On the way to class

DSGH board raises tax rate by 0.4 cents

BY SPEEDY NIEMAN
Editor-Publisher

The Deaf Smith County Hospital District board adopted a tax rate of 22.4 cents per $100 valuation during a regular monthly meeting Tuesday night.

The rate adopted is this year's effective tax rate, which imposes the same total taxes as last year's rate of 22 cents. The county tax base decreased by $8.6 million, causing the slight rise in the effective rate.

In other business Tuesday night, the board approved a name change for the hospital; approved a contract with Dr. Howard Haysom; extended the management agreement with Lubbock Methodist Hospital for three years; accepted a bid on professional liability insurance; and approved the medical staff, financial and operations reports.

The proposed hospital name of Hereford Regional Medical Center was unanimously approved by the board following a couple of months of discussion, and will become effective on Oct. 1. Ron Rives, CEO and administrator, had recommended the name change as a means of more clearly projecting the service area and image of the hospital. He estimated the transition to the new name would cost about $10,000 over a period of time.

The board formally approved a contract with Dr. Howard Haysom, a family practice physician, who is moving here from Houston. He will start practice Oct. 1 and will be in the Hereford Medical Clinic with Dr. Kent Walker, another doctor who has just started practice. The clinic is located at 801 E. 4th St., the former office of Dr. Tim Revell. The board last month approved a 27-month lease-purchase agreement with Dr. Revell.

Dr. Stephen Rengel, a Lubbock orthopedic surgeon, will also have offices in the building on a visiting schedule. He will see patients by referral only on a weekly schedule. He made his first visit here last week.

The board discussed the management agreement, which is ending its second year, with Methodist Hospital of Lubbock, and opted to extend the agreement for three years. Either party can end the agreement with 30 days notice. Ray Mason, Methodist official from Lubbock, commended the board and Rives for the progress made by the hospital, and said that Methodist plans to expand educational programs and networking efforts. Methodist now has 19 hospitals under some type of management agreements.

Rives notified the board of three bids on professional liability insurance, recommending a low bid by American Physicians Insurance Exchange. The policy, offered through Plains Insurance here in Hereford, has a premium cost of $34,760.

A problem in the financing of a hospital renovation project and construction of a medical building was reported by Rives. The proposed contractual obligations on personal property may not be available because of a financing law that was enacted before the hospital district was formed here. The board is awaiting an attorney general's opinion before determining the method of financing.

Rives commended the medical staff and all employees for their work in preparing for the annual Joint Commission Survey. "I think the survey team was impressed overall, but they did have a few recommendations on changes that should be made." The hospital will receive formal notice on the accreditation in a couple of months.

Paul Fowler, chief financial officer, reported the hospital had a good July with patient revenue totaling $930,717, compared to $854,013 a year ago. The year to date revenues were $8,760,529, compared to $5,590,392 a year ago.

Income from operations reflected a loss of $776 for the month, but the year-to-date loss was $1,047,629. With the ad valorem tax and other non-operating revenue added to the financial statement, a net of $15,945 was shown for July. For the 10 months of the fiscal year, the excess of revenue over expenses was $394,707.

The hospital had 125 adults and children patients in July and 33 newborns. Total adults and children for the year to date is 1,156, compared to 950 last year at this time. A total of 223 newborns has been recorded for the year to date.

All directors were present for the meeting. They are John Perrin, Merle Clark, Boyd Foster, Scott Turner, Mal Manchee, Paul Abalos and Jo Beth Shackelford.

Texas mayors join to push passage of free trade deal

DALLAS (AP) - Mayors from four of Texas' largest cities joined the effort to push the North American Free Trade Agreement through Congress saying defeat of the pact could spell disaster for economic development and international relations.

I think NAFTA is the single most important international agreement (on) economic development and job creation ... that our country has ever negotiated," San Antonio Mayor Nelson Wolff said Tuesday.

He made the comments during a televised news conference with the mayors of Austin, Houston and Dallas. The mayors were joined by NAFTA supporters from around the state, including Ernesto Chavarria, chairman of the Board of the Texas Association of Mexican American Chambers of Commerce.

Although the mayors agreed that the treaty is a top priority for the state, they declined to join Gov. Ann Richards in predicting civil unrest in Mexico should Congress fail to ratify the pact.

"What I fear is economic violence," said Houston Mayor Bob Lanier, who cited studies showing the pact will create 50,000 new jobs in Houston alone by the turn of the century.

Dallas Mayor Steve Bartlett said he fears international fallout from political defeat of the pact.

Cows lining up to drink from new bovine drinking fountain

SALEM, Ore. (AP) - Who says cows are dumb?

Agriculture officials developed a cow-operated drinking fountain to keep the heavy animals away from fragile river banks. Before long, thirsty bovines were lining up to get a drink.

"They push a lever with their muzzle or nose, which siphons water out of either a well, a pond or a creek," said Mike Wolf, project coordinator with the Oregon Department of Agriculture in Salem.

"That brings water into a little basin right at the pump, which provides a pool for the livestock to drink out of. If they need more water, they just pump it again."

The object is to keep grazing cattle away from streams, where they trample plants, disturb the soil and contaminate the water with manure.

The $400 pump was installed on a farm near Dairy Creek last week. It's been in use for a month at the Oregon State University dairy near Corvallis.

"The cows learned about this new source of water in less than a day," said Ron Miner, professor of bioresource engineering. After a couple of days, he said, the cows lined up for water like thirsty people at a fountain.

Reid returned to town to stand trial for murder

A woman indicted in the death of her infant daughter in 1984 has been brought from an Iowa prison to Hereford to stand trial on charges of murder and injury to a child.

Tanya Thaxton Reid, serving a 10-year sentence in Iowa on a 1989 conviction of endangering a child, was taken into custody by a Deaf Smith County jail sergeant, Karen Foster, in Des Moines, Iowa, and returned here late Sunday.

Trial of Reid had been set for September but has been continued, said Criminal District Attorney Roland Saul.

Saul said he would work on a date with her attorney, Charles Rittenberry of Amarillo, and 222nd District Court Judge David Wesley Gulley.

"We'd like to have it separate on the docket," he said, "because there will be expert witnesses brought in for the trial."

Reid is accused of causing the death of eight-month-old Morgan Reid, who reportedly stopped breathing on Feb. 7, 1984, and was admitted to Deaf Smith General Hospital. The baby died the next day in an Amarillo hospital where she was taken for treatment.

Sometime after the infant's death, the defendant and her husband, Raymond Reid, moved from Hereford to Iowa.

She was convicted in the Iowa court of endangering her son's life. At the time, she elected to have the case heard by a judge, but no jury. During testimony witnesses alleged both the daughter and the son, suffered seizures and stopped breathing when with their mother.

An expert witness testified that Reid suffered from a disorder, Munchausen Syndrome by Proxy, in which a persons induces or fabricates illness in children for psychological gratification, The Des Moines Register reported at the time of the trial.

In the Iowa newspaper's reports of the trial, prosecutors alleged the woman cut off her son's air supply, then insisted he suffered a seizure. She was a licensed vocational nurse and allegedly administered resuscitation until medical help arrived.

When the investigation began in Iowa, the son was removed from the Local man's mailbox at the curb and house

By GEORGIA TYLER
Staff Writer

The legendary Rube Goldberg would appreciate the invention of a Hereford man, Bud Paetzold.

Goldberg, readers may recall, was memorialized in cartoons some years back as an inventor of outrageous contraptions.

Paetzold's efforts don't go quite that far, but his invention may -- or may not -- satisfy the U.S. Postal Service which wants curbside mail boxes in residential areas.

