Nicaragua leaders predict U.S. invasion

■ U.S. officials say planes may not be MiGs — Page 2A; Midlanders' reaction to alleged MiGs — Page 1C

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — The Sandinista government says it is arming civilians, including 20,000 student volunteers who normally help harvest coffee, to defend itself from a predicted U.S. invasion.

Claiming that an "escalation of aggression" indicated an invasion was imminent, Foreign Minister Miguel d'Escoto announced Thursday night that the leftist government was mobilizing its reserve defense forces.

He also told reporters and foreign diplomats that Nicaragua was requesting an urgent meeting of the U.N. Security Council to denounce the alleged acts of aggression, saying they "pose a situation that is extremely grave."

He charged that a U.S. spy plane caused sonic booms Thursday over Managua and listed several other complaints. These included "harassment" of a Soviet freighter by U.S. Navy frigates inside Nicaraguan waters, deployment of U.S. warships in the Caribbean and Pacific, and "very suspicious movements" in at least three U.S. Army bases in the United States.

Pentagon spokesmen refused to comment on the overflights, but denied that U.S. Navy vessels had entered Nicaraguan waters. They also denied a Sandinista claim that a U.S. military plane was chased away by gunfire Wednesday near the Pacific port of Corinto, where the Soviet frieghter docked.

In Washington, Reagan administration officials raised the possibility the Soviet vessel may not contain MiG fighters, as had been suggested, but less sophisticated Czech-built L-39-ZA trainer planes.

Unlike the MiG-21s, the L-39-ZA is subsonic and its air-to-ground capability would make it useful against U.S.-backed Nicaraguan rebels fighting the Sandinistas.

The Reagan administration has said it would regard any delivery of MiGs with "utmost concern" and has not ruled out the possibility of a preemptive strike to neutralize them. Nicaragua has denied receiving advanced warplanes.

The New York Times, in today's editions, quoted an unidentified Nicaraguan official as saying the Soviet ship was carrying one or two helicopters for the Nicaraguan army.

The official, described as a top policymakers, was quoted as saying the helicopters "can hardly be considered strategic weapons that threaten the security of the United States or its allies. They are to defend ourselves against a war of aggression."

Prices fall for third straight month

WASHINGTON (AP) — Wholesale prices, off for a third straight month, fell a modest 0.2 percent in October, the government said today. It was the first time in 17 years that prices have been down for three months running.

The Labor Department said all the credit for last month's good news went to prices for newly introduced 1985-model cars and trucks, which proved after the department's seasonal adjustment process to be lower than September close-out prices for the 1984 models.

Indeed, other major components of the index rose and department analysts said that if car and truck prices were not counted, the overall index would be unchanged from September.

Food prices, down in four of the previous five months, rose 0.1 percent.

Energy prices were up 1.5 percent. Gasoline prices, after falling for four months in a row, rose 2.5 percent.

For the first 10 months of the year, prices have risen a tiny 1.5 percent — well below the 5 percent forecast at the start of 1984 and an insignificant deterioration from last year's 0.6 percent, which had been the lowest rate in two decades.

Analyzing last month's price report, department specialists said wholesale costs for 1985-model cars dropped 1.2 percent in October after seasonal adjustment, a process designed to remove predictable, periodic factors from the price calculation.

Prices for new cars actually rose 5.5 percent. But they would normally rise 6.7 percent at this time of year, meaning that the smaller-than-expected rise was a negative factor on the overall index. Prices for trucks registered a similar drag on the calculation.

As for food, a 14.8 percent jump in fish prices and a 3.7 percent increase in egg prices were partially offset by an 8.2 percent drop in vegetable prices, a 6.5 percent decline for fruit prices and a 3.7 percent fall in pork prices.

After declining for four straight months, prices for both gasoline and fuel oil rose, but natural gas costs posted their second monthly decline and were down 0.3 percent.

In addition to the sharp rise for gasoline prices, fuel oil prices rose 3.3 percent. However, most analysts expect both jumps to be temporary given the apparent failure of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries to prop up sagging world oil prices through production cuts.

Indeed, many specialists believe that wholesale prices will stay flat for the balance of the year, primarily because of the world energy price outlook.

The energy price calculations reported today were actually for September. That component of the wholesale price measure lags a month because energy companies report their prices too late for inclusion in the most recent index.

Some residents want to keep out blacks

Spencer and Patricia Goffer

CHICAGO (AP) — Many residents of "the island," an all-white neighborhood where a black family endured two nights of brick-throwing and racial slurs before fleeing the apartment they had just rented, say they want to keep blacks out.

"Once you let one in, they're all gonna come in," said a bartender in a tavern near to the apartment where Spencer Goffer, his wife, Patricia and 8-year-old son fled early Wednesday.

The family left behind their possessions in the modest apartment, its windows shattered from missiles hurled in the night by angry whites.

Most area residents questioned Thursday applauded the violence.

"Because they were niggers!" was the reply of one patron at Muggsy's Bar, when asked why bricks, rocks and a tire iron were thrown through the windows of the apartment after the Goffers moved in Monday. Like many of those interviewed, the patron would not give his name.

When he rented the five-room, $280-a-month apartment, Goffer was unaware the four-square block area on the West Side was occupied only by whites. There are integrated areas near the neighborhood, which borders the mostly white suburb of Cicero.

"Ten years ago there were not too many black people in the area, now they're all over," said the bartender, who also refused to give his name. "People who've lived here 40 years don't want that."

Anthony Cappetta, a lawyer whose office is a block from the apartment, said he thought the troublemakers were outsiders. Several of the bars in the area attracted motorcycle gang members, who had vandalized the empty storefront below Goffer's second-floor apartment in the past, he said.

"I feel bad about it," Cappetta said. "It's not right and I don't think it was residents of the area. I think it was just an isolated thing."

Cappetta said he didn't think area residents, most of whom are retired and elderly, would mind blacks moving in.

"People are sophisticated enough to know that property values don't decrease like 40 or 50 years ago," he said.

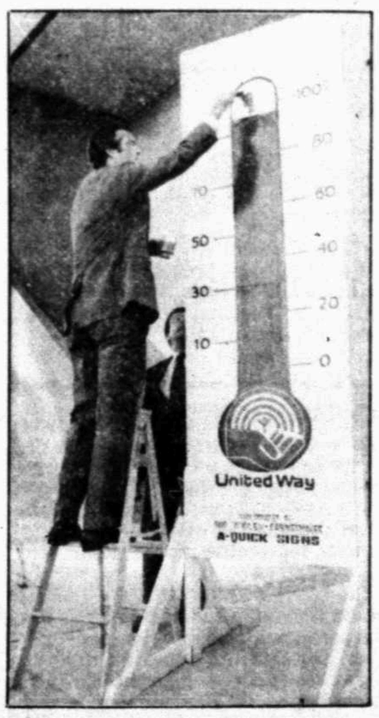

But one bar patron, who would not give his name, said his lease stated that he could not rent the building to anyone who wasn't "Caucasian."

United Way reaches $1.95 million goal

From Staff Reports

The United Way of Midland concluded its 1984 fundraising campaign today with an announcement by Campaign Chairman Joseph I. O'Neill III that the organization has reached its goal of $1.95 million.

"I'm very pleased, and I think all Midlanders should be, too," said O'Neill at a morning press conference outside the United Way offices at Midland Center.

The campaign had to be extended two weeks in order to reach the goal, but O'Neill said the original campaign schedule was too short.

"It was a five to six week campaign, and that probably was compressing it a little too small."

A total of $1,952,218 was raised, and O'Neill said the contributions came from a wide range of Midlanders.

"We have received checks amounting to tens of thousands printed on corporate check writers. We have received checks for ten dollars written in the shaky hand of elderly widows. Each pledge, modest or large, is equally important."

Because United Way made its goal, Big Brothers/Big Sisters will join the organization's roster of agencies, and several new programs will be offered, O'Neill said. The new programs will deal with preventing alcohol abuse, teaching coping skills to latch-key children and counseling the victims of domestic violence.

O'Neill also paid tribute to the hundreds of United Way volunteers "who have worked hard to tell the United Way story to Midlanders from all walks of life. The story was heard. Midlanders responded."

Evangelist whistles while he works

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

George Madrigal whistles praises unto the Lord.

He chirps as if he were born a song, as his name suggests.

"The Good Lord gave me this divine gift of whistling in tongues," Madrigal, 59, said as he stood on a Midland street corner ready to whistle and quote Scripture whenever he felt the Lord moved him to do so.

"My mission is to pull people out of hellfire," he said. "It is important to know how God uses me...My heavenly Father works in mysterious ways."

He's an itinerate evangelist who travels to cities and towns in spreading Scripture and witnessing for Christ. He often follows conferences of the Full Gospel Business Men's Fellowship International, says he is a former member of the fellowship, and wears an FGBMFI tie which bears the lettering "Matthew 28:19," which reads, "Go ye therefore, and teach all nations..."

Madrigal, dressed in a red sweater, white pants and shoes and a cap proclaiming "Jesus Is Lord" and bearing the emblem of a dove, sported a "One in a Million" button on his sweater.

Madrigal said he's neither in a cult nor in a religious organization.

Reagan sets three priorities for second term

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. (AP) — President Reagan, determined to preside over an aggressive second term, has set arms control, income tax reform and spending cuts as his top priorities for the next four years.

These items emerged by consensus as top White House officials held private, informal meetings in the past several weeks to discuss post-election goals.

"We knew that our success in 1981 was based on selecting important goals and sticking with those goals," deputy White House press secretary Larry Speakes said in an interview with The Associated Press on Thursday.

"That's our plan in the new term."

Many people credited Reagan's success in getting his economic package — including a 25 percent cut in income tax rates — through Congress in 1981, with the fact the White House pursued its objective almost single-mindedly and was able to fashion a legislative coalition though the House was controlled by Democrats.

In addition, Speakes said Reagan was planning an organized effort, not yet fully shaped, "to reach out to special constituencies, to groups we want to get together with." He specifically mentioned Democrats, blacks, labor, agriculture and business.

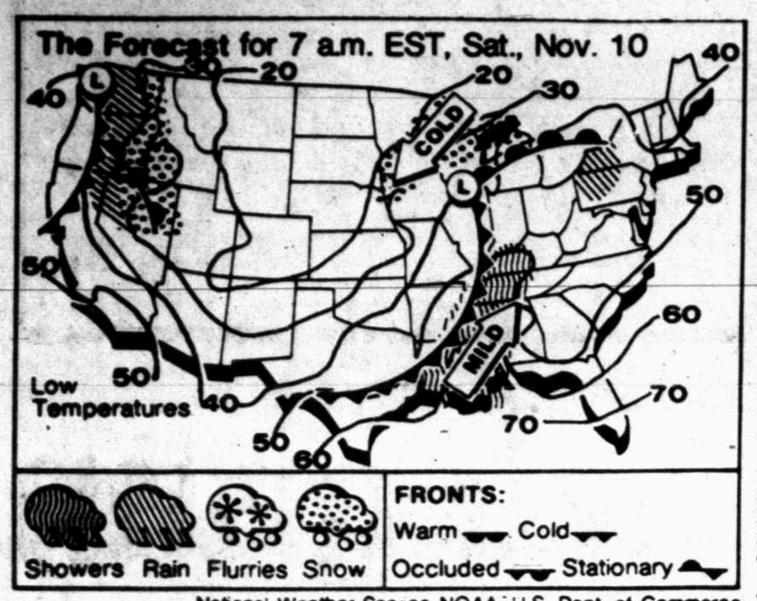

"We are beginning to think about what the president should be doing between now and the inauguration in order to set the tone (for the second term)," Speakes said.

"It will be an aggressive second-term, as aggressive as the first," Speakes said. "The goals we set in 1981 are not over and have not been accomplished in four years and there's much that remains," Speakes said.

Mindful that the administration will have to fashion an ad hoc congressional coalition if it wants to get its programs passed by Congress, Speakes said Reagan wants to "meet as soon as possible with the new Senate leadership and the House Democratic and Republican leadership too."

WEATHER SUMMARY

National Weather Service NOAA U.S Dept of Commerce
AP Laserphoto Map

The National Weather Service forecasts rain and snow for Saturday for the Northwest, snow is forecast for southern Minnesota and the upper Great Lakes and rain is forecast from the central Gulf to the Ohio Valley.

Cooler temperatures can be expected for weekend

Temperatures will cool in the Midland area tonight and Saturday, according to the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Airport.

Tonight's low is expected to be near 40 increasing Saturday to highs in the middle 60s. Winds from the northwest at 10 to 20 mph tonight are predicted to decrease to less than 15 mph.

The high of 82 recorded Thursday was only five degrees below the record high set in 1934. The record low was 21 degrees cooler than this morning's low of 48.

STATE

Thunderstorms, some possibly reaching severe levels, were expected to roar across portions of North Central Texas and Northeast Texas today and tonight.

The National Weather Service warns that some of the thunderstorms may reach severe levels in North Central Texas during the afternoon and spreading into Northeast Texas during the night. Scattered thundershowers were also forecast for Southeast Texas.

The storms are to be triggered by the combination of a surface low pressure system in West Texas, a cold front that is expected to move across the state by tonight and an upper level disturbance expected to approach the state by late afternoon.

The surface low pressure system in West Texas was triggering strong southerly winds to the east of the system early today. Winds gusted to 25 mph, drawing moist air from the Gulf of Mexico over the eastern two-thirds of the state.

NATION

A winter storm spread across the West today, leaving foot-deep blankets of snow in many areas, clogging mountain passes and prompting widespread warnings to motorists.

More snow was forecast for Utah, Montana, Colorado, Oregon, Idaho and northeast Nevada.

The storm system, centered in southeastern Wyoming, stretched out to dump more than 18 inches of snow overnight at the Alta ski area in northern Utah and leave foot-deep snow in many areas.

The National Weather Service said many mountain passes were snowpacked, and numerous travelers' advisories were posted.

Elsewhere, rain was scattered over the Ohio and middle Mississippi valleys, the central Plains, the northern Plateau and northern Pacific Coast.

The northern and mid-Atlantic coastal states, the lower Mississippi Valley and the southern Plains were under partly cloudy skies.

Clear skies prevailed over most of the south Atlantic coastal states.

Officials: Plane might not be MiGs

WASHINGTON (AP) — Reagan administration officials are raising the possibility that the Soviet vessel docked at a Nicaraguan port may not contain MiG fighters but less sophisticated Czech-built planes with ground attack capabilities.

The officials said that although the boxes believed to be aboard the vessel were designed for carrying MiG-21s, they could contain L-39-ZA aircraft, which has frequently been used as a trainer for Soviet bloc pilots.

At the same time, the officials, who spoke on the condition they not be identified, acknowledged that 24 hours after the vessel docked at the Pacific port city of Corinto, its contents remained a mystery.

State Department spokeswoman Sondra McCarty declined to comment Thursday night on reports that the Soviet freighter may be delivering surface-to-air missiles.

Soviet authorities, meanwhile, have informed the United States that it need not be concerned about the cargo on the vessel, a U.S. official said. But the Soviets did not provide assurances that no combat planes were on board, said the official, speaking on condition he not be identified.

Secretary of State George Shultz, quoted in today's editions of The New York Times, said he had received assurances from Nicaragua "and other quarters" that the freighter was not delivering MiGs.

The State Department has said it would view with "utmost concern" any delivery of advanced combat aircraft to Nicaragua. Asked whether the L-39-ZA fits that description, one official said: "It could."

Nicaraguan Foreign Minister Miguel D'Escoto said shortly after the vessel docked Wednesday that the cargo did not include MiGs, and the Nicaraguan government denied it had received any combat planes from the Soviets. On Thursday, he declined to say what the vessel was carrying, saying that would set "a very bad precedent indeed."

While the administration has stopped short of specifying how it would react if advanced combat aircraft were introduced into Nicaragua, officials have said privately that one option would be a U.S. air strike against any such weaponry.

One official said that either MiGs or L-39-ZAs may be aboard the vessel. Another said he doubted that the cargo includes planes of any type. But, he added, at this point there are more unanswered than answered questions.

As one U.S. official put it, "If the cargo is sent to a church, that will be good news. If it is sent to an airport, that's something else."

Unlike the MiG-21s, the L-39-ZA is subsonic, the officials said, adding that its air-to-ground capability would make it useful against Nicaraguan rebels fighting the Sandinista government.

They said addition of the L-39-ZA would make Nicaragua more competitive against neighboring Honduras, which now has clear air superiority over Nicaragua. One official estimated that Nicaragua has 75 pilots capable of flying the Czech aircraft.

Meanwhile, Sen. Barry Goldwater, R-Ariz., chairman of the Senate Intelligence Committee, urged "strong action" by President Reagan if Nicaragua obtains the MiG-21s or similar aircraft.

"If the United States sits by and allows the installation of these planes into Central America, then we will have abdicated our moral responsibility as well as our leadership in trying to establish democracy on the southern doorstep of our own country," Goldwater said in a statement issued in Arizona.

Concern about Nicaragua's intentions also was expressed by Sen. Christopher Dodd, D-Conn., who has been an outspoken critic of Reagan administration policies in Central America.

"The sea lanes, the Panama Canal are extremely important to us," said Dodd, a member of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. "It need not be a direct, frontal attack on Texas or Oklahoma in order to pose a serious threat to the security interests of the United States."

In the latest bit of evidence about the vessel, officials said the weight of the ship, based on estimates of its water displacement, was consistent with that of a ship carrying a squadron of fighter planes.

The Soviet vessel departed a Black Sea port in early October and arrived at Corinto on Wednesday. Intelligence experts believe the vessel departed with a load of boxes constructed especially for transporting MiGs. According to one official, CIA "cartonologists" were able to calculate the precise dimensions of the crates and concluded they were meant for MiGs.

The sole function of the "cartonologists," the official said, is to analyze Soviet bloc containers for the purpose of keeping tabs on its dealings with other countries.

Earlier this week, the United States informed the Soviet Union through diplomatic channels of the seriousness with which it would view the introduction of advanced combat aircraft into Nicaragua.

State Department spokesman John Hughes said Thursday that in view of Nicaragua's "previous record of subversion" and its proximity to U.S. borders, it would not be in the United States' interest to allow the delivery of sophisticated combat aircraft to Nicaragua.

Pentagon officials said military exercises by U.S. forces were under way at Fort Stewart, Ga., but were not related to Nicaragua. D'Escoto mentioned Fort Stewart as one of the military installations where "suspicious movements" were taking place.

At a rally late Thursday in Managua, Agriculture Minister Jaime Wheelock announced that "general plans for the defense of the country will begin as of today and a rifle will be issued to every youth, to every person so that person can defend the homeland."

Wheelock, a colonel in the Sandinista army, told some of the 20,000 students who are recruited annually to help with the coffee harvest that they will instead be sent to barracks to form part of the national militia.

Wheelock said the coffee crop — Nicaragua's top export — will be picked by "old people, women and farmers. We prefer the loss of the coffee than the loss of the country."

The Sandinista government filed a protest note Thursday, a few hours after a boom shook the capital at about 9:30 a.m., claiming a U.S. Air Force SR-71 had violated Nicaraguan airspace and alarmed Nicaraguans with sonic booms.

Similar booms Oct. 31 were first attributed to bombs, but the government later said they were produced by a U.S. plane flying at supersonic speed.

"It is the same North American spy plane of the SR-71 type that violated Nicaraguan air space last week," said Capt. Rosa Pasos of the Defense Ministry.

U.S., Iraq will restore diplomatic relations, officials say

WASHINGTON (AP) — Ending a 17-year break, Iraq will restore diplomatic relations with the United States by the end of the year, a Reagan administration official says.

The move could increase U.S. influence in the Arab world as President Reagan prepares the policy he will pursue in the Middle East during his second term.

Its potential impact on Israel and on Iran, which has been at war with Iraq for four years, was not clear.

U.S. diplomats have long proposed a restoration of relations, arguing President Saddam Hussein's government was on a more moderate course.

Until 2½ years ago, Iraq was on the U.S. terrorist list.

The United States is technically neutral in the Persian Gulf war, but has tried to organize a boycott of weapons shipments to Iran. Relations with Tehran were broken when the U.S. Embassy was overrun in late 1979 and American diplomats taken hostage.

Several Arab countries with which the United States is friendly, including Jordan and Saudi Arabia, have been assisting Iraq. It purchases most of its arms from the Soviet Union and France.

Iraq broke relations with Washington in 1967 to protest U.S. support for Israel in the Six-Day War with Egypt, Syria and Jordan. Ever since, according to U.S. officials, the United States has been willing to restore ties.

"It's been up to Iraq," said a knowledgeable official Thursday, disclosing the move only on condition he not be identified. "They are going to make final arrangements soon."

The official said Tariq Aziz, the Iraqi foreign minister and deputy prime minister, probably would visit Washington in a few weeks as relations are re-established.

He said he began spreading Biblical truths in 1960 just after he was about to plunge off a freeway bridge in California. By then, his life had run amuck: He had turned to drinking, to smoking, to womanizing and to dwelling on things of the flesh, he says.

His life as a Hollywood studio technician, an electrician, for the motion-picture industry, was about to be over.

As it turned out, just as he prepared to leap to his death, a stranger walked by and quoted him Romans 3:23: "For all have sinned, and come short of the glory of God."

That's when his second life began, he says. He fell to his knees, was renewed in spirit, and began preaching in the streets and on street corners of California.

Eleven years ago, Madrigal took his whistling ministry to the road and across the nation.

And without panhandling, he somehow supports himself but doesn't reveal how, other than to quote another Scripture, Matthew 6:33: "But seek ye first the kingdom of God, and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

When he whistles praises, Madrigal thrusts his large Bible skyward with his left hand, raises his right hand and pointing the index finger to the heavens, closes his eyes and chirps as sweetly as a song bird. Occasionally, if he's moved, his body will shutter and vibrate.

He is not a bird caller but sings praises in tongues, he says.

He is deliberate and cautious.

"I have to be very careful what I say to p-e-o-p-l-e," he said, so as not to be misunderstood. Though he said his "whole family thinks I'm nuts" and his relatives "laugh at me," Madrigal remains "a believer in the Word of God." Of the ridicule, he said: "Let them laugh; we're all in the same boat."

He said the loving God recognizes that many of His children "are doing filthy things" and that "the world is full of counterfeit guys."

After awhile, Madrigal left the street corner, hauled his bags, including clippings of newspaper articles about him and his unusual ministry, to the Hilton hotel, where he is lodging and site of the FGBMFI conference this week.

Madrigal said he had flown to Midland from Oregon by way of Salt Lake City and Denver. Next week, he'll be in Canada at another FGBMFI conference.

"I was whistling in the clouds," he said of his airline trip to Midland. "When He asks me to whistle, I can't say 'no' to Almighty God."

BLACKS

Mike Gillespie of Cicero, a teenager who works in the area, said trouble between blacks and whites was common on "the island."

"They (whites) will do anything to get back at blacks," said Gillespie. "See that crowbar over there? I've used it once myself."

"Almost all of them that come around here are trouble," he said. "There are no blacks in my school. If one walked in he wouldn't come out alive."

Gillespie said he saw about five people in the street outside Goffer's apartment early Wednesday, and several others inside the building. Goffer told police there were 10 to 15 people outside his apartment.

Goffer said he won't return to the apartment.

"We're not going back. My wife refuses to go back. Hopefully we'll be able to get the landlord to move our things out of there," he said Thursday.

Goffer, 32, an auto mechanic; his wife, 28, a word processor at Northwestern Univeristy's law school; and their son, Michael, fled to Goffer's brother's home a few blocks away Wednesday morning.

Police would not say Thursday if anyone had been arrested in the case.

PRIORITIES

Speakes said the White House would guard against second-term arrogance and would probably be held in check by the fact that it will need to sell its programs to the public and to Congress.

And he said Reagan was likely to have a news conference in the next three or four weeks partly to show he feels an obligation to do such things.

Though Reagan has met with reporters twice in the past week for brief question-and-answer sessions, his last formal prime-time 30-minute news conference was July 24.

The press spokesman said Reagan "will ask all Cabinet members and White House staff to remain" in their jobs. Even though there are some members of the administration top White House aides would just as soon see leave, nothing will be done to urge their departure, Speakes said, because they all know that isn't Reagan's style.

"He wants them to stay," Speakes said, echoing White House Chief of Staff James A. Baker's remark Wednesday that Reagan doesn't want to break up a winning team, especially in first year, which is when the White House expects it has the best chance of getting its proposals through Congress.

Reagan asked the Treasury Department months ago to embark on a study of how to change the federal income tax system, and he is due to receive its report about Dec. 1.

So far, it is known that the department is looking at a so-called flat tax or perhaps a consumption tax. Reagan has said only that he doesn't want the new system, whatever it is, to end up as a tax raising device.

Arms control would be a new priority for Reagan too, since he spent his first term building up the nation's defense system.

But Reagan has started to think about the legacy he will leave, Speakes said, and is ready to become more flexible with the Russians. Despite the hostile state of US-Soviet relations that marked Reagan's first term, Speakes said the president is more eager now to improve relations.

"We are at the point of saying 'what would it take for you guys to talk a little more with us,' " he said.

PRICES

Besides the bright prospects for energy prices, analysts point to the continuing strength of the U.S. dollar and the slowdown in overall economic growth as reasons for the year's modest wholesale-price inflation.

Donald Ratajczak, an economist at Georgia State University, predicts that the good news on the energy front is likely to last not only for the rest of this year but for the next two years.

Wholesale prices overall dropped 0.1 percent in August and 0.2 percent in September. The three-month string of declines is the longest since a six-month drop beginning in October 1966.

If last month's 0.2 percent decrease held steady for 12 straight months, the yearly drop would be 2.0 percent. The annual rate reported by the department is based on a more precise calculation of monthly price changes than the figure made public.

In all, the Producer Price Index for finished goods stood at 291.6 in October, meaning that goods costing $10 in 1967 would have cost $29.16 last month.

This antique has seen ups, downs for about 80 years

PFLUGERVILLE, Texas (AP) — There are antiques galore for sale at Main Street Mercantile Antique Mall, but one of the most interesting antiques is not on the market.

Well — it might be sold if you offered $150,000 for it. The owners would throw in the building for just an extra $5,000.

This pricey item is an elevator. Not your modern electric model that demands only the push of a button to operate, this one has sturdy cables, a huge overhead wheel and weights, and usually requires the operator to wear gloves so the ropes won't burn his hands as he raises or lowers the open platform.

"It won't fall down," said Lee Sherrard, who operates the elevator when he isn't attending the general managerial duties. "If it falls, it falls up."

Falls up? The giant weights will usually bring the 10-by-15-foot platform up, but heavy tugs on the rope are necessary to bring it back down.

The famous name on the elevator is "Ottis," and even the Houston office of that well-known elevator concern is excited about the old piece of equipment that is still in active use. It is, they say, a model that probably originated for the Chicago World's Fair in the mid-1800s.

When the present owners of the building, Phyllis and Linden Welsch, called the builder for service on the lift, they were told none of the present staff had even seen such an old model. One staff member, with a fondness for history, came down and looked it over. He shook his head in amazement that it is still serviceable and in excellent condition. With a tongue-in-cheek manner, he warned the owners that "it must be serviced at least once every fifty years, whether it needs it or not."

While the complete history of the elevator is not known, the Ottis company believes it had already been used when it was installed in the building that dates back to 1909 or thereabouts.

"We aren't sure of the installation date — it's just always been there," owners say.

According to Sherrard — a retired lawyer, real estate manager and history buff — the tall brick structure was built by Karl Pfluger, a charter member of the Immanuel Lutheran Church in Pflugerville. The building has an unusual suspension-type roof, which seems to have protected it from the disastrous fires that have gutted buildings on either side.

The elevator was of real importance for the early Gurstenberger & Leppin business that stored merchandise on the second floor. They sold Moon Buggies, Thrush autos, and Model T Fords, along with coffins, since Leppin was also mortician of those early days.

Sherrard is emphatic that there are no ghosts in the building since only coffins, not the bodies, were kept in the building. Morticians usually did their work in the homes of the deceased during the early part of the 20th century, he said.

Never heard of Moon Buggies? Sherrard says they were regular buggies with rubber tires and a convertible top. Thrush autos had wooden drive-shafts. Then there was the famous Model-T.

The elevator allowed a sizable inventory of those heavy, bulky items.

The building — and the elevator — have been used for many different purposes during the almost 80 years of its existence — a drug store, a grocery store, a teen-den, a bar, a basketball gym, and a movie theater, among others.

Man disappointed experts hadn't heard of his alleged crime

DALLAS (AP) — A man on trial for the worst mass murder in Dallas history was disappointed when two Boston psychological examiners said they hadn't heard of his alleged crime.

Abdelkrim Belachheb also included the private club where the slayings occurred among restaurants and bars he recommended to the two visitors sent to examine him, their report said.

"He asked many questions about our visit to Dallas. He offered many suggestions on good places to eat, drink and dance," the report said. "Unknown to us at the time, one of the places he highly recommended was the restaurant-lounge where he killed 6 people!"

The psychological report on Belachheb, 39, a Moroccan national who has pleaded not guilty by reason of insanity to six counts of murder and one of attempted murder, was dated Oct. 31, four months after the shootings.

The examiners, who were not identified, said Belachheb asked them during his testing if they had heard of the June 29 incident at Ianni's Restaurant and Club.

"He was very surprised, disappointed and almost amazed that we hadn't," the report said.

The report was presented by Dr. Homer H.B. Reed, a neuropsychologist from the New England Medical Center in Boston, Mass.

Reed agreed with earlier defense witnesses, who said the 39-year-old defendant has organic brain damage.

"The test results demonstrated unambiguously that Mr. Belachheb has an injured brain. There is brain damage," Reed said.

Reed described the damage as "diffuse," stemming apparently from past blows to the head. He said the damage impaired Belachheb's memory and the control of his emotions.

