Guns cool; talks on

Hopes soar for quick return of POWs

■ Iraq agrees to meet with allied military officials to finalize cease-fire terms.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — With the Iraqi army annihilated and allied guns silent, victorious governments here and abroad turned Thursday to the hard task of securing a stable peace in the faction-torn Middle East.

Hopes soared for a quick return of all prisoners of war as Iraq agreed to meet with allied military officials to finalize cease-fire terms.

"We are going to get back our POWs, and we're going to do it fast," an elated President Bush said as he announced that the Iraqi government had accepted his call for a meeting on military matters, including the exchange of prisoners.

In the Gulf, there were only a few scattered instances Thursday of Iraqis shooting at allied forces, and coalition officials said those soldiers probably had simply not heard of the peace offer.

U.S. and allied soldiers in Iraq and Kuwait spent the day catching up on their sleep, destroying abandoned Iraqi armaments and processing huge numbers of Iraqi war prisoners — estimated to number 85,000 by coalition officials and up to 175,000 by British military sources.

The administration said Thursday it had drafted a United Nations resolution offering a final settlement of the Gulf war.

State Department spokeswoman Margaret Tutwiler said the measure would require that an arms embargo against Iraq remain in place as long as President Saddam Hussein stays in power.

The resolution, expected to go before the Security Council today, also reportedly requires Iraq:

■ To comply all 12 U.N. resolutions passed after the invasion.
■ To immediately release Kuwaiti hostages and third-country captives.
■ To accept liability for damage and

Kuwaitis celebrate, take stock of terror

■ Tales emerge of executions, torture, rape, looting.

Associated Press

KUWAIT CITY — Rocketing between frenzied joy and hatred, Kuwaitis celebrated liberation Thursday while taking stock of the terror Iraqis unleashed before fleeing under allied assault.

"'We paid our blood to be free," Habib al-Gharaab, a technical adviser to Kuwait's criminal investigation department, said in describing seven months of occupation.

He said 5,000 people had disappeared since Feb. 21, when Saddam Hussein's forces began leaving Kuwait. Many were killed to prevent them from testifying to torture they suffered, he said.

"They killed just to kill," al-Gharaab said. "They killed the women, they killed the kids. They have no heart. They have no conscience."

Others gave firsthand accounts of executions, torture, rape and looting, but no one had reliable estimates of the extent of Iraqi depredations.

Kuwait seemed like the setting for a nightmare, with no power or water. Every shop was chained shut. At midday, the sky was black as midnight, thunderclouds blending with the greasy pall from hundreds of burning oil wells.

Al-Gharaab drove his burgundy stretch Mercedes-Benz through devastated streets free for the first time since Aug. 2 of roadblocks manned by soldiers with the power of life and death.

House approves 'Robin Hood' school financing

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — Efforts to fashion a school financing bill will move to a Senate-House conference committee next week after the House passed its 'Robin Hood' version of equalization legislation Thursday by a 103-35 vote.

Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, sponsor of a Senate-approved bill, said he will ask for a conference committee to be appointed Monday.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and House Speaker Gib Lewis each will appoint five members to the committee, which will write the final version of the bill and bring it back for consideration by lawmakers.

House Public Education Committee Chairwoman Ernestine Glossbrenner, D-Alice, sponsor in the House, said she thought the committee could work out the differences quickly and have a bill ready for consideration next week.

Craddick

Rep. Glossbrenner has objected to the term "Robin Hood," calling her bill the "family plan" because it shares local wealth to benefit all the state's school children.

"We're all in this together," said Glossbrenner.

FDIC chief asks to borrow $20 billion from taxpayers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. on Thursday asked authority for his agency to borrow $30 billion to bolster the dwindling fund protecting bank deposits.

Banks' insurance rates would be raised to repay the money, but legislators questioned whether the industry would deteriorate further, leaving taxpayers with the bill.

The five-member FDIC board voted unanimously Thursday to propose a short-term plan to borrow $10 billion. It would not require congressional approval and would stay within the agency's legal debt limits designed to ensure that it has the resources to repay the loan.

Effective July 1, banks' insurance premiums, now 19.5 cents per $100 of deposits, would be raised to 23 cents. The increase, which must be formally adopted by May 1, would be earmarked to repay the $10 billion.

As a backstop should the $10 billion prove inadequate, FDIC Chairman L. William Seidman is asking the Bush administration and Congress for authority to borrow up to an additional $20 billion from taxpayers.

The insurance fund's line of credit at the Treasury — which has never been used — would increase to $20 billion from the current $5 billion, regardless of the borrowing cap.

Free-Kuwait group looks to rebuilding

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff Writer

The rebuilding of Kuwait will take at least five years and Texas likely will play a major role in that effort, said Sam Kobeissi, a local representative for Citizens for Free Kuwait, a national non-profit organization based in Washington D.C.

"The war is over but the building process is coming. It seems the Iraqis didn't want Kuwait to prosper — they destroyed everything like they weren't going to stay there," Kobeissi said.

Because of oil and agricultural ties between Texas and Kuwait before the war, Texas will play a significant role in America's effort to rebuild Kuwait, he said. As a result, Midland and Odessa probably will benefit, said Kobeissi, an oil field equipment inspector for an international oil company based in Houston.

Kobeissi, a former resident of Kuwait, predicted that Kuwait will be under martial law for the first few months of rebuilding.

"Because the military, other agencies and everything is in shambles ... we don't have anything there to even identify Kuwait — they destroyed all records," he said.

It still will be days before the extent of damage in

MCHD takes step toward expansion

By Erin Blair
Staff Writer

Midland County Hospital District directors moved one step closer to a $10 million to $20 million expansion project for the hospital when they approved funding architects' plans and a site survey at their meeting Thursday evening.

The board of directors agreed to pay $162,528 for planning to Melton Henry/Maurice Robinson Architects, $79,800 to TriBrook for equipment consulting and $3,500 for a site survey. The $245,828 will come out of hospital operating funds, not tax monies.

Memorial Hospital and Medical Center President Ray Branson told the board that it was not making a decision to approve the construction project at this time. "But it is necessary to get more detailed information before we proceed," he said.

The plans call for adding examining rooms to deal with overcrowding at the emergency department, where patients sometimes wait up to three hours to be seen, Board Chairman Tom Bruner said.

If the emergency room is expanded internally,

Poll: Oust Saddam

More than nine callers out of 10 to this week's Community Pulse poll said they feel the allies' war objectives should include removing Saddam Hussein from power in Iraq.

From Sunday through Wednesday, the Reporter-Telegram asked callers if the allies should go beyond the demands of United Nations' resolutions and oust the Iraqi leader.

A resounding 90.6 percent of the more than 250 callers agreed that Saddam's ouster is a vital component of the coalition's strategy as the war entered its final days.

"If we do not pursue the war effort and completely remove Saddam Hussein from office and defeat the Iraqis, we'll have another Korea — it may not be a Vietnam — but it will be a Korea and we'll have to answer for that later, too," commented Jo Beth Slaton.

One caller made the point that ousting Saddam carries no guarantee that his successor would be any better.

But given Saddam's claims of victory on Thursday, perhaps Sherry Watson's comment registered on Sunday is the most prophetic:

"The only thing that Saddam Hussein will understand as his defeat is if he dies. The only way the man will give up is in death."

War update

■ U.S. and allied troops held their fire along a smoldering battlefront — weary, muddy, but victorious.

■ One day after halting the war, President Bush announced that Iraq had agreed to talks on a permanent cease-fire and the return of prisoners of war.

■ The U.S. command reported some cease-fire violations Thursday.

■ Kuwaitis said thousands of their countrymen were taken off to Iraq as hostages. Kuwait's U.N. ambassador put the number at 22,000.

■ U.S. losses were put at 79 killed — 28 of them in the ground campaign — and 212 wounded. A total of at least 126 allied troops were killed in combat; 56 were missing in action, including 35 Americans; and 13 were prisoners of war.

Brando sentenced

SANTA MONICA, Calif. — Christian Brando was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in prison for voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of his half-sister's Tahitian lover. "It's a tragic situation for both families, for Christian Brando," Superior Court Judge Robert W. Thomas said in handing down the sentence.

WEATHER SUMMARY

Via Associated Press GraphicsNet

Rain sparse; heat ahead

Thursday night's showers were hardly enough to settle the dust, as less than a quarter-inch of rain was recorded at Midland International Airport.

Today's forecast is partly cloudy, windy and warm with blowing dust, a high near 80 and west winds 20-30 mph and gusty, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be mostly fair with a low in the mid 40s.

Saturday's forecast is for mostly fair skies with a high in the low 70s, the NWS said.

Thursday's high was 67, compared to the record for the date of 87, set in 1940. The record low for today's date is 14, set in 1962.

STATE

Low clouds, drizzle and fog covered most of South and Central Texas Thursday as a low pressure storm system from the west met with a high pressure system from the east.

An upper level storm system over the coast of California was creeping into West Texas Thursday. Skies were cloudy across the region and light rain fell over the far west along the Trans Pecos area and over the South Plains.

Afternoon temperatures in West Texas in the 50s and 60s. Southwest winds blew at speeds ranging from 15 to 25 mph.

The storm system continued to strengthen the winds over North Texas, as south winds blew at 20 to 30 mph with stronger gusts reaching 40 mph in western sections of North Texas.

South winds blew at 10 to 15 mph in East Texas.

The upper level storm is expected to move rapidly over North Texas early Friday morning and produce thunderstorms that should move east into Louisiana.

The combination of low pressure meeting high pressure continued to sweep gulf moisture over cooler air at the surface, causing much of South Texas to see damp and dismal weather Thursday.

NATION

Winter storms dumped heavy snow in the mountains and plains of the western United States on Thursday and poured welcome rain in Oregon and in drought-striken California, causing minor flooding in some areas.

Snow fell in parts of California, Nevada, Utah, Montana, Colorado, Wyoming, New Mexico and Arizona. Five inches of snow fell during the morning near Mammoth, Calif., and in Duck Creek, Utah.

A blizzard warning was posted in part of Montana.

Up to 7 inches of rain had fallen in parts of California, which is in its fifth year of drought, since the storm arrived Wednesday, with 3 inches in downtown Los Angeles.

Minor street flooding was reported in the Santa Maria Valley at midday. Flood and mudslide advisories were posted in parts of fire-damaged Santa Barbara, Calif., where rain fell at a rate of one-third to one-half inch per hour at some points.

In the 24-hour period ending at noon CST, San Francisco had received .94 inches of rain and Moffett Naval Air Station, about 50 miles to the south, reported 1.24 inches.

The chain of Pacific storms was expected to do little to ease the California drought, said Doug Priest, director of the state Drought Center in Sacramento.

Heavier rainfall during the 6 hours ending at noon CST included almost an inch at Fort Huachuca, Ariz. Snowfall during the same period included 2 inches at Great Falls, Mont., and in Minneapolis.

Snow also fell in parts of North Dakota, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Michigan, Pennsylvania and New York state.

■ To immediately return Kuwaiti airplanes, incubators and other assets removed after the Aug. 2 invasion.

■ To rescinding its annexation of Kuwait.

Bush called the desire to retrieve the prisoners of war and free of Kuwaitis being held captive by Iraq as a goal "foremost in my heart" in the hours since the offensive battle ended Wednesday night.

The White House was said to have been frustrated in efforts to gain any new information about POWs seized in Operation Desert Storm, who include nine Americans, two Britons, one Kuwaiti and one Italian. Even so, a senior White House official said that Iraq's agreement to meet was encouraging.

"We've treated the quick response in the most optimistic way we can, thinking that it's a positive thing," he said, adding that there was an assumption that Iraq would not have answered so soon if it planned to drag out the freeing of POWs.

The release of POWs and Kuwaiti and other detainees was at the top of the list of issues that Bush listed Wednesday night for a military council to discuss a permanent cease-fire.

Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly, the director of operations for the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff, said that captured CBS correspondent Bob Simon and his crew "will receive the same consideration" as U.S. military prisoners as the allies seek an accounting from the Iraqis.

Also on the agenda for the allied-Iraq military meeting, expected to be held soon, would be a requirement that Iraq inform Kuwaiti officials about the location of land and sea mines, renounce any claims to Kuwait, and agree to comply with United Nations resolutions.

Bush announced the Iraqi agreement to confer as he met with Sheik Saud Nasir al-Sabah, Kuwait's ambassador to the United States. The Kuwaiti official delivered an effusive thank-you to Bush, the American people, and the American military "for what you have done for us."

"There isn't I believe a more precious gift that could be given to people than their freedom, and their liberty, and their homeland," he told Bush during a picture-taking session in the Oval Office.

Turning to the president, the ambassador added, "You will go down in history as the great liberator of my country."

Despite the exultant mood at the White House, U.S. officials held back one possible weapon to compel Iraq to release POWs. The senior administration official pointedly said that no decision has been made about trying Saddam for war crimes.

"If we get the POWs back and they're safe, that would suggest one course of action," he said. "And if they're not, that suggests another course."

Asked by reporters about war crimes, Bush refused to say whether he wanted to pursue charges against the Iraqi leader. "I'll leave those matters to our experts to work out," he said.

At the United Nations, Kuwaiti Ambassador Mohammad Abulhasan called on Secretary General Javier Perez de Cuellar to send a U.N. team to study the human losses and destruction of his country during the seven months of Iraqi occupation.

"Whatever we were reporting before about atrocities and damages, it was not an exaggeration at all," he told reporters. He estimated that 22,000 Kuwaiti civilians and 8,632 servicemen had been seized by Iraq. Most of them are believed to have been taken in the Aug. 2 invasion, but Abulhasan said 5,000 civilians were captured in the 48 hours before the fighting stopped.

The United Nations Security Council met in private to discuss Iraq's official notification, publicized Wednesday, that it would accept all 12 resolutions.

Seafront buildings were fortified with heavy guns against an assault, in the confidence that allied bombers would not attack civilian apartments.

Towering luxury hotels were blackened from fires. The emir's palace and government buildings were in shambles. Inert power lines snaked along the roads. Areas were sealed off for fear of booby traps and mines.

Sporadic gunfire rattled in the streets as amateur, enthusiastic Kuwaiti volunteers hunted for Iraqi diehards.

At one suburban house, a handful of Palestinians and Kurds were frogmarched into a small room for vigorous questioning about whether they mistreated Kuwaitis, looted or collaborated with the Iraqis. Several times, volunteers waving guns threatened them.

During the occupation, many Palestinian residents reportedly took revenge for what they called past abuse by Kuwaitis. Foreigners here said they saw signs that Kuwaitis, in turn, were settling the score.

More often, the gunfire was in jubilation, random shooting in the air by victorious Kuwaiti and Saudi troopers who cruised the streets in armored personnel carriers.

Intersections were choked with Kuwaitis screaming their happiness. Women leaned from cars to clasp a hand or kiss anyone vaguely resembling an American or Briton.

One man led a donkey through the streets to cheers and peals of laughter. On its sides, he had written "Saddam" in Arabic and English.

U.S. and British troops remained discreetly in the background after their dramatic thrust to the outskirts of Kuwait City, but everyone knew their role.

"We thank everybody who gave us help, from our heart" said Nizar A. Naccash, a Lebanese who has been an optician in Kuwait City for 39 years. He tried to find more words and burst into tears.

Nearby, in Kuwait's devastated downtown area, Jamil Anam, a Pakistani worker, walked by.

"I thank Britain," he said. "We were just waiting for the British and the Americans. We are very thankful, very proud."

FDIC: Banks' insurance rates would be raised

(From 1A)

Members of the House Banking subcommittee on financial institutions welcomed the plan but voiced concern about repayment. Seidman, however, said it "does not involve the taxpayers in any way."

He said insurance premiums would be raised as high as 30 cents to pay off the Treasury borrowing. Each 1 cent of the premium brings the insurance fund $250 million a year.

But Rep. Charles Schumer, D-N.Y., said a 30-cent premium conceivably would not be enough if the banking industry goes into decline.

"I could envision a scenario under this plan where . . . many more banks fail than we previous expected . . . and the Treasury would be at risk," he said.

Seidman replied: "If we had a collapse of the banking system, this plan would not handle it, but given any reasonable scenario, this plan would."

He also issued a statistical report he said provides "some indications the problems in real estate are bottoming out." The deterioration of commercial real estate markets has been the driving force behind banking's problems.

Private analysts, however, were skeptical and said they saw no signs of a turnaround yet.

Economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa., said Seidman's interpretation of the statistics may be geared toward winning approval of his borrowing plan.

"I think if he presented statistics showing things aren't bottoming out, then even a congressman could figure out that banks can't pay for their own bailout," Getman said.

Seidman estimated his plan would provide the FDIC with $64.4 billion through 1995 to pay for bank failures.

HOUSE: Bullock, Lewis to appoint committee constitutional and gave lawmakers until April 1 to approve a constitutional plan.

Rep. Tom Craddick, R-Midland, was not optimistic. "The major problem is whether we can pass anything that the courts are going to accept or whether they are going to write their own bill after April 1," Craddick said. "I've said all along I think the courts are going to look at whatever we send over there, throw it out and write their own bill."

Any bill will have to take some money from property tax-rich districts and give it to poor districts, but changes adopted by the House would make it easier for school districts to enact higher property taxes and keep the money, known as "local enrichment."

In its ruling on the Legislature's first attempt at equalization, the court appeared to have prohibited unequalized local enrichment. But on Monday, in an order that denied a rehearing on the original case, the court once again threw the door open.

House members stampeded through the opening and approved, by an unexpectedly wide margin, an amendment that would allow districts to begin local enrichment efforts at a tax rate as low as $1.10 per $100 valuation rather than $1.30.

While Parker's bill called for creating 20 large regional taxing districts, the House plan would consolidate property taxes along county lines. Some of the state's 254 counties would be paired with adjacent counties, resulting in 195 taxing districts.

When in full effect after four years, the House plan would provide each district with $3,400 per student from an 80-cent per $100 valuation minimum tax required of all districts.

It would guarantee another $26 per student for each additional 1-cent in a district's tax rate, to a maximum of 30 cents. If each cent of property tax did not raise $26 per student in a district, the state would make up the difference. If each cent of tax raised more than $26, the state would "recapture" all above that amount for redistribution within the tax district.

The bill guarantees another $26 for an additional tax tier of up to 20 cents, but that money could be used only for debt for construction and capital improvements. That would bring the tax level to $1.30, and a total of about $4,700 per student. Texas districts currently spend an average of $3,600 per student, compared with a national average of more than $5,000.

The bill then allows districts to raise taxes another 20 cents, to the constitutional maximum of $1.50, for local enrichment. Half of the local enrichment money raised, however, would be pooled and distributed to all school districts in the county-tax district based on each district's tax rate, property wealth and number of students.

An amendment to the bill sponsored by Kent Grusendorf, R-Arlington, would allow districts to tap into the local enrichment tier at any level above what they need for debt service. For example, if a district had no debt and did not need any of the 20-cent tax, it could begin local enrichment taxes at $1.10 instead of $1.30.

Parker's plan calls for a minimum tax of 70 cents, rising to $1 by 1994, with three additional tax tiers, up to $1.50, for debt service, equalized enrichment and unequalized local enrichment that the state would match for poor districts.

MCHD: Board OKs funding plans, site survey

it will bump the critical-care department or radiology. If it grows outside existing walls, it will take over the parking lot, he said.

"Unfortunately, we cannot add discrete units of service," Bruner said. "When one area changes, all are affected — it's a domino effect."

The hospital needs additional surgery suites because of the success of its year-old heart surgery program — physicians performed 110 procedures in 1990 — and the space required for new lasers and monitors.

The same-day surgery suites are not out-patient-friendly and need to be redesigned. The cardiac catheterization lab and other new services also are putting pressure on hospital facilities, Bruner said.

"We're trying to address the growth needs of this hospital for the next 10 years," Bruner said. "These programs are on-going and we intend to develop the facility as a role model of excellence for West Texas."

Branson said hospital-issued revenue bonds would cover the $10 million to $20 million cost of the construction, new equipment and professional fees.

Revenue bonds commit revenue from hospital operations, rather than taxes, to retire the debt. MHMC bought Clearview Hospital, now know as Memorial West, with revenue bonds.

Director David Porter expressed skepticism about the need to expand facilities.

The financial committee, which Porter serves as liaison to, "makes a good argument for the need to expand based on the assumption of the continuation of the growth of the past four or five years," he said.

"My hesitancy in approving this is that I see there are problems out there and I believe we will be facing cataclysmic change in the total health-care system in the next 10 to 15 years."

Branson said that the board would have a better feel for the hospital's economic condition after they see its ratings at the March meeting.

"At that point, if we can't finance it, we'd know we could cut (the scope of the project) down as necessary," he said.

In another move that showed the board has its confidence back after the defeat of the Jan. 19 tax-rollback election, directors approved the capital and operating budgets for the Delano Avenue outpatient clinic.

The district obtained the property in October 1990 in exchange for taking over the operations of the prenatal and pediatric clinic from the city.

Dr. Jim Humphreys, MHMC's vice president of medical affairs who oversees the clinic, said he anticipated its gross revenues for the remainder of the fiscal year to total $66,600. The clinic will have a deficit of $155,279 for the year, he said.

"But if this program resulted in even one well baby, not a sickly one who had to be shipped out to another hospital, we'll probably break even for the first year," Humphreys said.

He said each child who goes through the clinic instead of the emergency room saves the hospital $100.

Humphreys anticipates 600 pediatric patients, 400 obstetrics patients and 100 emergency room follow-up patients will go through the clinic's doors each month.

The clinic will charge on a sliding scale and also will receive Medicaid payments. Remodeling should be complete by July.

In other business, the directors:

■ Heard that Dr. Robert Henry has expressed interest in running for the District 5 seat vacated by David Porter. Henry has not yet registered as a candidate, said Judy Farris, Branson's administrative assistant. The deadline for declaring candidacy is March 20.

■ Signed a $17,620 check out of tax funds to the elections administrator for running the rollback election.

■ Signed a $737,782 check out of tax funds for indigent care bills for January.

■ Agreed to spend up to $175,000 out of operating funds for a new teatment planning computer for Allison Cancer Center.

■ Agreed to hire demographer Delbert Taebel for redistricting work in cooperation with the city, county and school board.

■ Decided to appoint one representative from each district to sit on a redistricting committee with the directors and to have a public forum before deciding on redistricting lines.

Kuwait can be assessed, he said.

Representatives from Citizens for Free Kuwait will visit the war-torn nation in the next few weeks, Kobeissi said, addiong that he may go in about three months.

Although Kuwait is free from Iraqi occupation, the free-Kuwait group will not disband, Kobeissi said.

"We will be a cultural exchange between Kuwait and the United States," he said.

Kobeissi said the group wants to maintain established ties to demonstrate that Kuwait didn't make friends just to obtain help from the United States.

Kobeissi said the organization's efforts during the Iraqi occupation of Kuwait were successful.

"The biggest thing we achieved is that we let the public know it wasn't an oil-related war," he said.

'Ultimate stage mom' pleads innocent

■ Channelview woman charged with trying to hire a hitman to kill the mother of her daughter's cheerleading rival.

Associated Press

HOUSTON — A suburban housewife police describe as "the ultimate stage mother" pleaded innocent Thursday to a charge she tried to hire a hitman to kill the mother of a girl competing with her teen-age daughter to be a cheerleader.

Holloway

Wanda Webb Holloway, 37, of Channelview, is scheduled to go on trial June 10 on a charge of solicitation of capital murder, said her lawyer, Troy McKinney.

He sid the Holloways' family life is "pretty much returned to normal," despite the upcoming trial, a barrage of interview requests from international media, and a pending child custody hearing sought by Mrs. Holloway's ex-husband.

"You'd be surprised at how normal her life is," McKinney said, describing Mrs. Holloway as a homemaker who does some volunteer work.

He said the lives of Mrs. Holloway's children, Shanna, 13, and Anthony, 17, also "are pretty normal. They've gotten a great deal of support from family, friends, school and church."

