat.

"The President who campaigned against Washington now wants to turn the future growth of the energy industries over to the federal bureaucracies—and create two new agencies into the bargain.

"If enacted, the program would not be a success. But the attempt to carry it out would slash potential energy supplies for the 1980s," he said.

Stakem thinks the long-term ideas of President Carter have little chance of yielding the desired output even by the end of this century.

"The President said very little about the costs of his proposals. But even a partial version could entail staggering sums. After a determined try at holding U.S. fuel prices down by means of controls, the administration has decided to back new energy sources that would require prices at least two or three times the current level."

THE MOST IMPORTANT implication of the energy plan involves a further curtailment of the freedoms of U.S. citizens by their own government, a point, Stakem says, that received not so much as a nod in the energy speech.

"The proposed energy bureaucracies could influence every energy decision (which means, every economic decision) of every household."

He notes that the best comfort at the moment is the knowledge that it hasn't happened yet. "Congressmen may still feel grass-roots pressure against big new spending projects. The negative reception that the proposals got, both at home and abroad, may warn them off. Sooner or later, the damage caused by the President's 'solutions' would force changes in the program, but by that time, the cost to the nation's economy could be very high."

Stakem said Carter wants to stimulate domestic output of fuels by subsidizing oil production from shale and tar sands and the conversion of coal into gas and liquid forms. "None of these sources could greatly raise U.S. energy supplies before the late 1980's, and we face serious shortages long before then."

The sheer size of such projects is in itself an obstacle. "Construction of a single plant could take eight to 10 years. To meet President Carter's goal for synthetic fuel production, at least 20 plants would have to be built, adding years, if not decades, to the timetable," he said.

Solar power was the most exotic energy source mentioned by the President, and also the least promising, according to Stakem. Until the energy address, "even its most devout advocates expected no more than 6 percent of the U.S. power supply to come from the sun by the year 2000.

THE PERMIAN BASIN PETROLEUM ASSOCIATION (PBPA) has published a criticism of the United States for providing petroleum supplies to Israel in fulfillment of a general agreement reached between the two countries in past Mid-East peace "initiatives."

The agreement called for the U.S. to guarantee oil supplies to Israel if that country would relinquish the Sinai oil fields captured in the 1967 war with Egypt and Syria.

PBPA reports statistics indicating the volume currently involves 500,000 barrels per day of light oil and finished products, and questions whether such a promise to Begin should be kept.

PBPA incorrectly calls the treaty an "unreported" energy pact, as though something hidden were going on that should be stopped. But page-one news stories detailing the progress of the Sinai negotiations probably are still recalled by most readers.

However, PBPA may be right in questioning that wisdom emanates from the Potomac.

One veteran oil scout from Midland thinks the U.S. may have been 180 degrees off course in pressuring Israel to hand back the fields, anyway.

Recalling the 1973 war, when Israel had cut off the Egyptian army, he said, "We shouldn't have stopped them—because we would have been able to buy oil from Israel!"

It was just Washington's way of snatching another defeat from the jaws of victory.

Companies Finding Reserves Exist In Own Backyards

HOUSTON (Special) -The search for crude oil and natural gas is taking energy companies ever further into offshore waters and to distant onshore locations. Companies, such as Aminoil USA, however, are finding that there are still commercial hydrocarbon deposits to be found in the industry's own backyard.

Aminoil is the operator for a group of companies that recently discovered what could be as much as 50 billion cubic feet of natural gas reserves in a portion of the Wilcox Trend that runs through Live Oak County of South Texas.

"Since the early 1900's, thousands of wells have been drilled in the Wilcox Trend," Aminoil Geologist Vern Rude notes, "and hundreds of them have led to commercial discoveries. Our Live Oak County discovery is just one indication that additional potential remains."

Rude and Roy Beckelhymer, the Aminoil explorationists who handled evaluation of the Live Oak prospect from the time it was submitted to the company, are confident that the discovery is only one of a number of successes that Aminoil will have onshore.

Submitted last October by an independent exploration company, the Live Oak prospect stood up to all of the tests Rude, Beckelhymer and Aminoil's other exploration experts could apply to it.

"My approach on a submittal is to try to bust it apart," says Rude. "I use all of the seismic data and drilling information available to try to prove that it is not a good prospect." Other experts on Aminoil's exploration team involved in evaluating the prospect were landmen, electric log analysts, economic analysts and production engineers.

Located about five miles from George West, or midway between Corpus Christi and San Antonio, the discovery well was spudded on Oct. 20, 1978, and reached its projected depth of 10,500 feet on Dec. 15.

"We found hydrocarbons just about where we expected to find them," notes Gulf Coast District Manager Al Newton. When the discovery was tested for production, it tested at a flow rate of 7.1 million cubic feet of natural gas and 104 barrels of condensate per day through a 20/64-inch choke.

Newton explained that Aminoil will continue to look at submittals from independent consultants and other companies, in addition to generating prospects on its own.

Japan's Nuclear Energy Needs Aid

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States should cooperate with Japan in its development of a nuclear breeder reactor, says the head of a House subcommittee on energy research and production.

