SINCLAIR SAYS CUT INEVITABLE IN OIL PRICES

Oklahoman Declares Producers Must Co-operate to Reduce Runs and Hold Revenue Up.

Asserts Mid-Continent Field Likely to Follow Pennsylvania Unless Production Limited.

Oil operators will have to co-operate with each other to prevent increase, and even bring about a decrease in production, if the $3.50 price level in the Mid-Continent field is maintained, according to a statement credited to Harry F. Sinclair, head of the Sinclair companies, who is now in Tulsa, following his return from a foreign trip.

The declaration that the larger pipe line companies, including his own, will do all that they can to hold the price to the producer to the present level, was made by Mr. Sinclair, but he expressed a positive belief that the pipe line companies would "refuse to purchase oil for storage at present prices." Reference to the dull condition which has been prevailing in the United States for some time, and to a more marked depression prevailing in Europe, was made by Mr. Sinclair in this connection.

Statement Interesting.

This statement has particular interest just as this time in connection with the reports indicating the striking of a new pool of high gravity oil near Eldorado, Arkansas. In spite of the inaccuracy and exaggeration which is to be expected from early reports from this strike, the Eldorado well is evidently producing a respectable quantity of good oil, with an amount of water to be definitely determined later.

Regardless of the water, it is expected that the territory will be drilled right away—operators always being in evidence who regardless of general conditions, are willing to bet on their making a strike "higher on the structure," which will give them the oil without the water, and trusting for a market for the oil under any conditions. It will be noted that Mr. Sinclair made no forecast as to the price of crude in the Mid-Continent—that is an unqualified forecast.

Subject of Speculation.

The probable course of Mid-Continent crude has been a source of lively speculation since the beginning of the financial depression. In fact, the speculation on the price of crude is the chief indoor sport of the oil fraternity—and a sport which knows no closed seasons. But it has been particularly lively during the past few weeks, particularly since the set back in Pennsylvania, Ragland and Corning crude—the latter twice in succession.

Will Mid-Continent be cut? The endless discussions on this matter in local oil circles practically all have the same result—a final and frank admission that the partici-

DALLAS POLICE BELIEVE WELL KNOWN MAN DIRECTED DARING POSTAL SUB-STATION ROBBERY

Detectives Combing City For "Master Mind" Whom Others Claim is Well Known.

By Associated Press.

DALLAS, Tex., Jan. 16.—Search for four bandits, one of whom police believe to be the "master mind" in the daring robbery of a postoffice substation here Friday night, when six unmasked men made away with two mail pouches containing more than two and a half million dollars in non-negotiable paper and approximately $4,000 in paper money, was continued today without cessation, but no member of the robber band had been captured early tonight.

Local police officials have assurances which affirm their belief that sensational developments are impending, in that the man who they believe planned the hold-up is well known locally. Search for this "master mind" is being centered within the city of Dallas, although Fort Worth police are closely co-operating with local detectives in hopes of rounding up the entire band there.

W. S. Scrivner, alleged confessed member of the bandit gang, was picked up injured a few hours after the robbery near an overturned automobile on the Lake Worth roadside, and Pat Murphy, alias Rufus Clemons, was found underneath the car, with his neck broken. The accident happened while the two men were speeding from a point near Lake Worth where they hid most of the loot.

Scrivner is said to have confessed to police whom he led to the place Saturday.

Photograph shows Chicago young wo[illegible] being vaccinated.

With many cases of smallpox in South Chicago and forty homes quarantined in Oak Park, doctors of Chicago are facing a rush of applicants for vaccination. Vaccination on the arm has long been taboo among pretty girls who do not like to have the disfiguring mark show when they wear party frocks. They prefer to be vaccinated as in the photograph. The question is, with the modern short skirts and prevalence of bare knees, will not this vaccination mark also be a disfurement?

DEPUTY GAME WARDEN IS HELD IN COUNTY JAIL ON DRY LAW VIOLATION CHARGE

Archer County Authorities Confiscate Quantity of Whiskey, Mash and 25-Gallon Still.

E. J. Love, deputy state game warden of Wichita Falls, and Sam Minnix, farmer, are in the county jail here pending examining trial in justice court of Archer county and action of federal authorities following their arrest Sunday afternoon by Archer county and state authorities in connection with a raid on Minnix's place, six miles east of Holliday, in which a 25-gallon still, approximately 25 gallons of corn whiskey, 480 gallons of corn mash, and a quantity of "ingredients" were seized.

Complaints charging a violation of the state prohibition laws have been filed in justice court at Archer City against the two men and recommendations made by local authorities that bonds in each case be set at not less than $3,000.

Mrs. Maude Minnix, Sam's wife, and Ruby Minnix, their 15-year-old daughter, were released Sunday night and allowed to return home after being questioned by District Attorney Fletcher S. Jones.

Makes Statement

A confession that he had purchased the whiskey from Minnix, which was found in his automobile near Minnix's house Sunday, and that he had also obtained it on several former occasions from the same source, was made by Love to District Attorney Jones Sunday night. Love admitted that he had been buying it "pretty regularly" and that he "was just taking the big chance in order to sell it."

The raid was made by Texas Ranger D. K. Taylor, Sheriff Joe McDonald of Archer county, and County Attorney R. S. Morrison, of Archer county, at the instigation of District Attorney Jones. Information that a still was being operated in this locality reached the ears of local authorities several days ago. Further investigations in working up the case were completed by Ranger Taylor and District Attorney Jones Friday, although it was found impractical to stage the raid before Sunday.

According to statements from the officers, they left Wichita Falls at about 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon and went directly to the old Tom Taylor house on property owned by Mrs. Maude Miller, in which the Minnix family lives.

Nab Car and Driver

Upon arriving at the house, they were just in time to observe an automobile preparing to drive out into the main road leading to Wichita Falls. Officers halted the car, placing its driver, Love, under arrest and seized four gallons of corn whiskey in a copper container and fruit jars, which Love later admitted to having purchased from Minnix for the purpose of bringing it here and selling it.

Officers then went to the house and were refused admittance by Minnix who demanded a search warrant. A search of the surrounding property led to the discovery of a house

Twenty-Two Prisoners in Kansas City Lock-Up Make Break For Liberty, But Fail.

George Wood, the other wounded man, was shot in the foot.

The men said the plans for an escape had been completed two days ago. The bars on a window were sawed and the men had climbed out on a roof preparatory to sliding down on sheets tied together, when discovered by the guards, according to the police.

One of Rothrock's injuries was the result of a jump to the ground which was 50 feet below the roof. His condition is not serious, however, physicians say. He was shot in the back and arms with buckshot. Cannon suffered dangerous injuries in the abdomen and leg, according to a statement from the hospital.

Central America Countries Agree To Form Union

By Associated Press.

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica, Jan. 16.—Decision to sign a convention creating a federation of Central American republics has been reached by the Central American union congress in session here today. This step, which seemed almost impossible because of opposition to Article 40, the most bitterly debated section of the proposed treaty, followed an agreement by all the delegations. Article 40 stipulates that each member nation of the federation will continue loyally to comply with the terms of treaties with foreign governments, but that if extension to those treaties should imply new demarcations of territoy, a new Central America union conference will be called to consider the changes proposed.

Several reservations were added to the text of Article 40 to meet objections from Nicaragua, and these reservations have been accepted by the delegates of other nations represented at the congress. The Bryan-Chammoro treaty between the United States and Nicaragua was one of the principal points at issue, and it was shown that pact did not violate or infringe upon the rights of other Central American nations.

pants do not know, and the belief that no one, including the heads of the pipe line companies do know. Many well-informed operators believe it will, but they find others who are equally certain that it will not. The latter point to the brightening up of the refined products markets, to the fact that the big companies, with millions of barrels of high-priced crude on hand wish to avoid it if possible, and to the fact that the price has been maintained in face of adverse conditions, and to the belief that it will not be cut in the face of improving conditions. To this, the operator who looks for a cut answers "that the price of everything else has come down, and whynell' should not oil?" and that practically everything entering into the cost of production has decreased.

Cut Temporary.

All are apparently of the opinion that a cut, if it should come, will be temporary, and some who are looking for a possible cut, declare that a temporary cut will be a positive benefit, as it will finish up the job of doing for the speculator, and will clear the way for the real oil producer.

Belief that a cut, should one come, would be temporary, is based on the increasing necessity for the products of crude oil in present day industrial life—a demand which was fast outstripping the visible supply when the wheels of business began to slow down. "Business leaders are apparently convinced that the period of depression is coming to an end, and that they will soon be moving again at full speed," they say. "This will mean a restored, and increasing demand for crude oil and its products, for their use in industrial life is growing at a rate which apparently can not be measured.

"No one need have any fear as to the ultimate value of crude oil, for it's value is definitely established by the fact that during the greatest depression the commodity on which money could be raised, probably more readily than any other, has been a barrel of crude. "Its value can not but increase with normal activity restored to the commercial world.

One of the main features of encouragement over the immediate market situation, locally, is seen by operators in the large contract of the independent refiners with the Export Oil corporation, in which local refiners are to participate to the extent of about one-third of the total contract.

It is pointed out that this assured outlet for about a third of the output of the local refineries will go a long way toward stabilizing market conditions in this immediate district.

So will the national situation be helped by the closing of similar contracts with government agencies by some of the great companies—several of the larger companies being reported at this time to be negotiating with these various foreign government agencies to this end.

IRELAND, PROHIBITION AND DECAY DISCUSSED BY CHESTERTON IN U. S.

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Gilbert K. Chesterton, British journalist and author, has arrived here for a lecture tour. He is accompanied by his artst wife, who looks diminutive in comparison with him, and a lot of bags and luggage.

