Drought continues despite rainfall

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The general rain that somewhat soothed much of the parched West Texas plains on Thursday morning was far from a drought-buster.

Midland's official 1.24-inch predawn rainfall in a three-hour span brings June's rainfall to date to 3.14 inches, which is well above the month's 1.55-inch normal rainfall.

"We need to have a lot more of these before we would ever consider the drought to be somewhat eased," said Brad McGavock, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

The rain brings the year's total precipitation to 5.75 inches, which still is shy of the normal 5.86-inch rainfall to date.

Midland's record rainfall for June is 5.10 inches in 1940.

May and September normally are the year's highest rainfall

Shortage of water still plaguing some families

For many years a shortage of water has plagued West Texas and has spread toward rural areas of the region. The Permian Basin Regional Planning Commission (PBRPC) continues to concentrate on solving the problem.

10 percent of houses in violation of city code

By Ian Heald
Staff Writer

Ten percent of Midland homes are in violation of city code, a Midland official has warned.

Sylvester Cantu, community development administrator for the city of Midland, said the sub-standard housing rate is a cause for concern.

"We'd like to bring that percentage down," Cantu said. "You certainly don't want folks living in dilapidated housing. Housing stock in Midland is getting older. We need to try to find other sources and go to the private sector and banks for home improvement loans."

Cantu said nine of every 10 homes considered to be of sub-standard quality can be repaired. Funding for such improvements is offered through funds provided by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development. The tentative allocation for fiscal year 2001 made available to the city of Midland is $410,000.

But, Cantu said, only 5 to 10 percent of those interested in funding assistance have passed the screening process.

Cantu said homeowners interested in applying for the federal funds made available through the city must meet the following criteria:

- Applicant must have owned the home at least two years;
- Property must be listed under the applicant's name;
- Applicants must have credit;
- Applicant's debt to income ratio needs to be favorable.

Cantu said the funds are loaned to the successful applicant at a rate of 3 percent. No grants are given.

Cantu said the key to reducing the number of sub-standard homes in Midland is by involving the private sector.

To attract private sector involvement Cantu said he is currently drawing up a proposal that would propose to unify the city and some community banks by offering loans to those Midlanders whose homes are in need of repair.

"We need private sector funding with lower interest rates," Cantu said. "Maybe we can give 25 percent of the loan at a deferred interest rate while the bank loans the other 75 percent (to each applicant). By bringing in the private sector we can do more assistance."

While the majority of the sub-standard living in Midland is on the south and east sides of town, Cantu said the housing stock in central and western Midland is reaching 40 plus years in age, which he said means many of those homes could soon need repairs.

And as Cantu believes 10 percent is high. The numbers vary in other Texas cities.

Vicki Covey, assistant director of community services, said the most current statistics show only 5.9 percent of Amarillo's housing structures are at sub-standard levels. The percentage of homes beyond repair is 1.5 percent.

Unmarked intersection worries neighborhood

By Emily Statton
MRT Correspondent

What do you get when you cross an unmarked intersection with speeding high school drivers?

An accident waiting to happen, according to many residents of Storey and Broadway streets.

The area where the 900 blocks of East and West Broadway curve to meet has long concerned Midlanders who live in the neighborhood. A short, one-way street branching off Cuthbert and both of the Broadways feeds into a small intersection in front of the 1600 block of Storey Avenue. None of the three streets has a traffic sign.

"This intersection is a terror," said Janet W. Pollard of 1601 Cuthbert Ave. "The city needs to set some sort of boundary to alert people that this is a danger spot."

Ms. Pollard and her son Graham have often witnessed racing Midland High School students at Zachery Field or Cuthbert Avenue slam on their brakes when another car simultaneously approaches the intersection.

"During the school year we have so many high school students zooming through, and no traffic signs. Someday, someone is going to have a really good wreck at that intersection," said Kathy Wallace, who has lived on Storey Avenue for 19 years. She shrugged her shoulders. "Who's supposed to stop?"

The question even had Sgt. Kenneth Rogers of the Midland Police Department going for a closer look at the map. After a few seconds of scrutiny, Rogers concluded that "the West Broadway driver would precede the East Broadway driver who would precede the Cuthbert driver."

"Unless, of course, the car on Cuthbert turned right and both of the Broadways turned left. Then, no one would need to stop," he said.

Rogers laughed.

"It sounds pretty confusing," he admitted.

He expressed anxiety that most cars would not use a signal at the intersection because each of the converging streets curve into each other.

"Most drivers don't use a blinker when they come around a curve," Rogers said, "So it might be hard for the approaching vehicles to realize if another car was going to cross their path."

Midland High School student Risa Holland, who has often driven down East Broadway on her way home from school, also voiced frustration with the layout of the street. Ms. Holland complained that adults driving through the area often honk and cut her off when attempting to reach Cuthbert.

The intersection where East Broadway and West Broadway meet, just south of Cuthbert Avenue, is an accident just waiting to happen, say many residents in the neighborhood.

ATC raises questions among MISD trustees

(Editors note: This is the second installment in a two-part series about the Advanced Technology Center.)

By Jeff Stevens
Staff Writer

Certain Midland Independent School District board members have raised questions about the district's own commitment to the Advanced Technology Center.

Linda Foster, a new MISD trustee, past president of the Midland Chamber of Commerce and one of the founding mothers of the ATC, specifically questioned whether MISD is making a considerable commitment to the ATC. At Tuesday's school board meeting, it became apparent that some higher level computer courses such as computer drafting will continue at Lee High School and Midland High School, but will not be offered at the ATC. Ms. Foster also questioned whether the district would be duplicating courses at the ATC and the home campuses.

MISD intends to offer four courses at the ATC beginning August 2000 — Business Computer Information Systems I, Business Computer Information Systems II (BCIS II), Medical Administrative Procedures and an electronics course. That's compared to 26 courses consisting of 33 classes being offered by Midland College. At least one of MISD's four courses will be taught by an MC instructor, not by MISD. One of MISD's offerings, Business Computer Information Systems I will continue to be offered at the high schools.

"If we are going to offer them (courses) in both locations, then I think we are headed for failure at the ATC," Ms. Foster said.

Ms. Foster was not alone in her concern.

"I agree with that wholeheartedly. There are going to have to be some significant changes and those people on our high school campuses who may be trying to hold on to their own turf and hold on to their courses, those things are going to have to change." MISD trustee James Fuller said, adding that MISD may have to look at some scheduling changes such as a form of block scheduling to accommodate those changes.

Trustee Dale Strauss also shared some of the same concerns.

"The only concern I have is that we utilize it as much as possible. I think the concept is a good idea," Strauss said. But, "I want to make sure we are 100 percent committed to using that facility and that opportunity."

Strauss also raised concerns about where and what courses were being offered. "We've got some advanced technology courses (advanced graphics and computer design) over at the high school that you would expect to be at the ATC," Strauss said.

When the conversation surfaced at the Tuesday board meeting, Ricardo Torres, executive director of secondary education, explained that both high school principals wanted to retain those courses at their campuses. It was further explained that scheduling could be a problem if students had to go to the ATC just to take those technology classes.

"This is not about protecting turf," Ms. Fos-

The Paradox Of Freedom
Our glorious freedom as a nation and people was secured for us by those men and women who took a stand against government tyranny and thus signed that historic document we call the Declaration of Independence in 1776. Brave and dedicated leaders took their stand and were willing to fight for the right to be free. Today as we approach this great national holiday, is there a paradox existing in our freedom as we begin this 21st century?
"A tenet or position contrary to received opinion." Mr. Webster so defined a "paradox." And you ask, "what is the paradox of our day?" When big business and money take control, tyranny returns. I sat down for a quiet lunch and conversation with my wife recently, and was interrupted five times in an hour by telemarketers taking away my freedom! What gives them the right? My taxes will soon increase for a sports complex costing $30 million and more, and children who were freed from archaic court mandates related to integration are still going to be bussed across town because of officials who fear a vocal minority. Parents must tell school children to leave their Bibles home while other kids bring guns. That's just the "tip of the iceberg." The question is, "are we still folks who live in the land of the free?"
Yes indeed. Because of God-centered principles of old, our faith keeps us free. Jesus said in John 8:36, "If the Son therefore shall make you free, you shall be free indeed." But hold on tight; it may be slipping!

San Miguel put to death for Taco Bell holdup

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press

HUNTSVILLE — Convicted killer Jessy Carlos San Miguel, a 10th grade dropout with a history of mayhem, was executed Thursday evening for leaving four people dead after robbing a Dallas-area Taco Bell nine years ago.

In a brief final statement, San Miguel urged friends and relatives watching him die to be strong and said he loved them.

"It's going to be all right," he said. "Ironic, isn't it?" he noted while his arms were outstretched on the death chamber gurney. "I'm a cross. Y'all take care of each other. I'll be watching over you."

Asked by the warden if that was all he had to say, San Miguel replied, "Yeah."

As the drugs began taking effect, he sputtered and gasped. He was pronounced dead at 6:19 p.m., eight minutes after the lethal doses began.

Six members of his victims' families watched him die, but he never acknowledged their presence.

"It was very disappointing," Mary Gomez, whose daughter and nephew were killed at the restaurant, said after watching San Miguel die. "He at least could have said: 'I'm sorry.'"

San Miguel's lethal injection, the fifth of the month in Texas and the 24th this year, attracted little of the attention of a week ago when hundreds of demonstrators and media descended on Huntsville for the execution of Gary Graham.

Less than two dozen death penalty opponents showed up outside the prison. There was only one television crew.

Graham's claims that he was innocent and was tried unfairly put under intense national scrutiny the support of the death penalty by Texas Gov. George W. Bush, the presumptive Republican presidential nominee.

Unlike Graham, who was belligerent with officers throughout his final hours, San Miguel was reported docile as his punishment time approached and the U.S. Supreme Court was delivered 11th-hour appeals. He selected an extensive final meal that included pizza, 10 quesadillas, five strips of grilled beef, five strips of stir-fried beef, ice cream, double fudge chocolate cake, broccoli, grapes and tea.

The carnage after San Miguel and an accomplice left the suburban Irving Taco Bell before dawn Jan. 26, 1991 was so overwhelming, the police officer who discovered the four bodies in the walk-in freezer fainted.

And there was so much blood on the floor, authorities had to use a squeegee to locate the spent cartridges from the murder weapon.

"It was just a cold-blooded, methodical execution of four people," Toby Shook, an assistant district attorney in Dallas County who prosecuted the case, said.

San Miguel and his attorneys contended he unfairly was convicted because of racial stereotyping, that prosecutors and his own court-appointed defense attorney cited Mexican-American culture in their arguments to the jury that sentenced him to death.

"What troubles me is Gov. Bush continually tells the media and the newspapers that he has always been fair, that they have ways in the system to be ensured everybody has a fair trial, but all that is not true," San Miguel said in a death row interview Wednesday.

San Miguel was convicted and condemned for fatally shooting Michael Phelan, 28, the assistant manager at the restaurant. The other victims included restaurant employees Theresa Fraga, 16, of Irving, and her cousin, Frank Fraga, 23, of Dallas; and a friend of Ms. Fraga's, Son Truong Nguyen, 35, of Mesquite.

Theresa Fraga was six months pregnant. Nguyen had been wounded while serving in the Vietnamese army, then fled the war-torn country for what he thought would be a life of safety in the United States.

Phelan and Nguyen were shot once in the head. The Fraga cousins were shot twice in the head.

San Miguel and a companion, Jerome Mike Green, were pulled over by Irving police who suspected them of drunken driving. When the officers found a Taco Bell bag filled with $1,390, two ski masks, a 9 mm pistol and two pairs of gloves, they began checking the chain's restaurants in the area for a robbery. The slaughter was discovered a few blocks away.

Convicted killer Graham buried one week after execution

HOUSTON (AP) — One week after his execution, convicted killer Gary Graham was given a three-hour farewell Thursday before Nation of Islam adherents and New Black Panthers carried him to his grave.

Several ministers, including the Rev. Jesse L. Jackson Sr., called upon more than 2,000 people at the funeral service to use Graham as a martyr to end the death penalty, which they consider racist and classist.

"Sleep on, prince," Jackson said, looking down upon Graham's open casket at the head of The Community of Faith church in north Houston. "Because you sleep, we are awake now."

Graham supporters and death penalty activists say Graham was improperly convicted and condemned for the May 13, 1981 shooting death of Bobby Lambert in a Houston parking lot. They contend he was not afforded adequate legal counsel and that a jury put too much stock in a single eyewitness.

The northeast Houston native confessed to a violent 1981 crime spree in which at least two other victims were shot, but always denied killing Lambert.

Graham was executed June 22 after the state parole board and the U.S. Supreme Court turned down his waning appeals. Gov. George W. Bush was powerless to stop the execution, though he indicated moments before Graham's death that he was not inclined to do so anyway.

The Graham execution was the most contentious in Bush's tenure since the Republican announced his run for president.

The funeral, coming the morning after a four-hour memorial in the same church the night before, included an African ritual by black nationalists, musical interludes and pastoral speeches.

Graham, 36, was remembered by the African name he gave himself, Shaka Sankofa. During the funeral, Jackson and others compared the admitted serial robber at various times to Nelson Mandela, the Rev. Martin Luther King Jr., Moses and Jesus Christ.

AP Photo
Motapa Live, left, beats a drum as Kofi Taharka performs an African Libations ritual at the funeral for Gary Graham Thursday, in Houston. Graham's execution last week for a 1981 murder presented Gov. George W. Bush with the loudest outcry over capital punishment since he began his run for president.

"No matter what your past has been, you can change," said Nation of Islam Minister Robert Muhammad, who gave Graham guidance in his final hours. "We would not be here if this man had not changed."

Though Graham was not a Muslim, Muhammad said he believed his final statement, in which he called for an end to capital punishment, was similar to Scripture.

"God spoke through Shaka, to call for a moratorium on the death penalty," he said.

Jackson also had voter registration cards distributed, saying that blacks should unite at the ballot box against Bush, whom he compared to a Biblical serpent.

Dianne Clements, with the victims' rights group Justice For All, was unhappy to hear Jackson and others were honoring Graham.

"I find it very disturbing that respected civil rights leaders would come to Houston to pay homage to the killer, robber, raper Gary Graham, one of the worst human rights violators Houston has ever seen," she said.

DROUGHT: Lake Ivie is at 60 percent capacity months in Midland.

(From 1A)

"This last rain . . . was mainly in northern and central Permian Basin," McGavock said. "Fort Stockton didn't report any rainfall."

Most of the rainfall was north of Midland and included Martin, Dawson, Gaines, Andrews, and Lubbock counties, where heavier rainfalls were reported.

The Midland area got some relief.

"It's going to help. This is just what we needed," said Mike Denny, a Midland cotton farmer and manager of the Midland Farmers Cooperative. "If a couple of more showers like this come along (soon), we will make a cotton crop. It may not be worth nothing (due to low cotton prices), but we will make a cotton crop."

Rainfall at the gin was about 1.2 inches, Denny said, but dropped to as low at 0.2 inch at Greenwood and to 0.9 inch south of Midland.

Big Lake missed out on the rain, said Big Lake Chamber of Commerce Manager Tammy Blakely. But the community earlier in June got several inches of rain, which put water in the 1,000-acre dry lake bed south of town. "We have lots of frogs and lots of people looking at it out there."

But the cooling rains, which brought some relief to the dry rangeland, also benefited Midland's Paul Davis Water Well Field, the city's supplemental water source

"It rained, so we shut that down," said Ken Jones, an engineer who is Midland's director of utilities.

Last year, the well field north of Midland in Martin county supplied 7 percent of the city's water needs, Jones noted. Most of Midland's municipal water comes from the Big Spring-based Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD), which operates three reservoirs: Lake J.B. Thomas near Snyder northeast of Midland, the E.V. Spence Reservoir near Robert Lee, and the O.H. Ivie Reservoir, which is Midland's principal source of water, near Ballinger in west-central Texas, about 158-pipeline miles from Midland.

In 1998, about 20 percent of Midland's water came from the well field.

Lake Ivie, which had dropped to about 50 percent capacity earlier this year, currently is at 60 percent capacity.

"It looks better than it did," said Steve Hofer, a Midland lawyer who is Midland's representative on the CRMWD board of directors. "In 1997, it was 103 percent of capacity" but had dropped dramatically in the continuing drought that took root in 1993.

"We have been blessed with rains in June of 2000 as well as with cooler temperatures," Hofer said. Cooler temperatures reduce natural evaporation from the lakes and generally cut down on people's usages, especially in watering lawns and yards.

Lake Ivie, which covers about 30 square miles, has a 554,340-acre-foot capacity. An acre-foot is 43,560 cubic feet of water —an acre a foot deep.

Hofer said Lake Ivie likely will get "hardly any" runoff from Thursday's rains, which affected the northern and western parts of the Colorado River Basin. Those rain mainly will benefit Lake Thomas mostly and Lake Spence somewhat.

However, June and May rains benefited Lake Ivie and also gave some relief to Lake Ballinger, which supplies the city of Ballinger and which had been "in a critical situation.

"The critical shortage has been abated," Hofer said.

Chris Wingert, the CRMWD's assistant general manager, noted Lake Ivie at 60 percent capacity means that it's "40 percent empty. And that's the fullest lake we've got." Lake Thomas is at 15 percent capacity, and Lake Spence is at 20 percent capacity.

"We are not out of the drought by any stretch of the imagination," said Wingert, who noted that the rain was "definitely encouraging."

Sam Field, the Texas Agricultural Extension Service agricultural agent for Midland County, said, "We won't really know whether we are out of the drought until we look back.

"Even during a drought, you will have individual years that will have normal rainfall or even above normal rainfall," Field said. "You may have well below average (rain) and then a wet year and a couple of more years of drought.

"We have gotten some good rainfalls. Our cotton crop overall is kind of behind schedule," he said. "We received rainfall in late March and early April, but most of that was gone before planting. A lot of those (farmers) were waiting on a rain in order to plant because two-thirds to three-fourths of our acreage is dryland." The remainder is irrigated farmland.

"Until that May 19 (general) rain, there wasn't that much cotton in the ground," Field said. "Since then, we've gotten good showers about every two or three weeks thus far."

Rangeland is "still in pretty bad shape," Field said. "Most of that grass was just flat dead. So, it has had to come back from seed. A lot of the green you see from the roads is actually annual weeds," which will "pop up and be green for a while, dry up and be gone in a hurry."

Rancher T.O. Midkiff said the Midkiff-Saint Lawrence area southeast of Midland got some lightning but no rain.

The rangeland is fair there, he said. "Where we had any grass, it's greened up. But we had so many bare spots. Some places where we have had some rain about every week, it's coming back a little bit. We've got a few weeds."

The cotton crop is "fair for those who have any," Midkiff said. "Most of the drip (-irrigation) boys are the only ones who have any stand."

The livestock business is suffering. Midkiff said that the usual run of 20 head of cattle to the section (640 acres) has in cases been cut to two head due to the lack of grass.

Of the rainfall, Midland farmer Jon Baumann said that "every little bit helps.

"So far so good," Baumann said, who noted that the drought "tapers in on you.

"It could be a lot worse." The rainfall has been "kind of spotted." The early-Thursday rain "was a little bit more of a general rain."

Martin County cotton farmer and ginner Myrl Mitchell noted that the 1-inch and 2.2-inch rainfall in the Lenorah-Grady area was "spotted, but it was all very nice — very much appreciated. Obviously, it was general."

The Welch community in northern Dawson County got about five inches of rainfall, Mitchell said. "And back southwest of Lamesa, they had heavy rain, and I saw evidence of some bad hail."

The Lubbock area received intense rainfall.

"Between Tahoka and Lubbock, some of them farmers, I guarantee you, would love to see some sunshine and dry weather right now," Mitchell said. "In some places, they (farmers) can't get into their fields."

Mitchell noted that since 1986 and 1987, when the Lenorah area took on 40 to 50 inches of rain in a 12-month period, the timely rainfalls have "just been hit and miss. And there have been more misses than there have been hits."

SHORTAGE: Water is PBRPC's top priority

(From 1A)

day. The Community Development Fund has provided more than $27 million in funds to Permian Basin cities and counties since 1983.

The Permian Basin Regional Review Committee voted to keep water and sewage as its top priority, followed by housing rehabilitation.

"There are a lot of areas in the city that do not have adequate water systems or water pressure for their residences," Director of Regional Planning Jerry Tschauner said. "Some don't even have city water."

Many water systems in the area were installed in the 1930s and 1940s, said Tschauner. The systems have many problems leading to loss of water pressure and water capacity. Sewage systems existing for too long also suffer the same consequences.

Roger Meurer, president of the Steering Committee for Westview Water District, attended Thursday's meeting to voice his opinion on the importance of the area's shortage of water.

"We've been trying to get water for a long time. All the water wells are about dry. I know there are grants available," Meurer said. "We have 75 members. We need to get water to at least 75 families."

As of now, Meurer and his committee plan to purchase water from the city, but still will need funds to build pipes carrying the water to their district distribution point. From there, an engineer and a contractor will be hired to design a 4 1/2-mile ditch to get the water to the households.

"We know this is the number one priority in our rural areas. It has been for several years," said PBRPC Executive Director Ernie Crawford. "In this part of the country, it is always a priority."

HOUSING: Cantu says many homeowners express concern

(From 1A)

hand, reports 17 percent of its housing structures, or 27,972 homes, are at sub-standard levels.

