Military helicopter crashes near school: No survivors

Associated Press

HUTCHINS — A military helicopter crashed and burst into flames near a school Friday. Police said there were no survivors.

It was not immediately clear how many people were on board. A military spokesman said the CH-53 helicopter normally carries a crew of three to four people.

The helicopter crashed just before 5 p.m. in a wooded area near Wilmer-Hutchins High School in Hutchins, a suburb about 10 miles southeast of downtown Dallas.

Velva Washburn said the helicopter started making strange noises before it went down.

"The blades continued to turn but there was a wooping sound," she said. "And that was all. There was a pop and then it went down."

She said the pilot appeared to be struggling to stay airborne.

"Whoever was piloting it is a hero in my book because he could have killed us all," Washburn said.

Dallas Police Lt. Charles Epperson said it looked as if the back end of the helicopter was hanging down before the crash.

"The aircraft was flying low and strangely," he said.

When fire officials first arrived at the site, "they were hearing explosions, but it may have been fuel tanks," Epperson said

The nearest military base to the crash site is the U.S. Naval Air Station-Dallas, about 15 miles away.

A spokesman for the Navy, Matt Brown, said it wouldn't be uncommon for Marines to be doing maneuvers in the area.

Republic news

LONDON—An American man claiming to be an ambassador of the Republic of Texas separatist group tried Thursday to present his credentials to the British government, but got no response. Robert Hertner visited Buckingham Palace and No. 10 Downing Street trying to arrange meetings with Queen Elizabeth II and Prime Minister Tony Blair. Both were unavailable, but Hertner presented police at Blair's office with a copy of a treaty he says Texas and Britain signed in 1840 covering navigation, trade and consular rights. A spokeswoman in Dallas said the group's leader, Richard McLaren, had authorized Hertner to present his credentials to the British government and try to set up a British faction of the separatist group.

Victim alters testimony in McVeigh trial

Associated Press

DENVER — Timothy McVeigh's star witness backfired on the defense Friday, changing her story in a way that hurt him, disclosing she spent half her life in mental institutions and admitting "I don't recall much."

"You can tell me one thing one week and I would forget the next week," said Oklahoma City bombing survivor Daina Bradley.

Ms. Bradley, who lost two children, her mother and a leg in the April 19, 1995, explosion, previously said she saw a Ryder truck park in front of the federal building just before the blast and a lone man get out — a man with olive skin who bore no resemblance to McVeigh.

Friday, limping into court on her prosthetic limb, Ms. Bradley altered her account to say two men emerged from the truck — the olive-skinned man and a light-skinned man whom she could not rule out as being McVeigh.

The 21-year-old woman even wavered on that recollection, citing the toll of years of taking medication for mental disorders and the trauma of the bombing. She was trapped under rubble in the building's Social Security office for five hours and was only freed after rescuers cut off her leg.

McVeigh attorney Cheryl Ramsey took Ms. Bradley through several pretrial interviews in which she never mentioned the light-skinned man.

"I don't remember half the things I said," Ms. Bradley said.

McVeigh lead attorney Stephen Jones had made Ms. Bradley one of the defense's most important witnesses, even leading off his opening statement by saying she would describe a man who bore no resemblance to McVeigh getting out of the Ryder truck moments before the bombing that killed 168 people.

"She did not see anyone else," Jones told the jury then.

But all that fell apart under direct questioning when she said: "I seen two men get out of the truck." She described the new second man as a "white male" who "walked off very fast across the street."

Sheriff's Office makes second arrest in sexual-assault cases

Kes Gilhome
Staff Writer

A Midland teen-ager was arrested Thursday on a charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child, one day after his father was arrested on an identical charge. The Sheriff's Office is looking for a third man in connection with the assaults.

Joseph Ray Howle, 19, is being held at Midland County Detention Center on a $45,000 bond.

Enos Ray Howle Jr., 38, is being held on three counts of aggravated sexual assault of a child. He was arrested Wednesday on one count of aggravated sexual assault of a child and was charged with two additional felonies on Thursday.

Justice of the Peace Joe Matlock set Enos Howle's bond at $200,000 — $100,000 for the first charge, $50,000 each for the second and third.

The charges stem from alleged assaults on three girls — ages 7, 10 and 13 — at an address in Midland County, just south of the city limits.

The arrests stem from a report made by the oldest girl, according to Sgt. Terry Cowin of Midland County Sheriff's Office Youth Services.

"The 13 year-old made an outcry to Child Protective Services," he said. "She was interviewed by the Children's Advocacy Center and she said that she had been sexually assaulted in numerous ways.

"She also said that her two younger sis-

RECANT: Defense witness changes testimony

(From 1A)

McVeigh, who is fair-skinned, sat across the courtroom at the defense table, showing little expression and staring intently at the witness.

Repeatedly pressing Ms. Bradley on her changing statements, the defense suggested Ms. Bradley came up with the new story about a second man when she was subpoenaed two weeks ago to appear in a courtroom full of fellow bombing survivors.

"You have never said that Timothy McVeigh was the person who got out of the truck, have you?" Ms. Ramsey asked.

"No," Ms. Bradley replied, adding, "He got out and walked away very quickly."

Although the defense knew that Ms. Bradley changed her story last week after a meeting with prosecutors, they decided to call her to the stand anyway because her description of the olive-skinned man — with curly hair under a baseball cap — fits that of the mysterious John Doe 2. It also fits in with earlier defense testimony that a second person was seen at the Ryder rental agency and the motel where McVeigh stayed days before the bombing.

As her testimony wore on, she became quieter and sat with her head slumped over.

"Are you doing OK?" U.S. Attorney Patrick Ryan asked when he took the podium to begin cross-examination. "I need to talk to my lawyer," she said.

The judge called a 20-minute break.

When Ms. Bradley returned, Ryan suggested she had no clear recollection of the events of the morning of the bombing. Ms. Bradley said, for instance, the truck was parked in the wrong direction on a one-way street.

Ms. Bradley also recalled being heavily medicated when she was in a mental health facility from the age of 7 to 16.

"It caused me to lose memory of who I was and people around me," she said.

Defense attorneys later introduced Todd Bunting, the man identified by the FBI as the menacing face in the sketch of John Doe 2. The FBI later acknowledged that Bunting, who went to the Ryder truck agency in Junction, City, Kan., the day after McVeigh allegedly rented the bomb-carrying truck, was wrongly identified and had nothing to do with the bombing.

Bunting said he saw the sketches of the two men wanted for the bombing on television in his barracks and thought the picture of the first man — which prosecutors maintain is McVeigh — looked "real familiar." Bunting said the sketch vaguely resembled Michael Hertig, who accompanied him to the Ryder truck agency.

Bunting said when he saw the figure of the second man, and heard there was a $2 million reward, he said "Shoot, if that was me I'd turn myself in."

ARREST: Authorities looking for third suspect

ters had been sexually assaulted by Enos Howle and Joseph Howle," Cowin said. "The assaults occurred over the last three years.

"From this information we got the first arrest warrant (for Enos Howle) for assaulting the 13-year-old. On May 22 I had the 10-year-old and the 7-year-old interviewed and from their statements I got (additional) warrants for the arrest of Enos Howle. Also from that statement I got an arrest warrant for Joseph Howle."

Each charge of aggravated sexual assault of a child is a first-degree felony carrying with it a maximum sentence of life imprisonment.

Investigators have not ruled out the possibility that more men were involved and are pursuing a third suspect.

"She (the 13-year-old) also said she had been assaulted by an 18-year-old boy," Cowin said. "There will be a warrant issued for him in the near future."

According to officials at the Children's Advocacy Center of Midland — part of the Midland Rape Crisis Center — there have been 45 reports of sexual assault of a child so far this year. "We think that's high," said Education Director Valerie Thomerson.

"There were 147 reported sexual assaults last year," said Betty Dickerson, the advocacy center's executive director. "Of those, 83 were children at the time of the assault.

"(The city of) Midland ranks No. 1 in reported sexual assaults per capita in Texas," Ms. Dickerson said. She attributed the high number of reports to the overall education level in Midland and the "better cooperation" between law enforcement agencies.

Friends, family bury 18-year-old herdsman

Hearst New Service

REDFORD — In an age when children are thought to grow up too fast, Ezequiel Hernandez was a throwback.

He had just turned 18, but few considered him an adult. He was a ranch boy who liked to ride into the rugged hills of Texas' Big Bend region on horseback and look for old coins.

He talked about growing up to become a game warden or a park ranger or maybe even a Texas Ranger, but he was still a high school sophomore with a slow smile who had yet to get his driver's license.

"To me he was just another one of my sophomore boys," said Teloa Swinnea, Presidio High School principal. "There was a certain innocence to him. A naivete. He hadn't been around the block."

Hernandez was buried Friday after an hour-long funeral on a desert hill of yucca and creosote not far from where he was shot to death earlier this week by a team of four Marines on an anti-drug operation.

Some 500 people stood about the hill, many crying and hugging. The crowd included two busloads of students from Hernandez's Presidio High School.

Inside a small tent set up for the Spanish-language service, framed by flowers and flanked by a gray casket, the Hernandez family wept.

"It's hard to believe he died that way," said Silvia Ortiz, a 19-year-old cousin of Hernandez. "We'll never forget."

Hernandez was shot while tending to his family's goats, allegedly after he fired his .22-caliber rifle twice at the camouflaged soldiers.

Authorities say Hernandez was preparing to fire a third time when a Marine team leader, fearing his comrades were in danger, fatally shot him once with an M-16 without issuing a warning.

The nation's top Border Patrol official, acknowledging that authorities have no reason to believe Hernandez was involved in illegal activities, called the shooting a "tragedy."

But locals, flying the Presidio High School flag at half-staff and wearing black ribbons, wanted more than sympathy.

"This is not a tragedy," said Swinnea. "This is an atrocity."

The incident was the first time a member of the military has fired on a U.S. citizen since troops were deployed on joint Border Patrol operations in 1989. The law prohibits the military from direct involvement in domestic affairs, but soldiers can defend themselves.

Earlier this year, an Army Green Beret who was conducting surveillance near Brownsville, Texas, shot and wounded a man from Matamoros, Mexico.

Military officials, while offering their sympathy, expressed satisfaction with the explanation of the Marines. But a host of questions remain unanswered, not the least of which is whether Hernandez fired his rifle. Members of Hernandez's family and others who were nearby at the time of the incident say they heard only one shot.

Whether a grand jury will hand up an indictment rests heavily on the ongoing investigation of the Texas Rangers, who are awaiting test results on the weapons involved in the incident. Members of the Rangers said Friday that Hernandez may not have known what he was firing at, since the Marines were camouflaged and had netting over their helmets.

Those who knew Hernandez say he would not have knowingly fired at anybody. A soft-spoken youth, he carried a .22 to ward off wild animals and for occasional target practice. Family members described Hernandez as a dutiful son who sought to avoid conflict.

"He was the good son," said Rick Chapa, Hernandez's brother-in-law. "He wouldn't have hurt a fly."

Hernandez is recalled by his school bus driver as the one who always said good morning — "not a saint, but a good kid." Hernandez remembered his mother's birthday. He volunteered in the school library and is remembered by Christine Marquez, who taught him folkloric dance, as "punctual, responsible and enthusiastic."

Senate offers alternative property-tax cut measure

AUSTIN (AP) — Accounting tricks would help fund a plan to lower local school property taxes — and thousands of Texas businesses would be off the hook — under a concept floated Friday.

The idea was conceived by Senate members of a joint committee trying to find a compromise between the House and Senate's vastly different property tax cut proposals.

House members on the committee were skeptical, with one it calling the plan "smoke and mirrors."

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, said state senators are willing to offer Texans higher property tax cuts than those in a plan already passed by the full Senate. But he added that most senators won't vote to expand or increase other state taxes to pay for the larger property tax cuts.

A plan approved by the House would raise about $4 billion in new and expanded state taxes to pay for $5 billion in property tax cuts every two years. The Senate-passed plan would lower local school property taxes by about $2.5 billion every two years, raising about $1.1 billion to pay for it.

Both plans would expand the state business tax to all companies and would use money left over from the current two-year budget to make up the difference.

The idea offered by Bivins would delay billions of dollars in state payments that would be due in the next two-year budget until the following budget, which begins Sept. 1, 1999.

"It's a financing scheme, just like every housewife does. We have used it successfully in the past," Bivins said.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, referred to the idea as "smoke and mirrors."

"I don't mind doing it with my money, but when it comes to the people's money, I have a different attitude," he said.

The idea, not voted on by the committee, also would eliminate the proposals to expand the business franchise tax.

Rankin gets ready for 'Barbados Do'

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

RANKIN — The "Barbados Do" this weekend in Rankin will be offering dancing, sheep-dog trials, 42 domino playing, bull-riding, and good eating for West Texas town and country folks.

"We will have a good time," pledged Nancy Poage, who is promoting the event, which is also billed as the Fifth Annual World Championship Barbados Cook-off. It is sponsored by the Rankin Chamber of Commerce in and about the Dub Day Arena.

There will be dancing "under the stars" beginning at 9 p.m. today on the bandstand. "It is West Texas at its best," she said.

And the spirits among the ranchers, cowboys, and sheep and goat raisers ought to be beaming because of the healthy grassland.

"This year, we have had all the rain in the world," said Mrs. Poage, who ranches with her husband, Bud Poage.

Events include the sheep-dog (Border Collie) trials at 7:30 a.m.; the 42 domino games at 10 a.m. under shade trees; the Little Texas Singers from McCamey's primary school at noon; the "most popular" steer saddling at 1:30 p.m.; the judging of barbecued Barbados sheep, ribs, and briskets, and then pies, beans, and breads at 3 p.m.

"All day long, there will be a carnival," Mrs. Poage said.

Sunday's events include the Tommy Owens-produced bull-riding contest and sheep-dog trials at 1 p.m.

Rankin, the hometown of the original "Barbados Do," is about 55 miles south of Midland off Texas Highway 349.

The annual event got under way in an effort to pull the community out of a slump.

"Rankin experienced a drop in population, a lot of attrition and a lot of depression," Mrs. Poage said. (Community folks figured) "if something is going to get done, we will have to do it ourselves."

Congo's leader appoints government; first anti-Kabila protests begin

KINSHASA, Congo (AP) — Congo's new leader appointed his government Friday — and mainly, it's him. Laurent Kabila kept the bulk of power for himself, giving only two posts to followers of a popular opposition leader.

Shouting "Dictator!" several hundred outraged supporters of Etienne Tshisekedi marched through the streets of the capital, denouncing Kabila as no better than the corrupt leader he usurped and demanding that Tshisekedi be made prime minister.

It was an abrupt reversal. Just six days ago, residents were hailing Kabila as Congo's liberator for his ouster of President Mobutu Sese Seko in a nine-month sweep across Africa's third-largest nation.

After changing the country's name from Zaire to Congo and naming himself president, Kabila picked a new government that did not include Tshisekedi (pronounced CHEE-sa-kedie).

He saved most posts for his Alliance of Democratic Forces for the Liberation of Congo, and reserved control of the military for himself. He refused to name a prime minister.

Tshisekedi had been prime minister twice since 1991, both times ousted by Mobutu, and his supporters want the job for him again. But while he is popular in Kinshasa — where he led a series of successful strikes against Mobutu's regime — it is unclear how far his popularity extends.

He has a low international profile. Critics call him obstinate and say he's prone to rash moves. And Tshisekedi must compete with Kabila, who firmly holds power and controls a loyal fighting force.

After Kabila announced his government, Tshisekedi's supporters marched 12 miles from their leader's home in suburban Kinshasa to the parliament building.

Singing songs criticizing Kabila and praising Tshisekedi, the crowd attacked at least three bystanders, tearing a pro-Kabila shirt off one man and beating another man with a chair. One of Kabila's soldiers fired a shot in the air to scatter the crowd, but no injuries were reported.

The marchers stopped briefly at the U.S. Embassy, where they shouted criticism at Washington's recognition of Kabila as Congo's leader.

At a news conference, Tshisekedi acknowledged his refusal to discuss politics with an Alliance official, Deo Bugera, dispatched to meet with him Wednesday, and demanded a face-to-face meeting with Kabila.

"For me, he is not the president," Tshisekedi told a news conference. "He is the candidate for president."

Of 13 government posts announced before dawn Friday, two were given to members of Tshisekedi's Union for Democracy and Social Progress. Both are now considered traitors by the party.

Kabila's information minister told journalists the new government will have no deputy president or prime minister, meaning Kabila holds the lone leadership position, as well as the defense portfolio.

The government includes seven members of Kabila's Alliance and six from other groups. No one linked to Mobutu's regime is on the list, and four posts still need to be filled.

"We were open to any tendency except Mobutu's followers, those who terrorized and oppressed our people," Alliance official Gaetan Kakudji told a news conference. "We've forgiven, but we can't forget what the oppressors did."

While Congo's new leader was forming his government, the former president of Zaire made another stop on his humiliating journey into exile, landing Friday in the Morrocan capital of Rabat.

The ailing dictator may own luxurious properties around the globe, but countries have been reluctant to offer him sanctuary.

Mobutu, who has prostate cancer, fled his home village of Gbadolite on Sunday and arrived without warning in Togo. Togo's government opposition wanted him gone, so Mobutu went to Morocco.

His status there is temporary, too. King Hassan II made it clear that Mobutu could spend "several days" in Morocco before moving on to an unnamed permanent destination.

But with nearly 32 years of Mobutu dictatorship over, some Zairians wonder if Kabila will be any better. The Alliance has said it was committed to democracy, but Kakudji made no mention of a date for elections promised by Kabila.

At his news conference, Tshisekedi warned that Zairians would not tolerate replacing one dictator with another.

Iranians turn out in record numbers to vote for president

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Faced with a choice of looser or tighter restrictions on daily life, Iranians turned out in record numbers Friday to elect a new president in an showdown between hard-liners and moderates inside the ruling Muslim clergy.

The front runners were the ardent conservative Ali Akbar Nateq-Nouri and the more moderate Mohammad Khatami. The winner will replace President Hashemi Rafsanjani, who by law must step down in August after two terms.

The candidates, both 54-year-old clerics, have decidedly different visions of the Islamic Republic's future. And their election battle has generated more interest among Iranians than any other race since the 1979 Islamic revolution that overthrew the U.S.-backed shah.

Two other candidates are also running, but they are not expected to be a factor.

Iranians living in some foreign countries voted overwhelmingly for Khatami, according to the official Islamic Republic News Agency. In China, Khatami won 113 of the 211 votes cast, and in Malaysia, he captured 152 of the 206 ballots, it said.

In Iran, the state-run radio broadcast patriotic songs and — in a sign of Iran's animosity to the United States — used Washington as a prod to get out the vote.

"Every vote is like a bullet in the heart of the United States," said the announcers.

So many people turned out that voting was extended two hours at the nation's 33,440 polling stations. Every Iranian older than 15 — or 33 million people — were eligible to cast ballots and the Iranian news agency expected 25 million to do so.

Initial results are expected tonight and final results Sunday. If no candidate wins a majority, a runoff between the top two vote-getters will be held a week later.

Judging by crowds at rallies, Khatami far outshines Nateq-Nouri in popularity. But Nateq-Nouri has powerful backers: the Shiite Muslim clerical establishment, the army and the Bazaaris — Tehran's influential merchants.

In northern Tehran, hundreds of people mobbed Khatami when he arrived to vote Friday. One man pushed away Khatami's bodyguards, grabbed the candidate and kissed him on both cheeks.

Khatami has also gained special popularity among the young.

"He should lift the ban on satellite dishes and restrictions on access to many sites on the Internet. Both of these are realities of modern life," said 22-year-old computer operator Mehrdad Yavarpanah.

Nateq-Nouri's hard-line faction banned satellite TV dishes several years ago — a move which Khatami, a former culture minister, has cautiously opposed.

Older voters were often guided by religious convictions.

"I want to vote for Nateq because I can trust him to stick to the revolutionary values," said Jasar Khodaie, a 43-year-old truck driver.

The enthusiasm generated by the election filled the air. Some 500 voters spilled out into the street at the Hosseiniyeh Ershad, a mosque in northern Tehran, causing a traffic jam.

Additional ballots had to be rushed to some booths that ran out less than three hours after polls opened. Elsewhere, buses were brought in to serve as mobile voting booths after crowds overwhelmed the original stations.

For the first time since the 1979 revolution, the major election issue did not appear to be the economy, which suffers high unemployment and more 24 percent inflation.

This time, the issue was personal freedoms.

No one expects Khatami to bring a fundamental change in Iran's clergy-dominated politics. He can not scrap the Muslim code that dictates almost every aspect of daily life — such as how women dress in public — but many believe that he can relax some strictures.

In the cities, public opinion is almost unanimously behind Khatami, despite moves by hard-line clerics to swing the election in Nateq-Nouri's favor.

Drug smuggling

Three-hundred pounds of marijuana, with a street value of $200,000, was recovered after a traffic stop in Winkler County Friday.

Alejandro Lopez Ayala, 32, from Mexico, was arrested on charges of felony possession and smuggling of marijuana, according to the Permian Basin Drug Task Force.

A K-9 unit discovered the drugs in a hidden compartment of Ayala's pickup, according to the report.

Ayala was transported to the Winkler County Jail.

Outdoor cooking provides perfect recipe for trouble

CORPUS CHRISTI (AP) — As pit master of the Texas Gulf Coast Barbecue Cookers Association, Lon Babcock knows that chefs often have no more sense than the brisket on the grill when it comes to cooking safely over an open fire.

"It happens all the time with your normal backyard barbecuer," Babcock said. "Invariably, they load up the barbecue with charcoal, then take lighter fluid and soak the tar out of it."

Of course, Babcock said, it's a recipe for disaster when the match hits the coals.

"I've done it myself," the Magnolia resident said. "I had a fire going, and I put a few more sticks of wood on, but it didn't get going so I sprayed some more fluid on it.

"Basically, I was thinking with my tail side instead of my brain, and I made a little bomb," Babcock said. "Fire flashed all the way up the front of my body and took all my hair with it. It did a number on my mustache. I was kind of bald and red for a while after that."

As Memorial Day approaches and Texans break out the grill, emergency-room physicians and nurses say they're prepared for patients like Babcock who barbecue themselves. "Ah yes, the ol' barbecue injury. We see our share of those," said Wally Fears, a registered nurse in the emergency room at Spohn Memorial Hospital. "We've even had a few patients who have been treated multiple times for barbecue injuries."

Usually, barbecue injuries aren't too severe, Fears said. Chefs typically have first-degree burns and singed hair.

Occasionally, though, healthcare workers in the emergency room see barbecue victims with second- and third-degree burns that require plastic surgery or are infected, Fears said. Leslie Enz, the emergency-room director at Spohn Memorial Hospital, said that on the average, two or three patients are treated for barbecue-related injuries each month at the hospital. "That picks up on holidays if the weather is nice," Enz said. "People do things that aren't real smart. They put gasoline on the fire when they don't think it's hot enough.

"They wear loose clothing that catches on fire," she said. "They drink while they're cooking, and they end up barbecuing themselves."

Arrests of war crimes suspects seen as key to peace in Bosnia

SARAJEVO, Bosnia-Herzegovina (AP) — With time running out for the NATO-led peace force, the search for Bosnian war criminals is gaining new momentum.