Chesterton, who is a huge, ponderous, spectacled fellow with a kindly, jovial look, says he has come "because it seems absurd for a civilized man to go to his grave without ever having seen America. I have seen Jerusalem, and when I have seen Chicago, I think I can live contentedly in Beaconsfield."

Out of all visiting British authors, of whom New York has seen many since the war, G. K. Chesterton seemed most to enjoy talking for the sheer pleasure of expressng the bubbling ideas as they rose in his mind. Tired as he must have been from the voyage, and with a lecture tour immediately before him, he chewed the end of a black cigar and joyfully talked and talked.

"What a beautiful statue is the Goddess of Liberty" he exclaimed with kindling eye. "I wanted to pour out a splendid oblation of all the liquors remaining on board as a slight relief to my feelings."

"The bronze has turned green for Ireland," it was suggested.

"It is curious," he said reflectively, "how things fall into their opposites in decay. Red bronze turns green. Blue iron turns red. Democracy becomes gross plutocracy. Dare I add that the Declaration of Independence ends in prohibition?"

"Then you do not approve of prohibition?"

"I express myself only in reply to a direct question. There are so many tyrannies in England for an Englishman to object to, that it is not necessary for him to go abroad to do so. Besides it has a little tang, as of the criticism of a host. But in reply to a direct challenge I must say I do object to prohibition. Not for myself personally, for just now I do not happen to be drinking spirituous liquors, but on principle I do object."

Gilbert K. Chesterton and Mrs. Chesterton, Photographed on Arrival.

"Will you speak of the Irish situation?" was the next question.

"I think it is the devil of a situation," he replied. "Both England and Ireland have been wrong at every turning. Five years ago they seemed almost on the point of a mutual understanding. But now so many seeds of distrust and hatred have been sown that it will take years to destroy the harvest.

"The average Englishman is bored with the Irish question. But as far as the reprisals, for instance, being a reflection of his feelings, the average man in England has no notion of what is going on.

"If Ireland had been given home rule 20 years ago, I think we should have been today far on the road to a solution of all problems and in such a way that England would have retained her proper and necessary defense protection."

"Are you going to write a book about America when you have finished your tour?"

"God knows what I shall write," he answered whimsically. "You can't go through a big experience without its making some impresson on you. Probably some time when I sit down to write about King Arthur and his knights, I'll suddenly discover that it's all about America."

LABOR CONGRESS WILL ESTABLISH FOREIGN AGENCY

By Associated Press.

MEXICO CITY, Jan. 16.—Immigration agencies in all Latin-American countries for the collection and dissemination of information regarding labor conditions will be established under the terms of a resolution adopted by the Pan-American Federation of Labor congress here yesterday, delegates from the United States and Porto Rico opposed the idea, but were voted down in the first divided vote of the congress.

The resolution, which was introduced by the Mexican delegation, gave rise to a protracted debate and after delegates had attended a luncheon given by Plutarco E. Calles, secretary of the interior, they found they would not have sufficient time to dispose of the remainder of the business of the congress yesterday. A recess until tomorrow was therefore taxen and it is hoped that by tomorrow night the congress can finally adjourn. The delegates today enjoyed an excursion to Teotihuacan, where are located the great pyrimids built by races which inhabited Mexico in pre-historic times.

The Mexican delegation's recommendation called for the appointment of special labor envoys in each Pan-Ameriran country, but the resolutions committee reported it had amended the motion so that the federation's executive officers would be named as information gathers, it being planned by this means to eliminate the expense entailed by the carrying out of the original proposal. When the amended motion was submitted and animated debate began, during which Samuel Gompers, president of the congress, was compelled frequently to explain United States labor conditions.

Bequest For Monument For Letter Carrier

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 16.—State officials are puzzled over the question whether permission will be given for the erection of a monument to Fred Sargent, who for years was a letter carrier in the capitol building.

This question will be decided by Governor-elect Brown and his council.

The monument issue came about through a strange bequest in the will of the late Mrs. A. Lizzie Sargent, of Bow, who left money to provide a monument in the state house to her husband, who died several years ago.

Learn "What Women Love"

Annette Kellerman, the modern Venus, who comes to the Wichita theater on Monday and Tuesday in her first comedy drama, "What Women Love," is supported by a notable cast of favorite players.

Playing opposite the star will be seen Wheeler Oakman, best remembered for his work in "The Spoilers," "The Ne'er Do Well," "Mickey" and more recently with Priscilla Dean in "The Virgin of Stamboul."

Oakman plays an unusual role creditably; the role of a man who turns quickly from a mollycoddle to a brute-breaker and proves that the brawniest are not always the bravest.

Walter Long, Carl Ullman, the celebrated Bull Montana and Ralph Lewis are among the best known of the able cast.

"What Women Love" was produced by Sol Lesser. The production was directed by Nate Watt, former directorial associate of Lois Weber, H. P. Caulfield, formerly general manager of Universal City and of Charlie Chaplin comedies, supervised the work.

The story was written by Bernard McConville, author of many of the successes of Mary Pickford, Norma Talmadge, Lillian Gish and other stars.

Beautiful photography, amazing scenes of a deadly underwater fight between a man and the girl, luxurious glimpses of fashionable Honolulu and daring studies of a bevy of beautiful bathing girls of the California beaches, are highlights of the story.

Critics who have viewed the photoplay say that it excels anything that Miss Kellerman has done before; even being more appealing than "Neptune's Daughter," "The Daughter of the Gods." "What Women Love," a First National attraction, begins today at the Wichita theater.

CAN'T STAY AWAY FROM BOSTON TOWN

BOSTON, Jan. 16.—Boston is the port of "missing" people, who nearly all come back. A report on missing persons by Capt. Patrick F. King, of police headquarters, has just been tendered to Commissioner Curtis. The report shows by cold figures for the police statistical year, Dec. 1, 1919, to Nov. 30, 1920, that, while Boston residents may run away, at times, they generally come back home again.

The total number of missing persons for the year named was 692. Of these 611 were found.

Something Else To Cause Worry

By Associated Press

THE HAGUE, Jan. 16.—Frederick William, former crown prince of Germany, in an interview given the editor of a German weekly published in the Netherlands gives the reasons why he does not return to Germany, why his wife does not join him in his sojourn at Wieringen, and why he does not join his father, the former German emperor at Doorn. Frederick William also sets forth his plans regarding the education of his sons.

"Naturally I would be glad to return to Germany and I would be happy if I could devote myself to agriculture, particularly to horse breeding," the former crown prince is quoted as saying. "I would rejoice to associate with the learned men at Breslau University and regain what I lost during the war and at Wieringen. I would like to use what little power I have to help build up the fatherland, but that can not be.

"My many friends in the fatherland and abroad would see my hand in every deed which others might begin but of which I, perhaps, would know nothing at all. Unrest would follow and our poor fatherland needs rest.

"Why does not my wife come here Believe me she would gladly do so, but there is no chance of such happiness and good luck, as we are gripped in the vise of duty. She has the training of our children at heart and must direct it. Our sons must learn to make themselves useful commercially. Wilhelm and Lula (the latter a pet name for one of the sons) are now going to the gymnasium at Potsdam, the elder one wants to become an expert farmer and later go to an agricultural college. Lula feels that he has the talent for a mercantile career and is planning a tour of the world in a German merchant ship, and to learn the modern languages. I have nothing against their plans if they result in the boys becoming useful men. They are studying hard and have no time for amusements or sports. They need a father's care, too, but that can not be.

"I can not go to my parents at Doorn. Our opponents are continually trying to put us in the position of being ready to set the world on fire and if we were together, then, in the eyes of our opponents, the overthrow of the world would be but a question of a short time.

"As for buying an estate in Holland, where would I get the money, particularly in view of the low rate of German exchange?"

The United States Naval Academy was founded at Annapolis, Md., in 1845 by George Bancroft, who was then Secretary of the Navy.

The Newfoundland sealing fleet in 1920 got 33,985 seals, valued at $159,925 net.

JEWS PROTEST ANTI-SEMITIC PROPAGANDA

By Associated Press.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Jan. 16.—A protest against anti-Semitic propaganda in the United States, bearing the names of President Wilson, William H. Taft, Cardinal O'Connell and 116 other widely known men and women of Christian faith, was made public here tonight by John Spargo, socialist worker. It exhorts particularly those who are moulders of public opinion—the clergy and ministers of all Christian churches, publicists, teachers, editors, statesmen—to strike at this un-American and un-Christian agitation.".

"We regret exceedingly," the protest said, "the publication of a number of books, pamphlets and newspaper articles designed to foster distrust and suspicion of our fellow citizens of Jewish ancestry and faith—distrust and suspicion of their loyalty and their patriotism."

A new and dangerous spirit, it asserts, is being introduced into the national and political life by these publications, challenging and menacing American citizenship and American democracy. Men and women of Jewish faith, it declared, should not be required alone to "fight this evil, but that it is in a very special sense the duty of citizens who are not Jews by ancestry and faith."

Wilson Adds Protest.

To Mr. Spargo's request for his approval of the protest, President Wilson wrote:

"I have your letter of Dec. 22 and I am heartily in sympathy with the protest against the anti-Semitic movement. I beg that you will add my name to the signatures."

President-elect Hardinf, in a letter made public by Mr. Spargo, declared his disapproval of anti-Semitism, but expressed a desire to avoid creating a precedent by signing the protest. He wrote:

"I am sure you can understand why, at the present time, I am seeking the avoidance of undue publicity and reluctant to make public statements relating to any of our pending problems. I am no less sure that you already know, and that the American people already believe that I am giving no sanction to anything so narrow, so intolerant, or so un-American as the anti-Semitic movement. I have been preaching the gospel of understanding and good will and no one who believes in these things and hopes for the concord of America can be interested in any movement aimed against any portion of our American citizenship."

