Pictures Offer Evidence Man Can Land On Moon

By RALPH DIGHTON
Associated Press Science Writer

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — Historic pictures taken by Ranger 7 are pretty good evidence men can land on the moon without much change required for spaceships now being designed.

That's the consensus of a board of scientists who Friday night released 10 of the 4,316 sensational photographs Ranger 7 snapped in the final 16 minutes and 40 seconds before it crashed on the moon at 8:25 a.m. (EST) Friday morning.

The first close-up pictures ever taken of the moon — termed 1,000 times better than any made heretofore from spacecraft or with earth telescopes—showed that even its vast, apparently smooth "seas" are pocked with craters, some as small as dishpans.

There may be some dust on the moon, in layers up to a foot thick, but not deep enough to bury a landing vehicle, the scientists concluded. And, underneath the dust, evidence indicates, is a hard primary layer. Whether it would support the weight of a large manned spaceship cannot be determined from photographs alone.

To these conclusions announced after several hours study Friday night, additional evaluations will be added today at a presidential press conference.

Dr. William H. Pickering, director of Jet Propulsion Laboratory which made Ranger 7 and released the first pictures, left late Friday to attend the White House session.

President Johnson earlier telephoned congratulations to Pickering and others at the laboratory, which was much criticized in recent months for six straight failures in the $200 million Ranger moon research program.

At Friday's news conference where slides of the historic moon pictures were shown, Dr. Gerard Kuiper, of the Lunar and Planetary Laboratory of the University of Arizona, said the most significant thing about them is that they reveal no unanticipated problems to be met in the design of moon landing craft.

At least part of the area photographed by Ranger 7 — a northern extension of the Sea of Clouds southwest of the center of the face of the moon — would be unsuitable for landing because of the large number of small craters, Kuiper said.

"If you want to land a ship, you want to do it with as little damage as possible," he said. "So you pick an area where the ship is not likely to tip over or have to land on a litter of debris."

The thousands of tiny pock marks, he said, seemed to cluster at some distance from large primary craters such as Copernicus, about 200 miles north of the target zone.

This indicates the big craters were created by meteors and meteorites which exploded on impact and threw out fragments of many sizes, Kuiper explained.

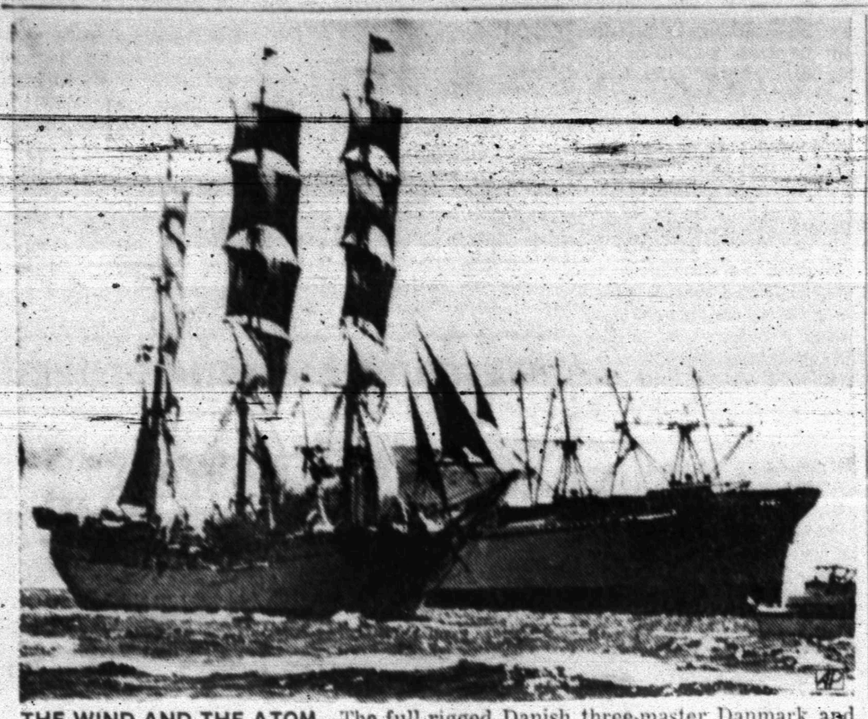

Between the big primary craters and the clusters of secondary craters around them, however, are relatively "clean" areas which could be good landing sites, he said.

Dr. Eugene Shoemaker of the U.S. Geological Survey at Flagstaff, Ariz., another of the five experts who studied Ranger 7's photographs, suggested that future moon probes study the texture of the surface in the centers of large craters.

Shoemaker was asked if he would be afraid to step out of a landing craft onto the kind of surface shown in the photographs. He answered "I wouldn't be very worried."

He said, however, there was no way to check the load-bearing strength of the moon's crust from photographs alone.

The photographs, taken from 1,300 miles out down to 1,000 feet, seemed to resolve an old controversy over whether dust on the moon is thick enough to swallow a landing craft.

'GOOD PICTURES' OF MOON OBTAINED—Harris M. Schurmeier, project manager of Ranger 7, gives an OK sign as he tells a news conference in Pasadena, Calif., that "good pictures" of the moon were received just before the spacecraft landed on the Sea of Clouds. Schurmeier said Ranger 7 crashed 8 to 10 miles from the precise target point circled on an enlarged photo of the moon. (AP Wirephoto).

Education Act Extended

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate passed today a three-year extension of the National Defense Education Act including expanded student and school aid programs.

Action was taken by voice vote with only eight senators present.

Sen. Barry Goldwater of Arizona, the Republican presidential nominee, announced his opposition to the measure in a section of the committee report, but he is vacationing in California.

The bill is on President Johnson's "must" list for the 1964 session.

Among other things, the bill would extend for two years the program of federal grants to schools crowded because of nearby federal installations.

'Glandless' Cotton Seen

WASHINGTON (AP) — Government scientists report progress on research that would greatly increase the cotton crop's importance as a food crop.

This research by the Agriculture Department seeks to develop what the scientists call a glandless cotton. At present, cottonseed contains a substance, gossypol, that reduces the use of cottonseed products in foods and feeds.

The glandless cotton would not contain this substance.

"With glandless cotton, containing no gossypol, cottonseed oil would not require extra processing and could become more competitive with other edible oils," the departmeat said.

The major edible oils used for food are soybean and peanut oils. The department said mea processed from glandless cottonseed might become an important source of human nutrition, particularly in areas where a protein shortage exists.

Man Injured In Saturday Mishap

Frank Garcia of Rt. 3 Snyder received a shattered leg and severe cuts Saturday shortly after noon in a one - car mishap.

Garcia was alone in a 1959 Chevrolet headed west on Thirty-seventh Street when his car struck a guard post and crashed over into a water-and-mud-filled culvert. The car came to rest on its side, pinning Garcia under the car.

He was taken to Cogdell Hospital by Bell - Seale Ambulance Service where he was entered for examination and treatment.

Soviet, Red China Swap More Insults

TOKYO (AP) — A ban-the-bomb conference here has exploded into a war of words, with Soviet and Red Chinese factions grappling for control of the world peace movement.

The two Communist giants called rival news conferences Friday and accused each other of torpedoing the 10th International Ban-The-Bomb Conference.

The Soviet bloc delegation, representatives from 28 other countries and three other front organizations, bolted from the meeting Friday after the Chinese froze the Russians out of a share in the leadership.

Some African and Asian delegations backed Soviet charges that the Chinese had packed the conference leadership.

Soviet delegation leader Georgy Zhukov, a top propagandist, said at a three-hour news conference that responsibility for the walkout was that of the Red Chinese, who turned it into "an arena for an unbridled slanderous campaign against the Soviet Union."

Chinese delegate Tan Ming-chao, in a separate lengthy meeting with the press, replied that Zhukov was guilty of "hypocrisy" and "double-faced tactics."

Dr. Homer A. Jack of New York City, an executive of the Committee for a Sane Nuclear Policy (SANE), attended the Russian news conference and later told newsmen: "We are trying to get the anti-nuclear movement back to being a humanitarian one rather than ideological."

'7' Most Popular Ranger In Years

By CHARLES MAHER

PASADENA, Calif. (AP) — The last Ranger to draw such raves for his television heroics was the Lone Raiger.

And, in a way, the Ranger 7 spacecraft is lso a Lone Ranger — the only one so far in the U.S. moonshot series to accomplish its mission.

The Jet Propulsion Laboratory of the California Institute of Technology manages the Ranger program for the federal government and up to now it's been a job not unlike managing the New York Mets.

But success finally caught up with the laboratory Friday.

Project employes, assembled in an auditorium, burst into applause when it was announced by loudspeaker that Ranger 7 had full video power as it approached the moon.

There was another roar when the announcer said: "Twelve minutes from impact. Excellent video signals continue."

The prospect of success went up as the count went down.

"Ten minutes. No interruption of excellent video signals. All cameras appear to be functioning.

Seven minutes. All cameras continue to send excellent signals.

"Five minutes from impact. There are no abnormalities.

"Three minutes. No trouble.

"Two minutes. All systems operating. Preliminary analysis shows pictures being received."

That brought another cheer.

"One minute to impact. We have pictures all the way.

"Ten seconds to impact. Excellent. Excellent. Signals to the end.

"Impact!"

Dr. William H. Pickering, the laboratory director, received a standing ovation when he walked to the auditorium stage.

(After the failure of Ranger 6, there was a rumor that the government might not fire too many more Rangers before it fired Pickering.)

There was more applause, a minute of it without interruption at one point, after a half dozen of the Ranger's pictures were shown at a news conference Friday night.

And there were congratulatory messages from President Johnson, from Russian scientists and from many others.

Whether the U.S. taxpayer's delight will be undiminished when he sees the bill may be something else again.

The entire Ranger program, nine shots, will cost about $260 million. Today the nation has 4,000 photographs to show for it.

That's about $50,000 per photograph.

Witness Weds Defendant

PITTSBURGH, Pa. (AP) — The defendant married the prosecution's chief witness in judge's chambers Friday.

Judge Ralph C. Smith sentenced Albert D. Sayles, 24, of nearby McKeesport to six to 12 months in jail on charges of carrying a concealed weapon and assault and battery. He was accused of striking his girl friend, Ann Wallace, 22, of Pittsburgh.

No sooner had the judge passed sentence than Sayles whipped out some papers.

"I've got a license here to marry the girl I love," he said. "Ann has written to me all the time I've been in jail awaiting trial and we both want to marry."

Typhoon Helen Hits Yakushima Island

TOKYO (AP) — Typhoon Helen, packing maximum center winds of 99 miles per hour, hit Yakushima Island, 50 miles south of Japan's southernmost Kyushu Island, tonight.

The Central Meteorological Agency said there were no immediate reports of casualties or damage.

The agency said Helen, the first typhoon to hit Japan this year, was heading northwest at 18 miles an hour. High waves battered the coast of southern Kyushu as it came within the storm radius.

Hootenanny Plans All Set

Everything is ready for the big free Hootenanny Monday evening, according to Jay Thompson and Joe Williamson, producers of the show.

The Hootenanny, which is under the sponsorship of the Merchants Committee of the Snyder Chamber of Commerce, will begin at 8 p.m. in Towle Park.

Out-of-town performers who are scheduled to appear include Johnny Moore, well - known Nashville and Sims recording artist, J. L. Jones, fiddle-playing star of the old Slim Willet TV series, and the Rowland Trio of Gospel singers. (See pictures on page 9.)

Moore will present several of his famous numbers including "Fifteen Acres of Peanut Land" and "Cotton Pickin' Millionaire." "Peanut Land" is a national hit, and has been picked up by Frankie Miller, and this week is number 18 on the national charts.

His "Millionarie" song is a song about Billie Sol Estes, and is one of the top 15 fastest moving records on the market today.

The handsome 31 - year - old Moore's records are produced by Russell Sims in Nashville, Tenn. Sims is considered one of the top producers in Nashville.

J. L. Jones is billed as the "Texas Top Fiddler." For many years he appeared on the Big State Jamboree, and later on the Slim Willet Show. He has also appeared all over the country, and has made many recordings.

Jones' composition of "Blue Eagle" is considered a classic for the fiddle. His brother, Rex, is also a top musician and will be on the Hootenanny playing the bass fiddle.

Jones, who is tall, slim, and 33 years old, has been a master of the fiddle since he was 8 years old.

The Rowland Trio is well known to most of the major singing conventions in the state of Texas, appearing as they do all over the state. The group has recorded four songs, including "If You Believe" and "It's So Wonderful."

The Rowland Trio has been singing together for about five years. They have appeared on numerous TV and radio shows on their state-wide tours.

Their appearance at the Hootenanny will be the first time the group has visited Snyder.

Also on the Hootenanny will be the Melody Ramblers, a six-piece Western band, and two teen-age groups of musicians, the Jaguars and the Scorpions.

The Hootenanny will also feature Joe Williamson and Dr. John Hamblin with their numbers which are popular with all Snyderites.

Williamson and Thompson will be masters of ceremonies.

Mrs. Johnson Tells Plans For Pre-Convention Tour

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson announced Saturday a preconvention three-state Western tour that will include her dedication of a billion dollar Flaming Gorge Dam, on the Green River along the Utah-Wyoming border.

On her Aug. 14-17 journey, the First Lady plans also to take a look at national parks, Indian reservations, and the beautiful natural wilderness near the dam, and in Montana as well.

The White House said she will stay at Jackson Lake Lodge, Wyo., in the Grand Tetons National Park, during her visit.

The trip was described by her press secretary, Elizabeth Carpenter, as a rugged but beautiful one. She said it probably will be the first time that a First Lady has made such a tour on her own.

Mrs. Johnson hopes to draw attention to the scenic beauties of the areas and national park recreation facilities there.

The three states happen to be ones that voted Republican in the 1960 presidential election, and where Democratic U. S. senators are making a bid for re-election this November.

Asked if there was any political significance to the journey, Mrs. Carpenter replied, "Land and people are part of the life of this country, and she's interested in both."

The big Flaming Gorge Dam, a major national conservation project which will provide recreation, conservation and power sources, is part of an upper Colorado River storage project. Eventually, it is expected to provide a lake extending upstream for 91 miles, to a point near the city of Green River, Wyo.

Mrs. Johnson will take part in dedication ceremonies, both on the Utah and Wyoming sides of the dam. She is expected to visit Indians in the area of Billings, Mont., and probably will take a ride on the rapids-filled Green River, a popular tourist attraction in the wilderness area.

No details of Mrs. Johnson's itinerary were released immediately by the White House. But it was announced she would travel to the area by commercial airline, and would pay her own way on the trip.