Of the 74 suspects indicted by the international war crimes tribunal in The Hague, Netherlands, only eight have been apprehended and they're mostly low-level figures.

Western officials say top suspects must be brought to justice before the force leaves Bosnia in mid-1998. Some are pushing for action even sooner — before local elections scheduled for September.

For months, the hunt has gone nowhere, apparently for fear that capturing suspects could mean casualties for foreign troops or new fighting in Bosnia. There are 8,500 Americans among the 31,500 soldiers in the NATO-led mission in Bosnia.

Western officials say that without the arrest of suspects such as former Bosnian Serb leader Radovan Karadzic there can be little hope of a lasting peace.

"There can be no real confident expectation of reconciliation while the most serious war criminals remain at large," British Foreign Secretary Robin Cook said on a visit to Washington this week.

The peace force has managed to keep Bosnia calm during the year and a half it has been in the country. But it has made little progress on main parts of the Dayton peace agreement, such as ensuring that refugees can return to their homes and promoting political cooperation between the former warring parties.

With only 13 months to go in the mission, the United States is stepping up efforts to revive the peace process.

Secretary of State Madeleine Albright plans a trip to Bosnia next week to address the goals set during the talks in Dayton, Ohio, in November 1995.

On Thursday, she blamed "the failure of Bosnian leaders to embrace true political and social integration" for problems that still plague the former Yugoslavia.

In a speech in New York, she outlined an expanded role for NATO forces in Bosnia to go beyond military tasks and support such activities as creating a secure environment for returning refugees and the installation of elected officials.

A White House official said the peace force would not be used to capture war crimes suspects. But other methods were being studied, the source said on condition of anonymity.

Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic said after visiting President Clinton last month that "special units" would be formed to hunt down suspects.

NATO special forces, outside the peace force, have long been in Bosnia and could be formed into teams to nab war crimes suspects.

The new focus on war criminals comes amid reports that Karadzic, who led Bosnian Serbs during 3 1/2 years of war, is trying to turn himself in.

Nasa Borba, an independent daily newspaper in Belgrade, Yugoslavia, said Karadzic has forwarded documents that could incriminate Serbian President Slobodan Milosevic to unidentified foreign countries and possibly to the tribunal.

Overwhelming Senate approval masks conflicts ahead

WASHINGTON (AP) — With impressive bipartisan muscle, the Senate on Friday approved a blueprint of the accord between President Clinton and leaders of Congress for balancing the budget and cutting taxes by 2002.

But auguring political strife over coming tax and spending legislation, final approval of the measure will have to await lawmakers' return from their Memorial Day recess in early June, thanks to a partisan blowup over a separate disaster relief bill.

Senators approved the fiscal road map by a lopsided 78-22 margin amid handshakes and embraces among rival party leaders who usually fight bitterly over budget issues. With both parties seeing the agreement as a political victory, 41 Republicans and 37 Democrats supported the measure. Fourteen Republicans and eight Democrats cast "no" votes.

"The American people asked us to work together," said Budget Committee Chairman Pete Domenici, R-N.M., the longtime deficit warrior who waved a copy of the vote tally in the air. "And I think what we just held up is evidence that we understood them."

Minority Leader Tom Daschle, D-S.D., said, "Democrats and Republicans alike should take a great deal of pride in what we've done today."

The House easily approved a nearly identical measure on Wednesday. Leaders say they will move a compromise through Congress after the recess, but in some ways it was as if the budget pact existed in a peaceful cocoon surrounded by a political storm.

Moments after the measure was approved, Democrats and Republicans were lambasting each other over the slowness with which the Senate has confirmed judges. And stalemate persisted over an $8.4 billion measure providing aid to flood victims and others, to which Republicans attached a mechanism for preventing federal shutdowns and other provisions Clinton opposes.

As lawmakers began a break that lasts until June 3, Senate Majority Leader Trent Lott, R-Miss., said solving the standoff over the emergency bill "will be a piece of cake once I get to focus on it" after the recess.

But the fight over the emergency bill is in part a battle for leverage later this year, when Congress translates the budget deal's broad guidelines into 15 individual tax and spending measures. And Democrats showed that they would not be bashful about using that process to draw contrasts with the GOP.

"They abolished, in the vote here, the 'Contract With America,'" said Sen. Frank Lautenberg, D-N.J., referring to budget reductions Republicans sought when they first captured Congress in 1995 that were deeper than those in the agreement with Clinton. "Those radical views are gone."

The measure approved Friday charts the way to erasing federal deficits for the first time since President Johnson's income-tax surcharge, designed to finance the Vietnam War, ended up producing a $3 billion surplus in 1969.

Eliminating deficits is so popular with voters that Clinton has declared balancing the budget his No. 1 priority for his second term, and Republicans controlling Congress consider it the surest path to an accomplishment they can campaign on.

That could all vanish, however, if the economy ends its third-longest expansion in history, now in its seventh year, and turns the projected $1 billion surplus for 2002 into yet another deficit.

The measure also lays the groundwork for the first sweeping tax cut since the one that President Reagan forged in 1981, his first year in office. There would be $85 billion in net tax cuts over the next five years for millions of college students, families and investors.

In addition, the plan would squeeze $321 billion in savings out of Medicare, defense and other programs, and simultaneously add spending for children's health care, high technology and other Clinton priorities.

Students excited about class that's raising eyebrows of animal rights organizations

By John Antczak
Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — The frogs are DOA in Christine Karlberg's class. Her students' task is to find out why they croaked.

Mrs. Karlberg tries to make frog dissection more interesting and educational for her students by placing the dead, preserved frogs in miniature "crime scenes" and assigning the seventh-graders to solve the whodunit. The approach has delighted students and offended animal-rights activists.

The frogs are posed in doll furniture and given toe tags. Stray hairs, fake blood, footprints, fingerprints and other evidence are left at the scene.

The late D. Frog, for example, was found dead in a bathtub. The erstwhile T. Tadpolian bought the farm in bed. A certain K.C. Amphibious had a stab wound inflicted by some pond scum.

At Hewes Middle School in Orange County last week, the student forensic sleuths were ribeted by the exercise.

"It was laying on its back and there were blood spatters on the wall," Robert Washington, 13, said of his frog. "I was the criminalist."

Robert said the frog had been done in by a teacher. "She took a pencil and she stabbed it in the throat," he said. What was the first clue? "We had pencil fibers and pencil erasings."

No one at the school actually kills the frogs; the supplier delivers them dead, in formaldehyde. But Mrs. Karlberg dreams up the crime scenarios, and she and other teachers often take the fall for the murders.

Last year, for example, Lucas Payne's frog supposedly succumbed in a bathtub.

"It was Mrs. Karlberg who drowned it," the 13-year-old said. Footprints, fingerprints and a few stray hairs gave Mrs. Karlberg away. "She said she was with her husband," but her alibi didn't hold up, Lucas said.

He added: "We opened the frog up. There was a bunch of ovaries in there and a liver and stuff. That was real fun."

About 800 students have taken part in the science exercise in the past three years, Principal Margaret Sepulveda said. Contrary to the student testimony, Mrs. Karlberg does not inflict wounds on the creatures, Ms. Sepulveda said.

Mrs. Karlberg did not return calls.

Ms. Sepulveda said the students are learning how to go through the steps of scientific problem-solving, including collecting data, keeping a log, forming a hypothesis, making observations and reaching a conclusion.

"It's not a joke," she said. "It's a way to help students understand the scientific process."

The exercise has raised eyebrows at animal rights organizations opposed to dissection.

"If you sort of make light of it ... it almost ridicules the exercise all the more," said Jonathan Balcombe, associate director for education in animal research issues at the Humane Society of the United States in Washington.

Robert's mother, Erin Washington, said her son has never been so interested in science.

"He's had a blast," said Mrs. Washington, a nurse. "This has been the only time in the whole history of school he's talked about science. ... He came home today and said that he was pretty sure he had gotten an 'A' on the test."

CIA had hit lists in Guatemala in 1950s

By Laura Myers
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The CIA, plotting to overthrow the Guatemalan government in the 1950s, compiled "hit lists" and began training Central American assassins to kill political and military Communist leaders.

The assassination plans, revealed in newly declassified documents the CIA released Friday, were never carried out and never formally approved by top State Department and CIA officials or the White House.

But the idea to employ political murder in the coup was suggested from the start when the Truman administration launched the covert operation in 1952 under CIA Director Walter Bedell Smith, the documents show. And assassination was "a pervasive topic of conversation and planning" throughout the operation, which was revived in the Eisenhower administration, said a senior CIA official, speaking on condition of anonymity.

"In the end, it wasn't necessary," the official said. "No (hit) list was ever officially approved. No Guatemalan was ever assassinated."

Instead, the leftist President Jacobo Arbenz Guzman resigned June 27, 1954, two weeks after U.S.-backed rebels invaded Guatemala and more than two years after the CIA began planning for "the elimination of those in high positions of the government (that) would bring about its collapse."

The documents — just a fraction of those dealing with the Guatemalan operation — were released at the National Archives as part of a CIA effort to declassify records on past covert operations. The intelligence agency was sued repeatedly over its refusal to make these and other documents public.

"It's too little too late," said Stephen Schlesinger, author of the 1982 book, "Bitter Fruit: The Untold Story of the America Coup," that detailed CIA activities in Guatemala. He filed a lawsuit 19 years ago to get the government to release the documents, but dropped the matter.

'This is just one more black mark against the CIA for its absolutely reprehensible and outrageous conduct in Guatemala.'

— Stephen Schlesinger

The documents indicate that exiled rebel leader Castillo Armas, who took over after the fall of Arbenz, gave the CIA a list of 58 individuals to be assassinated. One CIA official reviewing the proposal suggested, "even a smaller number, say 20, would be sufficient."

In March 1954, the CIA drew up criteria for assassination targets:

- High government and organization leaders "irrevocably implicated in Communist doctrine and policy."
- "Out and out proven Communist leaders."
- Or people in key government and military positions of tactical importance "whose removal for psychological, organizational or other reasons is mandatory for the success of military action."

The CIA already was engaged in intimidation, including broadcasting propaganda about Arbenz and sending fake "death notices" to communist leaders. Tapes of 325 of the broadcasts also were released.

"The Nerve War Against Individuals" also included sending wooden coffins, hangman's nooses and phony bombs to targets. "Here Lives a Spy" and "You have only 5 Days" were painted on their houses.

In 1953, the CIA included plans for "K" groups, or assassin teams, to work with sabotage groups, and rebels began training assassins. CIA headquarters in Washington sent 20 silencers for .22-caliber rifles to the rebel killers training in Honduras, said a Jan. 11, 1954, cable.

In the spring of 1954, CIA officers made official requests to the State Department to implement assassinations. No cabled replies were found.

Three weeks before President Arbenz resigned, a CIA field officer met with officials in Washington to submit the political assassination plan in person. It was ruled out "at least for the immediate future," according to a once-classified CIA history of the events that was written in 1995.

Still, upon returning to Guatemala, the official told his CIA staff the consensus in Washington was, "Arbenz must go; How does not matter."

The names of those targeted by the CIA and of U.S. government officials were edited from the 1,400 pages of documents the CIA voluntarily released. The CIA official cited privacy and national security concerns.

Classified documents about 10 other covert CIA operations, including the Bay of Pigs invasion of Cuba, will be released some time in the future.

"We will release records that could be embarrassing, that could invite controversy," the CIA official said. "This release (on Guatemala) demonstrates that we're going to release information, warts and all."

The 1,400 pages, now open to the public at the National Archives in College Park, Md., were among more than 120,000 documents still classified on the CIA's early 1950s activities in Guatemala.

"I knew there were lists of Communists to be rounded up, but I never knew there were assassination lists," author Schlesinger said in an interview from New York City. "This is just one more black mark against the CIA for its absolutely reprehensible and outrageous conduct in Guatemala."

But the senior CIA official noted that the U.S. government was operating amid widespread "paranoia" at the beginning of the Cold War and Arbenz was seen as a serious Communist threat close to home. Arbenz, viewed as a freedom fighter in his own country, had expropriated two-thirds of United Fruit Co.'s 332,000 acres and legalized the Communist Party.

Amway founder gave Republican party $1 million

WASHINGTON (AP) — The founder of Amway Corp. gave $1 million to the Republican Party last month, one of the biggest single contributions ever by an individual donor.

Richard DeVos, a longtime Republican supporter said to be worth $3.2 billion, and his wife, Helen, wrote two $500,000 checks on April 2 from their personal accounts, Federal Election Commission records state.

DeVos, 71, is overseas awaiting a heart transplant and could not be reached for comment. But a company official said he gave the money after GOP party leaders asked for help in whittling away millions in debts racked up during last year's election.

"He's had conversations with party leaders," said John Gartland, head of governmental affairs. "They have a debt and he wants to be helpful."

The Republican Party says it still has $5.5 million in debt from the last election.

DeVos and other wealthy donors are allowed to give unlimited amounts of money to the political parties under the so-called soft money provision, now under heavy criticism as the investigation into political fund-raising abuses broadens.

Soft money accounted for much of the $3 million returned by the Democratic Party because of concerns it came from illegal foreign sources.

Ordinarily, individuals are limited to giving no more than $20,000 a year to a political party and $2,000 to any one candidate in an election cycle under the post-Watergate campaign finance laws. Corporations are barred from making donations.

But under the soft money provision, corporations, unions nd wealthy individuals can give unlimited amounts to the parties, provided the money is used for political activities such as get-out-the-vote drives and not directly for candidates.

The single largest soft money donation on record was $2.5 million from DeVos' Amway in 1994. But that donation came from corporate funds.

DeVos' donation — which made up a quarter of the Republican National Committee's $4 million soft money receipts in April — comes with the next national elections still 18 months away and both parties bracing for campaign fund-raising investigations.

"I find it amazing that the party leaders would even contemplate accepting such an amount at this time," said Kent Cooper, executive director of the Center for Responsive Politics, a nonpartisan group that studies campaign financing.

But Gartland said DeVos' donation was purely for "participating in the political process. He is not doing it to gain access."

Phone tapes: Hubbell called former, current Clinton aides from prison

'It (phone calls) was a weekend ritual, a rotation at the homes of various people, of passing the phone around to friends who had gathered to buck up Suzy (Hubbell) in her time of need.'

— unnamed Hubbell friend

WASHINGTON (AP) — While in prison, Webster Hubbell kept in touch with his friends in the Clinton administration with regular telephone calls that were taped by prison officials and later turned over to Whitewater prosecutors, according to lawyers and others familiar with the investigation.

Voices on the dozens of taped calls include those of then-Clinton administration official Mickey Kantor and current or former White House aides Marcia Scott, John Emerson and David Watkins, said the sources, speaking on condition of anonymity.

The federal prison system tape records inmate phone calls. Copies of the recordings were obtained from the Bureau of Prisons in the past month by investigators for Whitewater prosecutor Kenneth Starr.

Congressional investigators also have subpoenaed the tape recordings from 1995 and 1996.

Prosecutors are focusing on a reported $400,000 to $500,000 paid to Hubbell by friends and supporters of the Clintons before he went to prison. Prosecutors are trying to determine whether the financial assistance was designed to discourage Hubbell from cooperating with investigators probing the president and first lady.

"Webb called me a few times from prison, always at home" and "the calls are strictly of a personal nature," Kantor said Friday. Kantor left government this year after serving as U.S. trade representative and secretary of commerce.

The content of the phone calls is "largely innocuous, mundane and not that interesting from a criminal investigative standpoint," said another person who was present for some of the calls.

However, this person said the recordings could be useful in pinpointing which Clinton administration officials Hubbell stayed in touch with. This person said the participants in the conversations on one or two occasions denounced the Whitewater prosecutors who sent Hubbell in prison.

In some of the 1996 calls, there were references to what Hubbell might do once he got out of prison. He is working for a non-profit group in Alexandria, Va., an arrangement worked out for him by his lawyer, John Nields.

Nields declined to comment.

Many of the former associate attorney general's prison phone calls were on weekends to Washington-area homes of Clinton aides who had invited Hubbell's wife Suzy over for the afternoon, said the sources.

"It was a weekend ritual, a rotation at the homes of various people, of passing the phone around to friends who had gathered to buck up Suzy in her time of need," one person said.

During the week, when Hubbell would call his wife she would tell him whose house she was visiting the following weekend. Then she would give him the phone number and Hubbell would call collect at the appointed hour.

Hubbell pleaded guilty to bilking his law firm and its clients and served a prison term for tax evasion and mail fraud beginning in August 1995 at a federal correctional facility in Maryland. He left that facility after 16 months for a halfway house and was released in February.

Scott, deputy assistant to the president and chief of staff of presidential personnel, is a longtime friend of Hubbell.

At the time of Hubbell's prison phone calls, Watkins was out of government and Emerson was deputy assistant to the president and deputy director of intergovernmental affairs. Watkins lost his White House job in 1994 after using a presidential helicopter to fly to a golf outing. A draft memo by Watkins which surfaced in 1996 said that Hillary Rodham Clinton was the prime mover in a 1993 purge of the White House travel office. Mrs. Clinton has denied she was behind the firings. The conflicting accounts are under investigation by the Whitewater prosecutor's office.

A lawyer for Watkins, John Dougherty, declined to comment.

Scott's lawyer, Stuart Pierson, said, "I am appalled that such grand jury information is not being protected by the independent counsel. The federal criminal rules enforce grand jury secrecy with the contempt power.

"It would not be a surprise that she and Webb talked by telephone," Pierson added.

Deputy independent counsel Jackie Bennett declined to comment.

Hubbell agreed to cooperate with Whitewater prosecutors when he pleaded guilty in December 1994. But his memory lapses have frustrated investigators' efforts to get answers about the Clintons' role in Whitewater.

Astronaut to reunite with family today

Hearst News Service

HOUSTON — Astronaut Jerry Linenger said Friday he was elated at the prospect of returning to Earth and reuniting with his family after four months in space.

The space shuttle Atlantis, with Linenger and a crew of six others aboard, was to touch down at Kennedy Space Center in Florida today.

"I'm a lucky man. I get to land, see my 18-month-old son, John, my wife and a new baby on the way in a month," Linenger said on the eve of his return.

Linenger and his wife, Kathryn, are expecting the birth of their second child late next month. When he blasted off Jan. 12 for a long visit to Russia's Mir space station, his son was just learning to walk.

Linenger may have trouble walking himself when he lands and encounters gravity after his lengthy exposure to weightlessness.

"It's going to be a readjustment in getting my Earth legs back," the 42-year-old Navy physician predicted.

Linenger vowed to begin his reacclimation quickly — sooner than medical personnel at the National Aeronautics and Space Administration would prefer — by walking from the shuttle under his own power rather than with the assistance of flight surgeons and on a gurney.

"I think it's important operationally to know that in an emergency, you could get off the shuttle," said Linenger, who will be garbed in a heavy pressure suit when he deplanes.

During most of his 132 days in space, the second longest flight for an American, Linenger has worked out twice a day on a treadmill or exercise bicycle as well as equipment of his own design to stave off the weakening of muscle and bone caused by weightlessness.

NASA medical specialists estimate Linenger will require about 30 days of gradually more rigorous physical therapy and rehabilitation before he meets their fitness standards.

The flight surgeons who greet Linenger after the shuttle crew lands will determine whether his first steps should be those that actually get him off the shuttle.

"Our main concern is his health and safety," said Dr. Roger Billica, chief of medical services at Johnson Space Center in Houston. "If it looks like Jerry has a real strong desire to attempt to walk off and it appears to be safe for him to do so, we will support him in doing that."

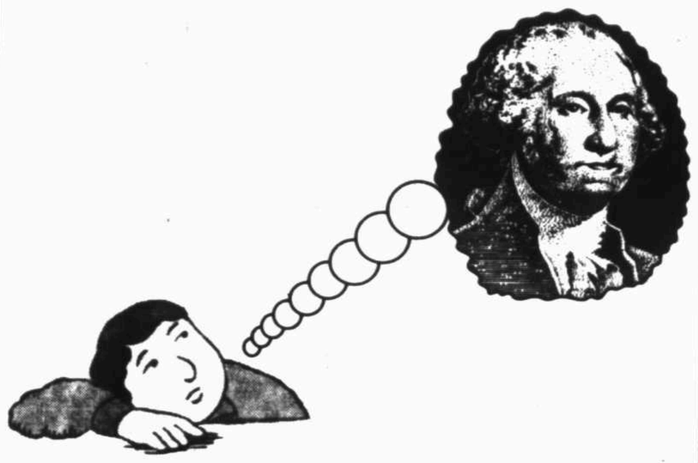

Linenger will spend today at the Kennedy Space Center with his shuttle crewmates undergoing medical tests, resting and relaxing with family.

Prosecutors drop charges in mass sexual abuse case

'The ability to put the truth before the jury is hampered because memories fade.'

—Nancy Lamb
assistant district attorney

EDENTON, N.C. (AP) — Prosecutors dropped all charges Friday against the last two defendants in the Little Rascals scandal — one of most lurid cases of mass child-molestation of the 1980s and the latest to fall apart.

Assistant District Attorney Nancy Lamb said prosecutors decided not to retry Robert F. Kelly Jr., 48, and Kathryn Dawn Wilson, 31, in order to "allow wounds to heal." She said parents were reluctant to let their children testify again.

Kelly and Wilson were among seven people originally charged with molesting 29 children who attended the Little Rascals Day Care Center in this small town on Albemarle Sound.

Kelly, the center's owner, was convicted in 1992 after the longest, most expensive trial in North Carolina history — nine months and more than $1 million — and was given 12 life sentences. Wilson, a cook at the day care center, was found guilty the next year and sentenced to life.

An appeals court in 1995 reversed the convictions, and the two had faced a retrial on 106 charges — 99 for Kelly, seven for Wilson.

Kelly spent a total of six years behind bars, Wilson four. Both have been free on bail. There was no immediate comment from either.

"I'm at peace with the decision. I don't feel like the system has let me down," said Susan Small, whose two children were among the alleged victims. "I can't say enough good things about the way the state prosecuted the case."

Of the other defendants, Kelly's wife, Elizabeth, who ran the center, and Willard Privott, a friend of Kelly's, pleaded no contest and served 2 1/2 and 3 1/2 years behind bars, respectively, before being released. Charges against the three other defendants were dropped last year.

Little Rascals represents the latest in a string of mass abuse cases at day care centers to disintegrate in the courts. Among the others are the McMartin preschool case in California, the Margaret Kelly Michaels case in New Jersey and the Fells Acres case in Massachusetts.

Defense lawyers said parents in Edenton (population 5,200) became hysterical over rumors of sexual abuse at Little Rascals, then badgered children into making allegations and pushed authorities into bringing charges.

Nationwide, some experts have raised questions about the truthfulness of testimony from children who were under pressure to talk from parents, psychiatrists and prosecutors at a time when fears of abuse were sweeping the country.

Children testified that Kelly forced them to perform oral and anal sex and took pictures of them having sex with other children. Prosecutors acknowledged they didn't find any pictures. Children also said Kelly and female and male adults had sex in front of them, and some testified about a magic key, spaceships, a boat trip and swimming with sharks.

Mrs. Lamb, a prosecutor who has worked on the case since 1989, said the decision to drop the charges did not mean that the state had a weak case. But she noted: "The ability to put the truth before the jury is hampered because memories fade."