Police claim Mrs. Holloway is the "ultimate stage mother," so intent on having Shanna win a spot on the cheerleading squad she tried to hire a gunman to kill Verna Heath because she believed Mrs. Heath's daughter, Amber, would be so distraught over the death she would drop out of the competition.

Mrs. Holloway, 37, who was arrested Feb. 1 and indicted Feb. 19, is free on a $10,000 bond. She could face five years to life in prison if convicted of the crime.

Mrs. Holloway also faces a March 6 hearing sought by ex-husband Tony Harper to take custody of Shanna and Anthony. McKinney said Mrs. Holloway would fight the custody attempt, which Harper has said he sought because of the publicity's effect on the teen-agers.

Investigators say Mrs. Holloway contacted her former brother-in-law, Terry Lynn Harper, in January to find someone to kill Mrs. Heath, 38, before the spring cheerleader tryouts for the future ninth-graders.

They say she originally offered $7,500 for a hitman to kill both Mrs. Heath and Amber, but later agreed to pay $2,500 to kill only Mrs. Heath.

But Terry Harper, who has a prior felony conviction, contacted authorities about the deal and an undercover officer posed as the hitman. Investigators say she offered diamond earrings worth $1,500 as a down payment to the officer, and their conversation was recorded.

"I feel Terry Harper's background does affect his credibility," McKinney said. "A great deal of this case may turn on how believable he is."

Thursday, Mrs. Holloway sat calmly in the courtroom, accompanied by an unidentified female friend, while McKinney entered the plea. She walked quickly through a phalanx of television cameras and reporters without making any public comment about the case.

"She's dealing with it," McKinney said. "She has to be that way. I'm sure there are moments when she's not that composed, as you can imagine. But she's dealing with it."

Teacher's pets have to be moved

LAS CRUCES (AP) — An El Paso, Texas, schoolteacher has lost an appeal to keep 50 dogs at a home she owns in La Union, N.M.

The Dona Ana County Commission ruled Tuesday that Rose Marie Richie must remove the dogs.

Richie said the dogs are aged and living their last days at the La Union home.

But neighbors have complained that the dogs' barking is a nuisance and that the smell of the animals has forced them to cancel backyard barbecues.

County planners ruled that Richie was using the property as an animal care center, and forced her to apply for a special-use permit. It was denied and she appealed.

A lingering mystery: Why didn't Saddam use chemical weapons?

By Edith M. Lederer
Associated Press writer

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Why didn't Saddam Hussein use chemical weapons against allied forces? The speculation ranges from shifting winds to bombed-out artillery to fear of nuclear retaliation.

Gen. Sir Peter de la Billiere, the British commander, said Thursday the allies had information that the Iraqis had chemical weapons available and "were likely to use them" in the ground war.

But the 100-hour campaign ended without the firing of a single chemical warhead, and "I say thank God they didn't," said Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, the U.S. commander. He said he doubts he will ever know why.

Some chemical weapons were found on the battlefield. U.S. Marines who overran an Iraqi position during the ground offensive "found chemical weapon stores," a senior U.S. military source said Wednesday, speaking on condition of anonymity. He had no details on the quantity or type.

In the eight-year Iran-Iraq War, Saddam's forces mainly used artillery to launch chemical weapons against Iranian troops and against rebellious Kurds in their own country.

Fear of a chemical attack had been an overriding concern in preparations for the Persian Gulf War: All allied service members were issued a gas mask and protective clothing, and they underwent training on how to inject themselves with antidotes.

Every Scud missile launched by Iraq after the war started on Jan. 17 was tested for chemical traces. There were none.

Schwarzkopf speculated that intensive bombing during the 40-day air war destroyed artillery used to launch chemical shells.

"I think we were probably highly, highly effective in going after their artillery," he said. "They had major desertions in their artillery" units.

America's victory: 'Just what the doctor ordered'

By Bernard D. Kaplan
Hearst News Service

PARIS — America's prodigious victory in the Gulf war is just the psychological shock needed to restore U.S. economic self-confidence and end the recession, according to several European experts.

"It is exactly what the doctor ordered," declared Jean-Michel Charpin, director of the Banque Nationale de Paris, one of France's largest banks.

Charpin is one of a number of European experts who see the Gulf victory as likely to modify many assumptions about the future of the American economy.

Analysis

Michel Wormser, an adviser to France's ministry of economics and finance, said the overall U.S. performance in the "100 hours war" has torpedoed "declinism" — the theory, popular among some economists, that America is fast losing its economic pre-eminence to Japan and Western Europe.

Wormser contends that "declinism has sprung a leak."

As recently as last month at the World Economic Forum, a gathering of head-table industrialists, bankers and politicians held in Davos, Switzerland, the U.S. economy was judged to be inexorably slipping.

But Wormser suggested that, if such a meeting were held now, there would be second thoughts.

He said that a reassessment of America's economic prospects was made necessary by more than mere postwar euphoria.

"A nation able to put together the kind of logstical and technological campaign waged in the Gulf has to be taken with utmost seriousness from an economic, as well as a military, point of view," he said.

Consequently, it was "wide the mark" to write off America, he added.

Economist Hans-Peter Selft, writing in the authoritative German weekly, Die Zeit, argued that worldwide confidence in America's recovery from the recession already was evident before the ground war started.

"The recent performance of the U.S. stock market, (particularly) the way in which (overseas investors) have again begun buying shares, reversing the trend during 1990, makes this clear," he said.

Return of troops could take as long as deployment

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The yellow ribbons will be up a while longer.

Despite President Bush's promise to bring the troops home soon, uncertainty in the Persian Gulf region and the huge logistical task of transporting more than a half-million people and millions of tons of equipment means the bulk of the U.S. force will not be back for three to six months.

Some soldiers will return to the United States immediately, but Pentagon officials cautioned Thursday that personnel with expertise in a wide variety of fields will be needed in the region and no one has decided who will be the first to leave.

"The fact is there is no plan yet for bringing the forces home," said Pentagon spokesman Pete Williams.

The troops that have been in the Middle East the longest — since last August's deployment to thwart an Iraqi move into Saudi Arabia — are expected to return first, but the demands of mopping up and keeping the peace may require some specialists to stay on.

"There are 539,000 troops there. There are probably millions of tons of equipment there. We prestocked initially on the ground for 60 days of combat," said Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly, director of operations for the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The ground war that liberated Kuwait and defeated the Iraqi army lasted only four days, so much of the excess equipment and supplies has to be sent back.

"It just takes a lot of ships and airplanes to do that," Kelly said. "But I will guarantee you that it's going to be just as rapid as they can make it."

Judging from pool reports Thursday, the troops seemed to have little else on their minds but a quick homecoming. They told reporters at the front that they are eager to savor beer, pepperoni pizza and the comfort of family and friends.

"Right after the president made his speech, or at least when I heard it on the radio, I found a blade of grass," said Eric Ponton, a 21-year old medic from El Paso. "That was about the first time I'd seen one in six months."

One veteran seemed to know that home was not necessarily much closer, despite what Bush said in his nationwide address Wednesday night announcing the liberation of Kuwait, the defeat of the Iraqi army and an end to offensive combat operations.

"It always takes a lot longer to clean up than you think," said Lt. Col. Hank Kennison, a 42-year old battalion commander from Lubbock, Texas. "We got some more time here in this wonderful country sucking sand."

Military experts note that the deployment from the United States to defend Saudi Arabia and free Kuwait, which Iraq invaded on Aug. 2, took five months and that even an accelerated departure would take at least three months.

The wait will be frustrating for soldiers in the field as well as families at home, and the Pentagon is aware of the political repercussions of not responding promptly.

But the future security needs of Iraq and Kuwait have not been settled and diplomats still have to decide what size force will remain in the area. Furthermore, military briefers said that Kuwaiti forces need help in restoring basic services to their ravaged country.

Woman's house burns hours after word of husband's death

VASS, N.C. (AP) — Hours after the military informed Pat Smith her husband was killed in a minesweeping operation in the Persian Gulf, a fire destroyed their home Thursday.

The family recovered little more than the uniform Russell Smith will be buried in.

"It was sort of like a kick in the gut. I'm still in shock. I don't know what I'm going to do from one minute to the next," Mrs. Smith said as she sat Thursday in the home of her mother, Pauline Newton, who lives next door.

Dozens of people already have called Jimmy Hennings, chief of the Cranes Creek Volunteer Fire Department. A radio station in Illinois called Vass town hall offering help.

"They're just wanting to know how they can help the lady and everything," Hennings said. Callers are offering money and items such as furniture, he said.

Hennings said he's keeping a list of callers until he talks with Mrs. Smith to find out what she needs.

On Wednesday, she had been preparing for her husband's homecoming.

Conflict's winners, losers emerge

By Bob Dart
and Andrew Alexander
N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — As in all wars, the Persian Gulf conflict had its winners and losers. Now that combat has ended, the assessments have begun. Here's a look at who came out where:

(winner) George Bush: With uncanny timing, the president knew when to start the war and when to end it. His public approval ratings read like August temperatures — in the mid-80s and rising — and there's a notable dearth of Democratic challengers for 1992.

(loser) Saddam Hussein: The Butcher of Baghdad turned out to be a blowhard without the military strategy, equipment or forces to back up his braggadocio. As his standing slips inside Iraq and the rest of the Arab world, Saddam may personally end up fulfilling the "drowning in blood" fate he forecast for his enemies.

(winner) Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf: The commander of Operation Desert Storm has become an all-American hero — quickly and decisively defeating Iraq, dispelling Vietnam-era images of military incompetence, and giving a boffo performance in televised briefings. Political recruiters are wondering if Stormin' Norman is a Democrat or Republican.

(loser) The Republican Guard: Did Iraq issue these highly hyped soldiers white flags as part of their basic uniforms? Saddam's allegedly elite, battle-hardened units turned out to be the most overrated fighting force since big, bad Sonny Liston went up against a poet named Cassius Clay.

(winner) Arthur Kent: NBC-TV's cute correspondent gained popularity as a Scud Stud when women viewers formed fan clubs for their favorite desert fox.

(loser) Dan Rather: The CBS-TV anchor came on strong in the stretch but his third-place network newscasts never completely recovered from a bad opening night of coverage.

(winner) Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis.: The chairman of the House Armed Services committee bucked the Democratic leadership and backed Bush on the key force vs. sanctions vote. He also accurately predicted a short war and a decisive U.S. victory.

(loser) Sen. Sam Nunn, D-Ga.: Does the chairman of the Senate Armed Services Committee still think the allies should have waited for economic sanctions to force Saddam to leave Kuwait? Once touted as Dixie's Democratic hawk, some folks figure the cautious senator came out looking like a Southern-fried chicken.

(winner) Pete Williams: Is this guy slick or what? The Pentagon's mouthpiece kept reporters at bay without ever even wrinkling his GQ-perfect wardrobe.

(losers) Journalists at the military briefings: "When is the ground war going to start, general?" The reporters came across as pampered, peevish, whining nitpickers, prompting America to wonder "whose side are these people on, anyway?"

(winner) Whitney Houston: In a nation awash with patriotism, her Super Bowl rendition of The Star-Spangled Banner sold 750,000 copies in eight days and now there's a video out, too.

(loser) Sean Lennon: His remake of "Give Peace a Chance," a classic from his Beatle father John Lennon, re-emphasized that the Sixties are over and that this wasn't the Vietnam War.

(winner) U.S. military-industrial complex: The high-tech Nintendo war made everyone forget the $600 toilet seats. Stealth fighter jets and Apache helicopters and Tomahawk cruise missiles and laser-guided bombs and all the other whiz-bang weapons worked — a needed boost for American know-how.

(loser) Soviet military: Anybody want to buy a few thousand burned-out T-72 tanks? Soviet-made weaponry and Soviet military strategy took a TOW to the jaw.

(winner) Jimmy Carter: When the favorite son of Plains, Ga., was in the White House, he began the military research and development program that led to the Scud-busting Patriot missile and other high-tech weapons systems that performed well in the war.

(loser) Jimmy Carter: Credit for these systems went to former President Ronald Reagan and his big defense build-up. Likewise, Carter's Camp David success sowed seeds for Egyptian support in Operation Desert Storm, but the war also revived memories of Carter's disastrous desert attempt to rescue American hostages from Iran.

(winners) Southern Democrats in Congress who supported the use of force against Iraq: No need to defend their votes against Republican snipers armed with hindsight.

(losers) Southern Democrats in Congress who voted to continue sanctions rather than granting Bush the authority to start the war: Their GOP challengers will be marching behind the parade when the troops come home from the desert. Woe be it to any of Dixie's Democrats who also voted to cut off funds for the Patriot missile.

(winner) Gen. Colin Powell: The chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff appears to have a bright political future, if he wants it, with whichever party he chooses.

(loser) Anti-war movement: It was all over before the protesters for peace could shake the perception that they were longhaired, bell-bottomed relics who had been in hibernation for 20 years. Plus, Saddam was such an apt villain that few Americans had second thoughts about the bombing of Iraq.

(winner) Red Adair: Kuwait's burning oil fields will provide a bonanza for the legendary Texan and the world's relative handful of other firefighters who specialize in the dangerous business of capping blazing oil wells.

(loser) The environment: The war left giant oil slicks in the Persian Gulf and the whole region darkened by a smoke cloud from the burning Kuwaiti oil fields. The environmental effects could linger for years.

(winner) Hafez Assad of Syria: He's brutal. He has supported terrorism. And he would love to see Israel obliterated. But by joining the allied coalition he shored up rifts with moderate Arab countries, opened a diplomatic channel with Washington and may eventually win U.S. aid for his crumbling economy. And in the process, he helped vanquish archenemy Saddam and crush the menacing Iraqi military. Now, can he persuade Iran to help free the hostages in Lebanon?

(loser) King Hussein of Jordan: The pint-sized potentate probably needed to cater to his pro-Iraqi Palestinian citizenry, but the White House thinks his vitriolic anti-American rhetoric went way too far. Relations with Bush, who puts a high premium on loyalty, may be chilly for years. And the $55 million in U.S. foreign aid earmarked for Jordan could very well go elsewhere.

(winner) Israel: The Jewish state kept its powder dry and let the U.S.-led allies do its dirty work. In the process, Israel won PR points for restraint, even though its decision not to strike back was more a matter of pragmatism. Israel appears to have won increased U.S. aid and a thank you. But watch the "losers" column when the war is a memory, because the U.S. may begin pressing Israel on the Palestinian issue.

(loser) Palestinians: Yasser Arafat and the PLO backed the wrong side. The winners, Saudi Arabia and Kuwait, won't forget. But check the "winners" column if the peace process ends up pushing the homeland question.

(winner) Iran: Watching with silent glee as its old enemy was demolished, Iran somehow picked up several squadrons of top-of-the-line Soviet warplanes from Iraq, free of charge.

(loser) Mikhail Gorbachev: Gorby gave it the old Nobel try, but his last-minute peace proposal raised suspicions that he was trying to appease Kremlin hard-liners and get a piece of the postwar action in the Middle East. Sure, he supported the allied coalition. But Bangladesh sent more troops than the Soviet Union.

(winners) The Keating Five: On the day the combat ended, The Senate Ethics Committee issued its findings on the senators accused of improper dealings with savings & loan operator Charles Keating. But who noticed?

(losers) Sen. Alan Simpson, R-Wyo.: He called CNN's Baghdad correspondent Peter Arnett an Iraqi "sympathizer."

LIMA, Peru (AP) — As the number of cholera victims climbed above 45,000 Thursday, double the figure from a week ago, doctors harshly criticized President Alberto Fujimori for telling Peruvians that raw fish was safe to eat.

At least 193 people have died since the first case of cholera was recorded Jan. 23, the Health Ministry reported.

Fujimori and his wife, Susana, have repeatedly been shown eating raw fish on Peruvian television. The footage is meant to boost the country's slumping fishing industry, but the ministry insists that raw fish may be contaminated.

"The president is handling a health problem politically," said one doctor. Like the other doctors who criticized Fujimori, he asked his name not be used.

An epidemiologist at one hospital said up to half the cases he studied when the epidemic began were probably due to eating ceviche, a popular dish made of raw seafood, onions, hot peppers and lemon juice.

With the fall in fish consumption, most cases are now transmitted by food bought on the street or by untreated tapwater, he said, but if the president's example leads people to start eating ceviche again, there could be a big resurgence.

The Peruvian cholera outbreak is the first in the Western Hemisphere in more than a century, but parts of the Middle East, Africa and Asia have suffered cholera since 1961. In Zambia, 500 people have died of the disease this year, Zambian officials said Thursday.

The Peruvian doctors said the number of cases reported in Lima has rebounded in recent days, after falling steadily since early February. A resurgence also was reported in Chancay, about 10 miles north of Lima, as well as in coastal Trujillo and Chimbote.

Chimbote, about 200 miles north of Lima, was the site of the first reported case of cholera.

The Health Ministry on Thursday announced that 45,446 cholera cases had been reported in the country, nearly double the figures released last Friday. The death toll rose by 59 since Friday.

Doctors interviewed Thursday in Lima hospitals said the numbers will keep rising if Peruvians continue to eat ceviche.

The doctors said some local shellfish is probably contaminated by cholera. They also said ceviche handled by a cholera victim is much more likely to transmit the disease than is cooked food.

"The epidemic is not under control here," said Dr. Luis Wong, head of the Eliazar Guzman Barran regional hospital.

Marxist group claims responsibility for attacks

IZMIR, Turkey (AP) — Assailants shot an American soldier in the head Thursday in the second attack on a U.S. military employee in Turkey in a month. A Marxist group opposed to the Gulf War claimed responsibility for both shootings.

U.S. officials said the victim, identified as Lt. Col. Alvin Macke, 44, was in stable condition after surgery. The semi-official news agency Anatolia said Macke worked at NATO Land Southeast Command in Izmir. His hometown was not available.

"We will continue our activities until imperialism gets its hands off the Middle East," said a caller claiming to represent Dev Sol, after contacting the Izmir office of the daily newspaper Cumhuriyet.

Two assailants followed the American to his fourth-floor apartment in the western city of Izmir and shot him in the head, Anatolia said.

Officials at the Saglik hospital in Izmir told The Associated Press the American was brought in wearing a U.S. military uniform.

The shooting occurred at 5:15 p.m.

It was the second shooting of an American claimed by Dev Sol in a month.

U.S. Embassy employee dies in fire

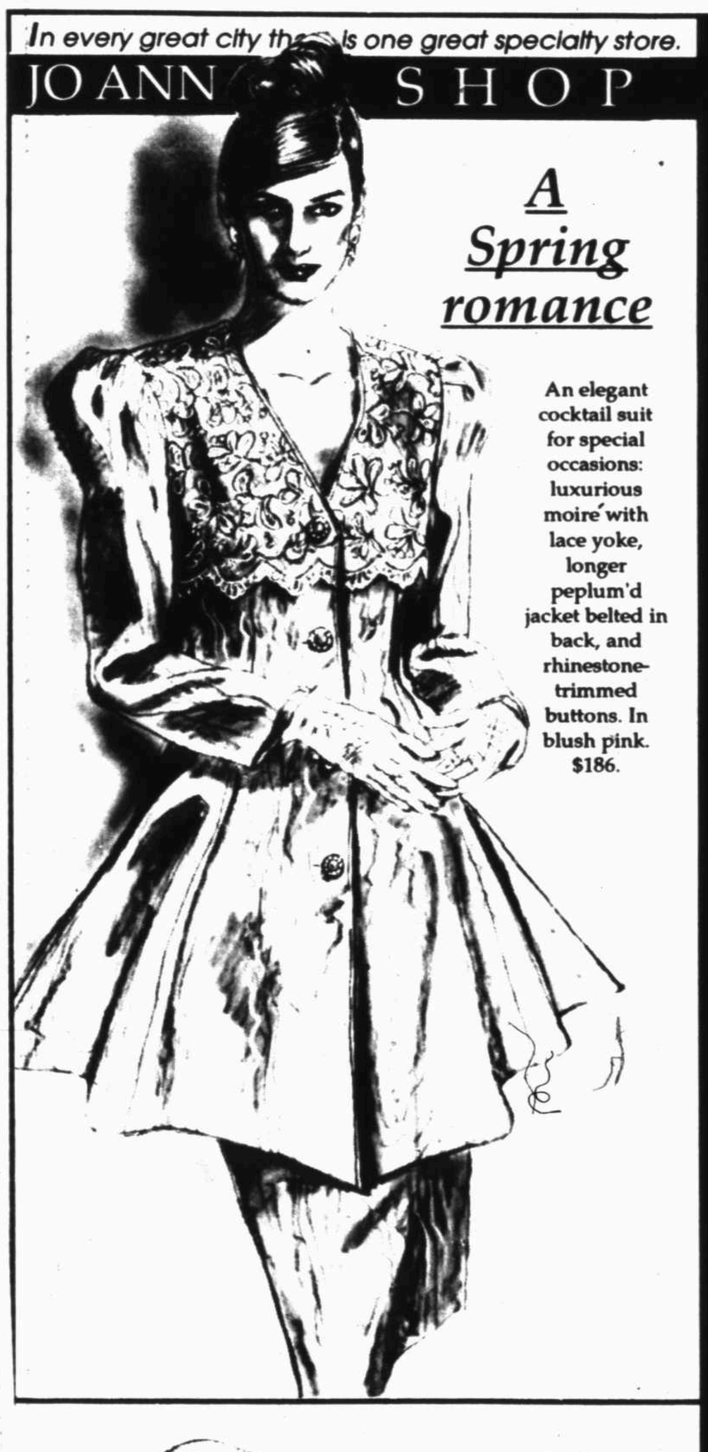

MOSCOW (AP) — An employee of the U.S. Embassy in Helsinki, Finland, died in a weekend fire at the Leningrad Hotel, American officials said Thursday.

Pasqual (Marty) Martinez, 54, was on temporary duty at the U.S. Consulate in Leningrad, said Jim Bullock, spokesman for the U.S. Embassy in Moscow.

Martinez, a foreign service communicator, was from Calexico, Calif., the embassy in Helsinki said.

Bullock said no other Americans were killed or injured.

WTCJC confab provides forum

Playing host city to the West Texas County Judges and Commissioners Convention next month will give Midland a golden opportunity to impress upon the distinguished visitors the importance of West Texas to the political, economic and, yes, even social life of Texas. That impression needs to be made.

The convention is scheduled for March 20-22 at Midland Center and the Midland Hilton and invitations have already been extended to Gov. Ann Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock, Atty. Gen. Dan Morales, State Treasurer Kay Bailey Hutchison and Land Commissioner Garry Mauro.

It's likely at least some of those state officials will attend. County Commissioner Win Brown, noting more than 350 people are already registered for the convention, estimates 600 to 700 people will attend and such a large gathering increases the chances that top state officials will also show up.

"We've invited Bullock, Morales and Ann Richards," Brown said, "and whenever we invite them, they show up."

That's good. One of the prime concerns for counties this year is the redistricting to be performed on the basis of the 1990 census figures and West Texas does not want to be viewed as a political wasteland by the Legislature when district lines are being redrawn. The best way to avoid being viewed that way is by impressing on the politicians this geographic area's specific needs, desires and characteristics.

Of course, the complete West Texas story can't be told during the three days the judges and commissioners will be in town. But an impression can be made that might sway the politicians to West Texas' interests and concerns during the redistricting battles yet to come.

Three of the dignitaries invited to attend the convention — Hobby, Morales and Mauro — serve on the Legislative Redistricting Board and all of those invited wield powerful political influence in Austin and could bring to the debates a concern for the people of this area that otherwise might be lacking.

West Texas deserves a fair shake in the redistricting process and a strong voice in all state matters. Hosting this convention can help make our concerns known to top state leaders.

Troops get a healthy dose of reality

WITH THE 101ST AIRBORNE DIVISION, Saudi Arabia — Try not to compare the flight surgeon of the 101st Aviation Brigade to "Hawkeye" Pierce. Ignore the fact that he sleeps in a body bag as a liner to keep his sleeping bag dry. Forget that he once dressed up in Arab garb and briefly convinced a few GIs that he was Saudi King Fahd reviewing the troops. Pay no attention to his one-liners.

