Mondale Blasts Reagan

AUSTIN (AP) — Former vice president Walter Mondale says the Reagan Administration cuts in social programs are "selfish and wrong-headed."

Speaking Saturday at graduation ceremonies at the Lyndon B. Johnson School of Public Affairs at the University of Texas, Mondale said Reagan's efforts to fight inflation are admirable, but aimed in the wrong direction.

"When it comes to Social Security, you cannot keep your bargain with working Americans by eliminating the minimum benefit, by cancelling student benefits, by telling those who choose early retirement to get along on 55 percent of their basic benefit," Mondale said.

OPEC Meeting

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — Saudi Arabia called for an 18-month freeze in oil prices as ministers of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries gathered in Geneva for their semiannual price-fixing meeting today.

Several ministers of the 13-nation oil cartel urged the Saudis to boost their price from $32 a barrel, OPEC's lowest, to $36. That would raise the average OPEC oil price about 4.5 percent and add a penny a gallon to the price of oil consumed by the United States.

In addition, all the other members of the organization wants the Saudis to cut their record-high production of 10.3 million barrels a day, OPEC's biggest, which has helped to cause the glut on the world oil market that is holding prices down. But several of the oil ministers predicted they might fail to agree on anything.

Guardian Angels

HOUSTON (AP) — Several members of the Guardian Angels, the controversial group that patrols New York streets to deter muggings and assaults, will visit Houston in July to help form a similar group in Texas' largest city.

Mayor Jim McConn and Police Chief B.K. Johnson both have expressed concern about the formation of a group similar to the independent organization that patrols New York's transit system.

Mark Horner, a 31-year-old Houston furniture manufacturer, announced last week he is forming a citizen's vigilante-type unit to patrol the city streets, the sprawling Texas Medical Center and the crime-prone inner-city wards and alert police of crimes in progress.

The Guardian Angels also have established chapters in Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Atlanta, Cleveland and other cities.

New York Mayor Ed Koch has denounced the group as vigilantes, and Atlanta police have accused them of impeding the investigation into the deaths of 27 black youths.

Ireland Violence

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Gunmen killed a Protestant militiaman and wounded three others today, hours before the funeral of Patrick O'Hara, the fourth Roman Catholic Irish nationalist to die on a hunger strike for political prisoner status.

Police said the militiamen of the Ulster Defense Regiment were fired on as they drove past the village of Bellaghy in County Londonderry, a few miles from the home of Francis Hughes, another dead hunger striker.

Earlier, a police Land-Rover ran over a Roman Catholic man as it sped away from more than fifty rioters pelting the vehicle with bricks and bottles, police said. They listed the death as a "road accident."

Basic Curriculum

AUSTIN (AP) — Legislators sent Gov. Bill Clements a bill Monday calling for a basic curriculum in public schools, but some senators don't think its basic enough.

By an 18-10 vote, the Senate adopted a conference committee report that the House accepted on May 20.

The bill, if signed into law, wipes out the many confusing curriculum requirements in present law and says each 12-grade school must offer 12 basic subjects including English language, "other languages to the extent possible," mathematics, science, health, physical education, fine arts, social studies, economics "with emphasis on the free enterprise system and its benefits," business education, vocational education and Texas and United States history as individual subjects.

The State Board of Education will oversee and designate "essential elements" of each subject to be taught.

President Rides Horses

SANTA BARBARA, Calif. — President Reagan, visiting his California ranch for the first time since he was shot March 30, is signaling through his horseback riding that he's back in good health.

Reagan's favorite activities at the 688-acre "Rancho Del Cielo" (Ranch in the Sky) are horseback riding and wood chopping, and he did both over the weekend.

Grubbs Gets Scurry County...

63rd District Is Splintered

AUSTIN—A redistricting bill that would switch Scurry County from Rep. Larry Shaw's district to Rep. Walter Grubbs' district came out of committee in the House at 2:50 a. m. today. The vote sending the bill to the floor was 16-2.

Grubbs, who lives in Abilene, would lose part of his Taylor County constituency, but would add Scurry and Sterling Counties from Shaw's district, along with Haskell County.

Shaw would lose Dawson and Coke Counties as well as Scurry and Sterling, which means that he would retain only Borden and his home county of Howard in the new district. But the biggest obstacle the Big Spring legislator would face in the new alignment would be landing in the same district with Rep. Bill Heatley of Paducah, the dean of the House.

Shaw complained that the proposed new district would stretch 300 miles from the Oklahoma border near Vernon to within 100 miles of New Mexico.

"It is very clear it is a gerrymandered district, in my opinion," Shaw said.

Republicans objected to adoption of an entire new Harris County plan submitted by Rep. Craig Washington, D-Houston, which avoided pairings of Democrat Paul Colbert with Republican Brad Wright, and Democrat Ron Wilson with Democrat Ralph Wallace.

"This is a definite setback for the Republican Party and the conservative cause," Wright said.

Rep. Don Henderson, R-Houston, angrily accused Washington of packing as many GOP voters as possible into a handful of districts and of diluting minority chances of electing legislators.

"Republicans are not protected by the (U.S.) Voting Rights Act but blacks and Mexican-Americans are, and that is why you are coat-tailing on the blacks and browns," Washington replied.

The committee went along with the plea of Rep. Froy Salinas, D-Lubbock, to increase the minority population of his district by shifting it to eastern Lubbock.

"I've got two country clubs in my district now, and under this plan I'd have the third one," Salinas complained before the change was made.

Rep. Bill Keese, D-Somerville, also testified he could not understand why he and Rep. Dan Kubiak, D-Rockdale, were paired in a single district when two new ones without incumbents were carved out to the east and west.

Keese publicly supported Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, against Speaker Bill Clayton in the 1981 speaker's race, but Von Dohlen said the Keese-Kubiak pairing had nothing to do with politics.

The Dallas County map pairs only Rep. Paul Ragsdale, D-Dallas, and Steve Wolens, D-Dallas, leaving Bryant's district untouched.

"There was strong sentiment from the speaker's office, much to his credit, that John Bryant's district be kept intact so there would not be any second guessing as to punitive action," said Rep. Carlyle Smith, D-Grand Prairie.

Redistricting is required by the Texas Constitution in the first regular legislative session after a national census.

The regular session ends at midnight next Monday, leaving only a week for the redistricting bill to get through the House and Senate. Senators already have passed their bill, and it now awaits House approval.

Failure to redistrict either chamber would hand the job to a five-man Legislative Redistricting Board consisting of the speaker and elected state officials.

Hostages Free After 30 Hours

SOFIA, Bulgaria (AP) — Passengers aboard a hijacked Turkish airliner attacked their captors today and, despite a burst of gunfire, freed themselves after 30 hours of being held under threat of death, the Bulgarian news agency BTA said.

Five Americans were reported aboard and it was not known if they were among the passengers BTA reported wounded by a hijacker. No one was seriously injured.

BTA said Bulgarian officials had enticed two of the original four hijackers out of the plane on the pretense that they would meet with reporters. The pair was immediately arrested.

When passengers realized only two hijackers remained, they attacked them, BTA said, wresting a pistol away from one of the gunmen, who then jumped from the plane and was arrested.

The remaining air pirate opened fire "at random," wounding an unspecified number of passengers, BTA said. The casualties' identities were not immediately reported but BTA said they were not seriously hurt and included one of the hijackers.

"At first report, the lives of every one of the wounded is out of danger. One of the hijackers is seriously wounded," BTA said.

"The hijackers are seized and rendered harmless," the agency said. It had earlier reported the surrender of the hijackers.

The hijackers had been threatening to kill the Americans and blow up the DC-9 Turkish Airlines jetliner, hijacked Sunday and diverted to Burgas, a Black Sea coastal town.

Ninety-one people were reported aboard just before the ordeal ended.

Hours earlier, the hijackers had asked for 200 envelopes and sheets of paper to allow the passengers to start writing their farewell letters, the news agency said. Ninety-five had, BTA said, and the notes were delivered to authorities.

After that, a group of captives was released, bringing to 27 the total number of passengers allowed out or escaped before the hijacking ended today, the agency said.

The U.S. Embassy here said two of the 27 had escaped.

Third Such Incident...

Syrian Missiles Down Israeli Plane Today

JERUSALEM (AP) — Syrian missiles shot down an Israeli pilotless reconnaissance plane over Lebanon today, the third such downing since the Syrian-Israeli missile crisis began 27 days ago, the Israeli military command said.

A military communique said the drone was shot down over the Bekaa Valley in eastern Lebanon by a missile battery positioned in neighboring Syria.

The pattern of the downing followed that of previous such incidents, reported May 14 and May 22.

The communique said the drone, of undisclosed make, was on "a routine reconnaissance mission" over the Bekaa Valley, flashpoint of tensions between the 22,000-man Syrian force in Lebanon and the country's Israeli-backed Christian troops.

Meanwhile, Prime Minister Menachem Begin said he had not revealed anything new in saying that Soviet advisers accompanied Syrian troops in Lebanon. Begin said it was an "old piece of news" that had been "blown up" by the media.

"With the bigger (Syrian) units, the Soviet experts march together wherever they go," Begin said.

