Iranian troops may take over guarding hostages in embassy

By The Associated Press

Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini was reported today to have handed his post of commander-in-chief of Iran's armed forces to President Abolhassan Bani-Sadr. The move stirred speculation Bani-Sadr might move troops to the U.S. Embassy in Tehran to replace the militants who took some 50 Americans hostage 108 days ago.

A statement from the militants, meanwhile, for the first time was not explicit in demands the shah be returned before the hostages are released, Yugoslavia's official news agency said. In what appeared to be a marked change of tone, the militants also were quoted as saying they had neither accepted nor rejected the international commission to investigate the shah.

The increase in Bani-Sadr's authority was reported by Tehran Radio, which quoted the ailing, 79-year-old ayatollah as saying the appointment was aimed at "consolidating power in Iran at this critical moment." This was an apparent reference to the militants who earlier had rejected the latest plan to ease the hostage crisis.

Bani-Sadr's new job gives him the muscle not only to end the embassy crisis, but to put down ethnic unrest in Iran, particularly in northwest Kurdestan, where Kurdish rebels have been battling the central government for more autonomy.

The army was in chaos during the revolution and has remained badly disorganized, leaving most power with the Revolutionary Committees and Revolutionary Guards, which often clash with the rebellious minorities in many of Iran's provinces.

The increase in Bani-Sadr's authority came as a U.N. commission prepared to fly to Tehran to investigate the regime's charges against Shah Mohammad Reza Pahlavi, the monarch ousted by Khomeini's Islamic forces 13 months ago. Both sides have agreed to the members of the commission, whose inquiry presumably will speed the release of the Americans.

The New York Times reported today that U.N. officials said the hostages would have to be released within a specific period of time or the commission would stop its inquiry. Setting of a deadline, which one official said was Feb. 27, was the outcome of a meeting among U.S. Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance, U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim and two panel members, the paper reported. Vance, asked about the report as he departed Washington for talks in Europe about the Afghan situation, said there was nothing to it, according to CBS News.

The Paris-based station Radio Luxembourg said today that Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh was believed to have met with Carter's chief of staff, Hamilton Jordan, in Paris on Monday. The White House and Ghotbzadeh denied it.

The Islamic militants who seized the U.S. Embassy in Tehran Nov. 4 have said repeatedly they would release the Americans only under orders from Khomeini, who has not publicly discussed the hostage crisis for a month.

A spokesman for the militants told the Tehran correspondent of the Japanese newspaper Yomiuri that Khomeini "and the Iranian people are still demanding the extradition of the shah and the return of his assets" before the hostages are released.

He then toughened the position by declaring there was "no need for the U.N. to investigate the crimes of the former shah" because "the United Nations' efforts to break the impasse by appointing a five-member commission to probe Iran's grievances is a U.S. plot being perpetrated through U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim." Another militant denied his colleague had used the phrase "U.S. plot" to describe the panel.

But in Belgrade, Tanjug reported a milder militants' statement and said, "It seems they have changed their stand ... The question however is when and why this change occurred."

A well-informed source at the United Nations said members of the commission will arrive in Tehran Wednesday.

Pierre Trudeau wins

Former leader back in charge

TORONTO (AP) — Pierre Elliott Trudeau, a political has-been just three months ago, took charge of Canada once again in a stunning election victory he called a rerun of "an old love story" between his party and the voters, and offered himself and his country as peacemakers in the U.S.-Soviet dispute.

Trudeau's Liberal Party routed the Progressive Conservatives of Prime Minister Joe Clark in parliamentary elections Monday, cutting down a government that was one of the few to stick by the United States down the line in its confrontation with Moscow.

In a victory speech early today to an ecstatic crowd of supporters in Ottawa, Trudeau, 60, took a distinctly softer approach, declaring that the United States is "our greatest friend" but adding that preserving peace between the superpowers must be part of Canada's world mission.

In elections last May, the youthful Clark and his Conservatives ended 16 years of Liberal rule, 11 of them with Trudeau as prime minister. The Liberal chief had actually announced his intention to leave politics last November.

But Clark was undone by a tough budget in which he proposed a highly unpopular 18-cent-a-gallon boost in gasoline taxes.

The Liberals' quick comeback made Clark's nine months in power the briefest tenure of any elected prime minister in Canadian history.

In rebuking their 40-year-old prime minister, Canadian voters gave the Liberals 146 seats in the 282-seat House of Commons, four more than a majority. The Conservatives had 103 seats and the socialist New Democrats 32. The race in one district had been postponed until March because of a candidate's death.

The former Parliament had 136 Conservative members, 114 Liberals, 27 New Democrats and five Social Credit Party members. The Quebec-based Social Creditists, a rightist group, lost all their seats Monday.

With about three-quarters of the popular vote counted, the Liberals had 4,041,481 votes, or 49 percent, the Conservatives 2,400,333, or 29 percent, and the New Democrats 1,536,614, or 18 percent.

U.S. officials change their tone

WASHINGTON (AP) — Washington news sources close to the Iranian crisis are not suddenly filling their mouths with marbles. It just sounds that way.

The simple declarative sentences that rang from White House and State Department spokesmen criticizing the Iranian militants in November have given way to such statements as this:

"It should be understood that an agreement to, or concurrence in, the formation of such a commission is in the context of specific understandings with regard to the purposes of any such commission and how it would operate."

That was how a senior White House official — who asked that his name not be used — described Monday the developments surrounding an investigative commission the government hopes will trigger release of the 50 American hostages in Tehran. He would not explain the "specific understandings."

The officials who have been the primary spokesmen about the crisis since it began Nov. 4, White House press secretary Jody Powell and State Department spokesman Hodding Carter, are talking less and less on the record these days. And sources say diplomatic necessities are the reason.

Their reticence appears to increase as hopes grow, wane and grow again over reports that arrangements may be in the offing for the hostages' release.

"My concern is that we not do or say anything that makes an already difficult task more difficult, and that you or others in your position do not draw conclusions that would have the same result," one White House official told reporters.

City to continue to study annexation of strip of land north of Midland

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

City officials made a mistake by not annexing land north of the city limits as it was developed instead of waiting and doing it all in one chunk, a planning consultant from Dallas told the Planning and Zoning Commission Monday.

The first step in annexing a strip of land between Holiday Hill Road and Lamesa Highway and stretching from one mile to two miles wide began with a public hearing before the Planning and Zoning Commission. The commission is an advisory body for Midland City Council.

After a 3½-hour public hearing, the commission decided to hold a special session at 7 p.m. Feb. 27 in City Hall for further study of the plan.

Richard Hennessy, director of planning for the city, said the last annexation was concluded in October 1974. Since then, Midland's population has increased 20 percent. Before 1974, most of the city's growth was south of FM 868 "and that growth was slow.

"The growth since then has accelerated and is north of FM 868" and has almost reached the point of pushing against the northern city boundary, Hennessy said.

Annexation, the city director claimed, is needed to control future development and to provide city services as needed.

WHEN THE CITY annexes an area, it is a requirement for city services to be provided within three years, Hennessy said. Those services of water, sewer and garbage collection can be fulfilled, he added.

The major change with annexation is that persons living in the proposed area would have to pay city taxes, and their land would be valuated as agriculture land, he explained.

Also being studied by Hennessy's staff are changes in the animal-fowl ordinance and requirements involved in the Agriculture-Estates District, which this area would be zoned after annexation.

Before the hearing began, W.H. Jowell, a member of the commission, pointed out that, even though he owns land in the tract under question, he won't abstain from voting on the matter.

J.T. Duncan, a Dallas consultant working on updating Midland's master plan, said the responsibility of a city is to assure it has adequate space to grow, with controls over this area.

"It's not a question of infringing on anyone's rights in this area, but protecting them," he claimed.

Representing residents living in the annexation area between Holiday Hill Road and Midland Drive, Jerry Moritz said all persons, except two, in the Melody Acres and Green Hill Terrace subdivisions oppose annexation.

"WE MOVED OUT of the city to try and get away from it and so our kids could enjoy the country," he said.

"What would we get for our taxes?" he asked the commission. "We already have water and sewer. We don't want dumpsters sitting in our front yards, and that's where they would be since we don't have alleys."

With annexation, persons who own several acres of land and have livestock would have to sell parts of their land which would be developed into town lots, Moritz claimed.

"We are an independent lot and we don't want city officials staring over our shoulders," he continued. "You can't give us anything and we can't give you (the city) anything."

Jerry Mobley, a developer of Green Tree Country Club Estates, objected to the city taxing that country club and not the other two in Midland — Ranchland Hills and Midland Country Club.

"We feel it inevitable that we'll be annexed," he said of the housing development going in with the country club.

And John W. Wood Jr., another owner of Green Tree, told the commission that Midland Country Club was voting Monday night on a proposal for a housing development next to its club.

TREY LOHMANN, attorney for Green Tree, said he couldn't understand why the city would want to tax the golf course — "you can't put a house on the ninth hole."

Barbara Jackson, who lives on Cardinal Lane, outlined a proposal whereby the city would purchase 60 to 100 acres of undeveloped land north of this annexation area and put in a city riding trail, arena and nature park. This would provide a unique type of Planning commission again denies permit to proposed Phase I disco

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Staff Writer

As part-owner in a nightclub which sold alcholic beverages, Robert Dorn, 413 E. Hickory Ave., testified he was an alcoholic and "dope pusher." As a result of his past, Dorn opposes "150 percent" giving a specific-use permit to Phase I disco at 500 E. Nobles Ave.

The issue over the permit resurfaced Monday during a Planning and Zoning Commission meeting. Last fall, the owners sought, and were denied, permission. After listening to testimony from Dorn and charges of bribery from other persons, the commission — for the second time — denied the request.

Dorn charged that several persons involved with Phase I "smoked my dope. They bought it from me, either directly or indirectly."

CONTINUING HIS testimony, Dorn said, "I've been pallbearers to my friends because of alcohol. I pointed a pistol at a policeman's head, but it misfired. Because of alcohol, I couldn't control myself and young people weren't safe with me."

Phase I operates as a disco and customers who want to drink alcoholic beverages must bring their own. This also means the Alcoholic Beverages Commission has no control over the night spot, the city planning staff noted.

A specific-use permit would allow the ABC to control what hours the liquor was sold and to whom, according to the staff.

Billie Bessellieu, 2829 Durant St., explained she works as a volunteer at St. Andrews Mission, 1708 N. Fort Worth St. After the permit had been denied the first time, Mrs. Bessellieu claimed that Donald Allen — a co-owner of Phase I — visited the mission and promised them playground equipment if the people wouldn't oppose the permit.

The workers also were told that all the neighbors had changed their mind and were in favor of the specific use permit. But, Mrs. Bessellieu added, they were warned by Allen not to talk to the neighbors.

