Jetliner crashes

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. — A United jetliner with 25 people on board crashed in flames as it approached the Colorado Springs airport early Sunday. There were apparently no survivors, authorities said. "We can't even find a chair," said El Paso County Sheriff Bernie Barry. "There's not a great deal of that airplane left." United Flight 585 en route from Denver crashed at 9:55 a.m. four to five miles south of the airport, the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington said. There were 20 passengers on board and a crew of five. The plane narrowly missed houses and apartment buildings; at least one person on the ground was injured.

Cyanide link

SEATTLE — Two deaths and an illness may be linked to cyanide-laced Sudafed capsules, leading the decongestant's maker to issue a nationwide recall Sunday, officials said. "Consumers should avoid taking Sudafed 12-Hour Capsules and return all Sudafed 12-Hour Capsules to the store from which they purchased the product," said Burroughs Wellcome Co. of Research Triangle Park, N.C. Washington state and federal officials ordered a recall of the capsules from two counties in western Washington late Saturday.

Murray dies

HONOLULU — Arthur Murray, the world's best known dance teacher who founded a string of 500 dance schools, died Sunday at his home after a bout with pneumonia. He was 95. A nurse was with Murray when he died at 4 a.m., said Murray's wife, Kathryn. Murray entered Straub Hospital and Clinic last month with pneumonia. He was released 10 days ago after a 1½-week stay and Mrs. Murray arranged round-the-clock home nursing care.

Separate majority

Latvians and Estonians voted overwhelmingly for independence from the Soviet Union on Sunday, officials said after counting more than three-quarters of the ballots. In Latvia, nearly complete vote totals showed 77 percent voted in favor of separation and 21 percent against, officials said. In Estonia, 77.8 percent voted for independence, election officials said. Officials had hoped for a strong pro-independence vote so the three Baltic republics could march in step away from the Soviet Union.

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Iraqi military leaders accepted stringent allied terms on Sunday for formally ending the Persian Gulf war, including the prompt return of all prisoners and Kuwaiti civilian detainees, the American commander reported after a two-hour meeting.

"I would say very candidly that the Iraqis came to discuss and to cooperate, with a very positive attitude," the commander, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, said in Safwan, Iraq, where he talked in a tent on a captured airbase with an eight-man delegation sent by Baghdad. If that attitude continued, he added, "we are well on our way to a lasting peace."

Schwarzkopf commented: "I am very happy to tell you that we agreed on all matters."

"It's a historic day," the general said as he arrived at the meeting site, which was ringed by tanks and other armored vehicles, with Apache helicopters overhead, and marksmen in battle dress covering his every move. "I'm here to tell them exactly what we expect them to do."

On Sunday night, Iraq's chief delegate to the United Nations, Abdul Amir Anbari, told reporters in New York that his government already had released 10 prisoners of war as "a gesture of goodwill." He said six Americans were among them, including a woman, presumably Spec. Melissa Rathbun-Nealy, a 20-year-old soldier, from Grand Rapids, Mich., the only known missing woman.

But the Iraqi representative did not say where the 10 were freed, and senior allied officials here said they had not been notified of any release.

American officers said they were astonished that the Iraqi delegates at Safwan had agreed so quickly to allied terms, especially since President Saddam Hussein has always been reluctant to cede authority to anyone to enter into agreements on his behalf.

But they said that they expected no trouble and declared themselves convinced the delegates spoke for the Iraqi leader.

There were reports of violent clashes between supporters and foes of Saddam as vanquished troops continued to strag-

AMMAN, Jordan — Official Iranian and Syrian reports and the accounts of travelers from Iraq on Sunday reinforced Western intelligence assessments that civil commotion and possibly antigovernment unrest in Iraq had spread from the southern city of Basra to a string of other towns in southeastern Iraq.

Reuters quoted travelers arriving at the Iraq-Kuwait border on Sunday as saying that government forces in Basra were facing a Shiite Muslim uprising led by supporters of a Tehran-based cleric and longstanding adversary of President Saddam Hussein, Mohammed Bakr al-Hakim.

HOUSTON — With an estimated $35 million worth of oil going up in smoke every 24 hours in Kuwait, the world's premier oil well firefighters are bracing for the biggest challenge of their lives.

They face an array of perils in the unforgiving desert of Kuwait, including West Texas-style sandstorms, temperatures hot enough to turn sand into glass and wells spewing poisonous hydrogen sulfide gas.

And they must cope with logistical problems ranging from securing huge supplies of water to avoiding deadly land mines that may have been placed around wellheads

Hundreds honor POWs in Bataan Death March

Associated Press

LAS CRUCES, N.M. (AP) — As Americans celebrated the end of one war, military teams trekked 20 miles across the New Mexico desert in an annual race to commemorate a grim episode of World War II, the Bataan Death March.

Just 550 contestants showed up for the fourth annual Memorial Bataan Death March Competition, down from 750 last year. Many who would have come were keeping vigil in the Persian Gulf, where U.S.-led allied commanders were seeking the return of POWs after forcing Iraq out of Kuwait in a six-week war.

For those who made it, Saturday's memorial to an estimated 30,000 allied POWs who died in a forced 90-mile march to a Japanese prison camp in the Philippines in April 1942 seemed particularly apt.

"This year, more than previous years, people realize that, hey, very quickly we can be put in a life or death situation where it's important to know your limitations, know you can put yourself to the test," said 2nd Lt. Michael McGowan of

Attorneys moonlight as night-court judges

By David Morris
Staff Writer

Some of the judges in Midland's Municipal Court are moonlighting — in more ways than one.

Seven Midland attorneys take turns as part-time judges, presiding over the court's night sessions once a week. On Thursdays, the court is open until 7 p.m. in order to accommodate people whose work and school schedules do not allow them to come to court during regular business hours.

A similar program is in place in Odessa, where part-timers preside over weekend arraignments in city court.

In Midland, the visiting judges — they're called associates — are responsible primarily for arraignments, but get to hear an occasional trial.

Robin Smith, the Municipal Court's presiding judge, said the idea is to allow the court's two full-time judges some time off while keeping the court open for business. The associates sometimes are called in to substitute when a full-time judge is out of town, ill or on vacation.

Smithsonian stalks 'nerds' in teen-age clothing survey

By Robert M. Andrews
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — Smithsonian curators are stalking some exotic species of American wildlife — the shaggy, black-breasted "Headbanger," the plain-tufted "Nerd," the lavishly plumed "Preppy" — for future scholars to puzzle over.

These remarkable birds are America's teen-agers, whose strange and sometimes bizarre clothing styles are being documented by fellow high school students at the request of researchers at the National Museum of American History.

Claudia Kidwell, the museum's curator of costumes, believes this first nationwide survey of adolescent fashion tastes will yield important clues about the teen-age subculture of the 1990s.

What scholars of the 21st century will think, heaven only knows. Don't bother asking today's parents, who may have forgotten how their Age of Aquarius peace beads and miniskirts shocked an older generation.

What scholars of the 21st century will think, heaven only knows.

Now, they're similarly baffled when 15-year-old sons suddenly rip holes in the knees of their designer jeans, shave their heads, wear earrings and clomp around in enormous athletic shoes with laces left inexplicably untied.

These sartorial mysteries intrigue Ms. Kidwell, who is convinced that people's clothing historically tells much about their daily lives, their cultural values, gender roles, hopes and fears.

"Driven to the wall, the one thing that's really important for teen-agers is that they have control over their appearance and express their individuality," she said. "For a teen-ager to decide what they are going to

WEATHER SUMMARY

Get out the suntan lotion

Staff Report

Today's forecast is for sunny skies, a high of 85 and southwest winds 10-20 mph, according to the National Weather Service at Midland International Airport.

Tonight is predicted to be fair with a low near 50.

Tuesday is predicted to be partly cloudy with a high of 85, NWS said.

After an overnight low of 32, Sunday's high was 71, compared to the record high for the date of 89, set in 1974. The record low for today's date is 19, set in 1989.

State

Clear skies covered most of Texas late Sunday as an intense low-pressure system drove moisture from the region and ushered in warmer temperatures.

A high-pressure system following behind was creating a dry and stable atmosphere across the Lone Star State, the National Weather Service said.

Only some scattered low-level cloudiness covered the Longview vicinity and the Beaumont-Port Arthur area.

High temperatures ranged from the high 40s in East Texas through 50s and 60s in the north to 80s in the Rio Grande Valley.

The weather service said winds were northerly and northwesterly at 5 to 20 mph, with gusts to around 30 mph at Guadalupe Pass.

Fair skies and much warmer readings were expected Monday, with lows Monday night not as cool as last week. Highs Monday and Tuesday should range from the 70s in North and West Texas to near 90 degrees in the Big Bend.

Skies should also be mostly fair Tuesday. Lows Monday night were expected to range from the 40s to the 50s statewide.

Nation

Severe thunderstorms Sunday wreaked havoc in the Southeast. Northern and central states had high wind, ice and snow.

Thunderstorms spawned tornados that damaged homes and crops and knocked out power in parts of Florida. Gale-force winds topping 60 mph downed trees and power lines and damaged buildings and mobile homes statewide.

In Michigan, freezing rain that iced roads was blamed for two multiple car crashes — each involving up to 50 cars.

Showers and thunderstorms were reported in Florida, Georgia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Alabama, Mississippi, Tennessee, Kentucky and parts of southeast Virginia.

Tornado watches were posted for parts of Georgia, Florida, North Carolina, South Carolina and Virginia.

Flash flood watches were posted in parts of Tennessee, Kentucky, Maryland, Virginia, Pennsylvania and New York state.

Heavier rainfall for the six-hour period ending at 12 p.m. CST included 1.75 inches in Charlotte, N.C., 1.4 inches in Tampa, Fla., and 1.3 inches in Columbia, S.C.

TALKS: 'It's a historic day'

gle back into southern Iraq. Tehran radio quoted refugees as saying there had been "serious clashes" in the cities of Basra, Kut, Nasiriya, and Amara. Officials in Jordan and Syria also reported such incidents.

Iraqis who described themselves as Shiite fundamentalists opposed to Saddam, a Sunni Muslim, told reporters near Safwan that they had been fighting loyalist troops in Basra for more than 36 hours. They said they had seized control of police stations and party offices and opened jails.

In Baghdad, official broadcasts failed to mention the truce talks, focusing instead on plans to reopen public schools, restore electrical power during nighttime hours, and resume television programs. Baghdad radio said that Saddam had presided late Saturday night at a meeting to discuss such efforts — his first known activity since the cease-fire.

A thunderous explosion shook the Iraqi capital on Sunday afternoon, reports from Baghdad said, lifting a mushroom-shaped column of smoke visible 15 miles away. It was apparently an accidental detonation of a bomb.

The words "surrender" and "capitulation" were sedulously avoided by the coalition forces in describing Sunday's session with the Iraqis, led by two lieutenant generals, but that was what the meeting amounted to. According to allied officials, the Iraqis seemed quite prepared to concede defeat, in contrast to assertions by political leaders in Baghdad of a moral victory.

A witness to the meeting said that Schwarzkopf had been "stern, blunt, and correct." He told the commander of American troops at the desert airbase he wanted no photographs of the Iraqis being searched and no other embarrassments or humiliations. The troops came from the 1st Infantry Division, the Big Red One, one of the most storied American units.

Schwarzkopf said in a brief statement after the meeting, held about three miles north of the Kuwaiti border, that the Iraqis had agreed to allied demands on prisoners of war, including a "symbolic release" of a few prisoners almost immediately, as well as requests for charts of minefields on land and in the gulf and the delineation of zones of influence to prevent accidental clashes.

"We have also made it very clear," the general told reporters, "that upon the signing of a cease-fire, but not before, all coalition forces will be drawn back from Iraqi territory that we currently occupy."

Schwarzkopf said a second truce meeting might not be needed.

A more cautious tone was struck by Andreas Wigger, the chief representative in Iraq of the International Committee of the Red Cross, which Schwarzkopf said would handle the prisoner exchange. He said Baghdad had told the Red Cross that it was ready for an exchange, but had declined to say how many captives it was holding or to identify them by name, as is required by the Geneva Convention on treatment of war prisoners.

However, Werner Kaspar, a Red Cross official in Amman, said "we are positive that very quickly now we will have access" to the prisoners.

He said at a news conference that according to standard Red Cross procedure, the Red Cross would ask prisoners held in Saudi Arabia, many of whom have said that they were fearful about reprisals, whether they wanted to return home. "We will abide by their wishes," Kaspar stated.

However, Brig. Gen. Richard I. Neal, the spokesman for the American military command, said that there had been no decision by his headquarters in Riyadh, the Saudi capital, about what to do with prisoners who did not wish to be repatriated. The question is a delicate one, because if Iraqis are not handed over, Baghdad might retaliate by holding back allied prisoners.

Iraq is known to have held nine Americans, two Britons, one Italian, and one Kuwaiti, although unconfirmed reports on Saturday said that the Britons had died after undergoing torture. In addition, there are 66 allied servicemen missing, including 45 Americans.

FIRES: 571 Kuwaiti oil wells are ablaze

by Iraqi forces.

Kuwaiti officials say 571 wells are ablaze in Kuwait — at least 50 times the number that firefighters have ever fought before at any one time.

"This is what you call the Super Bowl of firefighting," said Joe Carpenter, a welder and firefighter for the Houston firm of Boots & Coots.

Others agreed.

"Fighting fires is kind of like bananas — they come in bunches. But this is the biggest bunch of bananas I've ever seen," said T.B. O'Brien, president of O'Brien, Goins & Simpson, an oilfield drilling and engineering firm that will coordinate the efforts of four firefighting teams.

Three of those teams are from Houston — Boots & Coots, Wild Well Control and the firefighting outfit of the legendary Red Adair. A fourth firm, Safety Boss, is a Canadian company based in Calgary, Alberta.

COOTS MATTHEWS, 67, co-owner of Boots & Coots and a 41-year veteran of oil well firefighting, said he's never seen the likes of the Kuwaiti well fires — or anything remotely close.

"In the past, you've had no more than eight to 10 oil well fires going on in the world at any one time," he said.

O'Brien guesses that perhaps 2 million barrels of oil a day literally are going up in smoke — an amount exceeding the crude production in all of Texas.

At today's market prices for Middle East oil, that's more than $35 million worth of black gold burning each day.

In addition, the crude is producing thick, greasy clouds of black smoke that pose the threat of enormous ecological devastation. The clouds have turned daylight into dusk in Kuwait and have caused sooty rains as far away as Turkey. A California firm has calculated that the fires are spewing 765,000 tons of soot into the atmosphere each day.

U.S. officials say the well fires were set by Iraqi forces engaging in a scorched-earth policy as they fled Kuwait. Squelching the fires and restoring oilfield production is a top priority of Kuwait, a tiny emirate that became one of the world's richest nations after oil was discovered there in 1938.

O'Brien estimated that the job of killing the fires and restoring the wells to production will take two years and will require an expenditure of $5 billion by the Kuwaitis.

THOUGH THE firefighting crews will consist of small teams of four to six people, the total work force involved in the effort could reach as high as 1,500, O'Brien said.

To battle the blazes, the firefighting teams will rely on tactics ranging from setting off explosives to drilling relief wells that may have to be punched nearly three miles into the ground.

Custom-built pumps will continually spray huge volumes of water onto the firefighters and their equipment to keep them cooled down. A single pump can spout 5,000 gallons of water per minute.

Firefighters will wear cotton coveralls on top of fire-resistant, long-handle underwear similar to that worn by race car drivers. The Red Adair team will wear the red coveralls it has made famous in firefighting efforts worldwide. The Boots & Coots team will opt for white coveralls that reflect the sun. Wild Well Control will deck out in yellow.

The three firms plan to take part in a helicopter survey of the oilfields this week. But they don't expect to begin fighting the well fires for a month or more, until after U.S. military teams have scoured the oilfields for land mines and booby traps that could cost firefighters their lives.

But the firefighters aren't convinced that all the dangers will be eliminated. Matthews said he fears that some mines could be placed so close to blazing wellheads that the tremendous heat of the fires will prevent the military teams from getting close enough to remove them.

SOME KUWAITI WELLS — an estimated 30 to 40 near the Iraqi border — also emit hydrogen sulfide, a poison gas that can kill as quickly as a cruise missile.

"One breath of it deadens all your senses," Matthews said. "The second breath kills you. ... It's the most dangerous thing in the oilfield."

In some cases, firefighters may have to don masks and use portable air-supply equipment to avoid casualties from the poison gas, said Jim Leabo, vice president of operations for Wild Well Control.

BATAAN: 30,000 POWs said to have died

(From 1A)

the 1st Air Defense Artillery at Fort Hood, Texas.

"Today it's just for fun, next week it could be for real," he said. "I think the war does put a little bit more of a serious nature to it."

The New Mexico Army Reserve Officer Training Corps at New Mexico State University invites military units from around the country to compete. The trek through desert scrub over snaking mountainous trails goes from the university campus to a park at Aguirre Springs by the Organ Mountains east of Las Cruces.

"I thought they wouldn't have this this year and I'm glad they did," said Don Harris, a Bataan survivor. "I think it's pretty important, more than any other time. I think about the POWs over there and what I went through and I certainly wouldn't want them to do anything like I had to do for 3½ years."

Harris was one of an estimated 75,000 Americans and Filipinos who surrendered to the Japanese army when it attacked the Bataan Peninsula west of Manila Bay. One-third of those who died in the march were Americans.

Harris, an artilleryman, was eating lunch when the Japanese bombed Clark Air Field in Manila. "It was one of the worst days I've seen in my life. I've never seen so much destruction and death," he said.

Allied troops retreated to the peninsula and fought with little ammunition and no reinforcements for three months until they surrendered April 9, 1942.

For Harris, the death march lasted five days and nights.

"I remember only getting sleep once," he said. "And there was no water. If you tried to get water, the Japanese would bayonet you. We walked like we were just kind of like zombies. Put that next foot in front of you. Don't stop. Don't fall down 'cause if you did, they'd shoot you."

The Gulf War made us want to put a team together, said Paul Arthur, a retired rear admiral. "I think we should remember the Bataan death march — we were so unprepared in that war."

The teams were divided into heavy divisions, those lugging 35-pound rucksacks, and light divisions. A unit's time was marked when the last member crossed the finish line.

A chilly wind strong enough to unfurl a tangled American flag hoisted in the opening ceremonies served as a tail wind in the first 12 miles through creosote bushes and yucca plants. Despite temperatures in the mid-40s, marchers peeled off their uniform shirts, rolled up their trousers and tied arm slings over their heads to beat the heat of the first few miles.

But once they reached a pass through the 5,200-feet-high Organ Mountains, a bitterly cold wind whipped up 50 mph gusts and the soldiers pulled on gloves and buttoned up.

The New Mexico Military Institute in Roswell won first place in the light division, in a time of 4 hours and 28 minutes. The Marines from the Navy ROTC at the University of Arizona came in second, 19 minutes behind.

One of the liveliest groups was the German Air Force, stationed at the German Air Defense School at Fort Bliss.

UNREST: Saddam has not been seen for about a week

(From 1A)

— could not be confirmed, nor could similar official reports from Syria and Iran.

Syria and Iran have a long record of hostility toward Saddam, and both use their official news media to advance government policies.

The Iranian press agency quoted Iraqis fleeing into Iran as saying that there had been "severe clashes between the people and government forces" in four southern Iraqi provinces, Basra, Amara, Nasiriya and Kut.

It also spoke of "anti-regime demonstrations" in the towns of Al Amarah and Gharbi, more than 120 miles north of Basra, where reports of commotion began to emerge on Friday from both the U.S. military in Saudi Arabia and travelers arriving in Kuwait from southern Iraq.

The towns reportedly affected, close to the Iran-Iraq border, are largely populated by Shiite Muslims, who form more than half of Iraq's 17 million population. Saddam and his ruling elite hail from a Sunni Muslim minority from an area northwest of Baghdad. The remainder of Iraq's population is largely Kurdish.

"In the past few days a group of Iraqis in the two cities held rallies in the main streets shouting anti-Saddam slogans and protecting his wrong policies during the Persian Gulf War," the Iranian agency said, quoting unidentified travelers.

COURT: Odessa has similar program

(From 1A)

"I think they play an extremely important role in that they allow us to keep the court rolling ... in the absence of the other judges," Smith said.

He said the visiting judges, who take the bench once every six weeks or so, usually handle between 25 and 40 cases during a Thursday session.

The case load is seen as reflective of the need for extended hours and the part-time judges.

"I think it does make the court more accessible," said Max E. Wright, a Midland attorney and the senior part-time Municipal Court judge. "I see a lot of people after 5 o'clock on Thursday evening. There are people with jobs for whom it would create a hardship if they had to take time off work" to come to court, he said.

"Municipal Court is most folks' only contact with the court system. If you can make that court more accessible to people, it engenders respect for the system and compliance with the law."

Wright, who has been an associate judge for 11 years — about as long as part-time judges have been employed by the court — said that because Municipal Court is many people's only contact with the legal system, he endeavors to make their experience there a positive one.

"You have to be willing to listen to what they have to say ... even though it may or may not change your mind," he said. "Some of the more humorous things that I have seen include one poor woman who couldn't understand why her car had been impounded over a mere $3,000 worth of parking tickets."

Being a judge has helped him empathize with the judges before whom he tries cases, Wright said.

"One of the valuable lessons that being a judge has taught me is how difficult it is to take a case and listen to the evidence from both sides and weigh that in the balance and come up with a just result."

Carmen Eiker, a Midland attorney in her seventh year as an associate judge, said she, too, has gained insight from her experience on the bench.

"I think it makes you very aware of the responsibilities that go along with being a judge and the sacrifices you have to make by being on the bench," she said.

Those sacrifices include taking 12 hours of state-mandated legal course work each year in order to stay up-to-date on changes in the law and in courtroom procedures.

The courses, administered by the Texas Municipal Courts Training Center in Austin, are available through weekend seminars in cities throughout the state on a monthly basis.

Sheila Scheler, the center's acting executive director, said 1,200 full-time and associate municipal judges received training last year. She said courses include studies of law, warrants, bonds, opinions from the attorney general, and ethics.

"The training is the same" for associate and full-time judges, Ms. Scheler said. "There is no way for us to differentiate."

However, she said courses differ depending on the size of the courts in question. There are separate curriculum "tracks" for small-town judges and urban judges.

"I think Midland is considered big because of the case volume," she said. "It's a very busy court."

Wright said the cost of the yearly training — including room and board for judges who must travel to training seminars — is paid by the state. He said the city of Midland pays for local judges' transportation to seminar sites.

The city council also is responsible for appointing associate judges, who make $25 an hour, to the bench. Smith said this usually is done on his recommendation along with that of the city attorney.

Prospective associate judges usually are recruited by word-of-mouth, Smith said. To qualify for the position, they need only be licensed attorneys willing to take the 12 hours of continuing judge education each year.

"All of them are very good attorneys," Smith said. "All of them have proven themselves to be qualified."

They may be rebelling against the rules of parents and school authorities, or dressing to conform with their closest friends.