The Israeli leader also told reporters as he left his office that U.S. envoy Philip C. Habib, who has been in the Middle East for 19 days trying to cool the Israel-Syria crisis, was waiting for word from Saudi Arabia on the Saudis' talks with Syria.

After Sunday's Cabinet decision to give Habib more time to attempt a diplomatic solution, Begin charged for the first time in public that Soviet advisers are working with Syria's 22,000-man army in Lebanon.

The Syrians have "3,600 tanks with their Soviet advisers who accompany the Syrian units in Lebanon," Begin said in a speech in Tel Aviv. He did not elaborate.

Begin's claim followed a charge earlier Sunday by the Israeli military command that Libyan leader Moammar Khadafy's radical pro-Soviet government has several hundred military personnel in Lebanon and has given SAM-9 anti-aircraft missiles to Lebanese leftist Moslems.

Diplomats in Damascus, the Syrian capital, said Libyan officials promised last week to supply Soviet-made surface-to-air missiles to Yasser Arafat's Palestine Liberation Organization. However, a Syrian official said Damascus "has so far not agreed" to such a move.

Flash Floods Claim Six Lives In Austin

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — At least six persons drowned and several others were missing in the wake of flash flooding here early today that left heavy property damage.

Austin Police Sgt. Larry Walker said officers have confirmed that six persons drowned when a line of heavy thunderstorms brought as much as 7 inches of rainfall.

Police said at one time flood waters lapped at the bottom of signal lights at an intersection in the western part of downtown Austin, where businesses were heavily damaged.

Walker said only one of the victims was identified immediately. He was Mark Villarreal, a truck driver trapped in his vehicle in a flooded intersection on Austin's north side. Another victim drowned in Northwest Austin and two others drowned along Shoal Creek.

Officers have been unable to determine just how many persons were missing, Walker said.

"We are trying to check the creeks and low places to search for casualties and persons believed to be missing" Walker said.

The heavy rains sent Shoal Creek, normally a placid small stream that runs from north to south through the middle of Austin, out of its banks and into hundreds of homes and dozens of businesses.

Flood water was reported to be 20-30 feet deep in some low areas before it began to subside before dawn.

The rainfall total at Austin Municipal Airport was only 4.13 inches, but there were numerous unofficial reports of 6-7 inches of rain at various locations.

Damage was widespread in an area along Lamar Boulevard in the west end of Austin's business district. No damage estimate was made immediately, authorities said, but several businesses were flooded.

Cars on the lots of several automobile dealerships were damaged as they were thrown together by the fast-rising high water. Also damaged were a convenience store, a large grocery store and a music store.

Coal Strikers Begin 60th Day

WASHINGTON (AP) — With the coal strike in its 60th day, bargainers for the United Mine Workers and the industry still are steeped in negotiations on the issue of job security.

The union and the industry bargaining arm, the Bituminous Coal Operators Association, planned to resume contracts talks today, Memorial Day, following two lengthy sessions at a downtown hotel here over the weekend.

Although labor and management have spent about 10 hours in hard negotiations on the union's demand for a "work standards" provision in any new three-year contract, the legally complex problem continues to defy resolution.

Union president Sam Church emerged from Sunday's 4½-hour session saying things were going "slowly, very slowly. We're still talking."

As has been the practice for the past two days, Church, who had backed an earlier accord rejected by rank-and-file miners, will precede the negotiating session with a briefing for the union's 39-member bargaining council.

voluntary way best

The drive for austerity in the federal budget is posing a problem for private social agencies and other non-profit organizations which have grown to rely on federal grants to cover part of their expenses. In the future there will be less money from Washington to go around.

This should not mean we are entering an era of neglect of the needy, or the starvation of those endeavors in the arts and humanities which have enjoyed federal subsidies in recent years. What it does mean is a shift back toward local responsibility for many charitable activities, and a renewed reliance on private, voluntary contributions.

The net result could be stronger and more effective programs. A long-standing criticism of the disbursement of federal grants is that too much money was eaten up in bureaucratic overhead, and funds were going into programs that did not justify their cost. A greater reliance on local private financing can produce social services that are better aimed at true needs, and more accountable to those providing the funds.

The big question, however, is whether private foundations, community fund-raising organizations, and other philanthropies will have the resources to do what should be done. The Independent Sector, an umbrella group of philanthropic organizations, recently warned that it will be caught short unless there is a greater flow of money into its coffers.

Contributions to private charitable organizations, says the Independent Sector, have been growing at the rate of about nine percent a year — well behind the inflationary curve. As a consequence, non-government funding is having trouble meeting present commitments, not to mention the wave of new requests expected in the next few years.

If the slimmed-down federal budget means fewer federal dollars flowing into community agencies, the tax cut now taking shape in Congress promises to leave more dollars in private hands. Taxpayers, we hope, will recognize their obligation to respond more generously to fund appeals from private organizations now relying all the more on their voluntary support.

WASHINGTON (NEA) —At the time of the inauguration, we reported that California Gov. Jerry Brown was in Washington telling insiders that he had no plans to run for president again in 1984. He was saying that he instead had his sights trained on the Senate seat of Republican S. I. Hayakawa.

California political insiders now confirm that Brown is starting to assemble a campaign organization and to raise funds for a 1982 Senate bid.

Sources close to the governor confirm this activity. They add that Brown will pledge in his formal announcement of candidacy — tentatively scheduled for late summer or early fall — that if elected he will serve out his full six-year term and will not run for any other office (specifically president) in 1984.

We also reported some months ago that the Republican senatorial primary was likely to be very crowded even if Hayakawa ran for re-election, a decision that he apparently has not yet made. It then appeared that among the incumbent's several challengers would be Rep. Barry Goldwater Jr.

Goldwater recently announced that he would indeed be a candidate for the Republican nomination regardless of whether Hayakawa seeks re-election. And it still appears that the primary will be no two-man race.

Recent private polls showed that Hayakawa's statewide popularity was about as low as had ever been recorded for a California senator. This has led political experts to predict that Hayakawa would be vulnerable not only to a strong challenge but to any challenge at all.

Knowledgeable Californians say that the Republican field could contain as many as eight candidates, including San Diego Mayor Pete Wilson, who is being urged not to run in the gubernatorial primary against Lt. Gov. Mike Curb, and first daughter Maureen Reagan, who seems to think that a political career should start in the Senate.

It is unlikely that Brown will be alone in the Democratic primary. Former Sen. John Tunney, who was defeated by Hayakawa in 1976, would reportedly like his old Senate seat back. The same polls that showed Hayakawa to be so unpopular found Tunney to be slightly ahead of Brown, who is not exactly his state's most popular politician.

Nevertheless, insiders are betting that it will ultimately be Brown against Goldwater in a race whose outcome cannot yet be predicted. The governor's people are expressing confidence that Brown can defeat Goldwater — or any other Republican, for that matter — and launch a 1988 presidential bid from the Senate.

Another big question in California is exactly when the primary will take place. It used to be that the California primary on the first Tuesday in June was one of the most important of each presidential year.

But the recent proliferation of primaries has resulted in the selection of most presidential nominees long before the contenders reached California. The nation's largest primary now has far less meaning than the primaries of smaller states such as New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Florida. This hurts local pride.

So, efforts are under way to change the date of the California primary. Charles Manatt, the Californian who chairs the Democratic National Committee, reportedly favors the first Tuesday in March; that would make the state's primary one of th first and undoubtedly the most important test of the presidential season. Other plans under debate include moving the primary to the first Tuesday of April or making the primary a two-stage affair, with precinct caucuses in early March leading up to a state nominating convention in June.

Whatever plan is adopted will be almost certain to alter radically the process through which America nominates its presidents.

When it comes to respect in this country, there's nothing to equal the American Headache.

It ranks right up there with penicillin, hot chicken soup and Mt. Rushmore.

You want to leave a party early? Announce you have a headache.

You want to cancel a meeting with the tax auditor? Phone in a headache.

You want to go to sleep on your honeymoon? Retire early with a headache.

The headache is one of the last great mystiques in the world. Why? Because no one ever questions them, or tries to cure them. There is absolutely no substitute for it.

If you can't go shopping because your stomach hurts, the reaction is, "Of course you can. You probably need a laxative."

If you don't feel like going to Aunt Mary's funeral because you have a throbbing pain in your lower back, you're told, "You're just bored. Get your coat and you'll forget it."

If you don't feel like going to bed because you are experiencing blinding spots before your eyes, you're assured, "Close your eyes and you'll never notice them."

But, if you can't possibly leave on a vacation because you have a headache, everyone advises, "Go lie down. We'll talk when you're feeling better."

Women everywhere are indebted to Winona Haslipp of London who invented the headache in 1813, quite by accident. Winona was the mother of eleven children. One night as she was blowing out the candles, she hit her head on a shelf holding pewter mugs. When her husband yelled, "Aren't you coming to bed?" she announced, "I have a headache." When she reached the top of the stairs, she was amazed to see that he had gone to sleep.

The story spread like wildfire. Within days, every woman in London was banging her head on a shelf holding pewter mugs and shouting, "I have a headache." The phrase not only earned Winona a page in history, but 136,000 write-in votes for Queen.