WILBURN BUTTERY, principal at Crockett Elementary School, said he also had been approached by the owners and was told the residents had changed their minds.

"But I talked to all the parents who came to the school, and they were opposed, with the exceptions of those who had a financial stake in it. This is a very divisive thing in our neighborhood," Buttery said.

The Rev. W.C. Kenan, pastor of Faith Temple of God, charged the night establishment would destroy the morals of the young people and that he, too, was "offered something to be in favor of it."

Other spokesmen opposed the permit saying they feared increased vandalism and other crimes in the area and worried about the safety of their children.

Connie Madrid, 304 E. Parker Ave., who lives 1½ blocks from the disco, explained children play in the street, and residents already are experiencing problems with "cars racing on Parker, noises, screaming and people throwing liquor bottles in our yards."

A woman involved with the venture, Debra Jackson, defended the employees and said, "We're not criminals. We respect churches and schools. Dope pushers and alcohol are all over the world — not just that one place."

Bennie Jackson, representing the owners, stressed he had submitted petitions signed by a majority of persons living in the neighborhood next to Phase I.

IF CHILDREN HAVE the proper upbringing, he charged, they shouldn't be out on the street past 8

Search continues for missing girl

By KAY HORD

Sixteen days ago, 19-year-old Kristy Booth disappeared, leaving her shoes and coat at a table at Dimensions, a local disco. Friends told officers that Kristy left the table to dance and never returned.

That was Feb. 2, a cold and foggy night. Her parents became concerned when sheriff's deputies found her car abandoned on the Rankin Highway Feb. 4. They officially reported her as missing Feb. 7.

Since that time, police, the Sheriff's Office and the Texas Rangers have been involved in the search for the missing teen-ager.

Five dectectives are currently assigned to the case fulltime.

"We are continuing to press our investigation in connection with her disappearance and we are checking many leads at the present time," said Police Chief Wayne Gideon.

According to Gideon, a friend of Kristy has been placed under hypnosis for interrogation in an attempt to get a better description of a person seen with Kristy the night she disappeared.

He also said that police were asking several people to submit to polygraph tests.

Rumors that Kristy was in California with an acquaintance have also proven false, Gideon said.

The young man was in California but had left several days before Kristy turned up missing.

Kristy was last seen by her parents Feb. 2 when she left for work at The Spring-like weather hits Basin

The calendar doesn't agree, but the weather definitely says it's spring.

Following Sunday's surprise snowfall in Midland, the weather became gorgeous on Monday and again today. And, what's more, the weatherman is predicting it'll stay this way for a couple of days.

The forecast is calling for partly cloudy skies and warm temperatures through Wednesday.

Tonight's low should be only near 50 and the mercury should climb into the middle 70s on Wednesday.

Winds tonight should blow out of the south at 10-15 mph. On Wednesday the winds should be southwesterly, 15-25 mph and gusty.

Monday's high reading was 73 degrees. That failed to match the record high for that date — 82 degrees set in 1947.

Low this morning was 50 degrees, much warmer than the record low 19-degree reading set on this date in 1936.

A reward fund has been started at The First National Bank.

"Our purpose is to make funds available for information leading to the whereabouts of Kristy," said Harry Clark with FNB.

A commitee has been established to administer the funds. A member of the bank is on the committee to ensure it is handled properly, Clark added.

"We're trying to assist the family. We have an interest in this because Tom Booth, Kristy's father, furnishes security guard services to our bank," Clark said.

The fund currently stands at $500. Anyone wishing to make a contribution may send it to Kristy Booth Reward Fund, First National Bank in care of Harry Clark, Box 1599, Midland 79702.

Kristy is a white female, 5-foot-7½ inches tall, 120 pounds with reddish-brown shoulder-length hair and blue eyes.

Officers seek Andrews escapee

ANDREWS — Area law enforcement officials have joined in the search for an Andrews County Jail prisoner who walked away from a work detail at the jail about 8 p.m. Monday.

Jerry Don Hunziker, 32, of Oklahoma City walked away from a trash emptying detail in the jail kitchen last night, according to a sherrif's department spokesman.

He had been in the jail since his arrest Oct. 3 for conspiracy to commit theft and unlawfully carrying a weapon.

Sheriff's officers suspect the man may have had assistance and are looking for an automobile reported missing from a local used car lot, the spokesman said.

While officials think he may be returning to Oklahoma City, "we really have no idea," the spokesman said.

City planning group to continue to study annexation of property

Lohmann, who lives in the proposed annexation area, later said the city planning staff still hasn't shown how the animal-fowl ordinance or the zoning regulations would be modified to accommodate persons already living in the area who have horses and other livestock.

Speaking for Magnatex Corporation and its Saddle Club North development included in the annexation proposal, attorney Harrell Feldt suggested the city annex only undeveloped areas and leave the developed land alone.

He also charged the city is having enough problems providing services to growing areas of Midland. Adding annexed land would create a "burden of additional problems."

"If the city brings these people in, we've got to give them something," he added.

As a member of the Chamber of Commerce, Feldt said he realized the city growth is northward and annexation is inevitable there. "But it's not right and reasonable to have a mass annexation when you can't provide these people with services," he said.

HE ALSO CHARGED that the basis for annexing the developed land "is to gain ad valorem taxes, but not give them (residents) services."

Commission member John Phipps said he preferred having a master plan to study when considering annexation "to look at the overall picture — what's east, south and west of the town. I have more questions about what's happening south of Interstate 20 than I do here."

Duncan, the Dallas consultant, suggested a different zoning other than Agriculture-Estates might be needed to suit the residents in the proposed area.

Looking at Feldt's suggestion to skip the developed area, Duncan replied, "You can't go out and annex undeveloped land and leave the developed land alone. You made a mistake in not annexing that land as it was developed. If you had done that, you wouldn't have this problem (with residents opposing annexation) today."

TURNING AND SPEAKING to the residents in the audience, Duncan said, "You have to realize you can't stay outside city limits forever. When you're outside the city limits, you're not really a part of this city."

The commission will look at proposed changes in the zoning and animal-fowl ordinance and services provided by the city during its Feb. 27 meeting before making a decision on the annexation plan.

And as to the bribe concerning playground equipment, Jackson said if the equipment was offered, it was done so because "we care about children. It wasn't a bribe."

Woodrow Bailey, 1927 Morgan Way, a candidate for Place 4 on Midland City Council, supported the group because he "wants Phase I to come under some kind of control. It would be better for the community if Phase I is controlled by the ABC."

More activity is needed on this side of town, said Mary Jane Young, a member of the planning commission. "But with the churches and school, this is the wrong place for it."

The commission's decision can be appealed to Midland City Council.

Also during the meeting, the commission recommended to City Council a rezoning plan of Industrial Park at Air Terminal, an amended Planned District requested by Brian Carter, a zone change for the city's Senior Citizen Center and another for Midland Memorial Hospital's cancer therapy center.

Denied was a zone change requested by Joe Hernandez. He had proposed building a small grocery store in a strip of land on the east side of Midland.

Planned Parenthood debate renewed at PBHSA hearing

By DAVID CAMPBELL
Staff Writer

The controversy between the Odessans for Life and the Permian Basin Planned Parenthood Agency surfaced again in Monday night's public hearing of the Permian Basin Health Systems Agency.

During the meeting in the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commision building at Midland Regional Airport, The Rev. Bill Price, spokesman for the Odessans for Life, presented the group's views concerning the continuation of family planning services.

The Planned Parenthood proposal, which was finally approved by the body despite Price's arguments, asked for a total of $807,300 of which $282,555 is being requested from HEW and $524,745 is supplied by Planned Parenthood, primarily through state grants.

Price attacked the use of taxpayer's money for the position of a public information coordinator for an agency which provides abortion referral services to women who request such information.

These same arguments were voiced in the Feb. 13 meeting of the Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission.

The commissioners in that meeting gave the proposal favorable comment despite Price's recommendation to table action on the agency's request for funding.

The leader for the right-to-life organization requested this time that the position of information cooordinator be eliminated from the proposal because "it was tax dollars used to oppose groups like ours."

However, Planned Parenthood did re-word the job description for the public information coordinator as a position to be used for disseminating information on the agency's services.

The agency said the previous description was taken from other agencies which had similiar job descriptions for that position and claimed "it was a misnomer."

The job description Price objected to read "the information (director) would be responsible for projecting our true image to offset the half-truths and innuendos generated by those opposed to Planned Parenthood."

Price referred to the description's change as a "Freudian slip" which doesn't hide the position's real intent — to oppose anti-abortion groups.

The health systems agency members favorably approved the findings of fact for a grant to continue Planned Parenthood activities.

Ironically, Planned Parenthood's proposal to establish a Lamesa agency met no opposition and was passed with favorable comment.

The Lamesa Planned Parenthood project would provide family planning services to indigent patients as well as others. The center would be located in the Head Start building and it was estimated that cost of services to the federal government would be $10.60 per visit, the proposal said.

Patients in neighboring counties would be allowed to use the agency's services, the proposal added.

Prenatal services for the indigent at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital also were favorably approved by the health systems body.

Price spoke favorably of the hospital's proposal to provide the service because "it cuts down the number of abortions."

The agency heard a report regarding a statewide project to improve the sanitation conditions of migrant labor camps in Texas. The program is designed to develop an awareness of health practices among migrant workers.

Cost of the statewide program was estimated at $284,000.

Two other projects favorably approved by the agency included a community drying out program for alcoholics in Odessa and an out-patient drug program, both sponsored by the Permian Basin Community Centers for Mental Health and Mental Retardation.

Money box not stolen

A story in the Monday afternoon edition of The Reporter-Telegram erroneously reported that Sara Wilson, 703 S. Jefferson St., reported the theft of a money box from Affordable Inn.

The money box, according to police reports, reportedly contained checks and cash amounting to $1,860.

According to an inn employee, there was no theft of a money box from Affordable Inn.

DR. NEIL SOLOMON
Exercise may aid cardiac survivors

Dear Dr. Solomon: Before my heart attack five months ago, I was fairly active and participated in a number of sports. Now that I am recovering, I wonder if I can resume some of these activities. Would you have any suggestions about the advisability of a heart attack survivor getting involved in an exercise program? — Stan

Dear Stan: Any advice, of course, can be only general in nature and should not be applied to a specific case. How soon and to what extent you will be able to resume your pre-heart-attack activities is something to be assessed by your physician. You may be pleased to know, however, that there appears to be some evidence that participation in a program of moderate exercise has a beneficial effect on survivors of heart attacks.

A group of researchers in Seattle from the University of Washington School of Medicine have reported a study of 83 men who survived myocardial infarctions. These men participated in an exercise rehabilitation program; they were compared with 103 patients with coronary heart disease who did not exercise, and with 181 controls who were randomly selected from a comparable population.