"Stress in particular, but noise and confusion could set him off," Reed testified.

Assistant District Attorney Norman Kinne attempted to discredit the findings of Reed and Dr. Kevin Karlson, a Dallas psychologist who described Belachheb as a brain-damaged paranoid schizophrenic who cannot tell right from wrong.

Kinne said the tests they gave the defendant were subjective and Belachheb could have lied or faked in order to seem insane at the time of the shootings.

Karlson reiterated his earlier testimony about an African ritual Belachheb said he imitated by burying an ax in his skull at the age of 10, rendering himself unconscious for eight months.

Panhandle auctions shut down until cash shortage explained

AMARILLO (AP) — Two Panhandle livestock auctions will stay shut down until investigators figure out what caused the cash shortages that may have cost ranchers as much as $1 million, an industry specialist says.

"We haven't got everything tracked down yet," said Bill Butler, a marketing specialist with the Packers and Stockyards Association of Fort Worth. "But the ranchers can be assured we are working to remedy the situation."

Butler said it will be several days before his investigators know why the Hereford Cattle Commission Co. and the Texhoma (Okla.) Livestock Commission Co. lost so much money that they had to suspend sales indefinitely.

Problems reportedly first were noticed last week when ranchers trying to cash sales checks found there were insufficient funds to cover the checks.

Butler said he could not cite a specific amount of money lost by ranchers, but said it was "definitely six figures, maybe as much as $1 million."

The two auctions, which are under the same ownership, announced the closings Tuesday. Butler said they will stay closed until investigators can determine what caused the cash shortages.

Jim Nichols, a field representative for the Texhoma auction, said he is confident the auction will reopen, but he added that it probably would be reorganized.

Nichols also told the Amarillo Globe-News that he is confident ranchers will get at least some of their money back.

Although the packers association has the authority to close down auctions, Butler said the Texhoma and Hereford closings were voluntary.

"I'm sure there are rumors out there that we closed them down, but they're just not true," Butler said. "People probably saw our investigators working in the area and figured the P&S had closed 'em down. The owners agreed something needed to be done, and we were happy to handle it that way."

Butler said the biggest task now facing his investigators is determining how much money has been lost and who is owed cash by the two commission companies.

The two auctions conduct a moderate amount of business, Butler said, selling between 3,000 and 4,000 head of cattle each a week. Because of the volume, Butler said it will be some time before he knows how many people are owed money.

Houston fails to make the grade in traffic safety

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston "has a failing grade in traffic safety," a situation that makes it the deadliest city for driving in the country, says the chairman of the Safety Council of Greater Houston.

Speaking at a forum Thursday to discuss traffic safety, officials with the safety council and the Texas Safety Association said that for the past six years Houston has been the nation's deadliest city in which to drive.

"Some people seem take a perverse glee...when they find out we are dead last," said Ron Starcher, safety council chairman. "We kill more of our fellow citizens in Houston than in cities of our size anywhere else in the country."

Although the rate of traffic deaths is declining in the nation's fourth largest city, officials said they were not hopeful legendary traffic congestion could be eased.

"Basically it's a problem of very rapid growth and traffic from that growth," said Richard Conley, director of the city's Traffic and Transportation Department. "Not only are there a lot more people and a lot more cars, but they're using the cars a lot more."

Houston averaged 20.3 deaths per 100,000 people in 1983, according to National Safety Council figures. Los Angeles was second with 13.8.

Two years ago, Houston averaged 26.1, including five fatalities for every 10,000 registered vehicles. Chicago was next at 2.3 per 10,000 vehicles. In 1983, Houston's rate of fatal accidents was 3.8

Pilot sues Customs Service after plane shot down

LAREDO (AP) — A lawsuit for $1.5 million has been filed against the U.S. Customs Service by a Laredo pilot who says his aircraft was shot down by Mexican authorities on a tip from the federal agency.

The lawsuit, filed in federal court in Brownsville, alleges that the Customs Service violated the constitutional rights of flight engineer Conrad Smith of McAllen and William E. Nelson, pilot and owner of the 1939 DC-3 lost in Mexico in August 1983.

Nelson alleges that U.S. officials illegally provided Mexican authorities with confidential information on the plane's cargo. It was the second time the pilot had been shot down in Mexico.

The suit states that Nelson filed required documents with Customs to transport a bonded load of electronic wiring from McAllen to a dashboard manufacturing plant in Torreon, Mexico.

In the suit, Nelson claims he was detained by Customs agents at McAllen's Miller International Airport until Mexican authorities could be notified and make plans for intercepting the flight.

"This has been going on for years, Mexicans shooting down American planes," Nelson said.

Customs officials have said they have an agreement with Mexican authorities to provide information on when shipments of electronics, illegal in Mexico, are to be flown south in exchange for information on drugs leaving Mexico for this country.

IRS employees simmering over coffee-pot order

AUSTIN (AP) — Some 1,000 Internal Revenue Service employees have signed a petition protesting an order to remove 120 coffee pots from the work area at the IRS center in Austin.

Bob Tobias, national president of the 125,000-member National Treasury Employees Union, says the order is a slap in the face to workers.

Tobias referred to a directive issued by William Grabo, who in January became director of the center, where some 2,200 employees process tax returns of taxpayers in five states.

"Instead of being told thank you for doing a good job, Mr. Grabo said take out your coffee pots. I think it's outrageous," Tobias said.

"One significant statistic is there have been 2,500 people who have been hired here since January and quit."

Grabo's order was effective Nov. 2, but now is scheduled to be implemented Tuesday, union officials said. They said they will file a complaint with the Federal Labor Relations Board if the coffee pots are removed.

Grabo's assistant, Jack Messbarger, referred questions to IRS public affairs officer Bob Branson.

"What we're saying is the contract the IRS signed with the union says that while something is under negotiation neither side can discuss it," Branson said. "Our position is it's still under negotiation."

Darla J. Pittman, president of the local chapter of the treasury union that represents 1,700 workers at the Austin center, said Grabo has refused to negotiate. She said coffee pots have been allowed in the service center for 17 years.

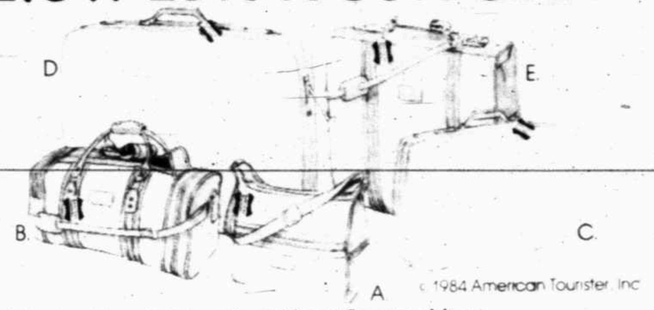

"Mr. Grabo said he didn't like the country club atmosphere," Ms. Pittman said. IRS management officials cited government regulations against electrical appliances plugged into non-grounded wall sockets.

But Ms. Pittman said the real problem has been relations with Grabo.

Tobias said the coffee dispute was the final straw in worsening relations between management of the center and employees, who have "abysmal morale" and are overworked.

"Working in a service center is extremely tense. The pressure to meet your work standards are immense. This service center has improved its productivity over the years," he said.

Activists put on probation for damaging computers

MINNEAPOLIS (AP) — Two peace activists damaged military computers at Sperry Corp. in a "desperate plea to the American government to stop military madness before it destroys humanity," said a judge who sentenced them to probation.

John LaForge, 28, and Barbara Katt, 26, faced up to 10 years in prison and $5,000 fines Thursday for hammering the computer Aug. 10 and dousing it with blood in the belief it was a missile guidance system.

U.S. District Judge Miles Lord said that in deciding how to handle sentencing, he chose "to take the sting out of the bomb and remove the halo over any device that can kill."

Time's libel trial to open

NEW YORK (AP) — A federal judge has paved the way for a trial next week of former Israeli Defense Minister Ariel Sharon's libel suit against Time magazine for an article on the massacre of Palestinian refugees by Lebanese Christians.

U.S. District Judge Abraham D. Sofaer on Thursday rejected Time's motion to dismiss the $50 million lawsuit and ordered both sides to begin preparing for the trial, which opens Tuesday.

Sharon says he was libeled in a Feb 21, 1983, article that said he discussed with Lebanese Christian leaders the need to seek revenge for the assassination of then President-elect Bashir Gemayel.

Boy charged in murder

TRAIL CREEK, Ind. (AP) — A 15-year-old boy has been charged with murdering his grandmother with a crossbow, then dismembering and freezing her body with the help of his mother, brother and a friend.

Authorities say John Witte, charged Thursday in the Jan. 5 death of Elaine Witte, 74, told them he was ordered by his mother to kill the elderly woman, who had learned her daughter-in-law was cashing her social security checks.

Marie Witte, 36, was charged with aiding and inducing murder, and charges of assisting a criminal were filed against Eric Witte, 18, and family friend Douglas Menkel, 22.

Woman may get benefits

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — The state Supreme Court says a woman who quit her job to move in with her fiance and their child could be eligible for unemployment benefits, but the ruling need not apply to all unmarried couples.

The court agreed Thursday with a lower court judge who overruled the state Unemployment Insurance Appeals Board's decision to deny benefits to Patricia MacGregor, who left the state with her daughter to live with her fiance.

"It is difficult to conceive of a more fundamental familial relationship than one which is created when two parents establish a home with their natural child," the high court said in an opinion by Justice Cruz Reynoso.

Candidates surfacing in search for education secretary

WASHINGTON (AP) — Education Secretary T.H. Bell is leaving the Cabinet with high praise from President Reagan and school leaders, while conservatives hope for a successor who will steer the department to the right.

Bell announced his resignation Thursday, the first member of Reagan's Cabinet to bow out after his first term.

"A four-year hitch is a long time," said Bell, who will turn 63 Sunday and who plans to return to Salt Lake City as a professor at the University of Utah and to attend to a family sod farm and other land interests.

Sen. Orrin Hatch, R-Utah, chairman of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, called Bell "the best education secretary we ever had. ...Ted Bell has been pro-excellence and pro-family. I believe we must make sure that this conservative policy direction remains on course."

Possible successors include John Silber, the outspoken president of Boston University; William J. Bennett, chairman of the National Endowment for the Humanities, and Donald J. Devine, director of the Office of Personnel Management.

Silber was unavailable for comment Thursday. Bennett, whose publicists used to describe him as a "leading" administration spokesman on education, declined comment, except to say, "I have not been eyeing it."

Devine, who has squared off against civil service unions over pay and pension reforms, said, "It would be an honor to serve in Ronald Reagan's Cabinet. If Ronald Reagan wants to, he'll ask me. He knows my record." Devine spent 13 years at the University of Maryland teaching political science.

Bell will head to Utah on Saturday, return to Washington after Thanksgiving, then leave office Dec. 31. Gary L. Jones, his undersecretary, will be acting secretary in Bell's absence.

It was Bell, a folksy, bantam ex-Marine and lifelong educator, who set up the National Commission on Excellence in Education that issued a widely acclaimed report in April 1983 warning of "a rising tide of mediocrity" in U.S. schools.

"We're involved in a real renaissance of American education. It's been a joy to be a part of that," Bell told a news conference.

Bell helped turn education from an albatross into an asset for Reagan.

He failed in one objective: carrying out Reagan's 1980 campaign promise to abolish the department, which Reagan aide Edwin Meese III once dismissed as "a ridiculous bureaucratic joke."

Instead, the department survived and, after initial budget cuts, actually grew: its current $17.9 billion budget is more than $3 billion higher than when Reagan took office.

The Republican Party quietly dropped the anti-Education Department language from the party platform this summer.

The new secretary will also have to try to make good on another Reagan promise: tuition tax credits for parents who send their children to private schools.

The president, in a letter released in Santa Barbara, Calif., expressed his "deep regret" at the resignation.

Education secretary T.H. Bell addresses a news conference at the Department of Education in Washington Thursday to announce he is resigning from the Reagan Cabinet. Bell, the first member of the president's cabinet to resign, will return to being a professor of school administration at the University of Utah.

Five Republicans battle to be Senate leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — It's "a very tough precinct," says Kansas Sen. Robert Dole, but he and four other Republicans are battling it out in a Senate leadership race newly scrambled by the election returns.

"I don't have the foggiest notion who's ahead," Dole said Thursday.

"I know I haven't got the commitments I need, but I am also confident no one else does either," said Sen. Richard Lugar of Indiana.

Dole, Lugar and Sens. Ted Stevens of Alaska, Pete V. Domenici of New Mexico and James A. McClure of Idaho are campaigning to succeed Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee as majority leader. Baker is retiring from the Senate and considering a run for the presidency in 1988.

The winner will be chosen in a closed party caucus Nov. 28.

Until Tuesday, it was uncertain whether the Republicans would be choosing a majority leader or a minority leader, as Democrats claimed an outside chance of regaining control of the Senate.

The election settled that, with the Republicans holding the advantage by a margin of 53-47.

"The important thing is that we still have a majority to lead," Dole said, responding to questions from the audience at an investors' forum.

The election also saw the defeat of GOP moderate Sen. Charles H. Percy of Illinois, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, creating a vacancy that could complicate Lugar's prospects.

Conservative Sen. Jesse Helms of North Carolina is in line to succeed Percy, but Helms promised voters during his re-election campaign that he would remain chairman of the Agriculture Committee instead. Conservatives would like him to change his mind, but he has not indicated he will.

In the order of seniority, Lugar follows Helms, but he would rather be majority leader. If Lugar became leader, Sen. Charles McC. Mathias of Maryland, one of the Senate's most liberal Republicans, would move into the top spot on Foreign Relations.

"If Helms announces beforehand that he will not take it, this would have an effect, because conservatives would not want Mathias," said an aide to a Republican senator who is not a candidate for leader.

Chilean dissidents go into hiding

WORLD

SANTIAGO, Chile (AP) — Chile's abrupt return to a state of siege is driving hundreds of dissidents into hiding and raising fears that the military regime will again resort to what one priest calls the "terrible practices" of the mid-1970s.

Leftist organizers have abandoned their party offices and homes to avoid arrest, according to priests in Santiago's slums, where many of the organizers live, and others are quietly burning literature that might offend the Gen. Augusto Pinochet's government.

University students defied the siege Thursday with two small demonstrations, and 63 of them were briefly detained. There were whispered rumors of a massive protest being planned against Pinochet.

The 90-day state of siege, declared by the president Tuesday to combat growing political unrest and violence, suspended judicial controls on his regime's emergency power to arrest and banish critics.

Thursday he broadened it to prohibit unauthorized gatherings, ban six opposition magazines and eliminate political reporting and commentary by the rest of Chile's news media.

The office of Solidarity, the Roman Catholic Church human rights agency in Santiago, reported at least 32 people have been seized by security agents since Tuesday night, without any word from the government on their whereabouts.

One of them, Renato Mella de Mazza, a young man under treatment for polio, was dragged from his home before dawn Wednesday by gunmen who forced his mother to sign a statement they would not allow her to read, according to her testimony to the rights agency.

Even before the latest state of siege, 20 people arrested this year had been held more than a week before police, without admitting their detention, set them free, Gonzalez said.

In two well-publicized cases recently, uniformed police held a 23-year-old leftist 51 days before his beheaded body turned up in a river, and a 50-year-old Christian Democrat activist died of internal bleeding after interrogation by the secret police.

The number of people arrested between January and September, not including those seized in groups during anti-government protests, rose to 842 from 479 in the same period in 1983, according to the human rights group. The number tortured, it said, rose to 64 from 60.

Such methods have stemmed neither the massive protests, led by a coalition or moderate and leftist groups, that began 18-months ago, nor a parallel rise of Marxist-led guerrilla attacks that have killed 20 police and military officers.

"We are going to have to maintain this curfew at least two to three months to get rid of these terrorists," Mario Arnello, a civilian presidential adviser, said in an interview. ".. .eventually we are going to wipe them out."

Rumors of a planned national protest Nov. 30 circulated through Santiago but opposition leaders said they knew nothing of it. Students at the University of Chile, where an anti-government slate last month won the first campus elections in 11 years, took the rumor as fact.

The new decrees against unauthorized gatherings and the media had a stunning effect on this highly literate country, which had begun to air its sharp political divisions just over a year ago under a limited liberalization.

"People are ready to resist, but they are waiting for instructions from their leaders," said the Rev. David Murphy, an English priest in a working class parish.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Legislator ejected for threatening former Zimbabwe prime minister

HARARE, Zimbabwe (AP) — A black deputy minister was ejected from the National Assembly after he threatened to hit former Prime Minister Ian Smith during a debate over an alleged racial slur by another white legislator.

Assembly Speaker Didymus Mutasa ordered out William Ndangana, deputy minister of defense for paramilitary training, after Ndangana, who is a legislator, raised his fists at Smith on Thursday.

Smith was Rhodesia's last prime minister before the former British colony became black-ruled Zimbabwe in 1980, His conservative alliance holds seven of the 20 seats reserved for white legislators in the 100-member assembly.

The row erupted during a debate over remarks by Des Chalmers, a legislator in Smith's alliance who allegedly said he hated "kaffirs," a derogatory word for blacks.

Chalmers allegedly made the remark to a foreign correspondent on a flight from Harare to London last month. The assembly speaker ordered Chalmers, who is still in Britain, to return and explain the situation.

Argentines strike for pay raises

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina (AP) — One-day strikes by workers seeking pay increases to offset inflation disrupted train traffic and bus service across Argentina.

President Raul Alfonsin's 11-month-old government has stood firm on its plan to give workers a pay increase, in stages during 1984, of 6 to 8 percent more than the inflation rate, which was 703 percent for the past 12 months.

Workers, including the transport union members who struck on Thursday, want much bigger raises, contending that the real value of their pay has been halved by inflation in the last eight years.

Gondoliers reject idea of plastic boats

Group wants to open gondola school

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Purists are trying to prevent what they consider a major insult to this city of canals — plastic gondolas.

Faced with that idea, the gondoliers' association is planning to open a special school early next year to teach young men how to make traditional gondolas from the eight different kinds of wood that are used. Only four gondola makers remain in Venice and three are in their 70s.

About 450 of the sleek, tapered black boats ply Venice's canals. Rich-voiced tenors, accompanied by accordions, sometimes step aboard for romantic nighttime serenades.

But while dozens of young men want to be gondoliers with their ribbon-lined straw hats and striped shirts, practically no one wants to spend the long, hard hours making the traditional boats.

"People have been talking about building plastic gondolas," says Roberto Suessberg, secretary of the Association for the Protection of the Gondola and the Gondolier.

But Suessberg said in an interview he and the gondoliers reject the idea: "It just wouldn't be a gondola. It would be something else."

Suessberg also cited technical factors, saying plastic would not provide the balance and stability needed for gondolas.

But he conceded: "There's no doubt it would be much easier to make them out of plastic."

Suessberg said gondola-making has reached crisis proportions, with a production of only about 12 a year and a demand for about 20.

Many boats in service also are in need of repair.

The gondoliers' association plans to open early next year aspecial school to teach gondola-making.

"We're opening a school so that the young people can learn the art of gondola construction," Suessberg said, adding that up to eight students are expected at the site on the island of Giudecca.

Gondolier Romolo Corvini, 52, said of the planned school: "I hope it works."

But he noted that hours of attention to detail and finishing are needed for the boats.

"It will be difficult to find young people who want to make that kind of sacrifice," he said.

Each gondola is about 35 feet long, and can hold about five passengers plus the gondolier at the single oar. The number in service is down from a high of 14,000 in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Corvini noted that many of today's gondolas have been seriously damaged by passing motorboats and small barges, and by the waves that smash the boats into the canal walls.

"Some gondoliers already have put plastic resin on the sides and bottoms of the boats for protection," he said. "But I don't think any of the gondoliers would actually go for the idea of gondolas constructed of plastic."

The gondolas remain one of the main tourist attractions with the hordes of visitors who visit Venice each year.

Retired gondolier Umberto Valesin said a West German craftsman already has made several plastic gondolas, but they aren't in use in Venice.

"Plastic? No, that's something that just wouldn't work in Venice," he said.

The boats themselves are filled with history. For example, the prongs of the familiar gray comb-like prows represent the various areas of the city. The blade-like shape at the very tip resembles the cap of authority once worn by the doges who governed the Most Serene Republic of Venice hundreds of years ago.

In Venice, Italy, the idea has been floating around to use plastic gondolas.

City ahead by fir piece

DALLAS (AP) — City officials, concerned that a shopping mall's Christmas tree would outshine the municipal tree, were relieved to learn that Dallas will come out on top — by a fir piece.

City officials learned Thursday that the Galleria mall is buying a Christmas tree 5 feet taller, packed with 20 times as many lights and scheduled to be erected three weeks earlier than the municipal tree.

Then Galleria officials admitted to fudging on a news release.

"I'm going to have to tell you something," said Galleria spokeswoman Barbara Womble. "This tree was not cut down in the forest. This is a 'faux' tree...F-A-U-X. That's a fancy word for artificial," she said.

Gondoliers reject idea of plastic boats

Group wants to open gondola school

VENICE, Italy (AP) — Purists are trying to prevent what they consider a major insult to this city of canals — plastic gondolas.

Faced with that idea, the gondoliers' association is planning to open a special school early next year to teach young men how to make traditional gondolas from the eight different kinds of wood that are used. Only four gondola makers remain in Venice and three are in their 70s.

About 450 of the sleek, tapered black boats ply Venice's canals. Rich-voiced tenors, accompanied by accordions, sometimes step aboard for romantic nighttime serenades.

But while dozens of young men want to be gondoliers with their ribbon-lined straw hats and striped shirts, practically no one wants to spend the long, hard hours making the traditional boats.

"People have been talking about building plastic gondolas," says Roberto Suessberg, secretary of the Association for the Protection of the Gondola and the Gondolier.

But Suessberg said in an interview he and the gondoliers reject the idea: "It just wouldn't be a gondola. It would be something else."

Suessberg also cited technical factors, saying plastic would not provide the balance and stability needed for gondolas.

But he conceded: "There's no doubt it would be much easier to make them out of plastic."

Suessberg said gondola-making has reached crisis proportions, with a production of only about 12 a year and a demand for about 20.

Many boats in service also are in need of repair.

The gondoliers' association plans to open early next year aspecial school to teach gondola-making.

"We're opening a school so that the young people can learn the art of gondola construction," Suessberg said, adding that up to eight students are expected at the site on the island of Giudecca.

Gondolier Romolo Corvini, 52, said of the planned school: "I hope it works."

But he noted that hours of attention to detail and finishing are needed for the boats.

"It will be difficult to find young people who want to make that kind of sacrifice," he said.

Each gondola is about 35 feet long, and can hold about five passengers plus the gondolier at the single oar. The number in service is down from a high of 14,000 in the 17th and 18th centuries.

Corvini noted that many of today's gondolas have been seriously damaged by passing motorboats and small barges, and by the waves that smash the boats into the canal walls.

"Some gondoliers already have put plastic resin on the sides and bottoms of the boats for protection," he said. "But I don't think any of the gondoliers would actually go for the idea of gondolas constructed of plastic."

The gondolas remain one of the main tourist attractions with the hordes of visitors who visit Venice each year.

Retired gondolier Umberto Valesin said a West German craftsman already has made several plastic gondolas, but they aren't in use in Venice.

"Plastic? No, that's something that just wouldn't work in Venice," he said.

The boats themselves are filled with history. For example, the prongs of the familiar gray comb-like prows represent the various areas of the city. The blade-like shape at the very tip resembles the cap of authority once worn by the doges who governed the Most Serene Republic of Venice hundreds of years ago.

In Venice, Italy, the idea has been floating around to use plastic gondolas.

City ahead by fir piece

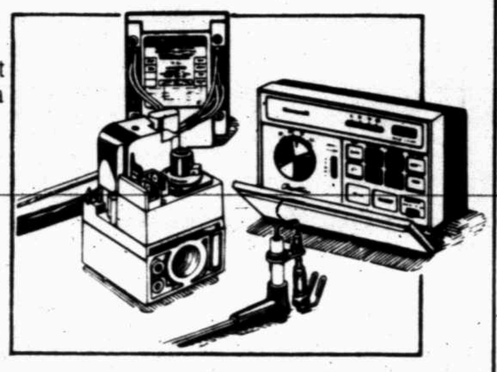

DALLAS (AP) — City officials, concerned that a shopping mall's Christmas tree would outshine the municipal tree, were relieved to learn that Dallas will come out on top — by a fir piece.

City officials learned Thursday that the Galleria mall is buying a Christmas tree 5 feet taller, packed with 20 times as many lights and scheduled to be erected three weeks earlier than the municipal tree.

Then Galleria officials admitted to fudging on a news release.

"I'm going to have to tell you something," said Galleria spokeswoman Barbara Womble. "This tree was not cut down in the forest. This is a 'faux' tree...F-A-U-X. That's a fancy word for artificial," she said.

Bye-bye blue law

The Texas blue law, the one that says a person can buy certain items on Saturday or Sunday but not others, was struck down late last week by a state district court judge who ruled it unconstitutional, unenforceable and "out of joint with the times."

There's no question that the ruling issued by District Judge Dee Brown Walker of Houston is reasonable. The blue law is unconstitutional on its face in that it was lobbied through the Texas Legislature 23 years ago in the interest of protecting local merchants from an onslaught by chain discount stores.

Blue laws can be traced to New Haven Colony in Connecticut where in the 1700s they were enforced as a means of regulating morality. There, certain types of recreation were prohibited on Sunday in the interest of protecting religious observances. When the blue law was enacted in Texas, though, the over-riding interest apparently was business, not religion.

Groups of merchants argued at that time that their small operations would be forced to work employees seven days a week in order to compete with the chain stores. That argument really doesn't hold up at a time of high unemployment when jobless workers can be hired to fill the void.

Besides, chain merchandisers are commonplace now and in most instances local retailers have survived. Local economies certainly have survived.

What resulted, though, was a situation in which the restrictions of the blue law, which prohibits the sale of 42 types of merchandise on consecutive Saturdays and Sundays, has been observed by some merchants and disregarded by most. In that respect it was a law that only applied to some of the people, which is unconstitutional.

Consequently, law enforcement officials have claimed for years that the blue law was not enforceable and Judge Walker affirmed that via his ruling.

There's an even more logical reason for casting aside the blue law, however. It simply isn't realistic in the 1980s. Today's fast-paced lifestyle demands availability of all merchandise day-in and day-out, around the clock. Such retailing isn't allowed under the archaic blue law.

The law was ill-advised in the first place and surely doesn't fit the times, as the judge noted. On the morality issue, well, as the old saying asserts, morality can't be legislated.

Another View:

Reagan's victory

Congratulations to President Reagan on his re-election victory. All Americans should wish him well in his second term, for there is much to be done to move the nation safely forward in a volatile and changing world.

Thanks to Walter F. Mondale for waging a valiant campaign against heavy odds. Mondale made decency a byword of his campaign, and he lived up to that standard to the end.

Tuesday's election returns will be dissected and interpreted for months. But the magnitude of Reagan's victory leads to some obvious conclusions.

First, there is no doubting the president's personal popularity. To the final day of his last campaign for public office, Reagan demonstrated the ability to package complex issues into simple, consistent themes. The campaign was short on details, but long on impressions and symbolism. Fair enough. Symbolism has always been a legitimate ingredient of election campaigns, whether transmitted through the crude, printed broadsides of the 19th Century or the slick television images of the 20th.

Second, Reagan has provided the nation with continuity of leadership when the mood of the country seemed to desire that. There is serious argument about the direction of his leadership on specific subjects, but it is obvious that the thrust of his administration is satisfactory to a solid majority of voters.

Finally, the president was effective in making the economic recovery a strong issue in his behalf, even though the nation had to suffer through a severe recession to get there. Enough voters felt good enough about their own economic well-being to trust Reagan with another four years.

It would be a mistake, however, for the second Reagan administration to settle for the status quo. The United States will benefit if the administration launches its second term on a vigorous note with aggressive, consensus programs to reduce the federal budget deficit, bring down interest rates, develop a fair tax system and pursue arms control on the basis of realism, not rhetoric.

The president could inaugurate an era of good will in the United States by remembering those who did not share in the prosperity of his first administration. His supporters cheered when he promised that "you ain't seen nothing yet." But that phrase must have sent shivers through slums and barrios. It was reassuring to hear the words social justice from the Mondale campaign. Social justice should always be a priority of the national agenda, not just one side of an election campaign or a trickle-down byproduct of economic elitism.

The massive vote for Reagan carries with it a particular responsibility to nourish the rights and needs of America's minorities — racial, religious and economic.

Republicans certainly should savor their victory. But they could remember, as well, the words of John F. Kennedy in his inaugural address: "If a free society cannot help the many who are poor, it cannot save the few who are rich."

JACK ANDERSON

Trio suppressed critical report

WASHINGTON — A year ago, three members of Congress put on their white hats and charged forth in defense of the public's right to know how an industry lobbyist got his hands on a confidential government report that criticized his client.

Jack Anderson

The congressmen asked the House Ethics Committee staff to investigate, and it did. But apparently the investigation revealed more about the inner workings of the House than the three members wanted to know. So by an informal agreement, the trio suppressed the embarrassing 15-page report for the past five months.

But my associate Tony Capaccio has had a peek at the suppressed June 7 report. Here are the details of the quest that turned into a cover-up:

Hugh Coffman, an aide to Rep. Robert Walker, R-Pa., told his boss about a year ago that he had mistakenly given a confidential March 1983 Food and Drug Administration task-force report on the painkiller Oraflex to William Turenne, a lobbyist for Eli Lilly, the maker of Oraflex.

Coffman explained that he hadn't noticed the "confidential" classification because it was on an inside page.

The FDA report charges that Lilly failed to divulge 32 deaths related to Oraflex prior to its FDA approval in 1982. A grand jury in Indianapolis is currently investigating the accusations, and the FDA report given to Lilly is a virtual outline of the government's case.