"Either way, the same thing is going on," said Ms. Kidwell, who has two daughters. In the crucial task of developing their own identity, she said, "clothing is the one thing kids can control more easily than other parts of their lives."

To find out what teen-agers around the country are wearing — and why — Ms. Kidwell and museum associate Michelle Smith produced a school activity kit with a grant from Brother International Corp., and offered it to 16,000 high school teachers for free. About 6,000 teachers responded.

In war's wake comes euphoria, then what?

By Peter Applebome
N.Y. Times News Service

If we just sit around and high-five one another over the fact that we blew the bejesus out of the Arab world, nothing but arrogance can come out of it.'

— Texas billionaire H. Ross Perot

On the battlefield and at home, it was a victory of stunning decisiveness, like a thunderbolt that had the potential to obliterate the two decades of doubt and drift that began with Vietnam.

But with the fighting over, the real lessons and the long-term impact of the Persian Gulf war — what it says about the Vietnam War and about the United States itself — are far less certain than the surge of exhilaration now surrounding it.

For the short term, the war has had a profound impact on the nation's psyche and political landscape.

To some, it culminated a struggle in which the cultural and political ideology of the Ronald Reagan era routed its liberal critics as decisively as the allied forces routed Iraq's Republican Guard.

"This is the end of the decline," said Michael Novak, director of social and political studies for the conservative American Enterprise Institute.

"This is the decline of the declinists. The mother of all battles turned into the daughter of disasters for the declinists."

In a radio address Saturday praising the U.S. troops, President Bush said, "The specter of Vietnam has been buried forever in the desert sands of the Arabian Peninsula."

But amid such euphoria, there were warnings that a military victory, no matter how overwhelming, against a country with an economic output the size of Kentucky's and a population less than a third the size of Vietnam's does not necessarily herald a new day.

H. Ross Perot, the billionaire Texas electronics entrepreneur and investor, said it would be tragic if the nation's pride in the success overseas diverted it from the enormous problems at home.

"One success will not carry anybody very far," said Perot. "We need to put it behind us and press forward. If we just sit around and high-five one another over the fact that we blew the bejesus out of the Arab world, nothing but arrogance can come out of it."

VIETNAM'S LESSONS

How Much Might Is Right?

From the beginning of the military buildup, the confrontation in the gulf was shadowed at every step by the ghosts of Vietnam.

For many Americans, the war banished the ghosts to a degree few people could have hoped for.

Instead of the television images of terrified U.S. diplomats fleeing as Saigon fell, the United States saw tearful Kuwaitis hailing Americans as liberators.

Instead of ending in doubt and shame, this war finished with flags, yellow ribbons and swaggering expressions of pride.

The New York Post, for instance, published a picture of President Saddam Hussein of Iraq at prayer and the headline "ON HIS KNEES!"

And radio station WRAL-FM in Raleigh, N.C., began identifying itself as "broadcasting from the most powerful nation in the world."

For many Vietnam veterans, there was particular pride.

"A lot of people see this as a chance to right old wrongs," said Adrian Cronauer, a communications lawyer in Washington who, as an Armed Forces Radio announcer in Vietnam, provided the model for Robin Williams' character in the movie "Good Morning, Vietnam."

"A lot of people are feeling vindicated," he said. "I think this will put all the negative results of Vietnam behind us."

To Cronauer and others, the lesson of Iraq is that the nation must be prepared to unleash whatever resources are available when it decides to take military action.

But many experts wonder if that is the right lesson.

Gerald Linderman, a University of Michigan historian who specializes in the effects of American wars at home, said Iraq may have shredded the mythology of Vietnam more than the substance of Vietnam.

The idea that the United States lost in Vietnam because of a lack of will or undue restraint is simply false, he said.

"It wasn't that power wasn't exerted in Vietnam, it was that it was unavailing, in part because it was misdirected in that kind of war," he said.

"I suspect that no human power could have prevailed in that situation any more than it could have prevailed in Afghanistan. To think this success renders unimportant a previous failure, when in fact they're two entirely different species, could lead us into serious mischief."

Many historians, including John Shy, a University of Michigan military historian, said the peril in the war euphoria is that it could make the United States more likely to use force again.

"Put together with Grenada, with Libya, with Panama, it seems to be the triumphal culmination of a series of episodes in which military power was used as an instrument of foreign policy," Shy said.

"I hope it does not induce an arrogance or bully boy behavior in American foreign policy."

Envious Vietnam vets won't rain on gulf parade

By Lisa Levitt Ryckman
AP National writer

The troops who fought the Gulf War will come home to everything Vietnam veterans longed for but never had: endless parades, heartfelt patriotism, a nation puffed with pride.

They will be called heroes, not murderers. They will be honored, not ostracized.

No one knows that better than the more than 3 million veterans of the nation's most unpopular war. And when the parties begin, no one will be hurting more, or celebrating harder.

"The Saudi soldier's day in the sun was won, fought for, by the Vietnam veteran," said Bob Crankshaw a Vietnam veteran and counselor at Base Camp Inc. in Nashville, Tenn., a private Vietnam veterans center. "That's a good feeling for me personally, and for a lot of other guys I've talked to."

The lesson of Vietnam was a simple one, but it was learned at the expense of its veterans, said David Christian of Newtown, Pa., who is one of them: "Whether you are for the war or against the war, you must be for the warrior."

"You're damned right we're upset we didn't come back to a parade," said Brian Murray of Madison, Wis. "But we're not saying, 'Feel sorry for us.' We're saying, 'Don't do it to these guys.'"

About 3.1 million Americans served in the 10 years of Vietnam. More than 57,000 died. About 3 million veterans of that conflict are alive today. They remember how it was.

Some burned their uniforms but couldn't hide the emotional scars of war under civilian clothes. They lost jobs, homes, family and friends. They were cursed at, spat upon and heaped with garbage. They learned to walk softly and carry a big hurt, one inflamed in some cases by the perception that Gulf War veterans will be honored in a way they never were.

"We feel very supportive toward the troops," said Ron Mooneyhan, an Army veteran who now counsels others in Tampa, Fla. "But a lot of us would have liked to have been viewed this way — as heroes instead of drug abusers and baby killers."

President Bush recently thanked the American people for the support they have shown the Gulf troops. "By God," he said, "we've kicked the Vietnam syndrome once and for all."

It would seem so. Homecoming celebrations are planned from coast to coast for the 537,000 troops, who will take months to return. Vietnam veterans are among the most enthusiastic organizers.

Kris Tourtellotte launched "Operation Welcome Home" in Rochester, N.Y., to make sure the Gulf soldiers get a better reception than he did at the Oakland, Calif. airport in 1969.

"There wasn't anybody there saying, 'Welcome back, you did a good job,'" he said. "There were just people yelling at us, 'Baby killers!'"

An American flag flies in front of a Tampa, Fla., veterans' counseling center, and beneath it a black POW-MIA flag for those who never returned from Vietnam.

"Where are our yellow ribbons and our parades?" asked Emmitt Queen, 43, a Marine machine gunner in Vietnam.

"I saw on a newscast a man saying they were proud of our troops. It was just another kick in the butt," said Queen.

Texas Stadium victory party attracts 30,000

IRVING, Texas (AP) — More than 30,000 people gathered at Texas Stadium on Sunday for a Gulf War victory celebration that grew out of pre-cease-fire plans for one of the largest rallies in support of U.S. troops.

About 250,000 free tickets were distributed for the "Spirit of America" rally held in the 65,000-seat Texas Stadium. The stadium was almost half full, with 30,852 rallygoers attending, according to the official turnstile count.

Some signs read, "God bless our troops," while another stated, "The job is done, troops. It's party time!" and "Hurry Home, Daddy."

President Bush sent a message to the crowd: "This is a wonderful way to show our military personnel that we are tremendously proud of them."

The crowd gave a thunderous ovation when an announcer read an unscheduled message from "a new American hero: Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf," who led the allied troops to resounding victory in the war.

The wall around the playing field, home of the Dallas Cowboys, was festooned with U.S. flags.

■ Navy plane crashes near Chicago

GLENVIEW, Ill. — A Navy plane crashed Sunday in a residential neighborhood a half-mile south of the Glenview Naval Air Station in this Chicago suburb, killing its three-person crew, officials said.

Witnesses said the pilot seemed to deliberately miss homes before he went down with the plane about 11:45 a.m.

"It's a wonder to me that he didn't do any real damage to property and people on the ground," said Glenview resident Glen Hanson. "I think that if he did turn the wings . . . knowing it would save property and damage, he's quite a pilot after all."

Chief Petty Officer Roy Griggs confirmed the three-member crew was killed. Their names were withheld pending notification of relatives. No one on the ground was injured, he said.

■ Arthur Murray dies at 95

Arthur Murray, the immigrant baker's son who danced his way to fame and fortune as the world's best-known teacher of ballroom dancing, died Sunday at his home in Honolulu.

He was 95 and had also had another house in Rye, N.Y., for many years.

His daughter, Phyllis Murray McDowell, said he died of pneumonia. He had been active and in good health until very recently, she said.

Murray liked to tell stories of how learning to dance well had helped other people achieve poise, success and happiness, but his own life was his best success story — and a testimony to his skill as a promoter and an executive as well as a rumba dancer, fox-trotter, waltzer and bunny-hugger.

■ Alaskan leads mushers in 19th Iditarod

SKWENTNA, Alaska — Alaskan Joe Garnie led a pack of mushers into and out of the fourth checkpoint of the Iditarod dog sled race Sunday under clear skies and over a hard, fast trail.

Garnie has run the Iditarod eight times. He took third place in 1984 and second place in 1986.

He arrived at Skwentna at 3:16 a.m. and left for the next checkpoint at Finger Lake four hours later.

Four-time Iditarod champion Rick Swenson of Two Rivers was among five mushers who left minutes behind Garnie.

Skwenta is 151 miles into the 1,163-mile race, which winds from Anchorage to Nome. The leaders all left by 10 a.m.

"It was really good. A fast trail, icy, a little hard," Garnie said.

The 19th annual race began Saturday.

■ Study: Cheapest clotting drug is safest

In the first direct comparison of the drugs used to dissolve blood clots when a patient is having a heart attack, researchers have found that all three are equally effective in saving lives but that the oldest and cheapest is the safest.

The drug, streptokinase, costs about $200 per treatment, as against $2,200 to $2,700 for TPA, the most expensive.

But doctors in U.S. hospitals do not use streptokinase (pronounced strepto-KYE-nase) nearly as much, apparently in the belief that the more expensive drug is better.

The third drug, Eminase, costs about $1,700 per treatment.

The drugs are known as clot busters because they dissolve the blood clots that form in fat-damaged coronary arteries to cause heart attacks.

Jetliner crashes in Colorado

All 25 aboard apparently die

COLORADO SPRINGS, Colo. (AP) — A United jetliner with 25 people on board crashed in flames as it approached the Colorado Springs airport Sunday morning, and there were apparently no survivors, authorities said.

"We can't even find a chair," said El Paso County Sheriff Bernie Berry. "There's not a great deal of that airplane left."

United Flight 585 en route from Denver crashed at 9:55 a.m. four to five miles south of the airport, the Federal Aviation Administration in Washington said. There were 20 passengers on board and a crew of five.

The FAA and the airline both said all aboard apparently were killed. The plane narrowly missed houses and apartment buildings; at least one person on the ground was injured.

"There does not appear to be" any survivors, said Dick Meyer, of the FAA's public information office in Seattle. Chicago-based United said in a statement that "at this time there are no reports of survivors" aboard the twin-engine Boeing 737-200.

"All obviously are presumed dead," said Sgt. Dean Kelsey, of the El Paso County Sheriff's office. However, he said he would not confirm that until search efforts had been exhausted.

Meyer said there was no communication from the pilot to the airport control tower indicating any problem before the crash. Plane was last inspected Sunday at Denver and had no history of problems, said Lawrence Nagin, United senior vice president at a news conference at company headquarters.

A witness, Army Command Sgt. Maj. Leo Martinez, said that the plane banked sharply, veered and then crashed virtually nose first.

"I watched and it went vertically into the ground," he said. "There was a huge fireball, black smoke and orange flame."

He said there was "nothing — just debris, very small debris. You can see tires burning. I don't think there's a part larger than a suitcase. You can't see any wings . . . or anything."

Sheriff's Lt. Bill Mistretta said the plane crashed in an unincorporated residential area called Widefield. The plane crashed in a park

"It's a long and narrow park," Martinez said. "If he (the pilot) did this on purpose, no one in Iraq and Saudi Arabia could have done a better job of flying. It is the only place he could have taken it in."

Maker recalls decongestant after cyanide death

SEATTLE (AP) — State and federal officials ordered a recall of Sudafed decongestant capsules from two counties late Saturday night after the discovery that cyanide tampering was linked to a death and an illness, officials said.

The Washington State Department of Health also urged store owners and consumers throughout the state to check Sudafed boxes and foil packs that contain the pills for specific code numbers.

Sometime in early to mid-February, a 40-year-old Tacoma woman died of cyanide poisoning and a woman from Tumwater was treated for serious injuries, reportedly after taking Sudafed 12 Hour capsules laced with cyanide, said Susan Hutchcroft of the federal Food and Drug Administration.

She said she did not have exact dates and refused to release the names of the women, citing privacy considerations.

There have been no arrests, and police and FDA investigators have no leads, she said.

Sudafed is manufactured by Burroughs Wellcome of Research Triangle Park in North Carolina.

Company officials could not immediately be reached for comment. Calls placed to Burroughs Wellcome's corporate offices early Sunday rang unanswered.

"We have one woman dead and one injured. We don't want to take any chances with public health," said state Health Department spokesman Dean Owen."We want to urge all Washington residents to use due caution when using Sudafed."

Owen said health agencies throughout the state were being notified about the Sudafed tampering. The drug was only be recalled in Pierce and Thurston counties, however. The adjacent counties include the cities of Tacoma and Olympia and are just south of Seattle.

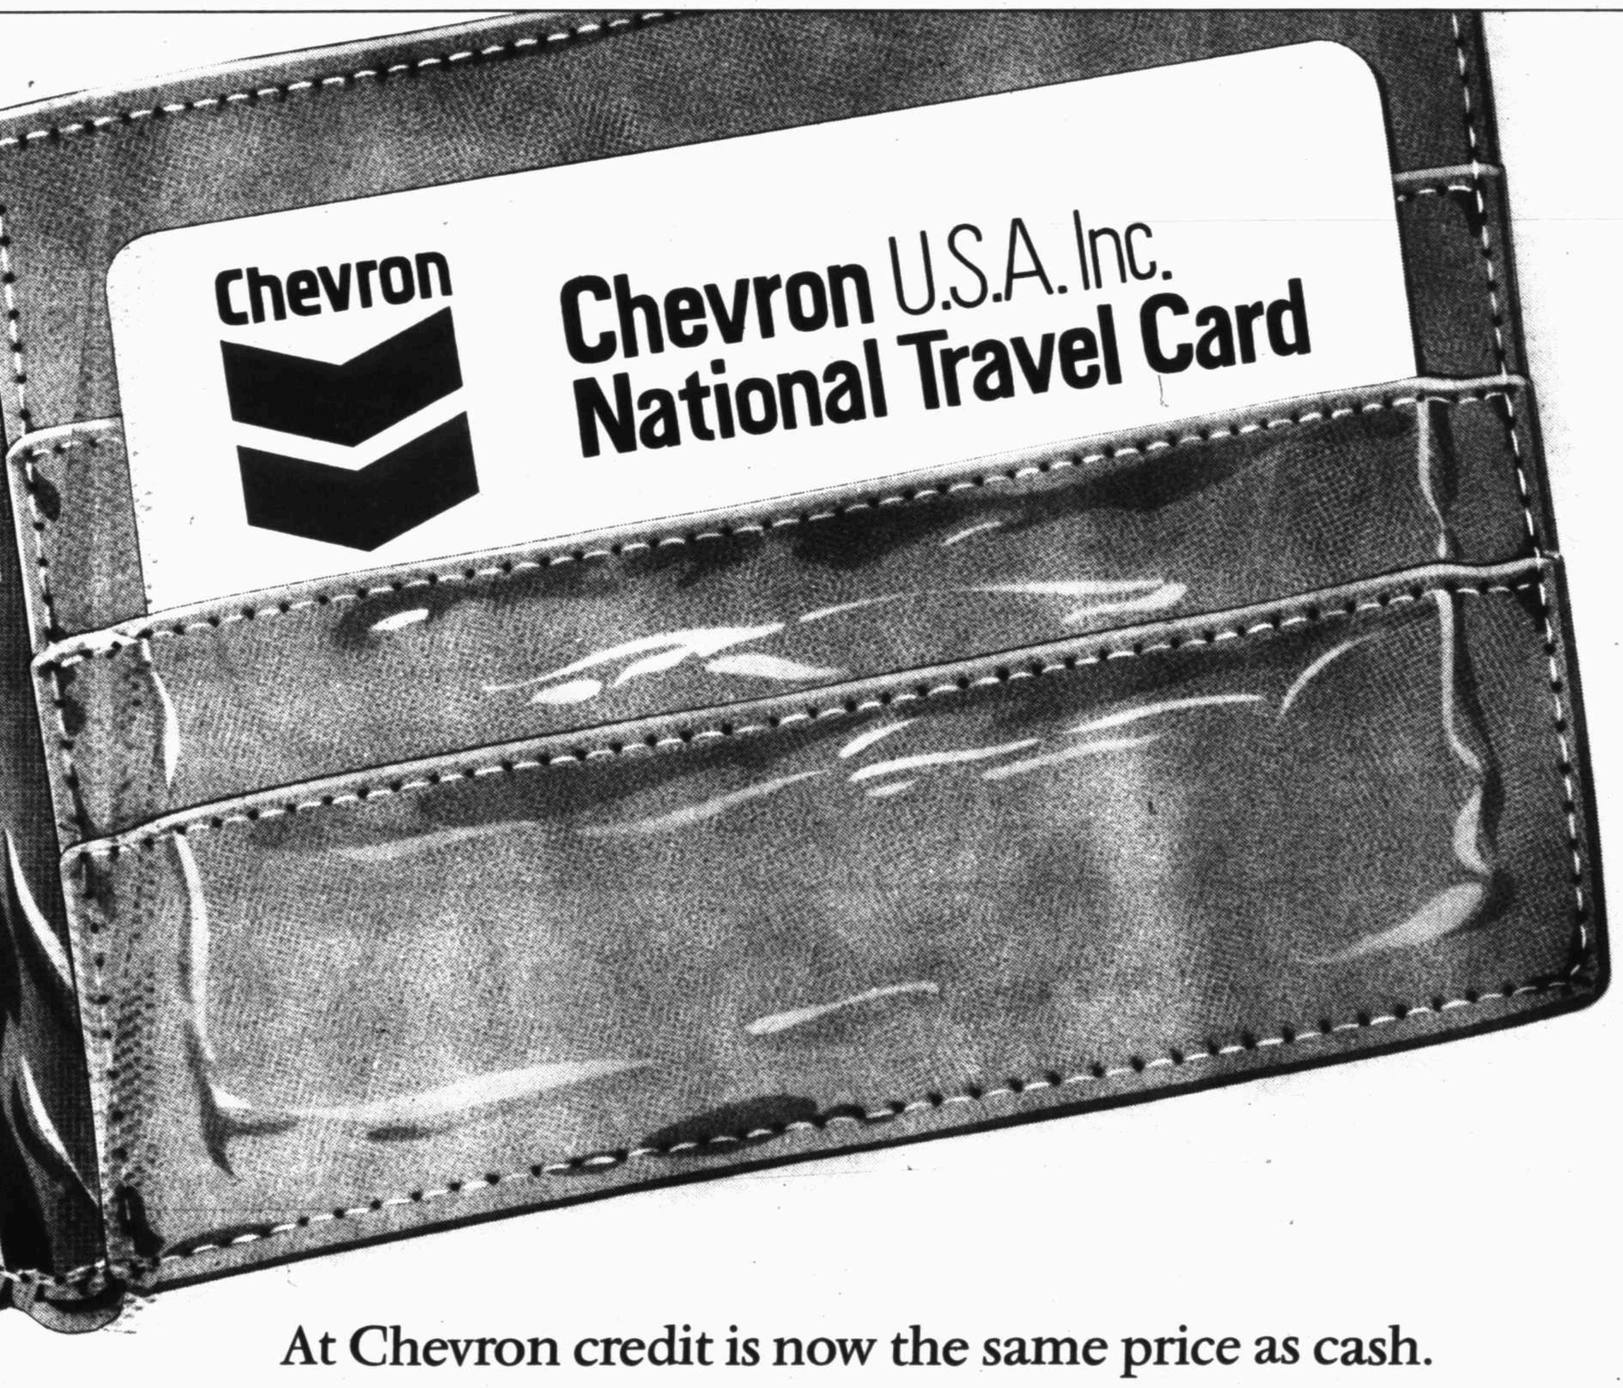
Residents of Thurston and Pierce counties should avoid taking Sudafed capsules until more is known about the case, Hutchcroft said.

As a special precaution, the federal agency also advised consumers to avoid Sudafed 12-hour capsules with the identification code 8U2846, expiration date 11-91, on the aluminum foil blister pack.

Consumers should also examine any Sudafed packages to assure that the code number on the box is the same as on the foil pack, the agency said. In the drug tampering case, the numbers were different, Hutchcroft said.

One of the boxes involved had a code of 8U2849, expiration 1191, and the other box had a code of 002847, expiration 693. The foil blister pack in both cases had the same code number of 8U2846.

"It's very important. It's very serious," Hutchcroft said.



At Chevron credit is now the same price as cash.

Using a gasoline credit card has always been convenient. But you've almost always paid extra for it. That's because the credit price for gasoline is usually a few cents higher than the cash price. Unless, of course, you buy your gasoline from your nearby Chevron station. Because as of now there's just one price for gasoline at participating Chevron stations, whether you pay cash or use your credit card. So when you fill up next time don't worry about pulling out your credit card to pay for it, 'cause at Chevron you won't pay extra for credit.

President should seize opportunity

George Bush can bask in the warm glow emanating from the American public over his performance as commander in chief during the Persian Gulf war. The Democratic Party might want to consider fielding him as their choice, also, for president in 1992!

The president's performance even put a luster back onto the old catch-phrase "let George do it!" The American public and the Congress "let George do it" in stopping Saddam Hussein's aggression in the Middle East and he orchestrated the war against Iraq — which included diplomacy with the other 28 nations aligned against Iraq — with exceptional skill.

Of course, Bush didn't accomplish the defeat of Iraq by himself. He had strong military support from Gen. Colin Powell, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff; Gen. Norman Schwarzkopf, the brilliant military strategist who led Desert Storm forces; and, of course, all the U.S. military personnel. But, then, nine-tenths of leadership is putting the right people in charge, setting the goals and the tone of whatever campaign is being carried out, and then staying out of the way so that the task can be accomplished.

