Carbon Black Designs and Builds New Plant

United Carbon Company, a division of Ashland Oil and Refining Co., opened its newly designed Special Products plant for the manufacturers of furnace carbon black last week.

This expanded capacity, up to 15 million pounds of pigments for ink, paint, plastics, paper and other applications—plus its million pounds channel black production, provides United Carbon the volume necessary to capture a sizable part of the 100 million pound market for special blacks. The carbon black and rubber producer has set up a separate organization to handle sales and service. Sales activities to this market will be directed by Paul Wilhelm, former Rockport resident. The plant, the first ever to be designed exclusively for this specialized market, can, by virtue of its seven different reactors, make any known furnace black—from 15 to 160 microns in diameter. Some other innovations are the production unit's ability to produce and process two different blacks separately; thirty or more instruments and control devices to protect quality; and new, improved equipment components to overcome the extreme operating conditions inherent in carbon black production (i.e., temperatures ranging from 500°F to 3000°F). Design and construction was completed for approximately one million dollars.

Final Little Bay Inspection Is Held Tuesday

Final inspection of the second phase improvements to the Little Bay project in Rockport took place Tuesday morning, Aug. 25.

Navigation district officials attending were Raymond Owens, chairman of the board; Ted R. Little, vice chairman; and Charles Schindler, secretary of the board.

They were accompanied by Homer C. Innis, vice president of the consulting engineering firm of Lockwood Andrews and Newnam, which had charge of the project; Phil Pacheco, resident engineer; the contractor, Jack Sanders, head of Laguna Construction Co., which did the work, and George Williams, Laguna superintendent.

The contract for the work was let March 18, with the completion date set for Sept. 16. The amount of the contract was $160,987.72.

During the work, approximately 200,000 cubic yards of material was dredged from channels in Little Bay and deposited as an extension of Rockport beach, and as two islands in the bay.

In addition to this, nearly three miles of roads were paved on the fill, giving access to a number of cabanas and rest rooms constructed as part of the project. A little over a mile of 4-inch waterline was laid along the fill, to serve the rest rooms and attached showers, and a storm sewer system was constructed to allow flood waters to enter Little Bay with a minimum of erosion.

At the boat ramps in Little Bay, concrete aprons were installed to prevent erosion in this area.

Five cabanas were built at Fulton; fifteen were constructed at Rockport. Three rest rooms were constructed along Rockport beach and an additional one was built at Fulton.

The work was financed by part of a $400,000 bond issue voted in 1963.

Editorial

A possible solution for some of the woes that beset the local fire departments might be reached if this community would follow the example of Burnett, up in Central Texas.

There the Volunteer Fire Department support comes from a number of sources, but the principal one is a voluntary tax levied by the property owners themselves.

Each year, each property owner is billed for $5 by the secretary of the fire department, and each year each property owner pays this assessment, with the money going into the fire department's operating fund.

In addition to this, twice a year there is a fire department barbecue, priced at $2 per plate, and all profits from the barbecue go into the pot to keep the fire department going.

It seems entirely probable that this could be done here. The writer of this editorial would have no hesitancy whatever in contributing ten dollars a year to such an organized program, figuring that it was cheap enough.

If everyone else in the community did the same thing, on an annual basis, many of the woes that have been visited upon the local department could be cured.

An organization could be set up to handle this, with responsible people either appointed or elected, and it would furnish an excellent source of funds that might be used to quiet some of the community's internecine bickering. People in Rockport could contribute to the Rockport Department; people in Fulton could contribute to Fulton; and people in Lamar could contribute to Lamar. Territories could be drawn on the county map, delineating those area that should make contributions to each of the departments.

It seems that some scheme as this is about the only manner in which the necessary money can be obtained. The city says it is straining at the seams to furnish all the funds it can to support the department, and this is undoubtedly so, as it has a number of other places that it must and should spend money. Not all city funds can go to the fire department, desirable as some people might consider this course of action.

The county is in the same fix; not all county funds can or should be spent on the fire departments of Rockport, Fulton and Lamar. It's just not possible, and it's time some constructive thinking was done and the squabbling stopped.