In fact, another FDA analysis said the report contained information "that could, if used improperly, compromise the government's investigation and prejudice any litigation which might result."

Walker is a member of the Government Operations Committee, which was also investigating the FDA's handling of the Oraflex matter. He joined the committee chairman, Rep. Jack Brooks, D-Texas, and the ranking minority member, Rep. Frank Horton, R-N.Y., in asking for an Ethics Committee staff investigation.

The staff learned that on Oct. 13 or 14, Karen Johnson, an aide to Rep. Edolphus Towns, D-N.Y., had given eight pages of a draft committee report to Steven Conafy, a lobbyist for Pfizer Inc. Conafy obligingly passed the eight pages along to his competitor at Lilly.

When Lilly officials in Indianapolis scrutinized the leaked excerpt, they spotted three footnote references to the FDA report on Oraflex, which until then they hadn't known existed. They ordered their man in Washington to get hold of a copy, in hopes they could "mitigate damages" and "soften any attacks on Lilly" in the committee's final report, according to the Ethics investigators.

Turenne and Lilly Vice President Edgar Davis began combing Capitol Hill for a copy of the FDA report, and eventually arrived at Coffman's door. Not realizing it was confidential, Coffman, over lunch, lent Turenne the FDA report for an afternoon — more than time enough for the lobbyist to run off 30 copies before returning the original.

Meanwhile, in conversation with an FDA official that same afternoon, Coffman learned that the report should not have been released. After he told his boss about the error, Coffman notified Lilly and demanded all the copies Turenne had made.

"Lilly responded promptly, returning all copies of the report," said a company spokesman. "Lilly kept no notes."

But the Ethics Committee staff concluded that when Rep. Raymond McGrath, R-N.Y., appended his "Additional Views" to the committee's final report, material drafted by Lilly "formed a substantial basis of the congressman's printed words." And "it appeared Lilly used information in its review of the FDA task-force report in preparing the drafts."

The Ethics Committee staff's suppressed report cites the two legislative aides, Coffman and Ms. Johnson, for "inadvertent error, bad judgment or a combination of both" for giving confidential material to the lobbyists.

STRICTLY PERSONAL: One of the risks that goes with a bureaucrat's job in Washington is that his past may come back to haunt him in a way that could not have been predicted by the most paranoid pencil-pusher.

He writes a critical memo, say, and the people he names lie in wait, nursing their grudges and sharpening their knives, and — zap! Years later they let him have it.

It appears that in David Sussman's case, the time lag between offense and retribution was six years. As I reported in 1975, Sussman, a career employee of the Environmental Protection Agency, wrote an internal memo criticizing EPA's relationship with an outfit called the National Center for Resource Recovery. It was headed by Dr. Richard Lesher and Harvey Alter.

EVANS & NOVAK

Unbalanced victory sets conflict

WASHINGTON — On the morning after, melancholy Republican House members across the country agreed over long-distance telephone that Ronald Reagan faces a choice of historic proportions: to fight or embrace Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill.

The euphoria of Reagan-Bush operatives over the 49-state landslide was matched by the gloom among congressional Republicans. A maximum gain of 16 seats, short of expectations and not close to a working majority, means the president cannot replicate his 1981 Boll Weevil coalition. The difficulty of a hostile House is aggravated by a Senate now less Republican and more liberal.

Rowland Evans

Robert Novak

To conservative Republicans in Congress, the president's choice is clear. He can build what budget director David Stockman has called a "grand coalition" in seeking a deficit-reduction compromise with O'Neill's Democratic leadership. Or he can go to the country and use his 59 percent national base to sell his tax reform.

It seems certain that reform proposals, including tax-rate reductions balanced by closed tax shelters, will be sent to the new Congress quickly. Treasury Secretary Donald T. Regan has put his bureaucrats on forced draft to get a plan to the White House near the Dec. 1 deadline. The president's men agree there is no time to lose in riding the second-term tidal wave.

But the White House has not focused on the two irreconcilable strategy options. To conciliate Tip would antagonize the Republican Party's new activists, who want to realign the nation politically along Reaganite ideals. To confront Tip would antagonize the Democratic establishment on Capitol Hill and ensure open warfare in Washington. To vacillate would enrage both groups.

Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, a former history professor turned conservative firebrand, has cast Reagan's choice in historical terms: The president can play Theodore Roosevelt, the reformer, or William Howard Taft, the anti-reformer. By Gingrich's reading, Taft's disdain for Republican reformers in Congress wrecked the party in 1912.

Talk of party-wrecking in the wake of Reagan's landslide is premature, but stresses have appeared between Capitol Hill and the president's men. One Reagan political strategist, ecstatic over the waxing of Walter Mondale, would have none of it when we suggested Tuesday was no great day for other Republicans. "I'm only interested in my client," he snapped.

A leading House Republican was infuriated Wednesday when he heard Ed Rollins, the president's campaign manager, saying over television that an apparent House GOP pickup of 16 seats was on the "high side" of Reagan-Bush goals. The downcast congressman, along with many colleagues, had been hoping for twice that amount.

While the Reagan operation concentrated on a 50-state sweep, House Republicans thought realignment. Conservative House Democrats had kept Republicans aware of private discussions about dumping O'Neill as speaker and replacing him with a fellow Boll Weevil. Since the speaker need not be a member, former representative Joe Waggoner of Louisiana was suggested, to avoid pressure on any incumbent Democrat. To elect him would have required a bare minimum of 32 new Republican seats.

Such a figure never appeared in the wildest dreams of the president's men. What nobody ever will know is whether it would have come within reach had Reagan-Bush strategists not waited until eight days before the election and instead integrated support for congressional candidates into the popular president's campaign from the beginning.

Having refused either to embrace the Republican platform's tax proposals or advance their own, the president's men now must hurriedly study the Treasury's draft and distill from it a politically viable plan. That's the easy part. The hard part is to pass it.

Reaganauts see no way other than the Great Communicator going to the nation as never before to pit his own philosophy against Tip O'Neill's. Tom Ellis, the shrewd Raleigh, N.C., lawyer who was architect of Sen. Jesse Helms' re-election, has renewed a four-year effort for Reagan to expound his philosophy in half-hour televised fireside chats.

But confrontation is not the style of James A. Baker III, the president's chief of staff. When all else failed, Baker went into negotiations with the opposition to pass the 1982 tax increase. If he follows the same course in 1985 after the president's program collides with O'Neill's Democrats, a major schism in the Republican Party may be unavoidable. That is why the phenomenon of an unbalanced Republican victory, though similar to 1956 and 1972, this time threatens the party.

CHARLEY REESE

Propaganda mechanism damaging

Indira Gandhi's body had hardly hit the ground full of assassin's bullets before the Soviet Union's propaganda apparatus began to blame her murder on the United States.

Charley Reese

The Central Intelligence Agency estimates that the Soviet Union spends around $3 billion annually on propaganda. The CIA says this estimate is probably on the low side.

James L. Tyson, aughor of a book, "Target America," estimates that the Soviets spend at lease $250,000 inside the United Sttes supporting its propaganda efforts here which are directed at the American people.

The goal of Soviet propaganda is to obtain three objectives: (1) to put the Soviet Union nd its policies in the most favorable light; (2) to discredit the United States; and (3) to sow distrust among Americans of their own institutions and leaders.

The Soviets work primarily through what are called in the spook trade agents of influence — native Americans whose job is not espionage but merely propaganda. A few years ago a KGB agent assigned to japan defected and identified the agents of influence in that country for whomhe was responsible. They were all prominent Japanese.

You can see the hidden hand of the Soviet KGB directed against Americcan policy in Central America. There are endless efforts to discredit anti-Communists in El Salvador and the Nicaraguan contras not to mention, of course, the CIA and the President.

These attacks do not surface directly from the Soviet Union but they come from American organizations, like the Institute for Policy Studies, and the North Americqn Congress on Latin America.

It is not necessary to prove a case in order for propaganda to be effective. It is sufficient to raise doubts or to create controversy. If you will just pause and think back over the last 20 years, you will note tht not one single anti-communist organization and not one single American policy directed at communism has escaped from becoming "controversial."

Another good recent example of how this system works occurred near the anniversary of the destruction of a South Korean passenger plane by the Soviets. In a left wing British magazine and later in an American leftwing agazine two separate stories appeared alleging that the United Staates had deliberately sent the plane into Soviet airspace on an intelligence mission.

That was the official Soviet Union party line at the time of the incident. It is a baseless charge, but if you repeat a lie often enough q certain percentage of thepeople will believe it.

What makes this sort of thing effective is tht major news media often pick up the story frm the leftwing publications. Neither story offered any proof — just allegations and innuendo — but as one of my own colleagues put it, "It certainly raises questions." Of course it does. That is exactly its purpose.

Communists and ther allies have succeeded in dismantling all of the government agencies able to investigate communist propaganda inside the United States. It is not included in the FBI charter and, of course, the CIA is forbidden any domestic investigations. Both of the House and Senate committees which used to do that sort of thing were abolished.

Anyone who suggests that communist propaganda inside the United States is a proper object of investigation is immediately braded with that most effective of all propaganda words, "McCarthyism."

Nevertheless a nation which allows its enemy to operate a fifth column is, as the old redneck expression puts it, "cruising for a bruising."

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Friday, Nov. 9, the 314th day of 1984. There are 52 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On Nov. 9, 1965, most of the northeastern United States and parts of Canada were crippled by a massive blackout that lasted anywhere from 40 minutes to 13½ hours, depending on the area affected.

On this date:

I 1872, fire destroyed nearly 1,000 buildings in Boston.

In 1918, Germany's Kaiser W ilhelm II announced he would abdicate, then fled to the Netherlands.

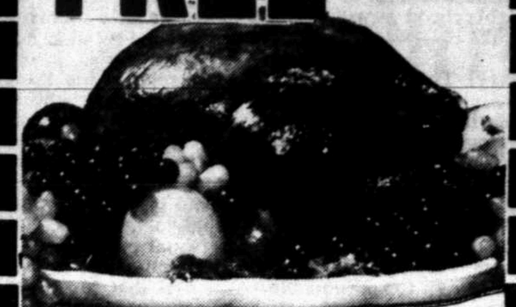

In 1938, bands of Nazis roamed the streets of Germany, looting and burning synagogues as well as Jewish-owned stores and houses. The night of destruction became known as "Crystal Night" because the streets were littered with broken glass.

Modern relationships make things hard for poets, novelists

By HUGH A. MULLIGAN
Associated Press
Special Correspondent

NEW YORK — The classified ad in the personals column of a Manhattan neighborhood newspaper — and many like it — was a cry from where?

The heart? The psyche? The libido?

"Witty, caring, secure, muscular male seeks meaningful, open relationship without commitment with cultured, fun-loving, affectionate, non-smoking female who enjoys adventurous dining, wilderness walks, old James Cagney flicks, Giants games, cool jazz and quiet evenings. 30 to 40 tops. Send bio, photo, phone."

The meeting and no doubt non-committal mating of Ms. Wonderful and Mr. Right, after phone contact is made and bios and photos exchanged, adds up to what is now known by that curious word "relationship."

Less sordid than an affair, less legalistic than a common law marriage, more boring than a tryst, a relationship in modern terminology, as defined in clinically explicit detail in article after article in the new wave of women's magazines, connotes almost the opposite of the original word.

Relationship, according to the Oxford English Dictionary, used to mean "the state of being related; a condition or character based upon this; kinship."

In today's trendy usage, however, when warm, bright, attractive, totally terrific tennis enthusiast seeks out slim, worldly, successful, outrageously romantic, gourmet cook, the meaning and the object of the relationship is anything but kinship.

Modern relationships make life terribly difficult and meaningless for the poets, the songsmiths in Tip Pan Alley and the novelists.

Woods' Unabridged Rhyming dictionary lists no rhymes for relationship, which is why this word substitute for love or lack of it has resulted in such little creationship.

John Bartlett's Familiar Quotations, the centennial edition not the recently revised debauch of our culture's treasure trove of epigrams, offers only three references under relationship.

One is from Joseph Conrad and involves the chaste relationship between an author and his works.

The second is from Havelock Ellis, a pioneer in the field of advice to the lovelorn or, as we say nowadays, the relationshiplorn. "A life is beautiful or the reverse," Ellis says, "only when we have taken into our consideration the social as well as the family relationship." In other words, is your relationship the type of non-future relative who can relate to Mom and whom you can trust not to relate too meaningfully with Dad?

Lastly, there is Jan Struther's "Mrs. Miniver," who as Ms. Miniver would have made a dandy daytime soap, going on about seeing "every personal relationship as a pair of intersecting circles" and bemoaning the fact that "on paper there must be some neat mathematical formula for arriving at this; in life none."

In the marketplace, as well as in the poets' corner, relationships just don't generate much relativity.

Where would D.H. Lawrence and his publisher, William Heinemann Ltd., have gone with a novel entitled "Lady Chatterley's Relationship"?

Would TV's "Love Boat" still top the viewership ratings under its more accurate title "The Relationship Ship?" Romance aboard that banal and bilious barge seldom seems to lead to permanent commitment.

Luckily for her and for us, Elizabeth Barrett Browning's delicate health provided merciful release before our fickle common language forced her to wander about the canals of Venice in her gondola mooning:

"How do I relate to thee,
Let me think...,
I went over this just yesterday with my shrink.
I relate to thee from the breadth and depth of my hot tub,
From the squish and surge of our waterbed,
From the dawn's double beat of our jogging shoes
On our well adjusted, non-committed path through life."

And think of William Wordsworth wandering lonely as a cloud through the Lake District exclaiming:

"She was a phantom of delight,
My relationship, the othernight,
A dancing shape, my heart did stop,
An ornament to our shared co-op."

What of Edgar Allan Poe and his beautiful Annabel Lee?

"I was a WASP and she was my squeeze,
In that condo by the sea.
But ours was a relationship that was more than a relationship,
I and my Annabel Lee.
For this maid she lived with no other thought
Than to time share my jaccuzzi."

One can hear tragic Lord Byron pining:

"Maid of Athens,
Ere we part,
Give, O give me back
My Cuisinart."

The phyche rips apart and the center will not hold to contemplate William Butler Yeats conjuring up a mod relationship in the Celtic Twilight:

"Down by the Sally Gardens,
My relationship and I did meet.
We rented a cozy pied aterre
In a chic West Village Street.
TV'S Donahue dictated her lifestyle,
Other seers urged marital scope,
But I was young and foolish
And washed out with a daytime soap."

Finlly, Leigh Hunt, that most delicate of all Victorians faced with an indelicate relationship:

"Jenny related when we met,
Turning from her steaming wok pot,
Time, you nerd, who love to put creeps into your list,
Forget that not.
Say I'm boring, say I've been had,
Say tha. other friendships grated,
Say I had a facelift, only add:
Jenny and I related."

Tex-Mex is hybrid language

LAREDO (AP) — Although English is our major language, it is not always the language most often heard in Laredo. After all, this is a border city with a large population of bilingual Mexican-Americans, and that is bound to affect the dialect.

Around this city you hear familiar American-style English and pure Spanish. But just as often you hear another "language" on both sides of the Rio Grande.

As most people who live there know, the language spoken along the border is often a kind of hybrid, neither Spanish nor English, but rather, an offspring of the two — most commonly referred to as Tex-Mex.

Dr. Saul Sanchez, who teaches in Laredo Junior College's foreign language department and holds a Ph.D. in Romance languages, says that "Tex-Mex" is a catch-all term for a specific kind of linguistic interference.

"It implys a mixture of two languages at the phonological level (word pronuciations), the morphological level (internal structure of a word), and the syntactical level (word order in sentence)," he said. "Anybody who combines Spanish and English in any way and then switches back and forth between the two, unconsciously is speaking Tex-Mex.

Sanchez said that this phenomenon of linguistic interference does not occur only along this border.

"It is an intercultural predetermined phenomenon that occurs worldwide," said Sanchez. "Whenever people speak two languages, then you find words that are a combination of both."

Linguistic interference is considered pre-determined because it always occurs in the same ways, he said.

Sanchez said one type of word modification occurs when English and Spanish words are morphologically and phonologically altered.

For instance, you often hear Tex-Mex words made up of an English root verb with a Spanish suffix and a Spanish pronunciation. When you play baseball in Laredo, you generally have a "coache" to tell you how to use a "bate," and how to hit a "jon ron."

Words such as cherife (sheriff) and coloriar (to paint or color) are called "mosdismos." They are unconventional Spanish words that, although not offically accepted as correct, are commonly used by many people.

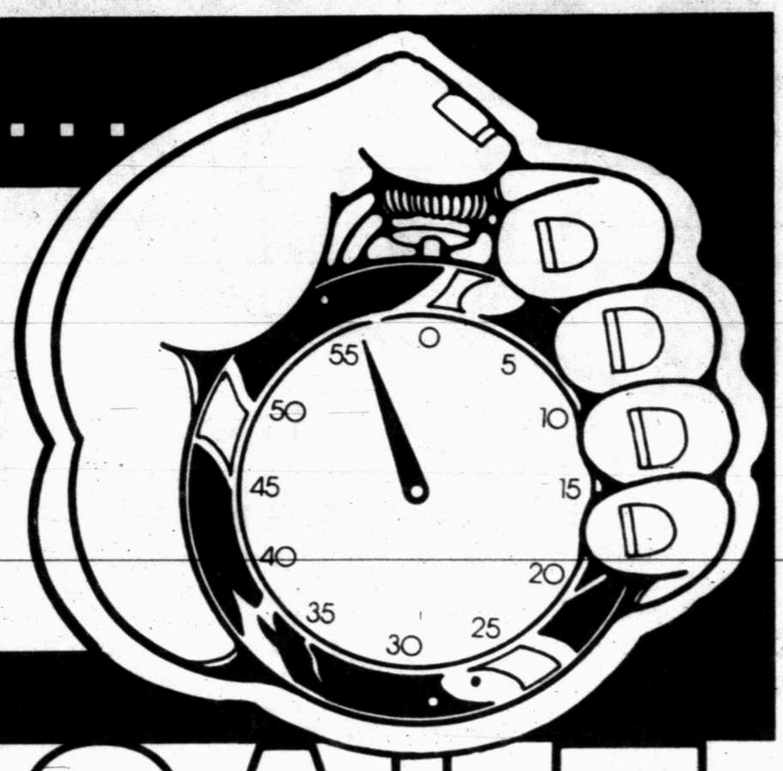

"Pochismos" also are used by people along the border. They are terms or expressions that are generally restricted to certain age groups.

Some examples of pochismos are "ya merito" which means "almost," "luego, luego" which means "right away," "a todo dar" which means "it's OK," "al otro lado" which refers to Mexico.

Besides morphological and phonological changes, changes in syntax also occur in Tex-Mex, Sanchez said.

"When people say things like 'Son las eleven,' then that also is Tex-Mex because it involves a mixing of languages in the syntax, or sentence structure," he said.

Bulldogs, Rebels square off for 24th time

MHS eyes bragging rights

By BOB BRUNDAGE
Sports Writer

No matter what the Midland High Bulldogs do tonight, on Saturday they start packing away their football gear.

No matter what the Midland Lee Rebels do tonight, the only packing they will be doing is for next Friday's trip to Lubbock's Jones Stadium where they will meet Plainview in the bi-district playoffs.

So, as far as the playoffs are concerned it makes no difference who wins and who loses. Everything has already been decided. And, it doesn't leave much more than city pride for the Bulldogs to play for at 8 p.m. tonight at Memorial Stadium.

"Looking at it realistically, the game means the same to both of us," said MHS head coach Doug McCutchen. "Lee is already in the playoffs and can't win the championship. We're out of it. That brings the game down to two things, the city championship and bragging rights. Of course, Lee would like to win the game for the momentum going into the playoffs and we'd like to win it for a winning season."

AS IT stands, Midland High can finish no worse overall than .500. The Bulldogs are 5-4 going into the Lee game. In district play, however, the best Midland High can finish is 3-4 and that would take an outstanding effort on the Bulldogs' part considering the way Lee has been playing and the way recent history has gone.

In the 23 previous meetings between the two schools, the trend has been heavily in favor of the Rebels. In 1974 and '75, MHS and Lee played to 7-7 and 14-14 ties. Since then, the only interruption in Lee's winning streak was in 1982 when the Bulldogs kept the Rebels from the playoffs with a 14-6 upset victory. The series stands in Lee's favor, 12-9-2.

Since facing the meet of their schedule, the Rebels have shown the ability to win but seem to have problems keeping intensity on the field. Even so, McCutchen is convinced "Lee is still dangerous. I don't think they have let up.

"If Tyrone Thurman (halfback) touches the ball he's a threat to break it. If Walter Jones (halfback) touches the ball, he's a threat to break it. If Randy Ellis (fullback) touches the ball, he's a threat to break it. If we try and stop those three and let Dirk Bergoon (quarterback) carry the ball, he can pick up big yardage."

With the four threats, "I think Lee has the best backfield in the district," said McCutchen. "To me, Lee is more of an offensive threat than Permian (a 50-35 winner over MHS last week). Permian is more of a control type team where Lee has the big play threat. Lee is dangerous everywhere on offense. On kickoffs and punts, Thurman is back there. We'll have to control the ball, keep our offense on the field."

WHILE THE Rebels have the big running threat the Bulldogs have to stop, Midland High will probably be going to the air. Quarterback Matt Marcum has been back in the lineup for two weeks and his receivers — Tight end Darrell Davis, flanker Allan Foret, split ends Darren Thorpe and Tim Hickey and halfbacks Jake Madrid and Keith Byrd — have been catching the ball better in recent games than in the early part of the season.

When Midland Lee takes to the field against the Midland High Bulldogs at 8 p.m. today at Memorial Stadium, the Rebels will be looking to become one of the most successful regular season teams in the school's history.

A win tonight would give Lee a 9-1 record, a mark that has been equaled only once in the school's 24 years of play. Lee's 1976 team had a 9-1 mark going into the playoffs.

But that is the incentive out of the way. There is also a drawback. No matter what happens tonight, Lee owns District 4-5A's second place playoff berth and will vault into the state playoffs next Friday night at 8 p.m. against Plainview in Lubbock's Jones Stadium.

THAT FACT alone could keep Lee's collective mind pointing to next week, knowing that they don't have to win tonight.

Lee coach Jack Tayrien is aware of the situation and is concerned about it.

"Our kids are really excited about the playoffs. More so than I thought they would be," said Tayrien. "They are thrilled at being back in the playoffs, but we must play well to beat Midland High.

"Midland High has some great individuals. Darrell Davis is a man among kids out there. What more can you say about him. Our kids better realize that there is a football game tonight or we will have our hands full."

Lee is also in the position of asking if they should add any new wrinkles for this one or should they save new things for the playoffs? After all, Plainview's season is over and those Bulldogs are open tonight, meaning that the Plainview coaching staff will be here personally to see the Rebels play.

But Tayrien says Midland High is the team Lee plays this week and that is his major concern.

"We're going to try and win the game tonight. If we don't win, I hope that Midland High feels like they've been in a battle," says Tayrien. "This should be a big game for us because only one other Lee team finished the season with a 9-1 record and I think that is something to shoot for."

THE REBELS also may be tempted to call off its front line early in the game to avoid injuries for the upcoming playoffs. But last week's Permian-MHS game may have taken care of that idea.

"You saw what happened last week when Permian pulled off the Bulldogs. They can score on you in a hurry. It would be dangerous to pull off too soon. I'd like to be in that position to decide, but I feel like we're in for a tough game as it is."

Physically, Lee is in pretty good shape for tonight's game, but defensive tackle John Wurster, the 250-pound stalwart, is still out with ligament damage around the knee.

The hopes of Lee getting its second straight back over the 1,000 yard mark in rushing during regular season play is slim. Fullback Issac Garnett became Lee's first 1,000-yard rusher last year in the eighth game of the season.

Lee's Walter Jones, who had over 1,100 yards rushing last year in 16 games, has only 764 yards this season and would need a 236 yard effort tonight.

Chaps survive tourney's first round

Midland College tips off against Garden City at 7 p.m. today in the Langford Chaparral Center while Howard College faces Odessa College at 9 p.m. in the other semifinal of the three-day tournament.

The Chaps, hitting from outside midway through the final half, pulled away to a 73-62 win over Grayson County while Garden City overcame a 39-33 halftime deficit to defeat Cisco.

Odessa College dropped Barton County, Kan., into the losers bracket with a 64-60 come-from-behind victory and Howard College of Big Spring, although outnumbered 15-7, had the easy task of the opening round, beating Weatherford Junior College, 109-81.

In today's afternoon games, it was Barton and Weatherford at 3 p.m. and Grayson and Cisco at 5 p.m.

Midland College had its hands full with Grayson in a tenacious defensive struggle that finally began to tip the Chaparrals' way when MC began hitting from outside, something they had trouble doing a year ago.

It was 44-41 Midland when 6-4 Lawrence Chumbley hit a couple of shots from under the rim and then 5-9 Deon Hunter and 6-2 Wayne Sam popped a couple of longies to give Midland a 52-43 advantage just past the 10 minute mark. The Vikings narrowed it to 60-57 with 3:32 left, but the Chaps ran off seven straight points. Chumbley converted a free throw, 6-9 Teviin Binns stuffed a rebound, Vernon Coleman converted a couple of free throws and Zeak Williams soloed off a midcourt stral.

Binns was the game-high scorer for Midland with 22 points, but the perimeter marksmanship of Chuckie Graves and Sam, 10 each, plus Hunter, eight, opened things up inside in the second half.

"We really haven't been shooting all that well," said Coach Jerry Stone, "They have been concentrating on learning the system and I've been trying to remembers names. Maybe that's why we were a little tentative the first half."

"When I get my speed in there, we are really short. We need a 6-4 or 6-5 like Puntus Wilson to get us the ball off the backboard so we can go."

OC, LED by Mark Benoit's 23 points, bounced back from a huge first half defiicit to win this one for former MC assistant Archie Myers. Benoit was a real spark for the Wranglers with eight steals. Maurice Smith with 16 and Andre Harris with 13 paces Barton.

Keith Smart scored 19 and Terrance Ingram 16 in Garden City's win.

Howard showed up with only seven players to 15 for Weatherford, but the Coyotes couldn't keep up with the Hawks. Seven minutes into the final half, HC held a three-point lead, but with 10 minutes left Howard's lead was 76-62 and growing.

Sophomore Michael Porter led HC with 30 points, but all of the Hawks were in double figures and six were over 20. Leonard Jackson had 18 for Weatherford.

TERRY WILLIAMSON

Pearce, Thorpe on hot seat

How would you like to be in the shoes of Herb Pearce or Paul Thorpe tonight?

Thorpe is the president of the Midland High Booster Club. Pearce owns that position over at Lee. They will be on the hot seat tonight when the two teams close out regular season play at Memorial Stadium.

Barring a tie game (and it has happened twice in the 23 previous games between the two schools), one of those men will be a real loser.

Come next Tuesday, the loser will have to trek to the other school's booster club meeting and present the city championship trophy. The trophy stays on display in Gil Bartosh's office at Memorial Stadium and with it comes bragging rights for a year.

SO, IF you see one of them on the sideline with headphones on, you know that the pressure was just too much. Both may want to call some of their own plays tonight. After all, both have a lot at stake.

In fact, there is more at stake for Pearce and Thorpe than there is for Lee head coach Jack Tayrien and MHS boss Doug McCutchen. Anyone with any sense of football knowledge recognize what these two coaches have done for Midland football in 1984.

Tayrien has given Lee another playoff boost. Who could ask for more than that? McCutchen has taken a team that was predicted for no better than a 4-6 finish and will finish at least 5-5 even with a loss tonight. If McCutchen could take two plays out of his season, his Bulldogs would be 7-2 and playing Lee tonight for a playoff berth.

The two coaches have made heads turn in Midland this year. They eat together every Friday when possible.

Tayrien reports that he called Doug this week to see if they would eat together this Friday since the two schools were playing each other. "Doug told me that he didn't see why there would be any reason not to do it."

McCutchen said, "We'll probably turn a few heads in Midland when we do."

So, for the last time, this week's picks in District 4-5A.

Midland Lee 21, Midland High 13: It's news I hate to break on Thorpe prior to the game, but the Rebels are just too strong in this 24th meeting of the two schools.

Odessa Permian 27, Odessa High 14: Anyone who thinks Jerry Millsapps' Bronchos won't test old Mojo is dead wrong. This is the best 1-5 team this district has seen in a long time.

Abilene High 17, Abilene Cooper 12: This is the upset special of the week. I think Abilene High is the most underrated team in the league. They play awesome defense and that will be enough to beat Cooper. The Eagles should have beaten San Angelo, took Lee to the wire and came from behind to beat both Midland High and Odessa High. Abilene High is not far from thinking playoffs.

San Angelo 45, Big Spring 6: Now that the Bobcats are out of it, they will roll. San Angelo is a team that had real playoff hopes in 1984 and they have to be a little frustrated as the season ends.

Davidson joins Midland Angels

By TED BATTLES
Sports Editor

If someone passing himself off as "Bill Davidson of the Midland Angels" approaches with an offer that seems too good to turn down, don't report him to the Better Business Bureau as a phoney and fraud.

The California Angels have replaced the Chicago Cubs as Midland's parent club in the Texas League so there really is a Midland Angels, and Davidson, 25, is the club's new assistant general manager.

IN FACT, Davidson began his duties Nov. 1 and the Cleveland, Ohio, native was introduced to the media by co-owner and general manager Bernard Lankford at a press conference at Green Tree Country Club Thursday.

In 1984, Davidson was business manager of the Class AAA American Association Wichita Aeros, the top farm club of the Cincinnati Reds. Previously, he had been on the staff of the American Association Oklahoma City 89ers (Texas Rangers).

