Decision on neutron bomb facing Senate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The full Senate is facing a decision on whether a lethal neutron bomb that kills people but leaves buildings intact should become part of the U.S. nuclear weapons arsenal.

The Senate Appropriations Committee rejected on Wednesday a move by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to ban production of the device.

Instead, it approved a $10.4 billion public works and energy research appropriation bill containing funds to develop the nuclear warhead, possibly as early as next year.

The legislation, already approved by the House, now goes to the full Senate.

Although its details are mostly secret, the proposed bomb is reportedly designed to kill people through the release of highly radioactive neutrons while doing a minimum amount of damage to structures.

It would be fitted to the tactical, short-range Lance missile. This missile, bearing conventional nuclear warheads, is deployed with NATO forces in Europe.

Advocates of the proposed new weapon claim neutron bombs would make a better battlefield deterrent than the estimated 7,000 nuclear warheads in Europe. These advocates say the warheads now deployed have too large a nuclear yield to be used as tactical weapons.

Some $1.09 billion of the $10.4 billion appropriation approved by the Senate committee is earmarked for nuclear weapons activities.

Hatfield's motion to drop funding for the neutron bomb was rejected by the committee on a 10-10 tie vote in a closed-door session. Committee members voted later to make public the vote and the nature of Hatfield's proposal.

Under existing law, even if Congress approves such devices as the neutron bomb, production cannot begin without an order from the president.

The committee also rejected President Carter's request to cancel the Clinch River breeder reactor project at Oak Ridge Tenn., voting instead to appropriate $150 million for the project for the next fiscal year so construction can begin.

The administration wants the project halted, claiming it would lead to the worldwide spread of bomb-suitable plutonium. Breeders produce more plutonium than they consume as they generate electric power.

Carter may use decontrol veto

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Carter will consider vetoing any attempt by Congress to remove federal price controls from natural gas, James R. Schlesinger, Carter's chief energy adviser, said Wednesday.

And if the veto weapon should not be used, Schlesinger told a group of reporters, Carter would consider proposing a wellhead tax on natural gas to siphon away the massive profits Schlesinger said the producers would realize from decontrol.

Either way, he said, Carter is determined to prevent the producers from reaping extra profits from any decontrol legislation.

The President has indicated, Schlesinger said, that his energy program is intended to be "based on equity."

"If he is unable to get equity (on the natural gas vote) he will be prepared to consider all possible measures in order to avoid inequitable results," Schlesinger added.

His comments came as the Federal Power Commission issued a report concluding that next winter may see natural gas shortages more severe than those experienced last January and February even without a repeat of last winter's abnormally cold weather. Thousands of factories, offices and schools had to be shut down during last winter's shortage.

With normal weather, the FPC said, interstate pipeline companies will be unable to deliver 23 per cent of their wholesale customers' gas needs, up from 21 per cent during the past winter, when supplies were drawn down by abnormal heating needs.

The FPC report was likely to increase the pressures on both Congress and the Carter Administration as they seek to revamp the critical natural gas segment of national energy policy.

Schlesinger laid out in sharpest detail yet the Administration's strategy for heading off the oil and gas industry's drive to win decontrol of prices for newly discovered natural gas. Carter is asking Congress for expanded price regulation of natural gas.

Industry officials contend that if newly discovered gas is removed from price control, the added profit incentive will spur producers to find additional supplies and thus cut into the shortage that has developed in recent years but was masked until recently by unusually warm winters.

By contrast, Carter wants to extend price controls to gas sold solely within the state in which it is produced and to price new supplies discovered onshore at $1.75 per thousand cubic feet (mcf). That is well above the $1.42 or so per mcf that is the highest price now allowed for gas sold to price-controlled interstate pipelines. However, it is below the $1.80 or more per mcf that recently has prevailed in the uncontrolled intrastate market.

Schlesinger said the $1.75 price provided more than ample incentive for gas from conventional sources. And, for harder-to-get supplies from tight rock formations and from great depths, he said, "we are prepared to accept deregulation."

This approach, he said, would provide protection for consumers and guard against inordinate profits to producers without reducing the amount of new gas to be found.

Senate takes time on saccharin

By HELEN DEWAR
and VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Senate Appropriations Committee Wednesday rejected a House amendment that would stop the Food and Drug Administration from banning saccharin for the next 15 months. It acted after receiving assurances that Congress would be able to act on saccharin later this year.

By then, Congress will have had time to consider the issue "calmly and rationally," said Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton (D-Mo.), who proposed rejection of the House proposal.

Meanwhile, in San Francisco, the American Medical Association voted in favor of keeping the artificial sweetener in diet food and drinks — with merely a warning label of possible harm — until there is clearly proof that saccharin causes cancer.

The AMA also urged repeal of the controversial Delaney amendment, which provided part of the basis for the FDA's proposal in March to ban saccharin in food and beverages, while allowing its sale as an over-the-counter nonprescription drug. The amendment has been interpreted to require removal from the market of food additives shown to cause cancer in humans or animals.

The FDA proposed the curb on saccharin, widely used as a sugar substitute by dieters and diabetics on the basis of studies in which short-term feeding of the substance in large amounts caused cancer in animals.

The first congressional action against the FDA's proposed ban came Tuesday when the House amended a $13.7 billion agriculture appropriations bill to ban use of any of the funds for promulgating or enforcing a saccharin ban until Sept. 30, 1978.

But Wednesday the Senate Appropriations Committee voted unanimously to reject the House proposal after Eagleton said separate legislation likely to include an 18-month moratorium on action against saccharin will be before Congress later this summer — well before any ban is imposed.

Eagleton said he has been assured by FDA officials that the ban, in any case, would not be imposed before Oct. 1.

Eagleton said the legislation would give the FDA more freedom to cope with potential health hazards from saccharin than the House proposal did. "What we need most on this saccharin issue is more time to calmly and rationally consider the information at hand," Eagleton added.

Eagleton said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), chairman of the Senate Health and Scientific Research subcommittee, planned to bring a bill dealing with saccharin to the Senate floor next week. The bill is expected to include an 18-month delay on any saccharin ban and a study by the National Academy of Sciences on the effectiveness of the Delaney amendment.

The AMA, in its action Wednesday, urged Congress to require that no additive be banned unless it either clearly causes cancers in humans or causes cancers in animals that have received amounts of the additive equivalent to human daily doses.

The association, most of whose 172,830 members are practicing physicians rather than scientists, rejected arguments by many cancer scientists that it is necessary to test animals with large doses over a short period to duplicate the effect of continued exposure of humans to small amounts of cancer-causing substances.

Drought squeezes grip on Southern farmers

ATLANTA (AP) — A two-month drought through much of the South has parched land, shriveled crops and dried up water supplies, threatening to cost farmers millions of dollars.

Some farmers stand to take a double blow when their feed crops fail. They will be unable to feed their livestock and will have to sell animals at a loss.

The southern drought comes while the West's worst dry period in the century continues almost unabated, with forest fire danger high and water rationing imposed in many areas.

Damage to Georgia's corn crop is estimated at $94 million, because of fireworm and budworm infestation as well as lack of moisture.

"We are dry," said Wayne County, Ga., farm agent Bobby Deal. "We expect to lose 65 per cent of our corn crop."

But most of Georgia's crops haven't been planted and Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said the loss is impossible to estimate. The value of last year's soybean crop was put at nearly $144 million.

Several Georgia counties have begun issuing weekend warnings to residents to curtail washing their cars, watering gardens and filling swimming pools.

In Houston County, Ala., agriculture officials said about two-thirds of the 60,000 acres of corn has been ruined.

Soybean crops in Alabama, Georgia and Virginia were all below normal.

Tobacco markets are expected to open next month, but this year's loss in Georgia alone is expected to be more than $8.5 million. In Virginia and Tennessee, tobacco is in good condition, but both areas need more rain to maintain a healthy crop.

Cotton losses in Georgia were estimated at $8 million, but other states reported good crop conditions.

Maybe winning can be simply trying hardest

It's competition, all right. And there are winners and winners and more winners.

You just don't find any losers, unless someone just totally gives up on himself. Even then, some folks are right there to boost the morale and to make a winner out of a would-be loser.

The name of this sport is improving the self-image. And it takes many forms; one is swimming.

Yes, winning — coming in first — is important. But there's something that takes on greater meaning, said Sue Beasley, who's out paddling for the mentally retarded in Midland. Winning is trying, really trying.

"We do think that winning is important," said Mrs. Beasley. "But the ones trying the hardest are the ones that usually come in last," she said.

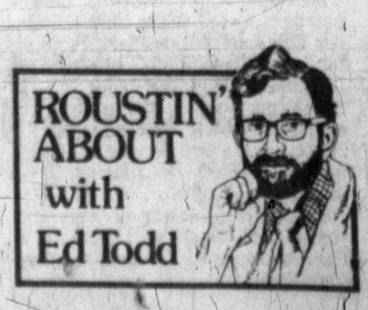

"And it shows that they've made progress and that's important — whether they come in fifth or sixth" or last.

And that's exactly how Mrs. Beasley, a special education teacher in Midland, viewed the Special Olympics swimming meet for the mentally retarded in Midland.

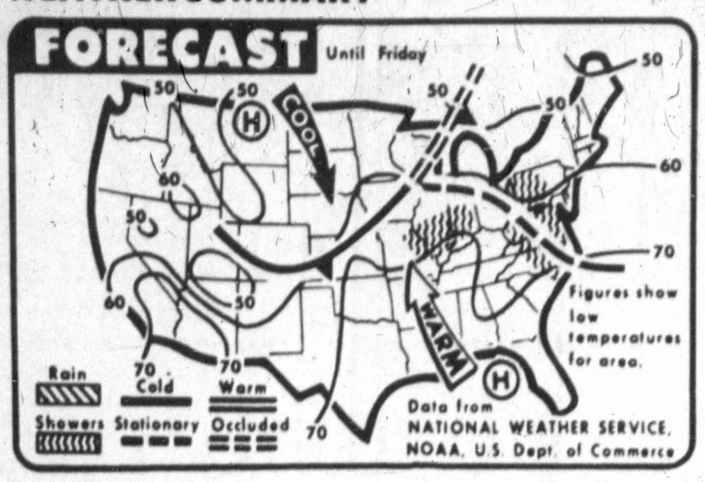

Ten young people, ages 12 to 18, entered the competition at the Mabee Memorial Swimming Pool here Wednesday.

No records were set, but there were some impressive swimming, good

New Mexico, Oklahoma

Oklahoma: Variable cloudiness with scattered showers and thunderstorms through Friday. Highs today and Friday 86 to 94. Lows tonight mid 60s Panhandle to low 70s southeast.

New Mexico: Scattered showers and thundershowers today and tonight. Little temperature change. Patchy fog and low clouds eastern plains tonight. Highs today mostly 70s and 80s. Lows tonight 40s and 50s mountains with 50s and 60s elsewhere. Friday widely scattered showers and thundershowers mainly mountains and east. A little warmer with highs 70s and 80s mountains to the 90s at lower elevations south.

Extended forecasts

West Texas — Scattered showers and thunderstorms Saturday through Monday. Continued warm and humid. Highs mid 80s to mid 90s except near 100 big bend valleys. Lows in the 60s and low 70s.

YMCA fund-raising campaign gets started

A campaign to raise funds for a new YMCA building in Midland was kicked off Wednesday with a formal press conference at the Central YMCA.

The announcement of the campaign was made by Allen K. Trobaugh, president of the board of directors of the Midland YMCA, and J. Durwood Owen, general director of the Midland YMCA.

The proposed building will be the home of Alamo Branch YMCA. The total cost of the building is estimated at $450,000. The Alamo Branch YMCA is trying to raise $60,000 to help finance construction of the building. The additional money needed will be raised by the Metropolitan Board of Directors of the Midland YMCA.

The building fund drive will be led by Carl Forest, campaign chairman. He will be working with Jerry Payne, chairman of the Alamo Branch board of managers, and John McVickar, executive director of the Alamo Branch YMCA.

The $60,000 goal must be reached by July 15. Volunteers will work throughout west Midland in an effort to raise the money. Payne said the people solicited will be reached through personal contact and through correspondence. Only people living in the area served by the Alamo Branch YMCA will be contacted.

Trobaugh said the new facility was approved by the Midland YMCA's long range planning board, which meets biannually. It was the opinion of the board that west Midland could support a new facility, Trobaugh said.

He said the proposed facility has received the "total support" of Midland school officials.

Research conducted by members of the Salvation Army here showed the greatest need in west Midland for a new facility, Trobaugh said.

The offices of the Alamo Branch "Y" are now at 3910 Cedar Spring in a repossessed FHA (Federal Housing Administration) house. Most of the programs sponsored by Alamo have taken place at the Alamo Junior High School or the Central YMCA. Yearly membership at the Alamo Branch is about 1,500 persons.

The proposed building will contain an indoor pool, a large all-purpose gym area, meeting and class rooms, an exercise room, a nursery, a large youth center and offices.

Midland having dry June

In spite of the rain for the past few days, Midland still is having a "dry" June.

Only .36 inch of rain has been recorded thus far this month, with 1.49 inches the normal amount for the month, the weatherman said. Since rainfall was below normal going into the month, also, the city needs more than two inches of rain to bring it to normal by the end of June.

The weatherman said, though, there is a 50 per cent chance of more rain tonight and a 30 per cent chance Friday.

Skies should be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms through Friday. Some of the thunderstorms may be locally heavy tonight, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Winds should be from the south at 5 to 15 mph tonight.

This morning's low was 68 degrees and Tuesday's high was 83 degrees. Tonight's low should be in the mid-60s and Friday's high is expected to reach the upper 80s.

Rain Wednesday was reported in Andrews, Lamesa, Big Lake, Big Spring, Rankin and Crane, with only Stanton not receiving any precipitation. Cloudy skies were reported throughout the area this morning.

Wreck kills 3 in family

ODESSA—Three members of a Pennsylvania family were killed and four others injured Wednesday morning when their motor home and a tractor-trailer rig collided east of here on Interstate 20.

The dead were identified as Harold J. Hayes, 49, Karen Hayes, 16, and Cynthia Hayes, 18, all of Handover, Pa.

Injured in the mishap were Yvonne Hayes, 43, who was listed in guarded condition early today at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, and Bryan Hayes, 14, Shelia Hayes, 12, and Kathy Hayes, 22 months, who were treated and released.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, the Hayes vehicle was headed east on I-20 and the tractor-trailer rig, driven by Merle McWhirter of Midway City, Calif., was headed west when the rig slid on the wet pavement and crossed the median into the path of the Hayes vehicle. The Hayes vehicle then struck the back axles of the truck according to DPS reports.

McWhirter was not injured in the mishap.

Harold Hayes and Karen Hayes were pronounced dead at the scene. Cynthia Hayes died about 1:30 p.m. at Medical Center Hospital, a DPS spokesman said.

The bodies were taken to Easterling Funeral Home in Odessa.

Theft being investigated

Midland police are investigating a theft at Huckabay Chevrolet, 4100 W. Wall Ave., where items valued at a total of $1,065 were taken sometime Tuesday night or Wednesday morning.

Don McAdams Jr. of 501 Cowden Ave. told police an eight-track tape player, two CB radios and 12 tapes, valued at a total of $574 were removed from his pickup parked at the business.

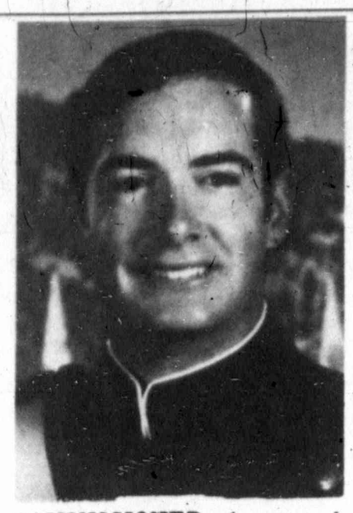

McAdams told police the vehicle was left unlocked.

Ken Hawkins, an employe of the dealership, told police two tires, two wheels, four wheel covers, a jack and two floor mats valued at a total of $491 were also taken from two new cars parked in a lot behind the business.

Trial gets under way

The trial of Nathaniel Hudson of the 1600 block of East Maple Street, charged with delivery of heroin, began this morning in 142nd District Court with selection of a jury.

COMMISSIONED A second lieutenant in the Air Force during June 1 graduation ceremonies at the Air Force Academy is Robert W. Gaston Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Gaston Sr. of 2807 Shandon. He received a B.S. degree from the Academy. A 1973 graduate of Lee High School, Gaston has been assigned temporarily to Shepherd AFB at Wichita Falls before reporting on a regular tour basis to a missile base at Little Rock, Ark.

RECENTLY GRADUATED from the Air Force Academy is Thomas H. Dollahite Jr., son of Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas H. Dollahite Sr. of 3607 Sinclair. An honor graduate, he received a B.S. degree and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Force. Dollahite, a 1973 graduate of Lee High School, will first report to Edwards AFB, Calif., and then will go to Vance AFB, Okla., for pilot training.

Kevin Harrington tried.

"That's beautiful," Lois Harrington told her 18-year-old son after he finished sixth in the 25-yard backstroke competition.

He was beaming. She kissed him gently on the cheek. He won a medal for his effort.

"(His) coordination is not developed yet where he can work both (his legs and arms) at the same time," the proud mother said.

He's improving.

The youngsters were competing in four events at the pool: the 25-yard free style, 50-yard free style, 25-yard backstroke and the 25-yard butterfly.

Parents, mostly mothers, and friends alike were cheering their favorites to complete each round.

And after each event, swimming coach Jim Abt presented the athletes with medals. It was the first Special Olympics try-outs in swimming for the youngsters, who will be entered in the state competition among the mentally retarded later this summer in Fort Worth.

Among those who came to watch the youngsters swim here was Ruben Culp. He took time off of work as a blue-suited bank security guard to watch his grandson, Sammy Newton, 12, swim and win medals.

"Sammy's my grandson," Culp said after the boy completed an event. "Me and my wife are raising him." He paused, as if getting ready to explain why Sammy wasn't the front-runner. "He's just a little bit overweight," Culp said.

"I just got off long enough to come and watch Sam swim," he said.

Among the parents there were Monice Adkins, who credits her daughter's swimming skill for saving her own life about two weeks ago.

They were on a family outing, a fishing trip, in the Pecos River, when their boat rammed into a rock. The daughter, Susan Adkins, 16, was thrown into the deep waters near Comstock.

"She swam back to the rock and stayed there until we could pick her up," Mrs. Adkins said. She said her husband, J. D., did not spot the rock in time to avoid it.

The first-place winners in the Special Olympics were Lynn Rhea, 14, in the boys' competition, and Mary Lou Murphy, 15, in the girls' division.

"Really, I learned how to swim underwater before I dog-paddled," said Mary Lou, who learned to swim years ago when her family was living in Wichita, Kan.

By her own admission (more or less), she's a good swimmer — and petite at that.

Fact is, in an informal, just-for-the-kicks swimming race, boys' champ Lynn Rhea outdistanced Mary Lou just "by this much" (about 18 inches) in one lap.

"Of course, he's got longer arms than I do," she said in explaining away his victory.

Other than swimming and doing lots of reading and playing, Mary Lou is undergoing on-the-job training to be a veterinarian's assistant.

"She's an animal lover," said her mother, Kathie Murphy.

"I love snakes," Mary Lou elaborated.

"But why, Mom?" asked Mary Lou who certainly knew better.

Boys' Division: Lynn Rhea, 14; Artie Rhyme, 12; Sammy Newton, 12; Wayne Morgan, 16; David Delone, 14, and Kevin Harrington, 18.

Girls' Division: Mary Lou Murphy, 15; Bonita Barber, 18; Kathy Kirkpatrick, 18, and Susan Adkins, 16.

Here's what Mrs. Beasley said of one of the "winners," Bonita Barber.

"Bonita is a super tryer," Mrs. Beasely said. "She came in last, but she tried hardest."

That, in a special sense, is winning.

Board votes against liquor

BIG SPRING — The Howard College board of trustees Tuesday reaffirmed college policy by unanimously voting to prohibit alcoholic beverage in the Dorothy Garrett Coliseum, which is under construction.

Alcoholic beverages are outlawed on campus.

Protesting the board's action was the Big Spring Tourist Development Council, which had donated $28,000 toward construction of the coliseum.

Generally, the council did not object to the ban on on-campus consumption, however. But the group did want alcoholic beverages to be permitted for nonstudent convention groups in the coliseum.

The council gave the college the funds on the premise that the coliseum would help promote tourism here.

The Shriners, which previously requested use of the facility in 1978, withdrew that request after the trustees made their decision on the issue.

Plea brings probation

A Midland man was sentenced to 10 years probation after he pleaded guilty Wednesday in 238th District Court to a robbery charge.

Billy Gene Owens of the 100 block of South Lamesa Road pleaded guilty to the robbery charge.

Edward Charles Price, no address given, pleaded guilty to burglary and arson and received two 10-year probation sentences, with the two to run concurrently. He also was ordered to pay $300 restitution.

Colwell gets USAF medal

ODESSA — Dr. James L. Colwell has been awarded the United States Air Force Meritorious Service Medal for his service in establishing Detached Training Site 25 at Bergstrom Air Force Base, Tex., and as area assistant director in the Air Force Intelligence Service at Bolling Air Force Base, Washington, D.C., from February 1975 to January 1977.

Colwell is professor of American Studies and American Literature at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Hearing slated in alleged rape

A hearing is scheduled Friday morning to determine whether a youth apprehended in the alleged rape of a north Midland woman June 14 should be detained.

The 16-year-old youth currently is in the custody of his parents and attorney. The hearing, requested by County Attorney Leslie Acker, will determine whether he should be detained for 10 days.

Acker said he requested the hearing because "as of Tuesday morning, I felt like I had derived sufficient evidence to press charges."

He said he has reached no decision on a recommendation of whether the case should be transferred to district court or heard in juvenile court.

HEW rejection board topic

BIG SPRING — The U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare's rejection of the Big Spring school board's desegregation plan will be discussed tonight in a closed session of the board.

Trustees may confer with legal counsel. However, school officials have declined to publicly conment on HEW's rejection.

Assistant Supt. Harold Bentley, however, said HEW's objections are rooted in Bauer School.

Bauer, which has a 98 per cent minority enrollment, was to handle the Head Start program, a full-day kindergarten and the first grades from two schools.

Women pilots to land here

On July 2, approximately 150 women pilots participating in the Powder Puff Derby Commemorative Flight of the Transcontinental All-Women Air Race will make a required stop at Midland Air Terminal.

This year's flight is the 30th all-woman transcontinental air race. The race will trace the route of the original flight in 1947.

That race, which had two entries, traveled a route from Palm Springs, Calif., to Tampa, Fla. The trip took 21 hours and 45 minutes.

The 1977 derby will not be a timed race. The fliers will leave Palm Springs July 1, and will arrive in Tampa July 4. The pilots are required to make overnight stops, as well as several check-in stops each day.

Charges dropped

The district attorney's office made the request because insufficient evidence existed to obtain a conviction.

Hinson was indicted in April 1975.

By DAVID LAMB
The Los Angeles Times

NAIROBI, Kenya — Was President Idi Amin of Uganda enjoying another of his little hoaxes? Was he honeymooning with his wife Sarah? Was he on a secret mission to another country? Was he dead or wounded? Was he really missing at all?

Nobody, it seemed, knew. All that was certain was that for the third straight day Wednesday, Amin's spokesman at the statehouse in Entebbe repeated a bizarre statement: "Our president as been missing since Friday. We are still searching for him."

The government radio station and newspaper, however, made no mention of his alleged absence. Observers pointed out that if Amin was indeed missing, his spokesman most certainly never would admit it. That raised the question of what they — or more probably what Amin himself — hoped to accomplish by announcing his disappearance.

One possible clue: Just a year ago, after escaping an assassination attempt, Amin similarily "disappeared." While the world pondered his fate, he made a sudden triumphant entrance to the Organization of African Unity meeting in Mauritius. Some observers speculated that he might repeat the performance at this year's 13-day OAU meeting which begins this week in Libreville, Gabon.

(Audrey June Taylor of New York radio station WWRL reported by telephone from Kampala, Uganda, that she was allowed to talk by phone with Amin. "He told me he was alive and well and relaxing and vacationing on a belated honeymoon with his wife Sarah," she said, according to Associated Press.

(Mrs. Taylor is one of eight black Americans visiting Uganda at the invitation of the government. She reported that Kampala was completely normal.)

Despite conflicting reports reaching Nairobi, it appears clear that an attempt was made on Amin's life Saturday morning as he was driving near Entebbe. Diplomatic sources said that he escaped the ambush unscathed, and other sources reported that he was seen driving a Volkswagen Monday.

The attempted assassination reportedly involved some Bugandan elements in the military. During the weekend, numerous gun battles were reported in Entebbe, apparently between loyalist and dissident army troops.

An American reporter in Uganda says Amin told her by telephone Wednesday that he is honeymooning with his fifth wife two years after their marriage. (AP Laserphoto)

Bankruptcy suit could affect nuclear nations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Bankruptcy proceedings filed by a federal agency against a key producer of atomic fuel may disrupt nuclear programs in foreign countries and could lead to millions of dollars in international lawsuits.

Carter administration officials said Wednesday that experts from the State Department and Justice Department are investigating international and legal problems arising from the failure of the U.S. Nuclear Corp. of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

A bankruptcy petition against the firm was filed without fanfare by the federal Energy Research and Development Agency last month.

Sources say Brazil, South Africa and some other long-time buyers of the company's highly enriched uranium are asking the State Department about the bankruptcy proceeding and obviously are concerned that their major source of a special type of reactor fuel may be cut off.

Brazil and South Africa already had made down payments to U.S. Nuclear for future deliveries of nuclear fuel, sources say. Now the countries may find their money and fuel tied up in bankruptcy court.

ERDA, the corporation's biggest creditor, filed the bankruptcy petition May 4, officials said. U.S. Nuclear was closed, but its supply of enriched uranium, already processed for export, was properly stored and sealed, the officials said.

U.S. Nuclear, State Department officials say, is the only U.S. firm using a special metallurgical process to produce fuel elements for a particular kind of research reactor exported by the United States.

An ERDA team from Washington now is checking into the corporation's records to determine how many countries paid U.S. Nuclear for fuel not yet delivered. Sources say they believe at least a dozen countries have been dealing through the closed company.

Shutdown of U.S. Nuclear complicates the task of various government agencies that must advise President Carter when he decides whether or not to approve sales of enriched uranium to foreign countries. Carter said in April he personally will screen large orders for enriched uranium, which can be used to build nuclear weapons.

Some of the foreign requests for nuclear fuel now being considered are loaded with heavy political overtones.

Brezhnev repeats concern over U.S.

The Washington Post

PARIS — Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev Wednesday ended a three-day visit to France that has served as a sounding board for his concern over the troubled state of American-Russian relations.

Repeatedly in his talks with French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing this week, Brezhnev seemed to beam his message toward Washington as much as toward his French audience here. The Carter administration was in effect a silent partner in the French-Russian summit.

Hovering at the edge of the Russian effort to intensify dialogue with France has been an unspoken question that clearly preoccupies the Soviet leader: What would detente look like and be worth without the Americans?

Brezhnev, who reportedly read most of his remarks to Giscard but interspersed them with long digressions, set the tone of the summit in the first encounter at the Rambouillet chateau Monday afternoon. The Russian leader talked for two hours and 15 minutes of the three-hour meeting.

As he told Giscard that detente "is the only practical approach to avoid a confrontation in this nuclear age," Brezhnev suddenly stopped and asked the French leader who in the delegation was "in charge of propaganda."

When the delegation spokesman was pointed out, Brezhnev asked him to be sure to tell newsmen and the public exactly what he had said on this point.

Russian and French spokesmen provided far more detailed accounts of the meeting than is usually the case here, including precise quotations.

Publicly warning during a dinner toast Tuesday night that a renewed arms race could wreck "the fine words and declarations of attachment to peace," Brezhnev privately told Giscard Wednesday at their final talk that he was deeply concerned by the continuing failure of the Americans and Russians to reach agreement on strategic arms limitations.

French officials were authorized to convey this, and an earlier Brezhnev assessment that no progress had been made in recent U.S.-Soviet meetings on strategic arms, to newsmen.

The two leaders signed a joint declaration and separate statements on detente and nuclear proliferation before Brezhnev left late in the afternoon for Moscow. The documents added little to previously stated positions, but Giscard echoed Brezhnev's private concern by saying that their joint call for "intensified" efforts for detente was important because "it comes at a time when doubt is being expressed around the world as to the very concept" of detente.

The Soviet Union has in recent months begun publicly citing Israel as one of the countries of the Middle East that have a right to "recognized and secure" frontiers.

Progress in Paris

Thirty years ago this month Secretary of State George C. Marshall announced that the United States was planning a massive economic program to assist the postwar recovery of Western Europe.

References to the Marshall Plan are being drawn widely today in the wake of the Conference on International Cooperation. This is the so-called North-South talk in Paris which is intended to improve relations between nine industrialized Western nations and the 19 countries that supply them with raw materials.

The analogy to the Marshall Plan implies that if assistance from a wealthy nation could help Western Europe recover after World War II, similar help from the world's richest Western countries could solve the problems of poor Latin American, Asian and African nations.

Unfortunately, the problem is not that simple. The Marshall Plan was temporary and directed at nations that had a tradition of industrialization. Today, underdeveloped nations want massive transfers of wealth from wealthier nations on a permanent basis, as well as a complete stabilization of commodity prices.

The United States and its Western economic partners were able to offer only relatively modest sums to assist in debt repayment and to stabilize a few natural resource prices.

As a result, many are calling the conference, which has been in progress for the last 18 months, a failure because it did not achieve dramatic results. A particular disappointment was the refusal of the underdeveloped nations to establish a permanent international dialogue on energy prices, which could have pressured oil producers to exercise restraint. No such dialogue exists at the present time.

While it is difficult to radiate optimism over the Paris Conference on International Cooperation, we wouldn't classify it as a total loss.

In the year and a half of discussions, Western nations did gain a new awareness of the problems of poorer countries. And they did take some positive economic steps to ease the economic burdens on them. The Western concessions were not up to the expectations of the so-called Third World. However, the Third World itself made no concessions at all.

Nevertheless, we believe that there is a growing realization in the Third World that there is no free lunch. We doubt that the problems of the underdeveloped nations would be solved if the bulk of the wealth of the eight rich nations attending the conference were distributed evenly among the 19 poorer nations.

