CREDIT DEMANDS GROWING, SAYS RESERVE BOARD

LOAN CAPACITY TAXED

Big Increase Reported In Calls For Currency Over Country

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The federal reserve board in a formal statement tonight again calls attention to the rapid expansion of credit demand and industrial production, and warns that "a continuance of this credit demand must soon result in increased borrowings by banks which are members of the federal reserve system of the federad reserve bank." While the statement was issued as a summary of April business, it dealt exclusively with the credit and production situation, and threads through it a comparison with conditions in 1913.

Demands Increase

In it discussion of the expanding production, the board declares "substantial" increase in the demand for currency is in prospect if the rapid growth in payroll amounts continues as it has since the middle of 1922.

"The present lending capacity of the country's banking system in view of the great growth of the reserves at the reserve banks," the statement says, "is not far in excess of the credit needs of the country's productive capacity. In such a situation it is the available supplies of labor and equipment and not the potential supply of credit that in the end must fix the limit which may be attained by aggregate national production. As these limits are approached, credit policy must be increasingly influenced by careful consideration of the continued effectiveness of further additions to the total volume of credit in contributing to increased productivity.

The board, however, directs attention to the difference in the increases in commercial loans by commercial banking houses and the earning assets of the federal reserve banks as suggesting that the overflow of credit demand, frequently predicted in recent weeks, has not yet started, and the situation shows, therefore, the statement adds, that the increased credit demand has been largely in response to the increased volume of production.

"Mormon" Plates Found In Hill

ROCHESTER, N. Y., April 29. Two copper plates have been unearthed at Marmon hill, Palmyra, the birthplace of Mormonism, by the Rev. Charles E. Driver, a Methodist evangelist, according to dispatches received in this city Wednesday.

The Rev. Fay C. Martin, pastor of the Church of God, said Wednesday: "The plates refute many of the doctrines of Mormoonism and seem to conflict with the religion as it now is practiced."

The Rev. Mr. Driver says the plates were unearthed from under a stone slab near the place where Joseph Smith, in 1823, first received engraved plates from which, according to Mormon tradition, he translated the Book of Mormon. The finding comes as a forerunner of the centennial celebration of the founding of Mormonism at Palmyra, Sept. 23 and 24, when members of the Mormon church from all parts of the country will gather at Mount Cumorah, or Mormon hill.

Father, Son Released In Finding Of Bonds

MINNEAPOLIS, April 29.—Bernard, Abramson and his son, Jack. 16, who were arrested by secret service operatives recently, were released from custody. They were held following the finding in their home of bonds stolen from the State bank of Maiden Rock, Maiden Rock, Wis. The bonds previously had been found in an alley by several boys and most of the securities were taken home by the Abramson boy.

Negro Lynched Despite Protest

Pleading of Girl's Father Has No Effect on Missouri Mob

Associated Press Dispatch

COLUMBIA, Mo., April 29.—James Scott, a negro, accused of an attempted attack upon a 4-year-old white girl, was hanged to a railroad bridge here early today by a mob estimated at 2,000. Just before the hanging, Dr. H. F. Almstedt, father of the girl, and head of the German department of the University of Missouri here, appeared dramatically upon the scene, and appealed to the mob to let the law take its course.

"I am as much against this man as you," Dr. Almstedt is quoted as saying, "But we, as citizens of the United States, should abide by the laws of the country."

The mob ignored the pleas of the girl's father and, despite protests of innocence from their victim, took the negro to the bridge, not far from the place where the attempted attack was made upon the girl.

"You're hanging an innocent man," the negro said. "That's the truth. I could not die with a lie upon my lips."

After a rope was tied about his neck he was pushed off the bridge. The coroner said later that the negro's neck was broken and that he apparently died instantly.

The mob gained entrance to the cell occupied by the negro by burning the iron door with an acetylene torch. No attempt was made to take the keys from the sheriff.

No student at the university took an active part in the hanging, eye witnesses stated. There were many in the crowd, it was stated, but they were only as spectators.

The negro had been identified by the girl as her assailant.

Kelly and MacReady To Make Second Attempt at Cross Country Flight

Army Airmen After New Laurels; Plan Non-Stop Trip From East to West; May Hop Off This Week

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Lieutenants Oakley G. Kelly and John A. MacReady of the army air service, America's greatest aerial "record busters," within the next week plan to undertake the setting up of still another world record by negotiating a non-stop, coast-to-coast flight, it was learned here today.

Details of the contemplated trip call for continuous flying from Mitchell field, Long Island, N. Y., to San Diego, Calif.—a distance of approximately 2,700 miles, necessitating an endurance of about 32 hours in the air. The flight will be made in the T-2, the same thick-wing monoplane in which Kelly and MacReady recently smashed the "hours in the air" record, and in which last fall they covered almost 2,000 miles of a cross-continent flight before meeting with disaster.

Tuning Up Ship

The two young aviators are now at Mitchell field tuning up their airboat and, according to advices to the air service here, the T-2 will be in shape by Monday. After the hop-off is dependent only upon the weather, and both flyers will keep in close touch with the weather bureau, waiting for a forecast of generally fair weather over the entire country.

The attempted non-stop, Atlantic-to-Pacific flight of last fall was laid along exactly the reverse route from that to be negotiated this time. Last October, Kelly and MacReady took off, at San Diego, but after flying nearly 2,000 miles were forced down at Indianapolis, Ind., because of a leaking water jacket.

Route Reversed

Reversal of the route has one great advantage, but equally a disadvantage. As the prevailing winds sweeping the country are easterly, last year's flight was made with the wind. The tremendous load of gasoline necessary to keep the motors running for the entire flight, however, ladened the machine to a point where little altitude could be attained, and in crossing the Rocky mountains the pilots were forced to carefully pick passes and low ranges which could be topped.

The new fuight, therefore, will be made in the face of the wind, but the load will be lightened sufficiently to permit easy passage over the Rockies.

Kelly and MacReady, at Dayton, Ohio, recently smashed all existing world records by remaining continuously in the air for 36 hours, 4 minutes and 31 seconds. This time, they assert, is more than sufficient in which to span the continent.

GALVESTON S WIN FATAL FOR FAN

Associated Press Dispatch

GALVESTON, April 29.—Excitment caused by the garrison finish of the Sand Crabs this afternoon when they come from behind and defeated the Houston Buffs by a margin of one run proved too much for Walter Spencer, 42 years old, and a native of this city. He died tonight about 6:15 o'clock from heart failure caused by the excitement, according to the verdict returned by Justice of the Peace Alex Gomez, who held the inquest.

16-Pound Petition Requests Neff To Ask For State Chiropractic Board

Associated Press Dispatch

AUSTIN, Tex., April 29.—The largest petition ever presented to a governor of Texas requesting submission of legislation of any nature was that presented to Governor Pat M. Neff yesterday, by C. C. Lemly, president of the Texas chiropractors association. The petition requests the governor to submit for the consideration of the called session of the Thirty-eighth legislature the subject providing for the creation of a state board of chiropractor examiners, providing for the licensing of chiropractors and the regulation of the profession of chiropractic.

Weights 16 Pounds.

The petition weighs 16 7-8 pounds and is composed of 3,376 sheets, containing 67,520 names. It is 3,938 feet and 8 inches long.

According to Mr. Lemly the petition was started shortly after the close of the regular session of the Thirty-eighth legislature and does not contain nearly all the names that have been received. There are approximately 1,000 sheets of names that have been received since the petition was arranged, and these will be incorporated in an additional petition for submission to the governor.

To Get Consideration.

Governor Pat M. Neff has assured Mr. Lemly that he would give the matter his earnest consideration and if the subject was submitted to the legislature it would be done at an early date. The presentation of the petition to the governor follows a petition signed by 86 members of the house of representatives and presented to him by a committee of 20 members, asking that he submit the matter for consideration.

NELSON'S BODY ON WAY HOME

Funeral for Minnesota Solon May Be Held Next Friday

Associated Press Dispatch

HARRISBURG, Pa., April 29—The body of United States Senator Knute Nelson of Minnesota, who died suddenly on a railroad train near York, Pa., last night, while on his way from Washington to his home in Alexandria, Minn., left nere at 1:03 o'clock this afternoon for Chicago. From there it will be taken to St. Paul and there to Alexandria where the funeral will be held, probably Friday.

Accompanied By Secretary

The body was accompanied from Harrisburg by Simon Michelet, secretary to Senator Nelson and George W. Wells, Jr., of St. Paul, Minn., state insurance commissioner, who was on the sleeping car in which the senator was stricken, Mr. Wells left the train here with the body.

Mr. Michelet who was notified in Washington last night of the senator's death, arrived here this noon.

Governor Preus of Minnesota, who was in New York, was informed of Senator Nelson's death and left for Chicago where Mr. Michelet said today he was expected to meet the body on its arrival tomorrow morning. He will accompany the party to St. Paul, leaving Chicago tomorrow evening.

Oil Field Junket By Legislators Is Ended at Eastland

Associated Press Dispatch

EASTLAND, Texas, April 29.—After an event which lasted the full day, approximately 200 members of the state legislature, who have been here inspecting Eastland county oil fields, left here tonight on the return trip. The party today went to Cisco, near which place they ate a big barbecue dinner. Afterwards they visited the Cisco dam site and enjoyed an informal entertainment at the Country club.

Main events of the day, however, were opening of a gas well and oil well for the special benefit of the visitors, many of whom witnessed for the first time the flow of oil over the derrick.

The last stop of the party on this junketing trip will be at Waco, where they will be guests of that city at breakfast. They are scheduled to arrive at Austin about noon.

The purpose of the junket was to allow members of the legislature to gain knowledge of conditions in oil fields in this section, and the entire party during the trip witnessed practically all phases of oil operation.

WOMEN'S WEAR GROWS

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, April 29.—More than a billion dollars worth of women's clothing was manufactured in 1921 while in 1914 there was less than half that amount.

Values of products was placed at $1,022,743,000, for 1921 in a census bureau announcement today which gave the 1919 total as $1,208,543,000 and that of 1914 as $473,888,000.

The statistics which include girls and childrens wear, do not take into account the value of millinery, lace goods, corsets or knit goods which in 1919 brought the production value to $2,253,049,570.