Davidson's job was literally sold out from under him at the conclusion of the 1984 season. "A Buffalo group bought the club and moved it to the New York city, where it will be a member of the American Association. It's one of the steps Buffalo hopes will eventually lead to major league ball. They've already had teams in Class A and AA ball and this is the next step."

DAVIDSON IS a graduate of Purdue University with a degree in business administration and has a masters in Sports Administration from Wichita State University. WSU is one of a handful of colleges with sports administrative programs in the U.S.

"The key to the training is on-job internship," says Davidson. "About of the third of the credit comes in on-the-job training."

Davidson dealt with the budget, bills and business aspects of the game at Wichita while in Midland he will have promotional and public relations responsibilities.

As Lankford puts it, "He'll be doing most of the work."

"I'll be working in advertising and promotions and with the major league club in terms of player movements," says Davidson.

"Basically, my job will be to put people in the park with clinics, pack-the-park nights and special promotions like the San Diego Chicken. With good entertainment and good value, we hope to have fans knocking down the doors to get into the park. Once in the park, it's up to us."

DAVIDSON FEELS the California Angels organization will help make that job easier. "Last year the Angels had six minor league clubs and they all made the playoffs."

Davidson and Lankford crossed paths at a baseball seminar in El Paso and Davidson interviewed for the two days before he was married, to a Wichita girl who will be joining him in Midland soon.

NFL Eastern knot unravels Sunday

Associated Press

The knot at the top of the National Football Conference's Eastern Division will unravel at least a little bit on Sunday when the Dallas Cowboys and St. Louis Cardinals meet in St. Louis.

The Cards and the Cowboys, both 6-4, share the top spot in the division with the New York Giants and Washington Redskins, who will be playing outside the division — the Giants at Tampa Bay and the Redskins at home to the Detroit Lions.

The Cowboys have missed the playoffs only once in the last 18 years, but this year's already different. Dallas has lost twice to the Giants, the first time that's happened in 21 years, and the Cowboys are only 1-4 against division opponents, a serious impediment if they get caught in a tie-breaker.

"Talent is well-rounded. You never know when someone's going to win," says Cowboys safety Dextor Clinkscale. "Who would have thought that San Francisco would beat LA 33-0 and LA would come back and beat St. Louis and hold St. Louis to zero points the second half?"

That was last Sunday, when the Rams' 16-13 win broke a four-game winning streak by St. Louis, which had been averaging more than 30 points a game. The Cowboys, playing at home, lost to the Giants, 19-7.

In other games Sunday, Buffalo is at New England; Indianapolis at the New York Jets; Houston at Kansas City; Minnesota vs. Green Bay at Milwaukee; New Orleans at Atlanta; Philadelphia at Miami; Pittsburgh at Cincinnati; San Francisco at Cleveland; Chicago at the Los Angeles Rams, and Denver at San Diego.

St. Louis won its first game with Dallas, 31-20 in Irving, Texas, and both teams enter this game with some injuries.

The Cowboys' quarterback dispute was solved for the time being when Danny White injured a shoulder against the Giants and Gary Hogeboom will probably start. Both Cardinal running backs, Stump Mitchell and Ottis Anderson, are nursing injuries but may play.

But the key may be the Cards' Neil Lomax throwing against a Cowboy secondary that's allowed less than 50 percent of the passes thrown against it to be completed. "Obviously, we're going to try out their secondary. I think that was the key to our game down in Irving."

The game in Los Angeles between the 6-4 Rams and 7-3 Bears matches the NFL's two best running backs — Walter Payton of Chicago and Eric Dickerson of the Rams. The Bears hold a 3½-game lead in the NFC Central, while the Rams, three games behind San Francisco in the NFC West, are in the middle of a struggle for a wild-card spot.

The teams are similar in several respects.

Natt turns gold against Portland

Associated Press

NBA Roundup

Denver got the best of Portland in the first meeting between the two teams since their blockbuster trade during the off-season.

The Nuggets' Calvin Natt and the Trail Blazers' Kiki Vandeweghe, who were the key figures in the trade, played pivotal roles Thursday night in Denver's 128-125 National Basketball Association victory.

With the Nuggets clinging to a 126-125 edge in the final minute, Natt rebounded a missed Denver shot and scored, giving him 20 points and forcing Portland to try a last-second three-pointer that missed.

Vandeweghe, returning to Denver for the first time since being dealt to Portland, had 30 points for the Trail Blazers. But his former teammate at forward, Alex English, scored 45 points for the Nuggets, generally with Vandeweghe guarding him.

It was "just one of those nights," English said.

"I kind of take Alex for granted," Denver Coach Doug Moe said. "It seems like he does that all the time. He was really something tonight."

The Nuggets, who perennially lead the NBA in points and are last in defense, got rare praise for their defense from Portland Coach Jack Ramsay.

"The Nuggets were a very good defensive team tonight," Ramsey said. "They've been like that a few times in the past, but they're now playing defense a lot more consistently.

After Denver led most of the game, the Blazers scored 12 consecutive points to take a 120-118 lead on a layup by Jim Paxson with 3:23 to play. But English, who made 20 of 37 field goals, hit two straight baskets and Mike Evans added a layup to move Denver on top 124-120.

"If we'd lost that one, I think I would have broken down and cried," Moe said of Portland's rally. "We played so well and controlled it most of the way, that it would have been a shame to lose it."

Mychal Thompson, the Blazers' high scorer with a season-high of 32 points, tossed in two free throws and Paxson added a jumper with 1:20 to go to forge a 124-124 deadlock.

Dan Issel then maneuvered around Vandeweghe for a spinning layup at the 44-second mark. Vandeweghe then missed one of two free throws with 28 seconds to play — only his second miss in 52 attempts this season from the foul line — to leave Portland a point behind at 126-125.

Then came Natt's vital rebound basket.

Mavericks 112, Hawks 105

Mark Aguirre put Dallas ahead to stay with a turnaround jumper with 2:18 left in overtime against Atlanta.

Aguirre made it 104-103 with his key basket, then followed with a 19-footer to put the Mavericks ahead by three. He shared scoring honors with teammate Rolando Blackman, each with 30 points, while Sly Williams led the Hawks with 22.

Rockets 99, Sonics 89

Houston had only 10 fourth-quarter points against Seattle, but had plenty of cushion to win for the sixth time without a loss.

John Lucas had 22 points and eight assists to lead the Rockets while Twin Towers Akeem Olajuwon and Ralph Sampson scored 16 points each and combined for 10 blocked shots.

Houston led 89-71 going into the fourth quarter and the margin never was less than eight points despite the cold-shooting period.

The SuperSonics, who have lost four games in a row, were led by Tom Chambers with 19 points.

Bulls 121, Knicks 106

The Michael Jordan Show opened on Broadway to rave reviews from everyone in attendance, including the embarrassed New York Knicks.

"I was up for the game," Jordan said after he electrified a near-sellout Madison Square Garden crowd of 19,252. "I'm glad to get cheers instead of boos anytime. But I don't play to please the crowd. I enjoy pumping up my teammates."

The rookie sensation had 33 points on 15-for-22 field-goal shooting, eight rebounds and five assists to spark the Bulls' fifth victory in seven games, their best start in 11 years. The loss was the sixth in a row for New York after a season-opening win.

Bernard King led New York with 34 points without playing in the fourth quarter, but the next-highest scorer for the Knicks, Louis Orr, added only 13.

Orlando Woolridge added 24 points for the Bulls.

Warriors 122, Lakers 106

Defending conference champion Los Angeles continued to struggle, falling to Golden State nine days after beating the Warriors by 34 points.

Purvis Short scored 27 points to lead Golden State, including two free throws that gave the Warriors the lead to stay at 70-69 midway through the third quarter.

Eric Floyd added 21 points for Golden State, while Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Earvin "Magic" Johnson had 20 each for the Lakers, who are 0-4 on the road this season and 3-5 overall.

Suns 112, Cavalaiers 111

Phoenix, leading the Pacific Division, barely eked out a victory at home against Cleveland, still winless after seven games.

The Suns, who had erased an eight-point Cavalier advantage with 14 straight points in the third quarter, didn't take the lead for good until there was 1:06 left in the game on a 20-foot jumper by Larry Nance.

Alvan Adams led Phoenix with 24 points, while Roy Hinson paced Cleveland with 28.

Bullets 93, Clippers 88

Washington broke a four-game losing streak by scoring 10 straight points down the stretch after blowing an 18-point lead over Los Angeles.

The Bullets led 62-44 early in the third quarter, but the Clippers cut the deficit to 72-64 by the end of the period and led 86-83 with 2:52 remaining.

Then Gus Williams, who led Washington with 19 points, scored six points and Jeff Ruland four during the 10-0 run that won the game.

Jazz sign scoring star Dantley

SALT LAKE CITY (AP) — High-scoring star forward Adrian Dantley ended his two-month standoff with the Utah Jazz Thursday, agreeing to honor the final year of his contract with the National Basketball Association franchise.

In return, the Jazz will extend Dantley's contract, signed in 1980, for three more years through the 1987-88 season, team officials said.

Dantley was scheduled to undergo a physical examination Thursday, ending a sometimes acrimonious impasse between last season's NBA Comeback Player of the Year and the team — a contract squabble at times punctuated by harsh criticism of the 6-foot-5 forward by Jazz Coach Frank Layden.

But on Thursday, Layden acknowledged the Jazz, a lackluster 3-3 on the year, would do better with Dantley on the floor.

Texas A&I coach Ron Harms says his team, once the scourge of small college football, has suffered more than its share of injuries.

Glory days over for Javelinas

KINGSVILLE, Texas (AP) — Whatever made the Texas A&I Javelinas the scourge of small college football in the last decade appears to have disappeared.

The Javelinas are nearing the end of the season with a 2-1 record in Lone Star Conference play and a 4-4 for the season.

The record puts them in second place in the conference, a long way from their former glory days.

Some people called the 42-game winning streak that ended in 1977 good luck — while others called it Gil Steinke.

Coach Ron Harms — Steinke's successor — admits bad luck and injuries have been part of the team's problem this year.

Three quarterbacks started in the first five games of the season.

Quarterback Chris Soza was replaced in the first game by Darcy Davis, who broke his thumb starting in the team's second game against Nevada-Reno. Soza was back in the fourth match, helping to defeat Texas Southern.

LAST WEEKEND, Soza threw touchdown passes of 68 yards to James Colins and 65 and 9 yards to Chuckie Miles to lead the Javelinas to a 41-24 victory over Howard Payne.

The loss of Soza in the early games compounded the other losses of defensive tackle Ken Blackman to an ankle injury in the second game, linebacker Danny Munoz to an injury suffered in practice after the second game and linebacker Kevin Beasley who broke his ankle stepping off a curb.

"I don't want to sound like I'm making excuses and I hesitate to say this, but we have not been a lucky team," said Harms.

The NCAA Division II Javelinas faced a difficult schedule this year, Harms said, meeting four NCAA division I-AA teams early in the season.

The Javelinas, then an NAIA team, opened the decade with a national title in 1970, took three titles in the middle of the era, 1974-1976, and capped off the decade with a national title in 1979, the year Harms took over as A&I coach.

"It's been pretty much straight down ever since," Harms conceded.

The team was 2-9-0 last year, 5-6-0 in 1982, 9-2-0 in 1981 and 7-4-0 in 1980, the year after their last national title.

Former A&I Coach Gil Steinke, now director of football operations for the San Antonio Gunslingers of the United States Football League, said he was "disappointed" and mystified by the team's performance in recent years.

"I don't know exactly what (the problem) is," he said. "But when you have a real bad season, you do some drastic things, you shuffle players — and staff."

Steinke could not remember having two bad seasons in a row. He attibuted recovery from a losing season to "drastic moves."

"You get too many people connected with losing and you have to weed them out, to find out who wants to play and who doesn't," Steinke said. "You have to sort out those that have the fight and those that don't."

"After one bad year, I remember, the only two people left were me and Jonas."

Rebs, Bullpups split games

Dorsett's father dies at age 60

ALIQUIPPA, Pa. (AP) — West Dorsett, the father of Dallas Cowboys running back Tony Dorsett, died Thursday at Aliquippa Hospital, nearly one week after suffering a massive stroke, according to a hospital official.

Dorsett, 60, died at about 2 p.m. without regaining full consciousness, said hospital supervisor Patricia Druzak.

Druzak said family members were with the elder Dorsett when he died but did not know if Tony Dorsett was among them.

Tony Dorsett, 30, had flown to Aliquippa last Friday after receiving word of his father's illness.

He returned to Dallas to play in last Sunday's National Football League game against the New York Giants. He gained 78 yards on 13 carries in the Cowboys' 19-7 loss to the Giants.

Services were scheduled for 1 p.m. Monday at the Ebenezer African Methodist Episcopal Church in Aliquippa, preceded by viewing Sunday at the Calvin Sheffield Funeral Home in Aliquippa from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m. and 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., according to Calvin Sheffield, owner of the funeral home.

Burial was planned at the Woodlawn Memorial Park in Aliquippa, Sheffield said.

San Angelo heads to Midland for Region I volleyball tourney

From Staff Reports

District 4-5A volleyball champion San Angelo is still alive and doing well in the state playoffs. The Bobcats have survived bi-district and area games and are heading for Midland where they will open regional play at Midland Lee Gym Saturday at 10:30 a.m.

District 3-5A champion Amarillo Tascosa (34-3) will open the day's play with a 9 a.m. match against 7-5A champion Arlington Martin (29-5) followed by San Angelo taking on Haltom City (21-11). The final, between the two winners, is scheduled for 3 p.m.

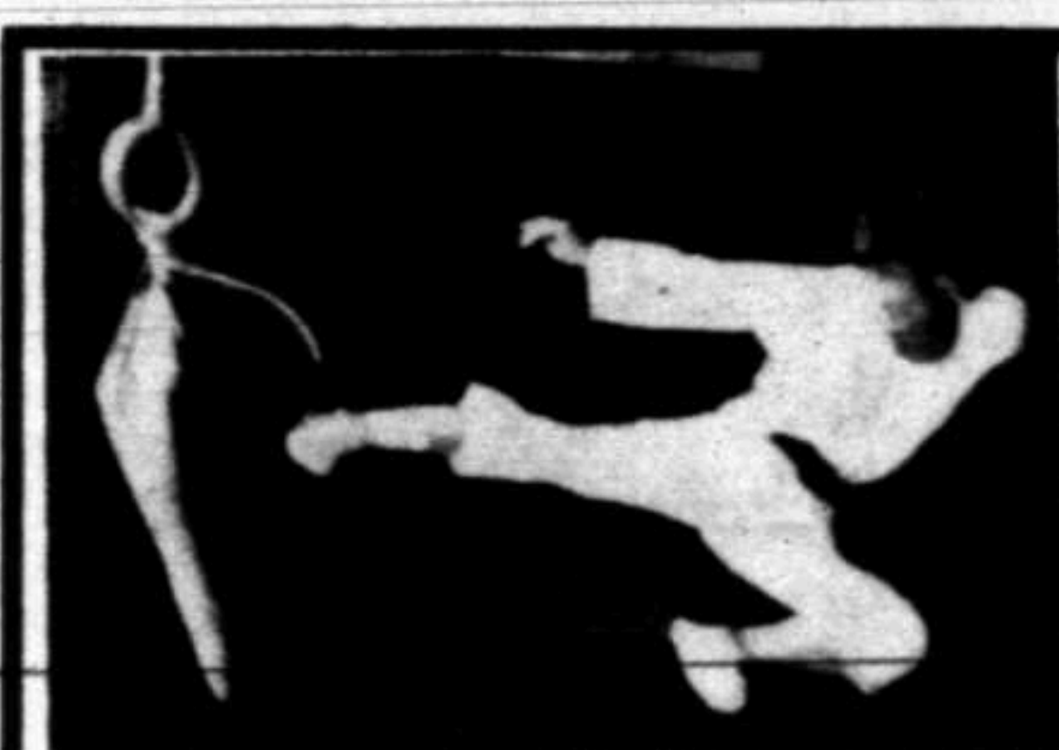

The Bobcats, who swept through 4-5A practically uncontested for a 14-0 league record, have increased their perfect season mark to 36-0. In Bi-District play, they bounced Lubbock Coronado out of the playoffs and followed with an elimination victory over El Paso Eastwood in the area match.

The winner of the regional tournament will make the final step in the playoffs, traveling to Austin next week for competition in the state's Final Four.

George Burns awarded third star

George Burns

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Comedian George Burns has been a star for longer than most people can remember, and if he gets another honor on the Hollywood Walk of Fame, he'll have enough stars to form his own galaxy.

The top banana of the still-syndicated "Burns and Allen" television series and, more recently in the "Oh, God" movies, was honored Thursday with a third star in Walk, the first awarded for the category of live theater.

"If I get another star, I get to keep the sidewalk," joked Burns, 88, who already has stars for television and film performances. The star of three "Oh, God" movies, including the newly released "Oh, God, You Devil," on Thursday joined 20 other luminaries in the three-star category.

Burns' star for live theater, the 1,791st on the walk, is embossed with the traditional masks for comedy and tragedy. Previously, the Walk of Fame stars were given for radio, music, film and television.

Gina Lollobrigida

NEW YORK (AP) — Italian film star Gina Lollobrigida, who now makes a living as a photographer, was awarded $90,000 for a tooth she broke while eating fried shrimp with her dentist at Trader Vic's restaurant four years ago.

State Supreme Court Justice Louis Kaplan ruled Thursday the restaurant was "careless and negligent in the preparation, inspection and dispensing of their food to its customers" on June 17, 1980.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Massachusetts Gov. Michael S. Dukakis should have no trouble understanding the character he'll play during the filming of an episode of the "St. Elsewhere" television show — he'll just have to act naturally.

Dukakis, 51, a member of the American Federation of Television and Radio Actors from his days as host of "The Advocates" television show on the Public Broadcasting System in the 1970s, will play himself.

Dukakis is in Hollywood this week to drum up business among companies that might want to film in Massachusetts, and "St. Elsewhere" producer Mark Tinker decided to sign him up for a part.

In the show, Dukakis hurts his ankle while jogging and goes to St. Eligius, where he argues with Dr. Fiskus, played by Howie Mandel, who doesn't believe it's the governor.

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla. (AP) — Archie Campbell, a mainstay on the country music comedy television show "Hee-Haw," has donated his time and the use of his Nashville, Tenn., production company to save the endangered Florida panther.

Campbell is appearing in a series of television spots to educate hunters, drivers and the public on the panthers' plight, said Lt. Biff Lampton, spokesman for the Florida Game and Fresh Water Fish Commission.

DETROIT (AP) — Former United Auto Workers union President Douglas Fraser says a new book, "Working Detroit: The History of a Union Town," fills what had been a void in published labor history.

Fraser, Mayor Coleman Young and U.S. Rep. George Crockett, all with experience in the UAW; Detroit Federation of Teachers founder Helen Bowers; Helen Piwkowski, who organized cigarmakers and department store clerks; and Horace Sheffield, a black union leader, were interviewed for the book.

Author Steve Babson said Thursday during ceremonies to honor the six union activists that he hoped the book would provide a history of organized labor, rather than serve as its epitaph.

Consumers most peeved with cans that won't spray

NEW YORK (AP) — Sick of spray cans that won't spray? Cookies that crumble? Toilet paper that can't be started without ripping half the roll?

You're not alone, according to a survey of consumers' annoyance with these and 17 other misadventures in product packaging.

Warwick Advertising Inc. compiled its list of 20 top packaging peeves from 500 telephone interviews with homemakers earlier this year. Then 5,000 were mailed questionnaires asking whether they found each peeve very annoying, somewhat annoying or not annoying. About 3,700 answered.

"That's a very good response," Bernard Mounty, Warwick's research director, said Thursday. "This is something people are interested in. If you go into supermarkets you would have heard this all before."

The top peeve in the survey, which was unveiled in the November-December issue of Consumers Digest, was "Spray cans that won't spray," which 93 percent rated "very annoying."

Next came "Pre-wrapped meat, fruit and vegetables that hide the bad parts" at 87 percent, "Cartons that leak" at 81 percent and "Cans with tear-off tabs that cut fingers" at 75 percent.

"Packages marked 'cents off' that aren't any cheaper" were deemed very annoying by 73 percent, followed by "Packages saying 'push here' or 'tear here' that don't work and often break fingernails" at 67 percent.

Sixty-five percent said they were very annoyed by "Cookie boxes containing crushed cookies," and 63 percent had ill will toward "Plastic wrap that sticks so you lose the end."

The top 10 was rounded out by "Drippy meat packages" at 62 percent and "Toilet tissue than you can't unroll without ripping several feet of tissue" at 61 percent.

The bottom half of the terrible 20 included such enduring complaints as "Can't tell how fresh a product is because it is not dated" (52 percent) and "Resealable packages that can't be resealed" (48 percent).

The scale "measures the intensity rather than the frequency of the problem," Mounty noted. Although spray cans may work most of the time, those that don't cause the most anguish.

He said almost all the problems cited could be corrected, but some might cost more than others. Stopping cookies from crumbling, for instance, could mean expensive retooling at the factory where they are packaged.

But Mounty said he already had noticed improvement on peeve number 17, "Coupons where you can't find the expiration date," which annoyed 37 percent of homemakers very much.

"In the last few months they've been moving the date up so it's easier to see at the checkout counter," he said.

Mounty said he was surprised by the comparatively mild distress caused by "Not knowing what additives mean" (number 15, with 43 percent very annoyed) and "Food packages that don't show nutritional information" (last, with 31 percent).

"Activist groups always say the consumer is dying for this information, but when you get down to it they care much more about convenience and the pocketbook," he concluded.

Jury deliberations to resume in Redgrave civil rights trial

BOSTON (AP) — A federal jury recessed after a full day of considering whether the Boston Symphony Orchestra violated Vanessa Redgrave's civil rights and breached a contract by canceling a concert series she was to narrate.

The British actress, in a lawsuit against the orchestra, contends the 1982 series was canceled because of her outspoken support of the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Her attorney asked the U.S. District Court jury to award Miss Redgrave $1 million for violation of a Massachusetts civil rights statute and at least $166,000 to compensate for her alleged loss of earnings after the cancellation.

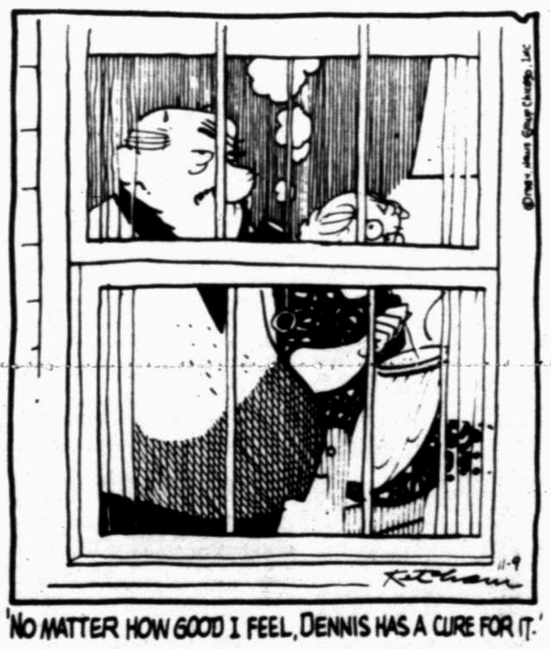

The jury was to resume deliberations today.

During the three-week trial, Redgrave's attorney, Daniel J. Kornstein compared the cancellation to the blacklisting of artists with suspected Communist ties in the 1950s.

France and Italy tied for first place in the recent European Junior Championships. Because France beat Italy in their individual encounter, the title went to France.

The two teams were almost level near the end of their match when this deal came along. We were not given the bidding, but it could have gone as shown above. The opening bid of one club is artificial and strong and one diamond is negative. The rest is natural.

Both teams reached four spades, and both Wests led the king of diamonds. The Italian West made the dubious shift to the jack of hearts. Declarer had no alternative to the finesse, and when it held the rest was easy. He drew trumps and conceded another diamond and a club — making four-odd.

The French West defended much more intelligently. He took his two diamond tricks and the ace of clubs, and then led a third diamond. East cooperated masterfully by ruffing with the jack of spades, and the defenders had promoted a trump trick for down one.

Junior events limited to players under 25 are common in Europe. In all, 19 countries took part in this year's Junior Championship, and the standard of play was excellent. Bridge is thriving.

Compare that to the U.S. There is not a single event for young players. Even the intercollegiate championship, which some years ago attracted several hundred schools, is no longer held. Small wonder, then, that there is a dearth of young players in the U.S.

Rubber bridge clubs throughout the country use the four-deal bridge format. Do they know something you don't? Charles Goren's "Four-Deal Bridge," will teach you the strategies and tactics of this fast-paced action game that provides the cure for unending rubbers. For a copy send $1.75 to "Goren Four-Deal," care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 611, Palmyra, N.J. 08065. Make check payable to Newspaperbooks.

Sutter, Sutcliffe get cold shoulder

NEW YORK (AP) — Rick Sutcliffe, Bruce Sutter and a few of their high-priced brethren got something of a cold shoulder at baseball's free agent re-entry draft where the door opened wide for a trio of lesser-known pitchers — Steve Trout, Don Aase and Ed Whitson.

Sutcliffe won the National League's Cy Young Award in an extraordinary 16-1 season with the Chicago Cubs. Sutter, winner of the award in 1979, amassed an NL-leading, major league record-tying 45 saves and posted a 1.54 earned-run average for the St. Louis Cardinals.

It might be said they possess million-dollar arms.

THAT'S WHAT they say. It's the kind of money they're looking for — one reason more than a few teams looked the other way Thursday at the free-agent re-entry draft.

"I think there's a different philosophy now," said Jerry Reinsdorf, co-owner of the Chicago White Sox. "Teams aren't going after their primary needs. It's too expensive. They're looking for role players to fill secondary needs."

Sutcliffe was selected by eight teams — Atlanta, Kansas City, San Diego, St. Louis, Texas, California, Baltimore and the New York Yankees. Sutter's name was called out six times — by Texas, Toronto, Atlanta, California, Baltimore and the Yankees.

"With the rumors of what they're asking for, it's a little too heavy for most clubs," said Bill Bergesch, general manager of the Cincinnati Reds. "Plus, there's a feeling that the Cubs can't afford to lose Sutcliffe and that the Cardinals are going to fight to keep Sutter."

Murray Cook, general manager of the Montreal Expos, observed: "The kind of money they're looking for is out of whack for a lot of clubs."

And, George Steinbrenner, principal owner of the Yankees, said: "Their own teams have to keep them for PR purposes as well as performance purposes."

The Cubs said they will continue to their efforts to re-sign Sutcliffe and the Cardinals will keep after Sutter.

Of the 56 players eligible for the draft, 37 were selected by fewer than four teams, meaning they are now free to negotiate with any team. Twenty-three of those 37 went completely undrafted during the 51 minutes encompassing 23 rounds. Three teams — Detroit, the Cubs and the New York Mets — didn't draft anyone. Texas and Pittsburgh drafted the most, 16 players apiece.

TROUT HAD a more-than-respectable season for the Cubs, finishing with a 13-7 record, but his numbers were buried under the avalanche of publicity over Sutcliffe. Nevertheless, front offices around the majors took notice. Seventeen teams listed him as a pitcher worth talking to. None of the 55 other free agents was drafted as often.

Aase, who sat out all of 1983 and the first two months of 1984 following reconstructive elbow surgery of the kind that saved California teammate Tommy John's career, finished last season with a 4-1 record, eight saves and a 1.62 ERA. He was rewarded by being named by 13 teams.

And, Ed Whitson, who followed up his 14-8 season season for San Diego by starting the turnaround against the Cubs in the playoffs and posting the Padres' only World Series victory against Detroit, was drafted by 11 teams.

The only other player in double figures was Pittsburgh outfielder Lee Lacy. He hit .321 and drove in 70 runs and was picked 14 times.

Bergesch said Aase "finished the season in great shape. If he's sound, he's a pretty good pitcher. ... If you can recover from that kind of surgery, you could really help a lot of clubs — but you're taking a chance."

Texas, TCU to clear path

Associated Press

Third-ranked Texas and No. 15-rated Texas Christian were heavily favored Saturday to emerge victorious from Southwest Conference scrapes, clearing the way for their showdown for the Cotton Bowl in two weeks.

Texas, unbeaten but once tied, was a 14-point pick at home over the University of Houston although the Longhorns have had to produce weekly "Mandrake the Magician" escapes.

The Horned Frogs, beaten only by Southern Methodist and the NCAA's Division I most improved team, were 10-point choices over Texas Tech in Fort Worth.

Texas has a 4-0 SWC ledger while TCU is 4-1. All other league teams have two losses and no team has ever made it to the Cotton Bowl with that many SWC setbacks.

IN OTHER games, Baylor celebrates homecoming in Waco by hosting the bowl-minded Arkansas Razorbacks and SMU, which has post-season hopes of its own, will play the winless Rice Owls in Houston.

Oddsmakers made Arkansas a five-point favorite over the Bears and SMU was rated a 22-point choice over the Owls, who've lost 23 consecutive SWC contests.

The Longhorns have been winning on defense and Jeff Ward's field goal kicking but Burnt Orange partisans were heartened by the return of running back Edwin Simmons to practice.

Simmons hasn't played since last year but the sputtering Longhorn running game needs him, particularly if Kevin Nelson's ankle doesn't heal.

Texas has gone down to the wire to beat Arkansas, SMU and Texas Tech after tying Oklahoma on a last-second field goal.

The TCU-Tech series has been bizarre. Tech has won the last two games played in Amon Carter Stadium. The last three played in Lubbock ended in ties.

TCU has a slender 19-18-3 all-time lead.

TCU's current record of 7-1 represents as many victories in eight games as the Horned Frog football program produced in the preceeding four seasons combined. Horned Frog Coach Jim Wacker was 1-8-2 in his first season and has already been rewarded with a new seven-year contract.

One of the keys to the Horned Frog success has been conditioning.