The 45-minute exercise program consisted of calisthenics, walking and jogging three times a week. Participants were referred to the program by their personal physicians at least three months after a myocardial infarction, and the participants had been involved in the program for periods ranging from one to 107 months, at the time that the sampling was done.

The researchers determined that high-density lipoprotein-cholesterol levels were higher in patients who participated in the exercise program than in those who did not, and about the same as levels found in the controls. Since a high-density lipoprotein level is considered a protective influence against coronary artery disease, it was concluded that exercise in moderation may decrease the risk of subsequent heart attack.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A few months ago, my husband's spleen was removed following an automobile accident. Although he appears to be recuperating satisfactorily, I'm concerned about possible future complications. Can you shed some light on this for me? — S.V.C.

Dear Mrs. C.: There appear to be few significant long-term complications in adults when the spleen is removed because of trauma. When a child undergoes splenectomy, there is an increased danger of infection, but this would not be true in your husband's case.

There are several risk factors, such as a tendency to thrombosis (blood clots) in the immediate postoperative period, but, if your husband has been making a good recovery without any complications, there is no cause for concern about his future health as a result of the surgery.

Israelis say El Salvador embassy will be closed at end of month

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador (AP) — The Israeli Embassy is closing down at the end of the month. It is the sixth diplomatic mission in a year to close its doors in this capital where political violence is increasing daily against the governing junta.

An announcement from the embassy Monday said the closure was for "economic reasons" and Israeli attache Aryeh Zur declined to elaborate.

But informed sources said the mission could no longer afford to pay for three bodyguards needed to protect him.

The West German Embassy announced Feb. 7 that it was closing for security reasons. The next day, all West German personnel left El Salvador.

South Africa, Japan, Switzerland and Great Britain also have closed down their embassies.

The leftist Popular Revolutionary Bloc, meanwhile, called for a large march here today to press its demands for freedom of political prisoners and financial assistance for the poor. Leftist sources said they expected the march would be much larger than those held in the last five consecutive days which each attracted several hundred persons.

The Bloc, the nation's largest leftist group with an estimated 50,000 to 70,000 members, staged a protest march Monday and some of the marchers broke ranks and took over an office used by the education ministry. They originally held about 200 hostages, but quickly freed most of the women employees and as night fell, they were reportedly holding about 75 persons.

The group took a goverment-run farm loan bank Thursday and since then has released all but about 50 of the 450 original hostages. The Bloc also holds the city's water and sewage offices and reportedly is detaining about 50 persons of an original 300 detained.

It also holds another 60 persons at the capital's foreign industrial development offices. In each case, a common demand by the group is for the release of political prisoners.

Another leftist group, the Feb. 28 Popular League, also known as LP-28, Monday ended a two-week occupation of the Spanish Embassy. Two remaining hostages, First Secretary Manuel de la Helguera and Consul Juan Carlos Ranero were released. They had been detained in the mission while activists pressed for the release of political prisoners held by the government.

It was not known if the Spanish Embassy would close.

The militants left the embassy peacefully. They told reporters the government had promised to try to find three members the group said were imprisoned. The government had freed 11 of the 16 persons sought by the militants but said it knew nothing of the other five.

Occupations of embassies and government buildings and the taking of hostages have become a routine tactic of leftist groups pressing the government for social and economic reforms.

The groups also say they oppose the military-civilian junta and seek a Marxist government. The junta has been in power since the Oct. 15 overthrow of President Carlos Humberto Romero, an army general.

El Salvador was previously ruled by military or military-backed governments for 37 years.

'Angels' to hack Shelley

NEW YORK (AP) — The wings of Charlie's newest angel reportedly have been clipped.

Shelley Hack, the "Charlie" perfume girl in Revlon's highly successful television commercials, was signed last May to replace Kate Jackson as the agent of another "Charlie," a disembodied male voice who sends three attractive women to work on dangerous assignments. He calls them "Charlie's Angels."

Although ABC has decided to carry the show another season, the network has insisted to producers Aaron Spelling and Leonard Goldberg that Miss Hack will have to go, according to the Daily News. The News said she was supposed to have been given the word Monday.

"The network just came to the conclusion that Shelley wasn't cutting it," the News quoted unnamed sources as saying. The show has shown slippage in the ratings since two of the original three stars, Miss Jackson and Farah Fawcett Majors, left.

When Miss Hack joined the show, she was one of the highest paid models in the country.

Fraser hits administration over imports

DETROIT (AP) — Douglas A. Fraser, president of the United Auto Workers, says the Carter administration isn't doing enough to reduce car imports.

"We've had the feeling that our government has not been pressing forcefully on this issue," Fraser said.

Fraser also said Chrysler Chairman Lee A. Iacocca told him Monday the company would definitely have to draw on federally guaranteed loans. Chrysler last week said it might not have to but more likely would need about $200 million this year of the $1.5 billion approved by Congress.

Fraser is supporting President Carter's primary opponent, Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, D-Mass.

OUR PETROLEUM BANKERS CAN GIVE YOU THE JUMP ON YOUR COMPETITION.

Petroleum financing can be a waiting game.

Your banker plays for time until he gets your property evaluation, and his staff's analysis. That's expensive. Also, time-consuming.

At The Midland National Bank, we'll show you how to get the jump on your competition. We know that financial timing is critical. So our petroleum bankers are also professional petroleum engineers who personally analyze your collateral.

A commendable step

Congressman Kent Hance of Lubbock is co-sponsoring a bill that would strengthen the nation's intelligence operations and help to protect the identity of undercover agents and informants.

Bravo!

The United States used to have a strong intelligence network. But that was before numerous revelations in the past few years of abuses by the Central Intelligence Agency and the Federal Bureau of Investigation.

Since those revelations our intelligence community's powers and freedoms have been eroded to a dangerously low level.

All too often that's the case when the American public and the Congress respond to a threat. We over-respond. Unfortunately, in the case of intelligence gathering such over-reaction can bring about some sobering side effects.

While full details of the bill Hance is co-sponsoring are not in hand at this time and the merits of this bill will not be discussed at this time, it is refreshing that there apparently is a move afoot to strengthen our intelligence agencies.

Recently, Hance said, "The truth is that the CIA and our other intelligence agencies have nearly been put out of business in recent years."

"We need to stress again and again that an effective intelligence operation is vital and essential to maintaining a strong America," the congressman added.

Very well said.

Of course, the possibility for abuse of power always will exist when intelligence-gathering operations are involved. The trick is to keep such abuses to a minimum.

But this nation cannot continue to erode its intelligence community in fear of abuses. Without a strong network we are at the mercy of subversive characters both outside the United States and within.

Perhaps if the effectiveness of our intelligence network had not been diminished in recent years the situation in Iran involving the hostages might never have occurred. Perhaps the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan might not have caught this nation so off guard and so dangerously unprepared to cope.

In today's world it's imperative that we know what's going on within our own country and what is transpiring around the world. It would be foolish to operate any other way.

The United States needs to restore to the intelligence agencies the power they need to do their jobs.

Perhaps the bill being co-sponsored by Congressman Hance is a step in that direction.

CHARLEY REESE

Libertarian arguments just don't match reality

Charley Reese

Libertarians agree that a person must defend himself and by extension, his nation. They argue, however, that in a true emergency, a sufficient number of people will volunteer. They argue that but they don't volunteer.

But I grant that if the warning were sounded that the Soviets were landing troops on Miami Beach, plenty of Americans would volunteer to repel them. Unfortunately, it would be too late.

And that is where the libertarian theory crashes on the rocks of the present reality. Times change and war will not come leisurely over the horizon in sailing ships. It will drop out of the sky on 15 to 28 minutes notice, if we are lucky. It will ride on tank treads and scream out of the sky in jets.

Under these circumstances, when the most likely adversary stands poised with missiles, submarines, intercontinental bombers, tanks and mechanized infantry, we will be either ready or dead. The machine gun ended the infantry charge; the airplane spelled the end of the battleship; and the nuclear weapon coupled with the ballistic missile wrote finish to the long mobilization period.

It is convenient, disruptive and expensive, but the logic of today's weapons dictate a well-equipped standing army ready to fight in 30 minutes. We cannot re-fight World War II. In the new war, Pearl Harbor and Nagasaki will be combined.

If we are going to deter war, we must be in a position to win and to do that we need a draft. Registration is not enough. A six-months mobilization effort is not enough. These are half-measures and solid evidence that strategic and defense decisions are still being made on the basis of domestic politics. We have reached a sorry state if we lack leaders with enough courage to do what they know has to be done.

I believe the loss of nerve is at the top. I've talked to several student groups and have found no widespread opposition to a military draft. Our politicians have just developed a habit of being gutless, plus they live in a narrow world that is non-representative of the American people.

There are those few who are screaming, "We won't go." We should kick their bottoms right across the nearest border only this time with the clear understanding that we are kissing them off permanently and that there will be no pardons, no amnesty, and no homecoming.

Let those who are afraid to defend their homeland get the hell out. They don't deserve the blessings of liberty and they're a putrid insult to the memory of the million and more better men who have died to preserve this nation.

Nobody knows better than I what an idiot our current commander in chief is or what a ridiculous foreign policy we have; still, when it gets down to the nitty-gritty, an honorable man has two choices: either go with the commander in chief or give up your citizenship.

Above all, we must not repeat the mistakes of Vietnam. We must never again tolerate treason under the color of dissent or cowardice hiding as conscience. Once the battle begins, everyone who supports the other side should go directly to a jail, a hospital or a morgue, preferably the latter.

As for drafting women, we don't need them. There is a sufficient number of women volunteers and the country needs a fighting army, not a pregnant one. This is just more domestic politics and we no longer have the margin of error left to tolerate such silliness.

The United States is still around because we have always been a nation of proud and warlike people. It's time to re-assert our heritage and to let the word go out, "God have mercy on our enemies, domestic or foreign, because we won't."

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Will the U.S. repeat Iranian bungle?

By JACK ANDERSON

WASHINGTON — The United States is on the verge of repeating its disastrous Iranian and Nicaraguan policies in tiny El Salvador, with results that could be equally catastrophic for U.S. interests in Central America.

The State Department, the Pentagon and the CIA have all urged Congress to rush economic and military aid to the coalition junta that rules the Massachusetts-size nation — the second junta to take control since a coup toppled President Carlos Humberto Romero last Oct. 15.

Yet these same agencies' intelligence experts privately acknowledge that the five-member junta has virtually no popular support and will undoubtedly fall by the end of the year at the latest.