CHANGES NEEDED IN PRESIDENT'S LEAGUE ISSUES

Lodge Thinks "Reservations Insufficient" In Present Plan

EDITORIAL IS DENIED

Says No Truth In Charge That He's Ruled By Big Bankers

Associated Press Dispatch

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Food for further discussion of the world court question among administration officials and republican leaders was presented in the publication today of two statements on the matter, one by President Harding, and the other by Senator Lodge, Massachusetts, chairman of the foreign relations committee and republican leader in the senate.

Lodge's Most Important

Of the two, that by Senator Lodge, was gtnerally conceded as likely to have the greater bearing on the question, which, since President Harding's New York address of last Tuesday, has transcended all others in interest among officials and political leaders. The foreign relations committee chairman in a letter to Governor Hyde of Missouri described as vitally important the two conditions to American membership in the court put forward by the administration, but added that it might be assumed that the senate may very possibly originate and propose other conditions.

Reservations Insufficient

This declaration by Senator Lodge with his further assertion that "satisfactory adjustment would be reached," was interprettd in some quarters as rather definitely indicating that he and a number of republican senators known to haye similar views fell that the administration conditions or reservations are insufficient. The natural result of this attitude, it was generally conceded, would be the offering in the senate of the new restrvations designed primarily to separate further American participation in court activities from the affairs of the league.

Denies Truth of Editorial

The statement by President Harding relative to the world court was made in the course of his address last night before the American Society of Newspaper Editors. It was a declaration that there was no truth in the assertions that the administration had proposed American membership in the court at the behest of international bankers. In making his denial the president referred to a "very earnest editorial" making such assertions which he had read within the last 48 hours. A similar charge was made several days ago in a statement on the world court by Senator LaFollette, republican, Wisconsin.

"There is no word of truth in it," said the executive to the editors in referring to the assertion of the editorial, "and I want to tell this to you because it will enlarge your vision and will enable you to comment sometimes a little more satisfactorily."

Germans Gird Selves To Continue Policy Of Passive Resistance

Laboring Class Flushed With Victory In Holding Back Ruhr Invasion.

Associated Press Dispatch

BERLIN, April 29.—German labor, flushed with the large part it has played in blocking the efforts of the French and the Belgians in the occupation of the Ruhr, is rallying with more vim than ever for the celebration of may 1 as an international workingman's holiday.

Unarmed Army Successful

For nearly a quarter of a year, the workers produlay note, nothing but an unarmed army of laborers has successfully withstood the attempts of tens of thousands of soldiers to achieve fruitful results in the occupation of Europe's leading industrial district, although this invading army has been equipped with all the paraphernalia of war. The laborer believe this battle has been unique in the annals of history, and it has inspired them to make May Day ring the slogans, "Death rather than slavery," "No work under bayonets," and "Keep up passive resistance in the Ruhr."

Workers Discontented

Fuel has been added to the fire of discontent among the workers by the announcement that the French government will demand abandonment of the passive resistance campaign before it will negotiate with Germany. The leaders of German labor declare such a concession is absolutely out of the question; that it would mean the surrendering of their only weapon.

HOUSTON GETS ONE CHAMPION, ANYHOW

Associated Press Dispatch

HOUSTON, April 29. — Leo Harmon, 23 years old, is the new roller skating champion of the world. On the verge of a collapse, he is skating at the Roll-a-Way palace, after more than 45 hours.

Three men and three women, playing at the city auditorium, are piano champs of the world, having passed the previous record of 29 hours at 7:01 p. m.

Henry H. King appears to be the favorite.

Miss Inez McClain, a heavyweight, fainted at 5:52 p. m. Her mother, at her side in an instant, slapped her shoulders with a handkerchief saturated with cold water. She revived.

BUSY WEEK IS BEFORE SOLONS

Gross Production Tax And Other Measures Up In Legislature

Associated Press Dispatch

AUSTIN, Tex., April 29.—Some of the most important measures pending before the special legislative session are scheduled for consideration this week. The early part of the week will be spent chiefly on appropriation measures, it is expected. The senate will have before it when it convenes tomorrow afternoon, the remaining two general appropriation bills—departments, and eleemosynary. The house will have before it the educational appropriation bill.

Law Enforcement Up.

Law enforcement and revenne measures are expected to hold the center of interest in the senate the latter part of the week. Chief among the bills scheduled for consideration is the Coffee gross oil production tax, which the senate committee reduced from three to two per cent. The Patterson quo warranto bill also should be on the senate calendar by Wednesday.

The Harris text book bill is set for consideration in the house on Tuesday. Other bills expected to come up in the lower branch are Smith delinquent tax bill and Lackey equal taxation bill.

Women Excited Over Shoes

PARIS, 9pril 29.—Styles in shoes are occupying the French feminine mind to a greater extent than in former years. The styles are becoming intricate, not only in the matter of design, but in the blending of different kinds and grades of leather. Bronze afternoon and evening slippers are just now very popular in Paris. The evening slippers continue to be cut away at the side, leaving little of the foot covered, and the same cut is carried out in many of the shoes for day wear, but in a more conservative manner.

London Still Worried; Wales Still A Bachelor

LONDON, April 29.—The tumult and the shouting attending the marriage of the Duke of York—the second royal wedding in England within as many years—is dying away while the bridal couple are quietly honeymooning in Surrey, and the general public is awakening to the realization that, after all, the significant topic for the moment is not that King George's second son is married, but that the Prince of Wales is now approaching his 29th birthday and is still a bachelor. Not that the succession to the throne is endangered, for, if necessary, young Harry Lascelles, princess Mary's son, might some time take over that onerous duty if none of the king's sons have heirs, but because, if there was ever a prince to whom the people were devoted, it is the Prince heir-apparent to the British crown, and everybody is most anxious to see him happily married.

Windowless Buildings To Prevail In Future

CLEVELAND, April ,29. — The downtown building as well as the factory of the near future is destined to be without windows, and to depend upon artificial means for light and pure air, according to officials of the Nela Park Research laboratories of the General Electric company here.

"Interior lighting for every working purpose has been perfected to a stage where it ven surpasses daylight," says Dr. Matt Luckiesh, of the laboratory.

According to Dr. Luckiesh,, preliminary findgs in the research work have demonstrated that daylight actually costs more to factories, office buildings, museums and public buildings than electric illumination.

Evolution Theory Assailed From All Angles By Fort Worth Conference

Associated Press Dispatch

FORT WORTH, April 29.—With more than 3,000 ministers, Bible students and laymen in attendance, the fifth annual session of the World Fundamental Conference, which will continue all week, opened this morning. Representatives are in attendance from all parts of the United States, Canada, and England. The theory of evolution will be attacked from every possible angle by nationally known speakers, William Jennings Bryan who was on the program, announced his inability to be in attendance.

The conference Sunday morning was opened with an address by Paul Rader of Chicago, former pugilist. Sunday afternoon Dr. L. Munhall, noted divine, spoke on "The Book of Books."

Like Dr. Rader, in his morning address Dr. Munhall attributed the rise of evolution to the "German kulturists" and termed it "the most poisonous gas known to mankind." He declared that the fight between Christianity and evolution was on and every denomination is feeling the mighty struggle.

Civilization is tottering and religion is the only hope, he said.

NO SHORTAGE POSTMASTERS

Ten Candidates Apply For One Place In Montague

By BASCOM N. TIMMONS

WASHINGTON, April 29.—There is no drouth in the prospective postmaster crop in Texas this year.

The postoffice department announced that 149 persons took examinations to fill 36 third-class postmasterships in the Lone Star state on April 1. Out of this list the department will obtain eligibles, and the new postmasters probably will be nominated just as soon as congress convenes. Salaries for the offices run from $1,400 to $2,100.

The largest number to apply for one office was at Saint Jo, Montague county, where 10 candidates applied. At Crystal City, Zavala county; and Brackettville, Kinney county, there was only one applicant for each office.

Millionaire Ships To Learn Sea Life

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, April 28.—Miss Henderson Green of Montiselaca, N. J., today confirmed the fact that her nephew, William B. Leeds, son of the late "Tin Plate King" and husband of Princess Xenia, of Greece, had sailed from Hoboken last Sunday on the freighter Marengo as "W. H. Graner," able seaman.

Miss Green denied a rumor that Leeds had bet $10,000 he could work his way across the ocean, but admitted that he had been turned down by the North German-Lloyd when he had first launched his attempt to learn something of the sea at first hand.

Million Dollar Lobby Charged To Protect Transportation Measure

WASHINGTON, April 29.—Advocates of chaneg in the Esch-Cummins act are agitated over the appearance of the National Transportation institute, which has been endorsed b Pyresident Harding, and which is in the formative stages here and in Chicago, because they think it is the forerunner of a million-dollar lobby at Washington to prevent the transportation law being riddled in the net congress by Western republicans and democrats.

James R. Howard, former president of the American Farm Bureau Federation is said to be slated to head the new organization. Bird M. Robinson, president of the American Short Line Railroad association, is one of the promoters.

They most insistently deny charges printed in farm publications that they are creating a sugar lobby. Their organization will not, they say, maintain such a thing, either at Washington or before any of the state legislatures, but will be devoted to educational work among the people to acquaint them with the facts about all phases of transportation of all kinds, on the ground or in the air.

Howard quit the farm bureau in December, and while his friends declare his act was purely voluntary, others point out that there was an undercurrent of dissatisfaction among the farmers, because they thought this detected unusually affable conduct on his part toward the railroads, and that he really resigned under fire.

According to the plans of the institute, Representative Sidney Anderson, republican of Minnesota, who was chairman of a point committee on agricultural inquiry, is to be assistant director of research.

Agricultural interests are suspicious of the purpose of the organization, because of dinners held a few weeks ago in Chicago and New York to discuss the idea at which big railroad men were guests. Mr. Robinson says they are alarmed unnecessarily, as agriculture is just as much interested in transportation as the railroads; and furthermore, he says the institute is to study and acquaint the public with facts about highways, waterways and airways and let the public make up its own mind. Some of the farm leaders believe that behind this is an objective of building up a backfire to prevent congress from tampering with railway rates, guaranteed returns, as provided in the transportation act, or tightening up its labor sections so as to prevent strikes.

