Libya learning lesson?

Ready response 'new' to relationship

By JOSEPH KINGSBURY-SMITH
National Editor, The Hearst Newspapers

WASHINGTON — Libya's fanatical Islamic ruler, Col. Mouammar Qadaffi, has learned that you don't start a shoot-out with the aerial scouts of an ex-movie cowboy president of the United States without getting hurt.

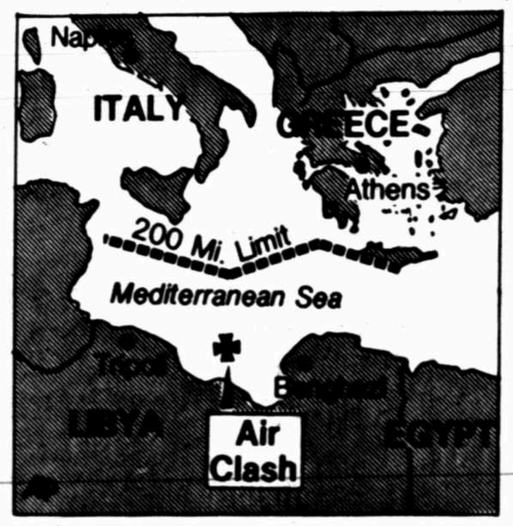

Under the Carter administration, Libyan warplanes resorted at least twice to hostile action against American naval planes flying in international air space over the Mediterranean.

On Sept. 16, 1980, an American reconnaissance plane proceeding on its normal route some 200 miles off the Libyan coast was attacked by two Libyan MIG-23 fighters which fired air-to-air missiles at it. The American plane took evasive action and raced to safety. The State Department made no public protest about the attack.

A few days later, another American reconnaissance plane, also flying about 200 miles off the Libyan coast, was approached by eight Libyan fighter planes. They turned away when they discovered the reconnaissance plane was being escorted by F-14 fighters from the aircraft carrier Kennedy. In neither case were any Libyan planes shot down.

The first time Libya's warplanes tested American naval tolerance under the Reagan presidency, they were quickly shot down. A Pentagon statement said two U.S. F-14 fighters were attacked by two Soviet-made Libyan SU-22 fighter jets over the Gulf of Sidra — waters claimed by Libya but considered international waters by the United States and other non-communist nations. Col. Qadaffi has set a 200-mile limit for his country's territorial waters, which most countries refuse to recognize. The American planes were about 60 miles from Libyan land when attacked.

President Carter, whose brother Billy was paid $220,000 by Qadaffi henchmen, sought to pursue a conciliatory attitude toward the Libyan dictator even though the latter continued to assail American "imperialism."

AP Laserphoto Map

Located on this map are the site of Wednesday's air battle between two Soviet-made Libyan SU-22 jets and two American F-14 jets and the 200-mile territorial limit claimed by Libya. The U.S. recognizes only a three-mile limit and claims the U.S. jets were over "international waters." See related stories, Page 6C.

The Reagan administration has adopted a tougher stand toward the Qadaffi regime than toward any other government in the world. It has, in effect, made clear its goal is the downfall of Qadaffi unless he ceases supporting international terrorism, calling for war against the United States, promoting the destruction of Israel, and urging the overthrow of moderate, pro-western Arab rulers.

The State Department and the Central Intelligence Agency, under the Reagan presidency, have been openly and covertly trying to organize opposition to the 39-year-old desert-born, Koran-reared, and rather fiercely-handsome, austere young Moslem who dreams of uniting the Arab world's 160 million people into one vast Islamic fundamentalist nation under his leadership.

In July, the House Select Committee on Intelligence learned that CIA Director William Casey had approved a covert operational plan to destabilize the Libyan leader's regime. Several committee members wrote directly to President Reagan objecting to the plan, and it was reportedly shelved.

However, Assistant Secretary of State Chester A. Crocker told a foreign policy conference at the State Department that the United States would support all African nations that want to resist Libyan "interventionism."

Deputy Defense Secretary Frank Carlucci was sent to Tunisia, Morocco, Sudan, Egypt and Algeria this summer to promise such assistance. In July, the Pentagon announced it was selling Tunisia $92 million worth of U.S. made tanks to "protect itself from the Libyan tank threat." Libyan supported rebel forces had attacked the Tunisian city of Gafsa last year.

Anthony C. Quainton, director of the State Department's task force on terrorism, described Qadaffi in June as "a patron saint of terrorism." He maintains in Libya an international school for guerrillas, where he is known to have trained and equipped Irish, Palestine, Arab and other foreign terrorists. One State Department official has called him "the most dangerous man in the world."

Police improvements planned

By RICHARD ORR
Staff Writer

In an effort to enhance working conditions for city police, Chief of Police Wayne Gideon has announced several improvements for the department.

An interoffice memo from Gideon Aug. 13 said he had met with city officials the day before and they agreed to take measures designed to alleviate sagging morale and high turnover on the force.

Among the measures are updated radio room equipment, equal pay for dispatchers and complaint clerks, physical conditioning equipment, overtime pay for detectives, a $300 increase in the clothing allowance for plainclothes personnel, a beefed up in-service training program and the possibility of adding dental insurance to the fringe benefit package.

In addition, Gideon said Mayor G. Thane Akins and the city council are in the process of re-evaluating the overall salary schedules for the department. Gideon also will now have direct access to elected officials, instead of having to go through the city manager's office.

Improvements to the radio room will have to wait the better part of a year, however, as space won't be available until the new Municipal Court building is finished.

Improved pay for complaint clerks became effective Aug. 16. Prior to that, there had been roughly a $150 per month difference between what they made and what dispatchers made — even though both jobs required about the same responsibilities, according to Assistant Police Chief Sid Corley.

Also effective immediately, noted Gideon's memo, detectives will receive overtime pay instead of comp time, which often couldn't be taken because of ever-increasing caseloads and a growing shortage of personnel.

While rank and file officers term the improvements "a step in the right direction," they maintain nothing concrete has yet emerged for the patrol division and they question such management practices as a ban on mustaches and what they term is a "good ole boy" policy when it comes to promotions.

"Nobody can seem to find the prescription for promotions around here," said a veteran officer who requested anonymity. "We're not mad at her (a woman officer with a year's experience who was recently promoted to detective); we're mad at the system. We work our (butts) off for years and don't get anywhere."

The reason given for not allowing mustaches is that it might interfere with the use of gas masks — a contention officers claim is ridiculous. Said another ranking officer:

"Hell, we wouldn't know where to find a gas mask if the department had them or we ever needed them. The fire department can have mustaches, why can't we? It may be a little thing, but it's big to us. Some officers leave the department, grow mustaches, and come back to show them off. If they can't pay us enough money, they ought to at least cut us a little slack."

On promotions, officers say uniformed cops are required to take tests but plainclothes officers are moved up the ladder on the basis of how well they get along with "The Man."

Commenting on the criticism, Gideon said today: "There are other considerations, like job performance and education, when it comes to promotions. We're also getting more and more juvenile and female crime. That's why we need (more women) in the detective division."

On mustaches, Gideon said, "An important asset (in police work) is a neat, well-groomed appearnace. I wish some of these people would look at the needs of the department, rather than their own personal needs."

On a related note, the department's narcotics division was reorganized Aug. 13, with narcotics officers being transferred to the detective division under the supervision of Det. Capt. Billy Ray.

Gideon said the move will make for more effective use of manpower and that the reassigned officers will still be a priority to narcotics and vice operations in the city.

Spraying planned to 'get mosquitoes before they get us'

By ED TODD

One flying machine will be attacking millions of wingless, wiggling mosquito larvae before they become winged pests.

"We're trying to get them before they get us," said Midland County Commissioner Win Brown, who lined up pilot Bob Koziol of H&W Spraying Inc. to spray ponds and Midland and Monahans Draws with a larvaecide in the wake of recent rains.

The larvae will develop into flying insects within a week or two of the rains and in areas, such as draws, ponds and bar ditches, where water tends to lie still, stagnate and give rise to mosquitoes.

"It (aerial spraying) is cheaper than the other (by ground vehicle)," said Brown. "It's the cheapest way to go. We can cover ground faster."

Meanwhile, Midland County's vector control officer, Marion Francis Floyd, has been spraying the perimeter of water-filled low-lying areas with an insecticide blown out by a turbine and primarily aimed at flying mosquitoes.

And the Midland City-County Health Department has been checking in-city playa lakes and ponds for the larvae and and been spot spraying.

"They're working very diligently," said Brown.

"Right now," Don Goodrum, chief sanitarian of the city-county health department, said this morning, "we don't have that much of a problem (with mosquitoes). We have checked every pond we know that holds water" and squirted the larvaecide when needed. His pesticide applicators, including Wayne Gellido and Demetrio Natividad, also have sprayed Scharbauer and Midland Draws to stymie the larvae.

Goodrum said a common breeding ground for mosquitoes is cans, old tires, puddles, ponds and dog bowls. He recommends that people get rid of the stagnated water before the eggs hatch, the larvae develops and then turns into mosquitoes.

The larvaecide used in aerial and ground-level spraying has been developed specifically for mosquito larvae and radically stunts their development rather than killing the larvae outright. The larvae dies within hours or days.

"It's slow acting," the commissioner said. "It's just for mosquitoes and and mosquitoes alone.

The mosquito larvae being sprayed in Midland County generally are not carriers of diseases. "We have very, very, very few of them (mosquito carriers of the encephalitis virus). Most of ours are just pests," Brown said.

"The type of spray (larvaecide) we're using is non-toxic to human, animal and everything (except mosquito larvae)," said Brown.

"We're not going to knock bees down and other helpful insects."

"This (the larvaecide spraying) will not hurt life. Environmentalists love this type of thing."

Former Midlander injured by sniper

By GAIL BURKE
Staff Writer

Former Midla: ler Weldon Cooke, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Cooke of 2700 N. Midland Drive, was wounded Wednesday night in Rangely, Colo., during a sniper incident.

Cooke, a member of the search and rescue team of the Rio Blanco County, Colo., sheriff's department, was undergoing surgery this morning at St. Mary's Hospital in Grand Junction, Colo.

Although the hospital would not release information, Sheriff Ron Hilkey said "he could not be sure," but reported Cooke was "hit in the upper right leg."

"The most the hospital would tell us (was) he was in surgery, but previously they said he was not in serious condition."

However, Cooke's father said early today that Cooke was hit three times, twice in the buttocks and once in the lower left leg, but, added that his son "was out of surgery and is doing fine."

Hilkey reported the incident took place about 10 p.m. Wednesday. He said a Rangely patrol car, with two officers, responded to a gunshot call on Main Street.

The patrol car reported that as they passed the Rangely Post Office shots were fired at their car. Hilkey said the patrol car managed to pull into a service station and the officers took cover.

Meanwhile, Cooke, who was riding with the deputy sheriff, responded to the patrol car's call. The deputy and Cooke radioed that they, too, were shot at on approaching the Post Office.

At this time, according to Hilkey, a civilian, a resident of a nearby mobile home park and a member of the search and rescue team, ran into the street to hail down the sheriff's car. John Lapp, the civilian, received a gunshot wound and was seriously injured.

"That's when Weldon got out of the car to take cover," Hilkey said. He was shot as he was running behind the car for cover.

Hilkey said Rangely police surrounded the area and the gunman was killed. The sniper, Eric Wilfong, 20, had been on top of the Post Office. Hilkey said he had several previous encounters with the sheriff's department and the police. He said Wilfong may have been quarreling with his girlfriend and the fact he was being evicted from his residence might have been contributing factors to the shootings.

City denies damage claim resulting from chuckhole

The city has denied former police sergeant Jim McFadden's claim for $211 in damages he says resulted the night of July 24 when his son drove the family's 1981 Buick through the intersection of Alpine Street and Kansas Avenue and struck a large chuckhole that was obscured by a puddle of water.

A letter signed Aug. 13 by Paul K. Williams of the city's legal department said: "According to the Texas Tort Claims Act, a city is liable for a street defect only if the city has been informed of the defect and fails to respond in a reasonable time.

"The Director of Public Works assures me that this street was fixed on the morning of July 24, 1981. The city received no communications of any defects between that time and the evening of the 24th, when you apparently struck a pothole.

"For these reasons, we must respectfully deny your claim. However, if you wish, you may request that this matter be brought before the City Council for their consideration."

Neighbors dispute the city's stand that the chuckhole was fixed the morning of the 24th, saying it was fixed after the McFadden vehicle allegedly struck the hole. McFadden said this week he will pursue the matter, but wasn't sure if it would be through the council or the courts.

No injuries resulted in plane mishap

The crash of a light plane at Midland Regional Airport Wednesday afternoon resulted in no injuries and only slight damage to the Cessna 172 owned by the Uvalde Flight Service in Uvalde.

According to fire department reports, the craft was piloted by Carl Hellums, no address available, and developed engine trouble. Fire crews stood by as it landed safely shortly before 3 p.m.

In light criminal activity reported to city police, an employee of Long John Silver's Restaurant at 1809 N. Big Spring told officers $1,279.15 was taken from a safe. There was no sign of forced entry to either the building or the safe.

Sniper surrenders

Deborah Colding, 11, daugher to Patricia Wold, weeps for her mother inside the police car Wednesday in northwest Houston at the scene of the SWAT team case involving Lee Marsh, who shot up an apartment. Wold was charged with damage to a police vehicle. She apparently knocked out a window on the police car. In bottom photo, SWAT team members lead Marsh to a waiting patrol car after he surrendered. Marsh, reportedly distraught after arguing with his girlfriend, fired at least 15 shots from a shotgun after barricading himself in a second-floor apartment. Students at a nearby junior high school were moved to other rooms away from the apartment complex.

Man charged after shooting incident near junior high

HOUSTON (AP) — A 40-year-old man was charged with felony criminal mischief Wednesday after a shooting incident which led to evacuation of a section of a nearby school.

Leroy Allen Marsh was held Thursday in lieu of $40,000 bond. He was charged after at least 25 shots were fired from inside his apartment from a 16-gauge shotgun, a .45-caliber pistol and a .22-caliber rifle.

Police said about 500 H.M. Landrum Junior High School students were moved out of a wing of the building which bordered the apartment complex where the two-hour incident occurred.

Gail Chapman, executive secretary of the Spring Branch Independent School District, said about 1,000 students were attending the second day of school. About 500 of them were moved from the east wing into the cafeteria as a precaution, she said.

Marsh surrendered to police at 11:50 a.m. after talking with police hostage negotiators, Lt. Jim Gunn of the Special Weapons and Tactics team said.

Also arrested was Patricia Ann Wold, 28, who police said was arguing with Marsh before the shooting began in the apartment they shared.

Gunn said Ms. Wold tried to rush past police into the apartment. She was put in the back seat of a patrol car while negotiations continued and kicked out a window in her attempt to get out, he said.

Ms. Wold was charged with misdemeanor criminal mischief. Her bond was set at $400.

Records stall Agent Orange study

WASHINGTON (AP) — The government has run into a snag in efforts to identify which soldiers were doused by the herbicide Agent Orange in Vietnam. It needs to know in order to determine whether their health has been jeopardized.

To establish the effects of the defoliant once and for all, the Veterans Administration was told by Congress to conduct a massive study comparing the health of men exposed to the spray with those not exposed.

To comply, the VA needs to reconstruct day-by-day troop movements. But at a meeting of scientific advisers Wednesday, Dr. Lawrence B. Hobson, a VA medical official, said the scientist hired to design the study found the Defense Department's old Vietnam records in disarray.

The records, in boxes in a warehouse in Alexandria, Va., are so voluminous they would occupy 10½ miles of shelves.

Agent Orange contains dioxin, one of the most toxic substances in existence, and some veterans blame it for causing cancer, birth defects in their children, liver, skin and nerve disorders and emotional changes.

Twelve million gallons were sprayed between 1965 and 1971 to destroy crops and jungle hiding places and clear base perimeters, landing zones, waterways and communications lines.

"You're probably disappointed and I'm somewhat disappointed that we've been unable to define the groups at least that were probably most heavily exposed to Agent Orange at this point," Hobson told the panel.

"I think it the better part of scientific discretion that we not attempt to design a study until we're certain that we have the facts on which a study can be made," he said.

Epidemiologist Gary H. Spivey of the University of California at Los Angeles, in a telephone interview, said he remains optimistic that a "meaningful" study could be based on the records.

His preliminary findings, however, are that it will not be done quickly or easily, he said.

Last spring, a government task force first warned that the records were in such a state that the Pentagon "has not been able to identify individuals or even units whose exposure to Agent Orange is or can be documented reliably."

Spivey plans to design two other studies of Vietnam veterans that do not require the records — one comparing the causes and rates of deaths by Vietnam veterans with ex-servicemen who did not serve there, another comparing the health of those two groups.

And government officials hope two other studies will provide answers, but both appear to be at least two years from completion:

—One is a study of babies born with birth defects in the Atlanta area over the past 10 years to see if a disproportionate number of fathers served in Vietnam.

—Another is the health of 1,500 Air Force men who conducted the spraying, sometimes getting doused by the chemical.

Meantime, Spivey's objectivity came under question. Jon Furst, chairman of the National Veterans Task Force on Agent Orange, called for Spivey's resignation because he expressed doubt in testimony in California last month that Agent Orange had damaged soldiers' health.

"The fear which is generated by the current publicity is very likely to be the most serious consequence of the use of Agent Orange," Spivey told a committee of the California Legislature.

Dr. Barclay M. Shepard, a VA medical officer who chairs the panel, told Furst, a member, that Spivey's statement "may have been an unfortunate comment in retrospect." But, he said, "I don't see that it is in any way going to adversely impact the conduct of the study."

Spivey commented: "What I was trying to say was either not well expressed or not well understood."

Work resumes on list of refugees due release

ATLANTA (AP) — Attorneys, prison officials and U.S. Catholic Conference workers worked today to compile the names of the first Cuban refugees to be released from a federal prison under a court order that eventually could mean freedom for 365 refugees.

U.S. District Judge Marvin Shoob on Wednesday ordered the refugees released periodically in groups as soon as sponsors can be found for them. He also ordered the government not to deport any of the 1,817 Cuban refugees being held in the Atlanta Federal Penitentiary while he reviews their cases.

The sweeping orders stemmed from a class-action suit charging the government with illegally detaining the refugees for more than a year following their arrival aboard the "Freedom Flotilla" boatlift that brought 130,000 Cubans to South Florida from their homeland.

The Justice Department announced late Wednesday Shoob's orders would be appealed. Department spokesman Art Brill said the government believes "there could be a number of criminals in that group."

Brill said the Reagan administration's program to screen the refugees has identified 100 so far who could be released safely, but he said few of those were among the 365 to be freed by Shoob's order.

During a hearing Wednesday morning, however, Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Castellani offered no objections to the list of 365 refugees proposed for release.

Most of the 365 were being held only because they lacked entry papers when they arrived in this country, which Shoob said was not sufficient to keep them locked up.

Officials have said the others being detained admitted committing crimes in Cuba.

Officials with the Catholic Conference — the agency seeking to resettle the refugees — said Wednesday it probably would be Friday before the first refugees are freed.

Conference officials met with lawyers for the Cubans and the government, as well as prison officials, in an attempt to reach agreement on the first group of refugees to be released.

Shoob later agreed to give the various officials until this afternoon to provide him with a list of the first group.

The Catholic group had planned to use a grant from the U.S. State Department to help resettle the refugees, but Castellani said the Justice Department had ruled no public money could be used for resettlement because the refugees had been ruled excludable from the country during immigration proceedings.

Proposal calls for higher auto insurance rates in city

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Midland drivers would pay more for auto insurance under proposed rates submitted by the Texas Automobile Insurance Service Office at the State Board of Insurance's annual auto rate hearing.

SBI staff members submitted their recommended rate increases earlier — for a 16.3 percent statewide increase, compared to TAISO's 23.7 percent statewide increase.

The SBI staff and TAISO used different formulas, including different projections of future losses, in making their recommendations.

TAISO's proposed changes by individual rating territories were not immediately available, but the group did project changes on a "typical driver/car" on the same basis as the SBI staff.

That projection uses a 1981 "low-priced" Ford, Chevrolet or Plymouth, not used in business but driven to and from work, with no male operator under 25 and no female operator under 21.

The projection also is for $10,000/$20,000/$5,000 liability coverage, $5,000 personal injury protection, $50 deductible comprehensive, $200 deductible collison coverage.

Under the SBI staff proposal, the increase would be $31 or 9.4 percent.

Under the TAISO proposal, the increase would be $55 or 16.7 percent.

Individual rates would be determined by age, sex, driving habits and type and age of vehicle.

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — Former Secretary of Labor W. J. Usery Jr. said Wednesday that he was only speaking "hypothetically" when he said Tuesday that he and two other former secretaries of labor had offered to act as special mediators in the air controllers' strike.

Usery made the statement after the other two former secretaries, James D. Hodgson and John T. Dunlop, denied a Los Angeles Times report that they had offered to mediate the dispute.

Asked about the denial by Hodgson and Dunlap, Usery said: "I have been deeply concerned about the dispute and have been trying to get people to be reasonable, but the suggestion of a mediation team of three former secretaries was a hypothetical matter and had not actually been proposed."

"I regret the misunderstanding," Usery said.

The Times quoted Usery in Wednesday editions as saying of the three former secretaries: "We offered to mediate or make recommendations," and that the Reagan administration was cool to the idea.

Hodgson, former vice president of industrial relations for Lockheed Corp., issued a denial for himself and Dunlop, a Harvard University professor and industrial relations specialist.

"I was as surprised as anyone to read the story of my participation as a mediator and I have spoken to John Dunlop and he too said he knows 'absolutely nothing about it, and if it were my idea I certainly wouldn't have handled it that way,' " Hodgson said in a written statement.

American pilot's actions praised

GRAPEVINE, Texas (AP) — An American Airlines official says a pilot used good judgment when he chose to abort a landing rather than touch down on a Dallas-Fort Worth Regional Airport runway as a second plane was taking off.

"Our guy was coming in for a landing and for some reason the aircraft on the runway delayed his takeoff roll," said spokesman Al Becker Wednesday of the incident, which involved an American Airlines 727 that was landing at DFW Tuesday.

"The pilot felt he could have done it either way," Becker said. "He could have touched down just as the other airplane was lifting off the runway, but it was was his judgment that he did not want to do that."

Becker said the pilot decided to pull up and pass the aircraft on the ground, then banked his plane and was cleared by the tower for a landing on another runway about 10 minutes later. The flight was arriving from Cleveland.

Becker said the manuever was "a totally safe, totally routine," action that occurs from time to time and was "total pilot judgment."

The second plane involved in the incident was not identified.

The Federal Aviation Administration in Fort Worth said it had no record of the incident, but a spokesman for local striking air traffic controllers said they monitored it.

"One was fixing to land on top of the other one," said George Brandon, region vice president for the Professional Air Traffic Controllers Organization. "The pilot elected to take off on his own. The tower should have seen it."

A passenger said the wheels were down and they could see the runway when the plane began climbing. A woman in front of her said she saw another plane underneath them.

March on Houston airport planned despite opposition

HOUSTON (AP) — A "labor solidarity" march on Houston's Intercontinental Airport will go off as planned Saturday, even though airport police say it is illegal, a local labor leader says.

Chuck Bertolani, local president of the International Association of Machinists and Aerospace Workers, said Wednesday he expects up to 5,000 members of various local unions to march up the airport road to show support for striking air traffic controllers.

Airport police chief Wilfred Navarro said he understands there will be a rally Saturday, but "there will be no march whatsoever."

"The (labor) leadership I've spoken to say (their activities) won't affect traffic at the airport in any way whatsoever. Impeding traffic would be a violation of the law," Navarro said.

Sunlight may cause migraines

Dear Dr. Solomon: Is it possible for a person to get a migraine attack just because he's out in the sun? This often seems to happen with me. — Mark, Miami

Dear Mark: Sunlight does apear to be able to trigger an attack of migraine. In fact, researchers at the University of California, Davis, School of Medicine say that sunlight probably causes attacks more often than dietary factors, another cause of migraine.

Dear Dr. Solomon: I've tried, but I can't give up cigarettes. I'm still a pack-a-day smoker, but I've switched to the low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes. Does that mean I'm less likely to get lung cancer? — Stuart, Austin, Texas

Dear Stuart: Dr. Julius Richmond, the former Surgeon General of the United States Public Health Service, says that low-tar and low-nicotine cigarettes may reduce the threat of lung cancer to some limited extent; however, there is no evidence that it lessens the risk of other diseases. For example, emphysema, bronchitis, cardiovascular disease, and complications of pregnancy are still possibilities regardless of what kind of a cigarette a person smokes.

Moreover, the new cigarettes often have artificial flavorings added to make up for the loss of the tar and nicotine, and some of these may become carcinogenic when burned.

Dear Dr. Solomon: A local phone-in radio program had a physician answering questions on cancer, but most of what I got out of it was bits and pieces. At one point I believe he said that heat was being used in the treatment of cancer. Can you comment on this? If what the doctor said is true, how is the treatment given? — Anita, Montreal

Dear Anita: Doctors are using hyperthermia (an abnormally high body temperature) in an effort to weaken the structure of cancer cells and, it is hoped, eventually lead to their destruction. This approach is being combined with traditional forms of treatment, such as radiation and chemotherapy.

Two methods of raising temperatures are being used — either the patient's blood is sent through a warming device by a process called "thermodialysis," or the person's entire body is warmed. With the first method, the blood is circulated through a heat exchanger, warmed to an exact degree, and then returnd to the patient. Each of these treatment sessions lasts anywhere from 24 to 72 hours.

With the second method, the patient, who wears a plastic shell to keep in the warmth, is placed on a mattress containing a heating coil. The mechanism is set so that the blood and deep body tissues are warmed without burning the skin. Each of these treatments takes about two hours.

Haunted family splits up

BOURNEMOUTH, England (AP) — Catherine and Charles Burden said Wednesday they will send away their 8-year-old adopted son in hopes of mollifying a poltergeist they claim overturned furniture and smashed dishes at their home.

Mediums consulted by Burden, 63, and his wife, 55, have said the ghost is somehow being attracted by young Bradley Burden, who is mentally retarded.

"The spirit is attracted to a little boy," said Burden, a window washer. "It picks on young children, particularly if he's a weaker boy, which he is."

The bizarre events at the Burden home in this coastal resort city began Friday morning shortly after Burden left for work, Mrs. Burden reported. She said a heater flew across the floor, dishes were flung about the house and a television was overturned.

Police and social workers were summoned to the house. They said they witnessed some of the phenomena and could offer no natural explanation.

To the retailers of Midland

In the next few weeks, you will see one of Midland's finest neighborhood shopping centers enter the final stages of completion. We would like to introduce ourselves and invite you to look closer at us.

Westwood Village combines those elusive, intangible factors of location and market area resulting in a center that has the potential of being a profit generator for retailers with an instinct and vision for sales.

As professional shopping center developers, we have brought together those successful retailing forces of volume sales major anchors (Safeway and K-Mart), high buying power market area (over $101 million within one mile), excellant location (Illinois at Midland Dr.), and modern design with curb appeal. As a result, we expect Westwood Village to dominate retailing in west Midland for years to come.