"Depressing, but true," said El Paso Planner Jim Fraser.

Fourteen percent of El Paso homes are in need of repair, 3 percent are beyond repair, Fraser said.

Mary Dominguez, director of community development for the city of Odessa, said she had no data on what percentage of housing structures were sub-standard but guessed that it could be as high as 25 percent.

"We don't have any data or hard facts," Ms. Dominguez said.

Cantu said some homeowners express no concern over the deterioration of their homes, but most are concerned and need financial assistance for improvements.

"For folks that don't have much choice we'd like to offer them options to improve their homes," Cantu said. "It's just a fact of life that homes age. You can't address it all. But you can improve it where people are concerned about changing it."

Many of the current sub-standard homes are in the region of the city represented by Midland District 2 City Council member James M. Bradford, who agreed that the city needs to do what it can to improve housing conditions.

"How can we lower that percentage?" asked Bradford. "I don't know that at this time. I need to research to see what can be done as opposed to what is being done."

ATC: At least two courses will help students find jobs

ter said in response to principals desiring to keep classes at their campuses. "This is about creating an educated workforce."

At least two of MISD's ATC courses will equip students to obtain a job immediately after high school. Completion of the BCIS II course will allow students to take an exam to receive certification as a Microsoft technician. The medical administration procedure course, according to Torres, would allow students to obtain a job in a medical office or hospital administration office.

Fuller raised other concerns in regard to support of the ATC. "Things are apparently going quite well. However, as I said at the board meeting, the private sector has to step up to the plate much more aggressively," Fuller said. "Prior to the ATC, we were told time and time again, that the private sector would be a major contributor."

Rebecca Bell, director of the ATC, said however, that the community at large and particularly the business community is supporting the effort. At Tuesday's meeting, she cited the Wagner and Brown challenge grant, the ATC advisory committee and the news that several other groups are working toward supporting the initiative. Wagner & Brown has offered a $1 million grant, pledging $1 million if the college can garner an additional million from other parties.

"However, the way matching grants work, somebody's got to come up with the million dollars. If that's the case, then the private sector needs to get with it," said Fuller.

Ms. Bell countered by citing the Abell-Hanger Foundation's $2 million commitment to the project, as well as other supporters. She added that the Midland New Car Dealers Association is seeking equipment donations from their masthead companies such as GM and Ford and that other businesses are looking at sponsoring the ATC. She also pointed out that Mobil donated all of the office furniture at the facility.

As for the advisory committee, it's made up of some 18 business and community members plus various other school and college representatives. The committee meets quarterly to discuss curriculum and course offerings and seek feedback from the community. On the committee are Mike Arnold, Don-Nan Pump and Supply Company; Spencer Beal, BTA oil producers; Jim Byerlotzer, Key Energy Services; Jerry Morales, Gerardo's Casita; Dennis Clayton, Midland Chamber of Commerce; Patrick Cordero, Strategic Abstract and Title Corporation; David Diaz, Hispanic Chamber of Commerce; Jim Henry, Petroleum Oil; Doug Henson, SBC Corporation; John James, Tomcat USA; Andy Shaffer, Compressor Systems; Jack Sherman, Jack Sherman Chevrolet; Berry Simpson, City Council; Buddy Sipes, Chisos Operating; Linda Starke, Teraco; Jim Woodcock, Hy-Bon Engineering and Brenda Woodruff, TJ Woodruff Construction.

Ms. Foster, Strauss and Fuller, although voicing concerns, indicated support for the ATC and stressed the importance of the facility. Each emphasized that their concerns were in the spirit of seeing that the facility be of the greatest benefit to the community.

"The primary purpose of the ATC is for those type of career developments that will allow kids to go out to the workforce and have a successful and productive life after high school," Ms. Foster said. "If we start to water down the facility, we are not meeting the expectations of the students or the community."

Declaration of Independence copy sells for $8.1 million

NEW YORK (AP) — A 1776 copy of the Declaration of Independence sold for $8.14 million Thursday in an electronic auction on Sotheby's Web site.

The auction house said the price was the highest for any item ever sold on the Internet and for any American historical document.

Two would-be buyers fought for the copy, posting 29 separate bids that began at $4 million and ended at $7.4 million. Sotheby's commission brought the price to $8.14 million.

The buyer's name was not immediately released; the seller was Visual Equities, an Atlanta fine-art investment firm.

The copy was produced by John Dunlap, a Philadelphia printer, the night of July 4, 1776. It is one of 25 that survive from hundreds printed and sent to the 13 colonies proclaiming their independence from Great Britain.

All but four of the surviving copies are in museums or public institutions.

An amateur collector found the document in 1989, hidden behind a torn painting that he bought for $4 at an Adamstown, Pa., flea market because he wanted the frame.

BROADWAY: Intersection troubles residents

(From 1A)

"But I don't have a yield sign," she protested, "Nobody does. It scares me driving through there, especially after football games when there are a ton of cars."

Ms. Holland said she believes a traffic sign should be erected, a desire echoed by Cutler Gist.

Gist, who lives at 1601 Storey Ave., directly in front of the danger spot, has had numerous scares when backing out of his driveway or leaving his house.

"I almost die everyday," he said, slowly directing his Explorer towards Cuthbert. From the passenger seat, his friend Michael Brown nodded agreement.

Before the boys graduated from Midland High two years ago, Brown spent many of his afternoons at the Gist house, where he often witnessed near-collisions.

"They definitely need to put up a stop sign," Brown said, "Before someone gets hurt."

If an actual wreck was to occur, liability could be difficult to determine, said Midland attorney Robert Sykes.

"The configuration of the intersection requires a driver to be watching the curve of the road (on Broadway)," Sykes said, "And most of the drivers coming off Cuthbert would assume that Cuthbert would take the right-of-way because it is a bigger street."

Sykes also acknowledged the possibility of a suit being filed against the city if evidence of resident complaints could be produced, claiming that Midland had knowledge of unsafe conditions and showed reckless disregard of property and lives of the public.

Midland Traffic Engineering Coordinator Gary Saunders has promised to set up counters to survey the intersection.

"We have to determine the volume of traffic, whether the intersection really needs a sign, and, if it does, where to place the sign and what kind of sign to place," Saunders said. "I will send some counters down."

But such actions do not provide much comfort for some residents.

"It took them forever to get a yield sign put on the stadium end of our street," Mrs. Wallace noted. "And even if they put a yield sign on Broadway, I'm not sure that the high school students would slow down for it without a patrol car sitting right beside it."

Man who held archbishop hostage thought clergyman could help him

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — An unemployed man from El Salvador who took Archbishop Patrick Flores hostage threatened to kill them both by detonating a hand grenade if the archbishop didn't help him obtain papers about his immigration status, Flores said Thursday.

"If you do not assist me in getting what I need, then I will commit suicide and I will kill you," Flores, the state's top-ranking Catholic clergyman, quoted the man as saying.

It turned out the grenade had no powder and could not be ignited.

The 70-year-old archbishop, who was pushed to the ground at the beginning of Wednesday's nine-hour standoff but was not hurt, spent the night in a hospital for observation and was released Thursday afternoon.

Speaking at a news conference about two hours later, Flores at times cracked jokes to the delight of relatives and chancery workers seeing him for the first time since the ordeal. Asked how he felt, he replied, "I'm alive," and his eyes welled with tears.

Flores said the hostage-taker was distraught over being deported in December. The man told Flores that although he has lived in the United States for 25 years and is married to a U.S. citizen, he was deported for a 15-year-old marijuana possession charge.

The man said he decided to take Flores hostage to make a statement "because he knew that I was very important and because he wanted to use me as bait," the archbishop said.

The man also said he resented the church for accepting the money of the poor when taking up collections. Flores quoted him as saying, "I hate this country. I hate the church. I hate, hate, hate."

The man said he wanted to get his immigration documents, but then wanted to move to Cuba and leave what he called the worst country in the world, Flores daid.

Nelson Antonio Escolero, 40, surrendered Wednesday night after police faxed him the immigration papers he was demanding. He is charged with two counts of aggravated kidnapping and was being held at the Bexar County Jail in lieu of $2 million bond.

Escolero's attorney, Pat Hancock, said no decision has been made on what type of plea to enter, but that he will try to get the bond reduced.

He said Escolero was a construction worker before his deportation, but that he has not been able to find work since he returned illegally. He has had trouble providing for his three children, who are U.S. citizens, the lawyer said.

Hancock said Escolero was deported after going to an Immigration and Naturalization Service office, apparently to renew his visa.

Police have said that Escolero was facing deportation for driving with a suspended license.

Flores said the man first approached him in the parking lot of the Catholic chancery around 10 a.m. Wednesday. They went to his third-floor office to talk.

The man then showed Flores a grenade. He said if Flores didn't get him the papers he wanted "then he was going to let the bomb go."

Flores said the man pushed him to the ground. He called for help and his 73-year-old secretary, Myrtle Sanchez, came in and also was taken hostage.

The man demanded to talk to Attorney General Janet Reno and Gov. George W. Bush. Flores and Sanchez helped him to make the calls, and ultimately the man ended up on the phone with the FBI and San Antonio police officers. He spent several hours airing his grievances.

Just before 7 p.m., police faxed him the immigration documents he wanted. And Flores guaranteed him that if he was freed, he would help the man find a lawyer and help his family by providing them with food.

"I repeated three or four times, 'In the name of God, in the name of Jesus, I ask you not to use that weapon,'" Flores said. "All of the sudden, he said, 'OK.'"

The man placed the device — which turned out to be a military-training grenade with shrapnel but no powder — on the archbishop's desk and both walked out.

Flores said he had never seen a hand grenade and believed it was real.

Flores said he wants Escolero to undergo psychological testing and believes he may need to be committed to a mental institution.

Area briefs

Bridge repair

Knight Construction of Big Spring will be repairing the overpass structure (bridge) over Interstate 20 at West Loop 250 during the next two months.

Workers will be doing concrete repair work on columns, abutments, and the bridge deck, as under the structure. The repairs began July 5, at the overpass and will result in occasional lane closures on the Loop 250 bridge and Interstate 20. The project is expected to be completed by late August.

Drivers are urged to observe all warning signs, slow down, and proceed, with caution. Lanes that are closed during working hours while bridge is being repaired will re-open during night-time hours. State law requires that fines for traffic violations be doubled when violations occur in a work zone while construction workers are present. For more information call: Glen Larum, 498-4746.

Ship carrying refugees sinks in Indonesia, hundreds feared dead

By Geoff Spencer
Associated Press

JAKARTA, Indonesia — Hundreds of refugees fleeing bloody religious fighting were feared drowned Thursday after their ship sank without a trace in the stormy waters of eastern Indonesia.

Radio contact with the wooden-hulled vessel, carrying nearly 500 passengers and crew, was lost after its captain radioed that it was fast taking on water during a violent storm, the National Search and Rescue Agency said.

"We are sure it has sunk," said Col. Yaneman Besau, a navy base chief in Manado, capital of North Sulawesi province. "There are four ships searching, but they have found no sign of the vessel. There have been no bodies or survivors found."

Heavy seas hampered the search. The closest land is Siau island, some 40 miles to the west and about 1,440 miles northeast of Indonesia's capital, Jakarta. There were no immediate plans for an aerial search, officials said.

The boat was on a journey of more than 200 miles to Manado from the Maluku islands, a corner of the Indonesian archipelago where violence between Muslims and Christians has killed almost 3,000 people of both faiths in the past 18 months.

About 290 of the passengers were refugees from Duma, a Christian village in the Malukus where more than 100 people were killed in an attack by Muslim fighters June 19.

After surviving the massacre, the refugees took the ship ride to be reunited with families and friends who had earlier found shelter on Sulawesi island.

Shipping disasters with large losses of life are all too frequent in Indonesia, an ethnically and religiously diverse nation of about 17,000 islands where sea transportation is vital. Maritime standards are lax and poorly maintained vessels are often overloaded with passengers and cargo by captains eager to maximize profits.

The boat that sank Thursday, called the Cahaya Bahari, was licensed to carry 250 people. The National Search and Rescue Agency said at least 492 passengers and crew were aboard, including 186 regular passengers and 16 crew members in addition to the refugees.

Waters in tropical Indonesia are warm, but hopes of finding many survivors diminished as night fell. Indonesian ships of this kind rarely come equipped with life jackets or life boats.

The Cahaya Bahari left Tobelo on Halmahera, the main island in North Maluku province, on Wednesday afternoon and was last heard from about 1 p.m. Thursday.

Since the June 19 attack on Duma, at least 71 people have been killed in Ambon, the provincial capital of the Maluku islands.

Islamic fighters say they are only standing up for the rights of Muslims who face attacks by Christians. Muslims make up about 90 percent of Indonesia's 210 million people, but Christians are in the majority in many parts of the Malukus.

Soldiers had been accused of doing little and of actively taking sides in the region, known as the Moluccas or Spice Islands during Dutch colonial days.

On Thursday, sniper fire and bomb blasts shook Ambon, but fighting between Muslims and Christians abated as a state of emergency took hold.

Frightened residents in Ambon took shelter in abandoned homes and makeshift camps while hundreds of soldiers patrolled battle-scarred streets to enforce the 3-day-old state of emergency.

Despite the easing of the violence, international relief organizations said it was too dangerous to deliver food, drinking water and medicines to tens of thousands of refugees and hospitals in Ambon.

President Abdurrahman Wahid, a Muslim scholar who espouses religious tolerance, declared a civil emergency Monday to give security forces greater powers to crack down on sectarian gangs.

Kohl brushes off charges of corruption in testimony

BERLIN (AP) — Helmut Kohl was stubborn, sarcastic and in no mood to tell all.

Testifying before a parliamentary committee Thursday, the disgraced former chancellor rejected charges that his administration was corrupt. But he maintained his silence on the names of donors who illegally financed the conservative party he once led, prompting comparisons to Watergate by some politicians.

After months of buildup, members of a parliamentary investigating committee quizzed Kohl on allegations that his government traded favors for cash, charges that have soiled his reputation as the statesman who united Germany in 1990. Yet Kohl shed little light on his party's financing scandal during more than four hours of testimony.

Squeezing his massive frame into a seat in a meeting hall packed with reporters, Kohl barely concealed his disdain for the investigation. He peppered panel members with ironic quips, stressed the importance of decisions he made during 16 years in power and snapped that he had no time to keep track of his party's books.

The Greens, the junior party in Germany's government, assailed Kohl for taking a cavalier attitude toward the law.

Kohl approached the hearing with the same sense of political polarization that helped him win four elections. He made no secret of his view that the investigation is an orchestrated vendetta by the committee — dominated by the governing center-left parties — and liberal media to destroy his legacy.

Kohl says the donors were citizens who wanted to support the party's work in former communist East Germany in the early 1990s. He said he promised them anonymity and refuses to break his word — a silence that has fueled speculation that decisions by his government were bought.

Prompting that suspicion are business deals under the Kohl government in which kickbacks allegedly flowed, including a tank sale to Saudi Arabia and the privatization of a major oil refinery in eastern Germany that was sold to French concern Elf Aquitaine.

Facing the panel, Kohl pointedly denied receiving money to push those deals through and said he was unaware of anyone in his administration being bought off. He refused to talk about other aspects of his party's finances, citing a pending criminal investigation against him.

Meanwhile, new accusations against Kohl's administration raised further echoes of the Watergate scandal that prompted U.S. President Richard Nixon to resign in 1974.

A special investigator reported Wednesday that officials in his chancellery destroyed a huge number of government files in late 1998, just before Kohl handed over power to newly elected Chancellor Gerhard Schroeder. Parliamentary investigators say the data gaps could hinder their inquiry.

Elian's life will be 'normal,' but he will always be special

By Anita Snow
Associated Press

HAVANA — Now that his American saga has drawn to a close, Elian Gonzalez began a new chapter Thursday in his homeland, where officials say they will work to provide the boy with as normal a life as possible.

But after months of turmoil — and with Cuba's government planning to continue the mass mobilization inspired by his plight — normalcy will be a big transition for the brown-haired 6-year-old.

On his first full day back in Cuba, Elian was far from the public eye, with his father, stepmother, baby half-brother and other relatives in a specially prepared boarding school in Havana's upscale Playa neighborhood.

"I imagine that Elian and his family must be very happy that they have now returned to daily Cuban family life," Foreign Ministry spokeswoman Aymee Hernandez said Thursday. "At this moment he must be doing what all children do in Cuba, having breakfast, sharing closeness with his papa and his papa's wife, who will take on the role of his mama."

In several weeks, Elian will return to his former life in the small port city of Cardenas, live in the same modest home with his father. He will go back to the Marcelo Salado elementary school, where his classmates transformed his empty desk into a shrine.

But even if he doesn't receive any special treatment, the little boy who loved kites in Cuba and wore a Batman cape in Miami will always be special.

He will be remembered by the hundreds of thousands of Cubans who marched and chanted and wore T-shirts with his portrait during a seven-month campaign to bring him home as the "boy hero," the "symbolic child," the "elfin prince."

"He will always be, rather than a normal citizen, a symbol, an example and a glory for all the children of Cuba and pride for all the teachers of Cuba," the government said in a statement.

For that reason, "our self-denying teachers and pedagogues must undertake the masterful work of making him a model child, worthy of his history, his strengths and talent," the statement added.

Elian's relatives in Miami, who fought a bitter battle to retain custody, argued the boy would be subjected to political persecution if he returned. They took Elian in after he was rescued off Florida's coast when the boat carrying him from Cuba sank, killing his mother and 10 others.

Opponents of returning Elian to Cuba predicted he would be forced to denounce his mother as a traitor for attempting to take him to the United States.

But there's been no sign so far that or any other persecution. Cuba has described Elian's mother as a good woman whose boyfriend bullied her into taking the child on the trip.

Opponents of Elian's return also fear the boy will be indoctrinated in communist ideology.

In a socialist society, with a father who is a Communist Party member, that will be inevitable — and not just for Elian. The Cuban Child Code calls for all youth to be protected from "influence contrary to their communist formation."

The government also hopes to push forward with the mass mobilization inspired by the Elian campaign to press for an end to the 40-year-old U.S. embargo on Cuba and to U.S. laws that grant asylum to any Cuban who makes it to American shores.

A new rally is already organized for Saturday in the southeastern city of Manzanillo, which an estimated 200,000 people are expected to attend. Cuban officials say the U.S. laws encourage illegal, dangerous trips across the Florida Straits like the one that killed Elian's mother.

Meanwhile, Elian will work on his studies, helped by his teachers and classmates, who moved into the boarding school with him to help him complete the first grade in time to begin the second in the fall.

Elian and his family moved into two-story white stucco house by the sea after a muted arrival Wednesday at Havana's Jose Marti airport. They will stay there the shortest time necessary to restart his life "the most normal and peaceful conditions," the government said.

Elian's father, Juan Miguel Gonzalez, was unhappy about what values taught during his son's brief time at a private Miami school. The Lincoln-Marti School teaches students that President Fidel Castro oppresses Cubans. Classes are taught in English and children salute the American flag — a hated symbol of Cuba's fiercest enemy.

The boy was returned to his father by federal agents who raided the Miami relatives' home on April 22. He then spent two months in the Washington area with his father, relatives and friends waiting for legal appeals to play out.

During that time, Elian reportedly made much scholastic progress and the government says he can now read and write.

Once ready, his family will return to Cardenas, where the government said the people will do everything to ensure that Elian has as normal a life as possible "after all the suffering he has put up with and which converted him into the most famous and well-known child in the world."

Army moves to isolate compound where Fiji hostages held

SUVA, Fiji (AP) — Gunmen holding 27 Fijian lawmakers hostage briefly detained 16 journalists Thursday after the army spoke of plans to cut water, electricity and telephone lines to the besieged compound

Guards armed with machine guns stopped the journalists from leaving the parliamentary compound where the government hostages, including deposed Prime Minister Mahendra Chaudhry, are being held.

An hour later, the journalists were released, but the incident has raised fears the gunmen might try to take more hostages in the government crisis now in its sixth week in the Pacific island nation.

The incident followed an announcement by Fiji's military rulers that they planned to cordon off Parliament to isolate and cut off supplies to the hostage-takers.

"People moving freely at any moment will have to be stopped, media will have to be stopped," army spokesman Lt. Col. Filipo Tarakinikini told Fiji TV. He said officials were considering cutting water, electricity, and telephone lines to the gunmen.

By Thursday evening, there was no evidence that any of the measures had been put into effect.

Before relenting, rebel leader George Speight said it would be too dangerous for the journalists to go back to their homes and hotels because of the army presence outside the compound.

The military, which declared martial law 10 days after Speight and six gunmen stormed Parliament on May 19, had never threatened journalists.

The decision to cordon the area was to protect citizens' "security" and to make sure the rebels take no more captives, army spokesman Capt. Eroni Volavola told The Associated Press earlier Thursday.

Volavola did not say if isolating the compound was a precursor to further military action, but it appeared to raise the stakes in the standoff.

The announcement came a day after Fiji's military rulers said they will appoint a new civilian government without any input from the hostage-takers, who have demanded a role in the administration before releasing their captives.

Speight and his supporters had been involved in selecting new ministers but were frozen out of the process Wednesday after refusing to sign an accord that would pave the way for the immediate release of the hostages.