NEW YORK (AP) — Did you know that Thailand households in the 1970s saved at a rate much higher than that of U.S. families? And that the Swiss household savings rate more than quadrupled that of Americans?

It's true. The Thai rate was 9.2 percent, based on the amount of money available to people for spending, minus that spent on goods and services. Switzerland's rate was 31.4, the U.S. just 6.8 percent.

The low U.S. savings rate, now under 5 percent, is the basis for the widely held thesis that U.S. productivity gains are sluggish because savings are insufficient to finance more productive technology.

But does it indicate how much households really are saving, and is it an indicator of household stress? That's another matter, one you seldom see separated from the otherwise doleful tale numbers tell.

But, yes, Americans are saving, albeit in some unusual ways. So unusual, it seems, that they fall beyond the definitional boundaries set for measuring "household savings."

First, they save through their houses. Few families are unaware that their houses are their banks. They have been using them that way for several years, and now the practice is becoming institutionalized.

As equity in that bank rises so do "savings," and those savings often are withdrawn to finance schooling, pay for rainy days, acquire automobiles, or provide the kids with down payments on houses.

In effect, that's exactly what they once did with conventional savings at conventional banks. Now those conventional banks make it easier than ever to tap money by of equity loans or second mortgages.

There's a price, of course, a very dear one, but many Americans are willing to pay the price. They have developed a philosophy that says the best way to save in these inflation afflicted days is to borrow.

The thinking goes this way: Savings accounts have a tendency to shrink from inflation. Even high interest rates sometimes cannot offset that because of high taxes. So, why have a savings account?

Instead, you save by borrowing. You take money that seems regularly to lose its value and buy objects that seem to hold or rise in value. More than incidentally, you may enjoy the object, which might be a second home, a rare print or perhaps a diamond.

You do get burdened with repaying the loan, but you have some help. Internal Revenue Service regulations see to that; you may split the interest cost of those loans with Uncle Sam, who tries to balance his books by taxing the interest of those who save conventionally.

And, of course, you repay with cheaper dollars. Those with 25-year mortgages know all about that. They know, for example, that if inflation continues they will be repaying dollars with quarters. The resulting savings aren't theoretical; they are very real.

Yes, Americans are saving, but their unconventional techniques don't always show up in conventional statistics. The official household savings rate does not accurately show what Americans have been up to.

Dayan Talks About Loves

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP) — Former Defense Minister Moshe Dayan says he loves his wife, but he likes the other women he has romanced.

"I've never loved a woman the way I love Rachel, but that doesn't mean that all the other women I met — and had romances with — I thought of only as technical objects," the Israeli war hero said in a newspaper interview published Friday.

Dayan, 67, said he had "felt guilty" in front of his children when his liaison with Rachel Koren, whom he married in 1973, became public while he still was married to the children's mother.

"It hurt them very much when it became well known that I was having a romance with another woman," Dayan was quoted as saying.

Susannah York Tries Theatre

By JAY SHARBUTT
AP Drama Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Susannah York. Yes, the lovely, blueeyed, blondehaired British lass you tend to remember as a daughter in films. She began in 1960 as Alec Guinness' daughter in "Tunes of Glory."

Three years later came stardom as the saucy offspring of Hugh Griffith in the bawdy "Tom Jones." In 1966, she was the quiet, thoughtful daughter of Paul Scofield in "A Man For All Seasons."

Fine films, she agrees. "But the awful thing about being a woman in show business is that an awful lot of the time you end up playing somebody's something — daughter, lover, stepsister, wife, mother, whatever."

No such problem for her now. She's starring, through June 14, in the off-Broadway revival of Ibsen's "Hedda Gabler" at the Roundabout.

The demanding role represents a numbers of firsts for her. The first time she's seen the play done. The first time she's acted in it. And the first time she's appeared on the New York stage.

"From 'Tom Jones' on there've been odd murmurs and noises for me to do a play here," says the lady when asked why, despite 31 films and 12 plays, she's taken so long to tread the boards here.

The actress, a bright, attractive woman with a bubbling sense of humor, cites two basic reasons for the delay — home and marriage.

The marriage was to Michael Wells, an actor she met while a student at London's prestigious Royal Academy of Dramatic Arts. That produced two children, Sasha, 8, and Orlando, 7.

The union ended in divorce two years ago. She and her ex still are on good terms, she says.

"But I've changed an awful lot in some ways. And suddenly, I'm a single person and I've got two children I'm responsible for."

Although one keeps remembering her as that rosy-cheeked wench who romped so merrily in "Tom Jones" with Albert Finney, she's 40 now, even though the years have treated her kindly.

She was born in London during the Nazi blitz. In 1946, her mother, by then divorced, married again and the family — four sisters and one brother — moved to Scotland.

As a tyke, Miss York was encouraged to act, albeit indirectly, by her stepfather, a gregarious businessman who loved to perform.

So it was off to the Royal Academy where, while playing Nora in Ibsen's "A Doll's House," Susannah York, then 18, was discovered and whisked off to her first film, "Tunes of Glory."

Acting is not the only thing in the life of Miss York, who lives in London with her two kids and their two hamsters.

BRIDGE

For the defense

By Oswald Jacoby and Alan Sontag

Oswald: "Jeremy Flint and David Greenwood, two of Great Britain's best players, have produced a book called, 'Instructions for the Defense.' There is considerable meat there for the student."

Alan: "The last chapter of the book shows hands from actual play where the defenders went wrong and explains why they shouldn't have."

Oswald: "West opened his singleton club. East took his ace and returned the eight (an obvious suit preference signal). West ruffed and led the four of hearts. East took his ace and after thought led back a club. South ruffed with the jack and night had fallen."

Alan: "West blamed East for not returning a heart. East blamed West for not leading his king of hearts to start with."

Oswald: "The authors give West 90 percent of the blame. They point out that West had nothing to lose by leading the heart king. If East held just three clubs he could overtake that king of hearts with his ace and give West the club ruff. We agree that West was somewhat at fault, but that East should have led back the heart anyway."

Ono Accepts Lennon Award

NEW YORK (AP) — Yoko Ono, accepting a cultural award presented posthumously to slain ex-Beatle John Lennon, said New York City "meant a lot" to her husband.

"This was our town and still is," Miss Ono said in accepting the Handel Medallion Friday from Mayor Edward Koch.

Lennon, who was shot to death outside his Manhattan apartment building last Dec. 8, was given the award for his musical accomplishments and because of the humanistic nature of his compositions. He is the 99th recipient of the medallion, which is given at the mayor's discretion.

THIS MOTHER AND DAUGHTER ARE KICKING UP THEIR HEELS... THEY BOTH HAVE NEW FIGURES FROM PAT WALKER'S

Dear Pat Walker's,

I am one of the fortunates to enjoy the benefits of Pat Walker's. I want to take this opportunity to tell others of the enjoyment and satisfaction I received from my program. Since starting I have lost 26¾ lbs. and 30 inches. The pleasure of seeing in the mirror a small, uniformly well developed figure, not an overweight 'hippy' one is immeasureable. My husband's jokingly saying "I'll have to shake the sheets to find you." is just one other plus resulting from the program.

One of the greatest things is to be seen with my daughters, surprise people who even think I lie when I insist we aren't all sisters, we're near the same size and look so alike.

As a result of this program, I feel good and am ready to do anything at any time. Being a 'Petite', not a 'Stout', is pure pleasure.

At last I enjoy all my outdoor hobbies, swimming, horses, volleyball and lots of others.

Peggy Bowen, El Paso

Dear Pat Walker's,

This is my personal report of one of the most exhilarating and enjoyable experiences of my life.

It seems I've always been overweight, particularly in the hips. I tried diets and various exercises without doing much good.

HALLELUJAH! Things happened. I lost 23 lbs. and 36 inches. I now wear size 7 dress and pants. I can live with and be proud of those figures at the same time. How pleasant it is to have friends find it hard to realize this is a 'NEW YOU', to have my husband so very pleased and able to carry me without fear of back injury.

Now I am not self-concious of my appearance when I am enjoying my hobbies, western dancing, horseback riding and working out-of-doors with flowers. They way I feel now I'm sure I'll be adding other pursuits.

I can never say or be grateful enough for the wonderful, helpful program and staff at Pat Walker's.

Darla Bowen Elder, El Paso

Dear Abby

Children Hope Mother's New Habit Won't Last

By Abigail Van Buren

© 1981 by Universal Press Syndicate

DEAR ABBY: My mother is a healthy, vibrant widow of 50. Dad has been dead for 12 years, and during that time my mother devoted her life to raising my brother, my sister and me. She is an R.N. with special training in intensive-care nursing.

So what's the problem? Mom wants to join a convent. I am overjoyed and feel that she has the right to follow the dictates of her conscience.

Mom has no encumbrances, as we kids are all raised and have families of our own. The order she has chosen has accepted her. The hang-up is my brother and sister. They are adamant in their opposition to Mom's decision. They act as though she is joining some kind of kooky cult!

It's tearing Mom apart. She wants so much to pursue her calling, but she wants the approval of all her children. How can I convince my brother and sister that Mom has the right to become a nun?