Rep. Mike McCormack, a Washington democrat, said Wednesday the administration should recognize that Japan poses no threat of nuclear weapons development and should help the nation develop a breeder reactor. McCormack spoke at a news conference conducted with members of the Japanese parliament (Diet). The administration opposes U.S. development of a breeder reactor using and producing plutonium.

A-J Oil News

Production Delays Proving Expensive

TULSA, Okla. (Special) -Five years of delay in oil production from Exxon Co. U.S.A. leases in the Santa Barbara Channel have cost the nation more than $500 million in payments for alternative foreign crude.

Each additional day of regulatory delay costs another $350,000, according to the Oil and Gas Journal.

More than 11 years have passed since Exxon acquired its federal leases in the Santa Barbara Channel. And 10 years have passed since the company found its first field on the leases.

Under normal planning assumptions, the company expected to start production from the leases more than five years ago. Numerous delays from federal, state and local regulatory obstacles, however, have prevented the first barrel from being produced.

The delays are continuing to erode the economics of the project and may deny the nation a significant domestic source of oil and gas.

Exxon officials have estimated peaks of 27,000 barrels per day with initial development and 80,000 barrels daily with full development of the Santa Ynez Unit, which consists of 17 leases and was formed in 1970 after three fields—Hondo, Pescado and Sacate—were discovered.

Exxon is operator for a group which includes Shell Oil Co. and Chevron U.S.A. Inc.

The Journal cites six events which have caused the delay:

—Preparation of a 1,800-page environmental impact statement for oil and gas development by Interior.

—Preparation by Santa Barbara County of an environmental impact report for an onshore treating facility and marine terminal, followed by approvals by the County Planning Commission, Board of Supervisors, and voters through a county-wide referendum.

—Permit action from the South Central Regional Coastal Commission for the coastal zone portion of oil and gas pipelines and the marine terminal, which was followed by review and rejection of approval by the State Coastal Zone Commission upon opponents' appeal.

—Requirement by the Environmental Protection Agency for a water discharge permit for the floating offshore storage and treating vessel. The EPA attempted to attach air emissions control conditions to the permit. That process consumed 1 1/2 years.

—Unexpected and unprecedented EPA air permit requirement for an Outer Continental Shelf (OCS) operation under provisions of the Clean Air Act.

One of the obstacles has been getting the necessary approvals and permits for the offshore storage and treating facility, which will be a converted tanker moored near the platform in federal waters.

Firm Bolsters Exploration Expenditures

DENVER, Colo. (Special) -Standard Oil Co. of California, parent organization of Chevron U.S.A. Inc., has announced a $400 million increase in its 1979 capital and exploratory expenditure program.

Oil and gas exploration expenditures are being increased from $480 million to about $730 million, with 70 percent of the increase to be expended in the United States.

Development and production expenditures are being increased from $745 million to more than $850 million, with 66 percent of the increase directed to domestic projects.

The company reported that it also is giving special attention to energy conservation projects, acceleration of its shale oil programs, and research and development of synthetic fuels.

The supplemental expenditure program for the balance of the year will increase the 1979 total to more than $2.3 billion. This is more than double Standard's net earnings for last year and a 35 percent increase over 1978 expenditures. About $1.5 billion, or 63 percent of total 1979 expenditures, will be in the United States.

During the first part of this year the firm's earnings and cash flow exceeded earlier forecasts. This, together with improved economic incentives, makes it possible for the company to invest additional sums in energy development, a spokesman said. The company added, however, that this high level of expenditures might require some limited outside financing.

Auto Dealers Cutting Prices To Move Stocks

By GUY DARST

DETROIT (AP) — Loaded with record inventories, auto dealers are leaving no stone — or prospect — unturned in their efforts to "move the iron."

Stocks of unsold new cars stood at 2.15 million for the domestic industry at the beginning of the month, up from an earlier record of 1.91 million in May. Even lots of the hot-selling imports were beginning to fill again.

Since the current sales slump is widely blamed on fears of gasoline shortages, just about every manufacturers' advertisement plugs mileage in one way or another. The big cars boast about how big their fuel tanks are and how far they'll take you.

Dealer ads promise "fantastic deals." Manufacturers are offering rebates to dealers that could reach $700 a car to move the laggards. Chrysler Corp. is mailing offers of $2 to 6 million prospects just to visit a dealership. Offers of free gasoline are cropping up.

"I haven't seen it this bad in 32 years," said Terry Houck, sales manager for Wilson Ford in Huntington Beach, Calif.

"The inventory situation will correct itself. W've already started," said Ford dealer Ed Schmid in Ferndale, Mich., a Detroit suburb. "Believe it or not, I just had a guy trade in a Honda."

Generally, the industry likes to keep enough cars on hand for 60 selling days. That gives enough variety so most buyers do not have to wait too long.

But the supply is now 80 days — 54 for imports — enough to last until mid October even if not another car is built. The truck inventory is 110 days.

General Motors Corp. says its supply of front-wheel drive compacts has shrunk to less than 10 days overall, and plants making those are working overtime. But there are 206 days of Buick Electras on the lots.

Ford's Pinto is down to 53 days — and the luxury Lincoln Mark V At 210 days.