She will be accompanied by Secretary of the Interior Stewart L. Udall, who invited her to dedicate the dam in Utah, and to take part in ceremonies at the Flaming Gorge recreation area and lake in Wyoming.

PLAN IRELAND TRIP—Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Darby, Jr., plan to leave Monday as part of a group of 21 who are going to Belfast, Ireland, to work in a Church of Christ gospel meeting sponsored by the Hialeah, Fla. church. The Darby's children, who will also make the trip, are Darla, Kimberly, B. F. III, and Theresa. The family will visit the World's Fair on their way to Belfast, and will return via Nassau and Miami, returning to Snyder Sept. 2. Donald Wright, minister at Gail, will also be in the group.

Dear Abby...

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I am 17. I copied something out of your book, DEAR TEENAGER, and typed it up and I carry it with me. It has helped me a lot. Two of my girl friends did the same thing. You would be doing many girls a big favor if you would print it in your column. So many girls are having trouble in this line. Thank you, Abby.

* * *

"Girls need to 'prove their love' through illicit sex relations like a moose needs a hatrack. Why not 'prove your love' by sticking your head in the oven and turning on the gas? Or play leap frog in the traffic? It's about as safe.

"Clear the cobwebs out of your head. Any fellow who asks you to 'prove your love' is trying to take you for the biggest, most gullible fool who ever walked. That 'proving' bit is one of the oldest and rottenest lines ever invented! Does he love you? It doesn't sound like it. Someone who loves you wants whatever is best for you. But now figure it out. He wants you to:

Commit an immoral act. . .
Surrender your virtue. . .
Throw away your self - respect. . .
Risk the loss of your precious reputation. . .
And risk getting into trouble. . .

"Does that sound as though he wants what's best for you? This is the laugh of the century. He wants what's best for him: he wants a thrill he can brag about at your expense. . . Love? Who's kidding whom?

"A guy who loves a girl would sooner cut off his right arm than hurt her. In my opinion, this self - serving so-and-so has proved that he doesn't love you. The predictable aftermath of 'proof' of this kind always finds Don Juan tiring of his sport. That's when he drops you, picks up his line, and goes casting elsewhere for bigger and equally silly fish.

"If he loves you, let him prove HIS love — by marching you to the ALTAR!"

DEAR ABBY: I have a friend who talks about himself all the time. He doesn't even listen when someone else is talking. He just waits for them to get through so he can talk. And he doesn't ever talk about anything except himself. Otherwise he is a nice person. He is intelligent, good - looking, and takes great pride in his clothes and grooming. He would be perfect if he overcame this fault. How can I tell him about it in a nice way?

GOOD FRIEND

DEAR FRIEND: Tell him he is practically perfect, but his I's" are too close together.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: At a neighborhood get - together this she-cat latched herself onto my husband. (She's married, too.) My husband didn't exactly push her away, but it was plain that she did the pursuing. Suddenly they both disappeared. It seems that she lured him into another room just to "talk." I know nothing went on, but I was miserable. When we got home I told him how hurt and humiliated I was. He said I was "narrow - minded" and that he couldn't very well have hurt her feelings by refusing to listen to her. Don't you think he owes me more than he owes her? This same feline is to be at another get - together we plan to attend. Please tell me what to do, or I might take matters into my own hands and wind up in jail. Thank you kindly.

HURT

DEAR HURT: Of course your husband "owes" you more than he owes her. But he knows that. He should have given her the straight arm instead of the soft shoulder. But if it happens again, I suggest the following simple, forthright statement: "I'M JEALOUS — so cut it out!"

JUDY MIXON, daughter of Mr. & Mrs. J. H. Mixon of Snyder, mixes solution in preparation for measuring enzymes. Judy, a student at Snyder High School, was among a group of outstanding U. S. high school students participating this summer in a National Science Foundation program at the University of California's Davis campus. Overseeing Judy's work in the biochemistry laboratory here is UCD biochemist Jack Preiss.

Select Students Probe Mysteries

DAVIS, Calif. — Thirty - one select high school students from across the U. S. have been probing the mysteries of genetics and microbiology for the past six weeks at the University of California's Davis campus.

Through lectures, laboratory research and field trips these science - bent students have been flexing their minds and venting their curiosity, thanks to a National Science Foundation - sponsored summer program here on the Davis campus. Those chosen were selected from 300 applicants, and they come from as far as Ohio and as near as Davis.

Aside from their work in lecture hall, laboratory and library, all have been enjoying the outdoor recreations that California fair weather encourages. The students have been living in campus residence halls.

Under the general direction of Davis microbiologist Ralph Kunkee and Ralph Weimberg of the Northern Utilization Research Laboratory, U. S. D. A., the students have spent their mornings at lectures in microbiology, bacteriology, biochemistry and biophysics, genetics, and physiological sciences. Most afternoons found them in laboratories peering into microscopes or pouring various liquids from beakers into flasks. Some studied the genetic characteristics of fruit flys, others puzzled over the mysteries of DNA, a basic substance of life itself.

None went begging for some scientific problem to solve or question to answer — or partially answer. All learned that research is the soul of science. During this their final week the students will gather in seminars to hear from each what they have learned.

Soon they return to their homes, and this fall to their schools — richer, it is hoped, for the brief brush they experienced here with advanced science.

Old Race Track Is Charred By Blaze

SAN BRUNO, Calif. (AP) — Tanforan, oldest race track in California, was a charred ruin today after a fire shot through the abandoned three - story grandstand and club house Friday.

Within minutes, the grandstand wall collapsed into the street, carrying telephone poles with it and disrupting service for hours.

The 64-year-old track on the San Francisco peninsula was used for racing the last time in 1963. Its 142 acres have been sold for $6.15 million for residential and commercial area development.

Cause of the blaze was under investigation.

Algeria Propaganda Moves On All Fronts

By MICHAEL GOLDSMITH

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — In a downtown Algiers bookstore, a window exhibit shows a grinning, top-hatted American capitalist, a smoking gun in each hand, squatting comfortably on the body of an African worker.

Down the street, an official exhibit shows pictures of Communist North Korea's "victorious struggle for freedom" in the Korean War. The government daily Le Peuple carries two photographs side by side to illustrate life in Korea: smiling girls, folk-dancing in the North, police breaking up a students' demonstration in the South.

A cartoon in the organ of the Algerian Labor Federation depicts a grim-faced Uncle Sam holding a six-shooter pointed straight at the reader.

These are all part of a propaganda campaign drummed day and night into the Algerian population through the government-controlled press, radio and other means.

It irritates American and other Western diplomats, without, however, making them fear an outright Communist takeover or a great spread of Red influence in Algeria's public opinion.

President Ahmed Ben Bella says his anticapitalist "Socialist revolution" is a purely Algerian product and will never succumb to Soviet domination. Nevertheless, Ben Bella's National Liberation Front — FLN — is the only ruling party in an Arab state to have established organic "brotherly ties" with the Soviet Communist party.

The Algerian Communist party has been dissolved and its members were admitted individually into the FLN. The FLN is being reorganized throughout Algeria on the lines of the ruling parties in the Soviet bloc, complete with local cells, central committee and political bureau.

Although Ben Bella himself may disapprove of some aspects of Communist doctrine, some of his closest advisers are difficult to distinguish from ordinary Communists.

Mohamed Harbi, editor of the vitriolic pro-Communist weekly Revolution Africaine, writes some of Ben Bella's speeches and sets the anti-Western tone of the government propaganda machine. His influence is curbed only by the Islam-oriented and frankly anti-Communist views of Defense Minister Col. Houari Boumedienne and his staff officers.

Behind Harbi is a group of French Communist intellectuals known in Algiers political circles as "Les Affreux" — the frightful ones — after the name once given to armed European mercenaries in Katanga.

Three men include Serge Michel, once press chief of the Congo's Patrice Lumumba and now editor of Algiers' only evening paper, Alger Ce Soir.

Communist sympathizers control all the news available to the Algerian public through press or radio. The views of Ben Bella's fugitive opponents are suppressed. The Western viewpoint on world issues is ignored or misrepresented. French and other foreign newspapers are confiscated whenever they contain material regarded by the regime as critical or merely unenthusiastic.

Nevertheless, Western diplomats believe the propaganda machine has failed to build up any widespread anti-Western feeling among the Algerian population.

Bachir Boumaza, minister for economic affairs, is trying to take Ben Bella's economic policies along rigidly Communist lines. Western diplomats say Boumaza regards offers to help or guidance from the West as traps set by imperialist capitalists.

The diplomats believe that Ben Bella, who has little experience in economic matters, follows Boumaza's advice almost without question. They largely blame Boumaza for the nation's economic chaos and for the fact that its financial situation is in a state of crisis despite the massive aid poured in by France and many other nations of East and West.

A group of French businessmen with interests in Algeria recently asked Boumaza to outline his future policies toward them.

"But gentlemen," Boumaza replied with apparently feigned surprise, "didn't you realize that you have no future in this country?"

Orchard Is Giving Away Cherries

NEW CARLISLE, Ind. (AP) — Orchardman Charles Ackerman, giving away tons of cherries because of a market glut, watched crowds of pickers swarming over his acres. "People come with everything but the kitchen sink to carry them away," he said.

Ackerman still had about 100 tons of sour cherries on his 25 acres of trees when canning companies quit buying. He offered the cherries to the public, free for the picking, and estimated that about 10 tons went during the first 24 hours.

"I haven't lost any faith in the cherry industry," he said Friday. "It's just that everybody had a bumper crop."

However, he added, "we had planned to put out 40 or 50 more acres of cherry trees, but that was before the processors stopped buying cherries."

Ackerman's offer of "all the cherries you can pick," appeared in a newspaper Thursday.

Ackerman said cherry prices have been dropping steadily from a level of 15 cents a pound in 1944. He said he had been getting about 10 cents until this year but expects about 5 cents a pound for the 60 tons he delivered to processors before they stopped taking them

This is the first surplus problem he has had in several years, but giving away fruit is not new at Ackerman Orchards.

Ackerman's father was in a similar situation during the Depression. The problem then was not so much surplus fruit as a shortage of buying power. The elder Ackerman, unable to sell his peach crop, gave away 5,000 bushels in 1932.

There are no peaches at Ackerman Orchards now, but Ackerman is proud of his apple trees. He said it is still too early to tell how apple prices will go this year, but he hopes he won't have to give away apples also.

Road Studies Okayed For Four Towns

AUSTIN (AP) — Urban transportation studies, required by the 1962 federal - aid highway act, were authorized by the Highway Commission Friday for Abilene, Midland, Odessa and Texarkana.

The commission also directed state highway engineer D. C. Greer to proceed with a highway development study of the Bryan-College Station complex to establish the location and cost of a bypass on U.S. 290 around the area.

The commission said the urban transportation studies authorized set up the planning for all 22 Texas metropolitan areas.

The four studies are designed to develop a highway master plan, with information on routing, design and financing of freeways, expressways and arterial streets.

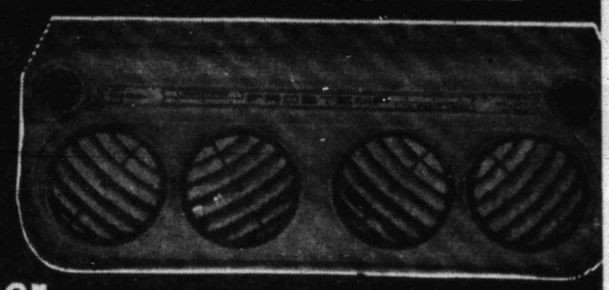

Such studies are required by the 1962 federal-aid highway act for all cities of 50,000 or more if they wish to continue participation in the federal highway program.

The commission authorized construction of a street, including curb and gutter, of U.S. 87 from Loop 218 and extending southeast 3,600 feet in Lamesa, and also extension of U.S. 87 from Loop 218 at Lamesa southeast to the Martin County line.

Heartwood of black walnut varies from light brown to deep chocolate. The sapwood is nearly white, but it is now common to darken it by steaming or staining.

Pittsburgh Not Giving Up Title

PITTSBURGH (AP) — Chicago people say their city is becoming the new steel capital.

They claim the westward movement has swept the greatest steel center out of these wrinkled Ohio Valley hills and dropped it out there on the flat prairie.

Don't believe it, Chicago.

It was a statistician who started the story. He added up some figures and made some comparisions.

But the people here know better. They consider the spirit, and they say the spirit isn't likely to leave these hills.

For it was in Pittsburgh that a young nation grew its muscles of steel.

Pittsburgh steel made by the old-timers was more than steel: it was sweat and blood and gloom and hope.

It was Pittsburgh iron that whizzed through the air at Gettysburg.

It was Pittsburgh steel that pushed railroads across the prairie. It was Pittsburgh steel that built so many of the great skyscrapers and bridges.

And it was mostly Pittsburgh steel that showed the kaiser, and Hitler, and some others a thing or two about industrial might.

You can make your Chicago steel for paper clips and can openers. You'll never make foot-and-a-half-thick armor for battleships, as Pittsburgh has.

Make your steel for beer cans and gaudy auto fenders. You'll never make the Empire State Building.

You'll make Chicago steel with pushbuttons, with white-coated technicians peering at dials and gauges. The production line will be machines.

In Pittsburgh, steel was made with shovels. It was made in thunder and fire, in a smoky brillance that glimmered off the rivers and filled the sulphur nights with sight and sound and smell.

It was made in weary, 16-hour days, by sweaty, grimy men putting down roots in a new world, by men who could speak but a few words of the English language.

That was the spirit that made Pittsburgh steel. It's a glory that cannot be erased, or stolen away.

Maybe, Chicago, the statistician will convince you that you are the new champion of steel. Perhaps, you will feel high and mighty.

If you do, you might — from time to time — slip off your crown of steel and read the inscription inside. It says:

"Made in Pittsburgh."

Believe Cigarette Started Hotel Fire

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A Cigarette left burning in a sixth floor room probably started an estimated $75,000 fire in the Sir Francis Drake Hotel, Fire Chief William Murray said.

More than 110 firemen from 24 companies confined the blaze to three rooms Thursday.

Seven persons suffered smoke inhalation.

School For Stewardesses To Train 900 Beauties In Year

By BOB HORTON

FORT WORTH (AP)—A cynic—or an optimist—might call it a high class school for brides.

American Airlines calls it the only residence college in the world for training stewardesses.

There's truth in either description.

This year the hotel like college will train 900 beauties as stewardesses.

The airline knows that within 26 months 85 per cent of the graduates will have given up their career in the sky for wedlock.

A stewardess must be single.

This high turnover is one reason the airline spent $1 million to build the college in 1957.