All players on TCU's original preseason depth charter are still active.

"TCU is the best-coached team in the U.S.," said Texas Tech Coach Jerry Moore. "Jim Wacker has done a tremendous job of convincing his players they can win.

"They don't have as much talent as some teams in the Top Twenty but the coaches have done an excellent job with the talent they have. They are a quick team and can score from anywhere on the field."

Tech could be a severe test fo the TCU rushing game which is second in the nation with 310.8 yards per game.

The Red Raiders are 10th in the nation in total defense.

Moore said Tech, which lost to Texas 13-10 on a field goal with three seconds left, will come fighting back.

"Normally, I would be worried about a letdown," Moore said. "But I don't feel that way about our team. I think we will finish our season in solid fashion."

Wacker said "There isn't a lot of comfort for us in knowing that we are a running team going against a defense that has held two good opponents to 73 and 71 yards rushing the last two weeks.

"They are good athletes, they are aggressive and really fly around out there. It will be one of our offensive unit's ultimate tests of 1984."

Burciaga gets another TV suit

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — The federal judge who ruled that the NCAA violated antitrust laws with its control of broadcast rights for college football has been assigned another suit brought by two independent television organizations.

U.S. District Judge Juan Burciaga will hear the suit filed by the Association of Independent Television Stations and Sports View Company against the College Football Association, the Big Eight Conference, ABC and ESPN, according to a report in The Daily Oklahoman.

It was Burciaga who ruled in favor of the universities of Oklahoma and Georgia that the National Collegiate Athletic Association violated the Sherman Antitrust Act and couldn't hold exclusive control over football broadcast rights.

That decision broke open the market for those broadcast rights and other organizations, such as athletic conferences or the College Football Association, to begin negotiating with television networks.

The latest suit by the station association and Sports View, filed originally in Oklahoma City, makes similar claims against the CFA and Big Eight and the two television companies.

It says the CFA contracts with ABC and ESPN restrict the output of televised games. It challenges contracts that give ABC, ESPN and Katz Sports exclusivity during certain time periods on Saturdays.

Burciaga's court is in Albuquerque.

REBELS

In fact, the surprise of the Lee team this year has been Tyrone Thurman, the 140-pound scatback. Thurman leads Lee's rushers with 773 yards, but he too would need 227 yards tonight. That would be a tough chore against MHS, which is giving up only 244.2 yards per game, running and passing.

But Jones and Thurman give Lee the break-away threat that other teams drool over. It is no secret that other Lee opponents have keyed hard on Jones this year. It has given Thurman the opportunity to do his thing.

Lee fullback Randy Ellis has added 489 yards rushing this year while quarterback Dirk Bergoon, who runs the option perfectly, has an additional 154. It is a rushing attack that is envied by Lee's opponents and one that produces a few nightmares along the way. Lee can strike from anywhere on the field and it can come from any of those backs.

Regardless of how things turn out tonight for the Lee Rebels, their date with destiny will not hindge on the Midland High outcome. However, Lee plans on playing tonight with an eye on the victory column.

So, for the 24th time, MHS and Lee will tee it up with the city championship on the line.

BULLDOGS

When Midland High has the football, the Rebel defense is another cause for McCutchen's concern. "Defensively, the thing they do is give you a lot of different looks and rely on being quick. They're not as big as some teams we've played but they are quicker and more aggressive than teams we've played."

Defensively, Midland High has had only two big problems to overcome and neiter have been caused by the defense itself. The first has been offensive turnovers in Bulldog territory and the second has been a trouble-plagued kicking game. Still, in their four loses, the Bulldog defenders gave the offensive unit every chance to win in all but the Permian loss. That game got to far out of hand to quickly.

"I think our young men have performed well all year," said McCutchen. "We're disappointed that we're not going into the game with a chance to win something. But, the men have played well and we hope to go out and do well against Lee, a very good football team."

Mariners to select Cottier

SEATTLE (AP) — The Seattle Mariners will select Chuck Cottier, the American League baseball team's interim skipper after the firing of Del Crandall in September, as their new permanent manager, The Seattle Times said Thursday.

The Mariners picked Cottier, their third-base coach under Crandall, over Toronto Blue Jays' coach Jimy Williams, the Times said.

The announcement will be made at a Friday news conference, according to the Times.

Mariners President Chuck Armstrong confirmed Cottier and Williams were the Mariners' two managerial finalists but said no decision on the new skipper had been made.

He said he met Thursday with General Manager Hal Keller on the subject of a new manager.

"We haven't picked him yet and that's the honest truth," Armstrong said. "I can tell you the job has not been offered to anyone and the job has not been accepted by anyone."

No news conference has been scheduled for Friday, Armstrong said, "because we don't have anything to have a news conference about."

But Mariners' director of publicity Bob Porter said a news conference probably would be held on Friday.

Individual 4-5A titles escape Midlanders

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland Lee's Rebels are playoff bound, but it looks as if they aren't going to win any individual titles in District 4-5A this year.

The Rebs are not in position in any individual category to win a title. Midland High has a shot at winning an individual crown if tight end Darrell Davis has a big night on the field against Lee tonight.

Davis currently ranks third in pass receiving yardage with 541 yards on 32 receptions. He is 26 yards shy of Odessa Permian's Greg Anderson, who has 567 yards on 34 catches. Davis could also capture the title for most receptions since he is only two behind Anderson.

Abilene Cooper's Scott Anderson is also in that race with 560 yards on 31 carries and ranks second heading into tonight's final regular season game.

Individual glory is spread throughout the league, but it looks like San Angelo's C.L. Bowman is going to win the rushing title going away.

Bowman has been locked in a see-saw rushing battle with Permian's Dal Watson all year, but his 200-plus night last week against Cooper gives him 1,069 yards on the year and he will go against Big Spring tonight. Bowman is the only 4-5A rusher to bust the 1,000-yard mark this season.

Watson has 894 yards and needs 106 yards against Odessa High to cross the 1,000-yard barrier. Jay Tollison of Cooper has 843 yards and needs 157 tonight against Abilene High for that same honor. Lee's Tyrone Thurman, with 773 yards, would need a banner 227-yard effort against MHS tonight and Lee's Walter Jones would also need a big night to add to his 764 yards.

Cooper's Doug Hadley is going to win the passing title hands down. He has passed for 1,634 yards, 500 more than Permian's Alton Holloway and 558 more than Midland High's Matt Marcum, who missed two games at quarterback this year.

Young Andretti shoots at father

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Michael Andretti doesn't want to slight his father's effort to sew up the CART-PPG Indy-car series championship this weekend, but he's got a point battle of his own going.

The 22-year-old son of longtime world driving star Mario Andretti will enter Sunday's Caesars Palace Grand Prix with an opportunity to finish as high as fourth in the season standings.

That's quite a feat for a youngster who only made his Indy-car debut a year ago on the 1.255-mile, five-turn modified oval behind the Caesars Palace resort-casino.

The younger Andretti heads into Sunday's 200-miler ranking sixth in the overall championship, trailing fifth-place Danny Sullivan by seven points (109-102) and injury-idled Rick Mears, in fourth, by just eight points.

The difference between a sixth-place finish and fourth is $55,000 from the $1 million PPG Cup point fund.

"That's definitely something to shoot at," Michael said. "Danny's had a good season and it'll be tough to get past him, but we'll give it our best shot. This would be a real good place for that first win."

Practice opened today, with time trials scheduled Saturday and Sunday's race scheduled to start at 2:45 p.m. CST.

Thinking back to last year's Caesars Palace race gives the younger Andretti a big dose of confidence heading into the second try here.

"I think I could have finished as high as third," said Michael. "I really felt good. Then the gearbox broke.

"But it's the first time I raced against my dad and I sure enjoyed that. I was a little nervous, but it went away real quick."

Mario, who stands on the brink of winning the fourth national driving championship of his illustrious career, won that race. Now he goes into Sunday's event needing only to finish 10th or better to clinch his first Indy-car title since 1969 and his first title of any kind since he won the world driving championship in 1978.

Michael, on the other hand, is finishing his first full season on the CART circuit looking for that elusive first victory.

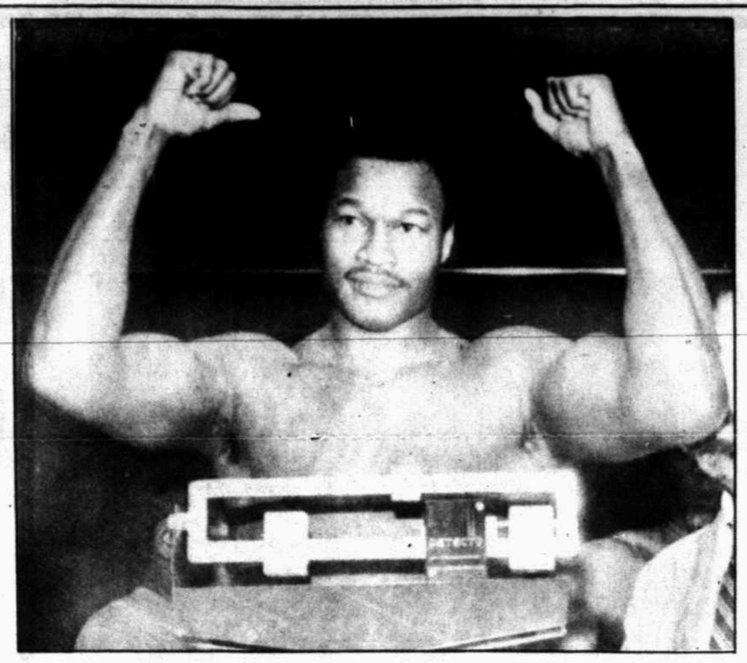

So far, in 15 races this season, the younger Andretti — proving to be as aggressive as his celebrated father — has finished as high as third five times, including three of the last four races. He has finished in the top five seven times.

"It's been a good season for us," said Michael, who drives for the Electrolux-Kraco team. "The guys on the team have been great and we've learned a lot about each other and about the cars. Finishing strong like this is good for everyone. And, if we could win at Las Vegas, that would really top things off and give us some momentum into next season."

Mario, who is 44, admits the entry of his son into his profession both thrilled and scared him.

"It took time for me to really relax and feel confident about him being out there on the track," the elder Andretti said. "But I knew I had to be patient, to wait and see how he developed and how he would handle things.

"We didn't run wheel-to-wheel (this year) as much as I would have liked," the father continued.

Larry Holmes flexes muscles during Thursday weigh-in for tonight's heavyweight fight with James "Bonecrusher" Smith.

Stadler shoots hot 62, Chancellor in third

KAPALUA, Hawaii (AP) — Despite a sore hand and two weeks without touching his clubs, Craig Stadler said everything he hit during the first day of the four-day $450,000 Kapalua International Championship of Golf was "right on."

Stadler set a course record of 9-under par 62 Thursday, bettering the Kapalua Bay Course record by two strokes.

Three strokes back are Andy Bean and Scott Simpson at 65. Tied for third are Ben Crenshaw, Warren Chancellor, golf pro at Midland Country Club and Gary Halldorson at 67.

Chancellor, who was a local pro at Princeville on the island of Kauai from 1976 to 1982 before moving to Midland, said Stadler's score was "incredible."

"For someone to shoot that kind of score during tournament conditions on a course of this quality is just incredible," Chancellor said. "There aren't any gimmies on this course. Craig's the kind of guy who once he gets the ball rolling, there's no stopping him. When he's hot, he's hot."

KMID to broadcast Jack Tayrien Show

From Staff Reports

Arrangements have been made by KMID-TV to host the Jack Tayrien Show as long as Midland Lee is in the football playoffs.

The first telecast will be Saturday at 1:30 p.m. when highlights of the Midland High-Lee game will be shown and a preview given of Plainview.

The second show will be at 10:30 p.m. Saturday, Nov. 17, following the Plainview-Lee bi-district contest and the show will continue in that time slot until Lee is eliminated from the playoffs.

Larry Holmes returns to ring for 'Bonecrusher'

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (AP) — Larry Holmes returns to the ring for the first time in nearly a year tonight, meeting a suddenly aging James "Bonecrusher" Smith in a scheduled 15-round defense of his share of the heavyweight crown.

The undefeated Holmes is such a prohibitive favorite against Smith that bookmakers have refused to post a line on the fight. A bettor can, however, get 13-10 odds that Smith doesn't last past the seventh round.

"I'm not in this thing to take this man 15 rounds," said Holmes.

Holmes turned 35 last week and Smith made much of his age and inactivity in the past year while predicting a knockout win for himself. But it now turns out that the two are closer in age than thought.

A spokesman for promoter Don King confirmed late Thursday that Smith is actually 31, not 29 as he had been billed. The spokesman said the discrepancy in age was only noticed Thursday in a check of Smith's transcripts from Shaw College, where he graduated with two degrees.

Smith, who weighed in Thursday at 227 pounds, might age even more in the ring against Holmes, who expressed his displeasure with Smith's prediction that he would not only be the first fighter in 46 fights to beat Holmes, but also would knock him out.

"I can get him drunk and dance with him, then when I want to kill him, I kill him," said Holmes. "I'm that good at that."

Holmes, a relatively trim 221½ pounds, will earn $1 million for this fight, his first since he dispatched Marvis Frazier in the first round last November.

"I think I will be stronger because of the layoff," said Holmes, who is risking his International Boxing Federation crown for the first time.

Smith, who has been fighting professionally for only three years, lost his first fight by knockout to James Broad before winning his next 14, 12 by knockout.

The challenger bills himself as the "hardest-hitting heavyweight in the world," but he moves slowly in the ring and his boxing skills are suspect. Besides Broad, his only notable opponent was British heavyweight Frank Bruno.

Hadley will also win the total offense category with 1,711 yards in combined passing and rushing heading into tonight. Holloway is a distant second with 1,501 while Marcum stands at 1,162.

San Angelo's Brian Ross is well on the way to taking the punting crown with a 40.8 average, which is 5.2 yards per kick better than anyone else in the league.

In tandem offense, passing receiving and rushing, Bowman is a big winner again with 1,142 while Watson (1,013) and Thurman (891) follow.

Bowman and Watson are still in the scoring race. Each have scored 17 touchdowns for 102 points while Thurman is third with 78. San Angelo's Ottoway Perryman leads the league in interceptions with five while Hill of San Angelo and Coker of Big Spring have both recovered five fumbles this year to lead the league in that area.

Lee could win the title as the best defensive team with a super effort against MHS tonight. The Rebels rank second behind Permian in team defense. Lee is giving up 206.6 yards per game while Permian is giving up 200.2. Lee would have to hold MHS to a low offensive production tonight to pass Permian.

Permian has all but won the team offense title, averaging 406.1 yards a game while Cooper is a distant second with a 341.6 average.

Northwestern keeps Green as head man

EVANSTON, Ill. (AP) — Dennis Green, riding out a 10-day swell in which his job hung in balance, has been signed to a new three-year contract as head football coach at Northwestern.

"The last 10 days have given me an opportunity to look at and focus upon the Northwestern football program," Green said Thursday. "We have reached an agreement as to what we are looking for in the football program."

In addition to the new contract, which presumably includes a raise, the university agreed to provide a weight room, grass practice fields, new offices, a meeting room and a commitment to the football program.

"It took 10 days to clear the deck and take the program to a higher plane," said Green. "The groundwork has been laid to make strides to reaching our goal of a winning football program."

Matters came to a head after a 49-7 loss to Purdue which Green admitted "was our worst game of the season."

An article appeared which said Athletic Director Doug Single was going to fire Green. Single later said he would evaluate the situation at the end of the season.

Eyes of Texas Inc. open for business in Odessa

By RON GILMORE
Staff Writer

ODESSA — A crowd of fifty people gathered Thursday afternoon at ribbon-cutting ceremonies for Eyes of Texas Inc., the Permian Basin's first free-standing outpatient surgery clinic.

"There is hospital-associated outpatient surgery available already," said Nita Burton, director of Eyes of Texas, "but we are the first to be in a completely separate building."

The $1.39-million center will be offering "essentially every specialty," according to Ms. Burton.

"We are a full-service center," she said. "We do all types of surgery."

Eyes of Texas, like other outpatient surgery centers, will see patients on a one-day basis, with most patients staying only a couple of hours.

"No one stays overnight," said Ms. Burton.

Eye surgery will be the most common surgery, particulary cataract removal, but other surgery is also available. Surgeons specializing in dentistry, dermatology, gynecology, ophthamology, orthopedics, podiatry, plastic surgery, urology, ear, nose and throat and general surgery will be using the facility.

Emergency care, however, will be discouraged.

"The clinic will try and stay away from emergency treatment," said Ms. Burton. "Emergency patients need monitoring. Should they need to be monitored, we will transfer them to the hospital."

Ms. Burton would not say how much a patient could save by opting for the ambulatory center. "It is a lot less expensive though," she said.

The director, a registered nurse, attributed the savings to the patient's short stay at the clinic and the elimination of such hospital necessities as a dietitian, kitchen, "mammoth" supplies of linen and a large staff.

Midland Memorial Hospital, which has been offering outpatient surgery for several years, has stated savings of "40 to 50 percent" for its services.

The hospital sees no strong competition from the clinic, but admits that "until the facts and figures come in, it's too soon to tell."

"We're very confident about our outpatient service," said Cynthia Brust, a MMH spokesman. "We will continue to have the same patients as in the past."

Odessa Medical Center also offers day surgery, but had no comment.

The new center is a cross between a doctor's office and a hospital. The prospective patient signs in and then awaits surgery in one of four private holding rooms. Two family members may join the patient while awaiting surgery.

"It's quite a relief for family members, who in the past, have had to wait outside," said Ms. Burton. "We also let one family member in the recovery room with the patient. This helps to relieve the patient's anxiety over surgery."

Two operating rooms, each equipped with a $75,000 surgical microscope, are used for all surgery. The two rooms are separated by a glassed-in room where authorized persons may observe and discuss with the surgeon performing the operation. Surgeries are videotaped and used for lectures and future reference.

The new facility, founded by Dr. John H. Sheets, is co-owned by 16 doctors from Midland, Odessa and Andrews. Sheets is also founder of Sheets Eye Clinic and 20/20, both located in the same building complex as Eyes of Texas Inc.

"We've already had patients," said Sheets. "Yesterday we did four cases (three separate surgeons) and we've had one or two today."

Sheets is a leader in eye surgery. He has traveled all over the world teaching his surgical technique to other surgeons. He spends a great deal of time lecturing and directing seminars.

Local reaction to Nicaraguan reports mixed

By JULIE HILLRICHS
Staff Writer

Midland reaction varied Thursday over U.S. intelligence reports that a Soviet freighter may have brought MiG 21 aircraft to Nicaragua, despite repeated denials by the Central American nation.

The Soviet freighter Bakuriani docked Wednesday at Corinto, a Pacific coast port 105 miles northwest of Managua. U.S. officials have said intelligence data suggests the ship carried advanced MiG 21 warplanes, but that the data is inconclusive.

The United States declared that it would view with "utmost concern" any delivery of Soviet-made advanced MiG 21 warplanes to the Sandinista government.

In Midland, reaction was mixed as a random selection of residents expressed concern over the events of recent days.

The nine men and six women — most of whom were familiar with the latest controversy in a longstanding feud between the U.S. and the Sandinista-backed government — argued as to what steps the administration should take if, in fact, the intelligence reports are true.

Linda Muniz, retail manager, said "I think we should stay out of it as much as possible. We have enough problems in our own country as it is."

Bartender Charlie Carr said "I'm glad Reagan was re-elected because if anyone can deal with it, he can. The threat of sending troops to prevent it (the deployment of MiG 21 planes) is a good first step. If you have to, you have to."

According to Kevin Green, a local salesman, "What's good for the goose is good for the gander. We've been shipping arms to Nicaragua for God knows how long. If we stop shipping weapons, then and only then, do we have the moral right to prevent the Soviets from doing so."

Restaurant manager Mark Bueltel said "The U.S. is covertly involved anyway. But I wouldn't want to jump to any quick conclusion."

Quoting intelligence sources, CBS News reported Tuesday that if the administration determined the cargo was warplanes, it would consider an attack to destroy them.

Nicaraguan security forces kept reporters from approaching the vessel as it was unloaded, but journalists reported seeing hundreds of sacks labeled "powdered milk" being unloaded and stacked onto trucks parked near the ship.

Dockworkers told reporters that the cargo include dynamite. However, the report could not be confirmed because of the security measures.

"I heard reports that we should blow them (the aircraft) up before it's allowed to happen," said retail manager Darla Johnson. "I really agree with that. I don't think it should be allowed to become another Cuba."

Devoe McMillen, a local student, said the administration should take some type of military action. "Talks won't do any good. The only way to stop it is through military action."

But Stacey Castillo, retail sales, said she hopes the U.S. will try to negotiate before flexing its muscles.

According to Cathy Wallace, a parcel service employee, and Barak Stanford, a retail store manager, the government should continue to monitor the situation in Nicaragua but remain neutral unless it poses a threat to national security. "We should stay out of it for now, but they won't. They never do," Miss Wallace said.

New magistrate vows to uphold justice

By ED TODD
Staff Writer

Andrew [illegible]ope III vowed to uphold justi[illegible] and treat the rich and poor with equal fairness when U.S. District Judge Lucius D. Bunton swore him in as the U.S. Magistrate for the Big Bend National Park area in far southwestern Texas.

Pope, 43, succeeds U.S. Magistrate Thomas McCampbell of Terlinqua. McCampbell died recently.

Among those witnessing the brief ceremony Thursday in the Midland federal courtroom were Pope's family, including his father, Chief Justice A. Jack Pope Jr. of the Texas Supreme Court; his mother, Allene; his wife, Carla, and their children, Drew, 17, and Ryan, 3.

"Of course, I'm very proud of him and hope he enjoys his career of being a judge," said his father, who, at 71, has been a judge for 38 years — since age 33. "I think it's the highest form of public service."

The senior Pope said he was particularly pleased that the federal judges, who appointed his son to the post, "looked upon Jack with favor."

"I'm highly pleased. Being appointed a federal magistrate is a great honor."

Pope said he was not instrumental in securing his son's appointment. "He did not ask me to lift a hand."

Magistrate Pope, a Corpus Christi lawyer who now lives on a ranch south of Marathon, said he hopes to maintain the tradition of his family and that of Bunton in being a good judge.

The magistrate's duties include dealing with immigration violations and drug-enforcement matters, presiding over petty-offense cases, hearing complaints and setting bail on defendants bound over to the federal grand jury.

Pope quipped that since lawyers "practice law," then "I wonder if it's 'practice judge' " for judges.

"Everytime you (as a lawyer) go into the courtroom, you're practicing," said the magistrate. "It's the same being a judge. Sometimes you're wrong, and a good judge recognizes it before doing any harm. It takes a good judge to recognize he makes an error. I'm not going to say that every decision I make could be wrong."

The magistrate's office is at Panther Junction on the grounds of Big Bend National Park. He will hear cases in the area, which includes Terlingua, Presidio, Study Butte, Boquillas, Alpine, Marfa and Fort Davis.

"And there are a lot of crimes committed in that park," said U.S. Magistrate Darrell F. Smith, who serves the six-county Midland-Odessa Division of the federal court's system Western District of Texas.

Pope said he feels "very honored" over the appointment. "I hope I'll be good."

Bunton said the court system is "indeed fortunate to have a person of Magistrate Pope's qualifications to serve the Big Bend area.

"The (magistrate) commission that recommended him found that he was eminently qualified and so did the seven judges of the Western District of Texas," said Bunton.

Judge agrees to postpone inquiry into state senator

BEAUMONT (AP) — A state judge says he has agreed to postpone a court of inquiry until criminal proceedings against state Sen. Carl A. Parker are completed.

One of Parker's attorneys, Walter Sekaly, said he will present a motion today removing any objection to having State District Judge Jack King preside over the court of inquiry.

King's decision to postpone the court of inquiry "was all the protection we were looking for. We have no further objections as far as Judge King is concerned," Sekaly said.

Jefferson County District Attorney James McGrath called for the court of inquiry last week, after Parker said grand jury witnesses had been threatened, abused and promised a reward for testifying against Parker.

Grand jurors indicted Parker in September on felony charges of aggravated promotion of prostitution, wholesale distribution of obscene material and aggravated perjury. Parker has pleaded innocent and remains free on $15,000 bond.

Another visiting judge, Perry D. Pickett of Midland, will decide whether to dismiss the indictments against Parker during a hearing on pre-trial motions Tuesday in Criminal District Court.

Pickett replaces Judge Larry Gist.

Pickett, a retired state judge, presided over the 142nd State District Court in Midland from 1954 until his retirement at the end of his last term of office in 1980. He was succeeded by Judge Pat Baskin.

White: Party's future down middle road

AUSTIN (AP) — The Democratic Party's future, in the wake of Walter Mondale's crushing defeat, is down the middle road being traveled by state party organizations but not by the national leaders, Gov. Mark White says.

The election was "a very unfavorable comment about the national Democratic structure," White said Thursday.

"It has to recognize that we are no longer in a position, we haven't been for many years in a position, to rely solely upon the constituencies that (we) have."

While arguing that President Reagan's huge win over Walter Mondale was a victory for Reagan's personal popularity, the governor also said it showed that Democrats nationally must appeal to more middle-of-the-road voters.

White, who talked with several other governors on Wednesday, said state Democratic parties have done a good job of soliciting wide-ranging support, while the national party has relied mostly on traditional backers such as minorities and labor unions.

"They have to broaden their base. They have to have an appeal for small business people. They have to have an appeal for the jobholder; not just the unemployed. I think we've done it in Texas. I'm very proud of the business support we have," White said.

Asked when the Democratic rebuilding program would begin, White grinned and said, "We started sometime around eight o'clock Wednesday morning."

For one thing, he repeated his belief that Texas Democrats should switch from the convention system of choosing presidential candidates to a primary election.

"Apparently a lot of people don't go to the convention anymore. It's a sign of the times," White said.

"They like to make their political choices quickly and efficiently. They don't like to spend all day arguing about issues that may not be relevant to their conditions in life. And I think the Democratic Party has to recognize that."

Analyzing Tuesday's election, the governor noted that Franklin Roosevelt in 1932 was the last Democratic presidential candidate to win a landslide victory without being an elected incumbent.

Environmentalists say EPA ignoring concerns

HARLINGEN (AP) — Environmental and labor groups in three Gulf Coast states have accused the federal government of ignoring their concern over ocean burning of toxic waste and announced plans this week to boycott a federal meeting on the issue.

But it was concern for public opinion that prompted the agency to invite the groups to attend a Nov. 13 meeting and participate in planning ocean incineration research, an Environmental Protection Agency official said Thursday.

"This is a roundtable meeting to discuss different approaches to research and it came about in response to citizens, scientists and people on Capitol Hill saying that more research was necessary," said Lisa Barrera, an environmental scientist with the EPA in Washington.

Some environmentalists maintain, however, that the kind of research being planned is premature and is not what was requested.

"EPA's strategy is to risk poisoning the ocean by calling it research," said J.J. Jacobson of the Sierra Club in Austin. "They are not listening to objections from the public."

Last November, more than 6,000 Texans attended a public hearing in Brownsville to express concern over plans to allow a private company to burn 80 million gallons of waste on two incineration ships off the Texas coast. Agency officials said it was the largest such hearing ever held by the EPA.

Groups from Texas, Louisiana, Alabama and other states wrote letters to the EPA complaining that research isn't needed until it has been decided whether ocean incineration is necessary.

"The meeting to plan research strategies is putting the cart before the horse," said Brian Berwick.

Judge making 9,000 prison workers sign his order

HOUSTON (AP) — A federal judge probably decided that all 9,000 Texas prison workers sign his latest order to make sure everyone understands the terms, says an attorney for the inmates.

Donna Brorby, a San Francisco attorney who represents inmates in a lawsuit which won sweeping reforms, said she believed U.S. District Judge William Wayne Justice was not angry when he said the workers sign copies of the order.

"You can't be held in contempt if you don't know an order exists," Ms. Brorby said.

Justice's order was issued Oct. 22, after officials found that Don Costilow, warden of the Texas Department of Corrections' Wynne Unit, was violating a portion of the first reform ruling.

Costilow was suspended for two weeks and reassigned after it was learned he still used inmate supervisors over other prisoners, a practice forbidden in Justice's original reform order.

Prison spokesman Charles Brown said the transfer to the prison system's classifications division was not a demotion and that Costilow took no cut in pay.

The office of Vincent Nathan, the special master Justice appointed to make sure his order was being followed, found that Costilow replaced inmate supervisors with prison employees every time he learned workers from the special master's office were in his prison.

Ms. Brorby said she thought Justice was dismayed by Nathan's finding Costilow deliberately disobeyed an order and "is resolved it won't happen again."

Prison spokesman Phil Guthrie said a list of the employees who signed the order is being prepared.

"When we handed out their paychecks Friday, we gave the employees a copy of the judge's order and they all had to acknowledge they received it," Guthrie said.

The order said in part that Nathan uncovered "efforts on the part of a Texas Department of Corrections warden and other high-ranking unit officials to hinder the special master's office."

Early morning argument ends with one woman hospitalized

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — An early morning argument over money ended with one woman with a punctured lung and another woman in the city jail this morning on attempted murder charges.

Tammie Ann Washington, a 21-year-old woman who listed her address as a Second St. motel in Odessa, was listed in stable condition in an Odessa hospital this morning. According to police reports, the victim allegedly was stabbed by a 22-year-old woman listing her address as the Metro Inn in Midland, after the two argued over money in the parking lot of the Steak-N-Egg Restaurant, 1831 E. Second St.

The two women were arguing about 1:55 a.m. in the restaurant parking lot, when Ms. Fisher reportedly ran into the restaurant and brought out a butcher knife. Ms. Washington suffered one stab wound to the upper back, which reportedly punctured her lung.