LOVING DAUGHTER

DEAR DAUGHTER: Instead of trying to convince your brother and sister that your mother has the right to become a nun, convince your mother that she doesn't need the approval of her children to follow the dictates of her heart and conscience.

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I think it's disgusting the way those big-league baseball players chew tobacco. My husband and I used to enjoy sitting down with a snack to watch the games on TV, but it's so unappetizing to see those baseball players spitting a stream of tobacco juice all over the place, we hardly watch now.

Abby, why do baseball players chew tobacco?

UPSET STOMACHS IN ALLENTOWN PA.

DEAR U.S. IN PA.: I don't know, but I'll ask. And if I get any juicy answers I'll let you know. (Steve Garvey, George Brett, Rod Carew, where are you when I need you?)

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I sympathize with Elsie, the 68-year-old widow who had a crush on her 61-year-old lawyer. She had never gone out with him, but she brought him brownies once and sent him a valentine.

My lawyer is also a bachelor, but I've never tried brownies or valentines. I just keep making out new wills. Soon he will have all my money for drawing new wills.

Poor Elsie asked if there was any harm in dreaming. She said it took her 25 years to get over George Brent. Have you any suggestions for me? It took me 30 years to get over Robert Taylor.

HAPLESS WIDOW IN NEW HAMPSHIRE

DEAR HAPLESS: Hang in there, honey! (I'm still not over Tyrone Power.)

* * *

DEAR ABBY: I am a 12-year-old straight-A student. I, along with everyone else in the class, recently had to write 100 times, "I will be quiet during class time," because the majority of the class was talking. (I wasn't.)

I don't think that was fair, and I politely told the teacher so. She said that was the only way she could get everybody to be quiet.

Abby, don't you think teachers can find a more just and effective way to keep the kids from talking?

INNOCENT YET ARMSORE

DEAR INNOCENT: A more "just" way, perhaps, but possibly not one that's more effective.

Meat Production Shows Decline

WASHINGTON (AP) — Total meat production by the nation's federally inspected slaughter plants dipped below year-earlier levels in April, says the Agriculture Department.

But all of the decline occurred because of reduced hog slaughter, the department said Thursday in a monthly report.

Beef output, at 1.81 billion pounds, was up 4 percent from April 1980. Veal production was 32 million pounds, up 7 percent from a year earlier.

But pork production dropped 6 percent from a year earlier to 1.42 billion pounds in April, the report said.

Lamb and mutton production was 29 million pounds, up 4 percent from April of last year.

John Tower Reflects On Washington Years

WASHINGTON (AP) — Someone asked Sen. John Tower recently why he left his job as a political science professor to get into politics.

"My mother dropped me on the head when I was a boy," he answered immediately.

Pressed about whether in his 20 years in Washington, he had ever longed to be back at Midwestern University in Wichita Falls, Tower smiled. "Almost every day."

He was joking, of course, although the demands on his time have greatly increased now that the Republicans have a majority in the Senate and he has become chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee instead of merely its ranking minority member.

"I guess I've always had an interest in history and political office," he said. It was 1954 when he first ventured into a campaign. He announced for the Texas Legislature "and got waxed," he recalls.

Back then, even if a person had Republican leanings, he didn't run as a Republican because you had to be a Democrat in Texas if you had any hope at all of winning. Coming out first in the Democratic primary was the same as winning the whole thing. Most of the time, the Democrat didn't even have an opponent in the General Election.

But Tower ran as a member of the GOP.

"I ran as a Republican because I decided its national views more accurately identified with my views and those of Texas," he said.

He ran against Lyndon Johnson, who was then the popular and powerful majority leader of the U.S. Senate, in 1960 when LBJ ran simultaneously for both the Senate and for vice president.

Johnson won, but Tower got a respectable 41 percent of the votes in the race, and the name identification he received enabled him to lead a 71-candidate field in the required special election a few months later. In the runoff, he easily beat an ultra-reactionary Democrat who had been appointed to the seat.

His election "was sort of the beginning of the realignment we have started to see in politics in Texas and the South," Tower said.

Some light-hearted repartee between Tower and Sen. Edward Kennedy occurred Tuesday when the Massachusetts senator introduced a resolution in the Senate, congratulating the Boston Celtics for winning their 14th world championship.

The Celtics won the National Basketball Association title by beating the Houston Rockets in a best-of-seven series.

After praising the Celtics' opponents, Kennedy added: "I stand in this body to salute today the NBA champions, the Boston Celtics, unique personalities with a unique achievement. They have done us proud. We return the honor. Mr. President, I move that the resolution be agreed to."

Tower rose to speak. "Mr. President, reserving the right to object—"

Kennedy responded, "Mr. President, I am willing to adjust the last sentence to meet the objection." (Laughter)

"If the senator from Massachusetts will yield for a question, what is this about basketball having been invented in Massachusetts?" Tower asked.

Kennedy: "Well, as the senator knows, after the hard-fought contest which took place recently between a very outstanding team from Texas and the team from Boston I am proud to say, the Boston team prevailed. If the senator will read his history of the origin of basketball, he will find out that the first games were played in 1891 in my home state of Massachusetts."

Tower: "At least that is what they claim in Massachusetts."

Kennedy: "That is right."

Mom, Daughter Meet After 20 Years Absence

DALLAS (AP) — Social workers had decided that 59-year-old Annelle Davidson's poor health and hospitalization made her unable to care for the child she bore 22 years ago.

When her daughter was two years old, she was taken from her mother and put up for adoption.

Mrs. Davidson had just about given up hope of ever regaining her daughter, given the name Susan Lane by her adoptive parents.

But after a long, tiresome fight with the courts and her daughter's adoptive parents, Mrs. Davidson and Susan were reunited in an emotional meeting Saturday afternoon.

"After all those painful days of wondering, I can't believe the time has come," said Mrs. Davidson, as she anxiously waited at Dallas' Love Field for more than three hours for her daughter's flight to arrive.

"I've been crying all day," she said.

When Mrs. Lane finally arrived, she tearfully embraced her mother and older sister, Mary Stallings, both of whom she had not seen since she was a toddler. She now lives in LeMarque, a small town about five miles northwest of Galveston.

Her mother reflected back upon the day when her child was taken away.

"I don't see how anyone could be so cruel," said Mrs. Davidson. "Didn't they know I have feelings, too?"

Mrs. Davidson was hospitalized at the time. About two weeks after she was discharged, she tried to find Susan — without success. The distraught woman hired an attorney to fight for custody of her child, but the court ruled against her.

She finally succeeded in locating her daughter and the girl's new family. But the adoptive parents thwarted her attempts to contact the child.

When Mrs. Davidson's oldest daughter, Mrs. Stallings, once tried to call her sister, the phone call and ensuing letters were interrupted by the adoptive parents.

It was Susan Lane who finally put an end to the struggle with a phone call to her natural mother a few days ago.

Mrs. Lane admitted she repeatedly put off the reunion with her family because she feared meeting them after so long.

But her fears vanished when she stepped off the plane Saturday afternoon.

"Now I have two mothers," she said.

Mrs. Lane, who says she still has strong ties with her adoptive family, is married and has a son.

"I felt I owed it to my son, so that he will know who his real grandmother is," she said.

Sunning while on medication

By Lawrence Lamb, M.D.

DEAR DR. LAMB — Is it true that while taking certain medicines one should not sit in the sun? If so, why? What, if any, harm could have been done if one has acquired a dark tan slowly? Is there any cause for alarm if one has been taking medicine for eight months without advice from a doctor about this?

DEAR READER — Yes, and it is also true of using various skin preparations and soaps.

These preparations increase the sensitivity of the skin to sunshine. In other words, it is easier to get a bad sunburn and damage your skin. Anyone taking medicines that increase the sensitivity to the sun must be particularly careful about being out in the sun too long and should take extra precautions to avoid sunburn.

Antibiotics such as tetracyclines may increase your sensitivity. So will sulfa medications, some diuretics and even salicylates as found in common aspirin. Barbituates and tranquilizers also increase sensitivity to the sun's radiation. These are sometimes used in some cases of elevated blood pressure as well as for nervous tension.

If a person is taking small doses of antibiotics such as tetracyclines for acne and then wants to get some sunshine, he will be more sensitive than other people and may end up having a bad sunburn as well as acne.

The same is true of acne preparations used to peel the skin.

I have listed these and provided additional information on protecting the skin from sunburn in The Health Letter number 7-10, Your Skin: Sun, Aging, Spots and Cancer, which I am sending you. Others who want this issue can send 75 cents with a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for it to me, in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Certain aftershave lotions such as Hai Karate and Jade East may increase your sensitivity. So will bactericidal soaps that contain TBS (tribromosalicylanilide). Check the ingredients on your soap.

If you have been getting plenty of sun and not having a problem, your tan is already protecting you somewhat. But anyone who is on such medicines should use sunscreens and limit his exposure.