Anderson

This is Lt. Col. Larry Godfrey, not Alan Alda. He is equal parts comedy, compassion and confidence. He knows his stuff. And that is why there is at least one brigade at the front that isn't afraid of biological weapons, because "Doc" Godfrey has demythologized the boogie man.

We spent the night as a guest in Godfrey's tent, and were awakened to the sound of him lecturing aides on an affliction that would cause a man to show "expressions you've never seen on a man before, and you'll hear things from him you've never heard from a human before."

"Biological weapons?" we asked.

No, he said. A testicle disease.

Then Godfrey proceeded to lecture on the unnecessary hysteria the press created over Saddam Hussein's potential to use biological weapons. The known agents in the Iraqi arsenal are more useful as psychological terror than tactical weapons.

In a speech last September, Central Intelligence Agency Director William Webster reported that Saddam had a "sizable stockpile" of biological weapons. A member of Congress called it "militarily significant."

The weapons were primarily developed at Salman Pak, a research facility about 18 miles southeast of Baghdad. It was bombed into oblivion in the first days of the war. But what survived was Iraq's stockpile, which is capable of being delivered in bombs, short-range rockets and artillery shells.

Saddam is believed to have used biological weapons — apparently with little effect compared to chemical weapons — against the Kurds in his own country.

The two chief biological agents in Iraq's arsenal are anthrax and botulin toxin. According to Godfrey, only a small number of troops would be affected by either, and Iraq would have to have an aerosol generator capable of continuous pumping of the agents within a mile or two of oncoming troops.

In 1979, an accidental explosion at a Soviet anthrax weapons factory in Sverdlovsk reportedly killed 1,000 people. But that was among a population of more than 1 million people of various ages and health conditions. The percentage would be far lower among physically fit soldiers wearing protective gear. On top of that, some of the front-line troops received a series of injections to immunize them against anthrax and other agents.

Godfrey said that while pulmonary anthrax is a particularly lethal form of the disease, tremendous concentrations would have to be dumped on each soldier and be heavily ingested in the lungs. The high winds and sandstorms in the desert could dissipate heavy concentrations.

The same is true for botulin toxin, which is produced by the organism that causes a common form of food poisoning. Because of the wind, it is as dangerous to those who use it as to those on whom it is launched.

WILLIAM MURCHISON

Is John Spong the best we can do?

Episcopal Bishop John Spong of Newark, N.J., calls to mind the story of another prelate who prayed, concerning his adversaries, "Lord, let them go too far."

Evidently, in his new book "Rescuing the Bible from Fundamentalism," Bishop Spong has gone too far, even by his own, highly flexible standards.

Murchison

He calls the Virgin Birth unthinkable, describes St. Paul as a "self-loathing and repressed gay male" and represents some of Christ's words in Scripture as "narrow-minded" and "vindictive." The notion that God conferred the Promised Land on the children of Israel is, to Spong, a piece of "arrogance."

Bishop Spong's unorthodoxy, Richard N. Ostling writes in Time magazine, "has now reached epic proportions." The New York Times quotes Episcopal Bishop Richard Grein of New York City as accusing Spong, a sometime theological ally, of creating "a furor for nothing." To which Bishop Grein adds: "When you say things like this, who is going to believe you when you say something that is true?"

Nobody, and high time, if a concerned Episcopalian may say so. Bishop John Spong, hero of the television talk shows, is an embarrassment not just to Episcopalians but to fellow Christians in general.

There's practically nothing he won't say. At a public engagement a year or so ago, he identified C.S. Lewis as "a gay man." I braced him afterwards: Where did he get the documentation for so extraordinary, and unprecedented, a claim? Well, it was an impression he'd gained from Lewis' writings. He'd look into it; he really would.

A couple of years ago, he demanded that the church bless homosexual relationships. Against the discipline of his own church, and 2,000 years of Christian precedent, he ordained an active homosexual to the priesthood.

Spong imagines himself a prophet and a great modernist. Actually, the Rev. William Ralston, an Episcopal priest in Savannah, is on to him. He notes that Spong's scholarship, such as it is, has whiskers on it.

Spong, says Ralston, is "a truly comic figure," "a damp squib," a self-styled modernist dependent on "sociological trivia, outmoded spiritual psychology, and superstructure of Biblical criticism which was familiar 60 years ago and has been crumbling ever since."

True, in Ostling's words, the new Gospel of John raises "an intriguing question: 'Are there are any limits to what an Episcopal leader may believe — or disbelieve?'" Here the comedic element vanishes.

This is the Episcopal Church's Decade of Evangelism. The church has set out to present the Gospel winningly to as many people as possible: a good idea given that the Episcopal Church has shrunk to the size it was in the late '50s.

Who is the church's best-known spokesman? Bishop Spong, thanks to his personal enterprise and not inconsiderable aptitude for communication.

Is this the best we can offer? — a faithless faith; an orthodoxy drained of meaning and texture; normless, do-it-yourself religion lacking a sense of sin — a sense, indeed, the very human deficiencies that bring men and women to their knees in abject repentance and obedience? Is John S. Spong the best we can do?

I'm here to say he isn't. There are hundreds, thousands, of faithful priests and ministers out there, going their daily rounds, preaching the gospel of Christ, binding up hurts and wounds, receiving for their efforts minimal praise and attention. Then there are the Spongs, with their knack for the spotlight, their gift of the gab.

William Murchison's column is distributed by Heritage Features Syndicate.

CHARLEY REESE

Wyoming's Sen. Simpson has a lot of gall

Senator Alan K. Simpson, Republican from Wyoming, is a hypocrite and an ass — the kind with long ears and a tail.

Not long ago, he libeled a good man, Peter Arnett, Cable News Network's correspondent in Baghdad. He referred to Arnett as a sympathizer, as in Nazi sympathizer, and he went even further in his despicable character assassination by questioning Arnett's loyalty nearly two decades ago.

Reese

Arnett, when he was the Associated Press bureau chief in Saigon, was married to a Vietnamese woman, Senator Simpson says, and her brother may have been sympathetic or had some connection with the Viet Cong. So what if he did? Since when are we responsible for the political views of our in-laws?

The proof of the pudding for a journalist is his work, and Peter Arnett's work, which is available for any scholar to study, earned him a Pulitzer Prize for its quality and accuracy. There's nothing pro-communist about it.

What makes the senator from Wyoming so contemptible — after all, he's long been nothing but a partisan sniper for Republican presidents — is that last spring it was Senator Simpson, not Peter Arnett, who was in Baghdad and he definitely was sympathizing with Saddam Hussein.

Why, Saddam, the senator told him, you don't have to worry about your American aid. You don't have a problem with the American government, Senator Simpson told Saddam. You have a problem with the media. Why don't you invite them to Baghdad, the senator suggested.

And now he has the gall to publicly question Arnett's loyalty to America? Simpson and his fellow Republicans, of course, were the big defenders and big aid-givers to Saddam Hussein during the past decade, right up until Aug. 2.

Arnett, of course, reports what Iraqi censors allow him to report. That's also what reporters in Saudi Arabia report — just what U.S. censors allow them to report. Arnett, of course, is escorted by Iraqi officials. So, too, are reporters in Saudi Arabia escorted by American officials after they have been herded in pools and taken where the U.S. says they can be taken and allowed to talk to people the U.S. says they can talk to while an Army official stands next to them.

Another point to keep in mind as the Bush administration tries to wage its own propaganda war is this. In Baghdad, the Iraqi government knows where U.S. bombs land and what damage they do. The U.S. government knows where the bombs land and what damage they do. Now, who is left out of this loop? The American people.

The people the Bush administration wish to keep in the dark are not the Iraqis — it's the American people. They don't want you to know anything about this war except what they tell you. That's no different than what Saddam Hussein is doing.

That's their real beef with Arnett and CNN. There's not one syllable in Arnett's reports that is anything but an honest, factual account of what he can see and what he can hear. He and CNN have done an outstanding job of alerting viewers to the restrictions placed on Arnett.

Simpson and his Bush backers don't really think Arnett is sympathetic to Iraq. What they fear is that if the American people know all of the facts they might not support Bush's policy. They are just morally low enough to resort to character assassination whenever it suits their political purposes just as they have resorted to lies and misrepresentations from the very beginning of this pre-meditated war.

The troops deserve your support. Peter Arnett deserves your support. All of them are serving the American people.

Alan Simpson and the rest of the Bush administration, however, do not deserve the support of anyone except those they are serving — and those aren't the American people.

Charley Reese's column is distributed by King Features Syndicate.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

You just gotta drawer the line somewhere

A report by Knight-Ridder newspapers said it's costing $750 million a day to operate Operation Desert Storm.

Of course, the U.S., which stands for Ultimate Sugar Daddy, is paying for most of it.

It is difficult for me to deal with a notion like $750 million a day. Even "$750 million a month" is bewildering.

Grizzard

I probably could handle "$750 million a decade" because that's what the average baseball player makes these days.

I was further confused by a graphic that accompanied the Knight-Rdder article.

It pictured an American male soldier in full combat gear and what each part of that gear cost. Here's some examples:

Desert helmet: $103.
Helmet cover: $2.50
Boots: $33.20
Socks: $1.65
M-16 Rifle: $475.
Two-quart canteen: $5.45.
Canteen cover: $8.75.
Belt: $6.60.
Suspenders: $6.95.

The total estimated cost of outfitting a U.S. soldier came to $1,452.10.

There were a few things in the graphic I had to question.

One is, why does a canteen cover ($8.95) cost more than the canteen itself ($5.45)?

And if we issue a soldier a belt ($6.60) why does he also need suspenders ($6.95)?

The thing that concerned me most, however, was what we're paying for a soldier's drawers.

Out of the $1,412.10 being spent on the combat outfit, a measly $1.50 is spent on a soldier's underwear.

Have you priced men's drawers lately? Put a "Calvin Klein" or "Ralph Lauren" tag on them and they cost you twenty bucks or more.

Non-designer drawers cost anywhere from ten to eighteen bucks.

And the ones we're giving our soldiers cost only a dollar fifty?

There's nothing worse than a cheap of drawers. Wear them a couple of times and the elastic waist band stretches and suddenly you're wearing a most annoying and uncomfortable piece of clothing commonly known as "droopy drawers."

It's tough just going to work in droopy drawers.

Ten times a day they fall down from the waist to just north of the knees. You have to go to the men's room, take off your pants, and pull up your drawers.

This causes the loss of valuable time in the work place not to mention considerable irritability.

Imagine how it would be to try and fight a war while wearing droopy drawers?

You can't just stop in the desert pull down your desert trousers ($14.40) and pull up your droopy drawers.

I couldn't locate a military expert retired or otherwise, to speak on this subject. They were all tied up with the networks.

But I think it is a damnable shame we don't think enough of our boys on the battlefront to give them a proper, functional pair of drawers.

It's just like our government to go hog wild on canteen covers and suspenders, but basically ignore a much more important item underwear.

I don't know what we can do here at home unless it's this: If you've got a man in the desert, send him some drawers.

Even if you can't afford Calvins or Ralphs there are many more less-expensive fruits of the looms available and they won't become droopy.

Operation Desert Drawers. It's time to act.

Christian Brando gets 10 years

SANTA MONICA, Calif. (AP) — Actor Marlon Brando's son Christian was sentenced Thursday to 10 years in prison for voluntary manslaughter in the shooting death of his half-sister's lover.

"It's a tragic situation for both families, for Christian Brando," Superior Court Judge Robert W. Thomas said in imposing the sentence.

In tearful, rambling testimony before sentencing, Marlon Brando portrayed his son as a "basket case," a drug and alcohol abuser whose parents failed him.

Christian Brando, 32, drew a six-year sentence on the manslaughter charge and four more years for aggravating circumstances for use of a gun.

He pleaded guilty last month to voluntary manslaughter in the shooting last May of Dag Drollet, whom he maintained was killed accidentally in a struggle. He said he was angry with Drollet for beating his pregnant half-sister, Cheyenne.

NATION

Prosecutors, alleging the killing was premeditated, sought the maximum 16-year prison sentence.

A probation officer recommended the minimum sentence of three years, citing chemical-induced brain damage and lack of self-esteem.

The sentence appeared to stun the 80 people who filled the courtroom. There was silence for a moment and no one moved. Christian Brando, wearing a business suit, kept his head bowed and showed no reaction.

He had been out on bail and was immediately ordered into custody and led away by sheriff's deputies.

"He's getting away with murder, definitely," said Drollet's father, Jacques Drollet. He and Drollet's mother said the sentence was not severe enough.

Defense Attorney Robert Shapiro said he did not plan to appeal.

In testimony before the sentencing, Marlon Brando said his son's mother was one of the most "unhappy and cruel" people he had ever met, but admitted that he, too, may have failed as a parent.

"Most people have some good and bad aspects," he said. "His mother came as close to being a negative person, and as cruel and unhappy a person as I've ever met."

But Marlon Brando added: "You always tend to blame the other parent, but I know I could have done better. ... But I did the best I could."

Californians celebrate in the rain

N.Y. Times News Service

SAN FRANCISCO — A welcome series of storms has brought rain to California the last two days, causing residents to engage in all sorts of activities that — after five years of drought — had become unusual.

Raincoats have been dragged from the backs of closets and small children are learning the joys of stomping in puddles.

Not all the effects of what residents here now call "actual water from the sky" have been positive: Newly rain-slicked roads in Los Angeles on Wednesday resulted in five times the usual number of overturned trucks and automobile accidents along freeways.

And Los Angeles fared better than Bakersfield, 120 miles to the north, where blowing dust cut visibility to almost zero and caused a 50-vehicle crash that injured nearly 40 people Wednesday morning.

While spotty showers had office workers here singing in the rain on their way to work Thursday morning, water officials cautioned against optimism.

"In terms of the long-term supply of water and mitigating drought conditions, it's too little too late," said Robert J. Gomperz, a spokesman for the Metropolitan Water District in Los Angeles, which serves 27 water utilities in Southern California.

According to Robert Brown, a forecaster for the National Weather Service, the storms that began reaching California on Wednesday morning have come out of the southwestern Pacific and delivered most of their precipitation to the southern parts of the state and along coastal mountain ranges.

The San Diego area had received nearly 2 inches of rain by Thursday morning, and the Los Angeles area more than an inch. By contrast, less than an inch had fallen in San Francisco and Oakland.

Officials cautioned that although the storms were expected to last through the weekend, water rationing plans set to go into effect in many areas would go forward.

Beginning Friday, for instance, households in Marin County must drop consumption to 50 gallons of water a day per person, less than half the average per-capita consumption there.

'In terms of the long-term supply of water and mitigating drought conditions, it's too little too late. Cars sitting outdoors are getting washed off, and lawns are getting watered and may even turn green. I vaguely remember green.'

— Robert J. Gomperz, Metropolitan Water District Los Angeles

Beginning Sunday, San Franciscans will be forbidden to wash cars or to fill swimming pools or hot tubs. And beginning Friday in Los Angeles, residents will be required to cut water use to 10 percent below 1986 levels.

Robert F. Fingado, an engineer with the Drought Center of the State Department of Water Resources, said the situation was a complex one affecting some parts of the state more severely than others.

He noted that although the more than 1,400 reservoirs that dot the state were at less than 50 percent of capacity overall, the figure was 14 percent in the central coastal area around Santa Barbara. "I'm afraid it's going to be a long hot summer," he said.

In some severely hit rural areas, that may be an understatement. In Tuolumne County in the Sierra foothills about 175 miles east of here, county officials said Wednesday that even the strictest conservation measures would not keep many small towns from running out of water by June. Plans are under way to bring in water by tanker trucks.

Still, Gomperz said, the rain this week will act to reduce immediate demands for water in the days before mandatory rationing takes effect. "Cars sitting outdoors are getting washed off, and lawns are getting watered and may even turn green," he said, adding wistfully, "I vaguely remember green."

Discovery delayed, returning to hangar

N.Y. Times News Service

The space shuttle Discovery will be moved back to a hangar and its flight delayed from March 9 so engineers can repair cracked hinges on access doors, space agency officials said Thursday.

Although tests indicate that the manned spacecraft probably could have flown safely even with the cracks, William Lenoir, the director of space flight for the National Aeronautics and Space Administration, said the agency decided to play it safe and repair the hinges first.

"Prudence calls for us to go back and fix it," Lenoir said at a news briefing at the Johnson Space Center in Houston.

If there had been a pressing need, the space agency would have launched Discovery with the hinge cracks because the tests indicated the doors would have closed properly for the safe return of the spacecraft, Lenoir said.

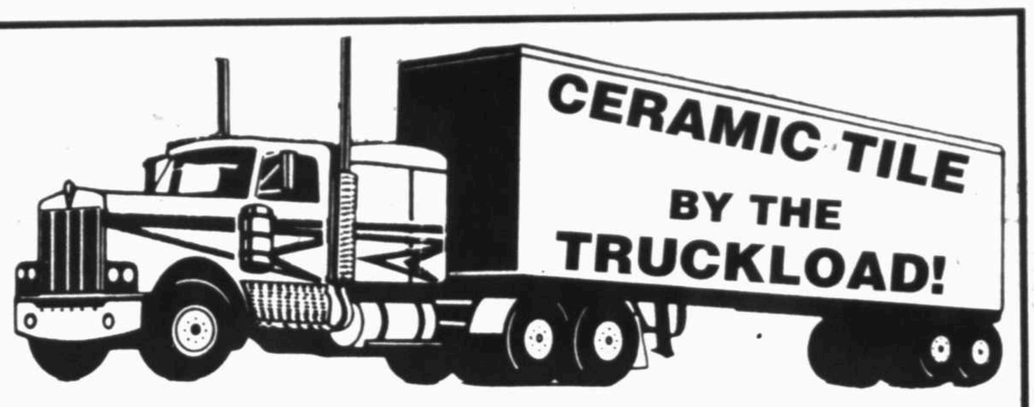

"If there was a national defense or some emergency reason why we needed to go fly, I don't think any of us would have any hesitation to go fly this bird," Lenoir said. "We're being conservative."

Space agency officials said the cracks were not as difficult to detect, diagnose or repair as the hydrogen fuel leaks that appeared in two shuttles last year and forced the cancellation of three of the year's nine scheduled flights.

NASA engineers said repairing the cracked areas of the aluminum-alloy hinges should not be difficult.

Robert Crippen, the shuttle program director, said Discovery should be able to fly its military mission by the end of April or early May. On the flight, seven astronauts are to conduct research for the Pentagon concerned with obtaining data for use in developing sensors to pinpoint enemy missile launches.

The delay probably will mean that one of the seven shuttle missions scheduled for this year will be dropped, Crippen said.

Noriega witness dies in car crash

MIAMI (AP) — A key government witness who linked Manuel Noriega and two co-defendants to a shipment of cocaine died in a car crash before he got a chance to testify, officials said Thursday.

Ramon Navarro, a confessed drug dealer to whom the government gave $170,000 and immunity in exchange for his cooperation, died when his car left the road and smashed into an electrical transformer Wednesday night, said Metro-Dade police spokesman Ralph Fernandez.

"We have no indication of foul play, but the investigation is continuing," he said.

Blood alcohol tests are expected to be available Friday, Fernandez said.

Assistant U.S. Attorney Robert Mueller said his office would "look into the circumstances" of Navarro's death to determine whether it was an accident.

Police searched the neighborhood after Navarro's red BMW crashed and told two neighbors the car's passenger door was found open and a gun was on the front seat.

Police told the neighbors, who spoke to The Associated Press on condition of anonymity, that Navarro was traveling 70 to 75 mph along a straight stretch of road when he apparently was cut off by another car that may have come from a side street.

One of the neighbors reported hearing a second car just before the accident.

Widow won't seek seat

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Silvio Conte's widow said Thursday she will not run for her husband's seat, giving Massachusetts Democrats their first clear shot at the position in 32 years.

Corinne Conte said in an open letter to the voters of Massachusetts' 1st District that her decision came down to personal rather than political priorities.

"It would be too difficult for me to carry on his legacy in this time of personal grief," Mrs. Conte wrote.

The decision intensified the political scramble that began with Conte's death Feb. 8 of a cerebral hemorrhage. Some 21 potential candidates have taken out papers to run in a special election for the seat, and several said Thursday that Mrs. Conte's announcement made their own plans definite.

A primary is set for April 30. The special election is June 4.

Conte, who first won his seat in 1958, held a lock on the position in later years, sometimes winning the endorsement of both parties. He was the only Republican in the Massachusetts congressional delegation.

Conte reflected his constituents by becoming one of the most liberal House members of the GOP.

"The odds of the Republicans retaining the seat changed dramatically when Mrs. Conte decided not to run," said Boston-based political analyst Jerome Berger. "It's a Democratic district and, in many ways, Sil Conte was a Democrat."

McGovern may run again

IOWA CITY, Iowa (AP) — George McGovern, the first Democrat to acknowledge he may run in Iowa's presidential caucuses, courted votes Thursday on a college campus, the same forum that helped him to the nomination in 1972.

"It's my hope that a younger, less battle-scarred candidate would emerge" to run on the 1992 Democratic ticket, the two-time presidential candidate told about 300 students and teachers in a speech on the University of Iowa campus.

"But if that does not happen in the next couple of months, I will be ready to raise the Democratic standard," McGovern said.

Iowa's precinct caucuses next year mark the first test of presidential strength.

McGovern said it was time to "turn our gaze homeward" after the Gulf War and focus on President Bush's vulnerability on domestic issues.

Firm agrees to penalty

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department said Thursday that a subsidiary of McDonnell Douglas Corp. had agreed to pay $7.5 million to settle complaints it overcharged the Pentagon for weapons.

McDonnell Douglas agreed to pay the money to settle claims that Hughes Helicopter Inc., which it acquired in 1984, gave the Pentagon inflated estimates for the cost of producing M-242 automatic guns for the Bradley fighting vehicle, the Justice Department said.

The company did not admit that Hughes Helicopter submitted false cost estimates, the Justice Department said.

The unit, now known as the McDonnell Douglas Helicopter Co., is based in Mesa, Ariz.

Man gets life sentences

RENO, Nev. (AP) — A Tennessee man faces two consecutive life terms in prison with the possibility of parole for the slaying of a former Houston man who was dressed like a woman.

Toby Foster, 23, of Munford, Tenn., was sentenced in Washoe District Court on Wednesday after pleading guilty to second-degree murder and second-degree murder with the use of a deadly weapon.

He was charged with the 1989 strangulation and stabbing of Russell York, allegedly after he accompanied York to a motel room before discovering York was a man.

York, whose last known address was Houston, was found in the room near death from several stab wounds.

Gramm kicks off postwar politics

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — In a fierce taste of postwar politics, Sen. Phil Gramm, a key Republican strategist, said Thursday that the Persian Gulf crisis showed that Democrats could not be trusted to guide the nation's foreign policy.

"Our party has always been in favor of a strong America and a strong defense and the Democratic Party for 20 years has always been on the other side of that argument," said Gramm, chairman of the National Republican Senatorial Committee.

The success of the Persian gulf war, he said, was not an accident, but an affirmation of 10 years of Republican policies that would not have been established under the Democrats.

Gramm's comments to the Young Republican Leadership Conference on Thursday signaled how rough the partisan maneuvering could get as the war winds down.

He repeatedly cited the fact that congressional Democrats overwhelmingly opposed the resolution authorizing the use of force in the Persian Gulf, describing that as "one of the most important votes cast in this country in the last 25 or 40 years."

"Every leader in the Democratic Party in the House and Senate voted to undercut the president, voted to position themselves to the left of the United Nations," Gramm said.

"It is so damaging because it is exactly in the pattern of Jimmy Carter and Walter Mondale and Michael Dukakis. It says to the nation once again that Democrats cannot be trusted to define the destiny of America, that Democrats cannot be trusted to make America a world leader."

Ginny Terzano, a spokeswoman for the Democratic National Committee, countered that such charges were "simply outrageous," that the vote on the use of force was a matter of conscience rather than partisan maneuvering, and that Democrats had been extremely supportive of the president throughout the crisis.