A prospectus of the institute points to the commission of inquiry headed by Anderson as responsible in large part for its existence, coupled with a letter from President Harding himself to Anderson, approving the institute.

Anderson's commission recodmended: "That imperative need exists for the organization of the statistics and knowledge of transportation and its relation to agriculture, industry, trade and commerce, through the establishment of private research and educational institutions under disinterested auspices, for the purpose of promoting education in the principles, operations and practices incident to transportation."

President Harding wrote Anderson last June he thought the institute "would be of great practical usefulness.

"The board had an understanding study of the entire transportation problem is unquestionably a serious national question; indeed, I think I may well say, a serious world necessity at this time. Such an organization as you are proposing ought to become a power in connection with the nation-wide consideration of these problems, and useful directing force in connection with the determination of public policy."

Former Chairman Clark of the interstate commerce commission is chairman of the board of governors. Senators Cummins (rep.), of Iowa; Pomerene (rep.), Ohio; Kellogg (rep.), Minnesota; Robinson (dem.), Arkansas; Nelson (rep.), Minnesota; Speaker Gillett and several members of congress have indorsed the plan, as well as the American Lumber congress and the National Association of Manufacturers.

Uncertainty Apparent In Stock Markets

Associated Press Dispatch

NEW YORK, April 29.—Although the markets of the past week testified to a considerable uncertainty in speculative sentiment, various indications suggest that the actual physical production is undiminished. According to the federal reserve board index, production in basic industries increased four per cent in March to levels eight per cent above the 1920 peak. Car loading for the week ended April 14, indicate that the movement has been maintained during April. At 947,000 cars, railroad traffic surpassed anything since last November and ran almost a quarter of a million cars ahead of the corresponding weeks in the past two years.

Father and Son Flying South Into Mexican Wilds

MEXICO CITY, April 29.—According to a detective agency report, Charles Parmlee is flying southward toward Guatemale in the airplane with which he is supposed to have removed his 5-year-old son from a children's home near Mexico City Thursday night.

Residents near Rancho de los Alamos, a point two hours by automobile from Mexico City, on the road to Puebla, declared to the agency's men that they heard an airplane hop off Thursday night, and pointed to marks in an open field as having been made by an airplane.

HARDING WILL BOOM COURT

Summer Tour Will Be Devoted To World Peace Move

By B. N. TIMMONS
Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, April 28.—President Harding's determination to press for American entry in the permanent court of international justice has been strengthened by the opposition created in his own party, more particularly because that opposition has been stimulated by those who have been lukewarm toward the president, and enthusiastic in the movement to force him out of the 1924 campaign.

All approaches to President Harding, since his return from Florida for the purpose of having him soft-pedal on the court as an issue, have served to make the executive more firm in his purpose. It can be stated with complete authority that at this moment it is the president's purpose to stress the international court in his summer campaign, whether leaders of his party like it or not, nor it is unlikely that current developments will make a positive candidate for re-nomination out of Mr. Harding. Up to the present time the executive has expressed the attitude of one who did not vastly like his job, but the machinations of political leaders to set up a game for some one else, made seemingly necessary the Daugherty announcement, which it can now be said was made advisedly. The manner in which Senators Johnson, McCormick, Moses and others of the reactionary school; and Senators LaFollette and Borah of progressive clan, seized on the court proposal, made it apparent that for the president to lay under assumption that he would not again be a candidate for the presidency was to let down to radicals and self-seekers the bars against them which his announced candidacy might hold secure. In like manner the court proposal came as a defi to that element, and because it was defiant to them, President Harding considers it was and is good politics. It is expected now that Senator Johnson will come back from Europe a full-fledged candidate for republican nomination for the presidency, but he will have to enter the lists as an irrgular and without the support of Albert Lasker, Alex P. Moore and William Wrigley, who have financed him in the past, but who now are dominant in the Harding camp of the party.

Original With Harding

The international court scheme, presented as it was and at the time it came, was original with President Harding. Months before the plan had been outlined to Secretary Hughes, by Manley Hudson of Harvard, formerly of the secretariat of the league of nations, of which the court is a part, but after cursory examination it had been pigeon-holed in the state department, to be brought forth only when President Harding advised the secretary of his desire. But the immediate development just before the senate adjourned came by executive direction and not by state department suggestion. What moved the president to act is in the realm of conjecture, but it is believed that his move came because of increasing pressure from the country for fuller international cooperation, and more particularly to meet the charge of democrats that the administration was without policy, the president having been convinced in his own mind, that if he was to go before the country, he must have something more appealing to discuss than a two years' record of congress. Accompanying these impelling motives was the desire for test of strength with poison-mixing radicals in his own party, as well as a test of loyalty of the old guard members, who must, perforce, sustain the president, or lose their control of the party to the radical element.

As Washington observers see the situation there is far more danger of a break in republican ranks over developments after the court plan is adopted than in the court plan itself. Whether the court is the backdoor to the league or not, it will be adopted by an overwhelming vote. It will have a majority of republican senators and all but a few irreconcilable democrats for it, criticism by Woodrow Wilson, notwithstanding. But the defiant attitude of President Harding in the face of party discord, after his first taste of blood, may mean all sorts of party trouble thereafter. The president's friends say he is tired of taking dictation from a handful of former associates in the senate and feels that he can better interpret public opinion than they can.

If the president does go through with his campaign for the court this summer it will be indicative to republican leaders in congress that they may expect to have a different sort of Harding to deal with when congress convenes again than they had during the last two years. The indications the that Mr. Harding means to insist on his perogatives as nominal party leader and as president, and that hereafter, his policies shall be accepted as party policies, regardless of the anticipated effect leaders may fear. Some forecast of this change in President Harding was present when he urged the ship subsidy bill, which all leaders deplored, and which really did render the final session of congress futile of results save for regular appropriations. Leaders see a similar tieup in the next congress if the court proposal is to be pressed, but it is apparent this time they are speaking by note and without a clear understanding of changing and aggressive public opinion.

In going before the country, President Harding wants to appear as the chief executive, and not as a candidate. He has said in words and effect that he will abandon his trip to Alaska, if he is to be made to appear as a candidate, but the words of the attorney general cannot be unsaid, nor can plan developments be hidden. President Harding will have to be a candidate up to the day of the nominating convention, even should he desire then to step aside, and the international court is his issue. In his public appearances President Harding will discuss, so far as possible, non-controversial subjects, but he thinks the international court plan, as outlined, is only supeficially controversial, and that even this feature would disappear if people could be led to think of it as without connection with the league of nations.

League of nations advocates are heartily for the court, but democrats charge Harding with having proposed it as a cop to growing sentiment, and without full faith for international aid. Many republicans think the bowing spirit the same but think it was ill-advised. In any event the campaign for the court is on in full swing. The president, taking the reins of administration and party, with more concern over his place in history now than in the fate of the party, now intends to go through with his plans. And as he has declined to "soft-pedal" on his own expressions, likewise he has refused to interfere with the speech scheduled for Secretary Hughes.

Irreconcilables who are party men, and others who think the president has taken the wrong course, are still working on the executive to bring party harmony, hoping that he may change his mind. It is much like the situation was when the democrats were urging former President Wilson to change his plans regarding the league of nations.

Naval Officials Recognize Power Of Aircraft In Future Combats

WASHINGTON, April 29.—The conviction that aircraft will play an increasingly important part in future military and naval actions is constantly growing in army and naval circles.

Many line officers of both services who in the past have been inclined to belittle the possibilities of aircraft development are now to be found among the boosters of aviation.

The slightest encouragement from congress is certain to bring forth strong recommendation from officials of both the war and navy departments for a substantial increase in the personnel of the aviation branches and in the effective flying equipment at their disposal.

Senators and representatives who recently visited the United States fleet off the Pacific entrance of the Panama canal, were deeply impressed with the work of aircraft in connection with the maneuvers. Many of them took advantage of the opportunity to fly over the Canal zone and portions of Hayti and Santo Domingo. The need of adequate protection against air attack and the relative ease with which such attacks could be made were realized more fully than ever before.

A close study of the air problem is under way in both the war and navy departments, and the desirability of substantially expanding the trained flying personnel is receiving particular attention on the theory that a much longer time is required to develop efficient pilots than any other class of officers.

With members of congress, high officials and army and navy experts all agreed that the air forces should be greatly strengthened, the problem appears to be to determine whether the national finances warrant an expansion of the flying branches without a corresponding contraction in other arms of the two services.

Girl Recovering Afer Shooting Herself Tuesday

WAURIKA, Okla., April 29.—Alma Walter, the 14-year-old school girl who attempted to end her life by shooting herself with a .32-caliber revolver just above the hip, Tuesday night, is recovering nicely.

The young lady, whose parents seriously objected, insisted on having her hair bobbed, and some of her schoolmates bobbed it for her. When she went home that night, either through fear of the objections that her parents were making, or else because she was disgruntled with results, she attempted to take her life.

Bottle Free To Every Child— Watch for the coupon in our page ad next Sunday—good at any soft drink place

Now, Mothers,

There's a delicious 5-cent food drink

We blend it daily in our dairy, under license, and pasteurize it. We supply it fresh to soft drink dealers to be served ice cold—for only 5 cents per bottle.

The iron ration

Chocolate, you know, was part of the "iron ration" of every army in the war. Blended with milk products, it forms a remarkable food.

One pint of "400" yields over 400 calories of nutriment—almost equal to six eggs. Minerals and vitamines are in it.

Yet it costs but 5 cents per bottle, and a bottle forms half a meal.

Children need it

Authorities say that millions of children are being underfed. One of the chief things lacking are the minerals found in milk. Bodies can't be built without them. Teeth and bones can't grow.

Then children have small stomachs, which cannot hold a five-hour food supply. They are growing and active. They must have food between meals.

That's why milk is served in schools. There is now a nationwide crusade to urge the drinking of more milk.

Now a new delight

Walter K. Jahn, the great food expert, has perfected a dairy drink—the finest food drink children ever tasted. The only chocolated food drink made with rico flavor, which makes it so enticing.