Arguments like the one Monday night at the City Hall and the ones that will certainly take place tonight at the Council meeting and next Monday at the Commissioners Court lead nowhere but to hard feelings. They don't accomplish much of anything, and out of all of them there have been few constructive ideas involved.

The Burnett plan might be a solution. Certainly we pay a lot more insurance yearly with a lot less fuss. Ten dollars a year seems little enough, considering what we get for it.

Local Shipyard Has Contracts For 12 Big Boats

Rockport Yacht and Supply has just signed contracts for nearly $1,000,000 worth of big steel and wooden hulled shrimpers, to be used in the waters off South America and Texas.

Ten of them are 72-foot, steel-hulled boats, powered with D 343 Caterpillar Diesels, and will fish off the South American coast; two are wooden-hulled, and will be used in Texas and adjacent waters.

Albert Silchenstedt, manager of the boat building firm, which is a subsidiary of Luling Oil and Gas Co., owner by T. Noah Smith, Jr., of San Antonio, said that four of the steel boats were now in various stages of construction at the yard.

"One of them can be made ready for sea in comparatively short order," he said, "as soon as we get some details cleared up on equipment; another one is on the outside ways being painted; a third is in the shed, getting deckhouse and superstructure; and the plating is now being put on the fourth."

The boats will be delivered at a one-month clip to a firm which will use them for shrimping, possibly off Surinam, or in Venezuelan waters.

These are 72 feet long, built on the modification of a Bering Sea hull developed by Silchenstedt, and first used here a couple of years ago for

City Council Session Is Heated, Still No Solution

The public hearing on Rockport's proposed city budget was one of the longest and liveliest sessions held by the City Council in many months, as citizens came to the meeting with complaints on waterlines, dogs, and drainage, and remained to argue about disposition of the general funds in the budget.

Biggest bone of contention was the fire department and the fire marshal, and at one time Elva Mullinax, assistant fire marshal, laid his badge on the table and quit, while Carl Osborn, fire marshal, tendered his resignation in a letter and Dick Fox told the council that the entire fire department might quit unless they got enough money to operate on.

After that, the discussion became heated, with anywhere from one to half a dozen talking at once.

Although the tentative budget presented for approval allowed $2,000 as the city's annual payment for fire services, which was $500 more than last year, fire chief Coy Truelove told the council that actual figures for last year's operation showed that the department had spent $3,200, and he asked for relief. It was at this point that Fox told councilmen that firemen were tired of trying to operate a fire department without money, and that it was possible if some extra funds weren't available, all of the firemen would quit.

This argument was overlain and embroidered with a hassle about the fire marshals.

The two marshals, Osborn as chief, and Mullinax as assistant—are paid by the city, and some time ago Mullinax appeared before the council asking for an increase in the appropriation for marshals from $175 per year for both of them to $900 per year for both, or about $37.50 per month each. At that time, the question was tabled until the budget could be prepared. Last night, Mullinax objected forcefully to the new budget in which no raise was included, and said that he could not continue as assistant marshal without more money.

It was at this point that he laid his badge on the council table, although, he said, he would continue to act as assistant marshal until another one could be found. Osborn didn't turn in his badge, but he immediately tendered his resignation in an already prepared letter.

Truelove then reported on the need for new hose, which will be needed.

Present and supporting the fire department were Bill Hottle, owner of Balboa Courts, V. A. Dulye, owner

Nav. District Protests Sale Of Tatton Ranch

A third governmental agency has joined in protesting acquisition of the Tatton Ranch lands by the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service for additional acreage in the Aransas Wildlife Refuge, winter home of America's last flock of whooping cranes.

The Aransas County Navigation District, in a letter signed by Raymond Owens, chairman, and sent to Congressman John Young, Senators John Tower and Ralph Yarborough, and officials of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, joined the Commissioners Court and the School Board in their protests.

Owens' letter said:

"We wish to register a strong protest against government acquisition of the 32,500-acre Tatton Ranch land in the county for addition to the Aransas Wildlife Refuge.