Propping up the losers who are now nominally in charge of El Salvador will put the United States in a no-win position if the intelligence experts' predictions come true and the junta collapses. Armed revolt will almost surely break out, with leftist rebels encouraged by Cuba and the Russians, who could conceivably gain another toehold near vital Mexican oil fields. The United States will be seen once more as the bulwark of an unpopular regime.

The basic trouble, sources told my associates Bob Sherman and Peter Grant, is the lack of popular support for the military-moderate junta. Its failure to control events has been demonstrated by continuing bloodshed — kidnappings, street violence and random acts of terrorism.

The one way the junta could survive, according to the experts, would be to effect land reform, disband the hated secret police, guarantee political liberty and curb the inordinate power of the army and the 14-family oligarchy that has exploited El Salvador for generations. But this the junta cannot do, analysts feel.

Despite repeated pledges — as recently as last week — to enact reform measures the junta is by its very makeup incapable of carrying through on its pledges, U.S. experts are convinced. The coalition, with two members from the military, is "really unnatural," one source explained — like a coalition between the Yippies and the John Birch Society in this country.

The basic economic and political power in El Salvador in this century has rested with 14 extremely wealthy families, which have kept their wealth and position by an unholy alliance with the military. And this power base has remained as solid as ever since the October ouster of the latest in a long line of military dictators.

It might seem, with the lessons of Iran and Nicaragua at hand, that U.S. policy makers would use the proposed millions in economic and military aid as a lever with which to pry some real reforms out of the rulers of El Salvador.

It would, for example, be in line with Jimmy Carter's vocal support of human rights to demand that, in return for U.S. aid, the junta live up to its promise of a general amnesty for political prisoners.

The United States might insist that the junta broaden its base to include civilian elements from the left. This would give it a slight chance for survival, according to spokesmen for the Washington Office on Latin America (WOLA), a Washington-based human rights organization.

Instead, our policy advisers are urging Congress to rush $49.5 million in aid to the junta without exacting any conditions that would make the aid worthwhile.

The predictable result is that violence will continue and grow in the unhappy nation. Intelligence officials estimate that kidnapping is already a $20-million-a-year "industry" in El Salvador. Leftist elements, cut out of participation in the junta's regime, are believed to be preparing for armed insurrection — with Cuban help.

By using our aid package as leverage for reform, there is an admittedly slim chance that a peaceful solution may be achieved in El Salvador. By pouring money down the junta rathole with no concessions, there's no chance at all.

SHADES OF RED: For Sen. Strom Thurmond, D-S.C., the treatment a communist country deserves seems to depend on geography, not history. Viewing the Soviet Union as our greatest enemy — if not our only one — in the communist world, Thurmond favors cultivating close ties with Red China as an anti-Soviet ally in the Far East.

At the same time, he adamantly opposes the sale of sophisticated U.S. technology to any Soviet satellite, on the sensible grounds that the goods may well wind up in Russia. But he includes Yugoslavia in his list of satellites, despite a record of anti-Soviet independence that goes back to 1948. That was a year before the Chinese communists gained power with Russian assistance — and several years before the Chinese followed the Yugoslavs' lead and broke with the Russians.

●

WATCH ON WASTE: Another well-intended government program is wasting millions because of fraud and red tape. Six years ago, Congress voted special payments, in addition to unemployment compensation, for workers whose companies were forced out of business by foreign competition. Since then, almost $91 million has been spent to ease the shock of displacement. But a recent investigation turned up many fraudulent payments, and bureaucratic bungling so serious that legitimate payments are usually delayed for months.

THE BIBLE

CAN YOU QUOTE IT?

By LAVINA ROSS FOWLER AND ELIZABETH ROSS WIERSEMA

1. Genesis means "beginnings" and this record names first heaven, then earth plant life, animal life and last human life. This is all told in the first two chapters of the Bible. What were God's first words of the creation? Genesis 1:3.

2. We do not know how time was reckoned then; the other day of something might mean a whole life time or longer. What did God supply for food? Gen. 1:30.

3. After Israelites became established in Canaan, who was their greatest enemy? Judges 14:4.

4. Who was the only Gentile writer of the entire Bible? Colossians 4:14.

5. "Behold, what manner of love the Father hath bestowed upon us that we should be ------." First John 3.

INSIDE REPORT:

Chill greets Kennedy in his New Hampshire bid

By ROWLAND EVANS AND ROBERT NOVAK

Evans

Novak

NASHUA, N.H. — Sen. Edward M. Kennedy, buoyed by a surprisingly strong second in Maine's caucuses, entered New Hampshire three days later for a chilling of hopes to revive his challenge against President Carter in this state's first-in-the-nation primary.

Kennedy began the last two weeks of his New Hampshire campaign in the state's southern tier along the Massachusetts border, once considered inviolable Kennedy country. Armed with new issues and an escalating attack on Carter, the senator and his entourage started the day sky high. But coolness toward Kennedy — from businessmen, students, factory workers, men and women in the streets — chilled the senator. As the day wore on, his exuberance departed and his performance diminished.

This experience buttresses the view of Democratic politicians here that the New Hamsphire showdown Feb. 26 will have little to do with either organization or issues. It is a choice of character between Jimmy Carter and Ted Kennedy, and all signs encountered by Kennedy suggest the choice now is in Carter's favor.

Although private polls show Carter well ahead with few voters still undecided, the president's managers here are not ruling out a close outcome or even conceivably a Kennedy upset, for one reason: southern tier towns such as Nashua, with many residents commuting to Massachusetts jobs and not viewed by others in the state as true Hampshiremen. Their erratic voting behavior is credited with the unexpected defeat of statewide incumbents in recent elections.

Kennedy was ready for them, as he was not ready for a similar climactic swing through Iowa two weeks before the caucuses there. In Iowa, he had nothing of substance to say; in New Hampshire, he has reverted to standard liberal dogma. While in Iowa he flinched from sniping at the president in time of international crisis, he has bludgeoned him in New Hampshire for letting the Iranian hostage crisis go beyond its 100th day.

Much to the delight of New Hampshire's original Draft Kennedy backers, he is running a presidential campaign that now not only is run by George McGovern's old staffers but echoes McGovern's ideology. Kennedy's basic campaign speech now proposes government control of the economy unsurpassed in a democratic nation. In foreign policy, he talks of "avoiding needless confrontation" with the Soviet Union.

With this message, it was unfortunate for Kennedy that his first post-Maine appearance was a Southern New Hampshire Association of Commerce breakfast. The atmosphere was frigid, but it is doubtful that the temperature would have risen appreciably had his message been less McGovernesque. As the senator entered the hall, the businessmen's wives stared at him with undisguised contempt.

Nor did Kennedy evoke enthusiasm from a forum that has been a favorite for him and his two brothers: the high school assembly. At three high schools, Kennedy's efforts to play on Carter's draft registration proposal generated no excitement. He told an assembly at Nashua High School: "A Carter Doctrine that will register you for the draft will send another generation of Americans on to the Persian Gulf to protect OPEC pipelines." The reaction from the students: silence.

On hand-shaking tours through Sanders Industries here (an electronics defense contractor) and through downtown Nashua, Kennedy often seemed nervous and, again, stirred little excitement.

By late afternoon, Kennedy's buoyancy had gone flat — and not just because the reception had been cool. With Carter obviously on the verge of a breakthrough on the Iranian hostages, Kennedy's attack on the president seemed inappropriate. When the White House accused Kennedy of playing politics with the hostage question, Kennedy and his advisers held an emergency meeting at the Timberlane High School principal's office and decided not to back down. But at his next stop, Salem High School, Kennedy seemed subdued.

Nor is it sure that his tough television commercials and personal speeches prodding Carter to come out of the White House and campaign will not backfire. At Sanders Industries, Kennedy perfunctorily asked for help from one woman worker in her late-50s, who smiled sweetly. But when we asked her choice, she replied: "Carter. Everybody's for Carter." Why? "You shouldn't talk about a president the way Kennedy does."

Yet, it may be his only hope. Another woman worker at Sanders, also close to 60, told us she had been for Carter but was so upset by his refusal to campaign that she would now be for Kennedy — except for one thing: Chappaquiddick. "That still bothers me," she added.

Although Chappaquiddick was never mentioned during Kennedy's long day, it infests his campaign and his desperate efforts to revive it in New Hampshire. His reborn liberalism, his attacks on the president and Iranian hostage politics all are eclipsed by comparisons of character. Unavoidably, such comparisons are shaped by Chappaquiddick.

Bounty of the waters at Gulf Stream Seafood

West Texas is not known for its waterways. It is a long way from the Gulf, and lakes and streams are few and far between. Most of us could learn a few things about the cooking and serving of fish.

Contrary to popular belief, fish is not, or need not be, messy or difficult to cook. It may be baked or broiled, either in the pan or the broiler, in a very short time and with little effort. With a little butter and lemon juice, or just the juice for serious dieters, it is delightful to eat and unsurpassed nutritionally. The fish must be handled in a clean fashion, and it must be very fresh. Gulf Stream Seafood is the answer.

Billy Adams, the owner of Gulf Stream Seafood, has many years' experience in fishing, handling, cooking and eating fish. Also, Frankie Bell, one of Billy's helpers in the shop, owned her own seafood restaurant for fifteen years. They will be happy to aid you in the selection of your fish and will give you suggestions for cooking your catch if you like.

Lent starts this year February 20th. Please remember Gulf Stream when you plan delightful and healthful Lenten meals.

Gulf Stream has a large variety of free recipe cards and color brochures you may take home to read at your leisure.

Large volumes of fish may be specially ordered with only one week's notice. Special discounts are available for clubs and organizations. Gulf Stream will shell and devein shrimp.

Give your family the opportunity to know the joys of eating the best fish available, cooked properly. It will become a delightful habit, and Gulf Stream Seafood will, too. Try them soon. 12th and Texas, in Odessa. Phone 337-0522.

Billy Adams, owner; Frankie Bell; and Brenda Wilson, office and special orders, stand proudly behind the appealing showcase of fine seafood items at Gulf Stream Seafood, 12th and Texas in Odessa. Dewy freshness of the stock and immaculate cleanliness of the store are the strong points of the business.

Government launches survey on asbestos use

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government wants more than a thousand companies to turn over information about how they use asbestos, a mineral fiber linked to a variety of diseases.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission staff on gave the commissioners a draft of an order that will demand information from up to 1,200 companies. After agreement on the wording, the order will be published in the Federal Register and the companies will have 60 days to comply.

It already is known that asbestos is widely used. Nearly 750,000 thousand tons of the heat-resistant mineral is used each year in the United States.

Many studies have linked asbestos to lung cancer and other serious diseases. Health officials say the important factor is whether microscopic asbestos fibers can become free in the air. If the fibers are breathed, they can lodge in the lungs for life.