Because the wound was life-threatening, Ms. Fisher is facing the attempted murder charges, rather than aggravated assault charges. Bond was set at $5,000.

Midlander who escaped from city jail turns himself in

From Staff Reports

A 29-year-old Midland man who escaped Nov. 1 from the city jail turned himself in a week later, according to Midland police.

Henry Benivedez Sanchez of 1114 E. Spruce and his attorney appeared Thursday before a probation officer, according to Lt. Jim Colburn of the Midland police.

Sanchez, who was jailed on two theft charges and two warrants, was booked into Midland County Jail Thursday for escape and driving with a suspended license, sheriff's office reports said.

The man escaped from the city jail by staying behind in the day room at 8 p.m, when the rest of the prisoners were returned to their cells for the night. His absence was not confirmed until 11 p.m., according to police reports.

In other police activity, a video cassette recorder valued at $1,100 was reported stolen by Thomas Hunt, 803 W. Michigan. According to reports, Hunt's house was burglarized between 7 a.m. and 11 a.m. Thursday. Entry was gained by breaking out a bedroom window. Also missing from the residence was about $8 in change.

Tom Nutt, owner of Neighbors Trading Post, 1810 W. Florida, reported the theft of a $500 air-powered nail gun. The theft took place at about 3 p.m. Thursday, reports said.

A $450 lawn sweeper was reported stolen by Joe Perez, landscaping supervisor for the Racquet Club, 3009 Racquet Club Drive. According to police, Perez said he had put the three-wheeled lawn sweeper outside the fence near Wadley Avenue at 2 p.m. Thursday. When he returned two hours later, it was gone.

Two pit bulldogs, valued at a total of $225, were reported stolen from the backyard of Phillip Smith, 1214 E. Chestnut. A section of the fence was kicked in between 6:15 p.m. and 6:40 p.m. Thursday, according to reports.

The dogs were described as a 3-month-old dark brown female with white on her face, chest and the tip of her tail; and a 2½-month-old dark brown male with black and yellow streaks. The male has white hair on his chest in the shape of a diamond.

In complaints made to the county sheriff's office, two black and white television sets were reported stolen from Sound Machine, 1024 Andrews Highway. The televisions, valued at a total of $490, were discovered missing at 5 p.m. Wednesday.

Third man sought in connection with sexual assault

From Staff Reports

STANTON — Two men are in custody this morning and a third suspect is being sought by Martin County deputies in connection with the Wednesday night sexual assault of a Midland woman.

Albert Garza Aguero, 32, and Lorenzo Jackson, 20, both of Big Spring, were charged with aggravated assault and advised of their rights Thursday by Justice of the Peace Robert Pine, who set bond at $2,500 each. The two will be formally arraigned in Martin County, Pine said.

A 22-year-old man still is being sought in the case, according to Martin County Deputy John Castro.

The 29-year-old victim said she met the three men Wednesday night in a Midland nightclub. The four left the club at about 9:30 p.m. to go for a drive, Castro said.

According to the woman's statements, the men drove her to Martin County, about 10 miles north of Midland on State Highway 349. Two of the men then raped her in the car, she told Castro.

After the assault, the men drove back to Midland and stopped at a northside convenience store when their car overheated, her statement said. As they were pouring water into the radiator, she escaped and called Midland police from a nearby phone.

The case was referred to the Midland County Sheriff's office because it happened outside of town. Deputies then referred it to Martin County, which has jurisdiction and is investigating the case.

According to Capt. Tommy Jones of the Midland County Sheriff's Office, a Midland police officer located the car with the three men, who were identified by the woman as her assailants. Aguero and Jackson were arrested at the scene but the third man escaped.

The woman was treated at a Midland hospital, Castro said.

Burglars 'wipe out' reserve supply of toilet paper at Odessa College

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — Burglars wiped out Odessa College's reserve supply of toilet paper sometime Wednesday night or Thursday morning, making off with about 3,072 rolls valued at more than $750, according to police reports.

The burglars somehow managed to enter the locked storage building on the OC campus between 5 p.m., Wednesday and 9 a.m., Thursday, but there were no signs of forced entry. An OC official told police he believed a forklift was used by the burglars, as the pallets on which the cases sat were also missing.

The burglars backed a truck into the storage building and loaded the entire reserve supply, according to reports. Listed as a burglary of a building, an investigation continues, while the campus is short 32 cases with 96 rolls in each case.

Retha Lindsey at OC said this was the second recent toilet-paper heist, the first having claimed about 4,600 rolls. Luckily, about 140 cases were delivered Thursday, replenishing the campus supply, said Ms. Lindsey.

"I hope they catch the vile fiends," said another school official. "It really hits us where we live."

Big Bend region photos featured at Presidential Museum exhibit

From Staff Reports

ODESSA — The Big Bend region will be featured in a photo exhibit scheduled to open Nov. 20 at the Presidential Museum.

Photos of this unique part of Texas by Santa Fe Artist Jim Bones Jr. will be on exhibit through Jan. 5.

Odessa man in satisfactory condition after head-on collision

From Staff Reports

A 29-year-old Odessa man was listed in satisfactory condition at Midland Memorial Hospital this morning after a head-on collision on Interstate 20 Thursday night.

John Rodriguez suffered multiple fractures in the 5:15 p.m. accident, according to a MMH spokeswoman.

Rodriguez was traveling west on the north service road of I-20 at the intersection of County Road 1300 when his 1979 Mercury collided with a vehicle dr[illegible]n by Harvey Lee Cameron, no age available, of Odessa, the Department of Public Safety reported.

Cameron, driving a 1982 Ford tanker, was eastbound on the same service road when he attempted to make a left turn onto County Road 1300 and the two vehicles collided head-on in the westbound lane of the interstate, according to the DPS.

Cameron was not injured in the accident.

DPS Trooper Ben Valdez was the investigating officer.

STATE in brief

'Battle of tall trees' ends with city on top — by fir

DALLAS (AP) — A brief flap over who'll have the biggest Christmas has ended with the city of Dallas coming out on top — by fir.

City Hall officials reacted defensively early Thursday when they learned that a chic North Dallas shopping mall is buying a Christmas tree 5 feet taller, packed with 20 times as many lights and scheduled to be erected three weeks earlier than the municipal tree.

As it turns out, however, City Hall's claim to the largest Christmas tree was never seriously in danger, Galleria mall officials admitted later Thursday to fudging on a news release about their tree.

"I'm going to have to tell you something," Galleria spokeswoman Barbara Womble said. "This tree was not cut down in the forest. This is a 'faux' tree."

A what tree?

"F-A-U-X. That's a fancy word for artificial," she said.

Candidate to try again

AUSTIN (AP) — John Thomas Henderson, the 77-year-old Republican who came close to defeating Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace, says he will try again for a seat on the commission.

Henderson said Thursday he plans to run against Commissioner Buddy Temple, a Democrat, when Temple's term expires in 1986.

Henderson lost to Wallace by a 50.3 percent to 49.7 percent margin.

White wants paperwork cut

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Mark White wants the state Board of Education he appointed and the Texas Education Agency the board runs to act immediately to reduce paperwork requirements imposed on public school teachers.

White said Thursday that in talking with teachers, many have complained to him about a state law passed by the Legislature in 1981 which shifted curriculum writing duties from lawmakers to professional educators.

Although the law was a single page, White said, the guidelines it prompted run to 246 pages and have forced teachers to devote considerable time to meeting its requirements.

Board proposes failing students be allowed to continue outside activities

AUSTIN (AP) — A proposal that high school athletes, along with band and pep squad members, be allowed to continue their out-of-classroom activities while making up failing grades has been placed in the hands of the State Board of Education.

The proposal was approved Thursday, 6-2, by the Legislature Education Board, which monitors actions of the newly appointed education panel.

The state board also will consider an LEB-approved provisions that limits out of school practice, such as athletics, band and pep squad, to eight hours per week for each activity.

Jon Brumley, chairman of the state board, told the LEB another matter to come before the board today and Saturday was the problem of providing competency tests for public school teachers. He said the state has enough money to present the initial tests to teachers but studies are being made of future more detailed tests on the subjects taught.

One estimate calls for $5 million to prepare the second round of tests and another $8 million to administer them.

Speaker Gib Lewis and Rep. Bill Haley, D-Center, an author of the 1984 school reform bill that barred participation in athletics by students who fail one course, strenously opposed the grade makeup provision at Thursday's LEB meeting.

Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby and Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, Senate sponsor of the reform act, said the proposal carried out the "spirit" of the public school changes made in the summer special sessiol.

Haley said he agreed with the eight-hour limit on out of school practice but the makeup plan put too much responsibility on teachers and added to their duties.

"Don't put all this on the teacher to have to deal with something other than their academic duties," Haley said.

State Board of Education ready to make final textbook decisions

AUSTIN (AP) — The State Board of Education is ready to make its final $55.4 million decision Saturday on what textbooks it will recommend to local schools for the 1985-86 school year.

Texas' complicated method of selecting school textbooks was almost completed Thursday when critics and supporters of the long list recommended by the State Textbook Committee had a last chance at public comment.

Evolution, abortion and sex education were the main topics Thursday, as usual.

"This is not so much a sex-ed book as it is a how-to book," complained Clova Wood of Garland about an advanced biology book for high school seniors.

Supporters of the science and biology books claimed too many texts had been "dumbed-out" by previous textbook selection groups that listened too much to the critics.

"Most of the biology books in the present adoption list have been precensored by the publishers and are therefore unsuitable for use as science textbooks until they have been revised back to their former satisfactry conditon," said Steven Schafersman, president of the Texas Council for Science Education, which he said contains many science teachers.

Noted textbook critic Mel Gabler, of Longview, appears Thursday at a public hearing before the State Board of Education in Austin.

AP Laserphoto

"I assure you that textbook publishers are good God-fearing people and most authors of these textbooks formerly taught science and biology," said John W. Theall, Southwest vice president for Silver Burditt Co., a publisher.

All witnesses heard Thursday had appeared previously before the State Textbook Committee.

"We are not asking for creation to be taught," said Mel Gabler of Longview, who with his wife, Norma, have appeared at numerous hearing in the past to protest the teaching of evolution in schools.

"We're merely asking that the texts present students with the 'pro' and 'con' evidence for and against evolution so they can form their own opinions from balanced scientific information," Gabler said.

Michael Hudson, Texas coordinator for the People for American Way, congratulated the new appointed state board because, he said, neither the Textbook Committee nor the state commissioner of education "has caved in to pressure to reject books or require textual changes based on political or religious ideology."

Former housing authority director indicted in ElPaso

EL PASO (AP) — A federal grand jury has indicted the former director of the El Paso Housing Authority and two other department supervisors on charges of conspiring to misapply government building materials.

The indictment, unsealed Wednesday, alleges that Sal Canchola, who resigned in September as El Paso Housing Authority executive director, misapplied government property in ordering employees to build a cabinet for his Ruidoso, N.M., cabin.

The indictment also alleges that Canchola ordered the cabinet to be constructed, loaded and delivered during Housing Authority working hours.

After a court appearance Wednesday, Canchola, 40, said he has receipts to prove he paid for the $150 worth of building materials the government alleges he stole.

Also indicted were Arturo Castor, 42, and Joe Flores, 36.

Castor and Flores were charged with conspiring to misapply government materials and with ordering the construction and delivefy of the cabinet.

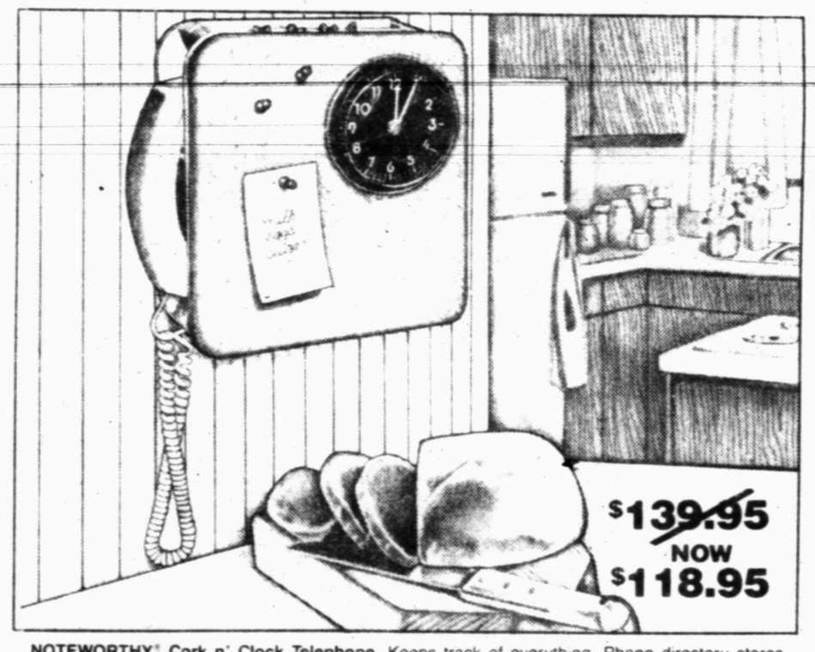

The two men also were charged with intimidating a Housing Authority supply clerk.

Castor remained free on a $50,000 bond, while Flores was being held at the El Paso County Detention Center.

Government officials said the indictments were the result of a six-month-long FBI and Department of Housing and Urban Development investigation.

Economy predicted to grow 4 percent annually

NEW YORK (AP) — President Reagan's economic advisers are sticking with their forecast that the economy will grow at a solid rate of about 4 percent annually through the end of the decade.

In a more sobering report, the government said Thursday that the U.S. foreign trade deficit hit a record $33.3 billion from July through September as a flood of imports swamped a meager gain in exports.

Major banks, meanwhile, began lining up behind an 11.75 percent prime lending rate, down from 12 percent, which had prevailed since Oct. 26.

William Niskanen, a member of the President's Council of Economic Advisers, confirmed that he and his two colleagues had agreed on a 4 percent growth figure, which will be part of the proposed fiscal 1986 budget.

The forecast will figure in discussions Reagan is expected to hold next week with his economic aides, at the outset of lengthy administration consultations on the shape of the 1986 budget.

In the foreign trade report, the Commerce Department said the new three-month deficit was 29 percent higher than the old record of $25.9 billion set from January through March this year. The government put the April-June deficit at $25.7 billion, a revision from an earlier estimate of $26.3 billion.

The weaker performance in the third quarter was blamed on a 9.9 percent jump in imports that swamped a 0.7 percent rise in exports.

The department said the red ink for the first nine months of the year would translate into a merchandise trade deficit for all of 1984 of $113.2 billion, 85 percent above the $61.1 billion record set in 1983.

The move away from the 12 percent prime that had prevailed since Oct. 26 was initiated Wednesday by Citibank, the nation's second-largest bank, which was joined by a handful of big money center and regional banks.

Bank of America, the nation's largest, and nearly all of the other big money center banks matched the cut Thursday.

The quarter-point reduction was the fourth cut in six weeks, and left the benchmark for short-term business loans at its lowest level since early April.

Some economists said the rate might move even lower by the end of the year, but they said bankers were still uncertain about whether the recent decline in market-based rates was likely to persist.

In other economic news Thursday:

—The Federal Reserve Board said the nation's basic money supply contracted by $600 million in late October, generally in line with credit analysts' expectations.

—Assets of the nation's 337 money-market mutual funds shot up $4.14 billion to $199.75 billion in the latest week, the Investment Company Institute said. Over the past nine weeks, assets have shot up $19.9 billion, said the Washington-based mutual fund trade group.

—The number of Americans filing claims for unemployment benefits for the first time fell to 412,000 in late October, down 14,000 from the previous week, the Employment and Training Administration.

—Help wanted advertising in the nation's newspapers rose slightly in September after a sharp decline in August, the Conference Board said.

—American businesses plan to spend 9.8 percent more next year on new plants and equipment, but inflation will consume more than half the increase, leaving a 4.3 percent real increase in capital spending, McGraw-Hill Economics said.

—Ford Motor Co. and the United Auto Workers union have reached a tentative agreement on a new Canadian labor contract covering 14,200 workers, averting a strike threatened for noon today. Ratification is scheduled Sunday.

Ford, UAW tentatively make pact

TORONTO (AP) — Despite spreading wildcat strikes, Ford Motor Co. reached a tentative agreement with the United Auto Workers and the union lifted today's deadline for a walkout at all nine Ford plants in Canada.

Robert White, the UAW's Canadian director, said he was angered by the unauthorized work stoppages Thursday, but union and company spokesmen said the walkouts did not threaten the tentative settlement.

The settlement was announced late Thursday afternoon, about 18 hours before today's noon strike deadline. White said the 14,200 Ford workers in Canada would be asked to ratify the pact in meetings on Sunday.

At about 3:30 p.m., workers in the paint shop at the St. Thomas, Ontario, assembly plant walked out two hours before the end of their shift. Soon afterward, the entire plant closed down.

George Pernokis, acting union plant chairman, said the workers were "tired of just waiting around and waiting around" for a contract.

White dismissed them as "some hotheads who don't understand the process or want to sabotage it."

Company officials said several hundred workers showed up for the night shift, but they were not enough to reopen the plant.

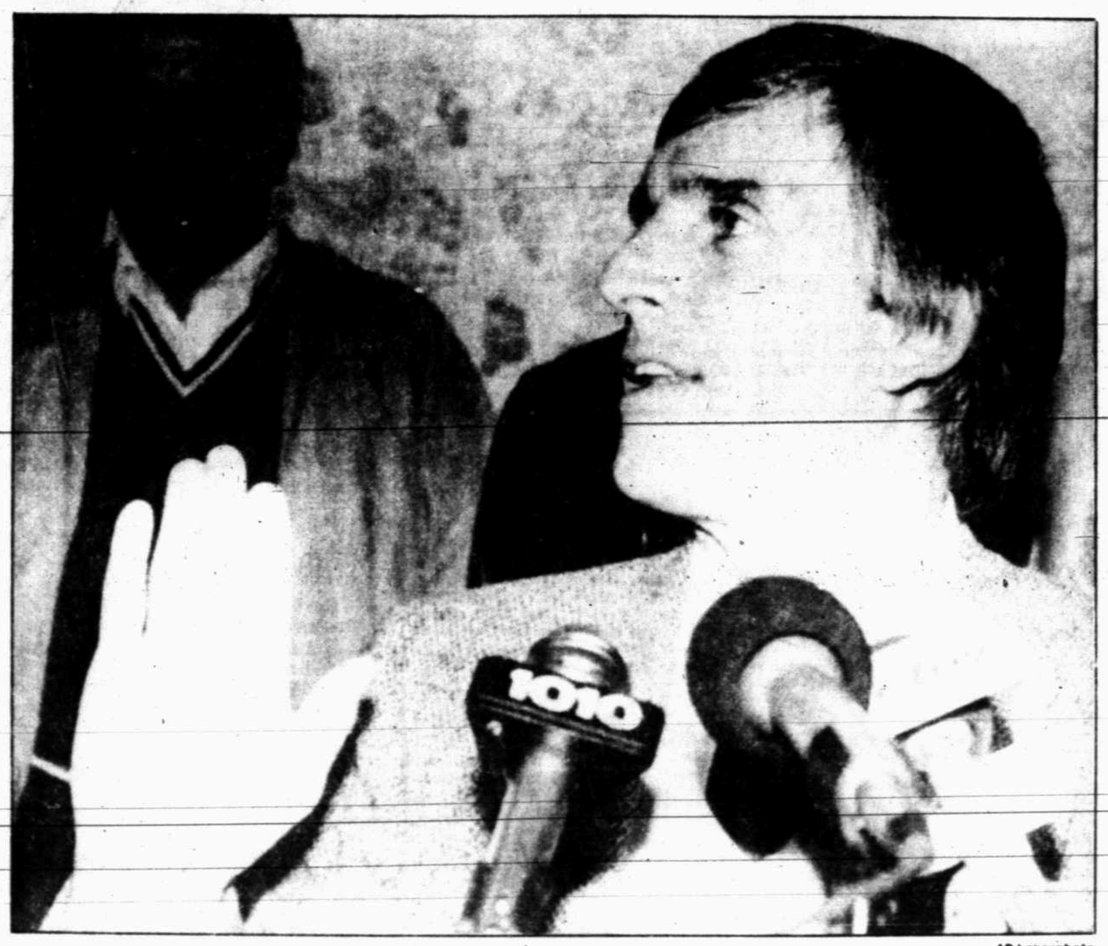

Workers at two plants in Oakville, Ontario, left their jobs during the middle of the evening shift, said Ford spokesman James Hartford.

Wage provisions of the three-year proposed contract are almost identical to those in the pact reached with General Motors Canada Ltd. after a 12-day strike, White said.

The most important difference is that while all workers get an extra 2½ days off, Ford employees with 10 to 15 years' seniority get an additional 2½ days, for a total of five, he said.

A Ford-UAW agreement covering 115,000 hourly workers in the United States was ratified last month. In September, the union and General Motors Corp. agreed on a contract covering 350,000 U.S. hourly workers.

The Canadian union refused to accept a "rubber-stamp copy" of the U.S. agreement at GM, leading the strike by 36,000 GM workers in Canada beginning Oct. 17 and ending with a pact White said was tailored to Canadian economic conditions.

1,200 Texaco workers layed off by year-end

PORT ARTHUR, Texas (AP) — More than 1,200 people will be out of work at Texaco's Port Arthur refinery by the end of the year, but at least 750 employees represented by unions will leave with a union-negotiated separation plan.

Another 150 employees will leave with the minimum benefits covered in the union contract, the Port Arthur News reported in today's editions.

"The total number of people being laid off remains the same," said Paul Weeditz, a Texaco spokesman.

The voluntary layoff program provides employees with a week's pay for each full year of service, $5,000 in place of unemployment compensation and as much as $2,000 for retraining.

Each time a worker signed up for the voluntary separation plan, a job was saved at the plant, officials have said.

"They are still leaving," Weeditz said. "It is simply a matter of what benefits they will get and if they are going voluntarily or involuntarily."

Pennzoil disposing base, precious metals

HOUSTON — Pennzoil Co. says its mining subsidiary, Duval Corp., will dispose of its base metals, precious metals and potash operations and properties.

Pennzoil also says it plans to write down $100 million of the mining assets of Duval, which was once the nation's fifth largest copper producer.

Pennzoil, a Houston-based oil and gas company, also said it plans a one-time write down of $84 million for the assets of Atlas Processing Co., a Shreveport, La., refiner of motor fuels.

Pennzoil's board of directors authorized the actions Thursday, and both value adjustments will be against fourth quarter earnings, the company said.

A company spokesman said it is uncertain whether a buyer can be found for Duval's base metals, precious metals properties and potash operations.

Duval plans to keep its Texas sulfur operations, which have been profitable, the spokesman said.

Duval's metals operations have lost money since 1981, when base metals prices weakened. For the first nine months of this year, metals operations posted a loss of $27.7 million. Losses for 1983 amounted to more than $30 million.

Pennzoils's metals and agricultural minerals accounted for 3 percent of consolidated operating income last year. The company said it plans to concentrate on oil and gas exploration and production, as well as the refining and marketing of lubricants and other petroleum products.

Duval has three Arizona properties that produce copper and molybdenum, an alloying metal used to make steel.

Conley hopeful strike ends soon

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) — A union spokesman says he is encouraged by progress in contract negotiations that could end a strike by 6,400 aerospace workers at the General Dynamics plant here.

Jim Conley, of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, said there was "a small movement" in talks about economic issues. Conley also said there was progress on non-economic issues.

Despite the progress, Conley said he cannot predict when the strike might end.

"As long as talks continue, we're encouraged," he said.

Dollar increases as gold eases

LONDON (AP) — The dollar surged ahead against key currencies in early trading today as the markets discounted speculation that U.S. interest rates will be lowered. Gold prices eased.

Dealers reported that the dollar rebounded from a two-month low after interest rates edged up despite earlier expectations that the Federal Reserve Board would lower the key discount rate from 9 percent to 8½ percent following a meeting of its policy-making Open Market Committee on Wednesday.

But the Fed Fund rate, a key indicator that is the peg for most short-term rates, edged up to 9⅝ percent late Thursday from 9 percent.

Lower interest rates would make the dollar less attractive to investors. High rates have been behind the dollar's strength in recent months.

In Tokyo, the dollar closed at 241.20 yen, up from Thursday's late rate of 240.60 yen.

Gross premium taxes over $324 million

AUSTIN—State Board of Insurance reports gross premium taxes collected by SBI in the 1984 fiscal year, which ended Aug.31, came to over $324 million, compared to $186.6 million for fiscal 1983.

Part of the difference in the collections for the two years comes from changes to provide for pre-payment of premium taxes, resulting in shift in payments.

The 1984 figures don't include taxes of surplus lines and unauthorized insurers, SBI reports.

Foreign stock and fire and casualty companies accounted for the largest group in the 1984 premium tax payments, with $112 million, followed by foreign life insurers at $92.3 million.

Domestic stock fire and casualty companies contributed $20.8 million, while domestic life insurance companies paid $12.5 million.

County mutual fire and casualty companies $11.2 million.

Premium tax rates came in for modification during the special legislative session this summer, in an attempt to increase revenues, and to head off legal challenges to the premium tax laws because of differing rates, which have been charged foreign (out-of-Texas) and domestic (Texas-based) companies.

Agriculture Commissioner Jim Hightower has joined those urging that Texas seek better ways to dispose of hazardous waste.

Hightower has called for banning "particularly persistent, especially toxic wastes" by 1987, and adopting a "waste generator fee" which would reward "prevention and treatment rather than disposal."

Hightower says the fee should be set at a level "adequate to make sure that...prevention and treatment are made more attractive" and to raise funds "to clean up our existing hazardous waste sites."

Texas, Hightower argues, needs a State "Superfund" similar to that created at the Federal level to provide money for cleaning up hazardous waste sites, a task Comptroller Bob Bullock has estimated could cost the State $200 million.

Hightower also contends local government should be charged with developing local hazardous waste management plans and given more authority to enforce hazardous waste laws.

Local governments, Hightower says, "know the problems of small generators and 'midnight dumpers' better than anyone. They already pick up the gargabe."

Also needed, Hightower feels, is more State-supported research and education on waste reduction and treatment technologies, which he says could include developing a "Texas Center for Hazardous Waste Reduction and Treatment," as has been proposed by Rep. Mark Stile, D-Beaumont.

State Board of Insurance held a pre-hearing conference on title insurance matters, with the hearing on rules and rates set for 9 a.m. Tuesday, Nov. 13.

Two of the agenda items for the 1984 hearing were recommended by an advisory committee appointed earlier this year to study the "marketability of title" issue.

One of the proposals would amend the form for "Commitment for Title Insurance," while the other would amend the form of the "Owner Policy of Title Insurance."

"When taken together," the committede reported, "these changes would be the most appropriate means possible for clarifying the fact that Texas policies...do not insure the marketability of title."

It isn't the intent of the committee, the report says, to change the scope of any exclusion in policies.

The committee also suggested language in the two items be incorporated in the real estate contract promulgated by the Texas Real Estate Commission.

SBI also reports it is conducting a second survey of group health insurers, non-profit hospital service plans and health maintenance organizations for statistical information on coverage for care and treatment of alcoholism and other drug dependency.

The companies are required by law to respond to the questionnaire.

SBI made its first survey in May, 1983, for 1981 and 1982, but the results were described as "non-consistent," and the new request will cover those years, and 1983.

The questionnaire is to be completed and returned to the department by Nov. 23.

SBI is attempting to discover the extent to which coverage is being offered and used.

Results of the survey aren't expected to be ready until after the first of the year, SBI indicates.

BUSINESS MIRROR

There are two sides to coin

By JOHN CUNNIFF
AP Business Analyst

NEW YORK (AP) — For five years the dollar's buying power in international trade has been rising, and all the time somebody or other has been betting that it would fall, and losing his shirt doing so.

The dollar just hasn't fallen, and millions of Americans have been enjoying the results and paying the penalty too, although most aren't even aware that this vague abstraction has had such an impact on their lives.

The most obvious positive effect has been to allow Americans to import goods and services at relatively low prices. The negative consequence has been in effect to "export" jobs by the purchase of foreign rather than domestic goods.

Nobody can single out any one answer and say it explains the phenomenon of the rising dollar, but two factors obviously have been at work:

—High interest rates, combined with relatively low inflation, which have made financial and other investments in United States highly profitable.

—Security — political, economic, physical — which holds great attractions to big foreign investors.

There is another important reason that gets clouded by the old cause-and-effect conundrum. Since the strong dollar allows the United States to import inexpensively it has, therefore, been sending a lot of dollars abroad.

This transfer of dollars to other countries results in a trade deficit, and that deficit hit a record $33.3 billion from July through September, the Commerce Department reported this week. It suggests a deficit for the entire year of $113.2 billion.

Left with a lot of dollars, America's trading partners have searched for the best investments, and finding them in the United States. Sending the dollars back, they have obtained in return some of the best real estate and often a share in U.S. companies. Much of the money went into bonds.

An index of the dollar's purchasing power in international trade has registered all this activity. Arbitrarily calling the dollar of March 1973 a full dollar, that is a 100 percent dollar, the following record ensued.

In December 1979 an anemic dollar had a trading power in relation to 10 trading currencies of just 85.82, or less than 86 cents. Two year later it had not only recovered but had exceeded the base period with a value of 104.69.

The big rise was yet to come. By late in 1982 the index was up to 117.36, and then it took off, reaching 131.68 in the final month of 1983. The rise has continued this year, and recently read 141.47.

All that brings up the point that has been stressed throughout the rise: Somehow, sometime the dollar is likely to fall, if only because all things to do with economies seem to have a cyclical nature.

Economist Walter Heller puts it this way: "At some point in the not-too-distant future the worm will turn." Others with a touch of grim humor say the coin will flip or that the golden dollar might fall like lead.

The most common reason for saying so is that American interest rates aren't as attractive as they used to be, or that the American economy will soon enter a cyclical change toward recession or that inflation might ensue.