In his frontyard at 227 Northwest, Paetzold has installed a pulley system that moves his mailbox back and forth, from his front door to the sidewalk.

A retired farmer, Paetzold had most of the materials for his invention. He estimates he has less than $100 invested.

"I bought the old garage door opener motor for $15 and bought two 40-foot lengths of pipe," he reported.

He already had some old shopping cart wheels that he converted to hold the pulley belts that wire runs through to pull the mailbox along.

When he pushes the button on the motor, the mailbox rides through the air, either to the sidewalk or back to the front door.

Paetzold said he's had some comment from neighbors and passersby since he got the invention operational last week.

"One woman said she'd like to have one so she wouldn't have to walk to the street to get her mail," he reported.

He said he thinks the automated mailbox has some possibilities for older or disabled persons, especially when weather if cold, rainy or icy.

Paetzold installed vertical pipe in his frontyard to hold the horizontal delivery system on the mail box. He welded a bracket on the box to ride on the wire extending between the upright standards of about six feet height.

When stationary at the sidewalk, the box is about the height reachable from a car window.

Years as a "born tinkerer" gave Paetzold the expertise for his invention.

"I've always worked in my shop on the farm," he said. The Postal Service's announcement some months ago that curbside mailboxes are needed sent Paetzold to the shop.

He has painted all the pipe a shade of green that blends into the large trees and shrubs in his front yard.

Mailbox invention

Standing at his front door, Bud Paetzold watches his mailbox travel on the contraption he designed and built to move the box from his door to the sidewalk. The inventor did the project to help beat bad weather and, maybe, satisfy the U.S. Postal Service's desire for sidewalk mailboxes.

Specialist spends day in Hereford each week

Stephen J. Ringel M.D., an orthopedic surgeon from Lubbock, is seeing patients one day each week in Hereford, Ron Rives, CEO of Deaf Smith General Hospital has announced.

Ringel sees patients referred by Hereford physicians from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. each Friday in Hereford Medical Clinic, 801 East Fourth.

"Dr. Ringel will also be performing non-emergency surgeries, referred to him by Hereford physicians," said Rives. "Bringing an orthopedic surgeon to Hereford should be a great benefit to many of our patients."

Ringel was born in New York and received his bachelor of arts degree in biology from New York University.

He received his Doctor of Medicine degree from the University of Bologna, Italy, and served a rotating internship at Policinico Sant/Orsola in Bologna, as well as a surgery internship at Our Lady of Mercy Medical Center in Bronx, N.Y.

He completed a residency in general surgery at State University-Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn, N.Y., and served a four-year residency in orthopedic surgery at the University of Tennessee in Chattanooga.

He was orthopedic surgeon at Our Lady of Mercy Medical Center in New York for 11 years. He now has a private practice in Lubbock.

"Dr. Ringel only sees patients who are referred by their physician," Rives explained. Anyone wishing to make an appointment with Ringel should call their local doctor or may call Peggie Fox at DSGH, 364-2141, for more information.

Lawyer says test scores prove point

Funding for private schools is goal of group

AUSTIN (AP) - An advocate for allowing state funds to pay private school tuition says the results of a new school ranking system bolster his court battle.

"Our pleadings allege that there's a general diffusion of ignorance in Texas rather than a general diffusion of knowledge as required by the constitution," San Antonio lawyer Allan Parker, who represents several parents of school children, said Tuesday. "Any evidence of failure to produce knowledge will be relevant."

Parker wants school choice to be part of the long-running lawsuit initiated by poor school districts over inequities in the school funding system. If the judge overseeing that case refuses, Parker said he'll pursue a separate suit.

The TEA list, which still is being refined, cites 363 schools in Texas as having "clearly unacceptable" performance because no more than 20 percent of their students passed the Texas Assessment of Academic Skills given to fourth-, eighth- and 10th-graders this spring.

The schools, which are among 6,208 Texas campuses, could be shut down in two years if they don't improve.

Another 277 schools were rated either exemplary or recognized for meeting higher state standards. Among other criteria, a 90 percent passing rate on the skills test was required for an exemplary rating, and 65 percent for a recognized rating.

The biggest number of schools - 5,568 - didn't fall into the other categories and were called "acceptable." Their failure rate on the skills test could have been as high as 79 percent, TEA spokeswoman Della May Moore said.

But she emphasized that this is the first year of the rating system, which was required under a new state law. Standards will be stricter in the future, with a campus passing rate of 35 percent required for an acceptable rating in 1997-98.

"This is a beginning point," Ms. Moore said. "It is something that people have to work together to improve."

A team of educators will visit the low-ranked schools to help them in turning around their programs. The importance of parent and community involvement also has been stressed by groups including the Texas Congress of Parents and Teachers.

But Parker said students could get quicker relief if Texas had a choice system.

"The choice option would give some of those children in those schools that are so bad the right to leave immediately, which would be great for those children," he said.

But Dan Casey of the Texas Association of School Boards said the answer is not to send funds to other schools during a time of strapped state finances.

"Is moving money out of what is a relatively low-financed school system going to help you attract and retain better teachers and make the kind of program changes you need to enhance student performance? My view is probably not," Casey said.

"We were in Pennsylvania and saw the tree being cut down," said Paetzold. "I asked the man if I could have a slab. He started the chainsaw and in a minute, I had a piece of the tree."

Rings on the tree indicated it was 100 years old. Location of taps made to draw the maple sap are evident in the crosscut slab.

The Paetzolds were unable to bring the piece of tree home on an airplane so they had to ship it.

"It was pretty big, about five or six inches think and almost three feet in diameter," noted Paetzold. He finished the slab and put legs on it to create the table.

While the table is a source of some pride for the retired farmer, his mailbox contraption is a conversational item and a source of some fun.

"I just enjoyed doing it," Paetzold said with a grin and a twinkle in his eye.

Bishop is elevated to archdiocese post

VATICAN CITY (AP) - Pope John Paul II has named Bishop Michael J. Sheehan of Lubbock, Texas, to be Archbishop of Santa Fe, the Vatican announced today.

Sheehan, 54, was named the Vatican's Apostolic Administrator for the archdiocese following the resignation of Archbishop Robert Sanchez.

Sanchez resigned March 19 amid allegations he was sexually involved with up to five women in the 1970s and possibly the 1980s.

"My desire is to be a good pastor, a good shepherd, to return normalcy to the archdiocese," Sheehan said after celebrating morning Mass in Lubbock. He was scheduled to fly to Albuquerque today.

His installation as archbishop is set for Sept. 21.

Sheehan had been the bishop of Lubbock since 1983.

A Wichita, Kansas, native, Sheehan grew up in Texas. He was rector of the Holy Trinity Seminary in Dallas from 1976 to 1982.

"We're really pleased that he was appointed by the Holy Father as the 11th archbishop of Santa Fe," said the Rev. Ron Wolf, the archdiocese chancellor. "We are pleased because of his integrity, administrative ability, his deep spirituality and his willingness to move this diocese ahead."

Wolf said he has had Sheehan's "full support concerning elimination of sexual abuse from the archdiocese from the day he walked in the front door."

The Archdiocese of Santa Fe has been a target of numerous lawsuits in the past year alleging priests and former priests sexually molested more than 30 people, many of them when they were children in the 1960s and 1970s.

Sheehan said he plans a "year of healing so we can grieve the losses and have reconciliation" in the archdiocese. Sheehan said he set up a counseling fund and telephone hotline for victims of priests' abuse.

Wolf said Sheehan has visited every deanery in New Mexico. Deaneries are geographic locations in which parishes exist.