It outfitted its college with dormitory suites for 150 girls, classrooms, a swimming pool, color television, stereo and 20 wooded acres with lanes for strolling and barbecue facilities.

"Our recruiting teams throughout the country interview about 21,000 girls a year," says Louise Kuehn, chic brunette instructor. "Only 800 or 900 make it. We take that many to offset a loss of about 600 stewardesses a year.

"We want girls who are the fresh, wholesome, all-America type but it takes a combination of beauty, brains and personality."

A prospective pupil for the six-week training must be 20 to 27 years old. No glasses, please, but contact lenses are allowed.

The girl must have a high school education and two years work in a public business, or a college degree.

She must stand at least 5-foot-2. Any shorter and she might not be able to reach the top trays in the compact buffet kitchen where prepared food is kept hot during flight.

But she mustn't be higher than 5-9. Any taller and she might bump her head on the low joints of the plane.

The director of the college is Mrs. Hazel Fitzgerald, widow of an American Airlines pilot who died in 1958. Mrs. Fitzgerald whose 30 years experience gives her top seniority in American's 1,650-stewardess corps, supervises a staff of 10 instructors and a hair stylist.

Before a girl emerges from the college with her wings, she is pampered, powdered, combed, examined, perfumed, groomed, tested, questioned, backgrounded, weighed and disciplined.

"We give the girls 10 times the study material we think they can handle," says Peggy Sullivan, another instructor. "We want them alert. The stewardess is the passenger's closest contact with the airline. He judges the company by watching her."

More than 100 courses are offered.

A stewardess-to-be first learns the basic "coffee-tea-or-milk" service for short hops. Then she learns to handle full course meals with china and silverware on the cross-country flight from New York to San Francisco.

She is briefed in meterology, the science of weather, so she can field a passenger's questions about bumpy trips in unbelow.

Not surprisingly she learns the various parts and functions of the plane, so she can explain why there's smoke coming out of a certain place or oil at another.

She learns to operate emergency equipment such as oxygen masks and evacuation exits, and is versed in airline rules, tickets and codes.

And she's shown the tricky art of manipulating a tray of food along a sometimes bouncy airplane aisle.

Not to mention being shown how to walk, talk, stand, sit and smile.

There's a course in psychology to teach her how to soothe a huffy celebrity, entertain children, console a bereaved parent or appease an inebriated passenger.

When it comes to drunks, the young stewardess learns she has three maneuvers: 1. Get him a pillow, smile sweetly and tell him "night-night." 2. Firmly inform him he can't have another highball, or 3. Get the captain.

The final week of the course is a plane, scrambling in and out of exits, sliding over the wing, inflating the escape slide and becoming familiarized with other emergency mechanisms.

A stewardess college, like a public school, has its dropouts. Three or four girls usually leave each class of 30.

"Some leave the first week. The course was harder than expected," Miss Kuehn says.

Hose and heels are mandatory. Only mascara or dark pencil is allowed for the eyes. Hair can be no longer than collar length, and extreme, hot-fast styles or peek-a-boo Veronica Lake types are out.

Before graduation exercises the girls learn in an assembly where they will be based. New York, Buffalo, Chicago, Washington, Nashville, Dallas - Fort Worth, Boston, Los Angeles or San Francisco.

Often there are tears when a girl finds she can't get her choice, which usually is a base near home.

"Frankly," one instructor advised a recent class of breathless girls at the threshold of [illegible] "you girls are going to a plane, scrambling in and out of exits, sliding over the wing, inflating the escape slide and becoming familiarized with other emergency mechanisms.

Wagner Is Guest At White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Mayor Robert F. Wagner of New York, one of those who hasn't been killed off as a Democratic vice presidential possibility, is coming to the White House today to be an overnight guest of President and Mrs. Johnson.

While it would seem that politics is a subject that can scarcely escape discussion, White House press secretary George Reedy said, "It's not the purpose of the visit. It's just a visit."

He said that after the death of Mrs. Wagner March 2, the President and Mrs. Johnson invited the mayor to come to Washington for a weekend whenever it was convenient and to bring his sons, Duncan and Robert Jr.

Reedy did not rule out a discussion of New York problems — rioting in Harlem has been a major one — or some political talk.

While Johnson said Thursday he has eliminated members of his Cabinet — and eight or 10 others — from consideration for the Democratic vice presidential nomination, associates say he has left the door open to some senators, House members, governors — and mayors.

But the way most Democrats see it, regardless of how open the White House says the list may be, Sens. Hubert H. Humphrey and Eugene J. McCarthy of Minnesota still appear to be the top possibilities as Johnson's running mate.

College Stars May Find It Tougher To Win Over Bears

By JERRY LISKA
Associated Press Sports Writer

CHICAGO (AP)—The College All-Stars, who stunned the Green Bay Packers last year, may find it much tougher trying to trap the two-touchdown favorite Chicago Bears in this year's All-Star football game at Soldier Field Friday night.

The lethal passing of Ron VanderKelen and unerring toe of Bob Jencks led the three touchdown underdog collegians to a startling 20-17 upset of the then champion Packers of the National Football League.

But the 31st All-Star game, entering which the pros hold a 19-9 edge with two ties played, sends a dedicated, grim Bear club against the pick of the 1963 college seniors.

The champion Bears, coached by 69-year-old George Halas, already have pledged the 1964 season to teammates Willie Galimore and John Farrington, killed in a July 26 auto crash near the Bears' Rensselaer, Ind., training camp.

If further inspiration or determination is needed, the bears also will be bent on revenge for a woeful showing in their last All-Star game appearance.

That was the 1947 game in which the Bears were humbled 16-0 in an "air conditioned" downfall. At halftime of that game, All-Star Coach Frank Leahy kept his players outdoors at one end of sweltering Soldier Field.

But the Bears hurried from the humid, 90-degree weather in to their air-conditioned locker room. "When they came back in to that oven on the field, they nearly fell flat on their faces," recalled Northwestern Coach Alex. Agase, then an All-Star guard.

Otto Graham, who sends his seventh All-Star team against the Bears, is mainly concerned over the manner in which the pro champs may respond to the Galimore-Farrington tragedy.

"With the initial shock over," said Graham, "it is only natural that they will play their hearts out. I know I would. I think it will make the Bears just that much harder to defeat."

Graham, former star quarterback for the Cleveland Browns and now U.S. Coast Guard Academy coach, has had his All-Star game preparations at Northwestern University complicated by an exceptional rash of injuries.

At times, the All-Star staff has been hard-pressed filling out two units from the 47-player squad for contact drills. However, most of the pro-football bound collegians are expected to be in shape for Friday night's contest.

Spearheading the All-Star effort to crack the NFL's best defense will be a trio of sharp-pitching quarterbacks — Pete Beathard of Southern California, George Mira of Miami of Florida, and Jack Concannon of Boston College.

If one is able to take charge as did the fancy-dancing, bulls-eye passing VanderKelen against the Packers, the All-Stars stand a chance against the Bears, whose offense did not cut any NFL swath last season.

The All-Stars have a raft of good receivers, including ends Dave Parks of Texas Tech, Chuck Logan of Northwestern (a Bear rookie), Mel Profit of UCLA, Ted Davis of Georgia Tech and Hal Bedsole of Southern California, and halfbacks Pal Warfield of Ohio State.

Running backs in Graham's pro type offense will be swift Chuck Taylor, also tabbed for defensive duty, and Tony Lorick of Arizona State, Willis Crenshaw of Kansas State, Aoe Don Looney of Oklahoma, Bob Smith of North Texas State and Matt Snell of Ohio State.

The All-Star defensive line includes such behemoths as George Bednar, 240, Notre Dame; Ken Kortas, 290, Louisville; Scott Appleton, 235, Texas; Tom Keating, 240, Michigan; Ed Lothamer, 240, Michigan State, and George Seals, 250, Missouri.

All-Star linebackers, coping with the thrusts of the Bears Ron Bull, Joe Marconi and Charley Bivins, include two Iowa stars, Wally Hilgenberg and Mike Reilly; Dan Conners, Miami, Fla.; Dave Wilcox, Oregon; Matt Snorton, Michigan State; Tom Crutcher, Texas Christian; and Ralph Baker, Penn State.

Backfield defenders against the passes of veteran Bear quarterback Bill Wade will include Jerry Richardson, West Texas State; Perry Dunn, Mississippi; Phil Krause, Iowa; Mel Renfro, Oregon; Duke Carlisle, Texas; and Ode Burrell, Mississippi State.

Three Teams In Deadlock At Odessa

ODESSA (AP) — The $13,000 Odessa Pro-Am headed into the third round today with three teams tied for the lead.

PGA champ Bobby Nichols of Corona, Calif., led his team to a seven-under-par 65 Friday to match Thursday's score and bang up a two-round 130. His partner is Forrest Wynn of Midland.

Also firing 130s were the teams of Don Massengale of Jacksboro and John Farquhar of Amarillo, and Lou Kretlow of Edmond, Okla., and George Hixson of Oklahoma City.

Nichols came through with the big shot Friday on the par five 17th hole when he blasted his second shot for 250 yards. The ball came to rest 12 feet from the hole and he then putted it in for an eagle.

Massengale sunk two 20-foot putts and one 30-footer. Farquhar, the low amateur in the U. S. Open, dropped a 15-footer at hole 12.

The field was cut to 36 teams with a cutoff for two rounds of 140. The tournament ends Sunday.

Labron Harris of Stillwater, Okla., and Dave Eichelberger of Waco led after the first day with 63 but they slipped to 134 with yesterday's 71.

Alvis Is Back

CLEVELAND (AP) — Max Alvis, Cleveland third baseman who has been out of the line-up since June 6 after contracting spinal meningitis, was taken off the disabled list Friday.

The Tribe released veteran outfielder Al Smith to make room for the 26-year-old infielder.

Snyder LL Wins District Crown

Snyder's American Little League all-stars literally pulverized the Abilene Dixie League all-stars, 12-1, Friday night for the District 5 Little League baseball crown.

The locals will go into the sectional tournament at Lubbock next week, with their first action slated for 5:30 p.m. Tuesday.

Centerfielder Chris Lehman ripped a big chunk out of Dixie's armor when he lashed a three-run homer in the second inning to account for the first runs in the ball game. The Snyder lads then proceeded to unravel the Abilene team for seven runs before the second frame ended.

Abilene's only run came in the fourth inning when Mike Mayes drove a home run over the rightfield fence.

Wesley Bishop hit a homer with nobody on in the sixth to conclude the scoring. Bishop and Lehman each had another hit to go with his homer and David McGinnis had a pair of singles as the Snyder team collected 9 hits off the slants of four Abilene pitchers. The locals also drew 14 bases on balls.

Meanwhile, Jim Patrick was going the distance for Snyder American. He rationed out four hits, did not walk a man and struck out nine batters en route to the most impressive playoff triumph to date for the Snyder team.

Marichal was next scheduled to pitch Monday against the Pirates.

Bunker Still Best Orioles Can Offer

By DICK COUCH
Associated Press Sports Writer

It doesn't figure to happen, but who could blame Hank Bauer if he has Wally Bunker pitch both ends of the Orioles' next doubleheader.

Bauer called on Bunker in the first game of Friday night's twinbill against Kansas City and the 19-year-old wonder came through for the 12th time, throttling the A's 6-1 on a three-hitter.

The victory, coupled with Harmon Killebrew's two-run sudden-death homer that jolted the Yankees 4-3 at Minnesota, gave Baltimore a clear shot at the American League lead. And, when young Dave McNally took a 5-0 bulge into the eighth inning of the nightcap, Bauer must have been preparing one of those "Don't count out the Yanks yet" speeches.

But McNally never got out of the eighth and the Orioles never got into the top spot. The A's pushed six runs across in the inning—chasing McNally, bombing bullpen ace Stu Miller and finishing up against Steve Barber and finally won 7-6 on Ed Charles' leadoff homer off Barber in the ninth.

When it was over, the Orioles were four percentage points out of first place and manager Bauer was looking—somewhat wild-eyed—for another Bunker.

Barber, a 20-game winner in 1963 who has now dropped eight of 13 decisions this year, wasn't the only left-hander victimized by a ninth-inning homer. Lefty Al Downing of the Yankees had a six-game winning string broken when Killebrew drove a two-out pitch into the left field bleachers at Minnesota.

Juan Pizarro, the league's premier southpaw, had no such bad luck. The Chicago White Sox ace blanked Washington 6-0 on four hits, struck out 14 and ran his season mark to 14-5. Cleveland took a doubleheader from Detroit 12-3 and 4-2 and Boston nipped the Los Angeles Angels 4-3.

Philadelphia protected its National League lead with a 6-1 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers; second place San Francisco beat Pittsburgh 8-6; Cincinnati stopped St. Louis 7-6; Milwaukee buried the Chicago Cubs 13-3 and the New York Mets swept a doubleheader from Houston 3-0, 6-2.

Bunker won his sixth straight in the Orioles-A's opener and lowered his ERA to 2.71. He checked KC on one hit until the seventh, when Rocky Colavito's 25th homer ended the shutout bid. Brooks Robinson homered for Baltimore and Bob Johnson drove in two runs with a single and ground out.

McNally was working on a six-hitter in the second game when the A's unloaded. Charles led off the eighth with a double and, one out later, Ken Harrelson reached first on Johnson's error. Jim Gentile walked, filling the bases, and Doc Edwards scored Charles with a single. Exit McNally.

Berto Campaneris greeted Miller with a two-run double and Nelson Mathews drove in two more, tying the score, with a single. Mathews raced all the way to third on Miller's wild pickoff attempt and scored when Wayne Causey, first up against Barber, lifted a sacrifice fly to left.