Third World progress will come when social, political and economic climates are developed to the point where the seed assistance offered by richer nations produces positive improvements. As the Paris conference exhibited, that day has not yet arrived.

But there is no doubt that there will be future Paris conferences in due time despite the suspended state of the last one. The need for international cooperation among the nations with resources and those that fabricate them is so intense that future conferences are inevitable.

Return engagement

It is great, indeed, to learn that the Board for Lease of University Lands has selected Midland as the site of its next auction sale of University Lands oil and gas leases.

You will recall the last sale was held here in March, the first time ever that the sale had been held outside of Austin. It was a great and most successful event, with Midland interests going all-out in taking care of arrangements and special events.

Jim Zimmerman, geologist in charge of the headquarters office of University Lands here, said all three members of the Board for Lease were so impressed with the March sale here that they determined "another is a must."

This is good news for Midland and Midlanders, and all residents of this Headquarters City of the Permian Basin Empire most certainly will welcome the return engagement, on Dec. 7.

Members of the board are State Land Commissioner Bob Armstrong of Austin, chairman; Dan C. Williams of Dallas and Dr. Sterling F. Fly Jr. of Uvalde.

J. Carter dances to Fidel Castro's tune

By VIRGIL PINKLEY
Copley News Service

Virgil Pinkley

Despite all Cuban Premier Fidel Castro has said and done, Washington apparently is bent on lifting any embargoes against Cuba and extending formal diplomatic relations.

This comes at a time when Castro still is exporting revolution to various parts of Africa.

Up until now he has laid down the terms on which normal relationships may be resumed and he is telling the United States what we must or must not do.

He makes no reference to the extensive confiscation of American property and investments in Cuba.

His revolutionary soldiers grabbed just about everything in sight which was owned by 1,000 American companies or individuals, with a total value of $1.8 billion. It was the largest uncompensated expropriation of American property in U.S. history.

Castro took over bank branches, sugar plantations, hotels, shoe and tire factories, farms and homes as well as gambling casinos. Their legitimate owners were not paid one thin dime.

It is estimated that 17 years later the value of these properties, plus interest at 6 per cent, has risen to a total loss to Americans of something like $4 billion.

Apparently this fact does not weigh heavily with the U.S. State Department or the Carter administration as they push forward to resume normal relations with the Communist government.

The American property was owned by 797 American companies and 6,625 individuals. At the time Castro made his grab U.S. investments in Cuba represented about one-eighth of all we had in Latin America. The breakdown shows that these investments included public utilities, about 15 per cent in agriculture, 12 per cent in manufacturing, and that the total sale from Cuban subsidiaries and branches of U.S. firms yielded more than $700 million annually just before the revolution.

Some of the largest losers included $109 million, plus $104 million in interest, to the Borden North American Sugar Industries. Other large claimants are Hilton International Hotels, Proctor & Gamble, Firestone Tire and Rubber, United Brands, Atlantic Richfield, W.F. Woolworth, Uniroyal and Continental Can. These groups are lobbying heavily against resumption of trade with Cuba.

One of the strongest protests comes from a group calling itself the Joint Corporate Committee on Cuban Claims. It is made up of 50 major American corporations with claims against Cuba totaling approximately $800 million, and with interest for more than 16 years added, the total becomes $1.5 billion.

Recently the announcement was made that the two countries would exchange diplomats for the first time in 16 years and that Castro would release 10 Americans jailed on drug charges. The diplomatic agreement enables the United States to send about a dozen diplomats to Havana and the Cubans will have the same number in Washington. The latter undoubtedly will serve in the dual role of spies as well as diplomats.

Even though the Carter administration is pushing this love feast with Cuba there may be strong congressional opposition. At this late hour many Americans are getting tired of being kicked around incessantly by upstart nations and dictators. Whenever we resume relations with them we seem to make the major contributions and they expect us to do so.

Even if Havana admits it owes Americans large compensation for the seized property it is difficult to know from what sources Castro would obtain the necessary funds. At present Russia is subsidizing the Castro government at the rate of approximately $4 million daily, which comes to more than $1 billion annually.

The Russians, as part of their subsidies to Castro, buy most of their sugar from Cuba, paying as high as six times the average world prices.

It is expected that Castro will file counterclaims against the United States for asserted damage which resulted from the Bay of Pigs invasion fiasco, our trade embargo and subsequent acts which Castro labels as "aggressive."

At the time the break began between Cuba and the United States we held about $30 million of Cuban assets, mostly cash in banks. This sum has been frozen.

There is some feeling on Capitol Hill that any resumed relationships with Havana should be confined, at least in the beginning, to such items as medicines and agricultural products.

WASHINGTON MERRY-GO-ROUND

Village justice could be answer

By JACK ANDERSON and LES WHITTEN

WASHINGTON — Not long ago, the Shah of Iran spoke to Chief Justice Warren Burger about modernizing the judicial processes in his country. Apologetically, the Shah explained that Iran's system of justice was primitive. In the villages, he said, disputes were resolved by councils of elders. There were no courts, no lawyers, no judicial review.

The Chief Justice confided afterward that he would like to send a legal team to Iran to investigate village justice. The American experts, he suggested, might learn something.

Burger has become increasingly dismayed with the complex legal system in the United States. The lawyers are entangling the populace in litigation, bogging down the courts and substituting legal manipulation for justice.

"The harsh truth," he warned the American Bar Association last month, "is that we may well be on our way to a society overrun by hordes of lawyers, hungry as locusts, and brigades of judges in numbers never before contemplated."

Across the land, lawyers lurk behind the bushes waiting to pounce upon the passers-by, drag them into court and drain them of their assets. Most lawsuits benefit only the lawyers, who collect fat fees and leave both parties worse off.

Attorneys also dominate the government. The founding fathers intended that Congress, for example, should be representative of the people. But the lawyers have taken it over; they hold more than 300 of the 535 seats.

Attorneys also populate the various federal agencies, boards, commissions, committees and councils. Both in and out of government, Washington has more lawyers per capita than any city in he world. The lawyers in government produce complex legislation and regulations, which create business for the lawyers out of government.

Today, the confused citizen needs an attorney to make out a tax return, sell a home, settle an estate and protect him from the proliferating pitfalls that the government lawyers produce. Here are our observations:

— The nation is overrun with lawyers who, lured by the scent of the green, congregate where the big money is. They thrive, for example, on corporate law. Indeed, many a corporate president began as the general counsel. Yet the nation's 29 million poor are suffering from a lawyer shortage. An estimated 85 per cent of their legal needs are still unmet.

— All too often, the legal decision goes to the client with the most money. He can outmaneuver and outlast his poorer opponent in the courts. It is not uncommon, corporate attorneys tell us, for complex cases to drag on for more than a decade. The client who has to count his money may not survive the legal skirmishing. The poor often cannot afford to seek redress of grievances for even the most basic injustices.

— Most lawyers price themselves out of the average American's range. Their hourly rates start around $35, quickly reach $100 and continue on up into the stratosphere. Once the eminent Washington attorney, Clark Clifford, made a rare appearance on Capitol Hill for Charles Revson, the head of Revlon cosmetics. Clifford coached his client carefully, then sat silently at his side while Revson answered congressmen's questions. For this appearance, Clifford sent Revson a bill for $25,000.

— The legal processes have become encumbered with procedural rigmarole — unnecessary routines that are designed more to enrich the lawyers than to serve the public. It costs a small fortune, for example, to clear the title for a home purchase. And the probate processes have become so encrusted that the attorneys often wind up with a greater share of an inheritance than the heirs.

— Attorneys are supposed to be society's peacemakers and problem solvers. Too many devote themselves to the opposite; they are troublemakers who create problems. They operate on the theory, apparently, that the more trouble they can stir up, the more law business there will be. The wise judge Learned Hand once remarked: "I must say that as a litigant I should dread a lawsuit beyond almost anything else short of sickness and death."

— Most lawyers, in the opinion of the judges who watch them in action, are incompetent. Chief Justice Burger has noted: "Many judges in general jurisdiction trial courts have stated to me that fewer than 25 per cent of the lawyers appearing before them are genuinely qualified."

— Some 28,000 young graduates will pour out of the nation's law schools this year. This is nearly double the number who graduated 10 years ago. With few exceptions, they are licensed, according to Burger, "without the slightest inquiry into their capacity to perform the practical functions of a counselor or an advocate." They seek experience on the staffs of public defenders and prosecutors. The lawyers who represent the poor and the public, therefore, are often still in the process of learning how to try cases.

— Lawyers profess that they regulate and discipline themselves. The truth is, however, that the disciplinary machinery is more often used to protect them from public embarrassment. The late Supreme Court Justice Tom Clark reported after an investigation in 1970 that professional misconduct went virtually unregulated in most of the 50 states

NICK THIMMESCH

Texas' John B. Connally continues to punch away

WASHINGTON — John Connally punches away at Jimmy Carter and takes a few swipes at the GOP congressional leadership as well, thus leading any rational soul to conclude that he is using a "go round" route to build a following and give 1980 a presidential go.

The best received political vapors these days are the independent ones, and Connally, who converted to Republicanism in 1973 after 35 years as a Democrat, is saying things which irk Democrats and disquiet establishment Republicans.

On Meet The Press Sunday, he spoke sarcastically on how the Democratic Congress was investigating itself on the South Korean scandal, among other things.

Connally scored Jimmy Carter as a "one term" President who "overpromised" on everything, botched the energy crisis and is guilty of gross inconsistency with his "human rights" stand.

And he turned away the view of John Anderson, chairman of the House Republican Conference, that Connally was "a symbol of the past," by saying, "That's about the kindest thing said about me recently that I can remember."

Connally believes the Republican leadership has too long talked in cliches, mostly about conservatism, and fails to relate how Democratic programs actually hurt the very people they are supposed to help, namely, those in the middle- and lower-income brackets. He points out that while President Carter has high poll ratings, on specific issues — foreign policy, unemployment and taxes — the "margin narrows" to "a base I think spells trouble for him," one which could be exploited by Republicans.

He criticizes Carter for providing no incentives to create additional energy supplies, claims that the oil industry "has become a political whipping boy" and thus wants to get into other businesses not vulnerable to such criticism.

He gets exercised over Carter talking human rights and punishing nations not measuring up to our standards, while at the same time talking about normalizing relations with Cuba ("This fellow Castro, he's a great personification of human rights, isn't he?"). Connally similarly, is dead set against any recognition of Communist Vietnam which he says has killed hundreds of thousands of people and torn families apart.

To make the independent pitch, though, Connally argues for a one-term, six-year Presidency; a limit of eight years for a senator or representative; mandatory retirement of judges at age 70, and reconfirmation by the Senate every 10 years; citizens' courts to settle small cases because "people are sick of lawyers, tired of their charges and don't feel like they can afford them." He also stumps for a constitutional amendment prohibiting deficit spending except in time of war or national emergency.

Like all converts, Connally sometimes finds it necessary to prove his faith. He ridicules Atty. Gen. Griffin Bell for indicting an FBI agent while saying "Let Congress investigate themselves." He scorns members of the House Ethics Committee who won't reveal whether they received any gifts or benefits from the South Korean government.

When Connally spoke at a state Republican dinner in Dallas recently, he unleashed some of the most biting remarks heard yet about Jimmy Carter and the Democrats.

"I'm not up on all the inner thoughts of the Carter Administration," Connally cracked. "My copy of Playboy didn't come this month." He feels that Carter's pay should be hiked from $200,000 to $400,000 "because as long as a man is campaigning he's entitled to matching funds."

The way Carter talked liberal and conservative, Connally jibed, he was the only man who "campaigned for two years with his fingers crossed behind his back." As for Carter's seemingly permanent smile, Connally said, "I think his mother found him in a box of Cheer."

While saying it is all right for a President to send members of his family as his personal representatives, Connally argues the only condition is that they are qualified. In this context, he said Carter "must be saving Amy for the SALT talks in case Brother Billy can't go."

As for Secretary of State Cyrus Vance, well, Connally says, he "serves in that capacity when Andrew Young gets laryngitis." Connally blames Young on Carter and says the "Lone Ranger" foreign policy candidate Carter criticized has become a "Mickey Mouse" policy.

And so it goes. Connally whacks away at the Administration with heavy and light weapons, causing congressional Republicans to wince and hunker down even more than they hunker down in fear of the ruling Democrats.

House offers significant defeats of Carter's aid package stands

By MARY RUSSELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter was handed a significant defeat on the House floor Wednesday as the House voted 295 to 115 to prevent international banks and lending institutions from using money contributed by the United States for aid to Cuba, Indochina or the African nations of Uganda, Mozambique or Ethiopia.

Carter, in a letter to Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr. (D-Mass.), had said that passage of such an amendment would, "in effect, jeopardize continued U.S. participation in the banks." He went on to say, "Specifying that U.S. funds could not be used for loans to these countries by the multilateral development institutions would in all probability make it impossible for these institutions to accept our funds." He did not explain why.

Bilateral aid to Indochina, Cuba and the three African nations was already prohibited by the $7 billion foreign aid appropriation bill the House was considering, but Rep. C. W. (Bill) Young (R-Fla.) wanted to prohibit U.S. multilateral aid, given through six international banks and lending institutions.

Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.), supporting Young, said the banks were just providinv a "circuitous" way to give U.S. money to Indochina and the other nations. Rep. B. F. Sisk (D-Calif.) said Congress was not being "sincere" with the American people by telling them it was not aiding those countries bilaterally, but then allowing multilateral aid.

Rep. David R. Obey (D-Wis.), leading the fight for the Carter administration on the floor, said, the international institutions were set up as a way of "depoliticizing" foreign aid programs and as a way of "sharing the burden" of foreign aid with other countries, which also contribute to the institutions.

If such a limit as Young wanted were put on, the banks would probably have to reject U.S. contributions, Obey said.

"Baloney, I say let's find out," Young shot back. "Let's put the limit in there. I say the banks will take our money anyway." Under the bill, the United States is scheduled to contribute to six international banks and institutions, such as the Asian Development Bank, $2.123 billion for fiscal 1978.

Carter suffered a second defeat as the House continued to refuse to allow him to back away from his strong rhetoric on human rights.

The House voted 233 to 180 to delete $700,000 for military training assistance for Argentina on grounds that the Argentine military junta has a consistent record of gross violations of human rights because it imprisons and tortures Argentine citizens.

Despite his strong stand on human rights, Carter wanted the aid to stay in the bill since it gave him some leverage over the Agentine regime and the President needed flexibility in dealing with such countries.

But Rep. Edward R. Roybal (D-Calif.), who offered the amendment to delete the funds, said, "How long are we going to use the excuse that the President needs flexibility?" He said the situation in Argentina has been deteriorating for months.

Military assistance funds for Nicaragua had already been deleted by the Appropriations Committee on human rights grounds, but after a strong lobbying effort with agents paid for by the Nicaraguan government an attempt to put the funds back in is expected Thursday when the House continues to work on the bill.

Before quitting for the night — it will resume work on the bill Thursday — the House also voted 359 to 33 to bar payments of any reparations to Vietnam.

Rep. Lester L. Wolff (D-N.Y.), who offered the amendment, said he was doing so to resolve any question left because of a letter by former President Nixon that promised $3.5 billion in reparations if various conditions were met. Wolff said the question was probably moot, since the conditions were never met, but he wanted Congress to go on record as opposing the reparations anyway.

However, in an emotional speech, first-termer Rep. Ted Weiss (D-N.Y.) said this country owed reparations to Vietnam and that we had given our word to help rehabilitate the country and we should not go back on our word.

Attorney refuses comment on Quinlan's condition

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — A spokesman for the family of Karen Anne Quinlan has refused further comment on the condition of the comatose woman after confirming that she is still clinging to life.

"We've learned after two years that you can't make predictions," said Paul Armstrong, the family attorney. Armstrong said the family would have nothing more to say until Miss Quinlan's death.

Her father, Joseph Quinlan, slipped out a back door of the Morris View Nursing Home here early today. He was escorted by several men who tried to shield him from the reporters and photographers outside.

Both Armstrong and the Rev. Thomas Trapasso, the family priest, have said the Quinlans want privacy during their vigil.

"They have been agonizing with this situation for two years," Father Trapasso said Wednesday. "All they want is their privacy and the privilege of being a family by themselves."

Miss Quinlan, 23, who lapsed into a coma two years ago after mixing alcohol and barbituates, was taken off a respirator in May 1976 after the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled the state could not require the use of artificial means to keep persons alive if there was no chance they would resume a semblance of life.

Police pursue lead from photos

LOCUST GROVE, Okla. (AP) — Police say they have gotten "a substantial lead which will be pursued" from photographs, showing three women at a wedding, found near the bodies of three Girl Scouts slain at a summer camp.

"We want to know how the pictures taken at a wedding far away from Locust Grove came to where we found them, how this wierdo, psychotic, if it was, had these pictures out there," a state crime bureau spokesman said.

The women in the pictures were identified Wednesday after television stations and newspapers throughout the state published the photos, which were released by the crime bureau Tuesday.

Crime bureau Director Jeff Laird emphasized that the three women "are totally innocent" of any complicity in the slayings.

The three were friends of a couple married in 1968 but did not know each other, officials said.

The three scouts, aged 8, 9 and 10, were killed on June 13 during the first night of a camping trip at Camp Scott near here. Two were beaten to death and one was strangled.

Automakers suspend use of Tris-treated fabrics

DETROIT (AP) — The nation's automakers don't believe motorists are endangered by car upholstery containing Tris, the fire-retardant chemical linked to some forms of cancer. But as a precaution, they're dropping its use and hope to eliminate it entirely by next year.

Each of the four major automakers — General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors — says it has used Tris to treat upholstery fabrics in millions of car seats since the fall of 1972 because of a government safety regulation requiring that the fabrics be fire-resistant.

Spokesmen for the makers said there were no indications that employes who handle fabrics treated with Tris are subjected to any health hazards. A United Auto Workers official agreed.

Concern about Tris developed this past April, when the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission banned it from children's sleepwear because of tests showing that the chemical causes cancer in animals and can be absorbed through children's skin.

A spokesman for GM's Fisher Body division, which has five plants that cut and sew seat upholstery, said car occupants would not come in direct contact with the chemical because only the inside of the covers are treated with Tris.

In addition, he said Tris is only used on cloth covers, not vinyl. It is also used in tough material strips installed under the seats to reinforce the covers and on some cloth headliners — the material covering the interior roof of the car.

"We began phasing out Tris last April after we read about the problem with sleepwear," the Fisher spokesman said.

He said substitute fire-retardants have been found for all but one type of cloth seat and GM plans to eliminate Tris from that one as soon as a chemical now being tested is approved for use.

Bill Horner, a top UAW official and member of a joint UAW-GM national health and safety committee, estimates that no more than 300 GM cutters and sewers regularly handle Tris-coated materials at Fisher plants in Grand Rapids, Livonia and Tecumseh, Mich., and Cleveland and Euclid, Ohio.

Horner said tests by the National Cancer Institute showed the chances of any GM employe who handled Tris getting cancer are "one in 200,000, and that's under the absolutely worst possible situation of constant exposure, which does not occur."

Hassle, no song

But a couple of argumentative shareholders forced this year's meeting to run overtime and the singing of the fight song was canceled. However, songsheets were made available for everyone to take home.

Government suggests flu vaccination plan

By MICHAEL UNGER
Newsday

NEW YORK — The federal government has issued its recommendations for flu shots this fall, and they don't include vaccination against swine flu, which was supposed to be around last winter but wasn't.

They do, however, include the A-Victoria and B-Hong Kong flu strains, prevailing flu bugs in this country during the flu season, which generally runs from November through March.

This year, the U.S. Public Health Service, a branch of the U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Department, has returned to its previous policy of recommending the shots only for the so-called "high-risk" category — chronically ill adults and children and all persons 65 and older who are not allergic to the shots. Chronically ill women who are pregnant are being advised to consult their physicians before taking any shots.

And this year, for the first time, the public health service's advisory committee on immunization practices is warning that 10 of every one million persons vaccinated for any type of flu will come down with Guillain-Barre syndrome.

Vermont Congressman will take staff 'home' to meet constituents

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Congress takes its month-long August recess, Sen. Patrick J. Leahy plans to pack up his Washington office and set up operations in Vermont.

"To me, it is as important for the members of my staff to have the kind of constant contact with Vermonters we serve as I do," said the Democratic senator.

"I intend to close down my Washington office and bring staff members back home to work in Vermont," he added.

Leahy has a Washington staff of 18, most of whom are Vermonters. An aide said all but one or two had volunteered to take part in the experiment in bringing Congress home to its constituents.

An aide said participation was voluntary because each staff member will have to pay his own transportation and living expenses while in Vermont.

But anyone who has spent a hot, humid August in Washington probably could be convinced to make whatever sacrifice was necessary to move his job to the cool, green mountains of Vermont.

Sen. Barry Goldwater stood by his desk on the Senate floor and prepared to speak against President Carter's plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea.

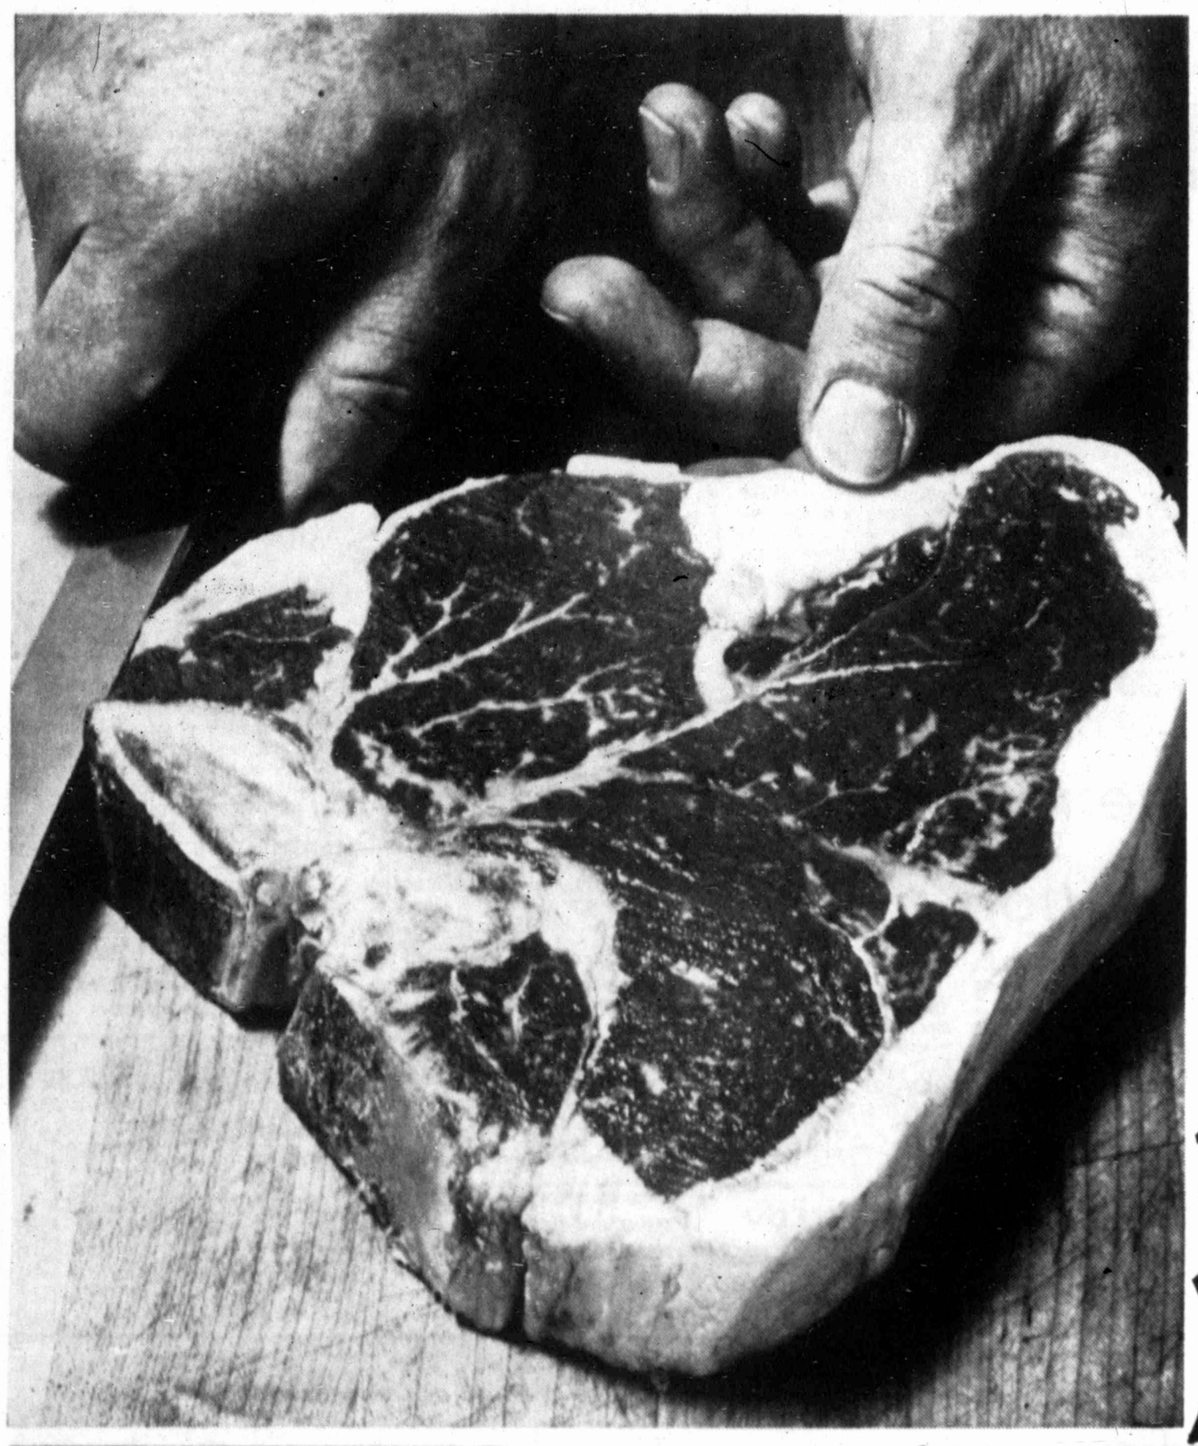

He reached for the lapel microphone attached to each senator's desk. The Arizona Republican fidgeted with his microphone for a few moments and then said, "This damn thing hasn't worked since they put it in. I've asked them to fix it 600 times. I'm an electronic expert and I get the bad one."

•

The issue before the Senate was whether to contribute money to the United Nations University. The junior senator from California, former professor of semantics S.I. Hayakawa, told his senatorial colleagues, "I feel the basis of my lifelong experience as a professor, and knowing the ambitions, weaknesses and strengths of the professorate."

Hayakawa went on to say he thought the U.N. university was "one vast international academic boondoggle."

"The reason I say this," he added, "and when I speak of professors, I speak of myself among others, is that one of our ambitions as professors, to prove ourselves to be really professors of great distinction, is to have jobs where we do not have to teach; a research institute is an ideal institution in which to get such a position."

Move from convent to coven ends 'metamorphosis'

BURTON, Ohio (AP) — Bonnie Huffman has forsaken her nun's wimple for a witch's pentagram.

She was known as Sister Geralyn during her 11 years with the Order of St. Francis; but she now is a full-fledged Dianic witch.

The metamorphosis, she said, began when she grew tired of power struggles within the convent and within the church. She went from convent to coven when she discovered that her brand of witchcraft is a religion which practices "a sophisticated brand of social justice for its citizens."

When discussing witchcraft, her first warning is not to confuse it with devil worship and black magic. "We don't believe in a devil," she said.

Ms. Huffman explained that the Dianic order has a feminist tradition and focuses its worship on the creative force in the universe identified as the Goddess by its followers. It is also referred to as the Old Religion.

When Ms. Huffman left the convent, she received her doctorate in American studies at Case Western Reserve University. She lives in Burton and has been teaching in the honors and experimental college at Kent State University since 1971.

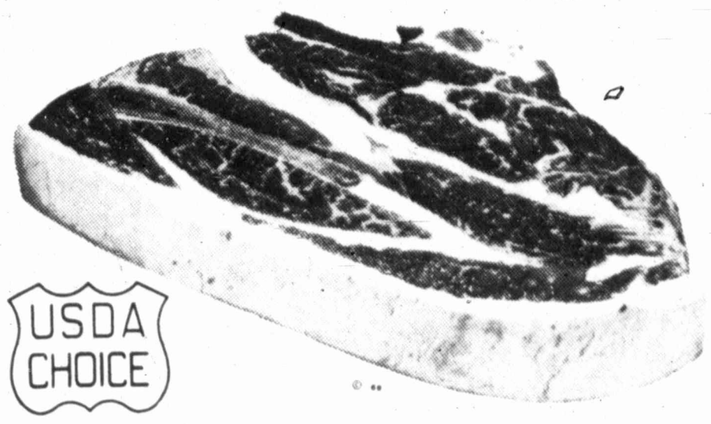

"I always wanted to teach, and nuns were always romanticized at home and at school. I figured the best way to teach was to be a nun." She attended parochial schools in Columbus and Toledo and then entered the Mother House of the Order of St. Francis in Joliet, Ill., where she soon became restive and rebellious.

"When I left the convent, I continued to attend church for awhile but became more and more disillusioned with what I regarded as a continuance of a philosophy of social justice, but the practice of discrimination in many areas."

She says she's content with her new religion. "There's lots of room for creativity in witchcraft. Some witches are herbalists, others are good at divination. It depends on the individual. At the center of it all, however, is worship of the Goddess. Powers we learn to tap are byproducts of being witches."

She said she's writing a book about her experiences as a nun and as a witch. One of the themes, she said, is to get witchcraft "out of the broom-closet and into the mainstream."

Copenhagen zoo displays brown rats in sewer

LONDON (AP) — Brown rats, the scourge of man for centuries, have gone on display in a European zoo — with a mock-up sewer for a home.

Per Seaton, an official of Copenhagen Zoo, says in the "International Zoo Yearbook" published by the Zoological Society of London that despite its vast numbers, the brown rat is not a common sight, living as it does underground beneath the cities. So the zoo had the idea of displaying the animal in its "natural" surroundings.

Seaton and his colleagues toured Copenhagen's sewers for ideas and then designed an exhibit to enable visitors to look directly into the rats' home, to see them behaving as they might had they remained hidden from human eyes.

The exhibit had to be escapeproof, so the staff made a 22-foot, imitation sewer tunnel from iron sheeting, in the shape of a big "C," with a breeding chamber at one end and a feeding chamber at the other — "an incentive for the rats to run up and down the tunnel with greater frequency," Seaton said.