All that costs money. Dealers must pay the factory when the car is delivered, borrowing money at 12 to 14 percent to do so until the car is sold. Part of Chrysler Corp.'s well-publicized financial woes stem from its unique practice of building cars without dealer orders and financing the resulting inventory itself.

The sharp buyer can take advantage of the big-car glut, perhaps saving enough on the purchase price to make up for the extra gasoline costs over the life of the car, noted Rufus E. Runzheimer Jr., president of a fleet operators' consulting firm.

That calculation takes care. A different calculation must be made with equal care on the dealer's side.

Leslie Emerson of Louis Chevrolet in Lewiston, Maine explains: "They give the dealer 'bogies' — sales targets, which vary from dealer to dealer. The rebates to dealers are graduated based on what percentage of his target he reaches. He could get $500 a car back, if he reaches the target. But say he doesn't and gets only $200 back. If he's given away $500 on a car earlier, he's in the hole."

The discounts do make sales, said Schmid: "I had a salesman come in with a 1977 model with 50,000 miles on it. He was looking at the smaller cars because he said he couldn't afford a bigger one now. I was able to put him in an LTD (a full-size Ford)." To do that, Schmid reduced the price $300.

"Most of the guys I talk to are discounting $100 to $200, which is what I'm doing," said Emerson.

Solar Energy Systems' Future Looks Bright

By CHARLES S. TAYLOR

ATLANTA (UPI) — After several false starts, businessmen selling solar energy systems believe the outlook is good for sales to homeowners, small businesses and industries, apartments, motels and government agencies.

Federal tax credits have helped the small solar energy systems market, they say. Some states also are beginning to give tax credits. Those in the business of manufacturing and selling solar energy equipment believe that if low interest loans were made available to individuals who want to buy a solar heating-cooling system, the market would really take off.

They also say that as the cost of gasoline, fuel oil and electricity go up, solar energy will become much more competitive.

These opinions were expressed by businessmen and other solar advocates attending the recent International Solar Energy Society's 25th anniversary meeting in Atlanta. The session attracted representatives from 63 countries and 400 papers on solar energy were presented.

George White, 50, of Asheville, N.C., heads a firm, Whiteline, that manufactures 300 solar collectors a month for homes and small businesses. His sales extend to 15 states and include home installations, hotels, restaurants, car washes and retirement homes. His most recent sale was to a contractor who bought 560 solar collectors for installation on the roof of a college in Sylva, N.C.

"What we need," he said, "is a syste..n of low cost loans. If we can get money at the cost of municipal bonds — which is what many utility companies get it for — we could cover the country with solar equipment."

White has a letter from a motel owner in Asheville who wrote that he saved 2,183 gallons of heating oil over a seven-month period after installing White's solar energy equipment. Total savings on oil and electricity costs amounted to $1,600. The cost of the solar energy system was $8,500.

White says his system's cost for a 2,000 square foot home would be about $10,000 installed at present-day prices. It would supply 70 percent of the home's heating needs and 95 percent of the hot water requirements.

"Solar energy systems are not going to cet cheaper," White says. "Solar is just a combination of old techniques, using well known materials like copper and aluminum. Unless the price of these metals comes down, solar systems costs will not come down."

• • •

Larry Scott, a Casper, Wyo., contractor, has installed solar hot water systems at 128 car wash businesses. He's negotiating to sell his solar heating equipment to a nationwide car wash company.

Scott says owners of exploratory oil wells in Wyoming had to stop operations because of a diesel oil shortage and contacted him about installing solar-powered equipment. He says high temperature collectors that generate up to 600 degrees will be needed. Solar energy collectors capable of producing these temperatures were being displayed at the meeting.

Five years ago, Scott said, "there was a bunch of garbage in this business. There's still some garbage but now there are some very good things."

• • •

Joseph Farber, president of Solar Research Systems, Costa Mesa, Calif., predicts there will be booming solar energy market in California in about a year and in the country as a whole in 2-3 years.

Farber manufactures solar heat collectors and a special kind of heat pump for swimming pools. He says it costs about $1,000 a year using gas to heat a swimming pool year-round in California. A $2,500 solar heating system cuts that cost by 50 percent and with a California tax credit, a pool owner can regain his investment costs in 2½ years.

Walter Shropshire Jr., assistant director of the International Solar Energy Society, believes solar energy eventually could supply 10 to 20 percent of U.S. energy needs.

HY GARDENER HAS THE ANSWER:

Glad You Asked That!

Q: What's this I hear about porno star Marilyn Chambers now working as a sex therapist? Anything to this? — Paula R., Memphis, Tenn.

A: Yes. That's what Miss Chambers calls herself now. She's come out from behind her "Green Door" and holds sex clinic sessions in Las Vegas.

Stripping from a raised stage, she acts out simulated scenes covering all sexual problems, including impotency and homosexuality. A frank question-and-answer session with men and women in the audience follows. Marilyn feels she's helped hundreds of people solve their sex problems. "I am not ashamed to say or do anything on stage regarding sex," bubbles the one-time Ivory soap model. "And people feel more at home with me than they would on a psychologist's couch."