College Prexies Join.

Several college presidents are on the list, including Nicholas Murray Butler of Columbia university, John Grier Hibben of Princeton university, W. H. R. Faunce of Brown university, H. A. Garfield of Williams college, Ernest Martin Hopkins of Dartmouth college; Henry Churchill King of Oberlin college and James R. Day of Syracuse university.

Among the churchmen in the list are:

Robert E. Speer, president of the Council of Federated Church of Christ in America; Bishop Benjamin Brewster of Maine, Bishop Chauncey B. Brewster of Connecticut, Archbishop Patrick J. Hayes of New York, Dean W. P. Ladd of the Berkeley Divinity school, and Bishop D. J. O'Connell of Richmond.

"We protest against this organized campaign of prejudice and hatred," the signers declared, "not only because of its manifest injustice to those against whom it is directed, but also and especially because we are convinced that it is wholly incompatible with loyal and intelligent American citizenship."

Colby Cables Protest.

"The loyalty and patriotism of our fellow citizens of the Jewish faith," it added, "is equal to that of any part of our people and requires no defense at our hands."

Secretary of State Colby sent his approval by cable from South America. Others who signed were Secretary of War Baker, Secretary of Agriculture Meredith, former secretaries of state, Bryan and Lansing; former Secretary of War Garrison, former Secretary of the Interior Franklin K. Lane and former Attorney General George W. Wickersham.

DEPUTY GAME WARDEN HELD IN COUNTY JAIL

about three quarters of a mile from Minnix's home which housed a still and whiskey making paraphernalia. Several gallons of whiskey were also found buried in the ground nearby and concealed by weeds and underbrush.

Family Denied Connection

Returning to the house after finding the scene of operations, the officers again asked to be allowed to search the place and this time, no resistance was made. Minnix was placed under arrest and made to conduct the inspection. No evidence was found in the house, but several more gallons of corn whiskey were found hidden in an outbuilding in the rear. Minnix and family denied all knowledge of the whiskey and declared that they knew nothing of the operation of the still.

When questioned later by District Attorney Jones, Minnix, his wife and daughter stuck to their statements and again stoutly denied any connection with the distilling activities.

They declared that Love had come out for dinner, as was his custom when in that vicinity and that to their knowledge, he had no whiskey in his automobile when he drove up to the house. They had no explanations to offer as to how the whiskey came to be in his possession when placed under arrest.

Love's Statement.

According to Love's confession, he agreed to purchase the whiskey from Minnix at $30 per gallon and that he got it in the yard back of the house where he had been directed to find it by Minnix. He said that Minnix did not deliver it to him or help him carry it to his car. He asserted that he had not paid for the whiskey when placed under arrest.

He could give no information as to the parties responsible for the operation of the still save for the fact that he had heard that a man by the name of "Jack" had been running it. He could not state positively, he said, whether Minnix had had a hand in it or not.

Statements from Minnix's nine-year-old son, who was found near the still house by the officers, were to the effect that he had been there with the man who was running it when the officers came and that when their approach was discovered, the man, whose name he said was "Jack," told him to run and hide.

Love has held his commission as deputy game warden since April of last year.

RECOVER LOOT STOLEN FROM ELMER STORE

Merchandise valued at $2500 said to have been stolen from store in Elmer, Oklahoma, Friday night, was recovered here Sunday morning by police officers in a residence on Brick street. Three Mexicans, Jesus Flores, Pete Mertinez and Frank Gonsales, were arrested and are being held at the police station pending arrival of officers from Elmer.

Following the arrest, Martinez is said to have confessed to Chief of Police Huff that the goods were part of the loot stolen from the Elmer store. His confession implicated others.

The three men were followed to the Brick street residence when they got off an early morning train carrying several traveling bags and other packages. The goods consisted of several bolts of silk, ready to wear clothing and other merchandise.

Following the alleged confession of Martinez information from Elmer officers stated that a store had been robbed there Friday night and a large amount of goods stolen.

The arrest here was made by city detectives, McDonald and Lay, and Officer Gonsales. The first two assumed their duties as city detectives Sunday.

Prisoner's Bravery May Win Him Pardon

MANCHESTER, N. H., Jan. 16.—A request has been sent to Gov. John H. Bartlett, at Concord, for the pardoning of 11 prisoners who assisted in fighting the recent fire in the Coos County House of Correction. The convicts are all short-term men.

Paris Will Try City Piggery Plan

PARIS, Jan. 16.—In an endeavor to alleviate the high cost of living for work people living in Paris the city municipality proposes to raise and breed rabbits and pigs. The suggested project mentions that such animals could easily be housed along the fortifications of Paris and fed with green meats which are daily thrown away at the central markets and which are usually washed down the sewers and go to feed rats which carry with them deadly typhus germs. It is proposed to start breeding with 10,000 rabbits and 1,000 pigs.

Wichitans Are Strong on Sand Oil Properties

"These Wichita Falls operators are all for the sand country," said a prominent local operator in discussing Young county development Saturday.

"You didn't see an awful lot of them down at Ranger, Eastland, Breckenridge, or at other places in the black lime district, but they certainly are about all there is to it in the Young county development.

"Just let a good sand bed show up, and then you have them to reckon with—the whole crowd. They are about all you see in Young county.

"And," he concluded, "They have certainly won by it—sticking to the sand country."

Predicts Growth For Wichita Falls

"The town is going to grow like Tulsa—there is nothing that can keep it down," is the sentiment reported among local people by a real estate agent following recent announcements in the Record News of large oil companies moving headquarters to this place, and announcement that others are contemplating such moves.

Business property has stiffened up wonderfully and residence property is showing a sympathetic effect, according to this man—the senior partner in one of the local realty companies.

PARALYSIS IS FATAL TO OLD CITY RESIDENT

C. V. Ragsdale, aged forty-four years, a resident of this city for several years, died at his home, 2104 Ninth street, Sunday night. His death followed a stroke of paralysis several weeks ago. He is survived by his wife and six children.

Mr. Ragsdale is well known in the city where he has been engaged as a contracting carpenter. He was a member of the local carpenter's union. Funeral services will be held Tuesday from the residence. The hour for the services will be announced today.

OIL MEN
Call Meeting

A meeting of all parties interested in taking steps to procure adjustment and reduction of taxes on producing oil leases, as arbitrarily assessed in 1920, is called for Tuesday night, January 18th at 7:30 p. m., in the 30th district court room, in view of an injustice done to oil men in assessing producing oil leases excessively, which resulted in double assessments, during the year 1920.

This especially applies to owners of producing property in Burkburnett and Northwest field.

It is believed that if some prompt action is taken, we may avoid payment of these taxes at present without penalty and some material adjustment and reduction may be obtained on taxes as assessed.

In view of the fact that action in this matter will have to be taken specifically and personally, no one will be joined in this action who is not either present in person or by representatives. It is imperative that all concerned attend this meeting.

BERKELEY SYSTEM OF POLICE PROTECTION ATTRACTS COUNTRY WIDE NOTICE DURING CRIME WAVE

California City Has Department of Specialists Working in Close Unity With City Departments and Public; Aim to Prevent Rather Than Solve Crime; Elaborate System of Records Kept; All Police Have Cars.

(Wide attention has been attracted by the "educated cop" system in vogue in Berkeley, Cal. This city, known as the Athens of the West on account of the location there of the University of California, which has largest student body in the world has under the direction of Chief of Police August Vollmen perfected a system of policing regarded by experts as nearly perfect. Vollmer is widely known as a criminalologist. The following story gives the high lights of the Berkeley system.)

By PERCY M. CROPPER.

(By International News Service.)

BERKELEY, Jan. 16. — Policing a city as a science, where every policeman is more or less a specialist in some line, where the prevention of crime is made a study, where every effort is made to use the latest and most modern methods in preventing, caring for and combating crime, where records as complete as possible are made of all police work, and where there is an unusually friendly relation between the general public and the police department, are some of the distinguishing features of the police department of the city of Berkeley, Cal. In carrying out the work of this part of the city government every commercial, city, charitable, medical and religious institution co-operates with the police and no politician is allowed to interfere with the department.

Pride in the work of its police department is the boast of every citizen of Berkeley. In forwarding the efficiency of the department every policeman is provided with an automobile that is a combination police machine, ambulance and fire department. Each patrolman is qualified as a first aid man.

Through the use of signal lights and police horns, this department of thirty-two men handling a population of 60,000 persons covering an area of nine square miles, patrols every street and section of the city, day and night. No man patrolling a beat is at any time more than a minute away from communication with the station, and the entire force could be concentrated in the extreme limits of the city within five minutes.

Department of Specialists.

In personnel, organization and methods has many things that are distinctive. Only those morally, mentally and physically equipped can become members of the force. The department is to a great degree made up of specialists, many of which are college graduates, scientists and business men. The identification system of the department is declared to be one of the best in the United States. Crime is studied by maps and graphs as well as other means. A school is maintained for the making of better policemen. Everything that requires police action is made of record and conveniently indexed. In the serious offenses and even in minor crimes complete records are made of physical, mental and nervous conditions, with determinations as to inferiority and abnormal symptoms, as well as a family history and history of the engine.

Through the methods applied by the police department and the ordinances passed by the city, beggars have been barred from the municipality, soliciting of alms by the fake cripple and the fake sick man has been practically eradicated, private patrols are not allowed to operate in the city, a blind pig is a rarity, stringent conditions under which soliciting is allowed by means of a permit from the police department has eliminated the "gaycat, locator or pathfinder," who precedes the yeggman in planning a "job." Gambling has been reduced to the minimum.