When the state Court of Appeals threw out both convictions, it ruled that testimony by parents of alleged victims in Kelly's trial was inadmissible.

In Wilson's case, the court ruled the prosecutor made "gross improprieties" in closing arguments by referring to witnesses who weren't allowed to testify about allegations that she stole money from a friend.

The judge also improperly allowed cross-examination about her use of cocaine and marijuana.

Kelly was charged with eight new counts of sexual abuse last year involving a girl who did not attend Little Rascals. District Attorney Frank Parrish said that case will go forward.

Gerald Beaver, the lawyer representing Kelly on the new charges, said if justice was served by dropping the old charges, it would be served by dropping all of them.

Beaver also said he was concerned that Mrs. Lamb, who stopped to compose herself during the news conference, was too emotionally involved.

Among the cases that have fallen apart:

■ In 1984, seven people were charged in California after children at the McMartin Preschool claimed they were forced to participate in nude games and other sexual activities. The defendants eventually were found not guilty or had the charges dismissed — but only after some of them had been jailed for years. The entire case lasted seven years and cost Los Angeles County $13 million, the longest and costliest prosecution in U.S. history.

■ In 1988, New Jersey preschool teacher Margaret Kelly Michaels was convicted of more than 100 counts of sexual abuse including "nude pileups" with 3- to 5-year-olds. Her conviction was overturned after she had spent five years in prison.

■ And in Massachusetts, a judge two weeks ago ordered a new trial for Violet Amirault and her daughter, Cheryl, who were accused of raping children at the Fells Acres day care center in the mid-1980s. They had argued their rights were violated because the children were allowed to testify without actually facing the Amiraults in court.

Violet Amirault's son, Gerald, was tried separately and remains in prison.

Senate offers alternative tax cut finance plan; House members skeptical

AUSTIN (AP) — Accounting tricks would help fund a plan to lower local school property taxes — and thousands of Texas businesses would be off the hook for proposed new taxes — under a concept floated Friday.

The idea was conceived by Senate members of a joint committee trying to find a compromise between the House and Senate's vastly different property tax cut proposals.

House members on the committee were skeptical, with one it calling the plan "smoke and mirrors." Gov. George W. Bush's budget chief, Albert Hawkins, said the governor called the ideas "gimmicks."

Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, said state senators want to offer Texans higher property tax cuts than those in a plan already passed by the full Senate. But he added that most senators won't vote to expand or increase other state taxes to pay for larger property tax cuts.

A House-passed plan would raise about $4 billion in new and expanded state taxes to pay for $5 billion in property tax cuts every two years. The Senate plan would lower the taxes by about $2.5 billion every two years, raising about $1.1 billion to pay for it.

Both plans would expand the state business tax to all companies and would use money left from the current two-year budget to make up the difference.

The idea offered by Bivins would delay billions of dollars in state payments that would be due in the next two-year budget until the following budget, which begins Sept. 1, 1999. It also calls for a 1 percent across-the-board cut in state spending for all agencies.

"It's a financing scheme, just like every housewife does. We have used it successfully in the past," Bivins said.

Rep. Mark Stiles, D-Beaumont, called it "smoke and mirrors."

"I don't mind doing it with my money, but when it comes to the people's money, I have a different attitude," he said.

The idea, not voted on by the committee, also would eliminate the proposals to expand the business franchise tax to all companies except sole proprietorships. Currently, corporations pay the tax; partnerships don't.

"Our dilemma is getting our members to agree to any more revenue," Bivins said.

Bush has said for months that all Texans and all Texas businesses should pay part of the cost of the state's 1,044 school districts. He offered a plan to create a new business tax that would affect all Texas companies. It was rejected by the House and Senate, which adopted plans of their own.

The 10-member House-Senate committee is trying to resolve differences between the plans before the end of the session, June 2. Voters would have the final say on Aug. 9.

Sen. Ken Armbrister, D-Victoria, said expanding the business franchise tax to partnerships could hurt future economic growth in Texas. Many partnerships are part of the service industry, the fastest-growing segment of the state's economy.

Armbrister said he would rather use accounting methods and a higher tax on insurance premiums to come up with more money to lower local school property taxes.

"This was offered because we don't have the votes in the Senate for any more taxes on the people of Texas," Armbrister said.

Rep. Rob Junell, D-San Angelo, is not a member of the committee but heads the budget-writing House Appropriations Committee. He objected to the senators' idea, calling it bad public policy.

"If it is the will of the Legislature, I'm telling you, your fiscal house is in trouble," he said.

Meanwhile, Rep. Paul Sadler, D-Henderson, chairman of the committee, demanded that Bush and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock clearly state whether they would support leaving business partnerships untaxed in exchange for the suggested accounting tricks and insurance premium tax hikes. House Speaker Pete Laney and Comptroller John Sharp rejected the idea, Sadler said.

"I know this is an unusual request but these are unusual days," Sadler said. "Before we start down the road I want to know we're not going to waste our time."

Bush's response came quickly. "He believes primarily that we can provide property tax relief and pay for it now ... without engaging in gimmicks," Hawkins said, adding that the governor would support spending cuts.

Bush could be available to speak with the conferees, Hawkins said. Sadler requested such a meeting and one was quickly granted.

The tax bill is HB4. An accompanying constitutional amendment is HJR4.

River outfitters expect better summer after last year's drought

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — Along the Guadalupe River, shop owners who supply rafts and inner tubes are happy — downright delighted — and summer hasn't even officially begun.

"It looks like it's going to be good," said a smiling Steve Abbott, owner of Abbott's River Outfitters Inc.

"Wonderful!" said Dusti Blalock, who works at the nearby Tube Haus.

Where shallow water and exposed rocks dominated the scenery a year ago because of the drought and low stream flow, the picture now is one of a rolling Guadalupe River near New Braunfels.

Rainfall late last fall and this spring have kept the level of Canyon Lake high enough so that the popular stretch of the river below the lake's dam has an abundant, steady flow.

And as the Memorial Day weekend began Friday, river outfitters, along with area restaurateurs and hoteliers, hoped the improved conditions translate into the start of a profitable summer season.

"It is the biggest tourism weekend of the year," said Jim Scheele Jr., director of New Braunfels Convention and Visitors Bureau. He predicted this city of about 30,000 will be swarming with 150,000 people this weekend.

The visitors bureau has established a toll-free "water hotline" and launched a statewide ad blitz to tell out-of-towners that drought conditions aren't a problem now, "letting people know, 'Hey, yes, we do have water — come down and see us,' " Scheele said.

Zero Rivers, owner of Rockin' R River Rides, one of the largest outfitting companies along the Guadalupe, expects a good season.

"The key to this business has never been sunshine and heat. The key has always been water," Rivers said. "You can knock me over with a feather if anyone in the outfitting business doesn't set a record this year."

In fact, at some points this spring the river has been so swift tubing was out and only rafting trips led by experienced guides were encouraged. Now the Army Corps of Engineers is working with Guadalupe River businesses to adjust the river's flow so that on weekends it is more suitable for tubing, a flow of around 700 cubic feet per second.

When the flow is higher than 1,000 cfs, the river is considered OK for rafting, but river-goers are warned some areas may be too rough for inner tubes, Scheele said.

By contrast, the flow this time last year was around 130 cfs. Tubers sometimes scraped bottom, and river rides that normally took an hour to complete could last four hours.

Despite the "bad publicity" last year, river enthusiasts across Texas seem to be getting the message things are different now, Rivers said.

"The phones have been unbelievably busy," he said, explaining that customers are calling to check on water conditions and make plans for this weekend's launch of the summer season.

"It's going to be a real good year," he said.

The water hotline operated by the New Braunfels Convention and Visitors Bureau is (800) 572-2626.

Black generals call for full recognition of 'Buffalo Soldiers'

DALLAS (AP) — They helped conquer the West. They joined with Col. Teddy Roosevelt's "Rough Riders" to take San Juan Hill in Cuba during the Spanish-American War. Twenty-four of them won the Medal of Honor.

Now, a group of active and retired black U.S. Army generals are campaigning to bring the "Buffalo Soldiers" out of the mists of history.

A group of those generals met in Dallas Friday to promote "The Generals' Call."

The petition circulating among the 150 known retired and active black generals calls for new recognition to the formerly all-black 9th and 10th Cavalry regiments, which served from Fort Davis, in the South to the upper Plains.

"We want to make certain that this is the start of a longer campaign to celebrate their accomplishments," said retired Army Maj. Gen. Hugh Robinson, now a Dallas businessman.

The ceremony, attended by four past and one present black Army generals, kicked off a Memorial Day weekend of events celebrating black contributions to the Old West, leading up to the 12th annual Texas Black Invitational Rodeo today.

The 9th and 10th Cavalry were organized to help pacify the frontier after black troops proved their combat mettle in the Civil War.

Black soldiers have fought in every war in American history, but black units always were disbanded when the war ended.

Nicknamed by American Indians fighting the regiments on the Western frontier, the Buffalo Soldiers remained standing units in peacetime beginning in 1866. The regiments were disbanded in 1952, after the Army integrated.

Robinson said the petition has been signed by 40 generals so far. It urges that books, films and art add new perspective to the regiments' contributions to the conquest of the West.

Retired Army Gen. Colin Powell, the first black chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, and Army Gen. Johnnie E. Wilson, the Army's lone remaining black four-star general, have signed the petition.

Dallas Mayor Ron Kirk is the great-grandson of a Buffalo Soldier. In a statement read by City Manager John Ware, the city's first black mayor said the general's ceremony and the weekend's events were "an opportunity to remember that building our nation was a multiracial victory."

Marriage annulment stirs mixed emotions

By Elizabeth Fernandez
Hearst News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — One glance at the letter and her heart sank. Then anguish and resentment set in.

Kris Mackin had been married 26 years. The letter was from the San Francisco Archdiocese, telling her an investigation was under way to annul her marriage, to make it invalid in the church's eyes.

"After 26 years of marriage, it is ludicrous that someone can simply say it didn't exist," says the San Mateo real estate broker and one-time catechism teacher, who remains on cordial terms with her former spouse. Their 1964 marriage ended in 1991 after the birth of two daughters.

"I did not enter my commitment lightly. It is hard enough to go through a divorce. This is going through it twice, only it hits you at your religious core."

By contrast, Joy Gerlach found closure and spiritual renewal when her marriage was annulled.

"The church is about love and forgiveness," says Gerlach, a San Francisco resident whose 17-year marriage ended in 1993. "In a marriage, we can make mistakes, but the church forgives and offers an opportunity for us to learn from our mistakes."

Annulment, the Roman Catholic Church's term for dissolving a marriage, has become one of the most contentious issues within the faith today. With an annulment, a divorced Catholic can heal from a failed union, remarry in the church and participate in the sacraments.

ONCE GRANTED sparingly — only 338 in 1968 — the U.S. church now approves upward of 50,000 annulments every year.

Marriage is still forever, church officials say, when it is a true union; annulment is a compassionate way of recognizing those that aren't.

But the very apparatus that keeps thousands of divorced Catholics within the flock is also driving away countless others who view annulments as a hypocritical farce. They consider annulment a galling attempt by the church to grapple with the divorce rate and allow Catholics to shirk responsibility for failed marriages.

"I think God is laughing at us up there," says Father Barry Brunsman, a Danville priest and author of "New Hope for Divorced Catholics" who has processed more than 100 annulments.

"Annulment is becoming preposterous. It is being done without discernment."

The controversy was brought into focus nationally this month with the publication of a book by Sheila Rauch Kennedy, who is appealing the annulment of her 12-year marriage to Rep. Joseph P Kennedy II, D-Mass. In "Shattered Faith," she lambastes annulment as a moral corruption.

"Unlike a divorce, an annulment does not say something has either broken down or ended," Kennedy writes. "It says the marriage never truly existed in the first place. This distinction ... was at the root of my rage."

Henry VIII wanted an annulment to remarry; when Rome refused, he launched his own church.

TODAY, MORE than four centuries later, most who seek annulment also want to remarry with the church's sanction.

"Most of my friends and family asked me, why are you doing it? I told them I want to get married again in a church, " says Rudy Tadina, 34, a San Francisco father of two who filed for annulment recently after a seven-year marriage.

Tadina is fairly certain he'll get an annulment. In the U.S. church — dubbed the "Las Vegas" of annulments — 90 percent are granted, after initial culling.

U.S. churches grant 75 percent of all Catholic annulments, a statistic disturbing to Pope John Paul II, who has termed the American way of annulment too lenient, "easy and hurried."

Such criticism rankles well-intended church officials.

They say annulments are more common here because the churches, unlike those in other countries, financially support the tribunals that handle annulment requests. The U.S. church spends $20 Amillion a year on tribunal operations, says the Canon Law Society.

Additionally, church officials say, annulments occur more often here because the U.S. church delves into psychological factors to prove a marriage invalid.

Where once annulments were granted because of force or deception or refusal to have children, today the church tries to diagnose a couple's state of mind at the start of the marriage. The upshot: Most U.S. annulments are now granted because of "psychic immaturity."

"Rome is very upset about it," sighs the Rev. Xavier Harris, a theologian with the Franciscan School of Theology in Berkeley and at the College of Notre Dame in Belmont. "We have frequent divorce in our society."

IN RESPONSE, bishops are tightening marriage requirements with six-month engagements and premarital counseling.

"The church is trying to do everything it can to strengthen marriage beforehand and ... to protect it," Harris says.

No power on Earth can convince Jim Greco he was not truly married. So the San Bruno resident won't seek an annulment for his church marriage that lasted 13 years.

"Nobody put a gun to my head," says Greco, 62, a retired manufacturing sales manager. "I married because I thought I was in love. The church is saying all these marriages were a lie. To me an annulment is to deny what I did."

He, like many other divorced Catholics who remarry outside the church, partakes in the sacraments though technically not eligible. He relies on a loophole called "the good conscience solution," for Catholics who cannot or will not get an annulment.

"I received the sacraments with a clear conscience," Greco says. "It was my link with God."

Annulment hinges on what happens at the start of a marriage, not necessarily what occurs during the marriage. If a marriage begins as a sacramental one, the church says, later events, such as infidelity or desertion, cannot erase it.

ANNULMENT ESTABLISHES a "defect," a lack of mutual understanding of the rights and obligations of the union, says the Rev. Randolph Calvo, judicial vicar of the tribunal in San Francisco. It does not nullify a civil marriage; it says the union does not exist in God's eyes. Children remain legitimate.

"This is not done lightly," says the Rev. Donald Hudson, judicial vicar of the Oakland diocese. "If we are not morally certain ... we have to rule in favor of the marriage."

Oakland granted 390 annulments in the last two years, a process that takes six to eight months and costs $500. San Francisco granted 420 annulments in the same period.

"This is not necessarily about blame but about incapacity," says the Rev. Stephen Meriwether, who serves on the San Francisco tribunal. "You don't blame a paraplegic for not playing basketball. If there is incapacity, there is not blame to be assigned."

Lay Catholic groups, led by Catholics Speak Out, are increasingly demanding reform.

They say that if they remarry but refuse to seek an annulment, they are officially considered adulterers by the church and treated as second-class citizens.

This month, a reform petition is being sent to the nation's bishops.

"A lot of people are living in very painful circumstances," says Charles N. Davis, a retired intelligence analyst in Washington, D.C., who remarried following a 17-year marriage with four children.

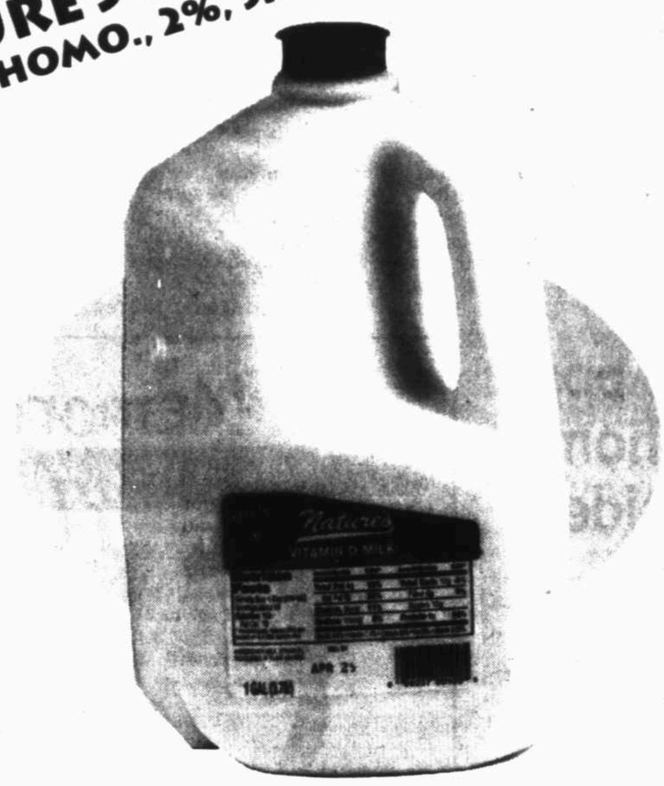

"It's as if the church is inviting you to their home and saying you are welcome but you can't eat dinner with the rest of us. " From their own outrage, an Indiana couple — sociologists who wed after their first marriages were annulled against their wishes — has launched a national study on the impact of annulments.

RICHARD JENKS, a professor at Indiana University, fought the annulment of his 16-year marriage, but he believes he wasn't given a fair chance to contest it.

"I had a marriage, a valid one," he says. "We didn't go into it blindly. For the church to say to a lot of people that theirs wasn't a valid marriage is a real stab in the back. The Catholic Church will have to start defending annulments more and more — the process itself and the numbers that are granted."

Demand for western gear on rise outside the wide-open ranges

By Eduardo Montes
Associated Press

MARFA — In another time, the Buddy Knights of the world weren't so scarce. When the West was still wild, spur makers were in demand to meet the needs of the cowboys taming the range.

Now, the few craftsmen left would be hard pressed to survive if forced to rely on the dwindling cowpunchers. It's fortunate for them then, the market has grown far beyond that.

The 1990s have brought about a resurgence in the popularity of handcrafted western gear. Collectors and Old West enthusiasts are snatching up spurs, holsters, belt buckles and saddles and the better gearmakers are booked for months.

"There's a renaissance of gear making," said Knight, a spur builder out of Marfa, 200 miles southeast of El Paso, who began making equipment full time for cowhands in 1988.

"Mostly it's for wealthier people now," he said. "A lot of people I sell spurs to own horses and that's their getaway, they're weekend cowboys."

No one can seem to pin down exactly when the cowboy craze began, but collectors and gearmakers agree the last few years have been good for craftsmen who excel at this functional form of art.

"I don't think anybody has ever stopped making spurs. It fell out of fashion and out of demand until really about the last six or seven years and now there is a total explosion," said Bill Manns, coauthor of an upcoming book on western gear, "Cowboys and the Trappings of the Old West."

Opinions vary as to what drives the market. Manns said cowboys and "cowboy wannabes" want something that stands out among the mass-produced goods sold at some western gear outlet shops.

Others say buyers are drawn by the romance of the Old West.

"As there are fewer and fewer cowboys, we value them more as sort of a historical myth, so their gear becomes more valuable to us," said Leslie Lehmann, manager of The V6 Collection, a gear shop in Marathon.

But the scarcity of true antique equipment probably plays a larger role than either of those reasons. Buyers are having a hard time finding quality artifacts from the cowboy's heyday in the late 19th and early 20th centuries and when they do, the gear is usually prohibitively expensive.

"Everything just went up ridiculously high," said Jerry Wallace, a spur maker from Madill, Okla. "The old stuff is so scarce and there ain't none left on the market, except junk. Museums and the doctors and lawyers have bought just about all the good stuff."

Consequently, contemporary gearmakers have been given an opening to go after would-be buyers who have been left out of the antiques market. If they're truly good and can make a name for themselves — as an elite few have — business can be lucrative.

A pair of simple spurs can go for as little as $250 to $300. Pieces crafted by sought-after gearmakers can have price tags around $1,000 to $2,000. The best belt buckles can go for around $4,000.

A custom spur can be anything from a pragmatic steel band with a few decorations to an elaborate showpiece. Two basic styles are the California spurs, which have fine engraved silver inlays, and the Texas spurs, heavier pieces with large silver overlays, often in the shape of stars and steer heads.

Not too long ago, the Autry Museum of Western Heritage in Los Angeles paid $4,000 for a pair of California-style spurs made by Bill Heisman, considered one of the top contemporary gearmakers.

Manns calls the purchase a watershed event.

"That exceptional price encouraged a lot of other spur makers," said Manns, who refers to Heisman as the "creme de la creme."

Heisman, who stopped taking orders for spurs in 1993 and is still trying to fill them, said he expects interest to remain high. "I don't see it (the market) going anywhere but up, or at least staying strong," he said.

That's not to say, though, that gearmakers are driven by money alone.

People like Heisman, Wallace and Knight began hammering out spurs because they needed them themselves or knew someone who did. Heisman and his brother used them while riding in rodeos. Knight does some cowboying — in West Texas the word is also a verb — on the ranches sprawling around Marfa.

They still seem to enjoy the work.

"We're all trying to keep the spirit of the West alive," said Knight. "It's an ethic we're helping to preserve. For better or for worse the West, even as I knew it, is going away."

4 cities boast being home to president

By Chuck Bartles
Associated Press

HOPE, Ark. — Born. Lived. Married. Governed.

Visitors to Arkansas see brown and white highway signs announcing Bill Clinton's ties to four Arkansas cities. And three of the cities are eagerly publicizing their Clinton ties — as much for prolonged economic impact as honoring the president.

Hope is his birthplace; Hot Springs, the home of his youth. Fayetteville touts itself as the place Bill and Hillary Rodham Clinton first lived in the state as a couple. Little Rock is the first capital Clinton called home.

In Hope, Clinton's home is being renovated to become a museum. In Hot Springs, the high school where Clinton graduated in 1964 will soon be turned over to a group that wants to turn it into a museum and artists' space.

Little Rock has been chosen to be home to Clinton's presidential library. Plans are afoot to link Hope, Hot Springs and Little Rock historic sites by computer, but the reality is far off. The library will take years to build.

Farthest down the tourism trail is the home in Hope where Clinton spent his first four years. Before her death, Clinton's mother, Virginia Kelly, recalled the decor for renovators.

Joe Purvis, president of the Clinton Birthplace Foundation, said he hopes the home — and adjacent visitor center — will be open for guests by June 1, even though visitors already are showing up.

On a recent day Lee and Rosemary Korbel of Green Bay, Wis., stopped in their motor home outside the fenced-off, two-story home. The outside is rehabilitated, white clapboards with green trim and a green front-porch floor.

Korbel said he felt no sense of wonder looking at the home, though enjoyed seeing where the president lived.

"Just getting to Hope, I guess I was in a little bit of awe," Korbel said.

About a mile away is another home, where Clinton lived after his widowed mother remarried. The home is private and brochures in a box on the lawn refer visitors to a souvenir shop around the corner.

At the Discount Tobacco store across from the birthplace home, where five metal signs sway in the background as Korbel poses for a photograph, clerk Leanna Brown says tourists frequently stop to pose questions.

"They all want to know when it's going to open," she said.

