Jackpot hits record

AUSTIN — Nobody won the $35 million Lotto Texas jackpot Wednesday night, so officials said Thursday that the next prize should be a record $55 million. "This is uncharted territory for us," said Nora Linares, the lottery's executive director. Twice before — on May 1 and July 7, 1993 — the lotto jackpot has reached $50 million. Despite its record proportions, the Texas jackpot still isn't among the nation's 10 highest.

Oil-field blast, fire

ODESSA — An oil-field explosion and fire Thursday destroyed a crude-oil tank at a satellite tank battery, on the E.F. Cowden B. Sattelite No.1. lease, fire officials said. The explosion and fire, near the intersection of Torrance and Westmoor, occurred at approximately 1:10 p.m. and was under control within 30 minutes, officials said. There were no injuries in the explosion, which caused limited property damage to nearby homes and forced the temporary and precautionary evacuation of several residences, officials said. Bill Stevens, a spokesman for Amoco in Houston, said the cause of the explosion was unknown and is under investigation. He said the lease would be shut-in until repairs are made to the satellite battery.

AIDS cases

ATLANTA — The number of new AIDS cases unexpectedly more than doubled last year under a broader definition of the disease and boosted by a sharp increase in the number of infections among heterosexuals. The federal Centers for Disease Control had projected 1993 AIDS cases would jump 75 percent in the first year of the new definition. It actually increased by 111 percent, from 49,016 in 1992 to 103,500 in 1993, the agency reported./8B

TEXAS JUSTICE UNDER SCRUTINY

Nighttime deadly force law poses many questions

By Terri Langford
Associated Press

HOUSTON — In the days of the Wild West, the theft of a horse could easily endanger one's life by stranding the rider hundreds, perhaps thousands of miles from food and safety. The solution? Shoot first, if it prevents the theft.

But the recent fatal shootings of a visiting Scottish businessman and a car repo man in Houston has some raising questions about the broad applications of the Texas self-defense statute, which allows homeowners to defend both property and self with "deadly force" during nighttime hours.

In Texas, crimes as minor as say, egging a house, can legally be greeted with gunfire — if the homeowner proves his property or personal safety is threatened.

"Compared to most states, it is very harsh," said Robert Schuwerk, a University of Houston Law Center professor.

In the early 1970s states were asked to adopt or tailor what became known as the modern penal

White House aides answer to grand jury

■ Unusual drama of administration officials being ordered before panel creates storm of attention.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — In a politically charged atmosphere, White House officials testified before a federal grand jury investigating the Whitewater affair Thursday and President Clinton's aides delivered an attache case full of subpoenaed documents.

The leadoff witnesses were two of Hillary Rodham Clinton's senior aides: chief of staff Margaret Williams and press secretary Lisa Caputo. Clinton's communications chief, Mark Gearan, also went to the U.S. District Courthouse to testify.

"This has been a difficult day for people, it's been an emotional day," White House counselor David Gergen said on CNN.

Seven other administration officials under subpoena were allowed to delay their appearances.

While not accused of wrongdoing, the officials were subpoenaed in a probe of whether the White House intruded improperly in investigations of the Clintons' interest in the failed Whitewater land deal and its ties to a collapsed savings and loan.

The officials all took part in meetings or telephone calls with Treasury aides about what was supposed

Affair's fallout could weaken Clinton's hold

By Tom Raum
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Americans so far have tended to give President Clinton the benefit of the doubt on questions of judgment. But the spectacle of top White House aides testifying before a grand jury brings the issue of trust to the fore and could undercut his administration's ability to perform.

■ Analysis

Clinton has been able to spring back from crises before, ranging from gays in the military to a $200 Hollywood haircut to the firings of the White House travel office staff.

And even now, White House strategists were considering ways for him to clear the air — including a possible joint TV appearance with Hillary Rodham Clinton.

But Whitewater could prove a harder ordeal for Clinton to overcome than his previous challenges.

100-plus members of Congress request meeting with Clinton on energy strategy

WASHINGTON (AP) — More than 100 members of Congress Thursday asked President Clinton to convene a meeting to discuss ways to shore up the battered domestic energy industry.

Pointing to the "alarming deterioration of a vital American industry," the bipartisan group of 107 lawmakers from 29 states requested a session as quickly as possible.

Among the signers were Senate Minority Leader Bob Dole of Kansas and the senators representing Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, Colorado and North Dakota. Twenty-three of the 30 House members from Texas also signed the letter, as did the five sitting Oklahoma House members.

Since oil prices slumped last October, more than 13,500 jobs have been lost in the domestic industry — which already was reeling from the half a million jobs that vanished in the last decade.

Last year, the nation posted its lowest domestic oil production since 1958, averaging 6.8 million barrels a day.

Rate jump-sparked homes sales bypass city

■ Midland sales have been slightly lower than at same time last year.

By Gary Shanks
Staff Writer

Although home sales have remained steady, area Realtors say the Midland real-estate market has not seen the same upsurge in sales as that of other real-estate markets across the United States.

A recent jump in mortgage rates is credited with sparking home sales across the country. Officials with Century 21, a real-estate company with 5,000 brokers throughout the nation, said the last 30 days have shown a large increase in home sales.

Industry analysts cite other factors, as well as mortgage rates, as leading to the upsurge. These include growing consumer confidence in the recovering economy and the end of a harsh winter, which kept many people inside in the Northeast.

This upsurge, however, has not been experienced locally. Several area Realtors said business has been good recently, but no great increases in sales have been noted.

Midland home sales have been slightly lower than — but roughly equivalent to — those of the same time last year, according to data from the Midland Association of Realtors Inc.

Total home sales in February numbered 62 and 155 for the year. In 1993, 169 homes had been sold

Richards to swoop into basin for state highway dedication

Staff Report

Gov. Ann Richards is scheduled to be in the Permian Basin on March 18 to dedicate State Highway 191 in a ribbon-cutting ceremony, according to the chairman of the Midland/Odessa Transportation Alliance (MOTA).

The ceremony is scheduled for approximately 1:45 p.m. atop the overpass over FM 1788 at a point approximately halfway between Midland and Odessa, where both cities and the Midland International Airport can be viewed.

"We believe that this is very important. It will give us an opportunity to show the state leadership of our interest and support of the extension of I-27 through our area," said Charles R. Perry, MOTA chairman.

County casts light on candidates' contributions, spending in races

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

There seems to be somewhat of a correlation between campaign contributions and votes in political races, according to campaign-fiscal reports in the Midland County Elections Administrator's Office.

But it is hardly uniform.

The two candidates — Charles W. 'Bro'' Seltzer and Jeff Norwood — who took in the most campaign cash contributions and who spent the most money in their Republican Party primary campaigns, were the high vote-getters Tuesday in their respective races for judgeships. But their vote-pulling power wasn't strong enough to ward off runoff elections on April 12.

Seltzer, the Midland County judge campaigning for the judgeship of Midland County Court-at-Law No. 2, reported $21,760 in contributions, almost $2,600 in

Homeland government collapses in South Africa, thousands loot

MMABATHO, South Africa (AP) — Thousands of people went on a looting spree in the capital of the Bophuthatswana black homeland on Thursday to celebrate the apparent collapse of a government that opposed taking part in South Africa's all-race elections.

Many police and soldiers joined in the celebratory crowds, but there were reports that forces loyal to the homeland's president had opened fire on crowds, leaving an unknown number of casualties.

The whereabouts of President Lucas Mangope and other homeland leaders were unknown, but Johannesburg's Radio 702 said presidential palace guards claimed Mangope had fled.

South Africa's ambassador in Mmabatho, Tjaart Van der Walt, said Mangope told him he was going to his country residence outside Mmabatho.

Mangope is an adamant foe of the African National Congress and had refused to let Bophuthatswana participate in the April 26-28 election, which the ANC is expected to win handily.

His ouster would be a substantial victory for the ANC, but also would create new uncertainties.

Pro-apartheid white groups that were uneasily aligned with Mangope in his opposition to the election announced a halt to negotiations with the ANC and government to protest the situation in Bophuthatswana. The talks have been aimed at persuading the groups to take part in the election and avert theats of civil war.

On Thursday night, several pickup trucks and cars filled with armed white extremists were seen patrolling in Mafikeng, bordering Mmabatho, or parked on the South African side of the border about six miles outside the city.

The Afrikaner Resistance Movement, a neo-Nazi group that has vowed to fight against black rule in South Africa, had said it would send its members to Bophuthatswana to help Mangope stave off an ANC-led coup.

Bophuthatswana (pronounced bo-PUH-taht-swah-nuh) is one of four nominally independent black homelands that were created by the white-led government in an effort to keep blacks and whites separate. No other country regards them as independent.

The constitution that is to take effect after the election calls for the reintegration of the homelands into South Africa. Mangope had vowed to keep the homeland independent.

With soldiers and policemen joining protesters and making no attempt to stop looters, it appeared Mangope had lost control of the nominally independent territory.

"The police are dancing in the streets with the people," David Van Wyk, a spokesman for striking teachers, said from the capital, Mmabatho.

Security forces and civilians had surrounded the Parliament, and car horns blasted as drivers sped through the desolate city, waving their arms in clenched-fist salutes.

By night, the streets of Mmabatho and Mafikeng were quiet.

President F.W. de Klerk had been wary of intervening militarily in Bophuthatswana because of the likelihood of bloodshed. The ANC accused it of avoiding the issue to deny the ANC the votes it could win from Bophuthatswana's people.

Gen. Constand Viljoen, the leader of the right-wing Freedom Alliance that includes Bophuthatswana, said Thursday night Alliance members would not hold any more talks with the government and ANC until Mangope was returned to power. Alliance members are united in their demands for independent homelands for their supporters to avoid living under ANC rule.

Pressure on Mangope to accept reincorporation has grown in the run-up to the election, and on Monday civil servants began widespread strikes and marches to press their demands.

Running battles between homeland security forces and protesters injured 37 people Wednesday. A military spotter plane circled the capital, and until the evening outburst of celebration there were few people on the streets other than police and journalists.

Three members of a Reuters Television crew said they were dragged from their car and beaten with batons, whips and fists by Bophuthatswana police near Mafikeng on Thursday morning.

Another journalist from the South African Broadcasting Corp. said he was pulled from his car at a police roadblock in the capital, beaten, and warned he would be shot if he returned.

The ANC has for years accused Mangope of brutally suppressing ANC members and other opponents, a charge Mangope denies. Despite the strikes, he has said most of Bophuthatswana's people support his view that the ANC is a communist organization and that Bophuthatswana is better off on its own.

Testimony: Orders forbid Israeli soldiers from shooting at settlers

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Israeli troops were under orders not to open fire on Jewish settlers, even if the civilians shot at Palestinians, a police commander told a hearing into the Hebron massacre Thursday.

"The order was that if a settler, a Jewish settler, shoots his gun, even in the street . . . toward locals . . . it's forbidden to shoot at him," said Chief Superintendent Meir Tayar, commander of the paramilitary border police in Hebron.

"You take cover and wait for the clip to finish, then stop him in some other way, not by shooting," Tayar told a commission of inquiry investigating the massacre.

His men, operating under army orders, help guard the Tomb of the Patriarchs where a Jewish settler, Baruch Goldstein, killed 30 Muslim worshipers on Feb. 25. Troops arrived after the massacre was over.

The army spokesman's office would not comment on the regulations.

Other officers confirmed such orders were in effect during routine street unrest, but maintained they were not meant to prevent security forces from foiling an out-and-out attack such as Goldstein's.

Brig. Gen. Shaul Muhfaz, the military's West Bank commander, said soldiers were discouraged from firing at Jews because of the assumption that any Jews shooting a weapon would be doing so in self-defense.

Lt. Col. Yemini Canaan, head of the army's Operations Branch in the West Bank, said other scenarios were never discussed by military planners.

During the hearing, the commission's head, Chief Supreme Court Justice Meir Shamgar, pressed Tayar on whether a blanket ban on shooting Jews seemed logical. "Not so much. I was not 100 percent comfortable with it," he said, adding other officers felt the same.

The testimony was likely to spark charges of military negligence in facing down settler violence in the occupied lands. Weeks before the country was shocked by scenes of settlers firing their weapons down a Hebron street while soldiers looked on.

"It is the duty of whoever is in charge of law and order to act against anyone shooting, Jew or Arab," said Ori Orr, a legislator and reserve general, calling the standing orders "stupid and improper."

During the six-year Palestinian uprising against occupation, more than 1,270 Palestinians have been killed, most by army gunfire.

Testimony also revealed lax security at the massacre site. Maj. Daniel Ben Shoshan, an operations officer, admitted surveillance TV cameras malfunctioned Feb. 25.

Witnesses have said only half the 10-member guard detail showed up for duty that day, and that when the first officer arrived at the scene, the shooting was already over.

Tayar said three border policemen were late, apparently because they were not awakened by the duty commander at their base.

Chinese intellectuals make written appeal for human rights

BEIJING (NYT) — Challenging the government's latest crackdown on dissidents, seven leading scientists and intellectuals appealed in writing on Thursday to President Jiang Zemin for an end to repression of free speech and for the release of all political prisoners.

The statement, made available to Western journalists a day before Secretary of State Warren Christopher is to begin an official visit, is believed to be the first petition to the Chinese government on human rights from a group of eminent intellectuals since the crackdown on the Tiananmen Square demonstrations in 1989.

The group said it was protesting the arrests and intimidation of dissidents over the last week in advance of Christopher's visit and the opening session of the National People's Congress.

"We appeal to the authorities to bravely end our country's history of punishing people for their ideas, speech and writing, and release all those imprisoned because of their ideas and speech," said the petition, signed by seven intellectuals. The group was led by Xu Liangying, a 74-year-old historian of the Academy of Sciences who helped translate Albert Einstein's collected works into Chinese.

"People of insight, who are concerned with the fate of the nation and who are dedicated to our country's modernization, feel shocked and at the same time upset and worried," the statement said, adding: "To talk about modernization without mentioning human rights is like climbing a tree to catch a fish."

The tone and spirit of the statement recalled the popular movement that rose in the winter of 1989 and gathered momentum that spring, first among intellectuals, then among students and workers. Their protests in favor of democracy paralyzed Beijing and seized international attention for weeks until the movement was crushed by tanks and machine-gun fire in Tiananmen Square on June 4, 1989.

Xu said he mailed the petition on Thursday to President Jiang and to Qiao Shi, chairman of the National People's Congress, or parliament. Official Chinese news organizations have not yet reported the appeal, but its existence is likely to become widely known here through foreign radio broadcasts beamed to China.

Providing a copy of the petition to The New York Times, Xu asked that it be conveyed to Christopher and expressed a desire to meet with him during his three-day visit, which begins on Friday.

In Tokyo, Christopher sought to play down expectations that he might meet with dissidents.

U.S. bans Thai companies' imports

BANGKOK, Thailand (AP) — The United States has banned imports from three Thai companies for a year because they allegedly sold Libya materials that could be used in making chemical weapons.

The ban, although imposed in early February, was printed in the U.S. Federal Register this week and announced by U.S. Ambassador David Lambertson on Wednesday.

He said the move reflected "the strong concern of the United States about the Libyan chemical weapons program."

A report from the U.S. Information Service obtained Thursday said the sanctions were imposed because of sales of chemicals to Libya that had occurred over a period of several years.

The United States has alleged that Libya is building a chemical weapons plant at Tarhuna, about 40 miles southeast of Tripoli.

The sanctions were applied under the Chemical and Biological Weapons Control and Warfare Elimination Act of 1991, under which the president must decide on the "sanctionability" of suspect companies, then sends notification to the companies' host government. The companies have 180 days to cease their activities.

Lambertson stressed that the sanctions — a ban on imports of the companies' products into the United States and on U.S. government agencies from doing business with them — applied only to the three companies and not to Thailand or its government.

The Federal Register identified the three companies under sanction as W and M Ltd. Partnership — also known as W and M Engineering, the Wintrade Company, and the Winman Co.; SPC Supachoke — also known as Super Trade; and The Handle Group Co.

loans, and $20,491 in expenditures, according to pre-election reports prepared on Texas Ethics Commission forms.

Seltzer attracted 34 percent of the vote in a four-way race.

He will be pitted against Marvin Moore, an assistant county attorney, in the runoff election. Moore, who pulled in almost 31 percent of the vote, reported $10,935 in contributions and $10,122 in expenditures through late February.

Court-at-law judgeship candidate John D. Roosa, who picked up 23 percent of the vote, listed $425 in contributions, $12,700 in loans, and $9,687 in expenditures.

Jack Chappell, who got 12 percent of the vote, reported $3,300 in contributions, a $300 loan, and $4,770 in expenditures.

Seltzer's almost 200 contributors included County Commissioner Win Brown and his wife, Lou; Frank Kell Cahoon, Bill Mathis, former Judge Vann Culp, Spencer Beal, Mary Lou Cassidy, and Clarence Scharbauer III.

His highest donations were $1,000 each from Beal of Midland, Gary Redwine and Shauna Redwine of Dallas, and Mrs. L.S. Reed of Boerne.

Among Moore's contributors were County Attorney Mark H. Dettman, Frank Cowden Jr., J.L. Davis, William D. Kleine, John L. Cox, and lawyers Allen McFall, Woody Leverett, Richard Alvarado, Mike Morgan and William E. Ward.

Davis and Kleine each gave $2,000 to Moore's campaign.

Roosa reported funds from lawyers J. Brian Martin, Robert Sykes, and Larry McMillion.

Chappell's contributors included Randall Gibson, who donated $2,000 to the campaign, Gina Gibson, George Gibson, and Jim Montgomery.

Norwood, a former political consultant who won almost 46 percent of the vote in the county judge race, reported $15,459 in contributions and $16,603 in expenditures.

Teresa Clingman, a prosecutor in the district attorney's office, took 34 percent of the vote and will challenge Norwood for the Republican Party nomination for judge in the April 12 runoff.

Ms. Clingman reported $10,482 in contributions and $9,442 in expenditures.

Midland businessman Jim Prince, with 13 percent of the vote, reported $18,439 in contributions, including $9,999 from John David Prince of New Orleans and $7,825 in in-kind services, such as television-produced political advertisements, and $7,048 in expenditures.

Candidate Ray Moudy, who did not campaign for the judgeship, did not report any contributions or expenditures. He received 7 percent of the vote.

Norwood's contributors included former U.S. Rep. Tom Loeffler of San Antonio, Texas Railroad Commissioner Barry Williamson, and Midlanders Robert B. Holt, Ernest Angelo Jr., J.L. Davis, Rosalind K. Haley, Brad Merritt, John Hendrix, Earle M. Craig Jr., Guy Mabee and Joe Mabee.

Merritt and Davis each donated $1,000.

Ms. Clingman's supporters included Evetts Haley Jr., Lynn Durham Jr., Frank Kell Cahoon, Kingdon Hughes, Woody Leverett Jr., Frances Haley, Bill Mathis, J. Michael Cunningham, and Hugh Harkrider.

In the Republicans' Precinct 2 race for commissioner, incumbent Guy McCrary won 54 percent of the vote to win outright the contest for Republican nomination for a seat on the Commissioners' Court.

However, McCrary will be challenged for the commissioner's job by Democrat James Brooks in the Nov. 8 general election.

McCrary reported $8,795 in contributions from about 90 sources and $5,912 in expenditures.

Commissioner-candidate Audie Porter, who took 27 percent of the vote, reported $2,739.89 in contributions, including $2,239.89 in in-kind contributions of signs from Anthony Sign Company on Feb. 25.

However, Porter said, after he realized the company was incorporated and therefore prohibited by law from making political contributions, he wrote a reimbursement check of $2,239.89 to the sign company.

In turn, Gary Dunkerson, owner of Anthony Sign Company, wrote Porter a personal check for the amount in making the in-kind sign donation a personal gift rather than a corporate gift.

"I didn't know he was incorporated," Porter said.

Patrick Bostick, a deputy sheriff running for commissioner, garnered 19 percent of the vote. He reported $1,890 in contributions and $1,668 in expenditures.

McCrary's contributors included Frank Kell Cahoon, Vann and Marilyn Culp, Larry Bell, Fred Westmoreland, Clarence Scharbauer Jr., Clarence Scharbauer III, Joseph I. O'Neill III, Earle M. Craig and Jane McCrary.

Among Porter's contributors were Bob Midkiff and Ken Peeler.

Bostick reported gifts from Virginia Selby, Jess Ann Thomason, Russell Jones and City Council member Claudia Egan.

McCrary's opponent in the November general election, Democrat James Brooks, reported $590 in contributions and $368 in expenditures. Brooks, who took 65 percent of the vote, reported donations from J.D. Crawford, Doyle Land and Mrs. C.R. Welch.

His opponent, Marvin Manning, did not list donations or expenditures.

In the Republicans' four-way Precinct 4 commissioner's race, front-runner Bruce Blake reported $2,645 in contributions, a $500 personal loan to his campaign, and almost $3,130 in expenditures.

Blake, who drew 27 percent of the vote, will be in the runoff election with James Brezina, who received 26 percent of the vote.

Brezina reported $300 in contributions, $2,685 in expenditures and $2,652 in expenditures from personal loans.

Herb Wales, who attracted 24 percent of the vote, listed $3,884 in contributions, a $1,700 loan and $3,777 in expenditures.

Charlie Goss, who took in 23 percent of the vote, reported $2,335 in contributions, $6,258 in expenditures, $2,564.19 in loans and $2,564.19 in expenditures from personal funds.

Blake's contributors included Wagner & Brown, a limited partnership; Tom Brown of Dallas and The Parkard Fund of Midland.

Brezina reported $100 gifts from Vincent Scurry, James C. Henry, and Robert Watson.

Wales's contributors included Richard Gaddy, Clarence Scharbauer Jr., William F. Pennebaker and Curtis Guss.

Goss listed $400 in contributors from Pat and Joe Hopkins.

WEATHER WATCH

Expect mid-60s, south winds

Staff Report

Today's forecast calls for partly cloudy skies with a high in the mid-60s and south winds at 15-25 mph. Tonight should be cloudy with a 20 percent chance of rain and a low near 40, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Saturday should be cloudy with a 30 percent chance of rain and a high near 60.

After an overnight low of 22, Thursday's high reached 66, compared to the record high for that date of 88 set in 1954. The record low was 10 set in 1948.

STATE

A high-pressure system in South Texas kept skies mostly sunny and helped raise afternoon temperatures Thursday in the wake of a cold front's passage through the state.

Highs warmed into the 60s in North and South Texas with the clear conditions and light winds.

Readings were in the 50s in East Texas and the upper gulf coast but hovered in the low 40s in the northern Panhandle, where snow still covered the ground, the National Weather Service said.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

TESTIFY: Drama creates storm of attention

to be a confidential probe of Whitewater.

"It might have looked bad," White House counsel Lloyd Cutler said, "but when it becomes clear exactly what happened in those meetings, it doesn't, in my view at least, I don't think it amounts to very much." He spoke in a taped interview on PBS' "Charlie Rose" show.

The unusual drama of White House officials being ordered before a grand jury created a storm of attention at the U.S. District Courthouse. Throngs of photographers, cameramen and reporters staked out courthouse entrances, and special prosecutor Robert Fiske had to be helped through the pack by federal marshals.

A dozen demonstrators who described themselves as members of conservative groups milled about the courthouse with posters reading, "Shred No More," "Fess Up," "Please, All Documents," and "Stop the Coverup."

The president, in New York for a series of appearances, complained about people in Washington "using extreme words to characterize conduct or activity or positions. The other politicians do it, the media do it, always trying to twist it like taffy to the nth degree."

The president was accompanied by Bruce Lindsey, a close confidant who was among those subpoenaed. Another subpoenaed aide, deputy chief of staff Harold Ickes, flew to Cleveland to participate in a Democratic National Committee meeting. He said his grand jury appearance is tentatively set for next Thursday.

"This is not Watergate," Ickes told reporters. "This is not Iran-Contra. There is no coverup. There is no stonewalling. There is no obstruction of justice. The president and everyone else is cooperating.

"I don't think it will have much impact," he said, "but you never know."

On Capitol Hill, Republicans kept up their demands for congressional hearings but, at the request of Fiske, said they would agree to a delay so prosecutors would get first crack at critical witnesses.

Sen. William Cohen, R-Maine, said congressional hearings could begin by "the middle of May or perhaps even June first." Democrats are resisting the hearings, accusing the GOP of merely trying to make political hay at Clinton's expense.

The subpoenaed documents were delivered to the grand jury by White House deputy counsel Joel Klein, associate counsel Marvin Krislov and Chris Cerf, general counsel for the White House Office of Administration.

About 1,000 pages of notes, letters, memos, phone logs and newspaper clippings related to Whitewater were collected in a week of searching by 400 White House employees. Duplicates made up at least half of the packet, an administration official said.

The White House did not exercise executive privilege to withhold any documents, Klein said, but he refused to say whether the president or first lady turned over any material.

FALLOUT: Whitewater could take heavy toll

(From 1A)

Questions of Clinton's character have always lurked close to the surface. But until now, his activism on issues Americans deem important generally has helped keep such questions at bay.

At least one new poll suggests more than a majority of Americans believe Clinton did something illegal or unethical in the Whitewater affair.

The investigation entered a new, more serious stage as the first of 10 administration officials began testifying Thursday under subpoena to a grand jury looking into White House efforts to contain the affair.

While there's nothing incriminating about a subpoena and no one stands accused of wrongdoing, the development played into hands of Republicans who are seeking to draw a comparison between Whitewater and the Watergate scandal of two decades ago.

And the affair threatened to take a toll on Clinton's effectiveness, eroding his political capital and making his relations with Congress more difficult.

"It's bound to drain time and energy from the president's agenda," said Larry Sabato, a University of Virginia political scientist. "And it will chill personal relations to some degree within the White House: People are afraid to talk to one another about forbidden subjects."

The Whitewater affair was spinning out of control at a time when Clinton was having a hard time anyway moving the centerpiece of his second year, his overhaul of the health-care system.

