By J. W. King, Sr.

Infantile paralysis epidemics are breaking out earlier this year than ever before. Dirt and filth are breeders of the germ.

There is one precaution we can take that might prevent an outbreak of the disease here, and that is to have a thorough clean-up of the entire town. Dispose of all cans and trash that might be a breeding place for mosquitos that carry germs from person to person.

We have been lucky here in Loraine in the past by not having an outbreak of polio or any other dread disease, but who can tell when such an epidemic might strike. It hasn't been our cleanliness that has prevented an outbreak of disease for we have permitted our town to accumulate an unsightly amount of trash—all over town—and we have made no concerted effort to clean up. The initiative for a clean-up rests with the city officials and I am sure that if the city takes proper steps toward a cleanup campaign all hands will join in and make our town attractive and healthy. Civic pride demands that the city officials get busy on a clean up campaign now.

We have a habit around here of starting projects and never finishing them. In other words, the attitude of letting the other fellow do the work and if there is any glory in it to share it with him. We have in mind at the moment the old clothes campaign recently sponsored by the Lions Club. The committee appointed did a good job gathering the clothes but that is as far as we got. No disposition has been made of them. They are stored in the dust and dirt and nobody seems to know anything about what to do with them or where to send them. Lets find out where to send them and finish our job. The clothes won't do anybody any good lying where they are.

We are still interested in a Memorial Park for our men and women who served their country during this war—a park that will be a living memorial, one that will furnish amusement and pleasure for young and old, for our service people when they return home, a place that will be beautiful and inviting, a swimming pool and play ground.

We have been trying to figure out a plan to finance such a memorial and somebody advanced an idea a few days ago that will get the job done. The idea is this: Loraine already has an amusement company organized that may divide up its money among the stockholders and be dissolved if the show is sold. The idea is to retain the amusement company and use its money to help in building the memorial park. That is an idea that is well worth looking into.

A man told me the other day that he formerly thought a town would just be what it is regardless of what anybody did. He has changed his mind and now believes that a town is just what the citizens make it. His latest conclusion is right, a town is just what its citizens make it. Some towns have golden opportunities and pass them up. Others have the same opportunities and because of the forward looking citizens living in it take advantage of the opportunities and in fact make opportunities where none exist. Loraine has opportunities now—golden opportunities. Are we going to pass them up or shall we take advantage of them and create more opportunities.

There is need in Loraine for a concern that will buy poultry. No one in town is buying poultry now and it is working a hardship on those who have poultry to sell. We must buy what the farmer has to sell if we expect him to buy our merchandise.

Farm To Market Roads Scheduled After The War

The Loraine precinct and all of Mitchell County will benefit from the post-war farm to market road program announced last week by the Texas Highway Department. The state and federal governments will share the expense of building these roads, the counties being out nothing. The program is for three years immediately following the end of the war.

22.8 miles of roads have been designated in Mitchell County, with 8 miles of the number being from Loraine north. Other roads will probably be approved later, according to County Commissioner Moody Richardson.

DOGS! DOGS! DOGS!!

It has been called to my attention that in several nearby towns many dogs have been running at large that have rabies (hydrophobia) and many people have been bitten. Most all towns have ordered many people fined that allow their dogs to run around that have not been vaccinated and muzzled according to law.

Please muzzle and vaccinate your dog, or keep him tied at home, before some person is bitten in Loraine.

Respectfully yours,

President Osmena Predicts Japs Will Be Hard To Beat

WASHINGTON, D. C.—President Sergio Osmena of the Philippines, now in process of complete reconquering from the Japanese and from which General Douglas MacArthur's land forces under Admiral Chester Nimitz will swing into final action against the enemy, today issued a statement in behalf of the Mighty Seventh War Loan.

President Osmena's statement was released by Brigadier General Carlos P. Romulo, resident commissioner of the Philippines to the United States, at the Philippine offices here. President Osmena said: "Needless to say, we Filipinos are very pleased with the signal successes achieved by the United States and her allies during recent months. After a long and hard struggle, the Germans have been pushed to the brink of overwhelming defeat and the end of the war in Europe is now clearly in sight."

"In the Pacific, our gains have been no less impressive. Under the inspiring leadership of such men as General MacArthur and Admiral Nimitz, the Japanese have been dislodged from one position after another in their ill-gotten empire. In this connection, my people and I are extremely grateful that the Philippines are now being liberated from the tyrannical rule of the enemy."

"Happy as I am that my country will soon be able to live in peace again, much remains to be done before Japan is fully beaten. Aside from the additional campaigns which will be needed to obtain military victory in the Pacific, there is also the human factor to be considered in that other peoples of the Far East eagerly await to be freed from the enemy. We Filipinos know only too well from experience what it means to be under Japanese domination."

"One of the outstanding feats of the war has undoubtedly been the effective fashion in which the United States has overcome the formidable obstacles of distance in supplying the Pacific. Large quantities of supplies will be needed, however, to deliver the final crushing blows against a ruthless and fanatical enemy. All of us can make certain that these supplies are available for our armed forces by giving enthusiastic support to the Seventh War Loan Drive."

SWING OF SOUTHWEST FARM MARKETS

With very few exceptions, the War Food Administration reports steady to firm prices for Southwest farm products during the last week of May.