Water, circulated by an electric pump, covers the sewer floor and, as extra touches of realism, the interior surface is cement-coated. Bits of broken pipe, rubble and old clothing are scattered on the floor. The exhibit is located in a gloomy storage cellar under dim lighting, which "does create a distinctly dramatic effect... and the total impression that it generates is one of calculated unpleasantness," Seaton said.

Above the breeding and feeding sections are dome-shaped acrylic skylights, inviting onlookers to put their heads in to survey the sewer from the interior. The skylights are at different heights so that small children can use them.

Seaton said the staff thought that their first rats — obtained from Denmark's State Pest Laboratories — would take about eight days to get accustomed to their new environment and come out of hiding.

"Rats are a highly suspicious species and in fact it took a full two months before they had completely acclimatized and had begun to behave in a natural manner," he said.

The rats are thriving. The original three multiplied in 18 months to 40 "very active rats and those born in the sewer are particularly well adapted to their surroundings," Seaton said.

Colson decries prisons

WINCHESTER, Mass. (AP) — The prisons where two former top Nixon aides began serving time this week are far from being country clubs, says former White House special counsel Charles Colson.

"Living in constant noise and in overwhelming depression is like living in a terminal cancer ward," Colson told a group of high school students in this Boston suburb.

Colson spoke only hours after John Mitchell, 63, entered prison at Maxwell Air Force Base in Alabama on Wednesday, the first former U.S. attorney general to go to prison. Colson was also jailed there.

Mitchell became the 25th person jailed in connection with the Watergate scandal. He was imprisoned five years and five days after the break-in at the Democratic National Committee's headquarters at the Watergate building in Washington.

Former White House chief of staff H.R. Haldeman surrendered on Tuesday at the federal prison at Lompoc, Calif. Both men are serving 2½-to-8-year sentences, as is former domestic adviser John Ehrlichman, imprisoned since last October at Safford, Ariz.

"Everyone (in the prison) has family problems, and no hope for the future," Colson said, calling the dormitories "filthy beyond belief and smelling like urine."

"Taking men like Mitchell and Haldeman and thrusting them into a situation like that. ... You can call it a country club if you like," he said to dispute such descriptions.

Colson, who served seven months of a sentence for obstructing justice in the scandal that toppled the administration of former President Richard M. Nixon, spoke to 21 Winchester High School juniors at the end of a four-week class on Watergate.

After throwing questions at Colson for three hours, the 21 students said they were unsatisfied.

Several described him as "very defensive."

The Colson interview was recorded on video tape by a Washington, D.C., firm that supplied materials for the class. It hopes to turn this and five other tapes into a television documentary and possibly a classroom film.

EPA plans to require product noise labels

WASHINGTON (AP) — From the roar of the lawn mower to the whine of the hair dryer, the government is battling to keep the din down.

And where that can't be done, there will be a label to warn you how loud your new appliance will be when you start it up.

The Environmental Protection Agency announced Wednesday it is planning to require noise labels on a variety of products.

Final decisions haven't been made about which products will have to carry the labels, but leading candidates are reported to be vacuum cleaners, air conditioners, shop tools, dishwashers and powered lawn and garden equipment.

Also included will be labels for products which reduce noise, such as ear protectors and acoustic tile. Those labels will contain information on how helpful the products are in keeping down noise.

"The newly proposed labeling program will permit informed consumer decisions by making possible comparisons of products related to noise or noise reducing characteristics," said EPA Administrator Douglas M. Costle.

Costle said the first product for which a labeling standard has been prepared is ear protectors.

"In this case the label will bear a number between 0 and 31. The higher the number, the greater the product's effectiveness in excluding noise from a person's ear," he said.

Similar labeling standards for noise-producing products are still being developed, and no decision has been made whether to use a system of numbers, letters or symbols, officials said.

"For consumer products the labeling program should, with a minimum of federal involvement, provide accurate and understandable information to purchasers and permit them to decide for themselves if they want a quieter personal enviroment.

"If consumers make it plain they want quieter products, the marketplace will in all likelihood respond," Costle said.

Officials said the labeling program is in response to congressional directions to reduce the level of background noise in the country.

For products over which individuals have little or no control, such as bulldozers, trucks, motorcycles and buses, EPA is setting allowable noise levels for manufacturers to meet.

The EPA is seeking comments and suggestions from the public on its noise labeling program and officials said public hearings will be scheduled if there is sufficient interest.

House to seek public input

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — Texas House members will hold public hearings July 7 and 8 to clear the way for the July 11 special legislative session on public school financing.

Senate sources said Wednesday no such meeting were planned at that end of the Capitol.

"Testimony is solicited from all interested groups and individuals, so that members of the legislature will be better prepared to make decisions on school finance proposals during the special session to be convened during the following week," said Rep. Tom Massey, D-San Angelo, chairman of the House committee.

Massey, along with Sen. Oscar Mauzey, D-Dallas, was cochairman of a conference committee that in the final minutes of the regular session on May 30 produced a $900 million public school finance bill. Because of the nearness of the session deadline, neither house took a vote on the measure.

"Our school districts are in the position of having to make hard decisions regarding their budgets for the coming school year and it is of great importance that we expedite early passage of school finance legislation so that they may proceed with their planning and budgeting," Massey said in making the announcement.

"These public hearings will provide an opportunity for all interested parties to present their views so that we may have the benefit of testimony that is as complete as possible before our deliberations begin again the following week."

Gov. Dolph Briscoe has said that so far public school finance is the only subject he will include in the special session call.

However, he has said he thinks some property tax revision must be included in a solution to the school issue and he hopes there may be time to consider again the repeal of utility bill sales taxes.

Measures on property tax revision and on utility tax repeal passed the House but failed in the Senate.

Toads prove 'warty' subject for builders

Experts say the best way to identify him is by the sound he makes — some call it a song — a high-pitched, birdlike cheep that stretches on for up to 15 seconds.

He is the Houston toad and he is in the limelight because the federal government has hopped on his cause.

The Interior Department is proposing to declare seven areas around Houston, about 35 square miles, as a "critical habitat" for the toad. The agency says the toad is an endangered species since there are only about 5,000 to 10,000 of them around.

The action could result in a freeze on Federal Housing Administration-insured housing developments that might endanger the habitats.

Under the Endangered Species Act passed by Congress in 1973, no federal agency may undertake any project that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service believes would destroy critical habitat.

Some Houston developers have reacted to the situation with a mixture of derision and disbelief.

However, others are taking it more seriously. For example, Charles S. Leyendecker, president of the Greater Houston Builders Association, said Wednesday the GHBA will take up the toad question at board meetings next week.

He said he believes home builders will be willing to cooperate in protecting the toad.

"I know we wouldn't be in favor of going out and recklessly building homes and killing off an endangered species," he said. "We shouldn't kill off an endangered species with concrete. On the other hand, we shouldn't let an endangered species strangle Houston."

Ford hits Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Former President Gerald Ford was in Houston Wednesday and attended at least one private party, sources said.

Ford attended a gathering at the Bayou Club Wednesday night and left the city following the party. Sources at the club described the party as a political gathering where Ford spoke.

Carter devising ways to reduce possible profits

The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — President Carter will consider vetoing any attempt by Congress to remove federal price controls from natural gas, James R. Schlesinger, Carter's chief energy adviser, said Wednesday.

And if the veto weapon should not be used, Schlesinger told a group of reporters, Carter would consider proposing a wellhead tax on natural gas to siphon away the massive profits Schlesinger said the producers would realize from decontrol.

Either way, he said, Carter is determined to prevent the producers from reaping extra profits from any decontrol legislation.

The President has indicated, Schlesinger said, that his energy program is intended to be "based on equity."

"If he is unable to get equity (on the natural gas vote) he will be prepared to consider all possible measures in order to avoid inequitable results," Schlesinger added.

His comments came as the Federal Power Commission issued a report concluding that next winter may see natural gas shortages more severe than those experienced last January and February even without a repeat of last winter's abnormally cold weather. Thousands of factories, offices and schools had to be shut down during last winter's shortage.

With normal weather, the FPC said, interstate pipeline companies will be unable to deliver 23 per cent of their wholesale customers' gas needs, up from 21 per cent during the past winter, when supplies were drawn down by abnormal heating needs.

The FPC report was likely to increase the pressures on both Congress and the Carter Administration as they seek to revamp the critical natural gas segment of national energy policy.

Schlesinger laid out in sharpest detail yet the Administration's strategy for heading off the oil and gas industry's drive to win decontrol of prices for newly discovered natural gas. Carter is asking Congress for expanded price regulation of natural gas.

Industry officials contend that if newly discovered gas is removed from price control, the added profit incentive will spur producers to find additional supplies and thus cut into the shortage that has developed in recent years but was masked until recently by unusually warm winters.

By contrast, Carter wants to extend price controls to gas sold solely within the state in which it is produced and to price new supplies discovered onshore at $1.75 per thousand cubic feet (mcf).

Senate faces decision on 'people' bomb

WASHINGTON (AP) — The full Senate is facing a decision on whether a lethal neutron bomb that kills people but leaves buildings intact should become part of the U.S. nuclear weapons arsenal.

The Senate Appropriations Committee rejected on Wednesday a move by Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., to ban production of the device.

Instead, it approved a $10.4 billion public works and energy research appropriation bill containing funds to develop the nuclear warhead, possibly as early as next year.

The legislation, already approved by the House, now goes to the full Senate.

Although its details are mostly secret, the proposed bomb is reportedly designed to kill people through the release of highly radioactive neutrons while doing a minimum amount of damage to structures.

It would be fitted to the tactical, short-range Lance missile. This missile, bearing conventional nuclear warheads, is deployed with NATO forces in Europe.

Advocates of the proposed new weapon claim neutron bombs would make a better battlefield deterrent than the estimated 7,000 nuclear warheads in Europe. These advocates say the warheads now deployed have too large a nuclear yield to be used as tactical weapons.

Some $1.09 billion of the $10.4 billion appropriation approved by the Senate committee is earmarked for nuclear weapons activities.

Hatfield's motion to drop funding for the neutron bomb was rejected by the committee on a 10-10 tie vote in a closed-door session. Committee members voted later to make public the vote and the nature of Hatfield's proposal.

Under existing law, even if Congress approves such devices as the neutron bomb, production cannot begin without an order from the president.

The committee also rejected President Carter's request to cancel the Clinch River breeder reactor project at Oak Ridge Tenn., voting instead to appropriate $150 million for the project for the next fiscal year so construction can begin.

The administration wants the project halted, claiming it would lead to the worldwide spread of bomb-suitable plutonium. Breeders produce more plutonium than they consume as they generate electric power.

Although the vote was another setback for Carter's hope to scuttle the project, White House officials were working with leaders of another Senate panel, the energy committee, in hopes of coming up with a compromise.

The funds voted by the Appropriations Committee will have no practical effect if Congress does not also pass companion legislation continuing authorization for the project. It is this bill that is now before the Senate Energy Committee.

The Appropriations Committee also ratified last week's vote of a subcommittee to eliminate eight of the 17 water projects approved by the House of Representatives over Carter's opposition.

Senate wants more time on saccharin

By HELEN DEWAR
and VICTOR COHN
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — The Senate Appropriations Committee Wednesday rejected a House amendment that would stop the Food and Drug Administration from banning saccharin for the next 15 months. It acted after receiving assurances that Congress would be able to act on saccharin later this year.

By then, Congress will have had time to consider the issue "calmly and rationally," said Sen. Thomas F. Eagleton (D-Mo.), who proposed rejection of the House proposal.

Meanwhile, in San Francisco, the American Medical Association voted in favor of keeping the artificial sweetener in diet food and drinks — with merely a warning label of possible harm — until there is clearly proof that saccharin causes cancer.

The AMA also urged repeal of the controversial Delaney amendment, which provided part of the basis for the FDA's proposal in March to ban saccharin in food and beverages, while allowing its sale as an over-the-counter nonprescription drug. The amendment has been interpreted to require removal from the market of food additives shown to cause cancer in humans or animals.

The FDA proposed the curb on saccharin, widely used as a sugar substitute by dieters and diabetics on the basis of studies in which short-term feeding of the substance in large amounts caused cancer in animals.

The first congressional action against the FDA's proposed ban came Tuesday when the House amended a $13.7 billion agriculture appropriations bill to ban use of any of the funds for promulgating or enforcing a saccharin ban until Sept. 30, 1978.

But Wednesday the Senate Appropriations Committee voted unanimously to reject the House proposal after Eagleton said separate legislation likely to include an 18-month moratorium on action against saccharin will be before Congress later this summer — well before any ban is imposed.

Eagleton said he has been assured by FDA officials that the ban, in any case, would not be imposed before Oct. 1.

Eagleton said the legislation would give the FDA more freedom to cope with potential health hazards from saccharin than the House proposal did. "What we need most on this saccharin issue is more time to calmly and rationally consider the information at hand," Eagleton added.

Eagleton said Sen. Edward M. Kennedy (D-Mass.), chairman of the Senate Health and Scientific Research subcommittee, planned to bring a bill dealing with saccharin to the Senate floor next week. The bill is expected to include an 18-month delay on any saccharin ban and a study by the National Academy of Sciences on the effectiveness of the Delaney amendment.

The AMA, in its action Wednesday, urged Congress to require that no additive be banned unless it either clearly causes cancers in humans or causes cancers in animals that have received amounts of the additive equivalent to human daily doses.

The association, most of whose 172,830 members are practicing physicians rather than scientists, rejected arguments by many cancer scientists that it is necessary to test animals with large doses over a short period to duplicate the effect of continued exposure of humans to small amounts of cancer-causing substances.

Drought strangles South

ATLANTA (AP) — A two-month drought through much of the South has parched land, shriveled crops and dried up water supplies, threatening to cost farmers millions of dollars.

Some farmers stand to take a double blow when their feed crops fail. They will be unable to feed their livestock and will have to sell animals at a loss.

The southern drought comes while the West's worst dry period in the century continues almost unabated, with forest fire danger high and water rationing imposed in many areas.

Damage to Georgia's corn crop is estimated at $94 million, because of fireworm and budworm infestation as well as lack of moisture.

"We are dry," said Wayne County, Ga., farm agent Bobby Deal. "We expect to lose 65 per cent of our corn crop."

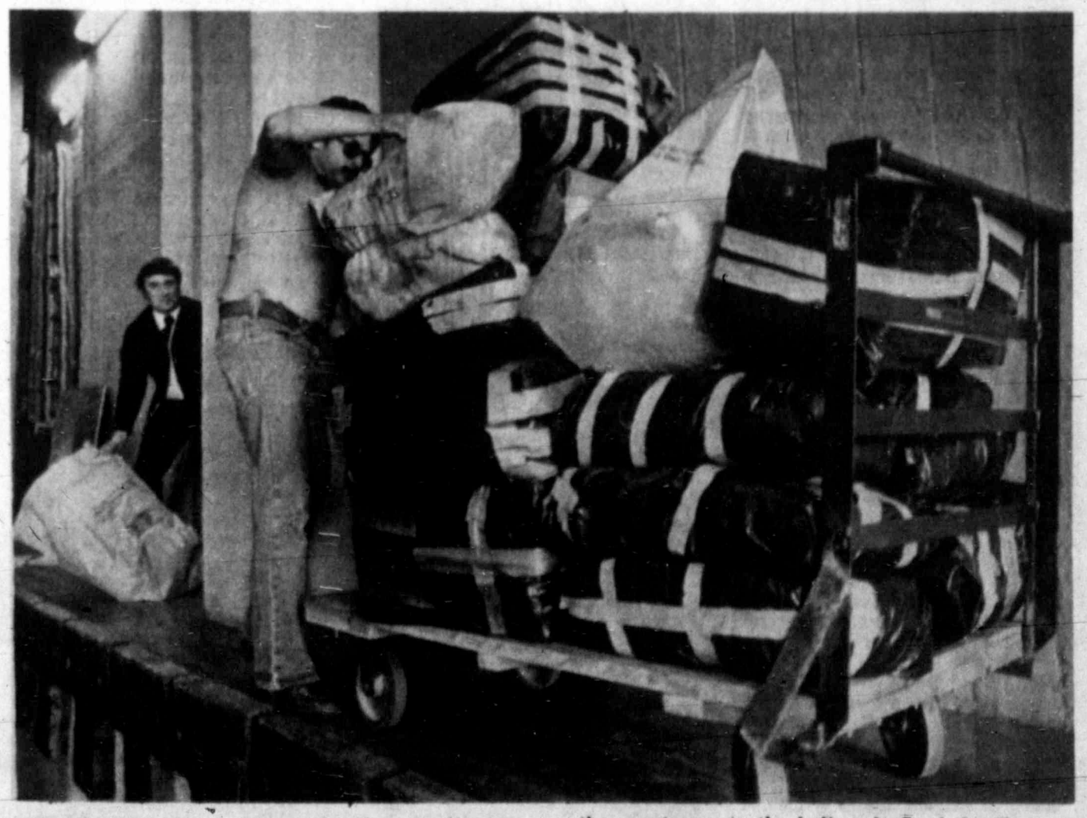

But most of Georgia's crops haven't been planted and Agriculture Commissioner Tommy Irvin said the loss is impossible to estimate. The value of last year's soybean crop was put at nearly $144 million.

Several Georgia counties have begun issuing weekend warnings to residents to curtail washing their cars, watering gardens and filling swimming pools.

In Houston County, Ala., agriculture officials said about two-thirds of the 60,000 acres of corn has been ruined.

Soybean crops in Alabama, Georgia and Virginia were all below normal.

Tobacco markets are expected to open next month, but this year's loss in Georgia alone is expected to be more than $8.5 million. In Virginia and Tennessee, tobacco is in good condition, but both areas need more rain to maintain a healthy crop.

ROUSTIN' ABOUT with Ed Todd

It's competition, all right. And there are winners and winners and more winners.

You just don't find any losers, unless someone just totally gives up on himself. Even then, some folks are right there to boost the morale and to make a winner out of a would-be loser.

The name of this sport is improving the self-image. And it takes many forms; one is swimming.

Yes, winning — coming in first — is important. But there's something that takes on greater meaning, said Sue Beasley, who's out paddling for the mentally retarded in Midland. Winning is trying, really trying.

"We do think that winning is important," said Mrs. Beasley. "But the ones trying the hardest are the ones that usually come in last," she said.

"And it shows that they've made progress and that's important — whether they come in fifth or sixth" or last.

And that's exactly how Mrs. Beasley, a special education teacher in Midland, viewed the Special Olympics swimming meet for the mentally retarded in Midland.

Ten young people, ages 12 to 18, entered the competition at the Mabee Memorial Swimming Pool here Wednesday.

No records were set, but there were some impressive swimming, good stroking, and some downright earnest kicking and trying.

Kevin Harrington tried.

"That's beautiful," Lois Harrington

Midland experiencing dry June

In spite of the rain for the past few days, Midland still is having a "dry" June.

Only .36 inch of rain has been recorded thus far this month, with 1.49 inches the normal amount for the month, the weatherman said. Since rainfall was below normal going into the month, also, the city needs more than two inches of rain to bring it to normal by the end of June.

The weatherman said, though, there is a 50 per cent chance of more rain tonight and a 30 per cent chance Friday.

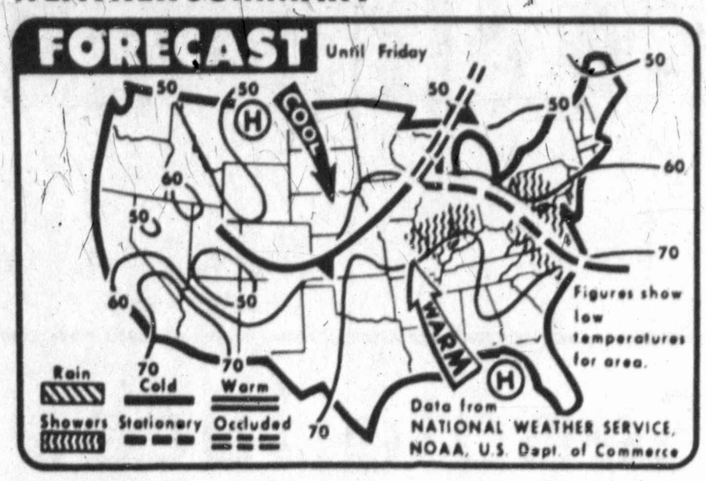

Skies should be partly cloudy with a chance of thunderstorms through Friday. Some of the thunderstorms may be locally heavy tonight, the National Weather Service at Midland Regional Air Terminal said.

Winds should be from the south at 5 to 15 mph tonight.

This morning's low was 68 degrees and Tuesday's high was 83 degrees. Tonight's low should be in the mid-60s and Friday's high is expected to reach the upper 80s.

Rain Wednesday was reported in Andrews, Lamesa, Big Lake, Big Spring, Rankin and Crane, with only Stanton not receiving any precipitation. Cloudy skies were reported throughout the area this morning.

WEATHER SUMMARY

SHOWERS are expected today in the Midwest and along the Eastern seaboard. Clear weather is anticipated in the remainder of the nation. (AP Laserphoto Map)

South Africa protest continues; one killed

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police shot and killed one black and wounded another in Soweto today and arrested about 130 others in central Johannesburg as black students protested the continued preventive detention of their leaders by South Africa's white government.

Police sources said large groups of students were massing all over Soweto, the segregated township of more than a million blacks 10 miles southwest of Johannesburg. The police were reported breaking up the groups with tear gas and "sneeze machines," which spray a combination of tear gas and talcum powder.

Brig. J. J. Gerber of the Soweto police force said police fired "several" shots when one group stoned a police car.

Maj. Gen. Dawid Kriel, in charge of riot control, announced later in Pretoria, the capital, that police fire killed one black and wounded another, but it was not immediately clear that he and Gerber were speaking of the same incident.

Brig. Jan F. Visser, Soweto's white police chief, said the situation in the black city was "ugly and confused" but under control. But other sources said as soon as a group of students was scattered, they began reforming.

Johannesburg police used their batons to break up a demonstration by hundreds of young blacks in the center of the city and arrested about 130 of them, Police Commissioner W. H. Kotze reported.

Kotze said a number of the demonstrators were injured, but he would not say how many.

The students were protesting the continued detention of student leaders arrested the weekend before the June 16th anniversary of the start of the Soweto uprising last year. The police pulled in about 20 black members of the militant Soweto Students' Representative and five white students from Johannesburg's Witwater University who had called for nationwide commemoration of more than 600 blacks killed in the riots.

Wrongdoing not indicated, says FBI

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (AP) — The FBI says it has received no information to indicate any wrongdoing by administrators of the Gary Job Corps Center at San Marcos, the nation's second largest job corps facility.

U.S. Atty. Jamie C. Boyd said Wednesday he agreed with the federal law enforcement agency, which had had exclusive criminal jurisdiction over the center since it was activiated in 1965.

Boyd met Wednesday morning with Joseph E. O'Connell, special agent in charge of the San Antonio FBI office.

"If anybody's covering anything up, we're certainly not aware of it," Boyd said after the meeting which he called to discuss recent allegations of violence and discrimination at the Job Corps installation.

O'Connell issued a statement saying the FBI's position was that the office would continue to accept any complaint or case referred to it by authorities at the Gary Job Corps Center (GJCC).

Wreck kills 3 in family

ODESSA—Three members of a Pennsylvania family were killed and four others injured Wednesday morning when their motor home and a tractor-trailer rig collided east of here on Interstate 20.

The dead were identified as Harold J. Hayes, 49, Karen Hayes, 16, and Cynthia Hayes, 18, all of Handover, Pa.

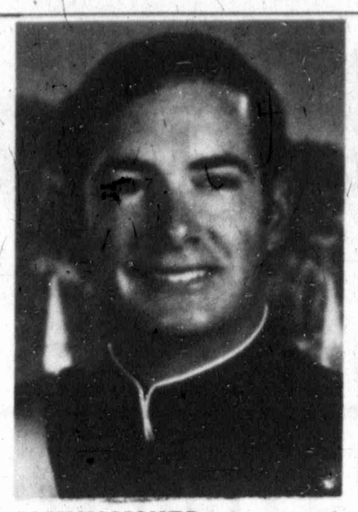

Injured in the mishap were Yvonne Hayes, 43, who was listed in guarded condition early today at Odessa's Medical Center Hospital, and Bryan Hayes, 14, Shelia Hayes, 12, and Kathy Hayes, 22 months, who were treated and released.

According to Department of Public Safety reports, the Hayes vehicle was headed east on I-20 and the tractor-trailer rig, driven by Merle McWhirter of Midway City, Calif., was headed west when the rig slid on the wet pavement and crossed the median into the path of the Hayes vehicle. The Hayes vehicle then struck the back axles of the truck according to DPS reports.

McWhirter was not injured in the mishap.

Harold Hayes and Karen Hayes were pronounced dead at the scene. Cynthia Hayes died about 1:30 p.m. at Medical Center Hospital, a DPS spokesman said.

The bodies were taken to Easterling Funeral Home in Odessa.

COMMISSIONED A second lieutenant in the Air Force during June 1 graduation ceremonies at the Air Force Academy is Robert W. Gaston Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Robert W. Gaston Sr. of 2807 Shandon. He received a B.S. degree from the Academy. A 1973 graduate of Lee High School, Gaston has been assigned temporarily to Shepherd AFB at Wichita Falls before reporting on a regular tour basis to a missile base at Little Rock, Ark.

RECENTLY GRADUATED from the Air Force Academy is Thomas H. Dollahite Jr., son of Mrs. and Mrs. Thomas H. Dollahite Sr. of 3607 Sinclair. An honor graduate, he received a B.S. degree and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Force. Dollahite, a 1973 graduate of Lee High School, will first report to Edwards AFB, Calif., and then will go to Vance AFB, Okla., for pilot training.

He was beaming. She kissed him gently on the cheek. He won a medal for his effort.

"(His) coordination is not developed yet where he can work both (his legs and arms) at the same time," the proud mother said.

He's improving.

The youngsters were competing in four events at the pool: the 25-yard free style, 50-yard free style, 25-yard backstroke and the 25-yard butterfly.

Parents, mostly mothers, and friends alike were cheering their favorites to complete each round.

And after each event, swimming coach Jim Abt presented the athletes with medals. It was the first Special Olympics try-outs in swimming for the youngsters, who will be entered in the state competition among the mentally retarded later this summer in Fort Worth.

Among those who came to watch the youngsters swim here was Ruben Culp. He took time off of work as a blue-suited bank security guard to watch his grandson, Sammy Newton, 12, swim and win medals.

"Sammy's my grandson," Culp said after the boy completed an event. "Me and my wife are rasing him." He paused, as if getting ready to explain why Sammy wasn't the frontrunner. "He's just a little bit overweight," Culp said.

"I just got off long enough to come and watch Sam swim," he said.

Among the parents there were Monice Adkins, who credits her daughter's swimming skill for saving her own life about two weeks ago.

They were on a family outing, a fishing trip, in the Pecos River, when their boat rammed into a rock. The daughter, Susan Adkins, 16, was thrown into the deep waters near Comstock.

"She swam back to the rock and stayed there until we could pick her up," Mrs. Adkins said. She said her husband, J. D., did not spot the rock in time to avoid it.

•

The first-place winners in the Special Olympics were Lynn Rhea, 14, in the boys' competition, and Mary Lou Murphy, 15, in the girls' division.

"Really, I learned how to swim underwater before I dog-paddled," said Mary Lou, who learned to swim years ago when her family was living in Wichita, Kan.

By her own admission (more or less), she's a good swimmer — and petite at that.

Fact is, in an informal, just-for-the-kicks swimming race, boys' champ Lynn Rhea outdistanced Mary Lou just "by this much" (about 18 inches) in one lap.

"Of course, he's got longer arms than I do," she said in explaining away his victory.

Other than swimming and doing lots of reading and playing, Mary Lou is undergoing on-the-job training to be a veterinarian's assistant.

"She's an animal lover," said her mother, Kathie Murphy.

"I love snakes," Mary Lou elaborated.

"But why, mom?" asked Mary Lou, who certainly knew better.

•

Boys' Division: Lynn Rhea, 14; Artie Rhyme, 12; Sammy Newton, 12; Wayne Morgan, 16; David Delone, 14, and Kevin Harrington, 18.

Girls' Division: Mary Lou Murphy, 15; Bonita Barber, 18; Kathy Kirkpatrick, 18, and Susan Adkins, 16.

Here's what Mrs. Beasley said of one of the "winners," Bonita Barber.

"Bonita is a super tryer," Mrs. Beasely said. "She came in last, but she tried hardest."

That, in a special sense, is winning.

YMCA fund-raising campaign gets started

The announcement of the campaign was made by Allen K. Trobaugh, president of the board of directors of the Midland YMCA, and J. Durwood Oyem, general director of the Midland YMCA.

The proposed building will be the home of Alamo Branch YMCA. The total cost of the building is estimated at $450,000. The Alamo Branch YMCA is trying to raise $60,000 to help finance construction of the building. The additional money needed will be raised by the Metropolitan Board of Directors of the Midland YMCA.

The building fund drive will be led by Carl Forest, campaign chairman. He will be working with Jerry Payne, chairman of the Alamo Branch board of managers, and John McVickar, executive director of the Alamo Branch YMCA.

The $60,000 goal must be reached by July 15. Volunteers will work throughout West Midland in an effort to raise the money. Payne said the people solicited will be reached through personal contact and through correspondence. Only people living in the area served by the Alamo Branch YMCA will be contacted.

Trobaugh said the new facility was approved by the Midland YMCA's long range planning board, which meets biannually. It was the opinion of the board that west Midland could support a new facility, Trobaugh said.

He said the proposed facility has received the "total support" of Midland school officials.

Research conducted by members of the Salvation Army here showed the greatest need in West Midland for a new facility, Trobaugh said.

The offices of the Alamo Branch "Y" are now at 3910 Cedar Spring in a repossessed FHA (Federal Housing Administration) house. Most of the programs sponsored by Alamo have taken place at the Alamo Junior High School or the Central YMCA. Yearly membership at the Alamo Branch is about 1,500 persons.

The proposed building will contain an indoor pool, a large all-purpooe gym area, meeting and class rooms, an exercise room, a nursery, a large youth center and offices.

Korean tells scheme to purchase influence

By JIM ADAMS

WASHINGTON (AP) — A former director of South Korea's spy agency says he was given $3 million by the Seoul government to establish a Washington social club as part of a scheme to buy influence from U.S. congressmen.