Purvis said the opening is still on schedule, though the home and visitor center will not be complete. Purvis said donations slowed after foundation records were subpoenaed by Congress. The foundation is not connected to the White House or the Democratic National Committee, but investigators are probing the sources of its contributions.

"I'm not going to lie. The latest round of Congressional activity ... hurling veiled accusations about the Clinton birthplace certainly had a chilling effect on our ability to raise money. We have not done anything improper," Purvis said.

Only recently have contributions picked back up, said Rose Crane, who is on the foundation's board of directors.

Little Rock was chosen to host the library but the specific site has not been chosen. The site will require about 20 acres and must be close to major roads. The state has already approved a $1.6 million budget to start work, but the library itself will be paid for with private money.

Clinton lived in Little Rock when he was attorney general and governor. The Clintons' daughter Chelsea was born at Little Rock.

The Clintons moved to Little Rock from Fayetteville, where they had a house on California Street while Clinton taught constitutional law at the University of Arkansas.

Fayetteville seems content to let the rest of the state trade on its connections to Clinton. The president's past presence barely rates a mention in a tourist brochure.

Newton spin off

SAN JOSE, Calif. (AP) — Apple Computer Inc., continuing to cut back, said Thursday it was turning its unprofitable Newton hand-held computer unit into an independent subsidiary.

The announcement followed months of speculation about Apple's plans in the wake of a major restructuring to reverse stubborn losses and increase focus on its primary desktop computer business.

"This decision allows the new subsidiary to pursue its business and create the marketing and operating strategies it needs to succeed," Apple chairman Gil Amelio said in a statement.

Apple had been expected to sell Newton, spin it off or find a partner to help run it. After a rocky start four years ago, Newton was steadily improved, and the latest versions have been admired for their technology. But Apple has not been able to make money with it.

ABC News online

SEATTLE — Another team of heavyweights joins the battle for online news Thursday when Starwave Corp. and The Walt Disney Co. officially unveil their new, 24-hour service on the World Wide Web.

The new service, found at http://www.abcnews.com, aims to combine ABC's strength in news — including such superstars as Peter Jennings and Ted Koppel — with Starwave's expertise in building online audiences.

Like one of its competitors, the Microsoft-NBC partnership MSNBC, ABCNews.com will be a bicoastal operation, with newsrooms in Bellevue and New York. MSNBC's newsrooms are in New York and Redmond.

Also like its online competitors, ABCNews.com will be a hybrid medium that combines the rich images of broadcast, the depth of information of print and "interactive" features that neither traditional medium can offer.

Online news viewers can click their computer mouse on words or images to get more information about a topic that interests them, but it won't appear unless they choose it.

At the ABCNews.com Web site, visitors will find a timeline of the Oklahoma City bombing case that highlights different events depending on where the mouse is pointed.

The new venture will provide local news with the help of ABC affiliates around the country. That aspect will begin with markets such as New York, Los Angeles, San Francisco and Chicago; Seattle is not among them yet, Starwave spokeswoman Jennifer Yazzolino said.

New York, New York.com

Microsoft Corp. is introducing an Internet guide to local entertainment in New York, the second digital guide to be published as part of the software company's Internet services push.

Microsoft, which launched its first Sidewalk guide in Seattle, plans to offer 10 to 15 guides by the end of the year in cities including San Francisco, Boston and Houston. Each guide offers reviews of restaurants, movies, music, theater and sporting events. In addition, New York Sidewalk offers about 1,800 restaurant and 600 to 700 theater listings, advice on where to sit and what to order at the bar in restaurants, what to see at 12? museums and the latest movie times.

The guides are the latest Internet services that Microsoft is offering as a possible way to boost long-term revenue.

TV remote becomes a way to surf the net

By Jon Swartz
N.Y. Times News Service

On Monday, a South San Francisco company will introduce an Internet device for couch potatoes.

Called My NetChannel, the set-top device will let TV viewers surf the Net with a remote control. The product resembles WebTV, another TV-Internet device that debuted to lukewarm response a few months ago.

Critics said the problem with WebTV is that it is too interactive. Users must type on a keyboard to actively seek out information on the Net, making the product more like a computer than a television.

My NetChannel attempts to solve that problem by including push technology — software that delivers preselected information to the screen automatically.

"Most people want to sit in front of a TV with a beer — not a keyboard," said Philip Monego, chief executive of NetChannel, which makes the new device. "TV is a lean-back experience. PCs are a lean-forward experience."

My NetChannel aims to keep television a "passive medium" and has coined the phrase "television service provider," or "TVSP" to describe its product.

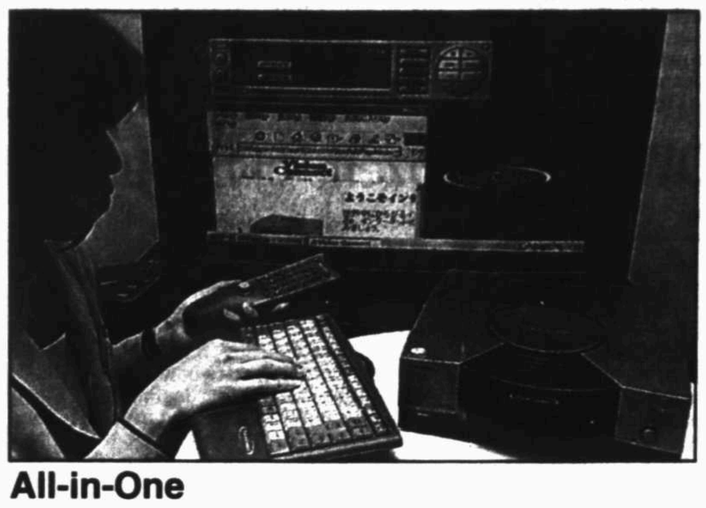

Instead of testing the product in San Francisco or New York, NetChannel took it to Indianapolis.

The $300 device is powered by a British-designed computer chip and software from Oracle's Network Computer Inc. subsidiary.

It is patterned after My Yahoo, a popular service from Yahoo, the Internet search engine company.

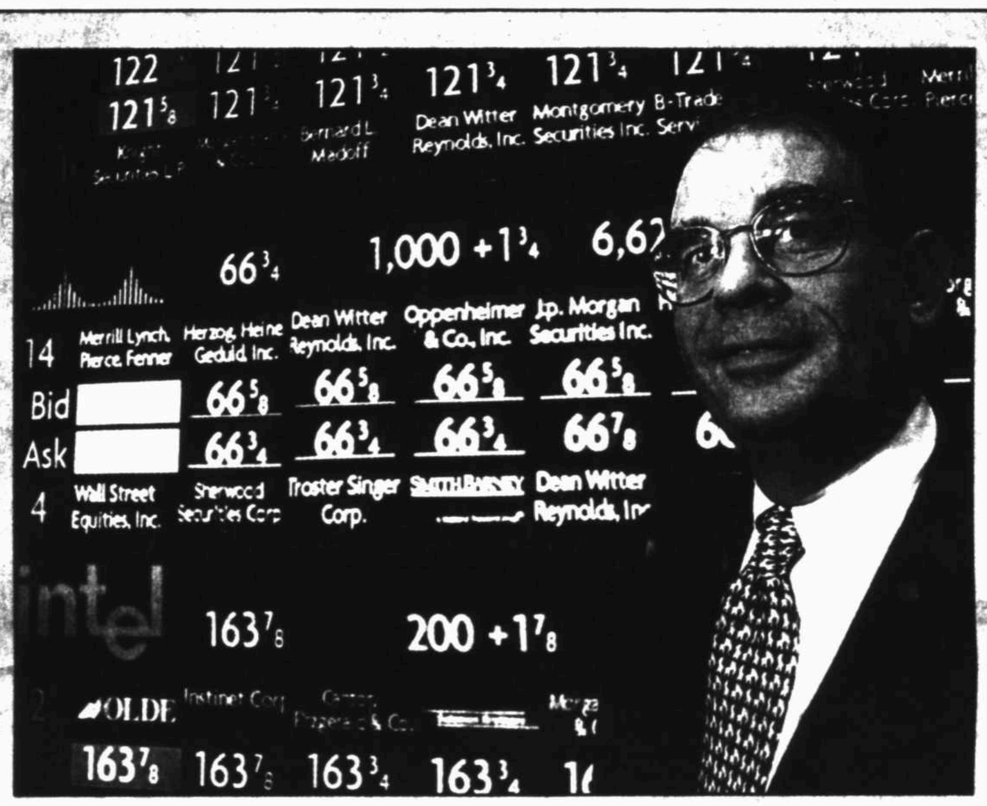

Monego was CEO and president of Yahoo before founding NetChannel.

Fine tuning your web browser

Grandmother's house was just over the river and through the woods. But getting to places on the World Wide Web is not always so simple.

As developers, programmers and corporations extend the capabilities of the Web, it is becoming far too common to connect to a site only to receive a message that a plug-in or Active-X control or a fizzlewidget is needed to view the site properly.

Often, merely viewing the site is not even possible without first stuffing a few more inexplicable programs onto the hard drive and then hoping they are correctly plugged in. Many sites need special movie viewers, sound players and other utilities just to find hotlinks or see content.

But yes, the Web giveth problems and the

WOULD YOU PLEASE STOP SCREAMING!

■ Certain points of etiquette (such as NEVER USE ALL CAPS!) should always be followed when sending email.

By Lonnie Brown
N.Y. Times News Service

What we need in this world, besides a good $3 cigar (a good five-cent one being considerably out of the question these days), is some civility. The last time I received civility with a 32-cent stamp attached, it was a handwritten note (created, of course, with a word processor using a font that imitated handwriting) on good quality paper. All properly formatted and spellchecked.

A few variations on the classic postal theme make it through the Internet to my e-mail box. But there are still some who MAKE IT A HABIT TO TYPE WITH THE CAPS LOCK KEY ON, THINKING IT IS THE BEST WAY TO GET ATTENTION.

It is the best way to get e-mail promptly deleted. It is the online equivalent of shouting and a poor way to communicate.

"Ah, gentle reader," as Miss Manners would say when addressing proper e-mailing, there is a way for you to know these things. Claris, the software company, has published "The Claris Guide to E-Mail Etiquette." It is available online at the company's Web site (http://www.claris.com).

Interestingly, when e-mail first came on the scene in 1972, there were only about 100 people online. Now, more than 60 million Americans have access to e-mail and 12.8 million households use it from home. Of people who use e-mail, two-thirds use it daily.

Between 1988 and 1994, the U.S. Postal Service's market share dropped from 77 to 62 percent. Meanwhile, electronic mail deliveries increased from 19 to 36 percent.

A few "don'ts" from the list:

■ Don't use all caps when typing.

■ Don't repeat messages. The Internet is very dependable when it comes to e-mail delivery. After a passage of many days without a reply, it is permissible to follow up with a brief, "Did you get my message regarding...?" Sending repeat messages one day after another only delays — and in some cases, terminates — response.

Dear Amy: What is the difference between an intranet and the Internet? Jackie, Provo, UT

Dear Jackie: There is a wide world of difference. The Internet is one international network made up of thousands of smaller networks connected together that anyone can use. An intranet is a private network set up for one group of people. Big companies and schools put up WWW servers just for their employees or their students to use. A "firewall" can be set up to filter people from getting in or out of the intranet. You know how cool it is to find stuff fast on the Internet. Just think if your school had homework, a calendar of events and a phonebook of students and teachers on its own intranet.

Dear Amy: How can I go to my favorite WWW sites without having to type in the address every time?— Coby, Racine, WI

Dear Coby: Browsers all have a way to save addresses of Web sites. These are called Hotlists, Favorites or Bookmarks, depending on your browser. When I am browsing the Web and I find an interesting Web page, I save it to my bookmarks. Then when I want to go back I just pull down my bookmarks menu and select the site. Some browsers even let you edit and organize your bookmarks list. You can even export your bookmarks to text or HTML. Sometimes, I have to delete old addresses to keep my bookmarks up-to-date.

Send your comments or questions about the WWW to Amy at: Ask Amy, 2021 Dole Center, Lawrence, KS 66045 or AskAmy@4Kids.org

Microsoft to outline improvements in corporate network software

By Heather Green
N.Y. Times News Service

Microsoft Corp. on Tuesday will outline improvements in its corporate networking software, part of its push to persuade companies to adopt its products for their computer networks.

Microsoft, which competes with companies including Sun Microsystems Inc. and Novell Inc. in the network market, has been criticized because its software can't transmit as much information as quickly as its competitors, analysts said.

On Tuesday's Scalability Day, Microsoft will convene 350 corporate buyers, financial analysts and the press to tout the improvements it has made or plans to make to its BackOffice package of software that includes database software, server software used to relay information within networks, as well as its Windows NT server and operating system software.

"It's good they are having a Scalability Day — they have a hard time suggesting they are scaleable year-round," said Evan Quinn, an analyst at International Data Corp.

Scalability refers to the ability of a computer system to operate well on large networks as well as small ones — to be "scaled up" to support many users, large databases and high rates of transactions per second.

The companies that will line up in support of Microsoft's software and show how they can improve its speed are expected to include Digital Equipment Corp., Tandem Computers Inc., Compaq Computer Corp. and software companies including PeopleSoft Inc.

Redmond, Washington-based Microsoft, whose traditional strength lies in operating systems for personal computers, is moving steadily into the corporate network market. Its progress in that market is hampered by the limitations of its software, including datebase size, transaction rates, the number of users it can support and the amount of data it can store.

Microsoft plans to outline improvements in how its software works with the underlying hardware, how the company has removed some data transaction size and system limitations on Windows NT, improvements to the Exchange e-mail product and to its electronic commerce software, and enhanced interaction with mainframes, said Stan Dolberg, an analyst at Forrester Research Inc.

Microsoft will show customers how the improvements look when the software is run on large computer systems, he said. And it will hammer home the price-performance advantages that companies can have by installing software instead of the hardware from its rivals, he said.

BROWSERS: Dozens of helper applications exist for serious work

(From 1B)

Web can solveth problems. Whether a browser is Internet Explorer from Microsoft, Netscape Communications' Navigator, Apple Computer's Cyberdog or one of the many others in use, there are dozens of pages that can keep it in tune.

The obvious starting point is the site run by a browser's manufacturer.

Microsoft's Internet Explorer home page has links to the various versions of Internet Explorer, as well as support pages and the Active-X controls used to add features to web pages.

A trip to the Internet Explorer pages can be quite interesting as boxes start popping up, reminding you to download the version du jour as well as asking about which of seemingly dozens of Active-X controls need to be installed.

Netscape's home page for Navigator does not do quite as much for you, but it has some useful help functions, including a place to ask questions and get walked through to the appropriate answer, and a link to many common plug-ins and helper applications.

Apple's Cyberdog, information about it and how to tweak it are available at the Cyberdog home page, as well as links to companies writing for the Cyberdog browser.

Those sites probably are not enough for people who spend a lot of time on the Web. There are dozens of helper applications needed to do serious work, hundreds for having fun, and plenty of tips and tricks to make life easier in cyberspace.

For those who want more, a lot more, point the browser to Techhelper, the site run by CMP Publications. Most of the things needed for the average neighborhood browser (or any other computer problem for that matter) are available here.

Also look up Winmag's browser tune-up site. It promises to give a browser a through test, which it does. The one drawback is that the tests are geared toward Microsoft's Windows software. If someone running a non-Windows platform — say an Apple Macintosh user — checks in, the browser does not get the same level of checkup.

Another spot to check out is CNet's Browser Central. It, too, has a varied assortment of tips for tuning and tricks for surfing with your favorite browser.

If the Web is your workplace, then at some point you are going to need Adobe's Acrobat reader. The reader allows properly formatted documents to be viewed in their original format, bypassing limitations of any particular browser or operating system. Need to file a tax extension? The file is available on the Web in Acrobat format, ready to be printed, filled out and mailed.

Also available in Acrobat format are many other federal and state regulations and publications.

There are other applications that do similar work. The New York Times, for example, has Times Fax, its daily eight-page summary, available in Envoy format as well as Acrobat formats. Trying to read the electronic version of Times Fax without the appropriate helper application will bring up either an error message or gibberish, forcing you to go somewhere else and start.

Also valuable, but not necessarily for business reasons, is the Real Audio player. Many Web sites nw have audio in the background and need the player to work. These range from introductory music to training tips and news reports.

And if all this work is getting to be too much, head on over to any of the virtual jukeboxes on the Web, choose a couple of songs and relax.

EMAIL: Be to the point; email works best as a quick read

(From 1B)

■ Don't attach a list of recipients to whom the message is being sent if the list is long. It only annoys the reader and makes the message seem like junk mail.

■ Don't engage in "flaming." This sending of scathing criticism — usually posted in newsgroups for all to read — usually results in another, even worse, flame.

Some "do's" from the list:

■ It is permissible to use asterisks when typing for emphasis if they are not overused.

■ Be concise. E-mail is quickly delivered. It is for immediacy in most cases. State the point. Say goodbye.

The guide contains a section on how to take care of e-mail responses in filing and backing them up so the return of messages doesn't get bogged down.

Claris has an ulterior motive in this advice, of course. One of its programs is Emailer 2.0 (with the "a" in the name replaced by the "at" sign used in e-mail addresses that always seem to give newspaper wire services a fit). The program, for MacIntosh computers, helps manage mail. It allows users to control downloads and keep all e-mail messages in one location but in separate folders. It also has a built-in spell checker and a full-feature address book. The program sells for about $50. For purchasing information, call (800) 544-8554.

Java, the programming language for networking and Internet applications, is easier to learn using a CD-ROM that contains hands-on tutorials for the programming language. "Hands-on Visual Cafi" from MindQ is targeted to experienced programmers who want to learn new Java tricks, and for developers and designers with little or no Java programming expertise.

The program can be launched in one window, while running a Java-based application in a second window. That way, students can see the result of their work. Visual Cafi has interactive tours, exercises, animated code sequences, graphics and narration. A "tour" lets users progress through the CD's content matching the interest of the user.

Hot links to Internet-based sites provide additional help, information and resources. The program costs about $50. Users may order from MindQ at www.mindq.com or (800) 646-3008 or (703) 708-9380.

REMOTE: My NetChannel users can select from long menu

(From 1B)

Using a remote control, My NetChannel users can spend about 10 minutes choosing areas of interest from a long menu of "channels," such as news, sports, finance, learning, lifestyles and entertainment.

If you're a San Francisco Giants fan, for instance, you can click on theteam name and automatically receive box scores and daily news on the team. Up to five people can create their lists of preferred channels.

A keyboard is required to send or receive e-mail or participate in chat rooms.

The product will be available in stores this summer. Users must sign up with an Internet service provider, which typically charge $19.95 a month for Net access.

NetChannel, an 85-person company started in March 1996, has already lined up an impressive list of partners. TV set manufacturers RCA, ProScan and General Electric said they will build the set-top devices. More than a dozen companies, including Intuit and the Arts & Entertainment cable channel, will provide content. More partnerships are expected to be announced on Monday.

NetChannel is "pitching people who don't have a PC, are anxious about the Internet and frankly don't care about surfing the Net," said Matt York, a Chico-based analyst who has seen the device.

Still, it faces obstacles, starting with consumer apathy.

Joe Public hasn't exactly knocked down retailers' doors to snap up WebTV. As of April 1, only 56,000 units had been sold, according to a Securities and Exchange Commission filing by WebTV.

Then there's competition. Microsoft bought Palo Alto-based WebTV in April and immediately cut the price by $50 to $249 to stimulate sales.

ICTV, a small Los Gatos company, in December announced a new system that turns your TV into a computer and Internet access device for as little as $6.95 a month. Using the high-speed cable lines that connect to a TV, it operates at speeds almost 100 times faster than the NetChannel and WebTV systems, making Net downloads instant. That service should be available in July.

Another company, WorldGate Communications in Trevose, Pa., offers Net access over your TV via cable at speeds about four times those of WebTV, but it doesn't support as much software as ICTV. It is due later this year for an undisclosed price.

This week, Curtis Mathes Holding, a Dallas TV manufacturer, unveiled uniView, a $399 box that turns a TV set into a speaker phone/fax machine/Internet and e-mail device. It ships next week.

Corporate web police hunt down e-pirates

By Deborah Shapley
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — Joshua Bauchner, who spends most workdays stalking suspected copyright pirates on the Internet, is about to make a big haul. Typing in the word "warez," he waits for a search engine to spit out sites that include the term, which means pirated software in Internet parlance.

On the list was a site maintained by an Internet service provider in Finland. And on the site was a trove of programs likely to be illegal copies of American software pilfered for the sheer thrill of it.

As Bauchner scrolls down the list of software available for free, it proves spectacular — a treasure chest of pirated goods that he is eager to show to his colleagues at the Software Publishers Association.

The young men and women who gather to review his findings are a new online breed: the Internet police.

Or perhaps one should call them the Internet's Pinkerton detectives. Most often, they are private sleuths, hired by corporations to guard their wares — from corporate logos to comic strips, from music to software — from the pilfering that computer technology makes so easy.

The rise of these sleuths reflects the taming of cyberspace's affinity for anarchy.

In recent years, Hollywood, the music industry, software publishers and merchandisers have pushed to enforce copyright and trademark laws on the Internet.

The Business Software Alliance estimates that of the 523 million new business software applications used globally in 1996, 225 million, or nearly one in two are pirated — a 20 percent increase over 1995.

On other fronts, the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Justice Department have built up teams of cyber-sleuths as well.

The response from the Internet's precincts is mixed and sometimes defiant. On one hand, many users publish their own work on the Internet in the hopes of lucrative reproduction fees. On the other, many habitues treat their sites like family bulletin boards, and object to being pursued for posting a Dilbert cartoon.

But there is also a booming subculture of pirates who collect the latest software programs — not necessarily to use, but just for bragging rights.

The pursued have the advantage over their pursuers. The number of Internet users doubled in the past year to 45 million, according to the Gartner Group. "The biggest problem is that ... the number of illegal copies available to the average user are so numerous," Greg Wren, corporate counsel for Adobe Systems Inc., of San Jose, Calif., said.

The applicability of the laws the new detectives seek to enforce remains unclear. Several lower court rulings have held system operators to be like publishers and liable for illegal material posted on their networks. Last December, a U.S. court in the Northern District of California held Maphia, a small Internet provider, liable for illegal copies of Sega Enterprises Ltd. games in its system, because Maphia operators knew of the activity.

But in a case that the Religious Technology Center, part of the Church of Scientology, brought against Netcom On-line Communications Services Inc., a federal judge refused to enjoin the company from allowing texts owned by the church to remain in its system. In denying the preliminary injunction, Judge Ronald Whyte of U.S. District Court for Northern California noted that it could be hard for network operators to decide quickly and fairly whether an activity brought to its attention was illegal.

Complexity magnifies the flaws of computers

By Bill Husted
N.Y. Times News Service

My brother is a smart guy. He won a full scholarship for all four years of medical school; was reading Joseph Conrad novels when he was 9 years old; and has been good enough at his job to earn a lot of money.

But computers mystify him. He just bought his first one, a top-of-the-line 200-megahertz MMX machine. That machine has everything. If it were a pizza it would give you indigestion.

Scott is good at figuring things out. And, although this is his first home computer, he has a bunch of PCs in his office. But, at work, he has folks who keep the computers going. At home, he is on his own. He told me the other night that he has memorized four 800 tech support numbers by heart.