A: On the contrary. The only one of the fabulous foursome with his original marriage intact, Paul has been a walking ad for marital fidelity, fatherhood and home life. "It's nice waking up in the morning now," he says. "Instead of the dregs of the night, you have the refreshing faces of children and a cup of tea."

A: Not Begin. It was Abba Eban (Israel's former foreign minister) who was invited to write for Cairo's daily Al Ahram. Eban, fluent in Arabic, visited the paper recently when he accompanied Begin on a Cairo visit. He said the offer came from the editor, Ali Hamdi Al Gamal. Eban is now a member of the Israeli Knesset (parliament). No word yet as to whether or not he accepted the assignment.

Q: Isn't Muhammad Ali in poor health now as a result of all his fights? — A worried Ali fan, New Orleans.

A: That's what Top Rank promoter Bob Arum claims. He says Ali's kidneys are in such bad shape that he's in agony when he trains. "He passes blood for two months after each fight," says Arum. "His kidneys have been beaten into a state that if he does not retire now, he might never lead a normal life." But Ali's trainer, Angelo Dundee, says it ain't so. "It's nonsense to say Ali's health is at risk," declares Angelo. "I only wish my kidneys functioned half as well as Muhammad's."

Q: The recent TV movie, "Son-Rise: A Miracle of Love" about an autistic child — the boy who played the role was so believable. Was he, himself, really autistic? — Mrs. Richard Lewis, Minneapolis.

A: No. And most viewers were unaware of the fact that two boys were used interchangeably to play the difficult part. They were Michael and Casey Adams, three-and-a-half-year-old twins, and great-grandsons of pioneer movie notable, King Vidor.

Q: I remember Betty and Jerry Ford signed a contract with NBC to do some shows — but we haven't seen very much of them on TV since. What's happening? — Sally Reed, Peoria, Ill.

A: Although their contracts still had some time to run, the former president and his wife quietly agreed with the network to terminate the agreements. The plans to do a special with the former First Lady on her autobiography never got off the ground. And the two interviews Ford submitted achieved very low ratings. Though there's no Ford now in NBC's future, the family wound up with a couple of million NBC dollars.

A: No. Though Voight sang in "The Sound of Music" on Broadway, he confesses, "My instincts were good — but my singing was lousy!"

Send your questions to Hy Gardner, "Glad You Asked That," P.O. Box 11748, Chicago, Ill. 60611. Marilyn and Hy Gardner will answer as many questions as they can in their column, but the volume of mail makes personal replies impossible.

Festival Offers Projects, Food

The St. Elizabeth-St. John Neuman Catholic Church will sponsor a Summer Festival at 1 p.m. Aug. 25 at the church, 22nd Street and Frankford Avenue.

Activities for the day-long event include games, craft projects, sports events, movies, a country store sale and live entertainment.

A barbecue supper will be offered from 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. with a menu of chicken, potato salad, beans, onions and bread. Soft drinks, hotdogs, ice cream and snacks will be available during the day.

The festival is a project of the parish men's club and further information may be obtained by calling the church office at 762-5225.

VIOLENCE CLOSES STREET

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A mile-long strip of Whittier Boulevard in East Los Angeles will be closed at night during weekends in an effort to curb gang violence that has resulted in three killings this year. Supervisor Ed Edelman noted that in 1978 there were 12 gang-related murders along the popular cruising strip and 111 felonious assaults.

BurglarAlarmProduction Reaches All-Time High

By SGT. SIDNEY LYLE
Odessa Police Department

With the miniaturization of electronic equipment and other modern innovations, the increase in the manufacture of burglar alarms has reached an all time high.

First there was the simple switch type alarm that triggered a bell or buzzer. Today, intrusion alarms are manufactured in an endless variety of modes and levels of sophistication. There are motion detectors, vibration alarms, heat sensors, noise alarms, contact switch alarms, and pressure pads.

In most home installations, the homeowner who employs a burglar alarm unit uses an alarm that has been developed into a multi-use system that incorporates a combination of two or more of the basic types of alarms. The household system usually is developed from motion detectors for critical areas, and contact switches for doors and windows. But the total "system" is limited only by the user's imagination and ability to pay.

The cost of such alarm packages ranges upward to several thousands of dollars. However, you should be able to have a reasonably good alarm system installed for about one thousand dollars.

You should survey your local needs at your house and then have two or three reputable alarm representatives make bids on a package deal. Be sure to look into the repairability of the equipment you purchase. You can install the alarm system yourself but you will probably have to forego future equipment repair as most companies will not repair what they do not install.

Whether you have a home alarm or not has no bearing on other basic security measures. The alarm does not replace the need for adequate locks — the alarm only supplements your regular home security procedure.