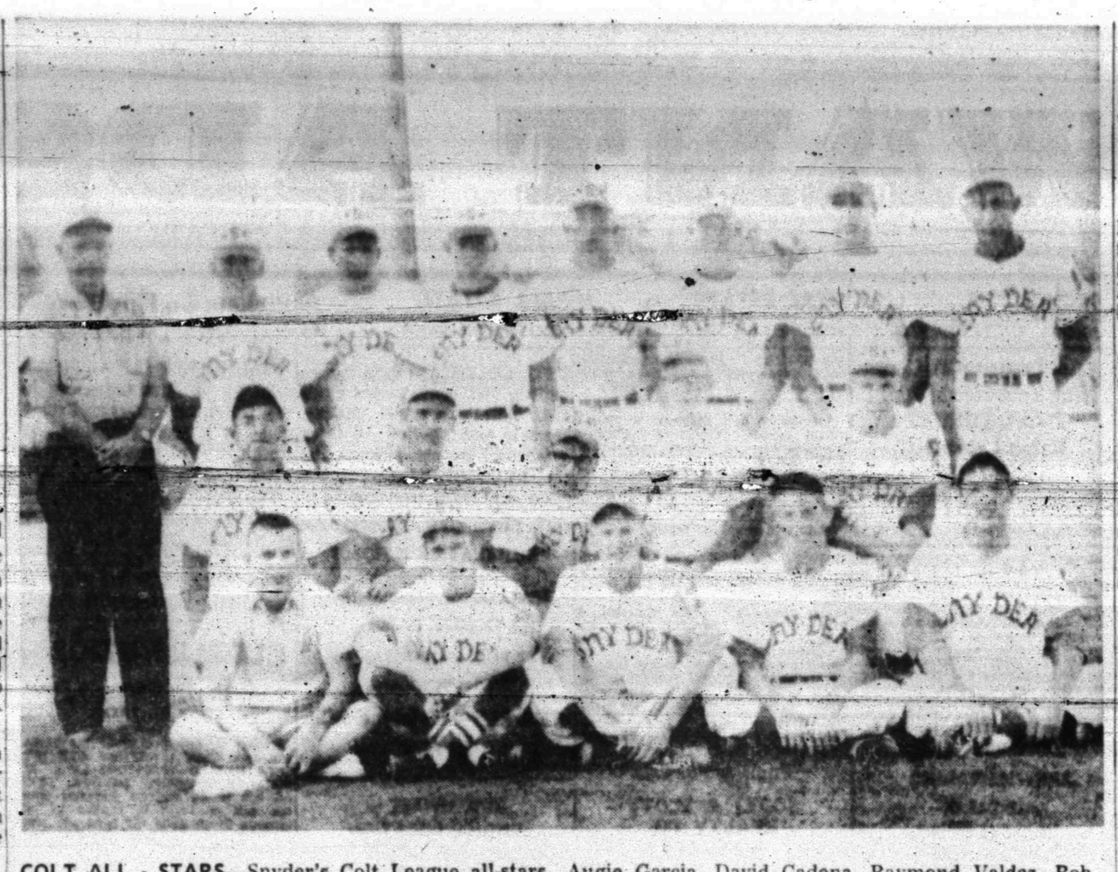

The Orioles tied it in the ninth on Dick Brown's second homer of the game but Charles broke it up in the bottom of the ninth with his 11th homer, an opposite field shot to right.

Run-scoring hits by Joe Pepitone and Roger Maris and a throwing error by outfielder Tony Oliva gave the Yankees three runs off Camilo Pascual in the fourth. They led 3-1 in the eighth, when Bob Allison hit a solo homer for the Twins. Then, after a single by Rich Rollins in the ninth; Killebrew crashed his 36th homer.

Pizarro, the AL's top winner, fanned the side in three innings and flirted briefly with the major league strikeout record of 18. He had 13 through seven innings but could get only one of the last six outs via strikes.

Bill Skowron drove in two runs with sacrifice flies and Ron Hansen homered. Left-hand hitting Jim King got three of the Senators' hits.

Gary Bell replaced Indians starter Jack Kralick in the third inning of the first game and set down 18 Tigers in order to gain his sixth victory. The Indians collected 10 hits, including homers by Leon Wagner and Bob Chance, off four Detroit pitchers.

El Paso, Abilene In Meet Finals

Abilene and El Paso were to square off in the finals of the Colt League sectional tournament here Saturday night, with El Paso facing sudden death elimination.

The El Paso team kept its hopes for the title alive Friday night when it came from behind with a three-run uprising in the sixth inning to eliminate Snyder, 4-3.

Abilene went into the Saturday night action undefeated in tournament play. Thus, an Abilene victory would give it the title, but an El Paso victory would call for a second game.

In Friday night's game Snyder bunched four of its nine hits in the third inning to take a 2-0 lead. Singles were rapped by Rob Golden, Roy Kizer, David Holt and Raymond Valdez. The Snyder team got another run in the fifth when a walk to Ray Kizer was followed by singles by Holt and Valdez.

El Paso picked up one run in the bottom of the fifth when Victor Marquez singled after John Miller had gained life on an error. The El Paso team then lashed three hits in the sixth, including a double by George Hodge and a triple by David Fierro to stage its winning rally.

Dayton Is Assured Hockey Franchise

DAYTON, Ohio (AP) — Dayton was assured Friday of a franchise in the International Hockey League, the first pro hockey team in the city's history.

A Dayton group headed by Ed McFadden presented the league with $17,000 and revealed bank assets of $22,500 to support the team. The league had set these requirements before granting the city its franchise.

Par May Be Easy At Western Open

CHICAGO (AP) — Par should be riddled at Tam O'Shanter when golfing's top shooters start firing in the 72-hole Western Open Thursday.

The course, stretching 6,686 yards with a par 36-35—71, is considered easier than it was during the late George S. May's promotions, which ended in 1957.

Even in those days, par took quite a beating, with Lloyd Mangrum and Gene Littler sharing the course record of 63 and Byron Nelson setting the 72-hole mark of 269.

"The course is a little shorter where we've built a new green at the seventh and a new tee at th eighth," says host pro George Keyes. "Also, disease has cost us some strategic trees on the last three holes.

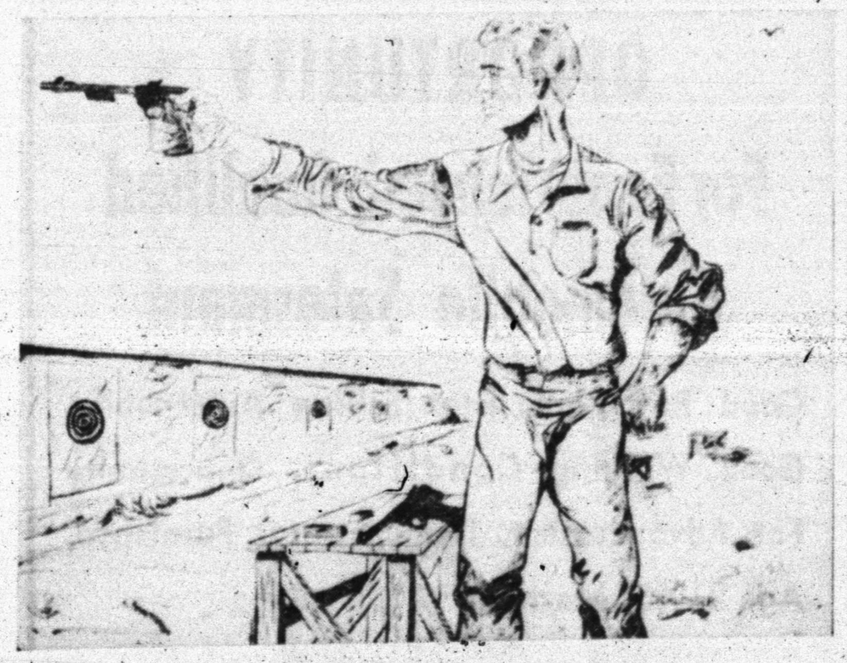

"Someone who is playing well could average 68 for the four rounds for a 272. It's a good driving course—you can't spray your shots. There is out-of-bounds on nine holes. Trees on many holes will snare wild tee shots. And a river is bothersome on three others.

"The greens are large and not difficult to hit. But there is a break in every green."

Of the 135 in the starting field, there is no outstanding choice among such big shots as defending champion Arnold Palmer, National Open titlist Ken Venturi, British Open champion Tomy Lema and PGA winner Bobby Nichols. And not to be overlooked are such dead-eyes as Jack Nicklaus, Julius Boros, Gary Player, Billy Casper and other top hands of pro golf who are entered.

Also entered are Dick Mayer, winner of the last Tam O'Shanter "World" crown in 1957; Lew Worsham, whose eagle deuce wedge shot on the 72nd hole won the 1953 "World", and Sam Snead, the last man to win the Western Open in successive years—1949-1950.

In addition to Palmer and Snead, other former winners include Stan Leonard, Mike Souchak, Doug Sanders, Doug Ford, Dutch Harrison and Marty Furgol.

STOP . . . WIGGLING — GUN!—The Canyon Gun Club has scheduled a pistol match Sunday at 1:30 p.m. at the club range southwest of Snyder near the old Lemons Camp. The shoot is a Raymond Busby Trophy Shoot — any caliber pistol, 10 shots at 25 yards. Trophies will be awarded to the top three shooters. Yearly standings are Delbert Johnston, first with 384; Bill McLennan, second with 377; and Ben Weathers third with 376. Spectators are welcome at the shoot.

Palmer Rebounds With Hot Putter

MONTREAL (AP) — Arnold Palmer has retrieved the putting ability he misplaced and big Bill Collins of Grossinger's, N.Y., has found a putting touch he never owned.

Palmer, lost in the shuffle with an opening round par 71, surged back Friday with a four-under 67 to share the second round lead at 138 with Collins in the $50,000 Canadian Open golf championship.

"That was my best putting round in the last year," Palmer said after tearing through the 7,090-yard Pinegrove Course in 29 putts.

"I never could make those long ones," Collins said, moments after he'd dropped putts from long distances to give him a three-under 68 to go with his initial 70.

Palmer's putter was sour Thursday, but he more than made up for it in the second round with eight one-putt greens. He hit the hole from 18 feet twice for birdies and knocked in a 15-footer on the 520-yard fifth for an eagle.

Collins, who has made a brilliant recovery from a back operation last August, used two just as spectacular. He dropped putts of 42, 35 and 25 feet on three holes and missed by an inch on a birdie try of 60 feet.

One stroke behind the coleaders were Rex Baxter of Amarillo, Tex., and Billy Casper of Corona, Calif. Casper tied the course record with a 66.

Four pros were at 141, three strokes behind Palmer and Collins and one under par. They were Bob Verwey and Gary Player, two South Africans, Gibby Gilbert, who led the first round, and Ray Floyd of St. Andrews, Ill.

Gilbert, the unheralded pro from Hollywood, Fla., discovered the course was a trifle harder with a three-over 74 to go with his opening 67.

Bob Shave Jr. of Willoughby, Ohio, in second spot on the first day with a 68, also fired a 74 and found himself locked with Jack Nicklaus at par 142 after 36 holes.

Rookies Get Early Lesson

BEAUMONT (AP)—The Houston Oiler veterans, Jacky Lee, Charley Hennigan and George Blanda, gave the rookies a 24-10 lesson Friday night in an exhibition football game.

Lee fired touchdown passes of 37 and 12 yards to Hennigan and Blanda kicked 37 and 46-yard field goals.

A paid crowd of 10,764—the largest number ever to see a football game in Beaumont—overflowed South Park Stadium.

Mistakes were at a minimum in the first exhibition game of the season for the American Football League Club.

Blanda 36-year-old veteran, completed 17 of 25 passes for 205 yards, plus a 16-yard touchdown pass to James Ingram, Baylor Rookie.

Lee hit 16 of 29 for 229 yards.

But rookie Don Trull had a trying night. The $100,000 quarterback from Baylor completed only nine of 23 for 67 yards.

TRAVEL TALK

By Hulin Fowler

EDITOR'S NOTE: Please write Mr. Fowler in care of this newspaper for answers to your travel questions.

* * *

Blue waters, silvery palm trees, white sands, rolling mountains. Most Americans will agree that it would be an ideal setting for a dream vacation on the French or Italian Riviera.

West Texans, however, are only a few hours away by air from one of the most beautiful and spectacular resorts, not only in this hemisphere, but the entire world. Acapulco, sometimes called the Riviera of the Pacific, is nestled among mountains overlooking the blue ocean on the western coast of Mexico.

Boarding a jet in Dallas Houston or San Antonio, you are less than three hours away from Mexico City, where you will transfer to another plane bound for Acapulco. On the hour long flight you will enjoy the scenic view, rolling hills and green mountains of the Sierra Madre. Your first sight of Acapulco is unforgettable, especially at night, when the lights of the city seem to ring the calm bay with a string of pearls.

One of the few resorts with a "morning beach" (Caleta) and an "afternoon beach" (Los Hornos), the blue, clear waters and white sands are made for enjoyment and relaxation. There is no problem with stingrays, Portuguese men - of - war and other vicious sea life that infest Texas beaches at times. On both beaches you will find little bamboo - like stands which sell drinks and tidbits. Be sure to try some of the drinks made of pineapple and coconut milk, which are served in the plant's original husk.

Among the many attractions of Acapulco are the famous divers that leap from towering cliffs, barely soaring past the rocks into the sea. For the active sportsman, there is also wonderful fishing and hunting.

The cost of a fabulous vacation can be very reasonable. Mexico's currency is stable and the exchange rate of 12½ pesos to the dollar, gives the American tourist a favorable purchasing power in this neighboring country. A good hotel in Acapulco will cost from $10.00 to $16.00 a day for two. European plan and excellent meals can be obtained for less than $2.00.

Your best buys in Mexico will be leather goods, silver, perfumes, pottery, glassware and other curios. The "vendadores" in the small shops will expect you to bargain with them. Don't disappoint them and you will be surprised at the good buys you can find.

Contrary to popular opinion, Mexican foods are not generally hot and spicy. Do not fail to try "mole de guajolote", which is delicious turkey in a spicy chocolate sauce and red snapper, Vera Cruz style, that is, sauteed with piminetos and spices. Also available are a variety of strange and exotic fruits as well as delicious fresh bananas, pomegranates guavas and limes.

All you need to go to Mexico is a smallpox vaccination certificate and a tourist card. The latter is free of charge for a stay of one month or less. It can be obtained from the Mexican Government Tourist Bureau or through your travel agent.

For fun and pleasure at a moderate cost, you will not find a better value anywhere than south of the border, in Old Mexico.

Old Ankle Injury Plagues Jerry Lewis

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Jerry Lewis re-activated an old ankle injury during the making of "The Disorderly Orderly" and had to shut down shooting for a week.

His associates fear that the injury may force a change in his zany style of comedy. Jerry pooh-poohs that.

"If it'll get a laugh," says Jerry, "I'll break my neck."

How Visitors Rate Sights In Hollywood

By JAMES BACON
AP Movie-Television Writer

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—This is the season for visiting firemen and relatives—a time when a Hollywood reporter really finds out who and what is important.

If my experience with a flock of guests from Texas, Indiana and Pennsylvani is any criterion, the public most wants to:

1. See a movie being made, preferably with John Wayne, Jerry Lewis or Cary Grant.
2. Visit Disneyland.
3. Dance at Cocoanut Grove.
4. Dine at Chasen's.
5. See Marilyn Monroe's grave.
6. See Rudolph Valentino's grave.
7. See a television movie being made, preferably "Bonanza."
8. Hear a concert at Hollywood Bowl.
9. See the movie stars at Movieland Wax Museum.
10. See Tyrone Power's grave.