"In 1963, a $400,000 bond issue was voted for the making of other and further improvements to the navigation facilities' of the Navigation District, 'including improvements and additions at Fulton Harbor, Cove Harbor, and Little Bay development.' This bond issue was predicated upon assessed valuations of Aransas County. There are also bond issues outstanding totaling $155,000 for Aransas County proper, and $780,000 for Aransas County Independent School District.

"Despite the fact that not a penny of Federal funds has been spent in this county; despite the fact that the Aransas Wildlife Refuge already has 47,000 acres of this county removed from the tax rolls; we have always met our bonded obligations and are proud of the rating we enjoy from the bonding companies.

"It seems unjust, therefore, to penalize this small county by adding what we deem is an unnecessary additional acreage to a wildlife refuge is adequate for the purpose intended."

BLISTER IS
OF ACHILLES HEEL

Austin—A blister could well be called the modern version of the mythical Achilles heel.
Much as Achilles—the Greek ideal of youth, strength, beauty and valor, was fatally wounded by an arrow piercing his vulnerable heel, a tiny blister can spoil a game of golf or tennis or even a whole vacation.

The blister merits closer attention than we usually grant it. And the admonitions which apply to our athletes also are sound tips for the millions of weekend and vacation athletes.

A blister is caused by pressure and friction on a localized area of the skin. Fluid collects between the inner and outer layers of skin. If pressure is continued, it hurts. Even if no infection follows, the pain can cause a limp that isn't much fun for the golfer or hiker, and it can upset the customary grip on a tennis racket, golf club, oar or canoe paddle.

The best approach to blis-ters, as to disease, is prevention. Proper fitting shoes are fundamental. There should be room beyond the big toe, room across the top, fitting of the ball of the foot into the widest part of the shoe with no slipping of the heel.

Wearing two pairs of socks, a lightweight pair under sweat socks, is recommended for athletes. Hands can be protected by taping or by special sports gloves.

A decision on whether or not to puncture a blister is based on location, size, and inflammation. If there are signs of inflammation or irritation, medical attention is indicated. Sometimes it is advisable to puncture a blister before it breaks from friction.

Wash the area with soap and water and sterilize with alcohol. The puncture is made with a sharp needle held in a forceps (small pliers) and sterilized in a flame. The puncture is made at the side of the blister and the outer skin layer is left in place as a protective cover.

Attention to cleanliness in dealing with blisters cannot be overstressed. Infected blisters require prompt medical attention, as do the occasional blisters from severe sunburn or other burn causes.

But with proper prevention and forethought you can keep your "Achilles heel" from spoiling your fun or vacation.

Snapper Fishing Easier Says Ex-Shrimp "Pirate"

It's easier to take sports fishermen to the snapper banks than it was to dodge Mexican gunboats as a shrimp-er, according to Bill Sheppard, ex-Georgian, now operating two 65-footers that make regular trips to the banks from Aransas Pass and Port Aransas.

Sheppard, who rose from a Florida deckhand to owner of four Louisiana shrimp boats started going to Campeche in 1948. "Shrimping was still good here," he said, "but we figured it would be better there, and it was."

Mexicans didn't like the boats. Mexican fishermen weren't doing anything about the shrimp that swarmed in their waters, but when U.S. boats began fishing the high seas off Yucatan, "shrimp pirates" were among the more polite names applied to them. Mexican newspapers screamed about the northern invasion, and Mexican gunboats chased the shrimpers, impounding them and their catches, while Mexican courts levied confiscatory fines against the owners.

All this is more or less past now, but Sheppard remembers the days when Mexican gunboats were a real problem. Nevertheless, despite all the row, the risks were worth it. "I used to make from $15,000 to $25,000 a year, just fishing six months," Sheppard said. "It's only 72 hours to Campeche, and in those days we used to be able to get 12,000 to 18,000 pounds of shrimp in eight or ten days. The best I ever did was 17,700 pounds in eight days."

Sheppard couldn't outrun the gunboats, so he outsmarted them. They usually raided at night, and he stayed in the middle of the shrimp fleet, in anticipation of the raids. Whenever the gunboats busted up the fleet, he said, most shrimpers would head off short, which was what the Mexican captains expected, and they would start after the fishermen.