At the present time, we have room for about 6 more quality retailers in our Phase 1 development. Wouldn't you like to be one of our "founding family" especially since we're at the beginning of the lucrative fall and holiday selling season?

If so, call either me in Port Worth or my associate, Mike Lewis, at 683-6742 and we'll give you the full Westwood Village story.

University Board of Regents approves new UTPB budget

ODESSA — The University of Texas System Board of Regents meeting in Austin recently approved a $6.1 million budget for The University of Texas of the Permian Basin for fiscal year 1981-82.

The new budget represents a 7 percent increase over the previous year's $5.7 million budget.

UTPB President V. R. Cardozier said the new budget includes a larger figure for faculty salaries than in previous years, but no additional funding for operating.

"Even if we take into account all the money available for salary increases, we have only a 7 percent increase in the budget, and with an inflation rate exceeding 10 percent, we have an actual decrease in buying power," he said.

"The legislature provided funds for a 17.06 percent increase in faculty salaries, but stipulated that increases should be awarded based on merit only. (5.1 percent of this increase was awarded in February.) We, in fact gave a 17.15 percent increase on the average, with individual increases ranging from 10 to 24 percent," Cardozier said.

"We are extremely gratified that the legislature has provided for substantial salary increases this year, particularly in view of the fact that in the past four years, increases have run from 3.4 percent to 5.1 percent. We still are not where we would like to be, but this has helped immensely."

"We are grateful to the legislature for this additional funding for faculty salaries, but the failure of the legislature to provide additional funds for operating expenses, supplies, services and equipment is severely handicapping us. Operating the institution will be an extremely tight situation in the coming year as a consequence of the continuing reluctance of the commissioner of higher education to recognize that state formula funding for small institutions results in a severe handicap for those institutions and a disservice to its students," Cardozier said.

"The legislature continues to lighten up on transfer of funds. Formerly, we were able to take care of some teaching needs by using some funds allocated to physical plant, but the legislature has stopped all of that this time. What this says is that they want to manage institutions through legislation, and that can't be done," he added.

Cardozier noted that the budget approved by the UT System Board of Regents includes some money from reserve funds. "We actually budgeted $134,868 more than we were appropriated by using emergency funds from prior years, but we are perhaps a year from using all of our reserves," he said.

Included in the 1981-82 budget is $518,458 for general administration, compared to last year's $465,942. General institutional expense is listed at $147,000, compared to $130,785 for the previous year. Staff benefits for 1981-82 stand at $154,168, compared to $111,290 for 1980-81.

Funds for resident instruction total $2,311,002 for 1981-82.

A regrettable error

Midland city officials have acknowledged they "goofed" by not advising municipal employees of a change in the city retirement program that significantly altered benefits.

It's admirable that officials have admitted the error, failure to tell employees of a change in the retirement plan that decreased to 10 years the period of time required for a city employee to become "vested." But recognition of the error seems to be not enough; legally it remains to be seen whether the city can be held accountable for financial losses resulting from the failure. But morally it would appear the city has an obligation to attempt to make amends.

There isn't enough evidence available at this time, apparently, to indicate any intent on the part of the city administration to mislead employees. We don't think such an intent existed. Rather, it appears the failure simply resulted from poor communication on the city's part. Even department heads weren't aware of the change. It may have been simply an oversight, but one oversight of this nature is more than enough.

One supposition that can be derived from this regrettable situation is that the city administration may not be sensitive enough to the needs of city employees. Information relating to job fringe benefits and retirement requirements is vital for employees of any company or municipality, as this incident so sadly illustrates. Personal lives hang in the balance and the city — or a company — must remain sensitive to that need and go the extra mile to provide that information.

In this particular situation the lack of information that the city's vestiture period had been cut in half — reduced from 20 years to 10 — resulted in the loss of thousands of dollars for some city employees who recently resigned and withdrew their retirement funds from the city program. Others who resigned might have stayed with the city had they known of the change in the vestiture requirement — and the fact that they only lacked "X" number of years before fulfilling the vestiture requirement, rather than the longer period they thought.

It goes without saying that this failure on the city's part represents bad business practice. Again, we don't think officials intended to withhold information from employees, but this is the type of error that simply must not be repeated.

A sobering reality

The lower wages and higher productivity of Japanese autoworkers accounts for a major share of the average $600 differential between comparable Japanese and American cars.

So, with Japanese imports continuing to command a full 25 percent of the American market while domestic automakers struggle to earn even modest profits, moves to produce American cars overseas were probably inevitable.

Recently, General Motors announced plans to design and build a subcompact mini-car in a joint venture with Japan's Suzuki Motor Co. The new subcompact, which may get up to 60 miles per gallon, is likely to be built in Japan for sale there and in the United States.

If the venture succeeds, it will offer American consumers unsurpassed value and provide General Motors with a needed infusion of black ink.

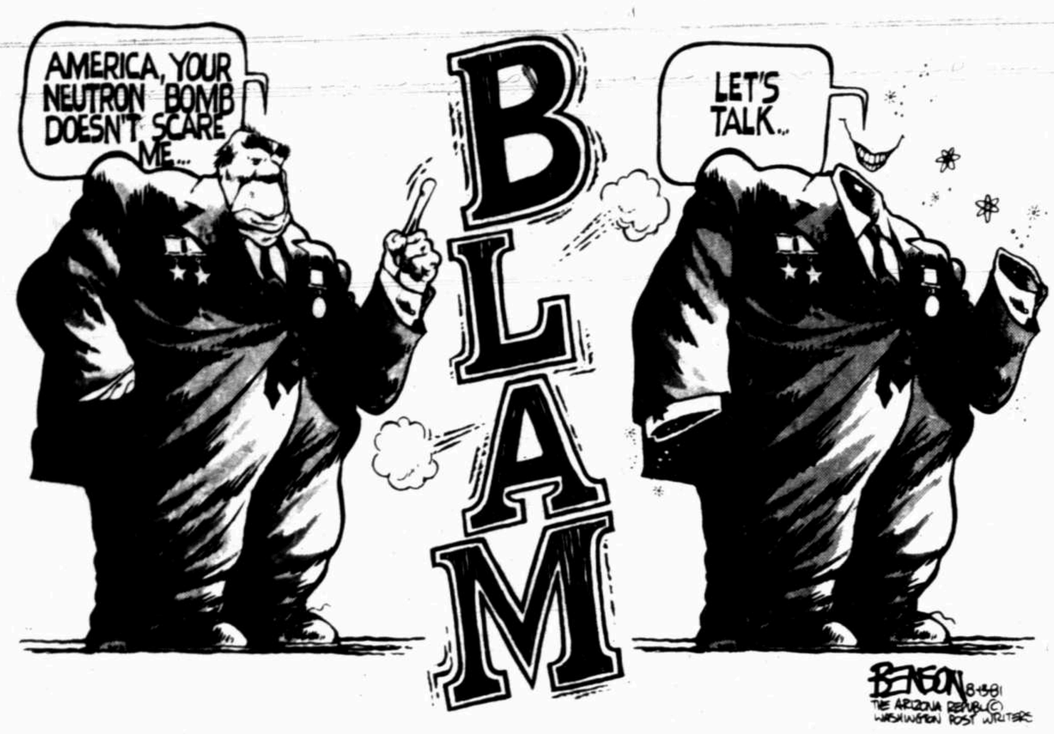

But where would this leave domestic autoworkers in an industry that has already furloughed nearly a quarter of its work force?

The answer is as obvious as the solution to the export of American jobs. Labor, in this case the United Auto Workers, must be willing to share in the cost-cutting essential to meet foreign competition or face the certainty of fewer jobs in shrinking domestic industries.

That won't require American autoworkers — currently the best paid of any in the world — to settle for the wage rates prevailing in Tokyo or in Hamamatsu, where the GM-Suzuki mini-car will probably be built. But it will mean that the UAW must persuade its members of some sobering economic realities.

As Chrysler Chairman Lee Iacocca put it last year in urging the UAW to accept a renegotiated contract, "We have thousands of jobs at $18 an hour. We have no jobs at $20 an hour."

Chronic absenteeism and shoddy workmanship have plagued domestic automakers for years. Labor's help in reducing both would represent the kind off cooperation that might keep the GM-Suzuki venture from triggering a trend that no American should welcome.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Need for investigation of investigators

WASHINGTON — The Senate Ethics Committee is currently investigating a veteran colleague, Sen. Harrison Williams, D-N.J. The greater need is for a full, evidentiary hearing into the tactics that the FBI used to snare a United States senator.

Jack Anderson

Essentially, Williams was convicted of trying to pull a few wires for his political pals. Yet favors are part of a politician's stock in trade. He is expected to produce government jobs, contracts and projects for the people he represents.

It is sometimes a clumsy system, a throwback to the less artful days of government, but it seems to work.

In earlier columns, I cited a telltale FBI memo that shows the prosecutors had serious doubts about their evidence against the senator. But this was not the only government document that Judge George Pratt hid from the defense.

A second withheld memo has now been reviewed by my associate Indy Badhwar. It was dated January, 1980 — the same month that FBI undercover agents, lacking the evidence to make a case against Williams, tried to induce him to take a bribe. As their hidden cameras show, he turned down the money, protesting "No, no, no, no."

They went back to the flimsy evidence, therefore, that their own memos warned was insufficient. They accused him of seeking a $100 million investment from the FBI's fictitious sheik for a titanium mine owned by his political cronies.

The second memo, written by Robert C. Stewart, chief of ABSCAM's Newark strike force, accuses chief ABSCAM prosecutor Thomas Puccio of misleading him into believing Williams had a hidden interest in the titanium mine.

"Many months later, when we obtained the tapes, the situation proved to be quite different," wrote Stewart. "Williams did not say he had an interest, hidden or otherwise — only that he was interested."

Stewart also criticized the FBI's undercover tactics, particularly those of the bureau's chief informant, convicted con man Mel Weinberg. Stewart was concerned about Weinberg's overly active role in the scam.

As Stewart phrased it, Weinberg "persisted in suggesting the nature of the criminal undertaking, rather than allowing the suspects to relate what they proposed."

In other words, Stewart felt that Weinberg, the con artist, was coaching Williams into making incriminatory statements. Weinberg was, in effect, supplying the script for the senator's appearances before the hidden cameras.

Stewart wasn't the only one to express concern over Weinberg's tactics. Similar criticism came from two assistant U.S. attorneys, Ed Plaza and Robert Weier. They faulted Weinberg for telling Williams what to say before luring him to a meeting with the phony sheik on Jan. 28, 1979. Plaza and Weier called Weinberg's coaching "unpardonable."

But the videotape of that meeting was one of the most damaging pieces of government evidence at Williams' trial. He was shown boasting of his contacts and influence — but the jury was not properly impressed with the fact that the senator's essentially harmless braggadocio was entirely the product of coaching by the FBI's underworld hireling.

At the trial, Williams explained that he had followed Weinberg's instructions because he wanted to help his friend get the $100 million investment that the phony sheik was dangling as bait.

There is more evidence of government misconduct that the Ethics Committee should consider. For example, prosecutors at Williams' trial made much of his allegedly improper pressure on the New Jersey state gambling commission to give a renovation contract for the Ritz Casino in Atlantic City to a firm supposedly favored by the senator.

Yet the government's own files state: "Evidence ... indicates that the Ritz proposal was decided without any undue influence or pressure by Williams."

In another questionable government action, Camden Mayor Angelo Erichetti actually helped forge a letter bearing Williams' signature — in the presence of the FBI's undercover ABSCAM agents. Weinberg had asked Erichetti for a letter that would confirm the senator's support for the titanium mine deal; when they agreed that Williams would not sign such a letter, they simply forged one.

Despite the lack of solid evidence, the Justice Department went ahead with the prosecution of Williams. This raises some questions that warrant a full-scale congressional investigation.

Who wanted to nail Williams so badly, and why? At least this much can be shown: Jimmy Carter's Justice Department tended to take its political signals from the White House. Williams, a power in New Jersey politics, supported Sen. Ted Kennedy, D-Mass., in the crucial New Jersey primary. Indeed, Carter lost the primary to Kennedy.

Lopez Portillo told Castro he's not wanted at Cancun

EDITOR'S NOTE: Columnist George Will is on a two-week vacation. His column will resume in this space when he returns.

William Giandoni

The Mexican chief executive, certainly Castro's best friend among the chiefs of state in the Americas, invited the bearded Cuban dictator to a hastily convoked meeting on Cozumel Island Aug. 7-8 to break the news.

Lopez Portillo made it clear that he still holds Castro in high esteem, but not so high that he would risk the success of the North-South summit conference he is co-hosting in nearby Cancun Oct. 22-23.

That event is expected to bring President Reagan and the heads of state of 21 other industrialized and developing countries together for an exchange of views on global economic problems.

So far as is known, Cuba was never on the list of countries to be invited to the Cancun summit. The Soviet Union was, but it declined the invitation.

However, after President Reagan's plans to attend were announced, reports from Washington indicated that his presence was conditioned on Castro's absence.

A challenge of that sort was apparently something that Castro could not ignore.

Cuba began to press for a belated invitation, arguing that, as Castro is currently the head of the organization of "non-aligned" countries, he should have been asked to attend.

A meeting of representatives of the 14 Third World nations that were invited was held at the United Nations in New York the end of July to discuss the situation.

Mexican Foreign Minister Jorge Castaneda flew up from Mexico City to participate and, to judge by what Mexican leftists say, to help plead Castro's case.

But, as Castaneda later told Mexican newsmen, "some" of them objected and the Third World countries decided then against inviting the long-winded Castro to a two-day conference that envisions serious exchanges of views among a score of heads of state.

It was after that meeting in New York, and a conference in Cancun of the foreign ministers of the 22 involved countries, that President Lopez Portillo invited Castro to Cozumel, a relatively isolated resort island a few miles up Mexico's Caribbean coast from Cancun.

There, Lopez Portillo spoke frankly to the Cuban Communist revolutionary. Cuba's presence would sabotage the Cancun conference which may well be the greatest summit ever held.

In addition to the United States and Mexico, France, Britain, West Germany, Canada, Japan, Sweden, Austria, Brazil, Venezuela, Guyana, China, Yugoslavia, India, Bangladesh, the Philippines, Saudi Arabia, Algeria, Tanzania, Ivory Coast and Nigeria have indicated they will be represented by their president or chief of government.

It made it clear that, while the Mexican president sympathizes with Castro, the interests of Mexico and the rest of the Third World would be better served by reaching an understanding with the United States.

"President Lopez Portillo explained to President Fidel Castro the lengthy process that has made possible the celebration of that (Cancun) meeting," the communique said.

"And he bared the reasons that determine that insistence on the part of the developing countries, Mexico among them, which understand and sustain the right of Cuba to be present at that conference, would, given the known position of the United States, determine its cancellation, with harm to the negotiating process between developed countries and developing countries, to which President Fidel Castro has contributed so much."

In other words, if Mexico and the Third World countries feel that they have to choose, they prefer to deal with President Reagan rather than with the Cuban dictator.

The communique was brief, fewer than 300 words long. But that does not mean the end of the matter. The communique ended by announcing that Castro reserved "the right to analyze in due time, the causes that have given rise to that absence."

Observers reported that Castro may have had tears in his eyes when he boarded the Cuban navy vessel, Pajaro Azul, for the trip back home.

Policeman's wife tells 'other' side

To The Editor:

Well, Mrs. Green or anyone else who might be interested, you might get your facts together before voicing opinions that are untrue.

My husband has been on the Police Dept. five years, is a senior patrolman and has a college degree. He makes a salary of $17,600 a year. Sure he has a car furnished but it is never used as a family car. Because he has this car, he usually gets to work for the city 10 to 12 hours a day instead of 8, but only gets paid for 8.

A few years ago the city budget was running low so we had the privilege of buying gas for our "benefit" car, so he could patrol this city and protect you citizens. Now those are facts that I can prove.

Being a policeman's "family" does not exempt you from tickets, I know several wives who have received tickets. Maybe we do not get as many, because we see our husband's face when he comes home after working an accident where someone was killed or injured for life, because of speeding. Maybe the reason we stop fully at every stop sign and do not speed through school zones is because he helped pick up a child's mangled body off the street because someone did not obey these laws. No, Mrs. Green, we are not perfect but neither is any one else.

We are raising a family of 5, have never received food stamps or free lunches, I always drive around the block as many times as it takes and on my gas.

I get to see my husband one hour a day, five out of every seven days, sometimes not even that much, because of the other two jobs he works. Of course we are together on Sunday as a family and the kids enjoy that. I don't mind these disadvantages too much because my husband enjoys and loves his job, it does bother me because I never know when I go to bed at night if I will still have a husband when I wake in the morning. If you or anyone else thinks this is an irrational statement, then try walking in their shoes for a month and see if you don't have the same attitude about the low pay as we do. I wish I could sign my name as you did, but for reasons you probably don't have to worry about, I can't.

Name withheld

Seeing clearly

To The Editor:

First of all I would like to personally thank Richard Orr for all his hard work he had to have put into the article on a police officers pay. The article was very informative and probably opened up a lot of eyes.

One persons eyes who seem to be clouded with West Texas sand is Shirley Green. As a police officer's wife, I would like to say that my husband loves his job and takes it very seriously. No matter what the pay, he would probably be doing the job. However, being able to bring home his patrol car does not give us the same privileges as a company car would. He can get the patrol car filled with gas at the Municipal Garage, but how often do we use it for a family car? Not very often. First of all there aren't that many times he is around to go any place with his family. He can't use it to go out of town in. Not even to Odessa, which is where he's enrolled in school. Therefore we have to keep a second car so he can use it to go to school in. We can't use it, if we want to go to a party, for obvious reasons.

Now that all the petty reasons have been listed, let me tell you about the more serious ones. When he goes somewhere off duty in his patrol car he has to be dressed for the "just in case" problems. He never knows what he might see and have to take care of. There's always the possibility of anything from a driver in a stalled vehicle that needs help to a major accident that he might drive up on. And what does he do with his family when this happens? If we're in the car, we simply stay in the car and wait patiently. But if its a crime in progress he has to find something to do with us even if that means put us out on the street corner.

I could go on for pages, but I'm sure this letter is getting old. This family for one is not trying to make anyone else in Midland feel bad about their income. We just feel we have a right to something better for the amount of danger, stress, humiliation and criticism our husbands have to put up with each and every day.

Director of CORE arrested in NY

By ULA ILNYTZKY
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP)— The conroversial director of the Congress of Racial Equality has been arrested on an assault charge for allegedly breaking the ribs of a man who tampered with his car.

Roy Innis, 47, who has headed the black civil-rights group since 1968, was arrested and charged with first-degree assault Wednesday.

Innis was held overnight in the detention facility at Manhattan Criminal Court. He was scheduled to be arraigned today.

Police said Innis broke the ribs of a man who allegedly stole a radio from his car. The alleged assault took place Friday at CORE headquarters.

The suspect, identified as Amstead Rice, 33, of Manhattan, spent three days in Harlem Hospital with four broken ribs, trauma of the eye and internal bleeding. Police said Rice was arraigned at his bedside for grand larceny.

CORE spokesman Al Starkes called the police account of the incident "a direct, vicious and deliberate attack on a black leader." He said the charges were "completely trumped up."

"Have you ever heard of catching a thief and then being arrrested for it?" Starkes said, claiming the charges resulted from an ongoing dispute between the city and CORE.

Mayor Edward Koch issued a statement saying, "If he believes the arrest was unwarranted, he will tell that to the judge."

Starkes said Innis was conducting a CORE meeting at the organization's headquarters Friday when four CORE members caught someone tampering with Innis' car. He said the thief attempted to break away, "punching and kicking some of my people'," but they managed to subdue him. The CORE members brought him up to the office and called police.

Police arrived 15 minutes later and arrested the man.

CORE members thought the case was closed until police asked Innis and several other members to report to the police station Wednesday to make statements. When they arrived, police arrested Innis.

Innis has been involved in several controversial episodes recently. In April, he announced in Atlanta he had broken the case of the murders and disappearances of 28 young blacks. A group of the victims' mothers denounced the action as a grab at publicity.

Squatters arrested, jailed in South Africa

(c) The Los Angeles Times

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa — The five-week holdout by hundreds of black squatters in the sand dunes west of Cape Town ended Wednesday when police arrested them all and jailed them pending deportation to their tribal homelands.

About 100 police officers accompanied by dogs entered the makeshift squatter camp at Nyanga at dawn, rounded up the squatters, who are mostly women and children, and loaded them into trucks.

Police authorities did not disclose the number arrested. Observers estimated that the squatters, on this particular morning, numbered about 1,700. The number has fluctuated between 400 and 2,000 during the non-violent stand by the blacks, who were ousted from more durable shacks five weeks ago and have since lived in plastic-covered tents.

When police destroyed the makeshift shelters on several past occasions, the squatters lived out in the open, blanketed and huddling in small groups to ward off the cold and wind of the Southern Hemisphere winter at the tip of Africa.

The tenacity of the Nyanga squatters, who are mostly family members determined to be reunited with husbands and fathers working in the area, has aroused sympathy from some whites in Cape Town. Through church channels and their own volunteer efforts they have sought to ameliorate the hardships of the squatters.

Under South Africa's racial segregation laws, few blacks are allowed in the Cape Town area unless they come without their families. Coloreds (people of mixed race) are given priority for jobs and family living.

Piet Koornhof, the Cabinet minister in charge of black affairs, said he had authorized the clearing of the area because the squatter camp was growing and the squatters had refused the jobs offered them elsewhere by his department.

Black population up in all areas

WASHINGTON (AP) — While whites are moving to the nation's small towns and rural areas, new Census Bureau figures show black Americans increasing their numbers in both central cities and the suburbs.

During the last 10 years black Americans increased their numbers in eight of the 10 largest black-population cities at the same time the white city population was shrinking, the bureau reported Wednesday.

And, reaching what demographic experts termed a turning point, black growth in the cities was outstripped by their suburban increases.

Census Bureau analysts Larry Long and Diana DeAre report in the September issue of American Demographgics magazine that one-fifth of all blacks now live in suburban areas and conclude that "it is significant that the nation's black population is no longer concentrating in the central cities."

This movement to the suburbs often means an opportunity to own a home, a major form of wealth accumulation for middle-class Americans, and can help secure that status for many black families, they report.

Since 1970, the article says, the percentage of suburbanites who are black has jumped from 4.8 percent to 6.1 percent.

And the black population of the cities grew between 1970 and 1980, with the central cities going from 20.6 percent black in 1970 to 23.4 percent in 1980.

During the same period the population as a whole — the majority of which is white — was moving out of cities and urban areas into the smaller towns and countryside. Indeed, this movement was so vast that some 90 smaller communities won urban desgnations following last year's national head count.

The nation's largest cities, though, were typified by the largest, New York. While New York was losing 10.4 percent of its total population between 1970 and 1980, it's black population grew by 7 percent.

Census statistician Dwight Johnson said new figures from the 1980 headcount are showing that the "total, or white, population primarily is leaving the central part of the city. The black population, on the other hand, is still quite heavily concentrated in the cities.

"Definitely a reason would be economics, and just tradition as well," he said. "Blacks have pretty much been located in te central cities since themigrations ofthe 1940s, actually. And blacks continue to be there."

But he also noted that some are leaving the central cities for the suburban areas, "so blacks are trying to leave when they are financially able."

The report said that Chicago, the city with the second largest number of blacks, saw its black population grow by 8.6 percent over the last decade, while the total population of the city dipped 10.7 percent.

In Detroit blacks grew 14.9 percent while total population dropped 20.4 percent. Philadelphia's total dropped 13.4 percent, while its number of blacks declined only 2.3 percent.

Los Angeles, with total growth larger than black growth, and Washington, where the black total declined faster than the total population, were the two exceptions.

Long and Ms. DeAre speculate that the total population of Los Angeles grew faster than th numbers of blacks because of the influx of Hispanics to that city.

Black growth in Los Angeles was only 0.3 percent compared to an overall growth rate of 5.4 percent. In Washington the total population dropped 15.7 percent, while the black population declined 16.6 percent.

Wilkins' condition serious, but stable

NEW YORK (AP) — Roy Wilkins, the former leader of the NAACP, was in serious condition in New York University Medical Center today but resting comfortably, a spokesman for the hospital said.

Wilkins, 79, was hospitalized Tuesday evening with a possible heart attack, according to a statement by the hospital.

Wilkins, who was chief executive of the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People for 22 years before retiring in 1977, was hospitalized at the center for two weeks in March 1979. He was treated then for irregular heartbeat and had a pacemaker implanted.

The final of the Philip Morris European Cup in Dusseldorf, Germany, produced a number of strange deals. Here's another.

West's two spade bid is an example of the weak two-bid that is growing steadily in popularity. North showed restraint in passing. However, South had enough distributional values to reopen the bidding when two spades was passed round to him. North tred three no trump, a contract that would have made, but South felt he was too distributional, and too weak, to leave that in. He introduced his second suit and North corrected to five diamonds.

West led a low club. Declarer could have made the contract by rising with the ace and setting up his hearts with the help of two ruffs. But that line is by no means clear, so declarer tried the club finesse.

East won the king and at many tables he lazily shifted to a spade. Declarer ruffed and now was able to cash the king-ace of hearts and take two ruffs in dummy, thus making his contract.

One defender found the winning line at trick two. With the king of clubs in the bank and declarer surely marked for a spade void (the opening bid virtually guaranteed a six-card suit), he shifted to a trump. West won the ace and continued a trump. Now declarer was a trump short to set up his hearts, so he ended up down one.

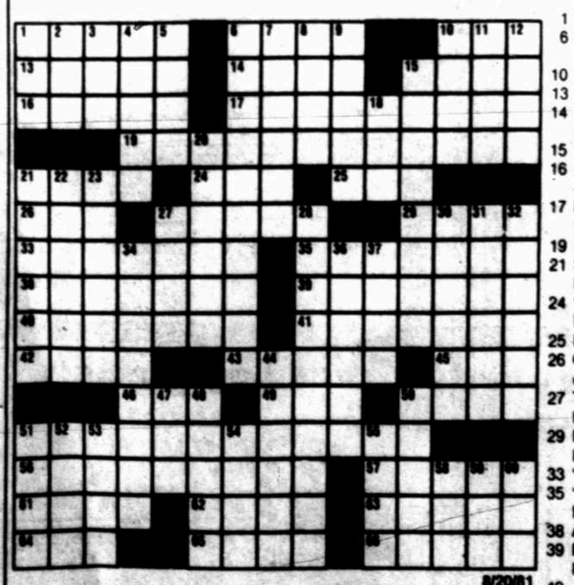

At one table North-South climbed all the way to six diamonds. It would seem that West should lead the ace of trumps to "take a look at dummy" and then decide what to do. Instead, he chose to lay down the ace of spades first. Declarer ruffed, set up his hearts with two ruffs and discarded his losing club on the king of spades to land his slam!

Judge involves California in fight over Hughes fortune

HOUSTON (AP) — In a surprise move a Texas probate judge drew the state of California into a courtroom fight here over the fortune of billionaire Howard Hughes. But California attorneys have refused to recognize his jurisdiction.