Kim Hyung Wook, the former director of the Korean Central Intelligence Agency, said Wednesday that he helped Korean businessman Tongsun Park establish the fashionable George Town Club, which became popular with government executives and congressmen.

Later, Kim said, he was told the KCIA bankrolled payoffs to U.S. congressmen. He said that at one time he was shown a list of 15 to 20 congressmen targeted for payoffs.

But he said he could not recall any of the names because American names all sound the same to him.

Kim testified under tight security before a House international relations subcommittee. He said he had the KCIA deposit $3 million in a U.S. bank at Park's request in 1967 or 1968 and that Park used the money as collateral for a loan to establish the club.

"Tongsun Park told me that once the club was in operation he would have many guests who were members of this Congress and he could exercise certain influence," Kim said.

He testified that Park told him the KCIA had targeted 15 to 20 congressmen for payoffs and that another source told him the agency sent another businessman $600,000 "for lobbying purposes."

Kim testified that the alleged KCIA-funded payoffs started after he left the agency in 1969 but that as KCIA director he personally had helped Tongsun Park try to win social influence with congressmen.

Kim said the KCIA sent the $600,000 through Korean embassy diplomatic pouches to Kim Han Cho, a cosmetics executive in Washington.

There were published reports last February that that allegation had been made to Justice Department investigators by a KCIA defector, Kim Sang Keun. The cosmetics manufacturer denied it at the time, saying "Why would the KCIA want to give $600,000 to a guy like me?"

He denied he ever carried out any assignment for either the KCIA or Korean President Park Chung Hee.

Historians win prizes for '77

NEW YORK (AP) — Historians Alan Dawley, Robert A. Gross and Barry W. Higman were recently awarded Columbia University's Bancroft Prizes for 1977.

The $4,000 prizes were given in recognition of books on American history and diplomacy the three men published in 1976. The winning books were "Class and Community: The Industrial Revolution in Lynn," by Dawley, "The Minutemen and Their World," by Gross, and "Slave Population and Economy in Jamaica, 18071834," by Higman.

Colwell gets USAF medal

ODESSA — Dr. James L. Colwell has been awarded the United States Air Force Meritorious Service Medal for his service in establishing Detached Training Site 25 at Bergstrom Air Force Base, Tex., and as area assistant director in the Air Force Intelligence Service at Bolling Air Force Base, Washington, D.C., from February 1975 to January 1977.

Colwell is professor of American Studies and American Literature at The University of Texas of the Permian Basin.

Women pilots to land here

On July 2, approximately 150 women pilots participating in the Powder Puff Derby Commemorative Flight of the Transcontinental All-Women Air Race will make a required stop at Midland Air Terminal.

This year's flight is the 30th all-woman transcontinental air race. The race will trace the route of the original flight in 1947.

That race, which had two entries, traveled a route from Palm Springs, Calif., to Tampa, Fla. The trip took 21 hours and 45 minutes.

The 1977 derby will not be a timed race. The fliers will leave Palm Springs July 1, and will arrive in Tampa July 4. The pilots are required to make overnight stops, as well as several check-in stops each day.

Vermont Congressman will take staff 'home' to meet constituents

By DONALD M. ROTHBERG

WASHINGTON (AP) — When Congress takes its month-long August recess, Sen. Patrick J. Leahy plans to pack up his Washington office and set up operations in Vermont.

"To me, it is as important for the members of my staff to have the kind of constant contact with Vermonters we serve as I do," said the Democratic senator.

"I intend to close down my Washington office and bring staff members back home to work in Vermont," he added.

Leahy has a Washington staff of 18, most of whom are Vermonters. An aide said all but one or two had volunteered to take part in the experiment in bringing Congress home to its constituents.

An aide said participation was voluntary because each staff member will have to pay his own transportation and living expenses while in Vermont.

But anyone who has spent a hot, humid August in Washington probably could be convinced to make whatever sacrifice was necessary to move his job to the cool, green mountains of Vermont.

Sen. Barry Goldwater stood by his desk on the Senate floor and prepared to speak against President Carter's plan to withdraw U.S. troops from South Korea.

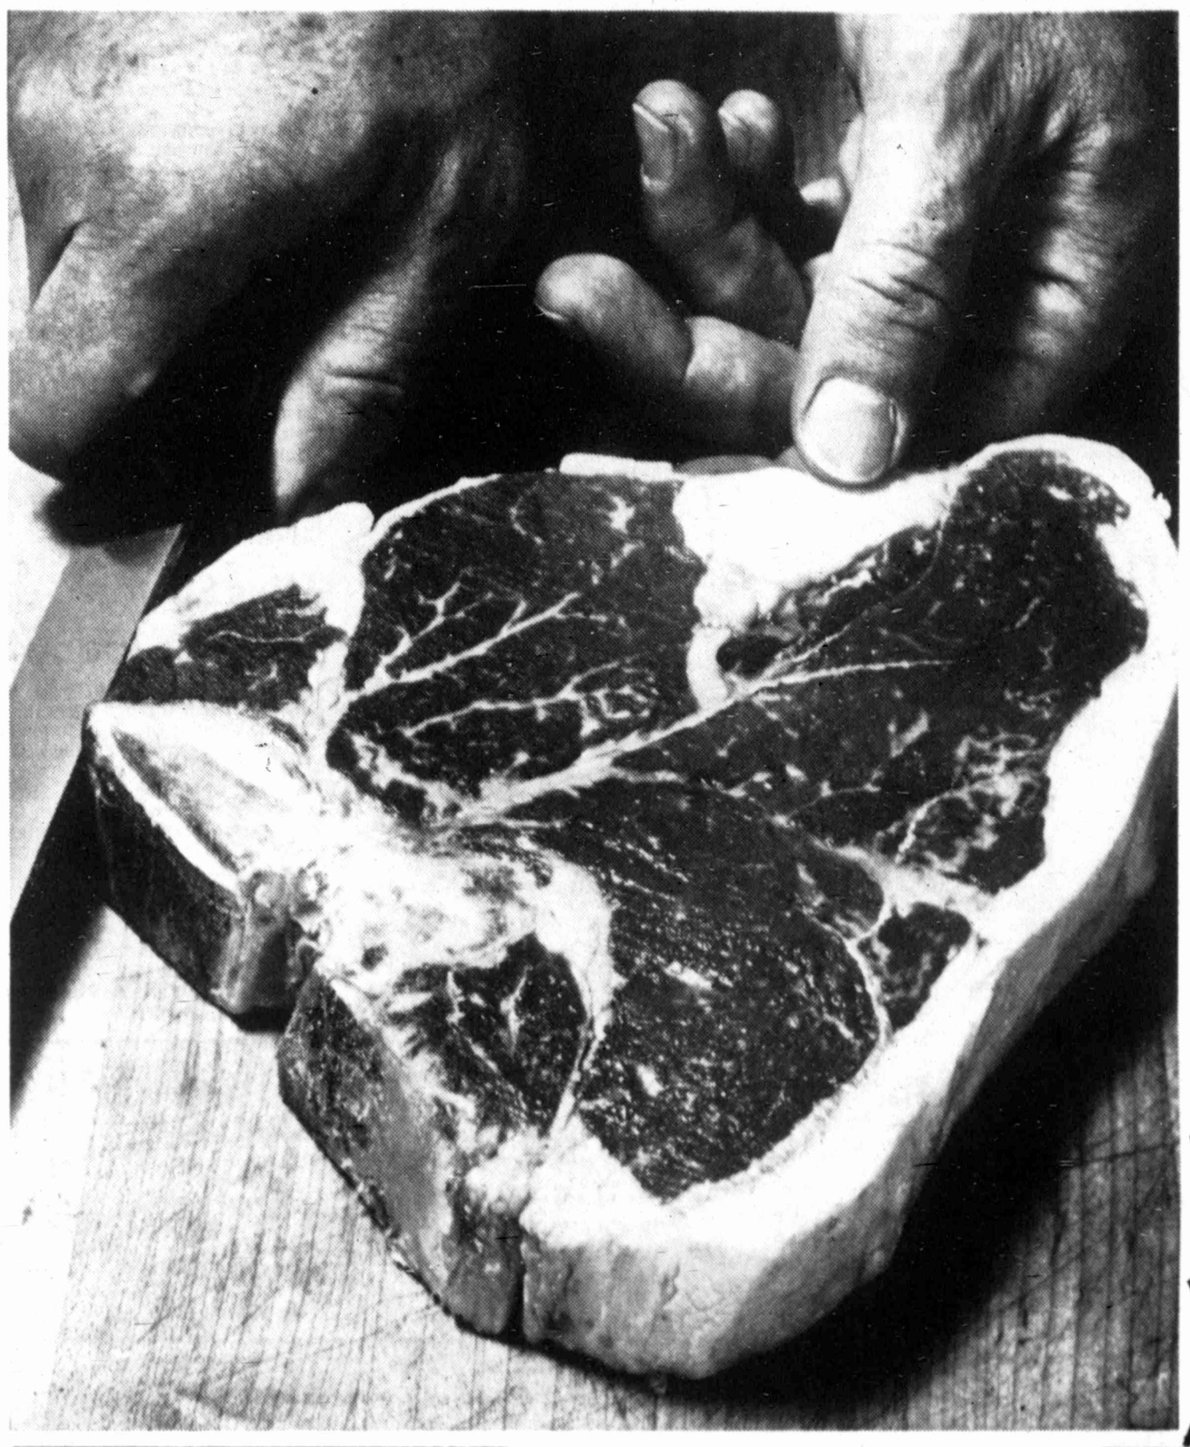

He reached for the lapel microphone attached to each senator's desk. The Arizona Republican fidgeted with his microphone for a few moments and then said, "This damn thing hasn't worked since they put it in. I've asked them to fix it 600 times. I'm an electronic expert and I get the bad one."

•

The issue before the Senate was whether to contribute money to the United Nations University. The junior senator from California, former professor of semantics S.I. Hayakawa, told his senatorial colleagues, "I feel the basis of my lifelong experience as a professor, and knowing the ambitions, weaknesses and strengths of the professorate."

Hayakawa went on to say he thought the U.N. university was "one vast international academic boondoggle."

"The reason I say this," he added, "and when I speak of professors, I speak of myself among others, is that one of our ambitions as professors, to prove ourselves to be really professors of great distinction, is to have jobs where we do not have to teach; a research institute is an ideal institution in which to get such a position."

House offers significant defeats of Carter's aid package stands

By MARY RUSSELL
The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — President Carter was handed a significant defeat on the House floor Wednesday as the House voted 295 to 115 to prevent international banks and lending institutions from using money contributed by the United States for aid to Cuba, Indochina or the African nations of Uganda, Mozambique or Ethiopia.

Carter, in a letter to Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill Jr. (D-Mass.), had said that passage of such an amendment would, "in effect, jeopardize continued U.S. participation in the banks." He went on to say, "Specifying that U.S. funds could not be used for loans to these countries by the multilateral development institutions would in all probability make it impossible for these institutions to accept our funds." He did not explain why.

Bilateral aid to Indochina, Cuba and the three African nations was already prohibited by the $7 billion foreign aid appropriation bill the House was considering, but Rep. C. W. (Bill) Young (R-Fla.) wanted to prohibit U.S. multilateral aid, given through six international banks and lending institutions.

Rep. Jack Kemp (R-N.Y.), supporting Young, said the banks were just providinv a "circuitous" way to give U.S. money to Indochina and the other nations. Rep. B. F. Sisk (D-Calif.) said Congress was not being "sincere" with the American people by telling them it was not aiding those countries bilaterally, but then allowing multilateral aid.

Rep. David R. Obey (D-Wis.), leading the fight for the Carter administration on the floor, said, the international institutions were set up as a way of "depoliticizing" foreign aid programs and as a way of "sharing the burden" of foreign aid with other countries, which also contribute to the institutions.

If such a limit as Young wanted were put on, the banks would probably have to reject U.S. contributions, Obey said.

"Baloney, I say let's find out," Young shot back. "Let's put the limit in there. I say the banks will take our money anyway." Under the bill, the United States is scheduled to contribute to six international banks and institutions, such as the Asian Development Bank, $2.123 billion for fiscal 1978.

Carter suffered a second defeat as the House continued to refuse to allow him to back away from his strong rhetoric on human rights.

The House voted 233 to 180 to delete $700,000 for military training assistance for Argentina on grounds that the Argentine military junta has a consistent record of gross violations of human rights because it imprisons and tortures Argentine citizens.

Despite his strong stand on human rights, Carter wanted the aid to stay in the bill since it gave him some leverage over the Agentine regime and the President needed flexibility in dealing with such countries.

But Rep. Edward R. Roybal (D-Calif.), who offered the amendment to delete the funds, said, "How long are we going to use the excuse that the President needs flexibility?" He said the situation in Argentina has been deteriorating for months.

Military assistance funds for Nicaragua had already been deleted by the Appropriations Committee on human rights grounds, but after a strong lobbying effort with agents paid for by the Nicaraguan government an attempt to put the funds back in is expected Thursday when the House continues to work on the bill.

Before quitting for the night — it will resume work on the bill Thursday — the House also voted 359 to 33 to bar payments of any reparations to Vietnam.

Rep. Lester L. Wolff (D-N.Y.), who offered the amendment, said he was doing so to resolve any question left because of a letter by former President Nixon that promised $3.5 billion in reparations if various conditions were met. Wolff said the question was probably moot, since the conditions were never met, but he wanted Congress to go on record as opposing the reparations anyway.

However, in an emotional speech, first-termer Rep. Ted Weiss (D-N.Y.) said this country owed reparations to Vietnam and that we had given our word to help rehabilitate the country and we should not go back on our word.

DEATHS

Midlanders' sister dies

ODESSA — Ethel Agness Gatlin, 48, of Odessa, died Wednesday in an Odessa hospital after a long illness.

She was the sister of J. D. Stegall, E. M. Stegall, Preston Stegall and Allene Birdsong, all of Midland.

Services will be at 2 p.m. Friday in Westwood Baptist Church in Odessa with burial in Sunset Memorial Gardens directed by Hubbard-Kelly Funeral Home.

Mrs. Gatlin was born Feb. 28, 1929, in Bronte and married Willie E. Gatlin March 18, 1946. She moved to Odessa from Sonora in 1946.

Other survivors include the husband, a son, two daughters, four other sisters and four grandchildren.

Miss Sutton was born April 17, 1903, in Slidell. She had been a salesperson for Sears for 29 years.

Other survivors include a sister and several nieces and nephews.

Attorney refuses comment on Quinlan's condition

MORRIS PLAINS, N.J. (AP) — A spokesman for the family of Karen Anne Quinlan has refused further comment on the condition of the comatose woman after confirming that she is still clinging to life.

"We've learned after two years that you can't make predictions," said Paul Armstrong, the family attorney. Armstrong said the family would have nothing more to say until Miss Quinlan's death.

Her father, Joseph Quinlan, slipped out a back door of the Morris View Nursing Home here early today. He was escorted by several men who tried to shield him from the reporters and photographers outside.

Both Armstrong and the Rev. Thomas Trapasso, the family priest, have said the Quinlans want privacy during their vigil.

"They have been agonizing with this situation for two years," Father Trapasso said Wednesday. "All they want is their privacy and the privilege of being a family by themselves."

Miss Quinlan, 23, who lapsed into a coma two years ago after mixing alcohol and barbituates, was taken off a respirator in May 1976 after the New Jersey Supreme Court ruled the state could not require the use of artificial means to keep persons alive if there was no chance they would resume a semblance of life.

Government suggests flu vaccination plan

By MICHAEL UNGER
Newsday

NEW YORK — The federal government has issued its recommendations for flu shots this fall, and they don't include vaccination against swine flu, which was supposed to be around last winter but wasn't.

They do, however, include the A-Victoria and B-Hong Kong flu strains, prevailing flu bugs in this country during the flu season, which generally runs from November through March.

This year, the U.S. Public Health Service, a branch of the U.S. Health, Education and Welfare Department, has returned to its previous policy of recommending the shots only for the so-called "high-risk" category — chronically ill adults and children and all persons 65 and older who are not allergic to the shots. Chronically ill women who are pregnant are being advised to consult their physicians before taking any shots.

And this year, for the first time, the public health service's advisory committee on immunization practices is warning that 10 of every one million persons vaccinated for any type of flu will come down with Guillain-Barre syndrome within eight weeks of taking the shots, and that 5 per cent of those contacting the progressive paralytic condition probably will die from it.

It was the high incidence of Guillian-Barre paralysis among recipients of swine flu shots that brought the national immunization program to a halt last December. The vaccine was withdrawn from free public health clinics after more than 40 million Americans had taken the shots. The federal Center for Disease Control in Atlanta said last December that 160 persons had died after receiving the shots.

The government later okayed the swine flu vaccine for use at private physicians' discretion, but only because it was the only way for chronically ill and elderly persons to obtain protection against the A-Victoria flu strain since the A-Victoria and swine flu vaccines were combined into a single shot.

Prints displayed

MYSTIC SEAPORT, Conn. (AP) — An exhibition of 65 marine lithographs by Currier and Ives will be on display throughout the summer at the Maritime Museum in Mystic Seaport.

The pictures, all published between 1841 and 1887, range from whaling scenes and disasters at sea to portraits of clipper ships, steamships and yachts.

Surgery explained

MIAMI (AP) — Jackie Gleason's doctor says the rotund comedian has had his face lifted because his "eyelids drooped so he couldn't read the scripts."

"The operations weren't cosmetic; they were more reconstructive," said Dr. Bernard Halperin. "He needed the operation for his career."

Automakers suspend use of Tris-treated fabrics

DETROIT (AP) — The nation's automakers don't believe motorists are endangered by car upholstery containing Tris, the fire-retardant chemical linked to some forms of cancer. But as a precaution, they're dropping its use and hope to eliminate it entirely by next year.

Each of the four major automakers — General Motors, Ford, Chrysler and American Motors — says it has used Tris to treat upholstery fabrics in millions of car seats since the fall of 1972 because of a government safety regulation requiring that the fabrics be fire-resistant.

Spokesmen for the makers said there were no indications that employes who handle fabrics treated with Tris are subjected to any health hazards. A United Auto Workers official agreed.

Concern about Tris developed this past April, when the U.S. Consumer Product Safety Commission banned it from children's sleepwear because of tests showing that the chemical causes cancer in animals and can be absorbed through children's skin.

A spokesman for GM's Fisher Body division, which has five plants that cut and sew seat upholstery, said car occupants would not come in direct contact with the chemical because only the inside of the covers are treated with Tris.

In addition, he said Tris is only used on cloth covers, not vinyl. It is also used in tough material strips installed under the seats to reinforce the covers and on some cloth headliners — the material covering the interior roof of the car.

"We began phasing out Tris last April after we read about the problem with sleepwear," the Fisher spokesman said.

He said substitute fire-retardants have been found for all but one type of cloth seat and GM plans to eliminate Tris from that one as soon as a chemical now being tested is approved for use.

Bill Horner, a top UAW official and member of a joint UAW-GM national health and safety committee, estimates that no more than 300 GM cutters and sewers regularly handle Tris-coated materials at Fisher plants in Grand Rapids, Livonia and Tecumseh, Mich., and Cleveland and Euclid, Ohio.

Horner said tests by the National Cancer Institute showed the chances of any GM employe who handled Tris getting cancer are "one in 200,000, and that's under the absolutely worst possible situation of constant exposure, which does not occur."

Hassle, no song

But a couple of argumentative shareholders forced this year's meeting to run overtime and the singing of the fight song was canceled. However, songsheets were made available for everyone to take home.

Diablos clinch first half flag

EL PASO — El Paso quelled a ninth-inning Midland threat to beat the Cubs, 4-3, and sew up the first-half Texas League West Division pennant before 1,845 fans at Dudley Field Wednesday night.

The Diablos hold a three-game lead with two games to play.

For the Cubs, who put the first batter on base in seven of the nine innings, it was a long night of frustration.

Lefthanded reliefer Dave Schuler, one of several players who had just joined the Diablos for the pennant drive, got dangerous Karl Pagel on a bouncer to shoot for the third out.

IN THE ninth, Steve Davis and Aaron Randall led off with singles, but Buckner popped up his bunt. Boras reached first when firstbaseman Terry Stupy threw away his grounder and Davis scored. Carlos Perez relieved Schuler and uncorked a wild pitch while whiffing Hernandez to put runners on second and third.

After Pagel was walked intentionally, Daniel Boone, another newcomer, came in to get Steve Haug, pinch hitting for Tony Pepper who is an 0-for-21 slump, on a force at second.

Designated Hitter Floyd Rayford, who was added to the El Paso roster for the series, singled home a run in the fourth and drove in another with a sacrifice fly in the fifth.

CATCHER PAT Kelly homered to left off Jeff Albert, 4-7, in the third to give El Paso a 1-0 lead and although Midland tied in the fourth on a walk to Duane Gustavson and singles by Randall and Buckner, the Cubs never led.

El Paso scored what proved to be the decisive runs in the fifth. Stupy singled, Jay Peters doubled to put runners on second and third. A wild pitch put the first run across the plate and then Rayford delivered his sacrifice fly.

Chuck Porter, just arrived from Salinas, will pitch for El Paso tonight while either Larry Groover, 2-2, or Jack Ledbetter, 4-5, will go for the Cubs.

Tulsa sweeps Shreveport

By The Associated Press

In the Texas League, East Division leader Tulsa took a pair from Shreveport, 3-2 and 6-0, and Jackson knocked off Arkansas 7-2.

Blair Stouffer stroked a game winning single for Tulsa in the eight inning of a scheduled seven-inning game to give Tulsa the victory in their first contest with Shreveport. The Drillers had to come back from a 2-0 deficit for the win.

In the second game, Mark Soroko muzzled the Captains on six hits, running their loss streak to eight. It was Soroko's first start since surgery last month for bone chips in his elbow.

Eddie Miller stole his 50th base of the season for Tulsa, which blew the game open with four runs in the sixth inning.

Jackson's victory snapped a five-game Arkansas win streak. the Mets broke quickly with Terry Ervin's three-run home run in the second inning and were never headed.

George Milke, 4-2, went all the way for the victory. Danny O'Brien, 3-4, absorbed the loss.

Amarillo at San Antonio was rained out.

Five share 1st in Shizuoka Open

SHIZUOKA, Japan (AP) — Isao Aoki, Seiichi Kanai and Akio Kanemoto of Japan and Lu Liang-Huan and Hsieh MinNam of Taiwan each shot a four-under-par 68 Thursday to share the first round lead in the $90,900 Shizuoka Open Golf Tournament.

Talbott tops junior field

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — Stan Talbott of Snyder shot a seven-over-par 78 Wednesday to retain a share of the lead after two rounds in the age 16-17 division of the 21st annual Junior Texas-Oklahoma golf tournament.

San Angelo's Marshall Brown fired a 76 at the Wichita Falls Country Club to tie Talbott for the lead with a 147 total. Mark Brooks of Fort Worth had the best round of the day, a 74, and was one shot behind the leaders.

Defending champion Lawrence Field of Oklahoma City had a 79 and was five shots off the pace at 152.

The 72-hole tournament concludes Friday.

Nasty triumphs by being nasty

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Ilie Nastase has done it again.

The antics of the fiery Romanian on court Wednesday as he scrambled his way through to the third round were as wild as the time two years ago when he grabbed a Wimbledon fan's umbrella and took it on court with him—all to urge the umpire to halt play in a light mist.

Wednesday's trouble erupted in the fourth set of Nastase's match against Andrew Pattison of Rhodesia. Pattison took the first two sets 9-7, 6-3, beating Nastase at his own game with clever passing shots, dinks and cut shots.

Nastase came back to win the third set 7-5, but Pattison got a crucial 4-3 lead in the following set by breaking Nastase's serve in the seventh game.

THE ROMANIAN appeared upset at a foot fault called against him. He argued with the linesman and umpire, then ducked behind the green canvas surrounding the No. 2 court, to the bewilderment of his opponent and the delight of the packed crowd.

Wimbledon referee Fred Hoyle was summoned and Nastase was warned to play on. Some 10 minutes elapsed before he resumed play, and the game quickly swung his way. He broke Pattison's service to even the games at 4-4. More antics followed — complaining about the state of the grass and the noise in the crowd—and one spectator yelled: "Shut up and play tennis." Others simply booed.

Nastase buckled down to his game, broke service in the 14th game and took the set 8-6. One service break in the fifth and final set was al he needed for the match.

Rangers' Brat debuts with win over Twins

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (AP) — New Texas Manager Eddie Stanky, spruced and polished by nine years of coaching college baseball, likes what he sees of his new team.

"The boys sure looked good," said Stanky, obviously delighted by the Rangers come-from-behind 10-8 victory in Minnesota Wednesday night.

"Yup, they sure looked good coming from behind,' reiterated Stanky, as he unbuttoned his light-blue Ranger traveling uniform with the No. 42. "I'm glad I came back up."

STANKY SAID he sat up with his wife Dickie until 3 a.m. Monday, mulling over the chance to return to the majors.

"She said, 'whatever you want to do is okay,' " said Stanky. "Once you get a taste of it, you've always got a hankering to get back."

Stanky, nicknamed "The Brat," by a New York sports writer in 1945 for his blood-and-guts, was offered the job Sunday night by Rangers' owner Brad Corbett.

The 59-year-old Stanky signed a contract that carries through the 1978 season although he can quit at any time if he prefers.

His nine years at the University of South Alabama left an indelible mark on Stanky, who continually brought up the college life during visits with reporters before and after Wednesday night's game.

"I FORGOT for a moment that I'm in the pros now and not still in college," said Stanky. "I expected my old buddy Gene Mauch to come over and shake my hand just like we do in college."

"The biggest difference?" Stanky asked rhetorically about the college and pro game.

"I'd say about an hour-and-half," he continued, referring facetiously to the TwinsRangers 18-run, 26-hit marathon which required 3 hours and 16 minutes to play.

Did nine years away from the major leagues mellow one of the game's most intense competitors?

"If we'd have lost, I just might have locked you guys out," replied Stanky, drawing again from a bank of one-liners accumulated during 40 years in baseball.

Wilson to run for Red Raiders

LUBBOCK—The fastest miler in the history of Midland High School, Robert Wilson, has signed a letter of intent to run for Texas Tech University.

This spring Wilson finished third in the AAAA mile run with a 4:15.1 in the state meet. he also had a 4:15.9 during the regional run.

Wilson is also a two-time District 5-4A mile champion and cross country champion.

"Robert will probably run the mile and three-mile for us," Tech track coach Corky Oglesby said. "I think he will help our cross-country program also."

Operators stake 122 Permian Basin oil, gas projects

The number of petroleum tests staked in the Permian Basin decreased last week. Operators filed permit applications for 122 tests, compared with 141 permits sought two weeks ago.

Wildcats decreased to 19 last week, down five from the 24 sites staked in the previous count.

Last week District 8 tallied seven wildcats, with District 7-C getting six and District 8-A reporting 4. Southeast New Mexico had two wildcats staked.

The Texas Railroad Commission District 8, with headquarters in Midland accounted for 33 field development projects, followed by 26 in Lubbock's District 8-A office.

Unusual discard enrages kibitzer

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

"Certain people should never be allowed in the same room as a deck of cards," said the Old Kibitzer in a voice trembling with emotion. He had watched two tricks of today's hand and had then walked out of the card room.

Opening lead — ◇ A

West took the ace of diamonds and continued with the queen. Declarer ruffed with dummy's ace of spades, and East made the play that sent the Old Kibitzer out of the room talking to himself. East threw away a trump!

Declarer led dummy's jack of spades for a finesse and continued with the ten, picking up all of the trumps. Unfortunately for South, the clubs broke horribly and he eventually lost another trick.

East's trump discard cost nothing. Declarer would lead dummy's jack and ten and would capture four trumps just as easily as three.

NO SAFE DISCARD

If East discarded a heart at the second trick, dummy's nine of hearts would eventually be good for declarer's twelfth trick. And if East discarded a club, declarer could eventually ruff one of dummy's clubs and get his twelfth trick with the other low club.

East's unusual discard at the second trick allowed him to defeat the contract by keeping as many hearts and clubs as the dummy at all times.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one club, and the next player passes. You hold: SK9873; H72; D8532; C65. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. Some experts strain harder to respond to an opening bid of one club than to any other opening bid, but it is very dangerous to respond with only 3 points in high cards and no particular distributional strength. The best way to stay out of trouble with a really ghastly hand is to pass.

Commission discourages Texas dog guide school

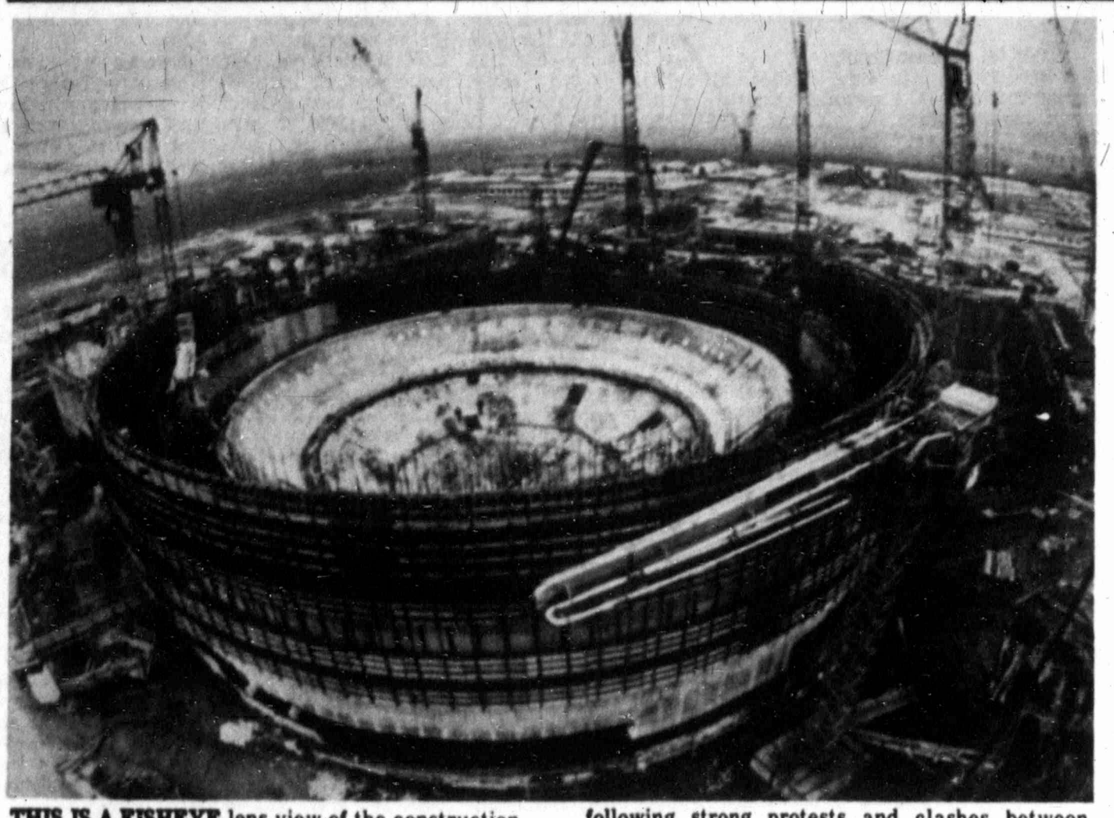

AUSTIN—The Board of Directors for the State Commission for the Blind took a strong position against a private effort to establish a dog guide school in Texas, voting to discourage charitable institutions from aiding in the effort.