Most of the rebels' demands to disenfranchise Fiji's Indians have been met, including the firing of Chaudhry and the elimination of the country's 1997 multiracial constitution.

Rebels led by Speight, a former insurance executive, have said the hostages would die in any attempted rescue. Chaudhry is the first ethnic Indian to lead Fiji.

Speight, who says he represents the native Fijians, claims Chaudhry favored Indians at the expense of the indigenous population.

Crossing gates should not take 9 more months

Granted, getting crossing gates installed at four deadly Midland railroad crossings in nine months instead of 18 is a far better timetable. But it still leaves unanswered the question of why it takes so long to get these important devices installed in a timely fashion when Midlanders are dying needlessly.

Why?

After the closed-door meeting Wednesday between officials of the city of Midland, Union Pacific Railroad, and state and federal transportation agencies, Mayor Bobby Burns noted that, "We got the time frame cut in half."

That certainly is an improvement over the year and a half to two-year timetable originally given by Union Pacific officials for installation of the crossing gates.

But the mayor noted in another revealing comment that installation of the gates "clearly ... doesn't take that long." And when innocent people are dying it shouldn't! Union Pacific is installing gates all over the country all the time. And it takes them nine months to do the engineering on the crossings in Midland? We don't think so.

When Midland city officials first requested the crossing gates be installed, railroad officials said it would take 18 months or more to install them. With at least five Midlanders already dead in the last two years as a result of train-crashes and the number of trains passing through Midland each day still increasing, not getting the gates installed in a short period of time seems like gross negligence.

Nine more months? Come on! How many more Midlanders must die before a fire is lit under these Union Pacific officials?

Today in History

Today is Friday, June 30, the 182nd day of 2000. There are 184 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On June 30, 1971, the 26th Amendment to the Constitution, lowering the minimum voting age to 18, was ratified as Ohio became the 38th state to approve it.

On this date:

In 1906, the Pure Food and Drug Act and the Meat Inspection Act became law.

In 1934, Adolf Hitler began his "blood purge" of political and military leaders in Germany.

In 1936, the novel "Gone with the Wind" by Margaret Mitchell was published in New York.

In 1952, "The Guiding Light," a popular radio program, made its TV debut on CBS.

In 1971, a Soviet space mission ended in tragedy when three cosmonauts aboard Soyuz 11 were found dead inside their spacecraft after it returned to Earth.

In 1985, 39 American hostages from a hijacked TWA jetliner in Beirut were freed after 17 days.

In 1986, in a 5-4 decision, the Supreme Court ruled that states could outlaw homosexual acts between consenting adults.

In 1994, the U.S. Figure Skating Association stripped Tonya Harding of the 1994 national championship and banned her for life because of the attack on rival Nancy Kerrigan.

Five years ago: In a stunning Kremlin purge, Russian President Boris Yeltsin fired three top security ministers for the botched handling of a bloody hostage-taking by Chechen rebels in southern Russia. President Clinton, speaking in Chicago, proposed an even tighter ban on armor-piercing handgun ammunition known as "cop-killer" bullets.

Campaign 2000: It's 1888 again — sort of WASHINGTON — At the June 1888 national conventions, one party favored high, protective tariffs. One party banked everything on a Northern strategy. One party's nominee — a man who had lost re-election to the Senate the previous year — was not decided on until the eighth ballot at the convention.

Anderson

This is not exactly parallel to the situation faced by the Republican Party of 2000 and its likely nominee, Gov. George W. Bush of Texas, but there are some similarities.

In 1888, the Republican nominee was Benjamin Harrison. Great-grandson of a signer of the Declaration of Independence, grandson of the ninth president of the United States, son of a U.S. senator, Harrison served in the federal army during the Civil War and later became a senator from Indiana. Then, in 1887, he lost his Senate seat.

G.W. Bush is the grandson of a U.S. senator and the son of a president, and he also has tasted defeat.

Harrison and his party were anathema to the South. In fact, a Confederate flag controversy helped him take the presidency from Democratic incumbent Grover Cleveland. Cleveland had offered to return captured Confederate battle flags to the South. Harrison and the Republican Party were opposed, and their opposition solidified their Grand Army of the Republic (Federal Civil War veterans) support.

Today's Confederate flag controversy concerns its display in several state flags and atop the South Carolina State Capitol. Whereas the 1888 controversy was a North-South dispute, the 2000 version is a strictly Southern affair, pitting those who view the flag as a symbol of a decimated generation's failed fight for independence against those who look upon it as a symbol of slavery and secession.

Bush has waffled on the issue. The likely Democratic nominee, Vice President Al Gore, has come out against the use of the flag in official settings. But then Gore, although a Southerner, has virtually given up on the South except for his home state of Tennessee.

Harrison's running mate in 1888 was Levi Morton of New York. It was a clear Northern strategy. Of course, in 1888 the West did not wield the balance-tipping power it does today, and Harrison was free to ignore it.

In 2000, the West is a battleground, led by the mega-state California, though most political analysts agree that the real fight will be in the Midwest, right back to Benjamin Harrison's home turf.

So unlike 1888, this year's candidates cannot pursue a one-region strategy. Bush has the South and Mountain states. Gore has the Northeast and West, and both must battle for the Midwest, an area little concerned with the Confederate flag.

What is similar between 1888 and 2000 is the politics of political dynasties. Gore, it should be remembered is the son of a U.S. senator, and he was raised in Washington, D.C.

And finally, it is once again an election pitting a champion of the little guy against the champion of business. In the 19th century, business usually won. That was not the case in the 20th century.

Sorry, kids, football game prayer's off

The Supreme Court wound up its June term with another swipe at "school prayer" — latest in a sequence commencing 38 years ago.

Back to an appellate court the justices kicked a case in which Alabama is bidding for approval of student-initiated prayer at "compulsory or non-compulsory" public school activities.

Murchison

Yes, by now we know where this is going, don't we?

Last week, the court rebuked, 6 to 3, the Santa Fe, Texas, independent school district for a similar view of what constitutes "official" prayer.

The high court said on that occasion: Never mind whether students themselves decide they want a message of some kind delivered before football games; never mind that no religious message is required.

"In this context," wrote Justice John Paul Stevens, speaking for the majority, "the members of the listening audience must perceive the pregame message as a public expression of the views of the majority of the student body delivered with the approval of the school administration ... "

Think about that, the justices this week said to the 11th Circuit Court of Appeals, which had upheld Alabama's not dissimilar policy on prayer. I think we can guess what result the thinking process will produce. Sorry, kids, prayer's off.

Here we go again: our highest court cracking the whip, working to drive religious expression out of the public schools, as well as from other public venues. A pretty good job the justices are doing (despite some clean-up work needed in their own habitat; e.g., the cry that routinely opens court sessions — "God save the United States and this honorable court.")

You ask why: Didn't the founders of the republic make clear enough their commitment to religion as a cornerstone of the virtuous community? Yeah, well, they did. Here's what it comes down to: That was then, this is now. We're changing the rules, see? Old rules are out; new ones are in.

The reason for the perdurability of the new rules is the support they enjoy from the country's intellectual elite, which is overwhelmingly secular in spirit. Supporters of this regime really don't care about antique abstractions like "divine authority." Not especially religious themselves, our intellectual elite — concentrated in the media and the professoriate — dislikes the idea of Godly intrusions in human affairs. The irrelevance — at best, the marginal relevance — of God is their gospel: God as just another intellectual possibility.

And we don't force mere "possibilities" on others, do we? Oh, of course not — the moral equivalence of all ideas about sexuality; the utility of condoms; the sinfulness of "racism" and "sexism." We wouldn't let anything like that be propounded in the public schools; would we? Naw, not for a minute.

But invocation of the divine — that's different. It flies in the face of our cultural presuppositions! Offense might be taken!

A few points here:

■ Has anyone ever heard a pregame prayer? I have. Used to hear them all the time, in the '50s, at Corsicana High School football games. Guess what they prayed for over the P.A. system? America's conversion to the regimen of the First Methodist Church? Not a chance. Rather, for a clean game, and for the safe return of all fans to their homes. Gosh! What dangerous stuff! Likely to result in the overthrow of civilization! I'll bet the genre (where not squashed completely) hasn't changed much.

■ On the someone-might-be-offended argument: Someone always gets offended. In the case of a pregame prayer, the village atheist, or a member of a different religion, or just some crank. Such is the price of our common life. I get offended myself: by the casual use of raw language in popular entertainment; by the wanton destruction of an old building; by shorts and tank tops on airplanes. You could make a federal, interstate-commerce-based case for the outlawing of such horrors. But to what end? Should the government, and, worse, the lawyers, run our collective life? In a free country we put up with a lot because putting up with particular things is the price of freedom.

■ Local people can work these things out — as the people of Santa Fe, Texas, and of the state of Alabama have attempted to work them out. America isn't organized on the "one size fits all" principle, as the Supreme Court seems to believe. We elect local school boards to judge community needs; then we submit those judgments to the majority's will. If prayer becomes a deeply divisive issue for a community, the board can either stop the praying or figure out something that works.

Yes, the "tyranny of the majority" is a legitimate fear in any democracy. That isn't what goes on in the matter of school prayer. Right now the "tyranny of the minority" is the problem — one abetted by the tiniest of minorities, seated on that honorable court they pray so earnestly for God to save.

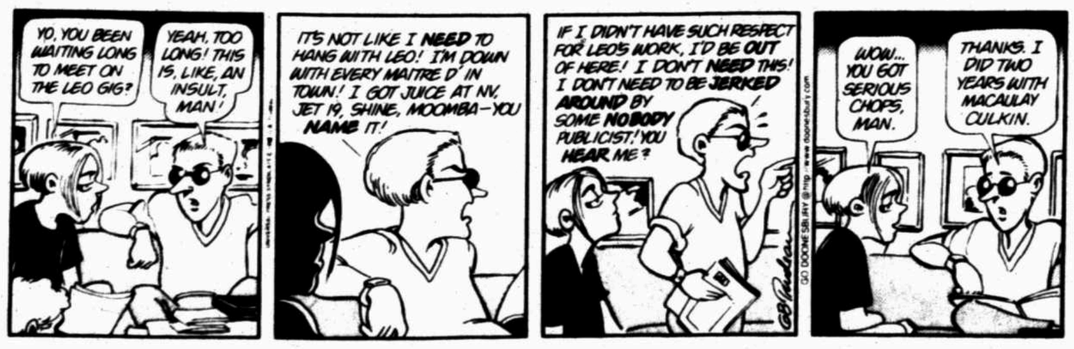
Doonesbury Flashbacks



Charley Reese

The recent Supreme Court ruling on prayer was flat wrong

The U.S. Supreme Court has ruled that a school district may not allow a student to lead a prayer at a football game.

It's interesting when you recall a statement made by Mikhail Gorbachev — America's favorite liberal — to a group of Communist Party officials on Dec. 15, 1987, in Uzbekistan:

"There must be no letup in the war against religion because as long as religion exists, communism cannot prevail. We must intensify the obliteration of all religions wherever they are being practiced or taught."

Reese

Gorbachev is a disciple of the late Sardinian communist Antonio Gramsci, who advocated the policy of active social demoralization.

The Supreme Court ruling is simply flat wrong. The justices as much as admitted it in their majority opinion by prattling on about how a Christian prayer makes non-Christians feel like outsiders. What has that got to do with the Constitution? There is no constitutional protection for anyone's subjective feelings. C.S. Lewis, the great Christian thinker, noted, "Subjectivism about values is eternally incompatible with democracy."

The only thing the First Amendment states is that "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof." Since when is a local school district the federal government? And since when does a prayer spoken in public establish anything? And if a student can't pray in public in Texas, how come the late president of the United States, Franklin Roosevelt, led the nation in a public prayer over national radio hookups?

And if forbidding a high-school student from leading a prayer at a football game isn't prohibiting the free exercise of religion, what is it?

We would do well to remember the words of George Washington in his farewell address, in which he states that anyone who is an enemy of religion is an enemy of republican government.

It's interesting that Washington sees religion as essential to a free republic and Gorbachev sees the destruction of religion as essential to the triumph of communism. That means that both men are smarter than the majority of the justices on the Supreme Court who wrote this latest opinion on public prayer.

When the communists in Russia failed to root out religion, despite the slaughter of priests and parishioners alike, it used a fall-back strategy of infiltrating the church and of confining religion to within the four walls of the church.

That is what is happening in America. All of these rulings and harangues by left-wingers are delivering the same message: Keep your religion to yourself. It has no place in the commons.

This, of course, is a contradiction of more than 200 years of American history. Religion has always played a prominent role in public affairs and in government. Under the Constitution, the states could establish religion or set religious tests for public office, and nearly all of them did.

This anti-prayer business is of recent origin, dating back only to the 1960s. Americans should realize that all federal judges are the result of political patronage. These characters are political appointees, not necessarily scholars and certainly not saints. As for people who claim to be offended by hearing a prayer, they are bigots, plain and simple.

I would say to the people of Texas: If the spirit moves you, say your prayers at football games. If the U.S. government wishes to send armed marshals to arrest a youth for uttering a Christian prayer, then the people would at least see the true, ugly face of the government, which hides behind a smiley-face mask.

Legislation uncovering donors to secret groups heads to Clinton

By Laura Meckler
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Congress approved the first restrictions on campaign financing in two decades Thursday, sending President Clinton legislation that forces tax-exempt political organizations to reveal who is paying for their campaign-style TV ads, radio spots and other activities.

Clinton promised to sign the bill, meaning those reports should be available before this fall's elections.

The bill, approved by an overwhelming majority in the Senate on Thursday, would leave many interest groups free to continue broadcasting commercials without naming their donors. And groups affected by the legislation may reorganize themselves under the tax laws to avoid disclosure.

But backers argued it was crucial to preserving one of the pillars of post-Watergate reforms: public disclosure.

"Today is only the first step," said Sen. John McCain, R-Ariz., who led a bipartisan group of lawmakers as they rolled the measure past GOP leaders in the House and Senate. "It is indeed a great day for democracy."

The bill only requires disclosure of donations made after it becomes law. Some backers feared GOP leaders might drag their feet in sending the bill to the White House, and supporters speculated that affected groups were now scrambling to raise money before the bill is signed.

Despite initial opposition from Republican leaders, the legislation was approved by huge majorities in each chamber of Congress. It passed the Senate 92-6 Thursday.

Even the Senate's fiercest opponent of campaign finance reform urged his GOP colleagues — particularly those up for re-election — to vote yes.

"I do not think this is a spear worth falling on four months before an election," said Sen. Mitch McConnell, R-Ky.

He noted the legislation only affects groups that organize under the increasingly popular section 527 of the tax code, which is reserved for groups created for political purposes.

Other tax-exempt interest groups and companies remain free to run ads meant to influence elections without disclosing their donors — as long as they do not directly advocate a candidate's election or defeat.

"The legislation was clearly a win for those who want to overhaul campaign finance laws, especially for McCain, who built a presidential bid around his reputation as a campaign finance reformer although he has yet to see a bill become law.

Clinton echoed calls for broader campaign finance reform as promised to sign the bill. "Passage of this bill proves that public interest can triumph over special interests," he said Thursday. Vice President Al Gore also cheered the vote.

The legislation requires section 527 groups to notify the Internal Revenue Service that they exist within 24 hours of forming. And groups that raise at least $25,000 per year would have to report contributions of $200 or more and spending of $500 or more. Reports would be due four times a year, plus immediately before an election, and should be available before voting this November.

Reserved for political groups, section 527 has generally been used by political parties and political action committees. But while parties and PACs report their contributions and spending to the Federal Election Commission, a new brand of 527 does not, claiming to be engaged in "issues" not electioneering.

Other interest groups make this distinction as well, though unlike 527 groups, they face restrictions on their political activity. The Christian Coalition, for instance, created a 527 group after the IRS clamped down on the organization for its political activity.

Cleta Mitchell, an attorney who represents several 527 groups, said she would seriously consider a court challenge to the bill's constitutionality. In the meantime, she said she would advise her clients to "do whatever is necessary to avoid having to report," including reorganizing under a different section of tax code.

Tests may reveal a new fat fighter

WASHINGTON (AP) — Scientists were testing a possible cancer treatment when they spotted a side effect that might prove rather valuable: The experimental drug made mice lose a dramatic amount of weight, without apparent side effects.

The discovery indicates scientists may be able to regulate a major pathway in the brain responsible for appetite and fat-building. The chemical apparently fooled the brain into thinking the mice had eaten, so their metabolisms never slowed and they burned fat, researchers report in Friday's edition of the journal Science.

"This is a real trick. The mice drop their weight like a stone, losing 25 percent of their body mass in a couple of days," said Dr. Frank Kuhajda, who led the research team at Baltimore's Johns Hopkins University that produced the chemical, code-named C75.

At issue is "fatty acid synthase" or FAS, an enzyme system pivotal for turning carbohydrates into the building blocks of fat.

Surprisingly, in the early 1990s scientists discovered cancer cells use FAS to produce their own fat for fuel, Kuhajda said. No one knows why. But the Hopkins researchers created a FAS blocker to see if it could fight cancer. In mouse testing, this so-called C75 made cancer cells die without harming nearby normal cells, he said.

But the mice all had a stunning side effect: They stopped eating and dramatically lost weight until the drug wore off.

It turns out that production of a brain chemical called neuropeptide Y — a well-known appetite regulator — plummeted in the C75-treated mice. Normally when animals fast, neuropeptide Y sharply jumps and appetite consequently increases. But the C75 prevented that, fooling animals into thinking they were fed, Kuhajda said.

How? To build fat, FAS uses another molecule called malonyl-CoA. Blocking FAS didn't stop the body's normal production of that molecule. Instead, malonyl-CoA just piled up without that next step in the fat-building assembly line. High levels of the molecule somehow signaled the brain not to produce neuropeptide Y, Kuhajda said.

But C75 had another important benefit, the researchers reported. One reason dieting is so hard is that fasting slows metabolism. Metabolism didn't seem to slow in the C75-treated mice, however — they lost 45 percent more weight than untreated mice deprived of food.

The Hopkins researchers are pursuing C75 as a possible cancer treatment, figuring appetite suppression isn't an insurmountable side effect. But the newest findings "give us some hope" of a new way to fight obesity, too, Kuhajda concluded.

Man seizes hostages at Disney World hotel

LAKE BUENA VISTA, Fla. (AP) — A armed man took his 4-year-old son and a food-service worker hostage Thursday at a Walt Disney World hotel, threatened them and demanded to speak to his estranged wife, authorities said.

The man, identified by officials as 39-year-old Bismark Rodriguez, called television station WKMG twice and said he hadn't seen his other three children in 30 days and he wanted to speak with them and his wife. He said he and his wife of 14 years are going through a divorce.

He claimed to have several guns and a bomb and said he would release the hostages of he could speak to his wife.

Rodriguez, believed to be a hotel guest, called the Orlando FBI office and requested a hostage negotiator, Orange County Sheriff Kevin Beary said.

"We're just trying to keep him calmed down," Beary said, adding that Rodriguez's relatives were on their way to the hotel in an effort to talk to him.

Midlanders recall patriotic films

By Georgia Temple

An examination of moviedom's plunges into films about the American Revolution uncovers a somewhat short list of titles. In fact, when several teen-agers, members of Midland Community Theatre's youth performing troupe, the Pickwick Players, were asked what movies made them feel patriotic, only one answer dealt with the American Revolutionary War.

"The kind of patriotic movie that I do enjoy a lot is '1776,'" said Jay Rathbone, who, along with the others interviewed, is in the cast of "Grease," opening the last weekend in July at Cole Theatre. "It's the musical of the play on tape. I think it was a great idea. It mixes patriotism with a lot of fun."

The other responses varied from some choices to none.

"'Independence Day,'" said Kobi Nix, her tone questioning. "It was around the Fourth of July. When I think of patriotism, I think of the Fourth of July and that makes me think of it ('Independence Day') out of all the movies."

"I think of John Wayne movies," Jennifer Jurek said. "I don't know why, but I think of John Wayne movies."

"I don't really watch that many movies," Kathryn Yarbrough said. "I'm never home."

"I don't really know," Kristen Riek said. "I haven't really seen very many patriotic movies. When I think of the Fourth of July, I think of family picnics and fireworks and cookouts."

"If I could say one movie, it would probably be 'Glory,'" said Justin Tate. "Because it's a very accurate representation of all the stuff that happened during the Civil War."

Revolutionary War provides backdrop for 'The Patriot'

By Georgia Temple

Benjamin Martin is the father of seven children, a dedicated family man and a former war hero. He renounced fighting to raise his family in peace. Now, his 19-year-old son, Gabriel, enlists because he wants to fight for what he believes. His father opposes war, but also believes in the cause.

What is a father to do?

"He arms his two sons, one is 13 and the other 12," Midlander Jeff McCormick said of what he had heard on a radio program about Martin. The idea of arming children, particularly in a time when some children have been arming themselves and taking actions that have led many folks in our nation to bemoan the disassociated state of young people today, shocks and horrifies the sensitivities of many Americans. And yet, more than 200 years ago, such action was viewed differently by the colonists on these shores who were fighting for independence.

"People reviewing the movie were beside themselves because this father gave these kids guns because of the way we think these days," McCormick said. "The guy on the radio said this was the normal thing. Fathers and sons went out during the war and fought the British. And when you stop and think it out, there are countries all over the world where people are doing the same thing."