Wheat eased off slightly as new crop offerings became available in Texas and Oklahoma, but oats continued to move upward from the low point reached two weeks ago, and sorghums skyrocketed under the influence of active trading and short corn supplies. Fort Worth and Texas common rate points quoted No. 1 hard ordinary wheat from $1.73 1/2 to $1.74 1/2, No. 3 Texas Red oats 70 1/2 cents a bushel, and sorghums $2.32 to $2.35 per cwt. at the close of the week.

Cotton remained at the highest level since 1928 with Middling 15 1/8 inch quoted at 22.60 cents a pound in Dallas, Galveston and Houston, 22.55 in New Orleans, and 22.70 in Little Rock on June 1.

Livestock marketings for the country as a whole showed decreased receipts of cattle, calves and hogs, but an increase in sheep in spite of the Memorial Day holiday at most terminals outside the Southwest. Hog prices remained mostly at the ceiling under active trading. Increased activity in stockers and feeders featured cattle markets with 500 to 700 pounds from the Southwest predominant in Chicago's receipts at mostly $13 to $15 per cwt. Fort Worth reported 25 to 50 cent gains on stock cattle. San Antonio held fully steady with movement in full swing, and prices elsewhere in the area showed little change. Slaughter cattle sold strong to 25 to 50 cents higher throughout the Southwest with top steers reaching $15.50 at Oklahoma City and $15.85 in Fort Worth for good grades while choice offerings made $16 in Wichita and $17 in Denver. Most domestic wools were fairly active on the Boston market, but only occasional sales of Texas offerings were reported with almost no call for mohair.

Poultry and egg prices showed little change except for downward adjustments in the poultry ceiling. Decreasing egg receipts have caused some drying plants to reduce operations, but supplies in retail channels continue in fair balance with trade needs. Home consumption and direct-to-consumer movement of the slightly larger supplies of fowls and fryers available continue to restrict market offerings.

Guests in the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Mayes for a family dinner Sunday were Mr. and Mrs. Harry Hallmark and daughters, Dorothy and Mrs. Charles Marth Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Woodrow Pratt and children, Willard and Sarah, Mr. and Mrs. Ira Coffee and daughters Mara Lee and Jane, Mr. and Mrs. Olen Mayes and son Doyle, Mr. and Mrs. Pat Mayes and son Mike of Roscoe, Mrs. Claude Neeley and sons Jackie and 1st Lt. With Food Supply Expected to Be Tighter Than Ever, Women's Land Army Faces Its Greatest Challenge

City Girls and Women Urgently Needed for Every Sort of Farm Job

Women have done an outstanding job in this war, and nowhere have their efforts been more important than in helping with the farm harvest.

Until complete victory is won, there must be no letup on the home front. In this critical year of war, the high rate of food production must be continued. At the same time, the farm labor shortage will be even more serious in many areas.

The answer is for town and city people—especially women and youth—to step into the breach, as they have done for the past three years. Farm people themselves are working harder and longer hours than ever before. But they need extra help, especially during the harvest season. That group of women doing emergency wartime farm work comprise the Women's Land Army. Their patriotic efforts have saved farm crops in thousands of cases.

The Women's Land Army is a movement rather than an organization. It is mainly a seasonal army. In each state, it is under the direction of the state extension service, with headquarters at the state agricultural college. Most states have a Women's Land Army supervisor who works closely with the county agricultural agents and their farm labor assistants. In most localities, the county agent administers the emergency farm labor program, recruiting and placing workers on farms. Last year, these local placement offices placed about 350,000 women in farm work, and about as many other women were recruited directly by farmers or found their

Probably the greatest need for seasonal help is in harvesting perishable vegetables and fruits. It is particularly important that all of the tomato crop be brought to market, as this vegetable is a cheap and abundant source of vitamin C.

ing, milking, feeding livestock. They handle just about every farm task, many of which they have never done before, putting in long hours at the double job of housework and farm work.

Typical is one midwestern farm woman who, during corn planting time, drove a tractor from 4 to 8 a. m. each day, and then did the farm chores before starting her regular housework, which she does without benefit of electricity and running water.

Town Women Prove Capable

Even though town women were at first accepted reluctantly by many farmers, they have now proved themselves in farm work. Their help is especially valuable at harvest time, for crops like apples, peaches and other fruit; for beans, tomatoes, potatoes, peanuts and cotton. Teachers and college girls often spend two or three summer months in farm work. Business women work part of their vacation time, evenings and week ends harvesting tomatoes, beans and carrots, detasseling corn and picking apples, peaches and grapes.

Homemakers also answer the local call for peak-season harvesting. For example, in an Oregon county last year, 500 homemakers helped save the bean crop. Each day they boarded the "Housewives Special"—buses leaving for the field at 8:30 a. m. and returning at 3 p. m. This gave them time to do the family breakfast before leaving and to market for supper in the late afternoon. In Washington, as in other states, women joined groups of "twilight pickers" working evenings in the big berry crop. And in a California county women working 7 to 11 p. m. as peach cutters to help save 20,000 tons of peaches by drying were known as the "Victory Shift."

Women's underlying motive for doing farm work is, for the most part, patriotism—a deep desire to help . . . to have a part in feeding our soldiers and our allies—and an intense conviction that no food should go to waste. As a 60-year-old woman said, after picking 3 tons of beans, "I'm glad to do it . . . you see, I have a ton in the air corps."