No Secrecy There.

Unlike any other police department in the world, there is no secrecy about the affairs of the police in Berkley. The bulletins from which the officers get their crime reports each day are as accessible to the newspaperman as to the officer. Every detail is given as minutely as the department has it, and Chief of Police August Vollmer, under whose direction the institution has been built up in his sixteen years of administration, is a strong believer in the co-operation of the police and the public.

Three Divisions.

The department is organized into a plainclothes division, the department of records and the men in uniform. In the department of records there are six men, two for each detail. They have all had office training. Three are expert stenographers, all are typists. One is a handwriting expert, another is a fingerprint and identification expert, while another specialises on the modus operandi, or method of operation of criminals. They are also, to a degree, proficient in microscopic inspection, photograph, and general chemistry.

In the plainclothes division one of the inspectors is a civil engineer, another is a chemical analyist, and a third is a man of all-around police experience. One inspector specializes on buncomen, bad check artists and the like, while another has burglaries as his specialty. Another cares for the miscellaneous larcenies.

Unlike other police departments, a policeman is held entirely responsible for investigations and arrests. If a man is arrested and investigated by a policeman he may release him on his own responsibility. A policeman carries out his own investigation or is assigned to the work and his report is expected to be complete when it is turned in.

In every case where a person is charged with a serious crime a detailed report is made by Dr. Jau Don Ball, a medico-psychologist, who is one of the best known men in this line of work in the United States. This examination includes details of physical, mental and nervous condition. It also takes in any signs of disease or inferiority, and also deals with a complete history of the crime and family history. The recommendations of Dr. Ball are followed as closely as possible.

Another feature of the police department is a school for the education of patrolmen requiring attendance three times a week for three years, at which they are taught all the sciences relative to their work.

Weekly lectures are given through out the year for all officers at which there are talks by various police officers, discussions and the work of the department considered. At times noted criminologists are called upon to talk to the policemen.

A police record is kept of every complaint reported to the department that requires police action. Nothing is so trivial that it passes notice. Officers are not relieved from duty on a case until it is finally closed, whether it be a lost dog or a murder. There is a tickler that remains on the case until it is finished.

Elaborate Card System.

As fast as the reports are made thye are placed on printed cards that have blanks for the filling in of information. These cards are given the number of the case. The information from the cards is also placed on the police bulletin for the information of the police and newspapermen. In cases where publicity might cause the escape of a criminal not apprehended or for other reasons it is marked "no publicity." It is the theory of the police department that any person who comes before them is in the eyes of the public.

In the fifteen years that Chief Vollmer has had the system in use there have been to date 62,000 complaints filed.

Besides the Bertillion system, photographs and the fingerprint system for the identification of criminals, the Berkeley police department has perfected another which is the modus operandi. This was first used by Major W. L. Atcherly, chief constable of the West Riding of Yorkshire Constabulary. Chief Vollmer has worked up the method to a point of great efficiency.

Classify Various Methods.

He declares that a professional criminal is an expert in his line. In their work the cracksman, buncoman, bad check artist and burglar may deviate in some particular, but there is not one of them alive but what has some trade mark, some particular method that is his own. These peculiarities are what lead to his detection as certainly as his finger prints.

Under this system the methods of operation of the various criminals are clasified so that a crime committed by anyone that has ever been before the Berkeley police department can be quickly traced down to a certain group which is small enough so that the men can readily be picked out by the process of elimination. The Berkeley system has something over 5,000 classifications.

Another feature that has attracted unusual attention to the department is the mapping of crimes and happenings and its study for better policing, making reports on crime to show parts of the city where offenses are committed and to make reports for better legislation. It is this study it is declared, that will show where the criminals of tomorrow will be found.

By various colored beads on a pin, which indicates the nature of the offense or happening, the location of the complaint is marked on the map. This quickly indicates where the most serious crimes are committed. A general map shows all the complaints. Another shows the bad boys of the community. Still another shows the hours of the day on which crimes are committed.

WEEKLY DRY GOODS REVIEW

NEW YORK, Jan. 16.—Cotton goods markets have been active and prices are showing an advancing tendency. The very drastic reductions in finished goods brought forward substantial orders for delivery until April, or as far as mills would sell at the low figures. Some of the larger mills have announced a resumption of full time operations. Wide sheetings were advanced three cents to a basis of 58 cents for 10-4, pequot goods and several lines of 4-4 bleached cottons were advanced. Pacific percales were withdrawn and American cambrics and scout percales advanced quarter cent a yard following steady advances in print cloths.

Many lines of colored goods have been sold up in to March and April. Wash goods are more active and there has been a good business done in white goods, towelings, tickings and some lines of low end draperies. Fine combed yarn goods in the gray have sold in larger volume. Yarn markets firmer. More business is being done in knit goods at low prices.

Prices current are:

Print cloths 28-inch 64x64s 6 1-4c; 64x60s, 6c; 38½-inch 64x64s, 9c.

Brown sheetings standards 12½ to 13 cents.

Tickings, 8 ounce, 20c.

Staple 2.20 indigo denims, 17c; staple ginghams at value, last price, 10½c; prints, 11c; dress ginghams, 15@17 cents.

WEEKLY FINANCIAL REVIEW

NEW YORK, Jan. 17.—The customary "January rise" which marked the early days of the New Year in the securities markets, experienced a moderate reversal before the end of the first fortnight.

Stocks of the more speculative variety, especially those which featured the first week's bewildering movement fell back.

Another reason for the reaction of the current week was found in the failure of the public to re-enter the market.

Industrial conditions as applied to the steel industry, have undergone no change for the better.

That the directing forces of the country's leading industrial and merchandising concerns are committed to a policy of extreme caution was again demonstrated by the substitution of scrip and stock dividends for cash payments by the Sears, Roebuck and Wilson Packing Company.

The most significant development was the fall and call loans to six percent. Time funds relaxed to 6 1-4 percent, that rate being occasionally scaled to six percent on prime collateral.

Principal foreign exchange rates reflected financial and political conditions in Britain and France, with sympathetic reactions at other European centers.

GOODNER WILL HAVE GRAHAM BRANCH HOUSE

A branch house will be established at Graham by the Goodner Wholesale Grocer Company of this city, it became known Saturday with the announcement by John Graeber of the Graebner Construction and Engineering Company that the firm had taken the contract for the erection of a brick and hollow tile building for the company at that place.

A garage for caring for cars and trucks at the Wichita Falls plant will also be constructed for the Goodner people by this firm, it was announced.

Establishment of the branch house at Graham was confirmed by E. S. Goodner, president of the Goodner company.

BEAUTIFUL BACK DUE TO "SHIMMY"

LONDON, Jan. 16.—The secret of Miss Juliette Compton's beautiful back and shoulders—said by Harrison Fisher to be the most beautiful in the United States—was given by Miss Compton herself.

"The secret," said Miss Compton, "lies in the much maligned 'shimmy.' One night while dancing I accidentally discovered what a wonderful exercise for the shoulders the 'shimmy' was. Since then I have practiced the 'shimmy' every morning and night. The little circular movements described by the shoulders in the dance I exercised. I found small and almost dormant muscles in the shoulders which, when properly developed, to an even roundness."

The Harvest Time for Furniture Buyers

Now is the time to buy furniture.

Whether it's feathering the nest for two or replacing some of the pieces mother bought in 1897—now is the opportune moment to go shopping for the choicest values.

January is the month in which to buy furniture, just as April is the month of showers and June is the month of brides, and a dollar can be made to go farther if used in connection with the sales during this month.

The stocks must be "turned over"—the laws of good merchandising demand it—and in these days the "clearance prices" at which furniture is being offered mean that purchases now are real economy and show practical common sense.

It may be an odd chair or table; a bed room suite or a dining room set you desire; you may be refurnishing a room or rooms in some particular period—the chances are that whatever you want you will find it somewhere at a distinct saving.

There is no reduction in quality.

Forward-looking merchants are now making furniture sales a feature of their advertising. They realize the public must know before they can buy, and that progressive people seek the knowledge of what to buy and where to buy through the medium of the advertising columns.

Merchants who are directing their purchases through announcements in these columns are realizing an impetus to business which means added prestige, increased patronage and multiplied profits to them.

A PERFECT LAW:—

The law of the Lord is perfect, converting the soul; the testimony of the Lord is sure, making wise the simple. The statutes of the Lord are right, rejoicing the heart; the commandment of the Lord is pure, enlightening the eyes. The fear of the Lord is clean, enduring forever; the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether.—Psalm 19: 7, 8, 9.

ELECTRA READY TO PROGRESS.

Electra declares that she is ready with every equipment to take full advantage of what 1921 offers in the way of opportunity.

The up-county city has recently reorganized its commercial club and subscribed $2.60 per capita toward its support. And that is a very high ratio. If the same ratio were adhered to here, Wichita Falls would pay $104,000 or more to the support of its Chamber of Commerce. It is probable that the $2.60 per is one of the highest averages in Texas.

The Record News wishes Electra success. What is good for Electra's progress is good for Wichita Falls. Development never hurt anybody. And it usually helps the rest of the folks who happen to be around where the sparks are flying.

BETHMANN-HOLLWEG.