Board member John Turner of Dallas said there is no need to set up a school in Texas to train the guide dogs for blind persons and pointed out that there are no waiting lists for persons who seek to obtain a guide dog.

Turner said the climate in Texas would be detrimental to the dogs and trainers both. He said he had visited a New Jersey guide dog school and learned that the instructors walk as much as 18 miles a day training dogs.

In Texas, he said, such a training program would be rough for dogs and trainers alike. He also pointed out that during several months of the year in Texas, asphalt streets are too hot for a guide dog, as it might blister the dog's feet. "The heat in Texas would be absolutely detrimental," Turner said.

FPC freezes growth of Cities Service line

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cities Service Gas Co. is under Federal Power Commission orders to halt the growth of natural gas demand on its pipeline as of Jan. 1.

The distributors purchasing gas from Cities Service may take on new customers and sell more gas, the FPC ruled, but if they do they will have to purchase the additional gas from a supplier other than Cities Service.

The detailed, complex FPC decision prescribing a "permanent curtailment plan" to deal with potential gas shortages on the Cities Service system was adopted June 14 by the commission, amending an initial decision by administrative law Judge Ernst Liebman.

Cities Service provides natural gas for markets in Kansas, Missouri Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

Last winter, the FPC said supply shortages forced Cities Service to curtail gas delivery to its "category three" users, large commercial establishments.

"We believe the record in this case supports the imposition of some type of load growth restrictions," the commission said.

"Experience this past winter indicates that, in planning for the future, it would be prudent to assume a pessimistic outlook.

"Continued growth can only exacerbate the problems of serving high priority loads in winters such as the one we experienced this year."

The FPC said Cities Service has only one customer capable of managing its temperatures sensitive load, so it is not practical to base growth restriction on some fixed service level of the past.

Instead, the FPC said, "The appropriate method of curtailment on the Cities system is the requirements approach advocated by Cities. This approach is not without precedent and is similar to the method used on the system of Southern Natural Gas Company."

Under that method, Cities Service must set up an index of its customers' requirements, based on end use of the gas and including an adjustment factor for weather variations, for customers connected to the system as of Jan. 1, 1978.

That index will limit the amount of gas Cities Service may sell.

"Cities' resale customers (such as gas utilities) will be able to add any new customers they choose in any priority they choose," the FPC said.

"However, Cities' tariff will no longer require it to transport additional gas to serve new loads in excess of existing requirements.

"In order for distributors to serve these new loads they will be compelled to obtain supplies from sources other than the Cities system," the decision continued.

If some of their final customers conserve gas and make part of their previous supplies available, the FPC said, distributors may shift the gas to other customers or to new customers in the same priority or in a higher priority.

"The effect of this will be an end to growth in terms of volumes of gas transported while permitting the distributors to serve new customers from volumes generated through conservation measures, attrition among customers, peak shaving, etc.," the FPC explained.

The decision also revised the schedule of priorities that determines which customers must lose gas service first, in time of shortages.

The highest priority, and the last to be cut off, includes residential and small commercial requirements, including such essential services as hospitals.

The FPC allowed Cities Service to split larger commercial and industrial requirements into two further categories.

Second priority was assigned to commercial requirements from one to three million cubic feet per month; industrial requirements less than three million cubic feet per month; industrial and commercial requirements for plant protection, and pipeline customer storage injections requirements.

Large commercial requirements of three million cubic feet per month or more, and industrial feedstock or process requirements were assigned third priority for gas delivery during shortages.

Other industrial gas requirements were assigned the last five priorities, generally based on size and ability to switch to alternate fuels.

The FPC said the assignment of larger commercial gas users to third priority was "based on historical operation" of the Cities Service system.

"These customers have historically been subject to curtailment and their contracts specifically require them to be able to accept curtailment," said the commission.

But the FPC postponed this reclassification until April 1, 1978, giving the large commercial customers more time to prepare their alternate-fuel capabilities to cope with the more severe curtailments they may face in the lower priority.

Reclassified customers who serve human needs and who cannot convert to other fuels can apply to Cities Service or to the FPC for emergency relief or special exemptions.

West Texas sectors get wildcat, stepouts

A wildcat site has been staked in Tom Green County, and a prospector was making production tests. Also, outposts have been planned for the Jameson field of Coke and Sterling and casing was being set at a Runnels prospect.

TOM GREEN WILDCAT

Florida Gas Exploration Co., operating from Midland, filed application for No. 1 West-Pate, a 6,500-foot venture in Tom Green, 12 miles north of San Angelo.

Drillsite is 570 feet from north and 2,080 feet from west lines of section 3, GC&SF survey, one location east of the discovery well in the depleted Eliza Baker, North (Caddo) field.

Amoco Production Co. was making production tests at No. 1-B H. R. Wardlaw III, Tom Green searcher, ⅜ mile northwest of production in the Wardlaw Three (Wolfcamp) gas field.

It pumped 24 hours through perforations at 5,770-5,871 feet, making eight barrels of oil and 14 barrels of water.

JAMESON TESTS

Amarex, Inc., Oklahoma City, plans No. 3 Phillip Brown as a ½-mile east offset to a recently completed 1⅝-mile southwest extension to the Sterling County part of the Jameson (Strawn) field.

Drillsite is 1,816 feet from south and 873 feet from east lines of section 169, block 2, H&TC survey, 10 miles east of Sterling City. Planned depth is 7,500 feet.

R. L. Burns Corp. of Dallas accounted for the Coke outpost. It is No. 1-20 Ellwood, slated as a 2½-mile west outpost to the Jameson field, but separated by depleted wells.

Location is 660 feet from northeast and southeast lines of section 20, block 15, SPRR survey, and projected depth is 7,000 feet.

RUNNELS PROJECT

It indicated production with the recovery of 150 feet of oil and 280 feet of mud-cut oil on a drillstem test at 3,656-3,661 feet.

The project, bottomed at 3,786 feet, spots 2,757 feet from south and 3,379 feet from east lines of Austin & Williams survey 263, 2¾ miles east of Jennings oil production in the Lindemann field.

Discovery potentials in Eddy; producer completes in Chaves

Discoveries and a confirmer were finaled in Eddy County, N.M., while a Chaves area gained a new producer.

Yates Petroleum Corp., operating from Artesia, finaled No. 1-HK Lizzie Howard as a dual Wolfcamp and Atoka gas strike in Eddy, five miles north of Artesia.

From the Wolfcamp zone, perforated at 5,055-5,072 feet, it flowed on preliminary potential test at the rate of 300,000 cubic feet per day, through a ¼-inch choke.

It was finaled from the Atoka for a preliminary, daily gauge of 500,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through a ¼-inch choke and perforations at 7,178-7,184 feet.

Drilled to 7,407 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at 7,404 feet, the plugged-back depth.

Wellsite is 2,310 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 13-16s-25e, five miles northwest of the POW (Morrow) gas field.

Read & Stevens, Inc., Roswell, No. 1 W.R. State-Communitized, has been completed as an Atoka gas strike in Eddy, four miles northeast of Carlsbad and three miles southwest of Atoka gas production in the Burton Flat field.

It had a calculated, absolute open flow of 7.976 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio measuring 75,258-1. Condensate gravity is 54.5 degrees.

Staked as a Morrow project in the Burton Flat field, it was drilled to 11,470 feet, and plugged back to 11,252 feet in 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Top of the Atoka was picked at 10,270 feet, under ground elevation of 3,207 feet.

It was completed for a preliminary 24-hour potential of 400,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through a ¼-inch choke and perforations at 7,803-7,893 feet. Acid treatment was 1,000 gallons.

It was drilled to 8,050 feet in the Mississippian, and plugged back to 7,928 feet. Operator set 4½-inch casing at 7,960 feet.

The pool opener, originally completed as a Devonian discovery in August, 1973, was completed later as the opener of Morrow production in the area.

Holly Energy, Inc. has completed No. 2 Lula as a new gasser in the Buffalo Valley (Atoka) pool of Chaves County, about 11 miles northeast of Lake Arthur.

The new well had a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1.090 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 8,495-8,505 feet.

Reeves gets outpost try

An offset has been planned for a Reeves County field, and attempt will be made to extend a pay zone production in a Midland pool.

Dyco Petroleum Corp., Tulsa, Okla., plans No. 1 Touchstone, an 11,200-foot test, as a ½-mile south stepout to the three-well San Martine (Fusselman) field of Reeves.

Texaco Inc. plans to attempt dual completion as a 3⅞-mile south and slightly west extension to Strawn oil production in the Hallanan field of Midland County at No. 1-B-1 H. S. Foster, Devonian well in the Headlee field.

It was drilled to 12,238 feet, and completion try in the Strawn will be at about 10,280 feet.

Test slated in Hockley

Mobil Oil Corp. has staked site for a location north offset to the most southwesterly well in a two-well Abo area of the Levelland field of Hockley County.

It is No. 65 Maple Wilson, scheduled 467 feet from south and east lines of labor 12, league 41, Maverick CSL survey, six miles southwest of Levelland. Planned depth is 7,300 feet.

Allowable changed

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission has ordered oil production in the Goldsmith Field of Ector County changed from a reservoir allowable to a top, percentage well rate of 73 barrels a day. The Commission said it was acting upon the recommendations of Senior Engineer George Singletory Jr. of the Oil and Gas Division.

Last April, Singletory conducted a commission-called hearing to review the Goldsmith Field, and redetermine the most efficient rate of oil and gas withdrawal from the field. The Gulf Oil Corp. and other Goldsmith operators present at the April heaing requested the Commission to set the allowable at 73 barrels daily per well.

Production in the field began in 1955, and now totals 20,000 barrels per day. As of Jan. 1, 1977, the field had produced over 295 million barrels of oil, according to Commission testimony.

Projects in WT fields near potential stage

RK Petroleum Corp., Midland, No. 2-A Wolcott, ⅜-mile northwest offset to production in a northwest sector of the RK (Devonian) field of Martin County, was bottomed at 12,045 feet, and operator was preparing to run production string.

It indicated production with the recovery of 2,000 feet of water blanket and 630 feet of oil on a 4¼-hour drillstem test from 11,735-12,045 feet. The sample chamber recovery was 2,350 cubic centimeters of slightly mud-cut oil, gravity 45 degrees.

It is 4,732 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of Hartley CSL survey, league 250, 9½ miles north of Tarzan.

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1 Zauk Gas Unit, assured third producer and ⅞-mile west extension to that pay in the Rojo Caballos, South field of Pecos County, flowed gas through the separator at the daily rate of 15 million cubic feet for five hours.

The flow was through an unreported choke and perforations at 18,055-18,172 feet, after the section had been acidized with 12,000 gallons and fractured with 68,000 gallons and an unreported amount of sand fracture.

Work starts on facility

HOUSTON — Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. announced that facilities are under construction at its Cedar Bayou olefins plant for the recovery and conversion of acetylene to acetylene black.

The acetylene is produced in a new hydrocarbons cracking unit which came onstream at Cedar Bayou earlier this year. Acetylene black is scheduled to be available from the new plant by early 1979.

This operation will provide a second source of supply of Gulf's "Shawinigan" grades of acetylene black now produced at Shawinigan, Canada. The Shawinigan plant has been in operation since 1929 and is based on calcium carbide-derived acetylene.

The acetylene black production at that location will ultimately be phased out at some time in the future in favor of the new Cedar Bayou source, reports R. M. Bartley, regional vice president of U.S. operations.

Acetylene black is used principally in the production of dry cell batteries. It also is used in conductive coatings, spark-proof flooring, specialty inks and catalysts.

DRY HOLES

BORDEN — Wil-Mc Oil Corp., Dallas, No. 1-A Sterling Williams, wildcat, 660 feet from north and 2,300 feet from east lines of section 269, block 97, H&TC survey, 10 miles east of Gail, td 7,900 feet.

CRANE — Arvin Norwood Drilling Co., Midland, No. 1 Wilson, in the W.E.R. field, 330 feet from northwest and 500 feet from southwest lines of section 38, block 2, H&TC survey, 13 miles southwest of Crane, td 3,400 feet.

CROCKETT — Amoco Production Co. No. 2 Jake Beasley Trust, in the Whitehead field, 1,210 feet west of the northwest corner of section 4, block N, TCRR survey, thence 632 feet south to location in section 22, block G-2, J. W. Friend Original Grantee, abstract 4802, 20 miles southeast of Ozona, td 9,341 feet.

RUNNELS — John W. Barbee, Abilene, No. 1 Charles W. Glass, wildcat, 2,420 feet from south and 1,850 feet from east lines of Austin & Williams survey 263, 11 miles northeast of Ballinger, td 3,790 feet.

D&J Operating, Inc., Abilene, No. 1 N. J. Whitley, wildcat, 580 feet from north and 467 feet from east lines of I. P. Wallace survey 139, 14 miles southeast of Winters, td 4,000 feet.

SCHLEICHER — Pennzoil Co. No. 1 Henry Moore, wildcat, 680 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of section 28, block A, GC&SF survey, 13 miles west of Eldorado, td 8,030 feet.

TOM GREEN — Amoco Production Co. No. 1 K. W. Brown, in the Wardlaw Three field, 902 feet from most southerly south line and 4,334 feet from most southerly west line of section 1131, GC&SF survey, 10 miles northwest of San Angelo, td 7,100 feet.

UPTON — Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1-I W. C. Corbett Jr., et al, wildcat, 660 feet from south and west lines of section 5, block B-2, GC&SF survey, eight miles south of Rankin, td 11,710 feet.

Offset test flows crude

Union Texas Petroleum Corp. No. 1-57 Farmar, ⅜-mile southeast and northeast stepout to the four-well Rock-Pen (Canyon) oil field of Irion County, flowed 210 barrels of oil and two barrels of water in 24 hours, with gas volume at 700,000 cubic feet per day.

Flow was through perforations at 6,980-7,038 feet. Testing continued.

Extenders complete

Frank W. Burger of Sweetwater has completed two north extensions in the J.M.R. (Strawn reef) field of Nolan County, about three miles south of Sweetwater.

No. 1-B J. W. Byrd gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 105 barrels of 42-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio measuring 980-1. It was finaled through perforations at 6,049-6,110 feet, following 10,000 gallons of acid.

No. 1 J. W. Byrd had a daily potential of 38 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 12 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 940-1. It finaled through an 18-64-inch choke and perforations at 6,076-6,153 feet, after treating with 10,000 gallons of acid.

DRILLING REPORT

ANDREWS — Fasken No. 12-3-Y Fee, pumped 50 barrels of oil and 143 barrels of oil in 18 hours, through perforations at 4,766-4,787 feet.

Gulf No. 1-A Fisher; preparing to put on a pump for tests through perforations at 4,472-4,502 feet.

WINKLER — Monsanto No. 1-21-36 University; td 15,430 feet; pb 9,000 feet swabbed 30 barrels of load in two hours, with a good show of gas on last run, through perforations at 8,200-8,275 feet.

DEAR ABBY

Conversation should be two-way street

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is the greatest! I know it for a fact, because he's been telling me that for 36 years.

My problem is that's ALL he ever tells me. Other than that, there is no conversation between us. He never asks me a question or initiates any conversations with me.

We have just one thing in common, now that the kids are married and gone from home. He still likes sex. Sometimes I get so starved for conversation I will get his attention by turning on the music and doing a little strip tease—tossing my undies at him, one piece at a time. But that just leads to the bedroom, and he doesn't talk much in there.

If someone would have classes to teach men how to talk to their wives, I would drag him there.

Do other women have this problem? Or am I. . .—ALONE IN WASHINGTON?

DEAR ALONE: You're not alone, I'm sure. But why don't YOU initiate some conversation? Ask him what he thinks about the energy shortage or the chances for world peace, or how long he thinks Elizabeth Taylor will be happy down on the farm? The silence at your house is half your fault.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old whose sister is married and has an 8-month-old baby. She's living with her in-laws while her husband is in the service. They don't treat her very well, but she is totally dependent upon them. She was married after the baby was born and is very unhappy in her marriage, but she's trapped.

I recently ran into the fellow she was once in love with. He told me he was still in love with my sis and he asked me to give her his phone number because he couldn't very well call her where she now lives.

My sister has often expressed her regret at having turned him down, and I'm sure she would like to see him again. I've always thought these two were meant for each other. He never married.

Should I give her his message?—TORN OUT EAST

DEAR TORN: When in doubt, apply the "do unto others" principle. Give your sister the message.

DEAR ABBY: One more letter, please, on TALKS TOO MUCH. Mrs. Anonymous asked for tolerance on the part of those who had to listen to non-stop talkers.

I agree with you. People who talk too much should become conscious of what they're saying.

I, too, was a long-winded bore until a dear friend did me a tremendous favor and asked me if I had ever LISTENED to myself.

I was more shocked than hurt by her frankness, but I began to listen to myself. That cured me.

I still bless my friend for probably the most helpful suggestion I've ever received.—TALKS LESS, LISTENS MORE

DEAR TALKS LESS: The trick is to get a non-stop talker to LISTEN when you tell him he talks too much.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WONDERING" IN MANKATO: Yes, it is possible that he has forgotten that you owe him the money, but I would attribute his "never mentioning it" to his good taste rather than his bad memory. Emerson said, "Pay every bill like God wrote the bill." And I say, "Wise man, that Emerson."

HOROSCOPE

By CARROLL RIGHTER

(Fri., June 24)

GENERAL TENDENCIES: Excellent planetary influences are now present, so get in touch with key persons and come to a new agreement and understanding with them. Put new plans in effect.

ARIES (Mar. 21 to Apr. 19) Come to a better understanding with associates. The evening is fine for gaining prestige in group activities.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21 to Feb. 19) A new and interesting outlet should be studied well since it could bring much success in the future. Think constructively.

PISCES (Feb. 20 to Mar. 20) If you folow your intuition today you can attain your immediate aims. Sidestep one who has ulterior motives.

AT WIT'S END

Umpiring between doctor, sickee hectic chore

By ERMA BOMBECK

One of the chores that was never mentioned in my job description when I became a wife and mother was that of mediator between the Family Doctor and the Family Sickee.

You know how it goes. Your child comes in from play and says, "I don't feel well. My legs feel like they got little needles all over them, my head hurts real bad, I got a big pain right here on my side, and I can't see real well. Everything turns black and I'm dizzy and burning up and then I got this real chill and sometimes there's a ringing in my ears and . . ."

As you herd the child into bed, your blood turns to ice as you hurriedly call the doctor.

"Could you bring him to the office around 3:00?" he asks.

Every maternal hair on your neck stands up.

"You are assuming that he will last until 3:00. I want you to come here!"

Sometimes my performance is so convincing a doctor will actually stop off on his way home. He enters the room of the Sickee.

At the sight of the doctor the kid starts to move about like a Japanese volleyball team. He springs into the air, falls on the mattress on his face, giggling and laughing, hiding behind the pillow, bring out his puppets, turning on the record player, dancing and singing into the doctor's stethoscope.

"Is this the child who is going to that big playroom in the sky?" he asks tiredly. Then turning to the child he asks, "Is there a pain here?"

The child falls down giggling.

"What about here?"

He shakes his head no until I think he will screw himself into the bed.

"A laxative should do it," says the doctor, closing the bag.

My husband is no better. After he relates all his symptoms to me, I relate them to the doctor and then report, "The doctor says he would like to meet you in the emergency ward of the hospital."

"That's ridiculous," he says. "I'm not in THAT much pain. What did you tell him?"

"I used your words, 'You're young. I want you to marry again.'"

"And for THAT he wanted me to come to the hospital?"

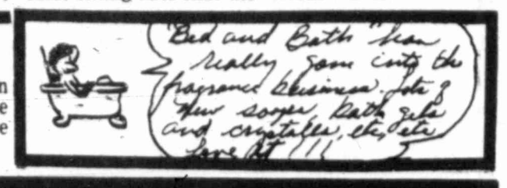

I have been put in the middle so many times that I am sometimes reluctant to call the doctor. The last time my son complained of a knee injury I put it aside for a day or so. When we finally got to the doctor he said, "Didn't the boy complain?"

"Actually, he did," I said, "but I thought I could pull it off as the final billing date ends the 30th."

I have seen the look he gave me on only one other occasion. It was when Gen. Yoshijiro Umeza tried to shake Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hand when Japan surrendered at the end of World War II.

THIS IS A FISHEYE lens view of the construction site of the Grohnde, West Germany nuclear power plant where work came to a halt recently following a decision of the Hannover state court. The court decided to withdraw the plants building permit following strong protests and clashes between demonstrators and police. The Grohnde plant is one of 27 nuclear power stations in Germany which are either under construction or already operating.

FPC freezes growth of Cities Service line

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cities Service Gas Co. is under Federal Power Commission orders to halt the growth of natural gas demand on its pipeline as of Jan. 1.

The distributors purchasing gas from Cities Service may take on new customers and sell more gas, the FPC ruled, but if they do they will have to purchase the additional gas from a supplier other than Cities Service.

The detailed, complex FPC decision prescribing a "permanent curtailment plan" to deal with potential gas shortages on the Cities Service system was adopted June 14 by the commission, amending an initial decision by administrative law Judge Ernst Liebman.

Cities Service provides natural gas for markets in Kansas, Missouri Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

Last winter, the FPC said supply shortages forced Cities Service to curtail gas delivery to its "category three" users, large commercial establishments.

"We believe the record in this case supports the imposition of some type of load growth restrictions," the commission said.

"Experience this past winter indicates that, in planning for the future, it would be prudent to assume a pessimistic outlook.

The FPC said Cities Service has only one customer capable of managing its temperatures sensitive load, so it is not practical to base growth restriction on some fixed service level of the past.

Instead, the FPC said, "The appropriate method of curtailment on the Cities system is the requirements approach advocated by Cities. This approach is not without precedent and is similar to the method used on the system of Southern Natural Gas Company."

Under that method, Cities Service must set up an index of its customers' requirements, based on end use of the gas and including an adjustment factor for weather variations, for customers connected to the system as of Jan. 1, 1978.

That index will limit the amount of gas Cities Service may sell.

"Cities' resale customers (such as gas utilities) will be able to add any new customers they choose in any priority they choose," the FPC said.

"However, Cities' tariff will no longer require it to transport additional gas to serve new loads in excess of existing requirements.

"In order for distributors to serve these new loads they will be compelled to obtain supplies from sources other than the Cities system," the decision continued.

If some of their final customers conserve gas and make part of their previous supplies available, the FPC said, distributors may shift the gas to other customers or to new customers in the same priority or in a higher priority.

"The effect of this will be an end to growth in terms of volumes of gas transported while permitting the distributors to serve new customers from volumes generated through conservation measures, attrition among customers, peak shaving, etc.," the FPC explained.

The decision also revised the schedule of priorities that determines which customers must lose gas service first, in time of shortages.

The highest priority, and the last to be cut off, includes residential and small commercial requirements, including such essential services as hospitals.

The FPC allowed Cities Service to split larger commercial and industrial requirements into two further categories.

Second priority was assigned to commercial requirements from one to three million cubic feet per month; industrial requirements less than three million cubic feet per month; industrial and commercial requirements for plant protection, and pipeline customer storage injections requirements.

Large commercial requirements of three million cubic feet per month or more, and industrial feedstock or process requirements were assigned third priority for gas delivery during shortages.

Other industrial gas requirements were assigned the last five priorities, generally based on size and ability to switch to alternate fuels.

The FPC said the assignment of larger commercial gas users to third priority was "based on historical operation" of the Cities Service system.

"These customers have historically been subject to curtailment and their contracts specifically require them to be able to accept curtailment," said the commission.

But the FPC postponed this reclassification until April 1, 1978, giving the large commercial customers more time to prepare their alternate-fuel capabilities to cope with the more severe curtailments they may face in the lower priority.

Reclassified customers who serve human needs and who cannot convert to other fuels can apply to Cities Service or to the FPC for emergency relief or special exemptions.

Discoveries and a confirmer were finaled in Eddy County, N.M., while a Chaves area gained a new producer.

Yates Petroleum Corp., operating from Artesia, finaled No. 1-HK Lizzie Howard as a dual Wolfcamp and Atoka gas strike in Eddy, five miles north of Artesia.

From the Wolfcamp zone, perforated at 5,055-5,072 feet, it flowed on preliminary potential test at the rate of 300,000 cubic feet per day, through a ¼-inch choke.

It was finaled from the Atoka for a preliminary, daily gauge of 500,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through a ¼-inch choke and perforations at 7,178-7,184 feet.

Drilled to 7,407 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at 7,404 feet, the plugged-back depth.

Wellsite is 2,310 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 13-16s-25e, five miles northwest of the POW (Morrow) gas field.

Read & Stevens, Inc., Roswell, No. 1 W.R. State-Communitized, has been completed as an Atoka gas strike in Eddy, four miles northeast of Carlsbad and three miles southwest of Atoka gas production in the Burton Flat field.

It had a calculated, absolute open flow of 7,976 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio measuring 75,258-1. Condensate gravity is 54.5 degrees.

Staked as a Morrow project in the Burton Flat field, it was drilled to 11,470 feet, and plugged back to 11,252 feet in 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Top of the Atoka was picked at 10,270 feet, under ground elevation of 3,207 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of section 6-21s-27e.

It was completed for a preliminary 24-hour potential of 400,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through a ¼-inch choke and perforations at 7,803-7,893 feet. Acid treatment was 1,000 gallons.

It was drilled to 8,050 feet in the Mississippian, and plugged back to 7,928 feet. Operator set 4½-inch casing at 7,960 feet.

The pool opener, originally completed as a Devonian discovery in August, 1973, was completed later as the opener of Morrow production in the area.

Holly Energy, Inc. has completed No. 2 Lula as a new gasser in the Buffalo Valley (Atoka) pool of Chaves County, about 11 miles northeast of Lake Arthur.

The new well had a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1.090 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 8,495-8,505 feet.

Reeves gets outpost try

An offset has been planned for a Reeves County field, and attempt will be made to extend a pay zone production in a Midland pool.

Dyco Petroleum Corp., Tulsa, Okla., plans No. 1 Touchstone, an 11,200-foot test, as a ½-mile south stepout to the three-well San Martine (Fusselman) field of Reeves.

Texaco Inc. plans to attempt dual completion as a 3⅞-mile south and slightly west extension to Strawn oil production in the Hallanan field of Midland County at No. 1-B-1 H. S. Foster, Devonian well in the Headlee field.

It was drilled to 12,238 feet, and completion try in the Strawn will be at about 10,280 feet.

Test slated in Hockley

Mobil Oil Corp. has staked site for a location north offset to the most southwesterly well in a two-well Abo area of the Levelland field of Hockley County.

It is No. 65 Maple Wilson, scheduled 467 feet from south and east lines of labor 12, league 41, Maverick CSL survey, six miles southwest of Levelland. Planned depth is 7,300 feet.

Allowable changed

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission has ordered oil production in the Goldsmith Field of Ector County changed from a reservoir allowable to a top, percentage well rate of 73 barrels a day. The Commission said it was acting upon the recommendations of Senior Engineer George Singletory Jr. of the Oil and Gas Division.

Last April, Singletory conducted a commission-called hearing to review the Goldsmith Field, and redetermine the most efficient rate of oil and gas withdrawal from the field. The Gulf Oil Corp. and other Goldsmith operators presént at the April heaing requested the Commission to set the allowable at 73 barrels daily per well.

Production in the field began in 1955, and now totals 20,000 barrels per day. As of Jan. 1, 1977, the field had produced over 295 million barrels of oil, according to Commission testimony.

Offset test flows crude

Union Texas Petroleum Corp. No. 1-57 Farmar, ⅜-mile southeast and northeast stepout to the four-well Rock-Pen (Canyon) oil field of Irion County, flowed 210 barrels of oil and two barrels of water in 24 hours, with gas volume at 700,000 cubic feet per day.

Flow was through perforations at 6,980-7,038 feet. Testing continued.

West Texas sectors get wildcat, stepouts

A wildcat site has been staked in Tom Green County, and a prospector was making production tests. Also, outposts have been planned for the Jameson field of Coke and Sterling and casing was being set at a Runnels prospect.

TOM GREEN WILDCAT

Florida Gas Exploration Co., operating from Midland, filed application for No. 1 West-Pate, a 6,500-foot venture in Tom Green, 12 miles north of San Angelo.

Drillsite is 570 feet from north and 2,080 feet from west lines of section 3, GC&SF survey, one location east of the discovery well in the depleted Eliza Baker, North (Caddo) field.

Amoco Production Co. was making production tests at No. 1-B H. R. Wardlaw III, Tom Green searcher, ⅜ mile northwest of production in the Wardlaw Three (Wolfcamp) gas field.

It pumped 24 hours through perforations at 5,770-5,871 feet, making eight barrels of oil and 14 barrels of water.

JAMESON TESTS

Amarex, Inc., Oklahoma City, plans No. 3 Phillip Brown as a ½-mile east offset to a recently completed 1⅛-mile southwest extension to the Sterling County part of the Jameson (Strawn) field.

Drillsite is 1,816 feet from south and 873 feet from east lines of section 169, block 2, H&TC survey, 10 miles east of Sterling City. Planned depth is 7,500 feet.

R. L. Burns Corp. of Dallas accounted for the Coke outpost. It is No. 1-20 Ellwood, slated as a 2½-mile west outpost to the Jameson field, but separated by depleted wells.

Location is 660 feet from northeast and southeast lines of section 20, block 15, SPRR survey, and projected depth is 7,000 feet.

RUNNELS PROJECT

It indicated production with the recovery of 150 feet of oil and 280 feet of mud-cut oil on a drillstem test at 3,656-3,661 feet.