The growing affair also threatened to undermine Mrs. Clinton's work. No longer can she expect to play to an adoring audience of lawmakers in pleading her case for the health-care plan.

A USA Today-CNN-Gallup telephone poll, conducted Monday and Tuesday, found that 60 percent of those surveyed believed Clinton did something unethical or illegal in Whitewater — and that 56 percent believed that of Mrs. Clinton.

The poll may have been a little misleading, in that only half of those responding — 51 percent — said they had followed the matter "very closely" or "somewhat closely."

SUMMIT: Legislators request energy meeting

(From 1A)

"The statistics speak clearly to the crisis which the domestic industry and nation face," the lawmakers wrote in the letter coordinated by Sen. David Boren, D-Okla.

Industry officials estimate that if oil prices remain around $14 a barrel, some 50,000 marginal wells will be plugged and abandoned this year. The nation's 450,000 marginal wells account for 14 percent of domestic production.

"Many people don't understand that once these wells are plugged, the oil and natural gas are lost forever," the letter said. "Our nation cannot afford to waste these resources."

The lawmakers, representing one-fifth of the Congress, want to talk to Clinton about tax incentives to encourage new drilling and production, as well as other ways to boost production.

"The collapse of oil prices that began last October has driven U.S. prices below the cost of much of our domestic production," they wrote. "This situation has sent shock waves through the communities we represent as businesses are forced to close and thousands of Americans become unemployed."

The White House offered no immediate comment Thursday, with spokeswoman Ginny Terzano saying the letter had not reached the president's desk.

But industry officials praised the lawmakers' action and said corrective action must be taken swiftly.

"It's really a scary time out there," said Denise Bode, president of the Independent Petroleum Association of America, which represents small and mid-sized producers. "I'm hopeful we can get some attention from the administration now."

And, she added: "This is so extraordinary because this isn't something that is being ginned up by a bunch of Washington lobbyists or a bunch of hired guns. This is something that's genuinely come from the members talking to their constituents back home and finding out this is a very serious crisis that they need to deal with."

by the end of February, with 77 total for the month. This translates to $12,894,313 in sales for this year and $13,558,749 for 1993, local figures indicate.

"Our economy is still pretty slow on real estate, one Realtor said.

Average 30-year fixed mortgage rates have risen from 7.08 percent in early February to 7.62 percent as of March 4, according to a New Jersey firm that tracks mortgage rates.

This jump occurred after a rise in short-term interest rates, engineered by Federal Reserve officials. This quarter-point increase was the first increase in five years.

Interest rates began climbing after investors in the government bond market began fearing inflation. If interest rates continue climbing, the current wave of buying could be choked off, market analysts predict.

These analysts, however, do not expect a large increase in rates. Some are predicting rates will drop again in the near future.

and Odessa is scheduled to host a reception for the members of the Texas Transportation Commission, who have been invited to the ceremony.

This reception will be at the Center for Energy and Economic Diversification, also located at the corner of highways 191 and 1788.

"This important highway has provided a great boost to the economic development of both Midland and Odessa, and words cannot express adequately the value of this highway to our two communities," Perry said.

"The citizens of this area are deeply grateful to the governor, the Legislature, and to the Texas Department of Transportation for this highway and this opportunity to show our appreciation," Perry said.

He said the ceremony will be brief and probably last about 15 minutes. He encouraged the public to attend this "big occasion."

JUSTICE: Deadly force law poses questions

code.

"Almost every state is going to be fairly liberal in protecting yourself, your child, whatever," Schuwerk said. "But most states take the view that property is a much lesser issue than a self-defense type of issue."

For instance, in New York, deadly force can only be used to protect property in cases of arson or burglary. The Texas law, in comparison, extends it to include such minor offenses as theft and criminal mischief during the nighttime.

"Criminal mischief can be just about anything," said Sandra Guerra, an assistant law professor at the University of Houston and former Manhattan prosecutor. "It can be egging your house."

"It's very broad," Ms. Guerra said of the Texas statute. "It gives homeowners the right to deadly force in many more situations that even involve trivial violation of property rights."

In 19th century Texas, crimes such as criminal mischief and theft of property were much more serious.

"If I were in West Texas and someone stole my horse, I would probably die," reasons Schuwerk. With a lack of police force, property owners literally had no choice but to take the law in their own hands.

But in 1994, what is the threat? Schuwerk gives an example.

"Say you've got this crazy guy in the back yard, yelling and shouting that he needs to make a phone call," Schuwerk said. ". . . All you have to believe is, that if you go out there, the guy will take the gun away. Even if I believe that I don't really need to use deadly force, I can because I might get hurt if I didn't."

Sound far-fetched?

On Jan. 7, Andrew De Vries, a visiting businessman from Aberdeen, Scotland, was fatally shot in the predawn hours by homeowner Jeffrey Agee.

De Vries and another Scottish businessman, Sydney Graves, were winding up a night on the town when the shooting occurred. The two were being driven back to their hotel by a man and woman they had met when De Vries for some reason wanted out of the car, police said.

Graves got out too, and the two men then started knocking on doors in Agee's upscale west Houston neighborhood around 4 a.m. De Vries rang Agee's doorbell twice, hiding each time Agee came to the door. He then jumped a backyard fence and banged on glass doors. Agee, fearing for his family's safety, shot De Vries. Agee was cleared of the shooting by a grand jury last month.

Then on Feb. 25, in the early morning hours, Jerry Casey Jr. fired on Tommy Dean Morris, whom he thought was stealing his car. Morris was legally repossessing the car because Casey was three days late on a payment.

The nighttime deadly force law is expected to be Casey's defense, outraging Morris' family.

"If you were behind on your payment, wouldn't you know it? He knew the car was being repossessed. He saw that it was being towed, that it wasn't being stolen, but he fired anyway," said Donna Morris, now a widow and single mom to the couple's four children.

The Morris case has yet to reach a grand jury, which will decide whether an indictment is necessary.

Harris County District Attorney Johnny Holmes defends the statute and counters the outrage from the recent publicity over the law.

"What if Agee shot a two-time ex-con for burglary? Or a kick burglar? No one would be concerned with the law," said Holmes.

As for the Morris case, Holmes said he can't comment specifically because facts are still being determined. But he points out to the repossession industry, which is upset over the shooting, that the deadly force law only applies at night.

South Korea may resume military exercises with U.S.

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — South Korea will resume joint military exercises with the United States if the South's talks with North Korea fail to produce significant progress, Prime Minister Lee Hoi-chang said Thursday .

His remarks reflected disappointment in Seoul over the North's refusal to exchange high-level envoys to discuss a nuclear-free Korean peninsula.

Cancellation of this spring's annual Team Spirit military exercises with the United States was linked to an agreement by the communist North to allow international nuclear inspections and exchange special envoys with South Korea.

Under the deal with Washington, the North allowed inspections to begin at its seven declared nuclear facilities last week. But it has refused to exchange envoys with its southern capitalist rival.

Lee told reporters, "It will be necessary to conduct Team Spirit exercises this year if the preconditions are not met. It's doubtful that North Korea has any intention of exchanging special envoys."

He said the North's intentions would become clearer at the next round of talks at the border, scheduled for Saturday.

The U.S. State Department's Robert Gallucci arrived Thursday for four days of consultations in Seoul on the nuclear issue.

Gallucci, an assistant secretary of state, serves as chief U.S. negotiator in talks with North Korea. He is to meet with the South's Foreign Minister Han Sung-joo, Unification Minister Lee Yung-duk and Defense Minister Rhee Byoung-tae before leaving Sunday.

U.N. aid convoy turns back, doesn't reach town

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — Stymied for days by Bosnian Serbs, a U.N. aid convoy Thursday gave up trying to reach 19,000 desperate Muslims trapped by roaring artillery in the town of Maglaj.

The failure, coming amid a general improvement in aid deliveries, was a demoralizing setback for the U.N. relief effort in Bosnia and it demonstrated that Serb forces can still stop deliveries at will.

"Once again the Bosnian Serbs have succeeded in delaying and preventing delivery of humanitarian aid," said Peter Kessler, a U.N. relief agency spokesman in Sarajevo.

"We cannot afford to have a major convoy stuck for four days out in the field when we could deliver aid to someplace else," he said.

The U.N. High Commissioner for Refugees, Sadako Ogata, issued a statement in Geneva condemning the interference with the convoy.

"In the past few weeks, the delivery of humanitarian aid has improved over most of Bosnia-Herzegovina, but Maglaj stands out as a stark exception," she said.

Maglaj has been surrounded by Serb and Croat forces for most of the past nine months. Pounding by artillery has continued despite a month-old cease-fire between Serbs and the Muslim-led government in Sarajevo, 50 miles south.

Government radio said Thursday evening that seven surface-to-surface missiles exploded in residential areas. The report could not be confirmed.

The convoy of 10 trucks, carrying 92 tons of supplies, got within a few miles of Maglaj, but Serbs manning the last checkpoint warned that they could not guarantee its safety because of fighting ahead.

The trucks were returning to a U.N. aid depot at Zenica in central Bosnia.

Maglaj has not seen an aid convoy since October, when U.N. officials described it as a "shattered town" of "subterranean people" forced to cower in shelters.

Aid planes have dropped tons of food in the area, but such deliveries often do not reach their targets. There also have been reports of people killed by shelling and sniper fire while trying to retrieve parcels.

The U.N. commander in Bosnia, Lt. Gen. Sir Michael Rose, has pledged to take a tougher line with combatants who interfere with aid convoys. All three warring factions have signed, and often ignored, blanket agreements guaranteeing safe passage.

But U.N. mission chief Yasushi Akashi's spokesman, Michael Williams, said there were no plans to use force in the Maglaj case.

Rose has complained that U.N. peacekeepers already are stretched too thin trying to police the Sarajevo cease-fire and another that continues to hold between Muslim and Croat forces in central Bosnia.

He has asked for nearly 11,000 additional troops, which would almost double the size of his U.N. peacekeeping force. There were signs Thursday that at least some would be on the way soon.

British Defense Secretary Malcom Rifkind said his country would send 900 more soldiers. He said they would be among about 7,200 peacekeepers being sent to Bosnia from at least four countries, including France, Russia and the Czech Republic.

Serb forces on Wednesday also attacked Cazin, in the northwestern tip of Bosnia, and Tuzla, the largest government-held town outside of Sarajevo.

Croatian radio said at least three people died and 10 were wounded in the Cazin attacks. In Tuzla, the northern Bosnian city where the United Nations wants to open an airport for humanitarian aid flights, Serb artillery shells killed two civilians and wounded three others seriously.

Christopher speaks to Japanese businessmen

TOKYO (AP) — Secretary of State Warren Christopher chided Japan Friday for failing to live up to its commitment to open its markets and told a business group that "agreeing to disagree is not enough."

"Nobody wants a trade war," Christopher said in a speech to Keizai Doyukai. "We want trade opportunities for the United States, for Japan and for the world."

His speech was an effort to reach beyond the Japanese government and bureaucracy and ended a two day visit during which the secretary of state said he bluntly told government leaders, "Great nations keep their commitments."

Christopher met Thursday with Prime Minister Morihiro Hosokawa and Foreign Minister Tsutomo Hata, for discussions he said were "straightforward and, I believe, candid."

Christopher reminded his business audience that he was speaking exactly a month after President Clinton and Hosokawa met in Washington and announced they were unable to resolve differences over trade.

He said their decision "not to paper over our differences" was "a welcome sign of a new candor in our relationship."

But then he added that "for the world's two largest economies, agreeing to disagree is not enough."

He referred to the so-called Framework Agreement reached by the two nations last July and said that the United States had lived up to its pledge to keep its markets open, reduce budget deficits and improve competitiveness.

For its part, he said that Japan has failed to meet commitments to open its markets, boost domestic demand and reduce its huge trade surplus with the rest of the world,

While praising Hosokawa's commitment to economic change, Christopher said the economic stimulus measures proposed by the prime minister are insufficient.

He also chided Japan for failing to come up with objective criteria for measuring progress in opening its markets in key sectors such as insurance, government procurement and automobiles and auto parts.

"Japan has declined to provide realistic ways to measure progress to ensure that any such agreements are working," he said.

Christopher said the biggest beneficiaries of open markets would be the Japanese people.

Tokyo commemorates W.W. II's deadliest air raid

By Eric Talmadge
Associated Press Writer

TOKYO — It was dark and quiet in Tokyo when the first B-29 bomber appeared in the sky. By the time the 325th one veered away, much of the city was aflame and more than 120,000 people were dead.

On Thursday, Peace Day as it is called here, thousands of Tokyo residents paid their respects to those who died that night 49 years ago in the most devastating firebombing attack of World War II.

More than 1,000 survivors of the raid gathered at a Tokyo funeral hall, where Buddhist priests chanted and burned incense to soothe the souls of the dead.

"We must pass the memory of this day on to the next generation," Tokyo Governor Shunichi Suzuki told the gathering, which was also attended by the late Emperor Hirohito's grandson, Prince Akishino.

Similar gatherings were held elsewhere around the city.

The Great Tokyo Firebombing Raid began just before midnight March 9, 1945. When the last of the 325 American B-29s pulled away from its target 2½ hours later, the glow of the flames was visible 150 miles away.

Fanned by gusting winds, the fires from the canisters of jellied gasoline and magnesium turned 13 square miles of Tokyo's northeast working-class neighborhoods into an inferno.

One million people who survived were left homeless.

Japanese estimates of the number who died that night range from 120,000 to 190,000, higher than the death toll of 118,000 on the day of the U.S. atomic bombing of Hiroshima, although tens of thousands later died from the effects of radiation. Some 70,000 died in the atomic bombing of Nagasaki.

The Tokyo raid also far outstripped the carnage of the firebombings of Hamburg in 1943, in which 50,000 were killed in a week, or Dresden, where 70,000 were killed just weeks before the Tokyo air raid.

College students give Habitat help

There has been plenty of pounding, sawing and painting this week as the first college students — from the University of Illinois at Champaign-Urbana — in this year's Collegiate Challenge for Habitat for Humanity have worked through spring break to make life better for a few Midland families.

The first group of students, who arrived in Midland on Sunday, only set the pace for Midland Habitat for Humanity, though. Eventually the number of college students in Midland for the program will reach 70 with workers also arriving from the College of the Ozarks in Missouri, Union College in Nebraska, the University of Arkansas in Little Rock, and Gustavus Adolphus College in Minnesota. The program will continue through April 1 of this year.

Started in 1990 by the Rev. David McDaniels, the Collegiate Challenge is a program that taps the skills and energy of college students in the interest of creating better housing for mankind. Last year, more than 4,000 college students performed work at 92 locations across the nation, according to Ted Miller, executive director of Midland Habitat for Humanity.

The students, who receive no money for their work, benefit by learning construction skills that help them throughout their lives and by meeting and getting to know a diverse group of people. Habitat for Humanity benefits by having workers perform the demanding labor and by improving housing for some of the community's residents.

Midland businesses and institutions greeted the first college workers with open arms — giving them free meals and places to stay. The Collegiate Challenge requires that the students pay their own travel expenses to and from the location where they work, but typically Habitat for Humanity is able to get food and shelter donated for the students. Miller praised Midlanders for their outstanding reception of the students, saying the community has "just been super."

The community also should know that the students who participate in the project — both young men and young women — don't only help Habitat for Humanity during spring break. They also assist Habitat for Humanity year-round in the communities where they attend college.

There'll be another chance for Midlanders to thank the students on Friday, March 18, when a rally for Habitat for Humanity will be held at 7:30 p.m. at Yucca Theatre. Midlanders should turn out in force to show support not only for Habitat for Humanity, but for the students that make the program possible.

Attorney general's opinion advances information quest

A recent opinion by the Texas attorney general is another step forward in making information available to the public.

The ruling states that no governmental body has the authority to withhold information about a court settlement even though there was an agreement to keep the terms confidential.

The opinion was issued in response to a situation in the Grand Prairie school district. The district contended it was not obligated to reveal details and amounts of a lawsuit against the superintendent and three trustees and cited three exceptions to the state Open Records Act allowing confidentiality for personnel reasons. The attorney general rejected all three arguments.

Indeed, any time public money is involved, the public has an inalienable right to know how tax dollars are being spent.

Too often, governmental bodies hide their foibles and missteps behind the cloak of sealed lawsuit settlements. Such confidentiality is often explained away as preventive action. . . .

Secretiveness about such matters serves only to raise suspicions and reinforce the public's distrust of elected officeholders.

We hail the attorney general's ruling as a major triumph for the public's right to know.

San Antonio's 'white elephant' nuclear plant goes down again

The South Texas Project nuclear plant in Bay City is sick again.

The electrical generating plant isn't generating electricity again. It was "up" for less than a week, after being "down" for a year. This on-again-off-again operation is not supplying low-cost nuclear energy. It is expensive to repair. And San Antonio ratepayers have a 28.5 percent share in whatever it costs. . . .

One option for San Antonio we consider "last-ditch" is to join Austin, another shareholder, in a massive lawsuit that seeks to recover losses from the higher utility bills. . . .

STP cost the partners $5 billion, plus hundreds of millions more for repairs. It's time for San Antonio and city public service officials to take an aggressive stance or draw up contingency plans.

The plant has the growing look of a white elephant.

Legislator becomes outsider's insider

WASHINGTON — Celebrating the beginning of his fourth decade in the House of Representatives, Rep. John Conyers, D-Mich., has catapulted from the ranks of the peripheral to the powerful — a quintessential outsider who has mastered the insider game.

Anderson

He has shown two sides in his 30 years of service. One has been eccentric: He has proposed reparations for the descendants of slaves, advocated the 32-hour work week and proposed a guaranteed income for the poor.

The other side — in sharper focus since Conyers assumed the chairmanship of the Government Operations Committee in 1988 — has been powerful: He is a serious player and a junkyard dog investigator, watching out for the taxpayer's wallet by rooting out fraud, waste and abuse in every corner of the bureaucracy.

Conyers has never been accused of harboring sacred cows, and his only special interest appears to be his constituents in downtrodden Detroit, where one-third of the population lives below the poverty line. Conyers splits his time between fighting for Detroit's downtown waterfront projects and probing wrongdoing in Washington. In January 1993, for example, Conyers' committee released a detailed list of $300 billion in waste racked up by the government since 1988 — an accomplishment any conservative would love to brag about. Yet Conyers remains an unapologetic liberal who would be loathe to join the popular fad by calling himself a "new Democrat."

The son of a left-wing operative in the United Auto Workers, he arrived in Congress as one of only six blacks in the House.

Ignored at first, Conyers — by virtue of his ascendancy in the House leadership — inspires fear and trepidation. Armed with stature, savvy and the investigative power of the subpoena, Conyers has come of age — but without losing the attitude of the rebel, as a visit to his office revealed.

When Senate Minority Leader Robert Dole, R-Kan., charged that "Democrats don't investigate Democrats," he couldn't have been counting Conyers.

"A number of people came to me at the beginning of last year and said, 'Well, now that there are Democrats in the administration, I guess your committee is probably not going to be as zealous,'" Conyers said. "I assured everybody if you're oversighting waste and efficiency . . . (and) you make that a partisan issue, then you're missing really the kind of service that can be performed on Government Operations."

If the Clinton administration was hoping for a more cooperative Conyers than the one that gave fits to the Bush administration, those hopes went up in flames along with the failed federal raid of the Branch Davidian religious compound in Waco, Texas. Nearly a year ago, as lawmakers lauded Attorney General Janet Reno for her conduct, Conyers alone asked the tough questions. Reno was nearly brought to tears and Conyers' office was deluged with thousands of angry calls in Reno's defense.

Most of Conyers' firepower has been trained on the Pentagon — the intersection where the populist from Detroit can meet the powerful congressional chairman. Conyers finds the Clinton administration badly deficient in tackling national defense. For example, last year Conyers announced a plan to save the taxpayers billions of dollars by junking wasteful defense programs such as the Milstar satellite program, the C-17 cargo plane, the Seawolf submarine and the Patriot missile. But the administration is resisting.

CHARLEY REESE

President must exert control over military

There must be something in the water in South Korea that causes Army brass to forget the chain of command.

Reese

When I was a recruit at Ft. Jackson, S.C., the chain of command was one of the things I had to memorize, but Gen. Gary Luck, commander of U.S. forces in South Korea, seems to have forgotten it.

He testified recently to the Senate Armed Services Committee that "he" was willing to give up joint maneuvers with the South Korean army this year but, unless there were major military pullbacks by North Korea, not permanently .

I hate to disillusion a general, but it isn't his decision. He bloody well will give them up permanently if the U.S. government so decides or even if the South Korean government so decides. The general's job is to command his troops and obey the orders of his superiors, which in this case is the president of the United States. It is not Gen. Luck's job to decide America's foreign policy or South Korea's.

The maneuvers were called off this year in exchange for North Korea's decision to allow inspection of some of its nuclear power plants. Even if the general doesn't think that was wise, it is still not his decision to make.

And while Bill Clinton was a draft dodger, he has managed to get himself elected commander in chief and he bloody well better assert civilian control over the generals because it is his constitutional duty and because we, as a people, don't want military officials making political decisions.

Clinton took a lot more gaff from the Joint Chiefs over the homosexual issue than I or Harry Truman would have. Congress has the constitutional right to argue with the decisions of a president; the Joint Chiefs do not.

If I had wanted to ban discrimination against homosexuals in the military, I would have called the Joint Chiefs over to the White House for a private meeting and said, "Gentlemen, here is an executive order I have signed banning discrimination against homosexuals. The only response I want to hear from you is either, 'Yes, sir, Mr. President,' or 'I resign.' Make your choice now."

This principle of civilian supremacy over the military, established by George Washington and the Constitution, is a very precious one. It is what has kept us free from the plague of military coups and dictatorships. It's the reason Truman fired Gen. Douglas MacArthur, an American hero, who had stayed overseas too long and begun to think of himself as emperor.

And, we the people, should support that concept even when we are dumb enough to elect a president a great deal less admirable in character than most of the generals.

Whatever the issue that causes the conflict is less important than the principle of the president maintaining supremacy over the military.

It is precisely when we begin to think the issue is more important than the principle that we get in trouble. Every general in the world who has taken power has done so in the belief it was necessary to save his country — and nearly all of them proceeded to do a worse job of governing than the poor civilian they threw out.

I'm not suggesting of course that General Luck is guilty of anything more than a poor choice of words. The military should be free to give honest answers to Congress and to give their best professional advice. He is certainly free to say that as commander he would not recommend that we give up the maneuvers.

But foreign policy positions and politics are not the province of the military. Their job is solely to execute whatever military actions they are ordered to take.

And, it is also our duty as citizens, to make sure they, the military, don't get blamed for the political decisions of our civilian leaders. That was the great injustice committed by the Vietnam anti-war movement.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Hillary now seems to be liability to Clinton

As Whitewatergate deepened, a wag inquired: Is it time to call for Hillary's resignation? Maybe so. But on the other hand, if Ms. Rodham Clinton goes — a nearly inconceivable prospect — what's left of the Clinton administration? Not much, in all truth.

Murchison

The Clintons are the weirdest family act in modern political history. He's the first president without a coherent program of his own; but, then, he hasn't needed one. The defining political gesture of the Clinton administration — health-care reform — came from the first lady. As did the strategy for effecting it: bash the pharmaceutical companies and signal no quarter to opponents, as though the plan, this holy of holies, were inscribed on smoking-hot tablets from the mountaintop.

The American people nonetheless have come to see Hillary's plan as an attempt to force-feed them something new and untried. This is one reason the plan is fast losing popular favor, with Congress expected to write its own plan — if it writes any plan at all.

Hillary Clinton's personal style — one part jealous secrecy, two parts damn-your-eyes — underlies the business dealings that prompted the investigation and the arrogance.

The Washington Times on Monday ran a front-page story over the headline: "Rose staffers say Hillary ordered papers shredded." A dozen boxes of documents kept at the governor's mansion were destroyed beginning in 1992, when the Whitewater story first broke. Did the shredded documents concern Whitewater? No one obviously can say that they did — or that they didn't.

By all accounts, Mrs. Clinton is the business brains of the family; if you call it brains. She seems to have handled the Whitewater investment. Her former law partners, associate attorney general Webster Hubbell and the late Vincent Foster, are key characters in the narrative. Bernard Nussbaum, her pal from the House committee that worked on the impeachment of Richard Nixon, was the White House counsel forced to resign after cutting the first lady's staff in on a Whitewater briefing by the Treasury Department. None of this does credit to the acumen of the president's supposedly brilliant wife.

This raises the question: How brilliant really can she be, to have messed up so much in so short a time? Is it possible that Hillary Clinton is the bearer of an inflated reputation, grounded on her status as a) the president's wife and b) a liberated woman? This is a potent combination.

No one in the White House wants to call her hand; few enough outside it do, for fear of being berated by her feminist allies, who in the mass media are legion. Mrs. Clinton — for all Rush Limbaugh's efforts — has enjoyed a wonderful press. ("St. Hillary," The New York Times entitled a magazine cover story on her).

More and more, St. Hillary seems a liability to her husband and his hopes. However book-smart she may be, when it comes to politics — if not life! — she seems operationally challenged.

She won't resign, because she holds no job she could quit. That's another part of the embarrassment — her unelected status as our social conscience. We have two presidents for the price of one. Neither one at the moment looks very impressive.

Pathologist probes British house for clues

GLOUCESTER, England (AP) — Crack pathologist Bernard Knight got down to work on Thursday, rolling up his coat sleeves and wearing his rubber boots in the house where police have dug up the nine bodies he must identify.

Police say it may be months of work for Knight, who has been involved in some of Britain's most sensational cases — and who relaxes by writing crime novels and attending "murder parties."

Five more murder charges were filed Thursday against Frederick West, 52, already charged with the murders his daughter, a pregnant lodger and another woman. It's up to Knight to fill in the names of the victims.

Knight spent several hours in the cellar where five sets of remains have been found. Outside, police used a mechanical digger and shovels to search for more bodies.