Probate Judge Pat Gregory ruled Wednesday that California, locked in a battle for the right to tax the estate valued at between $180 million and $2 billion, voluntarily became a participant in the Texas case and now must abide by his decisions.

Rick Harrison, a lawyer for the Texas attorney general's office, expressed confidence the ruling would speed final resolution of all Hughes' estate questions.

However, Steve Mayer, a San Francisco lawyer representing California, said that state would not be bound by the ruling and the matter ultimately will be decided by the U.S. Supreme Court.

Gregory based his ruling on the appearance in his court last month of an attorney representing California.

"The state of California's appearance here has made them a party for all purposes to the Hughes' estate proceedings here. Absent overtuning of that order ... they are bound to all decisions of this court," Gregory said.

The lawyer appeared in court to ask Gregory to release several pictures, taken after Hughes' around-the-world flight, that were submitted at the 1978 trial that declared the eccentric recluse a Texas resident.

The judge agreed to the temporary release of the pictures for use in a related California case. But the request prompted attorney George Parnham, who represents about 500 distant Hughes' relatives, to ask Gregory to declare California a participant in the Texas case.

"I think the ruling is in error. California never appeared in Texas state courts and still believes that this lawsuit should and will be determined by the U.S. Supreme Court," said Mayer. "Someone went down to get some documents for use in a deposition, but that doesn't make them a party to the lawsuit."

Gregory would not comment on how the ruling would affect the struggle between Texas and California over which state could claim Hughes as a resident and tax his fortune.

Mayer predicted the ruling would have no impact.

"We've taken the domicile issue to the Supreme Court. ... I don't think the ruling will affect what the Supreme Court does," said Mayer.

California appealed to the high court in 1978 when jurors in Gregory's court ruled Hughes was a Texan.

Heirs have millions of dollars at stake because California taxes would amount to 24 percent of the estate and Texas taxes 16 percent.

Gregory, who earlier determined Hughes left no will or immediate family when he died in 1976, ruled this month that 16 maternal cousins would split half the estate. The trial to determine who gets the other half begins Monday.

No money will change hands until the various appeals are resolved in the case which already has dragged on for more than five years.

More indictments urged in Lake Mexia drownings

AUSTIN (AP) — A black legislator says further indictments should be brought against three Limestone County lawmen in the drowning of three young black men.

Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston, said at a news conference Wednesday he intends to ask both the U.S. Justice Department and Attorney General Mark White to push for civil rights indictments.

The three law enforcement officers were indicted Tuesday on misdemeanor charges of negligent homicide.

A Texas civil rights law provides up to life imprisonment for causing the death of prisoners by intentionally injuring them or depriving them of their rights.

White's press secretary, Mary Hardesty, said Assistant Attorney General Gerald Carruth already had brought the civil rights issue to the attention of Limestone County Attorney Patrick Simmons and the grand jury. Carruth helped Simmons present his case to the grand jurors

"That (the civil rights angle) is what we helped Simmons with in his presentation to the grand jury. ... We have done all we can under the law in this case. I don't know what more we can do," Mrs. Hardesty said.

The grand jury at Groesbeck indicted Deputy Sheriff Kenny Elliot, reserve deputy Kenneth Archie and probation officer David Drummond in the June 19 drownings at Lake Mexia.

Carl Baker, 19, and Anthony Freeman, 18, both of Mexia, and Steve Booker, 19, of Dallas, drowned when the small boat in which the officers were transporting them capsized. They had been arrested on suspicion of possessing drugs.

All three victims were black, while two of the law enforcement officers are white.

Wilson said he believed racism was involved in the arrests "but after that, they (the lawmen) were just guilty of a bad case of being dumb."

He said if the victims had been white, stiffer indictments would have been returned. The indictments issued Tuesday carry a maximum sentence of a year in jail.

"Limestone County is not the seat of progressivism in this state. ... They are probably living in the 1940s as far as attitudes toward racial matters are concerned," Wilson said.

He said he intended to talk to White early next week and also travel to Washington, D.C., to confer with the Justice Department.

"It is my hope that the Justice Department will be able to shed some light on their investigation and also act promptly in bringing charges of the violation of civil rights on behalf of the drowned victims against the law enforcement officers," Wilson said.

He said he was concerned with the victims' families and felt "the judicial process has dampened their faith in due process."

Woman sentenced

HOUSTON (AP) — Jurors have handed down a 20-year prison sentence in the case of an accountant who used a portion of the $810,000 she stole from her employer to set up a church trust fund.

Laurita L. Graber, 33, charged with theft, was assessed the prison term and a $10,000 fine Wednesday.

Prosecutors said Graber, an accountant for Petro-Search Inc., a subsidiary of Howell Petroleum Corp., funneled oil and gas payment checks into an account she set up for herself. They said she then used the money to buy luxuries and set up a $100,000 Catholic church trust fund.

Among other items, prosecutors said, Graber used the money to buy a $125,000 house, a four-wheel drive vehicle, jewelry and furs.

Japan turns to computer war

TOKYO -- Having won the first battle, Japan is now out to win the big computer war.

In the last year, the Japanese computer industry has severely dented the international image of America's IBM as the most successful maker of large capacity computers.

Since the late 1970s, the Japanese -- both main frame makers and countless subcontracting, semiconductor and components manufacturers -- have pushed ahead at a tremendous rate in the development of bigger and better computers.

With decades of tender loving government care -- both in providing vital investment capital and erecting barriers to imports -- the industry has successfully defended its domestic position against the powerful IBM until it was in a position to launch an international challenge.

As a result, the American giant has never been able to gain more than 30 percent of the Japanese market, and its share is slipping fast.

That set the stage for a fierce year-long duel in 1980 -- Japan Inc. vs. IBM -- over the development of large computers with awesome capacity to handle many millions of bits of information in a split second.

Industry sources in Tokyo are claiming first blood. They say Japan has now produced three super capacity computers without equal in the world.

These are the "DIPS-11 series, Model 45" developed by the Nippon Telegraph and Telephone Corp. (NTT), and the "FACOM-M380 and M382 series" developed by the private Fujitsu company.

NTT may be a semigovernmental corporation, but financially it is self-sustaining, developing its own technology which it also licenses out to private interests. In fact, NTT and Fujitsu cooperated closely and swapped technical information in developing their new "beat IBM" computer range.

As a result, in the last year Japan has produced four of the six biggest computers now on the market. Others have come from Nippon Electric Co. (NEC), Hitachi Ltd. and the two American industry leaders, IBM and Amdahl Corp.

Dr. Kimio Ibuki, chief data processing researcher at NTT's Electric Communication Laboratory said there are three yardsticks for measuring the efficiency of large capacity computers.

These are MIPS (millions of instructions per second), gate delay time (the time it takes for the passage of one electric pulse signal through the electronic circuitry after an order has been given), and finally the main memory device's information memorization capacity.

The NTT and Fujitsu computers have been registered at about 25 MIPS, compared to the 15 claimed for the IBM and Amdahl machines.

But that comparison is not entirely dependable because MIPS readings vary widely according to the way programming is done -- and there are many different methods.

On top of their high MIPS readings, however, the NTT computer and one of the Fujitsu machines have a claimed gate delay time of only 0.35 nanoseconds, compared to the one nanosecond for IBM and 0.45 nanoseconds for Hitachi's entrant in the big computer battle.

One nanosecond, incidentally, is one-billionth of a second.

The two latest Japanese entrants are also claiming superiority in memorization. Both have attained a maximum main memory capacity of 12 megabytes.

OPEC disagreement could lead to U.S. gas price cuts

By FLOYD NORRIS
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — American gasoline prices could drop slightly over the next few months if oil producers fail to reach agreement on a new world oil-pricing system at their current meeting, analysts say. But a consensus in Geneva likely would mean higher prices at the pump.

The Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries' meeting in Geneva was called at the request of countries that have been badly hurt by declining oil sales. But so far those countries have been unable to reach a deal with Saudi Arabia, which is selling huge quantities of oil by charging the world's lowest price.

A Saudi proposal before the OPEC meeting would increase the cost of Saudi crude but roll back prices charged by several other producers.

U.S. gasoline prices have declined by several cents a gallon since peaking in March, thanks to low demand and plentiful supplies of oil. Sanford L. Margoshes, an analyst with Bache Halsey, Stuart Shields Inc., estimated prices may fall "a penny or two" more over the next few months if no deal is reached in Geneva.

The Saudis, who now charge $32 a barrel and produce about 10.25 million barrels a day or nearly half the OPEC total of 22 million, have refused to accept a price increase of more than $2 a barrel — so far the principal sticking point in the Geneva talks.

Other OPEC prices currently range up to $40 a barrel. Venezuela, Indonesia and other OPEC members have argued they are able to sell their oil at $36 a barrel despite the abundance of supplies worldwide and are opposed to the Saudi proposal of a new base price of $34.

An increase in the Saudi price would be reflected almost immediately in charges for oil from the North Sea off Britain. In addition, crude oil prices in the United States are now about in line with Saudi prices and would be expected to rise with them.

That would be only partly offset by declines in prices from other OPEC producers. Gary Ross, an economist with the Petroleum Industry Research Foundation, estimated the overall cost of crude oil to U.S. refiners would increase by 3 cents a gallon or more if the Saudis agreed to boost their prices $2 a barrel. They likely would try to pass that cost on to their customers.

If there is no agreement in Geneva, the eventual result is likely to hinge on the reaction of the major African producers, including Nigeria, which asked for the OPEC meeting. They have seen their oil sales plummet as oil companies refuse to pay $40 a barrel.

It is possible the Nigerians will cut prices, and Libya and Algeria will follow. If that happens, said Constantine Fliakos, an analyst with Merrill Lynch, Fenner & Smith Inc. in New York, "the market will be flooded with oil, and Saudi Arabia will be in control."

But if the Africans refuse to reduce their prices, by the end of the year world supplies of oil could be low enough to cause a tight market. Fliakos said that might be enough to allow oil companies to increae prices on gasoline and other products by several cents a gallon even without increases in crude oil prices.

However, they could agree this time

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — A compromise to set OPEC's base price at $35 a barrel — the first unified price in two years — was reported within reach today at the cartel's special oil conference.

The 13 members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries, excluding Saudi Arabia, were prepared to adopt a formula to set the common base at $35, allowing differentials from $34 to $39, and freeze prices through next year, Iraqi oil minister Tay eh Abdul Karim said today.

He said the Saudi minister "prefers" a $34 base but has given indications that he "would go along with $35."

Today's note of optimism was a marked change from the tenor of the opening session of the emergency price meeting Wednesday.

"We will not despair," Indonesian Oil Minister Subroto, the current president of the cartel, told reporters Wednesday. But he said "deep valleys and high mountains" existed between the ministers' proposals for a common base price, an "we need further intensive discussions."

Humberto Calderon Berti of Venezuela, one of the cartel's most influential ministers, told reporters Wednesday he doubted the conference would make any binding decisions.

The meeting was called to seek unity in the base price charged by member nations. Prices range from $32 for a 42-gallon barrel, charged by Saudi Arabia, to about $40, charged by North African members of premium-grade crudes. Most countries sell at about $36 a barrel.

Saudi Arabia, now producing nearly half of OPEC's daily output, said it would raise its base price to $34 if the others came down to that figure. The present system of differentials for better grades of oil would also continue.

Overseas discrimination no excuse

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A company doing business overseas cannot deny a woman a position solely because its foreign customers would not wish to deal with women, a federal appeals court has ruled.

But in the specific case before the U.S. 9th Circuit Court of Appeal, the court also agreed with a trial judge's finding that a woman was justifiably passed over for the promotion because she was less qualified than a male applicant.

The civil rights case was brought on behalf of Delia L. Fernandez, who went to work for Fullerton, Calif.-based Wynn Oil Co. in 1968. She became administrative assistant to the vice president of the international operations division in 1972 and asked to be considered for the position of director of international operations when that job became vacant several years later.

Arturo Matthews got the job instead, and Ms. Fernandez became manager of another division. She was discharged in 1977 and later sued the company in federal court in Los Angeles.

Judge Robert J. Kelleher ruled that Ms. Fernandez had not shown that she was qualified to be an international operations director. Even if she had, Kelleher said, she could not prove that she was as qualified as Matthews.

But he found that the company justifiably denied Ms. Fernandez an executive position because a woman might be unacceptable to foreign customers. There was testimony at the trial that Wynn's South American clients would not deal with a female international operations director.

Arabs walk out of U.N. conference

NAIROBI, Kenya (AP) — Arab delegates walked out of United Nations energy conference Wednesday when Israel's representative rose to defend his country's June 7 bombing attack on a nuclear power plant in Iraq.

Afterwards, the Palestine Liberation Organization asked the conference to condemn an Israeli plan to build a canal linking the Mediterranean and Dead seas because the waterway would pass through Arab territories Israel has occupied since the 1967 Mideast war.

It was the second walkout at the U.N. Conference on New and Renewable Sources of Energy by all Arab countries except Egypt, which has diplomatic relations with Israel. The Arabs walked out of the conference last Friday when Israeli Energy Minister Yitzhak Modai gave a speech.

In a speech Tuesday, Iraq said Israel's attack on the nuclear reactor outside Baghdad was designed to hide the fact that Israel possesses a nuclear weapon — and to deprive Iraq of the peaceful use of nuclear technology.

Supply company head forecasts drilling industry growth into '82

DALLAS — Despite the current oversupply of crude oil, domestic drilling activity will continue to grow at a significant rate, perhaps as high as 15 percent, through 1982 before a slight leveling off in 1983 and 1984, forecast Robert E. Harris, president of the drilling equipment division of National Supply Company, Houston.

Harris was speaking at a recent joint drilling/production marketing seminar sponsored by the International Association of Drilling Contractors (IADC) and the Petroleum Equipment Suppliers Association (PESA).

Harris said drilling activity will grow modestly during the 1983-84 period, "but we don't expect it to be at the dramatic pace we're experiencing today. Then in 1985, we see the rig count taking off again at about the 1981 rate."

Harris told the IADC and the PESA participants the forecast for international rig activity is similar to that projected for the United States. "But because we are starting from a lower base, the percent of increase internationally is a good bit more than that of the U.S." The international rig county is expected to grow over 60 percent by 1985, he said.

For drilling contractors and petroleum equipment manufacturers, the effects of today's high drilling rates on equipment availability is "a classic good news/bad news subject," Harris said. The bad news is that extended delivery times on many items, "has become a frustating way of life. The good news, of course, is why we find ourselves in this situation: the drilling industry is at the highest level of activity in its history and still growing."

Under normal conditions, Harris said, the supply industry can deliver more euqipment than contractors can use, or absorb. "But today and tomorrow are obviously not "normal" time. There is a tremendous over-demand for equipment right now."

The result has been that lead times for equipment deliveries are now being quoted at 10 to 18 months, depending on size, specifications and whether the equipment is for land or offshore use.

Harris says he sees a few problems of equipment availability by 1983-1984, primarily because both domestic and foreign expansion programs will remedy the shortages. "The market is about as stretched out as it will get."

The current boom in rig activity has also caused an unprecidented demand for repair parts and placed greater demands on equipment manufacturers.

To address the spare parts problem, Harris said, many firms have allocated up to one quarter of total manufacturing capacity to spare parts.

Investigators unable to determine fault in freak mine-lake accident

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal agency investigating the collapse of a salt mine which sucked dry Lake Peigneur in Louisiana has concluded it is impossible to fix the exact cause of the freak accident.

A nine-member committee formed by the Mine Safety and Health Administration concluded that because the collapsed salt dome was completely filled with water from the lake, it was impossible to get close enough to the collapsed area to examine the damage.

This leaves it up to federal courts in Louisiana to determine the cause and possibly fix the blame in the Nov. 20 incident. At least three lawsuits are pending in the case, and parties had been hoping the government probe would help resolve the dispute over its cause.

In one suit the Diamond Crystal Salt Co., owner of the Jefferson Island salt mine, is suing Texaco Inc., which was operating two oil rigs in the area at the time of the collapse. Texaco, in turn, is suing Diamond Crystal, and employees of the salt company have a class action suit against Texaco.

Diamond Crystal contends that Texaco drillers punched a hole in the bottom of the lake and hit the salt mine, causing the lake water to plunge into the mine. Texaco contends the mine collapsed of its own accord, destroying the lake above and Texaco's equipment. The Diamond Crystal employees also blame Texaco and are suing for the loss of their jobs.

The government officials concluded that either contention, or a combination of the two might be correct, but it would be impossible to choose between them.

The collapse could very well have been caused by strucural deficiencies in the mine, the committee concluded, but it also could have been caused by an oil drill penetrating the salt dome or coming close enough to it to cause the collapse.

The committee also said even if the drill did penetrate or come too close to the dome, a weakened mine structure also could have contributed to the collapse.

"It was not possible for the committee to make a precise determination of the cause because it was not possible for the committee to examine the internal structure of the mine after the accident," said Frank O'Gorman, a spokesman for the agency and a member of the investigating team.

"The mine was totally inundated and there was no possibility of any such examination," O'Gorham said, adding that this would be the final government report on the incident.

Tropical storm heading toward North Carolina

WILMINGTON, N.C. (AP) — After whipping Florida with high winds and heavy rain and claiming two lives in South Carolina, Tropical Storm Dennis crept up the East Coast toward North Carolina resorts early today.

The storm, which turned the sea white against the dark sky and drove the rain so hard it stung the skin, kept coastal residents guessing about whether it would come ashore or whether its winds would reach hurricane force.

At 3 a.m. EDT the storm's center was located near latitude 34.5 north, longitude 77.0 west, or about 25 miles west-southwest of Cape Lookout, N.C. The National Weather Service said Dennis was moving toward the northeast at about 15 mph. The storm's center was expected to pass near or over the Outer Banks of North Carolina this morning.

The storm was packing gale-force winds of 55 mph, with the winds gusting to 50 mph over land. The storm would be classified a hurricane if winds reached speeds of 74 mph.

Heavy rains continued over the eastern third of North Carolina and were spreading northward to the Virginia and Maryland coastal areas. Accumulations of up to five inches were expected.

In the Outer Banks town of Nags Head, N.C., many vacationers headed for the safety of the mainland, although few local residents left.

Jim Meads, who owns a 700-foot-long fishing pier in Nags Head, said he wasn't worried that waves splashing over the side of the pier would destroy it.

"It's something you got no control over," he said as he watched from inside a bar. "If you're going to worry about it, you got no business in this business."

The National Weather Service said the storm no longer posed a danger to South Carolina by Wednesday night.

"Even if it intensified from this point, it still wouldn't bother us," said Jim Lowe of the weather service's Columbia, S.C., bureau.

Gale warnings were lifted at 9 p.m. from Charleston, S.C., to the Little River north of Myrtle Beach, S.C., although the warnings remained in effect from Little River to the Virginia capes.

Weather forecasters had predicted the storm would go ashore somewhere between Brunswick, Ga., and Charleston. But at 1 p.m., the center of the storm shifted slightly northeast.

E.G. Jones, 60, and Evelyn Bement, 65, both of North Charleston, S.C., were killed in what authorities called a storm-related accident in the town where they lived. Police said water on a street apparently caused another car to go out of control and collide head-on with the car driven by Jones. Ms. Bement, who was a passenger in Jones' car, apparently died of a heart attack after the crash.

Tides along the coast ranged about a foot above normal. Offshore seas ran 4 to 6 feet, causing a rough surf along the beaches.

Extraordinary!

Boy rescued from alleged drug dealers

MIAMI (AP) — A trace on phone calls from kidnappers led police to a 7-year-old boy who was abducted by alleged drug dealers angry because his mother purportedly owed them money, officials say.

Police staged a daring surprise raid Tuesday night to rescue Andrew Martinez, who was abducted Aug. 11 as he arrived home from school and found four men holding his uncle at gunpoint. The youth was held for $700,000 ransom in a southwestern Miami house.

Police rounded up a dozen men in the raid and two other raids in Dade County. In one of the raids, authorities wounded two men in an exchange of gunfire. One died later.

Detectives still were searching for two other men.

Police said the members of drug ring claimed Martinez's mother owed them a debt for narcotics bought from the ring. She was not identified and has not been charged with any crime.

Police had planned to fake a ransom drop Tuesday night but changed plans because the house where the youth was held "was in an area we couldn't secure," said Arthur Nehrbass, commander of the Dade County police Organized Crime Bureau.

Officials said they heard the kidnappers planned to execute the child and his grandmother, who was to deliver the ransom.

"We then went to a backup plan to rush the house," Nehrbass said.

Three surprised kidnappers, awaiting the ransom armed with machine guns, surrendered without incident at the house, Nehrbass said. Andrew was found unhurt in a bedroom.

A few minutes later in a follow-up raid in northwestern Miami, police arrested three more men. Another fled in a car, firing at officers, and was believed to have been hit in return fire, officials said.

Meanwhile, a third police unit converged on another house at a third location and was greeted by machine-gun bursts, Nehrbass said.

In the exchange of fire, Moises Fardy, 34, was fatally wounded. Ramon Vasquez, 26, was hit in the hand. A third man fled on foot and was apprehended a few blocks away, and police arrested another man who was en route to the house.

At the same time, police arrested two more men after a high-speed chase in Miami Springs following a shootout.

The twelfth suspect was arrested Wednesday police said.

Police spokesman Bob Johns said the abduction in response to the drug debt "happens in Latin countries with different members of the family being kidnapped."

The ransom demand inflated from $60,000 to $700,000. The family originally hoped to raise the money and handle the abduction themselves, but they called police after four days as the demands escalated, police said.

As many as 26 agents from the crime bureau worked on the case.

Thanks to a "subsidy" in the form of three low interest bond programs, Midland's home construction business has soared since 1979.

You're in good hands...

EDITOR'S NOTE: Two years ago, residents on the low end of the income scale were feeling the pinch of escalating housing costs and unavailability of units. Today, housing is ranked as the city's worst problem. This is the fifth of an eight-part series focusing on what is — and isn't — being done to resolve the situation.

By LANA CUNNINGHAM
Assistant City Editor

To paraphrase a famous saying by Gertrude Stein, "A handout is a handout is a handout."

It can be a handout in the form of rental subsidy for low-income citizens. It can be a handout as a low-interest loan on a house for middle-income people. Or, it can be a handout in the form of tax-free bonds which are purchased by high-income and high tax-bracket residents.

Cunningham

Turn it upside down and inside out. Any way you look at it, it is a form of subsidy, say some Midlanders.

But the middle- and high-income residents who take the subsidies are the ones protesting rental assistance to the low-income people. The "subsidies" in question center around a low-interest housing bond program and a rental assistance plan for persons whose incomes rank at the lower range of the spectrum.

Midland has the reputation of being the only city and county in Texas which has sponsored three revenue bond programs in which $75 million in bonds were sold to fund low-interest home loans. When the housing slump slugged the rest of the nation into a building daze, Midland's home construction business picked up and soared in late 1979 and early 1980 with the first bond program.

THE DEMAND FOR more money led to the other two programs. And now, the county is preparing to sponsor another bond program while the city is undertaking a similar method of low-cost financing for apartment complex developers.

In addition to less expensive conventional housing and mobile homes, apartments are seen as one means of easing Midland's housing shortage. The advantage to apartments is that a complex can be built in a matter of months and house hundreds of people.

Ray Moudy, president of Citizens Savings & Loan Association noted that "with all the office space under construction, the observation we've made is the people who are going to work in those offices aren't here yet. And when they come, we won't have housing unless we start planning now."

A report prepared by the Midland Chamber of Commerce shows that projects along Loop 250 will house 18,011 persons. But the office projects looked at in the report didn't include the high-rise office buildings going up downtown and the number of people expected to sit at those desks.

Harry Clark, who was chairman of the Midland Housing Authority, the Midland Housing Finance Corporation and the Midland County Housing Finance Corporation before he moved to San Angelo in late July, viewed Midland as being 4,000 housing units short. Because of that, he spurred the county and city finance corporations into pushing for more bond issues — the city to concentrate on apartments and the county on houses.

THE IDEA FOR the revenue bond program started back in 1977 in Chicago. It had moved into Louisiana and Arkansas by early 1979 when Clark heard about it. The local Housing Authority pursued the idea, but had to switch it to the city's Housing Finance Corporation when Gov. Bill Clements signed a bill prohibiting the housing authorities from undertaking such projects.

At first, Clark recalled, local financial institutions opposed the plan, claiming it would be competition for their money. "But the interest rates began to go up," he said.

Under the bond program, lower interest rates brought the monthly payment down to an affordable limit for the homebuyer: the same philosophy behind subsidies.

By the time the program went off in December 1979, applicants were getting the money for 9⅛ percent interest. The conventional loan rate had jumped above 10 percent.

Seeing that money soon grabbed up and hearing cries for more, the county organized its own housing finance corporation and sponsored the last two bond issues. Those interest rates were 10¼ and 11⅛, respectively. The fourth is estimated to be about 12 percent, Clark said.

WITH THE BOND MONEY, 1,200 houses were purchased, many of them newly-constructed. Without it, city leaders shudder to think how much worse Midland's housing shortage would be today. "When other communities were floundering in the housing market, the three bond programs kept things going here," Moudy recalled.

The high interest rates had haltedapartment developers, but under the low-interest bond program, six complexes are planned. This will add 1,664 units to the city's already overflowing complexes.

Under this multi-family bond issue, the developers must seek a buyer for the bonds, rather than having the corporation do it for them.

And there's a twist added to this bond issue which makes it unique for Midland.

"We were the first and only city to ask apartment developers to give a commitment fee of 1½ percent to finance low-cost housing in south and east Midland. With the six apartment proposals, this should give us $700,000 to work with," said Clark.

In addition, the developers must set aside 20 percent of their units to rent to applicants whose income is less than 80 percent of the median family income, which is $17,000 a year, according to Clark.

RENTS SHOULD START about $350 a month for a one-bedroom unfurnished apartment. But Clark claimed the rents would have been higher without the low-interest bonds.

Fred Kester, secretary for the Midland Housing Authority, noted that several complexes had been planned before the multi-family bond program was announced. But when the financing was jacked up to 16 and 17 percent, the developers balked. They claimed by the time they built the apartments, rents would be too high.

Not all developers, however, have sought the low-interest bond money.

One New Mexico developer planned an 86-unit complex on vacant land along Delmar Street in west Midland behind the K-Mart store. Funding for it was to have come from the Department of Housing and Urban Development. To get the money, however, the stipulation was that 40 of the units would be reserved for low-income persons whose rents would be subsidized. Maximum income level for a family of four to qualify for the subsidized rent would have been $16,800. For a single person, the income maximum was $11,750.

The plan by Mary Rich Adams met with loud opposition during a City Council meeting April 14 in which the middle-income residents in that area said they were against the subsidies.

The complex won't be built, or at least not with HUD tax-free money. The latest word from the Dallas HUD office is that the money for such developments is gone.

BUT THE QUESTION arises as to whether or not subsidized rents on those apartments is any different than low-interest bond money for houses — which went to the middle income people, according to Clark — or the tax break the wealthy investors gained by buying the bonds.