Grant, I found, has appeal for women of all ages—even the young ones.

Wayne is the male favorite while Lewis has big appeal for the kids.

On the movie set visits, only one feminine star's name came up—and everybody knew she wasn't in town. That would be Elizabeth Taylor.

One housewife commented: "I don't approve of Liz but I guess all of us get a vicarious kick out of her public-be-damned antics. She is star, that's for sure."

LIGHTEST MEXICO

BY JOHN ABNEY

MEXICO CITY — Weather is in the news today. A group of scientists have offered varying opinions as to what causes weather, particularly wet weather.

It is variously blamed on an assortment of clouds with names nobody can pronounce without the help of a few Tequilas, H-Bomb tests and Central Standard Time.

I recall my childhood days when it rained and everyone accepted it as a Good Thing for the crops. Nobody became emotional and set about trying to determine WHY it rained.

In recent years, however, we have had (1) an increasing tendency toward more rain and (2) an increasing tendency toward droughts. The bomb, clouds and New York Times editorials have been blamed for both conditions.

Rainmakers have fired rockets into the air and seeded clouds with a variety of chemicals to bring on a storm. Very little has come of these efforts except the rainmakers make money.

We will now offer substantial evidence of what actually causes storms and defy science to disprove it.

Rain is brought on by baseball. At least in Mexico.

The day the season opens here, you notice the sky is wooly grey. By the time the baseball stadium is half filled for the opener, there are dark clouds lurking on the horizon.

And the moment some official throws out the first ball, there is a deafening clap of thunder followed by a deluge. This has happened year after year and is now an accepted fact.

People living across town, who have never seen a game in their lives, look out the window at the storm and say, "Well, I guess the game has started."

This may sound foolish but it never rains during a golf tournament, for instance, unless one of the contestants playfully swings his club like a baseball bat.

The ancient Mayas discovered that rain in their time was brought on by celestial beings known as Chaacs. Special ceremonies were held and the instant they ended, everybody ran for cover. Chaacs always delivered.

It is not unlikely that Chaacs considered baseball some sort of rite in their honor and for this reason they herd up clouds when the game starts. Some weather students have speculated that the Chascs do not like baseball, on the other hand, and tried to drown out the games.

However, there are a number of recorded instances where modern Mayas have held festivals for the Chaacs but nothing happened. Nobody could explain it. Possibly the Chaacs were working in some other part of the sky and missed all the fun. The most plausable line of reasoning, though, is that a baseball game was going on somewhere else and all the weather was being collected for that area.

Say what you want but science is working on the same old outdated theories. At this moment, it is 8 p.m. in Mexico City and I just saw a huge bolt of lightning flash in the direction of the baseball park. Thunder is rumbling and the first splatters of rain are hitting the pavement.

Obviously, the game is about to start.

Meager Clues Are Left By Bank Robber

HAWKINS, Tex. (AP)—Police with meager clues sought today a thug who robbed the First State Bank here of about $18,000.

The bandit, described by women bank employes as tall, dark and handsome, shut four persons in a vault and tied up three others Friday.

He fired two shots, apparently by accident, as he tied the trio outside the vault. Then he left with the loot.

Police said the only clues they had obtained included a slug from the robber's automatic that buried itself in a baseboard, a bell he used in the tie-ups and some coat hangers used to bind two bank customers.

Man Doesn't Mind Serving Jail Term

SANTA ROSA, Calif. (AP) — For want of $29 to pay his fine, Raymond L. Roeder, 48, is serving five days in jail on a drunk charge. But Roeder doesn't mind.

He learned in jail that he had just inherited $200,000.

Deputies were told Wednesday by Sheriff Jerry Cunningham of Rochester, Minn., that Roeder had been left the sum.

Star's Parents Go On Working

DALLAS (AP) — While Trini Lopez entrances audiences in America and Europe and the money rolls in, his father sticks with his job as a janitor.

His mother shells beans in the kitchen.

Trinidad Lopez Sr. doesn't have to work. Nor does Mrs. Lopez have to shell beans, much less grow them in their lush backyard garden.

Trini (Trinidad Jr.) has hit the big time as a singer and guitarist. He is seen in New York with the celebrities, sometimes with Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

One of his recordings, "If I had a Hammer," has sold over one million discs in America and even more in Europe. He has bestselling albums on the counters.

Movies are planned for him with top stars in the case. He already is becoming a television figure.

Affectionately referred to as a "good boy" by his father and "a Christian who will one day settle down" by his mother, Trini, 27, hasn't forgotten his parents.

He bought them a new house in a neighborhood of $30,000 homes. He bought his father a white Cadillac which he drives each afternoon to his job as janitor at SMU.

Before Trini made it big a couple of years ago, the family lived in a three-room house in the Little Mexico section of Dallas. Mr. and Mrs. Lopez now live in relative opulence but they still conduct their day-to-day affairs according to the austerity that marked their earlier lives.

Trini's father, 60, has worked hard all his life.

Asked why he doesn't quit the janitor job, Lopez said simply:

"But it's five years 'till I reach retirement age."

The elder Lopez was born on a farm in Mexico. He brought his family to a farm near Ennis, 35 miles south of Dallas, in 1927.

From Ennis he came to Dallas, where he was a janitor in a downtown hotel and tended lawns in exclusive Highland Park, a suburb.

He still longs for farm work and the satisfaction of what he calls "the joy of growing things."

When they moved into their new home after Trini became a $400,000-up a year entertainer, one of the first things Trinidad did was plant the back lawn with vegetables.

The front lawn is carefully landscaped in the conventional manner that he once fashioned and maintained for the Highland Park homes.

The back lawn is equally beautiful in a different sort of way with its corn, squash, beans and tomatoes.

Mrs. Lopez spends her days cooking with the garden vegetables, minding some of her 13 grandchilden and talking at the kitchen table with her children.

She says of Trini:

"His life is so fast. But he is a Christian boy who will one day settle down.

"I think I would rather see him mowing the grass."

The father does not seem concerned about his son's sudden success.

"He works hard, but I tell him, 'Trini, this is not hard work, what you do.'"

The four Lopez daughters are married. Trini and a younger brother, Jesse, 20, are the only single children in the family. Neither Jesse nor Trini smokes or drinks. Both are church goers.

Jesse sings and plays the saxophone. He is a sophomore at North Texas State University at Denton, and has hopes for a singing career of his own. He recently cut his first record.

Nero Not Seeking Career In Movies

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Jazz pianist Peter Nero made a success out of scoring his first movie, "Sunday in New York," but he doesn't want to make a career of it.

"I enjoy playing piano too much," says the young Brooklynite. "I know it's tougher to hit the road for the one night concert stands but if I stayed with movie scoring, I would have to give up what I like to do best—and that's play."

PHYSICAL FITNESS is emphasized at the camp as well as the clubhouse. Above some of the youngsters go through an obstacle course they have set up. A standard has been set, whereby boys can earn a certificate from Boys Club of America.

HIKING—This group of Boys Club hikers were off for their first hiking of the week. They have set a goal of hiking five miles an hour, and in the process study such things as erosion, interesting sites, nature study and wild life.

CAMPING AREA—Sleeping in a tent is always one thing a young man has a vision of doing sometime in his childhood. Rising early, taking a quick swim and then having a good hearty breakfast is an everyday routine at camp.

SWIMMING AREA—The camp site has a safe swimming area and is under complete supervision at all times. The area is roped off in an inlet with a nice sandy beach and also features a fishing place near by.

THE SNYDER DAILY NEWS

VOL. 15, NO. 80 SNYDER, TEXAS (79549) SUNDAY, AUGUST 2, 1964 SECTION B

Help Build Juvenile Decency

The Scurry County Boys' Club will open their first camping session at their beautiful campsite near Lake J. B. Thomas Aug. 10. The local facilities can easily serve 800 boys and at the same time give many services to hundreds of small and teen-age girls of the county if they so desire.

The directors of Boys' Club believes that what helps our youth helps our community, and it is better to build better lives than mend broken down ones. Camping is a real unusual experience for most boys and provides an ideal setting for boys and leaders in this business of learning to live, work, and play together and to sense the wonders and blessings of God's handiwork. Developing a love for the outdoors, discipling one's self, exercising, and eating three good meals a day, they consider camping an integral part of the program for health and guidance.

The Boys' Club has recently made the camp available to girls' recreation or other organizational groups. Even a one-a-week one day activity — a bus trip, a hike along the beach, swimming, boating, and observing nature, eating their lunch and returning — could be one of the girls' outstanding programs.

Of all the activities of the Boys' Club more boys have a natural desire and need for physical activities than any other one activity, unless it is games room. The value of exercise and fun to our boys is realized, but more important is that this is only a means to an end, and becomes a positive force when wise leaders first set good examples at all times and, second, inspire and create a desire in boys to do their best, while reflecting proper attitude and behavior at all times.

The organization does not develop boys for programs, but programs for boys. In physical activities, as in other activities, it is FUN with a PURPOSE, and it gives the leaders a chance to better know the participants in order that they may channel and guide boys into becoming better citizens.

Besides major sports of football, basketball and boxing, they have minor physical activities as tumbling, trampolining, weight lifting, camp swimming and drown - proofing, boating, hiking, softball, and all sorts of organized races, games and contests, crafts, and reading of good books.

Through the promotion of social, educational, vocational, health and character development programs, the Boys' Clubs of America presents a positive program designed for juvenile decency. By example and interest, Club leaders not only help to prevent juvenile delinquency, but guide boys into creative activities.

"After the home, church and school, Boys' Clubs are the greatest character building institutions in our country."

Herbert Hoover

SETTING UP—The boys are an excited group when they arrive at the campsite and start setting up tents. When tents, camping gear, and final preparations are completed, the next step is to receive emergency first aid instructions.

TAKING A BREAK—After a hike, working on camp grounds or various other activities, it is not common for one of the supervisors to beckon the boys for a break. Above one such occasion came about and they enjoyed a feast of watermelon.

FLIRT CROWN—Large, smooth curves of soft waves highlight the brilliant lustre of shining hair in this new "Flirt Crown Coiffure." Highly new fashion notes are the "Flirt Curls" that give a perky touch high at the crown, and the soft "Flirt Curl" that caresses the right cheek. This new coiffure features a definite side part, but the hair is shorter than last season, and reveals a more definite wave pattern than seen in some of the simpler styles of spring. The front view also reveals the new rounded silhouette and the small head look. A requirement is the new "Flirt Cut," which makes the style so easy to care for. But the cut must be customized especially for you. Also needed is the softness that comes with professional permanent waving.

Mind Slowly Reveals Character

THE STONE ANGEL. By Margaret Laurence.

Hagar Shipley, who tells this story, is 90 years old.

Actually, she does not tell it in the sense of reciting a connected narrative. Her inner thoughts waver back and forth from the present to the past, and the reader gradually absorbs a coherent pattern from these many glimpses of her life.

She grew up in a small Canadian town, Manawaka, married Bram Shipley, a widower, a strong but crude man trying unsuccessfully to be a farmer; had two sons, unimaginative Marvin and her favorite John; left her husband and supported herself as an old man's housekeeper; and later meddled too much in the unfortunte John's adult life.

Finally, she became a senile semi-invalid in her own home, looked after by plodding old Marvin, now in his 60s, and Marvin's fussy, ineffective wife, Doris. The action of the present is fairly simple - Hagar bitterly resists all efforts to put her into a nursing home, wanders off by herself, is rescued and taken to a hospital.

It is the revelation of Hagar's harsh life and her shackled emotions that forms the real theme of this novel.

From the mercurially shifting disconnected memories that flicker through a mind that is no longer coherent, pictures gradually emerge, her own images of her family and the people of her home town. It becomes clear that pride was both a virtue and a vice with her, and that she always feared to unleash her emotions.

Mrs. Laurence has used an unusual situation and an unusual technique to portray her chief character; the result is remarkably effective. Hagar's story is not a pretty one; in a sense she is pitiful, yet who can resist a compassionate feeling for her? The book is so beautifully written that it conveys many powerful emotions, many reflective thoughts.

Library Notes

All Scurry Countians can be informed concerning conservation programs on both the state and national levels if they will take advantage of information in their Scurry County Library. Water, oil and soil conservation, subjects of particular interest to this immediate area, are well covered in reading materials on non-fiction shelves.

During the early history of this area and Texas and of the nation, natural resources seemed limitless and the problem was how to harvest the products and make them available to meet people's demands. Today, many citizens realize that nature's bounties are not inexhaustible, and that careful planning and action is necessary if these resources are to continue to supply the needs of an ever increasing population. Yet a vast majority of responsible citizens, however well meaning, lack the essential background for an informed approach to the problems of conservation. It is to meet the need of such people that many good books taking various views of the problems have been written.

We now have a mixture of government and private management in the control and development of all natural resources. At the turn of the 20th century laws were passed which limited private management and put the government into the forest management business in several ways.

Large acreages of national forests have been set aside and are managed by the United States Forest Service. Many states likewise have created state - owned forests. To protect fish and wildlife, laws have been passed regulating hunting and fishing. To preserve the wilderness and scenic values of forest areas, national parks and state parks are maintained at government expense for the enjoyment of the people.

Although much of this government activity in forest management and governmental management of other natural resources is now generally accepted as necessary if we are to preserve these renewable resources, some people feel the government intervention has gone too far. In some cases private enterprise control of natural resources predominates. How our natural resources should be controlled and managed is a very live economic issue.

In a new book, "In Wildness is the Preservation of the World," Photographer Eliot Porter corroborates with Thoreau and Thoreau varifies Porter, one never diminishing the other, even though the two men lived a century apart. Even to leaf through this beautifully planned book is rewarding to the nature lover. Thoreau's verse and the expert photography are so closely intertwined that the reader must feel he is viewing nature's beauty as Thoreau saw it.

Masterful photography of Philip Hyde with the impressive narrative of Francis Leydet make for an interesting and eye pleasing experience in the new book, "The Last Redwoods." Hyde's superb photographs remind not only of the spectacular beauty but of the devistating destruction in many of the wilderness parks presumably saved. He stresses that the opportunity still exists to make sure that a great heritage will endure. Leydet combines a poet's feeling with a journalist's thoroughness to tell of the forest through the ages. He reminds readers that wilderness made man but he cannot make it. Man can only spare it.