He said response to Sheehan has been positive among parishioners, many of whom expressed disappointment at the resignation of Sanchez.

"I am glad to hear the news," said parishioner Eugene Dix of Albuquerque. "I feel he was very effective in bringing about a better understanding and healing within the archdiocese.

Sanchez, 59, the nation's first Hispanic archbishop and a priest for 33 years, had headed the archdiocese since 1974.

Sheehan was known as the "boy bishop" when he was named the first bishop of the diocese of Lubbock when it was created in June 1983. He was serving as pastor of Church of the Immaculate Conception in Grand Prairie, near Dallas, at the time.

Sheehan grew up in Texarkana, Texas, and studied for the priesthood at St. John's Seminary and Assumption Seminary in San Antonio and was ordained in 1964.

The Lubbock diocese is predominantly Hispanic, and Sheehan speaks Spanish. Many of New Mexico's Catholics are Hispanic.

Sheehan continued to serve as bishop in Lubbock while interim head of the Santa Fe archdiocese, and commuted between the two states.

The Santa Fe archdiocese is based in Albuquerque and covers 75,000 square miles, 90 parishes and 300,000 registered Catholics.

Sheehan celebrated his first mass in New Mexico in April at St. Francis Cathedral in Santa Fe, and called on clergy and religious people to overcome the church's adversity, maintain hope and search for renewal.

home, placed in foster care and reportedly suffered no more seizures.

Reid has not completed her sentence in the Iowa case. She was released to authorities for the trial here and is confined to Deaf Smith County jail without bond since she still has time to serve in Iowa.

If convicted here, she would be returned to Iowa to complete that sentence, then returned to Texas to serve a sentence.

Letters to the Editor:

Dear Editor:

I would like to address some of the issues that Mr. Davis Ford raised in his letter in the Aug. 15 edition of The Hereford Brand. I attended Hereford schools during my entire public education and was a 1981 graduate of HHS. I am currently a teacher in the Lewisville ISD, just north of Dallas.

During a recent visit to Hereford, I happened to read Mr. Ford's letter and found many of his statements unfounded and offensive. While I will not pretend to know and understand all of the tax issues in Hereford, I do know the field of education.

Anyone who would presume to judge a teacher's or a school district's effectiveness based solely on standardized test scores is uninformed and looking for an easy scapegoat. The studies Mr. Ford mentioned, which show some states having the lowest teacher's salaries and the highest test scores, go on to point out that they have high parental involvement and a great deal of community support.

Those states, such as South Dakota, also do not have the ethnic, cultural, or family diversity that Hereford or the State of Texas has. Those are just some of the differences. Mr. Ford is obviously comparing apples to oranges when he compares Texas education, with its unique problems and challenges to smaller states which have completely different cultures, standards, and testing procedures.

Schools must be held accountable for the education of their students, but that accountability must also extend to the students, parents, and the community as a whole. Rather than giving teachers pay raises based on the student performances, why don't we allow teachers to do the job they are trained to do and hold students and parents accountable also?

Imagine for a moment fining parents whose children refuse to cooperate or apply themselves to their education. It's far-fetched, but wouldn't it change the public's view of test scores and accountability?

I, like thousands of others, received an excellent education from HISD. I had many outstanding teacher--Merle Clark, Dottie Darden, Randy Farr, Richard Stanley, Sheri Zinck, Margaret Bell, Colleen Billingsley, and Tommy Rosson, just to name a very few.

Because of my parents and all of my dedicated teachers, I have achieved what should be in the primary goal of education--becoming a well informed, well educated, American citizen. Luckily, my teachers' salaries were not based on my performance. Like many students, I did not always achieve to the best of my abilities. However, my teachers never gave up on me.

I now teach eighth graders during the school year and conduct teacher inservices during the summer. Mr. Ford, I have "taken a good look at this nation's education establishment," and I know that it is striving to do everything possible to educate our students. After all, America is the only country in the industrialized world that guarantees the opportunity of a free public education for all children. Anyone who believes that "the system does not have the students' best interests in mind" is sadly mistaken.

Most of the good educators I know are depressingly overworked and are required to do much more than impart information. They perform many duties far beyond their training and simply because they are dedicated professionals and love what they do.

Performance goes far beyond the results of one standardized test over a three-day period any given school year. Mr. Ford, I would invite you to spend a substantial amount of time within the education system before condemning the teachers of HISD because of test scores.

And, to the teachers in Hereford, I'd like to thank you for a job well done. I know that I would not have achieved all that I have without the solid foundation I received from the Hereford school district.

Thank you,
Dana Kay Barber

Dear Editor:

It was with great interest that I read Mr. Ford's letter in the Aug. 15 Brand concerning, among other things, the HISD use of the Stanton building. That letter addressed several issues concerning the school district. I feel qualified to address Mr. Ford's uninformed remarks about Stanton, since I am employed in that building as the HISD Attendance/PEIMS clerk.

It is inconceivable to me that any building in Hereford that houses offices and workspace for approximately 70 employees would be considered "another building we really don't need" by anyone unless they were totally ignorant of the facts. This seems to be the case in Ford's Letter. It would be a shame for Hereford citizens to be as misinformed about a public building as they will be if they believe Mr. Ford's comments about Stanton. I write today to clarify those misconceptions.

On Stanton's ground floor you will find classrooms and teachers for approximately 170 four-year-old pre-kindergarten students; the PK campus administrative offices housing a principal, assistant principal, their clerical assistants and a counselor; adult education facilities complete with a computer lab; the Pegasus program for district elementary gifted/talented students; a gym/locker room facility used by the high school; the S.O.A.R. campus for alternative education, several high school vocational EPS classrooms; the district truant officer and parental involvement offices, and the alternative school facility.

The second floor of Stanton has no wasted space either. The classrooms have been converted to office space housing the assistant superintendent in charge of special programming and his secretary; the executive assistant to the superintendent and her secretary; a telephone receptionist; the curriculum director; the vocational/special ed director and her secretary; the special ed diagnosticians and their community liaison; the district attendance/PEIMS accounting clerk; the bi-lingual secretary, and the migrant department. In addition to these offices, the old Stanton library is extensively used by the entire district as a meeting room for various workshops, in-services and committee meetings. This room is utilized for these purposes almost every day, all year long. The second-floor auditorium is used for PK and S.O.A.R. programs throughout the school year.

The third floor of Stanton houses the office of the federal programs director; the homebound headquarters; classrooms and office space for the three-year-old pre-kindergarten programs; a building lounge; and a secure records room.

As an employee that works at Stanton every day, I take exception to being referred to as someone "we really don't need" by Mr. Ford. My job entails the data entry and the state-mandated report production that garners our district every dime of funding we receive. I do it with care and pride. Each other office or program housed in or administered from Stanton also affects the lives and education of Hereford students. That is not what I would call needless endeavor..

The suggestion Mr. Ford refers to regarding the purchase of the Smith building for HISD use is, in the opinion of many, a good one. Our school district currently has administrative staff and programs housed at three different locations in Hereford. Administrators and/or their clerical assistants work out of the old Central building, the Stanton building and the Administration building located on Avenue F. The purchase of the Smith building would allow all administrative personnel to be housed in one location with adequate parking. Many of us who work as administrative assistants or clerics feel our would could be accomplished with more efficiency and speed if we were all in the same locations. Each administrative department works closely with all others in the enormous task of running the school district. Mr. Ford is obviously unaware of how many people it takes to run a government-monitored corporation with over 600 employees. The Smith building could be adequately used by existing administrative staff. No need would be felt to hire new administrators to fill it, as Mr. Ford suggested in his sarcastic question, "How many new administrators could we fit in there?"

Although Stanton is an old building, the people working there are proud of the jobs we do and the pleasant workplace we have created with limited expenditure. Our custodians keep our building spotlessly clean and we are always available to interested citizens. I am sure my co-workers would join me in inviting anyone in the community to drop by Stanton to see firsthand many HISD employees working in a productive and useful building.

Ann Landers

DEAR READERS: I am on vacation, but I have left behind some of my favorite columns that you may have missed the first time around. I hope you enjoy them.

Watch Phil Donahue today or tomorrow (check your local listings for the time). There will be an interesting program dealing with how women can be ripped off. Viewers will get some hot tips that will save them money--Ann Landers

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm an unwed mother with a 4-year-old son. The problem is I live with my mother and father. Mom is crazy about my little boy, and he is very attached to her. The other day, he said, "I love Grandma so much, I wish she was my mommy." This just about killed me.

I must work to support my child. Grandma baby-sits, and there is no other arrangement that can be made. I'm afraid the longer this situation goes on, the closer my child will be to his grandmother, and I will mean nothing to him. Please give me some help.--I Need My Baby Back

DEAR NEED: It is not uncommon for children to make such remarks. Don't attach too much importance to it.

Try to spend as much time with your son as possible--just the two of you. Actually, it's not the amount of time spent with a child, but the quality and consistency that count. After the boy starts school, he will become lees attached to your mother, and this, too, will reduce the problem considerably. Cheer up. Your fears are normal but magnified.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm very fond of a young woman who is terrific company and has many super qualities, but her neck is always dirty. This is no gag. I'm serious. What do you suggest?--In Earnest

DEAR EARN : Tell the woman. It is possible that her jewelry is discoloring her neck and she is unaware of it. Or she could have a skin problem and her neck may not be dirty at all. At any rate, don't duck the issue. Discuss it.

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was delighted with your response to the lady who objected to the nonsensical words of rock and roll and the "immorality" of the music. Nosensical syllables were an integral part of 16th and 17th century ballads.

Technically, it is called a burden--a refrain used after each verse such as "hey di ying ding diddle la la day," a ding-a-ling of a burden from the Kentucky mountains.

A music historian in 1805 called waltzing "a rollin' in the mire." The words "waltz' and "jazz" actually carried with them obscene implications. In fact, the waltz was considered lascivious because it was the first dance that allowed a man to put his arms around a woman in public. No wonder the clergy called it "the rhythmic incantation of the devil."

Let us emancipate ourselves from the myth that music has anything to do with morals. Music is as amoral as the sound of the babbling brook or the whistling wind. The tones E, D and C can be sung to the words "I love you," "I hate you" or "Three Blind Mice."

It might interest self-appointed guardians of morals to know that "Silent Night" was condemned in 1897 by music director George Weber of the Mainz Cathedral as a "vulgar mischief and void of all religious and Christian feelings."--Maurice Zam, concert pianist and musicologist, former director of the Los Angeles Conservatory of Music and program annotator of the Hollywood Bowl

Bride-elect honored

A bridal shower was held for Willa Bess Lawson Aug. 14 at the Fellowship of Believers. The honoree and Jeffery Duncan Zandi plan to exchange wedding vows Sept. 18. Greeting guests were Grace Lawson, the honoree's grandmother; Miss Lawson; and Sarah Lawson, her mother.

Willa Bess Lawson feted at recent bridal shower

Willa Bess Lawson, Sept. 18 bride-elect of Jeffery Duncan Zandi, was honored with a bridal shower Saturday, Aug. 14, at the Fellowship of Believers.

Greeting guests with the honoree were her mother, Sarah Lawson, and her grandmother, Grace Lawson.

Cleta Weemes and Nancy Josserand served refreshments of cake squares, decorated in the honoree's chosen colors, nuts and punch. Crystal appointments were used.

The refreshment table was covered with a lace cloth and centered by a dark green and wine floral arrangement highlighted by three rose candles.

The centerpiece and a comforter were presented to Miss Lawson by the hostesses: Daleine Springer, Nancy Josserand, Irene McKinister, Marn Tyler, Nita Lea, Kay Hall, Donnie Gooch, Jean Patty, Dana Barber, Shirley Barber, and Cleta Weemes.

News of nutrition

More Americans are concerned with their overall health, fitness and diet than ever before. Finding natural solutions for combating today's hectic schedules and stressful lifestyles is key.

One remarkable food, Royal Jelly, when combined with better nutrition, is said to help maintain body balance, provide a discernible energy lift and enhance one's overall well-being.

Royal Jelly, the exclusive food of the Queen Bee, is solely responsible for the amazing transformation she undergoes, keeping her fit, more vital and fertile through nearly six years of hive leadership. Take her off Royal Jelly, however, and it's back to the basic six-week cycle of the worker bee.

This rare and delicate substance is produced, in minute amounts, in the hive by the industrious worker bees. They fan it with their wings for three days to keep it cool and maximize its goodness, assuring it will be fit for her royal consumption.

The effectiveness of Royal Jelly in our daily diet comes from its vitality-giving ingredients. Included are nutritional necessities such as vitamins A, C and E, protein rich amino acids, B complex vitamins and essential minerals, all helping to provide a natural energy lift.

Stop Swatch

NEW YORK (AP) - Swatch's latest entry in the fashion watch field is its first with integrated functions - a wristwatch and stop-watch in one.

Three models, retailing for $50 apiece, will be available in Los Angeles, Chicago and New York beginning in September, followed by national distribution in October.

Swatch, a division of SMH (US) Inc., and its retail partners will donate a percentage of sales to the Magic Johnson Foundation set up by the former Los Angeles Lakers basketball star to fund HIV and AIDS care, education and prevention.

Missy Farren, vice president of marketing, said Swatch expects to donate a minimum of $1 million raised through stop-watch sales and fund-raising events.

On the road again

By GARRY WESNER
Managing Editor

When Hereford High School math teacher Becky Gerlich tells about "What I Did On My Summer Vacation," she can weave a tale of cross-country adventure and daring feats of endurance.

After all, what else would you call a nearly 3,000-mile bike race from California to Georgia done during the heat of the summer?

Mrs. Gerlich and her husband, Nick, last month participated in the 12th annual Race Across America (RAAM).

They were the only pair participating in the mixed tandem competition, which forced them to race against the clock rather than against other teams.

"We finished on Aug. 8 in Savannah, Ga.," said Nick Gerlich, "2,910 miles, 11 days, 9 hours and 24 minutes" after starting the race.

That was enough, though -- race officials had decreed the couple needed to finish in less than 11 days and 12 hours in order to be declared winners.

What makes finishing all the sweeter, they said, was that the course -- which wound through the Rocky Mountains of Southern Colorado, the rolling hills of Tennessee and the middle of downtown Memphis, Tenn. -- was "quite a bit" tougher than in previous races.

To say it was a tough ride would be an understatement.

The couple told of the arduous journey through three successive mountain passes in Colorado, where they both gave thought to quitting.

"It's really easy when you do something like this," Nick said, to quit. "The mental extremes can really throw you."

Still, said his wife, they had an advantage traveling together -- and being a husband-and-wife team.

"You can draw on each other's strengths," she said, adding that, when one of them was depressed and ready to quit, the other was encouraging and ready to continue.

"I think if we ever did it again, it would be easier," Becky said, because they would know they could do it.

During the trip, the couple said, they only got about 24 hours of sleep, snatching two- and three-hour naps along the way.