Monkey References Are Chicago Woman

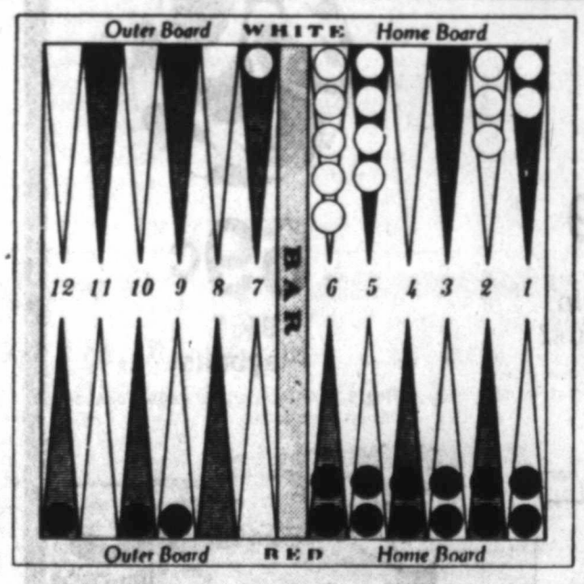

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Charles Wilson, D-Texas, has been chastized by a Chicago woman for comparing monkeys to Carter administration officials.

"They're cutting down the biggest trees and keeping the monkeys," Wilson said last week after President Carter fired HEW secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. and treasury secretary W. Michael Blumenthal. Wilson received a letter Thursday from Brenda Greenstone, who wrote: "Monkeys and other primates are known to display great social adaptability and even demonstrate wondrous political acumen and sophistication. Since these abilities are noticeably absent in top White House personnel, your 'monkey' reference is quite incongruous, inappropriate and insulting."

Backgammon

by Omar Sharif

It is White's turn, and he doubles. Should Red accept?

ANSWER TO BACKGAMMON PROBLEM

We continue with problems based on the doubling cube. Here, there is no contact between the opposing forces — it is a straight race. A pip count shows that White is ahead 65 to 73, and in addition he has the advantage of the roll. But that is not all. Red still has three men to bring home, while White has only one.