The 62-year-old forensic pathologist concentrated on looking for hair and other material that might help in identifying the victims, and taking soil samples that could indicate how long the bodies were buried, said Detective Superintendent John Bennett.

Most of Knight's work is in his laboratory at the University of Wales College of Medicine in Cardiff.

He has worked on many high-profile cases, including that of Robert Calvi, the Italian banker who was found hanging from Blackfriar's Bridge in London, and assisted Amnesty International in investigating torture.

He is also said to enjoy "murder parties" where guests try to solve fictional crimes.

But his other real claim to fame are his eight crime novels, including "The Lately Deceased," "The Thread of Evidence" and "Deg y Dragwyddoldeb," one of his two Welsh-language whodunits.

The victims need not be identified for West to be charged, police and legal experts said. He is due for another court appearance today.

Police have not said why they have identified two — West's daughter Heather Ann, who was last seen alive in 1987, and an 18-year-old lodger, Shirley Robinson.

Other forensic scientists said Knight and his team will use a range of techniques to identify the victims — from studying bones, teeth, hair or perhaps a button or a pair of earrings, to genetic analysis and computer-aided anatomical reconstructions.

"How long the investigation will take depends on how good the police information is about the relevant pool of missing people," said Prof. Anthony Busuttil of the forensic medicine unit at the Edinburgh Medical School. He helped identify the 270 people killed in the bombing of a jetliner over Lockerbie, Scotland, in 1988.

Teeth can be matched to dental records to identify an individual. The skeleton will reveal the height, weight, sex and race of a victim.

Failing that, genetic material extracted from a skeleton can be compared to the genetic material of living relatives.

London airport reports 2nd attack

LONDON (AP) — London's Heathrow airport closed its southern runway early Friday morning after the second attack on the airport within 30 hours.

"Some incendiaries have been fired. There has been very little damage," a press officer said. No casualties were reported.

On Wednesday night, the Irish Republican Army fired four mortar shells from a car parked at a nearby hotel. The shells failed to explode.

London Ambulance Service said it was alerted at 11 minutes after midnight that "an act of aggression" had been committed at the airport.

It said three incendiary devices and two suspicious packages had been reported at the airport's Terminal Four.

Airport press officer Anita Newcourt said the incendiary devices were not thought to have detonated.

No group immediately claimed responsibility.

Prime Minister John Major had said Thursday that Wednesday night's IRA mortar attack at the airport would not derail peace efforts in Northern Ireland.

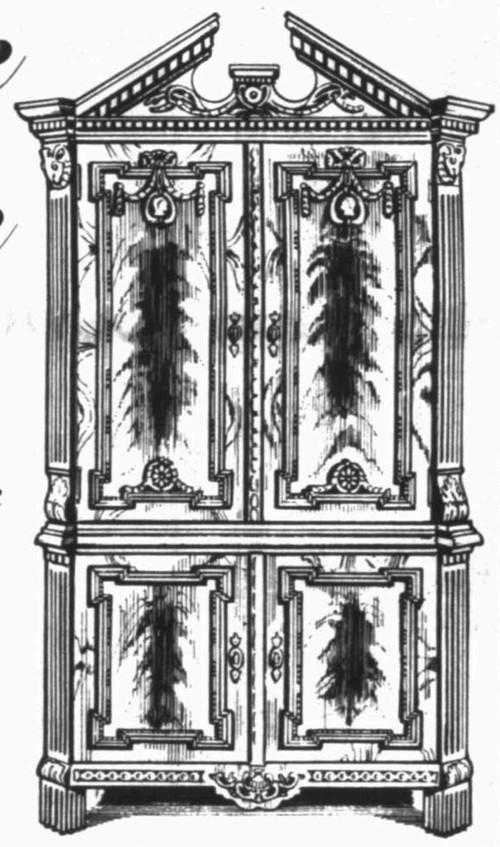

But Irish Prime Minister Albert Reynolds, who had been counseling patience as the IRA and its allies deliberated whether to talk or keep shooting, said Thursday that time was running out.

"The time has come for a clear decision on peace to be made and for an end to prevarication and procrastination," Reynolds told the Dail, Ireland's parliament.

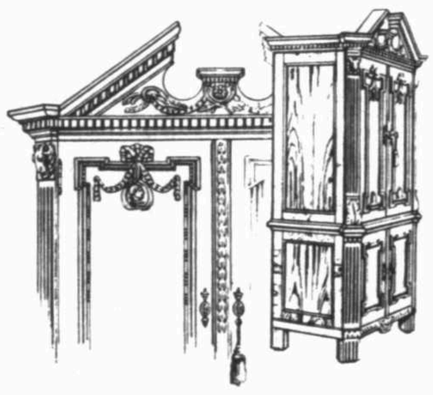

On Dec. 15, Reynolds and Major declared that the political parties in Northern Ireland should negotiate about the future of the British-ruled province, which has undergone 24 years of sectarian and political violence.

They said Sinn Fein, the political party that backs the IRA, could join talks if the IRA's campaign against British rule first stopped.

Agent testifies CIA knew about spy's wealth before FBI probe

By Michael J. Sniffen
Associated Press Writer

ALEXANDRIA, Va. — The CIA knew that Aldrich Ames paid $540,000 cash for his home and had foreign bank accounts years before the FBI began investigating him as a spy for Moscow, an FBI agent testified Thursday.

Plato Cacheris, defense attorney for Ames, a 31-year veteran CIA officer, extracted that information while cross-examining FBI Special Agent Leslie Wiser Jr. in federal court. He also got Wiser to admit the government does not know how much money is in the foreign accounts and has never seen any Russians give money to Ames or his wife.

But the government introduced part of a nine-page letter laced with spy jargon and seized from Ames' home that discussed the difficulties in putting money for the Ameses in the "CS" bank. Wiser concluded the instructions came from the Soviets in 1989 and referred to Ames' account at Credit Suisse bank in Switzerland.

Prosecutors persuaded Judge Claude Hilton to renew an order barring Ames and his wife, Rosario, from spending any of their assets in 11 foreign and domestic bank and brokerage accounts.

Hilton also agreed to order the couple to transfer up to $2,245,311 from foreign accounts to court custody here so it can be forfeited if they are convicted. That's the minimum prosecutors allege the couple made in nine years of spying; they put the maximum above $2.5 million.

But Assistant U.S. Attorney Mark Hulkower acknowledged "we don't anticipate all the property put together is ever going to come close to the $2.5 million they received from the Russians" because "the defendants have squandered tremendous amounts of money that will never be recovered."

Hilton denied defense requests to let the Ameses pay living expenses for their 5-year-old son, Paul, who is staying with relatives and friends because the couple has been denied bail.

Cacheris asked Wiser if the CIA had known when it conducted a background investigation of Ames in 1989 that he had paid cash for his Arlington, Va., home.

"Yes sir," Wiser responded, adding that he was not certain whether it was 1989 or 1991 but believed it was the earlier date. Wiser also said, however, a polygraph test was administered at the time. Government officials have said Ames was polygraphed in 1991.

Cacheris, suggesting Ames hadn't concealed his wealth, asked when the CIA knew Ames had foreign bank accounts.

"1990, 1991 or maybe 1992," Wiser replied.

Government officials have said the CIA began hunting for a Soviet agent in its ranks in 1985. The FBI was brought in to help in the early 1990s as the search narrowed, but Wiser testified earlier that the FBI investigation of Ames was not begun until May 12, 1993.

The date the CIA learned of Ames' wealth had not been disclosed before. But members of Congress have criticized the agency for not moving earlier against Ames because of his spending.

Wiser said Ames told CIA officials he paid for the house with an inheritance from his wife's family. But he said Mrs. Ames told the FBI in brief conversations after her arrest that that story was untrue.

She said "the money in general came from the Russians in return for spying," Wiser testified.

Mrs. Ames, in court with her husband, shook her head "no" at that point. She did the same when Wiser testified she told the FBI that she knew an auto trip with her husband was undertaken to check a Soviet signal site.

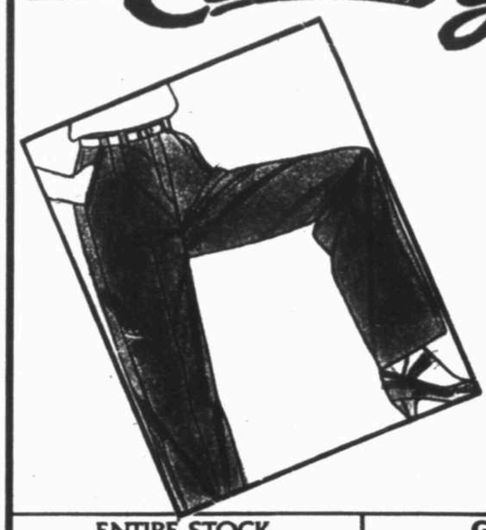

Dressed in jump suits with "Alexandria Jail" stenciled on the backs, Ames and his wife sat side by side in court, frequently whispering to each other and passing notes to their lawyers.

Wiser recounted the FBI's progress and problems in its continuing effort to learn more about the foreign bank accounts. He said agents now believe there is $28,000 in one Swiss account and $160,000 in another Swiss bank. He said there is $38,000 split equally between a brokerage account and a mutual fund account in this country.

Wiser described transfers of money over several years from the Ames' foreign accounts to their banks here and said Ames' mother-in-law, Cecilia Dupuy de Casas, has told the grand jury she never used a Swiss account in her name after giving Ames power of attorney.

Serial killer surrenders to police 20 years after disappearance

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — Long Island. Yonkers. San Francisco. Mexico City. Serial killer Ricardo Silvio Caputo left a trail of bodies across the continent and then disappeared for 20 years — an escape act that ended with his sudden surrender to police.

"I've been chasing him for 20 years," said San Francisco police Inspector Earl Sanders, echoing the thoughts of other frustrated investigators who finally have answers to their unresolved cases.

During his two decades of dodging arrest, Caputo, now 45, was dubbed "the most wanted man in America" by the television program "America's Most Wanted." He fled the coutry at least three times and once escaped from immigration agents who had detained him. He got married twice, fathered six children, and worked as an English teacher in Latin America.

But he was haunted by long-repressed memories of his crimes and decided to turn himself in, said his lawyer, Michael Kennedy, who described Caputo as a schizophrenic with psychotic personalities.

"I can at least face both the past and the future and pray for forgiveness," Caputo said in a statement released by his lawyer.

Caputo was in court Thursday on Long Island, where his murderous spree began in 1971 with the stabbing of his fiancee, Natalie Brown.

He has confessed to that killing, as well as the slayings of three other women whom he described as former lovers, including a psychologist who once treated him.

It began with the fatal stabbing of his fiancee in 1971. He was found mentally incompetent to stand trial, and spent two years at the Matawan State Hospital.

While there, he was treated by psychologist Judith Becker. Caputo said the two began an affair that flourished when he was transferred to a minimum security facility and started getting furloughs.

Becker's parents insist the relationship was platonic, and said Caputo would show up uninvited at their daughter's home.

Both sides agree on this: In October 1974, Caputo strangled Judith Becker and vanished.

He surfaced in San Francisco, where he and Barbara Ann Taylor became lovers. Her battered body was discovered in her apartment in 1975; Caputo admits killing her and fleeing to Mexico.

Report cites potential safety hazard in warheads

By Robert Burns
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON — Designers of the Navy's most powerful nuclear warhead knew before it was put aboard submarines four years ago it could undergo an accidental chain reaction in "abnormal situations," according to a classified federal weapons laboratory report.

The report did not describe possible consequences of such a reaction. Private weapons experts told The Associated Press it would cause radioactive contamination and possibly an explosion but not a bomb-like detonation.

Navy officials said Thursday the potential hazard was judged to be too slight to justify redesigning the warhead, which remains in the Navy's arsenal.

Lab officials told the Navy the warhead met all design requirements except under a combination of circumstances such as damage to the warhead and flooding of its components containing nuclear materials.

Navy spokesman Lt. Jim Fallin said the Navy is confident the weapon is safe.

"The W-88 warhead as used in today's Trident missiles was thoroughly evaluated for safety in all credible accident scenarios prior to its deployment. The system was approved for service and there are no outstanding safety issues," Fallin said in a statement prepared in response to an inquiry.

It is unclear how likely the "abnormal situations" are to arise. Private experts said it appeared highly unlikely but could not be dismissed.

"We are talking about minute levels of danger," said William Arkin, a leading private expert on nuclear weapons.

The technical basis for concern about this was described by Los Alamos National Laboratory and Sandia National Laboratories in a September 1988 final report on development of the warhead, designated the W-88. Los Alamos designed the warhead; Sandia developed its arming, fusing and firing assembly.

The report is classified "secret," as is much information about nuclear weapons design.

Portions of the report were provided to The AP and some other news organizations by Kathie Harine, who until last December was a nuclear physicist at Lockheed Missile and Space Co. The company worked with Sandia on the warhead and is the manufacturer of the Trident II missile that carries the W-88 warhead.

Ms. Harine was laid off at Lockheed last December as part of a cutback in the overall Trident program. She now is a consultant based in Sacramento, Calif.

Although the Trident missile system has been the subject of congressional hearings and was a central focus of a special report to Congress on nuclear weapons safety in December 1990, the existence of the potential hazard described in the September 1988 report had not been revealed publicly.

About 400 Trident II missiles with W-88 warheads are deployed aboard Trident submarines based at King's Bay, Ga. The warhead no longer is in production.

Ms. Harine said that when she first read the 1988 report she was alarmed at the safety risk it implied. She said she pointed it out to her superiors at Lockheed but was told not to pursue the matter or discuss it with others.

At Lockheed's headquarters at Sunnyvale, Calif., spokesman Eric DeRitis said there was no evidence Ms. Harine had voiced her concern to the proper company officials. If she had, DeRitis said, it would have been addressed.

Robert S. Norris, a nuclear weapons expert at the Natural Resources Defense Council, said the Navy during the Cold War was willing to accept some safety risks as a tradeoff for greater destructive power in its nuclear arsenal.

"It's a question of how much safety is enough," Norris said.

A basic rule of nuclear warhead design is that the enriched uranium and other nuclear fuels in it must remain "subcritical" at all times before a deliberate firing. That is, the material should be in a physical state that prevents them from undergoing a sustained chain reaction leading to a nuclear explosion.

The September 1988 report said all required design characteristics of the W-88 warhead had been met "with the exception of criticality under abnormal situations."

The authors of the report appeared to give credence to the situations it said could be a problem for the W-88: water flooding and physical damage.

Testing showed that the component of the warhead known as the "primary," which contains plutonium, would remain subcritical even if water penetrated it and reacted with the plutonium, the report said.

But if the other main warhead component — called the "secondary," or "thermonuclear capsule," and containing highly enriched uranium and lithium-6 deuteride — were penetrated by water and the lithium-6 deuteride were to leach out, a spontaneous nuclear chain reaction would occur, the report said.

The "secondary" component is protected from leaching by two seals. If both seals were broken — for example by mechanical damage or corrosion or by the high water pressures at depths traveled by the Trident submarines — then "the secondary will become a water boiling reactor," the report said.

More U.S. troops may go to Macedonia to replace Scandinavians

■ More national news/8B

WASHINGTON — The Clinton administration is preparing a plan to add several hundred U.S. troops to the 300-man force in the former Yugoslav republic of Macedonia, thereby freeing Scandinavian troops for duty in Bosnia, U.S. officials said Thursday.

The idea is to help respond to U.N. commanders' calls for more help in Bosnia while also maintaining President Clinton's policy of keeping American ground troops out of the embattled country until there is a solid peace agreement.

The troops would be drawn from Germany and replace Swedes, Norwegians, Finns and Danes who are in Macedonia.

In Stockholm, Anders Bjork confirmed Sweden was preparing a transfer of the Swedish U.N. battalion in Macedonia to Bosnia. "The U.S. secretary of defense called me Wednesday. I think we will be able to solve this task," Bjork was quoted as saying by the Swedish news agency IT.

At the Pentagon, spokeswoman Kathleen deLaski said "no deployment orders have gone out. . . . It's something that's under consideration."

She said there may be an announcement from other nations with troops in the Balkans.

In a terse statement, the State Department said, "We are reviewing the possibility."

Other administration officials provided more details and indicated the plan was further along then government press officers had said.

The aim is "to keep up the momentum of what we've done," an official said. Another said the United States was appealing to Greece to drop its trade embargo of Macedonia and thereby help ease tensions in the region.

U.N. commanders in Bosnia have called for more ground troops from around the world in order to maintain a shaky cease-fire and to help oversee delivery of food and medicine to civilian victims of a 23-month war.

Clinton has resisted, though he also has said U.S. troops could go to Bosnia in the event of a settlement to help monitor it.

The U.S. military role in Bosnia is restricted to delivering humanitarian aid to the country and helping to police a "no-fly" zone the United Nations imposed over the country two years ago to protect civilians.

Last week, U.S. planes shot down four aircraft believed to be Bosnian Serb ground-attack jets after they had begun to drop bombs on areas controlled by the Bosnian government.

France, which has thousands of peacekeeping troops in Bosnia, has questioned the U.S. reluctance to send in ground troops.

Defense Secretary William Perry addressed such questions in remarks prepared for delivery Thursday night in Washington, saying the situation in Bosnia "does not involve our supreme national interest . . . our national survival," but the United States does have a compelling national interest in preventing the war from spreading beyond Bosnia or the Balkans.

"Our actions need to be proportional to these interests," Perry said. He called the U.S. presence in Macedonia a "modest but significant action."

He rejected the idea that NATO and the United States could extend to other cities the air power threat that cleared artillery from around Sarajevo several weeks ago. "We do not want to make empty threats," he said.

"Extending these ultimatums to safe-area cities where the principal activity is infantry or guerrilla action in and around urban areas would not be enforceable with NATO air power" and could increase rather than decrease civilian casualties, he argued.

But the secretary reiterated Clinton's pledge to send ground troops into Bosnia once a peace agreement is reached, saying Washington is prepared, with congressional approval, "to send a substantial force to Bosnia under NATO command and control to implement peacekeeping operations."

Study shows smoking leads to drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) — Young people who smoke cigarettes are many times more likely than others to use drugs, says a study by a private organization that wants higher taxes on tobacco.

Former Health, Education and Welfare Secretary Joseph A. Califano Jr. presented a study on smoking and drugs to senators Thursday, and urged them to raise the 24-cent cigarette tax by $2 a pack. He said the increase would not only help pay for health reform but also curb smoking and, by extension, drug abuse.

"This tax is essential to put cigarettes beyond the means and lunch money of most elementary and high-school students," Califano told the Senate Finance Committee.

Califano, who now is president and chairman of Columbia University's Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse, cited statistics from the center's new study on teens, smoking and drugs.

According to the study — based on figures from the National Institute of Drug Abuse's National Household Survey on Drug Abuse — smokers between the ages of 12 and 17 are 23 times more likely to use marijuana and 12 times more likely to use heroin than those who have never smoked. They are 51 times more likely to use cocaine and 57 times more likely to use crack.

A 12-year-old who smokes is 30 times more likely to have used illicit drugs than a 12-year-old who doesn't smoke, according to the analysis.

The Coalition on Smoking OR Health, which includes the American Heart Association, the American Lung Association and the American Cancer Society, is also urging a $2-per-pack tax increase.

The Clinton health plan would raise the tax by 75 cents a pack.

Califano said a $2 tax would bring in $15 billion to $17 billion a year and cut the number of smokers by almost 8 million people.

Asked why cigarette smoking would have any connection to heroin use, Califano said, "What it says to me is that nicotine is a drug of entry, a major drug of entry.

"It starts you down the road."

The analysis is based on a survey of 33,000 people, he said.

Califano was HEW secretary under President Carter from 1977 to 1979 and President Johnson's top assistant for domestic affairs from 1965 to 1969.

In testimony before the panel, he urged the senators to phase in universal health coverage. "I would do this gradually. I'd cover everyone within five or six years — at least by the end of the '90s," he said.

He said requiring employers to pay a portion of their employees' health premiums is key, but added, "I think you do have to make accommodations for the small businesses."

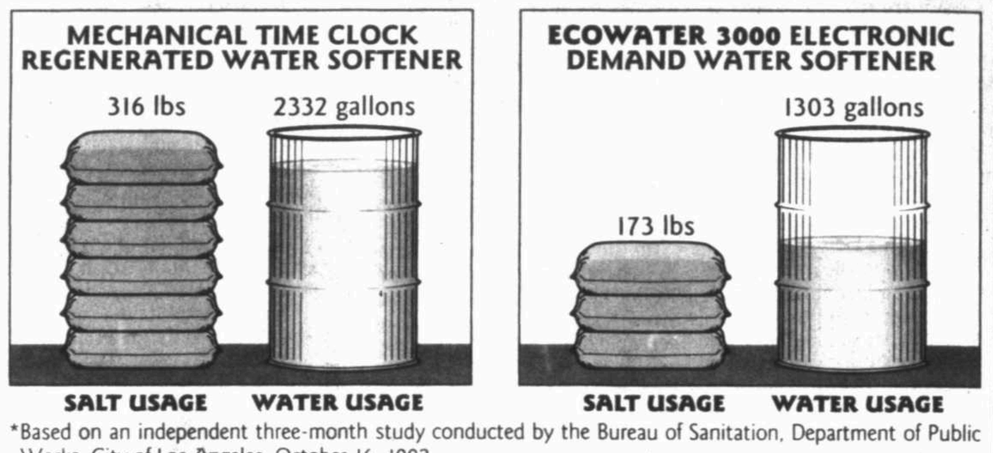

Califano said mandatory health alliances could quickly become politicized, and he did not think they would either increase efficiency or cut costs.

Hispanic chamber official pushes Texas for travel

By Tonie Miller-Uzzel
Staff Writer

Texas state tourism director Dianne Mendoza Freeman spoke in Midland Thursday advising the Midland Hispanic Chamber of Commerce to act regionally in promoting the area for travel.

Ms. Freeman — the keynote speaker at the chamber's general meeting luncheon — said part of her job as director of tourism for the Texas Department of Commerce is marketing Texas both domestically and internationally.

She touted statistics that show tourism is the third largest industry in the state with travel the second largest employer. She said tourism is responsible for 406,000 jobs in the state with 148,000 of those created since 1987.

The state's success in this field, Ms. Freeman said, can be a blueprint for what can be done on the local level. She said through partnerships and joint ventures, communities can successfully build coalitions to bring tourists to their areas.

In promoting tourism in Texas, Ms. Freeman likened it to a one-stop shopping mall. The state works to bring people here, then it is up to the individual communities to market their regions as tourist attractions.

She said the first basic principle to create a tourist destination is to develop a product or an export. She said travel products are the destinations.

Ms. Freeman suggests that regions create inventories as to what is available, what makes a region unique and what gives tourists a reason to visit.

Then the coalition needs to develop the travel market to figure out what people would visit and move the market to the product.

She said to understand the market the group needs to establish who would want to visit, why and when.

The motivation of the visitor needs to be evaluated

Q. When can the public visit a fire station?

A. The public can tour any of the Midland fire stations between 8 a.m. and 10 p.m. For large groups if helps if prior arrangements are made by phone. Fire stations are public buildings and have been used for election polling places and City Council town-hall meetings. On Saturday, the Central Fire Station at 1500 W. Wall is having an open house from 1 p.m. until 6 p.m. with tours and demonstrations of Fire Department equipment.

Questions about emergency medical services or firefighting should be sent to Lights & Siren, P.O. Box 1152, Midland, 79702-1152.

Students' support

FORT WORTH — Nearly 1,000 students in the nation's largest seminary gathered on the lawn of the fired president Thursday to show support for the man they say fell victim to Baptist politics. Russell Dilday thanked the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary pupils for their support, telling them he would likely have his job if he had bowed to demands to take a more fundamental stand./3B

Samaritan House

FORT WORTH — A 5-month-old, nationally celebrated residence for homeless people with AIDS has decided to suspend operations, saying it was unprepared to deal with its residents' medical and social problems. The surprise announcement that operations at Samaritan House would close in 60 days came Wednesday, the same day that a half dozen residents were arrested by police, who had been asked to do background checks on some of home's 15 residents./4B

Gun opinion

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards has not changed her mind "one iota" about her opposition to Texans being allowed to carry concealed handguns, a spokesman for Ms. Richards said Thursday. "Police chiefs have told her on several occasions, on many different occasions, every chance they've gotten, they do not want this kind of law on the books because it is dangerous to their patrolmen on the streets," said Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary./4B

Stolen cars

AUSTIN — An effort to reduce the movement of stolen vehicles across the border has been initiated by Texas and the Mexican state of Chihuahua. The Border Auto Theft Information Center in El Paso will officially open Tuesday. The information center will be funded by the Automobile Theft Prevention Authority and operated by the Texas Department of Public Safety. The center will identify stolen automobiles and access information from the Texas Crime Information Center and National Crime Information Center.

'Futbol' event to draw many soccer teams

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

A soccer tournament that will bring teams from around Texas and surrounding states as well as Mexico is being planned for early May, organizers said.

"We are expecting 88 teams. We are looking at 22 teams from Mexico," said Charlene Romero Wurtz, executive director of the Hispanic Chamber of Commerce.

"We've invited teams from New Mexico, Oklahoma, Texas and Arizona. A lot of them are interested in what teams are coming in from Mexico," she said.

Organizers should know by the March 15 application deadline how many teams will be playing, she said.

The Cinco de Mayo Futbol Festival, sponsored by the Hispanic chamber, Soccer Etc., and the Midland Soccer Association, will be May 6-8.

"We expect 5,000 to 6,000 people coming into Midland" for the event, Ms. Wurtz said.

Chuck Swallow, assistant director of community services for the city, said he anticipates the event to have a notable impact on tourism and international relations.

The soccer tournament was initiated by Steve Parnell, area manager for Soccer Etc.

"It's an idea I've had for several years. The teams I've been involved with have played internationally in Mexico and Europe," he said. "I've always wanted to have those people come to Midland and show their style of play."

That aspiration became a reality when Parnell hooked up with the Hispanic chamber.