In the case of "The Patriot," now showing at Hollywood Theaters Movies 10, the British are on Benjamin Martin's (Mel Gibson) Georgia doorstep, and the year is 1776.

McCormick pointed out that he had not seen the film but thought Martin sounded like a "good role model" for preparing his children for the life that was in front of them.

That life and the heroic deeds performed by people of all ages secured a United States of America for those who followed and is what Americans celebrate annually on the Fourth of July. The national holiday marks the day in 1776 when representatives from the 13 revolting New World colonies, which included the state of Georgia, signed the Declaration of Independence. The signing came more than a year after hostilities had begun.

WAR: 12-, 13-year-old boys fight alongside men in 'The Patriot'

On Tuesday, Midland will be like numerous cities across the country that celebrates Independence Day with a parade and fireworks display. Here that event, which is free, begins with a DAR Children's Parade and concludes with an outdoor patriotic concert in Centennial Plaza performed by the Midland-Odessa Symphony, accompanied by a laser light show and a pyrotechnics display.

Not everyone sought freedom from the British crown. For around 50,000 of the Loyalists — those loyal to the crown — the triumph of the Patriots meant exile. Other Loyalists left voluntarily. Some remained. The American states, without exception, enacted punitive laws against them. Had the war turned out differently, the suffering would have been in the Patriots' back yard, and there would be no Fourth of July celebration.

The colonists living in the New World more than 200 years ago did not have the perspective of history. For men like Benjamin Martin, who had seen fighting firsthand in the French and Indian War, the idea of taking up arms again may have been as abhorrent as citizens in today's industrialized countries find the thought of arming children.

The film's R rating was expected by producer Dean Devlin, who recently told USA Today columnist Jeannie Williams that the MPAA was likely to decide on this rating for scenes in which the 12-and-13-year-old boys who play Benjamin Martin's sons fight alongside the men.

"People grew up a lot earlier in those days," said historian Will Morris, who teaches at Midland College. "At 15, men got married and started families and had their own farms."

Throughout history, people have matured earlier than they have been expected to in the industrialized countries of the latter part of the 20th century. Morris cited several historical examples of people's accomplishments at young ages.

"Octavian was one of the co-rulers of Rome at 18," Morris said. "And Alexander had conquered the world and died by the time he was 33."

The Revolutionary War was a "bloody war," Morris said. "More men were killed per person in the military than any American war except the Civil War. And we don't have a real accurate count on how many people were killed or died, but probably somewhere around a little more than 25,000. The population was only like three and a half million, so that's a pretty staggering casualty rate.

"And this was a civil war. You've got Americans that fought for the king, and you've got Americans that fought against the king."

The American Revolution provides a backdrop for a more personal story in "The Patriot," said Mark Gordon, co-producer with Gary Levinsohn of "The Patriot" and Saving Private Ryan" and a co-producer of "The Patriot" with Devlin.

"You can't save your own family unless you are willing to put yourself on the line to save the families of all men — in this case, to fight in the American Revolution on the side of the Patriots," Gordon said. "I think these issues are important, and I hope they will have resonance for the audience in all aspects of their lives."

"What's great about these types of stories is that they're really everybody's story," Levinsohn said. "'The Patriot' is for anyone who has been forced to defend their children and their beliefs."

Gibson, an Academy Award-winning director, has had some experience playing conflicted, reluctant heroes in films from "Mad Max" to 'Braveheart," where he played the real life Scot hero William Wallace, who emerged as a leader of Scottish independence (against the English) in 1297.

When the English finally had Wallace in their hands in 1305, they executed him in a painful and gruesome manner, perhaps not unlike the fate that might have befallen leaders of the American Revolution more than 450 years later had the tide of war turned against them. Unlike Scotland, which never truly gained its independence from the English although many Scots through the hundreds of years since, and even today, wish their nation had, the patriots on American soil won their freedom and did not have to face a victor's wrath.

"You don't have to go very far to realize that history quickly repeats itself," said Gibson, who was born in upstate New York but moved with his family to Australia when he was 12. "Century by century, decade by decade, it's different players but the same story playing itself out, with all its ugliness and glories, all its victories and defeats.

"This type of story has been told since people have been living in caves and painting pictures; it's that combination of the ordinary and the divine that inspires us and makes something really hit home for us, I think. Those are the kind of stories that I like."

FILMS: Not many movies have been made from Revolutionary War period

(From 1B)

"'Glory' is a really patriotic movie," Daniel Hartman said. "I think because it shows the whole turmoil the country went through during the Civil War, and it shows the spirit of Americans in general. I haven't really seen so many patriotic movies. Maybe I wouldn't be able to define one, but that one stands out with me pretty much."

"The movie that I feel was the most patriotic is not about United States patriotism," Cody Wirshing said. "'It's 'Braveheart' with Mel Gibson. And it's a beautiful movie. It's got really good cinematography and Mel Gibson did a good job acting in it.

"I've heard a lot of people say 'The Patriot' is just going to be 'Braveheart' redone with guns. But I don't know. I still want to see it."

The shortage of films about the American Revolutionary War was commented on by "The Patriot" producer Dean Devlin, who is the producing end of the film making team of Devlin and Roland Emmerich ("Independence Day" and "Godzilla"). The latter directed "The Patriot," which is now playing at Hollywood Theaters Movies 10.

"There aren't really a lot of films about that period or about the birth of this country," Devlin said. "And we thought it was an amazing chance to show what life was like for a normal person at that time, how ordinary people faced extraordinary circumstances."

The real patriot in the film is not Benjamin Martin (Mel Gibson), but his 19-year-old son, played by the 21-year-old Australian-born actor, Heath Ledger.

"There's an assumption that everybody's patriotic, and not everybody is," Emmerich said. "This movie is called 'The Patriot,' but Benjamin Martin is not a patriot. He knows what war is and feels that we should avoid it under all circumstances."

Ledger views the disagreement between the father and son as merely an example of the generation gap.

"While Gabriel is growing up, he hears these fantastic war stories, and it's all very heroic and glorious to him," Ledger said of his character. "His father knew better, knew how gory it could be. He doesn't want to put his son in that situation.

"I think all parents and children go through that sort of thing at some point. Gabriel represents the new generation. He believes strongly in the new ideals of the new country, so he defies his father to go to war."

Mr. Showbiz News and KCBS Channel 2000, Los Angeles, have suggested that the film's real-life inspiration was Frances Marion, the American military leader from South Carolina whose shrewd, daring raids earned him the nickname of The Swamp Fox.

Following the Revolutionary War, Marion served several terms in the South Carolina Senate.

Both news sources reported that the profile had to be broadened when historians provided additional information on Marion and cited Christopher Hibbert, a British expert on the American Revolution, who told the London Express that Marion "was a wily and elusive character, very active in the persecution of Cherokee Indians and not at all the sort of chap who should be celebrated as a hero."

Screenwriter Robert Rodat, who also wrote "Saving Private Ryan," described the character of Benjamin Martin in the film's production notes as an amalgam of several real Revolutionary War heroes. "Our Benjamin Martin has liberal amounts of Thomas Sumter, Andrew Pickens, Daniel Martin and even Elijah Clark, as well as Francis Marion."

"The Patriot" does not mark the first time that the film world has served up tales of "The Swamp Fox" to the public. Disney produced eight episodes for television about Francis Marion under the title "The Swamp Fox" Starring Leslie Nielsen, the episodes aired from Oct. 23, 1959 to Jan. 15, 1961.

Marion's biography in "The Encyclopedia of World Biography" describes a seven-hour chase through the swamp and the comment made by a British soldier at its close: "As for this damn old Fox, the devil himself could not catch him." Another Brit complained that Marion "Would not fight like a gentleman or a Christian."

"That is the famous quote," historian Will Morris, who teaches at Midland College, said of the latter British complaint. "There were four or five of those partisan leaders in South Carolina. They were what the 20th century would call guerrilla leaders.

"Based upon what little I've read, I think Sumter is probably much more of an important person that Marion was. Marion was always sort of a secondary figure," said Morris, noting that he is not a Colonist or Revolutionary War historian. "There were some guys on the other side that were really nasty.

"There was a guy named Tarleton (British Lt. Col. Banastre Tarleton), who was an Englishman," and he became known for giving Tarleton's Quarter "when he massacred all the American prisoners. Evidently, these guys surrendered, and Tarleton had them massacred. He was a nasty guy. After he finished in South and North Carolina, he went up to Virginia and was chasing Thomas Jefferson around. Some reference that I read said Tarleton missed capturing Jefferson by three minutes."

Had Tarleton been three minutes earlier, there might not be an annual Fourth of July celebration in this country, and Midlanders would not be offered the opportunity to attend Tuesday's free "Star Spangled Salute 2000," held downtown.

In the film "The Patriot," Tarleton has become Col. Tavington (Jason Isaacs), leader of Britain's elite warriors the Green Dragoons.

"The problem about making a movie about a real person and calling them by name is someone is always going to say, 'Well, that's not quite right,'" said Morris, who commented that he is eager to see the film to "see what they have done."

The screenwriter, Rodat, has said of what the filmmakers have done: "We tried to keep all the events of the movie true to events that happened in the American Revolution. They may just not have happened in the same way or in the same place. But the spirit of everything in the film can be drawn from real events throughout the American Revolution."

In the film, Benjamin Martin's stance about not fighting in another war takes an about face when the British knock on his door. He arms his young sons and joins the Patriots, who are fighting for freedom from the British. And now, in time for this year's July Fourth celebrations, "The Patriot" marches in the audience's back yard.

Editor's Note: The quotes and information for this article came from the production notes for "The Patriot," local interviews, Internet sources as named above and biographies on Marion from "World Book" and the "Encyclopedia of World Biography."

Midland Reporter-Musicgram

I had the pleasure of opening the Sunday Lawn Concert featuring the Sun Country Gentlemen on June 25, and was thinking about how much this type of presentation contributes to our community. There are not a whole bunch of places where this kind of family entertainment is offered on a continuing basis as it has been in Midland year after year. And factoring in the availability at no admission just adds to the beauty of it.

If you never have attended the frequently standing-room-only Sunday evening concert(s), then I suggest you consider a Sunday during the season for taking the entire family for some good presentations that over the course of the season offer just about anything musically you could want.

Over the years, in introducing and working with the groups, I notice that the audience has a lot of the same patrons attending each week and others are there just because the offering happens to be "their kind of music." No matter the reason, I don't think anyone has been disappointed in what they came to see and hear.

The Museum of the Southwest and their sponsors deserve a lot of thanks for their effort. The 7:45 starting time seems late for a Sunday beginning unless you consider the time of day and temperature earlier in the day. But once the entertainment starts, time doesn't seen to matter to those in attendance. It is just a good and relaxing evening on the lawn. Take your own picnic basket, blankets or chairs and go to it.

The Sun Country Gentlemen were not in rare form for their annual presentation as they always are so close to perfect in their presentations that you never doubt a good time will be had by all. And true to expectations the 18 barbershoppers came through with "nary a glitch" in presentation. The all-encompassing concept for this harmony has been alive in our area for as long as I can remember.

The SPEBSQSA is a nationwide organization and has flourished anywhere that someone would just encourage others to join and participate in the singing. In Midland and Odessa, there has been a whole lot of encouragement and they still recruit new members anytime there is an indication that someone wants to sing harmony. This applies to both men's and ladies' singing groups.

In the men's group in Midland, there are 35 members who participate in rehearsal each week preparing for presentations comparable to what was offered at the Museum of the Southwest and for competition with other communities in weekend songfests that make you feel good all over while listening.

And not only are they developing new presentations all the time, but every one of them have a good time in the activity. What we see is just them showing off before they go back for preparation of their next concert. Anyone interested in more information about the Midland group call Thane Akins or Larry Elkins and say, "I want to sing with you," and they can direct you to the next gathering.

Also the Sweet Adelines have weekly meetings for singing and are always looking for new "joiners." I don't know why they don't have as must exposure as the men's group as they are equally good in the show groups. For their meeting times and places, call Doris Anderson, and she can direct you to the activity.

In addition, if you like barbershop harmony with a jazz feel, there is a recording group called Acoustix, who are outstanding. They are closely akin to the Vocal Majority in Dallas and rely on many of that group's arrangers and orchestra members in their recordings.

One album by Acoustix that stands out in my mind is call JAZZ, JAZZ, JAZZ, where they work with Jim and Greg Clancy, brothers of Jane Clancy Debenport, previously of Midland. When you combine the Clancy harmony with arrangements by Four Freshmen and The Hi-Lo's — arrangers mix in the Acoustix sound of their own — you have good listening from the past-present-future and beyond. It is truly barbershop harmony with a good beat, and it sure does swing with familiar songs that you will be able to sing also because you probably know the words to the selections.

Until the next time, remember: The World Has Music for Those Who will Listen.

I am.
Max

P.S. Whoops! Whoops! Whoops! Somewhere, and it matters not where, there was one sentence deleted from my last communication in this Musicgram, and it needs to be placed to conclude the thought as it was to be presented in referencing the release of records in the country later than in other parts of the world the paragraph ended with "...until July of this year." The lost part (which contained the purpose of the statement) should have concluded with "That's called merchandising and getting around the copyright restrictions." Now you have the full text of what that part of the paragraph was emphasizing. Thank you.

Max Howard hosts, Saturday's "Breakfast in Jazz" from 7-10 a.m. on A.M. 15-10 and A.M. 14-10, KMND in Midland and KRIL in Odessa, and on Cox Cable Channel 2 in Midland. He also co-hosts "Daybreak" weekdays from 6-9 a.m. of the same stations.

THE MOVIE GUYS'

Black Gold Review

By David R. Allen, MC drama instructor, and Tim Jebsen, MCT executive director

A gusher: good to excellent

Dry well: Fair to poor

"Chicken Run," the new animated film from the creators of the Academy Award-winning "Wallace and Gromit" shorts, opened around the country last week. "Chicken Run" tells the delightful story of a group of chickens who, tired of being cooped up, try a series of exciting and funny escapes.

DAVID: In the early days, filmmakers used very low-tech methods to create special effects. The most successful of these was called stop-action. Used to create King Kong, this form of animation passed into obscurity. Hand-drawn animation, like that found in Disney films and the Looney Toon shorts, became the rage. During the last 20 years, however, this form of animation began to give way to a high-tech, computer-driven art form, best represented by movies like "Toy Story." Luckily for us, not everyone forgot the stop-action technique. It is alive and doing very well in "Chicken Run," another great claymation project from Nick Park and Peter Lord.

TIM: "Wallace and Gromit" remains a very successful series of shorts based on the life of a man and his dog. Made in England and outside of the Hollywood system, the creators were provided with a forum to develop new and exciting ideas and then create them through stop-action. In their first venture into a feature length film, the comedy "Chicken Run" is a real winner. It's an original and funny story of Ginger, the lead escape artist from the chicken farm, who attempts to lead the other chickens to freedom. Her cause is aided by the arrival of Rocky — voiced by Mel Gibson (who, ironically, voices an "American" bird, despite the fact that Gibson grew up in Australia) — who will teach them to fly out of the coop.

DAVID: The ability of Park and Lord to capture such a wide range of believable emotions on these clay chickens alone is worth the price of admission. The film, however, is as much of a success for its well-told story. Paying homage to movies like "Stalag 17," "The Great Escape" and the Indiana Jones series, "Chicken Run" is filled with enough silly fun and warm humor to satisfy children and adults. From the plucky gang leader, Ginger, to Rocky, the flying rooster, the characters are delightful. Even the "evil" Mrs. Tweety's plan to make chicken pies is fun to watch. From the first frame to the last, I was caught up in the adventure.

TIM: That's exactly right — good writing creates compelling action that keeps the audience involved and interested. This is an element that is often missing from Hollywood's summer flicks. However, Park and Lord keep the action light, tight, funny and fun. This is definitely a film that the whole family will enjoy — the kids for the humor and the adults for the great references to other films. This one's a gusher!

DAVID: "Chicken Run" is great escapist fare for children of all ages. Don't wait for the video on this one. It is a fun-filled gusher that's even worth a full price ticket!

DEAR ABBY

Fireworks on the Fourth are best enjoyed from a distance

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Each year on the Fourth of July, thousands of adults and children are seriously injured by fireworks. Many burns and injuries affect eyesight, permanently damaging, and in some cases, blinding the victims. Because of this, the American Optometric Association has joined the Millennium Fireworks Safety Partners, a coalition of 35 national organizations, in urging people to avoid private fireworks and instead enjoy professional displays.

Van Buren

According to the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission (CPSC), an estimated 20 percent to 25 percent of firework injuries are to the eyes. In a special study of fireworks-related injuries covering the period June 23 to July 23, 1999, CPSC reports that there were 6,300 emergency room-treated injuries, most involving fireworks, rockets and sparklers. Forty percent of the victims were under 15 years of age, and about 75 percent were males.

Sparklers are the second most frequent cause of fireworks injuries that result in trips to the emergency room. In addition to potential burns, a sparkler can literally "poke someone's eye out."

Please be careful this Fourth of July. Protect your precious eyesight by avoiding fireworks at home. Enjoy professional displays from a safe distance. — HARVEY P. HANLEN, PRESIDENT, AMERICAN OPTOMETRIC ASSOCIATION

DEAR DR. HANLEN: The statistics you quoted are alarming, and thank you for the warning.

The loss of a finger, an eye or a life would turn a happy holiday into a tragedy. Readers, please celebrate the Fourth of July safely by attending professional fireworks displays and forgo setting off your own.

DEAR ABBY: My husband and I have a 29-year-old daughter who is married and has two small children.

When she turned 17, she went to Israel and slowly became Orthodox Jewish. She married a guy just like her. My husband and I are Jewish but not religious; however, I accepted her new way of life even though we continue to live our own way of life.

My problem is my husband. He says that she went against his wishes, and she should have considered his opinion. He expects me to minimize my visits, saying we are married and should "work as a team."

Abby, religious or not religious, my grandchildren are my life. I will never stop seeing them or loving them. I think my husband needs to hear other people's views. Would you care to comment? — JANE IN NEW YORK

DEAR JANE: Your letter is unusual. Although I have received mail from parents deploring the fact that their children are living together without marriage and having children out of wedlock, I receive very few from parents who complain that their children are too religious.

Your daughter is an adult, and as such she has a right to worship as she wishes. While your husband feels she should have consulted him about her choice of husband and lifestyle, the decision was hers to make.

It appears that your daughter doesn't respect his opinion. After reading your description of his narrow-minded, controlling nature and unilateral way of dealing with those near and dear, I don't blame her.

You have your head on straight. Keep the lines of communication open.

Not all homeless are visible

By Daniel Borunda
Associated Press

BROWNSVILLE — Sandra Stevens separated from her husband in Houston and returned to Brownsville with her four children in November.

"I decided to come back home," said the 30-year-old mother of children ages 5 to 12. But Stevens, who studied to be lab technician and had a good salary as a counselor in Houston, discovered that "in the Valley, it's really hard to find a job."

With no job and no place to live, Stevens ended up at her parents' two-bedroom home, where her sister and 1-year-old niece where already staying. "I had no choice," she said. "I had nowhere to go."

The situation is not uncommon in Brownsville. It is what local advocates call "the invisible homeless," a term used to describe a person "doubling up with a family member," stated material by the Los Vecinos Coalition of Homeless Shelter and Social Services Providers, a 10-member alliance that addresses various aspects of homelessness.

Coalition members agreed that Brownsville does not have a large population of street homeless but an unknown number of invisible homeless. Of about 1,400 clients helped in two months at the Good Neighbor Settlement House, a community center that provides meals, shower facilities and other services, only 152 stated that they were homeless, said the center's Executive Director Mary Jane Rangel.

"A lot of people are very relieved when they drive through town and don't see what they see in other cities," Judi Mendez-Yahn, executive director of Monica's House, a Cameron County children's advocacy center. Monica's House helps abused children. Sometimes the abuse leads to homelessness.

Mexican culture calls for family helping family, Brownsville City Homeless Coordinator Graciela R. Aldaco said. If a family member (including distant relatives) should need shelter, family is expected to provide it, Aldaco said. The cultural practice decreases street homelessness, but doubling up in homes can lead to tense situations. A guest could then be kicked out and end up on the street, or another relative's home.

Unfortunately for border activists, doubling-up with family does not fit the federal definition of homeless — an individual without a regular and adequate nighttime residence.

Homelessness garnered much public attention in the 1980s when the number of street homeless reached levels that hadn't been seen since the Great Depression, according to a 1994 report "Priority Home: The Federal Plan to Break the Cycle of Homelessness." About 7 million people were homeless by the late 1980s. The term "homeless" was coined in the late 1970s, the report states. Particular attention was paid to homeless veterans, since about 30 percent to 45 percent of homeless adult men served in the U.S. military, according to the federal report. About 10 percent of homeless veterans suffer from post-traumatic stress disorder.

But by 1997 public concern had waned. And from the traditional liberal San Francisco Bay area to conservative Ohio cities, municipalities began outlawing panhandling and even imposed "anti-sitting" bans, according to an article in a National Coalition of the Homeless newsletter.

Though there are many causes, including domestic abuse, illness and drug use, the major contributor is poverty.

Poverty can be difficult to escape. Homelessness is often a cycle in which a person without a home can't get a job because he or she doesn't have a home and has no job to help pay for a home. "The first step was really hard, to get the money together mostly as a single parent," said Stevens, explaining that a person must get the first month's rent and utilities paid.