"I can't deny it (bond money) isn't a subsidy to the people," Clark said. "But it's a legal loophole in the law which permits this. There's a philosophical viewpoint as to whether it's a handout in the same form as providing public housing for low-income people. One is a direct grant (rent subsidy). The other (bond program) is taking advantage of an opportunity. One is taking money from the federal Treasury and giving it out. The other is money that never would have made it to the Treasury."

Kester questioned how much money invested in the tax-free bonds would have gone into the Treasury in the form of income tax.

Disagreeing to an extent is Betty Sheeler, who manages Midland County's rental subsidy program.

"I don't see any difference between the single family revenue bond program and its lower house payments and rent subsidies for low-income people," she said. In both cases, the families fail to make enough money to pay the full rent or house payment.

"THERE IS NO difference. It's all a subsidy. And there's no difference on the subsidy that apartment developers are getting in northwest Midland for their complexes and the application the New Mexico woman had in for west Midland with some units for low income people."

Don Hellinghausen, president of Midland Housing Association, also views the low-interest housing bond money as a subsidy similar to the lower rent program.

"We all charge off interest on income tax," he said. "Oil depletion allowance is a subsidy. The public schools get federal money for programs and I don't hear anyone telling the school board to cut them out. It's all a subsidy."

Whether it be a subsidy in the form of a lower house payment or cheaper rent, the projects have benefitted the community, said Hellinghausen.

The housing bonds saved the city's savings and loan institutions, and boosted the builders and Realtors and carpet companies and "it just goes on and on," he explained.

But the end results of the housing bond program haven't pleased everyone. Michael Williams, who works with the Objectives for Midland program and serves on the County Housing Finance Corporation, criticized the lack of attention to low-income people in the bond programs.

"These bond programs were extremely necessary to this community. We would be suffering without them," he conceded.

"BUT THE DRAWBACK is that they (programs) didn't encourage construction of low cost housing. There was nothing in that program that encouraged building of low-cost units. And there never has been a program here for low-cost housing."

The bond program originally was sold to the public as a means of providing housing for workers coming into the community with the already announced Michelin and Pittsburgh Plate Glass plants.

"But Michelin and PPG haven't come yet. It was supposed to have a domino effect with money going for new homes and older homes left for people with the lower incomes. That didn't happen," he noted.

Williams is working to right that mistake through the apartment bond money. He is in charge of designing a program using the $700,000 from the 1½ percent commitment fee.

And at this point should begin a coordination with Williams and the city and county governments as those entities travel gingerly down a new path they detoured onto two years ago — a road which should lead to a plan that will assist low-income residents and to the ultimate goal of revitalizing south and east Midland.

Friday: The city's changing attitude toward public housing.

You can't say bond money "isn't a subsidy.... There's a philosophical viewpoint as to whether it's a handout in the same form as providing public housing for low-income people. One is a direct grant. Saturday's Roundup one of many 4-H programs

Bicycle Roundup sponsored by the Midland County 4-H organization, Texas Department of Public Safety and Midland Park Mall will be Saturday at the mall.

"Someone will be able to ride away on a brand new bicycle, or win a number of other prizes," said Cindy Mann, Midland county extension agent and director of the 4-H program.

A competitive series of courses, testing the rider's agility and ability to stop on target, will highlight the Roundup.

Participants do not have to own bicycles to compete. Sponsors will make an effort to encourage sharing bicycles among competitors.

Walt Disney characters Micky and Minnie Mouse, along with Pluto and Goofy, will assist in the presentation of awards to the top cycles in each of three age groups. They include seven years and under; eight to ten years; and eleven years and up.

A representative of Operation Identification will also be present to engrave bikes with the numbers of the participants' parents' driver's license.

Event begins at 9 a.m. at the mall.

According to Ms. Mann, the Roundup is one of many programs sponsored by 4-H.

"Today's 4-H program is for all youth—rural and urban—from all racial, cultural, economic and social backgrounds.

4-H reaches girls and boys in a variety of ways: as members of organized clubs, as participants in special interest groups, and as enrollees in short-term projects. It reaches them through television, camping and other educaional methods, and in programs planned to meet specific needs of youth and communities where they live, pointed out Ms. Mann.

4-H involves young people everywhere, she said. Youth organizations in more than 80 countries have adapted the 4-H idea.

Members participate in projects that give them knowledge of science, agriculture, home economics, personal development, community service, leadership and citizenship. Often this knowledge helps open the door to a future career. But the main purpose of 4-H is to help youth become effective citizens, emphasized Ms. Mann.

Some of the most popular 4-H projects are food and nutrition, clothing, home improvement, home grounds beautification, health, safety and leadership. New projects range from aerospace to theatrics and karate.

In rural areas, it can be livestock, crops, poultry, forestry, marketing and farm machinery. Popular with city, suburban and rural young people are projects in community development, electricity, photography, woodworking, grooming and personal development.

Persons interested in joining 4-H as a member or volunteer leader should contact Ms. Mann at 682-9481, ext. 435.

Educational programs conducted by the Texas Agricultural Extension Service serve people of all ages, regardless of socio-economic level, race, color, sex religion, or national origin.

Study shows no danger in sterilization

BOSTON (AP) — Animal studies have led to fears that vasectomies will cause heart disease, but a new study shows that this male birth control method is probably not dangerous.

When experimenters performed vasectomies on monkeys, they found that the animals quickly developed atherosclerosis, a buildup of fatty deposits on the blood vessels that leads to heart attack and stroke.

But Dutch researchers say this may not happen in humans.

In Thursday's New England Journal of Medicine, a team from the University Hospital Dijkzigt in Rotterdam described their research on 24 newly sterilized men.

They measured levels of cholesterol, which contributes to atherosclerosis, before the vasectomies and again three months later. They found no signficant change in the amount of cholesterol in the men's blood.

DEAR ABBY

'Pregnant virgin' not a contradiction of terms

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: I just read your new booklet, "What Every Teen-Ager Ought to Know," and I think it's probably the best $2 investment a teen-ager can make. Although I'm no longer a teen-ager, I think it's wonderful the way you explain the facts of life to young people.

I was especially glad that you told girls it was possible to get pregnant without going all the way. I had never seen it in print, but I know it's true because it happened to me. (My mother didn't believe me at the time, and even after the doctor who delivered my baby told her that I was still a virgin, she refused to believe it.)

I will never forget going to a birthday party when I was 16. A bunch of us kids had drunk a lot of beer, and a 17-year-old boy I hardly knew drove me home. He stopped at a secluded area for a little innocent making out. One thing led to another, and before I knew it, I was in a situation I couldn't handle. When he couldn't talk me into going all the way, he tried to force me, but I fought and clawed and kicked. He didn't succeed, but he came close.

The following month I thought I had some kind of infection because I missed my period. After three months, I went to a doctor, and when my tests came back from the lab I thought there had been a mix-up. I knew I couldn't be pregnant because I was still a virgin.

Well, the doctor said it's possible to become pregnant without actual penetration if the male releases the sperm close enough to the female's vaginal opening for the sperm to "swim up" and meet the ovum. Then the egg is fertilized and pregnancy occurs.

When I told the boy I was expecting his baby, he laughed, his mother laughed, and his whole family thought I was trying to pin something on him that was not his doing. (I never did convince him that the baby was his.)

Today, that "baby" is the prettiest 17-year-old girl you could ever want to see. She never had a father to enjoy her, but she has a mother who loves her very much.

So, Abby, please keep telling teen-agers that they don't have to go all the way to get pregnant. I know. — I WAS A PREGNANT VIRGIN

DEAR ABBY: My husband deserted me in Oklahoma 20 years ago. He went to Detroit and married another woman without even divorcing me. Twelve years later I was granted a divorce on the grounds of desertion.

Well, Abby, in my religion I believe that we are still married in the eyes of God until death do us part, and I will not be free to marry again until he dies.

I don't even know whether he is living or dead, and I wonder if there is a way I can find out when he dies. We are both 13 years old. — MARRIED FOR LIFE

DEAR MARRIED: Get in touch with his nearest kin or a close relative. Even a close friend will do. Ask to be notified in the event of your ex-husband's death. And it wouldn't hurt to keep checking back with them at least once a year in case they forget.

Quick and easy liquid blender breakfasts

By CLARE BARRETT
Copley News Service

This world is full of breakfast skippers. They don't have the time or the appetite for the day's most important meal.

Actually, there relly is no need to sit down for the traditional harvest hand's repast for modern city folk who've just slept for eight hours and will be confined to a desk for the next eight. Instead, you can create your own liquid eye-opener from fresh fixin's in your blender in less than a minute.

The basics of blender breakfasting are simple. You'll need a starter liquid, usually fruit juice or milk. For a thick, creamy texture, count on a banana, frozen fruit or ice cubes.

You'll probably want to sweeten milk-based smoothies with honey or molasses or extra fruit, while one made with juice is sweet enough on its own. A banana and a little water to start the blender will work as well as a beveage to get things going, as will watermelon or cantaloupe by itself.

Frozen, unsweetened strawberries will give your drink a gorgeous pink color, and if you don't mind sacrificing beauty for chocolate flavor, a tablespoon of carob powder (a natural chocolate substitute that can be purchased at health food stores) goes delightfully with a strawberry whiz-up.

If smoothie ingredients are kept together on a specific cupboard shelf and refrigerator section, it will keep down the time you need to spend on busy mornings. With everything at hand, kids can even custom-create their own soda fountain yummies.

Although these drinks can be prepared the night before, they're better buzzed up fresh since blenderized food oxidizes rapidly. In a pinch, the blender breakfast can go to work with you in a thermos or jar, but if you've used frozen fruit or ice cubes for thickness, expect the drink to thin out as melting sets in.

SKINNY SHAKE

6 ozs. fruit juice OR 1 banana, plus a little water

1 cup frozen, unsweetened strawberries

One-third cup powdered skim milk OR 2 tbsps. protein powder

1 tbsp. toasted wheat germ

Blend at high speed to desired consistency. Thin with water if you need to. The calorie count is less than 275. Other optional additions include a tablespoon of bran or flaxseed for regularity, a tablespoon of sunflower seeds, nutritional yeast or carob powder.

QUARTERBACK'S QUART

8 to 10 ozs. whole milk

1 to 2 tbsps. peanut butter

1 egg, optional.

One-third cup skim milk powder, optional

2 tbsps. protein powder

One-fourth cup toasted wheat germ

1 large, ripe banana

2 tbsps. honey or light molasses

1 tbsp. nutritional yeast

Blend until smooth and creamy. Be sure that milk is very cold. If your quarterback is a milk drinker but not a fruit eater, use eight ounces orange juice instead of milk as the liquid foundation for the drink (honey could be cut or eliminated) or add a cup of strawberries for vitamin C. The basic recipe, including the optional egg and skim milk powder, is around 1,000 calories and packed with protein, calcium, iron, potassium, B-complex and vitamin E.

TROPICAL TREAT

6 to 8 ozs. pineapple juice

2 tbsps. grated fresh or dried unsweetened coconut

One-third cup skim milk powder and-or 1 to 2 tbsps. protein powder

1 small banana, ripe

1 tbsp. sunflower seeds or raw cashews

1 tbsp. toasted wheat germ, optional

Blend until smooth. If using dried coconut, you may wish to soak it overnight in a little water. For a frothier shake, choose a vey ripe banana, peel it and freeze it overnight. And if you're a millionaire or want to feel like one, use macadamia instead of sunflower seeds or raw cashews!

Fresh caught or fresh bought, grilled fish is great

Tasty fish recipes: Quite a 'catch'

Since fish is so plentiful during the summer season, why not prepare your "catch" on hot coals for a change of pace.

Gazpacho Fish Bundles is a tasty and colorful recipe that's ideal for fish fillets, whether fresh from your favorite store or freshly caught from your favorite lake. This recipe is especially suited for casual, hurry-up meals since it can be prepared ahead and packed in a cooler or assembled just before cooking on the grill.

A salad-like mixture of tomato, cucumber and green pepper is tossed together with oil and vinegar, then seasoned with an envelope of spaghetti sauce mix. This zesty marinade and vegetable in one adds a unique and appetizing touch to fish fillets. Best of all, individual packets of fish wrapped in foil mean no dirty skillet or grill to clean later.

Or if you're looking for ways to use small pieces of fish, when the fillets and even the fish aren't big enough for a fisherman to brag about, try Golden Fish Chowder. This is a great recipe for a camping trip. A hearty and appealing chowder can be made in minutes from staples such as a box of au gratin potatoes, cans of chicken broth and evaporated milk plus of course, chunks of fresh fish.

Coleslaw, crusty rolls, iced tea and bar cookies will complete a satisfying meal whether you serve grilled fish or the chowder.

GAZPACHO FISH BUNDLES

2 pounds pollock, Boston blue or other fish fillets
1 envelope (1½-ounce) spaghetti sauce mix
¼ cup vinegar
2 tblsp. oil
2 medium-size tomatoes, chopped
⅓ cup chopped green pepper
⅓ cup chopped cucumber
Croutons, if desired

Tear off 6 pieces of heavy-duty foil about 18 inches long; fole in half. Cut fish in 6 pieces; arrange one piece fish on each piece of foil. Stir together spaghette sauce mix, vinegar, oil, tomatoes, pepper and cucumber; place generous spoonful on each serving of fish. Sprinkle with croutons. Wrap foil around fish, using double folds. Place on grill 3 to 4 inches above hot coals. Grill 15 to 30 minutes, turning frequently, until fish flakes easily when pierced with a fork. 6 servings.

GOLDEN FISH CHOWDER

1 package (5½-ounce) au gratin potatoes
4 cups water
1 can (10¾-ounce) chicken broth
1 to 2 pounds fish fillets, cut in 1-inch chunks
⅛ teasp. allspice, if desired
1 can (13-ounce) evaporated milk
Parsley flakes

Combine potatoes and seasoning mix from package with water and chicken broth in large saucepan. Cover and simmer 15 minutes. Add fish and allspice. Simmer 5 minutes longer, until potatoes are tender and fish flakes easily when pierced with a fork. Add milk and parsley flakes; heat gently. 6 servings.

HINTS FROM HELOISE

When do we eat?

DEAR HELOISE:

Whenever I know dinner is going to be delayed I set my dinner table then put out a plate of raw vegetables, cut to munching size.

Somehow it eases the family's waiting until the meal is ready to serve and makes time go quickly.

The snacks can take the place of a salad course. They keep the "when do we eat?" queries unsaid, making preparation of a late dinner more unharried. — Norine Reed

+ + +

LETTER OF LAUGHTER

Dear Heloise: When you awake in the morning if you just feel like doin' nuthin', take your vacuum cleaner out of the closet and place it in the middle of the living room floor (conspicious from the front door, of course).

Tie your hair back, fix yourself a cup of coffee or tea, and crawl into your favorite chair, or back into bed.

When the doorbell rings — it always does when the house is a mess — all you have to say is, "Come on in. The house is a mess but I need a break from all this cleaning!" — Sneaky but Smart

Covers more evenly with very little mess. — Mrs. Richard Braithwaite

TOP TO BOTTOM

Dear Heloise: When I open a new can of shortening or coffee, I save the plastic lid from the old can and put it on the bottom of the new can.

Sure saves my cabinet shelf from nicks and scratches — Elma Bird

PLANT TAGS

Dear Heloise: Cut strips from the center section of a plastic bleach bottle. They make sturdy plant tags when marked with permanent, waterproof markers.

You can make markers to be placed in the soil or slip tags to wrap around the plant by cutting a slit at one end of the strip and slipping the opposite end through the slit. — Elizabeth Lyle

SAY 'AH-H-H'

Dear Heloise: If you need to check the throat of a sick child and he isn't very cooperative or is frightened, use a candy sucker (the small, safe kind, of course) for a tongue depresser.

It's so much easier (and more fun) this way. — Mrs. Dennis Cole

SHINY 'N' BRIGHT

Dear Heloise: A good substitute for polish to clean small brass fixtures is Worchestershire sauce.

Saturate a cotton ball with the sauce and wipe the fixture. Use a soft cloth to wipe clean. — Celia Ramirez

GETTIN' THE LAST DROP

Dear Heloise: When the mayonnaise jar is nearly empty and you need some for salad, put the salad into the jar and stir it around.

Every last drop will cling to the salad. — Virginia Davis

NEW USE FOR OLD TIES

Dear Heloise: I needed a facing to lengthen a pair of slacks. While looking through some boxes for something to use, I found some old neckties — one just the color of the slacks.

In no time at all, I had it ripped apart and pressed and it made a wonderful facing since ties are already cut on the bias. — Dorothy Stange

+ + +

Got a neat trick up your sleeve? Heloise's other readers would like to hear about it. Send it to Heloise care of this newspaper. She can't thank you individually but she will use the best hints in the column whenever possible.

DOUBLE DUTY

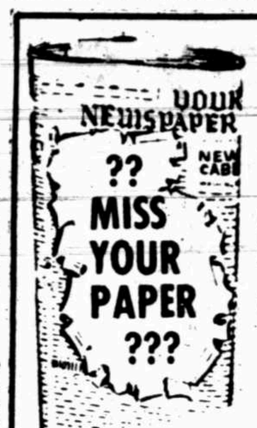

Dear Heloise: Excess strips cut from paper pattern pieces are wonderful to sew through, over and under shag materials, terry cloth, etc.

No more catching all those tiny loops on your pressure foot or the bottom teeth. — Wilma Despain

BEAUTIFUL FRUIT

Dear Heloise: Instead of sprinkling fresh sliced fruit (apples, bananas, peaches) with lemon juice to keep it from turning brown, I keep reconstituted lemon juice in a small bottle equipped with a sprayer top.

When the need arises, I just shake well and spray away. Works great!

Overcooked pasta has fewer calories

By MINNIE BERNARDINO
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

Q: I heard that pasta cooked for a longer period will have fewer calories than that cooked al dente (firm to the bite). Is this true or is it just another food myth?

A: True. Based on cooked weight, pasta cooked to the tender stage (about 14 to 20 minutes) will have less calories than pasta cooked al dente (8 to 10 minutes). The simple reason is that noodles will absorb more water and swell to a larger size and may lose more starch in the boiling water during the prolonged cooking time.

"The Nutritive Values of American Foods" (USDA Handbook No. 456) shows that 1 cup of cooked (tender stage) macaroni or spaghetti contains 155 calories while 1 cup of cooked (firm stage) macaroni or spaghetti contains 192 calories.

Q: I have come across many recipes lately requiring "seeded" tomatoes. How does one go about seeding tomatoes? Is this necessary?

A: The juice and seeds of fresh tomatoes could make a dish watery or the sight of the seeds may be unappealing to some cooks. To seed tomatoes, halve them crosswise and squeeze each gently in the palm of your hand to eject seeds and juice. If you want to save the juice, squeeze over a strainer place on top of a bowl discarding the seeds left on the strainer.

Q: I would like to try the recipe of Galactobourekos. It calls for farina which I haven't been able to find in any of the four supermarkets near me. What is the difference between farina and cream of wheat and can they be used interchangeably in this recipe?

A: Webster's dictionary refers to farina as "flour or meal made from cereal grains (esp. whole wheat), potatoes, nuts, etc. and eaten as a cooked cereal." In other words, farina means ground wheat, either cream of wheat (the light refined farina) or dark farina (the coarser unrefined whole grain).

Culinary artists balance chafing dish

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

The chafing dish doesn't need to be stored away between parties. It can hold the main course of a family supper or a small dinner party for intimate friends. Just add a crisp salad in complementary flavors and savory hot bread.

MOROCCAN SALAD

1 head Romaine lettuce, torn up
3 ozs. sliced salami, cut in strips
1 cup garbanzo beans
One and one-half cups pitted California ripe olives
1 avocado, sliced
1 small red onion, thinly sliced
1 cup feta or cream cheese, cut in cubes
1 tomato, cut in wedges
Combine ingredients. Toss with Italian dressing. Makes four to six servings.

CHINESE CHICKEN SALAD

4 cups cooked chicken, cut in strips
1 cup sliced celery
One and one-half cups fresh or canned pineapple chunks
1 cup pitted California ripe olives
1 small green or red pepper, thinly sliced
Green onions, sliced, for garnish
One-third cup sugar
One-third cup vinegar
2 tbsps. finely chopped onion
One and one-half tsps. dry mustard
One and one-half tsps. soy sauce
1 cup oil
1 tbsp. toasted sesame seeds
Mix together sugar, vinegar, chopped onion, dry mustard and soy sauce in blender. Add oil gradually. Stir in sesame seeds.
Marinate chicken strips in dressing at least one hour. Arrange with celery, pineapple, olives and pepper on lettuce-lined plate. Garnish with sliced green onions. Serve with dressing. Serves six.

CHILI PEPPER-CHEESE BREAD

1 pkg. active dry yeat
One-half cup warm water (105 to 115 degrees)
One-half cup lukewarm milk (scalded, then cooled)
Two-thirds cup margarine or butter, softened
2 eggs
1 tsp. salt
Two and one-half cups all-purpose flour (see note)
One-half cup cornmeal
1 cup shredded hot pepper cheese (about 4 ozs.)
2 to 4 chopped green chilies, drained on paper towels
Cornmeal
Dissolve yeast in warm water in large mixing bowl. Stir in milk, margarine, eggs, salt and one cup of the flour. Beat on low speed, scraping bowl constantly, 30 seconds. Beat on medium speed, scraping bowl occasionally, two minutes. Stir in remaining flour, one-half cup cornmeal, the cheese and chilies. Scrape batter from side of bowl. Cover, let rise in a warm place until double, about 30 minutes.
Stir down batter by beating about 25 strokes. Spread in greased two-quart round casserole. Cover, let rise until double, about 40 minutes.
Heat oven to 375 degrees. Sprinkle loaf with cornmeal. Bake until loaf is brown and sounds hollow when tapped, 40 to 45 minutes. Remove from casserole, cool on wire rack. To serve, cut into wedges with serrated knife.
Note: If using self-rising flour, omit salt.
Quick breads can be sensational, too.

OLIVE ONION BREAD

2 cups biscuit mix
2 tbsps. chopped parsley
Two-thirds cup cold water
2 cups thinly sliced onion
2 tbsps. butter
Salt and pepper
One-half cup sour cream
1 egg, beaten
1 tsp. dill weed
Three-fourths cup pitted California olives, sliced
Mix together biscuit mix, parsley and water. Spread in greased 8-by-8-inch pan. Saute onions in butter until golden, season to taste. Combine sour cream, egg, dill weed, onions and olives. Spoon over bread. Bake at 450 degrees for 20 minutes. Cut into squares.

DIXIE CORNMEAL FOLDOVERS

One and one-half cups all-purpose flour
1 tbsp. sugar
2 tsps. baking powder
One-half tsp. baking soda
One-fourth tsp. salt
One-half cup yellow cornmeal
One-fourth cup shortening
1 beaten egg
Three-fourths cup dairy sour cream
2 tbsps. melted butter
Stir thoroughly all-purpose flour, sugar, baking powder, baking soda and salt. Stir in cornmeal. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Blend together beaten egg and sour cream. Stir into dry mixture just until dough clings together. Knead gently on lightly floured surface, 10 to 12 strokes.
Roll or pat dough to one-fourth inch thickness. Cut with floured 2.5-inch biscuit cutter. Crease biscuits just off-center with back of knife, fold over so top portin overlaps bottom. Moisten edges with water, seal. Brush with melted butter. Bake on greased baking sheet at 425 degrees for eight to 10 minutes. Makes 20 to 24 foldovers.

Which potato is better?

Which type of potato is best for baking, boiling and frying?

Russets (coarse, brown skin) are best for baking, says Marilyn Haggard, a foods and nutrition specialist.

Reds, a general-purpose potato, are better boiled, mashed or fried, she says.

Ms. Haggard is on the home economics staff of the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, The Texas A&M University System.

Hot dog fans

Major league baseball fans are not the only people glad to see an end to the player's strike. Marketers of the game's favorite food—hot dogs—are smiling, too.

Fans consume an average 12,000 hot dogs per game, which adds up to 16.8 million during a regular baseball season, according to an item in the Texas Cattle Feeders Association newsletter.

They say everything has its place and there's a place for everything. Right? But what happens when you run out of places? When "everything" begins to fill up the attic and the basement, and piles up where you used to park your car, what then?
There is one solution to the problem that makes a lot of sense, and dollars, too. The answer is in the Classified pages of your newspaper. Here is the great merchandising mart for your stored items which are still serviceable and of value to someone.
A call to our Classified department will put you in touch with a congenial Ad-Visor. She will help you compose a low-cost Want Ad for any or all of your excess articles.
You will be surprised how many eager buyers will read your ad. They scan Classified constantly for just such bargain opportunities. Take inventory and then make that "Cash it in" call.

The return of the formal (and expensive) wedding

By ERMA BOMBECK

All you fathers of brides out there . . . and you all know who you are . . . please rise to your feet and say goodbye to an old friend . . . barefoot-in-the-fields-weddings.

Boy, those were the days, weren't they, Dad? A little knoll under a tree somewhere, a minister from the Hey Man What's Happening center, a flute player in a $12 pair of jeans and $5,000 worth of amplifiers.

The bride and groom arrived in a van painted with serpents on the side and after a toast of organic juices, they crushed their Styrofoam cups on the rock and took off to Big Sur.

It's been fun and it's been cheap, but it's all over.

According to the current Bride's magazine, barefoot-in-the-park weddings are out. After a decade of negative attitudes about marriage, today's couples are embracing the institution, flaws and all. A whopping 98 percent of brides queried in a survey said they want a formal wedding with all the trimmings.

Sir, maybe you'd better sit down.

They're not talking just a long, white dress and an urn of seasonal flowers on either side of the altar. They're talking symbolism and romance. Have you any idea how much symbolism and romance cost these days?

One page is devoted to having symbolic candles to light the entire church. (A birthday candle that measures an inch and a half and burns three seconds costs 59 cents!)

Diamonds are coming back, combined with a stone from a family heirloom or fashioned into a special design of their own choosing and your own paying.

Transportation to the church will be romantic with perhaps a horse and carriage ride to and from the ceremony. If a horse and carriage can't be found, a limousine is suggested.

Big bands for receptions are returning, and my goodness, what kind of a father would not tape the wedding so he could enjoy it at his leisure again and again and again?

Tradition will demand the bride carry flowers that are symbolic . . . and out of season, like violets in December and sprigs of poinsettia in August.

Oh, and look for the return of another tradition . . . the one where the father of the bride is taking his future son-in-law aside and saying, "I'll give you $10,000 and a van with serpents painted on the side if you'll run away and get married on a surfboard at Big Sur."

Cut up a lamb leg and save a lot of money

By MERLE ELLIS

Lamb production is up this year. It isn't up much, not nearly enough to make lamb a cheap meat. But it is up enough to keep leg of lamb in line with (and often less expensive than) other cuts in the meat case. Leg of lamb is dollars a pound less than a good beef roast or steak in my neighborhood and not a whole lot more than pork loin.

A lot of people overlook a leg of lamb because they think in terms of one meal at a time and worry about what to do with six pounds of meat to avoid eating leftovers for a week. You won't have to if you plan ahead and are willing to do a little cutting-up before you cook. A leg of lamb is easily divided to provide several different and delicious meals at a very reasonable price.