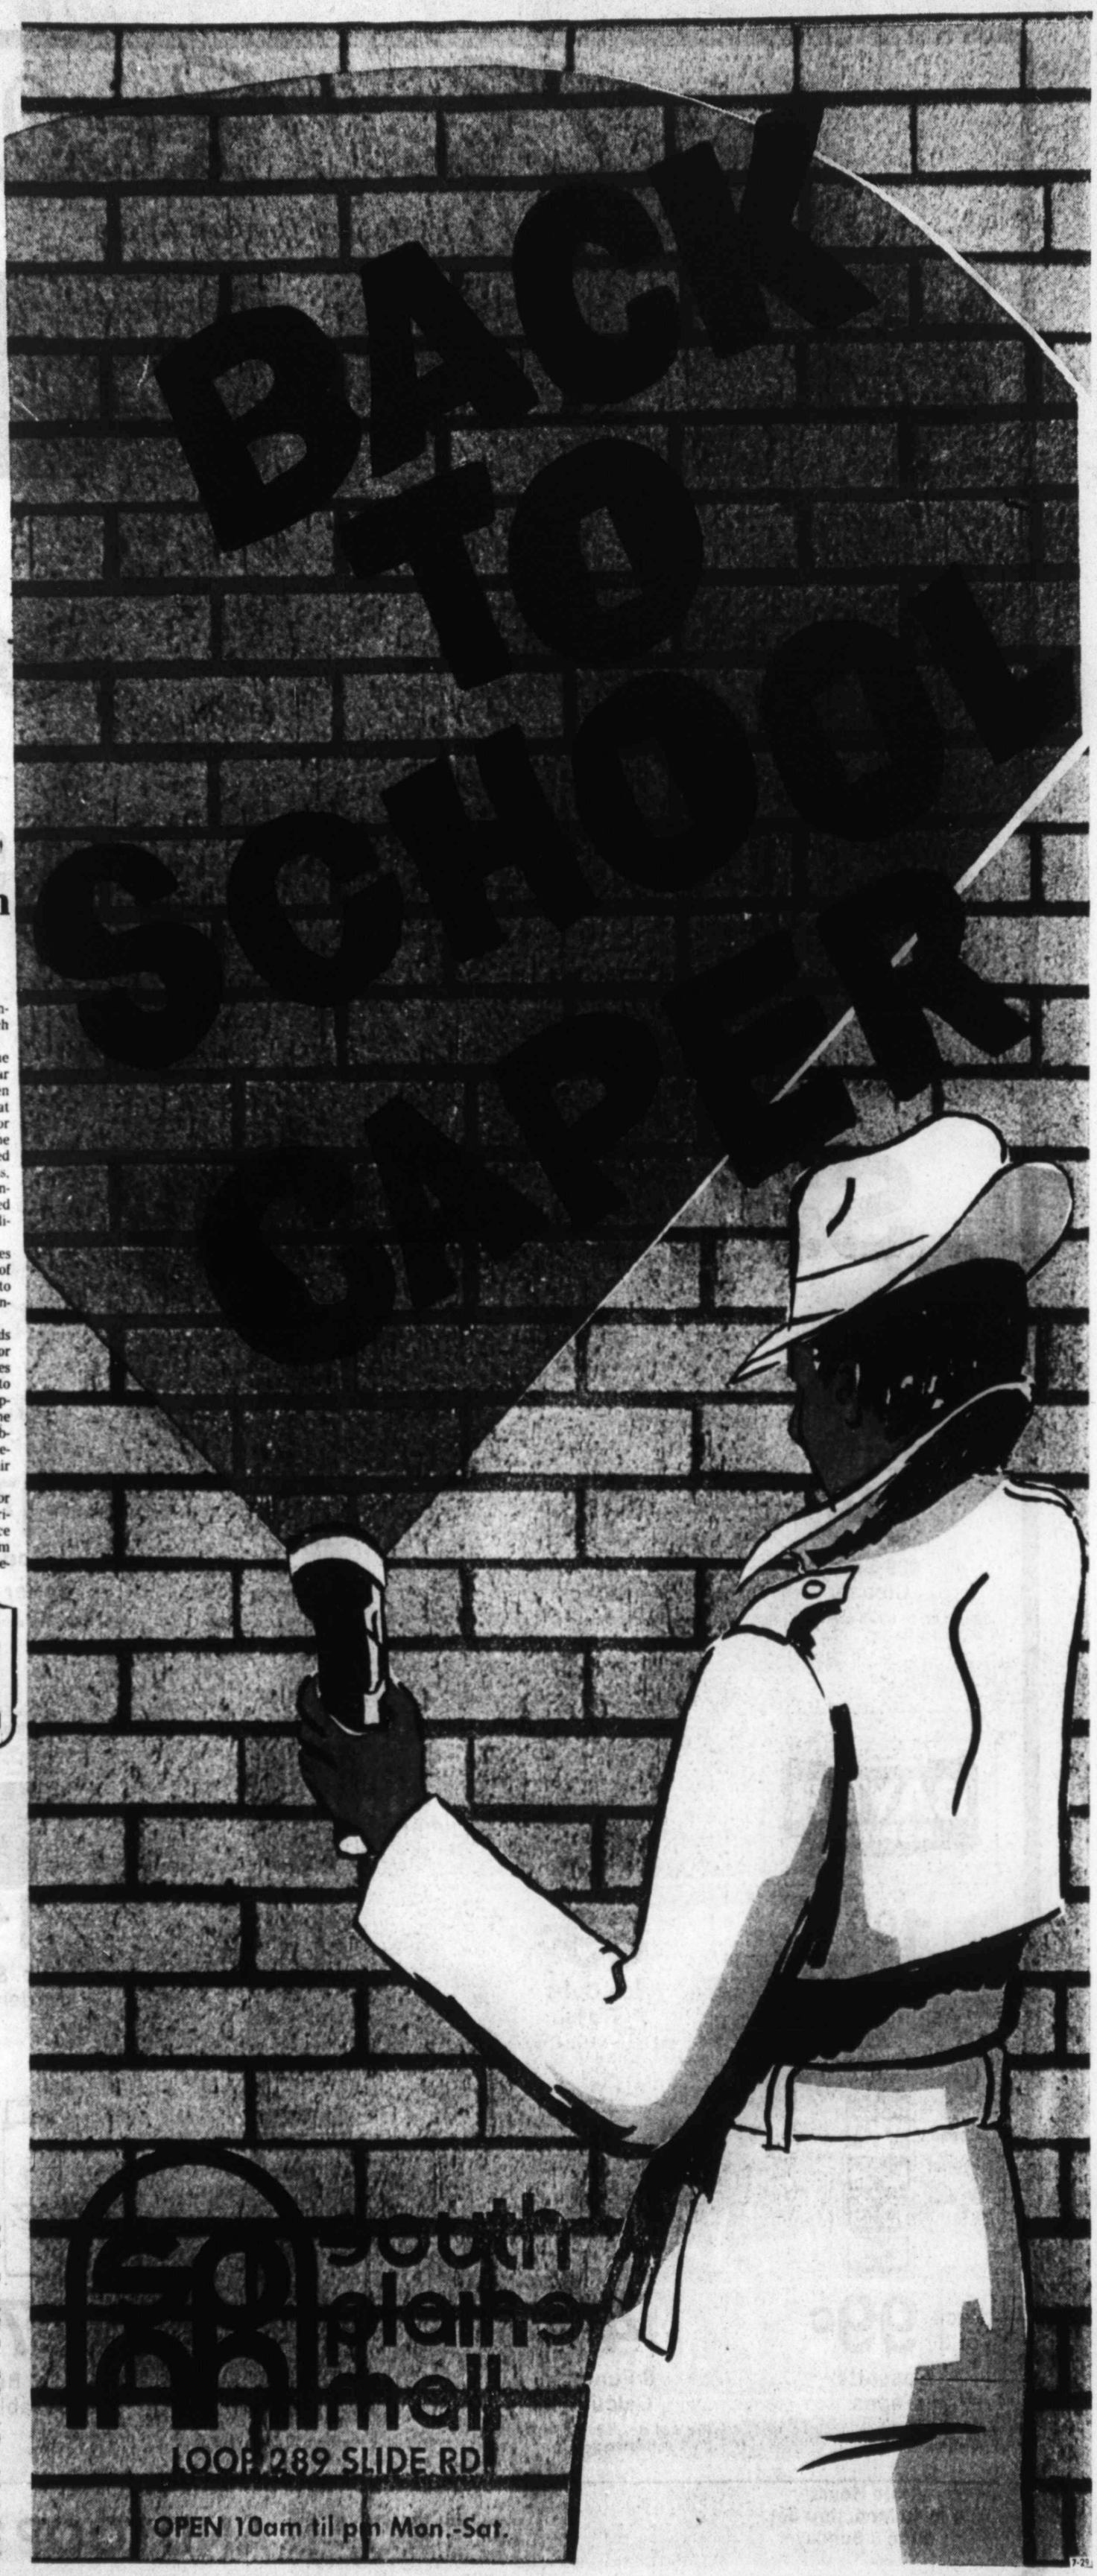

The break-even point for accepting a double is when your opponent is a 3-to-1 favorite. If his chances are less than that, you should always accept; if they are greater, to accept is sheer folly. In this situation, Red is just about a 3-to-1 underdog, so it is a toss-up as to whether he should accept.

When you are on the borderline of accepting a double, take outside factors into consideration. Perhaps the most important is diversification — i.e., the smoothness with which the opposing forces are deployed.

In this position, Red's forces are ideally postioned. All his points are occupied by two men. Once he brings home his three men from his outer board, he sould be able to bear off two men with virtually every roll of the dice.

By contrast, White is going to run into problems. His 6-and 5-points are overloaded, and he has no men on two of the points in his home board. Every time he rolls a 3 or a 4, he will have to move a man from his back points instead of bearing one off. (A 4 is especially harmful, since it doesn't even permit White to fill in one of the holes in his home board.) White is going to waste a lot of time in bearing off, and Red is far from out of the game.

Since there is no possibility of a backgammon, Red should accept the double. While White has an 8-pip lead, it is a "bad" 8 pips.

Families Moving Underground

By WARREN TALBOT
United Press International Writer

Going underground has taken on a new meaning for many families across the United States.

They are not attempting to evade authorities for some revolutionary act. Instead they are taking part in a housing construction idea which will allow them to ease the strangling grip of rising costs of energy and home construction.

People are literally moving underground, burrowing beneath the earth for safety and comfort, constructing homes in the sides of hills and underground from Cape Cod to California.

Underground homes save energy and space.

Proponents say these subterranean structures are relatively inexpensive to build and the cost should become less as more efficient construction industry methods are applied.

There are two basic construction concepts.

The first and most obvious is to build into the side of a hill and have only one exposed face. The other is to have a sunken atrium or courtyard and have all the rooms radiate off the courtyard. You also could put a permanent see-through covering over the courtyard to keep the elements out and let the sunlight in.

"Many people envision underground homes as dark, slimy places filled with spiders and rats," said architect Malcolm Wells of Brewster, Mass., on Cape Cod, who is building such a home for himself. "While some buildings are like vaults, most have windows or skylights to allow the building to fill with sunlight."

"The most obvious reason for moving underground is that properly done these homes can save a fair amount of energy in both heating and cooling," said Wells, the author of "Underground Designs" and several books on solar energy. He has constructed or helped design several such homes and has an office in New Jersey built underground.