Even for a speech delivered by a partisan leader to a partisan audience, Gramm's address was remarkably biting. He said that George J. Mitchell, the Senate majority leader, and Thomas S. Foley, the speaker of the House, were not "bad people," but as Democrats "they do not belong in the majority and having them in that position is not in the best interest of America."

He compared the Democrats to the Baath Party. "The Baath Party in Iraq and the Democratic Party in the United States are both working on their domestic agenda to make us forget the war," Gramm said. "I submit that it will not be a success."

And when these things begin to come to pass, then look up, and lift up your heads; for your redemption draweth nigh.

Seniors' center to open Monday

■ Eight senior citizens exhibited great excitement during a tour of their new facility.

Cries of "Oh my!" and "Oh gracious!" echoed Thursday throughout the empty rooms and hallways of the Southeast Senior Citizens Center.

A group of eight senior citizens got a sneak preview of their new recreational haven, which will open Monday.

"We went first class on this one," Chuck Swallow, an administrative assistant with the city parks and recreation department, said of the building. "We're still putting some of the final touches on it."

Although programs at the $460,000 center, located in Washington Park in southeast Midland, will start Monday, a dedication ceremony will not take place until May, Swallow said. May is National Senior Citizens Month.

Construction on the facility, which began last October, is on time and about $7,000 under budget, he said.

Those who visited the center Thursday scrutinized every room, light fixture and door hinge. Some had been waiting more than two decades for the moment.

"This is beautiful," said Myrtle Hall, who has been pushing the city to build the center for about 20 years.

The excitement displayed by the seniors almost overwhelmed Swallow.

"It's killing me," he said. "It makes it all worth while to see these people react this way."

Swallow said the 8,000-square-foot center will begin serving meals Monday, but it will take more time to get all programs in place. "We're going to start getting equipment in a little bit at a time," he said.

Pool tables, games and tables for the dinning room are expected to be brought in before Monday, he said.

Ellen Smith, who will be the center's director, said ceramics and exercise classes should begin by Wednesday.

The building will be open Monday through Friday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The facility will have a clinic, library, sewing and quilting room, ceramics room and a classroom for continuing education programs. In addition, the center will have a kitchen, game room and a dining room, which also will serve as an activity room.

Nutrition counseling, blood pressure checks, federally funded lunches five days a week, billiards, dominoes and a variety of arts classes will be offered.

Seminars on insurance, medical benefits and health care also will be held there, as will defensive driving classes and general equivalency diploma programs.

"We feel that the exercise and nutritional programs and the interaction with the other seniors are very important to improve the quality of life," Ms. Smith said.

Kuma Mitchell, 84, one of Thursday's visitors, said she sees the center's opening as the end of a long war.

"We've fought the fight of Jericho," she said. "We're through now. It's a blessing. It really is."

Bernice Wilson, 70, said he plans to make the facility his regular hangout.

"I think it's great," Wilson said. "It couldn't be any better.

Thomas Bruner, left, executive director of the Community Outreach Center — AIDS Project for Fort Worth, talks to local health care professionals, right, about the future of AIDS in America at a conference at Midland College. The Thursday morning conference was sponsored by the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse, the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition, and Midland College.

AIDS seminar:
Education essential, expert says

■ Executive director of the Fort Worth AIDS Project stressed to local health care professionals the importance of including AIDS in their education programs.

By David Morris
Staff Writer

The fight against AIDS needs to be "mainstreamed," a Fort Worth expert told a gathering of Permian Basin health care professionals, counselors and social workers Thursday.

"I don't want to create a new housing authority for persons with AIDS," said Thomas Bruner, executive director for Fort Worth's Community Outreach Center-AIDS Project. "It is the responsibility of people who are already experts . . . who are up and running to find ways to make their programs available to people with AIDS."

AIDS — acquired immune deficiency syndrome — is too widespread at this point to be dealt with under a social service category all its own, he said.

Bruner spoke at a Midland College seminar sponsored by the Permian Basin Regional Council on Alcohol and Drug Abuse (PBRCADA) and the Permian Basin AIDS Coalition.

The seminar was designed to show social workers in the fields of drug- and alcohol-abuse treatment the importance of including AIDS in their education programs, said Mary Helen Smith, PBRCADA program director.

Bruner said chemical abuse and AIDS go hand-in-hand because people whose judgment has been impaired by drugs and alcohol tend to engage in unsafe sexual practices. And intravenous drug users are at high risk of contracting the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV), which causes AIDS, by sharing needles.

AIDS is the so-far inevitably fatal final stage of HIV-infection, which is spread through exchange of blood, semen and vaginal fluids.

Integration of AIDS support services and education into existing programs — such as those offered by the PBRCADA — is seen as essential as the number of AIDS cases increases.

"We need their expertise, we need their help, we need their support . . . as more people with alcohol and drug abuse problems come to us," said Bruner, whose agency provides meals, counseling, support groups and case management for people with AIDS.

He said the Fort Worth AIDS Project serves about 1,200 people monthly, including callers with questions about AIDS, participants in community education projects, and family members of people with AIDS.

The project serves more than 300 people a month who are HIV-infected.

In Texas, there are 11,650 reported cases of AIDS, according to figures provided by Bruner. Nationally 164,129 AIDS cases were reported through Jan. 31. Of those, 2,840 were children under 13.

Meanwhile, 102,802 AIDS deaths were reported through the end of January. Of those, 1,464 were children under 13.

"I don't know about you, but I look at numbers like that and I get awfully scared," Bruner said. "I can't help but ask myself why, in the face of these staggering statistics, are we just now beginning to mobilize and beginning to educate?

"I know there are places around this country where we have yet to begin talking

Jaycees honors Williams, two others

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff Writer

Clayton Williams, who delivered the keynote address to Jaycees at their annual dinner Thursday, was surprised when he was named recipient of the JCI Senatorship award.

Williams was honored at the local Jaycees 34th Annual Distinguished Service Award/Boss of the Year Banquet at the Petroleum Club.

"The JCI Senatorship is the highest honor a local chapter can give," said Sonya Blocker, Midland Jaycees member.

Williams, the former GOP gubernatorial candidate, said he credits his success with following the first line of the Jaycees creed: "We believe that faith in God gives meaning and purpose to human life."

He read from the poem "Footprints" which describes a single set of footprints in the sand when God carried the author of the poem through bad times.

"When oil fell from $22 a barrel to $11 a barrel, I know the Lord was carrying me then," Williams said.

Williams peppered his address with colorful Texas anecdotes about tough times in the oil patch. He also applauded free enterprise, the fall of socialism in several countries, and President Bush and American leadership for their role in freeing Kuwait.

Senators may give Bronte surplus gazebo

By James Cullen
Reporter-Telegram Austin Bureau

AUSTIN — A West Texas town will benefit from a dispute between two senators if the Texas House accepts a Senate resolution to declare a gazebo on the Capitol Grounds as surplus property.

Last year Sen. Carl Parker, D-Port Arthur, mounted a crusade to rid the southeast lawn of a plastic gazebo placed there during the 1988 Capitol Centennial celebration.

Parker's crusade took on a mock partisan tone, since the gazebo was said to be a favorite of former first lady Rita Clements.

Sen. Cyndi Krier, R-San Antonio, also defended the gazebo as a picnic haven for school children who visit the Capitol and she objected to his initial attempts to dismantle the structure.

Earlier this year Krier volunteered to relocate the gazebo in her hometown, but in the meantime, residents of Bronte, a town of 1,100 about 30 miles northeast of San Angelo, expressed interest in the structure.

Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, struck a deal with Parker to declare the gazebo as surplus property, which would allow the State Preservation Board to grant Bronte the structure.

Parker Thursday said he feared the gazebo was a fire hazard.

"If it's not surplus now, when somebody gets through turning a hair drier on it, it will be surplus," he said.

"Here it was just another structure, but in Bronte, Texas, it will be the premiere attraction of the whole town," Parker said.

He added that the move would make Bronte "the new gazebo capital of the world."

Sims said senators would be welcome to visit. "It's a lovely area of Texas, so when you go through,

Area's 1990 cotton crop 'pretty good,' farmers say

By Ed Todd
Staff Writer

The 1990 cotton crop fared "pretty good" in Midland County and, across much of the West Texas plains, did well despite drought and hail in spotted places.

"It's better than last year's, but not as good as the year before," said Charlie Wright, general manager of the Midland County Farmers Cooperative cotton gin. "Maybe a hair above average."

The gin, the only one in Midland County, turned out 15,764 bales from its 1990 crop. Other Midland-produced cotton is ginned at Stanton and Midkiff.

In 1989, the gin processed about 10,000 bales and right at 21,000 bales in 1988. The record yield was in 1979 when 22,000 bales were turned out by the Midland gin.

"Cotton prices seem to be going up," Wright said, "but we don't have any (more cotton) to sell."

The 1990 production exceeded pre-harvest expectations.

"It was sure pretty hot and dry until the last part of July," said Wright. Then, the rains finally came. "We had a pretty good crop."

In considering the 1991 crop, Wright noted that the soil moisture is in "really good shape for this time of year.

"If we have some planting rains in the middle or last part of April and May, we ought to get a decent start."

In the 25-county Plains Cotton Growers area, which extends from Deaf Smith County to Midland County and from the Texas-New Mexico border to the Caprock, an estimated 2.9 million bales were processed by about 240 gins, said Cotton Fanning of the Plains Cotton Growers in Lubbock.

"Overall, we had a good crop," he said. "We had light places, as we do every year, where it didn't rain" and the hail hit.

The 1990 yield was the fourth-largest crop ever in the 25-county area. The high point was 1981 when 3.5 million bales were produced. That year, however, planted acreage, 4.6 million, exceeded 1990's 3.26 million. But in 1990, only 2.7 million acres were harvested, while in 1981, 4.5 million acres were harvested.

"In 1981, we harvested about 4.5 million acres," Fannin observed, "and in 1990, we harvested about 2.7 million acres."

"You'd have to say we made a good crop," he said, and prices were "fairly decent."

The standard bale is 480 pounds.

In surveying the 1991 crop outlook, Fannin noted that in the preponderance of the 25 counties, "We've got good moisture on top, and the ground is plowing real good. But there's nothing underneath it. We don't have the deep moisture that we need."

Cleo Smith

Word has been received here of the recent death of Dr. Cleo Dawson Smith in Lexington, Ky. A prominent teacher at the University of Kentucky and a popular author, lecturer and speaker, she was the sister-in-law of Mrs. Walter B. (Leona) Smith of Midland.

Well-known by early residents of Midland, Dr. Smith, who died Feb. 17, was a speaker for women's clubs, Rotary International and other organizations in virtually every state as well as in England and Mexico. She was a member of the Board of International Platform of Speakers and Writers, Washington, D.C., and a regular guest every month for 10 years on the "Merv Griffin Show," where she was introduced as "Dynamite done-up in a Ph.D."

Dr. Smith was born on a ranch in Webb County, where her father had a homestead. She was the daughter of the late Ed and Helen Griffin, a pioneer family of Mission, Texas. She attended Mary Hardin Baylor Academy of Expression, Belton, received a bachelor's degree in speech from Southern Methodist University and her master's and doctor's degrees from the University of Kentucky, where she taught for 11 years.

She was a Kentucky Colonel, an honorary member of the Zonta Club and author of the book "She Came to the Valley," which was made into a movie on site at the Rio Grande River in Texas in 1978.

Survivors in addition to Mrs. Smith, are a number of nephews and nieces.

Memorial contributions may be made to the Dr. Cleo Dawson Smith Scholarship Fund at the University of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky.

AIDS: Expert stresses the need for education about the disease

about it."

The reluctance of some communities to face the AIDS epidemic is due to several factors, he said. They include cultural taboos surrounding sex, homosexuality, drug addiction, sickness and death.

"Homosexuality: We have never done well on this one. We don't talk about it, we don't educate about it, we don't let it out of its dark closet. If we do, we persecute it and beat it up so it will run back."

But even if communities continue to ignore or deny the problem, AIDS has become a part of life in the United States, Bruner said.

In the future, the country can expect a continued increase in the number of AIDS cases and HIV infections, and continued diversification of the kinds of people affected.

He said that when AIDS was first identified, it was known as GRID — Gay-Related Immune Deficiency. But the disease's potential to affect people in all walks of life is increasingly evident.

"We're talking now about people of color ... we're talking about children ... we're talking about women who've been infected by their husbands or their boyfriends ... we're talking about hearing-impaired folks ... we're talking about blind folks," he said.

If the spread of AIDS beyond the so-called "high-risk" community of gay males and intravenous drug users is not enough to alert communities to the need for AIDS education and support programs, Bruner said, perhaps the financial impact of the disease will be.

"It is without a doubt a financial crisis for you and I as taxpayers and for you and I as people who pay each month for health insurance coverage," he said.

Because they often lose their jobs, people diagnosed as HIV-positive or as having AIDS are rapidly being removed from the tax rolls, he said. In Texas alone, the erosion of the tax base due to AIDS costs tens of millions of dollars every year, according to a 1984 legislative study.

Furthermore, Bruner said, AIDS sufferers who lose their jobs and their health benefits usually turn to public assistance programs to make ends meet as they seek treatment.

"Who pays for all of that stuff?" Bruner asked the audience of about 65. "You do."

That is one practical reason to allow people with AIDS to remain productive members of the work force for as long as possible, he said — and a good reason to prevent employers from forcing people who are HIV-positive out of their jobs.

It is illegal to fire someone because they have AIDS, but some employers attempt to get around that law — in order to save on health-care costs — by making working conditions unbearable and forcing people to quit, he said.

Sarana Savage, HIV coordinator for the Texas Department of Health's Region 3, which includes Midland, said maintaining confidentiality can help prevent such discrimination.

Employers and insurance companies have been known to go to great lengths to find out if someone has AIDS, she said, urging those attending the conference to adhere strictly to non-disclosure rules mandated by Texas law.

"We have received letters on false letterhead ... wanting to know the (HIV test) results of a certain person," said Ms. Savage, who addressed the conference after Bruner.

Although some doctors may require people wishing to be tested for the HIV virus to give their names, people wishing to be tested anonymously can do so through the Texas Department of Health, Ms. Savage said.

The benefit of anonymous testing — as opposed to merely confidential testing — is that the danger of inadvertent disclosure of test results is reduced, she said. And anonymous testing helps curb the spread of the disease because it encourages people who are wary of possible disclosure to seek an HIV test.

Agency to add AIDS education

Staff Report

Planned Parenthood of West Texas Inc. has expanded its education program to include an AIDS outreach education project for teens that will emphasize peer counseling.

Hilda Armendariz has joined the Planned Parenthood staff as the new HIV/AIDS education coordinator. She will provide AIDS education and training to church, social service, health and other community groups. She will also train teen peer AIDS educators who will then provide peer AIDS education to other teens.

The Texas Department of Health provided funding for the program.

For more information, call Planned Parenthood at 563-2530 or 333-4133.

Organ grinder arrested in roommate's death

EL PASO (AP) — An organ grinder was arrested by Border Patrol agents who found the body of the musician's roommate in the motor home they were riding in.

The agents stopped the motor home at a checkpoint on Interstate 10, about 30 miles west of Las Cruces, N.M.

Joseph Anthony Rotondo, 20, of Pueblo, Colo., was charged with the murder of a man identified as Todd Tucker, 20, of Joshua, near Fort Worth.

Rotondo was driving the motor home registered to Tucker when he was stopped at 3:50 a.m. Wednesday.

"When he came up to the checkpoint, he was very nervous and when the agent tried to question him, he kept looking back and he couldn't pay attention," said Ed Gerber, patrol agent in charge of the Las Cruces station.

Officials found Tucker's body behind the captain's seat. Leonard Ramirez, New Mexico State Police investigator, said a .38-caliber Colt revolver and bullet also were found.

JAYCEES: 3 members get awards

(From 1B)

"We beat the hell out of 'em," Williams said, to thunderous applause.

Other honorees were Fred Krautsch, named the 1991 Boss of the Year and Russell Wayne Malm, who was awarded the 1991 Distinguished Service Award.

Kenneth McFall, Jaycees president, introduced Krautsch, as "a man not originally from Texas — but we won't hold that against him."

Krautsch's nomination stated, in part, "While other energy-based companies are moving out or downsizing their Midland operations, the nominee has increased employment in his department by more than 10 percent in the past year. When he obtained approval for nearly 80 personal computers for his company, he chose to purchase them through a local firm — keeping more dollars in Midland."

Krautsch, a certified public account for Texaco, said, "I've done something right. This (award) is a testimony to trying to turn things around at Texaco."

Krautsch also thanked the "caliber of people" he works with "who believe service to humanity is the best work of life."

Patrick Cooling and David Hoover, Krautsch's nominators, also cited him for "employee morale which is at an all-time high."

Malm, who received the award presented in recognition of his contributions to the community, said Midland "is a great town, with great people and a lot of great organizations."

"It's pretty easy to get involved here," Malm said.

Malm is an attorney with the law firm Turpin, Smith, Dyer, Saxe and McDonald. His previous Jaycee honors include Rookie of the Year, Jaycee of the Quarter and chairman of Children's Christmas Shopping Spree.

Malm is a member of the board of directors of Big Brothers/Big Sisters, and Special Olympics. He is also a volunteer for Hospice of Midland and Young Lawyers Association, past chairman of the NJCAA All-Star Basketball Game and has served as a Teen Court judge.

BRONTE: Town may get gazebo

you can stop at the gazebo and eat your ham sandwich, and it's in my district," he said.

On an otherwise slow day, other senators joined in the debate.

Sen. Gonzalo Barrientos, D-Austin, inquired whether the structure might house the homeless of Austin, but Parker replied, "I am told that although it would only make a small, token contribution to sheltering the homeless here in Austin, it will shelter all the homeless in Bronte, Texas."

Sen. John Leedom, R-Dallas, attacked the resolution as another "giveaway" program, but Parker corrected him. "This is an effort to help local government," he said.

Sims promised an appropriate ceremony to mark the move. "We'll see that you and Sen. Krier are seated on the front row and you will have the opportunity to make a speech," he said.

A day after the Senate passed an ethics reform bill, its sponsor, Sen. Bob Glasgow, D-Stephenville, asked if Bronte had a lobbyist.

"I wouldn't know, but they haven't bought me dinner yet," said Parker, who failed in attempts Wednesday to prohibit cities and counties from hiring lobbyists.

"Why should we be doing this if we haven't been lobbied yet?" Glasgow asked.

"If we give them a gazebo, they'll think, God knows what they can get if they hire a lobbyist," Parker replied.

SENIORS: Center to open Monday

(From 1B)

I'll be using it a whole lot socially, meeting friends."

About 100 seniors are expected to use the center initially. The group has been meeting in Hollowell United Methodist Church.

The Rev. Hadley Edwards of Hollowell said the seniors' presence will be missed.

"I have a lot of good friends here," Edwards said. "I'm going to miss them at the church, but I'm glad to see them moving into something better."

Women urge Congress to revive civil rights bill

Hearst News Service

WASHINGTON — Two San Antonio women who filed an ethnic and sex discrimination suit against the Alamo City urged lawmakers here Thursday to revive a federal civil rights measure that failed in the last session of Congress.

Maria Icela Gomez and Marta San Miguel, in testimony before the House Judiciary subcommittee on civil and constitutional rights, said they had been victims of systematic discrimination during their employment by San Antonio city agencies.

San Miguel, who works for the city's public works department, said she had been consistently denied promotions and subjected to harassment because of her ethnicity and sex.

"Co-workers would remark that I ought to slow down because I was old," she told the panel. "They said to look in the mirror and do something with my hair...Vulgarity against the women who worked in our section took place around me."

Gomez, who has retired after 28 years of city employment, said that she realizes speaking out now will not help her.

"But I may be able to help my children or my grandchildren or somebody else." she said. "If I can help one other person who suffers from discrimination, then my mission is complete."

The San Antonio women came to Washington at the invitation of the National Council of La Raza, a Washington-based Hispanic civil rights group seeking to build support for stiffer protection for Hispanics in the civil rights bill now before Congress.

Last year, President Bush vetoed the Civil Rights Act, saying the legislation would reinstate a quota system. Bush's veto was narrowly sustained in the Senate, and Thursday's hearing was the first of many skirmishes in what promises to be a contentious battle in the current session over the bill.

Like its predecessor in the 100th Congress, the 1991 bill would categorically bar employee discrimination, demand that employers prove the necessity of any employment requirement with a proven discriminatory impact, and make it illegal for an employer to use race, ethnicity, gender or religion as a motivating factor in employment decisions.

San Miguel, in endorsing the measure, said it would help fight "all forms of discrimination" and strengthen civil rights for Hispanics as well as all other minorities.

Rep. Henry B. Gonzalez, a San Antonio Democrat, said the bill "reverses the damage" recent Supreme Court decisions have done to certain civil rights protections.

"Its enactment is necessary to preserve real equal employment opportunity for all Americans," he said. "The result of the court's decisions is that many legitimate claims have not been filed, some legitimate claims have been dismissed, and remedies in other cases have been limited."

At a news conference following the women's testimony, NCLR President Raul Yzaguirre said Hispanics face "massive" discrimination in employment in both the private and public sectors.

Pointing to studies by NCLR and the U.S. Commission on Civil Rights he said demonstrate hiring and workplace discrimination, Yzaguirre said "the current enforcement system fails to adequately serve Hispanics."

Gomez and San Miguel are two of seven plaintiffs from San Antonio in a class action suit filed by the National Association of Government Employees against San Antonio in August 1989.

County officials want to have more prisons

AUSTIN (AP) — Several county officials say the state should construct 37,000 new prison beds by 1995 to make certain that violent felons aren't kept in their county jails.

"We county officials want the state to build enough prisons to keep our county jails relatively free of convicted felons," said Bob Hampton, chairman of the Conference of Urban Counties, which represents the state's 20 largest.

Also urging approval of more prisons during a Capitol news conference Thursday was Denton County Commissioner Lee Walker, whose daughter was raped and murdered.

The attacker was convicted, served five years on death row, then was freed on a technicality. In a plea bargain, the man was resentenced to 30 years, but served only four years before being paroled, Ms. Walker said.

"Few citizens realize the truly appalling facts about the length of the average prison stay in Texas," she said. "The statistics are shocking indeed. In today's Texas, the average offender for violent crimes — murder, rape, assault, armed robbery and similar crimes — serves only four, I repeat, four years.

Medical examiner changes ruling in retired judge's death

■ Further investigation leads officials to classify retired judge's death as 'undetermined' rather than a suicide.

Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — The family of a retired judge says there was evidence of foul play associated with his death and that the official death ruling has been changed from suicide.

Retired District Judge Richard J. Woods died Christmas Eve 1989 at age 71. His wife, Maribel, discovered her husband's body in the driveway of their home.

His death, initially ruled a suicide, now is classified as "undetermined" after the family hired an out-of-state pathologist to study the case, officials said.

Richard H. Woods, the judge's son, said Wednesday an outside review by Baltimore medical examiner Dr. John Smialek ruled out suicide, raising the possibility the retired judge was a homicide victim.

"There was evidence of foul play," Woods told the San Antonio Express-News.

Bexar County Medical Examiner Dr. Vincent DiMaio said the official cause of death was changed after the pathologist who performed the autopsy compared notes with Smialek and enough questions were raised to warrant the change.

Categorizing a death as undetermined means evidence failed to show whether the death was an accident, suicide or a homicide, DiMaio said.

Police investigators said Woods had been badly burned and that the death appeared to have resulted from a freak accident.

Officers theorized the judge, who had a heart ailment and had been told by his doctor not to smoke, went outside in his bathrobe to smoke a cigarette. They theorized Woods fell on the cigarette and died when his robe caught fire.

But the autopsy concluded Woods "died of thermal burns when he doused himself with gasoline and set himself on fire."

The younger Woods said there was no investigation report indicating a gasoline container was found near the body. He also said no cigarette, match or lighter was discovered nearby.

EARNEST KIKER

Take care not to rush spring

In many cases the early bird does get the worm. But, when it comes to spring planting, farmers may want to use a little restraint and take a look at soil temperatures before cranking up their planters.