Foreign policy — which has always been Bush's acknowledged strong point where leadership ability is concerned — has added major points to President Bush's rating and he now stands at an 85 percent approval rating with only 11 percent disapproving of the job he is doing as president. That becomes particularly significant when one considers the fact that it is the highest approval rating for a president since Harry Truman received the record 87 percent rating in 1945 shortly after he assumed the presidency after the end of the war in Europe.

Bush obviously will benefit politically from the upswing in patriotism that the war victory helped to create. But he should move quickly to transfer the momentum from the war against Iraq to domestic issues — such as the serious deficit problem, racial unrest, the economic recession, unemployment and other domestic matters of concern.

One way Bush could capture the appropriate spirit would be to explain to Americans that now that they've handed the destiny of the Kuwaiti people back to them, Americans need to once again take control of their own destiny by demanding that Congress work with Bush to solve a number of these nagging problems that never seem to get real attention, but instead fall victim to partisan political bickering or bureaucratic red tape.

The ball, quite literally, is in George's court. At this point in time, Bush could rally tremendous support for his domestic policies. Now it's up to him as to whether he will utilize the upbeat mood for the benefit of the American people.

He has shown he has the leadership ability to put this nation back on the correct course.

Warsaw Pact joins Cold War trash heap

As of April 1, the military structure of the Warsaw Pact will join a distinguished list that includes East Germany, the Berlin Wall and Checkpoint Charlie. All relegated to the Cold War trash heap. None will be missed.

The demise of the pact's military structure, in effect the pact itself, actually came well before the others. The first threads began to unravel in the 45-year-old military alliance when Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev announced the unilateral withdrawal of thousands of Soviet troops and armaments from its Eastern European members at the United Nations in December of 1988. When the new negotiations between the pact and the North Atlantic Treaty Organization to cut conventional weapons in Europe began in March 1989, countries like Hungary and Poland for the first time asserted themselves in the process, putting forth their own ideas independent of Moscow. The revolutions in Eastern Europe in 1989 completely destroyed the alliance's military fabric with the calls from the new non-communist governments for the Kremlin to withdraw all of its troops from their countries.

Soviet officials say the political component of the alliance will remain as long as necessary. That won't be long. With East Germany now a part of the West and the other members looking to tie into the European Community, the Soviet Union will have to look hard for political allies, especially given the direction it appears to be heading.

Without the pact's military structure, Moscow will be alone at the negotiating table for the newest round of talks to further reduce conventional weapons in Europe. The loudest criticism Soviet officials will hear should they drag their feet could be heard from old friends.

TODAY IN HISTORY

Today is Monday, March 4, the 63rd day of 1991. There are 302 days left in the year.

Today's Highlight in History:

Two hundred years ago, on March 4, 1791, Vermont became the 14th state.

On this date:

In 1681, England's King Charles II granted a charter to William Penn for an area of land that later became Pennsylvania.

In 1789, the Constitution of the United States went into effect as the first Federal Congress met in New York. (The lawmakers then adjourned for the lack of a quorum.)

In 1829, an unruly crowd mobbed the White House during the inaugural reception for President Jackson.

In 1837, the Illinois state legislature granted a city charter to Chicago.

In 1861, the Confederacy adopted the "Stars and Bars" flag design.

In 1902, the American Automobile Association was founded in Chicago.

In 1917, Republican Jeannette Rankin of Montana took her seat as a member of Congress, the first woman to be elected to the House of Representatives.

In 1925, President Coolidge's inauguration was broadcast live on 21 radio stations coast-to-coast.

Female POW is more than just 'missing'

WASHINGTON — As long as Melissa Rathbun-Nealy is going down in history as the first American female prisoner of war, her father, Leo Rathbun, would just as soon have the Pentagon call her a POW. But it won't.

Anderson

Nealy disappeared near Khafji, Saudi Arabia, on Jan. 30, when she got lost while delivering a vehicle back to its unit after repairs. The Pentagon says she is "missing" and that the military needs more information before it can put her on the POW list.

It is a list that Leo Rathbun wants his daughter's name on so the Iraqis are forced to account for her when the dust settles in the Persian Gulf War.

Nealy, 20, never expected to make history when she joined the Army. She wanted an adventure, and she wanted to pay for her college education, her father told our associate Melinda Maas. Nealy's job with the 233rd Transportation Company of Ft. Bliss, Texas, was to drive heavy equipment, not to face an enemy in combat.

On Jan. 30, she headed north out of a maintenance facility near Dhahran in a heavy equipment transport vehicle, or HET. Another HET traveled with her. Their convoy commander passed them and then stopped for gas. He looked up to see the two HETs go straight through an intersection where they were supposed to turn west. They were headed for Khafji, which was soon to become the site of the first ground battle of the war.

Outside of Khafji, the two HETs stopped and their drivers debated whether or not they were lost, according to the account the Army gave Leo Rathbun. Farther along the road, they spotted something they didn't expect to see in Saudi Arabia — Iraqi troops coming toward them. One HET made a U-turn. But Nealy's vehicle became stuck. The last thing the other driver saw before going for help was Nealy and her co-driver, Spec. David Lockett, still in the HET and Iraqi troops approaching them.

When Marines came back to rescue them, the HET was still there, but Nealy and Lockett were gone.

Iraqis taken prisoner by Saudi forces at Khafji told of seeing the capture of two American soldiers, a man and a woman. The Saudis got another report later about two POWs seen near the Iraqi city of Basrah — a white woman and a black man. (Nealy is white and Lockett is black.)

That's not enough for the Pentagon to call them POWs, but it is enough for Leo Rathbun. The anguished father took matters in his own hands and wrote Saddam Hussein a letter, asking for his daughter's release, or at least to let the Red Cross see her. "I just want her to know that her family loves her and that we are doing everything we can," Rathbun told us.

Like many enlistees, Nealy was not prepared to be taken prisoner. Pilots and special operations people get rigorous POW training, but the Army says it is unrealistic and expensive to train everyone for the unimaginable.

Before the Vietnam War, the POW "Code of Conduct" said soldiers could give only their name, rank and serial number. But in Vietnam, POWs had to break the rules if they were to stay alive.

Now soldiers are told only to resist answering questions to the best of their ability.

FLOCK OF TROUBLE — From 1983 to 1987, birds collided with military aircraft more than 16,000 times. Nine of those planes crashed causing six casualties and costing $318 million in damage. The Air Force began a research program five years ago to cope with the birds. That program was supposed to come up with some technology to keep birds from being sucked into jet engines. Instead, the Air Force simply produced a study that acknowledged birds are a problem. What is the Air Force's next step? To study its study, one congressional investigator told us.

MINI-EDITORIAL — Elderly Americans should think twice before they buy too many supplemental insurance plans to cover what Medicare doesn't. Some seniors have been talked into buying more than one so-called "Medigap" policy under the mistaken impression that more is better. In the case of insurance, more is almost always redundant. A new federal law that took effect in January makes it harder for agents to sell double coverage. But there are thousands of seniors who were talked into buying multiple policies before that law took effect. They are wasting their money.

Television shows us war isn't a video game

Thanks to the electronic eye of television, it has been impossible for our political leaders to make demons of the Iraqi people, the way the Japanese and Germans were demonized in World War II.

Reese

We may not like Saddam Hussein but when we can see the faces of the Iraqi people, we see that they look just like us; that they love their children just like we love ours; that they weep for their dead just like we do; that they don't want war anymore than we do.

It was not so in World War II. There were no satellites and no television broadcasting networks. Government propaganda had the movie screens, the magazines, and newspapers all to itself. I grew up in that war and learned to hate Germans and Japanese.

There was no human face on the Japanese or German people. They were fiends and fanatics. They were Japs and Krauts, Nazis and fascists. The Japanese all had buck teeth and steel-rimmed glasses and were cruel beyond imagination. The Germans were swine — goosestepping, fanatic murderers. They were never shown or written about in a human light.

Thus, it was easy to do anything to them. Firebombing and even nuclear bombing were causes of celebration. Kill them all. Burn them all.

There was some talk early in the Persian Gulf War that it was bloodless because in the air war phase initially there was nothing to see except gun camera views of bombs striking targets like video games.

Pounds of letters, boxes, magazines, cookies and other items were received in the post office that operates out of a portable quonset-hut-looking structure on an unidentifiable Saudi air base.

This week, on a pallet destined for some front-line encampment, a package to Glenn Allan Davis, a 29-year-old Army electrician, from Deanna R. Klein, of Kismet, Kansas, contained, along with razors and shaving cream, "Super Bubble Gum, Kool-Aid, Mixed Nuts, Caramel Corn, and Kringle's Potato Chips," according to the customs declaration form pasted to the wrapping paper.

It is in packages like these, filled with little favors from home, and in the letters from hearts of friends and loved ones, that the success of a military campaign can be traced.

The pain and torment to our guys was not hidden from the public. None of it looked fun. It looked exactly like what war is — human beings killing and maiming human beings.

And so when we could see the burned bodies of Iraqi children being carried out of a bunker in the arms of weeping men, we didn't feel so good. "Kicking ass," to use the president's gross phrase, is an abstraction. A burned child is a reality. The politicians tried to shift the blame to Iraq, some even lashed out at television, but they couldn't erase the truth of the burned and dead children.

I don't think it is an exaggeration to say that the Iraqi people may owe more to CNN's presence than they do to smart bombs and U.S. policy for the relatively light civilian casualties. There's nothing in our past to suggest that once engaged in war we are inclined to worry a great deal about how many civilians we kill. But when the world can see what you're doing through its electronic eye that's a different matter.

Television may make us more human — and that might be better than making us smarter.

LEWIS GRIZZARD

Americans can't be held hostage by threats

Barbara Bush made news recently because she took a commercial flight from Washington.

What made that news was Barbara Bush is, of course, wife to our president, and she could have had her husband's plane fly her with all that security that goes with it.

Grizzard

Mrs. Bush's reason for flying commercial was she wanted to show Americans she wasn't afraid of terrorists in the sky and the rest of us shouldn't be either.

I'm just as afraid of terrorists blowing up an airplane in which I'm a passenger as a means of gaining revenge for the war in the gulf as the next American.

But if Barbara Bush could do it, so could I. Yes, I also flew commercial recently.

The reason you're hearing about it here and not on any of the networks is I'm no relation to the president, and I don't have my own plane.

Still I think it's a little newsworthy that I did it. I could have taken the bus. As far as I know no American bus has ever been bothered by terrorists from other countries.

During the Greyhound strike disgruntled employees did shoot at buses, but they were all Americans simply exercising their God-given right to bear arms and shoot at things that move.

I must admit, however, I didn't fly coach as Mrs. Bush did. I got one of those frequent flyer upgrades and sat in first class where it's easier to get extra peanuts.

Plus, I figured if terrorists were aboard my flight, they'd probably be sitting in coach, and might not notice me if they decided to start shooting hostages.

It would be less difficult to conceal a bazooka or a scud launcher in coach and nobody on a mission from Allah would care about extra peanuts anyway.

I flew from the East Coast to the West Coast and back to the East Coast again and we didn't experience a single instance of terrorism either way — if you discount a baby that cried from somewhere over Arkansas to Los Angeles.

That's not to say it wasn't obvious the airlines are taking more security measures due to the threat of terrorists.

"Just to be on the safe side," said one of my pilots, "I'm going to leave the seat belt sign on during the entire flight."

A terrorist strapped in his or her seat can't do a lot of terrorizing was the reason for that.

Also, the flight attendants reminded us that "In the unlikely event of a terrorist attack, your seat cushion can be used to hide under."

The only time I was nervous about a possible terrorist attack was when they handed out the hot towels just before landing, and the guy sitting in the row next to me put his on his head.

He turned out to be a guy with a bad hangover.

My point is the same as Barbara Bush's. We Americans simply can't be held hostage by the threat of terrorists.

We must go about our lives as we did before the war.

Next, I'm going to try to go an entire week without watching CNN.

Before the war, the only face I recognized on CNN was Jim Huber's, the sports guy.

Now, I'm suffering from Peter Arnettophobia, the fear that one day I'll turn on my television to find he's been replaced by Dick Vitale.

Latvians, Estonians choose freedom

RIGA, U.S.S.R. (AP) — Latvians and Estonians voted overwhelmingly for independence from the Soviet Union on Sunday, officials said after counting more than three-quarters of the ballots.

In Latvia, nearly complete vote totals showed 77 percent voted in favor of separation and 21 percent against, officials said.

In Estonia, 77.8 percent voted for independence, election officials said. Officials had hoped for a strong pro-independence vote so the three Baltic republics could march in step away from the Soviet Union.

On Feb. 9, 91 percent of Lithuanian casting ballots voted in favor of independence. The Lithuanian government scheduled the referendum after Kremlin forces imposed a crackdown in the Baltics that left more than 20 people dead.

Like the Lithuanian vote, the referendums in Latvia and Estonia were little more than a public opinion poll and carried no legal weight.

They did, however, represent a strong challenge to President Mikhail S. Gorbachev, who has branded illegal last year's independence declarations by the Baltic republics.

Gorbachev has scheduled a nationwide referendum for March 17 on holding the Soviet Union and its 15 republics together. Leaders of the Baltics, as well as in the republics of Armenia, Georgia and Moldavia, have said they won't participate in that vote.

Officials had said the votes of ethnic Russians in the two republics would be important to give weight to Sunday's referendums.

Only 54 percent of Latvia's 2.7 million people are ethnic Latvians; 33 percent are Russians. Sixty-five percent of Estonia's 1.5 million residents are ethnic Estonians and 28 percent are Russians.

The margin of victory for independence was as high as 98 percent in the Talsu region of Latvia and on Hiiumaa Island in Estonia, indicating many Russians had voted to leave the union.

In some areas, however, such as the predominately Russian town of Sillamae, Estonia, voters mostly stayed away from the polls or voted no.

The Latvian election commission said 88 percent of Latvia's 1.8 million voters had cast ballots. Estonian officials said 83 percent of those eligible voted.

For many, the referendum was a chance to express a heartfelt desire.

"We have dreamed all our lives about independence. Our fathers lived in a free Latvia," said Zinaigur Radjabova, 49. The three Baltic republics were independent for 20 years before being forcibly incorporated into the Soviet Union in 1940.

An 18-year-old Russian, Kiril Strelkov of Riga, said he was voting for independence "because we are sick and tired of taking orders from the Kremlin and the people know better what they need."

But the idea of withdrawal made other Russians uneasy.

"I've lived here for over 40 years, and we've always lived in peace. But, under glasnost, some people are trying to pull everything down," ETA quoted Vasily Shchedrin as saying.

In Latvia, pro-Kremlin forces in Latvia distributed leaflets and posters that warned a "yes" vote would lead to a "totalitarian" regime and turn non-ethnic Latvians into second-class citizens.

Vladlen Tseitlin, a 58-year-old Russian Jew, said he feared his citizenship would be taken away from him and his family in an independent Latvia.

"I am for democracy, but not this kind," said Tseitlin. "We want a good life, but we wonder whether the price we have to pay for a good life will be too high."

Natalia Asinova and Nadezhda Potapova, voting in another heavily Russian district, complained bitterly about steep price increases introduced by the separatist government and said they were voting "no."

"Many times on trolley buses and in other places, Latvians say, 'Why don't you get out of here — go to your homeland,'" Mrs. Asinova said. "I tell them my children were born here and I have lived here for 30 years."

Beta Biryuta, a Latvian woman standing nearby, heard Mrs. Asinova's remarks. After waiting for her to leave, she said: "These people who are saying they will live badly in an independent Latvia — let them go to their Communist paradise in Russia and let other people come here."

More than 112 observers from a dozen Western nations, including the United States and Canada, were in Latvia and Estonia to monitor the voting.

Police seal off second ethnically mixed town

PAKRAC, Yugoslavia (AP) — Croatian special police began withdrawing from this ethnically mixed town Sunday but sealed off another town, hoping to prevent pro-Serbian supporters from staging rallies there.

The special Croatian forces began to withdraw from Pakrac before a midnight deadline set by the federal government for "all external forces" to leave the city, the state news agency Tanjug said.

The leaders of the Croatians and Serbs, Yugoslavia's two largest ethnic groups, are opposed regarding the future of this country of 25 million. Their dispute threatens to plunge the federation of six republics and two provinces into civil war.

Croatian police stopped about 400 ethnic Serbs from entering Osijek, a town of about 35,000 people, where they planned to rally in front of a People's Army building, Tanjug quoted local Police Chief Josip Reihl-Kir as saying.

He said tear gas was used when the crowd "behaved aggressively" against passersby.

About 300 other Serbs from the town and a similar number of Croatians had gathered in separate groups near the military building, shouting nationalist slogans, Tanjug said.

Police formed a cordon between the two angry groups and ordered both to disperse, Tanjug said. Four Serbs were detained for refusing to comply.

Serbia, the largest republic, is Communist-ruled and wants to keep the federation together. Croatia's center-right government wants more independence in a looser confederation.

But as Croatia has pushed for independence, its population of ethnic Serbs — they make up about 12 percent of the republic's 5 million people — in turn have been demanding more autonomy from the Croatian government.

Tanjug quoted a federal Interior Ministry statement as saying about 100 special police who took up positions in Pakrac early Saturday had by Sunday evening left the town, 60 miles southeast of Croatia's capital Zagreb.

Federal army troops stayed in the town. They had been sent in Saturday as a counterweight to Croatian police.

Stipe Mesic, Croatia's representative in the eight-man federal presidency, said that the special police had "fulfilled their duty in exemplary fashion."

Borisav Jovic, a Serb who currently heads the presidency, dispatched army units to Pakrac after the special forces entered the town early Saturday, exchanging fire with ethnic Serb police reservists and firing tear gas to disperse crowds.

Serbs in Croatia's southern Krajina region had declared their police force independent and last week announced the enclave would secede.

Residents of Serb-populated towns scattered around Croatia, such as Pakrac, claim they belong politically to Krajina.

The "specijalci," as Croatia's top police units are known, stormed Pakrac municipal buildings at dawn Saturday, disarming most of the Serb reservists who had declared their force independent of Zagreb authorities.

Up to five Croatian police were reported wounded but Pakrac and Zagreb officials said there were no civilian casualties.

The federal presidency, which commands Yugoslavia's People's Army, warned in a statement Sunday that "if necessary (the presidency) would use other measures to prevent outbreaks of intercommunal conflicts and secure peace and protection for all citizens."

Notebook: Troops talk about life at the front

By Charles J. Lewis
Hearst News Service

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — Notes from two weeks of living with the Army's 2nd Armored Division in Saudi Arabia, Iraq and Kuwait:

The typical day began at 5:30 a.m. with "stand to," an hour-long period of alertness at battle positions.

The pre-dawn ritual, the military version of getting people out of their sleeping bags bed and waking up to a new day, is based on the theory that any enemy attack is likely to start in the early daylight.

So, no matter where they were or how slight the risk of an actual enemy attack, GIs of all ranks honored "stand to."

They started their Hummvees, trucks, cars, tanks and personnel carriers and sat in them, idling the motor and roughly observing a rule of silence, the better to listen for the enemy. Others burrowed into the foxholes they had dug the night before in the sand.

These foxholes were one of the first chores they performed when their convoys halted for the night; no matter how late the hour, they grabbed shovels, spades and picks and dug a "fighting position" for each person, regardless of whether the division was going to stay put for two days or eight hours.

The shallow holes weren't designed for fighting so much as cowering in the event of an artillery attack. Historically, most casualties in war have been caused by artillery fire and that fact is deeply ingrained in soldiers' psyches.

After "stand to," the troops began their daily routine of self-maintenance: toilet duties; starting little fires to heat breakfast; cleaning sand from rifles, clothes, hair, ears, nose, sleeping bags; packing sleeping bags; repacking vehicles; scrounging food and water for future consumption; fueling vehicles; getting in the convoy line so the advance could continue.

Toileting in the desert varied from the quick and casual to a time-consuming awkward task.

Male GIs would — and could — urinate almost anywhere. In more permanent camps, men would use a 6-foot-long piece of plastic pipe inserted into the sand at a 45-degree angle with a funnel taped to the business end.

Other bodily functions required more elaborate procedures and more privacy, which doesn't exist in the desert. So, usually at night, a soldier would take toilet paper and a shovel, walk out into the desert a short way and dig a "little cat hole." The soldier would then cover up the evidence with sand.

More permanent camps would quickly sprout a creative array of conveniences, ranging from relatively primitive "slit trenches" in the sand shielded from view by burlap to respectable outhouses constructed of plywood or plastic and occasionally featuring actual toilet seats. The contents of the outhouses had to be burned in the morning, an unpopular chore.

Women troopers coped in their predominantly male world by draping themselves in a long poncho designed for rain but useful for privacy in a pinch.

Iraqis return to Baghdad with tales of fear, terror

EDITOR'S NOTE: The writer has just returned to Amman, Jordan, from where he filed this dispatch.

By John Rice
Associated Press writer

BAGHDAD, Iraq — Thousands of Iraqi soldiers have begun pouring back into Baghdad following the shattering ground war in the south. Some tell stories of terror in the weeks of ceaseless allied bombardments.

"We could not move outside our bunkers because they kept hitting us around the clock," said one man who recently returned.

"And when there was a lull in the bombardment, we felt lucky and went out only to find a place to bury our fellows who were killed," he said.

Bus stations and street-side drop points have been flooded in recent days with returning soldiers and anxious civilians awaiting word of relatives at the front.

Iraqi information officials who accompany reporters on almost all trips forbade interviews with uniformed soldiers. But a few men in civilian clothes who identified themselves as soldiers agreed to describe conditions, as did some relatives of military men.

It was unclear if most of those at the drop points had been demobilized or if they were returning helter-skelter from the devastating battle in the south.

On Saturday, Iraq ordered the demobilization of men born between 1953 and 1957.

U.S. military sources in Saudi Arabia said Saturday that surveillance photos showed the sudden pullout had plunged the southern city of Basra into chaos. Many of the soldiers interviewed in Baghdad had arrived from Basra.

Iraqi officials claim their troops blunted allied attacks and scored a victory in the conflict, which was halted Feb. 28 when President Bush declared a unilateral pause in hostilities.

But several Iraqis interviewed in recent days conceded the battles had been a military defeat. They often added that Iraq had scored at least a moral victory simply by confronting the overwhelming allied forces.

Reporters who traveled the highways south of Baghdad in recent days said they had seen many unarmed soldiers returning up the road, some in armored vehicles with their weapons stripped away, apparently at allied checkpoints.

Several of those interviewed in recent days described gruesome conditions in Iraqi front lines during the month-long allied bombardment.

Some men were buried in mass graves, they said, and fellow soldiers placed small vials with their names on the bodies in hopes they would some day be identified.

Even In victory, combat causes changes

By Paul Recer
Associated Press writer

WASHINGTON — When Johnny comes marching home, he's going to be a different Johnny than the one who marched off to war. Combat changes people.

Combat is filled with potential emotional trauma. There's the constant fear of death. The noise and sights and smells, the firing of weapons, watching other human beings die or disappear in a puff of smoke and explosion of fire. There's blood and body bits and screams of pain. People are maimed and killed and some of them may be close friends.