The few contractors and architects who specialize in underground homes say they have received thousands of requests for construction plans.

Two years ago there were only about two dozen such homes in the United States. Now there are at least 2,000 either completed or in various stages of construction. Thousands more are expected to be finished before the turn of the century, according to Charles Lane, of the Underground Space Center at the University of Minnesota.

The concept of earth dwellings is not exactly new. "Probably the first homes that human beings even made were made out of earth," Lane said. Some Indians lived in cliff dwellings and adobe huts, and some pioneers had sod houses.

During the past 10 years a few schools, libraries and offices have been built underground, Lane said. Now, the idea of subterranean living spaces appears to be coming into its own.

"It's growing at such a rate that we can't keep track of them all," said Lane, whose Underground Space Center is funded by federal and state monies and serves as a national clearing house and information center for underground living and working ideas.

He says the earth is not a particularly good insulator, but that the earth's underground temperature remains pretty constant so that the home itself is not affected by temperature extremes such as blizzards and hot spells.

"If you use earth shelter and solar heating you can often get by with no other fuel at all," said Wells.

"Surface temperatures do penetrate eight or ten feet below the earth's surface. However, the rate of penetration is so slow that summer heat doesn't get through until November, just about when you need it for warmth. And the cold arrives below ground in May, when the air conditioning may be humming in conventional homes."

"What you have," said Lane, "is that the earth will be warmer in the winter when you want the heat and it will be cooler in the summer when you want it to be cool," said Lane.

"An underground home constructed in conjunction with some type of solar energy system would make for a fairly energy independent place to live," said Wells, who has been experimenting with these structures since the 1960s.

"There is a kind of force growing among the American people to feel a little bit more independent of outside forces. I'm talking about ever increasing prices of oil and other energy sources. People are feeling helpless. This gives people an alternative," said Lane.

In addition to the energy savings, Lane said underground homes are quieter and "they are very stable structures against the ragings of mother nature."

"I first started to build one in 1972," said architect John Barnard of Osterville, Mass. "For once in my life I was in the right place at the right time. I hadn't been doing very much with underground designs, now that's all I'm doing."

"Now I've got so many I can't keep track of them all. I've got one, two and three bedroom plans," said Barnard, who became one of the first achitects in the United States to specialize in these homes.