The death of Bethmann-Hollweg will revive the heated controversies about the now confessed blunders of German statecraft at the outbreak of the war. There is no reason to doubt the assertion of Bethmann-Hollweg, in his published account of the period, that he was anxious for peace, and worked for it—up to a certain point. That was when the military authorities took the reins. When they declared that they would not be responsible for the safety of the empire unless the opportunity were seized to bring about the Austrian Foreign Minister, Count Berchtold, called the "great European reckoning" and mere civilian rulers had to step aside. There was no way, in that crisis, in which Bethmann-Hollweg could have withstood the mad push for war except by handing his resignation to the Kaiser. That would probably have availed nothing in the hour of war mania. But it would have meant something for the Chancellor's official dignity and personal reputation.

Bethman-Hollweg will always live in history as the author of the unhappy phrase, "a scrap of paper." Excuses have been made for his thus having described the treaty guaranteeing neutrality of Belgium. He did it in private conversation with the English ambassador. It was a moment of great emotion for the Chancellor. He saw all his efforts to keep on good terms with England about to be swept away. He perceived that the confidence of German diplomacy that England would take no part in the war had been altogether absurd. What calamities were impending? And all, as he bitterly said, for a scrap of paper. In effect, however, this personal outburst with Ambasador Goschen was not different from the Chancellor's measured words later to the Reichstag, when he frankly confessed that the German invasion of Belgium was a violation of international law. Honest, but now indiscreet! A label had been affixed to the German cause from which it could never get clear. Out of the mouth of its own chancellor, Germany stood before the world condemned.—New York Times.

WIDOW DUE REWARD.

Whether or not the late R. F. Allison, postmaster at Charley, a thriving little town near Wichita Falls, thought that the highwayman who killed him was a bandit or believed him only joking, the circumstances surrounding his death support the bill introduced by Congressman Parrish for the government to appropriate $5,000 for his widow.

The postoffice inspector had ordered Mr. Allison to carry the funds collected at the postoffice home with him at night. This money was the cause that brought the highwayman to the door and led him to shoot. Mr. Allison retained the money, saved the government property.

His dying statement was that he thought the man who shot him at the door of the Charley postoffice was "only joking" when the order came to "stick 'em up." Congressman Parrish reported at Washington that Mr. Allison refused to give up the money. He did not give it up.

LETTERS FROM THE PEOPLE

Record News:

Without desiring to enter into any argument as to what Wichita Falls may need most, in view of a Junior College being mentioned through the University Club luncheon, as secretary of this club for the current term, I submit the following:

As the club president, Mr. Easley has indicated through your columns the University Club is primarily interested in aiding and contributing to the continued progress and development of the city. The club membership being largely of university men and those who have through personal effort acquired equivalent educational attainments, it was but natural that many should think of aided intellectual and cultural opportunities for the youth of the city, particularly when Dr. Landreth so emphatically supported and commented on the advantage of such an institution in recent visits to the city.

There is of course, logic, commonsense and due regard for proper coordination of all things, to be observed in advocacy of anything. Wichita Falls would unquestionably benefit from another and larger hospital, and possibly many are entitled to consider this a pre-requisite need barring consideration of all else until secured. Others may likewise have other preferences.

But while thinking of and anticipating either or both of these suggested additional institutions for the city, neither should detract from the importance of giving attention to existing educational advantages and school needs. On a financial basis only, the writer is not of the opinion that many educational institutions show credit balances, as accounts are recapitulated. All would, no doubt if credited in the balance sheet with the estimated value placed on that which was acquired from different institutions by those crediting them with great assistance; this however, is not taken up on the ledger perhaps in any more direct manner, than at later aid from these to such institutions or others of a similar character, so that what one accomplishes brings later returns or income to the institution; or dividends are paid in cultural development.

At the present time, Texas has low rank even in the scale of grading existing educational "factories," all of which in all states may not rise to ideals to which many may aspire. Relatively, it may even be alleged and strong circumstantial evidence presented, that education is retrogressing instead of progressing. That is possibly so, if one debits educational institutions with all the added requirements now necessary to give the modern equivalent to the three "Rs" of a century ago.

Or otherwise expressed, is it not possible that the three "Rs" with opportunities for exercise of bump of observation and applying commonsense would a century ago, carry one further with perhaps less effort, than will even the best of High school courses and graduation in the present day where knowledge of all kinds of complex and intricate machinery in industry, commerce and general business is necessary. Current problems when the farmers use modern harvesters and tractors, when manufacture is by complex machines instead of hand tools, and when printing newspapers is by modern power presses instead of earlier hand printing equipment, require altogether different school and other preparation than did occupations for "making a living" a century ago.

All of these have likewise added importance, to team-work, to co-operation, to "Human Engineering" if it may be so called. All football players recognize the inability of any eleven men to play the game to best advantage without knowledge of the rules, the signals and through understanding of purposes and objects of every play. No player expects to win unless he takes the trick by the higher or trump card. Every chess player recognizes not only the necessity of considering the opponent's pawns, but also his knights, bishops, castles and queen.

Yet, in modern industry, commerce, manufacture, is it not true that many expect the fruits of victory, or an inordinate share thereof without undertaking the rules of the game, or even hitting the line or playing the game. The game of life, is perhaps the only one played by humans in which they seemingly or many of them, have no conception of either learning or adhering to the rules established which in a democracy are the constitutions, statutes and ordinances enacted or allowed to be enacted by those who play the game according to the rules at least in part. The country as a whole, not only Texas, needs to give attention to not only hospitals, but additional colleges while at the same time making best use of existing opportunities to learn the rules or basis of existence or living.

Relatively, is it not possible that too little attention is paid to the public schools. Over two-thirds of the members of society in the United States according to statistics, graded in accord with socalled common-school standards, have not gone through the sixth grade. Of perhaps of at least as much importance as either hospitals or colleges is continued increasing attention to affording greater opportunities for maximum use of all existing schools improved to maximum extent.

Suggesting existing defects or remedies, is it not possible to state that schools are inadequate in lower grades, and in rural districts particularly in at least following particulars:

First: Inadequate school and educational facilities in way of buildings and equipment.

Second: Inadequately equipped teachers and instructors.

Can these be greatly improved except as following action or equivalent is taken:

First: Better pay for teachers to permit of higher standards being demanded in preparation for teaching.

Second: Better co-ordination or classification. Is it not a social waste for one inadequately equipped school, with one inadequately equipped teacher, to try to cover all possible grades with perhaps some attention to even high school subjects to cater to children of school officials, instead of limiting effort to efficiently and thoroughly covering lower grades more effectively for all, and letting the comparatively few arrange best they can elsewhere or otherwise. All colleges presuppose preliminary preparation. Possibly comparatively lesser schools for the many are yet of greater importance than higher schools for the few.

The University Club is not desirous of advocating any particular additional institution inconsistent with maximum and greatest social community needs as may be determined by adequate preliminary social survey or investigation.

Wichita Falls and county would be greatly benefitted by better grade and city schools, additional hospitals and colleges. Which they need most if not yet feasible to secure all, is not for the University Club alone to determine, and the club has never so intended.

F. G. SWANSON,
Secretary University Club.

TOO MANY CONGRESSMEN

If congress, in voting for the new reapportionment measure, and thus adding 48 members to its body, is following the will of the people, then the newspapers of the country do not reflect public opinion. The majority of the press, even journals in states whose population increase would entitle them to added representation at the capitol, are apparently united in the belief that there are "too many congressmen" now. Few, however, see any hope of the development of a "shrinking violet" attitude on the part of our lawmaking body which might persuade it to reduce its membership.

A few voices are raised in rebuttal of the "unwieldiness" charge. The Syracuse Herald (Ind.), for instance, calls attention to the fact that "the British House of Commons has 670 members and the French Chamber of Deputies not far from 600" and asks "where shall we look for better parliamentary examples in the numerical sense?" A frankly sectional viewpoint is reflected in the New Orleans States (Dem.):

"The decision to increase the membership and to keep the population basis will naturally be welcomed in the South for it may be taken to mean that at least during the present administration there will be no effort to curtail the representation of this section and weaken its strength in Washington and in presidential elections."

The Houston Chronicle (Ind.) holds a similar view but grants that "the time will come" when the membership in the House "must be held stationary". That time, however, it is sure "has hardly arrived" yet. But this view cannot be taken as representative either of the South or of the nation for the Charlestown News and Courier (Dem.), after accusing republican leaders of insincerity in their economy talk, declares that instead of a larger House, "one-half" the present body would be "infinitely more effective as a lawmaking organization." This feeling seems to be general and the Tacoma Ledger's (Ind.) statement that "Congressmen, like dollars, depreciate in value when they are multiplied" finds a counterpart in the San Antonio Express (Ind. Dem.). The Express says:

"There is a popular idea that a smaller number of lawmakers in Washington with a definite understanding of what they had to do and an earnest purpose to do it promptly and efficiently would accomplish a vast deal more in a given time than would the greater number—on the peculiar adapted theory that too many cooks spoil the broth."

The Express also urges the economy argument which is taken up by many newspapers, among them the Indianapolis News (Ind.), which considered it doubtful that "forty-eight additional representatives are worth a million dollars a year to the country" and concludes that "what is needed at Washington is not a larger House but a better House and a more economic House even if it is a smaller House."

"Too large for efficiency," comments the Providence Tribune (Ind. Rep.), though Rhode Island would lose a representative were its size decreased or left stationary under present population. But curtailment is not expected, for it points out that the party which did it would pay dearly, especially the republicans, if they cut down on Southern representation now that the solid South has been broken.

But many believe that no states could really suffer if the membership of the House were reduced, for, as the Nashville Banner (Ind.) puts it, "none would be dealt with unjustly if the reduction was general and based on population, as the law requires, but it would be unpopular for any congressman to permit the loss of representation allowed his state if he could prevent it." Apparently Massachusetts which will be a gainer under the present plan, does not feel the glory is worth the cost. The Springfield Union (Rep.) says:

"It is permissible for Massachusetts to congratulate herself upon the fact that in the congressional reapportionment she will gain two congressmen but only because she has gained in population relatively. Nothing is gained by such a reappointment that would not be gained by one leaving the House no larger than at present."