However, the gunboats weren't equipped with radar then, so Sheppard dodged them by turning off his lights until they went by. Then he would head close inshore, where none of them were looking for shrimpers, and would stay close to the coast until the gunboats left the area.

However, shrimp began to play out in the Campeche area, just as they had in Florida, Louisiana and off the Texas coast, so Sheppard started looking for an easier way to make a living. Or if it wasn't easier, a safer method to pay his bills, where there were no Mexican gunboats to complicate the picture.

He figured out that sports fishermen were ready, able and willing to pay him important money to take them to the snapper banks in this area. Besides that, he didn't have to go to all the trouble of catching, processing and marketing his catch.

Snapper fishing for sport is a relatively new business in this area, but his first boat, the Emily, soon began to carry about all the fishermen it could accommodate comfortably. Sheppard started his snapper fishing venture in 1960; three years later he launched another 65-footer, the Janice. The boats are named after his daughters. And, despite some hard luck, the ex-shrimp pirate is contemplating the day when he will need a third and a fourth boat. One of these days, he'll probably be the snapper king of Aransas Pass.

Mr. and Mrs. Milton Harrel and Sue, and Mr. and Mrs. Lynwood Eller and Dewain have just returned from ten days spent in Denver and at Mesa Verde National Park.

Mrs. Marvin Brunson was released from Ewing Memorial Hospital, Sinton, last week, and is convalescing nicely at her home.

Dr. and Mrs. Gerald Hamilton and family, of Indiana, are visiting Dr. Hamilton's sister, Miss Lorna Hamilton, this week.

Hunting and Fishing Here Are The Best

Two Houston men knocked off work at 5 p.m. and three hours and a half later were checking in at a local motel.

Next morning at 5:30 they grabbed a cup of coffee and a hearty breakfast and by nine o'clock they had their limit; four fat and sassy pin-tails that had just arrived from Canada.

"What do we do now?" asked one. "It's no use in going after geese this late."

"Bring your rods," the guide said, "and we'll see if we can't stir up a red or two."

By the time for the afternoon goose flight they had a string of trout, reds and a couple of oddballs, flounder and sheephead that had given them a good fishing trip.

They they went after the geese and got them, too, a couple of snows, a speckled-belly and one huge Canadian honker.

Sounds like a pipe dream, doesn't it? But it can and does happen around Rockport where there's duck and goose shooting and boating all through the fall, and fishing practically every day of the year.

And fishing, probably more than anything else, brings visitors and newcomers to choice bait dunking spots and induces them to buy property and settle here when they retire.

Surf fishermen find beaches near here unmatched—without exception, anywhere in America. Fishing is often as good as the beaches, with anglers getting mackerel, redfish, trout, whiting, snook, tarpon and a conglomeration of other sports fish.

Gulf of Mexico fishermen who want to run out from Rockport and get in some deepsea fishing can catch mackerel, kings, ling, sailfish, marlin and half a dozen other speedsters of the sea.

For the common or pot-licker variety of fishermen, there are three fare boats operating out of Rockport, Fulton and Lamar, and there are any number of smaller charter boats available, if you want to spend a little more money.

Any way a fisherman likes to fish, he can find a suitable spot. There are miles of shore line for waders; private and public piers, boat livers and fare boats, with which to explore the 300,000 acres of bays and the limitless Gulf.

Hunting, because there is mainly just duck hunting on public property, is something else, but even that is done in a big way every fall. There are two swank hunting clubs for members only.

Other spots cater to the casual hunter, and lots of public water that residents use to build their own duck blinds. Hunters along Copano, Aransas, St. Charles, Redfish, Mesquite and San Antonio bays have some of the finest duck shooting in America, and the goose hunters around Austwell-Tivoli, just a few miles north get into large concentrations of three or four different kinds of geese.

And on private farms and ranches a short drive in any direction, there are doves, deer, quail, turkey, javalinas, rabbits, squirrels, or just about any thing else a man wants to hunt. There is even an occasional bobcat, coyote, wolf, or ocelot, just to keep things interesting.