By a patented process, under enormous pressure, we blend the syrup with fresh dairy products. Thus the fat globules are broken.

This drink is called "400."

The joy of millions

Now children all over America revel in "400." Schools are serving it. Offices and factories serve it. Homes have it delivered with their milk.

Millions of children are being better fed. They are spending their nickels for a dairy drink. Mothers and doctors everywhere are urging them to do so.

We buy a bottle

Next Sunday we publish a page ad with a coupon. The coupon is good anywhere for a bottle of "400." See that some child gets it.

Let them drink one bottle at our cost. Then they will drink it daily—to their good. Watch for Sunday's coupon.

Spudders Make It Three In a Bunch, 7 to 4

FLAHERTY DELIVERS HITLESS BALL UNTIL FIFTH: GASSERS FAILING TO OVERCOME LEAD

Pat Holds Sway in All But One Inning—Spudders Bunch Hits in Early Stages and Salt Contest Away—Elliott Has Rosey Afternoon.

By "DINK" ADDINGTON

The third time may be the charm but Ira Thomas and his Shreveport Gassers couldn't get it working yesterday afternoon. Pat Flaherty, who once wore a Gastown uniform, turned his old time playmates back from their third attempt to win a ball game on local soil and the Spudders are just one more game to the velvet, 7 to 4.

The wild Irish rose started with four hitless innings, allowing but one man to reach base on a walk. His control was bordering on the perfect and the Gassers were going down like a stack of hot cakes in front of a hungry tramp. They did get boisterous in the fifth and bunched five of their seven hits for their four runs and they squawked a bit in the ninth but the noise was choked off before any disturbance came about.

The Spudders didn't cause Jolley much trouble after the third but they didn't have to, for they had run up enough runs in the fore part of the battle to win any kind of a contest.

Start In Early.

Ace Elliott, rubbery first-sacker of the Spudders, celebrated the Sabbath with a blooming day all the way around. He had two doubles and a single in four trips to the plate and he pulled the fielding posey of the day in the third with a sugared one-hand stab of Jolley's harsh bounder, throwing to second to force Torres.

The invaders went down in order in the first and Bescher and White had lifted lofters to Mr. Gaffney at short when the coal began to come down the chute. Tanner rang a triple to center, the ball hitting the fence and bounding back toward civilization. Elliott laced a warm slice down the third base line for two sacks and Tanner had time to crawl home if necessary. Whiteman felt sorry for Elliott and rather than leave him an orphan on second, smashed a single to center chasing him home. George was caught rounding first and run down.

Cotter Doubles.

Cotter knocked the cap off the second with a twin ply to left. Berger sent out a fly to Harris but Kitchens larruped one into center for a base and Cotter registered.

Jolley all but dented up our whole ball club in the third, hitting three of the Spudders during the stanza. Two erros were recorded along with this and a couple of hits and sacrifice fly fused together for four runs.

White was out when Tanner halted one of Jolley's shoots and took third on Elliott's second double to center meadow. Whiteman was the next Jolley victim to stop a pitch and the bases were glommed. Cotter sent out a long fly to Simmons and after that young man had made the catch and gotten back to the scene of the ball game, Tanner had ambled homeward.

Torres had the right idea and elected to pick Whiteman off first but the throw was wrong and went to the outfield, Elliott racing in for another score and George going to second. Berger clicked a single to right, scoring Whiteman. Berger was trapped off first but slid safely into second and scored when Gaffney took Kitchens' hopper and threw low to first.

Rough On Ribs.

Flaherty was the third to get a crack in the ribs with a pitched ball, but Jolley stepped on the proceedings, when he tossed Bescher out at first.

That was enough for the Spudders and the tale now turns to the doings of the dudes from Shreveport way. As said before, they were doing everything but the necessary thing of getting on base until the fifth rolled around. Four successive raps were then uncorked and they came so fast they didn't give the ball time to cool off. Riley got the first one through the box and this young Standaert, who has a habit of gumming up things for the Spudders, belted a fadeaway over the left fence, scoring Riley ahead of him.

Gaffney smacked a single to Berger and drew up at second, when Torres caught the fever and lined one to Cotter's territory for one base. The runners advanced on Jolley's out to Elliott, unassisted, combed a single to right, scoring Gaffney and Torres. The next two were easy outs and the scoring machine was locked up for the day.

Ralley Smothered.

Riley singled in the ninth and Gaffney walked after Standaert had popped out. Torres filed to Tanner and Jolley sent Bescher back to the timbers for his long fly, which pulled down the curtain on a pleasant afternoon.

The final game of the Gassers series will be reeled off at 4 o'clock this afternoon.

GOREE TO HAVE PICNIC

Special Dispatch to Record News

GOREE, Texas, April 2.—At a recent meeting of the business men of the town, it was decided to have a picnic here on July 3 and 4. The plans are very elaborate and if carried out it will be one of the biggest events of its kind in the history of the town. Make your plans to be with us on those days and enjoy a great time.

Spudders To Be Feted; Rooters Club Is Planned

Members of the Wichita Spudders will be guests of honor at a banquet to be given for them next Friday night by Arthur Salmon, manager of the White Kitchen. The spread will be held at the old country club house.

Aside from the members of the club, several noted speakers will be present and an interesting program will be arranged. Steps will be taken at that time to organize a Rooters club for Wichita Falls and a mass meeting of all fans in the city will be called, the following week, probably on Monday night, May 7. It is planned to perfect an organization at this mass meeting.

Numerous other cities boast of Rooters clubs and their support has always been a boon to their team. Many feel that Wichita Falls should have a club to help the Spudders cop the pennant this year.

THOMAS FACING BIG MAN'S JOB

Shreveport Manager Trying To Mould Younger Talent

The Shreveport Gassers, who are playing the Spudders in the present series are not burning up the Texas league right now. Ira Thomas has a stiff problem confronting him, and it's time to take time to work it out.

Thomas has a comparatively young club to deal with. There are veterans on the roster, but the youngsters outnumber these to quite an extent. For instance, Gaffney and Standaert have been working at short and second, respectively. Neither one could be considered a veteran, and it's a tough job for two youngsters to handle the keystone sack.

The Gasser boss believes in younger talent for he want to teach them his kind of baseball and the old theory about teaching new tricks to an old dog applies to most of the veterans in the game. Thomas reasons that his club will prosper if his youngsters play the brand of the game he want them to. The former Athletic catcher has always been rated as a smart student of the game, and if he can instill his system of play into the men, they should come along.

This can't be done in a minute and Thomas knows it. He intends to plug away. If he can't get what he wants out of his present group, he probably has enough friendly connections in the game to call for some help, and get it.

TALKING IT OVER

With "Dink"

The scoring of base hits can cause just about as much argument as anything connected with a ball game. It's only natural that it should, for it covers a wide field. Ground balls are just like human faces—there are no two just exactly alike. For that reason there is an opening for a wide and diversified opinion among the spectators at a ball game. For the same reason, there can be no hard and fast rule set down. It is simply a matter of individual judgment.

When a ball goes directly between a fielder's legs, no matter how easy the chance may seem, scoring customs credit the batter with a hit. Even when the roller is so slow it could be stopped with one's little finger, if the fielder does not touch it, it goes for a base hit. There are times when fielders appear indifferent as to whether they make a play or not, and in such a case when a ball goes through with seemingly little effort made to halt it, we should hesitate in charging a hit against the pitcher.

We have been told by players that some grounders are so slow that they cannot be played properly. In other words, the athletes are unable to time their actions slow enough to handle the ball. There may be something in it just as surely as it is a known fact that many balls are "too hot to handle."

As a rule, the pitcher has the sympathy of the crowd, and many a fan hates to even think of a slow trickle through an infielder as a base hit. The same goes for difficult chances that are halted by the infielder, but no play is made. When the fielder is able to get but one hand to the ball and fails to make a play, he should not be charged with an error. The batsman is credited with a hit. Other things must be taken into consideration. The position of the player and whether he is on the run in handling the ball or is all set to take it. Just because he knocks it down and then fails to make a play is no reason to tack an error on his record.

Look at it this way: Suppose, after kicking a hard chance, the fielder had made the play. Wouldn't it have been a pretty one? Yes. Then don't charge him up with an error simply because he didn't turn an unusual play.

Some of these matters may seem tough on a pitcher. But there's another angle to squint at. Think of the hundreds of hard-hit line drives that go straight to fielders and are caught for outs. Many of those are spanked well enough to be hits in anybody's league, but the batter can't be credited with them and they are not charged against the pitcher. So, on the whole, while the present scoring system may have its faults, it looks like matters are evened up in the long run, and the pitcher isn't as bad off as some would think.

The scoring rules read that in all cases of doubt in scoring hits, the batter should be given the benefit of the doubt. It is natural with most scorers to give the pitcher the benefit on questionable hits after he has gone a number of innings without allowing any safeties. That's all very well and good. But a ball player is going no better than he is hitting, and if he doesn't get all that's coming his way, he's going to slump in every department.

Fans often disagree with official box scores, and that is not surprising, since it has been pointed out that the matter is only one of personal opinion. Scorers in the press box commit "boots" just as the players do on the field. They're not perfect, but they try to let their judgment guide them, as a rule. They'll miss plays just as an umpire will, or anybody else who tries to score a ball game—and please everybody.

* * *

The subject of scoring brings to mind a young revolution which is going on among the scorekeepers of the Texas league. Many of them are up in arms, and more than one has refused to accept the post because of the remuneration connected with it. Joe Carter, down at Shreveport, has the right idea. The league statistician sends out a volume of scoring instructions and so forth, and makes particular effort to impress upon the scorers the importance of their duties. The league records, which are worth a goodly lump in dollars and cents to the organization, are made or broken by the scorers, and for the responsibility of this compilation the scorers are rewarded with the magnificent stipend of $2 per.

The score sheet, which must be made out after each game and forwarded to headquarters each night, is a lengthy list, with space for almost every detail that could take place in a game. It is anything but a pleasure to compile it. And the scribes have plenty to do getting out their paper before they can turn to this matter.