Kiker

One of the keys to getting spring crops off to a good start is to heed soil temperatures, which have been shown to have an important effect on how well seeds germinate. Planting in cool soils often leads to poor seed germination and poor crop stands. Plants that do come up often lack vigor for early growth. And this opens the door to early-season disease and insect attacks.

Farmers should begin planting only after the danger of a late frost is past and the soil has warmed to temperatures favorable to the intended crop.

Farmers also need to keep tuned to weather forecasts prior to planting. A sudden change in weather conditions following planting can be detrimental to the crop, particularly a cool, wet spell that can lower soil temperatures drastically.

Just when it is safe to plant what crop?

Average minimum temperatures (at the four-inch depth) for planting are as follows: corn, 50 degrees; sorghum, 55 degrees; cotton, 65 degrees; and soybeans, 70 degrees. "Minimum" rather than "average" temperatures should be used for rice and and peanuts, with rice being 60 and peanuts, 70 degrees.

Hardy vegetables such as onions, cabbage and potatoes can be planted once soil temperatures range between 45 and 50 degrees. However, warm-season vegetables such as tomatoes, melons, beans and peppers need soil that has warmed into the 60s.

With early-season planting, particularly when soil temperatures are still marginal, farmers need to pay particular attention to using high-quality seed, fungicides and other seed protectants, and adjusting seeding rates.

How do farmers keep abreast of changing soil temperatures?

Daily readings are taken at various locations throughout Texas, in cooperation with the Extension Service, the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station, the National Weather Service and individual cooperators. For example, the regional temperature reading for North Texas is based on temperatures at Lavon Dam, northeast of Dallas, while readings at Lufkin and Longview make up the East Texas average. Regional readings also are made for the High Plains, Trans-Pecos, Rolling Plains, Central Blacklands, Coastal Plains, South Texas and the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

As temperatures are collected, they are included in daily agricultural weather advisories issued for each of the regions by the National Weather Service's Southwest Agricultural Weather Service Center at Texas A&M University. The advisories are fed into the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) weatherwire teletype to be received by commercial radio and television stations. The advisories also are carried over the NOAA Weather Radio Network.

Specific temperature readings for about 40 locations also are distributed daily through regular weather-service-dissemination channels.

Keeping tabs on the weather and soil conditions can help farmers get off to a good start with spring planting. With the high cost of farm inputs, it's information that should be put to good use.

Earnest C. Kiker is Midland County Extension Agent for Agriculture.

U.S.' ag-export outlook dims

By Don Kendall

WASHINGTON (AP) — The outlook for U.S. agricultural exports has dimmed again, and the Agriculture Department says there is a whole laundry list of reasons.

A report Wednesday said the total export value is expected to drop 8 percent this fiscal year to $37 billion from a nine-year high of $40.1 billion in the fiscal year that ended last Sept. 30.

In late November, the department predicted a 4 percent slump in 1990-91 to $38.5 billion.

Officials said reduced prospects since November for corn and other so-called coarse grains accounted for much of the declining outlook and that competition is increasing for key overseas markets.

The projections also showed lower export values for wheat, soybeans and soybean meal, but a higher value for cotton.

On a volume basis, this year's exports were estimated at 131 million metric tons, down from 148.7 million tons in 1989-90 and 8.5 million tons less than forecast last fall.

"Reduced grain exports account for much of the expected drop following record world wheat production, record grain production in China, and near record output in the Soviet Union," the report said.

Agricultural imports were estimated at last year's record value of $22.5 billion. In November, imports were forecast at $22 billion.

Meanwhile, a related report by USDA's Economic Research Service said "macro economic" factors — the big picture — have much to do with exports regardless of the good intentions of U.S. policymakers and the wishes of farmers.

Exports tend to do best when foreign economic growth is strong, the U.S. dollar weak and everything else nice and tidy. Conversely, the report said, when there is a global economic slump and debts are heavy, trade tends to slip.

There was a world economic slump in the early 1980s, along with high oil prices, heavy debt burdens in the developing countries and a rise in the value of the U.S. dollar, making it more expensive for a foreign country to buy American products.

Along with "uncompetitive domestic farm policies," these factors contributed to a 40 percent drop in U.S. agricultural exports by 1985-86, the report said.

"Like the 1980s, the 1990s started off with higher oil prices and a global economic slowdown," it said. "However, many forecasts predict solid growth by 1992, which should improve the export environment."

But that optimism is based on assumptions of modest increases in oil prices, a short war in the Persian Gulf and less inflation and debt in the developing countries.

WASHINGTON (AP) — A bumper potato crop has pushed prices down sharply from a year ago, an Agriculture Department report says.

Potato output rose 6 percent last year to 393.9 million hundredweight, the department's Economic Research Service said. But lower prices are making the 1990 crop worth less.

As of Jan. 1, fresh stocks of fall-crop potatoes were up 7 percent from a year earlier. Idaho inventories were up 14 percent, but those in Washington state were down 3 percent. North Dakota inventories were up 16 percent but were still below their long-term trend.

The report said 1990-91 potato prices may average $6.15 per hundredweight, down 16 percent from the year-earlier record.

Monthly average prices paid to growers were $5.54 per hundredweight in December and $5.72 in January, compared with $7.02 and $7.14 a year earlier.

"Grower receipts for 1990 potatoes will fall short of 1989 receipts, which were the highest since 1984," the report said. "The value of 1990 production is estimated to be $2.4 billion, down 11 percent from 1989."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Agriculture Department is seeking public comment on a proposal to set up a new program for soybean promotion and research.

The program was authorized in the 1990 farm law.

Under the plan proposed by the American Soybean Association, a 60-member board would be created to administer the program, which would be similar to existing research and promotion programs for other farm commodities.

A mandatory assessment of one-half of 1 percent of the market value of soybeans sold in the United States would finance the program.

Daniel D. Haley, administrator of the department's Agricultural Marketing Service, said a public meeting on the details of the proposal will be held by USDA on March 6.

Comments can be submitted in duplicate by April 11 to: Ralph L. Tapp, Chief, Marketing Programs Branch, Livestock and Seed Division, AMS, USDA, Room 2624-S, P.O. Box 96456, Washington, D.C. 20090-6456.

The agency said copies of the proposal and additional information can be obtained from the same address, or by telephoning 202-447-1115.

Lenders: Money is available for credit-worthy farmers

WASHINGTON (AP) — Lenders told Congress Wednesday they have the money to make loans to credit-worthy farmers, but one banker warned there may not be many left if the recession and reduced government subsidies continue.

Jack W. Dickey, president of The First National Bank of Thomas, Okla., told the House subcommittee on conservation, credit and rural development that farm income during the next two years could be reduced by $6 billion to $7 billion from 1990 levels

"This loss of farm income is what is causing the inability of many farmers and ranchers to obtain credit," said Dickey, who is also chairman of the agriculture-rural American committee of the Independent Bankers Association of America.

"It is not a lack of funds to lend by commercial lending institutions. The funds are there for profitable farm operators who can generate sufficient cash flow to manage the loan and guarantee repayment."

Those funds, however, will not be there for farmers who cannot generate a positive cash flow, Dickey said.

"And with a potential drop in farm income of some $6 (to) $7 billion over the next two years, I am afraid that more and more farmers will fall into the latter category."

Dickey said the problems facing agriculture include all-time high world wheat inventories, wheat and corn prices at historical lows, troubles in the dairy industry, slipping land values, rising production costs, and the California drought.

Michael Grove, president of the First National Bank of White Sulphur Spring, Mont., also said there is no credit gap for credit-worthy borrowers in rural America.

"With farm debt shrinking by one-third since 1983, banks in rural America have more than ample funds, leaving no shortage of credit available to credit-worthy borrowers," said Grove, chairman of the executive committee of the agricultural bankers division of the American Bankers Association.

But for farmers who must turn to the lender of last resort, the Farmers Home Administration, money for direct operating loans has been cut almost in half since last year — from $932 million in 1990 to $493 million this year. The agency is moving instead toward guaranteeing commercial loans, and has $2.6 billion available this year, up from $2.3 billion in 1990.

But the committee chairman, Rep. Glenn English, D-Okla., questioned the policy, saying: "It seems a strange thing to do, when we're hearing a number of reports that banks don't want to make guarantees beyond guaranteeing those loans they already have in their portfolio and are attempting to safeguard."

English also questioned the FmHA's suggestion that all direct farm ownership loans be targeted to "socially disadvantaged applicants."

The FmHA has $57 million this year for ownership loans, which are used for major farm expenses, down from $80 million in 1990.

English said the proposal "indicates there's just not much direct lending taking place in the Farmers Home Administration. ... Evidently that's pretty much what the program has come down to, that's all that's left of it, and I'm not sure how long that's going to be left, if the administration has its way."

English said the program was intended to help farmers who could not find credit elsewhere.

FmHA Administrator La Verne Ausman said the proposal was part of a package of changes intended to meet its goal of limiting the federal government's role in financing long-term farm debt.

Ausman also said the agency would be able to meet the credit needs of its borrowers in time for the spring planting season.

He said FmHA was prepared to make "continuation" loans to delinquent borrowers to enable them to put in a crop even if their overall FmHA loan portfolio is in trouble.

Foreclosure bill passes House

AUSTIN (AP) — A bill that could help borrowers whose properties are foreclosed was approved with a 113-4 vote by the Texas House.

Under the measure by Rep. Jim Tallas, R-Sugar Land, a lender still could sue a borrower to recover more funds than the property brought at a foreclosure sale.

However, the borrower could ask a judge or jury to determine the property's fair market value at the date of sale. The deficiency on the borrower's debt would be difference between the fair market value and the amount owed on the mortgage loan.

Under current law, the deficiency may be the difference between the foreclosure sale price and the amount owed.

The bill approved Wednesday by the House, and sent to the Senate, also would require a lender to bring a lawsuit within two years of the foreclosure sale. Current law has a four-year time limit.

The measure would not apply to individuals who sell their own property.

Plan to give away 2,000 dyed chicks causes stir

GULFPORT, Miss. (AP) — A plan to give away 2,000 dyed chicks as a promotional gimmick has some animal rights groups outraged.

Southern Promotions plans to hand out the blue, green, orange, violet and pink chicks to customers at an arts and crafts show this weekend.

But the Harrison County Humane Society, which received about a dozen complaints from people who learned of the idea in advertisements, is less than pleased with the plan.

"You're putting a baby chick in the hands of children," said Anna M. Day of the Humane Society. "What usually happens to these animals is that they die from noncare from the children because the parents don't usually supervise the care, or they die from over-attention."

But Kathy Whitehead, one of the owners of Southern Promotions, said the chicks will be given away "unless I am stopped by a court order."

There were no indications that opponents of the idea would seek a court order, but one group, the Coast Coalition for Animals & The Environment, said it would picket the show.

Teachers correcting students' etiquette faux pas

WICHITA FALLS (AP) — What's the proper way to decline an invitation for a date? Which fork do you use to eat a salad? How do you ask someone to dance?

Those are not questions frequently pondered by the average 13-or 14-year-old, but two teachers at Barwise Junior High School are out to change that. During physical education classes at the school, seventh- and eighth-graders are getting periodic doses of etiquette from "Mr. and Ms. Manners" — otherwise known as teachers Tommy Tate and Wendy Thompson.

The pupils may giggle or shrug off the educators' attempts to create well-mannered young adults, but Tate said he knows that deep down, the teen-agers want to be socially acceptable.

Tate says he saw the need for a few social pointers while a teaching at Burgess Elementary and Kirby Junior High School about four years ago. "We had some kids who were great athletes and we had the spring sports banquet. We got there — and I loved these kids — but I was never so embarrassed in all my life for these guys," he said.

But it was a homecoming dance last fall that convinced Tate and Thompson to start correcting the most egregious faux pas in between lessons on full-court presses and bunting.

"We had homecoming and a lot of the guys stood in one group and the girls stood in another. They didn't know what to do," Thompson said.

Lessons mostly focus on those things of vital interest to teenagers with burgeoning hormones — how to ask for (and accept or decline) a date, how to act at a dance, how to talk to parents.

But after watching some students wolf down food in the cafeteria, the teachers also have included lessons on table manners.

"We tell them not to chew with their mouth open, where to put their napkin, that gentlemen should stand up if a woman leaves the table, don't season food until after you taste it," Thompson said.

DEAR ABBY

Perseverance not always straight path to success

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: Many years ago, you printed a very comical column about an editor who tried to correct a typographical error, and every time he tried to correct it, he compounded the error and ended up in far worse trouble than he started with. It was a classified ad to sell a sewing machine. I have lost the clipping. Will you please try to find it and run it again? — BETTIE EVANS IN GEORGIA

Van Buren

DEAR BETTIE: I found it. And here it is:

DEAR ABBY: My mother recently passed away after a brief illness. In the obituary published in our local newspaper, her age was given as 89.

Abby, my mother was only 80, so it was apparently a typographical error. Now this may not seem very important to some people, but Mother was a very vain and prideful woman who would never tell her age.

Because of this typographical error in her obituary, everyone will think she was nine years older than she actually was. Should we ask the newspaper editor to publish a correction? I say we should. The rest of the family says to skip it. — OUTVOTED IN OHIO

DEAR OUTVOTED: Sometimes it's better to leave bad enough alone. In support of my advice, I offer the following from the California Newspaper Association. It is an example of a typographical error in the classified section of a small-town newspaper, and the subsequent disastrous attempts to correct it:

(Monday) "FOR SALE — R.D. Jones has one sewing machine for sale. Phone 948-0707 after 7 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him cheap."

(Tuesday) "NOTICE — We regret having erred in R.D. Jones' ad yesterday. It should have read: One sewing machine for sale. Cheap. Phone 948-0707 and ask for Mrs. Kelly who lives with him after 7 p.m."

(Wednesday) "NOTICE — R.D. Jones has informed us that he has received several annoying telephone calls because of the error we made in his classified ad yesterday. His ad stands correct as follows: FOR SALE — R.D. Jones has one sewing machine for sale. Cheap. Phone 948-0707 p.m. and ask for Mrs. Kelly who loves with him."

(Thursday) "NOTICE — I, R.D. Jones, have NO sewing machine for sale. I SMASHED IT. Don't call 948-0707, as the telephone has been disconnected. I have NOT been carrying on with Mrs. Kelly. Until yesterday she was my housekeeper, but she quit."

DEAR ABBY: Just between you and me, what do you think of the new 4-cent postage stamp? — HOWARD THE PHILATELIST

DEAR HOWARD: It looks like the preamble to the Constitution of the United States.

Abigail Van Buren's column is distributed by Universal Press Syndicate.

FAMILY MATTERS

Perfection is impossible goal

By Jim May, Ph.D.

DEAR FAMILY: I am still upset over my parent-teacher conference for my 9-year-old daughter. She is a very smart child but she never seems to do as well as she should in school. I have tried to help her but nothing seems to work. I see that one of the reasons that she has problems at school is that she is so unorganized. Her room at home is always a mess. We fight constantly over the way she leaves her room. I have a very difficult time with her "piggy" lifestyle.

May

I asked her teacher for a conference because Sue (not her real name) seemed upset when she came home from school. The teacher told me that Sue was having several problems. The teacher thought that she was trying too hard to get everything perfect. Her teacher also said that when she said anything to Sue about something that she had done wrong, she looked like she was going to break into tears. She also mentioned that Sue was having trouble getting along with one other girl in the class. She said that this girl was making fun of Sue and while she had tried to stop her, it still did happen.

The teacher asked me if there were any problems at home. I was surprised and told her that everything was fine at home. I did tell her that it was hard for me to help Sue too. She told me that she thought that Sue was under too much pressure! I couldn't believe it. When I told my husband, he said he thought I was too hard on her. When I challenged him on that, he agreed that she did need extra guidance.

My question is, what can I do to help my daughter? I want her to do well, but I don't think that expecting her to make good grades and keep her room clean is too much to ask of a 9-year-old. What should I do? CONFUSED

DEAR CONFUSED: Good grades are a reasonable expectation, but first we must define "good." I prefer to establish a specific, yet attainable, minimum grade level with the child — one that makes him or her work. Assuming the child has no learning disabilities, this grade level might be something like a "B" overall average with no more than one "C." If the child makes the grade, she gets all the privileges associated with that success.

As for the clean room, first show her what constitutes a "clean room." Clean it together and agree on the definition of clean. Then establish a specific deadline day and time (for example, 6 p.m. Thursday) that the room must be clean for the child to have all privileges of the weekend. Try to remember that she is 9 years old and make allowances.

A final thought for you: I encourage you to ask yourself if there is anything going on that might be inadvertently driving your daughter toward perfectionism. Is her desire to please so strong that she is afraid to make a mistake?

Have you ever experienced the pain of doing what you thought was wonderful and having someone point out the flaws? It can be devastating. While I am not suggesting that anyone is doing this to your daughter, it could be one explanation worth considering. A child who believes she must do everything perfectly and knows that she cannot, doesn't have much fun.

DEAR CONFIDENTIAL: The only way to know if your wife is faking her orgasm is to wire her with physiological measurement instruments like the Masters and Johnson experiments. They found not all orgasms were the same, and the idea of the female orgasm always being intense and explosive is mostly a literary device. Many of the female orgasms recorded were "mild, fluttery or warm." There is an identifiable physiological process for both male and female orgasm, but it is far to complex to describe here.

Maybe your wife did alter her responses to match your expectations. The important issue might be, why can't the two of you discuss the problem? Sex is just another form of communication, so maybe you two should talk about not talking. You can't "give" your wife an orgasm. However, you two can discuss and develop a "love making" plan that includes those sexual activities/events that help her reach orgasm. If you two are unable to discuss this or if she is unable to show you what she likes, then it may be beneficial for both of you to discuss this matter with a sex or marriage therapist.

Jim May is the director of the Family Wellness Center.

Furniture designer leaves daughter legacy in wood

By Patricia Leigh Brown
N.Y. Times News Service

George Nakashima spent a lifetime "listening to the cries of wood."

Nakashima, a celebrated woodworker, died in June at the age of 85. His mantle has now been inherited by his daughter, Mira Nakashima-Yarnall.

Since her father's death, Ms. Nakashima-Yarnall has been overseeing design work for the small family-owned business her father started in Bucks County, Pa., in 1944.

Ms. Nakashima-Yarnall, 49, worked with her father for 20 years. Along with other members of the family, including her brother Kevin, 36, and her daughter, Maria, 24, she plans to continue the Nakashima furniture-making tradition.

"My goal is to continue Dad's designs, to make sure they're executed in the way they always were," she said.

"My hope is that we can continue to make beautiful furniture and retain the craftsmen who have worked here for so long."

Initial plans call for fulfilling the two-year backlog of custom-designed furniture ordered before Nakashima's death, including the 111 pieces destroyed in a fire at the home of Dr. Arthur and Evelyn Krosnick of Princeton Township, N.J., in 1989.

But in the future, Ms. Nakashima-Yarnall hopes to wed her own interpretations to her father's legacy. "Every piece of furniture is a new adventure," she said. "I would like to continue the tradition and eventually add themes and variations."

When he died, Nakashima had been pursuing his dream of installing an "Altar for Peace" in the Soviet Union. In 1986 Mr. Nakashima completed the free-form English walnut altar, complete with his trademark butterfly joints, that is at the foot of the nave in the Cathedral of St. John the Divine in New York City.

It was Nakashima's hope that similar altars would be on view on each continent as a symbol for peace.

Ms. Nakashima-Yarnall recently returned from the Soviet Union, where talks are under way with the Soviet Cultural Fund, a self-governing public agency, to bring a peace altar, designed by her father before his death, to Moscow or Leningrad.

Techniques may improve frozen fish

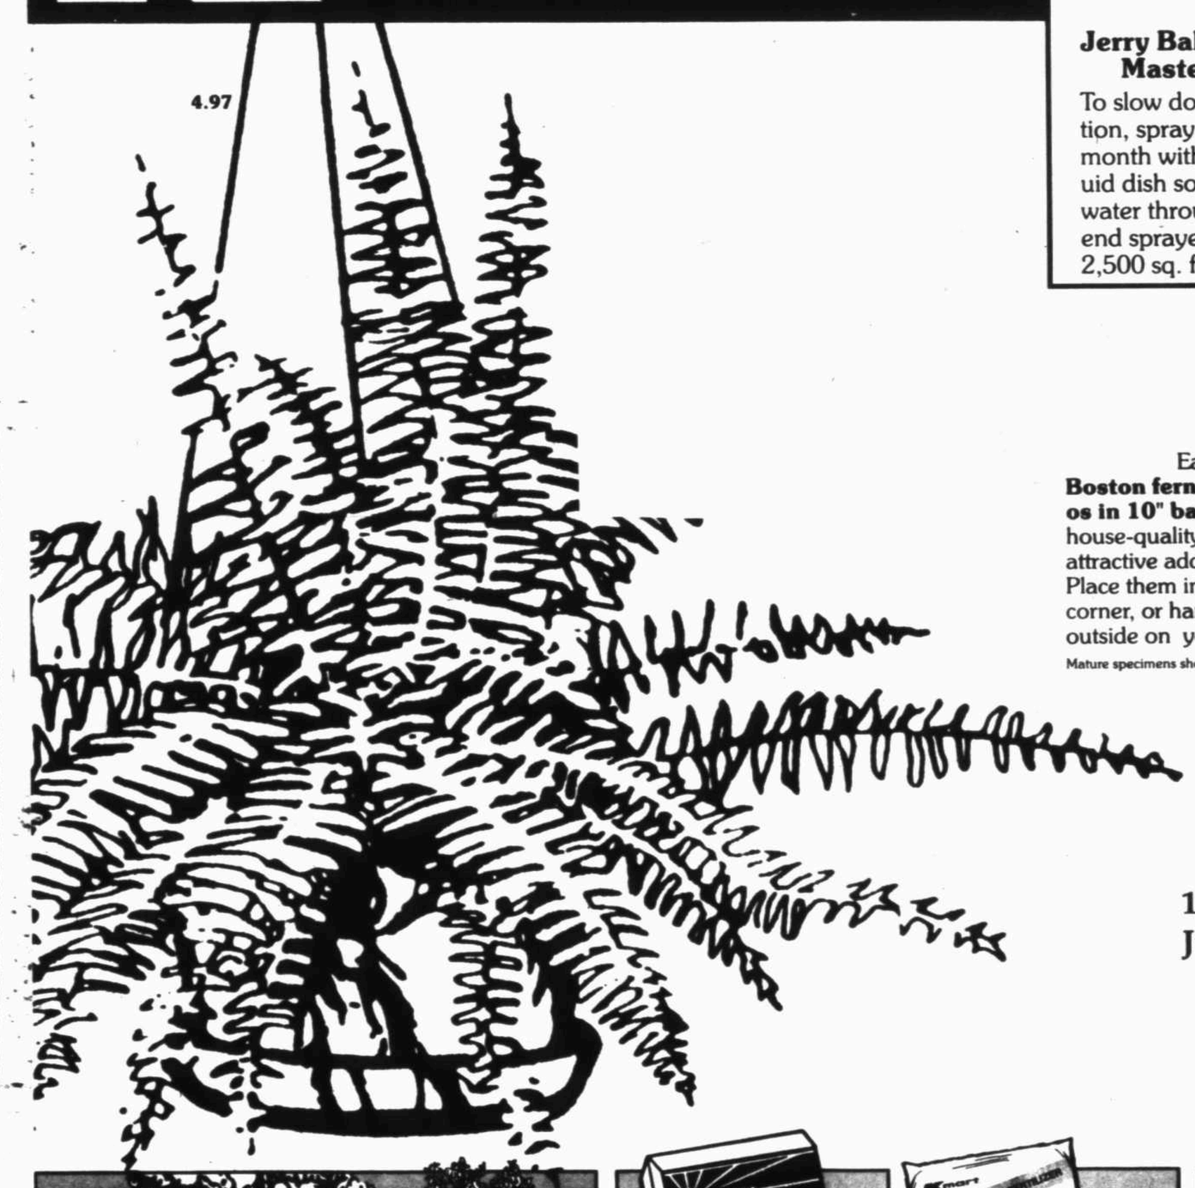

NEW YORK (AP) — In the future, frozen seafood may replace the fresh variety entirely. A study comissioned by the Norwegian Salmon Marketing Council predicts that enhancements in freezing technology soon may eliminate the need for fresh seafood, even in fine retaurants.