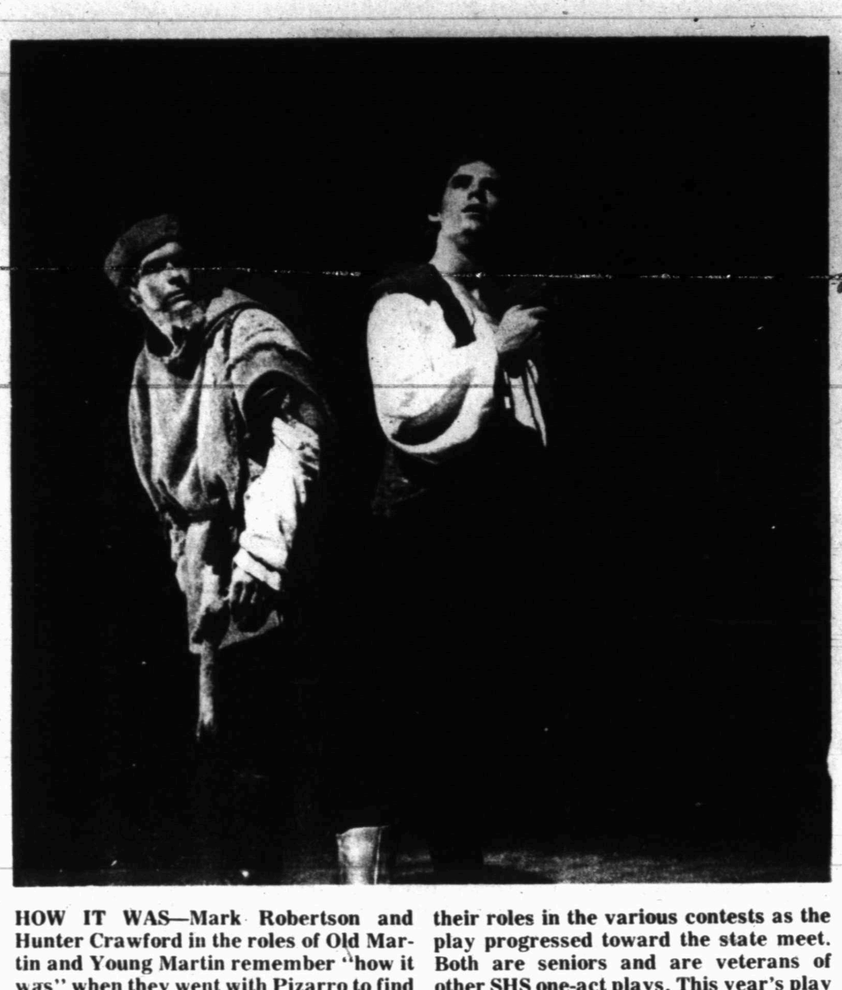

DEAR DR. LAMB — I think I read in your column that lumpy breasts were caused from too much caffeine in coffee, colas, plus too much chocolate. I can't find it and I really need that information as I am quite concerned about this problem.

DEAR READER — That study was the work of Dr. John P. Minton, professor of surgery and oncology at Ohio State. He discovered that many women who had lumpy breasts would have regression or actual disappearance of breast lumps if they would stop ALL caffeine, which is found in coffee, tea, colas and chocolate.

Since then he has also reported that nicotine from cigarette smoking also appears to be a factor in lumpy breasts. His studies show that after eight weeks of no caffeine at all and no cigarettes that two-thirds of women with lumpy breasts are lump free. He thinks that if women would follow such a program perhaps 90 percent of the lump problems would no longer exist. Try it. Considering the cost of coffee, tea, chocolate and cigarettes, it is the cheapest medical treatment around.

State Insurance Board Looks Into Blue Cross

DALLAS (AP) — State financial examiners are at work in the Dallas area Blue Cross offices trying to determine why the state's largest health insurer has recorded a $45 million loss in 1980.

"We're very concerned about the solvency of the company," said R.B. Ashworth, deputy commissioner for financial monitoring of the state Board of Insurance.

The board is concerned over whether the company can remain solvent and pay its clients' claims after reporting the record 1980 loss, the company's first deficit in five years, Ashworth said.

The state board's investigation started at the beginning of the month, after company officials told regulators that outside auditors had determined the firm had not set aside enough reserves for claims that had been incurred but not paid.

"Our main concern was how they (Blue Cross officials) missed the figures so much," Ashworth said.

Blue Cross collected insurance premiums of almost $900 million in 1980 and originally reported a $24 million loss for the year. But after an audit by an outside firm, Blue Cross filed an amended annual statement nearly doubling the losses.

Eugene Aune, acting president of the non-profit insurance company, acknowleged that 1980 was a "devastating" year.

"In all candor, we had a bad year in 1980, administratively and financially. We didn't do as thorough of a job as we should have," Aune said.

Aune says another year like 1980 would bankrupt Blue Cross. But he said that auditors and consultants have been hired and new management has taken over to pull the company out of the red.

Aune was appointed acting president after W.F. Hachmeister resigned at the annual board meeting in March.

In a statement, the company said losses had been miscalculated because of recent computerization of claims processing.

Unexpected Windfall...

Firm Splits $53 Million Between Employees

KILGORE, Texas (AP) — When the con men come after the fortunes of Elder "Catfish" Daniels, the 57-year-old heavy equipment operator just tosses their letters aside. Although he's worth more than $100,000 in cash and stocks, Daniels can't read or write.

Daniels is one of 87 workers at an East Texas oil company who, under an unusual employee participation payoff, received a chunk of a $53 million windfall bonanza.

He had no idea how rich he was until a bank teller began peeling off $100 dollar bills to the tune of an $11,600 check Daniels had received from his employer. He also owns $94,000 in company stocks.

Delta Drilling Co., after 50 years as a closely held private company, opened some of its stock to the public on March 17. Under the employee participation plan, worked out in the early 1970s, workers were promised stock in the company should it be merged, sold or taken public.

The "participation units" were increased if the employee stayed with the company or purchased by the company if the worker retired.

The average payoff was $612,000, with the allotment based on salary and time in service.

The employee payoff plan was conceived in 1974 by several top-level officers at Delta, including its aging founder, Joseph Zeppa.

For years, Delta had been a struggling oil-rig operation. But in the early 1970s, after the Arab oil embargo and subsequent restructuring of oil prices, business started to boom.

The employee participation program emerged as a way to protect Zeppa's most loyal employees — many of whom had little education — if the company were merged or sold and old-time workers found themselves without a job.

At least 13 employees became millionaires.

One of those millionaires was Jack Elkirs, a trucking coordinator, who says he was at home when he heard the news.

"I told my wife to come on, and booked us a flight to Las Vegas," Elkins said. "And for the first time in my life I could have a vacation where I didn't have to worry about how much money I was spending."

Many of those who received part of the proceeds were oil-patch roughnecks or longtime secretaries.

Herman Smith, a 58-year-old rig assembly supervisor, received $971,000. He says he will bank the money and keep working in the oil yards with Catfish and the others until someone can convince him he should do otherwise.

And 62-year-old Doyce Maywald, a secretary who has been with Delta for 28 years, says she's contemplating a trip to Europe as one way to celebrate her $278,000 check.

"Some of these people have worked in the oil patch for 40 years," said Keating Zeppa, whose Italian immigrant father founded Delta Drilling in 1931.

No one realized how much the employee "participation units" would grow.

Between 1974 and 1980, company revenues quadrupled from $38 million to $161 million and earnings quadrupled from $5 million to $20 million.

To stockholders, it became apparent that with public trading their stock would be worth millions. And when the company finally offered 10 percent of its holdings to the public, they asked for — and received — $17.50 per share.

Most of those who cashed in on the participation program are middle-aged, native East Texans who insist they would prefer that their lives remain basically the same.

"How has my life changed?" said Smith. "Not a bit."

There are problems, however. Big taxes always follow big money, as many of the lucky workers are finding out.

For each of the 87 workers, only 30 percent of the payoff was in cash; the remaining 70 percent was in company stock. From the cash portion, 20 percent of the total payoff (cash and stock) were witheld for federal taxes.

But since payoffs are considered income, the recipients find themselves in the 50 percent tax bracket — owing tens of thousands of dollars to "Uncle Sam."

George Jessel Is Dead At 83

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Entertainer George Jessel, whose show business career spanned more than seven decades and who became known as the "toastmaster general of the USA" on the dinner circuit, has died at age 83, a hospital reported.

The popular comedian died of cardio-pulmonary arrest at 8:54 p.m. PDT Sunday in the UCLA Medical Center where he was admitted several days ago, said hospital spokeswoman Jane Marks.

Stanley Cowan, Jessel's longtime publicist, said the actor, author, producer, comedian and composer was admitted to the hospital last week for "a few days of medical tests."

Cowan said a nurse found Jessel in a coma Sunday night, and he was was put into the intensive care unit, where he suffered the fatal heart attack a short time later.

Cowan said Jessel had not been ill recently, although four or five weeks ago he "took a slight fall" at his home in Reseda, Calif.

Funeral services were pending for the comedian, who was survived by two daughters.

Jessel grew to professional maturity as a comic, singer and actor in the era of such popular entertainers as Al Jolson and Eddie Cantor. He made his name on Broadway and later performed on radio and in movies and television.

The public came to know him for his seemingly endless travels to address fund-raising dinners of every description and the headlines he made as a suitor to a succession of starlets.

The first activity earned him the unofficial title of toastmaster general, bestowed at a Washington Dinner in 1949 by former President Harry S. Truman. Jessel worked hard to keep the title, speaking in as many as 90 cities in 100 days.