'We expect 5,000 to 6,000 people coming into Midland (for the event)."

—Charlene Romero Wurtz
executive director
Hispanic chamber

"When he found out about the international department we have here, that's when he came to us for help," Ms. Wurtz said.

Fernando De La Rosa, who heads the international department of the Hispanic chamber, has been in contact with the National Mexican Federation of Futbol about the tournament.

Five teams from Juarez, two from the city of Chihuahua, one from the state of Sinola and one from Mexico City are expected to attend.

"We hope we can get the 22 teams, at least 14 or 15," De La Rosa said. "They are very excited," he said.

The biggest restraint is the budget of the Mexican teams, he said. As a result, organizers may extend the deadline for confirmation.

Nevertheless, organizers anticipate the tournament going as planned.

During the tournament, on the evening of May 7, there will be an exhibition game at Midland Memorial Stadium between the reserve team of Las Cobras, a professional team from Juarez and a not yet confirmed team from Texas.

In Midland, there are about 1,900 youngsters, 4-19 years old, who play the game, in addition to several hundred adult players, Parnell said. And outside the mainstream leagues, several area Hispanic men's teams play every weekend, he said.

'Safe rooms' can give owners security, peace of mind

By Leigh Hopper
Houston Chronicle

HOUSTON — Call it a bomb shelter for the '90s: a kickproof, fireproof, bulletproof vault equipped with a phone line, a fire extinguisher and a high-power air vent.

Hear someone creeping in through a window? Machine gun fire riddling your front door? Slam yourself inside a "safe room" and dial 911.

The latest development in home security, the "safe room" is typically a converted closet in the master bedroom, reinforced as much as your pocketbook will allow. It's being touted as a defense against home invasion, an alternative to the kill-or-be-killed strategy.

Don Ragland and Charles Marchi, whose Iron Clad Security company is advertising safe rooms in Houston, say these personal vaults are already commonplace in California among the rich and powerful. Cher has one, and a recent L.A. Law plot revolved around a safe room.

The idea of the safe room is nothing new, but apparently it is an idea whose time has come.

Gary Reynolds, whose company H.G. Reynolds Security Inc. has been in Houston since 1928, says a lock hardware company distributed plans in the 1970s for a "security closet" that could deter a burglar. The idea didn't catch on, really — although Reynolds does routinely install deadbolt locks on bedroom doors.

An Iron Clad Security safe room, installed in a 4-by-8 foot closet, will cost Ragland, a former health club manager, and Marchi, who is retired from law enforcement in New York, have received numerous inquiries and are preparing to build their first safe room for a Houston woman.

To construct the safe room, wall studs are reinforced and bolted together. A metal door and door frame are installed, with a deadbolt that locks from the inside. Magnetic locks that withstand 600 pounds of pressure also are available.

The safe room has a vent to the outside and a hidden phone line, so the person can call 911 "and be safe in there until the police come," Ragland said.

Central Fire Station to have open house, tour Saturday

By Katherine Poteet
Staff Writer

Midland residents will get a chance to learn more about their fire department through an open house that will be conducted Saturday from 1-6 p.m. at the Central Fire Station, 1500 W. Wall St.

Residents may tour the station and the Fire Museum and can observe demonstrations of different aspects of the Fire Department.

The demonstrations include snorkel fire truck, 1:30 p.m.; rescue unit, including protective equipment and air packs, 2:30 p.m.; air bags, which are used to lift cars off of victims, 3:30 p.m.; jaws of life, 4:30 p.m.; and ambulance and EMS, 5:30 p.m.

"This is our first open house," said Eddie Klatt, assistant chief

Lions Club strives to make Pancake Jamboree No. 1

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil Editor

The Midland Downtown Lions Club claims its Pancake Jamboree is the second largest pancake jamboree in Texas. But it would like to be No.1, and is taking on a Texas-pride flare to make it happen.

"The Pancake Jamboree is an extension of our Celebration of Texas pride, which was held on Texas Independence Day, March 2," said Aubrey Linne, club president. "We had 300 out to celebrate Texas pride, and we hope it will carry over to the jamboree."

Linne said that by putting a Texas-pride twist to the jamboree, the Lions are hoping to turn

Teen athlete shot in girl's room may never play again

By Patti Muck
Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — The bullet that tore into star high school basketball player Jason Williams probably ended his athletic career.

But Williams' family does not want charges pressed against the man who shot the athlete after finding him naked in the man's 14-year-old daughter's bedroom about 4 a.m. Sunday, according to the Williams' attorney, Sam Adamo of Houston.

"All they're concerned about is Jason recovering," Adamo said Wednesday. "They don't care if he never plays basketball again. They are not the least bit interested in making a criminal complaint against (the father). They feel terrible for him and what he's going through."

Police confirmed that it appears that Williams, 17, did not know the girl's age and had only met her when he accompanied a teammate — who was visiting her older sister — to the house, entering through a window after celebrating a regional championship victory.

The Willowridge High School teammate dived out the bedroom window just down the hall when he heard shots fired, police said. The father had apparently grabbed his gun when he was awakened.

Officials said it will be at least two weeks before the case will be brought before a Fort Bend County grand jury, which will decide what, if any, charges are filed,

"It's something to be concerned about, but I think when the grand jury hears all the facts about this situation, that Jason and (the father) will not be facing any criminal charges out of this," Adamo said.

The father has been hospitalized since the shooting with problems related to high blood pressure.

Williams, a senior guard who helped lead his team to the state championships over the weekend, remains hospitalized in intensive care.

TOURISM: Chamber pushes Texas travel with the help of research. Ms. Freeman said this is where her office can help as a souce of information.

She told the Hispanic chamber to consider tourism an export, to understand their market, to understand the fundamental ingredients, to develop it and plan.

Once the market and product is established, the partnership needs to set a target and put some money behind it, Ms. Freeman said.

In this effort, it is more economical for cities, communities and counties to unite as a joint venture to offset the costs.

"Regional cooperation in developing a strategy creates a cohesive approach ... and it doesn't cost any community as much," Ms. Freeman said.

She gave the example of eight Texas communities and a Mexican community of joining resources in putting on the Miss Texas Pageant in South Texas. She said in return, the area received national exposure and an enormous return on their investment.

"These coalitions work," Ms. Freeman said. "Everyone shares in the results."

Ms. Freeman said her job of promoting Texas is easy because Texas sells itself. She said the bottom line is that what she does is create jobs.

"Once we get people to be here, it's easy to sell them on living here and setting up their businesses here," Ms. Freeman said.

Ms. Freeman also noted since the North American Free Trade Act went into effect, Texas will have some tremendous opportunities to expand the market. She said several Texas-Mexico coalitions have been set up and will meet this spring.

She said the Hispanic chamber can really push the area to Spanish-speaking tourists by recognizing the cultural ties with these countries. She added that the "sensitivity" the Hispanic chamber can show gives them a competitive edge over other communities by building a trust relationship.

She likened the relationship between Texas and Mexico like a good marriage based on trust.

Ms. Freeman closed by telling chamber members the state office can serve as a model and offer help, but "we can't do it for you — but we can empower you."

SECOND: Club hopes to make event No. 1

the Midland Pancake Jamboree into a regional affair and exceed the Lubbock Pancake Jamboree, which serves 16,000 each year.

Linne said Lubbock's event, which draws heavily from outlying towns, is held in the Texas Tech gym and requires the assistance of Tech fraternities.

The Downtown Lions Club hopes to break a club record by serving 10,000 hungry pancake eaters at its 38th Pancake Jamboree set for March 19 at Chaparral Center.

Tickets for the all-you-can-eat affair are $3 or $5 for sit-down service. Doors will open at 7 a.m. and close at 7 p.m.

Linne said the goal was to first break the 10,000 barrier; then the goal was to be a contender to the Lubbock affair.

Last year — the club's second year at Chap Center — 8,750 people went through the serving line. The most that have ever been served in almost 40 years of flipping pancakes was 9,616 in 1984.

Linne said all the elements are in place that should allow the club to set a new record.

"We have the space at Chap Center, the know-how and the help."

Linne said that overall, about 1,000 volunteers are needed each year.

If the Lions are successful in breaking the 10,000 mark, Linne said it will take more than a ton of sausage, 1,400 pounds of pancake batter, 5,000 cartons of milk, 5,000 cartons of orange drink, along with 300 pounds of butter and 750 quarts of syrup.

In the 37 years of the Downtown Lions Pancake Jamboree, it has raised just under $1 million for needy causes. All the proceeds from the jamboree are designated for charitable programs in the community and state.

Locally, the Downtown Lions Club supports numerous causes including programs to provide hearing and vision checks. The Downtown Lions operate one of five Lions regional eyeglass-gathering centers and each month distribute more than 2,000 eyeglasses to needy individuals around the world.

of operations. "We wanted to be better in tune with the public. I think we have a pretty good reputation with the community, but we wanted to get better acquainted with them and educate them as to what goes on at the department."

In addition to the demonstrations and tours, parents can receive an identification kit for their children. Pictures will be taken of the children at the open house and their fingerprints will be recorded for the kit, which includes a booklet in which to record other important information about the child.

Free refreshments will be served and radio station KGEE-100 will do a live broadcast.

The Central Fire Station opened in 1980. The Fire Museum was dedicated in 1985 by the Downtown Lions Club and includes two of the department's first fire trucks. In addition, old photos, equipment and other memorabilia are housed at the museum.

Students rally in support of seminary's ex-president

FORT WORTH (AP) — Nearly 1,000 students in the nation's largest seminary gathered on the lawn of the fired president Thursday to show support for the man they say fell victim to Baptist politics.

Russell Dilday thanked the Southwestern Baptist Theological Seminary pupils for their support, telling them he would likely have his job if he had bowed to demands to take a more fundamental stand.

He went on to say that is "all right to have a kind of indignation about it. But we want to balance that with our Christian grace and understanding."

Meantime, a committee was put in place by school trustees to begin a national search for Dilday's replacement.

Dilday was fired abruptly and without specific reason on Wednesday, the latest casualty in the ongoing battle between moderates and conservatives of the Southern Baptist Convention, which owns the seminary.

The school's board members voted 4-to-1 to dismiss him after he refused to take early retirement. Dilday had been president of the 4,000-student seminary, the largest in the nation, since August 1978.

"We felt like the institution needed new direction to move us into the 21st century," said Ralph Pulley, chairman of the Board of Trustees. "We have no criticism that we desire to make of Dr. Dilday."

But some students said they had chosen the school for its diversity.

"One of the reasons I came to Southwestern from Kentucky was this is one of the few places that is not conservative," seminary student Jamie Davis, 28, told the Fort Worth Star-Telegram on Wednesday. Her Winchester, Ky., home is a 30-minute drive from Southern Baptist Theological Seminary in Louisville, which is aligned with the church's conservative wing.

"I didn't want to be in the controversy. We have diversity. We have right wing, left wing and people in the middle."

Her friend Sharon Bush, 25, of Arlington, added: "This is one of the places that has not been touched politically."

"Until today," Davis said.

The board's actions "will likely impact and diminish the quality of theological education in the Southwest," said Cecil Sherman, coordinator of the moderate Cooperative Baptist Fellowship in Atlanta and a longtime friend of Dilday's.

But T. Bob Davis, secretary of the trustees, said the firing "represents some years of frustration and gridlock with the existing administrator."

"They felt like a breath of fresh air was needed," Davis said. "As far as Russell, they love him but working with him became gridlock."

Dilday, 63, blamed his dismissal on his refusal to sides in the dispute between the conservative and moderate factions of the Southern Baptist Convention.

During Dilday's presidency, fundamentalists took control of the 15.4 million-member Southern Baptist Convention.

In the early years of the conservative-moderate conflict, Dilday spoke out strongly against political methods that fundamentalist conservatives used to take control of the denomination.

He later urged all Baptists to end their political disputes and described himself as a "theological conservative."

Dilday was the sixth president of the 86-year-old school, which is the largest of the nation's six official Baptist seminaries.

Students, faculty members and Baptist leaders across the state were quick to criticize Dilday's dismissal.

Jackpot hits $55 million

AUSTIN (AP) — Nobody won the $35 million Lotto Texas jackpot Wednesday night, so officials said Thursday that the next prize should be a record $55 million.

"This is uncharted territory for us," said Nora Linares, the lottery's executive director.

Twice before — on May 1 and July 7, 1993 — the lotto jackpot has reached $50 million.

Ms. Linares said that based on sales for the $35 million game and on interest in the $41.4 million payoff two weeks ago, "We believe our sales will support this record estimate."

Despite its record proportions, the Texas jackpot still isn't among the nation's 10 highest.

California holds the record with a $118.8 million pot on April 17, 1991, that was divided among 10 winners. The 10th highest jackpot also was offered in California, $68.8 million, lottery officials said.

If only one ticket correctly matches all six numbers Saturday night, the winner would receive about $2.75 million a year for 20 years, said lottery spokesman Steve Levine.

But that's not the trend.

Each time the Texas jackpot hit $50 million in the past, there were multiple winners.

Fourteen people claimed shares of the May 1 pot, and three split the $50 million July 7 prize.

Levine said that lottery officials expect record sales in advance of Saturday's drawing.

The primary elections dominated the news earlier this week, he said. "But I think now we're probably going to be topping the public excitement meter. We expect to set all sorts of records. We don't know exactly where we're going to go.

Transsexual leads in race for office

HOUSTON (AP) — A transsexual convicted of murder leads in the race for Harris County's Democratic Party chair, forcing a runoff election.

An unofficial tally by the Harris County elections office shows Leslie Perez with a 5 percent margin over her closest contender, David Minceberg. Ms. Perez captured 25.81 percent of the vote to Minceberg's 20.83 percent of ballots cast on Tuesday.

Ms. Perez, 56, under the name Leslie Douglas Asley, was convicted of the 1961 murder of a local businessman and later underwent a sex-change operation. The death sentenced was overturned and in a second trial she received a 15-year sentence. Ms. Perez was paroled in 1971.

Ms. Perez forced Ken Bentsen Jr. into a runoff four years ago for party chair. Bentsen won in the second voting, but he recently stepped down to run for Congress.

Shelter for homeless AIDS patients to close

FORT WORTH (AP) — A 5-month-old, nationally celebrated residence for homeless people with AIDS has decided to suspend operations, saying it was unprepared to deal with its residents' medical and social problems.

The surprise announcement that operations at Samaritan House would close in 60 days came Wednesday, the same day that a half dozen residents were arrested by police, who had been asked to do background checks on some of home's 15 residents.

Executive Director Carol Hendrix said she asked for police assistance after a bit of unrest at the 32-unit home. She said the home would close for reassessment.

"We didn't anticipate things like physical outbursts by people," Hendrix said. She said she hopes to reopen the home within two months after it is shuttered.

Samaritan House opened in October, offering homeless people with AIDS their own apartments. At the time, a top official with the National Community AIDS Partnership called it a "model to be copied." It was financed through a combination of private and governmental loans and grants and relies heavily on donated time and goods.

Don Maison, director of AIDS Services of Dallas, which has provided housing and services for AIDS patients for seven years, said Samaritan House officials were naive.

"For four years they've been coming to us and we've been telling them exactly what we experienced," he said. "You've got to have support. You can't put a roof over these people's heads and expect this type of thing to function.

"It's a real tragedy."

Residents got the distressing news in a letter.

"They saved my life," said Ervin Jones. "Now they're trying to kill me."

Spokesman: Richards has not changed mind about handguns

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Gov. Ann Richards has not changed her mind "one iota" about her opposition to Texans being allowed to carry concealed handguns, a spokesman for Ms. Richards said Thursday.

"Police chiefs have told her on several occasions, on many different occasions, every chance they've gotten, they do not want this kind of law on the books because it is dangerous to their patrolmen on the streets," said Bill Cryer, the governor's press secretary.

Police and sheriff organizations "have rallied behind the governor" on the issue, Cryer said.

Republicans, voting in their primary Tuesday, approved a nonbinding referendum that called for a statewide vote on whether Texans should be allowed to carry concealed weapons. Republicans voted 355,335 in favor of the referendum to 91,751 against, or 79 to 21 percent.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, who sponsored legislation on the issue in 1993, said he would introduce a measure again when the Legislature convenes in Janaury 1995.

"I intend to keep reintroducing it until it passes," Wilson said.

He said he will work on a bill with Rep. Bill Carter, R-Fort Worth, as he did in 1993, but won't know what form it will take "until we get into the session."

Wilson introduced a bill last year that would have allowed qualified residents to carry a weapon, but after Ms. Richards threatened to veto the bill, he substituted a measure calling for a statewide non-binding referendum on the issue.

Lawmakers approved the referendum bill, but Ms. Richards vetoed it.

"It was a divisive and bitterly found piece of legislation that took up a lot of time in the Legislature when we were struggling with school finance and a lot of other issues," Cryer said.

Wilson said the vote in the Republican primary would help.

"Republicans are people, too," he said.

Responding to the governor's position, based on opposition from police officers, Wilson said, "That's her opinion, and she's entitled to it."

Board looks at adult literacy

AUSTIN (AP) — Parents with poor literacy skills may pass down that sad legacy to their children, who aren't read to or helped with homework, education officials said Thursday in reviewing a Texas survey on the problem.

State Board of Education members said they hoped to conduct a further study and make legislative recommendations to help with adult literacy.

The survey — which was released last fall but analyzed in more detail before Thursday's board presentation — found that reading and writing skills of more than one-quarter of Texas' 12.7 million adults were at the lowest measured level.

The best those at that level could do was perform basic tasks, such as totaling a deposit slip or finding a single piece of information in a short story. Some couldn't do that much.

Of the people in that lowest group on reading skills, 52 percent said they had not been helped with school work or been read to by parents or guardians. In the more skilled categories, more people had had such help.

"It's kind of a self-fulfilling prophecy," said board Chairwoman Carolyn Crawford of Beaumont. "If the parent is not literate, then they can't help you with you homework. They can't read to you, and the likelihood is that you are more prone to remain in the lowest level of literacy.

"How do we break out of that cycle? — That's of course the great challenge of education," Ms. Crawford said.

Board member Mary Knotts Perkins of Lufkin added, "We can't ignore this.

"Are we teaching children the importance of reading and being literate when parents can't even read, and they're not literate, and they're having a difficult time functioning?" she asked. "You have whole generations out there. It's an issue across the state of Texas."

Cloudy vision doesn't dim teen's world

By Charlotte Huff

CORPUS CHRISTI, Texas (AP) — Some people didn't understand why Natalie Johnson tied a white ribbon around the tail of her 248-pound hog during the Nueces County Junior Livestock Show in last month.

"The girl next to us said, 'Oh, you're trying to suck up to the judge,' " said her father, Marvin.

But the ribbon was Natalie's way of recognizing her pig, Rusty, when dozens of other Durocs crowded together in the pen prior to showing.

The 18-year-old, who has an affinity for agriculture and a growing interest in special education, has made numerous small changes in her life because of her deteriorating vision.

A condition she was diagnosed with as a youngster, called juvenile macular degeneration, is slowly clouding her view of the world — but not of life. Although the vision in her right eye remains relatively good, she is legally blind in her left eye.

But few would notice that the Calallen senior has a vision problem, Natalie's friends and family say. In addition to taking a full load of classes, Natalie works with special education students, goes country dancing regularly, and shot her first buck late last year on a hunting trip with her boyfriend, Richard Hopkins.

"Because she doesn't act like she has a vision problem — she doesn't walk into walls — there are some people out there who think she's a snob when she can't see them," Marvin Johnson said.

When Natalie walks down the halls at Calallen High School each morning, shapes and clothing help her identify people.

"It's hard to see people from a distance," she said. "My friends will lean over in the hall and say, 'That's so-and-so.' ... I identify everyone by their shape. I notice what everyone's wearing at the beginning of the day." Because of the macular degeneration, Natalie is increasingly dependent upon her peripheral vision, said Lynda Benton, a teacher of the visually impaired for the Calallen Independent School District.

"If you were to put on glasses and rub petroleum jelly all over the middle of them and leave the edges clear, that's what it would be like," said Benton, who works with Natalie. Natalie, along with several of her close friends, is the first to say that living with the disease has not been easy. She had to forgo getting a driver's license and must limit her reading time to no more than five minutes.

BUT SHE HAS persevered.

"A lot of people say, 'You can get into a special program,' " said Barbie McCain, a close friend. "And she says, 'I went to high school with you and I want to graduate with you.' "

McCain, a Calallen senior, won the talent portion of the queen's contest at the junior livestock show for her speech about Natalie as an example of an "everyday hero."

McCain, who had planned to write about the importance of agriculture, said she quickly got sidetracked.

"I was reading in the newspaper and it was talking about how people are looking up to these superstars and big football players," McCain said.

"But the people who get you through life are the ones you see every day. I thought she needed to hear that people look up to her."

Natalie, tentatively diagnosed with the condition in early childhood, said she went through most of her teen-age years without any apparent changes in vision, playing tennis and looking forward to getting her driver's license. Then, in her freshman year, she approached her mother about her vision problems.

Natalie Johnson, 18, a senior at Calallen High School, suffers from juvenile macular degeneration, a condition that will slowly continue to cloud her vision. She depends on her peripheral vision as her condition worsens.

"We went all of these years until her freshman year, and then she started saying to us, 'I don't think I'm seeing as well,' " said her mother, Patsy.

Juvenile macular degeneration occurs when breaks in the retina — the area of the eye responsible for central vision and color perception — begin to occur and vision becomes distorted. As the vision deteriorates, the person loses finer detail, an ability necessary to read or to drive.

The condition usually effects people age 60 and older, said Sandra Fox, a local optometrist. Juvenile macular degeneration is much rarer, she said. "We kind of like to tell people that it's a thinning of the retina, almost like it deteriorates," Fox said. "The good news is the peripheral retina is not affected, so you will never go completely blind. You will have a black center in your eye, but you can see around it."

NATALIE SAID she has learned to read by threading words together. "What I've learned to do is I see a word and I take the first half of it and the second half of it and I pretty much guess what it is," she said.

Since Natalie cannot read long without getting a headache and cannot see the blackboard even when sitting in the first row, her friends and teachers make accommodations. Friends sitting nearby take notes for her, tests are sometimes read aloud and Natalie is using more books on audiotape.

Most of the teachers have helped, but some get frustrated, Natalie said.

"They have to take out more time for you," she said. "If they write something on the board, questions for the test, they have to write them on the piece of paper for me," she said. Natalie, who regularly is listed on the A-B honor roll, also has taken a different route to researching her senior papers, Benton said.

She has done most of her research by listening to books on tape, sometimes a frustrating limitation. "She's such an overachiever and she wants to give 200 percent and she feels a little stifled

Expressing feelings i n written word often be neficial

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR READERS: Last week FRUSTRATED wrote concerning her husband who would not listen to her. The closing paragraph of her letter was, "I've talked to my mother about all of this and she just says that I should 'count my blessings' and go on. She says that men are just like this and that it doesn't have anything to do with his not loving me enough. I just can't accept that. We have friends whose husbands don't treat them like this. Do their husbands just love them more or what? I'm confused and getting angry. Please give me some help before spring break or I might explode."

May

As promised in my response, I want to discuss another communications technique that she and you might find beneficial — writing down your feelings. Instead of telling your spouse how you feel, write him or her a letter. Express exactly how you feel in the letter. Not only does this release the negative feelings — giving them a voice — it also can give you an awareness of your own — perhaps unknown — feelings. You may or may not choose to share the letter with your partner. Should you choose to share a letter with your spouse, you may wish to use the "Love Letter Technique."

In his book, "Men Are From Mars, Women Are From Venus," Dr. John Gray suggests three essential parts to the Love Letter Technique:

■ Write a Love Letter expressing your feelings of anger, sadness, fear, regret and love.

■ Write a Response Letter expressing what you want to hear from your partner.

■ Share your Love Letter and Response Letter with your partner.

Dr. Gray offers the following guidelines for writing a basic Love Letter:

■ Address the letter to your partner. Pretend that he or she is listening to you with love and understanding.

■ Start with anger, then sadness, then fear, then regret and then love. Include all five sections in each letter.

■ Write a few sentences about each feeling; keep each section approximately the same length. Speak in simple terms.

■ After each section, pause and notice the next feeling coming up. Write about that feeling.

■ Do not stop your letter until you get to the love. Be patient and wait for the love to come out.

■ Sign your name at the end. Take a few moments to think about what you need or want. Write it in a P.S.

The P.S. becomes the Response Letter in the form of "P.S. The response I would like to hear is..." In that short letter, maybe just one paragraph, write what you want your partner to say to you in response to your Love Letter. This process of directly expressing your wants and needs can be very healing.

I believe that it can be very beneficial to share your Love Letter with your spouse. This can be done in several ways:

■ Read the Love Letter and Response Letter to him or her out loud while he or she is listening.

■ He or she reads your Love Letter and Response Letter out loud while you are present.

■ First he or she reads your Response Letter out loud to you. Then he or she reads your Love Letter out loud to you. This gives him or her the desired response before he or she hears your negative feelings.

■ First read your Response Letter to him or her and then read your Love Letter to him or her out loud.

■ Give the letter to him or her and he or she reads them privately within 24 hours.

Ideally, regardless of which delivery technique works for you and your spouse, the intent is that he or she would be able to give you a loving response. I generally start couples with either of the "reading out loud" options. Discuss this approach with your partner before springing it on him. Dr. Gray gives additional advice and specific examples in his book. I encourage you to consider this communications technique as a viable mechanism to improve your relationship.

THE FOLLOWING "NOTES FROM YOUR CHILD" ARE OFFERED BY THE CENTERS FOR CHILDREN AND FAMILIES:

■ Don't spoil me. I know quite well that I shouldn't have all that I ask for, but I'm just testing you.

■ Don't be afraid to be firm with me; I prefer it. It makes me feel more secure.

■ Don't ignore my bad habits. They are danger signs that you and I have problems, and remember, force will not stop them.

■ Don't do for me what I can do for myself. It makes me feel smaller than I am.