It continues hour after hour after hour.

And then the shooting stops and there's peace. But in the mind, the memories stay and leave their mark.

"Without a doubt, combat changes people," said Bonnie L. Green, director of the trauma stress service at Georgetown University Medical Center in Washington.

Some say the mark of combat can be clearly seen.

"You will see a change, their eyes will change," said Army Lt. Col. Skip Baker of Odessa. "I saw it in Vietnam. Before they saw combat, their eyes were bright and clear. ... When they see battles, they become men who have seen things other men haven't seen. ... They get that far distant look."

Other changes are unseen and more lasting. The mind, say the experts, somehow must sort out and file the almost incomprehensible facts of war.

Simon, CBS crew describe Iraqi beatings

LONDON (AP) — Four members of a CBS television crew were blindfolded and beaten while in Iraqi custody, but one said in an interview Sunday he was even more terrified by allied bombs that hit a building where they were held.

Reporter Bob Simon, CBS London bureau chief Peter Bluff, freelance cameraman Roberto Alvarez and soundman Juan Caldera were reported in good condition at a hospital in London on Sunday.

The four were captured by Iraqi forces near the Kuwait-Saudi border on Jan. 21. Iraq released them in Baghdad on Saturday after prodding from Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

The four have lost weight because of malnutrition, but otherwise were "in remarkably good shape when you consider they've been in prison in awful circumstances for 40 days," said Dr. Stuart Sanders, who examined the crew at Humana Hospital in Wellington.

Tom Goodman, a spokesman for CBS News, said the crew members do not have any internal injuries, broken bones or bruises.

In the interview broadcast Sunday night on CBS' 60 Minutes, Simon said all four men were beaten at the same time.

"We were blindfolded which made it all the more frightening," he said. "They beat us with canes, with sticks, on the legs, on the head."

"When they were getting to these important questions they opened the door and beat Juan, Peter and Roberto so they would scream and I would hear them scream while they were asking me questions and beating me at the same time."

Alvaraz said the Feb. 23 bombing of the military intelligence headquarters where they were being held was worse than the beatings.

"The day we got hit with the bombs, that was probably the scariest moment I went through," he said.

HISTORICAL ENDEAVORS

The Mainstreet Association of Big Spring hopes to rebuild interest in downtown Big Spring through their efforts to restore and renovate old businesses.

BIG SPRING — The splendor of the old days has been sacked, pillaged, and plundered from the inside.

The outside, enhanced with a dose of imagination, suggests that the 15-story brick edifice, Hotel Settles, could be restored and, in some measure, could regain some of that splendor.

But that would take money, much venture capital, inspiration, cooperation, and promise of profits.

The hope is there, but not, not yet, the money and the inspiration.

Even so, Big Spring businessman Richard Atkins has visions. Bolstered by spirited citizens intent on re-vitalizing downtown Big Spring, Atkins is leading an effort to return the old Hotel Settles into a graceful West Texas skyscraper or to nothing at all.

There is much to do.

The other day, he meandered into the old hotel's lobby.

"It made you want to throw up and then get on your knees and cry," Atkins sighed. "It was really a showplace."

No more.

There's not much left but space, dust, traces of vagrants and vandals, and broken glass.

The once "gorgeous marble staircase with bentwood railing" was stripped after the hotel was closed and was sold in the late 1970s.

The finery, including the old ranch-oak and green-enamel furniture, was yanked from the hotel and sold to recover costs and to turn a profit. The second-floor ballroom lay naked.

The rosewood paneling is all gone. The brass fittings are scattered.

The downtown hotel, indicative of much of America's downtown businesses, fell victim of expansion to the suburbs, to the malls, to the loop and the interstate highway that bypassed the main business district.

The Big Spring Main Street Inc., which Atkins heads up, has wrought wonders since 1985 in not only sprucing up downtown Big Spring but in bringing new and old businesses to the central business district.

Much has been done under the program he euphemistically calls "economic redevelopment of downtown Big Spring."

"Now, you can walk around the courthouse and not be embarrassed," Atkins said.

Still, there is much to do. One big challenge is the abandoned Hotel Settles.

The 15-story hotel was built in 1930 for $500,000 by a Big Spring ranching couple, W.R. and Lillie Settles, who, in 1927, were graced by a new wealth — oil.

In 1990 dollars, the 1930 hotel would cost about $4 million to build.

Back in the 1930s, the management fancied the hotel's pretentiousness.

" 'I have no hesitancy of comparing in class, service and beauty the Hotel Settles to the New Yorker in New York City,' " the Big Spring Herald quoted the hotel's first manager, Fred W. Crow.

By the early 1930s, after the Great Depression of 1929 had rippled through West Texas, the Hotel Settles Corporation was forced into bankruptcy. The price of oil had dropped from $4 to $3 to 10 cents a barrel but eventually regained it former price and more.

The hotel, once managed by the Baker Hotel chain, flourished for years.

Atkins, who recalled the hotel's better days from his youth in the 1950s and 1960s, recalled meetings at the hotel by the Big Spring Coffee Club — the city's unofficial chamber of commerce.

"Any decisions that were made in the community were made in that coffee shop," he said.

The hotel "had a very viable restaurant, very viable drug store, and the liquor store always did good," he said. "If you were in a civic club in Big

STATE IN BRIEF

Nine injured in brush fires

FORT HOOD (AP) — Brush fires ignited by spent ammunition during field training at a sprawling Army post injured nine members of the Louisiana National Guard.

Flames from the blazes Saturday afternoon were fanned by high wind and extinguished by Saturday night, Fort Hood officials said.

Nine Louisiana guardsmen were treated for smoke inhalation, suffered when they fought flames, said a base spokeswoman, Eloise Lundgren.

She said three brush fires involving an undetermined number of acres ignited.

"They were started, they believe, by routine training that the Louisiana National Guard was doing there," Ms. Lundgren said.

"We believe the fires resulted from spent ammunition," she said, adding that the type of ammunition was not immediately known. "They were firing a little bit of everything."

State to provide scrutiny

HOUSTON (AP) — The State Board of Insurance is investigating several leasing companies for insurance fraud, state officials say.

Although most of the companies are legitimate, some of the firms, hired by Texas businesses to handle personnel benefits, are leaving employees with unpaid bills and employers open to liability, the Houston Chronicle reported in Sunday editions.

Too often, leasing companies have provided insurance from unlicensed carriers banned from working in Texas.

Or in some instances, the leasing companies are obtaining legitimate insurance in a fraudulent way by circumventing state regulations, state regulators say.

Because leasing companies offer cheaper employee insurance benefits, they are especially attractive to small companies involved in high-risk industries.

Many leasing firms do a good job, said Charles Babb, legal counsel for the Texas Workers Compensation Insurance Facility, a consortium of insurers that provides workers' compensation coverage for small employers.

INS sweeps target church

DALLAS (AP) — A North Texas Catholic Church priest says he's suspended future sessions on immigrant rights because federal immigration officials are now targeting the area, arresting undocumented workers.

The Rev. Juan Rodrigo Lira, who heads an Hispanic ministry at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Sherman, says he began the sessions, informing recent Hispanic immigrants on legal residency last October.

Lira invited Catholic Charities in Dallas to operate the sessions.

But a few days after the first meeting, U.S. Immigration and Naturalization began arresting several undocumented workers in Sherman, 60 miles north of Dallas.

"I started hearing some people expressing concern that maybe the two things were related," Lira said.

A January meeting was canceled by Lira after a second meeting seemed to prompt more raids, he said.

INS officials in Dallas say the timing of the arrests were merely a coincidence.

Rap group singer killed

DALLAS (AP) — A rap group member was shot to death at a party to raise money for the band after a fight broke out, police said. Two guests were wounded.

Robert Long of the rap group Straight-Jacket Posse died shortly after midnight Saturday when four men burst into his East Oak Cliff house, said officers.

Otis Majors, 20, was in undetermined condition Sunday at Methodist Medical Center after he was shot in the face, a spokeswoman said. James Monroe, another guest who was shot in the right leg, was in fair condition at Parkland Memorial Hospital.

The assailants, three of whom were armed, had been at Long's party earlier that evening and had apparently argued with at least one of the victims. Investigators said they were uncertain how the dispute began.

"It was enough for them to go and get their guns," homicide Sgt. Joe DeCorte said, adding that no arrests had been made.

Witnesses said the party was organized to raise money for the rap group. Participants were charged $2 at the door, with proceeds to pay for band members' jackets. About 20 people were at the party when gunfire erupted.

Police target gangs

DALLAS (AP) — Youths who join gangs could be getting into some heavy metal if Dallas police have their way: Arrests and handcuffing are planned under a new, get-tough approach.

No more Officer Friendly, police say. Unlike past visits to schools, the police message now is that if students and others join gangs, they face arrest, prison — even death.

Posters to be distributed to schools across the Dallas-Fort Worth area depict teen-agers led onto a prison bus, a young girl getting her mug shot taken, detectives examining a dead youth, and a corpse.

The advertising campaign mocks the glamorous image that teens may associate with gangs, police say.

HOTEL: Everybody met at the Settles

(From 1B)

Spring, you met at the Settles Hotel" from the 1930s well into the 1970s. "It wasn't posh, but it was nice and clean."

"It was the center of the town, the heart of the town," said Big Spring businesswoman Pat Porter, who serves on the Main Street board. "The idea of bringing it back as a pure hotel is a little farfetched."

Eventually, the downtown economy broke down, and the hotel started losing profits and was shut down.

By 1981, Big Spring Associates, which then owned the building, sold the hotel to Georgia and J.W. Rich. By 1984, the Gil Cuadra-controlled MPG Management Inc. of San Antonio bought the hotel for a reported $20,000. On the 1984 tax rolls, the hotel and land was valued at $284,000, according to the Howard County Appraisal District. The building was valued at $263,000 and the land, $21,000.

The next near, MPG sold the hotel to Cuadra.

Since then, Cuadra had considered turning the old hotel into a showplace reminiscent of its former splendor. The building would include a fine restaurant, a steak house, coffee shop, soda fountain, liquor store, retail outlets, bakery and a restored ballroom.

Cuadra reckoned that that old hotel, once restored, might be suitable as a retirement village. He considered offering the hotel to Howard College, but the college declined.

Cuadra even considered converting the hotel into a prison.

But, apparently lacking support and investors, Cuadra has, at least temporarily, pulled back from developing the building.

"He just never could come up with the right set of ideas and the right amount of money to make it happen," Atkins said.

Atkins envisioned prospective renovation plans for the hotel within and without the private sector and in joint private-public ventures. He also suggested that the hotel, if left neglected and unprotected from the elements, might be fit to be razed by outset of the 21st Century. But tearing down the 61-year-old, structurally-sound building would cost an estimated $375,000, which, Atkins said, might better be spend on revitalizing the building after back taxes are paid and investors are signed up to make something worthwhile out of the old hotel.

"We've looked at this old hotel (deteriorate) for 13 years," he said. "We've watched it be gutted, we've watched it lay dormant for three or four years before Mr. Cuadra got his hands on it" in 1984.

"We sat here in real hopes that Gil (Cuadra) would attract enough private investors and enough enthusiasm for the community," said Atkins, "that one of his projects might go over and give us a viable" old hotel in a downtown Big Spring that is seeking renewal.

Texans fill vacant seats in special elections

Associated Press

A cattle and sheep rancher and a gay rights lobbyist scored impressive victories Saturday in runoff elections to fill vacancies left by the resignations of politicians elected last November.

In Austin, Glen Maxey, the chief lobbyist for the Lesbian-Gay Rights Lobby of Texas defeated lawyer David Rodriguez for the 51st District seat left vacant by Lena Guerrero.

Ms. Guerrero was appointed to the Texas Railroad Commission by Gov. Ann Richards.

Maxey received 3,034 votes (54 percent) to Rodriguez' 2,576 votes, in unofficial election returns.

Maxey touted his experience working with lawmakers in getting funds from the Legislature to combat AIDS. Rodriguez campaigned to reverse the "economic devastation" of East Austin, included in the legislative district.

Maxey was the leading vote-getter in the 13-candidate field in the Feb. 9 special election. Rodriguez secured the No. 2-spot after a recount that he won by eight votes.

STATE

Turner received 6,452 votes (65 percent) to Sudderth's 3,413 in winning five of the six counties that make up the district. Turner won big in Brown, Coleman, Eastland, McCulloch and Runnels counties, while Sudderth won his home county of Comanche.

Turner will succeed Jim Parker, D-Comanche, who resigned to become legislative lobbyist for Richards.

All four candidates in both elections are Democrats.

Sudderth served two terms in the House, from 1957 to 1960. Turner has been president of the Panther Creek school board and has lobbied the Legislature for the Farm Bureau.

Sudderth accused his opponent of relying on campaign funds from special interest groups. Turner said he couldn't afford to fund his own race as Sudderth did.

The Abilene Reporter-News reported last week that of the $27,876 received by the Sudderth campaign since Jan. 7, about $24,000 was the lawyer's own money. Sudderth also limited contributions to $250 or less.

"I think the major issue is that I have paid for this campaign out of my own pocket," Sudderth said.

Turner said accepting contributions from political action committees, including $14,999 from the Texas Farm Bureau, was the only way an average person could afford to run.

"I don't know any way a sheep herder from Voss, Texas, can finance a campaign like this without help. If he (Sudderth) spent it all out of his pocket, I admire him. I'm not that wealthy," Turner said.

A third House vacancy, from the resignation of Houston Republican Barry Connelly, will be filled March 9. That 126th District runoff involves Republicans Peggy Hamric and Russell Little, both of Houston.

Savings returned to Monytron depositors

DALLAS (AP) — Hispanics lined up in the Mexican Consulate on Friday and Saturday for reimbursement of money they deposited in the late 1980s to an unchartered, uninsured Houston-based business that billed itself as "a bank for Hispanics."

"I just never thought this would ever happen. I had given up on getting my money back," Jose Sosa, a 34-year-old construction worker said after receiving a check for $4,000.

"If this is not a miracle, I don't know what it is," Sosa said.

Sosa was one of about 200 Hispanics in the Dallas-Fort Worth area, most of them immigrants, who thought they had lost their savings — a total of about $450,000 — three years ago when Attorney General Jim Mattox shut down Monytron, Inc.

But last September, after almost 2 years of litigation, a state district court in Houston ruled that the Fiesta Mart supermarket chain, which controlled Monytron, had violated the Texas Deceptive Trade Practices Act and ordered it to pay $7 million to Monytron depositors everywhere.

Also, a law firm that represented Monytron before it was closed agreed to pay $750,000 in an out-of-court settlement, according to John O'Neill of Houston, the lead attorney in the case.

Besides Dallas and Houston, Monytron had branches in San Antonio, Los Angeles, Chicago, Mexico, Guatemala, El Salvador and Colombia.

A Spanish-speaking staff offered financial services such as savings accounts, check cashing, money orders and money wiring to Latin American countries.

Monytron did not require a Social Security number, which was attractive to illegal immigrants, who had none.

Eventually, the company ran into hard times and stopped allowing depositors to withdraw money, said Rich Tomlinson of Houston, an assistant attorney general in the consumer protection division. Complaints began pouring in from around the state.

In 1988, the state closed the business, and state officials informed depositors that because the company did not have enough assets and was not federally insured, it would be difficult to recover the money.

But two Houston law firms, after hearing scores of complaints from the Houston area alone, filed a class action lawsuit on behalf of the depositors, one of whom worked as a maid for one of the lawyers.

Each Houston depositor received 1.3 times his total deposit. Dallas depositors received no interest because the money ran out, said Joe Crabb of Houston, one of three court-appointed trustees who was on hand Friday to distribute the checks in Dallas.

That didn't matter to Santos Pacheco of Dallas, who had deposited $9,370 in donations he received after his 6-year-old son, Edwin, was killed in a traffic accident.

"I am just happy to get my money back," Pacheco said. "We were saving that money for emergencies."

Museum display focuses on chewing, spitting

By Michael Graczyk
Associated Press Writer

"Ye chewers of that noxious weed,
Which grows in earth's most cursed sod,
Be pleased to clean your filthy mouths,
Outside the sacred House of God."

— Notice outside an Austin church, 1840s

WASHINGTON-ON-THE-BRAZOS (AP) — European visitors found it repulsive. Texans, on the other hand, loved it. Sam Houston is said to have been addicted to it.

And now the operators of the Star of the Republic Museum want people to remember how pervasive the practice of tobacco chewing and spitting was in the early days of Texas.

"That's what's pretty exciting about working here. You can deal with all aspects of life," Sherry Humphreys, curator of exhibits at the museum, says of her exhibit entitled "Chew, Chew, Chew and Spit, Spit, Spit: Tobacco in the Texas Republic."

"You're not limited to major military events or the political events, even though they're terrifically important. Everybody knows that and we don't try to down play that at all, but these are just things that people don't normally think about."

The exhibit debuted over the weekend as the museum celebrated the 155th anniversary of Texas' Declaration of Independence from Mexico. The museum and a surrounding state park are at the site of the signing on March 2, 1836.

The chew and spit presentation includes displays of advertisements for things like spittoons, an example of roped tobacco, pictures, explanations and an authentic snuff box of the era.

"What we want to do is show the human aspects of things," Ms. Humphreys says. "We're not going to talk about the battles so much. We're trying to show that there were really people who lived then. Even Sam Houston spit on somebody's porch. There are stories about that kind of thing."

The exhibit's title is drawn from a letter written by a British traveler, Francis Sheridan, from Galveston in 1842.

"High and low, rich and poor, young and old, chew, chew, chew, and spit, spit, spit, all the blessed day and most of the night," Sheridan wrote, complaining about the "incessant remorseless spitting" of tobacco juice and use of other tobacco products.

Research by the museum shows tobacco often was twisted into rope and sold by the yard and could be chewed, shaved for pipe smoking or powdered into snuff. It was sold under the name "Honey Dew," "Pig Tail," and "Twist" and also could be flavored with licorice, rum, sugar, honey, nutmeg, cinnamon or other sweeteners.

Cuspidors or spittoons and spit boxes were in all hotels, public buildings and homes and if a receptacle was not provided, the floor was quickly covered with "ambeer," which was a more polite term for spit, Ms. Humphreys says.

"They really expected you to provide a spittoon," she says.

Sheridan wrote that he once watched a man teaching his 2-year-old son in Galveston how to spit "and loudly applauding every successful effort of the precious prodigy."

The practice was not limited to men, with early 19th century women often pipe smokers and dippers, Ms. Humphreys says, noting that fancy snuff boxes likely would be found in the living rooms of Texas homes.

"No gentleman would think of smoking in a parlor with ladies present, without first asking their permission, yet he would not hesitate to chew, and its necessary sequel, to spit," she says.

Tobacco critics, however, blamed it for "perverted sexuality, impotency and cancer."

Coach criticized for paddling

WHITNEY (AP) — Coach Jimmy Parker's latest way of motivating his football players to pass is drawing the ire of several parents at Whitney High School.

Parker apparently decided to paddle players who got "concern notices" halfway through the six-week grading period, and many angry parents wanted to take him out to the woodshed.

Parents complained that the 25 students were whipped in front of the entire athletics class, each student receiving one "pop" for each notice that he was failing in a course.

At least four of the students reported minor bruising that lasted several days.

"We feel that the no-pass, no-play rule is their punishment," said Dana Hadden, whose son was paddled. "I wouldn't live with my husband if he beat my kids like this. And I'm supposed to live with this school?

"I'm not against corporal punishment, but you're going to do it right. You're not going to leave bruises."

Parker, who is the school's athletic director, said he apologized to his students shortly after the Feb. 13 incident.

"And I've been trying to call their families and apologize to their parents, too," he said.

Desert Storm cards play historic winning hand

By Tina Stewart
Staff Writer

Combine one of today's fastest-growing hobbies with the nostalgia of history and you might stumble onto one of tomorrow's most treasured collections. Desert Storm trading cards, a non-sport card that includes scenes from the recent war with Iraq, are currently selling "like hotcakes," according to Roger Stinson, owner of Bases Loaded Cards, Comics & Games, 114 Andrews Highway.

Although the cards have been publicized nationally, Stinson said they have not been available in Midland until recently. "People started asking me about two weeks ago when they heard about it on the news nationally. I heard about it so I started inquiring and bugging my distributors."

Eventually Stinson's persistence paid off and it appears to be well worth the trouble. Out of the 48 boxes of Desert Storm cards that Stinson received Wednesday, he has sold 45. Each box contains 36 packages, which contain eight trading cards each, totaling approximately 12,960 cards sold.

The cards include military war leaders such as Gen. Colin Powell and Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf; fighter planes and tanks, such the Stealth Fighter/Bomber and the M-1 Abrams; the Patriot Missile and the Scud Missile; and other scenes from the war.

The cards are manufactured by Topps, a prominent producer of sports cards, and currently sell for 99 cents a package. A increase in the value of the cards, however, won't be determined until it is known how many cards will be produced by the company.

"Topps is the biggest non-sport card producers. They will not issue distribution numbers, so people have to speculate," Stinson said. "You never know if there will be low production numbers. They could be putting out a billion cards, you never know."

Despite speculation, Stinson said he predicts the cards will eventually go up in price, especially due to recent developments in the war. Specifically, he said he expects the Scud Missile card to sell for at least $2.

Buyers of the war cards tend to be more than typical card collectors — they tend to be collectors of history. "Most people buying want something historical, something that will obtain value. The trading cards are one of the most valuable collectibles from the war," Stinson said.

Other war memorabilia that is selling well includes the board game "A Line In The Sand," a copy of a comic book given to the soldiers entitled "Winning in the Desert," and a line of plastic model fighter planes designed after planes used in Desert Storm.

The board game, according to Stinson, was developed before the war broke out. "The game was formulated before the war, when we were speculating on a war between Iraq. They had to change it a little bit before it became an actual historic game," he said.

Aside from monetary value of the cards, Stinson said he felt the cards are representative of American pride. "The return of our troops is going to explode the popularity of the cards into great proportions because of the outpouring of pride. When the men and women return, we're going to have such pride, we'll want to be part of history," he said.

Although the cards have given Stinson's business a new twist, he said he wished they were available at more locations, including all 7-Elevens. "It would be better if everyone could have the cards and have access to this history. It's wonderful that when we talk about freedom, that we've actually done something about it."

Desert Storm cards, currently offered locally, are being tapped as popular war memorabilia.

Addictions becoming booming big business

Associated Press

Addiction is big business in the United States with 6,000 to 10,000 drug and alcohol rehabilitation centers offering in-patient treatment programs that run as high as $24,000.

That's a symptom of the epidemic of addictive behavior, according to an article in the current issue of Harper's Bazaar, with Americans turning up chocoholics, sexaholics and workaholics unhealthily linked to lousy lovers, mothers, shopping malls and calories.

Americans are addicted to video games, alcohol, nicotine, cocaine, caffeine and television soaps.

About 1.5 million Americans seek treatment for alcohol abuse each year; those are the ones acknowledging and acting on their problem. By some expert estimates, 10.5 million adults have, at some time, undergone a period of alcohol abuse. An additional 7 million show persistent heavy drinking patterns.