The project, bottomed at 3,786 feet, spots 2,757 feet from south and 3,379 feet from east lines of Austin & Williams survey 263, 2¾ miles east of Jennings oil production in the Lindemann field.

Extenders complete

Frank W. Burger of Sweetwater has completed two north extensions in the J.M.R. (Strawn reef) field of Nolan County, about three miles south of Sweetwater.

No. 1-B J. W. Byrd gauged a 24-hour pumping potential of 105 barrels of 42-gravity oil, with gas-oil ratio measuring 980-1. It was finaled through perforations at 6,049-6,110 feet, following 10,000 gallons of acid.

No. 1 J. W. Byrd had a daily potential of 38 barrels of 42-gravity oil and 12 barrels of water, with gas-oil ratio of 940-1. It finaled through an 18-64-inch choke and perforations at 6,076-6,153 feet, after treating with 10,000 gallons of acid.

Projects in WT fields near potential stage

RK Petroleum Corp., Midland, No. 2-A Wolcott, ⅜-mile northwest offset to production in a northwest sector of the RK (Devonian) field of Martin County, was bottomed at 12,045 feet, and operator was preparing to run production string.

It indicated production with the recovery of 2,000 feet of water blanket and 630 feet of oil on a 4¼-hour drillstem test from 11,735-12,045 feet. The sample chamber recovery was 2,350 cubic centimeters of slightly mud-cut oil, gravity 45 degrees.

It is 4,732 feet from north and 660 feet from east lines of Hartley CSL survey, league 250, 9½ miles north of Tarzan.

Gulf Oil Corp. No. 1 Zauk Gas Unit, assured third producer and ⅞-mile west extension to that pay in the Rojo Caballos, South field of Pecos County, flowed gas through the separator at the daily rate of 15 million cubic feet for five hours.

The flow was through an unreported choke and perforations at 18,055-18,172 feet, after the section had been acidized with 12,000 gallons and fractured with 68,000 gallons and an unreported amount of sand fracture.

Work starts on facility

HOUSTON — Gulf Oil Chemicals Co. announced that facilities are under construction at its Cedar Bayou olefins plant for the recovery and conversion of acetylene to acetylene black.

The acetylene is produced in a new hydrocarbons cracking unit which came onstream at Cedar Bayou earlier this year. Acetylene black is scheduled to be available from the new plant by early 1979.

This operation will provide a second source of supply of Gulf's "Shawinigan" grades of acetylene black now produced at Shawinigan, Canada. The Shawinigan plant has been in operation since 1929 and is based on calcium carbide-derived acetylene.

The acetylene black production at that location will ultimately be phased out at some time in the future in favor of the new Cedar Bayou source, reports R. M. Bartley, regional vice president of U.S. operations.

Acetylene black is used principally in the production of dry cell batteries. It also is used in conductive coatings, spark-proof flooring, specialty inks and catalysts.

DEAR ABBY

Conversation should be two-way street

By ABIGAIL VAN BUREN

DEAR ABBY: My husband is the greatest! I know it for a fact, because he's been telling me that for 36 years.

My problem is that's ALL he ever tells me. Other than that, there is no conversation between us. He never asks me a question or initiates any conversations with me.

We have just one thing in common, now that the kids are married and gone from home. He still likes sex. Sometimes I get so starved for conversation I will get his attention by turning on the music and doing a little strip tease—tossing my undies at him, one piece at a time. But that just leads to the bedroom, and he doesn't talk much in there.

If someone would have classes to teach men how to talk to their wives, I would drag him there.

Do other women have this problem? Or am I. . .—ALONE IN WASHINGTON?

DEAR ALONE: You're not alone, I'm sure. But why don't YOU initiate some conversation? Ask him what he thinks about the energy shortage or the chances for world peace, or how long he thinks Elizabeth Taylor will be happy down on the farm? The silence at your house is half your fault.

DEAR ABBY: I am an 18-year-old whose sister is married and has an 8-month-old baby. She's living with her in-laws while her husband is in the service. They don't treat her very well, but she is totally dependent upon them. She was married after the baby was born and is very unhappy in her marriage, but she's trapped.

I recently ran into the fellow she was once in love with. He told me he was still in love with my sis and he asked me to give her his phone number because he couldn't very well call her where she now lives.

My sister has often expressed her regret at having turned him down, and I'm sure she would like to see him again. I've always thought these two were meant for each other. He never married.

Should I give her his message?—TORN OUT EAST

DEAR TORN: When in doubt, apply the "do unto others" principle. Give your sister the message.

DEAR ABBY: One more letter, please, on TALKS TOO MUCH. Mrs. Anonymous asked for tolerance on the part of those who had to listen to non-stop talkers.

I agree with you. People who talk too much should become conscious of what they're saying.

I, too, was a long-winded bore until a dear friend did me a tremendous favor and asked me if I had ever LISTENED to myself.

I was more shocked than hurt by her frankness, but I began to listen to myself. That cured me.

I still bless my friend for probably the most helpful suggestion I've ever received.—TALKS LESS, LISTENS MORE

DEAR TALKS LESS: The trick is to get a non-stop talker to LISTEN when you tell him he talks too much.

CONFIDENTIAL TO "WONDERING" IN MANKATO: Yes, it is possible that he has forgotten that you owe him the money, but I would attribute his "never mentioning it" to his good taste rather than his bad memory. Emerson said, "Pay every bill like God wrote the bill." And I say, "Wise man, that Emerson."

Umpiring between doctor, sickee hectic chore

By ERMA BOMBECK

One of the chores that was never mentioned in my job description when I became a wife and mother was that of mediator between the Family Doctor and the Family Sickee.

You know how it goes. Your child comes in from play and says, "I don't feel well. My legs feel like they got little needles all over them, my head hurts real bad, I got a big pain right here on my side, and I can't see real well. Everything turns black and I'm dizzy and burning up and then I got this real chill and sometimes there's a ringing in my ears and . . ."

As you herd the child into bed, your blood turns to ice as you hurriedly call the doctor.

"Could you bring him to the office around 3:00?" he asks.

Every maternal hair on your neck stands up.

"You are assuming that he will last until 3:00. I want you to come here!"

Sometimes my performance is so convincing a doctor will actually stop off on his way home. He enters the room of the Sickee.

At the sight of the doctor the kid starts to move about like a Japanese volleyball team. He springs into the air, falls on the mattress on his face, giggling and laughing, hiding behind the pillow, bring out his puppets, turning on the record player, dancing and singing into the doctor's stethoscope.

"Is this the child who is going to that big playroom in the sky?" he asks tiredly. Then turning to the child he asks, "Is there a pain here?"

The child falls down giggling.

"What about here?"

He shakes his head no until I think he will screw himself into the bed.

"A laxative should do it," says the doctor, closing the bag.

My husband is no better. After he relates all his symptoms to me, I relate them to the doctor and then report, "The doctor says he would like to meet you in the emergency ward of the hospital."

"That's ridiculous," he says. "I'm not in THAT much pain. What did you tell him?"

"I used your words, 'You're young. I want you to marry again.' "

"And for THAT he wanted me to come to the hospital?"

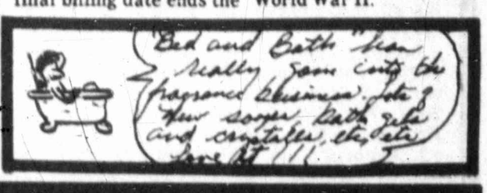

I have been put in the middle so many times that I am sometimes reluctant to call the doctor. The last time my son complained of a knee injury I put it aside for a day or so. When we finally got to the doctor he said, "Didn't the boy complain?"

"Actually, he did," I said, "but I thought I could pull it off as the final billing date ends the 30th."

I have seen the look he gave me on only one other occasion. It was when Gen. Yoshijiro Umeza tried to shake Gen. Douglas MacArthur's hand when Japan surrendered at the end of World War II.

Yes, this deep sea captain was a lady

NEW YORK (AP) — Mary Patten, called the "Florence Nightingale of the Ocean," is one of the few women to have had their names inscribed in the annals of the sea, records recently discovered reveal.

For a girl of 19 to sail a clipper ship 5,000 miles around two continents through storm and frigid weather, her captain-husband and two other officers ill below deck and a mutinous first officer in irons, is one of the all-time epics of the high seas.

In 1856, Capt. Joshua Patten was assigned to sail "Neptune's Car" from New York to San Francisco. Below decks, as recorded in the historic "disaster books" of the Atlantic Mutual Insurance Co., was a cargo valued at $800,000; appraisal of the cargo today would be $10,000,000.

At sea only a few days, Captain Patten was forced to depose his chief mate for mutiny and put him in irons. Malaria then felled the captain and his two remaining officers.

Responsibility for the navigation of "Neptune Car" now rested on young Mary Patten, the records show. Faced with the decision to return to New York or continue the long trip to the West Coast, she ordered her crew to sail on.

On the ship's southward sweep toward Cape Horn the weather turned frigid. Rounding the Cape in the dead of winter, the clipper ship shuddered in the storm-filled Antarctic. The insurance company's records show that only Mary's expert handling kept the clipper from capsizing in the heavy seas. When not at the helm, Mary was down in the cabin tending her ill husband, as well as the other sick.

After 55 tedious days, "Neptune's Car" entered San Francisco harbor. It was only after she safely delivered its valuable cargo that anyone knew that during the entire ordeal Mary was pregnant.

In recognition of her skill and courage, Mary was awarded several years' wages and many tributes, among them, "Few shipmasters could have excelled Mary Patten in seamanship or as a navigator."

Federal study backs park plans

By ELLEN HUME
The Los Angeles Times

WASHINGTON — The Carter administration's proposal to expand Redwood National Park by 48,000 acres would put just 611 forest products industry employes out of work — far fewer than the 2,000 to 3,000 estimated by the lumber industry, a new federal study indicates.

The study, released Tuesday by Interior Secretary Cecil D. Andrus, predicts, however, that if the government does not compensate for the job losses, another 757 people in related industries would be out of work. Altogether, the park expansion could displace 3 per cent of Humboldt County's work force, the report says.

The new statistics are important, because the battle over expanding Redwood National Park in Northern California now hinges largely on its economic impact.

Angry loggers have bitterly opposed the government's plan to purchase 48,000 more acres of redwoods, saying the park already is environmentally protected and jobs are at stake.

Park expansion plans developed by Rep. Phillip Burton (D-Calif.) and Andrus include $40 million to re-employ displaced workers, pay tax supports to local governments and otherwise ease the economic impact of expansion.

The study released Tuesday, done by a Seattle consulting firm, is part of a $150,000 federal task force effort to determine how the expansion would effect Humboldt and Del Norte Counties.

The study noted that under the current Burton-Andrus compromise expansion proposal, about $12 million would be used to rehabilitate eroded areas around the park, creating from 390 to 485 temporary jobs.

Other workers could be re-employed in constructing a highway around the expanded park, the study indicates.

Many of the study's suggestions already have been incorporated into Burton's own jobs proposal, which will be discussed Thursday in the House Interior subcommittee on national parks.

Burton — who has rewritten his original 77,000-acre expansion proposal to conform with the 48,000-acre Andrus proposal — successfully steered much of the compromise bill Tuesday over its first hurdle in the House, a markup session before the national parks subcommittee.

Burton, chairman of the subcommittee, pulled eight proxy votes out of his pocket to defeat a key amendment offered by Rep. Don Clausen (R-Calif.), who has led the fight against park expansion.

The disputed provision dictates that all downed trees on the land when it is bought by the federal government will belong to the federal government. Clausen tried to amend the bill to give the downed trees to the lumber companies.

Admitting that his downed trees provision was "without precedent," Burton discounted Clausen's concern that the federal government might send them outside Humboldt County for processing.

"It is sheer nonsense to say this will be lost to the local economy," Burton said. "Where are we going to send the trees — to Cucamonga?"

After the defeat, Clausen declined to offer any of his other prepared amendments Tuesday, saying he would take them up again when the bill comes before the full Interior committee in several weeks. Clausen said he still hopes to kill the entire expansion measure.

Dreams of log cabin come true

PATASKALA, Ohio (AP) — "You know what I've always wanted," William Phillips mused to his wife last summer. "A log cabin."

She didn't comment and he thought, "Well, that's the end of that."

Next day at dinner, Mrs. Phillips asked where he would put a cabin.

The third day when they sat down to eat, Mrs. Phillips asked, "Who'd build it?"

"I would," the 69-year-old farmer replied.

"If you think we can do it, I'll help you," she said.

Now, less than a year later, a sturdy cabin sits across the drive from the Phillips' farm home four miles southwest of this Locking County community.

"We had a lot of fun doing it and will have a lot more fun using it," Phillips said.

He and his wife, Opal, 64, haven't abandoned their farm home for the 16-by-24-foot cabin, but admit to spending a lot of time in it.

Worker's 'smoking' lawsuit could set precedent

The Washington Post

WASHINGTON — Werner H. Peterke, a 46-year-old former federal employe, says his work environment gave him chest congestion, coughing fits "that turned me inside out," sore eyes, vomiting and other symptoms that forced him to quit work and entitled him to employe compensation payments.

The Office of Federal Employee Compensation agreed with him and granted him about $700 every two weeks in compensation in a case that his lawyer and others believe may set a precedent.

Peterke's was not the conventional case of a factory worker exposed to dangerous chemicals. He was a white-collar employe in the Social Security Administration's Baltimore offices, and he blames his miseries on the cigarette smoke that wafted his way from the desks of his fellow workers.

Peterke is one of a group of non smoking federal employes from several American cities who took their fight against tobacco smoke to court here last week. They want to force the government to allow smoking only in designated areas of federal buildings, and to improve ventilation to keep smoke from drifting into non-smoking areas.

The suit was filed in U.S. District Court by more than two dozen persons who claim they suffer physical ailments caused by tobacco smoke in their federal offices, and also by three organizations — the Federal Employees for Nonsmokers Rights, the Social Security Administration Group's Committee on Tobacco Smoke, and the Group Against Smokers' Pollution (GASP).

Spokesmen for the plaintiffs said they had been given the "runaround" by federal agencies and by the White House when they sought relief through other channels such as letters, grievance procedures and the like. Part of the problem, they believe, is that "most of the people who make the decisions are smokers."

The plaintiffs work for the Department of State, Defense, Health, Education and Welfare, Labor and several smaller agencies, in cities in Montana, Utah, Florida and Louisiana, as well as in the Washington, D.C., area.

Peterke's case appeared to be the most remarkable in the group. He said his symptoms had grown steadily worse since he joined the agency in 1972 and became almost intolerable in 1975, when he was put in an open office space "surrounded by smokers." His doctor diagnosed his condition as allergic bronchitis, or asthmatic bronchitis, he said.

Peterke said he eventually used up all his sick leave and, as a compromise between his physical needs and his economic needs as a father of four, began working half-time.

Peterke, who worked in Social Security's office of research and statistics, was granted employe compensation pay amounting to 75 per cent of the salary he lost as a result of his ailments.

On June 10 he stopped work entirely. "I want to go back," he said, adding that he hopes the lawsuit will make that possible.

OAS nations OK Carter's rights resolution

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) — The Organization of American States has "reaffirmed its commitment to the priority of human rights and to that extent we in this hemisphere lead the world," U.S. Ambassador Gale McGee said following OAS adoption of a U.S. human rights resolution.

The resolution was approved Wednesday at the final session of the seventh OAS general assembly by 14 of the 25 nations, one more than the majority required for adoption. Eight nations abstained and three were absent.

With the resolution, the OAS became the first international body to go on record in support of President Carter's campaign to improve human rights around the globe.

"If it weren't for the United States, the human rights issue would never have come up," said one Latin American diplomat.

The resolution calls on all OAS members to reaffirm their commitment to "the pursuit and achievement of human rights and to undertake to secure the termination of any such violation of human rights as may exist within its borders."

It also increases the financial support for the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights, which investigates reported violations of human rights in the hemisphere and reports on them to the OAS.

It was the major issue at the 10-day annual meeting.

The United States and eight other countries that co-sponsored the resolution successfully beat back a last-minute effort by Latin America's military governments, especially Argentina and Chile, to link human rights and terrorism in a single measure.

Argentina and Chile argued that terrorists also violate human rights, and that it is sometimes necessary to abridge human rights to combat terrorism.

Rebels attack city

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Rebels fighting to unite Ethiopia's easternmost province with neighboring Somalia attacked the provincial capital and blew up another bridge on the country's chief railway line to the coast, diplomatic sources report.

The sources said guerrillas of the Liberation Front for Western Somalia (FLWS) made an unsuccessful mortar and small arms attack last Wednesday and Thursday on the outskirts of Harar, a city of 50,000.

Government troops repelled the attack, the sources said, and afterward made a "very successful house-to-house search for rebels and rebel arms caches in the city and also in Diredawa," on the Addis Ababa-Djibouti rail line 26 miles northwest of Harar.

The sources said rebel sappers on Thursday blew up a bridge on the railroad north of Diredawa, and that four bridges on the line now have been taken out by the guerrillas. Railway officials said it might take two weeks to finish repairing the spans.

The railway normally carries 60 per cent or more of Ethiopia's imports and exports. Trucks are now being used, but the roads are frequently under rebel attack.

Ethiopia's Marxist military government accused the governments of Somalia and Sudan, Ethiopia's western neighbor, of trying to torpedo its "popular revolution" by sabotage and economic strangulation.

"The banning of aircraft and the sabotage of bridges are not isolated incidents but preplanned and coordinated efforts by the reactionary leaders of the Sudan and Somalia to subvert and disrupt the revolution of Ethiopia. These are acts of provocation for the consequences of which Ethiopia should not be held responsible," a spokesman for the Ministry of Information said.

The Ethiopian government accuses the Sudanese of aiding the Eritrean rebels who control much of the rural area of Eritrea, Ethiopa's northern most province.

"My summer power bill is lower than my neighbor's."

Luckenbach comes complete with songs, tourists

LUCKENBACH, Tex. (AP) — This Hill Country hamlet has one parking meter, one fireplug, one store, a Mud Dauber Day — and a nationwide hit country song named for it.

The tiny town also has a horde of tourists, who started pouring in a few weeks ago after Waylon Jennings and Willie Nelson, the high priests of progressive country music, released the song "Luckenbach, Texas."

Vacationers by the hundreds now brave the sometimes treacherous Central Texas back roads seeking the place with the funny name where the popular song says Waylon and Willie go to get back to the "basics of love."

Some, however, stayed long enough last weekend to carry off the town's beer-drinking chicken and every sign that says "Luckenbach."

"I'll tell you one thing," said Texas cotton farmer John Massey, "They've got cold beer and a shade tree and that's a hell of a lot better than most towns."

Inside the general store, Kathy Morgan was busy cleaning up the stacks of long-necked beer bottles scattered about on weathered tables and doing a little philosophizing on the town's success.

"There's something magic here," said Mrs. Morgan, who owns an interest in the store, the local dance hall and 10 acres of creek bottom. "And I think the big secret is we don't have facilities. Everyone has to sit together and start talking and enjoying each other."

But not everybody likes the hoopla. Mrs. Armin Engel, who lives in one of Luchenbach's two houses, calls it "foolishness."

"The elderly people used to play cards there (at the dance hall) on Sunday, but the local people don't go there anymore," she said.

The general store now makes more money on a weekend than it used to take in during holidays, like the infamous Mud Dauber Day.

Luckenbach was established in 1849, but few people paid it any mind until reporters and columnists took a fancy to Hondo Crouch, the late part owner of the store and post office.

Crouch's tall tales were printed far and wide and his interest in country music brought several big names to town for Saturday night gigs.

High court accepts review of General Motors judgment

AUSTIN, Tex. (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today agreed to review a $500,000 judgment against General Motors and in favor of a Houston man who was blinded when a window of his car shattered in an accident.

GM said the lower court rulings would set a precedent that probably would be used against auto manufacturers in every accident case involving pre-1972 cars and cuts from flying glass.

The high court set a July 13 hearing.

Curtis Lee Simmons won a $1 million judgment from a jury, but the Houston Court of Civil Appeals reduced it to $500,000 because he had settled with the owner of the truck that collided with his car.

Simmons is appealing the reduction of his award, and General Motors is appealing the $500,000 products liability judgment it was ordered to pay.

The question of liability for the flying glass might not even be considered by the court. It accepted the GM appeal on a single point: the trial judge's refusal to tell the jury of the settlement between Simmons and the other defendants — Feld Truck Leasing Corp. and its driver, Hestle Johnston Jr.

The settlement provides that if Simmons won his case against GM, Feld would get half, up to $200,000, as partial reimbursement for funds paid Simmons under terms of the settlement.

GM said the jury should have been told this since Johnston testified.

The appeals court said this did not make the trial "materially unfair."

General Motors said this was a precedent-making decision "concerning a novel form of settlement that gives a settling defendant a direct financial stake."

GM said the trial judge also had acted improperly in submitting as a standard of care a 1948 state law requiring cars sold in Texas to have glass that would not shatter and fly when broken. The law was changed on Jan. 1, 1972, two days before the accident.

GM said every car made in the United States since 1958 has had tempered — not laminated — safety glass in its side and rear windows. And tempered safety glass was shown in the trial to shatter and fly on impact.

Parole recommendations accepted by governor

The Los Angeles Times

VALLEY FORGE, PA. — The following are excerpts of letters written to his wife, Mamie, during World War II by the late Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower, Supreme Allied Commander in Europe and North Africa. The letters were made available to The Los Angeles Times by the Eisenhower family, which is affronted by continuing publicized accounts of Gen. Eisenhower's relations with the late Lt. Kay Summersby, his wartime driver and secretary. Eisenhower's correspondence, as evidenced below, was filled with expressions of love, longing and attachment to Mrs. Eisenhower. These letters in full, as well as the general's other wartime letters home — 319 in all — will be published next year by Doubleday in a book titled "Letters to Mamie," edited by Eisenhower's son, Brig. Gen. John S.D. Eisenhower. The handwritten letters addressed Mrs. Eisenhower simply as "Darling," "Sweetheart" or "My Sweetheart" and were usually signed, "Your Ike."

London, June 26, 1942

I cannot tell you how much I miss you. An assignment like this is not the same as an absence from home on maneuvers. In a tent, surrounded by soldiers, it seems natural to have to get along alone. But when living in an apartment, under city conditions, I constantly find myself wondering "why isn't Mamie here?" You've certainly become most necessary to me!!

London, August 2, 1942

Have as much fun as you can dear — when I see the unhappiness here and hear the tales of what has happened in the past, I thank the Lord that somewhere, some people, can have their minds relatively free of the direct problems of the war. I want you to be as happy as you can — and how I wish you were living here! You can't imagine how much you added to my efficiency in the hard months at Washington. Even I didn't realize then, at least not fully — but I do now, and I'm grateful to you.

London, October 30, 1942

On the day you open this letter you'll be 46. I'd like to be there to help you celebrate, and to kiss you 46 times (multiplied by any number you care to pick) ...The crowning thing you've given me is our son — he has been son wonderful, unquestionably because he's so much you — that I find I live in him so very often. Your love and our own son have been my greatest gift from life, and on your birthday I wish that my powers of expression were such as to make you understand that thoroughly — clearly and for always I've never wanted any other wife — you're mine, and for that reason I've been luckier than any other man.

Algiers, December 31, 1942

This is the briefest kind of a note; it mainly represents my final chance in 1942 to tell you I love you and that you mean everything to me. Before the new year can become the old I hope to see you, in person, to tell you these things much more explicitly than I can on cold paper. But whether I see you or not — I want you to know, and to remember, that my eventual return to you fills the nicest dreams and most comforting thoughts I have. In my time I have been intrigued momentarily — I've never been in love with anyone but you! I never will.

Algiers, January 13, 1943

...In the meantime don't forget I love you — all the time, always — you're the only woman I could ever live with. (Maybe tough on you, but there it is).

Algiers, February 20, 1943

This eve I just wanted to say you're the greatest gal in the world. I'll never be in love with anyone but you. So please be sure of that — and I hope it really means as much to you as ever.

Algiers, February 25, 1943

Fear not about WAACS taking care of my house. (Presumably Mrs. Eisenhower had mentioned in a letter some publicity concerning the general's living style). Mickey (Michael McKeogh, an enlisted man, who was Eisenhower's orderly) and three colored boys run the establishment. They are there always — and I don't want anyone else unless of course you'll come over and take the job!!...I love you all the time — don't go bothering your pretty head about WAACS — etc., etc.

Algiers, March 2, 1943

...You are all that any man could ask as a partner and sweetheart.

So Life says my old London driver came down! so she did — but the big reason she wanted to serve in this theater is that she is terribly in love with a young American Colonel and is to be married to him come June — assuming both are alive. I doubt that Life told that. But I tell you only so that if anyone is banal and foolish enough to lift an eyebrow at an old duffer such as I am in connection with WAACS — Red Cross workers — nurses and drivers — you will know that I've no emotional involvements and will have none. Ordinarily I don't try to think of all the details surrounding my existence when I write to you — they are all unimportant compared to the real things I like to talk to you about. And, by the way, my own driver is a Sergeant Drye! ...I love you — only."

(The "old London driver" who came to Algiers was Kay Summersby. The lieutenant colonel to whom she was engaged was Richard R. Arnold, who was soon to be killed in Tunisia by a mine. For a time Sgt. Leonard Dry (sic) drove Eisenhower in North Africa but was replaced by Mrs. Summersby.)

Algiers, March 4, 1943

Well, sweetheart, my real message is the same as always — I love you — there is no one else with whom I'd even want to be in love — ever.

Algiers, April 12, 1943

My biggest ambition (aside from trying to help win this war) is to get home to you, and never thereafter to leave your side.

Algiers, May 14, 1943

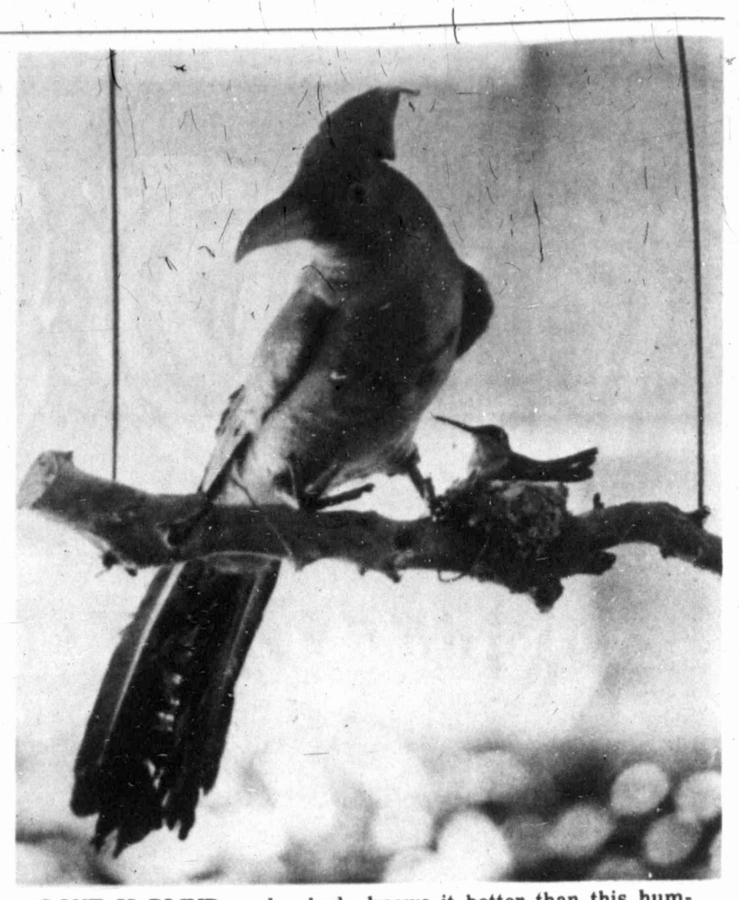

The only one of my drivers you've heard about is the one publicized in Life — Kay Summersby. In addition my fleet has Sergeant Drye, Corporal Kronke and two WAACS. Kay Summersby is to be married in a month or so to an American Colonel. The WAACS in this headquarters (some 200) are doing great work.

Algiers, May 26, 1943

Aligiers, June 11, 1943

Your letters often give me some hint of your loneliness, your bewilderment and your worries in carrying on your own part in this emergency. Don't ever think that I do not understand or that I am not truly sympathetic to the lost feeling you must so often have. Just please remember that no matter how short my notes I love you — I could never be in love with anyone else — and that you fill my thoughts and hopes for the future always. You never seem quite to comprehend how deeply I depend upon you and need you. So when you're lonely, try to remember that I'd rather be by your side than anywhere else in the world.

LOVE IS BLIND, and nobody knows it better than this hummingbird, whose unwavering devotion to a stuffed parrot is causing quite a flutter among her fellow feathered creatures. Sources close to the romance in Tony Costa's yard at Fresno, Calif., say the little bird finally found the "strong, silent type" she'd been hearing about and looking for so long. (AP Laserphoto)

Teen-agers accepting challenge

CHICAGO (AP) — Hundreds of teen-agers are doing chemical experiments in hospital labs, observing in stockbrokers' offices, sitting in on college classes, volunteering their time to community service organizations and learning to fly airplanes.

They are participants in a growing number of programs designed to challenge, motivate and educate high school students to meet the demands of a changing society.

Many of these programs were reviewed for educators attending the recent meeting here of the North Central Association. The association is an accrediting agency whose members in 19 Midwestern states set educational standards for universities, colleges, elementary, junior high, middle and high schools, and for overseas dependents' schools operated by the Department of Defense.

Dr. Ewald B. Nyquist, former New York state commissioner of education, described several "optional learning environments" that are stimulating reform in public schools.

In New York, Rochester's School Without Walls operates almost entirely in the community. Students might study biology at a college lab; chemistry classes might meet at the University of Rochester or a local hospital; business studies might include observing at a stockbroker's office or a local gas station.

The "Greenhouse" in Rockville Centre, N.Y., is an alternative high school for potential dropouts providing them with the opportunity of combining part-time classroom study with direct experience in such fields as banks, business and social agencies.

In Ft. Wayne, Ind., Northrop High School has combined a traditional program with a "School Within A School" (SWAS) concept in one building. SWAS, started in 1975 with two courses of study, has grown to four alternative study areas. Melvin Zehner, SWAS administrator, explained the program's operation:

The Community Based option enables students to combine classroom study mornings with for-credit service in the community during the afternoon.

The Inquiry Center, limited to 80 students, offers an accelerated academic program. Classes are held in a college atmosphere for major study areas. Students normally add up to three "electives" from the traditional program to their required schedule.

