Odessa Teen Court serves as model

By Linda Thorsen Bond

ODESSA — Every Tuesday at 5:15 p.m. in downtown Odessa, teen-agers make the rules. They are the judge and jury, the accused and the accuser. Odessa's Teen Court puts high school students in the position of judging their peers who have broken the law. The system, started in 1983 and developed in Odessa, has set an example for all of the United States, even for other countries.

It is a system of justice in which 16-year-old Kelee Fourkiller stands up in front of a jury of teen-agers. She must admit she is guilty of shoplifting cigarettes to give to a friend.

The Reporter-Telegram today visits Odessa as we take a close look at some of the people, places and events that play a major role in Midland's neighbor to the west.

Among features in today's special edition are:

The unique Globe Theatre, a replica of the famed original that dates to Shakespearean times (Page 10E) ... The sprawling Ector County Coliseum complex and the attractions it brings to this area (Page 9E) ... the famous Presidential Museum, the only one of its kind in the country (Page 8E).

We also visit a couple of tourist attractions — the Odessa meteor crater and the city's Texas-sized jackrabbit, a favorite site for traveling camera enthusiasts.

In addition, the Reporter-Telegram talked to Odessa and Ector County government leaders regarding how they view the coming year and Odessa's future in general while the two cities' mayors tell why Midland and Odessa really are "better together."

NEW YORK — IBM ended the speculation Friday by naming Louis V. Gerstner Jr. chairman and chief executive. Now, the man who steered the cigarettes-to-cookies RJR Nabisco empire faces daunting tasks: restoring the power, prestige and profitability of the world's biggest computer company. Gerstner is just the seventh chairman and the first outsider to lead IBM./11A

Traveling gypsies

Traveling gypsies have been reported in the Permian Basin area, possibly around Big Spring, and police are warning citizens to be cautious of scams. The gypsies are known to prey on older citizens with phony repair schemes including roof and asphalt repairs, seal coating and lightning rods. Residents are advised to check out any such people, ask for identification, take down license plate numbers and observe the individuals closely. These gypsies usually drive newer pickup trucks pulling trailers or equipment trailers, and sprayers, tractors and dump trucks. Anyone suspecting someone is asked to report it to Sgt. Mike Reed with Midland Police Department Intelligence Unit at 685-7152, or call the Department of Public Safety Intelligence Unit, 697-2211.

Negotiators reach plan on judges

■ Under proposed settlement, judges in Midland and Ector would be elected according to county commissioner district lines.

By John Powers
Reporter-Telegram Austin bureau

AUSTIN — Texas Attorney General Dan Morales announced a proposed settlement of a lawsuit Friday that would allow the election of judges in Midland and Ector counties within county commissioner district lines rather than countywide.

Voters in Midland County commission districts 1 and 2 would combine to elect one judge, while commission districts 3 and 4 would elect one each.

Elections would be phased-in, with two judges elected in 1998 and one in the year 2000. The judgeships are for the 142nd, 238th and 318th Judicial District Courts. Under the proposed plan, designated family courts such as the 318th would continue to handle the same types of cases they historically have.

The settlement plan does not clearly spell out which judgeships would be elected from the three local districts.

In Ector County, each of four county commission districts would elect judges representing the 70th, 161st, 244th and 358th courts, two in 1998 and two in 2000.

Candidates must be residents of the county, but not necessarily of the district electing the judge's position for which they are running. That means any candidate can run for any of the judgeships in the county.

Morales said he would ask the Legislature to approve a joint resolution favoring the settlement, which he then would submit to U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton of Midland for approval.

Bunton ruled in 1989 that the current system of electing judges countywide violates the federal Voting Rights Act in nine of the state's most populous counties because it discriminates against minority voters.

Blacks and Hispanic voters and the League of United Latin American Citizens filed the lawsuit.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals upheld Bunton's ruling, but removed Travis County from the judgment. The settlement, however, puts Travis County back in with Midland, Ector, Lubbock, Jefferson, Harris, Dallas, Bexar and Tarrant counties for district elections.

The settlement was worked out with plaintiffs and legislators and signed by top state officials.

Voters in Lubbock County also would

Bivins introduces energy bills

By John Paul Pitts
Business/Oil editor

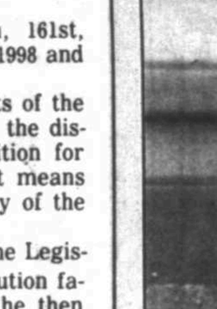

State Sen. Teel Bivins, R-Amarillo, has introduced a package of five bills designed to promote the energy industry in Texas.

At a press conference Friday at the Permian Basin Petroleum Museum, Bivins, whose district includes Midland County, listed the bills:

Senate Bill 733 would equalize the severance tax on all extractive minerals in Texas, putting on coal the same severance tax as natural gas and crude oil. It would also equalize the severance tax between crude oil and natural gas.

Presently natural gas producers pay a severance tax of 7.6 percent,

Bunton receives death threat

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

An incarcerated Midland man was charged Friday with threatening the lives of U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton and President Clinton.

Jimmy Noland Morris, 19, is the third local inmate in recent months that has sent a death threat in a letter to Bunton.

Bunton received the letter, written on a jail inmate grievance form, on Thursday, officials said.

Later that day, Morris admitted writing and sending the letter, according to the criminal complaint.

The letter states: "I know about you!! The voices have told me about you. They told me you raped

Yeltsin's opponents consider compromise to end power struggle

Associated Press

■ Related story, special report on Yeltsin/6A,9C

MOSCOW — Acknowledging that their efforts to oust President Boris Yeltsin have failed for now, hard-liners in Congress shelved their impeachment bid Friday and considered a compromise proposal to end Russia's power struggle.

Yeltsin, surviving the gravest threat to his presidency without a vote being taken, told the Congress of People's Deputies he could support parts of a new plan to hold early elections and create a new legislature.

The proposal was made by one of his critics, chief justice Valery Zorkin of Russia's Constitutional Court, as part of a 10-point compromise plan.

But Yeltsin also vowed to press ahead with an April 25 vote of confidence on whether the president or Congress has supreme authority.

Hard-line lawmakers have opposed the referendum, and Yeltsin's victory Friday was likely to turn into a new battle today over the referendum and the proposed new elections.

The emergency session of the Congress, Russia's highest parliamentary body, climaxed a week of intense maneuvering by Yeltsin, Zorkin and parliament speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov to gain the upper hand in the political

Local/Area Reports

■ Rape

Police arrested two men and a 13-year-old boy Friday for the rape of a 13-year-old girl earlier that day, officials reported.

The girl was reportedly sexually assaulted by the assailants, who were armed with a handgun, about noon in an alley in the 800 block of Dallas Street, officials said.

The three were arrested later that day on warrants.

The 13-year-old suspect, whose name was withheld because of his age, was taken to Culver Youth Home.

The two men, 20-year-old Rufino Munoz, 1000 S. Marshall St., and 21-year-old Juan Esquivel, were charged with aggravated sexual assault, booked into Midland County jail and bond set at $50,000 each, officials said.

■ False report

ODESSA — A woman has been charged with making a false report on March 18 for alleging she was kidnapped and sexually assaulted, police said.

Shawna Lynn Williams, 25, reported to police that she was abducted while in the parking lot of the Cheers nightclub at 815 N. Grandview Ave.

She claimed she was forced into a vehicle by a man and taken to an area near Reed and Highway 80, a knife held to her throat and sexually assaulted.

After being freed, the woman was treated and released from Medical Center Hospital.

The next day, a composite drawing and information about the alleged crime was released to the media and subsequently reported to the public.

Investigators later learned, from witnesses and other means, that the crimes did not occur. On Friday a warrant was issued by Justice of the Peace Manuel Valles for Ms. Williams, who was then arrested.

Making a false report to a police officer is a Class B misdemeanor.

■ Fight

A Midland man sustained a stab wound to the arm and another man was arrested following an apparent fight outside at the Zodiac Club in southeast Midland about 11:30 p.m. Thursday, police reported.

Freddie Hawkins, 38, 1212 E. Wadley Ave., was arrested at the scene and charged with aggravated assault. Hawkins was booked into jail where he remained Friday in lieu of a $5,000 bond.

The victim, James Polk Jr., 23, 305 W. Estes St., was transported to Memorial Hospital and Medical Center where he was treated and released for a cut left arm.

■ Summary judgment

A summary judgment was granted to the city of Midland for a federal lawsuit filed by a former police officer for employment discrimination due to a disability.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled earlier this week in favor of the city because the plaintiff's alleged discrimination occurred before the Americans with Disabilities Act Claim went into effect.

Milton O'Bryant reportedly injured his lower back during a physical strength test in October 1989 and was subsequently relieved as a commissioned officer in July 1990 and appointed to a civilian position in July 1990.

The ADA went into effect on Jan. 26, 1992.

A trial had been scheduled for earlier this week.

■ Emergency landing

A man piloting a small airplane had to make an emergency landing about 9:45 a.m. Friday near Wireline Road off Loop 338 in Odessa, according to the Department of Public Safety.

The pilot, James Eaton, sustained minor injuries when he was forced to land his 1963 Cessna, officials said.

The landing was reported to the FAA in San Angelo.

Compiled from staff reports.

PLAN: Negotiators reach settlement

make selctions based on county commission districts, while Tarrant and Travis elections would be from Justice of the Peace precincts, and voters in Jefferson, Harris, Dallas and Bexar counties would make selections in House of Representative districts.

Morales said the proposal would give Hispanics and blacks a better chance of winning elections.

Hispanics comprise more than 25 percent of Texas' population but less than 10 percent of 386 state district judgeships. Blacks make up 11.6 percent of the state's citizens and less than 3 percent of judgeships.

Republicans, however, attacked the plan, with state Republican Party Chairman Fred Meyer calling it "Democratic chicanery."

Texas Supreme Court Justice Thomas R. Phillips, a Republican, said it would do nothing to decrease the influence of partisan politics and the role of big campaign conributions in electing judges.

But Sen. Rodney Ellis, D-Houston, said smaller districts would reduce the role of big money and special interests.

The agreement also calls for ethics reform, saying lawmakers should consider limiting individual and political action committee campaign contributions, restricting campaign spending and strengthening disclosure requirements.

Services for Nancy Vann Rea, 57, are set for 11 a.m. Tuesday at the Episcopal Church of the Holy Trinity with the Rev. Marshall Mason officiating. Burial will follow in Resthaven Cemetery under the direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Mrs. Rea died Thursday at her Midland home.

Paul Sweatt

BIG SPRING — Services for Paul Sweatt, 84, of Big Spring will be at 3 p.m. today at Nalley-Pickle & Welch Rosewood Chapel with the Rev. Shell Denison of Wesley United Methodist Church officiating. Burial will follow in Trinity Memorial Park under the direction of Nalley-Pickle & Welch Funeral Home.

Sweatt died Thursday at a Big Spring hospital.

He was born July 27, 1908 in Westbrook.

Sweatt married Ruth Byrd on Dec. 18, 1936 in Colorado City.

He graduated from West Texas University in Canyon with a bachelor of science degree and received his master's degree from Sam Houston State University in Huntsville. He taught school for 38 years before retiring.

Sweatt taught Sunday school for many years at Wesley United Methodist. He was a member and past master of the Big Spring Lodge No. 1340, A.F. & A.M., a member and past worthy patron of Laura B. Hart chapter No. 1019 Order of the Eastern Star and a member of Phi Delta Kappa.

A U.S. Army veteran of World War II, he served as a volunteer at the V.A. Medical Center for several years. He worked with the Boy Scouts and served as a scout master.

He was preceded in death by infant twin children, LaRue and LaRoy Sweatt; four brothers, George Sweatt, Roy Sweatt, Elbert Sweatt and Emory Sweatt; and two sisters, Fannie Jones and Willie Sneed.

Survivors include: his wife, Ruth Sweatt of Big Spring; two sons, Ronald Sweatt of Midland, and Marcus Sweatt of Waco; two sisters, Tennie Hays of Coahoma, and Bernice Wilson of Colorado City; two grandchildren; and numerous nieces and nephews and cousins.

Pallbearers are to be Roy Wilson, Lloyd Claxton, Clarence Hays, Roger Sweatt, Tony Claxton and Marion Hays.

Navy plane crashes; crew missing

LONDON (AP) — An observation aircraft assigned to monitor relief drops in Bosnia crashed off the coast of Italy and five crew members were missing, the U.S. Navy said Friday.

The E-2C Hawkeye radar plane, based on the carrier USS Theodore Roosevelt, had not encountered hostile fire in the flight over the Ionian Sea late Thursday, according to a statement released by U.S. Naval Forces, Europe.

The plane went down in international waters about 65 miles east of Crotone, Italy, a Navy spokesman said in Norfolk, Va., the Rossevelt's homeport.

The crash was reported at 6:54 p.m. EST Thursday about a mile from the carrier, the Navy said. It said the carrier was operating south of the Straits of Otranto as part of Sixth Fleet operations.

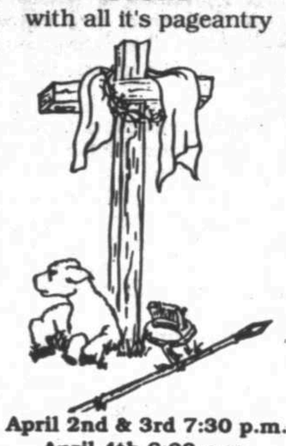

None of the five crew members was found during a day-long search Friday, although some wreckage and debris was sighted, said Cmdr. Charles Connor, spokesman for U.S. Naval headquarters in London. The search is expected to resume today.

Names of the crew members were not released pending notification of next of kin.

The twin-engine, turbo-prop Hawkeye is an early-warning command and control plane.

Today's high to hit mid-70s

Staff report

Today's forecast calls for mostly cloudy skies with decreasing cloudiness in the afternoon, a high in the mid-70s, south winds 10 to 20 mph becoming west winds and gusty by afternoon, and a 30 percent chance of thunderstorms mainly during the morning, according to the National Weather Service in Midland.

Tonight will be fair with a low in the mid-40s.

Sunday is expected to be fair with a high in the mid-70s.

After an overnight low of 49, Friday's high was 83 compared with the record high for that date of 90 set in 1956. The record low for today's date was 14 set in 1931.

STATE

Clouds were on the increase across Texas Friday and will likely produce widely scattered thunderstorms and showers throughout the state today.

Showers and thunderstorms increased over West Texas, primarily over the Trans Pecos and western areas of the Permian Basin. Skies elsewhere across the region were mostly sunny amid temperatures in the 80s.

More cloudy skies are expected today with a chance of showers and thunderstorms, some possibly severe in the Permian Basin. Low temperatures are expected in the 40s and 50s with highs mainly in the 70s.

A stationary front stretching from the Gulf of Mexico westward to near Laredo kept South Texas skies sunny except for clouds along the middle coast.

Increasing cloudiness and a chance of showers or thunderstorms should accompany a warm front that is expected to spread northward through the region today. Lows should range from around 50 across the north to the mid 60s along the lower coast, with highs continuing in the 70s and 80s.

An approaching upper level storm system over the West Coast pushed clouds into the western portions of North Texas. Skies elsewhere in the region were clear as dry conditions and abundant sunshine pushed temperatures into the lower 70s.

Increasing cloudiness should produce widely scattered thunderstorms by this afternoon, especially in the western part of the region. Low temperatures will dip into the mid-40s and the high mercury mark should be in the 70s.

NATION

Rain fell across much of the West on Friday as a coastal low pressure system moved inland. The Southeast also got rain, caused by a storm system that formed over the Ohio and Tennessee valleys.

Unseasonably warm weather swept across the upper Midwest, with the high of 80 in Valentine Neb., breaking the 1989 record for the date by a degree. The high of 79 in Rapid City, S.D., tied the 1960 record for the date.

The warm weather also extended across much of the Northeast, with the high of 62 in Caribou, Maine, tying the 1986 record for the date.

A storm was developing in the Rockies, and a winter storm watch was posted through today for the southern and central mountains of Colorado, as well as central Montana.

The Associated Press contributed to this report.

COURT: Teens judge peers

(From 1A)

Her attorney, another teen-ager, pleads for leniency. The high school-age prosecutor charges the jury to make the punishment fit the crime. The teen foreman of the jury reads Miss Fourkiller's sentence.

"We, the members of the jury, recommend 18 hours of community service, two times on jury duty."

The teen-ager drops her head, her long hair hiding her face. But the relief she feels is evident as her hands, crunched in tight fists by her sides, relax.

Teen Court is an alternative to the traditional justice system. It is designed and administered specifically for the young. When a teen-ager commits a crime in Odessa or Midland, he or she can choose to go to Teen Court and the crime won't go on a permanent record.

That choice is only open if the crime is a Class B or C misdemeanor, and if he or she hasn't been before the Teen Court in two years. A Class C misdemeanor would be one which is a "fine only" offense with no jail time required. Examples might be traffic violations, school violations, theft under $20, disorderly conduct, or minor in possession. Class B misdemeanors are charges that can carry fines up to $1,500 and possible jail time of up to six months, such as theft over $20 and under $200, some assaults, or writing hot checks.

In Odessa, a student accused of such a crime first goes to the Teen Court office at 201 N. Grant. In Midland, the Teen Court office is in the County Courthouse at Wall and Colorado.

The students and parents must make a decision to take their case to Teen Court instead of regular municipal court and sign a paper that says they're making that choice. Then they're assigned a time to appear.

In Odessa's court, Tuesday nights are hectic, exhilarating, and taxing for the young people involved in them. Everyone except the Teen Court administrators and the judges are teen-agers. Both the defending and prosecuting lawyers are students who have been through the system and are paying back their time by working as volunteers. The juries, too, have taken those same quaking steps up to the bench as the defendants.

Observers, teens who have been sentenced to serve on a jury, watch to see what to do when it's their turn.

Teen-agers crowd into the third floor of the courthouse, twitching and jittering as they wait to be assigned a court. They eye their young lawyers critically, hoping they can be persuasive.

When their case is called, they have their first taste of the power of the judicial system. Their young lives, with all the freedom of adolescence, hang in the balance as they go before the judge. The stony-eyed jury of teen-agers hears their plea, listens to the evidence and decides. They stand before their peers and are sentenced.

What's the worst that can happen? They can be assigned hours and hours of community service. What's the best? A few hours of community service. It's not a question of whether they are guilty or not, just how guilty.

Miss Fourkiller, a student at Odessa High School, says she was more scared than she thought she'd be. Shoplifting was her first offense.

"At first I was calm, then I got up on the witness stand. I was so nervous! I looked at the jury a few times, and they looked like they believed me. But they have to sentence you to something. I don't think my sentence was too bad. Another girl got 25 hours of community service, a lot worse than me. I think I'm going to work at the food bank. I can get a lot of hours there. This isn't so bad. It's a lot better than having it go on your record."

After she is sentenced, Miss Fourkiller is sent to a different room by Jason Carter, an 18-year-old student at Permian High who is in charge of all the defense attorneys. He first got started in Teen Court after a traffic accident.

"Telephone poles have no mercy," he jokes of the accident that got him involved.

"I've been working with Teen Court for 2½ years," he said. "When I finished doing my required jury duty I just kept coming back — and coming back — until I worked my way up to head defense attorney. I'm not planning to be a lawyer. Medicine's my calling, but I think this helps a lot with responsibility and it gives me a chance to help other people."

There are two side effects of Teen Court sentencing. First, young people learn that their peers don't laugh off their crimes or find them clever or attractive. Second, the community benefits from the work teens do with non-profit organizations to pay off their debt to society. The young people can choose the organization for which they will work from a long list of approved groups.

They must sign in and out and their work must be approved by an official from that organization. Some teens are required to take Teen Court's Chemical Abuse Preventative Workshop with their parents or a defensive driving workshop.

Is Teen Court a panacea for crime? No, but it is a deterrent.

The rate of recidivism is low, and the rate of involvement is high, according to Dee Dee Davis, Teen Court assistant. The teens try 15 to 20 cases every week. Forty-five Ector County agencies welcome the students into their work forces, many hoping that they'll find permanent volunteers among the punished.

Odessa's Teen Court, after which Midland's was modeled, was administered from its inception by Natalie Rothstein, whose death in 1992 was mourned by the thousands of people she touched in her nine years at the helm of the experimental court system. A full-time Odessa coordinator should be named soon, according to Ms. Davis.

There are now more than 200 courts in the United States that have followed Odessa's lead.

At the March 23 session at Ector County Courthouse, there was a news crew from Tokyo, Japan, and a delegation from Colorado City in attendance.

Kaori Sasaki, president of UNICUL International in Tokyo, plans to tell the story of Teen Court on Japanese television.

"We have no jury system in Japan," she said. "People are aware of juries, because of things such as the Rodney King trial, but they don't know how they work. First, this is an unknown for us. Then you have the extra interest of teen-agers judging each other. We support what's going on, but it doesn't hurt to ask a few questions. Are they just using it to prove how strong they are or is it fun to judge others? It has its good points and its bad. In our country, legal things go from the top to down. We don't discuss cases on a peer level. We're interested in what it takes for these teen-agers to be responsible and independent."

Jay McCollum, executive vice president of the Colorado City Chamber of Commerce, attended with a group of 10, including the police chief, a member of the sheriff's department, some teachers and a principal.

McCollum said, "We heard Odessa's Teen Court was very good. We wanted to look it over. Now that we've seen it, we all want to go back home and see what we can do."

To the teens who go through the Teen Court system, it is a way to avoid a blot on a permanent record, an appealing way to appease parents and usage guilt. To adults all over the world, it is an example of a good idea, well-executed. And a chance to believe that the world's going to be OK in the hands of the next generation.

POWER: Hard-liners admit ouster fails

battle.

Thousands of demonstrators backing the opposing sides massed outside the Kremlin, chanting and screaming insults across a cordon of barricades as Congress discussed the fate of Yeltsin and Russia's democratic reforms.

President Clinton, meanwhile, reiterated strong backing for Yeltsin after meeting with German Chancellor Helmut Kohl in Washington, saying the Western leaders "are committed to doing everything we possibly can to keep democracy alive in Russia."

The Congress had convened with one goal: removing Yeltsin from office. But hard-liners quickly acknowledged on Friday's opening day that their drive had lost momentum and they did not have the two-thirds vote to oust the president.

"I wouldn't even raise impeachment because it would be a mere declaration. It doesn't have any chance to succeed," hard-line leader Ilya Konstantinov said.

Several deputies said Yeltsin should resign or be ousted, but impeachment — which in Russia means immediate removal from office — did not come to a formal vote. It could come up when Congress reconvenes today, although the real threat of ouster seemed to have passed.

Yeltsin made a conciliatory gesture to hard-liners, sacrificing his economics minister in a Cabinet shuffle. But he also promoted a radical reformer to finance minister.

The Congress, which has supreme authority under the Constitution, has been stripping away Yeltsin's powers for months.

Yeltsin has pursued a course of painful reforms to speed Russia's transition to a market economy. He accuses hard-line lawmakers of trying to return to a totalitarian regime, and of undermining reforms by blocking full privatization and efforts to dismantle state economic control.

Khasbulatov and other hard-liners say they support reform but at a slower pace. They blame the president for massive unemployment and inflation that reached nearly 2,000 percent last year.

In a nationwide television address last Saturday, Yeltsin threatened to imposed "special rule" to break the political stalemate blocking reform.

Khasbulatov persuaded the smaller Supreme Soviet legislature this week to call the emergency session of Congress to try to remove the president.

The speaker opened the Congress by accusing the president of trying to "trample the constitution," but he did not call for Yeltsin's impeachment. On Thursday, Khasbulatov said he was against such a move.

Many deputies openly scorned Yeltsin, laughing derisively during his speech when he said Russia relied too much on foreign aid and blamed the Central Bank for fueling inflation.

Vice President Alexander Rutskoi, who would become president if Yeltsin were ousted, threw his support behind a referendum Friday but demanded the president make major policy and personnel changes.

Near the Grand Kremlin Palace where Congress met, at least 5,000 Yeltsin critics and supporters staged rallies.

"I want Yeltsin, the traitor of the motherland who sold his country to the West for hard currency, the drunkard, to get the death sentence for hurting Russia, which has suffered so much," yelled engineer Ivan Alexeyev.

Zorkin, who has vacillated between acting as mediator and critic, proposed simultaneous legislative and presidential elections in autumn, and suggested replacing the Congress with a bicameral legislature.

Parliamentary elections now are scheduled for 1995 and presidential elections for 1996.

Many deputies of Congress, elected in 1990 when the Communist Party dominated the Soviet Union, oppose a bicameral legislature — similar to the U.S. House and Senate.

Yeltsin backs creation of a new legislature and earlier elections, although he has said simultaneous balloting would create a power vacuum.

In his speech to Congress, Yeltsin made clear he intended to go ahead with his referendum.

Yeltsin told lawmakers the economy remains the top problem and admitted making mistakes.

He said those included "insufficient social orientation of the reforms, inadequate support by the state of new forms of management and of the new strata of owners in the production sphere, absence of an efficient, anti-inflation policy and excessive reliance on foreign aid."

He replaced Finance Minister Vasily Barchuk with reformist deputy prime minister, Boris Fyodorov, who has been shaping economic policy since acting prime minister Yegor Gaidar was forced out in December.

Mayor is in jail on drug charges

STIGLER, Okla. (AP) — The mayor of Keota was being held late Friday in the county jail on charges he bought three pounds of methamphetamine, authorities said.

Lonzo Lawson, mayor of the southeastern Oklahoma town of 660, is wanted on drug charges out of McKinney, Texas, said Mike Evans, an investigator with the Pittsburg County district attorney's office.

Lawson and his brother, Daryl Lee "Sid" Lawson, allegedly bought three pounds of methamphetamine Monday in a sting by undercover officers of the Collin County Sheriff's Department, Evans said.

"This has been a long, drawn-out investigation," said Evans, who also is director of a drug task force in Pittsburg and Haskell counties.

Lonzo Lawson was arrested Wednesday by Haskell County sheriff's deputies and held pending extradition, Evans said.

Evans said the Lawson brothers allegedly bought three pounds of methamphetamine, which sells for about $2,800 per ounce. Many dealers add other substances, such as vitamins, to double its weight, so "you're looking at $250,000 worth of drugs," Evans said.

Keota is just southwest of Sallisaw and about 100 miles north of the Texas border.

BIVINS: Bills to promote industry

crude oil is taxed at 4.6 percent and lignite coal producers pay nothing. Bivins said the bill would apply to gas wells completed this year so as not to impact state revenues. He estimates a severance tax on coal could raise approximately $40 million.

Senate Bill 735, designed to encourage wildcatting, would exempt from taxation all new oil and gas discovery wells drilled in the state. The well would have to be designated at a new field discovery and the tax would apply only to the discovery well and not additional development wells drilled in the fields.

Bivins said the incentive, while not great, would hopefully encourage new exploration in Texas.

Senate Bill 734 addresses a longtime problem in the oil industry in that it creates specific guidelines for appraising oil and gas properties for tax purposes.

"For too long this process has been very subjective as appraisers attempted to guess the future price of oil," Bivins said. "This would provide a standard for establishing the price of crude oil and natural gas for evaluation purposes."

Bivins said SB 734 would establish the price of crude oil as the price paid for oil on the lease in the past 12 months.

While this does not cover all aspects of evaluation such as operating costs and reserve estimates, Bivins said it should still help bring a degree of predictability to the evaluation process. He noted that wells often are taxed by three or more taxing districts and that the evaluations can vary greatly from district to district, depending on the subjective pricing of crude oil.

Bivins said one operator had an evaluation of $20,000 from one taxing jurisdiction and $110,000 from another taxing authority on the same well.

Senate Bill 737 is a bill that would find a useful purpose for the oil overcharge monies collected by the state. The bill proposes to provide $5 million in funds for the purpose of converting vehicles to natural gas and other gas conservation projects. The money would be loanded to public and private entities. "The legitimate use of oil overcharge funds would help the development of major new markets for Texas natural gas," Bivins said.

Senaate Bill 736 would continue the oil-hedging pilot project created last session by Bivins and would expand the program to include natural gas. Bivins said that since the pilot project began that the state had hedged over 1.2 million barrels of oil at a cost of $68,000. He said if the state had hedged the same number of barrels in 1985, it would have saved taxpayers more than $16.8 million.

BUNTON: Local inmate admits he wrote letter

my mother & killed my sisters. The voices tell me you killed my Daddy when I was 10. The voices tell me that the only way to get vengence is through you."

The threat details murder, mutilation and cannibalism.

"Im going to do this cause the voices make my head hurt and only that will make it stop," the letter continued. ". . . If I dont get you my friends will."

The letter ends with: "I am going to kill you & then go and kill Pres. Clinton. death to rapist murdering dogs."

Morris, who is scheduled to appear before a U.S. Magistrate on Monday, faces up to three years imprisonment for the threat, a federal prosecutor said.

The man has been in the Midland County jail since July for revocation of probation for which he was sentenced to six years. Morris was placed on probation in September 1991, for unauthorized use of a motor vehicle.

A charge of aggravated assault also is pending against Morris.

Morris is the third inmate charged with threatening Bunton in recent months.

The other two, Jimmy Mac Haggard, 20, and Gearld Benjamin Kelly, 21, have both plead guilty to making threats and are awaiting sentencing.

Last month, Kelly plea bargained a life in prison sentence for the capital murder of a local church secretary.

Haggard also remains jailed for violation of parole that stemmed from aggravated possession of LSD.

Clinton, Kohl pledge support for Russia's democracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Clinton and German Chancellor Helmut Kohl pledged vigorous Western support Friday for Russia's struggling democracy movement, calling it vital to the "great crusade" for freedom around the globe.

"These are critical days, for the actions we take together now will help to determine the fate of democracy, the prosperity of our people and the peace of the world," Clinton said after an Oval Office meeting with Kohl.

The president said he was still working on details of the U.S. aid package he will present to Russian President Boris Yeltsin next week in Vancouver, but that he and Kohl were "in general agreement on the . . . approach."

Added Kohl: "Both of us are aware of the fact that any type of setback will in the end turn out to be much more expensive than any type of assistance we have the intention of granting right now."

The two world leaders also met briefly with Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic, who a day earlier signed a U.N. peace plan for wartorn Bosnia-Herzegovina. The plan previously was endorsed by the Croats.

At a question-and-answer session with Kohl, Clinton said the United States would make "a full-court press" to push Serbia to sign the plan and left open the possibility of relaxing an embargo on weapons for the Bosnian muslims.

"They will be in the wrong if they do not sign this agreement," Clinton said, adding that he would give the Serbs a few days to sign on before deciding whether to "up the ante."

Behind the scenes, Clinton continued working to build congressional support for his Russian aid package. After bringing House members to the White House on Thursday to discuss the plan, Clinton was holding a similar dinner session with senators Friday night.

His aid package is expected to stress cooperation in energy exploration and development and easing Moscow's debt burden. Officials say the plan could include housing subsidies for demobilized Russian troops, eased restrictions for international bank loans and attempts to stabilize the ruble.

Germany has been the largest single donor of assistance to Russia, with much of that aid coming in the form of help resettling Russian troops after the unification with East Germany.

Taking note of Germany's close proximity to Russia, Kohl said that "the threat, if there was a relapse to form a dictator structure, would affect us first and foremost."

Clinton said he was heartened by the latest developments in Russia, where efforts to impeach Yeltsin faltered Friday. But he cautioned, "It's difficult to know what's going to happen from day to day now."

He affirmed his intention to find ways the United States and other Western nations can offer short- and long-term help in "promoting democracy and market economics and in improving a difficult economic situation."

"A paramount challenge for the West in our generation is helping to ensure the survival of democracy and economic reform in Russia and the other republics of the former Soviet Union," Clinton said.

He said that together with Germany, "we must be leaders in the great crusade . . . to foster liberty, democracy, human rights and free-market economics throughout the world."

Kohl praised Clinton's resolve in supporting Yeltsin and said the Western allies "have to see to it that the spirit of reform, the willingness to establish democratic structures and a pluralist society, market economic structures in Russia and the CIS (Commonwealth of Independent States) is continuing."

On another topic, the two leaders expressed hope that negotiators would make significant progress soon in the effort to rewrite the rules governing world trade. Clinton said he saw promising signs that the discussions could be completed this year.

"Europe, the United States and Japan, all in different ways, have a big stake in getting an . . . agreement that will set a framework that will permit us to promote global growth," he said.

2 more women allege they had sex with archbishop

ALBUQUERQUE, N.M. (AP) — Two more women allege they had sexual relationships with Archbishop Robert F. Sanchez, and the chancellor of the Archdiocese of Santa Fe said Friday he is inclined to believe them.

In all, seven women now have alleged they had sex with Sanchez, who last week asked Pope John Paul II to accept his resignation as leader of the archdiocese. The pope hasn't acted on the request.

Earlier this month, Sanchez issued a statement asking forgiveness for any pain caused by the allegations, but he has neither confirmed nor denied them. He is undergoing treatment at an undisclosed location outside New Mexico, said the Rev. Ron Wolf, chancellor of the archdiocese.

Wolf said one of the women making the newest allegations spoke with him by telephone, and the other visited him.

"I was very much inclined to believe them," Wolf said. But he emphasized that "these are still allegations, and I have to check them out."

One alleged incident occurred before Sanchez became archbishop in 1974, Wolf said. He didn't know if the other allegation preceded Sanchez's appointment.

Wolf said the women didn't want to be identified publicly. He said they contacted him after initial allegations about Sanchez surfaced earlier this month.

On March 8, the archdiocese notified the Vatican that up to five women had claimed to have had sexual relationships with Sanchez.

Sanchez submitted his resignation to the Vatican on March 19. Two days later, the CBS-TV program "60 Minutes" broadcast an interview with three women who claimed to have had a sexual relationship with him.

The chancellor said he spoke with Sanchez on Friday but didn't ask about the newest allegations.

He said Sanchez was not trying to run away from the controversy and has indicated he'll return to the archdiocese at some point, "even if it's just to say goodbye."

"He is going through trying to face the allegations presented against him," Wolf said. He said he asked Sanchez when he might return and was told: "Ron, I still need a little more time."

"I think that's what his therapist is telling him right now," Wolf said. "I think if he could, he'd be back here."

Venezuela oil firm halts operations

CARACAS, Venezuela (AP) — The state oil company has halted some of its operations after a fire and explosion killed at least 10 people at a natural gas processing plant in western Venezuela, officials said Friday.

The death toll could hit 20, the state news agency Venpres reported.

General Dynamics orders investigation of failed rocket launch

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) — General Dynamics Corp., already shrunken as a result of reduced defense spending, struggled Friday to overcome the latest setback in one of its three surviving businesses: space.

A malfunction by a General Dynamics rocket Thursday left a Navy satellite orbiting 5,000 miles too low. It was the company's third failure in eight launches.

Officials for General Dynamics Space Systems Division offered no excuses and promised to solve the problem and get on with launching Atlas rockets. They said the same thing the last time one of their rockets failed, in August, and the previous time, in April 1991.

The way analysts see it, time's running out.

"There's a lot of technical risk" in launching rockets, said Kent Newcomb, a defense industry analyst for A.G. Edwards in St. Louis. "On the other hand, they're supposed to work right. You only get one shot at it."

Michael Wynne, president of General Dynamics' San Diego-based Space Systems Division, said that Thursday's failure was a setback, but the company would move forward.

"It's a disappointment, but we have contractual launches out through 1997, which we intend to meet," Wynne said.

Atlas flights, however, are on hold until the company can determine why the first-stage booster did not provide enough thrust on Thursday. The next launch is scheduled for May.

The company's last investigation into a failed launch lasted seven months. Both the 1991 and 1992 failures were traced to stuck engine valves, which worked this time.

In those launches, the rockets had to be blown up over the Atlantic along with their payloads, multimillion-dollar communications satellites.

This time, the satellite at least reached space.

On-board thrusters may be able to boost the satellite to make the spacecraft some use to the Navy, said Ron Swanson, general manager of satellite maker Hughes Space and Communications Co.

But there isn't enough fuel to put the satellite where it was supposed to be, preventing its full use, he said.

Swanson said the satellite is in a safe orbit now and there is time to consider all the options.

"There is no reason to hurry the operations, to rush it," he said.

The Navy will be reimbursed, Swanson said. The entire mission — rocket, satellite and insurance — cost $138 million.

The Navy relies on nine satellites for ship-to-shore communications, but the spacecraft need to be replaced, said Capt. Edward Enterline, director of Navy Space Systems Division.

Researchers make progress with anti-cocaine drug

WASHINGTON (AP) — Researchers reported on Friday they have found a way to split cocaine molecules into inactive fragments in an effort to break the addictive grip of the drug.

"Passive immunization from such an artificial enzyme could provide a treatment for (cocaine) dependence by blunting reinforcement," the Columbia University researchers reported in the current issue of the journal Science.

Reporting on laboratory studies using mice, the research team said the key to their discovery is an artificial enzyme that they developed.

Dr. Frank Vocci, deputy director of medicine development at the National Institute on Drug Abuse, described the development as a preliminary first step and not a breakthrough.

"But this is something that no one has been able to do yet," Vocci said. "It converts cocaine to an inactive substance."

"This is not the last you'll hear about this," he said. "But this is one of those things between cup and lip and a lot of things slip. We have to temper our enthusiasm about these things."

In the article, Dr. Donald W. Landry, reported that he and four associates had developed a treatment using antibodies with the catalyzing properties of enzymes.

They said the artificial enzyme lessened the reinforcing effect of cocaine "by reducing the rate of rise and peak concentration of cocaine."

"By promoting cessation of use and maintenance of abstinence, ... immunization with an anti-cocaine catalytic antibody could provide a window for appropriate ... interventions" to prevent relapse, the article said.

The article explained that the artificial antibodies "break up cocaine molecules into fragments that lack the drug's stimulant or reinforcing activities."

The authors said the next step will be to test appropriate doses of the substance, first in animals and then in humans.

Vocci noted that catalytic antibodies were first discovered in 1986.

"They are a creation of the science labs," he said. "They do not exist in nature. And they act like enzymes."

He said that it may take considerable time before the substance is put to use in curbing drug addiction.

"It has to be refined, enhanced and worked up so that human antibodies can be developed," he said.

"That's a tall order and we're really at the very start of a long process," he added. "I don't want people to feel that a cure for cocaine dependence is around the corner."

"So you're not talking about clinical trials in six months," Vocci said. "...I would think that if you really had something to go to market in five years you'd be on an accelerated fast track and that even 10 years would be pretty fast."

Vietnam strides toward economic growth

HANOI, Vietnam (AP) — With rapid growth, falling inflation, blooming rice exports and billions in fresh foreign investment, Vietnam, regarded a few years ago as a basket case, seems on its way to becoming another Asian economic miracle.

There are obstacles — a Stalinist bureaucracy, corruption, a war-shattered infrastructure and the possibility, lurking in every investor's mind, of a reversal on Vietnam's reformist path.

But so far, Vietnam's flexible Communist rulers, the country's natural resources and hungry-for-profit population are winning the day.

"All the elements of an economic miracle are there," says Robert Kay, a Hong Kong-based consultant working with the Vietnamese government, who like many other outsiders regards the country as Asia's last economic frontier.

Hanoi is alive with pavement hawkers, hotel builders and foreign entrepreneurs. The harbor of Ho Chi Minh City — formerly Saigon, the South Vietnam capital — is choked with incoming vessels. Even in the countryside, new homes are going up, and money is being made.

'All the elements of an economic miracle are there.'

— Robert Kay
Hong Kong-based consultant

Washington is expected soon to lift the trade embargo it imposed after the Communists triumphed in 1975. That will allow Americans to do business in Vietnam, open the vast U.S. market to Vietnamese exports, and bring in World Bank and International Monetary Fund loans.

Even with the American embargo, 547 foreign investment projects worth $7 billion were under way last year, according to the State Committee for Cooperation and Investment. These ranged from mushroom plantations to mines to hotel construction.

Vu Huy Hoang, a senior investment official, said $3 billion in fresh investment was expected in 1993, with the opening up of a large offshore oilfield.

"These achievements are taking place against the background of the loss of Soviet aid and its Eastern European markets. That's quite tremendous progress," said Vincent Chan, Hong Kong-based senior economist for Peregrine Peregrine Brokerage Limited.

The successes have been possible, he said, because Vietnam has begun to put its house in order. Fiscal reforms have slashed inflation from 300-400 percent a few years ago to last year's estimated 15-17 percent. The state no longer prints money to cover deficits, instead issuing bonds.

Subsidies to state enterprises have been cut back and thousands of inefficient ones may be forced to close, a painful step when unemployment remains high.

Oil, rice, rubber and seafood accounted for 70 percent of Vietnam's exports last year. To date, only Taiwan has been willing to start manufacturing on a large scale, although Japan is expected to follow once the U.S. embargo is lifted, taking advantage of the cheap labor costs.

Vietnam may be unequipped for massive manufacturing probjects because of the lack of trained workers and its meager infrastructure.

The vice president of the Central Institute for Economic Management sounded a note of caution.

"Progress in the past four years has been greater than in the past 40, but it's still moderate by regional standards," said the official, Le Dang Doanh.

Serbs declare cease-fire, U.N. commander says

BELGRADE, Yugoslavia (AP) — U.N. and Bosnian Serb generals on Friday declared a cease-fire in Bosnia beginning Sunday, but Serbs still refused to accept a peace plan to end a year of ethnic war.

The U.S. Navy, meanwhile, said an American observation plane assigned to monitor U.S. relief drops in Bosnia crashed in the Ionian Sea, and all five crew members were missing. There was no hostile fire before the plane went down Thursday night, the Navy said.

U.N. Gen. Lars Eric Wahlgren of Sweden announced the cease-fire, set for noon Sunday, after more than five hours of meetings with the Bosnian Serb commander, Gen. Ratko Mladic.

Mladic told reporters: "The truce will go into force if the two other warring sides accept it. The Serbian side will strictly respect it."

Dozens of previous cease-fires have collapsed, partly because military commanders have trouble controlling their troops. Government, military and aid officials greeted the announcement warily.

It appeared Bosnia's Croats and Muslims had not been consulted about the truce. Bosnia's defense minister, Bozo Rajic, a Croat, said he had not been told of the truce in advance and had no faith it would work.

"Reasonable people have stopped counting cease-fires and believing in them," Rajic said.

The announcement came a day after Bosnian President Alija Izetbegovic signed a U.N. peace plan that would divide the republic into 10 semi-autonomous provinces. That left Serbs the only holdout among Bosnia's Muslim, Croat and Serb factions, and increased international pressure on them.

The Muslim-led Bosnian government says at least 134,000 people are dead or missing in the war, which erupted after Bosnia's Croats and Muslims voted for independence from the old Yugoslav federation, which is dominated by Serbia.

Serbs have captured 70 percent of Bosnia, and millions of people have lost their homes.

The peace plan would give the Serbs 43 percent of Bosnia.

At a news conference, Bosnia's Serb leader, Radovan Karadzic, reiterated his complaint that the international peace plan developed by mediators Cyrus Vance and Lord Owen did not give Serbs enough territory.

"If the maps cannot be changed, then we will not negotiate," he said. "If the United Nations and the conference further focus on punishing Serbs, they should not count on our cooperation."

Japanese veteran apologizes to torture victim

KANCHANABURI, Thailand — On the banks of the River Kwai, below the famous bridge built by slaves and POWs, a former Japanese Army interpreter apologized Friday to the former British prisoner he helped interrogate 50 years ago.

Nagase Takashi and Eric Lomax, two graying 75-year-olds, shook hands and wept in the courtyard of a museum dedicated to the "Death Railway," whose construction cost the lives of 116,000 Asian and Allied prisoners.

The slight Japanese veteran bowed his head as he spoke softly to Eric Lomax of Berwick-Upon-Tweed, England. The two then sat together on a bench.

Dressed in sandals, a straw hat and traditional Japanese clothing, Nagase occasionally wiped his eyes with a handkerchief and tightly held the British veteran's hands as they talked.

Nagase, a longtime activist for reconciliation among Pacific war veterans, said the 30-minute meeting freed him of 50 years of guilt and shame.

"These are the happiest moments of my life," he said tearfully.

"I apologized to him for what we did during the war," said Nagase, of Kurashiki, Japan. "For me it is a very great sin and a crime against humanity."

The former British signals officer accepted the apology and was warmly sympathetic, Nagase said. Lomax declined to be interviewed.

Japan began building the 258-mile railway from Nong Pladuk, Thailand, to Thanbyuazyat, Burma, in June 1942. The railroad was intended to supply Japanese troops in Burma.

Malnutrition, tropical disease, heat and brutal treatment killed more than 100,000 Asians laborers and some 16,000 British, Australian, Dutch and American POWs.

Conditions in the railway prison camps were dramatized in the 1957 film, "Bridge On The River Kwai." The bridge was destroyed by Allied bombers but rebuilt after the war as a memorial.

Nagase, who now has an English-language school, was a 25-year-old soldier in 1943 when he acted as interpreter for Lomax's torturers.

Lomax, a retired university lecturer, was captured in the 1941 fall of Singapore.

Japanese military police severely beat and tortured him and other officers suspected of drawing railway maps and keeping clandestine radios.

IBM ends speculation, names Gerstner chief executive

NEW YORK (AP) — IBM ended the speculation Friday by naming Louis V. Gerstner Jr. chairman and chief executive. Now, the man who steered the cigarettes-to-cookies RJR Nabisco empire faces daunting tasks: restoring the power, prestige and profitability of the world's biggest computer company.

First, he needs a crash course in the computer industry.

Gerstner is just the seventh chairman and the first outsider to lead International Business Machines Corp. in its 79 years.

He steps in during an unprecedented restructuring that already has overhauled IBM's operations, ushered out tens of thousands of workers, and shaken the $65 billion company's previously unmatched influence and morale.

"I obviously have a lot to learn," Gerstner said at a news conference broadcast to IBM's 300,000 employees worldwide. He declined to discuss plans or ideas for IBM, saying he hadn't even begun working there yet.

Afterward, Gerstner went to the company's Armonk headquarters, where he conducted a conference call with more than 100 top managers worldwide.

Gerstner's appointment, which had been expected, pushed up IBM's stock price. In heavy trading, IBM rose 87½ cents to $51.37½ on the New York Stock Exchange.

Gerstner, who takes over Thursday, succeeds John F. Akers, a 33-year IBM veteran who announced his departure in January one week after the company reported a $5 billion loss for 1992.

RJR Nabisco moved swiftly to fill its vacancy, naming two top executives, Lawrence Ricciardi and Karl von der Heyden, as co-chairman and chief executive. Gerstner, 51, will remain on RJR Nabisco's board.

Despite his lack of computer experience, Gerstner is no slouch. A driven, dynamic leader, the cherub-faced Gerstner is described as a quick study, a skill evident when the Harvard MBA was the youngest senior partner at the consulting firm McKinsey & Co. in the 1960s.

Gerstner joined American Express Co. in 1978, ran its core card and travel unit and was president of the parent company before leaving for RJR Nabisco in 1989.

He was chosen Friday after a corporate search unlike any other in American business history. IBM paid two recruiting firms several hundred thousand dollars each to find a new leader, and the process attracted unprecedented attention.

Gerstner was chosen by a panel of seven IBM board members who began with a list of 125 names. Gerstner was codenamed Abel during the search because he was the first candidate to speak with panel chairman James E. Burke.

The field narrowed as industry candidates such as Apple Computer's John Sculley and Motorola's George Fisher publicly dropped out. Burke said Gerstner was the only person offered the job.

Some observers, including IBM employees, believe the company can't turn around without a computer expert at the helm. Others say Gerstner's outside status is just what tradition-bound, bureaucracy-thick IBM needs.

"It's a strong positive that he doesn't come with any computer biases," said Mark Stahlman, a financial adviser who has written about IBM. "They need technical leadership and even visionaries at head of the individual businesses and not in the corner office in Armonk."

Gerstner is expected to hire more outsiders. At the news conference, he praised IBM's talent pool, and a key task will be to shore up morale among workers.

Court detains teen who won't talk about sex

PORT HURON, Mich. (AP) — A 15-year-old girl has spent four days in custody for refusing to testify against the 51-year-old teacher who allegedly had sex with her.

The girl's attorney, Sharon Parrish, said Friday she would seek an emergency release order from the Michigan Court of Appeals.

"It's horrible, horrible, ... criminal justice run amok," Parrish said. "It's gotten completely out of hand."

St. Clair County District Judge Richard Cooley found the girl in contempt of court Tuesday and ordered her detained after she refused to testify at Thomas Patrick Dempsey's preliminary hearing.

She refused to testify Wednesday and Thursday against the band teacher, who is accused of five counts of criminal sexual conduct. The statute prohibits voluntary sex with someone between 13 and 16.

The girl doesn't want to testify because she loves Dempsey, is embarrassed about discussing sex in public and feels responsible for the affair, Parrish said.

"She's a very shy, quiet girl, and she doesn't like to discuss the details of it, at least in an open courtroom. Emotionally, she's not ready," the attorney said.

"I knew she was reluctant, but I didn't think it would come to this," Assistant Prosecutor Belle Deaver said.

The girl was released from the detention center Thursday after Parrish filed a motion in Circuit Court that questioned Cooley's original contempt ruling. Cooley revised the order, and police took the girl back into custody 20 minutes after she was released.

Dempsey was charged after the girl told a friend she had sex with the teacher. The friend told a counselor, who then notified police.

Dempsey, who has been suspended from his teaching job, remains free on a $100,000 bond. If convicted, he faces up to 15 years in prison.

SWAT team kills unidentified man holding hostages

SACRAMENTO, Calif. (AP) — A gunman grabbed hostages at a downtown state office tower Friday before he was shot to death by a police SWAT team shot. No other injuries were reported.

The unidentified gunman died at the University of California Medical Center, spokeswoman Janice Ford said.

The man was shot about an hour after he entered the lobby, opened fire several times, then rode to the 18th floor and took an unknown number of hostages, police spokesman Michael Heenan said.

Frank Love, a state Board of Equalization employee, said he was walking out of the ground floor cafeteria when he noticed the man walk into the lobby wearing a cowboy hat and carrying a duffel bag and two guns.

Love said the man shook a set of security doors and yelled to a guard, "'Let me in, let me in.'"

The man fired four shots as Love dove to the floor and others fled in terror, Love said.

One of the hostages, Cristina Salgado, called her mother to report that she was being held, with a gun pointed to her head. Celia Dalgado said her daughter asked her to pick up her son at school and bring him to the office building.

Heenan said the SWAT team moved to the 18th floor, saw the suspect sitting on the floor holding a handgun and cradling a shotgun in his lap. Police opened fire after receiving permission to use deadly force from superiors.

The spokesman said he didn't know how many hostages had been held.

Clinton digs into details for health care plan

WASHINGTON (AP) — True to form, the president with a penchant for policy minutiae is taking a strong role in shaping the details of the health care package his wife is assembling.

In the past week or so, he has ordered up 25 hours of briefings in areas ranging from long-term care to malpractice reform to coverage of defense workers.

A little more than a month before the health care task force hits its May 3 deadline for presenting a reform package, advisers are getting anxious for President Clinton to make the big decisions that must precede work on the fine print.

"It's direction that can only come from the president," said one person familiar with the workings of the task force. "By the beginning of next week, the roughest outlines should emerge pulling together what the plan is going to look like."

For example, on the question of long-term care at home and in nursing facilities, Clinton was presented with four broad policy options this week. His choices, according to people close to the situation, range from proposing a full-blown social insurance program to tinkering with state Medicaid programs to encourage people to buy private long-term care insurance.

The potential price tags in that one area could range anywhere from $2 billion to $40 billion. With a range that wide, "it really will come down to what is palatable politically," said another person who has been closely following the working group's activities.

Clinton said earlier this week that he had sat through about 10-12 hours of "intense staff briefings" and had another 12-15 hours yet to go "before I will be in a position to make some of these calls." His wife, Hillary Rodham Clinton, had planned to participate in the briefings, as well, but spent the week in Arkansas with her critically ill father.

White House spokesman George Stephanopoulos said that while Clinton has been exploring various health issues with his advisers, "I don't think he's micromanaging the working group process."

Still, participants in the briefings report that the meetings run long and the president asks highly detailed questions.

Bob Boorstin, a spokesman for the task force, said Clinton brings to the task 12 years of experience as a governor "trying to provide health security and bring down costs for the people of Arkansas."

Clinton also approaches health care reform with ideas shaped in part by his personal experiences with illness. His mother, a retired nurse anesthetist, recently lost a breast to cancer.

Where Clinton is the policy leader when it comes to health care, his wife contributes the political advice, according to one person who has attended some sessions.

Mrs. Clinton styles herself a "citizen representative" on health care and has traveled frequently to forums and other events to gather public comment on the problem and possible solutions.

Iran opposition marchers seek Clinton support

WASHINGTON (AP) — About 2,000 backers of Iran's main opposition group marched from the White House to the Capitol on Friday seeking support from the Clinton administration.

Carrying flags and large placards, the well-dressed Iranians, most of them residents of the United States, listened to speeches and marched peacefully, disrupting only traffic in downtown Washington.

The marchers support the National Council of Resistance of Iran and its main component, the Peoples Mujahedeen.

American administrations have been reluctant to recognize or support the Mujahedeen, citing their ties to Iraq — where they have their headquarters and a well-armed force — and their role in anti-American terrorism in the 1970's when the group was trying to overthrow the Shah.

The Mujahedeen say they have no alternative but to work against the Islamic regime in Tehran from neighboring Iraq and that a now-defunct radical splinter group was responsible for the anti-American acts of violence.

The once-leftist group now pledges its commitment to democracy and free elections while espousing a modernized Islam giving women equal rights.

Mohammed Mohadessin, foreign relations director for the National Council of Resistance, urged President Clinton to recognize the group and join an arms and oil embargo against Iran.

Mohadessin was cheered by a crowd in Lafayette Park, as Clinton was meeting in the White House across Pennsylvania Ave. with German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

In an interview after his speech, Mohadessin said he had no indication of any shift in the administration's position toward supporting the Mujahedeen. "But I hope this will be the case," he said.

Referring to Clinton's commitment to change, he asked, "What is the meaning of change if they don't support us?"

The demonstrators accused the Muslim clerics ruling Iran of human rights abuses. "Stop Torture and Executions in Iran," one placard read. Another said, "Stop Suppression of Women in Iran." An organizer led them in shouts of "Free Political Prisoners" backed by drums and cymbals.

Before the march, messages of support were read from several members of Congress, including Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass.

Final Four countdown

Traditional powers Indiana, Kansas set to battle in Midwest

Associated Press

ST. LOUIS — The Big Ten vs. the Big Eight. Indiana against Kansas.

You can't get much more Midwest than that and those schools from those conferences meet today to represent that region in the Final Four.

In today's other regional final, Florida State takes on Kentucky in the Southeast.

"Any game between two schools with this much basketball tradition, there's going to be a lot of excitement," Indiana center Matt Nover said Friday. "This should be a great game."

Even if these teams had no tradition behind them, it should be a great game.

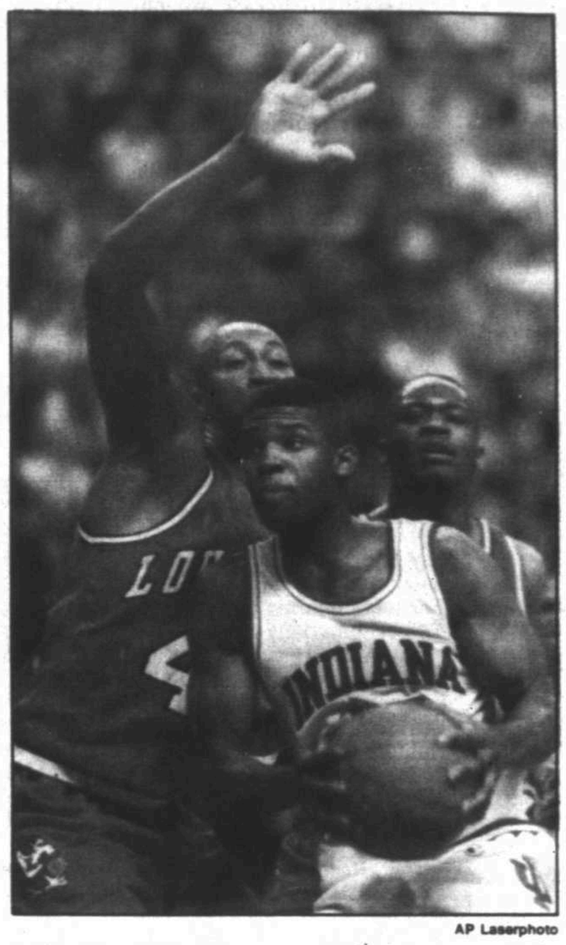

The top two seeds in the region — Indiana (31-3) also is No. 1 in the nation and Kansas (28-6) is ninth — meet for the right to advance to New Orleans next weekend and the national semifinals.

They met earlier this season and Kansas won 74-69 in front of 31,197 at the Hoosier Dome, the Jayhawks' second game of the season and Indiana's fifth.

"I don't think that game will have any bearing on this game," Kansas coach Roy Williams said. "Both teams are much better. But human nature being what it is, kids remember games and as much as we want them to block it out, it's hard to do. I think the teams playing now are far, far different teams from the ones that played Dec. 5."

Indiana coach Bob Knight was even more direct when asked about the previous meeting.

Bearcats us 23-8 run to take 71-54 win over Virginia

Associated Press

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — Nick Van Exel was at his best and worst Friday night, and his best was good enough to get Cincinnati into the NCAA East Regional final.

Van Exel, sent to the bench after a technical foul and a blown breakaway layup, hit two 3-pointers and a jumper to cap a 23-8 second-half run that led Cincinnati to a 71-54 victory over Virginia.

The win moved the second-seeded Bearcats (27-4) within a victory of making the Final Four for the second straight year. Cincinnati will meet the winner of the Arkansas-North Carolina game on Sunday, with a trip to New Orleans on the line.

Virginia (21-10) almost had Cincinnati heading home after opening the second half with a 16-5 spurt that put the Cavaliers ahead 40-36 with 14:38 to go.

Van Exel, the Bearcats' leading scorer who had been limited to 10 points in the opening two games of the tournament, blew an open layup during the streak and later was called for a technical after complaining about a foul call.

But the Bearcats, who were forced to play a half-court game most of the night, responded behind Van Exel and Corie Blount. Both players finished with 19 points.

Junior Burrough led Virginia with 15 points. Jason Williford added 12 and Cory Alexander, the Cavaliers' leading scorer at 19.1, was limited to 11.

More UNLV trouble

LAS VEGAS — NCAA rules were apparently violated when free hotel rooms were given to the parents of UNLV basketball star J.R. Rider and a plane ticket was bought for top recruit Kebu Stewart, a university official said Friday.

Athletic director Jim Weaver said the school will file a report with the NCAA after officials determine exactly which rules were violated.

"We're trying to get interpretations from the NCAA first," he said.

Lee linksters in lead after 1st 4-5A round

- Midland Lee takes a five-stroke lead over Odessa Permian and Midland High is in third place after one round of the District 4-5A boys golf tour.

By Jimmy Patterson
Assistant sports editor

ODESSA — Midland Lee golfers shot four of the 11 rounds of sub-70 golf Friday afternoon to give the Rebels a five-stroke lead after the opening round of the 1993 District 4-5A golf tour at Odessa Country Club.

Lee's Eddie Hatch, at 76, was tied for top medalist honors with Midland High's Jeremiah Luttrell, while Lee's Matt Clements (77) and Mitch Spence (79) were also among the leaders. Brian Jeffreys, playing on Lee's No. 2 team, was also in the individual hunt with a 78.

"If the coach would just be smart enough to put all the kids who shoot in the 70s on the same team, we could go a long way," Lee head coach Bobby Dunn joked.

Bulldogs advance

ABILENE — Midland High's Emmanuel Sanon received official credit for the game winning goal in the Bulldogs' bizarre 3-0 win over Burkburnett Friday in the regional qualifying round of the high school soccer playoffs at Abilene's Lee Soccer Complex, but it was Burk's Eric Antill who actually scored the goal.

Sanon, on a breakaway left of goal, had taken a shot at the near post inside the penalty area. The shot hit the post, bounced out, and deflected off Antill into the net.

MHS, 17-2, is now just two games away from a berth in the state tournament. The Bulldogs will face the winner of Friday night's El Paso Hanks-El Paso High contest at a site and date to be determined.

Rebels host Mojo

By Bill Price
Staff writer

Midland Lee will put its 12-game winning streak on the line against rival Odessa Permian today, as the Rebels try to take sole possession of the District 4-5A baseball lead when they host the Panthers at 2 p.m. on Johnson Field.

In today's other district games, Midland High travels to Odessa High while San Angelo hosts Abilene High. Abilene Cooper, which is tied for the 4-5A lead with Lee at 4-0, is idle today and will drop ½-game behind the Rebels (15-2 overall) if Lee defeats Permian.

The Panthers are 6-7 for the season after being swept in a doubleheader (8-1 and 1-0) at Lubbock Monterey Tuesday. Permian is 2-1 in district play, however, and in third place in the league standings.

Wind hampers relays field at San Angelo

By Terry Williamson
Sports editor

SAN ANGELO — Gusty winds greeted the opening of the 35th annual San Angelo Relays Friday and it showed in the results.

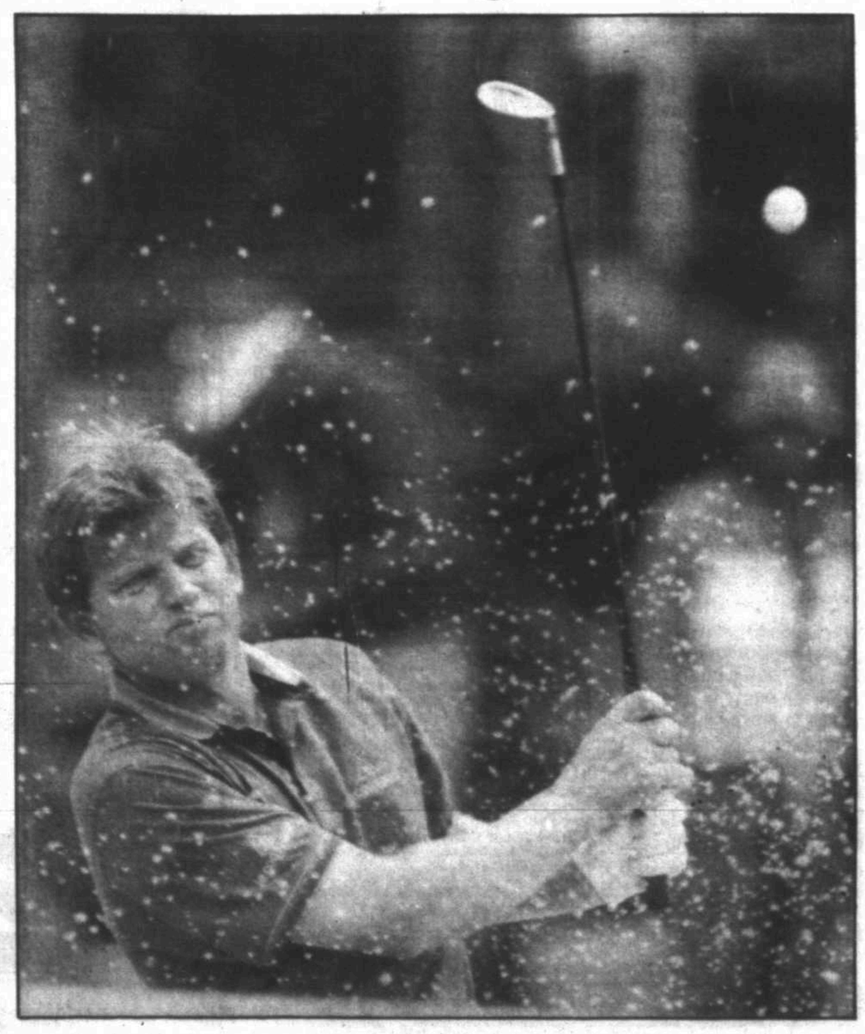

Distances were down and times were up as could be expected. The Division I discus was a prime example.

Midland Lee's Tony Olivas had to battle a "lefties" wind to pull out a second place sub-par throw of 149-5, and that was considered a good effort.

"Tony competed well, despite the distance," said Lee weight coach John Parchman. "There were three or four kids in the field that has either been real close to Tony or better and he beat them all."

PONTE VEDRA, Fla. — Nick Price used an old-fashioned recipe as the formula for a record-setting score Friday at the halfway point of the Players Championship.

"I found the recipe in my mistakes from the past," the PGA champion from Zimbabwe said Friday. "I'd get ahead of myself," he said, recalling the 1982 British Open that he let slip away.

"I've gotten away from that. That's the reason I've been so successful in the last 18 months," he said. "I've been so disciplined in concentrating on the shot at hand. I know it sounds boring, but it works."

Keeping his thoughts in the present — even when the present included seven holes played in showers and drizzle — Price shot an admittedly cautious 68 and reached the 36-hole mark in 132.

That's 12 under par on the TPC at Sawgrass, the home course for the PGA Tour and the permanent site of the annual championship of golf's touring pros.

It's also one better than the old two-round record set by Mark O'Meara and Steve Jones in 1987.

"A record?" Price asked in obvious surprise. "I had no idea what the record was. When you're playing that well, you don't think about that sort of thing; you're just concentrating on the shot at hand."

Even the record score, however, was not enough to put appreciable distance between himself and the field that continued to punish a once-feared course with extremely low scores.

"Without the wind, without the fire in the greens, the course is defenseless,"

Kennedy pleased with Rodriguez

Associated Press

PORT CHARLOTTE, Fla. — Texas Rangers first-year manager Kevin Kennedy, a former catcher, is eager to start tinkering with his Golden Glove backstop, Ivan "Pudge" Rodriguez.

And there is so much with which to tinker.

Rodriguez was the major league's best defense against base thievery last season, throwing out a major league high 49 percent of opposing baserunners.

The 51 runners he threw out, however, was offset a bit by 15 errors and 10 passed balls, also league highs.

"He's the best I've ever seen," Kennedy said. "He uses his legs so well and gets drive out of his legs. He's so quick with his feet, that's why he gets rid of the ball so well."

Rodriguez slumped over the second half of last season but none of the negatives have tarnished the potential of the major leagues' youngest player the past two seasons.

"The physical tools are there, no question," Kennedy said. "He drives right through the ball and gives you that clothesline effect. Our pitchers have to beware. He'll throw it right through their chest."

Rodriguez, who broke into the major leagues as a wide-eyed 19-year-old, hit .278 before playing in the All-Star game last season. He hit .242 afterward and .215 over the final 29 games.

When Kennedy became the Rangers manager last October, one of his first duties was to fly to Puerto Rico to visit with Rodriguez and outfielder Juan Gonzalez.

"I've heard about his second half and we talked," Kennedy said. "I don't know what happened but I think we'll be able to help him maintain his consistency throughout the year.

"If he does show signs of tiredness I'll make a change to give him a day or two rest. I know he wants to catch every day but we want to keep his intensity up and his accuracy."

Ten of Rodriguez's errors were on wild throws. Kennedy doesn't want to alter his star catcher's aggressiveness, just harness the power for the right moment.

An early spring training error was an example.

"There was a slower runner at first base and Pudge tried to throw him out and threw the ball into right field," Kennedy said. "That's one of the situations where the percentage just wasn't there."

Kennedy wanted Rodriguez to notice that the batter was left-handed and didn't swing at the pitch, meaning the runner would be leaning back to first.

"That's what I explained to Pudge, why the percentages weren't with him," Kennedy said. "We talk about those things. That's what he's learning, that you have to pick your spots."

BASEBALL: Bulldogs play at OHS

the second time this season with today's game, as Lee defeated Mojo 5-3 in the Tournament of Champions earlier this month. In that game, pitcher Kirk Ulrich went the distance for Lee while allowing two earned runs. Permian did try to mount a late comeback with two runs in the sixth, but the rally ended when first baseman Albert Marmolejo threw out Shane Rickerson at the plate to close the seventh.

With Julian Urquidez throwing a five-inning complete game Tuesday at Abilene High, the Rebels have fresh arms in Ulrich (4-1), Jason Baker (3-1) and Alex Hale (2-0).

Urquidez, who usually is the designated hitter when not pitching, has been Lee's most productive batter in league play with a .769 average, seven RBI and two home runs. Outfield Dennis Graham is Permian's leading hitter in 4-5A games, with a .667 average and five RBI.

MHS WILL try to bring its district record to the .500 mark at OHS today. The Bulldogs (5-8 overall) are 1-2 in district after suffering a 12-4 loss to Cooper Tuesday at Angels Stadium.

The Bronchos are 3-11 for the season and winless in 4-5A at 0-4.

Joe Urquidez (3-2) is up in the MHS rotation after defeating Permian last Saturday, 5-4. In that game he allowed six hits and one earned run while striking out nine.

Chad Benson has the best 4-5A batting average for the Bulldogs at .500. Mike Melzer and Abel Sanchez follow at .429. Nate Patton has been the Broncs' best hitter with a .400 mark and four RBI.

TRACK: Olivas second in discus

(From 1B)

In fact, Olivas, a Region I qualifier last year in the discus, hadn't been under 150-feet all year until the wind grabbed him here. He owns a career best of 161-0 this season, five feet better than his best effort as a junior.

"I think I could have done better in the finals, but the wind was just too bad," Olivas said. "It was good for the day. There's just not much you can do in a wind like this. It kind of takes the enjoyment out of it."

Temple's No. 3 discus thrower, Neville Malone, won the event with a 156-9½ — and, yes, he was a lefty. He defeated Olivas and two Temple teammate tossers who had been close to 170-feet this year.

Olivas was the only local to score points in the limited finals Friday as the bulk of the competition was the qualifying process in the running events. Both Midland High and Lee did about as well as could be expected in the qualifying races.

"Our kids really competed hard, and that's about all you can ask of them in a meet like this. It's really hard to qualify and our team is so young that we are a little outclassed," said MHS coach Monty Stumbaugh.

The Bulldogs found several qualifying berths after a rough start, dropping the baton in the sprint relay on the first exchange between Dwight Allison and Michael Ramierez.

"It was the best start in the relay we've had all year. I know we would have qualified," Stumbaugh said.

But the Bulldogs qualified Charlie Juarez in the 400, Manuel Abraha in the 800 and Allison and Roy Coats in the 100.

Lee's sprint relay qualified for the finals in the same heat in which MHS dropped the baton. The Rebels were running without speedster Marlon Henry, who took the week off to take the SAT test. Lee's Roderick Mayfield qualified in both hurdle events and Lee will have several field events in which to score points, including favored Scott McLeod in the shot put. McLeod is a returning Region I qualifier and owns a career best 56-5 this season.

In Division IV, Stanton's Jeremy Stallings, the two-time defending state Class A 800-meter champion, will have another busy day, qualifying in the 800, 1,600 and 1,600 relay. The University of Florida-bound Stallings took it easy in the 800 qualifying with a 2:06.38, but was still more than a second faster than the field. He also had the best qualifying time in the 1,600 with a 4:50.45.

Wade Roberts gave Stanton a fourth place in the high jump with a 5-10 and qualified for the finals in the high hurdles. Teammate Ricky Lucas also qualified in the 400 and the Buffaloes also will be running today in the sprint relay, as will Jerele Lee in the 200.

In Division II, Lamesa had a good opening day with two relay teams. Other Tors to make the finals were Robert Wagner in the 800, Eric Ybanez in the 400, Frank Sumpler in the 3,200 and Corey Kelly in the 100.

The meet resumes today at 11:20 a.m. with field event finals and 12:10 p.m. with the running finals.

Partial medal and area results from field event finals at the San Angelo Relays Friday:

Division I

Long Jump: 1. Jonathan Bennings, Monterey, 22-0; 2. Letwan Houston, North Garland, 21-1½; 3. Greg Steele, Temple, 21-1¼.

Discus: 1. Neville Malone, Temple, 156-9½; 2. Tony Olivas, Lee, 149-6; 3. Mark Bierds, Temple, 146-5¼.

Foursome tied at Dinah Shore

Associated Press

RANCHO MIRAGE, Calif. — Nancy Lopez struggled to a 78 — including a two-stroke penalty for slow play — to drop back into the pack Friday, and Pat Bradley charged into a share of the lead with a second-round 69 in the Dinah Shore tournament.

Bradley, like Lopez a member of the LPGA's Hall of Fame, was in a group of four at 4-under-par 140 through 36 holes of the tournament, one of the women's major championships.

Also tied at the top were Marta Figueras-Dotti of Spain, Helen Alfredsson of Sweden, and Dawn Coe-Jones.

Lopez, who shared the first-round lead with Figueras-Dotti and Missie Berteotti, was given the two-shot penalty after an official timed her on the par-4, 360-yard 15th hole.

Since Lopez and her threesome, including Dottie Mochrie and Brandie Burton, began their round on the 10th tee, it was Lopez' sixth hole of the day.

LPGA rules allow an average of 30 seconds per shot, with an extra pad of 25 seconds for the entire hole. Officials also allow an extra 20 seconds for what they consider a shot out of trouble.

LPGA official Barb Trammell said she learned that the threesome was lagging behind, that she timed them on No. 15 and Lopez took too much time.

"Her second shot (out of the left rough) took her 1 minute and 26 seconds. ... " Trammell said. "I gave her an extra 20 seconds for a trouble shot.

"It also took Nancy 52 seconds on the first putt. She was 71 seconds over a 30-second average."

PGA: Second-place trio two back

(From 1B)

Price explained.

Among those taking advantage were Doug Tewell, Dave Rummells and former Masters champion Bernhard Langer of Germany, tied for second at 134, two off the pace.

Rummells moved up with a 7-under-par 65, Tewell shot 67 and Langer 69.

Joel Edwards was next at 69-135 with Greg Norman, Brad Fabel, Joey Sindelar and Ronnie Black tied at 136.

"With two more days like this," Norman said, "it'll take 18 to 22 under par to win."

Only difficult pin placements kept the scores within reason.

Even under the ideal conditions, however, Kirk Triplett, who shared the first round lead with Price, found the course more than he could handle.

Triplett went 14 strokes higher than his opening 64 and just squeezed under the cutoff at 142.

Kite, the U.S. Open champ and a two-time winner this year, was hampered by a back injury and shot 72-144. It marked the end to a string of 26 consecutive tournaments — the longest on the PGA Tour — in which he had qualified for weekend play.

ers six of the low 11 scores.

The Rebels finished the opening round at 312 — a 24 stroke improvement over last year's opening round 336 which, Dunn said, took the Rebels out of the running early.

Odessa Permian was in second Friday, with a 317 on its home course. Midland High was close behind in third at 321.

The Rebels' No. 2 team was tied with Cooper for fourth, while last year's 1-2 district finishers, San Angelo and Abilene High, finished sixth and seventh.

The day was not free of problems, particularly for Lee's Mitch Spence and MHS' Will Gray, both of whom had early troubles.

Spence, who has consistently finished as a Top 5 medalist in preseason tournaments, let sail an on-the-mark tee shot on OCC's par three, No. 2 hole. What happened next was what a golfer would dream of only in his worst nightmare.

"I hit it my tee shot really well," Spence recalled. "Everybody was saying, 'It went in the hole, it went in the hole.' I checked in the hole, but it wasn't there. And then we saw that there was a rake in front of the green. My ball had hit the rake and kicked off it about 40 yards to the left."

The errantly laid rake turned Spence's possible birdie into a bogey.

Gray was assessed a three stroke penalty for two minor violations. The MHS senior was penalized a stroke for what the rules committee said was "moving the ball after he had addressed it" on a putt. After the ball had been moved, Gray's failure to replace the ball with a new one cost him an extra two strokes.

For MHS' Gray, matters were a bit more sticky.

"The question was whether he had addressed the ball," MHS golf coach Aubrey Cully said. "He didn't feel he had but the other three guys he was playing with felt he had, and it's majority rules in this situation.

"The first mistake was an honest mistake. The second one was a result of not knowing the rules the way they should have. It was an unfortunate situation."

Had the three stroke penalty been avoided, Gray would've been among the top medalists, but MHS would've still been in third place, albeit just one stroke behind second place Permian.

The day, though, did go right for Hatch and Luttrell. Luttrell, in fact, was so pleased with his play he could hardly find the words to sum up his round.

"I was hitting good shots onto the green," the MHS junior said. "I was just playing fairway to green, boring golf."

Hatch, who said he was fortunate enough not be the victim of "any bad breaks all day," tied his low career round with his 76, a score he achieved at the Concho Classic earlier this season in San Angelo.

The District 4-5A tour winds its way back to San Angelo next weekend for stop two. Midland will host the final stop on this year's tour, April 16.

Results after the first round of the District 4-5A golf tour, played Friday at the 6,814 yard, par 72 Odessa Country Club:

Rockets clinch playoffs with 90-69 victory

Associated Press

LANDOVER, Md. — Vernon Maxwell had 18 points, and the Houston Rockets clinched an NBA playoff berth while holding the Washington Bullets to a franchise low in a 90-69 victory Friday night.

Robert Horry scored five of his nine points during a 13-0 third-quarter run that gave Houston breathing room. The Rockets, who got a season-low 10 points but 17 rebounds from Hakeem Olajuwon, have won 16 of 20 games and 14 of 19 on the road.

Washington, getting 14 points from LaBradford Smith, made just 33 percent of its shots while losing for the 16th time in 20 games. The 69 points eclipsed the previous low set in an 85-71 loss on Feb. 26, 1974 against New York and tied Nov. 2, 1975 in a 111-71 defeat at Golden State.

Celtics 106, Mavericks 97

BOSTON — Robert Parish and Dee Brown keyed a fourth-quarter rally as the surging Boston Celtics awoke in time to beat Dallas, keeping the Mavericks winless at Boston Garden.

The Celtics, who never led by more than one point through the first three quarters, regained the lead for good at 84-83 on Alaa Abdelnaby's two free throws with 7:37 remaining. They built it to 94-87 with 4:09 left on six points from Brown and four by Parish.

Parish led the Celtics, winners of six straight games, with 20 points and 10 rebounds. Brown added 18, including 12 in the decisive fourth period. Reggie Lewis added 16 points.

Dallas, with the NBA's worst record at 7-60, is now 0-13 at Boston Garden, and 4-22 overall against the Celtics. Sean Rooks led Dallas with 18 points.

The Mavericks pulled to 94-91, and had the ball. But they were unable to get a shot off before the shot clock expired with 2:38 to play.

Cavaliers 103, 76ers 84

PHILADELPHIA — Brad Daugherty had 23 points and 16 rebounds as the Cleveland Cavaliers beat the punchless Philadelphia 76ers.

Mark Price added 18 points for Cleveland, which won its fourth straight game at the Spectrum. The Cavaliers' last loss in Philadelphia was on March 31, 1991.

Jeff Hornacek had 20 points for Philadelphia, all in the first half.

The 76ers have now lost eight of nine games and 22 of 26, including six of seven home games. They have also scored less than 100 points in 10 of their last 12 games.

Philadelphia's only lead was 2-0, although Hornacek's outside shooting kept the 76ers close in the first half. The Cavaliers held a 54-47 edge at halftime, led by Daugherty's 15 points and 10 rebounds.

Pistons 115, Hornets 107

AUBURN HILLS, Mich. — Dennis Rodman had 25 rebounds and a season-high 18 points, and Isiah Thomas tied a season high with 40 points as the Detroit Pistons beat the slumping Charlotte Hornets.

Alonzo Mourning had 23 points and 13 rebounds, and Mugsy Bogues 20 points 11 assists. But the Hornets lost for the fourth time in five games and seventh in 10.

The Hornets led 91-85 with nine minutes left, but Joe Dumars led the Pistons back. Dumars, 0 for 8 with just one point through three quarters, hit back-to-back jumpers to put Detroit ahead 100-99 with 4:13 to go. Dumars finished with 11 points.

Heat 110, Nets 100

MIAMI — The Miami Heat extended their record home winning streak to 12 games, beating the New Jersey Nets behind Glen Rice's 27 points.

Miami won for the ninth time in March, setting a franchise mark for victories in a month.

The Heat led by one when Grant Long hit a layup and fed Rice for a stuff to make it 89-84 with 7:36 left in the game. After a New Jersey basket and a 3-point play by Rice, Long blocked Maurice Cheeks' shot, triggering a fast break that resulted in Rony Seikaly's basket for a 94-86 lead with 6:11 left.

The Nets cut the margin to three, but a pair of free throws by Harold Miner and a 3-point basket by Rice made it 99-91 at the 3:28 mark.

Warriors 94, Timberwolves 91

MINNEAPOLIS — Andre Spencer, playing in just his fifth NBA game, scored eight of his career-high 14 points in the fourth period to lead the Golden State Warriors over the Minnesota Timberwolves.

Latrell Sprewell sank two free throws with eight seconds left to give the Warriors a 94-91 lead. Sprewell, who had four 3-pointers, led six Warriors in double figures with 22 points.

Lady Raiders brace for Colorado game

Associated Press

This year's Final Four in the NCAA women's tournament will be determined Saturday when the remaining eight schools from the original field of 48 meet to determine the regional champions.

In the West at Missoula, Mont., fourth-seeded Colorado (27-3) has already ended defending NCAA champion Stanford's season with an 80-67 semifinal win. The Cardinal was the top seed and heavy favorite to return to the national finals a fourth straight year.

The Buffs will face Texas Tech (28-3), the second seed, which eliminated Southern California, 87-67.

The Red Raiders are led by Sheryl Swoopes, second in the nation in scoring with a 27-point average. This is the farthest both Colorado and Texas Tech have ever advanced in the tournament.

In the East, No. 9 Virginia (26-5), the second seed, will be after its fourth straight trip to the national semifinals when it meets top-seeded Ohio State (26-3) at Richmond, Va.

The Cavaliers advanced with a 77-57 win over Georgetown on Thursday night in the East semifinals, while the Buckeyes defeated Western Kentucky 86-73.

Virginia will get a chance to make up for a 91-84 loss to Ohio State last January.

In the Mideast, top-seeded Tennessee (29-2) will meet Iowa (26-3) at the Hawkeyes' Carver Arena.

Tennessee, which advanced with a 74-54 win over North Carolina, has won three national titles since 1987, all in odd years. Iowa, which defeated No. 7 Auburn 63-50, is making its third appearance in a regional final still looking for its first visit to the national semifinals.

In the Midwest at Nacogdoches, Texas, No. 1 Vanderbilt (29-2), the top seed, will meet No. 14 Louisiana Tech (26-5), which hasn't been this far since advancing to the Final Four in 1990.

SOCCER: El Paso team next for Bulldogs

(From 1B)

In Friday's win over Burkburnett, Sanon put the game out of reach with his second goal of the evening, a 16-yard shot to the far post from left of center with 12:36 remaining in the game. Brian Robey was credited with an assist on the play.

"My teammates were giving me some good passes," Sanon said. "I turned around and took the shot and knew it was going to go in."

The rest of the game belonged to the MHS defense, which limited Burkburnett to four shots.

Defenses for both teams dominated the scoreless first half as neither goalie was forced to make a save. The Bulldogs limited Burkburnett to one shot in the half, a 20-yarder by Chris Keating with 15:05 remaining before the intermission. The ball was deflected by a Midland defender and rolled harmlessly to goalkeeper Jeremy Hernandez.

Midand High had four shots in the first half, twice having serious opportunities to score. Tyler Berry was turned away from five yards center in front of the goal with 16 minutes remaining in the half. David Farias hit the near post while attacking from the deep right wing with 13:55 remaining. The other two MHS shots were stopped well short of goal.

"We pretty much had control of the game," Sanon said. "Our defense was doing a good job, we just weren't finishing the shots. That first goal was just lucky."

MHS soccer coach Tom Esikhati had mixed feelings about his team's victory.

"We sharpened up our defense," Esikhati said. "Our defense is playing extremely well right now. We had the potential to put in eight goals and didn't do it. We got very lucky. We're going to have to finish better Tuesday."

In the other area game of note Friday, Abilene and San Angelo were tied 1-1 and entering overtime at press time.

Midland High	0	3—3

Goals: Emmanuel Sanon, 30:54; Sanon (Brian Robey assist) 12:36; David Farias, 1:24. Shots: MHS 17; Burkburnett 4. Saves: MHS 2, Burkburnett 2. Corner Kicks: MHS 2, Burkburnett 3. Penalties: MHS 3, Burkburnett 5. Yellow Cards: None. Red Cards: None. Penalty Kicks: None.

NCAA: Michigan takes ugly 72-64 win over GW

(From 1B)

Michigan 72, George Washington 64

SEATTLE — Michigan played six minutes of brilliant basketball and was sloppy the rest of the way, barely escaping an upset for the second straight game to beat inspired George Washington West Regional semifinals.

Coming off a last-second overtime victory against UCLA, top-seeded Michigan played as if in a stupor after racing to a 15-2 lead in the opening minutes against the 12th-seeded Colonials.

Michigan trailed by three points with eight minutes left and led only 64-62 with 1:36 remaining. The Wolverines finally asserted themselves at that point, taking over with their strength under the backboards, and pulled away by scoring their last eight points on free throws.

Forward Juwan Howard, who fouled out with 2:03 left, led Michigan with 17 points, including nine on free throws. Jalen Rosen had 16 points, 12 in the second half, and Chris Webber added 14 points.

Kwame Evans led George Washington with 13 points, nine in the second half.

North Carolina 80, Arkansas 74

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. — The NCAA regionals give North Carolina the blues more often than not. However, red-hot shooting by George Lynch and Donald Williams gave the Tar Heels another chance to make the Final Four.

Lynch had 23 points on 9-for-13 shooting and Williams scored North Carolina's last nine points and finished with 22, lifting the top-seeded Tar Heels over Arkansas in the East Regional semifinals.

North Carolina (31-4) will face second-seeded Cincinnati (27-4) in Sunday's regional final. An Atlantic Coast Conference team has represented the East in the Final Four for six of the last seven years.

Vanderbilt 67, Temple 59

SEATTLE — Eddie Jones scored 18 of his 26 points in the second half and Temple withstood a late long-range shooting barrage by Vanderbilt to beat the Commodores in the West Regional semifinals.

The Owls (20-12), using only six players in the game, rallied from a four-point halftime deficit to lead by as many as 12 in the second half.

But they needed four crucial free throws by freshman Derrick Battie in the final 39 seconds to clinch the victory and advance to Sunday's regional final against Michigan. Vanderbilt took only one free throw in the game, and made it.

Vanderbilt (28-6), a team that has lived on 3-pointers all season, made three during a 13-4 run that cut the Temple lead to 61-59 on Billy McCaffrey's 16-footer with 32 seconds to play.

After Temple's Aaron McKie made one of two free throws with 29.3 seconds left to make it 62-59, the Commodores worked the ball to Ronnie McMahan.

MIDWEST: Chaney, Walters pick up pace

(From 1B)

"I wouldn't think the first game with Kansas would make any difference to anybody," he said. "It was played in early December. This is a game that will be decided tomorrow, not by what happened in December."

As Williams said, the players did remember it and in great detail.

"That game was nip-and-tuck with a lot of lead changes," Indiana's Calbert Cheaney said. "We made a lot of mistakes at the end when they went into their 1-3-1 zone. We also made some defensive mistakes and those were the difference in the game."

"The one thing that hurt us the most in that game was the guard play," said Damon Bailey, who plays that position for Indiana, which was 4 for 13 from the free throw line that day. "Their guards just outplayed us and that's something we can't let happen again. We have to take it as a personal challenge and stop those guys."

It wasn't only the losing team that recalled a lot about that game.

"When we played them in December it was a very competitive game," Kansas guard Rex Walters said. "What you saw there was players who played as hard as they could and left everything on the court and you'll see them same tomorrow."

Both teams have improved since that game and both teams' star players — Cheaney and Walters — have stepped up since the NCAA tournament started.

Cheaney, an All-America and the Big Ten's all-time leading scorer, has averaged 28 points and eight rebounds in the three games that got the Hoosiers to their second straight regional final. He had 32 points on 10-for-12 shooting against Louisville Thursday night.

"He's smart and very difficult to guard because he uses screens so well," Kansas forward Darrin Hancock said of the man he will try and guard. "The first time we played them I learned a lot about how he uses all those screens. I'll play him differently this time."

Walters has averaged 25 points per game in the tournament for the Jayhawks on 73 percent shooting from the field (24 for 33), including 12 for 17 from 3-point range. He had 24 against California Thursday night, making eight of nine shots.

"Rex did struggle with his shooting at times during the season, but he has been sensational down the stretch," Williams said. "But even when he wasn't shooting as good as he is now, he was still good."

Knight, who made his first regional final appearance 20 years ago, is 5-2 in games that advance a team to the Final Four. The Hoosiers beat UCLA 106-79 in the West Regional final last season after losing to the Bruins by 15 in the season-opener.

"Indiana teams always improve and what they did to UCLA last year is something we have to think about," Walters said.

Williams has a 2-0 record against Knight, the other win coming in the 1991 Southeast Regional semifinals when the Jayhawks advanced to the Final Four, losing to Duke in the championship game.

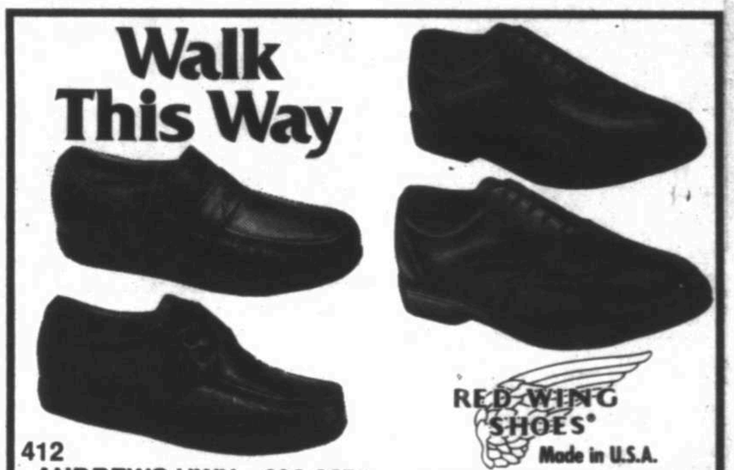

Indiana forward Brian Evans, a part-time starter who averages 5.1 points, broke his right thumb against Louisville and Knight said it won't be known until game time on how much he can contribute.

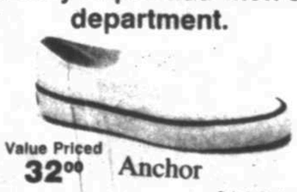

"He's a left-handed shooter and he usually gets in trouble when he dribbles too much, so this should cut his dribbling in half and that may be a plus," Knight said.

YOUR HOROSCOPE

By Jeane Dixon

SATURDAY, MARCH 27, 1993

HAPPY BIRTHDAY! IN THE NEXT YEAR OF YOUR LIFE: You will make great strides in your chosen field. Never lose sight of your goals! Give other people a reason to think about you and your ideas. A new job will open by late summer. Gather your family around you on holidays and be careful to stay in touch at other times. Love will make your world go 'round like never before. An occasional mini-vacation will let you recharge your batteries and avoid "burn-out."

CELEBRITIES BORN ON THIS DATE: movie star Gloria Swanson, opera singer Sarah Vaughan, quarterback Randall Cunningham, auto racer Cale Yarborough.

ARIES (March 21-April 19): Other people may not be as impressed with an accomplishment as you are. Make them aware of all you can offer! A grand entrance will light up a room. Pursue romance tonight.

TAURUS (April 20-May 20): You are in rare form today. Your appearance attracts favorable attention while your intuition perfects your timing. Give your imagination free rein when planning a special event.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20): Make today a time for "out with the old, in with the new." Give your home an overdue face-lift. Weekend employment could be the answer to a temporary cash flow problem.

CANCER (June 21-July 22): You know your own mind and have a clear vision of what you want to build. A better domestic or financial package is essential. A generous gesture will be repaid in kind. Have fun!

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22): A good day to listen attentively. Stop chastising yourself for something you said to your mate or partner. It was the truth. Use any spare time for self-improvement activities.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22): Friendships last longer when you resist borrowing or lending money. Practice self-sufficiency. Quiet meditation helps banish old fears and lingering worries.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 22): You are popular with almost everyone now. Give credit to your wonderful patience and delightful sense of humor. Limiting your daily spending will let you take a vacation after all.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23-Nov. 21): You may need extra rest early today. A low-key approach will calm frazzled nerves and prevent frustration. Balance your checkbook. Tonight is show time! Take center stage if you like.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22-Dec. 21): Heeding a close companion's suggestion may be better than trying to have you own way. Save money wherever you can. Watching a sports event helps you relax.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19): Keep a promise to yourself and start that diet or exercise program. You will feel better when you look better! Tackle a family problem without further delay.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 18): A loved one could come to you for advice. Listen carefully before commenting. Someone may try to prove you wrong. Be willing to try a fresh approach. Flexibility makes you a winner.

PISCES (Feb. 19-March 20): Investments look promising. Sign agreements that will increase your income. Ignore someone's opinions on how to live and dress. You know what is right for you.

TODAY'S CHILDREN are lively, bright and hardworking. Their dynamic personality makes them highly effective business leaders or politicians. Count on these ambitious Aries to parlay their diverse talents into a high-paying, high-profile position. Unsure of exactly what they want in a spouse, these Aries are likely to have many romances before finding the right mate. Marriage should be postponed until they are firmly established in their careers.

Hollywood is victim of its own greed, producer says

BALTIMORE — Hollywood has become a victim of its own greed, says Ismail Merchant, who produced the Academy Award-nominated "Howards End."

Merchant and director James Ivory complained that Hollywood focuses too much on violence and sex because of concerns over profits.

"If we make a film for $2 million, it doesn't have to make $100 million. If it makes $4 million or $2.5 million or $2 million, I'm happy," Merchant told about 2,000 people gathered Thursday for a screening of the film.

"Howards End," nominated for nine Oscars, is based on a novel by E.M. Forster. The movie was made for $8 million without studio money.

The Academy Award winners will be announced Monday.

TULSA, Okla. — Margaret Thatcher chastised the West for not offering more help to Russia.

"We have to give support in resources and political support in the sense that we're absolutely behind them, and that in the new world we're entering into Russia is absolutely welcome," she told about 3,000 students and Tulsa business leaders Thursday.

Thatcher

"I'm optimistic it will come out all right."

The former British prime minister was the keynote speaker for two programs, one in Tulsa and one in Oklahoma City, sponsored by Oklahoma State University's business college.

Mrs. Thatcher said Russian leaders felt more help would be coming from the West once they got rid of communism, but Western support "has not measured up to the enormous task."

LONDON — Robert Downey Jr. and Emma Thompson were chosen as the year's best film actors by the British Academy of Film and Television Arts.

"Howards End," the Oscar-nominated film Thompson starred in, was named best picture. Downey won for his starring role in "Chaplin."

Both actors also have been nominated for Adacemy Awards.

Supporting actor awards also went to two Oscar nominees: Gene Hackman for "Unforgiven" and Miranda Richardson for "Damage."

Robert Altman was named best director for "The Player." Woody Allen's script for "Husbands and Wives" was named best screenplay. The Chinese film "Raise the Red Lantern" was named best foreign language film.

The Academy Awards ceremony will be held March 29 in Los Angeles.

MOORHEAD, Minn. — Former Vice President Walter Mondale says he accepted President Clinton's offer of an ambassadorship to Moscow, until he slept on it.

"I've had every office except one and I'm not going to get that. I'm enjoying what I'm doing," he said. "I'm in charge of my own life."

Mondale, who ran unsuccessfully for president in 1984, practices law in Minneapolis.

"They deserve more help than we have given them," she said.

NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Richard Nixon will be keynote speaker April 22 at a Junior Achievement gathering.

The national conference was expected to attract 1,000 people.

Junior Achievement is an economic education organization that reaches more than 1.5 million elementary, junior high and high school students in the United States and operates programs in more than 60 countries around the world.

BRANSON, Mo. — Look who's in the fashion business.

Country singer Moe Bandy announced Thursday that he will market a new line of western shirts. Five styles of the shirts come in 12 bright, geometric prints.

The shirts will be sold only in Branson, a booming entertainment center in southwest Missouri, until a national distribution system is finalized.

Bandy, who sported one of his shirts at a news conference Thursday and said he plans to wear them on stage, created the line along with Roy Corbett, a clothing manufacturer in Dallas. The shirts will be made in Dallas.

Magic Johnson is touring again, not as a Los Angeles Laker or an author, but as a spokesman for the battle against AIDS. He was in Tokyo Thursday, where AIDS and sex are spoken about only in whispers behind closed doors, away from the ears of children.

Johnson, at an international symposium on AIDS, spoke of the need for more research and education about the disease and for more compassion for people who have it.

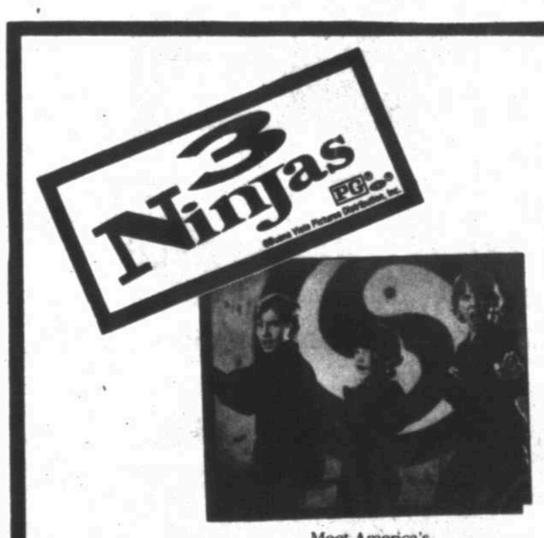

"Those people who have HIV, or AIDS, you've got to treat them the same way as before," The Associated Press quoted him as saying. "The only thing they want is to be treated like a human being."

Free agency changes way owners approach meeting

By Dave Goldberg
AP Football Writer

■ NFL

PALM DESERT, Calif. — This is what the NFL meetings were about in this first year of free agency:

No one really cared who voted against roster expansion or kickoffs from the 30-yard-line.

But people listened raptly as an agent said, only somewhat in jest, that each quarter-inch in a wide receiver is worth $35,000.

In 1993, the NFL meetings turned into what the baseball meetings have always been — a market for prime beef.

In most years, the NFL meetings have been about the arcane, at least as far as the public is concerned.

There was, of course, the annual debate over instant replay — until it was killed last year. Some people were concerned about expansion; others about minor rules changes.

And once every 30 years, a commissioner resigned, as Pete Rozelle did at this very spot four years ago.

This year?

The star of the show was an agent named Jimmy Sexton, a one-time equipment manager at the University of Tennessee who is fortunate enough to represent Reggie White, the premier free agent available this year.

The co-star was the far better-known Leigh Steinberg, who paraded an entourage of players that included Thurman Thomas and Derrick Thomas through the hallways doing deals, redoing others and setting up more.

And the supporting cast was another half-dozen big-name agents, or "player representatives" as some choose to style themselves — Marvin Demoff, Steve Zucker, Bob Wolff and more — lunching and dining with owners, general managers, coaches and money men. Walk around the pool and there they were, sitting and talking about millions of dollars.

The $35,000 remark was from Steinberg, after a lunch with general manager George Young of the New York Giants over 6-foot-2½ inch wide receiver Mike Sherrard. This was the day after the Giants had signed 5-9 Mark Jackson and Young had to assure Steinberg that they still wanted his guy.

"What did Jackson get?" Steinberg asked.

"Supposedly $5 million over three years," someone replied, adding, "What's your asking price for Mike?"

"That sounds about right," Steinberg said. "With maybe $35,000 for each quarter-inch."

So what did the owners do besides make deals?

Relaxed their way through the first meeting in six years in which there is labor peace?

— They awarded the 1996 Super Bowl to Phoenix, the result of the passage by Arizona voters or a Martin Luther King holiday. It was supposed to have been played there last January but the lack of the holiday caused it to be transferred to Los Angeles

— They expanded rosters from 47 to 53 but required that any player placed on injured reserve stay there the entire year and cut the 45-second clock between plays to 40 seconds. The game-day roster of 45 will stay the same.

— They went ahead with their plans for expansion, although they did not make firm the expected date of 1995 for the two new teams to begin play.

But most of all, they made deals.

"The best defensive player in the league," coach Jerry Glanville of Atlanta said after San Francisco failed to match the Falcons' guaranteed $7.5 million, 3-year deal for defensive end Pierce Holt. Then he added in a typically Glanvillian non-sequitur:

"He's a real Texan. He owns 175 cows."

The Holt signing was one that put the 49ers back in the race for White, who will leave Philadelphia for an average of about $4 million a year.

That meant the Niners, banned as one of the NFL's Final Four from signing a player unless they lost one, could get into the White sweepstakes.

And although the Niners can't match the money from the other contenders — Cleveland, Green Bay, Washington and the New York Jets because they must spend only what Holt cost Atlanta under the complicated system — they're trying. As soon as Holt was finalized, Sexton headed for the swimming pool, de facto office of the San Francisco management duo of Edward DeBartolo Jr. and Carmen Policy.

The outcome: They'll meet again and White may visit the Niners' training complex 40 miles south of Candletick Park, the only place in the Bay Area he's visited.

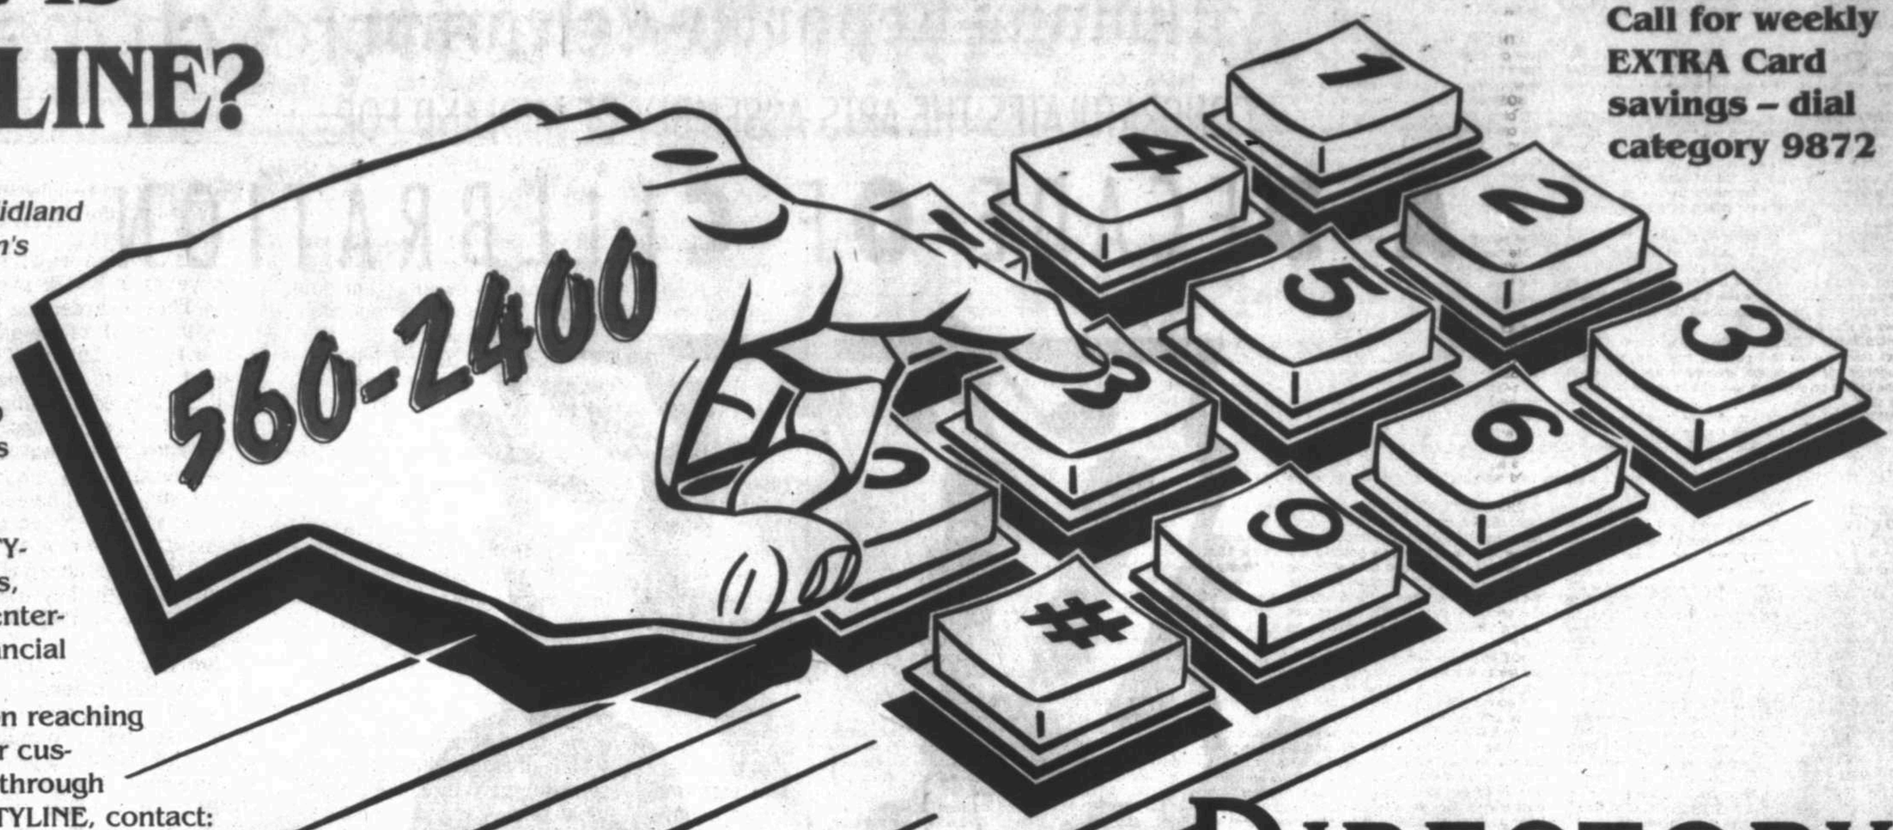

"The bottom line is whether Reggie wants to trade financial security for two Super Bowls in the next four years," said Sexton.

THE OSCAR GOES TO ...

By BOB THOMAS
Associated Press writer

LOS ANGELES — No joke. This year's theme for the Academy Awards is "Oscar Celebrates Women and the Movies."

Just don't bother opening the champagne.

For every film like "Passion Fish" that gave the best roles to women, there seemed to be a lot more like the male-dominated "Glengarry Glen Ross" and "Unforgiven." While acclaimed performances by Tom Cruise, Daniel Day-Lewis and Jack Lemmon all crowded out of the best actor category, the Academy had to look hard to find five candidates for best actress.

Thompson

The first one was easy: Emma Thompson, the odds-on favorite for her portrayal of the English woman torn by class conflict in "Howards End."

Then, you have Susan Sarandon, a natural for her all-out performance as the mother of an ailing child in "Lorenzo's Oil," and Mary McDonnell as the paralyzed soap opera diva of "Passion Fish."

And then? There was talk of Michelle Pfeiffer for her role as Catwoman in "Batman" Geena Davis, the tough-minded baseball catcher of "A League of Their Own" or Alfre Woodard who costarred in "Passion Fish" as Mary McDonnell's troubled but no nonsense caretaker. Some even suggested Whoopi Goldberg, who starred in the sleeper comedy hit "Sister Act."

Financially plagued Orion Pictures, sensing an opportunity, dusted off the long-delayed "Love Field," starring Pfeiffer as a Dallas housewife obsessed with President Kennedy. Their strategy paid off: Pfeiffer received a nomination.

The great French actress Catherine Deneuve, whose work includes "The Last Metro" and "Repulsion," was cited for "Indochine." The film received mixed reviews, but Deneuve was in her element as a plantation owner in war-torn Indochina. Also, she had never been nominated before.

"It's still a man's world," declares Sarandon, and most film actresses would agree. There are many reasons offered for the male dominance of starring roles.

To begin with, the vast majority of studio heads, producers, directors and writers are men, hence they think in male, not to mention macho, terms.

Studio bosses believe their target audience is male youths, hence the major themes are violence and sexual fantasies. They think that the man in the family decides which movie to see (a doubtful premise).

McDonnell

Finally, Hollywood thinks that women's themes are difficult to dramatize for mass audiences (also doubtful).

"I just don't know what it is that makes us think we can't have a story that reveals itself through the character of a woman," McDonnell said. "Women's issues aren't all that farfetched, but we're still not putting the money into them."

Here is a rundown on the candidates for best actress of 1992 A winner will be announced at Oscar ceremonies on Monday:

MARY MCDONNELL was nominated two years ago as supporting actress for her role as the white woman captured by Indians in "Dance With Wolves." In John Sayles' "Passion Fish" she portrays a soap-opera star crippled by a street accident. She returns to her Louisiana roots and wallows in self-pity until she meets a woman with a past, played by Alfre woodard.

The actress gave ample credit for her nomination to Woodard and to writer-director Sayles — "I don't think there is any writer who hears as clearly the way human beings really are."

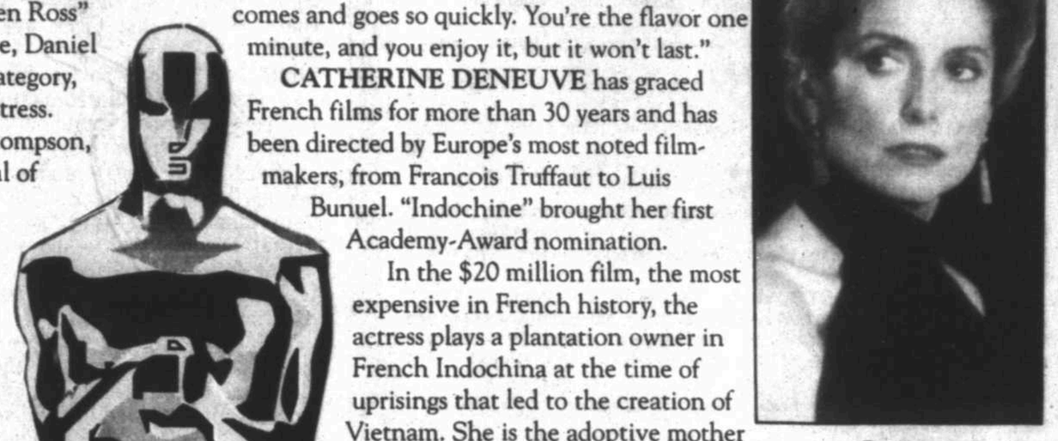

"It was like playing a good ball game," McDonnell said. "You knew whatever you threw she would catch it. She might do something unexpected, but you could deal with it."

EMMA THOMPSON is a first-time nominee, chosen for her role as the free-thinking intellectual who marries the wealthy Anthony Hopkins in "Howards End." The winner of a Golden Globe and most critics' awards, she appears the favorite for best actress.

A one-time comedy star on British television, Thompson became known to American audiences in a pair of films directed by her husband, Kenneth Branagh: "Henry V" and "Dead Again."

After "Howards End," she appeared in another Branagh movie, "Peter's Friends," and in the spring will be seen again with her husband in an adaptation of Shakespeare's "Much Ado About Nothing."

"It's such a shot in the arm," Thompson said of the nomination, "but I know and Ken knows it comes and goes so quickly. You're the flavor one minute, and you enjoy it, but it won't last."

Deneuve

CATHERINE DENEUVE has graced French films for more than 30 years and has been directed by Europe's most noted filmmakers, from Francois Truffaut to Luis Bunuel. "Indochine" brought her first Academy-Award nomination.

In the $20 million film, the most expensive in French history, the actress plays a plantation owner in French Indochina at the time of uprisings that led to the creation of Vietnam. She is the adoptive mother of a native girl who becomes a revolutionary.

"Indochine" was filmed largely in Vietnam, not the kind of location where you would expect to find the ethereally beautiful Deneuve.

"I was very excited about going to Vietnam," she said. "I went there to work, which means I was able to go to the mountains and be with the people. I didn't expect such a beautiful country."

Pfeiffer

MICHELLE PFEIFFER received her third Academy nomination for "Love Field." In 1988, she was chosen for support in "Dangerous Liaisons." The following year, she was nominated for lead actress in "The Fabulous Baker Boys."

"Love Field" barely made it to Oscar eligibility; it had been delayed for two years because of Orion's bankruptcy. Miss Pfeiffer plays a Texas woman so unstrung by President Kennedy's assassination she decides to drive to the Washington funeral. She has an interracial romance during her travels.

"I like the movie very much," the actress said in a recent magazine interview. "I think that its message, if it has one, is one of hope and crossing boundaries — of sex, of race, of class.

The film's problems began early. Denzel Washington considered "Love Field" but dropped out a week before production because he found the role too passive. Dennis Haysbert was cast. Filming was shortened because of Orion's growing troubles. A February 1992 release was postponed. Finally the film was released late last year with hopes of an Academy nomination for Miss Pfeiffer.

Sarandon

SUSAN SARANDON is another three-time nominee, for "Atlantic City," "Thelma and Louise" and now "Lorenzo's Oil." In the new movie, based on actual events, she and Nick Nolte are parents of a boy stricken by a mysterious ailment. They struggle against the medical establishment to seek a medicine that saves the son from certain death.

Oddly, she played a role that was designed for Michelle Pfeiffer, who left the project to prowl as Catwoman in "Batman Returns."

Miss Sarandon admitted she has had to struggle for roles, often being second choice:

"Sometimes I get cast in things that they can't quite figure out who to get. The 'Bull Durham' people wouldn't 'read,' wouldn't audition. Someone else was cast for 'White Palace.' when I got pregnant she switched to a part I was supposed to do, and I did that one. But I'm not going to look a gift horse in the mouth, that's for sure.

"It's taken a long time to get to roles that are really interesting. I spent a lot of my time being overqualified. I guess 'Bull Durham' was the turning point for me. I had to really grovel for that. I had to pay my trip to California; I had to audition all day long. I wasn't on anybody's list."

NOTE — Rating system for the film list: 4 stars — Don't miss it; 3 stars — worth your while; 2 stars — Has it moments; 1 star — If you must

N.Y. Times News Service

ALADDIN: Another endlessly entertaining animated feature from Walt Disney, buoyed by Robin Williams' energetically inventive turn as the Genie who helps a poor street kid named Aladdin surmount the evil plotting of Jafar and win the love of the Sultan's daughter Jasmine. Dazzling color and breathtaking animation combine with nonstop laughs and spritely songs. G. Rating: 4 stars.

BORN YESTERDAY: While not the most sparkling, sophisticated satire — indeed, it's not very funny at all — this new adaptation of Garson Kanin's venerable political romance is a low-key charmer. And Melanie Griffith, although unlikely to win an Oscar as Judy Holliday did for playing Billie Dawn, does her most winsome, winning work since "Working Girl." PG. Rating: 3 stars.

CB4: Chris Rock co-wrote and stars in this scattershot satire of the rap music world. He plays a nice, middle class kid who makes a fortune pretending to be a gangsta rapper. Phil Hartman and Chris Elliott are part of the talented ensemble, but the movie is surprisingly toothless and too diffuse to be an effective showbiz comedy. R. Rating: 2 stars

THE CRYING GAME: Irish director Neil Jordan has crafted the most surprising and humane film of the year out of the unlikely building blocks of death, loss, blind hate and aching loneliness. Stephen Rea plays an unwisely compassionate, Irish Republican Army terrorist who's drawn to the girlfriend (Jaye Davidson) of a black British soldier his cell kidnapped. The political becomes profoundly personal as the mismatched couple discovers one another's secrets. R. Rating: 4 stars

FALLING DOWN: Michael Douglas plays an everynerd who snaps one day in a traffic jam, starts walking through L.A. and collects a growing arsenal of weapons and hysterical white guy complaints. Joel Schumacher's ("Flatliners") film is superficial, prejudicial and intriguingly gripping — this guy may be a mental case, but there are too many of us who know exactly how he feels. Robert Duvall plays the easygoing cop on his trail; Barbara Hershey is the worried ex-wife he's determined to visit. R. Rating: 3 stars

Frank Capra, whose "It Happened One Night" swept the major Academy Awards for 1934, thought the Oscars were a great public relations gimmick, "the most wonderful thing that has ever been thought of for advertising."

Marlene Dietrich, who was never nominated, scoffed that "the awarding of Oscars is one of the greatest frauds of the century." She held a special contempt for what she called "the Deathbed Award," in which the academy makes up for decades of neglect by giving an honorary Oscar at the last possible minute.

When you get one of those, she said, "that's how you know you're dying." (Tasteless, but true. Last year's honorary lifetime award winner, Satyajit Ray, actually accepted from the hospital bed where he died just three weeks later.)

And Rob Lowe, who has never even been in a nominated picture, was perhaps most astute of all. Looking forward to his opening number for the 1989 Oscar show — the one in which he and Snow White sang "Proud Mary" so badly that Disney sued — he said, "Being asked to perform at the Academy Awards is like being asked to the White House."

Don't laugh. The Oscars often resemble political campaigns, filled with high-blown rhetoric, slick show-biz imagery and blithe disregard for reality. The Academy Awards, to be broadcast Monday night at 9 on ABC, pretend to be artistic in exactly the way Hillary Clinton pretended to bake cookies. And who are we to argue with success?

It doesn't hurt to admit the truth, though: we love the Oscars as much as we love the movies, but not for the reasons the academy would like to think. It's the horse race, the glitz and the tackiness — all the Hollywood Babylon aspects — that make the Academy Awards so irresistible. There are only two requirements for enjoying the Oscars: a healthy irreverence and a television.

If an Oscar were handed out in a forest and there were no TV cameras to capture it, the award might as well not exist. The Academy Awards ceremony is a giant photo op, which will be watched in 90 countries by about one billion people, all of them keeping sharp eyes out for those precious moments of unexpected trashy hilarity.

Consider how last year's self-possessed show has largely faded from memory. What endures is the undignified image of Jack Palance doing push-ups onstage. The only memorable dress was not one of the sophisticated black numbers chosen by Fred Hayman of Beverly Hills, the official Oscar fashion coordinator; it was Geena Davis's tacky parody of a cancan dancer's outfit.

The only hairdo worth noticing was Juliette Lewis's cornrows, and the only acceptance speech that stood out was Jonathan Demme's because he said "Um" so many times while accepting the award for best director.

If the official academy line — that the awards are about artistic excellence and the recognition of one's peers — makes these memorable events seem like guilty pleasures, enjoy them. Just remember how much the Oscars are about raising an artist's price for the next film, and let a handful of Hollywood insiders worry about whether Al or Jack will win. We have no stake in this unless we've bet in the office pool; we're not going to meet Al or Jack at Spago's later.

Yet the entertainment press acts as if the Academy Awards were as momentous as a Presidential race. And, like recent political campaigns, the Oscars have been increasingly defined by television. Every February, the nominations are announced at 5:30 a.m. Los Angeles time to make the morning talk shows. Possible nominees no longer have to wait for the phone to ring. The announcements are covered live on CNN, like the Persian Gulf war, and come complete with instant "expert" analysis and handicapping.

One show-biz analyst assumed a tone of high seriousness and pronounced that the Oscars are not about commercialism but art; the evidence was that "Batman Returns" and "Lethal Weapon 3" were not among the best-picture nominees. (Try explaining that to the academy voters who nominated "Ghost" a few years back.)

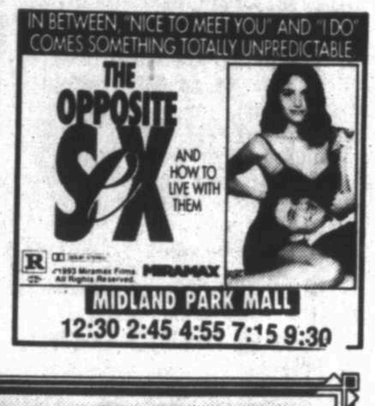

In the past decade, Oscar night on television has assumed that waiting-for-the-winner breathlessness usually reserved for elections. The E! channel will have a 25-hour Oscar marathon, beginning four hours before the ceremony begins; their anchors will be ready to interview celebrities walking into the auditorium long before anyone recognizable gets there.

OSCAR: 2 books plumb backstage Academy gossip

"Entertainment Tonight" follows one nominee around all day and shows anxiety-filled highlights on their next program; they have occasionally followed a long-shot winner, like Brenda Fricker, who was named best supporting actress for "My Left Foot" a few years back.

Barbara Walters, who happens to be on the same network that broadcasts the awards show, has become part of the package. She always precedes the ceremony with a special in which she interviews at least one nominee. (Last year she talked to Anthony Hopkins, who won the best-actor award; this year she has lined up Denzel Washington, nominated as best actor for "Malcolm X.")

And when winners are finally announced, television technology even lets viewers watch all the nominees fidget and fake-smile on camera at once. (This is where a VCR comes in handy, so you can play back the moment four times and analyze each loser's expression individually.) All that's missing is concession speeches.

All this pretense to seriousness ignores what most moviegoers know: Oscar winners come and go, but the dish about them remains forever. The very titles of two new books suggest that we are fascinated not with the Academy Awards but with backstage gossip about them.

Anthony Holden's "Behind the Oscar: The Secret History of the Academy Awards" doesn't live up to its lurid title, but its gossipy little heart is in the right place. It devotes pages to the way Joan Crawford campaigned against Bette Davis and possibly cost Davis an Oscar for "Whatever Happened to Baby Jane?"

"Inside Oscar: The Unofficial History of the Academy Awards" is an updated edition of Mason Wiley and Damien Bona's deliciously detailed year-by-year account of who won, who might have won, who campaigned hard. They have the wit to quote what Lillian Gish said when she was not nominated for the 1987 film "The Whales of August": "Now I won't have to go and lose to Cher."

Let's assume she meant it as a compliment, because Cher is one of the Academy Award immortals — not because she won an Oscar for "Moonstruck," but because years before she wore that Indian-porcupine headdress, with the bra that looked like a birdcage and the skirt that was slung around her hips. (Now, there's someone who understands the show-biz soul of the Oscars.)

Compare this savvy with the superficially irreverent yet deeply earnest approach in yet a third new book, "Alternate Oscars," in which Danny Peary tells who won and who he thinks should have won. To play that game is to fall into the Oscar trap, pretending that the awards have anything to do with quality or art.

To play that game can also be fun, which accounts for all the Oscar pools and parties. Sometimes second-guessing even evokes a smart comment. After Martin Scorsese's "Goodfellas" lost the best director and best picture awards to Kevin Costner's "Dances With Wolves," Harvey Keitel said of the loser, "Maybe he got what he deserves — exclusion from the mediocre."

But more often, soothsaying and analyzing takes on an appropriately absurd tone. As Miss Piggy wailed to Johnny Carson on one Oscar show, "It's because I'm a pig, isn't it? I did not get the nomination for best actress because I'm a pig!"

After 1988, the year of the now-classic Rob and Snow number, the academy brought in its current producer, Gilbert Cates, whose aim was to make the television show more dignified. That approach makes it harder to find those Babylon moments, but it can't disguise the tacky appeal and commercial heart of the Oscars.

For all the overheated talk about the influx of independent films among nominees this year (the kind of talk that has come around many times before, most recently in 1987 when "A Room With a View" and "Platoon" were nominated), this is a typical Oscar list.

The best-picture nominees include: one sentimental favorite, "Unforgiven"; one token art film, "Howards End"; one shamelessly middlebrow movie, "Scent of a Woman." So what's new? All the nominations together have produced only one burning question for all of us settled around the television: will Jaye Davidson, nominated for best supporting actor in "The Crying Game," wear one of his character's frocks from the movie, or will he finally show up dressed as a man?

And despite the politically correct theme for this year's show, "Oscar Salutes Women and the Movies," it is clear that the academy's idea of glamour was borrowed from Las Vegas long ago.

Monday night, after a film celebrating women behind the scenes of the movies, Liza Minnelli will kick off the evening's first production number with a specially written song about Oscar and women. It may not be Snow White, but we can hope.

REVIEWS: 2 Best Pictures remain

can poachers plays a little like an African version of "The Night of the Hunter," only with a boring villain. Adults will likely find the movie rather pedestrian and film with grating lapses in logic. Preceded by the fairly amusing Roger Rabbit short "Trail Mix-Up." PG. Rating: 2 stars

FIRE IN THE SKY: "Based on a true story," so they say, of aliens abducting a logger in Arizona in the '70s. The nifty flashback finale of the abduction — sort of "Close Encounters" meets "Alien" — doesn't compensate for the 90 minutes of boring exposition that precede it. And instead of exploring how the experience affected the logger, which might have been nominally interesting, the movie plods through the days between his disappearance and his return. PG-13. Rating: 2 stars

FOREVER YOUNG: Mel Gibson is at his most matinee-idol adorable as a daredevil test pilot who, in 1939, demands to be a guinea pig in a top-secret cryogenics experiment. He's supposed to be in deep freeze for a year; instead, our sleeping beauty wakes up 50 years later — in a brave new world of answering machines, Thighmasters and fatherless kids (Elijah Wood) with plucky moms (Jamie Lee Curtis). PG

GROUNDHOG DAY: Bill Murray's ever-funny unpolished glibness carries this comedy about a jerk weatherman who is forced to live one day — Groundhog Day — over and over, and the hilarious ways in which he deals with his bizarre situation. Andie MacDowell and Chris Elliott co-star. PG. Rating: 3 stars

HOME ALONE 2: LOST IN NEW YORK: The same movie as the all-time comedy hit, but it cost more. This time, Macaulay Culkin defends Manhattan against the hapless crooks played by Joe Pesci and Daniel Stern, but it's amazing how little invention writer John Hughes and director Chris Columbus fit onto the presumably wider canvas. "Another Christmas in the trenches," the 12-year-old hero mutters at one point. Parents whose undiscerning kids drag them to this will know exactly what he means. PG. Rating: 2 stars

HOMEWARD BOUND: THE INCREDIBLE JOURNEY: A remake of the Disney nature adventure, in which two dogs and a cat travel through the wilderness to get back to their owners. This time, the animals sound like Michael J. Fox, Sally Field and Don Ameche. More comic than the original, but with the same, kid-pleasing blend of action and maudlin sentimentality. G. Rating: 3 stars

HOWARDS END: This tragicomic examination of Edwardian England class interaction is superbly acted (Emma Thompson, Anthony Hopkins, Helena Bonham Carter, Vanessa Redgrave). PG. Rating: 4 stars

NOWHERE TO RUN: Misguided Jean-Claude Van Damme vehicle incongruously and unsuccessfully attempts to blend mayhem and sentimentin this story of a prison escapee who helps a single mother (Rosanna Arquette) and her rheumy-eyed son (Kieran Culkin) protect their farm from a sinister land developer (Joss Ackland). R. Rating: 1 star

POINT OF NO RETURN: This virtual scene-for-scene remake of 1990's "La Femme Nikita" has maybe one advantage over the earlier movie — no subtitles. Otherwise, it's the same implausible hokum, with Bridget Fonda playing a sociopathic punk transformed into a steely, sophisticated assassin by a secret government agency. Some campy moments and over-the-top melodrama have been added, which, if not exactly helping, certainly don't hurt. R. Rating: 2 stars

RICH IN LOVE: Perhaps the first movie to turn a dysfunctional family into a warm fuzzy, this movie from the makers of "Driving Miss Daisy" (director Bruce Beresford and screenwriter Alfred Uhry) strives for the sort of warm magic their earlier collaboration engendered, but instead create a work far too mannered to connect emotionally. It's the story of a young girl (Kathryn Erbe) who learns that change may actually be good for you after her mother leaves her father. It's a creditable message, but delivered here too benignly to have much impact. PG. Rating: 2 stars

SOMMERSBY: Richard Gere is the laconic Confederate soldier whose return triggers a profound change in his town's ailing fortunes. Jodie Foster portrays Laurel, the self-reliant woman who had been expecting widowhood to the extent that she had formed a bond with a pious farmhand named Orin (Bill Pullman). In nearly every technical respect, "Sommersby" is handsomely constructed — there's a grace and sense of scale that instills the film with a nobility the narrative itself doesn't earn. PG. Rating: 2 stars

TEENAGE MUTANT NINJA TURTLES III: More of the same, only more confusing. Writer-/director Stuart Gillard, thinking he'll go artsy on us and make a reptilian "Yojimbo," slapped together this muddle concerning time travel, 17th-century Japan, corrupt gunrunners, social rebellion and bonding with kids. PG-13. Rating: 1½ stars

UNTAMED HEART: Understated direction and terrific performances, particularly Marisa Tomei's sensitive, heartrending work, buoy this otherwise humdrum weepie about two lonely hearts making good. Tomei stars as a Minneapolis diner waitress unlucky at love; Christian Slater plays a painfully shy, socially awkward bus boy with a congenital heart problem. PG-13. Rating: 3 stars

Facts About The BIBLE BY JOHN LEHTI

WHO WROTE THE BIBLE?

AUTHORSHIP OF THE BIBLE, NATURALLY, CAN NOT BE ASCRIBED TO ANY ONE PERSON, OR GROUP OF PERSONS, BUT, WHEN WE VIEW ITS AUTHORSHIP CLOSELY, WE CAN ONLY GASP WITH AMAZEMENT OVER THE VAST ARRAY OF PARTICIPANTS WHO, WRITING OVER A PERIOD OF 1,500 YEARS, CAME FROM EVERY WALK OF LIFE! ASSUREDLY, ALL OF THEM WROTE UNDER THE INSPIRATION OF DIVINE GUIDANCE FOR, ALTHOUGH SOME WERE INTELLECTUALLY GIFTED, OTHERS WERE HARDLY LITERATE ENOUGH TO FASHION THE WORDS THEY WROTE! THEY WERE:

KINGS, PEASANTS, PRIESTS, FISHERMEN, SHEPHERDS, GENERALS, LAWYERS, DOCTORS, TAX COLLECTORS, POLITICIANS, NOBLEMEN, MARTYRS, SOLDIERS, AND SLAVES!

THEY USED EVERY AVAILABLE FORM OF EXPRESSION:

PROSE, POETRY, PARABLES, PRAYERS, SERMONS, SONGS, HISTORY, LAW, LETTERS, DIALOGUE, ANECDOTES, RITUAL, ROMANCE, BIOGRAPHY, EULOGY, ALLEGORY, PROPHECY!

THEY WROTE IN WIDELY VARIED SITUATIONS:

IN PRISONS AND PALACES, CITIES, TOWNS, AND VILLAGES, DANK CAVES, AND ARID DESERTS, BY RIVERS, ON MOUNTAINS, IN DEFEAT, IN VICTORY, IN EXILE!

THEY WROTE ON ALMOST EVERY SUBJECT FOR MANKIND:

GOD AND THE DEVIL, CHRIST AND THE HOLY SPIRIT, CREATION AND SIN, THIEVERY AND CHARITY, HATEFULNESS AND KINDNESS, HONESTY AND TRICKERY, PROPHETS FALSE AND TRUE, LIFE, DEATH, HEAVEN, HELL!

ABOVE ALL, THEY WROTE OF GOD'S PROMISES AND PLANS FOR HIS UNIVERSE, AND OF HIS LOVE FOR US, HIS CHILDREN... WHAT A MAJESTIC HERITAGE IS OURS—THE HOLY BIBLE!

NEXT WEEK: HOW WISE ARE WE ABOUT THE THREE WISE MEN?

Protestants don't agree with Clinton

WASHINGTON (AP) — Numerous Protestant leaders have criticized the Clinton criticized the Clinton administration for continuing a policy of naming an ambassador to the Vatican, but the head of Roman Catholic bishops applauded it.

"It is gratifying that the government ... continues to recognize the value to our people of diplomatic relations with the Holy See, whose moral leadership on behalf of peace, justice, human development and human rights has been so universally praised," said Archbishop William H. Keeler of Baltimore, president of the National Conference of Catholic Bishops.

But protests came from a range of Protestant leaders after President Clinton named Boston Mayor Raymond Flynn to that post, continuing a policy established in 1984 by former President Reagan.

The Rev. James M. Dunn, executive director of the Baptist Joint Committee was among those objecting.

RELIGIOUS EDUCATION IS IMPORTANT TO UNITARIANS

Do you want your child to learn a sense of right and wrong without a sense of fear or guilt?

Do you want your child to seek truth with understanding and tolerance of other religions? If you have been looking for religious education based on reason and example, not dogma or fear of "eternal damnation," we may be of interest.

RELIGION IN BRIEF

■ Re-enactment planned

In observance of Maundy Thursday, First United Methodist Church will re-enact "The Last Supper" at 7:30 p.m. April 8 in the sanctuary, at Main Street and Ohio Avenue.

Costumes, set and the poses of Jesus and the disciples will be depicted as in Leonardo Da Vinci's 1497 painting.

Afterwards, communion will be served in the chapel. The public is invited to attend.

■ Church plans seminar

A special seminar entitled "Help for Blended Families" is set for 7 to 9 p.m. April 6 in the Family Center, Golf Course Road Church of Christ.

The seminar will focus on situations affecting the blended family such as communication, discipline, non-custodial parent issues and expectations.

In addition, the church is presenting from 7 to 8 p.m. each Wednesday in April a series of lessons on "Strengthening Blended Families." The lessons will be conducted by Sheila and Tom Vermillion.

All interested parties are invited to attend.

■ Women Aglow to meet

ODESSA — The Odessa Chapter of Women's Aglow will hold its monthly meeting at 10 a.m. April 7 at the Holiday Inn Parkway, 3001 E. Highway 80.

Speaker for the meeting will be Mrs. Ignacio Pena. Kathy Pena is a long-time member of West 10th Full Gospel Baptist Church and is prominent in area church prayer groups.

She is the vice president of Outreach on the Permian Basin Area Board of Women's Aglow International.

■ Christians to march

West Texas Christians will gather to march in the streets proclaiming "Jesus is Lord" June 12.

Churches from all denominations are invited to become a part of the "International March for Jesus." To know more about the event call the March for Jesus number, 683-7055.

All participants will begin gathering at the parking lots across from the federal building downtown at 9:30 a.m.. the march will begin at 10 a.m. June 12.

■ Author to discuss book

Tim LaHaye will be presenting the message of his book, "How to Win Over Depression," at Kelview Heights Baptist CHurch beginning Sunday.

LaHaye will be speaking at 9, 10 and 11 a.m. The seminar will continue at 6:30 p.m. Sunday and at 7 p.m. Monday and Tuesday.

LaHaye is an author, minister, television and radio commentator and family life speaker. For 25 years, he pastored a church in San Diego, Calif., which grew to three locations. He founded two accredited Christian high schools, a Christian school system of 10 Christian schools and founded Christian Heritage College.

In 1971, he founded Family Life Ministries, which he currently serves as president. He has conducted more than 800 two-day Family Life Seminars throughout the United States and Canada.

In 1985, he and his wife, Beverly, who is president of Concerned Women for America, moved their office to Washington, D.C. There he produces the Capitol Report, a Christian conservative commentary on news events that have an impact on the family, traditional moral values and religious liberty.

In addition, he produces a monthly Washington Education Report for Christian schools to copy and send to their "constituents" to help keep them sold on the need to provide their children a biblically-based education.

More recently, he began producing the bi-monthly World Prophecy Report.

■ Seminar scheduled

LUBBOCK — A two-day Christian writers seminar will be held at the Sentinel Bookstore, 4835 50th St., May 13-14.

The workshop will be taught by Donna Goodrick of Mesa, Ariz., author of 10 books and more than 500 short stories, articles and devotionals.

The seminar will begin at 6:30 p.m. that Friday with a three-hour workshop on "Writing and Selling Devotionals and Fillers." That Saturday a day-long workshop will be held for beginners and advanced writers who want to improve their skills.

Cost before May 1 is $20 for Friday and $30 for Saturday and $50 for both. Cost after May 1 will be $20 for Friday, $45 for Saturday and $60 for both.

The Rev. Robert Walter will speak on "The Heart of Christ Beating with Love."

Baptists offer answer to Masonic question

By George W. Cornell
Associated Press Writer

Southern Baptist leaders suggest that a quarrel over whether it's proper for Christians to belong to Masonic lodges should be settled in the old-time Baptist way — leave it up to the individual.

That's the recommendation of directors of the denomination's Atlanta-based Home Missions Board, which had been assigned a year ago to look into the billowing dispute.

Additional controversy developed recently over the initial handling of the study itself after the official in charge of it was accused of collusion with Masons. He was bumped from the job.

Afterward, board directors moved ahead to formulate their own report, saying that some Freemasonry teachings are compatible with Christianity, but others are not.

Belonging is a "matter of personal conscience," the report concludes, in keeping with the historic Baptist traditions of liberty — "the priesthood of the believer and the autonomy of the local church."

These principles had been somewhat muted after a biblical "inerrantist" wing gained control of the 15.3 million-member denomination and began excluding some local churches deemed out of line.

But in mapping a way through the thorny Masonic terrain, the home missions directors cited both compatabilities and pitfalls of belonging, and said it's up to individual judgment.

"Many teachings of Freemasonry are not compatible with Christianity and Southern Baptist doctrine," the report says, citing eight specific instances, such as "pagan or occultic' readings, use of words such as "Jah-Bull-On" as the "secret name of God," taking "bloody oaths" of obligation, and refusal of many lodges to admit blacks.

On the other hand, the report says many "tenets and teachings of some Grand Lodges could be considered compatible with, and even supportive of Christian faith and practice, such as the strong emphasis on honesty, integrity, industry and character" and insistence on belief in God.

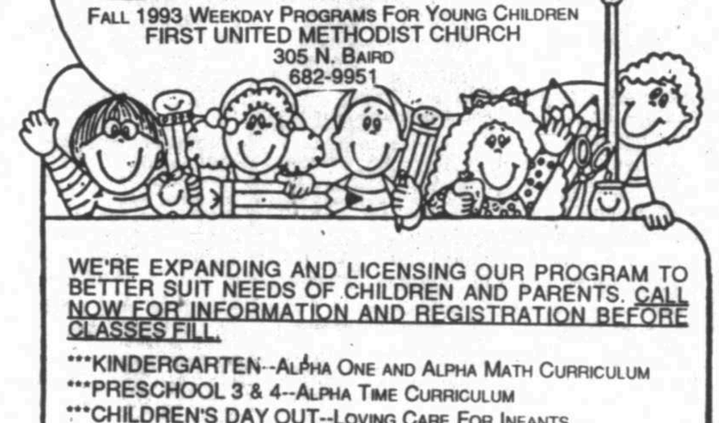

Fred Kleinknecht of Washington, head of the Masonic Scottish Rite for the Southern Jurisdiction, told Baptist Press he disagrees with points in the report that are critical of Freemasonry.

But he commended the board for "its intent to report evenhandedly on Freemasonry" and for concluding that Masonic membership is a matter of personal conscience.

The report was to be presented to the denomination's annual convention in Houston June 15-17.

There are about 5 million Masons in the worldwide fraternal order, about 2.5 million in this country.

The issue was raised among Southern Baptists by a Beaumont, Texas, physician, Larry Holly, who at the denomination's convention last year circulated booklets saying Freemasonry was "evil ... cultic and Satanic."

Investigators track Mafia through money transfers

CORLEONE, Sicily (AP) — Decades ago, investigators seeking evidence against the Mafia would look for the bones of victims in fissures of the black rock that looms over this dusty mountain town.

So deep were the crevices that not even the crows knew they held corpses.

These days, the courageous men who fight the Cosa Nostra spend less time looking for bodies and more following electronic bank transfers to tax-haven islands, or striving to pry secrets from discreet Swiss bankers.

Investigators say attacking multibillion-dollar wealth from drug trafficking, extortion and padded public contracts is the only way to beat the mob in the 1990s.

Many who were skeptical about Italy's war on the Mafia and other southern-based crime syndicates started taking it more seriously after the latest chapter in the Corleone legend.

On Jan. 15, in the middle of Palermo during rush hour, agents arrested "boss of bosses" Salvatore (Toto) Riina, 62. He had been hiding out for 23 years, at least some of the time practically under the noses of the police who hunted him.

Riina came to be feared as the "king of Corleonesi," the ruthless Mafia clan that takes its name from the town where it was based. Corleone achieved wider notoriety when Mario Puzo gave the name to his fictional American mob family in "The Godfather."

Much was made of Riina's capture, a sorely needed morale-booster for the Mafia fighters, but it may not significantly change how the Cosa Nostra does business.

"When the pope dies, you can always make another, and that way the church always stays on its feet," said Gaspare Mutolo, Riina's former bodyguard and driver, who turned state's evidence.

Others think the boss's "papacy" might continue from prison. He faces life for his conviction in absentia in 1987 of trafficking in heroin and ordering several murders.

Riina or another Corleonesi could lead the Sicilian Mafia, said Guido Lo Forte, a Palermo prosecutor.

In Lo Forte's office hangs a photograph of anti-Mafia prosecutors Giovanni Falcone and Paolo Borsellino laughing during a whispered exchange. Riina is suspected of ordering the bomb attacks last year that killed Falcone and Borsellino, Italy's two leading crusaders against the mob.

New tactics in the anti-Mafia war are largely the result of lobbying by Falcone for laws designed to be used against organized crime.

Mutolo the bodyguard, for example, is one of nearly 300 "pentiti" — Mafiosi taking advantage of a new law that guarantees protection, and a new identity if need be, in return for testimony.

Other new statutes make undercover operations possible, so police need not rely so heavily on the "pentiti." FBI agents recently trained Italian police in undercover work, a U.S. official said, on condition of anonymity.

Another of Falcone's wishes came true with the creation of DIA, an agency that gathered the best detectives from around the country into a kind of Italian-style FBI.

"We have the laws," said Gianni De Gennaro, a police investigator chosen to head the DIA. De Gennaro was the only person besides Falcone to win the confidence of Tommaso Buscetta, a Mafioso whose testimony helped convict Riina and more than 300 others in the 1987 mass trial.

Going after the Mafia is difficult, De Gennaro said, because "the more you make laws, the more they learn to get around them." He spoke by telephone from his office at DIA headquarters, a large, unmarked, partially underground complex in an affluent part of Rome.

Investigators concede the Cosa Nostra is far ahead of them in hiding illegal income.

Prosecutor Giocchino Natoli, a colleague of Lo Forte in Palermo, said the Mafia has shrewd financial counselors. With much of the Mafia wealth going to Swiss banks and such offshore refuges of the Channel Islands, Italy is lobbying other countries to ease secrecy laws, the two men said.

Switzerland lifts secrecy for certain crimes, like drug dealing, but not for criminal association, a charge that has put hundreds of Italian mobsters behind bars.

Investigators are keeping their eyes on newly free eastern Europe for signs that the Mafia launders and invests money there.

"It's virgin terrain; it's logical," De Gennaro said, but investigators report no hard evidence of extensive Mafia presence in the region so far.

More careful scrutiny of public contracts, caused by a corruption scandal, is another reason the mob looks abroad for investments. Such contracts are a standby of the Mafia, especially in poor southern Italy where public funds prop up the economy.

A new law also makes it easier for authorities to seize mob-tainted wealth.

Algerians flout tradition, advertise for mates

ALGIERS, Algeria (AP) — Young Algerians frustrated by Muslim social restrictions and a housing crisis are advertising for love and mates, homeowners preferred.

Some newspapers devote several pages to the plaints of the lovelorn and ads placed by men and women seeking marriage. For some, the only qualification is a place to live.

"Single accountant, 26, seeks woman with lodging for marriage, 25-35," said a recent ad in Le Soir d'Algerie.

In the effort to lure a mate, no resource goes unmentioned.

A woman who identified herself as a 45-year-old social worker, "practicing Muslim but does not wear veil," offered "lodging plus camping equipment."

The housing crisis in Algiers is so acute that many families live eight to a room, sleeping in shifts. It is aggravated by the increasing desire of the young to move out and start their own families.

Personal ads are common in the West and a few large Arab cities, such as Cairo, but new to Algeria. For decades before 1990, the country had only one newspaper — sober, politically correct and run by a Marxist government.

Now, papers are numerous and flourishing. They report the news, reveal secrets and serve as an outlet for the lonely.

Zouhir Mebarki, whose weekly Mag 7 was first in the field with its "Contacts" section, said the paper had to arrange for a special postal service to handle thousands of letters and ads every week.

"At the beginning, there was a moment of general surprise" about the section, the editor said. "Now, it's starting to seem normal."

Not all Algerians agree.

"I think it's degrading," said a single man of 27 who identified himself only as Nabil, an insurance agent. "Love is like death, it doesn't warn you when it will come."

Kamel Kedia, a 29-year-old taxi driver, said he would never place an ad for a wife, but might respond to one if it offered lodging and "the woman was a little bit pretty, too."

"A house and charm, that's happiness," he said.

Ads and letters reflect the constraints of a Muslim society that leave the young caught between old and new.

A scarcity of socially correct meeting places combines with increasing rejection of arranged marriages to make the anonymous newspaper search for partners a logical step.

"Contact with the other sex is difficult here, beyond the few mixed gathering places," A. Said from Bechar wrote to Mag 7. "Thank God there are newspapers where people can write about their misfortunes or their happiness and find a way out of their isolation."

Le Soir d'Algerie's "Friendship Club" has a section for people who want to renew contact after chance encounters that went no farther because of timidity or the presence of a family member.

Imprisoned aborigines work up sweat on hiking trail

ALICE SPRINGS, Australia (AP) — Prison inmates sweat heavily under the desert sun, clearing another section of what officials say will be one of the world's best hiking trails.

But this is no forced-labor chain gang. All are aborigines who put their names on a waiting list to work outdoors for the equivalent of 27 cents a day.

"It's hot, but being out here is better than jail," said Sam, who acted as spokesman.

Sam has three months left of an alcohol-related offense and is typical of the men. They are low-risk prisoners — no one with a sex or violence conviction is allowed — and none has tried to escape, despite plenty of chances.

The program started in 1987 under the direction of Tony Bohning, superintendent of prisons for the Northern Territory. His jail in Alice Springs usually holds 130 to 170 prisoners, 80 percent of them aborigines, with little or nothing to do.

"I had an abundance of prisoners and a lack of work," he said. "We took trusted prisoners out and worked on the Ghan railway" that runs from Adelaide on the south coast across the Australian Outback to Alice Springs.

Bohning said everyone benefits from the program and he would like to see it extended to other parts of the country.

"The goal is to break the cycle of going to jail, getting released and going to jail again," he said. "This gives the inmates an inch of a chance to gain some kind of a work ethic and work skills to take back to their communities."

About half a dozen white inmates have participated since the program began, Bohning said.

When work on the railway was done, the Northern Territory Conservation Department came up with a new project: the Larapinta Trail, to stretch 135 miles from Alice Springs to Mount Zeil, linking seven existing attractions, when it is finished in five years.

The Larapinta, with 13 sections and about 15 access points with water sources, is intended to attract both overnight walkers and long-distance hikers to the newly created West MacDonnells National Park.

"It'll be a shorter version of the Appalachian Trail in the United States," said Alan Ginns, senior park planner for the Conservation Department. "Very few people are going to walk it at one shot."

Ginns said hikers, both Australians and foreigners, have been asking for years for more opportunities to see Australia's rugged "Red Center" up close.

"But they were terrified of going Outback solo," he said. "On the Larapinta, there's something for everybody."

Pope urges clergy to keep vows

VATICAN CITY (AP) — With his church beset by sex scandals involving priests and bishops, Pope John Paul II Thursday asked forgiveness for their "failings" and urged clergy to keep their vow of celibacy.

The pope made the call in a special letter to priests worldwide.

"We are aware of the fragility of the vessels in which we carry this treasure," the pope said, referring to Catholic priests and their mandatory vow to forsake sexual relations.

"We pray ... that we may not fall into doubt or sow doubts in others, or become — God forbid! — supporters of different choices and of a different kind of spirituality for the priestly life and ministry," the pope said. He apparently was referring to church dissidents who are lobbying to allow priests to marry.

Some of his words were originally part of a speech he made to European bishops in December, but he was repeating them now, the Vatican said, to encourage "further study of the problems associated with priestly spirituality."

The letter was timed for release on Holy Thursday, April 8, the anniversary of Jesus' Last Supper, which the Church considers the institution of the priesthood.

In one of the biggest sex scandals to stain the Church, three women in New Mexico recently said they began a relationship with Santa Fe's Archbishop Robert Sanchez while they were in their teens. Other recent scandals in the U.S. church have involved sex abuse of boys by priests.

Academy picks veterans, upstarts, winner

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Only one thing can be counted on in this year's competition for the Academy Award for best actor: The winner will make one of the year's best stories.

ROBERT DOWNEY JR. took on the challenge of "Chaplin" after a busy but undistinguished career in teenage and yuppie comedies. Son of underground filmmaker Robert Downey and a one-season cast member of "Saturday Night Live," the actor watched all the Chaplin footage he could find.

"I went into it head-first, then down to the guts," he remarked. "You can't think your way through a role like this.

"I never worked my butt off before. This film was really my crucible. I was either going to be dust or iron on the way out. This is about a lot more than making a film. It's about the transition from being a boy to being a man."

CLINT EASTWOOD's role as William Munny in "Unforgiven" prompted reviewers to compare it to John Wayne's Rooster Cogburn in "True Grit," which won Duke his only Oscar. Both played geriatric Western gunmen, showing their age but coming through when needed.

Eastwood guided the film as producer and director as well as star. Unlike his taciturn characters from "A Fistful of Dollars" to "High Plains Drifter," Munny is fallible. The only laughs result from the his fumbling attempts to mount his horse and his failed target practice.

"(Munny) was definitely rusty," Eastwood said. "A lot of things in 'Unforgiven' have never happened in Westerns in the past, at least the ones I was involved with."

AL PACINO so far has proved "always a bridesmaid" with Oscar. He has been nominated twice as supporting actor ("The Godfather" and "Dick Tracy") and four times as leading actor ("Serpico," "The Godfather Part II," "Dog Day Afternoon," ". . . And Justice for All"). This year he has doubled his chances, nominated for lead actor in "Scent of a Woman" and supporting actor in "Glengarry Glen Ross."

As the blind, bitter army veteran, Pacino won a Golden Globe in January for best dramatic actor. Customarily shy of the spotlight, he faced reporters afterward and commented:

"This kind of character comes along rarely; it's rare when you get a chance to play that. A role like this affords you so much opportunity to have fun with it, because that's the nature of the part."

STEPHEN REA found an ideal role as Fergus the IRA volunteer in "The Crying Game." The actor was born to a Protestant family in Belfast, Northern Ireland, so he has known the Irish turmoil since childhood. His wife, Dolours Price, is a former IRA member who served eight years in prison for her role in a 1973 car bombing.

In the film ('The Crying Game'), Fergus (Stephen Rea) is an unwilling participant in a kidnapping and later is pursued by his former co-conspirators.

In the film, Fergus is an unwilling participant in a kidnapping and later is pursued by his former co-conspirators. Rea admits his sympathy to the Republican cause but he added in a magazine interview:

"I'm not an activist, and I don't believe in violence. What I bring is an understanding of how decent, ordinary people get involved and how that spiraled into something out of control. I've tried ot express my experiences as an Irish person rather than just be an empty vessel as an actor."

DENZEL WASHINGTON graduated from the TV series "St. Elsewhere" to become one of the screen's best young actors. His role as a Civil War soldier in "Glory" brought him the Oscar for best supporting actor of 1989. He was also nominated in 1987 as supporting actor for his role as South African martyr Steve Biko in "Cry Freedom."

Washington's role in "Malcolm X" came naturally. In 1981, he had portrayed the black leader in the New Federal Theater play, "When the Chickens Come Home to Roost." He had immersed himself in the Malcolm X legend, and he did the same for Spike Lee's film.

"It was a big, big job," Washington said. "But it was the easiest film I ever did; it was so fascinating that it went by quickly. It was the first film I'd done that I didn't want to end."

Supporting Actress

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The Academy's supporting actress nominations, which include four foreigners, symbolizes the continuing decline in character roles for women in the male-oriented Hollywood movies.

Three English women — Joan Plowright, Vanessa Redgrave and Miranda Richardson — and Australian Judy Davis were nominated, along with a lone American, Marisa Tomei.

The Motion Picture Academy of Arts and Sciences established the awards for supporting actor and actress in 1936 to recognize the unsung heroes and heroines whose experience and skill lent substance to the Hollywood product.

JUDY DAVIS won the best reviews and the most critics' awards for her performance in a movie filled with stars and beset with controversy. "Husbands and Wives" was completed before the Woody Allen-Mia Farrow scandal erupted.

The Australian, who was nominated as best actress for "A Passage to India" in 1984, plays a wife who is unhinged by a sudden divorce and warily starts the dating game. She remarked that director-writer Woody Allen was not overly protective of his dialogue.

"He wanted improvisation. He would normally say, 'Whatever you need to make it real, say it, as long as it creates a feeling of life and natural conversation.'"

JOAN PLOWRIGHT's nomination for "Enchanted April" climaxes a career that was long eclipsed by the shadow of her late husband, Laurence Olivier. After appearing opposite Olivier and other English greats on the stage, she has comfortably eased into character roles in films.

In "Enchanted April," she plays a crotchety lady who mellows on a vacation with young people in Italy.

"My character is a dragon lady at the beginning, a lady who has opted out from life," she said. "Because she's a widow and 60, she figures she's no longer of any use to the world, and she's going to live in the past."

Miss Plowright is also a 60-year-old widow, but she does not revel in nostalgia. She has appeared in "I Love You to Death," "Avalon" and other films and presides over the Olivier Foundation, which encourages drama and education. She also keeps busy with her three children and two grandchildren.

VANESSA REDGRAVE was voted her sixth Academy nomination for her role as Anthony Hopkins' dying wife in "Howards End." She was nominated as lead actress in "Morgan!" (1966), "Isadora" (1968), "Mary, Queen of Scots" (1971) and "The Bostonians" (1984). Her only previous Oscar was for support in "Julia" (1977). Her acceptance speech attacking "Jewish hoodlums" evoked some of the few boos ever heard at the awards.

A firebrand in politics, Miss Redgrave is conscientious about her work.

"I always believed that the artist had a special responsibility — being able to communicate the truth," she once said in an interview with the AP. "You can't do that if you aren't fighting for it. So it's a tough line."

MIRANDA RICHARDSON has enjoyed a glorious year in movies, appearing in diverse roles in three important films: "Enchanted April," "The Crying Game" and "Damage." She scored her nomination for her role as the object of Jeremy Irons' perverse passion in Louis Malle's "Damage."

After receiving the Golden Globe for supporting actress, she commented, "I've just done more film lately than I have before. It feels different in England; there is no film industry as such at the moment. But there are good stories out there. I think people appreciate good stories."

Born in Southport, Miss Richardson studied at the Bristol Old Vic Theater School and has appeared extensively in English theater and television. Her films include Steven Spielberg's "Empire of the Sun" and Neil Jordan's "The Soldier's Wife."

MARISA TOMEI collected her first nomination as Joe Pesci's fiery companion in "My Cousin Vinny." Her courtroom testimony about the inner workings of automobiles provided one of the film's highlights.

Miss Tomei grew up in the Flatbush, and her lawyer father and English teacher mother worked to get rid of her Brooklyn accent. She had to learn it for the role as Mona Lisa Vito, Pesci's steady girlfriend for 10 years. No problem. "It's in the cells," she says.

She studied theater at the Edward R. Murrow High School in Brooklyn and briefly at Boston University — "Acting just lit me up, it just lit me on fire."

She received practical training with stints on the soap opera "As the World Turns" and the sitcome "A Different World." She is currently appearing in "Untamed Heart" with Christian Slater and in the role of actress Mabel Normand in "Chaplin."

Oscar Countdown

Hackman

Supporting Actor

LOS ANGELES (AP) — For years the Motion Picture Academy bestowed its award for supporting actor on veteran character players who were overdue for recognition. This year the race features three actors who normally star in their own movies: Al Pacino, Jack Nicholson and Gene Hackman. All are stars who earn multiple millions per film. Also in the race are two virtual unknowns, Jaye Davidson and David Paymer.

JAYE DAVIDSON, who was totally unknown before "The Crying Game," is the most talked-about nominee of the year. The reason: The nature of his role causes gasps from audiences when his secret is revealed.

The only previous acting experience for the 25-year-old Londoner was playing Pluto for the Walt Disney Co.

He had been a sales clerk, hairdresser and model before he was spotted at a wrap party for "Edward II." Asked if he wanted to try for a role in Neil Jordan's movie, Davidson said no. After losing his job at a fashion house, he reconsidered.

"The more away from the norm you are, the fewer parts there are," he told an interviewer. "So I can't see myself being offered many parts."

GENE HACKMAN won the best-actor Oscar in 1971 for "The French Connection" and also has been nominated for support in "Bonnie and Clyde" (1967) and "I Never Sang for My Father" (1970), and for best actor in "Mississippi Burning" (1988). This time he has been named for his role as the sly, sadistic sheriff in Clint Eastwood's "Unforgiven."

After winning his Golden Globe as supporting actor, Hackman confessed that originally he turned down the role.

"Obviously, I don't have a very good eye for material," he said, grinning sheepishly. "I just thought that maybe it was something I didn't want to do. But Clint convinced me that it was going to be something that we could all be proud of.

"As an actor, you always try to find a piece of reality in you that you can relate to the character you're doing. Clint and I are both reasonably close to the same age. We have a history as friends going back a number of years, but we'd never worked together. So I tried to use our own relationship in a kind of subliminal way."

JACK NICHOLSON is an Oscar champion, with his 10 nominations tying with Bette Davis and Laurence Olivier (though less that Katharine Hepburn's 12). His victories have been for starring in "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" (1975) and a support role in "Terms of Endearment" (1983).

Nominated for supporting actor as the steel-hard marine commandant in "A Few Good Men," Nicholson still attracts top money. For his three scenes he was reportedly paid $5 million, which translates to $500,000 per day's work.

The cast included such younger stars as Tom Cruise, Demi Moore, Keifer Sutherland and Kevin Bacon, who were naturally in awe of Nicholson at rehearsals.

"I don't think I strike that in people," Nicholson commented modestly. "If I did, I am professionally good at disarming it. I knew a lot of these fellows and girls, so 'awe' is not a word I'd pick out of the hat."

AL PACINO, an eight-time nominee, has yet to collect an Oscar. On March 29 he could carry home two, since he is nominated for lead actor as the vitriolic blind veteran in "Scent of a Woman" and for supporting actor as the real-estate supersalesman in "Glengarry Glen Ross."

"The part in 'Glengarry Glen Ross,' which was done so brilliantly by Joe Montegna on Broadway is (perfect). When you play (playwright David) Mamet, you're sort of half-way there. Because he's a great writer."

DAVID PAYMER appeared in Billy Crystal's ambitious show biz saga, "Mr. Saturday Night." Although it failed to connect at the box office, Paymer made enough of an impression as the long-suffering brother of an ego-driven comedian to win an Academy nomination.

The actor has been working at his craft since making his debut at age 22 in a touring company of "Grease" that included Patrick Swayze and Treat Williams. He has appeared in dozens of TV series; he's a regular on ABC's "The Commish."

His movies have included "The In-Laws," "No Way Out," "Airplane II" and "Howard the Duck." Crystal chose him for "Mr. Saturday Night" after Paymer played one of the ice-cream makers in the hit "City Slickers."

Of the bickering brothers in "Mr. Saturday Night," Paymer said in a TV interview: "I do think there is love at the basis of this relationship, through and through. I'll do anything for Buddy (Crystal). Some people think I'm crazy. (Buddy's) the kind of guy who is abusive and doesn't treat you well, but he's funny, he's so funny! He's such a character that you can't resist him."

Staying on top

is ticking for Boris Yeltsin and his economic and political reforms. He faces a hostile Congress of People's Deputies and must contend with a population weary of economic hardships and political uncertainty.

With his power diminished Yeltsin's job is at risk

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP)

President Boris Yeltsin is locked in a bitter power struggle that threatens his reforms, his job and maybe the future of Russia's relations with the West.

In an effort to break his political stalemate with the Congress of People's Deputies, Yeltsin proclaimed emergency rule and asked the Russian people to reaffirm their faith in his leadership in an April 25 referendum.

He also said he wanted the people to approve a new constitution that would replace the Communist-dominated Congress with a bicameral legislature.

But the Constitutional Court ruled that Yeltsin violated the constitution by proclaiming emergency rule, opening the way for Congress to oust him by a two-thirds vote.

Although the popularly elected Yeltsin faces entrenched opposition from Congress, a recent poll indicated that 56 percent of the people trust him and 65 percent oppose removing him from office.

At an emergency session of Congress last month, hard-line legislators took advantage of discontent over the economic hardships to gain the upper hand and trim Yeltsin's powers.

Nevertheless, Yeltsin's aides have said he will go ahead with the April 25 referendum and ignore the effort to dump him.

KEY EVENTS IN TURBULENT POLITICAL CAREER

JUNE 1991
Wins Russia's first presidential election with 57 percent of the vote. Takes office in July.

AUGUST 1991
Hard-liners attempt to oust Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev. Yeltsin musters opposition to the coup, emerges as the country's most powerful and popular politician. Suspends Communist Party.

OCTOBER 1991
Outlines radical economic reform plan, including market-set prices, private ownership, convertible ruble.

NOVEMBER 1991
Names Yegor Gaidar and other reformers to new Cabinet.

DECEMBER 1991
With presidents of Belarus and Ukraine, declares Soviet Union extinct and forms Commonwealth of Independent States. Gorbachev resigns.

JANUARY 1992
Lifts price controls on most goods. Prices jump 350 percent within weeks. State bank tightens money supply. Cash shortage develops.

APRIL 1992
Economy continues to worsen. Communist-dominated Congress of People's Deputies pushes for a softening of reforms.

MAY 1992
Pledges not to seek a second term as president in 1996. Begins Cabinet reorganization under pressure from Congress.

JUNE 1992
Signs arms reduction treaty with President Bush and is warmly welcomed in United States, which backs a $24 billion international aid package.

DECEMBER 1992
Replaces Gaidar with Viktor Chernomyrdin, a veteran technocrat. Battles Congress speaker Ruslan Khasbulatov over balance of power between president and legislature. Referendum on the issue is set for April.

JANUARY 1993
Signs START II treaty, cutting U.S. and Russian nuclear arsenals.

MARCH 1993
Congress strips Yeltsin of many presidential powers, reneges on deal with Yeltsinto hold referendum on who should wield ultimate power.

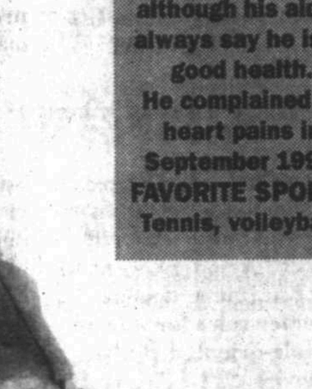

MARCH 20
Declares emergency rule until an April 25 referendum on new constitution to clearly establish who is in charge.

MARCH 21
Legislators, in emergency session, take first step toward impeaching Yeltsin by asking Constitutional Court to review his declaration of emergency rule.

ADVERSARIES

Those opposing Yeltsin...

Mikhail Gorbachev

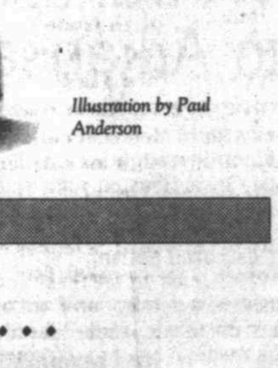

Alexander Rutskoi

Valery Zorkin

Ruslan Khasbulatov

Sergei Baburin

Mikhail Gorbachev: The former Soviet leader is more of a troublemaker for Yeltsin in the West than at home. The two share an intense animosity toward each other, stemming from a political feud that began in 1987. A frequent critic of Yeltsin in 1992, Gorbachev commands more attention abroad than in Russia, where he is widely disliked.

Alexander Rutskoi: Yeltsin picked Rutskoi, a popular war hero from Afghanistan, as his running mate in 1991 to give his ticket broader appeal. Rutskoi has instead given Yeltsin headaches by steadily criticizing his reforms. He has allied himself with the powerful military-industrial faction called Civic Union, and he will be a strong contender for the presidency if Yeltsin makes good on a pledge not to run again.

Valery Zorkin (not shown): As chief justice of Russia's relatively new Constitutional Court, he has been a thorn in Yeltsin's side in recent months by ruling against the president on two key cases. First, he partially overturned Yeltsin's ban on the Communist Party that allowed it to revive itself at the grassroots level. Then, he overturned Yeltsin's ban on the hard-line National Salvation Front.

Leonid Kravchuk (not shown): As president of Ukraine, Kravchuk has come to symbolize the kind of problems Yeltsin faces in dealing with the new nations that make up the former Soviet republics. Kravchuk has opposed the Russian president on issues such as control over the Black Sea naval fleet and the economic relations between the two neighbors.

Ruslan Khasbulatov: The speaker of the Supreme Soviet legislature, Khasbulatov has been engaged in a bitter struggle with Yeltsin over whether the executive or legislative branch should be the highest power in Russia. He wields considerable influence over lawmakers and presides at sessions of the Congress of People's Deputies, which is Russia's highest legislative body.

Alexander Prokhanov: A co-founder of the opposition National Salvation Front, Prokhanov is editor of the hard-line newspaper Dyen, must-reading for Yeltsin critics. He has been a key organizer of public demonstrations against Yeltsin.

Sergei Baburin: A hard-line legislator, Baburin represents a younger generation of political opposition to Yeltsin. He is one of the most eloquent Yeltsin critics. He is a leader of the Russian Unity faction of lawmakers and is a co-founder of the National Salvation Front, which claims to be a nationwide umbrella group for hard-line nationalists and Communists.

ECONOMY

Yeltsin faces anger, worsening economy, rising unemployment

By BRYAN BRUMLEY
Associated Press Writer

MOSCOW (AP)

Rising anger over higher prices, falling production and rising unemployment is eroding President Boris Yeltsin's authority and may jeopardize market reforms in Russia.

Market reforms are destroying the Communist-era distribution system, but privatization is lagging and few independent industries have sprung up to fill the gap. Moreover, land has not yet been decollectivized, hampering private production.

In 1992, when prices were freed from state control, inflation hit an annual rate of 2,000 percent. In January, inflation soared to 28 percent and officials warn of hyperinflation – more than 50 percent monthly – possibly sparking social disorder that would threaten reforms.

The economic collapse also makes it impossible for Russia to meet payments on its estimated $80 billion foreign debt, making it harder to receive Western credits and aid.

Inflation already has driven the value of the ruble to 653 against the dollar, versus 170 rubles per dollar a year ago, and was partly to blame for the 19 percent drop in industrial production last year.

Out of Russia's work force of 73 million people, about 600,000 – less than 1 percent – are listed as unemployed. But officials say at least 3 million more – or 4.9 percent – are on forced unpaid leave.

Joblessness is expected to skyrocket as insolvent firms declare bankruptcy, and officials fear social upheaval if the level hits 8 percent.

Anger over the economic collapse, vented through the Soviet-era Congress of People's Deputies, forced Yeltsin to drop a reformist prime minister in December in favor of a career Communist bureaucrat.

In his first act, Prime Minister Viktor Chernomyrdin tried to reimpose wage and price restraints, but later backed off, acknowledging the economy was out of control. Instead, he focused on fighting inflation.

Federal official defends raid on Branch Davidian compound

WACO, Texas (AP) — A federal agent Friday lashed out at critics of the Feb. 28 raid on a heavily armed religious group, saying it would have been over peacefully in less than a minute if cult members had not received a tipoff.

David Troy, intelligence chief for the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, harshly rebuked critics who have suggested the agency was poorly prepared when it tried to search the Branch Davidian sect for illegal weapons and arrest its leader, David Koresh.

"We feel confident there were no mistakes made on our part. We executed a legal search warrant in a fashion that was appropriate," Troy said. "The mistakes that were made were ... by those who chose to defy the law and shoot indiscriminantly at ATF agents."

A 45-minute gunfight broke out between the ATF and cult members, ending in the death of four agents and at least two cultists.

Law officers and the sect have been in a standoff for the 27 days since.

"There aren't any strong movements right now to get anybody out of there," FBI agent Dick Swensen told reporters Friday.

Cult members unfurled a banner from the four-story lookout tower of their home Friday afternoon that said "Rodney King We Understand."

Fourteen adults and 21 children have left the group since the standoff began. The adults have been detained as material witnesses to the shootout, with most being kept in jail.

After a morning hearing, U.S. District Judge Walter Smith ruled late in the day that cultist Kathryn Schroeder, who left the group March 12, could be released from jail. Her release will not take place until at least Monday, however, because Smith's order hinges on conditions to be set with another court officer.

In addition, Smith ruled late Friday that Oliver Gyarfas, who left the cult on the same day as Ms. Schroeder, must stay in jail. The judge cited the risk that Gyarfas, an Australian, would leave the area if freed.

Koresh has said 78 adults and 17 children remain inside the cult. A Houston man joined them Wednesday night after sneaking past federal agents.

Troy said the ATF's raid plan was to isolate the women and children from the men and take control of the group's weapon's cache.

"We would have been in control of that compound within 60 seconds or less had there not been a prior tipoff," Troy said.

The ATF has previously said the tipoff likely occurred in a phone call to the group about 40 minutes before the raid. The agency has acknowledged an undercover officer was inside the group until that time.

Police to check gun shows for illegal weapons sales

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — City Council members want police to use undercover officers at gun shows to check for activity such as the illegal sales of weapons and ammunition.

"We want to send a message," said Mayor Nelson Wolff.

Police Chief William O. Gibson said the city isn't targeting lawful activities, however.

"We're talking about the crooks," said Gibson, who described himself as an avid gun collector and shooter as well as a member of the National Rifle Association.

Gibson said police intelligence has made a connection between drive-by shootings and weapons purchased at gun shows.

The chief also said the rapid proliferation of illegal weapons poses a problem "we must address immediately."

The resolution directing the Police Department to infiltrate gun shows to search out illegal activity was passed Thursday. It directs police to use undercover officers to identify both illegal sales by vendors and individuals making large purchases of weapons and ammunition or assault-type weapons.

It also directs city staff officials to draft an ordinance requiring vendors to obtain a permit from the city.

Gun show advocates told the council they condemn illegal sales and vowed to work with the city to reduce such activity. But they emphasized they don't want their right to conduct legitimate shows and collect weapons infringed upon.

Mike Morris, speaking for a statewide organization that supports gun shows, told council members he has often worked with police at such shows and recently helped catch gang members trying to make a buy.

VA transports wrong body to Arkansas funeral home

HOUSTON (AP) — The Veterans Affairs Medical Center has begun an investigation into how the body of a Houston man was mistakenly sent to Arkansas and buried following a mix-up with another deceased patient.

"I've tried to let these families know how deeply sorry we are for this mistake," said Robert Stott, the medical center's director.

Relatives of Hugh Robinette had gathered Thursday for his burial in the Houston National Cemetery.

But it was discovered that Robinette's body had been shipped to Bald Knob, Ark., about 60 miles northeast of Little Rock, and buried in a closed casket ceremony earlier in the week.

That graveside service was to be held for an Arkansas veteran who lived here in recent years and died within a day of Robinette in the VA hospital here.

The Thursday burial ceremony for Robinette had to be postponed so that his body could be exhumed and returned to Houston.

"It's just about the worst thing that's ever happened to me," said Robinette's daughter, Sharon, 41, who flew in from Miami, Okla., on Tuesday. "I don't know where my dad is."

Ms. Robinette said the funeral home in Arkansas wasn't notified it had buried the wrong body until Thursday.

The VA hospital is paying for Ms. Robinette and her sister, Jeannine, 24, from California, to stay in a Houston hotel while they await their father's body. Sharon Robinette expects her father's funeral to be held Saturday.

"WE MAKE IT SIMPLE TO BUY A CAR"

NISSAN®

ALTIMA
NEW CONCEPT IN LUXURY SEDANS...AFFORDABILITY

Luxury is a concept that not everyone shares to the same degree. Nor, for that matter, is affordability. Precisely the reason Nissan created the Altima line. The flagship of the range, the Altima GLE provides a level of standard equipment hard to beat, even on much more expensive cars. If your fancy runs on the sportier side, the SE is more your style, with its sport seats and sport-tuned suspension. The feature-rich GXE combines an impressive array of standard amenities with a very attractive price. Even the most affordable, the XE, comes with a full range of luxury features.

Available in XE, GXE, SE & GLE Models.

25 Years Serving The Permian Basin With Quality Products Service & Competitive Prices!!

We've got your number!

Steve Mansell
PRESIDENT/GEN. MGR.

If you're planning to buy a new car, you deserve the best in the business at selling new cars. That's Performance Honda-Jeep-Eagle-Isuzu. For years we have ranked first in Midland in retail sales of new cars*. And your satisfaction remains our top priority. Those are claims not every other car retailer can make. But, then again, we're not like every other car retailer.

It has been said in this business that you have to lead, follow or get out of the way. So as long as we keep you as our #1 priority we'll keep leading. Follow the signs to Performance Autoplex, we'll be here.

Midland/Odessa
to future together

Despite blustery conditions between cities in the past, Midland and Odessa mayors Lorraine Perryman, left, and J.D. Faircloth are working together to help both cities prepare for thge next century.

Odessa, Midland realize it is sink or swim together

By Darren J. Waggoner
Staff writer

The success of Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman's plan for the future of her city relies heavily on it's ties with Midland.

"I have worked closely with J.D. (Faircloth) to help bring our two communities together," she said. "And I have met with no resistance at all from anyone about working together. With the economy the way it is, people recognize that we will sink or swim together."

According to Ms. Perryman, the two cities are currently working on several projects including attracting Interstate 27 to the area. Federal officials are currently studying possible routes for the highway, which will serve as a major component in the North American Free Trade Agreement.

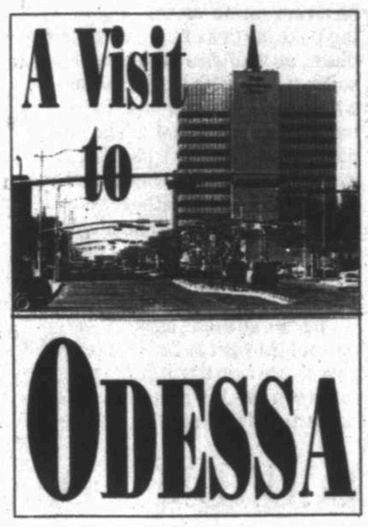

"Interstate 27 would really change our trade configuration. Transportation in Texas is pretty much I-35, there is no trade corridor through this part of the state," Ms. Perryman said. "And in economic development, transportation is crucial. If we can bring that highway through our area, it would have great implications with NAFTA. Indeed, it would shift the transportation hub of the United States."

She said that convincing the federal government that Midland/Odessa is a logical area for the path of the highway will take a lot of cooperation between the two cities.

"Of all of the projects, this is certainly one that we must work on together. We simply can't do it separately," she said. "This is our greatest chance to improve the economic condition of the area."

If the highway is eventually routed through the area, it would come between Midland and Odessa on FM 1788. But the completion date could be many years away, officials said.

"We need to start working on it now. We need to convince the government that we are worthy of this," Ms. Perryman said. "Typically these projects are decided on the basis of traffic volume. If that is the case here, we wouldn't get it."

"This highway would have the same economic impact as a century ago when the railroads skipped some towns and they just faded away. If we don't get this we will dry up and blow away," she said.

Another project the mayor believes is vital to both Midland and Odessa is the construction of the 158-mile Ivie Reservoir pipeline.

Once the entire $75 million pipeline is completed, Midland should receive about 20 million gallons of water a day by 1995 and will serve as Midland's primary source of water.

The final link of the pipeline will pump water 7½ miles from the proposed Colorado River Municipal Water District storage area at FM 1788, two miles south of Highway 191, to Midland's raw water storage area near Mockingbird Lane.

New SMSA makes Midland-Odessa 12th largest Texas metropolitan area

By Johnnye Montgomery

If you put all 225,000 Odessans/Midlanders of the newly designated SMSA (Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area) together end to end, they'd probably just shake hands and start having another meeting. At least that's how it appears to many members of the various committees and community improvement forces gathering in both cities now that the area is statistically joined.

After four years of petitions to U.S. Sen. Phil Gramm and the Office of Management and Budget, Odessa and Midland are now one joint city — a combination known as a Standard Metropolitan Statistical Area in government management and budget jargon. And the work is just beginning.

What the designation means to the Odessa-Midland area is that this area is now 12th largest on the list of Texas' metropolitan areas instead of being lost in the middle of page 3 or 4.

Separately Odessa ranked 243rd, and Midland ranked 283rd by population nationally according to the 1990 census.

This greater visibility put the Permian Basin into a more attractive classification to companies looking for places to relocate, according to members of the cities' Chamber of Commerce joint executive committees. A larger benefit seen by many in the Permian Basin is that the perception of Midland/Odessa as two warring factions will diminish. One Odessan who declined to be identified said as long as he could remember, the two towns had been fighting over things that didn't matter, and losing out on the things that did matter.

"You think of either one as a big town, and you drive around, and think, 'Hey, this would be a nice place to live.' Then you listen to people bash the other town about the football teams, or who got the college, and you don't want to live either place. The same thing probably happens when big corporations start getting information, trying to decide if they can find good workers, and a good location to move to. But the last generation, I think, has begun to see that every time we work together, combine our talents, we really get cooking."

However, the job is just beginning.

Odessa City Manager Jerry McGuire says he's very much impressed with the speed at which committee members from both cities are working together. "We had a joint meeting a couple of months ago at CEED with the 2020 Foresight group and the chairman of Midland 2000. We all recognize that we cannot afford any longer to look at our long-term strategic plans in isolation. We need to find any and every way we can, to combine our resources.

"I've only been here a little over a year, so I'm a relative newcomer, but one thing that attracted me to this area, and specifically to Odessa, is the strength of our resources. Even though we have problems, we can accomplish a lot as a joint community."

Midland's Assistant City Manager Rick Menchaca said another major area people from both communities are working on is the recruitment of the placement of Interstate Highway 27 from Lubbock, which, if the joint committees' efforts are successful, will connect with state Highway 1788 and go on south to terminate at Ojinaga, across the border from Presidio, where Mexico will eventually have a super highway going to the Mexican coast.

"I-27 is a long-term project beginning with a feasibility study, and we want to help those people any way we can," Menchaca said. "Once it's completed, (I-27) will link air, land, and sea, and it would be a major asset for all of us. Both mayors have pledged to cooperate fully in order for us to present ourselves in the most favorable light possible."

An interesting sidelight to all this communication between the two communities has been the discovery of remarkable similarities in projects on the boards, goals, dreams, and wish lists. Counterparts Larry Johnson (Odessa's 2020 Foresight) and Guy McCrary (Midland Objectives 2000) found that both their committees were talking about designating a new concept described as a "cultural district" near the airport and CAF off Highway 1788. The two cities would appoint a board as an entity to seek bonds and grants for funding of a shared Midland and Odessa community cultural district.

Johnson said among proposed components of the center could be a symphony hall, civic center, fine arts theater, amphitheater, and museums.

"That's one major portion of the cultural district," he said. "Another part to make the district usable by more people would be a recreation center, including possibilities of a new Angel stadium, as well as a complex of softball and little league fields where state and national tournaments could be held. The total complex could share parking, water, sewer, and other related support functions. Other recreational benefits could be picnic areas, walking paths, and a water feature, such as a lake, pond, or stream."

The committees have given careful thought to the problem of how to provide a water feature for the area, Johnson said. "Maybe a small lake, maybe a large pool, maybe a larger fishing and sailing lake.

"The Colorado River Municipal Water District (CRMWD) is completing a pipeline from Lake Ivy to the Midland/Odessa area, with a planned reservoir to be located west of the airport in the same general area we're talking about. It's possible we could use the water that will for sure be impounded there. The caprock drops off just west of Odessa, and we're sitting on the far west side of the drainage that all runs east from here. We've been fortunate that our forefathers established the CRMWD, but our water all drains from here to places east of here, and we have to pump it all back, and it's very expensive. It's a plan that we want to share with our citizens in Midland and Odessa."

Johnson said some benefits to grow out of the cultural district immediately would be the natural growth of hotels, restaurants, and other retail outlets.

"We thought the basic idea should be presented so that more people could interpret and improve on our dreams," he said. "We have enlisted the help of the West Texas Chapter of the American Institute of Architects. The AIA chapter contacted and established a relationship with Texas Tech architectural students and faculty. The students and faculty worked on assignments to help our Permian Basin leaders invision our plan. We are now using that presentation in slide form and presentation board form."

"We've presented it to civic groups, our Parks Advisory Board, our Cultural Council, our City Council and other interested groups as well."

Johnson said representatives from both communities have said that the idea is highly desirable and worth developing. "There are probably several types of grants that could be applied for. We haven't yet had the opportunity for the two communities to buy into our plan, and support it. We just need to get the plan to the people and see if they're willing to endorse it."

Johnson said it's a dream worth dreaming — and more.

"If we're not thinking 20 years into the future, we're not really planning for the future of our children. We should not forget that the future of West Texas depends on our farsightedness today."

Both city mayors agree that the combination simply reinforces the benefits of efforts previously put forth by community groups and committees.

Midland Mayor J.D. Faircloth said the need for unity between the two communities was recognized long before they got together officially.

"I think that over the last 10 years, relationships have been improving very steadily. The last several mayors have recognized it's extremely important that the two cities work together. I'm most familiar with my predecessor, Carroll Thomas, since I worked with him three years. He was very instrumental in working with Don Carter, who was the mayor before Lorraine Perryman, and both Carroll and I have worked with Lorraine to continue to improve relationships between the two cities."

The primary focus, Faircloth says, is job development.

"Both cities have recognized the difficulty in both cities is centered around loss of jobs and unemployment, and everything related. Both are working hard to create new jobs. It's not important where the jobs are physically located, and I think both cities have recognized that we are not going to hurt the other just because a job or company is located in one city or the other it's creating opportunities for our citizens. Both cities have people working in the other town. Just because the plant is located in one city or the other, it certainly would improve the tax base, but that's not important. I think in the past there has been great competition to compete for the pride of locating plants in one or the other, that's no longer important from my point of view. It's important to locate somewhere, preferably in Midland/Odessa, but certainly in the Permian Basin to create opportunity. We've got a very close economy between the two cities. If it helps one city, it helps the other. I think our entire focus is job creation."

With the establishment of the joint SMSA, Odessa Mayor Lorraine Perryman now sees promise of the fruition of many of the dreams she brought to her job when she assumed office nearly three years ago.

"I think we have made a lot of progress in combining the efforts of our two communities in the 2-1/2 years I've been in office. I've worked with both Carroll Thomas and J.D. Faircloth, and we share the commitment to regional development as a whole.

"The days are gone when the two communities could chart their own separate course. Midland and Odessa are the hub of the Permian Basin, and as we go, so goes the entire region. I think there are many efforts that can now be pointed to as successes, such as a joint SMSA.

"We are now viewed as the 12th largest metropolitan area in Texas, with a total population of over 225,000 people. That puts us in an entirely different competitive arena for bringing business and dollars to our communities. That could only have been accomplished through working together.

"We also have begun to achieve real progress through joint efforts in future planning for both communities, such as the I-27 development, bringing the highway through, between Midland and Odessa. There is also the continued development of Midland Air Terminal. Midland has been very gracious in including me and the city of Odessa in plans for bringing other airlines into the airport. Midland Air Terminal is not just Midland's airport, but belongs to the city of Odessa, and the other communities of the Permian Basin as well."

Midland Chamber head Jana King said the spirit of cooperation has given new life to joint work sessions.

"The Midland and Odessa chambers have been working together more effectively in recent months than anyone can remember," Ms. King said.

"We joined in the resolution on four-lane status for Highway 349 from Lamesa to Midland, and Highway 158 from Midland to Garden City," she said. "And the membership departments are working together, with a joint mixer targeted for July."

"We're working jointly on the Buy the Basin Campaign. And we recently sponsored a joint meeting, bringing together both Midland and Odessa colleges, the Texas Employment Commission representatives from both cities, and other organizations to deal with the Texas Instruments phasedown. This gave TI the opportunity to communicate with everybody and brainstorm any solutions. This spirit of cooperations extends the efforts of both chambers.

"There's a fresh enthusiasm and spirit of cooperation between the communities. The communities have begun to realize we don't need to spend energy fighting each other. We need to work together, so the whole area can be more competitive and successful."

ECONOMY: Odessa, Midland should work together owned by the CRMWD, which encompasses Odessa, Big Spring and Snyder.

"It will benefit us and bring a reliable water source to the next generation," Ms. Perryman said. "It will also improve the quality and taste of our water — which is very important to all of us in West Texas."

> 'We share ideas. The teachers and principals share ideas. I don't see any competition between Midland and Odessa.'
> —Gene Buinger, superintendent of ECISD

Another recent development that Odessa's mayor believes is crucial to the economic development of our area is the advent of Midland and Odessa being officially united as a Metropolitan Statistical Area.

"We're now viewed as an entity of over 225,000 people rather than two separate communities of 100,000 or less," she said. "We can now sell ourselves as a larger market and that's critical to attracting businesses to the area."

Medical Center Hospital to start Phase I expansion

By Ed Todd
Staff writer

ODESSA — Medical Center Hospital, which was established in 1949 as an 85-bed facility to provide health care for the Odessa area, is undergoing a $28-million expansion to better serve the community and beyond.

Hospital planners spent two years in ascertaining medical needs and studying financial resources to be sure "what we are doing is the right thing," said J. Michael Stephans, the hospital's chief administrator.

Most critical, from the viewpoint of citizens who responded to a survey on hospital needs, was improvement of the hospital's emergency services. The upgrading and expansion of Emergency Department services were identified as the hospital's No.1 priority.

The hospital's board of directors targeted four critical areas in hospital expansion: emergency services, cardiology, outpatient services, and oncology.

"From '91 to now, the board first developed a long-range plan to identify the strengths and weaknesses of the hospital," Stephans said. The directors then "developed a long-range facility plan to coincide with the long-range program," Stephans said, and then issued $28 million worth of (revenue) bonds to finance the project after they did a "financial feasibility study."

The hospital, which currently maintains 396 licensed beds, is focusing on quality health care.

"The quality of what we have to offer compares to (that of) the large metropolitan areas," Stephans said. "If you don't have the quality, you are going to have some empty spaces."

Quality of the "full-service" hospital is "measured by the quality of individual services as well as the range of services that we have to offer," Stephans said.

The hospital serves a 17-county area and, like Midland's Memorial Hospital and Medical Center, views itself as a regional health-care provider.

The hospital's $28-million Phase I expansion is to get underway at mid-year for a 1995 completion date.

Expansion will focus on:

■ The Emergency Department. The department, designed to accommodate 60,000 patients in a year's time, will include trauma, pediatric module, and express care. The present Emergency Department, which was built to handle 15,000 patients each year, today cares for 45,000 patients in a year's time and is overcrowded.

■ Coronary Care Unit. The CCU will be a vertical addition to the hospital's Intensive Care Unit (ICU) and will have expanded facilities for critical-care patients.

■ Outpatient Center. The center will consolidate imaging services.

■ Radiation Oncology Center. This $2-million cancer-treatment center, which will be in a new building near the MCH Professional Building, will contain a linear accelerator, support equipment, and the Magnetic Resonance Imaging (MRI) to produce images of atoms and molecular structures, especially human cells, tissues and organs, to detect diseases and abnormalities. Faulkner Construction Company, an Austin-based company that maintains an office in Midland, is constructing the cancer center, which is to be completed prior to 1995.

■ Radiology Department. This service will be relocated to the hospital's first floor from the second floor and will be adjacent to the Emergency Department and the Outpatient Center.

■ Oxygen Tank Relocation. Oxygen capacity will be increased to better serve the patients.

■ Renovation. The former Emergency Room will be renovated to possibly include an electrocardiograph (EKG) used to detect and diagnose heart abnormalities and diseases. Administrative offices are to be expanded. The old and the new Cardiac Care Units are to be connected. The nursery for newly-born babies will be expanded. The Telemetry Unit for 24-hour care for cardiovascular patients will be upgraded and expanded.

In determining hospital needs, Stephans said that hospital solicited suggestions from physicians and other heart-care professionals, chamber-of-commerce leaders, ex-patients of the hospital, and from newspaper readers.

Respondents to the hospital survey said that hospital improvements were needed in the areas of waiting time, cleanliness, and parking and cited the need for state-of-the-art medical equipment.

"It has basically taken two years to go through the planning process and financial feasibility studies to assure that what we are doing is the right thing," Stephans said.

Unlike Midland's medical-care providers, Odessa's Medical Center Hospital does not have a rehabilitation unit, Stephans said. In Midland are Memorial Rehabilitation Hospital and The Rehabilitation Hospital of Midland-Odessa. Based in Odessa and near Medical Center Hospital is the Permian Basin Rehabilitation Center.

"No, we don't (have a rehabilitation center at MCH)," Stephans said, "We'll let those boys over there (in Midland) fight that. Both of them have some money on the table there."

Medical Center Hospital's functions to provide "quality care and treatment for all patients" through a competent medical staff and support teams and quality facilities and equipment, according to MCH's statement of mission. Further, MCH is to "provide reasonably priced quality patient care in a fiscally-responsible manner."

Michael L. Reznik, DDS, Inc. In Practice Since 1980

How does your smile measure up? It is one of the first things that people notice about you. If your front teeth are protruding, sometimes you just don't feel like smiling. Dr. Michael L. Reznik, located in Odessa at 2469 East 11th Street, and in Andrews at 1717 North East Mustang Street, phone either offices, 333-7105, understands.

Heredity is one of the most important factors in producing the embarrassing spacing of the teeth and the way in which the upper and lower teeth come together when you close your mouth. Other causes include the loss of primary teeth at a young age, growth disorders, diet, and even thumb-sucking. Whatever the cause, the friendly professionals at the office of Dr. Michael L. Reznik want you to know that teeth can be straightened at any age, and they want to help you. They specialize in orthodontics for both children and adults. A number of devices are available to correct your problem. They may include bands around the teeth with wires attached, or braces which come in clear and an assortment of colors. Retainers are also used to permit the muscles and jaws to adjust to their new position.

The office hours are Monday through Friday, and insurance plans are accepted. Call Dr. Michael L. Reznik today and let him make your smile the best it can be.

Officials in Odessa discuss resolutions to jail overcrowding

By Michael Kashgarian
Staff writer

ODESSA — The most pressing problem for Ector County this year will be the continued jail overcrowding, Ector County officials said.

"I guess our biggest issue, like what Midland County is facing, is jail overcrowding," Ector County Judge Jim Jordan said.

The Jail Standards Commission has imposed a remedial order to stop housing an overload of prisoners at the present facility, Jordan said.

"The pressure's been there and it's getting intensified," he said.

The Ector County jail has 237 beds but has been averaging about 300 inmates, according to Jordan.

"And at least 120 of our prisoners are the state's," he said. Overcrowded state facilities have resulted in a backlog in county jails.

County Commissioner Jack Croider, precinct 1, agreed that the jail overcrowding was the county's most urgent concern.

"I think the big one is going to be the jail. I think that's every county's big problem," he said.

Ector County officials said they would like to see the problem resolved by this spring.

"We are just debating a new jail or warehousing some prisoners," Jordan said.

Warehousing refers to less expensive free-standing cells inside a building, he said. In considering that alternative, the county would have to look into an appropriate location, he added.

The Jail Standards Commission has imposed a remedial order to stop housing an overload of prisoners at the present facility.

Croider said expense would play into the debate of a new jail versus the dormitory-type facility.

"That's always the main concern," he said.

"We hope to get something done without a bond issue," Croider said.

The county currently has a small reserve that may be used toward resolving the problem, he said.

Currently, the county has an architect working on a master plan to build into a jail facility over the years instead of a large facility all at once, Croider said.

In other county business, officials will continue to work on economic development, and the budget, Jordan said.

"We're waiting to see what happens on our appraisal values," Jordan said.

Odessa police to add new programs

By Katherine Poteet
Staff writer

ODESSA — Getting criminals off the streets and finding a place to put them are the two main concerns of law enforcements officials in Odessa.

"Although we showed an 18 percent drop in Part I crimes last year, I still don't feel that we are where we should be," said Odessa Police Department Police Chief James Jenkins. "We are at the same level in criminal activity of cities that are much larger than we are. Our goal this year is further reduction."

That reduction will come through the continuation of some programs, such as Park and Walk and patrol division's "Directed Patrol," but plans are in the works for new programs aimed stopping crimes before they start.

Two of the new programs are directed at Odessa's youth — Drug Free Youth In Texas (DFYIT) and D.A.R.E.

"Midland has had tremendous success with D.A.R.E. and we hope to have that in place this fall," Jenkins said, adding that the department will be using a $300,000 grant to provide vehicles, equipment and train six officers to take the program to 26 elementary schools.

"DFYIT is the natural extension of D.A.R.E. in the junior high and high school levels," he said. "We want to reach our youth before they become involved in drugs and crime."

Another proposed project is an Auto Theft Task Force, comprised of officers from the Odessa and Midland police department, the Midland and Ector County sheriff's offices, the Ector County District Attorney's office, the FBI and the Department of Public Safety.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram
Police Chief James Jenkins discusses crime trends in Odessa.

"Because we are a considered a border community, we have a real auto theft problem, losing vehicles into Mexico," Jenkins said. "We are hoping for a $500,000 grant for a multi-agency task force for this area."

Within the department, Jenkins said a new computer system will be installed this year that will tie the police department in with the municipal court and the fire department.

A new radio system that will put all law enforcement and emergency units in contact with each other will also be installed.

"The chemical fire here in Odessa (at Champion Chemical) really showed the necessity for a radio system that connected all the units," he said. "Everyone did a tremendous job during that accident, but they had absolutely no contact with each other in the field."

Jenkins said he is also concerned with better community relations, with programs such as a Citizen's Police Academy and a volunteer support program on the horizon.

"We have made great strides in community relations, but we are not quite there yet," he said. "We want to be a more integral part of the community."

The main concern of the Ector County Sheriff's office is jail-overcrowding, Inspector Mark Donaldson said.

"We are averaging 300 in a jail that has space for 237," he said. "All that we are doing this year ties into easing the problem."

One of the projects slated for this year is expanding the dispatch area and computerizing reports and identification information.

"We are putting all of the sheriff's office on the same computer system with dispatch and the jail," Donaldson said. "We will be able to access information better and quicker."

The sheriff's office will also have its yearly personnel changes.

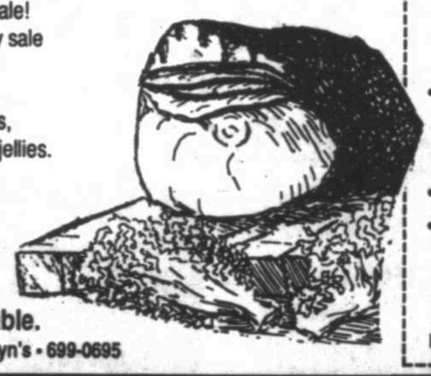

"We constantly try to upgrade our departments and get new blood into different areas," Donaldson said. "Personnel changes go on every year."

In an effort to keep the deputies at the top of their field, the sheriff's office will begin sending the officers to specialized training schools this year.

"We have one of the finest child abuse programs in the state due to specialized training," he said. "But, it has always been in-house. We want to send officers to the really good schools that are held in Austin and Dallas. We want all of our departments to be the best they can be."

EDUCATING ODESSA

The carved stone signs adorning the entrances to the University of Texas of the Permian Basin campus in East Odessa are a familiar sight for hundreds of students, many of whom commute from Midland. Top, the main campus building is home to most of the school's classrooms as well as administrative offices. The Odessa College campus is home to the studios of KOCV television and radio stations, public stations serving the entire Permian Basin region.

NOEL PLAZA

The recently dedicated Noel Plaza park between downtown and Medical Center Hospital is a peaceful and picturesque addition to the revitalization efforts underway in Odessa.

Jackrabbit, meteor crater are unusual highlights in Odessa

By Johnnye Montgomery

ODESSA — Odessan Betty Orbeck, who is archival director for the Petroleum Museum of the Permian Basin, says one day an Odessa oldtimer was standing inside Odessa's meteor crater, absorbing the sounds of silence, when his reverie was interrupted by the arrival of a woman on a motorcycle. She roared up to the fence, jumped off the cycle, and made an agitated approach down to where he stood.

"I've come to see the large meteor crater they advertise in the brochure on Odessa, but I can't find it," she said. "Can you tell me how to get there?" The Odessan, in his kindliest voice, said, "Lady, you're in it."

Odessa's rightly touted Presidential Museum, Globe Theatre, and Coliseum aside, there are some features that you just have to be in or up close to before you can truly appreciate them.

HARE FACTS

Take the six-foot-tall jackrabbit, built in 1964 at a cost of $2,300, and a longtime favorite with Odessa's children. The big bunny, recipient of a Molly Ivins citation in a PBS commentary as an example of tacky Texas "Ort", is made of fiberglass and epoxy and has its own historical marker. Almost from the beginning of its existence, when Texas congressman John Ben Sheppard honored it with a formal dedication, the rabbit has been assaulted, both verbally and physically.The statue had hardly been settled in place before detractors began to ridicule the nomenclature. The jackrabbit, they contended, was not a rabbit at all, but a hare. In the 1970s, even the Chamber of Commerce got into the name game, with then-president Dan Hemphill urging citizens of Odessa to correct the historical marker in favor of biological correctness.

The rabbit has also had a tendency to disappear.

In March of 1981, the rabbit's absence was noted in the Odessa American. "Someone tried to steal him," the paper quoted a chamber spokesperson. "They had unscrewed him and the wind must have knocked him over. But they took him to the bunny hospital, and he's back in place now."

The bunny disappeared again in 1989, when the city demolished its pedestal at the corner of Fourth and Lincoln to make way for a new city park. City officials first tried to move the rabbit quietly to a warehouse to await completion of the park. But they had reckoned without the outraged cries of citizens, not to mention tourists who had turned off I-20 and come to the middle of town hoping to pose for photos with the rabbit. The ECISD hurriedly offered temporary lodging and the statue was moved to the school's administration building at Eighth and Sam Houston. Despite persistent rumors that the rabbit's future home will be in Noel Park just east of the library, the rabbit temporary is looking more and more permanent.

In 1990, the bunny was the victim of a senseless attack. One of its two-foot-long ears was torn from its head, and later deposited on the steps of the Ector County Library, wrapped in black plastic. Odessans' reaction to the assault would gladden the hearts of bu ny lovers everywhere. "We'll get the best eye, ear and throat specialist that we can," City Manager Bill Brown said. The attacker was later arrested after a tip to Odessa Crime Stoppers, and charged with desecration of a venerated object.

After ear reattachment, a facelift and new paint job, the rabbit

Midland, Odessa share common educational interests, concerns

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

ODESSA — Midland's neighbors to the west face many of the same education issues as parents and students in the Tall City.

"The big issues for Texas schools are fundamentally the same. We're all trying to raise the level of student achievement," said Gene Buinger, superintendent of Ector County Independent School District.

"In reality public schools are doing a better job today than they have ever done before, but it's still not good enough," he said. "Suddenly there was a need for a higher level of education. It has increased to the point that we can no longer be satisfied with having a few students achieve at a very high level."

The superintendent said the era where every American could get a good job with or without an education has passed.

"In the 1950s, only 50 percent of Americans graduated from high schools," he said. "But there were lots of good entry level jobs they could get with no degree. Now 80 percent of Americans are graduating from high schools. Every student needs a high school degree and the degree signifies a higher level of education."

The administrator said every student must master college preparatory level material even if they just plan to attend a trade school.

"They still will need to read, compute and solve problems," he said. "Times have changed rapidly and Odessa is competing — not with Midland or Dallas — but with Japan, Germany and Korea . . . The oil patch is a perfect example of a changing economy."

Like Midland, ECISD has seen its enrollment grow, despite hard economic times. While Midland County voters passed a bond election to build three new schools and add numerous additions to other schools, Ector County voters turned down a bond to expand the district.

"To accommodate the overcrowding we had a bond election to build new facilities. It didn't pass. Now we are looking at scheduling multi-track or year-round programs."

The district is in dire need of secondary schools for its large junior high school enrollment. Currently the junior highs house almost 6,000 of the district's 28,000 students.

The junior high enrollment is notable for the fact that Odessa made the list for the top 25 metropolitan areas in the nation with the highest percentage of populations of youth age 14-17. The top 25 areas with the greatest numbers of youth was reported in an article by Texas Comptroller John Sharp.

"We project about 2,700-2,800 students in each high school for the 1997-98 school year. Today there are 2,300 (enrolled in Odessa and Permian high schools)," Buinger said.

To insure keeping enough high quality educators in the district, Buinger said ECISD operates a program "to grow our own" teachers.

"It's difficult to get people to move to West Texas, although we recruit throughout the United States," he said. "So, we have started encouraging individuals to become teachers, right from the high school level.

"We are encouraging classroom aides to consider starting college degrees and we are helping subsidize education . . . investing in human potential is what education is about anyway."

The superintendent said he foresees a time when being an educator will be a sought-after occupation.

"There was a time when everyone wanted an MBA (masters in business education) or law degree. A lot of people went into business and now we are seeing corporations laying off white collar workers," he said.

While many Permian Basin residents might assume that MISD and ECISD are in competition with each other, Buinger said the districts enjoy a good working relationship.

"We joined together in an administrator assessment program," he said. "We took our prospective administrators, and they identified their's, and we assessed each others."

The program was deemed more fair for candidates to be judged on their merits and

ECISD offers magnet schools to spark interest

By Myra Lee Salcedo
Staff writer

ODESSA — Both Midland and Ector County school districts operate unusual court-ordered desegregation programs.

Ector County ISD uses magnet schools — offering instruction on such diverse topics as drama, aerospace, Tai Kwan Do, Suzuki Strings (violin lessons), dance, year-round school or adventures in aerospace.

"We are preparing to convert one magnet school — Hayes Elementary — which has an extended day, or afterschool program — into an aerospace magnet. It will continue to offer the extended day program, but the school will attempt to excite students' interest in anything that flies from a rocketship to a spitwad," said Gene Buinger, ECISD superintendent.

The whole idea of the aerospace magnet school is to spark youngsters' interest in math and science. The school will integrate aerospace into the curriculum in cooperation with NASA and the local CAF (Confederate Air Force).

Three magnet schools operate extended-day programs, and Gale-Pond Alamo offers a year-round school of 220 possible attendance days per year. One magnet focuses on technology, and another on academics. Travis elementary School even has its own farm with goats and ducks.

"The magnets started as a result of our desegregation court order," Buinger said. "Some are set up to attract Anglo students to schools on the south side of town that were — at the time — primarily in minority neighborhoods. There are a certain number of minority and Anglo slots available in the south and the schools are balanced 50-50 (50 percent minority and 50 percent Anglo enrolled)."

Likewise, schools located outside minority neighborhoods are set up with programs to attract minority attendance.

He said "a powerful testament" to the success of the program are the waiting lists to get into magnet schools. "For example, there is a waiting list of 75 to get into Gale-Pond Alamo's year-round program."

Buinger said the magnet program is "two-fold. It desegregates the schools, but also allows parents options."

"One PTA parent recently called and said: 'I hate to give up the YRE (year round program), but my son is so excited about space, that he has got to go the aerospace school. She is the first applicant for the aerospace program," he said. "It's exciting to see parents become consumers of education."

Buinger noted that Odessa has a larger minority population to draw students from than Midland. He said, as of last year, ECISD became a "minority" district, with 50.2 percent of the students attending representing Hispanics and blacks.

The district's ethnic breakdown is 5 percent black and 45 percent Hispanic with the Hispanic population growing at a rate of 1½ percent per year.

Buinger said he is a strong proponent of giving parents a choice about where their children attend school "rather than them being bound in the monopoly of education."

"We decide what we are going to wear each morning, what we are going to eat, what we are going to do," he said. "We have choices in so many areas of our lives. We need to have choices in the public schools too."

Odessa's Presidential Museum is unique in U.S.

By Nancy Calhoun

ODESSA — "What was the name of George Washington's horse?" The question came over the telephone at The Presidential Museum in Odessa late one Saturday afternoon. Although it was nearly closing time, curator Tim Hewitt returned to the library to look for the answer. Fairly certain that he would find more than one name, Hewitt knew President Washington had lost four horses during the French and Indian War alone.

The Presidential Museum is unique in the United States, the only facility of its kind dedicated to the office of the presidency and all the men who have served in that office. Conceived after the assassination of President John F. Kennedy on Nov. 22, 1963, the original concept of a memorial to the slain president was expanded to serve as a tribute to the office of the U.S. presidency itself, and to honor the men who have held the highest office this country has to offer.

The concept has also been extended to honor the Presidents of the Republic of Texas, who are represented in a display of four paintings in the conference room.

The front gallery of the museum is reserved for traveling exhibitions as well as temporary exhibits from the museum's own permanent collection.

Displays are changed every three or four months, which offers museum visitors a broader variety of topics relating to art, science and history, according to Robert Reese, museum director.

The present exhibition, "Federal Lampoon," is composed of editorial cartoons, spanning more than 50 years of history, selected from a collection of over 400 cartoons donated to the Presidential Museum by the Amon Carter Museum in Fort Worth. Only a few examples of the large assortment are on display.

A prime concern of museum officials is the utilization of space in the Hall of the Presidents, the museum's main gallery.

The permanent exhibition of memorabilia traces the development of the presidency through the election campaigns, including effects of third parties, changing technological effects on the campaign process and the expanding role of the electorate in elections.

The gallery is currently dominated by the Dishong collection of dolls representing First Ladies in gowns worn to their husbands' inaugurations.

Entitled "Every Four Years," the extensive collection of campaign memorabilia focuses on the campaigns for the presidency, both of winners and of also-rans, and illustrates the grand history of the American presidential electoral process.

Commemorative items such as presidential medals also are on display. A gallery of large presidential portraits, from Lyndon Johnson through George Bush, rounds out the permanent exhibit. Painted in a variety of styles, the collection is dominated by a superb portrait of Richard Nixon, by artist Wayne Ingram.

The Presidential Museum is easy to find by following brown signs bearing the profile of Washington. The museum is located at 622 N. Lee, one block off Grant, the main street of Odessa. Free to the public, the museum is open from 10 a.m.-5 p.m. Tuesday-Saturday, and closed Sunday, Monday and most major holidays. Off-hour tours by groups may be arranged, although a small fee is charged. For more information call 332-7123.

Two long-term exhibit galleries totaling 3,600 square feet were completed in March 1984, along with renovations of storage and work areas.

Grant monies were also used to fund a temporary exhibit program. Several traveling exhibitions from major museums have been housed at the Presidential Museum in recent years.

"The problem with traveling exhibits is they cost money," Hewitt said. Exhibits must be reserved far in advance of the show dates, taking into account planned itineraries. Fundraising must then be done in order to pay for the exhibitions.

The museum receives no federal grants. Hewitt believes receiving such funding will become more difficult with the new administration's budget cuts. "It may not be their intention, but that's going to be the effect." Planned displays for the future include traveling exhibits from the Smithsonian Institution, as well as entirely new concepts in presentations of information. "We're trying to discover how to present multimedia exhibits with limited funds," Reese said. "We have a vast amount of material that needs to be on exhibit."

Reese earned his Master's of Fine Arts at North Texas State University in Denton. He has been technical director at Permian Playhouse, as well as at Midland Community Theatre under Art Cole.

"When they were looking for a director, I'd been in Odessa for 30-plus years — that was the big appeal," Reese said.

The warehouse portion of the museum is filled with artifacts, and the enormous task of indexing and cataloging them was recently begun. Less than 25 percent of the museum collection of material is on display at any one time, according to Hewitt. One reason is that holding back and rotating some of the material provides novelty to the exhibits and encourages visitors to return.

"We're making progress on a large task. It's going to go slowly," said Hewitt, who has a degree in history and anthropology from Pacific Lutheran University in Tacoma, Wash. "I'm very good at analyzing and organizing things."

Housed in the original museum room in the basement of the building, the John Ben Shepperd Jr. Library of the Presidents contains 3,500 volumes on subjects relating to presidents and the office of the presidency. Students, scholars and the public are invited to use the reference facility.

"I would like to see the library expand as a research center," Hewitt said.

The library also contains a historical newspaper collection, film, audio tapes and photographic slides of previous museum exhibits. At the back of the room, a locked white metal grille encloses rare volumes, those with presidential signatures and some books in poor condition.

One rare book is the first publication in English of Gen. Santa Anna's handwritten autobiography, which provides insights into the man who served as president of Mexico seven times and who wore valuable jewels into battle at San Jacinto.

An additional display area within the library contains exhibits relating to constitutional amendments, as well as 22 amusing presidential caricatures carved from wood. Here, also, is where Hewitt is indexing artifacts on the museum's computer. Two additional IBM-compatible machines are needed, due to scheduling problems that have already risen regarding the use of the one available computer. "We're open to donations," Hewitt said.

"We've received just about anything anyone could receive, as far as presidential memorabilia is concerned," Hewitt said, including signatures from every president. He made suggestions for those considering making contributions. The donation of funds as a memorial, books in memoriam or funds to be used for acquisition of books or artifacts are all possibilities. A list of desired volumes for the library is available at the museum.

Reese would like to see the museum returned to its original purpose — "an educational facility having to do with the office of the president." Plans for the museum include hiring a future staff of 15, expanding facilities, and publishing a newsletter, according to Reese.

President Bush's term of office was in its third year before his portrait was donated to the museum in November 1991. The museum has received no material as yet, except campaign memorabilia, from President Bill Clinton, and none is expected for awhile, Reese said.

The museum is short of artifacts from the first six presidents as well as from the last four. "Everyone else is well represented," Hewitt said, adding that any living past president "is going to be reluctant to let go of his personal items."

Interaction with the community is an additional role played by the museum. The conference room, located at the rear of the main floor, is available during regular operating hours to organizations such as the Daughters of the American Revolution, the Daughters of the Republic of Texas and the Poetry Society of Texas, Odessa Chapter. A nominal fee is charged for use of the room, and reservations may be made by contacting the museum office.

"The museum is a real asset to Odessa," said Madie Prather, vice president of the Poetry Society. "They have very nice displays. My favorite is the first ladies' gowns."

The museum's cooperation with other area facilities is typified by the loan of materials to the museum in Pecos during their annual presidential exhibit, Reese said.

The "Home to Texas" room, located within the permanent exhibit, is a portrayal of pioneers of the mid-19th century. The room compares the furniture and personal items the families might have had to leave behind, and the primitive log cabin they would have occupied in their new home. The contents of this room, including a typical buckboard of the period as well as historical posters of early area residents, are to be donated to the Heritage of Odessa Foundation, Reese said.

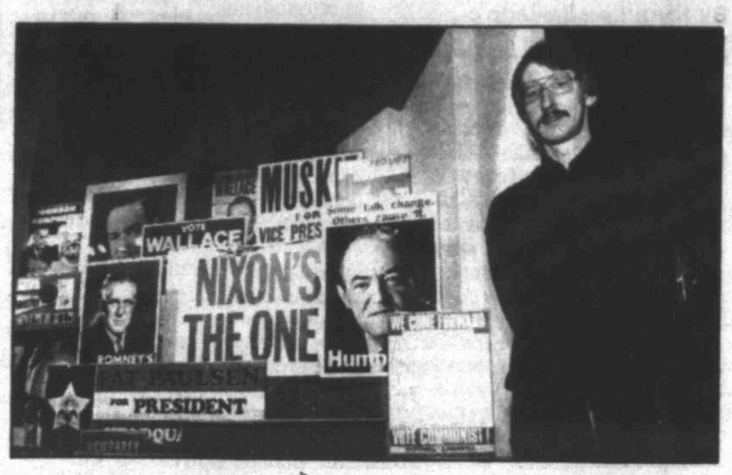

In 1989 the Foundation erected a historical marker outside the museum entrance commemorating the First Texas Hometown of then-President Bush. In July 1948, the sign says, Bush "came to booming oil field as trainee with Ideco . . . he maintained equipment, inventoried, painted, swept floors, performed handyman tasks. He traveled all over the Permian Basin selling drilling equipment . . . Quickly adjusted to community. Embraced West Texas customs such as football fever . . . Bush said 'At Odessa we became Texans — and proud of it.'"

Students from an Odessa High School art class painted a spirited mural on the side of the building in the fall of 1991. The stylized wind-blown U.S. flag was designed by art teacher Polly Sheehan and the project was funded by the Heritage of Odessa Foundation.

From its humble beginnings on Feb. 25, 1965, as the Presidential Room in the basement of the Ector County Library, the museum soon expanded into the entire basement of the building. Four years later, on Feb. 6, 1969, the name of the collection was officially changed to The Presidential Museum. The organization incorporated under Texas non-profit corporation laws on Sept. 26, 1976.

Coliseum turns profits offering audiences an escape

By Georgia Todd Temple
Staff writer

ODESSA — Music, carnivals, a circus, a rodeo, a fair, bull riding, motor cross racing, agricultural activities, private parties, conventions and shows of all kinds — arts and crafts, antiques, boats, dogs, ice and miniature horses — will keep the staff busy at Ector County Coliseum this year.

"We've got a real solid event roster," said Don Thorn, coliseum director for the county-owned facility since Jan. 1, 1984.

The facility was used as recently as Saturday night for a George Strait concert. The next musical act tentatively scheduled is country western performer Joe Diffie May 30.

"It looks pretty good, but right now it's still tentative," Thorn said.

"On the rock side of the business, we have a band called the Black Crows, which are going to be in concert here on May 5. Some of the folks might remember they opened for ZZ Top for a number of years and have kind of now gotten out on their own."

Outside of the Black Crows, the other music dates are tentative ones set for this fall.

"Around this time of year the touring acts slow down a bit from playing buildings," Thorn said. "They seem to go into doing some of the outdoor festivals and amphitheaters or outdoor sheds as they are referred to in the industry. They are the theaters at theme parks across the country."

To date for this fall, the coliseum has tentative bookings for an Alan Jackson show in September, a Travis Tritt, Trisha Yearwood and Little Texas show in October and the band Brooks & Dunn in November.

"The way our industry works, they bounce them around quite a bit, and the odds are we may not do one of those shows, but right now it looks pretty good that we will," Thorn said.

In today's market, Ector County Coliseum has an advantage over Midland's Chaparral Center when it comes to booking name performers.

"I've got 1,000 or 1,200 more seats than Mike Stevens does at Midland College," Thorn said. "These promoters are looking straight at the bottom line. The idea of 1,000 at $20 a seat — that's quite a bit of money."

Also, remodeling has increased Ector County Coliseum's appeal.

"No question," Thorn said. "It's made a big difference. The investment that we have made in this facility has already started being paid back. It's caused promoters to take another look at this building that they wouldn't have two or three years ago."

Thorn laughed and added, "It's nice to go into the place and turn on something and have it turn on like it's supposed to."

Economic factors have decreased the number of shows that can successfully be promoted in the area.

"Back in the boom with the money that flowed through this market, it was possible for our area to do four or five or even six shows in one 30-day period," Thorn said. "In today's economy, if we do one or two shows in a 30-day period, that's pretty tight."

Thorn expects no decrease in ticket prices in West Texas for concerts featuring name performers.

"I think overall the public can continue to look for that $20 ticket. That's kind of roughly the cost of tickets nowadays."

To sell enough seats to make bringing a name act to Odessa profitable, Thorn advises promoters that they must treat Odessa, Midland and the surrounding area as one marketplace.

"There's no way that a promoter can come into our market and try to pull just Odessa or just Midland," Thorn said. "It has to be treated as one 350,000-person market. I know Mike Stevens at Chaparral Center has been talking the same way, and I think we've got everybody convinced."

Although economic factors play a role in limiting the number of concerts coming to Ector County Coliseum, they have not negatively impacted attendance at the concerts or other events that are being held at the coliseum, Thorn said.

"I know for a fact that even in the bad times, entertainment is one of the last things that the public pulls out of their spending habits. And I've got the figures to show that through the last 10 years.

"If there's something they really what to see, they'll find the extra $10 or $20 or $30 to come out and see it. They've demonstrated that."

In his eight years at Ector County Coliseum, Thorn has seen only one event slow the crowds at the coliseum — the war in the Persian Gulf.

"At that time, we were doing a tractor pull, and the attendance on our tractor pull was cut roughly two thirds from the previous year. No other event or economic factor that I can recall has significantly slowed down the business."

The attitude toward promoting concerts and other entertainment and sporting events has changed since Ector County Coliseum was built.

"It's become a real business — the bottom line," Thorn said. "All the guys that were doing it in the early '70s found out how much money was really there, and it's evolved into a true business entity now. They don't do it for fun anymore. They do it for dollars."

During his time as a manager of a facility, Thorn also has seen a change in the public.

"I think the nature of the public has changed. Ten years ago or 15 years ago, rock 'n' roll was the mainstream act. Those baby-boomers have grown up from rock 'n' roll to country. As a result, country music is exploding compared to 10 years ago.

"Ten years ago, we did probably 15 rock shows, two country and western shows per year. Roughly. Now, I'm doing 10 to 12 country western shows and maybe two rock shows. I think our public's growing up, and their attitudes toward what they are listening to and what they are doing in their lives is changing a little bit."

The coliseum is the home of the Permian Basin Fair & Exposition, which is becoming, Thorn said, "really the premiere entertainment annual event in our market.

"It's paid attendance last year was over 70,000. And, it's got a little bit of everything."

The event, held in September, features musical acts, mostly regional artists. Already signed up for the 1993 fair is Johnny Dee and the Rocket 88s, an Austin band that's been popular for years; the Hometown Boys, a Hispanic band; Nacho Estrada, a comic; TEXAS the Band, which had good attendance at the 1992 PBFE; and Two for the Show, a group which was here around four years ago.

"The fair's got countless other entertainment-oriented things that they do every year," Thorn said. "Tie that in with the livestock exhibits and creative arts exhibits, and it just makes for a super event."

In 1975, the Permian Basin Fair & Expo started out with a budget of $5,000. Despite the roller-coaster ride that the West Texas economy has faced, the PBFE has, through the hard work of its volunteer board as well as other volunteers, managed to thrive.

"They're current operating budget is now in excess of $350,000," Thorn said. "So, it's grown in leaps and bounds through the hard times."

Odessa's Globe Theatre perpetuates classic Shakespeare

By Deborah Ward

ODESSA — As early Americans journeyed west in search of a better life, they carried a few personal possessions. Although not a bookish lot, many of these settlers began their new life with copies of the Bible, the McGuffey Reader and their treasured volumes of Shakespeare.

Shakespeare's immense popularity in 16th Century England followed the colonists to the New World. For almost four centuries his plays have delighted such diverse audiences as English aristocrats, shopkeepers, gold miners and school children. But few theater lovers are as devoted to the master's work as West Texans, who built one of the first replicas of Shakespeare's Globe Theatre on the campus of Odessa College.

Odessa's Great Globe of the Southwest had its beginnings in the late 1950s when an Odessa High School student built a miniature original Globe Theatre as an English class project, according to the Globe's Managing Director, Clay Francell. The student suggested to teacher Majorie Morris how exciting it would be to have that a real theatre like the Globe in Odessa.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Melissa Myers and Peter Hale as Romeo and Juliet.

"This was the spark that started the fire" for Morris to begin work on the building of the Globe, Francell said. Morris researched her project thoroughly, studying with Shakespearean scholar Arthur Sampley at North Texas State University in Denton.

Additional studies were conducted at Yale University, the Folger Shakespeare Library in Washington, D.C., and the University of Birminham in England while she attended the university's Extra-Mural School of Shakespeare in the British Embassy at Stratford, England.

Morris' master's thesis was titled, "The Proposed Globe Theatre at Odessa, Texas." After reading her thesis, Allardyce Nicoll of the International School of Shakespeare, convinced her that her dream was attainable. A dynamic and tireless worker, Morris organized her supporters, and together they made the dream come true. In 1958 the Globe of the Great Southwest opened its doors.

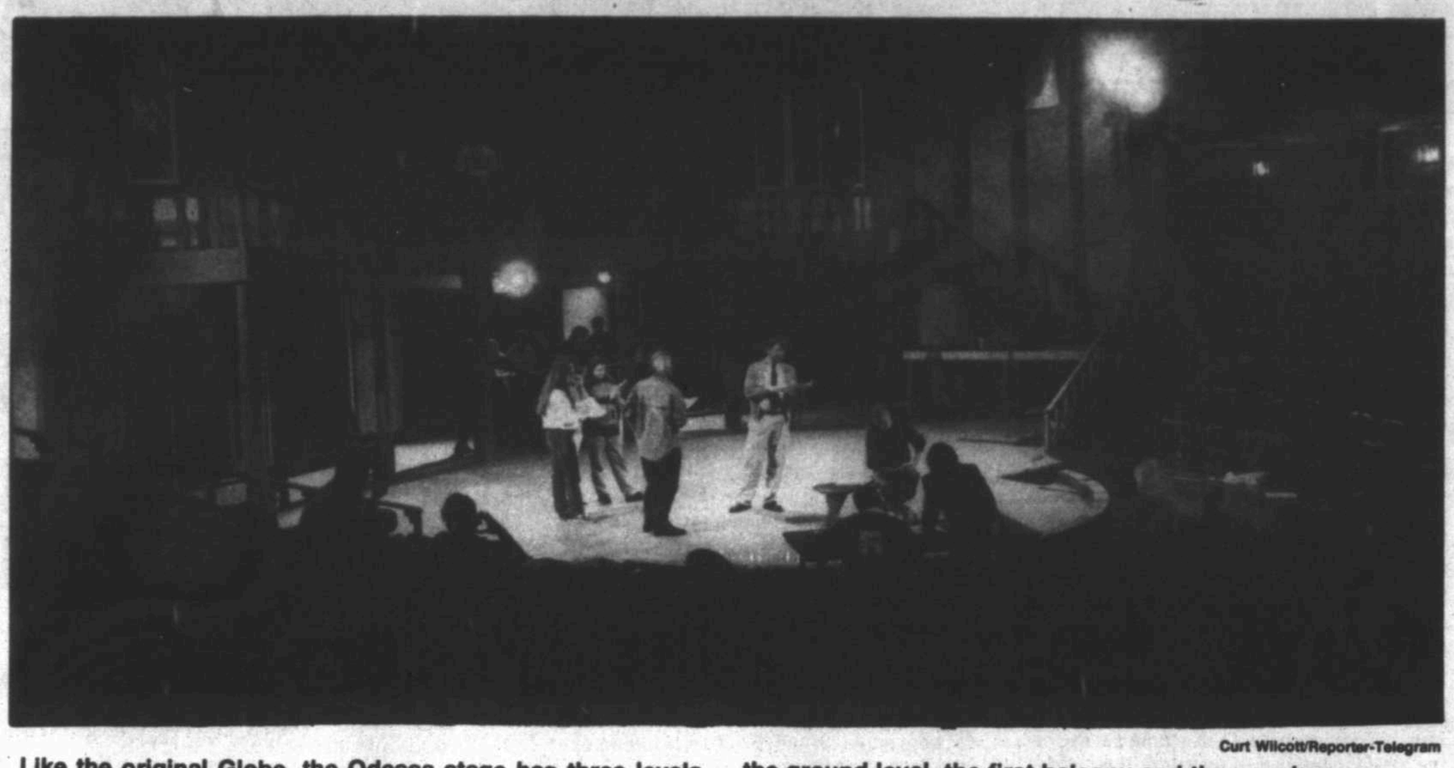

Inside the lobby of Odessa's Globe Theatre a plaque proclaims Morris' rules: "Be it known: The name of God shall not be taken in vain, no harmful drugs shall be allowed in this theatre, and all productions shall lift the wings of the soul with the good, the true, and the beautiful." This edict, explained Francell, pronounced the theater's role in the community, that of producing family-oriented programs.

To the left of the plaque hangs a portrait of Shakespeare; to either side, red-carpeted stairs lead upward to the seating area. Each step takes the theater patron closer to another place and time — Elizabethan England during the birth of the theater.

Like the original Globe, the stage has three levels — the ground level, the first balcony, and the third level which is known as The Three Cottages. This area is also known as Heaven. "But if we have a heaven, we have to have a hell," Francell said, as he ceremoniously opened a trap door in the main stage.

"The last Shakespearean play we did was The Templet, and when the half-fish, half-human character Caliban made his entrance on stage, he came through the trap door like he was coming out of the ground, and the audience loved it," Francell said.

Francell pointed out the difference between the original Globe and Odessa's Globe Theatre. In Shakepeare's theater, the main stage was elevated, and the area directly in front of the stage was called "the pit." In this area, groundlings paid a penny for admission and stood to watch the production. They ate their lunches during the play, and if they didn't like what they saw on stage, the noisy bunch threw food at the actors.

Curt Wilcott/Reporter-Telegram

Like the original Globe, the Odessa stage has three levels — the ground level, the first balcony and the area known as "The Three Cottages."

Also unique to the design of the Globe are the "inner below" and "inner above" sections. These stages are cubicles set inside the main stage area and inside the second level, and lend themselves naturally to dramatic staging of the classics.

Director Shawn Watson said that the design of the theatre "makes all the difference in the world . . . a lot of scenes make sense only when they're played on this kind of stage. Shakespeare didn't have any scenery, he used the architecture of the stage," she said.

"Shakespeare could paint pictures in your mind with words. He would tell you what the scene looked like," Francell said. But for the upcoming production of "Romeo and Juliet" set designers will transform the existing stage into something quite different.

"We're building a facade that's painted but not realistic and we're doing the same thing with costumes," Ms. Watson said. "It will be a high-concept look . . . we're using the setting to show that brittleness of the feuding families in Romeo and Juliet," she said.

"This play is a delight. The language is beautiful and the emotions are clear and touching. It's an absolutely frank play about young kids falling in love." Although it's been a while since she was a young girl, the auditions brought back memories of her youth, Ms. Watson said.

Ms. Watson works with the actors until they have a complete understanding of their character and their lines. Although some of the original language may be difficult for today's audience to understand, the production company will re-cast certain dialogue while attempting to maintain the lyrical rhythm of Shakespeare's plays.

"You tread a fine line between being faithful to Shakespeare and being faithful to your audience. But I work around that conflict by believing that the one thing William Shakespeare never would have done in his life was bore an audience. Anything we can do to keep an audience from being mystified without cause is justifiable," Ms. Watson said.

The leading roles are portrayed by 13 year-old students of Bowie Junior High School. Melissa Meyers is Juliet; Peter Hale is Romeo.

Assistant Director Ronnie Williams remarked on the professional quality of the young actors. "It's amazing how they're responding. These kids are really focused. They're all ears, and they're asking questions."

Regal in carriage and poised beyond her 13 years, Melissa Meyers described what she enjoys about her role has Juliet. "I think she's so grown-up for her age and she comes up with schemes very easily. After all, Juliet tricked everybody into believing she was going to marry Paris," she said.

Stage fright does not seem to affect the young trouper. "Nerves don't hit me until about four minutes before the first act," she said. Miss Meyers also enjoys her treatment by the directors. "They treat me like a pro," she said.

Peter Hale's eyes sparkle when he talks about acting. "I'm the 'center of attention' guy; I like to throw my arms out and say 'Hey, look at me,' " he said. Hale would rather play the role of Romeo than almost any other character in Shakespearean drama.

Other than being a lover and a fighter, Romeo's character has different perspectives for him. "He's a child in a teenage love story, then he's in a rage with Tybalt, then he slays Tybalt. He grows into a man and marries Juliet. Then because of a misunderstanding, he goes back to being a teenager who thinks the answer to his problem is to take his own life," Hale said.

"It's the tragedy of misunderstanding that kills Romeo and Juliet in this play," said Hale.

The production, Williams said, is not only about the love between Romeo and Juliet, but "we're trying to get across more of the family issues and the feuds. I think that's another reason people enjoy the play — they can relate to it. It's timeless."

Shakespeare's play aren't merely tragic, Ms. Watson sadded. "Romeo and Juliet" is multi-faceted. This production will illustrate some of the writer's humor. "That's one of the reasons people come back to Shakespeare. Every time you read him or see his plays, you find something new," she said. "Shakespeare is endlessly rewarding for a second look, a third look, even a fourth look. Therefore, it's endlessly rewarding to produce," she said.

Shakespeare wrote plays for the stage director and the audience, but he was a master at creating roles for the players. "There's really not any small

BRASS ERA HORSE SAVERS

The Brass Era Museum, at the corner of 7th and Grant, is a serious attraction for car lovers, history buffs, and anyone with an eye for the elegance of bygone days.

The 16 or so brass-era automobiles sitting behind the curtained petition at the back of Wes Read's antique shop are all shiny and ready to roll. Their brass lights gleam with new wicks and all you have to do is add the coal oil and strike a match to light them. As a matter of fact, Mr. Read keeps the batteries charged and the tires inflated, ready for the day when he drives them away to make way for a newer (older?) model.

There is a 1903 Model A, 2 cylinder chain drive Ford, the first car Ford ever made, and, it is rumored, the second actual car ever to be sold by Ford.

A 1908 Brush 1 cylinder chain drive model sits beside a 1910 Hupmobile, their brass lamps polished and wicks trimmed.

The museum also has a 1907 Brush. With one cylinder, 7 hp, this first car to be driven across Australia is cranked counterclockwise. Then there is the 1914 Saxon Roadster, a top 10 seller in the nation in 1916 at $395. But alas, the company let success go to its head. They went to a 6-cylinder, which, Read says, led to the company's demise in 1923.

The Saxon is flanked by a Flanders 20, manufactured in 1912 by Studebaker Corp. On the floor beside it is a Harper's Weekly ad boasting, "This car comes to you insured."

A 1913 Cadillac touring car is one of the largest models in the collection. The lights, horn, and trim are nickel-plated, and under the hood, separately-cast copper-coated cylinders sit beside an optional air compressor for the convenience of drivers eager to hurry on down the road after fixing a flat. Cadillac also eliminated the need for strenuous cranking — with an electric starter. This model went for $2,000.

But what of the would-be driver who is stuck on the farm? Not to worry. You could order an air-cooled Sears, crated and shipped to your door for $395.

COOKIN' AND GRINNIN' AND WILD BULL RIDIN'

Dos Amigos has arguably the best fajitas in the universe, which you can eat while drinking a beer, and watching — at eye level and 20 feet away — people trying to commit suicide by riding bucking bulls. Or if you prefer, you can cook your own steak, either top sirloin or ribeye, for $5.

Eleven years ago, 25 year-old Ronnie Lewis had a horse stall up on Golder just west of the Coliseum, a lot of crazy friends, and little else. He was a bricklayer by trade, but what Mr. Lewis really wanted to do was operate a restaurant and bar.

"I had been working in Austin, and was intrigued by places like the Armadillo World Headquarters and the original Soap Creek Saloon, but I wanted to go back home, to Odessa."