Lamb legs are merchandised in a number of different forms. The full leg is the whole leg of the lamb with the sirloin section left on. A 3/4 leg is the same leg with the sirloin section taken off. The butcher sells the sirloin chops at a premium. A half-leg usually is a full leg cut in half, giving one shopper the sirloin section and another the shank section. The only reason for cutting half legs is to keep the unit cost down for those who would like leg of lamb but wonder what to do with six pounds of meat.

The best leg of lamb buy, by far, is the full leg. It usually sells for no more per pound than a 3/4 or 1/2 leg, and there are countless things to be done with it.

First, have the butcher remove the sirloin chops. You will get four nice one-inch chops from the sirloin end of the full leg. These are exactly the same chops the butcher sells at a premium. But I have yet to find a butcher that wouldn't cut them from a full leg of lamb for you, free of charge. Ring the bell and ask!

The rest is up to you. What you have left is a 3/4 leg, and you can make several more meals from it if you bone it out. First, remove the aitch, that's what's left of the hip bone after the sirloin chops have been removed. Work the tip of your knife around the bone to loosen it, keeping the blade close to the bone. You should feel the knife blade against the bone as you cut. Remove the aitch bone and set it aside for soup stock.

The only bones that remain are the leg and shank. Start cutting at the exposed ball joint of the leg bone, where the sirloin chops were removed. Make a straight cut at the approximate center of the leg, until your knife blade reaches the next joint, which is known as the stifle. Work the point of your knife around the stifle joint, then continue to cut down the shank bone. Cut around the leg and shank bones to expose and loosen both. Lift the bones out and save them for soup stock along with the aitch bone.

You now have a boneless leg of lamb that you can use for a variety of different and delicious dishes. Spread the whole boneless leg flat on the barbecue grill for a marvelous barbecued butterflied leg of lamb.

If that's too much for your family, divide the individual muscles of the leg along the natural seams. Use the larger solid top round muscle for a small roast or cut it into slices for chops or cutlets, then barbecue the rest. Or, roll the bottom leg muscle for a roast for the oven or rotisserie. Use any trimmings for stew or braised lamb dishes.

A leg of lamb provides a lot of good eating at a reasonable price for any size family — if you are willing to cut up a bit before you cook!

Antique or junque?

By JAMES G. MCCOLLAM
Copley News Service

Dear Mr. McCollam: This clock was brought home by my husband who thinks it is neat. My first impulse was to throw it in the creek.

It is an Ansonia. The face is enamel. The base is iron with a marble finish. It has an outside escapement.

The whole thing is heavy and a dust collector. Is my first impulse correct or does it have some value? — S.E.M., Sellersville, Pa.

Dear S.E.M.: Your husband can frame this! Ansonia's "The Knight" mantel clock was made in the 1880s and is worth at least $500 in good condition.

These antique figural clocks are eagerly sought by collectors.

Dear Mr. McCollam: Could you possibly give me any information as to the maker and value of this pitcher?

It is 8.5 inches tall and has a Belleek-type color and glaze.

It bears the diamond-shaped British registry mark which is not clear enough to furnish any data. — G.E., Elgin, Ill.

Dear G.E.: Pitchers like this were made by U.S. Pottery, Bennington, Vt., Charles Cartlidge and Co., Greenpoint, N.Y., and several Staffordshire (England) potters, who failed to mark the pieces except for the registry mark.

It was made in the late 19th century in Staffordshire and would be worth from $100 to $200.

Quality is Sterling Vineyard's goal

By DAN BERGER
Copley News Service

Giant corporations covet California wineries, especially those prestige houses that make products wine lovers fawn over at $10 and $15 a bottle.

Wine makers, however, fear corporate involvement ruins the product, turns it into a moneymaker. That means making more wine, which implies lesser quality.

When Coca-Cola bought Sterling Vineyards a few years ago, some feared it would go tha direction. But a recent tour of the winery south of Calistoga in the Napa Valley proved quality remained the main goal, as Harry Teasley indicated with the following statement:

"If you want to make more corn flakes, you simply get more corn. But with wine, the amount of quality grapes is limited. You don't just order more. You can't make more without making it less good."

Teasley, president of Coke's The Wine Spectrum, is well informed about making wine. This Southern gentleman, built like a football fullback, has a corporate background, but he also has worked with the soil and knows the vines as well as he does boardrooms.

Coke bought Taylor Wine Co. in New York in 1977, its first venture into wine, ostensibly to gain control of something more than Taylor wines.

Said Teasley, "We knew that distribution was critical, and Taylor had one of the best distribution systems in the country."

By buying Taylor, Coke guaranteed itself an avenue to sales of its other products.

When The Wine Spectrum bought Sterling, Teasley admits, "A lot of people thought we'd come in and debauch the wine industry, but one of the first decisions we made at Sterling was to get rid of the 'Cellars' line (a lesser-priced line) and to drop the lesser varietals."

Quality, not quantity, is Sterling's goal.

Sterling recently bought a 120-acre ranch on Diamond Mountain — a steep, chalky hillside vineyard producing tiny quantities of high-quality grapes. Vineyard manager Tucker Catlin admits there exists the potential for erosion problems. And nothing guarantees the vines ever will produce even normal-size crops. But quality is high.

Sterling also has reduced its line of wines from eight to four — Sauvignon Blanc, Cabernet Sauvignon, Chardonnay, Merlot.

In many vineyards, Catlin is conducting experiments with various types of rootstock, irrigation, pruning. He's investigating different clones, trying to determine if narrow or wide spacing of vines affects quality.

When wine maker Ric Foreman left two years ago, Sterling hired Theo Rosenbrand and Sergio Traverso-Rueda. The former was longtime wine master at Beaulieu, working at the hand of Andre Tchelistcheff. Chilean-born Traverso has a Ph.D. in microbiology and a sensitive palate, and he may be the key to Sterling's future. He's a bright, intense man who believes maintaining a house style is critical. His Sauvignon Blanc is a case in point.

Taiwan's 'Ralph Nader' spurring controversy over tiny dried shrimps

By TINE CHOU
Associated Press Writer

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Tiny dried shrimps — a Chinese delicacy — have caused a big headache to Taiwan's "Ralph Nader," but have also helped him gain popularity and respect.

Chai Sung Lin, 45, recently created a storm of controversy after he discovered many dried shrimps sold in Taiwan contained fluorescent bleaching agents which could cause cancer.

His finding has sparked alarm and concern among consumers as well as fishermen who claimed they suffered great financial losses because of unsold fresh shrimps as a result of the discovery.

Dried shrimps, a delicacy in themselves and an important ingredient in Chinese cooking, are made from fresh ones by exposing them under sunlight. Chai, a professor of demography, said some of them were injected with fluorescent bleaching agents to prevent them from spoiling.

Chai, who founded Taiwan's Consumer Foundation, financed by private donations, in November 1980, stressed that fresh shrimps contain no such chemicals but his finding frightened people away from eating even the fresh ones.

Government officials dismissed the finding on grounds of insufficient scientific evidence, and accused Chai, the first person in Taiwan to launch a vigorous consumer-protection campaign, of "disturbing social stability and human confidence."

Chai countercharged that authorities have disregarded consumers' safety and insisted that the testing was conducted by qualified chemists.

He said the sole purpose of his campaign was to "warn consumers of life-threatening products and food before it's too late," adding that he had no intention of creating social instability.

But a spokesman of Taiwan's National Health Administration charged that Chai's finding was "merely preliminary," and said that careless announcements could cause "unnecessary alarm" among the public.

He said that further examinations by his organization had shown that no dried shrimps sold in Taiwan contained fluorescent bleaching agents.

However, many people in Taiwan have ignored the Health Administration's finding and preferred to believe in Chai. As a result, sales of dried shrimps have been drastically reduced.

Despite controversies, Chai declared that he had won the "battle of dried shrimps" because he had aroused consumers' awareness of their rights. Letters by the hundreds and telephone calls poured into his foundation to express support and encourage him to continue his fight for consumers.

Additionally, many newspapers and periodicals have heaped praise on him and his work, and one magazine dubbed Chai "Taiwan's Ralph Nader."

The issue of dried shrimps was not Chai's only battle for consumers. He has won several minor skirmishes. They include banning of harmful cosmetics, outlawing contaminated cooking oil, and stopping the sales of stale bread.

Beware of diet hucksters

By SHIRLEY BRIGHT BOODY
Copley News Service

What's wrong with today's fad diets?

Plenty.

Strange that the more bizarre they are, the more people seem to be taken in by them.

Remember the liquid protein diet fad a few years ago and the tragic numbers of people who died? The public needs and deserves some protection against these dangers that are allowed to be perpetrated against them for money. Currently, lawsuits seem to be the only recourse, but that is not enough. Thousands of people's health may be impaired cannot afford to sue the culprits, but will suffer both financially and medically trying to recover.

A current book that advises you to eat only one food on some days and specific fruits at certain times is absolute nonsense. It can cause severe diarrhea and could deplete your body of needed vital nutrients. You do not have to get sick to lose weight. Only the most gullible will waste their money on this one.

A widely promoted program virtually eliminates all fat, is very high in carbohydrates and low in protein, thus depleting some of the essential fatty acids needed by the body. Pernicious anemia can develop if vitamin B12 is deficient in the diet. Iron, folic acid, fat soluble vitamins and essential fatty acids seem to be all but ignored in this diet. It is so restrictive that depression and rebellion may develop. It claims to make you live longer, but even if you don't, it will sure seem longer.

The virtues of high protein are touted in yet another fat diet, which all but ignores the great contributions of fruits and vegetables to nutritional health. Fast weight loss is promised. If this occurs, a loss of potassium generally follows. Since fruits and vegetables contribute large amounts of the much-needed potassium, doesn't it make sense to include them in the diet? Especially during weight reduction.

Excessive protein from meats and eggs usually means excessive cholesterol, too, something that many overweight people are trying to avoid. Don't pin your hopes on this one either because as soon as you return to your regular way of eating, all the weight will come back. Why? Because you have't really changed your eating habits, you have just temporarily lost weight on a fad diet.

A while ago many people were led to believe that grapefruit had the magical power to dissolve fat and another fad diet was born..

Cold soup tips for easy dinner preparation

By CHRIS STUTZ
Hearst Feature Service

It's stiflingly hot, the fan is on the fritz, and you've spent a long day battling traffic, swatting flies, dodging disasters and chasing the kids. The last thing you want to do is turn on the oven and turn out a hot meal.

Relax. You can prepare for days like this, and it doesn't require a lot of planning. Humid August evenings are just perfect for light, simple dinners of cold soup and salad.

If your soup is substantial and your salad bowl brimming, all you need is a loaf of whole-grain bread or a basket of muffins and you can treat your family to a tasty, nutritious meal that provides a refreshing respite from plain old meat and potatoes.

Because your soups are made ahead of time and chilled, dinner preparation is especially quick and easy. You can toss some greens together for a salad in a matter of minutes, or you can even have that part of the meal made in advance. Brighten up your salad and increase its nutritional value by adding raisins, cheese, chopped, hard-cooked eggs, sliced mushrooms or strips of luncheon meat. Choose whole-grain breads, such as wheat and rye, or serve up some moist, healthful bran muffins.

Here are some suggestions for easy, chilled soups. They taste best served in chilled bowls.

GAZPACHO

2 small onions
3 cloves garlic
1 medium green pepper
2 medium cucumbers
5 medium tomatoes
3½ cups bread crumbs
¼ cup red wine vinegar
5½ cups water
1 tbsp. salt
1 tbsp. tomato paste
3 tbsps. olive oil

Peel and chop onions, garlic and green pepper. Peel, seed and chop cucumbers and tomatoes. Place chopped vegetables, bread crumbs, wine vinegar, water and salt in a large bowl. Pour, a little at a time, in blender and puree. Return to bowl; add tomato paste and oil. Mix well. Chill, tightly covered, for two hours or more. Garnish with a combination of chopped green peppers, onions, cucumbers or tomatoes and croutons. Serves eight.

VICHYSOISSE

4 tbsps. butter
1 onion, chopped
4 leeks, white part only, sliced fine.
2 stalks celery, chopped
2 medium potatoes, peeled and sliced
2 sprigs parsley
4 cups chicken stock
1 cup heavy cream
1 tbsp. chopped chives
salt and pepper

Melt butter in a large pot. Add onions, leeks and celery and cook over low heat until vegetables are translucent. Stir in potatoes, parsley and stock. Cook, partially covered, about 20 minutes, or until potatoes are tender.

Put the mixture in a food mill or blender and puree. Pour into a large bowl. Stir in cream and chill. Before serving, season to taste and garnish with chives. Serves four.

SEAFOOD BISQUE

1 can (10 ozs.) condensed tomato soup
1¼ cups whole milk
1 can (4½ ozs.) small shrimps
1 can (6 ozs.) crabmeat
salt and pepper
chopped chives

Beat soup and milk until smooth. Add seafood. Season to taste. Chill. top with chives before serving. Serves four.

STRAWBERRY SOUP

1 quart strawberries
¾ cup sugar
pinch salt
1 cup sour cream
1 cup dry red wine
4 cups cold water

Place berries, sugar, salt, sour cream and wine in blender. Pour into saucepan. Add water. Heat until thoroughly blended. Chill several hours before serving. Garnish with berry halves. Can be served as a change-of-pace first course or for dessert.

Cooking corner: 'Impossible' pie features salmon

By MARJORIE RICE
Copley News Service

This seems to be a year for anniversaries.

Tollhouse cookies are 100 years old, Gold Medal Flour marked a birthday and Bisquick, the baking mix that has become so commonplace that many cooks consider it an ingredient fo "from-scratch" biscuits, is 50 this year.

The General Mills company is marking the event with a barrage of recipes for the baking mix. You can use a favorite baking mix recipe if you want to substitute for the commercial product.

The firm is offering a 96-page booklet of recipes using the baking mix. It's available to "Bisquick Recipe Club" members. Members also get a quarterly newsletter and recipe cards for the $3 yearly dues. Send to General Mills, P.O. Box 1137, Minneapolis, Minn. 55460. The booklet also may be purchased at supermarkets for $1.75.

Here's a recipe I found especially appealing because it's easy, stretches a can of salmon (or tuna) to feed six, and is fast to fix.

IMPOSSIBLE SALMON PIE

1 cup sour cream
One-half tsp. dried dill weed
1 can (7.75 ozs.) salmon, drained and flaked (see note)
One-half tsp. dill weed
One and one-half cups milk
Three-fourths cup biscuit mix
3 eggs
One-half tsp. salt
One-fourth tsp. pepper
1 tsp. lemon juice

Combine the sour cream and one-half tsp. dried dill weed. Cover and refrigerate the sauce.

Preheat the oven to 400 degrees. Lightly grease a 9- or 10-inch pie plate. Sprinkle the salmon and remaining dill weed into the plate. Beat the remaining ingredients until they are smooth (15 seconds in a blender or one minute with a hand blender) and pour into the pie plate.

Bake the pie about 35 minutes, until it is golden brown and a knife inserted halfway between the center and edge comes out clean.

Let the pie stand five minutes before cutting. Serve it with the sour cream sauce and refrigerate any leftovers. Makes six to eight servings.

GAZPACHO GRANADA

6 large tomatoes
2 cucumbers
One-half cup green pepper
One-half cup scallions
1 clove garlic
2 cups tomato juice
One-third cup olive oil
One-fourth cup wine vinegar
2 tbsps. lemon juice
Salt, pepper, Tabasco to taste
Parsley
Tortilla chips

Peel the tomatoes and chop them finely. Peel, seed and chop the cucumbers. Mince the green pepper and scallions. Press the garlic.

Mix the tomatoes, cucumbers, green pepper, scallions and garlic and stir in the tomato juice, olive oil, vinegar and lemon juice. Season the soup to taste with salt, pepper and Tabasco.

Chill the soup three or four hours, or more. Serve it very cold. (An ice cube may be added to each bowl.)

CREAM OF POTATO SOUP

8 large potatoes
1 lb. bacon
4 onions, chopped
One-half gallon milk
1 clove garlic
3 tsps. seasoned salt
One and one-half tsps. celery salt
One-half tsp. pepper

Peel and boil the potatoes in water barely to cover.

Saute the bacon and drain it well, reserving the fat. Crumble the bacon and set it aside. Saute the onions in the fat.

Heat the milk. Puree the cooked and drained potatoes and onions in a food processor or blender. Add them to the milk. Stir in the bacon and seasonings and heat the soup through. Makes about three-fourths gallon.

Errors in wine judging influenced by psychological limitations of environment

By NATHAN CHROMAN
(c) 1981, The Los Angeles Times

Tasting, judging and enjoying wine can be a complicated affair. My own techniques seem to change frequently, especially as experience broadens and taste preferences narrow.

The "granddaddy" of all scoring examinations is a 20-point organoleptic test created by the University of California, Davis Enology Department. The scale includes an evaluation of odor, acids (tartaric, malic, lactic, et al.), sugar, appearance and color, taste, finish, acescence (high volatile acidity). These characteristics, as well as others, are assigned points for a total of 20.

While the examination is fun, there are frequent taster errors due to physiological and psychological limitations regardless of whether the testing takes place in the home or a well-equipped sensory laboratory. Proper illumination, elimination of other odors and contrasting tastes, along with the physical well-being and experience of the taster, are all critical factors.

There is one factor, however, that I feel should be included in the examination for which an allocation should be made of at least 10 points. It is not a technical concept, nor even a wine characteristic, but in the final analysis it may be the most dominating. I intend to write UC Davis immediately to urge this 10 point inclusion.

The factor is so important I wonder why it has not been done before. It is simply that since most wine lovers do not taste in a clinical laboratory but rather in homes and restaurants, any sensory examinatins should include a separate score for tasting companions, that is, with whom is the wine being shared.

How often is the cry heard that a prized bottle is being saved for just the right moment, especially for just the right person? It is a time-honored wine goal that frequently does not materialize and great cellars are left bulging with oxidized wines. Nevertheless, enjoying the right bottle with a loved one does more for wine enhancement than modern wine making equipment, enologists' genius and Mother Nature's favors combined.

When the grape bit me in the middle '50s, there were few wine groups around. New wine drinkers had a difficult time being admitted to ranking social wine groups while, in other cases, it was hard to locate serious wine lovers. Most were men while women seemed comfortable coming to a dinner occasionally but not to get directly involved.

Things have changed. Women are doing considerable wine buying these days. Specialty wine shops advise that many of the best bottles are bought by women for ther personal cellars. In supermarkets most of the wine shopping is done by the women and that may be the reason that many have upgraded their stocks. So-called "boutique" bottles are now finding their way into large grocery chains.

Market researchers are now in a state of confusion trying to figure out what is the ideal taste for these heretofore overlooked wine appreciators. I recall years ago our own wine and food society attempting to organize a "ladies" dinner and selecting wines according to the purported female taste. A light or sweeter-styled wine was always favored over a robust, heavy red or a "too costly" Montrachet. Nothing could have been further from the truth.

Younger women seem to be enjoying wine more, too. I have encountered many in their early 20s who think nothing of spending $10 or $20 a bottle for the taste they seek.

Women throughout the United States have made their contribution. Many were wine-widows for years and washed glasses for wines they did not even taste because of male-dominated wine tasting groups. It has been a long and arduous trail women everywhere have taken to become recognized as superior grape lovers and tasting companions. Come to think of it, perhaps I hould ask for more than 10 points for such companionship.

Updating old-fashioned cobblers

By CECILY BROWNSTONE
Associated Press Food Editor

Of course old-fashioned American cobblers, pandowdies, grunts and slumps made with fresh peaches are great desserts. And during the summer every family deserves some feasts that feature these.

But there are new sorts of fresh peach desserts making the rounds that often fit better into today's lifestyle than older recipes. The new combinations are quick-to-assemble and light in flavor and texture. Here are four of these we have tried with resounding success.

Skin, pit, and slice ripe unbruised peaches; cover them with dry white wine sweetened to taste with sugar or honey and flavored with freshly ground nutmeg. We like to use a glass bowl, tightly covered with saran, for marinating the peaches in the refrigerator. Treated this way, the peaches have not discolored even after being chilled overnight.

A famous American private chef, of French descent, likes to treat fresh peaches this way. He peels, halves and pits them and then poaches them in a sugar syrup. Just before serving, he fills the peach cavities with dry macaroons, crushed into crumbs and mixed with melted butter, and heats these stuffed peach halves under the broiler. His last touch: he douses the hot peaches with heated kirsch (clear cherry brandy) and sets them aflame.

A third dessert well worth making for guests. Crush frozen sweetened raspberries (thawed) and put them through a fine-mesh strainer to eliminate seeds; add kirsch to taste and chill. At serving time, arrange sliced fresh peaches around vanilla ice cream and top with the raspberry sauce.

Our fourth offering takes advantage of the interest by present-day American cooks in using liqueurs. Don't ask us the whys and wherefores of this "liqueur explosion." Our guess: it's an offspring of Americans' comparatively new interest in win.

Of all the liqueurs, one called amaretto — made by several companies — seems to have wakened particular interest. Here then is a peach dessert made with amaretto. It was much enjoyed at our house.

PEACHES WITH AMARETTO SAUCE

Two 3-ounce packages cream cheese, soft ½ cup plain yogurt
¼ cup amaretto liqueur
3 tablespoons sugar
3 medium to large or 6 small to medium fresh peaches (about 1 pound)
1 tablespoon orange juice
Fresh mint leaves for garnish, if desired

In a medium bowl beat together the cream cheese, yogurt, amaretto liqueur and 2 tablespoons of the sugar until blended; makes 1½ cups amaretto sauce. Cover and chill — overnight if you like.

Shortly before serving, peel and pit the peaches. Slice fairly thin. Toss with the remaining 1 tablespoon sugar and the orange juice. Refrigerate.

At serving tme, divid peaches among 4 individual dessert dishes. Spoon the amaretto sauce over the fruit or pass the sauce, garnished with the mint leaves, separately.

Makes 4 generous servings.

Historical fondness for omelets provides foundation for talent, skills in preparing egg dishes in Italy

By TOM HOGE
AP Wine and Food Writer

In ancient Rome, cooks used to whip up a batter of eggs, flour and grated cheese and toss the lot into a boiling broth. The mixture formed flakes when it hit the brew and they called it Stracciatella or "little rags."

Italians have always had a talent for preparing eggs, whether it be the simple act of dropping one into a glass of wine as a bracer when setting out on a journey or the delectable omelet called frittata so popular in that country.

Italians have had a fondness for omelets ever since the early Romans mixed beaten eggs with honey and served them as a dessert.

In Padua today, omelets are served flavored with fine herbs, and in Florence beaten eggs are poured over artichoke hearts and the mixture baked in the oven.

But Italy's egg dishes aren't limited to omelets. In Genoa, a favorite is a delightful tart filled with hard-boiled eggs and spinach mixed with a soft cheese made from milk curd.

The cooks of Genoa also stuff a galantine of boned veal breast with hard-boiled eggs and pistachio nuts that is said to be delicious.

An old friend of mine became fond of Italian cooking during his career as a foreign correspondent. He sent me an intriguing recipe for an Italian dish called Eggs in Purgatory.

¼ pound butter
5 medium mushrooms
3 medium onions, chopped
1 35-ounce can Italian peeled tomatoes
2 teaspoons sweet basil
2 teaspoons mixed Italian seasoning
Salt and pepper
1 small can tomato paste, if desired
6 eggs

Saute mushrooms in two tablespoons butter till golden, then reserve. In same pan, with another two tablespoons of butter, saute onions. Return mushrooms to skillet with onions and add peeled tomatoes. Simmer 1 hour adding remaining butter, basil and Italian seasoning. If mixture is too thin for your taste, add tomato paste. In smaller skillet place 6 cups of tomato mixture and heat to just below boiling. Place the 6 eggs in depressions made with spoon in tomato mixture, cover and cook 4 to 5 minutes. Remove eggs to plates with spatula, allowing about equal amount of sauce around each egg. Serve with sweet or hot Italian sausage, toasted Italian bread and green salad. Serves 6. Good with a chilled mug of beer.

Long and short of it

By BETTY W. KINSER
Copley News Service

If you have been given the task of shortening a cuffed long sleeve, you are faced with a choice — remove the cuff and cut it off from the bottom, or take the sleeve out of the armhole and cut it off at the top. Neither choice is a real winner.

If you decide to cut the sleeve off at the top, take heed. There are rules.

Remove sleeve from armhole, making note of the seam allowance used. Open underarm seam of sleeve far enough to allow top part of sleeve to lie flat.

Pin flat sleeve cap to paper and draw a pattern. Cut out pattern, pin it to sleeve, moving it down to the new length. Re-cut sleeve cap. Re-stitch underarm seam. Reset sleeve in armhole.

Questions may be addressed to Mrs. Betty Kinser, Copley News Service, in care of this newspaper.

A member of the union Solidarity stands guard Wednesday in front of a Warsaw printing plant during a two-day printers' strike. The sign says, "DSP Is Not Printing Newspapers."

Poland's printers return

WARSAW, Poland (AP) — The nation's printers went back to work today, ending their two-day strike demanding increased access to the media for the independent labor federation Solidarity, a union spokesman said.

"The action of press-less days is over," said a communique issued today by the striking workers at Warsaw's major printing plant.

Solidarity leader Lech Walesa visted the plant early today to encourage workers to return to work in the spirit of unity, a spokesman said.

"Mst of us ould like to carry on with the stoppage, but union unity comes first," said a spokean at the plant, where workers began preparing Friday's editions of the nation's official Communist Party paper.

But for the second day, newspapers didn't make the streets in Warsaw, where Poland's major dailies are printed and published.

Editors of Zycie Warszawy, Warsaw's most popular newspaper, decided not to prepare an edition today after a blockade by the printers prevented distribution of 5,000 copies run off Wednesday despite the strike. Instead the editors went to work on the paper to be published Friday, after the strike ended.

U.S. sends Medfly team to Japan

By TOM EASTHAM
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON -- "It wasn't easy -- and it's not fully worked out yet," said Deputy Assistant Secretary of Agriculture John Ford -- who set off this morning on an urgent, super-sensitive mission to convince Japan the U.S. can control the Mediterranean fruit fly.

Ford was talking about the agreement -- worked out with Japanese officials yesterday after long hours of meetings -- to modify its threatened quarantine of all California produce. The Japanese -- largest importer of California's produce -- agreed to block only fruits and vegetables from those areas infested by the ruinous Medfly.

Ford and a team of four U.S. Department of Agriculture technicians are flying to Tokyo, and expect to have their first meeting with Japanese agricultural officials on Friday. Their purpose is to reassure the worried Japanese.

Asked what the team's approach will be, Ford said it might be "sort of dangerous" to be specific in advance, but commented:

"We deeply share their concern about the potential of getting Medflies in Japan. So I guarantee you everything we represent to them -- in meetings with them -- will be a joint concern for the Medfly going to Japan and our intense effort to be sure that does not occur."