Narcotics Anonymous, an organization modeled on the 12-Step program of Alcoholics Anonymous, currently counts in the United States some 14,000 separate self-help groups. Fifty-four million Americans still smoke cigarettes.

These days people tend to toss around pathological terms with heady abandon. Addiction has become so overused the American Psychological Association no longer uses it as a diagnosis. Substance dependence is the correct expression when referring to alcohol, tobacco, drug or food compulsions.

A compulsion is a repetitive behavior a person feels obliged to perform, even when he-she knows it has unhealthy consequences. An obsession is a nagging fear, notion or impulse that lingers in the mind. Dependence is a tendency to lean upon another person or thing.

Not all compulsions are created equal. The consequences to society vary in their severity and effect on the health of the individual. Alcohol abuse accounts today for half of all automobile fatalities.

An estimated third of all patients in psychiatric hospitals have substance abuse as a primary or secondary diagnosis, a reality that complicates 20 to 30 percent of admissions to medical hospitals.

Of Americans struggling to stop smoking, there exists a 70 percent relapse rate within the first year.

The hot new fad for curing smoking, overeating and bad relationships are subliminal message tapes.

"The makers of these tapes want us to believe they can present a message so weak in intensity that the receiver doesn't even know it is there, yet it will have a compelling effect on behavior," said Timothy E. Moore, professor of psychology at York University in Toronto. "In fact, there is no good evidence that such subliminal messages work at all. Such a belief borders on believing in magic."

In-patient treatment programs often require stays of 28 days.

"These programs are good," Fishman said, "when the patients' environments are poisonous. And they need to get to a therapeutic milieu."

The problems come when they have to return home.

"I try to have them stay in their own surroundings and change the environment so it isn't harmful," she added.

In the area of compulsion, long-term psychoanalysis and insight therapy is being traded in for short-term treatment and behavior modification.

"What I'm seeing increasingly," Fishman said, "is women patients wanting a quick fix — something that takes little time or energy. The briefer the better. And if there's a pill, give it to me."

Rules show respect for flag

By Michel Stanush
N.Y. Times News Service

All the recent flag-waving has many new flag-flyers arguing about how the flag is supposed to be displayed.

The Land of the Free allows flag-burning, but it also takes flag protocol seriously as a symbol of patriotism and respect. For a guideline on proper flying of the flag, the United States Code provides an outline of rules and customs:

It is customary to display a flag from sunrise to sunset on buildings and stationary flagstaffs. But, when citizens want to express a patriotic spirit, the flag may be displayed 24 hours a day.

During the hours of darkness, the flag should be properly illuminated. The code, however, does not mandate the type of lighting.

"Use common sense," says Gerald Luchino, acting director of the Institute of Heraldry in Alexandria, Va., which develops flag-flying policies for the U.S. Army but also answers questions about civilian flag use.

"We don't want to give the (impression) we forgot to bring in the flag. You want to show you are intentionally flying the flag. Some people say it should have its own source of illumination; others say as long as it's illuminated, it doesn't have to have its own source."

Don't drape the flag over the hood, top, sides or back of a car or boat; when the flag is displayed on a car, the staff should be fixed firmly to the chassis or clamped to the right fender.

LUCHINO NOTES many motorists are affixing flags to an antenna, a practice not addressed in the code; he says antenna flag-flyers should make sure the flag remains in good condition. "Once it starts to fray and tatter and fade, then it should be taken off," he says.

The flag shouldn't touch anything beneath it, such as the ground or the floor. It shouldn't be carried flat or horizontally, but "always aloft and free."

The flag should always fall freely and never be festooned, in folds or drawn back. It shouldn't be used as clothing, bedding, drapery or as a ceiling covering. Flag patches are OK. Flag lapel pins should be worn on the left near the heart.

There are no rules addressing where a flag should be hung from a house. But when displayed flat against a wall or in a window, the blue field of stars — called the union — should be to the left of observers on the street.

When a flag is displayed sticking out from a window sill or balcony or in front of a building, the blue field of stars should be at the peak of the staff, unless the flag is at half-staff, in which case it should still be the highest part of the flag.

When the flag is displayed over the middle of a street, it should be hung vertically with the blue field to the north in an east-west street, or to the east in a north-south street.

When a flag is suspended over a sidewalk from a rope extending from a house to a pole, the flag should be hoisted out — union first — from the building.

When used on a speaker's platform, the flag should be above and behind the speaker if it is affixed to a flat surface. When displayed from a staff or pole, the flag should be on the audience's left.

THE FLAG should not be hung with the union down; this is used as a signal of "dire distress" when life or property is in extreme danger.

If the flag is flying on separate flagpoles with another flag, such as a state flag, the U.S. flag should be on the viewer's left. If on the same flagpole, the U.S. flag should be on top.

When grouped with flags of other states, cities or organizations, the U.S. flag should be at the center and highest point.

When displayed with another flag against a wall on crossed staffs, the U.S. flag should hang on the observer's left and its staff should be placed in front of the other.

The flag should be hoisted briskly and lowered ceremoniously. When flown at half-staff, it should be hoisted to the peak for an instant, then lowered to half-staff position.

Only all-weather flags should be displayed on days when the weather is inclement.

The flag shouldn't be fastened, displayed or stored in such a way that it might become easily damaged or soiled. When it is no longer in good condition, it should be destroyed in a dignified way, preferably by burning.

The flag should never be used as part of advertising. Advertising signs should not be fastened to a staff or halyard from which the flag is flown.

According to Luchino, there are no formal rules for folding a flag. The intricate triangular fold used by the military and other organizations is not required for civilians.

For flag-display questions not addressed in the United States Code, Luchino recommends using common sense and respect. The Boy Scout Handbook also has a chapter on the right way to display the Stars and Stripes.

To keep a flag from wearing prematurely, retailers recommend washing periodically with a gentle detergent, then drying naturally. Indoor flags usually are dry cleaned.

To keep the flag from tearing, do not place it where it will whip against rough surfaces, tree branches, wires or cables. Also, flags should be inspected regularly for tears or raveled hems.

DEAR ABBY

Family hopes closed casket opened mourners' memories

By Abigail Van Buren

DEAR ABBY: I am writing in response to the letter signed "Unfinished Business," from someone who had not seen his deceased friend for several years and was dismayed with the family's decision to have a closed-casket funeral. I can relate to this situation wholeheartedly from the family's point of view.

Van Buren

When my father died of cancer 10 years ago, he had requested a closed-casket funeral. What an uproar that created! Relatives and so-called friends who had not seen Dad in years were appalled. They said, "This is not customary! We wanted one last look at him." My response was, "Dad wanted you to remember him as robust and healthy like he was, before he became ill."

We found a picture of Dad taken when he was hale and hearty, and placed it on his closed casket, surrounded by flowers. — HIS DAUGHTER IN CALIFORNIA

DEAR DAUGHTER: Many others wrote objecting to the closed-casket funeral. Read on:

DEAR ABBY: I agree with "Unfinished Business" about closed-casket wakes. Recently I drove 60 miles one way to pay my respects to a friend who had died of a heart attack, only to find a closed casket. I was not very well acquainted with the widow, so I could have just as well paid my respects by sending her a sympathy card.

My point in writing is to suggest to families who feel that way that the words "Casket will be closed" be added to the obituary in the newspaper. It may not be considered proper etiquette, but it will save a lot of hard feelings. — FINISHED BUSINESS IN BRYAN, OHIO

DEAR ABBY: You had a letter in your column about a girl whose friend was nearly hit by a car because she was jogging with a headset on and couldn't hear the car coming.

My twin sister, Jackie Poole Roach, wasn't that lucky. She was killed in January 1988. She was jogging with a headset on while listening to the Super Bowl. She was struck by a car driven by a 21-year-old man who left the scene of the accident. She lived four hours after she was found. I pray she never knew what hit her.

She left a husband, son and daughter, as well as 800 students, teachers, family and friends who filled the United Methodist Church in Lebanon, Ohio, the day of her funeral. — JILL POOLE, ZANESVILLE, OHIO

DEAR JILL: My profound sympathy at the loss of your beloved twin. It would be a generosity if everyone who saw a jogger wearing a headset in traffic would stop that jogger and warn him or her of the inherent danger of that risky practice.

CHUCKLE (OR GROAN) FOR TODAY: "God invented football so grown men would have something to do between wars." — Dan Jenkins

Both local high school baseball teams see action early this week, with the Midland Lee Rebels hosting Lubbock Coronado today in a 4 p.m. doubleheader at Angels Stadium, and the Midland High Bulldogs hosting Lubbock Monterey in another twinbill at 4 p.m. Tuesday, also at Angels Stadium.

Lee and MHS were third and fifth, respectively, at the recent Tournament of Champions. Lee beat Del Rio 5-4 for third place, while Midland High blanked El Paso Riverside 5-0 on James Madrid's one-hitter.

Lee, 4-3, had a chance to advance into the championship game Saturday, but eventual runnerup Fort Worth Southwest moved into the finals instead with a 15-5 win.

Madrid has both season wins for MHS, 2-3.

Both local teams travel to the Carlsbad, N.M. tournament Thursday.

Pros rained out

MIAMI (AP) - Wind, rain and lightning blunted the dual charges of Jack Nicklaus and Curtis Strange and delayed until Monday the completion of the Doral Open.

Andy Bean and lefty Russ Cochran shared the lead at 11 under par when a severe thunderstorm forced a delay in play at 4:20 p.m., EST Sunday.

Those two, along with 20 others, marked their positions on the rain-sodden Blue Monster course at Doral and are scheduled to return at 9 a.m. Monday to complete the tournament.

It marks the first time since the 1988 Canadian Open that a regular-tour event has been extended to Monday.

'Horns hammer hapless Hogs

■ He needed a come-from-behind effort in the second half, but Texas coach Tom Penders finally beat Arkansas.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — When Texas was trailing No. 3 Arkansas by 14 points in the second half, that's when Tom Penders stopped coaching and said, "OK guys, go get 'em."

Texas responded to the large deficit with sizzling shooting and rugged rebounding to defeat Arkansas 99-86 Sunday in the Razorbacks' Southwest Conference basketball finale.

Benford Williams, playing just over a half because of fouls, scored 22 points, and teammates Joey Wright and Locksley Collie each added 19 in dropping Arkansas to 28-3.

Sub Dexter Cambridge added 15, and Penders — the man Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson calls "Sweet Tom" — said, "Today, we had a number of guys step up."

Arkansas is leaving for the Southeastern Conference, and Richardson said, "It was sad to be playing here for the last time. The higher ups make decisions where we go."

Texas fans chanted "SEC, SEC" with 1:44 to play as Texas (20-7) built its lead to 14 points.

Arkansas, which already has clinched its third straight SWC basketball championship, was shooting for a 16-0 conference finish. Texas, 13-3 in the SWC, gained its third consecutive 20-game season, which is a school record. It was the first win for the 'Horns since 1988, when Bob Weltlich was still the head coach. Penders was 0-6 against Arkansas going into Sunday's game.

Texas trailed 55-45 at halftime after Arkansas followed a timeout for national television with a 16-6 run, capped by Arlyn Bowers' 3-pointer that quieted the sellout crowd of 16,231.

Arkansas' lead grew to 61-47 with 17:39 to go, but Texas went ahead to stay, 73-72, at the 9:46 mark.

The Texas surge came as Arkansas, which hit 8 of 10 3-pointers in the first half, lost its shooting touch, and Longhorn rebounding prevented second shots.

Perhaps the most spectacular of numerous highlight plays came when Guillermo Myers of Texas leaped high and guided Williams' shot into the basket for an 84-76 lead.

Williams, who led all scorers at the half with 16 points, was whistled for his third and fourth fouls within 13 seconds with just over 16 minutes to play and fouled out with 2:22 left. He played only 23 minutes.

Arkansas' Todd Day and Oliver Miller were in foul trouble, picking up four, but Day was in for 33 minutes, Miller 36.

Day, who led Arkansas with 18, said: "We'll learn something from it. The loss really doesn't hurt the guys who are not from Texas."

Tark says Rebs can be had, others wonder

FULLERTON, Calif. (AP) — Next goal.

Now that UNLV is the first team in 12 years to finish the regular season undefeated, it's on to the Big West tournament and NCAA tournament, where the top-ranked Runnin' Rebels are favored to defend their national championship.

After UNLV's 104-83 over Fullerton State on Saturday, coach Jerry Tarkanian said the seemingly invincible Rebels are beatable.

"Anybody can beat us on a given night; all it takes is one shot," Tarkanian said after UNLV (27-0) ran its winning streak to 38 games over two seasons. "When you get to the tournament, you have to be both good and lucky. I know we're good; I just hope we're lucky."

Despite continuing problems with the NCAA, UNLV is allowed to defend its title. At one point, the NCAA ruled the Rebels ineligible to play in the tournament, but later changed the ruling and allowed them to compete this season and sit out next year's tournament.

The last teams to complete the regular-season undefeated were Indiana State, with Larry Bird, and Alcorn State in 1978-79. The last team to win the national championship with an undefeated record was Indiana in 1976.

The Rebels were clearly the dominant team in last year's tournament, and they appear to be even better this season.

UNLV beat its opponents by an average of 30 points, and their smallest margin of victory was seven points (112-105 against No. 2 Arkansas on Feb. 10).

Larry Johnson led UNLV over Fullerton State with 33 points and 11 rebounds, and Greg Anthony added 19 points.

Tarkanian said the Rebels hadn't really been thinking about finishing with a perfect record.

"I'm very surprised," he said. "When I looked at the schedule early in the year, we had Michigan State, Louisville and Arkansas on the road in non-league games, and we also had New Mexico State and Santa Barbara.

"I knew we'd have a good team; just how good I didn't know."

Fullerton coach John Sneed knows how good the Rebels are; he was pleased the Titans (14-13) stayed within 21 points.

"I don't think our players have anything to be ashamed of. We played a great team," Sneed said. "You have to have depth and energy to stay with UNLV, and we did keep it to a 6-point game for awhile."

Joe Small scored 27 points and J.D. Green 21 for Fullerton.

Northwest Texas girls rule

■ Region I champions swept the recent state girls basketball tournament.

Associated Press

AUSTIN — The Panhandle and South Plains of Texas ruled the 1991 girls state basketball tournament.

For the second time in four years, schools from those areas dominated the tournament, grabbing all five division titles.

"Yes. Isn't that sweet?" said Amarillo Tascosa coach Mike Miller, minutes after his team defeated Victoria 54-41 for the Class 5A crown. "We are happy to be considered for inclusion in that group. It is quite a honor."

Tascosa's victory capped the clean sweep after Levelland in 4A, Tulia in 3A, Abernathy in 2A and Nazareth in Class A collected championship trophies at the 41st annual tournament.

In 1987, Plainview in 5A; Levelland in 4A; Slaton in 3A; Morton in 2A; and Sudan in Class A were the winners.

The 1991 champions, all within 120 miles of one another along Interstate 27, claim 30 state championships among them since Abernathy first made the long trip to Austin in 1958.

What makes basketball in the region so special?

"There are a lot of schools that allow quality programs," said Levelland coach Dean Weese. "A lot of the teams that come in here 36-0 wouldn't be so fortunate if they played our schedule in our part of the country."

Most coaches in the area attribute their success to Weese, who won his 10th state championship Saturday in his 27th year of coaching. Weese has won more games than any other Texas girls coach, and has coached in the Final Four 17 times.

Early next season, Weese should secure victory No. 1,000. The total stands at 989.

"It all goes back to Dean Weese," said Abernathy coach Billy Pat Mouser, who led the Lady Lopes to a seventh title. "There are a lot of great fundamental coaches up here, and Dean stresses fundamentals more than anything. He has shared so much with us."

First-year Nazareth Coach Denese Skinner knew full-well what she was getting into when she accepted the Swiftette job.

"There are three parts to Nazareth's success," Skinner said. "The first part is tradition. The second part is fundamentals. The third, and most important, is hard-working kids."

Skinner and the Swiftettes got off to a 0-6 start, but still had the complete support of the town and topped the polls.

"The girls never doubted they would be state champs," Skinner said. "We adopted a saying. 'It's not where your start, it's where you finish.'"

Another part of the teams success is that they play each other in the regular season, and the state tournament becomes a kind of reunion.

"Our kids just try to make each other better," said Mouser, whose daughter was a starting guard for Abernathy.

Petty wins this one for crew

ROCKINGHAM, N.C. — Kyle Petty said this one was for his crew.

A year ago, the second-generation NASCAR Winston Cup star swept the pole and the race here, gaining not only one of the biggest purses in stock car history but also a vintage Rolls Royce from team owner Felix Sabates.

This time, Sabates told Petty he would do something extra for the crew if the driver could match his 1990 showing.

Sunday's victory, therefore, not only put $131,450 into the team coffers, but earned crew chief Gary Nelson a motorcyle, his wife a houseful of furniture and the rest of the team the use of a 30-foot boat.

"Last year, everything was going to me," Petty said. "This time, it was for these guys who work so hard to get us to Victory Circle."

Despite dominating the first two-thirds of Sunday's 492-lap race at North Carolina Motor Speedway, Petty needed some help from a caution flag 15 laps from the end to help him overcome a challenge from Ken Schrader.

"We were real fortunate," Petty said. "There was no way I could have caught Kenny at the end. He was gone. But Rockingham's been good to us."

"I hated to see it," Schrader said of the late yellow. "But, being honest, we were third-best car out there. Rusty (Wallace) blew up and Kyle got caught in the pits. He had the best car and deserved to win."

Schrader, trying for his first victory in more than a year, led by as much as 20 seconds in the late going after Petty fell behind while making a green-flag pit stop for gas and four tires.

Mr. Robinson visits old neighborhood

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — David Robinson scored 12 of his game-high 26 points in the third quarter Sunday, leading the San Antonio Spurs to a 107-85 victory over Washington, handing the Bullets their season-high sixth straight loss.

Bernard King scored 19 points for the Bullets, who suffered their 12th loss in 14 games.

NBA

Terry Cummings scored 22 points and Sean Elliott had 21 for San Antonio, which ended a two-game losing streak.

The Spurs, who blew leads of 17 and 18 points against Boston and New York in the past week, watched an 18-point lead shaved to four at the start of the third quarter before Robinson took charge.

Robinson, who attended the U.S. Naval Academy in nearby Annapolis, Md., and Cummings scored four points apiece in an 8-0 run that gave the Spurs a 63-51 lead with 9:10 left in the third period.

After Washington got within eight, Robinson scored four straight baskets to ignite a 12-6 Spurs run that made it 77-61 with 58 seconds left in the period.

Washington got no closer than 14 points the rest of the way.

The Spurs appeared to be following the script of their previous two games of this road trip, opening a 35-17 lead after one period only to have it all but disappear. Cummings hit all six of his shots and the Spurs shot 56 percent from the floor in the opening period.

But Washington started the second period with a 10-1 run and eventually pulled within four, 42-38, after consecutive three-point plays by John Williams and two free throws by A.J. English. San Antonio settled for a 55-49 halftime lead.

Willie Anderson scored 14 points and Paul Pressey had 12 points and nine assists for San Antonio.

Harvey Grant had 11 points and Pervis Ellison 10 for the Bullets.

San Antonio coach Larry Brown said he wasn't worried when his team's lead went from 18 points to four.

"Didn't even think about it and we didn't talk about it at halftime," he said. "There were reasons for it dwindling in New York, we stopped playing. But here I thought the Bullets played and executed well."

Rockets 104, Lakers 95

INGLEWOOD, Calif. — Kenny Smith scored 15 of his 34 points in the third quarter and added 10 more during a fourth-period rally as Houston snapped a 14-game Forum losing streak.

Houston, which hadn't prevailed on the Lakers' home court since Jan. 30, 1985 and was coming off its lowest offensive effort in almost two years in an 83-80 loss to the Clippers on Thursday night, beat a Pacific Division team for the first time in nine tries this season.

Vlade Divac scored 23 points and James Worthy added 21 for the Lakers, who lost for only the fifth time in 28 games.

Blazers 116, Celtics 107

BOSTON — Guards Clyde Drexler, Terry Porter and Danny Ainge scored 28 of Portland's 33 fourth-quarter points as the Trail Blazers broke a four-game losing streak.

With Portland leading 94-93 in the battle of division leaders, Porter's 3-pointer with 5:23 left kicked off an 8-point run in which he followed with a layup, Ainge hit one free throw and Drexler sank two.

That made the score 102-93 with 4:32 to go, and Portland led by at least four points the rest of the way. Drexler had 12 points in the period, Porter 11 and Ainge 5.

Pistons 107, Clippers 98

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Joe Dumars scored 14 of his 26 points in the fourth quarter Sunday as the Pistons ended their longest losing streak in five years.

The Pistons had lost five straight, their worst streak since losing six in a row from Dec. 21, 1985 to Jan. 3, 1986.

Jazz 95, 76ers 92

PHILADELPHIA — Karl Malone scored 35 points and Thurl Bailey led a late run that carried Utah, snapping the 76ers' seven-game winning streak.

Trailing 89-86, Utah outscored the 76ers 9-3, culminating with a Bailey dunk with 5.9 seconds left. Bailey had six points in the surge, and a season-high 20 points.

Hawks 115, Bucks 106

MILWAUKEE — Dominique Wilkins scored 25 points and grabbed 11 rebounds as Atlanta scored its first victory over the Bucks in three tries this season.

Atlanta made 26 of 29 free throws to hold off the Bucks.

TOP: Duke wins ACC

(From 1C)

Miller followed Day with 16, while Lee Mayberry chipped in 15.

Texas had 26 turnovers to 18 for Arkansas but outshot the Razorbacks 58.5 percent to 38.8 percent and had 45 rebounds to 33 for Arkansas.

Arkansas was only one for 12 on 3-point attempts in the second half.

Both teams were called for 26 fouls. Arkansas was 21 of 30 from the free throw line, Texas 19 of 29.

Ohio St. 65, Michigan St. 64

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Jamaal Brown hit the second of two free throws with one second left to give second-ranked Ohio State a share of its first Big Ten Conference title in 20 years.

The victory was the eighth in a row for Ohio State (25-1 overall, 15-1 in the Big Ten), since suffering its only loss of the season at Michigan State. With two games remaining, the Buckeyes must win one game, or have fifth-ranked Indiana lose once, to take the title outright.

Michigan State (17-10, 10-7) had pulled even at 64 — capping a 7-0 run — on Matt Steigenga's 3-point shot with 39 seconds remaining.

The Buckeyes, who finished 15-0 at home this season, set up for a last shot.

Jim Jackson, who led Ohio State with 20 points, drove the middle and then passed to Brown on the left wing. His 14-foot shot with five seconds left hit the back of the rim and bounded back at him. He grabbed the rebound, but was knocked to the floor by Smith as the final horn sounded.

Duke 83, North Carolina 77

CHAPEL HILL, N.C. — Christian Laettner and Bobby Hurley each scored 18 points, and No. 8 Duke held off No. 4 North Carolina to win the Atlantic Coast Conference regular-season title.