Mr. and Mrs. Grant Thomson and son Mike, are spending their vacation at their summer home in Rockport on N. Wood Street. A daughter, Mrs. Carol Sue Tarver, and her children are visiting them this week.

Ernest Henry Camehl, Mike Thomson and friend of Dallas, spent the weekend in Mexico.

Pretty Enough To Paint, Rockport Attracts Visitors

Here is a city and its environs that are pretty enough to paint—and many artists do. Nestled amid live oak trees, bent with the wind, Rockport is a painter's delight, just as it is also the delight of fishermen, duck hunters, retired persons and anyone else that likes gracious living with some of the finest hunting and fishing in America at their front door.

For that reason, the largest art colony in Texas is located here, with South Texas' only art gallery, and there are charter boats, hunting clubs, guides and fare boats galore.

Rockport boasts more summer and winter homes than anywhere along the coast, but the building boom continues. Retired people, summer vacationers, and people from the surrounding area move to this little seaside city and build their homes, drawn by the smooth, blue bays, sandy beaches, and leisurely days punctuated with fishing, water sports, hunting, beachcombing and sitting in the sun.

An index of the area's population is the rise and fall of population figures. The winter-time population of Live Oak Peninsula, on which Rockport is situated, is around 6,000 people, although this is continually growing as people who have been winter and summer visitors for years move here after they retire. But in mid-summer the total swells to double that or more, as water, sand and sun bring the people.

Fine yacht basins dot the area for boating and fishing enthusiasts; there are many marinas. The beach at Rockport is the envy of surrounding towns like Corpus Christi, and Little Bay, in downtown Rockport, has just been made into one of the finest water skiing spots anywhere on the Texas coast. Deep channels, protected by islands keep the water smooth in any sort of weather, with the result that there's never a bad day for those who like this sport.

North of Rockport is Goose Island State Park on Lamar Peninsula, home of one of the largest, oldest oak trees in the world. The Big Tree, as it is called, measures over 32 feet in diameter and its age is estimated at between 2,000 and 3,000 years.

Across St. Charles Bay from Goose Island Park is Aransas Wildlife Refuge, known throughout the world as the winter home of America's last flock of whooping cranes. Over 300 species of birds have been recorded from the Refuge and white-tailed deer, javalina, raccoons and wild turkeys are also present in abundance.

Live Oak Peninsula, nationally-famous birdwoman, Mrs. Connie Hagar has recorded nearly 500 species of birds, and bird watchers and ornithologists who have had chances to see many other places in the world come to Rockport when they retire, to study the bird life.

Other local attractions include the shrimp fleet, so picturesque it is the delight of every artist and camera man's eye; the Marine Aquarium of the Texas Parks and Wildlife Commission on Rockport Harbor; a number of old homes, including the stately old Fulton mansion built in the past century by the cousin of the steamboat inventor; and the Mother House and Chapel of the Schoenstatt Sisters of Mary on Lamar Peninsula.

HIGHWAY TAX ON TRUCKS AND BUSES DUE BY AUGUST 31

Highway vehicle owners or operators must pay by Aug. 31, 1964, the Federal Use Tax on motor vehicles used on the public highways, says the Internal Revenue Service.

This tax applies to most trucks and buses in operation in July of this year and covers the tax year beginning July 1. IRS Form 2290, used to file the truck and/or bus return, gives a handy tax computation schedule. Taxable vehicles range all the way from two-axled trucks or four-axled truck - tractor combinations. The Government advises all truck and bus owners to closely read Form 2290 and see if they must pay this tax.

Besides the August 21 filing date, truck and bus owners should also remember that any additional vehicles acquired after they have filed their 1964 return are subject to the highway use tax this year. In these cases, a tax return must be filed by the last day of the month following the month the vehicle was put into operation.

Forms 2290, and a helpful booklet, Publication No. 349, are available free of charge at IRS offices.