Of women who do farm work, by far the greatest number live at home and work by the day, or part-time, on farms nearby.

Spend Vacations on Farms. Some women, especially college girls, teachers and business women, spend part of their vacation time in labor supply camps, working on surrounding farms. For one week, two weeks, or the entire summer, they cultivate and pick vegetables or harvest fruit. Many Smith college students, as a part of their college's summer plan of "work or study" formed groups which lived as one household in the farming area where they worked.

Camps for women workers are operated in many states. Last year, New York state's WLA camps included about 3,000 New York City women and girls on their vacation time. Life in camp is not all work. Women find it interesting and broadening, with the companionship of women from many different places. As one worker said, after an evening of recreation in camp, "We're all friends, and that's what we're fighting for, isn't it?"

Even more interesting than picking cherries was the "contact with different people," wrote another camp worker on returning home. Her fellow campers included an Italian teacher, a woman who had fled from Germany, college students, a librarian, a magazine writer, a governess, and a mother of 12 children.

In some cases, women live right on the farm for the summer. They do such work as taking care of the garden, planting, hoeing and harvesting onions, carrots or other vegetables, or helping to a hired man's job. Typical of such workers are a serviceman's wife who has full care of the poultry flock on a large general farm, and a woman who has charge of the milk room on a dairy farm.

Some women serve as "hired hands." They milk, take care of the poultry flock, feed livestock, and work in the field. Of the approximately 9,000 women placed for year-round work in 1944, many of them were wives of men employed on the same farm.

How to Get a Farm Job

A woman who can work for the entire summer or for several weeks should consult her county extension agent or local farm employment office immediately. These offices usually are located in the county courthouse or federal (post office) building. If she cannot find this local office, she may write to the Women's Land Army supervisor at her state agricultural college, or to Women's Land Army, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

A woman who can work for only short periods of time should stand by for the call in her community. It will come through her local newspapers and over the radio. She will then be told when and where to apply.

Rather Be Hero Than President

When T/Sgt. Jake Lindsey, 24, of Lucedale, Miss., was presented with the 100th Congressional Medal of Honor at a joint session of congress, President Truman said to the sergeant: "I'd rather have that medal than be President of the United States." Among other acts of bravery, while wounded, Lindsey fought and defeated eight Germans in hand-to-hand combat. Sergeant Lindsey led his platoon, reduced to six from its original strength of 40, under intense enemy counter-attack, exposed to heavy machine gun, rifle and tank fire. He knocked out two machine guns.

That Nagging Backache

May Warn of Disordered Kidney Action

Modern life with its hurry and worry, irregular habits, improper eating and drinking—its risk of excesses and infection—throws heavy strain on the work of the kidneys. They are apt to become over-taxed and fail to filter excess acid and other impurities from the life-giving blood.

You may suffer nagging backache, headache, dizziness, getting up nights, leg pains, swelling—feet constantly tired, nervous, all worn out. Other signs of kidney or bladder disorder are sometimes burning, scanty or too frequent urination.

Try Doan's Pills. Doan's help the kidneys to pass off harmful excess body waste. They have had more than half a century of public approval. Are recommended by grateful users everywhere. Ask your neighbor!

Mr. and Mrs. Mayes received the first letter from Malcolm since they had learned that he was liberated. The letter follows: Dear Mom: Well I am still waiting to come home, boy I am in a hurry, but I guess Uncle Sam isn't. It may be two months yet so don't expect me too soon. Did you get the telegram? I have a sixty day furlough when I get to El Paso. Uncle Sam owes me almost three thousand bucks now too. I have you some cologne from Paris and I also got aunt Inez a little gift.

I'm not quite as hungry as I was the last letter I wrote you from Germany. I weighed 120 pounds when I was liberated, and I have gained 20 pounds already in two weeks. I weigh 140 now. So I guess here isn't anything wrong with me that a little food won't fix up. How is Wendell? I haven't had any letters from home since last November. Hope you are all well.

Boy, they are really feeding me good here, all I eat is chicken and milk. I eat four times a day and in between meals.

Tell everyone hello for me. I wanted to be home by July 4th but I don't know now, looks like I'll be lucky if I get there by Christmas. Tell Wendell to send his aircraft carrier after me.

Well, dinner is ready, so I will close for now. Be good and I hope to see you soon. If there is any cute little girls around there hold them till I get there. I haven't seen anything that looks like a woman in 15 months. Bye, I love you, Malcolm.

Melvin King has been promoted from Corporal to Sergeant at Moore Field, Texas.

Mrs. Kenneth Long and daughters are visiting friends in McKinney this week.

BETTER FOODS TO EAT

REFRIGERATED FOOD LOCKERS

Modern refrigerated individual food lockers keep your produce and meat free from deterioration—keep the natural flavor sealed in. Come in today and let us explain the pleasure and economy to be derived from renting a food locker.

Store your fruits, vegetables and meats this modern convenient way. There is no comparison between locker stored food and canned food. Just try it and see for yourself.

Some people have the mistaken idea that lockers are used only for storing meats. That isn't true, as those who have stored fruits and vegetables in this manner will testify. If your fruits or vegetables are No. 1 when they go into your locker they will be No. 1 when you take them out for use. Even inferior grades are improved in the quick-freeze process.