The report cites Norwegian salmon fish farmers who are experimenting with quick-freezing Atlantic salmon to improve retention of the salmon's original taste and texture.

Adding life to extended years

By Sharon Achatz
Copley News Service

Over the past several years, health-care advances have added years to our lives — now it's time to add life to those years.

For some, the image of extended life paints the picture of extended old age — a graying granny hunched over in her rocking chair.

The reality, however, is that longer life spans give mature adults greater opportunities for activity, whether to go back to school, start a new career, travel, strengthen family ties, start a new family, do volunteer work or build a dream home.

Older folks have more options than ever — thanks to a society that's finally recognizing the power of the Age Wave, according to Ken Dychtwald, noted psychologist, gerontologist and author.

People over 65 are the fastest-growing segment of the U.S. population, he said.

"For the first time in America, aging people are outgrowing young people," Dychtwald said. "We've spent the last 10,000 years trying to make old people, and we've done a pretty good job."

Now that the Age Wave has begun, mature adults have more political and economic clout. Products and services are being adapted to fit the needs of an aging population — and there no longer are strong stereotypes of what older people should or should not do.

THE STAGE IS set for older folks to take on dynamic and fulfilling roles, according to the American Association of Retired Persons, whether they chose to start post-retirement careers, remarry or get college degrees.

Basically, older people have more time and opportunities to explore many different forms of personal growth — and a lifetime of experience with which to take a closer look at life's priorities and to pursue new interests and life-enhancing activities appropriate to their priorities, according to the AARP.

Whatever their other senior-year goals, the golden years are an optimal time to focus on family.

Some folks will look to honor their immediate family situation through renewing wedding vows, taking special trips with their spouse or building a dream home in a retirement community. Others may find the courage to end a troubled marriage or to remarry.

Almost all older adults strive to become closer to their children and grandchildren.

When your offspring have offspring, relationships often change and become deeper. Whether you live across the street or across the country, you can be a VIP to that family.

Some folks seem born to be grandparents, able to balance the baby, his toys, his bottle and his parents' egos with a cheerful smile. Most need help.

Entertainment personality Art Linkletter's video "How to Be a Great Grandparent" gives simple instructions on how to develop rewarding grandparent-grandchildren relationships. There's a library of books on the subject, including "Spirit" by Arthur Kornhaber (St. Martin's Press) and "The Grandparent Book" by Linda B. White (Gateway Books).

While multigenerational relationships can be strained because of differences in opinion, there's plenty of room for pleasure rather than persecution — the key is to offer support without unsolicited advice.

REMEMBER THE middle-age crunch of just making ends meet between work, family, social and economic obligations and don't be too critical of your kids. Let them know you want to be a part of their lives and tell them how you'd like to fit in.

If your families live nearby, you could volunteer to be the day-care provider for your grandkids while Mom and Dad are at work. A more realistic alternative, however, would be to visit the day-care center from time to time. Many grandchildren and parents find it soothing to have that support, according to Kornhaber.

Offer to make dinner for your kids in their home once a month or once a week — they get dinner without hassle, and you get their companionship. Or offer to babysit for a parents' night out — it will give you a special time to enjoy the grandkids, and your kids will love you for understanding their need to get away.

For long-distance parenting and grandparenting, the classic rule of teaching by example still rings true.

Don't just nag for your children to send photos and videotapes of them and your grandkids. Take photos or make videotapes of yourself for your grandchildren and children to see, perhaps showing them your favorite new possession, or how the family dog has grown, or perhaps some of the places you'll go on their next visit.

OR CONVERT 8MM movies of your kids onto videotape to share copies with them — your grandkids will delight in seeing their parents as children, and your kids will feel reborn. You're almost guaranteed to get photos and videotapes in return.

Never miss an opportunity to send greetings, and not just for the big holidays and birthdays — even the smallest holiday is an opportunity for fun with Grandma or Grandpa. Send cherry candies in honor of George Washington on Presidents Day, or several bright balloons to celebrate the first day of spring, for example.

CNS Photo

Fun activities, including sailing and other sports, keep families in touch.

Send supplies that encourage your grandkids to communicate with you. Self-addressed, stamped envelopes are a great way to start, but don't forget the fun stuff — lots of construction paper, crayons, paste for the younger ones to make works of art for you and stationary with pizzazz and jazzy pens for older kids.

Telephone regularly and encourage them to call you by purchasing your own 800 toll-free phone number from a long-distance phone company.

Schedule reunions. What kid or grandkid would want to miss the celebration of Gramps' 80th birthday or Nana and Papa's 60th wedding anniversary? If you're not up to handling all the preparation for a meeting of the masses, hire a party planner to coordinate hotel reservations, catering and rental furniture.

IF YOU CAN'T wait for a milestone birthday or anniversary, simply create a date that's your family's own annual reunion holiday. To divvy up the preparation work load, have a rotational schedule of who plays host each year — or rent out rooms at an island resort or mountain cabins and let restaurants take over mealtimes.

Ask each family to prepare a game, song or recitation to break the ice if you haven't seen each other for a while, and be sure to plan activities that appeal to all age groups.

If it's a multiday reunion, be sure to schedule in time for individual family units to be alone to regroup if necessary. Extended family is fun, but it can become a burden in close quarters for an extended time — even for the friendliest families and most doting grandparents.

Meals-on-Wheels to receive donation from 7-11 stores

Staff Report

Meals-on-Wheels, a program of the Community and Senior Services of Midland (CSS) will receive $1,290 today via a benefit project initiated by Southland Corporation's 7-11 Convenience Stores. The 54 7-11 locations in the Midland and Odessa area have been collecting donations from customers' spare change in jars on their check-out counters. These donations have in turn been donated to the Meals-on-Wheels program.

Meals-on-Wheels provides nutritious meals for homebound persons, primarily elderly, who are incapable of buying or preparing their own meals. It is one of the nutrition programs offered by CSS, a social, nonprofit organization. Currently, CSS's nutrition programs are providing an average of 350 meals per day or a projected 108,00 meals for 1991.

The need for nutritious meals for the elderly is growing. In the Permian Basin, seniors make up about 16 percent of the population, compared to the national average of 10 percent. As the senior population continues to grow in America, the need for Meals-on-Wheels and other nutrition programs also will increase.

The Southland Corporation and 7-11 stores recognized this growing need and have been generous in its support of this worthwhile project, according to Ann Dunbar, marketing director for CSS.

CSS nutrition programs are funded by the Texas Department on Aging, The Texas Department of Human Services, Community Development Block Grant Funds, Midland County, the United Way, foundations, businesses such as 7-11, churches and individuals. It is located at 3301 Sinclair in Midland or 1015 N. Dixie in Odessa.

Early retirees need medical coverage

Associated Press

Folks who are thinking about early retirement have to consider what they'll do about health insurance until Medicare coverage kicks in at age 65. Many companies, particularly those with more than 500 employees, extend health benefits to retirees. Otherwise, you're on your own.

That doesn't mean you'll have to get a new policy immediately. Federal law requires your employer to allow you to stay in your current group plan for 18 months after you leave the company. You can be charged the full cost of the coverage, plus up to 2 percent extra to cover administrative expenses. (The law does not apply to firms with fewer than 20 employees, churches or the governments of the District of Columbia or U.S. territories.)

After the 18-month period, you will probably be able to convert to an individual policy with the same insurance company. Even if you don't get the extra 18 months of group coverage, your employer's plan may have a conversion option. The advantage is you can get coverage regardless of health.

Chaps salvage .500 mark

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

It seemed only fitting that when the Odessa College Wranglers dressed and left Chaparral Center Thursdaynight they found it pouring down rain.

Midland College ended a 10 game drought against OC, and salvaged a break-even conference season with a 72-68 win over the Wranglers.

The Region V tournament-bound Wranglers turned the ball over 23 times and failed on a last ditch, would-be tying shot with seven seconds left.

"Midland dove on the floor more than us and they wanted to win the basketball game more," Odessa head coach Dennis Helms said.

In other Western Junior College Athletic Conference season-ending action, New Mexico Junior College wrapped up sole possession of fourth place with a 94-85 win over Frank Phillips; Howard College, the nation's No. 1 team, defeated New Mexico Military Institute 116-99, and Clarendon defeated Western Texas, 98-95. South Plains College was idle.

With 28 seconds left, OC, down by three, inbounded the ball after a timeout and had what seemed to be a large amount of opportunities with that much time remaining. The Wranglers, though, were unable to get the ball through the MC defense and were forced to call another timeout with 17 seconds left.

After their final break, the Wran-

Franklin aware of rumors about his future

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant Sports Editor

Midland College head basketball coach Reggie Franklin confirmed that he is well aware of rumors that his future as coach of the team is in doubt.

Franklin, in his fourth year as head coach, said there's not much he can do since the decision on whether to renew his contract is not his to make.

"I can't answer that," Franklin said when asked about his thoughts on his future with the school. "I know there's rumors, and I'm just going to look around.

"I don't know how Dr. Parrish, or Coach Poss feel," Franklin said. Dr. Jess Parrish is the school's president, while Delnor Poss serves as athletic director.

The Midland College Board of Trustees annually renews faculty and staff contracts in its March meeting, set for March 19 this year.

Dunbar visits Region I tourney (again)

By Terry Williamson
Sports Editor

If experience has anything to do with winning, then Fort Worth Dunbar's Wildcats will roar into Chaparral Center tonight as the heavy favorite to capture the Class 5A Region I basketball championship.

Robert Hughes' Wildcats, owners of a 34-2 season record, are an annual given in the Region I tournament. They have been region bound 10 times in the last 11 years and are seeking an eighth berth in the finals.

That's a lot of playoff experience background to work with and no other team in this two-day meet can claim such lofty standing.

El Paso Coronado, Dunbar's 8 p.m. opponent today, is 26-6, but this is the first trip to the Region I tournament since the Chaparral Center began hosting the event in 1981. In fact, this is the first time the T-Birds have been in the playoffs in the eight years of head coach Kenny John.

"I don't really know what to expect against Dunbar," John said. "We're just glad to be here and not back home. At the beginning of the year, I didn't think we had the talent level to be in this position, but it didn't take long to see that this team was something special. They all get along so well together and have worked hard to get where we are now."

Lubbock Monterey, 27-8, will face 29-6 Arlington Sam Houston in the 6 p.m. game. Monterey last made a trip to the Region I meet in 1985, long before this team was in uniform. Sam Houston, on the other hand, has never been to the region tournament since Midland College has been the host.

Both Monterey and Coronado won area playoff games Tuesday at the Chap and do have the advantage of playing on the parquet. Still, Plainsmen coach Vic Self isn't sure that is any big advantage.

"If there is an advantage for us, it is the travel," said Self. "We don't have to travel as far as the teams from the Fort Worth area, but as far as us having played at Chaparral Center, I don't think that, in itself, gives us any kind of advantage."

The spark plug for Dunbar is 5-5 guard Otis Evans, who just happens to own the most dramatic shot in Region I history. That came last year in the region final against Plainview when Evans canned a three-point shot at the buzzer to give the Wildcats the championship.

Coronado, a team that doesn't like to run and gun like the Wildcats, is a patient squad that rarely fouls. The T-Birds got 21 points from senior Andrew Miller and 19 from sophomore Matthew Baskind in its area victory over Plainview Tuesday at the Chap in a game where Plainview drew 26 fouls to Coronado's seven.

Monterey, a victor over El Paso Hanks Tuesday in area action, has the potential of running up high numbers. The Plainsmen are a good three-point shooting team and got four consecutive treys from DeMond Thomas in the second quarter to spark its win over Hanks. Thomas scored 22 points in the game while Mike Cunningham had 15 and Doug Naegele had 12.

Chris Le Grand, a 6-3 senior, is the big gun for Sam Houston coach Don Louis. Le Grand is the son of Snake Le Grand, who is the head basketball coach at Irving.

The Texans survived a 57-55 bi-district test against Fort Worth Southwest before beating Wichita Falls Rider in area action. In addition to the win over Hanks, Monterey eliminated 4-5A champion San Angelo in bi-district play.

Dunbar comes to the tournament with victories over Cleburne and Denton while Coronado beat El Paso Bel Air in addition to Plainview.

Tonight's two winners play at 11 a.m. Saturday for the Region I title and a berth to the Final Four state tournament in Austin.

Houston, MHS ready to roll

By Bill Grimes
Staff Writer

Cold or no cold, Midland High junior Matthew Houston will be looking for at least one Region I swim record in this weekend's regional competition at Lubbock.

Houston, who swam a meet-record 51.46 in the 100-yard butterfly at last year's Region I meet, has been fighting a cold. Nevertheless, he trained through a 51.86 at the District 4-5A meet two weeks ago and may be ready to challenge the 50-second barrier in his specialty.

MHS coach Larry Ridge hopes Houston can pace the Aquadawgs to their second straight regional championship. Meanwhile, both the MHS and Midland Lee girls are expected to be competitive in the girls division.

Houston, who is also favored in the 100 backstroke, should be an easy winner in his fly race, Ridge said.

"I don't think he's going to be pushed," Ridge said. "Lance Yarbrough (of Amarillo High) has the best chance of pushing him, and we're still talking three seconds behind.

"I look for Matthew to rewrite the district record book," Ridge

Lee spills Del Rio in tourney opener

■ The Rebels open the Tournament of Champions with a 5-2 win over the Rams, while rain halts the nightcap after three innings.

By Joe Wyatt
Staff Writer

If Mother Nature was still smiling when Midland Lee and El Paso Del Rio dug in to their respective trenches for the opening game of the 16th Tournament of Champions baseball extravaganza Thursday night at Angels Stadium, she was far from pleasant during the nightcap.

Lee dispatched Del Rio 5-2 behind the steady arm of sophomore pitcher Julian Urquidez as the double-elimination tourney got underway. But Midland High's meeting with El Paso Riverside was halted after three innings when light rain turned steady.

Riverside will take a 2-1 lead into the top of the fourth inning when the game is resumed today — weather permitting — at 10 a.m., at Johnson Field on the Lee High School campus.

The Rebels, meanwhile, earned a 10 a.m. contest today versus Fort Worth Southwest at Angels Stadium. Southwest, the tournament's defending champion, had a first-round bye, as did Lubbock Monterey. Monterey is scheduled to meet the winner of the MHS-Riverside game, at 12:30 p.m. at Angels Stadium.

Other games today will feature Del Rio against the loser of the first Monterey game, at 5:30 p.m.; The MHS-Riverside loser versus the Lee-Southwest loser at 3 p.m.; and an 8 p.m. battle between the Lee-Southwest winner and the winner of the first Monterey encounter. All games other than the resumption of the rain-delayed game are slated for Angels Stadium.

Urquidez made the most of his first start for the Rebels, scattering six hits and allowing just two unearned runs in seven complete innings to lead Lee past the Rams.

Lee, which benefited from four Del Rio errors, scored two unearned runs of its own in the first inning and never trailed.

The Rebels are 2-1 in the early going of the season, while Del Rio suffered its first loss and sits at 5-1.

"I knew we were going to hit the ball," said Lee head coach Jesse Benavidez. "They (Rams) hit the ball too, but a lot of those balls came right at us."

Lee notched its first of two earned runs in the game when Keith Bell led off the third inning with a triple and scored on Urquidez' ground ball to second, giving the Rebels a 3-0 advantage.

Urquidez, who fanned four Rams and walked just one, had two RBI in the opener.

"I was hoping he would go all the way and he did," Benavidez touted his young hurler. "He gets so pumped up sometimes that you have to settle him down. But he got out of some jams tonight, and you've got to be proud of how well he did out there."

Urquidez escaped his first jam in the first inning when Lee catcher Sean Salois gunned down Mario Garcia at third base to snuff out a double-steal try with none out, and he closed out the threat by striking out Del Rio clean-up hitter Shade Ellis with no damage done.

The Rebels extended their lead to 4-0 when David Sullivan — who reached base on a dropped third strike — scored from third on an errant pickoff attempt by Ram pitcher Ruben Flores in the fourth. But Del Rio halved the lead on a two-run throwing error by third baseman Bell in the top of the fifth.

Lee answered that challenge in the bottom of the fifth as Brad Sanders drew the only walk off Flores and pinch runner Mike Lambert used the pass to score ahead of Shane Greeley's double to left.

"We showed some great hitting in this game," said Greeley, who rang up three hits in as many tries while knocking in a pair. "He (Flores) had a good curve, but

Cheaney helps Hoosiers handle Spartans

Associated Press

EAST LANSING, Mich. — Indiana's Calbert Cheaney engineered fast starts at the beginning of both halves Thursday night and the second one proved fatal for Michigan State.

Cheaney scored 18 points in leading No. 5 Indiana to a 62-56 Big Ten victory over Michigan State.

"Once I get the ball, I just shoot it," Cheaney said. "I have to keep moving and using the screens, so I get open and I did a better job in the second half."

Cheaney scored five points as Indiana opened the game with a 7-0 start. Then he started the second half with six points in an 8-0 Indiana start as the Hoosiers broke a 33-all halftime tie and led the rest of the way.

"The key was the good start in the second half," Indiana coach Bob Knight said. "Cheaney didn't have real good movement in the first half. He did in the second half."

The victory gave the Hoosiers (24-4, 12-3 Big Ten) a sweep of the season series with the Spartans.

"We said the start of the second half would be the most important part of the game," Michigan State coach Jud Heathcote said. "But Indiana just came out and took the game right away from us."

Michigan State (17-9, 10-6) shot only 38 percent and Matt Steigenga, who scored 17 points in the first half, was held scoreless before fouling out with 4:23 remaining in the second half.

"We thought Matt Steigenga might have a career game," Heathcote said. "But he got into foul trouble. Some were mystery calls, but that's the way it goes."

Steve Smith, playing his final home game, scored 13 of his 19 points in the second half for Michigan State. Smith is the Spartans' all-time leading scorer with 2,169 points.

"We didn't make any changes on Steigenga," Knight said. "He got into foul trouble. We did a better job around the basket in the second half, and that helped, too."

The victory gave Knight a 25-15 record against Michigan State. The Hoosiers crushed Michigan State 97-63 on Jan. 26 at Bloomington.

"Michigan State is a pretty good basketball team," Knight said "You're aren't going to beat them like that twice in a row."

The Spartans never led in the first half and twice trailed by 1(points.

A basket by Pat Graham gave the Hoosiers a 29-19 lead with 5:48 left in the first half. But Smith and Steigenga each scored four points in a 12-2 Michigan State burst.

Two free throws by Mike Peplowski drew the Spartans into a 31-all tie with 1:36 remaining in the half and Peplowski's dunk with 36 seconds left, following a basket by Indiana's Damon Bailey, left the teams tied at halftime.

"We got off to a tremendous start and they got it tightened up," Cheaney said. "But we kept listening to coach. If we listen to coach, and do what he says, we win the game."

Southern Mississippi 85
SE Louisiana 60

HATTIESBURG, Miss. — Southern Mississippi scored the game's first 26 points and the 14th-ranked Golden Eagles cruised thereafter.

The Golden Eagles (21-5), who were paced by Clarence Weatherspoon's 17 points and 14 rebounds, won for the 10th time in 12 home games this season, while Southeastern Louisiana (9-19) finished its first season back in competition after suspending its basketball program for one year.

The Lions did not find their way onto the scoreboard until 7:13 had elapsed. Michael Wolf's 3-pointer drew a standing ovation from the crowd of 7,049 and Southern Mississippi went on to a 43-19 halftime lead.

Darrin Chancellor added 16 points for the Golden Eagles and Daron Jenkins had 15.

Henry Washington had 21 points for Southeastern Louisiana, while Bernard Sylve added 16.

The Golden Eagles were 33-for-64 from the field, the 14th time this season they have finished at better than 50 percent. Southeastern Louisiana, which was outrebounded 47-38, managed just a 24-for-69 effort, 34.8 percent.

The Golden Eagles have already wrapped up the No. 1 seed in next week's Metro Conference tournament in Roanoke, Va. Southern Mississippi will play eighth-seeded Louisville in the opening round.

North Carolina 91
Georgia Tech 74

ATLANTA — Hubert Davis hit three consecutive 3-pointers to give No. 4 North Carolina its biggest lead of the first half and the Tar Heels beat cold-shooting Georgia Tech in what may have been Kenny Anderson's final home game.

The Yellow Jackets suffered their worst shooting half of the season in the opening 20 minutes, missing 31 of 40 shots, including 13 of 14 3-point attempts.

Anderson, the sophomore guard who said he may leave for the NBA, was 1-for-10 from the field and had four points in the first half. Anderson, averaging 26.6 points on the season, finished with 15 points.

New Mexico St. 67, Pacific 60

LAS CRUCES, N.M. — In a game delayed at the start for nearly an hour by a bomb scare, Willie Benjamin scored 16 points and sparked an 18-0 burst in the second half that sent No. 11 New Mexico State past Pacific in the Big West.

NMSU, which fell 86-74 to No. 1 UNLV on Monday, improved to 22-4 overall and 14-3 in the Big West.

The bomb threat was telephoned to the special events center at the school at about 7 p.m., 30 minutes before the scheduled 7:30 p.m. MDT tipoff. The fans inside the Pan American Center were evacuated without incident.

Las Cruces city police officers, campus police and security personnel conducted a search of the arena and found nothing. The fans were allowed back in and the game started at 8:20 p.m.

Knicks overcome deficit to nip Spurs

Associated Press

NEW YORK — Even a 19-1 deficit against San Antonio didn't stop the New York Knicks from extending their winning streak to four games.

The Knicks, despite missing their first eight shots while the Spurs started 9-for-10, got 27 points and 15 rebounds from Patrick Ewing to overtake San Antonio 100-93 on Thursday night.

"We never felt we were out of it," coach John MacLeod said. "The 19-1 start happened so quickly, we knew we had plenty of time to come back."

MacLeod called three timeouts in the first period to calm his team, which came back to lead briefly in the second quarter, then outplayed the Spurs in the second half.

"We told ourselves during the timeouts, 'Let's try to get as close as we can in the first quarter,'" said reserve guard Trent Tucker, who scored 10 points in 17 minutes. "There aren't any 18-point plays."

"We knew it was dim in the beginning, but it was early in the game, so we didn't panic," said Gerald Wilkins, who scored 22 points, his fourth straight game with more than 20. "When you're down like that, you have to keep fighting. We refused to lose, once we got back in the game."

It was the first time since Jan. 3-6 against Denver and the Los Angeles Clippers that the Knicks have won two straight games at Madison Square Garden, where they are now 13-17 for the season.

The loss knocked the Spurs out of first place in the Midwest Division after they briefly regained the top spot from Utah by defeating Portland twice this week.

"We let them off the hook," coach Larry Brown said. "They called some great timeouts, which made them settle down."

David Robinson scored 23 points, but was outrebounded 15-5 by Ewing. Sean Elliott and Terry Cummings each had 19 points for San Antonio, now 5-1 against Atlantic Division teams this season.

"I wasn't concerned with the matchup against David," Ewing said. "I wanted to play well and win. The statistical numbers against David mean nothing to me."

"Our defense plays well in cycles, but we have to do it for the full 48 minutes," Robinson said. "Getting a big lead and losing it was a trait of this team last year. We haven't done that very much this season, but we did the last two games."

A jumper by Wilkins gave the Knicks the lead for good at 89-87 with 2:42 left.

Heat 100, Pistons 98

MIAMI — Miami's Sherman Douglas won a battle of the guards by scoring 27 points, including the tie-breaking basket with 1:13 left, as the Pistons absorbed their fourth consecutive defeat.

Detroit lost despite a season-high 32 points by Vinnie Johnson and 30 by Joe Dumars. But it was another guard, Gerald Henderson, who took the final shot for Detroit, missing the rim on an 18-footer as the buzzer sounded.