The Blue Devils (25-6, 11-3), who led by 19 points with 12 minutes to play, will receive a bye in the opening round of this weekend's conference tournament.

North Carolina (22-5, 10-4) will play seventh-seeded Clemson in Friday's first round, which is short one team because of Maryland's NCAA probation.

Duke, which last won the ACC regular-season title in 1986, took command early with some solid passing to get the ball inside and crisp 3-point shooting.

The Blue Devils led by as many as 13 points in the first half and settled for a 46-36 halftime lead. Duke quieted the sellout crowd at the Smith Center with a 10-4 run midway through the second half which was started and finished with 3-pointers by Hurley. The run gave Duke a 67-48 lead with 12:02 to play.

Syracuse 62, Georgetown 58

SYRACUSE, N.Y. — Juniors Dave Johnson and Billy Owens led a second-half charge that carried No. 6 Syracuse to a Big East victory over Georgetown, dampening the Hoyas' chances for an NCAA berth.

Playing before 33,048, the largest on-campus crowd in NCAA history, Syracuse (26-4, 12-4) extended its winning streak over the Hoyas to four games with its second seasonal sweep.

Owens, who finished with 21 points despite shooting only 5-of-16, sank a pair of free throws with 4.3 seconds to secure the victory after the Orangemen missed four fouls in a row in the last 40.2 seconds.

Nebraska 85, Kansas 75

LINCOLN, Neb. —. Tony Farmer scored 18 points, and Nebraska took advantage of eight consecutive missed free throws by Kansas late in the game.

Nebraska (24-6, 9-5) finished third in the Big Eight, while Kansas (21-6, 10-4) fell into a tie for the title with Oklahoma State.

Washington 86, UCLA 68

SEATTLE — The last-place Huskies, led by Dion Brown's 28 points, handed Arizona the Pacifc-10 Conference basketball title by defeating 16th-ranked UCLA.

The Huskies (14-12 overall, 5-11 Pac-10) mathematically eliminated the Bruins (21-8, 9-7) from a chance of tying Arizona (12-4) for the conference championship. UCLA, with two regular-season games left, still is expected to get invited to the NCAA tournament.

E. Tennessee St. 101 Appalachian St. 82

ASHEVILLE, N.C. — Keith Jennings scored 15 points in the final 8½ minutes as No. 19 East Tennessee's record-setting offense overwhelmed Appalachian State.

RACE: Rain delays start, keeps stock car fans away

(From 1C)

A spin by Harry Gant on lap 478 brought out the seventh yellow flag of the race and gave Petty an opportunity to take his fourth career victory and second in a row in this event.

The green flag waved for the final time 11 laps from the end and Petty quickly drove his Pontiac Grand Prix past Schrader's Chevrolet Lumina, roaring around on the outside line on turn three of the 1.017-mile oval.

Petty easily stayed out front the rest of the way, crossing the finish line 1.09 seconds in front to take a purse augmented by a $68,400 Unocal Challenge bonus for winning from the pole.

A year ago, Petty won $294,450 here, including a bonus of $228,000 for winning from the pole. The Unocal bonus of $7,600 a race rolls over until somebody wins it.

Before Schrader found himself in the right place at the right time, the only driver able to challenge Petty was Wallace, who led as late as lap 434. However, the former Winston Cup champion wound up the race in the garage area with an engine problem.

Gant recovered to finish third, one lap off the pace, followed by Ricky Rudd and Bill Elliott.

Petty, the son of longtime Winston Cup star Richard Petty, averaged 124.083 mph.

Petty, who led all but 64 laps in winning here last March and was almost as dominant, leading 207 laps before a mechanical problem slowed him, in the fall race, was awesome in the early going Sunday.

He built leads of up to 14 seconds several times, leading by close to half a lap and losing the lead only during the leaders' green-flag pit stops.

Petty had lapped all but four cars in the 40-car field before Wallace gave him his first real challenge just past the 200-lap mark. With both leaders battling on worn tires, Wallace moved to the top spot on lap 219, fought off a challenge from Petty on lap 237 and pulled away to lead by 10 car lengths.

However, Petty regained the edge again during the next series of green-flag stops, coming out in the lead on lap 267.

With the new pit lane rules still in effect — prohibiting tire changes during caution periods — the race was again a series of sprints between green-flag fuel and tire stops.

Ryan talks about returning in '92

Associated Press

It's becoming a spring training tradition for the Texas Rangers, and it shows no signs of ending.

Nolan Ryan's agent, Dick Moss, is expected to get together with Rangers general manager Tom Grieve in Port Charlotte, Fla., sometime this week to discuss another contract extension for the 44-year-old pitcher.

"I told Tom last year, 'We'll probably still be doing this 20 years from now and still talking about how well he's performing,'" Moss said.

Last spring, Moss and Grieve negotiated a $3.3 million deal that brings Ryan back for a third year with the Rangers. Ryan is expected to start opening day against Milwaukee.

So far Ryan has looked good in workouts, and it's been a relief to manager Bobby Valentine.

"One of these years he's not going to be able to do that," Valentine said. "I'm relieved to see this isn't the year."

In his two seasons with the Rangers, Ryan is 29-19 with a 3.31 ERA.

In Tucson, Ariz., the Cleveland Indians are taking a good look at pitchers Mauro Gozzo, Willie Blair and Steve Cummings, all acquired in the deal that sent Bud Black to Toronto.

The Indians have at least one spot open in the rotation and also room for a spot starter and reliever. So, all three could possibly remain with the Indians.

Baseball

"It's a possibility," Blair said. "We've all been in the big leagues and we all have good enough stuff."

In Sarasota, Fla., Baltimore Orioles manager Frank Robinson said he would have to see Jim Palmer work in at least three exhibition games before he could begin to assess the chances of his comeback. At age 45, Palmer is trying to return to the majors after already being elected to the Hall of Fame.

Palmer threw 110 pitches in batting practice on Saturday and said Sunday that his arm felt fine.

At the Cincinnati camp in Plant City, Fla., Chris Sabo said he was hopeful of being able to overcome problems with sore knees that slowed him down last season.

"Mainly, I just want to stay healthy and maybe make my knees hold up longer," he said. "I would like to steal more bases. Last year in the second half, I lost that one step needed to be successful."

Sabo compensated with a career-high 25 homers last year but stole only 25 bases.

At the New York Mets training camp in Port St. Lucie, Fla., Gregg Jefferies said he was glad to be back at third base. Now, he would like to hit in that spot in the batting order, rather than second behind leadoff man Vince Coleman.

"I'm most comfortable batting third," Jefferies said. "I've always batted third.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

MONDAY, MARCH 4, 1991

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: An original thinker, you are much more interested in spiritual gains than the acquisition of possessions. Nevertheless, you need to provide for the future. Accepting new work responsibilities in late spring will bring lasting financial security.

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: actresses Kay Lenz and Paula Prentiss, singer Barbara McNair, bridge expert Charles Goren.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Your charm is a great asset now. Nurture your personal relationships and clear up any misunderstandings. Romance will improve when you tone down your language. Follow through on an investment hunch.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): The impulsive purchase of a luxury item could cause a misunderstanding with a loved one. Put work before pleasure. Realize that certain social activities are more trouble than they are worth.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Take off those rose-colored glasses and see things as they really are. Paperwork and business errands could leave you feeling pressured. Discuss mutual concerns with potential allies.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): Your determination helps you find challenging new work assignments. You feel encouraged by a change in personnel. Be more open to intuitive hunches. A friendship could turn romantic.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): Proceed with caution where financial ventures involving your friends are concerned. Find out more about the possible mutual benefits. Your mate encourages you to look beyond surface appearances.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): You gain new insights from a heart-to-heart talk with your partner. A budget revision will reduce domestic tension. Your patience is richly rewarded by a loved one's change of attitude.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): Refuse to go along with the crowd today. Afternoon is the best time for social activities, humanitarian endeavors and shopping. Catch up on your reading this evening.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): Travel prospects are excellent if you personally check all details. "Final sale" merchandise deserves careful scrutiny. A neighborly gesture puts you in a contented mood.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Look for changes in the views of your friends and allies. You may not know someone as well as you think you do. Stick to talking about things you know.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Volunteer to help your mate or partner with a difficult task. Joining forces with other people can be a smart move this week. Someone you admire shows new interest in your efforts.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): Long-term arrangements are in the spotlight. You could become the favorite of someone in authority. A new agreement brings peace of mind. Your humility impresses those who really count.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Act quickly and decisively in financial affairs. What you buy for someone could seal an alliance. A secret meeting takes place. Express your views with authority. Romance is in bloom!

TODAY'S CHILDREN are practical and inventive, always looking for a more efficient way to do things. These Pisces enjoy giving advice and have a deep desire to help others. Their childhood pals are likely to remain their life-long friends. Ambitious and reliable, these Pisces can find success in almost any field.

ANSWERS TO WEEKLY BRIDGE QUIZ

Q.1—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠J9 ♡KJ8652 ◇AK1093 ♣Void
The bidding has proceeded:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♡ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| 2 ◇ | Pass | 2 ♠ | Pass |
| ? | | | |

What action do you take?
A.—Partner's spade rebid is not forward-going. It simply shows at least a six-card suit, not much in the way of high cards and no liking for either red suit. Under the circumstances, we would throw in the towel. We think a raise to three spades would be a bit of a stretch, especially since the enemy may thwart club ruffs in our hand.

Q.2—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠QJ5 ♡105 ◇AK6 ♣Q10973
The bidding has proceeded:

| South | West | North | East |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 1 ♠ | Pass |
| ? | | | |

What do you bid now?
A.—We have stated many times, and do so once again: Include us out of those who insist on having four-card support to raise responder's major suit. Here, one no trump is out of the question with a weak doubleton in hearts and to rebid a shabby five-card club suit is naive. Bid two spades.

Q.3—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K6 ♡1054 ◇852 ♣A8764
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 1 NT | Pass |
| 3 ♡ | Pass | ? | |

What do you bid now?
A.—An awkward hand. You can't raise partner's second suit with only three-card support, or bid no trump with an unstopped suit. For the moment, you are forced to take a false preference to partner's first suit and wait for his next bid to clarify his holding. Bid three spades.
Q.4—Both vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠3 ♡QJ106 ◇A76 ♣AQJ85
The bidding has proceeded:

| North | East | South | West |
|---|---|---|---|
| 1 ♠ | Pass | 2 ♣ | Pass |
| 2 ♡ | Pass | ? | |

What do you bid now?
A.—Your hand has grown enormously, and no heart raise now will do it justice. The winning action is an advance cue-bid of three diamonds. When you later support hearts vigorously, partner will have a clear picture of your distribution, strength and ambition.
Q.5—Neither vulnerable, as South you hold:
♠8 ♡KQJ10762 ◇J965 ♣5
What is your opening bid?
A.—You have six playing tricks in hearts and one in diamonds, the side four-card suit. Applying the Rule of Two and Three, at this vulnerability your seven playing tricks rate an opening preempt of four hearts.
Q.6—As South, vulnerable, you hold:
♠K54 ♡AQ104 ◇J6 ♣K543
Partner opens the bidding with one spade. What do you respond?
A.—Even if you play five-card majors and forcing jump raises, you should not jump raise partner's suit without four-card support if there is any other choice available. Another pitfall to avoid is responding in a major at the two-level unless it's at least a five-card suit. Therefore, you should respond two clubs, even though the suit quality is nothing to be proud of.

Estefan attributes her recovery to fans, family, memory of father

MIAMI — Gloria Estefan says her recovery from a broken back that nearly left her paralyzed was spurred by the haunting memory of her father withering away in a wheelchair, and the overwhelming response of her fans.

Estefan

The Cuban-born pop singer returned to the stage this weekend to kick off a 41-city, 53-day world tour that wraps up in New York City in September.

Mrs. Estefan was on the last part of a sold-out world tour when her bus was rear-ended March 20, 1990, on a snowy Pennsylvania highway. She broke her back when she was hurled out of her bunk.

"I'm at a loss for words right now," she told an emotionally charged hometown audience Friday night. "I thought I'd have a million things to say when I got up here, but it's so hard.

"No matter what I say, it is not enough for all the love you've given me this year. You moved mountains for me."

Her physicians were in the audience at Municipal Auditorium. "I hope you're happy at what you're seeing, doc," Mrs. Estefan said.

BISMARCK, N.D. — Pulitzer Prize-winning novelist A.B. Guthrie said he writes about the wild West to show an honest picture of what life was like then.

Guthrie, whose manual for fiction writers is due out this month, said he admires the work of Jim Welch, author of "Indian Lawyer." But he is unimpressed with Larry McMurty's popular "Lonesome Dove."

"It strains credulity," he said, pointing to a passage in the book about throwing rattlesnake meat into a pot to cook.

"They would have shot the cook," the 90-year-old Montana native said. "Plausibility is the morality of fiction."

Guthrie, author of "The Big Sky" from which Montana takes its slogan, was an editor of a Lexington, Ky., newspaper when he started the book.

"I had adopted the false assumption that because I knew how to write for newspapers, I could write fiction," he said in Bismarck, where he's staying during the winter with his daughter. "Newspapers talk in surfaces. But fiction explores human motives, reasons, attitudes, feelings.

"My goal is to write prose that sings, and at the same time says what I want to say in exactly the way I want it said."

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — At age 68, award-winning folk-country musician Doc Watson isn't discussing retirement.

"I'm not going to talk about that," he said recently. "When I retire, everybody will know it. It could be next week, it could be next year, or whenever. We've got a few shows to do."

Watson, who's blind, won a Grammy last month for his album "On Praying Ground."

"My heart was really in this one and I guess it showed," he said about the album, which is gospel music-oriented. "It meant a lot to me to do a record I believe in, and that's the important thing."

Watson has been performing since the early 1960s. He's best known for his guitar playing and his repertoire of old-time country music.

NEW YORK — Gen. Colin Powell's daughter is a struggling actress who hopes she makes it big before anyone gets her dad interested in the White House.

Linda Powell, 26, said her father has no desire to be vice president. As for higher aspirations, she said with a laugh: "Oh, president? I hope I become famous first."

In the movie "Reversal of Fortune," Miss Powell played one of the law students who helps Alan Dershowitz win Claus von Bulow's case.

On Thursday, Miss Powell opens at the Samuel Beckett Theater on 42nd Street in "Judgment Day." She plays Anna, a flirt in a small German town in the 1930s.

She says her father doesn't talk a lot about his work as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff. "He guards his privacy and his opinions," she said. "We're allowed to have our opinions and he has his."

And what is her opinion about the Gulf War?

"I'm glad it's over. I think we did what we had to do."

SAN FRANCISCO — Rapper M.C. Hammer was honored as musician of 1990 and for having the year's outstanding album at the 14th Annual Bay Area Music Awards.

The neo-metal band Faith No More received five Bammies and led the varied field of individuals and groups with seven nominations.

Artists are nominated by a panel of more than 150 music critics, radio programmers and members of the music industry. Winners are decided by the public through ballots appearing in BAM, a pop-music magazine published in Oakland.

Saturday night's award ceremony was held at San Francisco's Civic Auditorium in a gala featuring live performances by Faith No More, Clarence Clemons and Carlos Santana.

Hammer was named the San Francisco Bay area's musician of the year, a write-in category.

Prices rally

NEW YORK (AP) — Oil prices rallied late Friday to close modestly higher for a fifth straight session in response to speculation that OPEC will soon take steps to cut back crude production.

"Going into an OPEC meeting, the trend of the market is always higher," said Nauman Barakat, a vice president at Merrill Lynch Energy Futures. "There is considerable talk and perception that there is going to be a material reduction in the output of the cartel, and that would be able to stabilize the market."

West Texas Intermediate for delivery in April settled at $19.38 per barrel, up 22 cents, on the New York Mercantile Exchange.

The per-barrel price of oil rose $1.47 for the week, as traders decided the post-war glut of crude would not be as bad as some had predicted, particularly if the production cuts are achieved at the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries meeting March 11.

Unleaded gasoline for delivery in April settled at 65.45 cents a gallon, up .64 cent.

Natural gas for April delivery fell 1.2 cents to $1.361 per 1,000 cubic feet. That was 1.6 cents higher for the week.

Travel surges

(NYT) — Some airlines and travel agents with business overseas have reported a surge of bookings as the Persian Gulf war drew to a close.

They said that while some Americans were still holding back for fear of terrorism, many others were now comfortable enough to travel abroad again, particularly because of the discounts being offered.

"Their tentative plans are becoming firm," said Steven E. Heydt, vice president of marketing for Liberty Travel, a large chain of travel agencies on the East Coast. "There is a general understanding that it's OK to travel again."

Big fine

DALLAS (AP) — A plastics company on the Texas coast has been levied the stiffest fine ever for violating federal hazardous waste law, the government says.

Formosa Plastics Corp. agreed Wednesday to pay a $3.4 million penalty for improper handling of hazardous waste and contamination, the Environmental Protection Agency said.

The fine is the largest hazardous waste penalty since the EPA was founded in 1970. The previous record fine — $2.8 million — was levied in 1987 by a federal judge against Environmental Waste Control Co. of Rochester, Ind.

Leading economic indicators index down

■ The index the government uses to predict economic development has slide for the sixth month in a row. Statistics show the last similar decline that hit the nation was back in the 1984 recession.

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The government index created to predict turns in the economy fell four-tenths of 1 percent in January, its sixth straight decline, the Commerce Department reported Friday.

Despite the persistent negative readings in the index of leading indicators, the longest such string since 1984, most analysts still say the economy is likely to climb out of recession this summer.

The declines in the index during the last six months have been less severe, averaging eight-tenths of 1 percent, than during the 1984 period, when there was no recession.

Indeed, half the components have advanced during the latest two months.

Over all, economists were skeptical Friday that the index was providing either a clear or reliable signal.

The index failed to provide an early warning of the current recession, said Robert A. Brusca, chief economist at Nikko Securities Co. International, adding that "there's no way to tell" whether its limited, albeit extended, decline should be taken as indicating the recession will be short and shallow.

On average, the eight postwar recessions have lasted 11 months, with a peak-to-trough decline in gross national product of 2.5 percent.

In other reports released today, the Commerce Department said construction spending plunged 2.6 percent in January, to its lowest level in four years, and the purchasing managers' association said its index of manufacturing activity rose slightly in February.

January's decline in the leading indicators became the sixth in a row because the December index was revised to a decline of one-tenth of 1 percent instead of the increase of one-tenth of 1 percent that was initially reported.

The revision mainly reflected a smaller rise in the length of the average workweek.

Six of the 11 index components contributed to the January decline, the most important being a drop in the length of the workweek, which more than wiped out the December increase in that component.

The others were a decline in building permits, faster deliveries by suppliers, a decline in the M-2 money supply, a decline in the price of materials particularly sensitive to the business cycle and a fall in stock prices as measured by the Standard & Poor's 500-stock index.

In recent weeks, stock prices and the money supply have advanced sharply, suggesting that the index for February may turn positive

The five components supporting the index for January were higher factory orders for consumer goods and materials, a decline in the average number of new claims for state unemployment insurance, a rise in consumer expectations, a smaller decline in unfilled factory orders for durable goods and a negligible rise in contracts and orders for new plant and equipment.

The Commerce Department report also showed that its index of coincident indicators dropped 1.5 percent in January, the largest of seven straight declines, while the index of lagging indicators advanced three-tenths of 1 percent after rising eight-tenths of 1 percent in December.

The leading index now stands at 139.1, which is 4.3 percent below its January 1990 level.

Bush asks for extension

■ Congress is considering a proposal by President Bush to extend legislation that would speed up trade agreements between the U.S. and other countries.

By Diane Lindquist

Copley News Service

President Bush yesterday (Mar. 1) formally asked Congress to extend for two years authority to fast-track legislation involving all trade agreements.

Although the request involves a procedural matter, its approval is certain to attract the opposition of forces against a U.S.-Mexico-Canada free-trade pact and those upset with the near collapse of worldwide efforts of the Uruguay Round negotiations on the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade (GATT).

The matters are the president's top trade goals for his current term.

"At a time when world events have reconfirmed the importance of U.S. leadership in multilateral efforts, maintaining fast track is essential to our leadership in the global trading system," Mr. Bush said in his letter to Congress.

Fast-track authority allows administration trade officials to negotiate agreements on a speedy timetable and prohibits Congress from making additions or deletions to negotiated pacts.

The current authority is due to expire on June 1. In order for it to be extended, the president had to make his request by yesterday (Mar. 1). The additional time is needed to complete the U.S.-Mexico-Canada and any GATT agreement.

Opponents, who already have drawn the battle lines in regard to both measures, see derailing the fast-track procedure as the surest way to defeating either agreement.

At the least, labor organizations, agricultural interests, textile manufacturers and maritime concerns intend to use fast track as a bargaining chip to advance their positions in the North American free-trade and GATT negotiations.

Without the process, approval of the measures could more easily be delayed indefinitely and they could be complicated or torpedoed by amendments.

"You can imagine the problems if we presented a treaty that had been negotiated with a sovereign nation and then our Congress took it and changed it," Commerce Undersecretary Roger Wallace said recently.

Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, whose Senate Finance Committee along with the House Ways and Means Committee must approve the authorization, underscored the controversy brewing yesterday.

"There will be a real battle in Congress over this one," he predicted.

While he promised hearings on the issue in the near future, Bentsen said he supports the request for an extension.

"I think it's important to remember that at this point all (President Bush) is asking for is authority to negotiate. There'll be plenty of opportunity to vote 'no' down the road if we don't approve of the agreement those negotiations produce," he said.

Several senators, in particular, have opposed the usurping of their ability to amend trade legislation. Bentsen abstained in the vote to fast-track the U.S.-Canada free-trade pact and the procedure advanced on a tie vote in his committee.

U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hills yesterday (Mar. 1) emphasized the role those on Capitol Hill can play.

"Fast-track procedures are designed to ensure congressional and private sector input at each step of the way. From the notification to the implementation of trade agreements, Congress is a full partner," she said.

"Exports are a vital source of growth in the U.S. economy, expanding almost 75 percent since 1986. Working with Congress it is our job to ensure that we continue to expand access to foreign markets for U.S. companies and exporters."

Earlier this week, Hills' general counsel, Joshua Bolten, told congressional leaders that "fast track is not fast," he said. "We're not giving Congress the bum's rush, there will be plenty of time."

Second-hand stores flourish in recession

Associated Press

BOSTON (AP) — The recession has forced many money-strapped consumers to take a first look at second-hand stores, and thrift-shop operators report seeing a new type of buyer, one who sometimes arrives by Cadillac.

As the recession continues, the store operators also report a problem not usually seen before, second-hand stores running out of many items because people aren't giving them away.

"More people are holding on to things because they're not sure where their next paycheck is coming from," said Al Crocker of the St. Vincent DePaul Society in Boston.

But when thrift shops can get hold of merchandise, many operators report that business is booming.