Class C and D leagues have ball players performing for as low as $125 a month. What kind of ball players would you get in the Texas league for that? What kind of work do you want the scorers to perform for the allowance they are given? As long as we handle the job, we intend to make an effort to tabulate a correct record of each game. But we don't feel like the league has a kick coming when a scorer drops a stitch or two.

We can't believe the Texas league is on its last legs, financially. We can't believe that other officials are not being reasonably paid for their services. Few leagues, if any, get out better records than the Texas. We give all due credit to the league statistician for his part toward this success. But the success of his work in a great measure reverts back to the manner in which the individual scorers handle their records. And they could stand a little more gas than they are getting for their work, which officials admit is of the highest importance.

You can generally tell a good man by the way in which he admits his faults.

Some people glory in the fact that they are regarded as "coming men," while others are quietly satisfied with having arrived.

The popular method of suppressing corns among women is to wear shoes so tight the corns can't grow.

Keeping Pace In The Chess Match

Between Houston And Wichita Falls

No move was received from the Houston Chess club yesterday and an armistice was declared on the battlefield for a breathing spell.

Mr. Welch, member of the Tulsa Chess club who is a visitor in the city, has expressed a desire to book a match between his club and Wichita Falls after the present one with Houston is completed, the matter will be taken up by the local organization.

Houston visitors at the Kemp hotel have been keeping a watchful eye on the board in Smith's window and it can't be said that the recent situation has afforded them any glee. As the board stands now, Wichita appears to be "sitting pretty" and foggy gloom is reported about the corner after the board has been gazed upon by some of the friendly rivals.

TAKE IT OR LEAVE IT

By "DINK" ADDINGTON

The Spudders copped another game,
And wrapped it in a sack;
We hate to see the Gasers go,
We hope they'll hurry back.

* * *

Being honest about it, we'd like to see the Gassers win some games—after they leave Wichita Falls. Makes the race better all the way 'round.

* * *

Bescher's long streak was shattered yesterday when he missed connections for a safety. Can't expect a guy to hit 'em all.

* * *

BRAVO, ACE!

Elliott grabbed a sizzler,
It was labeled for a hit;
It hit just once and there it stuck,
In Elliott's mattress mitt.

* * *

Umps Daley was in the line of fire yesterday, and took a wicked foul on the kneecap. Such is the life on an umpire—full of knocks.

* * *

At that, it's better to be bounced on the kneecap than on the serge cap.

* * *

Whiteman went way back to the wall in the seventh, and made a pretty catch of Harris' long clout.

* * *

THROUGH THE SPY-GLASS

He almost disappeared from sight,
A' running down the ball;
He caught it way out yonder,
Smack dab against the wall.

* * *

Jim Riley continues to flatten to the agate for the Gassers. Four for three yesterday.

* * *

NOT NO MORE

Flaherty was a Gasser,
But now he's with the Spuds;
He pitched himself a winning game,
And bounced his former buds.

* * *

Joe Berger pulled a couple of nice plays in the field, and Gaffney looked pretty neat on several of his chances.

Standaert was switched from second to third by Manager Thomas. Maybe the Milwaukee kid got a range on the left fence from his new position. At any rate, he eased one over in the fifth.

* * *

He used to play at second,
But since they made a change;
And moved him over close to left,
Methinks he's found the range.

* * *

Jolley batted .333 in the Rib league in the third. Nine Spudders faced him and he busted three of 'em in the slats. The percentage is good, but the effect isn't.

* * *

Today is the last of the Gassers,
Tomorrow the Steers come in;
We're expecting a lot of "protests,"
To start to commence to begin.

STEERS SNEAK UP ON PANTHER

Stage Rally In Ninth Inning To Capture Battle, 5 to 4

FORT WORTH, April 29.—Inability to hit in the pinches caused the Panthers to lose another game to Dallas today, 5 to 4. Bryan and Love walked 11 men between them, hit one, and errors put two more on, but six hits—including a home run in the ninth, with two out—was the total swat output of the Cats. Dallas hit when hits meant runs.

BEAR RALLIES ARE STEPPED UPON

SAN ANTONIO, April 29.—K. Eberhardt defeated San Antonio in the second game of the three-game series here, Sunday, 5 to 3. San Antonio threatened the Beaumont lead several times, but the rallies were all cut down before the local team pushed over the runs. Kirkham's great catch in the 9th saved the game from going extra innings.

Tanner Grabs Off Another Swat Prize

Buddie Tanner, by grabbing a triple in the first inning of yesterday's game, won a straw hat offered by Wright's for the first three-bagger on opening day. No triple was forthcoming in the first two games, and it remained for Tanner to turn the trick.

George Whiteman was presented with a $5 bill, the gift of Judge Kay, offered for the first home run of the local season. George got it on the opening day.

There is still a knife offered by E. B. Melton of Perkins-Timberlake for the first steal of third. Elliott had his hooks out for it in the third inning yesterday when he was on second, but Torres made a bad peg to get Whiteman at first, and Elliott came all the way home on the error.

A MAN AND HIS MONEY

Money is said to be the root of all evil. That depends upon its use or uses. There is not tainted money if that money is applied to a useful of elevating purpose.

Man came before money. Since the coming of money throughout the ages, innumerable individulas sought to place money before man. Some succeeded while others were unsuccessful.

This is an editorial news story of a man and his money. He was born an alien, under German skies. He acquired thrift in a land of poverty. He came to America not more than 20. He found a land of opportunity. He saved his dollars, he invested in land.

He never married. He never could get away from the thrift habit. The more he accumulated the less his desire for display of wealth. He lived as frugal and as lowly in his own quaint way when he was rich as when he was an immigrant boy in the long ago.

He saw the city grow around and about him. He saw the people come and acquire homes. He saw stately buildings reared where it was a wilderness when he came. He saw church spires touch the skies. He saw skyscrapers erected for the use of commerce and civilization.

The larger his income the more he invested in land. He kept his own counsels, he never made many friends, he never made a vulgar display of coin. He did not flaunt him self with the new-rich. Old age crept upon him. A serious organic trouble warned him that he was nearing the end.

He visited many hospitals, and famed ones at that, the country over. He always registered under an assumed name. He did not want the men of science and surgery to know of his wealth. All he cared for was that they should pronounce judgment on his physical condition and tell him the best or the worst for which he was willing to pay as a man of moderate means. He saw hundreds of unfortunates, stricken with disease, who did not have the money to pay for either skill or science and these were turned away. When the icy touch of death sounded the last warning, this immigrant boy of the long ago, made his last will and testimony.

He bequeathed his all to the city of his adoption, first for a vast park for the use of all the people, and then the residue for the establishment of a vast hospital where the stricken and the poor of all nationalities and creeds and conditions should be admitted and cared for until they had been cured or the grave had claimed its own.

This will was sustained by the courts and trustees were named. There will be a park that will be the glory of this Texas city and its people and there will be a public hospital that will be second to none in America, with millions ever in its treasury to carry out the dying wishes of this alien who fled in the long ago from a land where a man ruled by divine right and was the autocrat of a great people.

In his will he builded wiser than he knew. Beneath the surface of the land dedicated for the hospital, the golden sands were found and should the producing wells continue to flow and additional wells brought in, geologists and experts say that in a few years, the trustees of this great public hospital will not know how to spend the wealth of money at their command.

This alien had a memory. He had known the pangs of poverty. Pain had agonized him in his closing years. Wealth had come to him but it was of no avail. He had been stricken and touched in a vital part. He saw about him those who suffered and then this man who was thrifty but not miserably and frugal but not niggardly, determined that the wealth he had accumulated should be devoted to that which should give or accomplish the greatest good to the greatest number of those who needed succor because of their poverty or their ills.

George Hermann was the alien who came to these shores in early years and who lived a long life in the city of his adoption. Houston is the queenly city where this man lived and died and where the Hermann park and Hermann hospital in the years to come, will be pointed to the visitor as monuments magnificent as well as enduring to the alien who gave his all to the city where he had accumulated his wealth.

Secretary Hughes has intimated that Mexico is to be recognized shortly. Justice is a very slow traveler.

The Beautiful and Damned

By F. Scott Fitzgerald

Anthony and Gloria rejoined find their income becoming less and less adequate and move into a less expensive flat. Gloria applies to Bloeckman for a job but he sends her word that her "test" picture was unsatisfactory—that a "younger woman" is needed for the part he had in mind. Anthony, drinking steadily, is broke. Unaware that Gloria has been to Bloeckman (now known as "Black") he sneeringly suggests a visit to him.

Crisis

"Oh—!" He had hurt her at last.

"Why not him?" he insisted, callously.

"Because—he doesn't like me any more," she said with difficulty, and told the story.

"Why damn him!" cried Anthony, championing her violently with a curious perverseness of emotion, "why—"

"Anthony, that doesn't matter now; the thing is we've got to live over Sunday and there's nothing in the house but a loaf of bread and a half-pound of bacon and two eggs for breakfast." She handed him the contents of her purse. "There's seventy-eighty, a dollar fifteen. With that you have that makes about two and a half together, doesn't it? Anthony, we can get along on that. We can buy lots of food with that—more than we can possibly eat."

Jingling the change in his hand he shook his head.

"No. I've got to have a drink. I'm so darn nervous that I'm shivering." A thought struck him. "I know what I'll do! I'll hock my watch. I can get $20 on it, and get it back Monday for 60 cents extra."

With a brief good-by he started down the hall toward the outer door.

Gloria got to her feet. It had suddenly occurred to her where he would probably go first.

"Anthony!" she called after him, "hadn't you better leave two dollars with me? You'll only need carfare."

The outer door slammed—he had pretended not to her her.

At Sammy's place he found Parker Allison and Pete Lytell.

On the subway Anthony had counted his money and found that he had almost four dollars. He could pay for two rounds at fifty cents a drink—which meant that he would have six drinks.

At half past seven, when they had completed six rounds Anthony felt that if he took just one more drink he would attain a gorgeous rose-colored exhilaration.

Artfully, he flashed in his vest pockets, brought up his two quarters, and started at them as though in surprise.

"Well, I'll be darned," he protested in an aggrieved tone, "here I've come out without my pocket."

"Oh—knock it," Lytell said. "I guess we can blow a good fella to all the drinks he wants. What'll you have—same?"