Henderson scored just one point as the Pistons matched their longest losing streak of the season.

Hawks 117, Trail Blazers 109

ATLANTA — John Battle scored 18 of his 26 points in the final quarter to spark the Hawks to their 21st consecutive victory at home.

Battle had nine points and Duane Ferrell added seven in a 22-5 burst that turned an 80-72 deficit late in the third quarter into a 94-85 lead. Battle capped the surge when he barely beat the shot clock with a 3-pointer out of the right corner with 5:49 to play.

Nets 98, Bucks 93

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Drazen Petrovic scored 10 of his 22 points in the final four minutes and Derrick Coleman added 21 points and 11 rebounds to lift the Nets.

Petrovic hit a 3-pointer with 3:59 to play to snap an 82-82 tie and give the Nets the lead for good. He added two free throws and Mookie Blaylock followed with a steal and layup to make it 89-82.

Dale Ellis drew Milwaukee within 89-85 by hitting a 3-pointer with 2:28 remaining, but Petrovic drove the lane scored on a layup and added a foul shot for a three-point play to wrap up the Nets' second straight victory and their fourth in the last five games.

Clippers 83, Rockets 80

LOS ANGELES — Ron Harper scored 21 points Thursday night and Danny Manning added nine of his 15 in the fourth quarter as the Los Angeles Clippers overcame a 24-point, 16-rebound effort by Akeem Olajuwon in his first game back from a lengthy eye injury to beat Houston.

Lakers 121, Nuggets 108

DENVER — Magic Johnson scored 18 points and added 14 assists to lead the Lakers to the win, the Nuggets' 10th loss in 11 games.

Although the Nuggets outshot the Lakers 46 field goals to 45 and made six 3-pointers to two for Los Angeles. LA beat Denver for the eighth straight time by hitting 29 of 38 free throws.

Nazareth's Janay Johnson tries to stop a pass by Zavalla's Venesa Ray during Class A state tournament action Thursday.

Nazareth wins, moves to final

Associated Press

AUSTIN — Noel Johnson scored 17 points, collected 16 rebounds and six steals from her point guard position as Nazareth handled Zavalla 57-42 at the girls state basketball tournament Thursday.

Nazareth (25-9), in line to win its 12th state championship and fourth in a row, will play Moulton for the Class A championship Saturday.

Johnson, a 5-7 all-tournament selection last year, scored 13 points in the first half as Nazareth bolted to a 30-20 lead.

Zavalla, which lost to Nazareth in last year's semifinals, ends its season at 29-7.

Moulton 47 Jayton 32

AUSTIN — Kristie Simper scored 27 points Thursday as Moulton rolled over Jayton.

Moulton, making its 14th appearance since 1958, will seek its first girls championship Saturday when the Bobkittens play Nazareth.

Moulton (35-4) led 23-11 at halftime after outscoring Jayton 10-0 over a stretch of 6:32 and 35-24 after three quarters.

Winnsboro 59, Yoakum 48

AUSTIN — Geertje Jongsma scored 20 points and grabbed 13 rebounds as Winnsboro moved into the Class 3A finals.

Winnsboro, 36-1 and appearing in its first tournament appearance, will play for the state championship Saturday against Tulia, a 77-60 victor over previously unbeaten Hardin-Jefferson in the other 3A semifinal.

Tulia 77, Hardin-Jefferson 60

AUSTIN — Kandy Smith scored 24 points and teammate Jennifer Tucker added 21 as Tulia whipped Hardin-Jefferson.

The victory by Tulia, 30-3, halted Hardin-Jefferson's bid for a perfect season and a state championship. The Lady Hawks finished the season at 30-1.

Tulia will play Winnsboro for the 3A title Saturday.

Tulia grabbed a 12-2 first quarter lead and built the margin to 37-24 at halftime and 53-38 at the end of three quarters.

Levelland 31, Calallen 28

AUSTIN — Twylana Harrison led a fourth-quarter rally that gave Levelland the win over defending Class 4A state champion and previously unbeaten Calallen, 31-28.

Shana Brown missed a 3-point attempt at the buzzer that would have sent the game into overtime.

Both teams are perennial state tournament teams, but it marked the sixth straight time the Loboettes have beaten Calallen at state. Levelland won five state championships in the 1980s. Calallen won the title a year ago, when the Loboettes didn't make it to the tournament.

Trailing 25-18 going into the final period, Levelland (32-3) employed a full court trap that produced 13 points, while Calallen (36-1) struggled to get the ball downcourt for five points.

Dallas Lincoln 49, Georgetown 45

AUSTIN — Angela Aycock scored 31 points, including five free throws in the closing seconds, as Dallas Lincoln moved into the Class 4A finals.

The Lady Tigers (28-8) will play for the championship Saturday against Levelland's Loboettes. Lincoln lost in last year's semifinal game to eventual state champion Calallen.

Georgetown led by seven points in the third quarter, but the Eagles' inability to hit free throws and inside layups allowed Lincoln to stay close.

Military fathers let minds wander

Associated Press

While most baseball eyes were on training camps in Florida and Arizona, Vada Pinson and Bill Lachemann were focusing Thursday on the Persian Gulf.

Lachemann's son, Sgt. Tim Lachemann, is commanding a tank crew that went up against Saddam Hussein's Republican Guard near Basra, Iraq.

Pinson's son, 27-year-old Vada Pinson III, is an Army aviation specialist.

"I understand he's been right in the middle of it," said the elder Pinson, the batting coach for the Detroit Tigers. "He's doing a job over there and I'm very proud of him."

we look forward to a good season, hitting-wise," he said.

Bell was 2-for4 for Lee, scoring twice, and Allen Chase was Lee's other multiple hitter with a two-single outing.

Midland High grabbed a 1-0 lead in the nightcap when Adrian Mills' two-out double over the third-base bag scored Jimmy Stanton in the bottom of the second. But Riverside bolted out to its 2-1 advantage when Freddy De la Cruz tripled in a one run and scored the other on Rod Portillo's grounder in the rain-impeded top of the third.

MHS threatened but failed to score in the bottom of the third, and the game was halted just before Bulldog starter Jeremy Burton finished his warm-up pitches at the start of the fourth.

Senior Gabriel Aragon worked the first three innings for the Rangers.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

FRIDAY, MARCH 1, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: Your hard work and recent maneuvering will pay off royally. Career gains are determined by who you know. June is the best time to make a major employment move. Financial favors will be repaid in September. A promotion is likely in October. A legal or real estate matter will be settled in your favor. Celebrate Christmas or New Year's Day in an exotic locale. Getting away for a while gives you a fresh perspective.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: entertainer Dinah Shore, singer Harry Belafonte, director Ron Howard, actor Robert Conrad.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): If a business venture turns sour, grin and bear it. Recycling an old project will bring new profits. A family reunion provides a terrific opportunity to see former friends. Write overdue letters.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): Sort out fact from fiction before reaching a final decision. Do not be tempted to slack off on the job. You will only have to redouble your efforts later! Plan a romantic outing.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Your instincts may not be as good as usual now. Go slow. Respect the judgment of your loved ones and close associates. Finishing an important assignment on time should be your top priority.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You gain in prestige by participating in community projects. A member of the opposite sex may be involved. Share your creative resources. Higher-ups are receptive to new ideas.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Do not try to force issues! Delay will work in your favor. Stop thinking that you are always right and the other person wrong. Get back on track with your exercise program.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): A recent decision may no longer seem practical. Take the initiative in getting things done at work. Steer clear of hazy business deals. Do not try to rush things in romance!

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): A clever career move wins you new admiration and clout. Begin a long-term relationship on honest footing. An older person continues to play an important role in your success.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Finish what you start and you will develop a better understanding with those in authority. A former employee can help you cut through red tape. A humanitarian project will improve your image.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): A new approach brings the desired result. Your position is stronger than you thought. A festive social gathering puts you in touch with a fascinating member of the opposite sex.

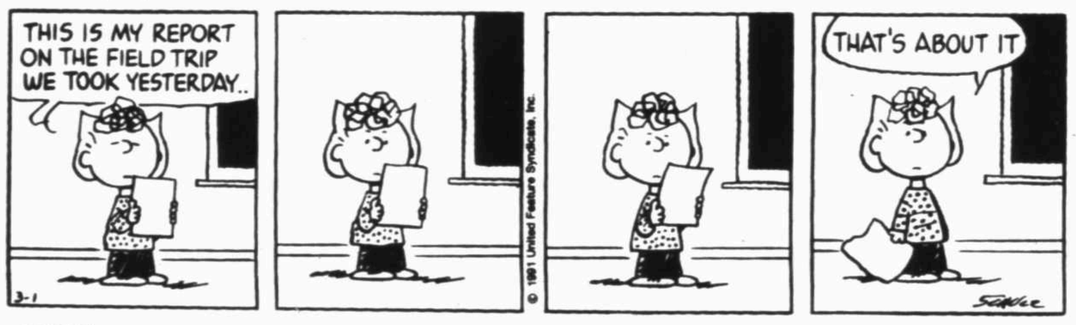

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Follow through on a hunch. Attend important meetings but play a less visible role in decision-making. Loved ones provide the emotional support you need. Avoid confiding in outsiders.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): You can play a major role in changing certain domestic arrangements. A new residence could be involved. Tactful queries will bring the desired answers. You feel much more energetic.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Be prepared for a sudden lifting of restrictions. The pace at work accelerates. A partner's need could outweigh your own desires. Adjust your schedule in order to lend a helping hand.

TODAY'S CHILDREN love to ride to the rescue when problems crop up. They want to be heroes and are fascinated by famous historical figures. Books and maps will become treasured possessions once these youngsters grow more aware of the world. They are willing to work hard to gain victory. Wise parents will help these Pisces overcome a tendency to turn on the tears when they encounter difficulties. A calm, practical approach will get much more respect from their peers.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1 ◇	2 ♠	3 ♡	Pass
4 ♣	Pass	5 ◇	Pass
6 ◇	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead: King of ♠

It's time for you to test your playing skill. Cover the East-West hands with your thumbs and decide how you would play six diamonds after the lead of the king of spades.

West's weak two-spade overcall made life a bit difficult. However, South decided that North had to have at least two aces for the jump preference to five diamonds, and that made six diamonds a reasonable shot.

There are possible finesses in clubs and hearts, but we've put those in just to lead you down the primrose path. Sneaky, aren't we? Your best shot is simply to ruff two clubs in dummy.

Even that, though, requires some care. Suppose you win the ace of spades, cross to the ace of clubs and ruff a club. You can return to hand with the king of hearts and ruff another club. Now, however, when you lead the queen of trumps, East can grab the ace and give West a club ruff to defeat you by one trick.

As usual, once you've spotted the problem, the cure is easy to find. You must cash both the ace and king of clubs before you start ruffing. And since you have virtually all the key spots in trumps, you can take care to ruff the two clubs high, just in case. That line requires little more than a 3-1 trump break and clubs no worse than 6-2.

This is a fairly common situation and is often misplayed. If you intend to ruff losers early with low trumps, it is only because you cannot afford to take high cards and then spend high trumps for ruffing. When that is not the problem, it is more often correct to cash your winners before ruffing losers.

Co-anchor Deborah Norville gives birth to son in New York

NEW YORK (AP) — Deborah Norville, on leave from her job as co-anchor of NBC's "Today," has given birth to a son.

Norville

Karl Nikolai was born at 6:35 p.m. Wednesday in New York City. He weighed 7 pounds, 5 ounces.

NBC said both mother and son are fine, and quoted Norville, who said: "The baby is perfect in every way."

It is the first child for Norville and her husband, Karl Wellner, a New York City businessman.

NEW YORK (AP) — If you wanted to hear Whitney Houston sing live at the Super Bowl, you apparently had to watch it on TV.

Houston

Houston's much-acclaimed version of "The Star Spangled Banner," performed before the New York Giants' 20-19 victory, was actually recorded several days earlier.

The folks at the football game in Tampa heard that taped version of the anthem, while the people at home heard the tape combined with Whitney's live vocals, said Super Bowl sound engineer Larry Estrin.

The technique is "designed to provide the audience with the finest possible performance," said Estrin.

Dan Klores, a spokesman for Houston, said, "This is not a Milli Vanilli thing."

"She sang live, but the microphone was turned off," Klores explained Thursday. "It was a technical decision, partially based on the noise factor. This is standard procedure at these events."

In addition to the crowd noise, there was the added sound of jets zooming above the stadium as she finished the song.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. (AP) — The show business idiom of "Break a Leg" became a little too literal for gospel music star Sandi Patti, who claimed a Grammy award last week.

Patti

Patti said Wednesday she will have a cast on her broken left foot for a month.

Patti said she hit her foot on a cedar chest in her home 2½ weeks ago and then aggravated the injury when she wore heels at the Grammy award ceremony in New York City.

She said the foot is broken in two places.

Patti has been voted the Gospel Music Association's female vocalist of the year nine straight years, and was nominated for a 10th on Wednesday.

She won a Grammy for her album "Another Time ... Another Place."

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Beach Boy Mike Love is suing the maker of Kokomo liqueur claiming the purveyor of spirits used his name and likeness on a promotional poster without his consent.

Love

Love, whose song "Kokomo" was a hit in 1988, said in a federal lawsuit that he had an agreemeent with Hiram Walker Inc. to appear at a concert in Daytona Beach, Fla., with his Endless Summer Beach Band.

Love said he canceled the week before the March 17 show when he learned that the company was advertising two concerts, not one, and that he would be appearing with a dance group called the "Kokomo Girls." But he said his band could go on without him.

On the day of the concert, posters appeared showing him between two blondes in bikinis, with the words "Hiram Walker" underneath, the suit said. His name was also on the poster, it said.

"It's a suit that's just being issued because of a perceived unauthorized endorsement in connection with our liqueur. That's all I can say," Hiram Walker spokesman Henry Pomeroy said Thursday from company headquarters in Windsor, Ontario.

Love is seeking $720,000 in damages.

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Actress Maureen O'Sullivan, who portrayed Jane in 1930s Tarzan movies, was honored Wednesday with a star on the Hollywood Walk of Fame.

The star, the 1,931st on the celebrated walkway, is alongside one dedicated to her "Tarzan" co-star, the late Johnny Weissmuller.

Cesar Romero and Janet Leigh were among about 75 friends and fans who gathered on the Hollywood Boulevard sidewalk for the unveiling.

Miss O'Sullivan's daughter, actress Mia Farrow, sent a huge bouquet of flowers, explaining she was involved in a movie project and couldn't attend, said Laura Edelman, a spokeswoman for the Hollywood Chamber of Commerce.

In addition to "Tarzan" films in the 1930s, Miss O'Sullivan's movie credits include "Pride and Prejudice," "David Copperfield," "Anna Karenina," "Hannah and her Sisters" and "Peggy Sue Got Married."

SWIM: Brininstool, Arguello hopeful

concluded.

Houston is also favored to win the 100 backstroke, though the competition might be a little stiffer.

"He'll have his hands full with Trey Hayes (of Lubbock Coronado)," Ridge said.

As if that wasn't enough, Houston is also swimming the 200 and 400 free relays that Ridge has loaded to the gills in an effort to stave off El Paso Coronado, Lubbock Coronado and El Paso Eastwood. That means the junior is swimming in three of the last four events.

The Aquadawgs won last year's Region I meet by 11 points over San Angelo. El Paso Coronado, Eastwood and Lubbock Coronado were 3-4-5 in that meet.

Houston is hardly MHS' only weapon. Senior Moss Fennell set meet records in both the 200 and 500 freestyle last year, but will almost certainly get a battle from El Paso Coronado's Todd Roberts in the 200.

"Moss is probably one of the toughest guys in the state," Ridge said. "He never fails to excite. That 200 free will be the race of the day."

The Aquadawgs other big hope for an individual berth at the state meet is junior Steve Thomsen, whose best shot of advancing is probably in the 100 free. He was second in that event last year as an Abilene Cooper sophomore.

Returning state qualifier Carrie Henry is MHS' best hope for an individual state berth. Henry will face Mariah Cade of El Paso Coronado in her effort to repeat.

Also, the MHS girls' 200 and 400 free relays are undefeated when stacked, that is, when the team's top swimmers compete.

"It's going to be a four-way slugfest (for the girls team title)," Ridge said.

According to Lee coach John Bettina, his Lady Rebels aren't one of the four.

"I just hope my girls finish in the top six," Bettina said. "Second is not impossible, but I think El Paso Coronado should win by 15 or 20 points."

The Lady Rebs were seven points behind Coronado en route to last year's second-place finish.

Bettina hopes that either Carey Forsythe or Jogee Woolard can qualify for the state meet in diving. Also, the 200 medley relay team of Heili Whitlow, Mimi Morrison, Ginger Brininstool and Shanna Tomlinson is hoping to improve on last year's second place finish.

Brininstool is probably Lee's best hope for an individual swimming place, Bettina said.

"Ginger could be in the top three. The rest of them will be trying to nibble away at individual places."

Diver Juan Arguello, who competed in the New Mexico state meet last season, is hoping to pull off a mild upset this weekend, while Jesse Nattras may have an outside chance of dethroning Fennell in the 500 free.

Diving competition begins at 9:30 a.m. today, while swimming preliminaries start at 3:30 p.m. today.

Swimming finals start at 10:15 a.m. Saturday.

Here is a complete list of regional entrants by event from both Midland High and Midland Lee:

Rankin earns Region I berth

Area Basketball

One might not have thought the Rankin Red Devils would be anything more than respectable — if early-season records were all that one looked at.

But while Coach Shannon Hooker's team was 5-3 at one point — the three losses were to eventual Region I quarterfinalist Sanderson, state private school semifinalist Midland Christian, and (at) Class 4A Fort Stockton.

Since then, the Red Devils have averaged 91 points a game in 11 straight wins and will take that streak to Levelland for the Class A Region I tournament today.

The Red Devils, 16-3, face 28-1 Petersburg in regional quarterfinal action at 1:30 p.m. today in the Texan Dome.

Quarterfinal winners advance to Saturday morning semifinals. The final will start at 7 p.m. Saturday.

The Red Devils earned their regional berth with a 92-62 win over Marathon on Tuesday.

Elsewhere, the Lamesa Golden Tornadoes are one step away from a Class 4A state tournament berth. Only Pampa stands between Coach Wayne Roberts' team and the rare feat of earning a trip to Austin the year after moving up in class.

The Tors, Class 3A runnersup last year, face Pampa at 8 p.m. Friday in Portales, N.M.

Several of the same players who led Rankin to playoff berths each of the last two seasons are back for a third try. Wing James Watson leads the team with 21 points per game, while point guard Francisco Gonzales throws in about 15 a game. Both have been mainstays for three seasons.

Post Kirk Kennedy averages about 14 a game, while post Kevin Braden and wing Arnaldo Ramos do much of the dirty work under the hoop.

Hooker said the Red Devils' running style necessitates a strong bench, so point guard Joey Varela (8 ppg) and 6-3 Jimmy Low (5 ppg) play particularly key roles as the first men off the bench.

Petersburg, whose only loss was to Class 2A Hale Center in a tuneup for the playoffs, features a front line that goes 6-5, 6-2, and 6-2. Six-two Jerry Fillingim leads the team in scoring, while 6-5 sophomore Tim Fox is also a major contributor.

Rankin can't match the Buffaloes' height, but Hooker hopes the Red Devils' bulk offsets the deficit.

"We'll try to muscle the big fellow (Fox) inside with Kennedy, Braden and Ramos," the coach said. While both Kennedy and Braden are only 5-11, both weigh more than 175 pounds.

The Red Devils' tallest starter is the 6-1 Watson.

CHAPS: MC defense slows OC

(From 1C)

glers inbounded again and ran another 10 seconds off, again unable to set a play. Robert Shannon launched a three-pointer with seven seconds left, but the ball hit the rim and bounced into MC's hands.

Sophomore guard Steve Armstrong hit one of two free throws after being fouled with one second left to secure the four-point Chap win.

"I think our sophomores had to go out and have a good night, and they did," MC head coach Reggie Franklin said. "(Wednesday) when we knew we weren't making the playoffs, we didn't have a very good practice. But everybody had a really good practice (Thursday)."

Two MC sophomores did have the good efforts; two probably wished they had it all to do over again.

Carroll Boudreaux scored a game-high 23 points and had a team-high seven rebounds, all the while battling the relentless play of OC forward Calvin Sinkfield.

"I finally got a dunk on him," Boudreaux said of a slam he recorded late in the second half. "He was talking trash to me and I told him 'I'm going to get you for that.' "

The "trash," as well as the slam that followed, almost led to a midcourt altercation as OC called a timeout in the late going. After the slam dunk, Boudreaux walked by Sinkfield on his way to the bench, and the OC sophomore reached out and slapped Boudreaux.

MC sophomore Eugene Witherspoon had 18 points and a game-high five steals to help the Chaparrals' inside game.

At the other extreme, Charlie Craine left in the second half after falling head-first to the floor and suffering a concussion. Trainer Doc Dodson said the head bang was mild, and Craine complained of dizziness after the game.

And although Eric Walker exceeded his average with 16 points, the Houston product fouled out, ending his MC career with 4:04 left in the game.

Field goal shooting by both teams was nothing to write home about, OC hitting on just 37.3 percent from the field, MC not much better at 40 percent.

MC led for much of the second half, but it was a lead the Chaps had to claw their way back from after a technical foul was called on Franklin late in the first half.

With MC up 35-28, Franklin was whistled for the 'T', and OC scored eight straight points to come to within one at the half, 35-34. The Wranglers also scored the first six points of the second half to jump out to a 40-35 lead.

MC installed their 1-3-1 defense, though, a combination that has stalled several opponents throughout the season. It worked again against the Wranglers. The Chaps outscored OC 19-6 over the next five minute span to take a 54-46 lead.

After the Wranglers' brief 42-40 lead at the 17:05 mark, OC wouldn't come close again until 14 minutes later, when a Kevin Washington three-pointer put OC up 68-66. Again, the lead was only a brief one for the Wranglers as the Chaps would score the game's final six points.

The Chaps finished the season 17-13 overall, and their second straight 8-8 record in conference play. OC, 24-8, 10-6, will advance to Waco and the Region V tournament beginning next weekend, the WJCAC's third-place team.

MC's win was the first against the Wranglers in conference play since Feb. 5, 1987, when the Jerry Stone-led Chaps won 106-74.

clined comment on any personnel matters.

Earlier this season, Franklin flatly denied rumors that he had accepted a position with the University of Missouri as an assistant coach, however one MC spokesperson confirmed that Missouri officials were interested in talking with Franklin about a position.

Missouri officials have also refused to issue a statement regarding any new hirings until after the regular season.

MC closed out its season with a 72-68 win over Odessa College Thursday night. The Chaps' 8-8 finish marked the second straight season the team has failed to advance to the Region V tournament after having made post-season play in 10 of its previous 11 seasons.

Rarick picks up the pace

WAILEA, Hawaii (AP) — Cindy Rarick began protecting her lead a little early, but loosened up and shot a 3-under-par 68 Thursday to keep her ahead halfway through the Women's Kemper Open.

Rarick played conservatively and made nine straight pars at one point, but came alive when defending champion Beth Daniel began creeping up the leader board. She pulled ahead with birdies on two of her last three holes.

"I think for a while I was trying to protect too much," Rarick said. "I backed off a little, and I happened to glance up and I noticed Beth had made a few birdies.

Rarick, one stroke ahead entering the second round, was 8-under.

Prices over $19

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rose above $19 per barrel Thursday as the crisis in the Persian Gulf was instantly forgotten in the futures market's first post-war trading session.

"That war is not a factor any more," said Thomas P. Blakeslee, an energy analyst with Pegasus Econometric Group Inc., in Hoboken, N.J. "The war premium is completely gone from this market, and all the focus now is on the upcoming OPEC meeting on March 11. It's a complete turn now to look at fundamentals."

Perceptions that members of the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries will soon move to cut back production have been pushing oil higher much of the week.

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled Thursday at $19.16 per barrel, up 30 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

"People are focusing on what OPEC is going to do and the fact that there is more damage than they thought in the Middle East," said Sandy Weinberger, an oil broker at Dean Witter Reynolds Inc.