The SWAS Learning Center is for students who have scheduling problems or cannot function in a traditional classroom setting. They can work independently on assignments. The following year they can move back into the traditional program, or should an opening occur, into the Community Based program.

The Work Study Center is for educable mentally retarded students who spend half the day in class and half the day on community job training sites.

The flight training program at Sooner High School, Bartlesville, Okla., was started to motivate students not interested in math and science to sign up for classes. Basic concepts are explored through the study of meteorology, navigation, aerodynamics, aircraft construction, mechanics and aircraft performance, said Dr. Dale Smith, principal.

Students in the program are eligible for flight training on a Cessna (funded by community groups) leading to a private pilot's license. Started this year with 29 students, the program has attracted 114 boys and girls for the fall term.

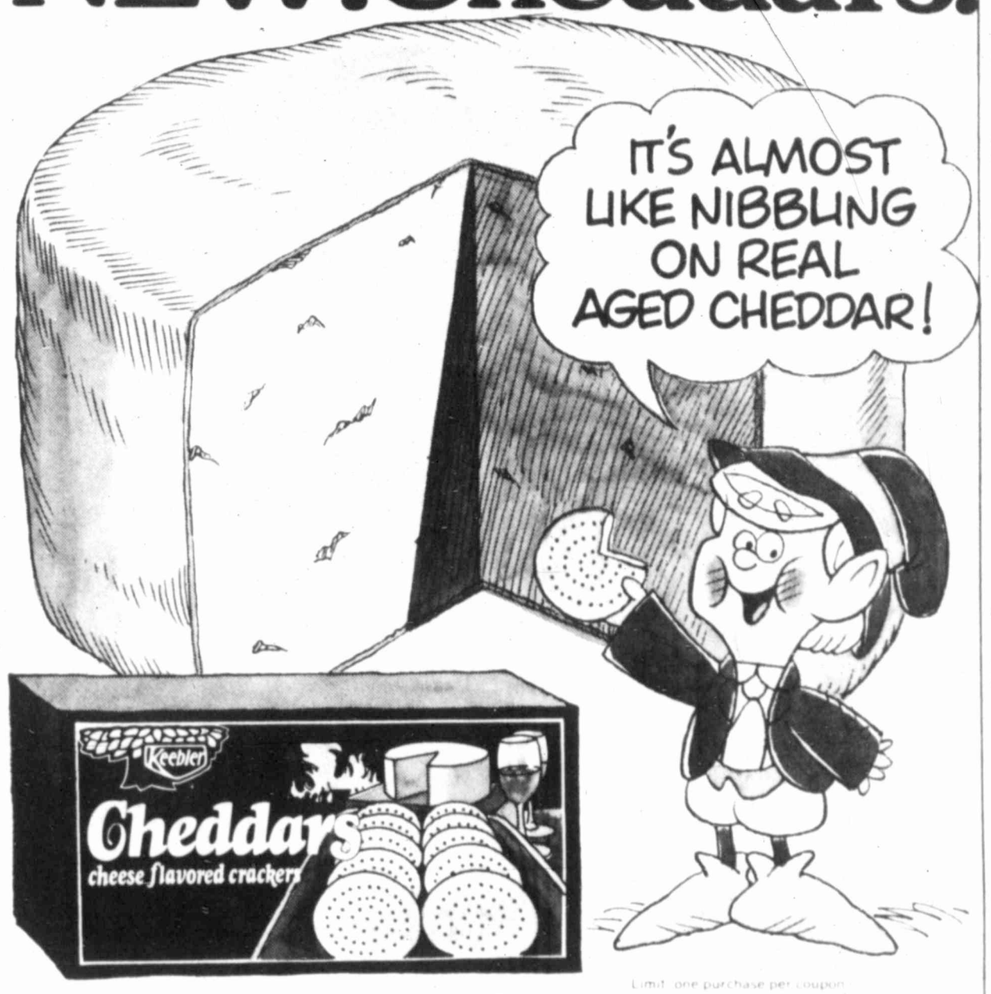

Of the 29 in the initial group, 24 have signed up for advanced math and science in the fall; 18 are in flight training, eight have taken their solo flights, and four have completed their cross-country requirements and will be licensed this year, Dr. Smith said.

At Plymouth Canton High School, Plymouth, Mich., students with an interest in a subject not offered on the regular schedule may arrange with a teacher to offer a class to several students with the same interest, or may undertake individual projects.

Kent A. Buikema, Plymouth Canton principal, explained his school's approach to independent study: "It is not the study that is independent, it is the learner who is independent. The concern here is open-ended inquiry, to ensure a self-learning process.

"The teacher becomes a tour guide, a counselor of learning. Responsibility for learning is put on the student, where it belongs, giving him valuable initiation into the self-reliance that will be expected of him in schooling beyond high school and life in general."

Cattlemen urged to visit hearing

Austin Bureau

AUSTIN—Independent Cattlemen's Association President T.A. Cunningham is urging ranchers in Texas and surrounding states to attend hearings next week in Fort Worth on the impact of beef imports.

Cunningham said the hearings "may be the cattle industry's best chance to voice support for reducing the massive amounts of beef imports...flooding our market."

The June 28 hearing is part of an investigation by the U.S. Trade Commission to determine the impact which beef imports have on the economy of the domestic cattle industry in this country.

Cattle producers are hoping the trade commission will find evidence sufficient to recommend that President Carter urge Congressional action to halt the flow of beef imports.

According to Cunningham, in 1976 some two billion pounds of meat and 983,000 head of live cattle were imported into the United States.

Town in Oklahoma votes real expansion

BRAY, Okla. (AP) — With a half dozen downtown buildings, two churches and a population of 650, Bray, Okla., is now larger than San Francisco and Boston.

Fearful of land hungry neighboring communities, residents voted 79-8 last week to incorporate 42,240 acres — 66 square miles — of surrounding lands into the municipality.

Bray has no police department, fire department, water system or any municipal services. Folks aren't even sure how they're going to govern the newly acquired domain that includes hardwood forests dotted with oil rigs in southwestern Oklahoma.

'Measure for Measure' rewarding production

ODESSA — "Measure for Measure," a drama with both humor and a "message," has opened the ninth annual Summer Shakespeare Festival at Odessa's Globe of the Great Southwest.

In some productions in the previous eight Globe festivals, I expected more, and got less, but in the case of "Measure for Measure," I expected less but got more. (Mind you, I am not implying that all previous seasons' productions were disappointments — there have been a number of excellent festival offerings at the Globe during the years since 1969.) But "Measure for Measure" is not, I think, one of the Bard's true masterworks, despite a certain gracefulness and pungency of theme, and for that reason I came away from the opening performance with the feeling that cast and director had fused their talents well to fashion a full-bodied and mainly rewarding production out of rather thin fabric.

"Measure for Measure" is certainly one of Shakespeare's most contemporary dramas, and for 20th Century Americans the play occasionally kindles hot coincidences with its central and ongoing theme of man's misuse of power in high office.

"Measure for Measure" has also been termed one of the Bard's most Christian plays, and the underlying admonition in it to "Judge not, lest ye be judged" certainly has relevance for modern man, as it had for mankind of earlier centuries.

Festival guest director Durward Jacobs has a talented and capable cast for "Measure for Measure." Heading the cast is Rodney Clark as Vincentio, Duke of Vienna, and Peter Nicholas as Angelo, whom the Duke unwisely authorizes to act as his deputy in his absence; Sid Williams as Claudio, a young gentleman unfairly imprisoned and sentenced to die under orders from Angelo; Lissa LeGrand as Isabella, the devout and chaste sister of Claudio, who goes to Angelo to plead for her brother's life; Russ Odom as Lucio, foppish young braggart and tattle-tale; Eloise Bruce as Mistress Overdone, a bawd; Patrick Rowan as Pompey, clownish servant to Mistress Overdone; Rhonda Clark as Juliet, beloved of the imprisoned ... Claudio and bearer of his unborn child; Janet Stanford as Mariana, the cast-aside fiance of the overbearing Angelo; Billy Nelson as Froth, a foolish prodigal; Ken Stacker as a provost. Other players are Vincent Niemann, John Cranford, James Bottom, Bob Gibson, John Amedro and Ida Kennedy.

"Measure for Measure" will have performances at 8 p.m. today, Friday and Saturday, at 2:30 p.m. Sunday, and at 8 p.m. next Wednesday and Thursday. The second festival offering, "Two Gentlemen of Verona," enters the repertory a week from Friday. A third production, Goldsmith's "She Stoops to Conquer," opens mid-July.

—ROGER SOUTHALL

Pickwicks doing 'Hansel & Gretel'

Midland Community Theatre's Pickwick Players are presenting "Hansel and Gretel" in matinees today, Friday and Saturday.

Following this afternoon's opening presentation, the stage version of the classic fairy tale will have performances at 2:30 p.m. Friday and Saturday. All seats are reserved, with single tickets priced $1.50 for adults, 75 cents for children. Tickets will be for sale at Theatre Centre in advance of curtain time daily.

"Hansel and Gretel" is the first of three shows scheduled during the Pickwicks' 10th summer season, with season tickets available at $3 for adults, $1.50 for youngsters.

SFO box offices open

SANTA FE, N. M. — Box offices in Albuquerque, Santa Fe, Los Alamos and El Paso opened this week for sale of Santa Fe Opera tickets.

The SFO's 21st season begins July 6 and continues through Aug. 27, with 37 performances of five operas scheduled. The season-opener will be a new opera by Italian composer Nino Rota, "The Italian Straw Hat," in its American premiere performance.

Also in the season lineup are productions of Verdi's "Falstaff," Debussy's "Pelleas and Melisande," Giordano's "Fedora," and Mozart's "Cosi Fan Tutte."

El Paso: Dillard's in Cielo Vista Mall, Tuesdays and Thursdays.

Tickets for performances also are on sale by mail from the SFO at P. O. Box 2408, Santa Fe 87501.

Final performances of the merry mini-musical will be at 8 p.m. today and 8:30 Friday and Saturday. Seating for all presentations may be reserved through the Theatre Centre box office, 682-2544.

Trust hopes to save historic properties

SAN PATRICIO, N. M. — The Lincoln County Heritage Trust, a privately-funded organization with headquarters in San Patricio, recently came into existence for the purpose of preserving historic properties in New Mexico and elsewhere in the Southwest.

Widely-known artist Peter Hurd, a resident of New Mexico's Lincoln County, has been joined by artist-writer-conservator John Meigs and other distinguished New Mexico residents who are concerned about the destruction of noteworthy early buildings and the dwindling of information sources of the Southwest. Conservation is the primary aim of the Trust and its founders.

Purpose of the Lincoln County Heritage Trust is the investigation of possibilities of preserving the historic structures for the benefit and enjoyment of present as well as future generations. The organization's interest is not confined to Lincoln County, or even to New Mexico, but covers the entire Southwest.

Presently, the Trust owns the Montano Store in Lincoln. Plans are for its opening this summer as an outstanding example of a restored Spanish American structure of the 1860-1880 period. The Trust hopes to work with the State of New Mexico so that important historic structures owned by the state in the Lincoln area can be visited by tourists and groups as a "package," with one admission ticket valid for all sites.

Another goal of the Trust is the recording and preservation of material from local and regional sources. In cooperation with the Lincoln County Historical Society, the Trust expects to record interviews, collect documents and early correspondence and copy related materials from other collections. The establishment of a Heritage Trust Press for the publication of such material is hoped for sometime in the future.

The Trust will actively solicit donations of written material and historic documents as well as period and historic furnishings, clothing and artifacts reflecting the three cultures of the Southwest — Indian, Spanish and Anglo.

The Lincoln County Heritage Trust has an extensive library of reference material which will be available to the public for persual and study after the collection has been cataloged. Additional 19th Century periodicals of all types, as well as 20th Century magazines on art and architecture, also are sought for the reference library.

The Trust now owns numerous collections of widespread interest including such Americana as glass and china, Mexican and New Mexican religious art, and paintings and graphics by prominent artists of the present and earlier periods (including works by Hurd and his wife, Henriette Wyeth Hurd.)

One of the collections, of 19th and early 20th Century quilts and needlework, is available for touring to communities and regional museums and currently is being exhibited in the Museum of the Southwest in Midland, Tex., through June. Parts of other collections also will become available for display in regional cities and museums as time goes on.

In addition to Hurd and Meigs, other prominent New Mexicans instrumental in forming the Lincoln County Heritage Trust include Robert O. Anderson, rancher-businessman and ardent conservationist; Joe Lackey, Roswell civic leader, and Paul Horgan, Pulitzer Prize-winning historian and author.

DALLAS — The inimitable Ginger Rogers, who started her long Hollywood career as a dancer and went on to win kudoes as a serious actress, is the star of a current show at the Music Hall in Fair Park here.

Miss Rogers' show is part of the current season lineup of the annual Dallas Summer Musicals. The one-week special opened Tuesday night, with performances to continue through Sunday.

Sharing the stage with Miss Rogers are four male dancers, "The Freds," as well as dancer Christie Westmoreland and comedian-impressionist Johnny Dark.

The Dallas production features hit songs from Miss Rogers' numerous Hollywood films, including "Top Hat" and "42nd Street," plus tunes from her first Broadway show, "Girl Crazy." There also are tunes from the 1960s musical, "Hello, Dolly," in which she replaced Carol Channing as Dolly in the original Broadway production.

Most Texans in House oppose water project cuts

HOUSE

PUBLIC WORKS. Rejected, 194 for and 218 against, an amendment to kill 17 public works projects. Members voting "for" favored President Carter's plan to terminate the projects. Although the amendment failed, the closeness of the vote indicated that the House would uphold any Carter veto of the legislation.

The amendment was proposed to HR 7553, the public works appropriation bill for fiscal 1978, later passed and sent to the Senate. The 17 projects, partially funded in previous years, are among 506 projects included in the bill and account for about $3.5 billion of the bill's $10.8 billion total price tag for the fiscal year. Carter has cited them as unnecessary and expensive "pork barrel," while their defenders have called them essential to prevent flooding and counter draught. The projects are situated in Oregon, Louisiana, Arkansas, Kansas, Wisconsin, Oklahoma, Missouri, Georgia, South Carolina, Mississippi, Kentucky, Utah, Colorado and South Dakota.

ROLL CALL REPORT

Rep. Butler Derrick, D-S.C., cosponsor of the amendment, said: "We have an obligation to stand up and not allow (taxpayers) to have to pay for projects which are at best marginal, which raise serious questions as to economic benefits, environmental impact and safety factors."

Rep. Joe Waggoner, D-La., an opponent, said: "It may make some political sense to some members to support this amendment. But we should not be talking politics today. We should be talking economic sense and common sense, and this amendment falls flat on both accounts."

Reps. Samuel Hall (D-1), Charles Wilson (D-1), Ray Roberts (D-4), Olin Teague (D-6), Jack Brooks (D-9), Jake Pickle (D-10), James Wright (D-12), Jack Hightower (D-13), John Young (D-14), Kika de la Garza (D-15), Richard White (D-16), Omar Burleson (D-17), Barbara Jordan (D-18), George Mahon (D-19), Henry Gonzalez (D-20), Robert Krueger (D-21), Bob Gammage (D-22), Abraham Kazen (D-23) and Dale Milford (D-24) voted "nay."

Rep. W. R. Poage (D-11) did not vote.

CUBA. Rejected, 139 for and 206 against, an amendment to deny funding of the U.S.'s budding rapprochement with Cuba. The amendment was proposed to HR 7556, an appropriations bill later passed and sent to the Senate.

The amendment stipulated that no money in the fiscal 1978 State Department appropriations bill could be spent on the plan to put 10 U.S. diplomats in the Swiss Embassy in Havana, to oversee dealings such as trade between the U.S. and Cuba. The U.S. has no formal diplomatic relations with Cuba.

Rep. Robert Lagomarsino, R-Calif., a supporter, said: "Our government is about to embark on this first step in recognizing Cuba, and unless we give the signal, it will go ahead. So, my colleagues, if we want to make our position known, I think this may well be the last chance we are going to have."

Rep. John Slack, D-W. Va., an opponent of the amendment, said that the United States' "best interests are served by maintaining communications with all countries, whether or not we approve of their governments or policies. Without such communication, it is difficult to deal with problems which arise and which exist between the two countries."

Teague, Eckhardt, Brooks and Poage did not vote.

LEGAL AID. Rejected, 178 for and 198 against, an amendment to continue the ban against political activity by attorneys working the quasi-federal Legal Services Corp. It was proposed to HR 6666, a bill extending the poverty law program for two more years.

HR 6666 called for repealing restrictions on political involvement to the extent that virtually the only prohibited activity would be candidacy in a partisan election. The bill was later passed and sent to the Senate with such language a part of it.

Rep. Caldwell Butler, R-Va., sponsor of the amendment, said that removal of the ban would bring about "the enhancement of the political careers of lawyers at the taxpayer's expense, which has nothing to do in this case with improving the quality of justice for the 29 million poor people in this country."

Rep. Robert Kastenmeier, D-Wisc., an opponent, said that the courts are now weighing the question of whether legal services attorneys can hold elective office in addition to their government jobs. He said they "should not lose their political souls" because they hold legal aid positions.

Teague, Eckhardt, Brooks, Poage and Young did not vote.

SENATE

CLEAN AIR ACT. Rejected, 33 for and 61 against, an amendment permitting limited pollution of the nation's areas of cleanest air, in order to permit power plant construction and other forms of industrial development. Such development would take place in pollution-range of clean-air areas but not within them.

Those senators voting for the amendment favored the lower standards. The amendment was proposed to S 252, the 1977 Clean Air Act Amendments, later passed and sent to conference with the House.

The rejected amendment would have allowed limited pollution (within public health standards) of Class I areas for up to 18 days annually. Class I areas are defined by the Environmental Protection Agency as national parks and other lands having "virtually pristine" air. Under current law such air cannot be degraded even if the degradation does not endanger public health.

Sen. James Allen, D-Ala., a supporter, said the amendment would give states "limited but essential flexibility in determining whether or not new industrial plants applying the best available pollution-control technology can be built or operated" near Class I areas.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., an opponent of the amendment, said it would "Gut the provision in the committee bill for the prevention of significant deterioration."

Sen. John Tower (R) voted "yea" and Sen. Lloyd Bentsen (D) voted "nay."

CLEAN AIR ACT. Adopted, 56 for and 38 against, an amendment requiring auto makers to meet federal tailpipe-emission standards by the 1980 model year. It was attached to S 252 (see above vote).

The amendment extended the existing 1978 deadline by two years, and softened standards for carbon monoxide, hydrocarbon and nitrogen oxide emissions. But the liberalization was generally favored by environmentalists and opposed by the auto makers and the UAW.

Sen. Edmund Muskie, D-Maine, a supporter, said he would have preferred no weakening of the existing auto-emission requirements, but would vote for the amendment in the interests of compromise.

Sen. Donald Riegle, D-Mich., an opponent of the amendment, said Congress "just cannot mandate technology that does not exist, and we will be back with this whole fight all over again."

HUMAN RIGHTS. Rejected, 43 for and 50 against, an amendment requiring the U.S. to oppose loans by international government lending banks to nations which consistently violate their citizens' human rights. The amendment instructed U.S. delegates to lending institutions such as the World Bank and Asian Development Bank to automatically vote against loans to repressive governments. It was proposed to HR 5262, an international lending bill later passed and sent to conference with the House.

Sen. James Abourezk, D-S.D., sponsor of the amendment, said that "if the President enunciates a policy on human rights the Congress ought to back him up and make certain the Administration is very serious about what they say is their policy."

Opponents noted that President Carter opposed the amendment as being too rigid. Sen. Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., said: "If we are going to be an effective participant in enhancing the cause of human rights, it is not by coming in and saying automatically 'No, no, no,' and walking out of the board room."

Billy gets first post in Plains

PLAINS, Ga. (AP) — Billy Carter, whose older brother has demonstrated a certain political knack, has finally been elected to office.

But there was little speculation about the birth of a political dynasty as the two-time loser for mayor of Plains presided over a meeting of the newly formed Plains Merchants Association on Tuesday night.

"This is the first time I've been elected to any damn thing," Carter remarked at the meeting, called to discuss the economic future of this southwest Georgia town.

Toughest narcotics law fails

NEW YORK (AP) — A federally-funded study shows that the nation's toughest narcotics law has failed.

Enacted in 1973 as part of then-Gov. Nelson Rockefeller's zealous war on drug crime and addiction, the New York state statute barred plea bargaining and mandated severe penalties for drug abuse, with sentences of life in prison for narcotics dealers.

But an $869,000-study undertaken by the New York Bar Association's Joint Committee on Drug Law Evaluation during the three years following passage of the statute showed that addiction and crime remained at levels comparable to those in neighboring cities and states with less stringent laws.

"The depressing bottom line is that despite the money spent in judges (and judicial and prosecutorial machinery), the disposition of cases remained just what it was before," said Bayless Manning, vice chairman of the committee.

—There was no drop in heroin use or supplies.

— Drug-case dispositions and convictions were lower than would have been expected under the old law, even though an estimated $76 million was spent to create 49 new judgeships and other staff to handle the anticipated increase in drug prosecutions.

Historic Tennessee park now open to backpackers

By RICHARD H. LOWE

WHITE BLUFF, Tenn. (AP) — Montgomery Bell State Park, named after the man who forged the cannon balls used by Andrew Jackson at the Battle of New Orleans, is hosting new wanderers now — backpack campers.

The state last fall opened the Montgomery Bell Overnight Trail, covering 11.7 miles through the dense forests of Dickson County bordering Lake Woodhaven, providing hikers with a touch of wilderness and a touch of history.

Between Woodland and Wildcat Hollow campsite, the path comes to the edge of Creech Hollow Lake, where beavers have gnawed forest trees to build dams.

A lean-to shelter that sleeps eight persons is located at each campsite, but there is no roof on the facility at Wildcat Hollow, the furthest site along the trail.

Makeshift bridges constructed of split tree limbs traverse creeks and streams at numerous points along the trail. The path, part of which is an old dirt road through the park, wanders up and down the rolling forest terrain.

Fox, squirrel, raccoon, oppossum, deer and a variety of birds make their home in the 5,000 acres that still show signs of a once booming iron ore industry. The hardwood forest, once cut to clear farmland and produce charcoal for the iron ore furnaces, has healed its wounds and ore pits near the old Laurel Furnace lie abandoned.

Montgomery Bell purchased the Cumberland Iron Works from Gen. James Robertson in 1804 and built the iron ore industry which covered most of Dickson County. He also constructed what is believed to be the nation's oldest existing man-made tunnel, which supplied water power to operate an iron ore forge on the Harpeth River.

A Presbyterian church, the birthplace of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church in 1810, holds services in the park during the summer. The founders of the church, the Revs. Samuel McAdow, Finis Ewing and Samuel King, lived in a log cabin, which still stands next to the church.

Diablos clinch first half flag

EL PASO — El Paso quelled a ninth-inning Midland threat to beat the Cubs, 4-3, and sew up the first-half Texas League West Division pennant before 1,845 fans at Dudley Field Wednesday night.

The Diablos hold a three-game lead with two games to play.

For the Cubs, who put the first batter on base in seven of the nine innings, it was a long night of frustration.

Lefthanded reliefer Dave Schuler, one of several players who had just joined the Diablos for the pennant drive, got dangerous Karl Pagel on a bouncer to shoot for the third out.

IN THE ninth, Steve Davis and Aaron Randall led off with singles, but Buckner popped up his bunt. Boras reached first when first-baseman Terry Stupy threw away his grounder and Davis scored. Carlos Perez relieved Schuler and uncorked a wild pitch while whiffing Hernandez to put runners on second and third.

After Pagel was walked intentionally, Daniel Boone, another newcomer, came in to get Steve Haug, pinch hitting for Tony Pepper who is an 0-for-21 slump, on a force at second.

Designated Hitter Floyd Rayford, who was added to the El Paso roster for the series, singled home a run in the fourth and drove in another with a sacrifice fly in the fifth.

CATCHER PAT Kelly homered to left off Jeff Albert, 4-7, in the third to give El Paso a 1-0 lead and although Midland tied in the fourth on a walk to Duane Gustavson and singles by Randall and Buckner, the Cubs never led.

El Paso scored what proved to be the decisive runs in the fifth. Stupy singled, Jay Peters doubled to put runners on second and third. A wild pitch put the first run across the plate and then Rayford delivered his sacrifice fly.

Chuck Porter, just arrived from Salinas, will pitch for El Paso tonight while either Larry Groover, 2-2, or Jack Ledbetter, 4-5, will go for the Cubs.

Tulsa sweeps Shreveport

By The Associated Press

In the Texas League, East Division leader Tulsa took a pair from Shreveport, 3-2 and 6-0, and Jackson knocked off Arkansas 7-2.

Blair Stouffer stroked a game winning single for Tulsa in the eight inning of a scheduled seven-inning game to give Tulsa the victory in their first contest with Shreveport. The Drillers had to come back from a 2-0 deficit for the win.

In the second game, Mark Soroko muzzled the Captains on six hits, running their loss streak to eight. It was Soroko's first start since surgery last month for bone chips in his elbow.

Jackson's victory snapped a five-game Arkansas win streak. the Mets broke quickly with Terry Ervin's three-run home run in the second inning and were never headed.

George Milke, 4-2, went all the way for the victory. Danny O'Brien, 3-4, absorbed the loss.

Amarillo at San Antonio was rained out.

Five share 1st in Shizuoka Open

SHIZUOKA, Japan (AP) — Isao Aoki, Seiichi Kanai and Akio Kanemoto of Japan and Lu Liang-Huan and Hsieh MinNam of Taiwan each shot a four-under-par 68 Thursday to share the first round lead in the $90,900 Shizuoka Open Golf Tournament.

Talbott tops junior field

WICHITA FALLS, Tex. (AP) — Stan Talbott of Snyder shot a seven-over-par 78 Wednesday to retain a share of the lead after two rounds in the age 16-17 division of the 21st annual Junior Texas-Oklahoma golf tournament.

San Angelo's Marshall Brown fired a 76 at the Wichita Falls Country Club to tie Talbott for the lead with a 147 total. Mark Brooks of Fort Worth had the best round of the day, a 74, and was one shot behind the leaders.

Defending champion Lawrence Field of Oklahoma City had a 79 and was five shots off the pace at 152.

The 72-hole tournament concludes Friday.

Martin scores tennis upset

WIMBLEDON, England (AP) — Billy Martin, 20-year-old rising star from Palos Verdes, Calif., shocked the No. 3 seed, Guillermo Vilas of Argentina, 6-2, 6-4, 6-2 in the third round today of the 100th edition of the Wimbledon tennis championships.

Vilas was the fifth of the 16 male seeds to be knocked out.

The Argentinian, who won the French Open title on clay in brilliant style last month, failed to reproduce the same brand of tennis on the slicker grass surface.

Vilas, after a slow start, gained confidence in the second set and was tied 3-3. But then Martin hit two of his best shots—a backhand pass and a forehand return across the court—to break service. It was the end of Vilas' strong resistance.

Martin hit some great returns to break through again at the start of the third set, and Vilas never looked sharp again. He went tentatively to the net from time to time, where he missed his volleys or watched Martin pass him.

The other male seeds eliminated from the tournament thus far were Americans Roscoe Tanner, Brian Gottfried and Harold Solomon and Italian Adriano Panatta.

In the women's bracket, Sue Barker, the pert blond from Great Britain and the No. 4 seed, moved into the third round by beating Ann Kiyomura of San Mateo, Calif., in just over half an hour 6-2, 6-1.

One game enough, Brat quits Rangers

Stanky had replaced Frank Lucchesi as field boss of the Rangers Wednesday night and guided the team to a 10-8 victory over the Minnesota Twins.

"Eddie Stanky has quit almost before he got started," Rangers General Manager and vice president Eddie Robinson told newsmen at the downtown Minneapolis hotel, where the American League team is staying.

Robinson said third base coach Connie Ryan would serve as temporary manager. The Rangers wind up a four-game series against the Twins at Metropolitan Stadium today.

Robinson said he was in the shower when Stanky called him from the airport at 8:15 a.m., CDT, to tell him he was leaving the team.

Mel Lucas, athletic director of the University of South Alabama, confirmed an earlier report by the Mobile Press that Stanky was returning to Mobile. Lucas said Stanky's wife, Dickie, told him of the sudden change of ilans and "she was shocked as well as all of us."

Stanky, 59, startled many of his friends when he decided to leave South Alabama to the big leagues, replacing Frank Lucchesi as manager of the Rangers.

Lucas said Stanky was "homesick" and found out fast he didn't want to go the major league route again. The scrappy major league player known as "The Brat" in the 1940s and 1950s, managed the St. Louis Cardinals and the Chicago White Sox before leaving for the college ranks in 1969.

Lucas was exuberant about Stanky's return to South Alabama and said "he's my man." But before he takes Stanky back, he said with a laugh, "I may have to interview him on a couple of things."

Stanky has been highly successful at South Alabama, compiling a 308-102 record and taking four teams to the NCAA playoffs.

Wilson to run for Red Raiders

LUBBOCK—The fastest miler in the history of Midland High School, Robert Wilson, has signed a letter of intent to run for Texas Tech University.

This spring Wilson finished third in the AAAA mile run with a 4:15.1 in the state meet. he also had a 4:15.9 during the regional run.

Wilson is also a two-time District 5-4A mile champion and cross country champion.

"Wilson will probably run the mile and three-mile for us," Tech track coach Corky Oglesby said. "I think he will help our cross-country program also."

Indians nip Toronto

By The Associated Press

Frank Duffy raced home from third on Jim Norris' sacrifice fly in the 12th inning Wednesday night, leading the Cleveland Indians to their seventh straight victory, 7-5 over the Toronto Blue Jays.

Duffy walked leading off the inning, moved to second on a sacrifice and to third on Paul Dade's single. After Norris' sacrifice fly, Rico Carty singled and Johnny Grubb and Buddy Bell walked, forcing in the final run.

THE CHICAGO White Sox downed the California Angels 6- 2 behind Jorge Orta's two-run homer and Bart Johnson's 62-3 innings of five-hit relief.

Reggie Jackson slammed a two-run double climaxing New York's five-run eighth inning as the Yankees snapped a five-game losing streak by outslugging the Detroit Tigers 12- 11. Graig Nettles homered for the Yankees, while Steve Kemp and Phil Mankowski had two-run homers for Detroit.

THE BOSTON Red Sox continued their home run barrage, slamming five homers, including two by Carlton Fisk, in beating the Baltimore Orioles 7- 4. Butch Hobson, George Scott and Jim Rice also homered for Boston, which has hit 29 homers in its last eight games.