Just after 9 o'clock Anthony walked unsteadily to the door, handing Sammy one of his two quarters as he passed out. In Sixth Avenue he passed pawn shop after pawn shop, all closed. With growing discouragement, with growing befuddlement, he crossed the street and walked along to one of the great hotels.

He entered and told over on his fingers the acquaintances he might conceivably call on in this emergency. He thought, eventually, that he might approach Mr. Howland, his broker, at his home.

After a long wait he found that Mr. Howland was out. He returned to the telephone operator, leaning over her desk and fingering his quarter as though loath to leave unsatisfied.

"Call Mr. Bloeckman," he said suddenly. His own words surpirsed him. The name had come from some crossing of two suggestions in his mind.

"What's the number, please?"

Anthony looked up Joseph Black—then he waited in the booth while central called the number. He learned that Bloeckman was at a popular dancing resort on Forthy-fifth street. Anthony remembered the existence of a rule that patrons of the place must be in evening dress. Well, he would not go upstairs—he would send a boy up for the head waiter and wait for him in the lower hall.

For a moment he did not doubt that the whole project was entirely natural and graceful. To his distorted imagination Bloeckman had become simply one of his old friends.

After a short interval a head waiter appeared, bearing a card on which were chartered the table reservations.

"Tell him Mr. Patch. Very, important."

Again he waited, leaning against the banister.

Then he saw Bloeckman descending the staircase, and took a step forward to meet him and shake hands.

"You wanted to see me?"

"Yes," answered Anthony, nodding, "personal matter."

"What about?"

Anthony only laughed—a silly laugh; he intended it to sound casual.

"What do you want to talk to me about?" repeated Bloeckman.

"Wha's hurry, old man?" He tried to lay his hand in a friendly gesture upon Bloeckman's shoulder, but the latter drew away slightly. "How'ce been?"

"Very well, thanks.... See here, Mr. Patch, I've got a party upstairs. They'll think it's rude if I stay away too long. What was it you wanted to see me about?"

What Anthony said was not at all what he had intended to say.

"Un-erstand you kep' my wife out of the movies."

"What?" Bloeckman's ruddy face darkened.

"You heard me!"

"Be quiet!" said the older man, angrily. "I should think you'd respect your wife enough not to bring her into the conversation under these circumstances."

"Never you min' how I expect my wife. One thing—you leave her alone. You go to hell!"

"See here—I think you're a little crazy!" exclaimed Bloeckman. He took two paces forward as though to pass by, but anthony stepped in his way.

"Not so fas,' you dam' Jew!"

For a moment they stood regarding each other, Anthony swaying gently from sire to side, Bloeckman almost trembling with fury.

"Be coreful!" he cried, in a strained voice.

Anthony might have remembered then a certain look Bloeskman had given him in the Biltmore hotel years before. But he remembered nothing, nothing—

"I'll say it again, you—"

Then Bloeckman struck out, with all the strength in the arm of a well-conditioned man of 45, struck out and caught Anthony squarely in the mouth.

Anthony cracked up against the staircase, recovered himself and made a wild, drunken swing at his opponent, but Bloeckman blocked it with ease and struck him twice in the face with two swift, smashing jabs. Anthony gave a little grunt as he fell, and his mouth was full of blood and seemed oddly loose in front.

He struggled to his feet, panting and spitting, and then as he started toward Bloeskman, who stood a few feet away, his fists clenched but not up, two waiters who had appeared from nowhere seized his arms and held him helpless. Back of them a dozen people had miraculously gathered.

"I'll kill him," cried Anthony, pitching and straining from side to side. "Let me kill—"

"Throw him out!" ordered Bloeckman, excitedly, just as a small man with a pockmarked face pushed his way hurriedly through the spectators.

"Any trouble, Mr. Black?"

"This bum tried to blackmail me," said Bloeckman, and then, his voice rising to a faintly shill note of pride, "He got what was coming to him."

The little man turned to a waiter.

"Oh, no," said Bloeckman, quickly. "I can't be bothered. Just throw him out in the street. Ugh! What an outrage."

He turned, and with conscious dignity walked toward the washroom just as six brawny hands seized upon Anthony and dragged him toward the door.

"The "bum" was propelled violently to the sidewalk, where he landed on his hands and knees with a grotesque slapping sound and rolled over slowly on his side.

The shock stunn' him. He lay there for a moment in acture distributed pain. Then his discomfort became centralized in his stomach, and he regained consciousness to discover that a large foot was prodding him.

"You've got to move on, y' bum! Move on!"

* * *

Three weeks later the will trial came to an end. The seemingly endless spool of legal red tape having unrolled over a period of years, suddenly snapped off.

Anthonly and Gloria, and on the other side Edward Shuttleworth and a platoon of beneficiaries, testified and lied and ill-behaved generally in varying degrees of greed and desperation.

Anthony awoke one morning in March, realizing that the verdict was to be given at 4 that afternoon, and at the thought he got up out of bed and began to dress. With his extreme nervousness there was mingled an unjustified optimism as to the outcome. He believed that the decision of the lower court would be reversed, if only because of the reaction, due to excessive prohibition, that had recently set in against reforms and reformers.

He counted more on the personal attacks that they had leveled at Shuttleworth than on the more sheerly legal aspects of the proceedings.

Dressed, he poured himself a drink of whisky and then went to Gloria's room, where he found her already wide awake. She had been in bed for a week, humoring herself, Anthony fancied, though the doctor had said that she had best not be disturbed.

"Good morning," she murmured, without smiling. Her eyes seemed unusually large and dark.

"Do you feel well enough to go down to court with me this afternoon?"

She nodded.

"Yes; I want to. Dick said yesterday that if the weather was nice he was coming up in his car and take me for a ride in Centrel park—and look, the room's all full of sunshine."

At 2 o'clock Richard arrived. Anthony took Gloria down in the elevator and walked with her to the curb.

"What time will I expect you back?" asked Anthony.

"We won't come back," she answered; "we'll meet you down there at 4 o'clock."

"All right," Anthony muttered, "I'll meet you," and went upstairs.

He faced his reflection in the mirror, contemplating dejectedly the wan, pasty face, the eyes with their cross-cross of lines like shreds of dried blood, the stooped and flabby figure whose very sag was a document in lethargy. He was 33—he looked 40. Well, things would be different!

The door bell rang abruptly, and he started as though he had been dealt a blow. Recovering himself, he went into the hall and opened the outer door. It was Dot.

More Truth Than Poetry

DISILLUSIONED

An M. P., so I always thought,
Was dignity personified—
A man with lofty purpose fraught
And high aristocratic pride.
I often have observed: "How much
Would congress earn the world's applause
If ever it should chance that such
Exalted statesmen made the laws!"

Sometimes in congress, IL have heard
(Of curse in days now long gone by),
Fierce disputation has occurred
In which somebody "passed the lie."
An awful thought, that congressmen—
With noble sentiments imbued—
Should lose their tempers now and then,
And be so very low and rude!

And then I read that two M. P.'s
Not only stopped to "pass the lie,"
But grew more bitter, by degrees,
And smoth each other hip and thigh!
The other members should have frowned
Upon so terrible a sight;
Instead they all came shouting 'round
Till half the house was in the fight!

Alas! How one's illusions fade,
As from one's heart they fondly spring—
The House of Commons has displayed
The methods of the sawdust ring!
No more my mind shall be at ease,
My soul shall never hope again;
I see that reverend M. P.'s
Are even worse than congressmen.

A HORSE TRADE

Sam Jones, long time citien of the Holliday region was a business visitor Saturday. He came on harseback and intended to return the same way, but when W. T. Metcalf hailed him while riding along the street with "Hey: Sam! What'll you take for that blankety blank old sparkplug? Sam is a natural born horse trader to the manner born, and scenting a sale pricked up his ears at once and answered "Well, I don't know. 'Bout a hundred dollars, I reckon."

"Why that blankety-blank hoss ain't worth it," replied Mr. Metcalf, "but I'll be blankety blanked if I won't give you $75 for the blankety blanked old has been."

'Sold," said Sam, and he unmounted, pulled off his saddle and bridle, and pocketed his 75 bones and started for home in a Ford car while Metcalf started for home leading his new purchase by the mane. Guess, they all got where they started with the two horse trading souls happy.—Archer County News.

MOST TOO BAD

Clay county, or great part of it, is in hard lines as to oil development because so many of its real estate owners are reluctant to become millionaires, because they plant their feet like any mule and refuse to take any chances at becoming rich and worldly-minded.

Underlying this county in various sections are great pools of petroleum or the country's most reliable geologists, coming at different periods and without possibility of collusion, are at fault.

Big, reliable drilling companies, ready to back up with their good money the knowledge of these known real geologists, come pleading for the acreage which would justify them in operating, get the cold shoulder from the land owner, one or more that drives the intending developer away.—Henrietta Review.

Uncommon Sense

By JOHN BLAKE

"OUT OF CONTROL"

When the skipper of any vessel, big or little, sees on the mastheads of another craft a large red ball, he gives her all the room she wants.

For the red ball means "Not Under Control," and a ship which is not under control is a menace to any other ship that happens to be in the neighborhood.

It is rather curious that the average human being hoists the same sort of a danger signal when not under control.

Sometimes the color is red, sometimes white, of the human signal. Sometimes it means anger, sometimes terror.

But invariably it is there, plain to be seen, and a warning to others that the person who displays it must either be avoided or taken in charge.

Normally the brain operates the body, controlling the muscles easily through messages flashed along the nerves.

But rage or fear makes a difference. In neither state can a man or woman, perfectly dependable before, be trusted for a second.

Many men who, in their right senses would never think of doing so much as an unkindness, become unreasoning brutes when they are angry—brutes which seems to delight in the injury to others.

Rage, however, has an effective antidote. Give the angriest man a taste of his own brutality and he will soon become tractable.

The bully subsides instantly the minute he meets a bigger bully, or a brave man who is physically able to hurt him.

Fear, which also renders people out of control, is even more dangerous than rage for there is no effective means of abating it.

Some of the most terrible crimes in history have been perpetrated by cowards, who killed or maimed because they were in deadly fear of their own miserable lives.