At the same time, he said, the U.S. officials will seek to protect what he called "the exportability" of California's fruits and vegetables. The USDA has said that foreign embargoes on California produce could cost the state up to $500 million, and the Reagan administration is determined to head off that possibility.

Until noon yesterday, Japan planned to institute a quarantine prohibiting importation of any California fruits and vegetables that had not undergone fumigation or cold treatment. There is not enough equipment available to treat all California produce, and the process would be extremely time-consuming and costly to both growers and consumers.

The Japanese compromise came after two days of intensive talks which involved Ambassador Yoshio Okawara, Deputy Secretary of State William P. Clark, Agriculture Secretary John Block and other officials of both departments.

However, while the Japanese representatives agreed to accept products certified to be safe and from California areas not infested, the agreement fell short of solving the entire problem. At this point, the country still will not import any fruits or vegetables from Medfly-infested areas.

Areas currently being regulated include Santa Clara, Alameda and San Mateo Counties and portions of Stanislaus County in the northern San Jaoquin Valley -- all in the northern part of the state.

The technical task force will ask the Japanese to approve the USDA's list of Medfly hosts -- which is limited to 46 fruits and two vegetables, but excludes a few fruits and most vegetables.

Virtually all fruits host the destructive pest -- except for melons, strawberries, smooth-skinned, sour lemons and almonds without husks. But only two vegetables -- tomatoes and bell peppers -- are hosts.

The Japanese at this point still want to quarantine all produce -- including non-host vetegables like lettuce, carrots, cauliflower and corn.

"The main thing is to be sure their scientific people and our scientific people understand the issue fully -- one to the other," said Ford. "One, that they understand fully what we are assuring them of and secondly that we get a better feeling for their geographic and agricultural concerns."

Ford said since good will has been expressed by both sides, he does not expect the mission to Japan to take very long, but was clearly willing to stay as long as it takes.

The entire Medfly eradication program in California will be reviewed for the Japanese, explained spokesperson Susan Hess of the USDA's Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service, in an effort to assure them that their country and agriculture can be protected.

"They put great importance in our visiting them and explaining what we are doing to protect their agriculture," she said. "That is of extreme importance to them."

In their joint statement yesterday, the two cabinet officers said the U.S. "recognizes the legitimate concerns of the Japanese government in this matter," and pledged to work cooperatively with it and to "deal effectively" with its concerns.

Patricia Hearst planning book on SLA

NEW YORK (AP) — Newspaper heiress Patricia Hearst, who served a prison sentence after being kidnapped by a terrorist group, plans to publish a book on the incident, Doubleday & Co. has announced.

The publisher said Wednesday Miss Hearst has been working on "Every Secret Thing" in collaboration with author Alvin Moscow, who wrote the best seller "Collision Course," about the sinking of the Andrea Doria. Moscow also was the ghost writer of Richard Nixon's "Six Crises."

Doubleday said Miss Hearst, who now is married to her former bodyguard Bernard Shaw and has a child, chose her book's title from a passage in Ecclesiastes 12:24: "For God shall bring every work into judgment, with every secret thing, whether it be good, or whether it be evil."

Miss Hearst was kidnapped by the Symbionese Liberation Army in 1974, became a member of the terrorist group and later was captured. She was released from prison in 1979.

NEW YORK (AP) — "With a name like Resin the Bow, I found the horse irresistible, and so I bet five bucks on him," says Mitch Miller in describing his day at the races in Saratoga.

He won $46.

Miller was in Saratoga last weekend to conduct the Philadelphia Orchestra, and the fourth race at the track last Friday was called "The Mitch Miller" in his honor. It was in that race that Resin the Bow was running.

Miller

"I don't know anything about horses, but any musician would be attracted to one named for what fiddlers do with a cake of resin before a performance," Miller said.

Miller said he was happy that the horse won the race, and he noticed many others shouting for joy had familiar faces.

"Then I realized they were all members of the Philadelphia Orchestra and that as musicians they had done the same thing I had," he said.

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Jihan Sadat, wife of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, has been chosen for an award from the St. Boniface General Hospital Research Foundation, its chairman says.

Sadat

Foundation Chairman Campbell MacLean said Wednesday he has not been told, however, whether Mrs. Sadat will attend the annual fund-raising dinner, to be held sometime this fall.

The foundation presents an award each year to a world personality who has made a major contribution to medical research. MacLean said Mrs. Sadat was chosen for her extensive work in hospitals in Egypt.

The first award was given to Dr. Jonas Salk in 1976. Others have gone to Dr. Christiaan Barnard, Britain's Prince Philip, Rosalynn Carter and entertainer Danny Thomas.

ORLANDO, Fla. (AP) — The chief of Buckingham Palace security for the recent royal wedding says things will be kind of dull when he returns to England from his Florida vacation.

Michael Greene, 48, chief inspector of police at Queen Elizabeth's London residence, says the July 29 wedding of Prince Charles and Lady Diane was the toughest project he's ever handled. But he's satisfied with the results.

"It was one of the most successful operations I've ever been involved in — and the happiest," says Greene, relaxing in the nearby community of Clermont with family friends. He returns home later this week.

"I don't think I'll ever match that in my service," he said.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — First lady Nancy Reagan says she'll write a book on relationships between foster grandparents and their children.

Mrs. Reagan discussed her plans during a one-hour taping of the "Mike Douglas Show" Wednesday, which focused on one of Mrs. Reagan's favorite causes, the Foster Grandparent Program.

The book, "To Love a Child," will be published next year by Bobbs-Merrill. Royalties will be donated to the Foster Grandparent Program, with which Mrs. Reagan has been associated since 1967.

Brady's fourth surgery designed to seal leakage from brain cavity

By MICHAEL PUTZEL
Associated Press Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — White House press secretary James S. Brady faced a fourth major operation today in hopes of sealing a leak in his brain cavity that has slowed his recovery from the head wound suffered in the assassination attempt on President Reagan.

In a procedure described by a medical spokesman as major but not particularly delicate, surgeons said they would attempt to seal the leak, which has allowed the spinal fluid to enter Brady's sinuses.

Brady

Brady was described by friends as in good spirits on the eve of the operation, and he was permitted to leave the hospital for a dinner with friends two nights before the surgery.

Dr. Dennis O'Leary, clinical dean at George Washington University Hospital where Brady has been treated since the shooting, said the persistent leakage of fluid presents a risk of infection.

The operation, performed by Dr. Arthur Kobrine, the neurosurgeon credited with saving Brady's life in the dramatic hours after the March 30 shooting, and Dr. Norman L. Barr Jr., a nose and throat specialist on the hospital faculty, was expected to take several hours.

Brady's physicians have been concerned for some time about incomplete healing of the normally airtight seal around the brain. Less than a month after the shooting, the wounded press secretary underwent surgery to repair a membrane leak which triggered a potentially dangerous buildup of air pressure on his brain.

A few weeks later, Brady was confined to a reclining position in bed for 10 days after doctors thought a few drops of spinal fluid had leaked from his nose. Although they hoped that leak would heal itself, Brady experienced another discharge of fluid on Aug. 3 after he suffered a major epilepsy-like seizure that apparently created a sharp increase in pressure inside the skull.

A White House statement Tuesday said small amounts of fluid have continued to leak into Brady's sinuses through his bullet-pierced skull since the seizure occurred.

To correct the problem, doctors planned to make an incision near the bridge of the nose and another through the nasal passage to reach the bullet-shattered, bony sinus area in front of and beneath the brain. There, they would search for and remove any dead tissue and bone fragments that might be preventing the last areas of the bullet track from healing.

Doctors then planned to pack the area with live, fatty tissue that they hope will finally seal the leak and permit Brady to resume the physical therapy he needs before he can be discharged from the hospital.

Haig, Schmidt to talk

BONN, West Germany (AP) — Secretary of State Alexander M. Haig Jr. will hold talks with Chancellor Helmut Schmidt and other West German officials in Bonn Sept. 13-14, the Foreign Office announced today.

"The visit is an expression of the friendly ties between the Fedeal Republc of Germany and the United States of America and continues the constant exchange of views by both governments," the announcement said.

But the West German government has been at odds with the United States on several important issues.

The latest flap erupted with President Reagan's announcement that the United States would build the neutron warhead, the high-radiation weapon designed to offset Soviet armor superiority in Central Europe.

Contract awarded

The State Department of Highways and Public Transportation has awarded a contract to Abilene Paving Co. of Abilene to construct the first stage of S.H. 191, the long-awaited north route between Midland and Odessa.

The project limits extend from F.M. 1788 to just east of Loop 250 in Midland, a distance of 6.59 miles. Approximately five miles of the project will be constructed on new location.

Contract price is $3,365,000 and 300 working days will be allowed to complete the work.

This project provides for the construction of two frontage roads adjacent to the right of way lines. Each of the frontage roads will be two lanes in width and each will operate with one-way traffic.

Crossovers will be constructed between the frontage roads only where future interchanges or grade separations are planned.

Completion of this section of the Midland-Odessa "North Route" will provide an important alternate route from Midland to the Midland Regional Airport. The first phase of this project will begin at Loop 250 and extend to a point where the new S.H. 191 and S.H. 158 (Andrews Highway) separate. This phase will allow circulation of traffic to and from Andrews to continue during the duration of the project.

Resident Engineer John Aldridge of Midland will be in charge of the project, with District Engineer W.A. Lancaster providing overall supervision.

Lancaster said that receipt of bids for the next construction stage of S.H. 191, which will extend from F.M. 1788 to Loop 338 in Odessa, is presently planned for March 1982.

'Oglemoble' inventor dies at 26

EL PASO, Texas (AP) — Tom Ogle, inventor of the "Oglemobile," a device that allowed him to drive 200 miles on two gallons of gasoline, died Wednesday.

Police Lt. John Lanahan said Ogle, 26, collapsed early Wednesday at the home of a girlfriend and was dead on arrival at Eastwood Hospital here.

Lanahan said friends told him Ogle had been drinking heavily and apparently had taken some sort of medication before he collapsed.

Helga Armstrong, Ogle's mother, told police her son had been drinking heavily, was depressed and had been taking tranquilizers.

Dr. Merton L. Howard, a pathologist at Sun Towers Hospital, said he "strongly suspected" Ogle died of an overdose, but said the cause of death will not be known until an autopsy is performed.

Ogle's mother said he had been depressed because he owed a great deal of money and was "scared to death" of one creditor.

Mrs. Armstrong said her son had been recently treated at Sierra Medical Center where doctors had urged her to have him committed.

"But I couldn't bring myself to do it. If I had known what he was going to do, maybe then ... " Mrs. Armstrong said.

Ogle gained national attention in 1977 when he drove a reporter for The El Paso Times to Deming, N.M., and back — almost 200 miles — on what appeared to be 2 gallons of gasoline.

Ogle's wonder car, the "Oglemobile," used an inventive vaporized fuel system that eliminated the need for a carburetor.

In June 1978, Ogle sold the marketing rights of his invention to a Seattle firm, Advanced Fuel Systems Inc.

Six months later, the Securities Exchange Commission slapped an injunction on the Seattle firm, claiming it had violated registration and antifraud provisions of federal securities laws.

Bobby Perel, Ogle's lawyer, said he saw Ogle a week before his death and said he was depressed, broke and trying to sell some of his possessions.

"He grew up in poverty, a young inventor who appears to hav made it big and then everyone just skinned him," Perel said.

He also said Ogle was concerned that the Seattle, Wash., firm that bought his rights to the gas-saving invention had indicated it would withhold his royalty interests.

Four citizens indicted on conspiracy charges

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A Soviet-born naturalized U.S. citizen is among four people indicted on charges of breaking federal export laws by conspiring to ship high-technology equipment to the Soviet Union.

The four — a West German, an Austrian and two naturalized U.S. citizens who worked for the German — were indicted Wednesday after an 18-month investigation into export companies that allegedly shipped equipment indirectly to the Russians.

The equipment included electronic monitoring devices and computer components and was worth at least $2 million, federal officials said.

Two of those named in the 60-count indictment were arrested at Palm Desert, Calif., before the indictments were announced. The other two were believed to be in Europe, said Assistant U.S. Attorney Theodore W. Wu.

Agents seized three loaded weapons and a substantial amount of ammunition in the defendants' cars at Palm Desert, Wu said.

Anatoli (Tony) Maluta, 61, a Russian-born U.S. citizen who lives in Redondo Beach, Calif., and Sabina Dorn Tittel, 31, a West German-born U.S. citizen who is a resident of Rancho Palos Verdes, were brought before a U.S. magistrate in Los Angeles late Wednesday, although they were not formally arraigned. A bail hearing was scheduled today.

The others accused in the indictment are Werner J. Bruchhausen, 42, of West Germany, nd Dietmar Ulichshofer, 41, of Austria.

The indictment charges that during a 3½-year period ending in Jue 1980, te four conspired to export "high-technology commodities" from the United States to West Germany and elsewhere without proper export licenses.

Three of the defendants — Maluta, Bruchhausen and Ulrichshofer — are accused of exporting electronic monitoring and communications systems, computer components, manufacturing and testing equipment knowing the exports would be used to benefit the Soviet Union and other Soviet-bloc countries, the U.S. attorney's office said.

Another West German, Hans J. Koenig, was named as an unindicted co-conspirator. He was identified as the owner and operator of a company called Elmasch, which carried on "the business of sellig U.S.-origin high technology products to the Soviet-bloc countries," the U.S. attorney's office said.

One of the items, allegedly priced at $689,911, was a Watkins-Johnson WJ-1240 microwave receiver system. Maluta allegedly sent a telex to Bruchhausen in March 1979 "advising him to the effect that a Watkins-Johnson 1240 system was large and complicated and Bruchhausen should 'get plenty for this,'" the U.S. attorney's office said.

It wasn't clear from the indictment whether that item or any of the equipment ever arrived in Soviet-bloc nations. It also was unclear how the items were supposed to have been relayed to the Soviets or their allies after they left the United States.

The United States closely restricts shipments of computer and electronics equipment to the Soviet bloc nations and to China.

Bruchhausen owns and controls six California corporations, all in Los Angeles County, and two German corporations, officials said.

Twins taken from parents

RUTHERFORDTON, N.C. (AP) — Siamese twin girls born to a young couple last year have been placed under the medical authority of the county Social Services Department after officials said they were being deprived of proper medical attention.

District Court Judge Zoro Guice issued the order Wednesday after a hearing, where social services representative Robert Hensley said the parents, Kim and Arlin Beaver of rural Rutherford County, can appeal the decision in juvenile court next week.

Barring an appeal, Guice will order the department to take custody of the twins for six months.

The babies will remain with their parents "unless they (the parents) fail to comply with court order," Hensley said, adding that legal custody of the separated twins means only that the department will make sure they report to the hospital for scheduled medical visits and tests.

At the end of six months, the social services department may go through the hearing process again to possibly gain custody of the girls for another six months.

In a petition filed this week, authorities argued the couple neglected the 18-month-old girls, Fonda Michelle and Shannon Elaine.

The twins, joined just below the ribs at birth, were separated in January by a team of specialists. Each baby had its own spinal cord and heart but they shared a pelvis, bladder, colon and rectum and had only one leg each.

Although the separation was successful, doctors say the infants need regular medical care and special testing.

Beaver's twin brother, Arnold, said doctors in the case were "picking on Arlin and Kim."

Usual war shaping up in AFC Central race

By GARY MIHOCES

PITTSBURGH (AP) — In Cleveland, the Browns are raring to go and they'd rather forget "The Play" that ended their otherwise glorious 1980 season.

In Pittsburgh, the Steelers say they're young at heart and they've heard enough about "The Season" that spoiled their bid for a fifth Super Bowl ring.

In Houston, the Oilers have a new head coach and a new quarterback who aren't looking back on the departures of "The Bum" and "The Snake."

And in Cincinnti, the Bengals have "The Helmet," decorated with Tiger stripes that General Manager Paul Brown hopes will add a distinctive touch to a new winning era.

That's how the 1981 season shapes up in the American Football Conference Central Division, which has traditionally featured tight races even in years when the Steelers were winning Super Bowls. Last season, the Browns, 11-5, ousted the Steelers as division champs. But Cleveland's bid for a Super Bowl berth went awry when quarterback Brian Sipe threw a last-minute interception against Oakland in the payoffs. "Please don't ask me another question about 'The Play,'" Sipe told reporters this summer. "I spent six months talking about it, and now I want to forget it. It's old stuff."

SIPE, WHO passed for 30 touchdowns last year, was among 18 vets who reported early to the Browns training camp.

"It's a great sign," said Coach Sam Rutigliano. "It also proves the kind of spirit we have. We've always had it but now it's even better because in winning our division we've accomplished something — and we want to accomplish more."

Among the rookies are No. 1 draft pick Hanford Dixon, a cornerback from Southern Mississippi, and defensive end Mike Robinson of Arizona.

The Pittsburgh Steelers also were looking for help from their No.1 draft pick, defensive end Keith Gary of Oklahoma.

But Gary signed with Montreal of the Canadian league

"He chose the easy path instead of the tough one,' said Steeler Coach Chuck Noll. "It surprised me. I had a different view of him, obviously, or we wouldn't have taken him on the first round."

NOLL ISN'T the type to dwell on Gary's defection, just as he isn't the type to dwell on seasons past.

"We look at each season as a new journey, regardless of how the previous year went," said Noll.

Rampant injuries were part of it, the defense had just 18 quarterback sacks, questions were raised about whether the Steelers were too old and it was hinted Terry Bradshaw had lost his zest for the game.

Bradshaw spent the offseason mulling whether to quit football for an acting career. He decided this spring to remain a Steeler.

How about old age?

"What is old?" said fullback Franco Harris, 31. "Chronologically we are old, but physically we are fine."

Joe Greene looks for improvement from the defense even though linebacker Jack Ham is out with a broken arm. Greene, who'll be 35 next month, also says he has no thoughts of retirement.

"I still enjoy playing and winning," he said. "When I do call it quits, it will be sudden — like Ken Stabler did it."

WHEN STABLER, "The Snake," took over in Houston last year, he was touted as the quarterback who would take the Oilers to the Super Bowl. Houston finished 11-5, losing the division to Cleveland on a tie-breaker. The Oilers got a wild-card playoff berth, but they lost to Oakland and "Bum" Phillips was fired as coach.

"I thought we were getting outcoached," said Oiler owner K.S. "Bud" Adams Jr. Former defensive coach Ed Biles took over for Phillips. He's diversified the offense and hired Jim Shofner from Cleveland as offensive coordinator.

Following Stabler's retirement, the quarterback will be fourth year pro Gifford Nielsen. Stabler quit just prior to summer camp and went on a Gulf of Mexico cruise.

IN CINCINNATI, the Bengals beat the Steelers twice last season. Their 6-10 overall record was an improvement over two previous 4-12 seasons.

Meanwhile, the Bengals are wearing new helmets with tiger stripes a motif carried over to the trim on the jersey and pants. General Manager Paul Brown chose the design.

In 1932,when Brown became head coach at Massillon High School in Ohio, he talked the school into buying a $500 tiger outfit for the mascot. The Massilon Tigers went on to become a powerhouse.

"The tiger motif and the orange and black color were everywhere, and don't think it didn't have an effect on our opponents," Brown wrote in his autobiography.

By DAVE KINDRED
(c) 1981, The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Meanwhile, Edward Bennett Williams burns. The Orioles' owner says of Boo-Hooie Kuhn and his bumbling buddies, Lee MacPhail and Chub Feeney: "It appears they would screw up a two-car funeral. Everything gets screwed up." This the counselor said after studying the troika's latest brainstorm, a real dilly that Williams calls "another outrage in a litany of outrages."

Williams has figured out how baseball can look dumber than a sweet potato. If Kuhn's Kommandos order this season played under the newest modified split-season plan — which says, among lots of things, that a team winning both halves meets the second-half's second-place finisher — then it is possible for the Orioles to have the best record in all of baseball and not get in the playoffs.

Yes, yes, yes, the Orioles could finish second, or even third maybe, in the second half. And if the Yankees fall dead with no motivation, having already won the first half, then the Orioles' overall record could be much the best. Then if Detroit, say, playing its first 18 games at home as it does, should win the second half, that leaves the Orioles at home watching the Kuhn Klassic on television.

"I HOLD my head in dismay," Williams said.

The consummate dramatist, Williams stared out his eighth-floor window, as if looking for Boo-Hooie in earth orbit, and then Williams did this: he rested his forehead in his palm. Dismay, clearly.

What baseball should have done is simple. So simple that maybe it can still be done. All we need is a Kommando brighter than a sweet potato. We need one who can call up Hank Peters and say, "Er, Hank, that plan you sent us six weeks ago, do you have a copy?"

Peters is the Orioles' general manager, a baseball man dating back to the good ol' days when being a baseball man didn't cause small children to point at you while giggling. Six weeks ago he called the Kommando headquarters and said he had a plan for continuing the season when (if) the strike ended.

The Peters proposal called for simple continuation of the season, with the 1-2 finishers in each division meeting in a best-of-five playoff to determine the division champion. Such a playoff would be a good thing because the strike took away 50 games from the full season that, almost without fail, reveals the truly best team. The playoff would give the second-place team one last chance to prove that circumstances shortchanged it.

"WE HAD a perfect solution," Williams said, "that made absolute perfect sense. It would have hyped enthusiasm, it would have compensated for the problem of losing one-third of the season. But it was summarily rejected. They had a plan they were wedded to, and they rammed it through. ... I just despair at the way things are fouled up."

They play all summer and the team that wins the most games is the champion.

Until now.

We know Boo-Hooie protects the game's integrity. He tells us so. Bravely, he kicked Willie Mays out of baseball for the sin of shaking hands on behalf of a casino. The commissioner also went to the mattresses to protect the game from the dark temptation of a fellow's public relations work at a race track (Terry Crowley had to quit Timonium). With the full force of innuendo on his side, Kuhn worked to keep a pro football owner from buying into baseball. No absentee owners, Kuhn said.

George Steinbrenner III lives in Tampa.

WITH A commissioner this consistent in his application of integrity, it is small wonder his employers, the owners, never asked his advice during the strike. Nor is it any wonder that left to his own devices, Kuhn dreamed up a split-season playoff plan that opened heaven's gates to a devil's flood of games lost intentionally — even forfeited — so that a team might make it to the World Series.

"I think that when the strike ended, they the Kommandos) must have breathed a sigh of relief," Williams said, searching for an explanation of how baseball got itself into this mess, "and nobody was really thinking what the split season could mean."

Stumbling Cubs lose another

AMARILLO—The amazing Midland Cubs have lost their last four in a row and six of their last seven and still have managed to pick up a full game on the San Antonio Dodgers to trail by a half game in the study in futility that is the Texas League West Division race.

Some 5,584 fans turned out on Chicken Night for the game.

While the Cubs were losing 6-5 in 10 innings to Amarillo's Gold Sox, the Dodgers were blowing another one to the El Paso Diablos. And while the Dodgers and Cubs were belaboring one another and opposing pitchers with white feathers, the Gold Sox, who not long ago were just playing out the schedule, have closed to within a game and a half of first.

The Cubs and Sox play doubleheaders the next three nights before the Cubs return home to face El Paso in a five-game series on Monday.

After rallying from a 4-0 deficit in the seventh and eighth innings, the Cubs forged in front in the 10th when Randy LaVigne walked, Mike Diaz bunted the runner to second and Syd Church then walked pinchhitter Joe Carter intentionally. Javier Fierro walked to load the bases and Mel Hall walked to force in the go-ahead run.

However, after that, Church, 2-3, settled down to turn Jack Upton's grounder to the box into a force at the plate and fan Jim Tracy to retire the side.

Amarillo won it with two in the 10th. After Terry Tingley singled off Norm Churchill, Eddie Moore came in. Jerry Johnson bunted the runner to second and David Castro singled. John Stevenson bounced back to Moore, who looked the runners back and got one out. With two out, Jeff Pyburn walked and Dan Pupura followed with a two-run single that kicked up chalk down the left field line.

Success began when Perry stopped being nice guy

Los Angeles Times

There comes a time in any man's life when he has to say "Okay, no more nice guy. From now on, I make my own rules." It happened to Billy the Kid, Jack the Ripper, Attila the Hun, Willie the Actor, Robin Hood and Al Capone. One day a guy is standing hip deep in a plowed field, looking at a fistful of unpaid bills and says, "What am I doing this for? There must be a better way!"

It happened to Gaylord Perry. Oh, he didn't break any of the Ten Commandments. He kept holy the Sabbath Day, didn't lie, kill, rob banks, or pick pockets, he honored his father and his mother, alright. He broke the law about spitting in public. Not the municipal law, baseball's. He didn't spit on the sidewalk, he spit on a baseball.

The law is about as popular in baseball as Prohibition was in 1927. Nobody enforces it very much and, while it's not entirely a victimless crime -- righthand hitters are victimized, alright -- it's a non-violent one.

PERRY REACHED the major leagues when he was 25 years old. He had won 55 and lost 46 games in the bush leagues. He had won only six in the major leagues in three years of tring. He was making $8,000-a-year and had mortgages on two farms. He decided to spit in the eye of history.

Ballplayers call it the "Country Sinker," the "Irrigated Slider," "The Load," and the "Super Drop." Throwing one is an art. It (The Load) reduces the friction between ball and finger; so the ball doesn't rotate. The pitch comes in with the velocity of a fastball, but a fastball that suddenly takes a direct hit in the fuselage. A fastball rises. A spitball tends to crash at the plate. The forward rotation suddenly encounters the critical forces of wind resistance and gravity. For the batter, it's like trying to hit a ball dropped from a fifth story window.

The point is, even when it was legalized, only a handful of pitchers could master it. The Hall of Fame is not awash with spitballers even though, when it was outlawed in 1920, pitchers then throwing it were allowed to continue. Burleigh Grimes, the last of the spitballers, didn't retire until 1934. If all a pitcher had going for him was spit, he'd be well-advised to pick up a knife and a piece of wood and take up whittling, not baseball.

GAYLORD PERRY in 1964 had a fastball that was just fast enuogh to keep him in the team photo, not the starting rotation. He had control; but so did the batting practice pitcher. What Gaylord Perry really had going for him was the fact he was the son of a tenant farmer who never had elecricity in the home until 1951 or took a shower in anything but a rain storm till he made the high school football team. Gaylord had to learn to pitch in the brief periods when the tobacco wasn't ripe or the mule wasn't sick. Gaylord didn't want to go back to that. If all that stood between him and living in the 20th century was a little saliva, Gaylord was ready to overlook such irrelevancies as Baseball Rule 802A and modifications. Baseball is not exactly the Knights of the Round Table anyway. You steal signals, pretend to catch balls you short-hopped, and hide balls on baserunners. Besides, in baseball, everybody spits. What they should outlaw is scratching.

Gaylord kept himself in the big leagues with illegal substances, but he's going to put himself in the Hall of Fame with stubbornness. A lot of people would have taken the $60,000 bonus the Giants gave him in 1958 and given it all up as a bad job as soon as he found out he couldn't get the ball past professional hitters with just the stuff he had. Several managers asked Gaylord if he ever thought of trying the bullpen for a career. Today, to show his answer, he leads all active pitchers -- and all but 43 ever -- in complete games with 291. Only seven pitchers have started more games. Only 14 pitchers have won more. Sometime this September, when he is 43 years old, Gaylord Perry will join the handful of big league pitchers who have won 300 games.