Nobody knows. That much has been demonstrated in five years of big losses by those who thought the dollar would weaken, the latest being a feckless Japanese trader who cost his bank nearly $50 million.

But the probability of a decline seems to be increasing, a change that the Federal Reserve recognizes and hopes to cushion. But the fear still exists: What if foreigners pull their billions out in one vast movement?

Heller, who was President Kennedy's chief economic adviser, reminds us:

"The imports flooding in from abroad serve to fatten our current living standards and hold inflation in check. And the capital inflows ... serve to put the savings of the rest of the world at the disposal of the U.S. expansion.

"But there will be a day of reckoning."

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

Taxable income sometimes better

By BILL DOYLE

Q. After I retired two years ago, I invested about $53,000 in a municipal bond unit investment trust with a 10.75 percent tax-free yield. I spoke to a broker about this recently. He suggested that, because of my income tax bracket, I should be in mutual funds with higher but taxable yields. I then sold my unit trust holding and invested in two mutual funds he recommended.

Did I do right, or did the broker steer me wrong?

A. That depends on your income tax bracket. If you were in a relatively low tax bracket when you retired, you shouldn't have invested in the municipal bond unit investment trust.

Municipal bonds pay interest that is not subject to federal income tax. Unit trusts and mutual funds holding municipal bonds collect that interest and pass it along to shareholders — also free from federal income tax.

Because of the tax-free feature, municipal bonds pay lower interest than other bonds of similar quality and maturities. As a result, investors in lower tax brackets get more "keeping money" from taxable yields from other bonds and from unit trusts and mutual funds holding bonds paying taxable interest.

As a rough rule of thumb, you shouldn't own individual municipal bonds or unit trusts and mutual funds holding municipal bonds unless you are in a federal income tax bracket of 30 percent or higher.

Assuming you're in a lower tax bracket, the broker who put you into the higher-yielding mutual funds steered you in the right direction. However, I'd question his recommendation that you invest in two mutual funds. You would have paid a lower commission by buying shares of just one mutual fund.

Iran appears to be changing war tactics

By JUAN-CARLOS GUMUCIO

TEHRAN, Iran (AP) — Iran's recent ground offensive against Iraq and new high-level military appointments suggest Iran is shifting from "human wave" tactics to more conventional warfare, according to diplomatic and military observers here.

The sources, who spoke on condition they would not be identified, say the moves indicate that Iran has decided against launching its long-anticipated "final offensive" against its Arab neighbor.

The sources also say the moves may be the first steps in an overall re-evaluation of Iran's military policy and procedures in the four-year-old conflict.

Iran appears to be rethinking its military strategy in part because of critical weaponry shortages and growing public concern about the soaring human cost of the conflict. Experts say Iran has suffered as many as 750,000 casualties — three times the reported toll of Iraq — since the conflict began, in September 1980, over control of the Shatt al-Arab waterway separating the two countries at the head of the Persian Gulf.

Much of the blame for the high number of casualties has fallen on the split command structure of the Iranian military forces, which has pitted regular army officers against the more religiously dogmatic commanders of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard. These commanders have been the key advocates of sending masses of young, often untrained recruits in "human waves" against Iraqi positions.

In a move that the observers here say will greatly strengthen the regular army's hand, Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini, the Iranian leader, late last month appointed Brig. Gen. Qassemali Zahir-Nejad as his personnal representative on the seven-member Supreme Defense Council, Iran's war cabinet. The post had been empty for the past three years.

ANOTHER REGULAR army officer, Col. Esmail Sohrabi, was named to fill Zahir-Nejad's previous post as chief of the joint staff of Iranian armed forces.

"Khomeini could well have named a Revolutionary Guard commander to represent him in the council," one Western diplomat said. "His choice is revealing."

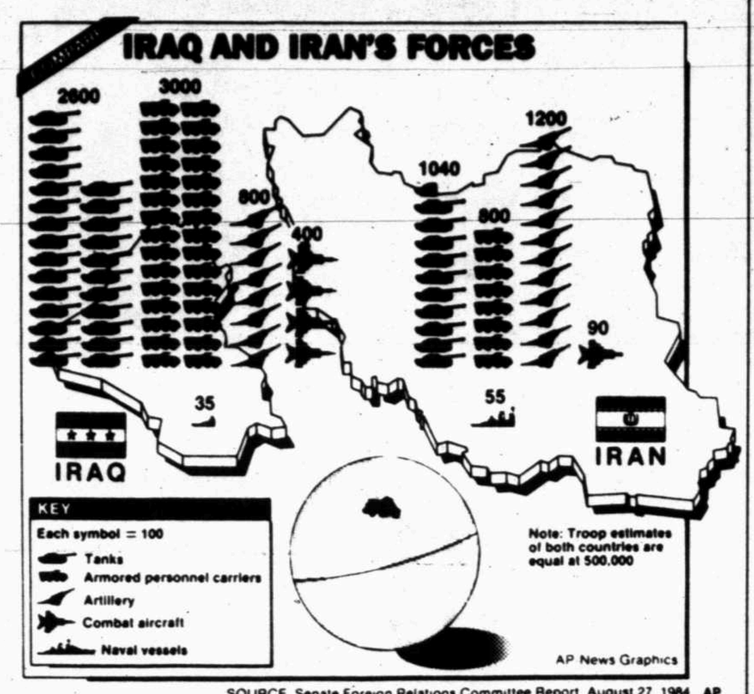

An Iranian official said the two men also appeared to be "acceptable" to Revolutionary Guard leaders.

Army officers such as Zahir-Nejad and Sohrabi are likely to insist on tactics more like those used in the October offensive against Iraq than in the "human wave" operation of last February.

On Oct. 18, Iranian forces launched a weeklong drive against Iraqi positions in the rugged Meimak mountains overlooking the Helale Plains of Iraq. They succeeded in recapturing some strategic mountain posts but failed to retake a 50-mile strip of Iranian territory occupied by Iraq since 1980.

Military analysts say the infantry and artillery operation in the Meimak heights was considerably more modest than the February offensive along the southern front, when Iran sent waves of young men to capture Iraq's oil-rich Majnoon Islands at a cost of at least 9,000 Iranian lives.

And they add that contrary to expectations, the Meimak heights operation was not followed by a new major thrust on the southern front, where most analysts believe the critical Iran-Iraq showdown will come.

SOURCE Senate Foreign Relations Committee Report, August 27, 1984 AP

This graphic compares the military strength of Iran and Iraq in their ongoing war. Diplomatic and military sources in Tehran say the recent ground offensive by Iran on its western border with Iraq imply Iran has decided against launching its long-anticipated "final offensive" against its Arab neighbor.

APPARENTLY UNWILLING to risk heavy casualties, the Iranians are likely to focus in coming months on relatively small-scale targets along the 730-mile Iran-Iraq border, sources in Tehran say.

One Western diplomat said that without a major Iranian offensive and without any political breakthrough, "stalemate remains the only option."

Such a situation would not be upsetting to the Khomeini government, which has been able to use the war as the reason it has not been successful in solving some of the nation's pressing domestic problems, such as recession and high inflation.

Unsuccessful movie produces hit soundtrack

By YARDENA ARAR
Associated Press Writer

LOS ANGELES — John Cafferty, the singing voice of Eddie in "Eddie and the Cruisers," is still reeling from the lightning success of the soundtrack that he and many others had long since written off.

"It's really something," the tanned, craggy-faced Rhode Islander said softly after a triumphant CBS Records publicist announced that the "Eddie and the Cruisers" soundtrack had just "gone platinum" — industry jargon for sales of more than 1 million.

Soundtrack successes are not exactly hot news; this year alone Prince's "Purple Rain" and the "Footloose" LP have hit No. 1 on Billboard Magazine's album charts.

But "Eddie and the Cruisers" is a variation on the hit film-smash soundtrack theme because both the movie and the record were commercial disappointments when released a year ago.

The film, about survivors of a 1960s rock band trying to solve the mystery of their charistmatic leader's disappearance, did so poorly that insiders had jokingly renamed it "Eddie and the Losers."

The soundtrack, by the unknown Cafferty and his Beaver Brown Band, dropped off the Billboard album chart after only two months and sold no more than 175,000 copies in 1983 — not an embarrassing figure, but hardly big time.

"Everybody went on with their lives, and it was kind of over for 'Eddie and the Cruisers,'" Cafferty said.

AND THAT was the end of the story — until Home Box Office and other cable services began running the film in early July.

"Eddie and the Cruisers" suddenly had found its audience, and that audience was running straight from the television screen to the record store.

The first indication that something was afoot came shortly after the film's HBO debut, when the band's road manager informed the disbelieving group that the soundtrack had sold 30,000 copies in one week. But the sales explosion, which has since propelled the LP to the Top 10, was just the beginning.

"In the clubs, all of a sudden we were stars," Cafferty said in an interview. "We were playing in the same places, for the same money, and all of a sudden there were as many people outside the club as there were inside the club."

If "Eddie" could reach so many people on television, why didn't it click on the big screen? Cafferty and others blame the fall release date.

"It was a rock 'n' roll film, and the target audience was primarily kids," he said. "Unfortunately, the film came out the week that the kids went back to school, so none of them really got to see it."

The resurrection of "Eddie and the Cruisers" put a fairy tale finish on what was already an upbeat story about a persistent bar band that finally got its big break.

A mailman's son, the 33-year-old Cafferty and four Beaver Brown members — bassist Pat Lup, drummer Kenny Jo Silva, guitarist Gary Gramolini and keyboards player Robert Cotoia — have been playing together for 11 years. The fifth, saxophonist Michael "Tunes" Antunes — the sole band member to play a member of the Cruisers in the film — joined up six years ago.

PLAYING TO college students in the winter and vacationers in the summer, the band for years worked all over the East Coast, building up a loyal following for a repertoire of '50s and early '60s rock classics as well as Cafferty's own compositions.

But record companies weren't interested. So when film director Martin Davidson approached them about writing and singing the music for "Eddie and the Cruisers," the group accepted.

"It felt a little funny in one way," Cafferty said about hearing his voice and music coming out of actor Michael Pare's mouth.

"But you're talking about six guys from Providence, R.I., a working class band just making a living playing in bars and stuff, and along comes an opportunity to make a film and go to Hollywood and get to do something really exciting."

The band's work on the film led to a record deal. Scotti Brothers, the CBS-distributed label that released the soundtrack, signed Cafferty and Beaver Brown even before the film was out. The band's debut LP will be out in January.

Many critics have said the music in "Eddie and the Cruisers" recalls works by rock star Bruce Springsteen. Cafferty, who has known Springsteen since 1973, said the similarity may be more than coincidental.

Watteau's work exhibited

By MARILYN AUGUST

PARIS (AP) — It has taken 300 years, but the first major exhibition of works by Antoine Watteau, regarded as one of France's most important 18th century painters, has gone on show at the Grand Palais.

Co-sponsored by the Louvre Museum, the National Gallery in Washington and Berlin's Charlottenbourg Castle, the show features 73 paintings and 100 drawings and engravings by the artist critics call "France's best draftsman."

Watteau died at the age of 37 as he was moving into his artistic prime. The exhibition, which appeared in Washington a few months ago, includes four of his last and best achievements, including "l'Enseigne de Gersaint," "Gilles" and two versions of "A Pilgrimage to Cythera."

Watteau has long been considered one of France's most difficult painters, for if little is known about his artistic development, even less is known about his personal life.

For the French, the show is a rare opportunity to see Watteau's finest work all at in one place. The Berlin Museum has said the famed "Enseigne" canvas will not go on loan again because of its fragility.

Watteau left his mark on many French poets, including Charles Baudelaire and Paul Verlaine, who wrote sonnets inspired by his slim, pale-skinned damsels in low-cut, satin gowns.

In "Flowers of Evil," Baudelaire likened Watteau's work to "carnivals where famous hearts wander flamboyantly, like butterflies."

'After the Fall' revived

By JAY BEAUSEIGNEUR

NEW YORK (AP) — In the new off-Broadway revival of Arthur Miller's "After The Fall," the playwright's lawyer protagonist continues to ask the three women in his life the non-musical question, "Why Did I Choose You?" If the answer remains as elusive as it was in the original production 20 years ago, this disturbing drama continues to sear the mind long after the audience has filed out of Playhouse 91.

Starring Frank Langella as Quentin, "After The Fall" takes place in Quentin's memory, bounding back and forth in time, tracing two disasterous marriages and his inability to commit himself to a third.

Is the play autobiographical? Certainly, but time and the brilliant casting of Dianne Wiest as Maggie, the pop-phenomenon singer, dim the accusation that "After The Fall" was but Miller's exorcism of his real-life wife, Marilyn Monroe, dead only two years when the play first was produced. Wiest's luminous reincarnation, coupled with Langella's less-showy interpretation as the lawyer, becomes so mesmerizing as the plot evolves that the play crosses that boundary where acting ends and reality begins.

The disasterous relationship between Maggie and Quentin is the cosmic center of Miller's play. Quentin's relationships with his mother, his analysis-prone first wife and the loving German woman to whom he is unable to commit himself, and the now-extraneous scenes with two ex-Communist lawyer colleagues about to be turned on the spit by the House Un-American Activities Committee are but well-written plot advancers.

With his vulnerable smile firmly in place, Langella may have the role of his career as Quentin. He hasn't quite been able to master his seeming embarrassment at addressing the audience.

West Texas residents look after handicapped child

MILES, Texas (AP) — Folks here look after each other.

From the grown-ups who raised thousands of dollars for little John Willie Burrus' medical bills to the youngsters who watch over John through kindergarten class each day, people take care of their own.

John Willie, 6, was born with multiple birth defects, including malformed ears, a micro-cephalic head and a kidney disorder.

When townspeople learned that the tiny child they'd known since birth would need an expensive kidney transplant, they set out to raise funds needed for the operation.

Their children are no different.

"They help him out," said John's mother, Janice Burrus. "He had been in the hospital right before he first started school and was kind of weak. Even his lunch box was heavy, so somebody carried it for him to the lunchroom every day."

Elementary school Principal Mitchell West said being with his peers has helped John to become more outgoing.

"He's beginning to talk to other people other than his parents. He's beginning to talk to other kids," West said.

MOST IMPORTANTLY, say his friends and parents, attending public school helps John learn to live a more normal life.

Although John still must be fed primarily through tubes, he now eats a few bites of solid food in the cafeteria with the other children.

Except for sessions in speech therapy and adaptive physical education, he is just an average kindergarten student, learning his ABCs and numbers with the other 31 children in the class.

"We in the community have grown up with him and know his problems," West said. "We all wanted to handle him with softer gloves. He didn't really need that."

Before attending kindergarten, John took special education classes in San Angelo.

Now, West said, "He's functioning like the greater group. In San Angelo, he was in a self-contained special education unit. We have him in the classroom where he's functioning like the regular kids. That's what his family wants. That's what his doctor wants."

"We're real pleased he's getting to go to public school," Mrs. Burrus said.

"HE JUST loves it," she said. "I had always hoped that he would get to go. He was always so anxious to go to school where his brother and sister were that I felt like he was going to get to go. And he's loving every minute of it."

At first, the strain of staying in school proved more than the boy could handle. While other children stayed until 2:45 p.m., John went home at 1 p.m.

But after several weeks of school, kindergarten has become an all-day affair.

He is smaller than his classmates. Large glasses dwarf his tiny face, and John barely tops the shoulder of the smallest of his other classmates.

Moving into a circle for a song game, John tugs at his jeans, which stubbornly refuse to stay up on his diminutive frame. As the game progresses, his blue and white shirt becomes untucked.

Organ music swells underneath the shrill voices of the children singing out the numbers in the song, designed to help the youngsters learn to count.

John sings along, hammering with a clenched fist and hitting his feet against the floor at the appropriate times.

"HE'S REAL small," said his teacher, "but there's nothing he won't try."

The other children, she said, "are kind of protective of him. They try to take care of him."

Walking to the playground for recess, a classmate places his arm around John's shoulder and helps the little boy on the merry-go-round for a fast and furious ride.

"Come on, John," the other boys say, hurrying for their ride.

One grabs John's blue hood, tucking it over the child's head to keep out the chilly wind.

The easy camaraderie between the children shows how far John has progressed since school began, she said.

"When he first came to school, for about two weeks he wouldn't talk to anyone above a whisper. His mother had to bribe him at home to get him to talk. He hasn't stopped since."

The boy moves with concentrated intensity, wasting few motions as he catches a ball during a special physical education session.

"That ball is almost as big as he is," said his teacher, smiling to watch the boy's skinny arms reach around the red, rubber ball.

"As far as academics go, he does everything they do," she said. "He just has some physical problems. But he tries everything."

LATER, THE children paste and glue pictures together. John works methodically to arrange his story for the teacher's perusal. His feet dangle several inches above the floor and he can only touch the ground by perching on the edge of his child-sized chair.

Just getting to school was an achievement for the child, who has been racked by illness and poor health since birth.

He now weighs 32 pounds, double what he weighed after a particularly severe relapse in February.

Already, John has undergone surgery seven times in his 6 years. The kidney disorder that has plagued the boy since birth worsened in the past year, necessitating the need for a transplant.

The transplant still is somewhere in the future, Mrs. Burrus said, postponed until John's bleeding ulcer is cleared up and until a donor can be found.

Residents of Miles and the Concho Valley raised more than $40,000 to help cover the costs of the expensive operation. Mrs. Burrus said the money is being kept in the bank until the operation date is set.

For now, the family — Mrs. Burrus, husband Bobby, and children Deen and Gera — are happy that John is healthy.

"He's doing as good as he ever has," Mrs. Burrus said. "I wish it could stay like this. I still just want to thank everyone in the Concho Valley.

Florida county lacks practicing lawyer

BRISTOL, Fla. (AP) — There are signs for fishing bait and power tools. There are signs for grouper dinners and waterbeds.

But there are no lawyers' shingles hanging along the main street of this blink-and-you-miss-it Panhandle town, the government seat for what is apparently the only Florida county without a single practicing lawyer.

The Florida Bar, which has about 35,000 members, lists one lawyer in Liberty County, and Circuit Court Clerk Duncan Hosford says he can name a second.

But one of the two practices is in Blountstown, just across the Apalachicola River in Calhoun County, and the other lawyer has an office in Quincy, about 25 miles north of Bristol in Gadsden County. Bristol itself is about 50 miles west of Tallahassee.

"I don't think I could live off the litigation in Liberty County," Hal Davis, the lawyer in Quincy, said. "You know, there are two sides to every lawsuit and by the time a lawyer comes down and represents one side for a while, he doesn't have any customers left. A lot of people take lawsuits seriously."

Liberty's 4,353 residents form a tightly knit community where people take an active interest in their neighbors' problems, agreed Mary Revell, a correctional officer and secretary to the sheriff, who is her distant relative by marriage.

"There are hundreds of thousands of places where you can be if you like that impersonal way of living," she said. "Some people call it nosy, but we call it concerned."

"We have a slow way of living here and you either love it or you hate it," she said. "There's no middle ground."

Air pollution not limited to outdoors

Dear Dr. Solomon: Would a housewife who spends most of her time indoors be safe from the effects of air pollution? — Mrs. K.J., Detroit

Dear Mrs. J.: Air pollution is not limited to the outdoors. Indoor sources of pollution, such as cigarette smoke, gas-burning stoves, and kerosene space heaters, also pose a significant risk. These pollutants can aggravate asthma and chronic bronchitis conditions, and increase susceptibility to respiratory infection.

Dear Dr. Solomon: My husband is recovering nicely from a heart attack and he has even started to work part-time, but he refuses to have sexual relations. He says he's afraid of having another heart attack. If I thought this was likely, I wouldn't even be writing to you about it. But I know other women whose husbands have had heart attacks and, unless all the women are lying to me, they are having sexual relations with their husbands. What is your advice? — Mrs. G.Q., New York

Dear Mrs. Q.: The physical energy expended during sexual intercourse has been equated with that needed to walk five level blocks or to climb two flights of stairs. A man who has had a myocardial infarction and who accomplish either of these tasks can safely resume sexual activity; yet many men avoid doing so. Assuming that husband and wife had a satisfactory sexual relatinship prior to the myocardial infarction, the reason seems to be an unnecessary concern on the part of the patient about the risks of sexual activity. It is also possible that a person who experiencs a serious illness suffers a loss of sexual self-esteem, and this may be a contributing factor.

I suggest your husband speak with his physician about what he can and cannot do. Of course, if you and your husband did not have a satisfactory sexual relationship before the infarction, it will not improve because of the infarction. In that case, some form of counseling might be helpful.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I am pregnant for the first time and I am planning to breast feed my baby. If I nurse frequently, does that mean that the supply of milk will run out more quickly? — Mrs. L.C., Concord, N.H.

Dear Mrs. C.: The results of one study suggest the reverse — that frequent feedings stimulate an increase in the production of milk.

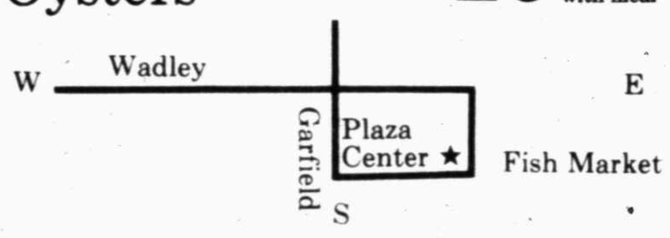

For Dudley, Cheyenne, Wyoming: The majority of patients with psoriasis develop the disease before age 30; however, it can occur at any age and is found equally in men and women.

Losing 'man's best friend' often traumatic

Copley News Service

LOS ANGELES — They'd been friends for 14 years, Scott and Val. Val and Scott.

They'd romped together through childhood and moved tentatively together through adolescence and finally settled comfortably into adulthood. Together.

By that time, their devotion to one another was complete and unquestioned. They shared the same house and the same acquaintances, who quickly learned that wherever Val went, Scottie went, too.

Loyalties ran so deep that when Scott became ill — it was his heart — Val quit her job to be with him. When he died, which was expected, she despaired — which wasn't.

"Nobody really understood how I felt," she recalled. "They just said, 'You'll get over it.'"

After all, Scottie was just a dog.

Just a pet.

And just about the best friend Valerie Inverso had.

"Most people don't realize how important pets can be," she said the other day from her apartment in surburban Hermosa Beach. "They don't realize how much emotion people put into their pets and how devastating it is to lose them."

CNS Photo

Valerie Inverso is a "companion animal crisis consultant."

IT HAD been almost two years — to the day — since she'd lost Scottie, and it was obvious from the passion in her voice that she was talking from experience. But Inverso is doing more than talking these days.

With a bachelor's degree in psychology and a master's in counseling, she's working with pet owners to help them cope with the loss of their animals — whether through death or economics or even divorce.

Her business cards read, "Valerie M. Inverso, Companion Animal Crisis Consultant. Specializing in Dealing with Separation/Loss of Pets." She's placed them in the offices of cooperating veterinarians in the area.

So far, her clients have ranged from a couple considering euthanasia for their terminally ill dog to a newly divorced mother concerned about telling her son he'd have to give up his pet when they moved into an apartment.

Helping them and others deal with pet loss "isn't different, really, from helping them deal with loss of any kind," said Inverso.

And that's her point.

"The big thing I'm trying to do is make people understand that loss is loss, whether it's the loss of a person or an heirloom or a dog," she said. "When someone is grieving over a pet, you don't tell him it doesn't matter. You don't tell him it's stupid, because to him that pet was very important."

INDEED, ACCORDING to a recent survey by Psychology Today magazine, pets are so important to Americans that they rank them ahead of friends, neighbors and their jobs.

When pet owners are depressed, the survey further revealed, they first turn to their animals — not to people — for comfort.

As a pet-loss counselor, Inverso offers not only comfort but also advice, although she insists she never makes decisions for her clients. Ideally, she said, she works with them before the actual loss of their pets, exploring such issues as euthanasia and separation.

Sometimes, she said, her job may include bringing together people with conflicting views of the same situation.

One such case involved a young couple whose dog was terminally ill with cancer. The wife saw the animal as suffering needlessly; she wanted to have him "put out of his misery." The husband, on the other hand, believed that the cancer might go into remission and that the dog could live several more years. He was against euthanasia.

"The saddest thing was that these people really needed each other at that particular time, and there was a wall between them," Inverso said. "They were hurting so much more because they didn't have each other to cry with."

IN TALKING with the husband, Inverso learned that his father had died of cancer — after having had the disease for three years.

"He reasoned that if his father had lived fairly well with cancer for several years, then the dog could, too," she said. "He was thinking, 'We didn't put my dad to sleep; we shouldn't put the dog to sleep.'"

Inverso's advice to the wife was to try to be understanding and patient, taking into consideration the link between the husband's father and his dog. The wife complied, and the dog was not euthanized immediately.

Some time later, Inverso received an emergency call from the couple, who asked her to meet them at a veterinary hospital. The dog's condition had worsened and he was expected to live only a few more days.

After talking with Inverso, the couple decided to take the dog home for a final night with them. He was put to sleep the next day, and both husband and wife were satisfied that they'd done the right thing.

"It was very easy for me to understand their wanting to have a 'last night' together," said Inverso. "When Scott was dying, I quit my job to spend his last weeks with him.

"I know that was extreme, and I don't advise my clients to do the same thing," she added. "But I looked at it as a tribute to how much he meant to me."

IT WAS that extreme action that led ultimately to Inverso's current occupation. Having left her position as a university counselor in Pennsylvania, she flew to California within 48 hours of Scottie's death.

"I needed to get away, and I had friends in Hermosa Beach," she explained. "I ended up staying six weeks."

During that time she came up with the idea of helping other pet owners cope with the kind of loss she was feeling. She felt she had the skills, based on her training, and she knew she had the empathy, based on her own experience.

So she talked with a local veterinarian who specializes in pets with cancer.

"She was interested in the idea and felt it would give an extra, personal touch to her practice," Inverso said. "So I decided to move out here and give it a try."

DEAR ABBY

Fasting instead of feasting hurt feelings

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I don't want to brag, but I'm considered one of the best cooks in Brooklyn. I spent two days preparing a delicious company dinner, and all my guests ate very well with the exception of one woman who is always watching her figure.

She took one bite of the appetizer (chopped liver) and a taste of the soup (matzo ball) and that was all.

I asked her why she wasn't eating the roasted chicken and noodle pudding, and she said she was afraid if she took even a taste, she wouldn't be able to stop.

She turned down my dessert, too. Abby, if she didn't want to eat, why did she accept my invitation? Doesn't it show bad manners to come to dinner and refuse the food? — HURT IN BROOKLYN

DEAR HURT: Perhaps the lady wanted the company but not the calories. I'm sure you're a fine cook, but a gracious hostess pretends not to notice how much (or little) a guest is eating.

Your guest could be a compulsive overeater, in which case just one little taste could trigger an eating binge.

These days, the caring hostess will serve an abundance of vegetables and fruit for calorie-counting guests who are fighting the battle of the bulge.

DEAR ABBY: I work for a company that has roughly 1,700 employees. Every year we are treated to an outstanding Christmas party, and each employee is entitled to bring one guest.

A fellow employee I hardly know has a married son and an unmarried daughter. They both live out of town.

Yesterday, this woman came up to me and said, "My son and his wife are coming in to spend Christmas with me, and my daughter will also be here. I'm taking my son to the Christmas party as my guest and 'so and so' is taking my daughter-in-law. Would you mind taking my daughter as your guest? I'm sure you won't mind — you are single, and I know you don't date."

I was so angry I lost my voice, but here is what I want to say to her:

"Lady, listen up good. No, your daughter may not come as my guest. This party is for the employees and one guest each; it's not a family reunion. And besides, this year I have a date! Merry Christmas!" — BURNED UP

DEAR BURNED UP: The speech is wonderful. Now deliver it to this office turkey before Thanksgiving.

DEAR ABBY: Some time ago, you published some incredible remarks mourners had made to the widow at the funeral. This one should be added:

Duncan was a sheep farmer in the Scottish Highlands. One sunny day he went on the loch alone in his small boat to fish. A sudden, violent wind and rainstorm hit the area, capsizing his boat and drowning him.

At the wake, people were giving condolences to the grieving widow. One prying woman, a casual acquaintance, offered, "I'm very sorry about your husband."

The widow nodded, "Thank you."

The "friend" added, "I hear he left you quite well off."

The widow replied, "Quite — 200,000 pounds, to be exact."

The nosy one, shaking her head, exclaimed, "My, my, such a lot of money from a man who couldn't read or write."

"Nor swim," replied the widow with a wry smile. — JACK McGINLEY, WESTMINSTER, CALIF.

(Do you hate to write letters because you don't know what to say? Thank-you notes, sympathy letters, congratulations, how to decline and accept invitations and how to write an interesting letter are included in Abby's booklet, "How to Write Letters for All Occasions." Send your name and address clearly printed with a check or money order for $2.50 (this includes postage) to: Dear Abby, Letter Booklet, P.O. Box 38923, Hollywood, Calif. 90038.)

New computer alarms 'talk'

PERTH, Australia (AP) — Talking computers may soon be tipping off police about burglaries, according to a computer management information systems journal.

The electronic units would have a 150-word vocabulary to report on break-ins and fires, reports MIS Week. They also would be able to monitor the contents of "bugged" premises, and if fully automatic, would make their own telephone calls using pre-programmed numbers to alert police and fire departments and the owner of the premises.

Designed to provide low-cost surveillance, the system has its own microcomputer as the controller, a programming keyboard, 64 sensors, a speech synthesizer and a telephone.

The system was developed by the West Australian Institute of Technology, and Telecom Australia, the government telecommunications group.

Scarecrows not just for the birds anymore

New York Times News Service

NEW YORK — Several years ago Ken and Berry Reisdorff were bothered by birds that were eating fruit from the orchard near their house in Water Mill, N.Y. The Reisdorffs asked their daughter, Julie, for some advice.