Seniors 'deserve a break today'

By John Curran

BROOKLINE, Mass. (AP) — What you want isn't always what you get at one fast food restaurant.

Older patrons at a restaurant in this Boston suburb say they've been harassed for being too slow with their fast food.

The manager of a McDonald's, exasperated with lingering diners, even imposed a 20-minute limit on how long they could remain seated after finishing their meals.

After six months and many howls of protest from older customers, that policy was abandoned.

The situation points to a larger problem, experts say. Senior citizens who have time on their hands don't always have someplace to spend it.

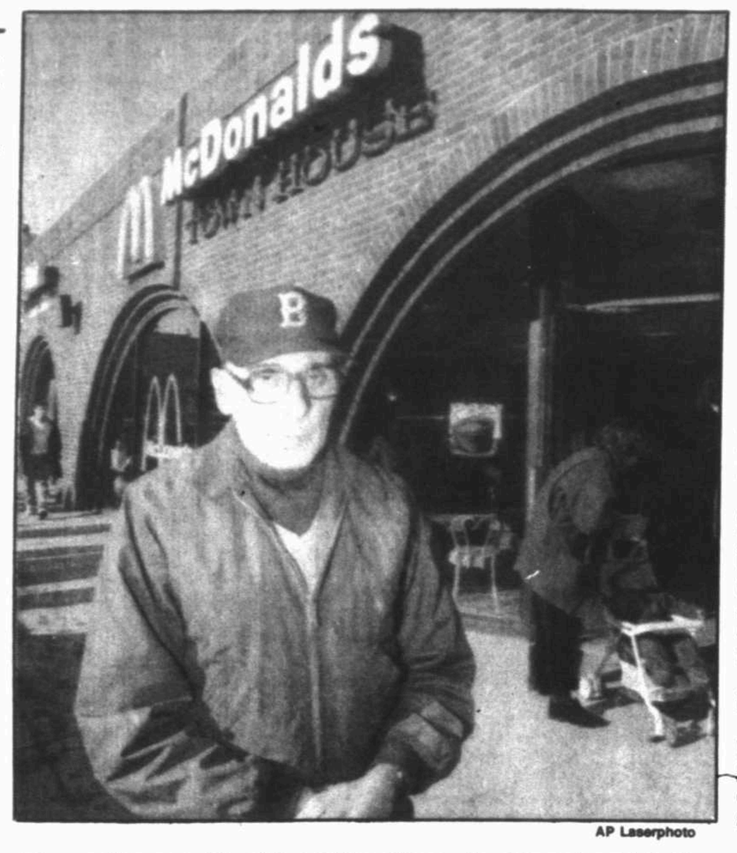

THE TOWN, which is home to about 55,000 people, has about 10,000 residents over the age of 60, said Ruthann Dobek, staff coordinator for the Brookline Council on Aging.

But there is no center for older people. And the bustling Coolidge Corner intersection where the one-story restaurant is located doesn't have as many coffee shops as it once did, according to Michael Merrill, chairman of the Board of Selectmen.

"We all need places to go," said gerontologist Eric Kingson of Boston College. "There's a certain irony here. Usually, we think of young people loitering. Here we have a group of older people making use of the time-honored tradition of sitting around and having a chat in a pleasant place to be."

The golden years mean nothing under these golden arches, some older residents say.

The time limit was ended in December, said owner Allan Bowermaster. Signs came down, but manager Bob Wilson continues to give some people the bum's rush, several said.

AP Laserphoto

Thomas Vocase, 66, of Brookline, Mass., is pictured outside the Townhouse McDonald's in Brookline. He and other senior citizens claim they have been harrassed at the restaurant for taking too long to eat their fast food.

"When you come in, he says, 'Buy something or get out,'" said David Godes, 62. "He won't bother young people. They make noise, rip the place apart, but he says nothing," said Godes.

Some believe the 55-seat restaurant discourages older people from lingering because they are able to buy food and beverages at reduced rates. Coffee costs only 25 cents for seniors.

In any case, the treatment is hard to swallow, they said.

WILSON WOULD not answer questions. He referred a reporter to Bowermaster, who denied that customers were being harassed.

"When we found out it (time limit) wasn't working, we stopped it," said Bowermaster.

"Our goal in the business is to provide a good experience to all customers. In the past, we thought we had to limit the length of the visit, but we learned some people objected to the idea," said Bowermaster.

Bowermaster said he met with several older customers, who made the point that they had nowhere else to congregate.

"It's obvious why they want to be there. There's activity, people talk politics and current events, and there's an energy level people want. That's what keeps people young, talking with other people and having that interaction," said Dobek.

Jane Hulbert, a spokeswoman for McDonald's Corp. at its Oak Brook, Ill., headquarters, said she knew of no McDonald's that put a time limit on customers. And she said the company strives to include senior citizens, both as customers and employees.

"Senior citizens at McDonald's is part of our culture," she said.

McDonald's restaurants sponsor bingo games, mall-walking groups, shuffleboard contests and other programs for older people, she said.

"We've always had older people working with us. We've always reached out to the senior community. They are wonderful customers and wonderful employees," she said.

To Dobek and others, it's a sociological issue.

"We all have needs for public places for private conversations and socializing," said Kingson.

Kingson said longer life expectancy can have a down side.

"The current cohort of older people are probably the first group that has this gift of extra years. It raises questions about leisure.

Health care system poses a tangled web

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

O what a tangled web we weave when first we practice to conceive the construction of a new universal health care system for all Americans. Break one delicate thread and we (doctors, patients, tax payers, etc.) all become entrapped — tied and bound like Gargantua by a mysterious new burgeoning bureaucracy. "As flies to wanton boys, so are we to the gods." (Shakespeare).

Page

It wasn't until the 19th century that the medical profession attempted to organize, so as to elevate educational standards and combat wide-spread quackery by means of the British Medical Association in 1832; AMA in 1847; French MA in 1858; and German in 1872.

Training for nurses was inaugurated in 1836 by a German clergyman and subsequently developed by Florence Nightengale and Clara Barton. The initial public health state plan in the U.S. was developed in 1850. At the turn of this century hospitals changed from just a place to die into the center of care. In good part to all of this, life expectancy has nearly doubled since 1850 from 40 years to almost 80!

The advance in the practice of medicine and its delivery developed under the aegis of dedicated, broad-horizoned physicians exemplified by the Baltimore group surrounding Sir William Osler. The guiding star for all their endeavors was the quality of care. It can now be accepted without equivocation that the U.S. now outranks the entire world in this area. It seems that state control in other countries inevitably results in a generalized lowering of standards.

Here in Midland under the leadership of William McGavran M.D. and his County Medical Committee, the problem has been well thought through and expressed as follows:

"1. Reform health care insurance so that employees can continue their health care coverage after they leave their jobs or divorce from the insured, by making payments directly to the insurance company for an indefinite period of time.

2. Eliminate pre-existing condition restrictions on health insurance plans, so that individuals can remain insured even if they change jobs.

3. Create a small-business pool so small businesses can afford to purchase health coverage.

4. Create a catastrophic health care plan to insure coverage for those individuals afflicted with a catastrophic condition.

5. Simplify health care paperwork with standard claim forms and data sets which will cut health care administrative costs.

6. Reform medical liability laws to reduce the upward spiraling costs of defensive medicine."

Your columnist agrees with their positive thoughts and likewise is alarmed at suggestions of coercive socialism. While the donkey rages like a bull through the china shop, let's not kill the goose that lays the golden egg!

DEAR ABBY

Mother-in-law's fiscal fist knocks out couple's budget

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: After giving birth to twins, I decided to quit my job and stay home to take care of our babies. My husband and I are on a rather tight budget, and we needed two very expensive appliances because the ones we had broke down and it would cost too much to repair them.

Van Buren

My mother-in-law said, "Go ahead and buy them; I will help you with the payments."

Well, I took her at her word and signed for the appliances. Meanwhile, six months have passed, and not a word from my mother-in-law about her promise. When she was over at our house, I said, "Mom, how do you like the two new appliances?"

She said, "Oh, you showed them to me last time I was here; they are very nice." Then she changed the subject.

Abby, this is not the first time she has offered to help with payments. Three years ago, we went shopping for wall-to-wall carpet, and she promised us she would help with the payments, and that was the last we heard about it.

I am really upset about her broken promises. What should I do? — DOUBLE DISAPPOINTMENT

DEAR DOUBLE: Once burned, shame on her; twice burned, shame on you. Talk is cheap — and so is she. Don't take her promises seriously and you won't be disappointed.

DEAR ABBY: I live in a large apartment complex. Each building has a laundry room with several washers and dryers. However, some of us have a recurring problem with our neighbors.

Some people leave their things in the washer or dryer for a long time, which means that the rest of us have to wait to do our laundry until they remove their stuff.

How long should we wait before removing their laundry? The problem is that there is no place to put their laundry, and most people don't want anyone else touching their stuff. There are lighted timers on the washers and dryers, but I've had to wait sometimes 45 minutes until a machine is available.

I know this may not sound like a critical problem, but it is very frustrating. Sign me ... "WET HEN" IN WALNUT CREEK

DEAR WET HEN: It's common courtesy to remove one's laundry from washers and dryers within 15 minutes after the cycle is completed, so if your neighbors don't do so, do it for them. Put their laundry in their basket, if they left one; if there's no basket, put it on top of the machine.

Also, considerate tenants who do not have daytime jobs should do their laundry during the day in order to free the machines for those who must wash on weekends and evenings.

Perhaps if this were posted in the laundry room, your thoughtless neighbors would get the message.

VISION: Sight taken for granted

because there's still not enough information to listen to," Benton said. "There's not enough time to go through all the recorded stuff."

Sometimes Natalie just gets tired of talking or worrying about her vision problem, said Mistye Glass, another friend and senior at Calallen. But Mistye said her friendship with Natalie has brought with it its own life lessons.

"You take things for granted," she said. "I can get up and go here and there and Natalie can't do that."

Natalie and her parents have started working with the local chapter of the Commission for the Blind to help her pursue her education, jobs and other life goals, she said.

But she admits to occasional panic attacks about a future and all of the small details involved.

"I think about how I will be getting to work and how he (her husband) will be getting to work and how we will have to have the same schedule and about getting kids around," she said.

BUT HER RECENT work with special education students at Calallen High School, she said, has helped her sharpen her goals. She has not decided whether she wants to go to college but is considering a career in special education.

The speech by her friend Barbie at the livestock show has boosted her spirits in recent weeks, Benton said.

"This year she's gone from a depression about it to an acceptance and now possibly using her visual impairment to help others," Benton said. "In the last year or so, she's realizing, yeah, she has a limitation, but so what. She's just going to have to modify how she's going to get there."

Immunizations offered free for children

Staff Report

Provisional Class of the Junior League of Midland in cooperation with Memorial Hospital and the Midland Health Department will be offering free immunizations for childhood diseases for children ranging in age from infancy to 16 years old from 9 a.m.-3 p.m. March 26 at Casa de Amigos, 1101 E. Garden Lane at Lamesa Rd.

Immunizations will be administered by hospital and health department nurses and MISD nurses will be on hand to answer questions and explain when booster shots are needed.

This free immunization day is being sponsored because each year, children die from preventable childhood diseases. Simple immunizations protect children, and education helps parents recognize the need for the shots.

Children being immunized must be accompanied by a parent or legal guardian bearing proof of guardianship. The children must be free of illness. For children who are ill, rain checks will be issued. Parents must present a shot record indicating prior immunizations if available.

There will be entertainment provided for the children and those being immunized will be given a free giveaway packet with educational and promotional items included.

For more information, call 682-4732 or 685-7370.

Agency reports AIDS cases doubled in '93

ATLANTA (AP) — The number of new AIDS cases unexpectedly more than doubled last year under a broader definition of the disease and boosted by a sharp increase in the number of infections among heterosexuals.

The federal Centers for Disease Control had projected 1993 AIDS cases would jump 75 percent in the first year of the new definition. It actually increased by 111 percent, from 49,016 in 1992 to 103,500 in 1993, the agency reported Thursday.

Last year, the CDC expanded its definition to include those infected with HIV who also have a severely suppressed immune system, tuberculosis, recurrent pneumonia or invasive cervical cancer.

Most of the AIDS cases under the new definition were reported in the first three months of the year. The surge had dropped off by the end of 1993, and the CDC expects the number in 1994 cases to drop below last year's figure.

The groups most affected by the expanded definition were women, blacks, heterosexual intravenous drug users and hemophiliacs.

The increase was greater among women (151 percent) than among men (105 percent), and greater among blacks and Hispanics than whites.

The largest increases reported were among teens and young adults, mostly from heterosexual transmission.

"This is where the growth of the epidemic is," said Dr. John Ward, chief of the CDC's AIDS surveillance branch.

Although the epidemic overall still mostly infects gay men, heterosexuals represented the largest proportionate increase in 1993, said Pat Flemming, chief of reporting and analysis in the CDC's AIDS division.

AIDS cases resulting from heterosexual contact jumped 130 percent last year over 1992, from 4,045 to 9,288.

Police charge 1 rapper in killing; another receives assault sentence

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Rapper Ice Cube's backup singer T-Bone was charged Thursday for a slaying at a bowling alley. In another courtroom, rapper Tupac Shakur was sentenced to jail for assaulting a former boss.

Terry E. Gray, 24, known to fans as T-Bone and also a member of the rap group Da Lench Mob, was charged with one count of murder and a count of attempted murder in the Feb. 18 shooting.

Gray's lawyer, Anthony Alexander, said his client left the bowling alley long before the shooting. Gray was scheduled for arraignment in Inglewood Municipal Court on March 15. Judge Roosevelt Robinson Jr. set bail at $1.5 million.

Herbert Battle and Lashawn Townsend, both 22, were bowling when Gray asked Battle where he was from, Deputy District Attorney Gregory Jennings said. Apparently unhappy with the response, Gray allegedly fired a semiautomatic weapon, killing Battle and injuring Townsend, the prosecutor said.

Da Lench Mob is an Ice Cube-developed rap trio from South Central Los Angeles. The group's 1992 record was titled "Guerillas in tha Mist."

In Los Angeles, Shakur was sentenced to 15 days in county jail beginning May 10 for attacking his former employer on a music video set in March 1993.

Municipal Judge George Wu also ordered Shakur, 22, to spend 15 days with a state Department of Transportation road crew, perform 30 days of community service and fined him $2,000.

Shakur, who co-starred with Janet Jackson in the movie "Poetic Justice," was convicted Feb. 10 of misdemeanor counts of assault and battery. He could have been sentenced to a year in jail and fined $3,000.

Shakur beat up a 21-year-old music video director who had fired the rapper six months earlier because of his temper, said Deputy City Attorney Sandra Jo Streeter. The video director's name wasn't released.

"All that it was was a fist fight. ... They took a street thing and brought it to the courts," Shakur said this week on "The Arsenio Hall Show."

Judge dismisses murder charge against girl, 12

CINCINNATI (AP) — A judge Thursday dismissed a murder charge against a 12-year-old girl who confessed to drowning her baby cousin a decade ago.

Juvenile Court Judge Sylvia Hendon approved a request by Hamilton County prosecutors and the girl's lawyer to dismiss the charge.

Prosecutor Joseph Deters said Wednesday his office made a "terrible mistake" in advising police to file the charge Feb. 26. Prosecutors had no legal basis to prove that a 3-year-old could form criminal intent to commit murder, he said.

The girl, whom authorities have declined to identify, will continue to live with her foster mother in Cincinnati. She will continue getting counseling, which she has received for three years, said the girl's lawyer, Terry Weber.

"I'm glad it's over," said Weber, adding that the girl had been withdrawn and quiet since she was charged.

The girl was 3 when her 10-month-old cousin drowned July 22, 1984, in a bucket of bleach and water. The death had been ruled accidental.

Police charged the girl after she told her foster mother that she drowned the boy. The prosecutor's office initially said the girl was charged because it wanted to get her under court jurisdiction so she could get help. But, as Weber pointed out, she already was getting counseling.

Ranger tickets

ARLINGTON — The Texas Rangers announced Thursday that tickets will go on sale a month in advance for the April 11 regular season opener against Milwaukee.

Sales of about 6,800 tickets for the game at the Rangers' new stadium, The Ballpark in Arlington, will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday, the team said.

■ Midland High battles Sugarland Willowridge, 3:40 deadline in Class 5A semifinal.

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

AUSTIN — There was a brief moment in the eyes of the Lone Star State when today's 3 p.m. Class 5A semifinal game here between Sugar Land Willowridge and Midland High was just a dot on the 15-game tournament schedule that will decide five class state championships at the Frank Erwin Center.

But make that only a brief moment. The game suddenly became the main attraction of the tournament — even before the two teams arrived in Austin.

On Sunday, Willowridge lost starting guard Jason Williams when he was shot by a man who caught the senior in bed with his 14-year-old daughter. Williams is still hospitalized in Houston.

On Monday, Midland High lost four players to the state's No Pass, No Play rule, including the team's leading scorer Donald Carter. However, there was an odd turn to this situation since Carter is eligible to play until 3:40 p.m. under the UIL's one-week grace period, which started last Friday at 3:40 p.m.

Now the eyes of the state have landed squarely on this game and has the eyes of Midland High coach Jack Stephenson on the clock on his wrist rather than the one on the scoreboard.

"Donald will be able to play until 3:40 p.m.," Stephenson said. "We plan to play him, hopefully, for a half. Then he will have to come out. We will have to have some of the players off our bench carry a larger role. Luke Mattorano and Camron Stotts are likely to take on a bigger role than they are used to even if we move (guard) Jumon Hailey down into Carter's position."

Also at 3:40 p.m., MHS will lose its No. 6 man in Lavius Taylor. Still, Stephenson remains confident that his Bulldogs will give an account of themselves, even under the trying times ahead.

■ RADIO: Midland High vs. Sugarland Willowridge, 3 p.m., KCRS (AM 550).

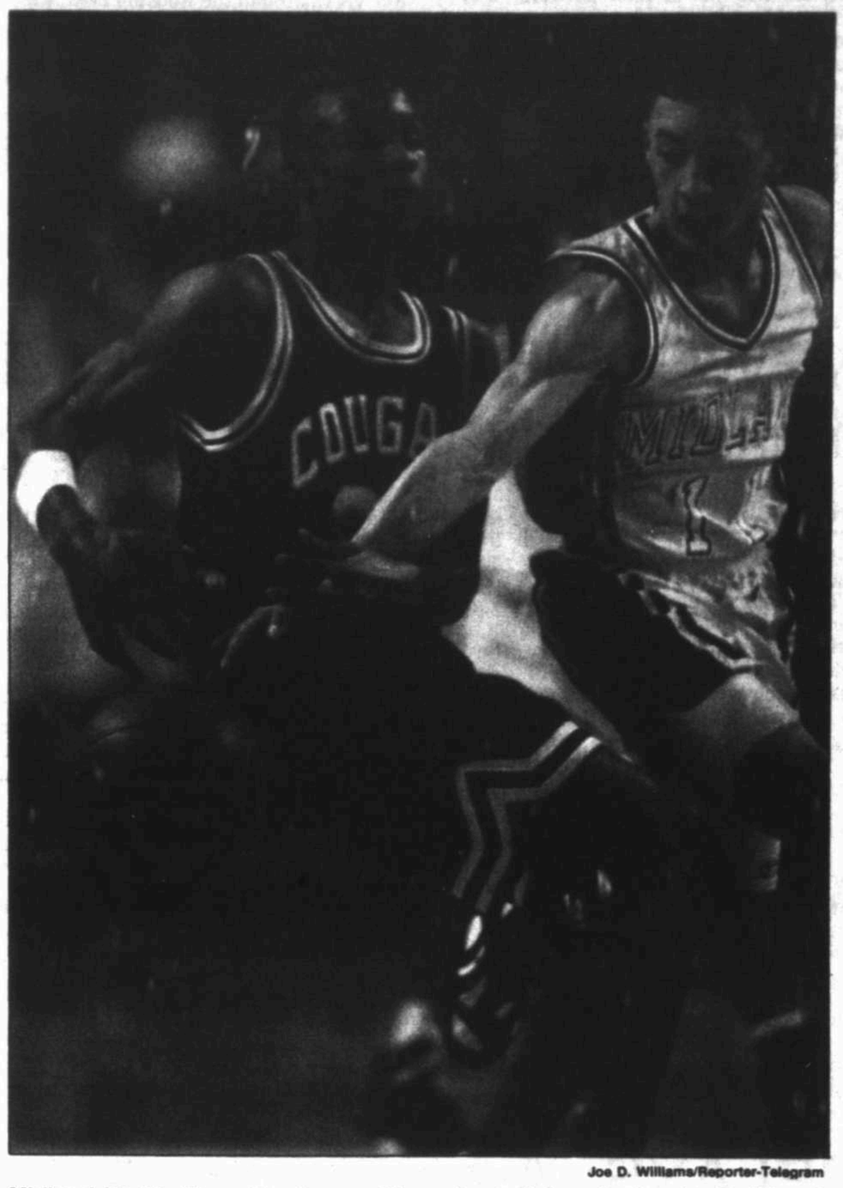

"We're counting on winning," Stephenson said. "We're not going down there just to spend the taxpayer's money. All we need to do is play the way we've been playing and everyone pick it up just a hair. We'll be fine. The kids are excited about playing."

MHS junior Hailey said, "Donald led us in scoring this year, but he has had to go to the bench with foul trouble before this year and the show had to go on. He's a great player, but he isn't the whole team.

"I told everyone we were going to state this year, and everyone laughed at me. The all said we lost a lot of seniors and we weren't big enough. We've heard it all before. No one is going to stop us."

Stephenson said that both teams will have to deal with the week's strange

Lee-ex makes splash in LSC

■ Former Midland Lee standout Martin Lattibeaudiere earns all-Lone Star Conference honors.

By Bill Petitt
Staff Writer

Former Midland Lee standout basketball player Martin Lattibeaudiere's freshman year of college basketball has been a baptism by fire.

The 6-2 guard was thrust into a starting role for West Texas A&M University early in the season. Lattibeaudiere suffered a pulled groin injury at the beginning of the season, an injury that nagged him for a majority of the year.

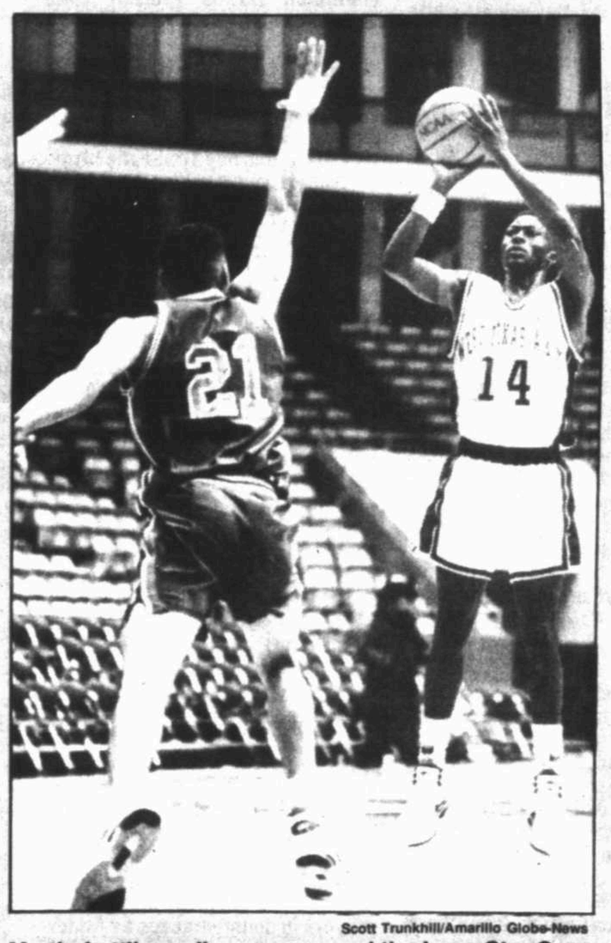

But the Midland Lee product emerged from the fire without a singe as he and his fellow Buffalo teammates currently ride a 10-game winning streak into the NCAA Division II Regional tournament in Topeka, Kan., where they will face North Alabama today.

Lattibeaudiere's contributions this season have earned him the conference's all freshman honor.

"Martin has done a fantastic job," said WTAMU head coach Rick Cooper of the Lee graduate who started 23 of 28 games. "It's hard enough for high school kids coming in. Then he pulls his groin early in the season running. It hurt his shooting a bit during conference play, but he has shot the ball pretty well and hit some big shots for us.

"He really hasn't surprise me. He's a bright, intelligent player, whose work ethic is incredible. The lessons have come pretty hard for Martin. It's good for the freshman to come in and work into the system, but it's been a trial by fire

Track and field fans in the Permian Basin will be treated to some of the best in high school competition of the season so far at the 50th West Texas Relays Friday and Saturday at Odessa's Ratliff Stadium.

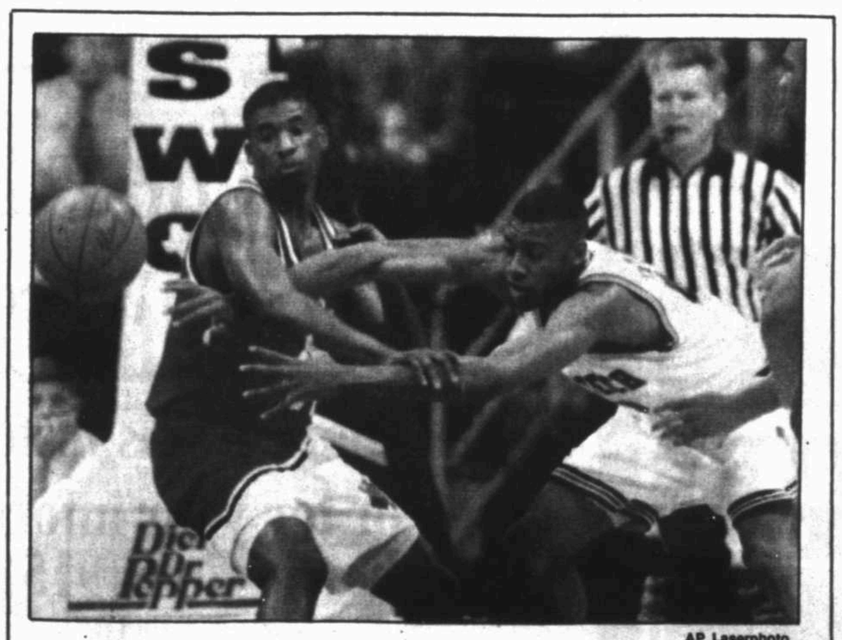

■ West Texas Relays

Athletes from 59 West Texas schools, including boys from Class 5A state champion Odessa Permian and Class 4A state champion San Angelo Lake View, will be showcased along with participants from the very first meet, which took place in 1944.