OUR BOYS IN SERVICE

Philippine Islands
May 27, 1945

Dear Mr. King:

I have been intending to write for some time. However, I always seem to lack the energy to write the letters I want to write. It was just a year ago that I spent a few days at home before reporting for overseas assignment. Since that time I have traveled some 12,000 miles by boat and 8,000 miles by air and have seen places I didn't know existed. So far I have had extremely good luck in my travels. My experiences have been most interesting and at times a little more exciting than I cared for. After all war is something that places you in situations that you normally wouldn't encounter.

Thus far I have been jumping from island to island. I did manage to see a little of Australia and I can assure you that Australia is a very nice country. Which is more than I can say for the many tropical islands in the Pacific. Undoubtedly the Hollywood and Vine boys never visited these islands before they produced their tropical pictures; if they did they must have been suffering from the effects of jungle fever. I prefer that West Texas sand in my hair any day to the palm trees and tropical insects of these islands.

For the first time in my life I have realized how fortunate I am to be an American and to live in a country like the U. S. I believe that if every American had to spend six months out of the U. S. they would be proud that they are Americans and would make better citizens.

After seeing foreign countries, their customs and ways of life it's not hard to realize what we are fighting for. I only hope that when final victory comes the American people will not forget what this war was fought for. Its time for us to realize that we can not isolate ourselves and expect to live in peace and harmony with the rest of the world. The world is too small for any form of isolation. I trust that our government will maintain an army and navy and bases from which to operate that will insure world peace.

The war in this theater has advanced very rapidly the past few months and I believe that the end is in sight. Now that the European war is over we will be able to get the necessary men and supplies to bring this war to an end in the near future. The one thought in the mind of every American soldier overseas is to get the war over the quickest possible way so that he may return home.

I have been receiving the paper the past two months and it gives me much enjoyment. Especially do I enjoy the news about the boys from Loraine that are in the service. I appreciate your kindness in sending me the paper and its a big boost to morale to know what is going on in the old home town.

By the way, I see Will Albright quite often. We are only about three miles apart. Its really nice to be with someone from home. He is looking fine and is just as anxious to get home as I am.

It is almost eleven P. M. so I must hasten to conclude. Hope by now the county has received plenty of rain that will afford another good crop. Believe it or not, I would enjoy chopping one of those long cotton rows especially if there was a watermelon at the end.

With best personal wishes, I am

Sincerely yours,
Eldon Mahon

Editors note: Thanks for writing us Eldon. We appreciate letters from you boys in the service very much and we are glad that our paper helps to keep up with happenings at home. Tell Will hello for us. We feel certain that those islands lack a lot being like home. It is dry here and the crops are not doing well. Some have not even planted yet, but we still have the old West Texas spirit—hoping it will rain in time.

An Eighth Air Force Bomber Station, England—Sgt. Charles R. Loomer, of Beaverton, Ore., 29 year old waist gunner on a B-17 Flying Fortress has been awarded a second Oak Leaf Cluster to the Air Medal. He won the decoration for "courage, coolness and skill" and for his outstanding performance of duty during a number of Eighth Air Force attacks on vital German war installations.

His wife, Mrs. Viola Loomer, lives in Loraine, Texas.

Pearl Harbor, T. H.—Funneling supplies to the vast Pacific fleet is the task of the Naval Supply Depot here.

Engaged in this program is Alvie Edward Redden, storekeeper, first class, of Loraine, Texas. Redden was transferred here from duty at San Diego, Calif. Before enlisting in October, 1942, he was a teacher. He had attended West Texas State College, Canyon, Texas. His parents are Mr. and Mrs. Jim E. Redden of Loraine.

The importance of the Depot's work was emphasized by Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, when he described this war as a conflict of "beans, bullets, and oil"—all problems of logistics handled by Supply. The Depot here is the chief link in the chain of supply for the mighty fleet now battering at the doors of Tokyo.

Troops representing the entire 44th Division and attached units standing behind their colors in a town square deep in a valley below snowy peaks of the Austrian Tyrol, heard Maj. Gen. Edward

H. Brooks, C. G. of the 15th Corps praise the 44th Infantry Division's relentless attacks against the enemy, battles that played a vital part in bringing about VE day.

Gen. Brooks, who reviewed the troops in the VE ceremony, said: "It is well for all of you to remember that when the official German capitulation came the enemy on your front had already surrendered. You had completely broken him and were mopping up the remains. That is a magnificent tribute to your fighting ability."

He added, "the war is not yet over, that the Japs still lurk in the Pacific in all their treachery, and hard fighting remains before they are crushed. As good soldiers we must all be ready should another call to duty come."

Taking part in the ceremony each of the infantry regiments and division artillery, and a platoon from each of the separate attached units.

The following order of the day, issued by Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, Commanding General of the 44th, was read under the horse chestnut trees of the Tyrolean square: "Soldiers of the 44th Inf. Div.: That the close of the European phase of the greatest war of all time finds you as conquerors in these mountains in the heart of Europe is ample proof of your abilities as fighting men. It is appropriate as we pause in the square in this Tyrolean town, briefly to review your accomplishment, which has brought you here."