The commission staff addressed the draft order to manufacturers and importers of many common products, including ovens, toasters, clothes washers and dryers. The agency believes at least some products in these and many other areas contain asbestos. It wants to identify which ones before deciding what to do about it.

The draft order asks such questions as, "Are asbestos materials now being used in products your firm is manufacturing, importing or labeling?"

The draft also asks about any former ue of asbestos as a way of locating products that are still being used by some consumers even after they have gone out of production.

Federal agency officials warns Sears about fans

WASHINGTON (AP) — Federal safety officials are unhappy with what they consider too little effort by Sears, Roebuck & Co. to recall 71,884 fans that may be a fire hazard.

The Consumer Product Safety Commission, which already had twice before described Sears plans to recall the fans as inadequate, said it will consider legal action against Sears, the world's largest retailer.

So far, only about 1 percent of the 71,884 fans have been returned by consumers, commission members noted.

"At some point, we have to flex our muscles," said Commissioner Edith Barksdale Sloan.

Commissioner Sam Zagoria called the 13-inch and 19-inch Electric High Velocity Portable Fans introduced in 1973 "a fire hazard that threatens lives, limbs and property."

The fans were made by the Vernco Division of Emerson Electric Co., but most were sold by Sears. Vernco has changed the product to eliminate the overheating problem.

In Chicago, Sears spokesman Bob Shoup said, "We have made a considerable effort, as much if not more so than in most recalls.

"We have issued two press releases and there have been news stories that got national exposure. But there just has not been a public response. If the public is exposed to news of the recall and if people don't bring them in, there is very little more that we can do," Shoup said.

Sears has not acknowledged that there is any danger in the fans, which retailed for $13 to $50.

Zagoria said the fans can overheat and cause a fire. He read a letter from a Nassau County, N.Y., woman who said a fan caught fire in 1978 in her children's bedroom, threatening their lives and causing $1,700 worth of damage.

"Sears has issued two press releases and two internal memoranda. It doesn't take much to figure out that Sears has put in only a modest effort to get those fans back," he said.

The commission has urged Sears to include notices about the recall in credit card bills, but the company has declined to do this because of the cost.

Zagoria called it "perhaps the worst recall experience in the history of the commission. Other companies have done far more in recalling products they have sold that later proved to be hazardous. But 99 percent of these fans still have a potential to damage consumers," he said.

He said Sears should run a recall program "as efficiently as their program to sell the products." He said display ads telling of the recall might do this.

GAO says 'cheap' foreign steel seriously damaged U.S. industry

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration isn't tough enough in enforcing laws to protect domestic steel producers from unfair foreign competition, a congressional watchdog agency says.

A draft report by the General Accounting Office says investigations were recommended in less than 20 percent of the cases in which steel was imported at prices "substantially below" the apparent cost of production.

And in many of those cases, the recommended investigations were not carried out, the report said.

The GAO concluded that the Treasury Department and Customs Service failed to adequately apply a "trigger price" mechanism that can assess special duties on imported steel if it is being sold below production cost — or "dumped" — in U.S. markets.

"Customs may have overlooked a large volume of potential dumping," the report said. "Treasury has not exercised sufficient care in handling Customs recommendations and antidumping investigations."

This is a scale model of the world's first floating oil production platform, Conoco's Tension Leg Platform for the Hutton field in the North Sea. Current plans call for construction of the facility to start in 1981, with installation completed and oil production started by mid-1984.

Getty Oil chairman says Baltimore test promising

ATLANTIC CITY, N.J. (AP) — The chairman of Getty Oil Co. says an exploratory well being drilled to establish the first commercial gas field in the Baltimore Canyon off the New Jersey coast "looks promising."

Harold E. Berg's cautious statement was the most optimistic and specific word from an oil executive so far on the prospects of a commercial gas field off the mid-Atlantic coast.

ENERGY
OIL & GAS

But Berg warned that the well, being drilled by Texaco Inc. about 106 miles east of Atlantic City, must be completed and evaluated before preliminary work can begin to bring gas ashore. Getty has a 20 percent interest in the well.

"The well at this point looks promising and that's all you can say for it," Berg said in a telephone interview from Getty's Los Angeles headquarters.

"If it does prove to be a good well — and that 'if' should be capitalized many, many times — but if it does prove good, then we'd have to do some calculating on reserves and there's a possibility that might make that (area) commercial," Berg said.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A government study says eight western states may face major environmental threats from stepped-up energy development unless proper safeguards are taken.

The study, prepared for the Environmental Protection Agency, examined the impact of increased mining and drilling activities in Arizona, Colorado, Montana, New Mexico, North Dakota, South Dakota, Utah and Wyoming.

It said one of the most serious threats was to scarce water resources in the region.

The study comes at a time when the Carter administration is pushing energy development in the West, including synthetic fuel production, to lessen the country's dependence on foreign oil.

By the year 2000 the Colorado River basin could fall short of enough water to meet the projected needs of both energy development and non-energy uses.

The study also warned that air and water pollution could increase because of expanded mining activities, but it listed various proposals to lessen the environmental impact.

The study also estimated large-scale energy development could increase total income in the eight states by as much as 10 percent to 15 percent by the year 2000 and provide thousands of extra jobs.

Explosive gases could bring crude to surface

SAN ANTONIO, Texas (AP) — Petroleum researchers think they have devised a process that could bring 100 billion barrels of underground oil to the surface, but say it will be another five years before they complete their experiments.

The Southwest Research Institute said the technique could result in profitable recovery of oil from chalk and limestone fields in Central and South Texas — fields currently considered unproductive because of the expense involved in drilling.

But further research is needed to refine the recovery method before it can be used practically, a SWRI spokesman said Monday.

The method involves injecting a mixture of oxygen and explosive gases deep into the oil-bearing formations. The mixture is then detonated, fracturing the formation and freeing the oil for easy extraction.

The technique could help recover oil from reserves that now cannot be tapped profitably. Texas Railroad Commission Chairman John Poerner estimates the state has 100 billion barrels of such deposits, n the Austin Chalk and Buda Limestone formations in South and Central Texas.

The technique is a variation of a recovery method that requires the use of a solid explosive to loosen the deposits, said Dr. H. Norman Abramson, vice president of SWRI's engineering and sciences division.

The gaseous fracture technique came after about eight years of research financed by the institute and a private sponsor.

Initial test results were encouraging.

"After we completed most of the laboratory research, however, and got ready to move into the more expensive field test stage, the sponsor dropped out," Abramson said.

Awaiting another sponsor, the institute has done only cursory research on the technique since 1977.

Abramson said a budget of about $250,000 and perhaps two years of additional research are needed before the technique can be tested in oil fields, followed by another three years of field work to refine the method.

Abramson denied statements in a story published last week indicating a San Antonio oil producer had joined with the institute to perfect the method. Also, Abramson said details of the institute's research were released by the producer without permission.

"He did speak with us about the possibility of sponsoring continuing research and we submitted a proposal to him," Abramson said. "But we never undertook that work for him. He was never a client or sponsor of any work at SWRI."

He said the producer, Mason Fargason, president of Pozo Drilling Co., was not given permission to release any details of the institute's research.

Fargason denied releasing any information about the SWRI work.

"I didn't have anything to release. All I had was a proposal, how much I was going to put up, what they were going to do. That kind of thing," he said.

Closeness misjudged

TAMPA, Fla. (AP) — The skipper of the doomed Coast Guard cutter Blackthorn says he thought the two ships would pass closely but safely when he first spotted a red light from the oil tanker Capricorn in the blackness of Tampa Bay.

"Then the guy just kept turning to port, turning and turning," Lt. Cmdr. George Sepel told a Marine board of inquiry Monday. "I could see a tremendous bow wake. I could see his port anchor hanging out of (its housing). It was like he was pushing a wall of snow."

PB field projects announced

Texaco Inc. of Midland completed the No. 2-DF State of Texas 3/8 mile southeast of production in the War-Wink, South (Wolfcamp) field of Ward County, seven miles northwest of Pyote.

On 24-hour flowing potential, it made 803 barrels of 48.8-gravity oil and no water, through a 1-inch choke and perforations from 11,725 to 11,852 feet.

Gas-oil ratio is 1,361-1.

Total depth was reached at 12,453 feet, with 5-inch liner from 10,872 to total depth. Plugged back depth is 12,036 feet.

Location is 933 from north and 934 from west lines of section 14, block 18, University Lands survey.

WINKLER PRODUCER

MGF Oil Corp. completed the No. 1-43-E University in the War-Wink (Delaware 5085) field of Winkler County, 1/4 mile east and the same distance west of production, 10.8 miles northwest of Pyote.

Operator reported a 24-hour pumping potential of 15 barrels of 41.0-gravity oil and 65 barrels of watr, through perforations from 5,089 to 5,103 feet, which was acidized with 1,500 gallons.

Drilled to 5,234 feet, 5.5-inch casing is landed on bottom.

Location is 660 from south and east lines of section 43, block 21, University Lands survey.

Basin wildcat projects, wells reported

Gulf Oil Corp. filed application to amend its No. 1191 G.W. O'Brien and others in Ward County from a project in the Ward-Estes, North field to a wildcat.

Scheduled to 11,700 feet, it is nine miles north of Wickett and 990 feet from south and west lines of section 9, block F, G&MMB&A survey.

CRANE WILDCAT

Gulf Oil Corp. also amended No. 1137 W.N. Waddell and others to make it a 4,536-foot Holt wildcat.

It formerly was filed in the Running W (Tubb) field, 3/4 mile east of Waddell production and one location south of Tubb production, 19.5 miles northwest of Crane.

Location is 1,980 from north and east lines of section 7, block B-27, —PSl survey.

PECOS EXPLORERS

Monsanto Co. of Midland will drill the No. 1 Allison as a 9,000-foot oil wildcat in Pecos County six miles west of Sheffield.

It is 3/8 mile northwest of Block A-2 (Strawn) production, 3/4 mile west of a 9,250-foot failure, six miles west of Sheffield.

Drillsite is 1,584 from north and 2,132 from east lines of section 51, block A-2, TCRR survey.

...Know any ghosts? Ghost stories?

Texas author Ed Syers is hunting them, wherever they may haunt Texans and particularly in the Midland-Odessa area.

Syers, who has written many books on Texas, including the heritage collection, "Off the Beaten Trail;" a three-volume historical series; two novels, and a new guidebook entitled "Backroads of Texas," believes that a region's story is incomplete without its tales of the supernatural.

"We are a land of many cultures," he said. "Each has its ghosts."

His collection, to publish in approximately one year, will include such classic phantoms as the sentinel ghost at Tehuacana near Waco, the headless squaw near Stephenville, the ghost hounds of Orozimbo on the coast, the headless horseman of South Texas brush country, the South Plains ghost herd at Stampede Mesa, West Texas' inexplicable Marfa lights and many others.