MISS AZALEA SHIVERS BECOMES BRIDE OF MR. FREDERICK BUTLER

Miss Rutha Azalea Shivers became the bride of Frederick Morgan Butler III on Saturday morning, Aug. 22, at Sacred Heart Church in Rockport, with the Right Reverend J. W. Hennel officiating at the nuptial mass.

The altar was arranged with tall candles and vases of gladioli and chrysanthemums.

The bride is the daughter of Sheriff Virginia Shivers and the late Sheriff A. C. Shivers. Parents of the groom are Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Morgan Butler, Jr., of Gainesville, Fla.

The bride chose a formal length gown of white silk organza over taffeta. A Sabrina neckline and three-quarter length sleeves styled the French bodice. The controlled skirt featured frog braid detailing at the sides and back fullness extending into a chapel train.

Her veil of illusion was held by a peau de soie rose trimmed in seed pearls. She carried a cascade bouquet of white roses and English ivy centered with an orchid.

Miss Julia Fox was maid of honor; matron of honor was Mrs. Thomas Scott Schmitt, of Austin, sister of the bride. The attendants wore street length sheaths of pale blue chiffon over taffeta. Darker blue satin cummerbunds formed soft bows with skirt-length streamers. Their large-brimmed picture hats were of matching blue horsehair, trimmed with satin bows and streamers. They carried nosegays of pink roses.

Mother of the bride wore a sheath of beige embossed cotton with matching accessories. Her hat was of blue and her corsage of pink roses.

Serving as best man was Thomas Petrilli. Groomsman was Thomas Scott Schmitt of Austin.

Ushers were N. F. Jackson, Jr., and Dan Cathey.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Woman's Club Building. The bride's table, laid with white tulle over taffeta, was centered by a silver epergne filled with white gladioli and roses. Antique silver candelabra, holding tall white tapers, flanked the arrangement.

Members of the house party were Misses Niki Dick, Janice Garrett, Nan Jackson, Tamara Camehl Becky Rouquette, and Roseann Cabaniss of Rockport; Miss Nancy Hines of Houston; and Miss Rutha Daniels of Woodville;

Also Mrs. Wayne Ahr of Houston; Mrs. Thomas Petrilli, Mrs. Dennis McCabe, Mrs. Henry Homburg, Mrs. A. R. Curry, Mrs. W. F. Close, Mrs. Kay Bergel and Mrs. Weldon Cabaniss, of Rockport.

For her going-away suit, the bride wore a golden tweed ensemble, with the coat featuring a tuxedo collar of black velvet. The soft blouse was accented with ruffles in a deep décolletage and ruffles on the sleeves.

After a wedding trip to Six Flags, the couple will make their home in Wagner, South Dakota, where the groom is stationed at Pickston Air Force Base.

The bride is a graduate of Aransas County High School. The groom was graduated from Hudson Falls Central High School, Hudson Falls, New York.

Mr. and Mrs. James Lathrop of Little Rock, Ark., Mrs. Eva Little of Goodwell, Okla., Mr. and Mrs. John Berry, and Mr. and Mrs. Sam Lowe, George and David of Corpus Christi, were house guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ted Little last week.

THRIFT

Prices of most things being what they are nowadays, most of us could well practice a little old fashioned thrift. And there's no better place to start than with those many home services that natural gas does so much better and cheaper.

Did you know that you can cook with natural gas for 87% less than the other way? Gas water heating costs 71.4% less and gas clothes drying 76% less.

And Rockport area folks get some of the lowest gas rates in South Texas—rates that have never gone up in the 16 years Aransas Natural has served you.

Aransas Pass, Port Aransas, Beckon Fishermen

Aransas Pass, shrimping capital of the Coastal Bend, and Port Aransas, a unique island city, lie at opposite ends of a seven-mile long causeway.

Boasting a shrimping fleet of several hundred vessels, Aransas Pass is the gateway to varied attractions for the outdoorsman and vacationer along the Texas coast.

The city, less than 10 miles from the Gulf of Mexico, lies in the center of some of the finest bay fishing in Texas, and an ideal spot for the amateur ornithologist or just plain bird watchers.