"On Sept. 15, 1944, you landed at Cherbourg France. On Oct. 24, 1944, your division as a whole was committed East of Lunville, France, where you received your first baptism of fire."

"You jumped off on Nov. 13, 1944, at Emmeren, France. You spearheaded the breakthrough of the 15th Corps to the Rhine River fighting in mid-winter through the Vosges mountains a unit of your division comprised the first U. S. troops to reach the Rhine. Beginning the night of Nov. 23, 1944, you halted the savage attack of the crack 130th Panzer Lehr Div. when they threatened the flank of the 15 Corps advancing steadily to the North, despite the enemy's obstinate resistance you reached the Maginot Line and reduced them never poised there on the threshold of Germany you were called to relieve two divisions in the vicinity of Sarreguemines that they might be employed in the counteroffensive in the forest of the Ardennes."

"From January 1-10, 1945 you successfully held your sector against the all out attack of 3 German divisions including the elite 17 SS panzer Grenadier Div. "Had that attained its objective it would have cut off the U. S. forces and those of our French allies in the Vosges and Hardt mountains, and on the plains of Alsace. This sector you continued to hold until March 15, 1945, when other divisions of 15 Corps passed through you to the final assault upon Germany you then passed into a brief but well earned rest in the 7th Army reserve. After 144 days of continuous commitment."

"On March 27, 1945 you crossed the Rhine River and after two days of fighting and on March 29, 1945 captured the important German city of Mannheim and opened the way for the subsequent surrender of Meselberg."

"In the sweep of the U. S. armies through the forest and mountains of Germany you drove fast and hard, giving the enemy never an opportunity to recover his balance, reaching the Danube River with the 10th Armored Div., you captured the ancient city of Ulm on April 25. Driving on up and across the highlands of Bavaria destroying the enemy before you. You swept into the Alps of the Austrian Tyrol."

"In your 203 days of combat you have captured alone more than 44,000 prisoners of war, roughly equal to a force three times the size of your division. How many additional enemy you have destroyed you will never know. Victory in Europe finds you here among these mountains."

"The war is not yet won nor is the peace. You now stand poised in the mountains victorious soldiers awaiting the next call of duty. Soldiers of the 44th Inf. Div. I congratulate you."

S/TJ William F. Dean, Maj. Gen. U. S. Army Commanding.

Members of the 44th Division from Loraine include Pfc. Aubrey Lankford, Pvt. Roach, Sgt. Geo. M. Lee, and S. Sgt. Marion A. Oliver.

DISTINGUISHED SERVICE CROSS TO RAYMOND PRICE

An Eighth Air Force Liberator Station, England—One of the highest American awards, the Distinguished Service Cross, for "Extraordinary Heroism in Action," has been awarded to 1st Lt. Raymond E. Price of Loraine, Texas. He is now missing in action.

Announcement of the award came from 2nd Air Division commanded by Major General William E. Kepner.

Lt. Price has been flying as 1st pilot with the veteran 389th Bombardment Group and completed many missions on priority strategic targets before his plane was lost on Christmas day, 1944.

Christmas day saw the Luftwaffe attack in strength in one of its rare appearances. Prior to that attack the Liberators had not seen the German air force for quite some time. The enemy fighters pressed a determined attack and succeeded in setting the bomb bay on Price's plane afire. Two of the four engines were knocked out of commission, control surfaces damaged and the main hydraulic system destroyed. With this much damage the aircraft was forced to become a straggler and trail the formation.

This is what the enemy was waiting for. Three more German fighters came in for the kill. They succeeded in inflicting further damage and wounding some members of the crew. Despite the critical condition of the bomber, Price continued to take evasive action and fight the ever determined enemy attacks. By now, however, it was obvious the plane could not remain in flying condition much longer. He ordered the crew to bail out and decided to try for a crash landing since there were wounded men aboard who could not jump. Before this could be accomplished the plane exploded in the air. He and the remaining crew members were not seen to leave the plane prior to the explosion.

Thus, as the citation reads, "The extraordinary heroism and complete disregard for his personal safety displayed by Lt.

Roosevelt's Appeal for 7th War Loan

WASHINGTON, D. C.—Before his death President Franklin D. Roosevelt issued a statement in support of the Mighty Seventh War Loan for 14 billions of dollars in which he reminds the Nation it is still locked in a deadly struggle with its enemies.

The President stressed the importance of greater production together with the buying and holding of War Bonds to help achieve the victory. He said:

"I don't need to tell you that we are still locked in a deadly struggle with our enemies—the enemies of our way of life—and the war is still the chief job of each one of us. The greatest production of which we are capable, faithful adherence to regulations that make it possible to supply our boys in battle with everything they need, and buying and holding War Bonds—these are things we at home must do to speed victory."

"In the past three years more than 85 millions of Americans have invested billions of dollars in bonds. Never before have so many people held such a direct share in a great national effort. To save to buy and to hold all we can for war bonds—this is a small service to ask of us who do not fight—yet it is one of the biggest things we can do for our fighting men."

Marshall, King Pledge Victory to 'Bond Front'

WASHINGTON, D. C.—The Army has overcome what in the past would have seemed to have been insurmountable obstacles and the Navy has promised full unconditional surrender.

Chief of Staff General George C. Marshall and Fleet Admiral Ernest J. King said today, in commenting on the Mighty Seventh War Loan, that "We have had the Army have overcome what in the past would have seemed to have been insurmountable obstacles. So have you. That is where the enemy miscalculated—for to Americans, nothing has ever been impossible. Yours is a hard task—a heavy responsibility. But we of the Army have confidence that you will again achieve the impossible."

Admiral King said: "We have had two wars to wage. One of those wars is just beginning. That means that your own labors, far from over, are also just beginning. The Navy, like the Army, has one objective. The unconditional surrender of the enemy. We will attain that objective because of people of good faith. People who have demonstrated their patriotism and their willingness to undertake the most gigantic financial task ever undertaken by a free people."

KING

Price on this occasion are in keeping with the highest traditions of the armed forces of the United States."

As one of the oldest Liberator groups in the European theater of operations, the 389th has now passed the 300 mission mark. The group has seen action in the Middle East, Africa and England and has won the War Department Distinguished Unit Citation for its part in the spectacular low level attack on the Ploesti oil fields.

HEALTH and SUCCESS
Will Go Hand In Hand

We are sure that you were informed of the pending deal whereby we were selling Sweetwater Mineral Wells Sanatorium to a doctor from Detroit, Mich. This doctor's plans failed to materialize and we are again in charge.

For several years we have contemplated many improvements but due to our sanatorium being full of patients and our services being in such demand we have delayed. NOW we have let contracts to completely modernize the entire institution: New additions will be built and with the continued support of the fine people of West Texas, we will build for you a Drugless Sanatorium of which you can be justly proud.

Our HEALTH SERVICE will remain the same. Nothing but the best is good enough for those who place their loved ones in our care. We are constantly confronted by agents selling UNPROVEN equipment which they hope will sell itself from its beauty and mystery: Many such agents claim, verbally, that such apparatus will tune in on various parts of the body and diseases: Of one thing you may be certain—YOU will NEVER be sold on a service here, while under the present management unless the service or equipment offered is recognized by established, unbiased experts.

We are justly proud of our reputation of restoring to health those who have so kindly placed their confidence in us. Of one thing you may always be certain—Unless we feel that we can help you we will as quickly tell you as though otherwise was the case. This should mean a lot to you in making up your mind what doctor to choose when you or yours are seeking health.

We have been serving West Texas for more than 32 years and we shall strive in the future to merit a continuation of your confidence and friendship.

AROUND THE HOUSE

The water in which rice is boiled is just right for starching organdy blouses and white shirts.

An electric griddle for pancakes works more efficiently if wiped with olive oil.

Fingers from discarded rubber gloves make excellent guards for injured fingers. Bandage injury as usual, cut one of the fingers from the glove, and slip it over the bandage. Protects it from the dirt.

Do not use sheets or pillow cases for laundry bags as they are not woven to stand the strain.

Cover the bottom of your scouring powder can with adhesive tape. Then when can stands in your white enameled sink, it will leave no rust stains.

Fancy household linens, put away to save time and effort, should be washed and aired occasionally to keep them fresh and white. Ironing is not necessary.

When sewing, fasten a small pin-cushion to your wrist with a piece of elastic. This way as soon as pins are removed they can be put in place. Keep pins handy, too.

Cut a flower or two from the new wallpaper you've put on your walls, then paste it to a white lamp shade or tin. Gives unity of design to your room. Carry out the same idea on a scrapbook cover that's kept permanently at hand.

Rustic furniture with the bark still on is mighty hard on stockings. They are much less apt to catch on the wood if the chair is given a coat of clear varnish.

To separate a head of lettuce, cut the core out in a cone shape and place the opening under the faucet, allowing the running water to separate the leaves without breaking them.

Banana Oddity

Unlike other banana plants which produce their fruit in bunches of from 50 to 150, a banana plant cultivated in the Far East produces only one fruit. But this banana is as long and thick as a man's arm and contains sufficient food to make an adequate meal for three hungry persons.

SNAPPY FACTS about RUBBER

Gulf Coast oil-producing companies use a rubber-tired vehicle called a "marsh buggy." It is equipped with tires 120 inches in diameter and with 33½-inch cross-sections. The OPA set price ceilings at $1,075.15 for casings and $328.34 for tubes.

Hawaii is currently producing very small amounts of natural rubber. It is the only tree rubber being grown under the American flag except for experimental plantings in Florida.

Undamaged fire plants in Belgium and France that have fallen into the hands of the Allies are to be put to work retreading truck tires for Army vehicles which would otherwise have to be discarded.

THE STORY THUS FAR: Thunderhead, the only white horse ever born on the Goose Bar ranch in Wyoming. He grows from an ugly, misshapen colt to a powerful yearling, showing more and more characteristics of his great grand sire, a wild stallion called the Albino. One day the Goblin wanders southward into the mountains and finds a high valley where wild horses live. He encounters the Albino, and barely escapes with his life. Meanwhile his mother Flicka bears another colt named Touch and Go. Goblin returns, badly injured. When his wounds are healed, Ken McLaughlin, his 12-year-old owner, begins the difficult task of training him.

CHAPTER XII

Late one afternoon, after an hour of such struggling, a fury came into Ken and he began to lash Thunderhead with his crop. He lashed him until he was exhausted. With his other hand he held the reins and forced the horse this way and that. With his heels he spurred him. Tears of weakness and rage stood in his eyes.

Suddenly Thunderhead had the impulse to obey. Generations of breeding had put a knowledge into him of the horse's part of horsemanship, a realization that obedience to a skilled rider makes one out of the two, makes teamwork out of the ride, something almost like a dance, a performance that a horse cannot achieve alone. He leaned his mouth against the feather lightness of Ken's hands, and obedient to them, exercised skills that he had never exercised before. There was grace to his movement now, grace and control and technique. There was joy in it. He stopped fighting the bit. As if he had learned all that Ken had been trying to teach him, or had known it all along, he swung right or left at the least touch of the rein on his neck or the lean of his rider's body. His steps were pliant, prancing. He delighted in the quick, easy turns, in responding to the hands that lifted him into a longer and fiercer stride.

When Thunderhead achieved obedience, he enlarged himself. The skill and the will of another being were added to his own skill and will. He was having a new experience and it ran through his body like quicksilver. He loved Nell, but nobody had fought him and warred with him and lashed him and taught him obedience but Ken.

At last Ken let him out fully and urged him with voice and hands and heels.

Thunderhead began to run. His hoofs reached forward and seized the ground with a slashing cut that barely touched and rebounded.

A feeling of extraordinary ease went through Ken. No effort was needed, there was no more struggling, he and the colt were one at last. The fight was over and now—this!

Mastery! Underneath him was something of such strength and power as he had never dreamed of. It surged into him. It was his own. A clump of rocks was ahead of them. Ken did not swerve—the least tightening of his knees, lift of his hands—and the stallion sailed over, hardly altering his stride. The fence after there by the road! Take it, Thunderhead, and the long soaring leap—the light landing—

Everything seemed different to Ken. He looked around. He saw, felt, apprehended as he never had before, as if he had been let into a secret world that no one else knew anything about. The wind whipped his cheeks and filled his mouth and beat upon his eyeballs and whistled in his ears. The pace! The incredible speed! The strange floating gait! Those long reaching strides seemed almost slow, like the overhand strokes of a swimmer. Then the lightning-quick slash at the ground, and again the rush through the air. No obstacles could stop him. There were none. They floated over them.

The world rolled out from under the stallion's hoofs. They were covering ground Ken had never seen before. He made no effort to guide him. They were on the mountains—they were in the sky—Clouds, trees, earth, streamed past. A group of antelopes! He saw their frightened leaps—their startled faces—they were gone! Ken's consciousness was fused with all that there was in the world. He had gathered it in. He was the pulse-beat. He was the kernel. This is it.

He sat at the supper table that night in a dream, unable to speak or eat.

He wondered if Thunderhead would ever do it again. When he had dismounted and unsaddled the colt and had stood looking into his face—looking into the future, his hands trembling because he knew, now, beyond all doubt, what the horse could do—he saw that Thunderhead still hated him. The dark, white-ringed eye looked at him sideways, viciously.

"How did the colt go today, Ken?" "He went—better, dad."

"Did you get him to go forward under the saddle?"

"Yes, sir."

"Did you get him running?"

"Sort of—"

Rob McLaughlin looked searchingly at his son. He asked no more.

It was a warm August evening. Rob was driving to a ranch southwest of his own to inspect a mare. He had been told she was a registered thoroughbred, had been a racer, and was for sale cheap. The number of his own brood mares was down to sixteen. They were getting old. He had lost four in the last two years, and two more must be sold before fall because they would not live through another winter on the range. Colorado farmers who kept a few horses stabled through the winter might buy them for the sake of the foals they would drop in the spring. They would bring very little at auction but anything would be better than feeding them to the coyotes on the Saddle Back.

Nell was driving with him. They were on one of the back roads, not much more than wheel tracks on the prairie grass. It was at just that moment of the evening when headlights are of no use and daylight is not enough. The car swept ahead so swiftly, and at times so roughly, that Nell was about to protest, but one look at Rob's face stopped her. He had his angry driving look.

Nell withdrew a little into her own corner and sighed. It might have been a pleasant evening. She always enjoyed a drive at the end of the day when her work was done, but if he was going to be like this—"Gypsy hasn't long to go either," said Rob abruptly. "At this rate, my band of brood mares will soon be cut in half."

"Couldn't you put some of the younger mares in the brood mare bunch?" asked Nell. "There are those three five-year-olds—the sorrels—they're wonderful mares."

"To be bred back to their own sire?"

"That's line-breeding, isn't it?"

When Thunderhead achieved obedience, he enlarged himself. The skill and the will of another being were added to his own skill and will. He was having a new experience and it ran through his body like quicksilver. He loved Nell, but nobody had fought him and warred with him and lashed him and taught him obedience but Ken.

Dehydrating Quality Surplus Vegetables

Dried Products Ideal Winter Food Addition

LACK of jars need not prevent the gardener from laying aside a large amount of this year's garden products for winter use.

Before drying, vegetables should be precooked in steam or boiling water. Steam cooking will furnish a superior product to those cooked in water. They should be removed as soon as tender and placed in the drier.

A satisfactory drier is illustrated here. Or it may be advisable to dry in the oven, or in the sun, behind glass. It is advisable to furnish air circulation by means of electric fan, if possible. This process involves bringing currents of relatively dry air into intimate contact with the material to be dried.

The temperature in the drier should not be hot enough to cook the food, yet it should be of a suitable temperature to cause evaporation of moisture. The drying must be a continuous process in order to prevent the growth of organisms.

For best results foods should be cut into uniform sizes and spread evenly in thin layers to dry, stirring frequently. After the product has been dried, it should be conditioned for about 10 days, but stirring from time to time, to prevent mold. After this period it may be placed in sealed air tight bags, such as cellophane or waxed paper, or in sealed jars, or placed in a stone crock, if desired.

Properly dried vegetables, as well as fruits, prove a welcome addition in the winter menus, and lose little of their value when properly handled.

Age Effect in Calf

After the first calf is dropped, age has little or no apparent effect on cows getting in calf, according to E. J. Perry of Rutgers university.

Bulls show a gradual reduction in breeding efficiency with advancing age, with the exception of the seven-year-olds. Heifers being bred for the first time require more services than the older cows. Breeding efficiency of the cows are not appreciably influenced by the length of time between calvings.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

THE MINISTRY OF JESUS

LESSON TEXT—Mark 1:14, 15; Luke 4:16-21; Mark 8:27a, 29, 31.

GOLDEN TEXT—I am come that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly.—John 10:10.

The dawn of a new day had come! The long-promised and expected Messiah came to break the 400 years of silence by His personal presence.

We learn of His coming, His life and ministry, His death and resurrection, and find the promise of His coming again in the four Gospels. They are our complete lesson for this Sunday, but we obviously cannot review them in their entirety in our limited space.

Our Scripture references speak of His ministry in presenting the good news of the gospel to needy mankind.

I. The Good News Preached (Mark 1:14, 15).

Jesus always honored preaching as the primary and the effective means of spreading the good news of the gospel.

The forerunner, John the Baptist, had borne his witness. Jesus had come, had been baptized, and as John was cast into prison, He began to preach, "Repent ye and believe the gospel." The key verse of Mark 1:14-15: "For even the Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister." The characteristic words are "straightway," "forthwith," and "immediately." The Greek word thus translated appears about forty times in the book.

The Servant of God went quickly about the Father's business. Christians, can we say the same for ourselves?

II. The Good News Practiced (Luke 4:16-21).

The daily ministry of Jesus as He lived here on earth is summarized in the prophecy of His coming which was given by Isaiah the prophet. As we read these words, we realize that we who profess to follow Him need to learn more of His spirit of tender and loving service to others.

It is significant and appropriate that Jesus' declaration of Himself as the fulfillment of Isaiah 61:1, 2 was made in the synagogue on the Sabbath day. He met with the people in the house and at the time set apart for God's worship. He opposed spiritual deadness, the misinterpretation of the truth, the distortion of religious principles; but He was not as some would have us believe, a religious free lance who despised the established worship of His people.

Having been prepared by the thirty years of privacy, and more particularly by the baptism and the temptation in the wilderness, He appeared at the synagogue in Nazareth to declare Himself as the fulfillment of prophecy.

Those who teach that Jesus was only a young Jewish teacher with a new philosophy of life have evidently not read the Scriptures. He knew Himself to be God's Son come into the world to bring the good news of salvation by His own blood to poor sin-captive, blinded and bruised humanity. He is the Saviour!

Look at Isaiah 61:1, 2 and note that Jesus stopped reading before the end of the sentence. "The day of vengeance of our God" will come when Christ returns. This is the day of grace. Sinners are urged to accept God's love now, and thus to escape the terrible day of judgment which is to come.

III. The Good News Prepared (Mark 8:27a, 29, 31).

Jesus preached the gospel of the kingdom. He went about doing good, but always He knew Himself to be the Christ, the One who was to die for the sins of the world and to arise again for the justification of those who put their trust in Him.

Even those who deny to our Christ the recognition of His deity, and the devotion of life which is His just due, must, if they are at all intelligent, admit that no man ever lived who has made such an impact on human history. Even now, unbelieving men speak of Him as the founder of Christianity, a mighty leader, a wonderful example, or an unequalled teacher.

It is not enough that we stand with the mass of humanity who may thus admire Him, but who do not count Him as Saviour and Lord. The question comes to us as it did to the disciples, "Whom say ye that I am?"

"Thou art the Christ"—this alone suffices as the foundation for Christian testimony and conduct.

Although Jesus was not yet ready to have His Messiahship proclaimed to the public, He was prepared to teach His disciples concerning not only that important truth, but of His rejection and death.

Note the divine "must" (v. 31). While it is true that wicked men showed their hostility toward our God and His Christ by hanging Him on Calvary's cross, yet it was to die for our sins that He came into the world. The cross has rightly come to represent God's love to the world rather than man's hostility to God.

This Husband Deserved A Medal For His Tact

A film actor and his wife were seated in a secluded corner of their club. The wife had a tongue like a shrew and was berating her husband in no uncertain terms.

Unnoticed by her, a party of acquaintances approached within earshot, just as she delivered herself of this: "You are nothing more than a mean skunk! Of all the low-down, slimy snakes, I think you are the worst! Why you are just a cheap skate!"

Suddenly noticing the people who had just arrived, the husband, with great presence of mind, said: "You're quite right, my dear; that was good. And what else did you say to him?"