In the girls division, Stanton returns three relays virtually intact after garnering two medals and a fifth place finish in those events at the 2A state meet last year.

The meet begins at 2:30 p.m. Friday and there will be four divisions: Boys

Mustangs upset Rangers

■ Midland Christian's two-year-old baseball program upends Greenwood 12-5 Thursday night.

By Amy Wolfenbarger
Staff Writer

Midland Christian coach Gordon Awtry's team took a major step in developing a strong baseball team when the Mustangs beat Greenwood 12-5 in the first round of the West Texas March Classic Thursday night at Angels Stadium.

The Mustangs, who improved to 2-1 in their second season, took advantage of six Greenwood errors and advance to the second round where they will play Class 3A Alpine at 8 p.m. today with the winner of that game moving to the finals on Saturday.

Alpine defeated Colorado City 13-0 in the first round while Loraine defeated Crane 15-14 in the other game Thursday. Greenwood, which fell to 2-6 overall, will play the loser of today's first round game between Van Horn and Presidio at 3 p.m.

Awtry, who has coached football and girls basketball at Midland Christian for 22 years, finally got the baseball program going last year. And although 3A Greenwood's program is just one

Cowboys brace themselves as defensive stars near offers

Associated Press

FORT WORTH — Dallas Cowboys defensive leaders Ken Norton and Tony Casillas are considering lucrative free-agent offers from other teams, the Fort Worth Star-Telegram reported Thursday.

Norton told the newspaper he has been unofficially offered a multi-year contract from the San Francisco 49ers.

"I'm leaning that way," said Norton, the Pro Bowl middle linebacker whom the 49ers have atop their shopping list. "I guess you'd call their offer unofficial. But they are interested, and it could be a deal that allows me to finish out my career there."

Casillas said he has "an official offer

BULLDOGS: Adversity overshadows MHS' game

turn of events.

"We lost four kids, but Willowridge lost a key starter, too," Stephenson said. "In fact, another one of their starters, who has not been identified, was in another bedroom on the same night Williams was shot. I'm sure he is going to be thinking about that. It may come down to who can put all this behind them."

Willowridge coach Gary Nichols also isn't oblivious to the week's events.

"It's a blow to our team losing Jason for the game, but we stand behind him now," Nichols said. "Our kids still want to win because this has been a long time coming. I think we will be OK. There is no question that all that has happened will have some kind of bearing on the game. It could unite either team — or both. It could go the other way for either team. We'll see."

For years around the Houston area, the 36-1 Eagles have had to live with the tag as the best team that never made it to the state basketball tournament. But they did it this year with key playoff wins over fourth-ranked Beaumont West Brook in the regional quarterfinals and third-ranked Houston Milby in the Region III finals.

"Even without Williams, Willowridge is a strong team. They're not going to set up and hold the ball. They will be similar to some of the teams in Hobbs," Stephenson said. "They give you full-court pressure all the time and they have great power on the boards with the 6-8 post Ansu Sesay."

Williams' replacement just happens to be a 6-5 guard in Andrae Chretien. That just shows you why the Eagles possess great talent 10 deep.

Seasay scored 21 points and had 15 rebounds against Milby. Louis Brown added 11 points and 11 rebounds. Guard Carlos Grace is also coming off a 21-point game against Milby, scoring five of those points in the last 36 seconds to seal the win. Leland Redmond came up with two big steals in the fourth quarter against Milby to ignite an Eagle 14-3 run that blew the 71-60 game open.

With Carter on the bench after 40 minutes of play, MHS may lose, not only its best scoring threat, but a major contributor in rebounding. That will again place huge pressure on 6-5 senior Jason Kopp, who always seems to be in this position. Kopp must stay out of foul trouble. Stotts will probably have to play a major role off the bench to aid in this area.

Juniors Hailey and John Marc Sanon will also play key roles against the full-court pressure of the ball-hawking Eagles. Senior guard Ryan Bradberry, who is coming off a 20-point game against The Colony, hopes to have his three-point gun intact.

"A lot of people around here are wondering how a team with 11 losses got into the tournament, but when you look at Midland, they have some great weapons," Nichols said. "They are quick and that could give us some problems since quickness has been our key asset."

The Houston media is still predicting a huge blowout for Willowridge, who enters the tournament as the No. 1 ranked team in the state.

But this may turn out to be a game of minds. Which great minds will show up?

The winner of this game will meet the winner of the 7 p.m. semifinal between San Antonio East Central (30-4) and Plano East (32-4) at 8 p.m. Saturday in the Class 5A finals.

situation for him. He's really going to be a good player for us."

This from a player who overcame rejection early in his basketball career to set a Midland Lee school record with more than 1,500 career points while being named to several all-state teams following his senior year.

"He's a child that's determined," said Lattibeaudiere's mother, Phyllis. "When he first started, he went to school at St. Ann's and he started playing there — he was very competitive. We moved to Fort Lauderdale, Fla., in 1987 and he tried out for the basketball team and he didn't make the team. He was crushed a little.

"Martin would practice as much time as it was humanly possible. He would get home from school, do his homework and go play. Always had a basketball in his hand, eat, sleep and drink it."

He is averaging 12.5 points per game, is second on the team in assist with 2.0 per game and fourth on the squad in steals with 1.0 per game.

He ranks sixth in the LSC in three-point field goal shooting, making 58-of-147 three-pointer this season (39.5 percent).

"That's what (Midland Lee) coach House taught me. We lived and died by the three with coach House, so I haven't been tentative about shooting a three."

He has scored in double figures in three consecutive games, including 20 against Missouri Western in a 94-82 win on Tuesday.

"I was getting in trouble from coach Cooper for not shooting the ball," said Lattibeaudiere. "There in the middle of conference (teammates) Michael Crowe and Carlos Hopper would score 30 points in a night, so I felt that I didn't need to score. But I have been taking more shots lately."

RELAYS: Area teams dot field for track event

From 1C

5A, 4A and 3A along with a single girls division.

- Permian, winners of the last 13 West Texas Relay titles, will attempt to defend its 5A division title led by sprinter Lavorick Robinson.
- Mojo's Robinson finished third at the state meet in the 200 meters by posting a time of 21.4 seconds and is a favorite in the sprints.
- Another strong 5A competitor should be Amarillo High. The Sandies were runnerups last year in Region I and are led by Michael Williamson in the discus. Williamson has a personal best of 170 feet in the event.
- Odessa High, state champion in 1992 and third in regional last year, should also contend for the 5A title. The Bronchos are led by Russell Collins, who won the 400 at regionals last year and has a personal best time of 47.9.
- El Paso Coronado will be strong in the distance events with Alex Mendez and Mayo Delgado. Mendez finished third at regional in the 800 while Delgado is the defending WTR champ in the 1,600.
- Lake View will be the team to knock off in the 4A division. The Chiefs, winners of the last two relay titles, won the state meet last year despite only entering three athletes. One is defending 400 champ Terrence Norris, who has a personal best time of 47.5. Also returning for Lake View is triple jumper Jerome Bryant, who did not place at state.
- Norris will be challenged in the 400 by Pecos' Willie Mata, who chased the Lake View runner all season and finished third at state in the event. He has a personal best time of 47.9.
- Lubbock Estacado should give the Chiefs a run for the trophy behind Talion Scott and Dakari Lenear. Scott is the defending WTR champ in the 300 hurdles. Lenear competed last year for 3A Lubbock Dunbar, which has been converted to a junior high, and finished fourth at state in the 400.
- Canyon Randall could put on a pole vaulting display with teammates Justin Reed and Greg Sanderson. Reed is the defending WTR champ in the event while Sanderson finished third at the regional meet. Andrews will also compete in the 4A division.

In the girls divison, Permian, Odessa High, Clovis, N.M., and Fort Stockton will head up a competitive team race.

Permian's strength lies in sprinting, with Rosalyn Ward and Rhonda Prigg leading the way. Ward has a personal best time of 12.2 in the 100 while Prigg has run a 25.7 in the 200. Permian's Barbara Zinnenlauf is a favorite in the shot put with a best toss of 40-0.

The high jump should be a marquee event. Clovis' Ryan Tolbert has cleared 5-7 before and the meet record of 5-4 could be in jeaopardy. Odessa's Donelle Jones has a leap of 5-2 while Fort Stockton's Talmie Smith and Marissa Bilano have both cleared 5-0.

Tolbert is three time defending state 300 hurdles champ in New Mexico with a best time of 43.18 and could surpass the meet record of 45.54.

Stanton's relays were virtually unstoppable last year and each team scored points at the state meet last year. The highlight was the second place finish in the 800 relay in a time of 1:43.4. The team also garnered another medal for third place in the 400 relay in a time of 49.3. Juniors Lupe Chapa and Laura Herm and sophomore Kristen Wyckoff return from those two teams which lost only one senior, Stacy Tollison. Stanton's 1,600 relay finished fifth with junior Sande Bundas replacing Wyckoff for that race.

In Division 3A, several more state champs will highlight the competition. Jess Roberts of Alpine won the 1A discus title last year while competing for Marathon. Canyon brings three members of its state champion cross country team and should pace the distance events.

Greenwood nabs two 6-3A picks

GREENWOOD — The Greenwood boys placed junior James Settles and senior Michael Paul Smith on the District 6-3A basketball team.

The Rangers finished third in the league standings, just missing the playoffs. Settles, 6-foot-2, averaged 18 points and five assists per game for Greenwood, while Smith, 6-1, pulled in eight rebounds and 13 points per game.

Coach of the Year was Jim Eubanks of Kermit, which won the district championship and lost in the area round to Southlake Carroll. Second place Reagan County's Jesse Lozano, a 5-8 junior, was the most valuable player.

Kermit place juniors Chase Mills and Devalon Bryant on the first team along with senior Chris Stansel. Reagan County place Scott Bull and Jeremy Ellison, both seniors, on the first team. Sonora's Hadley Smith rounded out the team.

Sandstormers place in Odessa

ODESSA — Hayley Whiteside won all four events on her way to the all-around title and helped the Midland Sandstormers to a third place finish in the Level Eight team division of the District I Gymnastics Championship Competition March 5.

Meghann Witte, Melanie Trumbo and Ashley Shannon each earned first place in their respective all-around competitions for the Sandstormers in the meet held at Odessa College.

Tracie Seltzer and Jana Duncan, Midlanders who compete for the Odessa Twisters gymnastics club, grabbed two top 10 all-around spots. Seltzer was seventh in the Level Eight, 12-13 age group while Duncan was fifth in the 14-15 age group.

Whiteside, competing in Level 8, 8-11 age group, swept the vault, bars, beam and floor for the all-around win while Shannon got first in the vault, bars and beam for the Level Seven, 8 to 11-year-old title

Witte won the balance beam and the floor exercise in the Level Five, 7-8 year old division for the all-around title while Trumbo won the bars and the floor in the Level Five, 12-and-up division for the title.

Panhandle teams earn trip to state finals

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Marcus Williams scored 18 points, leading five players in double figures, as Plainview sizzled from 3-point range and knocked off defending Class 4A champion Dallas Lincoln 78-65 Thursday night.

■ State Playoffs

Plainview (34-3), in its sixth state tournament, on Saturday will face state tourney first-timer Austin Anderson (29-8), an 82-72 winner over 1993 Class 4A runner-up Port Arthur Lincoln (30-4).

Dallas Lincoln, which had to forfeit 19 pre-district games due to an ineligible player, finishes the year 14-22, led by junior Damion Walker, who muscled his way inside to 31 points and 28 rebounds.

Plainview reached its first state final with a rapid-fire assault from 3-point range that didn't slow down until the Bulldogs went into a four corners offense in the closing minutes of the game.

Plainview was 10-of-26 from 3-point range, forcing Lincoln to abandon its inside attack in the second half and begin bombing unsuccessfully from behind the arc.

Carlton Dixon, a physical, 6-5 intimidator who has signed with Texas, was virtually eliminated from Lincoln's offense, going 1-for-3 from the field as Plainview clogged up the inside with a sagging 2-3 zone. Dixon fouled out with 5:34 to play after scoring two points.

In the second semifinal, Russell Freeman scored 23 points and grabbed 11 rebounds, leading five players in double figures as Anderson pounced on Port Arthur Lincoln early and never let up.

Jarrod Harris had 18 points and seven rebounds, Patrick Palmer scored 15 and Julian Jackson added 10 for Port Arthur Lincoln, which has won six state titles.

Anderson beat the Bumblebees at their own game, running up and down the floor and pounding the ball inside to Freeman, a bulky, 6-7 senior who hit 11 of 15 from the field.

Josh Milberger had 21 points; Marty Hardy had 17, including two monster slam dunks; Eric Brown scored 11; and Kris Clack added 10 for Anderson, which shot 58 percent from the field.

Class 3A

Littlefield 59, Sinton 49

Ferris 82,

Sour Lake Hardin-Jefferson 67

AUSTIN — Kyle Rogers opened the game 0-for-10 from the field before scoring 31 points as Ferris rolled over Sour Lake Hardin-Jefferson in the Class 3A semifinals of the boys state basketball tournament.

Ferris (30-3), the runner-up in Class 3A last year, will face Littlefield (33-4) in Saturday's championship game. Littlefield, making its first state tournament appearance, got 21 points from Allen Blair and 18 from Joey Polk as it defeated Sinton 59-49 in a battle of cold shooting.

Hardin-Jefferson, an East Texas school that won the 3A title in 1991 and the 2A crown in 1967, finished the year 29-8, led by Kenyon Spears with 20 points and 12 rebounds and Robert Anderson, who added 17 points.

Hardin-Jefferson pulled within 34-29 with 1:36 left in the second quarter, but Ferris opened up a decisive 19-2 run, featuring two 3-pointers by Rogers as the Yellowjackets went up 53-31 with 4:27 left in the third quarter.

The Hawks hung close for much of the first half with crisp passing that set up some easy baskets and a couple of key 3-pointers by Deon Turner. But Ferris turned up the heat on its press, forcing 10 first-half turnovers by Hardin-Jefferson that were converted into 12 points for the Yellowjackets.

Alonzo Harrison scored 18 points and Vernon Butler added 16 for Ferris.

In the second 3A semifinal, Littlefield shot only 26.4 percent from the field, but its full-court pressure led to 17 steals and created 25 Sinton turnovers that were converted to 17 points for the Wildcats.

Sinton tied the game at 37 on a jumper by Will Whitten, but Littlefield answered with a 9-2 run, including five points from Blair, giving the Wildcats a 46-39 lead with 4:36 to go.

Sinton pulled within 46-43 with 3:20 to play on a slashing drive by Jeremy Burnell, who led the Pirates with 19 points.

But Littlefield hit 13 of 15 free throws in the final 3:15 to ice the game.

Class A

Lipan 77, Anderson-Shiro 74

Nazareth 59, Laneville 57

AUSTIN — Nick Johnson hit a shot with 22 seconds left and Nazareth held on down the stretch as the Swifts knocked out two-time defending Class A champion Laneville 59-57 in the boys state high school semifinals.

Nazareth (33-5), a Panhandle school, will be making its first appearance in the state finals since its 1986 championship. The Swifts on Saturday will battle Lipan (34-3), which toppled previously undefeated Anderson-Shiro (38-1) in a seesaw struggle, 77-74.

Laneville, from East Texas, ends the season 33-4 with much of the team it had the last two years when it beat Weatherford Brock (1993) and Petersburg (1992) in the finals. Cedric Bowens led the Yellowjackets with 19 points and Brad Harris added 18.

Laneville had two chances to tie after calling timeout with 7.4 seconds left. But Brent Brantley missed a driving layup with four seconds left and Harris couldn't connect on the put-back as time expired.

Laneville quickly cut a seven-point deficit (57-50) with 1:58 to play. Brent Brantley hit a free throw and then Devoy Brantley rebounded the missed second shot and was fouled as he hit a driving layup.

Devoy Brantley missed the foul shot, but Harris grabbed the rebound and scored on a put-back, closing Nazareth's lead to 57-55 with 1:33 to go. Harris scored again with 1:04 left and the game was tied at 57.

The Swifts went into a four-corners passing game before Johnson hit an 8-footer on the baseline with 22 ticks left that turned out to be the game winner.

Laneville led nearly the entire first half as their pressing and trapping led to 11 Nazareth turnovers and 14 Yellowjackets' points.

In the second semifinal, Cody Chandler hit both ends of a one-and-one attempt with 28.1 seconds left and then T.J. Bleeker did the same with 10.6 seconds to help Lipan secure a 77-74 victory against Anderson-Shiro.

Anderson-Shiro, which was led by Reuben Foy with 21 points and Latel Foy with 18 points and 12 rebounds.

Lipan was led in scoring by Chandler, with 28 points and 10 rebounds, while Pierson added 24 points.

on the table" from the Chicago Bears that would pay him $1.5 million per year.

Bears defensive coordinator Bob Slowik phoned Wednesday to urge him to sign quickly so he could attend the beginning of the team's off-season workout program next week, Casillas said.

Casillas also said the Green Bay Packers are among the National Football League teams that have talked of exceeding the Bears' proposal.

"(The Cowboys) have already set their parameters," Casillas said. "And if you're not in the top three (stars of the team), everything else changes."

MUSTANGS: MCHS beats Greenwood 12-5

From 1C

year older, a win for the Mustangs, who compete in the Texas Association of Private and Parochial schools Class 1A, was a big one.

"They've come a long way," Awtry said of his players. "We played their junior varsity last year and barely beat them."

After two scoreless innings, the Mustangs began to open it up a bit after Greenwood pitcher Dan Stafford walked Jody Allred. Then MC pitcher Chad Bayley hit a double and put Allred on third. Allan Awtry then hit a fly to centerfield which would have scored Allred from third on a sacrifice. Instead, Awtry got an RBI when Greenwood's errors began. The fly was dropped and Awtry was safely on first.

Mustang batter Kyle Jackson then hit a hard grounder to the Greenwood mound and Stafford fielded it cleanly but overthrew the first baseman. That allowed Bayley to score from second. Neil Truex drove in another run for the Mustangs to put them up 4-0 in the top of the third.

The Greenwood defense posted three more errors as the Mustangs went up 9-0 in the top of the fifth and put the game out of reach.

Greenwood coach Tony Pallanez said, "We've never had that many errors in a game. The third and fourth innings were murder. And when it rains, it pours."

The Rangers did stage a serious rally in the bottom of the fourth when Damon Cumba hit a deep shot to left field for a triple. Relief pitcher Jon Shew scored Cumba hitting to the hole in centerfield.

Mike Smith and Andy Smith both singled to load the bases and Ranger shortstop Casey Otho drove in Smith and pinch runner Matt Gilley to pull the Rangers to within 9-3.

Greenwood grabbed one run in each of the next two innings to make up the final score. The game was called in the sixth inning because of the two-hour time limit observed for the tournament.

"I just told the guys, it's over and done with and we've got a job to do (Friday)," Pallanez said. "They did a good job of trying to come back and I have confidence that we can hit the ball."

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, MARCH 11, 1994

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Wrap yourself in the knowledge that you are doing your best. Lasting solutions will be found. Getting better organized at work will boost both efficiency and profits. Remember that workmanship is still a proud art and resist shortcuts. Romance will be on a sweeter course by December.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: "Prime Time Live" anchor Sam Donaldson, musician Mercer Ellington, civil rights leader Rev. Ralph Abernathy, actress Dorothy Gish.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Become more aggressive where a job pursuit is concerned. Your moneymaking ideas require careful planning; consult experts. Your offspring and friends are relying on you.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Problems involving an account shared with a loved one could affect your mood this morning. It is unwise to dwell on differences of opinion. Rely on your own efforts if you want something done.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Avoid political and religious discussions this morning. Although you will get some friendly help around midday, a goal may remain out of reach. Shun intrigue in the evening. Share secrets with mate.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): By using your wits to overcome certain obstacles this morning, you will be able to pursue key aims in the afternoon. Accept an invitation to an interesting cultural event. Seek valuable introductions.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Be aware of ego clashes and how you appear to others. A close friend offers good advice. Buying things on impulse can be expensive; become a comparison shopper. Choose substance over image!

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Collecting a debt or cashing in on a promise could be difficult. Tend to the needs of children before finalizing your weekend plans. Do not get caught in an emotional tug-of-war.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Watch what you eat this morning; otherwise, a treatment may yield poor results. There could be unexpected benefits when doing business with influential friends.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You can accomplish more by working behind closed doors now. Try to remember a dream's particulars, especially if it had to do with money. Glossing over a basic difference of opinion would be a mistake.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): You now see the wisdom of making your own decisions. Avoid frittering away your energy or letting friends impose on you. Romance will make your heart sing this weekend. Show your tender side.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Rely on your sixth sense for spotting real value in people and products. Friends who are closely attuned to your moods make powerful allies. Be careful not to ride roughshod over a relative's feelings.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Good financial news arrives! Do not count on your domestic situation to remain the way it is. Some surprising events may be in store. Pay more attention to your loved one's needs.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Do not allow an emotional upset to affect your job performance and productivity. Work is excellent therapy. Dig in! Loved ones serve as a buffer to some disappointing news. Read for entertainment.

Opening lead: Two of ♠

How good is your declarer play? Cover the East-West hands and try to find the best way to reel in this contract.

You reach six hearts via the auction shown. North's jump raise might be a bit of a stretch, but with all prime cards and good trumps, even purists might give it grudging approval. You checked on aces before settling in six hearts. If you start to draw trumps, East will show out on the second round.

One line is to remove the remaining enemy fang, ending in dummy, then lead a club toward the king. If East has the ace, you can ruff a club, discard another on the king of spades and claim your slam.

West produces the ace, but if diamonds are 3-3 all is still well. Unfortunately, they are not. Down one. Note that it doesn't help to draw only two rounds of trumps and then go after diamonds. West will score an overruff for the setting trick.

Go to the head of the class if you won the ace of spades, cashed the queen of spades and king of diamonds, then entered dummy with the queen of hearts to discard a diamond on the king of spades! Now ruff a diamond low, cash the king of hearts and ace of hearts to draw trumps and ruff another diamond. That sets up a long card in dummy and your only loser is a club. There's still a trump on the table as an entry to cash your good diamond.

Sex therapist Dr. Ruth's latest rule: Don't think about England

OMAHA, Neb. — The latest lesson from diminutive sex therapist Dr. Ruth Westheimer is: Don't think about England.

Diminutive sex therapist Dr. Ruth delivers 1½-hour lecture.

Dr. Ruth delivered a 1½-hour lecture Wednesday at the University of Nebraska-Omaha, decrying sexual ignorance in the United States. She said that most of us don't understand our own bodies or our partner's.

"Historically speaking, all of us come from a background where a puritan, Victorian mother told her daughter on her wedding night, 'Lie back and think of England,'" Westheimer said.

She said the problem is especially dangerous today, when sexually transmitted diseases are deadly and millions of women are saddled with unwanted pregnancies.

LOS ANGELES — Former "Bewitched" star Dick Sargent, who was diagnosed with prostate cancer 4½ years ago, says the disease has spread and he's close to death.

"I don't know how much longer I have and nobody can seem to predict it. It's either a question of months or maybe a year," Sargent, 63, told the syndicated TV show "Entertainment Tonight." The interview is scheduled to air Friday.

At the time the cancer was diagnosed, doctors were optimistic it could be treated successfully.

But Sargent, who undergoes daily radiation sessions, says the cancer has left him so frail now that "I coughed a couple of months ago and I broke a rib — actually heard a snap."

Sargent, who is gay, realizes that some people may assume he has AIDS.

"I don't have AIDS," he said. "I am HIV-negative. But if I did I would wear that badge as proudly as everybody else who has it."

Sargent played Darrin Stephens, the mortal husband of witch Elizabeth Montgomery, on the television show "Bewitched" from 1969 to 1972. His predecessor in that role, Dick York, died in February 1992 at age 63 of emphysema and a degenerative spinal condition.

JENKINTOWN, Pa. — There's a little slice of Havens on exhibit this month — Richie Havens, that is.

Havens, who made his mark at Woodstock 25 years ago with a rousing version of "Freedom," is displaying 25 of his drawings and sculptures at Abington Friends School. Havens is friends with the mother of a student there.

One work, called "Capitol Hill," shows a dome that looks like the mouthpiece of a balloon, and a giant chasm in the earth leading to a center stair.

"Basically, it's talking about the problems of dualism we have," the 53-year-old Havens said. "There are double standards, right and left, and Capitol Hill is divided. The road to get there really is a trench, and to get anything done, you have to walk in the trenches. You have to recognize you are dealing with two separate sides of America."

Havens' works will be displayed through April 1.

LOS ANGELES — Eddie Van Halen struck the right note with a group of quadriplegics, visiting them to make up for a heartless con man's bogus promise.

The con man had promised to bring his "friend" Van Halen to visit the New Start Homes in suburban Chatsworth. But that was just a ruse; the man, who didn't know Van Halen, used the lie to steal a car from one of the home's nurses, Carol Balta.

When Van Halen heard about the hoax, he decided to drop by. He insisted on onlt one condition: No publicity, no TV cameras and no news reporters.

"Eddie spent an hour and a half talking to each patient, signing autographs and answered any questions they had," Balta said. "You should have seen the smiles on their faces as we wheeled them back to their rooms. They felt like someone cared about them enough to make this visit happen."