"It started to dawn on me in the mid-1960s that we were wrecking the land with our buildings. The land was meant to be a home to green plants, not asphalt and concrete...The land should be treated with reverence."

Barnard says his office receives 10 to 30 calls and letters per day asking for construction plans. "I've gotten requests from all over the United States," he said. He knows of underground homes under construction in Wyoming, North Dakota, New York, Pennsylvania, California, Connecticut, Massachusetts and Oregon.

RIO SWAN DIVE — Felipe Estrada of Juarez, Mexico, makes a swan dive into the shallow water of the Rio Grande. The water is from an adjacent aqueduct driving a swift current of 3-feet-deep water about 40 feet into the river. As temperatures in the Juarez-El Paso area went over 100 degrees last week, scores of people took to the Rio Grande for a little relief. (AP Laserphoto)

Shuttle Needs Funds

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — Amid reports an extra $150 million may be needed to get the space shuttle off the ground, officials say consultants are reviewing the troubled program for President Carter.

For the third time in five months, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration may have to ask Congress for more shuttle money, the newspaper TODAY in Cocoa, Fla., reported last week.

"The $150 million is a ballpark figure but nothing is firm yet," said a source quoted by TODAY.

"I have heard all kinds of figures ranging from zero to whatever and right now I'm not in a position to say how much extra we might need," NASA Administrator Dr. Robert Frosch told the paper.

"My frustrations are centered on our funding problems as well as our ability to predict in advance how much money we will need in the future," he said.

In a letter to Frosch, Carter requested a personal briefing on the shuttle by Oct. 15 and asked that consultants be appointed to review the progress of the manned space project, TODAY reported.

FRIENDLY INVASION

Grandmaster Larry Christiansen placed second in the XVth Capablanca Memorial Invitational Chess tournament of Cienfuegos, Cuba, last month.

It was the first time in years that an American Grandmaster had been invited to play in Cuba. And Larry impressed everyone. Jorge Vega, President of the Cuban Chess Federation, has written me: "The ice has been broken. Christiansen's play is very much admired by us and we expect him back next year!" N. Sveshnikov, USSR, came in first with 11 out of 13 points. Christiansen of Modesta, California, scored 9½. A. Forintos of Hungary followed with 9. Here's a sharp game from this event.

WHITE: R. Estevez, Cuba.
BLACK: Christiansen

1.P-K4	P-QB3
2.N-KB3	P-Q3
3.B-N5ch	N-B3
4.P-Q4	PxP
5.QxP	B-Q2
6.BxN	BxB
7.N-B3	N-B3
8.B-N5	P-K3
9.0-0-0	B-K2
10.KR-K1	0-0
11.K-N1	R-B1(a)
12.Q-Q2(b)	P-N4
13.N-Q4	P-N5
14.NxB	RxN
15.BxN	BxB
16.N-K2	Q-R4
17.N-B1	R1-QB1
18.N-N3	Q-K4
19.N-Q4	R-B5
20.P-QB3	PxP
21.PxP	RxP
22.P-B4	QxN!
23.QxQ	R-N1ch
24.K-R1	R-B8ch!
25.Resigns (c)

(a) Going all out for attack.

(b) Goes not care for the Rook's pawn.

(c) After 25.RxR (forced) 25...BxQch and 26.R-B3, BxR mate.

YOUNG BENJAMIN WINS!

The Thirteenth Annual Continental Open held over Memorial Day weekend in New York City attracted 155 players and was won by the youngest of them all, New York's 15-year-old Joel Benjamin (2353) with five points out of six.

WHITE: Dr. Ariel Mengarini (2288)
BLACK: Benjamin

1.P-K4	P-QB3
2.P-Q4	P-Q4
3.P-K5	B-B4
4.P-KN4(a)	B-Q2(b)
5.P-QB3	P-K3
6.B-K3	P-QB4
7.N-B3	N-QB3
8.B-Q3(c)	Q-N3
9.Q-N3	P-B5
10.QxQ	PxQ
11.B-K2	P-QN4
12.0-0	P-N5
13.N-R4	P-QN4
14.P-B4	B-K2
15.N-N2	P-R4
16.P-KR3	RPxP
17.RPxP	R-KR6
18.B-Q2	PxP
19.PxP	P-N5
20.P-B5	PxP6
21.BxB3	RxB(d)
22.NxR	NxQP
23.N-B4	R-R6
24.QR-B1	N-R3
25.PxP	PxP
26.B-Q1	N-B2
27.N-N6	B-KN4
28.R-N1	RxN
29.R-N8ch	B-Q1
30.RxBch	KxR
31.RxN	B-K1
32.R-B4	R-Q6
33.Resigns

(a) A really sharp continuation.

(b) If now 4...B-N3, then 5.P-K6!

(c) Could have tried 8. PxP, Q-B2; 9. B-Q4.

(d) A strong positional sacrifice completely destroying White's center.

• • •

The solution to the problem above is: 1. RxP, KxP; 2. Q-R8 mate; or 1. RxP, 2. R-Q1 mate; or 1. RxP, K-Q5; 2. R-Q1 mate, etc.