"I took a stick, and draped my Dad's favorite pale blue Levi work shirt over it," recalled Miss Reisdorff, a photographic stylist who lives in Manhattan. "It flapped and kept the birds away to a certain extent, but it was really more decorative. The next summer I decided to do a scarecrow. I called her the Southampton Shopping Bag Lady."

Today Miss Reisdorff makes scarecrows on a regular basis. Among her creations, which sell for $200 to $450, are a flapper wearing a lame dress, a rabbit that guards a friend's flower beds and a huge black cat that has presided over the window of a Bridgehampton, N.Y., gourmet shop.

Mark Baron, who runs his own public-relations firm in Washington, also makes scarecrows, which he sells for $50 to $100, and he teaches workshops on the procedure. One of his favorites is Big Jake, a red-faced 40-pounder that has never seen a field but accompanies him on visits to schools, community centers and county fairs.

Baron's and Miss Reisdorff's custom scarecrows are the contemporary end of a long spectrum. In the book "Ephemeral Folk Figures: Scarecrows, Harvest Figures and Snowmen," published by Clarkson & Potter in 1969, Avon Neal writes that the scarecrow as we know it probably originated in Central Europe "at the dawn of agriculture."

EARLY SCARECROWS in this country, he suggested, were strictly utilitarian — a ragged garment fluttering from a wooden crosspiece. As time went on, ornamental touches were added; by the mid-1800s tramps were often caught stealing the elaborate clothing off a scarecrow's back.

The use of homemade scarecrows declined with the advent of mechanical devices to ward off farm and garden pests, but in the 1960s, when folk art became a serious subject of study, Miss Parker and Neal and the photographer Ann Parker traveled throughout New England documenting scarecrows. In 1970 their work appeared in an exhibit at the Museum of American Folk Art in New York called "The Ephemeral Image."

Miss Reisdorff does not call herself a folk artist but says she simply enjoys the process of creating appealing scarecrow forms. In her job she combs Manhattan shops for "interesting junk" to use as props in her clients' pictures; as a scarecrow maker she indulges what she calls her "five and dime taste for plastic grapes, old beads and sunglasses." She likes that she is making something "both functional and whimsical — a real fantasy character."

THE CONSTRUCTION process takes the better part of a day and is basically the same for each figure. Miss Reisdorff buys straw from a supplier nearby for $4 a bale and works in the garage of her family's house in Water Mill. She makes a large frame out of crossed sticks and attaches wires to form the scarecrow's skeleton. Clothes are then draped on it and filled out with the straw.

The head is fashioned from tulle wrapped around straw; the faces are often merely suggested with a cigar or a pair of sunglasses. The figures usually stay out from May through harvest, often fading in the process.

"I figure they're meant to be out in nature, why not let nature get to them," Miss Reisdorff said.

Her scarecrow Peter Rabbit is dressed in a green corduroy vest and red velvet jacket. The black cat sports a chef's hat and coat. The figure that guards the orchard Miss Reisdorff describes this way: "Just a guy in white long johns, with old garden gloves, a baseball hat, a bunch of plastic grapes on his neck and wind chimes dangling from his arms — the noise is supposed to scare the birds."

Baron's methods are somewhat different. He buys garments such as polyester trousers and pantyhose by the pound from wholesalers. He gets the straw from farms in Columbia, Md., and arranges for supplies of egg cartons and styrofoam that he uses for facial features.

HE STUFFS the pants and shirt with straw, ties off the cuffs with twine and attaches the parts together with loops of twine. The head is made of pantyhose stuffed with straw and the eyes, noses and mouths are attached with glue. Most of his scarecrows have a festive, rustic look: Big Jake, for example, sports red slacks, red suspenders, a plaid shirt and a checked jacket.

Out-of-control spending an addiction

Associated Press

The out-of-control spender can be headed for trouble that goes far beyond mounting bills.

Like any other addict he or he eventually needs to buy more and more to maintain the same high. But the euphoria is short-lived and when it fades, the guilt, anxiety, shame and general "hangover" can be overwhelming.

Some compulsive spenders attack only sales racks, others buy regularly priced items and still others frequent only the most expensive boutiques. Regardless of the pattern, according to an article in the November issue of Bazaar, they all end up buying a great many items they neither need nor really want.

Who is at risk? Usually those with a shaky self-image, chronically insecure, who find that acquiring endless possessions helps assuage these painful sensations. By tying their self confidence to the act of buying and spending, they can avoid dealing with their underlying psychological problems.

Sometimes this kind of spending can be traced to severe emotional deprivation during childhood: Having received little sustenance when they were young, these adults make up for it now by "providing" for themselves. The overcompensation can make them feel — at least temporarily — accepted, powerful, even loved.

The disorder can also be triggered by boredom, loneliness or depression, or anger and resentment toward a lover or spouse. Breakups or serious marital rifts can lead to compulsive sprees as well, a form of retaliation for disappointments or injustices endured in the past.

For other people the trigger is an exuberant mood: when intensely excited or elated, they feel forced to celebrate by splurging.

Another category of compulsives spends regardless of mood.

As with other addictions, money "madness" is hidden and prolonged by a pattern of denial. The overspender rarely, if ever, admits something is wrong and is frequently not even aware of the habit, which can persist much longer than do other dependencies.

Compulsive eating is reflected in appearance, alcohol abuse eventually makes life unmanageable, but the victim of compulsive spending may simply seem to have struck it rich. So no one, including the victim, takes it very seriously.

Reaching a heavy debt overload is often the first step toward recovery. After this point, many compulsive spenders — either alone or with the help of a therapist — literally begin to learn the value of money, perhaps for the first time in their lives.

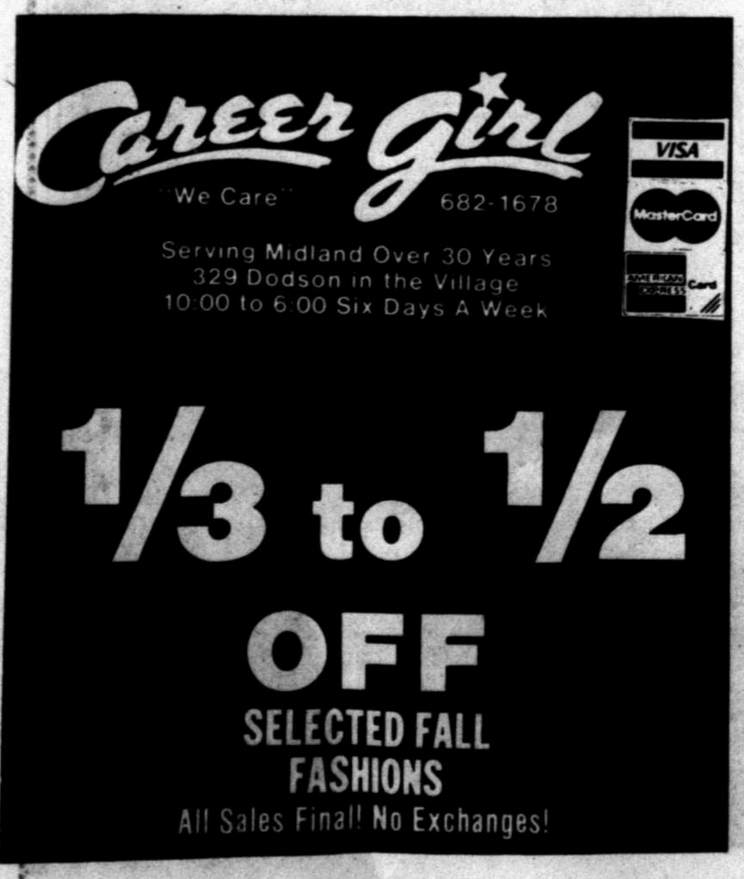

Survey: Few tax changes expected

WASHINGTON (AP) — No major overhaul of the nation's personal income tax system is expected in the next five years, according to a recent survey of 150 opinion leaders conducted by the American Council of Life Insurance.

The poll indicated that 98 percent of the leaders believed the current income tax system will still exist in five years, with a few modifications mainly affecting loopholes.

In the poll, taken earlier this year, the leaders said they felt if nothing is done to improve the personal tax system, budget deficits and taxpayer non-compliance will increase.

Among those polled were congressional and federal officials, executives in tax-related trade associations, law and accounting firms and the media.

AT WIT'S END

Good things come in tough packages

By ERMA BOMBECK

One of these days you're going to open your paper and the headline will read, "COLUMNIST ACCIDENTALLY SHOOTS SELF WHILE TRYING TO OPEN BACON."

Actually, a gun is the only thing I haven't used to pry open packages, but I've been close to it on several occasions. In an attempt to open various containers, I've resorted to knives (bread, paring and cleavers), razor blades, scissors, rose clippers, nail files, axes, spears, letter openers, javelins, electric saws and sabers.

At one point when I was totally out of control, I tried to puncture a package of almonds on an airliner with the heel of my shoe.

There is no doubt in my mind that when I go it will be from injuries suffered as a result of breaking into a package. A box of sheets arrived from a mail order house the other day. Sheets, as we know, do not have to be hermetically sealed. Nothing happens when the air hits them. The tomb of Tutankhamen should have been so well preserved.

I put the box on the table, reached for a steak knife and waited for the voice that appears at the opening of every box.

"Don't stab yourself with that knife or you'll bleed to death," said my husband.

"You have just ruined my surprise," I said.

"I mean it. You make me very nervous when you start sawing away. Why don't you just loosen up the tape around the opening?"

Patiently, I smiled, "Remember when you tried to get a comb out of a plastic bubble and by the time you got to it, you had pulled all your hair out and didn't need it?"

"I remember," he said.

"Then you know what the odds are of loosening up the tape around the opening."

I think the mails have us so intimidated that we have overcorrected the problem. There is no reason to bury a small plastic cup in a piano box, in 10 yards of plastic bubbles, another five pounds of Styrofoam squigglies, tape on every opening and baling wire around the entire package.

My kitchen is turning into an arsenal to combat hard-to-open packages. I salvaged a piece of broken glass from the trash the other day and said, "I can use this to open my book selections each month."

Homemaking has always been a high-risk profession. Raising children, cooking, chauffeuring, caring for animals and solving disputes, all of it is life-threatening, but I truly believe if God wanted me to open packages, He'd have given me serrated fingernails that when pressure is applied will detonate.

AT WORK

Pursuing dream career not always easy

By ADELE SCHEELE, Ph.D.

Q. I have just quit teaching English after 17 years. I've taken up photography and have been recognized by my teacher as being really good. But I'm scared to think about a career in photography. I wish you could give me some way of thinking about this as a viable career.

A. Photography, like any art, is tough to break into. You have to be persistent, aggressive and focused — three qualities you are probably not used to after teaching one subject in a given system for so long. So be prepared for a lot of discomfort, a euphemism for "agony," in the beginning.

Now for building a career. Try to narrow down what you like best about photography so far: the selecting of subjects, the shooting itself, cajoling people to pose if you're taking portraits, selecting the best proof, exhibiting photos, or critiquing photos of your classmates.

If, for example, you enjoy getting people to pose well, then think of going to portrait photographers as an apprentice. Don't overlook opportunities in department stores and even high school yearbook services as well, at least for starters. If it's selection of topics that interests you most, then think of newspaper photography. If it's the excitement of others' work too, then think of representing photographers.

The point is there's a world of work involved within any one given field. Get busy searching for ways in. Keep in mind that once you do get into the photography business, you are not committed to any one aspect. You are able to see doors open only after you enter the hall.

Q. I have just retired from directing a university extension division. I am now interested in the real estate market for the elderly. Can you advise me on what to do besides getting my license, which I've already done?

A. Use your key contacts from your past position to become more visible. Get yourself appointed to a city commission, preferably on housing, and volunteer for the board of a health care organization that may have the elderly as a targeted market. From these kinds of contacts, you will find a significant door opening.

Q. I am in ninth grade and wonder what I might do. I am in the computer club in school, but am a little bored. I always read your column and wonder what you'd advise.

A. Expand your role as student and find a small- to medium-sized company to intern for. Be around people who are working on real projects. At the same time develop another part of your personality and join something like the drama club.

Q. I have just joined a design firm and find that it is a cult. The managers live together, pool resources, and expect that everyone on the staff give 200 percent of their time for little pay. I am not exaggerating when I say they expect us to work from 6 a.m. to 8 p.m. seven days a week.

I wonder how their clients tolerate them and whether they are known for this behavior in the field? I have remained silent so far, but I wonder if I shouldn't start telling what I see. What do you think?

A. Get another design job with another company as fast as you can.

Psychologist: Men, women in 'double bind'

Copley News Service

Wanted: A mate. Someone who won't leave their hairs in the bathtub, but who will understand if I do. Someone who will be sensitive enough to cry — but not too often. Someone who is not clingy — but who will pay lots of attention to me. Oh, and by the way, no wimps need apply.*

Psychologist Herb Goldberg calls it the "double bind."

"We ask for something, then react negatively when we get it. 'Don't treat me like a child, but take care of me!' she says. 'Be independent, but need me!' is his refrain," Goldberg says in an example from his latest book about the sexes, "The New Male-Female Relationship."

"Liberated couples have to be real cautious, because they have the greatest tendency to put each other in double binds," Goldberg said during a recent interview.

"TAKE THE woman who, on one hand, wants her man to be human and real, but on the other hand expects him to perform in the image of the traditional male, to still be a great sexual performer. She winds up being real rejected or hurt if he doesn't perform according to the traditional expectations.

"Women want the best of both worlds," he said. "They want to get all the benefits of the macho guy who's also sensitive and emotional and close. For men, it's the exact opposite. They think being married to a liberated woman means being married to a woman who can make $50,000 or $100,000 a year, but who loves to come home and cook dinnes and adore them."

Goldberg calls it all a fantasy.

"It's almost a narcissistic fantasy, that we somehow deserve the very best, the best of both worlds," he said. "That can really drive you crazy, because you can't have the best of both worlds. The best of one world comes at the expense of the other. The thing that makes a man a successful professional often kills off the other side of him, so you can't have them both."

In the mid-'70s, when Goldberg's first book "The Hazards of Being Male" was published, feminists decried his work, calling him an "apologist" for men. The Village Voice wrote a scathing review of his work. It was a time when only women were the walking wounded — or so it was believed.

BUT GOLDBERG, 47, says it was never his intention to apologize for men, but rather to explain them, and to help enlighten both men and women. He believes that the "liberation" that took place during the '60s and '70s may have been more symbolic than real, causing more pain than real growth.

"People had all these liberated attitudes and all these traditional cravings, and they found they could not maintain a relationship," he said. "Every relationship got crazier and crazier."

What has since happened is often reflected in the frustrated laments of women in bars or offices: "He said he wanted a strong, independent woman, but he wound up marrying a submissive, domestic woman."

"Whenever you have a lot of anxiety, you go back to the known, and that's what you're getting right now: Men going back to known forms of behavior, because the anxiety and confusion of the change process overwhelmed them."

That doesn't mean the change wasn't good. It just wasn't good enough.

A clinical psychologist in private practice in Los Angeles, as well as a faculty member at California State University, Los Angeles, Goldberg said his clientele has increasingly been male since his first book "The Hazards of Being Male" was published in 1976. A second book, "The New Male" was published in 1979.

"THERE ARE a lot of men out there who are really lost," he said. "Their self-doubt and self-hate are tremendous. A lot of men say that when they got involved with a liberated woman, it was like walking on eggshells. She's very sensitive to anything that implies you're in some way trying to control her. She resents it if you ask her for anything that implies you're putting her into some kind of traditional role, and then she overreacts.

Advice given on growing hoyas

By ELVIN McDONALD

When you send me a hoya question that lies beyond my generalist experience, Christine Burton is the person I ask for the answer. She cares and knows enough about these members of the milkweed family to have written a book about them and to be a leader in Hoya Society International.

A few weeks ago I asked Chris to critique my notebook cultural sheets on hoya, in particular the guidelines for bloom, and to suggest some less-known kinds suited to growing in window, light and home greenhouse gardens. Here are some highlights from her response:

"Number 1 on my list of ideal hoyas is H. pubera, a small shrubby hoya with velvety leaves on woody stems. It has umbels of tiny H. carnosa type flowers but the entire umbel measures less than an inch across. When the flowers fade, do not be alarmed when the peduncles drop; it is normal for this one. You can cut, trim and shape without fear as this species will do its thing again next bloom season on new peduncles.

"H. pubera is a once-a-year bloomer, from early fall to winter. It is extremely fragrant and quite showy despite the small size, as it blooms from almost every leaf axil and the pale violet-pink contrasts well against the darkness of the velvety leaves.

"If I could have only one hoya, it would be this one. H. pubera, unlike the carnosa types, blooms right off. Long life expectancy is not necessary to see this one flower. I have had August cuttings bloom by late September, same year.

"By comparison, Hoya bella, the so-called miniature hoya of fame, is usually five times larger before blooming and needs to grow very large before blooming becomes reliable. I can't manage it in a light garden and miniature is a misnomer.

"H. serpens is a favorite light garden subject. This is the H. miniata that looks gorgeous in the Merchants booklets. I have found it hard to bloom but worthwhile because of graceful shape and the leaves contrast pleasingly with other plants. Others tell me they have no trouble getting it to bloom.

"H. linearis is another pendant plant on a small scale. It, H. engleriana and H. serpens appear to do better in cooler areas than here in the deep South. That is understandable as they are from the foothills of the Himalayas, which is about the farthest north hoyas are known to grow in nature.

"H. lacunosa is quite common now; I've see it at the K-Mart and can say it is about the most reliable of the wee hoyas. It does well under lights and blooms when very young. Its day fragrance is light and clean, reminiscent of Camay soap. This one for me does better in shade.

"H. pauciflora is another small one wth linear leaves similar to H. shepherdii, but much, much smaller. It is shrubby and, as the name implies, flowers are few, one to three per umbel, but quite large for such a small plant."

Chris also reports numerous other hoyas, both compact and large, are coming into cultivation. Presently these are being tamed as it were, identified and cataloged by botanists, studied and coaxed to grow by horticulturists.

Generally speaking, fall and winter are the seasons for keeping common hoyas or wax plants on the dry side. When spring and summer bring more light and warmth, the application of more water then spurs bloom and new vine growth.

More details about getting hoya bloom, securing unusual kinds, and how to pursue them as a fascinating hobby are in my newly revised notebook sheets. For your set send $1 and a stamped, self-addressed, long envelope with "Hoya" written on the back flap to Elvin McDonald Reader Service, Box R, Niagara Falls, N.Y. 14305.

Hoyas are interesting indoor plants

Q. I accidentally broke a branch off my hoya. Is it possible to start another plant from it?

A. Yes. Hoya roots readily in a glass of water, but can then be tricky to establish in potting soil. A better method is to use a plastic foam hot beverage cup as the container. Punch a few drain holes in the bottom, then fill with a mixture of coarse perlite and vermiculite. Set the cutting about 2 inches deep in this, removing any leaves that would be buried. Keep moist in a warm (about 70F.) bright spot. Roots will grow in weeks or months, then you can transplant to a 5-inch pot using about equal parts soil, sand, peat moss and vermiculite; a handful of horticultural charcoal chips per quart will also help.

Mealybugs are the most common hoya problem. Remove by hand using cotton swabs dipped in alcohol; repeat on a weekly basis.

FDA denounces aspirin TV commercial

WASHINGTON (AP) — A private group's television spot could endanger children by getting their parents to ignore possible links between use of aspirin in children with viral illnesses and the potentially fatal Reye's Syndrome, the government warns.

The Food and Drug Administration has denounced the television advertisement, circulated by the Committee on the Care of Children, a group once financed by the aspirin industry.

The group, which includes pediatricians among its members, was formed to counter the educational campaign run by the government since 1982 that tells parents to consult a doctor before giving aspirin to children with symptoms of viral illnesses such as chicken pox and influenza.

Health experts have noted an association between the use of aspirin for children with chicken pox and flu and the development of Reye's Syndrome, although no direct link has been established.

There have been 154 reported cases of the disease between Dec. 1, 1983, and Aug. 3 of this year, including 34 deaths. Its symptoms are persistent vomiting, sleepiness and lethargy, violent headaches and unusual behavior, disorientation, combativeness and delirium.

The committee's public service announcement says there is no proof that any medication causes Reye's Syndrome.

"By not having a reference to a possible association between aspirin's use in chicken pox and flu and Reye's Syndrome, the committee has produced a spot that is educationally ineffective as well as incomplete and misleading," said FDA spokesman Bill Grigg.

The FDA is launching its own ad campaign Thursday with a TV spot that acknowledges data linking aspirin with Reye's Syndrome are inconclusive and in dispute, but notes that some experts believe it advisable to avoid using aspirin in vulnerable children until more is known.

After meeting with FDA officials to discuss the advertising campaigns, Neil Chayet, a Boston attorney who is spokesman for the committee, criticized the agency's efforts.

Dr. Robert Hoeckelman, head of the University of Rochester's pediatrics department and a member of the committee, said he did not think its TV spot is misleading.

Astronauts stalk wayward satellites

By HOWARD BENEDICT
AP Aerospace Writer

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Discovery's astronauts are making small adjustments in their orbit to catch up, slowly but steadily, to two off-course satellites that will be salvaged by space-walking astronauts.

Three more engine firings were planned today to further reduce the gap between hunter and hunted in the intricate game of celestial cat-and-mouse. The goal: Catch the first satellite, Palapa B2, on Monday and the second, Westar 6, on Wednesday.

Before the wayward satellites can be captured, the astronauts must empty the shuttle's cargo bay of two commercial communications satellites. The first is to be released late today for Telesat of Canada. The second, owned by Hughes Communications Services, is to be dropped off Saturday.

Telesat is paying the National Aeronautics and Space Administration $10 million, and Hughes, with a bigger satellite, $17 million for the delivery service.

Commander Rick Hauck and pilot David Walker began the satellite pursuit within an hour after Discovery soared into orbit Thursday, triggering the first of 44 engine firings intended to bring the ship within 35 feet of Palapa on Monday.

As the chase began, with shuttle and satellite racing around the globe at more than 17,400 mph, Palapa was about 17,000 miles ahead at an altitude of 224 miles, 40 miles higher than Discovery. Westar is 720 miles ahead of Palapa.

By early today, the distance had been cut to 12,995 miles, and Discovery was catching up at the rate of 181 mph.

"The orbiter is getting higher and we're getting closer," said flight director Jay Greene. "If we keep on doing that, we'll be there."

The spaceship is to draw alongside Palapa and fly in formation with it while mission specialists Joe Allen and Dale Gardner move outside for the retrieval. Allen is to fly free of Discovery, propelling himself with a jet-powered backpack, to attach a pole-like device in the satellite's engine nozzle to secure it.

Mission specialist Anna Fisher is to grasp Palapa with a 50-foot robot arm and Allen and Gardner are to latch it firmly in the cargo bay. Gardner is to wear the jet-pack for the Westar rescue.

The satellites, worth $35 million each new, are to be returned to Earth, refurbished and resold by insurance companies which paid out $180 million in claims when the payloads were injected into useless orbits by faulty rocket motors last February. The companies, with Lloyd's of London having the biggest share, are paying the National Aeronautics and Space Administration $5.5 million for the salvage job.

The astronauts also continued to monitor an experiment for 3M Company which is exploring the properties and behavior of organic chemicals in space weightlessness.

3M recently signed a multimillion-dollar contract with NASA to conduct experiments on 72 shuttle missions over the next decade and to develop an industrial chemical research laboratory aboard a permanent space station planned for the early 1990s.

'Explosion of progress' made in breast cancer

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Researchers say the marriage of two new technologies has brought an "explosion of progress" in breast cancer treatment and promises to improve the chances of surviving a disease that kills 40,000 American women each year.

The technologies — monoclonal antibodies and nuclear magnetic resonance scanning, or NMR — are making possible a rapid advance in diagnostic technique, said doctors at the International Workshop on Monoclonal Antibodies and Breast Cancer on Thursday.

The monoclonal antibodies, which when injected into the body will gather at a tumor, can be loaded with tiny bits of metal. An NMR examination of the area gives a brilliant contrast, providing doctors with a more detailed picture than previously possible.

The man-made monoclonal antibodies "will mean a turning point in the diagnosis and treatment of breast cancer," said Dr. Roberto L. Ceriani, a research endocrinologist with the John Muir Cancer and Aging Institute in Walnut Creek, Calif.

Monoclonal antibodies, similar to the antibodies all animals make naturally to fight disease, can be injected into the blood to search out cancer cells and, researchers believe, to kill them.

Unlike radiation and chemotherapy, Ceriani said, "the use of these antibodies will permit the attack of the breast tumor directly. They can pinpoint the attack and leave the rest of the body healthy."

There are three ways the antibodies can attack, he said. They can induce the cancer cells to kill themselves through a mechanism in the blood or they can search for lymphocytes in the blood to go kill the cancers.

"A third way, which is an experimental one we are all extremely interested in, is that you can put toxins, or poisons, on the antibodies that will kill the cancer," said Ceriani.

Dr. John Hilkins of The Netherlands Cancer Institute in Amsterdam, Netherlands, presented data similar to Ceriani's, indicating that simple, relatively inexpensive blood tests using monoclonal antibodies can determine the presence of antigens, or components of the tumors.

These tests, which are being developed or tested by about 20 companies worldwide, will be ready for use in clinics in a year or two, Ceriani said.

However, not all breast cancer is fatal, and even the early detection of a tumor does not tell doctors whether the cancer is going to spread. That is where the brilliant, clear image of the cells made possible by NMR becomes critical — without any X-rays, surgery or radioactivity.

For the first time now, NMR images are being enhanced by using injections of monoclonal antibodies carrying tiny bits of metals to brighten the image of cancer cells, said Dr. Marvin A. Rich, director of the AMC Cancer Research Center in Lakewood, Colo.

"I would describe it as an explosion of progress, a coming together of advanced technologies," said Rich. "This is an enormosly exciting time."

For the 120,000 women in the United States who get breast cancer each year, the advances could dramatically improve survival chances — which haven't gotten better in over 30 years, said Rich.

Breast tumors themselves don't usually kill women, he said. Rather, it is the spread of the cancer to other parts of the body that can be fatal.

"The methods that we have now to predict whether the breast cancer in a given woman is likely to spread are not terribly good," Rich said. "Yet we know there are specific ... characteristics of the cancer cells which determine whether the breast cancers, which superficially look alike, are going to spread to the rest of the body."

Dr. Phillip Furmanski, a researcher at the AMC center, said the combination of NMR and monoclonal antibodies is the "way of the future" for cancer detection.

Second term offers new arms control opportunity

By BARRY SCHWEID
AP Diplomatic Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — There are two Ronald Reagans when it comes to dealing with the Soviet Union, and the one that emerges on top in his second administration could shape the course of history.

One Reagan, styled on World War II movies, is quick to defend the flag against any assault. This is the Reagan best known to the American public, a kind of broad-shouldered Gipper sternly denouncing the men in the Kremlin as liars and cheats and their government as "the focus of evil" — and, judging by last Tuesday's returns, winning the hearts of America's voters in the process.

This is the same Reagan who ordered a lightning invasion of Grenada, a tiny Caribbean country, for the stated purpose of protecting American students and deterring subversion in the hemisphere. In the midst of it all, the Marxist government was overthrown.

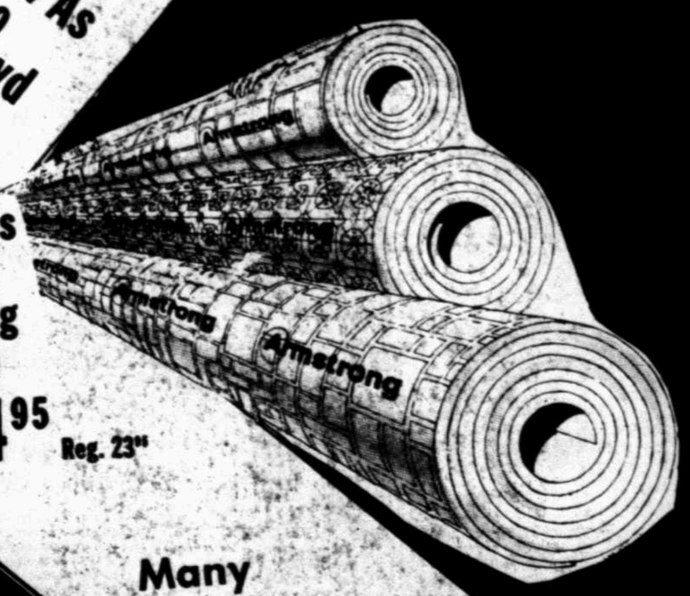

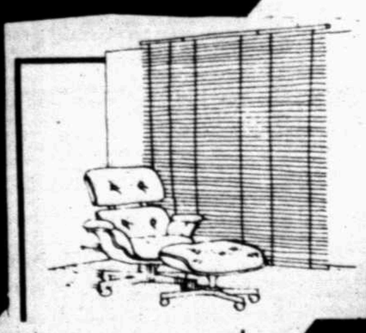

There is another Reagan, however.

Less well-known, he has written a series of personal letters to Soviet presidents beginning in 1981 urging joint efforts to reduce nuclear arsenals. He approved major changes in the U.S. negotiating position to make the U.S. arms-cutting proposal more attractive to Moscow.

The revisions have not worked so far. Talks have been suspended for 11 months and Reagan has vowed there will be no U.S. concessions to coax the Soviets back to the table. Still, he has promised if they return they will find flexibility in the American position — which at least implies concessions.

To Lease or Not To Lease

Reasons To Lease:

1. Leasing is convenient – you only pay for what you use and not for the full price of the car.
2. There is no used car to dispose of at lease end.
3. Leasing frees your cash and you can use your available bank line of credit for other purposes.
4. Lessee – leasing for business purposes will have the benefit of simplified tax records.