PERRY DIDN'T just pick up a spitter, he picked up a slider, a forkball, a changeup, he learned to hide the ball as well as the stuff he put on it, he learned to throw out of a kick, without a windup, and by way of third base. He was often a better fielder than his third baseman. He won the Cy Young Award in both leagues, the only player ever to do so, and he pitched a no-hit game. He is a walking encyclopedia of pitching.

A reporter found him in the Dodger Stadium dugout the other night sitting in a corner watching his 14-year-old son shag throws, with a pair of earphones stuck to his head. Gaylord Perry wasn't listening to a disco tape. He was tuning in on the pre-game Dodger broadcast. "You'd be surprised how much information you can pick up, who's the hot hitter, who's going to the opposite field, who's injured, in these interviews," he explained. "They get on the pre-game show and say, 'Well, I've been having trouble with the little outside slider, so I shifted my feet, and now I go with the pitch.' So, you know not to give him that slider with a two-and-two count anymore."

It's attention to detail like that that will put Gaylord James Perry in Cooperstown quite as much as the preparation Q's, Vaselines, hair greases, prespiration drops and tobacco drool. Sometimes, Perry uses the spitball the way Hitler used leaflets -- as a threat. He doesn't have to throw it if he fidgits, wipes, twitches, and goes to the resin bag enough. "It builds up anxieties," he grins. A spitter is like an ace. You have to know how to play the rest of the hand, too.

Milestones bore Perry anyway. He took up the spitball to meet the mortgage, not a shrine. The 300 games won, 300 complete games are numbers to him. "But, I do want to play in a World Series," he admits. "I never have." The prospect alarms the straitlaced, pitch-by-the-rules set. And some not so straitlaced or so inclined to play by the rules. "If Gaylord Perry gets in a World Series," Billy Martin once hinted darkly. "They'll have to play it in raincoats."

Tigers charge into AL East lead with sixth straight win

By The Associated Press

John Wockenfuss doubled home a run and Stan Papi followed with a two-run homer in the fourth inning Wednesday night to lift the red-hot Detroit Tigers to a 4-0 victory over the Minnesota Twins behind the seven-hit pitching of Dan Schatzeder and Dave Tobik.

The victory was Detroit's sixth in a row and put them in first place in the American League East with a 7-3 record, while the Twins now have six consecutive losses.

Schatzeder, 5-5, held the Twins scoreless on five hits before giving way to Tobik with two on and two out in the seventh. Tobik retired Butch Wynegar on a fly ball to end the inning and allowed two hits the rest of the way to record his first save.

ELSEWHERE in the American League, Buddy Bell broke out of a post-strike slump with two hits and two runs batted in while Doc Medich tossed a three-hitter for eight innings as the Texas Rangers defeated the Milwaukee Brewers 4-1. Bell, leading the American League in RBI before the players strike started on June 12, had driven in only three runs in eight second season games played until Wednesday.

The Chicago White Sox kayoed nemesis Tommy John in the fourth inning and went on to defeat the New York Yankees 6-5 on Mike Squires' shallow sacrifice fly in the sixth. John, who took a break from his six-day vigil at the hospital bedside of his critically injured young son, was rapped for 10 hits and five runs in 31-3 innings, although four of the runs were unearned. The 38-year-old left-hander had pitched three shutouts against the White Sox last season and had a streak of 32 2-3 scoreless innings against Chicago broken in the third inning.

Lloyd Moseby drove in six runs with three singles and a fielder's choice grounder and Al Woods added three RBI, carrying the Toronto Blue Jays to a 9-4 victory over the Kansas City Royals. The Blue Jays pounded 17 hits in the game.

IN THE National League, Bobby Bonds drove in two runs with a triple and a double to lead the Chicago Cubs to a 4-3 victory over the Los Angeles Dodgers. The game ended when second base umpire Jim Quick ruled that Pedro Guerrero interfered with shortstop Ivan DeJesus, giving the Cubs a double-play after the Dodgers had loaded the bases with one out.

Lee Lacy and Tony Pena slammed solo home runs and Bill Madlock cracked a two-run triple to power the Pittsburgh Pirates to a 7-3 victory over the San Francisco Giants.

Brian Asselstine drilled a three-run pinch homer to highlight a four-run seventh inning rally that carried the Atlanta Braves to a 5-2 victory over the New York Mets.

Joe Nolan rapped three hits and drove in four runs to rally the Cincinnati Reds to a 6-3 victory over the Philadelphia Phillies.

NOLAN RYAN pitched five hitless innings, and Terry Puhl's two-run double fueled a four-run third inning to lead the Houston Astros to a 9-1 victory over Montreal. Ryan, 7-3, lowered his earned run average to 1.29 with six innings of two-hit, shutout pitching.

Pinch-hitter Gene Tenace smacked an RBI single up the middle with two out in the bottom of the ninth inning, giving the St. Louis Cardinals a 7-6 triumph over the San Diego Padres.

IN AL games on the West Coast, Dave McKay broke a 2-2 tie with a fifth-inning double and Cliff Johnson homered in the sixth as the Oakland A's posted their fifth straight victory, 4-2 over the Boston Red Sox. Oakland pitcher Matt Keough, 7-3, pitched an eight-hitter, while the A's got only four hits off Boston pitcher Frank Tanana.

Bobby Grich singled to ignite a four-run rally in the fourth inning and led off the fifth with a homer to extend his hitting streak to 21 games as the California Angels defeated the Baltimore Orioles 6-3.

Players bolt, form new loop; teams fail

By WILL GRIMSLEY
AP Special Correspondent

HEADLINE: "Baseball Players Bolt Major Leagues and Form Rival Circuit."

HEADLINE: "Baseball Decides on Split Season."

HEADLINE: "Owners Decry Falling Attendance."

Nineteen hundred and eighty-one? Nope. The year: 1890. And 1892.

Player unions, strikes, split seasons, mass fan desertion and economic chaos — none of these myriad problems which beset our baseball administrators today is new to the game. They were rampant — perhaps more so — nearly 100 years ago.

Harry Simmons, baseball's archbishop of the archives and eminent historian, was kind enough — when contacted at his desk in the office of Commissioner Bowie Kuhn — to describe the parallel of the game's current strike-spawned problems with those in the primitive days of our great grandpapas.

"THESE WERE the days of growing pains and little stability," Simmons related. "Leagues formed and folded. There were few decent ballparks. Cities prevailed on railroads to build parks by allowing them to lay tracks to the sites.

In 1890, there were two leagues — the National League and the American Association, each with eight teams located mostly in the East and Midwest. They were survivors of years of in-fighting.

It was at this time that John Montgomery Ward, the same name as the old mail order house, started a player insurrection.

Monte Ward was manager and star pitcher of the New York Giants of the National League. He once even pitched a perfect game. In a sport

With fall season close, it's time to oil up guns

There's no time like the present when it comes to having your guns thoroughly checked by the manufacturer, a competent gunsmith or a factory-authorized warranty station.

Hunting season is just around the corner, (dove, Sept. 1), but waiting until the last week before the season to have your gun checked is an almost certain way to be sure you won't have your favorite rifle or shotgun with you on opening day.

WHILE FIREARMS have a tradition of durability and, they do require periodic preventive maintenance. Experts recommend that they be checked for worn or broken parts at least once a year.

Any number of problems can arise that can either cause your gun to become inoperable or actually unusable. Don't be one of those hunters who discovers which problem he has with his gun by finding it out when a long way from the nearest hard road.

Once the gun has been checked by a someone competent, it's also a good idea to check the sight or scope alignment.

AN AUSTIN resident fishing in the Colorado River just a few blocks from his house on Aug. 1 may have set the new striped bass record with a 13 3/4-pounder.

The fish, if certified by the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, will be the second consecutive state record breaker caught from the Colorado River system. Harry Lamb, also an Austinite, caught the current record striper, a 38 1/4-pounder, a few miles upstream in Lake Austin on March 21.

Longhorn Dam, which impounds Town Lake in the heart of Austin, has long been a productive spot for striped bass, striped/white bass hybrids and other species. Although a number of stripers up to 30 pounds have been caught there, none has set a state record.

Castro was using a long surf rod and 30-pound-test line. He said the largest striper he had caught in that area was a seven-pounder.

How's that for luck?

GOV. BILL CLEMENTS has proclaimed Saturday, Sept., 26 as Texas Hunting and Fishing Day.

Clements joined with governors in other states and President Reagan in encouraging Americans to participate in Hunting and Fishing Day activities to recognize the traditional role of sportsmen in conservation.

Clements said in a memorandum issued this week that hunters and fishermen were among the nation's first enviromentalists. "They have, through purchases of huntng and fishing licenses, contributed millions of dollars for programs benefiting fish and wildlife, including non-game species," the governor said.

"Texas has a record unsurpassed by any other state for restoration of wildlife species which once were threatened with extinction; its lakes and streams offer some of the finest fishing opportunities anywhere for native fish and introduced species," Clements said. "All these accomplishments are a direct result of financial support rendered by sportsmen.

Texans interested in Hunting and Fishing Day activities in their area should contact officials of local sportsmen's clubs for information on planned activities.

FISHING was spotty at Lakes Thomas and Spence last week with showers causing a mild inflow that promises improved activity. At Thomas, channel cats were biting all types of bait on trotlines and rod and reel. Most yellow cats were caught on trotlines. Crappie fishing was fair to good and the rest, forget it.

G.D.Johnson and Lee Bethel, Midland, took four stripers to six pounds out of Wildcat Fish A Rama, and Jamie Settles, Midland, had five crappie from 1 1/2 to 2 and a two-pound channel...

Ike Pate also was optimistic that showers last week may be just what the doctor ordered for Oak Creek Lake near Sweetwater. Ike reports taking several bass on top water baits early in the morning, before the cool front arrived. The Lubbock Bass Club holds a tournament at the lake with Reagan Henery winning with four fish going 8-13.

Coe, Nehemiah crack world track records

ZURICH, Switzerland (AP) — Britain's Sebastian Coe and American Renaldo Nehemiah could hardly be accused of disappointing those who came to an international track and field meet looking to see new records set.

Coe recaptured the world record for the mile, and Nehemiah bettered his own 110-meter hurdles world mark Wednesday night before 25,000 wildly cheering fans at Letzi Grund Stadium.

Coe surged ahead in the mile at the completion of two laps after being paced by American Tom Byers, then took firm command, finishing in 3 minutes, 48.53 seconds as he recaptured the world mark from fellow Briton and archrival Steve Ovett.

Nehemiah, who skipped the U.S. championships at Sacramento, Calif., last May and who thus can't compete in next month's World Cup in Rome, was timed in 12.93 seconds, clipping .07 second off his world record, established in 1979. Nehemiah was the first man ever to run the 110-meter hurdles in under 13 seconds.

Coe expressed disappointment that he did not break the 1,500 meter mark as well. The last one to better both records in one race was Australia's John Landy in 1954.

Coe, who also holds the world records in the 800 and 1,000 meters, said, "At first, I thought I would miss both marks. That was after about 1,000 meters. But then I gave it all I had and it paid off."

Greg Foster, Nehemiah's archrival, was runnerup in the hurdles in a personal best 13.03.

"Greg Foster and I got out of the blocks at the same time and in the same manner. But it was technique that was the difference."

Carl Lewis also turned in an outstanding performance by taking the long jump with the third best leap ever, 27 feet, 11½ inches (8.52 meters).

El Paso keeps Cubs close in Texas West

By The Associated Press

The Arkansas Travelers used a walk, a wild throw and two singles to score three runs in the ninth inning Wednesday night for a 7-6 Texas League baseball victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

In other Texas League action, El Paso beat San Antonio, 9-1, and Amarillo edged Midland, 6-5, in 10 innings.

A two-run single by Dan Purtura drove home the winning runs in the 10th inning as the Amarillo Gold Sox edged the Midland Cubs, 6-5.

Syd Church was the winning pitcher.

DAVE KABLE hit a two-run homer for Arkansas in the first inning and the two teams traded runs until the bottom of the eighth when Tulsa jumped out to a 6-4 lead on a two-run single by Bobby Ball.

Arkansas' Stan McCauley walked in the ninth inning and Dennis Delany and Gotay Mills singled. McCauley and Delany scored on a wild throw by Tulsa shortstop Mike Jirschele to tie the game at 6-6. Jeff Doyle's single then drove home Mills with the winning run.

The winning pitcher was Ralph Citarella, 8-7. Tom Henke, 4-2, was the loser.

Cincy threatens to sue Reds for lost $8 million

CINCINNATI (AP) — The city of Cincinnati, which had threatened to sue the Reds for more than $8 million because of the baseball strike, has reduced its demand to about $1 million.

Mayor David Mann, who made several national television appearances during the strike, had demanded the baseball team make good the city's losses in taxes, revenues and rent for Riverfront Stadium.

Reds President Dick Wagner was upset the city did not come to the Reds before Mann had made his statements. Wagner suggested at the time that Mann might be using the issue for his fall campaign.

"One of the things that you do before making a final decision to go to court is to look at the risk of litigition and see what number you'd be satisfied with — a bird in the hand rather than two in the bush," Mann said Wednesday of the current negotiations.

The city lost funds from admission taxes, parking revenues, income tax and concessions. Mann also complained of the rent loss at the stadium. Those funds help pay off the bonds for building the facility.

"These included employee salaries, utilites and debt services. I also indicated that the city will be making approximately $114,000 in refunds to season parkers," the manager said.

"I thought that by indicating to them that we are not out so much to make money as we are to recoup expenses, that it might make a difference," said Murray.

Johnson leads amateur

WINNIPEG, Manitoba (AP) — Kate Johnson of Sleepy Hollow, Ill., shot a 6-under-par 68 to take the first round lead Wednesday at the Canadian Women's Amateur golf championship. Johnson's 68 was a course record, shattering the previous official mark of 74, which is par at the 75-year-old club.

In second place, three strokes behind the leader, was Toni Wiesner of Fort Worth, Texas.

Advice pays off for Zokol

CALGARY, Alberta (AP) — Richard Zokol took a friend's advice, altered his swing and drove to a 6-under-par 64 Wednesday in the first round of the Canadian Amateur golf championship at the Calgary Golf and Country Club.

The hot round in the sun was Zokol's best ever in competition and gave the 23-year-old from Vancouver an early 4-stroke advantage over the field in the 77th renewal of Canada's oldest national golf championship.

But they had heard from Peters, for 32 years a baseball man respected at all levels of the game. But they must have known a split-season would be looked upon as a cynical attempt to manipulate the fans' emotions. But they had to realize this throwing-games possibility. But, but, but ...

Couldn't they have saved themselves this public humiliation by making a single phone call to someone who understands baseball?

Williams raised an eyebrow eloquently. "Well ... ," he said, explaining.

And why, really, should Williams expect more from his game? He has a happy team. He has a first baseman making $1 million a year. All his veterans are signed to multiyear contracts. He exists comfortably with the status quo which so many owners can't handle. This was a strike, Williams said, that should never have happened but did because the negotiators, Ray Grebey for the owners and Marvin Miller for the players, could not negotiate.

"THERE WAS so much animosity, old animosity and old anger and pride and envy at that negotiating table, it was a constant obstacle to resolution of the problem," Williams said. "Of the seven deadly sins, they had four of them there, a World Series of deadly sins. They had pride, envy, anger and avarice. All they lacked were lust, gluttony and sloth.

The melancholy irony, for Williams at least, is that the Orioles would be the first-half champions had the strike gone off as originally scheduled.

UTPB gets softball complex

ODESSA — Action taken recently at The University of Texas System Board of Regents meeting in Austin opened the way for Ector County to build a new four-diamond softball complex on The University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus.

Ector County Parks and Recreation Director Roland Hancock said the new facility, to be located on 18.35 acres on the northeast corner of the UTPB campus, will include four softball diamonds, with spectator seating, restroom facilities and parking. The project will be built at the expense of the Ector County Parks and Recreation Department.

The new softball park is not the first cooperative effort between UTPB and Ector County Parks and Recreation. Cooperation between the two resulted last spring in the opening of a 1.7-mile parcourse with 20 exercise stations. Hancock said the parcourse attracts 30-40 area residents every day.

Ashe sees trouble ahead in tennis war

TORONTO (AP) — Former tennis star Arthur Ashe says men's tennis is about to regress four years to when the sport was torn apart by a bidding war between two rival circuits.

Ashe, 37, in town for an American Airlines tennis clinic, said the decision of World Championship Tennis to split with the Grand Prix circuit next year will mean "neither circuit will be able to complete their 1982 schedule."

WCT let its intentions be known two months ago and Ashe says a major division in men's tennis will take place when the Sept. 1 deadline for signing with the Grand Prix passes. The WCT, led by millionaire Lamar Hunt, had agreed to become a part of the Grand Prix circuit in 1977 and has been operating that way for the last four years.

Ashe, who retired after suffering a heart attack in 1979, says the sport will revert to a bidding war that existed before the 1977 agreement. The WCT claims it's not satisfied that the rules of the game are being properly enforced.

But Ashe says the bottom line is money.

"They weren't making enough of a profit," said Ashe, a member of the Men's International Professional Tennis Council, which governs the Grand Prix tour. "So we (the Grand Prix) will be in competition with a company that's solely in it for a profit."

Ashe admitted the WCT also is upset at the loss of identity that has occurred since it became a part of the Grand Prix circuit.

"They were assimilated and it wasn't to their liking," said Ashe, describing the 1977 agreement that was urged on by the tennis council. "They wanted to have their own mini-tour within our larger structure, but we wouldn't go along with it.

Ashe says the WCT is planning nine 32-man fields and seven with 16.

"I hope the players who aren't highly ranked realize that their long-term future lies with the Grand Prix," said Ashe, who now finds himself forced to lobby strongly for the Grand Prix circuit where before it was just for individual tournaments that needed help. "There's a lot of confusion among the players. That's why we extended the deadline for signing with the Grand Prix."

Hunt will be trying to sign top players to deals assuring their appearance at as many of the 17 $300,000 tournaments the WCT has scheduled for 1982. These events will increase the number of events to 106 — 89 of which will be Grand Prix tourneys—for next year as compared to 95 this year.

John Beddington, tournament director at the $200,000 Canadian Open women's tournament this year, estimates Hunt will be adding $7 million more in prize money, increasing the total for both circuits to $24 million. This year, the Grand Prix is giving out $12 million in prize money and $2 million in bonus pools.

Ashe predicts promoters on both circuits will start panicking and will either cancel or reduce their purses when they see how the 17 WCT events line up against the Grand Prix ones. Six 1981 Grand Prix tournaments with purses of $75,000 — and matched against richer events — have already been cancelled this year.

"THESE players don't care what condition the game will be in a few years down the road."

Hunt and the WCT first came into existence in 1967 and forced the introduction of open tennis — play among both amateurs and professionals — when top players were signed to contracts. The Grand Prix then was formed in 1970 to fight Hunt and try to keep the tournament system intact.

No more trouble with Libya expected

LONDON (AP) — U.S. Defense Secretary Caspar W. Weinberger said today that no U.S. Naval maneuvers are planned in the near future near Libya, and he doubts there will be any further clashes between U.S. and Libyan forces.

"We don't expect more trouble," he told reporters at London's Heathrow Airport.

Weinberger arrived here for four days of discussions with British Defense Secretary John Nott. The trip was planned before Wednesday's dogfight between U.S. and Libyan warplanes in the skies over the Mediterranean. The Pentagon said two Libyan jets were shot down.

"We don't have any more planned naval exercises in that area in the near future," he said. "We were conducting a naval exercise. We have done so, and now we are moving on to other stations."

Weinberger left for Britain on Wednesday after telling thousands of American war veterans in Philadelphia that it was necessary to shoot down the Libyan planes to protect freedom of the seas. His assertion was greeted by cheers and applause.

"We had no alternative," Weinberger said in an emotional statement to 6,000 delegates at the 82nd national convention of the Veterans of Foreign Wars.

The Defense Department announced earlier two American F-14s shot down a pair of Libyan jet fighters early in the day about 60 nautical miles off the Libyan coast after an unprovoked attack by the Libyans.

"If we had accepted the totally unfounded and illegal Libyan claims over the vast stretches of the Mediterranean, we would have tolerated the undermining of the freedom of the seas," Weinberger said.

"The freedom of the seas must be maintained, and we will not be intimidated into giving up any of the historic rights that are shared by all nations."

Libya claims its territorial rights extend 200 miles out to sea, but the United States recognizes only the traditional three-mile limit, Pentagon officials have said.

Caspar W. Weinberger

Weinberger, fresh from two days of security talks with President Reagan in Los Angeles, said he was gratified the VFW was giving the administration "strong support" in bolstering the armed forces.

"With that support, which you have already shown in ample measure on the battlefields of the world, we can indeed restore the nation's defenses and obtain a goal we all seek, a peace with freedom," he said.

Confrontation reflects 'Barbary Coast' past

By JOHN HARRIS
Hearst Feature Service

WASHINGTON — The aerial confrontation between the United States and Libya over the Mediterranean has dramatized once again the irrational nature of the regime of Col. Mouammar Qadaffi, who once tried to use his nation's vast oil wealth to buy nuclear weapons from France, China and the Soviet Union.

The downing of two Libyan jets has a 19th-century precedent, too, in which Libya, then the "Barbary States," was a base for pirates preying on Mediterranean shipping. The pirates were suppressed by U.S. marines in the Tripolitan War of 1801-1805, a conflict that gave rise to the phrase "to the shores of Tripoli" in the Marine Corps hymn.

The Libyan jets, in a fashion reminiscent of the Barbary pirates, sought to inhibit U.S. air and perhaps sea passage in an international arena — and paid the price. But few observers here, military or diplomatic, feel the U.S. response will inhibit the ambitions or activities of Qadaffi himself.

The U.S. closed the Libyan embassy here on May 6, following evidence that the embassy was being used as a base for attacks on Libyans in the U.S. who oppose their country's regime. Analysts say the latest episode will undoubtedly worsen U.S.-Libyan relations, perhaps in the reduction of oil supplies and — more ominously — giving the Russians air and naval bases on Libya's long Mediterranean shoreline.

This prospect has long been an unhappy preoccupation of American military strategists, it is pointed out, and the fact that a Sixth Fleet exercise was being held in waters 60 miles off the Libyan shore has generated speculation that the U.S. was conducting a reconnaissance to determine if the prospect was, in fact, nearing reality.

The Pentagon notes, moreover, that the shooting incident occurred in the course of the exercise — featuring a two-carrier Sixth Fleet battle group — which marked the first time since 1979 that the U.S. Navy has entered an area claimed by Libya as territorial waters. The Pentagon insisted, however, that the exercise was a "routine" operation.

Last Sept. 16 an apparently unarmed and unescorted U.S. reconnaissance plane operating 200 miles off the Libyan coast came under missile fire from two Libyan MIG-23 fighters. The U.S. plane took evasive action and reached safety. Some days later a similar reconnaissance plane — this time escorted by U.S. F-14 fighters — was approached by eight Libyan aircraft, which swiftly left the area.

American forces took no retaliatory action in either case, it was reported. The shooting-down of the Libyan jets in the latest incident was at the discretion of the flight commander on the scene, the Navy emphasized, and represented no new political or military policy change.

The downed Libyan jets — Soviet-built SU-22s — were part of a recent addition to Libya's air power, American intelligence officers say, and reflect the continuous supply to the largely-desert country of sophisticated Soviet military hardware. Libya, in fact, is now believed to possess a huge Soviet-made military arsenal, far beyond the operational and technological capacity of its relatively small armed forces.

The SU-22, one of the most modern Soviet warplanes, is capable of flying more than twice the speed of sound and is equipped with an advanced missile-firing and cannon weapons system. But it is considered to be no match for the U.S. Navy F-14, a larger, heavier aircraft whose Phoenix missile system can engage six incoming enemy aircraft simultaneously — and which was used in combat for the first time in the Libyan engagement.

In addition to SU-22s, the Libyan air force — numbering about 300 planes — features the highly-regarded MIG-25, some of which are believed flown by Russian crews. In this connection, the U.S. Navy said it is "assumed" that the downed SU-22s were flown by Libyan pilots.

Many Libyan aircraft, reliable sources say, are also flown by Pakistani and Palestinian pilots.

The Libyans also possess large numbers of French-built Mirage warplanes, supplied several years ago in return for major oil contracts. The French agreement to supply Mirages to Libya was made, it is recalled, following the cancellation by France of a contract to supply similar aircraft to Israel.

Qadaffi, a 43-year-old former army officer, tried to purchase nuclear weapons from governments in Paris, Moscow and Peking shortly after he led the 1969 coup that overthrew the regime of King Idris I, who was in Athens at the time for medical treatment. Qadaffi was hurriedly turned down in each city, but the rejection hardly blunted his militaristic fervor.

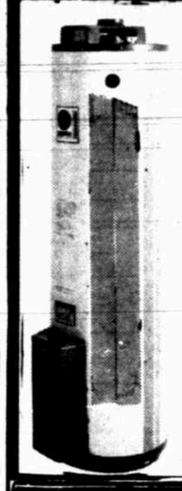

Qadaffi later reportedly horrified President Anwar Sadat of Egypt — before Sadat's 1977 peace mission to Israel — by proposing that an Egyptian submarine torpedo the British liner QE-2, then carrying thousands of supporters of the "United Jewish Appeal," a charity organization, on a voyage to Israel. The proposal and its rejection were contributory factors to the subsequent enmity between Libya and Egypt.

In 1977, too, the CIA named Libya as the principal ideological and financial center of world political terrorism. Libya by then was routinely providing sanctuary for airline hijackers and other terrorists, among them Venezuelan-born Ilyitch Ramirez-Sanchez, otherwise known as "Carlos," who dropped from sight after arriving in Libya following a terrorist action in Europe some years ago.

In Libya itself Qadaffi has turned the clock back by re-instituting ultra-orthodox Moslem laws that prescribe the amputation of hands for minor offenses, such as theft. He has turned the principal church in Tripoli, the nation's capital, into a mosque. Qadaffi has also used his country's huge oil revenues to support Palestinian guerrilla movements, and is a passionate advocate of the destruction of Israel.

Following his 1969 revolution, Qadaffi closed major American and British military bases in the country, including the former U.S. Strategic Air Command base at Wheelus Field, near Tripoli.

Cosell says he invented TV sports journalism

NEW YORK (AP) — Who said: "I created broadcast sports journalism." Was it: a.) Chris Schenkel; b.) Phil Rizzuto; c.) Van Gordon Sauter, or d.) Howard Cosell?

The statement could have been made by only one man: Howard Cosell, who will unveil a new sports magazine show Sunday on ABC.

The tension between what he says and how he says it underscores how Cosell could have been chosen the most-liked and the least-liked sportscaster in a TV Guide poll. Fan disillusionment with the Cosell form — his bluster, arrogance and unique style — unfortunately can obscure the Cosell substance — his intelligence, wit and sensitivity to issues and people.