Says the Boston Post (Ind. Dem.):

"It is not to be regarded as a matter for local congratulation, however, in view of the broader consideration of the fact that it looks to rendering the House of Representatives even more cumbersome than at present. All experience goes to show that efficiency in its work will be retarded rather than advanced."

The Political Grind.

"I have observed," said the friend "that whenever the caller who just departed visits anybody he has an ax to grind."

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "we ought to be willing to contribute, if possible, to the worthy enterprises of others. I don't object to a man who has an ax to grind, if he honestly means to go out and chop wood with it. What I do object to is the politician who merely desires to whet a tomahawk."

When the paper came out again the following notice appeared: "We regret to announce that the paragraph in our last issue, which stated that Colonel Brimsby was dead, was not true."

Whoever owing allegiance to the United States levies war against them or adheres to their enemies, giving them aid and comfort, is guilty of treason.

DR. BURMA SAYS TALK SHOULD BE OF PRESENT NOW

"We have talked enough of the sweet by and by, of the next world, and it is high time that we talk more of the now and now of the present time," declared Dr. Burma, president of Trinity university at Waxahachie, in his morning sermon at the First Presbyterian church.

"More people in America are coming to realize that to live happily and to obtain the most out of life one must live his religion in this world."

The subject of the morning sermon of Dr. Burma was "Investing Ourselves in This World."

With the Sunday night sermon, Mr Burma closed the week of special meetings that have been held at the First Presbyterian church. The meetings have been largly attended, the morning and evening sermons of Dr. Burma on Sunday having been heard by capacity audiences.

The speaker's morning sermon was a plea for a greater appreciation of the value and need of applying religion to the problems of today and not considering it merely as a means of obtaining entrance to Heaven at the close of one's earthly career.

"We are, to a large extent, breaking away from the purely sentimental side of religion," Dr. Burma declared, "and are beginning to emphasize the need of applying religious principles to our daily lives with a view of receiving something of its value in this world as well as the next."

The speaker pointed out present conditions as indicative of the fact that there was need of a change in the present conceptions of religious duty. The present conditions in Europe with special reference to starving children and mothers in several of the countries of old continents were pointed out by the speaker, who declared that there has been a "breaking down in the moral and spiritual life of the whole world, causing the conditions that now confront it.

"We have in the past over-estimated the sin of commission and under-estimated the sin of omission," the speaker continued. "Neglect and failure to do so has caused far more trouble in this world than the positive sins that have been committed against humanity." In this connection the speaker declared his belief that the failure of the present day civilization was for the most part due to the fact that people failed through carelessness and inactivity to carry out religious principles.

"Liberty has become license," the speaker declared. "We have too long forgotten that we are not our own, that we belong to God first that we are in reality servants of the Divine Christ.

"Because of that fact we are morally and spiritual bankrupt, although we have more wealth, more learning, more of everything of a material nature than we have ever had before."

"We have no appreciation of the things spiritual and unseen. Civilization after civilization has perished because of a like attitude on the part of their people. A changed attitude must come to us or we follow their lead."

DINNER STORIES

A boy dashed into a broker's office with news bulletins. As he turned to leave, a member of the firm called out: "here, you seem to have some pep. Get me a box of cigars in the lobby and keep the change."

The boy hesitated, although a $2 bank note was thrust into his hands. Finally he stammered: "I would like to get you cigars, but we are short of boys, and I have a big route to cover. I'll come back when I deliver these bulletins." With that he left the office.

"Are you going to wait until he returns?" asked a customer.

"You bet I am," replied the broker. "In these days, it is a pleasure to meet a boy who works for his boss first. Furthermore, I am going to put him on the payroll."

SCOTT IS HELD ON CHARGES OF ROBBING MAILS

The bond of Tom Scott, oil field worker, arrested Saturday at Burkburnett, on a charge of robbing the United States mails was fixed at $750 Sunday morning by United States Commissioner Lantz following a short hearing. Scott had failed to make the bond at a late hour Sunday and was still confined to the county jail.

In connection with the arrest it became known Sunday that both federal and county officers were working on the case which it is believed will result in other arrests for mail robbery.

Scott, when arrested Saturday is said to have confessed to Deputy Constable Turnham of Burkburnett that he has taken checks from the mails. Scott has been employed in the oil fields near here for several months living in this city part of the time.

"Yes, uncle."

"What can she dae?"

"Do? What do you mean?"

"Well," went on the old man, "can she sew an' knit? Does she mend your claes?"

"No," the young man admitted.

"Hump," commented the uncle. "Weel, does she cook? Can she mak' tarrtich?"

"Oh, no, uncle," the young man protested. "The servants do all those things. But you should hear her sing, uncle. She has the most beautiful voice you ever heard."

The railroad official invited the stern citizen to communicate his troubles.

"I want you to give orders,' 'demanded the visitor, "that the engineer of the express which passes through Elm Grove at 11:55 be restrained from blowing his whistle on Sunday morning.

"Impossible!" exploded the official. "What prompts you to make such a ridiculous request."

"Well, you see," explained the citizen, in an undertone, "our pastor preaches until he hears the whistle blow, and that confounded express was 20 minutes late last Sunday."

The railroads were under Federal control from January 1, 1918, to March 1, 1920.

JUST GABBLE

It is no crime, and nothing wrong
Says a California court.
To sell a ball-game, fake and frame,
And taint the national sport.
Some wondrous people deck the bench,
In this progressive day—
They find the Letter of the Law,
And chuck their brains away;

A moving picture hero stepped
Along a country road—
Magnificent his haughty gait
As gloriously he strode.
Then suddenly before him leaped
A spitting, clawing cat—
The nearest fence—one hundred yards—
He beat four seconds flat!

There were some awfully cute and pretty names in the good old National League last summer. Just lamp this set of monakers:

Clifton Heathcote, Austin McHenry, Verne Clemons, Carson Bigbee, Walton Cruise, Lee King, Harold Janvrin, Raymond Bressler, Ferdinand Schupp, A. Earle Neale, Clifford Lee, Clarence Twombly, Sherrod Smith, Kenneth Knode, Cecil Causey, Elwood Martin, Virgil Cheeves, Percy Jones, Lynn Brenton, Sumpter Clarke and Clyde Barnhart!

Babe Ruth drew 148 bases on balls last summer, making him the champion pass-fiend of the world.

As to "destitute Germany"—how many cows and how much food could be bought for German children with the money Germany sends to the kaiser?

It used to be "as the crow flies." Now it's "as the Old Crow used to fly." Heigh-hum and a barrel of alases!

Do you want to see royal dignity and imperial bearing, without making the long trip to Europe? Then take a slant at the clerk in any haberdashery.

There was a young sport from Navarre,
Who used to shake dice on the barre—
But he's gone, so they say—
He has vanished away—
For the Dry Laws have driven him farre!

The prefix "ex" means many things in different countries. For instance, in Mexico it means Extinct or Exterminated.

Why do they call that little speck of land in a far-off sea the Island of Yap? Its total population wouldn't equal one percent of the yaps that can be counted every day right here in our own city.

The new bantam champion, Lynch,
Has a wallop that gives him a cynch—
When the fighting is hard,
He possesses a guard
That protects him quite well in a pynch!

Oh well, there were a few cuties in the American League, too:

Derrill Pratt, Everett Scott, Gladstone Graney, Byrd Lynn, Waite Hoyt, Urban Faber, Allan Sothoron, Elam Vangilder, Yancey Ayres, Lawton Witt and Lyle Bigbee.

HARDING SOON TO BEGIN REST IN SOUTHLAND

MARION, O., Jan. 16.—Although President-elect Harding will hold only a few more conferences before he leaves Marion for his southern vacation trip, his callers will include some of the leading figures in his party.

He began the week today with a long consultation with Harry M. Daugherty of Columbus, generally regarded as a prospective cabinet member, and tomorrow will see Will H. Hays, the republican national chairman and Former Governor Frank O. Lowden, of Illinois, who was one of the three big candidates for the presidential nomination at the Chicago convention.

Mr. Hays is also expected to receive appointment to the cabinet, and Mr. Lowden's name has been associated in gossip here with several high positions under the coming administration.

The president-elect is known to be anxious that the former enter the government service in some capacity, and he has been mentioned most frequently as a likely choice for one of the more important ambassadorships.

The exact date for Mr. Harding's departure for his vacation in Florida has not been divulged here, but it is known that he will leave within the next few days.

The largest day's sales on the New York Stock Exchange in 1919 occurred on November 13, when 2,632,835 shares were dealt in.

EGGS.

Eggs is the junior partner of the two well-known firms of Ham & Eggs and Bacon & Eggs. They range in size from Shad eggs or roe to the egg of the Ostrich, which, if scrambled, would cover a 54-inch table to a depth of two feet, with enough left over to fill a wastebasket. The ostrich egg if boiled hard, if excavated would make a comfortable garage for the Fliver.

The most fashionable egg is that of the humble hen. It consists of two parts, the white and yolk. It can be distinguished because the yolk leaves a yellow spot on the chin.

Eggs are served in two ways—fresh and discouraged. A discouraged egg is one that starts out with high ambition in life but is thwarted at every turn and growing older, grows embittered and sophisticated. You know it is sophisticated, because it has a wistful odor that is not the odor of sanctity.