Van Halen is the guitarist for the rock group that bears his name. The group's hits include "Right Now" and "Jump."

MELBOURNE, Australia — Birthday boy Prince Edward had little chance to celebrate turning 30 Thursday.

He spent most of the day in official functions, presenting 44 young people with gold Duke of Edinburgh awards.

"We came to the conclusion that we will remember more about his 30th birthday than he would," said Sian Kay, one of the award winners.

About 2.5 million people in 79 countries have participated in the Duke of Edinburgh Award program since 1956. The program recognizes people younger than 25 for achievements in categories such as water polo and dog handling, as well as the more traditional lifesaving, cadet corps and voluntary work.

The prince, on the fourth day of his private visit to Australia, is scheduled to leave the country Saturday.

Texas A&M's Joe Wilbert (center) loses the ball as he drives in between two SMU defenders during the Aggies quarterfinal round win over the Mustangs Thursday.

SWC: Longhorns run past Frogs, Ags win

From 1C

Tech plays the winner of the Texas A&M-SMU game in the semifinals on Friday night at Reunion Arena.

It was the seventh consecutive victory for Tech, 17-10, which finished in a tie for second-place in the SWC regular season. Houston finished the season at 8-19. Tech is the defending tournament champion.

Davis hit 15 of 19 free throws and was 6 of 9 from the field as he scored 27 points. Hughes had 24 and Sasser added 23.

The 15 free throws set a new tournament record. Phil Wallace of Tech and Rob Williams had the old record of 14 free throws. Tech made 42 free throws in the game, a tournament record for teams.

Tim Moore scored 16 points and Anthony Goldwire had 23 for Houston. Rafael Carrasco scored 14 points.

Texas A&M 85, SMU 66

DALLAS — Guard David Edwards and forward Joe Wilbert erased a 13-point deficit with a second-half charge that brought Texas A&M an victory over Southern Methodist on in the Southwest Conference postseason tournament quarterfinals.

The Aggies (18-9), who finished tied for second in the SWC regular season, play Texas Tech in Friday night's semifinals. The Red Raiders whipped Houston 110-86 earlier at Reunion Arena.

SMU finished the season with a 6-21 record. The Mustangs had defeated A&M 64-57 two weeks ago at Moody Coliseum, but the Mustangs went cold in the second half as they withered under the Aggie full-court press.

Edwards had his third triple-double of the year with 26 points, 12 rebounds and 14 assists. He hit 8-of-8 free throws and was 7-of-18 from the field.

Wilbert scored 21 points for the Aggies and Brett Murry produced 14 points and 14 rebounds.

James Gatewood was high for SMU with 14 points.

No. 25 Texas 96, TCU 75

DALLAS — Guard B.J. Tyler scored 21 points and keyed a tenacious Texas defense that allowed the 25th-ranked Longhorns to roll to a victory over Texas Christian.

The Longhorns (23-7) will face the winner of the Baylor-Rice game on Friday night in the SWC semifinals.

The eighth-seeded Horned Frogs finished the year with a 7-20 record.

Texas, the SWC regular season champion, had four other players in double figures. Terrence Rencher scored 17 points, Roderick Anderson had 16, Albert Burditt 12 and Gerrald Houston 10.

Rice 85, Baylor 82

DALLAS — The steady play of Torrey Andrews and a hot second half by Thomas McGhee allowed Rice to erase a 14-point halftime deficit and beat Baylor.

The Owls (15-13) advance to a Friday semifinal against Texas, which defeated Texas Christian 96-75. The other semifinal pits Texas Tech, a 110-86 winner over Houston, against Texas A&M, which beat Southern Methodist 85-66.

Lambert scored 25 points and had 11 rebounds. Branch scored 23 points, including five 3-pointers. He made four bombs in the first half, the last one coming with 2.9 seconds left in the period for a 46-32 Baylor lead at halftime.

Associated Press

AMHERST, Mass. — Massachusetts didn't wait until the final seconds to beat Temple this time.

The ninth-ranked Minutemen opened the Atlantic 10 championship game with a 24-3 run and then held off a couple of second-half bursts by No. 12 Temple on the way to a 70-59 victory Thursday night and their third straight league title.

The first two times the teams met this season, Massachusetts (27-6) came away with one-point victories, both times on shots by Mike Williams. One was a 10-foot jumper with three seconds left at home; the other was a 25-foot banker with eight seconds to play in Philadelphia.

This time, Williams got the Minutemen going with a 3-pointer eight seconds into the game. The junior guard also had an answer when the Owls opened the second half with an 11-0 run to get within three, hitting consecutive 3-pointers to make it 41-32 with 15:39 left.

After Temple (22-7) closed to 41-36, it was Williams' three-point play that capped a 5-0 run to make it 46-36.

Williams finished with 21 points, while Lou Roe had 17 and Dana Dingle 10.

Temple got within six points twice, but never closer despite a heroic effort by Aaron McKie, who finished with 33 points — two off his career-high. He and Eddie Jones combined for all but eight of the Owls' points.

It was the first time in Temple's 98 years of basketball it was beaten three times in the season by one team. The Owls have lost four straight to Massachusetts.

The Owls were 1-for-8 from the field with five turnovers and were down by 21 just three seconds past the halfway mark of the first half. The turnovers were just three less than the Owls averaged per game all season.

No. 15 UCLA 78, Oregon St. 67

CORVALLIS, Ore. — Center George Zidek had 18 points and 14 rebounds as 15th-ranked UCLA held off surprisingly tough Oregon State.

The Bruins (21-5, 13-4 Pac-10) also got 18 points from Charles O'Bannon as they moved within one game of first-place Arizona in the Pac-10 heading into Saturday's regular-season finale against Oregon.

Brent Barry scored a career-high 31 points for Oregon State (6-20, 2-15), but the Beavers still lost their seventh in a row and reached 20 games overall for the first time ever.

■Top 25 Roundup

Barry sank his first six shots to help Oregon State to a 19-10 lead. He scored 20 in the first half and the Beavers led 34-33 at halftime. The lead changed hands through the early minutes of the second half before O'Bannon's basket with 11:13 to play put UCLA on top for good, 54-52.

UCLA clinched the victory by sinking six of eight free throws over the last minute.

Tyus Edney added 17 points and Ed O'Bannon had 15 for UCLA.

Memphis St. 91, No. 22 Ala.-Birmingham 86

CINCINNATI — Cedric Henderson scored 15 points and shackled Alabama-Birmingham leading scorer Robert Shannon when it mattered, leading Memphis State to a victory over the Blazers in the first round of the Great Midwest Conference tournament.

The Tigers (12-15) played perhaps their best game in their first losing season in 13 years. Five players hit double figures, the Tigers dominated the boards 39-29, and UAB (22-7) never got into an offensive flow.

Shannon, the conference's second-leading scorer with an 18.9-point average, had just three in the first 28 minutes while Memphis State pulled away to a double-digit lead.

Shannon got hot when it was too late, finishing with 26 points on 8-of-21 shooting. Carter Long led UAB with a season-high 28.

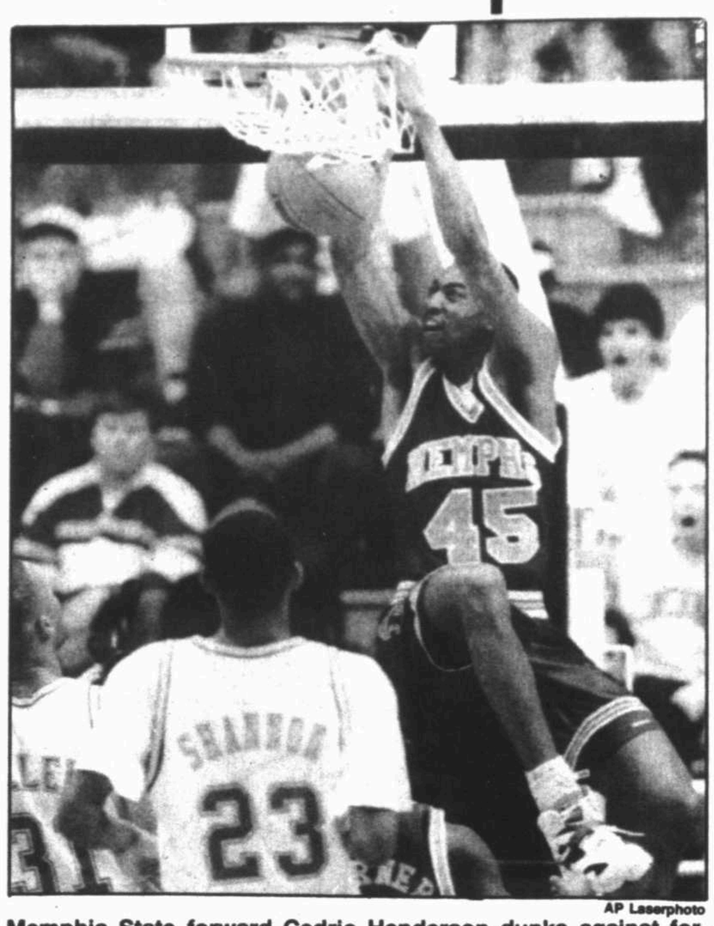

Rodney Newsom scored 23 points to lead the Tigers' balanced offense. David Vaughn added 19 and 11 rebounds. The Tigers also blocked eight shots.

Memphis State accomplished its main goal — deny Shannon the ball and disrupt UAB's offense with traps and full-court pressure. The Tigers led for all but three minutes of the first half and took a 44-39 lead at intermission.

Shannon hit his first shot — a 3-pointer — then missed his next seven. The Tigers kept a player on him at all times — primarily Henderson — and forced him to rush his shots.

Henderson also played a leading role in the offense. He hit a pair of baskets in an eight-point run that put the Tigers up 21-14. They led 44-39 at the intermission.

UAB's troubles got worse early in the second half, when center Clarence Thrash drew his fourth foul. Memphis State exploited it by taking the ball inside. Chris Garner hit three straight driving baskets and Justin Wimmer's 3-pointer made it 56-46 with 14 minutes left.

Memphis State forward Cedric Henderson dunks against former Odessa College standout Robert Shannon (23) and Reginald Allen in the Tigers' upset win over UAB Thursday.

Shannon finally broke loose, hitting 11 straight points for UAB, and Long hit two 3-pointers to cut it to 75-70 with 4:53 left. But Henderson hit a short jumper to blunt the charge.

No. 21 Saint Louis 80, Dayton 46

CINCINNATI — Saint Louis beat Dayton in the first round of the Great Midwest Conference tournament, ending Jim O'Brien's coaching career at Dayton with one of his worst defeats.

Saint Louis (23-4) got ahead 49-16 at halftime as the Flyers (6-21) put up little resistance. Dayton had more turnovers (18) than points or shots taken (17) at the intermission.

Donnie Dobbs equaled the Flyers' first-half output with 16 points and finished with 19. Saint Louis, which will play Memphis State in the semifinals Friday, eased up in the second half.

Dayton fired O'Brien on March 2, but he stayed on for the rest of the season. The Flyers lost their last three games, leaving O'Brien's record at 61-87. The Flyers lost their last 18 road games.

The 34-point loss was the Flyers' second-worst this season — they lost to Cincinnati by 39 — and the fourth-worst during O'Brien's tenure.

O'Brien occasionally turned his head in disgust as the Flyers fell farther and farther behind Thursday, but generally showed little emotion as he watched from his sideline crouch.

Saint Louis came into the game wary of the Flyers. Dayton overcame a 20-point first-half deficit to beat the Billikens on Feb. 13 for their only conference win.

Saint Louis pushed the lead at 20 points with 5:33 left in the first half Thursday, then turned it on by closing the half with a 17-1 spurt.

Dayton played like a demoralized team. The Flyers had a season-high 26 turnovers — most of them unforced — and didn't hit consecutive baskets for the first 25 minutes.

Rockets overcome deficit, beat Supersonics

Associated Press

HOUSTON — Hakeem Olajuwon had 23 points and rookie Sam Cassell sank four pressure free throws in the final seconds Thursday as the Houston Rockets overcame an early 14-point deficit to beat the Seattle Supersonics 87-82.

The victory gave Houston a .002 percentage point lead in the Midwest Division over idle San Antonio. The loss for Seattle snapped a six-game winning streak.

Houston trailed much of the game, but held the Sonics to just 29 points in the second half, including only four points in the final 6:27.

At one point, Seattle went 5:11 without a field goal and was whistled for a pair of illegal defense violations. Houston capitalized with a late 8-0 run to take the lead for good.

Gary Payton had 19 points and Detlef Schrempf 14 for the Sonics, who shot just 36 percent. Seattle was without Ricky Pierce, sidelined with bone spurs, and Nate McMillan, suffering from an abdominal strain.

Kenny Smith's basket to start the fourth quarter tied the game at 67, but Seattle went back in front by seven before Houston started chipping away.

Olajuwon's bucket with 4:31 to go made it 79-78 and put Houston up for the first time since the opening moments of the game.

Cassell put Houston ahead 83-80 with two free throws with 26 seconds left, but Shawn Kemp's basket with 17 seconds remaining pulled the Sonics within one. Cassell was fouled again and converted to give the Rockets a three-point advantage.

Payton's 3-point attempt missed with less than 3 seconds to go and Robert Horry made two free throws for the final margin.

The Rockets made their comeback in the third period without Olajuwon for most of the time. Olajuwon picked up his third and fourth fouls early in the period and was sent to the bench. He had six points, however, in the crucial fourth quarter.

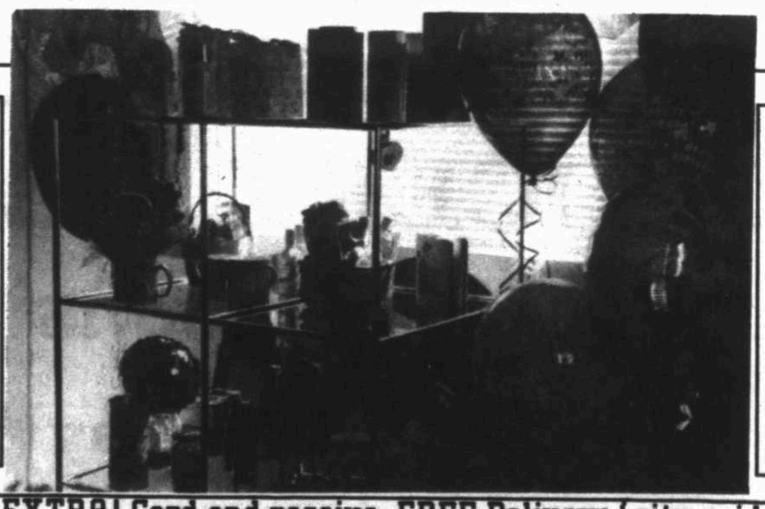

Seattle, behind the shooting of Vincent Askew, who had 13 first-half points, led by as many as 14 points in the second quarter.

Natural gas for April delivery fell 4 cents to $2.116 per thousand cubic feet.

Grumman bid

NEW YORK — Two of the defense industry's biggest contractors battled to get bigger as Northrop Corp. bid $60 per share for Grumman Corp., topping a $55-a-share offer from Martin Marietta Corp.

Northrop's offer Thursday put a $2.04 billion value on Grumman and could set off a bidding contest that Martin Marietta had hoped to avoid. Grumman shares rose $6.75 in after-hours trading to $61.75, an indication that investors expect the ultimate price will be even higher than Northrop's bid.

Jobless claims

WASHINGTON — First-time claims for unemployment benefits jumped by 32,000 last week to a seasonally adjusted 346,000, the Labor Department said. The four-week moving average fell 3,250 to 348,250, a two-month low.

The figures, released Thursday, have fluctuated widely in recent weeks, but economists say job markets continue to improve. February's unemployment rate dropped an unexpected two-tenths of a percent to 6.5 percent.

Intel suit

SAN JOSE, Calif. — In a closely watched copyright case, a federal court jury ruled against Intel Corp. in its lawsuit against rival Advanced Micro Devices Inc.

Jurors found that AMD had the right to copy Intel microcode — built-in software that controls a chip's operations. AMD stock surged $6.12½ to $28.87½ on the NYSE. Nasdaq-listed Intel fell $1.50 to $70.12½.

Stocks stumble

NEW YORK — Stocks slumped and interest rates rocketed higher in rumor-ridden financial markets Thursday.

Speculation about potential political problems ahead for the Clinton administration intensified when rumors related to the Whitewater affair swirled around Wall Street.

The Dow Jones industrial average lost 22.79 to 3,830.62 after recovering from a deficit of nearly 40 points.

Other popular market measures also sank. The New York Stock Exchange composite index fell 1.56 to 257.22 and the Standard & Poor's 500 stock index dropped 3.16 to 463.90.

Smaller stocks also lost ground. The Nasdaq Stock Market's composite index retreated 3.96 to 789.09.

Northrop tops rival's Grumman offer

■ Stage is set for bidding war between two defense industry giants.

Associated Press

NEW YORK — The Northrop Corp. topped a rival's offer to buy Grumman Corp., setting the stage for a bidding war between two defense industry giants.

Northrop bid $2 billion Thursday for Grumman, a builder of air and ground surveillance devices.

The bid came in response to a $1.9 billion offer from Martin Marietta Corp. that Grumman accepted Monday. Before that offer, Northrop and Grumman had discussed a buyout worth about $1.7 billion.

Northrop's latest offer could set off a bidding contest that Martin Marietta has said it wants to avoid.

Northrop said it believes the agreement between Grumman and Martin Marietta is illegal, claiming that Grumman directors have an obligation to seek the highest possible price.

A combined Northrop and Grumman would have the "staying power necessary to compete in this new defense environment, thereby enabling the firm to better retain critical defense industrial skills and jobs," said Northrop Chairman Kent Kresa.

Martin Marietta officials would not comment on whether they planned to increase their bid. The company said the Northrop offer "degrades the entire character of the rational consolidation taking place within" the defense industry.

Los Angeles-based Northrop builds aircraft, including the B-2 stealth bomber. Martin Marietta, based in Bethesda, Md., makes rockets, including the Titan.

The defense industry has been under pressure to shrink as the Pentagon cuts back on spending. Companies such as Northrop and Martin Marietta have been trying to take advantage of the trend by expanding while others have retrenched and sold off parts of themselves.

Like the Martin Marietta offer, Northrop's bid would pay shareholders cash for their shares. Northrop said it has arranged loans worth $2.8 billion from banks for its offer.

Martin Marietta has been the most aggressive buyer of other defense businesses, buying General Electric's aerospace business in April and agreeing to buy General Dynamics' space launch division in December.

Northrop's stock finished 62½ cents higher Thursday at $41.25 and Martin Marietta rose 50 cents to $46.50 on the New York Stock Exchange.

U.S. bank eyes its largest loan to Russian oil

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Export-Import Bank said Thursday it would finance a $245 million loan to the Russian oil industry, its biggest loan to Russia and the first under a $2 billion program to promote oil and natural gas production.

The loan would be made to Permneft, a state-owned company in the district of Perm on the eastern slope of the Ural Mountains. The U.S. government bank would guarantee the five-year loan from a private bank, which has not been selected. The Russians would use the money to buy $271 million worth of equipment from U.S. suppliers.

The Ex-Im Bank's main function is to finance exports of American industrial goods.

A revival of Russian oil production would give the United States, Japan and other major users an important source of oil imports outside the Middle East.

Russia has been the world's biggest producer of oil, the major earner of the hard currency it needs to buy Western goods and keep up with its debt payments. Production has dropped sharply in recent years, partly because of poor equipment.

"We are aggressively assisting our suppliers export to Russia and invigorating our Oil and Gas Framework Agreement," Kenneth D. Brody, the bank's president, said in a statement, referring to the $2 billion program. "The stronger the Russian economy becomes, the better it can carry out economic and political reforms."

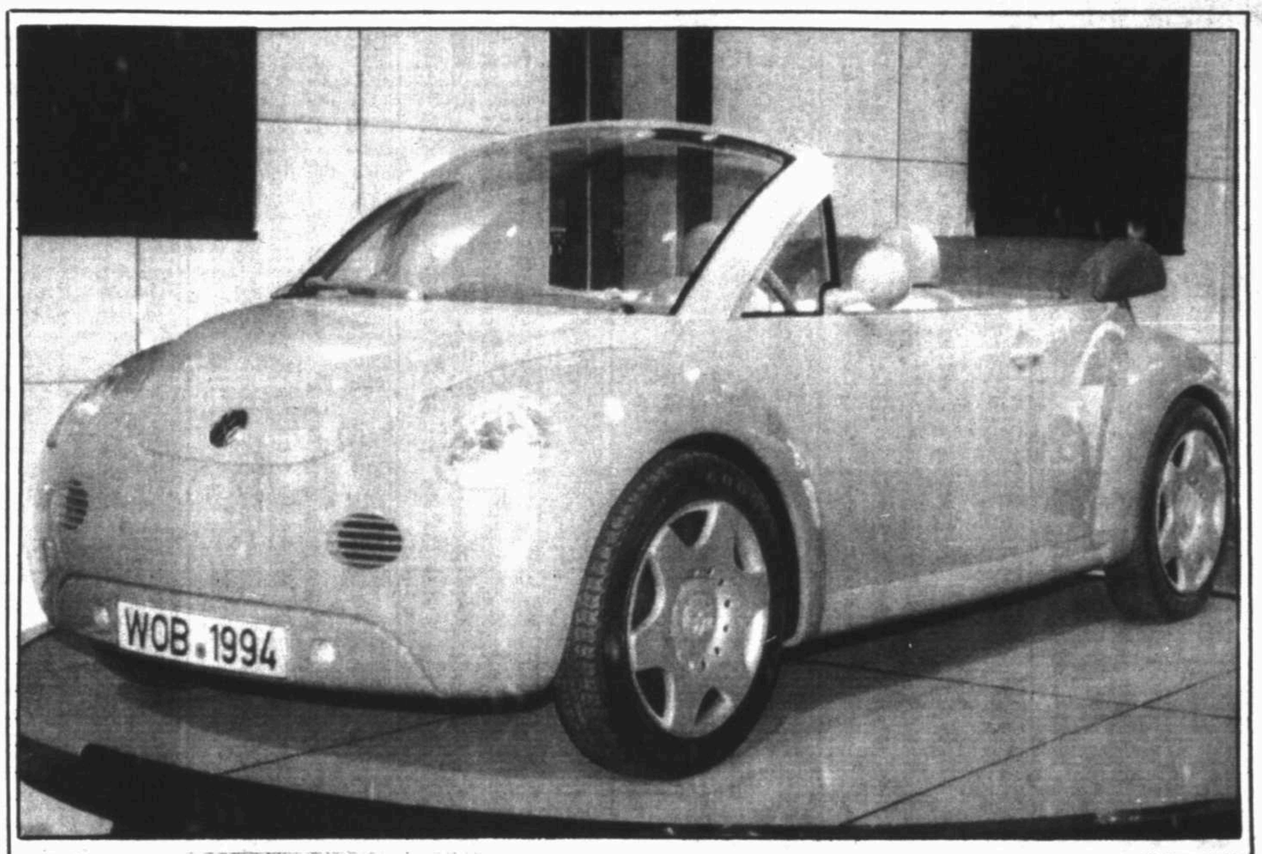

One bank official said $2 billion was only a rough estimate of the total that could be lent.

The Ex-Im Bank is notifying Congress, as required for loans over $100 million. Such loans also are subject to approval by a government advisory council on international financial policy.

The Ex-Im Bank is planning to have the loan made in two parts, the second after the first has been evaluated. Each part is to be repaid in five years. Russia must deposit proceeds from oil exports in a special escrow account to assure repayment.

The first Russian purchase will be $40.3 million worth of refinery equipment from Ventech Engineers in Pasadena, Texas, and $33 million for oil pumping equipment from REDSA of Bartlesville, Okla.

Exim has arranged 16 loans so far to Russia, worth about $400 million.

Savings and loans rake in, instead of hemorrhaging, billions

WASHINGTON (AP) — Profits of savings and loans slipped slightly last year — $5 billion vs. $5.1 billion the year before — but it was a far cry from the industry's bad old days of multi-billion-dollar losses.

It was the third consecutive year of profits for the industry after four years — from 1987 through 1990 — that saw it hemorrhage more than $30 billion.

The 1,669 institutions that have managed to survive the S&L crisis earned profits of $1.19 billion in the final three months of last year, an improvement from the $1.05 billion earned in the fourth quarter of 1992, the Office of Thrift Supervision said Thursday.

Although the full-year earnings declined from 1992, they were roughly equivalent because the latest year's profits came from a smaller industry.

The return on assets — a standard measure of profitability — was 0.65 percent for both years, about half the return on assets experienced by commercial banks last year.

Robert Davis, chief economist of the Savings & Community Bankers of America, said the return for S&Ls was lower than for banks because S&Ls were left with a bigger overhang of problem loans from the 1980s.

He said the stability in the return for S&Ls masked a dramatic improvement in the industry's financial strength and ability to weather future problems.

At the end of 1993, problem assets such as delinquent loans and repossessed real estate totaled $17 billion, down from $25 billion a year before.

And the industry continued to build its capital, which acts as a cushion against future losses. It was 7.1 percent of assets at the end of 1993, up from 6.4 percent a year earlier.

"Even though their earnings are the same, their balance sheets are improving," Davis said.

Ninety-nine percent of S&Ls are at least adequately capitalized, the thrift office said. It said 101 institutions were still considered to be problems, down from 203 a year earlier.

Davis predicted the industry's earnings will continue to improve as it closes the books on more and more of its problem loans.

However, economist Warren Heller of Veribanc Inc. in Wakefield, Mass., said earnings probably would erode.

Much of the profitability of the past two years has been driven by the unusually wide gap between short-term interest rates on deposits and long-term interest rates on loans.

That gap already has started to narrow and will continue to close this year, although not dramatically, Heller said.