Herons, egrets, gulls, and thousands of wading birds fish or hunt their dinners on the sand flats along the causeway and around the edges of Conn Brown Harbor, home of the shrimping fleet.

The harbor, like others along the coast, is also an excellent cold weather fishing spot when trout and redfish seek its deep water to escape from the cold.

Once each year, Aransas Pass pays homage to the shrimping industry with its annual Shrimp-o-ree which, this year is set for July 10-12 and will include street dances, parades, shrimp boils, crab races and waterfront events.

At the other end of the causeway and a short but interesting ferry ride across the Port Aransas-Corpus Christi Waterway, lies Port Aransas, on the northern tip of Mustang Island, alongside the pass to the Gulf of Mexico from which it takes its name.

Port Aransas is an island city in all that the name implies, and, although, almost wrecked a couple of years ago when Carla struck, it has recovered nicely and in summer swarms with tourists and vacationers.

The beaches on Mustang Island are among the finest in the world, and stretch for mile on golden mile, an invitation to the beach comber, swimmer, picnicker, or casual wanderer who wants to camp.

Horace Caldwell Pier was completely rebuilt after being destroyed by Hurricane Carla, and extends for 1400 feet into the Gulf of Mexico, providing free fishing around the clock, while the charter boat fleet caters to those who want to fish offshore for tarpon, sail, kingfish, ling or marlin.

Booming developments of summer homes, a Venetian-type subdivision or two, a fine municipal small boat basin and comfortable hotel and motel accommodations are at-a boat delivered to a Brownsville firm. More recently four slightly smaller ones of this type were built for a Japanese firm.

"Their twenty-foot beam and eight-foot draft, with double-chine construction makes them exceptionally seaworthy," the Rockport Yacht and Supply manager said. "They are seaworthy, strongly built, and capable of dragging or running when a lot of boats are just jogging along."

"By using a 6:1 reduction and reversing gear, we can swing a 64-inch by 46-inch Coolidge Pacific style propeller, and this allows a shrimper to drag two 65-foot nets, with 10-foot by 40-inch doors. These boats have pulled excess of 8,200 pounds on a dynamometer test."

The boats have been built for long trips at sea, and carry 11,000 gallons of fuel, 1,200 gallons of water, and 50,000 pounds of ice. Eleven feet deep at midships, the hold is insulated with six inches of styrofoam, covered with permalite, which allows the boats to go far and stay long when shrimp are running.

Light plants are two KW Diesels; mast and outriggers measure 34 feet in length; the deck house has berths for five crew members beside the captain.

The boats are also equipped with all the modern electronic gear to make navigation safer and easier. All of them have radar, fathometers, direction finders and automatic pilots.

"While we're building these ten steel boats and the two wooden ones for shrimpers," the shipyard manager said, "with only a little modification they could be used for seismograph boats, or they would make good, comfortable yachts."

The wooden boats of which he speaks are of the same pattern the yard has previously built for John R. Hardee II at Brownsville. These were the Marlin and Tarpon, and one of these boats now on the ways will also go to Hardee.

Like the steel hulls, they are 72 feet long. The keels are 12x18 inch long leaf pine, while the frame are 4x12 inch long leaf pine. Decks are of 2-inch long leaf pine, while the planking is of 2-inch Spanish cedar. They were designed by William Garden.

CITY COUNCIL SESSION—

of Tropics Motel, C. L. Thomas, retired resident of Shadyside, and a number of others.

Hottle had originally arrived at the Council meeting with complaints that a neighbor's dog had bitten a number of his guests as well as children and others in the area, and asked that the Council take action in the matter, which it did. Police Chief Bob Hewes was directed to tell the dog's owner, that he must either get rid of the dog or that it would be done by the police.

C. L. Thomas had appeared to complain about drainage problems in the Shadyside area; V. A. Dullye had a number of complaints.

All three stayed and took part in the budget hearing, as did Ray Longino, James Hunt, and three or four others, and at one time, when the council discussed adjourning without setting a budget, Dullye threatened litigation, presumably because of such action.