Natural gas for delivery in April closed at $1.373, up 1.7 cents per 1,000 cubic feet.

Stocks see-saw

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market was mixed Thursday in a busy but trendless session as traders tried to sort out prospects after the end of the Gulf War.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 6.93 to 2,882.18, finishing February with a net gain of 145.79 points, or 5.33 percent.

Dollar rises

NEW YORK (AP) — The dollar advanced against other major currencies Thursday, boosted overseas by the cease-fire in the Gulf War and on domestic markets by speculation that U.S. interest rates would remain stable.

The dollar rose to 133.025 Japanese yen in New York from late Wednesday's 132.245.

The British pound fell to $1.9120 in New York from $1.9177 late Wednesday.

Other late dollar rates in New York, compared with late Wednesday's prices, included: 1.52425 German marks, up from 1.5225; 1.3248 Swiss francs, up from 1.3163; 5.1890 French francs, up from 5.1780; 1,139.00 Italian lire, up from 1,137.75; and 1.14975 Canadian dollars, down from 1.15145.

Gold advanced $5.70 on the Commodity Exchange in New York, closing at $367.40 a troy ounce.

Silver rose 15.9 cents to close at $3.729 a troy ounce on the Commodity Exchange.

Kuwait oil industry said badly crippled

■ As they prepare to head to Kuwait to rebuild that country's energy industry, Houston oilmen say damage done by Iraqi troops will take months if not years to repair.

By Kyle Pope
Hearst News Service

Iraq's assault on Kuwaiti oil fields has crippled the emirate's energy industry and could halt the flow of the nation's crude for more than a year.

Houston energy experts with ties to Kuwait's exiled government said Wednesday that more than half of the oil wells in Kuwait are on fire, all of its pipelines are destroyed or damaged, and most of the refineries and storage tanks in the country have been ransacked.

First City Texas-Houston and nine other banks have filed claims with the federal government in attempts to recover losses on agricultural loans to Iraq.

In short, the experts said Iraq's scorched-earth policy has all but obliterated Kuwait's oil industry, the economic lifeblood of the country.

"The Iraqis have gone in and ripped this country up," said Bill Lang, manager of market research for Baker Hughes, a Houston-based oil services company that is expected to have a hand in rebuilding Kuwait.

"They have pillaged the country and taken everything that isn't tied down," he said.

Experts said the question mark over Kuwait should have little impact on the price of oil.

The emirate's production has been embargoed since Iraq's August invasion anyway, and other major Middle East producers have raised their output to cover for the lost oil.

"Everyone seems to realize it's going to be well into next year before Kuwait is

A Kuwaiti oil well is shown burning in this aerial view taken Wednesday. Houston experts say Kuwait's energy industry has been severly crippled, but the lack of Kuwaiti oil on the market won't impact prices.

Consumer spending slips further

■ The government reported that consumer spending showed its steepest slide in three years in January, and a drop in personal income tells economists consumers just don't have money to spend.

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Consumer spending, which slipped severely in the final quarter of 1990, dropped an additional 0.6 percent in January, the government said Thursday.

"Consumers are in a lot of trouble," Bruce Steinberg, an economist with Merrill Lynch Capital Markets in New York, said of the sector providing two-thirds of the nation's economic activity.

The Commerce Department said spending in January fell to a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $3.72 trillion, the steepest slide since a 1.3 percent drop in January 1987 and more than erasing a 0.5 percent advance in December.

Economist John Silvia of Kemper Financial Services in Chicago said the decline is more evidence that the January-March period of 1991 will be the second quarterly contraction in a row — meeting the classic confirmation of recession.

The department reported on Wednesday that the gross national product — the total output of the nation's goods and services — fell at an annual rate of 2.0 percent from October through December. That included a huge 2.9 percent drop in consumer spending.

And while the apparent end of the Persian Gulf war is expected to boost consumer confidence and provide an initial boost in spending, Steinberg said any rebound is unlikely to be robust.

"The problem has not been a lack of confidence," the Merrill Lynch economist said. "The problem is that consumers don't have any money to spend."

Indeed, the Commerce Department also reported on Thursday that personal incomes fell 0.5 percent, the largest decline since a similar 0.5 percent decline in November 1988.

Regulators see upturn in real estate

Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Early signs are emerging that the nation's real estate slump may be ready to turn around for both residential and commercial property, a senior bank regulator said Thursday.

Seidman

"I think there are some indications the problems in real estate are bottoming out," said L. William Seidman, chairman of the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp.

His agency, which insures deposits at both banks and savings institutions, issued a compilation of statistics it uses as a "leading index" to predict the health of real estate markets.

The data still show considerable weakness in many markets, but Seidman said he saw reason for hope.

Although the national office vacancy rate increased to 19.5 percent at the end of 1990, from 18.1 percent a year earlier, rates in two-thirds of metropolitan areas studied were lower at the end of the year compared with the average of the past three years.

Also, falling home prices have combined with declining interest rates to bring housing to its most affordable point since 1977, he said. Already, there is anecdotal evidence, if not statistical evidence, that home sales are picking up, he said.

"It certainly doesn't say the real estate recession is over, but there are some indicators it's bottoming out," he said.

Seidman issued the real estate report the same day he tried to persuade members of Congress that banks — not taxpayers — will be able

Ford cutbacks hit white-collar ranks

■ Ford Motor's plans to cut $3 billion in expenses and cut thousands of white-collar jobs comes amid optimism in the industry that, now that the war is over, consumers will again flock to dealerships.

Associated Press

DETROIT — Ford Motor Co. intensified cost-cutting plans Thursday, announcing a program to pare $3 billion in expenses and eliminate thousands of white-collar jobs.

Speaking to employees across the country via closed circuit television, Chairman Harold Poling said the company will make $1.5 billion in cuts in addition to $1.5 billion already sliced from its $96.1 billion in annual expenses.

Poling

The announcement came against a backdrop of optimism in the auto industry, which is looking forward to rebounding from a prolonged slump now that the Gulf War is over.

With the cease-fire in the gulf, there appears to be a light on the horizon for the battered automakers. Consumer confidence tumbled when Iraq invaded Kuwait in August and it stayed low during the war, crimping car sales.

Poling predicted consumer confidence will improve, although he cautioned that "any recovery in automotive sales will be slow for the balance of this year."

All of the Big Three automakers announced Thursday they will lay off 38,950 autoworkers next week as they close all or parts of 17 assembly plants because of slow sales and model changeover. The number is down slightly from the 41,000 workers who were on temporary layoff this week.

In addition, Ford is instituting an early retirement incentive, delaying bonuses and merit increases for managers and suspending matching contributions to salaried savings and stock plans.

A good chunk of the savings will come from a reduction in the automaker's 53,000 white-collar jobs. Normal attrition would eliminate about 5 percent annually, or more than 2,600 jobs.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Three money funds are virtually free from risk

By Bill Doyle

Q. You wrote about a safe investment in a mutual fund that deals only in U.S. T bills and similar securities. I think you mentioned a person can invest just a few thousand dollars or as much as desired.

Can you name the company that handles such a fund?

Doyle

A. There are many. You're thinking about what are called government-only money market mutual funds — "money funds," for short. The money you send to a money fund buys fund shares and the fund uses your money and other investors' money to invest in short-term debt securities.

There are three basic types of money funds.

A government-only money fund holds only T bills and other Treasury and federal agency securities with short maturities.

A general purpose money fund might hold Treasury and federal agency securities, but usually has the bulk of its investments in such things as certificates of deposit, repurchase agreements, bankers acceptances and commercial paper.

A tax-free money fund holds short-maturity securities issued by states and their political subdivisions.

Every money fund uses accounting methods that keeps the value of its shares constant — at $1, in most cases.

I never wrote that money funds are "safe." It has been explained here that such funds are "virtually free from risk." There is a difference between the two.

You can get the names, addresses and other information about the multitude of money funds by visiting a public library and reading financial reference manuals.

Q. If I become a shareholder of a money fund, will I be able to write checks on my account?

A. Almost all money funds have check-writing privileges. However, most allow checks to be written no smaller than a predetermined amount — typically $500.

If you write a lot a checks, that's one of the things you should determine before you pick a fund in which to invest.

Q. Is it true that money funds are free from tax?

A. Not all. The dividends paid by government-only money funds are subject to federal income tax but exempt from most state income tax.

Dividends of general purpose money funds get hit by both federal and state income tax.

Dividends of tax-free money funds are exempt from federal income tax and, in many cases, at least partly free from state income tax. That's because those funds collect interest from municipal securities which are free from federal income tax and usually free from state tax in the states where the securities were issued.

Q. I'm told the Securities and Exchange Commission has cracked down on money funds holding low-quality investments. What's the story there.

A. The SEC recently decreed that a fund with more than 5 percent of its assets invested in commercial paper rated below top grade will not be able to call itself a money market mutual fund. Commercial paper is a short-term, unsecured IOU issued by a corporation.

This does not prevent a fund with a batch of lower-grade investments from continuing in operation. But the fund will not be able to advertise itself as a money market mutual fund.

Also, and more important, such a fund won't be allowed to use the "penny-rounding" accounting technique that keeps the value of its shares constant. Depending on changes in the market value of the securities it holds, the fund's stated share value will "float" — rising above or falling below $1.

The upshot of this is expected to be that general purpose money funds will concentrate their investments in high-grade securities, thus retaining their "money market mutual fund" labels.

Analysis

NEW YORK (AP) — The stock market wavered uncertainly today as traders looked ahead to prospects after the end of the Gulf War.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials dropped 8.91 points to 2,880.20 by 2 p.m. on Wall Street.

Gainers outnumbered losers by about 4 to 3 in nationwide trading of New York Stock Exchange-listed issues, with 852 up, 631 down and 481 unchanged.

Analysts said investors found many reasons for optimism and encouragement in the news of a cease-fire in the war against Iraq as the U.S.-led coalition moved to secure Kuwait.

The military success in the campaign is expected to yield positive economic results, including a boost to consumer confidence in the United States.

But many market-watchers question what the end of the conflict might mean for the Federal Reserve's monetary policy and interest rates. If business activity picks up quickly, the Fed is expected to grow much more wary about easing credit conditions any further.

Brokers also noted that the war's end was effectively "old news" to investors, since the markets have been anticipating a speedy victory ever since the start of Operation Desert Storm.

Glaxo Holdings rose 1½ to 37⅞. The British pharmaceutical company reported higher earnings for the six months ended Dec. 31.

Fluor Corp. gained ⅞ to 53½ amid continuing enthusiasm for engineering and oil-service stocks as the drive gets under way to rebuild Kuwait.

STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE

WHAT IS STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE?
Stockquote Hotline gives you the latest stock prices direct from the wires of the Associated Press. Over 9,000 stocks are listed from NYSE, AmEx, and OTC sources; all available 24 hours a day. You can receive up to 10 quotes with one easy phone call.

HOW TO USE STOCKQUOTE HOTLINE:
1) Call the Stockquote Hotline at 560-2400; enter the category number which is 9988.

2) You will be asked to enter your stock ticker symbol. These are based on industry-standard symbols, which can be found in a Standard & Poor's Ticker guide, or by calling your local stock broker.

3) Once you've entered the numberical code for the ticker symbol, press the Star Key(*) and you will hear the current price and net change from the last Associated Press update; which is a few minutes behind market activity.

4) After the stock is quoted, you will be asked to enter another ticker symbol. You now have 2 options:
• You may request a quote for another stock by repeating steps 2 & 3.
• You may request additional information on the stock just quoted by once more pressing the Star Key(*).
Now the volume, high and low will be given, and then you will be asked to enter another ticker code.
• You may enter up to 10 ticker symbols per call.

5) To exit Stockquote Hotline, simply hang up the phone.

Drilling conference is planned for Amsterdam

Staff Report

The 1991 Society of Petroleum Engineers and the International Association of Drilling Contractors are co-sponsoring a drilling conference to be held in Amsterdam.

The March 11-14 conference will feature a new technical display of the latest oilfield drilling information. Safety and environment issues will also be highlighted in the conference.

"The hallmark of this conference is topical discussions that investigate problems, explore solutions and provide solid information to drilling contractors, operators, engineers and managers for future application in the field," said Michael Mossman the program chairman.

The Society of Petroleum Engineers is an international technical and professional association of more than 51,000 engineers, scientists and managers involved in drilling, exploration and production of petroleum and geothermal resources. Its primary aim is to collect and disseminate technical information through extensive meetings, publications and member-service programs. SPE members in 119 sections throughout the world regularly exchange technical information through local meetings, continuing education programs, study groups and other programs.

The International Association of Drilling Contractors is an organization of oil and gas contract drilling firms, producers/operator companies, and manufacturing, service and supply companies. IADC's 1,000-plus member companies strive to improve the petroleum industry's technology base and provide a forum for the exchange of information leading to successful drilling operations on an international scale.

Parker & Parlsey repurchases stock

Staff Report

Parker & Parsley Co. has announced the implementaiton of a stock repurchase program for 1991 in the amount of $10 million.

The purchases will be made from time to time on the open marker. Scott D. Sheffield, president and chairman of the board said, "The purchase of the company's common stock represents an attractive investment and an excellent opportunity to enhance the value of the company at the current market price relative to the per share oil and gas reserve value."

The company currently has approximately 21,187,546 shares outstanding.

Seventh Texas failure for 1991

Associated Press

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — United Citizens Bank, N.A., was declared insolvent and closed Thursday.

The bank's deposits and secured liabilities were assumed by First American Bank of Bryan, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. said. The failed bank's three offices will reopen Friday as branches of First American.

United Citizens had total assets of $54.4 million. First American will purchase about $48.4 million of the assets at a discount of nearly $5 million.

The Bryan bank assumes about $53 million in 14,300 accounts.

The Comptroller of the Currency said problems with United Citizens Bank were first noted in late 1987. Poor quality real estate loans harmed the bank's condition.

The bank was the seventh to fail in Texas this year. There have been 19 bank failures in the United States in 1991.

going to get any production back on stream," said Ken Miller, senior principal at Purvin & Gertz, an energy consulting firm in Houston. Experts said the reconstruction of the Kuwaiti oil industry has been complicated in recent days by the destruction of the country's pipeline system.

They said both petroleum and water pipelines have been bombed by retreating Iraqi troops, with some of the lines even pulled out of the ground to serve as obstacles to incoming allied tanks.

Raymond Henry, vice president of the Red Adair Co. in Houston, said water lines are critical to his company's ability to fight the 600 oil-well fires raging throughout Kuwait.

The firefighting companies pump huge quantities of water in the initial phases of their work to help douse the fires and cool the firefighters.

The blazes then are extinguished either by hitting them with explosives to suck oxygen out of the well or by drilling another hole nearby to redirect the oil flow.

"We are going to have to start from scratch, from the pipelines on up," Henry said. "From what we understand, everything has been destroyed."

As for the oil fires, Adair and other Houston companies with contracts in Kuwait said it could be months before their work begins.

The companies are cautious about moving workers into the region until military planners can guarantee that booby traps believed planted by Saddam Hussein's forces have been neutralized.

Once that happens, it will take an additional 30 days to get equipment from Houston to Kuwait, the companies said.

to repay up to $30 billion in borrowing he is proposing to bolster the government fund insuring deposits.

The decline of commercial real estate values has been the driving force behind the deterioration of banks' profits and the high rate of failures. Any improvement in real estate markets would be very good news for both the industry and the insurance fund.

However, many private analysts see no reason yet for optimism.

"I think his argument is very weak," said economist Paul Getman of Regional Financial Associates in West Chester, Pa. "He'll be lucky if the real estate recession hits bottom at the end of this year, because I don't see any signs of bottoming yet."

In the residential market, Getman acknowledged that declining prices and interest rates have made housing more affordable. But, he said, many lenders now demand more than the 5 percent or 10 percent down payments they once required. That shuts many first-time home buyers out of the market, he said.

He said office vacancy rates may not be deteriorating sharply, but they are still very high. He said employment growth has slowed in white-collar industries, such as banking, offering little hope that rates will decline soon.

The FDIC ranked 52 office markets using for criteria: growth in office completion, growth in office employment, change in vacancy rate and the vacancy rate itself.

The five areas considered to have the best prospects were Salt Lake City; Houston; Kansas City; Norfolk, Va.; and Austin, Texas. The five areas most vulnerable to a downturn were Hartford, Conn.; Albuquerque, N.M.; Detroit; Baltimore; and St. Louis.

SPENDING: Income, not confidence is problem

(From 7C)

Incomes totaled a seasonally adjusted annual rate of $4.72 trillion, down from a 0.6 percent gain posted in December.

The Labor Department reported earlier that America's unemployment rate climbed to 6.2 percent in January, its highest level since 1987. Over the seven months ending in January, 1.2 million persons have become jobless.

And while there was an increase in some incomes due to a federal government pay raise and an increase in government benefit payments, it was offset by a decrease in farm subsidies and a jump in Social Security withholding, Commerce said.

The report said Americans' disposable incomes — incomes after taxes — sank 0.5 percent, erasing a 0.5 percent gain reported in December.

A key component of the income category — wages and salaries — fell $14.2 billion after rising $22.8 billion a month earlier. They were unchanged in November.

WORLD IN BRIEF

Refugees denied use of highway

MANAGUA, Nicaragua (AP) — Riot police peacefully removed about 300 Salvadoran refugees who had blocked a highway to Honduras to protest that country's refusal to let them pass through on their way home, officials said Thursday.

Guillermo Bettocchi, an official of the U.N. High Commission for Refugees, said his agency sent an observer to El Espino, the Nicaraguan border town, after the incident Wednesday. The agency has been interceding on behalf of the refugees, who want to return to their war-shattered homeland before March 10 national assembly and mayoral elections.

A group of 297 Salvadorans arrived at El Espino on Monday and camped out around the town after both Nicaraguan and Honduran officials refused to let them cross the border. To travel by land from Nicaragua northwest to El Salvador, the refugees must traverse part of Honduras.

Bettocchi said Honduras won't let them in until El Salvador guarantees that the refugees will be permitted to enter El Salvador.

"The Hondurans didn't want to get stuck with the refugees," he said.

Patrition's end predicted

SEOUL, South Korea (AP) — President Roh Tae-woo predicted Friday that the division of the Korean peninsula would end in three or four years, paving the way for national unification.

"The walls are coming down," Roh told a national television audience.

He said that by the time the peninsula marks a half century of partition, in 1995, there will be no division. In the past, Roh has predicted the Koreas would be made one by century's end.

He offered no explanation for the prediction. Nor did he suggest there were particular signs of improvement in tense relations with North Korea.

The two Koreas have held sporadic dialogue on easing military and political tensions, but have made little progress. North Korea called off a fourth round of high level talks that was to have been held this week.

The president's remarks came on a national holiday marking Korea's fight for independence from Japanese colonial rule, which ended in 1945.

Riots commemorated

TAIPEI, Taiwan (AP) — Taiwanese held memorial services Thursday for thousands of victims of anti-government riots 44 years ago that the Nationalist Chinese long tried to keep under wraps.

About 200 relatives of victims held a service at a Taipei park where many of the rioters were executed. Religious groups and county governments organized other observances.

Demonstrators disrupted an international cycling competition in Kaohsiung city for two hours, saying it was not in keeping with the somber anniversary, police said.

Historians say at least 20,000 Taiwanese were killed or executed in 1947 in an uprising by native Taiwanese against the Nationalists, who gained control of Taiwan in 1945 after Japan was defeated in World War II.

The Nationalists for many years banned commemorative services and public discussion of what became known as "the Feb. 28 Incident." After political reforms, the government in 1988 gave its first official account of the riots.

It said about 2,000 people were killed, a figure many Taiwanese dispute.

Taiwanese say the bloodshed began after Nationalist troops attacked a Taiwanese woman selling untaxed cigarettes. A crowd of Taiwanese came to her rescue and the troops fired at them, killing one man. Two weeks of rioting followed, ending only after the Nationalists rushed in reinforcements from the China mainland.

The Nationalists lost a civil war to the Communists on the mainland in 1949 and retreated to Taiwan.

Police to dissolve unit

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — The police unit responsible for political surveillance and fighting terrorism is being dissolved, and its 4,000 officers will be assigned to fight common crime, the government said Thursday.

Law and Order Minister Adriaan Vlok said police from the Security Branch will be incorporated into the Criminal Investigation Department starting April 1.

He said the move was indicative of the government's growing openness since it legalized opposition parties and began a dialogue with the African National Congress last year.

The ANC agreed earlier in the month to cease its armed struggle against apartheid.

"People are now more afraid of a criminal than a terrorist," Vlok told a news conference in Cape Town.

Violent crimes such as murder and armed robbery increased by about 25 percent last year compared to 1989.

Law and Order spokesman Brig. Leon Mellett said the Security Branch's role as an anti-terrorism unit was no longer applicable. But he and Vlok said it didn't mean police would not continue to investigate terrorism.

In February 1990, de Klerk legalized opposition groups such as the ANC and began releasing political prisoners, including ANC leader Nelson Mandela. The ANC, which waged a guerrilla war against the government for 29 years, suspended its armed struggle in August and has been holding talks with the government.

Woman found guilty

PARIS (AP) — A 60-year-old woman was sentenced Thursday to 20 years in prison for dismembering her lover. She was acquitted on a second murder count of poisoning her elderly husband in order to inherit his pension with a bogus will.

The 12-member jury took only a few hours to decide the fate of Simone Weber, who had fainted Thursday after declaring to jurors: "I'm not the demon they've made me out to be."

The six-week-old trial of Weber in the eastern city of Nancy had riveted France with grisly, gossipy details that transformed the defendant into a household word and made her trial the most talked about topic after the Persian Gulf War.

The heavyset, matronly Weber was charged with poisoning her 80-year-old second husband, Marcel Fixard, one month after they were married in 1980 and soon after he bequeathed his pension to her.

She was also accused of drugging and shooting her lover, Bernard Hettier, then cutting up his body with an electric knife and power saw. Prosecutors alleged Weber committed the second murder in 1985 because she believed Hettier was having an affair.

The prosecution has sought life imprisonment with a minimum 18 years in jail before parole.

The trial's closing arguments ended dramatically Thursday when Weber told the jury she was "not the demon they've made me out to be," and then fainted.

Few take citizenship

HONG KONG (NYT) — In a surprising twist, a British offer of citizenship for a limited number of Hong Kong residents nervous about China's takeover of the colony in 1997 has attracted only a fraction of the number of applicants expected.

The deadline for applications was midnight Thursday for the program, which had been widely criticized as an offer of too little too late.

But at midevening, government officials said they expected to receive about 60,000 applications for the 43,500 passports offered, a figure that falls far short of the 300,000 applications they originally anticipated.

On Wednesday the opposition Labor Party's home affairs spokesman in London, Alistair Darling, called for an investigation into why the plan had evoked so little response.

He said the limited number of applicants "flies in the face of everything I was told during three days in Hong Kong," he said. "I was told there would be a deluge."

With the Communist takeover of this lively capitalist colony growing closer, hundreds of thousands of residents have been lining up in front of foreign consulates in the last few years to apply for immigration papers.

Demonstrators killed

ANKARA, Turkey (AP) — Security forces opened fire to stop demonstrations in a Kurdish town Thursday, killing two peasants and wounding three, the Anatolia news agency quoted authorities as saying.

A soldier also was killed when he stepped on a live wire while trying to block farmers from entering a nearby state-run coal mine.

The shooting took place in Sirnak, a predominantly Kurdish settlement in southeastern Turkey, the semi-official news agency reported.

The office said soldiers fired when demonstrators — wielding clubs, throwing rocks and smashing shop windows — marched through Sirnak in protest that farmers were kept from removing coal from the mine to heat their houses.

Only the state is allowed to distribute coal.

Kurds comprise about 20 percent of Turkey's 57 million citizens and have struggled for decades for an independent homeland.

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE
The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!
OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?
Yes! Our current carrier force is already 75% adult and 25% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:
- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?
Depending on the size of the route(s) from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?
The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?
6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?