"I think institutions can weather mildly rising rates ... but I just don't see any mechanism by which they're going to be able to earn at the same rate as they have the last two years," he said.

Thursday's report did not include the 63 failed S&Ls that are under the control of the Resolution Trust Corp., the government's S&L cleanup agency.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Bond-holding mutual funds carry slight risk

By Bill Doyle

Q: My 82-year-old widowed mother owns her home and 80 acres of land, which she will never sell. She has no debts. Her Social Security benefits are only $780 per month.

Doyle

Dad left her with $107,000 in certificates of deposit. She asked for my help and I am trying to do the best I can for her, without putting her savings at risk.

Last March, we put $15,000 in a high-quality bond mutual fund and $10,000 in a short-term bond mutual fund. $70,000 of her CDs will mature next month. I'd hate to see her put that money back into low-interest CDs.

Can you recommend a way to increase her monthly income with minimum risk?

A: It would be difficult to find a method better than the one you have already started using — mutual funds investing in bonds. Most such funds provide higher yields than CDs.

Of course, there is risk in bond funds. If interest rates rise, the prices of previously issued bonds fall, taking the share values of mutual funds holding bonds lower.

However, bonds due to mature in just a few years and funds holding short-term bonds do not fluctuate very much. That's because bonds are paid off at face value when they mature.

By concentrating her investments in short-term bond funds, your mother should see a reasonable increase in her income.

She would get even more income from a fund investing in long-term bonds. But, along with the bonds they hold, the share prices of those funds are subject to bigger price changes. Thus the risk would be greater.

Q: I set up gift-to-minors accounts for my two granddaughters, ages 4 and 6, in a tax-free mutual fund. My reasoning was that the dividends would not be added to their parents' tax base. Each girl probably will receive more than $1,200 in dividends per year.

Did I do the right thing? Or should I move these accounts to a more aggressive mutual fund?

A: The short answers are "No" and "Yes."

I suspect you think taxable dividends are counted as parental income, thereby possibly moving the parents into a higher income tax bracket.

Not so! The percentage rate at which tax — if any — is levied depends on each child's taxable income. Unless your granddaughters have large amounts rolling in from other sources, they are in the lowest — 15 percent — bracket.

Because the type of mutual fund in which you invested for the girls holds municipal bonds, which pay tax-free interest, the fund's dividends are not subject to income tax. But the yields of municipal bonds and funds holding "munis" are lower than those that can be found elsewhere, making such investments suitable only for people in tax brackets of 28 percent and higher.

Switch those investments to a growth mutual fund, which has increase in share value as its investment objective. Over the long haul, growth funds have performed far better than tax-free funds.

Q: We have invested in a variety of mutual funds through a financial planner, who also has put us in two different "timing services." One charges 2 percent a year, the other 1.75 percent. The planner feels strongly that, by transferring our investments from one fund to another, these services will help prevent losses if there is a problem in the stock market.

In our readings and discussions with friends, we have heard questions about whether such services are necessary. What is your opinion?

A: Those services are generally an expensive waste of your money.

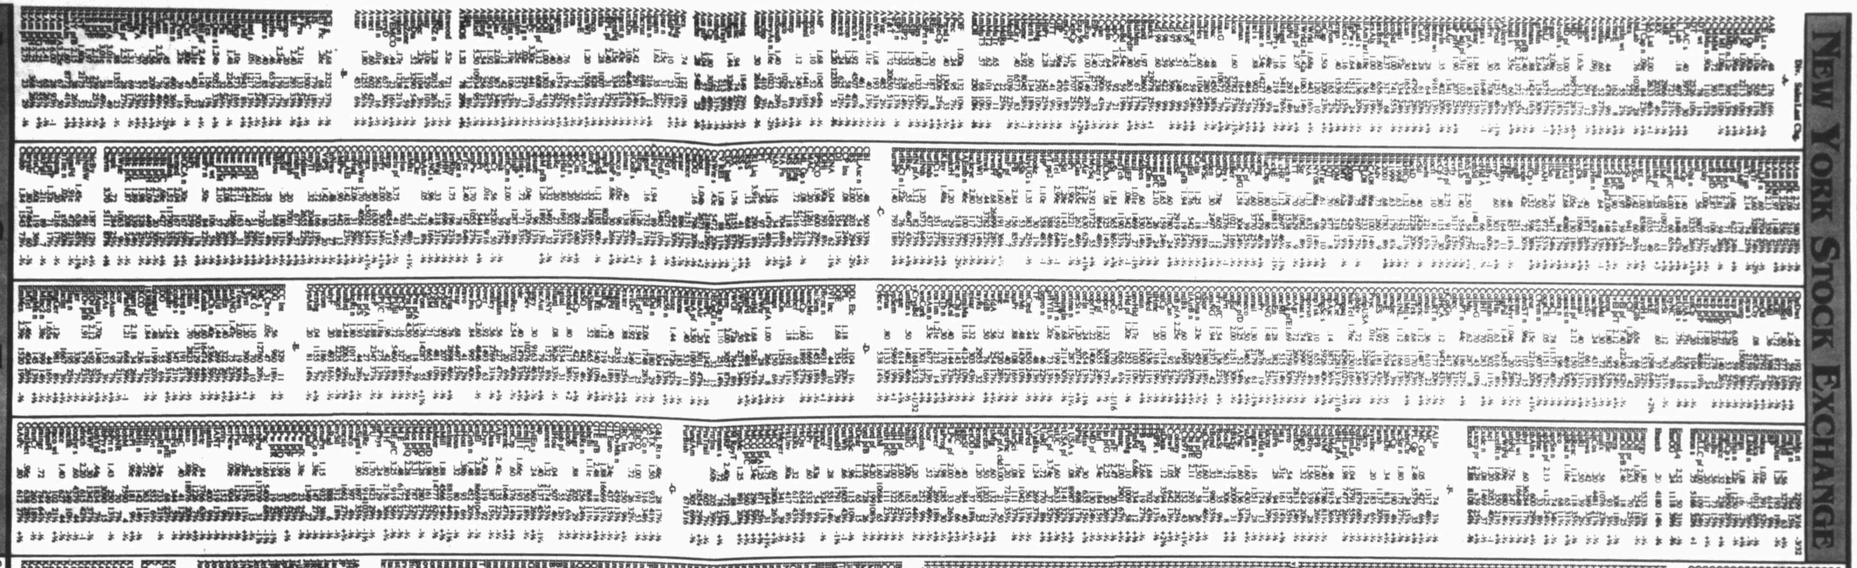

A timer is supposed to move you in and out of the right investments at the right times. But that's what mutual fund management gets paid for.

Besides that ongoing charge, you paid a commission load when you bought fund shares. The planner undoubtedly gets a fee as well.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?

Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:

1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.
2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.
3) Once you've entered the numerical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key (*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.
4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
- You may request a quote, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options.
- You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key (*).

Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
- You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Daly carves out lead in Honda

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

FORT LAUDERDALE, Fla. — John Daly, returning to the PGA Tour after a four-month suspension, shot a 2-under-par 69 today in the first round of the Honda Classic.

Daly birdied two of the last three holes on the Weston Hills Country Club course and finished two strokes off the early lead.

"It feels great to be back," he said. "It seems like it's been forever since I played. After being out so long, I had no idea what to expect. I didn't expect to hit it as well as I did."

With half the field still out, Masters champion Bernhard Langer and Brandel Chamblee shared the lead with 67s.

PGA Seniors

SAN ANTONIO — J.C. Snead of Hot Springs, Va., begins his title defense of the $650,000 Vantage at The Dominion PGA seniors golf tournament today.

Snead won last year's event, his first ever on the Senior Tour, with a 2-under-par 214 at the 6,814-yard, par-72 course at the Dominion Country Club.

The 53-year-old Snead, the nephew of the legendary Sam Snead, heads a field of 78 golfers competing for the $97,500 first prize. Snead is currently No. 10 on the Senior Tour money list.

Also competing is Rocky Thompson of Toco, Texas. Thompson, who captured the GTE Suncoast Classic Feb. 13, is third on the money list. Jim Colbert of Las Vegas, Nev., stands at No. 4 and Tom Wargo of Centralia, Ill., comes in fifth. George Archer of Honolulu, who won the Chrysler Cup Feb. 27, is sixth. Mike Hill of Brooklyn, Mich., is No. 7.

Gary Player of Alaqua, Fla., who finished last year in a tie for the runner-up spot with Bobb Nichols of Fort Pierce, Fla. is also playing. Both golfers shot a 215 last year.

Two-time champion Lee Trevino of Jupiter Island, Fla., who won in 1991 and 1992, also is competing. Trevino won the Royal Caribbean Classic Feb. 6.

Baleares Open

PALMA DE MALLORCA, Spain — England's Barry Lane fired an 8-under-par 64 to take a three-stroke lead after the first round of the Baleares Open.

Jim Payne of England and Australia's Mike Clayton were tied for seacond.

Five players were four strokes back with 68s on the 6,500-yard Son Vida Golf Club course — Michel Besanceney of France, Richard Boxall of England, Robert Karlsson of Sweden, Wayne Webster of South Africa, and Spain's Santiago Luna.

Spain's Seve Ballesteros, who hasn't won a tournament in two years, shot a 6-over-par 78. Ballesteros is attempting to recover from nagging back problems that made the 1993 season the worst of his career.

Sullivan tries for first Winston win

■ Purolator 500

HAMPTON, Ga. (AP) — Danny Sullivan admits the learning curve seems almost like an endless loop as he tries to earn his first Winston Cup stock car start in this Sunday's Purolator 500.

"My goals ? Right now, I just want to qualify for the race," said Sullivan, whose longtime Indy-car career is at least in hiatus, if not over, after losing his ride with Galles Racing in January.

Sullivan, who turned 44 on Wednesday, is trying to make the difficult transition from 1,600-pound, open-wheel, open-cockpit Indy cars, to the 3,500-pound NASCAR sedans.

The plan was to race up to five times this season, then run the full schedule in 1995 as a rookie of the year contender.

Already, the initial plan has had to be altered, with Sullivan failing to make the field for the race two weeks ago at Rockingham, N.C., which was to be his Winston Cup debut.

The former Indianapolis 500 winner and Indy-car PPG Cup champion then chose to skip last Sunday's race on the short track at Richmond, Va., and make his debut on the 1.522-mile oval at Atlanta Motor Speedway.

One reason is his experience on the track, where he debuted in an Indy car in 1982, finishing an impressive third.

"I haven't been here since then," Sullivan said after testing on the Atlanta track last week. "This place certainly has changed for the better. I remember that I didn't think I was going to qualify until I got some advice from Al Unser.

"Gordon Johncock and Rick Mears had a great race and I managed to hang on for third. I've love to do that in my Winston Cup debut. I'd be happy with that. Every racer's dream is to win, but I've got to take it one step at a time."

Just making Winston Cup fields is a tough enough task these days, with nine teams failing to make the lineup last week at Richmond.

"The biggest problem in Winston Cup racing right now is that there are almost too many good cars for the show," Sullivan said. "This is a big learning curve.

"We were runing 200 (mph) here in 1982 in Indy cars, but the Winston Cup cars moved around a lot. If an Indy car moved around as much as these do, you'd be in the fence. That's just the nature of the beast.

"So far," he added, "these cars have been a fairly big adjustment because they don't stop. The cars handle well, but they are really hard to stop."

Rockingham wasn't a total loss, as far as Sullivan is concerned.

"We learned so much there that it's just unbelieveable," he said. "But we just didn't have everything ready in time."

Sullivan, driving a Pontiac Grand Prix, will get his opportuity to show his current state of readiness on Friday when practice and qualifying begin for Sunday's 500-mile race.

WAC remains undecided on expansion

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — Athletic directors from the Western Athletic Conference ended two days of meetings here without a recommendation to the league's presidents about possible expansion of the 10-team WAC.

Nevada-Las Vegas and Tulsa are the latest rumored additions if the WAC goes to 12 teams. The media have speculated on such schools as Texas Christian, Houston, Rice, Southern Methodist, San Jose State, Nevada-Reno, Tulane, Memphis State, Louisville and Cincinnati.

Commissioner Joe Kearney said Wednesday the athletic directors are to meet with their respective presidents between now and WAC meetings in Tucson, Ariz., at the end of April.

"The first issue is whether the presidents want to expand," Kearney said. "Second, there has to be a timetable set. Then, the third thing to do is who they want to talk to."

He said the head of the WAC Presidents Council, Hawaii President Kenneth Mortimer, will be the only one to comment publicly on any official action.

"Expansion was discussed, but anything on expansion has to come from Dr. Mortimer," said University of New Mexico Athletic Director Rudy Davalos.

Kearney said athletic directors discussed a number of scenarios with different schools, "but we didn't have any kind of recommendation."

Kearney, who is retiring June 30, has hinted the men's and women's basketball tournaments will return to Delta Center in Salt Lake City in 1995. The WAC is in the second year of a two-year contract with Delta Center, with an option year in the deal.

Former NFL player arrested after shooting

DALLAS (AP) — Former NFL wide receiver James Scott was charged with aggravated assault today for the shooting of a motorist during a rush-hour confrontation on a busy freeway, police said.

Scott, who played for the Chicago Bears from 1976-82, was arrested Wednesday at the Dallas-Fort Worth International Airport after he abandoned his car and hitched a ride to the airport to catch a flight to San Francisco, police said.

Police said Scott fired two shots at Jerry Durand, who was driving alongside him on Interstate 635 during morning rush hour Wednesday. Durand's car hit Scott's car shortly thereafter, police said.

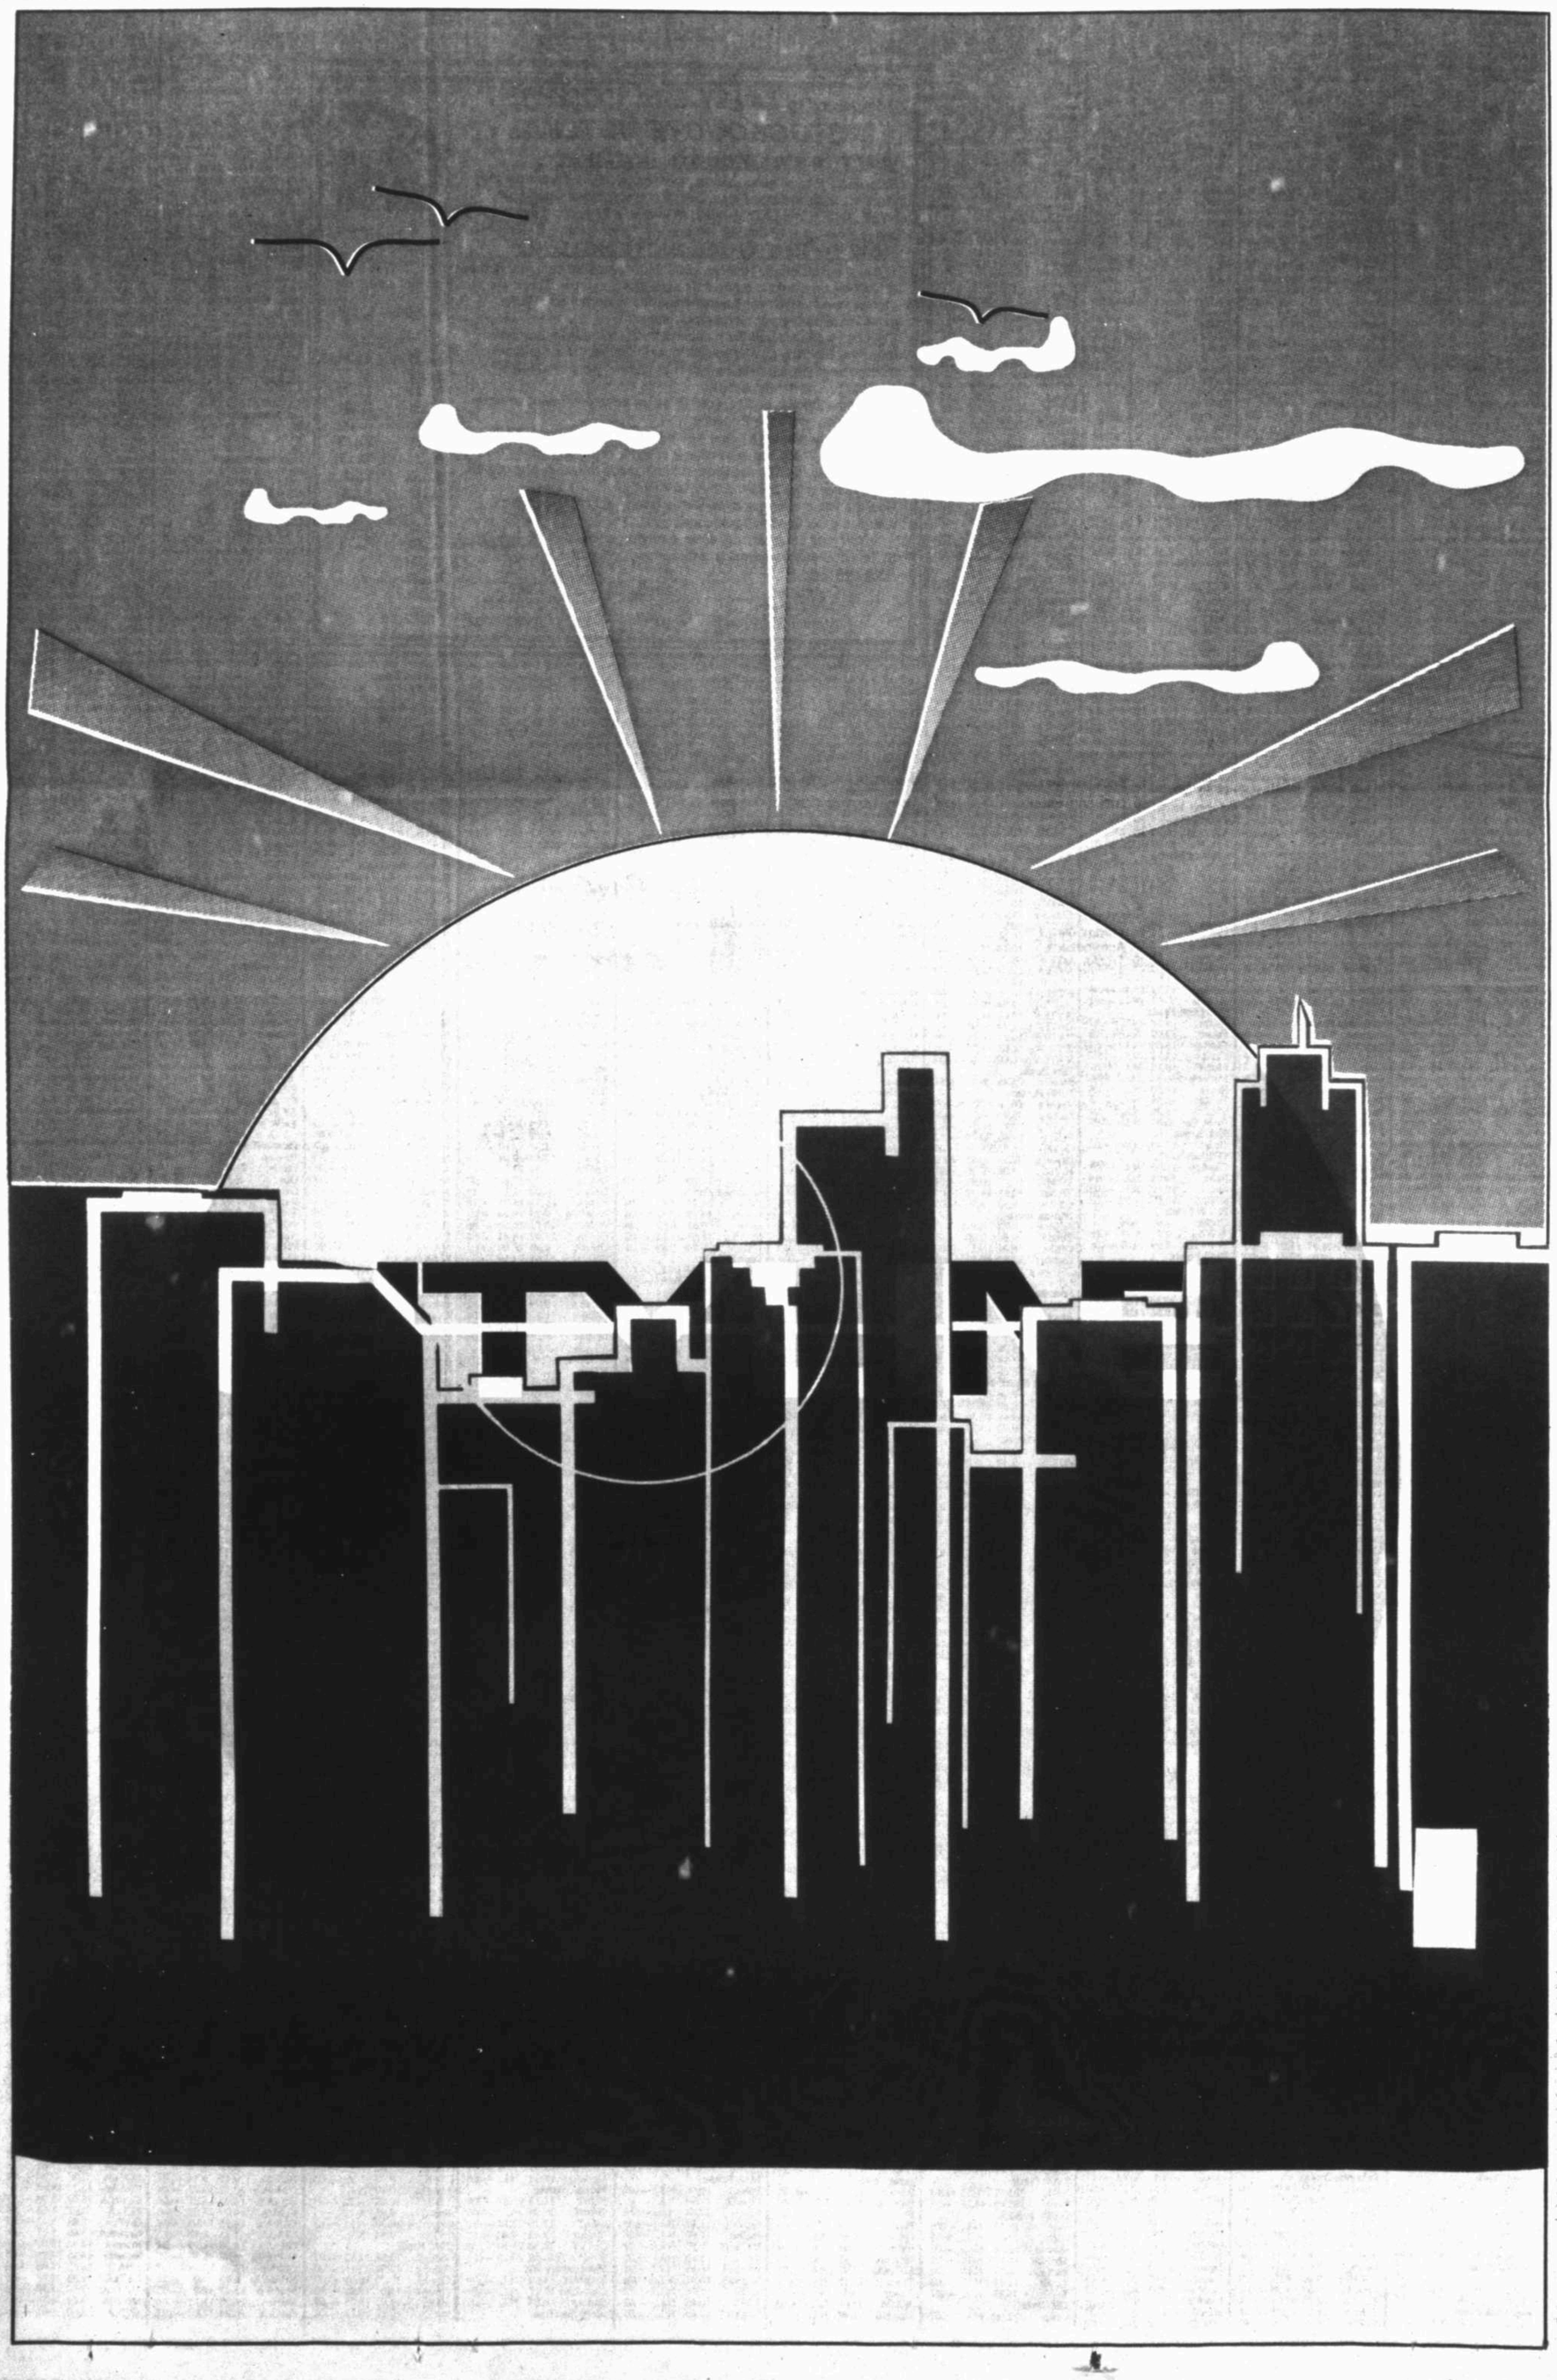

Durand, 42, suffered a gunshot wound to the abdomen and was in fair condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital. Scott said he began shooting because he feared for his life.

"He was carrying on, running out in front of me and doing all kinds of movements in the car and giving me the finger," said Scott, who lives in far northeast Dallas. "Then he tried to stop and jam on his brakes in front of me. When I tried to go around him, that's when he hit me."

Scott was also wanted on a 1991 warrant from Gregg County on cocaine possession charges.

In 1989, officers said they stopped him on a traffic violation near Tyler and found 30 grams of cocaine and a pistol in his car.

WEEKLY & MONTHLY INCOME

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has an opening on one of its few "special allowance" routes. This larger route receives a $50 check each Friday, in addition to the regular monthly route profits. The route is Between Cottonflat and Rankin Hwy.

As with all newspaper distributorships this opportunity requires a 7 day a week commitment (when you go out of town you must arrange a substitute for yourself) and it is early morning work.

Newspaper distributorships provide great supplemental income for housewives/mothers, senior citizens, college students or any other adult wanting to "moonlight".