Mob violence, the most cowardly and despicable of all cowardice, is usually inspired by fear.

Massacres have almost been outbreaks of fear—the fear that if enemies were not removed by wholesale the perpetrators themselves would be in danger.

It is not an intelligent human being who will give way to either fear or rage.

While rage is even more cowardly than fear, both should be sternly suppressed.

Men will, of course, fear when their lives are in danger—even the bravest of them. But they learn to keep their fear sufficiently in check so that they do not have to get out of control, or the danger will not be increased.

As to anger, that is a passion that is soon cured, if there is a policeman around. If there is no policeman, and the man who is addicted to it does not himself suppress it, he will sooner or later get into trouble. And even if he should escape, the poison of anger will destroy him, in one way or another, sooner or later.

What Today Means To You

By MARY BLAKE

TARUS

The best part of today is between 1:30 and 9:35 p. m., while the moon is going into conjunction with the benign Jupiter. During this period it is favorable for attention to important matters.

Persons born today will have characteristics puzzling to those about them and their undertakings will often be unappreciated.

If today is your birthday, you are conservative and honest with a tremendous upbuilding capacity. Your perserverance enables you to carry out whatever is entrusted to you and where Aries subjects disappoint, Taureans more than fulfill.

Your tremendous store for pentup energy will best be utilized in working for others; your labors however, are usually unappreciated. Mingled with these staple qualities there is a slight love of luxury in your makeup, which may lead to self-indulgence if not curbed.

You are an idealist and ideals are like stars. "You will not succeed in touching them with your hands, but like the seafaring men on the desert of the waters, you choose them as your guides, and, following them, you reach your destiny."

Your lack of tact would unfit you for most callings where diplomacy is necessary, such as politics or salesmanship. You are furthermore too sincere in your motive for anything but the most idealistic type of public life. There is that in your personality which makes you shrink from advertising yourself by the advantage of a popular wave of emotion.

You should learn to apply your talent for investigation, which is latent in your character, in whatever you have to do. In fact, if cultivated, this one quality itself might bring you into no little fame.

Physically you should have a robust constitution, but one that has been seriously over-taxed by this time, as you are very fond of sports of all kinds and rhythmic exercise, such as dancing; but not military drill. In dancing you insist upon your own little steps which your partner will have to learn or lose a toe.

INSURANCE AND BANKING
State of Texas
Austin, Texas, March 28, 1923

To All Whom It May Concern:

This is to certify that the American Credit Indemnity company of New York, New York, N. Y., has in all respects fully compiled with the laws of Texas as conditions precedent to its doing business in this state, and I have issued to said company a certificate of authority from this office entitling it to do business in this state for the year ending the 29th of February, 1924.

Given under my hand and seal of office at Austin, Texas, the date first above written.

Commissioner.

Too Much Rain Is Cause Of Boost In Price Of Cotton

NEW ORLEANS, April 29.—Unfavorable weather in the belt caused a gradual trend to values during the greater part of last week in the cotton market, but just on the close a great deal of liquidation from the long side was responsible for moderate reactions.

Lowest prices were made on the opening session when the trading months were 8 to 19 points under the close of the preceding week and from this there was a rise to levels 130 to 167 points over the preceding week's final prices. The net results were gains of 35 to 63 points. July, after selling off to 26.06, rose to 27.87, and finally closed at 26.74. In the spot department prices gained 75 points on middling, which closed at 28.00 cents a pound, against 17.00 cents on the close of this week last year.

The main complaint from the belt was that too much rain was interfering with the planting of the crop. Texas sent in the most unfavorable account and the rainfall there was heavy enough to cause floods and some little washing out of cotton, already planted. Some southern counties for the state reported that planting had been done as many as three times without good stands being secured.

Waurika To Have Lower Water Rate

WAURIKA, Okla., April 29.—The city council, in its last meeting, decided to make some reductions in water rates. Owing to the recent extension in the water and sewer system, there will be about 100 new customers with practically no increase in expense, making a reduction feasible.

The sewer tax of 50c will be done away with, and the minimum amount raised from 1,00 to 3,000 gallons. This will be a material aid in the city-beautiful campaign.

Oil Tax Question Up In Court Today

A vitally important question, involving payment of thousands of dollars in taxes on oil properties of this county, is to be settled one way or the other at today's regular weekly session of the county commissioners' court. The issue at stake is that of the tax rate on producing properties in the county, a split over which, about a month ago, has kept the commissioners in more or less turmoil ever since.

It is believed that an harmonious agreement will be reached today, and that no more trouble will be experienced.

Owsley Invited To Address Solons At Austin Soon

Associated Press Dispatch

AUSTIN, Texas, April 29.—Alvin M. Owsley of Denton, national commander of the American legion, was invited by the legislature, in a concurrent resolution by Senator Rogers of Collin county, to address a joint session of the legislature, probably Monday or Tuesday. Owsley is expected to be in San Antonio this week, and it is believed he will visit Austin while on his present trip through Texas.

No Solution Of Dead Body Mystery In Duncan

WAURIKA, Okla., April 29.—Duncan officers are still unsuccessful in unravelling the mystery surrounding the receipt of a pasteboard box, postmarked Vicksburg, Miss., containing the dead body of a new-born baby. The box was sent to a fictitious name, and when it was not called for it became so offensive that it was opened by the postmaster and sheriff.

The little body was embalmed and is being held pending some solution of the mystery.

MARATHON HOP STARTS TONIGHT

Race Orchestra Conducts Long Grind At Legion Hall

The stage is all set for the marathon dance to start here tonight at the American legion hall, and several entries in the contest have been made, including that of Miss Jennie LeRoy, of Dallas, who has danced 80 hours at the Dallas contest. The Louis Race jazz orchestra will play and have charge of the dance, which is expected to last for several days.

Miss LeRoy announced yesterday that she intends dancing at least 100 hours, while other contestants some of whom are entering their first dancing contest, hope to outdo the little dancer. The contestants already entered are: J. J. Frances and C. Ledford of Fort Worth; E. E. Marden and Margaret Marden, Burkburnett; Wister Griffin and Mamie Huffner, Burkburnett; Louis Race will be Miss McLeRoy's dancing partner. Ray has danced 60 hours at a time.

ROCKPORT TO SHIP TRUCK

Carloads of Cucumbers Will Be Sent Out In May

Associated Press Dispatch

AUSTIN, Texas, April 28.—The Rockport section is expecte dto begin shipping straight carloads of cucumbers by the middle of May, as well as to move mixed cars of vegetables, according to today's weekly state marketing bulletin. Good acreages of okra, eggplant and cantaloupes also have been planted in that section, it is stated.

"Corpus Christi still estimates it will be May 25 before cucumbers statt rolling commercially from the replanted acreage in that section," the summary declares. "On account of lateness of the crop, it is feared that the season will be a short one, unless the heat of June should be tempered.

"Transplanting of tomatoes to the field has begun in the East Texas section adjacent to Jacksonville, and the growers are encouraged by the manner in which the plants weathered the recent heavy rains. It is believed that a good crop will result. About half the acreage planned will be devoted to tomatoes in the east district because of the March freeze.

"Although shipping of spinach out of the Austin district the past week was brisk, the deal is not expected to last many more days. It is estimated that not more than 20 or 25 additional cars will be shipped from this section. Warm weather may reduce this estimate to a lower point."

Memorial Arch Dedicated In June

Associated Press Dispatch

FORT WORTH, April 28.—Dedication of a memorial arch to the students of Texas Christian university who served in the World war will be one of the features of the golden jubilee celebration of the university's fiftieth anniversary on June 5. Approximately 5,000 former students of the school are expected to attend the celebration. The annual convention of the Texas Christian church will be held at the same time.

The arch is being constructed by contributions of students and former students at a cost of approximately $6,000. It will be 21 feet high with a clearance of more than 16 feet, 17 feet wide with two inside cylinder columns of marble. The campaign for the memorial is being conducted by the senior class.

Diamond Tiara Found In West May Be Part Of Czar's Jewels

Miss Bess B. Johnson, of the internal revenue department, wearing the royal (?) gems.

LOS ANGELES, April 26.—Is the veil of mystery surrounding the whereabouts of the Russian about to be rent asunder?

United States revenue agents here declare it is.

Their prediction is based on the recent discovery here of a tiara, studded with diamonds, emeralds and pearls believed to be a part of the jewels of the czars which disappeared mysteriously with the death of the Russ royal family.

Since the tragedy of Ekaterinberg the soviets have taken particular care to shroud in secrecy the disposition made of the priceless gems of the Romanoffs.

From time to time the reports have been current that the jewels—or at least part of them—had been smuggled by the U. S. customs officials for wealthy American purchasers.

A while back the grave of a world war veteran was opened because of persistant reports that at least some of the gems had been smuggled in in the casket when it was brought back from Europe, but this report proved false.

Now federal agents here have seized a valuable tiara which they declare once graced the royal.

It was found in possession of a man who told the agents that he had purchased it in a New York pawnshop. His story is doubted.

Revenue agents believe that the man may have smuggled the piece into the country with others and they are confident that their discovery will lead them to a solution of the mystery which has puzzled customs authorities throughout the world since the soviets began disposing of the gems.

NEGLIGENCE

There Is Some Happiness in It, So Writes ALTA HEACOCK (Waurika, Oklahoma)

Didn't you have a comforting sense of well-being last night when you reviewed the events of the day and found that you had tried to be a real help and inspiration to some one during the day that had just slipped back into eternity?

And sitting there in a big easy chair, the magazine you had been reading lying in your lap forgotten, you reviewed other days, feeling like a traveler, retracing steps over a long trail—searching for a precious gift that had long been lost.

And away back of beyond you saw so many things, and a measure of brightness faded from your own particular world, for you sensed anew that on so many days you had been just a gay little craft, drifting along with a pilot asleep at the wheel.

And at times like that nothing seems to matter but love, and you remember the letter you meant to write, the call you intended to make, the words of commendation you planned to speak, the resolution not to be cross or fretted or worried, and—you know the kind of things you remember in those queer hours, half sad, half sweet—that all women have.

And then with a little prayer you recalled the fact that each day had just 24 hours, that you had only two hands and one willing heart, and that, mostly, each day had been uncomfortably full of tasks.