His thousands of speeches helped to raise millions of dollars for organizations ranging from the United Jewish Appeal to a women's sewing circle in Milford, Conn.

America Developes A Taste For Wine

By LOUISE COOK
Associated Press Writer

America has developed a taste for wine.

In barely two decades, wine shipments in the United States have almost tripled and per-capita consumption has more than doubled.

Marvin R. Shanken, editor and publisher of "Impact," a newsletter on wine and distilled spirits, said the fastest-growing segment of the market is white wine.

"There are more occasions to drink white wine because it's also used as a cocktail beverage," he said. "It's refreshing. It's cold. It's light. People like the taste. And it's certainly fashionable."

Wine shipments in the United States in 1960 totaled 163 million gallons, the equivalent of less than one gallon per person. Last year, Shanken said, shipments totaled an estimated 475.8 million gallons, equal to just over two gallons per person.

Two decades ago, 74 percent of the table wine sold in the United States was red; 17 percent was white and 9 percent was rose. In 1980, white wine accounted for 54 percent of the market, compared to 26 percent for red and 20 percent for rose. In the last 10 years alone, white wine shipments have increased sixfold.

Table wines — generally dry and relatively low in calories and alcohol — have grown in popularity at the expense of sweet dessert wines. "In 1970, dessert wine held 28 percent of the market," Shanken said. "Last year, it held only 9.5 percent. This scenario reflects the changing American taste preference..."

Why the switch? "A more sophisticated palate appreciates a dryer wine," Shanken said.

He said a recent study by National Family Opinion Inc. of Toledo, Ohio, that the biggest wine consumer is a woman aged 30 to 39, living in the West with a household income of $25,000 or more. She drinks wine mostly at home, with dinner.

Shanken said consumers do not have to spend a lot of money on wine. "You can find much-more-than-adequate everyday wines for $2 to $5 a bottle," he said.

The average number of offspring per birth for an octopus is 200,000. Of these, only one or two will reach maturity and reproduce in turn.

Andretti Named 500 Victor

Stewards Cry Foul, Bump Unser

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) - In a move unprecedented in the 65 years of the Indianapolis 500, Bobby Unser was bumped from the winner's circle - penalized for illegally passing several cars - and Mario Andretti was declared today the official winner of Sunday's race.

Roger Penske, owner of Unser's car, immediately filed an official protest over the race stewards' decision to penalize Unser one lap and drop him to second, just ahead of third-place finisher Vern Schuppan. That protest was expected to be heard within hours by U.S. Auto Club officials, said Art Meyers, chief referee for the race.

Even Andretti, whose only other victory had come in 1969 (when he beat Dan Gurney and Unser across the finish line), had believed when he went to bed Sunday night that he had little chance of overturning the outcome of Sunday's fiery, accident-marred race.

He had crossed the line 5.3 seconds - about 300 yards - behind the Penske PC-9B Cosworth that carried Unser to an apparent third Indy victory. And, when asked what he thought his chances of being awarded the victory, Andretti replied: "Knowing this joint - nil!"

But he was awarded it after race stewards considered a petition filed by Andretti, teammate Gordon Johncock (he finished ninth) and A.J. Foyt (he was 13th). The petition was not an official protest - although it had the same effect - and was filed only by the drivers, not the car owners.

All three drivers said they saw Unser pass several cars illegally during a yellow-flagged caution period in the 149th lap. Unser, they said, made what was determined to be the illegal move as he came out of the pits.

Meanwhile, driver Danny Ongais was listed in serious but stable condition after surving a fiery crash at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway. Ongais underwent surgery to repair a broken right leg and a broken left forearm.

Pat Patrick, the owner of Andretti's Wildcat Cosworth, seemed to be one of Penske's strongest allies in the attempt to reverse today's decision and restore the checkered flag to Unser.

When told his driver was named the winner, Patrick said, "I don't agree. I don't think that's right. I am going to talk to (Chief Steward) Tom Binford about it. They should have penalized him when the thing was reported, not after the damned race."

Meyers said it took this long to decide that Unser had broken the rules because "we could not determine what happened until we checked after the race. We checked the scoring, (video) tapes and reports from (track) observers.

"We could count that he (Unser) passed seven cars while on the (track) apron. You can't do that."

In the past, protests are routinely heard and upheld, often moving drivers up or down a lap or two and altering their final positions by one or more positions in the final standings. But never before has a driver finished first and wound up anywhere else. The stewards' decision to bump Unser into second position - if upheld - will cost him about $200,000 in prize money.

Stanford To Test Texas

AUSTIN (AP) - Southwest Conference champ Texas will have two chances today to take a win over Stanford that would propel the Longhorns to an unprecedented 21st trip to the College World Series.

Fifth-ranked Texas, 57-8-1, is unbeaten in the NCAA Central Regionals on its home field. Stanford avenged a Friday loss to Lamar by whipping the Beaumont, Texas team 9-1 on Sunday. The Cardinals need a sweep in the afternoon-night doubleheader today to move to the championships in Omaha, Neb.

Stanford was to play Texas on Sunday night, but thunderstorms forced the postponement until today. The second game would be played tonight if Stanford takes the opener.

The Cardinals beat Brigham Young on Saturday. Texas beat BYU 11-4 Friday and used two ninth-inning runs to beat Lamar 3-2 on Saturday.

Fergus Wins At Memorial

DUBLIN, Ohio (AP) - Keith Fergus, one week after a demoralizing experience, has learned how to play the last 10 holes of a PGA tournament.

It paid big dividends Sunday. He handled the pressure of a head-to-head contest with playing partner Jack Renner for his first victory in 4½ professional golf seasons, a $63,000 payday in the Memorial Tournament.

The 27-year-old Texan played Muirfield Village's last 10 holes in par. It helped him to a 1-under-par 71, a 72-hole total of 284 and a one-shot victory over Renner.

Seven days earlier, Fergus blew up in the Colonial National Invitation tournament. He was one shot off the lead before double-bogeying the ninth hole and playing the last 10 in 9 over par. His back nine of 42 gave him a tie for 21st place.

"That will demoralize you real quick," he said. "I was so down. You're away from you're family. You have all the travel. You wonder whether it's all worth it. Then something like this happens, and it's all worth it."

The swirling, gusting winds of Muirfield Village took their toll Sunday. Only three players among the first 17 finishers could solve par of 72. And Fuzzy Zoeller, Fergus and Renner managed that feat by a single shot with 71s.

Astros Fall; Howe Hitting

HOUSTON (AP) - Art Howe's hitting string is the talk of the Houston Astros these days, but the Astros failed to make the most of it Sunday.

Howe upped his streak of hitting safely to 23 games with a fourth-inning triple, setting a new club record. And although Howe's string may be the longest in the majors, it just wasn't enough to get the Astros past San Francisco.

The Giants rode the strong arm of Vida Blue to a 2-1 victory over Houston.

Blue didn't allow the Astros many scoring chances, and their biggest threat came on Howe's three-bagger to the right centerfield wall with none out in the fourth. Blue induced Cesar Cedeno and Jose Cruz to pop up and struck out Denny Walling to strand the Astro third baseman.

Blue, 4-3, handled constant pressure during the game.

Rangers Win In Big Way

SEATTLE (AP) - For the first time this year the Texas Rangers bullpen saved a game for Jon Matlack, but he didn't know it.

Three times this season Matlack had left a game with a lead and all he had to show for his efforts were one loss and two no-decisions.

Sunday afternoon Texas relievers Charlie Hough and John Henry Johnson combined for 2⅓ shutout innings to preserve a 5-3 victory for the Rangers over the Seattle Mariners.

"It's nice the relievers came through for me. I didn't know what was going on. I came into the clubhouse to watch the game and Fergie (Jenkins) was watching some monster movie. He wouldn't let me change the channel," said Matlack.

Matlack, 3-3, picked up the victory when the Rangers scored two unearned runs in the top of the seventh to break a 3-3 tie.

Seattle manager Rene Lachemann was not happy with his players after the loss. The Mariners started out winning four games for Lachemann after he took over the club from Maury Wills, but are 3-9 in their last 12 games.

Mickey Rivers led off the Rangers seventh with a single. Al Oliver followed with a potential double play grounder to second baseman Lenny Randle, but Randle made a bad throw from just four feet from second, allowing both runners to reach base.

Seattle pitcher Ken Clay then uncorked a wild pitch, allowing both runners to advance. Buddy Bell drove in Rivers with a sacrifice fly and Johnny Grubb scored Oliver with a single to center.

Racquetball Meet Ends; Names Class Winners

Nancy Wilson, Dalton Walton, Sandy Sewell and Ron Watson took top honors at the Snyder Racquetball Tournament, completed here Sunday after three days of action.

Wilson had stopped Elsie Anderson on Friday 21-7 and 21-0, then defeated Joan Bunch on Saturday, 21-6 and 21-16 before wrapping up the Women's Open field with a 21-11 and 21-9 victory over Joan Bunch who placed second.

Walton's victories came tougher, as he stopped Raymond Zamarippa in the first round, 21-18 and 21-19, and Richard Arthur in the second, 21-4, 5-21 and 11-6, before winning over Tim Falls, 21-15 and 21-11 in the final.