Tastes are different. The public likes or dislikes TV personalities for a variety of rational and irrational reasons. But, love him or loathe him, as a TV journalist, nobody can match Cosell's ability to analyze issues, disseminate information and handle soft and hard interviews.

Cosell has been putting himself and these talents on public display for 20 years on ABC-TV and even longer on ABC Radio. In his newest forum, "ABC Sportsbeat," which debuts as a monthly magazine and is scheduled to go weekly in January, Cosell's influence will dominate as host and senior producer.

"It will be an issue show, a people-oriented show," he said. "There will be a live presence in the studio for each show. And its hard core will be what I've dedicated my life to: broadcast sports journalism."

His one-on-one, cat-and-mouse games with personalities in the sporting world have always lifted Cosell above the crowd, away from the puffery of the Schenkels on network TV and the hucksterism of the Rizzutos on local sports.

This interview technique will be on display, whether Cosell or one of his staff corners the subject. In a memo to the other producers and on-air talent on "Sportsbeat," Cosell outlined his interview procedures. Among the orders:

— "The interviewee should always be looking at, talking to, and connecting with, whomever is doing the interview...We want the audience to connect with the person, with their eyes, with their reactions...

— "If the background — an impressive office, an unusual setting — lends credibility and-or tells something important about the subject, show it once as an establishing shot...you don't need to see it again."

—"Never shoot an interview with the interviewee standing up. The results are never as good as when the person is sitting down and forced to take the proceedings seriously..."

—Interview subjects should be told to include the question in their answers. If they don't do it, "ask them to do it again."

Cosell smirks at the suggestion that the introduction of his new program was in part inspired by what's happening at CBS.

Sauter, the aggressive president of CBS Sports, has scrapped much of its trash-sport inventory and has assembled a weekend sports desk for news, features and issue stories that serves as a bridge for its events.

Keeper of Liz Taylor likes boss

WASHINGTON — Before you ask, Chen Sam knows what you want to hear:

What type of person is Elizabeth Taylor Warner... really?

Does she have violet eyes?

As Elizabeth Taylor Warner's personal assistant, Chen Sam is the keeper of the gate for one of the world's famous women. You want to talk to Elizabeth Warner? You talk first to Chen Sam.

That's generally a pleasant experience, say reporters who know, though sometimes Sam gets testy. For example, she won't return calls from the tabloids ("They just write a lot of smut, and no matter how nice or cooperative you are, they always print the opposite of what you're trying to say."), and she doesn't much like answering questions about her client's celebrated battle with the scales.

"That's none of anybody's business," snaps Sam. "She's a human being, and she's entitled to lose weight and pick it up like any of us."

The two most often asked questions about her famous client, Sam says, are about her personality and eye color.

"They ask what kind of person she is a million times," says Sam. "She's a very warm, sincere and loyal friend, besides being very kind. Does she have violet eyes? No. They change and vary from dark blue to gray blue."

Sam, 44, was born in Cairo, and she owes her exotic looks to an Egyptian father and Italian mother. At age 16, Sam trained as a pharmacist in England. And it was while she was in Africa working for a Swiss pharmaceutical firm seven years ago that she met Elizabeth Taylor and Richard Burton.

The couple was vacationing in Botswana, making plans to remarry, when Burton contracted malaria. With no hospital nearby, Sam arrived to care for the sick star.

During Sam's seven weeks with Burton, her 11-year-old son from an early marriage died of bronchial pneumonia. The Burtons invited Sam to return with them to London and then join them in Switzerland for the Christmas holidays. She never returned to the pharmaceutical business.

Bill Monroe is still king of bluegrass music

Bill Monroe is the champaigne of the bluegrass world — opening a club or kicking off a new festival without him would almost be unthinkable. Several weeks ago, he helped reopen the Birchmere, moving on the next morning to the First Annual Preakness Bluegrass Festival in Baltimore. "It's been a bunch of them," the taciturn Monroe says of his appearances at such openings. "I'm proud of all that. I'm glad to go ahead with it and carry it on just like I brought it down through the years. I keep the music going near right as I can."

In the dressing room of the Birchmere, the stately Monroe sits against the wall, quietly picking out an aimless warm-up tune on a 25-year-old mandolin that's all but lost its lacquer. Monroe, a man of few words, sits in a somber suit, a flowing mane of white hair trailing from the back of his 10-gallon white hat. As other band members come in and pick up their acoustic instruments, they slide into Monroe's melody; it's a tradition that dates back to 1939, when Monroe started the original Blue Grass Boys in Kentucky. Since then, he has been not only the originator but also the driving force behind the continually expanding popularity of a genre of music that took its name from his band.

What makes Monroe's evolution from pioneer to patriarch so unique is that, at age 71, he's playing his music pretty much the way he did in 1939 when he first went on the Grand Ole Opry. Then, the music's surging beat and new style of harmony singing — what came to be known as "the high, lonesome sound" — blew in like a breath of fresh air. Four decades later, there's very little age on songs like "Muleskinner Blues," "Footprints in the Snow," "Kentucky Waltz" or "Blue Moon of Kentucky" (which became a hit for the young Elvis Presley as well). Next month, MCA will add a new album of Monroe instrumentals to the 50 or so he has out already, yet Monroe sounds like a man beginning a career, not capping it. "I went on the Opry in 1939, and it went to growing, you know. It's taken a long time."

"I love bluegrass music and I have willpower, there's nobody I know could change me," Monroe insists quietly. "I was going to play it the way I thought it should be played, the way I knew my friends and fans would want me to play it."

The roots of Bill Monroe's music lie in Rosine, Ky., between Louisville and Paduca. Two older brothers, Charlie and Birch, took up guitar and fiddle; mandolin was all that was left for a shy but stubbornly proud farm boy who grew up surrounded by string band music and blues. Bill Monroe first tested his voice in the open fields; his ears, meanwhile, took in a wide variety of secular and religious folk traditions and styles, from the radio and live, and the young Monroe spent many hours pl$ying at local dances. The three brothers left home and worked the oil refineries around Chicago before catching on as a regional square dance band. Between 1936 and 1938, Charlie and Bill did very well as a traditional country and gospel brothers-style duo, successfully recording for Bluebird, but falling apart personally after frequent ego conflicts. In 1938 they separated, Charlie forming the Kentucky Partners and having his own, smaller career.

Bill Monroe's band started off as the Kentuckians before adopting the name the Blue Grass Boys in honor of their home state. Their success on the Opry made Monroe into a major star, to the point in the late '40s that he traveled around the country performing in a huge circus tent — and with his own baseball team. "There was a time when baseball in small towns kind of died away, you know," Monroe says wistfully. "And I had to work hard on my music. Bluegrass went to growing more, so I had to give all that up." He still has a full stable of foxhounds and drives friends crazy by insisting on showing farmers tricks learned on the Kentucky ground.

Symphony and Chorale open season next week

The Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale, directed by Dr. Thomas Hohstadt, opens its 1981-82 season with the annual Pops in the Park concerts Aug. 29 in Midland's Haley Park and Aug. 30 in Odessa's Freedom Park. Both concerts are at 8:15 p.m.

The concerts, sponsored by The Midland National Bank and The First National Bank of Odessa, will feature "A Tribute to John Lennon." The selections include "Love Me Do," "I Want to Hold Your Hand," "Please, Please Me," "Yesterday" and "Imagine."

The program will open and close with two rousing Sousa Marches — "The Washington Post March" and "Stars and Stripes Forever." Also included in the evening's entertainment will be the "Overture to Russlan and Ludmilla," a suite of folk songs by Percy Grainger and an old song melody which includes such favorites as "Give My Regards to Broadway."

These concerts are the traditional pre-season openers by the Midland-Odessa Symphony and Chorale. Both are free.

Haley Park is located next to the Marian Blakemore Planatarium and the Nita Stewart Haley Memorial Library.

Producer shakes Hollywood up

WASHINGTON — "Hollywood," says rookie producer Keith Barish, "is proof of the true so-called American entrepreneurial system."

Barish should know: He's one of the freest enterprises going, an enfant riche who in 1979 showed up in show biz with nothing more than a passion to master the movies and a personal fortune in eight figures.

He lost no time: In a two-year buying blitz, the 36-year-old real-estate tycoon has invested over $5 million in more than 20 film projects, including "Endless Love," starring Brooke Shields and directed by Franco Zeffirelli, which opened nationally in July.

He has further rocked the reel world by acquiring the rights to books generally regarded as too "litarary" for the tarnished silver screen, including William Styron's best-selling "Sophie's Choice" ($750,000) and D.M. Thomas' current best seller, "The White Hotel" ($500,000), along with a host of somewhat less cerebral projects, including Robin Cook's "Brain" ($750,000, William "Exorcist" Friedkin to direct).

"This is a business of personal opinion," he says with the ex-cathedral certainty of a Selznick-sized veteran. "And one reason that films have not been successful in Hollywood recently is that people are afraid to express their opinions, and are just guessing at what the public will want."

In that climate, many producers live in a perpetual acid-bath of aggravation that would strip the stomach lining off a shark. But as he leans back into the muted velours of his suite at Washington's Georgetown Inn, Barish's boyish face and the aggressive modesty of his blue blazer and rumpled tan slacks seem miscast for a man who works in the gee-whiz jungle of packaging pictures: acquiring properties, finding directors, contracting for screenplays, locating studios willing to develop the materials and actually make the movie.

Like most executive producers, he receives a fee from the studio, "anywhere from $100,000 (for 'Sophie's Choice') to $350,000 — which is a lot of money if you're not taking the risk of buying he material", as well as percentage "points" on future earnings from the film. But unlike all but a few cinema sheiks, he makes the initial investment. "Many people in Hollywood talk a good game but they never put up their own money. I do."

Conventional film-world wisdom says that only one movie in 10 makes money — once an attractive prospect for developers seeking tax shelters under looser laws. But now, Barish says, "with all the economic disadvantages, you either ought to believe passionately in what you're doing or just not do it." He reads all potential purchases himself, is content to make his company "essentially a home for directors," and generally stays out of production details. "Many people take exception to my theory of the business. But when you're developing as many projects as I am, you just can't be on the set making sure that the camels show up."

Not everyone is impressed with Barish's e'clat. "There's a natural resentment in this town toward people who haven't paid their dues," says one veteran studio executive. But many newcomers make good — most notably shopping-center developer Mel Simon, who produced "Love at First Bite" and "The Stunt Man," among others — and no one is accusing Barish of overselling himself. He gives a few small dinner parties, and socially "keeps a fairly low profile," according to one longtime Hollywood watcher.

On July 17, that profile will rise considerably with the opening of "Endless Love," complete with Diana Ross' soundtrack album, a Polygram tie-in. Barish calls the project "a textbook case of something that goes right."

Documentary airs on PBS

NEW YORK (AP) — Mike and Sonja Gilligan spent a pile of money — their own and others' — on "Christina's World," on the rather innocent belief that the TV networks would jump at the chance for a first-class documentary on an intriguing subject, featuring a well-known actress as narrator.

That was in 1972. "We got people to invest in the film with this naive faith that the networks — they were always crying for product — would buy it," says Mrs. Gilligan, the director-half of the husband-and-wife filmmaking team.

"We did the film, and then we learned the networks don't usually buy from outside — and especially independently produced documentaries," she says. "We spent four years trying to sell it, then decided public television was the only place to go."

The Public Broadcasting Service carried "Chistina's World," the story of the girl in Andrew Wyeth's famous painting, with Julie Harris as narrator, in 1976, and the film won four Emmy awards — for outstanding documentary, editing, cinematography and writing and direction.

"That gave us the leverage to go to corporations and foundations for funding for projects in the future," says Mrs. Gilligan. The couple's Hudson River Film & Video Co. has since provided PBS with two major documentary projects — "Henry Hudson's River: A Biography," in 1979, and "Reflections," a series of four half-hour films on Puerto Rican life and culture, in 1980.

Another product of Hudson River Film & Video — "No Excuse, Sir," on contemporary life at the U.S. Military Academy at West Point — will be broadcast by many PBS stations Friday evening as part of the system's "Exchange" series of independently produced documentaries.

A fourth documentary, called "Metro" on "glorious New York, New York," is in production, for broadcast by public TV in 1982.

"The message we've been getting from the networks is, 'People want to be entertained, not informed,'" Mrs. Gilligan says. "I've realized recently that's not true. People have been so turned off by the networks that all that's left are those who want only the most simple form of entertainment. It's become a self-fulfilling prophecy."

Court tells Nashville not to obey integration order

By The Associated Press

After closing nine schools and transferring 1,200 teachers and administrators to comply with a federal judge's integration order, Nashville, Tenn., has been told by an appeals' court not to obey the ruling.

In Michigan, meanwhile, a lottery drawing was set for tonight to choose 400 names from a list of 700 black students from Benton Harbor who want to transfer to a rural, white school district. The school system is under an unusual voluntary desegregation program, and the judge who ordered it says he is pleased so far with the response.

Nashville school board attorney William R. Willis left for Washington, D.C., to appeal today to the U.S. Supreme Court following the ruling by the 6th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

"We'll appeal until we've been turned down everywhere we can be turned down," Willis said Wednesday.

The appeals court order Wednesday came two days before school was to start in Nashville, and school officials said unless the nation's highest court allows the integration plan, 68,000 students will have a longer summer vacation than planned.

The Nashville school system has been the subject of integration cases for years. In April, U.S. District Judge Tom Wiseman issued a plan for desegregating the schools, where one-third of the students are black.

The plan called for closing nine elementary schools, reorganizing 29 schools and adding nine middle schools, beginning with the new school year.

Wiseman contends that integrated schools are desirable, but not if integration means widespread busing at every grade. The judge said busing makes it hard for parents to have close contact with teachers and hard for students to take part in extracurricular activities.

The higher court, however, agreed with a group of citizens who contended Wiseman's plan would reinstitute segregation in the combined city-county school district.

Willis conceded the plan would leave five elementary schools "without a black presence." But he said the school district has made good-faith efforts to follow desegregation directives.

Marian Harrison, a Nashville school board attorney, has said if the city were prevented from moving forward with Wiseman's plan it "would mean at least a 30-day delay to get back to the way things were" in the school system.

"It would mean a cost of about $160,000 in moving expenses for books and equipment, and it would mean that about 1,200 teachers would need to be transferred," she said.

The appeals court, in staying Wiseman's order, said it would hear an appeal in October.

In Michigan, U.S. District Judge Douglas Hillman, who designed the voluntary program, said the success of the plan will depend on "magnet" programs to attract transfers when school starts Aug. 31.

"I'm pleased," Hillman said. "We had people saying the black students would not want to go to Eau Claire and Coloma," Hillman said Wednesday.

Hillman took the 14-year-old case after U.S. District Judge Noel Fox cut his caseloadfor health resons. Fox had ordered mandatory busing between the mostly black Benton Harbor sytem and the to rural systems, which are predominantly white.

Hillman decided a program offering specialized courses such as computer scence, cosetology and house building could attract voluntary transfers.

Researcher says Bell rate request too high

AUSTIN (AP) — Southwestern Bell Telephone Co. is a "low-risk" operation, and regulators should give it less profit than it wants, a Public Utility Commission researcher says.

Gail Odell of the economic research division turned in her findings this week, and they became part of a staff recommendation that new Bell rates should be far less than the company requested.

Bell wants increases totaling $469.8 million a year, with 87 percent of that amount coming from higher rates for basic residential telephone service.

The PUC staff said Bell needs additional revenue of $249.28 million a year. Staff members are expected to issue recommendations Monday on how Bell should obtain the extra money.

If Bell gets its wish, it will cost $5.45 a month more to have a one-party telephone.

Ms. Odell recommended that the PUC issue rates giving Bell a 14.14 percent return on its equity, or an 11.91 percent rate of return on the original cost of its Texas investment.

Bell requested a 17.1 percent return on equity, or 12.72 percent on its investment. It said it is earning only 8.49 percent on investment now, even though the PUC had authorized 10.82 percent in previous rate orders.

Ms. Odell said in her report that Bell and its parent corporation, American Telephone and Telegraph, were characterized by "low risk and high liquidity."

She said on one investment service's risk scale of 1 to 5, Bell and AT&T rate a 1.

While the telephone industry is entering a new era of competition and technology, "AT&T has enormous financial and technological resources with which to manage change," Ms. Odell said.

The major part of the Bell system's business will remain safe from competition, she said, and "the continued natural monopoly status of local service affords considerable protection."

Southwestern Bell is even less risky than AT&T as a whole, she said, because Texas is less sensitive to business cycles than the rest of the nation and has greater "economic vitality."

Ms. Odell said AT&T's ability to finance future construction and equipment purchases without going to capital markets will be enhanced by new Federal Communication Commission depreciation rules. AT&T's internal cash flow generation is expected to increase from 64 percent in 1980 to 85 percent or 95 percent in 1985, she said.

Dale Schaefer, PUC staff accountant, said Bell had over-stated its expenses in its rate request.

He chopped the estimated operating and maintenance expenses by $46.6 million because of an advantage Bell will gain from new FCC accounting rules. Schaefer disallowed another $1.45 million Bell had claimed in wage costs resulting from a new "personal" holiday it had granted its employees. He said Bell could adjust work schedules to get its work done without incurring higher wage costs.

Widow of Oswald wants grave opened

FORT WORTH (AP) — The widow of Lee Harvey Oswald says she wants to exhume her husband's body because she "strongly believes the grave has been tampered with" and she is tired of "stupid speculation and theories."

The slender, 39-year-old former wife of the alleged killer of President John F. Kennedy filed suit in state district court Wednesday, asking that her husband's grave at Rose Hill Burial Park be opened and the body examined.

"My life is unbearable because every time a new theory came along, I suffered," she said. "I hope this (suit) will be for everybody's benefit."

Mrs. Porter's attorney, Jerry Pittman, said the suit was filed because of confidential conversations between members of the Warren Commission obtained in the past year showed some of the members felt Oswald's body had been moved and was either cremated or hidden.

The Warren Commission investigated the Nov. 22, 1963, shooting death of Kennedy and the slaying of Oswald by Dallas night club owner Jack Ruby two days later.

The Dallas attorney declined to reveal more information about the alleged conversations, saying the material would come out in the trial.

The case was assigned to State District Judge James Wright, who last September refused to grant British author Michael Eddowes' request to unearth the body.

Eddowes claims that a Soviet agent, not Oswald is buried in the grave and that the agent took Oswald's place when the ex-Marine defected to the Soviet Union in 1959, where he met Mrs. Porter.

Attorneys for Eddowes appealed Wright's ruling. The appeal is scheduled to be heard in Fort Worth Sept. 10.

The suit Wednesday was filed against Lee Harvey Oswald's older brother Robert, a Wichita Falls businessman who last year opposed Eddowes' efforts to open the grave.

Robert Oswald declined comment on the suit, but his attorney, Craig Fowler of Dallas, called the move a "publicity stunt" and said the suit was based on "speculation, conjecture and hearsay."

Mrs. Porter testified in behalf of Eddowes, but said Wednesday she does not believe his theory and she received no money from him for testifying.

The suit filed on behalf of Mrs. Porter claims "probative evidence exists that the body allegedly buried in the grave marked Lee Harvey Oswald had been illegally moved and secretly hidden," without Mrs. Porter's approval.

The suit also alleges there is evidence the body in the grave is "an individual other than Lee Harvey Oswald."

Boy now anxious to return to air-conditioned classroom

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — Raul Espino Jr., who spent much of last school year confined to a temperature-controlled cubicle, says he's eager to start second grade now that a federal judge has ordered school officials to air condition his classroom.

"I really like the decision," the 7-year-old said Wednesday. U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela agreed with Raul's parents that a 5-foot by 5-foot box cooled with a portable air-conditioning unit was "inappropriate" for the boy's needs.

Raul, a straight-A student, suffered paralysis and damage to his nervous system in an auto accident. He cannot control his body temperature and must stay in environments between 72 and 76 degrees.

The Brownsville Independent School District built the enclosure last fall after deciding to transfer Raul from Moody School for the Handicapped to a regular school. None of the district's regular elementary classrooms are air conditioned, although the high schools have air conditionin.

During the early fall and late spring, Raul's teacher testified during an Aug. 3 hearing before Vela, the boy spent between 75 and 100 percent of his time in the cubicle. When temperatures dropped in late fall and winter, he could rejoin his classmates.

The boy's parents, Ana and Raul Espino Sr., argued the cubicle separated their son unduly from his classmates and violated federal law requiring handicapped children to be placed in the "least restrictive" environment.

The Espinos lost appeals of the case before the local school board and the Texas State Board of Education after school Superintendent Raul Besteiro claimed a "Pandora's box" would open if Raul's classroom were air conditioned. He said parents of other children and teachers would complain of the preferential treatment.

Congressman says resignation of Watt in order

WASHINGTON (AP) — A congressman who questioned Interior Secretary James G. Watt about his religious convictions says President Reagan should demand Watt's resignation for trying to "blackmail" a committee chairman for not stopping the questioning.

Rep. Jim Weaver, D-Ore., made the statement Wednesday after an dispute between Watt and House Interior Commiittee Chairman Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., about the questioning broke into the open.

An Interior Department representative, however, said Watt intended no threat when he told Udall, five days after Weaver's interrogation, that he would not be able to push an Arizona aqueduct project "until I get my personal energies rebuilt."

Department spokesman Harmon Kallman said the secretary's comment was "only ... a statement of fact about the amount of strength and time he has to devote to matters."

Watt was apparently offended by Weaver's questions at a July 16 hearing on a proposed reorganization of the Office of Surface Mining. The questions were related to statements Watt made to the committee Feb. 5 after Weaver asked him if he agreed "that we should leave some of our scenic resources for our children" and "not just gobble them up all at once."

"Absolutely," said Watt. "That is the delicate balance the secretary of the interior must have, to be steward for the natural resources for this generation as well as future generations.

"I do not know how many future generations we can count on before the Lord returns," Watt said. "Whatever it is, we have to manage with a skill to have the resources needed for future generations."

In his statement Wednesday, Weaver said he asked Watt at the July 16 hearing "if he would base his strip mining policy on the imminent return of the Lord."

Watt and committee Republicans argued that this overstepped the boundary between church and state, but Udall overruled their objections.

Weaver's statementsaid the uestion was proper because Watt previously "indicated that his personal beliefs with regard to religion would play a part in his decision-making process.

"I honestly wanted to find out if the Interior Department intended to pursue a strip mining policy as if there would be no tomorrow," he said.

"Secretary Watt is pursuing a policy of blackmail and censorship," he charged. "I am outraged that a member of the Cabinet would threaten a committee chairman by offering a water project if the chairman places a 'gag order' on certain types of questions. Clearly it is time for the president to ask for James Watt's resignation."

Udall stopped short of calling for the secretary's resignation but said, "The White House is going to have to increasingly ask itself if this is the kind of man it wants over there in charge of resource issues."

Udall said he allowed Weaver to ask the questions because Watt brought the subject up himself in February and it was "clearly relevant."

However, he said, he also thought the reference to religion raised "some questions of propriety and some questions of taste."

As a result, Undall said, he called Watt later "to express my regret that the matter had been raised again and I had not overruled it."

Watt has been quoted in The Washington Post as telling Arizona Gov. Bruce Babbitt and the state's congressional delegation July 21 that "some days, after what I went through, I really didn't have the energy to do my job. ... Until I get my personal energies rebuilt, I can't do anything about the Tucson aqueduct, and I don't know how long that will take."

Post writer David S. Broder said he asked Watt if he believed he had Udall under control.

"That's right," the interior secretary reportedly replied. "He knows he needs to control his committee and not allow the religious attacks he has in the past."

Congressman reportedly warned before ambush

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — An aide to slain Rep. Leo Ryan and a former Peoples Temple member say they warned the congressman about Larry Layton just moments before an airstrip ambush left Ryan and four others dead.

Jackie Speier, Ryan's legislative aide who was shot five times during the attack, testified Wednesday in the second day of Layton's murder-conspiracy trial that she felt uneasy about Layton and didn't want him in a U.S.-bound plane with the congressman.

And James Cobb Jr., a former cultist who accompanied the California Democrat to the Jonestown, Guyana, settlement, said he had warned Ryan he didn't believe Layton was sincere about his desire to defect from the temple founded by the Rev. Jim Jones.

Cobb told the U.S. District Court jury he managed to escape into the jungle when the Port Kaituma airstrip exploded in gunfire Nov. 18, 1978, but Ms. Speier was caught in the hail of bullets.

She said she saw Ryan bleeding profusely and was trying to help him when he was shot a second time.

"I was shot five times at point-blank range," she said. "I had broken bones jutting out of my arm. I was shot in the back and in the thigh."

Ms. Speier, now a San Mateo County supervisor, said Layton "indicated Jonestown was an extraordinarily good place to live" but insisted he wanted to defect just hours later as other temple members prepared to leave.

She said although she believed some Jonestown residents were victims of "mind control," she saw no such evidence in the cases of Layton and temple leaders.

Layton, 35, is on trial for conspiring to kill Ryan and conspiring in the attempted murder of State Department official Richard Dwyer, who was wounded in the ambush. Prosecutors said Dwyer would be called to testify later in the trial.

Also killed in the ambush were NBC television newsman Don Harris, NBC cameraman Robert Brown, San Francisco Examiner photographer Greg Robinson and Patricia Parks, a temple defector.

Harold Cordell, a temple member since the 1950s who at one time headed an armed security unit for Jones, told the jury Layton had been a weapon-wielding member of the security team while the cult was based in California.

Under prosecution questioning, Cordell, who was among the defectors who escaped after the airstrip ambush, said other members of the aliforniaarmed security contingent included several temple leaders who later led the attack against Ryan.

ITHACA, N.Y. (AP) — An Ithaca woman who reportedly performed a Caesarean section on herself with a cheap, imitation pearl-handled pocket knife, is in a psychiatric center today for tests while her tiny baby girl was in stable condition at a Syracuse hospital.

As prosecutors and social workers considered what to do about Deborah Stagg, 29, and doctors expressed wonderment and disbelief at the police story of self-surgery, 2-pound Anna Stagg was holding her own at St. Joseph's Hospital Health Center.

Miss Stagg was transferred Wednesday to the Willard Psychiatric Center, about 20 miles north of Ithaca in Seneca County, police said.

Police found her walking on an Ithaca street Sunday morning. The naked, hours-old baby was in a carrier on her back, exposed to the cool morning air.

Miss Stagg's clothes were blood-stained. Police took her to Tompkins Community Hospital where, they said, a surgeon discovered the woman had performed the operation on herself, using an inexpensive pocket-knife.

She had sewn her skin with needle and thread but neglected to repair internal organs, police said.

Authorities said Miss Stagg had not been in labor, but apparently did not want to carry the baby any longer.

Police did not identify the surgeon who saw Miss Stagg, and other doctors were skeptical.

"I don't believe it, without talking to the doctor," said Dr. Maurice Druzin, assistant professor of obstetrics at Cornell Medical College in New York. He said it was more likely the baby was born normally but prematurely, and that the woman then cut her abdomen.

Ithaca obstetrician Lolita Seetharam said she had never heard of such a case. "This should go in medical journals," she said.