"I'm after the ghost story known to enough people long enough to establish some credibility," Syers said. However, he intends to "investigate any report that he believes merits inclusion in the series.

Mrs. Abbott B. Jenks named Woman of Year by Midland Altrusans

Mrs. Abbott B. (Louise Jenks, 82, was the recipient of the Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year award when Altrusa Club of Midland, Inc., recently held its sixth annual awards dinner.

The affair, held in Ranchland Hills Country Club, was under the direction of the club's community service committee, chaired by Mrs. Barry L. Dyer.

Speaker for the meeting was Joan Hellen, curator of the Museum of the Southwest. Introduced by Mrs. Larry Grimm, the club's vice president, Ms. Hellen discussed the educational features the museum has to offer Midlanders.

An engraved silver tray was presented Mrs. Jenks, with smaller replicas going to the other five nominees.

Mrs. Jenks was nominated for the award by both the Midland Symphony Guild and the Children's Service League for her outstanding contributions, not only to these organizations, but also for her other humanitarian endeavors.

A resident of Midland since 1951, Mrs. Jenks operated Guadalupe Drilling Co. from the time of her husband's death in 1957 until her retirement in 1969. She also was a partner, and secretary, in Rocker-A Well Service Co.

Mrs. Jenks, a member of the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity, served as president of its Women of the Church, and member of the choir and the Altar Society since 1956.

She is a charter member of the Permian Ballet Association and the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, Inc.

A member of the Children's Service League for 10 years, working with the Cerebral Palsy Center, Mrs. Jenks also is a member of the Auxiliary to Midland Memorial Hospital, Inc.

Other areas of her volunteer work include Girl Scouts, Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Library and Hall of Fame, Midland Country Club Ladies Association and the board of High Sky Girls Ranch.

Her hobby is gardening, evidenced at her own home and at her church, where she is on the landscaping board.

Other nominees were Mrs. Ralph (Mary Maude) Hickman, whose name was presented by the Tape Lending Library; Mrs. James (Jane) Ramsoure, Negro Business and Professional Women's Club; Mrs. Jack (Nancy) Jordan, Midland branch of American Association of University Women; Mrs. Ralph (Kathy) Peters, Uptown Business and Professional Women's Club, and Mrs. P.D. (Joanne) Peterson, by Mr. and Mrs. Paul Rea.

In presenting the list of nominees, Mrs. Dyer said, "All were winners, an honor to have been selected by their group or organization for the nomination."

Mrs. Dyer, evaluating the hours of volunteer services given by the six women, pointed out that each was reviewed by a number and selection was by secret ballot.

The Lucy Mashburn Woman of the Year award was established in 1975, sponsored that year by James Mashburn and the Altrusa Club in memory of his mother, Mrs. Jack Mashburn. Mrs. Mashburn was a teacher in the Midland school system for many years and a past president of the Altrusa Club.

The first recipient of the award was Mrs. John Reid. The following years the club honored Mrs. Jack Samples, the late Mrs. Joseph H. Mims, Mrs. E.A. Culbertson and Mrs. Jack Glenn.

Myrtlene Bearden, club president, announced that the Altrusa International, Inc., president, Mrs. Jen Hanson of Carlsbad, N.M., will make her official visit March 1 to the Midland club, which will be a dinner meeting in Ranchland Hills Country Club.

DEAR ABBY

Girl says nay, he goes astray

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My boyfriend of two years (I'll call him Al) has been seeing a divorced woman for the last six months (sleeping with her) on a regular basis.

When I found out about it, I confronted him with it and he admitted it. I should tell you that he and I have never been intimate because I have moral convictions concerning premarital sex.

He sees me about three nights a week, and we have a very enjoyable, lovable relationship.

What bothers me the most is that he was dishonest with me all along. He says he loves me and not her, which I believe. He told me he would like to marry me some day, and the liaison with this other woman is only temporary.

Do you think he could really love me and sleep with her? I value your opinion. — CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Yes it's possible that Al has been enjoying a physical (non-love) relationship with the other woman, which is all right with me provided it's all right with HER. She's filling one of his needs, and he's obviously filling one of hers. I'm not asking you to condone it — just understand it.

DEAR ABBY: My mother-in-law wonders why she and her husband aren't invited to our home more often. We would love to have them for two hours, but when they come, they stay from four to six hours!

And as if that weren't enough, they hardly ever come alone; they usually have from two to 10 "surprise guests" whom "Mom" has invited. She greets me with her famous one-liner, "Don't worry about cooking, we brought the food."

Well, Abby, there is more to serving a decent meal than putting a casserole and a pie on the table. When my husband and I want dinner guests, we invite whom we want and we serve our own menu. We don't appreciate being told whom and when we will entertain and what we will serve.

The next time Mom pulls this stunt, she may be serving her guests on the sidewalk. — STEAMED IN PENN.

DEAR STEAMED: Wouldn't it simplify matters, and avert an ugly confrontation, if you and your husband were to direct your complaints to the offending party? Your irritation is justified, but your proposed "cure" would be worse than the disease.

DEAR ABBY: You said, "Parents who smoke pot in front of their small children are guilty of 'child abuse.'"

Well, how about parents who smoke cigarettes in front of children?

Every time an adult lights up in the presence of a child, the child is forced to breathe whatever the adult is smoking. The smaller the body weight of the child, the greater the threat — especially to the lungs. While the child's body is in the process of developing, his lungs are especially vulnerable.

We now know that there is TWICE as much respiratory disease among children whose parents smoke cigarettes in the home.

The decision to smoke ANYTHING is no longer only the business of the smoker since his smoking does damage to those who must breathe second-hand smoke. — CAROLE IN MAINE

DEAR CAROLE: Right On! That message is told clearly and in greater detail in a booklet, "Second-Hand Smoke." It's available (without charge) through your local Lung Association.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "NEEDS TO KNOW IN COLORADO SPRINGS": If a man has gonorrhea, the chance of his partner contracting it is about 50 percent. If the woman is on the Pill, the chance of her contracting the disease is 100 percent.

Oklahoma man held for kidnapping

OKLAHOMA CITY (AP) — A man who allegedly held a lawyer hostage for about five hours Monday was being held in the Oklahoma County jail today on complaints of kidnapping, extortion and pointing a weapon.

The man, identified by police as Raymond Smith, 34, of Oklahoma City, took attorney Robert R. Buck hostage in his central Oklahoma City law office about 11:30 a.m. Monday, police said.

Officers at the scene said the man threatened to kill Buck unless $15,000 ransom was paid.

When the money arrived about 4:30 p.m., Smith sent Buck into the hallway to get it, police said. When the lawyer threw the money to his captor, police officers grabbed the attorney and pulled him to safety, police said.

Detective Don Pennington, one of the police negotiators at the scene, said Smith was calm during most of the siege.

"He wanted the money and he wanted out," Pennington said. "Once he got the money and saw he couldn't get out, he surrendered."

Detective Bob Rowell said Buck's law firm represented Smith in an insurance case about three years ago. The suit stemmed from a New Mexico bus accident in which Smith was injured.

Smith had ignored the advice of his attorneys and rejected an out-of-court settlement of $15,000 in his suit against a bus company, Rowell said.

Prosecutor won't be appointed

GREENSBORO, N.C. (AP) — A Superior Court judge has dismissed a motion by the wife of a demonstrator killed at an anti-Klan rally to appoint a special prosecutor in the case.

Signe Waller, whose husband Jim was one of five demonstrators killed when gunfire erupted at a Communist Workers Party "Death to the Klan" rally last November, filed the motion last month.

Radical attorney William Kunstler had said he would serve as special prosecutor if the motion were granted. The district attorney, Michael Schlosser, had said he didn't want a special prosecutor.

Judge James Long dismissed the motion without comment.

Long is expected to rule today on defense motions that include requests that financial assistance be provided to hire private investigators and various technical experts to assist in the defense.

Farmerettes halt Lee Rebels' playoff hopes, 60-49

By BOB DILLON
Sports Writer

ABILENE — Midland Lee's girls won't be going to the Class AAAA Regional Basketball Tournament this year.

Coach Shirley Stephenson's Rebels were unable to overcome 29 turnovers and 17 missed free throws as the Lewisville Farmerettes downed Lee, 60-49, Monday night in a bi-district playoff on the McMurry College campus.

Lee had qualified the two previous years for the regional tourney, but it just wasn't to be this time around.

Two years ago, Lee drew a first round bye and went on to lose to El Paso Parkland in overtime in the regional finals and then last year, the Rebels took a 50-38 victory over Carrollton-Turner only to lose to Plainview, 57-48, in the first round of the regional tourney.

THE REBS missed 13 free throws in the first half and trailed the Farmerettes, 29-24, and then fell behind, 44-38, going into the final period.

Leshia Watkins and Gale Wilson led the Rebel attack with 13 and 12 points while Billie Chambers, Debbie James and Stacey Davis were the big guns for the District 6-AAAA champions with 22, 12 and 11 points, respectively.

COACH STEPHENSON was disappointed in her team's play. "They (Lewisville) played the full-court press real well, probably as good as we have seen since playing South Oak Cliff and Lubbock Monterey," said Stephenson. "We just had too many turnovers and shot poorly from the free throw line," she quickly added.

Lewisville took a first period lead of 10-8 and then held on to the five-point lead at intermission. The Rebels stayed close in the third period and even closed the gap to one point on three different occassions, but the final period was the downfall as the winners outscored the Tall City team, 16-11, to ice their 26th victory against seven losses.

Lee, meanwhile, ends its 1979-80 campaign with a 25-9 record compared to last year's 28-8 reading.

There was a total of 53 fouls called during the game with Lee fouling 27 times and Lewisville 26. The Farmerettes lost Sandra McCloyn and James with five fouls late in the final period while Lee's Judy Taylor also went to the bench with five fouls with only 48 seconds left in the contest.

BOTH TEAMS were ice cold in the early going with Lee taking a 2-0 lead with 5:02 left in the first period on a basket by Wilson. Lewisville didn't get its first bucket until 3:47 left in the opening quarter.

Chambers, a 5-foot-6 junior, came up with big baskets just when it looked like Lee was going to take the lead and 5-11 freshman Davis, came up with some key rebounds in the final period that was the difference in the outcome.

Tanna Parrish, Diane Strickling, Taylor, Kay Rowe, Jackie Ratliff, Watkins and Ora Bell were suited out for their final time in a Rebel uniform with the loss.

In fact, Stephenson only has four players returning next year in Wilson, Gayla Carter, Wathena Henry and Maudie Akins.

Neither team fared well at the charity line with Lee only connecting on 15 of 32 and Lewisville 16 of 29 free tosses.

Bulldogs seek playoffs

Lee Rebels stand as major roadblock

By TERRY WILLIAMSON
Sports Writer

The San Angelo Bobcats did their job Friday night by upsetting Odessa Permian, giving the Midland High Bulldogs another shot at winning the District 5-4A basketball playoff berth.

But it must be noted that the Bulldogs are not out of the woods just yet because they face an angry band of Midland Lee Rebels today at 8 p.m. in the Chaparral Center. Since tonight's games are the last regular season matchups in the 5-4A race, there is no tomorrow for Midland High. They have to win this one or it probably will be all over.

Permian faces lowy Odessa High, so it's easy to see that the Bulldogs have the rougher road to travel tonight. It won't be easy for the Bulldogs because the Rebels have been playing good basketball lately and have suffered a lot of one and two point losses that don't sit too well with the Lee players.

Also, an upset by Lee would insure the 16-15 Rebels of a winning season and they will have that on their mind. Lee also lost to Permian in this half by one point in overtime, and they are capable of ending the Bulldogs' playoff hopes.

"We realize that Lee is going to play to beat us," MHS cage boss Jack Stephenson said Monday. "Gosh, they can beat anyone they play. They are playing very well right now and it is certainly a big game for us. We just have to have it."

Both MHS (29-6 on the year) and Permian (22-9) enter tonight's games with 5-1 second half records. Both finished the first half with 6-1 marks. If both win tonight, a one-game district playoff will be held to determine who advances to the state playoffs.

Stephenson is naturally more concerned with tonight's game against Lee than a possible playoff against Permian, but he did say, "If there is a playoff with Permian, I would like for it to be Friday because that is the schedule we are used to playing. It would also give the winner Saturday to start preparing for a Tuesday bi-district playoff."

Normally, a district playoff is held at a neutral site, but Stephenson noted Monday that he has already checked on the availability of the Howard County Coliseum in Big Spring and it is already booked up through the weekend. That means that Permian and Midland High will have to meet sometime after tonight's games to decide on when and where a playoff will be held.

Of course, that is if both Permian and Midland High win tonight. And as far as the Bulldogs are concerned, this is one game they will have to earn.

Map-dot Liechtenstein gears for historic event

LAKE PLACID, N.Y. (AP) — The medals race has turned into a two-nation tug of war between East Germany and the Soviet Union but tiny Liechtenstein, a map-dot on the world globe, had a chance to write some Winter Olympic history of its own today.

When Andreas Wenzel, leader of the men's giant slalom after the first heat, went after his medal today, it gave Liechtenstein, a Western European country with a population of 20,000, a shot at its second medal of these Games. The first one, a silver in the women's downhill, belongs to Andreas' older sister, Hanni, and never before in Olympic history have a brother and sister both taken Alpine medals home.

BARBARA PETZOLD'S victory in Monday's only medal event, the women's 10-kilometer cross country ski race, gave East Germany its 12th medal of these Games, one more than the Soviet Union. The Russians lead in gold 6-3. Three nations, Austria, the United States and Finland, are next in the medal standings with four each.

Two of the American medals are golds, both won by speed skater Eric Heiden. He went after No. 3 of what could develop into a five-medal sweep today in the 1,000-meter race. Heiden and his sister, Beth, were supposed to be the top family act in these Games, but Beth has finished no better than fifth in her three races so far. So the brother-sister spotlight belongs instead to the skiing Wenzels of little Liechtenstein.

Wenzel was fastest in the first heat of the giant slalom Monday, timed in 1 minute, 20.17 seconds through the 56 gates of the frigid 1,354-meter Whiteface Mountain course. Second place belonged to Hans Enn of Austria, timed in 1:20.31. But the long shadow of Sweden's fabulous Ingemar Stenmark hung over the competition. The Swede was third in 1:20.49 and clearly in position to reach for the Olympic gold, one of the few Alpine prizes that has escaped the three-time World Cup champion. Wenzel knew Stenmark wasn't finished yet.

"I think I can be a little faster tomorrow," Wenzel said. "I think I can ski a little better, but it will be hard to win. Stenmark is in a good position to attack on his second run."

STENMARK KNEW that, too. He rejected interviews after the first race, saying simply, "I will talk with you tomorrow."

Ulrich Wehling of East Germany also expected to be meeting with reporters today. He was in good position to win his third straight Olympic gold medal in the Nordic Combined, leading after the ski jumping half of the competition. That, too, would be a bit of Olympic history. No man has ever won three Winter golds. Legendary woman figure skater Sonja Henie of Norway won golds in 1928, 1932 and 1936.

Wehling totaled 227.2 points but the day belonged to Walter Malmquist of the United States, who finished second with 221.8, as the crowd of 20,000 at the Intervale Mountain ski jump site cheered him on with chants of "Wal-ter, Wal-ter, Wal-ter." West Germany's Hubert Schwarz was third with 219.6.

"The crowd was wonderful," said Malmquist. "It inspired the whole team as well as me."

Despite his high standing, Malmquist didn't figure to win any medals today. He is not as strong in cross country skiing — the second portion of the combined competition — and hoped to finish among the top 10.

AN AMERICAN forejumper, Mark Johnson, broke three small bones in his back when he took a spectacular spill while testing the 70-meter ski jump run. Johnson was taken to Placid Memorial Hospital where he was reported in good condition after breaking the first, second and third vertebrae at the base of his spine.

Petzold's gold in the women's 10-kilometer cross country was something of a surprise. The 24-year-old medical student was timed in 30 minutes, 31.54 seconds to beat favorites from the Soviet Union and Finland. A pair of Finns, Hilkka Riihivuori and Helena Takalo took the silver and bronze medals. Riihivuori, who also won the silver medal in the 5-kilometer race, was timed in 30:35.05. Takalo finished with a time of 30:45.25.

Raisa Smetanina of the Soviet Union, defending champion in the event and winner of the 5-kilometer race, finished fourth behind Petzold.

In figure skating, East German Jan Hoffman held the lead over a pair of Americans, Charlie Tickner and David Santee, following the compulsory portion of the men's singles competition. World champion Vladimir Kovalev of the Soviet Union withdrew and Russian team officials said he had the flu.

THE COMPULSORIES are worth 30 percent of the final score in the figure skating competition. The men's singles event continued with the short program today and will be completed Thursday night.

Russia, in a close call, the United States and Sweden all remained undefeated in the Olympic hockey tournament.

Trailing 2-1 with five minutes to play, the Soviets rallied for three goals by Vladimir Krutov, Alexander Maitsev and Boris Mikhailov in 1 minute, 19 seconds to defeat Finland 4-2. The late rally averted what would have been the first Soviet Olympic hockey defeat in 12 years.

Buzz Schneider scored two goal and the United States routed Romania 7-2.

Sweden got three goals and an assist by Mats Ahlberg to wipe out winless Norway 7-1.

In Monday's other hockey games, Canada shut out Japan 6-0, Holland topped Poland 5-3 and Czechoslovakia defeated West Germany 11-3.

MEANWHILE, a controversy centering around former hurdling champion Willie Davenport surfaced on the American bobsled team. Coach Gary Sheffield had attempted to re-shuffle the makeup of America's No. 1 sled team four days before the start of competition but was rebuffed by driver Bob Hickey.

"Bob Hickey wanted to keep the guys he had trained with all winter," said Sheffield. "There's really no dissension on the team. We wanted to make sure we had the best people in the start."

There was reported resentment against Davenport by other members of the team because the ex-hurdler, a black man, had gone home just before the start of the Games, preventing the American No. 1 sled from working out together, and because he referred to bobsledders as "rich and white," in a newspaper interview.

"That 'rich and white' stuff, that really fried everybody's mind," said Howard Siler, driver of America's No. 2 four-man sled. "That fried my mind. It's not true. It wasn't the thing to say. We're not rich and we have no racial problems here."

SMU shocks Arkansas

DALLAS (AP) — Southern Methodist Coach Sonny Allen needed Monday night's shocking 62-58 upset over Arkansas almost as much as Texas A&M coach Shelby Metcalf, but for a different reason.

The loss knocked the Razorbacks out of a share of the Southwest Conference basketball leadership with the Aggies, who play Texas Christian tonight at home.

The Aggies are 12-2 in the league with a road game at Houston also on the schedule.

The Razorbacks dropped to 12-3 and host Texas Tech Saturday afternoon in a regionally televised game.

Allen was told before this season it would take 17 victories for him to keep his job.

The Mustangs earned victory number 15 in a most exciting fashion.

SMU followed Brad Branson's 16 points, eight rebounds and six blocked shots to their first win over Arkansas in 10 tries.

Even Arkansas coach Eddie Sutton admitted his team deserved to lose.

"We didn't deserve to win because of the way we played in the first half," said Sutton. "Branson may have played his best game of the season."

Sutton didn't concede the regular season championship to the Aggies, but he came close.

"Naturally we're disappointed because we feel like we threw away an opportunity to win the conference campionship. I told our club if we won tonight it would be awfully difficult for Texas Tech to come into Barnhill Field House and beat us."

Ironically, thee Razorbacks were done in because of a similar malady which befell Texas last year.

The Longhorns were upset by SMU in the Mustangs' last regular season home game, and it knocked Coach Abe Lemons' crew out of an undisputed championsip.

"You know, it was the same situation Texas encountered last year," said Sutton. "That's why I'm always apprehensive about closing someone's home season. SMU had five seniors and it was an emotional night for them."

SMU has clinched sixth place in the SWC and a home berth in the conference tournament which begins next Monday night. Baylor will be the opposition.

Allen said, "We proved we can beat the best. We played a great defensive game. I hope we can keep this up. Baylor will be a new season, and if we lose there's no tomorrow."

There particularly might be "no tomorrow" for Allen if he falls two games short of the magic victory goal set by Athletic Director Russ Potts.

The Mustangs outran the Razorbacks and held center Scott Hastings to just 10 points.

Sophomore Brad Friess picked up the scoring load by hitting 9 of 10 field goal tries and two free throws for 20 points.

Reserve forward Gordodn Welch cocnnected on two free throws with six seconds to play to ice the game for the Mustangs.

In other games tonight, Houston travels across town to play at Rice, and Texas visits Texas Tech.

Knight, Collins await ruling

CINCINNATI (AP) — Third baseman Ray Knight and outfielder Dave Collins are awaiting a decision on their pay demands after becoming the first players to seek arbitration with the Cincinnati Reds.

"I feel confident or I wouldn't have gone to Chicago" for the presentation before the arbritrator, Knight said after returning late Monday night.

Neither Collins nor the negotiator for the two players, attorney Barry Axelrod, was available for comment.

Both players became regulars last season as the Reds came from behind to win the National League West title.