Valente Chavez, who lost to Arthur on the first day, rallied to beat Zamarippa 31-23 on Saturday, then took consolation with a tough 10-21, 21-9 and 11-9 victory over Duane Hood.

Watson worked his way to the Men's Novice championship by stopping John Tom Thompson, 21-7 and 21-19; winning over Stephen Ham 21-14 and 21-16; and defeating Laddie McMillan 21-12 and 21-8. He met Danny Lunsford in the finals, winning by a narrow score of 9-21, 21-14 and 11-10.

Lunsford had defeated John Lacik 21-6 and 21-2; defeated Mike Dennis 21-17 and 21-5; and beaten Phil Fortune 21-10 and 21-8 to reach the championship bout.

Consolation honors went to Randy Rodgers, who defeated Mike Jordan in the finals, 21-16, 19-21 and 11-6.

Sewell had less trouble in wrapping up the Women's Novice class. She took her first match by forfeit over Linda Berryman, who came up with an injury and could not play, then ripped Linda Martin 21-1 and 21-1. She then defeated Cathy Chavez 21-19 and 21-3, before taking the title over Kitten Arthur 21-10 and 21-4.

Arthur had defeated Amanda Garza 21-7 and 21-18; had defeated Shirley Newman 21-14 and 21-9; and stopped Susan Head 21-6 and 21-5.

Garza worked her way to the consolation finals after the first-round defeat by Arthur and won it by stopping Lawanna Vincent in a hard-fought match, 21-15, 11-21 and 11-10.

Youth Role Reversed For Matadors In 1981

Last year it was the veterans against the young guys. That hasn't changed any, except now the bat is in the other hand, so to speak.

Lubbock Estacado, boasting the return of almost its entire 1980 bi-district championship baseball squad, goes against the basically young, but talented Tigers in playoff action beginning 4 p.m. Tuesday at Moffett Field here. The best-of-three bi-district series heads for Lubbock on Saturday where Game Two is scheduled for 1 p.m. at Estacado Field. A Game Three, if necessary, will follow immediately.

The series promises to be even better one than last year's regional meeting between the two, which saw Snyder eek out a 4-3 first game victory with three seventh-inning runs before winning a berth to state with an easier 8-1 romp in the second tilt.

Both teams feature solid pitching, both have good speed on the bases, and both can hit the ball well.

A case in point for Estacado is Hector Limon, of whom Richard Day, Lubbock Avalanche-Journal writer has said, "If Limon can perform in the playoffs as well as he has during his first three regular seasons of high school ball, he could single-handedly led the Matadors to a state championship."

The comment probably doesn't sit well with Limon's hard-working teammates or Coach Albert Lewis' Tigers, but it's no secret he is a professional prospect.

The speedster comes into Tuesday's game batting an unbelievable .561, and was a main cog in the Mat's 21-6 regular season. He'll be flanked by Rodney Wheeler, who boasts a .537 average.

Wayne Dotson is expected to hold down opening mound duties for the visitors. Dotson is 10-2 for the season. He'll be going against Snyder's Tony Degrate, 11-1.

Degrate, batting .329 for the season, leads the Tiger's power hitting with 12 home runs. Mike Roemisch, batting .360, has hit seven homers, while Brent Roemisch, .402 and Barry Davis, .298, have put five each over the fence.

Snyder as a team is hitting .354 for the season.

Bartender Bard Serves

By JOAN CIRILLO
Associated Press Writer

KATMANDU, Nepal (AP) — Freddie Bowles, the self-proclaimed bartender bard of Katmandu," stood behind the Malla Hotel bar mixing a rum potion. He had served Queen Elizabeth, Tito and Chou En-lai in his 50 years as barkeep. This day, he was mixing a brew for two Americans embarking on an expedition in the nearby Himalayan mountains.

"This is my gift to mankind," he says with a reassuring wink as he meticulously pours rum, spices, honey and lemon into an empty bottle. "I developed it after many months of meditation in the mountains."

Twenty minutes later, he hands over the mixture with the promise it would cure any cold, soothe any ache and remedy any ill that could befall novice mountain climbers like myself and Roger, my husband.

Bowles, the first Englishman to be named a Nepalese citizen, had bid farewell to many a Himalayan wanderer, so when he guaranteed his "Nepalese Punch" would serve us well, I tucked the bottle under my arm — and believed him.

I wanted all the help I could get.

Seasoned backpackers and campers, we were not. But we couldn't resist when we opened a travel brochure collecting dust in our Manhattan apartment and found a 23-day trip to the kingdom of Nepal that coincided with our winter vacation.

An Albany, Calif., "adventure travel" agency offered a 14-day trek (essentially backpacking) in the Khumbu Valley, the region south of Mount Everest, to explore the villages, monasteries and homes of the Sherpas — Tibetans who long ago migrated south to the region.

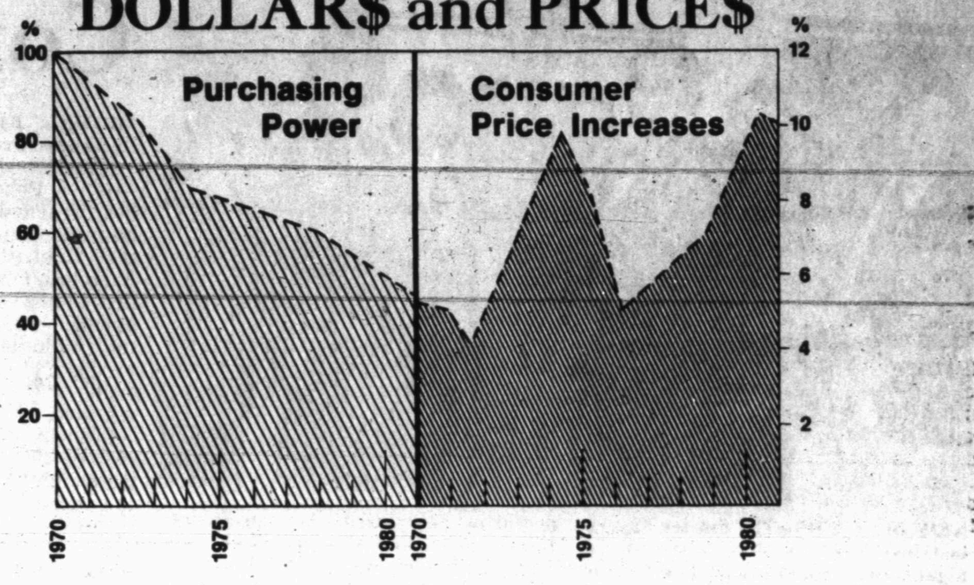

The days before and after the trek would be spent in the firstclass Malla Hotel for tours of the shrines and narrow streets of the Nepalese capital, hippie mecca of the '50s and '60s for its once available and now illegal marijuana and hashish.

In Katmandu, we were met by trek leader Scot Macbeth, a feisty 51-year-old San Franciscan and geologist, and spent our first few days exploring the city and meeting the 11 others in the group.

Our biggest fear — keeping pace with hard-core mountain climbers — dissolved when we learned no one was out to scale Everest. All Americans but for one Canadian, the three other women and seven men ranged in age from their mid-20s to late 50s, and included three scientists, two businessmen, a publisher, artist, interior designer, political consulant, and, much to everyone's relief, a doctor.

The musical "My Fair Lady," adapted from George Bernard Shaw's play "Pygmalion," opened at the Schubert Theater in New Haven, Conn., on Feb. 4, 1956.

DOLLAR$ and PRICE$

Two views of the dollar's decline in value are charted above. Its purchasing power, left, has been dropping steadily to less than half what it was a decade ago. The reason is inflation, measured at right by year-to-year increases in consumer prices. (Source: The Conference Board)

Police Investigate Reported Overdose

Police investigated an overdose case early this morning. Officer Robert Harbin was called to the Cogdell Hospital emergency room when a 19 year-old man was brought in unconscious after allegedly taking several pain killers and drinking Jack Daniels. The subject has apparently recovered and was sent home, according to hospital personnel.

In other activity, officer Harbin picked up a 21 year-old man at 400 East Hwy. for driving while intoxicated and for possession of marijuana, less than two ounces. The man was arrested shortly after midnight.

At 2:40 a.m., a 34 year-old man was arrested in the 1900 block of 16th Street for driving while intoxicated and driving while license suspended. Officer Keith Ward made the arrest.

Saturday afternoon, officer Richard McCulley investigated a burglary of a residence at the England apartments. Jeff H. Frank reported someone had gained entry through a bedroom window and had taken a jar of assorted coins valued at $35.

Sunday afternoon, a burglary was reported at Calvary Baptist Church. It was reported to officer Bill Armstrong that an undetermined amount of money had been taken from the church office.

At 7 p.m. Sunday, an alleged aggravated assault was reported at 30th and Ave. L. Joe Frores told officer Armstrong that someone had taken a shot at him with a small caliber revolver as he was driving by. One bullet was said to have hit the vehicle.

AUSTIN, Texas (AP) — Seventeen new state district courts would be established under a bill approved 122-11 by the House Thursday. It goes to the Senate.

Nine of the courts would begin operation this Sept 1 — one in the Shelby, Sabine and San Gustine counties district, one in Wood and Vanzandt counties, four in Bexar County, two in Dallas and one in Collin County. Two more Dallas courts and one in Tarrant County would be effective Jan. 1, 1982: two more in Travis on Sept. 1, 1982, and three on Jan. 1, 1983, in Hidalgo County and two in Harris county.

All new judges would be appointed by Gov. Bill Clements.

Bride Wore Camouflage

SEBEC, Maine (AP) — Some would have thought it was another couple trying for a far-out wedding — the bride and groom decked out in camouflage hunting shirts and blue jeans with two black bears strung up on a pole behind them.

But Jim and Barbara Spackey just happened to be on a hunting trip when they decided to get married.

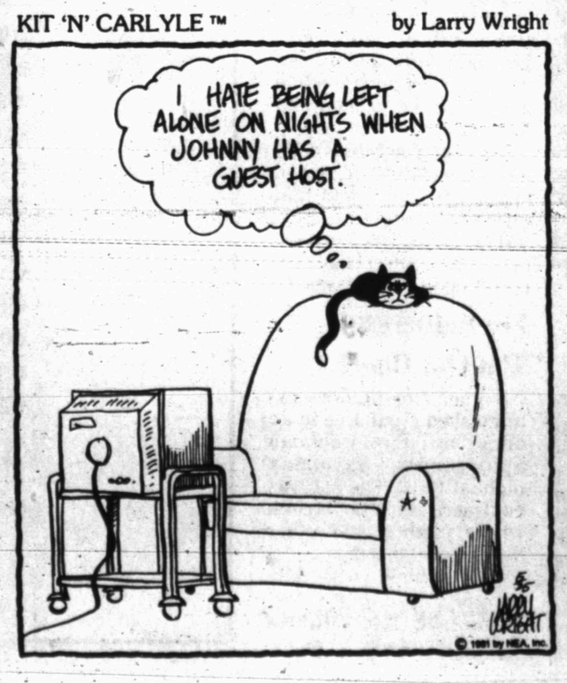

The Logan, Ohio, couple was in Maine "and then we decided to get married," said Spackey, 36, in a telephone interview from Foggy Mountain Camps, his honeymoon cabin in northern Maine.

About 30 hunters, many of them strangers who "just happened to be around," witnessed the 15-minute ceremony, conducted by Justice of the Peace Kenneth Jones of Dover-Foxcroft.

"The black flies were wonderful," said Donna Bosowicz who, with her husband, Wayne, lives at the cabin where the wedding was held.

Coffee and cake from a Dover-Foxcroft bakery were served at a quick reception before the hunters grabbed their gear and returned to the woods.

Miss Reagan Is Against Extremes

WARREN, Ohio (AP) — Maureen Reagan says the issue of gun control in the United States has been polarized by extremes, and she favors a middle ground.

President Reagan's eldest daughter says there is a need for some type of control on the availability of weapons, but she refused to go as far as suggesting an all-out control of firearms.

Miss Reagan says people should be required to get licenses for guns instead of having to register them.

Barcelona, Spain...

Commandos Rescue Hostages

MIGUEL FERNANDEZ
Associated Press Writer

BARCELONA, Spain (AP) — Police commandos rescued some 70 hostages unharmed from the Central Bank of Barcelona in a hail of gunfire, killing one of the 11 gunmen who had seized the building 37 hours earlier and capturing the rest, the government reported.

Officials denied earlier reports that the gunmen were rightist members of the Guardia Civil, the paramilitary national police, or of the army. Interior Minister Juan Jose Roson said they were professional gunmen with criminal records.

EFE, the government news agency, said sources close to Prime Minister Leopoldo Calvo Sotelo's cabinet told it: "The first details indicate... an operation organized and financed by elements of the extreme right."

Wearing hoods, the gunmen took about 215 hostages when they seized the bank in the center of Barcelona at gunpoint Saturday morning and demanded release of four military officers indicted for the abortive coup in the Spanish Parliament three months ago.

They said the bank was mined with dynamite and threatened to begin killing the hostages. But by Sunday the front man for the Feb. 23 coup attempt, Lt. Col. Antonio Tejero, denounced them from his prison cell, and the gunmen had freed 145 of their captives and were asking for safe passage from Spain to Argentina.

Government negotiator Juan Rovira said the police and the gunmen had been in hourly contact throughout the day and the government said it would agree to nothing but unconditional surrender. And the Argentine Foreign Ministry said it would not accept them.

The rescue operation began at 8 p.m. Sunday and lasted two hours. Covered by more than 1,000 police, some of the 60-man assault team slipped into the bank and told the captives to run for freedom after police sighted a gunman jumping from a window with a hostage.

To the cheers of spectators standing some 500 yards away behind police lines, other commandos attacked from the roofs of nearby buildings and along the sidewalk. Bunches of hostages fled, most of them through a ground-floor gate between the six-story granite building and the Plaza Catalonia, one of the largest squares in Spain.

Police said they captured eight gunmen who tried to flee with the hostages. Javier Colorado, a bank employee who was held hostage, told EFE several of the gunmen forced their captives to trade clothes with them.

"When we left for the street," he said, "some of the assailants changed clothes with us and said: 'We are also bank employees.' It could have been a genuine massacre."

National Police Chief Jose Luis Fernandez Dopico told reporters there were 11 gunmen, not 24 as reported throughout the siege. He said they were armed with one machine gun, 11 pistols and six knives.

The police chief said the leader of the band, called "Numero Uno" during the siege, was 25-year-old Jose Juan Martinez Gomez, a "robber and anarchist" from Almeria, in the southern Andalusia region.

He said the slain gunman was Jose Sanchez, 58, of Barcelona, but no other information on him was available.

Administration Favors Phasing In SS Changes

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration, in an attempt to make its Social Security plan "a lot more attractive," is willing to discuss phasing in reduced benefits for early retirees and other compromises during a meeting this week with House Democratic leaders.

"Maybe we can phase it in, ... we're not against that," Health and Human Services Secretary Richard S. Schweiker said Sunday on NBC's "Meet the Press." "Some of these changes may have to be phased in."

He said House leaders, including Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., have agreed to meet with him to discuss a "bipartisan solution" to make the proposed Social Security reductions palatable to Congress.

"No one has yet committed themselves to what kind of approach that might be, but we are going to hold a meeting, hopefully Thursday or Friday of this week, to see if we can work out a bipartisan approach," Schweiker said.

He gave no indication of what type of delay the administration might agree to on the early-retirement question.

"I'd like to wait ... until we at least discuss with some of the principals involved what they have in mind," he said. "We are certainly open to reason."

A key, controverial item in the president's plan would revise a system under which persons are able to retire at age 62 — as 70 percent of workers now do — and collect 80 percent of the benefits they would normally receive at age 65.

Americans Feel Taxes Are Still Too High

NEW YORK (AP) — Three years after the "Tax Revolt of 1978," Americans are convinced that federal income taxes are too high, but many no longer consider property tax rates excessive, according to an Associated Press-NBC News poll.

The poll indicates that public anger over some taxes has declined, but the concern about federal income taxes is a key to the strong public support for President Reagan's economic proposals.

In June 1978, voters in California approved Proposition 13, an initiative that slashed property taxes in the state and put a lid on future increases. That vote set off the Tax Revolt of 1978, triggering moves in a number of other states to limit property and other taxes.

Some of those efforts were successful and some were not.

Opinions about federal income taxes haven't changed much since an AP-NBC News poll in June 1978.

Sixty-nine percent of those questioned May 18 and 19 said federal income taxes are too high, versus 75 percent in 1978. Twenty-five percent said these taxes are about right; 1 percent said taxes were too low; and 5 percent were not sure.

From this perception, it is easy to see why Reagan's plan to cut income tax rates by 10 percent a year for the next three years draws strong backing. Supporters outnumbered opponents of the Reagan cuts by almost 3-to-1.

Anger over property taxes — the key to Proposition 13 — has dropped a good bit.

Forty-one percent of those questioned last week said property taxes where they live are too high, down from 57 percent who said that in 1978.

Forty-nine percent now say property taxes are about right, versus only 36 percent in 1978. Three percent said property taxes are too low and 7 percent of the 1,599 adults interviewed nationwide by telephone.

The shift occurred across the country, but the sharpest decline came, as one might expect, among Californians and other Westerners. Only 33 percent of the Westerners now say property taxes are too high, versus 74 percent in 1978.

Social Security taxes have increased substantially in the past decade, particularly for workers making more than $15,000 a year. But the perception that such taxes are too high has gone down.

Forty-six percent of those questioned said Social Security taxes are about right, while only 38 percent said they are too high. Six percent said they were too low and 10 percent were not sure.

In the June 1978 AP-NBC News poll, the results were about reversed: 45 percent said the taxes were too high and 38 percent said they were about right.

As with all sample surveys, the results of the AP-NBC News polls can vary from the opinions of all Americans because of chance variations in the sample.

Don Vineyard, about 7½ miles southeast of town, reported the criminal mischief Sunday morning. Valve stems had been cut off on two tractors resulting in $60 damage.