Jim Wohlford and Don Money each drove in two runs, leading the Milwaukee Brewers past the Oakland A's 5-1. Claudell Washington's three-run homer was the big blow as the Texas Rangers outlasted the Minnesota Twins 10-8, making a success of Manager Eddie Stanky's return to the major leagues.

SOLO HOME runs by Larry Biittner and Jerry Morales backed the combined four-hit pitching of Bill Bonham and Bruce Sutter as the Chicago Cubs stopped the San Francisco Giants 4-2.

Larry Bowa's grand slam homer in the seventh inning, the last of eight home runs in the game, gave the Philadelphia Phillies a 15-9 victory over the Cincinnati Reds.

Veteran Phil Niekro gave up 10 hits and four walks but pitched the Atlanta Braves to a 4-1 victory over the New York Mets. Rookie Floyd Bannister hurled a four-hitter and Jim Fuller cracked a pair of tworun homers as the Houston Astros whipped the Montreal Expos 7-0.

Bowie lauds Finley

NEW YORK (AP) — Although Bowie Kuhn and Charlie Finley did not see eye to eye over two more issues this past week, the baseball commissioner did have faint praise for his embattled adversary.

That position was much different than the stance Kuhn suggested earlier this year when, fearing Finley was going to take the money and run, he scrutinized carefully any deal the Oakland A's owner even dreamed of.

"I was concerned that he was liquidating his ballclub," Kuhn told The Associated Press Wednesday. "I thought there was a danger that he was selling off all his best players."

Kuhn said the Phil Garner deal to Pittsburgh for a couple of name pitchers and some good minor league prospects just before the 1977 season "tended to alleviate my concern."

Kuhn liked that deal, in which the A's got top rookies Mitchell Page and Rick Langford, and used it to illustrate what makes a good transaction in the eyes of the commissioner's office.

"He got back young players so you didn't see me disapprove the Garner deal," Kuhn said. "And no one ever urged me to. He was doing what was best for his club. I came to the conclusion that this was not a deal that I should stop."

Kuhn intimated that future deals in danger of missing the Commissioner Kuhn stamp of approval would be high-priced sales of superstars.

"My yardstick is whether I think the money was so high that a lot of clubs would be ruled out from dealing," he said. "I would always sooner see players traded for players and not move for money."

But money was not the only reason for canceling Oakland's June, 1976 sales of Vida Blue to the Yankees for $1.5 million and Joe Rudi and Rollie Fingers to Boston for $1 million apiece.

"Finley's sales would have decimated the 1975 Western Division championship club," Kuhn said. "They darn near won their division last year. Maybe if they didn't hold out those three players for nearly two weeks (Finley refused to play his three stars for a while) they would have won their division."

But name-calling is not Kuhn's style—even though it might be tempting to fire a salvo at Finley for a change.

Northern, N. Central post wins

The Northern Huskies and North Central Rangers took victories Wednesday evening in the National Little League City baseball tournament at Dunnigan Park.

Northern rapped out 17 hits with Gene Williams, Brad Edgar and Mike Vetters paving the way. Williams and Edgar had four hits each Mike while Vetters added three of his own.

The Rangers took a 13-8 triumph over the Eastern Dodgers with Keith McDonald, Mikaa Dobry Jeff Young and Chad Jordan all hitting two-baggers.

In today's semifinals, the Tower League Orioles take on the Northern Huskies for a berth in Friday's finals against the North Central Rangers. Game time is 6 p.m. at Dunnigan Park which is located at Terrell and Gist Streets near Edison Freshman School.

THIS IS A FISHEYE lens view of the construction site of the Grohnde, West Germany nuclear power plant where work came to a halt recently following a decision of the Hannover state court. The court decided to withdraw the plants building permit following strong protests and clashes between demonstrators and police. The Grohnde plant is one of 27 nuclear power stations in Germany which are either under construction or already operating.

FPC freezes growth of Cities Service line

By STAN BENJAMIN

WASHINGTON (AP) — Cities Service Gas Co. is under Federal Power Commission orders to halt the growth of natural gas demand on its pipeline as of Jan. 1.

The distributors purchasing gas from Cities Service may take on new customers and sell more gas, the FPC ruled, but if they do they will have to purchase the additional gas from a supplier other than Cities Service.

The detailed, complex FPC decision prescribing a "permanent curtailment plan" to deal with potential gas shortages on the Cities Service system was adopted June 14 by the commission, amending an initial decision by administrative law Judge Ernst Liebman.

Cities Service provides natural gas for markets in Kansas, Missouri Nebraska, Oklahoma and Texas.

Last winter, the FPC said supply shortages forced Cities Service to curtail gas delivery to its "category three" users, large commercial establishments.

"We believe the record in this case supports the imposition of some type of load growth restrictions," the commission said.

"Experience this past winter indicates that, in planning for the future, it would be prudent to assume a pessimistic outlook.

The FPC said Cities Service has only one customer capable of managing its temperature sensitive load, so it is not practical to base growth restriction on some fixed service level of the past.

That index will limit the amount of gas Cities Service may sell.

"Cities' resale customers (such as gas utilities) will be able to add any new customers they choose in any priority they choose," the FPC said.

"However, Cities' tariff will no longer require it to transport additional gas to serve new loads in excess of existing requirements.

"In order for distributors to serve these new loads they will be compelled to obtain supplies from sources other than the Cities system," the decision continued.

If some of their final customers conserve gas and make part of their previous supplies available, the FPC said, distributors may shift the gas to other customers or to new customers in the same priority or in a higher priority.

"The effect of this will be an end to growth in terms of volumes of gas transported while permitting the distributors to serve new customers from volumes generated through conservation measures, attrition among customers, peak shaving, etc.," the FPC explained.

West Texas sectors get wildcat, stepouts

A wildcat site has been staked in Tom Green County, and a prospector was making production tests. Also, outposts have been planned for the Jameson field of Coke and Sterling and casing was being set at a Runnels prospect.

TOM GREEN WILDCAT

Florida Gas Exploration Co., operating from Midland, filed application for No. 1 West-Pate, a 6,500-foot venture in Tom Green, 12 miles north of San Angelo.

Drillsite is 570 feet from north and 2,080 feet from west lines of section 3, GC&SF survey, one location east of the discovery well in the depleted Eliza Baker, North (Caddo) field.

Amoco Production Co. was making production tests at No. 1-B H. R. Wardlaw III, Tom Green searcher, ⅜ mile northwest of production in the Wardlaw Three (Wolfcamp) gas field.

It pumped 24 hours through perforations at 5,770-5,871 feet, making eight barrels of oil and 14 barrels of water.

JAMESON TESTS

Amarex, Inc., Oklahoma City, plans No. 3 Phillip Brown as a ½-mile east offset to a recently completed 1⅛-mile southwest extension to the Sterling County part of the Jameson (Strawn) field.

Drillsite is 1,816 feet from south and 873 feet from east lines of section 169, block 2, H&TC survey, 10 miles east of Sterling City. Planned depth is 7,500 feet.

R. L. Burns Corp. of Dallas accounted for the Coke outpost. It is No. 1-20 Ellwood, slated as a 2½-mile west outpost to the Jameson field, but separated by depleted wells.

Location is 660 feet from northeast and southeast lines of section 20, block 15, SPRR survey, and projected depth is 7,000 feet.

RUNNELS PROJECT

It indicated production with the recovery of 150 feet of oil and 280 feet of mud-cut oil on a drillstem test at 3,656-3,661 feet.

The project, bottomed at 3,786 feet, spots 2,757 feet from south and 3,379 feet from east lines of Austin & Williams survey 263, 2¾ miles east of Jennings oil production in the Lindemann field.

Discovery potentials in Eddy; producer completes in Chaves

Discoveries and a confirmer were finaled in Eddy County, N.M., while a Chaves area gained a new producer.

Yates Petroleum Corp., operating from Artesia, finaled No. 1-HK Lizzie Howard as a dual Wolfcamp and Atoka gas strike in Eddy, five miles north of Artesia.

From the Wolfcamp zone, perforated at 5,055-5,072 feet, it flowed on preliminary potential test at the rate of 300,000 cubic feet per day, through a ¼-inch choke.

It was finaled from the Atoka for a preliminary, daily gauge of 500,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through a ¼-inch choke and perforations at 7,178-7,184 feet.

Drilled to 7,407 feet, it has 4½-inch casing set at 7,404 feet, the plugged-back depth.

Wellsite is 2,310 feet from south and 1,980 feet from east lines of section 13-16s-25e, five miles northwest of the POW (Morrow) gas field.

Read & Stevens, Inc., Roswell, No. 1 W.R. State-Communitized, has been completed as an Atoka gas strike in Eddy, four miles northeast of Carlsbad and three miles southwest of Atoka gas production in the Burton Flat field.

It had a calculated, absolute open flow of 7,976 million cubic feet of gas daily, with gas-liquid ratio measuring 75,258-1. Condensate gravity is 54.5 degrees.

Staked as a Morrow project in the Burton Flat field, it was drilled to 11,470 feet, and plugged back to 11,252 feet in 5½-inch casing set on bottom.

Top of the Atoka was picked at 10,270 feet, under ground elevation of 3,207 feet.

Location is 660 feet from south and 990 feet from east lines of section 6-21s-27e.

The POW (Morrow) gas field of Eddy gained a second well and ⅝-mile northwest extension with completion of Yates Petroleum Corp., Artesia, No. 1-HB Friendly Frenchman, four miles northeast of Artesia.

It was completed for a preliminary 24-hour potential of 400,000 cubic feet of gas per day, through a ¼-inch choke and perforations at 7,803-7,893 feet. Acid treatment was 1,000 gallons.

It was drilled to 8,050 feet in the Mississippian, and plugged back to 7,928 feet. Operator set 4½-inch casing at 7,960 feet.

The pool opener, originally completed as a Devonian discovery in August, 1973, was completed later as the opener of Morrow production in the area.

Holly Energy, Inc. has completed No. 2 Lula as a new gasser in the Buffalo Valley (Atoka) pool of Chaves County, about 11 miles northeast of Lake Arthur.

The new well had a calculated, absolute open flow potential of 1,090 million cubic feet of gas per day, producing through perforations at 8,495-8,505 feet.

Well finals in Andrews

David and Inez Fasken, operating from Midland, completed No. 12-3-Y Fee as a location northeast and northwest extension to a northwest area of the Serio (Grayburg) field of Andrews County.

It had a 24-hour pumping potential of 75 barrels of oil and 189 barrels of water, gravity and gas-oil ratio not reported. Completion was through perforations at 4,766-4,787 feet, which had been treated with an unreported amount.

Location is 3,237 feet from north and 2,233 feet from east lines of section 3, block 41, T-2-N, G&MMB&A survey, 16 miles southeast of Andrews townsite.

Probe set in Gaines

I. W. Lovelady, Midland, has scheduled No. 1 Hudson, a 5,300-foot wildcat in Northwest Gaines, six miles southwest of Denver City.

Pistol shot kills Hara

TULSA (AP) — Police investigators believe James E. Hara, 59-year-old senior vice president and a director of Getty Oil Co., in Los Angeles, shot and killed himself with a .38caliber pistol.

An official ruling on the cause of death is pending from the state Medical Examiner's office here, but detectives said Hara apparently had been shot once in the temple with the pistol. They found a .38-caliber pistol inside his car.

Hara was found by Charles Fitzpatrick, his son-in-law, Wednesday afternoon in the back seat of his car. The auto was parked on the south side of the city about 50 yards from the roadway.

Reeves gets outpost try

An offset has been planned for a Reeves County field, and attempt will be made to extend a pay zone production in a Midland pool.

Dyco Petroleum Corp., Tulsa, Okla., plans No. 1 Touchstone, an 11,200-foot test, as a ½-mile south stepout to the three-well San Martine (Fusselman) field of Reeves.

Texaco Inc. plans to attempt dual completion as a 3⅞-mile south and slightly west extension to Strawn oil production in the Hallanan field of Midland County at No. 1-B-1 H. S. Foster, Devonian well in the Headlee field.

It was drilled to 12,238 feet, and completion try in the Strawn will be at about 10,280 feet.

Strike seen for Reeves

Texas Oil & Gas Corp., operating from Midland, was testing at No. 1 Amarillo, Loving County deep failure, five miles east of Mentone and six miles east of the Moore-Hooper (Fusselman and Ellenburger) field.

It flowed 24 hours through an 11-64-inch choke and perforations at 15,084-15,104 feet, natural, making 1 million cubic feet of gas per day, plus seven barrels of drilling mud in 24 hours.

Drilled to 20,335 feet, it has been plugged back to 17,250 feet, and has a 7¾-inch liner hung from 12,035-18,720 feet. Top of the Montoya was picked at 20,280 feet, under ground elevation of 2,782 feet.

RRC chairman urges sea-land oil system

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission Chairman Mack Wallace has urged Interior Secretary Cecil Andrus to approve a proposed sea and land transportation project that would move crude oil from Alaska to Midland for distribution to Gulf Coast refineries and petroleum processing plants elsewhere in the country.

The Interior Department presently is considering the proposed 3,200-mile tanker and pipeline system that would carry 700,000 barrels of oil per day.

Chairman Wallace wrote the Interior chief June 21 that "your approval" of the system "is vital to this country's energy needs and to our national security."

Wallace further cited, "making Alaskan crude oil available to refineries throughout the country will serve to lessen substantially our reliance on the importation of foreign oil."

The Texas official advised Andrus that he had studied the final environmental statement of Interior's Bureau of Land Management and found it to be "a thorough analysis of the proposed tanker/pipeline transportation system, including consideration of the potential environmental impact and possible alternative courses of action."

Overall, Wallace said, benefits of the proposed system far outweigh any potential adverse effects on the environment.

"The applicant proposes to make available a mechanism by which Alaskan Crude oil can best find its way to existing refinery capacity in the United States," observed the commission chairman. "Utilizing mostly existing facilities, particularly pipeline, the proposal minimizes the potential environmental impact.

"No other sea-land route is as economically sound and environmentally acceptable. The added costs of an all-sea route are unacceptable and unnecessary.

"An all-American sea-land route is certainly a step in the direction of greater energy independence."

Wallace said only two of the environmental considerations discussed in the BLM statement should have any significant impact on the Interior secretary's decision: air quality in the Los Angeles Basin and the potential for oil spills.

The environmental statement indicates that the air quality "should actually improve if the project is approved," Wallace noted and further observed: "Oil spills are of significant environmental concern."

"Of more concern in this instance is our need for additional crude oil supplies. Certainly the risk of oil spills should be mimimized, the FES (final environmental statement) indicates they will be. Accepting the residual risk is an acceptable price to pay.

"Our primary concern and importance should be the welfare of the American people. Until we have assured them jobs, heat for their homes, fuel for transportation and satisfaction of their other energy needs, we should not consider the welfare of the light-footed clapper rail, the humpback sucker or the bonytail chub, all mentioned in the FES.

In concluding his letter to the Interior chief, Wallace said:

"I urge you to give your approval to the proposed crude oil transportation system. To do otherwise would be to do a great disservice to the energy needs of the people of this country."

The marine-pipeline project, proposed by Sohio Transportation Co., involves tanker shipments of up to 700,000 barrels daily of crude oil from Valdez, Alaska, to the Port of Long Beach, Calif., construction of a marine terminal at Long Beach for offloading and storage, construction of new pipelines in California, Arizona and Texas, and conversion of existing natural gas pipelines of Southern California Gas Co. and El Paso Natural Gas Co. in California, Arizona, Texas and New Mexico for crude oil transportation.

Test slated in Hockley

Mobil Oil Corp. has staked site for a location north offset to the most southwesterly well in a two-well Abo area of the Levelland field of Hockley County.

It is No. 65 Maple Wilson, scheduled 467 feet from south and east lines of labor 12, league 41, Maverick CSL survey, six miles southwest of Levelland. Planned depth is 7,300 feet.

Allowable changed

AUSTIN — Railroad Commission has ordered oil production in the Goldsmith Field of Ector County changed from a reservoir allowable to a top, percentage well rate of 73 barrels a day. The Commission said it was acting upon the recommendations of Senior Engineer George Singletory Jr. of the Oil and Gas Division.

Last April, Singletory conducted a commission-called hearing to review the Goldsmith Field, and redetermine the most efficient rate of oil and gas withdrawal from the field. The Gulf Oil Corp. and other Goldsmith operators present at the April heaing requested the Commission to set the allowable at 73 barrels daily per well.

Production in the field began in 1955, and now totals 20,000 barrels per day. As of Jan. 1, 1977, the field had produced over 295 million barrels of oil, according to Commission testimony.

Lea probe finds oil

W. A. Moncrief Jr., Midland, No. 1-8 State, Lea County, N.M., Devonian prospector, 12 miles west of Lovington, flowed gas and recovered oil on a second consecutive drillstem test.

Tool was open 1½ an unreported time on the test taken from 10,645-10,675 feet. Gas surfaced in 25 minutes, flowing at the averate rate of 117,000 cubic feet per day, and inceasing to 272,000 cubic feet daily at the end of the test. Recovery from the test tool was 1,395 feet of free 37-gravity oil and 93 feet of oil- and gas-cut drilling mud. Flowing pressure was 323-582 pounds; two-hour initial and three-hour final shut-in pressures were 2,572 and 1,568 pounds, respectively.

Drilling continued below 10,752 feet in lime and shale on a 14,200-foot contract.

An earlier test in the lower Wolfcamp from 9,975-9,995 feet flowed gas at the maximum, daily rate of 867,000 cubic feet and recovered 1,220 feet of free oil and gas, plus 330 feet of gas-cut drilling mud.

The well is 1,980 feet from north and east lines of section 8-16s-34e, 12 miles west of Lovington and 1¼ mile southeast of Mewbourne Oil Co. No. 1-E State Communitized, a recent Morrow gas strike.

DRILLING REPORT

Texaco No. 3-Z State of Texas; td 12,531 feet, preparing to swab. It swabbed 28 barrels of oil and two barrels of water in seven hours, through perforations at 12,518-12,528 feet, which had been acidized with 1,000 gallons.

BORDEN — Monsanto No. 1 Good; td 8,532 feet, preparing to run jars.

CHAVES — Dyco No. 1 Rinetta; td 2,350 feet, shut in for repairs and preparing to drill ahead.

Texas O&G No. 1-C O'Brien; drilling 6,170 feet.

CROCKETT — Gulf No. 1 Hoover; drilling 3,800 feet in shale.

DAWSON — Gulf No. 2 Speck; drilling 12,146 feet in lime. A 40-minute drillstem test from 12,059-12,138 feet, recovered 40 feet of drilling mud.

EDDY — Hondo No. 2 Alscott-Federal; td 10,965 feet, rerunning a drillstem test from 10,840-10,965 feet, on which packers failed during the first try.

Monsanto No. 1 Mayer; moving in rotary.

GAINES — Cities Service No. 1-A Peterson; drilling.

GLASSCOCK — Amoco No. 1-A Edwards; td 7,099 feet; operator squeezed off perforations at 7,448-7,491 feet, which had been acidized with 5,000 gallons. Operator also acidized with 1,000 gallons through perforations at 7,387-7,417 feet, set a bridge plug at 7,330 feet. Tubing was being run for tests through perforations at 7,022-7,032 feet, after acidizing with 2,000 gallons.

Union of California No. 1 Woodruff; drilling 4,572 feet.

KIMBLE — NRM No. 1-55 Smith; td 2,994 feet, preparing to take a drillstem test. A test from 994-1,084 feet, recovered 550 feet of formation water.

LEA — Union of California No. 1 Cinch-State; drilling 3,650 feet.

Gulf No. 1-A Glass; drilling 10,522 feet in shale.

PECOS — Phillips No. 1-G Mitchell; td 12,234 feet; pb 12,195 feet; moving in and rigging up completion unit.

Phillips No. 1-H Mitchell; fishing.

Operators stake 122 Permian Basin oil, gas projects

The number of petroleum tests staked in the Permian Basin decreased last week. Operators filed permit applications for 122 tests, compared with 141 permits sought two weeks ago.

Last week District 8 tallied seven wildcats, with District 7-C getting six and District 8-A reporting 4. Southeast New Mexico had two wildcats staked.

The Texas Railroad Commission District 8, with headquarters in Midland accounted for 33 field development projects, followed by 26 in Lubbock's District 8-A office.

Unusual discard enrages kibitzer

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

"Certain people should never be allowed in the same room as a deck of cards," said the Old Kibitzer in a voice trembling with emotion. He had watched two tricks of today's hand and had then walked out of the card room.

Opening lead — ◇ A

West took the ace of diamonds and continued with the queen. Declarer ruffed with dummy's ace of spades, and East made the play that sent the Old Kibitzer out of the room talking to himself. East threw away a trump!

Declarer led dummy's jack of spades for a finesse and continued with the ten, picking up all of the trumps. Unfortunately for South, the clubs broke horribly and he eventually lost another trick.

East's trump discard cost nothing. Declarer would lead dummy's jack and ten and would capture four trumps just as easily as three.

NO SAFE DISCARD

If East discarded a heart at the second trick, dummy's nine of hearts would eventually be good for declarer's twelfth trick. And if East discarded a club, declarer could eventually ruff one of dummy's clubs and get his twelfth trick with the other low club.

East's unusual discard at the second trick allowed him to defeat the contract by keeping as many hearts and clubs as the dummy at all times.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one club, and the next player passes. You hold: SK9873; H72; D8532; C65. What do you say?

ANSWER: Pass. Some experts strain harder to respond to an opening bid of one club than to any other opening bid, but it is very dangerous to respond with only 3 points in high cards and no particular distributional strength. The best way to stay out of trouble with a really ghastly hand is to pass.

Commission discourages Texas dog guide school

AUSTIN—The Board of Directors for the State Commission for the Blind took a strong position against a private effort to establish a dog guide school in Texas, voting to discourage charitable institutions from aiding in the effort.

Board member John Turner of Dallas said there is no need to set up a school in Texas to train the guide dogs for blind persons and pointed out that there are no waiting lists for persons who seek to obtain a guide dog.

Turner said the climate in Texas would be detrimental to the dogs and trainers both. He said he had visited a New Jersey guide dog school and learned that the instructors walk as much as 18 miles a day training dogs.

In Texas, he said, such a training program would be rough for dogs and trainers alike. He also pointed out that during several months of the year in Texas, asphalt streets are too hot for a guide dog, as it might blister the dog's feet. "The heat in Texas would be absolutely detrimental," Turner said.

EPA officials said to have devised fungicide experiments

By BOB WYRICK
Newsday

WASHINGTON — Officials of the Environmental Protection Agency devised experiments in 1975 for feeding known cancer-causing fungicides to convict volunteers at a Tennessee state prison to see how it would affect the human thyroid, Newsday has learned. When that proposal fell through, EPA officials gave preliminary approval for a similar experiment on student volunteers.

Neither experiment was funded, and the volunteers were never sought. The proposed experiment on convicts was rejected as too dangerous by a committee for the protection of human subjects at Vanderbilt University, which would have administered the test. The EPA oficials, faced with tight restrictions on human testing in the U.S., quietly abandoned the idea of experimenting with students.

Instead, as Newsday disclosed in an article last month, senior EPA officials attempted to avoid U.S. restrictions and through a $100,000 contract with a Mexican gynecological hospital to feed Mexican citizens massive doses of the cancer-causing fungicides. This program also was blocked.

Several of the officials who participated in one or both proposals either still occupy senior government positions or have received promotions that give them even greater control over federal decisions on how much protection the public should be guaranteed against exposure to carcinogens.

Internal EPA memos and confidential documents from a Philadelphia-based chemical firm, Rohm and Haas Co., show that the company and the agency worked together to draw up proposals for a test of the effects of the fungicides on humans. The proposal suggested that subjects for the experiments be drawn from students in nursing schools, medical schools and the paramedical profession.

The attempt to experiment with carcinogens on humans was pursued vigorously by EPA officials in spite of the fact that other government agencies such as the Department of Health, Education and Welfare had imposed rigid restrictions on the testing of dangerous substances on humans in medical experiments.

The fungicide group that EPA wanted to test is known chemically as EBDC, a chemical manufactured in large quantities (more than 250 million pounds annually) for use in killing fungi on vegetables. Rohm and Haas Co. is one of the leading manufacturers in a market that amounts to about $20 million a year in the U.S. and $192 million worldwide, company officials said.

The widely used fungicide poisons have been under government scrutiny for several years, because they break down both in the environment and in the bodies of test animals into a thyroid-cancer-causing residue.

The EPA Administrator at the time, Russell E. Train, said Tuesday that he was not informed of either the proposed prison experiment or the idea of testing on student volunteers.

In November of 1973 the late Dr. Leonard Axelrod, former director of criteria and evaluation in EPA's pesticide program, contacted Dr. Eli Swisher, manager of agricultural chemical standards for Rohm and Haas. According to Swisher, Axelrod said that the EPA wanted human studies conducted — and would conduct them itself — to help the agency decide how to regulate EBDC residues on crops sold at supermarkets.

During the following year EPA sought proposals for human testing of EBDCs and received a proposal, dated Sept. 20, 1974, from Dr. Wayland J. Hayes, professor of biochemistry at Vanderbilt University. Hayes wanted to test both anabuse (a drug used to combat alcoholism) on patients at a veterans hospital, and an EBDC fungicide manufactured by Rohm and Haas on convict volunteers in Tennessee state prison.

The Hayes proposal didn't suit EPA officials. They wanted Hayes to feed not only the fungicide but also the pure thyroid-cancer-causing residue ETU to the prisoners.

On Nov. 7, 1974, Dr. Lamar B. Dale, Jr., chief of the metabolics branch in Axelrod's division, wrote a memo for Axelrod's signature. The memo, addressed to Edwin Johnson, EPA's Deputy Assistant Administrator for Pesticide Programs, stressed the need for "two basic toxicological studies" on the fungicides and the pure cancer-causing residue.

In his view, the Vanderbilt proposal adequately covered the request for a fungicide study. He said it would "be a simple matter to add ... short term studies in humans with ETU to establish a level which has no adverse effect on thyroid function."

Dale, a senior scientist in the EPA division charged with determining human health risks from pesticides, has acknowledged that he had recommended approval of the experiments on Tennessee prison inmates.

Johnson, the recipient of the memo, is in charge of a high-priority EPA program — the safety registration of thousands of pesticides. He is responsible for taking action to suspend or cancel the use of pesticides that pose an unacceptable carcinogenic risk to humans.

It was Johnson who eventually stopped the proposed human tests in Mexico after receiving a strong protest from former EPA attorney Jeffrey Howard. Johnson told Newsday last month that he killed the Mexican proposal because "general ethics on testing don't permit us to test on humans. I just said absolutely no. I'm not inclined to look favorably on testing anything on human beings."

But documents obtained by Newsday show that Johnson did reluctantly approve the proposal to test the fungicides on convicts. In a handwritten note to Axelrod in December, 1974, Johnson said, "I am not fully convinced of the need for this study as currently formulated. You are apparently convinced it is needed. You may proceed if you feel you must do this."

Interviewed again last week, Johnson said. "He (Axelrod) insisted it was the scientifically informative thing to do and was needed information ... I guess by that note you would say that I did go along with it grudgingly."

The Tennessee prison project failed for two reasons. Hayes, the biochemistry professor from Vanderbilt, could not be convinced to feed pure ETUs to the prisoners. In addition, the committee on human experimentation at Vanderbilt rejected the idea of feeding any EBDCs to the prisoners, according to Vandegbilt chemistry professor Robert Neal, Hayes' scientific consultant on the project.

Hayes was traveling in Europe this week and could not be reached, but Neal described a meeting that he and Hayes attended at the EPA with Axetrod, Dale and other EPA officials. "Axelrod in fact asked Dr. Hayes if he could arrnage to test ETU (the pure residue) in these prisoners. We said it's just not possible to do that on ETU. It was a known carcinogen, and we just couldn't do it."

There were practical as well as ethical reasons for the university's rejection of the proposed tests. The Department of Health, Education and Welfare has a policy to insure that any university working on health research under HEW grants or contracts must submit all proposals to a review committee and adhere to strict rules for the protection of human subjects in any tests. The university must also agree to adhere to HEW safety rules on research projects.

The EPA had not agreed in 1974 to adopt these HEW safety guidelines, even though negotiations for such an agreememt had been going on between the two agencies since January, 1973. By the beginning of 1975, when the Vanderbilt prison testing proposal was abandoned as too dangerous, a commission established by Congress was at work on new, more stringent guidelines for safety on human subjects in medical research.

It was in this climate of mounting public concern over human testing that the EPA turned to chemical manfacturers Rohm and Haas for help in devising a test to feed EBDCs and ETUs to human subjects.

The manager of Rohm and Haas' toxicology research department, Dr. Jerry M. Smith, confirmed in an interview this week that the EPA asked the company for help in designing the proposals for the human studies. On Feb. 20, 1975, Smith wrote an EPA official a letter of agreement.

The test protocols sent to EPA by Rohm and Haas were stamped "company confidential" and called for feeding humans up to 10 times the amounts of ETUs and EBDCs that they would encounter in food normally. "The subjects would be euthyroid, normal, healthy, male adults of sufficient intelligence to understand the nature of the experiments, e.g., nursing, medical, graduate, or other paramedical students," the proposal stated.

The EPA official who worked closely with Rohm and Haas on the human-testing proposal was Dr. Irwin Baumel, 35, who was then working under Axelrod and Dale in his first year as a government employe.

In an interview this week Baumel at first denied that he was in any way involved in planning the tests on human subjects. "I was personally opposed to any human testing, especially on ETU," Baumel said. "It is an extremely potent carcinogen on the thyroid. I told Dale that I knew what these compounds are about and will not be involved in anything detrimental."

But Baumel changed his story when confronted with documents, some of them in his own handwriting, which showed that he was actually preparing the agency proposal for the human tests and was slated to be the EPA project officer once an outside agency agreed to perform the experiments.

"Look, I was holding onto my job," Baumel said. "Axelrod was ruthless and Dale was my boss and he did what Axelrod said. It seems silly now, but I was afraid. The first year in federal service is probationary. You could be dropped at the drop of a hat. I was naive. Lots of times I did things that I didn't understand the implication of."

Baumel, who left his EPA job in August, 1975, is now chief of the criteria and development branch at the National Institute of Occupational Safety and Health. In this position, which involved a substantial promotion and pay increase, Baumel directs the activities of about 30 federal employes working in the development of health and safety standards for American workers.