"Contrary to popular opinion, welfare does not provide relief from poverty," according to material from the National Coalition for the Homeless. Welfare cases have declined since reform legislation, but many families moving from welfare to work are faring poorly due to low wages and inadequate training.

There is also a lack of adequate affordable housing, advocates said. The strong national economy has not necessarily helped because it caused rents to soar. Rents increased faster than income for the 20 percent of American households with the lowest incomes between 1995 and 1997, according to a 1999 U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development report.

Mortgage rates in Texas tightened in the first quarter of 2000, pushing interest rates up and making it harder to buy a home, according to a recent Real Estate Center at Texas A&M University study.

Social worker Carlos Gomez explains that not all the 50 to 100 people who eat a free meal at the Good Neighbor Settlement House near downtown Brownsville are homeless. "They live paycheck to paycheck," he said. "They live on a fixed income and get two meals free."

Among the center's services is a program to help pay a first month's rent and some utilities. The catch is that the person must have a job. It was this program, which has helped about 39 cases, that helped get Stevens her own home. Stevens found a job as a donor care specialist for United Blood Services. Then, a grant of about $700 from the program helped her get a good apartment, she said.

She and her children love their new home, she said, adding that she now has money saved "just in case."

Free tapes offered to visually impaired

LOS ANGELES — Sound Solutions, a set of 14 free audiotapes that can help seniors and others maintain independence in spite of vision loss, is now available from Braille Institute of America.

"It is frightening enough to lose your vision, but imagine the fear of also losing your independence," said Sheila Daily, regional director of Braille Institute's center in Orange County.

While one in four seniors 55 and older experiences severe vision loss, the availability of services is limited in many communities across the country. Others are reluctant to seek help for something they consider to be just a normal part of aging.

"Braille Institute's 81 years of experience indicates a significant number of people with vision loss don't have transportation or access to services. That's who we're trying to reach," said Daily.

Professionally produced, Sound Solutions uses a mix of music, humor, compassion and education to deliver its message. Topics covered include how to cope with common fears and stereotypes, interact with friends and family and organize daily life in order to maintain self-esteem and independence.

Seniors will learn to utilize alternate senses in order to accomplish routine duties, such as cooking and cleaning. Additional tapes, designed for friends and loved ones, suggest ways to support and interact with low-vision seniors.

Sound Solutions is available free of charge from Braille Institute of America, and is shipped at no cost to the recipient.

To order tapes, call 1-800-BRAILLE (272-4553).

Braille Institute of America is a private, nonprofit organization whose mission is to eliminate blindness and severe sight loss as a barrier to the fulfillment of life. More information and samples of Sound Solutions can be found on the Braille Institute Web site at www.biasoundsolutions.org.

FAMILY MATTERS

To move or not to move is question facing whole family

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I've been reading your column for years, and I never thought that I would be writing you about something I couldn't deal with.

My husband's company has been sold and we don't know what we should do about his job. He's been offered a job in [a major city], but we all love Midland and don't want to leave. Like a lot of people in the oil business, we have been moved around whenever. I've never complained, but now we've lived in Midland for seven years and our kids are settled and happy (we have a 14 year-old and a 10 year-old). This is the only home our daughter has ever really known. They definitely do NOT want to move.

May

I think that we should try really hard to stay here. My husband is torn because he wants us to stay, but he's not sure that he could find another job that pays as well as this one. He's just far enough away from retirement that he really can't afford to take the package or early retirement.

I have faith in God and in my husband that he could find another job. I'm willing to do whatever I have to do to cut back so that we can stay here.

Please answer this as soon as you can because we have to make a decision quickly. WHAT TO DO AND WHERE

DEAR WHAT: You and your family are faced with a real dilemma — do you go for economic reasons or do you stay for lifestyle reasons?

This question has two "right" answers, since short-term economics — and even long-term (that is, retirement) — may seem to make the decision clear. However, as your family has discovered, there is more to life than just money.

First, put all the economic data in a usable format. Put all your financial information on a money manager program and create a complete budget and financial projection. If you do not know how to create this information, consider discussing the cost of this service with a certified financial advisor or CPA. You need a concrete statement of your finances, both present and future.

Remember that the company has control of when you can or will "retire," not you. Even if your husband does decide to move this time, what happens when his company cuts back because the price of oil and gas drops again? What is it worth to be laid off in a city you don't like?

Consider the effects of living on a tighter budget. While you may be willing to cut spending, others in your family may not be so willing once they understand the full financial implications. For example, the numbers might indicate that you need to sell your home and buy a smaller one, or cut back drastically on discretionary spending — cell phones, kids' telephone lines, clothes allowance, summer camps, etc.

Having as complete a financial picture as possible is vital in any decision.

Can your husband find another job that he likes? How much good does it do to stay in a place you love, but feel as if you were forced to take a job you don't like or that isn't challenging or financially lucrative enough. Research clearly shows that people who consider themselves "underemployed" -— working below their intellectual skill or physical capabilities -— feel more stress than those who are unemployed.

Your husband must begin the search for another job if that is the decision, but he must also beware of taking something just because it allows the family to stay here.

You and your husband should create an "employment plan" that includes important considerations such as his requirements in a job, as well as salary and benefits. Robert Bolles' book, "What Color is Your Parachute?" may be helpful in this process.

Make this a "family affair" and work on the decision as a family — get everyone's input, gather all the data, analyze it, review it, modify it and then decide. Research shows that if everyone is involved and on the same team, then this becomes a wonderful opportunity to go down a new and more exciting path as a family!

Good Luck!

Retirees help drive economy

By Estes Thompson

OAK ISLAND, N.C. (AP) — Dick and Betty Hatch retired from their state jobs in Raleigh during the mid-1990s to the coastal community that held fond vacation memories. They built a one-story house, custom-made for growing older with a ramp to the door and wide door frames.

"We plan to stay here," Hatch said.

The Hatches contribute to the growing economy of Brunswick County. Once predominantly rural and poor, it now is a place where the senior population is expected to more than double in 20 years.

Statewide, the over-65 population of 940,000 is expected to increase by 2020 to 1.6 million, a 73 percent jump.

Retirees like the Hatches and thousands of others are transforming the county, said Karen Sphar, executive director of the Southport-Oak Island Chamber of Commerce.

"I think it is a good thing for the county as long as the county can plan to help folks who were here (before the retirement boom) and were not so economically advantaged," she said.

The county, once largely farmland and swamps, is sprouting golf, boating and beach communities that appeal to retirees.

It's much the same up and down the coast, in select areas inland like the Pinehurst and Raleigh-Chapel Hill areas, and in the traditional mountain retirement meccas stretching from Hendersonville — which advertises retirees as one of its chief industries — to beyond Asheville.

"North Carolina is a hot retirement state," said Bill Lamb, a planner at the state Division of Aging. "We're ranked either fourth or fifth, based on census data and how you want to count it."

Coastal counties are among the predicted growth leaders for the next two decades when it comes to people 65 and older. Brunswick, New Hanover, Pender, Dare, Currituck, Onslow, Hoke and Cumberland counties all expect their retiree populations to more than double by 2020.

The American Association of Retirement Communities estimates the average retired couple brings more than $250,000 in assets, has an annual retirement income of $30,000 and an average economic impact of $71,600. A retired couple's economic impact is equal to nearly four new minimum wage jobs, the group said.

In Brunswick County, the retiree money has helped push the median household income to $38,323; in Cumberland County, to $39,208; in Dare, to $42,900; and in Moore County, to $45,100.

Hatch, 70, was news and public affairs director at the UNC Center for Public Television and before that a wire service and newspaper reporter. Betty Hatch, 67, retired as a personnel officer for the state Division of Forest Resources.

"We both have pretty good state retirements" that include medical insurance and prescription coverage, Hatch said. They also bought a long-term care policy so they could stay home if they become disabled.

In 1994, they sold their Raleigh home for $225,000 — they built it in 1972 for $60,000 — and moved here. Moving away from grandchildren in Wake and Orange counties is their main regret.

Hatch fishes and is active in citizens' groups — AARP, for which he is state legislative chairman; the area beach preservation group; a local oversight committee for retirement homes; and a private no-kill animal shelter.

Betty Hatch works every day at the shelter, occasionally bringing home animals. She attends exercise classes several times a week at the town recreation center.

They bought a boat, traded it in for another and built a dock on Davis Creek in their backyard, just a few blocks from the Atlantic.

When the family vacationed at Long Beach, now Oak Island, in the 1960s, the area had few visitors, Hatch said, and they brought groceries from Raleigh because the only store was more than 20 miles away. Now there are three major chain stores within a few minutes' drive over the Intracoastal Waterway bridge.

"Now, we have all this mix of people — local people and retired people coming from everywhere," said Hatch.

But 95 percent are North Carolinians, some returning from elsewhere to retire; just 5 percent are non-natives, state figures show,

Lamb said by 2020 the growth will be led by baby-boomers who reach retirement age and "they're going to have more wealth than the current population of older adults."

Every day isn't always paradise for the retiree newcomers. Some come to the state from the North expecting everything to be cheaper, and they find it isn't, said June Barbour, a Division of Aging spokeswoman whose office handles calls from retirees seeking information.

They also find there isn't good public transportation for those no longer able to drive; she said.

Others arrive without expecting to need more medical and custodial care services as they age. Most, however, have insurance.

"Age 85 is what we call the age of services," Barbour said. "Unless they have prepared themselves — and luckily in North Carolina most of the people have — they spend down into Medicaid, and the taxpayer picks it up."

She said retirees either seem to have money or need public services. "You almost don't have a middle-income retiree," Barbour said.

To sleep, perchance to dream; but sleep for sure

By Henry F. Page, M.D.

Sleep — that period of rest for both body and mind wherein consciousness is held in partial or complete abeyance and bodily function hopefully suspended. In the words of the Bard, it "knits up the raveled sleave care." It comprises nature's all-healing nostrum.

Page

Along with eating and bowel function, it assumes greater importance as one ages, but the often-heard complaint of seniors' inability to sleep is belied by recent research. As one ages, the critical REM (rapid eye movement) segment remains well preserved, despite the diminishing of sleep efficiency from 95 percent to 75 percent.

One reason for the complaint lies in the fact that unconsciousness prevents one from knowing just exactly how much sleep one actually gets.

The National Sleep Foundation estimates that 56 percent of American adults have insomnia at least twice a week.

True insomnia can — and does — frequently occur over prolonged periods of time, and can result in diminished ability to perceive, reason and perform motor skills, along with malaise and lassitude.

Whether concomitant depression constitutes a cause or an effect poses a major problem in management. In either instance, active and thorough medical investigation becomes imperative.

Suggestions to improve sleep include: (1) establish a regular sleep schedule; (2) keep bedroom dark, quiet and not too hot or too cold; (3) establish bedtime routine; (4) keep bedroom separated from more active parts of the house; (5) partake of no caffeine, chocolate, some decongestants and alcohol (which rebounds from drowsiness to anxiety) in the evening; (6) relax; avoid stress and worry.

Pleasant, soothing and noncontroversial thoughts may help. I personally block out stressful thoughts by playing expert mental golf while admiring rolling green hills, floating clouds, singing birds and scurrying ground owls.

Some older people find that lying dormant may lower blood pressure and blood supply to the brain with subsequent agitated insomnia. My cousin Myra in Bucksport, Maine, a rare exception, solved this problem by walking downstairs, drinking black coffee and returning to bed. The exercise and caffeine stimulated her cerebral circulation and she slept like a baby.

Low blood sugar can cause agitated sleeplessness, a state easily controlled by drinking milk or eating peanut butter.

Ten percent of elderly men and 50 percent of women use soporific drugs. Medication of all types must be medically monitored because they can subtly accumulate in the system, causing confusion and Alzheimers-like situations. Zolpidem (ambein) and Zaleplon (sonata) are two new members of this group, and although more completely metabolized, still require professional direction.

The importance of sleep has long been recognized. Cervantis in the 16th century wrote: "Now blessings on him that first invented this same sleep! It covers a man all over, thought and all, like a cloak; 'Tis meat for the hungry, drink for the thirsty, heat for the cold, and cold for the hot."

Amen!

'Serious metabolic disorder' caused by gene

N.Y. Times News Service

As many as 1 in 10 people may be at increased risk of heart attack or stroke simply because they carry a gene that can lead to a serious metabolic disorder, even if they are in good health, recent studies suggest.

In the past, the carriers of the gene for the disorder, known as hemochromatosis, were not shown to be at any special health risk.

Carriers have one copy of the mutated gene associated with the disease, while sufferers of hemochromatosis inherit one mutated gene from each parent.

People with the disease absorb too much iron and often sustain serious injury to the liver, pancreas and other organs.

To reduce iron buildup, sufferers of the disease regularly have blood drained from their bodies, sometimes as often as once a week.

(The condition has received added attention recently as Federal health officials consider whether to allow that blood to be used to help the nation's dwindling blood supply; at the moment, it is simply thrown away.)

Although they have been spared the burdens of hemochromatosis, carriers have slightly elevated levels of iron in their blood, and some researchers have theorized that the added iron could pose a risk of coronary disease.

Two studies published in a recent issue of Circulation: Journal the American Heart Association, have now found evidence to support that theory.

That could raise some broad health questions, including whether the carriers — who can get a diagnosis only with a genetic test — should start having their blood drawn to deplete the iron buildup, said Dr. Jerome L. Sullivan of the University of Florida at Gainesville, who wrote an editorial accompanying the studies.

"It suggests a new risk factor in a fairly sizable chunk of the population," Sullivan said in an interview.

Program lets elderly help each other

By Kelly Wiese

HAYS, Kan. (AP) — Paying the bills. Balancing the checkbook. Shopping for groceries. Going to the doctor. They all sound like routine chores, but they can be overwhelming for seniors with health problems.

For those struggling to accomplish life's daily tasks, the senior companion program in a nine-county area of west-central Kansas can help.

The program was one of the first in the nation when it began at Fort Hays State University 26 years ago. Funded by a federal grant, the project connects poor, elderly Kansans who can still get around with those who often need help just to leave home. It provides a friend for elderly people who need one, plus a small stipend and other fringe benefits for the companions.

"The whole focus of the program is to get older people on limited incomes involved in providing services to other frail elderly folk to help them stay independent," said Jolene Niernberger, the program's director. About 150 volunteers have served more than 500 seniors already this year, she said.

Among the volunteers are Harold and Annabelle Woodford, who have been involved with the program for several years. They have been forced to cut back lately because she has cancer.

Harold Woodford is a companion to Art, an 86-year-old man who is partially blind and had a knee replaced last year. He and Art go out for coffee and to the grocery store. He also takes him to the doctor, to get his hair cut, and for physical therapy.

"We just generally have a good time. We enjoy one another," Woodford said.

Annabelle Woodford added: "I'd be hard-pressed to say who has benefited the most in that. Unfortunately, my condition has limited him."

He squeezes all that in between taking his wife for chemotherapy and her doctors' visits. "She's been my best friend for over 51 years," he said.

Harold Woodford, 74, has been helping out with cooking, even making macaroni and cheese from scratch, too, since his wife has been ill. "Have you ever burned water? I have," he joked.

The companion program also helps them pay medical bills, since not all treatments are covered by Medicare.

Annabelle Woodford, a white scarf around her head, said she still finds energy to be a companion now and then. For some, she helps balance checkbooks and pay bills, especially widows whose husbands always handled the finances. To others, she just reads the newspaper or a book.

"They're able in their own way. They like to be self-sufficient," she said.

At the urging of Sen. Larry Salmans, the state added $25,000 to the program for the fiscal year beginning July 1. "I see it as something that could help across the state, what's really just a good neighbor helping another neighbor," said Salmans, R-Hanston. "It's going on in a lot of small communities already, but this is a way to organize it and get people together."

Niernberger hopes that money can help the program expand beyond the nine counties where it already operates. "My hope is at some point, companions could be available throughout the state.,"

ONE ON THE AISLE

By Pamela C. Allen

'Othello'
'Billy Ruth: Just An American Woman'

OTHELLO

Opening last Thursday evening at the Midland Community Theater's amphitheater: Otello (as originally spelled by Cynthio, who wrote the tale of the Moor of Venice that William Shakespeare respelled as "Othello").

It was an interesting evening in spite of the noisy birds overhead, the constant drone of Wadley traffic, the occasional airplane and some inappropriate music from across the street — rock 'n' roll doesn't go with the death scene.

Shakespeare's tragedy contains all the elements of a good soap opera any afternoon — jealousy, murder, deception, love and revenge.

Even though there were a few little technical glitches — boots that fell apart and no sound system — the natural lighting brought to us by God and Eddie Taylor gave the show some interesting shadows.

The actors did the bard proud. The lion's share of the credit has to go to Clark Hodge, playing the sinister Iago. Clark worked for a year bring this production to opening as the director and only took over as Iago toward the end of the rehearsal period. His portrayal of Iago was actually fun to watch. Totally in control as he innocently baits the hapless Othello into accepting the little pieces of lies he tells about Desdamona, then kills his own friend Roderigo, well played by Ben Blacketter, to make his lies about Cassio and Desdamona that much more real. (Tell me that isn't a plot of Day of Our Lives!")

Matt Hinkley's Othello was as arrogant and strong as you want him to be, but I didn't see much build up to the rage he felt, all of a sudden it was just there, one level until the end. Desdamona was played by Bobbie Sickler. She plays the tragic wife of Othello more as a sweet young girl, first love, very innocent of the ways of the evil of men, much the teenager. With a few exceptions, the cast was all younger people, and I would have liked to hear more of the wonderful dialog. Outside in the amphitheater, this wasn't 100 percent possible. When you are outside contending with all the ambient noises and you're speaking fast, you lose your audiences with every turn of your head away from them. It was easy to hear Iago and Othello, they know how to work the house so to speak, and, of course, Carl Moore as Desdamona's father Barbantio, Greg Alexander as the Duke and Tim Jebsen as the Senator can always be heard over traffic.

All in all "Othello" was fast-paced, well directed and judging by the response of the first nighters — many of whom were young people — well-received. I hope the amphitheater can host more such entertainments.

BILLY RUTH: Just An American Woman

What do you get when you cross Sue Ann Nivens from the "Mary Tyler Moore Show" and Minnie Pearl? You get "Billy Ruth: Just an American Woman." This new comedy by author Tom Ross is a Maverick Players production now playing at Cole Theatre, 2000 W. Wadley Ave., in Mabee Theatre II.

Taking place in a fictitious TV station — WVGA-TV in Valdosta, Ga., the Merilee Meadows Hospitality House is on the air. From start to finish this show belongs to Trudie Thomason as Billy Ruth Booker. Midland has had a longtime love for this actress and with good reason — she is that good!! This is the story of a small town housewife who wins a cooking contest and is put on this TV show to demonstrate her winning recipe: her Glory Hallelujah Cake, which was being sold during the intermission. When you taste the Jack Daniels laced glaze, you'll know why it is called Glory Hallelujah Cake!

Billy Ruth brings her recipes, gossip about her family, down-home wisdom and lots of laughter to the TV audience, much to the dismay of the show's host Marilee, played by Carolyn Sutton. Marilee finds herself losing control of her show to this overbearing example of southern womanhood and losing her co-host, Jay Bradford, played by Jeff Fouts, who has higher ambitions and is charmed by this steam roller in a silly apron. Because of all the fan mail, Billy Ruth becomes a regular feature on the show playing out her life with her recipes and stories in front of and directly to the camera.

I found the script to have some of the funniest lines I've heard in quite a while. However an hour-and-a-half first act was a little long to be sitting.

"Billy Ruth" plays in the kitchen again this weekend and has been extended until July 14 and 15. Don't miss her! Opening weekend the PG-rated comedy played to sold-out houses. Tickets are $10. Get your tickets at Wild Birds Unlimited (561-5536), 2200 W. Wadley, or call the MCT box office, 682-4111, for information.

Foes of 'partial-birth' abortion face uphill battle after court ruling

By Laurie Asseo
Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Some abortion foes acknowledge their states' bans on "partial-birth" abortion are doomed by a new Supreme Court ruling. But others vow to fight for some type of restriction that would survive legal challenge.

A day after striking down Nebraska's law as an undue burden on women's right to end their pregnancies, the Supreme Court acted Thursday on three other state laws that sought to prohibit the procedure opponents call partial-birth abortion.

The justices ordered a federal appeals court that had upheld laws from Illinois and Wisconsin to reconsider them in light of the standards set by Wednesday's 5-4 ruling in the Nebraska case. And, in one of many orders issued in the wake of the 1999-2000 term, the justices let stand a federal appeals court ruling that struck down Iowa's partial-birth abortion law.

Elsewhere, state officials and advocates on both sides of the abortion issue are examining the Nebraska decision for its impact on laws in their states.

"In practical terms, it means that the South Dakota statute is unenforceable," said state Attorney General Mark Barnett. "Our hands are tied. They've expressed the law and we must follow it."

Kansas state Rep. Tony Powell, an anti-abortion leader, said, "I will be honest with you, I don't know what we will do. ... Am I giving up? No, not yet."

Republicans in Congress also are looking to retool their proposed legislation. "This opinion will be studied intensely," said House Judiciary Chairman Henry Hyde, R-Ill.

President Clinton vetoed proposed partial-birth abortion bans in 1996 and 1997, saying they did not provide adequate exceptions to protect the health of the mother. Both times, Congress failed to override the veto.