After leaving Irvine, Nick said, they travelled through Las Vegas, Nev.; Monument Valley, Utah; Southern Colorado; Boise City, Okla.; Guymon, Okla.; Fort Smith, Ark.; Little Rock; Memphis, Tenn.; Lynchburg, Tenn.; Chattanooga, Tenn.; Macon, Ga.; then on to Savannah.

"Let me tell you, there is not a heck of a lot of flat land on this trip," he said with a laugh, recalling their pleasure at returning to the open spaces of West Texas after the race.

Traveling with the couple were two support vehicles, one led by Hereford resident Gary Billingsly.

"They had everything we needed -- literally," said Nick. "It was like a bicycle store and a grocery store."

To forestall delays caused by equipment failure, the couple carried with them three racing tandem bikes, plus 12 spare tires.

"Our biggest trouble was with rear wheels getting out of true (on) some of the rough roads we encountered out west," said Nick.

Becky recalled a timekeeping station in Kayenta, Ariz., just outside Monument Valley.

The couple stopped for a three-hour nap and the man there slipped in, took all their wheels and trued them all up.

By the time they awoke at 6 a.m., the work had been done and he let them go on without charging them or telling of his kindness.

Early in the race, slow speeds through the mountains made it appear the couple would not make the finish line.

However, they approached the last stretch and determined they would make it to Savannah on time.

Whereas most racers tend to slow down as they travel, the Gerlichs sped up as the finish line loomed.

The final 377 miles were done at a rapid pace.

"We did it in 26 hours," Nick said.

With 19 hours to go and the couple suffering from lack of sleep, the support crew made a daring decision -- stop them for three hours rest, leaving them 16 hours to pedal before running out of time.

"It was a real gamble and the massage therapist worked on us the whole time we were asleep," Nick said. "That little break was what gave us the boost."

Both said they expected they would compete in a RAAM event -- but not next year, probably in 1995.

Becky especially praised their sponsors, citing four major Hereford sponsors: Arrowhead Mills, Merrick Petfoods, Appian and C. Ramirez and Sons.

For now, it is time to think about school. Nick teaches marketing at West Texas A&M University.

Both said they plan to use their experience in the classroom.

For HHS math students, the message from Becky will be "you can do anything you can set your mind to do."

Said Nick, "I use examples from our participation in sports that you have to set goals in life, whether it be a race, a degree, a job. Dream big and you have to plan a long time and train hard."

Bledsoe gets chance to start

By The Associated Press

Drew Bledsoe is getting the chance to show his coach whether he's ready to be the starting quarterback. Jim McMahon has already shown his coach enough.

Bledsoe, the top pick in last April's draft, will start at quarterback Friday when the New England Patriots host the Green Bay Packers. Coach Bill Parcells isn't ready to hand the No. 1 spot to his prized rookie, but he said Tuesday he is giving Bledsoe the chance to impress.

"He has to get the chance to play against another team's No. 1 unit," Parcells said. "I think he needs to do this."

McMahon, who has already started for three NFL teams, convinced coach Dennis Green with his two exhibition performances and his past record that he should be the No. 1 quarterback for the Minnesota Vikings.

"Jim has gotten the nod as the starter," Green said. "He has an excellent winning record as a starting quarterback."

During 11 years in the NFL with Chicago, San Diego and Philadelphia, McMahon is 62-27 as a starter and 19-2 in the NFC Central Division.

Sean Salisbury will back up McMahon. Rich Gannon, Brad Johnson and Gino Torretta are Nos. 3, 4 and 5 on the depth chart.

For Bledsoe, a good performance against the Packers could lead to a start in the Patriots' final preseason game against Kansas City. Parcells has said the starting quarterback against the Chiefs on Aug. 27 is probably going to be the starter for the regular-season opener Sept. 5 at Buffalo.

"He hasn't told me that, but I hope I play well," Bledsoe said. "I'm going to treat it the same way as I've treated every game I've played up to this point. I'm going to try to do my best on each play and see what I can get done."

Bledsoe has appeared in both of New England's exhibition games, playing the entire second half against San Diego and the fourth quarter against Cleveland. He has completed nine of 23 passes for 78 yards with one touchdown and three sacks.

Parcells did not say which of his three other quarterbacks - Tommy Hodson, Scott Zolak and Scott Secules - would follow Bledsoe on Friday.

Eagles

Bubby Brister is another quarterback being given a chance to impress. Coach Rich Kotite said Brister, who was signed as a free agent last month, will start for Philadelphia in Saturday night's exhibition game against the Atlanta Falcons.

Chargers

San Diego removed the franchise player designation on defensive end Leslie O'Neal in the hope of getting him to sign a contract and report to camp.

O'Neal is free to negotiate with other NFL teams, but the Chargers hope he will accept their three-year contract offer. Financial details haven't been disclosed.

49ers

Quarterback Steve Bono underwent surgery to repair a separated left shoulder and will be lost to San Francisco for up to eight weeks.

Bono, Steve Young's backup, was hurt late in the second quarter of the 49ers' 16-13 exhibition win at Denver on Monday night. Young also is out with a fractured left thumb, sustained the week before in an exhibition against the Los Angeles Raiders.

The injuries to Bono and Young leave the 49ers with two untested quarterbacks - third-stringer Bill Musgrave and rookie Elvis Grbac, neither of whom has ever started an NFL game.

Redskins

Washington's Mo Elewonibi and Joe Jacoby began the task of solidifying an offensive line that will be without its best pass blocker for the 1993 season.

Jim Lachey suffered a torn knee ligament that will sideline him for the year in the Redskins' exhibition opener Aug. 9 against the Cleveland Browns.

Raiders

Coach Art Shell, hospitalized Monday for a form of diabetes, will miss two days of practice. The 46-year-old Hall of Famer was listed in good condition at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center.

Streaking Braves gain ground on leading Giants

By The Associated Press

Considering their consecutive pennants and their role as the odds-on favorite to win the NL West, it seems strange to see the Atlanta Braves so upbeat about being 6 1/2 games behind the San Francisco Giants.

At least it's better than being 9 1/2 out, which is where the Braves stood 10 days ago.

"We just have to keep the streak going," John Smoltz said after pitching the Braves to a 3-2 victory - their eighth straight - Tuesday night over the Los Angeles Dodgers. "Until we play them (Giants) we can't control what they do."

Until then - when the Braves travel to San Francisco for a three-game series starting Monday - they have to worry about themselves.

"I'm happy to see the margin come down a bit," Atlanta manager Bobby Cox said. "It's starting to move a bit in our direction now."

To make some real headway, the Braves will need to win five of their remaining six games - they also host the Giants in a three-game series starting Aug. 31 - against San Francisco.

Elsewhere, it was Pittsburgh 10, San Francisco 3; Philadelphia 10, Colorado 7; St. Louis 8, San Diego 4; Houston 4, Florida 0; Cincinnati 6, New York 4; and Chicago 7 Montreal 2, and Montreal 6, Chicago 4.

The Braves are 23-8 since the All-Star break - the best record in the majors.

Smoltz (12-9), allowed six hits in 7 2-3 innings to beat Ramon Martinez (8-8). Smoltz blanked the Dodgers on two hits until the sixth when Mike Piazza hit a two-run homer - his 24th. That broke Frank Howard's 23-year-old Los Angeles rookie record.

Astros 4, Marlins 0

Darryl Kile pitched a career-best three-hitter for his second shutout this season.

Kile (13-4) struck out eight and walked two in his third complete game. His previous low-hit game was a five-hitter. Pat Rapp (1-4) allowed four runs in four innings and took the loss.

The victory was Houston's seventh in 10 games. Visiting Florida has lost four of its last five.

Phillies 10, Rockies 7

Pete Incaviglia had a decisive two-run single after Lenny Dykstra's solo homer tied the game in the fifth.

Ben Rivera (11-6) was the beneficiary of the outburst, during which the Phillies turned a 3-2 deficit into a 5-3 lead. Rivera allowed six hits in five innings. Mitch Williams worked the ninth for his 33rd save.

Armando Reynoso (8-9) gave up five runs on eight hits in 4 2-3 innings.

Pirates 10, Giants 3

John Burkett lasted just two innings in his first loss in 2 1/2 months, allowing homers to Pittsburgh's Jeff King and Carlos Garcia.

Burkett (18-5), trying to become the National League's first 19-game winner, gave up eight runs on nine hits at Three Rivers Stadium in his first loss in 11 starts since May 28.

Steve Cooke (7-7) benefited from the Pirates' 11-hit offense.

Cardinals 8, Padres 4

Ray Lankford had a homer and a two-run double to lead Bob Tewksbury and St. Louis over visiting San Diego.

Tewksbury (13-7) allowed four runs in six innings on nine hits with two walks and two strikeouts.

The Cardinals scored five runs in the second on a walk, a wild pitch, four singles and the double by Lankford off starter Andy Benes (13-9).

Reds 6, Mets 0

Converted reliever Bobby Ayala (5-5) pitched seven innings, and Chris Sabo had a homer and four RBIs as host Cincinnati ended a seven-game losing streak.

The Reds also got homers from Joe Oliver and Greg Tubbs - his first in the majors - as they broke out of a week-long slump. Cincinnati had managed just 21 hits and five runs in its last six games.

Dwight Gooden (11-13) took the loss.

Cubs 7, Expos 2
Expos 6, Cubs 4

Jose Guzman matched a career high with 12 strikeouts while pitching a five-hitter for Chicago at Wrigley Field. Derrick May had three RBIs for Guzman (11-7), who beat Dennis Martinez (10-8) in pitching his second complete game.

Montreal gained a split of the doubleheader, getting RBI doubles from Moises Alou and Sean Berry in a three-run sixth inning. Rookie Kirk Rueter (3-0) worked 6 2-3 innings. John Wetteland pitched the final two for his 26th save. Mike Harkey (8-7) lost for the Cubs, who got Sammy Sosa's 28th homer.

Red Sox' late-night loss leaves them 4 1/2 back

By The Associated Press

It wasn't worth the wait for the fading Boston Red Sox.

By the time Chicago and Boston took the soggy Fenway Park field at 10:37 p.m. Tuesday night, the Red Sox already knew Toronto had won 6-4 at Cleveland.

That didn't prove to be much motivation as the White Sox and Jack McDowell took a 3-2 victory in a game delayed three hours, 2 minutes at the start. The game didn't end until 1:25 a.m., and the Red Sox found themselves 4 1/2 games behind the Blue Jays.

Meanwhile, fourth-place Baltimore lost its eighth straight, 5-3 at Seattle, and dropped 6 1/2 out.

"Now we have no choice but to win Wednesday," Orioles reliever Jim Poole said. "It gets harder the longer the streak goes on. All the losses are tough to take, whether we're way behind or it's a come-from-behind win."

It's starting to look like a two-team race in the AL East as the New York Yankees split a doubleheader with visiting Texas, winning the first game 11-4 before losing the nightcap 3-2. New York trails by one game.

At Fenway, the White Sox broke a 2-2 tie when Robin Ventura singled with one out and moved to second on a wild pitch by Aaron Sele (6-2). After Ellis Burks flied out, Steve Sax hit a grounder between the right-field line and first baseman Mo Vaughn that scored Ventura.

McDowell (19-7) allowed 10 hits, struck out six and walked none in eight innings. The victory kept first-place Chicago 3 1/2 games ahead of Kansas City.

Royals 3, Twins 2

Former Twins star Gary Gaetti hit a two-run homer and Jeff Montgomery recorded his AL-leading 37th save as Kansas City defeated Minnesota at the Metrodome. The Royals snapped the Twins' five-game winning streak while staying close in the AL West race.

Chris Haney (8-5) pitched the first five innings for Kansas City, giving up eight hits and one run. Jim Deshaies (11-11) was the loser.

Athletics 6, Brewers 3

Steve Karsay, acquired from Toronto in the Rickey Henderson deal, won his major-league debut, allowing six hits in 6 1-3 innings to lead Oakland over visiting Milwaukee. Karsay allowed two runs, both in the seventh inning, while striking out three and walking one.

Jamie Navarro (7-9) took the loss, allowing six hits and five runs in seven innings.

Blue Jays 6, Indians 4

Roberto Alomar homered in the first inning for the second straight game as the Toronto built another quick lead at Cleveland.

Jack Morris (7-11) benefitted from a five-run first inning but barely held on long enough to get the win. He lasted five-plus innings, allowing four runs - two of them unearned - and eight hits.

Tom Kramer (5-3) faced just four batters, and all four scored.

Yankees 11, Rangers 4
Rangers 3, Yankees 2

Juan Gonzalez hit his AL-leading 36th homer in the sixth inning as Texas beat New York for a double-header split at Yankee Stadium. In New York's victory in the opener, Don Mattingly hit a three-run homer in a six-run first inning that chased Kevin Brown (9-9) after just one out and 26 pitches.

Kenny Rogers (11-7) won his third consecutive start. Melido Perez fell to 6-11.

In the opener, Jimmy Key (15-4) won his third consecutive start, allowing four runs and 10 hits in seven innings.

Mariners 5, Orioles 3

Baltimore lost again as Bret Boone's two-run single with the bases loaded in the eighth inning rallied Seattle at the Kingdome.

After falling behind 3-1, the Mariners rallied for four runs off four Baltimore pitchers in the eighth. Todd Frohwirth (6-6) was the loser.

Chris Bosio (6-7) allowed seven hits and six walks, while striking out five in eight innings. Ted Power finished for his fourth save.

Tigers 9, Angels 3

Cecil Fielder reached the 100-RBI mark for the fourth consecutive season and helped lead Detroit past California and John Farrell (2-11) at Anaheim. Fielder is trying to become the first player to lead the majors in RBIs for four straight years.

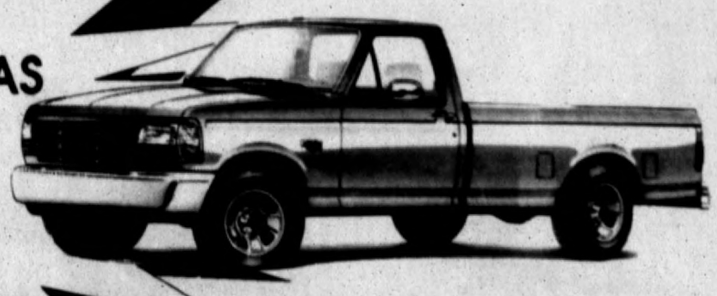

Tom Bolton (3-5) earned the victory, allowing three runs and six hits in 6 1-3 innings.

Sullivan aims to restore TCU to former glory

By MIKE COCHRAN
Associated Press Writer

FORT WORTH, Texas (AP) - Coming off a 2-8-1 season and still looking for a starting quarterback, Texas Christian opens its second campaign under Pat Sullivan Nov. 4 against Oklahoma.

But is Sullivan worried? Nope. Says he:

"If we want to build our program to go to a bowl every year, we've got to play the people that are going to those bowls. I think our schedule is just fine."

Sullivan, the former Auburn quarterback and 1971 Heisman Trophy winner, is upbeat as he tries to rekindle the flames of the Horned Frogs' once proud tradition.

"The attitude I want was in the 1930s," he says. "That was when TCU won more games than anyone in the country."

From 1929 until 1939, the Frogs under coaches Francis Schmidt and Dutch Meyer won 93 games, were unbeaten three seasons and captured a trio of Southwest Conference titles.

The last time TCU won the SWC championship and a trip to the Cotton Bowl was in 1959.

"The first step in building your program is to get the kind of attitude that you want," Sullivan said. And he saw evidence of that attitude late in the 1992 season.

Historically a November horror show, the Frogs nearly upset Houston and Texas Tech, gave SWC champion Texas A&M a scare and beat the Texas Longhorns for the first time since 1967.

"I think it gave our people hope," Sullivan said.

A game ball is on permanent display above his desk, a regal reminder of the 23-14 victory over the Steers.

TCU enters the 1993 season with more than 40 lettermen and a dozen previous starters back, but still is a team longer on enthusiasm than proven talent and experience.

"We were young a year ago, and we're still young," Sullivan said. "How else could you describe a football squad which includes only four senior starters?"

Eight defensive players have starting credentials, including linebacker Reggie Anderson, who led the 1991 team in tackles but was out last year with a knee injury.

Referring to Anderson's spring performance, a defensive coach said:

"Reggie is playing like he is on some kind of a mission; trying to make up for lost time."

TCU's kicking situation is hazy at best, an awkward carryover from a year ago when Sullivan joked that he might advertise for a couple of specialists.

But offensively, three junior college transfers, Chuck Wills, Bart Epperson and Brandon Hickman, showed up just in time to plug some gaping holes in the line.

"If we hadn't had 'em," Sullivan quipped, "we couldn't have had spring practice."

If Sullivan solves his quarterback mystery, the Frogs appear capable of striking equally well on the ground or through the air.

Tailbacks Derrick Cullors and Andre Davis and fullback John Oglesby are proven runners and veteran flankers Richard Woodley and Jimmy Oliver are excellent targets.

The leading candidate to direct the Frogs' multiple offense is sophomore Max Knake, who saw limited action as a backup in 1992 but emerged as No. 1 in the spring.

But, at best, he is described as workmanlike.

Another sophomore, even less experienced, is Scott McLeod, who is considered a "heady youngster and a crisp passer."

It is not inconceivable that at least one of two incoming freshmen, Georgian Todd Stanford and Chance McCarty of Fort Worth Eastern Hills, could wind up taking snaps as the season progresses.

"We can be competitive this year," Sullivan said, "and in a couple of years really win some ball games."

SMU comes out of NCAA clouds

By DENNE H. FREEMAN
AP Sports Writer

DALLAS (AP) - The NCAA death penalty is a distant memory at Southern Methodist University - almost.

SMU coach Tom Rossley told the Southwest Conference press tour members on Tuesday that it still shows up on the Mustangs' roster in depth.

"We're still way down in numbers," Rossley said. "We still don't have that redshirt class yet. That's when you become strong."

SMU only has 77 scholarship players and could have 88 under NCAA limits.

"There were a lot of clouds over this program last year," Rossley said. "There aren't any clouds now. It's hot and clear outside."

Rossley said there was a good feeling on the hilltop campus about the program. The Mustang Club recently raised $1.5 million for the football program from donations of some 600 boosters.

"There is a positive feeling on campus about the athletic department," Rossley said. "There is a belief now that academic athletes can win. The basketball team showed that by winning the conference. And we won five games last year in football. Nobody wonders anymore if we can do it this way."

SMU was slapped with the NCAA death penalty in 1986 and football was effectively dismantled for two years. It's been a long crawl back.

"It (the death penalty) is still there but it's a lot farther away," Rossley said.

Two of SMU's victories came over high-powered programs at the University of Houston and the University of Arkansas.

Rossley boldy predicted the Mustangs will be better this year.

"We're going to win more than we lose," Rossley said. "We would have last year if we hadn't received a bad call on that last-second field goal against Tulane (a 13-12 loss). Everybody is picking us last but we have more skilled players than we've had since I've been here.

"The team we had last year left us something. It left us with the attitude that we are supposed to win; that we believe we can win."

SMU's upgraded non-conference schedule this year includes Arkansas, Wisconsin, Missouri and Navy.

The Mustangs open Sept. 4 against the Razorbacks of Danny Ford in the Cotton Bowl.

Rockets sign Cassell

HOUSTON (AP) - Sam Cassell is ready to play for the Houston Rockets and he doesn't care what position coach Rudy Tomjanovich selects.

Cassell signed a conditional five-year contract Tuesday that will guarantee him $2.53 million over the first three years and pronounced himself ready to begin his pro career.

Cassell played two seasons at San Jacinto, Texas Junior College where he averaged 22.3 points per game and finished his collegiate career at Florida State, averaging 18.3 points and 4.4 assists.

LOS ANGELES (AP) - A 30-hour "laugh-a-thon" featuring Tom Arnold and Jay Leno raised more than $50,000 for Midwest flood victims.

Arnold opened the show at the Improv comedy club at noon Friday, and was followed by comedians such as Leno, Rosie O'Donnell, Kevin Nealon, Franklin Ajaye, Roseanne Arnold and Steve Kravitz.

The event ended at 6 p.m. Saturday.

Comedian Geechy Guy set a Guinness Book of World Records mark for the most jokes told in an hour - 676 of them.

Budd Friedman and Mark Lonow, co-owners of the club, presented a check for $50,000 to the American Red Cross Saturday night.

They said that figure was not the total amount raised.

Divorce papers were 'shock', says Loni

RADNOR, Pa. (AP) - Loni Anderson says she was shocked when Burt Reynolds served her with divorce papers at her West Palm Beach, Fla., home.

"The day before it happened, it had been normal," Anderson told TV Guide for its Aug. 21 issue. "We were basically a family, sharing the day."

Reynolds' bylined version of what happened, published in the National Enquirer, said he told his wife about the divorce the night before papers were served.

Anderson said the media found out before she did. As she read the divorce papers for the first time, she looked up and saw news helicopters hovering above the house.

"I don't think I had any feelings at all," Anderson said. "Shock victims don't have any insightful feelings - you just make it through the next minute."

Also, despite Reynolds' claims, Anderson said she never met Pam Seals, the Tampa cocktail waitress with whom Reynolds' said he has been having a 2-year affair.

Writing skills focus of learning programs

CHICAGO (AP) - Remember writing? It's what people used to do to learn before videos and computers took the sweat out of the process.

Schools are making an effort to show students that writing skill is the connective tissue of all learning - that it teaches them to think and analyze as well as to communicate.

Biology students at the College of DuPage in Glen Ellyn, Ill., must write as many as three papers during a course. Writing assignments are integrated into math and accounting classes at Robert Morris College in Chicago. And nursing students at Illinois' Elmhurst College must keep journals.

The emphasis on writing is called Writing Across the Curriculum (WAC) by academics. There's even a National Network for Writing Across the Curriculum, chaired by Christopher Thaiss, director of the composition program at George Mason University in Fairfax, Va.

Mary Johnston-Courtney, who teaches dance at Columbia College Chicago, makes writing assignments for her dance technique students. "Dancers are artists, not just technicians," she explains. "You must be challenged to think, to observe, to feel, to respond, to analyze, to have a point of view and articulate that point of view. Writing develops thinking skills that a technique class alone never could."

A colleague, Joan Beaudoin, asks her corporate television students to frame their video concepts in memos. "It's a non-threatening form of writing which forces them to capsulize what might still be a rather fuzzy idea. Because they must get my attention with their memos, they've got to use a creative approach so I'll be interested enough to reply," she says. "The next step is a business letter more formally proposing the video idea. Now they've got to use visual words that translate into mind pictures. As the course progresses, they continue to write treatments, formats and scripts."

Garnett Kilberg, director of Columbia Chicago's writing center and coordinator of its WAC program, helps faculty members design appropriate writing assignments for their classes.

"If students perceive a writing assignment as being nothing more than busy work, they will not get anything out of it," she says. "However, if the teacher is able to convey to students that writing assignments not only help them explore their creative processes but allow them to make connections and discoveries they might otherwise have missed, the students will pour their hearts and souls into them."

Ask Dr. Lamb

DEAR DR. LAMB: I share a problem with many males in my age group, the mid 20s. I have been dealing with this as long as I can remember and don't know what kind of doctor to see.

When I go to a public restroom, if there is someone else there, I either cannot urinate or I have to wait until he has left the room. If I have to have a physical or a drug screening, when there is someone standing there while you urinate in the sample cup, it's impossible for me to start or to continue. It's even so bad that on occasion when at a friend's house, and there is someone in the room next to the bathroom, I have problems.

I'm sure you can understand the aggravation and embarrassment associated with this problem. Whether you are in a restaurant, bar or taking a trip, you're always looking for a single stall restroom. Please Dr. Lamb, this is my first and last attempt to seek help. For my sake and others in my situation, give us some advice.

DEAR READER: It is sometimes called a "bashful bladder." It certainly has taken on additional aspects of embarrassment in these days of urine testing for drug screening. The problem belongs to the anxiety group of disorders and is a "social phobia." Management is the same as for other phobias. It is in the same category as the person who has anxiety before public speaking or any requirement to perform in public. Social phobias are often severe enough that people avoid meeting people or being in social situations.

When the situation warrants it, the proper physician to see is a psychiatrist. That does not mean you have some deep-seated major psychiatric problem. Phobias are rather common.

Depending on the severity of your problem he may wish to give you some medicine used in treating social phobias. These are often used just before a person is put into such a situation. That could be one of the beta-blockers such as Inderal. This may help you while you are confronting the situation and learning not to be so anxious when urinating in front of someone else.

For more information about such problems, read my new Special Report 142, Anxiety and Panic. I wanted to send you a free copy, but you did not include your address on your letter. Those who want this report can send $3 with a stamped (52 cents), self-addressed, No. 10 envelope for it to THE HEALTH LETTER/142, P.O. Box 5537, Riverton, NJ 08077-5537.

DEAR DR. LAMB: For the past three years my husband, 47 years old, has been suffering from depression, insomnia, night sweats, nervousness, slight memory loss and fatigue. He saw our family doctor when it first began, but was told there is no such thing as a male menopause. Now he feels it must just be in his mind and is suffering terribly. Could you tell me if the male menopause is real and if there is any help available for him? He feels his life is over.

DEAR READER: No, there is no such a thing as a male counterpart to the female menopause, which is caused by a rather rapid loss of female hormones. The male has no comparable sudden decrease in testosterone.

But many men do have what some call a "mid-life crisis." Your husband is ill. Your letter is strongly suggestive of a significant depression. These are related to changes in brain chemistry. He can be helped, but he must see a psychiatrist. Modern treatment is highly successful in managing such problems.

DEAR DR. LAMB: Your article on fat in fruit. Wrong! Wrong! Wrong! Apples are not 8.6 percent fat. Wrong!

DEAR READER: Don't get so excited. You may be right, depending on which type of apple you are talking about. For the regular commercial variety the Department of Agriculture data show 9.5 percent of their calories are from fat.

Your reaction demonstrates the problem some people have with nutrition and food values. Food values may be expressed by weight, by volume or by calorie content.

Using the U.S.D.A. data for a raw commercial apple. An apple contains 1.3 grams of fat. Multiply grams of fat by 9 to get the calories of fat and that is 11.7 calories. Such an apple contains 123 calories. Simple math will tell you that 11.7 calories is 9.5 percent of 123 calories.

Are apples a low-fat food? Yes. The point I made was that some fat is present in almost all common foods. Apples and many fruits are low in fat only because they are low-calorie foods. They are low in calories because of water content — 84.4 percent of the weight of the apple in this example is water — and because of fiber content. The fact that they are low-calorie foods is one reason why they are good for you. Smile.

Consider contraceptive options

Did you know that women in their forties have the same rate of unplanned pregnancy as teenagers - 8 out of every 10?

This surprising statistic can be explained in one word - perimenopause - the gradual biological process in which the ovaries reduce their production of the female sex hormones estrogen and progestin. For most women, periomenopause begins sometime between the ages of 35 and 50 and typically lasts about three to five years. During this transitional period, the levels of estrogen and progestin can fluctuate unpredictably and can result in irregular menstrual cycles and sporadic ovulation. So while periomenopausal women still get their periods, they can be so irregular that they may believe they can no longer get pregnant. They may also experience other symptoms such as vaginal dryness, breast tenderness, clotting, and heavy irregular bleeding.

Doctors advise all women who have menstruated, even if irregularly, within the past year to continue using birth control. "Women over 40 have a need for contraception, but clearly, there is less perception that they should be using it," said Arthur Haney, MD, professor and director of the division of reproductive endocrinology at Duke University medical Center. It's important for women to know that even though fertility decreases as a woman ages, she can still get pregnant until she reaches true menopause.

Many perimenopausal women are now getting contraceptive protection from low-dose oral contraceptives. Not only do low-dose pills help prevent pregnancy, they may provide non-contraceptive health benefits such as regulating the menstrual cycle, and decreasing the incidence of endometrial and ovarian cancer.

Because these low-dose pills have less than one half of the amount of estrogen contained in the first generation of oral contraceptives developed in the 1960s, with significantly fewer side effects, many doctors and their patients are reconsidering oral contraceptives as an effective way of preventing unwanted pregnancy with the additional non-contraceptive benefit of increased cycle regularity.

In fact, in 1990, the Food and Drug Administration changed the labeling for oral contraceptives to permit their use in healthy non-smoking women over 40 as well. While previously only younger women were encouraged to use oral contraceptives, the benefits of the pill may outweigh the possible risks in women over 40. Current oral contraceptives range in estrogen dose from 20-50 micrograms, but it is prudent for women to use the lowest dose that's effective.

As with any drug, women should discuss all of the possible benefits and risks of oral contraceptives with their physician because some women may not be good candidates for pill use. For instance, women who smoke or who are at high risk for cardiovascular disease should not take oral contraceptives.

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP) - Picking up a gun for what she said was the first time, Penny Marshall fired an M-16 rifle with the accuracy of a sharpshooter.

The director and former "Laverne and Shirley" star took a turn on the firing range at the Army's Fort Jackson last month while scouting the base as the site for her new movie, "Renaissance Man."

"We couldn't believe it," K. Douglas Cook, a base spokesman, said Monday. "And she swore she had never fired a weapon of any kind before."

What Does A Typical Brand Reader Look Like?

That's difficult to say because you are as different as your substantial number would imply! You are one of the 4,100 households we're invited to every evening. That's quite a few. According to the most recent census, our township has slightly less than 5000 households.

Your vocation is part of a broad spectrum as well -- white collar, blue collar, owners, managers, cowboys, teachers, housewives, students and professional.

Yet, with all your individual complexities, your interest in local issues and news gives you and other readers a common bond which is separated only by your level of curiosity.

You are an informed, intelligent and often vocal audience, and we're happy to be a part of your household every evening!