Upshot of the whole row was that councilmen went over their figures once more, and attempted to reach a compromise. Osborn had told the council that he thought $25 a month would be enough to defray the fire marshal's expenses, and so the council took $600 from the money allocated to Civil Defense and put it in the fire department budget to allow the marshals $25 per month each. Once more Mullinax objected, this time from the standpoint that it shouldn't be in the fire department budget, and that this wasn't the $900 he had asked for originally. Mrs. Segler, city secretary, told Mullinax the reason the money was listed under fire department headings was a book-keeping matter, and that whatever salary was paid the fire marshals had to be listed that way because the city auditor had so directed.

The fire department itself got practically everything it asked for, as $575 was reallocated from money set aside for a zoning survey, and this, with the $175 originally allotted for fire marshal's salaries, added up to the $750 or so needed for new hose. So, in the end, the fire budget wound up with $2750 in the annual payment (up $1250 from last year), $625 for phones, light, water, etc., at the fire station and for members of the department; $600 for the fire marshal and his assistant (although as of now it is extremely doubtful whether anyone knows for sure where there are any fire marshals); $450 to defray expenses and salaries of the firemen annually sent to the short course at A&M, and $550 for maintenance of the fire house.

It was pointed out with great vehemence by a number of those present, that members of the commissioners court had not seen fit to raise the annual donation to the Aransas County Emergency Corps, and that since Lamar Fire Department was formed, the previous appropriation for this had to be split three ways, instead of two, thus leaving less money from that source for the Fulton and Rockport fire departments. City councilmen were asked to set up a joint meeting with the commissioners to see if more money could be obtained from the county.

Interwoven with this portion of the argument were statements from various people present regarding the use of the Rockport fire equipment outside the city limits. One councilman made the statement that 75 per cent of the equipment was outside city limits, and that much of the damage to engines and trucks came from the rough ground which they had to negotiate. Despite this, he said, the city bore most of the cost of operating this equipment.

By this time it was around midnight, and when Councilman Norvell Jackson asked that this part of the budget be approved in amended form, the vote was two and two—Jackson and Maley for, and Harrist and Garrett against. The vote, City Attorney Hatch said, could not be broken by the mayor, as legal decisions said that a two-thirds majority of the councilmen must approve the figures.

While this was going on, a number of those who attended the meeting were holding a sort of rump convention in that part of the City Hall usually occupied by Mrs. Jim Adams, the water clerk, and this group was all cocked and primed when the council, despairing of reaching any agreement on the fire department question, turned to consideration of the police department which, indirectly, had done much to heat up the whole fire department hassle.

This year, councilmen, or most of them, had increased this to $15,550.

One of the questions asked was why a new car was listed at $3,000, and the explanation was that the car actually cost about $2,000, but that added equipment, including radio, raised the cost to the amount listed.

Interjected into this part of the night-long hassle were all sorts of questions as to why we needed another patrolman at all; who that patrolman would be; why the night watchman paid by the merchants couldn't act as a patrolman if the city raised his $40 a month salary; and a whole string of others, some of them pertinent to the argument and others not.

V. A. Dullye, at several times during the night, brought up the subject of the city's need for water and quoted some figures, as to water usage. He was apprized of the fact that the state inspector had just paid Rockport a visit, and had reported that water flow, at least through those city mains that had been tested, was higher than it had been in some time.

Along about 1:30, despairing of getting anywhere, the council was discussing adjournment, and this was when Dullye threatened litigation.

An uneasy peace descended upon the assemblage finally, when City Attorney Richard Hatch, concerned with the legality of adjournment, advised that the hearing be recessed. Councilman Maley then moved that the meeting be recessed until 4:30 p.m., Thursday, August 27, when the council would meet once more in an effort to satisfy everybody.

Mr. and Mrs. Leo McKeen of Hastings, Neb., are staying in Rockport this week. They are here to attend the wedding of their son Richard L. McKeen and Miss Mary Ann Barber, on Saturday, Aug. 29, in the First Baptist Church.

Mrs. Fred Harvey of Baytown is visiting her mother, Mrs. Ed Ballou.