The justices said the Nebraska law could criminalize other abortion procedures besides the one opponents said they were targeting. The law's other big flaw, the court said, was its lack of an exemption to allow the procedure if a doctor concludes it is the best way to preserve a woman's health.

Gloria Feldt, national president of Planned Parenthood, said Thursday, "Our lawyers believe that most, if not all, of the laws would almost inevitably be unconstitutional under this ruling."

Nonetheless, she added, "We assume we will be back in court on the question of whether there is any state interest that will justify a more narrowly written" ban on the procedure.

In addition to Nebraska, 30 states enacted bans on partial-birth abortion. Many of those laws have been blocked or invalidated by lower courts.

Alaska's law was invalidated by a state judge a few months after it was enacted in 1997. After Wednesday's ruling, state Attorney General Bruce Botelho said he instructed the state's lawyers to withdraw an appeal in the Alaska Supreme Court.

Dorinda Bordlee, an attorney who argued in favor of Louisiana's law, said the justices' ruling effectively kills her state's statute.

"It's a very extreme decision which has the effect of striking down the partial-birth abortion bans all over the nation," Bordlee said.

Wisconsin Attorney General James Doyle said Thursday his state's law clearly is unconstitutional under the Nebraska ruling. "The court premised its holding on its view that in order to be constitutional the law must protect the women's health. The Wisconsin law does not," he said.

Wisconsin Gov. Tommy Thompson said if his state's law is thrown out when reconsidered, he will ask lawmakers to pass another one that might have a better chance of meeting constitutional standards.

Georgia Right to Life spokeswoman Gen Wilson said the Supreme Court's ruling "isn't a great blow to Georgia because our partial-birth abortion law was virtually impotent."

Following a court challenge by doctors to the 1997 law, Georgia officials agreed to interpret it to ban only abortions performed after the fetus could live outside the womb, and to include an exception to protect the mother's health.

Justice Sandra Day O'Connor, who provided the fifth vote to strike down Nebraska's law, said a partial-birth abortion law could pass muster if it were limited to that particular procedure and included an exception to preserve the mother's life and health.

Justice Anthony M. Kennedy, a co-author with O'Connor of the court's 1992 ruling that upheld abortion rights, wrote in dissent Wednesday that her assurance that Nebraska could redraft the law was "meaningless."

Laws in Ohio and Utah seek to target only one procedure, and both have an exception designed to protect the woman's life and health.

In North Dakota, Jane Bovard, administrator of the Red River Women's Clinic in Fargo, said she hoped the Supreme Court's ruling would prompt another look at North Dakota's ban on the procedure.

"We just have to keep fighting every time they come up with one of these ways to challenge" abortion rights, Bovard said.

Government delays taking bald eagle off endangered list

Associated Press

The U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service is not ready to remove the American bald eagle from the endangered species list in time for the Fourth of July after all.

President Clinton had announced on July 2, 1999, that the bald eagle was back from the brink of extinction after a three-decade struggle and was expected to be removed from the endangered species list by July 2000.

But a Fish and Wildlife spokeswoman in Washington said Thursday that the move has been delayed and that she does not know when it will happen.

"It's not going to happen in July," spokeswoman Cindy Hoffman said. She said government lawyers are trying to figure out whether existing federal law can be interpreted to protect the birds' habitat once the bald eagle is taken off the endangered species list.

"It's taking a little longer than we thought. We want to make sure we do it right," she said.

If the bald eagle is dropped from the endangered species list, it will still be protected under two other federal laws from being hunted or captured. But those laws, unlike the Endangered Species Act, do not explicitly protect the birds' habitat.

Environmentalists worry that home- and roadbuilding will destroy nesting grounds for the bald eagles.

"We're seeing an old-fashioned land grab, where humans and eagles are using the same habitat," said Bryan Watts, director of the Center for Conservation Biology at the College of William and Mary in Williamsburg, Va. "There's no question, without the Endangered Species List, who will win that."

When the Continental Congress in 1782 put the bald eagle on the Great Seal of the United States, there were as many as a half-million eagles in North America. By 1963, there were fewer than 500 breeding pairs in the Lower 48 states as a result of hunting, loss of habitat and use of the pesticide DDT, which was banned in 1972.

Today, there are 6,000 breeding pairs.

Following passage of the Endangered Species Act in 1973, the eagle was classified as "endangered" — or on the brink of extinction — throughout most of the Lower 48. In 1995, the eagle was downgraded to "threatened."

Hart's homer helps 'Hounds win

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

Jason Hart ended a home run drought at Christensen Stadium Thursday night and reliever Leo Vasquez struck out five batters in the last 2 1/3 innings to give the Midland RockHounds a 4-3 victory over the Tulsa Drillers.

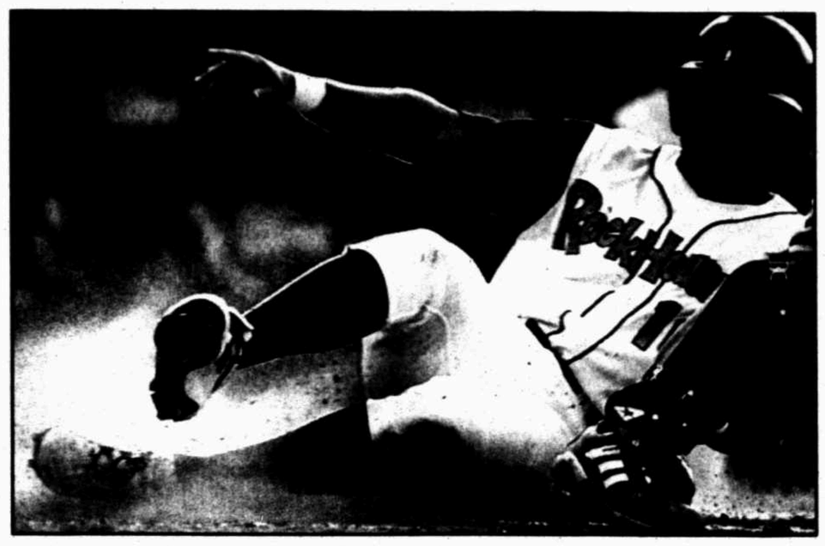
The win gave Midland a 3-1 series win and puts the 'Hounds back at the .500 mark for the second half of the season at 4-4. It is a good start to the eight-game homestand which will see Wichita arrive today for the final four games.

It came way back in the third inning when Hart smacked his 20th home run of the year to left field, right into the teeth of a harsh cross wind blowing in from center field. That gave Midland a 4-1 lead at the time and would eventually stand up as what amounted to a game winning hit.

"I struggled yesterday at the plate, so I was just looking to be aggressive tonight at the plate," Hart said. "It's been a while since I've hit one for the home fans."

Hart hadn't hit a home run since June 21 in Round Rock and it was only his third in the last 30 games after a torrid long ball start to the season. Hart said things have changed since that early home run spurt.

"Early in the year, the wind was always blowing out in this stadium," Hart said. "But now the wind is blowing in almost every night. Guys who were leaving the yard early, aren't doing that here now. It's much tougher to hit one."



Midland's Todd Mensik slides safely home to score a run in the second inning.

U. Frank Williams Jr. Reporter-Telegram

Hart had to belt this one into a stiff breeze, but it accounted for his 75th RBI of the year.

Things would get dicey for the 'Hounds before this one would end, however. In the seventh

ROCKER HITS NEW YORK

Long-awaited Reunion

Rocker gets booed; but Braves win

By Larry McShane
Associated Press Writer

NEW YORK — New York Mets fan Mike Adler had waited since last October to ask — actually scream — a question for John Rocker. So when Atlanta's loudmouth lefty went out to run windsprints Thursday night, Adler was ready.

"Why don't you show us respect?" shouted Adler, proudly wearing a Mets shirt. He was speaking for his fellow fans, but the question applied to gays, immigrants, women and most other groups offended by Rocker's insensitive and inane remarks about New York.

Rocker answered semi-pleasantly, autographed two baseballs, then issued a public apology. But it did little to lower the level of bile directed at the man Mets fans, among others, love to despise.

Rocker's videotaped apology, shown on Shea Stadium's 26-foot-tall screen in left-center field before the start of the game between the Mets and the Braves, was greeted with lusty boos by the crowd.

"I have apologized and have felt badly for anyone who took my comments personally," Rocker said on the tape.

"I also am fully aware that the overwhelming majority of the people in this city are extremely charismatic and full of personality, although a bit spirited at times, but, you know, that doesn't make them bad people," he said.

Rocker went out to the bullpen, with its special protective cover, without incident before the first pitch.

While the crowd was generally well-behaved, police arrested two people — one for disorderly conduct, another for entering a players' only zone — and issued 63 summonses for open containers of beer, said police spokesman Sgt. Victor Ramos.

"For us it was a perfect game," said Kevin Hallinan, baseball's head of security.

The crowd of 46,998 — with many police visible throughout the stands — was taken out of the game early as the Braves jumped out to a 4-0 lead. Then, as the Mets came back and Atlanta's pitching faltered, the crowd began chanting "We want Rocker!"

They got him.

He began warming up in the top of the eighth inning and then jogged to the mound from the bullpen — instead of his usual sprint — as he replaced pitcher Jason Marquis. A few objects, including a ball, were thrown at Rocker in left field as the crowd stood and booed.

With police in riot gear standing behind the outfield fence, Rocker then struck out Robin Ventura, retired Todd Zeile on a grounder to short, and got Jay Payton to ground out to third. The Braves went on to win, 6-4.

"He's finding his strike zone, he's doing his job," said Mets second baseman Edgardo Alfonzo. "One-two-three — that's doing his job."

As he walked to the Braves' dugout, Rocker looked at the Mets fans with a slight smirk but did not taunt them as he did during the playoffs.

He was greeted with high-fives from his teammates. Two police officers stood just outside the dugout and three stood on top of it as fans jeered.

Braves manager Bobby Cox then sent Kerry

The New York Yankees acquired a slugging outfielder — no, it wasn't Sammy Sosa.

In an effort to boost their struggling team, the Yankees traded outfielder Ricky Ledee and two players to be named to the Cleveland Indians on Thursday for David Justice.

The Yankees had a tentative deal for Detroit's Juan Gonzalez fall through because they couldn't agree to a contract with the outfielder and their bid for Sosa ended when they couldn't agree on players with the Chicago Cubs.

The Cubs apparently wanted at least five Yankees prospects, including several considered among the best in the New York farm system.

"We had a player who was desirable if they couldn't pull off a Sammy Sosa or Juan Gonzalez deal," Indians general manager John Hart said. "We were waiting in line."

The weeks of speculation have weighed heavily on the World Series champions, who are 16-26 since reaching a season-high 13 games over .500 on May 9.

"I'm happy, and hopefully this will quiet things down so we can focus on baseball," manager Joe Torre said after the Yankees beat Detroit 8-0. "Hopefully, it takes some of the distractions away

Guthridge may quit as Heels' coach

By David Droschak
AP Sports Writer

Bill Guthridge, who led North Carolina to two Final Four appearances in his three seasons as coach of the Tar Heels, will announce his retirement at a news conference Friday, The Associated Press has learned.

A source close to the basketball program, speaking on condition of anonymity, said Thursday that Guthridge recently decided he did not have the energy to continue coaching the Tar Heels.

The school has called an on-campus news conference for 2:30 p.m. Friday.

Guthridge, 62, said just a few weeks ago that he planned to stay on another five or six years.

An assistant to Dean Smith for 30 seasons, Guthridge replaced his former boss, the winningest coach in college basketball history, when he retired in 1997 after 36 years as coach of the Tar Heels.

"I'm still planning on going five or six more years, as long as I enjoy it and think I'm doing a

Stevenson, Dokic's father make news with off-court controversy

By Steve Wilstein
AP Tennis Writer

WIMBLEDON, England — Alexandra Stevenson and Jelena Dokic, teens who blithely made brilliant Wimbledon debuts a year ago, are embroiled in uglier issues this year.

Stevenson lashed out Thursday, alleging hazing and racism on the women's tour, and Dokic saw her belligerent father-coach taken into police custody again.

On the courts, matters were more routine, with the daily dose of upsets and near upsets.

Defending women's champion Lindsay Davenport rallied from 0-3, 15-40 in the final set and won the last six games to beat Elena Likhovtseva 3-6, 6-3, 6-3. French Open champion Mary Pierce, seeded third, lost to Magui Serna 7-6 (5), 7-6 (4).

Pierce's elimination, along with No. 12 Amanda Coetzer's 7-6 (0), 6-2, loss to American Lilia Osterloh, left only seven seeded players in the women's draw, the fewest to survive two rounds since 1976.

On the men's side, No. 5 Yevgeny Kafelnikov and No. 15 Marat Safin lost in straight sets, leaving only six seeded men still in the tournament.

The final match on Centre Court between No. 2 Andre Agassi and Todd Martin was suspended in the fourth set because of rain. Agassi led 6-4, 2-6, 7-6 (3), 0-1.

Agassi and Martin will resume with the first match on Centre Court on Friday. Top-seeded Pete Sampras will close the day against fellow American Justin Gimelstob. Sampras, going for his seventh Wimbledon title, was examined after his last match and found to have tendinitis near his shin, but is expected to play.

Stevenson, the only woman in Wimbledon history to go from qualifier to semifinalist, ended her freshman year on the tour by losing in the second round, 7-6 (3), 6-3 to Austria's Patricia Wartusch.

"I learned a lot and I got a lot stronger, but I wouldn't wish it on my worst enemy," the 19-year-old Stevenson said. "There is a lot of hazing going on. ... I don't think any young girl should go through that."

Stevenson named two French players whom she said acted in a racist way toward her — Amelie Cocheteux allegedly using a racial remark and bumping her in the locker room at the French Open, and Anne-Gaelle Sidot pulling on her mother's hat.

"They kind of ganged up on me," Stevenson said.

Stevenson said she complained to the WTA Tour, "but they can't really do anything about it because the girls are pretty wild. It's hard to control people. It's not a perfect situation out here."

Cocheteux responded she may have cursed to herself in French because she was angry that Stevenson's mother was coaching her during their match in Strasbourg, "but I didn't say anything to her. This is all pure invention. To tell you the truth, I hardly speak a word of English.

Loaiza returns from 'pen, pitches Rangers to victory

Associated Press

OAKLAND, Calif. — A short visit to the bullpen did wonders for Esteban Loaiza.

Loaiza, whose previous start was skipped because the schedule allowed the Rangers to use a four-man rotation, gave up one run in 7 1-3 innings as Texas defeated the Oakland Athletics 3-1 on Thursday.

The Rangers became the first team to win a series from the A's since mid-May.

Loaiza (5-5), who earned his first major league save on Sunday in his 155th career game, gave up his only run when Jason Giambi hit a solo homer in the eighth. It was Giambi's 22nd homer of the season.

Mike Venafro and Jeff Zimmerman got the last two outs in the eighth, and John Wetteland pitched the ninth for his 20th save.

Loaiza worked out of his toughest jam in the sixth when Giambi, Ben Grieve and Matt Stairs opened the inning with singles to load the bases.

But John Jaha flied to right, and Dave Martinez's one-hop throw to the plate easily beat Giambi for a double play. Loaiza then got Eric Chavez to fly to right and end the inning.

"I was just trying to get a groundball and get out of the inning, but I got the flyball for the double play," Loaiza said.

A's manager Art Howe said Oakland was trying to be aggressive.

"It took the perfect throw, and he made it," Howe said. "We expect to find ways to win all the time, so we're disappointed when it doesn't happen."

Rusty Greer hit a two-run homer in the first for the Rangers, who defeated the A's 5-3 on Wednesday night and took two of three games in the series. Rafael Palmeiro added an RBI double in the third.

It was the first time since May 19-20 the A's lost consecutive games. Oakland won its previous eight series.

■ AL Roundup

Blue Jays 12, Devil Rays 3

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla. — Brad Fullmer and Jose Cruz Jr. hit three-run homers as Toronto won its seventh consecutive series with a victory over the Tampa Bay Devil Rays.

Raul Mondesi and Tony Batista added two-run homers for the Blue Jays, who have won seven of eight and taken over first in the AL East.

Fullmer, who went 4-for-4 with a walk and four RBIs, homered during a four-run first-inning off Cory Lidle (1-3). He also tripled and singled twice, lacking only a double for the cycle.

Twins 10, White Sox 1

CHICAGO — Eric Milton allowed five hits in seven innings, and Jay Canizaro had a career-high four hits, including a solo homer for Minnesota.

Corey Koskie hit a two-run homer, and Ron Coomer and Marcus Jensen had two RBIs apiece for the Twins, who won for the fifth time in eight games. Minnesota had 16 hits, including three by Midre Cummings, off five Chicago pitchers.

Milton (8-2) improved to 5-0 with a 1.72 ERA in five daytime starts. He walked one and struck out six.

Mariners 7, Angels 2

SEATTLE — John Olerud hit two homers to drive in three runs as Seattle moved into first in the AL West.

Olerud's second homer, a two-run shot to center off Kent Bottenfield (4-7), broke a 2-2 tie in the sixth inning.

Stan Javier put the game out of reach with a two-run homer off Mark Petkovsek in the seventh. Robert Machado hit a solo homer off Derrick Turnbow in the eighth.

Yankees 8, Tigers 0

DETROIT — After trading Ricky Ledee for David Justice before the game, the Yankees got the second career shutout from Andy Pettitte.

New York went out and hammered Tigers starter Dave Mlicki (2-9). The Yankees scored eight runs on eight hits and an error in the fourth inning against Dave Mlicki (2-9), including a record-tying three sacrifice flies.

Red Sox 12, Orioles 4

BOSTON — Brian Daubach snapped out of a slump with two homers and six RBIs, and Tim Wakefield pitched seven strong innings as Boston broke a five-game losing streak.

Daubach went 4-for-4 with a three-run homer in the second inning off Scott Erickson (3-6), and a solo shot in the seventh, giving him 13 homers for the season. Scott Hatteberg added a three-run homer in the fifth.

Trailing 8-0, Baltimore scored four in the eighth on Albert Belle's three-run homer off Wakefield (3-5), his 18th of the season, and pinch-hitter Jeff Conine's solo shot, his 10th, off Sang Lee. Boston rallied for four runs in the bottom of the inning.

Royals 6, Indians 1

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Carlos Beltran homered from both sides of the plate, and Chad Durbin gave up five hits in 8 2-3 innings for Kansas City.

Durbin (2-3) walked five and struck out six. Ricky Bottalico got the last out.

Johnson fans 13 Astros, earns 12th win of season

Associated Press

PHOENIX — Randy Johnson pitched five-hit ball over eight innings, tied his season high with 13 strikeouts and got his NL-leading 12th victory as the Arizona Diamondbacks beat the Houston Astros 7-1 Thursday night.

Steve Finley hit his second homer in as many nights for the Diamondbacks, who won for the sixth times in eight games to remain two games ahead of the Colorado Rockies in the NL West.

Johnson (12-2) walked three and hit a batter as he ran his league-leading strikeout total to 177 and lowered his league-best ERA to 1.57. Johnson reached the double-digit strikeout mark for the 12th time in 17 starts this season and 137th time in his career.

Matt Mantei pitched a perfect ninth to complete the five-hitter.

Shane Reynolds (6-5) retired six of the first seven hitters he faced before running into trouble in the third inning.

Damian Miller led off with a double off the wrist of shortstop Julio Lugo and advanced to third on Tony Womack's groundout. Jay Bell then lined a double down the left-field line, scoring Miller.

Reynolds walked Luis Gonzalez before Finley his 22nd homer, a three-run shot into the right-field stands to extend the Diamondbacks' lead to 4-0.

A baserunning error by Richard Hidalgo helped short circuit an Astros' rally in the fourth. Craig Biggio led off with a walk. Hidalgo walked one out later and Moises Alou lined a single to left. Biggio scored as left fielder Luis Gonzalez's throw was cut off, but Hidalgo was tagged out trying to reach third.

Johnson walked Matt Mieske, his third walk of the inning, but struck out Tony Eusebio to end the inning.

Reynolds gave up six runs on eight hits over 7 2-3 with, two walks and six strikeouts for his fifth loss in six decisions.

■ NL Roundup

Cardinals 12, Reds 3

CINCINNATI — Shawon Dunston, Eric Davis and Edgar Renteria homered, powering the St. Louis Cardinals to a victory over the Cincinnati Reds and a split of their four-game series.

Dunston had a run-scoring single in the first and a three-run homer in the third, putting the Cardinals ahead 6-0 and on track for their 13th victory in 17 games.

By splitting the series, St. Louis held its ground against its closest pursuer in the NL Central. The Cardinals are up by 8 1/2 games, matching their biggest margin of the season.

Ken Griffey Jr. hit a solo homer, his fourth of the series, as he once again overshadowed slumping Mark McGwire.

Ron Villone (7-5) gave up seven runs and eight hits in five-plus innings as he lost for the fourth time in five decisions.

Brewers 8, Phillies 6

PHILADELPHIA — Jason Bere struck out a season-high 13 in eight innings as Milwaukee snapped a three-game losing streak.

Bere (5-6) allowed three runs and six hits for his first road win since April 7. He also halted a personal three-game losing streak.

Raul Casanova hit a solo homer and an RBI double as the Brewers avoided being swept in the final series of a 10-game road trip.