Goodwill Industries reported sales of $325 million in its 1,200 stores in 1990, up 8.5 percent from the previous year, said Jeanne Hamrick, spokeswoman for the Bethesda, Md.-based organization.

While unable to provide exact figures, "what I'm hearing back from the stores nationwide is that we're basically up," said Lt. Col. Leon Ferraez, a Salvation Army spokesman in Verona, N.J.

"Our sales are just phenomenal, and it's during a time when no one else's are," said Maj. Dick Norris, who manages a Salvation Army center in downtown Dallas. "Our little store had a 30 percent growth factor last year."

Business is also brisk in South Florida, where about 10,000 airline workers lost their jobs after Miami-based Eastern Airlines stopped flying last month.

"I was in the store last week, in the middle of the week, and they were packed," said Bobbi Wigand, a Goodwill spokeswoman in Fort Lauderdale.

But Goodwill reports sluggishness in Southern California and the Northeast.

Lynn Manning, sales manager for Boston-area Goodwill Industries, says some areas of the Northeast are so poor even bargain prices are too high for many people.

Big difference in high and double density disks

By Dennis Sever

Q. I work on an IBM PS/2 Model 25 at works and an IBM compatible at home. The only difficulty that I have is that my PS/2 won't read the disks that I use at home although my clone reads the IBM's disks just fine. My home computer's disk drive is a 1.44 Megabyte drive and the office's is a 720 Kilobyte drive, but I am careful to always transfer data on a 720 Kilobyte diskette. Why can't I read a diskette in both places?

Sever

A. This problem comes from the rapid advance of technology. The High Density (1.44 MB) drives came out on the market right on the heels of the Double Density (720 KB) drives. The problem is that the High Density drives have much smaller read/write surfaces than the Double Density drives. (There are actually a lot of other differences that a physicist could explain.) This means that even though the diskette is formatted for 720 KB and the High Density drive recognizes the formatting, it still can't write big enough to insure that the 720 KB drive can read what it wrote. What is really annoying about this problem is that it is not consistant. Sometimes, it makes a difference which machine formatted the diskette. Other times, your PS/2 might be the only PS/2 in the entire city that won't read your clone's diskette. Try some of the other machines in the area and Good Luck!!

Q. I would like for someone to publish a list of compter terms. I never know what one of you guys is talking about when I hear you talking.

A. Ok hear go the A's any way.

Access Time - the elapsed time from the instant that a data item is requested and the time when it is delivered.

Acoustic Coupler - a type of modem that requires the receiver and speaker of a telephone be used to transmit data ove the phone line.

Acronym - a way of making a single word by combining the first letters of more than one word.

Address - a unique identification of a device or a storage location.

ADP - Automatic Data Processing (an acronym)

ALGOL - ALGOrithmic Language ( a near acronym ) A high level programming language based on algebraic formulas and similar to FORTRAN. ALGOL is widely used in Europe.

Algorithm - a set of instructions that if followed will solve a particular problem

Alphanumeric - pertaining to data that is not intended for mathematical purposes, this includes text, special characters and even some graphical data.

Analog - pertaining to devices or data that respond to or are by nature physical.

ANSI - American National Standards Institute (one of those acronyms)

APL - A Programming language (another acronym)

Application Program - Software designed to perform specific end user tasks, like word processing or accounting.

ALU - Arithmetic Logic Unit, the component of the computer that actually performs arithmetic and comparisons.

Artificail Intelligence - Computer programming that can analyze large amounts of data and make seemingly rational decisions based upon very complex algorithms.

ASCII - American Standard Code for Information Interchange. This is just a code that assigns a specific electronic signal to all the letters, digits, and special characters that we use.

Assembly - a programming language that allows the programmer maximum control of the computer.

Asynchronous - the method used to transmit data that uses a start signal prior to sending a character and a stop signal after sending the signal.

Auxilliary Storage - The memory of the computer that is used to store information in places other than in primary memory. Examples include diskettes and disk drives and tapes. Also known as a secondary storage.

Japanese fight worker stortage with robots

By David Thurber

TOKYO (AP) — Japan's future construction workers are expected to trade hard hats for computers and oversee armies of robots assembling buildings in factory-like enclosures.

Masao Miyaguchi of Takenaka Corp., a construction giant, said such building methods had been a dream for years and are becoming reality as industry runs short of workers.

Japan's strong economy, increasing affluence and declining birth rate are combining to create a growing labor shortage officials see as more of a threat than the "oil shocks" of the 1970s. They also say, however, that necessity could create an even more formidable industrial system.

In the 1970s, Japan responded to the oil crisis by building more efficient, technologically advanced factories. Now, the experts say, companies short of workers are increasing their use of high-tech robots that probably will raise Japanese productivity and quality even higher.

In high-precision work, "machines can do a better job" than people, said Hajime Karatsu, an expert on technology who teaches at Tokai University. "Without robots, the Japanese economy would be in a shambles."

Manufacturing and construction are most affected by the labor shortage because affluent young Japanese are reluctant to perform jobs described as the "three Ks" — kitsui, kitanai and kigen (difficult, dirty and dangerous).

"If we don't do anything about the three Ks, the labor shortage will get much worse," said Masafumi Hisatomi of Yaskawa Electric Mfg. Co., which makes robots.

"People are not going to be willing to work in such kinds of jobs, so we're developing new kinds of robots to take the place of workers and make the workplace more appealing."

Robots paint walls, pour and smooth concrete, transplant flowers, set up folding chairs in auditoriums, guide patients around hospitals and climb oil tanks to inspect and repair the outer surface.

Japan uses nearly 70 percent of the world's industrial robots and sales are growing by about 20 percent a year, according to 1989 figures from the Japan Industrial Robot Association. The United States was in second place with about 12 percent, followed by West Germany with about 7 percent.

Japanese companies sold $3.9 billion worth of robots in 1990 and the market is expected to surpass $12 billion by the end of the decade, the association said.

According to Hisatomi, "Ten years ago, companies bought robots to improve productivity and lower costs. That's still a factor, but the lack of workers is now a much more serious reason."

Fast-food restaurants must pay up to $7.60 an hour and, Hisatomi said, robots are being developed to serve food. Because of a nurse shortage, others being perfected will distribute medicine to patients or escort them to examination rooms.

Companies in the construction industry, where the labor shortage runs up to 20 percent, devised a new way to put buildings together. The roof is assembled first, not last, then raised as each floor is constructed, creating an enclosed, protected area where robots do much of the work.

"The object is to make construction sites as much like factories as possible," said Miyaguchi of Takenaka Corp.

Building costs are expected to be about the same as with current methods, even slightly higher, "but if we don't do something to make the industry more attractive to workers, we'll be forced to close down," he said.

Kanji Yonemoto of the Japan Industrial Robot Association said: "Construction workers will become system engineers, designers and robot operators. We see it as ... an occupational conversion."

Some companies say extensive use of the robots now available limits the ability to tailor production to demand or switch an assembly line quickly from one product to another.

"Two or three years ago, we used assembly robots and an automated parts warehouse, but they didn't meet the flexibility requirement ... so we got rid of them," said Sakae Yanagawa, technology manager at the Ome plant of Toshiba Corp.

"In the future, we'll have to go back to robots because it's very difficult to get workers now, but the new mechanization will be different. Instead of large, complex robots, we'll have to develop smaller, more flexible ones."

Industrial Robots

Japan uses 70 percent of the world's industrial robots, with sales growing about 20 percent a year. The market, worth $3.9 billion in 1990, is expected to surpass $12 billion by the end of the decade.

First woman in Inventors Hall of Fame

N.Y. Times News Service

WASHINGTON — The National Inventors Hall of Fame this week selected Gertrude Belle Elion to be honored for her pioneering research at Burroughs Wellcome Co. that led to the development of drugs to combat leukemia, septic shock and tissue rejection in patients undergoing kidney transplants.

The recognition makes Ms. Elion, now 73, the first woman to take her place alongside innovators like Alexander Graham Bell and Thomas A. Edison in the Hall of Fame since the organization was begun in 1973.

Two years ago, Ms. Elion (pronounced ELL-ee-on) shared the Nobel Prize for Medicine with her longtime colleague, George H. Hitchings.

Ms. Elion, who was born in the Bronx, N.Y., has been a pioneer in more ways than one. Although women have produced a number of major technological advances, they remain rare among inventors and receive only about 5 percent of all patents. Indeed, whether discouraged by deep-seated social biases that science and engineering are not "feminine," or blocked by discrimination, women remain a vast and largely overlooked source of potential scientific talent.

"I was a maverick," Ms. Elion said this week.

At a time when most women did not go to college, she graduated from Hunter with top honors at 19 and went on to obtain a master's degree in chemistry.

In the 1940s, she and Hitchings developed variations on components of the genetic material DNA that could be used to fool cells and foil the reproductive machinery of viruses and bacteria.

But what made the work remarkable was that no one had yet identified the double-helix structure of DNA or knew much about the way it worked. But the two scientists did know that DNA was built from four chemical components, known as bases. Their approach, therefore, was to develop fake versions of these bases that would fool particular kinds of cells and lead to useless DNA.

Ms. Elion first used the approach to synthesize compounds that block lymphocytes that cause leukemia, but the approach led her and other researchers to develop a host of other drugs as well.

"It turned out that we were looking at many kinds of cells," she said.

Ms. Elion how holds about 40 patents, and the approach has since been applied by other scientists and has produced considerable insight into the ways in which DNA works.

The Hall of Fame is a non-profit organization based in Akron, Ohio. Inductees are selected by a panel of scientists, patent attorneys and other experts. Thus far, 94 inventors have been named to the hall.

"I'm happy to be the first woman," Ms. Elion said. "But I doubt I'll be the last."

DEAL: Good deal for clothes

(From 6C)

"We have seen in the majority of our stores an increase in sales, but in some sales, located in areas that are very depressed, we've been having problems," she said.

And in Southern California, Goodwill officials say their regular customers are still shopping with them, but the stores haven't pulled in the upscale business that other areas have.

"That hasn't happened, at least not in the Los Angeles area," said William Day, Goodwill vice-president of marketing and sales.

Elsewhere, several managers complained of shortages of small household appliances, such as toasters, as well as dishes, pots and pans, and sporting goods equipment.

"If the retail stores are saying everything's down, it means people aren't buying," said Norris of the Dallas Salvation Army. "The only time people donate to us is when they buy new things."

Store operators also say many people who might have bought new items at another store before are now shopping at the thrift store instead.

"We still have our Cadillacs parked in front as well as the little family station wagon," he said.

"It's middle-class and up," said Rosemarie Darin, owner of Second Hand Rose in Branford, Conn.

Nation's buyers report more economic malaise

N.Y. Times News Service

According to a survey of purchasing managers, the nation's manufacturing economy remained in a malaise in February, but it did show a slight improvement from January.

The National Association of Purchasing Management said Friday that its index of economic activity rose to 38.5 percent in February from 37.7 percent in January.

That made February the first month since May that the index did not decline. Still, February's reading was the lowest of any in the last 12 months, except for January's.

An index below 50 percent indicates that the manufacturing economy is declining, while a reading above 50 indicates expansion.

Economists said that despite some improvement, the level of new orders remained extremely weak, an indication that economic troubles would continue.

"These figures indicate that the recession is continuing," said Andrew F. Brimmer, president of Brimmer & Associates and a former governor of the Federal Reserve. "However, they also suggest that the pace of the decline in economic activity is slowing somewhat."

Brimmer said there was some encouragement in the slight rise in new orders. "But as far as encouragement goes, that is all there is to it," he said. "The numbers do not point to a recovery any time soon."

The purchasing managers' report is considered an important economic indicator because it is based on a survey of managers from a wide range of industrial companies. Each month it is the first important indicator of how the economy performed in the previous month.

"Although the economy is still in decline, there are encouraging signs in February's report that we may have reached the bottom of the declining trend," said Robert J. Bretz, chairman of the association's business survey committee and director of corporate purchasing at Pitney Bowes Inc. "Over all, the light at the end of the tunnel may still be very dim, but it may very well be signaling that the worst is now behind us."

But Joseph McAlinden, director of research with Dillon, Read & Co., said the report indicated that the economy "is not showing much sign of a turn, other than the fact that it seems to be falling at a slower rate." He added, "The index still indicates that there is a decline in the economy."

The purchasing managers' new-orders index registered a rise, to 38.3 percent in February, from 35.7 percent in January. The report suggested that the February figure "might be the bottom of this current economic cycle and the beginning of an upward trend."

The level of new orders is the most closely watched component of the survey because the level of orders affects production, prices and other indexes. Production followed the same trend as new orders, rising to 38.1 percent in February, from 37.1 percent in January.

New orders for exports increased, but at a sharply slower pace. The index of new export orders fell to 52 percent, down from 56.5 percent in January. The index of imports increased to 46 percent, from 43 percent in January.

Prices declined sharply in January, falling to their lowest level since December 1982. The purchasing managers' price index dropped to 41.8 percent, from 49.1 percent in January. The association said much of the decline in the price index resulted from lower prices for crude oil.

INVESTORS' GUIDE

Five years too long to wait for mutuals

By Bill Doyle

Q. I am enclosing two statements from the brokerage firm through which I invested my individual retirement account in two mutual funds. The first statement shows my purchase prices. The second is the year-end 1990 statement and shows my loss.

Is it wise to stay with these investments, in hopes their prices will rise?

Doyle

A. One line from "Casey at the Bat" goes: "With that hope which springs eternal within the human breast." And that poem ends with "The mighty Casey has struck out." You haven't done much better. Your first brokerage statement is dated early 1986. While five years is hardly an eternity, it's a very long time to stay with investments that went sour and show no sign of improving.

It's time — really past time — for you to stop waiting for those two mutual funds to show improved investment performance. Move your money elsewhere. There are plenty of better performing investments — including other mutual funds — available.

Your statements show you invested a total of $2,000 and, as of Dec. 31, your accounts were worth $2,313.45. However, assuming you reinvested your dividends and capital gains distributions to purchase additional fund shares, you do have a loss. Each reinvestment increased your cost basis above your original $2,000 investment.

Q. My investments in two mutual funds were made through the local office of a nationwide brokerage firm. When I sell my holdings, do I go through that office, through the brokerage's home office in Detroit or through the mutual funds' home offices?

A. The reply to your multiple choice query is "any of the above." Technically, you don't "sell" mutual fund shares you own. You redeem them, by turning them back to the fund. The easy way to do that is through the local brokerage office where you made your investments.

Just make sure no charge will be levied when your mutual fund shares are redeemed. The two funds whose shares you own do not charge rear-end loads but some brokerages attempt to lay on fees when redeeming shares for customers.

If you run into that problem, redeem your shares through the mutual fund's home offices. You'll find details on how to redeem in the prospectus of each mutual fund. You receive a new prospectus by mail every year.

Q. When I redeem the mutual fund shares I now have in my individual retirement account, I will have to roll that money over into another IRA to keep it tax sheltered. I intend to put the money in certificates of deposit at my bank. How do I do this?

A. There are two ways you can go.

You can redeem your mutual fund shares, receive checks for the redemption amounts and use that money to open an IRA at your bank — or any other place you pick. You must open the new IRA within 60 days after receiving the checks from your present IRA. If you miss that deadline, you'll be hit with regular income tax plus a 10 percent penalty tax on the money that comes out of your old IRA.

The other way is by trustee-to-trustee transfer. With that method, you go to the bank or other outfit to which you want to move your IRA money and sign the documents necessary to open your account and transfer your money.

From that point on, everything is handled by your new IRA trustee — your bank, in this case.

Q. I intend to open a new IRA after I close the one I have. Will it be necessary to open the new IRA with the actual check I receive from the old one? Or, can I deposit that check in my bank account, and write a new check 60 days later?

A. In quick order, the replies are "No." and "Yes." By depositing that money in your bank account, you will have the use of that money for the 60 days.

TRADE: Bush seeks approval for fast-track legislation

(From 6C)

Without fast-track authority the North American Free-Trade Agreement envisioned among the United States, Mexico and Canada is jeopardized, said Rep. Jim Kolbe, R-Ariz., one of the pact's strongest Capitol Hill proponents.

"The banner to be saved or carried from the field of battle is the President's authority to undertake negotiations using the fast-track authority," he said.

"It's not just for Mexico and Canada that this authority is needed. Fast-track is the rail the stalled Uruguay Round of GATT trade liberalization talks travels on. The President needs authority to get those talks moving forward again," the congressman said.

The GATT negotiations aimed at liberalizing world trade and setting new rules for the 21st Century were restarted this week in Geneva, nearly three months after collapsing because of a rift over farm subsidies.

Ambassador Hills is hopeful the crucial negotiations will be concluded, an official said. "She knows we still have to plug in the numbers. We're not going to celebrate until we have an agreement."

A U.S.-Mexico-Canada agreement would create a free-trade zone that includes 360 million people and has a combined output of $6 trillion.

Prized salmon, steelhead rebuilding after volcano

TOUTLE, Wash. (AP) — Salmon and sea-going trout returning to spawn on the Toutle River after the eruption of Mount St. Helens found they couldn't go home again.

The green waters of the lush river valley in southwestern Washington were replaced by brown, gill-choking mud.

"Before the eruption, this was one of the best salmon streams in the state," Lew Atkins, resource manager for the state Department of Fisheries' hatcheries on the lower Columbia River, said as he drove a van along the North Fork of the Toutle.

A decade after the eruption, the Toutle is nowhere near its former fishing splendor, but gains have surpassed expectations in almost every regard.

The May 18, 1980, blast put a dust cloud around the world, killed 57 people and knocked 1,300 feet off the top of Mount St. Helens, reducing it to 8,366 feet. Much of the peak fell into the Toutle drainage, and every rainstorm still carries tons of silt with it.

"It was like it had been blasted by napalm," Fisheries spokesman Tony Floor said. "The fish came back, but they found it was like returning to a stream on the moon."

For the first few years after the eruption the river was so thick with mud that fish could not live in it. Spawning salmon and steelhead, a sea-going rainbow trout, put survival over homing instincts and turned back to other streams.

For scientists and fishermen, the future appeared as bleak as the brown river churning through ash-gray banks. Besides hatchery chinook and indigenous trout, the losses included a run of supersize coho salmon and a wild run of steelhead.

The cost in fishery production, serving sport and commercial fisheries, amounted to $7 million annually. The Department of Fisheries, which lost its $10 million Toutle Hatchery to the 1980 volcanic flood, decided not to rebuild.

'I assumed it would have recovered, but never in this short time span.'

— Bob Lucas, Biologist, Washington Department of Wildlife

The Toutle chapter of the Trout Unlimited conservation group disbanded.

"Basically, everyone took the attitude that it would be 10 years-plus before any fish might start showing up in the river," Atkins said.

That 10-year milestone has passed. Plants and animals — from tiny invertebrates to elk herds — are coming back to the wastelands of ash, now set aside as a 110,000-acre federal volcano monument.

Even in the rivers, natural processes have proved more resilient than anyone had dared ask.

Giving nature a hand have been Fisheries Department workers, who refused to let the years go by without trying to restock the river's salmon runs.

On their own, wild steelhead are returning to the river's South Fork, which suffered less long-term damage than the North Fork, especially to gravel beds necessary for spawning.

"I assumed it would have recovered, but never in this short time span," said Bob Lucas, biologist for the state Department of Wildlife.

He estimated 80 steelhead returned in 1984, and the run has grown to 2,000 to 3,000 fish.

Life has been tougher for fish on the North Fork, where only a few wild fish have been counted. Those that manage to make the journey are collected near the base of a huge silt-retention dam constructed on the river, and trucked past it to the main stem and feeder streams.

But increasing numbers of hatchery-raised salmon are coming back, after Fisheries Department personnel put together a rehabilitation program at the site of the destroyed hatchery.

The Toutle coho were so popular they had been planted over the past 30 years in rivers in Washington and Oregon. Oddly, part of the beauty of the fish is that it turns south when it gets to the ocean, via the Columbia River, rather than north as most salmon do. That keeps the fish in U.S. ocean waters, out of reach of Canadian fishermen.

Rob Nicolay, hatchery manager on the nearby Lewis River, Atkins and others in 1984 got permission to put some effort, but not much money, into rebuilding the Toutle salmon fisheries.

They began seeding the river with coho juveniles, and this fall the reward began showing up in strength, with 2,200 spawning coho caught in a trap at the hatchery site.

"Everybody said it was too soon, but we showed them it wasn't too soon," Atkins said.

He said a sports fishing season would probably be allowed in one to four years, when returns number upwards of 10,000 fish.

Fish believed extinct found alive and thriving in Mexico

NEW YORK (AP) — A fish thought to be extinct because it had not been observed for 20 years has been found in an "artificial and very disgusting" pond in Mexico, a researcher says.

Michael L. Smith said he, two graduate students and a volunteer went neck-deep into the scum-covered pond, which smelled like rotten eggs.

Scooping for hours with long-handled nets, they found several specimens of opal allotoca, a 2-inch-long fish that had not been observed in the wild since Smith co-discovered it around 1970.

Smith said amateur fish-lovers had been trying to find a specimen since then, and they probably had tried the pond. But perhaps they only stood at the shore and reached in with nets, he said.

The three-acre pond apparently holds a substantial population, said Smith, an icthyologist at the American Museum of Natural History in New York.

The expedition brought back 10 fish, and a breeding population was established at the New York Aquarium, Smith said Monday. The discovery occurred last year, but the first public announcement came only recently, he said.

"This was quite a surprise," said Jim Williams of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in Gainesville, Fla. Williams and some other fish experts concluded about a year ago that the opal allotoca and several other North American fish were extinct.

"We're one better off than we thought," Williams said Monday.

The opal allotoca is so named because its sides flash iridescent colors as an opal does in the sunshine, Smith said. Its back is olive green.

The artificial pond, used to water cattle, is in a remote valley in the mountains of west-central Mexico. The fish had been known to inhabit a lake in the area that dried up in about 1970 because of the arid climate and use of its water by humans, Smith said.

He said fish extinctions are a problem in arid, remote parts of the southwestern United States and in Mexico because the entire population of many species may inhabit a pond the size of a living room. So if people use the water and dry up the habitat, the species is wiped out, Smith said.

He said such fish can be easily saved by explaining their predicament to local people and setting up plans in which the fish and the people share water. Ponds might be created nearby to preserve the fish, he said.

The problem is being addressed by a joint American-Mexican project in the basin in which the opal allotoca was found and an adjacent basin, he said.

Zoos help animals return to the wild

SAN DIEGO (NYT) — Zoos have been remarkably successful in breeding many animals that are at or near extinction in their natural habitats.

But the success has raised a curious new problem — that of teaching the surplus zoo-born animals how to live and survive in the wild.

For some species, such as the lion-tailed macaque, survival courses — a kind of Outward Bound for zoo-bred primates — have been developed to foster skills needed to find food and fend off predators in the wild.

For other endangered animals like the Galapagos tortoises and the tuatara, a lizard-like reptile from New Zealand, competing species that eat their eggs or their food have to be eradicated from entire islands before the animals can go home safely.