Other books emphasizing preservation of natural resources deal with various questions arising from deversified opinions on the subject. Such books as "Oil and Gas Production," by Interstate Oil Compact commission, which deals with production techniques and conservation methods; "Land Use Policy and Problems in the United States," edited by Howard W. Ottoson; "Land, Wood and Water," by Senator Robert S. Kerr of Oklahoma; "Land for the Future," by Marion Clawson; "Water - or Your Life," by Arthur H. Carhart; "Lands of the Arid Region of the United States," by John Wesley Powell; "Last Horizon" by Raymond F. Dasmann, and "The Quiet Crisis," by Steward L. Udall, are some of the books available to Scurry County readers.

Lecture On Hate From Harlem

MY PEOPLE IS THE ENEMY. By William Stringfellow.

The author speaks starkly. He has a table-pounding, angry message to convey in this book subtitled "an autobiographical polemic."

Seven years ago Stringfellow came out of Harvard Law School and settled in one of the worst areas of New York's Harlem. As lawyer and Protestant church layman, he tried to help many hopeless people.

He gives a desperate account of how race and poverty have turned this area into a festering sore that is deadly dangerous. And he equates Harlem with many northern city "ghettos," as he calls them.

Particularly, he argues that many applauded movements to rehabilitate Negro slum areas have reverse effects. For example, new housing that actually forces Negroes into ever - tightening pockets of degradation.

He has eye - opening assertions about landlords, politicans, hospitals, the police force, the courts, local merchants and even local crime bosses who contribute to the economic, social and everyday enslavement of Harlem's inhabitants.

He is particularly bitter about the churches of all denominations, feeling they are engrossed in condescending social work rather than in the Christian gospel, and far behind the times in realizing the plain hatred that Negroes feel for the whole white race.

He is worried because he feels that even "moderate" whites do not really understand the hatred that Negroes feel, and he is afraid that in their impatience the Negroes will turn to immoderate Negro demagogues.

Stringfellow has written a layman's sermon that cries out against both the churches and the people, in the manner of Biblical days.

Coffee Brewing

To make the best cup of coffee in town, try this inexpensive filter trick with percolator and drip coffee makers. Cut a circle the size of your coffee basket from a paper towel. Place one paper towel filter in the coffee basket before adding the grounds. To save time, cut several filters at the same time. Coffee will be clear and delicious.

Booklet Tells Teens What To Do When

On the social scene "what to do when can present problems for manner - minded teens. For example, if you spill something in a restaurant, do you apologize, clean up the mess, or do nothing.

The third answer is correct. If a waiter isn't near when a glass is turned over or food is spilled, simply spread a napkin over the spot and say nothing. Talking about mishaps only impresses them on the minds of others.

This question - and the teen-tested advice - are part of a new free 30-page booklet for the high school girl. "Are You In The Know?" answers questions on personality, dating, manners and good looks. From advice on how to keep the conversation going on a date, to the correct way to wear a corsage, the new booklet answers more than 80 typical teen questions.

Free copies are available on request by writing to "Are You In The Know," Box 551-P, Kimberly - Clark Corporation, Neenah, Wis.

Flirtation Hair Fashions Are Forecast For Fall

By Constance Charm

If you haven't taken advantage of Leap Year thus far, there is a wonderfully feminine collection of "Flirtation Coiffures" to help you this autumn and winter.

Moreover, to help your favorite beau get the message, the hair fashion authorities of the beauty profession have added a "flirt curl" — with a come-hither curve that even the most reluctant can't resist. You just save one look of hair when you get your new haircut. Perfume it with your preferred scent — it must be perfumed— and tie it with a little ribbon bow. Wear it at the center neckline at the back of your head, or, wherever your imagination suggests. Then, give it to your favorite beau to wear in his lapel. He's pinned!

But don't tive away too many "flirt curls." Hair this coming season will be quite short, more so than in many years, and with a softness of curl and wave that will emphasize the woman in you, positively, but gently.

The collection of new "Flirtation Coiffures" shows a far greater freedom and variance among the styles than in several years. However, all of the new styles have important points in common.

In the entire collection, the wave lines are layered and have a decided feeling of roundness. This "mise en plis," this gentle layering of soft wave lines is definitely a new approach to hair design. The curves are disc - like, sometimes balanced, at other times asymmetrical. But, they are always curves, curves, curves, with full ends at the sides and through the crown area. They are also soft and free, and must have a light and gentle feeling. Among them, coming in as a high fashion note, are the finger waves of yesteryear, but now they must be softly molded into elegant "s" line curves.

Daytime coiffures are generally more subdued, and ears are usually covered. For evening, the simple elegant coiffures of the day take on a feeling of dramatic oppulance, achieved with hair pieces placed on top of the head or low at the nape in mood with long new evening gowns. If ears are becoming, they are usually exposed for evening, accented with a touch of rouge and fabulous ear ornaments.

Most styles in the collection have a hair parting. These run the full gamut of variations. Some are long, some short, some high or low, or, just unassuming but important hair separations that give directional flow to curls and curves.

The open face look with a clean sweep of forehead is fashion news for many women. However, bangs will be used for correction of hairlines wherever needed. Forehead fringes of other seasons have moved away from the front, and are now found at the nape area, where they frequently form a closely fitted neckline fringe with a "flirt curl," pinned on, or permanent.

The width of the coiffures is greatest just above the eyes giving a soft lady - like frame to features and new attention to the eyes. Hair at the sides is closely fitted over or behind the ears, emphasizing small head elegance. Wave curls have also moved back a little from the crown to the lower crown area with hair length usually longest at the crown. Exact hair lengths depend upon individual needs, but the important need is the new "Flirt Cut," which will establish the proper shaping for you. Also vital for the custom fit is professional permanent waving, which adds soft richness and easy care to the curl and wave patterns.

Hair coloring for autumn and winter spotlights tone on tone effects of the same color family to add a radiant touch crowning the 3 - dimensional colors and textures of fall clothes. High fashion colors will be the warm blondes, beige blondes, and tea tones in blonde, a definitely lady - like influence. Reds will be cooled, not torrid, another gently lady effect.

In make-up, lips will be all-important, full, and of brilliant shades of 3-dimensional colors. Eyes will be oval, rather than round, subdued and mysterious. For evening, this effect will be emphasized. Facial tones will tend to natural complexion colors, and coming into full swing after their introduction last spring are beaty spots, but now they are taking shape as little hearts, stars, crescents or cloverleafs.

Patent Leather

Keep patent leather accessories looking their loveliest all summer with regular care. To remove dust and finger marks, dampen a tissue with a little vinegar and wipe off purses, shoes and belts after each wearing. This care is all that's needed to keep imitation patent leather looking its best.

Genuine patent leather also requires occasional lubrication to prevent cracking. About once a week, rub patent leather with clear petroleum jelly. Tissue off the excess and polish with fresh tissue.

Smoke Flavor

When grilling meats over a grill you can achieve a smoke flavor by scattering wood chips over the ceramic coals. To produce a heavy smoke flavor, soak the wood in water first. For a slight flavor, package the dry wood chips in foil pierce the package with fork holes and place on top of the hot coals.

Hero And His Way Of Life

THE RECTOR OF JUSTIN. By Louis Auchincloss.

This is a fascinating story about a man of the old school, and the boys' school which he created.

He was the Rev. Francis Prescott, D.D., founder, headmaster and rector of Justin Martyr, a prep school for 450 boys in Massachusetts. He was a man who believed in God, discipline, the classics, football and the worth of individual boys. He had become a living legend.

He first appears in the journal of Brian Aspinwall, a timid, uncertain young man who wasn't at all sure of his call to the ministry, and who in the fall of 1939 had taken a teaching job at the school. The chronicle continues through Dr. Prescott's retirement in 1941 and his death late in 1946 at the age of 85.

Aspinwall's journal is the key to the narrative, but the author skillfully gives us every possible facet of the Prescott personality in many ways.

There is Aspinwall's account of the last months of Prescott's wife Harriet. There is a partial manuscript from Horace Havistock, an effete Victorian bachelor who had known Prescott in his student days. There are some notes from David Griscam, a Justin boy who had become a business man and chairman of the Justin trustees. There is Aspinwall's long interview with Cordelia, youngest of the three Prescott daughters.

There is a memoir from Jules Griscam, David's son, a Justin boy who performed in the role of a tragic black sheep. And there is a chapter from an unpublished book by Charley Strong, a Justin boy on an earler day, whom Prescott had rescued from Cordelia.

The cumulative effect of all these viewpoints is a thoroughly rounded portrait of a personality seldom found these days, a dedicated man with faults doubts and failures, but a man of convictions, of faith and determination.

Auchincloss is a novelist of considerable stature, in the tradition of James, Warton and Marquand, but with his own incisive view of the world that lies just behind us.

In this novel he has given us a memorable figure in his hero. But he has done even more, with a brilliant, mind - challenging view of a whole way of life, it is a book that stands far above the superficialities of much modern fiction.

BLUEBERRIES AND WHIPPED CREAM fill crisp tarts made with a timbale iron dipped into batter that is deep-fat fried.

There May Be Timbale Iron In Your Attic

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

OF COURSE you can buy a timbale iron, the fascinating device that produces crisp batter tarts.

But if you look in your attic or basement, in Grandma's trunk or Great - aunt's chest, you might just find one there.

Timbale irons were popular in late Victorian days and some still lurk, undiscovered, in odd places. We recieved ours as a birthday present — a friend found it in an antique shop.

If you have a new timbale iron, you probably have accompanying directions for using it. But if you ferret out an old iron, you might want to try out directions.

In either case, we recommend filling the tart shells with a combination of whipped cream and one of summer's best fruits —large and luscious blueberries.

BLUEBERRY TIMBALE TART

1 large egg
¾ cup milk
1 teaspoon oil
1 cup flour
Dash of salt
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
Fat for frying
Whipped cream
Large fresh blueberries

Into a mixing bowl put the egg, milk, oil, flour, salt and nutmeg; with a rotary beater (hand or electric) beat just until smooth. Allow batter to stand at room temperature for 30 minutes. Lower timbale from iron into hot fat for a minute or two; drain iron thoroughly. Dip iron into batter just to (not over) top; dip batter-covered iron into hot fat just to (not over) top. Allow timbale to brown lightly, with a fork slip tart from iron and turn to brown inner surface. Remove from fat; drain on absorbent paper. Continue making timbales the same way. Store cold tarts in airtight container.

At serving time, fold blueberries into whipped cream; spoon into tarts; cover filling with more blueberries. The number of tarts you make and the amount of filling needed will depend on the size of the timbale iron.

You may not need to dip your iron in the fat, before covering with batter, for every single tart. If the iron is too hot, too much batter will cling to it and the tarts will be on the thick side.

ON THE HOUSE

BY ANDY LANG
AP Newsfeatures

Kitchens and bathrooms are two areas where homeowners can satisfy their desires for bright colors, broad patterns and individual decorating touches.

Striking designs and brilliant hues that might be out of place in other parts of the house are greeted with cries of delight and admiration when displayed in the kitchen and the bathroom. It is there, for instance, where you will find the unusual and off-beat in wallpaper, perfectly acceptable as long as there is a harmonizing note in the overall motif.

A typical example of what can be done in the bathroom is the application of a new five-foot-wide accent panel of plastic-finished hardboard. Placed on the wall over the tub, one of these panels transforms the wall into any one of nine attractive scenes and designs including a seascape, a mountain view, a desert and Oriental setting.

The murals feature gold - on-white artwork, with gold anodized moldings. Matching white panels are available for the side walls. The panels can be installed on any solid backing.

First step in the installation process is laying a heavy bead of caulking around the top of the tub, installing edge molding and adding a thick bead of caulking in the molding channel. A notched spreader is used to apply a thin coat of special mastic to the back of the hardboard panel. The mural then is placed in position on the wall, with a certain amount of pressure to assure a strong bond, after which the inside corner moldings are cut and nailed into place.

The end walls are measured, and the white side panels cut to fit. They also are attached to the walls with the mastic. The outside corner moldings are fitted and installed, using a hammer and wood block to tap them into place.

To complete the installation, another thin bead of caulking is laid around the moldings, an extra precaution to insure a water-tight job.

The five - foot - wide mural panels can be obtained at most lumber and building supply yards in either five-foot or six-foot heights.

QUESTIONS: We have a brick fireplace in our home, which was built in 1929. We haven't used the fireplace very much, perhaps as few as 10 times. Recently, there is a leaking of water in the fireplace every time it rains. My husband says the fireplace has to be used often to prevent such leakage. What is your opinion?

ANSWER: The fireplace should not leak whether you use it often or not at all. It seems likely that the mortar between some of the bricks on the outside of the chimney has become loose and that water is entering through the openings. Another possibility is that the flashing at the junction with the roof has become dislodged and needs to be set back in place and covered with a generous layer of roofing cement. To remortar the joints, remove all loose mortar with a cold chisel or wire brush. Don't disturb any mortar that is solidly in place. Thoroughly wet down all areas that are to be patched. You can buy ready - mixed mortar that requires only the addition of water. Apply it to the joints with a trowel. The patched sections should be wet down occasionally for several days if there is no rain during that period. This will prevent the mortar from drying out too quickly. Your chimney should have a cap of stone or concrete, with the flue lining extending through the cap and projecting above it. This sheds water and thereby preserves the masonry below. If your chimney has one, be sure it is still in good condition. If it does not have one, you should have one installed.

ALL ABOUT BABIES

A Public Service of the National Baby Care Council

BABY AT THE BEACH —
By C. Robert Gruver
Editor
All About Babies

This is the time of year when many parents head for the seashore and beaches along lakes, rivers and at swim clubs. And, of course, where parents go, baby is bound to go too.

The beach can be an exhausting experience for the most patient of parents. Have you ever tried to keep a darting youngster within range of vision, only to have him suddenly vanish into thin air? Have you ever sat mesmerized, your eyes glued on a bobbing head out in the water, only to discover in a moment of panic that it does not belong to your child?

An interesting and highly instructive article about taking baby to the beach appeared not too long ago in Baby Talk magazine, which is edited by Deirdre Carr, nationally known authority on baby care. Here is what the article said, inpart:

"Sure, it'll be fun, for a while, to dig in the sand. But before noon, we'll bet you will be wishing that beaches provided baby sitters as well as life guards. And you can't afford to let that baby out of your sight. That's why when taking advantage of that wonderful chance to introduce baby to the water, it's a good idea to plan short sprees, not all-day ones.

"As many babies are afraid of the water as love it. And, if there's much poking and prodding to get 'em in, your looked-forward-to-day at the beach will wind up mighty tearful. Pays to let a toddler first try looking, then wading, splashing, dunking at his own pace, be it fast or slow. Low tide is an ideal time to beach with baby.

"Beach gear is a nuisance to tote, but wise mothers tote it! Here's a list we got from a successful a beach - combing family as we've ever met. An umbrella. A blanket. A bottle of sun tan lotion. A sun hat, a cover-coat, and two bathing suits for every child. 'A bug bomb' (for when the flies hit the beach'). A thermos of ice water. A small first aid kit (antiseptic, sterile gauze, bandages, adhesive tape, scissors). Wading shoes for toddlers and run abouts if the beach in question is any [illegible] sharp stones and shells.

"And - oh, yes - a camera to preserve those sun - drenched days for next December and January viewing!"

Try This Tip When Cutting Roses

The color and fragrance of roses from your garden belong inside your home, too. If the thought of scratching your arms and hands on the thorny bushes has deterred you from enjoying the blooms indoors, avoid scratches by holding several thicknesses of double layer paper towels around the stem as you snip the flowers.

Stems can be cut as long or short as you like if you make certain to include one five-leaf cluster on the stem. To insure another bloom on the same stalk, cut on an angle with a sharp garden scissors just above another cluster of leaves.

To keep roses fresh until they are arranged in vases, wrap dampened paper towels around the stem bottoms.

When making gravy for roast duck, add a little orange juice and a few pinches of sugar.

Use Of Foil

It's not a good idea to cover the oven bottom or an entire rack of your oven with aluminum foil. Damage to the range and unsatisfactory baking results can be expected if foil is used incorrectly. A small 10 - 12 inch sheet of foil in the center of the oven bottom or on a rack below the cooking food will be sufficient to catch boil-overs.

Custard - type desserts may be thickened with eggs, flour or cornstarch. One egg has about the same thickening power as two tablespoons of flour or one tablespoon of cornstarch.

Cox-Allen Vows Exchanged In Calvary Baptist Church

Miss Goldie Allen became the bride of Mr. W. T. Cox in double ring services read June 27th at 8 p.m. in Calvary Baptist Church. Rev. George Shoff officiated at the candlelight ceremony, before an altar flanked with baskets of gladioli and candelabras covered with greenery.

Parents of the couple are Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Allen of 1102 Twenty - sixth Street, Snyder, and Mr. and Mrs. Travis Cox of Ira.

Presented in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length gown of peau de soie covered in Chantilly lace. The sleeves ended in petal points over the hands, and the bell skirt flowed into a chapel train. Her veil of silk illusion fell from a cabbage rose. She wore the traditional something old, in her shoe a penny minted the year of her birth; something new, pearls, a gift from the groom; something borrowed, the Bible she carried; something blue, a garter biven to her by her sister.

She carried a bouquet of white roses atop a white pearl Bible.

Norma Allen of Abilene attended her sister as maid of honor. She wore a dress of yellow polished cotton with sculptured neckline, cap cleeves and pleated skirt. Her brief veil of illusion fell from a yellow cabbage rose. Accessories were white kid gloves and satin heels matching her dress.

Trucilla Reeder was flower girl and dressed identical to the maid of honor. From her basket she dropped white rose petals.

Eddie Lloyd and Jackie Pevehouse served as ushers and lighted candles. William Sullinger was ring bearer.

Wayne Pitner, organist, rendered the traditional wedding music and accompanied Susan Sullenger who sang "Because" and "Whither Thou Goest."

Mike Sterling was best man.

A reception followed in fellowship hall. The table was laid with appointments in crystal and silver and was centered with a bouquet of yellow and white roses. Mrs. Jerry Reeder served the three - tiered wedding cake and Mrs. Bill Sullivan ladeled punch.

For her wedding trip to New Mexico the bride chose a blue linen suit with white patent accessories and the corsage from her bridal bouquet.

The couple are at home at 710 Thirtieth Street.

Mrs. Cox is a 1962 graduate of Snyder High School and Jessie's Beauty College. She is employed at Vogue Beauty Shop. The groom is a 1961 graduate of Ira High School and of Lubbock Barber College. He is employed at Highland Park Barber Shop.

Roasted vegetables are a real taste treat, prepared on the grill. Following are some cooking times recommended: 20 minutes for corn; 30 to 40 minutes for carrots, onions and turnips; 45 - 60 minutes for potatoes and squash, and 1½ to 2 hours for beets.

Space Age Misfiring

THE RISE AND FALL OF THE SPACE AGE. By Edwin Diamond.

The first Sputnik, rising in seeming defiance of gravity, stirred human imagination and ushered in a new opportunity to explore the universe.

But those 185 pounds of Soviet - made equipment didn't soar above ancient anchors of human fears and suspicions and more than occasional thirsts of avarice.

The space age is misfiring, says the author, because it was greeted not so much as a new age of man but as a new arena in the Cold War.

Diamond, long a science writer and now a senior editor of Newsweek, finds the space age stuttering also because of pressures to move ahead "too fast on assumptions made early and rather optimistically."

His brief (148 pages) and skillfully woven account packages many aspects of the space age with retro-rockets jibes at some myths, at suspected political pork-barrelling, military "high ground" defense concepts in space and abortive and costly programs, or the "arrogance" of some engineers and scientists, and the "glare of showmanship" surrounding the U. S. man-in-space program.

The public, he writes, has not been told of "strong evidence" that the Soviets may in fact not be trying to race to put the first men on the moon.

For false reasons, Sputnik accelerated the arms and missile race, he adds.

The Russians became caught in the backlash of their own grab for first - blush prestige in space, Diamond holds, but now the space age shows signs of contributing to a general wish for new arms control.

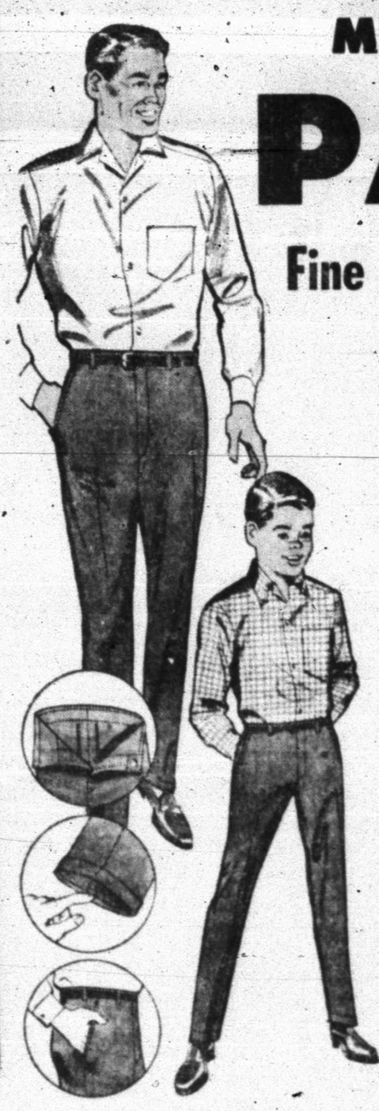

He says there is "still the possibility that the space age can bring peaceful cooperation and additions to the sum of human understanding. . ." and still "time to right the dream."

Friendship Treaty Marked Beginning Of Cooling Off

By CARL HARTMAN

BONN, Germany (AP) — The attachment between the French and West German governments has been cooling off ever since Konrad Adenauer and Charles de Gaulle signed their treaty of friendship 18 months ago.

A few days ago De Gaulle publicly attacked the West Germans as uncooperative and too respectful of U.S. leadership. Chancellor Ludwig Erhard's government replied angrily that its policy is independent of both France and America.

The Paris-Bonn match was always the kind that makes the neighbors ask what she can see in him and what he can see in her.

France has been Germany's "hereditary enemy" for centuries. Across the Rhine, French parents still make small children behave by threatening them with "Les Boches."

Adenauer and De Gaulle, remembering invasions and occupations, wanted to end all that. To them the United States and the Soviet Union were annoying newcomers on the European scene, and even Britain was an outsider. They saw no way to unite Europe except on the basis of a solid alliance between France and Germany, in their day Europe's two strongest powers.

But there were rifts that both sides tried — unsuccessfully — to keep in the background. De Gaulle wants to accept the boundaries that the Communists have drawn for Germany in the East. No West German politician could go along.

Just before the treaty was signed, De Gaulle publicly blackballed Britain for membership in the European Common Market — a membership many West Germans felt pledged to.

Smaller west European countries, eager for a broad European union, grew suspicious of what they saw as a "little Europe" dominated by a Paris-Bonn axis.

De Gaulle was withdrawing his forces from the Atlantic alliance, setting up his own nuclear air arm and refusing to join an Atlantic nuclear force. All these developments met strong criticism in West Germany, even within Adenauer's own party and government.

Six months after the treaty was signed it became clear that Erhard, a symbol of this criticism, would succeed Adenauer in the fall. Adenauer was quitting not only because he was 87. He opposed Erhard's succession and would have been glad to stay on. He was leaving because his Christian Democratic party had lost its clear majority in the 1961 election, and the price he had to pay for support from outside the party was a pledge to retire.

The West German Parliament ratified the French treaty. West Germany could hardly afford to oppose friendship with France. But it attached a preamble to the ratification law, expressing loyalty to the international policies that De Gaulle is against.

Then Erhard took over. In Germany, where religious differences often underline political disagreements, it was perhaps significant that Erhard and his team were largely Protestant. De Gaulle, Adenauer and their backers are largely Catholics.

Erhard and the men around him — all younger than Adenauer and De Gaulle — seem more concerned with taking an effective part in the power conflicts of today than in reconciling the hatreds of yesterday. They are impressed with the fact that the United States and Britain keep nine divisions of troops on the continent as a pledge of their involvement in its affairs.

The American and British troops, the U.S. atomic submarines, the U.S. 6th Fleet in the Mediterranean, the great complex of American nuclear weapons—all these seem to Erhard and his supporters the best guarantee of security they can get.

They do not want to endanger it by getting too close to De Gaulle. They see no advantage in teaming their own 11 divisions, lacking nuclear weapons, with the small and repeatedly vanquished French army which has still to get its first H-bomb.

Still the French-West German treaty went into effect, with the frequent high level meetings it prescribes. Cooperation moved forward on things like the exchange of students and television programs, but it failed to solve serious differences.

West Germany signed the limited ban on nuclear tests. France did not. The two countries still disagree sharply on the basic issue in the Common Market — how to set uniform prices for grain.

They could not get together on proposals for a European political union.

Nor has there been much progress in military cooperation. France and West Germany failed to agree on a battle tank and are now working at competitive models. The French put out feelers to see what help they could get in developing their atomic force. They drew in the feelers quickly when the West Germans asked what share they would have in its control. The answer, apparently, was none.

Adenauer and his friends have tried to mount a rebellion within the party. So far it has seemed to make little progress. Erhard challenged them to a vote of confidence in Parliament, certain that they could not win. The opposition Socialists pledged Erhard their support and the challenge has not been taken up.

Cronkite Is Replaced For Convention

NEW YORK (AP) — The Columbia Broadcasting System will replace Walter Cronkite with a two-man anchor team in its television coverage of the Democratic National Convention next month.

CBS announced Thursday that Robert Trout and Roger Mudd would be the anchor team.

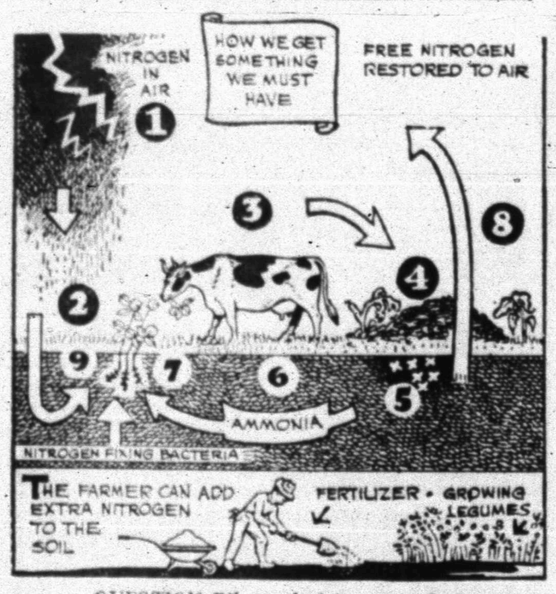

Cronkite will keep his nightly television newscast and will be the anchor man for other major stories, the network said.

Several television rating services indicated that CBS trailed the National Broadcasting Co. and the American Broadcasting Co. in audiences for the Republican National Convention. NBC and ABC both have two-man anchor teams.

Cronkite told the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin by telephone from a vacation resort in San Diego, Calif.: "The story is purely and simply the Madison Avenue ratings game. I've never objected to that because it's the only system we've got to measure our audience, imperfect as it may be.

"We took a clobbering in San Francisco and it seems perfectly reasonable that management at CBS would like to try something else to regain the audience."

Junior Editors Quiz on BIOLOGY

QUESTION: What is the "nitrogen cycle?"

• • •

ANSWER: Nitrogen is a very important element which all plants and animals need. The "nitrogen cycle" shows the natural way this material becomes available. 1—There is much nitrogen in the air. 2—Lightning combines this with oxygen and the mixture is carried into the soil by rain and turned into "nitrates," the form of nitrogen plants can use. 3—Animals get their needed nitrogen by eating plants. 4—Animal and plant wastes are returned to earth. 5—There they are attacked by the useful "bacteria of decay". 6—Ammonia is produced from this. 7—Other bacteria then change the ammonia into usable nitrates. 8—Much free nitrogen escapes to the air by the action of another kind of bacteria, ready to start the cycle again.

9—Certain plants have extra ways to get nitrogen. On the roots of the "legumes," such as clover, are the tiny "nitrogen fixing bacteria" which can take nitrogen from the air and turn it into usable nitrates. Farmers do not get enough nitrogen through rain, so they often plant and plow under these legumes and use nitrogen rich fertilizers.

• • •

FOR YOU TO DO: Nitrogen plays its part in making nitric acid and nitroglycerin, two substances both very useful but highly dangerous if carelessly handled. Find out about them and what they are used for.

DISCOTHEQUE COIFFURE—Swirling layers of large soft waves circle the crown with disc-like rhythm in this new "Discotheque Coiffure," designed by the Official Hair Fashion Committee of the National Hairdressers and Cosmetologists Association. It is a lively, young coiffure, particularly designed for the fun of Discotheque dances. The "Flirt Curl" at the nape, perfumed, of course, is another new hair fashion note of this elegantly shaped small head look. Superb hair shaping and soft permanent waving give the coiffure its ease of wear.

London Symphonies Are Nearing The Last Note

LONDON (AP) — Just how much longer can London's five symphony orchestras survive?

The question is one of the major problems of the London cultural world.

Four of the orchestras face a pressing need for financial support. The fifth is strongly entrenched because it is part of the giant British Broadcasting Corporation, and its 119 members have steady employment on full - time contracts.

The others must rely on subsidies from the government - controlled British Arts Council and the London County Council.

As things look now, the subsidies are not nearly high enough.

London boasts the largest number of classical orchestras of importance of any city in the world. They are the London Symphony, the New Philharmonic Orchestra, and London Philharmonic and the BBC Symphony Orchestra.

All have been conducted in their time by most of the great named in music.

At the moment the London Symphony, the London Philharmonic and the Philharmonia get 24,000 pounds ($67,000) each annually from two government supporting bodies. The Royal Philharmonic now has asked the government bodies for grants.

The Arts Council, which gets its funds from the British Treasruy, at the moment doesn't have enough to go around.

"The whole problem is under inquiry at the moment," said an official. "We must see how much work there is for the orchestras in concerts in London, the provinces and abroad; recording and film sessions; and isolated engagements."

A decision may be forthcoming before the end of the year. Then London will know how much good music it can expect from how many orchestras.

All five present orchestras have great histories and music lovers beam with pride over them.

Berlin's Generous Subsidy

Those who look into the financial problems of the music world give sideward glances of envy to such places as Berlin, where the annual subsidy for the Berlin Philharmonic is at least four times that of the three London orchestras together.

Attendance at concerts and recitals is not really the problem.

Attendance figures at the Royal Festival Hall have dropped about 2 per cent in the past year. However, building work going on at the hall is given as the reason. In fact, the hall is being closed down for a part of this year because of the construction work.

Anyway, crowds at concerts are generally governed by the program and the fame of the artists.

For instance, attendance goes up with Beethoven, especially with someone like Otto Klemperer conducting, and Britten's War Requiem is usually a sell-out, as is Verdi's Requiem. Tchaikovsky and Mozart also draw a good house.

Certain contemporary or adventurish music sometimes brings a drop of 50 per cent in attendance.

The British Arts Council wants the orchestras of London to continue. It would like to seek more money from the government treasury to that end.

One Reassembles

An indication of the problems facing the orchestras was the announcement by Walter Legge, founder and artistic director of the Philharmonic Orchestra, that he would end the existence of the noted musical group this year.

The musicians then quickly decided to continue as a body under the name, The New Philharmonia. They already have begun giving concerts.

Legge gave these reasons for suspending the old Philharmonia — contraction in the amount of recording in classical music; intense competition for the services of key players by broadcasting and television; lack of public support for concerts given by any but the most famous conductors and soloists.

He also said there were not enough players in Britian of the quality to make two orchestras equal to the present standards, for example, of the Cleveland Symphony and the Berlin Philharmonic. There are musicologists in Britian who would disagree with this statement.

The London orchestras are considered by many critics to be among the best in the world. These critics say the orchestral player may be overworked and underpaid, but he has the reputation of being among the finest.

The four orchestras — outside the BBC Symphony — are cooperative bodies in which the members own the shares. They are run by orchestral managers who are musicians themselves.

Rank and file members of the London Symphony Orchestra, for example, get an average of 2,200 pounds ($6,160) annually. Leaders of the sections make between 3,000 ($8,400) and 5,000 pounds ($14,000).

Their existence is filled with hard work. They are occupied most of the day, and most evenings. During the average month they have three days' rest. The season runs all year and they can't get much social life — or home life, either.

Many of the players do free-lance television work and some teach.

Oldest Is 60

Of the five London orchestras, the London Symphony is by far the oldest. It was created 60 years ago; according to one account this took place in a railroad car between Manchester and London. In the ensuing years it has had only six conductors. The present is Pierre Monteux, the 89 - year - old maestro.

The BBC Symphony was formed in 1932 by Sir Thomas Beecham. After the war its guest conductors have included Walter, Koussevitsky, Wilhelm Furtwangler among others. John Pritchard is the principal conductor.

Sir Thomas Beecham also founded the Royal Philharmonic Orchestra in 1946. This magnificent orchestra — while Sir Thomas was alive — has been in difficulty since his death in 1961. Its principal conductor and artistic director is Rudolf Kempe.

Fights For Indians' Civil Rights

MOHAWK WITH CAUSE — Mrs. Shirley H. Witt.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — This is a story of a civil rights movement which hardly anybody hears or talks about.

It concerns an ethnic group which reportedly is the poorest in the country and is said to have the shortest life span and the highest disease rate.

Mrs. Shirley H. Witt of Ann Arbor is one of the spearheads on behalf of her people — the thousands of Indians scattered across the country.

A Mohawk Indian, she is vice president of the National Indian Youth Council, an organization dedicated to making things right for the "forgotten Americans."

Mrs. Witt says Indians want the federal government to live up to the treaties it made with the various Indian tribes. And she says her people want freedom — freedom from proverty and disease.

In Dam's Path

The Indians also want assurances that the white man will not flood out their property or take it away from them.

Another member of the Indians' crusade, John R. Winchester of Belleville, Mich., describes tribes in the Upper Peninsula living in miserable shacks with newspaper - covered walls and lighted by kerosene lamps.

Winchester, a Potowatomi Indian, believes the Seneca tribe in Pennsylvania might be even worse off. Indians there may lose their homes in the path of the Kinuza Dam project.

Winchester and Mrs. Witt say they saw Indian homes vanishing under rising waters, even though Congress hadn't decided how much the 140 Senecans were to receive for their property.

At 1807 Prices?

Yet the government, in the Pickering Treaty of 1794, promised "never to claim nor disturb" the Seneca reservation land.

In Michigan, the Potowatomi tribe has 35 treaties of which, Mrs. Witt claims, only eight have been honored.

Although the government wants to settle these Indian claims Mrs. Witt fears the state's 10,000 Indian residents may be paid only a few cents an acre.

The 'few cents an acre' price would be a figure appropriate to 1807 when Michigan Indians signed the treaty.

Winchester has asked Gov. George W. Romney to re-establish the state's Indian Commission to cope with these land problems and others.

Shoes Are Seductive

ATLANTA (AP) — As a sex symbol, the shoe is kicking up its heels.

A low - throated shoe is slashed to show the cleavage of the toes, much as a dress is cut to show the cleavage of the bosom.

Another sexy shoe is a nude one made only of tiny little straps. Or the glittery gold and silver bangled shoes much in evidence among Atlanta's Metropolitan Opera audience.

No one who has ever taken a good look at women's shoes could ever think their chief value is comfort. The teetering needle heel with the dagger point toes of a few seasons ago was neither comfortable nor alluring.

Get The Point?

Or take the spiked heel. Judo experts advise women of its weapon to protect themselves if assaulted.

When Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson flew back to Washington after a whirlwind day of activities here in May, news reporters said the first thing she did on the plane was to kick off her shoes and comment:

'I violated a rule of mine today, wearing high heels at a reception."

The shoe as a symbol of allure reaches into history.

Egyptian women wore jeweled rings on their toes, and ankle bangles, painting the soles of their feet red.

People were well aware of the seductiveness of shoes in Biblical times. Judith upset Holofernes in the Apocryphal book with 'sandles which ravished his eyes."

The Red Shoes

The Roman bride wore saffron colored shoes as a romantic tradition, but no Roman woman of good repute would have worn red shoes.

As proof of the emphasis of the shoes as status and seduction: One has only to look at Chinese women's feet from the 1200s to the 20th Century—they were often crippled to a size resembling a lily root.

History isn't clear, but this probably came about because the Empress Taki was born with tiny club feet. Either a decree was handed down when she was born that no woman was noble unless she had tiny feet, or the empress decreed it herself when she realized her deformity.

Bound To Totter

At any rate, it became a fashion which handicapped Chinese women for centuries. The best they could manage was a tottering walk.

Old shoes are still thrown at newlyweds for luck — and horseshoes nailed above doors for the same reason.

Jayne Mansfield, the movie star whose chief attraction is not in her feet, says she owns 200 pairs of shoes.

'European men consider a woman's feet part of her sexual attraction far more than American men do," says Miss Mansfield. 'Perhaps that's because American women don't emphasize their feet as one of their most potent physical charms."

Good Glues

New epoxy resin adhesives, a major boon to home repairs because they often form a bond stronger than the object being repaired, now are being used to make ceramic tile installations even better. The new epoxies are chemical — and stain-resistnt and provide better-than-ever joints between the tiles.

A half cup of orange, apricot or peach marmalade or a cup of honey make a good glaze for a baked ham. Apply the glaze during the last 30 minutes of baking.

Nip That Slip

Meat grainders have a way of slipping, no matter how firmly you think you've clamped them down. It's especially hard to keep a grainder stationary if you have to attach it to a metal cabinet edge.

To hold the grinder firmly in place, fold a paper towel and place it between the clamp and the cabinet. This also will prevent denting or scratching the edge of the cabinet or table.

Defrosting Foods

The quickest way to defrost frozen foods is with your oven. Place the wrapped or packaged food into the oven in a shallow pan. Set the temperature control at 155 degrees, or on the "defrost" setting. For warming frozen baked foods we recommend a temperature of 170 degrees.

Homemade Sherbet Is So Cooling

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

IF YOU'RE interested in having a recipe for a homemade sherbet to serve all summer long to delight your family and friends, we have no hesitation whatsoever in recommending this rule.

This frozen dessert calls for easy - to - have - on - hand ingredients, and it's simple to concoct. The frozen orange juice concentrate and mashed banana that go into it make an absolutely luscious combination of flavors.

One of our "pickiest" tasters asked us for this recipe! She told us that she planned to serve the sherbet parfait style, layered with vanilla ice cream. A fine idea that you, too, might like to try.

ORANGE BANANA SHERBET

2 eggs
2-3 cup sugar
½ cup light corn syrup
2 cups buttermilk
1 can (6 ounces) frozen orange juice concentrate, undiluted and thawed
¾ cup mashed ripe banana (mash just before using)

In a large bowl beat the eggs to combine yolks and whites. Slowly beat in sugar, then corn syrup. Mix in buttermilk and orange concentrate. Pour into one or two shallow metal pans; place in freezer. Freeze until almost firm—about 2 hours. Turn into large mixing bowl; break up into small pieces and beat just until consistency is uniform — do not melt. Stir in banana. Return to freezer pan or serving dishes and freeze until firm — about 3 to 5 hours. Makes 1 quart.

"THE OLE COIFFURE"—The new "Ole Coiffure" is designed to harmonize with Spanish fashions in clothing, which will have great fashion importance this winter. Though retaining its classic beauty and traditional charm in the front view, the silhouette of the coiffure from the side displays the grace of the small head and short hair that make news in hair fashions. For day, it is an elegant and subdued coiffure, but with a mysterious and seductive charm. For evening, the crown hair can be combed up high into dancing "Flirt Curls" that resemble a Spanish comb. The coiffure can be worn with or without a center part.

The Gardeners Corner

BY EARL ARONSON
AP Newsfeatures

AN INCREASING number of gardeners are experimenting with root feeding of trees, shrubs and flowers. The idea is to get the plant food right to the roots of plants, bypassing grass and micro - organisms which live just under the surface of the soil.

We have tried two methods of root feeding.

One is simple and ready-made in the form of plant food cartridges. A tool is available which connects to the garden hose. It has a transparent chamber for plant food, a water shut-off handle and a 27-inch pointed tube to go into the ground. When the handle is turned, water flows through the chamber, dissolving the cartridges and carrying the plant food in solution to feeder roots.

The other method, requiring more muscle and patience, involves boring holes in the ground around the plant, inserting fertilizer, replacing part of the plug and then watering to dissolve the fertilizer — or waiting for rain to do the job.

Root feeding has another advantage. It aerates the soil, which is beneficial for deep-rooted trees and shrubs.

Grass, Southern Trim

One of our Southern advisers recommends the following mowing heights for various grasses: Bermudas, ½ to 1 inch; Tall Fescue, 2½ inches; Creeping Fescues and Kentucky Blue, 1½-2 inches; St. Augustine, 1½-2½ inches; Zoysias, ½ - 1 inch; Centipede, 1½ inches; Carpet, 1½ inches.

Apply dust or spray to plants, especially rose bushes, after a rain or other watering, rather than when they are dry.

Do not prune spring flowering shrubs until after they have finished blooming. If the stems have become numerous and thick, cut out a few at ground level (the weakest) to open the plant to air and sun and improve the appearance.

An attractive new hydrangea is the silver variegated Mariesi, which has deep green leaves edged with silver. In acid soil, the blooms will be deep blue; otherwise they will be pink. They will bloom from early summer until frost.

Hydrangeas like light shade and an ample supply of water. Plant them where they will be protected from wind and in northern areas hill them with earth and a mulch of straw or hay in winter. Another winter protection is to cut back the plant, then pot it, bring it in-to a warm place and begin watering it.

Strawberries are delicious served with orange juice for breakfast and both fruits offer generous amounts of ascorbic acid (Vitamin C). Add the orange juice just before serving the berries.

If you live in the north, you may expect trouble trying to make a rugged outdoor plant of Hydrangea you received as a Mothers Day gift. Severe cold will kill blossom buds. Put this plant outdoors for the summer, store in a cool place in the fall for about three months, then pot it, bring it in-to a warm place and begin watering it.

Mother Recalls The Sugar-Spice

THE LITTLE KINGDOM. By Hughie Call.

Little girls are made of everything nice, and three of the nice things are eagerness, devotion and affection.

This slim book of a mother's memories of her little girl is filled with these qualities. It is a story about one member of the little kingdom where children live, told with unashamed sentiment and pathos.

The little girl's name really was Louise, but somehow that had been changed to Wezie, and everyone called her that.

The scene is a remote sheep ranch in Montana, where animals — both tame and wild — play a great part in everyone's lives.

There was Patches, Wezie's pinto pony. When the little girl began to grow up, he was terribly jealous of his successor Nig. There was Sweet Adline, a wild goose raised from the egg, and there was Missie, the orphaned antelope fawn. Wezie had to be brave, of course, when each of them reverted to the wild.

There is comedy in the efforts of Wezie's mother to raise turkeys, and in their handyman's insistence on keeping an old sow named Dainty Bess. And there is a little story of a herder's valiant collie.

Sometimes it is a comfort and delight for hardbitten adults to slip back into a compassionate world where little girls live, and where unadorned eagerness, devotion and affection are the real ingredients of unsophisticated, natural living. This book is a gateway to that magical little kingdom.

An extra peppermill in the house? You may want to use it for grinding rosemary.