The Phillies scored three runs in the fifth to tie it after the game was delayed almost eight minutes because the umpires lost track of the count.

With two outs, Phillies manager Terry Francona complained to home plate umpire Scott Packard that pinch-hitter Alex Arias had walked. Packard had a 3-1 count. After discussing the matter over with the rest of the umpires, Packard called the press box and it was confirmed that Arias had actually walked.

Rockies 11, Giants 4

DENVER — Jeff Cirillo had three hits and drove in three runs as Colorado took three of four from San Francisco.

Neifi Perez, Brent Mayne and Larry Walker each added two RBIs for Colorado and Masato Yoshii (4-7) posted his third straight victory.

Cirillo has seven hits and nine RBIs in the last two games. On Wednesday night, Cirillo had three homers among his four hits, drove in six runs and scored five in Colorado's 17-13 win.

Barry Bonds hit his 28th homer, tying Mark McGwire for most in the majors.

'HOUNDS: Midland wins series, 3-1 inning, Tulsa scored two runs on RBI hits by Scott Podsednik and Carlos Pena to cut the margin to 4-3 off Midland reliever Benito Baez.

(From 1C)

Baez replaced Jesus Colome, who held a 4-1 lead after five innings of work. Colome got the win and climbed to 7-3 for the season.

But it may have been the work of Vasquez out of the 'Hounds' bullpen that was the major spark for this win.

Vasquez ended the seventh inning uprising by Tulsa by striking out Ryan Lane to end the inning and then had four strikeouts in the next two innings to record his second save of the season. Vasquez gave up a hit and a walk in the Tulsa ninth, but he got Pena, Tulsa's No. 3 hitter, on strikes to end the game.

"My curveball was perfect and my fastball outside worked good," Vasquez said.

But with runners at first and second in the ninth, Vasquez had to step up with a strong effort. He was up to it.

"I like being in that kind of situation," Vasquez said. "It's my job. It's what I've got to do."

Vasquez was working for the second night in a row and he didn't give up any runs in the one inning he pitched against Tulsa in a Midland loss. With a performance like the one he had Thursday, he may be marched to the mound even more down the second half stretch.

Midland handed Colome a 3-0 lead in the second inning. Todd Mensik started the rally with a double off Tulsa spot starter Spike Lundberg, who took the loss.

Jacques Landry delivered a hit to score Mensik for the first run of the game, and later in the inning, Josue Espada delivered a two-run single to plate Landry and Dionys Cesar.

ROCKER: Reliever pitches, wins

(From 1C)

Ligtenberg to pitch the ninth.

Earlier in the day, Rocker took a circuitous route to the ballpark. With a quick wave and dead silence, he backed off his pledge to mingle with the denizens of the No. 7 subway.

He instead climbed into a black van to meet with representatives of the players' union, who encouraged him to stay off the train. He returned to his hotel before heading out to Shea in another van with tinted windows.

Disappointed riders of the Queens subway line instead turned out at the ballpark to greet the pitcher-turned-poster-boy for insulting comments. One sported a sign declaring, "Rocker Is Da Devil."

At a sparsely attended anti-Rocker rally beneath the subway, demonstrators held signs proclaiming "NYC Says No to RocKKKer" and the less-imaginative "Rocker's A Bigot." Among the demonstrators were a half-dozen Queens Little Leaguers.

The fastballer was dubbed "The Ku Klux Kloser" after his racist, homophobic and xenophobic comments in Sports Illustrated in December. This trip was his first to Shea since last fall's playoffs.

Though Rocker had promised to ride the subway to the ballpark, wiser heads prevailed on the hurler to choose a less-public form of transportation.

This was a good idea, given that Rocker had redefined political incorrectness by describing straphangers on the No. 7 line as "some kid with purple hair ... some queer with AIDS ... some 20-year-old mom with four kids." He also complained that New York has too many foreigners and added: "How the hell did they get in this country?"

An assortment of preparations were in place for the Shea return of the reliever, christened "Johnny Rotten" and "Punk Rocker" by the New York tabloids. Despite the city's enmity toward him, Rocker received the type of security ordinarily reserved for heads of state.

In addition to police at his hotel, 700 officers were assigned to Shea instead of the 60 for most games. There were police on bicycles and horses, in vans and buses, in uniform and plainclothes.

A limit on beer sales was imposed. A special protective cover was erected over the Braves' bullpen in left field. During batting practice, fans were barred from sitting in the first four rows behind the Braves' dugout.

Some fans had recently handed out fliers on the No. 7 platform advertising "John Rocker Battery Night." Fans were encouraged to bring and fling their AAs to greet Rocker.

In response, New York Mets officials promised a zero-tolerance policy against fans behaving badly in the stands.

The road trip to hell is just the latest in a series of self-inflicted woes for Rocker: a suspension for his comments, his threats against the writer of the SI piece, and a brief demotion to the minor leagues.

"Hindsight being 20/20, I would've loved to have missed my meeting with the Sports Illustrated reporter and I never would've had to deal with the whole situation," Rocker said in an interview with TBS, which is owned by the same company that owns the Braves and Sports Illustrated. "But then again, that's the hand I've been dealt and I'll have to make the best of it."

Rocker left the park at 11:45 p.m., half an hour after the Braves departed in their team bus. Accompanied by a woman, he got into a black van trailed by three security vehicles for the journey back to Manhattan.

TRADE: Sosa doesn't get traded

(From 1C)

so we can focus."

After winning three titles in the last four years, the Yankees would not be one of the four AL playoff teams if the season ended today.

The Yankees are three games behind Toronto in the AL East and five behind Oakland in the wild-card race. They were 10th in the league in scoring and fourth in ERA.

The Indians, who have won five straight AL Central division titles, are 8 1/2 games behind the Chicago White Sox in part because their pitching staff has been decimated by injuries.

Cleveland and New York have combined to win the last five AL titles.

"Traditionally, the Yankees and Indians aren't clubs that can make a deal," Hart said. "But the Yankees have been struggling of late and we've been struggling due to injuries."

Yankees owner George Steinbrenner has been pressuring his "baseball people" to make a trade and questioned Ledee's toughness earlier this season.

A baseball lawyer said the deal ends the Yankees' pursuit of Sosa. If the Yankees make another major move, it would be for pitching.

"I think ultimately Sammy will be traded," said Tom Reich, Sosa's agent. "This one got real close. But there was a difference of opinion on the players. But I think ultimately there is a deal to make."

The Indians also are looking to add pitching, with starters Charles Nagy and Jaret Wright out with injuries. The deal also frees up money to re-sign Manny Ramirez, who is eligible for free agency after the season.

Justice is making $7 million a year through 2002; while Ledee is making just $240,000 this season and isn't eligible for salary arbitration until after the 2001 season.

"It was simple economics," Hart said. "This ballclub certainly has it's eyes on winning in '00 and absolutely have our eyes on retooling for the '01 season."

Terry took agents' money

TUCSON, Ariz. — Former University of Arizona All-America point guard Jason Terry took more than $11,000 and other benefits from agents after his junior year and as a senior, violating NCAA rules, school officials said Thursday.

As a result, the university has forfeited its only 1999 NCAA basketball tournament game and will repay $45,362 to the NCAA, but will not have to forfeit its regular-season games for 1998-99.

Both the Pacific-10 Conference and the NCAA have accepted and agreed with the university's self-imposed sanctions, after completing their own investigations, athletic director Jim Livengood said. Neither has recommended any additional sanctions.

Terry, now with the NBA's Atlanta Hawks, was chosen as a lottery pick a year ago after being a 1999 first-team AP All-America as a senior.

Irvan gets burned trophies back

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Retired NASCAR driver Ernie Irvan thought he was being shuttled to Daytona Beach on Thursday for a round of interviews and handshakes.

He received a big surprise instead — duplicates of the racing trophies destroyed in a fire that ruined his North Carolina home in March.

Standing stunned as NASCAR senior vice president Mike Helton lowered the curtain on duplicates of more than a dozen trophies he won over his career, Irvin hardly knew what to say.

"When the house burned down, I told people I didn't care about all the other stuff, but I had a pretty nice trophy room," Irvan said. "This is totally unbelievable."

Irvan's $1 million home, in Mooresville, N.C., caught fire in March while he and his family were vacationing in the Bahamas.

Ex-Pack cornerback charged

LA CROSSE, Wis. — Former NFL cornerback Craig Newsome was charged Thursday with using a false drug prescription to obtain a painkiller.

Newsome, 28, who has been coaching the La Crosse River Rats of the Indoor Football League, was charged with one count of obtaining a controlled substance by fraud, a felony that carries a maximum six years in prison and a $30,000 fine upon conviction.

"He went to a pharmacy with a prescription in the name of another individual. He gave it to them and got the drug, Lortab," La Crosse County Assistant District Attorney Todd Bjerke said.

Mavs' new owner brings enthusiasm to NBA draft day

By Jaime Aron
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS — The black hat with what could be the new logo was spun backwards, displaying the words "Dallas Basketball" across Mark Cuban's forehead.

His black T-shirt read "Mavericks Intensity" on the chest, "Just Bring It" on the back. Both sleeves were rolled up a bit on each end, maybe for comfort, but likely for effect.

The new owner of the Dallas Mavericks showed up for his first draft ready for action Wednesday night, then proceeded to provide plenty of it.

With Cuban holding the ultimate yeah or nay vote, the Mavericks beefed up their shaky frontcourt with a three rookies and a veteran, added a sensational scorer and replaced one backup guard with another.

"Whoosh! If it's like this every year, I'll be one happy camper," Cuban said.

Dallas used its top pick, No. 12, on power forward Etan Thomas of Syracuse, then sent a second-rounder, next year's first-rounder and $3 million of Cuban's cash to Orlando for the 13th pick, Courtney Alexander of Fresno State, the nation's leading scorer last season.

The Mavericks were just getting heated up. Next came the swap of guard Erick Strickland and the 58th pick to New York for forward John Wallace and Donnell Harvey of Florida, whom the Knicks had taken at No. 22.

Next was a minor deal with the Los Angeles Clippers: backup center Sean Rooks for backup point guard Eric Murdock and the 31st pick, which Dallas originally sent to Orlando in the Alexander deal.

Then the Mavs moved that pick again sending it to Houston for the 38th choice, which he used on Eduardo Najera of Oklahoma, a player Cuban wanted badly because he loved his hustle.

It'll take months and maybe even years to truly know whether Cuban and his braintrust led by coach-general manager Don Nelson made the right moves.

But for the fans who stuck with the Mavericks through a woeful decade, it's easy to get swept away by Cuban's enthusiasm.

After all, he was one of those long-suffering fans as a season ticket-holder who had a baseline view before taking over the boardroom.

"We're here to win, we're here to make things happen," Cuban said. "I'm trying to convey that intensity toward winning."

Cuban's intensity is conveyed through involvement.

"I watched tapes, looked at every stat, talked to every scout — as much as I could to educate myself," Cuban said. "That's part of the process. If I'm going to contribute, which I want to do, and understand how I'm going to add value, then I'm going to have to do my homework."

Cuban was ready. He had a game plan and was ready to follow it, although Nelson had warned him that the blueprint could go into the shredder if other teams fouled things up.

The sharp-toothed machine never had to be flipped on. Cuban called Nelson a genius for plotting a strategy to land the players they felt wanted the most, while Nelson said Cuban got spoiled because things usually don't work out that way.

"It was more nerve-racking than fun," Cuban said. "I don't get high expectations. I focus on being prepared. I explore all the alternatives and just make the choice left.

"Never in my wildest, wildest, wildest dreams did I feel that we would get exactly the people we wanted — and we did."

Cuban said he exerted his authority when he had to, such as when Nelson tried going after one of the little-known foreigners he loves turning into projects.

"There was a conversation about whether or not we should take someone who would be available in two years and I told him I preferred that we didn't. So we didn't," Cuban said.

The biggest snag involved furniture.

"My chair broke," he said. "I was rocking back and forth."

A highlight of the night was trading verbal jabs on television with Peter Vecsey, who has said and written some unkind things about the maverick Mavericks owner.

Cuban got off more punches than he took, which is an apt analogy considering he put up his fists when they were introduced over the air.

Yet through all the excitement, Cuban never lost sight of the big picture.

He was asked if running a draft was the ultimate dream for someone like him who can better relate to fantasy basketball drafts.

"No, not even close," he said. "Holding that trophy up and giving it a kiss — that will be the ultimate dream."

Jarrett claims pole for Pepsi 400

More Sports/11C

By Eddie Pells
AP Sports Writer

DAYTONA BEACH, Fla. — Dale Jarrett got a jump on his quest for a third straight victory at Daytona and a piece of history Thursday night, winning the pole position for the Pepsi 400.

The defending Winston Cup champion drove his red, white and blue Ford around the 2.5-mile trioval at Daytona International Speedway at 187.547 mph.

By winning under the lights Saturday night, Jarrett would join Cale Yarborough as the only other driver to win three straight at NASCAR's most famous track. Yarborough completed the feat in July 1968, with a victory in what was known then as the Firecracker 400.

Jarrett will start alongside his Robert Yates Racing teammate, Ricky Rudd, who circled the track at 187.122 mph in the muggy night air.

Bill Elliott (186.865 mph) will start from the third position, meaning the top three spots on the starting grid will be the same as in the Daytona 500 in February.

But things have changed since then.

Most notably, the car Jarrett drove to victory at the Daytona 500 has been placed on display in the museum next to the track. His team had to rebuild its car for races at Daytona and Talladega, the two superspeedways that use restrictor plates on the carburetors to slow speeds.

Jarrett tested the new car at Daytona earlier this month and liked what he saw.

"Fans can go look at that car at Daytona USA and see almost a copy of the car we've got here," Jarrett said. "We did everything we could to make it a little better in the wind tunnel. We came here and backed it up on the race track."

Rookie Dave Blaney will start fourth and Mark Martin, who is winless at Daytona, will start fifth.

Series points leader Bobby Labonte will start in the 21st spot. Dale Earnhardt, who trails Labonte by 67 points, will start 18th.

Jeff Gordon failed to finish among the top 25 and will try again Friday in second-day qualifying.

"It's a little more difficult starting from the back at Daytona than at Talladega," said Gordon, who won on Talladega's 2.66-mile track in April. "There's more room to race at Talladega. Handling is the key. Track position is important. We'll just have to find a way to get it up there."

Jarrett heads into the second half of the season in third place, 129 points behind Labonte, as he tries to defend his title.

Could there be a better place to build momentum than Daytona, where Jarrett has had the car and the luck to win twice in a row?

In last year's Pepsi 400, he took a quick splash of gas late, then skirted the apron to save fuel as the race finished under the yellow flag. Out of gas after he crossed the finish line, his crew pushed him to Victory Lane.

In February, Jarrett opened defense of his Winston Cup title with a victory thanks in part to a pair of late accidents and a good closing push to overtake Johnny Benson. With that victory, he became the seventh driver to win two in a row at Daytona.

The pole position is his third of the year and 10th of his career.

"My job tonight was to get it into high gear without doing anything wrong, then guide it around," Jarrett said. "It's the easiest car I've had to drive."

Rusty Wallace failed in his effort to win a third straight pole position. He took his lap with a light mist falling and will start 12th.

Practice was shortened and qualifying was delayed by 30 minutes because of a steady rain that fell in the afternoon.

And while the heavy, humid air might have had an effect on the cars, it wasn't as pronounced as the effect of the smaller restrictor plates and new shock packages NASCAR has mandated this year.

Jarrett's qualifying time was more than 7 mph slower than the time Joe Nemechek posted last year to win the pole. Speeds at Talladega and at the Daytona 500 in February were slower, as well.

NASCAR eased its restrictions on the shocks after a dull Daytona 500, but it might not have done enough.

"I don't think there are any big alarms at this point," NASCAR senior vice president Mike Helton said. "We'll wait and see how the races go" before considering more changes.

Ex-Lions' quarterback Tobin Rote dies

DETROIT (AP) — Tobin Rote, the quarterback who guided the Detroit Lions to their last NFL championship in 1957 while filling in for injured Hall of Famer Bobby Layne, has died. He was 72.

Rote, of Port Hope, Mich., died Tuesday at a Saginaw hospital after suffering a heart attack, nearly two weeks after undergoing back surgery, the Detroit Free Press reported Thursday.

Rote, who played for the Green Bay Packers from 1950-56 and is enshrined in that franchise's Hall of Fame, led two professional clubs to championships.

Rote led the NFL in passing yards in 1956 and in touchdown passes in 1955 and 1956, then was dealt to the Lions in 1957 as the Packers made room for future Hall of Famer Bart Starr.

The Lions platooned Rote and Layne at quarterback before Rote finished off the 1957 season after Layne broke his leg in the regular season's second-to-last game.

The Lions finished that season 8-4, with Rote passing for 1,070 yards, 11 touchdowns and 10 interceptions.

In the divisional playoff, the Lions trailed the 49ers 24-7 at halftime. Through the dressing room walls at San Francisco's old Kezar Stadium, they could hear the 49ers already beginning their celebration.

"We could hear them laughing," Rote said in 1991. "The walls were paper thin. They were going on about how they were going to spend their championship game money. It made us angry."

GUTHRIDGE: Press conference scheduled

good job and keeping the program where it belongs," Guthridge said in a recent interview.

Heading into what would have been the fourth year of a five-year contract, he had compiled an 80-28 record, averaging more than 26 wins a season, but had not received a contract extension.

The easy-going Guthridge often worked without a contract during his years as an assistant to Smith.

A search for Guthridge's replacement will begin immediately, the source said.

Some fans criticized Guthridge last season when the Tar Heels went through a four-game losing streak in January and entered the postseason with 13 losses. The inconsistent season came on the heels of a first-round NCAA tournament loss in 1999.

North Carolina athletic director Dick Baddour has refused to comment directly on Guthridge's contract, saying the school's board of trustees discourages him from talking publicly about such personnel issues.

Baddour has said he's proud of the job Guthridge has done following Smith, which he admits was not an easy task.

Most of the team that lost 71-59 to Florida in the Final Four will return next season.

The biggest loss will be point guard Ed Cota, but he will be replaced by either highly regarded recruit Adam Boone or Ronald Curry, the Tar Heels' starting quarterback who is recovering from an Achilles' tendon injury.

Seven-footer Brendan Haywood will be back in the middle and Joseph Forte, one of the most impressive freshmen in school history, will be back as the shooting guard.

Among the newcomers will be top 1999 recruit Jason Parker, who is expected to be academically eligible, and 7-6 Neil Fingleton, a native of England who played his high school basketball in Worcester, Mass.

North Carolina's lengthy coaching tree will come into play as a successor is chosen. Kansas' Roy Williams and South Carolina's Eddie Fogler, both longtime assistants to Smith, will be mentioned as will former Tar Heel Matt Doherty, who had success in his first year as a head coach at Notre Dame. Current NBA head coaches George Karl at Milwaukee and Larry Brown at Philadelphia are both former Tar Heels who have remained close with the program.

The bidding:

SOUTH	WEST	NORTH	EAST

3NT	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: Queen of ♡

Surprisingly enough, there is a card that gives South two chances to land three no-trump. After you win the first trick with the king of hearts, what card do you lead to trick two and why?

The auction is routine for those who play that an opening bid of two clubs is your only strong bid. If you do not, the auction will be one round shorter after you open three no-trump in first seat.

You can only afford to lose the lead once more before the opponents set up their hearts, so establishing diamonds does not help — that only produces eight tricks. Since you will not score four tricks in spades without the opponents giving you an enormous amount of assistance, your only chance for a ninth trick is in the club suit.

You exhibited star quality if you led the king of clubs at trick two! Why? Because if the cards lie as in the diagram, should West win with the ace you can come to nine tricks without the diamonds by using your major-suit entries to finesse West for the eight and 10 of clubs, thus scoring four club tricks to go with your five fast tricks in the majors.

But what if the queen of clubs is not singleton with East? In that event, if one defender holds the ace of clubs and the other the queen, there is an excellent chance that the player with the ace will hold up, thinking you are trying to establish dummy's long suit. When the king of clubs wins, abandon that suit and start on diamonds, and nine tricks roll in.

PEOPLE TODAY

Clooney, Jeter top bachelor list

NEW YORK — The star of "The Perfect Storm" tops the list of the biggest and best fish in the sea.

George Clooney, who stars as a fishing boat captain in the movie that opens this weekend, was ranked No. 1 by People magazine, profiling "America's 100 Most Eligible Bachelors."

New York Yankees shortstop Derek Jeter was No. 2.

"If I had a daughter, Derek is the kind of guy that I would want her to marry," said friend Alex Rodriguez, the Seattle Mariners shortstop who also made the cut.

Matt Damon was No. 3, followed by George Bush — George Prescott Bush, that is, the 24-year-old paralegal who's the grandson of former President Bush and nephew of Republican candidate George W.

Bush, the oldest son of Florida Gov. Jeb Bush, says he doesn't need advice from his grandpa, but the ex-president has told him in e-mails to "relax, give things time, get to know her. If the girl's the right one, it will fall into place."

Chef Marcus Samuelsson of the Aquavit eateries in New York and Minneapolis rounds out the top five.

BRANSON, Mo. — Jerry Seinfeld is collecting new material Jack Kerouac-style by driving across the country? Get out!

Seinfeld was en route from New York to Albuquerque, N.M., in a 1973 Volkswagen Beetle this week when he decided to pull into this country music town to see an old friend and collect on a gold mine of potential material.