The timing was terrible. The Permian Basin, after a decade of prosperity, had entered the oil bust. But Lewis, proving just how blissful ignorance can be, set out to build his restaurant of old lumber and tin. Friends welded oilfield pipe into supports for beams and bar stools.

His first employee, Rosa Ruiz, made flour tortillas and fajitas from meat cooked outside over mesquite fire. The food was low cost, therefore low priced, and everyone who tasted Rosa Ruiz' fajitas went out and spread the word that this was the place to go for food and drink. Lewis didn't realize that the crowds waiting for tables were unusual in a new place, when the news up and down the streets of Odessa was all bad.

"I didn't have my act together enough to know what was happening," he said. Six months later a group of hungry, thirsty cowboys left the Odessa Rodeo one night and spilled over into Dos Amigos.

"I came in about 10:30 that night, and there was about 60 cowboys in there, and we're talking REAL cowboys, square jawed and leather fisted, and it was like walking into Dodge City. I had never been to a rodeo, and here were all these guys looking big and mean, and I thought hey, we've got to get some law and order here! Then I looked outside and there was this guy out there in 6-degree weather, stepping something off, and I thought oh, great, now I've got one that's spaced out completely.

"He came in all red faced, and said, 'We're going to have a bull ride.' "

The man turned out to be Mac Altizer, owner of Bad Company, a stock supplier for some of the biggest rodeos in the U.S. In March 1983, Dos Amigos held its first bull ride, an event that has become famous coast to coast.

"It's a lot like the fajitas," Lewis said. "I've had some good ones, and some really good ones, but there is nothing like that first bull ride.

Recently, Lewis hired a manager for the restaurant and took off for Guatemala. He fell in love with the Guatemalan people, and with their brightly colored clothes — which spawned yet another enterprise at the horse stall.

"I told all my friends that I'd been here 11 years, and I've got nearly $300 saved up. I would hate to blow it all on a world trip." Instead, he bought a truck load of brightly colored Guatemalan clothes and bags, which he sells at the restaurant. "That's my latest venture," he said. I've gone into the import business."

SERIOUS ART

All right, maybe the Art Institute for the Permian Basin is serious about art, but to advertise it with a larger-than-lifesize statue out front called the "Grand Striptease"? Yet that is what they've done. The bronze — a whimsical Giacomo Manzu creation donated by the Meadows Foundation — stands at the entrance to the museum on the UTPB campus just off University Boulevard.

Director Marilyn Bassinger says art is serious business for the Institute. The independent nonprofit museum holds an aggressive schedule of fine art exhibitions, lectures and classes for both adults and children. With a paid staff of one part-time and three full-time employees, the museum holds 10 to 20 exhibitions each year, as well as an ongoing program of related educational activities designed to help people enjoy art. They do this, Bassinger says, "with a dedicated volunteer group."

Activities offered throughout the year include such programs as "Adventures in Art," a family education program of art history, art appreciation and creative art experiences, all done under the direction and supervision of professional art educators. The program began with a class on prehistoric rock art and progressed to contemporary pop and op art. This is art history as it is seldom experienced. One recent study involved Michelangelo.

After an intense immersion in the fresco painting of the master, the kids were given paints and were turned loose to create their own murals on paper — taped to the undersides of tables — to show them first-hand the difficulties of painting the Sistine Chapel.

Pinned on workroom bulletin boards are children's paintings in the style of Picasso's "blue period" and cubist portraits, pointillist landscapes a la Seurat and blue and gold sarcophagus covers reminiscent of ancient Egypt.

"The concepts are not taught in great depth for children," said Ms. Bassinger, "yet they will remember some terms, artists' names, and historic movements." She said during a recent gallery walk, one student told a parent, "That painting is like Seurat's. He's my favorite artist."

Summer activities include an art camp for grades one through 12, and a "Hot Sidewalk Art" event in which kids are assigned colored chalk and a square of museum sidewalk, where they create graffiti, their creations are judged, and everyone gets a prize.

For adults with an hour to spend at lunch time, brown bag videos about art are offered each Wednesday. Serious high school students and adult artists can attend "Let's Get Serious," a Saturday morning drawing lab.

The Art Institute building opened in 1985, after years of community fundraising. With rooms that can expand and divide easily by means of sliding panels, lighting designed especially for art, and acoustics that enhance sound quality, it has room to easily accommodate audiences for the Thouvenel chamber quartet as well as ensembles with repertoires ranging from jazz to the classics.

THE CRATERED CRATER

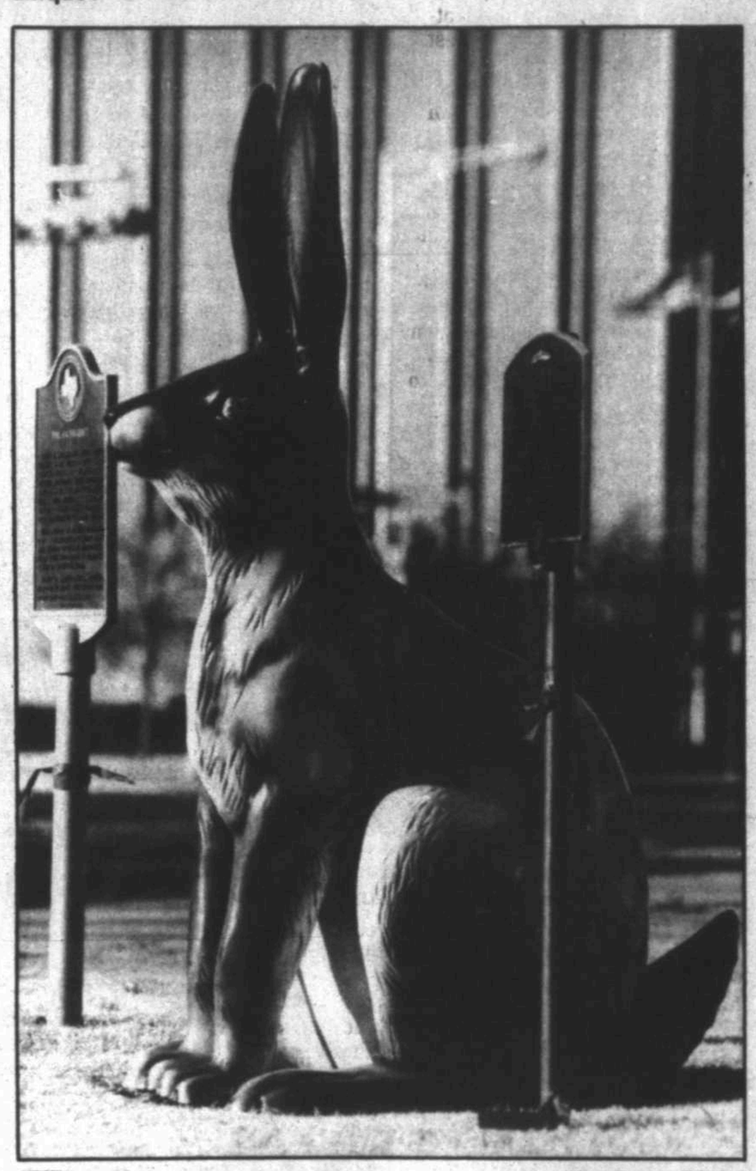

A 1940 aerial photo of Odessa's meteor crater shows a large depression in the middle of an oilfield. That's it. Even from 2 miles up, it isn't anything most people would get excited about. Yet, the hole has had its moments. It was first discovered by Rancher Julius Henderson in 1892, who called it a "blowout." In 1926, crater expert D. Moreau Barringer and Dr. E.H. Sellards, director of the Bureau of Economic Geology of the University of Texas, identified the hole as a meteor crater — a rare land feature said to have been caused by meteoric bodies originating in the asteroid belt located between Jupiter and Saturn, that fall to earth from time to time. The Odessa crater is estimated to have struck down about 20,000 years ago.

Between 1939 and 1941, the Works Progress Administration dug a 165-foot shaft to study the effects of the meteoric impact on the earth's strata. They found some "rock flour," caused by the shock waves of the impact when the meteor hit the ground, the fossilized shells of Cretaceous Period sea creatures, and, if we are to believe the informational marker placed at the northwest edge of the crater, the bones of an ancient elephant. There is no reference to this find in the Ector County Library, which maintains a file on the crater.

In the 1960s, the city of Odessa, hoping to cash in on the crater as a tourist attraction, built a museum to house a scattering of the meteoritic fragments found in a small crater adjacent to the large one, a few fossils, and some other geologic relics, along with educational displays showing a cross section of the main crater, and other informational posters and bulletins.

However, too many tourists, like the woman on the motorcycle, had no real interest in the big hole in the ground, no matter how rare a physical phenomenon it was. There were no bells and whistles and the place wasn't scenic enough. The site was given to the city of Odessa by Texas & Pacific Railroad in 1979, at which time there was talk of reviving the museum and trying one more time to make it a tourist attraction. However, after preliminary surveys, and investigations into the cost of such a venture, the project was abandoned. Today, you can drive out to the crater and walk around, and if you want to see the Meteor Crater Museum displays, you will find them all in a special section of the Ector County Library.

But you won't find any elephant bones.

brary moved to another location in July 1981, the museum was able to take over the entire 14,000 square foot facility. Major renovations were funded by a grant of more than $250,000 from the City of Odessa. Additional grants have been received from the Heritage of Odessa Foundation, with additional donations of materials and labor from various area merchants and organizations.

Ector County still owns the building, and pays for maintenance, utilities and salaries of the two principal employees. The Board of Trustees owns the museum collection. New members of the board, which establishes museum policies and direction, took office in January. The president of the board, Luther Snell, vice president of First State Bank, is "trying hard to motivate the board" into being a working arm of the museum, according to Hewitt.

Reorganization is under way. "Things are looking up. We've been out of everyone's consciousness for a few years." 1992 was a good year for museum attendance, Reese said. Exhibits were toured by nearly 10,000 visitors, some from as far-away as Brazil, Germany, India and the Ukraine, as well as from all over the U.S., Canada and Mexico. "We are taken by the fact that they are quite impressed by the museum. Many have visited presidential libraries."

Visitors are impressed by the wealth of material relating to all the presidents, not just to one individual. Also impressive to the visitors is the campaign paraphernalia, he said.

The museum gift shop features historical prints, cookbooks, postcards, buttons and pins, colonial ornaments, museum guides and books on individual presidents, as well as historical jigsaw puzzles.

Local television crews have spotlighted the museum on Presidents' Day, and recently, on the inauguration day of President Clinton. The Presidential Museum is featured in the Odessa Chamber of Commerce brochure "City of Contrasts."

A new museum brochure is being printed, and it is eagerly awaited by local agencies. "I've got a waiting list for the new ones!" Hewitt said. Springtime is the season local elementary school students usually fill the museum halls with organized field trips.

The current Odessa Yellow Pages feature a photograph of the Presidential Museum on the cover. Reese said it was the second time he had made the cover — the first time was several years ago, when a set he had designed for a Permian Playhouse production was featured. "I'd like people to leave here with that pounding in their chest we like to call patriotism," Reese said.

As for George Washington's horse, Hewitt found the names of several. The most impressive was that of one of Washington's valiant war horses: Nelson.

SCHOOL: Midland, Odessa share education ideas through problem-solving tests given by unfamiliar administrators, rather than just hiring administrators based on interviews.

Buinger said some Odessa educators recently toured Midland High School to explore the school's program focusing on learning styles.

Likewise, a contingent of MISD teachers, administrators, principals and parents recently spent an afternoon observing Odessa's Crockett Junior High School's teaming program.

Buinger also conferred with MISD Superintendent Joseph Baressi Jr. about the districts working together to offer girls soccer and competition for the program.

"We share ideas. The teachers and principals share ideas. I don't see any competition between Midland and Odessa other than on Friday nights (on the football field), which is where the competition ought to be," he said.

He noted that some people live in Odessa and work in Midland and vice versa.

"We really aren't two communities operating exclusive of each other," he said. "It is important that we (both Midland and Odessa public schools) share the successes each community has with each other. We have common interests and concerns."

parts," Williams said. Every actor on stage has a purpose, and each player has his moment.

Everyone associated with the Globe of the Great Southwest serves an important purpose. The Globe exists because of the generosity of volunteers, such as members of the Juliet Society, who serve as the theater's house managers. The Globe is funded through patrons, grants and donations.

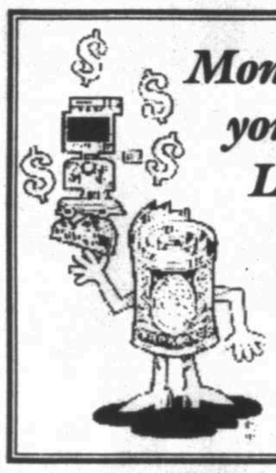

Ms. Watson, Ph.D., is a professor of dramatic and Elizabethan literature at the University of Texas of the Permian Basin. She volunteers her time, and several actors and assistants are students at UTPB. Both onstage and behind the scenes, volunteers from Odessa, Midland, and surrounding areas form a core of people who are involved and interested in the classics, Ms. Watson said.

Illustrating the pioneer spirit, this group of West Texans form a bond with a single purpose. They perpetuate classic theater, and have a great time doing it.

LAZY DAYS OF

The vest suits up for summer as a sleeveless jacket paired with matching shorts from Wrapper. A navy-and-white chiffon scarf and white bowler add to the nautical touch.

In the summer, a young woman's fancy turns to casual wear, with its flirty short skirts and shorts, bright colors and cooler designs. The nautical look fits this mood perfectly. From white to navy — with a splash of red — accented with a hat and sandals, a hint of the sea is traditional for summer styles. This year, fashionable items added to the traditions include tropical prints, geometric designs, bold colors and soft denim. The Southwestern look continues to inspire designs this season.

Bonnie Boynton's Ivy League group has paired a Harvard Boat House jacket with an MBA shirt, and accented the outfit with a triple oval leather-look belt.

All aboard for cool, colorful style! Breezy, casual separates, for a sporty, go-anywhere look.

SUMMER

Andrew Sport's sleeveless denim skirt paired with a brightly printed wrap skirt by Mixed Blues is the perfect spring attire for a hot afternoon.

Southwest-inspired colors spice up Bonnie Boynton's Chili Pepper group from the spring 1993 collection. This white cotton shirt shot with embroideries, nailheads and blanket stitching complements a slim silver button-front skirt.

For travel or just shopping around town, Jo Hardin Collection for spring 1993 features this bright, bold design in fushia, worn with black-and-white appliqued jacket (right) from Career Girl.

BLISS WEDDED BLISS

Model: Mandy Jeffreys

Every bride wants the perfect dress for her wedding day. One of the newest styles for spring (left) is this bridal gown by Fink from Bridal Fantasies.

In acknowledgment of the importance of the bride, many fashion designers feature their bridal gown creations as the finale of their shows, such as the master French designer Yves Saint Laurent did at the end of his 1993 spring-summer haute couture fashion collection in Paris at the beginning of the year.

Summer brides can choose from many types of gown and still be right in style on their special day. Sleeveless or strapless wedding gowns with bolero jackets may be perfect for many summer brides, while others may opt for a princess or A-line gown. But whether her gown is simple or elaborate, street length or covered with lace, a summer bride is sure to want the perfect style for her perfect day.

Models: Midland Park Mall Ambassadors Board

Members of Midland Park Mall Ambassadors Board participate in all the mall's fashion shows. The active board members, who range in age from 15 to 24, also help in other special mall projects, including visits from Santa Claus during the Christmas season and the Easter Bunny in the spring. Non-active board members, who are children aged 4-14 and adults aged 25 and older, serve as fashion show models. Prospective board members audition each January and are selected to serve for one year, and can audition to serve again if they desire. Board members are trained by P.S. Images Fashion and Modeling.

FINISHING

Accessories add the finishing touch to any ensemble, and the spring '93 collections are no exception. From the bright and bold bangles to the elegance of gold and jewels, there is something for every style and pocket book. For the season, hats, gloves and a variety of new shoe styles also add an updated, upbeat look to any classic look.

TOUCHES

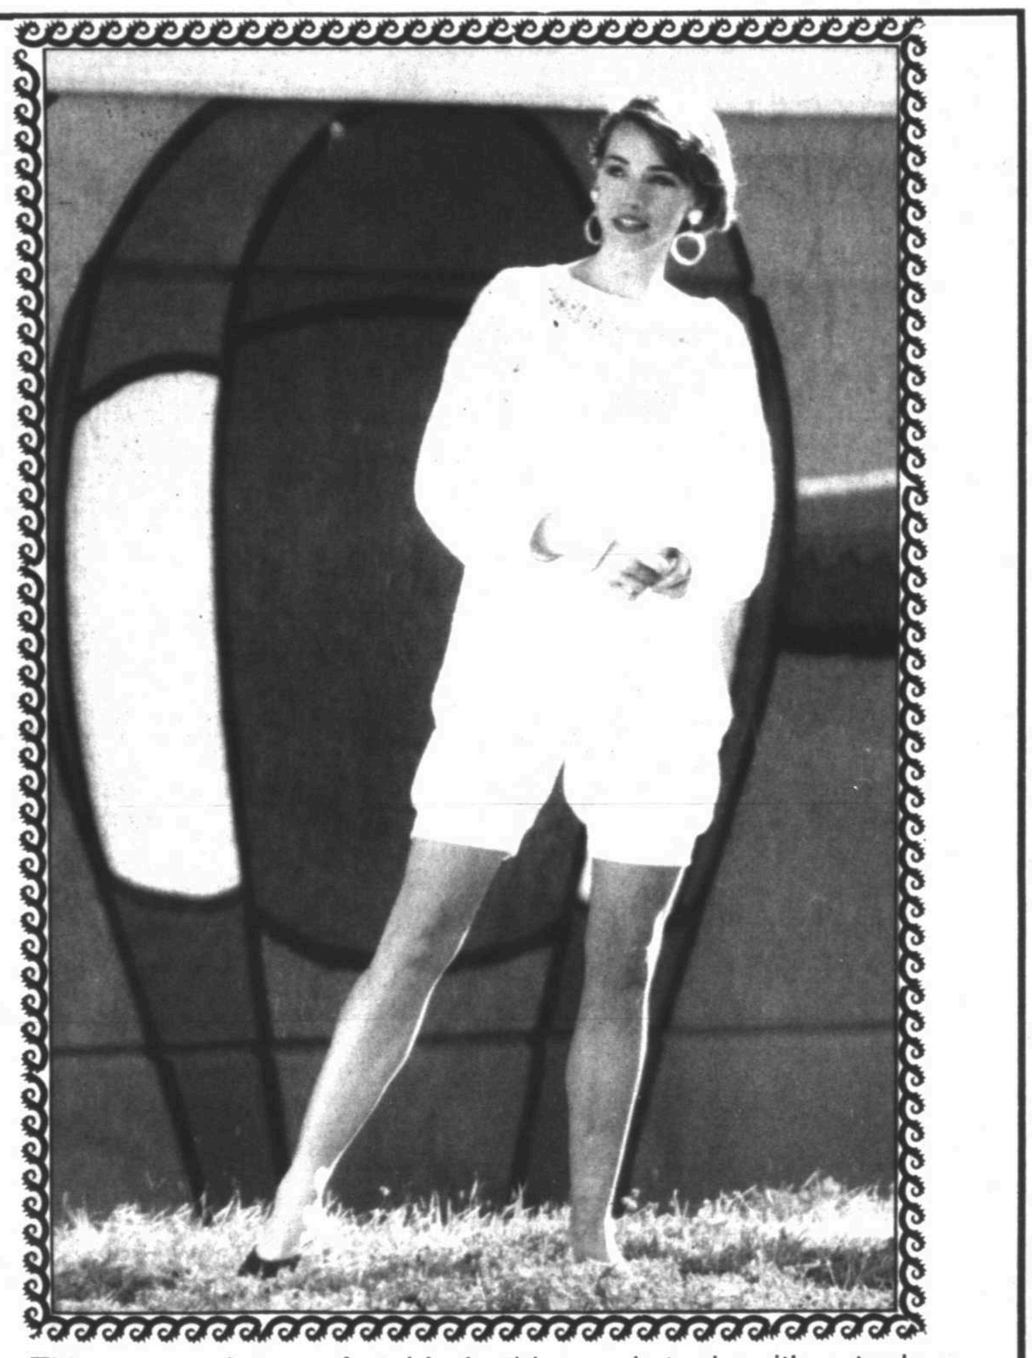

With the popularity of the Southwest look, silver jewelry — such as the necklaces, bracelets and earrings (right) from New Castle Gap — is one of the best accessories.

SILVER AND GOLD

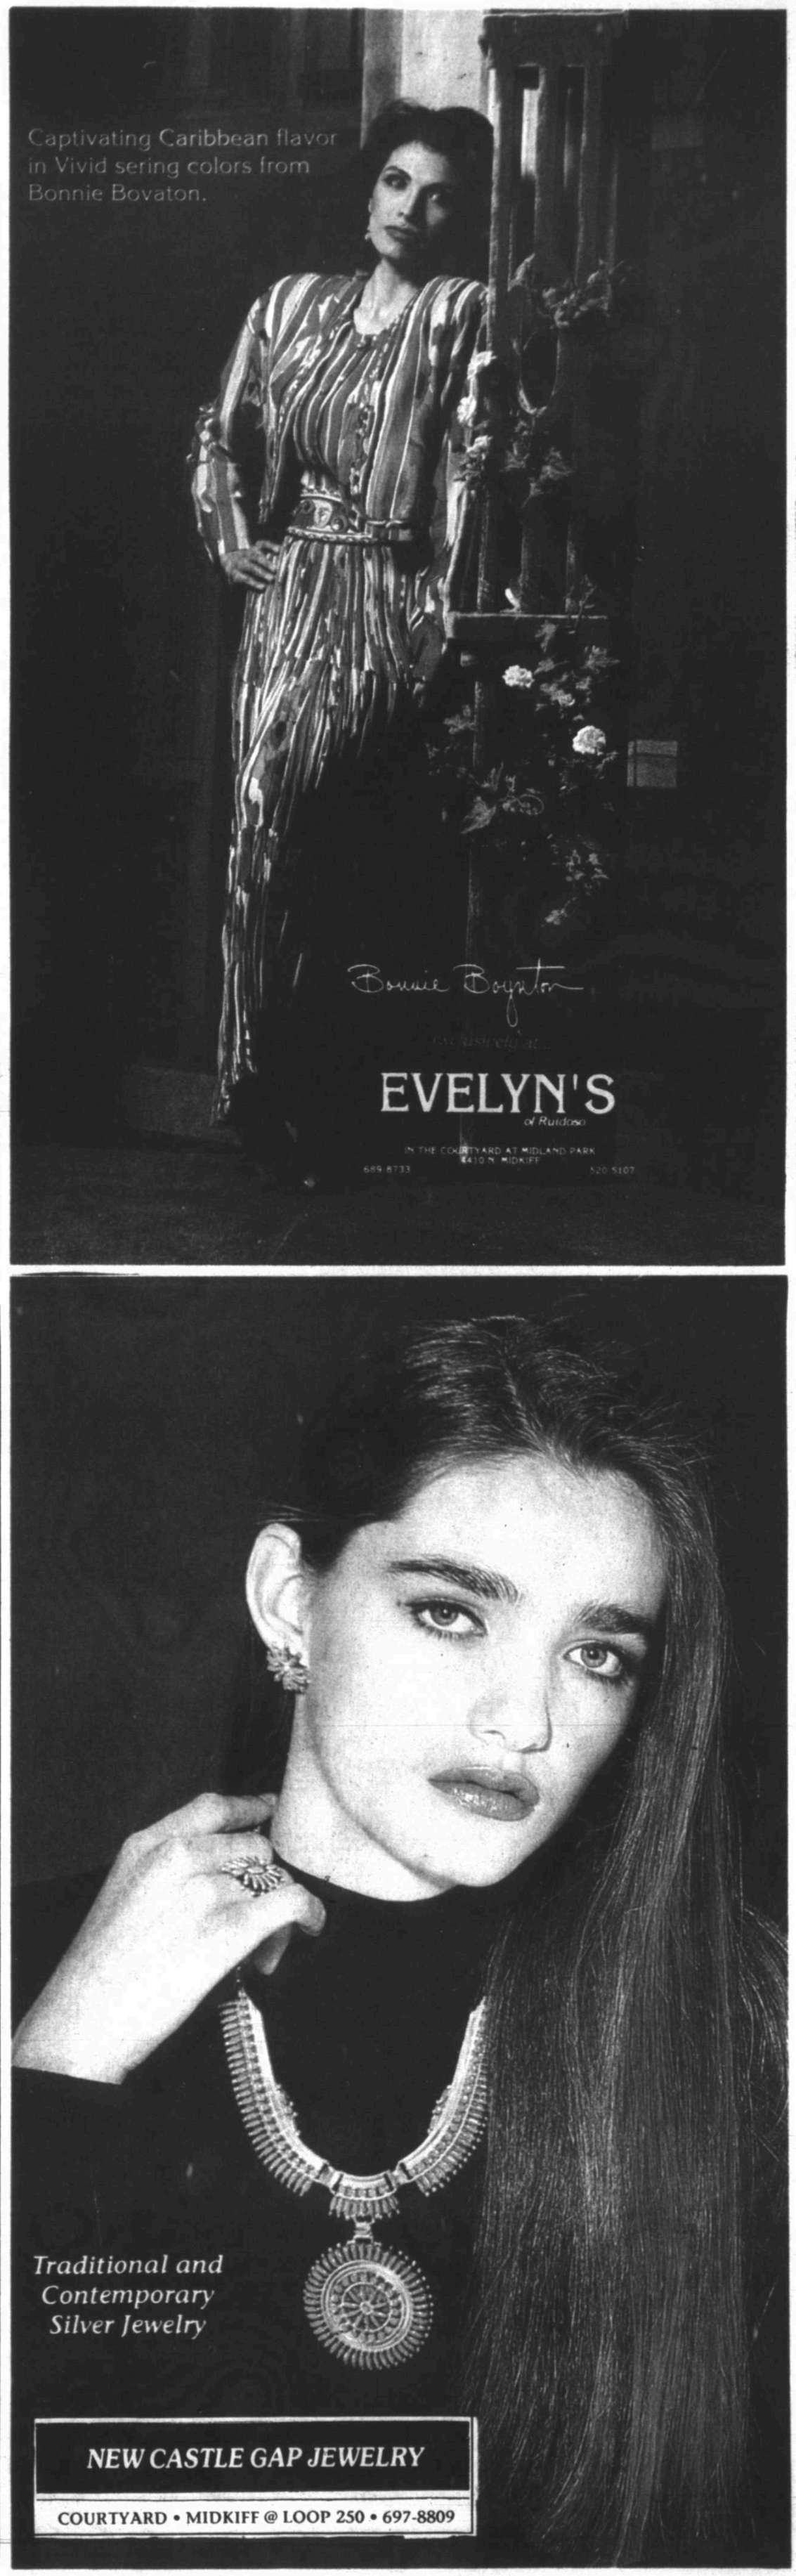

Elegance in action; the Rolex Oyster Perpetual Datejust and the Rolex Lady-Date are classic time pieces in precious 18 karat gold and stainless steel, available at Cristiani's Jewelers.

This season be comfortable in this mesh tunic with a tank and matching shorts. A relaxed look for weekend wear. Assorted colors in S,M,L.

THE BOYS ARE BACK

This multi-color block print cotton crewneck knit shirt of 100 percent cotton and green linen quadruple pleat bermuda shorts of 100 percent linen (left) are from the Pronto Uomo spring 1993 collection.

U.S. MALE

Menswear for Spring/Summer 1993 is comfortable and colorful, elegant enough for the boardroom yet casual enough for the boardwalk.

Haggar Imperial athletic fit suit (above) features triple-pleat cuffed trousers with tapered seat and legs, and full thighs and knees, and a ventless double-breasted jacket with broad shoulders and slightly tapered waist.

The timeless, single-breasted, vented sport coat from Haggar with notched lapels and flap pockets is made from a Dacron polyester/viscose rayon/linen blend.

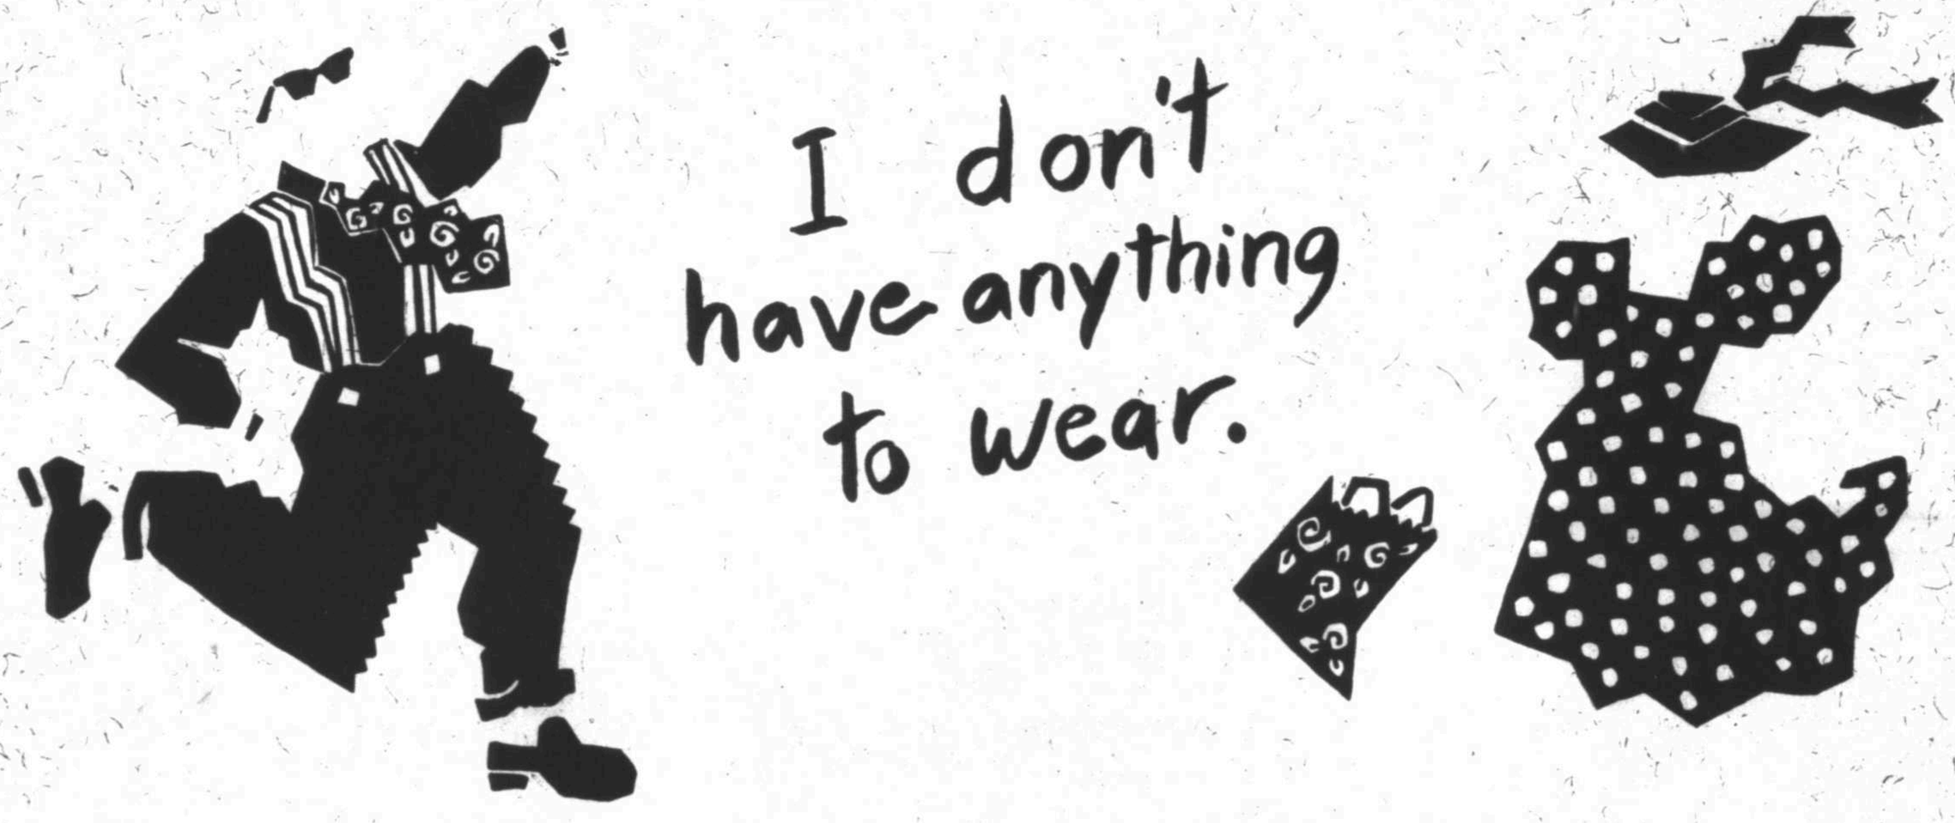

April, Jenny and Misti are ready for Spring Proms in formal attire by Jessica McClintock.