He's genuinely perplexed at why the computer acts more like an unpredictable house cat than a coldly logical machine. Not long ago, he turned the brand new computer on and Windows 95 froze on the screen. So he called the manufacturer's helpline and was introduced to the three-finger salute — hitting the Control, the Alt and the Delete key to reboot the machine.

"But what made it do that?" he asked the tech support guy. "Computers just do it sometime, and the new fast ones seem to do it more often," the tech support guy said.

Scott figured the guy was feeding him a line, so he called me. I told him my PC does the same thing about once a week. Not only that, I said, I get dozens of e-mails from people — both Macintosh and PC owners — who have the same experience.

"But why can't they make computers that work as good as a microwave?" Scott asked.

You probably won't be any happier with my answer than my brother was. But by knowing why computers are so contrary, you may feel less frustration the next time your PC takes a vacation from reality.

In many ways, today's computers are less reliable than the ones I used years ago when you saw a simple DOS prompt on the screen. In those days, if you wanted to run a program, there was no mouse to click. You had to type in the instructions for the computer to use.

I may be an old fogey, but don't mistake this for a tirade that starts with a lament for the good old days. Computers do a lot more useful work these days. But, like with most stuff in life, there's been a price to pay.

I'll give you the short answer first: Now that computers are sold in the appliance department, we've lost sight of the fact they are enormously complicated marvels. The wonder isn't that computers mess up, the wonder is they work at all.

It's easier to understand if you think about the difference between the airplane I learned to fly in, a Cessna 150, and a jet fighter. The Cessna wouldn't go as far, fast or high. But it was fairly easy to fly and simple enough so I could do things like change the oil and check some of the more simple systems myself. A jet, on the other hand, is way too complicated for an aviator to completely understand. It takes a lot more maintenance. There is more that can go wrong these days with computers, software and airplanes.

It isn't difficult to understand. As computer hardware has gotten more powerful, software designers have created ever more complex programs to take advantage of all that new power. Since these complex programs are running on a machine that is more complex, there are more things that can go wrong.

Most of you know about Murphy's Law. It says if something can go wrong, it eventually will. Husted's Law says the more stuff that can go wrong, the more frequent the screw-ups.

All a person can do is enjoy the fact that you now can play games that come close to reality, and work with a word processor that knows more about spelling and grammar than your high school English teacher.

There's a price to pay for progress. That's why I'm typing so fast today.

I need to finish this column before our office computer system crashes.

Hot sauce, hot sites for summer

N.Y. Times News Service

Whether suburbia or cyberia, men still command the grill.

Most of the online paens to the art of barbecue and the sanctity of the sauce come from male devotees, who gleefully spill their secrets for sizzling swine. Memorial Day chefs looking to cook some butt will find dozens of online resources for new and better ways to conquer meat, heat, smoke and salt.

Begin your search at the Smoke Ring, a linked list of 44 barbecue-related World Wide Web sites ranging from commercial offerings by grill manufacturers to enthusiasts' home pages.

Be sure to visit Garry's BBQ Pit. Garry Howard provides basic recipes and exotic variations, such as Jamaican jerk marinade. There are also instructions on how to join an Internet barbecue mailing list.

The Backyard Barbecue Buff boasts a psychedelic pig, Pancetta. The eclectic recipe collection features a Texas Caviar made with black-eyed peas, white hominy, corn, onions and tomatoes.

On the comprehensive Barbecue'n On the Internet site, you'll find recipes, tips, grill comparisons, must-have tools and cooking techniques. The site emphasizes rubs and marinades, including a Lemon Pepper Thyme Rub for steaks and hamburgers.

— From New York's new Sidewalk, it can be hard to tell Broadway from Madison Avenue. The ads and articles on Microsoft's new city guide, which opened Monday, can seem as interchangeable as New York City taxis. Chalk up the confusion to advertisements written in the third person, as if someone other than the proprietor were recommending restaurants, health clubs and retailers.

The number of ads found on almost every page testifies that Sidewalk is expected to be a big player in the crowded market for online guides to New York.

Sidewalk has recruited experienced journalists, including former New York Times restaurant critic Bryan Miller.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

Dance program

The Noni Dance Ensemble will present an afternoon of dance Sunday beginning at 3 p.m. at First United Methodist Church, Main Street at Illinois Avenue.

The dance program will be held in the church's fellowship hall. The public is invited to attend.

Also, the church will "Celebrate Jesus" at Vacation Bible School.

VBS will be held from 9:30 a.m. to noon June 2-5. Call the church office, 682-3701, for more information.

Reception set

A farewell reception honoring Jeff Fentem is planned for Sunday following the 10:45 a.m. worship service at First Christian Church.

Fentem has been director of music and organist for the church since 1990.

The church's associate minister, the Rev. Bill Pennington, will speak on the subject of "On the Road Again."

Bible school set

Cotton Flat Baptist Church is holding Vacation Bible School June 2-6 beginning at 6:30 p.m. daily.

This year's school, designed for grades K through fifth, is a "Wild West Bible Adventure Park" and includes musical celebrations and biblical teaching for every age group.

All preschoolers, ages 3-5, are invited for a special Bible adventure of their own.

All children are welcome.

Farewell planned

Hollowell United Methodist Church and friends will host a farewell Celebration for the Rev. Hadley R. Edwards at 7 p.m. Friday at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, 4300 W Highway 80.

For more information call Mrs. Addie Johnson, 682-1109.

Celebration set

A special celebration of thanksgiving is planned in honor of Bill and Annette Mayne for 7 p.m. June 10 at the Holiday Inn Country Villa, Convention Center.

Refreshments will be served. The public is invited to attend.

Evening service

ODESSA — St. Stephens Charismatic Episcopal Church is planning an evening service today at Cumberland Presbyterian Church, 1415 N. Grandview.

The service will begin at 7 p.m. For more information call Jon or Cindy Harrington, 1-915-367-9344.

Children invited

Bellview Baptist Church, 1710 N. Big Spring St., invites children age 4 through sixth grade to join "The Wild and Wonderful Good News Stampede" from 6:30 to 9 p.m. June 2-6.

Each evening includes a worship rally, Bible stories, Bible-learning activities, mission studies, food , music and crafts.

A kick-off rally is set for 10:15 a.m. June 1 in the church's Christian Life Center.

VBS to begin

Vacation Bible School adventures are set to begin June 2 at Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 3309 W. Neely Ave. The theme for this year's Vacation Bible School will be "Camp Friendship."

"Camp Friendship" is open to children from preschool through sixth grade and will include skits, crafts, recreation, stories and Bible study.

Activities will run from 9 to 11:45 a.m. June 2-6.

A Parent's Night will be hosted June 5 in which the children and parents can participate in a cookout.

All VBS activities are free. For more information or to register call Our Savior's Lutheran Church, 694-4517.

The church is an independent Lutheran church offering worship services at 8:30 and 10:45 a.m. Sundays. Sunday School and Adult Bible Study are at 9:30 a.m. Nursery is provided for ages 3 and under from 8:30 a.m. to noon Sundays.

11th anniversary

The congregation of Mount Rose Baptist Church will be celebrating the 11th anniversary of their pastor and his wife, Bill and Carolyn Palmer, at 3 p.m. Sunday at the church, 211 N. Tyler St.

The public is invited to attend.

Musical presented

St. Barnabas United Methodist Church's Youth Vision Choir of Arlington will present the musical "Salt and Light" in the sanctuary of St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., at 7:30 p.m. June 6.

"Salt and Light," a musical about God and helping others, features the "Songs From the Loft" written by Amy Grant. The choirs is directed by Tom Bonjour.

The public is invited to attend.

Service planned

A community wide worship service called "Celebrate Jesus" is planned for 7 p.m. June 20 at Midland Center, 105 N. Main St.

the worship will be led by Celebration, a worship group made up of members from various churches and fellowships in Midland and Odessa.

For more information call Chris Thrash, 685-1716.

Graduates honored

ODESSA — Redeemer Lutheran Church of Joy, 824 E. 18th, will recognize the members who are graduating from high school and college Sunday in the 11 a.m. festival of praise.

A reception will follow in the church parlor. The public is invited to attend.

Seniors recognized

Graduating teens Kim Edwards, Lee High School, and Esther Johnson, Douglas Newsom, Adam Thomas and Mandy Troeger, all of Midland High School, were honored during a special recognition service Sunday at Second Baptist Church.

While "Pomp and Circumstance" played in the background, the seniors filed in the auditorium to a slide show of pictures taken of them during their years here in the church's youth group.

Harper to sing

Joe Dan Harper will sing at the 8:15 a.m. worship service Sunday at First Presbyterian Church, 800 W. Texas Ave.

A 1992 graduate of Lee High School, Harper is currently pursuing a master's degree in vocal performance at the New England Conservatory of Music in Boston. He received his bachelor's degree in vocal performance from Southern Methodist University.

He joined with the First Presbyterian choir and performed the Brahms Requiem earlier this month.

This summer, Harper will perform the role of Presto in Poulenc's "Mamelles de Tiresias" at the Tanglewood Festival under the direction of Seiji Ozawa.

Bible school set

Vacation Bible School at St. Mark's United Methodist Church, 1701 N. Main St., is set for June 9-13.

Preregistration forms are available at the church. Leaders will meet at 4 p.m. June 8 at the church. Guides are needed to lead children from room to room.

Mothers Day Out summer session begins June 3. Hours and days are 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday and will last until school starts. Call Karin Sanford, 697-2649, or the church office, 683-3339.

Also, the church is now receiving applications for a permanent director of Mothers Day Out. Interested parties are asked to come by the office and fill out an application.

Choir to perform

Spirit Wind '97, the Northwest Texas United Methodist Conference Youth Choir, will perform at St. Luke's United Methodist Church, 3011 W. Kansas Ave., at 8:30 and 10:50 a.m. June 15.

The choir is a select group of UM senior high youth from all over the Panhandle and the West Texas area. They have been selected from more than 180 youth who auditioned in Lubbock, Amarillo, Abilene and Midland in January of this year and represent communities and churches of all sizes.

Ecumenical services

Evangelist, singer and composer Wesley Putnam will head ecumenical services Sunday at first United Methodist Church, Main Street at Ohio Avenue.

Four local congregations are involved in this service including First UMC, Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, St. Nicholas Episcopal Church and First Presbyterian Church.

Putnam has cut six albums. Attired in authentic Hebrew costume, Putnam recounts the lives of Old Testaments characters, such as Gideon and Elijah, as if they were alive today. He animates James, the brother of Jesus, to relate New Testament stories.

There will be a pre-service concert at 10:35 a.m. The morning worship will begin at 11 a.m. The evening service will begin at 7 p.m. All events will occur in the sanctuary of First UMC Sunday.

Course offered

ODESSA — Unity Church of West Texas, 210 E. 12th, is offering "A Course in Miracles" from 6:30 to 8 p.m. Sundays.

The course is being moderated by Jeannie Raff and is free.

In addition, a study group meets at 9:30 a.m. Sundays. This group is being taught by Pamela Davis. And a Brain Gym class is being held in May from 7 to 8 p.m. Tuesdays. This class is being taught by Dave Davis.

Classes held

Exercise classes for older adults are being held from 11 to 11:30 a.m. Monday through Friday at First United Methodist Church, downtown at Main Street and Ohio Avenue.

The exercises are being led by Evelyn Glover of Nurses Unlimited in the Fellowship Hall. Classes are open to the public at no charge.

Fall Bazaar set

The Holy Cross Lutheran Church Women's Guild is preparing for its Fifth Annual Fall Bazaar.

Booth are still available for the bazaar, set for 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. Sept. 20 at the Midland County Exhibit Building. The 10-by-10 booths are $30. For more information on renting a booth call 520-3194.

Church volunteers take care of needs of wild creatures

By Alan Fossler
Associated Press

MONTGOMERY — With a soft, gentle caressing of her hands and a few soothing words from a voice laced with a British accent, the Rev. Jean LeFevre attempts to heal wounded creatures.

Three barn owls, a black vulture, a white goose and a pair of red-tailed hawks are just some of the wounded birds to receive the healing care of LeFevre and the other healers at the Saint John's Interfaith Christian Church, located on 76 acres of land in Montgomery.

LeFevre, a native of Britain, moved to Texas from England in 1982. She came to Montgomery with her husband, planning to retire.

However, when she arrived, LeFevre was asked to help run the local parish. Although the church has a significant human healing ministry, LeFevre said human spiritual healing is just one aspect of their work.

"This is a church, but we feel that God's love is not limited to people," she said. "I was very involved in animal welfare in Britain, and one day somebody turned up here with three barn owls."

'This is a church, but we feel that God's love is not limited to people. I was very involved in animal welfare in Britain, and one day somebody turned up here with three barn owls.'
— the Rev. Jean LeFevre

People have called from all over the state, LeFevre said, asking for help with caring for wounded animals.

"The longest distance that somebody has traveled to us was when someone from Port Arthur brought us a screech owl," she said.

LeFevre and fellow healers Jane Sorbi, Lawrence Paller and Susan Prater all donate countless hours and time caring for the needs of the wildlife here and have all ben certified by state and federal authorities to handle

It is graduation time all over our nation. Thousands of young people will be graduating. The question that most high school graduates are faced with is what is the direction or purpose for my life. The answers to this question will be as diversified as the graduates themselves. Perhaps many of us graduated many years ago but the question is still valid no matter what age we find ourselves. What is my purpose for life and how successful have I been in reaching it? Perhaps you will be surprised when I say that your primary purpose of life is to glorify God and to enjoy Him forever. The only way that you can fulfill the primary purpose of your life is to have a personal relationship with Jesus Christ. If you don't know what i means to have a personal relationship with Jesus, then you cannot begin to live a life that glorifies God.

CHILDREN'S EDUCATION & CARE

Summer '97 at Camp Fire Boys and Girls

Camp Fire is sponsoring two programs this summer. half-day, Day Camps at Casa de Amigos and the Southeast Senior Center for children 5 through 12 years of age and now, bi-lingual, Phone-A-Friend.

The theme for Camp Fire's Day Camp is the Gift of Giving, a Camp Fire National project to encourage and motivate children to become active in community service. Morning Day Camps will be held at Casa de Amigos; afternoon Day Camps will be offered at the Southeast Senior Center.

Children will participate in weekly service projects, designed to be appropriate for their age and interests. Arts and Crafts, science and nature, multi-cultural, multi-generational topics, and self-reliance skills, are the focus of the program. Camp Fire leaders, trained in CPR, First Aid and developmentally appropriate practices for children, will pesent a wide range of activities including; recycling, pet care, becoming "Peer-Proof", how it "feels" to be different, citizenship, and much more.

Meanwhile, back at Phone-A-Firend Central, 520-1520, Leanore Zarate is doing her finest to become Midland's answer to Rosei O'Donnell. She specializes in KID JOKES Aand riddles. Area children can phone inweekday afternoons from 3:00 to 5:30 pm. They hear the "joke of the day" and can submit theirs. Leanore is a friendly, reassuring voice for children to call, whether they are home alone or just want to talk to someone willing and ready to really listen.

Both of these worthwhile Kid Empowerment programs are administered by Rhonda Carroll, Program Director for Camp Fire Boys and Girls. Please call her for more information and Day Camp registration at, 520-1522. Please see our ad in this section. Camp Fire Boys and Girls is a United Way agency member.

Centers specialize in helping students master learning skills, gain confidence to succeed

Sylvan Learning Centers specialize in helping students of all ages master learning skills and gain confidence necessary to succeed.

Complete diagnostic testing quickly and accurately pinpoints the skills needed by the student After testing, an individual program is developed based on the student's needs and goals.

Constant praise, personal attention, awards and recognition, combined with academic success help Sylvan students enjoy learning. Parents soon discover a new positive attitude in the children that is apparent at home and in school.

Instructors are certified teachers trained to use Sylvan's individualized, motivational methods and materials. A full range of nationally recognized materials, including computers, are a daily part of the program. Unlike tutoring Sylvan helps a child do better in many subjects by learning skills that last a lifetime.

Students are monitored and updated regularly to make sure that they are progressing.

Sylvan instructors maintain contact with local public and private teachers to ensure that each child's progress transfers to the class room.

Sylvan offers the following courses:

Beginning Reading: for all ages, concentrates on phonics, vocabulary and comprehension.

Academic Reading; concentrates on basic reading skills and higher level critical thinking skills.

Basic Mathematics: instruction on basic computation skills, problem solving, measurement, graphing, equations and numeration.

Algebra: a custom designed program that develops or enhances skills in patterns and functions, graphing, mathematical connections, problem solving and reasoning.

Study Skills: for students who need effective study techniques, organizational skills, and test-taking strategies.

Heritage Preschool: Quality, Christian education

Heritage preschool has been providing quality, Christian education in Midland for 16 years. The qualified staff at Heritage meet all state requirements, including CPR and first aid training. The friendly and loving teachers are genuinely interested in each child and in meeting each child's needs. Each year the staff participates in various workshops in order to keep up-to-date on the latest teaching techniques and ideas.

The children are taught the letters and sounds of the letters through the Alphaphonics curriculum. In addition, the children learn many other preschool skills, such as counting and recognizing numbers, identifying shapes and colors, the days of the week, months of the year and the Pledge of Allegiance. The music teacher at Heritage involves the children in many fun activities and songs which tie in with the letter-of-the-week.

The school is very bright and colorful with a warm 'home' feeling. The classes have a small teacher/child ratio. In addition to the large, bright classrooms, there is a large cubby room with individual cubbies for each child. The kitchen comes in handy for various cooking activities.

The large well-equipped playground is a favorite with the children at Heritage. The playground is divided into 2 areas: one with grass and the other with sand. This combination provides for a variety of activities. There are swings, climbing apparatus, a space shuttle, slides, digging toys to dig in the sand and tricycles with sidewalk paths for riding. When the weather does not permit outside play, there is a tumbling mat, balance beam, parachute and other large motor skill apparatus for the children to use.

Heritage Preschool helps the children to develop physically, emotionally, socially and spiritually in a Christian atmosphere. Each child is helped to experience success and given many opportunities to learn through new activities and experiences. Specific goals include:

*Develop skills and decision making appropriate for the child's particular age.
* Develop an ability to communicate effectively with teachers and classmates.
* Develop a growing concept of the relationship of numbers, time, space and form.
* Have opportunities for observing nature and science.
* Learn to follow simple instructions.
* Learn more about self and others through informal role play and through interaction with peers.

In addition to the regular class activities, each child participates in Bible lessons, field trips, visits from special speakers and other special activities appropriate for preschoolers. Heritage Preschool celebrates special days throughout the year with the children. These include a Thanksgiving Feast, Rodeo Day, Easter Egg Hunt and a Mother's Day Tea in honor of moms.

The program begins at 9:00 a.m. and dismisses at 11:30 a.m. The Monday, Wednesday, Friday program and the Tuesday, Thursday program are available for 3, 4, and 5 year old children. Limited space is available for the Fall semester. Please call 683-7343 for more information.

NEED: Minister feels God's love isn't limited to people

the responsibility of wildlife rehabilitation.

More than 42 injured birds have been healed during the first four months of 1997, LeFevre said.

"I haven't actually added them up, so I couldn't tell you off the top of my head," she said.

LeFevre estimates that more than 100 birds year are healed at the parish.

To become a certified handler of birds of the wild, LeFevre first contacted the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department.

"You have to get a written recommendation from two veterinarians saying that you have to be inspected by a game warden," she said. "If you are holding birds of prey, endangered species or any migratory birds, then you also require federal licenses."

the federal license insures proper handling of larger birds, such as hawks, Lefevre said.

Most of the birds that have been brought to the church have been wounded by gunfire or pelted by stones. After consulting with local veterinarians, the healers attempt to nurse the birds back to good health, and then return them to the wild.

"You have to be very careful to avoid sentimentality because it would be downright stupid if we had the birds so addicted to us that they could not feed themselves," she said. "There is a very razor's edge in giving them enough love for them to want to survive and withdrawing it sufficiently so they can survive."

Two barn owls currently are being prepared for release.

"They will be able to go in and out of their hatch box withing the next week," she said. "They will be able to get out and hop back in if they are nervous, just the way they would with a proper nest."

Currently, LeFevre and the others have to work with the birds in a covered courtyard walkway at the church, but they have hopes of completing an aviary soon that would allow them to show the birds to local school children while they are rehabilitating.

"What we desperately need is the completion of the aviary," she said. "It will give these birds a better chance."

The 14-foot by 14-foot aviary is partially completed, and the church is looking for people who are willing to help complete the project.

"We don't have the finances to complete it," she said. "We are not into pushing for money, but we are looking for someone to donate time."

LeFevre and officials with the Montgomery Independent School District have been discussing the possibility of creating a sanctuary that children would be able to visit on field trips.

"That's what we would like to do here, because there is not a lot for the town children to do," she said. "We'd like to keep some birds here so that the children can see them and learn something."

WAC Track

SAN DIEGO — Midland native and Rice University standout TaNisha Mills won two titles Friday at the Western Athletic Conference Track and Field Championships.

Mills, a former 400-meter state champion while at Midland Lee, took her first WAC outdoor 400 title with a time of 53.44 to defeat University of Texas-El Paso's Samantha Denley, who placed second at 53.96. Mills, a 1996 U.S. Olympic Trials qualifier, then ran a leg on Rice's 1600-meter relay. The Lady Owls won the relay by over two seconds with a time of three minutes, 36.95 seconds.

Big Spring native Drexell Owusu also fared well in his first WAC outdoor meet for Rice. The two-time Class 4A state title winner in the triple jump took second place in the men's triple jump with a mark of 51 feet, 3/4 of an inch. On Thursday, Owusu placed third in the long jump with a mark of 23-6 3/4.

Daly returning

NEW YORK — John Daly, who has not played competitively since entering alcohol rehabilitation following a drunken spree at the Players Championship in March, will return to the PGA Tour next week at the Memorial Tournament.

Daly committed to the Memorial before Friday's 5 p.m. deadline and the PGA Tour planned a news conference for Tuesday to reintroduce Daly to the tour, according to a source close to Daly.

The 31-year-old winner of the 1995 British Open and the 1991 PGA Championship is scheduled to play in a pro-am on Monday at the Nemacolin Resort south of Pittsburgh.

Daly could not be reached for comment on Friday.

Daly entered alcohol rehabilitation in 1993 and proudly proclaimed when he won the British Open he never would have been able to do it if he were still drinking.

Duncanville halts Rebels' run

By Lee Passmore
Sports Writer

ABILENE — When you are facing the team ranked No. 1 in the state, you can't afford to help that team out any more than it needs it.

LEE
Duncanville 11, 9
Midland Lee 2, 1

The Midland Lee baseball team discovered that in the Region I-5A semifinals Friday night at McMurry University. Duncanville took advantage of every opportunity the Rebels presented them and swept Lee 11-2 and 9-1 to end what was turning into a little-engine-that-could season for the Rebels.

Things were far closer than they appeared in the second game, as only five of Duncanville's nine runs were earned. The fourth and fifth innings were what did Lee in, as the Panthers erupted for six runs in the fourth and added three in the fifth.

"I still felt like we were going to be in the game," said Lee coach Jesse Benavidez. "We just needed to make a play here or there. I'm not the type of coach who is going to give up because of falling behind."