On Tuesday, Seinfeld took in a show at the Bobby Vinton Theater. Seinfeld and Vinton used to play in Las Vegas at the same time, said Chris Vinton, the pop singer's son.

Seinfeld "said he was really excited about being in Branson and was somewhat overwhelmed by it and surprised by how sophisticated the facilities are," Chris Vinton said.

LONDON — The mother of a black British teen-ager slain by white youths presented Nelson Mandela with a lifetime achievement award Thursday in recognition of his fight to end apartheid.

"I'm sure that I can speak for all South Africans, black and white, that this award is recognition of their struggle for peace and democracy in our country," the former South African president said.

Mandela, 81, received the BT Ethnic Multicultural Media Award from Doreen Lawrence, whose son Stephen was stabbed to death at a London bus stop in 1993. She said Mandela was the only person of world stature to take up her cause.

After a long campaign by Lawrence, an official inquiry found that police bungled the investigation and were racist. None of the five white suspects was successfully prosecuted.

Mandela, winner of the Nobel Peace Prize, said the award ceremony ranked among the important occasions of his life, adding, "There's a possibility that one day I might die, and when I reach the new world I will have many fond memories."

MIAMI — A federal judge Thursday tossed out a lawsuit by Joe DiMaggio's estate against the city of San Francisco, saying she had no jurisdiction over the city's use of the Yankee Clipper's name on a playground.

"Unlike the game of baseball, personal jurisdiction in federal court is not a fielder's choice," U.S. District Judge Joan Lenard wrote.

DiMaggio's estate sued San Francisco on May 31 after the city named the Joe DiMaggio North Beach Playground. Lawyers for the estate argued that the use of DiMaggio's name was unauthorized and that the site, where DiMaggio played sandlot baseball as a child with his brother Dom, wasn't fit for the honor.

The lawsuit included charges of false endorsement and federal trademark dilution and also asked for unspecified damages.

DiMaggio died last year at 84.

LOS ANGELES — Meg Ryan and Dennis Quaid have announced they are separating after nearly 10 years of marriage.

Their publicist, Lisa Kasteler, declined to say whether the two plan to divorce. She said the separation began about six weeks ago.

Ryan, 38, who began filming the kidnap thriller "Proof of Life" in May, endeared herself to American movie audiences with such romantic comedies as "When Harry Met Sally," "Sleepless in Seattle," and "You've Got Mail."

Quaid, 46, starred in the sci-fi time traveling tale "Frequency" in May and is known for roles in "Breaking Away," "The Big Easy" and "Wyatt Earp."

The two met in 1987 on the set of "Innerspace." They married in 1991 and have an 8-year-old son. They also appeared together in "Flesh and Bone" in 1993.

Supply concerns pushed heating oil futures up 3.5 percent in trading Thursday on the New York Mercantile Exchange, leading crude and other energy futures higher.

The energy market is beginning to pick up on the fact that heating oil inventories are getting fairly tight as refiners concentrate on gasoline production, said analyst Bill O'Grady of A.G. Edwards & Sons. While there is generally little demand for heating oil during the summer months, customers are buying in anticipation of the upcoming winter.

Currently heating oil stocks total about 15 million barrels, about half of normal at this time of year, O'Grady said. There is little excess refining capacity available to increase production of heating oil, he added.

Exacerbating the tightness is damage caused by Sunday's explosion at Kuwait's 440,000-barrel-per-day Al-Ahmadi refinery. The refinery supplies distillates, which include heating oil and aviation fuel, to the Asian market. Kuwait's oil minister, Sheikh Saud al-Sabah, said repairs to the plant could take six months.

The shortage in distillate stocks was brought to the attention of Congress on Thursday by the Energy Department's Energy Information Agency.

John Cook, director of the EIA's petroleum division, told the Senate Committee on Governmental Affairs his agency was concerned about both winter distillate and natural gas stocks, which also are lower than normal at this time of year. He said distillate stocks will be low this winter even if inventories build at a normal pace.

July heating oil was 2.88 cents higher at 84.47 cents a gallon; light sweet crude for August delivery was 82 cents higher at $32.72 a barrel; July unleaded gasoline rose 1.61 cent to $1.0505 a gallon; August natural gas was 2.6 cents higher at $4.423 per 1,000 cubic feet.

Dollar mixed

LONDON (AP) — The U.S. dollar was mixed against most other major currencies in European trading today.

The euro was quoted at 95.25 cents in late European trading, up from 94.48 cents Wednesday. Later, in midday trading in New York, the euro traded at 95.10 cents.

Other dollar rates in Europe, compared with late Wednesday, included 104.89 Japanese yen, down from 105.44; 1.6342 Swiss francs, down from 1.6410; 1.4808 Canadian dollars, down from 1.4837.

The British pound was quoted at $1.5198, up from $1.5112.

In midday trading in New York, the dollar bought 105.08 yen, and the pound was worth $1.5190.

Gold down

Gold closed in London at $289.10 bid per troy ounce, down from $289.90 on Wednesday. In Zurich the bid price was $285.55 unchanged from Wednesday. Gold rose $4.30 in Hong Kong to close at $291.05.

Silver closed in London at $5.01 bid per troy ounce, up from $4.98.

Airlines form online company to sell cheap tickets

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — A new online airline ticket service backed by six major carriers plans to sell cheap seats that otherwise might have been left empty.

Beginning this fall, Hotwire.com will try to put more passengers on underbooked flights by offering deep discounts on tickets unlikely to sell at regular prices.

The concept offers a new twist on an idea popularized by Priceline.com, which allows flyers to designate a price that they are willing to pay for a flight.

San Francisco-based Hotwire will differentiate itself from Priceline and Mircosoft's ticket service, Expedia.com, by selling its seats at fixed prices.

Hotwire's entrance into the crowded $300 billion travel industry stands out because the company's investors include a roster of airline heavyweights. United, Fort Worth, Texas-based American, Northwest, Houston-based Continental, US Airways and America West all have stakes in the new online service.

The company is controlled by a high-powered investment firm, the Texas Pacific Group, based in Fort Worth.

Users of the Hotwire service, expected to be available in September, will simply designate when and where they want to fly. Within hours, Hotwire then will offer to sell an airline ticket at a set price. Unlike Priceline, Hotwire customers will not obligated to buy the ticket.

"We are going to make it super easy for consumers to buy seats at a good price," Hotwire CEO Karl Peterson said during a Thursday interview. "There will be no hassles, no homework and no guesswork involved. We are getting rid of all the clutter."

Hotwire's formation addresses a long-time problem for the airline industry. An estimated 3.5 million airline seats aren't filled each week. Priceline has helped the industry attack the problem, but as popular as the "name your price" service has become, it only sells about 100,000 tickets per week.

With about $75 million in funding so far, Hotwire has hired 50 employees since February.

News of the airline industry's backing of Hotwire spooked Priceline stockholders, who worried that the new rival might hurt the Norwalk, Conn.-based company's business.

Priceline's shares dropped 8 percent, or $3.375, to close at $36.813.

Industry analysts said the stock market's fears were overblown.

"I really don't think these two (sites) will be dealing with the same type of customer," said Timothy Fogarty, who follows Priceline for Thomas Weisel Partners in New York.

Lauren Levitan, an analyst with Robertson Stephens in San Francisco, said it will take Hotwire a long time to match the strong brand identity of Priceline, popularized by quirky commercials featuring "Star Trek" star William Shatner.

Priceline had 5.3 million customers as of March 31. About three-fourths of Priceline's revenue is generated from airline ticket sales.

Priceline Vice Chairman Jay Walker, who launched the company in 1998, said the company isn't concerned about Hotwire. "We are not changing any of our revenue projections, profit projections or customer projections because of this," he said. Priceline hopes to be profitable by the end of this year.

Industry analysts warned that the Hotwire concept could backfire. The airline industry could be hurt if ticket buyers decide to delay buying tickets through normal channels in hopes of getting better deals from Hotwire down the line. Hotwire's business model might not work if consumers simply use it to get a price quote and then go to Priceline or another online service to name a slightly lower price.

This isn't the first time airlines have banded together to get into the increasingly popular service of selling cheap seats online. About 25 airlines have agreed to sell discount tickets through a service called Orbitz.

The U.S. Justice Department is investigating whether Orbitz is anticompetitive.

Hotwire is confident that it will avoid similar scrutiny. "Clearly, we have some well-heeled investors from the airline industry behind us, but we are independently governed and managed," Peterson said.

Ed Rothschild, a spokesman for the Interactive Travel Services Association in Washington D.C., doesn't like the sound of the Hotwire alliance.

"There is the potential for the major airlines to cooperate, collude and engage in all sorts of anticompetitive practices," he said. "While this is something that initially that might sound good from a consumer point of view, it could give the airlines to drive up prices in the long run."

Cruise anyone?

The Carnival Vacation Store, that opened Thursday at The Parks at Arlington Mall, is the first of three shopping mall kiosks Miami-based Carnival plans to open and test in 2000. Other cities slated are Chicago and Houston. Vargas and Ambrose are from Kellerand were the kiosk's first customers.

Southwest will buy about 100 jets from Boeing

DALLAS (AP) — Southwest Airlines chief executive Herb Kelleher said Thursday's big order of jets from The Boeing Co. will allow the carrier to increase its presence in the East and meet rising travel demand.

Dallas-based Southwest, the nation's leading low-cost carrier, announced it has ordered 94 Boeing 737s for $4.5 billion, with deliveries beginning in 2002. Southwest also placed various options for another 196 planes over the next 12 years.

It is the largest order in the carrier's history.

Kelleher said about one-fourth of the new jets would probably go to new cities where Southwest will start service. He declined to identify new cities for the carrier to serve but said they would be from Florida to Maine.

"You'll see a significant focus on the East as far as new cities and additional service," he told reporters.

Kelleher added that the company also ordered the new planes in anticipation of increasing its seat capacity at least 8 percent a year through 2008. Like other major U.S. carriers, Southwest has seen an increase in its "load factor," or occupancy, as the strong economy drives demand for air travel.

The order would increase the Southwest's fleet by about one-third. Southwest had 312 Boeing 737s at the beginning of the year and is scheduled to take delivery of 32 more this year.

Southwest is one of Boeing's biggest customers and the only major U.S. carrier that uses only Boeing jets. Flying an all-737 fleet helps Southwest control training and maintenance costs.

Kelleher indicated he never considered buying another type of jet.

"I probably should have called Airbus and asked them for a quote, but I forgot to," he said, referring to Boeing's European rival.

The 737-700 is listed at $43.5 million each, although major airlines often get large discounts from Boeing.

Alan Mulally, president of Boeing's commercial aircraft unit, said the order means Boeing will ramp up production of 737s at its Renton, Wash., plant from 24 to 28 planes a month next year.

The 737-700s bought by Southwest are a redesign of a model first used in the late 1960s. Boeing has sold more than 3,690 of the jets.

Southwest uses a 137-seat, single-aisle version. Kelleher said the contract with Boeing would allow it to switch to 175-seat 737-800s.

In afternoon trading Thursday, shares of Southwest were unchanged at $19.50.

New Mexico housing plant closing temporarily

BELEN, N.M. (AP) — A Phoenix-based manufactured housing firm is closing down its Belen plant for now, costing 150 people their jobs.

Cavco Industries is shifting production from Belen to plants in Phoenix and Seguin, because of poor market conditions. The Belen plant opened in 1997.

"There's been a big overbuilding of inventory, a great expansion in retail," said Sean Nolen, vice president and chief financial officer for Cavco. "There's an oversupply of inventory."

Cavco expects to close the Belen plant by the end of August. Belen workers will be offered jobs in Arizona and Texas while the New Mexico plant is idled, Nolen said.

It was easier for the company to move production from its smaller New Mexico plant than it would have been to shift production from the other plants, Nolen said.

"It was a hard decision, but we had to cut back our production somewhere," he said.

He said Cavco plans to reopen the Belen plant, but he could not estimate when.

"We'll wait for supply and demand to get equal to each other," he said. "We don't expect a long, protracted idling."

Company officials also blamed the shutdown on higher interest rates, increased home repossessions and tighter consumer and retail credit standards.

Nolen said some finance companies have gotten out of the retail lending business, cutting into would-be owners' ability to get loans.

Some 25 percent to 30 percent of the nation's manufactured housing capacity has shut down in the past year, Nolen said.

At its peak production about a year ago, the Belen plant was building 75 to 80 homes a month. It currently is producing 45 to 50 homes a month.

INVESTOR'S GUIDE

What is meant by the term rising valuations?

By Eric Tyson

Q: I read in a financial column that, "More than 65 percent of this bull market's gains have come from rising valuations." What is this term "valuation"?

A: By valuation, I presume the column was referring to the price-earnings (P/E) ratio that stocks are selling for. The P/E ratio measures the level of stock prices (in aggregate or for a specific company) in relation to corporate profits. For example, if company XYZ's stock is selling at $60 per share and the company earned profits of $3 per share over the past year, the P/E ratio would be 20 (60 divided by 3). When referring to the P/E ratio, some investors might instead say that the stock sells for 20 times earnings.

During the rising stock market U.S. investors have enjoyed since the mid-1980s, corporate profits have increased substantially, which has driven stock prices higher. However, as that column made reference to, the multiple of profits (as measured by the P /E ratio) that investors are willing to pay for those profits has also increased.

Tyson

Take, for example, the Standard & Poor's 500 index, which comprises 500 large U.S. companies' stocks. Historically, this index has traded at about 15 times earnings. Currently, this index is trading at about 26 times earnings but had traded at well over 30 times earnings within the past year. The strong growth in corporate profits this year coupled with the market correction have brought the P/E ratio back to more reasonable but still historically high levels.

At the market lows in the mid-1970s and early 1980s, the S&P 500 index traded at P/Es as low as 7 or 8. Thus, the P/E ratio has more than tripled since the market lows of the 1970s and 1980s.

I can't verify that 65 percent of this bull market's gains have come from the higher P/E ratios (valuations), since I don't know what time period that column made reference to.

Q: Could you please explain in simple terms why I should pay off my credit card and auto loans? My wife and I disagree as to the wisdom of this move.

A: Paying off your credit-card and auto loans is like putting your money in an investment with a guaranteed tax-free return equal to the rate you pay on the debt. For example, if you have credit-card debt outstanding at 15 percent interest, paying off that debt is the same as putting your money to work in an investment with a certain 15 percent tax-free annual return.

Because the interest on consumer debt is not tax deductible, you actually need to earn more than 15 percent investing your money elsewhere in order to net 15 percent after paying taxes. It's highly unlikely that you will be able to earn such high investing returns, and in order to have such a chance, you'll be forced to take great risk.

Consumer debt is hazardous to your long-term financial health because it encourages you to borrow against your future earnings. Borrowing via credit cards, auto loans and the like is also one of the most expensive ways to borrow. Banks and other lenders charge higher interest rates for consumer debt than for debt for investments, such as real estate and business. The reason: Consumer loans are riskiest for a lender.

Fleisher betters Green by one shot, ties Senior Open record

Associated Press

BETHLEHEM, Pa, — Bruce Fleisher wouldn't even let Hubert Green sleep on it.

■ Golf Roundup

Hours after Green had the best opening round in the 21-year history of the U.S. Senior Open, Fleisher went one stroke better. His 7-under-par 64 Thursday tied the record for the lowest score in any round of the Senior Open, matching Orville Moody's third round in 1989.

"I drove the ball well, but it's early," Fleisher said. "A lot can happen in three days."

Fleisher held a one-stroke lead over Green and was two strokes in front of Dave Stockton, Isao Aoki and Hale Irwin.

Irwin finished the 18th hole at Saucon Valley Country Club after a 95-minute rain delay. Play was suspended for the day at 8:24 p.m. EDT with nine players still on the course.

"The score I am standing on right now is probably not indicative of how I hit the ball," Irwin said. "It was one of the uglier five under par rounds I've ever had."

Jack Nicklaus shot a 67, which tied his best round in any Senior Open.

"I haven't played a good round of golf in a long time," said Nicklaus, who excited the gallery with his performance. "It was kind of fun. I haven't seen anywhere near a major for a while either."

Jerry Bruner also shot a 67, while four players had 68s.

Defending champion Dave Eichelberger shot a 1-over 72.

Fleisher and Green sit atop the leaderboard for the second time in a month. The two squared off in a playoff last month at The Home Depot Invitational before Fleisher won it with a birdie on the third extra hole.

Fleisher parred the first four holes Thursday before finishing the front nine with four birdies in his last five holes.

He birdied eight holes overall, including three straight beginning at No. 14. He parred nine holes and bogeyed the 18th. His longest putt was a 15-footer at No. 9.

"I started slow, but I kept playing and hit the ball well," he said. "I was able to hit some shots from close. I feel good right now, but a lot can happen in three days."

Fleisher and Stockton benefited from playing in the same threesome as their competitive juices were flowing.

"I tied him at five under (at No. 13) and I think I made him mad," Stockton said. "He went nuts there at the end. We fed off each other."

Told what Stockton said, Fleisher joked: "Yeah, I saw him eating peanuts and he didn't offer me any."

Begay among four tied for first-round GHO lead

CROMWELL, Conn. — Four days after getting his third PGA Tour victory, Notah Begay had some butterflies as he pursued a second straight tournament win.

He bogeyed his first hole at the Greater Hartford Open on Thursday but ended with four consecutive birdies for a 6-under-par 64 that had him tied for the first-round lead with Robert Gamez, Dan Forsman and Kirk Triplett.

"I was a bit nervous on the tee this morning, just having won. I didn't want to put a lot of pressure on myself. And I came out and hit some pretty bad shots," said Begay, who won the St. Jude Classic on Sunday.

Begay's opening drive sailed left into a stand of trees and his approach shot almost hit a fan.

But his birdie putts brought him back.

"The greens are so perfect right now that if you get a good read, you've just got to get it going. It's going to go in," Begay said.

The scores reflected it as 83 golfers in the 156-player field finished under par.

Gamez, who had been struggling with his putting, got everything going in the right direction Thursday.

"I worked on my lefthand grip, but the problem was I wasn't working on my righthand grip to complement it. My forearms weren't lined up, so they were working against each other," he said.

TENNIS: Dokic's dad gets arrested

(From 1C)

"I didn't cross (paths) with her (at the French). I don't remember seeing her. I sure didn't bump into her."

Sidot was not immediately available for comment, but WTA Tour chief executive officer Bart McGuire said the tour investigated the allegations and determined that Sidot did not strike Samantha Stevenson but did tip her hat. Sidot told the tour that Mrs. Stevenson used abusive language. McGuire said the tour decided no disciplinary action was warranted.

McGuire said the incidents with Cocheteux also were investigated but couldn't be substantiated.

"The Sanex WTA Tour takes any allegation of racism or physical abuse very seriously," McGuire said. "... There is no place on our tour for any racial inequities. All specific allegations are investigated fully and appropriate action taken."

This isn't the first time Stevenson has created a stir with comments about other players.

Told about the incident Thursday involving Dokic's father, Stevenson replied: "First of all, I played doubles with Jelena in Hilton Head. I kind of made amends with her. ... She wasn't very nice to me before. We played, and her dad showed up drunk. My mom said, 'You're not playing with her again.'"

Stevenson's debut at Wimbledon a year ago, a week after she graduated from high school in La Jolla, Calif., was like none other. She served at screaming speeds and curtsied to the crowds with theatrical flourishes, which might have thrilled fans but alienated her rivals.

Her mother, Samantha, who raised her since birth to become a sports star, made headlines with charges of subtle racism and rampant lesbianism on the WTA Tour. Her father, who saw her only once when she was 3, made headlines by revealing his identity: Hall of Fame basketball player Julius Erving.

She took in everything with wide-eyed fascination, but she filtered out the distractions when it came time to go on court. She beat another terrific newcomer, Hingis' first-round conqueror, Dokic, and everyone else she played except the eventual champion, Davenport.

Yet, Stevenson's star descended quickly. She lost in the first rounds of the U.S., Australian and French Opens. She is 8-18 this year, and her latest loss will send her ranking down precipitously from her current No. 46.

Stevenson said she's been targeted by Cocheteux, Sidot and other players "because I made a big splash last year. I don't think a lot of girls appreciated it. They have to grow up and have bigger minds, not be so petty. I'm moving on. Hopefully it will be OK."

Dokic, 17, made a big splash, too, with her victory over Hingis and surge to the quarterfinals last year, but she made headlines of a different sort this year when she and her Serbian-born father-coach Damir accused officials of rigging draws.

Her father embroiled her in controversy when he was arrested at the tournament in Birmingham last year and again Thursday after she reached the third round with a 7-6 (5), 6-1 victory over Spain's Gala Leon Garcia.

This time, Damir Dokic was detained by police after a loud argument in which he smashed a reporter's cell phone to the ground.

Dokic was speaking with British TV on a balcony overlooking Court 14. He drew a crowd of several dozen as he talked boisterously with an English flag draped over his shoulder, chanting: "England is a free country, England is a free country."

At one point, he shouted: "The Queen is on the side of democracy and the rest of the country is fascist."

Several witnesses described him as drunk. Four police officers removed Dokic. The reporter said he did not intend to press charges for the broken phone.

"Mr. Dokic came to the police room voluntarily while the matter was being investigated," Inspector Andrew Freestone said. "No action was taken and the Dokic family elected to leave the grounds. No further action will be taken."