Knight replaced Pete Rose last season.

Collins, who had been a reserve with the Reds for 4½ years, broke into the starting lineup after the All-Star Game break following surgery to veteran Ken Griffey.

Defending champion Bruce Lietzke, Tom Purtzer, Dan Halldorson and Dave Barr were tied for second at 207.

PRINCETON, N.J. (AP) — World ranked high jumper Franklin Jacobs of Farleigh Dickinson set a meet record of 7 feet, 13-4 inches in the 38th annual Metropolitan Intercollegiate Track and Field Association championships.

Rutgers, which had two individual gold medalsts, captured the team title with 97 points, while Fairleigh Dickinson followed with 89, five more than St. John's.

Martin may be back

NEW YORK (AP) — Ousted New York Yankees Manager Billy Martin can be back in baseball by the end of the week "if he wants to be," according to his lawyer.

Eddie Sapir, a New Orleans judge who also is Martin's lawyer, told The Associated Press that Martin, who was under contract for the 1980 and 1981 seasons when he was fired last October, has not been paid since the end of 1979 and the Yankees officially have notified him that they were stopping his salary.

At the same time, Sapir disclosed that Martin is considering "several opportunities" to return to baseball, one of which would be as manager of the last-place, financially troubled Oakland A's.

Trammell gets new contract

DETROIT (AP) — With an arbitrator's decision awarding Detroit Tigers shortstop Alan Trammell a new one-year contract, only one member of the American League baseball club has a contract remaining in arbitration.

That case involves left fielder Steve Kemp, a Tigers' spokeswoman said Monday.

Trammell would receive a contract that gives him "about $130,000" for the 1980 season, said his attorney, Rick Brode.

"My client is very happy, although he feels he didn't deserve having to go through the aggravation to reach a reasonable contract," said Brode. "But he realized the Detroit baseball club is a business, so he decided to conduct his negotiations like a business.

"Alan has no animosity personally towards the club, and he'll be out there practicing," Brode added. He said Trammell was in San Diego Monday but expected to be in Detroit "sometime next week."

Tiger General Manager Jim Campbell, reached at the club's Lakeland, Fla., training camp, said he had not received official word of the decision from the Baseball Players Association, but added, "it's an arbitrator's decision; we accept what he does."

Trammell, who turns 22 Thursday, was the Tigers' second selection in the 1976 draft and wound up last season with a .276 batting average, 11 doubles, four triples, six home runs and 50 RBI.

Brode also represented Detroit second baseman Lou Whitaker, whose similar-sized contract was awarded last Wednesday, when Trammell's case went to arbitration.

Frank Phillips upsets Chaparrals

BORGER —Midland College lost an opportunity to all but clinch second place\in the Western Junior College Conference basketball standings when third place Odessa College stumbled against Howard College, but Frank Phillips College upset the Chaparrals in a 65-63 thriller here Monday night, confirming Coach Jerry Stone's worst pre-game fears.

FPC gave MC a bona fide scare in the first meeting at Midland and Monday staved off the Chaps in a game that was touch-and-go all the way. In the harrowing finish, FPC held a 64-63 lead with 21 seconds left. MC tied up the ball and won the tip, but then threw it away. With eight seconds left, the home team threw the ball in and was fouled, converting the first of two free throw attempts. That left Midland with two seconds, not enough time to get off a shot.

The setback leaves Midland with a 13-2 record in WJCC play and 24-3 for the season. Howard's 70-60 win over Odessa College keeps the Chaps a game ahead of the Wranglers, now 11-4, in the standings, but the two teams tangle Thursday at Odessa and then the Chaps host Western Texas College Monday.

Western Texas, meanwhile, defeated Amarillo College, 96-89, to go 15-0 and 27-0and increase its WJCC lead to two games.

As a result of the upsets, Howard and Frank Phillips were tied for fourth place in the standings at 8-7 while Amarillo slipped to 7-8 as teams jockey for positions in the Regional Tournament to be held at Midland in early March.

Chucky McGill with 15 points and Charles Johnson with 14 led the Chaps offense while Dan Dalton paced FPC with 20.

"We played well," said Stone, "and we played hard, but we just didn't pull it out.

Midland College—Ray 2-0-4; Shelby 3-0-6; Robert Tate 5-1-11; Chucky McGill 7-1-15; Johnson 6-2-14; Young 3-0-6; Wilson 0-4-4; Willingham 1-1-3. Totals—27-9-63.

Frank Phillips—Bijouie 5-1-11; Adams 6-2-14; Ard 3-1-7; Dalton 8-4-20; Allen 2-2-6; Thomason 5-1-11. Totals—27-11-65.

Halftime—MC 38, FPC 38. Fouls—MC 22, FPC 17.

Staubach still hasn't reached 1980 decision

DALLAS (AP) — Roger Staubach says, honestly, he doesn't know if he will play another year.

The 38-year-old quarterback of the Dallas Cowboys says, honestly, he hasn't talked to the television networks about a commentator's job.

Staubach says, honestly, he's just talking to Marianne, playing with the kids, and lifting weights.

But, honestly, Roger Staubach SOUNDS like he going to retire.

He says things like "when it's time it's time."

Or "it's not like I'm walking away from a team without a quarterback."

Or "if I had my druthers I'd like to go out of the game a winner..." but adds "that might not happen."

He still feels like a young colt physically but there have been those KOs. He was knocked out five times last year.

Staubach even jokes about his "glass head."

He's been undergoing examinations this off-season. Asked what the doctors do to him, he says "Oh, I beat my head up against the wall five times."

Marianne Staubach is privately concerned that her husband won't get up from one of those NFL knockdowns.

Staubach dances around hard questions about his future like it was Jack Lambert on a blitz.

"The examinations will be a part of my decision,' says Staubach. "But there are other factors. Right now I just don't want to paint myself into a corner on making a decision.

"It's a demanding profession and I've got five kids. I'd like to start spending some time with them."

Staubach is well fixed in the real estate business and owns lucrative franchises such as Church's Fried Chicken. He has so many television endorsement offers he can take his pick.

Danny White and Glenn Carano have been well indoctrinated into Coach Tom Landry's system. No problem there.

Staubach has always been such a positive person that it's stunning for Cowboy watchers to see him waver on his career course.

The decision will come on or before the Cowboys' demanding offseason program begins about March 31st.

"I'll know then if the time has come," he says. "Honestly, right now I don't know."

He'll make the final decision in the company of Marianne and the kids then drive to the Cowboys' Central Expressway office to tell Landry and club President and General Manager Tex Schramm.

'Free Enterprise Day' to feature business leaders

Six distinguished business leaders will participate Wednesday in the first annual Midland College "Free Enterprise Day" at Chaparral Center on the MC campus.

Robert Anderson, chairman of the board for Atlantic Richfield Oil Co. and Joseph A. Tierney, director of personnel and industrial relations for Michelin Tire Corp. will be featured speakers at the day-long event, according to Dr. Robert Hollmann, chairman of the Cultural Studies division at Midland College.

The day-long seminar is open only to Permian Basin high school and Midland College social science students, Hollmann said.

A panel discussion, moderated by Tony Martin, president of Midland National Bank, will include three Midland business leaders: Ed Leede, managing partner for Leede Exploration; Roy Campbell, president and chairman of the board for Elcor Corp.; and Deane Stoltz, president and chairman of the board for Tipperary Corp.

"Oil, Energy and the Future of the Free Enterprise System" will be the main topic of the day-long seminar, Hollmann said.

Anderson will speak to Permian Basin high school and Midland College social studies students on "Petroleum in the 1980s."

A CHICAGO native, Anderson received his bachelor's degree from the University of Chicago in 1939 and was associated with American Mineral Spirits Company, a subsidiary of Pure Oil Co. in Chicago.

In 1941, he acquired a substanial interest in Malco Refinery at Artesia, N.M. Within 15 years, Anderson bought and expanded six refineries and purchased Wilshire Oil Co. in California which he later sold to Gulf Oil Corp.

Malco Refineries, Inc. was changed to Hondo Oil and Gas Co. in 1959 when the Artesia refinery was leased by Continental Oil Co. In 1963, Atlantic Refining Company aquired all of the outstanding stock of Hondo when Anderson was president.

During that year, he was elected to the board of directors for Atlantic Richfield Company. Also in 1963, he became chairman of the company's executive committee and in 1965 he was elected chairman of the board and executive officer.

In addition, Anderson is the owner of Lincoln County Livestock Company and chairman of the board for Diamond A Cattle Company, both of Roswell, N.M.

From 1961 to 1964, he served as the chairman of the board for the Federal Reserve Bank of Dallas.

IN THE afternoon, Tierney will speak about the "Fable of the Little Red Hen."

A native of Delaware, Tierney was awarded a bachelor's degree in philosophy from St. Mary's Seminary and University, Baltimore. He did post graduate studies at St. John's University, N.Y., and the University of Delaware.

In 1975, he joined the Michelin Tire Corp. and spent one year in France at the corporation's headquarters.

When Tierney returned to the U.S., he was named division manager of employee relations. He later assumed the post of director of industrial relations in 1978.

Last year Tierney was named director of personnel and industrial relations for Michelin Tire. He is assigned to the Michelin manufacturing division in Greenville, N.C.

PANEL discussion member Roy Campbell is president of Elcor Corp. After receiving his bachelor's degree in civil engineering from Rice University and working with a subsidiary of Standard Oil of Indiana, he joined the Midland engineering consulting firm of Leibrock, Landreth, and Campbell in 1956.

When the firm expanded with the addition of F.H. Callaway and W.F. Ortloff, it became the Elcor Corporation.

The corporation presently employs about 1,800 people of which 286 are located in Midland. Last year the company had total sales and revenues of about $150 million.

Campbell is also a member of the board of trustees at Midland Memorial Hospital.

FOLLOWING military service in the Marine Corps, Ed Leede received his bachelor's degree from Dartmouth College.

He later went to Harvard University and earned his MBA degree after playing basketball for two years with the Boston Celtics.

In 1976, he formed Leede Exploration. The company presently is involved with a 25,600-foot extension well in Oklahoma. If sucessful, it will become the deepest producing well in Oklahoma and the deepest Hunton formation in the world.

Leede is a director of the Midland National Bank, the Petroleum Club of Midland, Hillander School and YMCA. He is also the chairman of the athletic council for Dartmouth College.

DEANE STOLTZ received his bachelor's degree in business administration from Northwestern University, Evanston, Ill.

He became an independent oil operator in 1955 and in 1962 formed a partnership with Cyril Wagner Jr. and Jack E. Brown as Stoltz and Co.

The firm merged with Tipperrary Land and Exploration Company in 1969. Stoltz was elected president and chief executive officer at that time. In 1979, he was named chairman of the board.