When one of these roue eggs is encountered at the breakfast table, one should be discreet and yet determined. Open the window wide and escort the egg with care to the ledge. Allow it to look out upon the landscape. While it is absorbed in the beauties of the scenery, turn your head away to avoid the shock of the tragedy you are about to enact and gently but firmly push the egg over the ledge. If the janitor should happen to be passing below at this moment, the pleasure is all the more intense.

At one time, eggs used to be shied at an actor who failed to meet the approval of the assembled multitude. Shakespeare's immortal line "Out, out, damned spot," acquired a new significance after one of these barrages. However, tendering an egg to an actor is now a mark of respect They are often set in platinum and incrusted with diamonds, and when worn upon the breast or around the neck on a string set you apart as one of great wealth and social prominence.

It was the frequency with which eggs consorted with bum actors in the old days that these bum actors got to be known as "Ham actors," ham and eggs being practically inseparabel like other well-known twins of history—Corned Beef and Cabbage, Damon and Pythias, Liver and Onions, Jonathan and David, Ham hocks and Spinach, Ruth and Naomi, and Call and Settle.

Before eggs can be eaten, they must be cooked. This is done in various ways, such as boiled, baked, stewed, fricasseed, poached, shirred, roasted and planked. The most popular boiled egg is the four-minute egg, so called because it takes you that long to figure how to open it without spilling it all over your buzzum.

You can easily tell whether an egg has been boiled 2, 3, or 4 minutes. At 4 minutes, it will rest easily on your buzzum and coagulate. At three minutes, the egg is very loose and is usually collected months later off the walls and ceiling.

Fried eggs are usually fried either on one side or the other. Where two of them are fried together, the sides are alternated: One is fried on one side, the other is fried on the other side.

FURNACES.

Furnaces are usually situated down in the basement next to the janitor's apartment, so as to keep him comfortably warm, first and foremost. How well they illustrate the old maxim: "Out of sight, out of luck."

(See tomorrow's Ignorant Essay.)

TAD'S TID-BITS

OLD STUFF, OLD STUFF.

They say that Carpentier has twenty styles of fighting and uses a different one each round of every fight. Fred McKay originated that idea in fisticuffs, if we're not mistaken. Let's see, Fred had some styles that we remember quite well. There was "the falling leaf," "the side flop," "the nose dive," "the Kellerman," "the spread eagle flop," and "the accordion fold." Fred never used more than one style for each fight.

DEMPSEY TO MEET MEEHAN AGAIN.

A little bird, coasting in from the West, informs us that Jack Dempsey will be seen shortly at Portland, Ore., in two or three fights.

Willie Meehan will be his opponent in one of the bouts and that one is expected to be the daddy of the bunch.

Strange as it may seem, sports out on the Coast have an idea that Meehan can lick Dempsey. They'll bet all they can beg, borrow or steal that Jack can't knock the Dimpled Dumpling out.

Meehan and Dempsey fought five or six times in California, and the best man is still a matter of discussion. Some of their bouts were decided draws, one or two Dempsey won and one or two Meehan won. The last time they met was at a Red Cross show. It was a REAL charity affair. Neither fighter received a red cent for his services.

It was a heart-breaking four-round slugfest and Meehan was declared the winner.

Frisco fans who saw the fight declare that Jack was on the ropes with Meehan whaling away at him like a wild man when the bell stopped the bout.

Portland may see a good fight.

YES, WHY IS THAT?

How is it that there is no wrestlers of the Terry McGovern type alive these days How is it that they're never nicknamed "One Minute" McDougall or "Tumble 'Em Quick" Schwartz?

No matter what sort of a cheese the champion wrestler meets it ALWAYS takes him between one and two hours to down him "AFTER A TERRIFIC STRUGGLE."

The champion of the world will meet some unknown, boosted as the Wurtemberg Wildcat. Next day in the paper you'll see the account which will read something like this:

"Last night at the Cloony Opera House, before 56,000 red-eyed fans, Hardneck Phillips, champion of the world, threw Webster O'Malley, the Wurtemberg Wildcat, after a struggle that lasted one hour and fifty-nine minutes. Both men fell exhausted after the bout and had to be carried to a nearby gin mill. They will probably meet again here next week."

Did you ever hear of a champion wrestler winning in a minute or two?

A PICK UP.

Hey Tad: After the Brooklyns trimmed the Jasper Five of Philadelphia the other night, they went forth in quest of food. Strolling along Broadway, Brooklyn, they were startled by a runaway clattering toward them, with a light delivery wagon swaying behind.

Garry Schmeelk, the big captain of the Brooklyns, moved his 220 pounds to the middle of the street and stopped the flying steed with a nifty headlock.

Holding the oat-muncher, Garry turned to the bunch and piped: "LOOK WHAT I FOUND!"

Yours from the wrong end of the bridge,

JOE HODGINS.

DELL PRATT.

When Harry Frazee sold Babe Ruth to the Yanks to help pay off the mortgage on the old ball club he hoped in the near future to grab off Dell Pratt, hard-hitting second sacker of the Yanks to partly appease the wrath of the Hub fans. No deal was made. But Dell will cavort for Harry next spring—if he plays at all. For the Red Sox recently acquired him in the wholesale swap involving eight players, all told.

Huggins was enthusiastic about Dell, when he gave the Browns $15,000, Pitchers Cullop and Shocker, Infielders Gedeon and Maisel and Catcher Nunamaker for Pratt and Eddie Plank. That deal was made Jan. 22, 1918. But last summer Dell got in bad with the little Yank pilot and was benched for some time.

It undoubtedly was the inability of Hug and Dell to hit it off peaceably that caused the Yanks to let him go.

Pratt was born in Wilhalla, S. C., in 1890. From Auburn college and the University of Alabama Pratt went to the Montgomery Southern league team in 1910. After farming him to the Cotton States league that club sold him to the Browns for cash and players.

At second and short for the Browns in 1912 he played 151 games—quite a fair start. Then he stuck to second. He batted .302 his first year up and always has been an able hitter.

Paris Police Form Symphony Orchestra

PARIS, Jan. 16.—Under the patronage of Minister of the Interior Steeg and Prefect of Police Raux, Paris policemen have formed their symphonic orchestra. All participants are on the active list and the conductor himself is just an ordinary policeman. This band intends to give regular concerts, the proceeds of which will go to swell the funds of the recently formed union. On special occasions they will parade the streets or follow official processions. They will also play for charity.

CITIES WANT BIG GUNS.

BOSTON, Jan. 16. — Mayors of southern cities have sent in requests to the first army corps area for the 10-inch guns now idle at the ungarrisoned Fort Knox, Me. There are fifteen 10-inch guns and two 15-nch guns there to be given away by the war department.

No doubt some of the present day bandits are merely trying to get into jail so as to avoid making out income tax returns.—Columbus (S. C.) Record.

ENTIRE FAMILY OF FIVE FOUND SHOT TO DEATH

By Associated Press.

PAMPLICO, S. C., Jan. 16.—Discovery today of the bodies of two other members of the Bigham family revealed that the entire family of five, living about four miles from Pamplico was killed some time Saturday afternoon.

Mrs. L. S. Bigham, 60, was shot through the head and her body was found in the yard of the Bigham home, her daughter, Mrs. Marjorie Black, 35, was found lying in a pool of blood in her room with a bullet hole in her head; Mrs. Black's adopted son, nine year of age, was found near the back of the house, his forehead having been pierced by a bullet at close range; Mrs. Black's other adopted son, five years of age, evidently tried to escape from his assailant for he was found near a fence in the back yard with a bullet wound in his head. He died then. The body of the other members of the family, L. S. Bigham, 40, son of Mrs. L. S. Bigham, was found today in the woods about one half mile from the house, wounded in his right temple. His hand was holding a revolver in which there were two bullets.

The family had long been prominent in this section of the state, the father having been a member of both branches of the South Carolina general assembly, and at one time was a candidate for congress.

Berliners Are Marriage Mad Survey Shows

BERLIN, Jan. 16.—The Statistical Year Book of Berlin, is a fearsome volume of undiluted figures which few ordinary people have the courage even to buy.

In one statistical table you learn that one bold Berliner last year took unto himself his ninth wife. Another equally and unenthusiastic table informs the reader that there are two men in Berlin intent it would appear, on breaking this record.

One has just married for the eighth time and another for the sixth. Marriage statistics reveal such audacity in matrimony that one is sorry that no names are given.

One widow, who had been married three times, went to the altar with a widower who had also been there three times before.

From 1914 to 1917 twenty-seven persons of over seventy-five were married seven, of them being over eighty.

In the five years over which the book spread its frigid figures twenty-two women married for the fifth time and 480 for the fourth time. Thirty-three uncles married their neices and five daring nephews married their aunts.

The war reduced the number of divorces by 50 percent, but the number is now increasing again.

Of more than 5,000 divorces dealt with in the statistics only 38 took place in the first year of marriage, four in the fortieth year and one in the forty-fourth.

Twelve couples are reported to have families of more than twenty children.

Evidently heroism is not lacking in this city of misery and millionaires.

Divorcee Finds Refuge in Lone Cabin in Hills

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo., Jan. 16.—A shattered romance that had its ending in the divorce courts has led Mrs. Julian Charlotte Desmond, formerly of Toledo, Ohio, to seek seclusion in a desolate spot on Pike's Peak.

Alone, with her Russian wolfhound and a cat, three miles from the nearest house, Mrs. Desmond lives in her cabin, venturing into civilized surroundings only when her rations are depleted.

From a point near the summit of Pike's Peak her cabin can be seen a large American flag waving in the breezes.

Mountain lions, wildcats and the huge mountain rats have no terror for the woman recluse, a high-powered rifle being one of her possessions—and rumor says she has the ability to use it. One lion skin graces her combination dining-room, kitchen and living room.