Lee (20-16-1) lost the first game by giving up eight runs in the first two innings. Senior right-hander Mike Hale kept up his postseason pattern of following an excellent outing with a not-so-good performance, not lasting past the second inning. At the plate, the Rebels managed seven hits off Duncanville's Justin Taylor, but none came after the third inning.

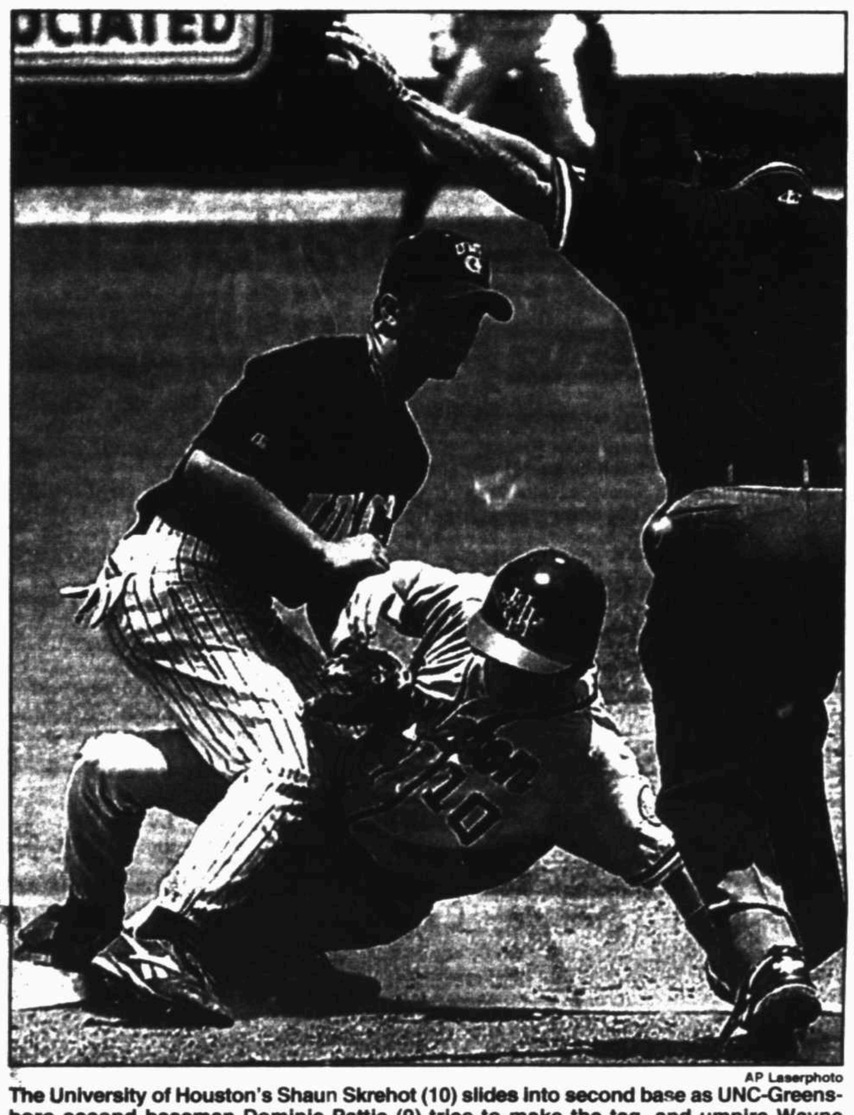

Duncanville ace left-hander Rip Fleming kept the Rebels in check during the second game, allowing only four hits in six innings. Lee lefty John Purves held the Panthers (33-2) hitless for the first three innings until things began to fall apart.

Lee struck first in the second game against Fleming. Matt Whitaker and Raymond Ibarra both drew walks. With two outs, Purves doubled to left-center to drive home Whitaker and give Lee a 1-0 lead. It was the first time in the playoffs Duncanville had trailed.

The Rebels had chances to extend that meager lead in both the third and fourth innings but couldn't convert against Fleming. Chandler led off the third with a bloop double, then went to third on a sacrifice bunt by Matt Whitaker. However, David Smith grounded back to the mound and Raymond Ibarra struck out looking to end the inning. Lee loaded the bases in the fourth on a single by Purves, an error and a walk, but with two outs Chandler popped out to second.

Those missed opportunities finally accumulated to slap the Rebels in the face in the bottom of the fourth. The first six Duncanville batters reached base against Purves, with Clark Cree's infield single driving in the first run for the Panthers. Taylor then belted a two-run

Southwest Missouri knocks Red Raiders out of NCAA tourney

■ Former No. 1 Texas Tech team finds quick exit at own regional tournament, while Rice stays alive.

Wire Services

LUBBOCK — After the morning game Friday in the NCAA Central Regional baseball tournament, the moderator in the interview room announced that Texas Tech coach Larry Hays was on hand to make an opening statement.

"You mean closing statement," Hays said wryly after the Red Raiders' season ended with a 4-2 loss to Southwest Missouri State (34-24) in an elimination game.

In a performance that typified the final weeks of a troubled season, the once-formidable Raiders (46-14) managed only five hits and committed two errors that handed Southwest Missouri four unearned runs.

And in a final, cruel twist of fate, the Bears' winning three-run rally in the bottom of the seventh was launched when Keith Ginter, Tech's All-America second baseman, muffed an easy pop fly.

So, the team that was once ranked No. 1 in the nation completed a nose dive that featured eight losses in the final 12 games, and became only the third NCAA top seed — dating to 1988, when seeds were first officially announced — to be ousted from a regional with two consecutive losses.

And the Raiders, who opened the tournament by losing Thursday to Southwest Texas State, became the first top seed to lose consecutive games to the fifth- and sixth-seeded teams in a regional.

In the second game, Nevada stayed alive by beating Southwest Texas, 7-1.

In the night game, Lance Berkman hit his 38th home run and Matt Anderson picked up his ninth save as Rice defeated Clemson, 10-6. The Owls (45-14) are the last remaining unbeaten team in the region.

When the tournament resumes today, Southwest Texas (37-25) plays Clemson (41-22) at 11 a.m., and Nevada (39-20) plays Southwest Missouri State at 3 p.m. The winner of the Southwest Texas-Clemson game faces Rice at 7 p.m.

"I'm really very proud of this team," Hays said, "especially the way it held up the last few weeks under a lot of adversity."

The Raiders' problems this year began with numerous key injuries, including the loss of one starter who suffered a dislocated shoulder when he tripped rounding second base after a home run. A month ago, two more starters rendered themselves academically ineligible.

More recently came the discovery that Tech had exceeded its scholarship limit and faces an NCAA penalty — probably the loss of two scholarships.

"I normally feel that I can handle things pretty well," Hays said. "But to be honest, this year has been tough on me.

"We've lost players to injuries, we lost

Johnson launches Rockets into win column with 31-point show vs. Jazz

By Chris Sheridan
AP Basketball Writer

HOUSTON — Like some kind of ghost from seasons past, 38-year-old Eddie Johnson reappeared Friday night and kept the Houston Rockets from facing a frightening task.

1997 NBA PLAYOFFS

Johnson came off the bench to score a season-high 31 points, including five 3-pointers, to lead the Rockets to a '8-100 victory over the Utah Jazz.

It cut Houston's deficit to 2-1 in the best-of-7 series and kept the Rockets out of a 3-0 hole — something no NBA team has ever climbed out of.

"It definitely was one of my biggest moments," said the 15-year veteran, who was signed by Houston early in March after he was traded from Indiana to Denver and then was waived. "You try to pick a moment when you can seize the opportunity and I knew I had to make a difference."

Such a difference — a scorer off the bench — was one of the many things the Rockets were lacking in the first two games of the series. Johnson was partly to blame, too, as he shot a combined 3-for-9 with just seven points. The Jazz had even begun leaving him wide open on the perimeter.

"We can take his face off the milk carton now," Houston's Charles Barkley said. "Looking at some of the young guys in this league, I think Eddie can play until he's 42. There's always a place for guys who can shoot, especially on our team."

Hakeem Olajuwon added 27 points and the Rockets made 12 3-pointers to match their total from the first two games combined. Barkley added 19 points and 16 rebounds and Clyde Drexler scored 15 points.

But the biggest reason why the Rockets are back in this series was Johnson, the only player in NBA history to score at least 18,000 points without ever having made an All-Star team.

The journeyman spent last season in Greece — "I've never felt pressure like I did playing in Europe," he said — before coming back to the United States to play this season for the Pacers, his fifth NBA team.

"That was a mistake. I didn't get a chance to play," he said.

He had a resurgence after joining the Rockets, scoring in double figures 13 times over the last seven weeks of the season while several Rockets recovered from injuries.

Friday, though, was his best moment of the season as he shot 12-for-17 and made several clutch shots in the fourth quarter when Utah was trying to mount a comeback.

His final basket on a layup with 1:19 left elicited the last of several chants of "Ed-die, Ed-die" from a sellout crowd at The Summit.

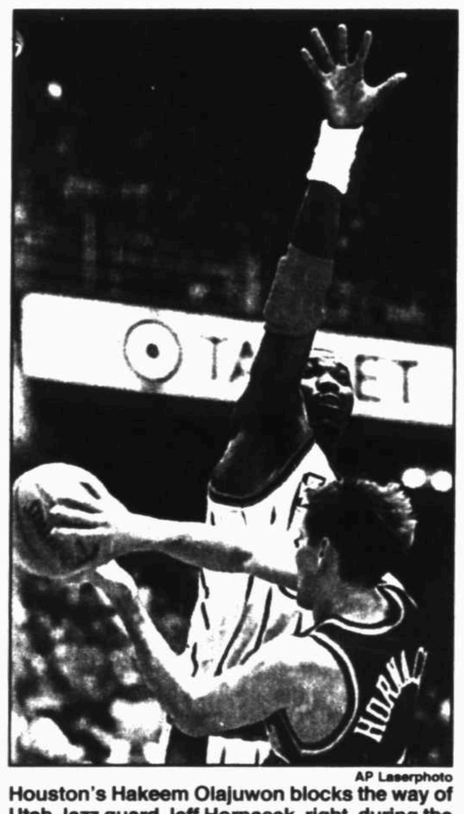

Johnson helped Houston to a 47-28 edge in bench scoring — a category the Rockets had lost badly in each of the first two games.

Sedale Threatt came off the bench and made two 3-pointers for the Rockets and Drexler had three.

"Game balls go to Eddie Johnson and Sedale Threatt," Barkley said.

Karl Malone scored 21 points, John Stockton had 17 points and 10 assists and Greg Ostertag had 15 points for

By Oscar LeRoy
Sports Writer

The game was supposed to have showcased two of the best Texas League pitching talents in their respective organizations.

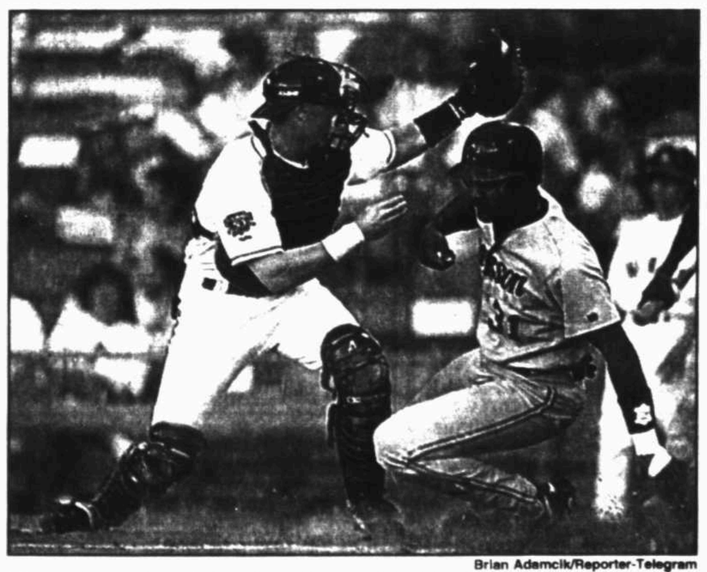

Instead, it turned into a drawn-out, misery-filled night for the Midland Angels in a 12-5 loss to the Jackson Generals on Friday night at Christensen Stadium.

On a field where the Angels (25-22) have had so much success, they honestly looked like they didn't belong as the Generals jumped out to a 10-0 lead in the fifth inning and Midland was forced to play catch-up from there.

Jarrod Washburn struggled for the Angels as he lasted just a little more than three innings, giving up eight of Jackson's runs and allowing 10 hits.

Scott Elarton, Washburn's counterpart, even though not spectacular, did handcuff the Halos through four innings before getting into a little trouble in the fifth

MESA, Ariz. — The Midland College golf team showed the form that many at the National Junior College Athletic Association Golf Championships are used to seeing, shooting the day's best score of two-under-par 286 on the Alta Mesa Country Club course.

However, it was too little, too late for the Chaps. The two-time NJCAA champions finished the four rounds in seventh place, 31 strokes behind repeat champion Central Alabama.

Indy officials to allow drivers more practice

By Paul Newberry
AP Sports Writer

INDIANAPOLIS — For a place that thrives on tradition, the Indianapolis Motor Speedway keeps changing things.

Four cars will be allowed on the track for a special practice session Saturday, the day before the 81st Indy 500.

Jim Guthrie, Sam Schmidt and Claude Bourbonnais of Team Blueprint Racing were cleared for the extra 15-minute session after blown engines kept their cars in the garage during practice Thursday, usually the last time the track is open until the race.

Robby Gordon of Team Sabco also will be allowed to practice again on the 2 1/2-mile oval because he ran six laps with a top speed of just 135 mph before blowing his engine on Thursday.

"It's more of a safety check than anything," Guthrie said. "It would be stupid for one little fitting to be loose and take out seven cars in the first turn."

Guthrie's backup engine arrived Friday from Chicago, Schmidt's was expected late in the day and Bourbonnais was hoping to get his by Saturday morning. Gordon's new engine also was expected Saturday morning.

Gordon had planned to be in Charlotte, N.C., on Saturday to practice for the Coca-Cola 600, a NASCAR race he'll run after finishing the 500 on Sunday. But Ken Anderson, Team Sabco's chief engineer, said Gordon will stay in Indianapolis and let someone else test his stock car.

The final practice session at Indy is traditionally on Carburetion Day, the Thursday before the race. If drivers need more practice, they're supposed to take their cars to another track.

"Tradition is a great thing, but there's no point in getting too stuck in a rut," Anderson said. "There's no point in hurting somebody just because of tradition."

The extra practice session is the latest in a series of changes at the speedway in the past two years. The battle between the new Indy Racing League and Championship Auto Racing Teams has kept most of the big-name drivers away from the 500. And this year, the speedway added two cars to the traditional 33-car field.

Most people along Gasoline Alley felt the speedway made the right decision by adding an extra practice session, considering all the questions about the new Oldsmobile Aurora and Nissan Infiniti engines and the lack of spare parts. The engines have never raced for 500 miles.

"If somebody needs the extra work, I would rather them go out now than on race day," said John Menard, owner of Menard Racing.

And exceptions have been made before. In 1979, some drivers were allowed to requalify the day before the race after they sued for the right to compete. In 1986, the race was delayed six days because of rain and there was a closed practice session the day before.

Martin goes for record win on Grand National circuit

By David Droschak
AP Sports Writer

CONCORD, N.C. — You have to excuse Mark Martin if he gets a bit nervous when one of his mechanics pops the hood or crawls underneath his Busch Grand National car as it sits in the garage area.

Martin doesn't like to tinker with success. And he's had plenty of that on the Grand National circuit over the last decade.

The 38-year-old driver from Batesville, Ark., one of the stars on the Winston Cup series, can set the all-time victory mark on the Grand National circuit with a win in Saturday's Carquest Auto Parts 300 at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

The race comes a day before the track's big event — the Coca-Cola 600 — where Martin will also be going for his third straight Winston Cup win.

Martin is tied with Jack Ingram for the most wins (31) in the 16-year history of Grand National racing, cars that are slightly lighter and have less horsepower than Winston Cup cars. He has won five of the 13 races so far this season and took the pole Thursday with a speed of 175.012 mph.

"The Busch car has just been a real cut-and-dry, simple program," Martin said. "I've been running Busch since 1987 and have worked out some things that really, really work and we keep using them. The setup under that car is not so different than the setup I had in my car in 1988 out here. We run basic stuff, and we have good engines and good cars and good chassis setups."

Martin says that's quite a bit different from the constant changes he sees most teams making weekly to their Winston Cup cars — including his own crew.

"Sometimes the Winston Cup cars are just as awesome and sometimes they're not," Martin said when comparing the two series. "We go through spells where we work harder and try to get better with the Winston Cup car and that usually makes us worse. When we finally give up, throw our hands in the air and drag out the old junk and start running it again, we start running good again."

Although Martin has had good success in Winston Cup racing, he said he is extremely proud of his accomplishments on the lower-profile series.

"It's a pretty big accomplishment, something that I don't normally recognize," Martin said about the possibility of breaking Ingram's record Saturday.

Boesel earns pole at Gateway

MADISON, Ill. (AP) — Not even losing a pole he thought was a lock could shake the confidence of Paul Tracy.

Tracy, who will carry a two-race winning streak into the Motorola 300 on Saturday at the brand new 1.27-mile oval at Gateway International Raceway, was outrun on a hot, sunny Friday afternoon by Brazilian Raul Boesel.

Boesel picked up the third pole of his CART Indy-car career, and first since June of 1994 at Milwaukee, with a lap of 187.963 mph. Tracy, who had led every practice since the track first opened for competition on Wednesday, was right behind at 187.739.

In fact, the time difference between the two fast laps was .031 seconds.

"I'm not really surprised because Raul was fast this morning (in practice)," Tracy said. "But I am disappointed because we felt we had more potential in the car.

"But that's qualifying. You roll the dice and you go."

Boesel, whose only previous Indy-car poles came on the one-mile oval at Milwaukee, said the track was well-suited to his talent.

"It's my style to like fast corners and be smooth," he said. "That just pays off on a track like this."

Irvin wins Busch qualifying race

CONCORD, N.C. (AP) — Ernie Irvan won the 40-lap Carquest Challenge race Friday and earned a spot in the Busch Grand National race at Charlotte Motor Speedway.

Irvan, driving a Chevrolet, started third in the 25-car field and stayed close to leader Michael Waltrip before Waltrip spun out two laps from the finish.

The win earned Irvan one of 10 additional qualifying spots in Saturday's $454,946 Carquest Auto Parts 300 field of 43 cars. Mark Martin won the pole Thursday.

Kyle Petty finished second to Irvan, while Matt Kenseth was third and Rick Wilson fourth. The top four drivers all were in Chevys.

Five other provisional drivers were added to the field, including Todd Bodine, Mike McLaughlin and Elton Sawyer. Those three are in the top 10 in the points standings.

Faxon, two others share Colonial lead

Associated Press

■ Golf Roundup

FORT WORTH — David Frost rode a sizzling putter to a 7-under-par 63 Friday and grabbed a share of the second-round lead at the MasterCard Colonial with Brad Faxon and Paul Goydos.

But Tiger Woods, battling a balky putter all day, slashed five strokes from par for a 30 on the back nine and his 65 moved him within three shots of the leaders.

Frost's bogey-free performance propelled him into first place with Faxon, the first-round leader who shot a 66 Friday, and Goydos, who followed an opening 64 with a 65.

That put the trio at 11-under 129 heading into the weekend showdown.

Justin Leonard (67), Jim Furyk (67) and Bob Tway (66) were two off the lead at 131.

With another massive gallery cheering him on, Woods still loomed as the man to beat.

A Colonial title on Sunday would give the 21-year-old sensation victories in three consecutive starts, which has not occurred on the PGA Tour since Nick Price did it in 1993.

Woods missed several short putts in matching par 35 on the front side and at that point was eight strokes behind the leaders. But birdies on Nos. 10 and 11 got him rolling and he birdied three of his closing five holes.

Despite his solid 66, Faxon took a mild swipe at Woods, joking: "I didn't have my 'A' game today. It was a C-minus."

Woods used such terms to describe his stunning victory last month at the Masters and his less spectacular triumph at the Byron Nelson Classic last week.

Pressed about Woods, Faxon suggested the superstar still has a little to learn about life on the PGA circuit.

"I mean, seriously, it's impressive what he's done," said Faxon, a 5-time tour winner.

But he went on to point out that others have won when not playing at the top of their game.

"He's making it sound like he's the only one," Faxon said. "Jack Nicklaus won a lot of tournaments when he wasn't playing well. Tom Watson was the same way.

"It's the mark of a champion to win tournaments without having everything together."

Faxon disclosed that he had discussed the subject of "winning ugly" with Woods last December in a Florida telephone call.

"He'd been saying that ... when he was beating everybody. I told him, 'You better be aware of what you're saying and how it's being taken by your (colleagues).' I think he was listening. He was silent."

Faxon said he also told Woods if he wants people to like him, he needs to watch what he says.

"He's the most successful thing that's come along," Faxon conceded. "He has superb confidence."

He also indicated that Woods' status has tended to isolate him from his fellow players.

"I think in a way his superstardom is creating that whether he wants it or not," Faxon said. "The great superstars of every sport have to deal with that."

Woods, he predicted, "is going to be with us for a long time. I want to get along with him and I think everybody else does."

Redman takes one-shot lead in LPGA Corning Classic

CORNING, N.Y. — The Indianapolis 500 was enough to prompt Michele Redman to take a break from the LPGA tour every Memorial Day weekend. Now, it seems she'll be busy.

The 32-year-old shot a 3-under-par 69 Friday and took a one-stoke lead over three others after two rounds of the $650,000 Corning Classic, basically ruining her tradition of watching the Indy on Sunday.

Eastwood leads Bell Atlantic

MALVERN, Pa. — Bob Eastwood shot a 4-under-par 66 Friday and held a 1-stroke lead after the first round of the $1,000,000 Bell Atlantic Golf Classic.

Bob Dickson, the 1967 U.S. and British Amateur champion, and John Bland, the 1996 Senior PGA Tour rookie of the year, had 67s.

Raymond Floyd, who had three birdies on the back nine, shot a 68, while Bob Smith, Roy Vucinich, Dana Quigley, and Jack Kiefer were the only other players under par, shooting 69. Walter Morgan finished at par-70.

Davies tries to defend LPGA Skins title

FRISCO — Laura Davies already is the all-time leading money winner in the JCPenney-LPGA Skins Game even though she's participated only twice.

But Davies says her $480,000 in Skins Game earnings is a result of good fortune as much as to her shot-making ability.

"This game comes down to who gets the breaks," Davies said. "You can play your best on Saturday and Sunday and get nothing. You have to be lucky ... It comes down to who makes the putts."

Davies, the biggest money winner in last year's event, will be joined by the top two current money-winners on the LPGA tour, Annika Sorenstam and Karrie Webb, plus Dottie Pepper Saturday and Sunday at Stonebriar Country Club.

Nine holes will be played each day in the seventh LPGA Skins Game, with a total of $540,000 at stake.

Darcy, Clarke pace Volvo

VIRGINIA WATER, England — Nick Faldo, trying to earn his way onto the European Ryder Cup team instead of using a captain's pick, closed with two birdies for a 70, four strokes behind leaders Eamonn Darcy and Darren Clarke after Friday's first round of the Volvo PGA Championship.