Fans travel to Montana to see equine movie star

KALISPELL, Mont. (AP) — A horse is a horse, of course, of course, unless that horse is the famous Just Plain Justin.

The equine star of the hit film "Dance With Wolves" is drawing fans to the western Montana ranch of Debbie and Rusty Hendrickson to see the movie star out in the corral.

"Somehow, people manage to find us to say they have to have that horse," Rusty Hendrickson said in a recent interview. "I tell them, 'So does my wife.'"

The buckskin gelding quarter horse that played Cisco in Kevin Costner's movie was discovered by Hendrickson working livestock at an Idaho feedlot.

By the time the movie was filmed in 1989 in South Dakota, the horse had to know how to jump a big stone fence for a Civil War scene.

College offers 11 short courses

Staff Report

The Midland College Department of Continuing Education will offer 11 short courses beginning the week of March 11. Courses are as follow:

"Financial Planning Seminar" will be taught by Lee Hobbs on Tuesdays from 7-9:15 p.m., March 12 through April 2. Topics to be included in this course are sources of income, investment types, funding strategies, and efforts of inflation, taxation, and compound interest on income and asset growth. Course fee covers all materials and registration for either one person or a couple. Course fee is $35.

Rebecca Pierce will be teaching "Smocked Easter Eggs" on Tuesdays, March 12 and March 19 from 7-9 p.m. This is an advanced smocking class designed so a dramatic kaleidoscope of color and design occurs as the smocked fabric is molded around the asymmetrical egg form. Material costs will be $18 which includes the egg kit and instructions. Students must supply scissors. Course fee is $9.

"Springtime Plants for West Texas" will be taught by Burr Williams on Tuesdays and Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., March 12 through April 4. This course will present an overview of native plants, including horticulture, West Texas flora, and botany. Course fee is $25.

Joyce Low will be teaching "Stained Glass II" on Tuesdays from 7-9 p.m., March 12 through April 16. Instruction in the design and construction of a leaded panel complete with rebar, weatherproofing, and installation. Prerequisite is Stained Glass I or equivalent. Supply and equipment list is available the first night of class. Course fee is $25.

"Accessorizing Your Home" will be taught by Lucy Nye on Wednesday, March 13 from 7-9 p.m. Participants will learn to use color, texture, special arrangements, and unique design concepts to create you own special effects. Each student will need to bring at least one item (vase, wall hanging, framed picture, etc.) to use as a focal point for room accessorizing and to "pull it all together." Course fee is $5.

Diane Robinson will be teaching "Interviewing Can Be Fun" on Thursday, March 14 from 6:30-9 p.m. This course will show you how to prepare for an interview, how to put your best foot forward and answer interviewing questions in a way that emphasizes your strong points. Course fee is $10.

"Sign Language II" will be taught by Lesa Hubbard on Thursdays from 7-9 p.m., March 14 through May 2. Intermediate and advanced signing will be covered. Required textbook is available at Midland College Bookstore. Prerequisite is Sign Language I or equivalent. Course fee is $29.

Jean Roberts will be teaching "Quilting II" on Thursdays from 7-9:30 p.m., March 14 through April 18. Stidents will learn the more intricate pieced and curved seams. Scissors and thimble are needed the first night of class. The prerequisite is Quilting I or equivalent. The should check at the Continuing Education Office for supply information. Course fee is $26.

"Candy Making" will be taught by Cindy Wilson on Saturday, March 16 from 1-3 p.m. This is a demonstration course which teaches the student how to make at least 15 different types of molds candies. Recipes and samples will be provided during the class. Course fee is $5.

Lance Armstrong will be teaching "Tennis for Kids (12-14 years)" from 2:15-3:15 p.m., March 16 through April 27, and "Tennis for Kids (8-11 years)" from 1-2 p.m., March 16 through April 27. Forehand, backhand, volley, serves, and scorekeeping will all be a part of this 6-week class. Students must bring racket and wear tennis shoes. Balls will be furnished. Course fee is $15.

For more information on these and other Continuing Education short courses, come by the Office of Continuing Education in the Administration Building or call 685-4518.

Tiny press publishes local folks

EL PASO (AP) — William Morrow — that fancy-schmancy New York publisher — may boast Millie, the presidential pooch and alleged author.

But at El Paso's tiny Cinco Puntos Press, Lacey is the dog of choice. This gangly, speckled German pointer hasn't quite gotten around to woofing out her memoirs, but she can fetch a tennis ball till it's fuzz — or your arm — drops off.

And that's just fine with Bobby Byrd, co-owner of both the dog and the press. He's not looking for any best sellers.

"We're just tryin' to publish stuff close to our heart," drawls Byrd, a Memphis-reared poet with one foot in suburbia and the other in the '60s.

Seated in the two-by-four office behind his Five Points home, Byrd explains shy he and his wife, Lee, opened shop six years and a dozen books ago:

"Basically, when the conglomerates bought up all the major presses, it created a huge vacuum and none of the good regional writers was getting published. Rather than bitch, we started to publish those folks ourselves."

WITH A HOT pink spectacle strap around his neck, a gimme cap planted atop graying curls and Lacey bounding at his ankles, Bobby Byrd, 48, hardly looks like a conventional publisher.

But then, Cinco Puntos doesn't publish conventional books.

Most of its authors, such as award-winners Dagoberto Gilb and Ricardo Sanchez, are El Pasoans who grapple with the realities of border life in aching prose or poetry.

"It's not like we have to scour the country for authors," says Lee Byrd, herself a fiction writer. "Our friends alone could keep us busy."

The couple, who trickled down the Rio Grande from Southern Colorado to Albuquerque to Las Cruces, settled in El Paso 13 years ago.

Despite imminently marketable skills, both Byrds consistently have sought to escape the 9-to-5 hassle.

PREVIOUS JOBS HAVE included serving as estate caretakers to an eccentric millionaire and running a hotel in Radium Springs, N.M.

Originally, Lee Byrd says, they started the press in the hopes of becoming their own bosses.

"We wanted to get to the point where we were supporting ourselves and getting time for our own writing," she notes, a little wearily.

But the cost of running a press and raising the kids has forced her to hold down a full-time job as a technical writer.

Meanwhile, Bobby Byrd endured a crash course in publishing busy work, learning the hard way just how much time addressing envelopes and making Xerox copies can take.

"What happened is that I was going nuts," he recalls, surveying an office strewn with books, papers and aged rock cassettes. "I was working 60 hours a week, and I still couldn't do all the stuff. But we couldn't afford to hire anybody."

ENTER THE BYRD children.

Johnny, a 17-year-old junior at Austin High School, is Cinco Puntos vice president in charge of shipping and handling. He works out of a book-piled stockroom that once was the back porch.

Susannah, 19, and Andy, 14, both help out with data entry and shipping, when necessary.

Bobby Byrd admits pay isn't lucrative: The going rate is $4 an hour — but the cause couldn't be nobler.

"If we didn't have the kids, we wouldn't be able to do nearly as many books because I'd spend all my time fussing over little things," Bobby Byrd says.

Johnny, who's learned the ins and outs of computerized bookkeeping, sounds enthusiastic about the work. Sort of.

"I'd much rather be doing this than working at McDonald's or something," he says.

FORTUNATELY, HELP has come from other quarters, as well. First, Southwest storyteller Joe Hayes has allowed Cinco Puntos to distribute his wildly popular books. Second, the press has received grants from the Texas Commission for the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts to defray costs. Third, Bobby Byrd himself won a $20,000 fellowship from the National Endowment for the Arts for his poetry this year.

The couple also has found a topnotch book designer in Vicky Trego Hill, longtime friend and freelance artist who lives just down the street.

Her expertise, along with a commitment to quality production, has distinguished Cinco Puntos volumes from the shoddy work sometimes produced by cash-strapped small presses.

"Their books are just gorgeous to look at," says Dale Walker, director of UTEP's Texas Western Press.

He calls Cinco Puntos a "splendid example of a small press. A lot of high-quality, esoteric works might otherwise go begging if not for them."

That was the notion that drew Rudulfo Anaya, a professor of creative writing at the University of New Mexico and one of that state's best known Hispanic writers, to the press.

ANAYA KNEW THAT he could have gone to a bigger publisher with his anthology of New Mexico stories titled "Tierra."

"But I felt a kinship with Bobby and his effort," he says. "I took a chance with Cinco Puntos and it paid off on both sides. Their preparation and presentation of the book were consistently professional."

The result: in less than 18 months "Tierra" has sold out its first printing of 3,000 copies.

Next year, the press is hoping to publish five books, starting with a collection of essays by El Paso journalist Debbie Nathan that Bobby Byrd sees as a potential small-press blockbuster.

But he and Lee Byrd say they are waiting for the day when the press will afford them time to write for themselves.

"Lord knows this work has its rewards," Bobby Byrd says, heaving a fuzzless tennis ball across his back yard for Lacey. "But it's also frustrating because you're never free. There's always something more to be done."

Still, Lee Byrd says, running a publishing house beats the heck out of running with the rat race:

"It would be nice if the press did a bunch of things. If it supported us and if it helped one of our writers make it big, for instance. But we don't want it to be like a business. We want to enjoy it."

Teen-ager in wheelchair earns karate belt

RICHLAND HILLS (AP) — Karate has replaced physical therapy for 13-year-old Donald Withers, a spunky kid in a wheelchair who defends himself with muscles no one ever dreamed he could use.

Though he has spastic cerebral palsy — a neuromuscular condition that limits movement — Donald recently earned a karate gold belt, the third level in an 11-step quest toward black belt martial arts status.

"Yeah, it was hard," says Donald, a 62-pound bundle of energy who slides out of his wheelchair and inches across the shag carpet of his family's home in this Tarrant County suburb.

Haltingly, he struggles to his knees, then huffs and puffs as he straightens his back and demonstrates his version of a karate bow.

"I couldn't turn this hand around at first," says the youth, moving his left fist forward and letting out a karate yell: "Kiya."

Then, urging his mother to grab the lapel of his white karate robe, Donald squeezes her wrist and gradually twists her arm until she has no choice but to let go.

"When he was diagnosed with cerebral palsy when he was 1 year old, the doctor said he would be a vegetable," said Donald's mom, Felicia Withers. "The doctors never gave him as much hope as the karate instructor."

The karate lessons, which began in December 1988, were spurred by Donald's frustration with three younger playmates who bit him and bent his fingers backwards as he sat helplessly in his wheelchair.

He knew that if he fought back, his jerky movements might seriously injure the smaller children.

"He didn't want to hurt anyone," says his mother. "I hoped that with karate, he could learn how to get out of things without actually hurting anybody. Pressure them to let go. He hasn't had any more trouble since."

Neither have his parents, who signed up for karate lessons shortly after Donald. Felicia Withers even earned an orange belt, one level higher than gold. Her husband, Kirk, 30, a maintenance worker in the Birdville School District where Donald attends school, wears a purple belt, four levels shy of the coveted black.

Karate, an ancient martial art developed throughout Indochina and refined in Japan, teaches self-defense through body movement, said 8th-degree black belt J. Pat Burleson, who oversees the American Karate Studios chain.

At the Bedford studio, owned by Dewey Sutton, a second-degree black belt, Donald began taking private, weekly lessons. He was patiently challenged to stretch his muscles, wiggle his stiff fingers and wean himself from the wheelchair.

Neither Sutton nor Burleson had ever instructed a student who has cerebral palsy, but they were aware of double amputees with black belt status.

"Like Donald, they can't do jump kicks," Burleson says. "They can't even stand up and kick. What they do is more monumental."

What Donald has learned at the Bedford karate studio is to release the straps on his wheelchair — with a left hand physicians believed was immobile.

He slides onto the floor, props himself up on his knees and executes chop blocks, double elbow strikes, punches and blocks.

When his instructor grabs Donald's wrist, the boy yells "Kiya" — a scream meant to scare attackers and focus his energy. Then he breaks free.

When a mock assailant encircles Donald from behind, he leans back, butts heads, and elbows the attacker in the ribs.

To practice these moves, Donald stands in a corner hitting the walls for support — a feat of balance thought impossible before karate entered his life.

"He's taking charge in his life," says Burleson. "He broke boundaries for that gold belt test. He overcame the imprisonment of that chair."

WATER WORKS IMPROVEMENTS
TDOC, TCDP NO. 709931

Sealed proposals addressed to the Honorable Judge and County Commissioners of Midland County, Texas, will be received at the office of Floyd Jarnagin, County Auditor, P.O. Box 421, 2nd Floor, Midland County Courthouse, Midland, Texas until 2:00 P.M., Friday, April 2, 1991, for furnishing all necessary materials, machinery, equipment, superintendence and labor for constructing certain water works improvements for Midland County, Texas.

Immediately following the closing time for receipt of bids, proposals will be publicly opened and read aloud. Any bid received after closing time will be returned unopened.

The principal items of work for this Midland County project are set forth in specific detail in the Proposal Section of the specifications; however, the principal work items may be generally described as follows: furnishing and installing 2,750 linear feet of 8-inch approved water line, 3,250 linear feet of 6-inch approved water line, 7 each 8-inch resilient seat gate valves and valve boxes, 14 each 6-inch resilient seat gate valves and valve boxes, 10 each 5¼-inch fire hydrants, 1.5 tons of ductile iron fittings, 1 each 12"x8" tapping sleeve and valve, 35 each 1-inch water services on public right-of-way, 35 each ¾-inch water service connection on private property and miscellaneous appurtenances.

The Owner expects to make award of the contract for this Proposal as soon as possible after the opening of bids, but specifically reserves the right to hold all Proposals for a period not to exceed sixty (60) days, before making an award. No Proposal, having been opened, may be withdrawn prior to expiration of the periods described herein. Bid security of all but the successful Bidder will be returned upon making an award.

Bidders must submit a Cashier's or Certified Check issued by a bank satisfactory to the Owner, or a Bid Bond from a reliable Surety Company, payable without recourse to the order of Midland County, Texas, in an amount not less than five percent (5%) of the largest possible bid submitted as a guaranty that the Bidder will enter into a contract and execute bonds and guaranty in the forms provided within ten (10) days after notice of award of contract to him. Bids without the required Check or Bid Bond will not be considered.

The successful Bidder must furnish a Performance Bond and a Payment Bond on the forms provided in the amount of 100% of the total contract price from a Surety Company holding a permit from the State of Texas to act as Surety, or other Surety or Sureties acceptable to the Owner.

All lump sum and unit prices must be stated in both script and figures. The Owner reserves the right to reject any or all bids and to waive formalities, and to accept the bids which seems most advantageous to the Owner's interest. In case of ambiguity or lack of clearness in stating the prices in the bids, the Owner reserves the right to consider the most advantageous construction thereof, or to reject the bid.

Attention is called to the fact that not less than the Federally-determined prevailing wage rate, as issued by the Texas Department of Commerce and as set forth in the Contract Documents, must be paid on this project and that the Contractor must ensure that employees and applicants for employment are not discriminated against because of their race, color, religion, sex or national origin.

Information for Bidders, proposal forms, and specifications are on file in the office of the Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 3214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, phone (915) 697-1447.

Copies of the plans and specifications may be secured at the office of Parkhill, Smith & Cooper, Inc., Consulting Engineers, 5214 Thomason Drive, Midland, Texas 79703, (915) 697-1447, upon receipt of a $50.00 deposit as a guarantee of the safe return of the plans and specifications. The full amount of the deposit will be returned if a bona fide bid is submitted and the Plans and Specifications are returned within ten (10) days after receipt of bids, or in case no bid is submitted, if the Plans and Specifications are returned on or before date of receipt of bids; otherwise, the full amount of the deposit will be forfeited.

THIS IS A 5% ACROSS-THE-BOARD RATE INCREASE REQUEST ONLY.

CAP ROCK ELECTRIC COOPERATIVE, INC.

NOTICE OF RATE CHANGE REQUEST

Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., on the 1st day of April, 1991, and pursuant to Sections 16, 17, 37 and 43 of the Public Regulatory Act (Article 1446c, V.A.C.S.) and the Public Utility Commisson of Texas Substantive Rule 23.23(c) will file a statement of Intent and Petition for Authority to Change Rates to be effective on June 1, 1991 with the Public Utility Commission of Texas and all cities exercising original jurisdiction over its rates and tariffs.

Prior to filing, copies of the proposed revised tariffs and other pertinent data may be inspected at the Office of Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc., P.O. Box 700, West Highway 80, Stanton, Texas 79782, Telephone (915) 756-3381. Upon filing, copies of the proposed revised tariffs and supporting testimony and other pertinent data may be inspected in the office of the Cooperative and at the office of the Texas Public Utility Commission, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757.

All of Cap Rock's customers will be affected by the proposed change. The proposed change will increase Cap Rock's test year revenues by $1,465,643 or five per cent (5%). This translates into the following changes by class:

For the 9,109 customers in the residential rate class, the proposed increase will be $367,707, a 13.62% base revenue change, and a 5.04% change in total revenue.

For the 2,132 customers in the irrigation rate class, the proposed increase will be $247,799, a 22.50% base revenue change, and a 4.90% change in total revenue.

For the 5,408 customers in the commercial rate class, the proposed increase will be $591,308, a 14.40% base revenue change, and a 5.04% change in total revenue.

For the 418 customers in the industrial service rate class, the proposed increase will be $234,466, a 16.36% base revenue change, and a 5.04% change in total revenue.

For the one customer in the large commercial-HV rate class, the proposed increase will be $13,620, a 19.97% base revenue change, and a 5.01% change in total revenue.

For the 2,908 customers in the security light rate class, the proposed increase will be $10,743, a 9.59% base revenue change, and a 5.01% change in total revenue.

Persons who wish to intervene or otherwise participate in these proceedings should notify Cap Rock immediately at the above listed address and telephone number or the Commission.

The deadline for intervening will be 45 days after April 1, 1991. The request to intervene, participate, or for further information, should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Boulevard, Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757. Further information may also be obtained by calling the Public Utility Commission, Consumer Affairs Division at (512) 458-0256, or (512) 458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Inquiries concerning this notice should be directed to Mr. Nolan Simpson at Cap Rock Electric Cooperative, Inc. at the address and telephone number listed above.

PROTECT YOUR RIGHTS—

RENDER YOUR PROPERTY

A rendition is a report to the appraisal district that lists all the taxable property you own or control on January 1, 1991. The form is available at your local appraisal district or you may draft a similar form.

You must file a rendition if you own tangible personal property used to produce income—such as the inventory and equipment used by a business.

The appraisal district may require any taxpayer to file a rendition by sending the taxpayer a written notice and a rendition form.

The advantages of filing a rendition:

- You give your opinion of your property's value. If the appraisal district wants a higher value for your property, it must notify you in writing of the higher value and explain how you can protest that value to the appraisal review board.
- You record your correct mailing address so your tax bills will go to the right address. If your bill is mailed to the wrong address, the law still holds you responsible for paying your taxes on time or paying extra charges for late payments.
- You can also file a report of decreased value, to notify the appraisal district of significant depreciation to your property in 1990. The district will look at your property before assigning a value in 1991.

The last day for filing or postmarking 1991 renditions is Monday, April 1. You can get an extra 30 days if you ask for it in writing before the April 1 deadline.

File renditions with your local appraisal district at the address shown below.

For more information, get a free copy of the pamphlet, Texas Property Taxes: A Taxpayers' Guide to Rights, Remedies, Responsibilities, at your appraisal district office or from the State Property Tax Board in Austin.

HOMESTEAD EXEMPTIONS

MAY LOWER YOUR HOME'S PROPERTY TAXES

A homestead exemption lowers the property taxes on your home by lowering its taxable value. For example, if your home is valued at $50,000 and you receive a $5,000 homestead exemption, your home will be taxed as if it were worth only $45,000.

You qualify for a homestead exemption if you owned your home on January 1 and used it as your primary residence on that date. It doesn't matter whether your home is a house, a condominium, or a mobile home.

Exemptions are available to all homeowners to lower their school taxes. Additional exemptions are available to homeowners who are disabled or age 65 and over. And, if you receive the over-65 exemption, you also qualify for a ceiling on school taxes. Other exemptions may be offered to homeowners by school districts, counties, cities, and special districts.

Who should apply? If you received a homestead exemption on your home in 1990, you won't need to re-apply for 1991 unless your chief appraiser requires it.

If you became 65 or disabled before January 1, file a new application to receive the additional exemptions.

If you haven't received an exemption on your present home, or if you've moved to a new home, make a new application for 1991.

File your homestead exemption with your local appraisal office at the address shown below.

The last day to file for applications is April 30, 1991. Contact your appraisal district before then if you need more time to file.

For more information, get a free copy of the pamphlet, Texas Property Taxes: A Taxpayers' Guide to Rights, Remedies, Responsibilities, at your appraisal district office or from the State Property Tax Board in Austin.

PRODUCTIVITY APPRAISAL

MAY LOWER THE PROPERTY TAXES ON YOUR FARM, RANCH, OR TIMBERLAND

Texas law provides farmers and ranchers, and timber growers with a way to lower their property taxes, known as productivity appraisal.

If you qualify, your agricultural land will be taxed on its capacity to produce crops, livestock, or timber, instead of its value on the real estate market. Productivity appraisal can lower the taxable value of your land, and lower your property taxes as a result.

If your land has never received productivity appraisal, you must apply to the appraisal district no later than Tuesday, April 30, to get tax benefits for 1991. If you miss this deadline, you may still be able to apply, but you will pay a penalty. Check with your appraisal district office.

If your land already receives agricultural or timber appraisal, you normally don't need to reapply unless the chief appraiser requires you to. If an annual application is required, the appraisal district will notify you by mail.

For more information and application forms, contact the appraisal district office at the address shown below:

PART-TIME INCOME AVAILABLE

The Midland Reporter-Telegram has several routes which need to be filled with qualified, responsible individuals. Now is one of the best times ever to obtain a route in your area!

OFTEN ASKED QUESTIONS:

Is it worthwhile for adults also?

Yes! Our current carrier force is already 75% adult and 25% youth. Morning newspaper routes are attractive for:

- ADULTS who have full-time jobs, yet want to supplement their income with a steady part-time job.
- MOTHERS who can't justify a small job and daycare, because as a carrier, you do not need daycare!
- COLLEGE STUDENTS needing a part-time job which will work with classes!
- YOUTHS who are involved in afternoon school functions, but want to work!
- SENIOR CITIZENS wanting regular exercise, added income, or just want to work with people, neighbors, and friends.

How much money can I make as a carrier?

Depending on the size of the route(s) from $300 to $700 monthly! Some motor routes make even more!

How long does it take?

The actually delivery takes 1 - 2 hours Monday - Saturday, and 2 - 3 hours on Sunday, again depending on the size of the route(s). Also, a few hours a month are needed to collect from subscribers. Many carrier's choose to handle some of this by putting envelopes in subscribers' papers. Collecting in person will be necessary though!

When do papers have to be delivered by?

6 a.m. Monday - Friday and 7 a.m. on Saturday and Sunday.

Do I ever get a day off?

The job requires a 7-day a week commitment. However, carriers do take days off by finding a friend or family member to substitute for them!

RESERVE YOUR ROUTE NOW!