Domestic troubles that brought a nervous breakdown, a divorce and her desire for the solitude of the mountains are said to be responsible for Mrs. Desmond choosing one of the lonliest spots in the Rockies—a deserted miner's cabin perched in the rocks southwest of Pike's Peak—as her hermitage.

According to stray bits of information gleaned concerning the occupant of the secluded cabin, Mrs. Desmond secured sufficient funds in an alimony settlement to enable her to live comfortably.

According to the Federal Trade Commission the production of wood pulp in the United States in 1919 totalled 3,207,552 net tons.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S HEALTH STEADILY IMPROVING UNDER PRESCRIBED DAILY ROUTINE

Rigid Adherence to Programme Laid Down by Rear-Admiral Cary T. Grayson Is Slowly but Surely Bringing About His Recovery From the Complete Breakdown Suffered Many Months Ago.

By FRANK A. STETSON
(By International News Service.)

WASHINGTON, Jan. 17.—President Wilson's continued daily improvement in health, slow and to the untrained eye of the layman, imperceptible as it really is, is due in no small measure to his faithful and rigid adherence to a prescribed daily routine, according to his physician and friend, Rear Admiral Cary T. Grayson.

Admiral Grayson has had complete charge of the president's health from the time he entered the White House eight years ago and has treated him until his last serious illness on the Chinese theory that the duty of a doctor is to keep his patient from becoming sick. He succeeded with this theory through all the strenuous years of the Wilson administration until the ill-fated western tour which culminated in the entire physical breakdown of the chief executive on September 28, 1919. Dr. Grayson has always felt that this breakdown was caused in a large measure by the inability of Mr. Wilson to observe his carefully prepared routine, diet, and exercise on account of living aboard a railroad train.

With the convalescence of the president, Dr. Grayson resumed his routine and is slowly building the president up to at least a semblance of his old time health. The daily routine of the president under Dr. Grayson's guidance varies but little. The president rises at 7 o'clock and shaves himself with a safety razor. After a bath, he goes through a series of physical exercises patterned after the army calesthenics or setting up exercises. Breakfast is served at 8 o'clock in a small dining room leading off from his bed-chamber. Mrs. Wilson always joins the president at breakfast. Mr. Wilson eats a rather hearty breakfast, consisting generally of a glass of orange juice, fruit, cereal, eggs, toast and coffee.

From breakfast the president goes directly to his study, where he labors undisturbed until 11 o'clock. It is the president's rigid rule to stay at his desk until it is cleared of all matters requiring his attention. No one is allowed to disturb him and only his personal stenographer, Charles L. Swem, is admitted to the study while the president is disposing of his morning routine. In this manner he is enabled to do an immense amount of work promptly.

From 11 to 12 noon, if it is not raining, the president takes an open air sunbath on the south portico of the White House, warmly wrapped to guard against catching a cold. Mr. Wilson sits in his wheel chair, while Mrs. Wilson reads aloud to him. From time to time Mrs. Wilson is relieved of this duty by Dr. Stockton Axson, brother of the first Mrs. Wilson, who has been living at the White House for several months.

Promptly at 12 o'clock, noon, the president and Mrs. Wilson, members of the White House staff that are not on duty and any friends of Mrs. Wilson's that may be at the house, go to the east room of the White House, where they constitute the audience for a motion picture show. The programme of this show is changed daily and producers fight for the opportunity of making a premiere of their pictures at the White House.

At 1 o'clock, President Wilson has his luncheon, which may be called the heaviest meal of the day. The luncheon might be more properly called a mid-day dinner, as it is served in courses and is attended by more formality than any other meal. Dr. Grayson allows the president a wide latitude in this meal, his only restrictions being against too rich food, fat meats, gravies and rich desserts or sweets. Coffee is also forbidden at this meal.

After luncheon, Mr. Wilson takes a nap until 3 o'clock when he and Mrs. Wilson go on a daily motor ride about the city, through the parks and into the surrounding country. Regardless of the weather, unless it is raining, the motor trip is made in a big open car with the top down. The president dresses warmly and wears a golf cap. In rainy weather a limousine is used if the president wishes to go out, but he does not care to make long trips in a closed car. The return to the White House is made at 4:30 and Mr. Wilson goes immediately to his study to see if any papers needing his immediate attention have been sent over from the executive offices. If so, he immediately disposes of them and then turns his attention to the daily newspapers. President Wilson reads the daily papers very quickly. If he is attracted by the headlines he reads the article, if not he glances through the sheet and turns his attention to the next one. In the hour that he gives himself for this purpose, the president reads the leading papers from all sections of the country.

At 7 o'clock he has dinner with Mrs. Wilson. Sometimes this meal is served in the little breakfast room, but ordinarily it is eaten in the family dining room near the state dining room. This meal is a light and simple one without meat of any kind. After dinner, the president watches a game of pocket billiards between Mrs. Wilson and Dr. Axson in the billiard room or goes to his own chamber where, if the weather is cool, he will sit for half an hour or so before the open fireplace before retiring for the night.

Bedtime for President Wilson comes at 9 o'clock unless there should be a family gathering necessitating his sitting up longer.

This is the general daily life of the president of the United States, and its success is witnessed by his steady improvement. The president recently stepped on the scales for Dr. Grayson and tipped the beam at 181 pounds, the heaviest that he has weighed in his life.

The new residence recently acquired by the President and Mrs. Wilson was selected from the scores that were offered, largely because of its adaptability to the president's prescribed routine. The new house has a large enclosed glass porch leading into a beautiful formal garden which is terraced nearly twenty feet above the street. One enters the porch from a handsome library which is on the third floor of the residence. Although the house is located in the most fashionable quarter of the city of Washington, the arrangement of its porch and garden makes for that quiet and seclusion that Dr. Grayson believes is absolutely necessary to the president's ultimate recovery.

WEEKLY COTTON REVIEW

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 16.—It was a week of advancing prices in the cotton market, mainly because of the strength of the January position and the market improvement in the market for finished goods. Highest prices came at the middle of the week when the trading months were 113 to 154 points over the last prices of the preceding week.

Last prices for the week showed net gains on contracts of 99 to 107 points. In the spot department prices gained 100 points on middling in the net results, the last quotation being 15.00.

The spectacular feature of the week was the movement of cotton from the south to New York to be tendered on January contracts there. On Thursday clearances for New York from this port amounted 8,469 bales and there was a coastwise total movement on the day of 13,978 bales. Rumor had it that 24,000 bales of freight had been booked out of New Orleans for New York in time for tender this month, was variously estimated all the way from 40,000 bales up to 70,000.

The improvement in the dry goods situation was generally regarded as the most constructive development of the week. Many southern mills were reported to have started up on Monday on full time schedules. New England cloth markets reported the largest sales in months.

This week the January deal will be watched with increasing interest for as the expiration of the present spot position draws near more or less excitement is anticipated.

Who's Got An Opener For This Cornerstone of 1886 in Which Two Quarts of Whiskey Repose?

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., Jan. 17.—The state capitol cornerstone here has held no interest for many years. So low did the ebb of interest fall that the inscription was in time effaced and the fact was barely noticed.

But suddenly interest has jumped to the point where everybody is talking about the grand cornerstone which graces the State Capitol building of the State of Illnois. Why? Because someone has discovered the all-important fact that within the stone, among other things, are two quarts of rare whiskey.

The cornerstone containing the whiskey was laid originally in 1868—fifty-two years ago. An edition of the Illinois State Register in that year describes the beverage as "the best whiskey made in Illinois" and connoisseurs say there was some "good stuff" made in this state in the days of memory.

How old the whiskey was at the time of the cornerstone laying records do not show.

Faster than flying—the TELEPHONE —for out-of-town business

RECENT extensive improvement in long-distance telephone facilities in West Texas gives towns in this territory a complete communicating system, entirely capable of caring for long-distance telephone demands in these growing communities.

Long-distance telephoning saves time and money. The rates for telephoning from town to town are reasonable. If you ask to be connected to a certain telephone in another town and will talk to anybody at that telephone, the rate is much lower and the service faster than when you call a particular person.

The time-saving advantages of long-distance telephoning are easily seen. A day's travel can be reduced to a few minutes' telephoning; and equal satisfaction gained. The speed of affairs in the oil fields demands the quick communication supplied by long-distance telephone.

The Telephone Company, following the sudden oil development in West Texas, immediately took steps to extend the telephone system to keep pace with the growth of the territory. Although hampered by shortage of material and other familiar difficulties, the Company has produced a long-distance telephone system connecting all towns in the oil district and sufficient to care for long-distance calls with speed and satisfaction. Local facilities also are being improved in towns in West Texas.

the RATES

TAKE advantage of the long-distance telephone the next time you have out-of-town business to transact. It is satisfactory and surprisingly simple. Rates are reasonable.

For example:

If Mr. Jones of Abilene telephones Mr. Smith of Ft. Worth, the cost is one dollar for three minutes' conversation—and the Telephone Company will find Mr. Smith. (A slight charge is made if the called party is not found and no conversation is held.)

If Mr. Jones calls Mr. Smith's telephone and will talk to ANYBODY at that telephone—to Mr. Smith, if he is there; otherwise to somebody else—the cost would be eighty cents—twenty per cent less than the "particular person" call.

If this call is made between 8:30 p. m. and midnight—and Mr. Jones would talk to ANYBODY at Mr. Smith's telephone—the cost would be cut to forty cents.

Between midnight and 4 a. m. the cost to talk to ANYBODY at the called telephone would be twenty-five cents.

Rates between other points are proportionate. Distance and time are cheaply conquered. Our manager or long-distance operator will gladly quote rates.