Sampras draws Santoro in French Open

Associated Press

■ Tennis Roundup

PARIS — Pete Sampras will need to be sharp from the start as he bids for the only title missing from his Grand Slam collection.

Winless on clay this year and coming off a thigh injury, Sampras drew a challenging first-round opponent Friday for the French Open.

The top seed was paired against Fabrice Santoro, a French baseliner who has been one of the top clay-court players this season.

On clay this year, Sampras lost his opening matches at Monte Carlo and Rome, and retired in the third set of a match Monday at the World Team Cup in Duesseldorf, Germany with a muscle strain. He pulled out of the rest of the event to safeguard his chances for the French Open, whkch begins Monday.

In all, Sampras has won four U.S. Opens, three Wimbledons and two Australian Opens, including the last one in January. His best showing in Paris was last year, when he reached the semifinals.

Graf finally beats Coetzer

STRASBOURG, France — Steffi Graf, still struggling with her game, beat Amanda Coetzer for the first time in three tries this year, 4-6, 7-5, 7-6 (7-4) in the semifinals of the Strasbourg Open.

Coetzer beat Graf 6-0, 6-1 a week ago in the German Open, the worst loss of the German's career. Coetzer also defeated Graf at the Australian Open.

In Saturday's final, Graf will play 15-year-old Mirjana Lucic of Croatia, a 7-5, 6-7 (8-10), 7-6 (7-5) winner over Judith Wiesner.

Seles to face Novotna in Madrid Open final

MADRID, Spain — Top-seeded Monica Seles struggled early before regaining her form to beat Argentina's Florencia Labat 6-7 (3-7), 6-1, 6-2 in the semifinals of the Madrid Open.

In Saturday's final, Seles will face defending champion and No. 2 seed Jana Novotna, a 6-4, 6-4 winner over Spain's Arantxa Sanchez Vicario.

Australia clinches place in final

DUESSELDORF, Germany — Australia gained a place in the final of the World Team Cup by eliminating Croatia 3-0, and will face the winner of Saturday's Netherlands-Spain match.

The Czech Republic beat the United States 2-1, with Petr Korda rallying to defeat Alex O'Brien 3-6, 7-6 (7-4), 6-3.

Lindros' last-second goal lifts Flyers to 3-2 win

■ Rangers come within one game of elimination.

NEW YORK (AP) — Eric Lindros again took advantage of the battered New York Rangers, breaking a 2-2 tie with seven seconds to play Friday night to give the Philadelphia Flyers a 3-2 Game 4 victory and a commanding lead in the Eastern Conference finals.

The Flyers lead the best-of-7 series 3-1 and New York could be eliminated in Game 5 Sunday in Philadelphia.

Lindros, who scored his first playoff hat trick in the Flyers' 6-3 victory Tuesday night, backhanded a blind backhand pass from John LeClair from the left circle on a power play with goaltender Mike Richter out of position.

The Flyers were on the power play because New York's Jeff Beukeboom was given a double-minor when his stick hit LeClair in the face, cutting him on the bridge of the nose.

New York's Brian Leetch, whose sprained wrist had kept him offensively weak Tuesday and for most of Friday's game, tied the game 2-2 with 2:08 remaining on a behind-the-net feed from Wayne Gretzky.

A shorthanded goal by Esa Tikkanen, consistently one of the best — and healthiest — Rangers in the playoffs, tied the game 1-1 1:41 into the third period.

With Ulf Samuelsson serving a penalty for roughing, Tikkanen took a pass from Doug Lidster and faked two Flyers defensemen for a clean shot on goalie Ron Hextall.

Philadelphia went ahead again at 16:47 on a shorthanded goal as John Druce went around Rangers defenseman Bruce Driver at the blue line, rushed in to fire a slap shot that Richter failed to hold and then flicked the rebound high into the net for his first goal of the playoffs.

Just as in Tuesday's game, the Flyers held New York scoreless through two periods, this time relying more on Hextall as the Rangers were markedly more aggressive, but still disorganized.

New York in turn relied on Richter, who held the 2-2 tie with two sprawling saves in the last minute of regulation. His goaltending was especially important in the first period when the Rangers repeatedly turned over the puck in their own zone and took five penalties to the Flyers' two.

Philadelphia scored on the first power play as the New York defense collapsed into Richter and Mikail Renberg shot through the screen, making it 1-0 at 7:08 of the period.

The Rangers came out more energetically in the second, outshooting Philadelphia 17-11, yet produced nothing even during a minute-long, two-man advantage.

GOLF: Chaps finish 7th at nationals

(From 1C)

secutive appearance at the national tourney. It was the first time the Chaps have not placed in the top three this decade.

"I was extremely proud of the way our young men came back after playing poorly," MC golf coach Delnor Poss said. "It was extremely difficult to play this well when they knew they were out of the trophy race. Seventh in the national tournament is an honor and we are proud of it."

Leading the way for the Chaps was sophomore Shawn Reeves, who finished a team-high 20th. Reeves missed a tie for 14th and subsequent spot on the all-America team by one stroke, marking the first time that a Chap golfer hasn't earned all-America honors. MC has put at least two players on the All-American team in each of the last nine years.

The Plainview native fired six birdies en route to a three-under-par 69. The team's other two sophs, Steven Young and James Clive closed out their careers with a 71 and 74, respectively.

Freshman Fraser McLaughlan had a solid last round with an even-par 72. MC's other freshman, Midland's Charlie Prince, went into the round tied for 18th, but shot an 83.

Midland College was the top finisher from the Western Junior College Athletic Conference. New Mexico Military Institute placed eighth at 1,193, Mexico Junior College was 10th and Odessa College placed 14th.

"Our conference showed it strength by placing three of four teams finishing seventh, eighth and 10th," Poss said.

Central Alabama won the team title by 16 strokes over Scottsdale Community College (1,152-1,168).

The medalist title was shared by Central Alabama's Carl Peterson and Wallace College's Michael Kirk, who finished with a four-round total of 184.

Final round results from the NJCAA Golf Championships held this week at Alta Mesa Country Club.

Team Standings: 1. Central Alabama 295-1152. 2. Scottsdale C.C. 289-1168. 3. Navarro College 294-1169. 4. (tie) Brevard C.C. Tyson looks good in workout

LAS VEGAS (AP) — It didn't take long Friday for Mike Tyson to put to rest doubts about his physical shape with only five weeks left before his scheduled rematch with Evander Holyfield.

All that remained was for Tyson to explain how he'll get mentally prepared to meet a fighter who knocked him out the first time they got together in the ring.

"My confidence is never shaken by anything," Tyson insisted. "I'm going to go in there and fight him like I knocked him out the first time."

Tyson worked out before the media Friday for the first time since Holyfield beat him last November, then stood and patiently answered questions about how he was preparing for the fight that could likely define his boxing career.

Losing to Holyfield in the 11th round of their Nov. 9 fight was certainly something that "opens your eyes," Tyson conceded, though he refused to call the June 28 rematch crucial to his boxing career.

But Tyson, who turns 31 two days after the fight, said it was a fight he had to win.

"I feel I have to win it for myself," Tyson said. "I want the title back."

SATURDAY, MAY 24, 1997

HAPPY BIRTHDAY for Saturday, May 24, 1997:
This is an unusual year, when you will constantly make adjustments. How you view situations and events will change considerably, because of more open talks and sharing. Be willing to talk about your fears and vulnerabilities. There is an increased tendency toward confusion and misunderstandings. Be as direct as you can be. If you are single, romance is likely. You will grow and see partnership matters in a new way. If attached, your openness will help a relationship blossom. You will need to work on financial matters. CAPRICORN is a pal in hard times.

For a personal consultation with a psychic, call (900) 000-0000, $2.95 per minute. You can request your favorite psychic, and Spanish-speaking psychics are available. Rotary or touch-tone phones. Must be 18 or older to call. A service of InterMedia Inc., Jenkintown, Pa.

ARIES (March 21-April 19)
★★★ What you perceived as a given, might not be. Loosen up about responsibilities. Someone cancels plans, or there is confusion about getting together. Make phone calls, and confirm meetings. Your sense of humor pleases a friend. Tonight: It's a late-night dinner.
TAURUS (April 20-May 20)
★★★★ Opt for a day trip. You need a breath of fresh air. A parent or boss could cause a last-minute upset. Do yourself a favor, and let the answering machine do its work. Catch up on news with a friend. Tonight: Check out a new place.
GEMINI (May 21-June 20)
★★★★ Sudden news startles you and causes you to regroup. You can deal with it, but be more direct. A change in weekend plans turns out for the better. Share your deeper feelings with a close friend. Relax, and don't push yourself. Tonight: Dine with buddies.
CANCER (June 21-July 22)
★★★★ A money matter throws you off, but you can handle it. A loved one saves the day. Use this holiday weekend to get out and party. Others are thrilled to catch up with you. A new acquaintance has an impact on your life. Tonight: Attend a barbecue.
LEO (July 23-Aug. 22)
★★★ An older relative has another idea about what needs to happen. Listen, but do not allow yourself to be pulled in emotionally. Complete important projects. Relax with an old friend later in the day, or invite him to pitch in. Tonight: Make it slow and easy.
VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22)
★★★★ A partner's words are confusing. Creative energy is high, so you find solutions. Remember the jovial nature of the first summer weekend. Do something special with a loved one. A new relationship, if you are open, could blossom. Tonight: Get into the party spirit.
LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22)
★★★ Opting to stay close to home sounds like the right decision. You might have pushed too hard for your own good. A partner is difficult about a child. Don't take unusual risks, especially with joint assets. Bring over only those close to you. Tonight: The party is at your place.
SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21)
★★★★★ You are very busy, full of get-up-and-go. There are a lot of last-minute changes on the home front. Plans could change. A dear friend has another idea about what to do. Fun comes in the form of hanging out and just talking. Tonight: Nothing beats old friends.
SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21)
★★ Be careful with unexpected costs. Someone might drop the ball in your lap. The decision rests on whether you can afford this drain. Be realistic about the situation. Make time to get a project done before the celebrations begin. Tonight: It's your treat.
CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19)
★★★★ A loved one jolts you with news that will cost you in some way. Discussions ease tensions and bring a sense of renewal. It is as you like it. A relationship builds in strength because of new understandings. Love abounds. Tonight: The party begins.
AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18)
★★ What occurs eases pressure and allows for more continuity. You might be so unpredictable that your family doesn't know which way to go. Your good cheer helps discharge tension. Later on, initiate a talk. Your vulnerability helps another. Tonight: Go behind the scenes.
PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20)
★★★★ Emphasize what you want. Because of a new development, you need to regroup. Emphasize camaraderie, and visit friends. Perhaps you'll kick off the barbecue circuit! You love the holiday weekend. Tonight: Be where the party is.

Minneapolis rock band to perform at Grand Forks high school prom

GRAND FORKS, N.D. — Flooded-out high school students forced to postpone their prom found out it's worth the wait — Soul Asylum will perform.

The Minneapolis rock band, best known for its million-selling 1992 album "Grave Dancers Union," will play at the June 28 prom at a Grand Forks Air Force Base hangar, a publicist for the group said.

Students from Central and Red River high schools can attend the prom. The spring flooding ravaged 90 percent of Grand Forks and East Grand Forks, Minn., across the Red River.

"Grave Dancers Union" included the singles "Runaway Train" and "Somebody to Shove."

WASHINGTON — Who's Tiger Woods? Or Dennis Rodman? Most Americans know. But, Ralph Reed? Louis Freeh? Who?

Eight out of 10 Americans questioned in a poll could identify the golf superstar or the tattooed basketball player.

Only 9 percent could identify Reed, the outgoing executive director of the Christian Coalition, or Freeh, the FBI director.

The poll, conducted last week by the Pew Research Center for the People & the Press of 615 adults, had a margin of error of 4.5 percent.

OVIEDO, Spain— Yehudi Menuhin and Mstislav Rostropovich were named co-winners of the Spanish equivalent of the Nobel prize Friday for the "universality" of their music and their contribution to freedom.

The jury of the Prince of Asturias Concord Prize lauded Menuhin, the violinist, and Rostropovich, the cellist, for "contributing with their music to the harmony and concord of the world."

The award, one of eight Prince of Asturias prizes presented annually, includes $35,000 and a sculpture by Spanish artist Joan Miro. They are presented by the heir to the Spanish throne, Prince Felipe of Asturias.

Former winners of the Concord Prize, awarded for contributions to international understanding and cooperation, include King Hussein of Jordan, Spanish former Prime Minister Adolfo Suarez and the American Foundation for AIDS Research.

PARIS — Isabelle Adjani, who headed this year's Cannes Film Festival jury, insists the panel awarded its top prize — the Golden Palm — to "great films, not good causes."

Many of the winning films or their directors had some link to political or social issues, but there was nothing politically correct about the decisions, Adjani told Le Monde in a story published Thursday.

"Simply, the majority of the most interesting filmmakers are the ones confronted with difficult situations," Adjani said. "Their creativity blows a hole in the wall and lets in the light. When the film works, you have to act."

This year's Golden Palms went to Japanese director Shohei Imamura for "Unagi" ("The Eel") and Iranian filmmaker Abbas Kiarostami for "The Taste of Cherry," both films dealing with suicide. Kiarostami had trouble getting the film to Cannes because of Iranian censors.

Isabelle Adjani says political correctness has nothing to do with decisions.

Jurors included American novelist Paul Auster, Chinese actress Gong Li, American director Tim Burton, British director Mike Leigh and Canadian writer Michael Ondaatje.

ARLINGTON — Spike sounded a little bugged.

The disc jockey at radio station KKZN/93.3 FM had just announced a coup for his listeners: The stations had obtained a Holographic Organic Alphawave Xiter, which would beam an inaudible signal, causing bugs to disappear like magic from holiday picnics.

No bugs! Just in time for Memorial Day! And all you had to do was turn on your radio. What a deal!

But here we were, doubting him.

"I mean," said the hurt-sounding Spike, who works for the adult-alternative station better known as The Zone, "we can't just be making stuff up."

Uh, apparently they can.

Spike began making the claim during his air shift on Monday and went on to explain off-air that the fabulous Xiter cost, "like, in the hundreds; like $800," he said.

But Spike could not produce an engineer to explain the new gizmo.

"They're all afraid to talk about it," he said.

He also didn't know whether the high-pitched radio zapper would also rid picnic areas of pesky pooches — or people with pacemakers.

Finally, under intense cross-examination, the hard-pressed Spike broke down and acknowledged that the Holographic Organic Alphawave Xiter was an H.O.A.X.

REBELS: No. 1 Panthers end Midland Lee's season

double to left which gave Duncanville a 3-1 lead.

Lee became its own worst enemy in the inning, as Purves and catcher Ibarra both committed throwing errors which helped lead to two more Duncanville runs. With two outs, Bret Duff singled to make it 6-1 and knock Purves out of the game.

Aaron Erdwurm came on in relief and fell victim to some shoddy defense in the fifth to make things appear even uglier, as Lee committed three throwing errors to help extend its deficit further.

As was the case a week earlier against Abilene High, Hale struggled in the first inning of the first game against Duncanville, only this time it was far more costly. Brandon Fahey lined Hale's second pitch of the game to right field for a single and scored on a double to right-center by Duff. After a walk to Clifford Bartosh, Duff eventually scored on Hale's wild pitch.

Bartosh then scored on what looked like a routine single by Cree, who hustled into second for a double. Taylor capped the scoring with a single to make it 4-0.

Lee gained a measure of respectability in the bottom of the inning when Ibarra doubled home Whitaker off Taylor to make it 4-1. That was the first run Duncanville had surrendered in the postseason, but it was of scant consolation for the Rebels.

Things fell apart for Hale in the second, like they had two weeks earlier against El Paso Socorro. He didn't last the inning, giving up two walks and a single to the first three hitters to give up a run and earn a trip to the showers. On the first pitch from reliever Bryan Shores, Duff sent a towering shot over the left-field fence for a three-run home run which extended Duncanville's lead to 8-1.

The best chance Lee had to get back into it and make the Panthers nervous was in the bottom of the third. Trailing 10-1, Lee mounted a rally when Smith doubled with one out and scored on Ibarra's single. Consecutive singles by Purves and David Lopez loaded the bases and brought up Blake Moravcik.

It seemed like the Rebels might have had the right person at the plate since Moravcik was tied for the team lead in the post season with six RBIs. But it didn't prove to be Lee's night at all as Moravcik grounded into a double play to end the inning.

Benavidez was still proud of the way his team performed this season.

"They fought their way back all season long and we still thought we could win it," Benavidez said. "I just admire the job these kids did all season."

Tigers' rookie hurler stymies Rangers

DETROIT (AP) — Rookie Brian Moehler doesn't consider himself a strikeout pitcher. Juan Gonzalez, for one, may differ.

Moehler pitched eight strong innings and Melvin Nieves and Tony Clark both homered Friday night to lead the Detroit Tigers to a 7-1 win over the Texas Rangers.

Moehler (3-3) won for the first time since he pitched a two-hit shutout on April 26 against Anaheim. The right-hander scattered seven hits with one walk and a career-high nine strikeouts as the Tigers won for the seventh time in 11 games.

"Usually you'll see me getting 14 or 15 groundball outs," said Moehler, who credited a good cut fastball for his success. "But some nights you have the strikeouts, some nights the ground balls, and eventually it evens out."

Texas manager Johnny Oates said Moehler had his club off-balance.

"I feel like we swung at quite a few pitches out of the strike zone," Oates said, "but he knew what he was doing."

Moehler fanned Gonzalez four times, including a two-on, two-out whiff that ended the Rangers' final threat with the Tigers leading 4-1 in the eighth.

Detroit manager Buddy Bell considered pulling Moehler as Gonzalez came to the plate but decided to stay with him.

"It was a hard decision," Bell said. "He had pitched a good game and I didn't want to see him lose it, but he seemed to be getting stronger later in the game and Juan wasn't picking him up very well."

Moehler appreciated Bell's faith in him.

"It made me feel good," Moehler said. "It shows he has a lot of confidence in me. I know I can do it, and he seems to know it, too."

Darren Oliver (2-5) lost for the third time in his last four decisions. He gave up nine hits and four earned runs in 7 1-3 innings.

"If he'd have pitched like that yesterday (when the Rangers scored 10 runs in a win over Oakland) you'd have been talking about how great he threw," Oates said. "I told him I wanted him to go home feeling positive about it because he threw well tonight."

Rusty Greer hit a home run for the Rangers, who lost for just the fifth time in their last 14 games.

Greer hit a two-out solo home run, his fifth, in the first inning.

Nieves answered that with his sixth homer to lead off the second, and the Tigers went ahead in the same inning on an RBI single from Brian Hunter.

Clark, who went 3-for-4, followed Travis Fryman's leadoff single in the third with his 17th homer, giving Detroit a 4-1 lead.

"It stayed out over the plate," Oliver said of his pitch to Clark. "They way the ball comes off his bat, it was like somebody driving a golf ball."

"I've been trying to stay on the ball a little bit longer instead of trying to pull the ball like I always used to," Clark said.

The Tigers added three runs in the eighth on RBI doubles by Phil Nevin and Bobby Higginson, and an RBI single by Deivi Cruz.

DENVER (AP) — During a recent 13-game road trip, Colorado's bullpen was anything but relieving.

The Rockies' relief corps gave up 34 runs in 33 2-3 innings for an 8.55 ERA as the club went on a 3-10 skid.

Back at home Friday night, three Colorado relievers combined to allow only one unearned run over the final 2 1-3 innings to preserve rookie Bobby Jones' first career win as the Rockies beat the Houston Astros 8-7.

"We'd struggled as a unit of late, but you have to remember this is not a season of sprints, but more of a marathon," said Darren Holmes, who made a barehanded stop of a hard shot by Sean Berry with the bases loaded in the eighth. "Bullpens have their ups and downs like anyone else and we've been in a battling mode over the last 14 games."

Dante Bichette homered and drove in three runs, and Ellis Burks homered for the fourth straight game as the Rockies won for just the fourth time in 11 games.

Jones (1-0), making his second career start, allowed 11 hits in 6 2-3 innings. Steve Reed pitched the ninth for his fourth save in seven tries.

"I was trying to get him a win," Colorado manager Don Baylor said. "He got to sit in the clubhouse and go through what I have to go through and sit back and watch the pen hold on for the win."

Brad Ausmus had three hits and two RBIs for the Astros, who have lost seven of 11.

Houston manager Larry Dierker left the club Friday following the death of his father in Los Angeles. Bench coach Bill Virdon is managing the Astros this weekend.

Trailing 5-4, the Rockies chased Donnie Wall (1-2) in the fifth. Jason Bates led off with his second home run. Burks, Galarraga and Bichette added RBI singles to make it 8-5.

"I got behind in the count and made some bad pitches," Wall said. "You can't do that against their lineup and expect to win."

Houston closed to 8-6 in the seventh on a sacrifice fly by Luis Gonzalez, and got unearned run in the eighth off Holmes. But Holmes got Berry to ground back to the mound to escape a bases-loaded jam.

"I don't know what he stopped it with," Virdon said. "Most times when it hits a glove or the body it rolls away where you can't make a play. If that was the case we'd still be playing."

The Rockies scored three runs in the first inning highlighted by Bichette's two-run homer, his sixth. Larry Walker doubled with two outs and scored on Andres Galarraga's single ahead of Bichette's line-drive homer to left.

Houston got two runs back in the second on an RBI triple by rookie Bob Abreu and Ricky Gutierrez's run-scoring single.

RAIDERS: Texas Tech upset twice

(From 1C)

players for not doing the things they were supposed to, our academic situation was embarrassing. I think we finally were just overwhelmed by the problems this team has had."

The last of those problems began in the bottom of the seventh, after Tech took a 2-1 lead with an unearned run in the top.

With two out and a Southwest Missouri State runner on first, Ginter gloved a soft pop by Micah Holst for what would have been the third out — and dropped it. Two hits followed, and by the time the inning was over, Tech was down 4-2 and never rose.

Afterward, Tech athletic director Gerald Myers said a new problem might have emerged.

"Well, it is a concern," he said, "facing two more days without the host team in the tournament. I just hope our fans continue to support the tournament, because it could be a consideration on future bids.

"As it is, we need about 8,000 fans more to hit 15,000, which was our break-even point (Tech drew about 28,000 for last year's regional). Last year we made about $17,000 (profit), but this year we're just looking at trying to hit our commitment of about $150,000" to the NCAA, much less any profit.

Nevada 7, SW Texas St. 1

Brent Hutsted scattered seven hits and struck out seven, pitching Nevada past Southwest Texas State.

Hutsted (8-1) outdueled Jason Divin (7-5), who gave up six hits and seven runs in 5 1-3 innings.

Justin Martin went 3-for-5 for the Wolfpack (39-20). Southwest Texas State fell to 37-20.

Rice 10, Clemson 6

Bubba Crosby had a homer and a two-run triple to lead Rice past Clemson.

Lance Berkman, the nation's home run leader, had a solo shot for Rice (45-14) in the first inning.

UNC-Greensboro 9, Houston 5

BATON ROUGE, La. — Mark Oetjen's two-run double keyed a five-run sixth inning, and North Carolina-Greensboro rallied to win.