And you thought He would understand, because you understand so much about your children, and you hoped your dear ones would because they loved you so much, and so you gained peace.

And, in spite of lack of fulfillment, you still have your dreams and the very real hope that when all of life's lessons have been learned and you have come to the end of the long trail that leads home, that there will still be room enough in Heaven for one more guest.

Women are just like that.

"Paul Before Agrippa," Crouch Theme Sunday

Two great services featured the revival meeting at the First Christian church yesterday. Last night the building was filled to capacity. Following a fine song service, a piano number by Alvin W. Roper, and the singing of the "Holy City" by R. E. Shepherd, Rev. Crouch preached a powerful sermon on the subject "Paul Before Afrippa" giving a vivid recital of the great historic scene of Paul's appeal to Agrippa in behalf of the Christian faith. There were 18 responses to the invitations of the day.

Tonight Rev. Crouch will speak on the subject "Shipwrecked, But Saved."

The meetings will continue through Tuesday evening of this week.

BUSY SESSION FOR COUNCIL

Plenty Of Business Comes Before Meetnig Tonight

With the white-way street lighting issue to come up for discussion, several paving matters to be heard and the usual mass of routine business scheduled for attention, tonight's meeting of the city council promises to be a lively one. It will be the first session with a full council present to be held in two weeks. Commissioner Stayton was out of the city last Monday.

Want Lights All Night

The lighting question involves whether or not the white way lights will burn only until 2 o'clock, as is now the case, or whether they will be allowed to burn all night, as local merchants are advocating. A committee appointed at the chamber of commerce business luncheon two weeks ago will wait on the commissioners and present their views.

Paving matters on the books include the Taylor street project, the public hearing of which was called two weeks ago, but which was allowed to remai nover for a longer period before being closed.

It is possible that the city prosecutor's place also may be filled permanently.

"Heredity" the Only Word Of Its Kind In the World, Kay Tells Bible Class

"Heredity is one of the most terrible words in the world," Judge John C. Kay told members of his bible class Sunday morning at the Olympic theatre in speaking on influence heredity exercised over the world. He traced some of the situations ascribable to heredity and said that in 400 years or soso, some of the acts today might result in a wretched and forlorn criminal being led to the docks.

One hundred and eighty-four men were present for the morning lecture.

We have in the English language one tremendous word and for that word, there is no substitute and no synonym, "heredity." That word grows more important from day to day, and from year to year, and from age to age. "Heredity."

"If you read in the newspaper that a race horse ran or trotted a mile in less than two minutes, or in two minutes, I can with a little trouble show you that that race horse was descended from Abdallah and from Eclipse, and far beyond Abdalla and Eclipse to one great horse raised among the sands of Arabia. That's true of horses and it is true of men. It always was and it always will be true. I wish it wasn't the law, in my human way of looking at things, but it is.

Blank Verse

Now, the Savior was a great poet. Did you ever think about that? "In my father's house are many mansions, if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, that where I am, there ye may be also." Magnificent blank verse. Now, the Savior was human as well as divine. Where did He get that? Listen to His great ancestor, one of the greatest poets of all the ages, David: "The Lord is my shepherd, I shall not want. He maketh me to lie down in green pastures, He leadeth me beside the still waters." A great poet! And, where did he get it. Ah, listen to David's great grandmother: "Where thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest, I will lodge, and they people shall be my people, and thy God my God." So that it would seem that we inherit our very thoughts.

David was great because he had great ancestors. The Savior had a long line of fine ancestors—inherited these things.

Can't Help Past

Now, we can't do anything about the past. Ah, but men! What about that line of men, that long line of men that I can see in the misty future, stretching out in an open curve into the infinity of eternity that are to follow after you and after me? We are responsible for these. That man who lives his life upon that small narrow basis, thinking only of himself, only of his welfare, thinking only of the people about him, and the age about him, lacks vision and lacks that breadth of view that will make him a big righteous man.

If you will look forward far enough, you may see some poor, unfortunate, wretched criminal led to the block a thousand years from now because you didn't live right, or because I didn't live right. I believe that. Everything points to it. All the testimony is that way. All history is that way. All the laws of heredity point fatally and unerringly in that direction. Then I am, if that be true, not only responsible for myself and those about me, my neighbors and my friends, but the acts of my life, and the thoughts of my life are just as certain to bob up and bear fruit four hundred years from now, as they are today. So, I say that that word heredity is a terrible, terrible word.

What is it that spoils the picture, and breaks the plan in heredity? It is not the law of heredity. The law is perfect. When that little mocking bird climbs into the tree in your yard and begins to sing, what is the difference in his song and your song? Why is it that the exquisite notes of his magnificent music break upon your ear without a false start and without a jar? It is because in him, and in all of his ancestry, there was no sin. That's the reason his throat is perfect and my throat imperfect.

Savior Saves Men

Now, the Savior came to save men. Not in 1923 only, but in every age, and it is your duty, and it is my high duty, that we not only do something for ourselves and the men of this age but that we beat the path out clear and clean for those that shall follow after us. Now, when you think about that, if you do think about it seriously you become a creature with a sense of a tremendous responsibility—tremendous responsibility!

Ah, men, it were not necessary that I speak to you if I could but lift the curtain of the future and let you see your long line of descendents, far, down the road of time, and let you watch their steps, and watch their acts, and watch their thoughts, and see their rise, and see their fall.

Loves Betters Men

Now, what is it that makes men better? Is it doctrine Is it belief? Is it obedience, great as that word is? No! It is love! This lesson is a love story; one of the most exquisite love stries that was ever written.

I see down at Fort Worth now pretty soon, they are going to have a meeting of a lot of disgruntled spirits that are going to fight evolution. I think it is just possible, just barely, possible, that their motives are good, but their plan is bad. Why? As I think, their plan is bad because the Savior said, "If I be lifted up, I will draw all men unto me." And, it seems to me that if these fellows who are meeting down there to persecute people would burn as much energy trying to teach men to love the Savior, and to love each other, that they would find that their tents were pitched on higher and on more holy ground.

The Savior never said that Christianity was to built up by prosecution. He never said and He never meant that I should go out there and become the guardian of the thought, and the belief and the opinion of my neighbor, but He just reached out just one time and said: "My grace is sufficient for you."

Died For Men

Now, I may be teaching sort of a broad doctrine here this morning, but I believe it, and if there is anybody here that don't believe it, the door is not locked. And, if you would do something with the evolutionist, if you would do something with the unbeliever, if you would do something with that professor in the school who you think is not teaching right, point out to him the fainting Christ upon the road to Calvary, point out to him that our doctrine, at least my doctrine, is that the Savior died for all men and not a few of this or that crowd, or sect, or branch.

I believe the way to build up the church, and to build up Christianity is to tell them the simple story of Christ; to tell them it is not my belief, and not my effort, but tha because His blood was shed on Calvary hat I can be saved. I believe that!

My hope is buitl on nothing less
Than Jesus' blood and righteousness,
On Christ, the solid rock, I stand
All other ground is sinking sand.

That's the kind of religion that I believe in, and that I think you ought to believe in. Not come in your own self-righteousness, not imagine that you and your crowd have organized a church somewhere in the bushes, on the creek, and have got it worked out for the first time just what the Bible means, but, to take the great, simple truths of the Bible, that all men can understand, and build your hopes upon them and look upward, and upward. Such is my doctrine.

And, when I remember my weakness, when I remember my ignorance, when I remember the mistakes that I have made, when I remember how many calculations have gone wrong, and my plans have been faulty, and my assertions untrue, or half true, it comes over me, as I grow older, that I am unfit—unfit to sit in judgment over my fellow man. And, I would not set myself up, even if I was in a place where I could, to try men for what was going on in their minds, and in their intents, and conscience, and heart. I wouldn't do that because mine so often, failed to be right.

Now, it is my view—it is sort of a harsh view, but it is my view that I have got to do my thinking, and work out my way, and lay my plans, with the head that I have got. This is the head that they gave men when I started out. If it goes wrong, so much the worse for me. But, that head and that heart that God gave you is safe if you follow, as I think, the simple teachings of the Master.

Savior's Simplicity

There are a great many things in the Bible that you do not understand or, at least, that I do not, but did you ever notice the awful majestic simpilicity of everything that the Savior said? There is no controversy. There is no argument. There is no uncertainty about those things which He said. Men don't go to war about them.

Now, to get back to our love story. This is the place, and the only place, where the Bible stops long enough in the tumult, and the shouting of the kings, in the dust clouds that were raised by the armies, in the cry of the prophets, in the sitting of the judges, and in the conest with heathen nations, this is the only place where the Bible stops long enough to give you a complete and beautiful picture of family life.

Did you ever read the history of England? It is the history of the Duke of York and of Norfolk, and of Lancaster, and of royalty, and not the history of the common people. Nobody has ever yet been able to write the story of the common people. There is a reason for that, and that reason is that they are so numerous. Abraham Lincoln once said that God was partial to the common people, or He wouldn't have made so many of them.

Democracy's Doctrine

This is the story of a widow who had left because of famine and gone over into a strange land and came home, and her daughter becomes the great grandmother of King David, and one of the grandmothers of the Savior. He who toiled a slave may come anew a prince. That's the dictrine of democracy. It's a doctrine above democracy. It's the doctrine of humanity. This beautiful story is re-enacted every day, in every land. It is a story that you ought to know. It is a little short book, this book of Ruth. May I ask you to read it? It is as nice a novel, if you want to call it a novel, it is a nice piece of literature, if you want to call it literature, it is a nice piece of poetry, if you want to call it that, but, whatever you call it, it is one of the very gems of all literature, and one of the priceless treasures of the world, is this story of the love of this woman for her mother-in-law. Out of it we ought ot get something. We ought to get it that it is God's plan, it is heaven's plan, that the great consequences, the great fruit of the world, comes out of love, and not out of contest; comes out of love not out

The Value of a Dollar

The value of a dollar is based upon what it buys, but there are times when the dollar buys more than others.

It is when the opportunity of an unusual investment comes along. If you have dollars in your bank to take advantage of it, you increase the buying power of your money.