The loss ended the season for Houston (40-23). The Cougars lost to South Alabama 12-6 in the first round.

UNC-Greensboro (45-16) played just 45 minutes after wrapping up its first game, a 14-0 loss to LSU. The game had to be finished Friday morning after rain halted it in the bottom of the fifth Thursday night.

Stanford 3, Texas A&M 1

STANFORD, Calif. — Chad Hutchinson, who took Stanford to a bowl game as its quarterback, helped the school take another step toward a berth in the College World Series.

Top-seeded Stanford (41-18) got a four-hitter from Hutchinson and eliminated Texas A&M.

Josh Hochgesang and Jon Schaeffer hit back-to-back solo homers in the first inning off Casey Fossum (3-5) of the Aggies (39-22).

ANGELS: Generals jump on Washburn

inning. Elarton, who's one of the top prospects for the Astros' organization, allowed all of Midland's runs, struck out five, but allowed a season-high five walks on the evening. Elarton had come into Friday night's contest allowing only 18 walks in 57 innings pitched.

That didn't matter to Elarton, however, as his teammates gave him plenty of cushion with the most runs and most hits (17) they've had in a single game this year. The Generals not known as an offensive powerhouse, looked like they were this night as each General had at least one hit.

After the game, Angels' Manager Mitch Seoane was left scratching his head and pondering — what happened?

"We just didn't play well today," said Seoane, with an disappointed look on his face. "We picked it up later in the game a little bit but we made errors and we made a lot of mental mistakes. You can't win when you give guys extra bases, can't make throws from the outfield and can't hold runners on second base.

"In the fourth inning, we just weren't in the game and they took advantage of it."

The Generals scored four runs in the fourth on four hits, including a two-RBI double by Hassan Robinson. When the Angels did get on the board, it was thanks to Jackson miscues. Midland scored three in the fifth inning on two Jackson errors and a wild pitch by Elarton.

Midland ended up with 10 hits as newcomer Randy Betten led the way, going 4-for-5 with one RBI. Aaron Guiel added two hits, extending his hitting streak to 13 games. Other than that duo, no other Angels had more than one hit.

"(Elarton's) a good pitcher but the game was lost early. It's tough to come back when you're down by that many runs," Seoane said.

"You can take the physical errors because you can correct those but you shouldn't make mental errors. You should be in the game and you should know where you're supposed to be. You know the other team and you've played them enough. You know who can run and you should know which guys your supposed to hold on. We just weren't in the ball game for one reason or another."

ROCKETS: 38-year-old sparks Houston

(From 1C)

Utah, which lost for just the fourth time since March 1.

The reasons could be found in several categories — all of which were won by Houston. The Rockets outrebounded Utah 38-30, reversing another trend from the first two games, and shot nearly 59 percent from the field after shooting 38 and 37 percent in Games 1 and 2.

Houston also outscored the Jazz in each of the final three quarters to recover from an early 14-point deficit.

The Rockets survived a strong start by the Jazz in which they hit six of their first seven shots for 12-4 lead that grew to 22-13 just over eight minutes in.

Malone gave Utah a 31-18 lead at the first-quarter buzzer by making a 3-point shot from two steps inside the halfcourt line. It was the first 3-pointer of the season — including the playoffs — for Malone, who entered the game 0-for-13 from behind the line.

"It seemed easy at the start," Malone said. "We started off the game as well as we can start a game, then we started going through the motions."

Malone went to the bench for the first seven minutes of the second quarter, and Utah's offense struggled.

Threatt hit his first two 3-point attempts of the quarter, and Johnson had one in an 11-0 run that pulled Houston to 33-32. Stockton made four of Utah's next five shots as the Jazz built their lead back to seven, but the Rockets closed the half with a 7-0 run for a 51-51 tie at halftime.

The third period stayed tight until Olajuwon, Drexler and Mario Elie scored consecutive baskets to start a quarter-ending 15-6 run that left Houston ahead 80-72 entering the fourth.

Utah had one more run remaining, and a 7-0 spurt pulled the Jazz to 91-86 before the Rockets went to Olajuwon twice in a row for layups and Johnson then stole a bad kickout pass by Stockton and went in for a fast-break layup that made it 97-88 with 5:03 left.

Game 4 is Sunday before the series returns to Salt Lake City for Game 5 on Tuesday night.

"This was definitely a must win, and Sunday is also a must-win," Barkley said. "We don't want to go back to Utah down 3-1, but if we had lost tonight we would have been dead. D-E-A-D."

Car Concerns

By: Susan Frissell

Personal Safety
Tips: 1-800-CRIME-RX

As statistics demonstrate, there are more and more women today who are not only purchasing and maintaining their own automobiles, but who are also doing a considerable amount of driving alone, often for long distances. Statistics also tell us is that a crime is committed every two seconds. It's not only smart, but defensive to think like a criminal, especially when driving by oneself. By putting your sixth sense—common sense—to work, we can prepare ourselves for what we think "is not going to happen to us."

Maintenance:
The Best Protection

The first and best way to protect yourself when traveling is to learn routine car maintenance. While all women may not want to perform their own tune-ups, oil changes, etc., it is more realistic today to have most maintenance and repairs done by a professional. Considering the combination of busy schedules and sophisticated auto technology, the least we can do is to know our vehicle's maintenance schedule so that we can keep it in 100 percent optimum operating condition.

Tips to Remember

When traveling alone in your car keep in mind the old scout Motto: "Be Prepared." Avoid being taken by surprise. Some of the things you might want to remember include the following:

- If your car is broken down, lift the hood or tie a white rag to the antenna; place a "Call Police" sign in the back window and remain inside the vehicle with the doors locked until help arrives. Turn on your flashers and set the emergency brake.
- Should someone stop and offer help, crack the window one-half inch and ask them to call the police.
  Keep a list of phone numbers in the glove compartment for twenty-four hour towing services near your home and office.
- If lost, ask for directions only from a uniformed police officer, gas station attendant, store worker or pedestrian.
- When going somewhere, plan and know your route carefully, and if possible, vary your regular route to and from work and/or home.
- When parking in a unattended lot, try and park near a light; lock your doors, and be aware of any occupied cars. If the lot has an attendant, leave only your ignition key. Place all valuables out of sight, and always get a claim check.
- Upon returning to the parking lot, avoid being a "rummager;" have your keys in your hand, not in your purse or pocket. Before entering your vehicle, always check the back seat. If you own a two-door model, push both seats forward before leaving the car. That way if the seats are in their normal position, it's possible someone may be hiding in the back. After entering the car, place your purse or briefcase behind your seat, lock all doors and belt-up.

Standard Equipment

Important items you might want to keep in your car at all times, include a working flashlight, change for phone calls, a baseball bat or tire iron for protection, and a set of road maps. Do not keep a spare key in the car or under the fender. And, don't leave any valuables, such as credit cards, driver's license, or wallet in the car. Additional precautions to take include having a cell phone or CB radio, electric garage door opener, and a anti-theft alarm. If you are thinking about purchasing a CB radio, use it cautiously. Always use "we" when calling for help so anyone listening will not know you're traveling by yourself. A car phone is an excellent means of getting help if your car is inoperable. Most automobile manufacturers now offer a 800 roadside assistance service. Most in-car cell phones will continue to operate even when the car doesn't. When buying a new car, one option worth considering is the automatic door lock feature, often available as part of an "equipment package". This is an easy and sure way of locking all the car doors.

Knowledge is Power

The old adage "knowledge is power" is especially true when it comes to women and their automobiles. The more you know about your car and the way it operates, the better off and more self-assured you will feel. Because women are thought to be especially vulnerable, they automatically become a target for crime. Remember, you're sitting in a one-and-a-half ton package of steel. Use it to protect yourself.

Oldsmobile Intrigue emerges as a lively import-quality sedan

By BOB PLUNKETT
Special to Midland Reporter-Telegram

ACTION, Calif. — Twisting down the narrow Aliso Canyon Road to Action, tucked into northern ripples of the San Gabriel Mountains in Los Angeles County, the prototype of a new mid-size sedan cut crisply through each apex at a fast clip yet without tire squeal.

In the benders, my car maintained a stable position with minimal lateral roll, the result of a stiffly braced unibody design with sophisticated independent suspension elements at all corners. Steering, firm and precise due to a rack and pinion arrangement with speed-sensing variable assistance, seemed as compliant as a European touring car.

Surging horsepower, lurking below the right foot pedal, proved too much for the curve sets and occasionally required a check through the left pedal, which linked to four big disc brakes and an on-board computer with anti-lock control.

Now running out to the flat Mojave floor by Antelope Acres, speed builds substantially on straight chutes with the structure hugging pavement as we roll over dips of desert washes. This car easily proves it's aggressive in attitude, but still poised and precise no matter what the speed or condition of the road.

A driver's mental check-list of highlights and high scores becomes clear as we zip down convoluted nuances of Lake Hughes Road to Castaic at the I-S freeway, which returns us to civilization at the end of this test.

One particular impression rises to the top of my images to describe the thrill of driving the new car: Import Car of the Year. This thought I share with my seat mate, who happens to be this vehicle's brand manager, the person who helped to shape its character and bears the responsibility of taking it to market.

"That's the best compliment you could give us," said Ken Stewart, who works for Oldsmobile at General Motors. For the past 20 months, Stewart's goal has been to make the new domestically-produced Oldsmobile measure up to the best imports coming ashore from Europe and Asia.

As my tests revealed, it does — and I'm stunned.

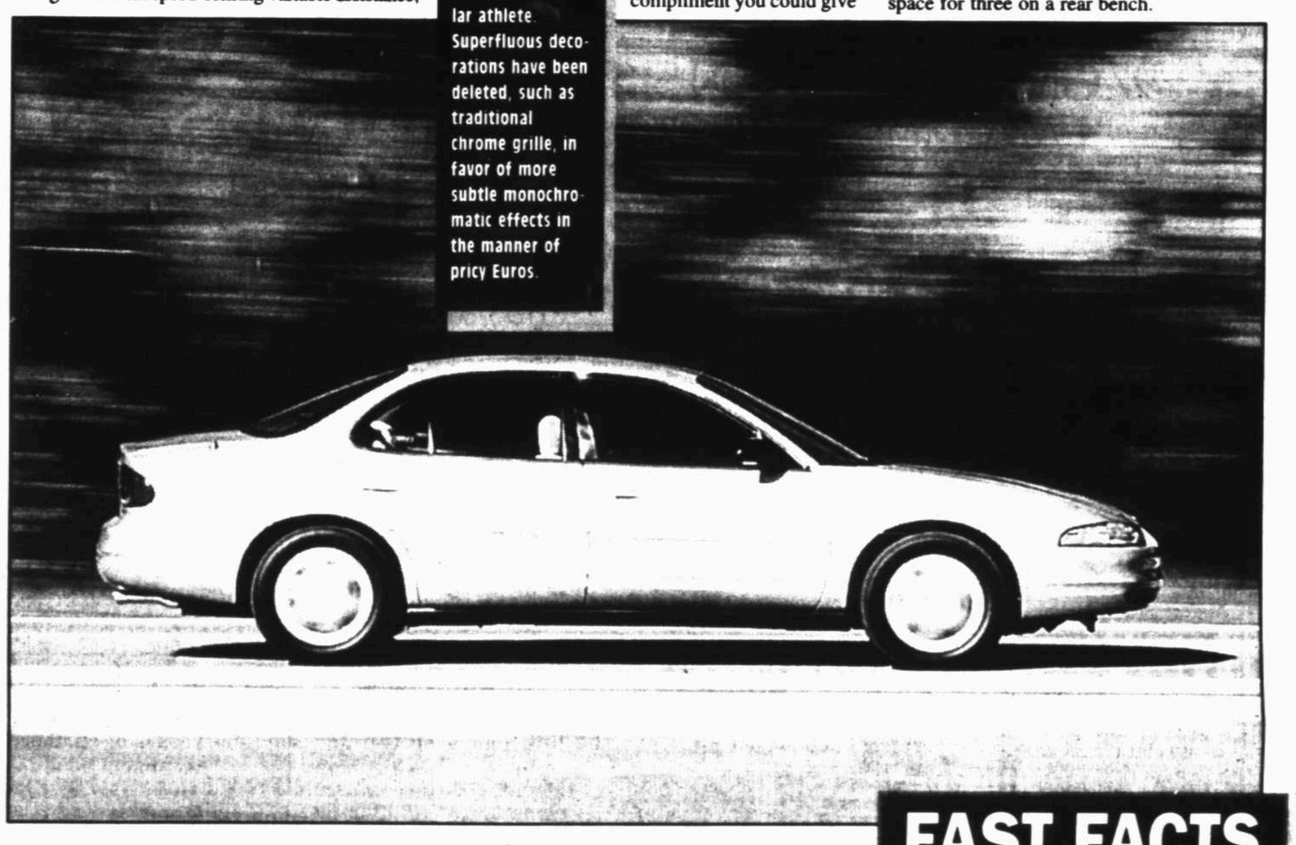

Oldsmobile labels the new mid-size sedan as the Intrigue. It replaces aged Cutlass Supreme but seems like a polar opposite of that package.

Intrigue come from a mid-size chassis which spawns other new GM models like Pontiac Grand Prix and Buick Regal, although the Intrigue brand team made a number of strategic changes along the developmental path to ensure that this new car separates itself in feel, function and performance from anything else in GM's stable.

It arrives as a 1998 model during the centennial anniversary of Oldsmobile's creation by Ransom E. Olds and a group of automobile pioneers. To mark the centennial, Intrigue signals a contemporary revolution of the line with new models geared for appeal to consumers already enamored with cars built in Germany and Japan.

A centennial plan initiated in 1992 calls for all Oldsmobiles to conform to the look, feel, performance and quality characteristics of Aurora, the full-size Olds sedan which during its introductory year of 1995 outsold Japan's foremost ultra luxury label.

Inside, a single layout works for Intrigue, with 5-person seating featuring twin front buckets and space for three on a rear bench.

Exterior lines of Intrigue bear a slight resemblance to Aurora. Its sheetmetal skin stretches tautly across the framework like a lean and muscular athlete. Superfluous decorations have been deleted, such as traditional chrome grille, in favor of more subtle monochromatic effects in the manner of pricy Euros.

FAST FACTS
'98 OLDS INTRIGUE

Description	Mid-Size Sedan
Model options	Intrigue, GL
Wheelbase	109.0 inches
Overall length	196.6 inches
Engine size	OHV 3.8-L V6
Transmissions/speeds	Auto/4
Rear/front drive	Front
Steering	Power rack and pinion
Braking	Power 4-disc ABS
Airbag(s)	2
EPA mileage est. city/hwy	19/29 mpg
Price range	$20,000 to $25,000

Two trim levels — a base Intrigue and the up-level Intrigue GL — are offered with only one powertrain, which the Intrigue brand team had to fight to get.

Originally, the car was scheduled to receive GM's off-the-shelf 3.4-liter V6, but surveys of import owners driving prototype Intrigues outfitted with this engine revealed universal dissatisfactions due to a lack of power compared against the imports, plus noise and vibration.

So, late in the developmental process, Intrigue's team changed directions and specified a more powerful V6 beefed up with improvements to smooth and soothe the action. The resultant 3.8-liter V6 produces 195 horsepower.

It connects to GMs best electronically-controlled 4-speed automatic transmission, and the package brings highly controllable energy with nice torque response in all ranges, whether at lower speed in urban traffic or flying in the fast lane — and more than enough strength to peg legal speed limits.

Equally important to the muscle, Intrigue seems quite able to dance on pavement when prompted.

Components which make it behave so lively begin with a safety cage reinforced with extra longitudinal and cross-car bracing which develop extra rigidity and torsional stiffness when the vehicle moves down the road.

The unibody structure encases a passenger compartment with steel beams designed to absorb and deflect forces of impact, should Intrigue connect with another car in a crash.

Special engineering measures merge to isolate the cabin with road and engine noises locked out, road bumps and resultant vehicle vibrations dampened.

A compliant 4-wheel independent suspension enables Intrigue to respond with solid sensations when lipping over pavement irregularities, and it reacts quickly and with an athletic flair when asked to steer clear of lane obstacles like slower traffic blocking the I-5 flow.

To prevent a mushy steering reaction, designers added variable-effort power assistance through Magnasteer, which uses magnetic torsion to raise or lower the degree of effort required to turn the steering wheel. At lower speed, as when parking, Magnasteer slackens pressure so the wheel turns easily, while at higher speed on a highway, pressure increases so only a slight movement of hands on steering wheel turns the car quickly.

The interior orients toward an aggressive driver. Firm and sporty front bucket seats and a cockpit outfitted with large analog instruments reflect European styling.

The base unit provides many standard features, including air conditioning and anti-lock brakes, but the GL edition comes with extras like leather upholstery and dual climate zones. Also, an optional autobahn package installs speed-rated radial tires and heavy-duty front brake rotors with premium composite brake pads.

Prices begin around $20,000 and rise to $25,000.

Buick Century Custom Sedan

By Kenneth Chester, Jr.

Wheelin'&Dealin'

The Buick Century almost became the sedan that was. After a successful fifteen year run as one of the last two "A" body sedans that debuted in 1982 (the other was the Oldsmobile Cutlass Ciera), GM was set to kill off both model and name. But common sense prevailed and consumers will be exposed to the first all new Century in years. Built at GM's Oshawa, Ontario, Canada assembly plant, the new Century sits on a wheelbase that is just over four inches longer and three and a half inches wider than the previous model and now shared with the all new Regal sedan. If you are looking for a two-door sedan or station wagon with this Century — forget it. Buick decided to keep it simple and deliver a very stylish four door that would appeal to budget minded families desiring a solid, well made sedan. Offered in Custom and Limited trim levels, its handsome sheetmetal yields a modern but substantial look that flows from front to back. In typical Buick fashion, the marque allows buyers to choose between four levels of equipment: SB, SC, SD, SE. Power is delivered to the ground via GM's 3100 V6 engine and a smooth shifting electronically controlled four speed automatic transmission with overdrive.

On the Road

I had the opportunity to test drive a Century Custom. The 3100 six cylinder engine makes 160 horsepower and is the same one found in the Chevrolet Lumina. Smooth and quiet when underway, the Century ran well and the front sixty/forty cloth bench seat was very comfortable. This sedan feels sure and substantial at speed. The driver has a good view of the road. The armrest also does duty as a large storage area and double cupholder. Buick says that the built-in change holder can accommodate upto twelve dollars in change. Displays and controls were easy to read and use although I preferred more information than the basic fuel, speedo and water temperature gauges. This sedan comes very well equipped, with many thoughtful touches that most consumers will appreciate. The back seating area was roomy and chairlike with decent leg room.

While this Buick is no sports sedan, drivers will not have any trouble covering great amounts of real estate behind the wheel.

By the Numbers

Standard safety equipment includes: dual airbags, four wheel anti-lock brakes, side impact door beams, daytime running lights, remote keyless entry and PASS-key II theft-deterrent system. Traction control is not available. EPA fuel economy is 20 city/29 highway. Retail sticker prices begin at $17,845 for the Custom and $19,220 for the Limited. Destination charge adds $550. Dealers report that sales of the Century are brisk so you may need to do some careful searching to find yours.

Rate & Credit Policies

Rate charges are determined at the time of placement. All ads accepted are subject to credit approval. Some classified categories require payment in advance. Credit applications are also required for business accounts. Yearly contract agreements are available. The Midland Reporter-Telegram reserves the right to correctly classify and edit all copy or to reject or cancel any advertisement at any time.

Cancellations

The price of your ad will be based on the number of days published according to our rate structure. Call (915) 682-6222 - ask for your cancellation number. This is your record of cancellation and it is important that you have it in the event of any misunderstanding or adjustment. "Super Seller" and "Real Wheel Deal" ads may be cancelled, but are non-adjustable and non-refundable.

Errors and Adjustments

Please check your ad the first day that it appears to be sure that all of the information is correct. This will ensure that your ad is exactly what you want readers to see. Call us the first day if you find an error at 915-682-6222. To report an error in Saturday's edition call Saturday morning between 8a.m. and 10a.m. Errors in Sunday's edition should be reported on Monday morning after 8:00 a.m. We must limit our financial responsiblity, if any, to the charge for the word or space, and cannot be held responsible for incorrect ads after the first day of publication.

Omissions of Ads

The Midland Reporter-Telegram assumes no financial responsiblity in an ad beyond the cost of the ad itself, and no responsiblity for the omission of an ad.

FREE BEE
FREE CLASSIFIED ADVERTISING
If your are a private individual selling one item for $50 or less you can place a 3 line classified advertisement for 4 days absolutely FREE in the Midland Reporter-Telegram.
Other restrictions apply.

"Sell It In 10" or We'll Run It Again"
3 LINES 10 DAYS $15
EACH ADDITIONAL LINE $5.00
If you have a car, truck, van, RV, motorcycle, boat or airplane we'll advertise it for 10 consecutive days. In the unlikely event you don't sell it we'll run it another 10 days at no charge. At the end of 20 days if it still hasn't sold we'll run it another 10 days at no charge, if you'll reduce the price by 10%. Price must be in ad. Only one vehicle per ad. For private individuals only (non-commercial).

Real Wheel Deals

PUBLIC NOTICE OF INTENT

Notice is hereby given to all interested parties and owners of mineral interest in and under lands and leases in the SE/4 of Section 5, the S/2 of Section 6, all of Section 7, the W/2 and SE/4 of Section 8, and the W/2 and NE/4 of Section 18 of Block 38, TWP 4-S and the E/2 of Section 12, the E/2 of Section 13, and the NE/4 of Section 24 of Block 38, TWP 4-S, T&P RR Survey, Glasscock County, Texas, that Mineral Technologies Inc. (MTI), the operator of the aforementioned properties and wells, formerly known as the Apple Creek Fuss/Seimar Unit, intends to re-establish production of said leases from existing shut-in wells. Due to the marginal economic risk of this proposed project, MTI is requesting a surface commingling permit from the Texas Railroad Commission and MTI proposes to allocate production on the basis of Railroad Commission approved well testing methods. Any mineral interest or royalty owner under the above lands wishing to file a protest of this request should submit their protest in writing within fifteen (15) days of publication, to MTI at the following address:

PUBLIC NOTICE OF INTENT

Notice is hereby given to all interested parties and owners of mineral interest in and under lands and leases in the SE/4 of Section 5, the S/2 of Section 6, all of Section 7, the W/2 and SE/4 of Section 8, and the W/2 and NE/4 of Section 18 of Block 32 TWP-4-S and the E/2 of Section 12, the E/2 of Section 13, and the NE/4 of Section 24 of Block 33 TWP-4-S T&P RR Survey, Glasscock County, Texas, that Mineral Technologies Inc. (MTI), the operator of the aforementioned properties and wells, formerly known as the Apple Creek Fussselman Unit, intends to re-establish production on said leases from existing shut-in wells. Due to the marginal economic risk of this proposed project, MTI is requesting a surface commingling permit from the Texas Railroad Commission and MTI proposes to allocate production on the basis of Railroad Commission approved well testing methods. Any mineral interest or royalty owner under the above lands wishing to file a protest of this request should submit their protest in writing within fifteen (15) days of publication, to MTI at the following address:
